

Democrats Whoop It Up; Republicans Just Listen

Carter, Reagan In N.C.

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The Democrats stomped, whistled and one even brayed like a donkey for Jimmy Carter.

The Republicans applauded heartily but politely and listened attentively to Ronald Reagan.

Carter, the Democratic presidential candidate, and Reagan, who lost a bid for his party's nomination to President Gerald Ford, made separate appearances here Tuesday for their party's candidates in North Carolina's 5th Congressional District.

Carter attended a boisterous afternoon rally for Rep. Steven Neal and other state and local Democratic candidates. He praised Neal for his work as a freshman congressman. But most of Carter's remarks were aimed at the "working men" among the cheering, sign-waving crowd.

"Who pays unemployment and welfare checks? Working people, right?" Carter said. The crowd answered with an affirmative roar.

Jim Graham, state agricultural commissioner, added to the commotion of the rally when he stepped to the microphone, handed Carter his jacket, and brayed like a donkey.

It was the same banquet room at the Benton Convention Center but a different scene four hours later when Reagan entertained a crowd of about 600 Republicans who paid $25 a person to attend a fund-raising dinner for Wilmer Mizell, the party's congressional candidate. Neal unseated Mizell two years ago after the Republican had served three terms.

Instead of the Democratic crowd of about 2,000 which filled the banquet room, and several hundred more who were left in the street, there were straight rows of tables in the hall for the Republicans. The more subdued Republicans listened to the Lord's Prayer sung by a young girl.

Reagan, returning to the state which gave him his first primary victory over Ford, mentioned Ford's name only twice, but praised the Republican party's platform.

The Democratic platform calls for cuts in the defense budget, but, "Our platform bluntly calls for superiority of arms," Reagan said.

He praised Mizell's six years in Congress and said, "Two years is enough time off for anyone."

Reagan entertained the crowd with a parade of one-liners, such as, "Jimmy Carter was here — riding high in the straddle."

The appearance of Carter and Reagan on the same day and in the same place was a reflection of the type of campaign under way in the 5th District, where Democrats and Republicans admit the race is too close to call and every vote is important.

Reagan was the third major Republican to visit the district on Mizell's behalf. And Carter aides said the former Georgia governor had wanted to appear with Neal.

Although both Carter and Reagan delivered partisan, non-controversial speeches, they focused media attention on the Neal-Mizell contest.

The Reagan visit, announced last month, followed appearances by former Texas Gov. John Connally and Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater. The Carter stop, which drew a larger crowd and more publicity, was announced last week.

"As far as I know, it was just an accident," Neal said of the scheduling.

Instead of focusing on the congressional race, Carter concentrated on his own campaign, imploring the crowd to "make a sacrificial effort in the next two weeks" before the elections.

But Neal said he felt his campaign benefited from the Carter appearance because any support from a presidential candidate could be crucial.

Neal has worked to link himself with Carter, using excerpts from Carter's speeches in radio ads and saying Tuesday, "What Jimmy Carter stands for — I stand for."

Carter campaigned for Neal two years ago when Carter was a political unknown outside the South. And Tuesday he shared with Neal what may have been his last stop in North Carolina before the election.

None of the Republican organizers expressed resentment at the timing of Carter's appearance. But Sen. Jessie Helms, R-N.C., who was Reagan's North Carolina campaign manager in the primary, said the Carter visit "was surely an attempt" to upstage Reagan.

"But that's politics. If the situation had been different, it might have been us doing it, instead of them," Helms said.

Aides to both Neal and Mizell agree that the Republican National Committee has targeted the 5th District for a possible GOP victory. For Mizell, this has meant a $5,000 contribution from the committee and the loan of a fulltime staffer.

For Neal, it has meant that "we'll just have to work harder."

Leaf Support 'Crisis' Seen

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An expert says the entire tobacco price support program is in danger of being destroyed by the overload of low quality tobacco placed under government loan.

John H. Cyrus, chief of the field crops section of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, said, "If things continue the way they have for the last two years, I don't think there's any question it will destroy our price support program."

The situation, he said, is the "most serious crisis the tobacco program has faced since 1964." The quota system was revamped that year in the face of oversupply.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. received 295 million pounds of tobacco in 1975, or 18 per cent of the crop. As of Tuesday, it had been consigned 186.5 million pounds from this year's crop.

Fred G. Bond, executive director of the cooperative, estimated that stabilization could be holding 550 million pounds by the end of the year, 80 per cent of it downstalk tobacco.

The stabilization's board of directors approved a "resolution of concern" Oct. 8 asking that "all segments of the industry give serious consideration to possible solutions to this problem."

There has been a skidding demand for the downstalk, low quality tobacco for the past two years. When tobacco fails to bring an auction price one cent or more above the government-set support price, growers turn it over to the cooperative as collateral and receive loans.

Cyrus has called for a restructuring of the price support system. He said this might mean reducing the price support on the downstalk grades and making some adjustment to the upstalk where the leaves are in greater demand.

"It will likely take congressional action to make the necessary adjustments," Cyrus said.

He added that the big concern now is "where we will be able to sell" the overload held by the cooperative. Carrying charges, he noted, will be added onto the tobacco year after year.

Ford Visit To Create Traffic Jam Saturday

RALEIGH (AP) — A giant traffic jam is expected to be touched off by President Ford's visit to the North Carolina State Fair Saturday.

More than 135,000 persons are expected in the fairgrounds vicinity when the President arrives sometime before noon. Fair officials said Tuesday they are expecting a crowd of more than 100,000. At nearby Carter Stadium a crowd in excess of 35,000 is expected for the North Carolina State-Clemson football game.

Plans for the President's visit were announced Tuesday by the North Carolina President Ford Committee. The President will arrive at the Raleigh-Durham Airport around 11 a.m., following the third and final presidential debate Thursday night at Williamsburg, Va.

President Ford will go directly to the fairgrounds, where he will speak in the 7,000-seat Dorton Arena.

Following his speech, the President is expected to tour some exhibits and possibly the midway, according to Jerry Blackwelder, press aide for the committee.

Plans call for him to leave the fair about 1 p.m. He will go by plane to Columbia, S.C.

The committee issued a statement saying, "The visit by the President is especially good timing in view of the fact that Governor Carter is also campaigning in North Carolina this week. The voters have a clear choice in this election, and personal visits by the candidates to explain their stands on major issues should help them decide that President Ford is the man to lead this country for the next four years."

"It is obvious that the campaign is going very well in this state," the committee stated.

"The polls show that the President has closed the gap completely. His visit will be a great boost to help us over the top."

This will be the President's second visit to North Carolina this year.

No Clue To Life On Mars

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Hopes that Viking 2's lander would find evidence of life in soil beneath a Martian rock have faded with the tiny robot lab's failure to detect organic molecules.

Dr. Klaus Biemann, head of the project's molecular analysis team, told reporters Tuesday that Viking's instruments failed to find even a trace of organic compounds in a scoop of Martian soil taken from under a rock.

Organic compounds, chemicals based on carbon, are necessary for all forms of life found on earth. Scientists decided they could not proclaim discovery of life on Mars — hinted at by earlier Viking experiments — unless they found earth-like organic compounds.

Carter Concerned Over Non-Voters

By DAVE RILEY
Associated Press Writer

Jimmy Carter is growing increasingly concerned about all those Americans who don't plan to vote, and he's reminding his supporters of past instances when only a few ballots changed the nation's history.

In his speeches this week, Carter has leaned heavily on listeners who may be thinking of sitting out the 1976 campaign and has urged his supporters to spare no effort to get potential slackers to the polls.

Both Carter and President Ford are off the campaign trail today, Ford in Washington and Carter at home in Plains, Ga. Both candidates plan to attend the annual Al Smith dinner in New York on Thursday. Their final debate is scheduled for Friday in Williamsburg, Va.

Although he remained at the White House on Tuesday, Ford found an opportunity to criticize Carter's proposals to cut the record defense budget, saying such cuts would make the nation weak. Carter has said he wants to cut from $5 billion to $7 billion from the Pentagon budget.

And Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger made a rare foray into the political arena in a speech in New York where he defended Ford's record on international human rights.

Both the vice presidential candidates, Democratic Sen. Walter Mondale and Republican Sen. Bob Dole, were on the road.

Carter traveled to New York City where he stood in a chilly Harlem street as night closed in and pleaded for his supporters to round up prospective nonvoters and get them to the polls.

There are, he warned, past examples of elections that could have changed history if only a handful of voters who stayed at home had made it into the polling booth.

If John Kennedy had lost to Richard Nixon in 1960, Carter shouted into a cheering mostly black crowd that police estimated at 7,000 strong, "we would never have had the Voting Rights Act. None of you would have the freedom you now have."

Later, at a fund-raising dinner, Carter worried that "in the last eight years a lot of people had decided that it is not worth the effort to try to be involved in politics and vote and try to change this country."

He also recalled the 1968 election when Richard Nixon narrowly defeated Hubert Humphrey. "The election went the wrong way," he said.

Carter has for several days referred to polls that say more than half the eligible voters may not cast ballots. Analysts say many of those who have become discouraged with the election process would be Democratic voters casting ballots to change the faces in Washington if they bothered to vote.

And national polls now show Ford and Carter nearly neck-and-neck with the election only two weeks away.

Some analysts say the lower the voter turnout the better chance Ford has of winning the election. But independent candidate Eugene McCarthy says he thinks voter apathy could help his campaign.

Ford received an award on Tuesday from the Amvets in a Rose Garden ceremony. He used the occasion to criticize Carter's proposal to cut from $5 billion to $7 billion from the record Pentagon budget.

Hospital Board Okays Purchase Of Equipment

By CAROL TYER

Smile buttons abounded at the Pitt Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees last night.

The trustees wore the buttons in support of the hospital employees' campaign this week to encourage "less talking and more quiet" in the hospital this week. "A smile doesn't make any noise and does everyone so much good," was quoted to the group as it has been to employees this week.

Trustee J. B. Kittrell questioned whether all actions of the executive board and finance committee are being brought back before the full board. Specifically he questioned the May action granting 10 per cent pay increases to the hospital administration. The Board proceeded to approve this increase.

He also questioned whether the executive board and the finance committee should act in concert. He said he thinks it's fine that they meet together, but sees no way under the present by-laws that they can vote jointly.

reported on a talk by Dr. Edward Walls at the trustee education session held recently. Dr. Walls stressed the importance of hospital's keeping a large reserve fund as some protection against rising costs and inflation, he said.

Approval was given for the purchase of $21,450 Pitney-Bowes embossers and printers and a Picker x-ray machine costing $48,355. Both prices were negotiated from $25,000 and $55,000 respectively. Both are being paid for in 60 monthly payments at five and a quarter per cent interest through a loan from Planter's National Bank. This loan eliminates much higher finance charges offered by the companies selling the equipment.

Also approved were purchases of calculators and adding machines for the business office costing $3,260.71 and a surgical power drill costing $1,592.

The county attorney was given the authorization to represent the board before the Internal Revenue Service concerning the hospital employees retirement program.

Trustees were invited to the third annual employees banquet to be held Friday at 6:30 p.m. at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

They were told about the hospital's going on the 24-hour clock and of Ronald McDonald's visit to the pediatric ward last Saturday.

Medical staff representative Dr. Eric Farrington showed a new form which physicians wishing to join the Pitt Memorial staff fill out. It provides for documentation of licenses and questions past malpractice and illicit activities, if any.

Dr. Laupus brought regards from UNC Pres. William Friday, who visited the new hospital yesterday.

Chairman W. R. Duke presented a letter from Harry W. Clark of St. Joseph's Hospital in Asheville, asking if Pitt Memorial trustees would be interested in helping form a hospital trustees' association separate from the American or N. C. Hospital Association.

Trustee Norfleet Suggs of Pinetops praised what he called "the spirit of cooperation that has been apparent since the new board made up of county trustees and UNC appointees has been formed." He called it inspiring.

TRAFFIC LIGHT?

Is it possible for the Department of Transportation or the city to install a traffic light at the corner of Charles Street and Red Banks Road? There seems to be a real traffic hazard there since the new street has been opened in behind Pitt Plaza. A. P.

Gerald England of the Department of Transportation says Red Banks is now a privately owned street, but that when it is taken over by the city, a left turn storage lane will probably be developed on Charles Street or Highway 43, whichever you wish to call it. Traffic counts and accident records will determine whether a signal is added, he said.

Roberson Sees Danger To N.C. Leaf, Peanuts

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Kenneth H. Roberson, Republican candidate for N.C. Commissioner of Agriculture, says the election of Democrat Jimmy Carter as president could spell the end of the state's tobacco and peanut programs.

"I shudder at the thought of Carter being president," the GOP candidate asserted, contending that the presidential nominee's home state of Georgia "has been trying to monopolize" both agricultural programs for years.

Roberson predicted that Carter would "definitely have changes made" in the tobacco marketing system to allow Georgia more selling time under the present designation format.

Increases in southern selling time would find North Carolina in the same problem areas in tobacco marketing that it faced before the designation program went into effect, he cautioned.

Roberson said that North Carolina's peanut program is being penalized by Georgia's over production. In addition, Georgia's peanut support price is higher than ours, he noted. Saying that a change is needed in the overall peanut program, the Martin County farmer said that the two different types of peanuts grown in North Carolina and in Georgia should be separated into two different programs.

The locally-grown Virginia-Carolina peanut, which he termed an "edible" product, is under supplied, according to Roberson, while a situation of over production exists with the Georgia peanut, classified by the candidate as a variety basically suited for oil production.

Regulations are needed in order to have a situation where both peanut programs are allowed to stand for themselves, he continued, rather than one being hurt by the over production of the other.

Roberson said that while the state's overall agricultural picture is sound, he would work for several changes if he were elected over incumbent Commissioner Jim Graham.

One area needing some revamping, he noted, is in personnel where several "political hacks in top echelon positions" need to be removed.

In addition, the candidate said that he is against requiring farmers to pass a test in order to qualify for a license to apply pesticides on their own farms. Roberson said that Graham has

Blown Dry Hairdos Cut Into Beauty Salon Talk

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The new hairdressing technique, blow drying the hair, has changed habits in beauty establishments. "Some good, some not," says Rudolph Sabatino, longtime New York hairdresser.

"It has caused a new price structure, it takes a lot of the hairdresser's time and it is so noisy it just about ruins the confidential relationship that has always existed between the customer and the hairdresser." But customers are paying more for it.

Whereas hairdressers spent maybe 15 or 20 minutes setting a shampooed head and another 15 minutes or so combing it after it had dried under a hood-style dryer, they may now spend an hour or more working on one head, snipping, brushing and blowing it, over and over, until every hair falls into place.

"Formerly I could do maybe 28 heads a day, but now maybe I do from 12 to 15, depending on the amount of cutting," explained Rudy, as he is called. "We had to increase the cost — so a blown dry alone costs a customer $8."

It hasn't kept young girls from having the hair works, though, when they come into his establishment, he says. Many spend upwards of $25 to have a hair cut, shampoo, color and, of course, the blow dry, but their appointments are less frequent.

"No matter how long it takes to do it, it lacks distinction. It has an assembly line look. Most customers are wearing the wedge cut or a variation of it. It gives girls and women a neat, career girl look, sort of like everybody's idea years ago of what a well groomed secretary should look like," Rudy said.

It's a "mechanical look" that began with the geometrical hairdos that were introduced a number of years ago, putting customers in that "stamped-out-of-a-mold" category, he said. Most hairdressers would prefer to create styles for the individual look, said Rudy who is well known for his artistry with hair.

The blow dry is not just "a big city fad," Rudy noted. He sees the look everywhere he goes, even in his home town of Secaucus, N.J. His wife and relatives are all wearing some variation of the wedge hairstyle, he added.

Only his older customers use the hair dryers with hoods. And, because they require less of his time, it costs them less to have their hair done. In fact, some hairdressers have not been swept up in the blow dry technique at all and are doing a thriving business with women who prefer the curlers and pin curls and hooded dryers, Rudy said. But he thinks it is a mistake not to keep up with new techniques because if a woman has her hair blown dry somewhere, sometime, and she sees the neat effect, she may give up the old method.

On the other hand, he knows of hairdressers who now have only blow dryers in their salons.

"It is really a hairdressing dilemma. Hairdressers who shun this method may eventually go out of business because they haven't kept up, but if hair gets shorter, those of us who are concentrating on blow dries may find that we will be doing only cuts and color. We won't be hairdressers any more. Many women are already shampooing and drying their hair themselves because they've had it cut so short. If that continues — well, who knows where you go from there?"

The new system has interfered with the personal relationships Rudy has always enjoyed with his clients as he worked on their hair. Their stories about their lives and loves, their new recipes, their husbands, children, animals, prize delphiniums, and such.

"The blow dryer is so noisy and with so many in use at the same time, conversation is really dead. I really miss that," he said.

Portuguese Soup: Fine Main Dish

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

To keep the cost of a supper reasonable and make serving easy, you may want to consider offering a hearty Portuguese soup as the main course. The soup is a savory combination of beef, sausage, kale, cabbage, potatoes and pinto beans. It tastes delicious with crusty Portuguese, French or Italian bread. We skip salad when we serve this soup. After it, dessert and coffee.

