Judge Blocks Panama Parleys

ANCON, C.Z. (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Guthrie F. Crowe has ordered President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to suspend the negotiations with Panama for a new Panama Canal treaty.

The petition charged that the negotiations threaten to infringe, without due process of law, on the property or liberty of some 40,000 Americans living in the Canal Zone or otherwise involved in the operation of the canal.

later today. Crowe's order was also addressed to Ambassador Ellsworth L. Bunker, the senior American representative in the negotiations. Drummond's petition named the three as defendants, charging they unlawfully assumed powers belonging to Congress.

Bunker returned to Washington Tuesday after a week of talks with Panamanian Foreign Minister Aquilino Boyd. The United States and Panama have been discussing for more than a decade an agreement to replace the 1903 treaty that gave the United States perpetual ownership of the canal it built across Panama and about five miles of territory on either side of the waterway. The zone totals 559 square miles. Kissinger and the Panamanian government signed a statement of principles in 1974 governing further negotiations on a new treaty. The statement said Panama will assume total responsibility for canal operations when the new treaty ends, but since then negotiators have not been able to agree on how long the new treaty should run. The United States reportedly wants to retain control until the year 2025, while Panama wants to take over by the end of this century.

Industrial Park's Plat Is Approved

After weeks of controversy over the provision of water and sewer services to Tucker Industrial Park on NC 11, the problem has been resolved and approval has been given to the subdivision's preliminary plat by the Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission.

GUCO director Charles Horne reported last night that the plan for the development now shows that the services will be provided by Greenville. He pointed out that provision of the services is the first phase of a master plan for the quadrant of land north of the Pitt Tech area.

North Carolina Natural Gas Corp. has filed suit against the city, and others, seeking $10,000 in damages as a result of alleged easement encroachments caused by the development of Phase One of Courtney Square Limited here.

Says No Move To Undermine Leaf Program

Robert Long, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture for Conservation, Research and Education spoke here Thursday morning at the monthly meeting of the Pitt County Agri-Business Association.

ROBERT LONG

Long outlined various aspects of the Ford administration's policy on agriculture and answered a number of questions during the meeting. He told newsmen following the session that the policies of former Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz are "well entrenched and will be followed" but emphasized that there is no move within the department of Agriculture to do away with the present tobacco program. "There is no wish on the part of the Administration to change the program," he said adding the "urban-oriented Congress" might take action to alter the program. Long did say that the administration is concerned with the over-supply of low grade tobacco now being held by the government, but indicated that that is a "marketing problem" and said a series of meetings, scheduled to begin in December, have been set in an effort to spur ideas from the tobacco industry on how best to meet the problem.

NO SCHOOL FRIDAY

Pitt County students will not attend school Friday so that teachers and administrators can attend the North Carolina Association of Educators (NCAE) meeting in Greenville, according to Pitt County School Superintendent Ott Alford.

District Demos Gather In Washington; Hear 'Straight Ticket' Plea

By STUART SAVAGE

WASHINGTON — First Congressional District Democrats rallied here last night to hear such notables as Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, Judy Carter — daughter-in-law of presidential nominee Jimmy Carter — Sen. Robert Morgan and Congressman Walter Jones urge voting a straight Democratic ballot in Tuesday's election.

Hunt, said, "I think we have as fine a slate of candidates for state and national office as the Democrat party has ever fielded." He said First District Congressman Walter Jones, who is seeking re-election, is "the most effective legislator I have ever known."

$100,000 Fire At Lumber Yard

BELMONT, N.C. (AP)—Fire of undetermined origin swept through the Belmont Lumber Co. early today. Gaston County fire officials said damage could exceed $100,000. Seven fire departments from the county fought the fire for about five hours. Officials said one large building, two smaller structures and a pickup truck were destroyed. They said that lumber lost in the blaze could raise the damage estimate considerably.

Judy Carter, the Democratic presidential candidate's daughter-in-law told the audience, "We are very confident in the Carter campaign that Jimmy Carter is going to be the next president of the United States... made possible because of people like you." She said Carter is just like people from Eastern North Carolina... a farmer, businessman, a deacon in his church, a southerner. Mrs. Carter said the thing that's important, "... get those people to the polls on November 2." She added, "just hang on until next Tuesday... there is no end to the change," or the "goodness this country can be. We're going to have that victory."

Ad Held A Violation Of Law; Won't Prosecute

RALEIGH (AP) — An ad placed in a Raleigh newspaper apparently by the President Ford Committee violated state law by misrepresenting Jimmy Carter's position on capital punishment, Dist. Atty. Burley Mitchell said today. However, Mitchell said he does not plan to prosecute since the state does not have jurisdiction over the committee and the violation is a misdemeanor under North Carolina law. "No state will serve another's misdemeanor warrants, nor will any state grant extradition in misdemeanor cases," Mitchell said in a prepared statement. He added he was forwarding copies of the complaint from the North Carolina Carter Campaign Committee to the U.S. attorney general and Federal Elections Commission to determine what, if any, federal laws had been violated by publication of the advertisement. Mitchell said it appears that "responsibility for placing the ad in The News and Observer rests with the national campaign headquarters of the President Ford Committee, together with its chairman, James A. Baker III, and its national treasurer."

The President Ford Committee, James A. Baker, III; Royston C. Hughes, treasurer. Mitchell said the ad in The News and Observer Tuesday morning "clearly constituted a violation of North Carolina criminal law by misrepresenting Mr. Carter's position on capital punishment..." Mitchell said the violation was "either intentionally or in reckless disregard for the truth and with the intent to influence the outcome of the Nov. 2 election." He said that under state law, a violation carries a maximum penalty of two years imprisonment and an unlimited fine. He said "it would be useless for me to investigate this matter further or refer it to any other agency of the state." The ad stated, among other things, Carter "says we've got to attack crime, but all he offers are warmed-over liberal notions, and comes out against capital punishment." Jim Blackburn, press secretary for the Carter Campaign Committee in the state, said Carter has consistently been for capital punishment. He said that when Carter was governor of Georgia he signed a legislative bill authorizing a capital punishment law which has been upheld by the U.S. Supreme court.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

DANGEROUS RR CROSSING

After two fatal car-train accidents in as many weeks and many near misses, I am amazed we as citizens tolerate all the unmarked railroad crossings around Greenville. With the continued growth of Greenville, we will surely have more deaths. How many more must die before we finally install the lights? Please review in your column how interested citizens can get appropriate railroad crossings marked with electrical lights. R. M.

Hotline doesn't know much that interested citizens can do, except perhaps to let their legislators know that they consider railroad crossings especially important in the total traffic safety picture.

Division Highway Engineer Gerald England has promised to find out for Hotline just which crossings in Pitt County, if any are included in the top 200 crossings in the state to be signaled. This priority list is made up by computer, based on number of cars crossing track, number of trains crossing, number of accidents, number of fatalities, quality of sight distance, and the like.

You are not the only person concerned about this problem. Hotline has had close to a dozen calls about the same matter since the weekend.

A HOTLINE APPEAL

LOOKING FOR JOGGER

Mrs. Elizabeth Phillips has asked Hotline to appeal for contact with a man who her nephew narrowly avoided hitting on Memorial Drive about 10 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 9 (the last night of the Pitt County Fair).

The man, who was jogging near the Memorial Drive-Farmville Boulevard intersection at the time of the near-accident, stopped and attempted to defend Mrs. Phillips' nephew to a highway patrolman who was charging him with reckless driving. Now Mrs. Phillips is hoping the jogger can further corroborate her nephew's account of the incident. She would like for the man to call her at either 756-6389 or 752-0572.

Explains Concern Was The Basis Of Candidacy

By JERRY RAYNOR

Mrs. Evelyn Sills Tyler, Republican candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction, explained that "my candidacy was in a sense thrust on me."

Campaigning in Greenville on Wednesday, the widow and former Greenville resident said she is seeking the office primarily because of her concern for better education, "but my basic decision to run hinged on the fact that otherwise Craig Phillips would have gone back into office through default, unopposed."

In what she termed a "complicated series of events" following the primary defeat of Democratic aspirant Ben Currin, "as a Democrat, I worked hard for Phil Kirk, the Republican candidate. When Kirk withdrew from the campaign, it turned out that if there was to be a challenger to

Phillips, it had to be me." Having made the decision to run for the office, Mrs. Tyler registered as a Republican candidate "at the last minute on Currently a member of the State Board of Education, she has behind her 18 years of classroom teaching, plus service on a number of educational bodies, including two years as president of the Association of Classroom Teachers. She is a graduate of East Carolina University with a major in primary education and a minor in library science. "I've been accused a long time of being a political person," Mrs. Tyler commented. "I want to say that if expounding one's basic beliefs is political, then I'm certainly a political person."

Among issues she talked about in an interview prior to her scheduled afternoon appearance at Wahl-Coates School were: Improving basic skills of students in reading and writing. "I feel strongly that across the state there's generally no

Bottle Collecting Is Growing Hobby Here

By MICHAEL R. FRANCO
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Old bottles cluttering up your attic could be worth a lot of money.

"People could have some really valuable items just sitting around, and they don't realize it," says Dr. Burton Spiller, a leading antique bottle collector.

Nearly an entire wall in the living room of Spiller's cozy suburban Brighton apartment is covered with a well-lighted display of bottles.

"Most of those were found in somebody's attic," said the soft-spoken 41-year-old orthodontist in an interview. "Attic bottles are often the best kind because they are usually better preserved."

Spiller said the hobby has been growing steadily since 1959, when the nation's first bottle collecting club was formed on the West Coast.

"Bottle collecting is now the third most popular collecting hobby, right behind stamps and coins," he said.

The first national bottle collectors convention, in St. Louis in August, was a huge success:

"We had about 1,500 exhibitors and had 3,000 paid admissions in two days," Spiller said.

The mystery surrounding each bottle's past most fascinates collectors.

"You can let your mind wander about where the bottle has been, which tables it sat on and who drank from it," he said, beaming with enthusiasm.

"The little imperfections make you realize that human hands worked on them. Each bottle has a character of its own."

Spiller bought his first old bottle, a flask, at a flea market in 1961.

His collection contains all types of bottles, but he said many collectors specialize in such things as whiskey flasks, beer or soda bottles.

He has accumulated nearly 500 bottles, but does not have enough room in his home to display them all at once. He rotates the assortment in his living room to keep them all in circulation.

"It's a constant upgrading process," he said. "I try to improve my collection through buying, selling and trading."

Spiller has colored bottles, figural bottles shaped like men, women, children, animals and buildings; bottles for bitters, old-fashioned patent medicines, whisky, wine, beer, soda, pickles, perfumes, fruit and flasks commemorating historical events.

Color, rarity, shape, age and crudeness are all important to bottle collectors.

"For instance, some people think that age is the most important thing, but I'd rather have a slightly newer bottle with an interesting label than a very old, but very ordinary bottle."

Spiller is particularly interested in a bottle's "... crudeness, that uneven bottom or blemish that makes you realize there isn't another like it."

Most collectables were made in the 19th century, before the invention of the fully automatic bottle-making machine.

Particularly old and valuable ones often have pontil marks. Pontils were rods used in pre-Civil War days. Stuck to the bottom of a still hot, handblown bottle while the bottle was being separated from the blowpipe, a pontil usually left a jagged, rounded depression on the bottom.

Bottle collecting can be quite profitable, Spiller said. He bought one several years ago for $1,800 that now is worth more than $4,000. A Connecticut collector auctioned off one bottle last fall for $26,000 to Edmund and Jayne Blaske of Battle Creek, Mich.

He describes most collectors as "just average Joes who don't have a fortune to spend on bottles," although the demand for old ones has pushed prices up exorbitantly.

"And a lot of very wealthy people have taken it up, pushing up prices even higher." People scour the countryside, sifting through dumps and converging on old homesites for hidden treasures.

1 large egg
12 ounces (1½ cups) dry cottage cheese
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
14 thin pancakes (crepes), each 8 inches in diameter

Beat egg until thickened and lemon color; add remaining ingredients except pancakes and beat just to blend. Put a spoonful of the cheese mixture in the center of each pancake; fold in sides; roll. Fry, turning once, in a generous amount of butter in a large skillet until lightly browned. Serve with sour cream and preserves.

Nine-inch round and square pans are useful for baking yeast rolls as well as for cakes.

"Certain areas, such as old ravines near former homesites, can be really good," Spiller said. "It's getting very hard to find bottles underground now, since most of them have already been dug up."

Diary Of A Housewife Who Is Going To Put More Romance Into Her Marriage Beginning With Tonight's Dinner:

4:30 p.m. Fred deserves more than he gets. Works like a dog in that Xerox jungle. Up at dawn, the long ride in and back... and what for? Just to make things easier for us. Tonight's going to be different. I'll even cook with unsaturated fat so he'll live longer.

4:45 p.m. Won't he be surprised. I've got all his favorites. Lasagna, red wine and chilled forks and plates to go with the salad. Never knew a man could be so paranoid about serving salad on a plate that comes steaming out of the dishwasher. So I'll indulge him.

5:00 p.m. Let's see, have I forgotten anything? Salt and pepper on the table, glasses that match and I gave the fork that fits the overbite to one of the kids.

5:30 p.m. Poor Fred. Cooped up all day with that dingy secretary who still wears her typing pin with the 30 on it. There's something wrong with a secretary when I call my husband and she asks me to spell my last name. No wonder he has to work so hard. He's doing the work of two.

5:45 p.m. He's late. Oh well, probably couldn't be helped. My goodness, a wife should be happy her husband works a little overtime. Shows he's ambitious and takes his work seriously. Lucky I understand these things. I'll turn the oven down to 275.

6:00 p.m. You know the trouble with Fred. He's incompetent. Always has been. Some men just cannot estimate how much time a job will take. They're not realistic about themselves. I'm certainly not being unreasonable. It seems to me if everyone else can bust out of there at closing time, so could Fred... if he wanted to.

6:15 p.m. Close that oven door! What do you mean, "What is it?"

It's lasagna with hardening of the mozzarella... just the way your father likes it!

6:35 p.m. It's funny. I never wanted to get married. Anyone whose first words were "Room Service" should never have been forced into marriage in the first place.

7:00 p.m. He's doing this just to annoy me. When I called him at noon and told him it was going to be a special evening, right then and there he made up his mind to put me in my place. He hung up the phone and said "Hey, Ginger, slow it down. Old whatshername is doing the Cosmopolitan number tonight." I just bet they had a big laugh over that!

7:10 p.m. There's his car in the driveway now. Listen to that. He just slammed his door in slow motion. You can tell. "Hi Honey."

"SHUT UP AND SIT DOWN!"

Does Youngster Have A Problem?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A handsome little fellow in our neighborhood has been pretending that he is a dog ever since he was a toddler, and now he is nearly kindergarten age.

He doesn't just "pretend" he's a dog, he actually ACTS like one. He makes barking and whining sounds just like his dog. I think he would eat and sleep with his dog if he were allowed to.

It is not the normal love of a boy for his dog, Abby. I asked him why he likes to pretend he's a dog, and he said, "Because it's more fun to be a dog!" He cannot talk plainly but he seems intelligent otherwise.

Shouldn't his mother be told that her child may need special guidance or treatment? Sometimes parents are so close to a situation they can't see it. How can I tell her? We are just nodding neighbors.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: It's awkward to go from a nodding acquaintance with your neighbor to a heart-to-heart discussion about her child's development. If you're truly concerned, initiate a closer friendship with her. (P.S. When the child goes to kindergarten, his teacher will surely recognize the problem, if there is one.)

