Might Resolve Viking Failure

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Viking officials believe they have diagnosed, and can easily solve, a malfunction on the Mars lander that caused its soil-scooping arm to jam.

Martin said the telescoping arm, which was designed to reach out for a handful of Martian soil and dump it in a small biology laboratory, jammed Thursday after being extended for a test.

It jammed while being retracted, he said, apparently because a locking pin that should have fallen free did not do so.

He said that was the "most probable cause" of the trouble. The cure, which will be tried Sunday, is to command the robot lander to extend the arm again until the pin falls to the ground.

If that was indeed the cause, said Martin, it is likely that there will be no effect on the mission "and we will be able to Tuesday. One was the seismometer, designed to monitor marsquakes, which never recovered from the dormant state it remained in during Viking's journey from Earth. But it was too soon to write it off, officials said.

Communications with the lander over 212 million miles of space were somewhat limited by a balky transmitter on the lander. As a result of the undiagnosed malfunction, data were being received for a shorter time each day than had appeared possible at first.

One result could be, said Martin, "that we won't be able to take as many pictures as we had planned."

Engineers were still working on those problems. They were also continuing to study the sampler arm failure, because if the locking pin theory turns out not to be the cause, there may be some other cause that would be harder to fix and could affect the life search.

continue on our present timeline." A special team of trouble shooters came up with the theory after duplicating the problem on an identical Viking lander that sits in a sandbox at Jet Propulsion Laboratory here.

Martin described the failure as a "human error." He said the lander's computer had been fed — long before Viking 1 arrived on Mars — with an erroneous command. As a result, the telescoping arm did not extend far enough to let the pin fall away.

Martin said there had been no progress on two other problems plaguing the lander's investigation of the red, rocky surface on which it landed

Veto Votes Dismay

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's veto of a $3.3-billion military construction bill has been sustained, but he lost his second round on a $3.95-billion public works-employment bill the Democratic majority in Congress considers a major campaign issue.

The Republican President said after the votes were over that he was "keenly disappointed" at the overriding of his veto of the jobs bill, which now becomes law.

Creation of any of the 200,000 new jobs supporters say the measure will produce depends upon Congress getting appropriations for them into law, too, however.

On the military construction bill, the House voted 270 to 131, two more than two-thirds of those voting, the margin needed to override a veto. But in the Senate later, the vote was 51 to 42 — 11 shy of two-thirds.

On the jobs bill, a replacement for a $6-billion measure Ford vetoed earlier as "election-year pork barrel," the House voted 310 to 96 — 39 more than required in the "aye" column.

The Senate had voted 73 to 24 on Wednesday to override.

Ford responded that Congress "would rather create $4 billion worth of temporary, government-funded jobs than let those same dollars go to work in the private sector to produce real, rewarding lasting jobs."

Jacksonville, Fla., Mayor Hans G. Tansler Jr., president of the National League of Cities, urged the administration and Congress to move quickly, nonetheless, to fund the program and put it into effect.

The enactment of the jobs bill marked the ninth time Congress has overridden a Ford veto. But Ford, who has vetoed 33 measures since taking office 23 months ago, has been sustained 15 times. In the other 29 cases, Congress had either already adjourned or its leadership had decided against trying to override.

The President had objected to the military construction measure because of a provision that would have required him to give members of Congress a year's notice before moving to close a base in their districts, another touchy political action for anyone in office.

Just before the vote, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld had urged the Senate to prove its stated commitment to reduce wasteful military spending by sustaining the veto.

Sixteen of the 59 Democrats voting accepted the challenge, killing the bill.

But in the House on the jobs bill, 57 Republicans defected to the majority, many citing sustained unemployment in their home districts.

That argument was cited in the Senate the day before, even by such close Ford associates as assistant GOP leader Robert Griffin of Michigan, making the difference.

The jobs legislation authorizes $2 billion in grants to states and local governments for public works that can be started within 90 days.

Three Men 'Wanted' In Mass Kidnapping

By MIKE DUNSTAN Associated Press Writer

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (AP) — Three "armed and dangerous" men from wealthy California families are the target of a nationwide hunt today, sought for questioning in the mass kidnaping and imprisonment of 26 Chowchilla school children and their bus driver.

Alameda and Madera county sheriffs said they would seek arrest warrants this morning for the three San Francisco Bay-area men. Alameda County sheriff's deputies were reported to have obtained at least one search warrant early today to search a warehouse in eastern San Jose.

A San Jose police source said deputies hoped to find the pair of vans that transported the Chowchilla youngsters to the quarry where they were imprisoned for 18 hours.

Whether the deputies went into the warehouse, or found what they were looking for, could not be immediately determined.

Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins and Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates told a news conference Thursday night that ransom may have been the motive for snatching the youngsters and burying them alive inside a van in a Livermore rock quarry owned by Woods' father.

"I believe these three are involved in the kidnaping sufficiently enough so that we can arrest them," Bates said.

Houchins confirmed earlier reports that the younger Woods owned the moving van used to imprison the school children four feet underground. It took the youngsters and the driver 18 hours to tunnel out.

Sheriff's officers had searched the Woods' 100-acre suburban San Mateo County estate Thursday, discovering about 100 vehicles apparently accumulated by the younger Woods.

San Mateo County Sheriff John McDonald said officers had been looking for "vans, masks and guns."

He said new searches were underway in Sonoma County and San Jose where Woods "has some acreage, some warehouses and barns. They'll be looking for some more vehicles, more vans."

Two vans were used to transport the Chowchilla children after the kidnapers camouflaged the school bus from which the children and drive were taken.

Bates said one of the men being sought has not been seen since the incident and that officials expect to know today "whether they are out of state and if they are we will ask the FBI to come in."

The Woods family is related to the wealthy California Newhall family, whose patriarch was Henry Mayo Newhall, an enterprising Saugus, Mass., businessman who arrived in San Francisco in 1850.

Woods and James Schoenfeld graduated within a year of each other at Woodside High School on the San Francisco Peninsula and had formed a loose partnership repairing old cars.

The Schoenfelds are sons of a prominent peninsula podiatrist.

SOUGHT BY POLICE—Alameda and Madera County sheriffs said they are asking for arrest warrants for, from left, Fred Woods, 24, James Schoenfeld, 24, and his brother Richard, 22, in connection with the Chowchilla, Calif. school bus kidnaping case. (AP Wirephoto)

Red Cross Team In Mercy Mission

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An International Red Cross team entered the besieged Tal Zaatar refugee camp in Beirut for the first time today on a mercy mission to help evacuate more than 1,000 wounded Palestinians. But Lebanese Christians loosed a heavy barrage against the camp before the evacuation was arranged.

The three-member Red Cross team, using a little blue car flying two big Red Cross flags, returned to the Christian front lines facing the camp just as Christian forces opened up on the camp with mortars, machine guns and small arms.

The Christians accused Palestinian guerrillas inside the camp of taking advantage of the cease-fire to improve their positions by moving into strategic abandoned buildings at the edge of the camp.

The team, led by Swiss representative Jean Hoefliger, had called off the attempted mercy mission three times earlier this week because of heavy fighting. Christian militias have been attacking the camp for 33 days.

The camp is in east Beirut, which the Christian militias are trying to clear of Moslem fighters. The Christians broadened this effort today with an assault on the Moslem Nabaa slum quarter after a 48-hour mortar and artillery barrage.

"Savage fighting is raging," said a communique from the leftist Palestinian-Lebanese Moslem command. "Our forces are repulsing one attack after another."

"The attack to purge Nabaa of Communists and Palestinian guerrillas is progressing satisfactorily," said the radio of the right-wing Phalange party, which has the largest militia fighting on the Christian side in the civil war.

Hospitals and security sources estimated that about 50 persons were killed in the attack. They said more than 50 others had been killed elsewhere in the last 24 hours.

Tal Zaatar, which overlooks the highway to the 800-square-mile Christian enclave north of the city, has been neutralized by a Christian siege now going into its second month. Beirut resounded with the explosions of the bombardment of the shrinking Palestinian defenses of the camp today, but the defenders were still holding out.

Mondale Finds He Is Target In South

By BILL RAWLINS Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sen. Walter Mondale finds himself a major target of Southern Republicans' campaign efforts against Democrat Jimmy Carter as Mondale begins his vice presidential campaign in Dixie today.

Mondale planned a swing through Georgia and South Carolina, capped by an indefinite stay at Carter's home in Plains, Ga., Saturday night.

Carter's popularity, plus Dixie's first chance to elect a southern President since the Civil War, generally dismayed Southern Republicans during the presidential primary season.

But GOP leaders throughout the South began their attack on Mondale's liberal record as a Minnesota senator virtually as soon as Carter picked him at last week's Democratic National Convention.

Some Republicans running for major office, including Sen. Bill Brock, R-Tenn., and Dr. John Grady, seeking to unseat Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., expressed unabashed glee at Mondale's selection. Republicans had feared Carter's Southern pulling power would drag other Democrats into office on his coattails.

GOP leaders say they feel Mondale's liberal record could shorten the Carter coattails considerably.

"I am delighted," said Chiles, declaring Mondale's selection by Carter "clearly delineates the philosophy of Jimmy Carter and the National Democratic leadership. Fritz Mondale is clearly a liberal-socialist."

Brock said the choice showed Carter "is far more liberal than most of his Southern supporters believe. Picking Fritz Mondale, one of the classic liberals in the Senate, is an indication of Gov. Carter's real philosophy."

Democrats generally disagreed and expressed public delight with Mondale. Others, including some Democrats attending the Southern Legislative Conference here this week, privately say they should have preferred someone else.

Speakers Ned McWherter of the Tennessee House of Representatives and Bill Clayton of the Texas House of Representatives both suggested Mondale may be too liberal for their states.

Additionally, Clayton said, "If John Connally is on the Republican ticket in any form, it will make it harder for us Democrats in Texas."

Texas is one of six states included in an Associated Press survey with U.S. Senate races this year. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who once sought the presidential nomination won by Carter, is opposed by Rep. Allan Steelman, R-Tex. Steelman is from Dallas and hot as well known across the state as Bentsen.

An Associated Press poll shows Connally, former Texas governor and former secretary of the treasury, the leading choice for vice president among delegates to the Republican National Convention who expressed a choice. Connally's lead was due primarily to overwhelming support from pro-Reagan delegates.

Find Survivor In Lifeboat

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — A tanker has found a lifeboat with one dead man and one survivor.

Their sailboat had been sought off the Florida coast on a trip from the Bahamas last week.

Lt. J. G. Witherspoon of the Coast Guard Rescue Coordination Center in Portsmouth, Va., said a Liberian tanker, the Charles E. Spahr, reported finding the boat at 2:30 p.m. about 60 miles southeast of Cape Lookout on the North Carolina coast.

Witherspoon identified the dead man as Ed Martin. He said the survivor, Rodney Waite, would be airlifted from the tanker to a hospital.

The tanker is en route to Philadelphia.

Iowa Counties Want To Get Away...Maybe Mars

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Officials from Iowa's 99 counties say they want to establish an ideal county government, free of state and federal interference. But they figure they have to go 200 million miles to do it.

In a unanimous vote Thursday, the State Association of Counties adopted a resolution to colonize Mars and make the Red Planet Iowa's 100th county.

"It's a not-too-lighthearted approach to just call attention to the problem that local government is being dominated by state government and the federal government," said executive director Don Cleveland. "We just need a little breathing room."

Ralph Juhl, president of the association, admitted that some details — such as transportation to the new colony — haven't been worked out yet.

Juhl said officials had agreed that the first item of business would be deciding where to put the courthouse.

"Naturally, we have to find a centralized location," Juhl said. Then he seemed to forget for a moment the new county's independent nature.