Portuguese cooks use kale in many of their soups and now that this recipe has come into our ken, we understand their favoring the flavor, texture and color this green contributes. Fortunately, chopped kale comes frozen nowadays and is convenient to have on hand.

If you have an electric tureen or one with a candle-warmer, by all means use it for serving the soup at the table. Second helpings are inimitable—the soup is that good—and the tureen will keep them hot.

- PORTUGUESE KALE SOUP
- 2 pounds soup bones
 - 1 pound boneless chuck beef, cut in 1-inch cubes
 - 5 cups water
 - 2 tablespoons beef bouillon granules
 - ½ pound Portuguese or Spanish sausage (linguica or chorizo), sliced ¼-inch thick
 - 1 medium onion, cut in thin strips
 - 10-ounce package frozen chopped kale
 - 2 cups coarsely shredded cabbage, lightly packed
 - 2 medium (½ pound) potatoes, pared and cut in 1½-inch chunks
 - 8-ounce can pinto beans (undrained) or 1 scant

'Together' Couples Leave Problems Behind At Base

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Not only are William R. and Priscilla C. Beck both in the United States Air Force — he is a major and she is a captain — but they work as doctors in the same hospital.

The Becks are just one of more than 60 military couples at Wilford Hall USAF Medical Center, Lackland AFB here. Like most in-service couples, they have to put in a little extra effort to make their marriage work.

"The marriage would probably never survive if I was just a housewife," said Dr. Priscilla Beck. "With Bill's hours in his pediatric residency I would go crazy without my career."

The couple met and were married three years ago while in medical school at the University of Nebraska. Major Beck — he had been in the Air Force since 1969 — was there through the Air Force Institute of Technology Educational Program. When he and Priscilla decided to get married she joined the Air Force under a scholarship program.

"I felt that the only way I could marry Bill and still pursue my medical profession was to join the Air Force," said Captain Beck, who is in her first year of a pathology residency.

She spends about 50 hours a week at the office, taking some of her work home with her, while her husband needs to be at the medical center for about 100 hours a week. The Becks don't get much of a chance to see each other.

At home, chores are shared. "The first one home makes dinner and the other washes dishes," said William Beck. "Lawn chores are also shared."

He explained they "simply need each other. A separation would hurt."

Lee H. and Mary L. Chalifour have been married for 11 years. Their situation has an added dimension: she's a lieutenant colonel and he's a non-commissioned officer, a chief master sergeant.

They say there is only one way a marriage like theirs can work: "Be mature enough to accept the fact that there is a difference in rank and the officer member of the family has certain traditional social obligations that must be fulfilled," said Lee Chalifour.

The Chalifours, who are now both at Lackland AFB, met at Moody AFB in Georgia before departing for Tachikawa Air Base in Japan. She is now charge nurse of the medical center at Lackland's emergency room, while her husband is superintendent of base dispensary services.

"We leave our work and military problems at the base; we don't take them home to hash out," said Lee Chalifour.

If the occasion arises that calls for him to salute his wife or stand at attention for her, he does so just as he would for any other officer. Those are "the rules of the game."

Another in-service couple, Darrel G. and Rhoda L.S. Smith, work in the same section of the hospital. A staff sergeant, he is in charge of the Education and Training Office at the medical center and his airman I.C. wife is in charge of the workroom where equipment and instruments are cleaned and processed. They have been married for 16 months.

"We strive to maintain good relations with our co-workers and show an unbiased attitude toward on-the-job situations such as time off and special duties," said Darrel Smith.

"Of course, now there are a number of couples in our section and the potential for difficulties has eased," he added.

The Smiths met in September 1974 when Rhonda was assigned to the operating room section. "Darrel was involved with the Wilford Hall Airmen's Committee. I joined soon after arriving here. The committee brought us closer together," Rhonda Smith recalled.

Like the Becks and the Chalifours, the Smiths leave their work at the office and share household chores. But they don't plan to make the Air Force a career.

"I'll probably miss working with Darrel when we start our family," said Rhonda Smith. "I have an insight into his work that many wives never get."

The Surprise Lunchbox
Yesterday's brown bag syndrome has been replaced by today's decorated lunchboxes. You'll see anything from cartoon characters to rock'n roll bands. But remember the old sayings, "it's not what's on the outside but what's inside that counts!" A little extra treat or an imaginative surprise can really brighten your child's day. And what better way is there to day "I love you" while they're away at school?

Zip up the inside of the lunchbox by tucking in notes, poems, puzzles or comic clippings. Remember holidays with special napkins and color schemes, or cut-out sandwiches with cookies cutters. Always remember that variety is the spice of life and kids deserve variety as much as adults. Try different foods each day, such as a selection of raw fresh vegetables like cauliflower, carrots, celery, zucchini and broccoli. And don't forget fresh fruits, such as apples, bananas, pears, or fresh oranges. Oranges are available every month of the year, so they're great for lunchboxes all the time. Cut them in wedges and place in a plastic bag. The vitamin C in fresh oranges is very stable, so there's no need to worry about destroying that valuable vitamin when you cut and wrap the fruit. One medium-size orange provides more than 100 percent of the recommended daily allowance of Vitamin C. Most kids love a bit of dessert in their lunchbox, so be sure to add a sweet treat in addition to the sandwich and fruit. Here are two unusual and delectable treats that are sure to please and a sandwich spread that combines every kid's favorite, peanut butter, with crunchy granola and fresh orange.

- O.J. GUMDROP MUFFINS
- 2 cups flour
 - 1 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon baking soda
 - ½ teaspoon salt
 - 2-3 cup cut-up gumdrops*
 - 1 tablespoon fresh grated orange peel
 - ½ cup sugar
 - 2 tablespoons shortening
 - 1 egg
 - 1 cup fresh squeezed orange juice.

In bowl, sift together flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Add gumdrops and orange peel. Coat well with flour mixture; set aside. In large bowl, cream together sugar and shortening. Add egg, beating until light and fluffy. Stir in orange juice. Add flour mixture; stir until just blended. Spoon into paper-lined 2½ x 1-¼-inch muffin cups, 2-3 full. Bake at 400°F. for 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 12 to 14 muffins.

She's Proud To Be Policeman's Wife

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I have always been very close. She has a fine husband with whom she has a most happy marriage. I am a widow, 50, my sister is 53 and her husband is 52.

For the last two years, I have felt that my heart was breaking for lack of love from a man. My nerves are terribly strained, and the doctor has advised me to get a man.

My sister says she cannot stand by and do nothing to help me, so she has agreed to lend me her husband, who is most agreeable to cooperating with us.

My sister says she would share her food to keep me from starving, and sees little difference in this instance.

The only thing that bothers me is wondering if God would sympathize with my plight and condone such a plan. We are all good Christians and attend church regularly. Please base your answer on a practical basis as well as a religious one. Yours in Christ.

NEEDS A MAN

DEAR NEEDS: As a church-going Christian, surely you know that borrowing another woman's husband (even for therapeutic reasons) is inconsistent with God's laws. Since you so desperately want a man, find your own. Sharing a husband might provide short-term relief but long-term disaster.

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column a while back from a woman who said everytime she got pregnant, her husband started drinking. My problem is just the opposite. Everytime my husband starts drinking, I get pregnant.

I love kids, but we've got just about all we can handle right now.

Don't tell me to use birth control. I've tried several methods, and they don't work for me.

You keep saying that a wife shouldn't turn her husband away when he wants sex because that gives him an excuse to find another woman. So what do you recommend?

ENOUGH KIDS

DEAR ENOUGH: Planned Parenthood for YOU, Alcoholics Anonymous for HIM and self-control for both of you!

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a policeman, so I'd like to comment on the letter from the Passaic policeman's wife who said she hated her husband's work.

Being a policeman's wife is not easy. I worry about him being killed in the line of duty. There are lonely nights when I wish he were at home with me and the baby. He works hard and has very little time off. After duty hours, he's in court, on the telephone or examining those arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

But my husband is happy in his work even though policemen are sometimes called "fuzz," "the heat" or "pigs." And TV, too, has pictured them as super-cops, trigger-happy fools or even robots.

I'm proud to be the wife of a policeman. When someone calls my husband a "pig," I take it as a compliment because in our family "pig" is short for "Professional Integrity and Guts"! My policeman needs love, patience and support from his wife and family—and from society. Sign me,

Incubator And Respirator Given To New Hospital

Presentations of two gifts for the hospital pediatrics ward, a premature infant respirator and a transport incubator, were made before the hospital trustees last night.

The Junior Woman's Club of Greenville gave a respirator for the premature infant nursery of the new hospital valued at $2,475. It will be used immediately. Ann Lichtefeld, club gifts committee chairman, and Karen Collier, club president, represented the club. Dr. Jon Tingelstad, vice chairman of the Department of Pediatrics of the ECU School of Medicine, described the use and importance of the machine for newborns with respiratory problem. Previously, babies with such problems have had to be rushed to Chapel Hill or Duke, he said. Money for the gift was raised at the dance last spring and added to be being placed in a savings account, Club president

Mrs. Karen Collier explained. The club is participating in a community improvement contest sponsored jointly by the American Federation of Woman's Clubs and Sears Roebuck and Company.

Dr. Ernest W. Schwarz presented a transport incubator valued at $1,171 on behalf of the March of Dimes. Dr. William Laupus, Dean of the School of Medicine, who is also a pediatrician, explained the merits of this battery-operated device in moving sick infants from place to place. A constant temperature and other constants give the child a better chance for survival during necessary moves. Often the machine will be used to bring babies in trouble in to Pitt Memorial for smaller hospitals and clinics throughout the area, he said. Harry Leslie, chairman of the Hospital Gifts Committee reported that cash on hand for gifts to the new hospital stands at $217,646.90 now, with pledges amounting to $395,852.76.

Low Quality Leaf Rising One Man's Effort To Make A Better World

FARMVILLE — Due to an increase in volume of non-descript grades and less demand for some low quality of tobacco the average was lower Tuesday on the Farmville Tobacco Market, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

"Offerings continued to consist of leaf and smoking leaf grades. Top price was paid by companies for several sheets of quality leaf grades was $1.41 per pound," Williams said.

The Farmville Market sold 678,049 pounds Tuesday for $797,958 for an average of $117.68 per 100 pounds. To date the Farmville Market has sold 28,185,853 pounds for $32,782,916 for a season average of $116.31 per 100 pounds as compared to $100.87 per 100 pounds on the same sale day last year.

Have you ever questioned what can one person do to help a world-wide problem?

That is what Al Sondej, a graduate of the University of Notre Dame did several years ago. Since that time he has been working to promote conservation and sharing of the world's limited resources to help create a more livable environment for everyone.

Sondej is presently travelling across the country visiting college campuses. He talks to the students about the world's economic and political problems and tries to institutionalize a method of collecting money for developmental agencies and signing petitions of political concern. Sondej visited East Carolina University Tuesday and Wednesday.

For two years every day Sondej stood outside the Notre Dame cafeteria and collected money in a plastic milk jar to send to developmental agencies such as U.N.I.C.E.F., Catholic Relief Service, Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE), and Church World Service. He collected $25,000 in two years at the university.

"All of the money collected, is given to the developmental agencies. I worked three months this past summer with the Overseas Development Council and saved enough money to buy two Ameripasses to travel across the country and pay my expenses," Sondej said.

Sondej bases his efforts on the idea that all people are equally children of God.

For this reason he believes that all people should conserve resources and that the rich minority should share with the poor to help the poor learn to help themselves.

Sondej is a follower of Father Theodore Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame Fr. Hesburgh supports the idea of allowing a reliable flow of developmental aid to countries to support long-term changes.

The petitions that Sondej promotes are "Bread for the World" and the "Right To Food Resolution." "Bread for the World" is a Christian citizens' movement in the USA, concerned with the alleviation of worldwide hunger and with the development of global equality. "The Right to Food Resolution" supports the idea of food assistance programs in the United States and around the world.

Sculpture From Scrapped Guns In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An estimated $2 million worth of firearms and deadly weapons used in crimes and confiscated by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department have been crushed into scrap, as is the custom every year.

Usually the scrap is melted down, but this year's six tons of rubble, along with some bits and pieces from previous years' piles, are going to be turned into a sculpture.

The sculpture, designed by Sgt. Leonard Potesman, a Sheriff's Department artist, will consist of three cubes placed one on top of the other. Each cube face is four feet square and the sculpture will weigh approximately 15 tons.

Dubbed by Sheriff Peter Pitchess "A Monument of Futility," the art work will be placed at the Sheriff's Training Academy here.

Child-Abuse Policy Reversed By State

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — In what amounts to a reversal of policy, Tennessee Human Services Commissioner Horace Bass has ordered social workers to stop returning abused children to their families.

The order, issued Tuesday in the wake of the death last week of Melisha Morgana Gibson, 4, at Cleveland, Tenn., also requires all abused children who had been returned to their parents on a trial basis to be brought back to foster homes or institutions. Last week, Bass said his department's philosophy was to maintain the family unit. He said welfare departments, as well as other authorities, have argued that a child is better off in his or her own home, if the parents can be helped.

Melisha's stepfather, Ronald Maddux, and mother, Wanda Gibson Maddux, were ordered held without bond Tuesday pending action by the Bradley County grand jury.

Tobacco Constantly Beseiged

The tobacco industry is one that is constantly beseiged by problems and Robert H. Miller of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service outlined some of them before the Tobacco Growers Information Committee last week.

An immediate problem is that there is an imbalance in the amount of low-stalk tobacco which is placed under government loan program as related to demand.

He said about 80 percent of the loan volume this year and last was in the low-stalk group.

"At current support levels these tobaccos have little market overseas and U. S. manufacturers can import similar tobacco more economically," he said.

Miller said price supports went up nearly 14 percent this season, which he maintained outstripped production cost increases. Supports may go up seven percent next year and seven the following year.

Another official E. Leon Moore, warned that tobacco substitutes have been developed. "These will eventually have some impact on tobacco production and sales in the U.S.," he said.

A factory for the substitute has been built in the United Kingdom and one has been built in Maryland.

Somehow tobacco farming and production have survived all the many problems they have faced so far. The farmer, of course, can do nothing about the lower stalk problem, since those leaves just grow. Nor can he do anything about synthetic tobacco. As it has always been, the salvation of the U.S. tobacco farmer is to grow a leaf that is superior to anything grown or manufactured anywhere else.

Third Triple Veto

By SERGE SCHMEMANN Associated Press Writer UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — African diplomats say the triple Western veto of sanctions against South Africa places a new responsibility on the United States, Britain and France to bring about the independence of South-West Africa. "The burden on these countries is much more serious now that once again they have protected South Africa in the Security Council," said Ambassador Salim A. Salim of Tanzania, a leader of the black Africans' U.N. battle against white rule in South Africa.

The three permanent Western members of the Security Council on Tuesday vetoed a resolution calling for a ban on arms sales to South Africa for its failure to relinquish control of South-West Africa, or Namibia as it is known in the United Nations.

U.S. Ambassador William W. Scranton and British delegate James Murray said they opposed sanctions because sensitive consultations were under way with the South African government on the future of the territory, and an embargo might disrupt these.

The French representative, Jacques Lecompt, said he knew nothing of these negotiations, but he argued that because he and other members of the council are not fully informed on the negotiations, this should prevent the council from taking action against South Africa.

The resolution got 10 affirmative votes, or two-thirds of the council membership, from Sweden, the Soviet Union, China and the seven sponsors, Benin, Libya, Tanzania, Guyana, Panama, Romania and Pakistan. Japan and Italy abstained.

It was the third triple veto by the Western powers in support

Little Difference To Hospital Patient

Patients at Pitt Memorial Hospital will soon be hearing 2200, 0200, and 0600, rather than 10 o'clock, 2 a.m. and 6 a.m.

The hospital will go the 24-hour clock, used by the military and many other countries.

The change will be made for clarity in an institution which operates around the clock, seven days a week and where the time might be essential to a patient's welfare.

For the patient, though, whether he is awakened at 2 a.m. or 0200, it's all the same.

Standards Can Be Tricky

By BILL NOBLITT RALEIGH — Measuring the performance of public school pupils against some minimum standard is proving to be a particularly nettlesome problem for educators.

In the wake of Johnny's inability to read as well as he should, the hue and cry has gone up in North Carolina and in other states for some way to make certain he learns.

But drawing that minimum line is proving more popular in theory than in practice. It's simple enough to say a high school graduate ought to be able to read his diploma. But when the time comes to establish the words on that diploma; the level at which it is written; even the language in which it is written, the nature of the problem can be clearly seen.

Time Coming

Top officials at the State Department of Public Instruction believe the time is not far off when either the State Board of Education, or local patrons (or both) agitate so strongly for minimum performance standards for students that some system must be considered.

Several states are already moving in that direction.

Some have placed responsibility at the upper grades, requiring by law that a high school graduate must be able to read at the ninth grade level.

Others have endorsed the idea that reading well — in fact, doing well throughout school — stems from successful work in the elementary grades. In one state, a child must display ability to master a list of 2,000 pre-selected words before promotion from the second to the third grade.

Falling to achieve at the ordained level usually calls for the pupil to enter a remedial program in which the shortcoming would be corrected before getting back on track at whatever level.

