

New Site Is Acquired For Relocating Of County Fair

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County American Legion Fair Inc. has purchased a new fairground site and plans to relocate the Pitt Fair by 1978, a spokesman said today.

Les Turnage, president of the American Legion Fair, announced that the acquisition of a 32-acre site, located on the north-west corner of Ram's Horn Road and Eastern 264 Bypass, has been completed.

Turnage said that the new fairground, purchased from the old John Jones farm, will hopefully be used for the first time in the fall of 1978 or if preparations can not be completed in time for that year, the first use will be in 1979.

"We will start from scratch out there," Turnage commented in discussing the new site. He pointed out that Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham has agreed to help the Pitt County Fair in laying out a master development plan for what a "model" agricultural fair should include.

The president said that the Legion plans to incorporate much more than just the carnival aspects of the fair at the Ram's Horn site and create a program that will be attractive to neighboring counties as well as Pitt citizens.

He said that the fair committee hopes to get an old log tobacco barn and fully restore it at the site as well as other interesting items of agricultural interest from the past.

"We are hoping to have more than just a carnival," he added.

Turnage pointed out that the new location will provide ample parking area and room for activities that the current site does not afford. Adequate drainage and access were also considered when the purchase was made, he said.

The present fairground, located across from the Pitt-

Greenville Airport, has not been sold and will be utilized this year and next for the fair, he said, and possibly an additional year if preparations are not completed at the new site.

The fair, operated by an executive committee of American Legion Post 39, formerly owned and operated a fair site on W. Fifth Street but sold that property and purchased the present 14-acre tract after construction of the hospital was completed.

American Legion Posts in Greenville, Farmville and Ayden control the operation of the local fair through a board of directors which selects an executive committee and hires a secretary to handle the actual fair operation. Sam Winchester serves as secretary.

Collision's Aftermath

SEARCH FOR SURVIVORS — A British warship stands by Monday near the capsized hull of the British minesweeper Fittleton in the North Sea near the Dutch coast, while a small boat, barely visible at left, searches for survivors. The Fittleton overturned and later sank for a collision with a British frigate, officials said. The crash occurred after the two ships completed their part into NATO maneuvers. (AP Wirephoto)

Consumer Prices Up Half Per Cent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose five-tenths of a per cent during August for the third month in a row, the government said today. A decline in meat prices failed to offset higher costs for most other foods, fuel and clothing.

The increase means inflation is running at an annual rate of 6 per cent, a level in line with the Ford administration's forecast.

At the same time, the Labor Department reported a further shrinkage in the purchasing power of the average workers' paycheck as inflation last month offset a slight increase in pay.

President Ford has claimed that his economic policies have helped cut the inflation rate in half from its 1974 levels. His Democratic challenger, Jimmy Carter, has charged that the current rate still is twice as high as when the Democrats were in office. Price increases averaged 2 per cent in the 1950s and 2.3 per cent during the 1960s.

Consumer price increases were smaller earlier this year but picked up to a 6 per cent rate in the spring. As the pace of inflation quickened, the economic recovery slowed and unemployment began rising again.

Although the administration contends the recovery will continue through next year, the Democrats have attempted to put Ford on the defensive about the economy.

In its August report, the Labor Department said consumer prices were 5.6 per cent higher than a year ago.

Food prices rose three-tenths of a per cent in August as lower meat prices helped offset increases for fruits, vegetables, dairy products and coffee.

But new increases for gasoline and clothing helped drive nonfood commodity prices up six-tenths of a per cent, about the same rate as in the previous three months but twice as much as during the first quarter of the year.

The cost of services also rose six-tenths of a per cent last month, matching increases in June and July.

Police Played 'Fence'

RALEIGH (AP) — Raleigh police disclosed today they had operated an adult book store over three months as the cover for a fencing operation.

Police Chief Robert Goodwin said that the operation resulted in the implication of 91 persons in 220 violations of whom between 30 and 40 had been arrested.

The chief said the operation resulted in the recovery of $124,000 in stolen property and $25,000 in narcotic drugs.

"We sold what is sold normally in adult book stores," said Goodwin when asked if the police had sold obscene material in the store.

When asked if he was bringing any charges against the police for peddling in pornography, Wake County Dist. Atty. Burley Mitchell said he was not.

"You apparently can sell anything you want in an adult book store," said Mitchell in commenting on the difficulty of prosecuting adult book store operators.

In its action, the board stipulated that the appraisal value given on the two parcels remain in a confidential matter not to be made public at this time.

In connection with middle school construction, board members last night signed two documents. One is the application to the State Department of Instruction for the $106,468.33 Literary Fund loan recently approved by the Pitt County Commissioners; the second is a verification of information document for release of $1,482,584.67 in Public Schools Facility Funds voted in the statewide school bond issue of 1973.

Supt. Glenn Cox informed the board that architect George Shoe is developing contracts with low bidders and that the bidders have been issued letters of intent. This action, Cox said, "makes it possible for contractors to begin ordering material for construction."

A meeting is to be held with low bidders on Wednesday to go over last minute details on specifications with a view to getting construction underway at the earliest possible moment.

Following a presentation by

Cox, Director of Elementary Education Charles Ross and Director of Secondary Education Audrey Whitehurst, school board members approved initiating a study that will lead to the accreditation of all elementary schools in the system in one block.

Accreditation will be sought first with the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., to be followed at a later date by accreditation with the State Department of Public Instruction.

Cox stated that his and the school staff's inclination for accreditation first with the Southern Association is based on the fact that association has a more structured method of accreditation.

School board members did not favor a recommendation by Cox that accreditation be approached on a school-by-school basis rather than on a system wide basis.

Typical of comments was that of Dr. James Bearden who said "our philosophy is to provide equal education to all schools, with all schools being accredited at the same time."

Member Miles Frost said he was afraid accreditation on an individual school basis would create practical problems. "If some schools were to achieve accreditation before others, and we move into redistricting, we would have problems in trying to shift students from an accredited school to a non-accredited one."

Accreditation is an approximate two year process that will include documented studies on the community; children; what the beliefs of the administration and school board about education are; what kind of people are on the school staff; facilities; curriculum; school-community interaction; and administration-coordination of the central office, staff and school board.

On renovation progress at Third Street School, Cox reported that in a recent session Accepted?

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania said today he has been told by U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that Prime Minister Ian Smith has accepted the principle of majority rule for Rhodesia within 18 months to two years.

As a consequence, Nyerere told a news conference, he is no longer "gloomy about prospects for a Rhodesian settlement."

He said after a 90-minute meeting with Kissinger that he now awaits a public statement from Smith's regime Friday.

"My mood is better," Nyerere said.

Stadium Fund Drive To Be Started This Week

The ECU Stadium Drive is being kicked off in Greenville this week and should be completely underway for this area by the first of October, according to drive director Tom Willis.

State and national drives should be under way by mid-October, Willis said. By that time Robert (Roddy) Jones, drive chairman, and ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins, vice-chairman, will have chosen state and national chairmen.

The drive to raise $2.5 million will start in the Greenville area "since the area people will be the greatest recipients of the benefits," Willis told the Daily Reflector. He noted that ECU provides "roughly one-third of the total economy of Greenville." According to a drive brochure, students alone spend $18,000,000; staff and faculty provide $8,757,500 in retail sales, $7,600,000 in bank deposits and $21,000,000 in payrolls.

Willis noted that ECU's victory over N. C. State University Saturday night will provide a great impetus toward making the drive successful.

"We are absolutely confident," said Willis. "The stadium will be built."

Several local persons have already been contacted about the possibility of large contributions.

Pledges made during the drive may be fulfilled over a five-year period.

Dr. Ray Minges, Pitt County drive chairman, has insisted that no other drive currently under way be affected by the stadium drive, according to Willis. Therefore, the stadium drive kick-off was delayed until this week to allow for other drive kick-offs.

Big Drug Bust

RALEIGH (AP) — Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten said today 124 persons had been charged and at least 68 persons arrested so far "in one of the biggest drug" bust in the history of North Carolina.

Edmisten told a news conference the 124 persons had been charged with 452 violations in 10 North Carolina counties. He said the arrests started early today and were continuing.

The attorney general said that the charges were all felonies and involved possession and sale of drugs that included heroin, cocaine, marijuana, methadone, LSD and a host of others.

It was the fourth major statewide drug bust since the state joined with local authorities in "declaring war on drug pushers in November of 1975," Edmisten said.

Counties involved in the drug raids included Wake, Durham, Franklin, Orange, Guilford, Rockingham, Alamance, Wayne, Cumberland and Chatham.

Edmisten said that as 8 p.m. 19 persons had been arrested in Wake County, 3 in Durham, 8 in Orange, 6 in Guilford and 32 in Rockingham.

The U.S. 264 by-pass in the area of Pitt Plaza handles some 18,000 vehicles per day, according to Bill Riggs, an official with the Department of Transportation's Planning and Research Office in Raleigh.

Riggs reported the traffic count on Greenville Boulevard when asked to confirm statements made by officials of a consulting firm studying the feasibility of four-laning U.S. 264 and U.S. 64, in Eastern North Carolina.

William S. Pollard Consultants have reported that the traffic count at Pitt Plaza is the heaviest in the study area, while the second heaviest traffic is on U.S. 301 North of Wilson.

Riggs said yesterday that the county north of Wilson — near the N. C. 42 intersection — is 14,000 vehicles per day, increasing to 18,000 to 20,000 within Wilson.

U.S. 64 East of Rocky Mount — in a rural area — has a count of 10,000 vehicles per day, Riggs noted. He said too, that U.S. 64 near the shopping center in Rocky Mount has a count of 27,000 vehicles per day.

Riggs pointed out, however, that the Wilson and Rocky Mount urban figures are somewhat misleading, and were not considered in the study.

The Planning and Research official explained that the 18,000 traffic count figure for Greenville is on the U.S. 264 by-pass, while the figures for urban Wilson and Rocky Mount are on existing highways...not on four-laned by-passes.

According to Riggs, by-passes are in the planning stages by Wilson and Rocky Mount and indicated that when constructed, the traffic count on the urban roads through the two cities would change.

The Powell firm projected that in the year 2000, Greenville would still be the site of the heaviest traffic.

Regional Office OKs ECHSA Designation

The Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency (ECHSA) located in Greenville has received notification from the Regional Office of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that its application for designation has been approved. Dr. George Reich, Regional Health Administrator for DHEW in Atlanta informed ECHSA of the favorable action.

A federal grant award to the ECHSA in the amount of $200,664 will allow for an initial staff of eight members to work primarily in the areas of Plans and Health Services Development.

Dr. James D. Piver of Jacksonville, vice chairman of the ECHSA made the following statement about the notification of designation by DHEW, "On behalf of the board of Directors of the ECHSA, we are pleased to accept the challenge of bring better health care to the people of Eastern North Carolina. One of our first year priorities will be an analysis of what the most significant health care needs are in our 29 county region. This analysis will become a widely circulated Health Systems Plan and will serve to direct existing and future resources to the areas of greatest need. We will involve both consumers and providers in making important policy decisions for the future."

"The Health Systems Agency will have both developmental and regulatory responsibilities in regard to the administration of all federally supported health care services such as hospitals, nursing homes and rural health clinics," Dr. Piver added.

The ECHSA will be involved with health planning for the 29 northeastern counties of North Carolina from Halifax County to Duplin County and from Onslow County to Currituck County.

EMERGENCY HOUSING

I called the Pitt County Fire Marshal this week when I became concerned about the wiring in the trailer I am renting. The Fire Marshal and the chief of the fire department in which I live condemned the trailer and my electricity was cut off. The landlord refused to have the wiring repaired, so I'm forced to move, of course. I cannot pay more than $100 a month, as I'm unemployed at the present time and have a wife and two children dependent on me. I've called all the rental agencies in town and just can't find anything. What does a family do for emergency housing in this area? V. G.

When you called Hotline Friday, we referred you to Greenville Human Relations Officer Jesse Harris. He apparently was not able to help, however as, after his first call you've heard nothing from him. The Housing Authority says you're welcome to put in an application for public housing, but the chances are slim since you live outside Greenville. The Salvation Army has told you their budget's too short this year. Social Services is going to try to "look around" but they did not seem optimistic. Hotline usually does not assist in housing searches, but in this unusual situation, we are appealing for anyone who might be able to rent you a place to live for less than $100 a month to call you at 752-1670.

You later called back to say you'd heard from Harris, that he is working on your problem, but has had trouble finding a vacant house or trailer. Perhaps our appeal will assist him and give him leads for you as well as others.

Anyone having any knowledge of resources when emergency housing is needed, please call Hotline at 752-6166.

Working Wives Generally Happy With Their Roles

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

A new survey of families with working wives indicates that superwoman, her husband and their children are generally happy with the arrangement.

A lot has been written recently about the tensions developed by women who try to juggle home, husband, children and an outside job without short-changing any of them.

Statistics from and individual responses to the survey by the Mark Clements Research firm for Family Circle magazine suggest the situation isn't as bad as it has been pictured.

The magazine asked 15,000 readers, husband as well as wives, if the wives working outside the home improved the marriage: 43.3 per cent of the wives thought it did, and 49.9 of the husbands.