"Our site selection will be dependent upon the filing of an environmental impact statement," he said.

Cleveland had told the 427 county officials at a workshop here that Mars would be "a true independent colony, free to function without federal and state spending mandates."

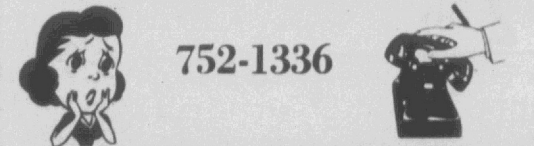

Cleveland said he and Juhl decided to colonize Mars after hearing reports from the Viking 1 spacecraft.

"We decided that since county officials have all these problems dropped on their heads, we could take advantage to move county government to a setting where we wouldn't be hampered by state and federal strings," he said.

The resolution invites other county officials from throughout the United States and the world to join in the government of Mars County.

$400-PLUS REFUND

I ordered a hard top, hub cap, and weather stripping for a 1955 Thunderbird from Classic Parts Center in San Bruno, California. July 7, 1975. I think I gave them plenty long before I found the same items at another firm. I want a refund. My canceled checks which are enclosed, show I paid them $410.90. No amount of calling and writing on my part has done any good, it'll soon be a year. A. H.

Hotline wrote to Classic Parts June 10 on your behalf, enclosing photostatic copies of your checks. The same week you report you got your refund check, we received a note saying, "Sorry for your involvement in this matter, but we sent a refund to him some time ago but I guess he did not receive it. We have since stopped payment on the first one and sent another."

Boyles Given Support Of Retiring Treasurer

By The Associated Press
Deputy State Treasurer Harlan Boyles has received the endorsement of retiring Treasurer Edwin Gill in his quest for the Democratic nomination to succeed him.

Gill said in a prepared statement Thursday that he will vote for Boyles in the Aug. 17 primary.

When Gill announced early this year that he would not seek reelection he said he would not try to name a successor, leaving this "in the hands of the people."

"However, since I issued my statement, there has been speculation as to why I did not endorse Deputy Harlan Boyles, leaving the inference that I might not favor him. Such an inference is incorrect," Gill said. He added Boyles is well qualified, having served with him for more than 20 years.

Meanwhile, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Tom Strickland said prison inmates should be put to work "to help pay the debt they owe to the honest, law-abiding people of our state."

He said in a statement that punishment should come first and rehabilitation second.

"Too many criminals are not punished for their crimes," said Strickland. "Many are centralized in cramped quarters spending their time attending classes and participating in organized sports."

He added that primary emphasis should be given to punishment "through hard work on our prison farms and other work areas."

Another Democratic gubernatorial candidate, Ed O'Herron, took a verbal poke at Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, who is also seeking the Democratic nomination for governor.

O'Herron told the Kiwanis Club in Winston-Salem that North Carolina should put the lieutenant governor's job back on a part-time basis.

"With the many needs for state funds, I don't think the people have received their money's worth from the present lieutenant governor," he said. "We have been paying him $30,000 a year plus providing him a staff annually costing more than $100,000. About all I can see that he has done is to build the biggest political machine this state has ever seen...and he has done it at taxpayers' expenses."

Hank Thorpe, Democratic congressional candidate in the 2nd District, said that if elected he would set up a system of volunteer advisory committees in his district.

He said he would consult the committees in voting on legislation concerning agriculture, local government, business and economics.

Hunt was critical of the Holshouser administration's industrial development efforts in a talk at Durham Thursday.

"I can tell you story after story after story of lackluster industrial recruitment," he told a luncheon gathering of supporters. "We've been slipping in that regard."

Hunt said he was told an executive of International Harvester, which has been considering locating a plant in Wilmington, was sent to "junior-level people" in the Department of Natural and Economic Resources and came away "totally disenchanted."

No Charges In Traffic Mishap

No charges were reported yesterday following investigation of a 1:30 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 87 feet East of the Arlington Boulevard intersection.

Police identified drivers involved in the collision as Rodney Ben Alons of Route 1, Pantego and Austin Brent Burgess of Laurel, Miss.

Damage was estimated at $150 to the Alons vehicle and $200 to the Burgess car.

'Excess Property' For County

Pitt County is among counties and towns within the Mid-East Region which has received excess property from a federal program.

Administered in this area by the Coastal Plains Regional Commission in Raleigh, the program has placed excess property items totaling $168,701.25 in value in the region since the program's inception in June 1975.

Pitt County has received a variety of items amounting to $76,023.52 in property. The following items have been received: paint, oil, ink and other miscellaneous supplies, starch, crane-shovel, tank, truck, three mobile homes and a tractor and bulldozer.

Pitt Memorial Hospital in June 1975 requested and received a recorder-monitor and densitometer at a value of $13,535.50.

Eligible recipients for excess property must be any state, county or municipality; any tax-supported organization; any tax-supported or non-profit private hospital; any tax-supported or non-profit private institution of higher education requiring a high school diploma or equivalent as a basis for admission.

All excess property items are acquired at no cost to the towns with the exception of transportation costs to bring the item or items to the host town or county.

To receive property, a town or county must submit a request form, listing the items being requested. The form must be accompanied by an agreement for the loan of Government Personal Property and a certificate of the town or county's insurance.

Forms may be obtained at the Mid-East Commission, 122 N. Market Street, P.O. Box 1218, Washington, N.C. The property will be on loan from the Federal government on a one year basis. At the end of the loan period, the property title is either transferred to the town or county or reverts to the Federal government, if the property is no longer needed.

Capacity Sales On Martin's Markets

WILLIAMSTON—First week sales on the Williamston and Robersonville markets were up to capacity, with stabilization accounting for a high percentage of the total in the market's opening stages.

In Williamston, sales on the opening day Tuesday totaled 202,000 pounds for an average of $88.31 per hundred pounds. Stabilization that date amounted to 25 per cent.

Sales in Williamston on Thursday was for 224,000 pounds at an average of $88.53 per hundred pounds with stabilization accounting for 50 per cent.

A spokesman said offerings were mostly lugs, and that the quality of the early offerings were better than similar offerings the first week in 1975.

At Robersonville, which had first day sales on Wednesday, a total of 366,762 pounds was sold for an average of $83.23 per hundred pounds. Stabilization accounted for approximately 40 per cent of sales.

A spokesman for the Robersonville market said the low per pound price average reflects a policy on that market of letting the farmer sell instead of turning back in cases where a lot was not graded or was marked at a low price.

Slight Drop In Building

Building permits valued at $740,100 were issued in Greenville during June, a slight decrease from $778,400 recorded for the same month last year, according to statistics reported by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

For the six months ending in June of this year, permit valuations here totaled $7,958,500, up from $5,861,100 in permits issued during the January-June period in 1975.

Neighboring city totals include: Goldsboro, $859,300 (June 1976), $655,200 (June 1975), $5,637,000 (six months 1976), $3,403,700 (six months 1975);

Roanoke Rapids, $318,600, 150,900, $2,407,600, $3,900,500; Rocky Mount, $2,119,400, $1,048,800, $10,964,300, $6,413,300; and Wilson, $1,568,900, $940,800, $6,478,700, $4,016,500.

'Downstalk' Leaf Gluts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—The director of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. is concerned that huge amounts of downstalk tobacco this year could glut the organization's warehouses.

Fred G. Bond said in an interview Thursday that it could create serious marketing problems for the cooperative.

He said that by Jan. 1, stabilization's inventory "could very well be in the proximity of 500 million pounds, including old crop inventory and the new crop. I would consider that abnormally high."

Bond said the real problem would lie in the fact that most of the stabilization's holdings would be downstalk primings. These are the lower leaves of the tobacco plant and have been in slack demand since 1974.

Tobacco which fails to receive a bid at least one cent higher than the federal price support is placed with the stabilization under the government loan program. The tobacco is stored until demand increases enough for resale.

Collect Paper To Raise Funds For A Museum

GRIFTON—Citizens of Grifton are collecting newspapers and sending them to the Kinston Recycling Company once each week to help raise funds for constructing a museum.

The "Recyform Project" will help citizens raise the necessary funds for constructing the historical museum in the old Grifton Elementary School building. The building was recently purchased from the Pitt County Board of Education by the Town of Grifton with Community Development Funds totaling $40,000.

Anyone who is interested in contributing newspapers should carry them to the Grifton Library.

Demo Caucus Meets July 24

The North State Caucus, a statewide group of Democrats in support of a unified Democratic Party, will hold its annual meeting at Pinehurst in the Pinehurst Hotel, July 24.

Candidates for all Council of State races will appear together to pledge their support to whomever the Democratic primary winner is in each particular Council of State race.

All major Democratic candidates for Governor will attend the Saturday evening session at which time each gubernatorial candidate is expected to make a major statement as well as a personal pledge of support for all Party nominees.

Playday Plans Are Scheduled

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will sponsor a playday at West Greenville Center on July 27, Elm St. Center on July 28, and South Greenville Center on July 29. People of all ages are invited to join in activities which include pie eating contests, relays, volleyball, badminton, arts and crafts, watermelon eating, trampoline jumping, ping-pong, seed spitting contests, checkers, and apple bobbing. Events begin at 8:30 p.m. and will conclude about 8:15 p.m. with a cartoon feature.

DINNER SALE

The Super Shocks Softball Team of Farmville is having a barbecue and fried chicken dinner sale Saturday beginning at 11 a.m. at the Recreation Center on Acton Place in Farmville. The plates will sell for a $2 donation.

"Mrs. Kingenschmitt and her family were our next door neighbors and our families were good friends. We went to high school together and we also were college roommates for a year," said Mrs. Hunt. The two friends still keep in touch through visits and corresponding. When asked if they remembered anything humorous that happened during their college days, Mrs. Smith said, "Too many things happened to talk about. You should have seen us dressed in our blousing bloomers, middie blouses, black ties, long stockings and tennis shoes that had to be worn for ym."

The ladies also recalled former class reunions, recognizing their college friends, societies ressing for dinner each night, aving to wear hats and gloves whenever they went shopping and having to sign out for everything they did.

Mrs. Hunt said, "I have attended some dinners and several as. James Sr. has been doing some campaigning—opening some headquarters when Jim as unable to attend, talking to all conservationists, farmers in various agricultural centers and other groups.

"Mostly I help out when Carolyn, Jim's wife, is away, although she is at home every night. I am home base for their two younger children, Rachael and Elizabeth. Jim's headquarters often calls my name to leave messages for Carolyn," added Mrs. Hunt.

"The young people had a summer picnic which they participated in three times a year. Their mother, Mrs. Hunt, and Baxter, 13, are working in tobacco four to five days a week. The young girls often have lunch with me when Carolyn is away.

"Mostly I remain at home and let other family members do the active campaigning," Mrs. Hunt continued.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Sr. have another son, Robert B., of Roanoke, Va., who is a social service worker with the V. A. Hospital, Salem, Va., and a total of six grandchildren.

James Hunt Sr. is a retired soil conservationist and "is very interested in forestry." He had planted on their farm in Wilson County, 2,300 pin seedlings this year. Since 1961, he has had a total of 130,000 such seedlings, planted on their farms in Wayne, Wilson and Johnston Counties.

After leaving Mrs. Smith's home, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt went to Ayden with Mrs. Kingenschmitt and Mrs. Myree Hayes to the home of Mrs. Therman Mills an additional coffee hour to meet friends.

