Supreme Court Postpones Execution Of Gary Gilmore

By CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court often is asked to spare the condemned. Now, for the first time anyone can recall, it has spared at least temporarily a person who wants to die.

Gary Gilmore, convicted of murdering a Utah motel manager, was to be shot at sunrise Monday. But the high court stepped in Friday to stay the execution.

Gilmore's lawyer said the 36-year-old convict, who wants to be shot, was "very disappointed" about the ruling which could force him to "languish" for months or years on death row at Draper State Prison.

Three of the nine Supreme Court justices did not want to consider Gilmore's case, but the majority decided to postpone his date with death at least until Utah responds to a stay application filed by the NAACP Legal Defense Fund on behalf of Gilmore's mother. The court told state lawyers to file the papers by Tuesday.

Unless Gilmore finds another way to end it all, he will have to live at least until the justices have read the material.

After the justices review the state and LDF positions, they will decide either to drop the case and lift the temporary stay or to extend the stay and weigh constitutional questions raised by LDF. The latter process could take months.

Gilmore told prison officials he wanted to telephone his mother and try to talk her into dropping the case. State lawyers said they will contend she has no legal standing to appeal on her son's behalf.

The Supreme Court may have been moved in its initial stay by the principle that justice is for everybody, not just a single individual, since fallout from the Gilmore case could affect others in the future.

The court expressed particular interest in Utah's reaction to LDF charges that Gilmore did not intelligently waive his right to appeal after being convicted of murder.

LDF said there is no evidence he was advised of rights he was waiving "or that he knew or understood them."

It also noted the Utah Supreme Court did not rule on validity of the capital punishment law, and said the prisoner for a time was represented by a lawyer who had a financial interest in his death because he wanted to write a book about it.

If the temporary stay is dissolved, another problem arises.

The firing squad had been ordered for Monday to avoid possible conflict with a Utah law that says executions must occur 60 days from sentencing. Gilmore was sentenced Oct. 7, making the 60-day deadline fall on Tuesday, and the high court's stay might extend beyond Tuesday no matter what its final decision.

State officials doubt Gilmore would be freed under the 60-day deadline law, saying intervening state stays of execution have stopped the 60 days from running. But the convict's lawyer is expected to cite the deadline in a trial court motion Tuesday.

Even if Gilmore were rid of the murder conviction entirely, he still has another charge hanging over him and could go through the same grueling process again.

Gilmore may chafe at society's delay in taking a life for a life. But his case could reinforce some valuable rules for others more anxious to live than die and for a system whose watchword is supposed to be "equal justice under law."

Peasants Invade Mexican Land

CULIACAN, Mexico (UPI) — Truckloads of landless peasants flying the Mexican flag poured into rural farmlands Saturday, paralyzing work on more than 100,000 acres and ruining crops of potatoes, wheat and tomatoes.

The invasion presented new President Jose Lopez Portillo a major crisis after only four days in office over land distribution in Mexico's rich Pacific northwest.

New groups of peasants, who identified themselves as members of the General Union of Workers and Farmers of Mexico, sped toward the town of Los Mochis to join followers of "The Old Agrarian Guard" organization that started a work stoppage of salaried farm laborers on some 106,000 acres of choice cropland.

"We won't leave the fields until we get land," said an organizer of the workers' and farmers' union.

By Saturday, more than 60 groups of landless peasants, flying the Mexico flag and multi-colored protest banners demanding land distribution, were stationed along the Pacific international highway in the northernmost part of the state.

Crops of potatoes, wheat and tomatoes were feared lost because of the forced work stoppage.

Gilberto Partida Zamudio, legal counsel for the Northern Sinaloa Association of Small Property Holders, said that the "losses to farmers now mount into the millions of pesos, since the produce being grown is perishable and if not harvested in time, is lost."

In Mexico City, the Agrarian Reform Minister, Jorge Rojo Lugo, rallied to the defense of the small farmers, whose land holdings are generally within the maximums permitted by agrarian reform law. The maximum parcel of irrigated land allowed an individual farmer is 247.1 acres. Non-irrigated landholdings can be larger.

Asked by newsmen in Mexico City about the recent series of squatter invasions in Mexico's northwest, Rojo Lugo replied, "The authentic small parcel will have absolute guarantees for producing. There must be absolute respect for the rule of law under which we live."

Must Wipe, It's The Law

By The Associated Press

Wipe your windshield clear of ice and frost, otherwise you may be arrested.

It's the law in North Carolina that automobile windshields must be unobstructed. And that no vehicle may be driven with any nontransparent material on the windshield or the windows.

And "ice and snow is nontransparent because, from a technical standpoint, it becomes a mirror and you can't see through it," says Bill Melvin of the attorney general's office.

The commander of the Highway Patrol's 13-county F-Troop, headquartered in Newton, Captain E.T. Green, says a recent highway death was attributed to a person's driving with only a peephole in a frost windshield.

Green says, "We will be issuing tickets. And some motorists may be arrested if they have been warned before, or if their violation is serious."

Court Order Permitted Comatose Woman To Die

By J. PAUL WYATT

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI)—A comatose 26-year-old mother who had been kept breathing by a respirator for 14 days died Saturday 13 minutes after doctors, acting under a court order, unplugged her life support system.

"It's all over," confirmed Roy Lewis, an attorney for Dr. James Eugene Glenn, the physician treating Mrs. Celia Cain.

Doctors said Mrs. Cain had been clinically dead for two weeks that her brain was partially dissolved and that her blood was beginning to coagulate within her blood vessels.

The mother of two children, ages 4 and 9, Mrs. Cain entered St. Vincent's Medical Center for a routine hysterectomy on Nov. 19. She underwent surgery the following day, but developed breathing problems.

She was then rushed to the intensive care unit and put on the respirator. She lapsed into a coma about five hours after the respirator was put in place, and never regained consciousness.

Doctors advised her husband, Gerald, several days ago there was no hope for her recovery, and he obtained a court order allowing that the life support system be shut off.

The order was issued by Duval County Circuit Judge John S. Cox, who decreed that the devices be removed for a period of 45 minutes. If there were signs of life at the end of that time, the support system was to be restored. If not, Mrs. Cain was to be declared legally dead.

Upon learning the respirator was to be shut down, Mrs. Cain's husband said, "This is what we asked for. We are pleased with the judge's decision. We believe Celia's been dead. Now we can pick up our lives and go on."

The court order was signed shortly after 11 a.m., and at 12:25 p.m. the respirator which had been keeping Mrs. Cain breathing was shut off. At 12:38 p.m. her heart stopped, and hospital attorney John Corrigan announced to newsmen that Mrs. Cain was dead.

Doctors waited until 1:10 p.m. for any sign of a heart beat, as specified by Judge Cox, before declaring her legally dead, however. Dr. Glenn signed the death certificate.

Mrs. Cain's husband and other members of her family were at Low Cost Revenue Bonds Lure Industry To N.C.

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (UPI) — Availability of low cost industrial revenue bonds has convinced seven industries to locate or expand in North Carolina in the last four months, state officials said Saturday.

Thomas B. Broughton, state director of economic development, said in a report to the state Board of Natural and Economic Resources that the seven industries will employ more than 2,000 persons and make a capital investment of $165 million.

Authority for counties to sell bonds to finance industrial facilities was approved in a Constitutional amendment referendum by state voters last March 23. Before then, North Carolina was the only state without authority to issue industrial revenue bonds.

Development of the detailed application and bond sale procedures were completed in August.

In reaching financing agreements with county bonding authorities, the seven industries all indicated the availability of industrial revenue bonds was a major factor in making decisions to either locate or expand in North Carolina.

A report on the bond program said each of the seven industries guaranteed they would pay higher than the average manufacturing wage in the county in which they would locate new industrial facilities.

Three other companies and counties have reached agreements for using industrial revenue bonds to finance environmental protection equipment.

Active negotiations are underway with five other companies to use the bonds and either locate new or expanded facilities in the states. Successful negotiations could result in another 1,000 jobs, the report said.

Broughton said 25 counties have established industrial revenue bond authorities. A total of 60 counties have indicated they will organize authorities to offer the bonds.

"We're off to a good start with the program," said Broughton. "I expect things to get even better as the counties and the state become more experienced in operating the program."

Composer Benjamin Britten Dies At His Aldeburgh Home

ALDEBURGH, England (UPI) — Benjamin Britten, Britain's best-known and most-loved composer, died early Saturday morning at his Aldeburgh home at the age of 63.

Lord Britten, who was made a life peer by Queen Elizabeth earlier this year, had been in ill-health since 1973 when he underwent a heart operation.

Born Nov. 22, 1913 in Loestoft, Suffolk, Britten began studying composition at age 13 with English composer Frank Bridge and had written several full-scale symphonic choral and instrumental works before he was 17. He won a scholarship to London's Royal College of Music.

Britten was only 32 when his opera, "Peter Grimes" was produced at London's Sadler's Wells theater and won him an international reputation. "Peter Grimes" was credited with giving a new dramatic dimension to opera.

The operas "The Rape of Lucretia," "Death in Venice," "Gloriana," "The Turn of the Screw" and "Owen Wingrave" followed, along with scores of songs, instrumental compositions and his entertainment for children — "Let's Make an Opera" and "Billy Budd."

The productive composer also wrote numerous concertos, chamber music, works for children's voices, cello compositions, piano compositions and ballets. And Britten was an accomplished pianist and often performed with tenor Peter Pears.

With Pears, Britten organized the Aldeburgh Annual music festival 29 years ago. The sleepy fishing village with a population of 3,000 was made famous by the festival and now attracts hundreds of chamber music enthusiasts to its recital halls and churches at festival time each year.

Tension In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A bomb detonated from a moving car exploded near the home of Lebanese leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt Saturday, killing or wounding at least 20 persons including two children.

Sporadic shelling in north and a reported buildup of Israeli troops along the southern border also added to the tension over a decision by the Syrian-dominated Arab peacekeeping force to begin confiscating heavy weapons held by militia factions next week unless they voluntarily give them up.

Rumored Choice

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Though she said she had not heard from President-elect Jimmy Carter or his aides, a Duke University professor and administrator is rumored to have a strong chance of being named secretary of labor.

In a telephone interview from her Durham home Friday night, Juanita Kreps, 55, said, "I really haven't been approached by the administration. All I have is rumor."

Mrs. Kreps is an economics professor and vice president for general administration at Duke.

Her candidacy for the job was revealed by Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C., here Friday. Carter's transitional staff had asked Andrews his opinion of Mrs. Kreps, he said.

Women Shouldn't Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has been told that married women shouldn't have to pay to have their names listed separately in telephone directories.

35th Anniversary Of Pearl Harbor Observed

THE 35TH ANNIVERSARY .... of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941, was observed in Greenville by area men who survived the dramatic event. The group shown here met Saturday evening at the National Guard Armory.

From Greenville, Kinston, Williamston, Farmville, Ayden and other area towns, a number of World War II veterans gathered together in Greenville yesterday to observe the 35th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

The veterans and their wives got together at the National Guard Armory following dinner, and in an informal program various veterans spoke briefly of their memories of that day and later events of their military days.

Jack Finan, coordinator of the local observance, said the group meeting in Greenville yesterday consisted of "about 90 per cent of those who were actually at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, with the remainder representing veterans who served at one or another time in Hawaii."

He noted too that a large contingent of veterans and their families would be in Hawaii on Tuesday for the primary observance of Pearl Harbor Day. "But all of us could not make it there for one or another reason," he said, "so instead we are holding local observances throughout the country."

Larger gatherings are being held this weekend in several American cities, including New Orleans and Las Vegas.

"The observance, which we call 'Survivors of Pearl Harbor,'" Finan said, "is held nationally only every five years. This of course is the 35th anniversary, so the next observance will the 40th anniversary to be held in 1981."

It was on December 7, 1941 that Japanese planes attacked the huge naval base at Pearl Harbor, seriously crippling the American naval power and taking the lives of many Americans in the attack. The attack precipitated America's entry into World War II.

Man Held On Kidnap Charge

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C. (AP) — A Georgia man who allegedly threatened the life of President-elect Jimmy Carter at his home in Plains, Ga., is being held here on a charge of kidnaping a man and ordering him to drive to Plains, authorities report.

Talmage Bailey, speciel agent in charge of the Secret Service in North Carolina, said, "We are investigating him in connection with remarks along the line of a threatening tenor toward President-elect Jimmy Carter."

A law enforcement officer who asked to remain anonymous said he overheard investigators say the man had made threats to assassinate the president-elect.

Bailey said the Secret Service had been alerted by Fayetteville police as to the threats allegedly made by Tommy Joe Terrell, 26, of Monroe, Ga., after his arrest Thursday night on the kidnaping charge.

Fayetteville police charged Terrell with kidnaping Donald Ackerman of Raeford, N.C., about 9 p.m. Thursday at a drive-in restaurant, and ordering him to drive to Plains.

L. W. Watson, Fayetteville police detective, said Terrell was armed with an AR.15 semi-automatic rifle, a civilian version of the U. S. Army M-16.

Ackerman's wife, who was inside the restaurant, called police when she saw what was happening, investigators said.

Replace KCIA Head

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Park Chung-hee replaced the head of the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency (KCIA), which has been linked to an alleged influence-buying scheme in the U.S. Congress.

A brief announcement from the presidential office said Park had accepted the resignation of KCIA chief Shin Jik-soo. The announcement gave no reasons for this and other cabinet changes, but observers said they believed the KCIA switch meant in part that Shin was accepting responsibility for the reported defection of a senior KCIA officer in Washington. The officer, Kim Sang-keun, is believed to be providing information to U.S. investigators on the alleged Korean payoffs to congressmen.

Marketplace Will Determine

NEW YORK (AP) — The chairman of United States Steel Corp. says the marketplace and not industry leaders will determine whether a recent $6-a-ton increase in sheet and strip steel prices will hold.

"Of all the price increases announced over the past two years, probably only 30 per cent of them ever took effect," said Edgar B. Speer, chief executive of the nation's largest steelmaker.

Jamacian Troupe Shot

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — Bob Marley, one of Jamaica's top reggae singers, and three members of his troupe were shot and wounded Friday night by a band of gunmen who invaded his home, police said Saturday. The attack was believed politically motivated.

Marley, whose revolutionary muscial style is highly popular among fans of Jamaican music in the United States, was shot in the left hand by the gunmen in the raid on his uptown Kingston bungalow.

The other three victims, all members of his reggae troupe "Bob Marley and the Wailers," were Rita Marley, Lewis Griffiths and manager Don Daylor.

Carter Considers Cabinet Prospects

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter, after choosing an insider and an outsider for two top administration posts, settled down Saturday to the tough task of naming 10 more cabinet members and filling other major jobs.