DEAR ABBY: I wish you would please stop sending people to doctors just because they aren't sex maniacs.

My husband, at 58, mind you, started listening to all those sex-crazy men at work and decided that something must be wrong with him because he lost interest in sex. Then he went to his doctor who told him that some sex expert named Kinsey took a vote and found out that most men NEVER wear out.

Now, really! I wonder who he asked? Probably a lot of men who were ashamed to tell the truth.

Well, anyhow, this doctor told my husband if he wanted to get his manhood back, he should imagine that he was in bed with a beautiful young woman he had seen in the movies or on TV! How do you like the nerve of that doctor giving my husband permission to think all those filthy, adulterous thoughts while he was in bed with me!

I'm a God-fearing, church-going woman, Abby, and I think that doctor should lose his license for handing out immoral advice. Your opinion, please.

DISGUSTED IN ATLANTA

DEAR DISGUSTED: Although fantasies are a part of every normal person's life, there is a Biblical injunction against "thinking adulterous thoughts." If such advice were given by a preacher, he might lose his license to preach, but doctors aren't preachers.

DEAR ABBY: Seems like many of your female readers are fascinated with silicone. What are they trying to prove?

I live in a city that thinks it needs to be bigger. They put up large, cheap buildings that make the city look bigger. But it's still the same old city—only its troubles are magnified.

In other words, bigger isn't necessarily better. A gentle, modest curve beneath a sweater remains alluring, and realness in personality and everything else is more appealing than affectations.

Helped Guide Downtown Plans

The work of the Central Business District Advisory Committee is not always well known, but the committee has helped guide the revitalization of the downtown area.

E. Hoover Taft, Jr. stepped down as chairman of the committee Wednesday and Wade Trask, a merchant on the mall, was named as new chairman.

Taft reported that Phase one of the downtown improvement project is nearly complete. This included the construction of the mall on what was Evans Street between Fifth and Third and street improvements in the downtown area.

Taft urged the committee to continue with the second part of the program which involves rehabilitation of business buildings and development of parking facilities. Of course much has already been done on improving buildings in the downtown area and parking should be developed as space is cleared for it.

Taft also urged the committee to continue working with the city on street improvements, specifically the bridge at Pitt Street and the widening of Dickinson Avenue and Evans Street.

The CBD is a committee of 20 businessmen and property owners. They serve as advisors to the Redevelopment Commission in reviewing the redevelopment plans.

The committee has been active as the downtown work has been carried out and no doubt members who have served on the committee are now taking pride in the way the downtown area is developing.

New Middle School Is Major Addition

Another important educational facility has been added in Pitt County with the completion of the Farmville Middle School.

The $1.7 million facility was dedicated in ceremonies Tuesday night. Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, told the audience, "The real dedication of this building is in the hearts and minds of the students."

Enough said.

THIS AFTERNOON

Hidden Disasters Waiting

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — North Carolina is literally covered with hidden disasters waiting on a chance to happen.

Members of a legislative study commission probing local building inspection systems are alarmed at evidence of shoddy construction, nonexistent inspection programs in some areas, and a failure by some builders to comply with the state's mandatory building codes.

"All kinds of things can happen, and do happen; houses burn the first night the family builds a fire in the fireplace; the chimney was put together with no flu liner and you can see daylight through the mortar cracks.

"Sewer pipes run through floors and empty into dirt beneath the houses, not even connected to a septic tank or sewer line," says Kern Church, chief of the building code division of the Department of Insurance.

Major Trouble But Church's bigger concern is with the potential major disaster — the rural churches built by local hands without inspection or even assistance from qualified architect or engineer; the shopping centers in outlying areas put up by a single owner without attention to building codes or inspection.

In 1959 snow covered the state with depths of six to eight inches. Fifty roofs collapsed, says Church, even though that is not a lot of snow and a roof should hold twice that.

Fortunately, no deaths resulted. But the next time, officials fear, we may not be so lucky.

Members of the study commission — legislators, local building experts, engineers, builders — have zeroed in on at least two particular areas for attention and are now drafting proposed legislation for consideration by the 1977 General Assembly.

One needed step, the commission decided, is specialized training for local building inspectors. Most urban communities have competent inspectors. Non-urban inspectors, the commission found and reported recently, are "Not highly regarded in many communities. Inadequate salaries are provided, technical training is not encouraged, and the inspector may be called upon to perform duties unrelated to building inspection.

"In many communities, inspectors are not required to demonstrate even minimal skills in order to obtain or maintain their jobs."

Training

The commission will seek statewide training through the Community College system, but members recognize that even though properly trained, local governments will not be able to employ competent inspectors unless salaries are increased greatly.

State Rep. Thomas W. Ellis, Jr., D-Henderson, co-chairman of the study commission, thinks the state should not impose salary minimums, but "entice cooperation . . . train the people and make them available, then offer to help local governments pay them at the outset while gradually withdrawing the aid over several years."

But even with trained, better salaried inspectors, members of the commission feel a major shortcoming is that while North Carolina has a statewide building code, it is not uniformly enforced, and inspection is non-existent in many areas.

Some move to require local inspection — even if on a multi-county basis where not enough activity is underway to warrant a fulltime inspection program for a single county — must be considered. But some see the builder as the root of the problem: a contractor who plans to rip somebody off will accomplish that even if there is an inspector in every community.

Somewhere down the road, some legislators believe, protection for the public may come through stiff penalties levied against contractors who violate the building codes, and through posting of bonds to guarantee compliance.

A survey of members of the statewide Association of County Commission presented recently by Ellis showed most favor required inspection programs (23 for, 18 against); most favored minimum training and qualification standards for inspectors (39 for, six against), but most reject the idea of state-set minimum salaries (three for, 38 against).

A Death By Regulation

Let me voice a word of thanks to Henry G. Grabowski. He is a professor of economics at Duke University. He has just written a little book that speaks volumes about the meaning of next Tuesday's election.

This was not the gentleman's intention. In point of fact, his long essay has nothing whatever to do with politics or presidents. His work is entitled, "Drug Regulation and Innovation: Empirical Evidence and Policy Options." The title was compounded by the folks who make Somnax, but the study sets a train of thought in motion.

What Grabowski has done is to take a long, slow look at the American pharmaceutical industry over the past 26 years. He summarizes the research of other scholars, and he adds some insights of his own. He lays out the evidence on which a judgment may be formed:

Our ethical drug industry, once the greatest in the world, is slipping into slow death by regulation.

The past quarter century, in this regard, may be divided into two periods—the 13 years from 1950 through 1962, and the 13 years from 1963 through 1975. The first period, Grabowski notes, has been characterized as "the golden period of pharmaceutical innovation and discovery." In that 13-year period, 703 new chemical entities won approval from the Food and Drug Administration. The average was 54 a year.

In the second 13-year period, 212 NCEs were approved. The average was 16.

What happened? In 1962, Congress went into a panic at the thalidomide horror story. Galvanized by the image of the drug-deformed infants, Congress added the Kefauver amendments to the basic Food and Drug act. The new law required the FDA to pass not only on the safety but also on the efficacy of all prescription drugs.

The intention was good. The result was disaster. Grabowski states the case with professional mildness. His own studies, and those of other investigators, persuade him that the 1962 act "had a significant negative effect on the rate of innovation." The amendments must be regarded as "one of the principal factors responsible for the observed decline" in the development of new pharmaceuticals.

Let me put it more bluntly. The Kefauver amendments of 1962 produced a classic case of the liberal syndrome at work. The drug industry fell victim to all the wasting, debilitating symptoms of bureaucratic infection. The cost of developing a new drug application soared out of sight. Delays mounted in processing from a few months to a few years. Prior to 1962, U.S. firms introduced more than one-third of all the new drugs in the world; they now introduce less than one-sixth.

It is enormously difficult to prove that a new drug is absolutely safe and absolutely effective. Risks always are present—and risk is abhorrent to the bureaucratic mind. "The FDA official stands to bear heavy personal costs if there is a bad outcome from the approval of a new drug, but he receives little of the benefits of a good outcome." In any uncertain situation, government tends to err on the side of caution and delay. Innovation struggles in red tape.

Does the consumer benefit from this excessive solicitude? Grabowski says no, and other scholars agree. Americans are being denied drugs of choice available in other nations; and ironically, these drugs often are safer than those approved for domestic use.

Will we learn anything from the sad experience of drug regulation? Probably not. Jimmy Carter and his liberal Democratic colleagues are whooping it up for more regulation, more

WASHINGTON (AP) — Minority enrollment in the nation's colleges and universities rose 11.7 per cent between 1972 and 1974, with major strides in private colleges and universities, the U.S. Office for Civil Rights announced today.

The government survey showed that white enrollment in public institutions actually decreased during the two years, from 3,986,450 to 3,964,292. White enrollment in private schools rose modestly from 1,405,862 to 1,448,368.

Minority students represented 11.9 per cent of the total higher education enrollment in 1972 and 13.1 per cent in 1974.

During the two-year period, black enrollments in private schools increased by 27.9 per cent, Spanish-surnamed by 105.4 per cent, Asian-Americans by 33.7 per cent and American Indians by 6.4 per cent, the agency said.

Total minority enrollment in 1974 was 587,835 in public institutions and 227,301 in private institutions.

Across the board, American Indian enrollments were up 2.3 per cent from 33,919 to 34,692; blacks up 19.2 per cent from 489,496 to 539,500; Asian Americans up 8.7 per cent from 67,662 to 73,527; and Spanish-surnamed up 20.8 per cent from 138,631 to 167,417.

The one exception to the trend was in graduate schools, where enrollments of American Indians and Asian Americans declined over-all.

In private professional schools, American Indian enrollment rose the fastest although the actual numbers of Standing at the base of Bartholdi's famous Statue of Liberty, President Roosevelt today praised the nation's settlers for their love of freedom and said, "we shall continue to build an even better home for liberty."

On the fiftieth anniversary of the beacon, which France gave to American freedom and American peace by making them living facts in a living present, Roosevelt described rededication of the statue to the ideals of freedom.

The ceremony attracted a large number of men well-known in public life. Andre de La Boulaye, French ambassador and grandson of Edouard de La Boulaye, French historian who proposed the statue originally, was guest of honor.

Italy, denouncing Soviet Russia for 20 alleged new violations of the "hands off Spain" agreement, today demanded an investigation to establish the facts.

Dino Grandi, the Italian ambassador to London, made the charges and demands to Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the committee, as it went into session for an afternoon meeting.

Dates and details of the alleged Russian violations were included in the Grandi protest and he asked that the Soviets be called upon for an immediate explanation.

THE NEW YORK STAKES

Voter Turnout Big Factor

By MARTIN WALD
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford count New York State's 41 electoral votes among their prime targets in the closing weeks of the campaign, but local politicians fear that many voters may not notice.

The state campaign organizations, plagued by strict new campaign spending limits and a general voter apathy that makes volunteer workers scarce, have been left with little to do and little money to do it with.

Television advertising and personal appearances by the candidates are at the heart of the campaign, and they are controlled by a central organization. The principal job left to the state parties is getting out the vote and the principal tool they have is volunteers.

Gone are the storefront offices, the buttons and the bumperstickers that make a campaign locally visible and that many politicians say lend an aura of participation and excitement.

"What the press sees as apathy is really a lack of money," said Richard Wade, the college professor who ran Sen. George McGovern's statewide drive in 1972. "New Yorkers really expect a different kind of election than they're getting."

The main battlegrounds of the kind of election New Yorkers will get are likely to be the New York City and Buffalo metropolitan areas — the state's most populous and largest media markets.

Ford partisans are predicting a close race and promise a major effort despite recent polls that show the President trailing.

A poll taken by the Gannett newspapers and Newsday gives 48 per cent to Carter, 40 per cent to Ford and 3 per cent to Eugene McCarthy, who Democrats fear could hurt Carter in a tight contest.

A GOP poll taken at the same time — after the second debate but before the President's first visit here — shows Ford trailing 45-40.

Ford has shown surprising strength in Buffalo, a traditionally Democratic city, and better than average in the Republican suburbs of surrounding Erie County, according to local observers.

But even an extremely good showing there will not be enough to carry the state unless Ford scores an overwhelming victory in the GOP stronghold of Long Island.

With increased TV advertising and a swing through several upstate cities and

Long Island planned, Ford hopes to overcome the better than two-to-one edge the Gannett-Newsday poll says Carter enjoys in New York City.

While Ford is making a special push for the "ethnic" and upstate vote, Carter forces are emphasizing the President's reluctance to grant federal aid during the fiscal crisis last year and his own commitments to financially-ailing cities.

With the race shaping up as a classic New York confrontation between upstate and downstate, between inner-city and suburban-rural voters, the outcome may depend on how well each side gets its own supporters to the polls.

The task may be complicated by severely slashed budgets. Not counting advertising and printing the Republicans spent more than $2 million to carry the state for President Nixon in 1972 and the Democrats spent about $750,000.

Each side has less than $300,000 this time.

The Democrats seem to be

To the editor:

In the Oct. 22 Daily Reflector there was rendering and a brief description of the new Greenville Middle School. There was no indication from the drawing or in the text that any steps had been taken to reduce energy consumption in this new facility. Perhaps the insulation has been increased or some other minor measures have been incorporated that are not visible. However, even if these things have been done, it is not nearly enough.

With the ever-increasing cost of and eventual depletion of fossil fuels, it is short-sighted to build a new structure without a solar energy system. The technology is available and the hardware is on the market now. Many buildings, including schools, have already been built across the country utilizing solar energy and are realizing up to 80 per cent reductions in heating costs.

Obviously the solar energy system will have a higher initial cost since a back-up system must be provided. But our elected and appointed officials should plan for the future beyond the next year or two. Then they could see that the solar system will pay for itself in about seven to 10 years since the building will only need about 25 per cent of the fuel required by a conventional system.

Hopefully the planners, local officials and their advisors will not make such a mistake in the future. The taxpayers of Greenville school get a better investment for their money than has been demonstrated by the Greenville Middle School.

Three Execs Better Than One?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Are you reassured when the corporation in which you invested your money appoints an "office of the presidency," manned by three or four or more high-powered executives?

Some company officers and directors believe you are, which to some degree contributes to the practice, one that emerged during the mid-1950s, reaching a peak a few years ago, and which persists today.

The appointments sometimes are accompanied by statements intended to reassure you that three or four executives are better than one. "Creation of the office," you are told, "permits us to achieve pluralistic decision-making."

Moreover, the announcement might continue, the new office "allows for continuity of managing in the absence of any member," as well as "allowing for specialization of effort."

Nonsense, says Eugene Jennings, professor, author and confidential adviser to corporation presidents. Almost any corporate need can be better met through traditional lines of authority than through an office of the president, he states.

The truth, says Jennings, who has spent more than two decades studying the mobility routes and motives involved in corporate personnel moves, is that creation of the office probably means the existence of serious problems.

The hidden or real reasons, he maintains, might include the notion that several candidates should fight for control when a clear successor is not already apparent, or that, together, several officers might overcome the deficiencies of the chief executive.

Creation of the office also can indicate problems of corporate politics, such as when capable executives, previously left out of the decision-making process, insist on being included.

"The office of the president is a strategy for resolving internal problems in the top executive group or organization," says Jennings. "It usually lasts for three years and is seldom continued after the changing of the guard."

Since 1948, he has found, the largest number of corporations using the technique was in the 1968-1973 period, when at least 23 of the 500 largest industrial corporations were so organized.

