

Ford, Carter Hold 2nd Debate Tonight

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Jimmy Carter says he's ready to slug it out with President Ford in tonight's debate on foreign and defense policies, but White House aides say Ford isn't preparing for what may be the toughest questions he'll face.

The second of the three debates between the two presidential candidates is scheduled for 9:30 p.m., EDT, at the historic Palace of Fine Arts in San Francisco. The three major commercial networks and the Public Broadcasting Service will televise the encounter.

There have been suggestions that Ford may be asked during tonight's debate about the effect on African nations of the racial slur that led to Monday's resignation of his agriculture secretary, Earl Butz.

And Ford may be asked about a report by the General Accounting Office, which says 41 American lives were lost in the Mayaguez incident last year because of hasty action and poor intelligence.

Ford advisers brushed aside suggestions that the Butz affair could come up in tonight's debate, but U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations William Scranton was asked in a television interview on Sunday about Butz' comments and he said they "will hurt in the United Nations."

Ford has been unavailable for questions on the Butz matter since it became public knowledge last Friday night that Butz had made an obscene racial slur about blacks. Ford's only comments about the Butz case were on Monday when he read a prepared statement in which he regretfully accepted Butz' resignation.

Mike Duval, a White House special counsel, said Ford has been given no special briefing material on responses he could make either to questions about the Butz affair or the Mayaguez incident.

Carter, who said after the first debate that he had not been aggressive enough, said of the second encounter: "I think it will be a much more free-wheeling, much more aggressive exchange."

But White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford could be inhibited by the subject of tonight's debate because his words "will be interpreted by foreign leaders as reflecting American policy."

Jim Karayn, debate project director for the sponsoring

League of Women Voters, said, "I think the candidates will be looser now that they've been through it once."

Almost certain to come up in tonight's debate is the report by the General Accounting Office on the 1975 Mayaguez incident. The report, issued Tuesday, is critical of the Ford administration's handling of the incident.

Forty-one Americans were killed in the operation. While the assault was underway, the Cambodians, who had seized the Mayaguez, a merchant vessel, released its crew.

The GAO, Congress' auditing arm, said a Marine assault on an island off the coast of Cambodia was ordered despite reports from U.S. pilots that the crew of the Mayaguez was not on the island.

Thai Govm't Seized After Bloody University Clash

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand's defense minister seized power today after frenzied fighting between leftists and rightists, Radio Thailand said. Police said at least 22 persons were killed and about 180 wounded in riots touched off by the return of Thailand's former military dictator.

Radio Thailand said Defense Minister Sangad Chalawyu had taken power from the elected civilian government at the head of a national reform council.

Witnesses said two students were hanged and their bodies mutilated and other bodies set afire in the fighting that broke out during a demonstration against the return home of former dictator Thanom Kittikachorn.

Waves of police firing machine guns stormed a university campus where leftists were demonstrating. Then a right-wing mob of about 10,000 broke through the gates of Thailand's government house.

Unconfirmed reports said the dead numbered at least 35. Authorities arrested more than 1,300 university students.

About 1,500 police and military stood by at government house and the mob stopped short of entering the building itself.

Prime Minister Seni Pramoj climbed atop a bus to address the demonstrators through a microphone and promised that he would resign if their demands were not met.

Later, a brief announcement, reportedly signed by Sa-ngad, said: "The government cannot govern the country properly and in order not to let Thailand become a prey to Communists and to uphold the monarchy and royal family this council has seized power."

The announcement said the administration of the country would be placed under the council but would "not be altered." It said the council would provide protection to officials and facilities of all foreign embassies, consulates and international organizations.

The unrest began after Field Marshal Thanom, whose military regime was ousted after widespread student rioting in 1973, returned from exile on Sept. 19 and was ordained as a Buddhist monk. He was staying in a Bangkok monastery. He said he wanted to be close to his ailing 91-year-old father.

Opposition To Combined Middle School Is Heard

By SUSAN QUINN

Citizens of Grifton were present at the Pitt County Board of Education Tuesday to express opposition to a proposal for a combined Ayden-Grifton Middle School.

Approximately 15 citizens attended and the board allowed those who wished to speak to express their opinion about the proposal.

"We are here today because we feel that this action is being railroaded through a special committee meeting that did not allow public comment. We thought that because of the unanimous decision for the proposal that it would be treated in a routine manner without opposition," Janet Haseley said.

"People of Grifton are upset about the Advisory Committee's action and this certainly is not democratic when the committee does not tell people what's going on. We don't want to lose the relationship that our town has with our school," Mrs. Haseley added.

"In a newspaper report about the Advisory Committee's proposal, all of the advantages when such a momentous decision as this is made, the possibility of there being no disadvantages is remote. We have not realized the advantages that were promised us by the consolidation of the Ayden-Grifton High School," Grifton Mayor Dave Bosley said.

"The school is involved with many community social activities. Extracurricular activities are important for the students and they will be lost. The impact of the decision falls on the people that you represent," Mayor Bosley added.

Mayor Bosley also explained that Grifton property lost approximately $1 million in value when the high school was moved and projected a similar decrease in the value of the property in the town if the middle school is combined.

"Economically, centralization is a hard thing to refute, but it is also an emotional action. Do the economical advantages outweigh the idea of the children closer to their parents? We moved here from Louisville, Ky. where the children were bused 20 miles. Now when the kids get ready to go to school they can walk there." Russ Houston said.

"I can't think of one advantage of busing the kids this age. It would be a terrible mistake. Expenses are not the first consideration," Jean

THRIFT STORE

I'm concerned about the Salvation Army's selling clothes. I took some things out there not knowing they were selling them. I thought they donated them to needy people. I want to know what they do with the money. I know there are a lot of people who need the clothes and probably cannot afford to pay even a small amount. M. H.

The Salvation Army opened a thrift store in a storage building out behind the Citadel in June of 1975, Salvation Army Welfare Secretary Barbara Kirkman said.

Items of clothing, small household items and books are sold for minimal amounts—25 cents for most articles of clothing, $1 for a suit, she said. It's Salvation Army policy, she said, to have thrift stores in larger towns to afford people the self-respect of having provided for themselves instead of having charity doled out. Money made in the store goes into the Army's local fund to help persons in emergency situations needing help with food orders and utilities.

Clothes are still given to those persons who cannot afford to pay even the minimal amount, Ms. Kirkman said.

Store hours are from 9:30 to 4:30 Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturdays.

The Citadel and Thrift Store are located on Highway 264 about a quarter mile west of the Memorial Drive-Dickinson Avenue intersection.

Hunt's Daughter Involved In Accident Today

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A school bus driven by Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt's daughter was involved in a four-vehicle accident this morning on its way to Rock Ridge High School in Wilson County, according to sheriff's deputy O.K. Howell.

The bus, carrying 54 pupils and driven by 16-year-old Rebecca Hunt, had stopped to pick up more passengers on N.C. 42 west, Howell said, adding that a car and pickup truck stopped behind it.

A logging truck owned by Glasgow Logging Co. of Wilson approached from the rear and was unable to stop, striking the car and setting off a chain reaction crash, Howell said.

Several logs spilled from the back of the truck, temporarily blocking the road, he said.

No one was seriously injured, Howell said, but Shara Gunter, 22, of Kenley, was taken to Wilson Memorial Hospital for observation.

No Private Life For Candidate's Wife, Says Mrs. Elizabeth Dole

By SUSAN QUINN

"Being the wife of a vice presidential candidate means having a rigorous schedule with no private life because we can't fit it in right now," Mrs. Elizabeth Dole said Wednesday in an exclusive interview following her speech at a breakfast gathering with about 100 Pitt County citizens in Greenville Wednesday morning.

"We sometimes get to travel together and speak together but we also travel together, get to a central city and then split directions for a series of speeches. It is a great experience and I think that it is just wonderful getting to meet the people all over the country. It is important and interesting to not only talk to people but to listen to them and to try to respond to their problems," Mrs. Dole said.

Mrs. Dole added that she feels she will be an asset in her husband's campaign because of her experience in Washington with the Federal Trade Commission.

"I understand Washington since I have worked there for 10

Expanding The ECU Services

The board of trustees of ECU has approved proceeding with several new programs which should expand the services offered by the university.

Last week the board voted to proceed with study and development of a master of science program in environmental health. The program is already authorized by the UNC board of governors.

The ECU board also requested the board of governors to allow ECU to develop a masters of social work program.

Planning for sixth year degree programs in music and biology was also authorized. These programs are included in the university's five year program.

The university has been steadily moving into new areas which have taken it away from its historic role of training teachers, although teacher training is still an important part of ECU's functions.

There are, of course, some areas of higher education which are already overcrowded and it wouldn't be wise for East Carolina, or any other university, to develop costly programs when they are not needed.

When a need is shown, however, and particularly when a new program relates to the needs of Eastern North Carolina we hope that East Carolina University will move to provide the services.

Powell Bill Funds Proven Invaluable

Once again Powell Bill funds will be coming to area municipalities.

Greenville will get $395,387 from the state administered funds and other area towns will get amounts based on street mileage and population.

The money comes from a $30 million fund which represents one cent of the tax on gasoline and is collected by the state.

The funds can be used for local street construction and maintenance.

Powell Bill funds have been invaluable to Greenville and other municipalities of North Carolina. Without these funds our street situation now might well be hopeless.

Cops Missing School Cash

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — North Carolina's law enforcement officers are missing out on a lot of chances at advanced training — in a lot of cases because chief administrators simply don't want their men too well educated.

That reason is, at least, the opinion of Hickory Police Chief M. L. Tucker, a member of the Governor's Law and Order Commission.

From that vantage point, Chief Tucker has watched better than half the federal dollars made available for training law enforcement officers in this state go unclaimed.

workshops in the hometown, or even to send officers out of state to the FBI Academy, dope schools put on by federal agencies, traffic courses, Northwestern University.

Why don't the local police agencies — that includes sheriff's departments as well as town police departments — take advantage of that money?

Tucker thinks the biggest weakness is that administrative heads of police departments block training for their men. "The men can rise no higher than he (the chief) will let them," Tucker said bluntly at a recent meeting of the Law and Order Commission which funnels the federal money into local agencies.

programs. The consensus appears to be that especially in small-town police forces and rural county sheriff's offices, the men in charge dismiss training as so much folderol, say they can train their own men to do things without sending off to a high-faluting school, and generally harbor the attitude that they can solve crimes while the highly trained experts are still running around measuring things and running laboratory tests.

"A chief just can't afford to lose a whole shift off the street," Powell said.

Secondly, Powell said, there's a big problem with the kind of training which has been going on. "There is some strong indication that the training available is not effective. There has been some poor planning for the kind of training we need and how best to make it available to the people who need it most," Powell said.

In fiscal 1974-75, for instance, nearly one million dollars were allocated. As of June 30, 1976, only $443,495.63 had actually been spent. That's only 48.4 per cent.

Different Ways

The money can be used in a lot of different ways — to send policemen or deputies to the Justice Academy at Salemburg, to numerous community college advanced law enforcement courses, to hold seminars and training

With less than half the available training money being used, Tucker objected that there's little need struggling and planning to set up more training for officers "when the chief is not going to let them use it."

Tucker's indictment, while a harsh one, is generally agreed to by others close to the various training

One of the big problems is that the money has been made available in large grants to various regions around the state without actually figuring out precisely the kinds of training programs especially needed in particular locales to best improve the capabilities of the local police agencies, he said.

Powell thinks the state needs to take a hard look at the several duplicating training efforts around the state, the contents of courses, and ways to help local officers get free from duty for training purposes.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Ford Gets Treasury Help

By ROWLANE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Michael Duval, who is paid $38,000-plus a year out of the U.S. Treasury to be special counsel to the President, is spending full time these days representing President Ford's interests in debate arrangements—a sign that the Ford campaign is as contemptuous as ever of the new election campaign law.

That act forbids additional contributions, including contributions in kind, to a presidential nominee accepting the $21.3 million federal subsidy. Thus, Duval might be expected to drop off the federal payroll, at least temporarily, if the letter of the law were followed. But the Ford campaign has no intention of doing that.

Whether the Federal Election Commission will deal between now and Nov. 2 with indirect aid from the Treasury received by candidate Ford is doubtful. But while probably running no risk of legal action, Mr. Ford's managers have been criticized all year for violating the spirit of the law.

The justification for Duval is that he is a "volunteer" giving part-time campaign help that does not interfere with his official duties. "That's ridiculous," a Ford campaign insider told us. "Mike has been working on the debates full time. If he's doing anything else, I don't know about it." Indeed, Duval was fully engaged in politics at Kansas City, as a Ford operative in the platform fight.

Nor is he alone. Much of the White House staff is concentrating on the presidential campaign, as is the President. Richard Cheney, White House chief of staff on the federal payroll at $42,500 a year, has been considered by many the real campaign manager since Mr. Ford's nomination.

Ford campaign lawyers point to the FEC dismissal of previous complaints about Rogers Morton working on the campaign from the White House. But the commission's ruling is not clear-cut. Moreover, a concurring opinion by commission member Neil Staebler indicated he would like to see the matter raised in a case such as the one posed by Duval.

was his vigorous support of Mr. Ford against Ronald Reagan in last April's Wisconsin primary. Nevertheless, Olson was set for quick Senate confirmation until Helms intervened.

The widely accepted reason for that intervention is that Helms, a Reaganite stalwart, is acting against a diplomatic appointment made solely as a reward for helping to beat Reagan. However, the fight goes much deeper—to Helms's hard-line opposition to secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

What interests conservatives about the Bahamas post is not so much Olson but the ambassador he is replacing: Seymour Weiss, a hard-line critic of East-West detente.

As head of the State Department's bureau of political-military affairs in 1973-74 veteran civil servant Weiss clashed frequently with Dr. Kissinger. He was exiled to Nassau in July 1974, but enemies in the State Department bureaucracy now want him out of that post too. Weiss learned he had

Strength For Today

STRIVING FOR HEAVEN

The great St. Augustine, who came from a wealthy and learned family, experienced periods of backsliding as he strove to leave his dissolute life and live as became a Christian. On one occasion he cried out, "What is wrong with me?" The unlearned start up and take heaven by force, but I, with much learning but without a stout heart, wallow in flesh and blood.

Good education is no guarantee of sound character. Some of the most saintly characters are recruited from the poor and ignorant. Often people of great intellectual achievement cannot grasp the simple things of faith that come so easily to their more humble brethren.