Wash the chive spears and pat or shake them thoroughly dry. Cut them into 1-inch lengths and pack them loosely into a scalded wide-mouthed jar. Bruise the chives thoroughly with the handle of a wooden spoon or other wooden implement, freeing as much juice as possible. Bring to a boil enough white wine vinegar (or, if you can get it, Japanese rice vinegar) to fill the jar almost to the top. Pour in the vinegar, let it cool, then cover the jar closely. Let the chives and vinegar stand for at least a week, giving the jar a shake when you think of it. When the flavor is strong enough to please you, strain out the chives and filter the vinegar into a clean bottle through funnel lined with filter paper. Cork or cap the vinegar, using an enamel-lined or glass lid, and store at room temperature. Helen Witty, who edited "The Garden-to-Table Cookbook" (McGraw-Hill), contributed this worthwhile recipe to it. She uses 1 part of the vinegar to 2 or 3 parts oil with salt and pepper to taste as a dressing for garden lettuce.

Chinese Vegetarian Diet Is Appealing

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Florence Lin makes a Chinese vegetarian diet so appetizing even meat-eaters could be happy with it.

The petite author and cooking teacher took me on a tour of New York City's Chinatown to identify and shop for ingredients.

We bought bok choy, a leafy green vegetable with beautiful, edible, small yellow blossoms; fresh bean curd made from soybeans and tasting like mild semisoft cheese; and flat-leafed Chinese chives.

"They taste like scallions, onions and garlic," Mrs. Lin said, holding up a two-inch thick bunch of chives. "They shrink in cooking. I would use all of this at one meal."

One chapter in her new book, "Florence Lin's Chinese Vegetarian Cookbook" (Hawthorn $9.95), deals with soybeans, soybean products and other legumes, all very high in protein. Another chapter makes wide use of nuts, especially peanuts, another high protein vegetable.

Unlike most Chinese cookbooks by Chinese, this one contains a variety of dessert-type recipes, including steamed walnut cake, date won tons, almond soup and fruited tapioca dishes.

Ranging through Kam Kuo Foods, a new supermarket on Chinatown's Moti St., we admired fresh pale pink prawns from South America, their heads still on.

"The good part of shrimp is in the heads, like tomalley in lobsters," Mrs. Lin said.

Large trays of duck and chicken feet in the meat case brought memories of my childhood, the wonderful soups my mother had enriched with poultry feet, and the fun of chewing on the bones afterwards.

In Chinese cookery, chicken and duck feet also are a delicacy, Mrs. Lin said.

She said her vegetarian cookbook, like her regional Chinese cookbook published last year, deals with home cooking rather than restaurant food.

She said pure vegetarian diets among Chinese usually are an economic necessity, not a question of avoiding meat.

An ovo-vegetarian diet with eggs is typical of low-income diets in China. "Families would add a bit of meat or fish where they could afford it, a little more fish at the seashore," Mrs. Lin said.

"When the Chinese go out to buy a half pound or one pound of meat, they ask for the fattest. We don't have enough oil, and a few pieces of fat pork with vegetable works as well as oil and meat (together)."

She said duck and beef fat are popular, and chicken fat is "a special delicacy. We don't kill a chicken very often.

"Nowadays, even the Chinese eat more vegetable oil. In China, they actually eat more vegetables (than meat) because they are cheaper. There is no such thing (as eating vegetables) because they are better for health."

She said older Chinese living in the United States and other countries away from home keep to their own diet as much as possible, but American-born Chinese tend to cook American.

"My daughters were born here, and they think Chinese food is too much trouble."

The elder daughter, Flora, whose husband also is a first-generation Chinese-American, is an assistant product manager for a large food company.

"She may cook simple Chinese food sometimes, but she is more likely to cook a big pot of stew and eat it for three days," Mrs. Lin said.

"They don't have the time, I suppose," she said of Chinese in America who are drifting away from the eating habits of their heritage. It's not usually a problem of scarcity of ingredients:

"Where there's a large Chinese community, you always have Chinese groceries."

Girl Wants Both—Love And Money

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I was engaged to be married to a beautiful woman, when my business failed. When I went broke, my fiancée started dating other men. She came right out and told me that she couldn't stand the thought of being poor. She likes to go to the best places, which I can't afford right now.

She has money and could well afford to take us both out, but she refuses to spend her own money.

She lets other men wine and dine her, but afterward she comes to my place for her love.

Am I wrong to still love this woman? At times I feel like a big fool, but I can't help myself.

STUD

DEAR STUD: It's not "wrong" to love anyone. Your problem is that you feel that you are being used. And you are. Unless, of course, you are getting as much out of the relationship as she is.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were divorced a month ago after 35 years of marriage. One week after the divorce was final, he announced that he was going to marry a young woman with whom he has been going for nearly 10 years.

We have a 33-year-old married son who I know disapproved of the way his father has treated me, and he's said he has no intentions of becoming friendly with his father's new wife.

Feeling as he does, should he attend the wedding? And what should his feelings be? How should he act toward his father and this new wife?

EX-WIFE

DEAR EX: How your son "feels" and how he should behave toward his father and the new wife is for your son to decide.

DEAR ABBY: A bachelor wrote to say that whenever he applied for a job, as soon as they learned that he was over 30 and unmarried they lost interest in him. He claimed that his single status also made him suspect as a homosexual—which he is not.

Abby, as a personnel manager for many years, I have interviewed hundreds of job applicants, and if two equally qualified men apply for a job and one is married and the other is single, the married man usually gets the job.

Why? Not because the single man may be a homosexual, but because without a wife, family or "roots," a man is more apt to quit his job. Not so with a married man. His family obligations make it necessary for him to stick with his job.

Training employees is very expensive, so you can't fault businesses for giving preference to the applicant who is more likely to stay with the job.

J.M.C.

DEAR J.M.C.: Thank you for giving the other side of the picture.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Mrs. Mildred Hecker, Mrs. Barbara Zicherman, Mrs. Barbara Woods and Mrs. Rosemarie Priestley attended the 29th Annual International Convention of Epsilon Sigma Alpha held in Norfolk, Va., July 14-18. The delegates are members of the Alpha Omega Chapter of ESA.

The theme of the conventional was "Proudly We Hail" and was a tribute to Jo Isquierdo, international council president.

Mrs. Zicherman attended workshops for officer training. Mrs. Woods and Mrs. Hecker attended workshops in the area of social concern. Mrs. Priestley studied via-youth groups. Workshops were also attended in pledge training, yearbooks and awards.

The four delegates were guests at several social functions including a party given by the delegates from Australia. At a formal dinner and dance Saturday night, Mrs. Lauretta Roberts of Independence, Mo., was installed as the 1976-77 international council president.

It was announced the 1977 convention will be held in Hawaii.

Follow All Those Hurricanes

A number of years ago the east coast became Hurricane Alley with several major hurricanes slamming in to North Carolina and other areas of the Eastern seaboard.

Fortunately for the past several years North Carolinians have managed to watch hurricanes from afar as the storms followed their more traditional paths through the Gulf of Mexico, or else went out into the Atlantic.

There is no assurance that the mighty storms won't turn inward on North Carolina this very year, however. Certainly it will happen again some time in the future.

At any rate the Hurricane season began June 1 and the National Hurricane Center with Dr. Neil Frank as director will be carefully watching the development of the storms.

"We feel an urgent part of our job is to educate," Dr. Frank said in a recent interview. "Very many people don't really understand the hurricane danger. It's human nature not to be considered when the wind isn't blowing and a major storm isn't a fresh memory."

Frank continued, "Once a hurricane forms, our job is to make sure it doesn't sneak up on anybody. We want to provide a lead time of 12 to 18 hours, either for preparation or evacuation."

Every year some of the hurricanes move up the east coast and it is easy for us here in North Carolina to become complacent as they move by safely out at sea.

Our coastal areas, however should follow every storm as if it might strike, because it just might. Nor are we who live as far inland as Greenville wise in feeling that gives us some safety. Ask anyone who was around when hit some 20 years ago how much damage a hurricane which moves inland can do.

Those hurricane warnings we will be hearing during the summer are not to be taken lightly. All of us should be prepared for a possible blow if one should move toward the North Carolina coast.

THIS AFTERNOON Assembly Change Coming

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—The August primary and November election will bring about a number of changes in the North Carolina General Assembly, but not as far-reaching as some in the past.

The turnover in this election year, for the 1977 General Assembly, is likely to run between 10 and 15 per cent, compared to a general turnover of 30 per cent in past years.

The biggest shift occurred in 1974 when Republican representation was reduced to one in the Senate and eight in the House of Representatives.

The Senate
According to records compiled by the Secretary of State's office, there are a total of 108 candidates for the 50 seats in the Senate. Of those, 39 are incumbent Democrats, and one incumbent Republican. The breakdown shows 76 Democrats seeking election; 30 Republicans; and two Laborites (one in Mecklenburg and one in Guilford).

There are 13 women running, including the two incumbent female senators: Mary Odom, D-Scotland; and Katherine Sebo, D-Guilford.

For the House of Representatives, there are 244 candidates for the 120 seats, with 100 of those being incumbents seeking re-election. There are 184 Democrats (95 incumbents), and 59 Republicans (five incumbents). There is one Laborite from Guilford County.

There are 33 females running, including 16 incumbents.

Two unusual facts about this year's election: in Wake County, Democrat John Robertson is running for both the Senate and the House; in Mecklenburg, Republican husband-and-wife team Carolyn Mathis and Ray Mathis are running. Mrs. Mathis is leaving her seat in the House to run for the Senate; her husband seeks election to the House.

John Cheney, director of publications in the Secretary of State's office said a study of the figures indicates a much lighter turnover this year, not only due to the large number of incumbents seeking re-election, but also due to a number of former legislators seeking to make a comeback.

Normal turnover runs 30 to 40 in the House; five to 15 in the Senate. Cheney also predicts that there will be more women serving in the Assembly than in the past.

Three members of the Senate are running for the Senate this time: Democrat R. C. Soles of Columbus County, and Republicans T. Cass Ballenger of Catawba and Mrs. Mathis of Mecklenburg.

A Witch
Only one former member of the Senate is running for the House—Democrat Edd Nye of Bladen County where a rotation agreement gives Columbus County the Senate seat this time.

Four state lawmakers are running for the U.S. Congress:

State Senators Russell Kirby, D-Wilson, and Lamar Gudger, D-Buncombe; and State Representatives John Hunt, D-Cleveland, and Jimmy Love, D-Lee, are in U.S. House races.

Of the eight Republicans formerly in the House of Representatives, only five are seeking re-election to the House, with the sixth (Mrs. Mathis) running for the Senate.

The lone Republican Senator Donald R. Kincaid of Caldwell is running again, and faces primary opposition from two fellow Republicans.

Twelve incumbent senators are not having to work at re-election, having no opposition either in the primary or general election. House members are not faring so well. Only seven of the 100 incumbents are getting a free ride.

Records do not provide a racial breakdown on the election, but the six Blacks (four in the House, two in the Senate) currently serving in the Assembly all seek re-election.

THE INSIDE REPORT Appeasement On Hot Issue

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
NEW YORK — Jimmy Carter responded to a rare flash of criticism at his carefully controlled Democratic national convention with an astounding — and dangerous — concession: a flat promise to attempt limiting all federal funds for abortions.

Thus, Carter's campaign for the Democratic nomination ended in triumph as it began in obscurity: shading his position on the emotion-charged abortion question in ways that anger both sides and trouble his own supporters. The significance is not so much what it portends for the abortion controversy as what it reveals about the new Democratic nominee.

After giving pro-life (anti-abortion) forces in Iowa the impression early this year that he might favor some form of constitutional amendment against abortions, Carter later retreated to this position: anti-abortion but also anti-constitutional amendment. When the Democratic platform also declared opposition to the constitutional amendment

(with the reluctant acquiescence of Carter agents), pressure on Carter from pro-life forces — especially the Roman Catholic hierarchy — resumed.

