Turkey Hit By Quake

By EMEL ANIL, Associated Press Writer
ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Relief workers battled a snowstorm today to bring supplies into mountainous eastern Turkey for survivors of an earthquake that destroyed 109 villages. Officials say more than 3,000 persons were killed and thousands of others injured.

"There is no electricity. It's snowing and the temperature is minus 11 (Centigrade, or 12 degrees above zero Fahrenheit)," said Burhan Yavuz Yilmaz, deputy governor of stricken Van Province. "We are rushing tents and bread."

The government mobilized soldiers and sent tents, blankets, food and medical supplies by plane and special train to the rugged area hit by the tremor, the strongest to hit this quake-prone area in 37 years.

Officials said 2,063 persons were killed in the town of Muradiye and surrounding villages, near the Iranian border, with 1,179 injured in the town itself, according to the state radio. Muradiye is listed as having a population of only 1,600. Officials said the quake toppled 95 per cent of the buildings in Muradiye, an agricultural community about 900 miles east of Istanbul.

In the nearby village of Alikerm, there were only two survivors out of 70 families, the radio said.

There was eight inches of snow on the ground in the area and at least 10 villages were still isolated, with no reports on casualties or damage available, officials said.

The quake and subsequent tremors also were felt in Soviet Armenia and in northwest Iran. No reports of casualties or damage were received from the Soviet Union. But officials of the Red Lion and Sun, the Iranian equivalent of the Red Cross, said five persons were killed near the Turkish border. Iranian newspapers estimated 21 dead and many more injured.

Turkey's Red Crescent Society, the Moslem equivalent of the Red Cross, made urgent appeals for blood donations and warm clothing.

Snow fell over most of the area as rescuers dug through the rubble of houses made of mud and sun-dried brick that crumbled easily as the earth shifted.

Authorities said the quake cut electric power and downed telephone lines, making communications with the devastated areas impossible. Even first aid was difficult to provide in some villages accessible only by dirt roads.

"Because of these reasons, we have problems receiving firm information from the villages and dispatching relief teams," Turkish radio quoted Yilmaz as saying.

The quake was the strongest recorded in Turkey since one in Erzincan that killed about 30,000 persons in 1939. It hit in a rugged mountain area near the towns of Ercis, Muradiye and Caldiran between Lake Van Golu and Mt. Ararat, where Noah's Ark reputedly came to rest after the Great Flood.

Kandilli Observatory in Istanbul said the quake registered 7.6 on the Richter Scale. The first jolt came at 2:25 p.m. and lasted 14 seconds. Tremors followed at half-hour intervals over a two-hour period, the observatory said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. A reading of 7 indicates a quake capable of causing widespread, heavy damage. A tremor registering 8 on the scale is considered a "great" quake capable of tremendous damage.

The earthquake in Guatemala that claimed 23,000 lives earlier this year registered 7.5 and one in China last July that reportedly killed tens of thousands was recorded at 8.2 Richter.

Today's Dinner

TURKEYS, TURKEYS, AND MORE TURKEYS — Trying to choose the right turkey to dress up one's Thanksgiving table can be problems, especially when there are so many weights, and sizes. Most Are Celebrating Day Of Thanksgiving

By MARC CHARNEY, Associated Press Writer

On this public day of Thanksgiving, most Americans are celebrating in private — visiting relatives, feasting on turkey, watching football and gaudy parades on television.

President Ford and President-elect Jimmy Carter, like tens of millions, were with their families for the traditional feast.

Ford and his family, with some friends, were at Camp David, Md. Carter's press staff said Mrs. Carter would roast the family turkey in Plains, Ga.

Ford, in a holiday proclamation earlier in the week, referred to the year of the nation's Bicentennial and said this Thanksgiving should be dedicated to national integrity.

"Let us set a standard of honor, justice and charity against which all the years of our third century may be measured," he said.

Besides the annual array of football games, the Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade in New York City was once more to be telecast nationally, bringing a view of floats, bands and fantasy-inspired balloons into millions of homes.

And in a 5,000-seat auditorium in San Francisco — at $25 a ticket — a concert known as "The Last Waltz" was to take place tonight. It was to be the last public appearance by The Band, a group that has been at the center of the action in rock since the late 1960s. The group will continue to record.

Millions spent at least part of the day traveling. Miami's international airport predicted a 10 per cent increase over last year's travel. The National Safety Council said 450 to 550 persons would die on highways over the four-day holiday weekend.

But the predicted death toll is no greater than for a nonholiday four-day weekend. The record fatality toll for the Thanksgiving period was in 1968, when 764 died. Last year, the toll was 403.

In New York City, the price of a holiday dinner was nothing to give thanks for — up 26 cents since last year to $7.29 for a family of four, according to the Department of Labor.

Elsewhere, though, turkey farmers complained that overproduction had kept them from benefiting.

R. H. Strickler, president of Rocco Farms in Harrisonburg, Va., estimated that farmers were losing $1.50 for each turkey sold. "We had a profitable year in 1975, and in keeping with the American way, we produced about 10 per cent more this year than last," he said.

Thanksgiving began as a New England holiday at which, in 1621, Pilgrims and Indians celebrated survival in peace in a harsh land.

This year there is special meaning for the Abnaki Indians of Vermont. On Wednesday, Gov. Thomas Salmon signed an executive order granting them formal tribal status, and Chief Walter Watson, from Quebec, declared it "one of the greatest Thanksgiving gifts that could have been given to the Indians of Vermont."

The Abnaki tribal council, representing some 1,700 descendants of the tribe, wants a return of unlimited hunting and fishing rights and hopes the new status will help the tribe get federal grants.

To many groups and individuals, today's holiday feasting inevitably pointed up the plight of the poor — and they stepped forward to help.

In San Francisco, St. Anthony's Dining Room prepared free turkey and trimmings for about 4,000 poor people. At the Colonial Park Community Center in New York's Harlem, more than 150 people, most of them elderly, were invited for home-cooked turkeys.

And in Little Rock, Ark., restaurant owner Bob McIntosh and his wife Yvonne declared that this year the guests didn't have to be poor — just lonely. They prepared five 20-pound turkeys, four country hams, and said the doors were open to anyone — "rich or poor, black or white" — who had nobody to share the holiday with.

For some, like Naomi Montijo, 16, of Los Angeles, it was a poignant Thanksgiving. A year ago today, she was shot as her family drove on her way to grandmother's house. Police say it may have been the fault of a man practice firing a rifle, but the bullet remains lodged in Naomi's brain, and without it police can prove nothing. She is paralyzed and unable to see.

And in Michigan City, Ind., the day begins 72 hours of freedom for Johnson Van Dyke Grigsby, 92, incarcerated at the Indiana State Prison for 68 years. In 1908, he was convicted of second-degree murder and his first parole last year ended when the nursing home he went to said he was having adjustment problems.

Now Sheila Ford, a 46-year-old secretary, has taken an interest. Officials hope spending the holiday with a family can test Grigsby's ability to function on the outside.

As much as it is a day to gather together, Thanksgiving is also a day to make something of a national fetish of the turkey, with room for the zany to show off.

In Seattle, the local Vegetarian Society held a "Turkey Liberation Day" pot-luck dinner Wednesday evening. There was traditional pumpkin pie — served up with vegetable chili, bean and banana tamales, zucchini stuffed with rice, vegetables and cashews, pumpkin soup, and pumpkin turnovers.

In Los Angeles, nine members of the "Life Begins at 60 and 70 Super Marathoners" were jogging on an annual 286-mile relay run to Las Vegas, Nev., hoping to break the record of 40 hours, 33 minutes they set in 1974. They are between the ages of 62 and 77.

Shut Down Plans Are Moving Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is going ahead with plans to shut down or scale down seven military bases at a projected savings of millions of dollars a month.

The decision, affecting Army and Defense Supply Agency bases in six states, will eliminate 3,858 civilian jobs, although many of the affected workers will be offered transfers to other federal employment, the Defense Department said.

Among the installations affected by Wednesday's decision is Philadelphia's Frankford Arsenal, which Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale had promised to keep open.

Pentagon spokesman Alan Woods said there was no intention to embarrass Mondale or the incoming Carter administration. But he said the closing, which was first announced two years ago, "will save the taxpayers $3 million a month."

The arsenal employs 2,337 persons.

The day before the Nov. 2 presidential election, Mondale announced in Philadelphia that if Jimmy Carter was elected President, the arsenal would be kept open. Mondale's office had no immediate comment on the Pentagon announcement.

The Pentagon, in an about-face Wednesday on another base, said it will keep open the Defense Supply Agency's clothing factory in Philadelphia, preserving 1,449 jobs.

The Pentagon said that work done at Frankford will be transferred to a new Armament Research and Development Command at Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, N.J., and the Armament Materiel Readiness Command at Rock Island Arsenal, Ill.

The Lexington Bluegrass Army Depot in Kentucky will lose about 892 employees who will be fired or transferred over the next four to six months, the Pentagon said. The cutback of the communications-electronics repair work at Lexington, designed to save about $1.5 million a month after $7.4 million is spent to complete the reorganization, will still leave 1,594 civilian jobs at the depot.

As first announced last April, the Army's Aviation Systems Command and the Troop Support Command, both in St. Louis, will also be closed and their duties incorporated into two new commands in that city. The shift will eliminate 414 civilian jobs and 10 military positions.

Support operations at Selfridge Air National Guard Base, Mich., and Stewart Sub-Post, near West Point, N.Y., will be shifted to two civilian contractors. This will mean cutting 160 civilian jobs at Selfridge and transfer of 22 military personnel now stationed there.

The Pentagon said 71 civilian employees affected by the move at Stewart probably will be offered jobs at the U.S. Military Academy, while 31 military personnel at Stewart will be reassigned.

At the same time, the Army said it plans to close Army-operated Schilling Manor housing complex in Salina, Kan.

According to the Army, Schilling Manor has been operated for nearly 11 years and served to provide housing for families of Army personnel sent to Vietnam or other overseas assignments.

Loans Said Normal

PLAINS, GA. (AP) — A spokesman for President-elect Jimmy Carter describes as "normal business practice" the $4.7 million in loans to Carter's peanut business by a bank whose president is slated for a Cabinet-level nomination.

Spokesman Rex Granum discussed the loans Wednesday, nearly six hours after announcing that Thomas Bertram (Bert) Lance, president of the National Bank of Georgia, was virtually certain to join the Carter administration — possibly as secretary of the treasury or director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Granum's office, acting in response to inquiries from reporters, issued a two-page statement Wednesday night detailing loans made by the bank to Carters Warehouse, a partnership of the President-elect, his brother, Billy, and their mother, Lillian.

Most of the debt was in the form of a revolving line of credit to allow the warehouse to pay farmers for their peanuts.

A source close to Carter said he saw no potential conflict of interest stemming from the loans so long as Lance, who was Georgia's secretary of transportation when Carter was governor, divests himself of his stock holdings in the bank before taking a federal post.

"There is virtually no doubt that Bert Lance will be going to Washington with Gov. Carter to serve in a Cabinet or Cabinet level post," Granum said.

He added that Carter has made "no final decision" on what job Lance would get, but mentioned the treasury post and the OMB directorship, both major financial positions.

Suspect Shot

CARY, N.C. (AP) — A bank robbery suspect is in critical condition after shooting himself in the head as police closed in.

The man, still unidentified, is in Rex Hospital in Raleigh.

Police Chief J.W. Boles of nearby Cary said the suspect, armed with a pistol, and wearing a ski mask and surgical gloves, robbed a teller Wednesday at a branch of the First Federal Savings & Loan in a shopping center in Cary. He got away in the teller's car. "One of our police officers had the bank in sight when the suspect drove away," Boles said. He said the getaway car was chased for about eight minutes through residential sections before it crashed into a pickup truck at an intersection.

The driver of the truck, James Narron of Selma, said he had stopped and was waiting for traffic to clear. "I saw him coming down the road with a police car chasing him. He tried to turn right but was going too fast and skidded into me. Then the police car crashed into him."

The policeman, with a gun in his hand, got out of his car on the passenger side, Narron continued. "He (the suspect) couldn't get out on the driver's side because his door was jammed into the front of my truck."

Narron said he saw suspect start to get out, but then get back in the car. "I saw the guy put a pistol to his head and shoot. The gun looked like it got hung and went off again."

The REAL Crisis Intervention Center has a rape companion program. When the center gets a call that someone has been raped, with the person's permission, a crisis intervention person and a rape companion go to be with her right away. The companion is trained to assist throughout the time when the person must deal with police, the hospital, and the courts. She will not insist that the victim report the rape, but may encourage it, REAL Director Jim Anderson said.

If the person wishes, the companion will stay through the night so as not to leave the person alone and will do anything at all to be helpful. This is a free service run through REAL'S Rape Crisis program.

Ten Good Reasons To Give Thanks

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR READERS: It's Thanksgiving again. (So soon?) A few years ago I wrote a column especially for Thanksgiving. It was so well received that I was asked to repeat it, and now it's become almost a tradition. And here it is again, with a few minor changes.

On this Thanksgiving day, take a few minutes to think about what you have to be thankful for.

How's your health? Not so good? Well, thank God you've lived this long. A lot of people haven't. You're hurting? Thousands—maybe millions—are hurting more. (Have you ever visited a veterans' hospital? Or a rehabilitation clinic for crippled children?)

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal chords to utter human sounds, walk to the breakfast table on two good legs and read the newspaper with two good eyes, praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't.

How's your pocketbook? Thin? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. In fact, one-third of the people in the world will go to bed hungry tonight.

Are you lonely? The way to have a friend is to BE one. If nobody calls you, call them. Go out of your way to do something nice for somebody. It's a sure cure for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern. Concern for honesty in government, concern for peace and concern for fair play under the law. Your country may not be a rose garden, but it also is not a patch of weeds.

Freedom rings! Look and listen. You can still worship at the church of your choice, cast a secret ballot and even criticize your government without fearing a knock on the head or a knock on the door at midnight! And if you want to live under a different system, you are free to go. There are no walls or fences—nothing to keep you here.

As a final thought, I'll repeat my Thanksgiving Prayer: O, heavenly Father: We thank Thee for food and remember the hungry.

We thank Thee for health and remember the sick.
We thank Thee for friends and remember the friendless.
We thank Thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.
May these remembrances stir us to service
That Thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen.
Have a wonderful Thanksgiving and may God bless you and yours.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A survey has just revealed that men in their 40s are found by young women to be the "most attractive of any age group." If I had known you were going to be 'in' this year," I told my husband, "I'd have cleaned you up and put you on the mantle." "Don't be testy," he said. "It's a fact of life. The mature man has always been unmercifully attractive."

"There are just a few things I would like explained about the 'mature man,'" I said, whipping out a list. "It has to do with semantics."

A man's grey hair is "distinguished."

A woman's hair that comes out of the same bottle is "washed out."

Glasses on a man make him intelligent.

Glasses on a woman make her blind.

When a man is muscular he is strong.

When a woman is muscular, she's gone to pot.

If a man doesn't talk, he's thinking.

If a woman doesn't talk, she's dumb.

When a man limps, it's an old war wound.

When a woman limps, she's getting old.

A man gets wrinkles because he earned them.

A woman gets wrinkles because she asked for them.

When a man forgets something he's preoccupied.

When a woman forgets something, she's flaky.

When a man gets crabby, it's called impatience.

When a woman gets crabby, it's called irregularities.

A man asks you to repeat something because he can't believe he heard it the first time.

A woman asks you to repeat something because she's hard of hearing.

"Those are sexist remarks," said my husband. "But I forgive you for them. After all, how many people have a real sex object taking out the garbage every night?"

"Or vice versa," I said. "My dear," he continued, "just remember that beauty is only skin deep."

I hate that remark. I mean, how far down does it have to go?

The honoree was presented white and silver corsage which complemented her formal gown of Nile green.

The refreshments table was covered with a white cloth with a lace overlay and the centerpiece was a white wedding bell. The three tiered cake was served by Mrs. Kenneth Jones and punch was poured by Miss Deborah Jones. Assisting throughout the afternoon was Mrs. Effie Jones. Arrangements of fall flowers were used and the traditional silver bells were hung throughout the reception area.

A Day To Stop Wanting More

America's Thanksgiving Day has its origins even before our nation was established. The unique day of Thanksgiving was first observed in the fall of 1621. Massachusetts Bay governor William Bradford invited the Indians of the area over for the occasion. The Pilgrims and the Indians joined in a three-day festival of recreation and feasting.

Thanksgiving Day became a permanent thing in New England and it was officially proclaimed a national holiday by President Lincoln in 1863.

Much has happened since that first Massachusetts Bay Thanksgiving. The Pilgrims were struggling to provide the food needed for the harsh winters, and the bountiful harvest was a blessing to them.

The Indians were obviously much friendlier at that time than they were in ensuing years as the white man pushed them off their lands.

Since then, of course, our nation was founded. We have fought wars and expanded our boundaries to the Pacific, often at the expense of the Indians. In modern times no one worries much about whether or not food will be available through the winters. Every one knows that it will be. Instead we worry about whether our homes are fine enough and whether we should buy bigger cars.

Still most of us know that we have more of the necessities and luxuries of life than any civilization in history. It is in deed something to be thankful for, and like the Pilgrims of 1621 today we should turn our thoughts from wanting more, and, instead give thanks for all the things that we have.

Just One More Horror Weapon Ahead

Our military authorities now believe the Soviets are experimenting with microwaves as a means to induce heart attacks and to alter behavior of diplomats and military officials.

This opinion was included in recently released papers, and followed detection of microwave bombardment of the U. S. Embassy in Moscow.

In a world which lives with nerve gases, nuclear bombs and such, a new horror weapon hardly attracts attention. This disorientation by microwaves should be regarded seriously by our government, however. We should make it clear we won't have any of it.

THIS AFTERNOON

Inaugural A 'Family Event'

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — North Carolina's biggest social event ever will take place January 8, and the word is going out far and wide, "Y'all come!"

