

Ford Has Gone 'Extra Mile' In Transition, Carter Says

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter said today that President Ford has gone an "extra mile" to smooth the transition between administrations. Carter said Ford told him to call if he needs anything, down to the smallest detail.

"I think he's very sincere about it," Carter told Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield as he began meetings with congressional leaders to prepare for the presidency. "That makes so much difference. He's just gone that extra mile to help us."

Carter made the statement as he began his first session at the Capitol — with Mansfield, the full Democratic leadership in the Senate and Democratic Senate committee chairmen. It was attended by Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale.

Carter spent 75 minutes with President Ford on Monday and said afterwards: "There cannot have been a better demonstration of unity and friendship and goodwill than has been shown to me by President Ford since the election.

"The transition will be one which will be conducive to peace in our own nation and peace around the world," Carter said after an Oval Office conference on the transition to a Carter administration.

Carter, staying at Blair House, the government guest house across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House, also met with several members of Ford's Cabinet.

At the Capitol on Monday there was some mystery about what Carter planned to discuss at meetings he requested with House and Senate committee chairmen, the House International Relations Committee, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and with GOP congressional leaders.

Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale was to join in the meetings.

The congressmen are among those whose support Carter will need if he hopes to assure success for his legislative program. A Democratic staff member said there was no agenda for the session with House committee chairmen, but that Carter probably would discuss government reorganization, foreign policy and economic problems. Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said Monday night the meetings were requested by Carter to make contact "with the people on the Hill, giving them a chance to get to know" the incoming president.

Powell said earlier that Carter wanted to talk with the foreign affairs panels to advance his plans for a bipartisan foreign policy in which Congress would play a greater role.

After their meeting, Ford and Carter walked on the lawn and Ford told reporters "the transition is working smoothly."

"It has been a real pleasure and a privilege for Mrs. Ford and myself to have Gov. Carter and Mrs. Carter as our guests," he said.

While the President and President-elect talked, Ford's wife, Betty, showed Carter's wife, Rosalynn, around the White House.

Earlier, Mrs. Carter visited the principal of Stevens School, the Washington public school that nine-year-old Amy Carter might attend. Carter thanked Ford "for the gracious way in which he has welcomed me to meet with his heads of departments to teach me about the future responsibilities which I will assume."

Powell said Carter described the meeting as "a very substantive discussion." Powell said "a good part of the time" was spent on foreign affairs.

Protest Filed

RALEIGH (AP) — A Virginia company contends it submitted the best contract price to process Medicaid claims for North Carolina, but that a competing company was improperly allowed to reduce its offer at the last minute.

The Computer Co. of Richmond charged in a letter that the $1.7 million contract for six months was awarded in an unlawful manner.

The charge was leveled against the state Advisory Budget Commission. Members were not immediately available for comment.

Electronic Data Systems-Federal (EDS-F) of Dallas was awarded the contract to process more than 170,000 Medicaid claims per month.

Walter R. Witschey, president of The Computer Co., filed his protest in a letter to H. O. Carter, state purchase and contract officer, and asked for an administrative hearing. He demanded that "this unlawful award be dissolved" and the contract awarded to The Computer Co.

Another company, PAID Prescriptions of Burlingame, Calif., complained several months ago when EDS-F was awarded a companion contract to handle North Carolina's Medicaid claims.

Essentially, PAID officials contended the contract had been "auctioneered" after EDS-F officials were made privy to confidential pricing data.

Half Of 1976 Graduates Have Used Marijuana

By JOHN STOWELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half of the Bicentennial class of high school seniors tried marijuana and three out of 10 were users at graduation time, according to government surveys.

The National Institute on Drug Abuse surveyed 17,000 high school seniors in 130 schools last spring and found that 53 per cent had tried marijuana, a 5 per cent increase over the class of 1975. The survey, released today, said 32 per cent regarded themselves as current marijuana users.

An identical 53 per cent of persons aged 18 to 25 had tried marijuana, according to another institute survey, and 25 per cent were current users. It showed 22 per cent of 12-to-17-year-olds had experimented with marijuana and 15 per cent were regular or occasional users. Although cigarettes and alcohol were used more frequently than marijuana by young adults, 57 per cent of high school seniors thought there was a serious health risk for cigarettes while only 40 per cent felt the same way about marijuana.

The findings indicated the use of LSD has remained virtually constant the last four years, and that abuse of heroin and psychotherapeutic drugs has been unchanged the last two years.

The rate of cocaine use was the same this year as in 1975. Dr. Robert L. DuPont, the institute's director, said comparison of the surveys show "an apparent stabilization in drug use and the attitudes toward drugs in general."

"The public, including youth, clearly recognizes the addictive effects of tobacco and alcohol and has very negative attitudes toward the use of all illicit drugs except marijuana," he said.

"Although drug abuse continues to be widespread in every region of the country, we are seeing some slight downward trends for amphetamines, LSD and barbiturates. Marijuana is the only drug showing a definite upward trend."

Two other government-sponsored surveys released at the same time showed that drug abuse costs the nation between $8.4 billion and $12.2 billion a year, more than tobacco smoking, but less than alcoholism.

More than 60 per cent of the cost of drug abuse was attributed to heroin abuse. The median costs of $10.3 billion in fiscal 1975 included medical, judicial, law enforcement, criminal and employment expenses and debts. The study estimated that tobacco use costs $6.7 billion and alcohol and alcoholism cost $3.2 billion.

French Novelist, Art Historian, Former Cabinet Official Dies

PARIS (AP) — Andre Malraux, the novelist, art historian, philosopher and Gaullist cabinet minister, died today, the French news agency Agence France Presse reported. He was 75.

Malraux entered the Creteil Hospital last Tuesday for treatment of a lung congestion. He developed a blood clot in a lung Sunday night and grew steadily worse. His doctor reported Monday that his condition was hopeless.

Malraux was one of the 20th century's most brilliant men of letters, but he was also a man of action — an explorer, archaeologist, adventurer, early

ANDRE MALRAUX

Communist revolutionary, a much-decorated World War II hero and a close friend and cabinet minister of President Charles De Gaulle.

His life was full of tragedy. His wealthy father committed suicide and family legend claims his grandfather did the same. His two half-brothers were killed during World War II. His wartime mistress, Josette Clotis, was killed in a train crash as France was being liberated. Their two sons died together in 1961 when their speeding sports car smashed into a tree in Central France.

A colonel in the French Resistance, Malraux faced a German execution squad in 1944. It was a cruel hoax, but the experience inspired some of his deepest insight into a theme that always haunted him: man's confrontation with death.

Malraux organized a bomber squadron for the Republican side in the Spanish civil war and flew 65 combat missions before being wounded. That war produced "L'Espoir," of "Man's Hope," the companion piece to "Man's Fate" and a vision of totalitarianism in action.

At the outbreak of World War II, he became an enlisted man in the French armored forces which also produced De Gaulle. He was captured by the Germans in 1940, escaped, joined the underground, and wrote another novel, "The Walnut Tree of Altenburg," in which the hero died on the battlefield.

He first met De Gaulle in 1944, served briefly as his information minister in 1945, then helped him organize the Gaullist party. He also wrote his monumental works on the history of world art, "The Voices of Silence" and "Metamorphosis of the Gods."

In 1959, De Gaulle installed Malraux as information minister and later named him minister for cultural affairs, a post he held 10 years. He initiated the great cleanup of Paris' grime-coated buildings, dug forgotten masterpieces out of the Louvre's cellars and placed them on view, supervised the restoration of Versailles and commissioned Marc Chagall's ceiling for the Paris Opera.

He also drew much criticism for allowing the puritanical views of De Gaulle's wife to influence him to uphold censorship of films and plays, and for allowing skyscrapers to mar the skyline of Paris.

When De Gaulle retired in 1969, Malraux withdrew from politics and devoted himself to his multivolume memoirs, called "Anti-Memoirs." Malraux's marital and romantic life was as eventful and unusual as the other facets of his career. He married Clara Goldschmidt in 1921, but they were divorced before World War II. After his wartime liaison with Josette Clotis ended in tragedy, he married the concert pianist Madeleine Lioux, the widow of his half-brother, Roland, in 1948. That marriage also failed, and for a number of years novelist Louise de Vilmorin was his mistress and constant companion.

SPECIAL CLOTHING

I need clothing for my bedridden mother that is easy to put on and take off. Do you know of anyone who could provide such specially made clothing for her. Mrs. R. J.

A local woman has told us of a new direct mail company in Stillwater, Okla. which is specializing in a special line of garments for those confined to beds and wheelchairs, for the incontinent, for the disturbed who remove their clothing, and for patients who cannot keep shoes and stockings on their feet. A brochure she provided us says the clothes are designed to be easy to take off and put on (Many have wrap backs with velcro closings.), attractive, durable, easy to care for, and adequately warm.

The name of the company is PTL Designs. PTL stands for "put together with love," say the owners, Mary Murphy, Ann Simma, and Phyllis Jo Acuff. They say that if someone has a clothing problem that is not covered in their designs, they will be glad to hear a full description of the problem and try to design something to fit the need. A style sheet having sketches, style numbers, sizes, fabric choices and prices may be obtained by writing the company — PTL Designs, Box 364, Stillwater, Okla. 74074. The phone number is 405-377-7555.

He Still Receives Notices

CHARLOTTE (AP) — All Alden E. Hare of Charlotte has to do to save himself $450 is prove he's never been to New York City.

That's what city officials said after sending him a summons for 12 parking tickets totaling that amount between January and July of 1975. The city said the tickets had been charged to N.C. license plate BBD 181, which Hare admits is attached to the bumper of his Buick. Hare, 34, wrote back to New York officials telling them he's never been to their city, his wife Lee has never been there, and neither has their 2-year-old daughter Robin. Furthermore, he wrote, his eight-year-old Buick has never been there.