Today there are about 11, and this number is dwindling. Among the 23 that existed in the peak period, only four remain today.

Among the ironies of the office is that, in itself, it requires management, sometimes diverting effort from the more effective work of managing the corporation.

There is also the fallacy of equality. A chief executive who names an office of the president is automatically its boss, and sometimes merely uses the office for his own ends.

"An unsure boss who seeks group support should be removed," Jennings insists. "And a boss who has failed to develop successors will not develop them simply because an office has been instituted."

The most effective way of communicating to the investing public that a company is well managed, says Jennings, "is to demonstrate through results that it is better managed."

WHY FEAR DEATH?

It is probably natural for people to fear death. But why should they? As the great artist Michaelangelo once said, "If life is pleasant, death cannot be so bad, for both come from God."

Paul, writing to the Corinthians, looked upon death neither as a fearful circumstance nor a calamity. It was just as much a part of life as being born. From beginning to end the New Testament avers that there is no reason why a person should fear death if throughout his life he has sincerely tried to do the will of God.

Naturally, everyone falls far below God's purpose for his life. What interests God is not our moral achievements but our moral ambitions. It is only when we have ceased to want to please God that we have anything to fear from death. As long as the heart is morally sensitive, God notes the fact and loves us for it. Death is part of His plan for every life. The last chapter is as beautiful and significant as the first, if our faith will only make it so.

Fear Public Support To Fade

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department officials are worried that disclosures of a Justice Department investigation into South Korean lobbying activities could lead to diminished U.S. public support for South Korea's defense.

Furthermore, the disclosures come at a particularly sensitive time. Congressional support for South Korea has been waning because of concern about what is viewed in some quarters as a

Vote To End Crisis Rules

CARRBORO, N.C. (AP) — In what some officials considered a surprise move, the Carrboro Board of Aldermen voted 5-1 Wednesday night to rescind the town's water crisis ordinance.

The decision came in a special meeting called to discuss the possibility of lifting restrictions on commercial car washes. The aldermen decided that, if enough water existed to reopen car washes, all other restrictions should also be lifted.

The restrictive ordinance, providing fines and jail sentences for unnecessary water usage, had been in effect since August when Carrboro and adjoining Chapel Hill were hit with the worst drought on record.

Both towns are supplied by University Lake, which currently is at about 55 per cent capacity, officials said.

Chapel Hill has been under similar restrictions and officials have no intention of lifting them. Mayor James Wallace said upon learning of the board's vote.

Utilities Director Grey Culbreth said he was "astounded" by the board's move and concerned that the action might cause Durham to stop selling water to the Chapel Hill-Carrboro system.

Durham has been selling 2 million gallons of water per day to the towns since the water shortage began.

dictatorial regime there and because of the desire to cut back U.S. forces overseas.

In northeast Asia, the interest of four great powers — the United States, the Soviet Union, China and Japan — all intersect. U.S. acquiescence to any North Korean military conquest of South Korea would, according to officials, have a disastrous effect on Japan.

It would lead to Japanese accommodation with one or both of the superpowers, producing a major shift in the world power balance.

Thus, each American administration since that of President Harry S. Truman has made defense of South Korea a top commitment. But as the South Koreans are well aware, the commitment of an administration means little unless it is shared by Congress.

This explains why the South Korean government has a special interest in how Congress votes on legislation affecting it. Just how far South Korea has gone in its attempts to influence Congress is the subject of the Justice Department investigation.

News reports have quoted investigators as saying that South Korean agents dispensed between $500,000 and $1 million yearly since 1970 in cash and gifts to congressmen and to U.S. officials to ensure that Korean interests are protected in Washington.

As many as 90 former and present members of Congress are reportedly under investigation.

The investigation centers on the activities of a South Korean businessman, Tongsun Park, who reportedly carried out his operations under the direction of President Park Chung-hee.

The South Korean government has denied any connection, past or present, with Tongsun Park.

The State Department has said it is cooperating fully with the Justice Department investigation. A State Department spokesman says U.S. officials have made it clear to the Korean government that allegations of illegal action such as this case involves must be fully investigated "regardless of who might be involved."

South Korea is dependent on Washington's support in much the same way that Israel is. But some officials believe that South Korea's situation is more perilous.

For one thing, South Korea lacks the widespread public support that Israel has in the United States. Furthermore, while Israel's neighbors have shown a willingness to negotiate a settlement recently, South Korea's lone neighbor, North Korea, has not.

Orphaned Children Are Beneficiaries

DALLAS (AP) — Two children whose parents were murdered will be the beneficiaries of a reclusive who died without a family, according to trustees handling the man's estate.

"I believe if old Mr. Gervetch could see Billy and Mary Ann getting his money, he would be smiling," said Frank Haughton, a trust officer at Republic National Bank of Dallas.

Elia Gervetch died Nov. 9, 1975, at 80. He came to the United States from Russia and lived here without family, relatives or friends.

Gervetch had stipulated that his estate go to a organization to help the blind and to two orphan children.

A final decision has not been announced, but trustees of the Gervetch estate at Republic National Bank of Dallas said the children will be Billy Locklear, 3, and Mary Ann Locklear, 2.

Billy and Mary Ann were found last June 15 in their ransacked home, living on bread crumbs. In the house were the bodies of their parents, Billy and Hazel. Police said they apparently had been killed three days earlier. Two men have been charged in the slayings.

The children were placed in the custody of David Bassey of Salado, their father's half-brother, and a final decision on permanent custody is expected in December.

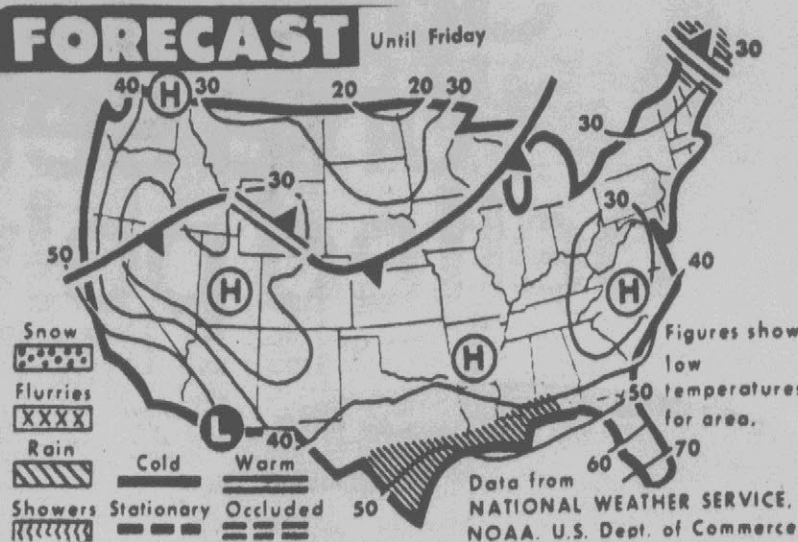

Haughton said bank officials have talked to the Bassey family and have met the two Locklear children.

Neil O'Brien, Gervetch's attorney, said a final decision on the disposition of the money will be made within the next few days.

O'Brien declined to disclose the amount of the trust, but said it was enough to "enable them to get an education."

"It will not make them rich," he added.

In the past, Republicans have been able to pay the telephone canvassers, leafletters and envelope stuffers who are the workhorses of campaigning.

"We're just unable to organize the state by regions and have the regional people get on the phones and ring the doorbells," said R. Burdell Bixby, who has worked for every Republican presidential candidate since Alf Landon.

Bixby is one of the many Republican stalwarts who have been consigned to minor roles in a campaign directed by state GOP Chairman Richard Rosenbaum, and staffed largely by political newcomers.

Rosenbaum has engineered a sometimes remarkable display of party unity — getting, for example, Sen. James Buckley to appear on a platform with his opponents Rep. Peter Peyser and Sen. Jacob Javits during a recent presidential visit.

But a number of rank-and-file Republicans complain that Rosenbaum has not spent enough time on the oft-tedious, lower-level organizing and planning that helps win elections.

Despite an outward display of unity, there is evidence the Republicans are having some problem keeping their forces in line.

With less than a month to go before election day, 20 of the state's 82 counties still had no phone banks or local campaign offices.

Carter's state manager is Gerard Doherty, a soft-spoken political technician who was imported from Massachusetts at least partly to mediate among the state Democratic party's constantly warring factions.

If he has not succeeded in settling their disputes, he has at least neutralized them enough to build a working campaign organization, Democrats say.

"Our problem is getting the vote out," Doherty says. "It goes without saying that there hasn't been too much enthusiasm among the people who work, like college students."

Carter had little or no organization left over from the primary — he finished fourth — and Doherty has had to build one almost from scratch, wooing the county leaders who supported other candidates early in the year.

bureaucracy, more government by experts, and for less innovation, less freedom, and less responsibility in the private sector. In their demand for comprehensive, mandatory national health insurance, Carter & Company are asking for the Kefauver experience all over again.

Freedom cannot survive in thin air. The element of risk gets stifled in a security blanket. Diversity withers. Some of us who remember Estes Kefauver, a well-intentioned man, look at Jimmy Carter and see that 'coon-skin cap again.

By Next Spring, A Chance To Reduce Their Electric Bills

RALEIGH (AP) — By next spring, some North Carolinians may be able to try to reduce their electric bills by volunteering for participation in a peak pricing plan.

In an order handed down Wednesday, the state Utilities Commission called for a public hearing Dec. 16 on whether customers of the three major power companies should be allowed to volunteer for peak pricing. Also to be considered at the hearing are peak pricing rates proposed by Duke Power Co., Carolina Power and Light Co., and Virginia Electric and Power Co.

In addition, the commission ordered a hearing on Jan. 11 on North Carolina's long-range electric power generation needs.

The proposed peak-load rates would not be permanent and therefore customers should be allowed to choose whether they want to come under their provisions, the commission said. Peak pricing is a concept of charging more for electricity during periods when it is in great demand—such as a weekday afternoon—and less in periods of low demand—such as overnight and weekends. It is similar to the varying rates for long distance telephone calls.

Power companies are required to supply whatever electricity consumers demand. Therefore, the companies invest large sums of money in generating plants that are needed only a few days a year when demand reaches its maximum point—the peak. Those plants are the reason electricity rates keep going up.

The Jan. 11 hearing on long range power needs is aimed at preventing construction of unneeded generating plants, which would push rates unnecessarily high, and preventing insufficient construction which would result in brownouts and power shortages.

As to the peak pricing proposals, the commission said it "recognizes that some consumers may be able to benefit from adoption of these 'interim' rates and that it was establishing a hearing date as soon to determine if it should allow the filed rates, or variations of those rates, to go into effect on a voluntary election basis prior to the completion of additional studies."

The peak pricing rates proposed are designated interim "since more complete studies by both the utilities and the commission staff will be available by the spring of 1977," the commission said.

Duke has proposed peak periods from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays June through September and 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. the rest of the year. CP&L's proposed peak periods were 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on weekdays from May through October and 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays during the rest of the year.

Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s proposals called for a 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. peak on weekdays the year round.

Banks Deny Privacy Loss Threatened

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The banking industry disagrees with consumer groups that contend individual privacy is threatened by futuristic bill-payments systems that could replace cash and checks.

A representative of the American Bankers Association, Kenneth V. Larkin, predicted Wednesday that these electronic systems will provide more protection of privacy than the cash-and-check system now being used.

Under the electronic systems, customers will present a plastic "debt card" when making a purchase. A device linked by telephone line to a computer will instantly remove the amount of the purchase from the consumers' bank account and deposit the funds into the store's account.

Under the electronic systems, customers will present a plastic "debt card" when making a purchase. A device linked by telephone line to a computer will instantaneously remove the amount of the purchase from the consumer's bank account and deposit the funds into the store's account.

Consumer representatives have called for strict safeguards on the electronic devices at hearings this week of a government study commission looking into the technology that some predict will produce a "cashless society."

The consumer witnesses have said the ability of computers to store massive amounts of financial information about people and make it readily available presents an unprecedented threat to personal privacy.

Larkin disagreed, saying: "The banking industry believes the electronic funds-transfer systems can and will provide more protection of consumer privacy than paper-based systems."

"Paper records, even those maintained on microfilm, are voluminous and difficult to file and store in a manner which assures continuing privacy and confidentiality."

"Unlike electronic data, paper documents can be read and understood by almost anyone in the advent of inadvertent disclosure or release," he said.

Larkin told the National Commission on Electronic Funds Transfers that no law is necessary until some abuses are found in the new systems.

Larkin, a vice president of Bank of America of California, testified on behalf of the ABA, the industry group that represents almost all the nation's banks.

Among those differing with Larkin's appraisal was Kathleen O'Reilly, an official of the Consumer Federation of America, the nation's largest consumer organization.

She said Congress should pass a law overturning this year's Supreme Court decision that allows the government to subpoena a person's bank records.

"An opportunity to challenge a government subpoena of such records should be guaranteed to citizens without requiring that they first prove they have been harmed," she said.

"Consumer privacy should be deemed a right," she said. "Likewise, all existent protections contained in present consumer-protection laws with respect to cash and check transactions should be amended so as to encompass electronic funds transfers."

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Benny Goodman, the 67-year-old King of Swing, played his first concert in Czechoslovakia to an enthusiastic audience.

A total of 4,000 Czech jazz buffs, who have listened to Goodman on records and the radio, jammed into a hall that normally seats 2,000.

"It reminded me of the early days' audiences when people would almost hang down the chandeliers," Goodman said after the Tuesday night performance.

Moved Two Grave Sites

Two gravesites located in the path of proposed street improvements in the West Meadowbrook area have been moved to another site today, according to a Redevelopment Commission spokesman.

Kirby Boyd, real estate officer for the commission, said that the graves were moved to Greenwood Cemetery on Fifth Street Wednesday by the Phillip Ellen & Associates of Southern Pines.

Boyd explained that the gravesites, located in the city's West Meadowbrook Community Development site on the south side of Moore Street, were moved because they were in the existing right of way for Moore Street improvements.

He noted that the grave stones were also removed from the site and relocated at Greenwood Cemetery.

The grave markers bore the names of Col. George W. Johnston, who lived from 1828 to 1892, and Adelaide Johnston, who lived from 1882 to 1917, according to the stone dates.

OFFER EXPIRES NOVEMBER 1

N.C. Will Be Electing Conservative Lt. Governor

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Regardless of the outcome Tuesday, North Carolina will have a conservative lieutenant governor for the next four years. Left to the voters to decide is how conservative and which party.

Democrat Jimmy Green is from Bladen County. A farmer and businessman, he is conservative and Democrat to the core.

Republican Bill Hiatt is from Mount Airy, in the Piedmont northwest of Winston-Salem. He teaches carpentry in the Surry County schools and is an idealistic conservative.

Asked shortly after he won nomination how he liked being the more liberal of two candidates, Green seemed a little surprised then said carefully, "I don't worry about that. My positions are sound."

Probably the most notable aspect of the race has been its lack of notice. While the Democratic primary and runoff stirred considerable attention with a wide range of candidates, philosophies and issues, the Green-Hiatt contest has been all but ignored.

Earlier this month, Green and Hiatt squared off for a half-hour debate before the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters. Unlike the gubernatorial debate the following day which was televised statewide and widely reported in newspapers, there were only three newsmen on hand for the Green-Hiatt show. For the most part, the reports of the debate were accorded low status on the news pages.