With no formal appointments scheduled, Carter concentrated on reading profiles of potential appointees prepared by chief talent scout Hamilton Jordan. Jordan has made in-depth inquiries on about 70 persons being considered for key posts in the new government.

One anticipated appointment is that of Atlanta attorney Robert J. Lipshutz, Carter's campaign treasurer, as White House counsel. An early Carter supporter, Lipshutz would become the next president's chief lawyer and a policy adviser in a number of areas.

Lipshutz, 54, vice chairman of the Georgia Board of Human Resources, declined to comment about reports on his selection. He would have to divest himself of private banking and financial interests before taking the White House job.

Yet another possible appointment is that of Juanita Kreps, vice president of Duke University and a prominent economist, to a post either on the Council of Economic Advisers or as labor secretary.

Carter announced Friday he had chosen veteran Eastern establishment troubleshooter Cyrus Vance as secretary of state and Atlanta banker Thomas Bertram Lance, who once ran for Georgia governor, to head the Office of Management and Budget and help make good on campaign promises to cut the federal bureaucracy. He called both appointments "superlative."

Overall, Carter is proceeding more slowly than his predecessors on transition appointments.

The President-elect has said he hopes to have his cabinet identified by Christmas.

Congress Seeks Medical Data

By CRAIG A. PALMER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By order of Congress, the government has asked 300 hospitals for "sensitive and confidential" information on patients and doctors involved in subsidized medical care programs.

According to a letter obtained by UPI and comments of officials involved, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare needs the survey to evaluate the watchdog agencies that oversee the $37 billion-a-year Medicare and Medicaid programs.

"Because of the sensitive and confidential nature of the data, we have made special arrangements to safeguard the privacy of the patients and practitioners represented in the study," HEW's Dr. Louis Hellman said in a letter asking 300 hospital administrators to release the information voluntarily.

"We need to find out how the (watchdog) program has affected patient admissions and lengths of stay."

The data requested includes patient date of birth or age, residence, and blood pressure on admission; the attending physician and surgeon; final diagnosis explaining admission; discharge status; and expected source of payment.

The study aims to evaluate the effectiveness of the so-called Professional Standards Review Organizations, created by Congress in 1972 to monitor the quality and necessity of subsidized care given Medicare and Medicaid patients.

As part of that effort to eliminate waste in those programs, Congress ordered the government to report on the PSRO watchdog network after a time.

Some tentative data indicates PSROs are reducing the length of hospital stays for subsidized patients and eliminating some unnecessary treatments.

HEW recognizes the reluctance of hospital administrators to release confidential patient and doctor information and has taken pains to assure them privacy will be respected in the survey.

No Bathing, No Touching

LONDON (AP) — Hard on the heels of the unsettling news that they can no longer take a bath at Bath, Britons were told today they will also be prevented from touching the stones at Stonehenge.

The Times of London reported that the British government plans to put a fence around Stonehenge, the Bronze Age circles of stones on Salisbury Plain, because tourists are endangering the ancient monument.

The 750,000 who visit the 4,000-year-old site each year can now roam freely among the massive stones, touching them and slowly rubbing away their ancient markings.

The 72 monoliths, still essentially a mystery to modern man, stand in two circles 340 feet in diameter. The Times said the British Environment Department proposes erecting a rope fence 100 feet from the circles, with an earthen bank and ditch in between to keep people out.

On Friday, the famous mineral spring baths at Bath, discovered by the Romans 1,900 years ago, were shut down because the Bath city council found them too expensive to maintain and the National Health Service refused to take them over.

Released

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Two indigent brothers who spent two months in jail because they could not raise $5,000 bond now are free. Charges that they committed a $47 robbery were dropped after the prosecuting witness said it was dark at the time and he could not make positive identification.

The judge reprimanded him.

Jailed Americans On Hunger Strike

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Hundreds of American prisoners in Mexican jails staged a hunger strike Saturday to win the parole which they say was promised by the administration of former President Luis Echevarria.

"The purpose of this action is singular: freedom," a strike committee in the Santa Marta Acatitla men's prison in Mexico City, said in a written announcement Friday.

The prisoners claim they called off a hunger strike in September because Echeverria's administration assured them that a parole law would be passed within 60 days and that freedom would be their prize for good behavior.

The director of one Mexico City prison facility, the Northern Detention Center, was angry about the Americans' strike plans.

"Here in this detention center the one and grave problem is the undiscipline and danger of the 20 North American drug traffickers held here, who frequently incite the other prisoners to make escape attempts, to not work in the prison shops and to carry out hunger strike," Antonio Sanchez Galindo, director of the facility, he said.

In all, about 600 U.S. citizens are imprisoned in jails around the country, mostly on accusations of drug-related offenses. Of that total, about 160 are in the four main prison facilities in Mexico City.

Although a prisoner exchange agreement was signed between Mexico and the United States on Nov. 25, U.S. officials said no prisoners could be transferred to jails in the United States before April, because the U.S. Congress must work out "enabling legislation" to put the treaty into effect.

The Mexican Senate, meanwhile, has pending a measure which would speed up parole procedures for the American prisoners in this country.

Eastern Carolina Exposition?

Success of last month's Tobacco Farmer Show, with a three-day attendance of around 70,000 people, should induce some thoughts about what eastern North Carolina could do on an annual basis in the exposition field.

This has not been a blue-ribbon year for county fairs (the closest comparable event we can at the moment visualize) in this part of North Carolina. There are probably a number of reasons, but we'd like to think operators of the Pitt County Fair were thinking of one solution . . . that of building a better "mousetrap". . .when they announced acquiring a larger fairgrounds site for future operations.

It has been apparent for a long time that local facilities were too small to adequately present a panorama of the county's agricultural, industrial, business and cultural riches. And we'd suspect most county fairs here in the east are in much the same boat. Still, they offer a basis for growth and imaginative functions other than the usual carnival and severely limited exhibits.

Maybe it is time to think in terms of a regional fair, incorporating resources of several counties, for an exposition worthy of the region.

For such a project, Pitt is situated in an enviable position. It is the hub of a cluster of seven counties, six of them bordering Pitt: Edgecombe, Greene, Lenoir, Craven, Beaufort and Martin.

Suppose these seven (we'll think "small" in our beginnings) united in an Eastern Carolina Exposition that offer a panorama of what the area is really all about.

This cluster of counties has resources that would be hard to beat in terms of industry, education, cultural and agricultural interests. Too, the entertainment value of such an exposition could be enhanced, offering a much larger show than any of the involved counties could individually stage.

True, the idea faces obstacles; perhaps the greatest being surrender of the role of "big Frog in a small pond." Against this, there is old-fashioned business sense (and there's plenty of that in the area). Basically, running a successful fair is like operating a successful business. Instead of being a relatively small business, an Eastern Carolina Exposition would be a truly big operation.

Together, our counties could present the biggest affair of its kind east of Raleigh. Someday, somebody is going to put it all together and approximate the concept described here.

It might not be launched in Pitt; but it might as well be. Geographically, it's a natural. In terms of looking ahead, it fits the nature, enthusiasms and abilities of Pitt Countians.

"The Eastern Carolina Exposition"! Sounds rather exciting, doesn't it?

Shakeup In Child-Serving

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The biggest shakeup developing among North Carolina Government agencies during the coming four years is in the category known as "child-serving."

Criticism in that area goes back many years, and was brought into focus by a legislative study commission which over two years ago condemned inter-agency jealousies, bureaucratic turf-fighting, competition for clients, and intensive lobbying techniques as being self-serving to the numerous agencies—but not serving to children.

New Department

The short-lived solution proposed: creation of a Department for Children in state government was quickly rejected by the General Assembly leadership. Rather, a host of stopgap measures were put forth: a commission on Children with Special Needs, transfer of training schools from Corrections to Human Resources, beefing up of Child Advocacy activities, passage of laws stating what ought to be done, but lacking the resources or fixing of responsibilities to produce success.

Thus, children continue to "fall through the gaps" of state services as bureaucratic guidelines set up criteria for eligibility in a multitude of programs; and child-serving agencies fall under several different bureaucratic domains: Human Resources, Education, Administrative Office of Courts, private contractors.

State Auditor Henry L. Bridges spoke to this concern in a recent audit report on the failure of community treatment efforts for juveniles.

"We cannot make any all-inclusive suggestions to solve the problem, but certainly the need for some objective, independent study by qualified persons is indicated," the auditors stated.

"This study should be designed to determine the law changes and organizational changes necessary to effect a coordinated effort among all North Carolina State agencies handling children with special needs. We feel that such a study is needed before additional money is expended on programs such as this Community-Based Program.

"(State Law) assigns the Secretary of Human Resources the responsibility for coordination of state-level services relating to Juvenile Delinquency and for coordination and planning between the child serving agencies with the Department of Human Resources.

The Opposite

"We saw little evidence of this cooperation between state-level agencies and in fact saw much the opposite."

Auditors called attention to the existence of problems in all areas of serving children, and concluded that "the major objective of effective assistance to children will not be accomplished without a major overhaul of North Carolina's child serving process."

Governor-elect James B. Hunt, Jr., has promised to appoint a junvenile study commission as one of the few study groups he intends to use. Pledging "action rather than study," Hunt said the children's commission will be charged with reporting by the middle of his four-year term, providing time for action.

Will such a study group resurrect the idea of a single agency to handle the problems of children? Many close to the situation think that is the only solution, but also recognize the intensive fight which would accompany such a move.

At the least, however, close observers believe some method of cutting through competing fund lines, rigid guidelines, and conflicting regulations must move toward creation of some single source of power and authority.

Sunday Morning Notes

United Press International came up with the Doublespeak Awards in the UPI Reporter, which is distributed to newspaper clients, in November.

Naturally the Doublespeak Awards went mostly to Washington, the Doublespeak capital of the world.

The awards are given by the National Council of Teachers of English with the monitoring done by its Committee on Public Doublespeak.

Winner was the State Department for its announcement of a new consumer affairs coordinator. The job description went thusly: "Review existing mechanisms of consumer input, thruput and output and seek ways of improving these linkages via the ' 'consumer communication channel.' "

And if that's clear you might consider the second place winner Daniel Patrick Moynihan who was elected to the Senate from New York and resigned from the United Nations. He said, "I would consider it dishonorable to leave this post and run for any office, and I hope it would be understood that if I do, the people, the voters to whom I would present myself in such circumstances, would consider me as having said in advance that I am a man of no personal honor to have done so."

Runner up was Nancy Reagan, wife of the presidential candidate, who when asked why she favored the death penalty, said, "Because it saves lives."

As a memorable quote of the year UPI cited Jimmy Carter 's, "It will be nice to have a President in the White House who doesn't speak with an accent." Among the forgettable stories of the year were:

—Grits burst upon the national gastronomic scene, with recipes ranging from Jalapeno Grits Souffle to Grits for Singles.

—Peanuts gain new status, grow-your-own boom predicted.

—Bicentennial creations inlude a 300-pound candy statue of George Wasnington and a 10-ton cherry pie.

—New records claimed for sitting on a bed of nails , hand clapping, coin flipping, bench sitting, collard green eating and the world's largest party, featuring a 70-pound red, white and blue gumdrop.

A lot of silliness during the year—except for the collard green eating, of course.

Governor J.C.B. Ehringhaus issued a call today for a special session of the North Carolina General Assembly to meet December 10 at 11 a.m. to enact social security legislation.

The call, issued by the governor and the council of state, is for the new legislature elected last November. It said the representatives would be asked to pass legislation "acceptable to the federal Social Security board."

The governor made it plain that he still considered the Cherry Act of the 1935 legislature ample to qualify the state for participation in federal Social Security funds despite a ruling of the security board.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Don't Tangle With Jordan

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President-elect Carter's abrupt abandonment of plans to announce on Nov. 15 his selection of Jack H. Watson Jr. as the new administration's budget director has spawned a rule for survival in Jimmy Carter's Washington: don't get tough with Hamilton Jordan.

Watson, still officially Carter's transition chief, is described by one insider as "a walking dead man." Whether or not he ends up in the Carter administration, there is no chance he will head the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) or any other cabinet-level department.

The reasons given by sources close to Carter: the President-elect's dissatisfaction with the quality of work by Watson's big transition staff and Watson's tendency to "aggrandize" himself. But Watson's fatal error was trying to battle toe-to-toe with Jordan, Carter's campaign chairman and longtime aide. Watson was not the first and probably will not be the last to underestimate Hamilton Jordan.

Jordan, soft-voiced and baby-faced at 33, is easy to underestimate. In a city of prevailing self-adulation, Jordan deprecates his own knowledge and tells how seldom he actually talks with Carter. In fact, the rumpled, usually tieless Jordan is a canny infighter, maintaining excellent contacts with both old pros and the new left and clouding his ideological preferences as effectively as Jimmy Carter.

An attempt to take over the campaign early this year by Dr. Peter Bourne, head of Carter's Washington office, was crushed by Jordan (with Bourne still relegated to peripheral assignments). That lesson apparently was not fully appreciated by Watson, 38-year-old Atlanta law partner and protege of Charles Kirbo, the wise old head in the Carter operation.

Even while managing the Carter campaign's final stages in late October, Jordan was wary of Watson's separate transition operation across town in Atlanta. Two weeks before the election, a Jordan associate told us Watson was making a deadly error in excluding Jordan from transition planning.

Watson compounded that error by allocating one staffer each in the transition for Jordan and press secretary Jody Powell, thereby cementing two formidable enmities. Nor was the President-elect happy about all the publicity showered on Watson. The result: Watson stood accused of aggrandizement.

When Carter announced Powell as press secretary at his Nov. 15 press conference in Plains, he had also planned to name Watson as OMB director. Carter held back both that selection and naming Jordan and issues chief Stuart Eizenstat to the White House staff, planned as well for Nov. 15. But whereas Jordan and Eizenstat will join the White House staff in due course, Watson's future is uncertain.

Watson did not get the message from Plains. On Nov. 16, he delivered a condescending introduction of Jordan at a transition staff meeting in Washington. He described Jordan as helping with inaugural plans and "debriefing" of Carter state campaign chairmen, adding only incidentally that Jordan would be in charge of personnel for the new administration.

As Watson's stock dropped inside the Carter operation, the self-damaging favorable publicity continued (including a profile in the Nov. 23 New York Times with his picture captioned, "A formidable ability to excel at almost anything"). But the reality of his condition reached the news media this last week when the President-elect's reported dissatisfaction with transition efforts were traced to Watson.

Neither Jordan nor his close associates seem to be planting the anti-Watson stories. Jordan denies, publicly and privately, any tension with Watson. Moreover, he is anxious to avoid the media "aggrandizement" that helped do in Watson.