While not arguing that the schools ought to do all possible to make sure students learn to read, George A. Kahdy, assistant state superintendent for instructional services, does argue with the idea that rigid measuring sticks can be held up against every child.

"Such measures are fine when used for the good students. But what about the slow pupil, the handicapped child, the student who comes from a society which was deprived of the stimulations which lead to reading?"

Who Suffers

"And what about the child in the second grade who can't master that 2,000-word list today; but blooms tomorrow because it suddenly makes sense. Must he repeat a grade?" Kahdy wonders.

As for requiring a rigid test for high school graduation, Kahdy wonders if that might result instead in more dropouts (North Carolina is already losing a third of the pupils between ninth and 12th grades); he worries that more youngsters might be victims of pressure in the schools.

And he worries about the student who is on track to becoming a really superb auto mechanic or plumber, carpenter or electrician.

"Are we going to continue assuming that every student is going to go to college, and structuring the curricula and the performance measures against that goal?" Kahdy proposes.

Then there is the question of what to do about those students who simply can't meet the minimum performance standards — whatever they may be, or at whatever level. Obviously, the state would have to assume responsibility for correcting the deficiency.

That would mean remedial training courses for perhaps one-third of the student population across the state. With per-pupil spending already averaging $1,050, and school people scurrying after every available budget dollar to meet current program expenses, Kahdy worries that it would prove impossible to come up with the estimated $1,000 per child such a remedial program would require. If, as predicted, a third of the state's 1.2 million students needed remedial help, the cost could run $400 million per year.

Those Restless WASPs

NEW YORK — Whenever there is a presidential election, reporters always go to an ethnic bar to see what the workman is thinking. They wind up talking to Polish-Americans in Chicago, German-Americans in Milwaukee, Italian-Americans in Queens, N.Y., and Mexican-Americans in El Paso, Texas. But no one ever bothers to get to a white American Anglo-Saxon bar to find out how the WASPs feel about the election.

In order to correct this oversight, I went to the Biltmore Bar the other day to speak to WASPs who claim they are being ignored in the election and are getting fed up with it.

The bar was crowded with men dressed in Brooks Brothers suits. Most of them were drinking Chivas Regal scotch on the rocks and watching a discussion on Public Television between William Buckley and Norman Mailer.

At first they were very suspicious of me because I ordered a beer. Realizing my mistake, I demanded a double Beefeater Gin on the side. They relaxed a little.

"I'm from the press," I said to the man next to me.

"I'm from Westport," he replied. "We never see people like you in this bar."

"I'm very interested to find out how the WASPs are going to vote in the election."

Several of the other men in pin-stripe suits overheard me and gathered around.

"It's very puzzling," one of them said. "Both contestants have ignored the WASPs in their efforts to attract the ethnic groups, and it might cost them the election."

"Our votes are of crucial importance," another man said. "After all, WASPs make up a large segment of the population, and we have as many dreams and hopes for our children as the blue-collar working class."

"I know the ethnics look down on us," an advertising executive from Greenwich said, "because we read books

Overlooking ancient El Escorial, burial place of Spanish kings, Spanish fascist armies dragged artillery to the height today to shell and assault another inner gateway to their goal - Madrid.

El Escorial, 24 miles northwest of the capital, and Navalcarnero, on the Maqueda-Madrid road to the southeast of El Escorial, stood as the two last bulwarks in the government defense on the western front.

In the south the fascists, within 20 miles of Madrid, mopped up around Illescas and laid plans for new attacks on Torrejon de la Calzada.

Spain's President Manuel Azana rushed to loyal autonomous Barcelona with three ministers from his besieged capital. Officials said the trip was the first of a "series of tours" to rally government dominated territory. Back in Madrid the high command warned the situation was "grave" and newspapers blazoned: "danger at the city gates will mean the shooting of 100,000 workers."

A new high average mark for the 1936 tobacco market was set here yesterday when 1,208,110 pounds were sold for $352,733.29, an average of $29.20.

The previous high average for the season was set at $29.05 last Monday.

THE INSIDE REPORT

A Carter Blunder Needed

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

PARAMUS, N.J. — A carefully contrived effort to restore the campaign's focus to Jimmy Carter during President Ford's two-day swing through New York and New Jersey collided with three formidable obstacles: the intervention of John Dean, chronically strange decisionmaking by the Ford organization and Mr. Ford's own irremediable failings as a campaigner.

On the day when the Ford strategists hoped the President's motorcade through the Republican suburbs would put Carter back on the defensive, the ubiquitous Dean preempted attention with new Watergate-related charges. Moreover, the Ford itinerary in New York City and the lack of any itinerary for the next week caused puzzled local Republican politicians to wonder about those Ford managers in Washington.

Worst of all was the President himself. Abrasive without being effective, Mr. Ford again showed his inability to ad lib on the campaign stump without a carefully prepared and rehearsed script. So unimpressive was Mr. Ford that his hopes of somehow catching up by Nov. 2 depend on a factor outside his control: a gaffe by Carter.

Mr. Ford's New York-New Jersey swing represented still another in the innumerable changes in his campaign style over the last year. Believing that the second debate and sniping about the President's personal finances had put him on the defensive, his strategists convinced Mr. Ford to counterattack personally against Carter.

Whatever the wisdom of this strategy, it is hard to understand why the first stop Tuesday was a Yeshiva in the Democratic heart of Brooklyn rather than a dependable Republican rally. Consequently, Tuesday night and Wednesday morning television news programs were dominated by militant Jewish pickets heckling Mr. Ford in Brooklyn.

The unexpected intrusion of an accusing John Dean on NBC's "Today" program Wednesday morning further confounded the Ford strategy group's intent to substitute Jimmy Carter for Jerry Ford in the prisoner's dock. Mr. Ford's indictment of Carter in conventional political rhetoric — "double talk, fuzzy talk, doubtful promises" — could not compete with Dean's evocation of Watergate.

Nevertheless, the Ford entourage was exuberant over the President's reception in suburban New York and New Jersey Wednesday following Tuesday's fiasco in Brooklyn. But what is a good campaign day for Gerald Ford is below par by ordinary standards. His audiences were as unresponsive as Carter's; his ad libbed speeches were as disjointed and lacking in content as Carter's.

Mr. Ford's handlers had ignored a lesson cruelly imposed on them by defeats in last spring's primaries: while barely adequate reading a prepared speech, he is considerably less than adequate with an improvised stump speech delivered in a monotone shout.

Addressing a rally at a Paramus shopping center, Mr. Ford accused Carter of "double talk," then descended into shouted sloganeering: "He can't get away with it, the American people aren't going to let him get away with it and you in Paramus won't let him get away with it." While intent on avoiding identification with Richard M. Nixon, Mr. Ford concluded here by parroting the 1972 Nixon campaign slogan with

HE LIVED WHOLLY FOR GOD

It has been said of St. Francis of Assisi that he lived a life more like the life of Christ than any other person who has ever lived.

His father was a rich merchant, and Francis was the recognized leader of the young men of the town in their feasts and social life. For a few years he made something of a name for himself in the army.

But then he underwent a long and serious illness, and when he recovered he became much dissatisfied with his way of life. On one occasion, when attending a feast, he was seized with such revulsion that he left his friends and wandered away to a church. There he fell into a trance, and when he awoke he was a changed man.

We are told that years later, when he breathed his last, a great flock of larks came down upon the roof of the house in which he lay, and then rose, singing merrily, as if they were carrying away to heaven the soul of this man who had so beautifully loved all God's creatures.

Yes, It's Everyone's Business

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When an economist wins a Nobel Prize you may be sure that most people dismiss the event as the economist's good luck but none of their business.

Wrong on both counts. Chance does play a role, simply because so many are qualified, but nobody wins who hasn't contributed to the fund of knowledge. And, yes, it is everyone's business, and their money, too.

Professor Milton Friedman, the most recent winner, has spread his influence through a vast panorama of life, including welfare reform and the volunteer army, besides directly influencing modern economic management.

It is in this latter area that Friedman, at this very moment, is having an impact on your pocketbook.

Following the Great Depression of the 1930s, the philosophy of John Maynard Keynes, the English economist, dominated economic thinking in the Western industrial world well into the 1960s.

To some extent at least, almost all economists acquired a bit of Keynes. They tended to believe, as might anyone who went through the depression, that there was a downward bias to economies that had to be corrected.

This correction was the responsibility of government. Through its fiscal policy, through spending and taxing, it could stimulate or restrain the economy, even fine-tuning it like an automobile engine. It was interventionist.

As the postwar expansion aged, economists learned that economies also might have an upward bias. Inflation became a serious, often unmanageable, problem.

Nevertheless, the Keynesians dominated thinking, and their influence is still enormous today. But Friedman, who tends to believe economies are stable if left free, began making his mark.

Friedman is a maverick, and he was treated by some economists as a thinker deserving of scorn. He was an exponent of monetarism. He believed economies were best managed by the least management. He believed in letting interest rates and prices rise and fall to correct imbalances.

But while his hands-off views were being criticized, the models of Keynes were demonstrated to be imperfect. Rather than being stabilized, economies were lurching from expansion to recession, with inflation tossed in.

Friedman gained some acceptance, some perhaps by default, by the imperfections in the Keynesian models. Economists who once thought they had an ideal approach to economic management now realized they had problems.

Friedman preached that the supply of money and its growth were greater determinants of short-term economic trends than were taxing and spending.

Rather than attempting to make the economy succumb to one's bidding through fiscal changes — through what he considered the heavy hand of government — he believed in nourishing the

New Graduate Courses OK'd

East Carolina University is now offering several new graduate programs of study recently authorized by the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina system.

The new graduate programs being offered include:

Master of Arts in Education in Adult Education.

Master of Arts in Education in Driver and Safety Education.

The Certificate of Advanced Study (Sixth Year) in English.

The Certificate of Advanced Study leading to Level II certification in School Psychology.

Dr. Joseph C. Boyette, dean of the ECU Graduate School, said students interested in these programs should discuss their interest with the following program advisers:

Adult Education—Dr. Leonard D. Lilley, School of Education, Speight Building.

Driver and Safety Education—Dr. Alfred S. King, Department of Health and Physical Education, Minges Coliseum.

Advanced English — Dr. Theodore Ellis, Department of English, Austin Building.

Advanced School Psychology—Dr. Betty J. Corwin, Department of Psychology, Speight Building.

Applications and additional general information for these and other ECU graduate programs are available from the Graduate School offices, Brewster Building, Dr. Boyette said.

The African resolution charged that South Africa had failed to meet the council's demand that it agree to a U.N. referendum in South-West Africa by Aug. 30 to determine the future of the territory.

But at the heart of the debate was the question whether Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger had prevailed on South African Prime Minister John Vorster during his recent African shuttle to negotiate with the South-West African People's Organization (SWAPO). The United Nations recognizes SWAPO as the "legitimate representative" of the people in the territory, but Vorster's government refuses to deal with it and has been working out an independence agreement with tribal chiefs and other black leaders.

economy with the proper money supply and letting it move freely.

Friedman has watched, no doubt with satisfaction, some of his notions become accepted, albeit grudgingly at first.

International monetary rates now float. That is, they are to a great extent free to seek their own values in the competitive marketplace rather than being pegged to arbitrary, specific values by their governments.

His views on money supply are practiced in most trading nations. Goals are set for economies, and the money supply is regulated to achieve those goals.

In the United States, few economic indicators are more closely watched than the money supply, as measured by the Federal Reserve. Monetary policy has taken its place beside fiscal policy in economic management.

"Very well put, Waldo," an airlines vice president said.

"Every time a white-collar crime is committed, people automatically assume a WASP did it. It's true that a high percentage of WASPs commit white-collar crimes, but that is only because they are in positions of responsibility where the opportunities exist."

As the first reporter ever to visit a WASP bar I came to the following conclusion: WASPs are tired of being ignored by both Ford and Carter, and if neither candidate addresses himself to their problems they may sit out the election in November.

a call for "four more years for Ford."

In attacking Carter, Mr. Ford repeatedly misrepresented past Carter fumbles as present Carter positions. The President told audiences that Carter favors cutting defense spending by $15 billion, eliminating tax deductions for home mortgage interest and raising rates for all middle-income taxpayers — all contrary to Carter's current positions.

"He wants to increase your taxes," the President shouted at Paramus. "Mr. Carter wants to undercut our national defense." While misrepresentation is commonplace on the political stump, it may rob Mr. Ford of his biggest assets: he looks, talks and acts more like a President than Carter. But there was nothing presidential in Mr. Ford's stump shouting in Paramus.

While the Ford inner circle exulted over his performance Wednesday, such barnstorming will be suspended shortly. Nothing is scheduled for the President this week other than periodic appearances in the White House Rose Garden.

This pause is supposed to give Mr. Ford time to bone up for the third debate while the campaign is carried forward by television commercials. In fact, it shows that the Ford campaign is relying on Jimmy Carter making a blunder. Certainly, the President said nothing in New York and New Jersey to inspire positive support.

Stepfather Told Of Subjecting Child To Torment

CLEVELAND, Tenn. (AP) — Four-year-old Melisha Gibson was forced to walk around her house for a full day by her stepfather, who said he beat her repeatedly with a stick and put her to bed naked and wet on a cold night before she died, according to a police report.

The report was entered as evidence during a preliminary hearing for Ronald Maddux, 31, and his wife, Wanda, 36, Tuesday. Both are charged with first-degree murder.

Maddux and his wife were bound to the Bradley County grand jury during the hearing before General Sessions Judge Edward Brown, who ordered police to keep them in custody without a chance for release under bond.

Both entered pleas of innocent to the police charges through court appointed attorneys.

Maddux sat impassively at the defense table throughout the three-hour hearing while his wife cried at times during the proceeding. Neither took the witness stand.

Officials say they expect the grand jury to consider the case this week and return an indictment quickly.

A crowd of 300 spectators that jammed into the courtroom cheered as Brown ordered the couple returned to jail at an undisclosed location.

Police, fearing for the couple's safety because of angry townspeople, moved the couple from the county jail shortly after they were charged Thursday.

The couple served a six-month jail term for abusing Melisha in 1973 when she was 11 months old. The state Human Services Department, with Juvenile Court approval, returned Melisha to their care in May.

"I was drinking whiskey. I made her keep walking back and forth all day to try to tire her out so she would sleep that night. "I kept giving her the hot sauce a tablespoon at a time. She asked me for a drink of water. I got a glass of water and told her if she would take the hot sauce, I would give her a drink.

"She swallowed the hot sauce, and I drank the glass of water," the police report allegedly quoted Maddux as saying. The report was not signed by Maddux.

"After supper, I made her start walking again. As she went by me while she was walking, I would hit her in the back with a stick. She was crying as she walked," Maddux was allegedly quoted as saying in the report.

Officials say the girl's body was covered from head to toe with cuts and bruises.

According to the report Maddux sent the child to bed, but later found she had wet the bed. He said he forced her to take a shower.

"I gave her a towel and told her to dry off. I sent her back to bed naked," the statement read, allegedly quoting Maddux again.

Sgt. Robert Lawson, of the Bradley County sheriff's office, was one of the first officers on the scene after the couple reported their daughter had died during the night.

"I saw a young female on a mattress," he told the court. "She was completely naked and lying on her back. The child was wet, her hair was wet and the mattress she was lying on was wet. And the night before was cold, I know that."

The judge rejected motions to suppress the police statement allegedly quoting Maddux.

Joe Bagwell, attorney for Mrs. Maddux, asked the court to dismiss the murder charge against her. Dist. Atty. Richard Fisher objected, saying, "This is a 4-year-old who weighed 60 pounds found one cold morning sopping wet. She was covered with cuts and bruises."

In the police report Maddux allegedly claimed he received brain damage from an alleged beating by city police 11 years ago, when he said he was charged with public drunkenness and resisting arrest.

"I believe the leaders in the back of my head were damaged," the report quoted him as saying. "My brain was losing so much blood that the doctors couldn't perform surgery, so a portion of my brain was frozen to stop the bleeding."

been leaning in the license requirement direction for some times. Currently, commercial licenses must be secured before farmers can apply pesticides on land other than their own as in the case of leased property.

Roberson voiced support for the controversial Right To Work Law, mentioning that Carter "wants to do away with it" and Graham supports the Carter platform. He said he would "hate to see the tobacco farmer next summer have to go to the labor hall to pick up his tobacco help at a fixed price."

"I'm not against unions," Roberson added, "but everyone should have the choice of whether to join or not."

Roberson, who ran for the agriculture post in 1972, charged that Graham is using the office to foster gubernatorial aspirations and said that if Graham wins in November, the commissioner will utilize the four-year term as a convenient means of running for governor.

In that vein, Roberson proposed that a policy be adopted whereby a commissioner would serve no more than 12 years. He said that after four years of learning the job and eight more of serving in the post, the office holder tends to begin building a political machine and have dealings with big corporations and influential individuals.

The Robersonville resident said that one of his programs in the 1972 campaign called for grain buyers and grain elevator operators to be bonded. Soon after the elections, Graham helped push through legislation requiring bonding, Roberson noted.

