Jones, Bundy, Rountree Among Victors

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County voters yesterday chose to return incumbents Sam Bundy and Horton Rountree to the State House of Representatives, Bruce Strickland to his seat on the Board of County Commissioners, and for the most part, sided with the major portion of North Carolina voters in giving votes to candidates for state-wide offices.

Worthington was seeking to replace one of the men. Bundy took the highest number of votes cast in that race, receiving 7,256, while Rountree gathered 5,553 to Mrs. Worthington's 3,943. The outcome of that House seat race in Greene County, which is joined with Pitt in the State House district, was much the same as in Pitt. Greene County residents cast 2,300 votes for Bundy, 1,255 for Rountree and 860 for Mrs. Worthington. In commenting on his nomination, Bundy said this morning, "I certainly want to express my appreciation to the people of Pitt and Greene Counties for the very favorable vote they gave me." He also expressed his appreciation for the "confidence and trust the people... gave me." Bundy added, "in all ways that I can... I will give full time to justify that confidence." Rountree said of his nomination, "I'm real pleased with the vote and the confidence the people put in me." He added,

"I shall try to do a better job," in the General Assembly. The veteran legislature continued, "now that we've got our medical school (at East Carolina University), it's important that we start on U.S. 264." In the County Commissioners race, Strickland took 5,908 votes as compared with hopeful Mrs. Rosalind Britt who attempted to unseat the veteran board member. In the Democrat primary for Governor, Pitt gave state-wide winner Jim Hunt 6,177 votes or 58.3 per cent, in the five-way race for the party's nomination. Hunt's closest rival in Pitt was George Wood—another Easterner—who took 1,533 votes (15.3 per cent), followed by Tom Strickland of Wayne County who took 1,353 votes (14.9 per cent) Ed O'Herron of Charlotte 12.8 per cent and Andy J. Barker of Love Valley who took only 35 votes, for .3 per cent. State-wide, O'Herron was Hunt's closest rival with close to 25 per cent of the votes cast. Hunt's Pitt campaign manager Louis Singleton said of the victory, "I think it's a great thing for the State of North Carolina and for Pitt County... and a tribute to the quality of the candidate himself."

Ford Appears To Be Firmly In Control

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Ford appears firmly in control of the 1976 Republican National Convention as the delegates prepare to choose the party's presidential nominee tonight. He established his dominance with a clear-cut victory on an issue chosen by challenger Ronald Reagan. The climactic confrontation toward which Ford and Reagan have moved for nine months was hours away and only a reversal that would rank as a political miracle could keep Ford from a first-ballot victory. After the defeat of Reagan's bid to force Ford to name his running mate this morning, attention turned to the remaining men on Ford's list of prospects, said by one source to number only five now. Ford was described as delighted with the outcome of the first test of strength at the convention. A Reagan spokesman said the former California governor still expects to win the presidential nomination. He described Reagan as "disappointed but not completely surprised." But Reagan's campaign director acknowledged that it would be an uphill battle. After a decisive 1,180-1,069 victory in the first major test of this 31st GOP convention, Ford's strategists worked out a compromise that avoided another floor fight over the foreign policy plank in the party platform. Backers of both sides arrived at the convention hall Tuesday knowing that before the session ended they would have a clear indication of which man had the strength to prevail. It was an emotional night. The noise and the politics had escalated from the opening day sessions on Monday. The demonstrations when Mrs. Ford and then Mrs. Reagan arrived in the hall were louder and longer than they had been the night before. Speakers were interrupted as partisans for both candidates tried to shout each other down. The crucial vote came on Reagan's proposal to require Ford to name his running mate before the balloting for the presidential nomination. Ford's victory by a 111-vote margin was all the more impressive because the President had allowed Reagan to choose the issue and then trounced him in the ultimate test of political power: who can get the votes. Ford's margin of victory margin was far wider than most observers expected. That vote was taken within hours of the time the Associated Press delegate survey showed Ford had moved past the 1,130 majority of delegate votes he would need to win the presidential nomination. Ford's strength continued to climb through the night. The latest AP tally, based on legal commitments and publicly stated preferences, gave Ford 1,139, Reagan 1,039, with 81 uncommitted. A Ford spokesman predicted that the President would win the nomination tonight and then would ask for a meeting with Reagan, a statement that immediately increased speculation that Ford would offer the vice-presidential nomination to his opponent. And Reagan was on the list of five named by a Ford campaign source. Others on the list were Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, Treasury Secretary William Simon, former Texas Gov. John B. Connally and former Deputy Atty. Gen. William D. Ruckelshaus. (Continued on page 16)

Hunt, Flaherty Leaders In Gubernatorial Race

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP)—Democrat James B. Hunt captured his party's gubernatorial nomination by a solid margin today, while Republican David Flaherty appeared to have sewed up the GOP nomination with a fraction with only a dozen precincts remaining uncounted. Some 1,000 votes would have to swing to GOP challenger Coy Privette in the final tabulations to deny Flaherty victory without a runoff by a mere nine-hundredths of a percentage point. With 99.48 per cent of the precincts counted, Flaherty had 57,915 votes or 50.09 per cent, compared with Privette's 37,236 or 32.21 per cent. Hunt nailed down better than 50 per cent of the Democratic votes early in the tabulations and tallied 357,680 votes or 52.75 per cent with 99.70 per cent of the Democratic precincts counted. Edward O'Herron trailed with 154,511 or 22.78 per cent, followed by ex-legislator George Wood with 119,829 or 17.67 per cent. State Sen. Thomas Strickland was a distant fourth with 40,977 votes or 6.04 per cent. Hunt 39, got his start in politics working for liberals like

Thomas Strickland was a distant fourth with 40,977 votes or 6.04 per cent. Hunt 39, got his start in politics working for liberals like

Terry Sanford and L. Richardson Preyer. He adopted a centrist platform that included support for capital punishment and a pledge to work for lower utility bills. Flaherty entered politics under the wing of the Broyles family as an executive in the Broyles furniture business before joining the Holshouser administration. He, too, took a middle-of-the-road position in the campaign. Neither of the state's two U.S. Senate seats was at stake. Eight of the state's 11 Congressmen easily won renomination. Incumbent U.S. Rep. L. H. Fountain weathered a strong challenge from three Democrats in the 2nd District. With 92.67 per cent of the precincts reporting, Fountain was hovering just over the 50 per cent figure needed to win the nomination outright. He was leading State Sen. Russell Kirby, 34,537 votes to 22,188, with Kirby hoping to force a runoff. Two Democrats, Roy Taylor and David Henderson, announced their retirements and sparked dogfights to succeed them. Henderson's administrative aide, Charles Whitley, led a four-man fight for the Democratic nomination that has been tantamount to election in the rural 3rd District. He was headed for a primary runoff with State Rep. Jimmy Love. In Taylor's 11th District, State Sen. Lamar Gudger led a five-man field for the Democratic nomination but faced a runoff, and Republican Bruce Briggs won his party's nomination outright. Ex-Chapel Hill mayor Howard Lee held a tenuous lead in the eight-candidate Democratic primary for lieutenant governor, seeking to be the first black to win a statewide election. But Lee faced a certain runoff challenge by Jimmy Green, the speaker of the state House, who trailed him by 158,798 votes or 27.26 per cent to 149,291 or 25.95 per cent. Hunt told a mid-morning news conference his triumph in the primary was "a people's vic-

Death Toll In Quake Soars To Over 5,300

By GIL SANTOS
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, The Philippines (AP) — The official toll of dead and missing in the earthquakes and tidal waves in the southern Philippines soared to more than 5,300 today, with nearly 30,000 reported homeless. The National Disaster Coordinating Center (NDCC) said 3-103 deaths had been confirmed and there were at least 2,282 missing, 688 injured and 28,716 homeless following Tuesday's catastrophes. The casualties were concentrated in the towns and cities along Mindanao island's 500 miles of coastline around the Moro Gulf, on the northern side of the Celebes Sea. The Philippine Air Force was shuttling tons of medicine, food and other supplies to Cotabato, on the eastern shore of the gulf, and Zamboanga, across the gulf at the tip of the Zamboanga peninsula. They were among the hardest hit cities. Navy ships stationed in Zamboanga were ferrying relief goods to other stricken areas along the coast. President Ford sent President Ferdinand E. Marcos a message expressing sorrow and offering U.S. aid. Casualties were reported in the provinces of North and South Zamboanga, Basilan, North and South Lanao, Cotabato and Misamis Oriental, and the cities of Zamboanga, Basilan, Cagayan de Oro and Cotabato. Other provinces in the central Philippines and on southern Luzon Island also felt the tremors, but there were no reports of casualties in those areas. The first quake struck shortly after midnight Monday, while the people of Mindanao were sleeping. It was centered in the Celebes Sea between Mindanao and Indonesia's Celebes island and sent 24-foot-high tidal waves crashing ashore, carrying away fishermen's still shacks as far as 100 yards inland. The first quake was followed by the usual aftershocks, and shortly after noon Monday another major tremor hit. But by then the survivors of the first quake had moved into the streets and other open spaces. (Continued on page 8)

Easy Victory For Jones

Incumbent First Congressional District Congressman Walter B. Jones won an easy victory over James J. Bonner in yesterday's Democratic primary. With 284 out of 290 precincts reported, Jones had 46,341 or 65.6 percent of the vote to Bonner's 24,277 or 34.3 percent. Facing Jones in the November election will be Dr. Joe Ward of Ayden who defeated Harold Stroud. With 262 of 290 precincts in, Ward's vote was 2,736 or 53 percent to Stroud's 2,446 or 47 percent.

Heri Knoshaw, a young refugee from the African nation, Chad, has recently arrived in Greenville along with her family. She has secured a job at a Farmville manufacturing firm, but needs transportation to and from work. She also needs help with learning to drive — she has her learner's permit. The Kate B. Reynolds Foundation has sent Pitt Memorial Hospital another check for its full-time emergency room coverage program, Hospital Director Jack Richardson announced to the Trustees last night. The amount is $20,000.

Dave McRae, Rehabilitation Director, reported on the development of the rehab center and proposed that the Board appoint a rehabilitation subcommittee or provide some other means of keeping directly involved with the working of the center.

Board members were invited to the dedication of the family practice unit Thursday at 2 p.m. The unit is to be located on the north side of the new hospital building.

The hospital bank account was moved to Planter's Bank for the next two years by resolution of the board. The account is rotated among local banks every two years.

The Board was told of the county commissioners' approval of the recommendation of Albert C. Martin of Kinston as a new member of the board.

A letter from the N. C. Board of Nursing giving approval to Pitt Technical Institute's Associate Degree Nursing Program was read. It was noted that 18 of the 20 persons who recently graduated from this program were employed by Pitt Memorial.

The Board approved requesting of the county of commissioners funds to buy a car and a pickup truck for hospital use.

Dr. John Gambill of the Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center was granted consulting staff privileges, and Dr. Julian Coleman, emergency room physician, and Dr. William Laupus, Dean of the ECU School of Medicine, were also given staff privileges. A one-year leave of absence was granted to Dr. Ira Hardy, neurosurgeon, who is enrolled in the School of Law of Wake Forest University.

Dr. Laupus reported his pleasure at the approval of the residency training program of the School of Medicine, saying that residencies should be a reality possibly by January, 1977 and certainly by July, 1977. The Family Practice Center, for which ground will be broken Thursday, will afford this area 36 medical residents, he said. He also told how pleased he is to have Dr. Eugene Furth to head the Department of Internal Medicine. All chairmanships except surgery and obstetrics-gynecology are now filled, he said.

"The medical school is moving out of the invisible stage," he commented. "We will begin to see more and more ways in which it is making its presence felt in the community in the next few months."

Possible New Storm

MIAMI (AP) — A tropical depression which formed in the Atlantic Ocean near Bermuda today could become a tropical storm by day's end, the National Hurricane Center said.

At 10 a.m. EDT, the storm was located 200 miles west southwest of Bermuda and was centered at latitude 31.0 north and longitude 68.0 west. Highest sustained winds were 35 miles an hour with gale force gusts in squalls mainly east of the center, observers said.

The center said the depression was moving toward the northeast at 10 miles an hour.

"Interests in Bermuda should listen for further advices on the depression and be prepared for possible gale force winds later today," forecasters said.

Greenville Recipient Of Pedestrian Safety Award

The Carolina Motor Club and American Automobile Association has given the City of Greenville special recognition for its efforts to prevent pedestrian traffic accidents during 1975.

Chief of Police Glenn Cannon said local residents, both pedestrians and drivers, as well as local law enforcement officers and civic organizations should receive credit for the award.

The award was based on low pedestrian death and injury figures and on accident prevention programs. Evaluations for the citation were made in several key areas, such as maintenance of efficient accident records, safety legislation, enforcement, traffic engineering, traffic safety organizations, quality of school traffic safety programs, and active public information and education programs.

Since 1937, when the Pedestrian Safety Inventory Program was started, pedestrian fatalities have dropped from 15,500 to 8,600 in 1975. . . a reduction of 45 per cent. During the same period, motor vehicle registration has increased by 357 per cent; population has grown by 66 per cent; and motor vehicle travel has jumped 372 per cent — from 271 billion miles to 1,280 billion.

Over 25 per cent of all pedestrians killed are under the age of 15, and it is estimated that over 300 children are killed each year while playing in their own driveways.

The award for 1975 was the 11th pedestrian safety citation presented to Greenville since 1950. The last award was for the year 1972.

Honeycutt-Johnson Vows Couple Weds In Ceremony Solemnized On Sunday

Miss Donna Lynn Johnson and Marvin Simeon Honeycutt were united in marriage Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in the Greenville Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses before a platform which was enhanced with green TI plants, palms and baskets of mixed white daisies, white and pink carnations, gladioli and white mums.

O. Stewart Joyner, an elder in the Farmville Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, gave the wedding talk after which the couple repeated their wedding vows.

A program of music was rendered by Mrs. Douglas Allen of Greenville at the piano. Selections from "Singing and Accompanying Yourselves with Music in Your Hearts" were played during the time preceding the services. "Jehovan is My Shepherd" was played as the attendants entered the auditorium. As the tones of "The Shulamite Remnant" was sounded, Miss Johnson was escorted by her father to the front of the platform.

Miss Johnson wore a formal length gown of white chantilly lace designed with a sabrina neckline edged in scalloped chantilly lace beaded with pearls and sequins. The fitted empire bodice was styled with long sleeves extending from a capelet collar also beaded with sequins and pearls. The modified A-line skirt was designed with a redingote overlay edged in scalloped lace. The attached chapel train featured tiers of ruffled chantilly lace. The hemline and train were edged in the scalloped chantilly lace beaded with sequins.

She wore a tiered illusion veil attached to a Camelot cap, designed with satin ribbon, re-embroidered lace and trimmed with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and carnations with a white bow.

Miss Cynthia Rhodes of Farmville was maid of honor. She wore a formal length gown of orchid dotted swiss over orchid taffeta designed with a portrait neckline with a ruffled collar and short capelet sleeves. The empire waistline was encircled with orchid satin ribbon with a Dior bow in front with streamers. The modified A-line skirt was styled with a deep ruffle flounce at the hemline.

Miss Debbie Allen of Greenville, Miss Sherri Rackley and Miss Melanie Joyner, both of Farmville, acted as bridesmaids. They were dressed in gowns styled identically to the honor attendant in rainbow shades of green, blue and apricot respectively. They wore a white picture hat tied with ribbons matching their gowns. All carried a long-stemmed white mum with matching streamers.

Miss Sharon Johnson, sister of the bride, was flower girl. Her pink dotted swiss floor length gown was designed with a high waist, semi-full skirt and brief cape sleeves. She carried a white basket with white daisies and pink carnations.

The best man was Bryan Jones of Greenville. The groomsmen were John Moye of Greenville, Timothy Campbell and Charles Cooke, all of Farmville. Michael Rhodes and Jerry Rackley, both of Farmville, were ushers. Todd Meadows of Ormondsville, cousin of the bride, served as ring bearer for the double ring service.

Mrs. Johnson selected a blue polyester formal dress with a sheer floral jacket for her daughter's wedding. The bridegroom's mother chose an aqua polyester crepe with sheer sleeves. Both used matching accessories and were presented with white orchids.