Faith and religious understanding has little to do with theological argumentation and the analysis of creeds. It comes usually as a result of commitment. When we make a move toward God, it seems that He makes a move toward us. He does not ask us what we believe or why; He wants to know what we are going to do.

Ford's Media Blunder

WASHINGTON — Just as people were getting over the shock of Jimmy Carter having given an interview to Playboy magazine, it was revealed that President Ford had permitted himself to be interviewed by TV Guide a magazine that panders to heterosexuals and people who are titillated by the boob tube.

In one of the frankest statements ever made by a President, Mr. Ford confessed to watching television two hours every evening and said he prefers shows "that give me a total change from what I do all day long. I either like humor or I like—and this gets into into a treacherous field, I know—I happen to like Kojak and Police Woman."

Unlike Carter, President Ford did not say whether or not God forgives him for watching television, but he did admit he has friends who leave their wives to watch TV and he forgives them for it.

Other Editors Say "Stay No. 1"

(Jacksonville Daily News)

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld's hint that the Pentagon will seek a hefty $18 billion increase in the defense budget for fiscal 1977 reflects concern over inflation, a conviction in Washington that the public is security-conscious and awareness of a growing military might in the Soviet Union.

The arguments probably are valid.

President Ford had proposed earlier this year a more modest increase from the current level of $112 billion. But this $120 billion target envisioned only about a 2 per cent gain in real spending. The rest would have been lost to inflation. The new goal, estimated to be about $130 billion, will allow a hike of 5 per cent or more in military strength.

The American people—and Congress, too—are skeptical of detente as increasing evidence is revealed of continuing enlargement and modernization of Soviet Forces. Congress already has indicated a commitment to more personnel, planes and ships, despite a plea by Democratic presidential challenger Jimmy Carter for cuts of $5 to $7 billion in the military budget.

Rumsfeld also wants a more sophisticated air defense system. The consensus of national opinion seems to support Rumsfeld's goals.

But opinion is fickle. A population weary of taxes is unlikely to tolerate waste or inefficiency. Rumfeld, at Camp Lejeune this week to present the base its third Natural Resources Conservation Award, left no doubt that he would wage a strong fight for a strong national defense.

Pointing to the dangers in Carter's talk of trimming the National Defense budget, he noted, "What concerns me about this (Defense cuts) is the disastrous effect it would have on the United States.

It has been the pattern for almost 30 years for people to walk about telling Americans that Defense is cheap...and that's not true."

He then spoke of how U.S. defense spending had declined while Russia's spending was accelerating.

He noted that if this trend continues "U.S. will slide down the slope to inferiority. And that's unacceptable to President Ford...and there's not a doubt in my mind that it's unacceptable to the American people.

As negotiations continue for a new treaty with the Russians on strategic arms limitations, the United States can settle for no less.

The President also confessed to liking Mannix and Cannon which are now off the air and also Colombo, another crime show.

He also said he gets work done during the commercials.

Many political experts believe that by granting an interview to TV Guide, Mr. Ford made a momentous political blunder. As one Carter campaign official put it, "Although he will deny it, Mr. Ford chose a magazine to express his views that, for many years, has associated itself with lascivious layouts of The Waltons, hedonistic articles on The Wonderful World of Disney and salacious cartoons about Monday night football that leave nothing to the imagination.

"I believe that the question the American people are going to ask is do they want a President who watches Kojak and Police Woman, but not the commercials?"

"Do you think Mr. Carter will make an issue of President Ford's interview in TV Guide?"

Query Timing Motive

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are complaining about the timing and content of a congressional report that criticizes the handling of the Mayaguez incident.

The General Accounting Office, in a report issued Tuesday, said Marines were ordered to invade a Cambodian island and rescue crewmen from the captured cargo ship, despite reports that the crewmen were no longer on the island.

The report also said intelligence information incorrectly indicated the island would be defended by about 20 Cambodian soldiers, but the Marines landing on the island were met by fire from about 150 heavily armed men.

Eighteen Marines were killed or listed as missing as a result of the assault on May 15, 1975, and 23 Air Force men were killed in a helicopter crash two days earlier.

The report, released by the House international political and military affairs subcommittee, said the Cambodians began releasing the crewmen from another location while the attack on the island was starting.

40 Years Ago Today

The American League Yankees today defeated the National League Giants, 13 to 5, to win the 1936 World Series, four games to two.

The Yankees entered the ninth inning on the bright side of a 6 to 5 score and slaughtered the Giants for seven additional runs to put the game on ice.

The two teams played on equal terms during the first eight innings of the contest. Although trailing most of the time, the Giants were within striking distance until the McCarthy men made a race-track of the diamond and scored the seven extra markers.

The Giants won the first game of the series, but the Yankees came back to take the next three straight. The National League pennant winners' hopes were revived yesterday when they took the fifth game, but the Yankees' batting power was too much for them today.

An official average of $25.06 on the Greenville tobacco market yesterday set a record for auction this year, surpassing the previous high of $23.80 set on Monday of last week.

Farmers and warehousemen appeared enthusiastic over the turn the market is taking. The local market is bringing the best prices paid in the belt and farmers from all over are bringing their tobacco here.

Small Business Got Attention

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — A businessmen's organization says it believes it has won a commitment from Jimmy Carter that he would seek the expansion of "the small, independent business sector" relative to big business and government.

The National Small Business Association said Carter's position was made in response to a request to him and President Ford for statements regarding what it claims is an erosion of the power of small and medium-size companies.

Ford impressed the group by advocating the development of a network of University Business Development Centers to cooperate with government in aiding small and medium-size businessmen.

Both candidates supplied the association with statements expressing support for the expansion of independent business, but Carter said he would use statistical yardsticks to measure the growth.

In his response, Ford reiterated a statement made earlier that "it is time you got back to working for your customers rather than the government. It is time the government minded its own business and let you run yours."

Milton Stewart, president of the politically independent Washington-based organization, said it was the first time it had obtained statements from both candidates in a presidential election.

"The two candidates have already given small business problems more attention than any others in recent memory," he said, but added that "we hope they become specific enough so that small business can choose between them."

The association, made up mainly of manufacturers and distributors in every state, describes as small or independent almost any company not included in the 1,000 largest industrial firms or the 300 largest finance and service concerns.

It maintains that the very largest corporations, unions and government have grown at the expense of what it calls the independent sector, partly because of "mistaken federal tax, spending, regulatory and other policies."

The No. 1 priority of the organization, "the ultimate test of the success of the next four years," it said, will be whether the independent sector has a larger share of assets and jobs than it does now.

Neither candidate specifically endorsed that view, but Stewart said he interpreted Carter's promise of statistical measurements as indicating endorsement.

Carter's original statement was revised last week to add that "I would introduce and support concrete proposals which would have as high priority the expansion of the independent small business sector of the economy."

"To measure the success of these proposals, my administration would develop specific statistical yardstick formulas to measure the relative growth of small business in relationship to other sectors of the economy."

Both candidates invoked the name of former president Harry Truman, Carter declaring that if elected he would be the first small businessman since Truman to hold the top elective office.

Speaking of the need to restrain government spending, Ford said, "Harry Truman, himself a former small businessman, saw the wisdom of this principle when he used the presidential veto an average of 35 times each year he was in office."

The candidates also expressed sympathy with the NSBA view that federal regulatory policy imposes a severe and sometimes needless burden on small businessmen, and both suggested streamlining.

Said Ford: "We need a topto-bottom overhaul." Carter, stating that 82 regulatory agencies put out more than 45,000 pages of regulations in 1975, promised to reduce red tape, paperwork and unnecessary reporting requirements.

The candidates said they favor strict enforcement of antitrust laws. Carter stated specifically that he would seek "tough" enforcement of the Robinson-Patman Act, which outlaws discriminatory price-cutting.

Antitrust is a particular concern of the NSBA, which states that "more and more during the past 20 years small business and the rest of the independent sector have been squeezed into a shrinking segment of the economy by the growth of government on the one hand and big business and labor on the other."

The result, it maintains, has been a diminishing of entrepreneurship, risk-taking, innovation and freedom.

Designer Puts Romance In Girls' Fashion

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Gypsy dresses with ballet russe kerchiefs and wide Cluny lace trim, Victorian styles with big sleeves, prairie dresses, tabards, lace jumpsuits with cinched-in beaded ribbon belts for the holiday cruise collection.

Such descriptions may sound like couture fashions for women who want to make the best dressed list, but they are, instead, among new styles being turned out for the lollipop set — a whole new look that should separate the girls from the boys, says designer Doree Selevan of Miami. And if that doesn't do it, the new bouffant petticoats will — they'll be in stores come spring.

"Little girls like to dress up and they enjoy clothes that emulate young juniors or older sister, the grown-up feeling that makes them want to walk and sit properly," says Doree, who has been designing clothes for little girls for 20 years, and heads her own dress business.

More mothers are allowing their children to select clothes right off the racks so clothes must have hanger appeal, she says. Many of her back-to-school fashions were instant whimsy in jumpers, blouses, shirts, calicos and plaids with such imaginative touches as pockets that say "carfare," "lunch money," or whatever.

Doree's enthusiasm makes it clear that little girl fashions are no longer neutral kid stuff, even though jeans and pants are still popular. "This dress is great with boots; this lace jumsuit is going like wildfire with buyers (she is now making it in toddler sizes); this dress has an adorable little over-the-shoulder bag; a large golden pin is worn on this kilt skirt."

She doesn't like tan or brown for little girls. "It makes them look sallow." She prefers pastels, rich dark greens, red and navy combinations, which she considers neat and trim for school.

"Collars really frame a little girl's face and I like soft ruffles — they are pretty and flattering. I use big hems to extend the life of the dress, and until now I've taken a strong stand on lowering skirts. But I recently saw French and Italian children wearing knee-length skirts and I thought it looked quite smashing, so they'll be in the spring line."

In designing clothes away from the garment center of New York, she isn't "brain-washed by outside forces" but she doesn't really care anyway what other people are doing. Her success in stores is an indication that she is on the right track, she says.

"Our Cuban workers do some hand work, little French knots and the like that may decorate collars, pockets, bibs, but mainly the trimmings come from Europe — embroideries from Switzerland, Alencon-type laces from France, braids from Germany and Italy. Quality buttons from the United States are now getting scarce," she says.

It's Different Now That He's The Boss

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: May I put in my two cents about married men taking their secretaries out for lunch and cocktails?

When Jack (not his real name) first met me, I was the new girl in the office, and Jack was a salesman. My two bosses (both married) kept inviting me to lunch and cocktails to "unwind" after work, but I never went because I didn't think it was right. Besides, I was going with Jack, and he used to say that girls who accepted such invitations were tramps.

Now, 20 years later, Jack doesn't see anything wrong with taking HIS secretary out for lunch!

What's your thinking on this, Abby?

STRAIGHT ARROW

DEAR STRAIGHT: As I've said, it all depends on where they lunch, the frequency of the lunches and who's feeding whom what.

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote asking how to introduce a person with whom one has an intimate relationship without marriage, and you said, "Call him/her a 'friend.'" I am appalled that you would give a sexual connotation to the word "friend."

I have been going with a very fine gentleman for two years whom I've been introducing as my friend. Now I'm wondering if everyone thinks we are bed partners.

I refuse to call a paunchy, 60-year-old man my "boyfriend," but what do I call him?

Abby, please find another word to describe a live-in pal.

FRIENDLESS IN N.Y.

DEAR FRIENDLESS: Why must one be labeled according to whether or not the relationship includes sexual intimacy? (It's nobody's business.) Friendship is a large umbrella that covers platonic relationships as well as roommates. Not every friend is necessarily a lover, but I would hope that every lover is a friend.

DEAR ABBY: I have a comment or two to make about the letter from PASTOR STEVENSON. It was written in response to a prior letter from a young girl whose father had sexually abused her. PASTOR STEVENSON suggested that the girl had "tempted" her father by wearing "tight-fitting, revealing clothes."

This attitude is another variation on the theme that any woman who is raped must have been asking for it. It places the burden of guilt on the victim rather than on the attacker — where it belongs!

The pastor seemed quite sympathetic to the tempted father, but had not a single word of sympathy for the abused daughter.

The pastor just assumes that the girl dressed provocatively: One is innocent until proven guilty, pastor!

No man can be forced into committing rape. He does it by choice, and the responsibility for the act belongs to the man, the perpetrator — not to the woman, his victim.

C.J.S.: SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR ABBY: You are entirely too soft when it comes to disciplining children. I may be old-fashioned, but I raised three well-behaved children by using the 3B system — Bust their Butts with a Board.

Ford's Jewish Courtship

Despite the critical importance of the Jewish vote in close presidential elections, the White House failed to publicize President Ford's 90-minute session Sept. 20 with 145 Jewish leaders, mostly Republicans, from 27 states. Except for a Jewish Telegraphic Agency report, the session went unnoticed. So did a promise by Max Fisher, Detroit industrialist and longtime Republican fund-raiser, that Mr. Ford "will do everything possible to get it (the Jewish vote)."

One reason the White House barred photographers was concern among some non-Republicans that Mr. Ford was trying to exploit their presence for political purposes. That same concern cut attendance slightly. Rabbi Alexander Schindler, who heads a blue-ribbon committee of Jewish organization presidents, was not present. Leading American Jews who did attend informed the White House they were there as individuals, not representing organizations.

The meeting avoided more than cursory mention of the Arab boycott, and political overtones angered some of the leaders.

Buchwald...

 "No, Mr. Carter feels the interview speaks for itself. But it certainly has changed Mr. Ford's image."
 "In what way?"
 "The President has tried to give the impression he is always working in the Oval Office of the White House. Now we know that while we thought he was reading position papers on Rhodesia, he actually was watching Police Woman. He had nothing to gain and everything to lose going public with his private thoughts on this sensitive subject. Most Americans believe one's inner thoughts on television is a private matter between a person and his TV set. By making a national confession of his program preferences, the President has shaken the confidence of some of his most ardent followers."

Over at Ford campaign headquarters, officials were trying to make the most out of a bad situation. One worker told me, "I don't think the TV Guide interview will hurt the President that much. He was being honest and frank about a subject that people don't like to talk about. Most men in their hearts have thought about Police Woman many times, but very few will admit it openly."

Another Ford campaign official was not as optimistic.