But Jordan cannot duplicate the remarkable feat eight years ago by H. R. Haldeman in hiding from the outside world for nearly a

Other Editors Say Crime Doen't Pay

(Winston-Salem Sentinel)

Charlotte lawyer Eddie Knox, chairman of a legislative study commission on prison reform, says North Carolina soon must begin turning prisoners loose before they finish their sentences. This must be done, he believes, to relieve overcrowding.

"The ideal wax to solve our problems would be to have fixed sentences, plenty of courts, and a guarantee that everybody gets the same treatment," Mr. Knox says. "But our state simply can't pay for that."

This is where Mr. Knox runs into the ditch. Far from being prohibitively expensive, guaranteed justice would reduce overcrowding in prisons as nothing else would-and reduce it in the proper manner, by reducing the cause of overcrowding: crime.

It is the existing system - the system that puts frivolous technicalities ahead of justice, and encourages plea-bargaining and similarly slipshod practices — which encourages crime, throws our courts and prisons into turmoil, and inflates the tax bill. Instead of studying new ways to spring criminals from jail, Mr. Knox's commission might more usefully look into ways of hooking up the judiciary to crime prevention.

This is not to deny that North Carolina's prisons are overcrowded. Of course they are overcrowded. But, without meaning to be flippant, one is minded to ask way. Whose fault is it that prisons, once adequate, now are filled to overflowing? It is scarcely the fault of the law-abiding, except by indirection.

The state has a responsibility to provide humane prisons. That goes without saying. But it also has a responsibility to punish crime, and one would be hard put to demonstrate that this responsibility is being met. Until it is met, the prison population is likely to keep on growing - a difficulty the solution to which is something besides whacking everybody's sentence and thus eroding still further the criminal's diminsihing dread of punishment.

Strength For Today

THE GIFT OF PATIENCE

Charles Darwin, the great naturalist, spread lime over an acre of ground and for forty years watched and recorded the action of angle worms therein. At the end of that time he wrote a paper on the subject which remains standard even to this day.

This is a good example of how the careful men of science of every age have pursued truth until they laid hold of its secrets. The old adage that anything which is worth doing at all is worth doing well is often passed by with disdain, because it has become too familiar with us. Yet art is in large measure the capacity to take pains. Success is the reward of those who stick to business until they get a job really done.

Patience, patience, patience! Those who aspire to get somewhere in life need to engrave the word on their hearts. If the project is worth sticking to, it is worth sticking to until it is finished, whether it takes an hour, a year, or a lifetime.

Needed: A Sense Of Optimism

BY TERRY KILPATRICK
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter can best encourage capital investment, the spending for new factories and machines that creates jobs, by fostering a mood of optimism, a leading industrialist says.

"The most constructive thing this administration can do for a while is ride easy in the saddle ... let the people get a feeling of confidence," says R. Heath Larry, vice chairman of U.S. Steel Corp.

"There is a fair amount of money ready to be invested if the confidence is right. What little I read about Jimmy Carter encourages me that he might be sympathetic to that view."

Spending by businessmen for new tools and facilities has picked up lately, but not in the boom proportions many people were hoping for. During an upswing in the economy, such spending usually kicks in some time after a resurgence in consumer spending.

The expansion gives industry the capacity to produce the goods consumers want. And it opens up not only regular jobs at the new facilities but employment for those who build them.

Capital spending is expected to rise only 2 per cent this year and only 9 per cent next year, according to estimates of the Conference Board, a business research organization.

Larry thinks he knows why, and what he thinks is significant.

U.S. Steel, the nation's largest steelmaker, has some hard capital investment decisions of its own to make in the coming months. And it depends to a large extent on the ability of the capital goods industry to buy its steel.

Larry's statements came in an interview as he prepared to become chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Tooling up for new production or building a new mill can cost hundreds of millions of dollars and take years. Larry says executives faced with a go or no go decision are dealing with uncertain environmental regulations and federal energy policy.

"How long will it take and will it be possible to get an environmental impact statement? It can take three years to clear away the underbrush" of federal regulations, he said.

U.S. Steel will spend $150 million to $200 million for environmental purposes next year, he estimated. "Fifteen to 20 per cent of our capital budget has to go to making up for environmental deficiencies in times past. This is a real cost. It's just like a tax."

The second big unknown is energy. "We went through a decade of converting everything to oil or gas only to find we're about to run out of gas," Larry said.

If nuclear energy is chosen to power a new plant, will environmental opposition block it? If coal is chosen, what type will be available and will it be environmentally acceptable?, he asked.

"We're at a moment of great indecision there," Larry said. "It's a great deterrent to future investment at the moment."

The key to more capital investment may be attitude, and Larry is optimistic.

Voters For Further Cut

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — While many political analysts believe the new campaign finance laws to be overly restrictive, the American public wants to put even tighter limits on campaign spending.

When a sample of U.S. voters was recently asked what changes they would like to see in the way political campaigns are conducted, the most frequently sought change is a reduction in the amount of money spent by and for candidates.

The new campaign finance law limited presidential candidates Carter and Ford to spending $21.8 million each, plus the right to spend another $3.2 million each from the Democratic and Republican National Committees. The law also limits contributions to congressional campaigns to $1,000 per donor per election and $5,000 per multi-candidate committee.

Candidates seeking presidential nominations spent $77.9 million in this year's primary elections according to a recent report of the Federal Election Commission, with 11 candidates spending more than $1 million each.

Debates Could Save Money

Some political observers maintain that if presidential debates could be built into the electoral process in future years, campaign spending could be even more sharply reduced. They point out that debates would reduce, for example, the tremendous sums spent on broadcast advertising which took the lion's share of both presidential candidates' funds in this year's campaign.

In addition, they maintain debates could take the place of the traditional "whistle-stopping" campaign, which not only drains campaign coffers but appears to have minimal effect in terms of winning votes.

As reported earlier, 66 per cent of voters say they favor having televisied presidential debates again in 1980, although many believe there should be certain changes in the format or presentation. These include more interaction between the candidates, making the debates less formal and rehearsed, and representing the views of the public to a greater extent.

8 Per Cent Gave Money In '76 Campaign

The current survey also sought to determine what percentage of voters gave money to help a political party or candidate. The results show that 8 per cent did so, with 3 per cent giving money to the Democratic party, 3 per cent to the Republican party.

Here are the questions asked:

"During the recent political campaign, did you or any member of your immediate family give any money to help a political party or candidate, or not?"

"To which political party?"

Here are the results:

Gave money to Democratic party	3%
To Republican party	3
To both	—
	8%

The following questions were asked to determine changes voters would like to see in the conduct of campaigns, and the national findings:

"Would you like to see any changes in the way political campaigns are conducted?"

The results show that a majority of Americans, 54 per cent, want changes made in the way political campaigns are now conducted. These people were then asked what specific changes they would like to see. The three changes called for most often are:

1. A reduction in the amount of money spent by and for candidates;
2. Less mudslinging/fewer personal attacks;
3. Shortening the campaign.

Other responses include changing the way candidates are selected, and still sharper definition of the issues.

The latest results reported today are based on in-person, in-home interviews with 1,541 adults, 18 and older, in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Nov. 12-15.

A CONSERVATIVE VIEW

A New Joy In Latest Book By William Buckley

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

NEW YORK—Most persons are truly interesting, or so it seems to me, only in terms of their ruling passions. This is the case with William F. Buckley, Jr., whose latest book, "Airborne," has just appeared, but the ineffable Mr. B. is in a class by himself. He is ruled by a dozen different passions. This time it is sailing.

Sailing is to Mr. Buckley what stock car racing is to some friends of mine in Georgia. These Confederate maniacs will abandon wives, sons, daughters, dogs, jobs—anything—in order to sit for a few hours in a dusty grandstand watching the cars zoom by. Get them away from auto racing and they are dull fellows, as ordinary as the beer they drink, but lead them back to carburetors and they come alive.

So it is with many others. I think at random of men and women who are interesting—truly interesting—only when their passions are ignited by horses, hunting, fishing, bookbinding, cooking, gardening, ham radio, or the breeding of Siamese cats. I once knew a copy editor who was the silentest man who ever sat on a rim. He could work for hours with no more than an occasional grunt or a sigh. One day a story came along that had to do with heraldry. All of a sudden his eye lit up; his gaunt face brightened; and from those mute lips came a passionate torrent of commentary on bandeaus, files, crescents, mullets, mantlings, bars sinister and unicorns rampant. This was his ruling passions. When it came to signs armorial, he was a man in love; otherwise, a clam.

Back to Mr. B. His ruling passions often seem as numerous as the postwar governments of Italy. His friends have seen him positively mesmerized by painting, fencing, flying, and skiing. He is variously entranced by politics, law, Latin, the fugues of Johann Sebastian Bach, and the vapors of Arthur Schlesinger, Jr. He has love affairs going, all at the same time, with magazine books, harpsichords, a newspaper column, a TV show, college audiences, good wines, the Swiss Alps, and his own vocabulary. Mainly, though, he loves sailing.

That is what "Airborne" is about. It is a love story—a love story as wry, as tender, as passionate, as funny, as endearing as any romance ever set down in novel form. Buckley fell in love with sailing as a boy; he has now spent 40 years in the company of his mistress, through fair days and foul, pure happiness and pure disaster. His book is mostly about his trans-Atlantic crossing last year in the Cyrano. The voyage was a dream come true.

Because nothing much happened on the trip, Buckley has filled out his chronicle by telling us more about navigation than one really wants to know. He reminisces genially about other boats, other sails, other sailors. This is not the "Firing Line" Buckley, dripping acidulous wit; this is a self-deprecating Buckley, poking fun at his own misfortunes.

Regrettably, he makes no mention of one memorable cruise some years ago aboard the Suzie Wong, a shorter, slower predecessor of the sleek and supple Cyrano. Mr. B. was bringing the Suzie Wong north from Wilmington, N.C., by way of the Inland Waterway. On a chill Saturday night for May, with a full moon lighting the straight channel, he entrusted the wheel to a writing fellow who happened to be aboard. Mr. B. went below to enjoy the pleasures of Bach and beaujolais.

There came a splintering crash. The Suzie shook from her f'c'sle to her fanny. The alarmed owner sprang to the cockpit in a single spectacular leap, to find the deck covered with pine needles. In some fashion, never satisfactorily explained, the writing fellow had managed to run the Suzie into a pine tree spang in the middle of the Inland Waterway—and there was no tree there. It was a feat of navigation unsurpassed before or since. The next morning, on his own, Mr. B. managed to run the Suzie aground on a sandbar south of Portsmouth, which was no trick at all.

"Airborne" is a book, one supposes, primarily for those who sail, but it is likely to appeal to those who look upon madness, con amore, in a hundred different fields. There is a brotherhood of the obsessed, a sisterhood of the daft. I read Buckley on sailing and think of a stock car fan in Macon and an old heraldic scholar on the rim. It's pleasant to be sane, but it's nicer to be nuts.

Facing South

Began To Live After 'Never' Became 'Maybe'

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. — Four years ago, East Tennessee artist Bill Clark presented a one-man exhibit in New York. Shortly after leaving the opening night festivities, the car in which he was riding was involved in a grinding collision. He suffered a crushed chest, massive head injuries, and extensive internal damage. Doctors speculated that any one of them could—and probably would—kill him.

The accident occurred approximately 15 minutes from the only pulmonary shock unit in that section of the state. "That was the first link in a long chain of miracles," Bill recalls. "The unit could only serve one patient at a time, and it provided the type of specialized care that I needed most."

He lay motionless and unable to speak for 28 days. A round-the-clock struggle to keep him alive left no time to closely examine his immobile right arm and hand. When life and death priorities had arranged themselves in his recovery process, his arm became the center of attention. The radial nerve had been severed, and the first prognosis was that its usefulness could never be restored.

"Art is my life and my livelihood," Bill declares. "Even before I knew the disability might be permanent, I tried to draw left-handed."

Meticulous examination by a team of orthopedic and neuro surgeons turned the "never" into a "maybe." That spark of hope was all Bill needed to say, "Let's try." Several hours of intricate muscle, nerve and tendon transfers gave him, if not a perfect arm, a usable one. Next came the painful and often frustrating rehabilitation.

When Bill returned to his studio, his style had changed, and so had his entire outlook. "Actually, that accident was the most beautiful thing that has ever happened to me," he states. "Not the injuries themselves, but all the care and kindness I received. I learned to see good in people. I came to recognize the worth of my talent. I realized that there was a lot I wanted to say, and I could say it through my art."

Before the accident, he had begun to develop his projects into series instead of one painting or drawing at a time. As a graphics designer for Oak Ridge National Laboratory, he is accustomed to long range planning. "I decided to employ that work method in my personal art, and it was immediately successful."

His series of paintings and drawings turned into a book, Passing America, the second major contribution to his Folk Life series which began with "Music People," an exhibited collection of mountain musicians, balladeers and rock 'n' rollers. His enchantment with Appalachia, his love for people, and his reverence for things of the past led Bill in this particular direction.

"I have tried to preserve for others what to me is the very heart of old time America. I wanted to capture the things that are vanishing, some rapidly and some slowly. When they are gone, there won't be anything to replace them."

Two years of searching, photographing, then drawing area people, places and relics yielded the 44 prints in this book. "I took thousands of pictures and did hundred sof drawings to get the ones I ultimately chose," he says.

With a zest for life born of its near loss, Bill is already hard at work on his next book. His projects seem to take on the proportions of a religion in terms of commitment and emotional involvement.

"There is so much to see, feel and experience, and I have a compulsion to get ti all down on paper."

While he may not get all of it down on paper, what he does create will have a definite message. Every drawing and every painting will say that people, places and things are worth loving. His art has become a salute to the yesterdays he can suddenly appreciate and the tomorrows he will savor. Bill Clark is a grateful man.