Jim Hunt has set the tone for his inauguration: it will be warm, friendly, earthy, a family event. It will even be held on Saturday so everybody can attend.

Several rooms in the State Legislative Building are already the scene of activity as full-time staff and volunteers begin pulling together the thousands of details which will make up Inaugural Day.

And there are literally thousands of details, and the work space in Raleigh resembles a War Room: blackboards, jangling phones, maps and charts, even a couple of jackets strewn about with stars pinned to the shoulders — generals John J. Tolson and Clarence B. (Red) Shimer are on the team.

Thousands Involved
Actually, preparations are not unlike a military event, complete with split-second timing, vehicular movement, logistics, bands, and so on. Before it is over, several thousand people will have taken part in the event — from hanging bunting, sweeping streets, directing traffic, to marching in the parade.

The staff man in charge is Claude Farrell, recently retired from the North Carolina Association of Educators staff, and active in the Hunt campaign.

Why all the hectic activity, this far ahead of time? "There are so many details for just two days of activity... so many people involved — I mean thousands," Farrell said.

He hopes there will be 200,000 people on hand for the inauguration. "We want to let EVERYBODY know they're invited... you don't need an invitation," Farrell said.

Saturday will begin for the governor elect and his family with a special communion service, breakfast, and some quieter ceremonies at the Governor's Mansion.

Then events will start at noon at the Capitol Building as the governor, lieutenant governor, Council of State members are sworn into office. Members of the General Assembly, U.S. Congressional delegation, judiciary will be on hand; so will outgoing Gov. James E. Holshouser, other state governors, and possibly President James E. Carter.

The dignitaries will then move to a reviewing stand for a two-hour parade of high school, college and military bands, floats, and marchers which Farrell is intent on keeping short and fast-moving.

Big Reception
Then comes a public reception at the Governor's Mansion from about 3:30 until sometime that night. Tents will cover the lawn for shelter as people gather for that event. Again, it's wide open.

"Of course everybody's invited," says Farrell. "The mansion belongs to the people, and the governor belongs to the people." It will probably be after nine o'clock before all hands are shaken.

The day before Inauguration Day will also be filled with activity, but not of the public sort scheduled Saturday. Several social events are scheduled, highlighted by the traditional Inaugural Ball to be held at Reynolds Coliseum at N.C. State University. That event is sponsored as a fund-raiser by the Junior League, and tickets are $50.

Meanwhile, members of the Inaugural Committee, which is chaired by State Senator John T. Henley, D-Cumberland, who is president pro tem of the Senate, are reading the State Constitution, accounts of past inaugurations, and talking to the two generals, both of whom have been involved in previous events.

"The Governor wants to have a very correct inauguration, and one which will please the people of North Carolina," Farrell said.

Tell 'em Get A Warrant

Some of the pleasantest stories that come along have to do with combats between David and Goliath — especially when the combats turn out according to the book. Word comes from Albuquerque of such a struggle. David won; and Goliath is much annoyed.

Cast in the role of David, in this particular drama, is a 100 percent free and independent small business, Robert Bruce Hertzler by name. The part of Goliath, as you may have surmised, is played by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). Thanks to a three-judge federal court, Hertzler has succeeded in bringing the giant to his knees.

The case prompts a word of advice to every businessman, small or large, who objects to the visits of OSHA inspectors: Tell 'em to get a warrant! If the inspectors refuse to get a warrant, throw the bums politely out.

That is what happened on a February day in 1975, when two OSHA inspectors, John K. Parsons and Rodney Prows, approached the Sandia Die & Cartridge Company. This is a small plant, employing only five persons, engaged in the manufacture of cardboard boxes and the reloading of cartridges. The OSHA gunshoes wanted to have a look around. Donna Hertzler, president of the company, met them at the door.

"Where's your warrant?" she asked. They didn't have one. "Sorry, boys," she said; and closed the door.

The New Mexico area director for OSHA was much wroth. He went to U.S. Magistrate Robert W. McCoy, read him the law creating OSHA and obtained a warrant. Whereupon, in April, the inspectors returned. The Hertzlers, undaunted, said they would challenge the validity of the warrant. They retained counsel and got a preliminary injunction.

The mills of the law grind slowly. It wasn't until late August of this year that a three-judge federal court unanimously upheld the Hertzlers' challenge. The Fourth Amendment, said the court, demands a showing of "probable cause" before a warrant may validly issue. No such showing had been made. The warrant was therefore void.

This is at least the second such ruling against OSHA. In a Texas case, a couple of years ago, involving the Gibson's Products Company, a virtually identical decree came down. Meanwhile, however, in a Georgia case, a federal court ruled the other way; in Georgia, the authority of OSHA to enter private premises, without a warrant, was upheld.

This judicial conflict ultimately will have to be resolved at the Supreme Court level, but the reasoning in New Mexico was so cogent that defenders of personal liberty are bound to be encouraged. What the Fourth Amendment guarantees is that "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated." The amendment says that warrants may issue only upon a showing of probable cause, "particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

To operate within the plain boundaries of the Fourth Amendment would impose no unreasonable burden upon OSHA inspectors. Such a procedure would require no more than a sworn statement, presumably from some anxious employee, that a dangerous condition exists at such-and-such a plant. Thus armed with probable cause, inspectors would encounter no difficulty in obtaining valid search warrants.

Yes, this would inconvenience the bureaucracy. Yes, it would slow the inspectors down. But the slow and constitutional way is infinitely the better way. The Fourth Amendment dates from Magna Carta; it is among the most glorious provisions of the Constitution; it protects even the lowliest citizen from the hobbled intrusions of the omnipotent state.

The Department of Labor naturally will appeal the Hertzler decision. It will be many months before the constitutional issue can be finally resolved. Meanwhile, enough law has been written

Change Due To Season

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Slowly, cell by cell, a person's body is "redesigned" by extreme seasonal weather changes, says a University of Iowa professor of physiology.

40 Years Ago Today

November 25, 1936
Rescuers toiled today to save 32 persons missing in widely scattered disasters which had already accounted for 21 deaths.

From Alaska to New Orleans, a ship fire, an avalanche, chemical fumes and transportation mishaps took a heavy human toll.

A steel train ploughed into a wooden elevated rail car in Chicago last night, killing nine and injuring 65. The elevated, laden with home-bound workers, was telescoped as it awaited a dispatcher's signal.

Fire raged in the hold of the S. S. Scantic in New Orleans, holding the fate of nine men. Hope was virtually abandoned for their rescue. Four were known injured.

Fliers searched the ice-laden Gulf of Alaska for a trace of a missing air liner with 14 persons aboard. The ship was lost on a 500-mile flight from Cordova to Juneau. Recurring storms added to the peril.

Simplicio Godina lived on today, parted by death and a surgeon's knife from the Siamese twin to whom he had been joined for 28 years.

His brother, Lucio, ill with pneumonia for 10 days, died last night while Simplicio, in good health, lay beside him.

Within an hour an operation had severed the bodies linked by muscular tissue at the base of the spine.

Physicians said the living twin was in no immediate danger. They explained the operation had been in the nature of a "routine" amputation.

THE INSIDE REPORT

West German Dilemma

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

BONN — More than ever before, West Germany faces the agonizing dilemma of using its immense economic power to keep the sick men of Western Europe alive and the NATO alliance credible even though the continuing growth of that German economic power is clearly beginning to worry all the rest of Europe.

The dilemma, moreover, is compounded by a fear among some thoughtful German politicians and military men—a fear seldom publicly voiced—that a tendrill of "re-nationalism" is growing throughout Europe in the generation now moving toward top political, military and commercial power. That is the first German generation to have no personal memories of World War II.

What Bonn is now doing to keep Europe afloat is well known: a payout of some billion dollars every year to subsidize Great Britain's grocery bills (which, of course, gives an essential market to German farmers); a two-billion-dollar loan to Italy, only fractionally repaid, that abysmally failed to accomplish its purpose; a heavy share of the multi-billion-dollar loan now being readied by the International Monetary Fund for ailing Britain; lesser aid to Portugal, Turkey and soon to Spain.

Indeed, although officials don't admit it, Bonn's resistance to Turkey becoming an associate member of the Common Market rests more than anywhere else on its fear that Turkey would quickly become another outstretched hand to fill from the productive genius of the German people.

The Treaty of Rome, which helped launch Western Europe on its hopeful course to economic unity, contemplated an equal growth among all the signatories. Instead, West Germany now leads the Northern countries in a towering disparity of wealth over the Mediterranean countries (principally Italy) and Britain.

West Germany is not exactly having boom times. Yet with 4 per cent unemployment, low inflation and a growth rate of close to 6 per cent this year, it is a patch of paradise compared to Italy and Britain, where inflation rates are expected to climb to 20 per cent and 16 per cent respectively next year.

The dilemma for both West Germany and all of Western Europe over the stark difference is that Germany's largesse today could well become Germany's Achilles heel tomorrow. Nothing worries German leaders more than this growing disparity and the unavoidable effects it must have both on the poorer European states (no one loves his creditor) and on the 62 million West Germans themselves, who are beginning to wonder—still silently — why their hard-earned money is needed for foreign coffers.

Accordingly, what Bonn necessarily is doing today with its wealth and its growing power to help its neighbors is surely leading it to a pinnacle it does not covet and cannot afford to reach—the pinnacle of a Europe unable to match German efficiency, industry and singlemindedness.

The birth pangs of what one unusually astute military leader here calls "re-nationalism" may be premature, but he made this case for it: the fact that the opposition Christian Democratic Union (CDU) which won the largest vote in the October election (but not the chancellorship), has made a major public issue out of the "generals affair."

That affair climaxed in the firing of two top air force generals for a political indiscretion involving a one—

Other Editors Say Two-Way Street

(The Durham Sun)
It was a rare thing to see a judge strike out at what he called judicial activism by his colleagues on the bench and which he said has resulted in a breakdown of the criminal justice system, and a lack of concern that the guilty be punished.

That's what North Carolina Supreme Court Justice J. Frank Huskins did in an address before the State Bar in Asheville last week. He directed his criticism mostly at the U. S. Supreme Court and its subsidiary federal courts. He said concern for whether a criminal defendant is guilty or innocent has been "lost in the shuffle" of legal technicalities imposed by activist judges to the point that we are "confronted more and more by a system of criminal justice which is technically correct but practically ineffective."

The U. S. Supreme Court, said Justice Huskins, has "trivialized the Constitution" and, "by attempting to rule upon mundane minutiae," it has demeaned both itself and the Constitution.

In the area of crime, "guilt or innocence," he said, "has become almost irrelevant. The public has been exposed to the sight of the guilty, the obviously guilty, being set free by technical, judge-made rules of dubious validity."

This is true, he said, not only in the U.S. Supreme Court but among judges who preside over lower courts in the federal judicial system." He said "such episodes only confirm the public's notion that the system is not working, that it has broken down."

Justice Huskins, as do most all other people, believes that the rights of defendants and the public must be protected. But the prosecution and the public have some rights, too — something that has been forgotten or ignored in rulings by some of these activist judges Justice Huskins is talking about.

We agree with the justice that if the effectiveness of our law enforcement and criminal justice system is to be restored, some primary attention also should be given again to determining the guilt or innocence of those accused in criminal cases.

Strength For Today

MEMBERS
Apparently the first person who ever used the word "member," to designate a person who belongs to a church was the Apostle Paul. The Greek word for "member" means a limb, a part of the body, or a physical organ. In a number of passages in his epistles, Paul uses this daring word "members" to describe the people who made up the Christian congregation over which he presided.

eyes, its lips, its ears. You are the heart and brain of the church."

In the light of Paul's description we might well ask ourselves whether we are church members or whether we are just on the roll of the church. How many limbs do our churches have? How many hands, how many feet, how many eyes, lips, ears?

We might well ask ourselves whether we are limbs of the church or pieces of dead wood that cling to its trunk.

'Inheritance Factor' Watched

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP
Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — An organization of small but often successful investors is telling its membership there is plenty of money to be made in stocks these days by watching the "inheritance factor."

That component, says the National Association of Investment Clubs, operates during the battle of inflation, which has been under way since the decade began and which may consume the rest of the 1970s as well.

"As inflation rages and abates, surviving companies inherit business from companies that fail," it observes. "Some may double or triple their business in inflation periods from the inheritance factor."

Investments in these surviving companies might turn out to be especially rewarding, it notes, because the survivors can often equip their expansion from bankruptcy sales of new or used machinery.

Exploiting the inheritance factor is among a dozen tips the association offers to counter the widespread belief that stocks are poor buys when prices and interest rates are rising.

It is during this period that many small investors drop out of the market, depressed by the prevalence of bad news. But with stocks representing a commitment to the future rather than the present, these investors often miss opportunities.

The NAIC, whose own membership has been cut in half to a little more than 6,000 clubs during the inflation-recession period of the '70s, seeks to educate small investors to these overlooked opportunities.

Basic to an understanding of inflation investing, it says, is a realization that the battle to control prices and other excesses is fought in an on-again, off-again, stop-go manner.

"Inflation fighting by government is like slowing down an automobile on icy pavements. Put on the brakes. Take off the brakes before skidding badly. Repeat and repeat until inflation is slowed and stopped," it states.

"The braking period can be maintained for about one year, while taking off the brakes may last for two years or more," the association comments in a booklet devised especially for inflation investing.

Overproduction Of Turkeys Loses Money For Farmers In '76

By The Associated Press
"The turkey has more idiosyncrasies than the chicken," says R. H. Strickler, president of Rocco Farms in Harrisonburg, Va. And like many other farmers and turkey producers, Strickler is finding that the turkey is no bird of paradise this year.

Strickler said, estimating farmers are losing $1.50 for each turkey sold. "We had a profitable year in 1975," he adds, "and in keeping with the American way, we produced about 10 per cent more this year than last." In addition to overproduction, the turkey is a miserable bird to raise. It dives under the wheels of slow-moving tractors and stampedes in terror when a hawk soars overhead. They've been known to charge into an enclosed area and smother to death.

Meats Co., in Chattanooga, Tenn., noting the supply of turkeys this year is 10 to 15 per cent greater than last year says, "The price of turkeys usually goes up in November, but it hasn't this year."

"Many people really don't realize that their body does adapt to extremes in weather," Folk said in an interview.

"Think about it, after a couple of weeks of winter, your face, hands and exposed parts of your body aren't as bothered by the weather."

The same thing happens in the summer, he said.

Some animals, like the grizzly bear, the caribou and the Alaskan wolf, have bodies designed to cope with extreme cold, but humans do not.

Subtle changes brought on by plunging or rising temperatures change the human body and make it more used to colder or warmer weather within a couple of weeks, he said.

Using cold as an example, Folk said:

"The changes are mostly hormonal in nature, and as the balance changes, the fires of metabolism are stepped up and they remain elevated under the stimulus of cold."

"The blood vessels become more efficient at sending heat to the surface when it is needed."

If a person is exposed to cold weather for extended times during the day, Folk said, his basic metabolism rate will be stepped up, so he is using energy at a faster rate and needs more calories in his diet.

Folk said cold also may change a person's pain perception.

"Temperatures that were painful in October, may, late in November, be only uncomfortable," he said.

time Nazi flying ace, CDU leaders excoriated the Social Democratic (SPD) government of Helmut Schmidt for having allowed the two generals to be summarily fired.

"This shows that some of the old restraints may be coming off," we were told. "Five years ago this could not have become a political issue."

The affair may soon be forgotten, he said, but it may also be a symbol that "re-nationalism is moving across Europe, but particularly in West Germany, and I hate and fear it."

Unfortunately, the greater the economic disparity between the surging country and the rest of Europe, and the more it comes to be depended on, the greater this tendency toward re-nationalism. That is why both Schmidt and his CDU counterpart, Helmut Kohl, told us in almost the same words how much they worry about NATO becoming the cover for a bi-lateral U.S.-West German alliance, and why both look to the new administration in Washington for help to do what no nation has ever before sought help in doing: reduce the visibility of its own strength and enhance that of its competitors and neighbors.

Autopsy Kept Secret

RALEEIGH (AP) — An autopsy report on a Virginia state patrolman who was killed at a North Carolina roadblock last week will not be made public under a "gag" order issued by a superior court judge.

The order was signed Wednesday by Superior Court Judge Donald L. Smith. A press attorney, William C. Lassiter, denounced the action, saying, "The public is entitled in this case to know how its public officials, the highway patrolmen, performed."

Smith said that to disclose the autopsy report "may prejudice the rights of both the State of North Carolina and...Reuben (Sonny) Conley to a fair trial...."

Conley, 33, of Atlanta, is charged with kidnaping trooper

Garland W. Fisher, 33, in Dinwiddie County, Va., Nov. 14 and forcing him to drive his unmarked patrol car into North Carolina. A roadblock was set up by North Carolina highway patrolmen on Interstate 85 about 10 miles north of Durham. Fisher was killed and Conley wounded in a shootout at the roadblock. Results of an investigation into the shooting have not been released.

Conley was charged with murder in Granville County. He was wounded three times and is in the Central Prison hospital in Raleigh.

The gag order was obtained by Special Deputy Atty. Gen. Lester Chalmers and Granville Asst. Dist. Atty. David R. Waters. They went before Smith in his chambers.

Smith said the order is in effect "until dissolved by further order of this court, or until termination of the criminal proceedings against" Conley.

He forebade the office of Chief Medical Examiner Page Hudson from releasing the autopsy report to anyone except prosecutors, law enforcement agencies involved in the investigation and Conley or his attorney.

The state attorney general's office said in a 1974 opinion that autopsy reports are public record unless they involve a body which has been exhumed.

Lassiter, attorney for the N.C. Press Association and The (Raleigh) News and Observer, questioned how the attorney general could declare the record public on one hand and keep it from becoming public on the other. He said he has been authorized by The News and Observer to try to get the order dissolved and to file a lawsuit by Monday against Hudson to compel him to make the report public.