"Even though I lost, I helped get one of my programs across," he said. "You don't always have to win to win," Roberson pointed out. "If you can get something done by running that will help the people, then it's a shame not to run."

He said that a good two-party system is needed and he asserted that eastern North Carolina has not "reaped the benefits" it would have if such a system had been in effect.

Roberson was appointed by Gov. Jim Holshouser as one of the last highway commissioners in 1973 and, after reorganization by the legislature, was reappointed secondary roads councilman for the First Division covering 14 counties. He is currently serving in that capacity.

The candidate, who was named Outstanding Young Farmer of Martin County in 1957, served on the National Tobacco Advisory Committee in 1971 and 1972.

Boycott Suit Winners Again Subjected To Boycott

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer
PORT GIBSON, Miss. (AP) — For 12 white merchants who won a $1.2-million judgment against a black boycott, the future holds dreams of prosperity, but the present is a time of more economic hardship. The merchants hope the courts eventually will force the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) to pay the judgment. But, meanwhile, blacks have clamped another boycott on Port Gibson's small but normally busy main street in retaliation for the legal fight. W.P. Gordon, mayor of this town of 3,000 persons, says he doubts the merchants will ever see a dime of the judgment. U.S. District Court Judge

Orma Smith is expected to rule Thursday on one facet of the legal fight — whether the NAACP must put up $1.56-million bond in order to file an appeal to the state Supreme Court. Under state law, a loser who wants to block collection while carrying on the legal fight must post bond to cover judgment and costs. Actually, there are 129 other losers in the case, but only the NAACP could possibly raise that kind of money. "I think if they could get together out of court and raise enough money to just pay off the lawyers, that would be the best thing that could happen," Gordon said. The merchants were awarded $1.2 million in damages allegedly suffered by an illegal seconddary boycott in 1967, staged by the NAACP and area blacks to focus attention on their demands for jobs and changes in local government. The merchants described the boycott as a wartime blockade. The court ruled, in effect, that the protest was political and should have been directed against municipal officials, not the merchants. Protest leaders, however, maintained that many of the merchants were in fact the municipal leaders of Port Gibson. Most of the defendants in the case were picketers or boycott leaders back in 1967 and rank as poor people. "If they collected everything owned by every black person in Claiborne County they wouldn't have no $1.2 million," said the

Rev. Eddie Wall, a black Baptist minister. The new boycott was called by Charles Evers, former candidate for governor, mayor of nearby Fayette, and one of the few black defendants with anything to lose. "We're not going to buy anything until they quit trying to sue us," said the Fayette businessman. "I know it might cost me, but I can't stop because I might lose a few dollars. If we stop now our struggle has been done in vain." "They are killing this town," said Waddy Abraham, 65, a grocer. "If you don't have good, prosperous merchants, you don't have no town." If the judgment stands, Abraham would be due $142,217 in damages — some of it presumably collected from former pickets who, though they have little to lose, had to be included among the defendants to make the suit valid. "All these defendants, I don't know how they wound up in the case," he said. "We were not out to harm the local folks, we were after the NAACP and the big boys."

An Overdose For Ex-King

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The former king of Sikkim, 53-year-old Palden Thondup Namgyal, was reported unconscious and in very critical condition today after an overdose of sleeping pills.

"He is responding to treatment but he is very critically ill and not out of danger," said Princess Bhuvnesh Kumari, the legal adviser to the ex-monarch of the tiny Himalayan kingdom.

An Indian military plane flew Namgyal Tuesday from Gangtok, the capital of Sikkim, to a hospital in Calcutta. Sources at the hospital said his condition had stabilized.

Namgyal's American wife, the former Hope Cooke of New York, and their two children have been living in the United States since an uprising against her husband's rule in 1973. Reporters in America could not locate her to find out if she would go to her husband's side. But sources close to the former ruler said a longtime family physician, Dr. William Foley of the Cornell University Medical School, was expected to arrive in Calcutta in a day or two.

Namgyal, dethroned 18 months ago when his subjects voted overwhelmingly to abolish the 300-year-old monarchy and merge with India, was found unconscious in his palace in Gangtok Tuesday. He has been living there under armed guard since the 1973 uprising.

Claims Laws Hike Rates

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina laws governing insurance companies have tended to compound the insurance rate and market problems, an industry official says.

Robert P. Russell, chairman of the board of Crum and Forster Insurance Companies, asked North Carolina's independent insurance agents Tuesday to support efforts to end insurance rate regulation in the state.

He charged that insurance rates in North Carolina are set to meet political needs and not the needs of insurance companies.

Russell said that regulation of insurance rates is a sort of price control without corresponding cost control on such things as auto parts and medical care.

Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, Democratic nominee for governor, told the agents that he plans to inform himself completely about the insurance system in North Carolina.

"We must continue to have good insurance coverage for the people of North Carolina and the governor has an obligation to see that we do."

CANCER EXPERIENCES

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. S. Morris Kupchan, internationally known cancer researcher on the faculty of the University of Virginia and 1975 winner of the American Chemical Society's Ernest Guenther award, died Tuesday at the Sydney Farber Cancer Center. He was 53.

Hunt, Flaherty Views Are Seen Pretty Much Alike

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The race for governor this year has been noted more for the similarities between the two major party candidates than the differences.

The apparent likeness between Democrat Jim Hunt, 39, and Republican David Flaherty, 47, drew extensive media comment after the two met in a debate broadcast by nearly every television station in the state. Public service experience is not an issue since neither candidate has an extensive background in government. Hunt's only public office is his current term as lieutenant governor. Flaherty served two terms in the state Senate before being appointed to head the state Department of Human Resources, a job he held 3½ years.

Flaherty, however, has portrayed himself as the businessman candidate for governor, the one who has the ability to make government function better. He holds a bachelors degree from Boston University in real estate and insurance and has worked since college for the Broyhill furniture company, rising to the upper echelons of management.

Hunt earned a bachelors degree in agricultural education and a masters in agricultural economics at North Carolina State College, and a law degree from the University of North Carolina. He practiced law in Wilson before being elected lieutenant governor.

Both candidates favor the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and both believe the death penalty would be an effective deterrent to some cases of first degree murder.

During the televised debate, most areas of disagreement were based on political position with the sharpest disagreement being over public financing of campaigns.

Hunt said he favored expanding use of public funds in elections so that candidates would not owe debts to special interests. Flaherty said, however, called such efforts "a very serious mistake," claiming that candidates could use public funds and still go out and raise money from special interests.

Another area of disagreement has been the medical program with Flaherty defending his granting a contract to a private company to handle it while he was secretary of human resources. The contract fell through during the summer.

Hunt said it was a well-intentioned program but questioned whether a private firm could do a better job with such a program.

They also disagreed over a reading program for children in the first three grades. Hunt, as a member of the state Board of Education, won adoption of his pet program that was used in a pilot program last year with some success. It beefs up the teaching staff and uses volunteers to concentrate on teaching reading.

Flaherty complained that the board adopted that program without giving other programs adequate consideration. He said all teachers should take a course on teaching reading and each school should have a reading expert on hand.

Both candidates have taken a no-tax-increase stand, claiming the public cannot and would not tolerate any increase in taxes. Neither supports restructuring the state tax schedule so that higher incomes pay more tax and the poor less, although Flaherty has called for a tax break for the elderly.

Here are the other issues and the candidates' stands:

—Criminal penalties. Hunt says there should be fixed sentences so that a potential criminal would know how long he'll spend in jail if caught. Flaherty complains that laws favor the criminals who commit crimes because they believe they will get off or no more than a light sentence if caught.

—Prisons. Flaherty has called for innovative programs such as Maryland buying an old cruise ship for housing inmates. He also said county jails can be used with the state reimbursing the local governments. Hunt says unused facilities around the state can be pressed into service to relieve the current overcrowding in prison but he supports building more prisons.

—Utilities. Hunt says the Utilities Commission should take a bold leadership position and help find ways for the utilities to provide the services needed at the lowest possible rates. He has promised to appoint consumer-oriented commissioners.

Flaherty has emphasized the need to find new energy sources. He has promised to appoint "fair-minded" commissioners and weakly defended the appointees of his former boss, Gov. Jim Holshouser, saying he's not sure they have been as biased toward the utilities as some critics have charged.

—Land use planning. Flaherty said the 1974 Coastal Management Act is a good concept and questioned only whether it provides enough opportunity for local government to make land use decisions. Hunt also supported the act and said it should be extended to all counties if any are to have such regulations.

—Pay increases for teachers and state workers. Hunt has said he supports using $100 million of anticipated revenue increases to pay for a cost of living increase with greater increases based on availability of funds. Flaherty also gave a pay increase a high priority but hasn't promised a specific figure.

—Transportation. Flaherty has promoted east-west highways as necessary in the state's industrial development efforts. He said a bond issue should be floated if necessary. Hunt said there are three needs: easing of urban congestion; expansion of the primary highway system which would include east-west routes; and more spending on paving county roads.

—Source of funds for programs. Hunt bases his spending proposals on an anticipated growth in the state budget next fiscal year of at least $147 million. His plans would spend all but $25 million of it. Flaherty has not provided specific amounts his programs would cost but said pay increases and tax cuts for the elderly would be likely uses for the extra money.

Nursery School Founded And Run By A Man

By ROBERTA G. WAX
SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — "We're not into stereotypes," says Steve Brody, founder and director of a predominately male-run nursery school started with single parents in mind.

Brody, 28, said he got the idea for the Nurture while working with Big Brothers.

"We were getting a lot of calls from single mothers of boys too young for the Big Brothers program," he said. "But the mothers felt it was important for them to have some contact with men."

The Nurture is in a middle class area of the San Fernando Valley where Brody said one of every seven children come from single-parent families. Most of the parents are mothers, he said, because single-parent fathers would want the female influence found in more traditional nurseries.

Two-thirds of the children come from two-parent homes.

"We decided to admit children from two-parent homes to give a balance, to show that there are some children with fathers," he said. Female teachers were added, he said, "to show the interaction between the sexes and to get rid of some stereotyped roles."

"We don't want to turn out little John Waynes or whatever the female counterpart would be," he smiled, "but both boys and girls need a father influence. There is also a problem of separation trauma. We hope to ease some of the pain."

Along with Brody, who is working for a doctorate in psychology, the staff includes Bob Sayers, educational director with a master's degree in developmental psychology, Ted Banks, B.S. in psychology, Ellen Judson, M.S. in education, and Ian Walmsley, B.S.

Also on the staff is Dr. Joanna Bressler, a clinical psychologist and also a single parent of a nursery school-age daughter.

"Children of a single parent are called upon to grow up more quickly," Ms. Bressler said. "There are problems with separation. They live more in an adult world and are often more attached to one parent. Children with greater inner security seem to come from two-parent families."

Fees are based on a sliding scale based on income and size of family, with the average charge $125 a month. About 28 children attend daily.

Because the school is only a year old, Brody said it is hard to determine what effect it has had on its young pupils. A complete follow-up study is planned in the spring to compare its graduates to those from more traditional nurseries.

The study will examine gender identification, sex roles, attachment and dependency, Ms. Bressler said.

Some trepidation was expressed by the staff about how the pupils, who are used to a looser, less structured atmosphere, would adjust to the more disciplined public school.

Banks said he has been told by several teachers that graduates "seem to have the least amount of anger. Their ability to adapt seems better."

"The problem is determining why we're getting these good results," he said. "Is it because of our personalities or because they are getting the male influence that they normally don't have."

What exactly is that male influence? Brody said although they don't stereotype roles (men do most of the cooking, for example), there is an inherent maleness or femaleness that children learn.

"Men tend to be more independent, they don't worry as much about the possibilities of injury, don't coddle children as much," he said.

Girls need the father image just as much as boys do, he added.

The biggest concern of single parents, Ms. Bressler said, is that there will be something wrong with their child's sexuality. She said she thinks it is easier for a mother to raise a daughter than a son because the roles are closer.

"A mother with a boy has to really rise to the occasion," she said. "You have to learn to do some things you normally wouldn't, like baseball and sports. Boys of single parents miss some of the things that fathers traditionally do."

Brody said the idea of a male-run nursery school was very well received by the community, but perhaps that's a product of the times.

"The single parent is much more common today," he said. "And 10 years ago you couldn't get men to staff a place like this."

Corps Rejected Eager Applicant

WINK, Tex. (AP) — "The Marine Corps needs a few good men," said the poster at a shopping center, and Roger Woodrick didn't see why he couldn't qualify. But the Corps rejected his enlistment application.

That made his mother happy, but it disappointed a lot of his friends in the second grade. Roger is 8.

"He just filled out the card and mailed it off," said his mother, Mrs. Roger Woodrick. "It was about four days before he got a reply from the captain in Washington, D.C."

As Capt. Curt Murray put it: "We appreciate your interest in the Marine Corps. However, since you are 8, you won't be eligible to be a Marine for a while, but as our way of showing appreciation for your interest, we are enclosing a special Marine Corps poster."

"It's a huge poster," Mrs. Woodrick said. "Roger is real proud of it."

How's The Weather?

FORECAST

Until Thursday

WEATHER FORECAST — Cool weather is forecast today in the East and warm weather in the West. Most of the nation is expected to be sunny. Snow flurries are due in the Great Lakes area and rain in the St. Lawrence Valley and northern New England. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
The storm system that blanketed the Upper Midwest with snow Tuesday brought heavy rain and brisk winds to North Carolina today.

A complex area of fronts through Alabama and Florida was the spawning area for a major storm along the Atlantic Seaboard. This was the same system that produced the snow.

A low formed in Georgia this morning, and then moved toward North Carolina, deepening rapidly. The affects of the system were already being felt during the night as rain in North Carolina. As the low deepened, the rain became heavier. Thunderstorms popped up, mainly in the eastern counties. To compound the picture, winds increased, reaching 30 miles per hour in some sections. High temperatures today reflected the path of the storm. They ranged from the 50s in the west to near 80 along the southeast coast.

The rain should end in most sections tonight as the storm continues northeast. Only the northwest North Carolina mountains will have showers tonight.

Cold air will return again overnight. Lows will be 30s in the west to 50s in the east.

Tuesday was another below-normal day in all but the coastal areas. Cloudiness formed in the morning and continued during the day except for the coast. This cloudiness, combined with a light northeasterly wind flow, held maximum temperatures to the 50s in the west and central sections. Along the coast, where there was more sunshine, readings jumped rapidly into the upper 60s and low 70s.

During the afternoon, light, scattered showers fell in the southeast, the coastal plain and the northeast piedmont. Wilmington and Cherry Point had a trace, and Raleigh one hundredth of an inch.

Hot Dog Keeps Favorite Rating

BALTIMORE (AP) — The popularity of hot dogs continues to grow, reports the National Hot Dog and Sausage Council, which says that Americans in 1975 consumed more than 77 hot dogs per person — some $2 billion worth — as compared with 72 hot dogs per person in 1974.

Although they are generally served at lunch or dinner, as well as for between-meal snacks and at sports events, they are sometimes on the menu even for breakfast, according to panel members of a consumer test conducted by an advertising agency here.

"My little girl likes to eat them for breakfast," one housewife explained. "And why not? They're easy to fix and it starts her for the day. My husband and I have hot dog omelettes," she added.

The panel of homemakers reported that they serve hot dogs, on the average, two times a week, sometimes even more often.

The variety of ways to prepare hot dogs was cited by the panelists as one reason for their popularity. Grilled hot dogs won out over all others, including boiled, broiled and fried.

"I served lunch guests a hot dog casserole and they loved it," said a panel member.

Ease of preparation was mentioned most often as a factor in the choice of hot dogs, with budget considerations ranking second.

"Many people on fixed incomes would rather cut down on anything than on their table," said one panelist.

All the panelists participated in blind tastings.

Nominated For Posts

The membership of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce has received a list of five members who have been nominated to fill a three year term on the board of directors of the organization.

Those nominated are: Fred Baumann of J.C. Penney Co.; Jeannette Cox, Jeannette Cox Agency; Art Galya, Procter and Gamble Manufacturing Company; Ray Rogers, Wachovia Bank and Trust Company; and Tom Taft, Taft and Taft.

The chamber membership has 10 days to nominate other candidates. The process of nomination has been forwarded to all members of the Chamber by the Executive Vice President, Ed Walker.

President Don Collier, has appointed a Nominating Committee to nominate the Chamber officers for 1977. The board of directors will receive a report from this committee at its meeting Wednesday, October 27. The new term for the elected directors and officers will begin January 1, 1977.

Leaf Sales Top $1 Million On Local Market

Another $1 million sales day was recorded Tuesday on the Greenville Tobacco Market.

Sales totaled 950,776 pounds, according to sales supervisor J. N. Bryan, and brought $1,091,519, an average per hundred pounds of $114.80.

Top practical price paid yesterday was $1.30 per pound with some of the better leaf going to the buying companies for $1.31 to $1.40 per pound.

Stabilization receipts accounted for 33.53 per cent of total sales.

Season totals now stand at 45,738,770 pounds sold for $52,878,747, an average of $115.61 per hundred pounds.

Pharmaceutical Experts From All Over World To Meet Here

Twenty-one experts in pharmaceutical manufacturing will travel to Greenville from all areas of the world to attend a six-day workshop hosted by Burroughs Wellcome Co.