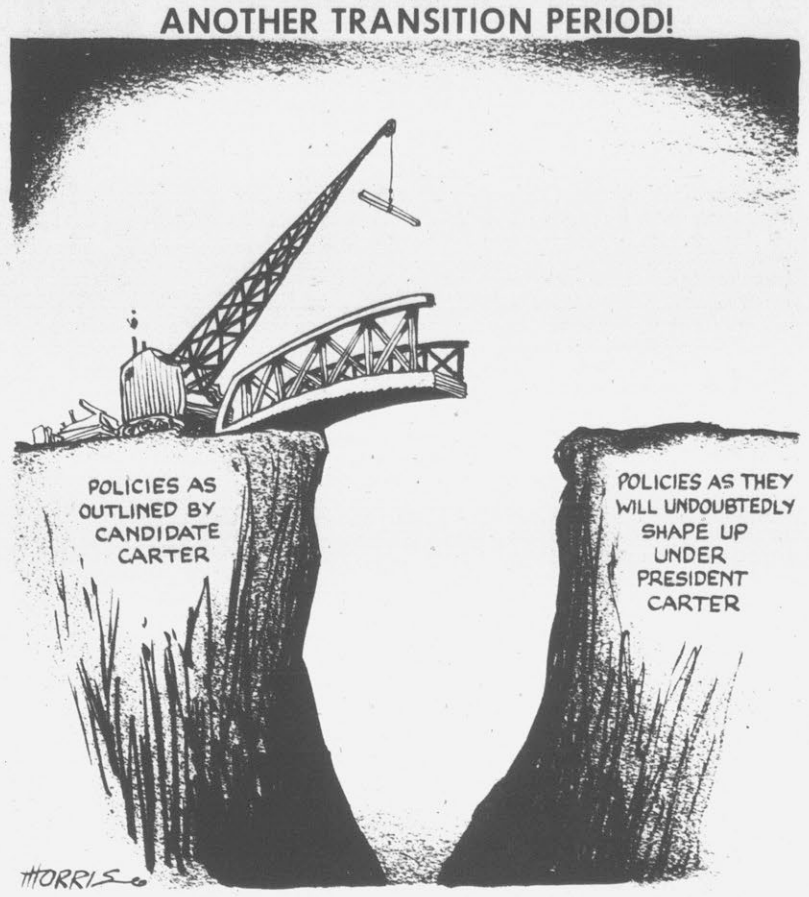
ANOTHER TRANSITION PERIOD!



By GAIL MICHAELS

The Upsetting Things Of Christmas Season

Every year about this time I get very mean and nasty, and I want to deface pictures of Santa Claus and to shoot spitballs down every caroler's throat. Why? I wasn't sure myself until after I decided to make a list of all the things that upset me about Christmas.

The length of the season: We used to welcome the Christmas season with the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, and fresh memories of the Thanksgiving feast whetted our appetites for the next feast to come. Nowadays, Halloween is the harbinger of Christmas, and Santa rides in on a broom.

Charities: Remember when the only unhurried person in the midst of the Christmas hustle and bustle was the Salvation Army Santa, ringing his bell to remind us what the Christmas spirit was all about? And how every time we passed him, we dropped a little something in his kettle and walked away, warmed by the joy of sharing? Well, the Salvation Army evidently did so well that every other charity in the U.S. decided to cash in on the Christmas cheer. Now at Christmas there are more afflictions garbed in Quaker Oats containers than in the whole of Doctor's Hospital. Every organization from the Society for the Eradication Knee-Jack Sydrome to the Fund for Children with Popcorn Allergies is out begging for donations. It I contributed to them all, my family couldn't eat for the next year. So I pass them by, feel guilty for passing them by, and hate them for making me feel guilty for passing them by. Remember the poor, they say. How can I forget?

Taxes: It seems to me that if the government had any sense at all, it would make us pay taxes on July 4th, when we're in a more charitable frame of mind.

The Waltons: Have you ever noticed how the Waltons manage to warrant a catastrophe EVERY Thanksgiving and Christmas?

After-Thanksgiving Sales: These sales are touted as the ultimate solution to the Christmas list, and they may be- after all, who can be expected to shop from a hospital bed? I braved the crowds to go to one sale last week because I wanted to buy a sweater for my sister, and I went back home with multiple contusions and a cast on my nose.

"What happened?" Phillip asked.

"The store management was sadistic. They told us they were putting the sweaters on one rack, and instead they put them on a rack all the way across the room. Have you ever seen 20 Orlon-crazed women stampede through a department store?"

"Can't say that I have. Were you trampled?"

No. Nothing bad happened till I got to the rack. Just as I grabbed the last sweater, the woman behind me grabbed me. Anogher woman kicked me in the shin, and another woman snatched the sweater."

"Then why are you smiling? Especially when you haven't smiled for weeks?

"Because I stomped on the instep of the woman behind me, I lammed the second woman in the head with my pocketbook, and I got the sweater," I said gleefully. "Yep. There's nothing like a good fight to give me the Christmas spirit."

Little Acre."

After the move, he can get to work on another book.

"It will be my 52nd book," he said. He reckons he also has written about 150 short stories. The latest tally shows around 76 million titles of his works have been sold around the world.

Caldwell and his wife Virginia have lived in Dunedin, Fla., for more than seven years. They like Florida, but:

"It's time to move. We've lived all over the U.S.A. We don't want to go back where we were. I want to go somewhere in the middle of the country. Every seven years I want to move. That's my habit.

"When I was a boy my father moved every year. We lived all over the South. Since I grew up I've lived in Maine, Connecticut, Arizona, San Francisco — you name it — all for seven years each. I have no great desire to live abroad, but anywhere in the United States is okay with me."

Caldwell was born in Georgia about 70 miles from Jimmy Carter's Plains, Ga., hometown, and thinking about a Georgia boy in the White House makes him grin:

"If a family can come from Europe, like the Roosevelts, and get in the White House, why shouldn't someone from Georgia?"

Caldwell came here to publicize his latest book, "Afternoons in Mid-America," the product of travels in nine states west of the Mississippi, soaking up the mood and mores of two towns in each state. His wife, an artist, illustrated the book.

When Caldwell is working on a book, he said, he takes eight to 10 months to finish, toiling from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., five days -sometimes seven days — a week. He has nothing particular in mind for a book at the moment.

However: "There are so many things to write about that my trouble is in eliminating. Right now I can think of a dozen themes. I'm going to have to eliminate some. It will have to be contemporaneous. That's all I write. Not science, not historical, but contemporary.

"To me acceptable writing is truthful writing. Every writer should be his own censor, and have his own standards. I wrote 'Tobacco Road' in a $3 a week walkup bedroom on West 50th St. here, where Rockefeller Center is now."

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Dec. 5, the 340th day of 1976. Tmere are 26 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1933, prohibition ended in the United States as Utah became the 36th state to ratify the 21st Amendment, which repealed the 18th.

On this date:

In 1492, Columbus discovered the West Indian island of Santo Domingo.

In 1782, the eighth American president, Martin Van Buren, was born in Kinderhook, N.Y.

In 1848, President James Polk announced that gold had been discovered in California. The gold rush of '49 followed.

In 1918, in World War I, German naval forces blockaded the Baltic Sea.

In 1934, 66 people were executed in Russia after purge trials.

In 1962, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to cooperaate in peaceful uses of outer space.

Ten years ago: It was announced that former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, then 76, would undergo surgery for the removal of his gall bladder.

Five years ago: In Northern Ireland, in the worst single act of violence in two years, a pub was bombed, killing at least 16 people.

One year ago: The United States told the United Nations Security Council it would not condone Israeli air attacks inside Lebanon but sought a resolution to denounce all acts of violence in the Mideast.

year his dominant position in the Nixon White House. While Jordan says he will merely be the new President's political aide (and may well mean it), Carter insiders feel it inescapable that he will emerge as de facto chief of staff — a post Carter now forbids but that surely will evolve out of sheer necessity.

Nevertheless, some old Washington hands persist in minimizing the importance of Hamilton Jordan. There is speculation that Bert Lance, the shrewd Atlanta banker slated to head OMB instead of Watson, will shove aside Jordan once the administration begins. If Lance is foolhardy enough to chart this course, he might well note the fate of Peter Bourne and Jack Watson.

HOSTAGE IN HIS OWN HOUSE!

New Super Grass Holds Promise For Livestock

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — A new super grass, developed with the unexpected help of Mother Nature, may one day give farmers a fast growing food supply for livestock.

The grass, known as Callie Bermuda, is already in use on some farms, and researchers say it spreads faster, grows taller and has more food value for livestock than other popular bermuda grasses.

The grass was discovered on an abandoned test field at Mississippi State University in 1966 and reseachers say the hybrid apparently was the end product of natural crossing of test strains.

"It's about the fastest growing thing I've seen," said Walter Alford, a farmer from nearby Stewart.

"We've cut it three weeks to the day, which means you can make more hay off less land," Alford said. "And when grass gets up as high and as fast as this, the digestability is increased."

Farmers were invited to test the grass on their own pastures starting in 1974 after laboratory analysis by Dr. Vance Watson, associate professor of agronony at Mississippi State, showed that the grass was promising for livestock food.

Jimmy Griffin, a graduate assistant working under Watson, said that since that time 8,000 persons in 22 states and nine other countries have received samples of the grass.

"We've gotten a lot of information from Florida, Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi," Griffin said. "These reports look real good and show the protein value of Callie is high and the digestibility is real good."

He said major attractions of Callie were the quickness with which it spreads and the rapid growth after it is established in a field.

Griffin said the hybrid would grow up to four feet in three to four weeks while other grasses "reach a couple of feet at the most during that period. That means you can cut hay much more often and expect higher yields."

He also said the grass covered a pasture quickly, with runners growing up to six inches during a 24-hour period.

Eileen Hart, whose family operates a farm in Sealy, Tex., said her husband obtained a sackful of the grass two years ago and "it has been unbelievable."

"We planted the grass on a quarter-acre to start with just to see how it would do," Mrs. Hart said. "Last summer we sold grass off an acre and a half and we had more grass than we knew what to do with."

Griffin said his father planted a shoe box of the grass on land used for corn the previous year and "it really took off. We've got six acres of the grass now and the hay is looking good und the cattle seem to love it."

Alford said one possible drawback was the ability of Callie to survive the winter.

"We had one small patch that survived the winter fine but another field didn't do so well," he said. "But I think more time is needed to see how this will turn out."

Griffin said the grass required good land management, including preparing the land for planting, and because of this "I don't believe Callie will be for everybody."

"You won't be able to go out and just throw it on a field and expect it to do well," he said. "You can't abuse this one, especially in the establishment year."

However, Mrs. Hurt said she found Callie to be a tough grass.

"It's the last grass in this area to go dormant and it's the first grass to come out in the spring," she said.

Crime Prevention Program Receives Funding

A continuation Crime Prevention Program for the Greenville Police Department was recently funded by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration in the amount of $7,443.

The grant application was written by the Criminal Justice staff at the Mid-East Commission.

Providing for the last five months of second year funding and the first seven months of third year funding, the project grant will continue the program through September 30, 1977.

Services furnished by Patrolman Douglas A. Jackson, through the crime prevention program include the following: operation identification; vacation house checks; breaking and entering scene reports; confidential security survey service; security service at J. H. Rose High School; school crossing supervision; lecture, film and oral presentations to groups; inspections of 228 businesses for the purpose of updating locator file cards maintained in the police department's radio communications room; and the printing of informative pamphlets.

Throughout the 12 month project which began October 1, 1976, the program goal is geared toward a further reduction in the number of property crimes committed in Greenville.

Third year funding for the crime prevention program will be requested from the LEAA, at an increased cost to the city, according to a police department spokesman.

Sailor Given Death Penalty

MANILA, The Philippines (UPI) — A U.S. sailor stationed at Subic Bay Naval Base has been sentenced to death for strangling a nightclub girl last August in an argument over 75 cents, it was disclosed Saturday.

The sources said seaman apprentice Michael J. Butler, 19, of Orlando, Fla., was sentenced to die for the murder of Gina Barrios, 26, by Judge Regino Veridiano of Olongapo City, a town near the naval base about 90 miles north of Manila.

The death sentence was the first handed out to a U.S. serviceman by a Philippine court.

Butler, who had been assigned to the aircraft carrier USS Hancock, was kept in the custody of U.S. naval authorities pending a possible appeal to the Philippine Supreme Court. No date for the execution was set.

Plans Retake Control "If"

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith plans to retake control of the nation if he dislikes the constitution for black majority rule drafted by an interim government, a white opposition party charged Saturday.

The Rhodesia Party said it had evidence Smith was being "completely insincere" in the Geneva negotiations for black rule, and his real objective was to get trade sanctions against Rhodesia lifted.

The party, which has no members in parliament and opposes white supremacist policies, made the charges at a news conference by its two vice presidents, Allan Savory and Lance Reynolds.

To Unveil Portrait Of Sir William Pitt

At 3 p.m., Sunday, December 12, a long-cherished dream of Miss Jesse Rountree Moye will come true when a portrait of the First Earl of Chatham, Sir William Pitt, is unveiled in a late in the year observance of the American Revolutionary Bicentennial.

Sponsored by the Pitt County Historial Society with financial assistance from Pitt County Bicentennial funds, the unveiling will be held in the Pitt County Courthouse. The portrait is to hang in the main corridor of the courthouse.

Fayetteville artist William C. Fields, III, noted portrait-painter, was commissioned to paint the portrait of Sir William Pitt, for whom Pitt County is named. It is a copy of a portrait by Richard Brompton, who gave the original to Pitt to be hung in his estate in Kent, England. Within recent years the portrait was sold by the present Earl of Stanhope to the International Business Machines Corporation Art Galleries of New York. The IBM people in turn gave the portrait to Chatham College in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Among numerous persons to take part in the unveiling ceremony are Dr. Joseph Congleton, Jr., a Professor of the School of Education, ECU and president of the Pitt County Historial Society; Dr. Wellington Gray, Dean of the School of Art, ECU, who will present the artist, Fields; Dr. Herbert Paschal, chairman of the History Department, ECU; Mrs. Elizabeth Savage, president of the Greenville Woman's Club; Stuart Aronson, who will sing the first song composed by an American, Francis Hopkins; and Rev. Ellis Bedsworth, pastor of the Bethel United Methodist Church.

A number of officials have been invited as special guests, including Greenville Mayor Percy Cox and mayors of other Pitt County towns.

Other participants scheduled for the program are the Overton Sisters, Greenville singers; Eagle Scouts F. Melvin Johnson and Willie Morris, III; Girl Scouts Karie Seykora and Ginny Close; and Rev. Charles Garris of the Ayden Christian Church.

The public is invited to attend the ceremony.

LWV Meet Dec. 7

Dr. J. G. Kim of the ECU Political Science Dept. will be the speaker at the general League of Women Voters meeting to be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 7 at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. His topic will be "The United Nations: Change It Or Junk It." The public is invited to attend.

VMI's Experience Proves Too Much As Pirates Bow, 78-67

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Experience was the big weapon the Virginia Military Institute Keydets welded last night, as they held off rally after rally by the East Carolina Pirates, pulling out a 78-67 win.

The defeat was the first of the year for East Carolina, now 2-1. It was also their first loss in their Southern Conference season—and their first start.

VMI came on the floor with the veteran team that went to the final eight in the country last year, two seniors and two juniors who have played together for the past two years.

