U.S. Supply Of Natural Gas Again 'Short'

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States natural gas supplies will fall about 18 per cent short of demand this winter, according to a Federal Energy Agency study.

The shortage will not be severe enough to affect homeowners, but it could cause layoffs in certain industries in states like Iowa and North Carolina, where gas is particularly hard to come by, the study warned.

And most of the country will be stuck with a share of an estimated $550 million bill for the alternate fuels required to take the place of natural gas.

The report warned that a severely cold winter or a sharp spurt in economic activity could increase the shortages to more disruptive levels.

The report was presented Tuesday by FEA Administrator John Christie to a House subcommittee on energy and power.

As in past winters, the FEA said North Carolina was the state with the most serious gas shortage. The state has only one pipeline supplier, and a large percentage of its gas consumers are industrial users, who rank low on the national priority list for gas allocation.

The FEA said North Carolina could have fuel shortages in normal winter weather. Unusually cold weather could produce shortages of gas and alternate fuels there and in eight other states: Georgia, Maryland, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky, West Virginia and Arizona.

Brickworks in North Carolina and Iowa may shut down temporarily and lay off employees because of the shortage of gas and the expense of alternative fuels, the report said. Otherwise, it predicted no widespread layoffs.

Industrial users will find the shortage about 6 per cent more severe than last year; commercial users will have 2 per cent less gas; homeowners will still have all the gas they need, the report said.

Meanwhile, a federal appeals court refused to block the new, higher rates for natural gas that the Federal Power Commission authorized last month. The new rates would cost the average residential customer $15 to $18 per year.

A consumer group, Energy Action, had asked the court to stay the FPC order. It claimed the new rates were unjustifiably high. They doubled and nearly tripled the wellhead price for newly discovered natural gas from $.52 to $1.01 or $1.42, depending on when the gas was discovered. The higher price will push consumer prices upward for several years as more of the market supply begins to consist of newly discovered gas.

The court, however, did require that the gas producers make provisions to refund the higher rates if the consumers' appeal eventually succeeds.

Save Eight From Sinking Vessel

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — Eight persons were airlifted from a life raft early today after the 101-foot pleasure craft Lady Margaret sank in choppy Atlantic seas 45 miles southeast of here.

The body of a ninth person was pulled from the sea by the crew of a Coast Guard vessel several hours later.

A Coast Guard helicopter picked up the survivors and transported them to a hospital in Southport. Two were hospitalized there, two were transferred to a hospital in Wilmington and four were treated and released, a hospital spokesman said.

Dozier Memorial Hospital Administrator Lorraine Eichorn said the four hospitalized survivors were reported in "stable condition."

The Lady Margaret, which the Coast Guard said is registered to Global Communications in East Lansing, Mich., reportedly was enroute to Miami when she radioed about 1:45 a.m. that she was taking on water and that all were abandoning ship.

A Coast Guard spokesman said winds in the vicinity were 34 to 40 knots at the time, and waves were 12 to 14 feet.

Greenville Tobacco Market Concludes Record Season

The Greenville Tobacco Market closed out the 1976 auction season on Tuesday with the highest season average in the history of the market.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Local Tobacco Board of Trade, reported that the market averaged $114.97 per hundred pounds for the season on the basis of 54,495,951 pounds sold for $62,651,400.

Bryan noted that last year the Greenville Market sold 59,837,094 pounds for $60,418,446, an average of $100.97 per hundred pounds. He pointed out that there was a reduction in pounds allocated in 1976 which resulted in less pounds sold.

The final sale of the season yesterday saw 121,772 pounds sold for $121,300, an average of $99.61 per hundred pounds, the sales supervisor reported.

Stabilization receipts on the closing sale accounted for 45.55 per cent of total sales, he said.

"I would like to thank the farmers who sold on the Greenville Market this year and to tell them that we will look forward to serving them in the future," Bryan added.

He contended that, "Early designation will make the operation of the 1977 marketing season as successful as 1976. I would like to suggest that farmers designate their tobacco to the warehouse of their choice in Greenville as early as possible for the 1977 marketing season."

The Greenville Market began sales in 1890 and has had some 86 years experience in the tobacco business. Tobacco handling floor space on the market is over two million square feet.

So Near, But Too Far

ESCAPE TUNNEL — San Quentin Prison guards pose at the top of an escape tunnel in the North Cell block where three inmates were caught Tuesday. Prison officials said inmates had dug out about 77 feet to the east and San Francisco Bay when tunnel was discovered. (AP Wirephoto)

No Escaping San Quentin

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP) — Prison guards found three men with a lot of time on their hands in a locked room full of dirt. They had dug a grand tunnel, the prison says, but it wasn't quite finished.

Ten feet under the grounds of the celebrated San Quentin Prison, guards found the 67-foot-long tunnel, three feet wide, with wood-braced sides, electric lights, a ventilation fan and a sophisticated communications system using speakers, wires and tubes from stolen radios and telephones.

"It was real Jimmy Cagney stuff," said prison spokesman Bill Merkle on Tuesday. "Maybe two more weeks and they would have made it."

Officials estimated the convicts had been at it for a month. The tunnel had already passed the wall of this grim structure on the edge of San Francisco Bay. It ended under a paved road, Merkle said, and was 30 to 35 feet short of the water's edge.

"It would have been easy," said Merkle. "If they had made it to the bay, they would have been beyond the security perimeter. All they would have had to do would be tippy-toe around and they would have been gone."

But on Tuesday Lt. Jerry Copus, checking carefully because guards had heard rumors an escape attempt was afoot, grew suspicious of a locked steel door in the utility alley of North Cellblock, a five-tier building that houses Death Row and the gas chamber.

Syrian Troops, Armor Move Into Beirut And Areas; No Resistance

By FAROUK NASSAR Associated Press Writer BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops and tanks moved into Beirut and surrounding areas today in the new Arab League peacekeeping force's first major move toward ending the 19-month-old Lebanese civil war.

The lead tanks in a column of 50 tanks, 12 armored personnel carriers and 12 truckloads of heavily armed troops rumbled into the Galerie Samaan, a battleground on the southeast edge of Beirut.

The rest of the column backed up on along a stretch of contested road between Beirut's

Christian sector and the highway to the airport.

There was no resistance to the Syrian advance.

Much of the city's population ran to basements and other air raid shelters as ambulances raced through the streets with sirens wailing. People on balconies waved and smiled as the armored column moved through Moslem and Christian areas into the Galerie Samaan.

"If they are coming to help our country, then welcome them 100 times," said Joseph Salloum, a grocer in the Christian Hazmieh suburb.

The advance into southeast Beirut was part of a sevenprong Syrian push on the capital from the mountains east of the city to assume their new role as the major part of an enlarged Arab peacekeeping force.

The Syrians headed for seafloor positions in the rear of Beirut's Moslem and Christian areas. A peacekeeper's command spokesman said the advance was expected to be finished by nightfall.

"The forces are then to move in to set up buffer zones along hot spots in the capital under timetables set forth in a truce-enforcing security plan," the spokesman said.

He did not spell out the timetable. A Syrian major told reporters the Beirut-Damascus highway was now open "all the way." It had been closed during much of the 19 months of civil war.

Leftists said other Syrian units advanced toward the international airport south of Beirut without opposition. Christian spokesmen said the Syrians were sweeping through the Christian hinterland northeast of Beirut according to plan.

Col. Ahmed el Haj, the Lebanese commander of the peacekeeping forces, said the Syrians would push the combatants back to positions they held before the war started on April 13, 1975, would dismantle the fortifications the warring militias have thrown up in the city.

Marijuana Raid

Four persons were arrested last night on marijuana possession charges following a raid on a house at 1406 Polk Ave. by members of the Greenville Police Department, agents of the State Bureau of Investigation and Pitt County Sheriff's Department deputies.

Chief Glenn Cannon said some 26 pounds of marijuana, a growing marijuana plant and other drugs were found in the dwelling during an 8:40 p.m. search.

He identified those charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of sale and manufacturing marijuana, as: Timothy McKenna Saleeby, 20; Robert Edward Hawkins, Jr., 20; Joseph Daniel Brennan, 20 and Patricia A. Steigerwald, 19, all of 1406 Polk Ave.

The four were placed under $5,000 bond each. Cannon said the street value of the drugs seized in the raid was estimated at $10,000.

Natural Gas Supplies Are Discussed At Utilities Bd. Meet

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector Managing Editor Natural gas is expected to be in short supply for local users this winter.

Utilities Director Charles Horne said Tuesday night at the Greenville Utilities Commission meeting that interruptible customers are now, and probably will be, off, all winter. Interruptible customers are natural gas customers who can turn to another energy source. Included are the hospital and most industries.

Horne reported that underground fuel oil storage facilities have been installed at the new hospital and additional oil storage is being considered.

Long range, abundant supplies of natural gas are not expected, Horne indicated. "Natural gas is running out," he said.

Home and small commercial users have priority on what gas is delivered here.

Horne also reported that North Carolina Natural Gas has been allowed a rate increase of approximately 12 cents per million cubic feet. This will reflect in an increase on the bills of residential gas users of five to six percent.

The director reported that there is a negative fossil fuel charge of 80 cents per thousand KWH for electricity for November. This will be reflected as a deduction on electric bills. However, because some VEPCO nuclear power plants were down in October, a higher fossil fuel charge will be reflected in December, January or February.

The commission accepted a low bid of $21,230 from Charlotte Tank Lining Co. for repainting the N. Greene Street water tank.

Also approved was the low bid from Phelps Chevrolet of $4,102.62 to replace a four-door sedan.

Other bids approved during the month of October were:

—Quantity of electric wire, Eastern Electric Supply, $58,351.31.

—Quantity of electric wire, Rigby Electric Co., $19,312.39.

—Underground cable, Eastern Electric Supply, $22,257.

—Four pick-up trucks, Bill Haddock Dodge, $13,612.80.

Helms Credits Farmer As Primary Factor In Keeping America Free

AT CONSERVATION MEETING . . . new president Robert G. Little, Congressman Walter Jones, and Sen.

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

U.S. Senator Jesse Helms said here last night that "the ability of the American farmer to produce food and fiber" is a prime factor in the country's ability to remain free and emphasized, "America owes its well-being to the . . . productivity of the American farmer."

Helms spoke here last night to several hundred people from a score of Northeastern counties attending the Area Five North Carolina Association Soil and Water Conservation Districts meeting.

The Senator took issue with the federal government's fiscal policies. He said the government "is becoming larger and larger," and said "no one benefits," with "thousands of people wasting tons of paper each day," in Washington. "There are just too many agencies . . . too many projects that confiscate our taxes and just don't work."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, he said, spends more money for food stamps than it does toward helping farmers produce more.

Helms emphasized, "if you were running your farms like the Federal Government, you'd be broke in 30 days," citing the fact that interest alone on money borrowed to fund deficit spending by the government amounts to $110 million each day.

"A balanced budget . . . that's the only answer," Helms said. "The land of the free has got to be the home of the brave. It will take some brave men to force it."

Saying "I'm against forced busing of school children," the Senator noted there is one aspect of forced busing he would favor . . . the forced busing of 100,000 Federal bureaucrats out of Washington, D.C."

Helms continued, "I'm for the workers of this country . . . not the shirkers. Able-bodied people should work!"

Helms continued, "America has been good to us. It's time we were good to her."

According to Helms, "There is one segment of our society that's stood strong for the fundamental principals of America . . . that's agriculture," and the farm families of the nation. "The fat of the land is living off the farmer," Helms said.

The farmer understands work. He's surrounded by it all the time. Too many Americans too often take for granted the bargain prices and availability of food."

Helms added, "The hard work and productive capacity of the farms make America different. We're here tonight to salute all of you working toward conserving our natural resources. More Americans ought to know more about what you are doing."

The Senator noted, "You have the healthy tendency to face up to your problems. Your way is the American way," not having someone else solving your problems for you. "You are doing something."

He noted that soil and water conservation districts are "local citizens determining what is best for your area . . . not some bureaucrat in Washington."

In addition to Helms, another member of Congress — First District Representative Walter Jones — spoke briefly.

Jones said he and Helms work closely together on matters that affect farm legislation. He noted that "constant attacks" on farm programs by some members of the House and the Senate makes cooperation essential, adding that their working relationship "transcends the bounds of partisan politics."

Robert G. Little of Pitt County was elected Area Five chairman at last night's meeting. He replaces Lloyd C. Bunch, of Edenton who presided at session.

Other officers elected last night include Fernie Laughinghouse of Beaufort County, vice-chairman and

SIX MORE VOLUMES

After I had received 14 volumes of THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF PHOTOGRAPHY, which I like very much, I sent a payment for the 15th volume to Graystone Press in New York City and received nothing. Some time later I got a letter saying there had been a computer mixup and that delivery had been delayed on some books. I waited a while longer, but have since written two letters with no response. I don't want to stop till I have all 20 volumes. J.B.

Hotline called New York City Directory Assistance to get the phone number of Graystone Press and found that the company had moved to New Jersey. We called the new number and talked to Mary Ann Griffith, who said THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF PHOTOGRAPHY has been discontinued. We strongly questioned the wisdom of discontinuing such a series of books before a customer's set has been completed. She then promised to go to the warehouse and check and see if she could find the remaining six volumes for you. She called back a few days later to say she had found them and would ship them to you immediately—all six at the same time. It will be up to you, she said, to decide whether you'd like to pay for them all at once or in monthly $4.98 payments as you've been doing.

You called Hotline this week to say the six books have been received.

Couple Weds In Recent Ceremony

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Langley Miller of Rt. 7, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Eloise Jackson of Rt. 2, Greenville, and the late Mr. Kenneth Ray Jackson.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a baby blue polyester knit formal dress with long sleeves. She carried a white Bible Covered with white silk accented with red roses with white velvet streamers tied in love knots.

The best man was the bridegroom's brother, Kenneth Jackson, of Rt. 2, Greenville.

A program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Rachael Skellenger of Winterville.

Miss Tammy Martin of Greenville, niece of the bride, presided at the register.

The couple will reside at Fort Hood, Tex., after a wedding trip to Fort Lee, Va.

The bride attended Pactolus and Chicod High School. The bridegroom attended Rose High School and is now serving in the U. S. Army.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony.

A cake-cutting was held Saturday night at the home of the bridegroom's mother. The bridegroom's mother cut the cake and Mrs. Linda Jackson, sister-in-law of the bridegroom poured punch.

Pumpkin

Although related to the cucumber, the pumpkin has been greatly modified by cultivation. Pumpkins vary in size from that of a large grapefruit to 50 or 100 pounds in weight. They belong to the gourd family. Pumpkin is extensively used in the United States, especially for pies, soups, etc. It contains much water and a good deal of coarse fiber.

Hints on Buying

Pumpkins are sold by the pound or unit. One pound makes 1/4 cup cooked pulp, and serves two people. Pumpkins are in season from September to March. In purchasing, look for deep yellow, fine-grained flesh. Large varieties may be covered with russet netting. Smaller pumpkins are preferable. Store pumpkins in a cool, dark, dry place with good air circulation.