The Green-Hiatt debate failed to produce a significant confrontation on issues or reveal any surprises. Both candidates generally held to previously stated positions.

Another factor giving the race low visibility is a desire by Green to keep it that way. Being a Democrat, he has a built-in advantage. Democratic voter registration has a 3-1 edge over the GOP.

Hiatt, on the other hand, would like to see more media attention directed toward the contest, which has been overshadowed by the presidential and gubernatorial races.

While both candidates agree on a number of issues, their appearances and personalities provide some sharp contrasts.

Hiatt, 44, for example, is a snappy dresser with a mustache and hair long enough to partly cover his ears.

Green, 55, dresses conservatively and his hair and sideburns are closely cropped.

Green is short, lean and has a tough, lined face. His reputation is one of being a professional and powerful politician.

He sees his reputation as a back-room politician as an asset. According to those who worked close to Green while he was speaker of the House, if he wanted a bill passed or killed, or if he saw a conflict on the horizon, he met with the proper people, discussed what concerned him and it was usually taken care of.

"I just get the right people together and we work out the differences," Green says. To critics, such back room maneuvers are efforts to cheat the people of public debate among their representatives. But, to supporters, Green's efforts keep the wheels of government smoothly turning.

Green has been running on his record of 16 years in the General Assembly and his near-lifetime of work in the Democratic party. He says the work he did as speaker of the House is essentially what the duties of lieutenant governor are.

Hiatt, says his philosophy is agreeable to most North Carolinians. He takes a hard line on crime and says he strongly supports education, expressing a desire to stress fundamentals in the schools.

The political committee representing Tar Heel teachers supported Hiatt in his primary race against Odell Payne. In the first Democratic primary, the teachers backed Green which caused a storm of protest. In the Democratic runoff, the group backed Green's opponent, Howard Lee.

In this race, the teachers group chose not to endorse either candidate, which denies them the large donations and promises of workers to help in the campaign.

See Increase In Flu Shots

ATLANTA (AP) — Swine flu vaccinations rose by about 50 per cent last week over the previous week despite "a continuing level of misunderstanding" about deaths of elderly persons following vaccinations, a spokesman for the national Center for Disease Control said today.

Vaccinations last week totaled 3,065,234, bringing the national program total to 5,698,716, the spokesman said. Vaccinations the previous week totaled 2,109,706.

"It's building up as more mass immunization clinics are opening involving greater portions of the general public," the spokesman said.

"It will be real interesting to see the figures the next few weeks."

He said most states are providing vaccine to members of the general public in at least a few clinics.

CDC statistics comparing vaccinations with 1970 state populations above 18 years of age show 4.2 per cent of that number vaccinated, the CDC spokesman said.

The shots have been recommended for the general public above that age and for the chronically ill of all ages. Most of the shots so far have been given to the elderly or chronically ill — those considered "high risks" if a swine flu outbreak should strike the United States.

No such outbreak has been reported since the disease hit several soldiers at Ft. Dix, N.J., last January, killing one.

More than 40 persons were reported to have died after receiving the vaccinations this fall, but the CDC spokesman reiterated that the deaths were "totally unrelated" to the vaccinations and were to be expected among any group of elderly and ill persons, whether they were receiving shots or not.

However, officials running the vaccination programs in several states have said there seems to remain a reluctance on the part of some persons to take the shots because of the death reports.

Researchers said last week that the vaccine also is safe for children, and federal officials say they will announce within 10 days whether teen-agers and young children should be included in the mass immunization program.

They have been excluded from the program so far because earlier tests failed to resolve questions about side effects and needed dosages for them.

Tobacco Quality Was Improved

FARMVILLE — The quality of tobacco on the Farmville Market Wednesday was better than the quality on the market Tuesday according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

"Several sheets of wrappers and leaf grades sold as high as $1.55 per pound Wednesday. Most of the volume was made up of leaf and smoking leaf," Williams said.

The Farmville Market sold 776,981 pounds for $804,692 Wednesday for an average of $119.39 per 100 pounds. To date, the Farmville Market has sold 30,577,369 for $35,578,436 for an average of $116.36 per 100 pounds as compared to last year's season average of $101.56 per 100 pounds on the same sale day.

The Farmville Market will begin sales at 9 a.m. beginning Monday, November 1.

Wrong Address

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — When a young mother of three called police and asked them to rush to "319 Victoria," they went to Victoria Ave. By the time they got to Victoria Blvd., she had been knifed to death.

Amalia DeLong had neglected to mention that she lived in Kenmore, a suburb.

Buffalo police released Wednesday the transcript of the taped phone conversation.

"Police? Police, please come to 319 Victoria right away!" "What's wrong?" asked the man at the emergency switchboard.

"There's a burglar.... I saw his face in the back. He was trying to break into the house. Please come right away."

"Okay, right away."

A squad car was dispatched immediately to 319 Victoria Ave. in Buffalo. Officers reached the street in minutes, but reported the number was nonexistent.

Meanwhile, at 319 Victoria Blvd. in Kenmore, Mrs. DeLong was being attacked.

Police said Wednesday that even if Mrs. DeLong, 28, had specified that she lived in the village adjacent to Buffalo, they might not have arrived in time to stop the killer on Monday. But they said they definitely would have had a better chance to catch the killer.

Kenmore police chief Elmer A. Arnet said there have been no significant leads in the slaying.

Dispute Claimed Vitamin's Value

BOSTON (AP) — The claim that vitamin C cures the common cold is being disputed by researchers who say the drug is of practically no value in fighting coughs and runny noses.

The latest conclusion comes from the same group of doctors who two years ago reported that vitamin C might ease cold symptoms. Now they say their first assertions were wrong.

In a report published today, the doctors said, "We do not believe that vitamin C has widespread usefulness as a cold remedy."

The study, led by Dr. John L. Coulehan of the University of Pittsburgh Medical School, appears in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Discussion over this use of the drug has been going on since 1970, when Nobel laureate Linus Pauling said people who took large daily doses of vitamin C would have fewer colds. He also said the colds they did get would be less severe.

Coulehan's part in the controversy began in 1974, when his team published the results of a study conducted on Navajo boarding school students in Arizona. They concluded that the pupils who took vitamin C had milder colds.

In the second study, the doctors experimented with 868 Navajo children at schools in Steamboat and Lower Greasewood, Ariz. Half of the pupils took vitamin C and the rest received fake pills. After five months, the number and severity of colds caught by the two groups was almost identical.

"Our important finding was negative," Coulehan said. "We were unable to demonstrate significant benefits of vitamin C."

Coulehan noted that other researchers still are reporting that vitamin C provides mild relief to cold victims. He said scientists theorize that the vitamin sometimes has an effect on the body similar to antihistamine.

But even if the vitamin does help keep noses from running, Coulehan said this is not enough reason to take large quantities of the drug.

uniform standards for minimum achievements," Mrs. Tyler commented. "Each grade level must have a minimum standard in order to be promoted to the next higher grade."

"If students knew there was a standard they must meet, if parents realized this, if teachers knew what to strive for, I firmly believe this would result in improved discipline, in better cooperation of parents and school boards, and most importantly, it would result in students having, by the time they graduated from high school, the skills and concepts necessary to read and write well and to be able to compete in a competitive society."

Part of the blame for the current lack of reading and writing skills among high school graduates, she feels, stems from the tremendous educational bureaucracy that has developed in recent years. Federal money has been easy to come by, with the result that innovative projects have often had priority over the basic needs of students.

"We need to experiment, to grow," she added, "but we're in too big a hurry. We don't stop to look at students' needs. We must watch carefully, to proceed with caution. If we don't, we can do greater damage than we can ever correct."

"Essentially," she said, "we're obligated to a more careful use of taxpayers money from whatever source and most of all, we're obligated to the basic educational needs of children."

—On the status of community colleges and technical institutes, Mrs. Tyler opposes "the concept of funding community colleges to a greater degree than we do technical institutes. I just can't see the logic of it," she added. Pointing out that approximately 20 of 57 of North Carolina's institutions in this category are now community colleges, she said "I would like we keep as many technical institutes as we now have."

—A more concrete statewide evaluation for teachers is another matter which Mrs.

Tyler feels needs a close look. "I helped draft legislation for the Fair Employment and Dismissal Act (tenure)" she said, "because at that time there was no protection for a teacher. A principal had only to give a teacher a letter at the end of the school year terminating employment, without even giving a reason. I worked on this to try to give each teacher fair treatment."

Because of the inhibition on the part of principals this has fostered in making a decision to dismiss an incompetent teacher, Mrs. Tyler hopes to see "the creation of an objective evaluation that would permit more dismissal of incompetents."

Police Check 2 Accidents

An estimated $6,050 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated here yesterday by police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 9 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Greenfield Boulevard involving vehicles driven by Arthur Roy Rogers of Route 2, Williamston and Mary Mayo Moore of Route 4, Greenville.

Investigators, who charged Rogers with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $2,500 to the Rogers truck and $3,000 to the Moore car.

No charges were reported in connection with the second collision which occurred about 12:20 p.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Hooker Road and involved vehicles driven by Robert Paul Harrell III of Grifton and Darlene Taylor Buck of Route 2, Greenville.

Damage was estimated at $300 to the Harrell car and $250 to the Buck auto.

River Ganges Symbolizes Rift

By HARIHAR KRISHNAN HONG KONG (UPI) — A dispute arising from the sharing of water will even turn a father against his son, Indians believe. In such a situation, trust no one.

But India and Bangladesh have never been exactly like father and son. Perhaps more like brothers, at one time.

After all, it was India that helped create the nation of Bangladesh after defeating Pakistan in the December, 1971 war. Even Bangladesh's national anthem is derived from one of the songs composed by India's Nobel laureate poet, the late Rabindranath Tagore.

Now a dispute over the sharing of water from the mighty River Ganges is muddying that relationship, making enemies of the brothers.

The fact that Bangladesh has taken the matter to the United Nations, where it will be debated during the current session of the General Assembly, shows it has lost faith in a bilateral settlement.

There is even talk that the two brothers might go to war over the Ganges.

"The matter is now out in the open and the world will know how the country is suffering," one Bangladesh observer said.

"It is an attempt to internationalize what is purely a bilateral problem and will only add to the tension in the area," says one Indian official.

The problem is complex. No river system in the world so vitally affects the economic, religious, social and political life of so many people as does the Ganges.

The snow-fed river flows from the Himalayan heights of Tibet and courses through the territories of India and Bangladesh to finally enter the Bay of Bengal.

Along the Ganges' path through Indian and Bangladesh live 270 million people. The Gangetic plains are among the most fertile in the subcontinent and account for a major portion of the mineral, iron ore and coal wealth in the region.

The Hindus regard the Ganges as sacred. Thousands come to die on its banks in the hope of reaching heaven. In India the river is referred to as "Ganga-Mai" (Mother Ganga).

The two countries' major steel and jute mills are fed by Ganges water. In Bangladesh, the waterways formed by the tributaries of the Ganges provide the only link to the different districts.

Now India has constructed a $210 million dam, the Farakka Barrage, in the state of West Bengal bordering Bangladesh. The dam diverts the Ganges water to flush India's major port at Calcutta, which is plagued by silting.

This dam is the source of the bitter conflict between the two countries.

China and Pakistan, long at odds with India, are supporting Bangladesh.

Bangladesh has charged that the dam has ruined its economy, causing severe droughts throughout the western half of the country.

In a white paper to be submitted to the General Assembly, the Bangladesh government claims India's "unilateral withdrawal" of Ganges water through the Farakka caused the drying up of nearly 400,000 acres of land and consequently its rice production fell short by 236,000 tons this year.

India says that more than 90 per cent of the Ganges flows through its territory and that as many as 250 million persons — 40 per cent of its population — depend on the Ganges. India also maintains that since Bangladesh is plagued by floods, the Farakka only helps control this problem.

According to India, the planning for the dam was undertaken only after extensive consultations with Bangladesh. The country maintains that the Farakka is the only way to save the Calcutta port, which not only serves India but also the landlocked Himalayan countries of Nepal and Bhutan.

The two countries have held several rounds of talks through their joint river commission representatives. The last one was held in New Delhi early in September, but no agreement emerged.

The real reason for the strained relations between the two countries appears to be that the martial regime in Bangladesh is not as close to India as was the previous regime of President Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, who was assassinated in August of 1975 in a military coup.

The new government of Maj. Gen. Ziaur Rahman, deeply suspicious of India, has moved to make amends with China and Pakistan and accuses India of training guerrillas along the border.

India denies the charges. The Ganges, therefore, has become a symbol of the strained relations.

There is no international precedent for settlement of the problem.

At the moment, as far as India is concerned, the Farakka is there to stay.

As far as Bangladesh is concerned, there can be no return to normalcy so long as the Farakka stands between the two countries.

Jaguars Seek To Clinch Playoff Spot

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
 Farmville Central all but wrapped up the Eastern Carolina Conference football championship last week with its convincing 49-6 drubbing of Ayden-Grifton. The last two games on the Jaguar schedule are against teams which, between them, have won only one game all year, North Pitt and North Lenoir.

A win over North Pitt this week will clinch a tie for the title for Farmville and send them into the state 3-A playoffs. With two wins, the Jags will finish with a perfect 7-0 conference record.

In other games last week, C.B. Aycock got back on the winning track with a 20-0 victory over D.H. Conley. Green Central handed North Pitt another loss, 26-0, and Southern Nash downed North Lenoir, 21-6.

This week will see Southern Nash at C.B. Aycock, Ayden-Grifton at D.H. Conley, Greene Central at North Lenoir and Farmville Central at North Pitt. Ayden-Grifton and C.B. Aycock, both 4-1 in the conference, will be looking for wins this week to stay in second place. Ayden-Grifton Coach Claude Kennedy feels the game with

D.H. Conley has "a little more added to it because we are at one another's back door."

The game will be important to the Chargers after their loss last week, but Kennedy feels the Vikings will be ready also. "Conley probably wants to win these last two (games) to be 5-5 for the year, Kennedy said. "I feel like they'll be up, they'll be ready to play. I think they have some pretty good personnel over there, although they've been beaten in their last four games. I'm sure they're thinking in terms of getting us and North Pitt and salvaging part of the season anyway."

Kennedy was disappointed in the play of the Chargers in their loss to Farmville. "We just didn't play well, we didn't do anything well," he said.

"I don't want to take any credit away from Farmville, they have a real fine football team. They played much better than we did—they wanted to win more than we did and were talented enough to do so."

Kennedy declined to single out any of his players who did well during the game. "I didn't think we were as bad as we were until I saw the game films Sunday. We were actually worse."

D.H. Conley Coach Chuck Dunn is wary of taking on the Chargers after last week's game. "It seems like we've been following Farmville Central," Dunn said, "They've been whipping up on everybody and getting them mad for us."

Dunn said he was "surprised" at the top-sided score of the Ayden-Grifton - Farmville Central game last week.

Charger William West is a "good, tough back," Dunn said and Rod Nobles is a good receiver. Dunn also said Ayden-Grifton has a good quarterback in David Pratt and good size on their defensive line.

Of last week's loss to C.B. Aycock, Dunn said, "We just made a lot of foolish mistakes—a lot of mental errors offensively that kept us from getting anything going."

Dunn said the Vikings "moved the ball real well, but then we'd fumble or something. That kept us from getting any momentum."

"Defensively, we played fairly well when we had to—we stopped them inside the 10 three times. Two of their scores were given by the offense," Aycock scored once on a fumble return and another score was set up by a blocked punt.

