Flim Flam Time

Greenville police today are continuing their investigation into a case reported yesterday involving two flim-flam artists who allegedly took $1,100 from a local woman.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Mrs. C. K. Marshmond of 611 Contentnea St. reported the incident at 1:50 p.m.

He quoted the woman as saying she had been walking in the 100 block of West Fourth Street about 9:30 a.m. when she was approached by a woman who asked her to recommend a bank that she could deposit $3,000 in.

Mrs. Marshmond said she recommended a bank and then was approached by a man who said he had picked up an envelope that a postman had dropped.

Cannon said Mrs. Marshmond reported the other woman took the envelope the man held from him, open it and said there was $40,000 in cash in the envelope.

Following some conversation, Cannon said the man agreed to give each of the women $3,000 if they could provide some small bills for change.

Cannon said Mrs. Marshmond gave the man $500 in cash she had at her home, then cashed a personal check for $600 and gave that to the man and was told to go to a local finance company and wait until someone approached her and that then she was to say that she was waiting for her granddaughter. That, Mrs. Marshmond told officers, was the cue for the contact to return to her the $1,100 as well as the $3,000.

Cannon said Mrs. Marshmond waited for three hours, then decided to report the incident to police.

The Square Egg Has Arrived

ASQUARE EGG? — Man has devised the square egg. It works this way: a warm, peeled, hard-boiled egg is placed in a small, square, plastic compression box. After a few minutes in the refrigerator, it has been pressed square. It won't roll off a plate, and it goes well with contemporary furniture. Its inventor, Stan Pargman of Los Angeles, points out it's a square meal. (AP Wirephoto)

Standing Firm On Rhodesia Demands

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Rhodesian black nationalists stood firm today on their demand for a maximum 12-month period of transition to black majority rule in Rhodesia.

U.S. officials and diplomatic sources in Washington had been quoted Wednesday as saying most of the black leaders involved with the Geneva conference were prepared to accept an 18-month transition period to help break the deadlock in the Rhodesia talks.

"That report is completely incorrect," said Saul Ndhlovu, spokesman for the "Patriotic Front" delegation of Joshua Nkomo and his ally, guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe.

He said that "as far as we of the Patriotic Front are concerned, we stand by 12 months," adding that front's position is to refuse to discuss anything else until that point is settled.

Similar comments came from spokesmen for Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa, leader of the African National Council, and the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole.

Led by Mugabe, the black delegates had voiced the demand for fixing an early date for full majority rule — not more than 12 months after successful conclusion of the Geneva talks — during the opening phase of the conference.

However, Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and his white minority government contend that it would take at least 23 months to prepare Rhodesia for black rule.

Both black and white Rhodesians have rejected a 15-month compromise proposed by Ivor Richard, British chairman of the conference.

Smith, complaining that little was being accomplished in Geneva, returned to Rhodesia nine days ago. The conference has not held formal sessions since last Friday. British sources said it was doubtful that formal talks could resume before Friday.

Meanwhile, Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere said the main stumbling block at the Geneva conference is British "reluctance to play their full role" in dealing with Rhodesia, a former colony which unilaterally broke away from Britain in 1965.

In an interview in Dar es Salaam, Nyerere said that during the transition to black rule in Rhodesia British officials should serve as the country's ministers of defense and foreign affairs.

He added that if Britain fails to assume its full burden in the situation, "the British must bear the responsibility for the continuation of the war in Rhodesia."

In Salisbury, Smith ushered in the 12th year of Rhodesian independence at midnight Wednesday by ringing a copy of the American Liberty Bell.

His hands trembling, Smith struck the bell 11 times to mark the 11 years since he declared independence from Britain on Nov. 11, 1965, to block British plans for eventual black rule.

Carter Plans Staff On 'Georgia Model'

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A White House staff modeled on Jimmy Carter's office when he was governor of Georgia could make Carter one of the most accessible presidents in recent times, if such a system could survive the pressures of Washington.

Carter has indicated he does not plan to have a White House staff chief in the traditional sense but will try to operate with a staff of co-equals who could communicate freely with him and each other.

Carter's Georgia administration from 1970 to 1975 followed this pattern successfully for the full four-year term. Veterans of those days say the set-up was constructed to make it easy to execute an end-run around any roadblock set up by any unsympathetic aide.

Every president since Harry S. Truman has had someone standing next to the Oval Office whose job was to direct traffic and shield the President from the demands on his time and attention. Dwight D. Eisenhower had his Sherman Adams, and H.R. Haldeman became legendary as the chief of Richard Nixon's staff.

"What he did was divide the governor's office into three function areas and delegate in a true military sense the responsibilities for those areas," said Bill Harper, who was a member of Carter's gubernatorial staff.

Harper, is on the staff of current Gov. George Busbee, was Carter's legal counsel as governor, and a member of the top team.

Jody Powell, who has been Carter's press secretary since his 1970 gubernatorial campaign, also was a member of the triumvirate with supervision over news and speechwriting functions.

Hamilton Jordan, who managed successfully Carter campaigns for governor and president, was the third member. His area was anything that didn't fall in the media or legal range and included such things as appointments and policy planning.

When he was governor, Carter had a staff chief but the title did not carry its usual meaning. In this role, Charles Kirbo did what he always has done during his long link with Carter: act as a senior adviser.

According to Harper, there was no one guarding Carter's door when he was governor, and he expects there will be none as president.

"I don't see Carter trusting anybody except Kirbo that explicitly, and I don't see him working with Kirbo in that way," Harper said. "He wants to know what's going on."

Kirbo has said he wants no office in the new administration although he is willing to advise and consult with Carter as he has in the past.

"There were assigned areas of responsibility, but at the same time if things overlapped that wasn't a barrier," Harper added. "In the case of appointments, for example, if we were looking for someone for a job and I had an idea, I could go to the governor with it or go to Hamilton."

Decisions were usually reached by consensus among the three top staff members, subject to review by Carter, Harper recalled.

Harper said the lack of any one "boss" in the office outside of Carter himself, made it difficult for any one of them to build a wall around the governor.

Carter had an appointments secretary as governor who kept his calendar and screened his calls to a degree, "but he saw as many people as he had time to see," Harper said.

Jordan, who figures to be a part of the Carter White House staff, says something similar will be likely in Washington. But he says the broader responsibilities and powers of the office will require a bigger operation.

"The people Jimmy has around him are generalists," Jordan said. "There are very few of us who have any expertise in any subject area. There will have to be people with foreign policy experience, economic background and so forth. My guess would be that it would be a mix of people."

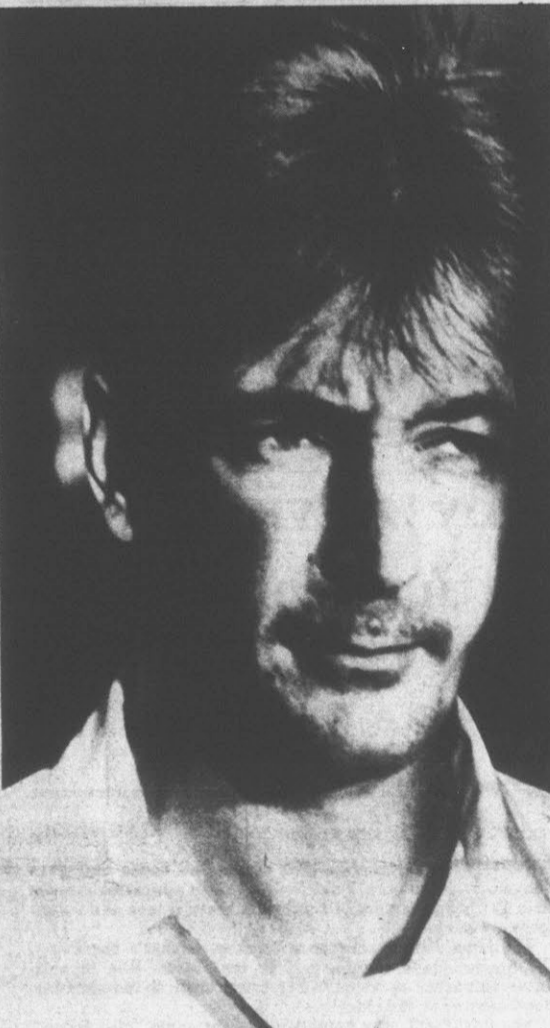

But Carter already has added specialists to his inner-circle for the campaign. They likely will be given such spots as presidential advisers on domestic affairs and foreign policy.

However, in keeping with his co-equal staff approach, Carter is expected to keep them as staff and advisors instead of heads of sub-staffs of their own.

Instead, Carter aides believe, there may be ad hoc task forces which study specific issues and then disband, but no permanent quasi-cabinet within the White House staff.

The potential kink in these designs of co-equal staff and open flow is the enormous difference between the size and urgency of the federal government and the Georgia statehouse.

Execution Plea OK'd

GARY MARK GILMORE

By BILL BEECHAM

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gary Mark Gilmore, a convicted murderer who asked the Utah Supreme Court to let him "die like a man," will face a firing squad Monday barring appeals for a second stay of execution.

The execution, scheduled for 8 a.m. on the Utah State Prison grounds 20 miles south of here, would be the first in the United States since Luis Jose Monge died in a Colorado gas chamber on June 2, 1967. There are more than 400 men and women awaiting possible execution on Death Rows across the nation.

Retiring Gov. Calvin L. Rampton, a supporter of capital punishment, said he would study Gilmore's case and issue a statement today.

The governor can stay an execution until the next meeting of the State Board of Pardons. That would not be until two days after Gilmore is scheduled to die.

Gilmore, wearing handcuffs, white prison garb and red-white-and-blue tennis shoes, told the five Supreme Court justices Wednesday:

"I believe I was given a fair trial, and I think the sentence was proper, and I'm willing to accept it like a man and wish it to be carried out without delay."

The justices, in a 4-1 ruling, then vacated a stay they had granted Monday by a 3-2 vote and agreed to let Gilmore be shot on schedule.

Gilmore's role in the case left groups opposed to capital punishment in an awkward position. But Shirley Pedler, director of the Utah chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said her group was considering at least two possible lines of last-minute appeal.

She said one was to appeal the constitutionality of the Utah law to the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled earlier this year that capital punishment was not inherently unconstitutional.

The other possibility, she said, was to ask the courts to forbid use of tax money to pay for an unconstitutional execution.

Each of five volunteer members of the firing squad would earn $175.

The possibility of other litigation leading to a stay was raised by David Kendall, an expert on capital punishment for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Kendall said there were reports that Denis Boaz, Gilmore's new California lawyer, was a writer as well as a lawyer and might have a contract to write about the case. This, he said, might represent a conflict of interest.

Too Cold To Be Living In A Cardboard Box

CHARLOTTE (AP)—For the last 10 months, Luther Miller's home has been a cardboard box under a Southern Railway bridge.

A brick has been his pillow and garbage cans his source of food.

"We tried to give him sandwiches, money and clothes, but he said he didn't want anything from anybody," said the manager of a furniture warehouse near the bridge.

However, Tuesday morning, when the temperature had dropped to 27 degrees and Miller had spent the night curled up on the cold ground, an employe of the warehouse decided it was time to get help for the destitute man, even if he didn't want it. The employe called the police.

Miller, who appears in his 50s or 60s, was taken to the Mecklenburg County Mental Health Center. His was wearing his wadrobe: three shirts, a frayed jacket, dirty blue jeans, shoes with holes in the soles, and a crushed baseball cap.

Under state law, persons determined to be dangerous to themselves or to others may be committed involuntarily.

A court clerk in charge of judicial hospitalizations signed a custody order and Miller was taken to a hospital for observation.

He will be given a hearing before a state District Court judge next Tuesday. It will be determined then whether he should be released, be committed to the Broughton Hospital state mental facility in Morganton, or be made an outpatient of the county mental health center in Charlotte.

Marks Sloop, the assistant clerk of Mecklenburg Superior Court in charge of judicial hospitalizations, said the last time he knew of a case like Miller's was four years ago. That was when a man was discovered living in a cardboard box in an empty downtown building.

"I imagine a lot of people (like Miller) are seen like this," Sloop said. "But people don't want to get involved or call the social services."

Two Pitt Nominees For Morehead Scholarships

Two Pitt County students were selected as Pitt County nominees for the John Motley Morehead Scholarship Tuesday. Martha West Bennett of Farmville Central High School and Pamela Anne Bath of J. H. Rose High School were chosen to represent Pitt County as nominees for the scholarship.

Miss Bennett and Miss Bath were among 12 Pitt County students interviewed by the Pitt County Morehead Scholarship Foundation Committee. Committee members include W. W. Speight, chairman, Joseph S. Moye and William S. Bost, Jr.

Miss Bennett, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Irving Bennett of Farmville, has been active in school and community activities. She plays and teaches violin and has been selected to play with the North Carolina All-State Orchestra for the past five years. She has performed in both East Carolina Summer Theatre and Rose High School dramatic productions. Miss Bath was also the first person from North Carolina to win the Southeastern Regional High School Competition for Strings sponsored by the Music Teachers' National Association and was one of two national finalists in the violin competition.

Miss Bath and Miss Bennett will represent Pitt County in district competition for the Morehead Scholarships.

Other Pitt County students that were interviewed by the scholarship committee include

Farm City Week Observance Held

Mrs. Irby Walker of Raleigh was speaker for the observance of Farm City Week held yesterday at the Pitt County Farm Bureau Building.

Mrs. Walker is secretary-treasurer of the N. C. Farm Bureau Federation. "Today while we observe Farm City Week, we can also observe the 40th anniversary of Farm Bureau which was started in Pitt County in 1936. Two years later, it was moved to Raleigh. J. E. Winslow was the first president," said Mrs. Walker.

"Farm City Week has been held for 22 years and was started by the National Kiwanis Club," she added.

She told of the changes in farm life and said that the farmer has to wear many hats — a farmer has to be a prophet, to see what's coming; a banker, to know where to borrow money; an agriculturalist, to know the latest techniques; and a broker, to be able to bargain.

Mrs. Walker gave facts and figures concerning the food dollar and told of the efficiency of farm work today. "Good business practices on a farm are just as important as running a bank," she pointed out.

"Farm and city people are gradually coming together — educationally, economically, socially and culturally. . . . the opportunities are greater today. Ours is a time of opportunity, but a time of challenge. We prosper by working together. Consumers can't live without producers. Our challenges are awesome but so are our opportunities. We must face our problems together and move ahead to meet the future with hope and confidence," concluded Mrs. Walker.

Mrs. Wilbur Worthington of Rt. 2, Ayden, a member of the N. C. Farm Bureau Women's Advisory Committee, presided at the covered-dish luncheon. In telling of the purpose of Farm City Week, Mrs. Worthington said, "The activities are to promote a wide spread understanding of the interdependence of farm and city people. The program of the National Farm City Council is a gigantic nationwide effort to help us gain a clear understanding and appreciate each other."

Mrs. Worthington presented an engraved plaque to Jack Barnes, Pitt County Farm Bureau office manager, for 15 years of outstanding service to Farm Bureau.

Mrs. Sue May and Mrs. Evelyn Spanger, of the Pitt County Agriculture Extension Service, presented a slide program "Providers of Plenty," which was produced by the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

Mrs. Worthington told of projects of the Farm Bureau Women including deterring crime, fire safety and identification pencils.

The luncheon was sponsored by the Pitt County Farm Bureau Womens Committee.