Hints on Preparation

To prepare a mature pie pumpkin for puree, wash it and cut in halves. Do not scoop out seeds and fibers, but rub the cut surfaces with shortening and place the halves cut-side down on a baking sheet. Bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) until tender when pierced with a sharp fork right through the skin. Then remove seeds and fibers and scoop out the flesh and press through a potato ricer. If the juice is pressed out first and kept separate from the pulp, it may conveniently be evaporated by boiling to almost nothing, and then mixed with the pulp.

Other Uses

Seasoned and baked, or boiled in salted water and served with drawn butter or sweet herbs, young pumpkin brings to the palate the joys of summer squash. Like squash, the pumpkin can also be sieved, stewed, mashed, fried in egg and crumbs, or baked au gratin with results that will surprise and please those whose acquaintance with the pumpkin has hitherto been confined to the circumscribed area of a pie-crust.

For an unusual pumpkin dish try baked stuffed pumpkin. The seeds are removed and the pulp is scraped from the shell of a young pumpkin that has been simmered whole for 10 minutes and then quartered. A chopped onion and 2 cups of chopped shrimp, or any kind of fish, even meat, are fried lightly in 2 teaspoons of bacon drippings. A minced, large, ripe tomato, a clove of garlic, some ground thyme, a pinch of ground nutmeg, parsley and a few bay leaves are added. Then the pressed pumpkin pulp, which has been mixed with a cup of dry bread crumbs, salt, pepper, and a whole, well-beaten egg, is added. The mixture is stirred constantly for 10 minutes, then put into the shells, sprinkled with crumbs (to which grated cheese may be added, or buttered crumbs used), and baked until delicately brown. Whatever ingenuities of ingredients the homemaker may devise, the dish must be served ovenhot if its distinctive flavor is to be best appreciated.

Pumpkin combined with rice, in layers of cooked rice and layers of thinly sliced or chopped, cooked pumpkin, and a rich, thick sauce, made of cheese and white sauce in the usual way, is another novelty. With minced green pepper in it, it is delicious.

Pumpkin recipes are available by calling 758-1196.

Abby Scored For Sexist Reply

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: CHICAGO CHICKEN said he was afraid he'd feel like less of a man if he had a vasectomy, and you said, "If you're afraid you'll feel that way, the chances are you WILL." You then suggested that he place the burden of birth control on his wife!

Abby, you blew it on a number of counts:

1. Since when is being a father the ultimate sign of manhood? What does that make males who desert their children?
2. Since when should women bear the full responsibility for birth control so the male can feel like a "man"?
3. Using your logic and his, does his wife become less of a woman after she loses her ability to bear children?

Abby, how could you?

D. K.

DEAR D. K.: It was easy. Old attitudes die hard. Having been taught by a loving mother that "Papa comes first, my response was automatic—and admittedly sexist and thoughtless. My apologies to women everywhere who are striving for equality with men.

I'll take 20 lashes with a copy of the Equal Rights Amendment.

DEAR ABBY: You printed a letter recently from a well-intentioned woman who suggested that volunteers occasionally take occupants in nursing homes for an "outing" instead of visiting them amid the same four walls they stare at day after day.

My own mother went into a nursing home at age 91, and remained there until she died at 96.

Every Sunday when I took her for a long ride, I'd fill up the car with other residents. Then one day, a nurse asked me if I realized that I would be vulnerable to a lawsuit were I to have an accident with one of the old folks in my car, or if one fell getting in or out of it.

After that, even though my heart went out to the old people, I stopped taking them for rides, but I did visit with them as often as possible.

There is just no good answer to the problem of loneliness there. Mama used to sit outside the door in a rocker, and once when I drove up, I said, "Mother, what are you doing out here? It's cold!"

She answered, "I'm just waiting for you." I kissed her and asked, "How did you know it was Sunday?" She answered, "I didn't. I wait for you every day."

G. W.

DEAR G. W.: Volunteers who visit nursing homes if only to talk with the residents there are offered places of honor in my pantheon of heroes.

DEAR ABBY: Somewhere in a modest home is the luckiest woman alive, and I'm sure she isn't even aware of it.

The OTHER WOMAN usually writes a tale of woe. I am the OTHER WOMAN but I have no "tale of woe" because of a decision I have just made. This wife I speak of is lucky because her children are healthy and well-behaved. They have a pleasant, middle-class home, with good food, good clothes and a good car.

Their lives are secure. Her husband is with her and he always will be. If I could tell his wife one thing, it would be to LOVE her husband and let him know it.

He wanted me, and I wanted him, and only God knew how much. But when people are basically good, they refuse to hurt innocent people, especially children. He's the man I've been searching for all my life. I love him and he knows it. But he is HER husband, and THEIR father. And he has integrity. I wish he were mine. But he's not and he never will be.

Thank you, Abby, for letting me say this. I feel better now.

The Town Common Given Care

Greenville's Town Common was developed on the river bank where some of the worst slums imaginable once stood.

The area, and others nearby, were cleared through redevelopment after a local fight which lasted for years.

Following the clearance of the Shore Drive area new and adequate streets were developed along with wide sidewalks and good street lighting.

Some of the area along First Street was designated for office and business area and, as can be seen now, several impressive new buildings have been constructed there.

But it was decided that the area north of First, east of Greene and west of the run which empties into the river would be preserved for park land. Once this decision was made a retaining wall and esplanade were constructed along the river bank. Then a park plan was developed and paved walks, lighting and landscaping were installed.

We have long felt that the Town Common was an outstanding development for that parcel of land.

We think that future generations will praise the foresight of those who planned and developed this downtown park area.

We were concerned that once the heavy work of developing the Town Common that its maintenance might be neglected, and we have watched for sign that this might occur.

We are happy to report that we see no signs that maintenance of the park is being slighted. Indeed city crews have mowed grass on a regular schedule. Plants and trees which died after the original planting have been replaced and shrubbery and small plants have been kept clear of weeds. Recently park benches have been installed in the area and trash receptacles have been placed throughout the park.

We were looking for evidence that maintenance might be neglected; instead we found that a good maintenance program is being carried on. Those in the city government who are responsible for this should be commended.

Lives On The Line Among Volunteers

A member of the Goldsboro Rescue Squad was killed and two others were injured while returning in the rescue ambulance from a call Sunday.

Earlier this year a volunteer rescue member in Goldsboro drowned while on a mission.

Those who volunteer their time to train and participate in rescue work, often face dangerous situations and occasionally they face personal tragedy.

It should serve to remind us what an important service the rescue squads are rendering.

THIS AFTERNOON A 'Camelot South' Dream

By BILL NOBLITT (First of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — Is North Carolina ready for "Camelot South?"

In July, 1974, Jim Hunt met in a series of late-night talk sessions with a number of college students spending those summer months as interns in various state agencies.

They talked informally and bluntly about state problems and future approaches. Those were not the only such sessions. Hunt — while an effective, persuasive public figure — is even more effective in such intimate talk.

That explains a lot of the grass-roots enthusiasm for Hunt's campaign — the thousands of volunteers across the state, the precinct-level activity.

Hunt has been running for governor for half of his 39 years, and when he let his hair down and talked about "What I would do if I were governor" was when he became most convincing.

Support

People came away from those sessions excited by his youthful image, enthusiasm, and candidness in labeling problems and suggesting solutions.

Back in 1974, young people were comparing Hunt to the late President John F. Kennedy and pondering North Carolina's future as Camelot South.

Early on in the gubernatorial campaign, it became clear to Hunt's key campaign advisors that the moderately liberal image should be softened; that Tar Heel voters were swinging more to the conservative side. Such a campaign strategy did not mean that Hunt was any less committed to some of his previous ideals; only that it was deemed politically advisable not to put them out front, his people said.

A careful look at some of those commitments, however, helps to put the next four years into some perspective. By the time the General Assembly convenes at noon, January 12, 1977, it will officially be Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., and the first message will contain the framework of his legislative proposals. The budget submitted to the General Assembly will also reflect much of his philosophy and approach, even though prepared by the administration of Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr. Hunt's people were much involved in staff work and on the Advisory Budget Commission during preparation this fall.

There are three major areas in which the new governor will focus attention: children, human resources including health care, and economic development.

Seek Out

He has promised to tackle state government by seeking out problems rather than waiting for them to become critical; and has time and again demanded imaginative, non-conventional answers to problems.

And he believes much success can be gained without major new dollars — that by re-examination of governmental agencies to trim waste and excess, and by chopping at the number-one governmental expenditure (personnel), the money can be found.

"Which is better," he has wondered aloud, "to spend $90 million for new prisons, or to spend $90 million on a system to prevent future social problems?"

In a chance encounter with a high Republican official of the Department of Human Resources on the sidewalk recently, conversation turned immediately to problems of disorganization, confusion, competing turned immediately to problems of disorganization, confusion, competing agencies, and bureaucrats spending more time protecting their turf than serving people.

"I know it... I know it," Hunt responded. "And I'm gonna need your help finding out what's wrong, and trying to fix it."

Those closest to Hunt are now turning their attention away from the campaign, and toward the four years ahead. They remain convinced that the Hunt Administration will be an activist, problem-seeking, aggressive term; that "business-as-usual" will not be the measure.

By ART BUCHWALD Red Badge Of Courage

WASHINGTON — I had a very tough time on Election Day. The doorbell rang at seven o'clock in the morning and my neighbor Legendman was at the door.

"I have to vote today," he said, "and I'm scared."

"Everyone is frightened on Election Day," I assured him. "I wouldn't worry about it."

"I can't pull the lever for either guy," he said. "I just can't."

"Sure you can," I said soothingly. "I know it sounds impossible, but when you get inside the voting booth I'm certain you'll find the strength to do it."

"Would you go with me?" he begged. "It would be a big favor if I had somebody with me."

"Well, I hadn't planned to vote until later in the day. But if it means that much to you I will."

My wife gave Legendman a cup of coffee while I got dressed.

I found him sitting in the kitchen holding his head in his hands. "I never felt this way before," he confessed. "I used to look forward to Election Day. I had no trouble voting in past ones. Why do I have this terrible feeling in my stomach?"

"It happens to all of us sooner or later," I told him. "I'm sure all over the country people feel the way you do. But Americans have to vote. It's a privilege as well as a duty."

"But if I pull the lever for Ford we'll have four more years of the same thing. If I pull the lever for Carter nobody knows what we'll get."

40 Years Ago Today

November 10, 1936

Huddled in cellars, Socialist officials despaired of the capital's fate today in the face of an insurgent advance to within 500 yards of the city of Madrid.

Artillery behind the fascists lines showered Madrid in repeated bombardments. Squadrons of low flying insurgent planes blasted at government ministries and fortifications. Socialist militiamen were forced to retreat into the capital streets.

At Seville General Gonzalo Queipo de Llanco, one of the insurgent high commanders, declared "the fascist troops will enter Madrid when the command is given."

The spearhead of the insurgents' advance pushed northeast along the Madrid-Toledo highway into the city limits territory around the Toledo bridge.

Insurgent gunners sent shells crashing into the city's central district, driving terrified residents to cover and disrupting business.

To the editor:

There are many Americans who are elated over President-elect Carter's victory in Tuesday's election. It is these person's opinion that Jimmy Carter will lead this country to new zeniths within the realm of foreign policy, in the economic woes of the United States and with a fresh quality of leadership in the White House.

Mr. Carter's victory over the incumbent, President Ford, can be directly attributed to the Labor strength in the industrial Northeastern states and to an overwhelming majority of votes throughout America by Black citizens. From the economic level of people, too, Mr. Carter received enormous support from citizens who make below $8,000 yearly.

Surely these factors indicate it is inevitable that the focus of government will be toward the unemployed, the minorities, the unfortunate and the disadvantaged and the everyday worker during this first term of the Carter Administration.

Those Americans who felt compelled to vote for President Ford do not wish for an additional income tax to be funneled to support new social programs. Those people charge that inflation will rise severely should this situation become realized. However, it is my feeling that if Mr. Carter could cause the social program agencies to operate effectively, his attempts will certainly satisfy those individuals who created his base of support and his success in this undertaking will undoubtedly garner respect from President Ford's boosters.

Let all of us hope and pray that Jimmy Carter, the President-elect, can reduce bureaucratic cumbersome in Washington and elsewhere in America so that efficiency in government and fairness in this nation can be cornerstones of his four years in the White House.

As I view the returns of the 1976 election, I recall what Tenyson once wrote: "The old order changeth, yieldeth place to new, and God fulfills Himself in many ways."

THE INSIDE REPORT Who At The Treasury?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When President-elect Carter returns from vacation, he will confront divided counsel from friends and staff on this question: should he reassure the business community at the risk of alienating liberals by naming a sound-money financier as Secretary of the Treasury?

Surprisingly, the preponderant answer from those with access to Carter is an insistent yes — insistent because of apprehension about the economy. But liberal Democrats, including some on Carter's own staff, are pushing for somebody at Treasury who will adhere more closely to the promises of the 1976 Democratic national convention than the axioms of Adam Smith.

Thus, the economic ideology of Jimmy Carter, never quite established during two years of campaigning, will soon become clearer. His fateful choice for the portfolio at Treasury will carry its own momentum, influencing policy for months and perhaps years to come.

The conversation in Plains Thursday by Carter and key staffers (attended by Vice President-elect Walter Mondale) about high-level staffing never got around to specifics on the Treasury appointment. But even before election day, advisers were discussing this most immediately important cabinet selection.

Lawyer Charles Kirbo and banker Bert Lance, two of Carter's oldest advisers from Atlanta, feel the business community must be reassured by the Treasury selection. The same word comes from Democratic national chairman Robert Strauss.

Such advice from relatively conservative Democrats is expected. The surprise is almost identical language from one Carter insider considered a gilt-edged liberal. Eyeing tough economic times ahead, he told us that a reassuring signal is vital to avert the freeze in capital investment that Republican businessmen warned would follow President Ford's defeat.

The name most frequently mentioned to give this signal is Wall Street financier Peter Peterson, a Republican bounced by the White House palace guard as Secretary of Commerce after Richard Nixon's 1972 reelection. As a free enterprise conservative, Peterson still has a good reputation and excellent con-

Real Indicators By Business

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Perhaps the clearest expression of business support for the Carter administration will be revealed by the level of spending for new plant and equipment in the first half of 1977.

Various surveys based on data collected before the presidential election show current projections to be only moderately strong — sufficient to maintain expansion, but not enough for a robust advance.

Such plans change, however, to reflect the current mood. If Carter's economic policies win the support of businessmen they could pump billions of dollars into the economy and thus end the growing sluggishness.

Should the new president fail to convince business, the economy, which began the year strongly, sagged.

This same caution is exhibited in all the important surveys just completed by McGraw-Hill Publications, Rinfret Associates and Merrill Lynch economics. The least optimistic appears to be Rinfret.

"Industry is holding back," said Pierre Rinfret. "Corporations have the cash flow and the profits to justify much higher capital expenditures but apparently the desire to increase corporate liquidity exceeds the desire to expand capacity."

Rinfret forecasts a gain of 10 per cent in dollar terms to a total of $113.2 billion, but included, the rise is projected at 2 per cent. This year the rise has been about 1 per cent.