Mrs. Fred Harris, maternal grandmother of the bride, wore an apricot formal gown. Mrs. W. H. Smith, maternal grandmother of the bridegroom, chose a blue long sleeve polyester formal gown and Mrs. Honeycutt, paternal grandmother of the bridegroom, selected a red and white street length dress and orchids. After the bridal couple, their parents and attendants received guests in the foyer of the Kingdom Hall, a reception followed at Lake Ellsworth club house.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth and centered with two five branch silver candelabras and a silver bowl with a summer arrangement of pink and white. The four-tier cake was served by Mrs. Tommy Stepps, sister of the bridegroom, while Mrs. Wm. Meadows, aunt of the bride, poured the punch. The bride changed into a black and white outfit for a trip to the coast. She wore her mother's orchid. They will reside in Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson of Rt. 2, Farmville. She is a 1976 graduate of Farmville Central High School and is employed by the Jewel Box of Greenville. The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Mary Honeycutt of Greenville and Gaddis Honeycutt of New Bern, graduated from Rose High School. He is employed by Providence Finance Co., Greenville.

In a double ring ceremony Sunday at high noon, Elizabeth Everett Brown became the bride of William Bernard Willis in a ceremony performed in the First Free Will Baptist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Everett of Greenville, and the Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Willis of Kinston.

The father of the bridegroom performed the ceremony assisted by the Rev. Davie Brinson. A program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Ruth Taylor, organist, and Mrs. Patsy Manning, who sang "We've Only Just Begun."

The bride wore a formal length dress of ivory crepe with long full sleeves. The bodice and cuffs were trimmed in old-fashioned lace and blue satin ribbon. She wore a matching garden hat with blue ribbon trim and carried a bouquet of blue and white carnations tied with blue ribbon streamers.

Included in the wedding party were Miss Tina Michelle Willis, daughter of the bridegroom, and Larry Thomas Brown Jr., son of the bride.

Miss Willis wore a formal length dress of daffodil yellow with an overlay of white lace. She carried a nosegay of yellow and white carnations with yellow ribbon streamers.

After a wedding trip to Kerr Lake, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Granger High School, Kinston, and is employed by Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co.

A wedding party honored the bridal couple Friday evening given by Mr. and Mrs. Billy Peaden and Mr. and Mrs. Bobby T. Manning.

MRS. WILLIAM BERNARD WILLIS

Miss Mary Mac Williamson, Miss Linda Lee and Miss Susan Clark were hostesses.

Upon arrival, the honoree was presented a white carnation and baby's breath corsage.

East's Potential Is Exciting

Many developments in our area of recent years have been exciting, and we think the east's potential for development is being recognized throughout the state.

Bill Noblitt, Raleigh correspondent for the Associated Afternoon Dailies, reported in a recent column that state government economists are convinced of an impending boom for Eastern North Carolina.

"The focus, some experts believe, will be in the area around Greenville — with particular attention to foreign trade," Noblitt wrote.

Cited was the central location in relation to state ports and transportation to the population centers of several states, livability and progressiveness.

Primarily the development predictions center on the role of East Carolina University, Noblitt said, "Which is becoming for the eastern part of the state what the Research Triangle Park has developed into for the central part — a concentrated academic and research community which industry finds attractive for several reasons, including availability of research facilities and talent, and a community of individuals with whom their top-level employees can relate."

Noblitt said some experts say the medical school development will give this trend an even further boost. Lloyd Carroll, economic advisor for the General Assembly also cited the international development movement "of major proportions in that area."

We think that the trends that the experts see for Eastern North Carolina are definitely there. Our area for years was held back by problems of segregation and a general suspicion of those from outside the section. Now those problems are behind us and Eastern North Carolina is opening up to state, national and even world influences.

Good Year For Tobacco Is Developing

The Agriculture Department reports that this will be one of the largest tobacco crops in some years.

The crop totals 2.052 billion pounds which is the second largest since 1964.

The crop is about six percent below that of last year.

Generally the crop is also considered a good one and record prices seem to be developing on the Eastern Belt. We can hope for a good year for area tobacco farmers.

THIS AFTERNOON

Date Sure To Change

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — You can add North Carolina politicians to that list compiled by Kipling: maddogs and Englishmen.

But North Carolina voters largely practiced that time-honored dog-day's tradition: keep cool.

For that, if no other reason, the 1977 General Assembly is all but certain to change the date of the party primaries back to an earlier time when farmers are less busy, vacationers are still thinking about that summer trip, and students are on-campus where they ought to be if a candidate is going to meet with them.

Truth is, say many a candidate in this experimental late-summer election, they've spent a lot of time and money and stood many an hour in the hot sun trying to capture votes which — either physically or mentally — were somewhere else.

The psychological factor is not the only consideration.

Short Time
State Elections Chief Alex K. Brock sees real physical problems also.

Holding the primary on August 17; having a runoff 30 days later; then getting ready for the November election is really pushing things.

There is, Brock said, no margin for error in that timetable. Any appeals and recounts — normally carried out by elections boards — will have to go straight to Superior Court.

Ballots in North Carolina are prepared centrally for statewide distribution; the printing will be rushed. And even though vacationers may be away; college students gone; and lack of interest may keep thousands away, every one of the potential voters must have a ballot ready for use.

Brock thinks the August primary will prove to be a one-time experiment, and is confident a bill will be enacted next year to go back to some earlier time than August.

At one point, the General Assembly making the change almost put the primary even later — on August 24 rather than the 17th.

Even so, the state elections office will be pushed to get runoff ballots printed for certified candidates and into local election offices 30 days before the runoff September 14 — an impossible condition which the law requires; but in reality there are only 28 days. Then, the law requires absentee ballots be in the counties by October 3 for the November general election — leaving very little time for certification and argument, if any.

Why Change?
Why did the Legislature set up such a schedule?

Several considerations were at work as the change was made despite Brock's misgivings, and the objections of others both in and out of the assembly.

First, legislators moved the Presidential primary back to March, separating it from the traditional May primary; that was to get more interest and participation in the Presidential primary.

Having done that, some believed even further separation would be desirable.

Then it occurred to some that money and energy could be conserved if the time between the primary and the general election were shortened considerably.

But instead of just the actual nominees working hard for several months, the situation produced a host of party candidates spending even more effort and money just to get the nomination then plunging into an intense campaign of short duration — depending on whether or not there is a runoff in particular races.

Politics also played a role in the decision: legislators knew they would be in session in May of this year when the primary was usually held. With several members getting ready to run for higher offices and many members gearing up for reelection, the May primary would have been both politically dangerous and inconvenient.

Barring major changes in membership of the General Assembly in 1977, Brock thinks a bill to change the date back to an earlier one will pass.

WASHINGTON — A group of correspondents who had covered the previous wars at political conventions gathered for a reunion at the Golden Ox Restaurant in Kansas City this week and started to reminisce, as veterans will, of previous Republican conventions.

"This doesn't compare to the Republican Convention of '72 in Miami," remarked one of the fellows.

"Now that was a convention!" someone else agreed. "I'll never forget when ole Dick Nixon held up his arms with both fingers raised and the crowd went mad."

"Dick, has anyone seen Dick Nixon at this convention?" Nobody had.

"I wonder where he is."

"Someone said he's living out in California."

"That's funny," another correspondent said. "He's never missed a GOP convention since I've known him. I wonder why he didn't come?"

"It beats me. But I'll tell you this, it doesn't seem like a Republican convention without him."

"Speaking of Dick, has anyone seen Spiro?"

"He wasn't on the arrival list. I was sure he would be here. Hey, remember that great moment in Miami when Dick got up and congratulated the delegates for choosing Spiro as his Vice President and said, 'I thought he was the best man for the job four years ago. I think he's the best man for the job today. And I'm not going to change my mind tomorrow.'"

"Do I remember it?" a reporter said. "I broke down and cried while I was writing the story."

"So did I," I said. "I wish Spiro could be with us tonight. I loved that crazy guy."

"Let's drink to him wherever he is."

We all raised our glasses.

"To Spiro, the media's best friend."

"Has anyone seen Chuck Colson around?"

"I don't think he came. Someone told me he's become a missionary or a Bible salesman or something. For some reason he lost his taste for politics."

"That's a pity. The Republicans needed guys like Chuck Colson."

"Hey, whatever happened to Johnny Mitchell?"

"I don't think he's here either. I thought he'd come since he had such a good time in Miami."

"Anyone heard from Johnny Ehrlichman?"

"Come to think of it, I haven't. Last I knew he grew a beard and was working in Santa Fe with the Indians."

"That's a funny thing for him to be doing."

"I guess he got bored with the White House."

"I heard Bobby Haldeman is out in California fishing."

"No kidding. I thought he was still in Washington."

"Nah, he got disgusted and just packed up one day and said 'This town is too much for me.'"

"I wish he was here," I said. "He was a lot of laughs."

"Say, remember John Dean, counsel to the President?"

"The name rings a bell."

"Well, he did time in the slammer and now he is here working as a correspondent for Rolling Stone magazine."

"Leave it to John. He always lands on his feet."

"Anyone seen Gordon Liddy or Howard Hunt?"

"No, I guess they decided at the last minute not to come. And Jeb Magruder and Donald Segretti aren't here either." "It seems all the good guys stayed home," a reporter said sadly. "They were the fellows who made the Miami convention in '72 something to remember. I really miss them."

"They were our buddies," I said. "And I don't think we should forget them. I say we drink a toast to those guys we shared so many happy hours with."

We all stood solemnly. "To Dick, Spiro, Chuck, Johnny Mitchell, Johnny Ehrlichman, Bobby Haldeman, Jeb and Donald, Gordon and Howard who couldn't be with us. As far as we're concerned, you're gone but not forgotten."

We drank up and then, in a final gesture of camaraderie, smashed our glasses into the fireplace.

One Last Trip

By Dr. H.G. JONES, Curator North Carolina Collection

Written for the AP
CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Seventy years ago a strange ceremony took place in the Hayes Plantation cemetery at Edenton. A body was disinterred, placed in a new casket, and put aboard a special train for a circuitous trip northward.

At Norfolk the coffin was transferred to a ship which took it to Philadelphia. There a caisson carried it to Independence Hall.

James Wilson had returned to the place where 130 years before he had cast a decisive vote for the independence of the American colonies.

Then, after many speeches, the casket was escorted by members of the Supreme Court of the United States to Christ Church where it was reburied.

In 1776 James Wilson had cast the deciding vote in the Pennsylvania delegation to the Continental Congress, explaining that he could not bear the infamy of preventing the birth of a new nation. But his service to the country did not end with that decision.

In fact, many historians rank Wilson second only to James Madison in the drafting of the Constitution of the United States 11 years later. He then authored the new constitution of Pennsylvania in 1790.

Meanwhile, Wilson accepted President Washington's appointment as associate justice of the Supreme Court of the new nation. On the court he served with North Carolina's James Iredell, and among his notable opinions was that in the case of Chisholm vs. Georgia, which led directly to the adoption of the 11th amendment.

Unfortunately, James Wilson mixed his governmental service with his business ventures. He became entangled in land speculations involving great tracts of land in both the North and South. During the 1790s he was severely criticized by some of his colleagues, and there was talk in the Congress about impeaching him.

Wilson, though, saw nothing wrong with his business dealings. He incurred incredible

Heads of the beleaguered Madrid government were reported in uncensored articles today to have three air liners in readiness for flight — in the event of the capital falling.

The advices said rebels, firmly entrenched in the Guadarrama mountains north of Madrid, had only to await reinforcements from other sides of the capital before launching an attack which seemed likely of success.

In any event, it became apparent the government expected no quick victory. Today the Madrid authorities urged women of the nation to make ammunition and winter clothing and called for volunteers to form a new "battalion of red Lions."

Final decision on whether Jimmy Braddock will be able to defend his heavyweight boxing championship against Max Schmeling in September as planned will be made next Tuesday after a bone specialist has examined the title-holder's injured left hand.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Howard Baker: No Pluses

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
Howard Baker: No Pluses

KANSAS CITY — The focusing of President Ford's vice-presidential search on Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee is an extension of his cheerless, bumbling crawl toward the presidential nomination, suggesting that the same lack of imagination and disdain for daring will carry over into the uphill fight against Jimmy Carter.

Of all vice-presidential possibilities, Baker is by far the most bland and non-controversial. He is most acceptable mainly for not being unacceptable. Those daring Republicans who really believe Carter might be overcome by a vigorous campaign are horrified at Mr. Ford's possible pick of Baker, viewing him as a candidate who adds nothing.

"Howard did a damn good job in his keynote," a leading House Republican close to the President told us Monday night — with regret. He regretted that Baker had helped himself with both the President and the party because more than a safe running mate is needed for a candidate 30 percentage points behind in the polls.

The prospect of a Ford-Baker ticket combined with retention of Rogers Morton as national campaign manager would signal business as usual for a campaign bearing directly on the fate of the Republican party. That campaign would continue Mr. Ford's abhorrence of sudden surprises and stunning strategies which marked John Sears's campaign for Ronald Reagan.

Although Mr. Ford has made no final decision on Vice President, all signs point to systematic discarding of intriguing, non-bland prospects such as Anne Armstrong, U.S. Ambassador to the Court of St. James, or William Simon, the impeccably conservative (and Catholic) Secretary of the Treasury, who is acceptable to most Republican moderates and liberals.

But both would involve considerable risks. Mrs. Armstrong terrifies the White House plodders, who note private polls showing strong adverse reaction to a female Vice President among voters, especially women. Simon is downgraded because he has never run for office and comes out of the financial canyons of Wall Street (though what really hurts him is being too tough to kowtow to the White House Palace Guard and too prickly to get along well with Jerry Ford).

Naturally, then, the riskiest and most electrifying choice of all, John B. Connally, was dead before he even arrived here. When Mr. Ford took him before the White House press corps three weeks ago to hear his endorsement, it triggered the lethal liberal Republican attack on Connally. Some Republicans here believe that if Connally had not been so frontal in his pursuit of the vice-presidency he might well have avoided that harshly successful counterattack until it was too late to have effect.

The President's distaste for risks, however, might have been overcome by his fondness for Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld. Although omitted from most newspaper speculation, Rumsfeld has been on all Mr. Ford's own vice-presidential lists.

Rumsfeld, while bringing youth, vigor and imagination to the ticket, is feared and hated as dangerously ambitious by a minority on the White House staff and such powerful outsiders as Simon and Vice President Nelson Rockefeller. Moreover, unlike Baker, he is unacceptable to the Reaganites.

"It won't be Rummy," one anti-Rumsfeld presidential intimate told us. "That is, it won't be Rummy unless he breaks through our blockade, but considering the father-son relationship between him and Ford, it's not impossible." Insiders here are certain that the small growth on Rumsfeld's thyroid gland (Continued on page 5)

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

The Greenville City Council passed a resolution extending the term of office for Council members from two to four years and provided that half the council — three members — would be elected every two years. I object to these new provisions and hope that this major change in city representation will be submitted to the will of the voters.

This resolution, if enacted, will further remove politicians from the citizens. The U.S. Congress and the State Legislature have two-year terms precisely for the reason that the people will be more in contact with their government. Our Greenville City Council, which has a once a month scheduled meeting, apparently feels that their burdens are heavier than that of the State or Federal Government.

This resolution favors the incumbent. In the past eight years only one incumbent has been defeated; under this new ruling there will be less opportunity to unseat the present members and bring about change. Further the staggered arrangement of election makes it more difficult for minority candidates to be elected.

This major change in the election of city officials was made in the summer months when many people are out of town and attendance at council meetings is small. No candidate discussed or suggested this change during the election campaign. Only Rev. Clarence Gray voted against this effort to remove representatives further from the voters. The decision should be made by all the people.

Fur Industry Remains Unruffled

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Inflation, recession and the growing popularity of synthetic look-alikes have failed to ruffle the fur industry. But consumers planning on fur coats this winter had better be prepared for high prices.

Sales of fur coats, jackets, stoles, etc. totaled $525 million last year, according to the Fur Information and Fashion Council, a trade association. That's an increase of 88 per cent over the $279 million worth of furs sold in 1970.

Prices, meanwhile, have risen steadily, and this year's increase is the biggest yet.

The average price for a good quality, full-length mink coat is now around $6,500, up $2,000 or 44 per cent from five years ago, according to a council spokesman. A raccoon coat goes for about $2,500, double the 1970 figure. A rabbit coat that used to sell for $150 to $200 now costs $200 to $300. At the top of the price scale, a Russian sable available for $15,000 to $20,000 in 1970 is up to $25,000 to $30,000 today.