"I'm afraid the TV Guide interview is going to haunt us for the rest of the campaign. Instead of the reporters asking questions about tax reform and unemployment, they're going to tackle the President on his strange TV tastes. If I had been asked I would have vetoed the interview. It just doesn't look right for a President to be in the same magazine that publishes photographs of Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman and All in the Family."

Adams Col...

 Shortly after the release of the report, President Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen, said Ford disagrees with the conclusions. He said Ford "carried out the actions in the Mayaguez case and believed they were right."

Rep. Larry Winn Jr. of Kansas, one of two Republican members of the House subcommittee that released the report, noted that the document was released the day before Ford and Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter were to debate foreign policy.

"I'm sorry that someone saw fit to release it now, because I was told it wouldn't be released until after the election," Winn said.

Community Compost Pile

WILLIAMSTON — A saving Board has recommended nature's nutrients idea has been put into effect in Williamston with approval by members of the town board for a public community compost pile of dead leaves.

Following a request by a group of citizens that autumn leaves stockpiled in clean-up of yards be put to good bacterial use instead of placed in a landfill, K. P. Lindsay offered a vacant lot next to his home as a site to deposit leaves collected. The Williamston Sanitation Department has been instructed to start depositing leaves gathered on the vacant lot. The public will be able to draw material from the compost pile at no cost.

Public hearings on three zoning matters have been set for a special meeting on October 25 at 5 p.m. The first request is to amend the town's zoning ordinance to allow a library facility as a permitted use in an R-6 residential area; the second is to approve the Neighborhood Development Plan for a second year for Community Development funding; and the third request is for rezoning from R-6 residential to commercial another portion of property fronting Washington Street between Andrews Street and the Seaboard Coastline Railroad.

Commissioners have directed that Rivers and Associates of Greenville make a cost estimate study on improving water pressure in the new high school and hospital areas, where water pressure is currently low. Also, the consultant firm gave a cost estimate of $16,590 for extending an eight inch water line on Factory Street to the Jamesville Highway.

As a result of citizens appearing before the board in a discussion of the problem of stray dogs in town, with a need for a leash or other control law, the matter has been placed on the agenda for the next regular meeting November 1.

Two new cul-de-sacs have been dedicated — Felton Circle and Critcher Circle. Both were recommended for inclusion in the town plan by the Williamston Planning Board.

Commissioners have agreed to look into a request by Mrs. Julia Lee to have her property rezoned back to R-6 from its present commercial zoning. Her property was zoned from R-6 to commercial in 1970. The Planning Board has recommended denial of the request.

The Frank G. Vaughn firm was awarded the low-bid construction contract for improvement of the drainage system on East Liberty Street at a cost of $16,081.

A resolution was adopted to be presented to county commissioners requesting that a consulting firm be hired to evaluate the present emergency medical care system in the county. The resolution calls for recommendations. The idea of a joint Williamston-Martin County study on this subject was presented by the Rotary Club and the Jaycettes.

In other actions, the Williamston Town Board:

- Tabled until a later date a decision on whether the town or developers of Fairview Acres Sub-division will bear the cost of installing street lights. Normally, this cost is borne by VEPCO, but in view of the electrical system being an underground one, VEPCO has informed that installation costs cannot be paid by them;
- Asked the Sanitation Department to look into requests by two churches for land-fill material to fill in gulleys behind the respective churches; and
- Directed the town attorney to draw up an ordinance that would permit the town to offer a reward for information leading to detection of persons turning in a false fire alarm.

In a major step in the continuing effort to secure a permanent site for a Williamston Parks and Recreation area, commissioners approved a survey of an approximate 12 acre site between Warren Street and the U.S. 64 by-pass. A Parks and Recreation Advisory Committee was also approved, with Herbert L. Gay named as the committee's chairman.

In an executive session, approval was made for a modest increase in the salaries of workers in the Sanitation Department. Earlier the town board had adopted the employee classification plan, but had not adopted the pay plan. Sanitation workers have expressed dissatisfaction with their present salaries and had brought the matter to the town board's attention.

Returned After Long Absence Found A Way To Name Oil Fields

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — A group of 70 Japanese, all former residents and most former citizens of Peru, returned to the country recently after an absence of 35 to 40 years.

All 70 had crossed the Pacific to visit relatives and ancestral homes in Japan in the years immediately before World War II. Forced to remain in Japan by the world conflict, they forged new lives there and never found the time nor the money to return.

The trip was organized by the alumni association of the Japanese school in Lima. The visitors spent a month with relatives and friends and in touring through the country.

Geologists working on Phillips Petroleum Co.'s project in the Norwegian sector of the North Sea found a solution. Each sector was assigned a letter. As maps were developed, names coded to each letter were required. The geologists decided to use the name of a fish or shellfish for each letter, starting with amberjack, bass, cod, etc.

A report by the Williamston Tax Collector reveals that through September 30, current taxes in the amount of $235,061 have been collected, with about $456,000 still outstanding.

Farmville OKs DOT Agreement

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Commissioners last night approved an agreement with the State Department of Transportation which would spell out the work to be done on portions of Main and Wilson Streets, part of the town's planned downtown improvement project.

The town will provide the engineering work and the relocation of utilities and the state will provide the repaving of Main Street from Home Avenue to the Norfolk Southern Railroad and Wilson Street from Walnut to Contentnea Streets.

The Board resolved to have the town join the N. C. Municipal Power Agency No. 3, which had been formed the night before. The Agency is made up of North Carolina towns which buy electricity from Carolina Power and Light Company. The Agency would be formed to negotiate on behalf of the towns with CP&L. J. A. Wooten, director of the Water and Light Department, was named commissioner to represent Farmville. The hiring of a crime prevention officer was approved. Ninety-five per cent of the cost of the program will be paid by the federal government through the Mid-East Commission on Law Enforcement the first year.

A decision as to whether to lease or buy a copying machine for the town office was turned over to the finance committee.

A request for an expenditure of $490 on the town's part for seven channel four portable radios for police officers was approved.

The hiring of Fred Sauls, a Farmville native, as director of the Recreation Department was approved. His salary will be $9,500 per year.

It was decided that the practice of restricting left turns during busy Friday afternoon and Saturday hours on Main Street would be discontinued. There have been complaints from citizens, it was told, and it has been learned that the rerouting of traffic by a municipality on state-maintained roads is illegal.

Approval was given for the final payment of $8,287.78 to F & G Construction Company and for $1,019.47 to McDavid Engineering, both for work on the Lewis Store Water Extension project.

The finance committee agreed to meet with representatives of the Pitt County Board of Education Thursday at 10:30 a.m. to discuss what portion of the buildings and furnishings on the old junior high school property are part of the purchase recently made by the town. The town bought the property from the county for $100,000.

Commissioner Wilton Duke asked whether the town has liability insurance to absolve the persons who serve on the Town Board from personal liability in case of a suit against the town. He was told there is none. It was then moved and seconded that such liability insurance be looked into and purchased immediately.

A cemetery lot repurchase ordinance was adopted. Under it persons wishing to sell lots would either offer them to the town to be bought at the same price the town sells lots for or sell them to other individuals at not more than the town would sell them. The ordinance is meant to prevent speculation on lots.

School Board...

Williams said.

"The reason for such a quick decision for the proposal was because of the Ayden Grammar School preparing to purchase a land site. If we can agree for a combined middle school now, then it will be centrally located, if not it will probably be closer to Ayden. Also the student enrollment in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades is on steady decline," J.O. Carson said.

"Because of the decline of students there will be problems in getting adequate classroom support. This is not a place to resolve a local problem. I think that this problem should be reverted to the individual Advisory Committees," Carson added.

"Ayden is the next school that money has been appropriated for and we knew if something was not done fast the site would be purchased. No one in Ayden that I know of is against it. I am not saying that I am for it, but in the vocational areas you can't offer a program for 50 students," Bill McLawhorn said.

The board agreed to take no action on the proposal but to revert the problem back to the local Advisory Committees to allow the citizens to express their opinions. The board announced that the Advisory Committees will meet Monday, October 11 at 7:30 p.m. at Ayden Grifton High School.

Jim Black of the Winterville Advisory Committee presented enrollment figures which showed a rapid increase in the Winterville enrollment. Black requested that an additional four classrooms be built at W.H. Robinson and four classrooms be built at A. G. Cox and that a mobile unit be purchased immediately for W.H. Robinson.

According to Black and Blaine Moye, W.H. Robinson principal, W. H. Robinson has 80 additional students this year and 30 students over the state's teacher allotment.

The board voted to purchase a mobile unit for the Robinson

School with surplus monies in an air conditioning fund.

The board voted to assign an additional reading teacher at Farmville Middle and A.G. Cox schools. These positions will be paid for through part of an $18,000 grant received in 874 funds.

Thomas also presented 1975-76 Audit Reports for individual schools and requested that $3,237.75 of Emergency Funds be transferred to Office Supplies to purchase a check signing machine. The board accepted the report and voted to purchase the machine.

The 1976-77 Program Budget for Trainable Mentally Retarded Children totaling $127,925 was approved by the board.

The board appointed and reappointed members of advisory committees at G. R. Whitfield, Stokes Elementary School, and Winterville. Other advisory committee members will be appointed at a later board meeting.

Associate Supt. Tom Craft reported that the construction on the Wellcome Middle School is about 85 per cent completed and that a mid-year transfer is expected.

Associate Supt. Craft presented preliminary information about field houses for each high school. The board took no action concerning the fieldhouse plans.

Craft also reported that the insurance coverage on the activity buses will continue for the present until notification from the insurance company.

The board scheduled a meeting for October 14 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the problem of students crossing county and city boundaries to attend school. The board will also discuss the plans for high school fieldhouses at the meeting.

The board voted to employ Mrs. Mary Daughtride, Joanne Christopher, Karrin Whatley and Cathy Rigby.

In other business the board:

—Received a request from the Winterville Advisory Council for

Shuns Pomp For Inauguration

BOILING SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — The new president of Gardner-Webb College has adopted a Calvin Coolidge stance about his inauguration.

Coolidge once opposed a formal inauguration of his presidency, saying it wasn't worth the money.

Now, Dr. Craven Williams has decided to forego the traditional pomp of such a ceremony and save the school $15,000.

A recent gift would have covered the cost of the ceremony without dipping into the school budget. But the 36-year-old Monroe native has directed that it be spent instead for student activities, library books, summer study and other aid to the faculty.

covered walks at each school in Winterville. No action was taken on the request.

—Received permits for the operation of each school cafeteria.

—Announced the Open House and dedication of Farmville Middle School to be held October 26 at 7:30 p.m.

Announced the dedication services at W.H. Robinson October 31 at 3:15 p.m. of the J.W. Maye, Sr. Media Center.

—Granted maternity leaves.

The board held an executive session following the meeting to discuss a personnel matter and a land purchase.

$123.71 Day At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Demand for quality grades of leaf continued strong on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday, according to Louis N. Williams, secretary of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Less desirable grades are in less demand, but selling for several cents above support price. Top price paid by a company yesterday was $1.68 a pound. Stabilization was slightly more than on previous days. Offers of cutters and smoking leaf showed an increase in volume compared with that of Monday. Nondescript grades account for a small portion.

Some 681,990 pounds have been sold for $843,699, averaging $123.71 per hundred pounds. To date the Farmville market has sold 24,066,181 pounds for $27,770,378 for a season's average of $115.39 per hundred pounds. The average a year ago was $99.29 per hundred.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Sept. 23 through Sept. 29.

House
LOBBYING Rejected, 150 for and 215 against, an amendment to add lobbyists for state and local governments to the list of lobbyists who must report their activities to the General Accounting Office. The amendment was proposed to HR 15, a bill to strengthen federal monitoring of lobbyists. The bill was passed and sent to the Senate.
 The bill requires lobbyists to register and report finances, if they meet minimum standards of time and money spent to influence legislative or executive branch decisions.
 Rep. Albert Quie (R-Minn.), a supporter, said that "probably the most effective lobbyists, and the lobbyists who are most aggressive, are those representing the states," and that the amendment would insure that they "report on their lobbying the same as everyone else."
 Rep. Edward Pattison (D-N.Y.), an opponent, said that state and local governments "are all publicly accountable," for their activities, while the bill's purpose is to cast light on lobbying "by people who, otherwise, do not have to disclose anything."

Rep. Charles Rose (D-7) voted "yea."
 Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L.H. Fountain (D-2), David Henderson (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Stephen Neal (D-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), W.G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Roy Taylor (D-11) voted "nay."
AUTO RESEARCH Overrode, 293 for and 102 against, President Ford's veto of HR 13655, a bill authorizing a five-year program under the Energy Research and Development Administration to develop more efficient auto propulsion systems, such as steam turbines. The Senate failed to override (see below), so the veto was sustained.
 The bill authorized expenditures of $25 million in fiscal 1977 and $75 million in fiscal 1978 to begin the program. A companion bill authorizing a research program solely for electric vehicles was passed recently over Ford's veto.
 Rep. Olin Teague (D-Tex.), a supporter of the override, said the bill provides an "aggressive but focused" program to "increase the energy efficiency of our personal transportation... while reducing its environmental impact."
 Opponents generally agreed with Ford that present federal propulsion research is adequate, and that the bill launches what will evolve into a "massive" spending program. Rep. Robert Michel (R-Ill.) said that "the private sector is better equipped to pursue this effort."

 Jones, Fountain, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Taylor voted "yea."
 Henderson, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."
PIPELINE SAFETY Agreed, 199 for and 151 against, to Senate language for toughening the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968. The Bill (HR 12168) later passed the Senate and was sent to the White House. It would strengthen the 1968 law setting federal safety standards and enforcement procedures to prevent explosions of gas pipelines.
 Critics pointed out that despite the 1968 law's high intentions, only 68 actions had been brought by the government against unsafe pipelines, with only $93,510 assessed in fines. This bill provides money to help states better implement the law and authorizes citizens' suits to correct unsafe conditions neglected by government enforcers.
 Largely at issue in this vote was the citizens' lawsuit provision. One supporter, Rep. John Dingell (D-Mich.), said it is not too much to ask "that where this kind of peril exists we allow citizens, under these narrowly restricted rights, to initiate suits."
 Rep. Clarence Brown (R-Ohio), an opponent, said that permitting citizens' suits "seems particularly ill-advised" because such actions would usurp the authority of the federal Office of Pipeline Safety Operations, and unfairly penalize all utility customers if a utility is shut down.
 Jones, Andrews, Neal, Preyer and Hefner voted "yea."
 Fountain, Henderson, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."
 Rose and Taylor did not vote.