Summarizing survey results in the forthcoming November issue, authors Caroline Bird and Babette Ashby wrote that more than three-fourths of the wives responding held outside jobs. Only 14 per cent were full-time homemakers, although more than half the magazine's readers are in that category.

The question of when to look for a job away from home was one of the most conclusive findings. Almost half of all the respondents, men and women of all ages, occupations, education and economic levels, agreed that the best time was when the youngest child entered elementary school.

When the economic crunch makes a second paycheck necessary in families with preschoolers, the mothers are understandably torn by the need to work while someone else minds the children. Surprisingly, the survey indicated fathers are more apt to suffer guilt feelings about this than mothers.

"My wife happier?" wrote one father. "Yes. Am I happier? It's a compromise. Having a happier wife is something I want, but I regret her need to work to earn money to provide something I feel I should provide."

At least one wife doesn't let her job separate her from her four-year-old. She takes the child along on her door-to-door sales route, and uses her earnings for movie admissions "... the ice-cream parlor, the fun things that life is all about." This is no permanent arrangement. She hopes to return to school a year from now to take a nursing degree because the world today "... is too uncertain to face unprepared."

Some women wrote of the emotional strain of full-time mothering. Another said she chose outside work because "All my friends and neighbors that I cared to associate with worked."

For many years, working wives were urged to save their earnings so the family would not be accustomed to living beyond its means when children began arriving. That view is changing.

Nearly 75 per cent of the wives said their pay becomes part of the general family budget. Given freedom to choose, 57 per cent said they would continue this pattern, but 37 per cent said they would rather earmark it for special family projects. Five per cent said they would prefer to keep their earnings for personal use; 10 per cent of the husbands with white-collar jobs approved, but only nine per cent of the blue-collar husbands.

Ms. Bird and Ms. Ashby found close agreement on one question: 63 per cent of the working wives and 59 per cent of their husbands felt their sex life was unaffected; 16 per cent of the wives and 13 per cent of the husbands agreed that it was better, although a fairly universal finding indicated that it was less frequent.

Househusbandry appears to be making some headway, principally because bad feelings are generated when housework is not shared. With some families, it's more a question of sharing attitudes than actual chores; some wrote that they had begun to put happiness ahead of neat closets, doing only necessary housework.

The survey showed the most shared chores were housecleaning, shopping and cooking, with child care a close fourth. The least popular was ironing. Only nine per cent of the wives said their husbands helped, but 11 per cent of the men claimed they did.

Asked if working hurt or helped their marriages, half the working wives chose the helped category, and so did 43 per cent of their husbands.

What of the next generation, they were asked. Only nine per cent of working mothers and 12 per cent of the husbands said they would want their daughters to become full-time homemakers.

FROM ECUADOR—Potato cakes and cheese are topped with fried eggs and peanut sauce and garnished with shredded lettuce.

Ecuadorean Main Dish Is Meatless

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

An interesting main dish comes from Ecuador. It's called Llapingacho (pronounced Yapingacho) and consists of potato cakes, cheese, fried eggs, peanut sauce and a garnish of lettuce.

When I called the Ecuadorean Consulate General in New York to check on the spelling of Llapingacho, he told me that the word is from Quechua (pronounced Quechwa), the language of the Incas. He said, too, that although Llapingacho is especially popular with the Indians of the Andean valleys, it is a truly national Ecuadorean dish.

Although a recipe for Llapingacho was published in a U.S. cookbook over 50 years ago, the dish is not well known here. When I discovered that a New York restaurant serves Llapingacho, a friend and I tasted it there several times; it varied in execution, ranging from good to poor. We decided to develop our own version of the dish and the recipe follows.

LLAPINGACHO, U.S.A.
Potato Cakes
Peanut Sauce, recipe follows

8 slices Munster or Mozzarella cheese, cut into 2½-inch rounds
Steam-fried Eggs, recipe follows
Shredded Iceberg lettuce, for garnish

Potato Cakes: Pare 1¼ pounds (4 medium) potatoes and cut into 1-inch cubes. In a heavy medium saucepan bring the potatoes to a boil with ¼ cup water and ½ teaspoon salt; boil gently, covered, until tender — about 15 minutes; drain off any tiny amount of water. Mash smooth with 2 tablespoons butter; cool; makes about 2 cups. Using about ¼ cup for each, form into eight 3-inch-wide cakes. Coat with about 2 tablespoons flour. Set aside.

Make the Peanut Sauce and keep hot as directed.
Fry the Potato Cakes: In a heavy 10-inch skillet heat 2 tablespoons butter; add 4 of the Potato Cakes; brown on both sides. Remove to a heatproof platter in a warm oven. Heat 2 tablespoons more butter and fry remaining Potato Cakes the same way; add to the platter in the oven.

Top each of the Potato Cakes jumped up and down and with a slice of the cheese. Continue keeping warm while you steam-fry the eggs.

Top each of the Potato Cakes with an egg as directed in Steam-fried Eggs recipe and spoon a little of the Peanut Sauce over each; pass remaining lettuce.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My name is Murray Bombeck and I'm a guest columnist.

I'm a 3½ month old Yorkshire Terrier.

There are a lot of dogs who are wondering whether they want to own a person. They like people. They're fun to be around, but are they worth all the fuss and bother.

I felt the same way when a few months ago I observed this couple. Their dog (another Yorkshire) had just been killed and frankly, they were a psychological mess. During the interview, they kept calling me "Harry" (the deceased dog's name) and the woman kept swooping me off the floor and crying in my fur. They would take a lot of training.

First nights are generally a disaster. At 11 o'clock at night just when things are beginning to cook, they turn off the lights and go to bed. (I had been warned by other person owners that this would happen.) I tried to keep them on their feet all night but things like this happen. Old habits are hard to break.

Another thing you have to know about people is that you have to keep them busy or they drive you crazy. Every time I ate a houseplant, they were there. When I chewed on shoes, they were there. They were smothering me. Once when I went into the white living room to go to the bathroom, she came in, swooped me up, ran around hysterically finding a key to the platter in a warm oven. Heat 2 back door, opened it up and heaved me out onto the grass.

You cannot imagine what she turned her on.

When I "performed" she clapped her hands while summoning three other people from the house to observe. I felt like a fool.

The hardest part of training a person, however, is discipline. You have to be firm with people or they'll run all over you. When they want to play by grabbing your nose, at first you just walk off, but when they pursue it, you just sink your teeth into their hands. They may look shocked and hurt at first, but you'll eventually have a person you don't have to be ashamed to take places.

And lastly, be careful the first time you take them out in public. They wander away from you. I don't recommend a leash, but leave them in the car a few times and they'll shape up.

Everything you've heard about people is true. They're messy. They're temperamental and they're hard to train.

But in the evening when you're tired and they scratch behind your ears... or when you're beat from the sun and they let you play in the garden hose... or when you're sick, they put you on the sofa... they're worth it. People make great pets.

Their 'Study Project' Was X-Rated Movie

DALLAS (AP) — It was all for education and, anyway, as one of the members of the East Dallas Garden and Talk Society put it, "It was better than sitting around and crotcheting."

That's how a group of over-70 senior citizen ladies decided to go to an X-rated movie for their "study project" of the week.

The movie was "Alice in Wonderland," which resembles the classic fairy tale only in title. The rest of the movie is not the sort of thing you talk about with grandma.

"It was really something deciding what we were going to see," said 76-year-old Tassie Coleman. "We finally decided on the new version of 'Alice in Wonderland.' ... We really wanted to see something called 'Misty Beethoven,' but it was playing at a theater near Southern Methodist University. We didn't think that would be right for ladies our age. We didn't

As the eight women, accompanied by a reporter, filed into the theater, sneers came from young persons sitting by the aisle.

"I don't think those grandmas know what they've walked into," said one loudly.

"I know one thing," Mrs. Crenshaw snapped, turning to the young man. "When I was your age, I had a lot more manners than to talk about people loud enough for them to hear me."

The first of the group to walk out was a 74-year-old who said the pornographic musical was not anything like her favorite Rodgers and Hammerstein plays.

About 40 minutes later, two others left. One was embarrassed; the other said she was bored.

Two others followed minutes later, commenting about the country going to hell with such movies.

After the movie, Mrs. Crenshaw said it had been some experience: "You think because we're old ladies, we don't know anything. Well, we came here to study something and we studied it. I don't think we will come again."

The study by Market Facts, Inc., also showed that students living on campus are more apt to hold views at both ends of the political spectrum than those living off campus. Eighty-four per cent of the students polled said they plan to vote in November's national election.

The survey was co-sponsored by Publishers Clearing House and The National Association of College Stores for Student Value Pack.

Reconsider, Don't Punish Children

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently granted a divorce after being married for 30 years. I had a lot of suspicions about my wife, but I had only a second grade education and was pretty dumb then. I didn't begin to add things up until after she had two children who couldn't possibly have been mine. Even so, I was always a good father to them, and they never had any idea they were illegitimate.

My question: I'm making out my will and have brothers and sisters who could sure use some money. I own my own home plus some stocks and savings, and I don't see why I should leave anything to my illegitimate children, do you? Who should be punished?

A PROBLEM OUT EAST

DEAR PROBLEM: Any children born during your marriage are legally your children. You say you've been a "good father," and I believe you. But how can you write off all the years during which they grew up loving you and being loved in return?

To leave them nothing would be punishing them for the "sins" of their mother. Unfair. Please reconsider.

DEAR ABBY: I graduated from high school last June and received some very nice gifts from friends and relatives.

Since I've had a very busy summer and hate to write letters, I decided to telephone all those who sent me gifts to thank them personally. I even called long-distance to thank those who live out of town, and I intend to pay for the calls myself.

My parents aren't satisfied. They think a written thank-you note is necessary. I think a telephone call is enough. What do you think?

PHONED MY THANKS

DEAR PHONED: Phoning one's thanks strikes me as the lazy man's way. It's adequate; but those who do it right write!

DEAR ABBY: I received an invitation to a golden wedding anniversary party. I am only an acquaintance, not a dear friend or relative, but I was told by a relative of the celebrating couple to bring money rather than a gift because the golden wedding couple are having a money tree. With the money collected, they plan to take a cruise. I asked how much I would be expected to contribute and was told, "At least a dollar for every year the couple have been married."

Abby, that's a minimum of $50—as much as I gave my own niece for a wedding present!

What do you think?

PASADENA READER

DEAR PASADENA: I think you should give whatever you feel is appropriate and no more.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Tuna Is A Yearly Favorite

By TOM HOGE

AP Newfeatures Writer

Conservationists and marine biologists warn that the world stock of tuna is dwindling, which is sad news since this tasty and relatively inexpensive fish is nutritious and also provides healthy fare for those with cholesterol or weight problems.

The International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas reported that the total catch for 1974 in both the Atlantic and Mediterranean had declined to 12,000 tons in 1973. Which is quite a drop when you consider the fact that they caught 40,000 tons in those same waters ten years earlier.

Plenty of the fish are still caught in the Pacific, of course.

Tuna, a member of the mackerel family, is found in all but the coldest waters of the world, says a report by National Geographic Society. It is the basis of one of the world's oldest and largest fishing industries.

The versatile fish became known in the United States more than 70 years ago when the California sardine, a mainstay of many American dinner tables, began to disappear from the waters off our West Coast. Searching for a replacement, one canner turned to tuna and began turning them out in quantity in his Los Angeles plant.

So great is the demand today that fishing boats from more than 40 nations go after tuna. More than two thirds of the catch is hauled in by American and Japanese fishermen.

The chief varieties of tuna caught commercially range from skipjack, weighing up to 40 pounds; albacore, which runs about 80 pounds; the yellowfin, which can weigh up to 400 pounds, to the bluefin, which sometimes tips the scales at an awesome 1,500 pounds.

Alarmed over the dwindling supply, several countries, including the United States, subscribe to international agreements limiting the number and the size of the fish to be caught. But, unfortunately, many nations do not observe such limits.

Served the year round, tuna is appetizing in both summer salads and cold weather casseroles and has long been a favorite sandwich filling. For a change, try this formula for a summer hearty salad.

- 4 scallions
- 2-3rds cup mayonnaise
- 2 teaspoons curry powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 can (4 ounces) pimiento, diced
- 1 cup sliced celery
- 2 cans (12 ounces each) whole kernel corn, drained
- 2 cans (9½ ounces each) tuna in vegetable oil
- Slice scallions, white and green parts, into ¼-inch pieces. Blend together mayonnaise, curry powder, salt and vinegar. Add scallions, pimiento, celery, and corn and tuna, both well drained. Toss to mix well. Chill and serve in a 1½-quart bowl. Garnish with salad greens if desired. Serves 6. Good with chilled chablis.

HARD WATER

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — A water hardness survey in a Purdue University study on personal grooming showed families preferred softened water because it improved the softness and smoothness of skin, gave easier, closer shaves and made hair easier to rinse, softer and more manageable. The study showed softened water also used smaller amounts of bath products such as soap, shaving cream, shampoo and bubble bath.

New Wisconsin Park Named For General's Kin

SUN PRAIRIE, Wis. (AP) —

As part of the bicentennial celebration, a new park here has been named for Tabitha Burgoyne Bird, daughter of a nephew of "Gentleman Johnny" Burgoyne, British general defeated at Saratoga in the Revolution.

One of her great-great-granddaughters, Caroline Bird, New York author, spoke at the dedication ceremonies.