Monday, when Hare saw an envelope from New York in his mail, he thought it was an apology.

Not so. It was another Notice of Outstanding Summons.

"They don't give up, do they," Hare said.

New York officials said Monday that Hare is one of hundreds of motorists across the country who got notices for New York City tickets they claimed they didn't deserve. The officials say they don't know why the snafu has continued, but that Hare can end the notices by requesting the original tickets.

If they don't include an exact description of his car, they will be satisfied. If not, a warrant could be issued for Hare's arrest if he's ever stopped in New York.

Labor Force Increases Over Last Year

The Civilian Labor Force in the Greenville area was estimated at 40,690 for September, 1976 indicating a decrease of 1,030 from July 1976 and an increase of 70 from September 1975 according to Jim Hannan, Manager of the Greenville Employment Security Commission.

Although total employment declined in Pitt County during the period from July to September 1976, as a result of seasonal worker reductions in the agricultural sector, employment was up in both manufacturing and non-manufacturing. Major employment increases were experienced in tobacco, trade and government.

In September 1976 unemployment was estimated at 2,310 in Greenville which is an unemployment rate of 5.7 per cent. The September 1976 unemployment rate was .5 per cent higher than July's unemployment rate of 5.2 per cent, and 2.1 per cent higher than the unemployment rate of 3.6 per cent in September 1975. This means that in September 1976 860 more people were unemployed than in September 1975. Total manufacturing employment is anticipated to decrease by nearly 200 workers within the next two months and by about 600 by mid-January, 1977. The seasonal tobacco industry is expected to be the major contributor to this overall reduction. Minor employment increases are expected in apparel, non-electrical machinery, and transportation equipment which should partially offset the tobacco reductions. Total nonmanufacturing employment is anticipated to increase by approximately 300 workers by the end of the year. This increase will be reflected almost entirely in the trade sector due to anticipated hiring during the upcoming holiday season.

2 Collisions On Monday

An estimated $2,500 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a three-vehicle mishap at the intersection of Fifth and Elm Streets about 5:46 p.m. involving cars driven by Barbara Jean Houston of 1401 Willow St.; Robert Eugene Kear of 2401 East Fourth St.; and John Willis Riggins of 1308 East First St.

Damage was estimated at $1,500 to the Houston car, $200 to the Kear vehicle and $500 to the Riggins auto. No charges were made.

William Earl Moseley of 504 East Gum Road was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Skinner Street.

Police reported the Moseley truck collided with a car driven by Iris Godley Neal of 2129 North Village Dr. resulting in an estimated $300 damage to the Neal car. No damage resulted to the Moseley truck, investigators noted.

Professors Are Meet Delegates

key committees during preceding years. Steps to fill the vacancy will be considered by the board of officers meeting tonight.

Meanwhile, preparations to observe the 26th anniversary of the Greenville Moose Lodge were in their final stages.

An anniversary dance is planned for all members at 9:00 p.m. (Saturday, with music by the Swingmasters.

It will be followed by a Candlelight Enrollment ceremony for new members at 8:00 a.m. Sunday. The special anniversary class of candidates has been designated in honor of former lodge Secretary E.M. Baldree, who is currently serving as a member of the Moosehaven Board of Directors.

Junior Governor Arthur W. Diehl last night presented member Gordon Turner a plaque from Mooseheart for his role as editor of The Moose Messenger, the Greenville lodge bulletin. The Messenger won honorable mention among lodge bulletins in competition during the 1976 International Convention.

Civic Affairs chairman Billy Barnes announced December 19 had been chosen for the annual children's Christmas Party, and said suggestions for the program would be welcome.

Elected District Ruritan Governor

H. D. (Buck) Weaver of Greenville was elected as District Governor of the Greenville-Goldsboro District of Ruritans at the District's 27th Annual Convention in Eureka November 13.

Weaver, who succeeds J.W. Brock of Eureka, is a member of the Winterville Ruritan Club.

Other district officers elected are as follows: David Godwin, Lieutenant Governor; and Zone Governors, Billy Woolard, zone 1-B; Jimmy Hines, zone 2; Harold Lee, zone 3; and Rufus Croom, zone 4.

The officers were installed at the banquet by Jerry Ellis vice president of Ruritan National. Sam Bundy was the guest speaker at the banquet.

Bundy challenged the 300 Ruritans and wives present to help the nation to survive a second 200 years.

The Greenville-Goldsboro District of Ruritans includes 34 clubs and 969 members.

H.D. WEAVER

Proposed As Governor

Jack Edwards, local businessman and member of the Rotary Club of Greenville is being proposed by that club for the post of District Governor. He was nominated at the meeting of the local club on Monday evening.

Edwards has been a member of the Rotary Club here since late 1955, and has served several terms as a director, and one term as president. He has also headed numerous active committees in the club's organization.

The nominations for district governor are to be considered by a special nominating committee headed by Talbot Capps, Kinston, and composed of past district governors. The selectee would be known as district-governor-nominee and would serve for the year 1978-1979 in District 773 of Rotary International, of which the local club and 42 other clubs in eastern North Carolina are affiliates.

The announcement of Edwards' nomination was made by Dr. Charles F. Gilbert, president of Rotary in Greenville.

Firemen Called To Local Shop

Firemen were called to Central News and Card Shop at 321 Evans Street this morning when the display window of the store caught fire.

According to store manager, Irving Ertis, the display in the window suffered damage, and smoke damage resulted to the remainder of the building.

The fire extinguished with a fire extinguisher was out upon arrival of firemen.

A store employee was slightly injured when the fire ignited.

No estimate of damage was available.

Government Moving Towards Banning Fluorocarbons

By JOHN STOWELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration today proposed requiring warning labels on most aerosol cans containing fluorocarbons, as a prelude to a ban in the future.

The proposal would affect primarily spray deodorants, antiperspirants, hair sprays, colognes and fragrances.

The spray cans would have to carry the legend: "Warning. Contains a chlorofluorocarbon that may harm the public health and environment by reducing ozone in the upper atmosphere."

Meanwhile, the Consumer Product Safety Commission on Monday took the first step to ban fluorocarbon aerosols, saying they "present an unreasonable risk of injury to consumers."

The FDA claims it has regulatory jurisdiction over about 80 per cent of the fluorocarbon sprays on the U.S. market, or about one billion cans a year at the present sales volume.

The FDA said non-prescription drug sprays for bronchial and asthma and all prescription drug sprays would be exempt from the present labeling action, pending review of whether alternative gas propellants are suitable for those products.

Public comments on the proposed warning labels will be accepted for the next 60 days. The FDA said the proposal would take effect 30 days after a final order was published in the Federal Register.

"The purpose of this warning is to encourage self-restraint by consumers in purchasing aerosol products containing chlorofluorocarbons and to encourage them to seek alternative products," said FDA Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt.

"Our goal is to reduce consumer use of chlorofluorocarbons in aerosols by voluntary action until such aerosols are phased out by mandatory regulation," he said.

"This action is unique and should represent the first of a worldwide series of actions by all nations to limit the release of chlorofluorocarbons into the atmosphere. Given the long-term nature of the hazard, the way in which we are going about the phase-out and warning labels on aerosols will be to the consumer's maximum benefit," Schmidt said.

Fluorocarbons are used in about half of all aerosol products. More than one billion cans are sold in the United States alone each year.

The controversy already has led some manufacturers to substitute hydrocarbons — considered safe by environmentalists — for fluorocarbons in spray cans.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission's surprise action appeared to signal a coordinated government move against fluorocarbon sprays.

The commission, which refused in July 1975 to ban fluorocarbon sprays, had been expected to let the FDA and the Environmental Protection Agency handle the issue. But the commission voted 5-0 in closed session Monday in favor of the ban sought by an environmental group, the National Resources Defense Council.

The commission said it has clear jurisdiction over non-cosmetic products like household cleaners, and that it was ordering immediate preparation of a notice banning fluorocarbons from those items.

It will take at least several months for the commission to follow the procedural steps to implement the ban. The commission said it would coordinate its action with the FDA and the EPA.

If the EPA imposes its own ban on fluorocarbons "within a reasonable period of time," the commission said it would drop its action. EPA is considering such a ban.

Concern about fluorocarbons has mounted since 1974, when two University of California scientists, Drs. Mario J. Molina and Frank S. Rowland, said computer studies indicated fluorocarbons were causing a chemical reaction in the upper atmosphere that destroys ozone, which helps shield the earth from the sun's ultraviolet radiation.

Increased ultraviolet rays would result in more skin cancer cases and possible changes in the earth's climate caused by higher temperatures, the National Academy of Sciences has reported.

The academy said on Sept. 13 that fluorocarbon spray cans should be labeled immediately so consumers could choose whether to use them.

Relive Life By Writing About It

By JOE WING
Written for AP Newsfeatures
What wouldn't you give to live some part of your life over again?

Would you hock the TV or even the family car?
No need for that. Whatever you do, of course, you can't actually experience a second time around, but there's a next best course of action that will cost you hardly a dime. It shapes up into a project ideal for you as an older man or woman, and one likely to draw applause from your children and grandchildren, and even your nieces and nephews.

The project? Nothing less than reliving your life by writing your life story.
Now, don't let the idea throw you. Although you may never have written anything more ambitious than a letter, and are still the only person on earth who can do this particular job. Even if your grammar and spelling aren't perfect, you alone can set down on paper, or dictate into a tape recorder, the unique anecdotes and events that have made up the mosaic of your existence.