The Consumer Price Index increased 43 per cent from 1970 to 1975.

The fur council spokesman said that prices increased about 5½ to 7 per cent a year until 1976. "This year was the big jump," he said.

Part of the reason is increased demand. Part is that the industry relies heavily on work done by hand — there is almost $1,000 worth of labor in that $6,500 mink coat — and wages are rising.

The biggest cause of this year's increase, however, is competition from foreign buyers at fur auctions. "European traders have bid us up," the council spokesman said. He said economic troubles and fluctuating currencies abroad led people to invest in fur pelts, much as they invest in precious stones, metals and works of art as a hedge against inflation.

Most people look on the purchase of a fur coat as a major investment, and the investment can be a risky one if you wind up with poor quality. Remembering certain basic rules cuts the risk.

The federal Fur Products Labeling Act of 1952 set standards for labeling any fur costing more than $5. Among the things to look for:

—The animal's true England name. No other name may be given on the label. That means you won't see terms such as "mink-dyed muskrat."

—The country the fur comes from if it is imported. —If the fur has been processed in any way — dyed, bleached, etc. — the label must say so. It also must say whether paws, tails, bellies, etc. have been used instead of whole pelts for all or part of the garment. Used furs must be identified as second-hand.

The fur council suggests that buyers check furs to make sure that each pelt has a uniform color, is fairly dense and has a silky texture and bright luster. Short-haired furs usually are sturdier and will last longer than long-haired furs.

Strength For Today

The Benefits Of Mediocrity
The most restless and unhappy people in the world are the "very" people — the people who are very rich, very good-looking, very able, and so forth.

Mediocrity appears to be a great handicap, yet it is not. The mediocre people are generally quite happy and get a great deal out of life. Probably the happiest group of people are those who are just a little above the mediocre but not too far above it.

Named Award Winner

The Rev. James R. Howard has been named the first recipient of the Ralph Eugene Fowkes Memorial Ministerial Scholarship Award. The Rev. Howard serves the Stokes Circuit which includes churches in Martin and Pitt Counties. He is a student at North Carolina Wesleyan College where he expects to graduate in May, 1978.

The Ralph Eugene Fowkes Memorial fund was established in 1969 by the Fowkes family. Members of the churches where the Rev. Fowkes had served, as well as friends and family contributed to the Memorial Fund invested in Methodist Foundation by the Department of Gifts and Wills. Interest from this investment is available for the training of ministers of The United Methodist Church of The North Carolina Conference at Louisburg College, Methodist College and North Carolina Wesleyan College.

Born in West Virginia, The Rev. Fowkes earned the bachelor of Divinity Degree from Duke Divinity School and transferred to the North Carolina Conference in 1953. He served appointments in Rocky Mount, Hope Mills, Fayetteville, West End, Raleigh, Burlington, Broadway and Durham. At his death he was the pastor of Community Church at Butler and was the chairman of the North Carolina Conference Commission on Worship.

debts, and his family suffered privation. By 1797 his creditors were hounding him so insistently that the judge fled from Pennsylvania. In New Jersey he was held in jail until his son finally secured his release. Not daring to return to Pennsylvania, Wilson made his way to North Carolina to attempt to straighten out his land problems here and in Georgia. Perhaps upon the invitation of his fellow associate justice, he decided to spend the winter in Edenton. Wilson declined to accompany Iredell to Philadelphia for the February term of court, preferring the seclusion of Edenton. But his creditors soon learned his whereabouts, and Pierce Butler of South Carolina, to whom Wilson owed $197,000, had him arrested and thrown into the Chowan County jail. By the time his wife Hannah arrived in Edenton, Wilson had been released from jail but was under virtual house arrest in a dingy room in Hornblow Tavern next to the courthouse. His clothes were ragged and dirty; he was a pitiful derelict, this founding father. In July, Wilson contracted malaria. In the steaming tavern room, Hannah watched over her penniless, fever-ridden husband. They were prisoners together, in a strange village, with only the Iredells and a few other citizens aware of the service that Wilson had rendered the nation. A few weeks later, the judge suffered a stroke, and for three days he talked deliriously of the indignities of his previous imprisonments. On Aug. 21, 1798, he died. Too poor to return his body to Pennsylvania, Hannah accepted the invitation of Gov. Samuel Johnston (Mrs. Iredell's brother) to bury the body in the cemetery at Hayes Plantation.

For 108 years Wilson, who would have wanted to be buried in his home state of Pennsylvania, lay in North Carolina, near the grave of another Gov. Johnston's sisters, Isabella. Ironically, prior to the Revolution Isabella was engaged to Joseph Hewes, but she died prior to the planned wedding. Hewes and Wilson had signed the Declaration of Independence together, and in 1779 the North Carolinian died alone in Philadelphia and was buried there in Christ Church cemetery. When Wilson's grave was opened in 1906, apparently no one thought of bringing Joseph Hewes home and placing his remains in the vacancy near his beloved Isabella.

was discovered during the medical examination he took to meet the Ford vice-presidential standards. One other interesting and non-cautious choice has been privately touted by Mr. Ford. Golfing with Gov. James Rhodes of Ohio at Burning Tree last weekend, he kept talking about former Deputy Atty. Gen. William Ruckelshaus, a Catholic and hero of Watergate wars. Although he was added to the list, few inside the Ford camp regarded Ruckelshaus as a serious possibility. So

Taxpayers Picking Up Kid's Lunch Tab

By BERNARD BRENNER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — For about six out of every 10 American pupils, taxpayers will be picking up all or part of the bill when lunch bells ring in the nation's schools this fall.

Agriculture Department officials who operate the federal school lunch program estimate that nearly 90 per cent of all school-age youngsters are in institutions taking part in the federal program. About 60 per cent actually eat the federally subsidized meals provided by the program that dates from the 1930s.

For the 1976-77 school year, experts say the number of youthful customers will reach about 26.8 million in the peak participation month, usually November. That's up about 800,000 from the 1975-76 peak reached in November, 1975.

Officials say the new year will bring some new wrinkles to the traditional program.

Among other things, regulations for senior high schools have been rewritten in an effort to end widespread waste that takes place when students are required to take entire plate lunches, including some items they do not want and will not eat.

Under the new regulations, students still will have to pay the flat lunch price set in their schools. But they will be able to choose as few as three separate food items instead of the formerly fixed total of five included in standard, federally approved lunches.

Officials also said new application forms now cover families who apply for free or token-priced meals for their children. They include a statement acknowledging that school officials can check on statements made by an applicant after a student has been certified. The forms also include a warning that deliberate false statements by applicants could bring prosecutions.

Budget experts estimate that federal taxpayers will pour $2.264 billion into the lunch program in the coming year, compared with $1.904 billion in the 1975-76 year.

The total for the coming year includes both cash payments and food commodities. It also includes $611 million in subsidies for children who pay regular school lunch prices. Among them are youngsters from middle and upper-income families who get the federal subsidy as well as state and local contributions so the price they pay will remain below the actual cost of the meals.

The remaining $1.653 billion, however, will go to children whose families' incomes qualify them for free and token-priced meals. In the past school year, 10.9 million children got free and token-priced lunches compared to 15.1 million who paid regular prices.

Agriculture Department school lunch experts said they had no precise estimates on lunch prices.

WEATHER FORECAST — Below-normal temperatures are forecast Wednesday for the West and the northern Plains. Warm weather is expected for the rest of the country. Showers are forecast in much of the western half of the country. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Spotty rain in parched Piedmont North Carolina Sunday and Monday brought some relief. But agricultural officials say it was too little and too late to do much good.

The near-drought has prompted officials in Mecklenburg, Rowan, Lincoln, Davie and Iredell counties to apply for federal disaster aid. If approved, this would help farmers by offering low-interest, long-term loans. Farmers also could get government-subsidized oats at 71 cents a bushel rather than the usual .50. The oats would be a substitute livestock feed to make up for severe corn losses.

Skies were sunny and temperatures comfortable over the state today. Highs were from the upper 70s to the lower 80s, except for the low to middle 70s in the mountains. That also will be the range Thursday.

It will be clear and cold again tonight. Lows will be mostly in the 50s, except the 60s along the coast.

It got down to 57 degrees at the Greensboro Airport shortly after 4 o'clock this morning, tying the low for an Aug. 17. It also fell into the upper 50s at the Raleigh-Durham airport, a record low for the date.

A cool, high pressure system covers the Eastern third of the nation, with the exception of Florida. This system will move slowly southeastward to dominate the North Carolina weather for the next several days. As a result, mostly clear skies with temperatures below average for the latter half of August will prevail.

The outlook is for fair weather with a warming trend over the weekend.

There was some cloudiness Tuesday, especially over the western counties. However, there was plenty of sunshine and no rain. Brisk northeasterly winds stirred things up.

High temperatures were mostly in the upper 70s and lower 80s. The range was from 72 degrees at Boone to 86 at Wilmington.

Skies were clear early today. Some ground fog formed after midnight in and near the mountains. Temperatures were unseasonably cool during the night. They got into the 50s inland sections and in the 60s near the coast.

Nuclear Plant Would Have Saved $18 Million

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority could have saved $18 million in July had its Browns Ferry Nuclear power plant been in operation, a TVA spokesman says.

TVA spokesman Lee Shephard said Tuesday that $18 million could have been saved if the agency could have avoided outside power purchases of $20 million and produced the same amount of power at Browns Ferry.

"If we could have generated the same power (913 million kilowatt hours) from Browns Ferry, if it had been a straight replacement and if it had been available at the right time and all of it acquired from Browns Ferry, the additional cost factor would have been roughly the fuel cost of about $2 million," he said.

TVA contends on-site costs at Browns Ferry run about the same whether the plant is in operation or not, and that the only additional major expense incurred during operations is for fuel.

The agency announced Tuesday that its residential power rates will rise by one cent per 1,000 kilowatt hours next month eclipsing this month's record high rates.

The increase reflects the cost of coal used to generate electricity and of power purchased from other utility systems.

Browns Ferry, closed since a fire damaged electrical cables at the plant March 22, 1975, has been repaired but must be relicensed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's Atomic Safety and Licensing Board before power generation may resume.

William E. Garner, a Scottsboro, Ala., attorney is fighting the plant's re-opening and filed as an intervenor in the relicensing proceedings.

Garner contends TVA personnel do not have the training or experience to safely operate the plant and that the NRC's inspection program is inadequate.

A hearing on the relicensing was held last week in Huntsville, Ala. The safety and licensing board is expected to submit its findings to the NRC in the next two weeks.

Water Crisis Declared By Chapel Hill Mayor

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Mayor James C. Wallace planned to declare a state of crisis in this university town at noon today because of a water shortage.

His action came on an emergency ordinance adopted by the Board of Aldermen Monday night.

Under the ordinance, it will be illegal to water lawns, wash cars at home or commercially or, unless by customer request, serve water in restaurants.

Wallace said the town's water use had been fluctuating at about five million gallons per day, causing its University Lake reservoir to sink an additional inch each day. It is already down to 20 inches, a level about 50 inches below normal.

The mayor said the University Lake was at about 20 inches Tuesday and, "without rain, there's three weeks worth before we're in that portion of the lake that becomes mud."

Wallace added that he planned to ask the city of Durham, which has been selling Chapel Hill six million gallons per week, to increase the emergency supply to 14 million gallons of treated water per week.

Death Toll

The National Geophysical Observatory said the first quake registered 7.8 on the Richter Scale while the U.S. earthquake center in Golden, Colo., got a reading of 8.0. The second quake registered 6.8 on U.S. seismographs in Honolulu.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion, and every increase of one whole number means the ground motion is 10 times greater. A tremor registering 6 indicates severe damage; a reading of 7 is a major quake, capable of widespread, heavy damage, and 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 registered 8.3.

Meanwhile, Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, reported that the major earthquake in the mountains of central China Monday night caused only slight damage because it had been predicted and officials had taken precautions. It occurred about two hours before the first Philippine quake about 700 miles southwest of Peking and registered 7.9 on the Richter Scale, Hsinhua said.

Summit Leaders Call For World-Wide Detente

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer
COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Leaders at the nonaligned summit conference say Soviet-American detente is fine as far as it goes, but that it doesn't go far enough.

Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Sri Lanka, India's Indira Gandhi and President Tito of Yugoslavia all told the delegates from 85 nations that detente must spread from Europe to the rest of the world.

"How can detente in Europe endure if other parts of the world are ravaged by proxy wars and competitive infiltration?" Mrs. Gandhi asked in a speech Tuesday. "Detente should include respect for non-alignment by others."

Mrs. Bandaranaike, the conference's hostess, said detente in Europe would be meaningless to the rest of the world if it perpetuates Soviet-American rivalries in other regions.

She warned that "detente between the great powers might deteriorate into mutual accommodation and peaceful competition for spheres of influence."

Tito said "tensions and the arms race are being extended to encompass new countries and regions, contrary to the interests of peace and security, which are indivisible. "I feel that this conference of ours should resolutely press for detente to englobe the whole world and all spheres of relations among countries," the 84-year-old patriarch of the non-aligned movement said. "For basic international issues can no longer be resolved without the participation, on terms of equality, of all countries and without universal implementation of the principles of active and peaceful coexistence." A draft political resolution before the conference calls for extension of detente in Europe "to the whole of the Mediterranean and the Middle East, including areas contiguous to Europe, where prevailing conflicts could seriously undermine European security.

Civil War Newspapers Stolen

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A man who earned his master's degree in education at Duke University in 1973 has been arrested and charged with stealing Civil War newspapers from the Duke's Perkins Library, the university has announced.

He was identified as John Michael Wenger, 26, of Raleigh. Duke valued the papers at $10,388. Capt. Tim Wheatley of the university's public safety office said 1,484 newspapers had been stolen and almost all had been recovered.

Wheatley said the papers had been taken from the library on three occasions, last February, June and this month. He said they were first missed last Friday afternoon and an inventory was begun which lasted until Monday morning.

Wheatley said that Wenger was taken into custody Monday at his home and was charged with three counts of larceny. He has been released in bond of $3,000 for a hearing Thursday in state District Court in Durham.

Wheatley said some of the papers were sold to a dealer in Fredericksburg, Va. The university was notified of the location of most of the papers after a used-book dealer in Wake County noticed an identifying mark on one of them and called Wheatley's office.

Patriotic, Christian Crusade

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Charlotte-based group is preparing a campaign to knock on every door in 21 counties in North Carolina and South Carolina with a message of evangelical Christianity.

It even will have literature for Jewish and other non-Christian households.

The patriotic Christian crusade from Boone, N.C., to Great Falls, S.C., will be called "Here's Life Metrolina."

It's part of a nationwide drive that is the brainchild of the Rev. Bill Bright of California, founder and president of Campus Crusade for Christ International. This is a conservative Christian evangelical organization that is the parent body of the Here's Life America campaign.

Mentally Incompetent

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Leroy Johnson has been found mentally incompetent to stand trial on a charge of murdering a woman student, his attorney said Tuesday.

Johnson, 32, of Charlotte, was charged with kidnaping, armed robbery and murder after Vickie McKinney, 19, was kidnapped from a parking lot at Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte last April 21. She had just parked her car and was walking to classes.

Johnson later underwent psychiatric examination and was returned to the Mecklenburg County Jail.

His attorney said he would ask that Johnson be sent back to Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh for further examination and treatment.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved higher today, continuing the strength of the previous two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up about a point in early trading and advances led declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks as usual were active shortly after the opening bell.

Brokers said the market may be encouraged by government reports that housing permits, an important indicator of future economic activity, climbed 6 per cent in July to their highest level in more than two years.

Also, personal income rose one per cent last month, its biggest monthly jump since last August, the government said.

Although President Ford appeared to be widening his lead in the race for the GOP nomination, the final choice has not been made creating an uncertainty for the market, brokers noted.

Active stocks included American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/4 to 60 1/4 and U.S. Steel, off 1/4 at 49 1/4.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrial average advanced 6.57 points to 999.34, its highest close in about five weeks.

Investors showed interest in such stocks as Procter & Gamble and S.S. Kresge which reported sharply higher second quarter earnings.

In the general list of stocks, advances only narrowly led declines and trading rose to moderate levels from fairly slow recent sessions.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dipped .15 to 103.74.

Cannon Mills Offers To Buy Back

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — Cannon Mills, which rejected a tender offer from Gulf & Western Industries, is offering to buy back 362,800 shares of its common stock held by the conglomerate.