Senators
AUTO RESEARCH Failed, 41 for and 35 against, to achieve the two-thirds majority necessary to override President Ford's veto of HR 13655, a bill authorizing a five-year program to develop more efficient auto propulsion systems (see House vote above). The failure of the Senate to override sustained the veto.
 Sen. Frank Moss (D-Utah), a supporter of the override, said that "the need for an aggressive program of automotive research and development has never been greater." He added that production of "energy efficient and virtually pollution-free" autos envisioned by the bill's sponsors would save the U.S. millions of barrels of oil each year.
 Sen. Robert Griffin (R-Mich.), an opponent, said the bill would result in an "unnecessary, ridiculous duplication" of propulsion research already being done by federal agencies. "How any member... could go out to the American people and seriously say he is interested in saving money, in avoiding duplication of effort in the government, and still vote for this bill, I cannot understand," Griffin said.
 Sens. Robert Morgan (D) and Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."
LAWYERS' FEES Passed, 57 for and 15 against, a bill enabling courts to award lawyers' fees to the winning side in lawsuits brought to enforce federal civil rights laws. The bill (S 2278) was sent to the House.
 Sponsors said those most in need of civil rights law protection often are those least able to afford a lawyer's services in suing for relief, and that their bill is intended to rectify this problem.
 Sen. James Abourezk (D-S.D.), a supporter, called passage a "great service to the continuing struggle to eradicate discrimination in this country," because private citizens would have more incentive and clout to help enforce civil rights laws.
 Opponents said the bill would "stir up" litigation, placing a heavier burden on overworked federal courts. Sen. James Allen (D-Ala.) said that "while it has been said that this is a civil rights bill, actually it is a lawyers bill" primarily benefiting the legal profession.
 Morgan voted "yea."

Helms voted "nay."
"BAD FAITH" Tabled, 56 for and 19 against, an amendment to require a court finding of "bad faith" on the part of the losing side before courts can award lawyers' fees to the winning side in suits brought to enforce federal civil rights laws. The amendment was proposed to S 2278, a bill enabling courts to award lawyers' fees in such civil rights suits (see above vote).
 No supporters of tabling and thus killing the amendment spoke during debate. But the bill's sponsors urged defeat of all amendments — which they feared would diminish chances of House passage before Congress adjourned or excessively weaken the bill.
 Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.), an opponent of tabling, said the "bad faith" test would give courts an objective standard to apply before awarding lawyers' fees. Without some determination of whether a party used such tactics as "frivolous defenses" or delay, Helms said, the bill is a "bicentennial bonanza... to enrich the coffers of attorneys..."
 Helms and Morgan voted "nay."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, continuing the steep downturn that began more than a week ago.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks lost about 4 points in early trading, and declines took a 3-2 lead over advances among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers said the market was caught up in an atmosphere of uneasiness over impending third quarter corporate earnings reports.

Many Wall Street firms have been lowering their profit estimates for many companies for the quarter because of recent sluggishness in the economy.

They also noted concern that Thursday's report from the government on wholesale price trends during September might show less favorable figures than in recent months. Dow Chemical fell 1/2 to 40 1/2 in a 136,000-share block trade. On Tuesday the company estimated lower third quarter earnings.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 11.22 points to 966.76, extending its loss for the last six sessions to more than 46 points.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 5-2 margin in the daily tally of NYSE trading, and the exchange's composite index was down 42 at 55.20.

Big Board volume came to 19.20 million shares. The American Stock Exchange market value index was off .92 at 100.56.

Pound Again Plunges

LONDON (AP) — The British pound plunged more than 2 1/2 cents today to $1.6390, near its all-time low.

The fall sparked off a drop in stock exchange values, sending the Financial Times index of leading industrial shares plunging 10.7 points to hit 308.6, a new low for the year.

The pound's all-time record low of $1.63 came during trading last Sept. 28.

At the close of the business day Tuesday night, the pound stood at $1.6645.

Dealers said the pound was being hit by a combination of continuing worries about Britain's economic and labor problems and renewed gambles on an upward revaluation of the strong West German mark.

Speculation that the German currency would be revalued started Tuesday despite a statement by West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt after his government won re-election Sunday that there would be no revaluation.

The Finance Ministry in Bonn issued a further statement today rejecting the reports of an impending revaluation as "completely unfounded."

She's Voted Since 1920

RALEIGH (AP) — When the general election rolls around Nov. 2, Lettie Mason can be counted on to cast her ballot.

The 96-year-old Raleigh resident is the state's oldest continuous voter. She has voted in every election since 1920 when women were allowed to vote under the 19th amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

"I like all the fellas who run," said Miss Mason, "but I've always been partial to Democrats."

"If you're interested in your country or your town, then it's your duty to vote," she said.

Alex Brock, state elections director, sent Miss Mason a letter commending her for her voting record. He said that if everybody followed her example, North Carolina wouldn't have "the electoral disease commonly referred to as 'apathy.'"

Jimmy Carter is her man this year. She said, "He has such a wonderful smile—and he's a Democrat, too."

years and I think that I can be helpful in knowing the situations and bureaucracy."

"I think that the vice presidential debate October 15 will be good in that it will show the two philosophies of the two men. They are good friends who debate all of the time on the Senate floor. It will be like moving the forum out where the people can see. Mondale is a most liberal Senator whereas my husband is more moderately conservative."

Mrs. Dole said that she does not think the presidential candidates use vice presidential candidates to show their aggressive side views in reference to Mondale's recent attack of Ford's pardon of President Nixon and Dole's statement that "Carter wouldn't know leadership if he met it head on."

"I do not think that the vice presidential nominees could be considered hatchet men, but it is necessary for them to point out inconsistencies when they see them," she said.

Mrs. Dole said she feels confident that President Ford will win the debate tonight.

"He has had 25 years of experience and is very knowledgeable of foreign affairs and defense matters. He also has worked on these problems in a day-to-day basis and I expect him to win," she said.

Mrs. Dole said that she was glad to be back in North Carolina, "her own stomping ground," Wednesday and to visit Greenville.

"It was good to get to see how East Carolina University is growing and how much the Greenville area is developing.

At the breakfast gathering, Mrs. Dole told Pitt County citizens that Carter is a geographical neighbor of the South, whereas Ford and Dole are philosophical neighbors of the South.

Mrs. Dole described the Carter-Mondale ticket as liberal and the Ford-Dole candidacy as a conservative choice.

Mrs. Dole visited Jacksonville and Wilmington also Wednesday and plans to travel to Asheville Thursday.

Arrest Man On Morals Charge

Marvin Ray Arnold, 33, of Route 1, Grimesland has been arrested by Greenville Police on charges of taking indecent liberties with a minor, Chief Glenn Cannon reported today.

Cannon said Arnold was charged Tuesday in connection with an incident that occurred Monday night at a Greenville motel. A 12-year-old Winterville boy was involved in the case the chief noted.

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department also announced that it has charged Arnold with two counts of taking indecent liberties with minors.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that the charges were made as a result of investigations prompted by the complaints of several parents alleging morals incidents involving their children.

The sheriff noted that a total bond of $9,500 has been set for Arnold by the department, including $4,000 for the morals charges, $5,000 for possession of firearms, and $500 for carrying a concealed weapon.

Arnold was arrested Monday around 11:45 p.m., he added.

There's Nothing Wrong With A Checking Account That A Key Account Can't Cure!

First Federal is proud to announce an entirely new concept in personal money management, the Key Account.

The Key Account is better than a checking account, better than a savings account — because it combines the best features of both. It lets you control every extra dollar of your cash to keep it hard at work earning 5% daily interest. And that includes the money you use to pay your bills and for day-to-day expenses.

Unlike a conventional savings account, your First Federal Key Account keeps your money readily available. Instantly. Around the clock.

Here's how the Key Account works.

Instant telephone access to your Key Account and checking account is one of the primary benefits.

When you open your Key Account at First Federal, you retain your checking account at the bank. But instead of putting all or most of your salary into checking, and drawing it down slowly as you pay bills and handle other expenses throughout the month, put your paycheck into your Key Account instead.

Then, whenever you have a few bills to pay or need cash for daily use, just telephone a special First Federal number. Tell us how much to transfer to your checking account to cover those bills or expenses. We'll transfer the money to the bank for you — and that includes any bank in the Pitt County area. (We also record the phone call, for your further protection.)

An important part of the Key Account concept in cash control is that you can make these transfers to your checking account, or from your checking account back to your Key Account, just as often as you need to. Daily, if you like. Twice a week. Whenever you need only a few dollars or a sizeable amount for bill-paying from your checking account. There's never a charge for any transfer.

And you can phone us any time of day or night, any day of the week. If you call before 11:00 a.m., your transfer will be handled by your bank the same day. If you call later, it will be handled the next business day.

The main objective is to keep as much of your cash as possible working continually for you, earning 5% daily interest, in your profitable Key Account.

You receive a monthly statement of your Key Account that lists all deposits, withdrawals, transfers, interest earned and your present balance.

Your statement is issued automatically. You don't have to waste time coming in to have your account updated.

You get a personal Prestige Key Account Card that identifies you as a Key Account holder.

The First Federal Prestige Machine — operated by your Prestige Key Account Card — provides pushbutton cash control services at your convenience, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Use the Prestige Machine to deposit or withdraw funds from your Key account, to cash a check, or to make transfers between your Key Account and checking account — without charge; or to make a payment on your home loan.

You automatically get a receipt for each transaction.

Out-of-town Prestige Emergency Cash and free travelers checks are extra benefits of your First Federal Key Account.

First Federal will issue you free travelers checks before you go on a trip. If you need more cash along the way, you can get it from your Key Account — without charge — through any of over 3,000 savings and loan locations across the nation.

Only First Federal offers the Key Account in this trade area — an entirely new concept in cash control. Stop by your nearest First Federal office and open yours. Now, before the rush begins.

Rose Open Loop Play With Gryphons

Fullback David Northrup

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Four days vs. two weeks.
That's the situation that faces Rose High School's Rampants as they open Division I play Thursday night at Rocky Mount. The Gryphons, with an open date last week, have had two weeks to prepare for Rose.

The Rampants, in contrast, have had just four days to get ready for Rocky Mount — a day less than usual.

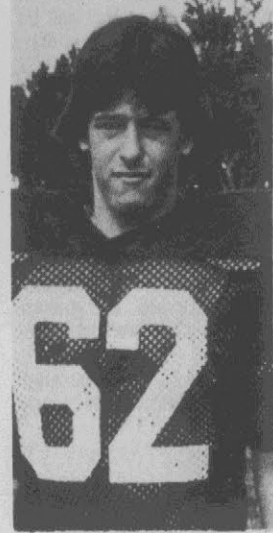

Rocky Mount comes into the game with a 3-1-1 record, having rallied to tie Durham Hillside, 26-26 in their last outing, nearly two weeks ago. Rose, meanwhile, posts only a 1-4 mark and has lost its last three in a row.

"We had three of four let-downs last week," Coach Dave Bumgarner said. "Otherwise I think we played pretty darn good."

Bumgarner praised Reid Ross, a 27-3 victor over Rose, as being "an excellent club."

"I don't know how far they will go, but they have a basic offense and defense that is pretty good. They have a better overall team than Goldsboro, especially with their two good receivers. Their running attack is better and

Larry Boyette

(Craig) Browning is the best quarterback I've seen in quite a while. We never got to him. He's got great ability."

Bumgarner noted that Reid Ross, leading 7-3, scored late in the half on a controversial play, called a fumble by the official at the time, and called a lateral — and possibly a forward one — by Bumgarner, both on the spot and after looking at film of the play.

"Then their quarterback got away on a long touchdown run, and they had an interception run back for a touchdown," the coach added.

"If those situations hadn't happened, it would have been an entirely different game. They had only 163 yards rushing, and we had 115. It was their passing that made a big difference."

Bumgarner was, thus, not totally disappointed in the win. "You don't like to lose 27-3, but they didn't beat us to death like they did last year (38-0)," he said. And that was with a team with proven talent as compared to this year's young team.

Bumgarner expects the team to be ready for Thursday's contest, but notes that Bryant Morton, a linebacker, may miss the action.

"We've got to control the ball more and move it. We've been getting it deep in our own territory, and we haven't been able to move it, giving the other team good field position. It all boils down to blocking. Our defense isn't that bad, we just need to move the ball when we need to. We're not attacking the other team like we should."

Bumgarner sees the early game as a definite advantage to Rocky Mount. "They've had a whole week extra to get ready for us. They've seen us play, and they've had a chance to get well."

One injured Gryphon, however, will not be ready. Fullback Mike Upchurch is out for the year with a knee injury.

Tailback Lloyd Byrum leads the offense with over 100 yards in each of the last three games. He rolled up 177 yards against Hillside. Quarterback Linden Willis has been erratic, but Bumgarner calls him a good thrower. He hit 18 of 23 for 165 yards against Hillside in his best outing of the year.

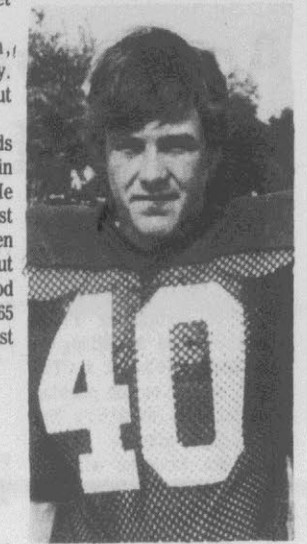

The Gryphons have run from the 1, and Bumgarner doesn't see them changing because of Upchurch's injury. "They have a real good line, both offensively and defensively. I don't think their backfield is that deep however."

"I think whether we can get to their quarterback may have a big effect on the outcome of the game," he added.

"It's a big game for both of us. It's the first conference game, and when you only play five games, every one of them is important."

"Whichever one of us wins is going to be a long way down the road toward the conference title — as are the two winners in the other game. The losers could well be out of it."

Kickoff is set for 8 p.m. at the Rocky Mount ball park.

NCAA Said Too Strong; ACC Expansion Doubtful

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Bob James, Commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference, took a couple of slaps at the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) and hinted that the ACC is not likely to expand any time soon in a talk to the Greenville Sports Club here yesterday.

James said that the collegiate athletic world is a lot like society in general. "We suffer when society suffers. Inflation is bothering us all."

"But where the people in general have allowed too much of the responsibility to get into Washington's hands, the collegiate athletic world has allowed the NCAA to get too much control."