Dunn said Mike Phillips and Kevin Adams did good jobs on defense. Quarterback Jeff Allen, making his first start for the injured Jeff McDaniel did well "under the circumstances," Dunn said. Allen completed five of 10 passes during the game. Dunn also said there is a possibility that McDaniel will be back for the Vikings' last game.

Farmville Central Coach Gene Brewer said his team played

"pretty good overall" in the Ayden-Grifton game. "The defense did a good job and the offense did above average, nothing spectacular."

Brewer praised Mike Jenkins, who had three interceptions, Timmy Hall and Kevin Dixon on defense as well as the whole defensive secondary.

On offense, Brewer said his receivers did a good job of catching the ball and quarterback Carroll Griffin threw well. End Emerson Hobgood, who injured his ankle in the game will miss the North Pitt game, Brewer said.

Brewer said North Pitt is "not outstanding, but they play good, sound football." He said the Jaguars will have to be ready to play because the game could mean the championship.

North Pitt running backs George Little and Calvin Carmack could pose problems for Farmville Central and the Panthers "showed a pretty good passing attack against Greene Central so we're going to have to be ready to play pass defense," Brewer said.

North Pitt Coach Pat Smith sees the game in a different light. "They (Farmville Central) will have to play their worst game and we'll have to play our best just to make it anywhere reasonable."

Asked who the Panthers will have to look out for on the Farmville squad, Smith said, "the whole team."

"A lot of teams you can look forward to upsetting, but Farmville is going to be tough. Coach Brewer won't have them looking past us, I can tell you that," Smith said.

Quarterback John Hunt and running back George Little were singled out by Smith for their play last week, as well as strong safety Larry Spencer.

Other than that, however, there was little for Smith to be happy about. "Our guys have no life, no enthusiasm and I can't motivate them," he said. The defense "has just quit on us. We're not in school Friday and I'm scared half the team won't show up for the Farmville Central game."

In other area games last week, Williamston grabbed a share of the Northeastern Conference lead by dropping previously undefeated Edenton, 22-0. They will play at Plymouth this week.

Roanoke, who defeated Lee Woodard, 30-6 last week, will not play this week.

Jamesville won its second game of the year last week by defeating Roanoke's junior varsity, 18-6. The Bullets will play at Creswell this week.

Pirates Still Among Leaders

East Carolina University remained among the top teams in the country in four individual and five team categories this week, according to the NCAA.

One of the new individual leaders is appearing for the first time this year—Eddie Hicks. Hicks broke into the list of rushing leaders with a 92.0 yard per game average, 29th best in the country.

Pete Conaty continues to appear in two different categories, scoring and field goals. He stands eighth in scoring with a 9.0 point per game average, and second in field goal kicking averaging 1.71 per game.

The other individual in the stats is Gerald Hall, third in punt returns, averaging 14.6 yards per return.

A number of Pirate opponents also appear in the lists. In rushing, Southern Illinois' Andre Herrera, with his 300-yard-plus game last week, is fourth with 147.0 yards a game. Ted Brown of N.C. State is 11th at 112.7, while North Carolina's Mike Voight is 22nd at 103.0 Jim Krus of William & Mary is 25th at 99.7.

In scoring, Brown is tied with Conaty for eighth place at 9.0, while Herrera is 10th at 8.9. Al Hunter of Notre Dame is 24th at 7.0.

Marty Crosby of The Citadel is 19th in passing, completing 10.0 per game. Tommy Southard of Furman is 21st in receiving, catching 3.9 per game.

Herrea is fifth in all-purpose running with 147.4 yards a game. Brown is 18th at 126.0 yards a game.

Joe Parker of Appalachian State is 2nd in punting at 46.1 yards a kick. Johnny Evans of State is 6th at 45.3, Mike Wright of Southern Mississippi is 11th at 44.3, Bruce Allen of Richmond is 16th at 42.8, and Kenny Caldwell of The Citadel is 17th at 42.7.

Mark Mullady of William & Mary is 13th in punt returns at 12.9 yards a return. Jimmy Kiser of Furman is 12th in kickoff returns at 23.6 Ralph Ferguson of The Citadel and Jeff Nixon of Richmond are tied for seventh in interceptions with .71 per game. Craig Jones of VMI is 10th in field goals, with 1.29 per game.

As a team, East Carolina stands sixth in rushing, picking up 309.0 yards per game. They are second in total defense with a 200.0 average. The Bucs are seventh in rushing defense, giving up 104.7 per game. East Carolina is eighth in scoring defense, allowing 9.3 points a game. They are sixth in punt returns at 14.0 return.

Among other team leaders, VMI is fifth in pass defense giving up 76.9 yards a game. N.C. State is third at 42.7 and Appalachian State is fifth at 42.8 in net punting.

East Carolina plays host to Western Carolina Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium, seeking its seventh win in eight games.

Girdle Gains New Popularity

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — The girdle ads that promise to prevent midriff bulge, give eye-catching figures and smooth you into a woman's natural shape are quite familiar.

Four girdle-enthusiasts in Stillwater don't squeeze into the woman's undergarments for any of those reasons.

The four are members of the Oklahoma State University football team.

Daily Oklahoma sports columnist Bob Hurt disclosed in a column for Thursday's editions that Terry Miller, Oklahoma State's hard-running halfback, wears a Playtex long leg panty girdle.

No, Miller doesn't wear the garment for television commercials, like Joe Namath and his panty hose. He wears it in practices and in games, and says it helps prevent injuries.

The girdle guards against hamstrings by keeping Miller's muscles from knotting, applying equal pressure and support to all his muscles from the kneecaps to the waist.

It was learned that girdles first entered the team's locker-room about a year ago, at the suggestion of Dr. Don Cooper, team physician.

Miller said three of his teammates also wear the girdles, but Hurt reported he withheld their names "until the next of kin could be notified."

Trainer Jeff Fair buys the girdles — the extra large size — at a department store.

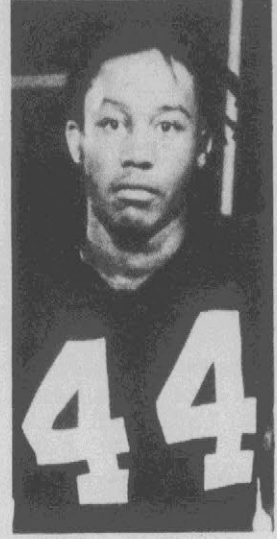

"We had a few snickers when they first put them on, but the whole idea was to give even support," said Fair. "You can do it better with the girdle than in wrapping the leg."

The Cowboys entertain eight-ranked Missouri Saturday, but it is unlikely any Tigers snickers will be directed at Miller.

The reason is that in the last two games Miller, an all-Big Eight Conference selection as a sophomore, has rushed for 137 and 159 yards. The 159 yards helped the Cowboys upset Oklahoma 31-24 last week.

Teachy Likes Life In Trench

One might think that an offensive lineman would be jealous and bitter over the attention and glory received by running backs and quarterbacks.

But that's not true in the case of Ayden-Grifton tackle Mike Teachey.

"A back's not going to be that good if he hasn't got the linemen to block for him," according to Teachey. "It's satisfying when a back gains" off a good block, "the coaches and people who know he didn't do it by himself," Teachey said.

The 6-2, 210-pound junior "anchors" the Ayden-Grifton line, according to his coach, Claude Kennedy. "I'd like to line up tackle to tackle (four) people of his ability and size," Kennedy said.

Teachey plays both offensive and defensive tackle and, on defense, has been one of the top three Charger tacklers in every game this year. "In three or four games, he has led the team in tackles," Kennedy said.

Kennedy described Teachey, who has also lettered in basketball and baseball at Ayden-Grifton, as a "tremendous competitor. He has done a real outstanding job for us and we are looking forward to having him back next year."

Naturally, Teachey was disappointed at his team's loss to league-leading Farmville Central last week, a loss which probably cost the Chargers a chance at winning the Eastern Carolina Conference football championship. He said the team's goal now is to win the rest of its games and finish second in the league. "We have a chance to be 6-4 and I think we will win the rest of our games," Teachey said, adding that "6-4 is better than 4-6."

Teachey said he thinks he likes playing offense better than defense. "I like defense, but I kind of like offense because you know who to block, you know where the ball's going and you know that the count's on. It's easier for me," Teachey said.

Teachey "definitely wants to play college football, if I get a chance." He said he has already been contacted by the University of North Carolina and Duke. Right now he is interested in UNC or East Carolina University.

In his spare time, Teachey likes hunting and fishing. He enjoys bird-hunting as well as deer-hunting and also likes going to college football games.

Although he has no definite plans for a career, Teachey is leaning towards a health or physical education major and college and a coaching career — "maybe."

A three-letterman, Teachey said he plans to play all three again this year. He enjoys team competition.

"I like everyone working as a unit. Everyone has to work together. Eleven people can beat their men one-on-one, but they have still got to be a unit, together."

ECU's women's field hockey team took only one less shot on goal than Old Dominion but came out on the short end of a 3-0 score Wednesday.

The Lady Pirates came up with nine shots on goal, but none of them could find the mark. ODU's goals were scored by Sue McAtamney, Pam Greene and Pudge Hayes.

The next event for the ECU women's field hockey team will be the Deep South Tournament which will be held in Greenville, November 5, 6, 7.

Redskins Get Win

The Redskins gained a 36-0 victory over the Oilers in the Flag Football League of the Greenville Recreation Department yesterday.

Alonza Taylor scored for the "Skins in the first period on a 3 yard run. He added another score in the second period, this one a 23-yarder. He also scored the PAT after the second touchdown.

Willie Carney scored twice in the third period, on runs of 12 and 3 yards. Following a fourth period safety, Barry Smith scored on a six-yard run, and Carney got the PAT.

Chris McGlohorn, with an interception, and Carlton Smith, with a fumble recovery, led the "Skin defense."

In a flag game, the Eagles won by forfeit over the Dolphins.

In yesterday's report in the Daily Reflector, it was reported that the Cowboys downed the Steelers in flag ball. Actually, the Steelers (6-0) won the game over the Cowboys, Nov. 2-2. The game was incorrectly reported to the Reflector by the Recreation Department.

Halfback Gil Castilla scored two goals in the first half and added one more in the second period to give UNC-Wilmington a 3-0 victory over East Carolina in a soccer match here Wednesday afternoon.

The victory gave the Seahawks a 6-6 record for the season while the loss dropped the Pirates to 3-10-1 for the year.

Castilla scored his first goal early in the first half and added another one midway through the half on an assist from Steve Paul. Castilla got his final goal midway through the second half on an assist from Gonzalo Rada.

Martin Picked Top AL Manager

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin, who restored pride in the New York Yankees' pinstripes and guided the team into the World Series in his first full season at the helm, today was named The Associated Press' American League Manager of the Year.

Martin received 164 1/2 votes and edged Kansas City's Whitey Herzog by 9 1/2 votes in the nationwide balloting by sportswriters and broadcasters. Gene Mauch of Minnesota was third with 20 and Chuck Tanner of Oakland was fourth with 15 1/2.

"I appreciate this very much. It's a wonderful honor," said Martin, who also won this award in 1974 as manager of the Texas Rangers. "I only wish that I could receive it as manager of the world champions."

Martin was just four victories away from fulfilling that wish. His Yankees ran away with the American League East title with a 97-62 record, finishing 10 1/2 games ahead of Baltimore. They then beat Kansas City in five games for their first AL pennant since 1964.

"I'm embarrassed we didn't do better in the World Series," said Martin, whose club was swept in four straight games by Cincinnati. "But I still think we had a heckuva successful season."

"We won the pennant for the first time in 12 years and we brought pride and tradition back to the Yankees. This year we got to the World Series; next year we'll win it."

Battling Billy is managing his fourth major league team after stormy stints with Minnesota, Detroit and Texas. After a 12-year major league career, highlighted by five World Series with the Yankees, Martin began his managing career at Denver of the Pacific Coast League in 1968.

The next season he was named manager of the Minnesota Twins, guiding them to the AL West title. But the Twins lost to Baltimore in the AL championship series, and Martin, who had some differences with the Minnesota management, was fired at the end of the season.

He served as Detroit's manager from 1971-1973, leading the Tigers to finishes of second, first and third, respectively, in the AL East. He was fired late in the 1973 season and finished up that year as the manager of the Texas Rangers.

Early in 1975, Martin's differences with the Texas management proved irreconcilable and he was let go by the Rangers. The Yankees hired him in the middle of 1975, and he immediately began placing the Martin stamp — speed and aggressiveness — on the club.

Offseason trades for center-fielder Mickey Rivers and second baseman Willie Randolph gave the Yankees' running game more authenticity, and Martin skillfully guided the club into its 30th World Series.

The 48-year-old Martin was a model of behavior all year, getting along well with his players and Yankees management, including owner George Steinbrenner.

"George and I got along beautifully," said Martin, "and the players and I had a real rapport. That's the secret of my success."

Earlier, Danny Ozark of Philadelphia was named The AP's National League Manager of the Year.

Reds Won't Join In Free Agent Drafting

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds are so good they won't be shopping at the free agent supermarket. The Montreal Expos are so bad they would like to buy out the store.

The Reds, two-time defending champions with lots of talent down on the farm, announced Wednesday they will not participate in the Nov. 4 free agent re-entry draft. In contrast, the Expos say they will be going all out to shore up a weak team that is leaking in all directions.

Cincinnati President Bob Howsam, who has balked at free agent pitcher Don Gullett's request for a five-year contract, said:

"In fairness to the players who have won the world championship for us two years in a row and with consideration to the way our organization is structured, we do not think it would be right for the Cincinnati club to get into the bidding contests that must come out of this draft.

"Nearly all of our players have remained loyal to this organization and we are hopeful that we can maintain this relationship in the future to our mutual advantage," Howsam added.

The Reds are a team of stars, and any inflated bid for a free agent would have severe economic repercussions from stars like Johnny Bench, Joe Morgan and Pete Rose. Also, the knowledge that the Reds are still a super team makes it easier for Howsam to stick to his principles and not sign or replace Gullett.

The Expos, who had the worst record in baseball this season, have no stars. Only once in their eight-year history have the Expos finished worse than they did this season. That was in 1969, when they came into the baseball world as a new expansion team and recorded a 52-110 record.

This year, the Expos finished dead last in the National League East with a 55-107 record, 46 games out of first place.

But when it comes to the Nov. 4 draft, worst is first. The two leagues will be alternating selections for the 25 free agent players and, because the NL won a coin toss, Montreal will pick first and the Chicago White Sox will go second.

"We could use a middle infielder more than anything," said Charlie Fox, the Expos' vice president in charge of baseball operations. "We have just two established outfielders. And anyone could use a power-hitter like Reggie Jackson."

Jackson is the most glamorous name of the first batch of free agents, an elite group that includes outfielders Joe Rudi and Gary Matthews; infielders Dave Cash, Bobby Grich and Bert Campaneris; catcher Gene Tenace, and pitchers Wayne Garland, Bill Campbell and Gullett.

Even if the Expos decide Jackson is their top choice they must consider several questions. Is he interested in us? Can we sign him? Can we afford him?

Jackson, who reportedly has valued himself at $3 million, has ruled out the cities of Milwaukee and Cleveland. He also says he wants to go to a contender, but the addition of Jackson and another top free agent can quickly make a contender out of almost any also-ran.

"We're very much interested in Mr. Jackson," said Fox. "We've talked to him and he told us he would be receptive to any offer. He hasn't ruled out Montreal."