Miss Johnson Gives Program

GRIFTON — Miss Bertha Johnson presented the program at the meeting of the Grifton Garden held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H.B. McIver.

She spoke on her trip to several European countries and also showed slides.

Mrs. W.L. Mahler was assisting hostess. During the business session, conducted by Mrs. L. D. McCotter, member planned to meet with Home Extension members at the Masonic Hall for a sewing workshop to make dresses for women at Cherry Hospital. A discussion was held concerning dogwood trees for the Grifton school grounds and persons having shrubbery to donate for the beautification of the building on Creek Shore Drive should contact club members.

Plans for the annual Christmas party which includes husbands and friends were made and the party will be held Dec. 20.

Fashion Photography Trends Changing

By DOLORES BARCLAY Associated Press Writer NEW YORK (AP) — It appears to be an avant garde photograph from one of those expensive, coffee table books that are fashionable with the too-too set these days:

Three female models in lounge clothes surround a glowing couch in a darkened room. They stare at the light, their heads stiffly lowered. They are still, very still. And their zombie-like faces hint of some unknown, erotic terror.

Look again. That's right, it's an underwear ad.

The picture, part of a special lingerie catalog for Bloomingdale's department store in New York City, reflects a growing trend in American fashion photography toward blending the bizarre, the erotic, and the macabre with the traditional.

The mood is kinky. The models are tough. Farewell sweetness and apple pie.

The Bloomingdale's catalog was designed by French photographer Guy Bourdin, who reportedly refused to allow the store to review any of the prints before he flew back to Paris.

Called "Sighs and Whispers," the catalog shows page after page of suggestive poses, hinting of brotheis, brutality and even lesbianism. The makeup is intense, causing the models to look like cast members from a Fellini film or vampires on the prowl.

The use of the ring light, which gives models a bizarre white or red spot in their eyes, adds to this harsh mood.

"For two or three years now, we have had nothing but sweet, smiling girls in fashion photography," said Paris-based, Danish photographer Gunnar Larsen. "People simply got fed up with them, and we had to find something different."

Larsen, who has played up the sado-masochistic look in his fashion magazine, "Mode International," said current fashion photography trends reflect the growing strength and power of women.

"Thirty years ago, it was impossible for a woman to declare openly she wanted to go to bed with a man," he said. "Nowadays not only do the women decide, but the men concerned have no say in the matter. The sado-masochistic fashion pictures are part of the same general trend in our society."

American photographer Deborah Turville has photographed new bathing suit designs in a stark, cold public bath house. Bourdin has gone even further in his ads for French shoe designer Charles Jourdan. In one, two shoes are on the street near an auto accident scene, complete with challenge marks outlining the victim's body.

His shots for the Bloomingdale's catalog are more sexually suggestive and erotically frank than horrific.

"The kinky look is popular right now," says New York Photographer Bruce Laurnace. "I think it's terrific, but it's not very imaginative or very nouveau."

German photographer Helmut Newton, who is based in Paris, has been using this technique for several years in Europe. In fact, the style is very evident in a new collection of his work, "White Women."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Sonja Sellars came in breathless at a party the other night and made the most incredible announcement. It seems her husband, Russell, was walking around in the crawl space over their house when he fell through the ceiling.

Naturally, we were shocked.

"Was your ceiling damaged?" asked Bob.

She nodded. "Came all the way through it. There's a hole in it big enough to sling a camel. We're just sick about it."

"Don't I know," commiserated Lois. "One of the kids rammed into the wall with a tricycle and it took four weeks to get it fixed. You just can't get people to work anymore. Especially on small jobs."

"Someone get Sonja a drink," said Les. "She looks pretty shaken."

"You'd be shaken too if you were sitting there watching Alistair Cooke and all of a sudden your husband knocked the glass out of your hand with his body."

"I hope you can get the same paint," interrupted Lois. "We had a special mixed paint and you know when the lights are on, you can see the exact spot we had to patch. That just makes me ill."

"What was he doing up there in the first place?" asked Sally. "Your crawl space doesn't have a floor."

"I know," said Sonja, "but he's always been agile on the rafters before. He was after that cardboard turkey that we always use for a centerpiece for Thanksgiving."

"It takes one to know one," sniffed Sylvia, popping a canape in her mouth.

"So, were the kids upset?" asked Sally.

"They were at first, but then I explained to them that Daddy was just being silly and calling attention to himself. I gave them a cookie and they settled down."

"Hey, something I've always wanted to know," asked Ward. "Is the ceiling a composition?"

Dear Abby

Abby Advises Getting Out To Right Places

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point. How does a nice girl meet a nice fellow?
GETTING NOWHERE

DEAR GETTING: She gets out of the house and goes where nice people are. To church, to adult education classes or to the headquarters of a political party where she volunteers her services.

She joins a little theater workshop, if that's her thing, she bowls, plays tennis, golf or meditates. She investigates volunteer services in her community to aid shut-ins, handicapped or the elderly.

She does NOT stay home waiting for some "nice fellow" to ring her doorbell, because if he does, he's sure to be selling something.

DEAR ABBY: Would you like to hear some feelings straight from the heart of an adopted child?

I am a 15-year-old girl who was "chosen" at the age of four days. I am so happy with my adoptive parents that I would never dream of searching for my biological parents. Besides, I know it would crush my parents' hearts, and I would never do such a thing.

My "real" parents are the ones who raised me, changed my diapers, nursed me through my illnesses, fed me and put the clothes on my back. But more important than anything material, they taught me right from wrong and gave me love.

To search for my biological parents would be a very poor way of saying "thank you" for all my adoptive parents have done for me.

I think every adopted child should appreciate how lucky they are to have been raised in a nice home instead of in an orphanage.

CHOSEN CHILD IN P.A.

DEAR CHOSEN: Chosen children have every right to seek the identity of their biological parents. Whether the reason for their inquiry is good or bad is not for others to say. I vote, too, for the right of biological parents to remain anonymous if they wish. However, a medical history of both biological parents should be made available to the adoptive parents whenever possible.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "TRYING AGAIN IN GREENWICH": No one said it better than Malcolm S. Forbes: "One thing that previous practice doesn't always make perfect: marriage."

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

IRS Plans To Soon Publicize Tax Rulings

By G. DAVID WALLACE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service will soon be making public all the thousands of tax rulings it issues each year, although the IRS will not identify the corporations or individuals involved.

The IRS handles about 30,000 rulings a year. In the past, the IRS revealed most rulings only to its agents or to corporations and taxpayers who sought guidance on a specific tax issue.

The House Ways and Means Committee, which wrote the disclosure requirement into the new tax law, expressed concern that "the private ruling system has developed into a body of secret law known only to a few members of the tax profession."

"Additionally, the secrecy surrounding letter rulings has generated suspicion that the tax laws may be used by the 'influential' to their advantage, and that the tax laws are not being applied on an even-handed basis," the committee said.

The new disclosure policy is expected to begin by March and generally requires the deletion of names in public material.

Traditionally, where the IRS felt a ruling or piece of technical advice was of general interest, it made its position public in a formal ruling without identifying the parties involved. It did that 626 times in 1974. The rest of the rulings it kept secret.

One controversial letter ruling came in International Telephone & Telegraph Corp.'s 1969 merger with the Hartford Fire Insurance Co. The IRS ruled that Hartford's stockholders did not have to pay taxes on the appreciated value of their stock in exchanging it for shares of IT&T.

In 1974, following attention focused on the merger by opponents, the IRS changed its mind and ruled that the shareholders would have to pay taxes that IT&T estimated would cost them $30 million. The issue is still being disputed by the company.

Congress was also prodded into action by a suit brought by Tax Analysts and Advocates, a nonprofit research institution.

A federal court in Washington, D.C., ruled last year that the letter rulings were public information and ordered the IRS to make public all letter rulings, including the names of the parties involved, issued since passage of the Freedom of Information Act in 1967.

Energy Is Top Carter Problem

One of the major problems which will face the administration of the new president Carter in January is getting on with the job of finding adequate energy sources for our nation.

There was talk of alternative energy sources and conserving what energy we have during the gasoline crisis. Once the price of fuel oil had been adjusted upward and everyone was accustomed to paying it, we went back to our old ways with little change.

There was one change, however; we were paying more for foreign oil and importing more of it. That means we are sending out more dollars and even more important, we are becoming increasingly dependent on foreign oil sources. That means the oil supplies can be cut off and we can be squeezed to death.

Now there is talk of a further increase in the price of oil by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — probably 15 to 20 percent. Those nations justify it on the basis that oil supplies are running out, and probably they are right.

In our nation, while there is not enough oil annually to meet our needs, there is still much left underground. Apparently no one wants to do much about alternative energy sources until the last drop of oil has been pumped out.

That is no way to run an energy program. We have coal, sun light, wind and water power, as well as nuclear power. If we don't get on with developing these other energy sources we are going to wake up very soon with petroleum in short supply; and within most people's lifetimes we could deplete our oil resources.

Now is the time to get busy on the energy problem.

Praise Of Farmers No Empty Words

U. S. Sen. Jesse Helms paid tribute to the American farmer in a talk to the Area Five N. C. Association Soil and Water Conservation Districts here Tuesday night.

The ability of the U.S. farmer to produce food and fiber is a prime factor in the nation's ability to remain free, he said. "America owes its well-being to the . . . productivity of the American farmer."

Those are not simply empty words. What our farmers have done is nothing short of miraculous. They have provided us with adequate food supplies relatively reasonably priced, with enough left over to help feed the remainder of the world.

THIS AFTERNOON Hunt Emphasizes Children

By BILL NOBLITT
(Last of Two Articles)
RALEIGH — It was obvious from his campaign oratory and promotion that a major feature of the Jim Hunt approach to state government is a commitment to children.

implementation—not simply as a campaign gimmick.

Early Approach

Hunt has said privately on many occasions that he believes most problems which people have in life—emotional, physical, mental, social—develop during the first six years.

Most problems which promise to cause lifelong troubles are not revealed until the child enters school. By then, Hunt says, the child is "stunted and stigmatized" and often fated to a life of social problems, criminality, or such.

Millions of dollars are then spent trying to correct serious defects with little success, while earlier work could possibly have prevented the situation. Thus, early childhood screening to detect and treat disorders, and major emphasis on reading in elementary school will capture a great deal of attention.

Hunt sees a direct link between childhood problems and criminality later in life, and his close friend and campaign manager Eddie Knox, Charlotte lawyer and former state senator, will play a major role in this field.

Knox has headed for more than two years a prison reform commission which has consistently argued that overcrowded prison conditions do not require the massive investment of dollars in new buildings which were sought by the administration of Gov. James E. Holshouser. Existing facilities can be used to house prisoners, that commission argues, while the dollars are spent more effectively in other programs such as childhood screening.

New Jobs

In another of his favorite areas—economic development—Hunt has consistently seen two areas of concern: stepped up job-training at Community Colleges and Technical Institutes to provide the pool of skilled workers to help attract good, clean industries such as electronics, computer operations, research, chemicals; and further development and refinement of the research park and industrial park concept in which compatible operations are centered in particular sections of the state most suitable for them.

But he also warns that major developments must be carefully worked out to yield dramatic benefits 10 to 15 years down the road; that immediate gains may have to be sacrificed in changing from low-skill, low-pay industrial growth to the more sophisticated kind.

For four years, as lieutenant governor, Hunt has either served himself on various boards and commissions, or has been represented in positions of leadership by close friends and allies who believed he would be governor, or staff people reporting directly to him.

The net result will be a flood of legislative material next year which already well represents his input—in prison reform; land management; public utilities; education, ethics; court reform for speedy trials, less discretion for judges and decriminalization of victimless offenses; crime, among others.

Legislators have already in hand a thick portfolio of issue statements, background, and suggested approaches.

ALL THE GOVERNMENT GOODIES PROMISED DURING THE CAMPAIGN

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The Uses Of Oversight

It is a venerable custom, dating back to the earliest days of the Republic, to belabor the Congress for its failings. This is a useful custom; it ought never to be abandoned. But now and then the Congress performs excellently and earns a round of applause.

Let us hear it, then, for a House subcommittee headed by Tom Steed of Oklahoma, which last month provided a splendid example of what congressional oversight is all about. The subcommittee filed a devastating criticism of a proposal advanced by the Federal Trade Commission for regulation of the funeral industry. The report demolishes the FTC's position and convincingly demonstrates that the proposed trade rule regulation should be withdrawn.

In congressional terminology this does not mean, as you might suppose, a kind of inadvertent neglect. It means scrutiny or supervision; and one of the most conspicuous failures of Congress in recent years is that it has failed to exercise its powers of oversight sufficiently. The general rule is for Congress to grant sweeping regulatory powers to some executive agency, and then to forget about the matter. This is one of the reasons for the fix we are in.

A couple of years ago Congress passed the Magnuson-Moss Act, enlarging the powers of the Federal Trade Commission. Congress then forgot about the law. The FTC did not. Within the FTC, the bureaucrats spit on their hands and got happily to work. For no particular reason, except that the subject appealed to him, a staff attorney by the name of Arthur R. Angel got entranced by the funeral industry and by the abuses he perceived therein.

One thing led to another. Angel read books; he read magazine articles; the more he read, the more he concluded — quite sincerely, we may believe — that a deplorable situation could be relieved only by nationwide Federal regulation. This conclusion led to hearings, to expert studies, to consultants' fees, and to 24,400 manhours of busywork within the FTC. On Aug. 29, 1975, Angel's baby was born — a long, tough, bristling proposal to regulate the very daylight hours of the nation's 22,000 funeral homes.

Because 90 percent of these homes are small business operations, with only two or three full time employees, the proposal attracted the attention of the House Committee on Small Business. Steed's subcommittee took a long, slow look.

In its enthusiasm for regulatory rule, the FTC had attempted to justify its proposal in terms of "nationwide" complaints. On examination, it appeared that fewer than a dozen complaints had been received at the time the FTC set to work. Over a five-year period, the FTC could show but 1,000 complaints. There were ten million funerals in that period. That is a consumer complaint level, said the subcommittee, of 0.001.

Turning to the merits of the proposed regulation itself, the subcommittee found the requirements intolerable. The FTC would forbid funeral directors from "disparaging" inexpensive caskets or simple services, but "disparagement" was nowhere defined. The FTC would require the funeral homes, in effect, to demean and degrade their own services; they would have to supply customers with a form "stating what is not required by law for a funeral."

These and other proposals, said the subcommittee, are "abhorrent to free enterprise." While the industry surely is not free of abuses,

Postal Outlook Is Bad

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Fearing that a United Parcel Service strike may eventually cause a letter jam, the Postal Service is asking the public to mail Christmas packages and cards earlier than usual this year.

The Postal Service on Wednesday moved up by one week the mailing deadlines it previously had suggested for Christmas mail. The new recommended mailings are Dec. 10 for domestic parcels and Dec. 10 for Christmas letters and cards.

The Postal Service said it was compelled to ask the public to mail even earlier than normal because its mail volume has been increased vastly by the eight-week United Parcel strike in 15 states from Maine to South Carolina.

The Postal Service statement indicated that if the strike continues, the effect on first-class mail may grow.

"While priority will be given to letter mail, many postal facilities normally dedicated to letter mail may have to be used to prevent an unmanageable backlog of parcels," the service said.

The Postal Service has added 6,200 temporary workers and imposed heavy overtime schedules at the bulk mail centers, which process packages, Lynn said.