James said that he felt some sort of reorganization of the NCAA is an "absolute necessity." He pointed out that the organization is composed of some 700 member schools, with enrollments of from 500 to 48,000.

"In 1973, we had 117 schools in Division I, and we felt we needed the right to control our own destiny and not be ruled by the 'smaller' schools. So a committee was appointed by the NCAA to study the situation, and when he was over, there were 134 Division I schools."

"This left a lot of people dissatisfied, so in 1975, there was another study. This resulted in 144 Division I schools. So there is no way we're going to allow this to go to another committee."

James said the big problem is television football. "When you see two teams playing on Saturday on television, they are getting about $380,000 between them. Well, a lot of smaller schools have formed conferences to get in on this. The NCAA provides that a conference must have two exposures every two years. Some of these schools are not really attractive to the TV people, but they have to broadcast them. At the same time, they want to keep the really big people on, so this is cutting down on the exposure schools like the ACC teams and East Carolina would get otherwise."

James said that the ACC currently is a close-knit group that is getting along much better than it did a few years back. "When one member of our group withdrew (South Carolina), there was a lot of divisiveness in the league. But now we have a spirit of cooperation."

The Commissioner said that the biggest problem facing the conference is financial. "Gate receipts can't go up much, so we have to resort to fund drives. A study right now shows that a freshman who entered this fall will cost us 33 per cent more in grant money when he's a senior just due to inflation."

James also praised the currently 30 per year-95 total in football grants. "This is enough to run a good program. And a coach who can't run a program with eight fulltime and two parttime assistants should take another look at the job he's doing."

Asked about the possibility of East Carolina's admission to the conference, James joked, "I'm surprised to hear that question."

However, he neatly avoided a direct answer, pointing out that the ACC had not discussed expansion until a year ago, when South Carolina spoke of reapplying for admission.

"We are vitally concerned over an institution's finances, program and philosophy. We've come a good way in the last few years, so we would look seriously as to whether there would be any financial benefit in admitting a new member."

James also said that he could not list any criteria for admission. "We had a list for the school that expressed interest, none other."

He did add that the non-North Carolina schools feared another school in this state due to the possibility of blocking-voting.

As to a 12th game, James said the ACC favored this, but he did not see it coming soon. "We brought it up (To the NCAA) recently, but we got little support for it. But the seed has been planted. We'll just have to wait and see if it grows any."

Next week's speaker for the Sports Club will be former pro football quarterback Milt Plum.

Hudspeth New Detroit Coach

By LARRY PALADINO
AP Sports Writer
PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Rick Forzano's stern discipline wasn't successful with the Detroit Lions — and his successor does not sound like he will be any easier on his athletes.

"We're gonna be demanding of our football players," said new Coach Tommy Hudspeth. "We're going to ask them to do certain things and go from there and put the chips on the table."

Execution will be vital, Hudspeth said. "You've got to block and tackle if you're going to get the job done," he said. "When you're asked to do something, you should do it."

Whether he can stifle player unhappiness while getting more out of the lackluster Lions will determine whether Detroit can turn things around in the National Football League this season.

Hudspeth, a 45-year-old Kansas and former college coach, was named interim coach Tuesday by Lions' owner William Clay Ford. He moved up from his post as coordinator of personnel and scouting to replace Forzano, who resigned Monday.

Hudspeth believes Detroit has the talent to reach the playoffs, "but you have to get it out of them."

Forzano wasn't able to do it. There were several serious incidents of player dissension in his tenure of just over two seasons as head coach.

Forzano said his resignation was not the result of any pressure from Ford.

Forzano faced a battery of reporters at a Pontiac Stadium news conference prior to the introduction of Hudspeth as his replacement.

"Circumstances have to be overcome, and I feel I was unable to overcome certain circumstances," Forzano said.

Asked if his resignation saved the job of General Manager Russ Thomas, Forzano said: "If this helps save Russ' job then fine, but that wasn't the reason I resigned."

Forzano said even if the Lions, 1-3, had not lost to Green Bay 24-14 Sunday, he intended to resign.

Hudspeth said Ford asked him two weeks ago if he was willing to replace Forzano if need be.

"He came to me a couple weeks ago and discussed the possibility," Hudspeth said. "The reason I'm sitting here as interim coach is that we didn't want to start over again. We've got a good coaching staff intact."

"By having me step in, it's an easier transition than anything else we could do," said Hudspeth, who was an assistant at the University of Tulsa and with the Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian League.

Ford was not at either news conference.

In a release he said: "I had two major reasons for asking Tommy to take over the team ... Hudspeth has more head coaching experience than any other man on our staff. Just as important, and maybe more so, is the fact that I wanted to keep the present staff of assistants intact. There are men on it with definite head coaching potential."

Williams To Manage Expos

MONTREAL (AP) — Dick Williams, a strict disciplinarian who guided the Boston Red Sox and Oakland A's to American League championships, now will try and inject some life into the floundering Montreal Expos.

The Expos, who never have finished higher than fourth in their eight years of existence, wound up with the worst record in baseball this year. They signed the 47-year-old Williams to a two-year contract as manager Tuesday.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed. "I think things are in good hands," said Expos President John McHale in making the announcement of Williams' hiring. "We have a guy in Dick who knows how to win and has an attraction in Montreal."

Williams' attraction in Montreal stems from his tenure as a player for Montreal's International League team in 1953 and 1956 and his tenure as Expos coach during the 1970 season. He also worked in Canada in 1965 and 1966, managing the Toronto Maple Leafs to International League pennants.

Williams said there wasn't a single player left on the Expos' roster from 1970 and he would have to do some homework on the National League after spending the past six years in the American League. "I'm going to have to do a little catching up," he said.

So will the Expos. They finished the 1976 season with a 55-107 record, 46 games behind the first-place Philadelphia Phillies.

Williams said he planned to stress fundamentals at the team's spring training camp next year and did not anticipate any personnel problems, particularly with petulant shortstop Tim Lili. Lili publicly criticized rookie Manager Karl Kuehl this year, saying he was incapable of managing in the major leagues. Lili's comments were considered one of the reasons for the Expos' dismal showing.

Kuehl was fired Sept. 3 and Charlie Fox was named interim manager. Fox, 54, spent 34 years in the New York-San Francisco Giants organization before joining the Expos as this year.

Sooners Get Nod; Pirates Are Picked

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Hey, Darrell York, who's going to win Saturday's Texas-Oklahoma game?

"I don't have any predictions on the outcome," says the Texas coach.

Hey, Barry Switzer, who's going to win Saturday's Oklahoma-Texas game?

"It'll probably be a toss-up," says the Oklahoma coach.

I mean, how's a forecaster supposed to pick a winner if the coaches can't offer any more help than that?

One method might be to consult the standard — and very often reliable — signs.

Was Texas really "up" last week for Rice? Unlikely, despite a 42-15 romp.

Might the Longhorns be looking ahead to Southern Methodist? Are you kidding?

Was Oklahoma "up" for Iowa State last week? Iowa State?

Will the Sooners be honing their spurs for Kansas' next week?

Yes! Yes! A thousand times yes! Last year's Kansas game — KU 23, OU 3 — is the only one Oklahoma's lost in four years.

Unfortunately, the one thing wrong with this theory is that it's virtually impossible for either side to look past the other in the Texas-Oklahoma game. Call it the War of the Wishbones, the Red River Riot or whatever you want to call it, it's one of college football's classic rivalries.

And this corner calls it ... Oklahoma 16-14.

Last week's score of 56 right, 13 wrong and one tie for a percentage of .812 silenced some of the disgruntled alumni.

The season count is 192-77-5-.714. Michigan State at Michigan: Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler says sports writers should be "homers," — i.e., they should be fans of the teams they're assigned to cover and should write positively about them. No "homers" necessary this week, Bo, despite the bitter intrastate rivalry ... Michigan 42-7.

Georgia at Mississippi: On the theory that Ole Miss was looking ahead when it got bumped off by Auburn and Georgia was sky-high for Alabama, here's the Upset Special of the Week ... Mississippi 21-17.

Stanford at UCLA: "You should always play percentage football," says UCLA Coach Terry Donahue, explaining why the Bruins punted on fourth-and-one from the Ohio State 43 with less than four minutes to play last week and settled for a 10-10 tie. The vital signs point to a Stanford upset but the percentage says ... UCLA 31-17.

Nebraska at Colorado: Neither team was impressive last week. Both should be on the ball this week, especially ... Nebraska 28-20.

Maryland at North Carolina State: The records say the Terrapins should play ten pins with the Wolfpack, but records don't mean anything in this Atlantic Coast Conference biggie ... Maryland 29-25.

Kansas at Oklahoma State: The Cowboys' next five games are with Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Missouri and Nebraska. Talk about living dangerously. A hunch says this could be the Second Upset Special ... Oklahoma State 24-21.

Texas Tech at Texas A&M:

Tech could be the surprise team of the Southwest Conference ... if they ever played a game. The Red Raiders have had two weeks off already this season with only two games under their belt. Better they should take this week off, too ... Texas A&M 21-14.

Army at Penn State: "We're 1-3, I don't know how else to put it," says Joe Paterno, trying to explain Penn State's sub-par record. "We can't wear people down like we used to," Army, 3-1, is one of the country's surprise teams but this might be asking a little too much of Leamon Hall and his miracle workers ... Penn State 28-14.

Dartmouth at Yale: Dartmouth's Big Green but Yale's the team with the inexperience ... Dartmouth 14-12.

Auburn at Memphis State: The Tigers will win this game. The Tigers won last year 31-20. The Tigers are Memphis State. The Tigers also are Auburn. Memphis State won last year. This year ... Auburn 24-10.

Kentucky at Mississippi State: Kentucky gets caught between Penn State and LSU ... Mississippi State 16-9.

Other games: East-Pitt 35, Louisville 7; Boston College 28, Florida State 10; Brown 20, Penn 7; Colgate 22, Holy Cross 19; Columbia 14, Princeton 11; Harvard 33, Cornell 14; Rutgers 26, Connecticut 3; Syracuse 17, Tulane 14; Temple 23, West Virginia 16; Richmond 21, Villanova 14.

Phillies To Forget It's A Short Series

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Manager Danny Ozark of the Philadelphia Phillies doesn't like baseball's playoff system, but has definite ideas on approaching the best-of-five game series that decides the World Series opponents.

Just play it like a regular-season game, he says.

"You have to take the same outlook that you had all year," Ozark explained Tuesday at a workout in preparation for Saturday's National League playoff opener with the Cincinnati Reds. "You have to forget that it's a short series. The main thing is to execute fundamental the way you have all year, throw to the right base, keep the double play in order, take the extra base.

"I've seen pitchers change their delivery entirely (for the playoff), guys who won 18, 19, 20 games. The catcher plays a big part. He has to resist not calling for the curve ball, because he wants to throw out a runner. The hitter will be thinking with the catcher, looking for the same thing. We can't change our pattern on a hitter."

Ozark said further, "a runner can't say to himself that he's not going to steal because Johnny Bench is catching and has a great arm, and he can't steal against him." The Phillies' manager says that he has to take the same chances he took during the regular season.

"You can't immobilize a whole squad by changing the way you did things for 162 games," Ozark said. "You have to play a normal game."

Ozark dismissed the idea that the Phillies would be nervous because it's their first playoff, while the Reds are old hands at post-season competition and better equipped to handle the inherent pressures.

"If a player isn't nervous he doesn't belong on this balclub," Ozark declared. "It's no more than like opening day. Cincinnati will be just as nervous as we are, I don't care how many times you do it. I think players thrive on pressure. They get stronger, run faster, throw harder."

Ozark has long been an opponent of baseball's playoff system because "the weaker team might beat the best team in a short series. It might come down to the second-best team in the National League meeting the best in the American. Or the two second-best meeting for (the World Series) championship."

The first two games of the NL playoff will be held in Philadelphia Saturday and Sunday and then the series will shift to Cincinnati for as many games as needed next week.

Ozark said further, "a runner can't say to himself that he's not going to steal because Johnny Bench is catching and has a great arm, and he can't steal against him." The Phillies' manager says that he has to take the same chances he took during the regular season.

Anderson Not Naming Starting Pitcher Until Just Before Start

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds Manager Sparky Anderson is giving the Philadelphia Phillies something to think about. He's put a "Top Secret" stamp on his pitching plans for this weekend's National League playoffs.

Anderson says he will not name his starting pitcher until Friday night, less than 24 hours before the best-of-five showdown gets under way in Philadelphia.

"I know right now who it will be, but I'm not saying," Anderson said Tuesday as the NL West champions returned to work after a day off. "I'll name all three Friday."

Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark has named veteran left-hander Steve Carlton, 20-7, as his opening-game pitcher.

Anderson had planned a right-handed rotation of Pat Zachry, Gary Nolan and Jack Billingham to offset the Phillies' right-handed hitting power. Billingham, however, suffered an undetermined injury to his throwing arm in the season finale and his status is uncertain.

Right-handed pitchers gave the Phillies fits at the end of the season, when they dropped 24 of 28 games and nearly blew a 15½-game lead over Pittsburgh.

"All their power is right-

Butters Said Leaving Duke

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Tom Butters, associate athletic director at Duke University, reportedly has been offered the position of athletic director at the University of Cincinnati.

Duke has announced the hiring of ex-Blue Devil basketball star Jeff Mullins as an assistant athletic director. "One has nothing to do with the other," Duke Athletic Director Carl James said. "In fact, I'm sure Tom doesn't even know that Jeff accepted the position."

Butters and his wife were in Cincinnati Tuesday. He had been invited back for a second interview after visiting Cincinnati last week.

A source there said Butters has been offered the job and would not decide until after this weekend.

Redskins Take Win

The Redskins romped to a 40-0 victory over the Dolphins in the Greenville Recreation Department's Flag Football League yesterday. It was the opening game for both teams.

Steve Holloman raced 60 yards for the first Redskin score in the opening quarter. He also added the extra point.

Jay Mills scored on a 21-yard pass in the second period and Holloman scored on a 31-yard run. Holloman and Reggie Smith added PATs for a 21-0 halftime lead.

Lance Searl scored on an 11-yard pass in the third period, while Mack Walston returned an interception 31 yards and Jay Miles scored on a 13-yard run in the final period. Holloman added one more extra point. Billy Williams and Matt Walston led the Redskins' defense.