It quickly became evident that the experience of the Keydets would be a dominating force in the game.

The game had been billed as "Intimidation Night" for the Pirate fans, but it turned out that the only ones intimidated were the Pirates, who saw theiropponent go to the free throw line 29 times, while the Bucs got only ten chances. Overall, the Pirates outhit VMI from the floor, 29-28.

Once Coach Dave Patton drew a technical foul (two shots this year) when he jumped off the bench on a controversial noncall.

VMI, which was not outrebounded all last year by anyone, kept that string alive against the Pirates, pulling down 42, while the Bucs grabbed only 32. Dave Montgomery led VMI with 11, while Ron Carter added seven. Larry Hunt led the Pirates with 10.

East Carolina's defense did not lack, however, as the Pirates continued their fine hustle displayed in the first two games of the year.

"The difference in the game was that they just had a little more experience," an unhappy Patton said. "They kept doing the things they do; things they have done for two years together. We have been doing our thing only six weeks. It will come for us. I'm proud of this group. They kept giving effort, they had great hustle and they never quit. We just have to use this as a learning experience and come back from it."

VMI led throughout the game, hitting the first three baskets as the Pirates, cold from the start, hit only after nearly five minutes. Their defense kept it close, however, as the Keydets failed to pull away during those five minutes.

John Krovic hit the opening basket, and the Keydets were ahead for good. East Carolina's Louis Crosby finally broke the ice after 4:48, cutting it to 6-2. Jim Ramsey followed with a basket to trim it to 6-4, but that was as closeas the Pirates got.

VMI steadily pulled away throughout the first half, moving out to as much as an 11-point bulge late in the quarter. East Carolina cut into the lead several times, coming as close as five late in the half, but they trailed, 36-27 at the horn.

East Carolina put on more of a rally in the second half's early minutes, cutting the lead to five on several occasions, the last at 42-37.

But then the Keydets hit a streak of 12 straight unanswered points to push out to a 54-37 lead with 11:52 to play. That may have been the fatal margin for the Pirates.

Still they didn't give up, fighting back to cut the lead to six as Don Whitaker, Hunt, and Ramsey led the way. The lead fell to six at 61-55 with 4:32 to play, and the Bucs had a chance to cut it to four, but missed.

VMI then was able to control the ball after that, pulling back out by using the free throw line as they had all night.

Carter led the VMI scoring with 20 points, while Krovic had 17, and Will Bynum and Montgomery each had 16.

Whitaker led East Carolina with 17, with Hunt hitting 14 and Ramsey 12.

The Pirates go on the road for the first time on Wednesday, meeting the University of Maryland in College Park, Md. They return home on Saturday to host UNC-Wilmington.

UNC-C Loses First

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Freshman Reggie Johnson scored on a twisting shot under the basket with three seconds left to lead Tennessee to a 69-67 basketball victory over North Carolina-Charlotte Saturday night.

Johnson, a 6-9 center from Atlanta, sparked a come-from-behind rally for the Vols, scoring seven field goals, two of them on tip-ins, in the second half.

The 15th-ranked Vols, with star forward Bernard King still sidelined on suspension, were behind the 20th-ranked 49ers 40-32 at the half.

Center Cedric Maxwell, 6-8, with 14 points in the first half and 25 for the game, put Charlotte out front early and prevented the Vols from getting the ball inside to Ernie Grunfeld.

The victory gives Tennessee a 2-0 mark going into Tuesday's game against Duke here. The loss was the first for the 49ers against two wins.

Grunfeld had 17 points and co-captain Mike Jackson had 18. Junior Lou Massey was the number-two scorer for Charlotte with 18.

Freshman Paces Furman Paladins

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)— Freshman center Jonathan Moore grabbed 14 rebounds and scored 28 points to lead the Furman Paladins to a 100-80 victory over the Wofford Terriers Saturday in a nonconference college basketball game.

The Paladins jumped to an early 6-2 lead on Jim Strickland's dunk with two minutes gone in the game. They never got behind.

Furman achieved its largest lead of the first half when Moore made a layup to make the score 30-18. But the stubborn Terriers cut the lead to 9 by halftime, 45-36.

Moore, who had been forced to sit out the last eight minutes of the first half on account of foul trouble, sparked the Paladins in the second half as he scored 11 points in the first nine minutes.

The effort brought Furman's lead to 74-50. Moore continued to play with three fouls, adding 12 points to his total.

Also hitting double figures for Furman were Jim Strickland with 20 and Rick Harness, Dave Dredger, and Stan Woods with 12 each.

James Moody pumped in 18 to lead the Terriers, and Reggie Gosnell and Tim Jones were close behind with 17 and 16 points respectively. Chris Littlejohn scored 12 points.

Furman now has a 2-1 season record, while Wofford is 1-5.

ArmstrongLeads Duke To Victory

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Tate Armstrong sank an 18-foot jump shot with two seconds remaining to give Duke an 83-81 victory over Washington Saturday night in an intersectional basketball game.

With Duke leading 81-80, Washington center James Edwards made one free throw to tie the score but missed his second attempt. The rebound was pulled down by Duke center Mike Gminski. With 1:50 left, Duke then held the ball for one shot.

With 14 seconds remaining, the Blue Devils called time out. When the ball was in-bounded, Armstrong got it at the head of the key, drove into the left corner and shot. The ball hit the bottom of the net cleanly. Washington called time with two seconds left. A 40-foot desperation shot at the buzzer by Mike Neill hit the front of the rim. It was Duke's third win against one loss. It was the fourth straight loss for Washington.

Armstrong was the high man with 35 points, followed by the Huskies' Kim Stewart who had 22.

'Pack Downs Lions

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Paced by aggressive hot-shooting Harold Whitney and Al Green, North Carolina State romped to an 87-61 victory over Penn State Saturday night in an intersectional basketball game.

Whitney, a 6-5 freshman forward, pumped in 14 points while junior guard Green also added 14. The leading scorer for N.C. State was 7-2 center Glenn Sudhop with 16 points while Olympic gold medalist Kenny Carr, who fouled out with five minutes left, put in 13.

The Nittany Lions were led by Steve Kuhn, who scored 17.

Penn State opened the game with a four-point lead and the error prone Wolfpack stumbled around as the lead see-sawed until close to the end of the first half.

With 6:20 left in the first half, N.C. State began an effective scoring attack and went to the dressing room 33-26.

Rams Demolish Falcons

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lawrence McCutcheon ran for three touchdowns and the Los Angeles defense throttled the Atlanta Falcons Saturday for a 59-0 victory that gave the Rams their fourth straight National Football Conference Western Division title.

On a warm, sunny afternoon when everything went right for the home club, McCutcheon gained 121 yards in 20 carries even though Coach Chuck Knox took him out midway in the third quarter.

The 59 points were the most by any Los Angeles team since 1950.

Rookie quarterback Pat Haden completed 13 of 21 passes for 214 yards as Los Angeles boosted its record to 9-3-1, eliminating division runnerup San Francisco. Atlanta absorbed its ninth loss against four wins.

Tom Dempsey booted field goals of 42 and 29 yards but, surprisingly, missed on his first three extra point tries. The first two were blocked by Dewey McClain and Tommy Nobis and the third sailed wide.

McCutcheon's touchdowns came on a run of four yards and two of one each, but he also turned in a 40-yard-dash that set up another touchdown and was the longest run for a Ram this season.

The afternoon production boosted his season total to 1,144, bettering his own Los Angeles record of 1,019 in 1974.

Haden ran one yard for the first Ram touchdown.

With defensive tackle Merlin Olsen playing his final regular home game of a 15-year career, he and his teammates held the Falcons to a net of only 15 yards in the first half and never allowed the visitors to mount a serious threat.

Quarterback Scott Hunter started for Atlanta and was relieved by Kim McQuilken in the second half.

The Rams sacked the quarterbacks six times—Larry Brooks and Jack Youngblood each with two.

The longest touchdown play covered 80 yards, a pass from James Harris to Dwight Scales.

Ron Jaworski, the third quarterback used by Los Angeles, led the final scoring drive, capped by a three-yard run by Cullen Bryant.

Punt returns had set up two earlier touchdowns.

The Rams didn't need to punt until the third quarter was half over and Atlanta didn't get its second first down until 6:15 was left in the period.

The Falcons wound up with just 81 net yards while the Rams amassed 569.

The Falcons operated without ace defensive end Claude Humphrey, who suffered a groin injury last week.

The 23-year-old Haden opened fast, hitting three of five passes for 55 yards in the drive culminated by Dempsey's first field goal.

Haden also hit a key 16-yard pass to Ron Jessie just before the first Los Angeles touchdown.

Haden and Jessie also connected on a 53-yard pass, setting up the second touchdown and on a 29-yard gainer that led to another score.

Atlanta continued without a victory in the Coliseum. As a crowd of 57,366 watched, the Falcons fell for the eighth time here and have tied twice.

Tigers Crush Ga. Southern

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP)—Greg Coles and Colon Abraham scored 19 points each Saturday and the Clemson Tigers went over the 100-point mark for the fourth game in a row in crushing Georgia Southern 110-55 in a nonconference college basketball game.

Abraham and Coles were two of five players who scored double figures for the Tigers, who are averaging 108 points per game and have beaten their first four opponents by an average margin of 39.7 points.

Clemson led 45-17 at halftime score as Georgia Southern committed 18 turnovers. Then the Tigers came up with 65 points in the second half as the losers turned the ball over 17 more times.

Clemson connected on 54 per cent of its shots, going over the 50 per cent mark for the fourth straight game, while Georgia Southern hit on only 32 per cent of its field goal attempts.

Wayne "Tree" Rollins snatched 13 rebounds in the game to give him 1,010 career rebounds, the most ever in Clemson history. He also scored 12 points and blocked three shots.

Stan Rome scored 16 points and Derrick Johnson had 10 to round out Clemson's double-figure scoring.

Kevin Anderson led Georgia Southern with 14 points and 11 rebounds. Clemson now has a 4-0 season record. Georgia Southern is 2-1.

Root Named SC Coach Of Year

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Some skeptics said William & Mary wouldn't win a football game this year, but Jim Root led the team to a 7-4 record, and as a result he was a landslide winner as Southern Conference coach of the year.

The 44-year-old Root, a former National Football League quarterback, received 35 votes in balloting announced Saturday by the Southern Conference Media Association. Pat Dye, who led East Carolina to a 9-2 record and the conference championship, was runner-up with 10 votes.

"I'm grateful to the folks who showed good faith in me when times were tough," said Root, in his fifth year at the school.

With only four seniors on the Indians' starting lineup this year, conference coaches predicted they would finish last. Instead, the Indians went 3-2 in the conference and finished second.

"I think it's especially rewarding when you look at how strong the conference was this year," said Root. "There wasn't a losing team, and there is a great group of coaches throughout the conference."

This is William & Mary's final year in the league, and Root said "we have mixed feelings about not being there next year. I'm going to miss it, believe me."

Hart, Otis, Defense Lead Cards To 24-17 Victory Over Baltimore

By PAUL LEBAR
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jim Hart threw two touchdown passes, Jim Otis ran for 107 yards, but a beleagured St. Louis defense basked equally in the euphoria of a 24-17 Cardinals victory Saturday over the Baltimore Colts in the National Football League.

"I don't think we've played any better all year long," said 6-foot-5, 250-pound John Zook, a Cards stalwart at defensive end.

"Considering the field position they (Colts) had all day and the kind of offense they have, I know it was," Zook exalted of labors restricting Baltimore to touchdowns in the first and final quarters plus a field goal.

"It had to be one of our better efforts. We needed desparately to win," Coach Don Coryell acknowledged of a St. Louis triumph which kept Cards playoff hopes alive.

"At any time they could have exploded and blown us right off the field," Coryell contended. "It just took some super performances to keep it from happening."

While boosting its record to 94, St. Louis moved a half-game ahead of the Washington Redskins, 8-4, in the scramble for a National Conference wild-card berth in NFL playoffs.

Meanwhile, Baltimore, the league's top offensive club, dipped to 10-3 and watched its division lead in the American Conference East shrink to a half-game over the New England Patriots, 9-3.

Colts Coach Ted Marchibroda saluted St. Louis for an explosive start which sent the Cards to a 21-10 lead during the opening 30 minutes.

"But the real story of the game was our turnovers," said Marchibroda, whose team lost four fumbles and suffered a last-minute interception.

"Any time you turn the ball over to a team like St. Louis that often, you can't expect to win," Marchibroda contended. "We just didn't have a good day and they had an exceptional first half."

Before succumbing, Baltimore rolled from its own 34 yard line to the Cards' 29 in the closing two minutes before safety Ken Reaves intercepted a Jones aerial, the Colts' fifth turnover.

With versatile Lydell Mitchell kept in check, Baltimore was restricted to 62 yards rushing and finished with 217 yards passing.

St. Louis, which amassed 375 yards total offense, scored in seven plays at the outset after special teams member Eddie Moss covered Howard Stevens' fumble on the kickoff.

Jones threw 30 yards to Roger Carr to set up a one-yard run by Mitchell to produce a 7-7 tie, but Hart, following an exchange of fumbles, hit Metcalf with his scoring bomb to send St. Louis ahead for good.

A key stand by the Cards defense occurred late in the opening period after the speedy Stevens returned a kickoff 83 yards to the St. Louis 11.

Three plays netted Baltimore negligible yardage and the Colts were forced to settle for the Linhart field goal that left them trailing, 14-10.

In the final quarter, Baltimore drove into St. Louis territory before McCauley fumbled and on the next series Jones was hit while attempting to pass and lost possession when dropped near midfield by John Zook.

Charlie Davis recovered for St. Louis and Hart's 16-yard pass to Ike Harris to the Colts' 15 led to Bakken's field goal with 2:34 remaining.

Washington Runs Past Rose, 77-56

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Washington's Pam Pack took advantage of poor shooting by the Rose High School Rampants to rush to a 77-56 victory over Rose Friday night.

It was the second defeat for the Rampant five in two starts this winter. Washington was claiming its second win in as many starts.

Rose could connect on but 19 of 49 attempts from the field, for a poor 38.8 percentage. Washington, cool at the start, came on to fire in 32 of 70 shots, for 45.7 percent.

Rose also was guilty of 37 turnovers in the game, while Washington turned it over only 23 times. And the Rampants were unable to make up for their mistakes by dominating the boards, as they outrebounded the Pam Pack just 43-42.

Washington got away to a sloppy start, but still was able to steadily pull away from the Rampants, who could get nothing going. After taking a 2-1 lead, Washington ran off eight straight points before Rose was finally able to hit its first field goal of the evening with 5:17 left in the first period.