Driver Passenger Burned

CHEVERLY, Md. (AP) — Curtis Nichols of Conway, N. C., and another man burned to death Wednesday when their dump truck overturned and caught fire during pre-Thanksgiving rush-hour traffic.

Maryland state police said that Nichols, who was driving, did not have a driver's license. He had been staying with relatives in nearby Washington.

The other man who died was Lloyd Russell, 33, of Washington.

Police said that the third man in the truck, 57-year-old Earl Irving of Tuxedo, Md., got out and was trying to get one of the other two out when the gas tank exploded.

Irving is hospitalized with burns.

Another man, Gregory Pritchett, 21, of Glen Arden, lost control of his car when it was hit by a tire thrown from the bed of the dump truck. The car ran into a bridge abutment but Pritchett was injured only slightly. He was released from a hospital after treatment.

Prince George's County police said that traffic in the area was tied up for more than two hours after the 4:30 p.m. accident, as commuters tried to get home and begin their Thanksgiving vacations.

In 1900 two-thirds of Americans lived in rural areas. Now less than 10 per cent are considered rural.

more this year than last." In addition to overproduction, the turkey is a miserable bird to raise. It dives under the wheels of slow-moving tractors and stampedes in terror when a hawk soars overhead. They've been known to charge into an enclosed area and smother to death.

Bill Bates, owner of Bates Turkey Farm in Ft. Deposit, Ala., admits that a turkey will stand with its nose in the air during a heavy rain and drown itself.

"It's an inbred characteristic," he sighs, explaining that a chick in a rainstorm runs to its mother, snuggles under a wing, and sticks its beak into her protective feathers.

Supermarket officials note another reason for low turkey prices is overproduction by the whole meat complex and declining prices of ham and steak have lured the housewife from the turkey counter.

Bates predicts many turkey farmers will be forced out of business this year.

"They're losing money and it will break a lot of them," he said, noting that one large turkey producer, Plantation Foods of Waco, Tex., is now operating under chapter XI of the bankruptcy act.

Man Thankful To Sleep In Jail

GREENSBORO (AP) — Tommy Stevens, who had been sleeping in the woods, is living in the Guilford County Jail this Thanksgiving, and is thankful for it.

The 25-year-old man from nearby Summerfield, who has a ninth-grade education, works on tobacco farms. He was unable to find another job when the season ended.

He was jobless, penniless and sick from spending seven nights in the woods with only a thin blanket when he asked last week to be sent to jail.

Stevens says that since then he has been grateful for a roof over his head and decent food to eat. He has been given a job with the city and allowed to work during the day while sleeping at the jail at night.

"I didn't have nothing in the world. I didn't have no job, no where to go, nothing," he says. I don't like jail life. And I haven't met anybody else here who asked to come here. But I didn't have nowhere else to go."

He lived with his mother, sister, nieces and nephews until the landlord told him the house was too crowded and he had to leave.

After the nights of sleeping in the woods, Stevens went to court to ask for an immediate trial on a pending drunk driving charge.

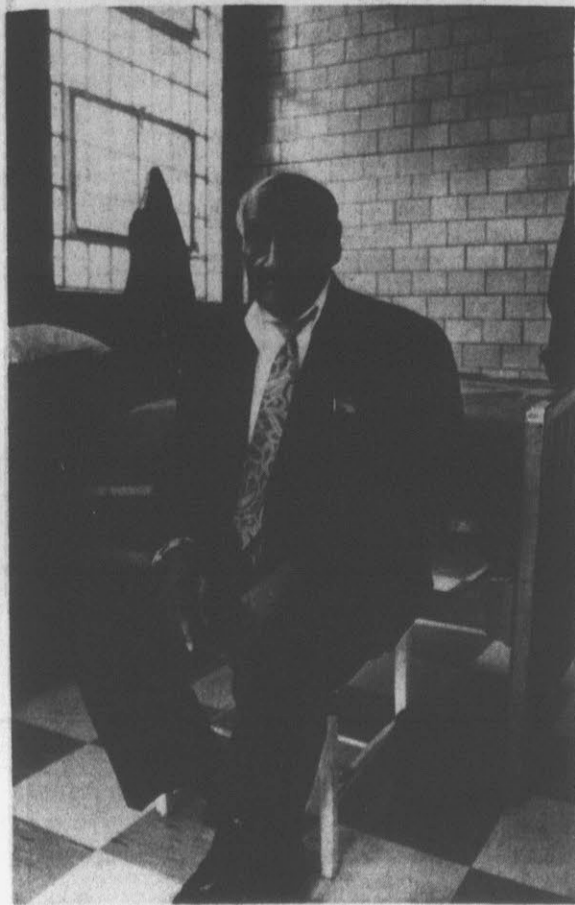

"I hated to see him go to jail, but we didn't know what else to do with him. The man had nowhere to go," said Robert Franklin, assistant county public defender. "It left a horrible taste in our mouths to do it."

Stevens was sentenced to 90 days in jail. Jailers say he's been a model prisoner with a sunny disposition. He signed up for Thanksgiving Day KP duty.

Last week, Franklin and state District Court Judge Edward Washington found Stevens a job with the city Parks and Recreation Department. Under the work-release program, Stevens sleeps in jail at night and pays the county $5 a day for his room and board. He walks three miles to his job. Franklin is looking for a bicycle for him.

"I really like my job," Stevens says. I know how hard jobs are to come by these days, and I wouldn't give mine up for nothing in the world. I ain't going to do anything to mess it up, either," he said. "You know, I never thought a lawyer and a judge would do all this for a guy like me."

A 'Free' Day

"FREE AT LAST" — FOR THE HOLIDAY — John Van Dyke Grigsby, 92, and America's record-holding longest prisoner, sits uncomfortably in black suit, white shirt and orange tie Wednesday before being released from the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City for the Thanksgiving holiday. This Thanksgiving will be the first for Grigsby since he was jailed for a December 1907 murder. Grigsby seemed to think he was leaving for good, not just dinner at the home of an Indianapolis secretary.

Cooper Indicted 'Just In Case'

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Dan Cooper, who got a $200,000 air piracy ransom five years ago but may not have successfully parachuted from the plane with the cash, has been indicted just in case he's "out there" alive.

Authorities said they sought the indictment, handed down Wednesday by a federal grand jury here, because of fear that Cooper might go free if a five-year statute of limitations expired.

The indictment, which named a fictitious "John Doe, also known as Dan Cooper," contained a second count accusing him of interstate commerce by extortion.

On Thanksgiving Eve in 1971, a hijacker calling himself Dan Cooper jumped from a Northwest Airlines 727 jet that had traveled from here to Seattle. Neither he nor the money, which was strapped to his chest beneath his business suit, has been found.

FBI agents recently have been searching an area of Clark County, Wash., where a farmer and logger found a pair of tattered, moss-stained pants this fall near the spot where Cooper is believed to have bailed out.

Jack Collins, first assistant U.S. attorney in Portland, said the indictment was sought "out of an abundance of caution. We have no present knowledge of his (Cooper's) whereabouts."

Orders to obtain the indictment came from Deputy Atty. Gen. Richard Thornburg, head of the criminal division of the Justice Department, Collins said.

The department has taken the position that there is no statute of limitations on capital crimes, and that what Cooper did was punishable by death at the time.

But a spokesman in Washington said the department wanted to avoid repetition of what occurred earlier this year when a judge threw out attempts to prosecute New Jersey Teamster leader Anthony Provenzano in a 1961 kidnap-slitting case on grounds that the statute of limitations had expired.

First reports of the skyjacking referred to the man as D.B. Cooper, but the name on his ticket read Dan Cooper.

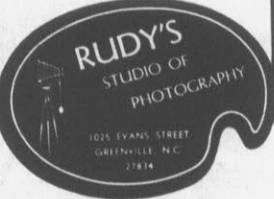

Cooper boarded the flight Nov. 24, 1971, clutching a paper bag. Soon after takeoff, he told stewardesses he had a bomb and that he wanted $200,000 in cash and four parachutes.

After other passengers got off in Seattle, the airline met Cooper's demands and the plane departed for Reno on his orders. Cooper bailed out somewhere over southwest Washington, officials said.

Authorities said extreme cold and the bad condition of the parachute made survival unlikely.

Weatherman Antoine Suspended After Telling Rape Joke On Air

By MIKE SILVERMAN Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — TV weatherman Tex Antoine, suspended for cracking an on-the-air joke about rape, said today he was "just telling the truth" when he urged women not to resist a sexual assault.

Antoine, 53, who has read the weather on WABC-TV since 1966, was suspended indefinitely by the station's management for a remark he made during Wednesday's early-evening newscast.

The incident occurred just after newscaster Bill Beutel had read a story about an 8-year-old girl who apparently narrowly escaped a rapist in the Westchester County community of Yonkers, N.Y.

"With rape so predominant in the news lately," Antoine said as he began his weather report, "Confucius once say: If rape is inevitable, relax and enjoy it." During a commercial that followed the remark, news director Ron Tindiglia called into the studio and ordered Antoine to apologize to listeners, according to Judy Torello, manager of press information for the station.

When the show resumed, Antoine said: "If I offended you with the Confucius saying, I apologize." He then finished the weather report.

Within 25 minutes, more than 665 viewers had called the station — most of them women and nearly all of them irate, Mrs. Torello said. She said the show is seen by an estimated 1 million to 1.5 million viewers.

WABC, owned by the ABC television network, later issued a statement apologizing to listeners and announcing Antoine's suspension. Beutel read part of it on the late-night news.

"Tex Antoine's extemporaneous comments ... constituted an inexcusable lapse in judgment," said the statement by Tindiglia and Kenneth H. MacQueen, vice president and general manager.

"We at WABC-TV felt it to be as insensitive and offensive as did our viewers and wish to apologize," they said. "We have suspended Tex Antoine indefinitely and the station's management will decide what further action is warranted."

After Beutel's announcement, Mrs. Torello said, the station got 450 additional phone calls, about 100 of them from persons who said Antoine should not be suspended because he had apologized.

Antoine said the station had called him at home "and they said, 'Hey, Tex, cool it.' So I won't be on the air for a few days."

Antoine, who came here from Houston in 1943 and first worked as a page at NBC, won an Emmy award in 1961 for outstanding local performer as WNBC-TV's weatherman. He said he earns $56,000 a year.

He said he's been married "several times" and is now divorced.

Tea At Mansion To Promote Seal Sale

A tea was held earlier this week at the Governor's Mansion in Raleigh to promote the sale of 1976 Christmas Seals across North Carolina.

Money realized from the sale of the traditional seals, which thousands use on their Christmas mail, goes to the continuing fight against lung crippling diseases such as emphysema, chronic bronchitis, asthma, and byssinosis.

More than 200 volunteer and staff workers from North Carolina attended the event, hosted by the wife of the governor, Mrs. James Holshouser.

Representatives from the Eastern Lung Association, which covers a multiple county area of eastern North Carolina included this year's president, W. Herbert Hollowell, Jr.; 1976 Christmas Seal Chairman Kay Currie; board member A. B. Harless, Jr. of Edenton; and staff members Lorey White, Connie Landon and Patsy Hatch.

Chairman for the Eastern Lung Association; and Susan Lawrence, a former Miss North Carolina, honorary state chairman.

Dropped

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A judge has dropped an arrest warrant for Jerry Lee Lewis because the singer is hospitalized with influenza and a peptic ulcer.

Lewis had already been arrested twice this week — the second time at the gate of Elvis Presley's mansion early Tuesday morning. Police charged him with drunkenness and carrying a pistol, then released him on $250 bond pending a hearing Wednesday.

When neither Lewis nor his attorney showed up in court, an arrest warrant was drawn up.

But City Court Judge Albert H. Boyd later dismissed it at the request of Lewis' attorney, Bob Wampler, and city prosecutor Robert Donohue.

Boyd set a hearing Dec. 15 for Lewis on the state charge of carrying a pistol. The city charge of drunkenness was disposed of when Boyd ordered the bond forfeited.

Lewis was arrested Monday for driving while intoxicated, without a license and recklessly after his Rolls Royce overturned. He was released on $250 bond pending an unscheduled hearing.

Suspension Lifted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Watergate figure Robert C. Mardian will again be able to practice law in California.

Mardian's suspension was lifted Wednesday by the state Supreme Court. His Watergate coverup conviction on a single count of conspiracy had been reversed Oct. 12 by a federal appeals court, which at the same time affirmed the convictions of H. R. Haldeman, John D.V. Erlichman, and John N. Mitchell.

Foundations May Aid In Research And Business

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Maybe you'd like to start a day care center for children in a disadvantaged neighborhood. Or perhaps you'd like to do research in South America. Or re-establish your career. But you haven't got the money.

Consider using someone else's money. There are funds available through federal agencies, private foundations and other funding institutions. The question is, how do you go about getting those funds?

A group of 25 women, plus one man, were on hand recently for the opening session of Virginia P. White's course on "The Art of Grantsmanship." The class is one of many being held this fall at The Woman-school in Manhattan.

"Grants programs are established because someone in power wants to see something done," Ms. White said.

"You have to find someone with a real interest in what you do. It's the wrong approach to say you need the funds, therefore, you are 'deserving' of the money," she told the class.

Ms. White said the 1971 edition of the "Foundation Directory" lists more than 5,000 foundations in the United States with assets of a half million dollars or more and grants of $25,000 or more.

The 1975 edition of the directory lists some 2,200 foundations with assets of one million dollars or more and grants of $50,000 or more.

"Nine out of ten people who approach funding organizations are in the wrong place," she said. "So it takes research to find only those institutions that are interested in what you are doing."

Very often the smaller foundations are overlooked, but they can be excellent places to make applications for funds, Ms. White said.

She said one important thing to know when making application for a project is the usual size of the grants that the organization gives out. If a group's maximum grant is $40,000, you can't expect to get one for $100,000, she pointed out.

Likewise, it's unlikely that a foundation with total assets of $500,000 will provide $400,000 in funds for a single project.

However, you can get funds from more than one place. Duplicate applications are okay. And, in some cases, two federal agencies or foundations will get together on the same project, she said.

"You can apply to 100 foundations if you want to, and bully for you if you get them all," Ms. White told the group. She cautioned, however, that "there are some very worthwhile projects that no one would touch."

One problem is whether there is any conflict with the government. Foundations, for example, are loosely defined as "tax exempt organizations" and are therefore regulatable by Congress, Ms. White said.

Another problem is whether the proposed project will result in any unfavorable publicity for the funding organization. Will it backfire or embarrass them? Is there any legal risk?

Other things to be taken into consideration are: How far-reaching will the impact be? Are the results transferable? Is the timing right? Is there too much money given for too little achievement?

Ms. White, author of "Grants," was formerly the director of operations at the Sulk Institute and was associate director of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars.

Ruling Before Dec. 20

RALEIGH (AP) — A superior court judge is expected to make a ruling before Dec. 20 whether to hold a hearing or issue an injunction halting work on a controversial highway project at Asheville.

A question of law must be decided, Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey said Wednesday. The project involves an open highway cut through Beaucatcher Mountain to widen congested U.S. highway 70.

Bailey denied a request by the Beaucatcher Mountain Protective Association for a temporary injunction.

He plans to make a ruling before Dec. 20 on whether the state Department of Transportation was covered by the Administrative Practices Act requiring hearings by state agencies. The department contends it is not covered by the requirements of the act.

Bailey said if he decided otherwise, he would have a full-scale hearing on the actions of the department in deciding on an open cut through the mountain.

The association contends it was not given an adequate hearing on its objections to the proposal. It also says the department did not comply with the Environmental Policy Act in awarding the $9.9 million contract.

Opponents of the project have called for construction of twin multi-lane tunnels through the mountain. They say the tunnels would be cheaper and preserve the physical integrity of the mountain. State officials contend that approach would be too costly and time consuming.

The association's attorneys offered statements by two other construction firms that the cost of the tunnel would be cheaper than the contract for an open cut.

Earl Fowler of Asheville, representing the association, told Bailey, "We're not here for the purpose of delaying any project... But we don't feel like we've been provided due process."

Seeking To Block Contract

RALEIGH (AP) — A Virginia company has gone to court in an effort to block the state from awarding a $1.7 million contract to a Texas company to process Medicaid claims.

The Computer Company of Richmond, Va., filed the suit Wednesday in Wake Superior Court. It contends that the state Advisory Budget Commission acted unlawfully in awarding the contract to Electronic Data Systems-Federal of Dallas.

The suit seeks a preliminary injunction against the state pending a hearing on whether the contract was legal.

The Computer Company contends it submitted the best price for the six-month contract, but that the commission improperly allowed the Texas company to reduce its offer at the last minute.

Training Awards were presented to Mrs. Lucy Allen, Mrs. Mildred Stallings and Mrs. Jan Kittrell for their outstanding service in training Scouters.

Ken Davis was awarded a plaque for his outstanding work in the Pitt District as Scout Executive. Davis is transferring to Washington, and Richard Kelley was introduced as the new executive. Kelly comes to the Pitt District from Goldsboro.

Dr. Sheldon Downes explained the high adventure camping opportunities in Scouting and urged Scouters to attend the National Jamboree. Allotments have been made for 126 Scouters from the East Carolina Council to attend.

Rock Group Drops Bills

LONDON (AP) — A British rock group showered 8,500 pounds ($13,600) in single bills on the audience at a concert here in what it called a "Christmas present" for its fans.

About 4,000 cheering fans at a concert given by the group Steeleye Span on Wednesday night grabbed the bills as they fell from the ceiling of the Hammersmith Odeon theater in West London.

Some said they got as much as 10 pounds. Nobody was hurt.

Israel Decries U.N. Resolution

By SAMUEL KOO Associated Press Writer UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Israel's ambassador has condemned as "terrifying and sinister" a U.N. General Assembly resolution calling for the creation of a Palestinian state in territory occupied by Israel.

The assembly voted 90-16 with 30 abstentions Wednesday to approve the blueprint for a new state and called on Israel to withdraw by June from Arab lands seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog said the plan was based on the assumption that a settlement could be imposed. "But it cannot be, because we will not agree to it," he said. "We have no intention of committing national suicide."