Officially titled the "Tenth European Production Panel," the workshop will be held Oct. 24-29 at the Burroughs Wellcome plant here. It will mark the first time the meeting has convened in the United States.

Participants will include plant and production managers from Wellcome manufacturing facilities located in the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, Spain, Italy, Germany, South Africa, Australia, Canada, Brazil and Mexico.

Burroughs Wellcome Co. is the U.S. subsidiary of The Wellcome Foundation Ltd., an international enterprise employing some 15,000 people in research, development, production and marketing of pharmaceutical products.

"We're delighted to host this group of knowledgeable, talented men," commented Harry Leslie, plant manager. "We feel honored indeed to have them come to Greenville to share knowledge they have acquired in pharmaceutical plants all over the world."

The workshop will allow an exchange of ideas and information among Wellcome employees involved in manufacturing, packaging and engineering. Panel reports, delivery of technical papers and group discussion will comprise the workshop format. Twenty-two staff members from Greenville and Research Triangle Park will also participate.

Detailed tours of the Greenville plant will be conducted for the foreign guests.

"Participants from other countries want to see our facilities first hand," Leslie said. "The major purpose of the workshop is to learn how other plants manufacture pharmaceutical products. Greenville was selected as the meeting site mainly because it is the newest, largest facility of its kind within Wellcome," he added.

Following a summary session Friday morning, participants will go to Research Triangle Park to tour the company's corporate headquarters and research laboratories.

Treated For A Bullet Wound

Bonnie Sue Keen of B-9 Glendale Ct. was treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital Tuesday night for a bullet wound in her right leg.

Chief Glenn Cannon, who said the shooting was accidental, reported that a .22 caliber pistol fell from a closet shelf as Mrs. Keen pulled a blanket from the shelf. The weapon discharged when it struck the floor and the projectile struck Mrs. Keen in her right leg, below her knee.

Inaccuracies In History Booklet

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Descendants of a revolutionary patriot, Hezekiah Alexander of Mecklenburg County, say references to him in an historical booklet are inaccurate.

a booklet prepared by the curator of History at the Mint Museum, Stuart Schwartz, informs museum visitors that Alexander was born in 1728, was of Scottish ancestry, was a blacksmith and was chairman of the committee which drafted the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence.

Descendants say the right references are that Alexander was born in 1722, was of Scotch-Irish ancestry, was a well-to-do landowner, and was a member of the committee which drafted the declaration.

Schwartz admits there are inaccuracies in the booklet, but says it cannot be recalled. "We had two thousand of those brochures printed last July. They are all over the country," he said.

Two Wrecks On Tuesday

An estimated $900 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Line and Chestnut Streets involving vehicles driven by Robert Green Brown of 213 Woodstock Dr. and Corey Stokes of Ayden.

Police, who made no charges, estimated damage at $400 to the Brown car and $250 to the Stokes truck.

Norman Ray Casey of Ayden was charged with following too close after investigation of an 11:44 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive.

Investigators said the Casey truck was involved in a collision with cars driven by Teresa Dianne Cayton of 103 Fairlane Rd. and Lois Anne Pate of 2603 East Tenth St.

Damage was set at $50 to the Cayton car and $200 to the Pate auto. No damage resulted to the Casey truck.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks headed higher today as a late-afternoon advance in the previous session spilled over into early trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up a point shortly after the opening bell and advances led declines by a 3-to-2 margin. Trading was fairly active. Yesterday, the market got some late-day strength from a government report showing housing starts in September at their highest level in 2 1/2 years. Permits for future housing also were sharply higher last month, the report said.

In early trading, the market had fallen on the news that economic growth, measured by real Gross National Product, slowed to an annual 4 per cent rate of gain from 4.5 per cent the previous quarter and 9.2 per cent in the first quarter of 1976.

With no major economic reports scheduled for release today, investors will get a pause to look closely at some of those figures more closely, brokers said. The market is also watching closely for any sign that the Federal Reserve is learning further toward a laxer credit policy to stimulate growth, they said.

Early prices included Dow Chemical, up 1/8 to 41 1/2. Dow reported lower third quarter per share earnings of 90 cents against $1.16 a year earlier.

Pan American World Airways, Inc. was unchanged at 44, and Xerox Corp. was up to 60 1/4.

On Tuesday, the Dow rose 3.41 to 949.97 but declines held a moderate lead over advances and the broad-based NYSE index showed a .03 decline to 54.18.

Turnover in the Big Board remained a sluggish 16.20 million shares. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index inched up .10 to 98.56.

Scene Is Familiar To WWII Photographer

By DOUG STONE
Associated Press Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP)—It was only actor Gregory Peck walking onto a beach from a landing craft. But to the photographer who took a World War II picture of Gen. Douglas MacArthur returning to the Philippines, it seemed like the real thing.

radio to the Filipino people. "Yes, I did some homework on this," said Peck. "I read a dozen books or so, looked at the available film and went to the archives in the Pentagon. I've been absorbed in MacArthur for the past six months. It's fascinating."

"Oh, gosh, yes, it brought back memories," said newspaper photographer Roger Wrenn after taking shots of Peck's re-enactment Tuesday. "It wasn't exactly the same, of course. There was no danger of getting hit by a bullet. And Wrenn wore civilian clothes this time."

However, the beach, the equipment and the men walking ashore "looked about the same," he said. The landing, on a U.S. Navy-owned beach here, was part of filming by Universal of the motion picture "MacArthur." It is being produced by Frank McCarthy, who also made "Patton."

Wrenn, 61, a veteran of 29 years with the San Diego Union, was covering the Pacific war for Yank Magazine when MacArthur landed on the beach at Luzon. Despite the similarity to the Luzon landing, the mock invasion Wrenn photographed Tuesday is intended in the movie to simulate the landing at Leyte Gulf of Oct. 20, 1944. However, Wrenn said, it was a good mirror image of the later Luzon landing, in which MacArthur kept his promise to return.

"He (Peck) held his head the same way MacArthur did, glanced around just like he did," Wrenn said. Today's shooting agenda called for Peck as MacArthur walking up the beach to a Jeep and making his famous "I have returned" speech via shortwave.

Accidents In Winterville

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Police Department reported two traffic accidents Monday and Tuesday. The first accident occurred Monday at 7:45 a.m. when vehicles operated by Jean Langston Worthington of Winterville and William Junior Rodgers of Greenville collided on Main Street approximately 100 feet from Highway 11, according to Winterville Police Chief G.I. Jones.

Worthington received minor injuries and was transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital by the Winterville Rescue Squad. No charges were filed. Damages were estimated at $1,800 to the Worthington vehicle and investigation is being continued. Tuesday at 7:20 p.m. a truck operated by Jessie Ray Patrick of Winterville collided with W.H. Robinson School causing an estimated $1,500 damages to the vehicle and $300 damages to the building, according to Chief Jones. Patrick was transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital by the Winterville Rescue Squad and was admitted.

Dean Finds No Fraternity Role Involved

East Carolina University's Dean of Men, James Mallory said this morning that a student convicted on charges of concealment of merchandise in District Court here Monday was apparently not a member of a fraternity when the incident occurred. Billy Joe Bullard Jr. of Route 1, Whiteville told the court Monday that his actions were part of a fraternity initiation. He later told Judge W. M. Howell that "I did that on my own accord" rather than as part of a fraternity initiation. Bullard named the fraternity as Phi Kappa Tau. Mallory said this morning that his investigation indicates that Bullard's actions were "definitely on his own," and were "an individual caper," rather than anything connected with the fraternity.

Rescheduled To Attend Event

Meetings at the local Kingdom Hall have been rescheduled this week to allow a delegation of Jehovah's Witnesses to attend the fall conference in Fayetteville. Wilbur Ray Nichols, presiding overseer, said about 1,700 were expected at the event which will feature two days of Bible instruction on the theme, "Rendering Sacred Service With Your Power of Reason." An up dated report on the Witnesses' work in Argentina is expected at the conference. The out-of-town conference will end after a series of special talks Sunday.

Showdown: Chargers vs. Jaguars

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
It's showdown time.

For four straight weeks, Eastern Carolina Conference teams have been fighting it out for the conference crown. Only two of those teams have survived the last few weeks without a defeat.

This week, they meet.

Farmville Central's Jaguars, sporting a 4-0 conference record, travel to meet the Chargers of Ayden-Grifton, who own an identical conference record. The winner will, for the first time this year, stand alone at the top of the conference.

In other games this week, third-place C.B. Aycock travels to meet fifth-place D. H. Conley, Greene Central hosts North Pitt and North Lenoir will be at Southern Nash.

Last week saw Farmville knocking off C. B. Aycock, a team previously unbeaten in the conference, 42-20 in a surprisingly easy game. Ayden-Grifton dumped Greene Central 29-12 while Southern Nash handed D. H. Conley its third straight conference loss, 26-6. And, in a battle of winless teams, North Lenoir prevailed over North Pitt, 27-26 in overtime.

"We really have our work cut out for us," Ayden-Grifton Coach Claude Kennedy said of the Farmville game. "They have two of the best running backs in the conference in Ted Dun and Keno Farrow.

"They're pretty solid. They've only been beaten twice and that was back before conference play began."

As for his own team, Kennedy said, "This is going to be a big ballgame for us. It all depends on how our people arise to the occasion. If they (the Chargers) are really dedicated and want to work hard this week, we may be able to play with them (Farmville)."

NP's George Little

Kennedy was a little disappointed with his team's play in last week's win over Greene Central.

"We didn't look as good as the score (29-12) might have indicated. We had way too many penalties." The penalties may have been due to a lack of experience, Kennedy said, "but that's no excuse."

The Chargers moved the ball on offense fairly well, Kennedy said, gaining around 300 yards in total offense. That, against a Greene Central team which "usually plays tough defense," according to Kennedy.

The Ayden-Grifton coach singled out the play of his three running backs, Terry Morris, William West and Markham Wheatley, a center recently moved to fullback.

On defense, Kennedy said Larry Taft, Wheatley and Tim Holland all did good job, along with Rod Nobles, whose interception in the Greene Central game brought his total to eight.

"We did a whole lot towards hurting ourselves in the game," Kennedy said, "we had over 125 yards in penalties, one touchdown called back and had two receivers clear for touchdowns and didn't get them."

The Farmville Central-Ayden-Grifton game is also going to be an important one for the Jaguars, according to Farmville Coach Gene Brewer.

"They've got real good running backs (David) Pratt throws the ball real well and, overall, they're an aggressive ball club." Another thing Brewer is thinking about is "we have to go to their place to play."

defensive squad for last week's effort against C. B. Aycock. "We got real good effort from the whole defensive team," Brewer said, especially Timmy Hall and Calvin Dixon.

"I thought we did a good job of stopping Jackie Dunn (Aycock's number one rusher). He scored three touchdowns, but only one offensive touchdown." The other two came on an interception return and fumble return.

On offense, Brewer said running backs Keno Farrow and

FC's Ted Dunn

Ted Dunn and quarterback Carroll Griffin played well and "the offensive line blocked well."

"Overall, I thought we did a pretty good job."

D.H. Conley Coach Churk Dunn attributed last week's loss to Greene Central to the Vikings getting behind early. "We gave them two easy touchdowns in the first quarter. We got in a hole to begin with and we just never climbed out of it."

"We moved the ball fairly well, but we would get down close and make a mistake."

The game was costly to the Vikings. Quarterback Jeff McDaniel sustained a knee injury and could be out for the season. In addition, Bernard Hawkins has a bruised side and Kenny Phillips has a bruised knee as a result of the game. Both are questionable for this week's match-up with C. B. Aycock.

Dunn said split end Charles Nobles and running back Nuggie Worthington did good jobs for the Vikings on offense. He credited Nobles with four receptions for 100 yards.

Defensively, Dunn couldn't find too much to be happy about, although he said the Vikings held Greene Central pretty well from about the middle of the second quarter.

"C. B. Aycock has a good football team," according to year, however.

Smith was "fairly well satisfied" with the offense in the game. It has been doing well since quarterback John Hunt returned to the lineup and George Little ran for 135 yards in the game, Smith said.

This week's game with Greene Central will pit two similar teams, according to Smith. Both teams use a veer offense and 52 defense.

In films of Greene Central, Smith said quarterback James Best, running back Jay Carroaway and linebacker and running back Jeffery Warren have all looked good.

Smith also said Greene Central is better than their 1-6 record. "They held Farmville to a 0-0 game in the first half," he said, and added that they have played evenly with other teams on their schedule.

In other area games, Jamesville's Bullets lost to Manteo, 21-8. They host Roanoke junior varsity Thursday night.

Roanoke's Redskins won their third straight game, downing North Edgemore 48-0. The Redskins entertain Lee Woodard this week.

Williamston dropped its first game of the year last weekend, losing to Aoshkie, 20-0. They will be trying to get back on track this week at home against Edenton.

Ladies Post Win

The East Carolina University women's tennis team defeated the Seahawks of UNC-W by a match score of 7-2 yesterday on the Pirate courts.

The Lady Pirates took all of six singles matches to assure victory. The UNC-W netters managed to get only as high as three sets in the singles.

The Buccettes are now 6-3 and play a home match this Thursday against Duke University's J.V. squad.

Dunn "and one of the quickest running backs in the conference in Jackie Dunn."

"They are coming off a loss, but I feel like they will be ready for us."

North Pitt Coach Pat Smith termed last week's loss to North Lenoir "disappointing."

"We had some holding penalties and illegal men downfield that hurt us."

The game was Smith's first overtime experience and the Panthers would have at least forced a second overtime had it not been for an illegal procedure penalty. After scoring a touchdown in overtime, North Pitt made the conversion, but the penalty forced them to try again and they missed. North Lenoir came back and made a touchdown and conversion for a 27-26 win.

Defensively, Smith said the Melvin Vines and Larry Spencer played a good game. He said the defense is giving up more yardage now than at the first of the Recreation Football

The Steelers ran past the Dolphins yesterday in Greenville Recreation Department football play.

The Dolphins scored first on Randy Moore's 70-yard run in the first quarter, but the Steelers came back in the first with Anthony Phillips' 80-yard TD reception.

Phillips scored again in the second quarter and Ramon Bynum added the PAT.

In the second half, George Blount caught a 55-yard scoring pass and Ramon Bynum ran one in from 8 yards out. Randy Warren added the PAT to the Bynum TD.

Tim Norris also helped the Dolphin cause with an interception in the game.

George Little Trying To Keep Spirit Despite Team Record

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

It's got to be tough for a football player to keep his head up and play hard-nosed ball when his team is struggling with an 0-7 record, but that's exactly what North Pitt's George Little is trying to do.

Little, who plays both linebacker and running back for the Panthers, has rushed for over 300 yards and gotten nearly 60 tackles this year.

"He hasn't let our record affect his play like some of the guys have," according to North Pitt Coach Pat Smith. Little is a co-captain and team leader for the Panthers, Smith said.

Little suffered an ankle injury earlier in the year which has hampered his play somewhat, but in last Friday's game he

Cary Man Leads CPGA

LINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Roger Watson of Cary, seeking his third title in a row, carried a one stroke lead into today's second round of the Carolinas PGA Section golf championship after an opening two under par 70.

Watson, playing the 6,888-yard par 72 Linville Golf Club course, had nines of 33-37, carding three birdies going out and one birdy and two bogeys on the second nine.

Jim Bunting of Pageland, S. C., who toured the Grandfather Golf and Country Club's 6,809-yard par 72 layout with four birdies and three bogeys, was one stroke back at 71.

Sonny Ridenhour and Al Smith, both of Kernersville, were tied for third place with 72s, followed by three players at 73. The 73 shooters were Jack Lewis and Gordon Cox, both of Winston-Salem, and Mike O'Brian of Clemmons.

The field of about 130 players switched courses for today's round of the 54-hole tournament. The field will be cut to 70 and ties for Thursday's final round over the Grandfather course.

Six players were tied at 74. They were Terry Wilcox of Greensboro, former winner of this tournament, and Craig Dear, Sapphire Valley; Scott Harrill, Brevard; Bob Spence, Hilton Head Island, S. C.; Gene Thompson, Matthews; and J. B. White, Winston-Salem.

showed what he can do when he is well, Smith said. In that game, a 27-26 overtime loss to North Lenoir, Little rushed for 135 yards on 19 carries and scored two touchdowns.

"I like defense better than offense," the soft-spoken Little said, "but, if the coach needs me on offense, I'll play. Sometimes I go both ways."

Little said the North Pitt team is "better than our record. But we've lost so much we don't know what winning is. If a game gets tough, we just give up."

Little said there are a lot of "big guys" at North Pitt who don't come out for football "because we lose all the time."

He said, however, that his year's team is an improvement over last year's. "Last year we were getting beat worse than this year. There'll probably be a lot of guys coming out (for football) next year."

Little also said the team "could probably win our last three games."

Little did not start playing football until his junior year because he didn't have transportation home after practice. Even, now he said, he must sometimes hitch-hike home.

In his spare time, Little likes to listen to music, play basketball "or just run a lot." He plans to attend college at either East Carolina University or North Carolina A&T. "I hope to play football, if I can make the team," Little said.