The Cannon textile chain announced Tuesday it had signed an agreement to purchase the stock for $7.981 million, or $22 a share. Cannon closed at 18 bid, 18 1/4 asked in the over-the-counter market Tuesday. The stock has a book value of $29.

Although there was no indication of what G&W paid, at $22 it will likely turn a good profit.

Cannon stockholders must approve the purchase. A special meeting of stockholders will be held as soon as practicable, Cannon announced.

Cannon will pay for the stock out of retained earnings. At the end of 1975 Cannon had cash and equivalents totaling $64.3 million, and no long-term debt.

G&W had notified Cannon in June that it held the shares, 4 per cent of the outstanding common, and was interested in increasing its holding to 20 per cent. It asked Cannon management to support the exchange of Cannon common for a special G&W subordinated debenture. Cannon management rejected the proposal and urged shareholders to do likewise.

Staton
BETHEL — Mrs. Addie Staton died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Magnolia Hyman, Tuesday. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Flanagan and Hardee Funeral Home.

Two Different Women

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
 Associated Press Writer
 KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The First Lady, a former dancer, and the former first lady of California, a former actress, are as different in their showstopping convention roles as in their daily campaign style.

Betty Ford, the President's wife, swung into the arms of singer Tony Orlando and danced to the tune of "Tie a Yellow Ribbon" at Tuesday night's session of the Republican convention.

Nancy Reagan, wife of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, stood quietly, smiled and waved. They brought down the house. Hours earlier, it was Nancy their separate ways to boost the political futures of their husbands.

Mrs. Ford has attended relatively fewer teas and made fewer public appearances at the convention than Mrs. Reagan. Since arriving Sunday, Mrs. Ford has privately chatted with delegates in the suite of convention rooms rented by the Ford family.

Mrs. Reagan went from the brunch to the Royal Hills Nursing Center, then attended a tea at the Kansas City Museum and a noisy reception for young Republicans at a downtown hotel.

Both women attended a brunch held by the National Federation of Republican Women. They met briefly and shook hands.

Mrs. Ford told the group, "There is nothing I am more concerned about than getting more women into government.... More power to them."

Mrs. Reagan was not called upon to speak.

Then, the two first ladies—veteran entertainers and veteran campaigners — went

In the race for the Democrat's nomination for lieutenant governor, Pitt gave Waverly Akins 3,403 votes or 33 per cent of the total, with Howard Lee taking second spot with 30 per cent of the votes and Jimmy Green placing third in the eight-way race with 18.8 per cent or 1,887 votes.

State-wide Lee was in the lead with 27.4 per cent of the votes while Green was a close second with 26.5 per cent.

In the Republican race for the nomination as governor, Pitt followed the state, giving David Flaherty the highest number of votes. Local voters cast 714 votes for Flaherty or 63.8 per cent, while Coy Privette took 22 per cent of the Pitt ballots. Jake Alexander followed in third spot with 10.1 per cent of the votes while Wallace E. McCall received only 4.1 per cent of the Pitt Republican vote.

Pitt Republicans also sided with the other Republican voters in the state by giving W. S. Haitt more votes than Odell Payne in the race for the lieutenant governor nomination. In Pitt, Haitt took 646 votes to Payne's 299.

In the Democrat race for Secretary of State, veteran Thad Eure gathered 5,624 Pitt votes as compared with George Breece's 4,256 ballots, while for state development "and I want him to help in this campaign and I want him to help North Carolina in this area." Hunt said he was expecting a tough, hard race from the Republicans this fall. He described Flaherty as "a fine person whom I respect highly." He added, however, that Flaherty had been part of a state administration that has not performed well.

treasurer, Harlan Boyles led in Pitt with 5,556 votes. Lane Brown followed Boyles in Pitt with 3,151 votes and J. P. Journey came in last with 456 ballots.

Incumbent State Auditor Henry Bridges took 49.4 per cent of the ballots in Pitt, while helpful Lillian Woo gathered 38.3 per cent of the ballots. W. E. Fuller placed a low third.

Local voters gave Greenville native John Brooks 48.5 per cent of the ballots in the Democrat race for the nomination as Commissioner of Labor in the field of four hopefuls, while giving Jessie Rae Scott second place or 33.2 per cent of the votes. State-wide, however, Mrs. Scott, the wife of former Governor Bob Scott was in the lead by about three percentage points — 37 per cent to 34 per cent.

In the race for the Commissioner of Insurance nomination, incumbent John Ingram led the field in Pitt as he was state-wide, while incumbent Craig Phillips led Ben Currin in the race for the nomination as state Superintendent of Public Instruction.

In the First Congressional District nomination race, incumbent Democrat Walter Jones led hopeful James Bonner. In Pitt, Jones took 7,283 votes to Bonner's 3,388.

In the Republican contest, Greenville physician Joe Ward led hopeful Harold Stroud 730 votes to 371. District-wide, Ward led Stroud 53 per cent to 47 per cent.

Maching Sputters To Fourth Loss

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Sparky Anderson stays stoic and silent through losing streaks, so if you want to get the word from the Cincinnati Reds, you have to ask Pete Rose.

"We're not taking the game to them," says the Cincinnati third baseman in his usual direct observation. "This is not like the Big Red Machine."

The "Machine" hasn't been hitting on all four cylinders lately, and Tuesday night, the National League West leaders dropped their fourth straight game — a 3-2 decision to the Atlanta Braves. That's the longest losing streak of the year for Anderson's gang.

Anderson put it this way: "It doesn't mean anything more than if we had a 13-1 record. We're just not hitting — and that happens."

In the other National League games, Philadelphia whipped Montreal 11-3; Los Angeles trimmed the New York Mets 4-3; St. Louis routed San Diego 9-4; Houston turned back the Chicago Cubs 8-1 and San Francisco edged Pittsburgh 7-6.

Pinch-hitter Tom Paciorek's two-out, run-scoring single in the eighth inning led the way for Atlanta. Jerry Royster drew a one-out walk from Manny Sarmiento to start the rally, then stole second off reliever Will McEnaney. Royster went to third on Rowland Office's groundout and scored on Paciorek's single.

Adrian Devine, 2-3, got the victory, bailing the Braves out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh. Sarmiento, 2-1, the Reds' 20-year-old reliever, took the loss.

Phillies 11, Expos 3

Jay Johnstone ripped a double and three singles and batted in five runs while Greg Luzinski collected a homer and four RBI as Philadelphia battered Montreal. Winner Tommy Underwood, 8-3, allowed just four hits, striking out five and walking four.

Dodgers 4, Mets 3

Rick Rhoden doubled home the decisive run to cap a four-run Los Angeles rally in the fourth inning and the Dodger right-hander went on to post his 11th victory in 12 decisions by beating New York. The Mets took a 3-0 lead in the first on John Milner's 13th homer in a game featuring two men on.

Cardinals 9, Padres 4

Hector Cruz drove in four runs with a grounder and bases-loaded double, while Lou Brock stole three bases and scored three runs to lead St. Louis over San Diego in a game featuring 19 walks.

Astros 8, Cubs 1

J.R. Richard fired a five-hitter and Roger Metzger drove home a pair of runs with a fourth-inning single as Houston defeated Chicago and ended a five-game losing streak. Richard, 14-12, struck out nine and walked only one, giving up the only Chicago run of the night on Rick Monday's homer in the ninth.

Giants 7, Pirates 6

Gary Thomasson's two-out solo homer in the bottom of the eighth inning broke a 6-6 tie and powered San Francisco over Pittsburgh. Just prior to Thomasson's blast, the Giants had tied the game when Steve Ontiveros doubled and scored on shortstop Frank Taveras' wild relay throw into the Pirates' dugout.

Rookie Gives Rookie A Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Detroit Tigers' rookie bounded around the bases with his arms raised, jumping for joy all the way.

Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, right? Wrong!

"I'm always excited when I do something great and I don't do something great very often," said a bubbling catcher Bruce Kimm, who helped fellow rookie Fidrych to his 14th victory in 18 decisions with an eighth-inning home run off Frank Tanana — his first in the majors — that gave the Tigers a 3-2 triumph over the California Angels.

It was Kimm's night, and Fidrych knew it. "Hell, yeah, I'm happy," said the young pitching sensation, "but not as happy as Bruce Kimm is."

Elsewhere in the American League, Kansas City edged Cleveland 4-3 on George Brett's steal of home in the 10th inning, Oakland nipped Milwaukee 5-4, the New York Yankees shaded Texas 2-1, Baltimore trounced Minnesota 10-3 and Boston split a doubleheader with the Chicago White Sox, losing the opener 2-1 and winning the nightcap 11-7.

Fidrych fell behind 2-0 as Ron Jackson homered for California in the fifth, but the Tigers tied it in the sixth on a walk to Kimm, Ron LeFlore's triple and Alex Johnson's sacrifice fly. Kimm then walloped a Tanana fast ball into the upper deck two innings later.

Royals 4, Indians 3

Brett stole home with two out in the bottom of the 10th. He singled with one out, stole second and continued to third on a wild throw by catcher Rick Cerone. With Dave Nelson at bat, Brett broke for the plate and was two-thirds of the way home before reliever Dave LaRoche noticed him and he slid safely under the pitch.

It was the fourth straight victory for the Royals and enabled them to remain eight games ahead of second-place Oakland in the AL West.

A's 5, Brewers 4

The A's stole four more bases to make 266 thefts, the most by a major league team since 1913. They're taking aim at the record of 347 by the 1911 New York Giants.

Trailing 4-3, Phil Garner walked with one out in the seventh, stole second and scored on Bill North's single. North took second on the throw to the plate and came home with the winning on a single by Bert Campaneris.

Yankees 2, Rangers 1

Graig Nettles slammed his 19th home run of the season on rookie Tommy Boggs' first pitch in the bottom of the ninth inning. Oscar Gamble homered for New York's first run while Doyle Alexander pitched a five-hitter and blanked Texas until the ninth.

Orioles 10, Twins 3

Lee May drove in five runs with a homer, triple and single as Baltimore won its fourth in a row. May cracked a three-run homer in the first inning off Tom Johnson, who was making his first big league start.

White Sox 2-7, Red Sox 1-11

Boston's Bob Montgomery drove in five runs with a three-run homer and a two-run double in the nightcap while Rick Burleson had seven hits in 10 at-bats during the twin bill. However, Chicago won the opener as Pat Kelly singled home one run and then doubled in the ninth and scored on a single by Bill Stein.

Cincinnati plays its first six football games at night this season and only two of them are at home.

Many NFL Players' Jobs On Line In Meeting

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With kicking and runback specialists holding their breaths at training centers across the United States today, executives of the 28 National Football League teams met to decide the roster limits for this season — limits which may decide as many as 308 jobs.

NFL bylaws provide each team with a roster of 36 players, but that number has been amended each season since the law was written in 1962. Squads reached a high of 47 two years ago, with 43 the limit last season. It will take 21 votes to decide the controversial issue, but if agreement cannot be reached, squad sizes will drop to 36.

So the fringe players and hangers-on await the word that may cement their professional futures. Should rosters revert to 36, it's certain that they would be the first to go; should limits remain at 43, or even be extended to 47, as many as 11 players on each club may sigh in relief.

The coaches, meanwhile, continued to pare their preseason food bills Tuesday. The Cincinnati Bengals waived punter Greg Coleman and defensive tackle Richard Bishop; the Lions cut wide receiver George Farmer and linebacker Andre Roundtree; and Washington Redskins Coach-GM George Allen traded three draft choices to Houston for guard Ron Saul.

The Miami Dolphins didn't cut anyone, but they did suspend veteran safety Jake Scott — a move which will be investigated by the NFL Players Association.

Scott was suspended after refusing to test an injured shoulder in an exhibition game. Dolphins Coach Don Shula said he had scheduled Scott for action in the second half against the Philadelphia Eagles last weekend, but that the six-year veteran would not go in.

Examination by team doctors exposed no shoulder separation, but did reveal a bone spur underneath the armpit. Shula said Scott's personal physician, Dr. Fred Allman, "feels cortisone could be injected if the shoulder is painful and Jake should be able to play without problem."

Scott reportedly said he didn't mind taking the pain killer before a regular season game, but objected to the treatment for an exhibition contest. The early indication was that Scott has the NFLPA's support in this regard.

The union's executive director, Ed Garvey, said by phone Tuesday night that "there is a lot of controversy about using cortisone in joints, and I would say most doctors on NFL teams are opposed to it for this reason. We'll have to look pretty seriously at the circumstances."

The status of another suspended player, Dallas Cowboys quarterback Clint Longley, remained in question after his two fights last week with Roger Staubach. Coach Tom Landry said Longley had called him Sunday, apologizing for "the embarrassment the incident had caused the Cowboys," but did not say when or if the back-up signal caller would be reinstated.

Attendance Is Getting Better

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

"It seems the National Football League preseason attendance is way, way down," someone in Buffalo said recently as he observed about 31,000 fans in 80,200-seat Rich Stadium for the Bills' exhibition game against New Orleans.

If he'd been in Washington last weekend, he'd have thought otherwise. The Redskins, who averaged about 22,000 for their exhibitions, drew better than 40,000 for their game, a loss to Pittsburgh. If he'd been in Chicago to see the Bears beat Baltimore, he'd have been in the company of 54,338 fans. Last year the Bears' top preseason crowd was 42,503.

If he'd been in Dallas, he'd have been one of 54,567 fans — about 10,000 more than last year — who saw the Cowboys lose to Denver.

Or maybe if he'd seen O.J. Simpson on the field with the rest of the Bills, he'd have seen a lot more people in the stands, too. They were there last year, better than 51,000 a game — but then, so was O.J.

With three of the six pre-season weekends completed, attendance is, in fact, down a bit at NFL exhibitions — an average of about 39,500 this year compared to last year's six-week average of 42,000.

But to leave it at that is misleading. As the regular season gets closer, attendance rises. Fans stay away from the early exhibitions on the theory they'll be seeing a plethora of rookies and free agents doomed to be cut from the squad. They attend the later games, when the lineups are more likely to have most of the season's starters in them.

The exhibitions started earlier this year. That meant it was hotter in some cities. Football came out second-best to a day at the beach or in the park. It is, after all, a winter sport. Or it's supposed to be.

In some cases, a club's exhibition tickets, which used to be a mandatory part of the season-ticket package, are now optional. And many fans aren't picking up the option.

And the NFL has a policy of spreading early games around at neutral, non-league sites like Oklahoma and Japan.

Diver Returning To USSR

MONTREAL (AP) — Three weeks after his disappearance from the Olympic Village and apparent defection, Russian diver Sergei Nemtsanov has changed his mind and decided to return to his country after expressing concern for his grandmother in the Soviet Union.

An official at the Soviet consulate here said Tuesday that Nemtsanov was in the building but said he was "very tired and won't be in a position to make any comments."

The official would not say when the 17-year-old diver would return to the Soviet Union, but the next scheduled Aeroflot flight to Moscow from Montreal is on Thursday.

Although Nemtsanov made no public comments himself, two lawyers who acted for him said in a statement Tuesday that he had expressed concern in recent days about the grandmother who brought him up, and "accordingly wanted him to return."

Meanwhile, immigration department representative Eva

Ludvig said Canadian officials had not tried to change Nemtsanov's decision.

"It was his choice to come here and his choice to go back," she said. "We had to respect his decision."

Another immigration department spokesman said that Nemtsanov had announced his decision to return home in a meeting with department officials Monday. But the youngster had said he wanted to "sleep on it" before meeting with Soviet authorities, the official said.

Nemtsanov met again with the immigration officials Tuesday afternoon and confirmed that he wanted to go home.

The officials, along with an interpreter and Toronto resident John Fleming — with whom the youth was staying while in Canada — then went to the coffee shop of a downtown hotel with Nemtsanov to meet with Soviet officials.

After talking for 15 minutes, he left with the officials from the Soviet consulate in Montreal.

Bryant, Coaches Scared To Death

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer
TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Coach Bear Bryant says his Alabama football players ought to be saying prayers of thanks because of their schedule, but that he is scared to death.

The Crimson Tide, third in the nation last season after winning its first bowl game in 10 years, began the heavy work today for its 1976 season opener against rejuvenated Mississippi at Jackson Sept. 11.

In its quest for a sixth straight Southeastern Conference title — no other school has ever won more than two straight — Alabama must travel to Tennessee and Georgia as well.