"The bulk mail centers normally work two eight-hour shifts. Some now are up to 22 hours per day," he said.

In addition, the Postal Service has reopened old parcel handling facilities that were closed when the bulk mail network was completed this year.

Some mail has been taken by special trains from New York to bulk mail centers outside the

40 Years Ago Today

November 11, 1936

The 18th anniversary of the Armistice ending the great war in 1918 was the occasion today for pleas for everlasting peace as many nations held commemorative exercises for fallen heroes of the combat.

Cathedrals, churches and synagogues drew millions to worship and prayer. There were parades with martial music reminiscent of the war days.

To President Roosevelt, war time assistant secretary of the Navy, and General John J. Pershing, last survivor of the Allied high command, fell the leadership of the United States observance — a pilgrimage to the great white tomb of the unknown soldier in Arlington National Cemetery in Washington.

Two minutes at 11 a.m. were set aside for a pause in the nation's activity.

In New York's great Times Square traffic was ordered stopped and taps sounded to remind Americans of the day.

The six day battle for Madrid shifted to the South today after the city's defenders had controlled a 40 block fire.

Occasionally one of the bigger fascist artillery pieces sent a shell screaming into the Western end of the capital. The insurgents had advanced by mid-afternoon despite the government's menacing of the insurgent communications line.

LEAVING RUSSIA, BUT...

Fewer Jews Go To Israel

By FRANK CREPEAU
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Controversy is raging here over Soviet Jews who get exit visas for Israel but go to live in the United States or other countries.

Jews now in Israel and led to charges that Israel is trying to force all Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union to live in Israel.

"Nobody wants to take the responsibility for telling Russian Jews they have to come to Israel or get out of the Soviet Union on their own," said one Soviet immigrant who has become involved in the issue.

Israel offers a visa to any Jew who wants to leave the Soviet Union. In recent years an Israeli visa has been the easiest way to get out. But once at the transit point in Austria, the emigre can go to any other country that will accept him, and more and more Soviet Jews are doing just that.

Up to 1972, fewer than one per cent turned their backs on Israel. From 1971 through 1975 a total of 103,300 Soviet Jews came. The biggest year was 1971, when 33,500 arrived.

The dropout rate rose to 18.7 per in 1974 and 37 per cent in 1975. This year it is running about 50 per cent, with about 8,500 expected.

There is general agreement that dropouts expect an easier or better life somewhere else, because Israel's economy is lagging, there is always a danger of war, there is compulsory military service, and absorption into Israeli society can be difficult.

One reported proposal by a committee of Israeli and American organizations is to restrict help given in Vienna by the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society (HIAS) to those going to Israel.

Those who would cut the aid to dropouts argue that there is no intention to force Jews to come to Israel. But they say there is a limit to the funds available, that those who choose Israel should have priority on them, and that there is no moral obligation to finance emigres looking for "a warm and comfortable spot."

They contend that the dropouts are misusing the Israeli visa for world travel and that by turning away from Israel they undermine the entire campaign on behalf of Soviet Jewry.

Those who favor continuation of aid to all, regardless of destination, assert that any Jew who wants to leave the Soviet Union must be helped and that in a totalitarian state another massacre like the Nazi holocaust is always possible.

This faction argues that to cut aid would discredit Israel in the eyes of Soviet Jews, cause drastic reduction of Soviet emigration and lead many to believe Israel prefers Jews to stay in the Soviet Union if they don't come to Israel.

Strength For Today

HIGHER THAN MAN'S LAW

The parable of the Good Samaritan sets forth in striking contrast the law of man and the law of God.

The priest and the Levite who looked on the stricken wayfarer and passed by on the other side were legally faultless in their procedure. They had not caused the man's suffering and there was no reason why they should do anything other than they did.

But the Good Samaritan believed himself to be responsible to a higher law.

He had probably never seen the stricken man before. Legally his hands would have been clean if he had gone about his business and left the victim of the robbery lying as he found him. But probably, without knowing why, the Samaritan immediately felt himself involved in the situation and responsible for the man's welfare.

He was responding to that divine law higher than man's law, that final and divine authority to which the true humanitarian appeals.

Britons Look; See No Future

By A.O. SULZBERGER JR.
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — "The future don't hold anything," Bob d'Angelo sat back in his chair and looked around the quiet pub for someone to disagree with his sweeping prognosis of Britain. Nobody did.

Soon people won't be able to live here."

The Butlers used to come to their local tavern, the Gloucester Arms in Kentish Town just north of central London, three or four times a week. Now they come only once. He makes $81.60 a week as a truck driver, and with prices as high as they are now, they can afford only one night out a week.

Of their $81 the Butlers spend $32 for rent and another $32 for food. That leaves them $17 for the gas and electricity bills, clothing and entertainment.

"It's very bad," said Mrs. Butler. "Prices are going up week after week. You can't budget anymore."

"If you've got three little children and can't work, I don't know how you'd eat," said Joyce Trusler, as she sat at one of the six small round tables that dot the pub.

In less than two years the pound has dropped in value from $2.35 to $1.60, causing prices for almost everything to soar.

Everyone has their own idea of why the economy has deteriorated. Some blame the European Common Market, which Britain joined in 1973. Others blame the decimal system of currency which Britain adopted in 1970.

But almost all point to three problems they feel are most responsible for the current situation. These are the number of immigrants coming into Britain, the misuse of the social welfare system and finally, themselves.

"There are too many lazy people here," said Michael Lay who owns a pub further down the road. "We're spoiled here. Too many benefits."

He was interrupted by another man standing at the long wooden bar.

"Things won't get better here," said the man as he took a long draw of his beer. "We've created a nation of fiddlers."

"We're still the greatest country in the world as far as technology goes," he said, "but we don't use it. You must have incentive, without it nobody works, nobody invests."

He claims that the high tax rate here as much as 83 per cent has discouraged personal incentive.

"We blame ourselves for letting the government do what they want," said David Shaw, a truck driver. "People just haven't stuck together."

Waylon Jennings Sees Future 'Universal' Singer

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music headliner Waylon Jennings calls Steve Young his favorite singer, "the only one on the scene who has the possibility of being universal." Jennings, one of the leaders of the progressive or "outlaw" movement in country music, says Young will be:

"The Bob Dylan of country music. He's not country, not pop, not folk. He has no earthly idea how great he is. I believe in that dude. If he gets any better, I'll kill him."
Young, a rising "outlaw" himself, is working on his second album for RCA after more than a decade of trying to get record executives to accept his style of music.

"In the last two or three years, Nashville has opened up because of the success of Waylon and Willie (Nelson)," Young said. "I used to be unable to get my foot in the door; people wouldn't listen to what I was doing."
"Times have changed to where I can do my own thing. Maybe me and the times have come together."

The "outlaw" movement, which both Jennings and his disciple, Young, represent, has its greatest appeal among young country music fans and sounds more like rock than traditional country music. The same sort of appeal has been generated by some of the newer jazz groups — Herbie Hancock's various ensembles and The Weather Report, for examples. These groups perform within a basic jazz framework, but employ rock, Latin and even country techniques as well.

The "outlaw" sound as exhibited by Young is a combination of country, blues, folk and rock, making it hard to pigeon-hole in any category.

In his 10-year career, Young has played folk and blues besides progressive country. Songs he has written have been recorded by Jennings, Joan Baez, Rita Coolidge and Ian Matthews.

As Jennings notes, Young is a distinctive singer. His voice ranges from a clear falsetto to a bluesy growl.

"My music has to do with the South," said Young, 34, a native of Newnan, Ga. "It's a reflection of my childhood. It's a combination of folk, blues and country."

His songs are reminiscent of Tom T. Hall's, with references to stained glass windows, bus trips and revivals.

"When I sing, I like to have that edge — that soul — that Hank Williams had," he said. "I don't mean blabbering on, but really saying something."

"I don't want to lose that essence of what soul is. I hear a lot of artists I like, but then I don't like their next song."

"Hank Williams was in touch with his soul, and Lefty Frizzell was good. After them, we got into homogenized, processed country music."

But he sees market improvement in some of today's writing.

"Some of it is better than it used to be," he said. "The times are more out front, and we are lyrically more honest — more complex. But of course, so is life.

"Modern writers deal with more immediate things, but some old songs really knock me out, like 'Dark As A Dungeon' by Merle Travis. I guess a good song is a timeless thing."

He and Jennings have discussed teaming up.

"I am going to do more shows with Waylon," Young said. "But the word 'outlaw' has been used a lot, and I don't want to be put in one category."

Young, whose first RCA album was "Renegade Picker," has been compared to Nelson. Both worked for years before gaining recognition, both are gifted writers as well as musicians and both have expressed disillusion with the Nashville recording scene. Nelson went to Austin, Tex., to record, and Young headed for Los Angeles, although he returned.

"I can see similarities," Young said. "But he has been through a lot more than I have."

"He's confident success won't change him."
"A lot of people lose their soul when they have success. Someone said the trouble with most successful artists is that they forgot to leave one foot in the street. I couldn't agree more."

SHOWING OFF THE ELECTRIC CAR — Robert Aronson shows off the power system for what he terms the most advanced electrically powered luxury car in Los Angeles. The car, with a fast charger, has a range of 100 miles and can be recharged in 45 minutes. Aronson, president of Electric Fuel Propulsion Corp., manufactures the car in Troy, Mich. The price ranges from $25,000 to $28,500. (AP Wirephoto)

the abuses are relatively few and generally are confined to large cities. In sum: "The subcommittee finds no compelling need for Federal regulation of the funeral industry, and concludes that the interests of the public and small business will be better served if the funeral industry is regulated by the States."

There are dangers, it should be noted, in the concept of congressional oversight. Carried to extremes, the procedure could hamstring executive agencies altogether. The Congress cannot responsibly (or constitutionally) exercise a veto power over every agency decision. But the danger, thus far, has not resided in too much oversight, but in too little. Steed's subcommittee, in this excellent report, has shown us how the system ought to work.

Paul McCartney Most Successful Of The Beatles

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — One day six years ago, Lee Eastman, lawyer, art collector and father-in-law of Paul McCartney of the Beatles, was lunching at the exclusive Les Ambassadeurs Club in London when a receptionist whispered a message in his ear.

He said that John Lennon, Yoko Ono and their New York manager were in the reception area and wanted to see him. The club has strict rules on dress, and the Beatles and his Japanese wife were wearing sneakers, while the lawyer had on a polo-necked sweater. They could not, thus attired, enter the dining area. A compromise was found: They would be allowed into the bar. Eastman passed up dessert and joined the trio, and it was in the bar that the breakup of the Beatles, the most fabulous act in the history of popular music, became final and irrevocable.

Eastman, who is also McCartney's lawyer, refused at the meeting to permit his client to join Lennon, Ringo Starr and George Harrison under the aegis of the New York entrepreneur. Since then, as all pop fans know, McCartney has been completely on his own as an artist.

What is perhaps less well known is that under the guidance of his father-in-law, John Eastman, the former Beatle, who once wanted to do no more than write great pop music, has become a music publishing tycoon in command of copyrights worth more than $12 million.

It is the beginning of what the Eastmans envision as a publishing and recording empire. And since father Lee has one of the shrewdest and toughest minds in the entertainment business, the future that opened up for McCartney when he joined Lennon in a local Liverpool skiffle group on June 15, 1965, is taking an ironic turn.

The music of the Beatles shattered the placid establishment of the time; when his playing and touring days are over — he is now 34 — McCartney will himself become a member of the establishment.

Meanwhile, he is the most successful of the Beatles, as well as financially, touring to tremendous enthusiasm with his own group, Wings. They completed a world tour with three concerts in London in October. On Sept. 25 they gave the only outdoor concert of the tour before 40,000 people in St. Mark's Square in Venice at the invitation of UNESCO, with proceeds going to a fund to restore the city.

His new songs still make the charts — his current album has been on the British charts 25 weeks — and he has branched into film and television music with a Broadway score always in his mind.

He married Linda Eastman, who is also 34, in 1969 and credits her with tiding him over the upsetting period of the Beatles breakup. A professional photographer, she is now a member of the Wings ensemble, taught to play by her husband.

McCartney adopted Linda's daughter by her first marriage. They have two daughters of their own and live quietly on a farm in Scotland or in a London apartment. In either place the frenzy that the Beatles and beatlemania aroused among young people everywhere with their first hit, "Love Me Do," in 1962 seem very far away.

It was the first of 22 smash hit singles, 12 equally successful albums and 13 extended-play records totaling sales of $100 million. Paul has no regrets. He finds his present family life fulfilling.

And when he assumes the fulltime role of chief of MPL Communications Inc., he hopes a group as hot as the Beatles walks into his office as he and his friends once walked into the office of a struggling publisher named Dick James and made all of them rich.

Fund Greenville Juvenile Project

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration recently funded an ongoing juvenile officer program in the City of Greenville for the second year, according to Mid-East officials.

Grant funds, amounting to $6,659 will provide support for the program during the last nine months of second year funding and the first three months of third year funding. Since the beginning of the Juvenile Services Program, juvenile cases have been dealt with in greater detail and attention has been focused on establishing a one-to-one relationship with individual juvenile offenders. The personal method has proven to be more effective and shows a higher degree of police concern for each juvenile.

During the second year operation of the program, the project goal will focus on offering juveniles specialized counseling services.

The following are some of the activities that Juvenile Officer Jackie Alexander will be involved in this year: follow-up on investigations of certain types of complaints against juveniles; screening all reports involving police contacts with children; processing youths who are a danger to themselves and the City of Greenville; properly handling any case involving the best interest of a child and the city without resorting to juvenile court action, and promoting a close liaison with community agencies which deal with children.

Promoting U.S. Tobacco Sales Among Libyans

Tobacco Associates, Inc., farmer-supported export promotion organization for flue-cured tobacco, announced the initiation of a new promotion program in the country of Libya.

Joseph R. Williams, president of the Raleigh firm, said that the program will promote the sale of three Libyan-manufactured cigarette brands, each containing approximately 60 per cent American grown flue-cured tobacco.

Williams said that Libya is spending some $7.7 million annually for U. S. grown flue-cured tobacco. He asserted, "The success of the three new brands can greatly increase consumer demand for U.S. flue-cured not only in Libya, but in many other countries in the Middle East and Northern Africa as well."

BATTLE FOR REBOUND — Boston Celtics' Sidney Wicks (12) and Los Angeles Lakers' Don Ford (35) stretch for a rebound in first period action of their National Basketball Association game Wednesday night at Boston Garden. Looking on is Celtics' Charlie Scott (11). Boston won the game, 117-112. (AP Wirephoto)

Celtics Collect Win With Cowens Absent

By The Associated Press
Dave Cowens made an unexpected disappearance—and so did the Boston Celtics' losing streak.

The Celtics, who learned shortly before their game against Los Angeles Wednesday night that their All-Star center suddenly had left the club "for personal reasons," then went out and broke a four-game National Basketball Association losing skid, beating the Lakers 117-112.

Jo Jo White, the Celtics' leading scorer with 28 points. It went on, with journeyman center Jim Ard and forwards Sidney Wicks and Tom Boswell taking Cowens' place in guarding the Lakers' 7-foot-3½ Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Wicks scored 21 points, Boswell had his finest game as a pro with 14 points and eight rebounds, and Ard collected six points before fouling out with four minutes remaining.