Both McGraw-Hill and Merrill Lynch foresee real

FINDING HARMONY IN LIFE

What does it mean to be educated?

Some people believe they are educated when they get a diploma from an accredited college or university. Others hold that the best school in the world is the school of experience and that those who have come up the hard way know most of the answers.

But education is more than stuffing one's head full of facts from books, on one hand, or on-the-job training on the other. Education has recently been defined as "the ceaseless struggle to see things in relationship." That appears, on the whole, to be a rather satisfying definition.

Education largely consists in learning how life and the universe in which life is lived are related to the one to the other. Such study, diligently pursued, brings one into harmonious living with those round about him and leads him to definite skills in fields of activity in which he or she is particularly interested.

Appalachia Regional Governors Want A Meeting

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — Appalachia's governors have requested a meeting with president-elect Jimmy Carter to discuss the future of their sprawling 13-state region.

The governors and their representatives — members of the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) — voted here Tuesday to ask for a meeting with the newly elected Democrat. They felt he would be especially knowledgeable on and sympathetic to the area's problems, having once served as a member of the ARC as governor of Georgia.

The ARC members were particularly interested in energy development — particularly coal, which Carter has said he favors over nuclear power.

While they acknowledged the need for updated housing, education and health services, they agreed that some uniform energy policy must be adopted as soon as possible. U.S. Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., shared this view.

Randolph addressed the ARC meeting at the Greenbrier resort Tuesday and called for the quick formulation of a strong national energy policy. He said coal will be the major energy source in this country for at least another 50 years.

The governors of West Virginia and Kentucky, Arch A. Moore Jr. and Julian Carroll, also made strong pitches for coal development and research. They said coal was vital to their states, the region and the nation.

Moore and Carroll proposed that the ARC push for more federal funding of coal liquefaction and gasification research.

Representatives of South Carolina, where no coal is mined, argued for nuclear energy. The prevailing sentiment, however, definitely supported coal, which is mined in most of the Appalachian states.

Moore pointed out that increased coal production could mean a need for improved housing and highways in the coalfields. The governors voted to include a 65-mile stretch of W.Va. 10 — which runs through the heart of the state's southern coalfield — in the ARC's access road system.

But they didn't get around to voting on a proposal that would permit the ARC to finance construction of public housing. The matter will be decided by mailed ballots before the end of the year.

The governors passed two resolutions. One allows their representatives to vote on their behalf and the other continues the funding of existing programs.

Randolph praised the governors for working toward developing a regional plan.

"The discussion taking place at the meeting is a positive step in launching this regional development planning process," he said. "Identifying overall regional goals and developing the objectives, priorities and strategies to achieve those goals should be a major focus of the commission over the next year."

Attending the meeting were Govs. Moore, Carroll, Milton

Shapp of Pennsylvania, Ray Blanton of Tennessee, Miles Godwin of Virginia, Cliff Finch of Mississippi and James H. Shousler of North Carolina. The other member states of Alabama, Georgia, Maryland, South Carolina, New York and Ohio sent representatives.

One Of Trio Pleads Guilty

ATLANTA (AP) — One of three men charged with attempting to extort $300,000 from Eastern Air Lines last April claims he was an innocent victim, another says he was "set up," and the third has pleaded guilty and turned state's evidence.

John Franklin Roper, 26, of Union, S.C., and Dr. Luther Ashley Jr. of Anderson, S.C., went on trial Tuesday in U.S. District Court in connection with a note sent to Eastern threatening a bomb explosion if $300,000 was not sent to the Greenville, S.C., airport.

They are charged with attempted extortion, threatening to extort, conspiracy to extort and giving false information.

Loren Ralph Fossum, 24, of Belton, S.C., pleaded guilty to one charge of conspiracy to extort and related charges were dropped.

Fossum will testify that Ashley wrote the extortion note, said Asst. U.S. Atty. Jerome Froelich.

Roper's attorney, Kermit King, described his client as "the fly caught in somebody else's spider web." He said his client picked up the fake payoff package planted by FBI agents thinking it was $40,000 he had invested with Ashley.

FBI agents staked out the payoff area but lost the man who picked up the package.

Ashley's attorney, William Daniel, said his client was the victim of a setup and he believed the extortion note was sent by either Fossum or a fourth man named Goldstein who owed Ashley money.

Daniel said Ashley made "loans or investments" which allowed investors in South Carolina to double their money.

He said Ashley and Fossum visited Atlanta last March 31 to check on loans made to Goldstein, who agreed to send cash to Greenville to pay off these "loans or investments."

Treasury has to be or ought to be a businessman," confided one Carter insider who is pushing a liberal economic professor whose nomination would assuredly cause a one-day panic in the stock market.

Carter faces similar choices between right and left in selecting his Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense. Ever since election day, the party's left wing has been laboriously launching Secretary of State rumors for one of its darlings: Sen. Dick Clark of Iowa, a vigorous champion of the Third World. But Carter will rely heavily on advice from his fellow Georgian, former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who is not apt to recommend Dick Clark or anybody close to him.

Taking Dr. James Schlesinger, fired by Mr. Ford as Secretary of Defense for advocating too much defense spending, back to the Pentagon is unacceptable for Democratic liberals. But his recommendations will be closely studied by Carter. Furthermore, insiders believe Carter is seeking a non-doctrinaire new face at Defense who will bring an open mind and fresh outlook to the new President's first big defense decision on the B-1 bomber.

Selections at State and Defense may be so anonymous that Carter's well-deserved reputation for ambiguity will be enhanced. Not so at the Treasury. By his nomination there, the President-elect will finally answer whether professions of populism really amount to anti-business bias — setting a tone difficult to change in his administration.

TRUCK HITS CAR — The driver and two passengers, one a small child, were injured yesterday when their car was struck by a tractor trailer truck about five miles south of Greenville on highway 43. According to officials on the scene, Michael Skowron, his wife Harriette, and their 12-month-old son were injured in the collision. No further details were available. The accident occurred near the intersection of highway 43 and rural paved road 1711. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Resignations
RALEIGH (AP) — Resignations were reportedly forced from two officials in the state Department of Insurance who went to work in the agency just a little more than a year ago.

Also, Sandi Roberts, Jackie Rollins, Steve Roper, David Rouse, Lynn Rouse, Diane Shackelford, Kathy Springer, Nancy Stocks, Susan Stoneham, Mirinda Sutton, Tim Sutton, Candace Thompson, Reid Tripp, Robbie Tyburski, Steve Tyburski, Melvin Wooten, Paula Worthington, and Angel Young.

Insurance Commissioner
John R. Ingram had demanded the resignations of former Democratic legislators James E. Long and David M. Blackwell, The News and Observer of Raleigh reported in this morning's editions.

Long, of Alamance County, was chief deputy commissioner and Blackwell, of Rockingham County, was head of the division of administrative law. Both resigned from the state House of Representatives to work for Ingram following the 1975 legislative session.

Long confirmed to the newspaper that he had been fired and would leave office Nov. 30. Roy Rabon, a longtime assistant for Ingram, will replace Long.

Blackwell and Ingram could not be reached for comment. Gloria Jimenez, on the staff in the administrative law section, reportedly will replace Blackwell. Why the resignations were demanded was not clear. The newspaper cited reports of growing friction between Ingram and the aides. In a statement released through Rabon, Ingram said of Long, "Things had not worked out the way we had expected and we discussed his resignation and he resigned." Long, meanwhile, met with representatives of Gov.-elect Jim Hunt. "He offered his services for anything he could help us out with during the transition period and some position in the new administration. I'm sure we'll be able to work something out for him," said Weldon B. Denny, a member of Hunt's staff.

'For Editors'

Farmville Commissioner John Turner Walston says he was misquoted in a Daily Reflector article published yesterday. The article quoted him as saying, "Let's give them a little thriller then," in reference to an anticipated hearing and the people of Farmville's being told the reasons for Police Chief Marsdon Cannady's suspension from duty. Walston says he was referring to The Daily Reflector editors, not to the people of Farmville.

"I don't care what the people outside of Farmville think of my voting record," he said, "but it's important to me that the people of Farmville know that I was not using the word 'thriller' in reference to such a serious matter."

Two Wrecks On Tuesday

An estimated $1,500 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 1:10 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 240 feet South of the Glenwood Drive intersection involving cars driven by Gary Wayne Stallings of Quail Hollow Trailer Pk., and William Herbert Clifton Jr. of 1113 Cedar La.

Investigators, who estimated damage at $450 to the Stallings car and $800 to the Clifton vehicle, charged Stallings with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety. Police charged Edward Rodgers of 513 Vance St. with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 4:08 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth and Clark Streets.

Investigators reported the Rodgers car collided with an auto operated by Robin Jefferson Stanley of 106 G. Lakeview Terr., causing an estimated $175 damage to the Stanley car and $75 damage to the Rodgers car.

Sales Ended At Farmville

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Tobacco Market closed the 1976 auction season after sales Tuesday, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

"The Farmville Market opened July 20 and had 62 sale days as compared to 72 sale days a year ago. The market closed November 20 last year," Williams said.

"The Farmville Market sold 34,186,621 pounds this season for $39,650,707 for an average of $115.98 per 100 pound as compared to last year's season average of $102.57 per 100 pounds. Poundage was off 15 per cent this year due to a cut in acreage. This average for the season is the highest on record," Williams said.

According to Williams the highest price paid by a company was $3 per pound which was a record price. Twelve companies were represented on the Farmville Market with two sets of government graders.

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Hard water requires more soap than soft water, according to the Water Quality Assn.

In hard water, soap or detergent acts as a chemical means of softening the water. The harder the water, the more soap or detergent must be added to overcome the hardness. Only when the hardness has been overcome can the soap or detergent actually start cleaning.

In soft water, the cleaning process can begin immediately, saving 26 per cent to 68 per cent in the cost of cleaning materials. The annual savings for a typical family of four is $9.61 to $57.80. The association reported these figures after a 12-month study.

How's The Weather?

FORECAST Until Thursday

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is expected today from the northern Plains to the Northeast. Showers are forecast for the central Gulf and the Pacific coast. Mild weather is expected from the West to the southern Atlantic coast. (AP Wirephoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Moderating temperatures continued in North Carolina today. But cooler weather is close behind.

Highs were in the 60s, except for the 50s in the mountains.

The high-pressure center which brought record low temperatures to much of the eastern United States Tuesday continues to drift over the Atlantic. However, southerly winds brought somewhat warmer temperatures that day across the state. But clouds prevented strong warming for many sections.

Highs averaged in the low to mid 50s. It got to 60 at Asheville and Wilmington.

Skies cleared over the state after sunset. Brisk southwesterly winds continued to blow, especially in coastal sections. A small-craft advisory was re-issued by 10:30 p.m. for the coast.

Temperatures during the night showed a great improvement over the previous night's lows, due to these windy conditions. Lows early this morning ranged from the mid 20 to the mid 30s.

Partly cloudy skies returned today. Another area of clouds associated with a cold front over the Ohio River Valley will move across the state. A few sprinkles may fall in the mountains this morning with this cloud deck.

Winds remained brisk. They shifted gradually to the northwest as the new cold air mass slipped across the state during the day.

But temperatures managed to climb into the 60s over much of the state before the arrival of this cold front.

The bulk of the cold air will enter during the night. At that time, a second cold front will swing through the state. Lows will average in the 20s, getting to the 30s along the coast.

Thursday will be cooler, with skies remaining partly sunny and high temperatures in the 50s. There will be some max-

Diabolical Alien Plots Population Explosion

By CHRISTY BARBEE
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The diabolical alien, The Prodigy, is seconds away from his nationwide telecast that will draw millions of innocent teen-agers into his seamy plot for a population explosion on earth.

"When I'm in front of that television tonight, I'll hit the beardless, mindless crowd with everything I've got," snarls the sinister visitor from outer space.

The plan is to tell adolescents that pregnancy is good for them, that it will balance their hormones and control acne.

"What jive stuff this turkey hands out!" muses that perennial good guy, Spider Man. In the nick of time he breaks into the studio, rips off the Prodigy's human mask and foils the plot with super spider webs.

"Never again will you mesmerize kids with your destructive propaganda," a triumphant Spider Man chides the demon. This comic book scene of good versus evil is Planned Parenthood's newest approach to the teen-age pregnancy problem — the plight of an estimated one million American teen-agers a year, according to Dr. Hugh Anwyl, executive director of the organization's office here.

The 25-cent comic book by Marvel Comics is distributed by Planned Parenthood clinics nationwide. It deals with pregnancy and contraception, homosexuality, masturbation and venereal disease.

It skirts morality entirely, focusing mainly on the value of good sense and knowing the facts, Anwyl said.

"There's a lot of material the bad guy can propagate," he said. "What we are trying to show kids through Spider Man is that you don't have to be trapped."

"It's a far cry from anything moralistic. I think it points to one significant thing — that there is an option, that you have a choice. It's not pushing anything or saying it's wrong to be pregnant."

Spider Man, you may recall, is the alter ego of a high school student who was bitten by a radioactive spider in 1962. The bite supercharged him, turning him into a humble, rather reluctant crusader for good and justice.

Planned Parenthood recognized his appeal to children and teens.

"The kids like it and that's about as much as we can expect," said Johanna Pagni of Planned Parenthood in New York, who developed the campaign.

Profits After The Railroads Dropped

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The bankrupt Penn Central Transportation Co., no longer in the railroad business since its freight and passenger services were taken over by ConRail and Amtrak, reports it had a profit of $5.6 million for the six months ended Sept. 30.

A final accounting of income and expenses relating to former rail operations before April 1, when Penn Central ceased running trains, will be completed sometime after next March 1.

The court-appointed trustees, handling Penn Central's reorganization, said Tuesday the earnings report reflects, but doesn't include, $51.7 million owed in unpaid debt interest and rentals for leased rail lines, its disposition still to be determined by the U.S. District Court in Philadelphia.

If those expenses are eventually to be paid, Penn Central would have a net loss of $46.1 million for the six months ended Sept. 30.

For the third quarter of this year the net loss was $20.6 million. There was no comparable 1975 period since Penn Central's status was ordered changed by Interstate Commerce Commission from a Class I Carrier to a Lessor Company, effective April 1.

Penn Central was one of five railroads taken over by the ConRail system.

Sloan: Self-Image Important

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

N.C. State basketball coach Norm Sloan took issue with those who criticize his players, and said that self-image is the biggest problems basketball coaches have to worry about in their players in a talk to the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

Sloan said that people, both fans and the media, continually ask when a player "is going to help the team, or quit causing problems," when Sloan himself sees those players in an entirely different light.

"Take Kenny Carr. He's one of the most gifted players I've met. But there seem to be more question about him than accolades. I don't know why. There is no question in my mind: that he contributed more to our team than any other player did for his. Yet he has a bad reputation. I don't understand this," Sloan said.

"And a few years ago, people kept asking when (Tom) Burleson was going to start helping State. Are they kidding? He helped us every year. But people didn't realize it until he was gone."

Sloan said that the media looks for flaws in a team or a player rather than trying to emphasize the positive aspects. "Burleson didn't make All-Conference as a senior, and that's a shame. But his statistics were better than (Mitch) Kupchak's when he made Player of the Year."