In addition, Alabama goes to South Bend late in the season to take on a Notre Dame team whose two defeats of Alabama in recent bowls by a total of three points still bother Bryant.

"Our players ought to stay awake nights thanking the good Lord for the chance to play people like Notre Dame, Louisiana State, Auburn, Tennessee, Georgia and Mississippi," Bryant said. "But the coaches are scared to death."

Much of the fear is based on losses to graduation from the squad that went 11-1 a year ago, including a 13-6 victory over Penn State in the first Sugar Bowl played in the New Orleans Superdome.

Bryant lost eight starters off a team that held the best record in the nation against scoring — only six points a game. His offense lost quarterback Richard Todd, now trying to become Joe Namath's replacement with the New York Jets after directing Alabama for three seasons.

The Tide's strong points include defenders Bob Baumhower and Charles Hannah at tackle and Gus White at middle guard. "I wouldn't swap them for any three down linemen in the country," Bryant said, "but after that we don't have anybody who has worked up a sweat in a game."

Junior Jack O'Rear and sophomore Jeff Rutledge are battling for the quarterback post in Alabama's wishbone offense. Bryant has a wealth of proven runners returning, including Johnny Davis, Calvin Culliver and Tony Nathan.

"We didn't learn a lot about our players in the spring because of injuries," said Bryant, whose 31-year coaching record is 253-72-16 — more than eight victories a year.

Kicking should be excellent, he said, with the return of placekicker Buckley Berrey and punter Rod Nelson.

"In the secondary we don't know who's who; we have no experience," Bryant added. "One thing we have is potential in the offensive line, but they have to play first."

Despite its poor bowl record of recent years, the Tide has gone 53-2 in regular season play during its five years with the Wishbone. Auburn's 17-16 shocker in 1972 and Missouri's 20-7 upset at the start of last season were the only blemishes.

But the elusive national title has escaped Alabama since 1965 despite frequent chances to move to the top rung.

Whether Alabama gets it this time remains to be seen, but it's a good bet the Tide will be going to its 18th consecutive bowl at the end of the season.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Vikings officials are looking for a better way to handle inebriated fans found in the stands after National Football League games at Metropolitan Stadium.

Harry Randolph, security director for the Vikings, said Tuesday that after many games "half a dozen fans are out cold" from drinking too much. He said some have fallen off the bleachers or tried to scale the fences.

Among the options being considered is to have the county pick up intoxicated fans and transport them to the county's chemical dependency center in downtown Minneapolis.

Until now, Randolph said, tipsy patrons have been taken to the stadium's first aid room for "as long as possible," then transferred by police to a hospital.

Turn of Coin, ridden today by Angel Cordero Jr., was narrowly defeated by C.V. Whitney's Banquet Table in the Saratoga Special, his last start. Earlier, he won the Tremont at Aqueduct. As the only stakes winner, Turn of Coin carried top weight of 122 pounds.

Second choice on the morning line was Hey Hey J.P., owned and trained by John Campo. He has only one win in five starts, but has banked over $13,000.

At 5-to-1 were Fred W. Hooper's Super Joy, ridden by Baulio Baeza, and Nearly On Time.

VMI Hoping To Bounce Back After 3-8 Season

By WOODY PEELE

After shocking the football world two years ago by winning the Southern Conference championship, VMI settled back into its accustomed ways in 1975, finishing with a 3-8 season.

This year, some observers aren't looking for much better things from the Keydets. Coach Bob Thalman isn't one of those.

"We have no excuses or alibies for last season," he said. "Sometimes the football takes funny bounces and the breaks don't come. We've forgotten last year and we are attacking this season with a fresh new outlook."

For the first time in a long time, the Keydets seem to have a solid senior class. They may have 11 senior starters, and they are not looking to any freshmen to start, with the possible exception of a kicking specialist. Of those 11, five have started for three seasons, and four others for two seasons. Overall, the Keydets have 32 lettermen and only one of them is a sophomore.

Byman's 138 Total Leads Qualifiers

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Bob Byman of Raleigh fired a first round two under par 70 and followed with a 68 for 138 Tuesday to lead North Carolina-South Carolina qualifying for five berths in the USGA National Amateur championship.

Byman, a Wake Forest University player, led by eight strokes in the day's 36-hole tour of the Gaston Country Club's 6,738-yard layout. The qualifiers will go to the national tournament starting Aug. 31 at Los Angeles.

Second in the field of 58 hopefuls was Chick Hunter of Charlotte who put together rounds of 75-71 for 146. Two strokes back at 148 was a foursome, requiring a playoff.

Richard Clark of Asheville and Vance Heafner, a North Carolina State player from Cary, won their spots with par fives on the first playoff hole, followed by Parker Moore of Laurens, S. C., who took the final berth with his bogey six on the hole.

Clark finished the regulation round with 72-76, Heafner shot a pair of 74's and Moore, the Atlantic Coast Conference champion at Clemson where he finished this year, shot 75-73.

Paul Staley of Shelby, another 148 shooter, became first alternate with a double bogey seven on the playoff hole and the other alternate spots went to Wallace Palmer of Hilton Head Island, S. C., and William Wall of Greensboro, both with 149's.

Qualifying casualties included two of North Carolina's veteran competitors. Dale Morey, a onetime runnerup in the National Amateur, shot a first round 80 and withdrew. Bill Harvey of Jamestown was well off the pace with rounds of 79-77 for 156.

Harry Welch of Salisbury had been expected to enter but was reported competing elsewhere.

Sadowski Moves Into Final Rounds

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Joey Sadowski of Hickory shot a one over par 73 Tuesday to capture the qualifying medal in the ninth annual Carolinas Golf Association North Carolina Junior championship.

He joined 63 other qualifiers in today's opening match play which will lead to Friday afternoon's championship round after two matches a day for three days.

Sadowski posted one birdie and two bogeys in his round over the 6,514-yard par 72 Henderson Country Club course.

The course itself appeared to be Tuesday's winner as both the medal score and the qualifying cutoff of 85 tied the tournament's previous highs.

In the field of 120 players, 55 owned handicaps of five or less, but only 18 could crack 80 on the hilly, rough-lined layout.

"This is a tight golf course," said Hale Van Hoy, executive director of the CGA. "There's a lot of trouble you can get into out there. But now that they're

Galloway Leads Club Pro Field

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — First round leader Bob Galloway put together two sub-par rounds for a winning 137 Tuesday to lead qualifying for 21 berths in the National PGA Club Pro golf championship.

The Rock Hill, S. C., pro from the Pine-Tuck Country Club added a three under par 69 to his opening 68 in two days of play over the Catawba Country Club's 6,800-yard course, leading the Carolinas PGA Section qualifiers into the national event in November at Calloway Gardens at Pine Mountain, Ga.

A stroke behind Galloway at 138 were Tim Collins of the Greenville, S. C. Country Club, and Odell Massey of the Alamance CC, Burlington. They had matching rounds with a pair of 69's.

Steve Walker of Shamrock Golf Club, Burlington, was alone at 143 with 72-71, and Joe Cheves of Mimosas Hills CC, Morganton, was next at 144 with a pair of 72's.

Five players were at 145 and five others tied at 146.

Places Second

Van Brock recently placed second in a Pro-Am bowling tournament in Columbia, S.C.

Brock and the pro he was paired with scored 1302 points for the tournament. Brock said that he was very pleased with the finish having been bowling for only a short time.

Alternates with 149 were Howard Reed, Westport GC, Denver, N. C., Charlie Prentiss, Columbia, S. C., Country Club; Mike Obriant, Bermuda Run CC, Clemmons; and Ronnie Reitz, North Ridge CC, Raleigh.

The national defending champion, North Carolina's Roger Watson of McGregor Downs CC, Cary, was exempt from qualifying but played both rounds with 71-73-144.

Steamer Tahoe At Lake Bottom

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
GLENBROOK, Nev. (AP) — The steamer Tahoe, largest vessel ever to ply Lake Tahoe's icy waters, lies a half mile offshore here in 370 feet of water — in near-perfect shape despite the 36-year span since she was deliberately scuttled.

Talk of raising the classic 169-foot lake steamer continues today, as it has since her owner opened the seaconks on the graceful craft rather than see its metal hull cut up for scrap to be sent to Japan.

vaging what was once the pride of a small fleet of mail and passenger vessels on Tahoe seems to be just that — talk. There's no known serious salvage operation in the works.

The Tahoe can wait. Near-freezing water temperatures and freshness of the water is preserving her wood superstructure. There's apparently no hull rust. Algae don't even grow on the sleek ship. Preservation of the Tahoe in the black depths of the lake can "go on forever," says Bill Bliss, whose grandfather scuttled the ship in 1940 in what Bliss calls an act of "pure sentimentality."

Bliss says the only debris known to have come from the ship is part of the wheelhouse that popped up after the ship slid to her watery grave.

Bliss says the cost of raising the Tahoe has stopped any serious salvage effort. He says that for the money it would take to raise the ship, "I've been told you could build three of them."

The last serious move to raise the Tahoe was made by casino owner Bill Harrah, who located the ship for the first time, in the early 1960s, using closed-circuit underwater television cameras.

But Harrah "found out it was too expensive to raise," says Bliss.

Glen Amundson, on whose barge the camera gear was carried, says the cameras showed the ship to be "as good now as the day it went down. It's in pure water so there's no growth. There's no wave action so there's not even any mud on her."

Amundson says new salvage methods might make it simple and less costly to raise the Tahoe someday. But all the equipment would still have to be transported to this mountain lake — just as the Tahoe was.

The ship was built in San Francisco, disassembled and carted by rail to Glenbrook, where she was rebuilt and launched in 1896.

For years the ship was an important link with the outside world for lake dwellers who had poor roads in summer and virtually no roads when winter storms blanketed the shoreline with deep snow.

American Modern Art Bicentennial Theme

By ARLETTE BAUDET
GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Along the shores of Lake Geneva this summer, the theme for the U.S. Bicentennial is American modern art.

Organizers have assembled 30 Swiss-owned paintings by Jackson Pollock, Franz Kline, Andy Warhol, Jasper Johns, Robert Rauschenberg and others to "allow the Swiss to get to know American art" at a three-month Bicentennial exhibition.

The paintings — and two films accompanying them — illustrate how two generations of U.S. artists, from 1948 to 1965, shook off the influence of European surrealist and abstract painters and moved into a world of space.

"The Bicentennial year is a good time to organize such an exhibit," said Claude Homann von Herimberg, chief in arranging the show.

"It's an opportunity to mark the friendship between the U.S. and Switzerland," she said. "But even more important, it will allow the Swiss to get to know American art."

Mrs. Homann, an Austrian art buff married to an Austrian U.N. executive, said she found Swiss collectors more than willing to participate.

For a better understanding of American painting, visitors also can view two films showing the painters at work and explaining their techniques and opinions on art. Critic Harold Rosenberg narrates the films.

Both the movies and the exhibition trace the evolution of modern American artworks starting with its first movement, known as "action painting," a phrase Rosenberg coined in 1947 to describe Pollock's technique.

Unlike European painters, Rosenberg explains in one film, American artists of the 1950s longed for space and used mammoth canvases to express their creativity in sweeping physical statements.

Pollock's "drip painting" is represented in the show with a work called "Three" done in 1948. Pollock invented the method by dripping colors from perforated cans directly onto a canvas he had placed on the floor.

The exhibition also includes Johns' "Two Flags," which caused a 1958 scandal in New York because such pop-art use of the American banner was considered blasphemous at the time, and Rauschenberg's "Retroactive II."

Rauschenberg's technique, consisting of surrealistic collages, paintings and 3-dimensional objects, has been dubbed "combined painting."

Other pop art works on display include Tom Wesselmann's "Great American Nude with Mona Lisa," Roy Lichtenstein's "Blang" and Warhol's "Bellevue II."

Ford Appears In Control...

However, a White House source said Connally no longer was under consideration. The source indicated that Connally was considered too controversial because of his links to the administration of Richard M. Nixon and allegations concerning his involvement in a decision to raise milk price supports.

Reagan has said repeatedly that he would not accept the vice-presidential nomination.

"Ronald Reagan will not be under any circumstances a vice president on any ticket," he told a delegate caucus on Tuesday. If he doesn't get the presidential nomination, he'd rather go back to his radio program and newspaper column, he told the delegates. "I want to advocate the cause I believe in, the conservative cause," Reagan said.

Throughout the day, representatives of the Ford and Reagan camps had been negotiating, trying to reach a compromise over the "Morality in Foreign Policy" statement Reagan wanted to insert in the platform.

In the end, Ford accepted the proposed statement, with its implied criticism of his and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's policy of detente with the Soviet Union.

Ford managers on the convention floor said they could accept the amendment because it did little more than reflect the principles followed by Republican administrations for years.

locking Sen. Schweiker in, and locking Gov. Reagan out."

The call of the roll of states began at 10:13 p.m. The hall grew momentarily quiet when Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, temporary chairman of the convention, said, "The secretary will now call the roll."

The moment of testing had arrived.

Alabama cast all its 37 votes, all of them pledged to Reagan, in favor of the proposed rule.

But as the voting progressed it became clear that Reagan was losing. In many states, delegates still listed as uncommitted in the presidential race sided with Ford on the rules test.

Debate on the vice presidential rule began shortly after 9 p.m., CDT. Former Rep. Thomas Curtis of Missouri moved for adoption of the Reagan rule. Curtis, a former chairman of the Federal Election Commission, said that requiring candidates to name their choices for the vice presidential nomination by 9 a.m. on the day the convention nominates its presidential candidate would "eliminate the use of the nation's highest office as bait."

Curtis also stressed a point used frequently by Reagan spokesmen, that the delegates had a right to know whom the nominee would choose.

Griffin summed up the arguments used by the Ford against in opposition.

He called the proposed rule divisive and then said, "I don't know whether President Ford will ask Gov. Reagan to be his running mate or not. I, at least, want President Ford to have the opportunity.

The featured speaker of the evening was Connally, who was attending his first Republican convention after a long career as a Democrat.

With the zeal of a convert, he lashed out at his former party. He accused the Democrats of unleashing "the curse and abomination of government which today careers about, so clearly out of effective control."

As for Jimmy Carter, the Democratic presidential nominee, Connally asked the delegates:

"Do you want to entrust the leadership of this land for the next four years to a man of whom you never heard one year ago?"

"Never in all the years since America came to occupy a role of world responsibility and leadership has any party ever asked the people to give their votes to a presidential nominee so little known, so little tested, so little proved as the Democratic party nominee for 1976."

After the vote on the rules proposal, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford "is delighted with the victory and he believes it is a good indication of how the vote will turn out when the convention votes on the presidential nomination."

Sen. Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, convention floor manager for Ford, said the rules vote "clearly demonstrates President Ford is in control of this convention."

A few hours before the Tuesday session, John P. Sears, Reagan's campaign manager, predicted that the session "could well be one of the most exciting nights in political history... Our list of delegates, I think, will be fairly obvious tonight... We have a count and we're quite pleased with it."

But Sears was pressed to talk about the possibility of defeat and what it would mean.

"It would create problems," acknowledged Sears, if they lost on the rules vote. But the plump, graying lawyer who has proven himself an adept practitioner of the political game, said a loss wouldn't mean the end of the Reagan effort. "I guess I always think there are things you can do."

After the vote on the vice presidential rule, there still was a possibility of a fight over the abortion and foreign policy planks in the platform. But neither came to a roll call vote.

The attempt to delete platform language supporting those working for a constitutional amendment to prohibit abortions was defeated on a voice vote.

Don't Lie to Cover Up Son's Truancy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune. N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: So a teacher was upset because a student skipped school and her mother lied to protect her. Well, listen to this:

When my son was 15, he skipped school and I was called at work and asked if he was home sick. I said, "No, if he's not at school, he's playing hooky."

I was then informed that because he had skipped school three times before, he was kicked out of school for the remainder of the semester.

After trying for two and one half months to get him back in, I found out it was against the law to suspend a student for that long, but by then, he was so far behind, he couldn't catch up, so he lost a whole semester.

I always thought honesty was the best policy, but that's the thanks I got for being honest.

If I had known then what I know now, I'd have lied to protect my son and punished him in my own way.

UPSET PARENT IN HELENA, MONTANA

DEAR UPSET: Although I think suspension is a most inappropriate punishment for skipping school, I can't condone lying to cover up a child's truancy.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the husband and wife who allowed their small son into the bedroom during their most intimate moments interested me. This is a far cry from the way I was raised.