My mother used to spin yarns to me about her girlhood and about the lives of her forbears as far back as she could remember. But when I tried to tell my own children about her life on the prairie, about her parents' journey West and about things that had happened to me, they wouldn't sit still for it. By then there was more excitement in radio programs and comic strips than in any narrative of mine.

As a result, our family legends, like those of many families, were on their way to oblivion. But I resolved not to let them die. I started to write them down. And those children of mine, now grownup, are fascinated with what I have written.

Writing my "book" has been more fun than watching football games or taking up golf, and the anecdotes have become a bulky manuscript. Your account need not be that long—a single page is better than nothing.

You don't have to be famous to rate an autobiography. There have been notable ones by slum dwellers, servants, buck privates, beggars and misfits, as well as by statesmen, philanthropists, generals, politicians, doctors, editors, artists, industrialists and travelers.
You're lucky if you have old diaries or letters or account books to draw on. Even without them, however, you will find yourself recording incidents you haven't recalled for years. They may even heighten your spouse's interest in you, and certainly they will give you new insights into your own existence.

You are on your own as to the period covered. Some people concentrate on their childhood. Chief White Horse Eagle wrote about most of his 107 years. If your war experiences, school days, romances, wanderings or business career were most important to you, by all means zero in on one or more of those.
The events need not be put in logical order. What difference does it make now whether a date was 1944 or 1945? Mark Twain dictated his autobiography piecemeal and never did get it organized, but it makes reading hard to lay aside.

Perhaps you think you haven't the health or energy to tackle such a project. Well, then, think of the New Zealand judge who wrote "Cheerful Yesterdays" while dying of cancer. Or of our own President U.S. Grant, who produced his highly regarded war memoirs under similar circumstances. I wish that my ancestors had done as much for me. Some of them reached these shores 300 years ago. There were soldiers, bums, pioneers, seamen and revolutionaries among them. I will never know what they were really like, or about their adventures, accomplishments and failures. Any one of them could have told a tale that I would love to read. But they didn't leave me a single line.

No matter how many lines you write, there comes a time when you have done as much as you want to. What next? First and foremost, save it. Don't decide, as even professional writers sometimes do, that your stuff is no good and junk it. Don't worry either about publication, although many an amateur's life story has popped up in print later and been hailed as a grassroots masterpiece. One thing you can do if you have a little spare cash is to get it typed neatly and reproduced for your children, other relatives or friends.

However you handle it, you'll make a profit. I'm drawing royalties already on my unpublished manuscript. My daughter, one of those who wouldn't sit still years ago, saw it recently and wrote me: "Reading your autobiography was a wonderful experience. I always thought I knew you pretty well, but it has opened up all sorts of understandings."

Christmas Shoppers Are Being More Selective

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor
Christmas shoppers are being more selective in their toy buying these days, says the president of the Toy Manufacturers Association.

In an interview, David Miller said they are holding back if they don't perceive value. "The impact of inflation these past two years still is carrying through into toy sales."

This doesn't mean a lighter load in Santa's pack. But Miller is cautiously predicting only a six to eight per cent increase in volume of sales over last year. "In unsettled times, people in this country tend not to spend money. But historically, the toy industry doesn't suffer. People tend to indulge children even when they cut back spending elsewhere."

Miller said the sales picture is "as difficult to read this year as ever before." He declined to speculate about the most popular toys, saying: "Broad generic categories get tremendous play at Christmas: traditional dolls, action dolls like G.I. Joe, the Bionic Man and other figures tied to television programs. For preschoolers, figure board sets — farm and gas station scenes, Noah's ark, burger stands are popular."

The games market is big for every age from 3 years old and up, he said. "Anatomically correct dolls are doing fantastically in the press," he said, smiling, "but I don't think any of the three manufacturers have planned on a bonanza."

"Toys sell all year long. The Christmas rate of sales can be five to 10 times greater, and trends that start early, in April and May, tend to continue in the Christmas market."

"We're learning that toys are a major part of children's lives. There's a steady, growing trend toward educational and socially redeeming values in toys, toys tied to books with characters that encourage children to read. Simple puzzles and jigsaws are popular with anything and socially redeeming values in toys, toys tied to books with characters that encourage children to read. Simple puzzlend other hobby toys have long-term potential."

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Cooks ask us for new recipes for spreads to offer with before-dinner drinks. They say they often serve cheese or tuna spreads; they want something "different."

Well, here's a recipe for a Crab and Spinach Spread that's deliciously new. It was sent by a friend who wrote: "I find it divine for holiday and all-through-the-winter entertaining. Because it can be put together at the last minute, it's easy to serve hot. The first time I made it I thought the green onion in it might be a little overpowering, but none of my guests agreed with me. So perhaps I was just sensitive to onion that day." When we tried this spread the first time, we served it hot; next time around, chilled. Our tasters were enthusiastic about it both ways. As to the amount of scallion, all our participants thought it just right.

CRAB SPINACH SPREAD
7½-ounce can or ½-pound frozen tendon-free king crab

- 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach
- Salt
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- ½ cup finely chopped scallion (green onion)
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 2 tablespoons dry vermouth
- 1-3rd cup grated Parmesan cheese
- Freshly ground pepper to taste
- ¼ teaspoon dried crushed oregano
- ½ cup commercial sour cream
- Crackers or sliced crusty rolls

Drain canned crab and slice the large pieces; drain and slice frozen crab. Cook spinach, using ¼ teaspoon salt, according to package directions; drain thoroughly. In an 8-inch skillet heat the oil; add scallion, garlic, crab and spinach and cook gently for a few minutes. Stir in vermouth, Parmesan, ¼ teaspoon salt, pepper and oregano; cook gently for a few minutes. Stir in sour cream and heat gently. Serve warm or chilled as a spread for crackers. Makes about 2 cups — enough for 6 to 8 tasters.

Mrs. Cargile Gives Program

Mrs. Colleen Cargile gave the BPW Club program for the evening entitled Women Helping Women Thru Scholarship. Various scholarships given by the BPW were described and slides were shown of some of the recipients. To date 1,527 scholarships have been awarded with a total of some $500,000 given to support the program.

Irma Worthington was elected to represent the local BPW at the ERA coalition meeting in Raleigh.

New members introduced and presented with their pins and certificates were Vicki Ford and Mary Dell Seymour. Janet Woolard is a new transfer member from New Bern.

Mrs. Ruth Scott, president, presided at the meeting.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I never really got over the time a priest came to bless my best friend's house and she was sitting in her antiseptic living room, with a copy of Bishop Sheen's book on the coffee table, listening to her Latin Berlitz records... in her eighth month.

That was the day I began to suspect I was different than other mothers. For a better label, I called them Super Moms and realized I never wanted to have one move in to my neighborhood.

Recently, a man cornered me and said, "You think you've got problems. How would you like to live across the street from a Jock Pop?"

"A Jock Pop?"
"Yeah, you know, the guy who does everything right. His garage is lined with pegboard with his tools alphabetized. He empties the lawn mower bag every time he uses it, stores his old anti-freeze, and are you ready for this — trains his wife to clean paint brushes after she uses them."

"You're kidding."
"As I stand here before you it's the truth. I don't understand men like that. We buy coffee just for the cans to store old paint brushes. And he's always got the right outfit for the right job. Jogs in his warmup suit, cuts grass in his layered look, carries out the garbage in his jacket with the patches on the elbows, and gets the paper in a coordinated pajama-robe outfit. Oh, and don't forget the letter-sweater for errands."

BIG PROBLEM

NEW YORK (UPI) — Shopping is a widespread problem involving persons from all age groups and walks of life. According to the Extension service of Cornell University, one study of 500 supermarket shoppers showed that one out of every 12 stole something. Another study, by the Supermarket Institute, indicated that self-service stores are the hardest hit.

Holiday Feasts In Middle Ages Were Elaborate

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Christmas dinner was just another feast in a year filled with feasts in medieval times. About the only thing that set the Christmas meal apart was the choice of foods, which for obvious reasons were seasonal, says medievalist Madeleine Peiner Cosman.

Fantastic amounts of imported food could be had in England, France and parts of Germany, and it was served not just at court but in the homes of the nobility and wealthy townspeople, she said in an interview.

Mrs. Cosman is founder and director of the Institute of Medieval and Renaissance Studies at City College of the City University of New York and author of "Fabulous Feasts" (Braziller $19.95). She became interested in medieval food and life styles while researching the medicine of the period. References to food and drink were plentiful in the literature, she said.

In "Sir Gawain and the Green Knight," she found many medieval culinary ideas, including a description of Christmas holiday celebrations at the court of King Arthur. One feast followed another, climaxed with an elaborate New Year's Day banquet at which each two guests had 12 dishes between them.

Meals of 12 to 20 courses were common, she said, but she thinks they were more like tastings than dinners at which guests ate full servings.

A feast might last from three hours to 12, she said, but not all the time was spent in eating. Between courses, the diners were entertained with music, dancing and drama.

"Every proper medieval feast had a great amount of music and minstrelry, from court musicians to itinerant musicians hired for a fee for the occasion."

High-priced and top-quality imported foods included special honey from Russia, wines, herbs, spices and dried meats, for which there was great demand.

"I tend to think that the exploration of the new world can be traced to the desire of European cultures for new foods."

In addition to her university position, Mrs. Cosman is a museum lecturer on medieval life styles and star of a cable television series on medieval life that is currently being rebroadcast on public TV in the New York metropolitan area. She also occasionally caters 15th and 16th century meals for private parties at The Cloisters museum in New York City and at national meetings at universities and her own institute.

Mrs. Cosman appeared for the interview in medieval-style dress. She brought a bottle of mead (honey wine) and a bag of fragrant parsley rolls and circletes (almond-cardamom cookies). She had baked both with recipes she adapted from medieval manuscripts.