The U.N. resolution was seen mainly as a diplomatic victory for the Palestine Liberation Organization, to which the occupied territory would eventually be turned over. General Assembly resolutions carry no provisions for enforcement.

The 90 affirmative votes were the most the PLO has received on a substantive resolution. The guerrilla organization has lost prestige because of setbacks suffered in the Lebanese civil war.

Last week, the PLO issued a statement embracing the concept of a Palestine state created from the Israeli occupied areas, a position long implied but never actually stated by the PLO, diplomatic sources said.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry said in Jerusalem that the vote was one-sided and had damaged peace efforts in the Middle East.

The United States, which on Tuesday voted for a resolution urging Israel to take "immediate steps" to allow repatriation of Arabs dispossessed in 1967, voted against Wednesday's resolution. A number of Latin American and western European nations also refused to support it, complaining that it lacked balance.

Under the plan, the United Nations would administer the Israeli-held West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip, formerly ruled by Egypt, until the PLO was ready to assume control.

Palestinians would be repatriated in two steps, with the 240,000 displaced by the 1967 war allowed to return first. They would be followed by those who fled the area prior to 1967.

Population Flow To West, South Could Shift Trend In Politics

By ROBERT B. CULLEN Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — America's population is flowing south and west in increasing numbers, a trend that could result in dramatic shifts in political power, according to the Census Bureau.

A report released Wednesday found that from 1970 to 1975, the Southern states, ranging from Delaware to Texas, grew more than the other three regions of the country combined.

Western states continued to show a high rate of growth. But in the urban states of the Northeast and North Central regions, the woes of the cities brought on stagnation or loss of population.

The bureau's surveys showed that sometime during the past year, a balance was reached, with 50 per cent of the nation's population living in the South and West and 50 per cent in the Northeast and Central regions.

In 1970, the South and West had about 47 per cent of the population. If the trend seen in the Census Bureau survey continues, those areas will have a substantial majority of the population in 1980, when the next congressional reapportionment occurs, according to bureau spokesman David Word.

Two major reasons for the turnaround, Word said, are the plight of the nation's largest cities and the change in migration patterns of Southern blacks.

Most of the 20 largest metropolitan areas lost population from 1970-75. Since the Northeast and North Central states are heavily urbanized, they bore the brunt of the population flow toward small towns and rural areas and away from central cities.

For the first time in more than a generation, the migration of blacks from the South stopped in 1970-75, Word said. Previously, blacks left the South at a rate of 750,000 every five years. In the past five years, however, the black migration from the South was balanced almost exactly by black migration back into the region, Word said.

Word mentioned other factors, such as climate, lower taxes and cheaper land, items many analysts have cited in discussing the emergence of the "Sunbelt" states as the nation's growth centers.

Another factor, he said, is the large number of elderly people choosing to move to Florida and Arizona for their retirements.

Florida and Arizona are the fastest growing states. Arizona's population grew 25 per cent from 1970-75, while Florida had a net growth of 1.6 million, a number roughly equal to the population of the entire state of Nebraska.

The bureau's study broke the population figures into two categories: "natural" growth, caused by the difference between births and deaths, and growth caused by migrations from one state to another.

Natural growth was down in all states, due to declining birth rates.

Florida's growth was caused almost entirely by migration. And 33 other states also had net increases in population due to migration.

Sixteen states and the District of Columbia had net losses due to migration. In New York, 539,000 more persons moved out than moved in. In Illinois, the net loss due to migration was 350,000, and in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Michigan net losses were over 100,000.

Pilots Eject Safely

PETERSTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Two Marine Corps aviators whose jet went into an uncontrolled spiral dive parachuted to safety just seconds before their aircraft crashed into a mountainside Wednesday, authorities said.

Personnel at Princeton Community Hospital said the two, 1st Lt. Andrew Kowalski, 25, of Moline, Ill., the pilot, and 1st Lt. Stanley Misiuk, 28, of Napick, Mass., the bombardier-aviator, were in good condition.

Kowalski said the A-6 attack aircraft he was piloting could not be controlled and went into "a spiral toward the ground." Military authorities, he said, would have to provide any further details.

The two ejected and landed in a field not far from where the aircraft crashed and burned near the West Virginia-Virginia border. State police who hiked to the scene located the two pilots and took them to the hospital.

The plane was on a routine training mission, according to officials at Cherry Point, N.C., Marine Air Station, home base of the aircraft. A public affairs spokesman there said an investigating party was en route to the scene.

Mrs. Jimmy Bishop, a nearby resident, said she heard "a terrible roar" just before the plane crashed on the mountain behind her home near the community of Lindsie.

Another nearby resident, Mrs. Elvie Pennington, said, "I heard this plane go over. It sounded like a big one and I thought it was going to crash. It made it over one ridge. The next thing I knew I could see lights in the distance and the plane had crashed."

Jags Go After Eastern Title Friday

Lineman John Dupree

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
 Farmville Central faces Clinton this week in the semi-finals of the state 3-A playoffs and, according to Coach Gene Brewer, the Darkhorses "look a lot like us in the fact that they play aggressive defense, they go after you on defense and they are good tacklers."

The Jaguars are coming of a surprisingly easy 42-0 win last Friday over White Oak, a team reputed to be very strong defensively.

Coach Brewer said he was "a little bit" surprised at the score of the game. "We felt that we would be able to throw the ball on them, but didn't know we could run on them as well as we did."

"We had planned to throw more (during the game) but, our running game was so effective, we didn't need to."

Brewer said the Jaguar offense did an "above average" job in the White Oak game. "We ran the ball hard and I thought we did a pretty good job blocking." The downfield blocking and blocking of the running backs could have been better, however, he said.

The Farmville running backs, Ted Dunn and Keno Farrow, and offensive guards, James Mercer and Woody Edwards, were all commended by Brewer for their play.

Defensively, Farmville "played real well, again," according to Brewer, although "we did have a few letdowns, occasionally."

The defensive standouts for the Jaguars were Mike Jenkins, who had two interceptions, one of which he returned for a touchdown, along with John Dupree, Timmy Hall and Kelvin Dixon. Brewer also commended the secondary for "a pretty good job overall."

In this week's game with Clinton, the Jaguars plan to "just go out there and hopefully do the things that they give us," according to Brewer.

The Darkhorses are "a little more conservative" than Farmville on offense, according to Brewer, but "well-coached and disciplined."

"Everybody we have talked to about them, the first thing they said was, 'They are tough.'"

Brewer said the Clinton backs "run real hard. They have four or five backs that they'll use. They all look about alike and run about alike."

In addition, the Clinton quarterback is "real heady—he throws the ball well and runs the ball well."

Overall, the Darkhorses are "not real big, but they have pretty good size," according to Brewer. If they have any defensive weakness, it may be pass defense.

"Teams have not thrown the ball on them a lot, at least the ones we've been able to see, so we're not sure if we can throw on them or not," Brewer said.

Clinton is basically a running ballclub, according to Brewer. "They run from a multiple of fense with four or five different sets and they throw in a few wrinkles," such as motion.

Farmville Central will be trying to "shut them off on the run, take away their best plays and try to get them to doing something they're not used to doing."

If successful, the Jaguars may be playing for the state 3-A championship next week.

Jenkins Chopped Down White Oak

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

In the first half of last week's playoff game against Farmville Central, White Oak must have thought Jaguar Mike Jenkins was going to beat them single-handedly.

The speedy senior set up Farmville's first touchdown with a gutsy, 21-yard punt return and set up their second touchdown by intercepting a White Oak pass and returning it 36 yards.

Then, just before halftime, Jenkins really broke White Oak's back with a 15-yard interception return for a touchdown.

Jenkins, like his coach, Gene Brewer, was a little surprised at the one-sidedness of the White Oak game. The Jaguars won, 42-0. "I don't down White Oak a bit," he said. "I was surprised at the score myself. I wasn't sure myself whether we would even win."

Jenkins plays flanker and defensive back for the Jaguars, but likes flanker a little better. "You get to handle the ball a little bit more (at flanker). Most of the time, anyway."

He enjoys playing defense, too, however, and is proud of the defensive record Farmville Central has had this year. "Our defense is probably one of the best in the state. I like being on a good defensive team."

Although this will probably be his last year in football, Jenkins said he would like to try baseball in college. He plays shortstop on the Jaguar team.

After college, Jenkins isn't sure what he wants to do. "If at all possible, I'd like to play pro baseball, but that'll probably dwindle out."

The Jaguars travel to play Clinton in the 3-A semi-finals this week, but Jenkins said, "I don't really know that much about them." He added however, that, "I feel we have the best team in the state."

Jenkins said playing on the road won't have "too much effect" on the Jaguars. "It just let's us know in our minds we have to play that much harder."

The White Oak game was probably his best of the season, according to Jenkins, with the two interceptions and punt return. What made him decide to try for the short, line-drive kick?

"As soon as he kicked it, I could see it was going to be short and the first thing that popped into my mind was Coach Brewer saying, 'Don't let the ball hit the ground.' So, I decided I would take a chance and I just happened to get to it."

Jenkins returned the ball to the 29, giving Farmville good field position in what had previously been a defensive battle. The Jaguars took it in and held the momentum for the rest of the game.

Pirate Swimmers Go After One Last Title

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
 (One of a series)

After winning 11 straight Southern Conference swimming titles, East Carolina's Pirates are after another—and it will be their last.

This gives the Bucs all the more reason to close out their membership in the conference without ever losing a league meet, and never losing a title.

"We lost a few people from last year's team that we didn't expect to," Coach Ray Scharf said, "but while this hurts, we should be better. I say this based on the people returning who should be better, and the fact that we brought in some good freshmen to provide depth and strength in some key areas."

Scharf said the Pirates should be stronger in the freestyle events, and will do better in the breaststroke and backstroke. "We had the top people in these two events, but now we should be able to have some depth too."

This year's conference meet is at Furman University. "Furman is a much improved team, and they're going to get stronger before the conference meet," Scharf said. "They're going to be very upset minded, and this will be their last chance to get us. But I'd have to say that we'll be favored."

Of the non-conference foes, the four Atlantic Coast Conference teams the Pirates swim will be the toughest. N. C. State tops the list. The Wolfpack has three Olympians and are "extremely tough." North Carolina and Duke will also be hard to beat.

"Duke is very much improved since last year, and will be out to beat us. Maryland, too, is just waiting to get revenge on us for winning last year."

"What makes it tougher is that we'll have to swim three of them in a 10 day period."

John McCauley, a junior who last year had the ninth best time in the country in the 50-yard freestyle, leads the team in this event. Billy Thorne adds depth, and a transfer, Bill Fehling, will help after he becomes eligible after winter quarter. That will involve only the Easterns and the nationals.

The same three will take care of the 100-yard freestyle for the Bucs.

John Tudor is the top man in the 200-yard freestyle. "He's already done a 1:44, and that's just a tenth of a second off the varsity record. He's our best all-around swimmer, and we could use him in a lot of places." Ted

Two Bucs Will Play

Two members of the East Carolina University defensive secondary have been picked for appearances in post-season All-Star games.

Ernest Madison, a senior from Norfolk, Va., has been invited to play in the Senior Bowl. That game will be played on January 18, 1977, in Mobile, Ala.

Reggie Pinkney, a senior from Fort Bragg, has been selected to participate in the North-South game, scheduled for Pontiac, Mich., during December.

The two will close out their East Carolina careers tonight at 8:30 p.m. when the Pirates host Appalachian State in Ficklen Stadium.

Neiman, a freshman, and Joe Kushy, a sophomore, are also candidates here.

Tudor and Neiman lead the 500 freestylers. Doug Brindley is also a prime candidate here, despite coming off a sickness of several weeks.

Brinkley and Neiman join Stuart Mann, the varsity record holder, for the 1000-yard freestyle.

"We're strong in the butterfly events," Scharf said. Returning is Keith Wade, who holds the team records for both the 100 and 200-yard events. Steve Ruedlinger is close behind him, with two others, Ronnie Schnell and Mark Lovette, also on his heels.

Mann holds the varsity backstroke record, with David Moody backing him up.

In the breaststroke, David Kirkman leads the way, followed by East Carolina's second Finnish swimmer, Eero Elovaara.

The other Finn, Tomas Palmgren leads the 400 individual medley group. Mann and Elovaara follow him. In the 200 IM, Mann is the leader, followed by Wade, Kirkman and Palmgren.

"Diving is still a weak point for us," Scharf said. "I think we will be better. Jim Brunner, a freshman, will help us a lot." Joining him is Lund Sox, a sophomore. "Both of them will need a lot of work."

Scharf pointed out that equalling last year's record of 9-2 will be difficult. "We have only nine dual meets this year, since VMI and Johns Hopkins dropped us. Winning all nine would be something else, considering the difficulty of our schedule."

Knowing Scharf, most of them will end up as victories—along with another Southern Conference title.

Tourney Winners

The team of Harriette White, Margaret Sutton, Virginia Minges and Ann Whitehurst took first place in a recent Ladies Appreciation Day event held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Nancy Monroe, Marge Parrish, Betty Lou Howard and Lib Moye finished second, while the team of Joan Warren, Tee Ficklen, and Izabel Rivers were third.

A Ladies Day event is scheduled for Friday at the club. A Hidden Hole Tournament will be held.

On December 3 from 10 a.m. until 10:30, an auction will be held prior to a three-club tournament.

Ford McGowan recently picked up an eagle on the 17th hole. He hit his second shot into the hole.

Myrtle Leslie turned in a 49 for her best nine hole score.

Erving Brings In The Crowd, But Chris Ford Sends Nets Packing

By The Associated Press
Julius Erving drew another capacity crowd as he played in Detroit for the first time in the National Basketball Association, but it was Chris Ford who sent the fans home buzzing over his play.
Erving, the star attraction of the Philadelphia 76ers, was a crowd-pleaser, but it was Ford's play that led the Detroit Pistons to a 118-117 victory over the 76ers Wednesday night before a crowd of 11,111.
The triumph was Detroit's ninth in the last 10 games and snapped a three-game 76ers winning streak.
Ford scored 22 points, had six steals and may have saved the victory by diving into the seats and stopping an errant pass from going out of bounds in the closing seconds.

Had Philadelphia gotten the ball back on what would have been a turnover, it might have been able to get the winning bucket. The 76ers trailed the entire game, but pulled within a point with 14 seconds left on a three-point play by George McGinnis.
In other games, the New York Nets defeated San Antonio 99-91, Boston routed Kansas City 133-111, Indiana frustrated Atlanta 115-93, Denver outscored Los Angeles 122-112, Houston recorded a 113-107 overtime decision over Golden State and Portland edged Chicago 117-115 in overtime.

The Pistons' troubled forward, Marvin Barnes, made his Detroit debut. He played only two minutes and did not score. Barnes was recovering from an ankle injury and also had been suspended three times this season for missing practices and physicals.
Pistons Coach Herb Brown said Barnes "still can't run. He just did me a favor. When a guy is with us like I like to keep him involved in the game." Erving scored 25 points, McGinnis 29 and Lloyd Free 21 for the 76ers. Bob Lanier topped Detroit with 25 points and 15 rebounds while M.L. Carr added 20 points.

Nets 99, Spurs 91
Nate Archibald's 23 points and 15 assists helped the Nets hand the Spurs only their second loss in nine games. Larry Kenon's 16 points led San Antonio. Mike Gale and Billy Paulz each had 15 for the Spurs, while Jan van Breda Kolff scored 20 for New York.
Celtics 133, Kings 111
Sidney Wicks had 24 points in leading a Boston attack that featured seven players in double figures. The Celtics trailed 25-22 after one period but opened a 50-39 advantage in the second quarter, then had to rally in the third quarter. Ron Boone of Kansas City led all scorers with 28 points.
Pacers 115, Hawks 93
Indiana's Billy Knight scored 28 points as Atlanta lost its 28th consecutive road game. Dan Roundfield scored seven points during a nine-point fourth quarter streak by the Pacers that broke open the game. Tom Barker topped the Hawks with 21 points, while Roundfield had 21 for the Pacers.

Pitt, Penn State In Top Game

By HANK LOWENKRON
AP Sports Writer
Pitt is rated No. 1 in the nation. Now the Panthers have to prove they're the top football team in Pennsylvania.

Heisman Trophy candidate Tony Dorsett, is given an edge. A slight edge.

sweetness out of Pitt's Sugar Bowl invitation and it could help decide this year's national championship. Pitt is already slated to face No. 4-ranked Georgia in that game.

the traditional Army-Navy fray. It's common knowledge that for Penn State to win it must stop Dorsett. And they must open up the Panthers' experienced defense.

Penn State has a good chance to put a hole in Pitt's dream of a national championship in Friday night's nationally televised game, according to coaches who have played both teams. Undeclared Pitt, featuring

"If Penn State gets ready mentally, anything could happen," he added. The outcome could take the Friday afternoon, eighth-rated Oklahoma and Nebraska, No. 10, collide before a national television audience for a share of the Big Eight championship. If Nebraska wins, it will go to the Orange Bowl. Idle Colorado, which shares the co-championship of the Big Eight, gets to go to Miami if Oklahoma comes out on top.

The other games scheduled for television are No. 13 Notre Dame against Rose Bowl bound Southern California, No. 3, and Top games Saturday include, Georgia Tech at No. 4 Georgia; No. 7 Houston at Rice with a Southwest Conference championship and Cotton Bowl berth going to Houston if it wins; No. 9 Texas Tech at Arkansas; Oklahoma State, tied for 14th, at Texas El-Paso; No. 18 Alabama against Auburn; and Miami, Fla., vs. Florida at Orlando.

California Ropes In Infielder Bobby Grich

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer
ANAHEIM (AP) — The lure of home, friends and money from ex-movie cowboy Gene Autry lured infielder Bobby Grich to the California Angels instead of the New York Yankees.