The pressure was most intense here in the Missouri delegation, where Catholics and other pro-lifers urged Carter to disavow the platform plank or risk losing the state. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri, himself a Catholic, unsuccessfully sought Carter's personal appearance before his delegation but had to settle for a telephone conversation with the nominee.

As relayed to his fellow Missourians by Eagleton, Carter said he opposes abortion but stands by the platform. Nothing new there. What was new was a promise by Carter to push federal legislation that would "restrict, insofar as possible," the use of federal facilities or funds for the purposes of abortion. That would seriously threaten spending of 45 to 55 million dollars in federal Medicaid matching funds each year for 250,000 to 300,000 abortions — appeasing pro-life forces but outraging feminists.

There is no record of Carter ever having taken this stand before. In answering a Women Today questionnaire March 15, Carter declared: "I do not like the idea of government money being spent on abortions." But he promised no legislative efforts and acknowledged that the courts require abortion spending by Medicaid.

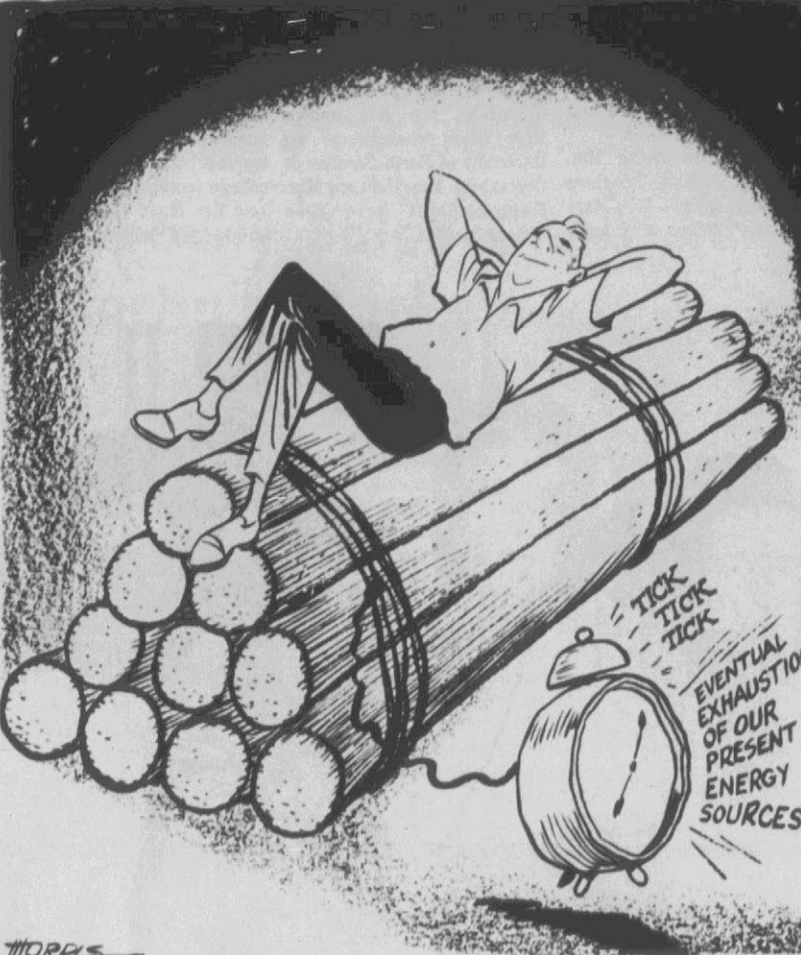

Thus, Carter has churned up more muddy waters on abortion, raising these inevitable questions: Did he take the easy way out to meet a momentary challenge? Or will he truly fulfill his new promise? The answers carry implications transcending abortions.

Carter's New Realism
An unexpected appeal here by Jimmy Carter to nine governors for "all the help I can get" in the campaign was a dramatic turnaround from his boast three weeks earlier to House Democratic leaders that he planned to win all 50 states.

Carter's appeal to the governors, led by Florida's Gov. Reubin Askew (formerly a sharp critic of Carter), came Wednesday when he summoned them for talks on the vice-presidential selection and the fall campaign.

"Jimmy finally did what he should have done before," one highly influential governor told us. "He asked for our help and he told us we

WASHINGTON — What we're talking about when we elect a President is power. The power starts at the top and seeps down into every part of the country. For people who deal in power and make their living off of it, it's very important to know — or at least to pretend to know — the President of the United States, or the Vice President, or anyone faintly connected with them.

There is no certainty at all that Jimmy Carter will be elected President of the United States. But if he is, these are a few things you could say to impress your friends and business acquaintances.

"Y'all know Rosalynn Carter, Jimmy's wife? Well, ma brother dated her sister."

"Li'l Amy Carter and my daughter used to sell lemonade together."

"We just bought a summer home in Plains, Ga."

"Come over the house for dinner. Billy Carter, Jimmy's brother, left some catfish in the deep freeze for us this morning."

"We just joined the First Baptist Church in Washington. The Episcopal Church wasn't doing anything for us."

"My mother and Jimmy Carter's Aunt Cissy have the same hairdresser."

"Fritz Mondale's son William gave my son a black eye yesterday."

"We decided to move our company headquarters to Atlanta. The South is where it's happening."

"Can I call you back? I've got Jimmy's mother, Miss Lillian, on hold."

"My law partner used to do Fritz Mondale's brother's tax work."

"So I had this bad back and I went to 20 doctors and none of them could do a thing for me. Then I heard about Jimmy's sister, Ruth. So I said, 'What the heck, I have nothing to lose.' Now I know you're not going to believe this but I had three sessions and my back was cured. It's amazing what faith can do for a bad back."

"Jimmy Carter has never lied to me."

"Have some peanuts, but I can't tell you who gave them to me."

"Joan Mondale went to school with my wife."

"I can never get the Carter kids' names straight. When they come in the house for milk they all look alike."

"I'll never forgive Gen. Sherman for what he did to Atlanta, even if Jimmy does."

"Eleanor Mondale used to be in my daughter's car pool."

"The reason I didn't take a job with his administration is I told the President I could be of much more value to him by advising him as a private citizen."

"Three guesses who came to my Bible class last Sunday?"

"When Jimmy was governor of Georgia, he pardoned my brother." "Carter has never forgiven me for turning down a job in his administration."

"I'll say this for Jimmy. When we played football together in the Navy, he always wore a helmet."

Other Editors Say The Same All Over

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

Jimmy Breslin, who is one of our favorite writers, recently went to Plains, Ga., the hometown of you know who. Breslin's piece was a little morbid under the circumstances. True to character, Breslin didn't find his story on main street. Rather he went out into the country and found a black family that was trying to live as farm tenants on $50 a week. The house contained no water or indoor plumbing of any kind. "We tote water from that house on the other side of the road," said Ruby Dean who lives on the place with her former husband and six children. It was not a pleasant description, although probably accurate, that Breslin reported in the Washington Star.

Whether the writer intended to or not the impression was left from reading the article that Jimmy Carter was personally responsible for the farmer's plight. It seemed to ask how a man could run for president of the United States and allow such poverty in his hometown.

Jimmy Breslin didn't have to go to Plains, Ga. to find a Ruby Dean with a husband who makes $50 a week and tries to support a family with six children. There were a thousand such families in Washington where the article appeared. About the only difference would be that the Washington families know more about welfare than they do about work. So they don't work at all, but collect more than the $50 a week.

What Breslin didn't relate in his story was that the house was probably rent free, and there were some fringe benefits such as land to plant a garden, etc. Ruby Dean and her husband could be caught in a whirlpool of hard luck. Their future depends on a lot of things, the last of which is the fact that they live in the same community as Jimmy Carter.

We would like to see all the Ruby Deans in this world move a step or two up the ladder of life. Jimmy Carter has been close enough to that kind of living to understand it and try to do something about it. Jimmy Breslin tried to point out the poverty in Carter's hometown and failed to accomplish his mission for going to Plains.

Alf. M. Landon, the 48-year-old governor, stepped forward formally today as the Republican candidate to open a "fighting campaign" for the presidency in a pudding of political pageantry unprecedented in Kansas.

Landon left his office door ajar for a morning of handshaking with a few of the thousands streaming into Topeka - a prelude to the elaborate evening ceremonies for his carefully drafted speech accepting the nomination.

The Greenville Greenies jumped back into first place in the Coastal Plain League today with a 7-5 win over the Snow Hill team.

Frank F. Fagan, receiver, said today arrangements had been made to pay depositors of the closed National Bank of Snow Hill a final dividend of 28.7 per cent, amounting to a total of $19,000.

Strength For Today

LEARNING FORM EVERYONE

We tend to think that the important things we learn all come from experts, preferably with advanced academic degrees. But actually we learn from a wide variety of people, some in very humble circumstances, if we would only be receptive.

Ralph Waldo Emerson once said that he had changed his mind on an important philosophical subject after talking with the village blacksmith. Socrates found much knowledge in quarters where his well-educated associates were sure that none existed. Jesus never went to an institution of higher learning.

It is amazing how much valuable knowledge one can pick up if he listens patiently to the opinions and testimony of a wide variety of folk. Everybody is right sometime about something. Even a watch which doesn't run registers the correct time twice every twenty-four hours. The experience of no two people is exactly alike; therefore they can learn from each other.

The only hopeless people are those who think they already know enough.

Getting started in the morning is getting more expensive these days, if coffee is involved. But some just can't do without.

"There is no point when I would stop buying it," Carmen Elera said as she checked prices in the coffee section of a San Francisco supermarket. "I have to have my coffee in the morning."

"I have no choice," echoed Mary Pejiri in Chicago. "My husband is a big coffee drinker and has to have it regardless of the cost. If we have to cut down somewhere, it won't be coffee."

Shoppers have watched coffee prices rise 50 cents a pound or more in the past year, mostly because of a frost that struck the Brazilian coffee crop last creases, probably because some buyers are stockpiling.

"There has been absolutely no decline in coffee consumption in restaurants and very little at the retail level," said Edward Jones, who has studied the coffee situation for the Mitchell Hutchins Inc. brokerage firm in New York.

He predicts a "modest drop-off" in sales in the near future if high prices persist, but he won't estimate the size of the drop. "We're in uncharted seas," he said. "There's never been a coffee price increase approaching this magnitude."

Garth Thorburn of the U.S. Agriculture Department expects a "5 to 10 percent reduction in consumption if prices continue this high. But it hasn't happened yet."

Back in 1953 a similar frost in Brazil forced a near doubling of green coffee bean prices at one point, and coffee consumption in the United States fell slightly in 1954. It picked up again the next year.

The current trouble started on July 17 last year, when frost caused by an Antarctic cold wave settled over the delicate coffee trees in Brazil, the world's largest supplier of coffee. Nearly two-thirds of the crop, which was to be harvested this spring, was destroyed.

Brazil was selling green coffee beans for 68 cents a pound then. They're up to $1.53 a pound now.

In the United States, the nationwide average retail price for a pound of ground coffee was $1.27. It was up to $1.70 by May of this year, while the average price of six ounces of instant coffee jumped in that period from $1.55 to $1.94.

New Pastor Vernacular Tongue In Church Turns To Songs

The Rev. Greg Kennedy has been named new pastor of the First Wesleyan Church of Greenville.

He had served as assistant pastor of the First Wesleyan Church, Lexington, for the past five years. During his stay in Lexington, he also taught in the city school system.

REV. GREG KENNEDY

Church To Mark Anniversary

Little Creek Church will celebrate its anniversary this weekend.

The following are the anniversary services scheduled for the church: Elder Jesse Kearney and the congregation of Moye's Chapel F.W.B. Church will conduct Friday night services; Sunday 11 a.m. worship services; and at 3 p.m. Sunday Rev. Williams and the congregation of Phillip Church of Christ will conduct the service. The public is invited.