The Celtics stayed virtually even throughout with the Lakers until about two minutes remained, before a basket by Boswell put them ahead to stay 108-106, then Scott hit a decisive three-point play with 1:24 to go.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Chicago Bulls 103-88, the Washington Bullets whipped the New Orleans Jazz 116-103, the Detroit Pistons defeated the Cleveland Cavaliers 123-112, and the Houston Rockets edged the Seattle SuperSonics 99-97.

Abdul-Jabbar scored 33 points before fouling out with 1:45 left. "If we can get away without David against Jabbar, we should do all right against guys our size," said Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn.

76ers 103, Bulls 88
George McGinnis' 27 points and Doug Collins' 22 helped Philadelphia hand injury riddled Chicago its sixth straight setback. The Bulls are without forwards Scott May and Jack Marin, both recovering from mononucleosis, and guard Jerry Sloan, sidelined with a damaged knee.

Bullets 116, Jazz 103
Washington, going to a running game in the second half, poured in 41 points in the third quarter—its highest scoring period of the season—in racing past New Orleans. Elvin Hayes paced the Bullets with 30 points and 16 rebounds, while Phil Chenier hit 13 of 14 shots for 26 points and Len Robinson had 23 points and 13 rebounds.

Pistons 123, Cavs 112
Bob Lanier's 36 points, including 17 in the third quarter, led Detroit to its highest scoring effort of the season. The Pistons' total was the most points this season against the Cavs, who have lost only two of 11 games.

Rockets 99, Sonics 97
Houston blew a 14-point third-quarter lead, then rallied and beat Seattle on Mike Newlin's jump shot with 47 seconds left. Rudy Tomjanovich's 26 points were high for the Rockets, who dealt the Sonics their 10th consecutive road loss over two seasons. Slick Watts scored 25 for Seattle.

Accident Didn't Stop Athlete

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer
URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Dane Shank was the most valuable player in his football league, plays guard on a basketball team and is an outstanding track athlete.

However, the multisport star has one problem: he can't walk.

"It was some kind of freak accident," Shank said of the 1970 mishap that left him unable to use his legs. The fertilizer truck he was driving went off a road and the tank portion crushed the cab.

The 23-year-old University of Illinois graduate student, who has no disability from the waist up, said he began working with weights after leaving the hospital and has developed strong arms which help him get his chair moving.

"In basketball, I started for therapeutic reasons, but actual organized teams are very competitive," said Shank. "I wouldn't classify football as therapeutic. It gets pretty vicious."

He claims to be more active now than before the accident. Only now he does his playing in a wheelchair. He also plays tennis but has had trouble finding someone to play against.

The s of the University of Illinois Wheelchair Football League, Shank rolled up a record 598 yards in the recent four-game season. The runner-up had 68 yards.

"I don't think there's ever been a team in the history of wheelchair football that really gears their offense for running the ball," said Shank. "Most teams still do almost all passing."

In the national wheelchair track and field meet in New York this year, Shank said he had the best time in the slalom event, a test of speed and maneuverability.

Wheelchair football in the university's league is played by six-an teams on a 60-yard indoor field. A play is dead when a ballcarrier is touched above the knees with two hands. But it is not as gentle as it seems.

Shank uses a light, 32-pound chair so he can change direction in a hurry and pick up speed quickly.

"I've got my chair set up pretty good so most of the weight is on the rear wheels. I can cut almost immediately," Shank said. "I can get back up to almost full speed in two or three strokes."

"I wrestled and played baseball in high school," he added. "My coach thought I would have been a great wrestler but we'll never know. I doubt that I would have been as active in as many sports as I am now if it hadn't been for the accident."

He said there are so few wheelchair athletes that he is in demand to participate in several sports.

Besides leading the league in "running" and being named most valuable player this season, Shank gained 227 yards in one game, scored 15 touchdowns and 106 points and passed for 382 yards.

"One of the main reasons for my rushing success this season was that I was passing better," said Shank. "Most of the plays are options. I look for the pass first, but if a hole develops I'll go ahead and run. My running also sets up the pass."

Two Big Games Left In NFC

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
If you want to reduce the National Football Conference play-off picture to its simplest terms, you can wipe out the remainder of the schedule and concentrate on only two games — Washington at St. Louis and Los Angeles at San Francisco, both Nov. 21.

Going into the season's 10th week, Dallas has an 8-1 record in the East, one game ahead of St. Louis, 7-2, and two up on Washington, 6-3. Los Angeles is 6-2-1, one-half game in front of San Francisco, 6-3, in the West. The Central race is just about over with Minnesota, 7-1-1, 3/4 games in front and pursuing Green Bay, Chicago and Detroit all 4-5 and virtually out of the wild-card picture.

That means five teams battling for three playoff berths. The schedule becomes the critical question. In the East, it could mean Washington sneaking past St. Louis.

Dallas seems to have a cake-walk to the division crown. The Cowboys play Buffalo and Atlanta the next two weeks, then finish up with the Cardinals, Philadelphia and Washington.

The Cardinals have a much tougher road to travel, especially in the next four weeks. Their meat grinder of a schedule has them in Los Angeles this Sunday, then Washington, Dallas and Baltimore in order before a last game let-up against the New York Giants.

Washington, on the other hand, faces an easy month with only the Cardinals interfering with a diet of have-nots — the Giants, Philadelphia and the New York Jets.

If Washington beats St. Louis on Nov. 21, and the two teams finish the season tied in worst standings, Washington would get the playoff berth by virtue of beating the Cardinals twice.

If, however, St. Louis should win the rematch and then finish tied with the Redskins, a complicated NFL formula would be employed to determine the playoff berth.

All of that assumes, of course, that the wild-card slot goes to an East team. Los Angeles and San Francisco have other ideas. Both West contenders have comparable schedules with common opponents in New Orleans and Atlanta. The Rams also play St. Louis this week and Detroit in the final game of the season. The 49ers have Minnesota and San Diego at their other two opponents.

This means their race could be determined in their face-to-face collision a week from Sunday. San Francisco won the first meeting, an impressive 16-0 decision.

LA's early season tie makes that race a bit less confusing because the half-game difference between the Rams and San Francisco will exist all year.

Should they finish tied with San Francisco, the Redskins would get the edge after being the 49ers last week. So, despite a see-saw season, Washington could land on its feet, in Pete Rozelle's post-season tournament, after all.

Fresh Aiding Carolina

By The Associated Press
Freshmen have helped North Carolina to a 7-2 football season and bowl consideration.

Billy Johnson, 240-pound freshman fullback, is the Tar Heels' second leading rusher. He has run for 323 yards and a 5.3-yard average.

Wayne Tucker, 6-foot-3, is fourth in pass receptions with eight. He is second in yards per catch at 17.1. He concentrated on basketball early in his prep career and played football only in his senior year at Richmond, Va. UNC assistant John Guy spotted his football potential.

"I guess I was just in the right place at the right time," Tucker says. "I'm beginning to like football more."

Delbert Powell, a 9.5 sprinter highly recruited because of his speed, has returned kicks for a total of 381 yards. The most spectacular was a 98-yard kickoff return for a touchdown against Wake Forest.

Buddy Curry has won a starting linebacker position. "They told me I had a chance to play, but then all schools that recruit you tell you that," Curry said. "I looked at the situation in Chapel Hill and saw they needed linebackers." Curry, 6-3 and 202 pounds, was a linebacker and tight end in high school in Danville, Va.

He said he feels lucky to be recruited at all. Because of illnesses and injuries, he did not play a full season until his senior year. And then the Tar Heel recruiters came to watch a 42-14 loss. But Curry says that was his best game, and he had his mind set on a starting berth in college football as a freshman.

Ricky Barden has proved to be a hitter on the kickoff squad although he is only 5-10 and 164 pounds.

Jeff Arnold, a soccer-style kicking specialist, made a 49-yard field goal to help save a 12-10 victory over East Carolina.

North Carolina is home to aerial-minded Virginia Saturday in one of four games for Atlantic Coast Conference teams.

Clemson will be at Maryland and Duke at North Carolina State in other conference games. Wake Forest will be at South Carolina.

Bill Armstrong, Wake Forest free safety, has received his fourth invitation to play in a postseason all-star game. He has been invited to the Shriners' North-South game Dec. 17 in the new indoor stadium of the Detroit Lions at Pontiac, Mich. The 6-4, 205-pounder previously accepted bids to the East-West Shrine game, the Japan Bowl and the Hula Bowl.

Gene Swick of Toledo smashed the career total yardage record last season. His total was 8,074 yards running and passing.

Superstars Battle On Saturday

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Does anyone really care how fast Kojak can run? Or how hard Farah Fawcett-Majors can hit a tennis ball? Or whether the Gemini Man has a golf slice? Or how fast Wonder Woman can swim in a snug eye-popping bathing suit?

ABC is betting that lots of people care, care enough to tune in Saturday night when the network, a pioneer in bizarre sports programming, presents the latest in its series of Superstars shows — The Battle of the Network Stars. They put together a group of TV stars from ABC, NBC and CBS, outfitted them with sweat-suits and spikes, put up a considerable amount of prize money and sent them huffing and puffing through a series of athletic endeavors.

The result may be seen in a two-hour telecast in prime time, starting at 9 p.m., EST. The show, which was filmed a couple of weeks ago at Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif., may affront some sports purists but most people should find it entertaining.

The competitors, for the most part, were out for the fun of it. Telly Savalas, TV's Kojak, said he learned how to swim in New York. Where? "In the East River," he said. "You've got to swim fast there, baby, to stay ahead of the tough competition...cholera, bubonic plague...."

best captain won," said Conrad and stalked off.

The performers were well paid for whatever indignities they suffered. Each of the eight regulars on the winning team received $20,000. Regulars on the losing teams got $10,000 apiece. Not bad considering the Pittsburgh Steelers got "only" $15,000 a man for winning the last Super Bowl.

Cowens Gets Absence Leave

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Just turned 28 and earning more than $200,000 per year from the Boston Celtics, center Dave Cowens pondered his pro future in privacy today after leaving the National Basketball Association's defending champions "for personal reasons."

Cowens, a muscular 6-foot-8, shocked Celtics President and General Manager Red Auerbach, owner Irv Levin and teammates Wednesday with his request — a leave of absence for an indefinite period, without pay, for personal reasons.

Auerbach and Levin granted the request and an announcement was made to both the public and Boston players about one hour before a game against the Los Angeles Lakers.

University star, was drafted in the first round (behind Pete Maravich, Bob Lanier and Rudy Tomjanovich) after the Celtics suffered through one of their worst seasons in 1969-70. He established himself immediately, becoming the NBA's co-rookie of the year.

The Celtics rebuilt with Cowens in the pivot, just missing the playoffs in his first year. Since then, they have won a string of Atlantic Division titles and the NBA championship for the 12th and 13th times in 1974 and in 1976.

Although plagued by a chronic back ailment, Cowens has shaken off pain to play, particularly in key games. He played in Boston's first eight games this season, averaging 18.4 points, better than 15 rebounds and 39 minutes.

Cowens could not be reached for comment. At Cold Spring, Ky., his parents said they expected him home "around the first of the week." They said he was in good spirits and didn't know of any problems.

"Dave came into my office today and said he's got a lot of personal problems and feels he can't play," Auerbach said. "He was quite adamant about it. I asked him to come back and talk to Levin and he did."

"Dave told Red he'd like to get away and do some thinking," Levin said. "This has nothing to do with money, contracts or anything of that nature. He asked for a leave of absence and it was granted."

"We had no inkling at all," Celtics veteran Jo Jo White said. "I don't know what it was, but it was totally his decision. But the show must go on and we can't get upset. We'll miss him, and I just hope he comes back."

A member of the Celtics' family, who asked not to be identified, said he thought Cowens was kidding at practice Tuesday when the center asked him: "What do you think of me quitting this game?"

"I've lost my enthusiasm," the close acquaintance quoted Cowens as saying.

Asked how long Cowens might be gone, Auerbach replied: "I can't tell. I don't know. The only person who knows that is Dave."

Cowens, who is not married, maintains a residence in suburban Boston and a 30-acre farm in the Newport, Ky., area, where he grows Christmas trees and has some cattle. Around Boston, he is noted for his casual dress and habits. He drives a truck rather than a car.

cost prohibitive or the course too time consuming... now you can! Just by attending 1 evening per week for 4 short weeks you can read 7 to 10 times faster, concentrate better and comprehend more.

If you are a student who would like to make A's instead of B's or C's or if you are a business person who wants to stay abreast of today's everchanging accelerating world then this course is an absolute necessity.

These special one-hour lectures will be held at the following times and places.

Steelers Still Have Super Bowl Chance

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
The Pittsburgh Steelers, once apparently headed for oblivion, now have a chance to head for yet another Super Bowl appearance.

ago. After losing four of their first five games, they've won four in a row, all convincingly and the last three by shutouts.

With five games remaining, things are getting sorted out in the American Conference.

Baltimore (8-1) in the East, Cincinnati (7-2) in the Central and Oakland (8-1) in the West are well on the way to divisional titles, although only the Raiders seem to have a lock on theirs, leading the division by three games while the Colts and Bengals each are two games up.

But along with those top three spots is a fourth playoff berth, the wild card, going to the conference runner-up with the best record. And there, confusion and speculation run rampant.

The tough part is figuring out who's going to finish where. Start with the easiest.

Any combination of Oakland victories and Denver defeats adding up to two will lock up another Raiders title since they'd be four games up with four or less to play. Were they to finish in a tie, the Raiders would get it, having beaten the Broncos in their two games.

Similarly, Baltimore victories over New England and Miami plus any one more triumph (over the Jets, St. Louis or Buffalo) would clinch the East for the Colts, since they would have beaten both the Patriots and Dolphins twice and would also win in cast of a tie.

For the Bengals, things are tougher. If they win four of their five games (against Houston, Kansas City, Pittsburgh, Oakland and the Jets), they'll take the title.

But if Pittsburgh wins, its remaining five (against Miami, Houston, Cincinnati, Tampa Bay and Houston again) and the Bengals lose two, Pittsburgh gets the Central title since it gets the tie by virtue of two victories over Cincinnati.

Which brings us to the wild card. As things stand now, New England has the best shot, being one game up on the four other runner-up contenders. It has two potentially tough foes (Baltimore and Denver) and three apparently easier ones (the Jets, New Orleans and Tampa Bay). If the Patriots sweep, which isn't likely, and Cincinnati loses three of its five, which is less likely, the Pats are in the playoffs.

If they don't...well, it's just too early to say.

Sierra Club Fights Olympics

By MARY FIESS
Associated Press Writer
LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — To an environmentalist from the Sierra Club, current plans for the 1980 Winter Olympics may mean the beauty and isolated character of the Adirondacks may be "lost forever."

But to a local official, the Games mean "life, jobs, the ability to continue" in this picturesque but economically depressed northern New York area.

The Sierra Club, a national conservation group, strongly attacked the impact statement with the charge that "the beauty and isolated atmosphere of the High Peaks area of the Adirondack Park may be lost forever if present Olympic plans go unchecked."

The plan to build a 90-meter ski jump with a lighted 260-foot tower, the group said, was the "visual equivalent of putting an illuminated, 26-story apartment building" in the rugged wilderness.

"Inflationary price increases for food, housing and automotive services, including gasoline, may be quite substantial," said Frederick Menz, a club member and economics professor.

The widely varying views were aired Wednesday at an all-day hearing on the draft environmental impact statement for the Games, prepared for the U.S. Department of Commerce's Economic Development Administration.