The nephew, Dr. Augustus Horatio Burgoyne, a medical officer with the invading British, was captured at the Battle of Bennington in 1777 and married Annie Rice, one of the local women who fed the prisoners there.

Tabitha, one of their four daughters, married Zenas Bird of Connecticut and after his death moved with several of her sons from Munsville, N.Y., to Wisconsin.

They founded and named this community and Tabitha is buried here. Some of her sons also helped found Madison and one was the contractor on construction of the first territorial capitol. Eleven of her 12 children lived to adulthood.

Tractor-Pulling: You've Gotta See Who's Better

BILL ROCKEFELLER of Phelps, N. Y., rides his John Deere 4010 Super Stock, billed as the best Super Stock tractor in New York State. Many farmers have as much as $100,000 in equipment to compete in "Tractor Pulls". (UPI Photo)

By RONALD P. GALLAGHER PHELPS, N.Y. (UPI) — A farm tractor is, to most folks, a rattling, sort of plodding machine that chugs slowly through farm fields or along back roads during the spring, summer and fall. Not quite in keeping with that image is the scream of twin, super-charged power plants banging out several hundred horsepower as their owner slams through the gears and hopes his tractor can drag tons of dead weight farther than the next guy's machine.

None the less, farmers across the country have dropped as much as $100,000 each into speed equipment, tires and tractor-trailer rigs to haul their machines — all for the fun, excitement and sometimes prize money at events called "tractor pulls."

Bill Rockefeller, a grain farmer in this upstate New York community, and Steve Cole, who edits the New York Tractor Pullers Association magazine, "Empire State Pulling," say two farmers must have met in a field one day and got to bragging about whose tractor could do the most. That, they figure, is how tractor pulling was born.

"If there's more than one of anything," says Cole, "you gotta see who's better."

The National Tractor Pullers' Association, based in Upper Sandusky, O., gears its sanctioned competitions to farmers' needs. No competition is scheduled in during spring planting season or fall harvest. A few indoor and West Coast events are run in winter.

In tractor pulling, it's not grain or hog feed that is hauled. It is 25 to 30 tons of dead weight, set atop a modified semi trailer.

A mechanism on the trailer shifts the weight forward as the tractors move out, eventually bringing it all to rest just behind the tractor and directly over a ski-type skid on the front

If they are lucky, they can win enough to pay for the tires and a few other parts. Tires, with rims, run $3,000 a pair. Rockefeller sticks mostly to in-state competition. He goes to two or three pulls a week. Others, like Shaul, run in national meets, including the "Indy Super Pull" held in January at the Indiana State Fairgrounds Coliseum and sponsored by the NTPA. Few pullers can afford to hire mechanics. Most do all the work on their machines themselves. "It's a hobby, more or less," says Rockefeller. "It's like having a cottage on the lake."

Sect Is Banned By Argentina

By ALFONSO CHARDY Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A recent military government order banning activities of the Jehovah's Witnesses religious sect in Argentina follows a surge of terrorist attacks in the last few months against Jews and Roman Catholic priests.

President Jorge Videla, a 51-year-old army general who led a bloodless coup that toppled Isabel Peron last March, signed the decree banning the Jehovah's Witnesses, the first ban of a religious group in Argentina since national independence in 1810.

Police closed the sect's headquarters in Buenos Aires and all its temples in the country. The actions followed recent arrests of sect members and expulsions of sect children in several schools.

The reason given by the government for the ban was that the sect's activities went against the principles of nationhood, because members refuse to join the army, salute the flag or sing the national anthem.

About 120 sect members have been reported arrested this year and are serving 3½-year terms in military prisons for refusing to enter the army, according to sect officials.

The sect president for Argentina, Charles Eisenhower of Sugarloaf, Pa., said he understood the ban was instigated by what he called "ultrarightist Catholic elements close to the government who have no religious tolerance."

"Jehovah's Witnesses have been in Argentina for more than 20 years," Eisenhower said in an interview. "So the ban is obviously instigated by a sector that doesn't like us."

He said some military officials told him the ban was imposed because the government feared the sect may have been infiltrated by leftist guerrillas or attracted men who did not want to enter the army.

There has been no violence against Jehovah's Witnesses after the ban, but Eisenhower said that last August a bomb exploded at a sect temple in Medanos, 300 miles to the south, causing damage but no victims.

A sect spokesman explained that Jehovah's Witnesses do not recognize any governmental authority "because we only worship God." The sect is a form of fundamentalist Christianity, with three million members in the world, 35,000 of them in Argentina. There are 10 American preachers here.

The Jehovah's Witnesses have had difficulties in a number of African countries because of their refusal to give allegiance to governing parties or make patriotic gestures. But the sect has reportedly been subjected to harsh persecution in Malawi, where it is banned as an "unlawful society."

Earlier this year members of the sect claimed that 5,000 Witnesses were being held in prisons and prison camps in Malawi, victims of a campaign of beating, rape and torture for refusing to join President Kamuzu Banda's Malawi Congress party.

Sorghum Lost To Big Rains

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Periods of excessive rain can cause extensive damage to maturing sorghum in Texas, an agronomist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service says.

"Excessive rain on grain sorghum during its maturation period can cause loss of test weight and decreased yields," says Dr. John Bremer. "The closer the grain is to harvest when the rain occurs, the greater the damage."

It Won't Be By Single Plane

Could a Soviet MIG25 sneak through U. S. air defenses the way one did in landing in Japan recently?

Secretary of Defense Donald H. Rumsfeld said it could. " . . . The United States does not have extensive air defense capabilities and has not had for some years," Rumsfeld said. "That's the kind of thing that can happen," he said of the Japan incident. "A single plane can in fact from time to time do that."

The knowledge that a potential enemy plane can penetrate our defenses raises concern about our safety in the event of a sneak war attack.

Yet, the matter is not all that important when we consider that if an all-out nuclear attack were launched it would probably be missiles which would deliver the nuclear devices — not planes.

If a potential enemy were to decide to launch an attack using conventional bombs, one plane would do comparatively small damage. It would take a vast force of bombers to deliver any sort of telling blow in the United States.

If any enemy ever decides to launch a Pearl Harbor-like attack in the future it won't be a single plane that will do it. More than likely it will be missiles that first announce that we are under attack.

Seven Earn Semifinalist Honors

Seven of our Pitt County High school seniors were announced as semifinalists in the 1977 National Merit Scholarship competition last week.

The seven are among the approximately 15,000 in the nation who will go on to compete for 3,850 merit scholarships which will be awarded next year.

The seven are: Timothy Caspar, Lawrence Boyette, Jane Farley, Sudie Jenkins, Bobby Kim and Timothy McMillan of Rose High and Guyla Corbett of Ayden-Grifton.

To make the semi-finalist round in National Merit competition is quite an honor and we congratulate these young people.

Reliving A Painful Year

Reading Leon Jaworski's just-published book is like licking an aching tooth. It hurts, but you can't stop. In this lawyer's version of the Watergate year, it all comes painfully back.

Jaworski is the tough old Texas turkey who served as Special Prosecutor for the Watergate trials. He stepped into the office late in October, 1973, across the bloody floor of the Saturday Night Massacre; he served for 12 months in one of the most demanding and dramatic assignments ever given a lawyer. In "The Right and the Power," he tells his story.

Some jaded critics may be inclined to dismiss Jaworski's work as merely one more Watergate book. Of these, we have a groaning shelf full. I found his account rewarding partly because the law is my beat, but also because Jaworski shared an agonizing experience that saddened many others. He came to Washington with an illusion of Richard Nixon's innocence; and he stayed to see that illusion cruelly shattered.

Jaworski's deflowering came on a morning in December, 1973, when he listened for the first time to the famous tape of Nixon's conversation with John Dean and Robert Haldeman the preceding March 21. The experience left him badly shaken. In the privacy of his office, he could not escape a stunning conclusion: "The President of the United States had without doubt engaged in highly improper practices, in what appeared to be criminal practices."

"I had not come to Washington expecting this. I had expected to find all sorts of wrongdoing by his aides, conduct unbecoming and even criminal, but it had never occurred to me that the President was in the driver's seat . . . Listening to him scheme, knowing he was the President of the United States, I felt as if my heart was shriveling inside of me."

Jaworski was compelled by the nature of his job to sit on this damning evidence. Seven months would elapse before the public would have access, not to the tapes themselves, but to reasonably accurate transcripts of the tapes. Even the most accurate transcript, he suggests, cannot adequately convey the shocking contrast between the public Nixon, projecting a polished image, and the private Nixon, profanely plotting with his aides.

"Listening and relisting to the tapes, I was amazed at the inordinate amount of time they consumed. I often wondered how Nixon was able to concentrate even briefly on the matters of state that begged for his attention. There he was in the Oval Office, day after day, night after night, scheming, plotting, and finally sacrificing his staff and others, one by one, so as to save himself. It was a sordid, frightening drama."

Jaworski's task was to coordinate the prosecution of the Watergate defendants collectively. Some of them, notably the remorseful Egil Krogh, won his sympathy; most of the others earned only his disdain. Jaworski is a lawyer's lawyer, a former president of the American Bar. What hurt especially was that so many of the defendants also were lawyers, officers of the courts, sworn to uphold the law. He had small pity for them.

Toward the end of his stay, Jaworski ran into harsh criticism on two counts — that he had not moved swiftly, after Nixon's August resignation, to obtain an indictment against the former president; and that he had not challenged Gerald Ford's September pardon. His lawyer's explanation makes sense. He was convinced that Nixon could not possibly have obtained a fair trial until months or years had elapsed; and he was satisfied, after examining the precedents, that Ford's pardon was fully within the presidential power.

Of the writing of Watergate books, we probably will have (Continued on page 5)

Fun On Carter Train

By JULES LOH
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — It's anybody's guess how many votes Jimmy Carter's whistle-stop tour got him, but one thing was clear: the first day of the long train trip was fun. The crowds were lively, the bands lusty and the scenery from the train window among the loveliest America has to offer.

And if it was the image of a candidate in touch with the people that Carter hoped to project Monday — and it was — the train ride surely had that folksy effect.

At Newark, N.J., I.Z. Mischel entertained with kazoo and police whistle; at Trenton, a crowd of iron workers at track-side, under a brilliant morning sun, clapped spiritedly to endless choruses of "Happy Days Are Here Again"; at Overbrook, Pa., beside an antique railroad station of another era, Carter spoke from the rear platform of the train; at Harrisburg, Pa., high school bands played, street vendors sold balloons and confetti fluttered from office windows.

From town to town on the 435-mile trip from the Hudson Valley to the Allegheny's heights, train passengers were treated to vistas of tidy Pennsylvania Dutch farms, bulging silos, meadowlarks darting over late corn, timbered mountains showing a first flush of autumn color.

"I'm enjoying this," Jimmy Carter said, strolling through all 13 cars of the train to chat with guests and reporters. He said he might even try whistle-stopping again, perhaps in California.

"I've always loved trains," he said. "I grew up on the railroad tracks myself." He said campaigning by train rather than airplane gave him "a much more human personal kind of relationship with the voters, which I like very much."

As it turned out, Overbrook was the only place Carter was (Continued on page 5)

40 Years Ago Today

Sept. 21, 1936
Government militiamen retreated today before a relentless charge of Moorish legionnaires on Maqueda, vital highway junction 40 miles from Madrid. Thousands of other government soldiers, meanwhile, organized into bombing squads, surrounded the shell-leveled alcazar in Toledo for a decisive assault on the insurgents besieged in the ruins of the fortified palace.

The well-drilled Moors drove forward nearly to Maqueda behind a shield of machine-gun bullets which left bodies of government troops in their path.

With Haile Selassie flying to Geneva in an attempt to protect the rights of his lost kingdom, a League of Nations credentials committee met today to decide whether Ethiopia still is entitled to sit on the league assembly.

The assembly itself adjourned to await the decisions of the committee, which most observers believed would be a majority vote against seating the Ethiopians on the ground Selassie no longer is a reigning sovereign. —Barbara Mathews

Our Adults Want To Learn

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The idea of lifelong learning is catching on in North Carolina.

People appear to be moving away from the concept of education as something you do in a formal setting during a prescribed period of time, then end it. For years, educational leaders have envisioned lifelong learning as the trend for the future, and have planned in that direction.

Such an awareness is one of the strong supporting blocks underneath the state's Community College System.

Now, an in-depth survey in the state's most populous county has pointed out the strength and direction of the adult-learning trend: over 70 per cent of those surveyed in Mecklenburg County (Charlotte) said they wanted to learn more about some subject.

And not necessarily something related to job improvement — most just want to learn for the sake of learning something new.

Future Plans
Carried out by Central Piedmont Community

College, the survey of 1,341 adults broadly representative of the community was modeled after a national survey; the purpose is to help in planning future programs and policies.

Community College officials believe the results can be rather largely applied to all of North Carolina — especially the key finding of such large numbers of people who want to go back to school.

The survey went far beyond that simple finding, however, getting into kinds of subjects wanted, best times for classes, how much people will pay for adult learning opportunities, even some significant differences between the races regarding learning.

While about the same numbers of either race expressed an interest in continued education, more whites suggested subjects involving recreation or personal interests. More than twice as many blacks as whites consider "desire to reach a personal goal" (a degree or job skill) as most important reason for wanting more education. Blacks also (again twice as strongly as whites) gave as a prime reason for more learning the achievement of social goals such as understanding community problems, better citizenship, solving social problems.