In the upcoming draft, a free agent will be removed from the drafting list after his negotiating rights have been selected by 12 teams. A team can draft as many players as remain eligible, but it can only sign two. The only exceptions to this are Oakland, California and Baltimore — teams with more than two free agents. These clubs will be able to sign as many free agents as they lose.

Fox says money won't keep the Expos' Board of Directors from landing two top free agents.

"We've got the green light," says Fox. "(Chairman of the Board) Charles Bronfman says we should do whatever it takes. He wants two of them."

Ozark Gains Last Laugh

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies' manager Danny Ozark has the last laugh on his critics. He was voted National League manager of the year in the annual Associated Press poll of the media.

But the 52-year-old Ozark refused to gloat over those who predicted the Phillies would never win anything under his management. He was humble after being notified about the honor.

"I don't think this will change me as a person," said Ozark by telephone from Hilton Head, S.C., where he is on a golf holiday. "I am glad you people thought enough of me to vote for me. Maybe hard work paid off."

Ozark said he was surprised that he received 197 votes to just 79 for Sparky Anderson, manager of the world champion Cincinnati Reds, and 55 for Houston's Bill Virdon.

"Sparky did another super job," Ozark said. "He brought 'em (Reds) in. He's world champion."

Ozark said that despite his team's three game wipeout in the National League Playoffs by the Reds, the Phillies still were a very good team. "We all learned something from that playoff, and we'll be back."

Ozark, whose team won 101 games and took the National League Eastern Division by nine games, passed his honor along to his team. He said the Phillies were good enough to win the division regardless of who was the manager.

"They (the players) put me there because they played so well," Ozark said.

Ozark has been under intense criticism ever since he signed as manager in December 1972, after 33 years in the Los Angeles Dodgers' organization as a minor league manager and later Dodgers' coach. Most of the media expected Dave Bristol to get the job.

But despite the criticism, Ozark improved the Phillies each year of his regime. He led the team from 59 victories to 71 his first season, moved from last into third place with 80 wins the following year, to second with 86 in 1975, and first with 101 in 1976.

Ozark said after learning of his manager of the year designation, that he never would ask his detractors to eat their words.

Player's Death May Play Role In Game

By CHARLES WOLFE
Associated Press Writer

Having snapped the nation's longest losing college football losing streak last Saturday, Virginia might be expected to have momentum for its encounter this week with Virginia Military Institute, but the tragic death of a player makes the Cavaliers an emotional question mark.

Kevin Bowie, a sophomore and two-year starting defensive end, was shot to death Friday night in Washington, D.C., while trying to resist an apparent robbery attempt.

Bowie had remained behind when the Cavaliers left for Winston-Salem to meet Wake Forest after being sidelined with a neck injury in Virginia's 14-10 loss to Virginia Tech on Oct. 16.

Coach Dick Bestwick learned of the tragedy Saturday morning in a telephone call from Bowie's mother. He did not tell the other players until after their dramatic 18-17 victory.

This week, Bestwick flew to Plainfield, N.J., along with athletic department officials and four team members, to attend memorial services for Bowie.

How well the Cavaliers rebound from the numbing shock they received in the locker room last Saturday will be determined this weekend when they take on the Keydets in Norfolk, Va.

In other action involving Atlantic Coast Conference teams Saturday, fifth-ranked Maryland, 7-0, hosts the unpredictable Kentucky Wildcats.

"Kentucky is their own worst enemy this season," Coach Jerry Claiborne says of his alma mater. "When they don't make mistakes, they are as good as any team on their schedule."

The Terrapins were impressive in their 30-3 drubbing of Duke last Saturday. Kentucky, 4-3, showed a propensity for turnovers deep in its own territory last Saturday night and Georgia, which hardly needed the charity, won 31-7.

North Carolina, 5-2, travels to Winston-Salem to battle Wake Forest, 3-5, in Saturday's only ACC matchup. The Tar Heels appear to be regaining their early season momentum and the Deacons are trying to halt a two-game losing streak.

Clemson, with a bizarre 1-4-2 record, travels to Tallahassee, Fla., to take on Florida State in a night game. The Tigers have not won since their 10-7 opening victory over The Citadel.

Duke is at home against Georgia Tech, with the Blue Devils seeking to improve a 3-3-1 mark.

North Carolina State, riding a two-game winning streak, takes its 3-4-1 record to Columbia, S.C., for a game with South Carolina. The Gamecocks will be trying to rebound from a 13-6 loss to Notre Dame.

Quarterbacks See Bad Year

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

They fall each week like so many wooden Indians, one after another. And pretty soon, you begin to wonder whether the word is out around the National Football League to get the quarterbacks.

Half a dozen teams are operating with backup signal callers after their main men were kayoed. The injuries haven't been exactly trivial either.

Buffalo's Joe Ferguson is out for the year with four broken bones in his lower back. Steve Bartkowski of Atlanta is out for the year after knee surgery. Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw missed two games with spinal shock, after he was turned upside down and bounced on his head on a sack. Joe Namath of the New York Jets and Roger Staubach of Dallas are doubtful this week after suffering injuries last Sunday.

"Obviously, the defense is told to get the quarterback," said passer Mike Boryla of the Philadelphia Eagles, who suffered a concussion against St. Louis. "And when they get to him, they give him a good shot. That's their job."

Then Boryla paused. "What people don't realize," he added, "is that defensive ball players are bigger, stronger and much faster than they used to be."

Bob Avellini of the Chicago Bears agrees.

"The big reason some guys are getting hurt is that the linemen are getting bigger and faster. And more and more, the quarterbacks can't outrun them anymore," he said.

Currently, Avellini has a huge knob on his throwing elbow, a souvenir of last week's game against Dallas. He blames that one on the artificial surface at Texas Stadium.

"Have you ever been bounced off asphalt?" he asked. "I wouldn't have these elbows and shoulders if I weren't being bounced off asphalt."

George Allen, coach of the Washington Redskins, likes Avellini's turf theory. "I think the artificial turf doesn't help quarterbacks," he said.

Allen cited Bradshaw's injury as an example.

"Bradshaw might have been injured on grass, but not that seriously," he said. "He would have bounced."

What Allen didn't know was that Bradshaw was injured on

Dr. J Brings Out The Crowds

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

When Julius Erving was sold by the New York Nets, he obviously took many of his fans with him.

Only 5,832 turned out at the Nassau Coliseum Wednesday night to see the Nets play their home opener, but for the second night in a row Dr. J drew a record crowd.

After attracting a National Basketball Association record of 27,383 in New Orleans Tuesday night, Erving drew 15,676 in Houston Wednesday night. And he gave them their money's worth, scoring 27 points in leading the Philadelphia 76ers to a 116-94 victory over the Rockets.

The Nets, meanwhile, edged the Washington Bullets 96-93. In other NBA games, the San Antonio Spurs won their home opener over the Phoenix Suns 115-106 and the Detroit Pistons beat the Seattle SuperSonics 106-92.

76ers 116, Rockets 94
Erving, in his most productive effort since joining the 76ers, tied teammate George McGinnis — with whom he shared Most Valuable Players honors in the American Basketball Association two years ago — for scoring honors with 27 points.

"I think this is what the future (of the 76ers) is all about," Dr. J. said. "McGinnis is a very gifted player and we have to work together and help each other."

"He made some moves I couldn't even think of," Rockets forward Rudy Tomjanovich said of Erving, who controled the ball like a yo-yo while soaring towards the basket.

Nets 96, Bullets 93
"A Tisket, A Tasket, We Want Boe in a Casket," read one banner at the Nets' home opener. The fans obviously have not forgiven Nets owner Roy Boe for peddling the heart and soul of the franchise to Philadelphia. The Nets themselves haven't forgotten, either.

"People were looking for the Doctor and me to play together," noted Tiny Archibald, the Nets' prime off-season acquisition who paced the victory over Washington with 26 points, "so it's not surprising that they stayed away."

The Nets got 65 of their 96 points from their three guards, with John Williamson adding 22 and Al Skinner 17, offsetting a 34-point burst by the Bullets' Phil Chenier.

Spurs 115, Suns 106
Another former Nets player, Larry Kenon, returned to action after missing two games with a stomach virus and poured in a healthy 41 points for the Spurs, who took advantage of 35 Phoenix turnovers to reward the crowd of 8,919 who turned out for their first NBA home game. Alvan Adams topped the Suns with 24 points.

Pistons 106, Sonics 92
Detroit, leading 51-44 at halftime, pulled away in the second half as Bob Lanier scored 11 points in the third period and M.L. Carr netted 12 in the fourth quarter. Lanier finished with a game-high 21 points.

Injuries Slow Swann's Stats

By SUSAN J. REIMER
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Lynn Swann's shy-boy grin made him the darling of the Pittsburgh Steelers. His magic limbs, which snared almost any football and skirted sidelines, made him a Super Bowl Most Valuable Player.

But Swann has taken some blows to the head that made him realize his mortality as soon as he regained consciousness. And the sparkle in his play, as well as his speech, is missing.

"I am a mere shadow of my former statistics," Swann said tersely in a recent interview. "If I can just catch up to where I was last year it would be fantastic."

The third-year pro missed the second game of the National Football League season with a concussion sustained against Oakland. It was his second head injury in as many games against the Raiders.

"If that's the price I have to pay for being talented," said Swann after that game, "well, I can only take so much and then my career will be over."

Last season, it looked as though Swann could catch any ball thrown in his direction. Climbing skyward from behind two defenders or tip-toeing along the sidelines, Swann caught 49 passes for 781 yards and 11 touchdowns.

This season, he has just 14 receptions for 261 yards and no touchdowns.

BILL COBEY: "CAROLINA FANS FOIL PROMOTION"

Our Sports Promotion Director, Bob Savod, originally contracted this space to run last week in promotion of our game with East Carolina, but Tar Heel fans put a crimp in his plans. They bought out every available ticket for the East Carolina game and made it a sellout just as they did our games with N.C. State and Duke, so now we're committed to lots of ad space with nothing to say this week, except to tell Carolina fans everywhere how grateful we are for giving us these kinds of problems. Thanks to you, your loyalty, support and great enthusiasm for our program, this has been Carolina's most successful attendance year in nearly two decades. We deeply appreciate it and we want you to know it. To those of you who have had difficulty obtaining tickets to Kenan Stadium this season, we do regret the inconvenience. However, we might take this opportunity to remind you that you can still see the Tar Heels play in North Carolina this coming Saturday at Wake Forest. The Wake Forest people tell us there are still plenty of good tickets available for that A.C.C. contest in Winston-Salem. So in closing, on behalf of all of us in the Athletic Department, we again express our deep thanks as we dedicate this ad to you, our Carolina Fans, the greatest fans around, anywhere!

'Rainbow' On The Trail; She's Effective Worker

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

A Secret Service agent speaks softly into a walkie-talkie from a bowling alley in Edwardsville, Ill.: "Rainbow approaching."

From a plush Ft. Worth country club: "Rainbow heading this way."

From a blustery Milwaukee airport: "Rainbow touching down."

In walks a smiling, nodding Rainbow — the Secret Service code name for Elizabeth Hanford Dole, campaigning for her husband, Bob, the man the Secret Service calls Ramrod.

Whoever dubbed them knew the Republican vice presidential candidate's reputation for sharp words and a hard-driving style and something of his bride's freshness and flair.

It is Elizabeth Dole's first campaign, and the cynics say they can tell — she really seems to enjoy it.

They make an effective team: She has the warm, personal touch, and he has the stronger stuff. One is left thinking that the man with the tough-guy image must be a nice guy after all to have such a nice wife beside him.

Unlike many political wives, Elizabeth "Liddy" Dole has more than a nice-wife, ornamental role. She is a lawyer, a consumer affairs expert, a Federal Trade Commissioner on leave for the campaign.

She took an active part in planning the campaign and stumps the country on her own, joining her husband occasionally, and joking that she waves to him in airports.

The other day, she picked up the phone, called Dole's chief speech writer and suggested themes that might be worked into the last days of the campaign.

"I may not have years' experience in politics," says Mrs. Dole, 40, with a North Carolina drawl, "but I think you can succeed if you have common sense and understand people.

"Maybe it's because this is my first campaign, but I really enjoy campaigning and I don't get tired."

Describing her campaign as well as her career, she says, "I believe in giving everything my all, my best effort."

And so, although her aides are dragging and she has a sore throat, Elizabeth Dole is exuberant about pressing the flesh, making impromptu speeches, giving pep talks at phone banks and posing with an elephant or an old lady playing the kazoo.

An unprogrammed campaigner, she speaks without text and often foregoes meals at lunch and dinner so she can wander around and talk with the audience.

"Something about all these people buoys me up," she says. "It's a challenge and a total contrast to a rather academic existence of law books and briefs. It's a little like leaving an ivory tower."

Married just 10 months, Mrs. Dole is saving her honeymoon — and her career — until the election's over.

"Win or lose, I intend to return to the commission," says Mrs. Dole, a political independent.

"I believe the vice president can have a working wife, too."

If the Republicans win and if she returns to the FTC, Elizabeth Dole probably will be the nation's first vice presidential wife with a full-time career.

She has lived in Washington for 10 years, working in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and serving as deputy director for the Office of Consumer Affairs. Before entering government, she defended indigent criminals.

She sees the FTC as an opportunity to defend the "vulnerable," the elderly, the very young, the disadvantaged, the handicapped.

No, she doesn't feel the campaign is an intrusion or a sacrifice. No, she doesn't feel she's just "the candidate's wife."

She admittedly looks forward to a nice, warm beach, somewhere at the end of the trail, and to quiet times at home with her husband.

But she adds: "This is the highest point in my husband's career, and I'm glad to be able to share it with him. We share everything."

"We're both very strong, very independent people. Our careers mesh very well, and my husband is my strongest supporter."

A Phi Beta Kappa and Harvard Law School graduate, Mrs. Dole seems to have assumed one of the most substantive roles of all the candidates' wives.

Yet, there remains much of the wifely approach, the pep talk to supporters, and little of the hard-hitting, nitty-gritty campaigning.

She admits it's true — not because she can't discuss issues, not because she doesn't feel she should — but because of her leave of absence from the commission.

"I try to keep more on philosophy and principles," she says. "I wouldn't want a respondent to move to disqualify me in a case before the FTC because of something I said during the campaign."

"I don't even know what's pending," adds Mrs. Dole, who has received some criticism for not resigning.

She notes that a Library of Congress study showed that no laws are violated by her leave, which was approved by the commission chairman, the ranking minority member and President Ford.

"I think a lot of women were watching to see what I would do," she says, noting she received many telephone calls and letters from people who urged her not to give up her career.

Although her lower-key campaign role is dictated by her own career, Mrs. Dole admits: "It inhibits me. It's somewhat of a frustration because I would like to feel free to discuss anything."

Within those self-imposed limitations, she carries the message, "You have a clear choice this year: between a moderate-to-conservative Republican ticket and a very liberal Democratic ticket."

She emphasizes that Republicans stand for strong national defense and cuts in federal spending. She uses the domestic analogy, "A family cannot spend more than it takes in."

But much of her campaign is devoted to conveying the personal, the chatty, the funny side.

She jokes about Dole proposing to her, "He told me it would be exciting, but he didn't tell me it would be like this!" She adds, "His courtship lines were not exactly truth in advertising."

Or she jokes about his being tapped for vice president and telling her to listen at the door to hear what the reporters outside were saying.