With planning well underway, the biggest issues are whether the Games will provide the economic boost as claimed, and whether their staging will harm the natural beauty of the largest wilderness area in the Eastern United States.

However, about every other speaker at the 10-hour hearing — most were local government officials or civic leaders — contradicted the club's contentions and supported the future as seen in the impact statement.

The sparsely populated Adirondacks suffer from high unemployment and limited economic development. The speakers expressed the belief that the Olympics would reverse that trend.

"To us, these games mean life, jobs, the ability to continue," said Donald DeMacy, supervisor of the nearby Town of Wilmington.

The impact statement, which serves as a kind of environmental "full disclosure" document on the over-all plans and effects of the Games, must be submitted to the public for comment, then approved by the federal government, before any of the $49 million appropriated for the Games is released.

NATIONALLY KNOWN SPEED READING COURSE TO BE TAUGHT HERE IN GREENVILLE

GREENVILLE (Spec.) United States Reading Lab will offer a 4 week course in speed reading to a limited number of qualified people in the Greenville area.

This recently developed method of instruction is the most innovative and effective program available in the United States.

Not only does this famous course reduce your time in the classroom to just one class per week for 4 short weeks but it also includes an advanced speed reading course on cassette tape so that you can continue to improve for the rest of your life. In just 4 weeks the average student should be reading 4-5 times faster. In a few months some students are reading 20-30 times faster attaining speeds that approach 6000 words per minute. In rare instances speeds of up to 13,000 wpm have been documented.

Our average graduate should read 7-10 times faster upon completion of the course with marked improvement in comprehension and concentration.

For those who would like additional information, a series of free, one hour orientation lectures have been scheduled. At these free lectures the course will be explained in complete detail, including classroom procedures, instruction methods, class schedule and a special 1 time only introductory tuition that is less than one-third the cost of similar courses. You must attend any of the meetings for information about the Greenville classes.

These orientations are open to the public, above age 14, (persons under 18 should be accompanied by a parent if possible).

Critical Weeks Ahead For Swine Flu Vaccine Drive

Colder Winter Held Likely For The East

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Weather Service says it will be a cold winter on the East Coast, but predicts milder than normal temperatures some in other areas of the country.

The weather is important for more reasons than the discomfort it will cause. It could have a major effect on the supplies of winter heating fuel. The weather service made its seasonal forecast in response to congressional requests stimulated by concern over fuel.

"If this winter's temperatures follow the pattern described, they will have broken away from the pattern of the past five years — that is mild in the East, or mild throughout the nation — and return to a pattern that was common in the 1960s," said Donald L. Gilman, chief of the Weather Service's Long Range Prediction Group.

In a letter to Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of a House Commerce subcommittee on energy and power, Gilman said the number of degree-days of home heating so far this fall and winter is already 50 to 60 ahead of normal in many U.S. cities.

A heating degree-day is the equivalent of one degree of temperature below 65 degrees Fahrenheit for one day. Weather experts use it as a measure of how long furnaces must run on a given day with a given temperature.

Here is the breakdown in the December-February preliminary forecast, which Gilman said is somewhat less than 60 per cent reliable:

"Temperatures are expected to be colder than normal all across the South and the southern Great Plains and in the Ohio Valley. Milder than normal temperatures are expected in the northern Great Plains and in the Northwest and along the California coast. Other areas, such as the northeast Atlantic coast and the upper Midwest and the intermountain basins of the west must be considered indeterminate" and could be either way.

ATLANTA (AP) — About 10 per cent of Americans targeted for swine flu inoculation have received shots, and success or failure of the nationwide program likely lies in the "most critical" weeks in November, a federal health official said today.

"The next several weeks are the critical ones," said Don Berreth, information officer for the national Center for Disease Control.

Vaccine is "pretty generally available" at mass immunization clinics, and "it's probably easier to get the inoculations now than it has been or than it will be as the program is winding down in December," he said.

Also, he said, the flu season is approaching, and the shots generally do not become effective until two or three weeks after they are received.

Berreth said 4,355,289 persons were reported to have received swine flu inoculations during the week ending Nov. 6, bringing the program total to 14,182,152.

Inoculation totals have increased each week since the program was begun in early October, and Berreth called that trend "encouraging."

He would not estimate how many persons the program may reach by its conclusion in December, saying again that much depends on turnouts in the next few weeks.

He said vaccination totals reported so far are "very conservative" in that they do not include inoculations given to military personnel and dependents at military installations. Those figures should be reported in the next week or so, he said.

Berreth reiterated that health officials are reporting a relatively small participation by poor persons and blacks. Various health officials have reported that finding, generally blaming publicity about deaths after vaccinations for worsening an expected problem in vaccinating those persons.

Berreth said he had heard that attempts have been made in various states to push the program through testimonials by local leaders or black celebrities, but he could give no specific examples.

Officials have said repeatedly that the deaths were not connected with the vaccine, but Berreth said today that "there's still some problem with that."

He said results of a survey — available in two weeks or so — should show more clearly what effect there might have been. A survey before the deaths showed about 57 per cent of Americans planned to get the shots, and about 26 per cent were undecided.

The $135 million national immunization program was begun after swine flu struck several soldiers at Ft. Dix, N.J., last winter, killing one. No cases have been reported since last winter.

Officials hoped to inoculate all elderly or chronically ill Americans as well as the general public over 18 years of age. Officials are still considering what to do about inoculations for persons under that age.

National Park Fires Controlled

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — Rangers brought all four forest fires in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park under control before nightfall Wednesday, Chief Ranger Jack Linehan says.

They covered a total of 200 to 300 acres in the southwestern area of the 516,000-acre park. No camping areas or other facilities were threatened.

Three fires were along U.S. 129 on the Tennessee side of the park, and one was north of Fontana Lake on the North Carolina side.

Tom Hegele, a spokesman for the North Carolina Forestry Service, says high winds, lack of rain, and low humidity have contributed to a recent outbreak of forest fires in North Carolina.

However, the number is "about what we normally expected," he added.

Thirty-eight fires covering 407 acres were reported Monday. Another 43 fires burned 109 acres Tuesday.

Life Stopped Just Prior To 'Pulling Plug'

DENVER (AP) — A pregnant woman, the subject of an unusual medical debate concerning the 15-week-old fetus she carried, is dead.

Doctors at Colorado General Hospital used life support machinery for more than 48 hours after 29-year-old Linda Culbertson was critically injured in an automobile accident on Monday.

While the machinery kept Mrs. Culbertson technically alive, doctors pondered the ethical, legal and medical questions of trying to keep her alive in the hope they could some day deliver her baby.

When they decided their effort had no chance for success, they made plans to terminate the extraordinary life support. Before they could do so, Mrs. Culbertson's heartbeat, and that of the fetus, stopped.

"It was the judgment of our medical staff that nothing could be done to preserve a viable fetus," hospital spokesman Eric Munson said after a team of surgeons, obstetricians and pediatricians had reached their decision.

The decision to terminate the life-saving effort was reached with the consent of the woman's husband, Vaughn. The couple's only child, Shannon, 6 months, suffered a fractured skull in the auto accident and was listed in good condition today by a hospital spokesman.

Family members have declined to discuss the case publicly.

Doctors had said the fetus could not be removed from the women's body until the 20th week of gestation and until it reached a weight of 500 grams, or just over a pound.

Job-Hunting Begun By N.C. GOP Office-Holders

RALEIGH (AP) — With a new Democratic administration set to take over early in January, Republican department heads in North Carolina are job hunting as they prepare to submit resignations to Gov.-elect Jim Hunt.

Some department heads are fortunate enough to have private jobs awaiting them. But others, like Secretary of Human Resources Phil Kirk, have feelers out for employment.

Kirk said Wednesday he sent a congratulatory letter to Hunt the day after the election, offering his resignation on the day Hunt is inaugurated. The date for the inauguration has not been set.

Gary Pearce, Hunt's campaign press aide, confirmed that Hunt has mailed several hundred letters to business, civic, education and news leaders in North Carolina seeking recommendations for top government jobs he wants to fill by the time he is inaugurated.

Pearce has said that Hunt plans to bring in his own cabinet-level team.

Kirk said he had pledged to Hunt "the full cooperation of our staff in the transition period." In offering his resignation, Kirk said he recognized that "every governor should be given the opportunity to install his own team in cabinet-level positions."

Bruce Lentz, state director of administration, one of those serving at the pleasure of the governor, said he plans to submit his resignation later. He added, "As far as I am concerned, I will be just happy to return to private employment." Lentz is on leave of absence from Century Furniture Co. in Hickory and plans to return to his job.

Secretary of Revenue Howard Coble, an unsuccessful candidate for state treasurer, said he is thinking about returning to Greensboro to practice law, "but I'm not inflexible." He said that since the election, three law firms and representatives of two corporations have contacted him. He added, "I haven't decided on anything."

Perry Greene, secretary of transportation, said Hunt "has every right to appoint his man," and he will have "my resignation." Greene plans to return to Boone, where he operates a ready-mix concrete company and is a general contractor.

State Commissioner of Correction David Jones, who has been very outspoken at times and critical of Hunt, was not immediately available for comment. A report says he has already made plans to return to Fayetteville and operate a used car business.

Dr. L.C. Holshouser, chairman of the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, said he took the state job. He added, "I'm sure Mr. Hunt would like to have his personnel in top posts. This has been a new kind of experience for me and a pleasant one."

Edward L. Powell, motor vehicles commissioner, said he hasn't decided what he will do when he leaves state government. He formerly practiced law in Winston-Salem.

N.C. Building Toward 'Culture Week'

By DR. H. G. JONES, Curator
North Carolina Collection
Written for the AP
CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Every year about this time North Carolina's cultural pot begins bubbling, and three weeks from now supporters of art, music, history, folklore, drama, and literature will gather in Raleigh for their annual communion with each other. "Culture Week in North Carolina," as the gathering of the clans is called, will be held November 30 through December 4. Most of the meetings will be in Raleigh's

Hilton Inn on Hillsborough Street. It will be the 76th annual meeting of the oldest of the groups, the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association, and the third meeting of the youngest, the North Carolina Genealogical Society. But for the North Carolina Art Society, it will be a very special occasion, for it will mark the 50th anniversary of the group which founded the state's Museum of Art.

The Roanoke Island Historical Association, chaired by Thomas J. Pearsall of Rocky Mount, will open the week with a luncheon on Tuesday. That afternoon the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs will hear winners of music scholarships, and the Hinda Honigman Composer's Cup will be presented at the dinner, followed by a concert.

The Art Society's golden anniversary on Wednesday will feature a morning business meeting, a luncheon at the Executive Mansion, a reception honoring its past presidents, and a dinner address by George E. London of Raleigh. Then, following an evening reception at the Museum of Art honoring the presidents of all Culture Week participating societies, there will be a special preview of the thirty-ninth North Carolina Artists' Exhibition.

On Thursday morning the Historic Preservation Society of North Carolina will hear discussions of restoration projects and in the evening will hold its annual meeting in the restored State Capitol and a dinner at Christ Episcopal Church. The main speaker will be Mrs. St. Clair Wright, president of Historic Annapolis.

Also on Thursday the North Carolina Genealogical Society will have a luncheon at Balentine's and Dr. Maurice Stirewalt of the Department of Community Colleges will address the afternoon meeting at the Hilton. The Museums Council will meet Thursday afternoon at the North Carolina Museum of Natural History for a luncheon, business meeting, and two workshops.

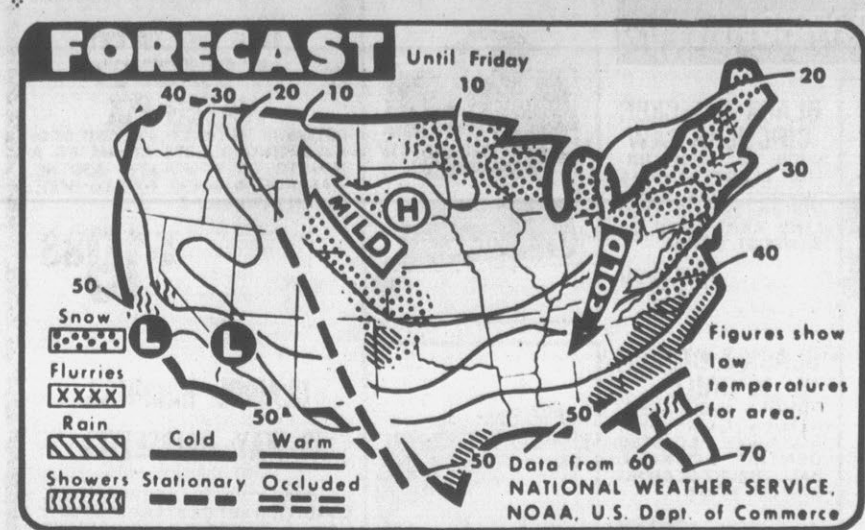

Drs. Harry L. Watson of UNC-Chapel Hill, Gail O'Brien of N. C. State, and Colgate Watson of St. Mary's College will present papers at the Friday morning sessions of the Literary and Historical Association; and Roy Parker, Jr., of Fayetteville will speak at the luncheon. H. G. Jones will give his presidential address, "The Rape of History," at the dinner, and Professor Richard N. Current of UNC-Greensboro will speak in the evening on "First in Freedom?"

A feature of the Friday night session will be the presentation of the Mayflower Cup nonfiction, Sir Walter Cup for fiction, and Christopher Crittenden Award for the advancement of North Carolina history.

The North Carolina Folklore Society on Friday afternoon will hear "Sounds of the Dulcimer" by Jimmy Mayberry; "Folk Songs with the Fretless Banjo" by Clark Jones; and "Illustrations of Appalachian Speech" by Cratis D. Williams. Certainly the folklorists have the most fun of all the groups.

On Saturday the North Carolina Poetry Society will meet, conduct a business meeting and workshop, and hold a luncheon. Simultaneously, the North Carolina Society of County and Local Historians will meet, hear an address by Professor Joseph W. Congleton, Jr., of ECU, present local history awards, and sponsor a luncheon at which Mrs. Mary Jane McCrary will talk.

How's The Weather?

Recourse To Harassment

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Two families in the city recently alleged harassment by teen-agers. Now the High Point Bar Association wants to emphasize that people have a legal recourse if threatened or intimidated.

The association has adopted a resolution to refute the idea that "families living in High Point may be subject to fear of malicious injury to property and person without any legal recourse."

Rossie Gardner, president of the association, said the resolution was prompted by publicity of the alleged acts of harassment by unnamed teen-agers against the Linwood Armstrong and Peyton Shaner families.

He emphasized that the resolution was not a criticism of the "administration of law and order" in the city but simply a statement that High Point residents do have a legal recourse if threatened or intimidated by anyone.

"Certain laws exist, and enforcement of which will protect the rights, privileges and dignities of all citizens in our town," the resolution states. The resolution states further that the bar association "supports the fair, impartial, efficient and effective administration of law and order...to the end that no person is deprived of his fundamental rights by any other person or group of persons."

Acts of vandalism at the home of the Armstrong family were traced to an angry family member, according to police. Peyton Shaner has complained that his teen-age daughter has been subjected to physical and verbal abuse from a group of teen-agers at Central High School. He said last week he is meeting with other parents to resolve the problem

By The Associated Press
There is a chance of snow in the North Carolina mountains tonight. Snow is even more likely Friday. It probably will be mixed with rain.

