Ground was broken yesterday for the new Greenville Middle School to be located on the north side of Arlington Boulevard, across from Evans Park. Construction will begin immediately for the first phase of the complex that will house the sixth and seventh grades. According to Greenville Superintendent of City Schools Glenn Cox, the first phase will be completed near January of 1978. The building will have 16 classrooms, offices, pupil personnel area, and a kitchen-cafeteria area. The classrooms are in a four classroom arrangement in wings from the main office area. Cox commented, "The four pod arrangement will provide a variety of teaching methods." When the first phase of the building is completed in 1978, Cox said that the seventh grade will probably be the first class in the new facility with approximately 475 students. The initial construction cost will be about $2,117,000 for the first phase and the total cost of the complex will be approximately $3.6 million.

Will Locate In Triangle Park

RALEIGH (AP) — Data General Corp., the world's second largest builder of small computers, has announced plans to locate in the Research Triangle Park a research and development facility that ultimately could employ 1,000 persons.

Mike Murphy, a public affairs officer for the firm, said construction will begin soon on a 20,000 square foot building in which it will produce material used in programming computers. He said the plant will be designed so that it ultimately can be expanded to 100,000 square feet or more. From 50 to 100 workers will be employed initially.

Race Now Too Close To Call

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Regardless of how the percentage points in the latest political polls appear to the naked eye, the margin of error built into the surveys makes the race between President Ford and Jimmy Carter now too close to call.

The polls show Carter ahead by 2 to 6 percentage points, but any conclusion from those numbers would be cloudy at best. And an unusually moody electorate, as indicated by great swings in the opinion surveys over the campaign season, adds uncertainty.

The dean of the pollsters, Dr. George Gallup Sr., agrees — "If you look at the last two to three months, since the conventions, you find the greatest shifting in sentiment we've encountered in 40 years."

Usually the first poll after the conventions will tell a great deal about the eventual outcome, Dr. Gallup says, but this year the situation is "vastly different."

"No, you can't predict a winner," he says. "We do know the debates are making a slight difference. And with two candidates as close as they are, events could make a difference — any crisis, any front page event."

Heading into the final week before the election — with more polling still to come — the major surveys agree that Carter was ahead. They also agree his lead has greatly diminished since early September, but the poll's percentage charts are inconclusive.

That's because a margin of error is built into the polling process by the laws of probability. A typical sample of about 1,200 to 1,500 persons, the size generally used by the national polls, will produce results that 95 out of 100 times have a margin of error of about 3 per cent in either direction. Given other variables of polling, including techniques, the actual margin of error could be even greater.

Here is what four major polls have shown most recently:

NBC News-Newsday: Carter 42, Ford 38, and 20 either undecided, won't vote or prefer some other candidate. The polls was based on a sample of 1,583 respondents, with a margin of error of plus or minus 3 per cent. This means, for example, that Carter could actually have anywhere from 39 to 45 per cent, and Ford 35 to 41. The poll was taken Oct. 12, 13, and 14.

Louis Harris-ABC News: Carter 44, Ford 40, Eugene McCarthy 6. Harris said the results were based on a survey of 1,503 voters and concluded that the results suggest that the Ford-Carter race is now likely to narrow even further. The poll was taken Oct. 7-11.

George Gallup: Carter 47, Ford 41, McCarthy 2, and undecided 10. The results were based on a survey of 1,032 registered voters conducted nationwide Oct. 15-18. A Gallup poll taken Oct. 8-11, just after the second debate, showed Carter leading Ford 48 to 42, McCarthy 2, and undecided 8.

At the time Gallup, concluded that Carter had registered gains over Ford after the second debate. Those results were based on a survey of between 1,450 and 1,500 persons.

The New York Times-CBS News: The Times said Carter "has regained the strong position he held at the beginning of the general election campaign," but did not cite over-all percentages. In Western and Eastern states, this poll showed Carter at 51 and Ford at 49. In the Midwest, Carter 58, Ford 41. In the South, Carter 60, Ford 40. (Worked out on the basis of each region's population, this would be 49 Carter, 45 Ford and 6 undecided or for others nationally.) That survey was taken Oct. 8-12, and based on 1,761 registered voters with a 2.5 margin of error either way.

In addition to the statistical margin of error, there are other aspects of uncertainty in polling which help account for the difference among the polls — the timing, weighting of samples to assure they are representative of the whole population, whether the selection of persons interviewed is truly random, whether questions and the order of questions do not influence the answers.

And the pollsters themselves generally acknowledge these problems. As Peter D. Hart of Washington puts it: "Those readers who hang on percentage points are going to find 1976 a very confusing year."

While Harris finds Ford narrowing the contest, Gallup finds Carter gaining after the second debate. The Times-CBS poll finds Carter stronger than anyone else does. So the trends themselves are cloudy.

Carter-Ford Final Match

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter, two presidential candidates in search of a breakthrough to a clear edge in the race for the White House, get their last chance tonight to find that advantage in head-on debate.

Their third and final debate takes place in historic Williamsburg, Va. Afterward, the Republican President and his Democratic challenger leave on campaign trips that will keep them on the road until the election.

Associated Press polls following the first two debates gave Ford an edge in the first and Carter an almost identical edge in the second.

So, it's one each going into the final match. But no one can be sure what role the debates will have in the final election outcome.

The first debate covered domestic issues and economic policy; the second, foreign policy and defense issues. There is no limitation on the subject matter of the third debate.

A week ago, the vice presidential candidates, Republican Sen. Bob Dole and Democratic Sen. Walter F. Mondale, debated. It was their only scheduled meeting, and it produced generally livelier exchanges than the confrontations between the men at the top of the tickets.

President Ford and Carter spoke at the annual Al Smith Dinner in New York on Thursday night, a charity affair that usually draws the presidential candidates from both major parties.

Carter and Ford timed their appearances so that one was gone before the other arrived.

In an ornate ballroom decorated with thousands of roses, and before an audience heavy with philanthropists and politicians, first Ford and later Carter spoke, each introduced by Terence Cardinal Cooke, Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York.

Tradition has it that if the speeches are political, their tone should be lighthearted. And so it was.

Ford took note of the upcoming debate and said, "Gov. Carter is going to answer his questions and I'm going to question my answers." They were references to Ford's frequent campaign charge that Carter refuses to give straight answers during the debates and to the President's own gaffe in the second debate when he said there was "no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe."

Ford also told the dinner that "we've just installed a special lock on the front door of the White House. It's Jimmy proof."

Carter referred to his interview with Playboy magazine and said, "I had an opportunity to chat privately with Cardinal Cooke and he gave me some good advice. Among other things, I've agreed that if I ever give another interview on Biblical sins of pride and lust, it will be to a reporter from Our Sunday Visitor."

Our Sunday Visitor is a widely circulated Catholic weekly.

Both candidates may have trouble figuring out where they are during the final 10 days of the campaign. They'll be on the road constantly and if either wonders where he is, a good guess would be that he's in one of the eight most populous states, all seen as key battlegrounds and none of which is considered a sure bet for either man.

Pitt Education Board Votes To Continue Attendance Policies

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education in a special meeting to consider a policy concerning students crossing city and county districts, Thursday night, voted to presently continue allowing students to attend school where they wish.

"This problem was prompted by the Greenville City Schools not allowing students in the county to return to school in the city this year," Superintendent of Pitt County Schools Ott Alford said.

There are presently 186 students who live in the city district attending the county schools, 89 students who live in the county and attended city schools last year, but are attending county schools this year, and 57 county students attending school in the city district in grades 7-12.

"Greenville may in another year allow the students to return. We are crowded at most of our schools because of steady enrollment and additional programs. The inability of planning has been made difficult," Supt. Alford said.

Associate Superintendent Tom Craft presented board members a map showing the city and county school districts. Supt. Alford pointed out that there are some areas that should be considered for possible redistricting.

"Wouldn't it be the county's idea to allow as many students as wish to come in to the county schools?" Chairman Mark Owens asked.

"There are two things to be concerned with. One is long range planning and the other is, if we continue to allow annexation it will become a rim of the city school district. I've always wanted to see us close the line so we could do some planning. My main thrust of the past is to cut down on annexation except in areas such as Tucker Estates where the area is close to a city school," Supt. Alford said.

"What I'd like to see is to move to hold all students within the district lines except in hardship cases. The subdivisions building close to the city could add a tremendous amount to our district in the future," Supt. Alford added.

Board members questioned what would happen to students in the Meadowbrook section who have traditionally gone to the county schools. If students were held within the district lines, then the students would not be allowed to attend the county schools.

"If a child in Meadowbrook has wanted to go to the county schools, we have traditionally let them and a child contiguous with the city district who has wished to go to the city schools we have allowed them to, although this is difficult in an administrative standpoint. I suggest that we leave it as it is," Dr. Tom Patterson said.