Further, blacks displayed a similar pattern with respect to the importance of education in "complying with formal requirements."

All of these factors led researchers to conclude, "It appears that blacks view education clearly as a means for achieving fuller and more meaningful participation in society."

Individual Needs
Most significant finding in reasons for learning, however, was the conclusion that there are as many reasons as there are people interested and subjects available.

Thus, the schools need to come to grips with the most important problem of tailoring education to individual needs.

Among subjects which adults want to learn, hobbies lead the list: pottery, weaving and woodworking captured the interest of 34 per cent; gardening and investments were next highest at 29 per cent each; followed closely by business skills such as typing, accounting, and bookkeeping; then sewing and cooking next. At the low end were citizenship, medicine, physical sciences, biological sciences, occult sciences, social sciences, architecture, and engineering.

Still, overall, vocational subjects as a group were the most frequently mentioned (38 per cent), even though most respondents said they are most interested in learning for the sake of knowledge primarily, and only secondarily in improving job skills.

Most adults choose classes taught a couple of evenings each week as the best time for learning, and most do not mind the prospect of spending up to two years to master a new subject area.

What are the barriers to lifelong learning? Time, cost, and pressures of home and job were most often mentioned.

THE INSIDE REPORT

That Fuzzy Carter Image

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
CATASAUQUA BOROUGH: Pa.—The danger to Jimmy Carter of being a relatively unknown newcomer in big-time politics was on ruthless display here in the Appalachian foothills among voters who usually reflect the sentiments of Pennsylvania and the nation in presidential elections.

With the help of interviewers from the talented stable of Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research, we sampled 54 registered voters here, four miles northeast of Allentown, and found a sharp disparity in the fact that only 22 of our 30 registered Democrats are now planning to vote for Carter.

That contrasted dramatically with the fact that President Ford, although no shining hero to Catasauqua Republicans, was favored by 23 voters even though our sample included only 21 registered Republicans.

The remaining 9 voters split this way: 5 undecided, 2 for Eugene McCarthy, and 2 who said they would not vote under any circumstance.

The fact that Carter appears to be holding the allegiance today of only two-thirds the full complement of Democratic voters in this lower middle-income borough was in sharp contrast not only to Mr. Ford's apparent grip on Republicans but also to Democratic Rep. William Green's margin over Republican Rep. John Heinz in their U.S. Senate battle.

Thus, Green's edge over Heinz exactly corresponds to our Democrat-Republican ratio. This indicates that the tug of party allegiance is working for Billy Green but not—at least yet—for Jimmy Carter, still perceived as remote and somewhat questionable as presidential material.

The reason for this had very little to do with Gerald R. Ford. Indeed, except for the unsurprising faint praise of Mr. Ford as "honest" and "sincere," the most flattering words we heard about the President came from the middle-aged wife of an optical manager. Asked what she liked about Jerry Ford, she said: "I like to hear him talk."

But the President has picked up important sympathy since the Republican convention last month from the Carter attack on the "Nixon-Ford administration." We found here, as we had discovered in Wheeling, Ill., several weeks ago, that Republicans and Democrats alike reject this Carter attempt to saddle Mr. Ford with the sins of Richard M. Nixon.

To the question whether Mr. Ford should be "judged" by the eight-year Nixon-Ford presidency, or just by Mr. Ford's own two years, our voters chose the latter by almost 90 per cent.

Likewise, Mr. Ford's highly-publicized vetoes of spending bills sent to him by the Democratic Congress are scarcely hurting him here, where by a solid margin they were labelled "necessary to control wasteful spending" rather than killing "important legislation good for the country."

But all this was secondary compared to the wide-eyed questioning here of Carter as a prospective President. A middle-aged housewife and lifelong Democrat, who said she never fails to cast her ballot, was asked why she chose maverick Democrat Gene McCarthy over Carter. "I don't trust Carter," she said. "He reminds me of a phony." She used the same word "phony" when asked to spell out what she disliked about Carter.

Likewise, a young millwright, who told us the No. 1 problem in the country today is "moral decline," plans to vote for Carter even though "he tries to play both sides and no one knows which way he is going to end up going."

That criticism, which has dogged Carter ever since he began campaigning in the presidential primaries, showed up graphically when we asked voters to agree or disagree with the statement: "It seems like Jimmy Carter is always changing his positions." Fifty per cent agree, 35 per cent disagree (with the balance undecided).

Strength For Today

A SACRED RELIC
One of the most precious of ancient relics is the Chalice of Antioch. It was used in the Christian church in that city and is over 1800 years old. No doubt certain of those who partook of Communion from that chalice were the children of people who had actually seen Jesus in the flesh. The ministry of our Lord had taken place in the lifetime of the generation immediately preceding that of the oldest members of the congregation.

Looking at this sacred relic we realize that it was used by men and women on whose faces was still the flush of the excitement and the expectancy which characterized the early Christian church.

What has happened to us today that we have lost that sense of enthusiasm which men and women had during the century following our Lord's resurrection? Religion for these believers was a matter of hope and enthusiasm which in many parts of Christendom has disappeared today. As we look at the Chalice of Antioch we ask, "What has happened, and why?" —by Elisha Douglass

Talk Of Candidates Forgotten

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Some months ago there was a lot of politic talk about reducing the role and rule of Washington in our lives, but neither of the major presidential candidates seems to have remembered.

That is the impression one gets in listening to the candidates discuss how they will use the powers of the central government to make jobs, lower prices, generate additional revenue and produce abundance.

The problem with such promises is that the abilities of Washington to produce any of these, or certainly all of them together, seems to be decidedly limited. In contrast, it can and often does, create high taxes and prices and borrowing costs.

Washington can set the economic tone, the mood of hope, resignation or despair. It can generate the confidence that people need in order to go out and invest their ideas and funds. And it can through its tax policies provide various financial spurs.

But the jobs, the revenues and the general abundance are really the product of the people, and they can't be blamed if they are irritated by the egocentric insinuation that the good life is a government product.

Such notions debase the enormous productivity of the American people, given the proper economic atmosphere, a productivity that has been demonstrated to a degree achieved by no other people in history.

On the positive side, most of Carter's strength was summed up in unspecific generalities: "He would do something about unemployment"; "He is a fresh face"; "The Republicans have been in long enough." Such generalities suggest that Carter is not coming through loud and clear even in Pennsylvania where his all-out primary campaign virtually wrapped up his nomination. Here in Catawauqua, which precisely mirrored national trends in both 1968 and 1972, the pervasive uncertainty about Jimmy Carter is creating a danger he must shake in the debates—or risk falling far short of exploiting Republican weakness.

able to use the refurbished observation car, vintage 1953, as a podium. He did, however, as the train pulled out of stations, wave from the observation car and call out "goodbye everybody, ya'll help me."

For the most part, he spoke from platforms hastily built at tracksides, at safe places for crowds to gather. At Altoona, Pa., carpenters were still on the platform driving nails as the train arrived.

At every stop on the route, Carter invoked the name of Harry Truman, who made whistling a political byword. At Johnstown, Pa., he was rewarded with a plaque observing that Truman had stopped at the very same station on Oct. 25, 1948.

"What did you think of Harry Truman?" he asked every crowd. And every crowd answered with hurrahs. "And Franklin Roosevelt and Lyndon Johnson and John Kennedy?" he called gleefully. "What did you think of them?" More cheers.

"And what did you think of Harding and Coolidge and Hoover and — Richard Nixon," he concluded, unveiled mischief in his voice.

The response was predictable.

no end. At least twenty volumes have appeared already, and memoirs are yet to come from General Al Halg and of course from Nixon himself. Jaworski's book makes a significant contribution to this historian's collection. As Special Prosecutor, he was chiefly responsible for the criminal side of the story. He alone had "the right and the power" to put the defendants in the dock. PEANUT SAUCE

In a 1-pint measure dissolve 1 bouillon cube in 1 cup boiling water; whisk in ¼ cup creamy peanut butter, 1 teaspoon tomato paste, ½ teaspoon nutmeg and cayenne pepper to taste. In the top of a double boiler over direct heat, melt 1 tablespoon butter; add 1 tablespoon minced onion, 2 tablespoons minced celery and a tiny clove of garlic (minced); cook gently over direct heat, stirring constantly, for several minutes; stir in the bouillon mixture and cook over moderately low heat until thickened and boiling. Fill the bottom of the double boiler with hot water and place the sauce over it; keep hot, stirring occasionally, over low heat. Makes about 1½ cups. If sauce is thicker than you like, add a little bouillon.

STEAM-FRIED EGGS

In a 10-inch skillet over low heat melt 2 tablespoons butter. Crack each of 4 eggs into 4 custard cups. When there are tiny bubbles in the melted butter, add the eggs; let the edges of the eggs set. Sprinkle with ½ tablespoons hot water. Cover tightly and continue cooking over low heat until eggs are done as much as you like. Top 4 of the Potato Cakes in the oven with the eggs; steam-fry 4 more eggs in the same fashion and arrange over remaining Potato Cakes.

By JIM KLAHN
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — Outside there is nothing but dull, gray clouds. Somewhere below is Runway 32M at Moses Lake in eastern Washington.

Inside, I struggle to see the ground from the cockpit of the Boeing 707. With only student instrument pilot skills, I angle for where the ground must be, the jet moving at 160 miles an hour.

Suddenly, a runway light. The four of us in the cockpit shout together: "There it is, there it is."

A close call? A scene from "Airport 1976"? No, just Boeing training pilots exhibiting their newest toy: a flight simulator.

We never move out of the big tin building in south Seattle. But visual aids make it seem like the jet is plummeting through the air at Seattle, Moses Lake or Yakima, Wash.

Soon student pilots will land at airports in Tehran, London, Bangkok "or anywhere else you want to go," says Boeing test pilot Bill Allsopp.

The windows in the cockpit actually look into large television screens on which images are fed by computer.

"The computer has the information stored to actually make you 'fly' along," said Skip Wahlin, public relations man for General Electric, which developed the system at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Systems to simulate flight by instrument are far from new. Old types had a pilot closed into a box mounted on springs and hinges with a number of attendants pulling ropes and pushing levers to move it around, simulating flight. The student would, hopefully, answer different movements with correct responses.

But putting the system in perspective — combining instrument functions inside the cockpit with realistic visual references through the windows — has been harder to accomplish. Different systems have been developed, but each had problems.

One system said Allsopp, used film, but before long the film developed streaks. "All a pilot had to do was line up the streaks and he was on final approach (to the airport)," he said. "So the pilot flew the simulator by false cues that don't exist in the real world."

Although the view through the 707's windows revealed a picture more like a painting with straight lines than a photograph, the addition of clouds, sun and darkness added realism to the picture.

"There is a certain cartoonish aspect about the scene, but we can control that with weather," said Allsopp. "It gets very realistic when you're in there flying it. I can scare hell out of a pilot."

Capt. A. L. Jones, a Boeing officer, said the goal is to completely train a pilot on the flight simulator, requiring only a short check ride before he is sent off to fly passengers.

He said advantages include the ability to "go into performance edges without risk," savings in money and fuel, reduction in noise and fuel pollution and a controlled environment for better demonstration and student retention. It costs $1,400 an hour to train in a Boeing 727; $280 in the $3 million simulator.

No Place For Pet Pig In A Commercial Area

By LARRY McDERMOTT
Associated Press Writer
VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — The Circuit Court jury turned sour on "Sweet Lips," a 240-pound pet pig. His master was fined $10 for keeping a farm animal in a resort-commercial area.

"Sweet Lips," told of the verdict Monday by owner Drewry Little, smacked his jowls and grunted.

"He doesn't agree with the jury," Little said. "And I don't, either. Anybody can see he's harmless and doesn't bother anyone."

But the loss of this court fight over the pig that Little nursed from infancy doesn't mean the battle has ended. The judge agreed to hear arguments Friday on a defense motion to set aside the verdict.

"If that fails, then we'll go right on up to the Supreme Court in Richmond," the 55-year-old Little said. "I want justice, and justice means I can keep this pig as a pet like other people in my area keep dogs and cats."

Little once kept the pig inside his home, located about 60 feet from the restaurant and marina he operates. He said "Sweet Lips" gets the same treatment as other household pets — regular baths, a sprinkling of cologne and lots of love.

Monday's trial was an appeal of a lower court conviction which resulted in a $25 fine in June.

"I walk him a half mile every evening. He's clean and quiet. Pigs are smarter than most dogs or horses," Little told the three-woman, two-man jury. "I've gotten so attached to this pig, I love him dearly, and nobody is going to kill him."

The jury returned its verdict after 48 minutes of deliberation.

Meanwhile, "Sweet Lips" may be headed for a meat-packing company, but not the dinner table.

"I've got an offer from a well-known company, but I won't give the name. They've promised he will get the very best care and will be used only for show," Little said.

The cost of living and your electric bill.

Since 1940, the cost of living has increased a whopping 284%. Everything—food, gas, rent, clothes—has gone up in price. And electricity has been no exception.

But a close look at the unit price of electricity shows it has actually increased very little over the years. Today, the average residential cost per kilowatt-hour is 3.88 cents—only 5% more than 1940.