While the Rampant pressure defense was able to force some Washington mistakes, Washington had a more telling effect with its defense. The Pack forced 12 turnovers in the first frame, while losing the ball only five times.

That put Rose back by as much as nine, and the closest the Rampants came after that was three.

Dominique Wilkens got the Pack going after nearly a minute, but Rose countered with a free throw, cutting it to 2-1. But Shaun Williams hit two field goals around baskets by Alvis Rogers (one a dunk) and Tony Boston, running it to 10-1. Rose managed to cut it back to 12-7 on a pair of baskets by Anthony Bryant and Greg Guthrie, but Rose trailed at the end of the period, 14-7.

Rose trimmed it to three early in the second frame, as Guthrie hit a basket off the tap and Bryant made two free throws. That made it 14-11. But Washington ran off two baskets and a free throw to up it to 19-11, then after two more Rose free throws, hit three baskets and a pair of charity shots for a 27-13 lead with 3:51 left in the half.

Rose again rallied, with Bryant hitting three points of the string to cut it to 27-20, but they could come no closer. Washington pulled back out to a 35-23 lead with six more in a row near the end of the half.

Neither team made much progress in the early minutes of the third period until Wilkens hit with 3:32 left to up the lead to 16 at 48-32. Guthrie made two free throws for Rose, and Washington answered that with 13 straight points, including eight by Wilkens. That ran the lead to 27 at 61-34, and the Pack held a 61-36 lead as the period ended.

Early in the final period, Washington ran its lead out to as much as 31 at 67-36, hitting the first three baskets before Rose could get the ball across center-court.

The Rampants did stage a comeback after that, scoring 16 points to just two for Washington, but it was too late to be effective. Washington's starters returned to the game at that point and held off Rose until there was too little time for any true rally.

Wilkens led Washington with 24 points, while Rogers had 17. Bryant paced Rose with 23, while Guthrie added 12.

In the junior varsity game, Washington rallied in the final period to take a 47-43 win.

The Rampant Cubs had led most of the way, and were up by six going into the final period. Rose led at 15-12 after one period and were still up, 22-21 at the half.

The Cubs pulled out to a 35-29 lead going into the final period, but were outhit, 18-8, and fell in the final minutes.

Rudolph Black led Washington with 12 points, while Steve Rogers had 11. Rose was paced by Durwin Clemons with 11.

Rose returns to action on Tuesday, hosting New Bern.

College Football

By The Associated Press

Texas Tech's eighth-ranked Raiders captured a share of the Southwest Conference championship, Akron and Montana State entered the NCAA Division II title game, and St. John's of Minnesota won the Division III crown in college football action Saturday.

Texas Tech raised its record to 10-1 with a 24-21 triumph over Baylor on two touchdowns by quarterback Rodney Allison, who also directed the winning scoring drive late in the game. Allison sped 77 yards for a score on Tech's first play from scrimmage and sneaked one yard for another first-period tally.

Baylor rallied for a tie on a two-yard touchdown by tailback Gary Blair, who collected 199 rushing yards in the contest, and a 50-yard pass from Sammy Bickham to Tommy Davidson. Brian Hall gave Tech a 1714 lead with a 40-yard field goal, but Blair's one-yard scoring run forced Allison to guide the winning 89-yard drive capped by Larry Isaac's five-yard touchdown run.

Cotton Bowl-bound Houston, which already had clinched at least a tie for the SWC championship, rallied to beat Miami 21-16 as quarterback Danny Davis ran for four-and 25-yard touchdowns. Davis had thrown three interceptions and lost a fumble in the first half for the sixth-ranked Cougars.

Akron scored a dramatic 2926 triumph over defending champion Northern Michigan in the Knute Rockne Bowl as quarterback Marty Bezbatchenko squeezed over from the one-yard line in overtime to put the Zips into the Division II title game next week. Akron's Jim Embick had forced the extra session by kicking a 35-yard field goal with one second left in regulation time.

Montana State, Akron's opposition in the Pioneer Bowl next week, bested North Dakota State 10-3 when freshman Butch Damberger caught a touchdown pass and freshman Jeff Muri added a 34-yard field goal at the Grantland Rice Bowl.

A 19-yard field goal by St. John's of Minnesota's Jeff Nirman with one second left canceled a 28-point fourth-quarter rally by Towson State in the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl which determined the Division III crown.

In National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics playoff action, Texas A&I recorded its 38th consecutive victory by thrashing Western State of Colorado, 57-14 in their semifinal playoff. The Javelinas, pursuing an unprecedented third straight NAIA title, will meet Central Arkansas next Saturday in the championship game.

In All-Star play, Miami's Rob Carpenter rushed for 101 yards, including a 31-yard touchdown run, to lead the East past the West, 24-8 in the All-Ohio Shrine Bowl.

Nebraska visited Hawaii in a late night game.

In other action, Abilene Christian beat Harding College of Arkansas, 22-12 in the Pasadena, Tex., Shrine Bowl as Hubert Pickett scored two touchdowns on a pair of one-yard runs.

Rick Szuba and Jan Budai scored second-half touchdowns on short runs following Redlands fumbles to give Westminster a 20-13 victory and the NAIA Division II football championship in another game.

Elon Downed In Overtime

BURLINGTON, N. C. (AP) — Garry Odom kicked a 39-yard field goal in overtime to give Central Arkansas a 10-7 victory over previously undefeated Elon Saturday, earning the Bears a berth in next Saturday's NAIA national football championship game.

It was Odom's only successful field goal in six attempts during the game which was a defensive battle throughout in one of the NAIA's two semifinal games of the day.

The victory raised the Central Arkansas record to 9-2 and the Bears meet Texas A&I in Kingsville, Tex., next Saturday for the NAIA title.

Coaches Announce Their Retirements

Texas' Royal

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — University of Texas Coach Darrell Royal met with the school athletic council Saturday afternoon and a school source said Royal had submitted his resignation as football coach and would stay on as athletic director.

N. Neils Thomson, chairman of the athletic council, said an official announcement would made after the game between Arkansas and Texas.

Rumors of Royal's resignation gained strength Friday when the veteran coach, said "resignation" was being considered.

Royal is the winningest coach in the Southwest Conference. This year his team has gone through a lackluster season blighted with injuries and dotted with controversy.

Arkansas' Broyles

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Arkansas University football Coach Frank Broyles has submitted his resignation to school officials, but no action will be taken on it until he finds a successor, it was revealed here Saturday.

Sources close to Broyles said they had been told by the coach that he had submitted his resignation to the university president, but the president declined to act on it until Broyles finds a suitable replacement.

Broyles was expected to make an official announcement after the nationally-televised game Saturday night between Arkansas and Texas.

David Pearson Named Driver Of The Year

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — David Pearson, who drives race cars with the same elan that Joe DiMaggio once showed center field, edged rival stock car veteran Cale Yarborough for Driver of the Year honors.

Pearson, a 41-year-old, $1.5 million career prize winner from Spartanburg, S.C., is the first two-time winner of the award based on selections by a panel of U.S. auto racing writers. He first won it in 1973.

Pearson, who will be honored at a luncheon in New York Friday, finished the season with 27 points to 25 for Yarborough. A poor performance in the first quarter of the season probably cost Yarborough, who was narrowly beaten out by Bobby Unser in 1974 balloting, the award.

"It's a great honor," Pearson said in a telephone interview. "Especially considering no one else has ever won it twice."

Pearson won 10 of 22 starts in NASCAR Grand National racing, while Yarborough, the season champion, took nine of 30. Pearson's achievements in 1976 included victories in all of NASCAR racing's premier events, the Daytona 500, World 600 and Southern 500. It was only the second time in history one driver has won all of stock car racing's Triple crown events in a single season.

Pearson said one of his biggest thrills of the season, though, was winning the Grand International class in the 24 Hours of Daytona sports car endurance race with his son Larry.

"It was something I hadn't done before," Pearson said.

Pearson hesitated for a moment before picking this year over 1973—11 victories in 22 starts—as his best.

"That was a pretty good one, you know," he advised. "But I'd rather tab this year because there were more superspeedway wins, and Daytona was involved."

Pearson, who has won 36 superspeedway races since teaming with the legendary Wood brothers in 1972, added, "Everything that could have been won that I hadn't won, I won.

"I don't know of anyone that's done anything to top us."

Pearson had high praise for the Woods, who have prepared cars for 61 superspeedway victories and one Indianapolis 500 triumph.

"They've always done what I asked," he said. "If I want to try something, they'll try it. On the other hand, if they want to try something, I'll try it. If it doesn't work, we'll try something else.

"And they work so hard to prepare the car and get you in and out of the pits during a race. If you get behind, you always feel like they can get you back in it with a good pit stop."

Envious competitors say the Woods' meticulously prepared Mercury enjoys an advantage of 50-60 horsepower over other cars.

"That's what a lot of people think," Pearson said. "But I'd say 75 per cent of it was handling as well as horsepower."

Despite his accomplishments, Pearson says he isn't ready to quit, as is frequently rumored about this time of year.

"Racing is pretty hard to get out of your blood," he said. "I haven't got it out of mine, probably won't anytime soon."

The driver of the year award is sponsored by the Olsonite Corp.

Majors Home

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Johnny Majors came home to Tennessee Saturday, aware of the fact his alma mater expects him to turn a slipping football program around.

"I'm not coming here with my eyes closed," the new Tennessee football coach told a news conference. "I know that you expect a lot from a football coach down here. I'm no miracle worker, but if I didn't think I couldn't do better, I wouldn't be here."

Majors, 41, resigned Friday as coach of No. 1-ranked Pittsburgh and announced he would accept an offer to succeed Bill Battle at Tennessee, where he was an All-American tailback in 1956. He will coach Pitt in its Sugar Bowl Game against Georgia New Year's Day.

Battle, 34, resigned Nov. 22 after two years of criticism for failing to continue to keep Tennessee among the college football elite.

"I'm coming to a place that has a great tradition that has gone down," Majors said, adding that he didn't mean that as any reflection upon Battle or anyone else.

"I think the future here potentially is unlimited. If I didn't think we could compete for the Southeastern Conference championship eventually, I wouldn't be here."

The Vols finished this year with a 6-5 record and next-to-last place in the SEC. Despite a 59-22-2 record, Battle had never won a conference championship in his seven years as Vol coach.

The Vols had won two conference titles in the three years before Battle took over.

Farmville Central In Opening Cage Victory

SARATOGA — If there is supposed to be a transition period between basketball and football, somebody forgot to inform Farmville Central's Keno Farrow.

Just seven days since he left the football field, Farrow pushed in 21 points to lead Farmville Central to a 69-58 win over Saratoga Central Friday night.

Farmville's girls also opened the year with a victory, downing Saratoga, 65-58. The Baby Jaguars made it a clean sweep with a 47-38 win.

In the girls contest, Farmville was able to just inch into a 15-14 lead at the end of the first quarter. Things remained close in the second period, as the Lady Jags held a 27-24 halftime advantage.

Saratoga stuck close through the third period, 44-42. But Farmville was able to pull away with a 21-16 final period burst to put the win away.

Julia Moye led Farmville with 28 points. Pam Eastwood had 27 and Shirley King had 11 for Saratoga.

The boys' game went much the same. Farmville edged into a 15-14 lead after one period of play. The Jaguars extended that to 31-28 by the intermission.

In the third period, Farmville enjoyed a 17-13 scoring margin, pushing their lead out to 48-41. They finished off Saratoga with a 21-17 edge in the final period.

In addition to Farrow's 21, Jeff Fields pushed in 18 and Timmy Ward had 10. Ralph Bailey led Saratoga with 21, while David Meeks hit 15.

The Jaguars return to action on Tuesday, playing host to Eastern Wayne.

North Pitt Rolls To Second Straight Win

PINETOPS — North Pitt High School romped to its second straight victory Friday night, routing South Edgecombe, 72-46.

The North Pitt girls didn't fare as well as they dropped their second game, 40-32. South Edgecombe also took the junior varsity game, 71-64.

In the girls' game, South Edgecombe inched out into a 7-6 lead after the first period. North Pitt came on in the second frame and pulled away to lead 20-15 at halftime.

But the Pant-HERS could score but two points in the third period, while their hosts pushed through 11. That returned the lead to South Edgecombe, 26-22. South then outhit North Pitt, 14-10, in the final period, insuring the win.

J. Taylor led South Edgecombe with 11, while M. Felton and D. Phillips each hit 10. Ellen Dixon led North Pitt with 12.

It was a different story in the boys' game as the Panthers took the lead early and rolled easily. By the end of the first period, the Panthers had taken a 12-7 lead. They extended that to 29-21 by halftime.

North Pitt outhit their hosts, 16-9, in the third quarter, running their lead to 45-30. Then, in the final quarter, North Pitt ripped through 27, while South Edgecombe hit 16.

Donnie Perkins led North Pitt with 23 points, while Virgil Pilgreen picked up 20. W. Wilkens led South Edgecombe with 14.

The Panthers are idle until next Friday, when they meet Roanoke's Redskins.

Williamston held the Redskins off in the third period and took a 31-28 lead in the final period. Williamston managed a 13-10 margin in that period to pull out the victory.

Ronnie Horton led Williamston with 13 points, while Barry Wallace added 12. Ameche Burnes led Roanoke with 10.

The two teams meet again Tuesday, this time in Roanoke. Roanoke was also to play Bear Grass Saturday night.

Eastern Wayne Defeats Rams

NEW HOPE — Eastern Wayne swept three games from Greene Central Friday night. The Warriors downed the Rams, 65-49, while the Eastern Wayne girls took a 55-33 decision.

In the junior varsity game, Eastern Wayne came away with a 58-53 win.

Greene Central managed to pull in a 12-9 lead after the first quarter of the girls' game. But Eastern Wayne came back with a 17-13 advantage in the second frame to take a 26-25 lead into halftime.

The Ewes hit but three points in the third period, while the Lady Warriors were dumping in 12. That pushed Eastern into a 38-27 lead going into the final quarter. Eastern held a 17-5 edge in that period.

Cookie Best led Eastern with 23 points, while Jane King added 11. No one hit double figures for the Ewes.

Greene Central's boys also managed to slip into a lead after one period, 12-10. But like the girls, they couldn't hold to it. Eastern came back with a 23-7 outburst, and grabbed a 33-19 edge to take into the dressing rooms.

Eastern outhit Greene Central again in the third period, 14-10, and built its lead to 47-29. The Rams clipped two points off that in the final period, 20-18, but to no avail.

Tim Kelly led Eastern Wayne with 22 points, while Charles Lewis had 12. Ernest Thompson led Greene Central with 12.