Lewis Flick, playing for Little Rock, Ark., in a Southern Association game in 1946, made nine hits in nine trips to the plate. The game went 19 innings.

handed," explained Tony Perez. "They saw nothing but right-handers in the last month and that's why they nearly went down. That's what Sparky is thinking, too."

Anderson's starting choice reportedly is between Zachry, a rookie who won 14 games, and left-hander Don Gullett, whose late-season surge has buoyed the pitching staff.

On paper, some say the Phillies have the stronger starting staff, headed by three-time 20-game winner Carlton, Jim Lonborg, Tom Underwood and Larry Christenson.

"They might have better starters," said Perez, "but we're going to score runs. The Philadelphia park is one of the best to hit in."

The Phillies won seven of 12 games with the Reds, but Joe Morgan missed five of the early meetings. With Morgan in the lineup, the Reds swept the last three, setting off some verbal fireworks in the Phillies' clubhouse.

Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark growled: "We proved they aren't as good as they think they are. They think they are superhumans."

North Carolina totally dominated the game with 32 shots on goal while the Pirates only managed six the entire game. East Carolina is now 1-7 for the year while North Carolina improved to 4-1.

Business Executives Are Going Back To School

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — "Uh, the more I deal with the other and, um, may I be permitted to say fellow officers, er, of the company, ah, the more I hesitate to express my true, ahem, feelings."

"And per our company directive of Dec. 18, I find that adverse evaluations of these articulate abilities evade the average perceptive powers of those executives into whose purview it falls to determine what those aforementioned abilities, carried to their consummative performance, should ultimately and finally achieve."

Huh?
As American business looks deeper into its own heart these days, it is finding that it has another severe problem. The boss simply can't communicate very well, whether he is addressing the board of directors or a consumers' group, whether he is writing a casual memo or trying to clinch a deal by letter.

And so more and more American businessmen, all the way up to vice president, are going back to school to learn to speak and write. And more and more experts are going into business to teach them how.

Thus, in Atlanta's suburbs, a top executive with a nationally known firm might be found flat on his back on the bedroom floor one night, pajama-clad, a book on his tum-tum, letting it rise and fall with his measured breath. He is learning how to breathe so he can learn how to speak.

Thus too, an engineer whose expertise makes him a candidate for advancement, is challenged on this sentence he wrote in a report:

"The proper functioning of this component is critically dependent on its maintaining dimensional integrity."

What did he mean?
He meant it won't work if it's bent. Language and words are bendable. But, unfortunately, they are breakable, too.

Students of these phenomena, who have seen internal company communications in shards, who have seen top executives for big companies woodenly bludgeon an audience's sensitivities, find the opportunities large.

Sandy Linver, the 33-year-old redhead who runs Speakeasy in Atlanta and is its sole teacher, has among her clients executives from Coca Cola, Lockheed Georgia, Unifax, Georgia Power, Planned Parenthood, Atlanta Life Insurance, Social Security, Sears, J. Walter Thompson and, my goodness, the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Robert R. Max, president of L-R Communications Systems of Summit, N.J., works with such industrial monarchs as A.T.&T., Union Carbide, American Express, Western Electric, Nabisco, Johnson & Johnson, Prudential and Eastman Kodak.

He estimates that American companies spend $68 billion a year on business correspondence, and that roughly 65 per cent of the nation's business men and women are unable to express themselves clearly in writing.

The problems are different in writing and public speaking. But in some cases they overlap.

Many executives have put themselves so deeply into the image of the corporation that they can't get out.

Many also have set ideas about what their writing ought to be. It is either full of the jargon of their specialty, or it is encumbered by too many formalities: "Per yours of ..." and "In re ..."

Sometimes they will write a very formalized beginning and a very formalized end, but in the middle they'll be saying things like, "George, you don't know what you're talking about." It's as schizophrenic as starting a letter saying "Dear Sir," and ending it with "Love, Mary."

"They come in with these cliches and hackneyed expressions that they've become comfortable with, and there's nothing wrong with them except for the effect they have on other people," Max says of such business writing.

Max's clients are generally managerial, junior officers up to vice president or likely to be an officer in the future, pretty well educated, at least a bachelor's degree and a pretty good handle on the mechanics of writing.

He tries to get his clients to follow a definite program of thinking the letter out, aiming it at a specific target and tailoring it for that individual. He asks them to profile in their mind the person they are writing to. What are his interests in the subject? What's his background, his level of expertise? What are his personal foibles if any? What do you want him to do?

The second step is to do much the same with the subject matter, tailoring it for the reader. No sense in taking up someone's time with details he doesn't need nor care to know. Then there are certain tips to readability: Start the letter with short sentences, end with short sentences, but in the middle feel free to use longer sentences and more varied sentence form. Tailor the letter to the purpose.

"When we know the person we're writing to is a very defensive individual, highly opinionated, rather firm, if we come on too strong, we build up a wall of defensiveness," Max explains.

"On the other hand we may present it with a good deal of uncertainty, 'Gee, maybe, John, if we did such and such. What do you think?' Sometimes we suggest ambiguity."

But most of the time, the thrust is direct, active voice, and to the point. Somehow that is the first difficult hurdle.

The same elements occur in making public speeches. In writing, an executive may hide behind formalized sentences. In speaking, he hides behind a manuscript, or his own exalted position.

"One of the biggest things I have tried to do with top executives particularly is to help them understand they don't have to hide behind a title," Sandy Linver says. "It's important, if he delivers a manuscript speech, that he impose his own personality on it."

But chances are, because they are so busy, "They say to a speech-writer, write me a speech, and 30 minutes before they have to give it, they look at it for the first time. And then they never understand why the audience doesn't respond."

The executive's rank has other drawbacks.

"Sometimes people come up after the speech and tell him how terrific he is," Sandy says. "He doesn't realize that they are telling him that because he's the head of the company.

They're stroking him. For people in top positions, it's very difficult to get honest feedback. Which is why I have a private evaluation session with people."

Sandy deals with executives generally on a consultation basis or in very restricted seminars. She gets $60 an hour for consulting, and a three-day seminar runs $325.

The client gets a chance to speak to the group, and then sees and hears himself on videotape while the group critiques his performance and she makes suggestions.

"Even if he gets nothing else out of it, he knows how his audience hears him, receives him, what's good about it and what's not, and what he can do about it. And hopefully he's on his way to doing something about it."

In each case, speaking or writing, the opposite side of the coin is just as important. It is necessary for the speaker to perceive with his eyes and ears and measure his effect on the audience. It is necessary for the writer to carefully analyze his material and the person to whom he is writing.

"Listening, like speaking, is not a subject you can teach like arithmetic," Sandy Linver explains. "It's an emotional activity, what's going on in your gut, and if your emotional attitude toward a person is not good, if you really don't give a damn, then it's really going to be very difficult."

When an executive comes to her, she says, the reason is that he is nervous about his public speaking. He may not say so. He may only say he's not as good as he should be, and he's not the kind of person who can tolerate that.

Once she can break through the stereotyped response, once she can convince the client to let his natural energy come through in his voice, other things become incidental.

Most of Max's problems come from people who have a doctorate and work in research and development, or engineers. They tend to have a language of their own, use too many words, and write the same thing to everybody. They don't consider the fact that a plant manager may be interested only in profits when he thinks of equipment, while someone down the line may be more interested in reliability and simple maintenance specifically. Two views of the same horse.

Max claims, besides effectiveness, the better written communication saves money. A company with 1,000 letter-writing executives can save over $3 million a year. But besides that, there is the sense that one's company face must be on right.

"More and more, the public is demanding that large corporations make contact with them," says Ms. Linver, "and more and more companies have people who must face the press or audiences."

"And although it may be Bill Smith who is talking, if he works for Coca Cola, he is Coca Cola. If he works for IBM, he is IBM."

And it would be just intolerable if IBM, paragon of efficiency, mumbled or his voice shook.

Home Town Raises Statue To Memorable Mata Hari

By BARRY JAMES LEEUWARDEN, The Netherlands (UPI) — Mata Hari finally has achieved recognition in her home town.

The fact that Leeuwarden is in one of the most puritan parts of Europe's more puritan countries did not prevent authorities from erecting a monument to the famous courtesan, whom France executed as a German spy in 1917.

Even the local branch of the Dutch Salvation Army, which occupies part of the house where Mata Hari was born 100 years ago, takes a charitable view of the woman whose name has become a synonym for the seductive female spy.

Leeuwarden knew her as Margaretha Gertruida Zelle.

She was tall, dark and strikingly beautiful, the daughter of a prosperous hat-maker. His shop now specializes in bridal outfits, but still has a corner for selling hats.

The monument is a bronze statue of a scantily clad dancer which stands on a square in the city center.

Alderman Joop Ten Brug, who attended its unveiling on behalf of the city council, said no one has complained, although before the statue was erected some people "wondered whether it was really a good idea to go to these lengths to commemorate this particular citizen of Leeuwarden."

But tourism promotion won the day and now, Ten Brug said, people seem to like the monument. No one has defaced it, which he said regularly happens with other statues in the city. And after it was unveiled, townsfolk kept fresh flowers and wreaths at its base.

When she was 19 Margaretha Zelle married Capt. Rudolph Campbell Macleod of the Dutch Colonial Army, and soon went with him to Java, now a part of Indonesia. There, she learned the art of seductive Oriental dancing and found the name Mata Hari, supposedly a Malay phrase meaning "eye of the day" — the sun.

It was a tragic marriage. One of her children was poisoned by a servant (the other died later in Holland) and eventually she divorced, to begin a dancing career in Paris in 1905 under the name Lady Macleod. Her career took off three years later when she took off her clothes and changed her stage name to Mata Hari.

She was reputed to have had many lovers in high French political and military circles. After the outbreak of World War I she moved to The Hague, where a plaque was unveiled in September on the house in which she lived for three years. Returning to Paris, she was arrested as a German spy and executed by a firing squad at the Vincennes prison Oct. 15, 1917.

Details of the case are obscure, since the French government inexplicably still refuses to permit publication of the official records. One theory is that justice miscarried and some say Mata Hari was actually spying for France but was arrested on the orders of British intelligence.

Whatever the truth, Mata Hari became fixed in legend after Greta Garbo played her in a film.

From his office window, Capt. Charles Storm of the Dutch Salvation Army can look down on the Mata Hari statue.

Storm said the decision to erect it was perhaps "debatable" but added he'd heard no comments, for or against, among the army's 40-odd members here.

The monument cost $6,900 — most of it paid by the city and a national cultural fund.

"We made no moral evaluation," Ten Brug said. "Margarethe Zelle belongs to history and the monument marks her legend. After all, time heals many wounds."

Henricus W. Keikes, city editor of the local newspaper, the Leeuwarder Courant, said the idea for the monument grew slowly in conversations among a number of local residents, including a distant relative of Mata Hari, and was supported by the Dutch Association for promoting tourism.

To mark the inauguration, a local distiller brewed up some "Eau de Mata Hari," which it describes as "a man's drink," of course.

Keikes, who unveiled the monument, owns a collection of Mata Hari memorabilia and has written a book about her girlhood in Leeuwarden.

"The strange fate of Mata Hari has given birth to a legend which still fascinates the world," he said. "Our monument acknowledges this fact, and is not meant to be a judgment or approval of what she did."

MATA HARI has achieved recognition in her hometown with erection of a monument to the courtesan whom France executed as a spy. (UPI Photo)

NASA Refines Water-Testing

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — NASA's Ames Research Center is refining a method for analyzing drinking water to detect substances suspected by the Environment Protection Agency of being harmful to health.

In a recent survey, the EPA found carbon tetrachloride, a cleaning compound, in the water of 10 cities. Chloroform, an anesthetic, was found in the water of 80 cities.

NASA has developed a gas chromatography method of detection that takes only a third of the time required for other methods. In gas chromatography, substances can be identified by measuring the unique speeds of different kinds of molecules.

Russian casualties in World War I totaled 9,250,000 between 1914 and 1917.

Sen. Mondale Raises Issue Of Pardon For Nixon

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — With Jimmy Carter's apparent approval, Sen. Walter F. Mondale has felt free to speak his mind on the Democratic campaign trail, even if he disagrees with his running mate.

On Tuesday, Mondale raised the issue of President Ford's 1974 pardon of Richard M. Nixon and declared that Watergate and other governmental abuses of power are "not yesterday's issue."

Carter has said the Nixon pardon should not become an issue in the 1976 presidential campaign.

But Mondale aides say the vice presidential nominee discussed his disagreement with Carter over this point early in the campaign.

They add that Mondale's Kansas City speech on Watergate was sent to Carter headquarters in Atlanta, reviewed by the presidential candidate's staff, and there was no hint of disapproval.

Mondale has also publicly disagreed with Carter on the direction the Supreme Court has been moving in law enforcement. Mondale firmly supported the rights of criminal defendants, while Carter said he agreed with the trend of recent court decisions reducing restrictions on how police gather evidence and make arrests.

The Minnesota senator also is opposed to capital punishment, whereas Carter believes some crimes should be punishable by death.

In the Kansas City speech to a University of Missouri law school audience, Mondale discussed in detail the pardon and the record of Ford and his running mate, Bob Dole, on Watergate.

He said that as Republican leader of the House, Ford "led the fight to prevent the first investigation of the Watergate break-in" by the House Banking Committee.

When he became vice president, and just two weeks before Nixon resigned, Ford said, "I can say from the bottom of my heart that the President of the United States, he is right," according to Mondale.

Mondale said the Sept. 8, 1974, pardon "made a mockery of the notion that in America there is no sovereign who stands above the law."

Ford has defended the pardon, saying that it was necessary to get the country to concentrate on economic problems and that Nixon had been punished enough by being forced out of office.

Mondale said that he might have supported a pardon after an indictment or trial of Nixon but that Ford "snuffed out" the judicial process by granting a pardon when he did. At that time, Nixon had been named as an unindicted coconspirator in the Watergate coverup.

"That pardon was issued with no accountability, no official listing of crimes, and no means of determining the specific offenses involved," Mondale said.

No charges were reported following investigation of a 5:45 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 100 feet East of the Arlington Drive intersection involving cars driven by Elsie Jean Craft of Kinston and Majorie Rhodus Harris of 108 Wilshire Dr.

Damage was set at $200 to each of the two autos.

Martha Lisa Maxwell of Winston-Salem was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:15 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Dickinson and Columbia Avenues.

Police said the Maxwell car collided with an auto operated by Rebecca Ann Rambeau of 1018 South Evans St. resulting in an estimated $200 damage to the Rambeau auto and $50 damage to the Maxwell car.