Homecoming At Church Planned

FARMVILLE — Quarterly meeting and homecoming services will be held at St. James Free Will Baptist Church here Saturday and Sunday.

Guest speaker Saturday night will be the Rev. Adams of Greenville.

Choirs from Cherry Lane of Greenville and Smith Chapel of Mt. Olive will participate in the 11 a.m. service Sunday.

The Rev. Charlie R. Parker Jr. is pastor of the churches. The public is invited to attend.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The 16th century Protestant reformer, Martin Luther, said he put the Bible in the people's language so God could speak to them, and also put hymns in the people's language so they could speak to God.

That use of the vernacular tongue in Christian worship no longer distinguishes Protestants from Roman Catholics, who began the practice 10 years ago, but Luther's heirs — the Lutherans — still are toning up the vocalizing to God — their songs.

Quintet To Be Sunday Feature

Four Greenville businessmen and a minister of music will be featured in a quintet at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church Sunday, July 25, at 11 a.m.

Dr. Stephen Creech, first bass; Dr. Tom Patterson, second bass; Frank Steinbeck Jr., first tenor; and Frank Thompson, second tenor, will join Dr. David Foster, minister of music of Jarvis Methodist Church, in singing Watts' acapella "Our God, Our Help in Ages Past." Foster is a second tenor.

The service will open with a prelude by Creston entitled "Meditation for Marimba and Organ from Second Concerto." Carlton Hirschie Jr., an East Carolina University student and son of an Enfield Methodist minister, will perform at the marimba. Mickey Terry, organist, will assist Dr. Foster at the organ.

As Sunday is the seventh Sunday after Pentecost, the Rev. James H. Bailey, minister of Jarvis Church, will speak on "The Gift of Love" as part of a nine-week sermon series on the "Fruits of the Spirit." He will be assisted by the Rev. John Farmer, associate minister, who will preside.

Church Marking Pastor's Day

Pastor's Day will be held at Oak Grove Holiness Church on Bonner's Lane at 11 a.m. Sunday. Speaker will be Bishop N. C. Evans.

Afternoon services at 3 p.m. will be conducted by Rev. Jim McHood. Also planned is a 7 p.m. service. The public is invited to attend.

The 3.1-million-member denomination is the first three major Lutheran bodies in this country to take up a proposed new joint worship book and hymnal, drawn up in nine years' work by an inter-Lutheran commission.

The goal, projected for completion in 1978, is the first common worship book for all three major branches of Lutherans — nearly 9 million of them.

Not all has been harmony in the task, however, even in choosing the songs to include. But the experts have made some concessions to popular tastes in an effort to achieve it.

The hymns should be doctrinally sound, observes Dr. Marshall, but he adds, "As someone has said, 'People sing only in the shower and in church' — so hymns must also be singable."

Club Meeting Set Tonight

The Pastor Aid Club of Sweet Hope F.W.B. Church will meet at the home of Ruby and Elia Dudley tonight at 8 p.m.

Elder Tyson will conduct services at the Sweet Hope F.W.B. Church Saturday at 8 p.m. and The Zion Traveler of Stokes will present a musical program Sunday night. The public is invited.

PREACHING SUNDAY
TARBORO — Dr. West Shields Jr., Greenville evangelist, will preach at Pittman Grove Baptist Church here Sunday at 11 a.m.

The public is invited to attend.

In response to congregational surveys, several popular hymns not originally included have been added, such as "Onward Christian Soldiers," "What A Friend We Have in Jesus" and "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."

Also added, in response to popular demand, were some gospel songs such as "Amazing Grace" and "How Great Thou Art," made popular by Billy Graham's crusades, and some contemporary songs such as "Let us Break Bread Together on Our Knees."

However, some widely liked hymns weren't chosen, including "Rise Up, O Men of God."

It was the only one of the 50 hymns most frequently used by Lutherans not included. Reasons given for ruling it out were its male-dominated sexist language and its theologically incorrect phrases saying the church is "unequal to its task" and that the people "make it great."

The new compilation of 510 hymns retains two-third of the 315 hymns in the present hymnbook of 1958.

Preferences

People who are sailboat buffs look down their noses at powerboats. Conversely, those who prefer powerboats think there is too little action in the sport of sailing. It's a matter of personal preference.

Fortunately, there is enough water in the world to permit both kinds of boating. Also, there is enough of everything on this earth to enable us to live in dignity while doing personally what we like best — IF we use our resources properly . . . and remember to consider our fellowman.

Personal preferences . . . consideration. These two things apply to boating, to be sure. They also apply to choice of a mate, where to live, kind of occupation, and where and how to worship. You have freedom of choice. Don't forget to use it.

New employees are permitted to use the facilities until they train themselves so bowel movements take place out of working hours.

Under the present OSHA proposal:

1. Drinking water, toilet and handwashing facilities must be provided for all field workers.
2. One toilet facility shall be provided for every 40 workers or fraction of that number. It shall be located within a five-minute walk of each employee's place in the field.
3. Drinking water must be dispensed "either through the use of a drinking fountain ... or a gravity water tap."
4. For crews of fewer than five employees, field facilities are not necessary if the employer provides rides to facilities nearby.
5. Toilet paper on holders, disposable towels, soap, door latches and guide signs in as many languages as necessary must be provided.

Boards OK 4 Special Use Permit Requests

The City-County and Greenville Board of Adjustments granted four requests for special use permits Thursday evening and tabled action on two other matters.

The City-County Board, following public hearings, granted requests for special use permits by: Dudley and Preston Crandall who sought to place a mobile home on the lot located on State Road 1421 some one-half mile from the city limits.

People's Baptist Temple in order to erect a principal use sign at 2001 W. Greenville

Boulevard; and B. E. Jones, G. A. Weimer and P. E. Carroll in order to construct a care home on property located on NC 43 across from the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

A request for a special use permit by Em's Antiques and Collectibles in order to operate an antique shop and erect a principal use sign on the lot located on the Farmville Highway one mile from Lake Ellsworth was tabled for further study.

The city board granted a request for a special use permit by Herbert S. Corey who sought to utilize the structure located at 1301 Cotanche Street as a fraternity house.

In granting the request, the board issued the permit to cover the entire lot at 1301 Cotanche and gave Corey the option to either use the house and church on the lot as a fraternity or split the parcel into two lots in order to utilize the church structure as a fraternity. If the lot is split, Corey could continue to utilize the house as a residence.

Cub Scout Day Camp Scheduled

The Pitt County Cub Scout Day Camp '76 will start on August 2 and run through August 6. The Day Camp is a new program for local Cub Scouts and is to be operated by a group of local Cub Scout leaders.

Forty-three Pitt County Cubs have signed up for the activity which will be held at the Bonner Scout Reservation. The Cubs will travel by bus each morning to the reservation, returning in the late afternoon.

The program at the Reservation will be a variety of "cub size" activities including Archery and other field sports, swimming, Cub handicraft, nature study and advancements.

Leaders for the activity will include Mrs. Lucy Adams, Mrs. Nora Gatlin, Mrs. Gloria Pearsall, Mrs. Juanita Johnson, Mrs. Joe Brown and District Executive Ken Davis assisted by a selected group of Boy Scouts who will serve as special Den Chiefs.

Bellis in order to appeal the decision of the building inspector to issue a building permit to construct a house at 1403 S. Wright Road was tabled for further study until the August meeting.

Handicap Is No Handicap For This All-Star

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

Hearing is a big part of playing football. A football player has to hear signals, whistles and, if he is small, the pitter patter of big feet coming down on him from behind.

But where does that leave a person unable to hear? What if he wants to play football?

Go right ahead, would be the answer you would get from Roosevelt Odom, a big, 200-pound linebacker from Morganton who is playing for the South team this week in the Boys Home All-Star game.

Odom played on a national championship team this past fall and all the players on the team were deaf. Odom played for the team from the North Carolina School for the Deaf. And he must have been good enough to be selected to the Boys Home game.

But a surprising thing happened when Odom walked into camp last Sunday. Back home, one of his coaches was deaf and two were not but all three used sign language. Odom was worried about how he could communicate until he met his roommate for the week, Warren Phillips, a defensive lineman from Hamlet.

"I didn't know who my roommate would be," Phillips said. "Roosevelt and his family came in and his brothers told me he was deaf." Warren said he noticed that Roosevelt was uncomfortable at first until he discovered Warren knew sign language.

"He brushed me up on a few letters and we worked it out together. I'm glad to be rooming with Roosevelt. We get along real well."

"He followed me around until he knew where everything was and what the routines were."

Phillips said he first learned sign language from a friend back home. "My best friend's grandparents were deaf," he said, and when he would visit his friend he would pick it up from watching them.

Roosevelt said that his team was prepared for games in the same ways other teams are but that the communications were silent.

"We must see the ball because when the center starts the snap, we will start with the ball. We are faster starting than players that can hear because we see the ball first," Roosevelt pointed out.

Roosevelt said the quarterback for his team would slap the center's backside to start the play. When the play was over, the referees would touch the players to stop the play.

"He says that they can't hear but they can hit just as hard," Warren said interpreting Roosevelt's signals. "He says the coach tells them the plays and the quarterback relays it with hands signals."

Russians Drawing Wary Watch By Olympic Officials After Rows

MONTREAL (AP) — Officials kept a wary watch on the Russians. The queen watched the princess. And most of the rest of the world watched Nadia.

It was the farewell performance in the XXI Olympic Games by the little girl who has won the hearts of the world, and 14-year-old Nadia Comaneci made it a beauty, so outstanding it even overshadowed a couple of major rows centering around the troubled Russians.

With perhaps one billion people watching on television, the little 88-pounder, pony-tail in place, racked up her sixth and seventh perfect scores the perfect 10 that, before these Games, never had been awarded — and collected two more gold medals.

Out of the gymnasium, she remained as still as ever.

"I am not surprised. I knew if I persevered I would do well," the Romanian schoolgirl said before leaving for a Black Sea vacation with a haul of three gold medals — women's all-around, balance beam, uneven parallel bars — a silver for the team and a bronze in the floor exercise.

Nelli Kim of Russia, who collected golds in the floor exercise and vault, along with her second perfect score of the Games, was a little more outgoing and giggly.

"I haven't quite realized it yet," she said. "Maybe tomorrow or the next day it will Coke tied Jefferson Standard 18-18 but retained first place in the Junior Putters league, in action last night.

Rob Ericson led Coke with four and Mark Barber led Jefferson with 4½.

Bucks Gulf remained in second with a 25-11 win over Jerry's. Troy Fleining and Carl White had six each for Coke and Gordon Clark scored 4½ for Jerry's.

J. H. Hudson slipped past Smith Waldrop, 21½-20½, in the final match. John Langley had six and Victor Hudson five for Hudson and John Abbott and Eric Lee had 5½ each for S-W.

The local putt-putt pro, K. W. Edmundson won his third tournament this week in Fayetteville but had to win an 18-hole playoff after tying for first place after 54 holes.

come to me. I'm slow about these things sometimes."

They evenly divided the golds in last night's final events in women's gymnastics, but Kornelia Ender of East Germany and the American men swimmers continued to grab them all.

Miss Ender won the women's 100 meter butterfly in world record time of 1:00.13 then headed for the dressing room.

"I changed my suit and there I was," she said. She was back on the starting block again. And again she won in world record time, 1:59.26 in the 200 meter freestyle. The triumphs came only 25 minutes apart and gave her four golds and the amazing East Germans' victories in all but one of the women's swimming events held.