It was cool but pleasant over the state today. Northwestern winds blew and skies were partly cloudy. Highs ranged from the 50s in the mountains to the upper 60s in the southeast portion.

Wednesday was a fine autumn day. Brisk southwest winds and sunny skies helped to push the mercury well into the 60s. Some low 70s were reported in the coastal area.

Late in the day, another cold front slid in. However, it was unnoticed except for a shift in wind direction.

Skies remained clear during the night. The mercury fell to the 30s and 40s by early morning.

The cold front will push southward today, reaching the Gulf of Mexico by morning. Increasing cloudiness entered North Carolina as a low developed along the front over the Gulf states. This new storm is expected to spread precipitation across the Carolinas tonight and Friday. Some of this precipitation may be in the form of snow in some sections of the mountains.

Cloudy skies will help keep the temperatures tonight in the 30s and 40s.

Friday's weather picture is a wet one. Rain with some snow in the mountains will cover the Carolinas as a low slips up into the area. The mercury will reach only into the 40s in the mountains. Highs will be mostly in the 50s elsewhere.

The outlook for the weekend and the first part of next week is sunny but cold. High pressure will dominate.

A small-craft advisory for the coast was canceled at 5 a.m. today.

Exhume Bodies Of 2 Women

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — The bodies of two women who were murdered in their Bladen County home Sept. 6 were exhumed for further studies and reburied this week, officials reported.

Superior Court Judge Giles Clark signed the authorization for Josephine Davis and her daughter Aileen Davis to be exhumed Tuesday. The authorization was sought by Dist. Atty. Lee J. Greer who said in an affidavit that fingerprints and palmprints were found in the victims' home. The women's prints were not obtained prior to burial, he said.

Also requested in the affidavit was a determination of the cause of death.

Teacher Shot To Death Inside Her Classroom

DETROIT (AP) — Seven-year-old Laura Denomie and 35 other children had just started their English lesson in Betty McCaster's first-grade class. A man entered, exchanged a few words with the teacher, then shot the teacher.

"Miss McCaster was screaming," Laura recalled later. "(She) reached her hand out and tried to push the gun away but bullets hit her and she fell back against the table."

Miss McCaster, 46, was fatally shot in the head Wednesday in her classroom at Burt Elementary School on Detroit's northwest side.

"We were screaming, and we all ran out of the room," Laura told police. "He shot her three or four times from this far away," she said, indicating a distance of about five feet.

Hours later, police arrested Miss McCaster's estranged husband, Al J. Lewis, 46, on open charges.

Most classes were canceled for the rest of the day at the school, where Miss McCaster had transferred only three weeks ago because, police said, she was afraid of Lewis.

Her sobbing pupils fled the scene and clustered in a first-floor classroom. Their parents waited anxiously in the corridor while police tried to piece together the youngsters' confused stories of what happened.

Police and school officials said a man had come to the school, inquired where Miss McCaster's classroom was, and entered it just as she began an English lesson.

Pupils said the two exchanged a few words before the man pulled a gun. When Miss McCaster told one child to go to the principal's office for help, the children said, the gunman became infuriated.

The Detroit Free Press reported in today's editions that Lewis had for the past two months been trying to get public school officials to fire his ex-wife. Lewis called the newspaper several times, claiming he could prove Miss McCaster had stolen school equipment.

The newspaper said Lewis called a reporter Monday and said he had signed himself into Doctors Hospital and expected to be there three weeks. A hospital spokesman refused to say what kind of treatment Lewis had. He signed himself out Tuesday night.

School principal Wilbur Klein said Miss McCaster's husband, whom he knew slightly, had come to the school a few days ago and demanded to see his wife. The principal said he told Miss McCaster, but she refused to see Lewis.

Dr. Herbert W. Hadley of Greenville has been named a fellow of the American Academy of Family Physicians.

The degree of fellowship may be attained either by successful completion of 600 or more hours of accredited continuing medical study, or achievement of diplomate status in the family practice specialty as a result of passing a certifying examination administered by the American Board of Family Practice. Every member of the Academy is required to take a minimum of 150 hours of continuing medical study every three years.

The continuing class will meet from 5:30 p.m. until 7 p.m. and the beginning class will meet from 7 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. every Monday night at Elm Street Center. The cost is $18 for the eight-week session, which will end January 10th.

A jazz class will also be held on Wednesday nights from 5:15-6:45. If one prefers to take two classes per week the Wednesday jazz class and one of the Monday ballet classes may be combined for a fee of $30.

Priced Into A Decline?

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The nation's state universities have priced themselves into an enrollment decline despite record numbers of high school graduates, says the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Association officials Wednesday reported a 3 per cent smaller share of the high school graduating seniors than was expected by its 320 members this fall, a sharp turnaround from 1975.

State schools had anticipated a 4.5 per cent enrollment increase, half of the 9 per cent rate of

Funds Await Officers Installed For FBLA Unit

RALEIGH (AP) — A state official says funds are available to match the money a citizens group has vowed to raise to complete land acquisition for the Jockey's Ridge State Park.

Alan R. Eakes of the state Department of Natural and Economic Resources said Tuesday that $300,000 of funds due the state for park acquisition from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation of the U.S. Department of Interior would be available if a conservation group, People to Preserve Jockey's Ridge, can raise a like sum.

The state already owns 273 acres of the natural landmark near Nag's Head on the Outer Banks but needs 99.8 acres to "round off the boundaries" and to purchase the "highest peak" of the ridge for the park. That property now is privately owned.

Carolista Baum, a Chapel Hill jewel designer who launched the effort to save the twin-peaked dunes from development more than three years ago, said the group expects to raise the money by next October.

"We've already got $30,000 in the fund, and we'll raise the rest," she said. "We figure it's going to be easy."

She said the money would be raised partly through the sale of 24 by 32-inch silk screen prints framed in chrome, showing three views of Jockey's Ridge at $200 each. Other funds will come from contributions.

HOSPITALIZED — Ellen Corby, above, who plays "Granny" on the television series "The Waltons", was hospitalized in critical condition Wednesday in Los Angeles. Hospital officials said the 63-year-old actress suffered a stroke. Doctors say her vital signs are good. (AP Wirephoto)

The officers of the D. H. Conley Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America were installed at their annual Candlelight Installation Service in the school cafeteria October 29. The 1976-77 theme for the year "Supporting Our Heritage of Free Enterprise By Building America's Skills" formed a background for the service.

The new officers are as follows: Wayne Worthington, president; Patty Joyner, first vice president; Frankie Cash, second vice president; Terri Averett, secretary; Betty Hines, treasurer; Joni McLawhorn, photographer; Betty Gurganus, parliamentarian; Vickie Smith, historian; Brenda Carawan, reporter; Mary Thompson, Chapter Advisor, served as the installing officer.

Following the installation of officers, Wayne Worthington led in an induction service for new members.

Words in the club name served as topics for speeches by student speakers. Jimmy Smith spoke on Future; Carolina Edwards spoke on Business; David Payton spoke on Leaders; and Pam Carter spoke on America.

Entertainment was furnished by Tammy Stocks and Catherine Dews who sang two Broadway selections. They were accompanied at the piano by Hannah Paramore.

James Brown, spoke on the importance of and the need for more love in the world.

Special guests were parents, business advisors including Ott Alford, Superintendent of Pitt County Schools, Kenneth Dews, Sparky McCaskill R. W. Rountree; and Earl Smith; and faculty members Mrs. Annie Chappel and Mrs. Barbara McLawhorn.

Refreshments were furnished by the club members.

Point Finger At Brewery

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The city blames the Jos. Schlitz brewery as the principal cause of the problems at the wastewater treatment plant which have precipitated a sewage crisis.

City officials, reversing a 1974 decision, have denied the brewery's request to increase its load on the Archie Elledge Wastewater Treatment Plant.

Stanford E. Harris, city utilities superintendent, named the brewery this week for the first time as being "the principal cause" of problems at the city's plant.

"There is no question" that the plant's declining performance since the spring of 1975 was "triggered by the heavier load placed on the plant by the brewery," he said.

R. J. Bach, Schlitz plant manager, declined comment. However, James M. Bennett, environmental director for Schlitz nationwide, said earlier that the Elledge plant had more than enough capacity to handle the Schlitz load.

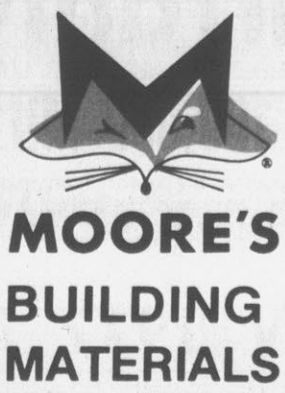

Under the 1974 agreement, the brewery was allowed to input up to 48,000 pounds of waste daily. Now the ceiling has been cut back to 36,000 pounds. Inputs of solid waste by Schlitz also will be cut back.

Harris said the city decision authorizing the increases two years ago, when the Schlitz brewery expanded production, has "proven to be a serious error in judgment...."

Town Relies On General Store

By BILL MARTIN
Associated Press Writer
WELLINGTON, Nev. (AP) — The penny candy is gone. It costs two cents now.

And so is the handsome console radio that once attracted men and boys anxious to hear the big fights. Gone too are the well-worn easy chairs where men of the village gathered on rainy days to swap frequently well-worn stories.

But Wellington Mercantile remains a genuine general store.

Rene and Mary Cardinal, proprietors, maintain the tradition of natural cordiality for their neighbors and stock a wide variety of goods to suit their requirements.

"I know it sounds very romantic to most people," says Cardinal. "But in the owners' mind it's utilitarian. We're no different than people in a thousand other places."

But the general store has nearly vanished as a way of life in America, replaced by neighborhood supermarkets, department stores and hardware stores.

In the agricultural community of Wellington, however, the Mercantile is a tradition to be maintained, a constant marker around which the town's roots can be wrapped.

To lifelong residents of the area, the general store is just something that has always been there and it takes a curious visitor to get them to recall what the store was like a half-century ago.

Those who move away know that when they return Wellington Mercantile will still be sitting 75 yards back from State Route 3. They'll smile to themselves and think, "some things never change."

"The people are one thing you cannot forget about," says Cardinal. "They don't think of the store as mine or Mary's — it's theirs."

The Cardinals brought their children, then aged 5, 8 and 9, to Wellington in 1963 from San Francisco, where Cardinal, then 37, was an accountant concerned about the effect of the city on their upbringing.

While they confess a lingering affection for San Francisco, the couple has seldom regretted the small town experience and its effect on themselves and their children.

The store originally was built at Hoye's Crossing a few miles away in 1866 by a pioneer stage stop operator. As travel patterns changed, he literally moved the store here in about 1870.

Virtually the entire structure remains — from the square nails in the rafters to the hand-set, rock-walled basement to the wood floors and the front doors and the original counter.

Residents of the fertile Smith Valley no longer hitch their horses to a railing in front, but each day a steady stream of people drive up to buy groceries, clothes or various implements.

"You have to stock up on a lot of various things, because you can't send people somewhere else if you don't have what they want," Cardinal explains.

"And out here, everybody has to do it himself. You can't call a plumber if the sink is stopped up. You have to be helpful to your customers — and your neighbors."

So the Cardinals keep on hand such diverse items as galvanized washtubs, Dutch ovens, tin wash basins, saddle blankets and hay hooks, as well as meats, groceries, hand tools, health aids and clothing.

Mrs. Cardinal is a Wellington native, while Cardinal grew up in the small northern California community of Loyalton. Both remember general stores from their childhood. Mrs. Cardinal, in fact, worked at Wellington Mercantile in her youth.

The store remains a place where residents can keep up on the local news and visit with friends. The cracker barrel is gone, but a wooden bench is conveniently located near the front door and a well-fueled pot belly stove is installed each winter.

"It's not your basic tobacco chewing, bib overall type of conversation," says Cardinal, for times and topics of conversation have changed.

Operating a general store is a six-day-a-week proposition and the Cardinals are open from "about eight in the morning until about five at night," although the hours vary and they live next door, enabling a neighbor to ask them to open up for an emergency.

"When Rene wanted to move here I thought we would retire and vegetate," says Mrs. Cardinal. "But I've never worked so hard in my life."

"But it's a good way to make a living without many hassles," she adds. "I want to run it until I'm old and gray."

Marxist Prof; Why He Is Suing The FBI

By JUDI HASSON
NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — H. Bruce Franklin says FBI agents have spied on him for 10 years because he opposed the Vietnam War.

Franklin says they have a thick dossier on him. He is suing to get it.

"The main thing I hope to accomplish," says Franklin, 42, a Rutgers University English professor, "is to try to make it more difficult to take away what vestiges of democracy we have left in this country."

In 1972, Franklin, who now calls himself a Marxist, became the first tenured professor fired from Stanford University in 80 years. He says he was dismissed after the FBI conducted a campaign against him.

"There was a very conscious attempt to misrepresent my case to Stanford and I'm still dealing with it. People think I was fired for things I was never charged with."

The FBI, he says, decided to "neutralize" him in 1966 because his politics were unacceptable. At that time, he was an outspoken opponent of the Vietnam War.

"When I was originally involved in these protests I didn't see myself as doing anything revolutionary. I really thought the government had made a mistake."

At one time, he said friends calling his home heard playbacks of previous conversations because wiretap equipment on his telephone line malfunctioned.

In 1972, 20 armed FBI agents burst into his home, held his wife and three children at gunpoint and arrested him on charges which were later dropped.

In 1974, the University of Colorado decided to hire Franklin but the Board of Regents rejected him because of a series of phony documents they received. The ACLU is suing the institution on his behalf, Franklin said.

"I see myself as part of a struggle on behalf of vast majority of American people so we can discuss these ideas, so we can engage in protest activities without having the secret police come around and have us fired, jailed or discredited," Franklin said.

Franklin's suit seeks, under provisions of the Freedom of Information Act, the release to him of every document about him in FBI files.

An expert on Herman Melville and science fiction, Franklin was hired by Rutgers at its Newark campus in 1975. He is not the first Marxist professor at Rutgers. In 1965, Eugene Genovese, a Marxist professor who taught history, became the central issue in the New Jersey gubernatorial campaign.

At that time, unsuccessful Republican candidate Wayne Dumont demanded that Rutgers fire Genovese because of his political views.

But Richard Hughes, a Democrat who was elected governor and is now the state Supreme Court's chief justice, defended Genovese's freedom of speech.

"The academic purge in the last ten years makes the early 1950s look like a tea party to many of us," Franklin said.