The board decided to presently take no action concerning allowing students to cross school districts.

"We should be considering the bond issue. I have talked with Glenn Cox and Mr. Gray about the commissioner's recommendation of the use of a bond issue for the completion of the city's middle school and other

Experiment

NEW MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — Susie was a 4-year-old loner. But after her television viewing was cut to one hour a week for a month, she began asking kindergarten classmates over to play — something she had never done before.

Susie and the children of 15 other families here participated in the four-week television experiment with Redbook magazine. The magazine reported in its November issue that the families became closer and the children improved in school. The children's real names were not used.

But of all the children in the experiment — from kindergarten age through third grade — Susie was the most changed, the magazine said.

The magazine did not say how much television each child watched before the experiment. It noted that the average child between the ages of 2 and 5 watches 23.5 hours a week, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., which rates television audiences.

Most parents who participated in the test said their youngsters complained for the first week or so. Susie at first often had fits of temper about not being allowed to watch "Batman." But by the second week she was becoming more involved with her schoolmates.

After the experiment, another youngster, Mark, stopped playing at "blowing up things," and his parents said he stopped getting into fist fights.

Mary, who had been getting Ds and Fs on her third-grade spelling tests, brought home a B-plus after the experiment.

The article said that even after the experiment was over it found most parents much more conscious of what children watched and more careful not to "slip back into the old patterns, the automatic click of the 'on' button, the mindless watching."

However, the magazine reported that Susie resumed her old viewing habits after the test, and her parents and teachers noticed immediately that she began to withdraw again.

Special Pitt Clinics Set Up For Swine Flu Shots

Special clinics have been set up for the giving of swine flu vaccine in Pitt County, according to Roger Barnaby of the Pitt County Health Department.

The giving of bivalent type of the vaccine, interrupted for a while because of reports of deaths thought to be a result of the vaccine, was resumed earlier this week when these allegations were proved unfounded.

Special clinics will be held from Monday through Thursday, Nov. from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each weekday. The schedule is as follows:

Monday — Greenville Moose Lodge; Tuesday — Ayden Satellite Clinic; Wednesday — Grimesland Satellite Clinic; Thursday — Falkland Community Building; Friday — Farmville Satellite Clinic; Monday, Nov. 1 — Stokes Community Building; Tuesday Nov. 2 —

The schedule for the satellite clinics already in effect will apply since both types of the vaccine will be offered at these times: Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. — Farmville; Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. — Bethel; Thursday 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. — Ayden; and Friday 9 a.m. to noon — Grimesland.

In addition — starting Monday, Nov. 1 the Health Department, located off W. Sixth Street adjacent to Pitt Memorial Hospital, will extend its hours to 6:30 each Monday and Wednesday during November to offer the vaccine to people who may not be able to go there during regular working hours. Barnaby said.

Balloon Struck Power Line; Three Die

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—A hot air balloon making a promotional flight across Charlotte Thursday struck a 100,000-volt power line and exploded into flames, killing the gondola's three occupants.

The balloon crashed minutes before 1 p.m. near a city park in a residential area about one mile east of Independence Square in the heart of the city.

The Federal Aviation Administration, which licenses and inspects balloons, began an investigation of the crash. An FAA spokesman declined to speculate on the cause of the accident.

The dead were identified as Sidney Gibson, 53, and his son, Patrick, 28, the balloon owners from Levittown, Pa., and a passenger, James E. Vogan, 29, of Towson, Md.

The balloon was being used to promote the Mecklenburg Jaycees Charities' Old Time Fair, which opened Tuesday at the Metrolina Fairgrounds on Charlotte's outskirts.

Vogan was an employee of the Tidewater Helicopter Co., Sparrows Point, Md., which is staging $6 helicopter rides at the fair. Workers said he had gone along for the ride.

Guy Henderson, 30, general manager at the fair, said he last talked to the three men about 10 a.m. He said the balloon carried a loudspeaker with which they could shout to people on the ground.

"We'd canceled flights on Tuesday and Wednesday because of the wind conditions," Henderson said. "But they decided they'd go up for about two hours today and fly at about 50 feet, so that people could hear them."

The orange, red, blue and yellow balloon, described as 10 stories high, was launched from the Johnson C. Smith University athletic field about 12:30 p.m., according to assistant football coach Kenneth Powell.

The balloon might have ascended to as high as 2,000 feet before it began a sudden and steep descent, according to two aerial photographers who watched from an airplane several miles away.

"We were flying at 1,500 feet," said pilot Blaine Nash. "It looked like they could have been up about 2,000 or maybe 2,500 feet. They fell very fast."

Tom Johnson, 14, was among a group of Piedmont Middle School pupils who watched the balloon descend as they prepared to go to lunch. The ninth grader said the balloon passed over the school and appeared as though it might land in the school's football field.

Quality Leaf Demand Good

FARMVILLE — The demand for less desirable grades of tobacco was off Thursday on the Farmville Tobacco Market while the demand for grade grades continued strong, sales supervisor Louis Williams reported.

Williams said that leaf grades and smoking leaf accounted for most of the top prices paid yesterday.

The volume of non descript offering continued to increase, he added.

The Farmville Market sold 353,226 pounds yesterday for $404,344, an average of $114.47 per hundred pounds.

For the season, the market has sold 29,226,188 pounds for $33,983,909, an average of $116.28 per hundred pounds, compared with $101.37 for the season a year ago.

The market will join other Eastern Belt markets in closing Monday in observance of Veteran's Day.

Creme Fraiche Can Be Bought In The U.S.A.

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer
France has many temptations, one of which is creme fraiche, a nutty-flavored delight made from raw, rich cream that has been allowed to mature, but not quite become sour. Now it is available in this country.

distributed in this country and found it very good. We particularly liked it added to hot soups such as tomato, celery, mushroom or asparagus and such cold ones as vichyssoise and borscht. It is also tasty in a sauce poured over vegetables, both hot and cold.

Here is a recipe for chilled cauliflower bits dressed with a creme fraiche sauce:
3 heads cauliflower
1 cup creme fraiche
2½ cups mayonnaise
8-ounce jar Dijon mustard
Salt and pepper to taste
Fresh parsley chopped

Break cauliflower into bite-sized bits. Cook in boiling water 7 minutes, blanch in cold water and drain. Mix creme fraiche, mayonnaise and mustard and whisk till light and creamy. If it is too thick, thin out with light cream. Pour dressing over cauliflower bits till well coated. Season with salt and pepper. Garnish with chopped parsley and serve chilled. Good with chilled dry white wine. Serves 10 persons.

Creme fraiche, for those who have not tasted it, has more body and is a lot richer than heavy, sweet cream as we know it. And it is slightly more acidic because a culture has been added.

In France, they substitute creme fraiche for cream in recipes for sauces, desserts and many other dishes. The results are more subtle and smooth. And, unlike sour cream, creme fraiche will not curdle when simmered.

Creme fraiche is being distributed in the United States by a dairy producer whose family acquired a taste for it on a trip to France. Aided by French food experts, he managed to come up with something that ranks favorably with France's creme fraiche.

As Americans become acquainted with this specialty, they will find it is delicious over pies and tarts. It can transform a simple plate of fruit into an elegant dessert. Just thin down the creme fraiche with a tablespoon or two of light cream or a pungent spirit such as framboise, a brandy distilled from raspberries.

If you use it in a mousse or Bavarian cream, sugar should be added to your taste since the natural flavor of fraiche is less sweet than ordinary cream.

The specific culture used and the way it is combined with cream has a lot to do with the quality of creme fraiche. We have tried the product being

Many French families now serve an American specialty: grated raw carrot salad. The French dress the salad with lemon juice or an oil-and-vinegar mixture instead of using mayonnaise as is often done in the U.S.A.

From Housewives To Retirees—Iowa Adults Go To College

By VAL CORLEY
Associated Press Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — More adults are going back to college these days — both to complete degrees and to take refresher courses. Colleges, faced with dropping birth rates and consequently lower enrollments, are encouraging the trend.

"If we are going to maintain our facilities, we're going to have to encourage our students," said Dr. Joseph Fisher, director of Drake University's Reading and Study Skills Clinic. "This leaves adults wide open."

Iowa's state universities have reversed the trends of recent years and for the second year in a row are seeing increased enrollments. Officials attribute the increases to more dropouts returning to school and fewer juniors and seniors leaving school before graduation.

To make it easier for adults long out of school to attend Drake, a private college, Fisher recently taught a one-week evening course called "Back to School — Survival Skills," for entering students.

"We had to turn people away," Fisher said. He expects the course to become standard.

Fisher said mature people who have been out of school for years have psychological and academic problems that other students don't have.

"The initial one they have is a fear of failure," Fisher said. "They frequently are afraid they can't learn any more because of their age."

Other problems include unrealistic expectations of capabilities, fixed attitudes and difficulty rearranging life schedules, particularly by housewives who must study while caring for children.