Brian Goodell, a 17-year-old from Mission Viejo, Calif., and an American relay team also set world records in winning in the 400 meter freestyle and the 400 meter medley relay, remaining unbeaten in these Games. The American men now have won all nine swimming events competed, set world records in eight of them, collected six more silver medals and three bronze.

Overall, the United States now has a leading collection of 13 gold, 10 silver and five bronze. Russia is next with 9-1-7, East Germany has 9-7-6 and Romania, primarily on the nerve and fire and grace of Nadia, has 3-2-2.

The Russians, who already have had a modern pentathlon competitor kicked out of the Games for cheating, swept the medals in individual saber but continue to be embroiled in controversy.

Tom Gompf, manager of the American diving team, told The Associated Press he had been approached by Russians earlier this year who proposed a deal to him through which the Soviets would have received judges' voting support for their female springboard diver, Irina Kalinina, in exchange for a promise to have Russian judges back Phil Boggs of the United States in the men's event.

Gompf said the Russians came to him because he had been a judge in the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich. He said he made it clear the deal was not accepted.

Gompf later said he was misquoted, but The Associated Press stuck by its report and said it refrained, at Gompf's request; from naming the Russians involved.

The international swimming federation, governing body for Olympic aquatic events, said its members feel "further explanations must be made by the individual who made the statement because the information is insufficient at this time."

And it added:
"The bureau has set up checks on their judges to guard against prejudicial judging."

The swimming federation, through its president, Dr. Harold Tenning, earlier in the day had threatened disciplinary action against the Russians, who wanted to pull out their water polo team because it had no chance to win the gold medal. Dr. Tenning called it "poor sportsmanship."

The Russians later changed their minds and decided the water polo team will continue to compete.

In the men's diving, Capt. Boggs, the favorite from the Air Force Academy, survived some gamesmanship being played by the American and Russian judges and won the men's three meter springboard diving with 619.0 points, followed by Franco Kagnoto of Italy and Aleksandr Kosenkov of Russia.

Williams's Single Lifts NS To Win

By CHIP LAMBETH
Reflector Sports Writer

Mike Pollard's two-out, two-on homer in the fifth tied it and Roger Williams's bases-loaded single in the bottom of the seventh gave the Greenville North State All-Stars a 5-4, victory over Roanoke Rapids, yesterday.

The victory gave Greenville the Area II championship and they now advance to the districts to be held in Swansboro next week.

The Roanoke Rapids stars put up a good fight jumping on Greenville pitcher Williams for two runs in the first and they added two more in the third getting help from two errors.

But Greenville picked up a run in the third as Pollard grounded out with the bases loaded and Jeff Porter cut the lead to 4-2 in the fourth with a homer to left.

Pollard homered scoring Crowell Pope in the fifth to tie the game, 4-4.

Roanoke Rapids had to change pitchers in the next frame and it cost them the game as reliever Keith Siedge walked two batters after Pope reached on a fielder's choice. Williams singled to right scoring Pope with the winner.

Mesic Incorporation Is Upheld

By TILLIE KNOWLES
Editor,
Pamlico County News

BAYBORO — Superior Court Judge Henry A. McKinnon, Jr. shortly before noon today ruled that the incorporation in 1971 of the town of Mesic and the subsequent annexation in 1974 was lawful and not in violation of any section of the U.S. or N.C. constitutions.

The judge noted numerous deficiencies on the part of the town's governing body in failing to follow the law as to the operation of the town of Mesic, but ruled these were not willful or corrupt, and were not such as to invalidate the town charter or to cause the removal of any town officers as requested in the action suit.

Judge McKinnon also noted that although there appears to be several deficiencies in tax listing procedure, they are not such as to invalidate the ten cents tax levy and that taxes may be collected.

Earlier in the five day hearing conducted as a Special Court session in Bayboro, the $11 million dollar damage suit filed by about 100 plaintiffs had been dismissed.

Closing arguments were heard Thursday, following a full day of hearings on Wednesday. On Wednesday, two defendants — former town clerk Shirley Morris and Mesic finance officer and treasurer Leo Henries were questioned at length about bookkeeping procedures for the town's funds. Ms. Morris said she had given records to Henries because she had no room for them at her home where she had kept them in a closet.

Wednesday's testimony included that of Lee Winters of New Bern, a Regional Land Use Planner with the Neuse River Council of Governments who said the 1970 census showed a population for Mesic of 369.

Also heard was Rodman Clark of Havelock, Clark, an expert in planning and assisting towns to get grants, explained he had tried twice to contact Mesic Mayor Elwood Jeanette relative to grants, but had no response from him.

The mayor, one of the defendants, said the Mesic books had been audited only once, in 1974. When asked if he had tried to get another auditor since that date, Jeanette said they (the town governing body) couldn't find one because nobody wanted to get involved.

In the Thursday session of the hearing which began on Monday, a Mesic resident, Rudolph Jones, testified that Mesic has 111 homes, 11 mobile homes, three shops, four stores, ten cottages and 19 street lights. The town's incorporated limits, however, include an area the size of Durham.

State Rep. Joe Bright, subpoenaed as a witness by attorneys for the plaintiff, failed to appear for the Thursday session.

Prior to final arguments Thursday, Robert Bowers, an attorney for the defendants, renewed a motion that the case be dismissed. Judge McKinnon indicated he would take Bowers' motion under advisement.

Bowers, in his closing arguments, conceded that town officials may have erred in conducting town affairs, but added it was not done willfully. He said no evidence had been shown by plaintiffs that money had been stolen or that any individual had been favored by town officials.

Hiram Mayo, Jr., an attorney for the plaintiffs, in his final argument said the town board of Mesic had violated statutes and committed various illegalities.

Mayo contended property owners had been denied due process in the matter of incorporation and annexation, and that the board had violated state law by not having a budget. Another violation cited by Mayo was keeping revenue sharing funds and monies from beer and wine sales tax in the same bank account.

Other violations on the part of defendants cited were Henries' admission in testimony that several pages had been cut from the town's financial ledger; the loss of town council minutes; no minutes at all for a period of time; and failure to hold regular meetings.

Tips On Avoiding Tick Fever; It's Increasing

ATLANTA (UPI) — With the peak danger period for Rocky Mountain spotted fever approaching, the National Center for Disease Control has prepared a question and answer series designed to help the public recognize and avoid the illness.

Rocky Mountain spotted fever is spread to humans through the bite of certain ticks. It is a growing medical problem. There has been a steady increase in reported cases since 1960 nationwide. Most have occurred in seven southern and South Atlantic states.

The following questions and answers were prepared by Dr. Charles Shepard:

Q. What is Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever?

A. It is an infectious disease that can be transmitted to people through the bite of an infected tick. Usually, transmission of the disease from a tick bite does not occur unless the tick remains attached to a person for two or more hours.

Q. How will I know if I am getting RMSF or if my child is getting it?

A. About three to 10 days after tick attachment, the disease starts with a fever, perhaps with chills, headache or muscle aches. The onset is definite, and the patient is so sick that the doctor is usually called. A rash usually appears after one to three days of fever, usually on the wrists and ankles. At first the rash resembles that of measles. Later the rash may spread to the remainder of the body.

Q. Does RMSF affect all age groups?

A. Yes. Because they are more likely to be exposed to ticks, children living in rural and suburban areas are more likely to become infected. The disease is severe at all ages, but it is more severe in adults, especially in the elderly.

Q. Is there an effective treatment for RMSF?

A. Yes. Tetracycline and chloramphenicol are both effective. The earlier the disease is diagnosed and treatment started, the better. If treatment is begun on the first day or two of rash, the fever usually falls within 48 hours.

Q. Do all ticks carry RMSF?

A. Three species of ticks commonly transmit the disease to man: the Rocky Mountain wood tick in the West, the American dog tick in the East and parts of the Pacific Coast and the Lone Star tick in parts of the Eastern U. S. and Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Only a small percentage of individual ticks are infected.

Q. What can be done to reduce the risk from ticks?

A. When you are in a tick-infested area, check yourself and your companions frequently to see if any ticks have gotten on you. Ticks usually hang on grass or brush waiting for a host to come by. Often they first get on a person's legs and then crawl upwards looking for a place to attach. They may take several hours to attach. It helps to keep clothing buttoned, to tuck pants legs in socks and to keep shirts tucked in. At night look yourself and your children over. If the hair is long, you will need to part and comb through it to make sure that none have attached to the scalp. Check the clothing over carefully, too, when it is first removed, before the ticks have had a chance to crawl off. Many cases result from exposure to ticks on dogs.

Q. What is the best way to remove a tick after it has become attached?

A. You can just pull them off with your hand. If you have tweezers, use them and grasp the tick by the head as close to the site of attachment as possible. You can get infected from handling ticks, so when you are removing them from someone else, or especially when you are taking them off a dog, use tweezers or forceps or cover your fingers with a piece of paper.

Q. I just found a tick attached to my child and pulled the tick off. What should I do.

A. Not many tick attachments result in infection. If fever does develop within the incubation period (three to 10 days), be sure to tell your doctor. If he thinks your child might have RMSF he can start treatment as early as possible. With early treatment, recovery is quick.

Q. What should I do if I think I'm getting RMSF?

A. Call your doctor and describe the symptoms to him. If there has been tick exposure, be sure to tell him about it.

Israel Seeking Alternatives To Petroleum

By DAVID LANCASTER
TEL AVIV (AP) — Scientists are trying to increase Israel's energy supply with sunshine, wave machines, windmills and scum from the Dead Sea.

Engineers concede that it might take decades to learn how to harness even a fraction of the sun's power. Meanwhile, the sun is already being put to use on rooftops throughout the country.

More than 150,000 households in Israel — compared to a few hundred American homes — use sun heating to produce cheap hot water.

Israelis have been using the technique for more than 20 years. More and more families are installing glass "reflector plates" and tanks on their roofs.

"Once you've paid for the heater, which costs about $400, the hot water is almost free on a sunny day," says one housewife. "On a rainy day we can always switch to the electricity."

A Tel Aviv company, Miromit, which calls itself the world's most experienced maker of sun-powered equipment, says it is exporting thousands of solar collector plates to the United States, Greece, Turkey and even sun-starved Britain, where on a cloudy day, infrared rays can provide some heating energy.

Israeli scientists complain that the government has no full program to promote energy research or solar experiments.

Israel produces electricity from conventional power stations that burn oil, all of it imported from Iran since the country has no oil of its own. Present plans call for Israel to "go nuclear" in the 1980s, with atomic power stations.

Professors at the Israel Institute of Technology (Technion) are convinced that some of the nuclear investment money could be saved by solar energy. Even with present technology, they say, the sun can be used for more than heating bath water.

Prof. Baruch Givroni builds "radiation traps" that turn an entire roof into a heat collector. He says that a low-rise building designed around the radiation trap can do without a furnace even in cold climates.

Givroni's heat trap is a triangular shed of glass, aluminum foil and black foam that catches the sun's rays. The accumulated hot air is pushed by a fan into a gravel storage bed and circulated through the building.

On summer nights, he says, it collects condensation and stores cold air, to cool the building by day without air conditioning.

The Givroni heater hasn't been used so far in Israel except for experiments.

Anthony Peranio, head of the hydrotechnical section at Technion, wants to harness wind and waves as well as the sun.

He plans a generator more than a mile long — a flap suspended in the Mediterranean Sea — to collect the power from the incoming waves and transmit it ashore.

"This could be combined with a battery of windmills — there is a helluva lot of wind energy — and a solar 'farm' of collector plates on shore," says Peranio. He also advocates methane burners that run on manure, claiming that "70 pounds of manure provides enough energy for 20 families to cook for a week."

ABC Took Up Ratings Marbles During Week

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Years ago, NBC hit ratings paydirt when it had the late Chet Huntley, a serious man, and David Brinkley, who specializes in wry, coanchoring its Democratic and GOP convention shows.