I was taught that sex was invented by the devil and was dirty, disgusting and sinful.

Now, at middle age, after two marriages and two children, I still haven't been able to think of sex as anything else.

Perhaps if my parents had invited me into their bedroom, I would have been less frustrated, self-conscious and guilt-ridden where sex is concerned.

JUST JOHN

DEAR JOHN: Sex education can and is taught to include an honest explanation without live demonstrations.

DEAR ABBY: Why don't they proclaim a national Daughter-in-Law Day to honor all those daughters-in-law who do things for their mothers-in-law because their own daughters are too busy to bother with them?

I have just had another one of those Mother's Days, and I don't think I could face another one. I invited my mother-in-law to my home for dinner when she let me know that her own daughters hadn't planned anything "special."

I was raised to respect my elders and to honor my parents (my own mother is deceased), so I was glad to have her.

Well, behind my back she invited her own children to come to MY home for dinner! They all "surprised" me, fed their fat faces, told Mom how "wonderful" she looked, and then left. Not one of them lifted a finger to help me, and nobody even said thanks.

To top it off, my mother-in-law is always bragging about what "terrific" children she has, and she doesn't even LIKE me.

In case you're wondering how I managed to feed a flock of unexpected company, I sent out for six buckets of chicken.

MARIE HAS HAD IT

DEAR MARIE: OK. Let's hear it for daughters-in-law out there!

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Increase In Skateboard Injuries

By MICHAEL J. CONLON WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government safety experts say there has been a huge increase in injuries caused by skateboards, but they don't know if they can do anything about it.

One trade association has offered to help the government draw up some safety rules on how the boards are built, but officials of the Consumer Product Safety Commission seem to feel the danger is inherent in the product and no rules are really going to change the risk.

In 1974 there were only 3,230 injuries traceable to skateboards, according to the commission. In 1975 the figure leaped to 27,522 — reflecting as much as anything the suddenly revived popularity of the boards.

The 1975 injury total included six deaths in California alone. The bulk of the injuries were suffered by male teen-agers.

The commission received a letter from the Pro-Am Skateboard Racing Association of Laguna Beach, Calif., offering to provide the agency with safety standards not only for the boards themselves but for skateboard parks and competitions.

The group said there appears to be a surge in skateboarding and "when we realize the growing number of skateboards and project its effect on the basis of the injury statistics from your offices, we most definitely recognize that a federally adopted set of standards of safety needs to be established."

Commission files also reveal a statement submitted by the Hawaii Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics citing "an alarmingly high toll of injury and illness" due to skateboards. Injuries, it said, include "cerebral concussions, fractures, soft tissue injuries of varying degrees of severity and complications and injury to internal organs."

The agency also received a letter from a doctor in Los Angeles who said she worked at times in the emergency room of Children's Hospital there.

"I am aware of one patient who fractured his neck and developed complete paralysis of the lower part of his body as the result of the skateboard injury and am impressed with the almost daily increase in casualties resulting from this dangerous activity," she added.

She asked the commission to do something, suggesting that "declaring them illegal would be the best course of action."

A ban is not likely, however. Commission officials seem to feel the risk is part of the package — bicycles are dangerous too but no one has suggested banning them.

Educational efforts and perhaps some rules governing construction are the most likely courses of action the agency will take.

Watching The Watchers

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The trouble with being a member of the North Carolina delegation down there on the floor at the GOP National Convention is that the TV cameras block your view of Walter Cronkite. And John Chancellor and David Brinkley.

The platforms bearing the TV cameras and photographers weren't obstructing our view of the ABC booth way above us and to the right. But I didn't see Harry Reasoner or Howard K. Smith. Their booth seemed poorly lit, with only a few TV monitors dimly glowing.

It was in sharp contrast to the bright, unexpectedly hot lights under which your observer sat in the crowded Kemper arena, posing as a North Carolina delegate. Around this bogus delegate sat 53 other delegates, all the genuine article from the Tarheel state.

The object of my exercise was to watch the network troops watch us, with or without their TV camera and microphones, as the convention commenced in prime time before millions of viewers across the nation Monday night.

In the unlikely event CBS's Dan Rather, NBC's Cassie Mackin or ABC's Ann Compton thrust forward a microphone and sought my views as a North Carolinian, a plan was devised with aid of a kindly delegate sitting next to me.

She was Mrs. Karol Goebel, a Greensboro housewife, mother of two and co-chairman of Ronald Reagan's primary campaign in Guilford County, N.C. She said she'd tell the reporters her friend had a very bad sore throat and couldn't speak.

So from 7 p.m. CDT to 8:15 p.m. I observed in mortal fear of detection. Tell the truth, it was kind of boring. CBS's Morton Dean and Miss Mackin initially stood to the front of us, near the podium several hundred yards away, casing the joint, possibly peering at the 154-member New York delegation behind us.

But nothing happened. After the pledge of allegiance, prayer and the national anthem, I stretched my neck and saw Dan Rather up front near the Michigan delegation interviewing a man in a red golf cap. Couldn't hear a thing.

I'd heard that network floor reporters tend to cluster when they get a live one. But the only cluster came when Betty Ford, two sons and one daughter, and Vice-President Rockefeller's wife entered the arena to heavy cheering.

Only two TV cameras per network are allowed at any one time on the convention floor, so there were quite a few times the well-known, well-paid correspondents working our area about without a crew.

It was sort of like watching a championship bronco-busting contest without broncos — all those folks leaping up and down with nothing beneath them. But watching the convention with my delegates — who showed no interest in the correspondents — was mighty impressive. With all its power to convey images, television just can't convey the often intense excitement that flows back and forth on the floor.

Findings of the University of Minnesota researchers show that regardless of sex or length of term children who weigh five pounds or less at birth tend to fall behind heavier children in both mental and motor development.

Efforts Made To Save Historic City In Brazil

A BUDDING CAREER, IT'S PLANE TO SEE—Keith Robinson, 8, all of 4 feet and 58 pounds, poses airily in an ill-fitting flying suit at British Royal Air Force Brize Norton base Monday. Keith, its smallest and shortest-serving recruit, joined crew of a Short Belfast, the RAF's largest aircraft, for a routine training flight over the area. He was invited to make the flight after writing RAF recruiters applying for a short career in the service. It had to be short, he explained, because he could spare only two days from his holiday. (AP Wirephoto)

By MARC LIFSHER
OURO PRETO, Brazil (UPI)—The petite black-clad widow effortlessly climbed a steep dusty path above the city, putting one battered tennis shoe in front of the other in the same deliberate pace she had used for 70 years.

Coming upon two tourists photographing the panorama of hundreds of red-tiled roofs and more than a dozen steeples in the hilly colonial city below, the widow looked over her shoulder and said, "Look at that beautiful city; there's my church near the square."

"From here everything looks almost the same as when I was a girl, but you know, in the town it's not quite the same any more. Some people don't care about keeping it the way it was when I was young."

Apart from the architecture, the tourist-swollen square presents a scene far different from the colonial days when Ouro Preto (Black Gold), then known as Vila Rica (Rich Village), was the wealthiest city in the Portuguese empire and center of the gold-mining district.

Hundreds of students and tourists visiting the annual Winter Carnival lounge about the base of a monument honoring Tiradentes, Brazil's first martyr for independence, who was drawn and quartered by Portuguese troops in 1792.

Cars, trucks and tourist buses strain their engines climbing the narrow, cobblestoned streets leading into the square.

In the small, open-fronted shops free-spending out-of-towners buy straw wall hangings and soapstone sculptures, and in nearby restaurants, they cue up for plates of the local speciality, beans and pork.

The federal government declared Ouro Preto a national monument in 1933, and although the city remains essentially preserved in its colonial state, some Brazilians fear it may not remain so.

They say new houses recently constructed on the hills above the old city, noncharacteristic buildings within the city center and increased traffic and pollution are the seeds of Ouro Preto's destruction as a national treasure.

A group of students and artists, one of many that have periodically called for greater protection of Ouro Preto, marched through the colonial streets last spring and presented the municipal authorities with a petition calling for removal of neon signs and mercury vapor street lamps, reduction of traffic and the institution of a master plan for Ouro Preto's restoration.

The group, called the Pro-Ouro Movement, said it would work to "establish a dialogue with the population and the city government to alert them to the fact that the true Ouro Preto is being destroyed and to familiarize them with the cultural values embodied in this 'living museum.'"

The group added, "What is happening here is a lack of respect to Brazil."

Marcia Valadares, 22, a professional building restorer and a leader of the Pro-Ouro Movement, said she wants to see the National Historical and Artistic Trust institute a master plan for Ouro Preto's preservation drawn up by a Portuguese architect in 1968 under UNESCO sponsorship.

"Each day when I wake up things are different in the city," she said. "The government has to spend the money for the plan so we can decide the right places for building and those places which should be completely preserved."

Mayor Genivat Ramalho, while appreciating the city's historic value, said combining "preservation" and "progress" is not an easy task.

"On the hilltops, for example, with the growth of Ouro Preto, slums are beginning to appear," the mayor said. "These are poor families with no other place to live, so you can see that the problem takes on social characteristics whose solutions are difficult."

Jose Tavares, the director of the annual Winter Carnival in Ouro Preto and a professor at the university in the state capital of Belo Horizonte, partially agreed with the mayor.

"Some of the people here feel aggressive against the National Trust. They want to make the city more comfortable to live in and this means they want some changes," Tavares said.

Gentlemen's Disagreement

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—A North Carolina delegate to the Republican National Convention claimed Tuesday night that Vice President Nelson Rockefeller snatched his Reagan poster from his hands on the convention floor.

However, Rockefeller said the delegate handed him the sign.

Jack Bailey of Rocky Mount, N.C., said he was waving his Reagan campaign sign at Rockefeller as the vice president walked past the North Carolina delegation.

"I waved my sign at him in fun, but he must have taken it too seriously and he grabbed it out of my hand," Bailey said.

"I was surprised when he did it, but after a minute I thought I would have some fun with him so I walked back to the New York delegation and said, "Mr. Vice President, I'd like you to give me back my sign."

Rockefeller had folded the Reagan poster, placed it under his chair and put his feet on it. Bailey said he refused to return the sign.

Bailey said he then went to the chairman of the New York delegation, who was seated next to a convention telephone.

"I told him I'll have to have my sign back or I'll take this telephone."

And a Utah delegate then joined the argument and demanded the return of the sign. When the New Yorkers refused, the Utah man yanked the telephone from the chair and left Bailey holding the receiver.

Everest Climb Group Is Varied One

(AP correspondent Jurate Kazickas is trekking along with an American team of men and women who will attempt to scale Mt. Everest. In this dispatch, Ms. Kazickas sketches each of the climbers.)

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer
ON THE TRAIL TO EVEREST, Nepal (AP) — The 12 members of the American Bicentennial Everest Expedition are as varied as the different shapes and sizes of the boots they hope will get them to the top of the world's highest mountain.

The 10 men and two women are experienced climbers with mountain conquests ranging from North America's highest, Mt. McKinley, to previously unclimbed ridges in the Peruvian Andes and perilous faces of the Alps.

The group now heading for the 29,028-foot peak of Mt. Everest includes two doctors, three lawyers, a dancer, a computer scientist, a pilot, a shipwright. There are Ph.D.s, summa cum laude graduates, a carpenter, a sky diver. Their ages range from 27 to 38.

"The most important key to the success of this expedition," said Phillip Trimble, the expedition leader and old man of the group, "is how everyone will get along. There has to be a level of tolerance. There is no room for big egos. It is a total team effort."

The nucleus of the expedition, which was mostly organized in the short space of only four months after permission to climb was received in March, is a group of five climbing friends—Trimble, Dan Emmett, Frank Morgan, Hans Bruyntjes and Arlene Blum—which expanded to 11 to include mountaineers with more technical experience. An American living in Nepal was recently added to complete the team.

"The success or failure of this expedition is not defined by whether or not we get to the top," said Trimble. "What I want most is for everyone to remember a happy experience. We want to give it the maximum effort and make it a trip we are proud of."

Trimble heads the legal affairs section of the U.S. State Department in Washington. A father of two, a Harvard Law School honors graduate and a Fulbright scholar, Trimble, 38, can more easily be pictured in his tent reading the paperback copy of "War and Peace" he brought along than slogging his way up the mountain.

Dan Emmett, 36, a Beverly Hills, Calif., lawyer in the real estate business, married with two children, remembered the first mention of Everest.

"I told Trimble he was a fool to consider it, that it was not in the realm of reason and that of course we should go. We're mountaineers and it's the highest mountain, the ultimate challenge. It's a great goal to strive for. Sure there are a lot more important things to do in life, but what an opportunity!"

Frank Morgan, a native of Sacramento, Calif., is another Harvard Law School graduate like his two friends and now practices international corporate law in Jakarta, Indonesia. He is a bachelor who turned 38 on Sept. 8.

"I like the idea of a shared adventure like this. It's an intense experience. The totality of your existence is involved with these people for such a long period of time," said Morgan.

Hans Bruyntjes, a 28-year-old former carpenter from The Netherlands, has the self-assurance of a man who's climbed some of the most difficult peak faces on the Alps. He said he'd rather be climbing sheer rock walls than the snow and ice of Everest and when he first heard about the climb, he hesitated three weeks before accepting.

"It's dangerous, that's why, he said. "On Everest you know you're going to risk a lot. It's a totally different mountain that involves 80 per cent endurance and 20 per cent experience. I think it'll be the hardest thing I'll ever do."

Arlene Blum, 31, is a chemistry professor from Menlo Park, Calif., who started climbing while a student in college in Oregon.

"It was like discovering religion," she said. "Suddenly I knew that I belonged on top of a mountain." She organized the first all-women climb of Mt. McKinley in 1970 and has climbed peaks in Peru, Ethiopia and Kashmir. She has climbed higher than anyone else in this expedition—to a height of 23,700 feet in Afghanistan.

For this climb, Ms. Blum, who prefers Ms. to Miss, is putting off reporting to her teaching job at Wellesley College in Massachusetts until January. Mrs. Barbara Roach, who is making this trip with her husband, Gerald, is 32 and the first woman to climb Mt. Foraker in Alaska and the only woman to climb the south face of Chacraju in Peru. In regular life she is a dancer and says she is probably happier at that than climbing mountains, which she started doing 10 years ago with her husband.

But Mrs. Roach said: "Actually the two interests go together nicely. I use my dance exercises to train for rock climbing. Both involve balance, strength and control, and stability."

Gerald Roach, 32, a former Peace Corps volunteer in India, now a scientist with the National Center for Atmospheric Research, living in Boulder, Colo., has climbed eight of the 10 highest peaks in North America and has been around the world twice on climbing trips with his wife.

"Mountains are my life," said Roach. "You have to have the fire, that gut desire to get to the top. It's instinctive with me. And I'm physically prepared for the toughest thing I've done in my life."

Rick Ridgeway of Malibu, Calif., at 27 is the youngest and smallest member of the team. He has three steel pins in his leg, which he broke last October while climbing in Yosemite. A shipwright and now a freelance writer who hopes to write a book about Nepal's Sherpas guides, Ridgeway has day dreamed about Everest in the past but always dismissed it as an unlikely possibility. "It's a real ego trip to be here now," he said.

Chris Chandler is 33, a divorced father of three, and a doctor with West Seattle General Hospital in Washington. He has made numerous first ascents and blazed new routes on peaks in North America and Peru. Everest for him is "a neat adventure. In one way, it's just another peak, but then there is that certain mystique about the place. And like any other mountain, if I don't have to kill myself, I'd like to get to the top. It would still be a good trip, an adventure, if I don't make it."

Dee Crouch, an emergency medical doctor in Boulder, brought along more than 400 pounds of medical supplies on the mountain to treat everything from hemorrhoids to broken limbs. He also is conducting some cognitive tests, to be followed up over the next few years, to determine the possibility of brain damage from the effects of high altitude.

"The summit is not that important to me," said Crouch, 33, father of two sons. "It has not been my life-long goal to climb Mt. Everest. Yes, I would like to get to the top but my first purpose is to care for the people on the mountain."

Robert Cormack, 30, is a pilot, the owner of a rooming house in Boulder, and an occasional physics tutor when he is not scrambling up mountains. When Gerry Roach proposed that he join the ABE, Cormack said he wasn't sure he really wanted to go. "I figured it would be one big hassle...but then I decided yes—it was a once in a lifetime opportunity."