"Adapted" suggests refinements that medieval people would not recognize, but Mrs. Cosman said she found no evidence to support the popular theory that adulterated and highly spiced foods were commonplace.

On the contrary, "medieval people colored foods with natural herbs or flowers steeped in wine. There is no particular reason to think they overseasoned their food. I tend to think that's simply modern nonsense."

Perhaps the most intriguing recipe in her book is for blackbird pie, recalling the old nursery rhyme, "Sing a Song of Sixpence," about

"... four-and twenty blackbirds baked in a pie,

"When the pie was opened, the birds began to sing..."
Mrs. Cosman said "illusion food" such as that was immensely popular. Crusts were prebaked, cooled and filled with tethered live birds or wind-up toys. Some live birds were raised specifically for these pies, she said, ready to emerge and entertain the guests when the pie was cut.

Musicians For Tour Are Announced

The following musicians will present programs of Christmas music during the Candlelight portion of the Jarvis Christmas Tour of Homes on Tuesday evening, Dec. 7.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Bath, pianist and violinist, will be in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Leo W. Jenkins. Doug Newell, tenor, will be at the home of Coach and Mrs. Patrick F. Dye. A women's group from the Chancel Choir of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church will perform under the direction and accompaniment of Millie Tripp at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Taft Jr. Participants will be Lorraine Foster, Catherine Creech, Peggy Phelps, Linda Clark and Terry Pike.

Guitar groups will perform at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ed Tipton II and Mrs. James C. Lanier Jr. They are Dr. Stephen Creech and Dr. David Foster; and Cathy Wilson, Nancy Twigger and Susan Moye, a group of young musicians.

Readers Reply To Puzzled In N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: PUZZLED IN NEW YORK couldn't understand why a nurse he was engaged to marry dropped him for a patient who was paralyzed from the waist down. He asked, "What good can he do her as a husband?" Well, I have news for PUZZLED.

I am married to a paraplegic. His spine was severed by a bullet that rendered his legs useless, but the rest of him is just fine. He is just like any other man in all respects except he rolls instead of walks.

And anyone who thinks that sex isn't a part of our marriage is really stupid. Paralyzed people need love, and they can give it too. And for the record, we are both 22.
HAPPY IN ILLINOIS

DEAR HAPPY: Read on for another interesting letter from a reader who also speaks with authority, with a view from a wheelchair:

DEAR ABBY: May I answer PUZZLED IN N.Y., the healthy able-bodied man who was engaged to a nurse, but lost her to a policeman who was paralyzed from the waist down? PUZZLED asked, "How can he do her any good as a husband?"

DEAR PUZZLED:
As a totally paralyzed person in a wheelchair, I think I can tell you a few things you ought to know. Just because a person's legs stop functioning, it doesn't mean his mind and heart also stop. He can still think, get angry, make decisions and love.

Perhaps one day you will be able to see things in a different light. I can assure you that seeing things from a wheelchair not only changes your level of viewing life, but also broadens your appreciation of it.

It is possible that your former fiancée's life with a paralyzed husband could be highly rewarding in all respects, and that means sexually, too.
I want to caution you about something. The possibility of your becoming paralyzed or suffering some form of disability is one in 10... and growing greater every year. Don't gamble your happiness on only being able to stand up.
WHEELCHAIR IN FORT WORTH

DEAR READERS: If you would like some excellent information and/or instruction on how to handle your sexual feelings satisfactorily though physically handicapped, get in touch with your County or State Easter Seal Society, also known as Society For Crippled Children and Adults.

And the office of SIECUS (Sex Information and Education Council of the U.S., 1855 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10023) can also provide you with helpful material. Both agencies also can provide information about the help that is available to you in your own community.

Both above agencies are non-profit, so if you write to inquire about the help that's available to you in your own community, please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope for their reply.

Hope It Will Be Settled Now

North Carolina Congressman Richardson Preyer is chairman of a House subcommittee on the Kennedy assassination.

It is part of a Committee on Assassinations which is investigating the deaths of John Kennedy and Martin Luther King. Preyer says that 65 percent of the American public do not believe that Oswald acted alone in the Kennedy assassination.

"That means they are... questioning our institutions and our agencies and they'll keep on questioning until there is an answer to it," he said.

Preyer said his subcommittee's investigation would be a definitive one "so that people can look at it and say this is the way it was.

"It's going to be a monumental investigative job."

We hope so. Many questions have hung over the assassinations, particularly that of President Kennedy. That is true despite the fact that a blue ribbon commission conducted a thorough investigation at the time.

Now there should be a re-examination of all the facts and a careful look at any potential new evidence. Let's do as thorough a job as possible and answer the questions once and for all.

Step Forward In Health Care

Another step forward in rural health care has been taken in Greene County with the dedication of the Hookerton Health Care Center.

The center is one of three in Greene County and will observe regular hours.

One has to live in a rural area to understand just how severe the health crisis is. The problem can be solved. Hopefully health care centers such as this new one at Hookerton will provide the answers.

THIS AFTERNOON

Take Share Of The Blame

By BILL NOBLITT
(Second of Three Article)
RALEIGH — Some of the hardest knocks at educational policy were reserved for their own bureaucracies as a team of educators recently reviewed problems in the state's schools.

"Education has become a huge industry. It is a bureaucracy of service groups who have trouble communicating with each other, and who become so immersed in competing for funds that they clip the lines of communication altogether," the summary report of a two-day seminar states bluntly.

"Instead of working together to establish parameters of service, to prevent duplication, and to explore possibilities for pooling resources, they often do not acknowledge each other's assets."

Infighting

"As long as public schools, community colleges, and universities are wrought with factionalism (both among and within themselves), policies that limit rather than facilitate access to reading help will continue to be protected at the expense of the person who needs help (the student)."

Representatives from local school systems, community colleges, public and private universities, local school boards, and the State Department of Public Instruction participated in the seminar and produced the report on "Educational Policy Making."

Other concerns of the group which gathered under auspices of the Learning Institute of North Carolina and of Citizens United for the Improvement of Reading explored numerous policy problems which participants believe stand in the way of effective teaching.

The educators also took the blame for allowing the public to grow alienated: "The right for every citizen to know about educational problems and issues in the community and to be presented with opportunities to become involved in long overdue... in order for educational policy to work, it needs the support of an informed public."

Lack of information for the public is one of the problems present today, participants felt. An abrupt public awareness that many children are not learning to read in school has created "an alarmist attitude of blame and demands for fact action when what is really needed is a level-headed search for causes and workable solutions."

False Assumptions

The educators also felt that part of the big-to-do over reading is the false assumption embraced by public and educators alike that "each child should be reading at a level based on some national or state averages..." rather than recognizing individual differences.

Standardized tests were criticized as policy tools which create a "pressure cooker environment where educators feel compelled to get learners up to grade level, instead of striving toward realistically achievable standards for the system..."

Among other concerns tabulated were the feeling that policy on reading is tending to add "appendages" such as specialists and aides rather than strengthening the classroom teacher; that state priorities in funding tend to short-circuit local plans; that policy changes are put forth without realistically taking account of resources locally to meet the policy (classroom size for example); that the public "fear and panic" regarding reading will lead to unwise crisis responses; and that focusing so strongly on reading "may result in total neglect of the individuals it professes to help."

Reading, participants said, is not the only communication skill through which learning takes place.

To help solve the problems, the group proposed a series of steps designed to put forth "Guidelines and standards based on the ideals and beliefs of members of a given community... with the power to lead and inspire, if they emanate from a healthy environment of enlightened individuals"

Conservatism Attracts

WASHINGTON — Conservatives still are debating—but only feebly debating—the future of the Grand Old Party. A few spiritual sons of Jefferson Davis continue to talk of forming a third party, but the secession movement has small appeal. Most conservative leaders are thinking of converting the old party to a Grand New Party instead.

The general idea, widely discussed in the wake of the November 2 elections, is for conservatives to take over the bedraggled Republican Party, to name their own chairman, and to fix a fresh course. The course would have a bearing of right-right-moderate, coinciding roughly with south-south-east on the political compass. On this prospective cruise, no liberals are wanted for crew. The reasons for such a course were spelled out in a brilliant position paper, recently reprinted in Human Events, prepared as the basis for discussion at a November 6 meeting of the American Conservative Union in Chicago.

The memorandum very nearly demolishes the case for pursuing a third-party route. For practical reasons alone, as the paper points out, the idea should be abandoned; a wholly new party would have to start from scratch in creating local and state organizations, in qualifying candidates for public office, and in raising the money that a successful political effort would require.

By contrast, the Republican Party provides a vehicle in being.

Superficially, at least, the party is not much of a vehicle, and this winter finds it barely in being. The party has lost the White House; it remains an impotent minority in House and Senate; it lost one more governorship on November 2; it even managed to lose the House of Representatives in the Kansas legislature. Only a fifth of the nation's voters publicly identify themselves as Republicans. The bleak statistics have been recited many times.

There is one view, to be sure, that says the Republicans have scared away the voters because their image is too conservative. Gerald Ford, it is remarked, is only slightly to the left of McKinley. Some of the party's conservative stalwarts—notably Buckley in New York, Taft in Ohio, and Brock in Tennessee —

Peso Again Frozen

By CHARLES GREEN
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — New government restrictions on trading in foreign currencies have given American tourists in Mexico another windfall, increasing the value of their dollars nearly 18 per cent.

To check panic buying of U.S. dollars, the government's Banco de Mexico ordered the banks on Monday to suspend trading in foreign currencies and gold until further notice.