The State coach pointed out that he agreed with the football coach at Rutgers in saying that polls are a popularity contest—not a true measure of a team's ability. "Too many times, the best players are not picked, just the most popular ones," he said.

Sloan praised the job done by rival Dean Smith of North Carolina as Olympic Coach. "You could put together five different teams in this country that could have won the Olympics, so I think he did a good job in picking the team."

As to picking four from Carolina, Sloan said he would have picked four from State had he been the coach, and would have picked as many ACC players. "You're bound to pick players you're familiar with."

Sloan said that his team this year will be a young one. Most likely starters include Carr and Glenn Sudhop, both veterans, along with three newcomers. They will be Clyde (The Glide) Austin, Hawkeye Whitney and Tony Warren. The first two are freshmen, the latter, a transfer.

Turning to recruiting, Sloan said that it is one of the biggest problems, but not the biggest. "Recruiting is unbelievable. It's a nightmare you have to live through to really know what it's like."

The biggest problem is the self-image players have of themselves when they come to college. "Most of the top athletes come from the lower social and economic strata. They come from families that are on welfare, unemployment checks and food stamps. They see athletics as a way out and a way up. But they have to reprogram themselves in how they see themselves. Their attitude must be reworked so that their effort will be further improved."

Sloan added that he has found this to be a problem regardless of race or area of the country.

"Even pros make mistakes, so you can't expect these boys to not make them," he said. "These kids have a tough time living up to the image of themselves created by the fans and the media."

"This could be my most talented team, but I don't know how tough they'll be yet. They've got to mature."

Next week's speaker will be another State coach, football mentor Bo Rein.

Pinkney Named Top SC Defender

RESTON, Va. (AP) — William & Mary quarterback Tom Rosantz today was named offensive player of the week and East Carolina back Reggie Pinkney defensive player of the week in Southern Conference football.

Rosantz, who twice previously this season had been chosen as the week's top offensive player, was honored for his brilliant performance in W&M's 23-22 upset of Appalachian State.

The sophomore from Fairview, Pa., hit seven of 14 passes for 98 yards and threw twice for touchdowns — his second TD pass, in the fourth quarter, sealing the victory for the Indians.

Rosantz also rushed for 60 yards for a total of 158 yards of offense. He now leads the Southern Conference in total offense with an average of 139.2 yards per game.

Pinkney was the defensive standout in East Carolina's 20-10 triumph over Richmond, twice stopping Richmond drives by intercepting passes deep in ECU territory and running back the thefts 98 and 40 yards.

Pinkney, a senior from Ft. Bragg, N. C., also caused one fumble, broke up two passes and assisted on three tackles. He has already broken ECU records for interception return yardage in a single game, for a season, and for a career.

N.C. Open Has 'Shotgun' Start

CHARLOTTE (AP) — It looked like the start of a 500 mile stock car race. Or maybe a gathering of ski or speed skating enthusiasts.

What it was, however, was Tuesday's spread out "shotgun start" of the 54-hole Carolinas PGA North Carolina Open Golf Tournament at wind-whipped Carmel Country Club.

They were, 144 players, poised in 72 carts outside the pro shop, awaiting the sound of the siren that would send them scurrying off to each of the 18 holes of the club's 6,500 yard par 72 South course.

Many of the less hardy but prudent wore ski caps pulled down over their ears. Huge, colorful fur mittens were in evidence. Double layers of undergarments or sweaters were not uncommon among the 108 pros and 36 amateurs, none with a handicap over four.

Officials wisely had decided several days earlier to schedule the start for 11 a.m. By then a week but welcome sun had reversed the temperature from a record 24 at dawn to 42 at tee-off time.

It finally crept into the high 50s, but the bonus was offset considerably by wind that gusted to 20 miles an hour or more.

Because of the size of the field, the required late start and far-less daylight than in midseason, the shotgun was the only method by which all could finish without benefit of lanterns.

For the dubious pleasure of playing under the less than ideal conditions, each man had plunked down a $25 entry fee. Many consoled themselves with the brave but still spine-chilling observation "It was even colder and more windy for the pro-am Monday."

Leading the way after the first round of the $9,500, three-day tournament was unheralded and virtually unseen Ben Balentine, in his third year as assistant pro at Charlotte's Myers Park Country Club.

Williamston Enters Playoffs Without Number 1 Quarterback

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

The old saying about the best-laid plans of mice and men can be applied to Williamston's Tigers, who meet Farmville Central this Friday in the first round of the state 3-A football playoffs.

The Tigers were rolling along behind a good passing attack until a few weeks ago. Then, the bottom fell out.

"When the season started, I thought we would have a real strong passing game," Coach Dink Mills said. "And we were strong up until the eighth game of the year."

That was the game in which starting quarterback Tim Hardison was hurt. He is not expected back this year, even if the Tigers advance in the playoffs.

Hardison "was a great passer," Mills said, possibly one of the best in the state. His loss was a great one for Williamston, but the Tigers didn't bow their heads and dwell on their unfortunate luck.

"How surprised I was in the next game when we played an undefeated team in Edenton and our running game knocked out 310 yards," Mills said. Although his team wasn't used to depending on the run, they "tried harder because they knew they had to."

The Tigers won those last two games and finished with a 9-1 record and tied for the Northeastern Conference championship with a 5-1 conference mark. The team they tied was Edenton and Williamston won the conference's playoff berth on the basis of their 22-0 win over the Aces.

Now, they meet Farmville, a team they beat 26-8 at the first of the season when Hardison was healthy.

Mills said, "If I had my druthers, I would rather not play a team we've already played." He added, however, that he doesn't think that the Tigers will be over-confident because they were able to win before.

"Hardison was able to keep them (Farmville) loose with the passing game," Mills said. Without a strong passing threat, Farmville has some "strong kids they can stack up on the line" to stop the run.

Williamston's defense is its main strength, according to Mills. They have averaged giving up less than a touchdown a game. "We have been able to play pretty good defense. We've got two real good inside linebackers in Sam Short and Joel Hagan."

Short and Hagan are the backbone of the defense," Mills said. "Neither is very big, but they do a good job." Mills said. Short weighs 168 pounds and Hagan 142. The defense is set up for them to make most of the tackles, according to Mills — and they do.

On offense, Berny Stevens has done an "excellent job of running the team" at quarterback since Hardison's injury. Stevens was moved to the signal-calling position from right guard.

Although the Tigers have no real outstanding running backs, each has done well in different games, Mills said. In each game, one back will rise to the occasion, depending on what the other team does on defense, according to Mills.

Farmville Central is a "sound" football team with a better than average passing game and two of the best running backs around, Mills said. Keno Farrow is the team's "break-away" back, he said, and quarterback Carroll Griffin is a veteran passer. He also mentioned running back Ted Dunn.

This week, Williamston has been going all-out and Mills said the team is "as far along as any other game."

Mills said the Tigers are proud to be representing their conference in the playoffs and will be trying to be good representatives.

"I think we will be ready to play. Physically, man-for-man, they are probably a lot bigger than we are, but we might be quicker. That could be a factor — but it shouldn't."

Short Says Unity Is Key To Tiger Success

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Williamston linebacker and fullback Sam Short attributes much of the Tigers' success this year to a close-knit relationship between the team members and the coaching staff.

"We are close together, we can relate to each other," Short said; and, to keep communication lines open, a "Tiger Pride Committee" was formed to handle problems.

The committee is composed of six senior players.

These players handle many problems that arise, rather than the coaching staff. In many cases, it is easier for a player to talk out things with a teammate than a coach, Short said.

The Tiger Pride Committee helps keep the team's morale up and "has really helped a lot," according to Short. In addition, the players on the committee set an example for the other team members.

The 5-8, 168-pound senior is setting a good example, according to his coach, Dink Mills. "He sets an example with his shoulder pads, not his mouth," Mills said.

Short is a "complete football player," according to Mills. He plays 48 minutes of football — offense, defense and all special teams. "Anytime a guy stays out there 48 minutes, he'd better be a football player," Mills said.

As an offensive fullback, Short has accumulated around 700 yards rushing this year. On defense, he is averaging nine solo tackles and seven assists per game from his inside line-backing position.

Short and the rest of the players are proud of the Tigers' 9-1 record and state playoff berth. "I think we have done a good, good job," said Short, who is also a member of the Williamston wrestling team.

The Tigers have "no superstars — we all know what we can give and no one tries to do it all."

In his spare time, Short works in a service station to earn some extra money. As for future plans, he said, "That's where I am right now — trying to figure out what I want to do."

Short said he is planning to go to college and "if I think I have a good chance of playing (football), I will. If not I'll probably wrestle."

"I might be too small to play football, but in wrestling, you go against somebody your own size."

Asked whether he prefers football or wrestling, Short replied, "I guess they're about equal — I just love sports, that's all."

RALEIGH (AP) — A special legislative committee is daring to dream of a huge, domed North Carolina sports arena, perhaps called the Tobacco Bowl and seating anywhere from 48,000 to 80,000 people.

"We ought to look to the future, to dream a bit for our children in North Carolina," says state Rep. J. Guy Revelle, D-Northampton, chairman of the Sports Facility Commission.

State Sen. Julian R. Allsbrook, D-Halifax, who sponsored the legislation creating the study, confesses the subject is "a dream."

WHITE HOUSE GOLF HAS RUN ITS COURSE — Jimmy Carter will be the first president in the past 25 years not to be a golfer. A spokesman for Carter said, "Jimmy never took much to golf." Some of the past presidents who have been devotees of the sport were, from left, Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. (AP Wirephoto)

No More Golf On White House Lawn—Carter Does Not Swing

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — The election of Jimmy Carter appears certain to cool the golfing fever that has been around the White House for the last quarter of a century.

No more putting on the east lawn. No locker at the exclusive Burning Tree Club in suburban Bethesda, Md. No policy decisions on the first tee. No judging the state of the union by the severity of the president's slice.

"Jimmy never took much to golf," a spokesman for the country's President-elect said from Carter's vacation spot off the Georgia coast. "He's more of a softball man. He plays tennis a bit, loves fishing and is crazy about auto racing. But golf? Forget it."

Presidents, with rare exceptions, have relaxed by fighting bogeys on the golf course since the administration of William Howard Taft, starting in 1909. But it remained for the late General Dwight D. Eisenhower to turn the pastime into a virtual religion after he was elected in 1952.

Since Ike, every president has been a devotee of the game to varying degrees — John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. Only Ford, ex-footballer, ardent skier and sports buff, matched Eisenhower's enthusiasm for the fairway game.

Now Ford, beaten by Carter in last week's election, is the latest to see his favorite driving club retired and placed in a glass case in the club house at the Burning Tree Club.

Taft was a bulbous man of more than 300 pounds who had to sneak away to obscure places to gain the enjoyment of swinging a club.

Although burdened with the pressures of World War I and the League of Nations, Woodrow Wilson was an avid golfer as was the handsome Warren G. Harding, who often had such players as Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen as his White House guests.

The somber Calvin Coolidge didn't play, but his sons were very active, and one of them died of a foot infection after a round on the course.

Herbert Hoover played some golf in his pre-White House years, and records show his name was once posted for delinquency in dues at a fashionable Florida club, but he was too busy with the depression to play much golf while president.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was a fair golfer before being stricken with polio, and his wood-shafted driver with a unique brass back sits alongside the drivers of Taft, Wilson and Harding at the club.

Harry S. Truman, who came next, disdained the sport, but he became a member of Burning Tree and was seen quite regularly in the club lounge, playing poker.

Ike was the first president to use a steel-shafted driver, and he made the office almost synonymous with the sport. He set up a winter White House at Augusta, Ga. — site of the Masters.

The late John F. Kennedy was perhaps the best striker of the ball of all the golfing presidents, but he was troubled with a bad back and impatience.

Richard M. Nixon picked up the cudgel but showed little aptitude until he started taking lessons from pro Tony Penna.

NEW YORK (AP) — Baltimore's Jim Palmer, an All-Star Game reject last July who reversed his field in the second half of the season, won the American League's Cy Young Award today for the third time.

The Orioles' right-hander joined Sandy Koufax, formerly of the Los Angeles Dodgers, and Tom Seaver of the New York Mets as baseball's only triple winners of the coveted pitching award.

Palmer, also named the American League's best pitcher in 1975 and 1976, was an easy winner this time over runner-up Mark Fidrych, Detroit's flashy "Birdman" who took baseball by storm in his rookie season.

Palmer received 108 points on 19 first-place votes, four seconds and one third from the Baseball Writers Association of America. His total more than doubled that of Detroit's young right-hander, who had 51 points based on five first-place votes, seven for second and five for third.

"I felt that if Catfish Hunter (of New York) was picked with the same record, I should have been selected, too," Palmer told The Associated Press Tuesday night. "But, really I never felt I should have been on the team. The whole thing was blown out of proportion."

"My point was that the American League never seems to send its best players to the All-Star games..."

Palmer led the American League in victories with a 22-13 record and had an earned run average of 2.51 despite a desultory start. The reason he pitched well in the second half of the season was that the Orioles played better over-all ball, he said.

"Our club played very well after June 15," said Palmer. "We had a better record than the Yankees after that. The club has to play well for you to pitch well."

Palmer's latest triumph leaves him with few new fields to conquer.

"I'd just like to pitch about five or six years longer and stay healthy," he said.

Fidrych had a 19-9 record and the best ERA in the American League with 2.34.

Borg Wants To Meet Connors

By STEPHAN NASSTROM
AP Sports Writer
STOCKHOLM (AP) — The Stockholm Open tennis tournament still is in its early stages, but Bjorn Borg already is thinking about the ending.

"Most of all I'd like to meet Jimmy Connors in the final," said Borg after dispatching Robin Drysdale of Britain 6-2, 6-2. "I really want to take revenge against him."

Borg has a lot to revenge. The Swede has beaten Connors only once in eight lifetime meetings. His only victory came in this tourney three years ago. This year, Connors beat Borg in the U.S. Pro Championships at Philadelphia, the U.S. Open at Forest Hills and a tournament in Caracas, Venezuela.

Connors was his usual devastating self in opening-round play in the $150,000 tourney Tuesday night, whipping Jiri Hrebec of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-1.

The 24-year-old Connors, top-seeded, felt good about his victory.

"I felt pretty loose tonight," he said. "It seems my biggest problem is to run off the court fast enough after a match is finished."

Borg, 20, who has won Wimbledon and World Championship Tennis championships this year, appeared to have little trouble with Drysdale, but said it was not as easy as it looked.

"It's always difficult in the first round," he said. "I came here only two days ago and I haven't trained so much. Actually, I'm only satisfied with my backhand tonight."

Borg meets 20-year-old countryman Jan Norrback in his next match tonight, while Connors plays Birger Andersson of Sweden.

Borg, who recently announced his engagement to Romania's Mariana Simionescu, wore a golden ring on his left hand during his match against Drysdale. Mariana defected and applied for political asylum in the United States last September.

Two more seeded players lost Tuesday.