No doubt hoping to emulate the glory days, it teamed Brinkley with John Chancellor to coanchor its convention coverage this year.

But last week's Nielsen ratings for the Democratic National Convention coverage show that durable Walter Cronkite and his supporting CBS troops beat the Chancellor-Brinkley team by a slight margin.

On the average, families in 6.4 million American homes watched the prime-time convention proceedings on CBS from Monday through Thursday, compared with an average of 5.9 million homes tuned to NBC.

ABC, which since 1968 has combated the opposition's gavel-to-gavel convention coverage with a mixture of entertainment fare and abbreviated convention-watching, drew an average of 5.4 million homes tuned in for its convention telecasts in prime time last week.

But as you'd expect, ABC whopped the start-to-finish coverage of CBS and NBC in the ratings the night of July 13, when it aired this year's All-Star baseball game in Philadelphia.

According to Nielsen estimates, viewers in nearly 18.9 million homes watched ABC's baseball show. In contrast, the total estimated audience for the competing political show on NBC and CBS was to be found in but 8.9 million homes.

It made the All-Star game last week's top rated evening attraction on TV, the lowest-rated being NBC's gavel-to-gavel look at the second night of the convention. CBS didn't do much better, either.

The night of Wednesday, July 14, was the best night the unusually dull — for Democratic gatherings — convention had in the ratings. This apparently was because viewers expected Jimmy Carter to enliven things by naming a running mate that night.

The Nielsen estimates say CBS' coverage of that evening's events topped the ratings by a narrow margin, the efforts of Cronkite & Co. seen in 7.5 million homes, with 7.3 million homes logged by NBC.

ABC, which eschewed prime-time start-to-finish telecasts of the convention until the show's closing night, drew but 5.5 million homes with its abbreviated July 14 coverage.

On closing night, CBS had the most viewers watching, with sets in nearly 6.9 million homes tuned to that network.

According to Nielsen estimates, NBC was second with more than 5.8 million homes, 800,000 more than viewed ABC's convention coverage.

ABC may have been third in convention viewers, but its program mix of entertainment and shortened convention coverage made it No. 1 in the over-all ratings for evening shows last week.

Pat Nixon Due Leave Hospital

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Mrs. Richard Nixon was to be released today from Long Beach Memorial Hospital where she has been recovering from a partially paralyzing stroke, her doctors say.

The physicians said she will continue a rehabilitation program at home.

Former President Richard M. Nixon and the couple's daughters, Julie Eisenhower and Tricia Cox, are expected to be at the hospital at 10 a.m. PDT when Mrs. Nixon is to be released.

Mrs. Nixon, 64, was hospitalized July 8 after suffering a stroke the previous afternoon while reading on the patio of the Nixon's San Clemente estate, Casa Pacifica.

The stroke weakened her left side and impaired her speech. Within a few days of her hospitalization, however, Mrs. Nixon had begun physical therapy.

Hospital spokeswoman Karen Krantz said Thursday that Mrs. Nixon can now walk up stairs, comb her hair and perform other daily tasks.

She said the former first lady will continue occupational and rehabilitation therapy designed to strengthen her left leg.

Dr. John Lungren, the Nixon family's personal physician, said he expects Mrs. Nixon to fully recover within three to four months.

Nixon, often accompanied by Julie and Tricia, has visited his wife daily. She has received about 6,000 cards and letters a day.

Kirk Is Out As Candidate

RALEIGH (AP) — Phillip J. Kirk, state human resources secretary, announced today his withdrawal as a Republican candidate for state superintendent of public instruction.

Kirk told a news conference the Hatch act, which regulates political activity by federal employees and some state workers, forbade him from continuing both as human resources secretary and as a candidate for the top state school job.

Kirk said he had received a ruling to that effect from the Civil Service Commission.

When asked why he did not resign as human resources secretary rather than quit as candidate for state school superintendent, Kirk said:

"I enjoy the job that I have now and don't feel it would be fair for the department to have three secretaries in four months."

Supreme Court Justice Stays Execution Moves

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Supreme Court justice is delaying an order that would have allowed three states to begin executing death row convicts, a move that could also delay executions of more than 600 persons across the country.

Justice Lewis F. Powell issued an order Thursday staying the imposition of death sentences in Georgia, Florida and Texas until the Supreme Court, which is now in recess, can consider a rehearing of the cases of three men who sought the delay.

The high court does not meet again until Oct. 4.

While Powell's stay deals only with the cases of three men in the three states, court spokesmen said it is expected that all states will delay any planned executions until the cases are decided.

David E. Kendall of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund said it was expected that state courts would block executions in their states, at least through September, because of the Powell stay.

A survey earlier this month by The Associated Press showed 630 persons on death rows across the nation.

Powell's order stays the effect of a Supreme Court decision July 2 in which all three states were told that their capital punishment laws are constitutional. In the same decision, the court struck down mandatory death penalties in North Carolina and Louisiana.

The justice acted on requests from the NAACP fund and lawyers for the defendants in the three states.

Powell had voted with the 7 to 2 majority in upholding the Georgia, Florida and Texas capital punishment laws and in his order Thursday he said the stay should not suggest his feelings on the merits of the petitions seeking Supreme Court review of the decision.

There are seldom situations where the high court reconsiders a case, but Powell noted that only the entire court can make that decision.

"If the executions in these cases were carried out before the court ruled in 1972 that the death penalty as generally applied throughout the country gave too much leeway to judges and juries in sentencing convicted criminals to death. But the justices decided July 2 that the death penalty statutes in the three states met early court objections because they gave judges and juries guidelines on which to base their decisions.

Suggests Steps To Cut Electric Cost

A Virginia Electric and Power Company official has issued several suggestions which could help consumers save from 20 to 30 percent on their monthly summer electric bills.

Conservation measures are particularly important now, since higher summer rates are in effect, according to J. H. McBrayer, VEPCO's Albemarle district manager. When residential customers use more than 600 kilowatt-hours per month, the rates are higher than in the winter.

He suggested that homeowners set their thermostats on central air conditioning units at 78 to 80 degrees, or less than 15 degrees cooler than the outside temperature.

Adding storm doors and windows, and installing weatherstripping and caulking around windows and door frames will help reduce the escape of energy. Proper insulation is also important, especially in areas such as the attic, exterior walls and floors above crawl spaces.

He urged that air conditioners be kept in good condition with clean air filters and that blinds and drapes be closed to keep out the heat of sunlight.

The Brazilians surprised no one when they won the 5th World Team Olympiad in Monte Carlo in May. Pundits had been predicting a possible Brazilian win and their young star, Gabriel Chagas, had shown early that he was in top form.

He became declarer at seven no trump in this hand from his country's match against the U.S. Since the Brazilians were using an artificial club system, North was forced to open one diamond. Then, after a forcing response of two no trump, the auction proceeded inevitably to a grand slam in diamonds. West elected to sacrifice at seven spades, but rather than accept the penalty, Chagas pressed on to seven no trump.

West led the jack of diamonds, and Chagas decided that since West held long spades, East was more likely to have long clubs. He elected, therefore, to give up on the club finesse in favor of a double squeeze. He ran six diamonds and the ace of spades, reducing the hand to this position:

Quality, Volume Said Better On Farmville Mart

FARMVILLE — The quality of offerings Thursday on the Farmville Tobacco Market was slightly better, as a whole, than on Wednesday's sale, according to sales supervisor Louis Williams.

Williams said that the volume of sales continued heavy yesterday as all firms had full sales.

Offerings consisted of mostly primings and non-descript, the Tobacco Board of Trade official said, with a slight increase noted in the volume of cutters and lugs.

Prices were approximately the same on all grades and top price paid was for a few cutters that brought $1.17 per pound.

The market sold 403,654 pounds for $362,211 in averaging $89.73 per hundred pounds. For the season, Farmville warehouses have sold 1,562,790 pounds for $1,404,661, an average of $89.88.

Carter Hopes Avoid Old Snare

CARTER PRESIDENCY
Aspects of Jimmy Carter's domestic policy are by now well-known—his concern for the poor and disadvantaged, his zest for bureaucratic reform. But how would he—elected President—function as foreign policy leader and commander of America's armed forces? Columnist-author Neal R. Pierce probed Carter on this question in two extended personal interviews conducted shortly before the Georgian captured the Democratic presidential nomination.

This is the last of a series based on those interviews, other interviews Pierce has held with Carter over the past five years, and extensive consultations with top Carter aides, with independent observers of his performance as governor of Georgia and experts on the presidency. Pierce is a contributing editor of the National Journal, writes a syndicated column focusing on the problems of states and local governments, and is author of a series of books on regions of the U.S., including "The Megastates of America" and "The Deep South States of America." He is also an elections consultant-commentator for CBS News.

By NEAL R. PIERCE
Jimmy Carter promises that if he's elected President he won't "use foreign affairs or foreign trips as an escape mechanism to avoid responsibilities on the domestic scene."

If he could live up to the pledge, the Georgian would have avoided a trap which has ensnared almost all Presidents of recent years—becoming so fascinated with the daily national security briefings, the "management" of foreign crises, the dealings with heads of state—that they ignore hard problems at home, including slogging budget questions. Foreign affairs activity offers easy publicity for a President, and an arena free of nagging domestic political opposition. Carter believes he can avoid that type of diversion of his time—and in fact ought to in the interests of the country's world position. "A crucial prerequisite of an effective foreign policy," he told me during recent interviews, "is to restore the confidence and morale and commitment of our people in their own domestic affairs." That doesn't mean, however, that a President Carter wouldn't step confidently into his role as the nation's chief diplomat and commander-in-chief of the armed forces. The reasons: Carter never approaches any task without confidence in himself. The intellectual challenges of foreign affairs clearly intrigue him. And he believes that in importance—if not in time spent—national security takes precedence. "The No. 1 responsibility of any President, above everything else," he says, "is to guarantee the security of this country—freedom from fear of attack or blackmail, the ability to carry out a legitimate foreign policy."

It would be hard to think of a President who did not take that attitude. Indeed, most of Carter's attitudes toward defense and foreign policy matters suggest continuity with and not any radical break from the past.

Carter graduated from Annapolis and served several years as a nuclear submarine officer—a background that might lead some men to cede unusual authority to top military command. On the contrary, Carter finds repugnant the idea of the Joint Chiefs of Staff having a veto over military policy: "The President of the United States is the commander-in-chief of the armed forces and makes the ultimate decisions."

He believes the nation should have weapons systems sufficient "to meet the strategic needs of our country and to meet our legitimate obligations to our allies." But he rejects the notion that the U.S. need keep up with or exceed the Soviets in all weapons systems. He wants a Secretary of Defense who while advocating defense needs must also be able to withstand the pressures of munitions manufacturers.

A Secretary of State in a Carter administration could expect to have substantial discretion in administering foreign policy, but nothing approaching the broad latitude that Henry Kissinger has enjoyed. When I asked Carter if his Secretary of State would basically make foreign policy or carry out the policy the President formulated, he replied:

"Both. I would retain the responsibility for making the final decisions. I would insist on being clearly informed. I would retain the role of being spokesman for country... I would consider the Secretary of State to be a partner with me, an adviser, an administrator of the complex foreign affairs mechanism that falls within (his) responsibility... But I would be the ultimate one to make decisions." Asked to name the recent Secretary of State he considered a "model," Carter skipped over Kissinger, William Rogers and even his friend Dean Rusk to name Dean Acheson and George Marshall, who served under Harry Truman. They were "very strong" Secretaries of State, Carter said, "men of conviction, of sensitivity, of competence and authority." But, he added, "I don't think there was ever any doubt in the minds of the American people about who was responsible ultimately. It was the President."