Little is an important man to his team and he likes the role. His favorite part of playing offense is "running over people and getting yards that we need."

Officials' Clinic

The North Carolina Athletic Officials Association will hold its annual basketball clinic for officials in Greenville next Tuesday.

A total of four clinics will be held in the eastern part of the state. The clinics are for officials to update their techniques and rules.

The Greenville clinic will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum on the East Carolina campus.

Other clinics in the eastern section of the state include Monday at King Auditorium at UNC-Wilmington; Wednesday, at Marks Hall, Chowan College, Murfreesboro; and Thursday, at the Music Building, Atlantic Christian College, Wilson.

Reds Extend Series Lead

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The designated hitter is still a joke to baseball."

So spoke Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson.

He, Dan Driessen and the rest of the Reds are laughing all the way toward their second straight World Series championship.

Anderson hates the DH, an American League innovation in which a batter hits for the pitcher each time the pitcher's turn comes up.

It had never been employed in a World Series until this year, when it was foisted upon this October classic by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Driessen, the first and thus far only other DH in the National League, ramed a home run and two other hits Tuesday night in firing the Reds to a 6-2 victory over the New York Yankees. Cincinnati now has a seemingly unbeatable 3-0 lead in this best-of-seven series.

The Reds can wrap it up tonight — unless Yankee right-hander Ed Figueroa or the weather can slow down the careening Big Red Machine. Gary Nolan, also a right-hander, will start for the Reds, bidding to become the first NL team since the 1921-22 New York Giants to win the World Series in successive years.

Rain has been forecast for tonight's fourth game. Billy Martin, the Yanks' feisty manager looking for a way to break the Reds' momentum, was asked if a delay might help achieve that end.

"Nah," he replied. "A postponement wouldn't do a thing for us now. It would've helped us before the Series began."

This series would seem to be virtually over. As Thurman Munson, the Yanks' catcher, muttered: "If we've been trying to make them overconfident, we've reached our limit."

When someone pointed out that no team in the previous 72 World Series had come back from a 3-0 deficit, Martin said: "Listen, we're no quitters. I'm not a quitter and my guys aren't quitters. We've come back before and we plan to come back again. We'll be out there fighting all the way. They'll still have to beat us ... But I must admit we're not in a very good position."

Beating the Yanks is all the Reds have been doing so far. They did all they had to do Tuesday night with a three-run burst in the second inning against Dock Ellis. And it was Driessen who started it all with an infield single off Ellis' glove.

He stole second and came home when George Foster pumped a one-bounce ground-rule double over the right-center field fence.

Johnny Bench followed with another infield single, this one off Chris Chambliss' glove at first. Cesar Geronimo's force-out grounder scored Foster to make it 2-0. Then Geronimo swiped second and came in on Dave Concepcion's single to designated hitter is still a joke left.

"Bloop hits, that's all we've been seeing," Martin moaned, picking up on his alibi of the first two games. "Bloopers, bloopers and more bloopers."

The next time Driessen batted he didn't exactly bloop the ball. He drove it hard and long, about 400 feet into the right-center field stands for a 4-0 Cincinnati lead.

Did those two diverse hits by Driessen, and the wasted two-out double he stroked in the sixth inning, change Anderson's view of the DH?

"I'm more convinced now than ever that the DH has no place in baseball," he said. "It's not right to send up a big bomber for the pitcher. It's a joke to baseball. The pitcher is a part of this game."

Then would he consider sending a pitcher to bat in view of the Reds' commanding lead? "No, we'll stay with the DH," he replied. "If that's the ground rule they want to lay down, we'll use it."

Under previous ground rules, Driessen might never have swung a bat in this World Series. Was he, then, pleased about being a DH? "In a situation like tonight, I like it," he acknowledged, "but I'd rather play."

The Yanks finally nicked winning rookie Pat Zachry for a run in the bottom of the fourth on Chambliss' single, a walk to Graig Nettles and Oscar Gamble's single to center. They sent Zachry to the showers in the seventh when Jim Mason, who had hit only one homer all season, hit another one — a line drive to right that cut the Reds' edge to 4-2.

What, Zachry was asked, had he thrown to the light-hitting Mason? "A home-run ball," he grinned. "It was a fat fastball right over the plate. The first pitch was a ball and I thought he'd be taking. He took it, all right — right out of the yard."

With Zachry out, Will McEneaney was in. He slammed the door on the Yanks with 2 1-3 innings of two-hit relief, a far cry from his generally poor showings this year. "I don't know how long it's been since I was as effective as this," he said. "I don't think I can remember that far back."

Grant Jackson, who had replaced Ellis in the fourth to shut down a Cincinnati threat, was sent packing by the Reds in the eighth when they tacked on their final two runs.

It was all over but the shouting — and it appears there will be none for the Yankee fans this year. There was little of it Tuesday night. Instead of the thousands who rampaged on the field last Thursday night when the AL pennant was theirs, there was one lone youngster who ran onto the field in the ninth inning, shaking hands with a few of his Yankee heroes.

He was booed.

NOSE FIRST — Cincinnati Reds' Pete Rose slides into third during the eighth inning in New York Tuesday night against the Yankees. He made it home on a hit by Griffey to score the Reds' 5th run in their 6-2 defeat of the Yankees in the third game of the World Series. At right is Yankee Graig Nettles. (AP Wirephoto)

Pirates Pleased At Ranking; More Pressure On Club To Win

There was little doubt that East Carolina University officials were highly pleased over the ranking of their football team by the Associated Press this week.

The AP poll listed the Pirates as tied for the number 20 spot in the country. It marked the first time that any East Carolina football team has been ranked in the major college poll.

Former East Carolina teams had been listed in the small college poll some years back, the last time being during the coaching career of the late Clarence Stasavich.

East Carolina received votes during the coaching tenure of Sonny Randle, when the Pirates went 9-2 twice, but they did not break into the poll itself. This year, the Associated Press listed East Carolina in its "other votes received" group in pre-season.

However, the AP no longer lists this category in its weekly poll. "I think it's great," Coach Pat Dye said yesterday. "But it is really insignificant now. It will mean more, a lot more, if we're still on the poll in December (when the season is over)."

"I don't know how it will affect our players, but I'm sure that it's going to motivate our opponents the rest of the season," Dye added.

"I think it's tremendous," Athletic Director Bill Cain said. "It's a great accomplishment for East Carolina, especially for Coach Dye, his team and his staff. It's a first for East Carolina and only time will tell the tremendous benefits we'll derive from being in the top 20. I'm just elated."

Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor of the university and long a supporter of the Pirates, said he was very pleased about it. "The team deserves it. I'm just surprised that it took this long. They should have been ranked a couple of weeks ago at least. I'm very happy and I hope that after Saturday, the team will climb a couple of notches."

Jenkins was referring to Saturday's meeting of the Pirates with the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Kickoff in that contest is set for 1:30 p.m. and a sellout has been announced for several weeks.

East Carolina will be going for its fourth straight victory over an Atlantic Coast Conference team, and its second straight over the Tar Heels.

Red Machine Impresses DiMaggio

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — Even the great Joe DiMaggio was impressed.

"A hell of a team," the Yankee Clipper remarked after watching the Cincinnati Reds pummel the New York Yankees 6-2 to grab a 3-0 game lead in the World Series.

"They do everything," he added. "They hit the ball. From the top of the order to the bottom, they can hurt you. They run. They are tough in the field."

"Maybe they could use a little better pitching, but who are we to say? So far, it's been sufficient."

The handsome, graying Hall of Famer, whose name became synonymous with center field in Yankee Stadium, had the honor of throwing out the ball Tuesday before he settled back to watch the Big Red Machine grind up the proud men in pinstripes and spit them on the natural turf of the $100 million revamped ball park. All around him he heard the Reds acclaim him as one of the greatest of all-time.

Ralph Kiner, the former Pittsburgh home run slugger and a National Leaguer, had been quoted as saying the present Cincinnati baseball juggernaut is superior to any of the great Yankee teams he had seen in his day, including those for whom DiMag played.

Joltin' Joe was not so quick to agree. But he didn't bad-mouth the Reds, either. It isn't his style.

"You can't compare ears," he said. "Connie Mack once said baseball changes every 15 years. I agree. This is not the same game I played."

"The gloves are bigger. The equipment is better. But the biggest difference is in the artificial turf. In my day, the emphasis was on the big inning. We went for the long ball. Now speed is the thing."

"The reason is Astro-Turf. That's what you saw at the Reds' park, Riverfront Stadium. I think there are six teams in the National League playing on the stuff."

"You saw what happened at Cincinnati. When a ball was hit, it flew like a rifle shot. Balls

Jenkins Speaks To Sports Club

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

You've come a long way, baby! Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor of East Carolina University pointed this fact about his school out to the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

Dr. Jenkins also issued a plea for a more realistic educational system for athletes.

Jenkins, a long time supporter of a strong athletic program at the institution, said that East Carolina is following in the tradition of winning football.

"I'm confident that we'll continue this tradition by defeating Chapel Hill Saturday," he said.

"I'm getting near the end of the line at East Carolina," he said, "and I've seen years of development here during the past 30 years." Jenkins pointed out that when he first came to East Carolina, football was played at Guy Smith Stadium with about 1,000 attending.

Basketball was played in Wright Auditorium. Then, new facilities were built — the old stadium on campus (for $10,000) and Memorial Gym, which North Carolina dedicated, when the Pirates almost upset them, losing in overtime.

"At that time, our biggest rival in football was Lenoir Rhyne. We solved that by stealing their coach," Jenkins joked. "In the early 60s, some people felt we should have a larger stadium, and they started a drive to raise $100,000. A lot of people said we were crazy, that we couldn't do it. But we raised $180,000 in eight days and built Ficklen Stadium."

Jenkins followed the history through this year's withdrawal from the Southern Conference and the continued rise of football. "I'd say we're doing pretty good. We're the only school in the state in the Top Twenty." He said that further efforts to start a new conference would be made during the NCAA meeting in January.

As to the new stadium expansion drive, Jenkins said this was moving well. "The group has already raised over $400,000 and we haven't really started the formal drive."

Jenkins also took a swipe at those who tried to hold the program back, however well-meaning. "We've got some dark clouds here who don't think we can accomplish our goals. When we were trying to schedule State, they told us we'd never be able to draw against them. Well, we've got four of the largest ten crowds in Raleigh right now. And that's proved that people will pay for two things: love and hate."

Jenkins admitted that he was guilty of emphasizing athletics. "And I'll continue to do so. Others do it, and I offer no apology. If anything on our campus is worthy, it should be emphasized. Don't stop with athletics, but go on to art, music, the medical school, whatever."

The chancellor said that the athlete is a person and is entitled to a first rate education. "It's up to us to see that he gets it and that he has a future."

Jenkins proposed scheduling breaks. "The athlete should take a one-third or one-half load during his season, then make it up by doing reading programs, going to summer school and the like — under scholarship. It's not fair to expect a basketball player to make a week-long trip to New England to play in a tournament and another game or two, then come back and immediately be in competition with a student here all along. The same should also apply in other areas: to the drama student when he's in production; to the musician when he's on concert tour, and so forth."

"It's up to the university to see that some sort of program like this is put into effect," he said.

Next week's program will feature Dr. James Bowman and East Carolina trainer Rod Compton, who will present a program on the care and treatment of athletic injuries.

Chargerettes Take Tourny

FARMVILLE — Ayden-Grifton took a 2-1 win over Farmville Central. Ayden-Grifton won the first game, 15-8, with Amy Kilpatrick leading the way with five serves in a row.

Farmville came back to take the second game, however, 18-16, as neither team could get much, although Bobbie Pittman served up four Lady Jaguar points at one time.

In the third game, Ayden-Grifton took a 15-8 win with Kilpatrick serving up six in a row.

Then, in the second match, Conley upset Roanoke, 2-1. Roanoke won the first game, 15-9, but Conley upset Roanoke, 2-1. Roanoke won the first game, 15-9, but Conley came back to take a 15-10 decision in the second contest. The Valkyries captured the match game, 15-12, to move into the finals. No one served up any strings during all three matches.

hit to the outfield that would have been held to singles on regular turf went for triples."

DiMaggio's favorites on the Cincinnati team are Joe Morgan, the second baseman, and scrappy Pete Rose at third.

"Morgan's statistics are really impressive," he said of the National League's Most Valuable Player last year. He hits the ball well enough to be an outfielder. He is a great fielder. He does everything well."

DiMaggio had to stop to catch his breath when he began talking about Rose.

"A real hustling ball player, never gives an inch," he said. "A battler, fights for every edge. He's a hard out."

Missouri Picked; Bucs Over UNC

By HERSCHEL NISSENON
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Will the real Missouri Tigers please stand up?

Will the team that takes the field Saturday against third-ranked Nebraska be the fighting Tigers who defeated Southern Cal and Ohio State or the pussycats who lost to Illinois and Iowa State?

You'll have a chance to see for yourself since the key Big Eight contest will be televised nationally by ABC-TV.

Besides being a matchup of two ranked teams — Missouri is No. 17 this week — it also features a head-to-head meeting of two of the nation's top passers, Nebraska's Vince Ferragamo and Steve Pisarkiewicz of Missouri. But for those who like to watch football where games are really won and lost — in the pits — keep an eye on the opposing tackles when Missouri has the ball.

Morris Towns, 260, and James Taylor, 255, will be blocking against Mike Fultz, 275, and Ron Pruitt, 247. All are highly coveted by the pros.

Nebraska thinks Fultz and Pruitt are the best defensive tandem around. Missouri feels the same way about Towns and Taylor on offense.

There should be some head-knocking going on. The in-and-out, up-and-down, unpredictable Tigers have made a believer out of this corner. Upset Special of the Week ... Missouri 20-17.

Last week's score was 47 right, 20 wrong and two ties for a .701 percentage. For the season, it's 285-116-10—711.

Notre Dame at South Carolina: The Irish haven't allowed a touchdown in four games and the Gamecocks, who cracked the Top Twenty this week for the first time, haven't been scoring much against good defenses ... Notre Dame 28-7.

Arkansas at Houston: Houston has this nasty habit of knocking off Southwest Conference foes and the Cougars are thinking Cotton, as in Bowl ... Houston 27-17.

Michigan at Indiana: The Hoosiers have won three of their last four, the only setback a three-pointer to North Carolina State. They're getting there, but Michigan is already there ... Michigan 35-14.

Pitt at Navy: Touchdown Tony Dorsett needs 152 yards to pass Archie Griffin and become college football's all-time leading rusher. Navy blanked the Panthers 17-0 last year but Dorsett gained 122 yards and had a 75-yard touchdown run called back ... Pitt 31-10.

UCLA at California: UCLA's 28-14 victory a year sent the Bruins to the Rose Bowl instead of the Golden Bears. Cal's thirsting for revenge, but quarterback Joe Roth and wideout Wesley Walker are ailing ... UCLA 30-20.

Oklahoma State at Oklahoma: It's homecoming at Norman and Coach Barry Switzer hopes some defensive backs show up. He's lost three of his four-man super secondary for the season. The Cowboys have been pointing at this one for some time. Second Upset Special ... Oklahoma State 24-21.

Maryland at Duke: The Terrapins have been struggling of late and Duke will be tough at home but ... Maryland 28-12.

Oregon State at Southern California: Ricky Bell is well-rested after a week's vacation following that 51-carry, 347-yard outburst against Washington State ... Southern Cal 38-7.

Arizona at Texas Tech: Arizona has a habit of making trouble for the Red Raiders, who may be looking ahead to Texas ... Tech 33-21.

Purdue at Ohio State: "Will our players take them lightly? No, I'm sure they won't if I have anything to do about it," promises Woody Hayes ... Ohio State 28-7.

Georgia at Kentucky: Fran Curci calls Kentucky's 4-2 record "a miracle." How about 4-3, Fran ... Georgia 24-14.

Florida at Tennessee: Tennessee leads the series 13-2 but the Gators smell — can a Gator smell? — the SEC championship ... Florida 29-22.

Iowa State at Colorado: The Cyclones cracked the Top Twenty this week for the first time in a while. They have outstanding people at the skill positions, but Colorado has more bone-breakers ... Colorado 21-14.

East Carolina at North Carolina: Tar Heels are out to avenge last year's 38-17 trouncing but ECU is for real ... East Carolina 24-17.

Iowa at Minnesota: Next week it's Minnesota-Michigan for the Little Brown Jug. This week it's the Third Upset Special ... Iowa 20, Minnesota 14.

Many New Faces In Pro Basketball This Year

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — If you're one of those fans who can't tell the players without a scorecard, watch out for the upcoming pro basketball season.

Due to the demise of the American Basketball Association, more new faces than ever before will be breaking into the National Basketball Association this winter. Among the newcomers are the cream of the ABA as well as the top collegians, including many of the heroes of the U.S. squad which captured the gold medal at the Montreal Olympics.

Under terms of the merger agreement, four teams were absorbed intact from the ABA, bringing the NBA roll to 22 clubs. Players from ABA teams which fell by the wayside went through a dispersal draft and were distributed among the 22 survivors.

And they'll be playing for an unusually large number of new coaches. Eight teams made coaching changes during the off-season, and a ninth, Detroit, will be starting its first full season under Herb Brown.