Prison Ministry Seeks Recruits

Bowen said that the Yokefellow Ministry will have its next introductory training session on Oct. 21 at 7:30 p.m. He noted that the sharing sessions last from 7:30 p.m. until 9 p.m.

Trustee inmates participate in the ministry, Bowen noted.

The unit is located on Highway 903, formerly Highway 102, approximately one-quarter mile from Maury across from the Department of Transportation offices.

Geographers At Virginia Meet

Drs. Ennis Chestang and Phillip Shea of the East Carolina University Department of Geography were visiting lecturers at a special program in Newport News, Va. this weekend.

The program, sponsored by the Virginia Geographical Society, focused on geographic education.

Dr. Chestang spoke on field techniques in geographical education and on comparative geography of urbanized areas. Dr. Shea discussed regional methodology and lectured on geographical aspects of New England and tropical Hawaii.

Charge Four For Marijuana

Four persons were arrested early Tuesday at the Pitt County Fair Grounds on marijuana possession charges.

Chief Glenn Cannon identified the four — all working at concessions on the midway at the fair — as Merrill Scott Green, 18, of Jamestown, N. Y.; Gary Richard Rinker, 18, of Route 3, Franklin, Pa.; Dwight Delano Yanguas, 20, of Orlando, Fla.; and Janet Fay Boyette, 16, of Route 1, Greenville.

Cannon said the four were charged after officers found a small quantity of marijuana in their possession in one of the midway game booths about 12:10 a.m.

Vermont is the only New England state without a coastline.

Fly-In For The Blind Saturday

Gov. James Holshouser has proclaimed Oct. 9 and 10 as White Cane days in North Carolina.

Henry Groome, past president of the Greenville Breakfast Lions Club, said that White Cane is the statewide drive by Lions Clubs and other interested people to raise funds in support of the blind and visually handicapped.

In connection with the statewide drive, the Breakfast Lions Club is having a Fly In for the Blind on Saturday at the Pitt-Greenville Airport to raise funds, Groome said.

The Lions spokesman said that the Fly In will afford area citizens an opportunity to see Greenville from the air. He said that citizens will be able to take a 15 minute flight over the Greenville area for a contribution of three cents per pound per person.

Last year's Fly In raised over $800 in support of the White Cane drive and the local club hopes to top $1,000 this year.

In addition to the flying opportunities for local citizens, sky diving exhibitions will be given every two hours, beginning at 10:30 a.m., he said.

Saturday's activities will be held from 10:30 a.m. until 5 p.m., according to Groome, who urged county residents to support the fund drive.

Plan A Roof OES Chapter Host To Master Masons

UNION GROVE, N.C. (AP) — The Old Time Fiddlers Convention is getting a solid-roof home with the same old pasture view.

A $200,000 facility of 60,000 square feet will replace the present circus-tent site in the center of Pierce VanHoy's Quaker Hills Farm.

"We're scooping out dirt in a ravine, heretofore unused because it was too rough, and putting up an amphitheater with a roof on it," said VanHoy, director of the annual affair. The amphitheater has been tentatively named "Poor Boy Coliseum."

VanHoy said the facility won't lose its touch with nature.

"I want to be able to keep my city friends happy," he said. "They'll still be able to look out and watch the birds and count the cow patties."

The structure will be completed by Nov. 27. The bleachers, lighting and sound equipment will be ready for the 53rd annual convention in April.

The amphitheater will seat 12,500 indoors, but the layout will put up to another 25,000 persons within sight and earshot of performing musicians, VanHoy said.

VanHoy said the $15,000 rent and time needed for the time was becoming too big a load to bear.

The partially buried pasture amphitheater will do away with the "mad rush and 24-hour ritual" that accompanied the tent, he said. The amphitheater also will be available for other projects, such as a symphony performance or religious crusade.

$1 Million Day On Mart

Another $1 million sales day was recorded Tuesday on the Greenville Tobacco Market as both the daily and season averages improved.

Sales yesterday of 960,949 pounds brought $1,181,239, an average of $122.92 per hundred pounds, according to local sales supervisor J.N. Bryan.

Bryan said that Tuesday's figures pushed the season poundage to 39,007,096 and season sales to $4,810,017, an overall average of $114.88 per hundred pounds.

Stabilization receipts decreased to 2.98 per cent of total sales, he reported.

Top practical price paid was $1.30 per pound, Bryan added, with some of the top leaf grades selling in the $1.31 to $1.40 per pound range.

Leaf, smoking leaf and cutters made up most of the floor volume although some lugs, primings and non descript tobacco still accounted for a portion of the sales.

No Vacation Due To Dogs

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Eight years ago, Pappy Ragsdale hated dogs. Now he has 175 of the creatures following him around his farm equipment business.

"Used to be I couldn't stand the things," Ragsdale said. "When my wife got Rags (a poodle) I didn't even want to be around it. I wanted to keep it away from me in another room."

He said he changed his mind after hearing an antivivisection poem that ended with the line, "Only a dog would spend his breath in a kiss for his murderer's hand."

First came Lady, now 16. Then Ned, Low-brow, High-brow, Peggy, Alfred, Limpy, Lucky, Mutt & Jeff, Chowchow, Roy, Wolf, Ack Ack, Stagger and more than 150 others of all sizes, lineage and descriptions.

Most are strays that found their way to Ragsdale's canine haven. Others were dropped off by people who tired of their pets.

Food for the dogs costs about $600 a month.

Ragsdale's collection has been the subject of several visits by the Memphis Humane Society, which named him "Humanitarian of the Year" for 1976.

The biggest disadvantage of having so many dogs is that Ragsdale can't take a vacation. "These dogs don't have anyone to look after them but me," he said. "And as long as I live, they'll never want for anything."

Safety Award Is Withdrawn

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mrs. Audrey Spriggs of Charlotte was astonished at learning a safety award had been presented the school her son attends.

Elizabeth Open Elementary School was cited by General Motors Corp. for completing the past school year without a traffic accident involving any students.

Mrs. Spriggs' son, Chad, then a fourth grader, was struck by a car after getting off a school bus one year ago Tuesday. He spent several months in a hospital and missed four months of classes.

The school returned the award to General Motors.

Plan Reorganize Scout Troop

South was slightly optimistic when he viewed his hand as good enough to force to game via a cue-bid of opener's suit. South showed a takeout double followed by a jump in spades at his next turn, to allow for the possibility that partner held little or nothing. As it was, there

Sarah Decrow Quit Her Job As Postmaster

By DR. H. G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Sarah Decrow, America's first female postmaster following the adoption of the federal constitution, was a leading lady in her village of Hertford in Perquimans County.

In fact, she was a versatile woman, and within a year after her commissioning in 1792, she decided her time was worth more than the income she was getting from her federal job. Even a letter from the postmaster general's office informing her that she could keep forty percent of her receipts (instead of the twenty percent she had been retaining) failed to mollify her.

So Sarah resigned, and on October 1, 1794, Thomas McNider was appointed to replace her. No figures are available for her tenure, but postal records indicate that McNider during his first year earned the huge amount of fifty-nine cents. No wonder Sarah wanted to get on to her business.

Unfortunately, however, she lived only a year or so, bringing to an end a career that at minimum could be termed colorful.

Not much is known about Sarah's early life, but it is surmised that she was the daughter of John and Mary Ratliff Moore. She married Ichabod Delano, and they had at least two children, Mary and Robert. Delano died in 1774, and Sarah then married Robert Decrow, operator of a local ordinary.

Decrow provided Sarah with a comfortable living, and she helped him run his tavern. He also died in 1784, leaving Sarah with two more young children—Sarah and Elizabeth—and the ordinary to operate.

Perhaps it was natural for tongues to wag about the widow and her house guests but Sarah went straight to the sheriff when she learned what one Hinchey Gilliam was saying about her.

In her affidavit charging Gilliam with slander, she said that he had spread the story that "Sarah Decrow is a Whore and I can prove that Nat Williams (meaning a certain Nathaniel Williams who at that time of the speaking the said false, scandalous malicious & aprabious words Boarded & lodged in the House of the said (Sarah) keeps her (meaning the said Sarah and that she lived in a State of Fornication & adultery with the said Nathaniel Williams in open violation of every Law Human & divine)

It didn't take long for the woman's wrath to win its vengeance, and suddenly Gilliam couldn't remember having uttered the words. Furthermore, he agreed, "if he did use them it was not with any intention of injuring the said Sarah & that he had any malicious view of hurting the reputation — good fame of the said Sarah, that on the contrary he entertains the highest respect for Mrs. Decrow & has reason to esteem her as a good neighbor . . ."

As evidence of her good neighborhood, Sarah accepted his apology and dropped her suit.

Within two years, though, Sarah Moore Delano Decrow was back in court, and this time she was the defendant. Officials charged her with giving service beyond that usually furnished at ordinaries, particularly in regard to the sale of non-tax-paid liquors, a habit which worked to "the great injury of the Revenue of the Government."

Sarah's shrewd business sense was demonstrated in still another court case in 1791. One of her lodgers, Dr. Ebenezer Belnap, skipped town without paying his bill. Sarah went to the court and obtained an order attaching the doctor's possessions which he had carelessly left behind.

Among the property that she seized were clothes and personal articles, an assortment of medical supplies, and—perhaps most injurious of all to Dr. Belnap—his account book.

If Sarah's public life raised eyebrows among the women of Hertford, it apparently did not sully her reputation among the menfolk who must have recommended her for appointment as the first female postmaster (the title was officially deputy postmaster at the time) following the adoption of the federal constitution.

Differences In Flaherty-Hunt Debate

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Jim Hunt and David Flaherty, the two major candidates for governor, disagree on public financing of campaigns but agree on several other issues, including the 55-mile-per hour speed limit.

They aired their views Tuesday in a face-to-face debate on television. The debate, sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters, was recorded on video tape for later programming on the state's television stations.

Both candidates took occasional pot shots at each hour during the hour-long debate. Flaherty showed a more vigorous attack while Hunt was more subtle.

Arian Andrews, the Libertarian party's candidate for governor, felt that Flaherty and Hunt said nothing new. Andrews objected to the debate being carried on the state's educational television network. He complained that tax money should not be used for partisan politics.

Andrews said the party decided against trying to prevent the debate being aired. He added, "The more they (the voters) hear those two fellows the better the Libertarian party is going to fare this fall."

Hunt said he likes the concept of public financing of campaigns. "We spend too much time raising money... We ought to spend more time talking to people who have needs," Hunt said, adding that the federal program should be followed if it is successful.

Flaherty termed public financing of political races "a very serious mistake because the candidates are still out raising money, the commitments are still being made."

Wally Ausley of WPTF in Raleigh served as moderator. The questions were asked by Ruth Mary Meyer, president of the state League of Women Voters; Dick Hatch of the state TV network; Wayne Ashworth of WXII TV, Winston-Salem, and Allen Jones, WTVB, Durham.

Hunt and Flaherty agreed that the state will have an additional $147 million to spend next year, that they will promote the equal rights amendment and that roads need to be emphasized. They also felt that the death penalty deters murder.

Both supported spending more money on education and a cost of living pay increase for teachers and state workers.

In his attack, Flaherty said he understood that Hunt has promised "special interest groups" such as sportsmen that their favorite programs would be funded. Hunt did not have a chance to reply to the charge.

They also clashed on a reading program for the schools, programs for the elderly and administration of the state's Medicaid program.

Flaherty said Hunt must take the blame for revisions of the state Utilities Commission that failed to provide much relief for consumers. Hunt defended the changes. He said the commission simply has not acted in the interest of consumers. Hunt contended that Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser had not appointed commissioners who served the public interest.

Flaherty also accused Hunt, presiding officer of the Senate, of failing to keep the legislature from revamping the Milk Commission so that consumers lost the majority membership. Hunt told the questioners he did not support the changes, but that the new commission has held milk prices down. Hunt implied on three occasions that Flaherty had not provided leadership during his tenure as secretary of human resources under the Holshouser administration. He said, "I think this is one of the places where we have to consider the issue of leadership and that's really what this governor's race is all about."

Hunt was surprised when the debate ended. He was anxious to respond to a charge by Flaherty that he had not lived up to his 1972 campaign promise to raise the quality of education in the state. Hunt threw up his hands when Ausley said the time had expired.

Arrested 20 'Paraders'

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Twenty persons identified as members of the Continental Walk for Disarmament and Social Justice were arrested Tuesday and charged with failing to have a parade permit.

They were lodged in the Craven County jail after refusing to disband at the request of police, authorities said.

The group, which included three women, at first refused release under bond which was offered by Continental Walk headquarters in Washington. But later several of them posted $20 each for their bail, police said.

Police Chief John Worsham identified one of those arrested as the Rev. Bernard Lee, executive vice president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, one of about two dozen groups sponsoring the walk.

"We had no problems. They were peaceful," said Worsham.

He said city code prohibits demonstrations, parades and the like unless application is made for a permit 24 hours in advance. Violation is a misdemeanor.

"If they had applied for a permit, I would have granted one," the police chief said.

Retirees Held Luncheon Meet

The North Carolina Retired School Personnel held the first meeting of the fall season Thursday, September 30, at St. James United Methodist Church. Alan Murrel, president of the group, presided at the covered dish luncheon meeting. Miss Agnes Fullilove, hostess, gave the blessing.

Guests at the meeting were the recent retirees from the city and county schools, Pitt Tech and ECU.

Mrs. Polly Dail, transportation counselor for the Pitt County Council on Aging's transportation program, spoke to the group. Mrs. Dail asked for volunteer drivers for the bus program.

A brief business session was conducted after which the group adjourned.

Sailing Excursions Are Only In Fair Weather

By CLARENCE ZAITZ
SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A little bit of sailing for landlubbers can be a lot of fun but the threshold at which it becomes boring or sickening is quickly reached. That's why the 93-foot sailing ship California only puts out in pleasant weather and why her excursions to sea are kept short.

Captain George Falkegaard this year began running tour cruises by day, cocktail sails at night out of San Diego aboard the barquentine — a replica of sailing ships of the 1800s.

If the ocean appears to be getting too choppy, he quickly refunds his customers' money and returns them to the dock. Better no customers at all, than sick landlubbers bad-mouthing the California.

So far as the passengers are concerned, Falkegaard concedes "there is blessed little to do aboard a boat.

"About 1½ or 2 hours into it, they begin to get turned off," said Falkegaard, who comes from a Danish family which has been involved with the sea since 1376.