Why then are electric bills higher than they were in 1940?

Consumption and fuel costs soar.

The biggest single factor is the tremendous amounts of electricity we consume today compared to a generation ago. The average Vepeco family is using about 9 times as much electricity as it was 35 years ago. A typical Virginia family today consumes about 750 kilowatt-hours of electricity per month. Their August bill would be about $31.18.

When you consider the many uses of electricity—lights, TV, radio, washer, toaster, and so on—all for about a dollar a day, that's a bargain hard to beat.

The second major reason for rising electric bills has been inflation, especially the higher cost of fuel used to generate electricity. The days of cheap energy disappeared with the oil embargo in 1973. Over half of the increase in the price of your electricity since 1970 is due to the increase in fuel costs.

Energy is our livelihood.

America must have dependable, economical energy in order to grow and to extend its high standard of living to all our citizens.

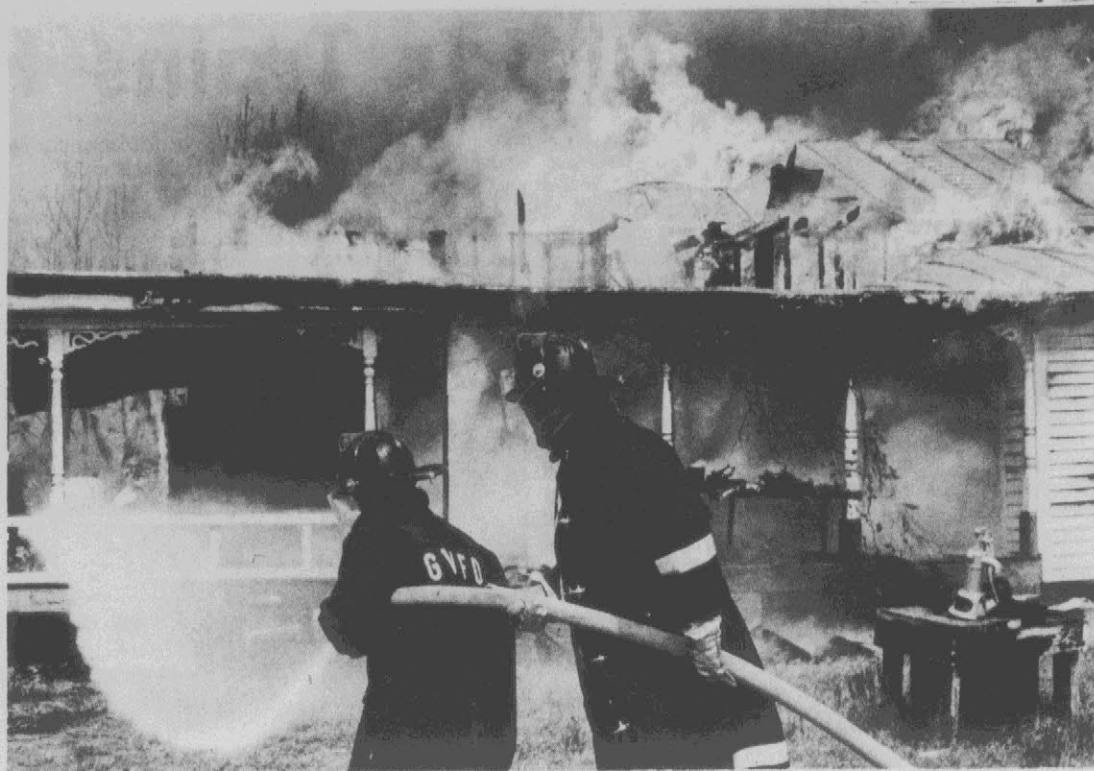

To provide this energy, Vepeco supports a strong national policy of energy independence, built on environmentally sound use of domestic fuel resources and wise use of electricity we generate.

Nuclear power provides low cost energy for Vepeco's customers. By mid 1978, nuclear power stations will produce half of Vepeco's energy, making use of the most economical fuel source presently available. Coal is being used wherever it is more economical than oil. And plans for pumped storage hydroelectric generation also are being developed.

Combined with strong conservation efforts on the part of individual citizens and industry, these steps can help insure adequate, economical energy supplies for future generations.

FIREMEN BATTLE BLAZE—Firemen from four Pitt County Rural Fire Departments battled a blaze Monday at 12:12 that destroyed a house near Grimesland. Bobby Joyner, Pitt County Fire Marshal said the house located on rural road 1766 was completely destroyed. Joyner said the occupants of the house, Lyman Hardee family, were not at home at the time of the fire. Located near the large two story house was a pack house filled with tobacco. Firemen saved the pack house with only slight heat damage. In the photo at the left a fireman cringes because of the intense heat. Firemen in the right photo prepare to attack the rear portion of the house. Departments from Grimesland, Simpson, Black Jack, and Eastern Pines responded to the blaze. Joyner said that no injuries were reported.

Arrested In Bank Holdup

GREENSBORO (AP) — A motorist was arrested in Siler City Monday and charged with armed robbery of a bank in Greensboro, 40 miles northwest, authorities said.

Police said money stolen from the branch of the North Carolina National Bank was recovered with the arrest of Robert E. Simmons, 33, of Philadelphia, Pa.

He was stopped after persons in the bank took down the license number of the getaway vehicle.

A man stole an undisclosed amount Monday afternoon. Police Lt. B.J. Norris said the robber handed a teller a note which said "Put the money in the bag, all of it. Have gun, will shoot."

An FBI spokesman said no one was injured in the robbery and no one saw a gun. But Norris said a pistol was found in the car of the man taken into custody.

Presided At State Meet

Ruth Lambie, associate professor of child development and family relations in the East Carolina University School of Home Economics, presided at the annual study conference of the N. C. Association on Children under Six in Greensboro Sept. 16-17.

Theme of the conference was "Politics of Day Care."

The Association is the state affiliate of the Southern Association on Children under Six, an organization which covers 14 southeastern states with a membership of more than 3,000 persons. Prof. Lambie served as president of the Southern Association in 1966-67.

Also attending the study conference was Dr. Charles Snow, coordinator of the Preschool Program sponsored by the ECU School of Home Economics.

During her stay in Greensboro, Prof. Lambie also attended the North Carolina Day Care Association meeting, whose theme was "The Future of Child Care in North Carolina."

Agenda Set For Planning Meet

Six items of business are on the agenda for consideration by the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission on Wednesday evening while four items are scheduled for action by the Greenville board.

Joint planning board items include: consideration of the preliminary plat of Tucker Industrial Park located on NC 11 South, across from Pitt Technical Institute; Rezoning request of Tucker Estates, Section II, located on

Red Banks Road, for change from RA-20 to R-15; request of North River Estates, Section II, located west of Greenfield Terrace and east of State Road 1419, for rezoning from RA-20 to R-9;

Consideration of annexation of Section II of Tucker Estates; consideration of annexation of North River Estates, Section II; and consideration of the addition of residential quarters for resident managers, supervisor or caretaker in the Medical Arts

Seniors Plan Take Case To Pitt Board

The Elm Street Senior Citizens Club discussed a $25 fee that non-city residents must pay to continue to meet with the club, at its Thursday meeting. The club voted to have a delegation to meet with the County Commissioners to discuss the problem of county residents participating in the city recreational programs.

The Elm Street Senior Citizens Club has 30 county members participating in their club. Members who have signed up to meet with the County Commissioners should meet at the Pitt County Court House at 9:30 a.m. October 4.

Mrs. Sarah Ashton reported on the District A meeting held in Tarboro September 13. She said that Senior Citizens' Day at the State Fair will be October 20 and Senior Citizens' Day will be October 6 at the Pitt County Fair.

The District A Christmas Party will be held in Wilson this year, according to Mrs. Ashton.

Mrs. Ruth Harris and Mrs. Ashton will attend the Delegates Convention in Charlotte October 27-29. Mrs. Ashton is attending the State Executive Board Meeting in Winston Salem this week.

Members were reminded that the Town 76 Meeting will be held September 25 at Rose High School and admission will be $1 for Senior Citizens and students.

Refreshments were served by Betsy Baker, Mildred Manning, Cynthia Passel, Mildred Southwick, and Lillian Hendrix.

Offer Courses In Parenthood

Two evening courses to be offered this fall by the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education will be of interest to parents and prospective parents.

The courses are "Preparation for Parenthood," which is scheduled Wednesdays, Oct. 6-Nov. 17, and "The Parent and His Pre-School Child," Tuesdays, Oct. 12-Nov. 30.

The "Preparation" course will be taught by junior level nursing students under the direction of Lona Ratcliffe and Hazel Browning, of the ECU School of Nursing.

The "Pre-School Child" course will provide participating parents with information about normal child growth and development. Major objective of the course is to encourage parents to fulfill their roles as the child's first teachers.

Course instructor is Sandra Houston, an experienced preschool teacher and child screening specialist with the Statewide Pre-Kindergarten Screening Program.

Further information about these and other non-credit course offerings is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, N. C. or telephone 757-6143/6148.

Plan Programs For Handicapped

"The Group" invites all physically handicapped persons in the Greenville area to participate in and help organize recreational programs for themselves and other handicapped persons.

A variety of activities are available, including crafts, trips, and opportunities to make new friends. For further information, one should call the Greenville Recreation Department, 752-4137, Ext. 251, or the Easter Seal Society, 758-3230.

Bundy Touring Western N.C.

Rep. Sam D. Bundy is participating in a tour of educational, correctional, and medical facilities in western North Carolina in preparation for budget-making in the next session of the General Assembly.

On the bus tour he will visit Charlotte, Winston Salem, Morganton, North Wilkesboro, Boone, Asheville, Cullowhee, Swannanoa, and Black Mountain. The tour will be held Tuesday through Thursday of next week.

Sixty Fires

The Rural Fire Departments in Pitt County in August answered 65 alarms with only 60 fires.

According to the Pitt County Fire Marshal's office there were five house fires, one mobile home, 32 buildings, ten autos, two grass and woods fires, and five mutual aid alarms.

Only two false alarms were reported.

Total loss by fire was $123,330, and approximately $913,420 saved by firefighters. There was $729,050 involved in fires, and $307,700 exposed to the fire.

The Ayden Fire Department had the most fires with eight.

New Way Found To Stop Hair Loss, Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, Texas — If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss... and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done". But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss... but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

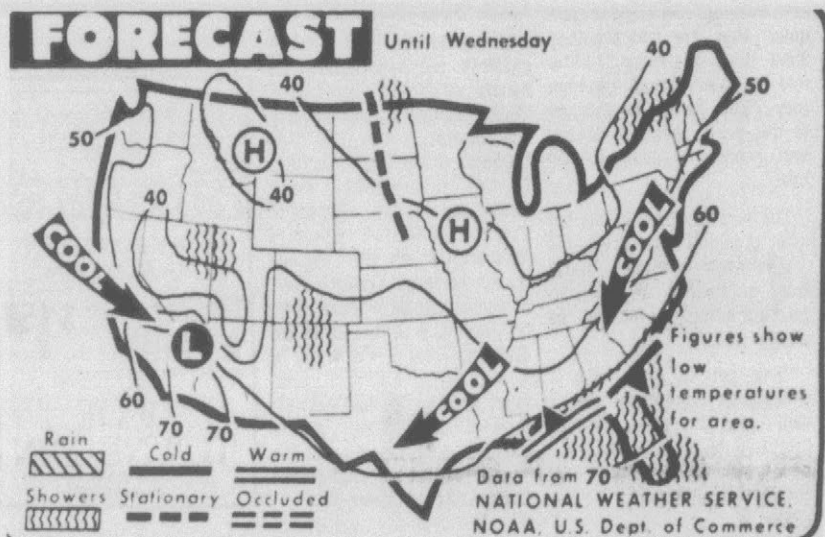

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in your family," this is certainly no proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair... now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc. will supply you with treatment for 32 days, at their risk, if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail and without obligation. Adv.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cooler weather is forecast today for the central Rockies to the Tennessee Valley. Warm weather is due in Florida and mild weather elsewhere. Showers are forecast from the eastern Gulf to the south Atlantic coast. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Cooler air will usher in fall Wednesday in North Carolina. Conditions were unsettled today as the cold front marking the intrusion of this cooler air moved across the state.

Highs today were mostly in the upper 70s and low 80s. It will be 7 to 10 degrees cooler Wednesday.

Scattered thunderstorms fell today, mainly in the southeastern portion and on the coast. Rain preceded the cold front across the western and northern counties Monday afternoon and evening. Some of the thunderstorms became intense over the southeastern counties. Hail the size of marbles pelted a Brunswick County area near Southport about 9 p.m.

Strong winds accompanied a few of these storms. Gusts of between 30 and 35 miles an hour were recorded at the Wilmington Airport just before 9:30 p.m.

Only a few hundredths of an inch of rain fell in the mountains Monday afternoon. There were only traces across most of the Piedmont. The more significant rainfall came from the showers and thunderstorms over the southeastern counties. Jacksonville reported over one and a half inches in the 24 hours ended at 2 o'clock this morning. Pope Air Force Base had just over one-third inch. A little over two-tenths of an inch fell at Wilmington.

High temperatures Monday were mostly in the 70s in the mountains and the low and mid 80s elsewhere. For the fourth day in a row, Wilmington led the list or was a co-leader. It reached 86 in the Port City and in New Bern.