However, savings and checking accounts in foreign currencies were not affected. Foreign exchange houses continued buying and selling dollars. Tourists were able to exchange their dollars for pesos at hotels, although the hotels would not buy the pesos back from departing visitors. But bank branches at Mexico City's international airport were buying and selling up to $300 per customer.

The suspension pushed the buying rate at foreign exchange dealers to 28.20 pesos to the dollar, up from 24 Friday and an increase of 125 per cent since the Mexican currency was first devalued on Sept. 1. The bank rate at the airport varied between 25 and 28 pesos to the dollar.

Business houses were not as favored as the tourists. The suspension halted the transfer of profits out of the country by foreign firms, and companies importing goods had to defer payment in foreign currencies. But the central bank said foreign currency could be purchased to meet loans or payment plans arranged through a financial institution.

The government ordered the Unconfirmed reports circulated in London diplomatic circles today that Germany might be considering breaking off relations with Moscow so the Nazis could assume a free hand in Spain.

The reports followed hard on the heels of a 45-minute conference between Joachim von Ribbentrop, German ambassador to Great Britain, and prime minister Stanley Baldwin on an undisclosed subject.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the British House of Commons that Great Britain will protect its shipping from either Spain's government or the insurgents.

To put teeth into the already strict British arms export regulation, Eden announced the government would introduce a bill to make carrying of arms to Spain by British ships illegal.

Four dead, seven injured and a possible 25 trapped were unconfirmed estimates today of a toll exacted by a huge landslide of mud and rock which fell with crushing force last night on Juneau's apartment house district.

Through disrupted communications came the reports of the dead and the estimate of Fire Chief V. W. Mulvihill that more than a score may have been killed or trapped by the 100-foot wide mass which rumbled down from a rainswept mountain.

Reassurance From Carter

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President-elect Carter, who has vowed meticulous observance of campaign pledges, is winning friends in Congress and business by breaking one promise: his frequently repeated intention as President to seek standby authority for wage and price controls.

It was no accident at his news conference in Plains Nov. 15 when, replying to a question about economic controls, Carter did not repeat past promises about standby authority. The omission was another effort to reassure businessmen who had worked themselves into a frenzy — and a non-investing psychology — during the autumn campaign.

What the President-elect is up to is summarized by economist Eliot Janeway, an early Carter supporter with some pipelines into the Carter camp: "In my opinion, Carter will do nothing right now that Congress won't approve and nothing that the business community won't approve."

With only a slight exaggeration of Carter's transitional caution, that correctly describes his present stance.

Carter has tried hard to avoid confrontation with Dr. Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and to quickly douse expectations of radically reduced unemployment through massive governmental efforts. Moreover, he seems more likely than not to name a businessman as Secretary of the Treasury. But nothing better shows his desire to reassure business than the apparent burial of past statements on controlling wages and prices.

Those past statements showed not the slightest wariness over government control of the economy. While still governor of Georgia in 1973, he called on President Nixon to reimpose wage-price controls. Early in 1976, he proposed standby authority and maintained that position through the year. While opposing permanent controls, his campaign position paper declared: "I favor standby controls which the President can apply selectively."

That was enough to scare the wits out of businessmen. High-priced economic consultants fired off to clients confidential reports forecasting that Carter, if elected, would impose a system of controls that would make Nixon's in 1971 look like child's play. In truth, standby authority on the books invariably is used by a President when he gets in the inevitable tight squeeze.

No other factor contributed so much to anti-Carter hostility from business tycoons during the campaign. They reasoned that any President intent on controlling wages and prices anticipated stepping up inflation. Hence, they worried, Carter's election would ruinously escalate inflationary expectations.

Businessmen with access to Carter have advised that a post-election call for standby controls would cause corporate investment to slump below its present lethargic level. Furthermore, there is a rare business-labor consensus on this, with most union chiefs following AFL-CIO president George Meany's opposition to controls.

Nor is there anything like the congressional support for controls that existed in the early Nixon days. Rep. Henry Reuss of Wisconsin, respected liberal chairman of the House Banking Committee, never has championed laissez faire capitalism but believes that even asking for standby wage-price controls now would be severely damaging. Without question, a secret ballot on standby authority would lose badly today in both House and Senate.

Some academic economists advising Carter still want him to seek standby authority for insurance purposes, and he has not barred the door. But his failure at the Plains press conference to even mention standby authority, while flatly rejecting controls himself, suggests where he is going.

It is of a piece with his conciliatory statements about Dr. Burns, well received in Wall Street, and his go-slow statements about reducing unemployment, badly received by organized labor. The most confident predictions out of the Carter camp call for a businessman rather than an economist to be named Secretary of the Treasury.

Other Editors Say The Worm Turneth

(Gastonia Gazette)

Just about every survey you read that has anything to do with the South indicates that it has already happened — that the South has risen again.

Or, if it hasn't risen completely, better step back, laddie, or be caught in the updraft.

Luther H. Hodges, Jr., son of a former state governor and now chairman of the board of the North Carolina National Bank in Charlotte, certainly had similar thoughts when he addressed a conference of the Southern Industrial Council in Nashville, Tenn., recently.

What he was referring to specifically was to labor-intensive industries, like textiles and apparel. Part of the South's rise, he indicated, will be in the fact that such industries either must modernize, take advantage of new technology, or "they will be forced to look for still cheaper pools of labor—probably outside the South—or raise prices at the obvious risk of being priced out of the market by foreign imports."

The labor-intensive, low-pay mills served a purpose, Hodges said. They provided jobs at entry level during the big migration from farm to town. But he went on, "We simply must recognize that the South has outlived the days in which it could recruit cheap, unskilled labor from the farms."

In sum, Hodges said, the supply of cheap, rural labor is shrinking; there is competition workers, and competition means gradual raising of wages...

People are moving to the South because they have the word that this is "where it's at." That means that new jobs are going to be needed and that unless new industry comes in to bring new jobs the result will be a job shortage.

And that, in turn, would mean a rapid out-migration of the talented people as well as a mounting unemployment rate.

The South has been sitting down here for years as though it were only a mythical land of morning glory and mint julep, more to be joked and sung about than to be taken seriously.

The worm turneth.

Resembles Challenge Of 1960

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The challenge to the administration of Jimmy Carter is becoming by the day more like that which faced John F. Kennedy in 1960: Get the economy moving again.

Both men inherited economies that were operating below their potential. Both men were encouraged almost immediately to boost the economy by means of a tax cut.

Whether the resemblance continues will depend upon several factors over which the president-elect has far less control than he might wish to have.

He does not, for example, control Arthur F. Burns, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. And he does not control public opinion and confidence, which he must have on his side if his economic measures are to be effective.

Burns, who has almost autocratic independence in shaping the country's monetary policy, has thrown up a series of confusing signals in recent days that leave in question his attitude toward a tax cut.

He has, at different times, indicated he was against a reduction in federal income taxes, that he wasn't necessarily opposed to a cut, that discussion of the subject was premature, and that his mind remains open.

Burns could challenge the president-elect's goals by refusing to adjust monetary policy — that is, the money supply and interest rates — to the fiscal — or spending and taxing — policy of the administration.

The potential for such a conflict exists, because Burns has repeatedly indicated that in his view the major problem is inflation, while Carter seems to be more concerned with unemployment.

Conservative economists long have feared those elected officials who seek quickly to correct serious unemployment. As they see it, short-range corrections almost always lead to inflation, and perhaps worse recession too.

The president-elect is confronted with an entirely different consideration that also might challenge his efforts to return momentum to the economy. That is, his ability to restore confidence.

In an economic context, confidence is expressed in spending. People who are uncertain of the future do not commit themselves to it; they are more inclined to save, to conserve, than to spend and expand.

Throughout 1976 President Ford failed to inspire a great deal of confidence in the future — that is, if one is to judge by the spending habits of individuals and businesses.

If Carter cannot do better, therefore, there exists the possibility that a tax cut, if enacted, might provide funds to families and business that would end up in the bank rather than being used directly to buy goods in the market place.

These, then, are two distinct challenges to Carter's efforts to get the economy moving again, and both involve his personal qualities of persuasiveness and leadership.

If he can convince the chairman of the Fed and the people who elected him that he knows what he's about, then the odds would seem to indicate success for his economic program.

TOO MUCH PRAISE

The medieval artist, Donatello, originally lived in Florence and was relatively unknown. But when commissioned to do some work in Pisa he produced some sculpture which brought him widespread acclaim.

Donatello was a wise man as well as an artist. He knew that his work did not measure up to his reputation, and he was afraid that in an atmosphere of adulation he would grow vain and lazy and his output would deteriorate in quality. So he returned to Florence where competition was sharper and where nothing but his best work could receive recognition.

Our Lord warned us to beware when all men speak well of us. We all seek approval, support, and praise for our efforts, but in the long run that may not be what we need. We may resent criticism and think it unfair, but this criticism may be exactly what we need in order to bring forth our best efforts.

The fact that Donatello is remembered today is in part due to the attitude that citizens of Florence took toward him.

Marxist Regime Brzezinski Top Candidate For Post Will Enter UN

By SERGE SCHMEMANN
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Angola's Marxist regime is entering the United Nations following withdrawal of the American veto that blocked the new African nation five months ago.

Ambassador William W. Scranton told the Security Council that the United States decided not to veto Angola's application for membership again Monday "out of respect for the sentiments expressed by our African friends."

However, he said the United States was abstaining from the council vote on the Angolan application because of the continuing presence in the country of large "Cuban occupation forces."

U.S. diplomats said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger changed course in the hope that the Angolans would influence black Rhodesian leaders to be more amenable to compromise at the Geneva negotiations to arrange the transition to black majority rule in Rhodesia. Angola is one of the five so-called "front-line" black African states that are believed to have influence with the black Rhodesians.