American Bob Lutz, seeded No. 12, was beaten by Britain's John Feaver 6-3, 6-3, and 15th-seeded Ray Moore of South Africa bowed to countryman Bob Hewitt 2-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Alabama Over Irish; Bucs Picked

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Bear Bryant is about to visit Notre Dame for the first time and it is questionable whether college football's book of legends can stand the strain.
"I've been to South Bend," Bryant notes, "but I've never been in the arena. I'm looking forward to it. Notre Dame is probably the football capital of the world."
Whoa there, Coach. Isn't Tuscaloosa the football capital of the world?
"Only in Alabama."
Alabama and Notre Dame have met twice — in the 1973 Sugar Bowl and the 1974 Orange Bowl — with Notre Dame winning both by a total of only three points. For that little difference, plenty was accomplished. Notre Dame won a national championship and may have cost Alabama two of them.

Right now, 'Bama is on a 5-0 upgrade after a sluggish 2-2 start — "We've let other people do the coaching the last five games," Bryant says — while Notre Dame struggled to beat Navy and lost to Georgia Tech after beating five consecutive opponents without allowing a touchdown.
Will it be Bryant the legend or Notre Dame the legend? Let's try...Alabama 17-13. Last week's score was 46 right, 20 wrong and one tie for a .697 percentage. On the season, it is 431-177-11—709.

Ohio State at Minnesota: Might the Buckeyes be looking ahead to Michigan and might they suffer the same fate that befell Michigan at the hands of Purdue? "There isn't a chance in the world of that for one reason, and you're looking at him," says Woody Hayes...Ohio State 31-14.
Missouri at Oklahoma: With all their troubles, the Sooners still have an outside shot at the Big Eight crown and the Orange Bowl. "We have an opportunity to take it down to the finish against Nebraska," says Coach Barry Switzer...Oklahoma 27-21.

Texas A&M at Arkansas: The Razorbacks ruined the Aggies' perfect 10-0 season a year ago with a 31-6 rout and there is a little revenge motive here...Texas A&M 20-10.
West Virginia at Pitt: The Mountaineers won last year on a last-second field goal. Anything can happen in this neighborhood rivalry, but Pitt is feeling its oats as the new No. 1 team in the land...Pitt 35-14.
UCLA at Oregon State: Will the Bruins be looking ahead to Southern Cal? Probably, but no matter...UCLA 38-6.
Washington at Southern California: Will the Trojans be looking ahead to UCLA? Probably, but no matter...USC 38-6.

Illinois at Michigan: Will the Wolverines be looking ahead to Ohio State? They'll probably be looking back to Purdue, and Illinois will suffer the consequences...Michigan 41-7.
Purdue at Iowa: What can the Boilermakers do for an encore? Would you believe the Upset Special of the Week...Iowa 23-16.
Florida at Kentucky: Despite the loss to Georgia, the Gators can capture a share of the Southeastern Conference crown for the first time with a victory here. Does there always have to be a first time? Second Upset Special...Kentucky 24-17.
Georgia at Auburn: "Champions win their own titles," says Georgia's Vince Dooley. "The Southeastern Conference championship game is at Auburn next Saturday, and that's a tough spot to play." But the Bulldogs can make it to the Sugar Bowl with a win...Georgia 34-17.

Nebraska at Iowa State: "We're a long way from the Orange Bowl," says Nebraska's Tom Osborne, "but we're closer than we were last week." The Cornhuskers will have to put the clamps on Iowa State's explosive offense...Nebraska 27-13.
Colgate at Army: The Red Raiders still are undefeated but the Cadets may be unkind enough to spoil next week's looming battle of the unbeaten with Rutgers...Army 24-17.

Lakers Lose 20-Point Lead, Game To Braves

By The Associated Press
How does a team lose a 20-point lead in the last quarter, Jerry West?

"We lost our poise," said the Los Angeles Lakers coach, "that's all."
While losing their poise, the Lakers also lost the concept of their game plan and eventually lost the game to the Buffalo Braves — a 121-116 National Basketball Association overtime thriller Tuesday night. "No way we should have lost it," lamented West. "We won the ball game — it just won't show up in the results."

ELBOWS HIS WAY TO THE TOP — Buffalo rookie Adrian Dantley makes a move around Los Angeles star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (33). Don Ford (35) and Cazzie Russell (32) look on. The Braves won the NBA contest 121-116 in overtime. (AP Wirephoto)

Theoretically, at least, the Lakers should have won. They held an 89-69 advantage going into the last period, but neglected to go to their strength — center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

The Braves finally tied the game in regulation on Bob McAdoo's shot with two seconds left, then won it in overtime behind Randy Smith's eight points.

In other NBA games, the New York Knicks stopped the Houston Rockets 106-97; the Chicago Bulls 111-92; the San Antonio Spurs blasted the Seattle SuperSonics 138-114; the New Orleans Jazz whipped the New York Nets 110-99; the Cleveland Cavaliers outscored the Milwaukee Bucks 111-90; the Denver Nuggets defeated the Golden State Warriors 123-117, and the Portland Trail Blazers beat the Kansas City Kings 119-102.

Knicks 106, Bulls 97
Walt Frazier scored 23 points and Mo Layton led a second-half surge, carrying New York past Washington. The Knicks went ahead to stay by scoring the last eight points of the third quarter for a 74-68 advantage.

Rockets 111, Bulls 92
Mike Newlin's 25 points and a rugged defense led by Moses Malone and John Johnson powered Houston past Chicago. The Rockets were able to convert numerous Chicago turnovers and defensive lapses into easy baskets whenever the Bulls threatened to close in.

Spurs 138, SuperSonics 114
San Antonio rode the solid shooting of Larry Kenon and George Gervin over Seattle. Kenon collected 24 points and Gervin had 23 as the game never was in doubt after the first quarter.

Jazz 110, Nets 99
New Orleans got 52 points from Gall Goodrich and Pete Maravich to beat New York in a game that the Nets played under protest. Goodrich scored all of his 28 points in the second and fourth quarters.

Cavaliers 111, Bucks 90
Sparked by Campy Russell's 25 points and Austin Carr's 22, Cleveland took control in the second quarter and whipped Milwaukee for the Cavs' ninth victory in 10 starts.

Nuggets 123, Warriors 117
Dan Issel and David Thompson combined for 22 points in the fourth quarter and 59 points overall as Denver defeated Golden State and remained the only undefeated team in the NBA.

Blazers 119, Kings 102
Portland, paced by Lionel Hollins and Bill Walton, rallied from an early eight-point second-quarter deficit to beat Kansas City. The Blazers were plagued by turnovers early in the game, but got their attack rolling midway in the second period and had control throughout the second half in winning their fifth straight game.

Angry Man Wars Against Home Towns Pollution

North Korea's Envoys Run Into Difficulties In Foreign Countries

By ROBERT CRABBE
TOKYO (UPI) — North European countries have written a startling new chapter in North Korea's odd diplomatic history.

In five days starting Oct. 15, Denmark, Norway, Finland and Sweden ousted 17 staff members of North Korean embassies whom they accused of black marketing cigarettes, liquor and in some cases even hashish.

The North Koreans certainly were not the first diplomats in history to be caught abusing their privilege of bringing cigarettes and liquor into a host country tax free.

But it had never happened anywhere on that scale before. Danish Foreign Minister Knud B. Andersen told newsmen that the ousted North Koreans "hardly acted for personal gain," an implication that their superiors at home knew what they were doing.

North Korea's official news agency, KCNA, has carried no comments or reports on the expulsions. The accused embassies in Denmark and Norway issued statements of denial.

Ordinarily, the scandal would have been a propaganda bonanza for the American-backed South Korea government of President Park Hung Hee.

However, the South Koreans were having troubles of their own that week. The Washington Post reported that a Washington grand jury was investigating alleged lavish entertainment of U.S. government officials by an influential South Korean businessman named Park Tong Sun. The Post said the grand jury was also looking into possible bribery of several pro-South Korean Congressmen.

South Korean diplomats have been at pains to point out that Park Tong Sun is not related to the South Korean president, and is not a government official.

In the background of the North Korean trouble in Scandinavia, two things are clear. One is that North Korea since mid-1975 has suffered from a serious shortage of foreign currency. It is believed to be in default by about $2 billion on trade debts to Japan, the Soviet Union, West Germany and other countries.

Capitalist countries, unable to collect their bills from Pyongyang, have quit taking North Korean orders for industrial machinery. In Japan, North Korea has outstanding credits of about $270 million, and is in arrears on payments of about $70 million of this money. Pyongyang is trying to get Japan to agree to a two-year moratorium on collections.

A second point is that North Korea has established an enormous, and expensive, network of embassies overseas for such a small country.

The North Korean "embassy explosion" began in the early 1970s, as part of Pyongyang's drive to cultivate votes in the United Nations against stationing of American troops in South Korea. From 1970 to mid-1975, the number of countries with which North Korea maintained full or partial diplomatic relations rose from 36 to 78.

In September, a Hong Kong news magazine carried a report that the North Korean Embassy in New Delhi was deeply in arrears on rent payments for its office and ambassador's residence. The magazine said the embassy also owed $40,000 to a New Delhi advertising firm. The alleged creditors contacted by UPI in New Delhi refused to comment on the reports.

Well informed sources in Kuala Lumpur told UPI that the North Korean embassy in Malaysia was under investigation for large imports of tax free cigarettes and liquor. One embassy staffer believed linked to the imports has been on "home leave" for three months.

Egypt, normally friendly with North Korea, has had spells of trouble since the two countries opened diplomatic relations. In May 1971, the North Korean ambassador in Cairo was expelled for alleged interference in Egyptian politics. The matter was smoothed over and full diplomatic relations were restored three months later.

Sri Lanka (Ceylon) expelled the entire North Korean embassy staff in April 1971, for allegedly taking part in a plot to overthrow the government of Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, the prime minister.

A total of 18 staff members and dependents were hustled out so quickly that they carried only the embassy's papers, and were not even given time to pack their children's toys.

The strain eased a little when Mrs. Bandaranaike's son, Anura, paid an informal visit to Pyongyang in March 1975. But North Korea has never been allowed to set up another embassy in Colombo, the capital.

By JAMES V. HEALION
CROMWELL, Conn. (UPI) — As a boy, Bo Waldie swam and fished in the four ponds on his father's land, drawing from their still waters what he now wants for his children — an appreciation of nature. But it's not likely his hopes will be realized.

Waldie, 33, a tall outdoorsman, says this town's rush to progress left three of the ponds strangling in pollution's grip. And Waldie is an angry man, a flinty New Englander, who vows a fight to the finish.

Toxic liquids are flowing into three of Waldie's ponds from a nearby town dump and there is little question they will ever be the same even if the dump is closed.

His father before him farmed the land for 32 years when Cromwell was another small town where neighbor knew neighbor and a road to Hartford was known as "The Shumpike," a term coined by stagecoach drivers who shunned main turnpikes to avoid their tolls or traffic.

It was Cromwell's country setting and closeness to Hartford, 15 miles to the north, which appealed to real estate developers. Condominiums appeared. Industry expanded.

Waldie's late father sounded the first alarm about encroaching development.

"He was just a good man with a sixth grade education who worked at night and farmed by day," the son said. The elder Waldie was killed in a 1969 tractor accident.

"When the town grew by leaps and bounds he knew, like any practical man, that more people produce more garbage. And because our land adjoins the town dump, it stood to reason at least three of the four ponds on it would be endangered.

"It's simple enough. If the level of the dump is higher than the ponds and three of them are flow-connected with brooks running into them, the seepage and rains will carry the leachate (toxic liquids) into them.

"Nobody would listen. My father was so disgusted he had trees felled to fill in one of the ponds, but once the trees were down and he looked at that pond we enjoyed so much he couldn't bring himself to do it.

"The irony is that if our septic tanks were running over and bothering, they (the officials) would be after us to fix it within 30 days or be cited."

Waldie, a steamfitter, has been a disturber of this town's peace. He has confronted town officials, written letters to newspapers and was arrested recently for blocking the access road to the dump.

His first brush with the bureaucracy came in 1972 when he said he was assured by William J. Salwocki, then the first selectman or mayor, that the dump would be closed by the end of 1976 because the state Department of Environmental Protection said so.

Waldie checked periodically and could not confirm the promised closing.

A department spokesman told United Press International Salwocki may have based his comments on a projection the department circulated in 1972, advising the dump should be closed in 1976.

It was not an order — but a recommendation — and the dump in the town's isolated western pocket near Interstate 91 remains open, trickling its red poisons into the Waldie ponds.

Incumbent First Selectman J. Peter Mahony said recently the town is negotiating with Ronald and Alvin Ravizza who lease the dump acreage to the town.

Mahony said drainage improvements are planned and the town would not hesitate to close the dump if the state could find a suitable alternative.

Waldie's lone struggle apparently was not without success of sorts. The environmental department ordered the town on Sept. 13 to take certain corrective steps and to conduct, at its own expense, a comprehensive engineering analysis of the site to determine the dump's life expectancy.

While the department is evidently convinced the three ponds at the site are polluted, Waldie says they can be reclaimed if the dump is closed and the ponds are dredged — at the town's expense.

"I think a good case could be made for it and I'm talking to my lawyer about it," Waldie said, adding that, if it turns out he loses, "One thing's for sure. I'll go down with flags flying."

Artifacts Of Early Fire Dept. Shown

Artifacts from the oldest continuous black fire department in the state are now on exhibit in the N. C. Museum of History.

Parts of the equipment from the Warrenton Volunteer Fire Department, which was organized in 1868 and chartered in 1874, are now on display in the Museum's first floor galleries.

Parts of the refurbished horse-drawn wagon, as well as several ladders and pike poles in the exhibit were built in the 1890s by James Ranson and Sons, a Warrenton carriage maker and member of the fire company.

The Warrenton company has maintained its up-to-date training and equipment. Membership stands at about 22 now. It had as many as 50 in earlier years.

Present fire chief McCarrroll Alston and member Leon Cheek were the first Negro firemen from the South to train at the John Bean Fire School in Lansing, Mich.

The firefighting exhibit is a permanent exhibit at the Museum of History. Museum hours are 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday; 2-5 p.m. Sunday; and 7-10 p.m. Thursday; admission is free.

Church's Fall Festival Will Be Nov. 13

WINTERVILLE — The third annual Fall Festival sponsored by Winterville Christian Church will be held on Saturday, Nov. 13 at the Winterville Volunteer Fire Department.

The event will begin at 5 p.m. with a chicken pastry supper, followed by an auction sale at 7 p.m. Chicken pastry plates will be available for $2.

All proceeds from the supper and auction will go towards the church's building program fund.

Prior to the auction, the church will operate a "country store" for the sale of small items. Auction items will include hand made articles of arts and crafts and needle work, and various farm goods.

Teen Angels Trip Up Drug Dealers For Chicago Police

CHICAGO (AP) — Jane is 26, married to a Chicago policeman and has a baby. Posing as a high school pupil she has fooled hundreds of drug dealers.

The Mundelein College graduate in psychology became a youth officer after joining the Chicago Police Department three years ago. She is a Teen Angel, a member of a special unit of youth officers cracking down on drug traffic in schools by masquerading as pupils.