"They don't have systematic methods of going about studying," Fisher said. "They have to learn to be a bit more demanding of themselves and improve their reading rate, especially learning to skim."

Dr. Philip Langerman, dean of the College for Continuing Education at Drake, said about 30 per cent of Drake students taking courses for college credit are adults coming back to college part-time.

"It's closer to 60 per cent if you include noncredit activities," he said.

That is an increase of about 30 per cent in the past five years of part-time students attending college for credit and double the number of students taking noncredit courses.

Fisher said that much of the increase is due to minority groups and women's liberation organizations encouraging their members to return to college.

"They recognize that if their members are going to get ahead, they're going to have to be qualified to do different things," he said.

"Industries see that if they are going to keep their employees up to date, they must be willing to subsidize them in going back to school."

Fisher said that people nearing retirement age are entering college to prepare themselves for second careers or just to enjoy their retirement.

"I had a man in this morning who is 57, just starting to college. He said retirement was coming up and he always wanted to go to college."

Langerman noted that many professionals are taking refresher courses because of new licensing requirements.

"The Iowa Supreme Court has mandated continuing education for lawyers; there's similar requirements in nursing and real estate. There's movement of most of the licensed occupations to require continuing education. And there's a considerable growth of businesses and industries requiring upgrading of professionals."

Be A Friend And Tell Him 'No'

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A man in our office was told by his doctor to quit smoking. (Heart, emphysema and asthma.) Well, this guy decided that the best way to quit smoking was to quit BUYING cigarettes, and that's our problem.

He buys cigarettes from every smoker he sees, and I don't mean just one cigarette. Yesterday I gave him six, and several others in the office contributed, too.

It's awfully hard to turn down a guy who asks for a cigarette, but I'm fed up with his bumming. If he's going to smoke, don't you think he should buy his own?

Nobody in this office has the nerve to tell him—including me. Any suggestions?

CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: If a diabetic asked you for sugar, would you give it to him? And would you give an alcoholic a drink? The cigarette bummer desperately needs support from his coworkers to help him to quit his habit. Be a friend and say no.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance is 28 and I am 24. Jeff's friends are having a stag party for him, and from what I hear about the plans, it is going to be very exciting. They're having stag films, and a naked girl is going to jump out of a big cake!

In days gone by, all the bride got was a lot of boring showers, but my girlfriends want to change all that. They're planning a "bachelor girls' party" with films just like the men's, and a naked guy jumping out of a cake. I think it's a neat idea, but Jeff is against it.

I think his objections are unfair. What do you think?

ALL FOR EQUALITY

DEAR ALL FOR: Of course, Jeff's objections are unfair. Just be sure all the "girls" know what to expect in case Granny or Aunt Matilda have weak hearts—or stomachs.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for seven years, and we are very happy. We know other couples who have been married about the same length of time, and they aren't at all happy. In fact, they fight a lot.

The secret to our happiness is one simple rule we follow: Treat each other like a human being FIRST, like a man or a woman SECOND, like a husband or wife THIRD.

This has worked for us. It may for others, too.

STILL HONEYMOONERS

DEAR HONEYMOONERS: If you can make a rule that works for seven years work for seven times seven, you've got it made. Good luck.

Data Confirms Farming Trend

The U. S. Department of Commerce reports that more than $2 billion in agricultural products were sold from North Carolina farms in 1974.

The figures were in a preliminary report of the 1974 Census of Agriculture recently released by the Bureau of the Census.

The report showed total production expenses of $1.4 billion in 1974 compared to $893 million in 1969.

There were 99,939 farms in the state in 1974 and they occupied some 37 percent of the total land area in North Carolina. Average farm size increased from 107 acres in 1969 to 115 acres in 1974. Average value per acre nearly doubled from $333 to 603.

The number of full owner-operated farms decreased from 76,000 to 65,000 and the number of part-owner farms declined from 26,000 to 23,000. Tenant operated farms went from 18,000 to 12,000 and the average age of farm operators went from 52.4 to 53.6 years.

The report confirms some trends in farming that have been considered likely for some time. Individual farms are getting larger, probably due to the fact that considerable investment in equipment is needed now, making larger operations more profitable.

There has also been a trend away from tenant operation of farms, something that empty tenant houses in Pitt County well illustrate. And there has also been a tendency for the young to leave the farm and seek other employment, something the advancing average age of farm operators shows.

On the other hand farm income is increasing steadily and the difference between production costs and sales seems to be keeping pace. Of course, it should be kept in mind that the farm census was for the year of 1974 and therefore doesn't reflect the rampaging inflation of the years since then.

Nevertheless farming in North Carolina still seems to be healthy. We can expect the trend to larger farms to continue. There is going to have to be some younger people moving into farming. The average age, at 53.6 years in 1974, can't continue to keep moving upward.

All-in-all though the future for agriculture in North Carolina should be bright as world demand for our farm products continues to increase.

Fouled Up By Head People

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Locked away in North Carolina's reformatories are hundreds of children — some as young as 10 years old — who are called "status offenders."

That means they are in training schools not for ripping off a neighbor's silverware or mugging some little old lady in the park, but for laying out of school, or running away from home where a drunk daddy or mamma beats up on them regularly.

They're called undisciplined, and officials figure about half the children in training schools (about 900) fall in that non-criminal category.

The push came many months ago to get those children out of the institutions where many learned nothing more than how to be even tougher and meaner and more successful at doing wrong. Ideally, local schools, counseling, group homes, job training — and a little love — would serve better than the walls of the training schools.

At Home

So a state law was passed effective next July requiring that all such children be treated at home, not sent to training school.

But efforts to provide the alternative community treatment programs have run into insurmountable problems; mostly red tape.

"I have tried . . ." says Human Resources Secretary Phillip J. Kirk, Jr. "But there are so many problems, I just don't see any way."

The best Kirk hopes for in meeting a deadline is action by the General Assembly to delay things two or three years. Even then, he isn't sure. Most of the trouble comes from trying to get federal funding through the Governor's Law and Order Commission to pay for the local programs which communities have tried to get started. Other problems arise within Kirk's own Human Resources Department, which is the agency in which the Youth Services Division (training schools) resides.

"I'm sick and tired of territorial disputes and petty jealousies," Kirk says bluntly of the futile effort to get the program on track.

How do such foulups happen?

Here is the anatomy of one such case. A letter came from one of those youngsters who is in training school, but ought not be, addressed to "Dear Head People." The lad suggested he could really benefit from a summer camping program, and the Head Man in charge of the Western section of the state agreed.

Last November, the Western Head Man suggested to the State Head Man that a camp would be a good program. The State Head Man agreed.

The Rat Race

The money, they figured, could come from State Social Services (welfare) funds because the children were generally on welfare anyway.

The Social Service Head Man agreed regulations would let the money be used for the camp if half the children were welfare recipients.

But the Federal Head Man said no way: if a child is in an institution, he can't be figured as a welfare recipient. The Social Services Head Man said the money could still be used, but they would have to enforce the federal rule — thus, no money.

Meanwhile, back at Lake James near Morganton the Western Head Man had found a super camp, buildings and all, which the owner would lease to the state. But the owner just owned the buildings and leased the land from Duke Power Company's Crescent Land and Timber affiliate.

Staff was lined up and the program organized for this past summer.

But the State Property Head Man said you can't sign a long-term contract on leased land, and the fellow who owned the buildings figured he had to have enough time to get his money back. The Crescent people said they would buy the buildings from the owner and lease the whole package to the state. The Property Head Man said the Council of State would have to approve that. But State Purchasing had to give approval, too, and there were more hoops to jump through.

Then, the feds changed their fiscal year to run from October to September and the earlier hoops involving use of welfare funds had to be renegotiated, and now it's back to the Council of State, Property, Purchasing, Social Services, Human Resources head people again.

Maybe, some of the Head People now figure, they can get the camp going next summer.

A PROFESSOR'S VIEW

Failures Of The Campaign

By DOUG WILLIS

Associated Press Writer

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — One of the nation's leading authorities on presidential elections says the '76 campaign may have been the least successful since 1948 because of its failures to "mobilize and crystallize opinion."

And while the debates have been important in drawing attention to a "very unfocused campaign," Professor Nelson Polsby of the University of California says they are "simply nonsense as an elucidation of the real problems faced by real politicians."

Polsby, 42, is coauthor of "Presidential Election," a standard political science textbook on the subject. He analyzed the current run for the White House in a question and answer session with The Associated Press.

Q. How does this campaign for president differ from past campaigns?

A. The thing that I notice most is that both major candidates this year are soft-edged politicians in that neither draws issues sharply.

Consequently, it has been a campaign nearly devoid of serious, substantive issues, and it is the kind of campaign from which it is terribly difficult to predict changes and differences in public policy that would flow from electing one or another candidate.