Maddox Campaigning In Alabama

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer

Lester Maddox ran up the stairs of Glen Iris Baptist School in Birmingham, pumped the hands of two boys on safety patrol, strided to the pulpit to the martial music of a children's band, talked for 30 minutes and then pulled a harmonica from his pocket and played: "At the Cross," "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder," "America the Beautiful" and "Oh, Susanna."

Behind him, on the baptistry wall, was a large wooden cross pressed against an American flag.

"You're not only being taught how to make a living, but how to live, which is more important than all," he told the 350 children and 12 adults in the church-school.

"Amen," shouted the pastor, the Rev. Jack LeGrand.

"It's easy to be a hypocrite; it's tough to be honest. Christ can make the difference," said Maddox.

In the benediction, the Rev. Mr. LeGrand gave thanks for "Gov. Maddox going throughout the country trying to wake us up."

Maddox is the American Independent Party candidate—a job he said he took only after Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace "joined the enemy" by endorsing Jimmy Carter, the Democratic candidate.

And Maddox said during a fast-paced day of campaigning in Wallace's state that he is having trouble waking up the people because he is excluded from the presidential debates and because the media neglects him.

One of the half dozen supporters who stayed with him throughout his 10 hours in Alabama Monday, salesman Louis N. Douglas of Birmingham, said he was for Maddox because, "It's logical that a patriotic American and Christian should support a patriotic American and Christian. I work night and day for God and country. Gov. Maddox always tells the truth."

One person who does not tell the truth, Maddox said over and over, is Carter, also a former Georgia governor.

"I've never in all my life met a man as totally dishonest as Gov. Carter," Maddox said. "Peanut Carter refuses to be sincere and truthful and honest with the American people."

He also is unhappy with President Ford, the Republican nominee. "One of his first mistakes was pardoning a man who committed a crime against the American people," he said of Ford. "If Richard Nixon had been an ordinary citizen he would have been prosecuted and if convicted, would have gone to prison."

There are other things he does not like about Ford, he said, "but if I had to pick between the two, I would pick Ford over Carter. I think Ford would be the more honest and less radical of the two."

His biggest disappointment, he said, is in Wallace's endorsement of Carter.

Maddox, after criticizing Wallace most of the day in interviews and news conferences, spent 15 minutes with the crippled governor in his office at Montgomery.

"I didn't seek an endorsement," Maddox said later. "I told him he'd be unhappy with the crowd he's associating with, and if he ever wants to come back, we'd welcome him."

UNDATED: welcome him." Although 61 years old, Maddox never wound down. He chased people down on sidewalks, ran up stairs, talked non-stop in behalf of Americanism and against socialism.

"No matter what you may hear, I'm the only candidate for president," he told people as he handed out his literature. "This platform isn't my platform; it's yours."

A borrowed school bus carrying signs proclaiming "One Nation Under God" and "God Bless America" and nine men, five women and two boys met Maddox plane at the Birmingham airport at 7:30 a.m. Their signs read "Arabs for Maddox" and "Maddox in Means Kissinger Out."

"I thought we'd have two busloads, but it was too early in the morning," said Bill Mori, head of the Alabama Conservative Party which is carrying the Maddox banner in Alabama.

A 30-year-old health spa owner from Muncie, Ind., Jeff Boze—a former "Mr. Indiana"—got off the plane with Maddox.

"He's a friend of mine," Boze said. "I'm afraid of socialism and want my two daughters to have as much freedom as myself. I'm going to help him all I can. What good is it to have your health if you lose your freedom?"

With Maddox on the bus and raring to go, the battery wouldn't turn the motor over. "This is like that truck running into Peanut's airplane," Maddox said. "I'll be on national TV tonight because of a broken down bus."

A borrowed jumper cable solved the problem and he went to a restaurant for breakfast with about 25 supporters and a news conference. Then to the church school.

After that appearance, he said, "I can't go in a church building campaigning. I don't feel God would honor me if I did. It's improper that a church be used for political campaigning. That's treading on holy ground."

Later, he said, "No one ever heard about religion in this election, even about that fellow Peanut, until he started saying it."

From the school he went to a television station for an interview, then to shopping centers at Hoover and Alabaster to pump more hands and ask for votes, and then to the Capitol, where he stood on a star marking the spot where Jefferson Davis was sworn in as president of the Confederacy.

He was somber after his chat with Wallace.

"Gov. Wallace can't ever be happy in the enemy camp," he said. "He's going to be miserable with the stand he's taken now. He was one American I felt would never forsake the cause. I don't know what happened."

Maddox said he is on the ballot in about 20 states, and will be a candidate in a few others, but that he would be balloted in all the states if he had known in January that Wallace "was going to drop out."

"Gov. Carter says he owes everything to the people. I agree, and the first thing he owes them is truth and sincerity and honesty. If he doesn't give the people this, he can't give them anything."

"I am deeply in debt. I owe $600,000 and have assets of $250,000."

"Most politicians are working for what they can get, and when they get in office, they are working on whom they can destroy."

"We need hard-knock business sense and not a New Deal, Fair Deal, New Frontier or New Federalism."

"No nation can be rightly governed without God and the Bible."

"If I could get on the debates, within two debates I'd be on a par with both candidates."

"Mr. Carter's most vulnerable position is he has three or four views on each position, and before we have a Carter-Ford debate we ought to have a Carter-Carter debate."

"Carter says, 'Trust me, just trust me.' People can trust him to spread socialism, bring more busing, weaken our position militarily, and to spread the social and welfare state."

"The Republican platform is the Reagan platform, but Ford is not about to follow it. It's an exercise in coverup."

"There's nothing stronger than our cause. We are a majority if we can get everybody together who believes like we do."

Big Year For N.C. Tourism

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — July 1, compared to $477 million last year.

Hotel owners along the Outer Banks and other beaches report almost solid bookings of conventions and tourists through October.

Attendance was up by 100,000 and spending was up by $1.5 million at Carowinds theme park near Charlotte as of Labor Day. Attendance also was up by 17 per cent at Biltmore House in Asheville. Tweetsie Railroad at Blowing Rock reported new attendance records for six consecutive days last month.

Retail sales in coastal and mountain counties have been averaging consistent gains over last year. New Hanover County, where Wrightsville, Carolina and Kure beaches are located, reports retail sales were up by nearly $2 million for the month of June alone.

The North Carolina travel director, William Arnold, said many travelers decided to avoid the obvious bicentennial extravaganzas in Washington, Philadelphia and Colonial Williamsburg, Va. for fear of high prices and lack of hotel rooms.

In North Carolina, travel revenues for the first six months are up by 22 per cent over 1976. They totaled $583 million as of

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market rallied today, punching through the 1,000 barrier in the Dow Jones industrial average.

Trading was active. The 11:30 a.m. Dow average of 30 blue chips was up 7.65 at 1,002.16. Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow last closed above the 1,000 mark at 1,005.16 on July 14. Since then it has approached the four-digit level several times, only to turn back again.

Brokers said the market's upsurge was encouraged by hopes for a relaxation of Federal Reserve credit policy, and an accompanying decline in interest rates.

The Fed's open Market Committee, which sets the central bank's policy, was slated to hold its monthly meeting today.

The committee doesn't make its decisions public until several weeks after they are arrived at. But Wall Street was hoping for signs of a more relaxed approach in the money markets in the next few days.

As trading began this morning, the Labor Department reported that its consumer price index rose at a 6 per cent annual rate in August, matching the pace of the two previous months.

Analysts tended to view the August figure as a mild disappointment. But the market showed no ill effects from it.

Glamor issues leading the advance included IBM, up 1 1/4 at 286; Eastman Kodak, ahead 1 1/2 at 93, and Digital Equipment, up 2 at 164 1/2.

Saturday Game Honored Pitt Countian

Saturday night's game between ECU and N.C. State University was dedicated to a N.C. State executive who is a Pitt County native and former Greenville recreation director.

Warren Carroll retires in October as Executive Secretary of the Student Aid Association. Under his 18 years of leadership, the Wolfpack Club increased its annual scholarship funds from $80,000 to over $2 million ($1 million for scholarships and building, $1 million for endowment).

Carroll, now 55, was born and reared near Cox's Mill on the New Bern Highway. His mother, Mrs. Daisy Laughinghouse Carroll, still lives there. His brother Ronald lives in Winterville, but the rest of the family has moved away.

Carroll attended Hollywood School, which has since become a church, where he was taught by family members for seven years. ("They never let me get away with anything," he remarked.) He graduated from Chicod High School in 1937.

Among his many friends in Pitt County was Dave Whitchard, Sr., now Daily Reflector Chairman of the Board.

Carroll served as Greenville's Recreation Director from 1951 to 1956, creating what he called "a $100,000 program on a $20,000 budget." He always managed to find the money when it was needed.

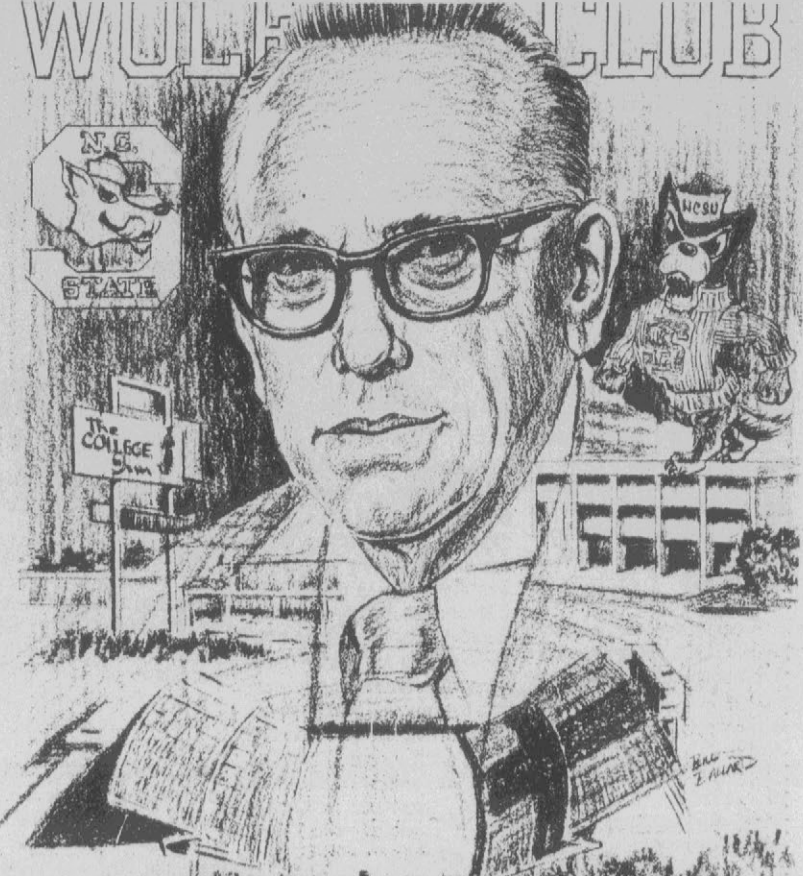

After World War II he made the move to Raleigh and N.C. State University. While still in college he became Athletics director for the Raleigh Recreation Dept. and expanded summer leagues from six to 150 teams.

Carroll also inaugurated Little League baseball in North Carolina (1948) and served on the National Little League Board of Directors for 10 years.

The farm boy did big things at N.C. State, and that is why he was honored Saturday night with an article and cover photo in the game program. He was instrumental in raising funds to build the Everett N. Case Athletics Center and Carter Stadium, as well as increasing the amount of scholarship funds.

"Warren is a man of great enthusiasm and great integrity," said Wolfpack Club president W. C. Calton. Among his many talents, Calton said, is his ability to draw support from the Raleigh business community and from persons who never attended the university.

Carroll now plans to become a consultant rather than an active worker, due to age and health reasons. He hopes to share his methods of promotion and fundraising with other universities so that they may also benefit from his wisdom and experience.

Leaf Theft March Is Part Charged Man Of Nat'l Drive

Pitt County deputies arrested a R. I. Ayden man early today and charged him with breaking and entering a rural packhouse and larceny of two sheets of tobacco.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that deputies charged Kenny Ray Shackelford, 27, with theft of the tobacco, valued at $600, from a packhouse owned by Simon Dixon of Rt. 3, Box 98, Ayden.

Sheriff Tyson said that Dixon told deputies he spotted headlights shining at his packhouse and he went to investigate. He reported that a car flashed its bright lights and attempted to leave but he ran out in front of the car, causing it to run off the road and into a ditch. Dixon was not injured.

Pitt deputies were notified and after tracing the car ownership, arrested Shackelford in Greene County, according to the sheriff.

Shackelford was placed in Pitt County Jail under $5,000 bond with a hearing set for District Court here on Sept. 21.

Officers recovered the tobacco and returned it to Dixon, the sheriff said.

A march to be held here Friday and Saturday is a portion of a longer "Continental Walk for Disarmament and Social Justice" which began in San Francisco, Calif. January 31. Plans are for it to end in Washington, D.C. Oct. 16.

Participants are walking "to show their concern about the fact that the U.S. government is spending $100 billion a year for military purposes while people's needs go unmet," according to Gloria Goddard, who plans to be one of the walkers in this area.