The new coaches are Hubie Brown, Atlanta; Tates Locke, Buffalo; Ed Badger, Chicago; Tom Nissalke, Houston; Jerry West, Los Angeles; Jack Ramsay, Portland; Doug Moe, San Antonio, and Dick Motta, Washington.

The Denver Nuggets, Indiana Pacers, New York Nets and San Antonio Spurs are the four teams absorbed from the ABA into the NBA.

Former ABA players absorbed by the dispersal draft or as free agents include Artis Gilmore, the top pick in the dispersal draft who has become the Chicago Bulls' starting center; center-forward Maurice Lucas, expected to strengthen Portland's front line; forward Marvin Barnes, who will give Detroit added scoring and rebounding; center Caldwell Jones, one of the better ABA pivotmen who should help the Philadelphia 76ers, and forward-center Moses Malone, picked by Portland in the dispersal draft but traded Tuesday to Buffalo.

Other ex-ABAers to find new homes include guards Mack Calvin and Don Chaney, at Los Angeles; center Mike Green, at Seattle; forward Willie Wise, at Denver, and guard Ticky Burden, with the New York Knicks.

All 17 players chosen on the first round of the college draft — the New York Knicks forfeited their pick in the abortive attempt to sign George McGinnis a year ago and the four ABA teams did not take part in the lottery — have been signed by their NBA teams, so there should be plenty of rookie talent around the league as well.

Among them are Olympians Mitch Kupchak, heir apparent to Wes Unseld at center for Washington; Adrian Dantley, the bullish Notre Dame forward expected to start for Buffalo; Scott May, the smooth cornerman from NCAA champion Indiana who will miss the early part of the season with Chicago due to mononucleosis, and Quinn Buckner, the Indiana playmaker who may be the quarterback the Milwaukee Bucks have lacked since Oscar Robertson retired.

The Midwest Division, weakest in the NBA last year, is the one most strengthened by the influx of new talent.

Denver, the class team of the ABA led by David Thompson and Bobby Jones, and Indiana, which features a brilliant forward in Billy Knight, were added to the division in their entirety.

Chicago, worst in the league with a 24-58 record last year, is looking for a quick turnaround thanks to the addition of Gilmore and May and the coaching change with Badger replacing Motta, who had a running feud with some of his players.

The 7-foot-2 Gilmore averaged 22.2 points and 17.1 rebounds per game in five ABA seasons and also is a first-rate shot-blocker, the kind of dominating center the Bulls have lacked for years. May will eventually join potent scorers Bob Love and Mickey Johnson at forward, while a rejuvenated Norm Van Lier heads a backcourt crew bolstered by high-scoring Willie Smith of Missouri.

Detroit, for years lacking in forwards, saw Curtis Rowe blossom into an all-star last year and has added the mercenary Barnes and capable M.L. Carr from the ABA.

Announcing Wachovia Teller II (The banking machine for people who don't like machines)

No other banking machine offers you a broader range of banking services than Wachovia Teller II. Yet no other banking machine is as easy to use.

The reason? A special viewing screen actually shows you what to do every step of the way. It shows you how to deposit or withdraw money from your savings and checking accounts. It shows you how to transfer money from one account to another, make loan payments, check account balances, or simply get some cash, in any amount from $1 to $100.

Wachovia Teller II is open for business 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Which means that now you can bank any time that suits your convenience. And there's absolutely no charge for the service. All it takes is a Wachovia checking account and a Wachovia Banking Card. If you're presently banking at Wachovia you've probably already received your card in the mail. Why not use it this week?

Municipalities To Ask For Levying New Taxes

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Delegates to the North Carolina League of Municipalities convention, with little debate or dissent, agreed Tuesday to ask the 1977 General Assembly for authority to levy both a hotel-motel tax and a local payroll tax.

If the legislature grants such authority, it will be up to the individual cities and towns to decide on imposition of the taxes.

Both taxes have long been advocated by the league, and they received new endorsement

Monday in a speech to the convention by Luther Hodges Jr. of Charlotte, chairman of the board of North Carolina National Bank.

Hodges, whose father was governor of North Carolina from 1954 to 1961, said cities need the new taxes to fight the problems of increasing costs, shrinking tax bases and the prospect of having to raise property taxes to meet municipal obligations.

The proposal passed on a voice vote in the final business session of the three-day convention. Earlier in the day, Gov. Jim

$14 Million

RALEIGH (AP) — The Federal Farmers Home Administration has authorized almost $14 million dollars in emergency loans this year to 895 North Carolina farmers because of weather-related crop damage.

Emergency loans are made to restore farming operations to pre-disaster conditions, and to pay operating expenses.

Holshouser addressed the convention. He said it is estimated that the state needs to issue another $225 million in clean water bonds.

Holshouser said there are 40 communities in the state where sewage treatment facilities can take no more waste.

"In other words, it's going to be very difficult, if not impossible, for these communities to grow economically, to bring in new industries that will provide more jobs for their people," said the governor.

He said that in addition to the 40 communities, "there are another 125 that are operating their treatment facilities to capacity."

Although there was little debate, there was some disagreement among delegates on the proposed local income tax.

David Bosley, mayor of Grifton, near Kinston in the eastern part of the state, cautioned that a payroll tax might meet with strong opposition from citizens. He said new businesses and industries might avoid locating in cities with such a tax.

Officials of larger cities, such of Winston-Salem Mayor Franklin Shirley, favored the tax.

Charlotte's mayor pro-tem, Jim Whittington, said he favored the local income tax, but only if local residents were given a property tax reduction equal to the local income tax.

INJURED IN CRASH

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Phillip Cousteau, son of French oceanographer Jacques Cousteau, broke a knee when his helicopter fell 90 feet and crashed on Eastern Island.

Postpone Trial Of Private Eye

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — The trial of a private detective accused of impersonating a State Bureau of Investigation agent has been postponed until Nov. 8 in state district court.

The lawyer for Lester Gene Burns of Charlotte asked for the delay because he said information that would be revealed at the trial would involve Sandy and Lonnie Sawyer, who are serving prison terms for kidnaping.

Seventh Graders Unable To Read

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Principal Irving Edelman says about 150 seventh graders at Wilson Junior High School in Charlotte can't read, or are reading at a first or second-grade level.

That's about half the incoming class at the school, which receives its pupils from three elementary schools — Berryhill, Tuckaseegee and University Park. Edelman says he doesn't understand how the pupils were passed through six years of elementary school.

FLAG BEARER

TIVERTON, R.I. (UPI) — Capt. Robert Gray, in 1789 and 1790, became the first person to carry the American flag around the world.

Georgia Native Is True To His Indian Heritage

ATLANTA, Ga. (UPI) — Airman Huey P. Long keeps under his bed a smooth, flattened stone fashioned by Cherokee hands in north Georgia over 200 years ago. Corn was ground to meal on its porous surface and its grooved edge served as a knife and scraping tool.

But to the reserve recreational specialist at Dobbins Air Force Base, 10 miles north of here, that old stone is more than an artifact or good luck piece. It is the embodiment of his Cherokee heritage.

Long is attached to the 94th Combat Support Group at the base. The recreation programs he plans and administers and the base gymnasium he runs as a civilian serve about 2,000 full-time personnel and over 8,000 reservists from the base's Air Force Reserve, Air National Guard, Army Guard, Naval Air Reserve and Marine Air Reserve units.

The stone under his bed is his totem — the essence of his Cherokee heritage.

"I'm an American, a Baptist, an Air Force reservist and a Cherokee," the Georgia native said. "My Cherokee heritage is embodied in that totem stone. It goes with me wherever I go, and wherever that stone is, that's home to me."

Long's life has revolved around aviation. He began flying as a Civil Air Patrol cadet in high school and obtained his pilot's license while working at Lockheed Aircraft Company. He pulled a six-year tour with a Georgia Air National Guard fighter wing and then spent four years at the University of Georgia earning a Bachelor's Degree in Business Administration. It was in school that he began to seriously study the history and heritage of the Cherokee Nation.

"I'm particularly impressed with the philosophy reflected in the Cherokee life style," Long commented. "Their basic belief focuses on the oneness and unity of man and nature. The Cherokee lives as a natural part of his environment and strives to complement it, not subdue or dominate it. It's an Indian philosophy that is playing an increasing role in everyone's life now that we realize that natural resources are limited and the imbalance between man's technology and nature seriously close to disaster.

"The Cherokee accepted men and women of all cultural and ethnic backgrounds into their tribes. You didn't have to be a full-blooded Indian to be a Cherokee. You did have to contribute to the tribe's overall betterment and bring honor to the nation.

"This Air Force Reserve unit is a lot like belonging to a Cherokee tribal clan," he said. When he's not working at the base, Long can be found in the mountains of north Georgia and South Carolina walking trails and fishing streams that his Cherokee ancestors walked and fished for hundreds of years. He feels at home there, too.

New Series Of Original Surprising Drop In Drama Planned For TV College Enrollment

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — This Thursday, a new weekly series of original drama for TV kicks off on public television. It is called "Visions," is produced by KCET here and is intended to:

—Offer far more mental sustenance than, say, "Hawaii Five-O."

—Encourage new dramatic works for TV and give new American playwrights a chance to work in the medium without the pressure of commercial television's constant quest for ratings.

It'll have 13 original dramas and four repeats this season. The premiere show, "Two Brothers," is a study of a mentally ill doctor (David Spielberg) and the inability of his brother (Judd Hirsch of the "Delvecchio" series) to help him.

The prime mover and artistic director of "Visions" is Barbara Schultz, a former executive producer of "CBS Playhouse" when there was one, and former East Coast program development director for CBS.

She says "Visions" goes back to 1972, when Fred Friendly, TV guru at the Ford Foundation, a major funder of public TV, and officials at the National Endowment for the Arts, got to worrying about the paucity of American dramatic works on the American public tube.

"It seemed to them everything in drama was coming from England," she said. "And of course, this was true. ..."

The upshot of the worrying was the selection of KCET as producer of a home-grown dramatic series originally calling for 36 dramas to be made over a three-year period under a $10.2-million budget.

Of that sum, $3.2 million was to come from benefactors other than the Ford Foundation and the National Endowment, whom Miss Schultz says kicked in a total of $5 million, or the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which provided $2 million.

It was a bad year for finding benefactors and thus, she says, "Visions" had to cut back to a two-season, 24-show schedule with the $7 million provided by Ford, the Endowment and CPB.

Still, she says, she stayed with her original vision of making "Visions" a weekly show, not only to build an audience but to sustain the new writers scribbling new works for the series. The pressure to hit it big in a dramatic special is just too great for a rookie television dramatist, she adds. Only three of 13 first-season "Visions" authors have any kind of television experience.

"On a weekly basis, it's possible to fail and you can't really succeed unless you fail," she says. "To have new people participate in the medium, there has to be that allowance that they can fail."

She said she doesn't know if sufficient funds for a third "Visions" season will become available after the critical notices and public reaction to its first season come in.

CINCINNATI (AP) — College enrollments may have declined nationwide about 1 per cent this fall to an estimated 11,266,000, according to an expert who said his preliminary findings are a "surprise and a shock."

Dr. Garland Parker, executive director for Enrollment Policy and Educational Research at the University of Cincinnati, said the declines had not been expected before 1980.

Parker said predictions had called for an increase of 4.5 per cent this year following last year's increase of 9 per cent.

Parker, who will publish final tabulations in two American College Testing Program (ACT) Special Reports next spring, said his findings were based on enrollment reports received from 688 representative colleges and universities enrolling some 1.5 million students. More than 3,000 institutions will be covered in the final report.

He did not name the institutions surveyed but said they include public, private, two-year and four-year, religious and seminary institutions.

Parker said that if the early findings are borne out in the final report it will be the first such decline since 1951.

Among reasons for the apparent decline, Parker cited the following: Many students have taken jobs that opened up in the last 12 months; increased student enrollment fees; enrollment quotas installed by some states and private schools have been reached; the movement to attract minority students, women and continuing education students may have reached the saturation point.

Furniture Mart Interest Lagging

HICKORY, N.C. — Norman A. Punch, manager of the Hickory Home Furnishings Mart, says buyer interest and sales are slow at the October Southern Furniture Market. "Regardless of what they say, we're still in a recession," he said.

dealers bought heavily in the winter "in anticipation of good business, but the business didn't develop."

As a result, he said, inventories are still high and buyers are not rushing to place new orders.

Some large furniture chains have sent fewer buyers to the market than usual, Deale said. One chain sent only one person, assigned to make notes on market trends evident in the manufacturers' displays.

The market continues through Friday. Paul Blatt, sales manager of Medallion Ltd. of Grand Rapids, Mich., a sales representative agency, said, "It's the sparsest show for people I've seen" in the seven years he has been coming to the High Point shows.

The bidding:
West North East South
5 ♠ Dbie. Pass 5 ♦
Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: King of ♠.

Cooperation on defense is usually vital. But beware that you don't give declarer information he can use when it won't be of any help to your partner. This extreme case cropped up in a European Championship, and it is not without its humorous side.

There is no way to determine the correct bidding of freak hands. The sequence shown is the one that actually occurred at one table in a match between two strong teams.

West led the king of clubs and continued with the ace. In an effort to show where his strength was, East signaled with the ten of spades. This surely was futile, for it was most unlikely that West would ever regain the lead and his holding in spades was not likely to affect the final outcome. In addition, this play proved expensive in a strange way.

Declarer ruffed the second club, cashed the king of diamonds and led a spade to the jack, king and ace. East returned a trump, won by dummy's ace. The eight of spades was led, and East was forced to cover with the nine. Declarer ruffed, reentered dummy with the seven of trumps and led the six of spades. Again East was forced to cover with the seven and declarer ruffed.

A heart to the king put declarer back in dummy. The 4-3 of spades now presented the opportunity for a ruffing finesse in the suit, for East's remaining spades were the Q-2. East covered the four with the queen, declarer ruffed and reentered dummy with his remaining high heart. On the established three of spades, declarer discarded his last heart and the contract rolled home.

When you looked at this hand originally, did you envision that dummy's 4-3 of spades would be the key cards? And did you, too, fall into the same lapse as East did by signaling with a high spade, which was the only way to let declarer make his contract?

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, OCT. 21, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you would be wise to adopt a most cooperative attitude with those you come in contact with and gain their goodwill. You benefit by assistance they can give you in return.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Show how much you value associates and cement better relations today with them. Civic work can bring fine benefits now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make sure you handle an added assignment in a most meticulous way. Reconcile any disagreements you may have with others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan time for amusements that you truly enjoy. Doing something particularly thoughtful for your mate is wise.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study an important new venture carefully before taking action. Add new touches to you home for added comfort.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be more cooperative with associates and get excellent results thereby. Be careful of the opposite sex today. Relax at home tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use good sense in the handling of monetary affairs and you save the situation today. Avoid one who is not thinking straight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make fine inroads where your career is concerned early in the day. Later get together with congenials and have a delightful time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Investigating what has been puzzling to you in the past can bring good results now. Avoid one who is annoying to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Know what you want where a personal goal is concerned and then find right ways to gain your aims. Be logical.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Listening to what those in power have to suggest and following their advice can lead to good things for you at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get advice you need from those whose experience has been different from yours. Use extreme care in motion.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your intuitive faculties are working fine today and can help you achieve your aims. Show more devotion to loved one.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be a favorite with others and should have education directed along lines of professions that require precision. A fine marriage partner in this chart, since the happiness of mate is ever uppermost in this nature.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Teach Standard English Where 'Gullah' Used

By FRED MCNEESE
COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Blacks who have lived in South Carolina's coastal area speak the purest "Black English" in America.

It is so pure that many have trouble understanding the English most Americans speak. Because this tends to make it difficult to get jobs or move up to better ones, U.S. Labor Department is paying for a pilot program to also teach them what is termed "standard English."

Gullah is a language dating back to the days of slavery in America. It combines English with elements of various African languages.

"A majority of black people still carry with them some characteristics of the language and the historical language pronunciation," said John Gadson Sr., director of the Sea Island Language Project at Beaufort, S.C. He said this applies no matter where they now live.

While most American blacks only have a trace of Gullah in their speech, Gadson said its influence is so strong among blacks in the coastal area near the Georgia-South Carolina line 75 per cent of them have difficulty writing and speaking standard English.

Survival of the language in a relatively pure form there is the result of the isolation of some of the sea islands. Gadson noted, for example, that there are still no bridges to Daufuskie Island, which has a sizeable black population.

One of the more noticeable traits of Gullah, in addition to different words, Gadson said, is a shortening of English words that eliminates plurals and past tenses.

Gullah is also noted for its deletion of reference to the sex of the subject being discussed. "Um" is substituted for such pronouns as his and her.

Example: "Um go outside" instead of "He goes outside."
"There are certain pronoun-ciations that are not easy for blacks," Gadson said. "For example, 'that' is a difficult word and blacks have trouble with some of the 'R' sounds and the trouble has its origins in Gullah."

Even in Charleston, some blacks speak a dialect close to Gullah. Jargon familiar to blacks in other cities has not found its way into their speech. The Labor Department has provided a $162,000 grant for the program in which persons who have grown up in the area teach standard English to others with deficiencies in it.