Mrs. Dole brings a down-home touch when she tells a Republican audience in Belleville, Ill., that her 83-year-old father wants to revisit his old home in Carbondale.

Warming her hands before a fire in a log cabin replica in Lombard, Ill., she says her mother is interested in historical preservation.

She talks of her small-town, North Carolina background and praises the "warm, wonderful people" of Russell, Kan. — Dole's home.

Mrs. Dole also says her role is to "say the thing that the candidate would not say about himself." And so she talks about Bob Dole, the man, and his "inner strength."

"He's the strongest person I've ever known," she says, telling audiences about the World War II injury that put him in a body cast and into hospitals for three years.

"This adversity is part of the reason of his inner strength," she says. "Bob Dole is an example that you can go forward and you don't have to stop at the sidelines."

Again and again, she is asked about her husband's tough-guy, hatchet-man image, and she maintains it is just not true.

"I think it's time to reassess that label," she says. "Yes, he is a hard campaigner. He's a candid person and he's not afraid to point out inconsistencies in the other side."

The things others might find political corn or hackneyed, she seems to relish.

In Huntsville, Ala., Elizabeth Hanford Dole was the delight of an advance man who discovered that the Hanford Circus had come to town with a baby elephant.

Of course, she fed peanuts to the elephant and later joked about trying to position the peanut on the large wet tongue while the Secret Service looked uneasily at the swaying, menacing trunk.

"That wasn't so bad," she laughed, "but afterwards, I had

Ferry Boat's Captain Almost Legally Drunk

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A coroner says the captain of a Mississippi River commuter ferry was "almost legally drunk" when his craft collided with a tanker last week, killing an estimated 78 persons.

"This guy had been drinking... It is difficult to say how much," said Orleans Parish Coroner Frank Minyard, who released an autopsy Wednesday on Capt. Egidio Auletta, 35.

Minyard said the autopsy showed a blood alcohol content of .09 per cent — "just a tad under 0.1... which is the legal definition of being drunk in the state of Louisiana."

The coroner said that to have a blood sample with such a high alcohol content "a man would have to have been drinking quite heavily."

Minyard said Auletta "was almost legally drunk, and this coupled with the fact that he was at the end of his shift — the drinking and the fatigue — in my judgment, impaired his judgment and ability to handle his vessel."

Some officials said after the mishap that the captain's body was not found on the bridge of the ferry George Prince. He was the only licensed pilot known to be aboard.

The ferry and the Norwegian tanker Frosta collided before dawn Oct. 20 as the ferry was making the 10-minute crossing from Destrehan to Luling, 20 miles upriver from New Orleans.

A Coast Guard panel investigating the accident heard one of the 18 survivors say Wednesday that the ferry seemed to be on "some kind of suicide mission."

Kenneth Bechel of Destrehan said the ferry cut its engines within about 30 yards of the tanker. "If the engines had continued, it might have missed," he said.

And Arthur Benneche, chief mate of a ship that was anchored nearby, testified, "I believe if the ferryboat hadn't started to back up it would have passed.... It would have been a narrow escape, but it would have passed."

Benneche's testimony was entered into the record over objections by attorneys for the Louisiana Highway Department, which operates the ferry and which has been named as codefendant in six suits by survivors seeking $12 million in damages.

Officials had said the death toll could reach 100, but they lowered that estimate Wednesday to 78, still the worst Mississippi River tragedy this century.

State Secretary of Transportation George Fischer said 72 bodies have been recovered and six persons are still missing.

The original list of victims included 22 persons who have since been located and were not on the ferry, Fischer said.

Oppose River Usage Curbs

RALEIGH (AP) — A power company which would draw 60 million gallons of water a day from the Yadkin River has opposed protection of the river by regulating heavy use of its water.

At a meeting Wednesday of the North Carolina Environmental Commission, Duke Power Co. opposed the river being designated a capacity use area which would require a permit for anyone to draw more than 100,000 gallons of water a day from it.

Duke is building a nuclear powered generating plant on the river's shore which would need to use the 60 million gallons a day for cooling. The company argued that the river has enough water. Duke spokesman also argued that the firm has an obligation to supply power to the residents in the area and the nuclear plant is needed to meet that obligation.

HE'LL CHALLENGE ELECTION LAW — Former Minnesota senator Eugene McCarthy stands during a press conference in Pittsburgh Wednesday and says he will challenge the constitutionality of the federal election law. McCarthy, who is running for president as an independent in more than 30 states, said he would file a court challenge to the federal act after next week's election. (AP Wirephoto)

Representatives of area chambers of commerce and commissioners from Rowan, Davie and Stanly and counties argued in favor of Duke Power's position. Opposing the company were representatives of Davidson and Forsyth counties and the Community Environmental Action of Winston-Salem.

A decision is expected in December.

Totie Fields Built New Routine On Losing Leg

By PETER J. BOYER
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Can a famous comedienne get laughs with a routine about having her leg amputated and spending seven months in a hospital bed? Yes, if she's Totie Fields.

The 47-year-old performer met the press Wednesday, her first public appearance since a circulatory problem complicated by phlebitis forced removal of her left leg last spring.

"Honey, if you're not funny with two legs, you're not going to be funny with one," Miss Fields said when asked whether the amputation would affect her act. "I have the same tongue and brain. I haven't lost my sense of humor."

And she proceeded to prove it.

"The minute I put the rings back on, I knew I was well," she said, flashing a handful of diamonds. "I don't care if I lost a leg. I've got my fingers."

Miss Fields revealed that she had once tipped the scales at 191 pounds but said she now weighs 117.

"I've never said this before, no one in the world knew how much I weighed, not even George (her husband, George Johnston) ... This is the first time in my life I weigh less than my husband."

During her ordeal, Miss Fields said, there were "times, several times, when they thought I was gone." But she said she believed "there's a reason, I don't think God works in any other way ... and my life will probably be happier than ever."

"Oh, it's so good to be here, so good to smile. Oh God, how badly I wanted to live," she said.

A few of Miss Fields' friends — comedian Jan Murray and performers Florence Henderson and Bert Convy — surprised the comedienne with a huge cake and a few kisses.

She said letters from her fans — "we stopped counting at half a million" — kept her spirits up during the long months she spent on her back.

Miss Fields said she will soon start learning to walk on an artificial leg first with parallel bars, then with crutches, then with a cane, "and then, on-stage." She plans to return to the nightclub stage next April in Las Vegas.

All-Out Effort To Help Carter

By The Associated Press
Leading North Carolina Democrats, including former Sen. Sam Ervin Sen. Robert Morgan and Lt. Gov. Jim Hunt, have joined an all-out effort to help Jimmy Carter win the state next Tuesday.

Ervin has agreed to make radio and television commercials to be used in North Carolina and perhaps other states in the last four days of the campaign.

Ervin, who retired two years ago, was chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee. Carter had requested his help by telephone Tuesday, Ervin said, adding that he is free to choose the content of the commercials.

Ervin said the commercials will emphasize his belief that while President Ford was House minority leader, he was responsible for attempts to block a House Watergate investigation before the 1972 election. Ervin has previously made that opinion public.

Also to be stressed in the commercials, Ervin said, is that Carter is a southerner and that his election would show that the South "is really part of the union." Ford's error about Russian domination of Eastern Europe during the second debate will also be mentioned because it

First Airplane Ride At Age 98

BOONVILLE, N. C. (AP) — Johnson Coram will be taking his first airplane ride next week, flying to California to celebrate his brother's birthday. Coram is 98. His brother, E. Bright Coram, will be 100 on election day, Tuesday.

The "younger" Coram will leave Friday from Greensboro and his son and daughter-in-law will be making the trip with him.

Coram also will see his 92-year-old sister, Lesba Hill, who plans to be at the California brother's home in Riverside for the reunion.

"shows he's not very knowledgeable," Ervin said.

Gubernatorial candidate Hunt, Morgan and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham were stumping for Carter in the East Wednesday in an effort to block a reported move toward Ford. A recent poll by The News and Observer of Raleigh showed Ford leading in the traditionally Democratic East.

While in Washington, N.C., Wednesday, Hunt called Carter "our kind of person. He is an honest man who grew up on a farm."

Hunt also deplored what Democrats have said is a distortion by the GOP of Carter's positions. "It looks like to me that the only way the Republicans have decided that they can beat Jimmy Carter is to get down in the gutter," he said.

"I think it's a shameful commentary on the kind of politics the Republicans believe in. And I believe that come next Tuesday the people of North Carolina will reject it," he said.

Morgan told Democrats in Johnston County that they shouldn't be misled or "duped by the Watergate-type tactics of the Republican administration."

But, Republicans had some harsh words of their own. Gov. Jim Holshouser issued a statement accusing the Democrats of being desperate and "trying to muddy the issues with a charge a day."

Ted Heydinger, executive director of Ford's North Carolina campaign, defended the Ford campaign materials as accurate.

In other political news, Republican candidate for attorney general Ed Powell said Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten bungled the Southern Bell case. He said there were long delays in the case attributed to the attorney general's office. Charges against Bell officials were dropped this week and the statute of limitations had expired, preventing prosecution of the company.

The Republican candidate for secretary of state, Asa Spaulding, said Wednesday that North Carolina needs a change of leadership, that incumbent Thad Eure's 40 years in office is too long.

Aver Dole Has Memory Lapse

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — Aides to Sen. Bob Dole say the Republican vice presidential candidate has suffered a lapse of memory and can't remember telling a national television audience that this century's wars were "Democrat wars."

Dole aides said Wednesday that, despite his use of the phrase as recently as Monday, the candidate has no recollection of using the term during his nationally televised debate with Democratic candidate Walter Mondale 10 days ago.

The Republican vice presidential candidate reportedly had been under pressure from GOP leaders to back off the "Democrat war" remark, which aides privately said was hurting the campaign.

So when the subject came up again in Troy, Ohio, on Tuesday, Dole said, "No, I don't believe" that either World War II or Vietnam were partisan wars.

It was a clear retreat from his characterization of these wars in his televised campaign debate as "Democrat wars."

But Dole denied that he had reversed his position, saying he only brought up the subject in Troy because "I didn't want the media to be confused."

He was then asked, "Are you still calling them Democrat wars?"

"Never did," Dole responded. Dole's press secretary, Larry Speakes, later said Dole "did not recall that specific quote from the debate."

Speakes said a partial debate transcript, including the two references Dole made to "Democrat wars," was shown to Dole on his campaign jet Wednesday but the candidate still could not recall the words.

Actually, Dole used that phrase twice during the debate.

During the debate, Dole claimed Watergate is "not a very good issue any more than the war in Vietnam would be or World War II or World War I or the war in Korea, all Democrat wars, all in this century."

"I figured up the other day, if we added up the killed and wounded in Democrat wars this century, it would be about 1.6 million Americans, enough to fill the city of Detroit."

Despite his loss of memory about the debate, Dole often referred to the war statements last week. And the day after the debate, in Wichita, Kan., he defended his television remarks about "Democrat wars" and warned Democrats that if they mention Watergate "then we'll dredge up a few wars."

He expanded on the theme last week and, asked often if he planned to follow through with his "Democrat war" threat, he replied that he planned "to fight fire with fire."

Gurney Is Cleared, But Bitter

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer
ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Former Sen. Edward J. Gurney, his name cleared after a long legal battle, blames his ordeal on "vindictive people from the government."

"They destroyed a United States senator, blackened my name, besmirched my character and ruined me economically," Gurney said Wednesday after a jury found him innocent of perjury.

Gurney, 62, was accused of lying to a 1974 Jacksonville grand jury about a major political fund-raising operation. He had been acquitted of five bribery, conspiracy and perjury charges at a trial in Tampa last year, but the government ordered him retried on one perjury charge on which the jury reached no verdict.

"We've beaten these mean, vicious and vindictive people from the government," said the former Republican senator, who retired because of the scandal.

The grand jury had charged that Gurney "deliberately and wilfully lied" when he said he didn't know that his onetime fund raiser, Larry Williams of Orlando, had collected more than $400,000 in illegal contributions. Williams got the money from Florida builders in exchange for promises of favors from Florida offices of the Federal Housing Administration.

The only issue before the jury here when it began deliberations was whether Gurney knew before mid-1973 that Williams used part of his illegal collections to pay Gurney's field-office and staff expenses.

Gurney, a World War II hero who served three terms as a congressman before his 1968 election to the Senate, gained national prominence as the tough-questioning defender of then-President Richard M. Nixon during the televised Senate Watergate hearings in 1973.

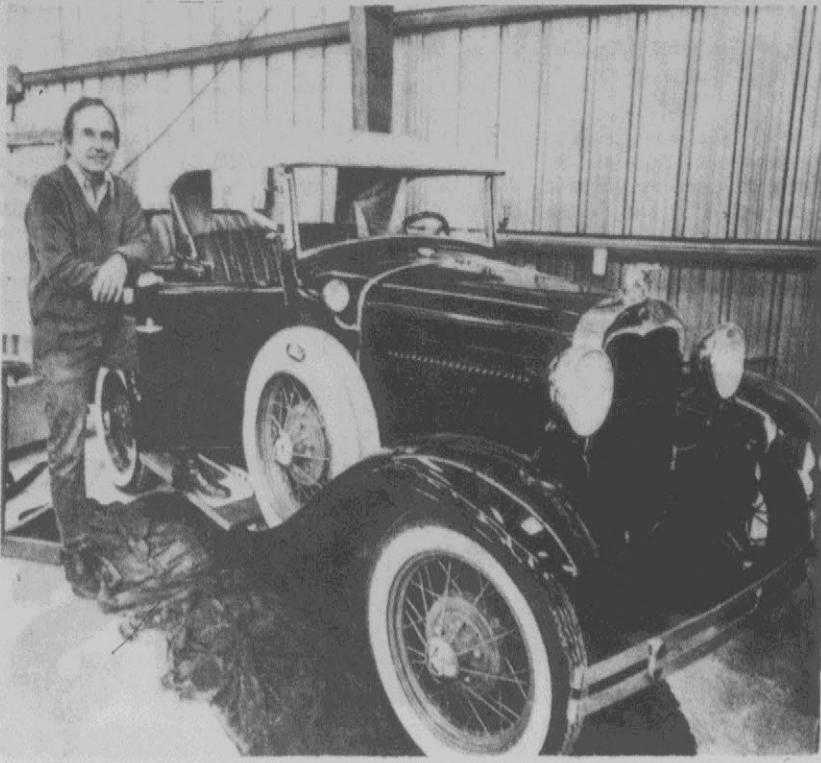

Asked whether he thought this had anything to do with the government's prosecution, Gurney said, "I can only conjecture about Watergate.... I expect it probably did. But I don't know."

Justice Department lawyer Edward Barnes, the ninth federal prosecutor assigned to the case over three years, had no comment.

Williams testified for the government in return for a plea-bargained prison sentence of five months. Others serving prison terms in connection with the case were James Groot, once Gurney's administrative assistant; FHA Director William Pelski of Coral Gables; and building contractor John Priestes of Miami.

The case against Gurney depended largely on Williams, who went to the Justice Department in 1973 and agreed to tell all about his fund-raising activities in return for a reduced sentence.

Nov. 5 Deadline Handed Chrysler On New Pact

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers has set a Nov. 5 deadline for a strike against Chrysler, but a second 1976 walkout seems unlikely.

The union told Chrysler Corp. Wednesday that 118,000 workers in 22 states and Canada would go on strike if agreement is not reached on a new contract, but it made clear that the walkout could be averted.