The All-Star second baseman of the Baltimore Orioles became the third, and last, of the current free agent crop to sign with Autry and his Angels. Outfielders Don Baylor and Joe Rudi, from Oakland, had signed earlier. There are other free agents, but the Angels now have signed their full allotment. Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner wanted Grich and argued that the Angels should not be allowed to sign a third free agent. But he was overruled by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

"This was probably the biggest decision I have ever had to make," said the 27-year-old Grich, who will become a shortstop with the Angels. "Getting to the big leagues was a dream and this is the ultimate of dreams."

His home is in nearby Long Beach, and Grich said, "It was definitely a part of my decision to play in my own backyard. I didn't accept the highest offer, but you can't put a dollar sign on things like playing where the family can see you play and being with your friends."

Mariners Keep Home Streak

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer
There's no place like home for the World Hockey Association's San Diego Mariners. And, until Wednesday night, the Cincinnati Stingers felt the same way.

after his team lost its second game in two nights. "We were in Minnesota still coming home after the shutout (a 4-0 loss to the Fighting Saints) Tuesday night.

"The big thing now is not to panic. So we lost at home. Once a young team panics, it's very tough to get them back in line."

Indianapolis, in winning a club-record seventh straight game, closed within two points of runner-up Cincinnati in the Eastern Division and is four points behind first-place Quebec.

Blair McDonald scored three goals for Indianapolis. Roadrunners 3, Cowboys 3. Phoenix spotted Calgary a 3-0 lead, then broke loose for three goals in the third period, forcing the game into overtime.

While the Mariners lengthened their unbeaten streak at home this season to nine with a 4-2 victory over the Edmonton Oilers, Cincinnati was stung at home for the first time this season as Indianapolis scored a 6-4 triumph. The Racers thus ended the Stingers' seven-game unbeaten skein at Riverfront Coliseum.

In the only other WHA game, Phoenix rallied for three goals in the final period and tied Calgary 3-3.

San Diego, 7-0-2 at the Sports Arena, rallied for four goals in the third period in subduing Edmonton. U.S. Olympic star Bob Dobeck spurred the comeback by setting up defenseman Paul Shmyr for the Mariners' first goal and setting up Norm Ferguson for the game-winner.

The victory moved San Diego within two points of Winnipeg and Houston, who share first place in the WHA's Western Division.

Racers 6, Stingers 4. "Tonight we were not at home," said a dejected Terry Slater, coach of the Stingers, coaches instead of having managers. He was a head coach in the system, but was dismissed in June, 1965, becoming an administrative assistant for the rest of the season.

Since then, Kennedy managed Albuquerque for the Los Angeles Dodgers, coached third base for the Atlanta Braves and managed the Oakland A's in 1968. From 1969 to 1976, he was with the St. Louis Cardinals on special assignments, player development and supervised scouting. Earlier this year, he joined the American League's new Seattle expansion club as special assistant to the general manager.

Franks is known as an astute baseball man as well as a businessman, making many land-development deals.

Kennedy was involved in owner Philip K. Wrigley's five-year experiment of rotating stagnant in retirement and wanted to return to the game. He said Kennedy, a long-time friend, called him and offered him the job.

Franks: Being Old Is No Disadvantage

CHICAGO (AP) — Herman Franks says that being a 63-year-old manager — the oldest in the major leagues — is no disadvantage in trying to get the Chicago Cubs out of the second division doldrums. "We're all in the same boat," Franks said Wednesday from his home in Salt Lake City after being chosen to replace fired Jim Marshall.

Franks was called out of eight years of retirement by Bob Kennedy, new director of operations for the Cubs. Both men were coaches for the Cubs, and Franks managed the San Francisco Giants before leaving baseball in 1968.

"I'd like to win as many games as possible, of course," Franks said. "I'd like to win a pennant before I'm through." Franks said he was getting

Ferrell Gets New Contract

DAVIDSON, N. C. (AP) — Ed Farrell, football coach at Davidson College for three years, has been given a contract renewal, according to an announcement Wednesday by Athletic Director Thom Cartmill.

Davidson's 1977 schedule has not been released yet, but it will include Guilford and Hampden-Sydney, the two teams the Wildcats defeated this season.

In keeping with school policy, the length of the contract and its terms were not disclosed. Farrell, a 41-year-old graduate of Rutgers, has compiled a record of 5-21-1, with this season's 2-6-1 the best of the three years.

Other opponents on a 10-game schedule are expected to be The Citadel, Virginia Military, Lafayette, Lehigh, Delaware and Bucknell.

State Department African Expert Discusses Problems With Three Nations This Weekend

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department's top Africa policy expert flies this weekend to southern Africa to discuss Rhodesian and Namibian problems and may meet with South African Prime Minister John Vorster.

South African sources said Wednesday that William B. Schaefe, who is assistant secretary of state for African Affairs, will meet with Foreign Minister Hilgard Muller and probably Vorster himself. Then, on his way back home, he will stop over in London to swap notes on the over-all scene in southern Africa in meetings with British leaders.

But Schaefe's prime purpose for the trip is to attend, as part of a 55-member American delegation, a four-day seminar in Maseru, Lesotho, on the theme of "New Directions in American-African relations." Co-chairmen of that conference, sponsored by the African-American Institute, will be Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, and Lesotho's foreign minister, Charles Molapo. The group will include 20 U.S. congressmen.

Although South African sources outlined Schaefe's travel plans, Schaefe's own aides contended they know of no plans now for him to meet with Vorster and Muller. They confirmed he will reach landlocked Lesotho via Johannesburg and that later he will stop in London. Johannesburg is 30 miles from Pretoria, the South African capital.

The U.S. and South African governments have been working closely in quest of orderly settlements of the disputed futures of Rhodesia and Namibia.

Rhodesia is in the grip of a grinding guerrilla war in which independence-seeking blacks, using arms from communist nations, are trying to break the power of white minority rulers. U.S. and South African officials share the view that the conflict, unless quickly ended by an agreed transfer of power to the blacks, could escalate and engulf the continent.

Rhodesia's white minority government is represented at a conference with black nationalist leaders in Geneva. But progress there has been minimal.

The Namibian problem seems quite as complex as the Rhodesian.

Vorster has pledged to surrender South Africa's control of the onetime League of Nations mandated territory by the end of 1978. But he has yet to agree on a format for negotiating a transfer of power to the blacks who are in the majority there. Meanwhile, he is under mounting U.N. pressure to come quickly to the conference table.

There have been secret exchanges between Washington and Pretoria over a procedural approach to such a Namibian negotiation. Schaefe, doubtless, will want to carry the process forward. The trouble centers on a demand by the widely recognized South West African People's Organization (SWAPO) to negotiate an independence program directly with the Vorster government. Vorster has acknowledged SWAPO's claims to a conference role but refuses to deal directly with the radically oriented group.

GREENSBORO (AP) — The $8 million Humana Hospital being built in Greensboro will — unlike the other three in the city — be operated to earn a profit.

It will be the second hospital in the state owned by the Humana Corp., a publicly owned company based in Louisville, Ky. The company owns 62 hospitals and has paid a dividend only once — last year.

A spokesman says the other in North Carolina, Hickory Memorial, is losing money, but that the company has never shut down a hospital for that reason.

"All hospitals have to make a profit to stay in business," says Richard Blackburn, 36, newly named administrator of the Humana Hospital here. "Non-profit hospitals simply can't distribute their earnings. For-profit hospitals can."

The hospital will be a four-story structure located on an old golf course driving range.

The building is scheduled for completion in May at a cost of $5.5 million. It will be fitted with another $2.5 million in equipment.

It will open with 100 beds, with possible expansion to 200 if allowed by the state. It will have a staff of 150, including 75 nurses, a pathologist, radiologist and anesthesiologist.

It will be open to all state-licensed physicians, and will offer most medical services except obstetrics.

Blackburn says, "For-profit hospitals have more of an incentive to give excellent patient care, I believe. And I think our presence here will make everyone (other hospitals) do a better job, including us. Competition is healthy and good."

Humana's rates for patients and salaries for employees will be competitive with the city's other three hospitals — Wesley Long, Moses Cone and L. Richardson — he said.

Only Time Can Sober One Up

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — A thought for the holidays: coffee won't sober up the holiday celebrant who tossed back too many alcoholic beverages. Dr. Leon Rottman, Extension human development specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, says only time gets alcohol out of your body. Coffee, cold showers, fresh air, aspirin and other remedies are no help at all. Rottman also says switching drinks won't make you drunk any faster than sticking to the same number of the same drink. It's the quantity, not the variety, that causes the problem.

Recall Myrtle's Fire?

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Recall the Myrtle VanQuekelberg fire?

It happened only a week ago, burning 110 acres along railroad right-of-way southeast of Grand Rapids in northeastern Minnesota.

Employees of the state Department of Natural Resources named the fire for Mrs. VanQuekelberg in honor of her 27 years as an office assistant at the department's Deer River office.

At her retirement party Nov. 9, fellow workers promised they would name the area's next big fire for her. One week later, the Myrtle VanQuekelberg fire was entered in official records.

Cop Suspended For 'Panty Raid'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A veteran policeman has been given a suspended sentence on conviction of pocketing three pairs of women's panties in K-Mart discount store while he was off duty.

A security officer for the store testified Wednesday that Jimmy D. Canipe told him he did so Sept. 3 because, "It would embarrass him to go through the checkout with the panties."

Canipe, 42, a Charlotte policeman for 19 years, had been charged by the district attorney with unlawful concealment of the panties — red, black and lavender — after store officials refused to prosecute him.

Proclaimed By Washington

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (UPI) — George Washington first proclaimed Thanksgiving in 1789, but it took Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale of Newport, N.H., to put it on the calendar permanently.

Mrs. Hale was editor of the Ladies Magazine in Boston early in the 19th century when she began pleading in her editorial columns for a nationally recognized Thanksgiving Day.

It finally was proclaimed by President Abraham Lincoln in 1873. The Washington proclamation had led to celebrations only in certain states on varying dates, say Hallmark historians.

Judge James Lanning of state District Court sentenced him after a nonjury trial to 30 days in jail, suspended for two years. Canipe also was fined $50 and court costs for concealing the panties, valued at $2.91. The maximum penalty for unlawful concealment, a misdemeanor, is six months in jail and a fine of $100.

Canipe's lawyer gave notice of appeal.

The police department had charged Canipe with conduct unbecoming an officer following the incident, and had suspended him for 10 days without pay. A police spokesman said after the conviction that it has not been decided what additional action, if any, will be taken.

Salary Hearing Postponed

RALEIGH (AP) A hearing on the firing of a state highway engineer who has continued to draw his $1,000 a month salary since January has been postponed until Dec. 13.

Wake Superior Court Judge Donald L. Smith heard some preliminary arguments Wednesday and set the new hearing date. He did so after attorneys for William Woodruff, the state Department of Transportation and state officials asked to file legal documents and statements in the case.

Woodruff was fired in January and contends it was purely political. He had been with the Department of Transportation since 1949. The state maintains he was dismissed after being accused of converting state property to his own use.

Woodruff is under indictment in Charlotte on a charge of embezzling state property. The case has not been scheduled for trial.

Woodruff, a Democrat, earlier went to court in an effort to block his dismissal and obtained a court order requiring that the state continue paying his salary until the case is settled. Asst. Atty. Gen. H. Al Cole Jr., asked that Woodruff's lawsuit, which has kept him on the state payroll, be dismissed because there was no material issue of fact which could be resolved at a trial.

Woodruff's attorney, Robert Spearman, said Woodruff's charge of political firing should be aired in court.

Cole argued that if Woodruff's claim were allowed to stand, "You could steal state property and then say you're a Democrat and the state would have no right to fire you."

"That's always been the case," commented Judge Smith, a Republican.

Weapons Cuts Sought By Pact

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS
Associated Press Writer

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — The Communist nations of Eastern Europe attending today's opening meeting of the Warsaw Pact summit are expected to push hard for progress in negotiations with the West on cuts in troops and arms.

Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev said Wednesday he hoped the Soviet allies would be able to reach agreement with President-elect Jimmy Carter's new administration on halting the growth of strategic weapons.

Brezhnev, who has been in Bucharest since Monday for talks with Romanian party chief Nicolae Ceausescu, was expected to be joined at the Warsaw Pact meeting by Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin.

"We hope (the summit) will make a fresh and important contribution to the cause of strengthening peace in Europe and, implicitly, the whole world," Brezhnev said earlier this week. On Wednesday, he repeated a call for a world disarmament conference and said the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) should reach a settlement that would bring a "limitation and later reduction of strategic weapons."

A Budapest newspaper carried a dispatch Wednesday from Moscow saying the summit was likely to produce "important initiatives."

Two major East-West negotiating sessions could be affected by decisions made at the summit — the second round of the SALT talks in Geneva and mutual force reduction talks in Vienna.

SALT II has been adjourned until after Carter is sworn in Jan. 20.

Mathematicians calculate that a man would have to flip a coin for 200 million years to be sure that heads would turn up 50 times in a row.

Charged

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP)—The Marine Corps has charged eight black Marines with assault and conspiracy to commit assault in the commando-like raid Nov. 13 on a barracks room of white Marines.

A Camp Pendleton spokesman said two other black Marines are still being questioned in the incident in which the seven whites were attacked with clubs and stabbed with screwdrivers. Six were treated at a hospital.

The announcement Wednesday said investigators have not uncovered a reason for the attack, which came as the white Marines were having a beer party at the barracks. The Corps said it has not been determined if charges will be filed against any of the whites for the party, which is an infraction of regulations.

The filing of charges against the eight men is preliminary action to the decision whether to award them courts-martial, the Corps said.

Charged were as Sgt. Herman Fletcher, 23, Huntsville, Ala.; Sgt. William M. Spencer, 23, High Point, N. C.; Lance Cpl. Ricky McGilvery, 19, Dallas, Tex.; Pfc. Donald R. Hunter, 22, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Lance Cpl. Bobby R. Bishop, 23, Bryan, Tex.; Lance Cpl. Gregory A. Coffee, 21, St. Louis, Mo.; Pvt. Eddie Page Jr., 23, Bay Springs, Miss.; and Pfc. Michael G. Guidry, 21, Lake Charles, La.

Bat Expert Is Tire Repairer

By DOUG STONE
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Down at the OK Tire Shop you can shoot the bull with one of the nation's leading bat experts while he fixes your tire.

Dr. Michael O'Farrell gets $3 an hour as a tire repairman, but there are fringe benefits. His boss lets him talk on the telephone at company expense to other bat experts around the world.

He also got time off to host a bat symposium attended by 150 researchers.

Off the job, the 32-year-old biologist spends his time learning about bats. There are 23 types of bats in the southern Nevada desert.

"They are really fantastic animals," he said. "There are so many things they do differently from any other animal."

Everyone knows how bats helped man develop radar and sonar, but O'Farrell says there may be many more benefits coming from bat study.

He is trying to find out whether bat odor can be used to get the animals to make homes in farming belts, where they could cut the need for pesticides. Bats eat several pounds of insects each night.

Some large bat populations in places like Carlsbad Caverns, N.M., are getting smaller, O'Farrell said. He thinks pesticides are the reason.

"It's ironic," he added. "Farmers are using pesticides to kill insects and are killing an ally of the farmer as well."

Until two years ago, O'Farrell was a researcher at the Savannah River ecology lab in Georgia, but the research died when space program money was cut.

He says new research may give man new clues on the cause and cure of epilepsy. Bats can put themselves in an epileptic-like seizure, he explained.

Bats also can lower their body temperature and still function. "This is of interest to people who are looking long range to interplanetary travel," O'Farrell said.

People have no reason to fear bats, he said.

"I've stood among thousands of bats in flight and I've never been attacked. I even take my children with me. If I catch a bat, it will bite, but the sting is no worse than being pricked by a pin and they usually don't break the skin."

Stories about bats swooping toward people's heads are true, he said, but the bat is not after the person.

"When it comes to attracting bugs, a human being is just like a street light drawing moths," he said.

Organist In Sunday Event

Vance Harper Jones, organist, will present a program of American music from the 18th century through contemporary music at 4 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 28 at the First Christian Church in Washington.

Jones, librarian at Craven Community College in New Bern, holds the BM and MM degrees in music from the University of Miami, Florida and the Master of Librarianship degree from Emory University.

Patriotic music to be performed includes the "Variations on 'America'" by Charles Ives and the "Concert Variations on 'The Star-Spangled Banner'" by Dudley Buck.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Plants Thrive

On Rainwater
LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Rainwater, or water low in minerals, is best for house plants, according to the Water Quality Assn.

Where tap water supplies have a high mineral content, the WQA recommends occasional heavy watering of house plants to flush away any salts that may collect in the soil.

Limited quantities of mineral-free water for house plants may be collected from roof runoff, or can be produced with a small reverse osmosis or demineralization unit.

By selecting the best of the columns that he wrote for a leading London daily, Victor Mollo has attempted to paint a picture of the development of bridge in recent decades (Bridge Saga, by Victor Mollo, Hart Publishing, paperback, $3.95). Though he does not quite succeed and the effort is marred by several instances of careless editing, there are sufficient hands of merit to make the book an interesting addition to the bookshelf.

One of our favorites is this hand, featuring Australian star, Tim Seres. After West's weak two-spade opening bid was passed round to him, Seres knew he would find a fair hand in dummy, so he bid what he thought he could make. However, we would venture to suggest that not too many players would have made the contract—even looking at all four hands.

West made the natural lead of the top of his spade sequence, and Seres saw at once that his contract was in danger. Since West probably held a six-card suit, declarer stood to lose a spade, a spade ruff and, even if the ace of clubs was in the East hand, a trick in each minor suit. However, it took Seres only a few minutes to come up with the winning line. He called for a low spade from dummy!

This startling play rendered the defenders helpless. If West shifted, the defenders because the planets are favorable.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study new data you can easily get and use it to good advantage in your line of endeavor. Show increased devotion to mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have every opportunity to live good life, particularly during youth, and as parents you would do well to permit to express the fine talents here. There is an exceptional person in this chart. Don't neglect ethical training.