"We are concerned with housing, world development, farming, an end to starvation, and the betterment of our society," she went on. "The multi-national corporations with military support victimize the black people, carrying Third World nations as sources of raw materials and cheap labor. As a result many farmers grow cash crops, resulting in starvation for many and profit for a few. We would like to be understood and be given a chance to live with no usage of weapons—butter instead of bombs, bread instead of bullets."

For more information, one may call 756-1130, Ext. 34.

A banquet honoring Golden Frinks, a black leader who is expected to participate in the walk, will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. at West Greenville Recreation Center. It will be sponsored by the state and national SCLC, Ms. Goddard said.

SCLC March Granted Permit
Local representatives of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference have applied for and received a permit to march here September 24 and 25.

Chief Glenn Cannon said, according to the application, the march may involve up to 1,000 persons.

He said the permit allows the SCLC to march into town on N. C. 11-Memorial drive to Fifth Street, then East on Fifth to Washington Street and to the Pitt County Court House on Friday — between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

The permit also allows the marchers to use Albemarle Avenue, and Fifth Street to return to N.C. 11-Memorial Drive Sunday.

Local SCLC worker Wilbur Little said the march is a demonstration "for disarmament and social justice."

Will Discuss 'Monitor' Plans

John Newton will be the guest speaker at the American Chemical Society meeting Thursday. Newton will speak about his discovery and plans to recover the ironclad Civil War ship, the Monitor.

The dinner meeting will be held at King's Restaurant in Kinston with a social hour at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m. Newton will speak and show movies and slides at 8 pm. For reservations call Bill Jones at the DuPont Company, 522-6454 or Bob Morrison at ECU, 757-6711.

Defenders Get League Honors

By The Associated Press
The defensive efforts by the two Atlantic Coast Conference teams which won last weekend paid off for standouts from each team today with their selection as the ACC defensive players of the week.

Cale's performance was termed his best ever by North Carolina coaches, as he worked well against the run in addition to his efforts in the secondary. Earlier, Maryland tailback Steve Atkins and Wake Forest center Larry Tearry were named ACC offensive players of the week.

USING HIS HEAD—Kansas City Chiefs' Emmitt Thomas knocks Oakland Raiders' running back Clarence Davis off-balance with a head butt during first quarter action of Monday's football game at Arrowhead Stadium. Michigan Widens Lead; Heels Up To 16th Spot

By HERSCHEL NISSENON AP Sports Writer
Top-ranked Michigan, which led runner-up Ohio State by just one point a week ago, widened the margin in today's Associated Press college football ratings following a 51-0 slaughter of Stanford.

Georgia jumped from ninth to seventh — replacing Penn State — with a 41-0 rout of Clemson, Maryland rose from 10th to eighth by trimming West Virginia 24-3, Texas A&M shot from 11th to ninth by drubbing Kansas State 34-14 and Kansas made it from 13th to 10th with a 37-16 victory over Kentucky.

Kickers In First Win

The Greenville Soccer Club won its opening game of the 1976 fall season Sunday, defeating the Wilson Soccer Club, 3-0. Defense dominated the first half of play with both teams going scoreless. Greenville's defense, led by Ed French, was outstanding in limiting the Wilson club to 4 shots on goal.

Williamston and Roanoke split the six singles matches, with each team winning three. But the Tigerettes came up with two of the three doubles to take the win. Roanoke is now 0-1, and will travel to Williamston for a return match on Thursday.

Tigers In Tennis Win

ROBERSONVILLE — Williamston High School's girls' tennis team nipped Roanoke, 5-4, yesterday. It was the first match of the year for the Squaws of Roanoke.

Pittsburgh Running Out Of Time

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Willie Stargell's running out of words, Danny Murtaugh's running out of patience ... and the Pittsburgh Pirates are running out of time.

There seemed to be little of anything left for Pittsburgh after Monday's heart-breaking 5-4 loss to the New York Mets.

"I don't want to talk," said Stargell, the usually talkative team leader of the Pirates.

"I've run out of words." "I'm upset," said Murtaugh, the Pirate manager. "I have to be upset. We can't afford to lose, especially not like this."

The Pirates were understandably at the end of their rope after the defeat dealt a hard jolt to their National League East pennant hopes.

On the verge of picking up one-half game on the Philadelphia Phillies, the Pirates saw the apparent victory vanish over the right center field wall at Shea Stadium — on the wings of rookie Lee Mazzilli's two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning.

The loss dropped the Pirates 4½ games behind the Phillies, five games down in the loss column. The Phillies have 14 games left to play in the regular season and the Pirates 13.

The game was the only one played in the National League Monday. In American League action, the Milwaukee Brewers beat the New York Yankees 4-

2; the Boston Red Sox routed the Detroit Tigers 12-6 and the California Angels nipped the Texas Rangers 1-0.

The Pirates had erased an early 3-0 deficit to take a 4-3 lead in the eighth inning on Stargell's 19th homer of the season. In the Mets' ninth, pinch-hitter John Milner singled off Pirate reliever Kent Tekulve, 5-2, and Mazzilli, who was brought up from the minor leagues earlier this month, followed with his second home run of the season.

Brewers 4, Yankees 2

Rookie Dan Thomas' fourth-inning homer and Don Money's two-run single helped Milwaukee defeat New York. The defeat left the Yankees' "magic number" for clinching the American League East title at three games. Runerup Baltimore did not play and trails New York by 11½ games, going into a four-game series between the teams which begins Tuesday.

Red Sox 12, Tigers 6
Cecil Cooper drove in four runs with a homer and a single and Jim Rice blasted two solo homers to lead Boston's rout of Detroit. Boston pounded out 13 hits and collected nine walks as the Red Sox won their sixth consecutive game, their longest winning streak of the season.

Angels 1, Rangers 0

California right-hander Nolan Ryan got a run-scoring double from battery mate Terry Humphrey and made it stand up for his fifth consecutive victory, a three-hit shutout over Texas.

Kuhn Spending A Lot Of Time In Washington

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has spent a lot of time on Capitol Hill in recent weeks on behalf of the sport's special exclusion from the nation's antitrust laws.

Kuhn has paid special attention to the 13 members of the Select House Committee on Professional Sports who have been holding hearings on the law's effect on sports, especially the antimonopoly statutes.

Rep. John W. Wylder, R-N.Y., told a Justice Department official during a hearing last Thursday that Kuhn had met with him recently about the baseball situation and "he asked my advice on what he might say to the committee."

"I suggested to him I thought the thing he could say that would make the most favorable impression on me would be that he felt the time has come for professional baseball to give up this very special kind of exemption it enjoys in the professional sports world," said Wylder.

"I said I also realize he was not necessarily in a position to make that decision for himself, but I thought it really would be something in the public interest and really in baseball's interest because I thought it was going to come about anyway."

"Then he indicated to me he thought that there was an unfair advantage baseball enjoyed over the other sports and they should be treated equally but to extend the exemption that baseball enjoys to all the other sports," said Wylder. "I don't even know how we would do that since the baseball exemption was just a court decision, not a legislative act."

Kuhn, along with M. Donald Grant of baseball's New York Mets and Edmund B. Fitzgerald of National Basketball Association's Milwaukee Bucks, testify today before the House sports committee, which has concentrated its probe on antitrust laws. National and American League Presidents Chub Feeney and Lee MacPhail follow Kuhn.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, and Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, who has introduced legislation taking away any sports exemptions under the law, are scheduled to testify Wednesday.

Baseball's immunity from the antitrust laws was established in a 1922 U.S. Supreme Court ruling that has been upheld twice since. If a change were needed, the court said, Congress, and not the courts, should make it.

Baseball administrators fear loss of the immunity would subject the sport to long and costly legal challenges. Those who would like the immunity struck down generally contend it has helped perpetuate a cavalier attitude toward the public and the players.

A&T Leaders Given Honors

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Dexter Feaster, North Carolina A&T split end who caught nine passes for 120 yards in the 15-14 football victory over South Carolina State, has been named the offensive lineman of the week in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

His teammate, quarterback Ellsworth Turner, who completed 22 of 36 passes for 220 yards in the come-from-behind triumph, is the offensive back of the week.

Turner, a junior from Gaithersburg, Md., scored A&T's first touchdown on a one-yard sneak. He added the winning point from placement following his team's second touchdown with 15 seconds left to play.

Feaster, a senior from Charlotte, N.C., made several key catches in both of A&T's late scoring drives.

Others nominated for offensive player of the week honors were Darius Helton, James Lawrence and Delacio Hartley, all of North Carolina Central; Ralph Esqalim of Maryland-Eastern Shore, and Luther Dixon and Charles Burgess, both of South Carolina State.

A&T and Howard won conference games last week to lead with 1-0 league records. Howard defeated Maryland Eastern-Shore 42-6.

In nonconference action, North Carolina defeated Winston-Salem State 31-7 to bring its record to 2-0, and Delaware suffered its second straight shutout, losing 16-0 to Clarion State.

South Carolina State is at Howard Saturday afternoon in this week's only conference game. There are five nonconference games: Morgan State and Grambling play in Tokyo, Japan; North Carolina Central is at Alcorn A&M, Maryland Eastern-Shore will be at Livingston in Salisbury, N.C., Delaware State plays Bethune-Cookman in the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., and North Carolina A&T is at Florida A&M in a night game.

Ballet-Like Movement In World Of Sports

NEW YORK (AP) — When Tom Seaver winds up and sends a fast ball zipping over the corner of home plate for the New York Mets, that isn't just a baseball pitch.

That's art in its purest form. When quarterback Bob Griese faded back and unleashes a soaring football for the waiting arms of one of his receivers, that isn't just a completed pass for the record books.

That, insists Edward Villella, is classical ballet in its most aesthetic form.

"When fans pay $8 or $10 for a seat in a stadium or arena to watch a football, baseball or basketball game or even a tennis match, they are getting more than an athletic contest," the famed New York dance master said today. "They are seeing theater in its purest sense."

"Athletes may not be aware of it. Fans may not be aware of it. But sports performers are dancers before they are grim competitors and merchants of violence. There is an organic flow, a ballet-like movement in almost everything they do."

Villella, who has danced before presidents and the crowned heads of Europe, has put his unique ideas into substance through a nationally televised sequence to be shown by CBS-TV next Sunday, 5-6 p.m. EDT.

He calls the "Dance of the Athletes."

Villella has taken seven well-known athletes of differing sizes, abilities and sensitivities and made a sort of Balshoi Ballet out of their doing nothing more than their thing.

His "guinea pigs" include the Seaver and catcher Jerry Grote of the Mets; Griese, of the Miami Dolphins; George McGinnis, 6-foot-8, 235-pound basketball star of the Philadelphia 76ers; Muriel Grossfeld, former Olympic gymnastic performer from New Haven, Conn.; Virginia Wade, British tennis star, and Muisaki Togotara, a karate expert out of Tokyo.

The motions of the athletes were set to music for the hour show and Villella found a ballet quality and sensuality in all of them.

"When Seaver pitches, there is a stylish, beautiful flow to his movement," the dancer explained. "The windup ends with a snap and it is incredible to watch the fingers as the ball is released."

"Griese is the most methodical but his is a clear approach to the super professional. Upon release of the ball, his hand is in a classical ballet position."

Villella, who has performed before four presidents and Queen Elizabeth as well as Russia's late Premier Khrushchev at Moscow's Balshoi Theater, said McGinnis exhibited "fascinating body movement for a big man"; Miss Grossfeld "an articulate sensitivity and directness" and Miss Wade "a linear quality and sparseness that accentuated the entire body function."

"We did not use fighters," Villella said. "But one would have to say Muhammad Ali and Sugar Ray Robinson are classical. They throw a punch seven inches and it is beautiful."

Beautiful and soporific.

Before we could raise the flag, we had to raise the money.

And it wasn't because Betsy Ross charged too much.

Building an independent nation cost plenty. In lives, in property, and yes, in money.

So, our Founding Fathers asked their fellow Americans to take stock in their country.

And we did. To the tune of $27,000,000.

With that kind of support, it's no wonder that, after the smoke cleared, the star-spangled banner kept waving.

Yes, folks really took stock in their country back then. And you still can by buying United States Savings Bonds.

Because when you join the Payroll Savings Plan at work or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you save, you're investing in a brighter future for you and for America.

So buy United States Savings Bonds. They're a great way to raise the flag. Or a family.

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years. 4% the first year. Low, stolen or destroyed Bonds can be replaced if records are provided. When needed, Bonds can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.

Anything Goes On New Series

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — What has a save-the-environment bombing, an ex-porn queen posing as a young executive's wife, an alienated son, a radical daughter and a fiftieth, public-be-damned board member who is having a tawdry affair with the alienated lad's former sweetie?

"Executive Suite" on CBS. You win. Go directly to the bored room. Ask decent, hard-working Don Walling, head of a conglomerate called the Cardway Corp., to straighten all this out. Then pray.

But prayer may not help, judging from Monday's start of this serialized corporate soap opera, put in CBS' evening schedule after ABC's success with "Rich Man, Poor Man" and "Family" last season. It has more bad plots afoot than a town hall meeting in Beirut. For openers, Don's radical daughter plants a bomb. It blows up a Cardway plant that makes pesticides believed to cause cancer in mice.