"I don't believe Chrysler wants a strike, and we don't want to strike, but there's always a possibility that a strike will occur," said UAW Vice President Douglas Fraser. "We've got all the major problems to resolve, but none are insurmountable."

The UAW struck its principal bargaining target, Ford Motor Co., on Sept. 14, and the two sides settled on a new contract 28 days later.

Generally, the contract reached with the principal target sets the pattern for the industry, and both Chrysler and General Motors have said they will accept the major provisions. These include additional paid days off, a 3 per cent annual wage hike, continued cost-of-living protection, improved layoff and health care benefits and special cash payments for retirees.

But in the past, if secondary issues unique to each company bog down the contract talks, the UAW has set strike deadlines for companies other than the principal target.

Chrysler's top bargainer, Vice President William M. O'Brien, said the firm is confident of reaching "a fair and equitable agreement ... without a work stoppage."

UAW President Leonard Woodcock said a deadline would not be set at GM, where the union represents 390,000 workers, until after Nov. 5.

Woodcock also said bargaining with American Motors, the smallest of the auto makers, resumed Monday in Milwaukee.

Talks with AMC, which has 13,000 UAW-represented workers, are not expected to intensify until pacts with the other companies are settled. The UAW has said it would take into consideration sagging sales and mounting losses at AMC during bargaining.

A New Syndicated TV Show By Norman Lear

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — After the success of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" in syndication, it seemed only logical for producer Norman Lear to come up with another five-day-a-week show. And he has.

It's "All That Glitters," a five-year series that airs next April. It concerns what would happen — or is happening — when sex roles are reversed and women, not men, dominate in life, love and business.

Lear is executive producer of the new 30-minute show, which his company says he cocreated with a lady writer, Ann Marcus, who was one of the cocreators of "Mary Hartman," now in its second season.

"Hopefully, the stories will be as compelling as the scenes in 'Mary Hartman' have been," Lear said. "But the big difference is that it takes the male-female role and turns it around 180 degrees."

"It's 1976, not 1966, but you'll find, say, a corporate board room with eight women and one token male. Or that one of the young men in the show wants desperately to get married, but it's the young woman who doesn't wish the commitment."

He conceded in an interview that "Glitters" basically is what some might call the old switcheroo, but says "there's so much detail there's no one-joke thing about it."

Sure, he said, part of it dramatizes what life would be like with traditional sex roles reversed, but "the other part is what's happening with the roles as they exist today."

"In other words, by reversing it you're not only able to see what would happen, you're getting a better look at what is happening."

He said he took the show to NBC as a nighttime prospect, but found they couldn't air it as a five-night-a-week series. So he looked elsewhere for sales.

All three networks turned down "Mary Hartman" as a daytime show, but Lear says he didn't even try that route with "Glitters." He says he went directly to what he calls "the fourth market" — the local station market for new series or reruns of old network series.

He says in eight of the top 10 TV markets, plus 30 others, have bought it — without seeing a pilot — and he expects at least 80 in all will be carrying it when it starts in April.

An interesting facet of the deal is that the new syndication arm of Lear's production company is selling the show. In the past, an outside syndicator was hired to take his wares to the stations.

And he says the new way will be the drill from now on, not only for such shows he plans for syndication but also his network shows after they've finished their prime-time runs on ABC, CBS or NBC.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Daytime is no time for you to get involved in any arguments or discussions with others. Nor is it time to make any important changes or to be in a rebellious state of mind. However, aspects change radically tonight and you find you can have a very good time at recreations and get the goodwill of a bigwig.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Steer clear of an unpredictable friend in the morning. But in the evening all will work out better socially.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't jeopardize your present security in any way or you regret it later. A credit affair can be worrisome early, but by afternoon you handle it efficiently.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have difficulty carrying through with a plan you have in mind during the early part of the day. Forget it until evening when it works out to your advantage. Steer clear of a gossip.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't put so much emphasis on responsibilities you may have at this time. Later you handle them confidently and get good results. Close ties can be annoying, but take it in stride.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A partner can be very trying but remain calm and this person will soon be back to par. Don't be forceful with one who is being very unreasonable.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are bored with your work, so do only what is necessary and take time for recreation. Show cordiality toward co-workers, although you are not in a good mood.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Do important tasks during early morning hours. Plan for recreation later in the day. Don't lose your temper with one of whom you are fond.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Do not annoy one at home or there can be trouble best avoided. Plan now to make conditions better quietly in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Exercise care and avoid possible accidents; then you can visit friends and relatives in the afternoon safely. Associates could prove to be somewhat annoying during the day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Relieve financial pressure and gain goodwill of others today. Try not to be critical of others so much. Show more respect for bigwigs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to understand the views of others instead of being so demanding and you get along better. Put your affairs in order and then make the evening a delightful one socially.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't try to get out of any promises you have made or you could get into serious trouble. Keep your temper under control, also.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will try to use temper and other tricks to test the patience of parents and see how much can be gotten away with. Be sure to discipline in a wise way and then your child will use all this energy constructively instead.

Carter Makes Michigan A Race

By PIET BENNETT
Associated Press Writer
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The favorite son is favored, but the support of organized labor has given Jimmy Carter a shot at carrying President Ford's home state of Michigan and its 21 electoral votes.

The latest poll shows the Democratic candidate trailing Ford by three percentage points, a sharp change from four years ago when the state AFL-CIO stood on the sidelines as Richard M. Nixon rolled up the second largest percentage vote of any Michigan presidential contest in 40 years.

The neutrality of organized labor, dictated by AFL-CIO headquarters in Washington, hurt Democratic chances badly in a state which 1.2 million union members call home. This election year, the unions are behind Carter fully and formally.

At the same time, lack of money may be hampering the GOP cause.

Peter Fletcher, the state's Republican national committeeman who heads Ford's Michigan campaign, says only two staffers are on the payroll full time. In 1972, Nixon's campaign had more than 30 full-time employees in Michigan and Carter has nearly 50 this time.

Ford's campaign relies on volunteers plus "a very distinct flavor of the homestate identification," Fletcher reports. He predicts flatly, "We're going to win."

That homestate flavor for Ford is being provided most visibly by the stumping efforts of GOP Gov. William Milliken and U.S. Sen. Robert Griffin.

Their efforts and personal popularity draw much of the credit for Ford's nearly 2-1 margin over Ronald Reagan in Michigan's May presidential primary.

Top aides to Milliken and Griffin joined Fletcher and state GOP Chairman William McLaughlin took control of Ford's flagging Michigan campaign just nine days before the primary and carried it to victory.

Now only Fletcher and McLaughlin are fully involved in the campaign.

State Democratic leaders appear almost as confident of victory as their Republican counterparts.

"We really feel we have a good chance. We have a real shot at it," contends Don O'Brien, who is running Carter's state campaign. But when asked to predict a victory margin, O'Brien replies, "I'm not that crazy."

A poll released Sunday by the Detroit News showed Ford leading Carter 45 to 42 per cent with 11 per cent undecided and 2 per cent saying they planned to vote for independent candidate Eugene J. McCarthy.

That three-point lead fell within the survey's four-point margin of error and marked a further slippage for Ford, who had been leading Carter 47 to 42 per cent in an earlier Detroit News poll.

The latest poll, conducted by Market Opinion Research and consisting of interviews with 700 persons, was conducted just before the final televised debate between the two men.

One thing both sides agree on is the race's key issue — unemployment. Michigan still had 8.9 per cent of its workers jobless in the last figures before the election. That was 1.1 per cent above the national average.

Still, the figures were a dramatic improvement over 1975 when unemployment averaged 15.5 per cent statewide and often was 50 per cent higher than the national statistics.

"It's the main issue, no doubt about it," McLaughlin says. "But as long as it keeps coming down, it shouldn't hurt us. I haven't seen it being counterproductive so far."

"You can't have unemployment as high as we've had for as long without having workers feeling threatened," counters Darrell Tennis, a staff representative for the state AFL-CIO.

But Tennis also notes his organization cannot guarantee the turnout or voting patterns of the 500,000 families it represents.

"It's a sizable bloc but it's not monolithic. It's not a question of pushing a button and turning out the vote. That may

Choir Honors Travis Dixon

AYDEN — Travis Dixon, who served as president of the Senior Choir of Zion Chapel FWB Church for 30 years, was recently honored by the Senior Choir.

Guests in attendance included his foster children, James Richard Dixon of Albany, N.Y., Roy Dixon of Washington, D.C., Yvonne D. Williams and her three daughters of Landover, Md. Several nieces and nephews of Grifton rendered several musical selections.

The president Mrs. Myrtle Bizzell was mistress of ceremonies and Gratz Norcott served as toastmaster.

Gym Contests

A needle-in-a-haystack contest and a pumpkin decorating contest have been planned for Friday at 7 p.m. at the Elm Street Gym. The events are being sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

In the pumpkin decoration contest, youth are asked to bring their own decorated pumpkins and four winning pumpkins will be selected, scariest, smallest, largest and the most original.

Prizes will be awarded in each of the events and the public is invited to attend.

have been true once, but it was before I was born."

Historically, Michigan offers little solace to either party. In 13 presidential elections stretching back to 1924, Michigan has gone for the GOP nominee seven times and the Democratic choice six.

Part of the reason for that volatility may be Michigan's ethnic and racial mixture.

Judge Robert Browning disposed of the following cases at the October 18 term of Pitt County Superior Court.

Charles Franklin Bell, Route 4, Tarboro, driving under the influence, pled guilty to reckless driving, 30 days jail suspended on payment of $50 and costs.

William Brooks Mills, Bethel, in-custody, dismissed by prosecutor; indecent liberties, 24 months jail suspended on payment of costs, and $135 per month for use and benefit of Virginia Dare Mills.

Tom Moore, Route 2, Greenville, assault with a deadly weapon, five to seven years jail.

Writene England O'Neal, 240 Churchill Dr., fail to stop for stop sign, dismissal by prosecutor.

Edward Freeman McCullen, Grifton, driving under the influence, pled guilty to driving with 10 per cent blood alcohol, pay $100 and costs.

Roosevelt Stephenson, Route 2, Chocowinity, assault with a deadly weapon, two years jail suspended on payment of costs, medical bills and probation for three years.

Dennis Bunch, Farmville, assault on a female, one year jail suspended on payment of $50 and costs and probation for five years.

Michael Denard Taylor, 217B Scott Dorm, larceny, pled guilty to trespass, 10 days jail suspended on payment of costs.

Ralph Leon Roberts, Route 4, Washington, driving under the influence, pled guilty to driving with 10 per cent blood alcohol, driving while license revoked, six months jail suspended on payment of $300 and costs.

Bobby Jene Smith, Route 3, Ayden, possession of alcoholic beverages for sale, 60 days jail suspended on payment of $50 and costs.

Lander Junior Maye, Route 1, Winterville, possession of alcoholic beverages for sale, 60 days jail suspended on payment of $50 and costs.

Steven Earl Purvis, 1623 South Pitt St., breaking, entering and larceny from auto, pled guilty to breaking and entering, two years jail suspended on probation for three years.

Robert Williams, 415 West Village Dr., assault with a deadly weapon, pled guilty to affray, 20 days jail suspended on payment of costs.

over nine million residents are foreign born or have at least one parent who was born outside the United States. Michigan also has nearly one million blacks and 120,000 Spanish speaking residents.

Without any registration by political party, crossover voting can be a factor in state elections.

Some Democrats in Ford's home town of Grand Rapids admitted voting for him during this year's May GOP primary. "Many Democrats feared Reagan and crossed to vote for Ford," says Robert Kleiner, the 5th District Democratic chairman.

Kleiner predicts no such crossovers for Ford in November, declaring the President "will not carry the City of Grand Rapids" and will lose Michigan to Carter.

"That's absurd," retorts Robert Eleveld, Kleiner's GOP counterpart. "After all, this guy has worked for this district for 25 years (as a congressman). On the last time he's ever going to run for election, I don't think the people are going to turn their back on him."

Middle East's Lamb Differs

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Lamb is the basic meat for much of the world, and thereby hangs a tail, sometimes weighing as much as 30 pounds.

The breed of sheep raised in the Middle East has a more delicate flavor and is not marbled with fat as American breeds are, say caterers for the national airline of Iran. The fat of Middle Eastern sheep is stored in their tails, the caterers said.

Chances Are Zero, But Allan Howe Campaigns

By BILL BEECHAM
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The polls show him far behind. His party isn't supporting him, and most of its leaders rate his chances zero. But still Rep. Allan T. Howe doggedly campaigns on and insists he may still win re-election to his congressional seat.

Howe, a Democrat and a 49-year-old father of five, was convicted in two courts last summer of trying to buy favors from two police decoy prostitutes. He resisted party pressure to drop out of the race.

"The people are sticking with me," he says. "I'm very hopeful and surely it's possible for me to win." Hardly any Democratic politician shares this view, and many feel Howe's presence on the ticket is hurting other Democratic contenders.

The latest poll show. Howe trailing Republican Dan Marriott by 50 to 27 per cent. Veteran Sen. Frank E. Moss trails Republican newcomer Orrin Hatch in a bid for a fourth term, and Democrat Scott Matheson, a railroad lawyer supported by retiring Gov. Calvin L. Rampton, holds a narrow and shaky lead over Republican Atty. Gen. Vernon B. Romney in the governor's race.

"In the early part of the campaign, the Democrats had a very hard time really getting off the ground because every place they went somebody wanted to talk about Mr. Howe's problems rather than the issues of the campaign," Rampton says.

Howe maintains he's encountered few difficulties.

"The campaign is just rolling along," he says. "I've been getting excellent response from the people. We're walking in the neighborhoods several hours every day ringing doorbells and shaking hands." He said his staff reports that campaign contributions fell off last summer, but that money coming in since his conviction "is in the form of $10, $20 and $50 donations."

Howe has put his family to work on the campaign, which contends with the party-endorsed, write-in candidacy of Daryl McCarty, who trails Howe in the polls.

Howe's wife, Marlene, accompanies him wherever he goes. Sons and daughters deliver handbills, answer telephones and perform other duties.

The freshman congressman says there's been little feedback about his conviction from the people, although his family reported several weeks ago that a pipe bomb blew apart their mailbox, and a caller yelled obscenities to him over the telephone during a radio talk show.

"Most people are very understanding," Howe said. "There's a feeling of outrage by some about the way the matter was handled by the press. They feel they've had enough and let's get on with it."

Students Work In N.C. Agencies

Eighteen students from the East Carolina University Department of Social Work and Correctional Services are participating in field education placements in 17 eastern N.C. social work and-or correctional agencies.

Placements include mental health institutions, hospitals, alcoholism programs, police departments and juvenile court settings. A degree program requirement, field placement involves four days each week in actual work in human service settings, with one day on campus during which students attend seminars relevant to their field experiences and consult with faculty members.

Through the use of weekly assignments, academic preparation is integrated with the reality demands on each student to perform in the field setting.

Upon completion of the field experience and academic requirements for the Bachelor of Science Professionals (BSP) degree, students are prepared for beginning professional practitioner level positions in human service agencies.

W. T. Gartman of the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions faculty is coordinator of field education. Names of students; their hometowns and agency placements include:

PITT COUNTY, Ayden — Richard Pierce, correctional services major, Juvenile Court, Second District, Washington; and Teresa Salmon, correctional services major, Juvenile Court, Third District, Greenville;

Greenville — John Banks, correctional services major, office of Malcolm Howard, attorney-at-law; and Gene McAbee, correctional services major, Greenville Police Department, Juvenile Division.