"Getting to the summit is my goal but I'm not prepared to die or lose my toes and fingers for it."

Joe Reinhard, 32, from New Lenox, Ill., is a cultural anthropologist who has been living in Nepal for the last five years and is fluent in Nepali. "Everest has been on my mind ever since I got here so I jumped at the opportunity to join the expedition. But I try not to think about being able to climb it," said Reinhard. As advance base camp manager, he figures his chances of getting an opportunity to reach the summit are small. He is responsible for working with the Sherpas and porters in getting clothing, food and equipment to the higher camps.

An expert sky diver and Scuba diver, whose first mountain conquest was Europe's highest, Mt. Blanc, Reinhard sees Everest as another learning experience. "At the end, I want the team to say they're glad that I came along."

A half-pound of ours makes as much as two pounds of theirs.

An 8-oz. jar of Taster's Choice® Freeze-Dried Coffee makes 120 (6-oz.) cups of coffee. That's as much coffee as you'd get from two pounds of ground roast (following recommended serving directions of the leading national brands).

And since you make Taster's Choice by the cup, you never end up throwing half a pot down the drain.

We think you should price coffee the way you drink coffee. By the cup.

So the next time you're comparing who gives you what for your money, remember: It's not how much it costs a pound.

It's how little it costs a cup.

(And looking at it that way, one of these coupons is worth a lot of cups on us.)

Too Tired To Claim Prize

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Jerry Paul, a 26-year-old fast-food cook, won a motorcycle endurance contest Monday by sitting on a stationary bike for 69 hours. He was so tired he couldn't drive his prize home.

Twenty-six men and three women began the contest at noon Friday in front of a motorcycle dealership. They were not to sleep, and had to keep their hands on the handlebars and their feet on the footpegs. They got a 10-minute break every two hours.

Paul kept talking to himself to keep himself awake. When he won, he let out as much of a whoop as his hoarse voice would permit.

He was limp from muscle cramps, and almost fell over. His hands were unburned from the weekend of open-air sitting.

The final hours found contestants propped up by pillows. Friends and relatives rubbed backs and doused heads with cold water.

Paul never planned to be a contestant. He just showed up with two other entrants, his brothers Danny and Carl. But then he found there was a last-minute shortage of willing die-hards.

"So I entered. I didn't have anything else to do."

Carl lasted only 30 minutes. He was disqualified when he instinctively removed his foot from the peg and stuck it out for support when the machine listed slightly. Danny went on until Friday night, when a cigarette dangling from his lips fell into his lap. He removed his hands from handlebars to to brush it away, and was disqualified.

The runnerup was 17-year-old Kenny Williams, a diabetic who takes insulin twice a day. He held on until 9 a.m. Paul had to sit only moments after that to win the $1,000 Suzuki.

Williams' mother said he never gave up, he just went to sleep.

"He was trying to prove to the world that diabetics are able to do things, too," she said.

Nighttime Ride Unique For Zoo

By CLARENCE ZAITZ
SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Summertime zoo visitors are often dismayed at how lethargic the animals are as they lie around in the shade, usually asleep.

But now visitors to San Diego Zoo's unique Wild Animal Park have an opportunity to see animals in their natural habitat at night, when most animals are active.

The 1,800-acre wildlife preserve, established 30 miles northeast of here four years ago to serve as a breeding ground for the zoo's larger animals, has developed into a tourist attraction of major proportions.

Now, with the advent of nighttime operation of the 50-minute monorail (the Wgsa Bush Line) safari, visitors are exposed to a different experience of sights, sounds and even smells.

A few years ago staff members rode the monorail on a bright moonlit night and concluded it was a thrill to be shared.

Veterinarians and park curators experimented with various colored lights and finally settled upon soft amber as being least disruptive to the animals. The lights, mounted on the side of the monorail cars, are turned on by the driver-narrator whenever approaching an area where animals are likely to be.

The Wild Animal Park is unlike any other type of zoo, in that only the predator animals — cheetahs, lions and tigers — are isolated from the rest of the animal collection. The rest of the 2,200 animals — representing 186 species — are allowed to roam at will. They forage for food among the natural growth, or eat from food and water provided by keepers.

Nineteen of the animals are on the endangered species list, but the park is proud of its 78 percent survival rate under which 14 of the endangered species have successfully reproduced.

Dr. James Dolan, general curator, says reproduction among animals in the park has been outstanding. "It is now possible for the park to supply certain species to other zoological institutions, thus eliminating their need to draw on the wild population," he said.

Zoos throughout the country regularly receive animals from here because of the surpluses.

To enter the park is to enter Africa. The entrance is through Nairobi Village, a 17-acre area with special exhibits, shops, amphitheatres, a giant aviary housing more than 100 African birds, and a gorilla troop.

The Village is encompassed with lush vegetation representing 500 different species of plant life.

All park employees wear typical safari garb — shorts and pith helmets. A restaurant is called the Mombasa Cooker. A two-mile hiking trail is called the Kilimanjaro Trail.

Not every night is action night among the animals of the park. Lucky visitors can see flocks of ostriches running pell-mell across open land, or a white rhinoceros challenging another who has invaded his territory. Wild deer and rabbits who live near the park have learned it is a safe haven which offers free food, and many can be seen along the route of the safari train.

There are sounds to listen for on the night train also — like a herd of gnus barking, or the thunderous sound of an entire flock of ducks taking off from a pond.

Miners' Fund Aiding Students

By GEORGE W. HACKETT
Associated Press Writer
SOUTH WILLIAMSON, Ky. (AP) — A project started in 1941 by miners who needed a place to hold their union meetings has turned into a trust fund providing loans for students and others who need help.

The miners worked for the now-closed Pond Creek Collieries.

"The United Mine Workers local had been getting together in an old schoolhouse," recalled William Wells, a member of the six-man committee which passes on loan applications. "The local was forced out of there, moved to another location, then had to leave again. Finally, the men decided to build a union hall of their own."

Businessmen were asked for contributions, local carpenters donated their time, and "one day, we were the proud owners of a three-story building. It was named the Miners Community Center," said Wells.

In later years, however, Wells said, "The Pond Creek operation was sold, miners began drifting away, and the union local lost membership and began to dissolve."

The miners managed to rent out the building and Wells said he and several friends "ran a small business there for a while."

The end came when the center was hit by two floods. The floor buckled, plaster peeled from the walls and windows were broken.

"There was only one thing to do," Wells said. "The place had to be unloaded because it was going down hill fast. No money was available for repairs."

Wells can't remember whether the sale price was $11,000 or $12,000. "It was the committee's decision to set up a trust fund and provide aid for those who needed it."

The center is now occupied by a furniture store. The trust fund has grown to between $18,000 and $20,000, according to treasurer Edgar Scaff.

"If it's a good cause, we're willing to help with a loan," said Wells who is secretary of the Miners Community Center.

"Usually we do business with the families of miners who started the whole thing," Wells continued. "Not long ago, however, we provided the cash for a church which wanted to do some remodeling."

Scaff said most of the loans go to students. "I guess we've helped about eight or 10 kids get an education," he said.

One of those "kids" turned out to be Barbara Brozowski, now a 28-year-old English teacher at Johns Creek Elementary School.

"It got me through a rough time," she said. Mrs. Brozowski had dropped out of Pikeville College. She wanted to return, "but money wasn't available and my family couldn't help me. Then, I learned about the Miners Community Center from a friend."

No Place Like Williamsburg

By DON McLEOD Associated Press Writer
 WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Patrick Henry stood in the old colonial Capitol here and declared that Americans shouldn't have to pay taxes imposed without their consent.

George Washington, a member of the House of Burgesses, and Thomas Jefferson, a young student at the time, were in the audience.

In this same chamber, the resolution which led to the Declaration of Independence was adopted, as was the Virginia Declaration of Rights, the foundation of the U.S. Bill of Rights.

The Capitol has been reconstructed on its original site as part of an almost magically recreated colonial city, complete in its architectural and historical purity and a picture of 18th century life in America.

There is the rebuilt palace where royal governors lived and where Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson resided as the first elected governors of the new State of Virginia.

Jefferson studied in the Wren building, a surviving original which has served the College of William and Mary, America's second oldest university, since 1699. It is the oldest academic structure still in use in the United States.

The old magazine where powder and muskets were stored still stands. There is the public gaol (jail, in modern English) where 13 of Blackbeard's pirates were hanged.

There are the homes of Peyton Randolph, first president of the Continental Congress, and of George Wythe, first professor of law in an American university and teacher of Thomas Jefferson and John Marshall.

In shops which look as they did when American and French armies camped here on their way to Yorktown, you can see costumed craftsmen making barrels, boots, baskets, flintlocks, sideboards, horseshoes, gingerbread, silver spoons, candles, spinets.

Pagentry is a daily affair at Williamsburg. On Oct. 7, Williamsburg celebrates the first General Assembly under the new state constitution. Travelers should ask ahead about special observances.

Just eight miles down a scenic parkway is Jamestown, where the first permanent English settlement in America was established in 1607. This is the ground made famous by Capt. John Smith and Pocahontas.

In Jamestown Festival Park you can see a reconstruction of the fort and thatched huts in which the first settlers lived and the tiny ships in which they sailed 13 years ahead of the Mayflower.

In an adjacent national park is the original Jamestown site with excavations of English America's oldest houses. The church in which the first legislature in America met has been restored on original foundations. The steeple tower is original and has stood since 1639.

At the other end of the parkway, 14 miles beyond Williamsburg, is Yorktown, where the deciding battle of the Revolution was fought.

Visitors can see the siege works, the house where surrender was negotiated and the field where Gen. Cornwallis's British troops marched to surrender to the tune of "The World Turned Upside Down."

Williamsburg and the connecting parkway to Jamestown and Yorktown are just off Interstate Highway 64, about 50 miles southeast of Richmond, Va. The way is clearly marked by signs from the Interstate.

Automobile traffic is rigidly restricted in the historic area and daytime parking on the fringes is virtually nonexistent. So, first-time visitors should go directly to the Information Center where shuttle bus service is included in the price of the admission ticket.

Motels abound in the Williamsburg area but are usually booked three to four weeks in advance. No visitor should expect to stay overnight in Williamsburg without an advance reservation.

Eating is one of the best parts of a Williamsburg visit. The fare ranges from colonial dishes in 200-year-old taverns to modest family restaurants.

The best way to see Jamestown is to go first to Festival Park where two museums and reconstructed 17th century buildings illustrate the lives of America's first English settlers. Then to the original site to see where it all really happened.

A National Park Service information center provides guidance to Yorktown and the battle sites. A major state bi-centennial center, featuring the military aspects of the Revolution, opened recently.

Poem Her Last Gift

BETHANY, N.C. (AP) — Wanda Gail Jones wrote poetry in moments spared from work on her family's Rockingham County farm and her clerical job at the Blue Bell garment plant in Rockingham. And after she contracted cancer two years ago, she tried writing it to keep up her spirits before she died at the age of 25 last week.

Her last poem, written on an envelope and in a hand not very legible because of pain, was found among her cards and letters after her death. It went like this:

I shall go.
 To be tossed forever
 To and fro.
 ...And as the wind,
 I shall roam.
 Silent and wary
 And forever alone.

Concerned that her talent would remain undiscovered, the Rev. Robert Lee Turner, a Presbyterian minister, persuaded Wanda to let him print some of her poems. They were published in a small volume called "God's Glorious Garden."

Copies were distributed throughout Annie Penn Memorial Hospital in Reidsville. Wanda often gave copies to visitors in her hospital room.

"I believe she wanted to write again, but her mind was full of medicine," her mother said. "She'd write a few lines, and then crumple up the paper and throw it away."

Ray Finds It More Difficult

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Washington sex star Elizabeth Ray made her debut as a political reporter Monday night and found working the Republican convention more difficult than working the bedrooms of Congress.

"This is more work than I thought," said the panting, perspiring siren as she was pursued by a pack of reporters and photographers at Kemper Arena.

"At least in Washington I could close my office door," added the former secretary, who traded for a tape recorder the typewriter she said she never used anyway.

In fact, the glossy blonde in a backless white dress was more of a celebrity than most of the politicians attending the convention. Miss Ray is here as a correspondent for Genesis magazine, a men's sex publication. Her identification card pictured a tiny red devil adorned with a fig leaf.

Badgered and buffeted, she signed dozens of autographs and answered dozens of questions, but didn't have time to ask her own. She was in the hall less than 10 minutes when the session ended and she waved somewhat feebly to the emptying auditorium.

Miss Ray misplaced her tape recorder, bumped her head, and at one point wheeled around, back to a wall, to face reporters like a small frightened animal. The pack closed in and Elizabeth Ray, long the lady hunter, became the lady hunted.

It was a new game for the 33-year-old nontyping temptress who said she was paid $14,000 a year to be the mistress of Ohio Congressman Wayne L. Hays, a Democrat.

Hays admits they had an intimate relationship but says she did some secretarial work to earn her keep.

Earlier in the day, she was turned away from a reception which President Ford was attending because she was not invited.

"I am here looking to be able to interview politicians and delegates, but it's difficult when I get so much attention," said Miss Ray at the convention.

Asked her political preferences, she disclosed she had never voted and was not registered to vote because "no one ever asked me to."

She refused to disclose her salary, saying only, "It's more than I earned in Congress. I feel like people know me inside and out, and I would like to keep something personal to myself."

She would like to interview Ronald Reagan, she said, "and ask him why he gave up acting, because acting and politics are so similar."

Both President Ford and Reagan are attractive, she said diplomatically, "but I think Reagan is sexier. He seems more rugged. Or maybe it's because he's a brunette and I'm a blonde."

Farm Scene

By HENRY C. RIDDICK,
Agricultural Extension Agent

Tobacco insects that could attack the 1977 tobacco crop can be greatly reduced now by cutting your tobacco stalks and plowing out the stubbles immediately after harvest.

By destroying the stalks, you can reduce the food and breeding places for the hornworm and the flea beetle. Over 90 percent of the hornworms that live through the winter are produced after August 1.

Hornworms and budworms in the pupae stage overwinter in the top two inches of soil, and it is believed they overwinter mostly on the row rather than in the middle. Therefore, many of these pupae could be destroyed by thoroughly plowing out the old stubbles.

In addition to helping reduce the population of insects destructive to tobacco, there are three diseases that can also be reduced by destroying the stalks and plowing out the stubbles. These diseases are brown spot, nematodes and Mosaic.

Several farmers in the county have already completed the harvest of their tobacco crop. Others are completing harvest each day. If you have finished harvesting your tobacco crop, the time to destroy the tobacco stalks and plow out the stubbles is "right now." First, cut the stalks, see that they are cut in small pieces to speed up decay. Reduction in both brown spot and Mosaic is dependent upon the old crop residue rotting and decaying before the next crop. A rotary mower would do an excellent job of cutting the stalks.

Next, the old root system should be completely destroyed for the most effective reduction of nematodes. This can be done effectively with either a bottom plow or a "middle buster."

Each day you delay this practice after the harvest is completed will mean more disease and insect damage to the 1977 crop.

OPERATION r-6-P (Reduce 6 Pests) campaign is being held again this year and sponsored by the Pitt County Young Farmers. Let's start today and reduce the occurrence of these insects and diseases in our 1977 tobacco crop.

HIGH ROCKING CHAIRS GOT HIM—John Aartum moved from North Kingsville, Ohio, last March to the tiny community of Sunset in South Carolina, to operate a country store and build custom furniture in a shed nearby. But business was sparse so Aartum built a 30-foot rocking chair and placed it out front. It took him 2 1/2 days to build the chair and it cost $140. Now business is improving. Roach Poison Found In Fish

By JOHN STOWELL, Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Traces of the roach poison Kepone, the cause of liver and brain damage in Virginia chemical workers, have turned up in nonhazardous levels in fish caught hundreds of miles from the plant where it was made, a federal agency says. The pesticide residue was found in migratory fish caught by commercial fishermen in Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean off the coasts of Delaware, New Jersey and New York.

The Food and Drug Administration said that all of its first samples of fish taken from the Chesapeake and Atlantic Ocean showed traces of Kepone, but not at levels considered hazardous.

The initial results are preliminary, however, and it will be at least 10 weeks before federal scientists can determine how seriously Kepone pollution has spread up and down the East Coast, the FDA said.