Seniors Cover The News About Elderly

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The founder of a newspaper put out by and for elderly persons wishes there was no need for it.

"It's a shame we have to exist," said VISTA volunteer Greg Huth, who recently stepped down as editor of The Elder. "We are doing the work of the big newspapers and television stations."

Huth says the major media carry many advertisements directed at the elderly but no serious news about them.

"There is no news about older persons except 'cute stuff,' such as when somebody turns 104 years old in a nursing home," says Huth.

To try to fill that gap, Huth recruited college students and senior citizens as volunteer reporters in 1975. A board of directors of mostly elderly persons was set up to advise the staff on business matters and provide article ideas.

Huth began The Elder with a $300 grant from Yale University. Its annual operating budget has grown to $21,000.

"My ideal was to start a newspaper run by, and accountable to, senior citizens," said Huth.

After 15 issues, he said, "The Elder has been a meaningful experience for our older reporters. We need them, and they know they are helping their own people. It has given the people a chance to develop their writing skills."

The Elder's articles have dealt with topics such as transportation and drug discounts for senior citizens, nursing home regulations, retirement planning, social security and diets.

Realism Best Describes Trend In Christmas Toys

NEW YORK (AP)—Realism best describes the trend in new toys for this Christmas, according to David Miller, president of Toy Manufacturers of America, the industry association.

This includes playthings inspired by popular media figures—especially TV heroes and heroines—as well as people and places in the news and current social trends, he reports.

"Many new toys, games and dolls are based on TV programs, movies and comic books," Miller says. "Playthings influenced by the mass media include 'Sesame Street' and second-generation 'Mickey Mouse Club' items, medical-emergency and rescue vehicles, fire and crime-fighting games and toys, and several space travel playthings."

In addition to dolls modeled after famous athletes and superstar characters from TV shows, other new dolls include action figures and career dolls for boys and girls and a variety of fashion and traditional dolls. To challenge the good guys, some new "bad guys" action dolls come equipped with steel arms, torpedo-style fists, bullet-shaped helmets and other way-out features, Miller says.

Toys and games based on newsmaking events and contemporary themes include a model kit of ocean explorer Jacques Cousteau's research vessel (with a share of the profits earmarked for the Cousteau Society), games evocative of CIA-type adventures, and the first anatomically complete boy and girl dolls to be made in America. Three U.S. toymakers are introducing the true-to-life baby dolls this year, Miller says.

Activity playsets—based upon familiar, and fun, situations—will offer mini-worlds of hospitals, farms, amusement parks and road racetracks.

With the large number and variety of toys on the market today, a few simple guidelines offered by the TMA will help consumers select the right items for children of various ages and interests, Miller points out.

—CAREFULLY CONSIDER A CHILD'S Age, interests, and abilities before shopping for toys. Note the age guidelines printed on many toy packages, and select playthings that will help children learn new skills and discover new interests, such as sports, arts or the sciences.

—DON'T BUY TOYS IMPULSIVELY. Consider the types of toys that capture your child's interest, not only those kinds of toys that you enjoyed in childhood.

—SELECT PLAYTHINGS WITH SOME DEGREE OF REALISM. Through TV, movies and books, today's children are aware of and stimulated by the world around them. Psychologists suggest that playthings that are scaled-down models of real-life objects help children become inventive and imaginative in their play.

—LOOK FOR TOYS THAT PROVIDE A VARIETY OF PLAY EXPERIENCES. There are many toys that suggest a variety of activities to children and encourage them to use their imagination in play.

—Gradually introduce more complex versions of familiar playthings. Observe children's play to determine when they're ready for the next, more complex play experience.

—Spread your toy budget throughout the year. Don't overwhelm children with too many new toys at once. Use birthdays, the start of family vacations and other occasions to introduce new toys and new play experiences.

—Involve your children in the toy selection process. Discussing toy selection with children encourages them to think for themselves and live with the consequences of their decisions—a valuable lesson in consumer education.

'Hee Haw' Continues To Reach A Big Audience

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—The cornfield stage set is still in place. And so are the jokes grown there.

"Hee Haw," country music's version of "The Lawrence Welk Show," continues to be one of the most successful syndicated TV shows on the air.

The show, in its eighth season, has an estimated audience of 33 million person, up 1 million from a year ago.

It is on 227 stations and shown in every major American television market except Boston. There's a waiting list for advertisers.

Cast members and show officials cite some basic reasons for the success: appeal to the family, simple humor and the popularity of country music.

"Hee Haw," like the Welk show, got its start on network television, but unlike the Welk show, its network life was short. But the show has proved, as did Welk, that the networks don't have all the answers for gauging show popularity. Welk says he's got more stations in syndication than he did on the network.

"The shortest distance between two points is a straight line, and that's the way we've been on this show," host Buck Owens said during a break in taping at the WTVF studio in downtown Nashville.

"We've been straight—not too clever," he said. "The most important thing is the meld of music, comedy and different kinds of comedy. We took oil and water and mixed it and it stayed mixed."

"We are bein' and actin' like what people thought we were, instead of trying to be sophisticated and actin' like we weren't. We went the other way, like the Beverly Hillsbillies. We depict ourselves. I don't say or do anything I normally wouldn't do. I can say 'ain't.'"

Sam Lovullo, the show's short, balding producer, agrees: "We leave people as they are," said Lovullo, who would pass for Curly of the Three Stooges. "You almost see yourself at home as being that way."

"It's family oriented. We reach all classes, all ages and both men and women. "Also, the country music plays a big part. Country music is story telling about things like love and divorce—things people identify with."

Those connected with the show predict continued success. "We'll be on a long time," said Lovullo. "'Hee Haw' is the Grand Ole Opry of TV."

Owens says: "I wouldn't be surprised to see it go 15 years in production and another 15 years in reruns. It would be easy to alter the shows by using bits and pieces from one show and parts of another."

"Ten years from now, there still will be a lot of 'Hee Haw' new or old. It'll be like 'I Love Lucy.'"

Informality reigns on the set. There are no wardrobes or makeup rooms or stuffy executives barking orders.

"People just sit around and watch and laugh," Lovullo said.

LORETTA THE MOVIE FAN—Country singer Loretta Lynn received the second biggest thrill of her life when she got to visit her movie idol Gregory Peck on the set of "MacArthur." She says her first thrill was meeting "Gregory" (as she pronounces it) for the first time four years ago as a surprise birthday present. (AP Wirephoto)

TOYOTA
ONE OF THE FINEST CARS IN THE WORLD

100,000 Miles Or 3 Years New Car Warranty

TARHEEL TOYOTA'S 100,000 MILE WARRANTY

For 100,000 miles or 3 years we guarantee the motor, transmission, and rear end of every new Toyota we sell. This warranty is in the form of a legal document and supplements the new car warranty of Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A. Commercial vehicles are excluded.

SPECIAL THANKSGIVING SAVINGS
On All Cars In Stock

USED CAR WARRANTY 12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance or air cooled engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willing to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. Asterisk denotes warranted car.

Agreement Releases American Prisoners

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Thanksgiving promised to be special for hundreds of Americans in Mexican jails with the planned signing of a prisoner exchange agreement by Mexico and the United States.

The U.S. Embassy said Ambassador John J. Jova would attend a signing ceremony at 5 p.m. today in the Mexican foreign ministry.

Saccharine, a synthetic sweetening agent, was discovered in 1879.

The exchange, officially called a "transfer of sanctions," would let Americans imprisoned in Mexico and Mexicans held in U.S. jails return to their homelands to serve out their sentences.

After being signed, the treaty goes to each country's senate for ratification. In addition, the U.S. Congress must pass enabling legislation, an embassy spokesman said.

Reliable sources close to the treaty negotiations say the earliest possible date for the first exchange would be next April. Many of the Americans held in Mexico would be eligible for parole on their return to the United States, the sources said. There are about 600 Americans in Mexican jails, most of them on drug offenses, and an estimated 1,200 Mexicans in U.S. prisons.

Many of the American prisoners have charged that they have been mistreated by Mexican authorities. They said that among other things, brutal methods were used to force them to sign confessions, which were written in Spanish.

Many of the Americans may be freed before the treaty takes effect under legislation now before the Mexican congress to restore parole eligibility for inmates convicted of drug-related crimes. Parole for such inmates was eliminated several years ago in a joint Mexican-U.S. effort to stop narcotics smuggling across the common border.

The Mexican government estimates at least 200 Americans would be eligible for parole. Other sources say the figure is much higher.

The Mexican congress completed action this week on a constitutional amendment that would allow Mexico's president to approve prisoner exchanges with foreign governments. It must be ratified by two thirds of the states before taking effect.

The treaty was first proposed by Mexico last June when Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger visited Mexico. The negotiators say the treaty is designed to allow prisoners to serve the remainders of their sentences in their own countries, where they can be properly rehabilitated in their native cultures.

N.C. Rector Set Record, Holding Post 56 Years

By DR. H. G. JONES, Curator North Carolina Collection
 Written for the AP
CHAPEL HILL (AP) — A hundred years ago this month, the Reverend Robert Brent Drane became rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Edenton. He stayed in that position for 56 years—a record for a North Carolina clergyman.
 Not only that, but his father with the same name was pastor of St. James Church in Wilmington for nearly 28 years, and his son, Frederick Blount Drane, devoted about a half century to the Episcopalian ministry.
 The elder Dr. Robert B. Drane died in the yellow fever epidemic in Wilmington during the Civil War. His young namesake was educated at Tarboro in the homes of his uncles, Dr. Joseph Blount Cheshire and Governor Henry T. Clark, and later attended St. Stephen's College and the General Theological Seminary in New York.
 On Nov. 1, 1876, the young man took up his duties at his toric St. Paul's in Edenton. He rose to prominence in the denomination, serving as president of the convention of the Diocese of East Carolina and in other offices open to the clergy.

 He was a trustee of St. Mary's College, St. Augustine College, and the University of the South. He even served as superintendent of schools for Chowan County.
 Through his long tenure at St. Paul's, Dr. Drane played a leading role in the preservation of historic properties in the area. The church itself was given careful attention, and the remains of several colonial statesmen were moved to the church cemetery for better care. He was twice president of the Roanoke Colony Memorial Association.
 An impressive ceremony marked Dr. Drane's 50th anniversary as rector of St. Paul's in 1926, but with the encouragement of his congregation he remained in his position six more years. He finally retired in 1932 and died in 1939 at the age of 88.
 Meanwhile, his son, Frederick Blount Drane, had been ordained into the diaconate in 1915 and entered missionary work in the vast Alaskan interior.
 Stationed successively at Chena, Nenana, and Fort Yukon, he ministered to the Indians and a few Eskimos as far north as Wiseman. By dog sled he traveled an average of 2,000 miles a year, depending upon his bag of frozen food and the hospitality of the natives while on the trail.
 The territory beyond Fairbanks was then populated by few whites, and the native way of life became his. He became accustomed to a coat of skins and a diet of meat, for wildlife provided most of the requirements of the Indians.
 Preaching was complicated, for the minister had to pause after every sentence for a translation. He never quite knew if his message had been transmitted by his interpreter exactly as it was intended.

 In 1920, the Rev. Mr. Drane was made archdeacon of the Yukon River region. With headquarters above the Arctic Circle at Fort Yukon, he endured winter temperatures of 60 degrees below zero while on dogsled runs between native settlements.

 Only a year or so after going to Fort Yukon, Drane contracted tuberculosis and was forced to give up his Arctic mission. His recuperation required several years; then, in 1929, he became rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Monroe.

 Retiring in 1958, he and Mrs. Drane, the former Rebecca Wood, moved back to their native Edenton. Unwilling to remain idle, however, he served rural churches in Bertie County until his final retirement at the age of 83.
 Recently visiting his daughter, Mrs. Rebecca Warren, in Chapel Hill, the former archdeacon of the Yukon reminisced about his northern missionary years. He particularly was pleased when in 1949 he revisited Alaska and was immediately recognized by those whom he had served decades before.

 It seems likely that the nearly 200 years of pastoral service by these three Dranes—grandfather, son, and grandson—may be a record unmatched by any other three generations in North Carolina.

Fire Station Is Inoperational If Chief There

LONDON (AP) — Whenever Battersea fire chief David Callingham jumps on a fire tender leaving for a blaze, his men jump off, hang up their helmets and march into the restroom.
 When he is on duty, the south London fire station is declared nonoperational and emergencies are covered by neighboring fire crews.
 For five months firemen have refused to work or talk to Callingham because of what they called his fixation about spit and polish, drills and insistence on washing fire tenders at the "wrong time."
 The Fire Brigades Union upheld the complaints against Callingham. But the Greater London Council turned down the union's demand that he be removed from a supervisory post, saying he was being "psychologically tortured" by his men.
 Callingham, 31, handed in his resignation Tuesday, announcing he was emigrating to New Zealand.

Soviet Doctors' Prestige Low

NEW YORK (AP) — Most doctors in the Soviet Union earn low pay and have little prestige, according to Medical World News.
 The publication says about 70 per cent of the doctors who care for the health needs of the average Soviet citizen are women who earn about $150 a month.
 "Skilled factory workers earn more money, are more likely to see their pictures on the front pages of Pravda and are more likely to find a niche in the Communist party, which brings perquisites not enjoyed by the non-party person," adds the magazine.

One 'Mail Pouch' Painter Is Still Plying His Trade

EDITOR'S NOTE — Those Mail Pouch signs on the sides of barns that kids on car trips loved to count are disappearing now, and so are the men who once painted them by the thousands. All except Harley Warrick, 51, still plying his trade.

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
BELMONT, Ohio (AP) — Few ever heard of Harley Warrick. His is hardly a household name.

But Harley Warrick has left his imprint along the highways and byways of nine states, and what he has left is symbolic of America in an age of innocence, an agrarian America, an America of penny candy and nickel cigars.

Harley Warrick is the last of the Mail Pouch sign painters. Surely everyone who has driven through the rolling plains of the midwest or the hills of Appalachia or the mossy lowlands of the South is familiar with his work, an art piece as big as the side of a barn.

CHEW MAIL POUCH TOBACCO TREAT YOURSELF TO THE BEST
Harley Warrick has painted those words — top line white, middle line yellow, bottom line white, background black — more than 16,000 times on about 10,000 barns.

He has painted so many, in fact, he can do it practically by instinct. He remembers painting some of them with a hangover. Perfect. For a lark, he painted a couple upside down just to startle his boss, then repainted them correctly.

At 51, Warrick seems as much a part of Americana as

Gov't Answers Santa's Mail

ROVANIEMI, Finland (UPI) — The Finnish government expects to mail about 60,000 responses this year to children's letters addressed to Father Christmas or Santa Claus in care of the post office in this Lapland capital.

The replies will be written in Finnish, English, Swedish, German, French and Japanese. The project was launched five years ago when letters from many children around the world began arriving in Lapland, home of the reindeer.

his work. His face, pipe in mouth, has as much character as his signs. The eyes are blue, the hair slightly gray, the texture of the skin that of a man who does his work outdoors.

Reflecting on his 31 years on the job, Warrick remembers most vividly, and warmly, the crews he worked with.

"The fellows you got acquainted with and worked with them for years," he says. "They've passed on now, but while you're working on these barns, you remember working there before with a certain crew or the guy and you get to thinking about him. You get a lot of memories that way."

Like Harley's fellows, the signs are passing now. He estimates only a thousand left today.

They have become items of nostalgia, sought after by collectors or for reproductions on postcards and paintings.

They were still plentiful in 1945 when Warrick, then a young man of 20, came home from the war, from the Battle of the Bulge, from the 99th Division, to his farm in eastern Ohio.

"We had one on our barn at home," he recalls. "I'd often wondered how in the heck somebody painted one of them things. I'd just been home from the service about two or three days and kind of looking for a job.

"A crew just happened to come along and paint it then, so I was talking to them. They said, 'Well, if you're interested in it, we got an opening here for you. We need a helper on another crew.' So I just went across the road and packed my suitcase and took off."

And that's the way it was for the next 31 years. Warrick, with his four-inch pure bristle brush and homemade paint in hand, traveled through Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Warrick estimates there were 10,000 barns with Mail Pouch signs back in the mid 1940s, when there were no interstate highways, no mini-cities of motels and fast food shops.

At peak, there were eight men painting Mail Pouch signs, four crews of two men each.

Today, there are not enough locations to keep Warrick busy full time. He works only about 16 weeks out of the year, travels half of what he used to, painting not more than 20 new signs a year, repainting those still standing about every five years.

"I don't work steady," he says. "I have a sign shop at home and I do other commercial work."

Bloch points out that, ironically, while the Federal Highway Beautification Act of 1965 killed the barn signs, the 1974 Highway Act designated them "landmark signs" to be preserved.

The fee to the farmer is nominal, anywhere from $1 a year to $20 a year. Many of the farmers are simply interested in getting their barns painted free.

Warrick never had any special training in art.

"Nothing except high school art," he says. "It's just instinct. And you get to where you can do it without thinking. Freehand."

"It's just more or less, you have to, as I call it, eyeball it. You have to see the sign on there before you do it. You know just about where it has to go and everything, where everything has to be placed before you even start on the barn."

Warrick says he paints a dozen signs a year that have no advertising value but are wanted by collectors either on their barns, toolsheds or rooms of homes they have decorated in a rustic setting. The average cost is about $150.

He also has done Mail Pouch signs for commercial establishments such as restaurants to create a rustic look with genuine barn siding. His work is on display in the West Virginia Historical Museum in Charleston. He also does Mail Pouch oil paintings.

The old Bloch Brothers Tobacco Co. merged with General Cigar and Tobacco Co. of New York a year ago, under the corporate umbrella of the Culbro Corp., a conglomerate of tobacco, snack and drug companies. David Weiss, a General Cigar marketing manager, says the use of television and radio advertising for Mail Pouch began about 15 years ago, "moving away from the barns to more modern media."