The council voted 13-0 to recommend that the General Assembly vote the former Portuguese colony into the world organization. Assembly approval of the recommendation is certain.

China did not participate in the vote to express its disapproval of Soviet involvement in Angola.

The United States vetoed the Angolan application on June 23 to protest the continuing presence in the country of the estimated 12,000-15,000 Cuban troops who helped Agostinho Neto's Popular Movement, the MPLA, defeat two nationalist factions backed by the United States and South Africa after Portugal gave the African colony independence a year ago.

Cuban Ambassador Ricardo Alarcon de Quesada repeated his government's position that its troops are in Angola "as the consequence of the sovereign decision of the People's Republic of Angola."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Of Jimmy Carter's many foreign policy advisers, the one virtually assured of a top job in the new administration is a university professor whose accent and scholarly demeanor invite comparisons with Henry Kissinger.

There is no indication that Carter has made up his mind, but professor Zbigniew Brzezinski of Columbia University is regarded by Carter associates as a possible candidate for the post of National Security Council chief.

It was from that power base that Kissinger became the dominant figure in U.S. foreign policy during the Nixon years, even before he became secretary of state in 1973.

A State Department source said Brzezinski expressed interest in the NSC job while on a visit to Israel several months ago.

Reached by telephone Monday, Brzezinski declined comment on his relationship with Carter except to say that the news media had exaggerated his influence on the President-elect's campaign.

As for his future plans, he said, "This is not the time for interviews."

Carter apparently was impressed by Brzezinski's foreign policy insights offered during the political campaign. He has announced publicly he wants Brzezinski in his administration.

Kissinger and Brzezinski have much in common. Kissinger was born in Germany, Brzezinski in Poland, and both retain the accents of their European heritage. Both did graduate work at Harvard University and attracted attention through their work there and through frequent contributions to scholarly journals. Brzezinski is 48, just three years older than Kissinger was when he joined Nixon's inner circle in 1969.

But from their public statements, both Carter and Brzezinski believe that the flamboyant Kissinger approach to diplomacy should be replaced by a more conventional style. In an article written two years ago, Brzezinski said, "What is needed is a major architectural effort rather than an acrobatic foreign policy."

Since his election, Carter has said he will not allow his national security adviser to encroach on the authority of his secretary of state.

Skeptics recall, however, that Kissinger himself said when he became NSC chief that he would engage principally in long range planning, leaving the conduct of policy to the State Department.

As it turned out, Kissinger seized effective control over the most important decisions, such as the Vietnam negotiations and the overtures to China, while Secretary of State William P. Rogers, was often kept in the dark. Kissinger served jointly as NSC chief and secretary of state from 1973 until last year, when former Air Force Gen. Brent Scowcroft took the NSC job.

One source familiar with Carter's thinking said the new NSC chief under Carter probably will not be nearly as powerful as Kissinger nor as low-profile as the incumbent, Scowcroft.

The source envisions a restoration of the type of NSC role filled by McGeorge Bundy, who served in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

trading restrictions following a run on the banks last Friday by people buying dollars. The run was the result of widespread rumors of a political crisis and another devaluation of the peso. President Luis Echeverria is to be succeeded Dec. 1 by Jose Lopez Portillo, another member of the Institutional Revolutionary party.

The Echeverria government had hoped the original devaluation on Sept. 1 would bolster the tourism industry and spur exports by lowering the cost of Mexican goods abroad. But the erosion of the peso has meant rapid new inflation for Mexicans and there has been a steady flight of capital out of the country.

were knocked off in this month's election. Republican moderates, by contrast, such as Weicker in Connecticut, Chafee in Rhode Island, and Heinz in Pennsylvania, did well. Why should it be imagined that a solidly conservative Republican Party is what the people want?

One answer to that inquiry is that very nearly half of the potentially eligible voters didn't bother to vote on November 2. We know very little about why this enormous number of prospective voters, numbering perhaps 75 million, declined to go to the polls. One plausible explanation is that many of them perceived no significant choice between the two major parties.

Few observers question the solidly liberal credentials of the Democratic Party. The Democrats do indeed have an image. Manifestly, the Democrats are the party of Big Government and of Big Labor; theirs is the party of social welfare, of massive public spending, of more expansive regulation. Save for a few of the old Southern warhorses, such as Stennis of Mississippi, most Democrats in high office sail comfortably on a liberal-liberal-moderate course.

The public opinion polls suggest that a vast reservoir of latent conservative thought remains to be tapped. Many economic conservatives and social conservatives are hanging back, perhaps because they do not perceive the present Republican Party as a lively means toward desired political ends. It is further observed that when attractive conservative Republicans do wage effective campaigns, they win: Schmitt in New Mexico, Wallop in Wyoming, Hatch in Utah.

An out-and-out conservative coup would have to be carried off with as few wounded feelings as possible. In its present precarious condition, the GOP cannot afford to purge the Javits-Brooke-Mathias wing of the party. But conservative leaders can get to work — now — to name a distinguished conservative as national chairman, and to begin the hard fight for gains in 1978. If he would make himself available, Ronald Reagan is the obvious choice for the job.

If Janeway is correct about the President-elect's desire to conciliate Congress and business, advice from such esteemed economists as Dr. Walter Heller for a one-shot tax rebate early in 1977 might well be spurned. That formula is not popular with business, and Carter is finding surprisingly widespread coolness, bipartisan and across the ideological spectrum, in Congress.

Jimmy Carter is no Democratic replica of Andrew Mellon, William Simon or even Gerald Ford. But his conciliatory tone, especially in drawing back from controls, is music to the ears of panicky businessmen who thought they heard the tumbrels as election returns came in Nov. 2. That in itself is a constructive economic step by the President-elect two months from inauguration day.

On March 31, 1968, President Johnson announced he would not seek or accept the Democratic party nomination for another term.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market turned downward today, pausing to study the oil-price outlook.

Trading was moderate. The 11:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 4.82 at 951.05.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about an 8-7 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Ten Arab oil ministers met today today in Kuwait in a strategy session before a scheduled Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting next month to decide on any oil price increase.

News reports from the meeting indicated a debate, as expected, between the more militant nations favoring a substantial increase—Iraq calling for a 25 per cent boost—and others urging a more moderate approach.

With that question facing the market, and the Dow having risen more than 28 points since the start of last week, traders evidently decided the time was ripe for some profit-taking and short-selling.

Among international oil issues, Exxon lost 1/2 to 50%; Texaco was down 1/4 at 26 1/2; and Gulf Oil slipped 1/4 to 27 1/2.

American Home Products topped the active list, down 1/4 at 30 1/2.

The Big Board's composite common-stock index gave up .20 to 54.77 in the first hour.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .06 at 100.18.

Baez Going To End Violence

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Folksinger Joan Baez says she's going to Belfast to help try to end the violence in Northern Ireland.

"It's a cause that's tailor-made for beliefs I've had since I was 9 or 10 years old," the 34-year-old pacifist told a news conference Monday. "I expect to have a very good time there and to be very frightened."

Miss Baez said she will leave today for two weeks of rallies and marching at the invitation of the Peace People of Ireland, a nonviolent movement organized by Protestant and Catholic women.

RECOVERS FROM FLU

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A Missouri man who had not received a swine flu inoculation has recovered from the first confirmed case of the disease since a Fort Dix, N.J. soldier died of it nine months ago, officials say.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is the text of President Ford's proclamation designating Nov. 25 as Thanksgiving Day:

Traditionally, Americans have set aside a special day to express their gratitude to the Almighty for the blessings of liberty, peace and plenty that have been bestowed upon a grateful nation.

The early settlers of this land possessed an unconquerable spirit and a reliance on Divine Providence that remains a part of the American character. That reliance, coupled with a belief in ourselves and a love of individual freedom, has brought this nation through two centuries of progress and kept us strong.

As we cross the threshold into our third century as a sovereign and independent nation, it is especially appropriate that we reaffirm our trust in Him and express our gratitude for the unity, freedom and renewed sense of national pride we enjoy today.

(signed) Gerald R. Ford

The Mid-East Criminal Justice Policy Committee, meeting November 16, in Williamston, approved ten resolutions concerning the commission of certain crimes, mandatory sentences for specific crimes and law enforcement procedures.

Resolution I advocated an increased penalty for armed robbery; resolution II, involving an increased penalty for breaking and entering; and resolution III, called for reinstatement of the death penalty in North Carolina. These three resolutions were approved by the North Carolina Sheriff's Association, earlier this fall.

These three resolutions were recommended by a legislative committee, composed of three Criminal Justice Policy committee members, for approval by the entire committee. Included in the resolutions package were seven additional resolutions, advocated by the legislative committee and drafted by Tri-County (Bertie, Hertford, Martin) Legal Advisor, Rosbon D. B. Whedbee.

Let us make this Thanksgiving a truly special one. In witness thereof, I have here unto set my hand this twenty-fifth day of October, in the year of our Lord, Nineteen Hundred Seventy-six, and of the independence of the United States of America the 201st.

$21,000 To Help Friend

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Students at High Point Central High School have raised nearly $21,000 to defray medical expenses of a fellow student left partially paralyzed in a football game.

In a day-long rummage sale and auction Saturday, the students raised $20,800 for the benefit of 17-year-old Roger Hickson who suffered a spinal injury during the Oct. 7 Central-Dudley football game. He has been in the hospital since with much of the time spent in intensive care.

"We're still getting checks and things this morning," said Margaret Doar, faculty advisor to the student council, noting that the drive "has gone beyond expectations."

"It's the greatest thing this school has ever done," she added. "It's done so much for the student body."

"If anybody ever had any question about kids being compassionate, hard-working and caring," Saturday's benefit ought to convince them differently, said Co-Principal H. Lee Andrews.