Dons Capture Fourth Victory

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The 10th-ranked University of San Francisco Dons, who have averaged 107 points a game in compiling a 4-0 record, demonstrated against California that their defense is tough, too.

With Bill Cartwright scoring 24 points, Marlon Redmond 22, and Winford Boynes 16, the Dons beat the Bears 93-70 Friday night before a sellout crowd of 6,697.

Coach Bob Gaillard of the Dons praised Cal, 1-1, for its first-half play when the Bears led for the only time at 39-38 and were behind only 43-41 at the intermission.

Cal shot only 32 per cent in the second half. The Bears' leading scorer was Ray Murry with 22 points. And Dean Ransom with 14 was the only other Bear in double figures.

The Dons outrebounded Cal 27-17 in the second half, getting most of them on the defensive boards.

Only one other ranked team was in action Friday night as 14th-rated Wake Forest defeated Washington 92-75. In the Sun Devil Classic at Tempe, Ariz., Oregon defeated Wichita State 57-49 and Arizona State walloped San Diego State 86-65 in first-round games and North Texas State nipped St. Louis University 62-60 and Missouri nipped Illinois 76-75 in opening-round games of the Show-Me Classic in Columbia, Mo.

Elsewhere, Toledo defeated Cornell 58-35; Houston rolled past Biscayne 104-64; Villanova whipped Merrimack 71-63 and Texas stopped Wisconsin-Stout 78-63.

Rod Griffin and Skip Brown combined for 45 points and freshman Frank Johnson added 20 more as undefeated Wake Forest defeated winless Washington. It was the third loss for the Huskies, whose seven-foot center James Edwards topped all scorers with 30 points.

A ball-control offense and the 16 points of Greg Ballard led Oregon past Wichita State. Mark Lansberger hauled down a school-record 27 and Tony Zeno threw in 25 points to lead Arizona State over San Diego State.

Mevlin Davis laid in a rebound at the buzzer to give North Texas State a close victory over St. Louis. Scott Sims scored 24 points and Missouri held off a second-half comback by Illinois, which failed to get a shot off in the last 56 seconds.

Stan Joplin's 10 points led 11 scoring players as Toledo defeated Cornell. Otis Birdsong's 24 points paced six players in double figures as Houston crushed Biscayne. Villanova defeated Merrimack behind the combined 40 points of brothers Larry and Keith Herron. Jim Krivacs scored 22 points and Ron Baxter added 20 to lead Texas' victory.

Title Chances Seem Slim For Rebuilding Pirate Wrestlers

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's wrestling fortunes have been golden for the past five years, as the Bucs have rolled to consecutive Southern Conference championships during this time span.

But in the final year of Southern Conference membership, that streak may be at an end. Coach John Welborn lost nine members of last year's team, including five starters, and he admits that they will be hard to replace.

"It's going to be a tough year as compared to those of the past," Welborn said. "We have a very tough schedule. North Carolina and N.C. State are greatly improved, along with most of the other people on the schedule. William & Mary has its best team in years, and I guess they should be favored to win the conference. We're an awfully young team."

Welborn added that the Pirates will probably be underdogs in at least six of their 13 dual meets. "I'm not content to accept this role, and I hope that before it's over, we'll be very improved."

Things are not as bad as they might sound, however, since Welborn does have quality people. "It's just that so many of the people we wrestle have come a long way. Our team is much better than some in the past. It's just that others have put a lot of money in their programs and caught us.".

So it is a rebuilding year for the Pirates. "We're going to have to take our lumps. We have as good a crew of freshmen as we've ever had, and our future is very bright. But you can't always win with freshmen going up against veterans."

Welborn also has some depth problems.

At the 118 pound level, sophomore Wendell Hardy returns from a second place finish in the conference last year.

Freshman Harry Martin seems the likely candidate at 126 pounds. He was third in the Virginia state meet last year.

At 134, Paul Osman returns. The junior was conference champ at 126 last year, and is one of the stronger cogs in the Pirate machine this year. He's backed up by sophomore James Kirby.

Tim Gaghan, a senior, is at the 142-pound level. He was second in the league at 134 last year. Frank Scheade, a freshman, who was twice Virginia state champ, could challenge.

Paul Thorp, a junior, returns at 150. He was also second in the conference last year and is one of the stronger Pirates. Kirt Tucker, a sophomore, provided depth.

Paul Prewitt, a senior, currently is at 158. He was also runner-up in the league last year. Steve Goode, a freshman is the back-up.

At 167, Phil Mueller is back. He's been the most successful Pirate so far this year. A senior, he was conference champ last year. Mark Peters, a sophomore, backs him up.

The 177-pound rank is up for grabs. Top candidates are junior Mitch Burr, freshman Jay Dever, and sophomore Barry Purser, a former D. H. Conley wrestler.

John Williams, a senior, leads at 190, backed up by former Rose High wrestler Ronnie Goodall, a freshman.

D. T. Joyner, a sophomore, returns at heavyweight. Joyner was second in the league last year.

"The key to our season will be how healthy we can get, and how quickly our younger wrestlers come along," Welborn said.

He lists Osman, Thorp, Mueller and Joyner as the top candidates for conference titles, but notes that others can develop into championship caliber.

"It just depends on how quickly we come along."

Talk About Sports Arena

RALEIGH (AP) — Athletic Director Willis Casey of North Carolina State University told a legislative study committee Friday that a big sports arena it is considering would not pay for itself.

"Unless it can be financed completely in advance there is no way it will pay off an indebteness," Casey told the committee.

He added however, that an enclosed arena for basketball, other sports such as indoor track and events such as Elvis Presley could pay its operating expenses which he estimated might amount to as much as $400,000 a year. He said it should be in use at least 200 days a year.

Casey told the committee that the arena should have a capacity of from 23,000 to 28,000 persons for basketball so that it could host events like the NCAA regional basketball tournaments or basketball doubleheaders among area teams.

"The only building that can get Elvis Presley in this state is Greensboro and that's borderline," Casey said.

William Cobey, University of North Carolina athletic director, suggested that the proposed arena have a seating capacity of 30,000.

The committee agreed to ask the Legislative Research Commission for permission to continue a feasibility study of the proposal until next May when it will report its recommendations.

Time Outs Are Key To Winning

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia is not the easiest place to stop a road losing streak in the National Basketball Association. So what do you do in a situation like that?

Stop the action, says Bill Russell. "When the 76ers were making a run, I stopped it by calling a timeout," said the coach of the Seattle SuperSonics. "Timeouts stop momentum."

Russell's tactic seemed to be just what the doctor ordered, because the SuperSonics went on to a 121-112 victory over the 76ers Friday night for their first triumph on the road this season. The victory broke a 14-game losing streak that extended back to last March.

In other NBA action, the Boston Celtics stopped the Chicago Bulls 115-109 in overtime, the Detroit Pistons defeated the Kansas City Royals 124-115, the Indiana Pacers whipped the Cleveland Cavaliers 112-109, the Denver Nuggets nipped the New York Nets 126-124, the Buffalo Braves blasted the New York Knicks 135-112, the Portland Trail Blazers routed the Phoenix Suns 113-99, the New Orleans Jazz beat the Atlanta Hawks 121-105 and the Los Angeles Lakers outscored the San Antonio Spurs 114-105.

Celtics 115, Bulls 109

JoJo White scored eight of his 38 points in the five-minute overtime to lead Boston over Chicago. The loss was the 13th straight for the Bulls.

The Bulls forced the overtime when Jack Marin, playing in only his second game for Chicago, hit a 12-foot jumper for a 100-100 tie with three seconds left in regulation.

Pistons 124, Kings 115

Guard Chris Ford and center Bob Lanier paced a fourth-period rally that sparked Detroit past Kansas City, breaking a four-game losing streak for the Pistons.

Pacers 112, Cavaliers 109

Billy Knight scored the last of his game-high 29 points on a layup with eight seconds to go as Indiana snapped a five-game losing streak with a close victory over Cleveland.

Nuggets 126, Nets 124

Dan Issel and David Thompson scored 30 points apiece and Denver rallied from a nine-point fourth-quarter deficit to defeat the New York Nets. It was Denver's highest scoring outburst of the season and snapped a six-game road losing streak.

Braves 135, Knicks 112

Bob McAdoo and Adrian Dantley scored 30 points each and Buffalo ran off 17 points in a row in the second half and went on to an easy victory over the New York Knicks.

Blazers 113, Suns 99

Herm Gilliam came off the bench for foul-plagued Portland and scored 21 points to help the Blazers beat Phoenix. Gilliam was pressed into service late in the second quarter when Lionel Hollins and Dave Twardzik, the starting Portland guards, each had four fouls.

Jazz 121, Hawks 105

Pete Maravich scored 28 points in less than three quarters of play to lead New Orleans to a runaway victory over Atlanta. The Jazz held a 99-74 lead at the end of the third quarter and Maravich and the rest of the starters watched from the bench as their understudies coasted home.

Lakers 114, Spurs 105

Cazzie Russell scored 24 points to lead Los Angeles over San Antonio. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 21 points and reserve forward Kermit Washington had a career-high 20 as the Lakers won their fourth straight game to keep pace with the Pacific Division-leading Trail Blazers.

The Red Wolf Returned To South Carolina Island

By WILLIAM STRACENER

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — The purebred red wolf which took to mating with coyotes while being slaughtered by man may escape extinction in a return to its natural habitat.

In an effort to save the species, two mated red wolves trapped near Beaumont, Tex. were brought last month to a new home on Bulls Island, a marshy barrier island in the Cape Romain National Wildlife Refuge north of Charleston.

"It's an experiment to determine the feasibility of relocating large carnivors, specifically the red wolf," said wildlife biologist Ken Stansell.

The experiment may be the last hope of for maintaining a purebred red wolf population, he added.

Stansell, an endangered species specialist at the South Carolina Department of Wildlife and Marine Resources, said only a few red wolves remain, mostly in southeastern Texas and southwestern Louisiana.

In recent years the red wolf, declared an endangered species in 1967, has been cross-breeding with the coyote. Biologists fear the pure gene pool will be lost if that continues.

They say the species is significant because all other wolves are subspecies of the gray wolf. The red wolf is smaller than the North American timber wolf but larger and more wolf-like than the coyote.

The two transplanted wolves were put in a 50-by-50-foot chain link holding pen on a remote part of the island to acquaint them with the setting before they are set free later this month.

They wear collars equipped with telemetry equipment to enable wildlife officials to monitor their movements once they are released.

"They're settling down nicely in the holding facility," Stansell said. "They're beginning to take the (dead) native prey offered to them." "Those are good signs that the animals are adapting to the habitat."

A large part of the 5,000-acre island is flooded marsh, an environment which wolves should like.

When freed, the wolves will be the largest predators on the island, except for alligators. They will prey on rodents and smaller mammals, such as rabbits.

The wildlife experts want to see if the wolves will be able to re-adapt, survive and produce viable offspring in an environment where their ancestors once lived.

The wolves will be released after the archery-deer season ends. Once their movement patterns become known, their droppings will be collected to determine the impact the wolves are having on the island's deer population. Hair, bones and other material in droppings reveal diets.

If the wolves try to leave the island for the mainland, an attempt will be made to recapture them alive. If that fails, they will be tracked by radio and killed.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which is participating in the project, said the experiment is not an attempt to establish a wolf sanctuary and it is not expected to cause an ecological imbalance.

"The public relations aspects of this experiment are crucial," the Fish and Wildlife Service said.

"Citizens of the area have been informed of the non-agressive nature of the animals. Further, they have been told that visitors to the island would rarely get an opportunity to see the wolves since they are nocturnal and very secretive."

Stansell said a similar experiment with the gray wolf in another area was not very successful, partly because of public reaction to the idea.

The red wolf was placed on the endangered species list nine years ago by the federal government and is considered by many to be one of the most endangered of the 164 mammals that appeared on the 1973 list.

King Kong Returns To Theater Screens This Month

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — First you see the eyes, dark gleams of brooding menace under a huge brow. Then a back view as he shoulders his way through towering trees. Finally the full, frontal Kong, all 40 feet of him, as he stands ready to pluck the white maiden offered by the island natives as a sacrifice.

Thus the first theatrical reappearance of Kong, back after a 42-year screen absence. The Dino DeLaurentiis production of "King Kong" will be opening in 1,200 American cities in December, and it may well make "Jaws" seem like a minnow.

That was the impression gained from watching a couple of reels of the $24 million film with John Guillermin, the director who has seen it through 18 combative months that might have destroyed someone of less creative energy. Indeed, the ordeal erased 18 pounds from his already spare 145-pound figure.

Guillermin was in a state of exhausted elation. On the day he was interviewed, he had put the finishing touches on the two-hour, 11-minute film ("We planned it for two-ten."). His work was done.

"I feel good about it," he reflected in his office at the MGM studio, where most of "King Kong" was shot. "I haven't made too many movies that I am proud of, but I like this one. It should be a highly commercial film, but it is also a very personal one. I believe that even thinking people will be able to enjoy it."

The director is not accustomed to interviews. He likes to do his work and get on to the next job, not pausing to take bows. Sometimes others do; for instance, his last film, the outsized "Towering Inferno."

Guillermin commented wryly that producer Irwin Allen, who also directed some of the fire scenes, "took all the credit away, even though 90 per cent of the picture was mine."

His opinion of "The Towering Inferno": "The show was 10-15 minutes too long. I tried to get Irwin to cut it, but he wouldn't; usually it's the producer who wants a picture cut, not the director.

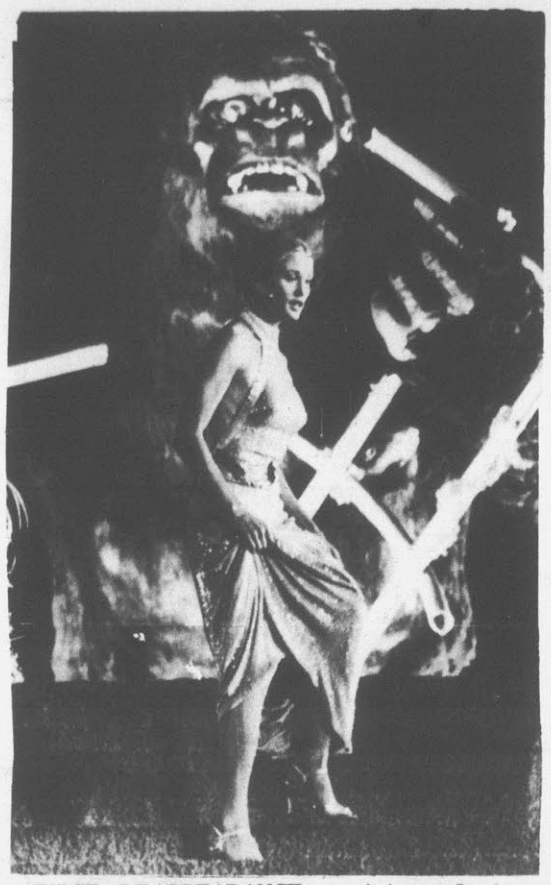
"I felt we did a good soap opera. What I wanted to do was make a kind of documentary about people in a fire, and Paul (Newman) and Steve (McQueen) helped in giving it some of that quality. But with Irwin it was dream time."