In the past, many educators have considered Gullah was simply bad English, according to Gadson. "They have not recognized it as a separate language with its own form and structure."

"It is a legitimate language that should and could be spoken without criticism," Gadson said.

"We want to say to the people in this area that Gullah is a good cultural trait that should be preserved and that you should continue to use it in the informal settings of your home and church."

But, Gadson said, "There is a kind of English necessary in the world of work and that is standard English. There comes a time when you have to communicate with your fellow workers, most of whom use standard English."

The Labor Department program seeks to show that an over dependence on Gullah will prevent them from holding jobs for which they would otherwise be qualified. Gadson said it is the first time the department has recognized a need for improving the language of native Americans.

"There have been language courses for persons not born in this country but there have never been such courses for persons who have lived here all their lives but yet have a language deficiency."

The program has enrolled 35 students. Another 125 to 135 persons have applied for it. Plans are to expand the program if the initial project succeeds.

"Most people, be they black or white, use more than one form of English," Gadson said. "They will use one form of English in their homes and another in their businesses."

"What we are attempting to do here is to show people there is an alternative to the Gullah language which may be used in more formal situations."

Texan Had An Eye For Oil

BEAUMONT, Tex. (UPI) — Texas history records a young Texan named Guy Fenley had an unusual talent, the ability to "see" undiscovered oil below the ground.

Producers using his talent said he never failed to find oil, and some say he is responsible for finding the spot where Spindletop No. 1 was brought in more than three-quarters of a century ago.

One Mustang For Maryland

BALTIMORE (AP) — According to Department of Interior statistics, Oregon has 7,000 wild mustangs. Maryland has only one.

The two-year old mare named Oraenna Littlespirit was brought from Nevada recently by Bart and Holly Ingoglia as part of a program to save wild horses from starvation or from death at the hands of ranchers protecting their grasslands.

Interior officials estimate that there are 50,000 mustangs and 3,000 wild burros on the Western rangelands. Laws to protect them and programs to relocate them have grown in the last two years, and officials estimate that the number of mustangs is increasing by 20 per cent each year.

The Ingoglias, who put in their request for a mustang more than a year ago, said they had not expected to be selected for the program run by the Interior Department and the National Mustang Assn because there were so many applications and the Ingoglias lived so far from the West.

Urge Druggists To Help In Limiting Self-Medication

By RICK DU BROW

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Consumer advocates are challenging your neighborhood druggist to think more about your health and less about sales.

Prescriptions and self-medication are being taken at an "alarming rate," the National Association of Retail Druggists was told at a convention here.

Barbara Erickson, director of Consumers Council, Sacramento, Calif., said this trend was increasing because people have almost "complete ignorance of the drug production and marketing system."

"Self-medication is a hazardous business," she said. "You, the pharmacists, are the experts in the field of drug products. We must look to you for help."

She added: "Consumers know less about the chemical ingredients that formulate medicines for their illnesses or that are used in processing foods than any other consumer product in the marketplace."

Mrs. Erickson told the druggists their role is not clearly defined but should be: "First, identify yourself as the pharmacist — wear a badge indicating your profession and your name," she said.

"Make a personal contact with the customer every time you fill a prescription, especially if it is new or prescribed for a specific illness.

"This might mean you fill less prescriptions each day, but it provides a personal service as well as a dispensing service.

"We deplore the practice of expecting a 'daily quota' from pharmacists during 'open hours' as some chain stores require."

Mrs. Erickson said druggists should "keep a family record, and discuss it with the customer. Offer it as a portable record, moving with the family when the family moves to another area or state.

"The hours of the pharmacy should be posted, especially on the outside entrance of a superstore when the pharmacy section is located inside.

"Do you offer emergency prescription service, compound prescription service, health information, charge accounts, delivery, longer hours?"

Mrs. Erickson told the convention that "pharmacists have not always been our friendly helpers."

The passage of a California law requiring posting of prices of the 100 more frequently prescribed drugs three years ago resulted in a recent state legislature report that said the posted prices were poorly displayed, were not kept up to date and that "pharmacists quoted different prices on the phone and some refused to give quotes."

Mrs. Erickson said prescriptions and over-the-counter drugs are not accompanied by "specific, easy-to-read-and-understand instructions or warnings" and that many are produced "for profits rather than people."

"Pharmacists hold the key for the success or failure of a customer to receive information and to understand something that is very important to his health," she said. (World Horizons — Advance for October 10 Release) (above . . . repeat . . . to . . . some western points)

Trend Is To 'Flat Time' Prison Term

EDITOR'S NOTE — As the nation's crime rate rises, penologists search for ways to reform the penal system. One reform gaining popularity is the flat-time sentence.

—By JOSEPH R. TYBOR
Associated Press Writer

Indeterminate prison sentences, the kind that get a person five years to life for a criminal conviction, may be losing ground to a new trend in penology: the fixed sentence.

Parole, another major penal practice, would disappear, too, if fixed sentencing spreads in popularity, as it seems to be doing among those penologists who are losing faith in the ability of the prison system to reform criminals.

Maine is the first state to switch from indeterminate to fixed or "flat-time" sentences, the practice of sentencing a criminal to a specific number of years for his crime.

Maine's law became effective last May, but fewer than 100 persons have been sent to prison so far under the new procedure. One was a man convicted of manslaughter who was sentenced to 10 years in jail, less time off for good behavior. Under the old system, his sentence would have covered a span of years, say one to 10, with the possibility of parole after a few months in jail. Now there is no parole.

Indiana also has a fixed-sentence law, effective next July. And California is about to get one. It, too, will be effective next July. The California Legislature approved the bill last month. It needs only the signature of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., who has endorsed the legislation.

Fixed-sentence bills are now before the legislatures of six states: Alaska, Illinois, Connecticut, Colorado, Washington and Ohio. In Virginia, Florida and South Dakota, legislative commissions are studying proposals for fixed prison terms.

The Minnesota Legislature approved a flat-time sentence bill, but it was vetoed by Gov. Wendell Anderson, who said some of the sentences were too lenient. A new bill is to be introduced in January.

On the national level, President Ford has directed the Justice Department to study fixed sentencing procedures for federal courts. And the Twentieth Century Fund's Task Force on Criminal Sentencing produced a report this year that says the present system of sentencing in American courts is "perhaps the major flaw in the criminal justice system."

The Fund recommended a system of "presumptive sentencing." Its report explained: "The underlying presumption here is that a finding of guilty of committing a crime would predictably incur a particular (fixed) sentence unless specific mitigating or aggravating factors are established."

In the various debates, few have criticized the principle of fixed sentencing. Most of the opposition has been based on the length of sentences in specific bills, either too severe or too lenient.

In California, for instance, the American Civil Liberties Union and a prisoners' union opposed the California bill with arguments that the sentences were too severe. In Illinois, on the other hand, the National Prisoners Association and the National Prison Project of the ACLU supported a flat-time plan.

In Maine, the sentences laid out in the new law mean longer periods in jail for some crimes and a rising prison population.

A person convicted of armed robbery or rape, for example, must go to jail for at least 10 years, and actually serve at least 6.01 years with time off for good behavior. Under the old law, a judge was free to impose any sentence he wished for these two crimes. The median sentence for armed robbery in recent years was five years, and average time actually served before parole, 3.3 years. The median sentence for rape was seven years and average time served 4.6 years.

Mrs. Chase Whittenberg, placement associate with the Maine Department of Mental Health and Corrections, expects the average prison population to rise more than 30 per cent.

"We don't know, quite frankly, what we're going to do for money," she said. "We're just beginning to feel the increase now."

Ironically, flat-time sentencing was common practice until the turn of the century. But by the 1920s, penal reform had made the indeterminate sentence and the system of parole widespread in the United States. Indeterminate sentences were considered a tool of rehabilitation because criminals could be released on parole when they were considered fit for society.

Today, with the nation's crime rate continually rising, minds are changing. Rehabilitation no longer seems as important or as possible to many penologists.

Few other nations permit as much flexibility as the United States in their methods of criminal punishment. For example, a murderer sentenced in this country to up to 250 years may serve only 10.

Richard Speck, who murdered eight nurses in Chicago in 1966, was sentenced originally to the electric chair. This was changed to eight consecutive terms of 50 to 150 years, a total of at least 400 years. Nevertheless, under Illinois law, Speck became eligible last month for a parole hearing.

"Indeterminate sentencing has simply lost its credibility," said Sanford Fox of the Boston College of Law, who helped draft the Maine law.

That law, part of an overhaul of the state's entire criminal code, not only abolishes parole but makes prison rehabilitation programs voluntary.

Tim Fitzharris of the California Probation and Parole Association sees his state's bill as a setback in criminal justice. He argues that it will mean punishment that is too lenient for some and too severe for others and will weaken the state's control over released prisoners who revert to crime.

Under the California law awaiting Brown's signature, a first conviction for robbery carries a sentence of two, three or four years, less time off for good behavior — usually a maximum of one year. Under current law, the same conviction carries a sentence of five years to life, with 33 months the average time actually served before parole.

Once a convicted robber is released Fitzharris says, the state can have control over him for one year under the new law — sort of parole. Under the present system, the parole board can send a person back to jail for parole violation.

Six Joined DECA Club

Six East Carolina University students have joined the campus Collegiate Distributive Education Club (DECA). They accepted invitations to become members at a recent DECA social event.

The new members are Virginia Moore of Beaufort, Lynn Heath of Winston, Jimmy Clinton of Winton, Ed Gay of Walstonburg, Lou Whitehurst of Bethel, and Laurie Johnson of Jacksonville.

DECA is a national organization with more than 5,500 chapters in U.S. schools, colleges and universities which promotes the development of future business leaders for marketing and distribution.

Business firms of all types cooperate with DECA chapters in providing opportunities for students to work in actual business operations, where they gain training and experience and can apply concepts learned in classroom studies.

Parents' names and hometown addresses of the new ECU DECA area members follow:

GREENE COUNTY, Walstonburg - Ed Gay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gay.

PITT COUNTY, Bethel - Lou Whitehurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee J. Whitehurst Jr.

Oklahoma Sees Revenue Loss

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Oklahoma's commissioner of agriculture is predicting a drop of several million dollars in Oklahoma's business volume and state tax collections because of a poor wheat crop.

Agriculture Commissioner Jon Ford blames dry fall weather and late plantings which may bring production 30 per cent below last year.

Agricultural economists say total loss in business revenue may be $350 million and loss to state sales tax revenue may be $27 million.

Abortion In Soviet Easy

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The controversy over abortion now raging in the United States finds no echo in the Soviet Union, where thousands of women daily undergo legal hospital abortions, their primary form of birth control.

Women here use very few contraceptives, and when they have an unwanted pregnancy, statistics show, more than half of them go to a hospital or a private doctor for an abortion.

The result is what is accepted as the highest abortion rate in the world, 10 times higher than the United States and five times higher than the second leading nation, Japan.

In the Soviet Union, where abortion is available on demand to any woman over 18, the Population Council estimates that 10 million abortions are performed each year, a rate of 180 per thousand women aged 15 to 44. The council is funded by the United Nations, and by some U.S. government and private agencies.

In 1974, according to official statistics, there were 4.5 million births in the Soviet Union — or less than half the number of abortions.

The Population Council says 899,850 abortions were performed in the United States in 1974, for a rate of 19.5 per thousand women.

In Japan, the council says, an estimated 2.2 million abortions are performed each year. No other nation for which the council has statistics reported as many as one million abortions a year.

Soviet women apparently accept the necessity for abortions, despite the harsh, assembly-line atmosphere of hospital abortion wards. And there is virtually no public debate about abortion, although the government often urges women to have big families to boost the Soviet population, now approximately 250 million.

The late dictator Josef Stalin outlawed abortion in 1936 but the then Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev legalized it in 1955, partly because illegal abortions were thriving. When the government talked about banning abortion again in the early 1970s to raise the birth rate, a Moscow physician argued against a ban in terms similar to those voiced by proabortion forces in the United States.

"A woman who does not want to have a baby will not have it," Prof. Dmitri Valentei of Moscow University said. "Legal barriers have practically no effect anywhere in the world."

A woman seeking a legal abortion here first visits her local doctor for a checkup, then goes to a hospital for laboratory tests, then sees her supervisor at work for an "abortion leave" paper.

With these documents she receives a three-day unpaid leave from work, and if she earns less than 60 rubles — about $80 a month — her hospital abortion is free. If she earns more than that, she pays the nominal fee of five rubles — about $7.

On the morning of her abortion, a woman arrives at the hospital with her passport, health certificate, abortion-leave paper, a bathrobe and slippers, and joins a line of other women waiting for the operations to start.

Hobbyists Try Tin Can Craft

By LUKE HILL
SEATTLE (UPI) — Most people just throw away empty tin cans.

Members of the Magic Tin Crafter's club of Kenmore, Wash., turn them into miniature furniture, napkin holders, lamps and jewelry boxes and Christmas ornaments.

Using simple tools such as cutting shears and pliers, they cut strips from the metal containers, shape the strips (a process that usually takes a few hours) then add paint and fabric for furniture they call minikins for dollhouses.

The club was started when a group of women got the idea of tin crafting from a display in a Seattle department store and decided to get together to exchange ideas and technique.

Members are encouraged to bring their work to monthly meetings to help beginners and give others ideas to work from. If a new pattern comes up, other members often study it, and sometimes even buy it.

Newcomers to the craft often are surprised to learn the finely curled, complex minikins come from ordinary tin cans. They are fairly easy to make, but if you're planning on selling your work, as some members do, talent is needed.

"You've got to have a little knack," says Hazel Fuller of Langley, Wash. She joined the club in 1962 and quickly became a "pioneer."

At that time most members concentrated on making Christmas ornaments and sunbursts. One day a woman brought a little chair to the club meeting.

Mrs. Fuller thought she could make a better one, and she did. Then she decided to make a rocking chair and came up with the most popular item in the club.

Soon many crafters were making rockers, beds, tables, circus wagons and all sorts of furniture, feeding off each other's work.

Many members have their own specialty. Hope McElroy loves to make jewelry, with a special emphasis on medallions. Mrs. Fuller, who recalls earning $210 one day at the Coupeville fair, said she and a few others sell their work not only at fairs but also at club meetings and their homes.

Most, however, lack either the talent or the inclination for enterprise and make minikins simply for fun or gifts.

Big Earnings For Child In Commercial

By CONNIE GRZELKA
NEW YORK (AP) — They're normal children who go to school, ride bikes and play ball. But they also earn anywhere from $200 up to $5,000 or $10,000 in a day.

They're the kids who appear on television commercials. There are hundreds in the business, says Mari Lyn Henry, associate casting director at an advertising agency, who sees close to 300 of them a year.

Ms. Henry, who has worked with both children and adults for the past seven years at Cunningham & Walsh, describes her work with youngsters as "a special, human experience. They're always full of surprises."

Most of the children in the business are the "natural performers" who are extroverted and like to entertain, she says. The others are "cute children" who their parents think should be on television, she adds.

The kids come in all sizes, types and ages, from infancy to 10. Since youngsters tire easily, have a shorter attention span and may be self-conscious, Ms. Henry says that auditioning requires patience and an awareness of the child's needs.

Some of the children say they want to be stars when they start doing commercials, explains Ms. Henry. "But it's a fantasy. When they find out how much work is involved, many quickly change their minds."

She cites Linda Blair, who starred in "The Exorcist," as a good example of a child who started in the commercial business. She was a professional by the time she was 9 and knew what kind of work it meant to succeed, the casting director adds. "She was talented, but she also had the drive and ambition to pursue an acting career."

After some children have done a few spots, they become "very hip and professional."

"A 9-year-old might walk in with his picture and resume and ask what kind of work is available. They also ask how much money they're going to make and when the commercial will be shot."

But child stars don't just walk in off the street. They must have an agent before the casting department will see them, Ms. Henry emphasizes.

Fortunately, there aren't many "stage mothers" in the commercial business. But she admits that the children tend to get a goodly share of "primping and pampering from mothers who are on hand with the child's brush and comb."

But the attention and fame rarely have a bad effect on the children, she notes:

"It's important for them to make the transition from the camera set to getting home and putting on their jeans and sneakers. Most of them have no problems."

She stresses that parents "must be supportive of the child. They can't be too pushy — but have to be able to sense what the child needs."

"If this means the choice between doing a commercial and going to the class picnic — the decision should be made by the child."

Auditions are held after school and sometimes the child has to miss school to shoot a commercial. It's a demanding schedule for a child because he has to travel to his agency or studio and wait his turn and perform after a full day in the classroom, Ms. Henry points out.

But for most children, she continues, it's a learning experience, plus a good way to help out with family expenses or build up savings for college.

"But remember — if the child wants to do it fine. If not, don't push."

Not Everybody Appreciates Tag

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Officials are receiving complaints after mailing out some 1,000 Hinds County license tags with the prefix "GAY" ahead of the numbers.

County Tax Collector Jake Richardson said Monday that the complaints indicated that "not everybody wants a car labeled GAY."

J.W. Howell, director of the state Motor Vehicle Comptroller's tag division, said "nothing offensive was meant."

He added, "No one in this office ever thought of it in another term."

Richardson said he would be "glad to take them back if recipients don't want them."