A traditionalist tone marks many aspects of the Carter approach to foreign affairs. He has talked of restoring a bi-partisan foreign policy of the kind that characterized the Truman years. He places strong emphasis on restoring what he believes is a "severely damaged" relationship with the United States' "natural allies and friends—the democratic nations of the world," including Europe, the British Commonwealth and Japan.

For his foreign policy task force, Carter has turned to the East Coast foreign affairs establishment of Wall Street lawyers and bankers, Ivy League academics, foundations, and think tank experts—the same group which has dominated U.S. foreign policy for decades. There has been speculation that a leading figure in that group—a Cyrus Vance, Zbigniew Brzezinski or George Ball—might be Carter's choice for Secretary of State.

Carter told me that he had not yet decided whether he would pick a Secretary of State from the foreign policy establishment but praised that group and said he would consult it on a final choice. One of his close advisers said: "After the Eastern establishment, who is there?"

Carter believes it must be the President's responsibility, "to restore the moral authority of this country in its conduct of foreign policy"—a stance toward the world "that reflects the decency and generosity and common sense of our own people."

That leads him to urge unprecedented openness in informing the American people, and consulting with Congress, at an early point in foreign policy formulation. "Every time we have made a serious mistake in recent years in our dealings with other nations, such as Cambodia, Vietnam and Chile," Carter argues, "the American people have been excluded from the process of evolving and consummating our foreign policy."

It's at this point that Carter might find major disagreements with many of the foreign policy establishment types who are now advising him. An essentially elitist group, they are accustomed to the mystique of diplomacy and use of classified materials. They may yearn for the chance to serve in Carter administration (any Democratic administration, for that matter), but would they feel comfortable with truly open foreign policy formulation?

And there are sticky questions about making foreign policy in the sunshine—whether sensitive intelligence reports, for instance, should be shared with members of Congress, whose reputation for leaking secrets in something less than unblemished.

Covert operations pose another problem. Carter says the CIA shouldn't try to effect violent change in any government. His earlier formula to prevent CIA abuses was: "As President, I will know about any wrongdoing and I will tell the American people about it." But now he says he'd be willing to share oversight responsibilities with a joint congressional committee.

Despite his intent to make Congress a fuller partner in foreign affairs, Carter says he'd resist giving up the traditional "prerogatives and authority of the President" in the national security arena. But he hopes consultation can prevent run-ins. And it's clear that better relations would make it easier for Carter to win Capitol Hill agreement to an arms accord with the Soviets, for instance, or new economic measures to aid Third World nations. Experience shows that Congress can be coaxed into support of most presidential foreign affairs initiatives if it is consulted ahead of time.

Where Carter might differ most dramatically from other Presidents would be in opening up a "domestic window" on foreign affairs. He believes foreign and domestic issues are becoming increasingly interrelated and that such cabinet officials as the Secretaries of the Treasury, Agriculture, Commerce and Defense all have major foreign policy responsibilities, and should coordinate their activities rather than being subservient to the Secretary of State.

Beyond that, Carter believes the U.S. and the other world democracies can learn much from each other. "I have been repeatedly impressed by the achievements of the Japanese and the Europeans in their domestic affairs," he told the Foreign Policy Association in New York last month. As an example, he pointed to Japan's low unemployment and crime rates and its relative immunity from modern problems of rootlessness and alienation. The U.S. can also learn much from European nations, Carter suggested, about health care, urban planning and mass transportation.

Presently, U.S. ambassadors focus narrowly on national security and business relationships and do little to learn or to report home about promising domestic developments. A major new initiative which opens the window for Americans to other democracies' innovative answers for the problems of urban society could break that logjam. It would be a fitting contribution for the first U.S. President since World War II whose background was in the arena of state and local government rather than the hot house atmosphere of official Washington.

Court Showdown Nears On Big Laetrile Argument

By GIL BROYLES
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The growing clamor of cancer patients for the illegal substance laetrile heads for a showdown in federal appeals court this week as a three-judge panel prepares for arguments over whether the Food and Drug Administration has the right to ban the product. The specific case which will be heard July 30 in Santa Fe, N.M., by a panel of the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals involves a ruling by an Oklahoma City federal judge who allowed the importation of laetrile by individual patients from Mexico, where it is legal. U.S. District Court Judge Luther Bohanon has allowed more than a dozen cancer patients to obtain laetrile, which is synthesized from apricot seeds which the Food and Drug Administration said have been responsible for several fatal and non-fatal cyanide poisoning cases. Alaskan doctors, meanwhile, can administer laetrile since the state legislature passed a bill opening the way for its use and it became law when the Gov. Jay Hammond neither signed nor vetoed the measure. Laetrile still could be banned, however, if the state medical board rules that it is harmful. The FDA ban affects interstate shipments of the substance. Individual states can regulate its use within their own borders.

Bohanon's first ruling — the one under appeal by the FDA — came in 1975. He ordered that Kansas cancer patient Glen L. Rutherford could import a six-month supply of the substance, also marketed as Vitamin B17 and amygdalin.

Rutherford, of Conway Springs, Kan., says, "I owe my life to it." Bohanon has since granted requests from other cancer patients, saying it would be "out and out cruelty" to deny the people a chance to use laetrile.

His orders have prohibited the FDA from interfering with the importation of laetrile for the individuals and have granted the patients' physicians immunity from prosecution in administering the substance. Asst. U.S. Attorney Bill Price of Oklahoma City, presenting the government's case, contends that the courts have no jurisdiction in the matter because persons desiring laetrile have not followed guidelines es-

Day Laborer In Egypt Cheaper Than A Buffalo

By AHMED LUFTY
Associated Press Writer
TALKHA, Egypt (AP) — Financially speaking, Mussad Hagry would be better off if he were a water buffalo. His take home pay would be 30 times more than it is now, and he would get free food and shelter, which he doesn't get now.

Struggling to propel the country out of poverty, the government has concentrated on establishing industries, and most of the nine-million member labor force now earns substantially more than a Hagry or the water buffalo. But there are still two million day laborers like Hagry, according to a study by the Ministry of Social Affairs, representing 22 per cent of the labor force. Most are jobless for more than 12 days a year. The hard-pressed government is only now getting around to giving them some help.

Every morning, seven days a week, he rises at dawn when the crew boss bangs on the hotel he sleeps in. He washes in untreated water from the Nile River and then has breakfast, a crust of bread and a glass of sweet tea. Then with a straw basket and hoe he and the rest of the crew head for the muddy construction site near this Nile Delta town, 78 miles northeast of Cairo, to dig an irrigation canal. Under a hot sun he works until noon. Lunch is a piece of cheese, bread, an onion and another glass of tea. Then it's back to work until sunset. Like millions of Egyptians who lived on the banks of the Nile for centuries, Hagry accepts his fate with patience and says it is God's will. Hagry is 34 and married but he is lucky to see his wife, who lives in Upper Egypt, once a year. The rest of the time he shifts around looking for work, moving on to a new place when his services are no longer needed.

"If I have had a good season and saved some money, I go to see my wife but I ride on the roof of the train so I don't have to buy a ticket," he said. Hagry said he is paid 18 piasters a day (40 cents), half of which goes to the job contractor to pay for his food and tea. When he doesn't have a job, he lives off his meager savings. "I am completely dependent on the contractor," Hagry said. Contractors travel to impoverished villages in Upper Egypt in search of men like Hagry, offering their wives money in advance in an effort to complete a crew and bid for a government construction contract.

Persons who have been allowed to import laetrile say they are charged between $6 and $11 per bottle, the daily dosage in some cases. Medical authorities say the cost of synthesizing laetrile could vary greatly, depending on purity. "As we see it, laetrile is still an unapproved drug," says Jerry Henderson, FDA program manager for consumer affairs in Region Six headquartered in Dallas. "It has never been shown to be effective in any study against cancer."

Henderson cites reports of negative tests of laetrile by the National Cancer Institute in its search for a cancer cure. The NCI has conducted laetrile tests with animals in 1957, 1960, 1969, 1973, 1975 and is currently testing it against a mouse lung tumor, but officials say all "have failed to produce evidence of anticancer activity."

For Hagry is the lowest man on Egypt's economic ladder, a day laborer who is an immigrant in his own country, his sunup to sundown efforts can be had for 40 cents a day, of which he has to pay half for food and drink provided by his employer. It costs $6 a day to hire a water buffalo, frequently used in agricultural or construction projects. This condition represents unfinished business for the Egyptian revolution of 24 years ago, one of whose basic aims was to make a man worth more than an animal.

Every morning, seven days a week, he rises at dawn when the crew boss bangs on the hotel he sleeps in. He washes in untreated water from the Nile River and then has breakfast, a crust of bread and a glass of sweet tea. Then with a straw basket and hoe he and the rest of the crew head for the muddy construction site near this Nile Delta town, 78 miles northeast of Cairo, to dig an irrigation canal. Under a hot sun he works until noon. Lunch is a piece of cheese, bread, an onion and another glass of tea. Then it's back to work until sunset. Like millions of Egyptians who lived on the banks of the Nile for centuries, Hagry accepts his fate with patience and says it is God's will. Hagry is 34 and married but he is lucky to see his wife, who lives in Upper Egypt, once a year. The rest of the time he shifts around looking for work, moving on to a new place when his services are no longer needed.

"We have the deepest sympathy for individuals suffering from cancer, and we join with all Americans in hoping for a break-through in the search for a cure," Henderson says. "We regret Judge Bohanon's ruling because it may cause some patients to skip recognized drugs and go directly to laetrile."

An Oklahoma City attorney who represented his father in an effort to be allowed to legally use laetrile says his family had tried chemotherapy and cobalt treatments without success against lymph system cancer

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Early morning is best time to consider what your emotional and family feelings are and make plans to improve them. Later you are able to carry through with plans made earlier.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get an early start with the shopping and errands. Later you have time for recreation with friends you enjoy.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are able to meet with those who have been hard to contact during the week. A good day to make out necessary reports, statements.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Study accounts carefully and see if you can't cut down on expenses in some way. A friend who is a financial expert can be helpful with ideas.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make certain you take care of that important personal matter early before you make plans for a trip with friends. Take exercise that makes you feel and look better.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 21) Your mind is busy with fine ideas, so study them well and make notes. Spend a quiet evening at home with mate or friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Show more affection for those who have been loyal and helpful. You are now able to gain some personal aim easily. Don't be an easy target for a tricky person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get routine chores out of the way and then get into important community affairs. Evening is best time for recreation with friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get into new activities that inspire and give your life a new impetus. Making new contacts can lead to fine and firm friendships.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to understand partners better and be more willing to please them. Some new interest could put you in a top position, so be alert for such an opportunity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Any new contracts could be worked out to your advantage now. Making up with one who has opposed you is wise. This person could be of help to you in the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Schedule your activities carefully if you are to accomplish all that you set out to do this weekend. Shop for new clothes that enhance your personality.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Talk over with good friends what you want to do this weekend and plan wisely. A good day for home entertainment, too.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be the type that will have to plan activities wisely as there is the tendency to be a procrastinator in this chart. Teach to work early, no matter what the financial status, since self-sufficiency is important here. Law, the ministry, medicine are fine here.

Call your own time-out.

Some of the best moments in any sport take place right where you're sitting. Because where you're sitting can be a great place to cool the action.

Just grab a hold of a sizzling hot dog, spread the mustard thick, and drown your thirst with an ice-cold Pepsi. Nothing makes food taste better and good times last longer than Pepsi-Cola. And Pepsi is just as close to where you're sitting as the refreshment stand.

Go ahead. Right now is a great time to call your own time-out . . . and call for plenty of great-tasting Pepsi-Cola.