The agency said seven samples of fish from Chesapeake Bay — four of croaker and three of bluefish — showed Kepone residues ranging up to .09 parts per million (PPM). That is just short of the .1 PPM level that would trigger the FDA into action to keep the fish off the market. No residues of Mirex, a fire-ant poison that is chemically related to Kepone, were found in the Bay fish samples, the FDA said.

The FDA added that four redfish, one drum and one flounder caught off the Texas Gulf Coast had no detectable Kepone residue. Mirex testing on those fish has not been completed. The report was the first from the FDA's sampling of fish from the Chesapeake Bay, the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico in the wake of the Kepone disaster at Hopewell, Va.

Dozens of employees of the now-defunct Life Sciences Products Co. of Hopewell were found last year to have seriously high levels of Kepone in their blood and were suffering from tremors, chest and side pains. Family members of workers also were found to have Kepone contamination and in at least one case a son born to a contaminated worker was born with a liver malfunction. Doctors said it might have been caused by Kepone passed from mother to child.

The pesticide also was discharged into the James River, which empties into the Chesapeake. The state of Virginia has banned commercial fishing on the river. Life Sciences produced Kepone for the Allied Chemical Corp., which has been sued for more than $100 million by former Life Sciences workers.

On Monday, Life Sciences pleaded innocent in a Richmond, Va., court to conspiring to violate federal pollution laws in connection with the James River contamination.

The FDA said it had extended the testing to Mirex, which has been used extensively throughout the South against fire-ants, because it may contain as much as 10 per cent Kepone as an impurity. Under certain conditions, Mirex can be naturally converted into Kepone.

Sampling over the next 10 weeks may include crabs, oysters, clams, spot, sea-trout, catfish, flounder, striped bass, and white perch, the FDA said. Sampling will be done around Long Island, N.Y.; Atlantic City, N.J.; Norfolk-Newport News, Va.; Morehead City, N.C.; Charleston, S.C.; Brunswick or Savannah, Ga.; Daytona Beach and Miami, Fla.

London Stage Is Jumping Now

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — Every summer, just as Broadway takes a vacation from opening nights, London's stage races into star-spangled high gear.

It happened again this year. In one 30-day period, starting just when Broadway stopped, London opened more than 20 new productions — everything from the hit Broadway musical "A Chorus Line" to a routine thriller.

The period's star lineup included Oscar winner Glenda Jackson, Hollywood veteran Douglas Fairbanks Jr., walrus-shaped Robert Morley, Broadway Tony winner John Wood, a new comedy star and movie-television figures such as Richard Johnson and Janet Suzman.

Tourists are one reason why London's theater spurts as Broadway's pauses.

One recent survey showed that tourists — especially Americans — buy 35 per cent of London's theater tickets all year around. The proportion naturally rises in mid-summer.

Climate is another reason, at least in normal years. Air conditioning by Mother Nature is usually all that London theaters need.

This year, however, temperatures went mad. Just as the mid-summer spurt of openings began, managers watched audiences shrink by up to 20 per cent in a heat wave without precedent.

Even so, the procession of new productions was impressive.

Glenda Jackson, with a big company, re-opened the Old Vic theater, deserted earlier this year by the National Theater company, for an eight-week season in "The White Devil," John Webster's gory melodrama set in Renaissance Italy.

The idea was to update the 1612 play, giving it a new edited version and modern-dress costume. Most critics felt this went against the grain of Webster's play.

Fairbanks, 66, made his first London stage appearance in some 40 years, but had to use some fancy footwork to dodge the British tax man.

He rehearsed the London version of "The Pleasure of His Company" in Ireland, then came here to play it for eight weeks only. A former resident with British business interests, Fairbanks was limited to 90 days in this country before the tax collectors pounced.

One of this period's most distinguished entries was a clinical, intense revival of Chekhov's "The Three Sisters" directed by Jonathan Miller.

Miller made the Russian sisters — Janet Suzman playing one of them — less glamorous than usual, more truly provincial, not exiles from the capital's glitter but fated to failure no matter where they were. His powerful re-examination of the Chekhov play was in town for a limited season.

John Wood, a Broadway best-actor award winner, flamboyantly capped a Bicentennial tribute by the Royal Shakespeare company — a new production of George Bernard Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple."

It is meticulously right about the look and feel of its American Revolution period, and Wood's volcanic Gen. Burgoyne boosts Shaw's anti-Puritan melodrama toward a rousing, flag-waving finish.

Robert Morley, looking more than ever like a beached giant elephant seal, takes a break from commercials in a very funny farce most notable for its remarkable author.

"Banana Ridge" is the third farce by Ben Travers now in London — not bad for a playwright in his 90th year.

It dates from 1938, 10 years later than "Plunder" which the National Theater is hilariously reviving. Travers wrote his current new comedy, "The Bed Before Yesterday," when he was 88. It is due on Broadway in the autumn.

Another National Theater revival during this period was Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit," with Richard Johnson giving a solid performance as a writer haunted by the ghosts of his two wives.

The new comedy star is no overnight discovery. But in Michael Frayn's "Donkey's Years" she is being hailed as Bea Lillie's comic equal and a match for Dame Edith Evans as an actress of high comedy.

Frayn's play is a lightweight farce, centered in an upper-crust university class reunion. Penelope Keith is the only girl in the cast, and she is worth the trip to London to see.

Nurses' Strike Has Not Bothered Patients

By WENDY WALKER
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — A five-week nurses' strike at Seattle area hospitals — the largest and one of the longest walkouts by nurses in the nation's history — does not appear to have affected the well-being of most patients, hospital officials say.

Representatives of the 2,400 striking nurses have said they could make no firm assessment of the strike's impact on patient care because they are not in the hospitals. They have said that some patients might not recognize deteriorating standards of care.

The strike at 16 of 21 public and private hospitals began July 12 over wages, staffing and other issues in a new contract.

The 16 hospitals are operating at 50 per cent to 70 per cent of capacity, caring for patients with supervisory personnel and nurses who did not walk out, spokesmen said.

Estimates are that the strike has been 90 to 95 per cent effective in the downtown hospitals, while in the suburbs up to 40 per cent of the nurses are crossing the picket lines.

The strike has resulted in the closure of floors and wards in some hospitals as the patient load was reduced, and there have been delays in performing elective surgery.

Ambulance drivers have complained that the reduced number of beds has caused delays in admissions. Some doctors are now making house calls to see patients who might otherwise be in hospitals.

State officials have investigated a half dozen complaints about patient care during the Seattle strike and said they found none of them to be valid.

"There has been some inconvenience to the public," David Roach, executive director of the Seattle Hospital Association, said Monday. "But the quality of medical care has not been jeopardized because of the strike."

They warn, however, that continuation of the strike may produce results more serious than those so far felt.

The nurses are seeking a 35 per cent wage increase over the next three years. They now make $11,400 a year starting base pay and $12,600 with five years' experience. The last offer from the Seattle Area Hospital Council was for salary increases of 20 per cent over three years and cost-of-living increases in the last two years to match inflation over 6 per cent and less than 12 per cent.

The nurses are also seeking more say in staffing arrangements and a contract provision requiring all nurses to join their association or pay a fee equivalent to the cost incurred in collective bargaining.

Negotiators for the Washington State Nurses Association last Friday recommended rejection of the hospitals' latest contract offer. The nurses are voting on the offer by mailed ballots, which will be tabulated Wednesday.

Controversy On TV Violence Continuing

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television's early evening viewing hours will continue to be governed by the industry's nonviolent "family viewing" policy this fall, and there will be fewer police and private detective shows on the air.

But the controversy over TV violence rages on.

The American Medical Association called attention to the issue in June by declaring: "TV violence is a risk factor threatening the health and welfare of young Americans, indeed our future society."

The AMA's declaration, adopted as a resolution at its annual meeting, stopped short of saying there is a direct cause-and-effect relationship between televised murder and mayhem and the climbing death rate of young Americans due to violence.

A majority of the doctors and scientists who have studied the relationship of television and violence state flatly that TV violence unquestionably produces increased aggressiveness at least in some young viewers.

"There is a positive relationship between the amount of violence a child watches and the amount of aggression seen in his daily attitudes and behavior," says Dr. Robert Liebert, professor of psychology and psychiatry at the State University of New York.

He was a principal investigator for the U.S. Surgeon General's report, which found in 1972 that there was a "tentative" link between watching TV violence and aggressive behavior.

Executives at the three major television networks are keenly aware of the scientific evidence regarding TV violence and children.

"We acknowledge that television violence can contribute to aggressive behavior in some cases in some children," says Jerome H. Stanley, vice president of broadcast standards on the West Coast for NBC-TV.

"But I don't know that such depiction of violence has an overwhelming effect on all children ... I don't believe any great percentage of the children in our country are going to go out and kill somebody after having seen an act of that nature on television," Stanley adds.

He has a good point, says George Comstock, a researcher at the Rand Corp. think tank in Santa Monica, Calif. He evaluated 3,200 projects dealing with the relationship between television and human behavior.

The increase in aggressive behavior that many scientists noted in children who had viewed violent TV programs usually took the form of unruliness, hostility or fighting, often in play situations, Comstock said in a recent interview. Whether it would prompt them to go out and commit a crime has not been clearly established, he said.

That is why Comstock concluded that "violent television entertainment increases the probability of subsequent aggressive behavior on the part of children and youth," but the impact on society "may be negligible or large."

There have been occasions when an antisocial act depicted on a television program — such as a hijacking or murder — is re-enacted in real life by someone who saw the show. Network executives argue that these incidents are few in number and tend to be committed by persons who were pathologically predisposed to crime anyway.

Alfred R. Schneider, vice president of ABC Inc., reported in May that two studies commissioned by ABC found "that though television viewing was not a causal factor in the development of violent behavioral tendencies among youthful offenders, television sometimes provided a model for the imitation of antisocial techniques in the commission of crimes in persons predisposed to crime."

Dr. George Gerbner, a communications professor who has been compiling a TV violence profile every year since 1967 for the Annenberg School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania, says people who watch four hours or more of television a day have an exaggerated view of their chances for becoming the victim of a crime.

"Heavy TV viewers are more likely to be afraid," Gerbner says. "... In asking, 'What are your chances of encountering violence,' in the course of a given week we found that heavy television viewers overestimated their chances."

Even if TV violence does nothing else, many persons argue, it contributes to a general desensitization of the public to real-life acts of horror.

"It breeds indifference, an acceptance of violence," says Dr. Fredric Wertham, a psychiatrist who wrote the best-selling "Seduction of the Innocent," the first major study of the harmful effects of comic books on children. Wertham says movies and pulp magazines, as well as TV, are responsible for dulling the sensibilities of many persons.

Many network executives argue that conflict, whether physical or emotional, is a key ingredient for any good drama.

"You can't dramatize a murder mystery without a murder," says NBC's Stanley. "Then what you have to do is consider the elements used to illustrate that murder. That's where you get into what is gratuitous. You do not have to see a decapitated body to know the head is missing; you can talk about it."

Executives at the three networks say they diligently try to make certain that whatever violence a program contains is necessary for the story plot.

Puerto Rican Nationalist Has His Own Terms

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY
Associated Press Writer
MARION, Ill. (AP) — That his name is unfamiliar is a measure of the years he has been imprisoned. Once he was among the most infamous men in America.

Some say the time has come to free Rafael Cancel Miranda. But he will have freedom on no one's terms but his.

It was March 1, 1954. On the floor of the U.S. House of Representatives, idle congressmen lounged through a vote on a Mexican labor bill. Above them, Miranda guided three fellow Puerto Rican nationalists into the visitors' gallery.

As the nays were called they rose together, drew automatic pistols and fired perhaps a score of shots.

"My country must be freed," one of them yelled. "I want freedom for my country." Mrs. Lolita Lebron, a 30-year-old dark-eyed, dark-haired beauty, blazed away at the ceiling and waved a Puerto Rican flag.

A 23-year-old revolutionary, Miranda pointed his .38 into the well of the chamber and emptied its eight-shot clip at random. Stooping behind a chair to reload, he was subdued by spectators.

"PUERTO RICAN ASSASSINS SHOOT UP CONGRESS," the headlines shouted. "FIVE SOLONS WOUNDED." It was the work of four fanatics, the papers said.

Two trials and 22 years later, the fiery young nationalists are now at the edge of contemplative middle age. And they are still in prison.

Convicted, as were the rest, of charges ranging from assault to conspiracy to overthrow the government by force and violence, Miranda, now 45, has served nearly a third of his 81-year sentence. Mrs. Lebron is about halfway through a 56-year term.

At the first trial the judge said the shootings were "so heinous, so infamous, so daring and so atrocious as to shock the conscience of the nation ... dastardly, wicked and ruthless."

"I'm not guilty of nothing more than defending my people," Miranda says today. It was his first news interview since sentencing.

Some believe time enough has passed — the Puerto Rican delegate to Congress, the Cuban ambassador to the United Nations, the Puerto Rican General Assembly, terrorists who last year bombed an historic New York tavern, the governor of Puerto Rico, a citizens committee, and one of the victims.

Though all the congressmen survived their wounds, just two are alive today: Kenneth A. Roberts of Alabama and George H. Fallon of Maryland, both Democrats.

Roberts, now a Washington lawyer, limps from the damage a bullet did to his leg. "I think it's time to look at the record," he says. "As far as I'm concerned I would have no objections to their parole. I just feel that they have been there a long time — in light of other sentences that it's a long time."

A spokesman for the Puerto Rican delegate says: "The situation is that they are long overdue for parole."

But Fallon, now retired in Baltimore, says: "At the time I thought the judge's sentence was very fair to them, and I still think it was. I think justice is being done."

Miranda thinks not.

And he waits at the U.S. Federal Penitentiary near Marion, Ill. — not for parole, but for vindication.

Miranda was born to a regional nationalist leader at Mayaguez, P.R., in 1930. He was attracted to the nationalist cause early. As a schoolboy he was expelled from class for refusing to pledge allegiance to the American flag. As a student leader, he later helped organize a strike aimed at making native Spanish the language of Puerto Rican schools. At age 18, as he walked to high school in San Juan, FBI agents arrested him for refusing conscription by the Army. Jailed for more than two years, he was freed only to be rearrested a short time later on the same charge.

In 1950 his father and several relatives were imprisoned for participation in a nationalist revolt. Miranda made his way to New York in 1952 with no love of America's government and the idea of organizing for the independence movement. He became a shoe decorator.

Then the question of Puerto Rico rose in the United Nations. America said that most Puerto Ricans did not want independence. To Miranda's mind it was an unconscionable lie. Something had to be done to balance American propaganda.

"At that moment we were internationally humiliated, and the only way we can bring attention in an international way to the Puerto Rican cause was to do something like this (the shootings)," he said. "The real intention was just to go there and give our life, expose our life ... As a matter of fact, we didn't expect to come alive from there."

"We knew we wouldn't get Puerto Rico free by going there. That would be crazy. I mean ... the army of the United States, you are not going to beat by just four young people there shooting some few bullets."

"The U.S. was at that time trying to tell the world that we are satisfied, colonized people. We went to put our life as proof that we were not satisfied, that there were Puerto Ricans, Puerto Ricans by the thousands, fighting for independence, that we had a right to the independence of Puerto Rico."

Different Kind Of Log Cabin

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — The home that Larry Ligo is building in the woods is as old as an 1804 log cabin and as new as solar heat and a glass-paneled room.

The 35-year-old, red-bearded Ligo, an assistant professor of art history at Davidson College, had the cabin moved 25 miles from Beaver Creek in Rowan County to a tract two miles outside Davidson.

"The modern parts of my home are being added so as to complete the log house, not to compete with it," he says.

"Living close to nature doesn't mean that you have to eliminate esthetic considerations. You also surround yourself with the best that man's creative mind has to offer. I think your house itself should be a work of art."

Ligo is separated from his wife. He and his two sons, Aaron, 6 and Nathan 5, live in the unfinished house.

Ligo says that doing the work himself and living in the woods "makes your whole life slow down. Restoration work teaches you to go slow. The moment you try to hurry through something, you find out you've destroyed something of historical value." He is leaving the cabin intact and adding a basement, a kitchen, a music room and a porch.

He is installing a wood-burning fireplace to heat the home.

Ligo says his sons are one reason he is doing all this. "I'd like them to grow up in an environment where they're more independent and better able to take care of themselves, not so dependent on big business and mass production. Kids who are growing up pushing buttons and consuming are going to be in for a rude awakening in 20 years."