Andrews says he expects contributions "to come trickling in for a week or so," adding up to $2,000 to the total. The money is earmarked for the youth's medical expenses not covered by insurance. Some may go to defer college expenses.

Hickson currently is at Whitaker Rehabilitation Center, undergoing treatment that doctors hope will help restore use of his body.

ACC Set To Open Annual Scramble

By KEN ALYTA
AP Sports Writer

It's that time again—BAS-KETBALL. In the Atlantic Coast Conference it means that for the next four months the four-state area from Maryland to South Carolina will be jumping several nights a week with the roar of crowds marveling at the skills of clever young men racing up and down the hardwood. And, thanks to television, they'll be doing it several Saturday and Sunday afternoons, as well.

The goal, as always, is to win the championship tournament in March after the regular season ends. The tournament winner goes on to play for the national title in the NCAA tournament, won three seasons ago by North Carolina State.

For years many critics of the ACC format have said that the 12-game regular season leader should be the champion. But the conference is not about to give up the highly profitable tournament.

The matter of the conference having so many highly ranked teams over the years and yet winning the national title only twice came up at a recent meeting of ACC coaches.

Maryland's Lefty Driesell said that either the league is "overrated or the conference tournament is causing our teams to lose in the playoffs. If we didn't have to play in that (ACC) tournament, we probably would do better in the playoffs."

Carl Tacy of Wake Forest said the ACC "is the strongest basketball conference in the country, but I would like to see our teams do better in post-season play to prove what we are saying. The ACC tournament leaves the winner emotionally and physically drained. It has worked adversely in terms of winning national championships."

Last season, Virginia was 15-11, then knocked off nationally ranked N. C. State, Maryland and North Carolina to win the tournament for the first time. That the Cavaliers lost their first NCAA test to DePaul did not dim the brilliance of their ACC achievement.

Close followers of the ACC say that North Carolina, Maryland and N. C. State won the recruiting race and will fight it out for the title. Virginia and Clemson are placed in the middle, followed by Wake Forest and Duke.

North Carolina is ranked No. 3 nationally in the AP pre-season poll; Maryland is No. 8 and N. C. State is 15th.

The North Carolina teams, for years the dominant force in the conference, start wiping each other out Friday and Saturday in the Greensboro Big Four tournament, previously held in the Christmas-New Year period. This assures only one unbeaten ACC team from North Carolina after only two nights of play.

The tournament sends Duke against Wake Forest Friday night and North Carolina against N. C. State. The winners will meet Saturday after a game between the Friday losers. Other weekend action has Virginia and Clemson hosting two-night tournaments and Maryland opening at home Saturday against Notre Dame, ranked 14th.

NORTH CAROLINA—Dean Smith starts his 16th year as Tar Heel coach with four returning starters from last season's 25-4 team. Three played for the winning U. S. Olympic team he coached. Joining Olympians Phil Ford, Walter Davis and Tom LaGarde is another veteran, backcourter John Kuester. Mike O'Koren, a 6-foot-7 freshman, one of several classy recruits, will start in the frontcourt. LaGarde probably shifting to center, a spot vacated by another former Olympian, Mitch Kupchak.

And then there's Smith. He is No. 9 on the all-time winning coaches list with a .743 record.

MARYLAND—Driesell, No. 12 on the all-time list at .732 percent, has lost two-thirds of his three-guard offense, All-American John Lucas and Mo Howard. But Brad Davis is back along with husky Olympic player Steve Sheppard, four other lettermen and prized recruits, including guard Jo Jo Hunter and 6-foot-10 Mike Davis. They should make the Terps tough in the stretch.

The schedule, which does not send them out of Maryland until Jan. 19, helps.

N. C. STATE—One more Olympian, Kenny Carr, top ACC scorer last season, heads Norman Sloan's Wolfpack cast. He has five other lettermen, including 7-foot-11 Glenn Sudhop, but Sloan has some sharp newcomers and says four could start.

Top additions include guards Clyde "The Glide" Austin and Brian Walker and forwards Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney and Tony Warren.

Sloan says the recruits "could improve our team by as much as 40 per cent. We should be a lot quicker, faster and have better outside shooting."

VIRGINIA—Scoring machine Wally Walker has graduated, but Terry Holland has nine veterans, only two seniors. Guard starter Dave Koesters is benched academically until January. Marc Iavaroni leads the front line and Billy Langloh the backcourt.

The ACC tournament sweep should be a confidence builder.

CLEMSON—Bill Foster has 7-foot-11 senior Wayne "Tree" Rollins, last year's top Tiger scorer and rebounder, and eight other veterans.

Foster says Rollins is "the ultimate difference in us being good or great."

WAKE FOREST—Skip Brown, Rod Griffin and Jerry Schellenberg, last season's top three scorers, are back from the team that once was ranked fifth, but slipped to 17-10.

Sophomore Larry Harrison must develop rapidly or, as Tacy says, "We'll be a runt team."

DUKE—The other Bill Foster has eight lettermen from last season's 13-14 team which lost seven by three points or less. Sharpshooting Olympic guard Tate Armstrong and forward Jim Spanarkel, last season's ACC rookie of the year, return.

Freshman Mike Gminski, 6-foot-11 and 245 pounds, averaged 40.7 points and 20 rebounds in high school at Monroe, Conn.

Return Of All Five Starters Will Give Roanoke Girls Boost

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Roanoke High School's girls' basketball team is bound to be on the way up. Although the Squaws finished fifth in the Eastern Plains Conference with a 7-13 record last year, all of their starters are returning.

In fact, according to Coach Phil Griffin, there is only one senior on the squad and she is not a starter.

Returning for Roanoke are center Sharon Jones, forwards Yvette Modica and Barbara Bullock and guards Dee Stanley and Carolyn Duggins. Four other lettermen will also be back.

Griffin said there are no real standouts on the team, but all the girls excel in at least one area. "Bullock and Stanley are our two most productive for scoring, Jones and Modica are our top rebounders and Duggins is our best ball-handler and defensive player."

"We have a very well-balanced team — all the players can lead the team in scoring, in fact, all of them did last year in at least one game."

The "sixth man" on the team will be senior Phyllis McNeil, a guard. In addition, Gwen Best may be able to break into the starting lineup, Griffin said.

The Squaws will run a 1-3-1 offense primarily, according to Griffin, with plenty of movement on the inside. Against a man-to-man defense, they may open up the middle for a one-on-one driving offense.

Defensively, Roanoke ran a 2-1-2 defense last year with plenty of pressing. The pressing will remain, but a switch is planned to a 1-3-1 defense this year. "We want to be more versatile since we have more experience this year," Griffin said.

In addition to the top six players, Griffin said Lena Jackson, a center, and Mary Langley, a swing player, are expected to help the team greatly. Two sophomores, Lilly Bryant and Surfield Jones are also expected to help the team when they gain experience.

Although he is not making any fantastic predictions for the team, Griffin says the Squaws "expect to win more than we lose."

"This group has the attitude of being a winning group. I can't predict anything beyond that. The girls have been working hard so far and we are looking forward to the season."

Heads Fall As Grid Coaches Leave Jobs

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Tennessee Vols lost the game, then lost the Battle.

Dismayed by Tennessee's football impotence and under attack from fans and alumni, Bill Battle decided Monday that he would not return as coach next year.

Battle, whose team has fallen from the national rankings with progressively deteriorating records over the last few years, reached the end of his rope with a 7-0 loss to Southeastern Conference rival Kentucky Saturday.

It was the first time the Wildcats had beaten the Vols in 12 years and the first shutout of a Tennessee team since 1974. The loss dropped Tennessee's season record to 5-5, including a 1-4 SEC mark, Battle's worst work in seven years at the helm.

Battle, the youngest coach in the nation when he took over Tennessee at the age of 28, has compiled a 58-22-2 record with the Vols, but never won a SEC title.

Announcing that the 34-year-old Battle would not complete the last year of his contract in 1977, Athletic Director Bob Woodruff said he would not contact any prospective coaches until after the last game of the season Saturday against Vanderbilt.

After a closed practice with his team, Battle said he would not comment on the resignation until Sunday.

Two other coaches left school by their own design and two more were given no choice Monday when University of Toledo's Jack Murphy resigned, Bowling Green's Don Nehlen quit, Bob Blackman was fired by Illinois and Larry Naviaux was dismissed by Connecticut.

The 43-year-old Murphy told his football players that he had a "strong desire" to continue coaching, but not at Toledo. The Rockets finished the season with a 3-8 record and had a modest 35-32 mark over-all under Murphy since 1971.

Nehlen, citing "a wave of negativism" on campus and in the community, resigned at the conclusion of Bowling Green's football banquet. Nehlen, 41, compiled a 53-35-4 record during nine seasons at his alma mater, including a 6-5 mark this year.

Illinois fired Blackman in the wake of "a genuine search for a person that can get us to the top of the Big Ten." Blackman, 58, left a highly successful career at Dartmouth in 1970 to replace Coach Jim Valek at Illinois and compiled a 29-36-1 record in six years.

Naviaux, a former College Division Coach of the Year at Boston University, was fired after a 2-9 season in his fourth year at Connecticut. In making the announcement, Athletic Director John Toner said, "This is a management decision. It is a difficult one to reach, but it is one we are compelled to reach at this time."

While four coaches were leaving their jobs, another seemed to be on his way out — Missouri's Al Onofrio. Missouri Athletic Director Mel Sheehan said Monday that arrangements were being made to discuss the fate of the football staff.

Onofrio's future was in doubt Saturday after the Tigers were upset 41-14 by Kansas, completing a bizarre 6-5 season that included upset victories over Nebraska, Ohio State and Southern Cal.