Q. Then do you see some blurring of the traditional Democratic and Republican differences?

A. I think the differences are still there, and they're meaningful. But the question is, to what extent has the campaign contributed to public understanding of what the differences are and what they mean for public policy?

In this respect the campaign has been an enormous disappointment to me. A political campaign ought to be an opportunity to educate large numbers of people

Who Takes High Road?

WASHINGTON — It has been traditional in most presidential campaigns that the men running for President take the high road and their running mates for Vice President take the low road. For some reason it hasn't happened this year.

I discovered this when I took the high road the other day and found a lonely traffic cop sitting in his car.

"You're the first person I've seen up here since the presidential campaign started," he said.

"Where is everybody?" I asked.

"I have no idea," he said. "They sent me up here after the political conventions just to make sure everything was all right. They told me to expect Ford and Carter and busloads of press and campaign aides and advance men. My job was to keep the traffic on the high road moving along. But I haven't had a thing to do."

I looked along the high road and it was completely empty. It was an eerie feeling. "You mean to say neither Carter nor Ford has used the high road once?"

"Nope," he said. "As far as I can tell from my radio they've both taken the low road. I don't understand it. The low road is made of dirt.

It has ruts in it and is full of muck and mire. Why they'd want to take it when we have a beautiful concrete highway up here is beyond me."

"That's funny," I told the cop, "because Ford insisted only last week he was taking the high road, but Carter was taking the low road. Then Carter said he tried to take the high road, but Ford

Status Game Costly

By MICHAEL DENNIGAN

LONDON (UPI) — One of Britain's most popular status games is going to become more expensive because it is costing the taxpayer some $2 million a year to indulge the egos of thousands.

The government has won power from Parliament to raise the fee for transferring automobile registration numbers from one owner to another.

But Britons already pay dearly for a plate number they desire.

In Britain, personalized automobile registration plates are big business. A network of dealers fills whole pages of newspapers with lists of what the trade calls "cherished numbers" at prices from the equivalent of $18 to $14,400 and up. There is no shortage of buyers — about 50,000 last year.

The game is possible because of the way British automobile registration numbers developed into the combinations of figures and letters that must be displayed front and rear of all motor vehicles.

The permutations often spell out names, initials, puns, jokes and rude words. Low numbers are most popular especially if they combine initials like singer Englebert Humperdinck's E.H.2.

Because automobile owners have to take the number issued them, the "cherished numbers" trade sprang up to help them get what they want by swapping around.

The government is losing $2 million on it this year because the present transfer Quickening interest in the Simpson divorce case centered today on the possibility Mrs. Ernest Simpson, American-born friend of King Edward, may be forced to identify the "unnamed woman" to gain her marital freedom.

By long tradition British divorce cases are reeled off generally by the simple expedient of the wife citing documentary "evidence" alleging misconduct on the part of the husband and a frequently anonymous correspondent.

Speculation was rife in legal circles, however, over the prospect that Justice Hawke will "clamp down" on such routine evidence. Several judges, it was pointed out, have recently inveighed against the practice, insisting that the "unnamed woman" be named.

Germany has accused Soviet Russia of shipping arms to the Spanish government disguised as food, an informed source said today.

The source disclosed the German note to the non-intervention commission, transmitted to London prior to tomorrow's meeting of the group, contains seven points, including a sweeping denial of all charges that Germany has shipped arms to the Spanish insurgents and several specific dates on which the Germans alleged Russian arms had been transported to Spanish government ports.

To the editor:

Lately there has been a great controversy about the building of an Ayden-Grifton Middle School for Grades 6, 7, and 8. It is evident that many people just do not realize the necessity of such a school. The number of students attending Grades 6, 7, and 8 at Grifton School is on a steady decline. This decrease of students is also occurring at Ayden, though not as rapidly.

Among arguments brought up against the construction of a middle school is the idea that people who move to Grifton because of its school will move away and business will be hurt. Which is more important, Grifton's businesses making money or Grifton's children getting an education?

If the number of students attending Grades 6, 7, and 8 continue to drop, then in the future we can expect one of two things: the return of a one-classroom system or the bussing of students to the other schools. How many people will come to Grifton for its school then? It seems logical that more will move away.

Another argument is that Grifton will not have as much to say about the way the school is run. But when students are being bussed to other schools, Grifton won't have any say at all.

Some people think that building Ayden-Grifton High School was a mistake and that building a middle school would be making the same mistake twice. But I don't think it was or is a mistake. As a student I believe that A-G offers every student much more than Ayden or Grifton could have offered separately. The mistake would be not to build a middle school with the same advantages and learning facilities as Ayden-Grifton High School.

At recent meetings held in Grifton, vigorous arguments for and against the middle school have taken place. Citizens have cursed and threatened their fellow citizens. Some people have placed the prosperity of the town above the education of its children (many of these either having children who do not attend Grifton School, children that aren't going to be affected by the middle school, or no children at all). Is this what is meant when we boast of Grifton's being "The Family Town"? We should all heed the words inscribed upon the cover of The Ayden-Grifton Charger Handbook: "United We Stand. Divided We Fall."

Small Business Not Prospering

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You figure it out if you can: If there is so much support for small and medium-size business in the United States, why does it weaken in relation to big business and big government?

Fifteen years ago one of every four persons in the civilian labor force worked for government or for one of the 500 largest industrial concerns. Now it is close to one of three.

You can measure the trend in other ways too. The National Small Business Association comments that in 1960 small and medium-size businesses accounted for 50 per cent of assets and 41 per cent of profits. In 1972 the numbers had fallen to 30 per cent and 20 per cent respectively.

Authorities of various persuasions agree that small and medium-size business is often the most responsive to the community's needs, the most innovative, the most vigorous, the most expressive of the nation's vitality.

So why?

"A whole lot of this is the fault of small business," concedes Milton Stewart, president of the association. In the past, he says, small business permitted the parties and the candidates to provide mere lip support.

Meanwhile, he continues, "mistaken federal tax, spending, regulatory and other policies" permitted the very largest corporations, unions and government to grow at the expense of the "independent sector."

Now the association is checking up on the candidates. Already it has obtained written statements supporting independent business from both President Ford and his Democratic opponent, Jimmy Carter. Carter even promised to establish yardsticks to measure growth.

The association has established eight issues which it believes are important to the survival and growth of independent business, the most vital of which is to halt the big business-big government trend.

"For small business, the ultimate measurable tests of the success of the next administration and the 95th and 96th Congress will be whether the independent sector ... outgrows government and big business ..." it states.

All candidates for the Senate and House were asked their opinion. Forty Senate candidates and 450 House aspirants responded. No less than 94 per cent expressed some degree of agreement.

Some 91.6 per cent agreed that "if catchup growth is to be achieved by the independent sector, it must be given as high a priority in national economic policy as all other major economic goals."

A system of tax credits and job training incentives, keyed to small companies, won support of 89.5 per cent of the respondents, who were told that if government is to be viewed as the employer of last resort, "small business should be viewed as the employer of next-to-last resort."

Seventy-nine per cent of respondents agreed with the view that income, capital gains, estate and gift taxes,

Strength For Today

BE VIGILANT IN TIME

Sprinkler systems, installed in buildings for the purpose of preventing fires, operate on the principle that a little water applied at the beginning of a fire will keep it from spreading. By the time the flames are leaping out of the windows, a half dozen fire engines are not capable of dealing with the situation. A little attention given to a spark keeps it from becoming a conflagration.

The same principle constitutes a philosophy for handling evil tendencies in life. The way to correct a fault is to get busy on it before it becomes an inveterate habit.

Jesus laid particular emphasis upon the necessity of attending to evils at their sources. Temptations are to be dealt with while they are still in the fantasy stage. Jesus based his teaching on the principles that flames can be extinguished easily when they are small.

Life will not stay put, morally. The time to stop any evil is before it has a chance to grow.

than half of what was spent last time around. That has the consequence of not advertising very widely the fact of an election. It has the effect of dampening down the knowledge of the election, dampening down the excitement about the election, dampening down, in short, political participation by people who are only marginally connected with the political system.

Q. Which party does that hurt?

A. It hurts Democrats more, because Republicans tend to turn out and vote more loyally than Democrats. Democrats tend to represent people who are further down in the social stratification of society, people who are less well plugged in.

That may be more significant in the non-presidential than in the presidential races around the country. But I think it's going to hurt some candidates.

Q. Do you see President Ford and Jimmy Carter in positions that fit naturally with party ideology?

A. On economic and domestic issues, yes. On foreign policy issues, you might have noticed Gerald Ford's famous gaffe implied an acceptance of the liberal Democratic position that beyond the Iron Curtain lie a heterogeneous rather than a homogeneous group of nations, and Jimmy Carter attacked him from the right, making noises about liberation of captive nations. That's traditionally a Republican posture.