So his cruises are short and smooth — usually including a quarter-mile excursion out of Mission Bay into the Pacific. Groups can charter the boat and board in Mission Bay, then sail out into the Pacific and back into adjoining San Diego Bay and tie up at a restaurant for dinner.

He will take them only if conditions are ideal because, as he puts it, "The ladies don't want to get wet sea water on them or windblown hair." They want to look as good when they arrive as they did when they left the hotel.

The California has a colorful history. She was used by the Navy in World War II to move Australian spotters behind Japanese lines.

Falkegaard operated in the red only two months after purchasing her in Marina Del Rey near Los Angeles and bringing her here. He broke even grossing $9,000 in the third month. Now he is thinking about expanding his one-ship fleet.

The California is manned by six community college students and skippered by Muri Smith, a veteran of 36 years at sea, has three masts. The forward one has square-rigged sails. Crewmen scamper high in the rigging to unfurl them.

This is the main attraction. Said Falkegaard of his passengers, "It's the seamanship that excites them.

"There is in the public mind something good and clean and beautiful about sailing ships.

"You get to see the crew doing their thing — there are no winches, no mechanical rigging of any kind."

'Nightmare' In Crowded Colony

By PAUL LOONG
HONG KONG (UPI) — On a sweltering June night, an old man set himself ablaze and died in a park. He left behind unpaid bills and medical documents showing he had a terminal illness.

A teen-aged girl, who was usually "cheerful and optimistic," leaped 14 floors to her death after her parents separated. She wrote a note saying: "I'm sick of living."

A 63-year-old woman who lived alone in Hong Kong hanged herself after receiving a letter saying her son in China was dying and his wife was already dead.

Inside the sparsely furnished office in a low-cost housing block, the phone rang. "Hello," a volunteer worker said, "can I help you?" Silence. "Hello," he said again, "we're the Samaritans. Do you want to talk about something?" Still no reply. And then the line went dead.

"This is the most suicide-prone kind of callers," Samaritan Chairman Andrew Tu said. "It is not so serious when they call up and just cry. They say nothing, that means their despair is beyond words."

Official statistics show that 535 persons — 326 men and 209 women — took their own lives in 1975 in Hong Kong, a city with a population of about 4.3 million. Many more attempted suicide unsuccessfully. The Samaritans, an international organization of volunteers to prevent suicide, dealt with 605 persons who were "potential suicides" during the same year.

Tu said he considers the local suicide rate "very high, when you take into consideration the cultural background of the Chinese people, who usually adapt well to adversity."

The Chinese, he said, often manage to accept conditions which others might find unbearable. "Yet so many have chosen to die rather than to go on living here," he said. "And nothing can be done to ease the problem, given the local social conditions," he said.

The pea-sized British colony, with one of the world's highest population densities, can become a Malthusian nightmare for some people.

"There is a desperate lack of living space," Tu said. "Everybody brushes up against each other all the time and there is no getting away from people or situations which arouse anguish."

"People in Hong Kong are cold and unsympathetic. And when they are packed together so closely, tension and anxiety build and there is no escape because there is no place to run to," he said.

With the accumulation of anxieties and unresolved problems over a period of time, some people gradually lose hope in their lives and reach the brink of suicide. From there, Tu said, they can be precipitated into the act by a "spark reason," which may seem to be trivial on its own.

A young mother, 24, jumped into the sea and drowned herself and her two children after a quarrel with her husband over a loaf of bread. The husband later said there had been constant fights and he had often stayed out late.

Aside from the more universal reasons given for suicides — illness, poverty, financial and family troubles, and romantic fiascoes — Hong Kong has a uniquely high number of students who threaten suicide after failing in exams.

The highly competitive education and social system here leads many students and parents to believe there is no future without a diploma.

Old Hoboes Assisted by Foundation

"In the jungles at Wenatchee sat an old and ragged tramp, 'King of Hoboes, Bullfrog Blackie, in his railroad jungle camp..."

— Hood River Blackie, 1960
By ROD CLARKE
CONCORD, Vt. (UPI) — This one's for you, Blackie.

And for Steam Train Maury and the Hardrock Kid and Chicken Red Donovan and the Waffles Kid, in a shack somewhere up in Montana.

There aren't many of you left.

The American hobo, who once rode the rails by the thousands and earned a place in the nation's folklore, is an endangered species.

The Hobo Foundation, a non-profit organization based in this tiny northeastern Vermont village, is trying to do something about it.

The foundation was formed in 1974 by Hood River Blackie, Steam Train Maury Graham and former Vermont legislator John McClaughry, who, as "Feather River John," rode the rails several years ago.

Of the tens of thousands of hoboes who once rode the rails, most have died, McClaughry says. Less than 200 remain. The foundation wants to make sure that they and their departed colleagues aren't forgotten.

"All of these men are over 60," he said. "Many exist — old, feeble, missing their long-lost pals — in shacks in small towns across the west and south."

McClaughry says the Hobo Foundation wants to establish a "retirement camp" in the warm climate of the southwest where old hoboes can "go and die in the kind of free air they've lived in all their lives along the tracks."

"There's nothing worse for a lifelong hobo than to find himself in a rest home, hovered over by candy-strippers and welfare workers."

"To a man, these old time hoboes would just as soon die out underneath a viaduct somewhere than be pestered over by all these do-gooders."

According to McClaughry, the Hobo Foundation visualizes "one of the cheapest camps ever created — maybe a few old railroad cars parked on a siding or some simple board shacks with cook stoves inside."

"There the old timers could sit around and tell stories of the good old days when hoboes rode the high iron and could live in their dream world 'til they catch the cannonball on to glory."

The first hoboes hit the road after the Civil War, McClaughry said. Many were discharged soldiers who found their homesteads burned and their wives and children gone.

"The term hobo came into use in the early 1890s. No one seems to know where it came from and it has no known meaning. Originally, the oldtimers called themselves 'campfire men.'"

Around the turn of the century, there were probably 50,000 to 60,000 of them on the road, McClaughry said. By 1915, there were more than 100,000.

During the depression of the 1930s, tens of thousands more men streamed across the country on the rails, but McClaughry says they weren't "the true hoboes" of the older days.

"The old-time hobo had no intention of ever settling down. He carried his home on his back in his packsack; his cooking gear, his food and his bedroll.

"He was either running away from something or searching for freedom. Many of the men who rode the freights back in the 30s were merely looking for cheap transportation between job opportunities."

McClaughry fears Hood River Blackie, the "hobo historian," may well be the last American hobo.

"He's the youngest one left, at age 50, and they're not making them any more."

The oldest, he says, is probably Chicken Red, almost 95, who started riding the rails in 1898 at the age of 16.

The foundation has appealed to mayors of selected small railroad towns for help in establishing the retirement camp, a Hobo Museum and an annual Hobo Day.

"Unlike bums, who steal, hoboes have always believed in a fair day's work for a fair day's pay, so long as there were not too many of them all in a row," McClaughry wrote in the appeal.

A 39-year-old political gadfly who serves on the Vermont Republican Committee, McClaughry doesn't ride the rails anymore.

But some of his old friends do. And they keep in touch.

Accuracy Is Gallup Goal

GEORGE GALLUP Jr. says in presidential elections his projections have deviated from national vote figures by only 1.2 per cent since 1950. (AP Wirephoto)

By DEBRA GAYNOR
Morris County Record
PRINCETON, N.J., (AP) — Life isn't always easy for the man who keeps tabs on the pulse of the nation.

Sometimes George Gallup Jr., president of the Gallup poll, gets letters from citizens whose hearts don't beat the way the pollster says they're supposed to.

But Gallup says that in presidential elections his projections have deviated from national vote figures by a maximum of 1.2 per cent in any year since 1950.

Of course, that doesn't take into account the 1948 election. When Gallup stopped surveying by mid-October, Harry Truman was trailing in the polls and Thomas E. Dewey looked like the winner. Gallup says that was the only time the poll has ever predicted a presidential election winner incorrectly.

Gallup does have to revise his poll results every once in awhile, too. For example, over the weekend Gallup said that Gallup polls in late August and early September underestimated Jimmy Carter's lead in the presidential race by about three percentage points. He said this was discovered when a larger vote sample for the period in question was tallied.

And he said that Gallup results released last Friday may also have to be revised. He said those results were based on interviews with 887 registered voters, a lower number than the usual 1,000 or more. The poll showed Carter with 50 points, President Ford with 42. Eight per cent were undecided. But then there was December 1975, when Gallup drew up a list of 38 possible Democratic presidential nominees and Jimmy Carter's name wasn't on the list.

"Carter caught a lot of us unaware, including the Gallup poll," said Gallup.

A question Gallup hears frequently is: "How come I've never been polled?"

About 1,500 people, he says, are interviewed for each survey.

"Even if we interviewed 10,000 people each week, it would take us 500 years to get to each person once," he says. "It's just a matter of odds."

Gallup says the key to polling is to make sure the sample represents the population.

"The sample rests very firmly on the law of probabilities," he says. "We divide the cities in terms of community size, take every tenth city, divide the city into blocks and then take every tenth block."

Virtually all the interviews are done in person and usually on a Saturday, Gallup says.

The most difficult part of the survey, Gallup adds, is designing and wording the questions so they aren't misinterpreted.

The survey is made up of about 70 questions, and each interview lasts about 35 minutes, he said.

The poll, supported solely by 140 newspapers, does about 20 surveys a year. Each survey costs about $40,000. Gallup says the newspaper opinion poll is nonprofit organization and is a "loss leader" affiliated with the Gallup Organization Inc., a profitable market research firm.

The poll was founded in 1935 by George Gallup Sr., who had been head of the journalism department at the University of Iowa.

The founder had conducted what might have been the first political polls for his grandparents. His grandfather ran for governor of Iowa as a Democrat and lost. His grandmother was secretary of state.

"Religion is performing a vital role in this country," he said. "It's the glue that keeps democracy together."

Gallup polls also show the nation's youth is politically apathetic, with only half of people aged 18-to-29 registered to vote.

On the mood of the nation, Gallup says there has been a shift toward conservatism. Some signs of this are that parents favor a return to discipline in schools and that support for capital punishment is at its highest level in 25 years.

Gallup says his polls don't influence the presidential election votes.

"The polls don't affect voter participation or choice," he says. "If our polls influenced voters, when we show a man leading he'd go on leading. That isn't necessarily true."

"I would debate whether the public can be swayed," he says. "They're extremely cynical about politics."

Retires After 20,000 Babies

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — The dean of Peruvian professional midwives recently retired after delivering more than 20,000 babies in 42 years.

Filomena Hinojosa Luna said that her greatest satisfactions came when she delivered triplets (five times) and twins (three times). One of her worst disappointments was the delivery of a pair of Siamese twins who died shortly after birth.

Ice Cream Just Full Of Cold Air

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Ice cream is a frozen confection obtained by blending air and ice cream mix at lower than freezing temperatures. Most market grade ice cream deliberately contains as much air as mix, a good product.

Protecting the balance of air and mix is the essential art of ice cream making, according to Sealright Co. Inc.

Loretta Got To Nashville

LORETTA AT THE OPRY — Mary Kay Place, also known as Loretta of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" fame, has finally made it to Nashville. (AP Wirephoto)

By JOE EDWARDS Associated Press Writer NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Loretta has finally made it to Nashville.

Mary Kay Place, who plays Loretta Haggers on the "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" television show, was in Nashville last week for the first time.

Accompanied by Graham Jarvis, who plays her husband Charlie on the show, Miss Place sang on the Grand Ole Opry, was given a tour of the city and met several celebrities.

On the show, the dream-deluded Loretta and her ambitious husband have been trying to travel to Nashville so she can become a big country music star.

In real life, she's already recorded a country album and now may boast that she's sung on the Grand Ole Opry, visited the Country Music Hall of Fame and had her picture taken in front of a wax figure of Hank Williams Jr.

She bought a book showing the homes of the stars, sang briefly for a man drinking beer at the famed Tootsie's Orchid Lounge and was complimented by Minnie Pearl.

"She IS Southern, isn't she?" Miss Pearl said after meeting Miss Place and discovering that Loretta really does have a Southern accent.

"This is the closest I'll ever get to the 'Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman' show," Miss Pearl said. "Minnie Pearl would be a little lost in that atmosphere."

Miss Place's album is entitled "Tonight! At The Capri Lounge." Dolly Parton, Emmylou Harris, Anne Murray and Herb Pederson are supporting vocalists on the album.

Though she has been singing since her days at the University of Tulsa, she is of course best known now as an actress. But she has written scripts for episodes of "Phyllis," "Paper Moon," "Maude," "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "M-A-S-H."

One of her first singing parts came when she sang "If Communism Comes Knocking At Your Door, Don't Answer It," on "All In The Family."

After singing on "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," record companies began trying to sign her.

"I knew why people were after me—because I was so well-known from the show," she said. "I didn't want to cash in on my television exposure. I didn't want to do a novelty album."

She finally accepted an offer to record with the understanding the album would be more than a collection of badly-sung country songs.

The album includes original material, Miss Parton's hit "All I Could Do" and the sacred song, "Have A Little Talk With Jesus."

However, there are suggestions of Miss Place's television show. One of the engineers for the album was Bradley Hartman-Bradley Hartman.

Begin 6-Month Amnesty Period

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — The Peruvian government recently announced a six-month amnesty period during which all Peruvians can remit deposits of foreign currency illegally held abroad.

The military regime for more than five years has prohibited private citizens, and foreigners with more than 20 years residence in Peru, from holding bank accounts abroad. However, many wealthy Peruvians maintain secret accounts in the United States or Europe, to evade taxes and the strict limitations on foreign currency for travel purposes.

End 22-Year Education Try

AUGUSTA, Ark. (AP) — When James William Duffy received his diploma from the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff recently, it brought to a close a 22-year effort of Mr. and Mrs. O.C. Duffy to educate all their 12 children.

Duffy, 72, a retired farmer who now works as caretaker of a cemetery, and Mrs. Duffy, 65, who works in the home of a family, have sent all their offspring through the university at Pine Bluff, and have seen seven of them go on to earn master's degrees from Louisiana State University, Harvard University, the University of Pennsylvania and the University of California.

Pothole Problem Is Widespread

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Potholes, torn up pavements, and other street paving in need of repair cover an area of 24 square miles in Lima, Mayor Arturo Caverro said recently.

More than one third of Lima's entire street area needs repairs, he said.