Franklin discovered some of the FBI's efforts concerning him when the agency released

Can Wash Most Lampshades

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Most fabric lampshades can be washed easily at home, says Magdalene Pfister, Extension home furnishing specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

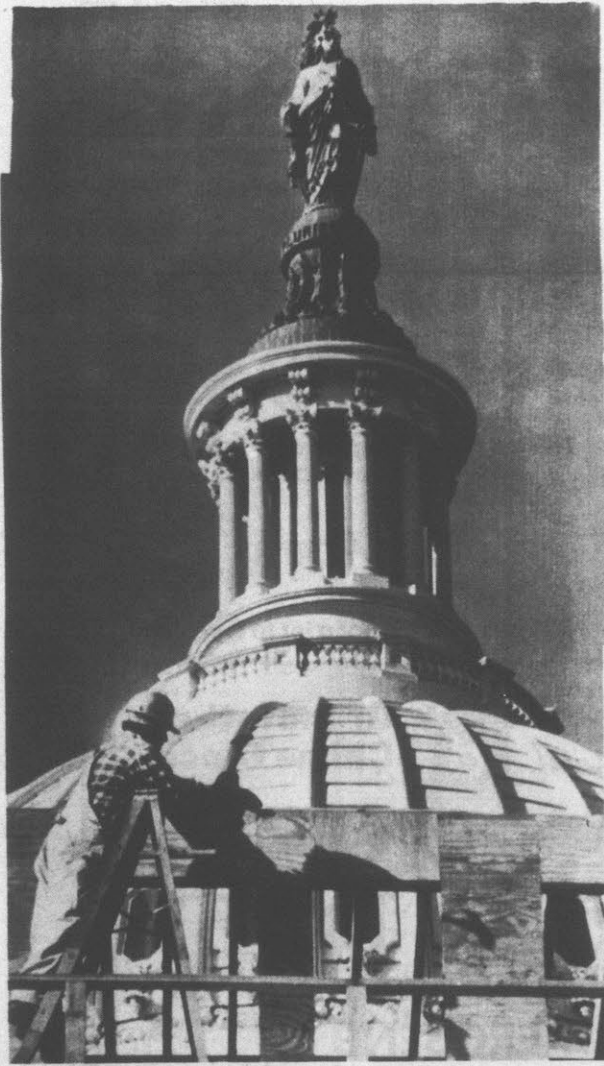

If the shade is fully sewn, not glued together, and if it is colorfast, it should be brushed or vacuumed to remove loose dust, then plunged rapidly up and down in a tub filled with lukewarm water and enough soap or detergent to produce a good amount of suds. Hold the shade by the metal frame while dunking it, Ms. Pfister said, and use a very soft brush to gently remove heavier soil.

Rinse with either a sink spray attachment or by dunking the shade at least twice in lukewarm water before rinsing it in water containing fabric softener to retard future dirt accumulation.

some of the documents in his file. He said one revealed that the FBI learned how to "duplicate" Franklin's writing style and sent letters and articles purportedly written by him to publications.

Franklin says he became a Marxist partly as a result of "harassment" by the FBI. His autobiography, "Back Where You Came From," details that change.

"Some people faced with these things, withdraw. Others have their thinking radicalized by it," Franklin said. "The response of the FBI and the CIA to our protest against the war was an important contribution toward our changing."

Auto Repair Study Is Offered Women At One Calif. Business

By JACK V. FOX
TORRANCE, Calif. (UPI) — A few weeks ago Linda Gallegos got a phone call at the office from her husband. "The car's conked out, and I'm parked on the emergency lane on the San Diego Freeway," he said. "What should I do?" "Sit tight," she said. "I'll be right there."

Boasts Strong Security Unit

DETROIT (UPI) — This city's new $337 million Renaissance Center in the downtown area here boasts a security force larger than most suburban communities around the nation.

Ted Sienski, former deputy chief of the Detroit Police Department who retired last year after 27 years on the force, heads an 80-plus member force made up largely of former Detroit police officers.

Coarsely Ground Pepper Favored

NEW YORK (UPI) — If pepper won't shake freely from old-fashioned pepper shakers, blame changing public tastes. The American Spice Trade Association says consumers now prefer more coarsely ground pepper than was used before World War II.

Mrs. Gallegos arrived half an hour later. She pushed up the hood of the stricken auto, tinkered a few minutes with the engine. She found that a connection in the distributor cap had worked loose and fixed it.

"Okay, honey," she said. "You can go on now." Sound familiar? Yes, of course, except the sexes were reversed. It wasn't the woman who was helpless with the intricacies of the combustion engine, but the man.

Mrs. Gallegos is one of eight women employees of the warranty department of the U.S. headquarters of the Toyota Co. in this Los Angeles suburb who are in the 16th month of a grease and sweat education in what makes the engine of a car tick.

They volunteered for a Toyota course called FAT, Fundamentals of Automotive Technology, under the supervision of warranty supervisor and veteran mechanic Reg Melling. The idea was that they could process warranty claims from owners of new cars better and faster if they knew a carburetor from a cigaret lighter.

Melling says that when they started none of the women, aged 22 through 45, knew anything about cars.

"We showed them an engine and said this is a piston, it goes up and down," he recalled. "This is a crankshaft and it goes around and around."

Melling said that at the weekly Tuesday course they advanced to carburetors, brakes, manual transmissions, points, bearings, timing, valve adjustments. They learned the use of tools, the substitution of parts and finally did a complete engine overhaul.

Blonde Carolyn Stull says that her knowledge of cars had been limited to a vague comprehension of how to change a tire.

"When you start at zero, there's no place to go but up," she said.

The most apt pupil has been

Mrs. Lucretia Bunn, a native of Brooklyn, who has lived in California about four years.

"I was always a kind of tomboy," she said. "My brother was a whiz at cars when he was in high school. He was born with a wrench in his hand. I used to love watching him and his friends instead of playing with dolls and that kind of thing."

Mrs. Bunn has become so proficient that she is going on to college in hopes of becoming an automotive engineer.

The knowledge about the innards of cars has been so successful that the women can now process 500 claims a day instead of their previous average of 250. None of them, however, aspires to be a full-time, regular automobile mechanic.

"They are really good," says Melling. "But I can understand their not wanting to go into being a mechanic. Some of the work involves some very heavy lifting, such as removing a cylinder head. And it's a very competitive business in which men have an instinctive edge."

Wild West Scene In Selling Little English Horses

By GREGORY JENSEN
LYNDHURST, England
(UPI) — For seven scattered days a year, one corner of England's green and pleasant land transforms itself into a scene like the American Old West.

Wild horses, hundreds of them, snort and rear in wooden corrals on a wide stretch of moorland. Tight knots of horse-wise people study withers and fetlocks while an auctioneer in a cloth cap drones away.

"A lovely bay mare, this one," he intones. "This is a beauty, one of the best today. Sixty for her?"

Mainly the 200 bidders at a recent seven-times-a-year New Forest pony auction ignored his sales pitch. They were putting their money on their own knowledge of this strange little horse with the strange, long history.

For at least 2,000 years and probably longer, these ponies have roamed free on this historic patch of southern England, 85 miles southwest of London. The breed got its name when William the Conqueror took the area for his own in 1079 and named it "The New Forest."

The New Forest stayed a royal possession for nearly 800 years, and even now some of it is Crown property. Until 1851 the whole region was an exclusive royal hunting preserve.

But kings through the centuries granted commoners the right to own the forest's little ponies — one of nine native British breeds — and to pasture them freely in the forest glades. These rights still hold.

There were 600-odd ponies at this autumn sale. Most were owned by people who hold one of the six ancient Rights of Commons within the New Forest area. It is the right of Common Pasture, or Mast, or Turbary.

"The ponies go from here to every country, all over the world," said Mrs. Dorothy Haskins of the New Forest Pony Breeding and Cattle Society, which organizes the auctions.

"They have such superb temperament, you see. If you want a pony that goes, these will really go. And yet they're gentle and shy-proof, just perfect for kids."

She spoke at one side of a mass of horses — dark brown ponies, light tan ones, a few white horses. They were packed up to 30 in a pen, front to back like sardines.

But one little mare had a pen all to herself — and to her fuzzy tan colt. She was a solemn, mournful-eyed 2½ feet tall. Her foal was a tiny thing, no bigger than a stuffed toy. They were sold together as one lot.

As a distinct breed, New Forest ponies have specific characteristics. Most are small, rough-coated, wiry and tough. Bay and brown colors predominate.

Queen Victoria once shipped an Arab stallion into the New Forest to "improve" the breed. Other native breeds have been introduced from time to time.

This dilution of the essential New Forest strain is frowned upon by Mrs. Haskins and many people at this sale, most of them proud and jealous of the New Forest's unique traditions.

These days the forest itself has changed. There are fences now along major roads, keeping the ponies from colliding with cars. Farms and open moorland cover as much of the 93,000-acre area as thick woods do.

But within "the perambulation," as its borders are called, New Forest traditions and regulations survive just as the ponies do.

Its governing body is the Court of Verderers, which guards the rights of "commoners" with free-range privileges. The court of Swainmote deals with forestry offenses. The Verderers employ "agisters" to look after the animals which wander at will.

Every year the agisters round up all New Forest ponies for a health check.

They tie the ponies' tails in distinctive patterns to indicate their district of origin. They check brands — more than 800 are registered — to collect from owners the pasturage fee of 2 pounds sterling (about $3.50 now) per pony per year.

"The foals are going here today for between 12 and 15 pounds ($20.40 to $25.50)," Mrs. Haskins said. "But they have to be kept four years before they can be broken."

"A good, mature New Forest stallion can go for 3,000 or 4,000 pounds ($5,100 or $6,800) I've turned down that much for one of my own."

Kitchen Design Ideas Aired

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. (UPI) — Food microbiologist Betty C. Hobbs thinks architects and builders should design home kitchens to reduce the spread of contaminants by better separation of food preparation and cooking areas.

She also suggested authors of recipe books, newspaper and magazine food editors and hosts of radio and television cooking shows should be better versed in the dangers of certain types of organisms that can survive cooking and preservation. She spoke at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology during presentation of the 14th Underwood-PreScott Memorial Award lecture.

On Jan. 14, 1969, an explosion and fire aboard the U.S. ship Enterprise near Hawaii killed 27 crewmen and inflicted heavy damage.

Yates Can Now Give Full Attention To His Writing

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — "I hate the typewriter," Richard Yates says flatly.

RICHARD YATES

He has worked on newspapers, magazines, as a wire service rewrite man, in public relations, and has written mov-le scripts. He also has written and published a book of short stories and four novels, the latest of these being "The Easter Parade."

"Maybe," the 50-year-old Yates says reflectively, "it's because I'm a lousy typist. That's probably why I write all my manuscripts in pencil first. Then, when I've finished a piece of work I'll type it out. But even so, I still have to take my typing to a professional to be retyped because mine just isn't good enough to submit to a publisher."

Yates says he tries to write at least 50 lines a day — "I count lines not words" — seven days a week. "Sixty handwritten lines a day is about my maximum, if I try to do more it usually turns out bad."

He says the manuscript pages destroyed by fire were part of a new novel he is working on but that he's made up the time lost and "I'm still on schedule."

"The book's coming along good, at least I think so," he says, adding, "but you can't really tell until it's done." As for talking about his work-in-progress, he prefers not to. "It's bad luck to talk about your new books," he says with a smile.

Yates began writing early but it wasn't until "I was about 24 that I started trying to sell my writing. It took a while. I was 26 before I sold my first short story in 1953." He was living in England then. After serving in the Army in World War II where he saw the "last few months of the war in Europe," Yates returned to the United States, held a variety of jobs, then moved to Europe to write, living first in France, then in Britain, for not quite three years. "After selling that first story," he recalls, "I kept on selling them. I came back home and started to work on a novel, while working as a free-lance public relations man in order to earn a living."

Now Subliminal Diet Messages

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — A psychologist says he's helping fat people lose weight by showing them subliminal images of slender people and insects crawling through calorie-filled treats.

"We are trying to make fat people think 'normal,' which they don't know how to do. They think 'fat,'" said Hal C. Becker, director of the clinical and behavioral engineering lab at Tulane University in New Orleans.

At the end of each dietary message, the background images become clearly visible, Becker told a convention of the Alliance for Engineering in Medicine and Biology.

Dieters also are videotaped from the neck down and as they lose or fail to lose weight are shown the tapes of themselves, he said.

This, Becker said, offers "significant reinforcement when they have done well and powerful aversive conditioning when they have done badly."

Becker conceded that some psychologists might disagree with the effectiveness of the subliminal techniques, but he said he was convinced they work.

Of 42 people who attended at least half of the sessions between September 1974 and March of this year, he said, 29 lost between 11 and 20 pounds, he said. In most cases, Becker added, they maintained the new weight or had lost still more six months later.

He said the program costs $180 to join.

Still 2 Women Heads Of State

By GERRY NADLER
United Press International
The purge of Mao Tse-tung's widow in Communist China reduces the number of women in the world arena of high state politics.
Had Chiang Ching succeeded her husband as Communist party chairman, she would have joined Prime Ministers Indira Gandhi of India and Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Sri Lanka and become the third female leader of a country.

Instead, the New China News Agency said the party headed by its new chairman Hua Kuofeng had "liquidated a big bane" led by Madame Mao, squashing her hopes of ruling the world's most populous nation.

China's official voice Sunday compared Chiang Ching's radical "clique" advocating uninterrupted class struggle to "something filthy and contemptible like dog's dung."

The one-time Chinese actress' removal from Peking's Byzantine political stage leaves Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, head of the Conservative party in Britain, as the lone new female candidate for a nation's top post.
But Mrs. Thatcher, who has survived acerbic exchanges in the House of Commons, is still a giant step away from becoming Britain's first female prime minister.

Former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir retired from politics in 1974 and Isabel Peron was ousted as president of Argentina last year in one of history's most forecasted military coups.
Madame Nhu, sister-in-law of assassinated South Vietnamese president Ngo Dinh Diem, and Madame Chiang Kai-shek, widow of China's wartime generalissimo, have been out of the limelight for years.

populist movement in the face of galloping inflation and unceasing violence by leftist and rightist terrorists.
Madame Mao sought power from a strong base in the Politburo as one of the shrill-voiced leaders of the Cultural Revolution which Mao instituted to root out bureaucrats and reinstate revolutionary fervor in a generation that grew up after the rigors of the Long March and the fight against Chiang.

She built her power in China's largest city of Shanghai and concentrated her political activities on the theater under the broad rubric of "cultural affairs."

The only operas China's 800-million citizens saw since the Cultural Revolution of 1966 were those approved and revamped by Madame Mao.
But recently crowds in Shanghai carried effigies of Chiang Ching showing her foaming at the mouth with a noose around her neck and thousands of Peking "demonstrators" toted X-ed out pictures of Madame Mao and her three ultraleftist followers.

Sculptor Has Ceramic Frogs

By C. G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The frog he went a courtin', and he was caught in the act by sculptor David Gilhooly.
This witty artist has created a series of humanized ceramic frogs — some of them, as in the folk song, courting — which was recently on exhibit at the Museum of Contemporary Art, Gilhooly until recently taught at the University of California at Davis and now lives in Aurora, Ont. With Claes Oldenburg, he is among the wittiest of the present generation of artists.

The son of a veterinarian, Gilhooly was trained initially as a marine biologist, so his interest in amphibians and other animals comes naturally. Before frogs entered, Gilhooly's ceramic menagerie was occupied by warthogs, dogs, cats and sloths.

The sculptures, many larger than human-size, are fanciful, whimsical, satirical, humorous. They sometimes parody historical figures and spoof the Bicentennial celebration and "fine art."

Gilhooly's courting frogs include two on "The First Date at Plymouth Rock Memorial," another pair playing hide-and-seek at the Washington Monument and two other lovefrogs posing on the steps of the Jefferson Memorial, with a Jefferson frog inside.

The sculptor devastates a revered monarch with his "Bust of Victoria, Her 101st Year as Queen," and is just as irreverent with his "Mao Tse Toad" and "Frog Benjamin Franklin and his Pet Wild Turkey."

Gilhooly has likewise peopled

— or animal — the Tablet of the Ten Commandments with frog figures and has done the same with the Liberty Bell.