Q. Was that just a fluke of that debate?

A. Yes. But that's the trouble this year. We have nothing better to go on than flukes, misstatements and Freudian slips.

Gerald Ford has a public record which people can repair to if they're in any doubt about the kind of president he's likely to be. Jimmy Carter is a far more mysterious figure.

Consequently, people are spending a great deal of time parsing his sentences and trying to figure out what he's going to actually do in case he's elected president.

These candidates don't present perfectly symmetrical problems of analysis. On the one hand, you have someone with a substantial record in national politics, and on the other hand you have someone who simply doesn't have that record, and therefore you look more curiously at the words.

Q. With that in mind, how important are the debates?

A. They're important in two senses. One is they help attract attention to an otherwise very unfocused campaign on both sides. Second, they may help to crystallize the opinions of some people who have been undecided.

But as an elucidation of the real problems faced by real politicians, these debates are simply nonsense.

An example is secrecy in the conduct of foreign affairs. Jimmy Carter says he's against it. Gerald Ford says he's against it. Both as president will have to conduct our foreign affairs mostly in secret. That's always been true, and that's always going to be true.

Q. What are the major pluses for Ford or Carter?

A. The main plus for Carter is that he's got the Democratic nomination. There are more Democrats than Republicans in this country. Secondly, he has been able to capitalize very successfully on the fact that he's a Southerner, and that means that he may well solidify the South for a Democrat, which is something that has not happened in quite a while. The main plus for Ford is that he's the incumbent. It means he's had an opportunity to serve in the office long enough for people to decide whether or not he scares them. You don't have to ask the question, "Is Ford presidential?" because he is presidential.

Q. What are the major minuses?

A. The major minus for Ford is that he's a Republican, that he's considerably more conservative than most American voters on most issues, and that as a campaigner he's not terribly compelling.

Carter's main minus is that he's something of an enigma to people who worry about what he's going to do in office. And that resonates not only with voters, but also with the leaders of interest groups that are traditionally supporters of the Democratic party.

Q. You mentioned incumbency as a plus for the President. What about all the talk in both parties about running against Washington, about incumbents being in trouble? Is that a real issue?

A. It's real in the sense that I think it is an asset for people to run against Washington. But it's also the case that people who live in Washington can run against Washington, and frequently do. Virtually all members of Congress run against Congress. It's an issue, but it's anybody's issue.

Q. There has been talk of a party realignment. Is this likely? Or, if we retain the two major parties in name, do you see a change in their constituencies?

A. Not much, really. A lot of the talk about party realignment has come about because of a quirk in the way public opinion surveys are being reported.

The clerks also object, says John Williams, Secretary of the Public Servants' Union, because they have to rub shoulders with "pretty shady characters" that he says infest the trade.

Amusing, he said, was BOO8 with the 8 made to look like B to spell a well known word. The initial figure 8 in 800 BOO also became B to make a BOO BOO and was in the same class, he said.

His own pride is A12 on his personal automobile, a reminder that the game started with the issue of the first number. The nobleman Earl Russell stood in line 24 hours Dec. 31, 1903, to get A1, the first issued in England, and promptly sold it.

It is now the property of the Dunlop Tire company which uses it for publicity and is reputed to have turned down more than $100,000 for it.

The Royal Family plays too. The Queen gave her husband, Prince Philip, the number HRH 1 (His Royal Highness No. 1). She got it from a loyal subject who, in turn, was simply issued it.

Princess Anne displays ANN 1, a wedding present, on one automobile, and 1420 H on another because it is the regimental number of the King's Hussars of which she is Colonel-in-Chief.

Television entertainer Jimmy Tarbuck spent a lot of money to acquire COM1C, the numeral one making do for an "I". David Hudson owns the number HUD50N with the 5 shaped like S. A brewery snaps up all ALE prefixed numbers and there are the newwyeds who drive around with plates saying 20F US (two of us).

Officialdom looks sourly upon all this. Transport Minister Dr. John Gilbert recently told Parliament the 100 government clerks have to check that regulations are not being broken as numbers cannot be transferred without their vehicles which also must be in running condition.

The clerks also object, says John Williams, Secretary of the Public Servants' Union, because they have to rub shoulders with "pretty shady characters" that he says infest the trade.

"This is Car 99. The President's limousine is coming through the muck, and Carter's limousine is now trying to pass him. Carter is throwing a fistful of mud at Ford, and the President has just picked up some mire to sling at Carter. Should we intervene?"

Headquarters' voice came over the radio. "No, Car 99, it's not our business to interfere with the candidates. Just keep the low road clear so the television people can cover it."

"Roger! Dole is now throwing mud at Carter and Mondale, and Mondale is throwing garbage at Ford and Dole and Nixon."

"We've got you, Car 99. Do you need assistance?"

"Connally is throwing mud at Carter now, and Butz is throwing manure at anyone he can hit. We could use some help."

Headquarters came over the radio. "Car 76, come in Car 76."

"That's me!" the cop I was with said excitedly. "This is Car 76."

"Go down to the low road and give Car 99 help."

"What about the high road?" the cop asked.

"It doesn't look as if we'll need anyone up there — at least not until after Election Day."

along with the investment tax credit and depreciation allowances, should be graduated.

All responses to the issues showed approval by 79 per cent to 94 per cent of respondents. The weakest agreement, 58.3 per cent, came in response to a federal anti-concentration stand that, among other things, would preclude any growth by acquisition of companies with assets of $1 billion or more.

The association, made up mainly of manufacturers and distributors, describes as small or independent almost any concern not included in the 1,000 largest industrial concerns or the 300 largest finance and service companies.

Said Stewart: "While we realize that the responses demonstrate different intensities and levels of support, what is impressive is the long-term durability of grass roots commitment to small business."

He said, "It shows a real determination to have small business recoup the ground it has lost in the past to government and big business."

But the puzzle remains. Assuming that much of that belief, much of the support for small business, existed in prior years, why was so much ground lost?

Two Burned In Tank Explosion

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Two workmen were burned Thursday when a vapor explosion blew off the top of huge, empty fuel tank.

They had been on their way into the tank to clean it. The two, Alvin Edgerton and Henry Moore, were treated at a hospital and released.

The tank at the Exxon Terminal on the Cape Fear River has a capacity of 30,000 barrels of fuel, 1.3 million gallons.

This was the third explosion and fire at the tank farm in the last two months. There have been no serious injuries.

The bidding: South West North East 1 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass Pass Pass Opening lead: King of ♣.

Former world champion Mike Lawrence has just had his second book published. ("Judgment at Bridge," Max Hardy, paperback, $5.95). If it has one drawback, it is the price, which is rather high for a 151-page paperback. However, careful study will result in savings at the table that will pay for the book many times over. Consider this hand.

The North-South auction had the advantage of being simple and direct, if slightly off target. We are not enthralled with North's decision to jump raise on only three trumps—we would like a four-card holding for that action. A bid of two no trump or two clubs might have led to the superior no trump game. West led the king of spades and East followed with the two. Since a spade continuation would have presented declarer the gift of a trick with the queen of spades, West was forced to shift. The problem is: which minor suit should he lead at trick two?

When the hand was played, West shifted to a club and that was that. Declarer won, drew trumps and discarded a spade on the fourth club. He could lose no more than two spades and a diamond.

Was there any way for West to know which minor suit to lead at trick two? Lawrence shows that logical thinking would have pointed the defender in the right direction. Observe that East's two of spades at the first trick was not a suit preference signal—it was simply to discourage a spade continuation.

A thinking defender, the author notes, would have found the diamond shift that defeats the contract. He would have reasoned that, even if declarer holds the ace of diamonds, he is unlikely to get a useful discard from dummy on that card. On the other hand, if declarer holds the ace-king of clubs, it is almost certain he will be able to discard a loser from his hand after drawing trumps. Simple, isn't it.

Hunt Outlines Ethics Measure

RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Jim Hunt outlined today a proposed ethics act for the executive branch of state government and an appointment process he said would insure qualified, honest appointees.

Hunt told a press conference he wants to "guarantee that people in responsible positions of government are worthy of the public trust."

His proposed ethics act would: —Create a three-member Board of Ethics appointed by the governor to carry out and enforce the law. —Cover all members of the governor's staff, his principal executive appointees, all other appointees and employees not covered by the State Personnel Act and members of non-advisory boards, commissions and councils appointed by the governor.

—Require statements of economic interest and public disclosure of those statements.

As for appointments, Hunt said, "we are now studying a screening process for executive-level appointments to state government positions, a process that can help insure qualified people in the right positions."

Three CBs Collected 960 Pints Of Blood

The thefts of three Citizens Band radios were reported Thursday to the Greenville Police Dept., according to police records.

Cecil Clark of Greenville Heating and Air Conditioning Co., 308 Spruce St., told police that someone took a CB valued at $389 from one of the company trucks while it was parked at E. B. Aycock Jr. High School from about 11:15 Thursday morning until 5:15 p.m.