"It became a little more scientific marketing," he says, "reaching more people more efficiently." But he adds that some barn advertising will continue.

Warrick has no immediate plans to retire.

"It's part of Americana," he says, "and you want to be part of that. So that's why I like to stay with it. You go by old barns you painted years ago and you get to thinking what you were doing at that time and it just brings back memories being there."

Museum Of Year Award To Pottery Of Past

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONGTON, England (UPI) — Britain's "Museum of the Year" award went this year to a grim and grimy old factory whose pollution record was appalling.

What's more, the brand-new Gladstone Pottery Museum's award was well deserved.

It is still a dirty old factory, manufacturing pottery much as it has since 1787. But it is also a fascinating and informative museum, part of Britain's new passion for preserving key relics of its industrial past.

"This is a museum of how — how pottery was made and how the industry grew up," said David Sekers, its director.

Almost the only part of the antique Gladstone factory not in use are the kilns which dominate it — four graceful, bottle-shaped brick towers three stories tall where clay was fired to make pottery.

The kilns and their workshops surround a cobblestoned courtyard stacked with coal and crates and broken pots. It has the look of a typical medium-sized pottery of the Victorian era.

Factories like the Gladstone once carpeted "the potteries" — six cities centered on Stoke-on-Trent which have produced Staffordshire pottery for more than two centuries. They are the home of firms like Wedgwood and Spode, Minton and Royal Doulton.

Surrounding these great-name whales were shoals of smaller fish. Each had a "pot bank" of belching kilns, creating some of the worst industrial pollution in England.

Then came developments "which changed the face of the potteries within a decade," a museum history says. Slum clearance, clean air laws and redevelopment projects bowled over kilns like tenpins.

The town of Longton alone had more than 1,000 bottle kilns just after World War II. It has less than 50 now, and most of those are doomed.

Suddenly local people realized part of their heritage was vanishing. They banded together, secured funds from a pottery firm and bought the Gladstone works in 1971, just before the bulldozers arrived.

"They came just at the right time," Sekers said. "A year or two more and it would have been too late."

In less than three years, enthusiastic volunteers, working without government money, turned the derelict factory into a split-level, award-winning "living museum."

Traditional displays on upper floors tell the history of the potteries and of this factory, named after an 1863 visit by Prime Minister William Gladstone. There are collections of ceramic tiles, a section on color glazes to decorate pottery, an amusing history of bathtubs and toilet bowls.

"It's dirty. It should be," Sekers said. "You can't have potters slinging clay around without getting everything a bit mucky. It's right. It's a place where people work."

The Gladstone museum opened only last year, and as a museum-in-the-making is far from finished. Sekers said there are plans to make it "a major center of research into the history of the potteries."

Even now, however, it evokes the industrial atmosphere of centuries past, only without the child labor, the depressing griminess or the choking pollution of the potteries of old.

She wears clothes for a 10-12-month-old baby, weighs 19 pounds and is 29 inches tall. Her growth problem is caused by intestinal difficulties. Remains Of Last Aztec Ruler Believed Found

By MATTHEW T. KENNY
MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A small glass case with a clutch of brittle bone fragments is revered by many Mexicans, including President Luis Echeverria, as probably the greatest single relic of the once mighty Aztec empire.

They believe the bones are those of Cuauhtemoc, last Aztec ruler and most venerated historical figure of Mexico's colorful pre-colonial past.

Many Mexican anthropologists, led by Professor Eulalia Guzman and other scientists who have examined, measured, x-rayed, spectrographed, chemically analyzed, photographed and otherwise intensely studied the bones, share that belief.

But despite 27 years of research, the opinions and conclusions of all experts have not been unanimous. A few have challenged or rejected the contention that the bones are Cuauhtemoc's.

The nation is now awaiting the conclusions of a new investigating commission assigned to probe the matter.

It was in 1949 that Professor Guzman, acting on information contained in ancient documents, directed excavations deep below the altar of a centuries-old Spanish colonial church in the isolated Indian village of Ixcateopan, in Guerrero State.

She found, in a tiny, carefully protected earthen crypt an assortment of bones, including part of a skull, beads of jade, amethyst, diamond-like crystal, and metal, two metallic rings, and a copper lance-head, all resting on a small, flat piece of copper.

Most sensational of all, over the skull fragment was a copper plate crudely inscribed with a cross and bearing these crudely etched Spanish words: "Rey E. S. Coatemo" — King and Lord, Cuauhtemoc — and the dates "1525-1529."

Ixcateopan was Cuauhtemoc's birthplace, according to Mexican historians.

As the crow flies, Ixcateopan is about 100 miles southwest of Mexico City — seat of the Aztec Empire — but actually it is many miles farther along the winding mountain roads. For centuries it was almost inaccessible.

Today Ixcateopan is fast becoming a national historical shrine, the supposed bones of Cuauhtemoc a magnet for Mexican tourists.

Last January, Echeverria — in a presidential decree — ordered a new commission of scientists set up to make a fresh study of the question.

But the president, apparently impatient over the lack of a speedy conclusion by the commission, journeyed himself to Ixcateopan last Sept. 26 — the 27th anniversary of Professor Guzman's excavation.

Without hesitation he declared: "As a Mexican, as far as I am concerned these are the remains of Cuauhtemoc."

Whether Echeverria's pronouncement has complicated — from a political point of view — the new probe is unknown. There are no indications yet when the commission's conclusions may be ready.

Cuauhtemoc's stubborn resistance against Hernan Cortes' invading Conquistadores in 1520 — and his stoicism as a tortured captive watching the ruthless destruction of his kingdom by the Spaniards — makes him "an eternal hero" to every Mexican.

The Aztec Lord was hanged by Cortes in 1525, in territory which today corresponds to the Central American Republic of Honduras. According to legend, his corpse was secretly transported by Indian Runners during 40 nights to Ixcateopan.

The date "1529" in the copper plate may mark the time when his remains were interred in the deep earthen niche, a spot covered a few years later by knowledgeable Spaniards, first with a chapel, and then a church which dates from 1539.

LOTS OF CITRUS

VAN NUYS, Calif. (UPI) — Western citrus will be abundant for the winter holidays, says a western growers' cooperative.

A spokeswoman says unusually early rains in September and October promise excellent quality oranges. Rain increases sweetness and growth as no irrigation water can. The rains also increased the sizes of lemons grown in California and Arizona desert areas.

Curfew Law Hit An Obstacle

NORWICH, N.Y. (AP) — This upstate village's curfew law was declared unconstitutional because it says what time kids have to be home but doesn't say when they can go out again.

The law bans children under 17 from streets and other public places after 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and after midnight Friday and Saturday unless accompanied by an adult.

"Parents and minors are not given fair notice of when children ... are permitted to return to the streets," a three-judge panel said Tuesday in throwing out the statute. "The lack of termination time renders the ordinance susceptible to arbitrary, capricious and erratic enforcement and therefore it is unconstitutional."

Civilization Tries Make Inroads

By KENNETH L. WHITING
JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — It's been a tough year for the Dani tribe out there in New Guinea. First an earthquake devastated their home in the Grand Valley of the Ballem and then their sex life was exposed in the name of science.

The Dani, one of several highland tribes, numbered about 80,000 before the earthquake on June 26. Scientists rank them among the world's most primitive people.

The same geographic isolation that hindered rescue operations after the quake made them an anthropologist's dream by keeping their Stone Age culture relatively intact.

There are few roads and the country is so rugged that distance is often calculated by how many days it takes to walk from one point to another. A river and steep ridges help isolate the valley, which is 40 miles long and about 10 miles across at its widest point.

Diplomats from countries which contributed to relief efforts say an exact casualty list cannot be compiled. One U.S. official in Jakarta estimated that more than 400 died and more than 1,000 were missing four months after the earth shifted, triggering landslides.

Indonesia is the world's largest archipelago with 13,677 islands, of which about 6,000 are inhabited. Jayapura, capital of the province of Irian Jaya in western New Guinea, is 2,400 miles east of Jakarta. As a Dutch possession, Irian Jaya was called West Irian.

Official records say the Grand Valley of the Ballem was not discovered by Westerners until 1938. In it they found a tribe of ancestor worshippers who habitually hacked off the top finger joints of young girls as a mark of respect to the deceased.

Yams are their staple food. Dani men raise pigs for dowries and as symbols of wealth, but pork is rarely eaten except on ceremonial occasions.

Women wear bark skirts and not much else. The male wardrobe consists of little more than a penis sheath, or "koteka" in Indonesian.

In 1954 Dutch colonial authorities established a presence in the area at the hamlet of Wumena, which they reached at first by landing amphibious planes on the river. Airstrips on land were cleared later. Administrators and police were followed by missionaries, scientists and other visitors.

In 1967 a United Nations consultant advised Jakarta that "there can be no question of isolating or bypassing the area. Its innocence has already been lost and its induction into the big world well begun."

The government launched Operation Koteka in 1970 to better the social and economic conditions of the highland peoples. At first this crash program stressed putting clothes on the near-naked Dani. Officials now acknowledge that some refused to wear what they were given while others did so reluctantly, without discarding the sheath. This aspect of Operation Koteka was later soft-pedaled and efforts switched to encouraging the tribes to improve their villages.

A new report describes the Dani as "low energy" people who are seemingly indifferent to sex, among other things.

Karl Heider, an anthropologist from the University of South Carolina, published his findings recently in "Man," the journal of Britain's Royal Anthropological Society.

The Dani do not make love during the first two years of marriage, Heider wrote. They abstain from sex for four to six years after the birth of a child. Premarital sex and adultery are virtually unknown. There seems to be no homosexuality or other sexual outlet, the article said.

Heider uncovered no tribal sanctions against sex and "no one shows signs of unhappiness or stress."

They appear reasonably healthy and happy and have a low infant mortality rate. Heider said their low-key view of sex is also reflected in their attitude toward clan warfare.

Ritual battles with plenty of timeouts and few casualties are the rule. There is a "marked absence of aggression or hatred for the enemy."

The Dani, it seems, just couldn't care less.

Frown On Uranium Search Proposals

MARION, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service does not look with favor on a uranium mining company's plans to prospect in the Pisgah National Forest, a spokesman says.

The Forest Service has developed a 10-year management plan for the area and is concerned that the wilderness qualities remain," says John P. Kennedy of Marion, a district ranger. "That area has fantastic trout waters, and we'd really rather discourage mining," he said.

The Sierra Club wants part of the area put into the National Wilderness System, he added in an interview. The area is south of Grandfather Mountain in western North Carolina.

The U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration estimated last June that there were at least 11,000 tons of uranium in the 17,000-acre area in the forest now being explored by the French American Metals Corp. (Framco) of Colorado. Chris Metzger, a spokesman for Framco, which has a prospecting permit for the area, said that much uranium, used in nuclear reactors, would be worth $660 million.

Framco wants approval to begin drilling small, deep-core samples in the area in January. Ranger Kennedy said the Forest Service stipulations in the prospecting permit would ban any plans for strip mining and would require full environmental impact statements before any consideration of a mining permit.

If the company sought a mining permit, public hearing would have to be held, Kennedy said.

If uranium is mined, royalties would be paid to the U.S. Treasury.

To Study Attitude On Social Services

The attitudes of North Carolinians toward social services will be explored this spring by academic humanists, social scientists and community leaders at five public meetings in the state.

Dr. Andrew Dobelesin, a social work professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, will be directing the project.

Greenville has been selected as one of the five cities in which a forum will be held. The forums will involve local professionals, policy makers and interested citizens. Some UNC-Ch professors will participate as guest speakers.

Each forum will be planned locally with the assistance of a meeting coordinator and conference consultants according to Dobelesin. Presentations by specialists in history, philosophy and social science will be included in each meeting, and local panelists will be asked to respond to these presentations.

Successfully Flagged An MD

NEW YORK (AP) — Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority Sgt. Erich Brown thought he'd be filling out an accident report as he approached an apparently disabled car on the bridge's toll plaza.

Instead he was dispatched for oxygen and blankets Tuesday as Yuk Tung Kwan gave birth to a five-pound, four-ounce boy in the back seat.

Mrs. Tung's sister and brother-in-law had successfully scanned license plates in the heavy traffic for the MD designation and flagged down Dr. Dante Gismondi, who was on his way to the New York Medical College-Metropolitan Hospital.

Boris, Of Katmandu, Returning To Hotel Business

By JOHN NEEDHAM
KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Boris Lissanevitch, the emigre White Russian who danced for Diaghilev and opened Nepal to tourists, is going back into the hotel business.
 Boris — as everyone calls him here — can be found these days in the Yak and Yeti restaurant he operates in a century-old palace of the Ranas, the family which supplied all the kingdom's prime ministers until King Tribhuvan toppled them after World War II.
 "When I took it, there were nine cows roaming around here," the restaurateur said, gesturing toward a dining room. "The (Formal) dining room was a cement warehouse. It had no ceiling."
 Now the restaurant is packed at night, especially in the October-March tourist season as visitors go to one of the best known eateries in South Asia for some of the best food in the region, including Borscht.
Boris' Yak and Yeti
 The new hotel will also have the name Yak and Yeti — the former a shaggy ox found high in the Himalayas, the latter the "Abominable Snowman" which many people here believe exists.
 "It will have 105 rooms and two royal suites on the top, one in 16th Century Newari (Nepal's first inhabitants) style and one in what I call 'Rana Rococo,'" Boris explained.
 Only one hotel in Katmandu now is rated at five stars, because it is the only one with a swimming pool. By Nepal standards, Boris said the new hotel, due to open in March, should have 12 stars.

 For almost two decades the hotel associated with Boris' name was The Royal, situated in a decaying old palace — Katmandu is filled with old palaces — which Boris remembers as having two bathrooms for 140 rooms.
More Belly Than Ballet
 Climbers of Mount Everest, 100 miles to the northeast, stayed at the Royal — often in tents pitched in the gardens — as did maharajas, diplomats and assorted tourists.
 The Royal closed about a half-dozen years back and Boris opened his restaurant. It's a favorite gathering spot for residents who stop by for special drinks created by Boris or to meet friends or to hear the owner regale friends and visitors with anecdotes of his past and present.
 Boris was born to a wealthy family in Odessa in 1905 and was forced to scramble when the 1917 revolution came to town. He became a ballet dancer and wound up in Paris in 1924, dancing with Diaghilev's "Ballet Russe." Today he gazes fondly at the paunch developed from eating his own food and sampling his newest drinks and admits he's "more belly dancer than ballet dancer."
Calcutta Club
 Diaghilev's death in 1929 started Boris on an odyssey through Europe, Shanghai, Saigon, Cambodia and on to Calcutta.

 There he took over an old house and opened the "300 Club" so his friends would have somewhere to go after 11 p.m. It was one of only two clubs in the city to which Indians were admitted and the only one open to women.
 During World War II, the club became a haven for generals and colonels assigned to the India-China-Burma theater and Boris was often off in the hills taking one or another of his guests on tiger hunts — a fact he isn't too happy about these days.
Shot 69 Tigers
 "I shot 69 tigers in all during my career, plus a few unofficially, when the guest shot and missed by 50 yards and I shot from behind him and hit," he recalled. He now thinks he shot "68 too many."
 "When you are young, you are bloodthirsty. I shot on foot or from an elephant and it was a thrill."
 In Calcutta, Boris had also become friends with King Tribhuvan, who upon gaining power to go with the throne, invited his old friend to Nepal. The king didn't know why anyone would want to look at mountains, but Boris persuaded him to start issuing visas for those wanting to visit a kingdom that until then had been all but off-limits to foreigners.
Days in Jail
 The tourists came and this year are likely to number 90,000, making tourism Nepal's biggest earner of foreign exchange. For his part Boris fed, housed and entertained the visitors.

 King Tribhuvan died not too long after Boris decided to make Nepal his permanent home and the restaurant owner's relations with succeeding governments haven't always been smooth.
 He has been jailed twice for a total of 142 days, once in a dispute over taxes on a still he was operating with government permission and once on a charge of selling antiquities.
 During the first jail stay, at police headquarters, he had a birthday party behind bars with 40 guests, including several ambassadors. The second time, at the traffic jail, when his guards went out to eat, "I had to guard their rifles."

Caviar for the Queen
 Over the years he has flown in caviar from the Caspian Sea for Queen Elizabeth's 1961 visit and arranged for a Calcutta Rabbi to supervise the slaughter of chickens so the president of Israel could have a Kosher meal.
 The hotel under construction got a loan not from just any bank, but from the World Bank, which loaned $3 million to the government for relay to the hotel in an effort to boost tourism.
 Boris' second wife, Inger, helps run the restaurant and their three sons are all involved in various aspects of restaurant or hotel work. Although 71, Boris has no plans to retire.

Rubles to Burn
 "I don't think at any time I wanted anything particularly. It just came along. I never wanted to amass money. I had a good lesson in my life in 1920, just before the last occupation of Odessa by the Reds. My family sold the horses and we got several hundred million rubles. We had Ukrainian money, Russian money, Turkish money.
 "Someone told my mother Ukrainian money was the best, so she crammed 50-ruble Ukrainian notes into suitcases. A few days later the Reds occupied and later the cold winter came.

 "We found the 50-ruble notes were good to start the fire."
Baccarat Chandeliers
 Boris is happy doing what he does.
 While looking for furnishings for the restaurant, he found three chandeliers in an old palace. They had been imported decades earlier but never assembled and were still in their crates.
 "Well, they turned out to be Baccarat," he said. "One day a woman came in, saw the one in the middle and offered me $150,000 for it. I told her, 'Madam, I sell beef stroganoff, not chandeliers.'"