The young undercover investigators are picked by Sgt. Ron Kelly, 41, who was ordered in 1974 to "go into the schools, buy the drugs, find the pushers and arrest them."

Since then, the special squad has made more than 560 school-related felony drug arrests, nailing pushers selling to pupils at dozens of city and suburban high schools.

Jane's job is to go to classes, fit in, buy drugs and work her way up the narcotics supply ladder.

"I always check when homecoming or a big dance is scheduled," says Jane. "I must judge if a boy is getting drugs for me because I want them, or if he is dealing. When I ask, 'Is there any good PCP around here?' and he pulls out $200 worth from his pocket, that's one thing. But if he says, 'I haven't got any, but I'll get you some,' then I shy away quickly. I don't want to involve him. He's not the problem."

PCP — phenylcyclidine (an animal tranquilizer) — is a hallucinogen. Kelly says it's the biggest problem facing the city now.

In her undercover role, Jane says she wears whatever the girls wear and is just an average student.

"Your social group dictates the drug you take," she said. "I try and enter the clique using PCP and other hallucinogens to find out where they get them. Usually, one guy is selling. Another does speed, another does marijuana, and so forth. Often the student dealers are the 'big men' on campus. They have the money, the clothes, the cars, and take the other kids to rock concerts."

Jane says she tries to work more with boys. "Usually, it's the girls who can trip me up. They just know I'm not 17."

"One principal gave me good advice," she said. "He said it wouldn't be my looks or dress that would give me away. It was my air of self-confidence which an adolescent just doesn't have. So I YATCH THIS, AND REMEMBER TO GIGGLE A LOT."

Kelly said, "It's not the kids we're after. It's the pushers who use them as runners, or supply students who sell in the schools."

"I'm free to recruit anyone from the 600-member youth division. I scout the training academy for fresh faces. I want trained, educated people who look youthful, know how to talk, enjoy working with kids and see narcotics as a problem."

Kelly says his "new breed of cops" poses not only as students but also as pushers, junkies, hookers, pimps, big money types from out of town, whatever is needed.

"The women are our secret weapon and are given exceptional latitude," he said.

Some are clean-cut, some are sloop-eyed and sexy, some are pixieish or waifish, other utilize their looks and figures to make older drug peddlers lust for them, he said.

The unit's muscle comes from a core of veteran narcotics officers who asked to be assigned to the youth division. They describe Kelly as inspirational.

One of the younger agents said, "We have a sense of mission. I have 27 nieces and nephews. Somehow, I managed to avoid the drug scene in school while some of my friends died from it. I want my family to avoid it. If I can do my little bit in stopping some of this stuff in the schools, I feel like I'm accomplishing something."

In coordinating the investigations, Kelly said, "I may assign a team of women to enroll in a school and make small buys. Other officers form backup teams, and the older guys place the school under surveillance. We have a caravan of confiscated vehicles used in drug raids — cars, hot rods, vans — so we blend in.

"The undercover officer may buy $10 of PCP. Then she tries for more, hoping to develop a rapport with the student seller to get his source of supply," Kelly continued. "We work our way up from grams to ounces to pounds. We waste a lot of money because we insist on a pattern of repeated buys. If we had more money, we could buy more drugs. As it is, we bluff a lot. When we've gone as high as we can, we bring down the whole ring."

"Our biggest case," said Kelly, "involved seizure of two pounds of PCP — the largest haul made in the United States. It had a street value of $2 million."

Five Marts Are Closed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Five North Carolina and Virginia flue-cured tobacco markets closed Tuesday to sharply lower average prices because of declines in quality, the Federal-State Market News Service reported.

Offerings Tuesday included increased amounts of fair and low quality leaf along with non-descript tobacco, the news service said.

On the Eastern North Carolina Belt, Tuesday's sales totaled 1,017,970 pounds for an average of $102.77 per 100 pounds, a decline of $4.70 from Monday's average. Season sales reached 478,402,909 pounds for an average of $113.08 per hundredweight.

With the closing Tuesday of four eastern markets—Ahoskie, Farmville, Greenville and Rocky Mount—only Wilson and Goldsboro were left open. The Wilson closing was changed from Thursday to next Monday.

Based on incomplete reports, the average was down $1.20 from Monday, on the Old and Middle Belt. With a volume of 3,996,600 pounds, the day's average was $101.24 per 100 pounds. Season sales reached 439,562,352 pounds for an average of $107.53 per 100 pounds.

Reidsville, N.C., was the only market on that belt to close Tuesday.

N.C. Vulnerable To Cold Weather

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Administration said today that the nation has enough alternate fuels to offset expected shortages of natural gas this winter if the weather and other factors are normal.

But John D. Christie, assistant administrator for energy information and analysis, added that nine states may be vulnerable to temporary local fuel shortages if unusually cold weather strikes.

Christie told a House subcommittee on energy and power that the most susceptible states are North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Maryland, Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky, West Virginia and Arizona.

Christie noted that even though other fuels can substitute for natural gas, the alternatives — fuel oil and propane — are more expensive and may cost an extra $550 million to $650 million this winter. The extra fuel costs may reach as much as $4 billion to $5 billion for the entire year from last April through next March, he said.

Christie said the FEA estimates a total shortage of 1.84 trillion cubic feet of natural gas this winter, about 18 per cent of the requirements of final users.

He said no residential customers are expected to suffer any curtailments of gas service this winter.

Commercial customers, curtailed about 4 per cent of their requirements last winter, may be short by about 6 per cent of their gas requirements this winter but, "under normal weather conditions, virtually all of these commercial customers are expected to be able to obtain and use alternate fuels," he said.

Christie said the gas curtailments of industrial customers are expected to increase from 19 per cent of requirements to about 25 per cent this winter, while curtailments of electric utilities are projected to rise from 45 per cent to 51 per cent of requirements.

He said an FEA survey found that inventories of middle distillate heating oils are high and inventories of propane were at record levels, about 10 per cent higher than a year ago.

Stocks of residual fuel oil were about 9 per cent lower in October than a year earlier. "However, it appears that refiners and marketers can rely on reserve capacities to meet winter needs," Christie said.

Awards And Pins Presented To Pack 200

Awards and pins were presented to members of Cub Scout Pack 200 at its recent pack meeting held at the Moose Lodge.

Bob Cat Badges went to Kevin Baker, Chris Moore, Todd Morris, Walt Pollard, Stacy Pugh, John Richardson, Phillip Dickerson, Brian Joyner, and John White.

Greg Vacek and Erik Hofheing received Silver Arrow and Gold Arrow awards; and Kenneth Hofheinz was recipient of the athlete, aquanaut and sportsman awards, as well as an artists' pin.

Timmy Ellis received the aquanaut and sportsman awards and aquanaut and engineer pins. The pack's Pinewood Derby will be held at the next pack meeting, scheduled for November 30.

HOURS REDUCED
CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Visiting hours at the Cincinnati Art Museum have been reduced by closings on Mondays and the holidays of New Year's Day, July 4th, Thanksgiving and Christmas. The change was an economy measure.

Peter Marshall Trying New Syndicated Show

By STEVE MONTIEL
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If Peter Marshall hadn't had a chance encounter with a radio soap-opera actor on a dusty road in wartime Italy, someone else might be host of the long-running game show "Hollywood Squares."

And if it hadn't been for "Hollywood Squares," Marshall might not be embarking on a new television venture, a syndicated variety show.

As a 19-year-old forward artillery observer in Italy toward the end of World War II, Marshall recalled in an interview, he was about to be sent to the Pacific, where the fighting was heavier.

He was walking along a road in Naples, contemplating the prospects of warfare in the Pacific, when he heard someone call his name. It was a soap-opera star Marshall had met while working as a radio station page.

After learning about the perilous transfer, the actor got him a job as a military disc jockey and Marshall was in show business for keeps.

In the years after the war, Marshall teamed up with the late Tommy Noonan in a comedy act that broke up in 1961. He performed in stage productions in New York and London, did nightclub acts and eventually became host of "Hollywood Squares," now in its 11th year.

The common denominator in all of this is that Marshall, like other entertainers, has counted on people liking him and what he does. And that element, he says, will decide whether the variety show succeeds.

"If you like the host, the show will work. If you don't, it won't work," Marshall said at the outset of a tour promoting his show.

Some critics have not liked what they've seen, and Marshall has noted their displeasure. He said he expected that would happen because of his image as a game show host, which he said was distasteful to some — but not all — reviewers.

"I thought, boy, they're going to grab me," said the 50-year-old entertainer, "and boy, did they get me."

The ultimate judgment, of course, rests with the people who tune in the 72 television stations that are carrying the series of 13 90-minute shows this fall.

Whatever the outcome, Marshall vows he won't leave "Hollywood Squares."

Marshall — limited on "Hollywood Squares" to the role of straight man to a talking tic-tac-toe grid — gets a chance to do a bit of everything on his new variety show.

He sings, dances and joins in comedy sketches with his guests, most of whom he says are personal friends because "at $371 (a show), they're the only ones you can get."

By JOAN MOWER
ATLANTA (UPI) — George Mitchell, young, hip and white, calls blues music America's "only original contribution" to art and he wants to save it in its purest form.

"Country blues are dying out because no one appreciates them like they used to," said Mitchell. He has spent the better part of the last 14 years traveling around small, dusty southern towns ferreting out old-time black blues singers.

"In 1969 you used to be able to walk into most small towns and find a good blues player, but in 1976 they're hard to find."

"The old players are either dead or they've just stopped playing and the young blacks aren't particularly interested in country blues," he said.

He estimated there are no more than 30 "good" blues singers and players left in Georgia, which along with the Mississippi Delta area used to produce the finest country blues players.

Mitchell, 31, has recorded fifteen shoestring-budget blues albums, usually in makeshift studios.

Through the Georgia Folklore Society, he recently received a $10,000 federal grant — the largest folklore grant given — enabling him to record traditional music, including country blues, for the archives. College students, armed with tape recorders, will comb the state looking for musicians.

Country blues, wailing "blue notes" usually played on a guitar with sensuous, gutsy lyrics, were, in their heyday — the 1920's, 1930's and 1940's, — "part of everyday life."

Blues players provided music at parties, played for the community and for themselves when they felt "down and out," Mitchell said.

Musical faddishness partly accounts for the demise of country blues, Mitchell said. Another reason, he believes, is the mood of the black community.

"More than a few blacks began to identify the blues with a reminder of hard life in the country, or servitude." While country blues are on the wane, its sister, gospel music has continued to flourish. The churches usually frown on the often bawdy lyrics in blues music and its association with drinking and alcohol.

"The church and blues don't go together," Mitchell said.

Another Southern writer and blues aficionado, Jim Pettigrew, said liquor — not drugs — was often the stimulant used by blues players.

In its prime, major studios came South to record such blues singers as Blind Blake, Peg Leg Howell and Willie McTell.

Towards the late 1940's and early 1950's, with the large migrations North, the big-band electric blues sound grew up around Chicago, displacing the country sound.

It's been downhill ever since then for country blues. About 15 small recording studios and some fans still make country blues records, Mitchell said. But few radio stations ever play blues.

Other blues forms — the electric blues of B.B. King and Albert King for example — still have a following, and some well-known white groups, Z Z Top, the former Allman Brothers Band and the Rolling Stones, to name a few, have heavily imitated blues sounds.

Country blues fans, usually white and young, are something of a cult group. Pettigrew estimated there are about 30,000 of them, mostly in major cities such as Boston and New York.

A sprinkling of younger white and black singers, often in England, are committed to playing country blues but Mitchell doesn't think whites capture the real blues.

"They don't have the same control with their voice," he said.

"Country blues is more than a commercial thing, it's a real art form and it is sad to see it disappearing. But it's not dead yet."

Mitchell recently recorded one of Pettigrew's "discoveries." Using "detective work" Pettigrew found a 54-year-old man near near Plains, Ga., the home of presidential candidate Jimmy Carter, who both men describe as "one of the best."

His recording name is William Robertson and the title of the album will be "something like 'William Robertson sings the blues like they used to be sung.'"

Mitchell called Robertson, "one of the best I've ever heard."

Need New Drug For Gonorrhoea

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials are searching for another drug to combat a new strain of penicillin-resistant gonorrhoea before it develops immunity to the only drug now known to kill it.

The national Center for Disease Control has confirmed 31 cases of the new strain in 11 states. More than half are in California and all but one have been traced to travel in the Far East, Dr. Ronald St. John said Tuesday.

The new strain produces an enzyme which deactivates penicillin, he said. Dubbed Penicillinase-Producing Neisseria Gonorrhoeae (PPNG), it can be fought with spectinomycin instead of penicillin, St. John said.

But officials are urging doctors to use spectinomycin only when penicillin fails to work.

because they fear widespread use would increase the chances of the strain developing resistance to that drug as well.

Scientists are testing 30 to 35 antibiotics for use against the new strain, but "there's no miracle drug on the horizon," St. John said.

The CDC is working with state health officials and representatives of the armed services in seeking out cases of the new type of gonorrhoea.

"It's fairly common in the Far East, and without pointing the finger at anyone, it's obvious that servicemen make up a fairly large part of the travelers in the Far East," St. John said.

Only two American states have reported more than one or two cases—California with 16 and Hawaii with five, he said.

Other states where the strain has been found are Maine, Rhode Island, New York, Maryland, Virginia, Florida, Arkansas, Iowa, and Utah, he said.

Officials estimate gonorrhoea infects about two million Americans yearly. The new strain was first noticed in the U.S. in February.

Disgruntled, Cut Off Phone

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — Jesse Reeves was tending bar at the Bare Affair when a man walked up and wanted to cash a check.

Reeves wouldn't do it and a few minutes later a companion of the man walked up with a similar request.

Reeves said no again. The men became argumentative and told Reeves they worked for the municipal telephone company and that they could cut off his phone service any time they liked.

Reeves said he "didn't think much" of the threat, but 15 minutes after the two left Monday night he got a call asking if he was the bartender who wouldn't cash checks.

Then a little later he tried to use the phone and it was dead. Reeves' boss called the utility and service was restored. A spokesman said Tuesday that the episode was under investigation.

One of the strongest weekly home bridge games takes place in a brownstone on West 94th in New York City, home of Bridge World Magazine editor, Edgar Kaplan. He is one of the country's great players, and the game is invariably dotted with internationalists, both local and visitors from abroad. Observe his technique from a recent team match.

Four hearts was bid at both tables, and in each case the opening lead was the queen of diamonds. At both tables, declarer won the ace of diamonds and continued with a low diamond from dummy. Both Easts won the jack and returned a trump, taken in dummy.

Here the two declarers parted ways. At one table, South continued with another diamond off the table. East played low. West ruffed declarer's ten and returned his last trump, removing dummy's remaining trump. Eventually East had to gain the lead with a spade, and he cashed a high diamond for a one-trick set. The defenders scored two diamonds, a ruff and a spade.

Kaplan foresaw the possibility that the defenders would be able to prevent him from getting a diamond ruff in dummy. However, he also recognized that the ten of diamonds was a potential tenth trick. He, too, won the heart return in dummy, but continued to draw trumps in two more rounds. Now, he needed an entry to dummy to lead a diamond towards his ten. That proved easy to obtain. He simply led a spade to dummy's queen-jack. East took the king, but the defenders were helpless.