A CB worth $208 and a power microphone valued at $38 were taken from the car of Ronald Hemby while it was parked at his residence, Apt. 23 Garriage House, from Wednesday night until early Thursday morning. The side window of the car was pried open.

Fountain Parrott Cade of Overlook Dr. reported the larceny of a CB worth $125 from his truck while it was parked at an insurance office about 5 p.m. Thursday.

The Air Force ROTC at East Carolina University sponsored another successful three-day campus blood drive this week, collecting 960 pints of blood.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor, executive secretary of the Pitt County Red Cross, said that the blood collected and the number of persons rejected for various health reasons amounted to an overall turnout of 1,066.

She reported that Tuesday's drive resulted in the collection of 288 pints of blood with 23 rejects while Wednesday's effort netted 310 donors with 34 rejections. The collection figure improved to 362 pints of blood on Thursday with 49 rejections.

Serving as co-chairmen for the AFROTC blood program this year were Jack Bradley and John McAllister.

Mrs. Taylor expressed special thanks to the campus sororities and fraternities for their participation and assistance in the blood drive. She pointed to the willingness of the students to help and lauded their spirit.

Thanks were also expressed to the women of the Greenville Service League, volunteer nurses, and students in the ECU nursing program for their help.

Won $354,000 In Damage Suit

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A man who claimed treatment given him for a skin disease made his hair fall out and his kidneys fail won a judgment of $354,000 in Forsyth Superior Court Thursday.

The judgment was made against Dr. John H. Cox who failed to file an answer to the complaint entered by Tommie Sawyer, 32. So Judge Robert H. Collier entered the judgment against Cox by default.

Judge Collier ordered the big award after hearing that Sawyer suffered severe kidney damage and began losing his hair as a result of taking a medication Cox prescribed for a skin condition.

FASCINATION FOR THE FUTURE

There is an important element in the process of growing up that not all parents understand. It expresses itself in games of role-playing—the child pretends to be a grown-up in some adventurous situation.

As parents, we should realize that there is more to a child's role-playing than imagination. Actually he is caught up in a fascination for the future. He is beholding tomorrow as a horizon of limitless opportunities. Being a brave fireman is just one possibility he'll explore.

To wise parents this fascination for the future signals the child's pressing need for religious training. Whatever his emerging role in our complex society, his God-given potentials in moral and spiritual integrity must be developed.

One of the churches in our community should be yours. Its program of worship and Christian education offers a FOUNDATION FOR THE FUTURE. Fascination alone is tragically inadequate.

Demos Confident Of Keeping Their Big Majority

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican candidates for the House are using President Ford's "big-spending Congress" line in campaigns across the country. But Democrats are confident they will have nearly 2-to-1 control of the House after the Nov. 2 elections.

Democratic campaign officials concede Republicans may win back 10 or 12 of the 43 seats they lost in the backwash of Watergate in 1974, when the Democrats won a 290 to 145 margin in the House.

They say only the voter apathy that had presidential candidate Jimmy Carter prodding nonvoters as cowards earlier this week would allow the GOP to pick up more than a dozen seats.

Republican officials say they will win back at least 10 but have no expectation of taking all 43. "We'll be delighted with anything over 20," said one. "And we could go as high as 30 at the outside."

Republicans are calling Democrats — and especially Democratic freshmen — big spenders in dozens of races, making that easily the most-touted issue of the 1976 campaigns.

Democrats have no such recurring theme and are relying instead on campaign organization to block the pendulum that normally would give Republicans back something like the 43 seats they lost.

That pendulum normally throws out most freshmen. But the 79 Democratic freshmen have been building and cementing support this time with a heavy schedule of public meetings back home, constituent services and voter registration drives.

As a result, Republicans list only 35 of the 79 freshmen as possible upsets and think they have a good chance of beating only 15.

Although all 435 House seats are at stake, the Republican-Democrat lineup may be determined by as few as 50 races.

Both sides agree Republicans could win 30 Democratic seats and Democrats could win 20 Republican seats, giving Republicans a net gain of 10.

But about 30 of those seats could go either way, allowing for bigger shifts to either side.

Two big targets on the Republican list are House Ethics Committee Chairman John J. Flynt of Georgia and Rep. Thomas L. Ashley of Ohio, chairman of a House banking subcommittee.

Challengers are accusing both of losing touch with their districts, and Ashley's opponent is using the big spender label, charging him with favoring costly federal programs.

Democrats still have long-shot hopes of beating House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes in Arizona. Tempe housewife Patricia Fullinwider is attacking his votes on public service jobs and environmental issues.

Democrats think they have a good chance of beating Elford Cederberg, who would otherwise become Republican dean of the House. They say his central Michigan district is one of a number across the country with steadily growing Democratic registration.

Republicans and Democrats agree the only incumbent almost sure to lose is freshman Utah Democrat Allan T. Howe, who was convicted of soliciting sex from two policemen posing as prostitutes.

Republican strategists say they have some chance of beating Texas Democrat John Young, who denied a secretary's assertions that she was paid for sex, and California Democrat Robert L. Leggett, who says a Justice Department investigation will clear him of bribery allegations.

Rep. Martha Keys, D-Kan., has a tough race, not because she got divorced while in office, but because she then married Indiana Rep. Andrew Jacobs. The Republican camp claims that puts her state loyalty in question.

In another husband-wife situation, House Democratic Campaign Chairman James C. Corman's wife is running in a nearby California district and he's said publicly he doesn't like the idea.

Mrs. Corman is running against Republican Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. and is given little chance of winning.

Democrats still rate Pennsylvania their best state, saying they have an even chance of winning four Republican seats there. They think they can win three more in Michigan.

Republicans think they can win three Democratic seats each in Missouri, Illinois and New York and two each in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Iowa and Wisconsin.

Regardless of the Democratic-Republican lineup, the election is sure to change the House's philosophical complexion with another big class of freshmen.

Retirements already assure at least 52 freshmen on the heels of the 92 elected last time. The last batch of freshmen threw out three committee chairmen and crippled the House seniority system.

With election upsets, the next freshman class could be close to 100 members and that would put nearly half the 435 House seats in the hands of junior members.

But women and blacks are unlikely to make any gains.

Three of the 19 women House members are leaving and only two new women candidates have a good chance of winning.

None of the 17 black House members is leaving or is in much danger of losing, but no new black candidates have a good chance to win, either.

Low Key Campaign By Eure Against Spaulding

By NOEL YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Asa Spaulding Jr., Republican candidate for secretary of state, is the first black ever to run for statewide office as a major party candidate.

Spaulding, a 42-year-old Durham businessman, is seeking to unseat Thad Eure, self-proclaimed "oldest rat in the Democratic barn." Eure, who is 76, has held the office since 1936.

In his campaign speeches, Spaulding, 42, has promised to revitalize the office of secretary of state. Noting that Eure would be 81 at the end of another term, Spaulding said that if Eure "hasn't given any new leadership for the last 40 years, there's no reason to expect a drastic change over the next four years."

Although he was given a mild scare in the Democratic primary when State Rep. George Breece, D-Cumberland, won 47.2 per cent of the vote, Eure has run a low-key campaign, doing what he has done in past elections, tending to his office duties, appearing before some Democratic groups, calling friends around the state and using some of the political green stamps that he has collected during 40 years in office.

Eure, who has seldom been extended during his long incumbency, likes to joke that some years ago a Republican opponent who died before the election got over 500,000 votes. "I have no plans to retire," Eure says. "My health is good. I just promise to continue my same sort of courtesy, efficiency and integrity."

Spaulding, who split politically with his prominent Democratic family in 1972, says that if elected he would take a more activist role than Eure has ever taken in influencing the course of state government.

"Now, as never before the secretary of state must begin to furnish more meaningful and significant input to government if he is going to be able to improve the overall governmental process," Spaulding told an interviewer.

"The state needs more enlightened, dynamic, creative leadership in the 1970s," said Spaulding, adding that the secretary of state should play a key role.

The principal responsibilities of the secretary of state include licensing out-of-state corporations; registering, regulating licensing securities dealers and salesmen; central filing under the Uniform Commercial code; registering trademarks; safeguarding the original state constitution and issuing various publications, such as the North Carolina Manual.

Eure had served as mayor of his home town of Winton, as representative of Hertford County in the General Assembly and as principal clerk of the House for four sessions when he ran for secretary of state in 1936. He defeated the incumbent Stacey Wade, in the Democratic primary.

Investigate Job Benefits

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The state Employment Security Commission (ESC) office in Charlotte says it is investigating about 400 unemployment benefits claims for possible fraud.

The job-service manager in the office, Dwight Leonard, says he understands about 2,000 claims are being investigated statewide.

Leonard said the most common examples of fraud are persons saying they are available for work when they are not, and reporting they are not working when they are.