A series of tile frog pictures is humorously titled: "George Washington Introduces Himself to Betsy Ross," "Frog Washington Signs the Declaration of Independence," "Cracking the Liberty Bell on a Turnip Vendor," and "George Washington Crossing the Delaware."

Some other representatives of the Gilhooly bestiary also on exhibit were his amusing pigs in pokes. One is in his sleeping-bag poke lying on the floor watching a ceramic television set with the figure of a rabbit on top providing the appropriate ears. Another lies in his — or her — bag eating a pizza.

While there are deeper philosophical implications to Gilhooly's work, it may be, and should be, seen and enjoyed for the sheer fun of it.

Neither woman held an official post but their influence was so great they were styled "dragon ladies" in their heydays.

Despite her failure to win China's top post, Mao's widow was far more politically astute than Peron's widow Isabel, who was bequeathed power and lost it.

A former cabaret dancer, Isabel caught the eye of then exiled Argentine strongman Juan Peron, while Chiang Ching attracted Mao's attention by taking copious notes at his lectures in the caves of Yanan where he holed up until taking power in Peking in 1949.

Isabel moved up to the Argentine presidency from the vice presidency on her husband's death but she had no political base and could not hold together the Peronist

Harry's Bar In Venice Choice Watering Hole

By SILVANA FOA
VENICE, Italy (UPI) — For some folks Venice's canals, crumbling monuments and tourist clip joints can get awfully tedious after a few days, and many gondola-weary visitors eventually wash ashore to pass the rest of their stay happily marooned at Harry's bar.

A Venetian landmark on the Grand Canal, Harry's has been a home away from home for lonely Americans in Italy since 1931.

Ernest Hemingway, Orson Welles, Charlie Chaplin and Truman Capote have all bent elbows here.

In the mornings, diplomats browse among newspapers and exchange rumors. By noon, the bar has filled with a curious melange of jet-setters and weary tourists — all good-naturedly staring at each other.

"People want to go where other people are, where they can see and be seen," explained John Muzi, a Harry regular who owns a restaurant in Philadelphia.

The birth of Harry's Bar has an almost storybook quality.

Nearly 50 years ago, Giuseppe Cipriani tended bar at a luxury Venice hotel frequented by a young Bostonian named Harry Pickering, who constantly cradled a small dog in his arms.

Pickering whiled away the hours drinking highballs — paid for by his aunt and her boyfriend.

The aunt and boyfriend finally left Venice — leaving Harry broke but still thirsty.

Cipriani lent Harry his life savings — about 10,000 lire (worth then about $5,000) — which Pickering drank away before abruptly returning to Boston.

Six months later Pickering just as abruptly returned, repaid Giuseppe and left him enough money to set up a bar of his own.

To attract customers during the lean depression years,

Harry's began serving homemade noodles and toasted cheese sandwiches from its small rear kitchen.

From those humble beginnings, Harry's developed one of the finest kitchens in Italy — and is today one of only 10 restaurants in Italy to rate two stars in the Michelin guide.

Giuseppe Cipriani is now 76 and has turned the bar over to his son — born one year after the bar opened and named, of course, Harry.

"I am probably the only man in Italy named after a bar," said Harry Cipriani as he strode across the bar to dutifully kiss the hand of one of his more venerable female patrons.

With its simple decor and swinging doors, Harry's is an easy-going place with a meal to fit almost anyone's budget.

An enormous club sandwich at $3.75 is a sight for sore eyes — especially for Americans tired of "foreign" food.

For a more expensive but truly gourmet meal, start with risotto di seppie (rice with cuttlefish) and move on to Harry's speciality — filetto Carpaccio, named for Vittore Carpaccio (1460-1525) Europe's first great genre painter.

The filetto is made with baby beef entrecote, roasted briefly. The roasted portion is cut away and the raw meat inside is sliced paper thin and covered with a magical mayonnaise of egg yolks, lemon juice, peanut oil, Worcestershire sauce, dry mustard and chicken consommé.

"They try to copy the sauce everywhere, but they can't figure it out — I keep the real secret up here," said Harry, tapping his head gleefully.

The drink at Harry's is the Bellini — an addictive mixture of freshly pressed peach juice and Italian champagne — named for the painter Giovanni Bellini (1430-1516), famed for his altarpieces of sad-eyed madonnas.

Fifteen years ago, Harry's expanded into a second floor, but despite the magnificent view of the Grand Canal, most of Harry's regulars would rather be dead than found upstairs.

"Many of these people have been coming here for more than 25 years. They got used to sitting downstairs and now it is difficult to ask them to change their habits," said Harry watching a waiter who was having difficulty steering an elderly woman with a Georgia accent and a Park Avenue wardrobe onto the second floor.

The woman enviously eyed the eight tiny but full tables downstairs and walked over to pat Harry's hand.

"We'll go and do a few errands, dear," she said. "But don't worry, we'll be back later."

Stimulated By Energy Costs

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — Americans are trying to find a better way to make the wind work for them.

Stimulated by the soaring costs of traditional energy sources, American inventors are turning more and more towards harnessing the wind to generate electricity, according to Intellectual Property Owners, Inc., a nonprofit group dedicated to protecting technological growth by preserving the patent incentive. As a result, patent activity in this technology during the past three years has jumped an average 30.4 per cent, or almost three times the average of all technologies combined, when compared to the decade period ending 1972.

Social Problems On Prime Time

By MIKE GOODKIND
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Social problems and how to deal with them are increasingly the subject matter of prime time television.

Alcoholism, prostitution, unwed motherhood, homosexuality, even gun control are some of the themes of this season's TV shows.

Witness these examples from a recent week of network shows:
—On Monday night, in "Dawn: Portrait of a Teen-age Runaway," a 15-year-old girl turns to prostitution after running away from her alcoholic mother. The young heroine of this NBC made-for-TV movie returns home after her mother joins Alcoholics Anonymous. Her boyfriend, a male prostitute, gets a stockroom job and there is help for the pair from a sympathetic probation officer.

—On Tuesday night, the 19-year-old son in ABC's "The Family" learns that a friend since childhood is a homosexual. Should he accept him or spurn him?

—On Wednesday, in the premiere of CBS's situation comedy "Alice," a mother debates whether to let her 12-year-old son go on a fishing trip with her boss's friend, an admitted homosexual. The mother staunchly defends her right to decide what is best for her son, and agrees to let the lad take the trip after the homosexual professes shock that she could believe he would harm the boy.

"Obviously television has changed over the past several years," says Dick Kirschner, vice president of program practices at CBS. "I guess people are more aware of the general sociological problems going on and can more easily identify with them."

The social problems are of interest to young people because that is the audience at which many network TV commercials are directed. Some of the programs have done well in the ratings. "Dawn," for example, won nearly 50 per cent of the audience during its time slot.

There has been another type of success as well: young people apparently have been helped.

Doug Cramer, producer of "Dawn," said that about 100 high schools called his office asking for copies of the film to show to students. In some cities, he said, phone numbers were flashed on the screen after the program so that runaways could call for help.

"I don't think we ever start out in entertainment programming with the idea of doing something polemic," says John J. McMahon, NBC's West Coast programming vice president. "But there seems to be an appetite among the TV audience for social themes."

Alternatives and not answers usually are stressed. In "I want to Keep My Baby," a made-for-TV movie scheduled for viewing soon, "the basic question of whether a teen-age unwed mother should try to raise the baby or give it up for adoption is explored," says Mike Marden, director of television movies for CBS. "We don't answer the question, but we do let people know that at least two choices are available if they fall into such a predicament."

Many industry folks, including Johnson, credit Norman Lear and his pioneer "All in the Family" with breaking the ice for pointed social portrayals. The theme worked for Lear via Archie Bunker, the bigoted Everyman, and the format has expanded and become more explicit ever since.

"I don't think we could have done 'Dawn' any earlier than this year," says Cramer. "We probably had the first television scene ever shot showing two minors in bed together." Such explicitness, handled through a series of still photographs, depicted the two teenage prostitutes' realization that sex can also mean love.

Cramer vigorously objects to contentions that the popular appeal of programs like Dawn is titillation. "But there is always that small minority," he says.

Dramatic shows with social themes are still only a small percentage of TV fare. But Dr. Bill Rader, a Los Angeles psychiatrist who recently participated in a Merv Griffin discussion of transsexuals, believes that serious shows will win the ratings every time, if they're handled with interest.

"People aren't stupid," says Rader, who sometimes serves as a TV technical advisor. "They want to know about things that affect them."

Marilyn Michaels: One Star As Impressionist

By JOHN MOODY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Barbra Streisand, Diana Ross, Marlene Dietrich and Julie Andrews all got together on a three by five foot nightclub stage recently. But no one felt crowded.

The gathering was made possible by Marilyn Michaels, the impressionist who has them all down to a "T," and makes it seem like they're all there when she goes to work.

Marilyn insists she's a singer first and a mimic second, but her act would be just another night's entertainment if she couldn't summon the top female voices in the world at will to aid her.

She comes by both talents honestly: the singing from her parents, who were traveling musicians, and the impressions because, she admits, she's a schizo at heart.

"I started going to a therapist recently to find out who I am, and I found out I have a multiplicity of personalities," she said between acts at the Rainbow Grill in New York.

was hearing a modern day Hit Parade.

"Being a singer myself, I guess it's easier for me to imitate them. Mimicry is really just two things, listening and vocalizing. You've got to have certain vocal equipment, and I do, so it's really very easy."

She says she learned of her special talent when she was 14. "I would listen to records, or the radio and hear the way words came out of people's mouths, and then I'd try to do it. I got Mae West easy, and Marilyn Monroe. But I just recently found out that I could do a voice like Dinah Shore's ... ummm-mah!"

She blew a kiss like Dinah might have, smiled exuberantly, and began a repertoire of her own songs.

She should have stuck to Dinah.

For while Miss Michaels' voice is pleasant and quite capable of carrying a tune, it is nondescript. The very quality which allows her to transform her voice into those of better known songstresses, also keeps her from developing a recognizable style of her own. Gone is the brassiness which she can put into a Judy Garland ripoff, and the power with which she recreates Julie Andrews has somehow vanished when Miss Michaels is being herself.

"I probably have about 40 voices down in my repertoire now," she says. "And I don't have to practice at them to keep them. Once I get it down, it stays with me."

Once she gets her own act down, Marilyn Michaels may become an excellent singer in her own right. But until then, she is fortunate to be able to present herself as a talented schizoid.

"If I ever got a big hit record of my own, I would probably quit the impressions. But not now. Besides, people are crazy for impressionists. They love it."

That's just as well.

Dining Became A 'Spectacle'

TO WARNER LEROY, a restaurant is not just a place to eat, but a form of entertainment and a total environment. (AP Wirephoto)

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — To Warner LeRoy, a restaurant is not just a place to eat. It's a grand production on the glittery scale of Cecil B. DeMille.

"I view a restaurant as a form of entertainment. It's a spectacle," says LeRoy, the 41-year-old pudgy creator of Maxwell's Plum and Tavern-on-the-Green. "I try to create a total environment. I think I'm setting up atmospheres for people to communicate with each other and nature — places where people can indulge their sensual feelings."

Indulge indeed. At Maxwell's, diners in the back room sit beneath a brilliantly colored Tiffany glass ceiling, illuminated by more than 1,200 60-watt bulbs. In the cafe section, an ornately designed copper ceiling casts reddish hues on the surrounding antique wood paneling.

"Old World" lanterns, some with the famed Tiffany shade, dangle from the copper casing. Near the brass railed bar, an army of art nouveau statuettes abound. There's an endless array of stained and painted glass, antique mirrors and pictures.

Maxwell's is either a romp through a country squire's manse or a mad tumble through the Alice in Wonderland looking glass. It depends on your tastes.

Tavern-on-the-Green is a giant birthday cake, just waiting for patrons to sample the frosting. Soft pastel colors cover the walls of the Tavern's main dining room, the Crystal Room. A collection of $1,500 Baccarat chandeliers hang from the ornate, icing-like ceiling. On one side of the Crystal Room is a rustic wood-paneled area, complete with bubbled mirrors and two life-sized white stags.

"I create my fantasy world," confessed LeRoy. "After all, I grew up in fantasy." Warner is the son of Hollywood movie mogul Mervyn LeRoy and got his penchant for spectacle at an early age.

Before his splashy entrance into the restaurant business with the Hardwicke Co. as partners, LeRoy produced off-Broadway theater productions.

"When I was very young, I was more interested in intellectual content," he said. "But I became increasingly more interested in spectacle — in the sensual and creative aspects of theater."

Little by little, LeRoy's artistic drives led him to sculpture and crafts. He said he wanted to create with his hands. He wanted to build.

This was about 12 years ago, a time when New York had a dearth of sidewalk cafes. "New York has the greatest street life in the world," said LeRoy. "So I decided to build a sidewalk cafe."

The birth of Maxwell's Plum. Next on LeRoy's creative fantasy trip was the jungle amusement park in New Jersey, Great Adventure, also done with Hardwicke.

Timer Turns Off TV Set

SPRING GROVE, Ill. (UPI) — A survey of attitudes about home security indicates that some people who use late night television to lull them to sleep use a timer to turn the set off 45 minutes to two hours after they go to bed. One insomniac told the survey takers for a timer manufacturer: "We find that not worrying about awakening at 2 a.m. to turn off the TV removes another nagging thought that might have kept us awake."

At the bridge table, it is dangerous to confuse "obvious" with "correct." South gave himself every chance to make his contract by postponing the obvious play in an effort to improve his odds.

North-South conducted an intelligent auction. After South showed his strength with a jump rebid, North probed for a no trump contract by bidding his diamond strength. When South now supported spades, North knew that his side was missing a heart stopper. Since he was reluctant to play in a 4-3 fit when he held such a shabby suit, he showed his club support and South went on to game.

West led the king of hearts and continued with the ace—a diamond shift would have produced a better result but could have given declarer the contract on a different lie of the cards. Declarer ruffed and drew trumps in two rounds, ending in dummy. If the diamond king was held by West, the contract would roll home. Thus, the obvious play would be to take the finesse immediately, and the fate of the contract would have been quickly settled.

Fortunately, our declarer was made on sterner stuff. He realized that he could increase his chances considerably by postponing the diamond finesse. He first ruffed dummy's remaining heart, then cashed the ace and king of spades, for if the queen dropped he would be home. The lady refused to oblige, but declarer had one more string to his bow. He continued with his low spade.

As declarer had hoped, the suit split 3-3 and East held the queen. He won, but did not relish the prospect of being on lead. A heart would allow declarer to sluff a diamond from his hand while ruffing in dummy, and then he would use the long spade to take care of his other diamond loser. A diamond return into the jaws of the A-J-10 would be equally futile.

Note that declarer gave up nothing by adopting this line of play. If West held the queen of spades or if the suit did not split, declarer could still fall back on the diamond finesse for his contract.

Taste Science Succeeds.

'Enriched Flavor'™ breakthrough brings unprecedented taste to low tar smoking.

By "cracking" cigarette smoke down into separate ingredients, researchers at Philip Morris discovered very special "key" flavor units that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

The discovery is called 'Enriched Flavor'.

The cigarette packed with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco is MERIT. At 9 mg., one of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

Yet, MERIT actually packs the taste of cigarettes having more tar.

Tests Verify Taste

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against current leading low tar cigarettes ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of smokers were tested. The majority reported that even if the cigarette tested had up to 60% more tar than MERIT, MERIT delivered as much — or more — taste.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now smoke the cigarette.