Declarer ruffed the club return and crossed to dummy with the remaining spade honor. A diamond off the table now assured that, whether East won the king or followed low, the ten would be the game-going trick.

Note that declarer's line would fail if diamonds were 5-1, since West could be allowed to ruff the second diamond. But in that event declarer could still have gotten home had West started with three trumps and three spades, for then the thirteenth spade could have been set up with a trump as the entry to dummy.

Carter Staff Likely To Be Built Around Georgians

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The new palace guard at the White House, as the presidential staff has been known in the recent past, is almost certain to be built around the Georgians who helped Jimmy Carter get there.

But Carter has vowed, and his present and future aides have confirmed, they are not likely to build any "magnolia curtain" around the new president that cuts off access to him.

Furthermore, Jody Powell, Carter's press secretary, said Tuesday that Carter will not have a chief of staff, a person who would "exercise authority over all the other staff members."

Carter has said he will maintain direct contact with his Cabinet members, Congress and others, but simple mechanics should still leave a great deal of power in his right hand man.

No appointments have been announced, but those who know

Carter and his friends say those who will have the best access to the presidential ear are expected to be those who had the candidate's ear. They also say the men and women who helped Carter make it will not be left out.

A couple of reasons are given, one that Carter will repay their loyalty as he did in past campaigns, and secondly that these are the people whom he has confidence in.

Here are some thumbnail sketches of the men who will help shape the new administration and are likely to be in it:

—Hamilton Jordan. He is almost certain of a top political job. Jordan managed the Carter campaign for president as successfully as he did the one for governor of Georgia six years ago.

Jordan was executive secretary to Carter as governor. Jordan, 32, was born in Charlotte, N.C., and raised in Albany, Ga.

—Jack H. Watson Jr. He is Carter's transition chief. Born in El Paso, Tex., and raised in Pine Bluff, Ark., Watson, 37, attended Vanderbilt University on a scholarship. He earned a degree in English and philosophy, was president of his fraternity and several honor societies and was voted the outstanding male graduate of 1960.

After three years in the Marine Corps, Watson went to Harvard law school and from there to a prestigious Atlanta law firm.

—Jody Powell. The new White House press secretary is all but certain to be Powell. At 33, Powell was expelled from the Air Force Academy for cheating after three years. He then went to graduate school at the University of Georgia when he first became interested in Carter and began writing him in 1969.

—Greg Schneiders. A non-Georgian Schneiders is a former Washington, D.C., restaurateur who became Carter's appointments secretary in the campaign. He appears to be headed for the same title in the Carter administration.

As keeper of the President's door and calendar, Schneiders, 29, would largely control access to Carter.

Schneiders was born in Detroit and raised in New York and Boston. He went to Washington in 1965 as a student at Georgetown University.

—Stuart E. Eisenstat. He is the favorite to be Carter's chief adviser on domestic matters. Eisenstat, 33, is an adopted Georgian. He was born in Chicago and graduated from the University of North Carolina and Harvard law school. He is now partner in an Atlanta law firm.

Eisenstat served on the White House staff of President Lyndon B. Johnson and was research director for Hubert Humphrey's 1968 presidential campaign.

—Zbigniew Brzezinski. He is a favorite to be Carter's chief foreign affairs adviser. The job also would carry the title of director of the National Security Council. Brzezinski also is being mentioned for secretary of state.

A Columbia University professor, Brzezinski, 48, was born in Poland, but moved to Canada as a child. He earned degrees from McGill University and Harvard.

—Charles Kirbo. Kirbo was raised in south Georgia and began practicing law in Bainbridge in 1946 and was recruited by the King and Spaulding firm in 1960. His clients include General Motors and Coca Cola.

Kirbo's Carter association began in 1960 when Carter, charging he had been cheated out of a seat in the Georgia Senate by vote fraud, hired Kirbo to take the case. Carter and Kirbo won, launching Carter's political career.

He served as Carter's chief of staff during the gubernatorial term, was Carter's choice for state Democratic party chairman and chairman of the state's 1972 delegation to the national convention.

Now, Kirbo says he's had enough of active politics and has no interest in any more jobs or titles in government or politics. He says he would continue as friend and counselor to Carter if he's needed.

Corbett made his comments in Raleigh in response to questions by reporters after the Cross Creek announcement.

Faison said the Fayetteville mall, which opened in February, 1975, had a projected total retail sales at the end of this year of $75 million. He said the mall has gone $25 million over that.

Faison said the growth was in part due to an "industrial revolution" in southeastern North Carolina during the past 15 years, combined with the growth of Ft. Bragg and Pope Air Force Base.

timeters) that blanked the area over the weekend. Collingwood and London, Ont. were also hit by the season's first heavy snowfall. (CP Wirephoto)

Black Votes Crucial To Carter Election Victory

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blacks gave Jimmy Carter 94 per cent of their votes in the presidential election and provided him with the margin of victory, a new study says.

The Joint Center for Political Studies estimated that 6.6 million blacks voted for Carter, with their votes providing the Democrat's winning margin in at least seven states.

In a survey of 500 sample ward precincts in 23 states, the center found that black votes gave Carter an edge over President Ford in Missouri, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Maryland. Those states have a total of 117 electoral votes. Carter's margin of victory was 27 electoral votes.

Some 70 per cent of all registered blacks went to the polls in this election, compared with a turnout of less than 60 per cent in 1972, according to the center.

A 1972 survey by the center showed that 87 per cent of the black Americans who voted supported Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern.

The number of voting blacks was about the same in 1972 as 1976, but only about 43 per cent of all voting-age blacks went to the polls this year, compared with about 52 per cent in 1972.

Fayetteville Mall Booms

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Developers and merchants at Fayetteville's Cross Creek Mall said Tuesday that good business this year has made it "the number one shopping center in sales volume between Washington and Atlanta."

The 18-month old mall, which houses more than 80 stores, is expected to finish the year with total retail sales of more than $100 million, developer Henry Faison of Charlotte said at a special press conference Tuesday.

His claim of Fayetteville's mall being the largest was challenged later Tuesday however, when Vance Corbett, general manager of Crabtree Valley Mall in Raleigh said his shopping center had retail sales of more than $100 million last year, and expected to go even higher this year.

Corbett made his comments in Raleigh in response to questions by reporters after the Cross Creek announcement.

Faison said the Fayetteville mall, which opened in February, 1975, had a projected total retail sales at the end of this year of $75 million. He said the mall has gone $25 million over that.

Faison said the growth was in part due to an "industrial revolution" in southeastern North Carolina during the past 15 years, combined with the growth of Ft. Bragg and Pope Air Force Base.

Fly-In Pizza Service Ready

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Want a pizza? Want to see a helicopter land in your yard?

The Santora Family Drive-In Restaurant will be glad to provide fly-in service.

The pie-in-the-sky scheme costs $152.89 for a 12-inch cheese and pepperoni standard model. Anchovies cost an extra buck.

Additional pies: $2 each up to 300 pounds per trip.

Santora's said the service won't be fast. It wants two days' notice so local police can be notified.

Local regulations permit chopper landings outside city limits in areas free of trees, wires and towers.

And if the weather is bad, you'll have to wait another day or so for delivery.

Many Divorcees Dissatisfied With Lawyers

NEW YORK (UPI) — The results of a survey of 700 divorced or separated women, published in November McCall's, show that 28 per cent were dissatisfied with their lawyers.

According to author Vivian Cadden, the complaints lodged by women against their lawyers showed that "lawyers fail to prepare women for the problems they will face either in the divorce proceedings themselves or later, when they are divorcees."

Sixty per cent of the respondents received neither alimony nor maintenance, the magazine reported. In many of these cases, the lawyer failed to include the token dollar clause, on which basis a wife can reopen her case should her economic circumstances change drastically.

Army Post Was Early Settlement

ATLANTA (UPI) — The earliest non-Indian settlement inside what now is the Atlanta city limits was an Army post called Fort Gilmer.

Establishment of the post in north-central Georgia was triggered by the War of 1812. The post was built in 1814 and was named for Lt. George R. Gilmer, its commander and later governor of Georgia.

Patrice Lumumba, ousted premier of the Republic of the Congo, was murdered in the Congo's secessionist province of Katanga Jan. 17, 1961.

SMOKEY THE BEAR, for 25 years a living symbol of forest fire prevention, died Tuesday at the National Zoo in Washington and presumably went to what Congress once referred to as "that great honey tree in the sky." Smokey retired in May 1975 and was replaced by another, younger Smokey. (AP Wirephoto)

MARS ICE CAP — The north polar ice cap of Mars, the layered deposits beneath it and the dune-fields surrounding it are shown in these two continuous strips of Viking 2 television pictures. In the upper part, flat-lying elongated patches of water ice are separated from one another by ice-free terraced slopes. The terracing, which is evident as alternating light and dark banding, preserves a record of cyclical climate change on Mars to the left, mobile dark sand streams down a gently curving channel and accumulates in a broad delta shaped dune field shown by a sinuous pattern of ridges. This mosaic provices merely a snapshot in the geological development of the Martian polar regions . . . a development which sees polar caps and sand dunes shift around, disappear and then reappear, driven by the forces of climatic change. Dalai Lama's Brother Adapts To New Life In U.S. Suburbia

By ROBERT B. THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
SCOTCH PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — His brother was a god-king, but "right now," says Lobsang Samden, "I'm night custodian at the high school."

"Whenever we have games, the night custodian has to make preparations, clean up after and lock the door. Of course, I clean up after classes, too. I work 3 to 11 p.m.," said Samden, brother of the Dalai Lama, former ruler of Tibet and still spiritual leader of several million Buddhists.

Sam, as he is known, is 45 and lives with his wife and two children in a suburban home. He has been a monk, an official in Tibet's government, house keeper at his brother's palace in Lhasa, social worker in India, envoy to the United Nations Refugee Commission in Geneva and proprietor of a handicrafts store in Manhattan.

He also had dinner with Nikita Khrushchev and Mao Tse-tung, together, in Peking 22 years ago.

"Someday, I hope to write a book," he said. The Dalai Lama has written several books, and so has another brother, Thubtennobu, who teaches at Indiana University, Samden said.

The odyssey of the family, which like all Tibetan families has no surname, began in "a very small village, Taktes, about 1,000 miles from Lhasa."

"My parents were farmers — horses, sheep, cows, pigs, chickens. Just a simple, small family. Not rich. My father was a horse trader," he said.

In 1933, the 13th Dalai Lama died, a regent was named and a two-year search began for the 14th Dalai Lama. The search ended at the farm home of 5-year-old Sam and his 2-year-old brother, Tenzingyatso.

A delegation of monks and government officials searching for a boy born at the time the Dalai Lama died noticed Sam's brother, one of four boys considered to have Dalai Lama potential.

"The regent took a trip south of Lhasa to a holy lake and prayed and meditated. A vision appeared. The lake showed our home area and a Tibetan letter."

"He wrote a letter to the search group. They reported they had found a very unusual boy — my brother. He had been wearing rosary beads just like those of the 13th Dalai Lama," Sam said, displaying his own rosary, around his neck under the brown and tan custodian's uniform.

"I was 7 when he became Dalai Lama," Sam said. "I didn't care, he's my brother and we played every day. But everyone paid so much attention to him, I came to realize he was something special."

Sam does not now, nor has he since then, referred to his brother by name: "He's Dalai Lama."

In Lhasa, Sam was in a monastery for 13 years. He left at 20 to become government director of monastery affairs.

The Chinese invaded Tibet in 1951, overrunning the Dalai Lama's army. A coalition government was established, but by 1958 "things became rough," Sam said. His brother, family and about 130,000 Tibetans fled to India in 1959.

Sam became a social worker with the refugees in India. The Dalai Lama sent him to Geneva, where he helped about 1,000 Tibetans emigrate. "They're still there, the scenery is beautiful. Just like Tibet," he said.

He and his Tibetan wife, whom he married in India in 1962, emigrated to New York. He opened a Tibetan handicrafts store, and they lived with friends. "But New York got to be too much, too fast and too big for me," he recalled.

He met a real estate agent and within a week bought a house here.

In May 1974, Lobsang Samden became night custodian for the Scotch Plains-Fanwood Board of Education and last February he filed for U.S. citizenship. "There are many different ways of life," he said.

Upgrade The Standards

RALEIGH (AP) — For the first time in five years, the state Social Services Commission has upgraded minimum standards for homes for the aged.

Among the new rules to take effect Jan. 1, the homes now are required to have a staff member be on duty around the clock. Minimum standards for the homes were initially enacted in 1945.

The new rules were endorsed by the North Carolina Association of Homes for the Aging. About 900 homes in the state will be affected by the changes.

Not affected by the changes are nursing homes which provide medical services and come under another set of rules.

Other major changes approved Tuesday were:

—Requiring an aide for each 50 residents instead of one per 60.

—Requiring at least a high school diploma or its equivalent for home administrators. Old standards had no educational requirement.

—Prohibiting a home administrator being a resident's guardian. That rule prevents an administrator controlling the finances of a resident in his care.

—Making a number of standards for staff members required instead of desirable as under current rules.

—Requiring at least four fire drills a year for the staff. Now no drills are required.

—Requiring a trained, part-time coordinator for recreational programs.

Label Suit Harassing

RALEIGH (AP) — Saying it was simply harassment of prison officials, a federal judge has dismissed a suit filed by the North Carolina Prisoners Union charging state prison officials with improperly restricting its activities.

In a decision handed down last month, Judge Robert Hemphill of South Carolina, temporarily assigned here, ruled there was no evidence that state officials were attempting to stifle the union.

The suit asked that prison officials be cited for contempt of court on grounds that they were deliberately slow in complying with a ruling by a three-judge federal panel. That panel had ordered the state prison system to give the union the same privileges granted other inmate organizations. The ruling is now on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

During an August hearing, Correction Secretary David Jones told Hemphill that prison officials did not like the ruling but would comply with it. He said the union has been granted the same privileges as other groups as long as it conformed to the same rules.

'The Ring' Is Big Smuggling Gang In Far East

By HARIHAR KRISHNAN HONG KONG (UPI) — It is known as "The Ring."

It is run with a highly structured organization, aggressive ingenuity and a thorough understanding of complex economic realities. Its efficiency would put to shame the operations of some of the best managed multi-national corporations.

And it has one thing more — a capacity to beat the law.

The Ring is a smuggling operation, a big one. It stretches from Hong Kong to the Persian Gulf state of Oman. The smugglers, all of Asian origin, operate the Ring from Hong Kong, a free port that provides an ideal haven for their multi-million dollar enterprise.

Now India and some other countries are trying to do something about the Ring. But their officials contend that, given existing tariff barriers and import bans, the effort is impeded by production of goods in industrialized countries specifically for the smugglers market.

"When an operation like smuggling brings a net loss of about $36 billion annually to a country like India, it is time some international notice is taken," complained one Indian government official.

"When you have a problem like narcotics smuggling which affects mainly the Western countries, the entire world is called upon to act," he said. "But when we are so seriously affected nobody cares."