Some information that alerts ESC officials to possible fraud comes from tips from outsiders that someone is working and drawing unemployment at the same time.

Other tips come from claims takers, who detect possible frauds during interview with claimants.

Some fraud is detected during spot checks of claims in the ESC's computers at the state capital in Raleigh. The computer cross checks statements by claimants against payroll records.

Before the recession, the ESC estimated that that one-half of one per cent of all claimants were filing improperly. The agency thinks the number probably increased during the recession simply because the overall number of claims increased.

Claim Public Hearings Would Be Duplication

RALEIGH (AP) — The three major power companies in North Carolina say that a public hearing on the safety of nuclear power plants would duplicate the efforts of federal agencies and further delay construction of the plants.

Representatives of Carolina Power & Light Co., Duke Power Co., and Virginia Electric and Power Co. (VEPCO), outlined their opposition Thursday to the legislative Utilities Review Committee.

The Public Interest Consumer Group (PIRG) asked the committee last month to hold public hearings on the issue.

In opposing the hearings, William E. Graham Jr., vice president and general counsel of CP&L, said, "The process is expensive. It is time consuming, and in many instances it has resulted in licensing and construction delays which have increased the costs that consumers must ultimately pay."

Judith E. Kincaid, staff attorney for PIRG, assailed the companies for what she termed "very slick presentations." She told the committee, "I think you have a right to have your questions answered by somebody other than" spokesmen for the power companies.

The committee, comprised of members of the House and Senate, did not reach a decision Thursday. It is trying to determine whether it or the General Assembly should hold hearings on the future of nuclear power.

E.A. Baum, VEPCO's executive manager of licensing and quality control, said, "Any ra-

Tar Heels, Pirates Clash In 'The' Game

TAR HEELS FROM THE EAST — Doug Paschal, left, and Kenny Rogers are two members of the freshman class at North Carolina from this area. Paschal, a tailback, is a former All-Stater from Rose High School, while Rogers is a tight end from Washington. Both may see action Saturday when North Carolina entertains East Carolina.

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

One year ago this weekend, North Carolina Coach Bill Dooley made the statement that "it will not happen again."

He was referring to the 38-17 victory by East Carolina over the Tar Heels.

Since then, East Carolina and North Carolina fans alike have been waiting — to see if it would happen again. Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Kenan Stadium, they get the chance to see.

Perhaps the most surprising thing about the game at this point is that the Pirates are favored. The Bucs come into the game with a 6-0 record on the season, 12 straight wins over the past two seasons, and the number 20 ranking on the Associated Press poll. North Carolina, earlier a member of the Top 20, has bowed in its last two games, and holds a 4-2 record.

But the Tar Heels have played three other teams ranked in the Top 20, beating two of them. They downed Miami of Ohio, 14-10, in the opening game, knocking off the Redskins — who since have not won a game. Then, they beat Florida, 24-21, in the most surprising win of the year. Florida has not lost since then.

After a lackluster win over Northwestern, 12-0, the Heels slipped past Army, 34-32, then fell before Missouri, 24-3, their third nationally ranked opponent. Last week after an open date, the Heels fell before N.C. State, 21-13.

Greenville has been filled with the hoopla that surrounds such awesome contests as this one, but the national ranking and the favorite's role had added to that.

And a little of it worries Coach Pat Dye, who is after his fourth straight win over an Atlantic Coast Conference team — a string that started with last year's win over Carolina.

"We're preparing no different for this game," Dye said. "The press is making a big thing of it, and our fans are going wild, but we've got to go to it like any other game, and get ready to do what we do best."

Dye said he was unsure how Carolina would approach the game, but he's sure that they'll be ready to play. "We're going to approach it just like all the rest of the games. Blocking and tackling decides it all. Emotion plays a big part, but not as much when both teams are high."

The coach added that there is a fine line in preparing a team — the danger of being too high. "We've only had this problem once, when we played Appalachian last year. I hope we never have it again."

Dye praised Dooley as being a sound, fundamental coach. "He's got an outstanding staff, and they'll have their team ready for a sound game offensively and defensively. They'll have a well-thought-out plan and they'll be ready. It'll be a fight for your life again — a real jaw-to-jaw battle."

Last year, the Tar Heels ran tailback Mike Voight to death, as he carried 42 times for 209 yards. "I hope they don't run him that much this year," Dye said. "They have run their fullback and quarterback more, especially when (Bernie) Menapace is at quarterback." While Matt Kupec played most of the game at quarterback last week, Dye feels both will see a lot of action this week.

Reportedly, bumper stickers printed by Pirate fans after last year's game, telling the score, have been inside the lockers of all the Carolina players since then, a constant reminder of "what will not happen again."

But Dye doesn't feel this will be a big factor in the game. "They have intelligent players just like us, and I don't think any gimmicks will help to get them ready."

Dye sees the contest as one for the "bragging rights in North Carolina."

"We've got a lot of players from North Carolina, just like they do. It's going to be a hell of a lot easier to go home during the holidays and see those home folks if you're a winner," the coach said.

And the game may put to a final end those detractors of the East Carolina program — especially with a Pirate win. "But it's not really a matter of gaining respect as much as it is of maintaining it," Dye said. "I think UNC respects us. We've got to make them and everyone else continue to respect us by doing what we do best every time we line up." Dye also feels that the ranking and the favorite's role will work to UNC's favor. "It's just added incentive to them," he said.

Voight, as he has been for the past two years, is the leading rusher for the Tar Heels, who are averaging 204.8 yards a game on the ground. Voight has 609 yards on the season. Fullback Billy Johnson is next with 153, while his replacement, Bob Loomis has 143. Menapace had 113 and wingback Mel Collins, a questionable starter, has 110.

Kupec leads in passing, hitting 27 of 53 for 340 yards. Menapace has 21 of 44 for 218 yards. Only five Tar Heel passes have been picked off. The Heels average 93 yard passing, giving them a 297.8 yard total offense mark.

Defensively, the Heels have allowed 392.7 yards a game, 194 on the ground and 198.7 through the air. Eddie Hicks lead the Pirate rushing with 515 yards, followed by Willie Hawkins with 448. Fullback Raymond Jones had 337 and quarterback Mile Weaver, 268. Weaver has hit 21 of 46 passes for 333 yards.

Defensively, the Bucs are allowing just 190.2 yards a game, including 97.3 per game on the ground, both high national figures. East Carolina has given up 92.8 yards a game passing.

In the most important phases, however, Carolina is scoring 16.7 points a game, and allowing 18.0. East Carolina is scoring 29.8 and allowing 8.8.

Turnovers played a big role in last year's game, as the Bucs picked off three interceptions and recovered four fumbles. Dye expects such events to play a big role in this year's game.

Both teams are going to be ready to play, no doubt about that," he said. "It'll all boil down to who makes the fewest mistakes."

Some 50,000 people will be in Kenan Stadium to see if "it" happens again.

Pinkney Still Kiddled About Call At Carolina

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Three years ago, East Carolina was going into the final minutes against the University of North Carolina. The Pirates held a 27-21 lead in a game most said they'd never be in.

The Tar Heel quarterback went back to pass. It was a deep one, near the 10-yard line. The receiver and the East Carolina defender went up as one, and the ball bounced away. Then, fluttering in like a yellow vulture came a flag. Pass interference on East Carolina. A first down. And a touchdown followed, giving Carolina a 28-27 win.

The East Carolina defender was Reggie Pinkney — a freshman then, and a senior now. Since then, he's seen the Pirates come back with last year's 38-17 win. He'd like to see another win this weekend over the Tar Heels.

"Some of the guys still tease me about the call," Pinkney said. "They've told me that if it gets close that they don't want none of that. We laugh about it now, but if it is close, we know that flag is likely to go that way."

Pinkney, who has learned a lot since then, says he tries not to think about the play. "I've matured a lot since then," he added.

Surprisingly, it hasn't given him a lot of extra incentive toward this week's game. "I'm just living for the whole year," he said, "not just this game. This game won't decide our season. We want to win the Southern Conference championship, so we've got to beat the people inside the conference.

"Of course, we'll have a better chance of a bowl bid if we win this one, but if we do lose, we'll keep our heads up and get stronger."

Pinkney was recruited by former Pirate coach Sonny Randle, who told him he'd have a good chance to start as a freshman in the defensive secondary. Sure enough, he got the job.

Now, under Coach Pat Dye, his career is coming to a close. And it has been a fine career. While Jim Bolding has gotten the lion's share of the spotlight, Pinkney had done his job. "I've picked off 14 or 15 now (interceptions). That's a big thrill."

"We have a little contest between us (the secondary) on every game to see who can get the most interceptions and run them back the furthest. Our defense is stopping the run better this year, and that's forcing the opponents to go to the air more — giving us a better chance to pick one off."

Pinkney feels that this is going to be a banner year for the Pirates. "Coach Dye has really gotten things together now for us. I'm glad it's my senior year, too, cause it puts me in somewhat of the role of a leader."