Psychology In The Dunk Shot

By The Associated Press

"A dunk might turn a game around. When I see somebody do it, it hypes me up," says North Carolina center Tom LaGarde, one of several Atlantic Coast Conference big men happy about the return of basketball's crowd-pleaser, the "dunk" shot.

A showy maneuver in which a player rams the ball through the hoop from close range, the dunk had been outlawed in college ranks for eight seasons. Its proponents often argued that it was banned to stop one man who dominated college basketball for three years — Lew Alcindor of UCLA.

It has been polished and refined just about everywhere else, from playgrounds to the professional ranks, by such artful practitioners as Julius "Dr. J" Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers and David Thompson of the Denver Nuggets.

Now that the dunk has been resurrected at the requests of coaches, the ACC abounds with players capable of putting it to optimum use, including 7-foot-1 Wayne "Tree" Rollins of Clemson.

"I don't see how anyone can stop him," said Marc Lavaroni, a 6-foot-8 Virginia forward. "He has the ability to dunk every time. I'll only do it when I know I can."

"It'll help psychologically more than any other way," offered Kenny Carr, 15th-ranked North Carolina State's 6-foot-8 forward. "Everybody feels bad getting dunked on in front of 15,000 people. If somebody takes it to the hole and dunks on me, I'd rather he score 30 from outside than dunk on me again."

"Perhaps I'll go stronger to the basket because of the dunk," said LaGarde, who is being counted on to replace Mitch Kupchak in the third-ranked Tar Heels' lineup. But he added the dunk may also cause him to draw more charging fouls.

Ali Promises Match To George Foreman

HOUSTON (AP) — The on-again, off-again retirement of heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali might just be off again, if some of the hints dropped during a noisy run-in with ex-champion George Foreman are to be taken seriously.

As television cameras whirred and newsmen wrote down his every word, Ali confronted Foreman in a raucous shouting match at the Sam Houston Coliseum Monday, after the former champion came to watch Ali work on "The Greatest," his film biography.

It was vintage Ali, a scene which seems to recur whenever he hits the spotlight and which has become so familiar to Ali watchers, who repeatedly have seen him tantalize the sports world with teasing statements. "You never heard me say I was going to retire," Ali told some 200 newsmen, movie extras and assorted hangers-on in the circus-like atmosphere of the movie set. "You heard reports out of Turkey, but you didn't hear me say I was going to retire."

Then he added, "Foreman is hungry. He's desperate. Foreman will get a whuppin' in due time."

And who would administer such a whuppin', if not Ali?

The notion that he might take on Foreman again followed published reports that Madison Square Garden in New York was negotiating for a fight between Ali and Duane Bobick, to be held in February. Reports also have been circulating of Ali rematches against Jimmy Young and Ken Norton.

All this comes less than two months after Ali announced his retirement from the ring. Despite his denials Monday, Ali stated flatly on Oct. 1 in Istanbul, Turkey, that he would not fight again.

"As of now, I am quitting boxing and will devote all my energy to the propagation of the Muslim faith," Ali told a crowd of newsmen and photographers at that time. "Mark my words and play what I say right now fully," he said. "I declare that I am quitting fighting as of now."

Some observers who have followed the Ali odyssey have speculated that he never really wanted to retire, and did so only at the urging of Muslim leaders. His behavior in Monday's impromptu scene would seem to support the belief that his heart still is in the ring.

The incident started when someone told Ali that "George" had arrived.

"George who?" Ali asked in mock ignorance.

Foreman was hoisted into a ring which had been set up for the filming session. He began to badger the champ, challenging him to a rematch. Naturally, Ali began to shout back.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV. 24, 1976

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day finds many opportunities in effect, so take full advantage. Later you are able to get together with key persons and come to a complete understanding of your joint ventures.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be more positive in going after your aims. A charming person does you a big favor and you can see the path ahead more clearly.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Know what your true aims are and how best to attain them, and with speed and accuracy. Follow your hunches since they are precise now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Because of a favor from a close tie you are able to help make others happy. Make sure you pay any debts you have incurred.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) First help one of whom you are most fond, then get busy at own duties you have assumed. Don't be late for an appointment.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your daily routines and find a better way of handling them. Look about for new clothing that will improve your appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan early for the amusement you want to have and it will go more smoothly later. Take no chances with your reputation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make the repairs to your home that will add to its value and comfort. Plan new activities that will give you more abundance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can make considerable progress by communicating with others early in the day. Be clever with money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Financial affairs should be arranged more intelligently today. Study your surroundings and make some improvements.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take steps to improve your health and appearance, and you can accomplish more and become more popular.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show more thoughtfulness for the one you love and get good results thereby. Follow your intuition at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Ideal day to enjoy the company of congenials and to listen to their advice where personal aims are concerned. Relax tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can easily become a success at whatever is of a practical and sensible nature. A natural propensity here for sports, but teach to think objectively for best results. Don't neglect religious training early in life.

N—Noon M—Midnight

By The Associated Press

A large mound of cold air covered much of the north central and southern sections of the country this morning. The cold air began drifting eastward today and will be centered over the Carolinas by Wednesday night.

Cold, dry air will maintain clear skies today and tonight. Highs today were in the 30s and 40s in the mountains, 40s over the Piedmont and low 50s along the Outer Banks and south coast.

Tonight, lows will quickly fall into the teens in the mountains and 20s and 30s for the rest of the state. Winds will be generally light and from the west, but a little brisker along the coast. Wednesday, some moisture will begin to flow over the mountains and western Piedmont.

Under a more southwesterly flow of air, cloudiness will increase in the western sections, but mostly sunny skies will prevail in the east. It will be a little warmer with highs reaching more into the 50s and 40s in the mountains.

For Thanksgiving, sunny skies will give way to cloudiness. Rain may begin in the western sections of the state Friday and across the state by Saturday.

It will be warmer with highs in the 60s with 50s in the mountains. Lows will be in the 30s with 40s along the coast.

Scouts Make Holiday Gifts

Two Girl Scout troops in Greenville have completed philanthropic projects for the holiday season.

Maureen Garrison's Brownie Troop and the Jr. Girl Scout Troop No. 115 have made 100 napkin rings which will be placed on the trays of the bedridden patients at the Greenville Nursing Villa on Thanksgiving Day.

Girl Scout Troop No. 115 has also made animal banks to be given to the orphan children, ages three to seven years old, at Mount Mission School in Grundy, Va. Girl Scout Troop No. 115 and Mount Mission School are supported by Mount Pleasant Christian Church.

PREDICT TOLL

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — The North Carolina State Motor Club has predicted that 20 persons will die on the state's highways before the end of the Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

Vaccine May Go To Waste

RALEIGH (AP) — Many North Carolina counties are falling far behind in administering swine flu vaccine, says Dr. J.N. MacCormack, the state's chief communicable disease officer.

He warned Monday that more than 3.4 million doses of the vaccine allotted to the state could go to waste "unless a substantial effort is put forth during the next few weeks to motivate the public to get flu shots."

Although several of the state's larger counties are holding mass immunization clinics this month, 42 counties had held no mass clinics through the end of October, MacCormack said.

He added the smaller counties "are having the most problems."

The state plans to purchase newspaper and radio advertising, he said, to announce local clinics and urge public participation in the swine flu program.

MacCormack noted that some county health departments and medical societies were not extending enthusiastic support to the program.

It is possible, he said, that no more than 1.5 million shots will be given in North Carolina this flu season.

Through the last of October, 255,800 shots had been given statewide. MacCormack estimated that the figure would reach 750,000 by the end of November.

He said 87,790 shots were given last week.

Local Break-In Is Investigated

Greenville Police are investigating a break-in at the Merritt-Holland Co. building at 405 East 14th St. last night.

Chief Glenn Cannon, who reported the break-in was discovered at 12:15 a.m. today, said entrance to the building was gained through a side window. Reported taken was $5 from a cash drawer and $5 from a drink machine.

Damage to the window was estimated at $25.

Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♣.

Life imitates art, wrote Oscar Wilde. It is for this reason that we were surprised when an experienced declarer failed at his four spade contract in a recent rubber bridge game, for the hand could easily come from our collection of lesson hands.

Though he had the strength for an opening one no trump bid, South chose to open one spade because of his five-card suit and weak doubleton. With so many of his values represented by queens and jacks, North might have contented himself with a simple raise, which could have led the pair to a superior contract of three no trump. His jump raise, however, gave his partner no room to explore, so South continued on to the obvious game.

Our declarer won the opening club lead in dummy and took the trump finesse. After drawing trumps, ending in his hand, declarer seemed overwhelmed by the success of his spade finesse, so he tried the diamond finesse. The ten was covered by the jack and queen and won by the king. A diamond return forced declarer to open the heart suit, and the defenders did not err. They collected the three heart tricks now due them for a one-trick set.

Declarer should have realized that he was tempting fate when he tried for a second winning finesse. This was especially true since, after picking up the trumps, he could have claimed the contract regardless of who held the king of diamonds!

Once the trumps were drawn, declarer should have cashed the ace-king of clubs, discarding a diamond from dummy. Now he should have presented the defenders with a possible gift of the king of diamonds by cashing the ace and exiting with the queen. It would not matter which defender won the king—he would have a choice of losing plays.

If the defenders had to lead hearts, they could get no more than two tricks in the suit. But a minor-suit return would have been no better. Declarer would discard a heart from his hand while ruffing in dummy, and again the defenders would score no more than two heart tricks to go with their diamond trick.

Marlboro Lights

The spirit of Marlboro in a low tar cigarette.

Lighter in taste. Lower in tar.
And still offers up the same quality that has made Marlboro famous.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined
That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

13 mg. "tar," 0.8 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Apr. 76