COMPETITION — Student Jeremy Gelduschek sets the mousetrap to trigger his "American Mess," one of the entries in Stanford University's The Great Bicentennial American Dream Pinball Machine Contest. Two dozen teams of students constructed complicated machine which according to the rules had to cost no more than $5, utilize a golf ball as a trigger and express symbolically an element of The American Dream. 'Eye In The Sky' Keeps A Watch On Gamblers

By GARY R. PEDERSEN
 Associated Press Writer
RENO, Nev. (AP) — They say the hand is quicker than the eye, but here in Reno the hands are seldom quicker than the "eye in the sky."
 It's more like the eye in the ceiling, really. To honest customers those mirrors on casino ceilings are just decoration. To cheaters, the reflective glass has a more serious meaning.
 Behind the two-way mirrors are trained security personnel watching for the dishonest patron.
 Most experts say cheating at the gaming tables is on the decline, largely because of the "eye in the sky" and television cameras which most clubs use to monitor players. Despite the decline, however, it is estimated that dishonest gamblers walk away with more than $20 million a year from casinos.
 That's $20 million compared to the $1 billion yearly which travels through Nevada clubs.

Harolds Club is one of the oldest existing Nevada clubs. Many years ago its owners decided to lower its vaulted ceilings to conceal a maze of overhead tunnels.
 The narrow crawlways honeycomb the false ceiling and allow a bird's eye view of rows of slot machines, crap tables and blackjack games.
 The voyeur can read cards, watch bets and observe dealers through the looking-glass world.
 In charge of it all is "Hop" Hopkinson, who can quickly spot a cheater and who knows many habitual offenders on sight. In his office are a bank of television cameras which monitor the vault, change desks and other vital areas. His sign on the door cautions: "Beware of the unusual."
 "The days of the big cheater are gone," said Hopkinson.
 "They know we are watching all the time. When someone starts winning big, we keep the eye out. Most of the time it's a lucky customer, and there's no substitute for luck.

 "Now the honest customer doesn't know we are watching. The cheater does. The dishonest person will go for $100 or so and then move on. He doesn't want to attract attention. He or she knows we have a lot of $150 jackpots in here. But he also knows most people only win one."
 The entrance to the eye above the main floor of Harolds game area is through a small closet, down a ladder in a vertical shaft and into one section of the labyrinth.
 There are grills above mirrors and beside each viewing slot is a pillow or two — watching cheaters can be a tedious task, Hopkinson explained.
 Telephones are nearby.
 Electrical conduits line the half mile of passageways. The air is stale, and it's quiet and dark except at the ports.

REINGOLD SET — A giant hand protruding from a doorway and a giant head sunk in the ground are part of the set designed by Karl-Ernst Herrmann for the production of Richard Wagner's "Rheingold" at the Paris Opera House in Paris. The opera will be staged by Peter Stein and Klaus Michael Gruber with Theo Adam and Christa Ludwig to be lead singers and Sir Georg Solti conducting the orchestra. (AP Wirephoto)

Candles Lit For Holidays
 KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Candle expert Dave Albright says many people light decorative holiday candles only once or twice, if at all, because they are used as home decorations. Holly- and mistletoe-shaped candles are traditional, but animal shapes are very popular this year.

Yes, Virginia, There Are Unisex Santas In World

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
United Press International
It was an astonishing confession from a California housewife.

"I was a pregnant department store Santa."

What? You mean that jolly old man with the belly that shook "like a bowl full of jelly" was with child?

"That's right," giggled Mrs. Diedre von Tungen. "Seven months pregnant. I had good padding."

Is nothing sacred anymore? Santa and Joe Namath both in pantyhose?

This comes on the heels of the recent revelation that Betsy Ross in the Disney World Bicentennial parade is sometimes a boy in rolled-up jeans.

What's more, said Mrs. von Tungen, standing in line with the children at the department store in Petaluma was a grandmother, a widow who "just missed sitting on Santa's lap."

It's not just more California kookery.

A UPI investigation showed that females are impersonating Santa from coast to coast, even in big city stores.

Mrs. Claus has come out of the kitchen to work as the front man.

The new unisex Santa is not necessarily a rosy-cheeked WASP.

A department store in Paramus, N.J., reports the best Santa it's had in years was a 250-pound black woman named Jane Pittman, who is not known to be related to the famous ex-slave with the same name.

A temporary employment service (Western Temporary Services) that trains about 600 Santas each year for major retail chains across the country says it often disguises women behind beards and padding. "But don't give women the idea that there are hundreds of Santa assignments available for them," warned a spokesman.

Nevertheless, the huge Macy's department store at Manhattan's Herald Square is among the firms that have hired lady Santas.

"It worked out quite well," a Macy's spokeswoman said.

"There was no negative response. It wasn't all that evident that she was a woman. We're planning on having another one this year."

And at Gimbels a spokesman said, "We had at least one, that I know of, but nobody knew it."

But Molly Manning, a 300-pound part-time actress from Texas, remembers her horror last year when a rowdy teenage girl started running through a Los Angeles shopping plaza yelling, "Santa's a girl! Santa's a girl!"

"Finally I had to call the security guard," said Molly, 26, who broke in as Santa five years ago at a Houston hospital and has a daughter, 7.

If Molly sometimes has trouble with teen-agers, the younger children don't seem too upset if they discover her sex.

"They turn to their mothers and say, 'Mom, it's a girl.' The moms just say, 'Right on.'"

Mrs. von Tungen, also 26 and the mother of children 5 years, 4 years and 10 months of age, said two years ago she "saw an ad in the paper and went down and applied."

"They had Santa seminars in San Pablo. They told us what to say and what not to say, what to promise and what not to promise, how to put our uniforms on and that kind of stuff."

The wife of a restaurant owner in the wine country north of San Francisco, Mrs. von Tungen is 5-foot-10, laughs a lot, and admits, "I'm a heavy."

Making her appearance on a 1937 fire engine or a trolley car, she feels she's a convincing Santa.

"I fooled most of them," she said. "None of the little kids recognized me while they were sitting on my lap. None of them made any comment."

"But I did have a couple of mothers whom I knew personally who said to me later, 'My child asked if that was a lady Santa.'"

Mrs. von Tungen, a housewife who devotes full time to her own family when she's not imitating St. Nick, also plays Santa for a group of mentally retarded children. She's only a backup Santa at the store this year.

Last Christmas she worked four-to-six-hour shifts, starting the Saturday after Thanksgiving Day.

"I had a kind of neat thing happen," she said. "A lady had just lost her husband, and he had always been Santa to all their kids and grand-kids. She came and sat on my lap and had her picture taken with me. She said she just missed sitting on Santa's lap. I thought that was kind of neat, even though I was a lady."

Why would a housewife with small children of her own want to play Santa for other children?

"I just did it because I thought it sounded like fun," she said. "It really is fun."

"You should try it sometimes."

No Refunds Appear Likely In Near Future For Land Sale

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than two years ago the government settled a major consumer protection case involving alleged deception in the sale of vacation and retirement property in Florida.

Even though some persons who bought land, and then lost it when they couldn't keep up the payments, were supposed to get back up to $17 million, almost nothing has happened. Nor does it appear likely anything will happen soon.

The company involved was GAC Corp., then of Miami, now of Coral Gables, Fla. Our check into the status of the case was prompted by a reader in Fairview Heights, Ill., who wrote:

"Approximately two years ago my widowed mother died. When examining her personal papers, beautiful, colorful, enticing brochures of Florida land investment property were found. Further investigation revealed that in 1960 she had attended 'free' dinners offered by GAC at a local restaurant.

"This was shortly after my father's death, and for the first time in her life she had a $10,000 bank account (money from insurance benefits), and no one to answer to for her actions."

"The GAC salesman, with his persuasive pitch, did his work well. Over the next 10-year period she purchased three lots in Florida, sight unseen, the cost of which amounted to more than she had received in insurance benefits."

"Her only other source of income was a meager $106 per month Social Security benefit, and she was using half of this to meet the payments on her Florida land investments, for by this time she had far too much invested to stop making payments."

"According to notes found in her personal papers, GAC had informed her that the property had appreciated in value threefold, but prior to her death she had desperately been trying to sell the lots to recover just what she had invested, to no avail.

"She died with less than $5 in her bank account."

The reader added that her family paid off one lot, but in the intervening two years has not received a deed of ownership despite repeated communication with GAC and the Federal Trade Commission.

An FTC lawyer says the case is still very unsettled because GAC is now in bankruptcy. As far as getting your deed, he suggests you write the City National Bank of Miami, 25 W. Flagler St., Miami, Fla. That bank has been land trustee for GAC since 1970, and its operation is apart from the bankruptcy proceeding.

The court, meanwhile, has appointed two trustees who are trying to rehabilitate and reorganize the company. The lawyer suggests that you also write one of them: the principal operating bankruptcy trustee, Frank J. Callahan, care of the GAC Corp., 201 Alhambra Circle, Coral Gables, Fla., 33134.

As it happens, part of the FTC settlement against GAC in September, 1974, involved property in the River Ranch Acres development where your lot is located. The FTC order required GAC to offer persons owning property there and in two other developments the option of exchanging their lots for property in other GAC subdivisions because, FTC said,

The Copley stamp was designed by Bradbury Thompson. The original hangs in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Designer Steven Dohanos was responsible for the Currier stamp.

the property in those three developments was of "little or no use or value."

That land exchange did go on during 1975, but ended when the bankruptcy proceeding started. Not everyone was offered the chance to exchange lots. Only the larger land holders were generally involved because the number of lots available for exchange was limited, an FTC official said.

No refunds for persons who defaulted on their payments have been made yet, and the FTC official says he doesn't think it will happen any time soon.

PRESERVING ART DECO — Designers and laymen are getting together to preserve the Art Deco and Mediterranean style hotels from the city of Miami's early days. The Amsterdam Palace, which was built in 1930 under the name of Casa Casuarina, is one being fixed up; hoping to bring back some of the excitement of the old days which many tourists on the beach remember well. To Lecture December 2

Dr. Virginia Trimble, physicist-astronomer, will lecture at East Carolina University on Dec. 2, at 7:30 p.m. in the Biology Auditorium. She comes to ECU through the Sigma Xi National Lecturer Program and will speak on "Cosmology: Man's Place in the Universe." The lecture is open to the public.

Dr. Trimble's thesis is that human beings come in the middle — they are middle sized, middle aged, and middle weight — half way between the phenomena of atomic physics and those of cosmology.

"This means we can hope to learn about both the atom and the universe by looking at ourselves. Life on earth is the culmination of a long series of stages, from the Big Bang that started off the expansion of the universe through the formation of galaxies, stars, and planets, to the emergence and evolution of life. Changing even one of the fundamental constants of physics or cosmology would prevent one or more of these vital stages from happening."

"Thus the very fact that we are here to observe the universe and ask questions about it guarantees that the universe must be more or less the way it is. The implications of this will be explored," she says.

Offer Tips On Shopping Lists

NEW YORK (UPI) — A national consumer counselor for a retail store chain has some time-and money-saving tips for shoppers. Check your list to see how many persons could be given identical presents, such as a book, and buy a single gift for a family to share instead of individual presents, says home adviser Anne Winfield of F. W. Woolworth's. She recommends housewares and notions departments for a variety of suitable gifts for a number of friends and relatives. Family gifts might be a game, tropical fish, records, or a painting or wall decoration.

American Funny Papers Have Made Great Impact On French

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While Jack and Jill read "Flash Gordon", Pierre and Renee read "Guy l'Eclair."

As a matter of fact, Guy is Flash Gordon—in French.

According to an expert, L'il Abner, Superman, Peanuts and their compatriots have had an impact on French and other cultures second to no other U.S. innovation, except possibly the movies.

The expert is French-born writer Maurice Horn, editor of the 1,000-page "World Encyclopedia of Comics."

He seems to think the U.S. comic strip has done to the French what the French fry has done to the American stomach.

He says nothing has been the same in France since Oct. 21, 1934, when "La Journal de Mickey" first appeared, and Mickey Mouse went international.

At a Smithsonian Institution international conference on "The United States in the World," Horn delivered a paper on the cultural impact of comics.

He talked about the comics' "oneiric qualities" (that's their dreamy nature) or, "the mythopoetic implications of Mickey Mouse" (how Mickey makes myths), and told how the French are caught using American "onomatopoeias" — good old comic strip words which imitate natural sounds, like "zing," "gasp," "zip" and "argh."

The comics' influence is hard to document. But, Horn says, French mothers coax spinach into children's mouths with the argument it will make them "as strong as Popeye"; Blondie helps sell a new kind of can opener; Wimpy lends his name to a fast-food chain.

Because of the comics, says Horn, Frenchmen think of America as a land of crimeridden cities or cowboy-riden badlands and the American family as a matriarchy because the wives in Blondie and Bringing Up Father bully or hoodwink the husband.

But there is positive fallout, too: "The French have been able to gain insight into the openness, vitality and informality characteristic of American society and contrasted with their own, more rigidly structure society. The French also admire the American ability to laugh at themselves, to publicly air their faults and shortcomings in such iconoclastic strips as L'il Abner, Pogo and Doonesbury."

Moreover, Peanuts is always on page one of "France-Soir," the country's most widely circulated paper; in the movie, "Last Year in Marienbad", all the male characters wore evening clothes similar to Mandrake; the Sorbonne offers a course on "History and Aesthetics of the Comics"; and some of the drawings of Picasso (who had the comics read to him) took on comic-like qualities.

Horn says the French even claimed to invent the comic strip (in 1889, but the French version lacked the balloon, "one of the prerequisites of a bona fide comic strip"), and secret deliberations 25 years ago by the Commission for Oversight and Control of Publications for Children and Adolescents led to prosecutions against "objectionable," mainly American, strips, all in vain.

"In the French view," says Horn, "the comics constitute an original and distinctive 20th Century art form. The American comics are regarded as one of the great cultural achievements of the United States and one of its foremost contributions to western culture."

Only the Americans fail to appreciate the comics' importance, Horn sighs.

"It is, of course, the fate of all new art forms to be greeted with derision."

Israel Gains Exile Singer

TEL AVIV (UPI) — The Lebanese civil war has given Israel a singer.

Alain Abadie, a 33-year-old Jew, fled Beirut last April, made his way to an aunt in Tel Aviv, and has been singing here ever since.

Once labeled the "Elvis Presley of Beirut," Abadie enjoyed considerable success in Lebanon.

"The Lebanese knew I was Jewish," he said, "but they all seemed to like me — all the same."

When the Palestinians ransacked their apartment, the Abadie family knew it was time to leave, and contacted Jewish agencies that helped them flee the country through Athens.

Since in Israel, Abadie has been singing at most of the big hotels and other entertainment spots.

He has appeared on Israeli television, radio and before units of the armed forces.

He is currently negotiating with CBS for a record "probably on a Lebanese theme," he said.

Can Cut Their Own Yule Tree

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — In these days of artificial Christmas trees, people who yearn for the old tradition of cutting down one's own fresh tree can do so at 500 locations in California.

The sites are called Christmas tree plantations. The California Christmas Tree Growers Association says most locations have "a large number of different species of trees to choose from, and some even have picnic facilities ... so pack a lunch."

Facsimile Of Codex Has A High Price

By JOEL EPSTEIN
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Like the message it carries, the world's oldest complete Hebrew Bible has survived invasions, fire, pogroms and the passing of centuries.

For more than 1,000 years, Jews have guarded the "aleppo crown" codex, ransoming it from Gentile conquerors, hiding it from marauders and finally smuggling it from Syria to Israel.

Some of the parchment pages are badly faded and about a quarter of it was damaged by fire during an anti-Jewish riot 28 years ago.

The Hebrew University in Jerusalem recently published a facsimile edition of the codex. The publication, of value to Jewish and Christian scholars alike, is the fruit of a $130,000, four-year research program.

The 600-page reproductions, printed by the university's press, cost $400 a copy.

"We have scrolls of parts of the Old Testament which predate the codex," says Prof. Moshe Goshen-Gottstein, who headed the research, "but this is the oldest Old Testament we have. Older ones have vanished in antiquity."

Unlike a scroll, which is printed on only one side, a codex is a manuscript bound like a book, with writing on both sides of the page, Goshen-Gottstein explained in an interview.

He said, "Ritual demands that the Hebrew Bible, unlike secular books, be spelled and read absolutely correctly. The aleppo crown was the first manuscript ever to include instructions on all the correct spellings and readings."

The codex was written at the beginning of the 10th century by the master scribe Aharon Ben Asher, working in Tiberias by the Sea of Galilee. He fills the margins with notes on spelling and cryptic signs to guide future generations of scribes and worshippers.

The sacred volume was carried to Jerusalem, center of the Jewish world, where it became famous throughout the Middle East.

In the 11th century, Jerusalem was sacked by the crusaders, then by the Arab Seljuks. The Jews of the city were massacred and their possessions burned and looted.

Ben Asher's Bible was seized and carried off, apparently to Cairo. There it was held for ransom to the Jewish community.

"There is a basic principle in the Jewish religion that people and books must be ransomed," said Goshen-Gottstein. So the Jews raised the money and bought the book for the Jewish library of Cairo.

In the 14th century, the volume was taken to the Syrian city of Aleppo. There it received its present name — the "aleppo crown" — and became enshrined in the main synagogue of the large Jewish community.

The crown remained in Aleppo for more than 500 years. Then, during the Israeli war of independence in 1948, a mob of enraged Syrians broke into the synagogue, tore at the manuscript and set it ablaze.

But only about a quarter was burned. The charred parchments were rescued and hidden away. About 20 years ago, it was smuggled out of Syria into Israel.

Sub-Zero Heat Wave In Lab

CHASKA, Minn. (AP) — For scientists in a laboratory here a "heat wave" is anything over 76 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

Such numbing temperatures are used by a medical diagnostic manufacturer to freeze-dry and store products, including those used by hospitals to determine levels of chemicals, proteins and human growth hormones in blood samples. To avoid a temperature increase that could damage inventory, temperatures are checked every few minutes, round the clock — from 35 miles away.

Electronic sensors tied by leased telephone lines to a Honeywell shared-time building control center near Minneapolis allow an operator to check, in just a few seconds, what a manual observer would spend an hour or more surveying.

Siamese minnows often grow to be more than eight feet long and weigh as much as 300 pounds.