Not knowing she did it, he is discussing the blast at a board meeting when the phone rings. It is his wife. "Darling," she says. "Forgive me. I know you're in a board meeting, but..." Hoo-hah. His alienated son is home, having spent 10 months in France failing to become an artist. But Pop can't come home now.

When Pop does get home, he hears junior bitterly admit failure and mention a need for, ah, a job. But not as an executive. Says Junior: "I'd rather come home tired and dirty instead of used up."

If that's not enough, Pop faces a big board fight because he wants to install on the board a bright young consumer relations executive. The idea is to improve corporate relations with the public. Little does he know that the rascal's "wife" is an ex-porn queen who, upon coming to town to join her beloved, gets a card that says: "Flower of Paradise — call me, Brad." Brad is not her old man.

No good can come of all this, unless you'd like to hoot 200 times more than you did watching the cardboard characters, wretched dialogue and mawkish melodrama of "Love Story."

Warn Against Coated Rice

MT. VERNON, N.Y. (UPI) — A warning against the use of coated rice has been issued by Consumer Reports, which cited the possibility of asbestos contamination in the coating. Asbestos that is ingested may cause cancer in humans, the magazine said. It also said the coating of talc and glucose is applied only to make the rice more attractive, and is meant to be washed off before cooking. It said researchers believe asbestos residues from the talc may remain even after washing.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

No one was quite sure who invited Trump Coup Tommy onto the team for the annual interclub championship. One thing was sure, whoever it was had cause for regret until this hand came up, for Tommy was in his usual form—botching up easy hands, throwing away tricks with reckless abandon and coming up with bids which left his partner with palpitations.

Even on this hand, Tommy lived up to his performance in the earlier part of the match. His rebid of four spades left a lot to be desired. His partner, who was looking at three aces, could not but believe that, at the very least, Tommy had to have a long, solid suit for his bid, so he can't be blamed for leaping to the grand slam.

As a matter of fact, the same bad contract had been reached at the other table where the opening lead had also been the jack of hearts. There, declarer had won the first trick in dummy and run the jack of trumps. West's failure to follow suit tolled the death knell, for there was no way declarer could recover. He ended up down one.

Tommy, busily forming an excuse for reaching such a poor grand slam, absent-mindedly called a heart from dummy without specifying which heart. Following the Laws to the letter, dummy played his lowest heart and Tommy was forced to win in his hand. He crossed to the ace of diamonds and ran the jack of spades. For a moment he did not dare look at West's card, but when he saw it was a low club, he beamed in relief. Here was a hand which called for his unique talent of handling contracts where trumps broke badly.

Declarer continued by leading the ten of spades, then ruffing a diamond. The queen and ace of hearts provided entries for two more diamond ruffs, reducing Tommy to two trumps—the same number held by East. The king and ace of clubs reduced every hand to two cards, and when declarer led a club from dummy East was caught—with the A-Q of trumps poised over East's K-6, declarer was sure to make the last two tricks and his contract.

Computer Can Track Arsonist

NASHVILLE (AP) — A way may have been found to predict where an arsonist will set his next fire even before the match is struck.

Eugene Hartsook, director of fire prevention for the Tennessee Department of Insurance, said the system already has been instrumental in the arrest of seven persons charged with arson in Harriman, Tenn., this year.

Officials say most arsonists set fires in a pattern which can be distinguished if enough information is compiled about arson cases in a given area.

David Iove, a state arson investigator heading the computer operation, said the computer predictions can be used to coordinate surveillance of various buildings in an effort to catch the arsonists in the act of setting the fire.

Iove said the information is fed into a computer at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. The computer can then distinguish any patterns which indicate a certain number of fires were set by the same person or group.

In the Harriman case, he said, computers were used to analyze data from 132 suspicious fires. The computer inicated volunteer firemen were involved in setting the fires.

After a pattern was established, Iove said officials conducted stakeouts which confirmed volunteer firemen were setting the fires.

Information on all fires investigated by the state fire marshal's office will be transferred to the Knoxville-based computer by December. The state then will be able to discover arson patterns on a statewide basis, he said.

Iove said in the future a computer may be able to predict the time and location of home burglaries and other crimes.

Cathedral-Building Hasn't Speeded Through Years

CATHERDRALES — For most of this century Britain's finest craftsmen have been working on the Anglican Cathedral of Liverpool (top) and it is still at least two years from completion. But the Cathedral of Coutances in Normandy (bottom) was built within a single generation, during the years 1220 to 1250 A.D. by medieval work force using muscle power instead of machines. (UPI Photo)

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — For 72 years, the finest craftsmen of Britain have labored on the construction of Liverpool Cathedral. The target date for completion of what will be the fifth largest church in the world is still two years away.

The cornerstone of the cathedral was laid on July 19, 1904. It was consecrated on its 20th anniversary, July 19, 1924. The hope is that it will be fully opened on its 74th anniversary July 19, 1978.

Although two World Wars

Heat Circulated By Restaurant

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A food service firm here has designed a heat transference system for a Pittsburgh restaurant that recirculates kitchen heat back into the restaurant and adjoining mall for heating purposes.

The firm says 50 per cent of the heat is recoverable. That's equivalent to 300,000 BTU's per hour, or enough energy to heat 10 apartments or four tract homes for an hour, said Gerald Surfas, founder and president of Surfas, Inc.

held up progress for several years, the fact remains that with all the aids of the building sciences, with the most modern techniques at his command, 20th Century man takes nearly as long to build a cathedral as did medieval craftsmen and their successors in the Middle Ages using human muscle power in place of machines.

"Absolutely astonishing," said Stanley Williams, Secretary of Liverpool Cathedral, when asked if he had an explanation. "The workmen of those days worked from daylight to dusk, didn't they? Maybe they were more dedicated."

Or maybe it was a case of work or else in those non-union times. Whatever the reason the ability of designers from the 11th Century on to imagine vast and splendid structures to the greater glory of God and translate them into poetry-in-stone at an astonishing pace has intrigued a number of researchers.

The 11th Century may have been chosen to witness the flowering of the supreme architecture of the next few centuries because of what some call The Millennial Hypothesis — the widespread belief that the world would end in the year 1000 A.D. and why go in for grandiose projects bound to be transient?

A striking example of this, according to John Harvey in "The Master Builders" is Charlemagne's palace chapel at Aachen built between 792 and 805 A.D. and one of the most ambitious buildings of its age although "extremely modest" in comparison to the Romanesque church built nearly 200 years later.

A year after the Millennial Hypothesis collapsed, the first of the big churches was already underway, Saint-Benigne at Dijon started in 1001 and finished in 1018. The huge church and monastery at Bury St. Edmund's in England was up in 49 years (1081-1130). The ground plan of the Cathedral of Seville, second only to St. Peter's in size, was complete in 98 years.

("Those who see it finished shall think we were mad," said one of its organizers.)

The magnificent Church of the Jeronimos in Portugal took 22 years, the Cathedral of St. Bavon in Ghent 59 years. Great Lincoln Cathedral in England went up between 1192 and 1280 and towering Bourges in France between 1192 and 1266. But many took much longer than Liverpool — Canterbury, Vienna, Gerona and Toledo among them.

Secular building was also notable. Westminster Hall in London, was only two years in the building though it was the largest single room in Europe (238 feet by 68 feet) for a century after its completion in 1099.

The royal carpenter Hugh Herland refurbished the hall in six years, 1394-1400, adding a breathtaking oak hammer-beam ceiling that Harvey regards as "the greatest single work of art of the whole of the European Middle Ages. No such combined achievement in the fields of mechanics and aesthetics remains elsewhere nor is there any evidence for such a feat having ever existed."

So how did they do it?

First the architect. According to Harvey he would have to have the technical skill to cut stone to true shapes, to lay foundations, work out scaffolding and temporary supports for arches and so on. He would learn from his master certain geometric and numerical formulas; old treatises speak of two main systems of working out the proportions of stable, well-constructed buildings, one by use of a square, the other by use of a triangle.

There is also evidence that the great masons or architects knew each other and their work and not infrequently consulted on problems. The mason would make many drawings of parts of the cathedral and then, at least in some instances, he would lay down a plaster floor equal to the size of the completed building.

On this plaster he would place his drawings and trace out the whole ground plan of the cathedral. Plaster floors used for this purpose actually survive at Wells and York cathedrals in England.

Persuading large numbers of skilled craftsmen, such as stone workers and layers, to a site remote from their homes, was not a major problem. In Britain the Crown had the royal power of forcing or impressing workmen into a job. By the 13th and 14th centuries it was customary to pay the throne for a license to use this prerogative in rounding up carpenters or the like.

For religious construction there were many mainly unskilled volunteers known as "building bees" who did the heavy laboring.

Thus an unlimited work force, available at all times, with no stoppages seems to have been one of the key factors cutting into the advantages conferred on modern man by mechanization. But Harvey says the ingenuity and determination of the men who organized them was equally important.

He cites the rebuilding of Abingdon Abbey soon after 1100 when the great timbers for roofbeams and rafters had to be brought to the site over primitive roads in wagons drawn by 12 oxen — a roundtrip of 220 miles that despite its difficulties was regarded then as merely part of the day's work.

Secretary Williams was intrigued about the masons sketching on plaster floors.

"Sir Giles Scott, our architect, told us that he sketched the gothic arches of Liverpool Cathedral, the largest arches anywhere, I believe, on the floor of his studio fullsize and complete in every detail," he said. "So times haven't changed all that much, have they?"

Wayward Geese Provided Haven

By GARY R. PEDERSEN
Associated Press Writer
LOVELOCK, Nev. (AP) — Bill Milich operates a home for wayward and handicapped geese.

Those big, graceful Canadian honkers fleeing the cold climes stop on southern treks to rest for a while or to spend the winter on Milich's familiar pond.

They have a better chance there than they would if they were flying in front of the sights on his favorite 16-gauge shotgun.

Milich has been mothering geese for years. Come fall, the honkers move southward through the spacious valleys of Pershing County and alight on the Milich property. He often feeds them on his front lawn.

"There are times when maybe 400 geese will fly over here," he said, waving his arm to the sky. "People stop on Highway 80 and cause traffic jams just to catch the birds."

Milich is a sportsman — a conservationist first and one of the state's most highly touted goose hunters second. He has a federal Fish and Wildlife license to raise the honkers and some other game birds. But his favorite is the goose.

Why does a hunter spend as much time as Milich does hunting fowl, then take the time and care to raise them?

"It's good for the hunters out there and good for the geese. It keeps up the population. I raise about 100 a year and sell them or give them away for more breeding," he said.

Milich got started on his goose farm by bringing back crippled geese from hunting trips, nursing them to health and then keeping them for breeding. Some of the geese on his pond can fly but can't because he's clipped their wings.

He began his orphanage in 1944.

"I pushed the Department of Fish and Game into letting me get this thing started and I've been fighting with them ever since," Milich said. "I got so mad at their policies one year I gave away 20 birds rather than sell them to the government for $100 each."

Each fall the resident population at the Milich ranch draws migrating honkers from their flyways down to the pond. Unfortunately, they also draw less-than-sportsmanlike hunters.

New Treatment Plant Begun

CONCORD (AP) — Work has started on the $45.5 million Rocky River sewage treatment plant which by 1979 will serve 92,000 people in Concord, Kannapolis, Cannon Mills and other portions of Cabarrus County.

After three years of planning, two of designing and a year of unraveling red tape, bulldozers are leveling 100 acres of former farmland five miles south of Concord.

The project will provide employment for about 450 at a time when the construction industry has been in a slump.

"I've had people come onto my property and shoot my geese. One time a guy threatened to kill me when I confronted him. Other times people will scare the birds into the air and someone just off my property will wait in the weeds and shoot them down," he said.

That usually results in a few more cripples and more problems for the former county commissioner. He's well known in Lovelock, both for his county service and his geese.

Like most good hunters Milich has several bird dogs, a rack of good shotguns and a shack full of decoys. He kills the geese he helps protect, but in their environment and with their own rules.

"I've killed more geese than anyone in this state," said Milich. "I've taught people how to hunt them. Before I came around, I don't think there were many good geese hunters in this area. Most people don't realize how fast they move and how big they are, so naturally people shoot at them from too far away. That leaves cripples and I find them and bring them back here."

Hunting partners for Milich include anyone whom he respects as a hunter. In that category are Nevada Gov. Mike O'Callaghan and a number of other celebrities.

Milich has killed many of the beautiful birds and released perhaps 2,500 in his 30-year avocation. He still keeps up nests and sees that untended eggs are hatched by stray ducks or a bunch of banty hens he keeps as surrogate mothers for the geese.

"I get returners here every year," he said. "They know where we are. I recognize most of them. It's really not too hard."

Retirees Choose Double-Width

DALLAS (UPI) — Contemporary and country styles were the strongest the strongest new trends in home furnishings at the Dallas Market Center's Summer Home Furnishings Market. Chinese Chippendale and K-D, or knock-down, furniture also were popular.

Contemporary styles featured a rounded, over-stuffed look with plump arms and backs. Loose back cushions sometimes extend completely over the back for a saddlebag look.

New Trends In Furnishings

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — The proportion of double-wide mobile homes more than doubled between 1971 and 1975, says the Cooperative Extension service of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

An industry spokesman told the service that retired persons appear to be the chief buyers of these units, and young families usually start with single-width homes.