"The reason is simple. Smuggling of watches, fabrics, electronic goods actually help the trade of advanced countries.

"Otherwise, why should, say, Japanese companies manufacture six-yard long, 45-inch wide fabrics when you know such fabrics are used only in the Indian subcontinent as saris for the women? Why should gold biscuits (small bars) be made in London which are marked 10 tolas, a weight known only in the Indian subcontinent? There are more examples like this to show advanced countries really don't care."

The Ring is set up so that the "big fish" manages to remain far removed from day-to-day dealings, according to a customs official from one of the affected countries.

"The ones that get caught occasionally are probably 20 or 30 steps down from the big fish in the hierarchy," he said. "They (the bosses) may not live in Hong Kong or Dubai."

The countries to which The Ring smuggles are among the world's poorest most under developed. They have a shortage of consumer goods, a craze for foreign manufactured products. Their lopsided tax structures and stringent foreign exchange controls contribute to the smugglers' visions of plunder.

And plunder there is. It has been estimated that India alone loses more than $10 million each day in foreign exchange because of smuggling.

What is smuggled? Gold, dollars, and pounds sterling. And goods, the import of which is either banned or heavily levied with tariffs. These include watches, textiles and electronic gadgets.

"This is the reason we have begun impounding the passports of those Indians in Hong Kong we know are involved in this racket," said the Indian official who declined to be identified. "We have to institute far more stringent measures to stop this economic gangsterism." He said the state of emergency in India, in effect since June of last year, has helped curb smuggling.

Some of the prominent members of the Indian community in Hong Kong, who also rank among the wealthy in this crown colony, reportedly have been notified their passports were to be impounded although they have not turned them in. More are expected to be similarly restricted.

Import-export businesses in Hong Kong often serve as a front for the smugglers. The firms can deal in any article so long as it does not come under the category of locally banned items like drugs.

Such articles range from textiles from Japan, gold from London, watches from Geneva or Hong Kong and even clothes from Indonesia. "That is why a headquarters like Hong Kong is vital for the operation," one official said.

The goods are usually shipped direct to Dubai on the Persian Gulf, which also is a free port. Other routes could mean calls at intermediate ports where detection would be possible.

"Once in Dubai, the goods can go to any number of places, like India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka and even some Southeast Asian countries. Fishing junks operating in the Arabian Sea are used to transport the goods to any point along the very vast coast line of the subcontinent," the Indian official said.

To stop such traffic at their end, he said, is impossible. The countries would have to "join hands and stand along the 1,800-mile long coast line."

The smugglers are "ruthless," he said.

"When we tighten our measures, these fellows could easily switch over to such items as narcotics. When it comes to economic crimes there is no difference between narcotic or immigrant smuggling and gold or watch smuggling. This must be understood."

The Hong Kong government reportedly has been asked to take action against those who have been blacklisted as smugglers. But those advised their passports have been impounded have avoided surrendering them because they have done nothing illegal under Hong Kong law.

When their passports expire, it is suspected they will attempt to stay on in Hong Kong by such methods as acquiring other nationality documents.

To counter that, the Indian government has begun attaching their properties in India. More drastic action such as the freezing of bank accounts is under consideration.

Meanwhile, the smuggling continues. Occasionally, more lower echelon smugglers are caught.

Recently, a woman was found trying to smuggle nearly two pounds of gold through Indian customs by hiding the bullion in a part of her anatomy not normally subject to inspection.

And a gang of smugglers was caught after their vessel anchored at an Indian port. The anchor was gold camouflaged to look like rusted iron.

Sugarmolding is the quickest and easiest method of making exciting and inexpensive holiday decorations. Just by mixing Dixie Crystals granulated sugar and water together you can make your own ornaments. Let the kids help and make it a festive family activity.

Basic Sugar Molding Recipe

5 pounds DIXIE CRYSTALS granulated sugar
1/2 cup water
Liquid food coloring (for pumpkin use red and yellow in 3:2 ratio)
Measure Dixie Crystals sugar and water into container. Add a few drops of red and yellow food coloring for desired shade of orange. Mix together with your hands until color is well blended and sugar is damp.

Hand-pack sugar firmly into 2 1/2 quart round mixing bowl. Scrape off excess with flat edge of a knife. Unmold at once with a quick, firm rap onto a flat countertop, cardboard, cookie sheet, bottom of cake pan. The shape will dry hard overnight, or place in oven at 200° for 60 minutes.

To make pumpkin ridges run finger from center down the sides before form is totally dry. Also poke small hole into top center. When totally dry garnish top with twig to form stem.

Refuse Change To 1069

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — What's in a name? Not numbers, according to the North Dakota Supreme Court.

The high court refused to overturn a Cass County District Court's rejection of Michael Herbert Dengler's petition to change his name to 1069. Dengler said the numbers express his philosophy of his relationship with nature, time and the universe.

Associate Justice Paul M. Sand disagreed, though he noted that "innovative ideas, even though bordering on the bizarre, are frequently encouraged and may be protected by the law."

But he said, "We are satisfied that the legislature, in giving authority to the courts to change a name, had in mind a name as understood and defined by common law and did not include change from a name to a number."

'Perfect' Holdup Target A Dud

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Two holdup men who thought they picked the perfect target for a big haul "were very astounded" to find only $4.21 in cash.

Office manager Donald Born said he and an employee were bound with surgical tape while the armed robbers searched for more cash but found none. The men escaped, but Born said that even with the cash taken from his wallet, "it just wasn't worth an armed robbery."

Some Progress Curbing Noise That Damages

By CARLA VINES
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — About eight years ago, Dr. David Lipscomb startled the nation by announcing that significant numbers of teenagers, addicted to rock music, had suffered hearing loss equivalent to a person 65 years old.

But how about 1976? Has the situation improved? "It's a mixed bag," Lipscomb said. "Loud rock music is still on the scene, and the kids are being damaged by it. But there seems to be a trend toward a quieter kind of music, folk rock, so it probably isn't as bad as it was."

A researcher at the University of Tennessee, Lipscomb tested the hearing of a group of freshmen entering the school. He found two out of three had serious hearing loss.

And he suspected that the nation's noisy society was suffering not only actual physical damage to the inner ear but psychological problems as well. He still holds that view.

Ask Recruits For REACT

As part of the observance of National REACT Month, the Pitt County REACT team is conducting a membership drive to encourage interested Citizens Band radio operators to join their public service organization.

Team membership drive chairman Betsy Heath said that the team conducts a volunteer monitoring watch on CB emergency Channel Nine and cooperates with all local authorities.

She noted that requirements for membership include: legal CB operations under a valid F.C.C. license or pending application; a CB base station and home telephone for monitoring purposes; and a "sincere interest in serving the public good."

During November, she added, the team will admit members for an annual dues payment which will cover all of 1977.

She invited persons interested in membership to call her at 758-0876.

Cat Home Again 800 Miles Later

BELGRADE, Mont. (AP) — Eight Ball the cat is home — 800 miles and six months after his owners last saw him.

Betty Polhemus and her family took Eight Ball along to visit relatives in Colorado last spring. The cat disappeared in Colorado Springs, and "I was broken-hearted," Mrs. Polhemus said. "I thought it was lost for sure."

The Polhemuses returned to Belgrade and moved from a mobile home to a new house last September.

Last Thursday, while visiting friends in the old neighborhood, Mrs. Polhemus said she saw the cat, and "...when I called its name, he came right to me. He was home."

Now, Mrs. Polhemus said, "He won't go outside at all. He just sits with me and purrs."

Truck builders are producing vehicles which are far quieter on the highways than they were in the past. Makers of home appliances have been building quieter machines. And industrial noise levels are being reduced.

Knowledge of noise hazards has spread, he said.

"The wave of the future is in two directions — technology necessary to build quieter devices or to quieten existing ones, and treatment for accidental noise exposure."

Lipscomb said research has found that a person exposed to sudden, high intensity sound, is helped by five to ten minutes of breathing oxygen, for example. Temporary hearing impairment, which might last 15 to 21 days, can be reduced to three to four days duration.

The oxygen treatment grew out of findings that noise exposure reduced the flow of blood to the ear, and that enriching the oxygen content of the blood could offset this phenomenon.

Lipscomb figures that replacement of noisy devices with quieter ones will have to come through attrition to be economically feasible. As devices are worn out they will be replaced with quieter ones.

But it's a continuing battle and a slow one. At this point, he said, the results are a mixed bag at best.

CONDOR THREATENED WITH EXTINCTION — Two rare California condors spread their wings to the sun on a perch in the remote area northwest of Los Angeles. Scientists and ecologists say the birds' birth rate is dropping drastically. (AP Wirephoto)

California Condor Near Extinction; Team Hopes Captivity To Save Them

OJAI, Calif. (AP) — Naturalists hope they have developed a plan to get the rare and fast-disappearing California condor population to do in captivity what it hasn't been doing in the wild.

The government-sponsored Condor Recovery Team has proposed the capture of three of the huge birds, including a breeding pair and a lone male, to be mated with a female condor already living at the Los Angeles Zoo.

The idea comes at what some scientists consider a critical point for North America's largest land bird. Only 45 of the soaring, carrion-eating birds are known to be alive, all in a federally-established sanctuary in the Los Padres National Forest northwest of Los Angeles. There number is ten fewer than a decade ago.

The dark, red-headed bird is enormous with a wing span of nine feet but is terribly shy of human beings and has been known to desert its nesting area at the sight of man.

The proposal for captive breeding finds the Audubon Society and Sierra Club in dispute over the likelihood of success in the program.

"What we proposed is a gamble, but right now it seems the only one to take," says John Borneman, an Audubon Society naturalist and one of the developers of the captive-breeding program. The Audubon Society has not formally endorsed the project but generally supports it.

But the Sierra Club's position is that the program is an unsafe risk, fraught with too many possibilities for error and even harm to the bird population.

The dangers include the chance that the birds could be injured during capture in big net traps and the possibility that those trapped could be parents already actively breeding.

"These birds are extremely sensitive creatures," says Dorothy Conlon of the Sierra Club's Los Angeles chapter. "We fear the young birds, once raised in captivity, will never be returned successfully to the wild. And what we'll end up with is birds in a zoo."

That is precisely what happened six years ago to Topatopa, the female condor raised at the Los Angeles Zoo. The bird scientists had hoped would be a mate for Topatopa, died a week ago after amputation of its bullet-shattered wing.

Debate over the plan is clouded by the fact that scientists do not know why the condor has failed to breed in the wild.

"If we could sharpen our understanding of the problem first, we may conclude that the best place to solve the breeding situation is right there in the wilderness," says Starker Leopold, director of wildlife and fisheries studies at University of California Berkeley.

But considering that condors do not breed until they are at least six years old and that they produce only one chick every other year, the recovery team claims it hasn't a moment to lose.

"We could continue to study the problem, but at some point the study becomes futile," Borneman says. "We could find all the answers just in time to see the condors slip beyond the point of no return."

His Bicentennial Project Fails

By SCOTT TAGLIARINO. DALLAS (UPI) — By most economic, social and patriotic standards the American Bicentennial has been a smashing success.

The Long Ships sailed into New York harbor, fireworks lit the skies in cities all over America on the Fourth of July and the television Bicentennial Minute continues to click off those historic days 200 years ago. Yet for some the Bicentennial was a disaster.

In particular, a Texan whose dream was to make a lasting artistic contribution to America's 200th birthday said the Bicentennial has proven both an economical and cultural disappointment.

Two years ago, Robert Wade, an assistant professor of art at North Texas State University, envisioned a Bicentennial "earthwork" which would be both inspiring and educational.

His idea was to design a "Bicentennial Map of the United States" roughly the size of a football field which people could walk through and learn about the different physical characteristics of each state.

Wade's dream did come true. The map was constructed on a vacant lot north of the city. Thousands visited the site starting in the early spring. Wade estimated 10,000 visitors showed up for the July 4th weekend.

But Wade said he lost more than $3,000 of his own money on the nonprofit venture and the community remained generally apathetic. Money to maintain the map ran out in August.

The map, which Wade hoped to keep open at least through December, if not for several years, is now overgrown with weeds. Many of the structures on the map have been stolen or destroyed by vandals. Wade said there is no other choice but to plow the whole thing under.

"Obviously, it is not going to go any further so this is as good a time as any to end it. We felt certain the map would last for several years, but now no one wants to help maintain it."

The map was in trouble from the beginning.

There was a $7,500 federal grant to start the project, the value of which Wade estimated at $100,000. He looked for a community effort. Civic groups, businesses and service organizations would donate time and money to build it and maintain it.

"We began asking for volunteers to help with the actual construction, but got no takers. We contacted every community group possible, but not very many came."

Finally, Wade had to pay laborers out of his own pocket. The cost ran as high as $250 a day.

He tried to finance part of the cost by selling advertising space on the map. Several corporations did take advantage of the offer and placed either signs or their products on the map. But most large companies did not participate.

"Some either were supporting other Bicentennial programs or had decided not to get involved with the Bicentennial at all," said Clare Frost, the project's administrative director. "Dallas-based corporations failed in their community responsibility. Advertisers were just scared to take a chance, because they are basically conservative."

There was another reason. "I think the word 'bicentennial' hurt us because after all the commercialism, people had a negative connotation about the map. They thought it was just another bicentennial ripoff. We finally stopped using the word bicentennial in reference to the map."

And the fact the map was a nonprofit effort hurt.

"People keep wondering what our angle was. They wanted to know what we were getting out of it. One of the reasons it failed was that it did not have a profit motive behind it."

They sought donations from people walking through the map.

"They complained so much we finally did away with the donation box," Ms. Frost said. "Then they complained that the site didn't have enough trash cans. But when we asked them to donate a trash can, they got mad."

Wade said he is now cynical about American values.

"This was just an example of an America where people just want to pay taxes and die," he said.

"The map was supposed to be an example of what to expect from the free enterprise system. And it failed."

Modest Plans For Inaugural Next January

WASHINGTON (AP) — The planners of Jimmy Carter's presidential inauguration say they will put on a more modest celebration than the $4 million extravaganza that installed Richard M. Nixon in 1973.

Washington attorney Bardyl R. Tirana says Carter will use nothing like the $900,000 imitation marble reviewing stands that held and sheltered Nixon and 22,000 others four years ago.

That was "too extravagant" for Carter, Tirana said. "The inauguration will be modest. It will not be extravagant, that much I know."

Tirana and South Carolinian Vicki Rogers, both longtime Carter supporters, have been named by the president-elect as chairmen of the committees planning the festivities for the Jan. 20 inaugural.

The $4 million total tab for the 1973 inauguration included the swearing-in ceremonies at the Capitol, several concerts, five inaugural balls, and a reception for ex-Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

No over-all budget for the 1977 ceremony has been established.

Much of the inaugural schedule is determined by custom and protocol and won't be changed by the Carters, Tirana said. The president-elect will primarily influence specific details, such as the type of hats the men will wear, if any.

Later this week, Tirana will meet with Mrs. Rosalynn Carter, who will indicate some of the general ideas she and the president-elect would like included in the schedule. Detailed planning will begin from there, Tirana said.