Reggie downplayed the first national ranking received this week by the Pirates. "It's nice, but like Coach Dye said, it could be gone next week. Everybody is not really excited about it now."

Off the field, Reggie says he doesn't have much more activity than working toward graduation. "I want to get my diploma next spring. And I'd like to try pro football next year. Several scouts have seen me, so I think I might get a chance. Otherwise, I'd like to teach and coach."

So it's back to Chapel Hill tomorrow for Pinkney and company. And he'll be watching to be sure there are no flags against him.

Now, Reggie, was it interference? "Well, there are different interpretations by officials. I've looked at the films over and over.

"To the day I die, I say it wasn't."

Jim Bolding of East Carolina led college football with 10 interceptions last season.

Hondo Still There As NBA Season Is Opened

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Some things never change. On a day when the New York Nets were shipping the heart and soul of their franchise down the turnpike to Philadelphia and when 13-time All-Star Jerry West was finding out what it was like to coach, it was up to the classy captain of the Boston Celtics to lend some sense of order to it all.

So John Havlicek scored 32 points, including six in the last three minutes of regulation play and eight in overtime, and sank his final eight shots as the Celtics rallied to beat the Indiana Pacers 129-122 in one of four National Basketball Association openers Thursday night. "That's him," marveled Indiana Coach Bobby Leonard. "He's been doing that all his life. That's what makes him one of the greatest."

In other NBA openers, the New York Knicks trimmed the Los Angeles Lakers 102-97, the Houston Rockets beat the Atlanta Hawks 120-104 and the Buffalo Braves defeated the Milwaukee Bucks 133-112.

As for NBA debuts, it was mostly negative. Indiana, one of four teams absorbed from the American Basketball Association, was a loser. Among new coaches, West, of the Lakers, and Hubie Brown of the Hawks were losers, while Tates Locke of the Braves and Tom Nissalke of the Rockets were winners.

The Celtics, defending NBA champions, trailed by 18 points in the second period, when Boston center Dave Cowens picked up his fifth personal foul. But they closed to 63-57 at halftime and finally caught up on a basket by Sidney Wicks with 4:11 left.

The teams then traded baskets until Havlicek's jumper with 49 seconds left sent the game into overtime. Havlicek then hit two baskets in the first two minutes of overtime as the Celtics broke it open.

Charlie Scott added 28 points for Boston, Jo Jo White had 23 and Wicks had 21 in his debut with the Celtics. Billy Knight topped Indiana with 29.

Knicks 102, Lakers 97
Bill Bradley scored all 16 of his points in the second half and Jim McMillian, playing his first game for the Knicks, got 16 of his 18 after intermission as New York erased a 10-point third-quarter deficit.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led Los Angeles with 29 points and 17 rebounds.

Rockets 120, Hawks 104
Mike Newlin scored 33 points and Rudy Tomjanovich added 20 — including 14 in the fourth quarter and 11 in a row — as Houston took command by outscoring Atlanta 65-49 in the second half.

Braves 133, Bucks 112
Buffalo made up for the absence of three-time scoring champion Bob McAdoo, out with a back injury, by getting 23 points from John Shumate, 22 from Ernie DiGregorio and 21 from reserve Johnny Neumann.

Panel Sees Blue Day For Heels

Our comment a week or so ago of the upsets that were likely to occur didn't—at least until this past week. Then, they came hot and heavy. It wiped us out. Our high school picks could come up with only a 4-3 record, dropping us to 36-14. And on the panel, we fell to 5-6-1, and barely clung to first place in the standings.

Tom Baines with a 9-2-1 mark recovered from the basement to pull into a tie, along with George Holland for first, all three of us tied at 50-18-4. The rest tightened up too. Jack Whichard is next at 49-19-4, with Joe Jenkins and Barbara Mathews at 48-20-4.

More shifting is likely to occur this week. There are a few important high school games on tap we must look at before getting to the panel.

The most important one is the collision between Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central. Both are unbeaten in Eastern Carolina Conference play and with just two games left after this week, the winner of the game is likely to win the league championship.

Both teams will be sky-high for this (when aren't they when these two collide?). It will be quite a battle, and when the smoke clears, we see Farmville Central on top.

C. B. Aycock visits Conley as the Vikings try to even their record and hold hopes of a winning season. The Falcons may be down after losing their first league game, but they could be ready to take it out on Conley. We'll go with Aycock in this one.

In the other Eastern Carolina game, North Pitt is at Greene Central. The Rams have put it together a little more than the Panthers have. Looks like Greene Central here.

Edenton visits Williamston as the Tigers try to make up for their loss to Ahoskie last week. A victory is a must if the Tigers are to have any chance at the title. It looks like it could develop into quite a game, but now I can only see Edenton winning.

Woody's Ramblin's

BY WOODY PEELE

Finally, Lee Woodard visits Roanoke. The Redskins have it together now, and will take this one for their fourth straight victory.

Our panel may have more disagreement this week than at any other time. No two picks are alike from top to bottom.

Two things are unanimous, however. Those are picks in the Rose High School and East Carolina University games.

The Rampants are suffering through their worst season in years, and things do not look a lot brighter. This could be the week that they bounce back. Then, again... Oh, well, it's a 6-0 vote in favor of Northern Nash.

On the other hand, East Carolina is going through one of its best seasons to date. Only two ECU teams have ever won their first seven games, and just three others have posted 6-0 starts. You have to go way back to 1953 to find the last 7-0 start, and the other was in 1941.

The Bucs face tough North Carolina, but there's a 6-0 vote on the panel—all for the Pirates.

Other consensus winners are: The Citadel over Air Force; Richmond over Furman; William & Mary and Ohio; a toss-up; Maryland over Duke; Arkansas and Houston, a toss-up; Appalachian and Ball State, a toss-up; Delaware over VMI; State over Clemson; Wake over Virginia; and Colorado over Iowa State.

Sparky Really Believed Reds Could Win It All In Seven Games

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven games ago, Sparky Anderson knew it would take only seven games for his Cincinnati Reds to become baseball champions of the world.

The first of those seven came in Philadelphia. The Reds, winners of the National League's West Division, were playing the Phillies, the best of the East.

"I said to myself then that if we beat (pitcher) Steve Carlton in the first game, we'd win seven straight," Anderson recalled.

The Reds did beat Carlton. Then they beat Philadelphia again... and again. That was the National League pennant.

Then came the New York Yankees, who had just won the American League flag in an exhausting five-game series with Kansas City.

The Reds beat the Yanks. Then they beat them again... and again... and again. Seven games later, the Reds were No. 1 for the second straight year.

Thursday night's clincher

by Washington's Goose Goslin.

Munson batted .529 in the Series, far above any other Yankees starter. New York as a whole hit a paltry .222 to the Reds' .313.

In the first inning, Munson singled and scored on Chris Chambliss' double. In the fifth, Mickey Rivers singled, stole second and scored on Munson's single.

But each time the Yanks got a run, the Reds got more.

In the fourth inning, Joe Morgan walked and stole second with such ease that Munson didn't even bother throwing. With two out, George Foster singled him home. Then Bench unloaded on an Ed Figueroa fastball and sent it soaring down the left-field line. It hit the foul screen in front of the upper deck and the Reds led 3-1.

"Yeah, I knew it was out," Bench said. "But at first I didn't know if it was going to be fair. The way I hit it, though, as soon as it started straightening out, I figured it was good. I stood watching it at the plate — not because I didn't want to have to walk back, but just to make sure."

In the ninth, with the Yanks down by just one run, the Reds demolished any hopes they had of making a comeback.

Tony Perez walked, then Dan Driessen did, too. In came Dick Tidrow, replacing Figueroa. One out later, Bench hit his second homer, a line drive a couple of rows back in the lower left-field seats.

"Tidrow had gotten me out in the third game with a slider, gotten me to hit into a double play with it, so I was thinking slider," Bench said. "That's what he threw and I really got into it."

A few minutes earlier, Yankees Manager Billy Martin had gotten out of it. The game, that is. He was thumbed by NL umpire Bruce Froemming at first RBI.

It may well have been Munson's finest game ever, too. He had four hits, scored one run and drove in the other. His six straight hits over two games tied a Series record set in 1924

ELECTRONIC REALTY ASSOCIATES, INC.

Dear Janie,
I sure like the new place where we live. It's called Lake Ellsworth. We bought a pretty split level house. And the den has a nice fireplace that we sure enjoy in the winter. My bedroom is up stairs and I have it fixed up real neat. There's also a big swimming pool here. This summer we went swimming every day. We had water games in the swimming pool and Stephanie won the little girls race. We have two tennis courts and a big party house. We have a lot of fun riding our bikes and building forts in the woods around us. There are a lot of nice kids out here and were always doing things. Well that's all for now. Come visit us soon.

Your friend,
Anita