Guillermin speaks with the accent of London, but he is pure French. Born 50 years ago in Tours, he went to England at 2 when his father moved his business there. He enlisted in the R.A.F. at 17, spent six years as a pilot, came out to direct his first movie at 24.

His early films ranged from "I Was Monty's Double" to "Tarzan's Greatest Adventure." He speaks kindly of only a few, notably "Rapture" and "Waltz of the Toreadors." Among his more commercial films: "The Blue Max," "The Bridge at Remagen," "Skyjacked."

He moved to Los Angeles 10 years ago and said, "I'm sorry I didn't get out of England sooner — the caste system has ruined it."

Guillermin embarked on "King Kong" in the summer of 1975.



FIRST REAPPEARANCE — Actress Jessica Lange moves away from the towering 40-foot King Kong on the set in Los Angeles. When released this month, it will be the first screen appearance of Kong after a 42-year absence. (AP Wirephoto)

Russians Will Cover Admiralty Tower With Gold

By EMIL SVEILIS

LENINGRAD, USSR (UPI) — Suren I. Gaziyants picked up a tissue paper-thin sheet of gold from between the pages of a notebook, displayed it to a visitor and then rolled it up into a ball smaller than a pinhead.

"This is what we'll be using to cover the spire on the Admiralty building," he said. "It is a slow and tedious process even for our specially-trained craftsmen."

Gaziyants, director of the Scientific Department for the restoration of historic buildings and monuments in this former Russian capital of St. Petersburg, was explaining how a team of specialists will re-gild the 87-yard spire on the Admiralty Building, constructed in 1704 during the reign of Peter the Great.

"Our process of applying the gild has been successful on many other buildings in the city, but this is the first regilding job for the Admiralty," Gaziyants said in an interview.

During World War II, he said, the spire was covered with a dull colored tarpaulin in an effort to prevent reflection of the sun which would give the Nazis, who had advanced to only 15 miles from Leningrad, an artillery fix on the downtown area.

Gaziyants' experts will cover the tower with 4.4 pounds of gold made into 240,000 thousand very thin notebook-size sheets at a total cost of $75,000.

Asked how much the total project will cost, Gaziyants shrugged his shoulders and said, "We hope that it will not be more than 80,000 rubles ($100,000), but we will get a better idea once the scaffolding is put up."

He said there could be problems and possibly even structural faults in the building which would have to be repaired before the regilding process can begin. The restoration of the Admiralty, now used as a naval academy, is part of a general campaign to restore Leningrad to pre-revolutionary splendor.

Gaziyants said before the spire can be regilded the original gilding must come off. Then the red copper spire will be polished with very fine sandpaper.

"Even after that the outside of the scaffolding must be covered so there is no wind when the gold application is made," he said. "If this practice is not followed, the gold sheet can blow away before it is applied."

How will the gold sheets will be applied?

"Very carefully," Gaziyants said.

"First, areas of the spire will be covered with a special lacquer which will be allowed to dry for 24 hours. Then, when the lacquer is still sticky, the gold sheets will be applied," he said.

He said 34 gold application experts will be working on the tower when the actual regilding process begins next May. Other workmen will start erecting scaffolding in the near future.

"The average workman should be able to do two square meters (yards) in one eight-hour day. It is very tedious work and the allowance for mistakes is small," Gaziyants said.

The craftsmen on the spire will not be able to climb down to earth for a break during their workday because that would take too long.

"There will be telephone connections with the scaffold from the ground," Gaziyants said. "Since it will take about one hour to get up and down, we will even install portable toilets up top."

The target date for completion?

"The project will be finished by next October in time for the 60th anniversary of the (Bolshevik) revolution," Gaziyants said.

He said the actual gold application will be done during the summer months since that is the only season suitable for such a delicate job.

Sociologists Urge 'Better Teaching'

Improvement of the quality of teaching in the nation's undergraduate sociology programs is the focus of several recently published articles by East Carolina University sociologists.

An article by ECU faculty members Christa Reiser and Kenneth Wilson in the November issue of the national journal "Footnotes" is critical of the content of professional meetings of the American Sociological Association.

Appearing in the same issue of "Footnotes" is an article by Dr. John Maiolo, chairperson of the ECU Department of Sociology and Anthropology. He examines the structure of ASA sessions planned for 1977 around the theme "Shared and Divergent Perspectives," which concentrates on interdisciplinary efforts in sociology.

"Footnotes" is the official journal of the American Sociological Association.

Maiolo is also the author of two articles in the current issue of "Sociation," the publication of the N.C. Sociological Association. His "The History and Development of Sociology and Anthropology at East Carolina University" traces the growth of ECU's department since its establishment.

In the second article, "Enriching Undergraduate Education," Maiolo suggests several formal and informal means whereby the roles of student and instructor may become less restricted and thus lead to the betterment of learning.

SPANISH-STYLED UNITS GRACIOUS, LIVABLE

By Jerry Bishop

With a gracious appeal that calls to mind the gentle melodies of a Spanish guitarist, this four-unit apartment design melds a Spanish-inspired exterior with an interior to satisfy the contemporary lifestyle.

The exterior, layered with stucco and punctuated with arches and grillwork, bids entry via a private courtyard. Besides carrying out the design motif, the entry court provides a secluded spot for sunbathing or conversation, a plus for any apartment or condominium dweller.

The plan alternates one-bedroom and two-bedroom units, with the latter offering a second level for automatic zoning of sleeping areas. In the one-bedroom unit, entry is across the court and into a closeted hallway, an efficient director that protects living areas from cross-traffic.

Open planning maximizes space in the one-bedroom unit. Kitchen, dining room, and living room fashion an expansive living area with unhindered space and adequate natural light. For convenience, the kitchen carves a laundry niche, and the garage opens directly into the entry hallway.

The single bedroom in this version measures more than 12 by 12, and a linen closet and extra long garage are featured.

Besides offering a second level sleeping area, the two-bedroom unit shows a kitchen that is somewhat more segregated from the living-dining room. Situated off the kitchen is a utility/laundry room and handy half bath.

A stairway to the second level is reached from the entryway, and a coat closet serves the living room. Upstairs, two sizable bedrooms, each with double closets, are separated by a full bath.

An appealing example of efficient apartment design, the Coronado exhibits four units that enjoy maximum space and privacy. Even the garages are well-planned and offer enough space for storage or a small workshop.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I intend to have some extensive work done on my house within a few months. I keep reading all the time about the necessity of getting a reliable contractor to do the work, but I simply can not come up with any simple formula for finding one who is reliable. Do you have one?

A. — No. There is no such formula. But you can take some steps that will give you a reasonable assurance of getting a contractor whose price will be fair and who will do a quality job. You are fortunate in having plenty of time to make the necessary checks. I do not know of any better way to find a reliable contractor than to talk to people who have had similar work done. Any person who has had a bad experience with a contractor will not hesitate to tell you so. If he was satisfied that he was treated fairly, you are likely to derive the same satisfaction from your association with the contractor.

Aside from such a personal recommendation, you can get information from a local bank which issues home improvement loans, the Better Business Bureau, the community Chamber of Commerce and sometimes from such places as a lumber yard or a building supply dealer. If the contractor has been in business in the same area for a period of time, that in itself is a plus. It is wise, too, to check whether your potential choice has all the necessary insurance to protect you from liability if anything goes wrong on your property. Except in a case where you are convinced that a particular contractor does good work at a reasonable price, get three different bids on the job, with written statements on what will be done and exactly which materials will be used. Be suspicious of a bid that is either much lower or much higher than the two others.

Q. — We have galvanized gutters around the outside of our house. They appear to be in good condition and we have had no trouble with them, but two of the downspouts are in bad shape and need to be replaced. Can I use aluminum downspouts?

A. — Assuming that the downspouts and gutters were installed at the same time and that both are made of galvanized steel, it is somewhat unusual to find the downspouts deteriorating so much sooner than the gutters. However, since those are the conditions that prevail (a la Jimmy Durante), it would be better to get galvanized downspouts. Contact between steel and aluminum can cause an electrolytic action producing corrosion.

Q. — I soon will be putting up a ceiling, using 1 by 3 furring strips. How are the tiles attached to the furring strips?

A. — It depends somewhat on the type of tiles purchased. Be sure those you buy come with detailed instructions, as they usually do. In many cases, the manufacturer gives you a choice of staples, nails or special clips. When you make the purchase, be sure you tell the dealer that the tiles are to be attached to furring strips.

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A portable cutting-welding torch that utilizes bottled oxygen.

Manufacturer's claim — That this torch uses the same real bottled oxygen employed in heavy industrial welding equipment but can be used by do-it-yourselfers as well as by professional craftsmen ... that separate oxygen and fuel gas cylinders are screwed onto a compact stainless steel assembly ... that the fuel gas and oxygen flow are controlled by separate knobs conveniently located on top of the torch ... that the torch will cut up to a ¼-inch steel plate or ¾inch bolt with either propane or Mapp gas, as the user chooses ... that the unit is light enough to be operated with one hand, has a flash back arrester and uses a non-clog tip for both welding and cutting ... and that it is easy to use as an ordinary propane torch.

THE PRODUCT — A plastic interior storm window.

Manufacturer's claim — that, although a number of interior insulating windows made of plastic film are on the market, this product is made of a rigid acrylic plastic sheet inserted in trim ... that it is fastened to the window frame with strong adhesive tape... that do-it-yourselfers buy both the sheet and trim in kits and cut them to size to fit their own windows ... that the job of cutting and putting up the window can be done in 30 minutes or less ... that the trim, made of vinyl with an adhesive backing, can be painted with water-based paint to match the frames ... and the plastic sheet can be removed for easy storage or cleaning by lifting it out of the moulding strips, which can be left on the frame.

THE PRODUCT — A spray-on paint stripper.

Manufacturer's claim — That this stripper will remove all types of paint, varnish, tar, asphalt, grease, glue and many other things from wood, metal, concrete and other hard-to-clean surfaces ... that the stripper breaks down adhesion and does not dissolve the paint ... that, after an application, the old finish can be removed with hot or cold water or a putty knife .. . and that it is non-flammable, non-caustic and is biogradable.

THE PRODUCT — A home designer kit.

Manufacturer's claim — That each kit contains more than 500 pieces of typical household furniture, appliances and construction symbols painted on cardboard, gumbacked and ready to punch out . .. that it also contains a grid planning board equivalent to 4,000 square feet of living space ... that it can be used as a moving guide for the placement of furniture on moving day ... that it will help you decide whether your present furniture will fit specific areas ... and that it can be used effectively during the planning of redecorating.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N. J. 07666.)

(The cutting-welding torch is manufactured by BernzOmatic Corp., 740 Driving Park Ave., Rochester, N. Y. 14613; the storm window by Plaskolite, 1770 Joyce Ave., Columbus, Ohio 43216; the paint stripper by House of Gifts, Box 31127, San Francisco, Calif. 84131; and the home designer kit by Plan of the Century, 946 N. Gardening Questions

Q. What kind of fig tree can I plant in this area and can I count on it to bear fruit? (Mrs. M.N., Spring Lake)

A. Three figs which should perform satisfactorily for you are Celeste, which is vilet or bown in color; Brown Turkey, which is light copper brown with amber pulp, and Brunswick-Magnolia, which is light brown with amber pulp, and Brunswick-Magnolia, which is light brown with dark ribs. Brunswick-Magnolia is the most cold hardy of the three. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. Why is it important to rotate garden sites? (G.FL, Durham)

A. To avoid build-up of disease and nematodes. Also, to avoid the depletion of soil nutrients. (W.W. Reid, extension horticulturist)

Q. We recently purchased a collection of bare-rooted shrubs to be planted in a shrubbery border at our new home. It will be several weeks before the yard is ready for planting. Please advise how we should care for these plants. (CH., Charlotte)

A. Bare-rooted shrubs which cannot be planted in their permanent location should be "heeled in" temporarily to prevent roots from drying out or from freezing. Before planting, the top of the plant should be cut back to compensate for that part of the root system lost in digging. Generally, the removal of one-third to one-half of the limb area is adequate—unless root loss has been severe.

Base Awaits Annexation

GOLDSBORO — Goldsboro aldermen Tuesday will act on a resolution of intent to annex Seymour Johnson Air Force Base to the city, the first such action ever considered by a municipal board in North Carolina.

Col. James S. Brimm, base commander, said Air Force officials will neither oppose nor support the annexation.

If the board approves the resolution next week, annexation could be completed January 24, following a January 17 public hearing.

Although the annexation would add 9,000 people to the city's population and more than 3,200 acres of land (more than one-half the city's present size), the annexation would not affect the base's self-autonomy. The base would still operate under federal laws as a federal military installation.

Annexation would allow the base use the city's waste treatment system at a reduced rate, saving $72,000 to $98,000 per year and would result in an estimated $252,000 increase in general revenue sharing funds to Goldsboro — funds which have previously gone to Wayne County.

Demonstration By Amateur Radio Club

A demonstration of amateur radio operation was given by members of the Brightleaf Amateur Radio Club at the meeting of the Winterville Jaycees last Tuesday evening.

Bob Knapp introduced the BARC members present; Bernard Nobles, Vice President, Charles Garoutte and Cliff Nelson. It was pointed out that amateur radio (sometimes referred to as Ham Radio) dates back to 1893 in the U.S. and has the distinction of being the only hobby provided for by national regulations and international treaty.

The showing of a film supplied by the American Radio Relay League "Stepping Up to Amateur Radio" explained the various types of operations. This film is more or less designed to help the CBER interested in becoming a ham operator.

BARC members then showed the actual operation with portable and mobile equipment on The 2 meter band through Greenville and Grifton repeaters. A similar demonstration was given at a recent meeting of the Kiwanis "Golden K" Club.

Brightleaf Amatuer Radio Club will hold its annual Christmas party at the Moose Lodge on Friday evening, December 10. A large attendance is expected as many new members have joined the club in recent months. The increase is credited to the amateur radio operating course given at the Pitt Technical Institute.

APPRECIATION SERVICE

GRIFTON — An Appreciation Service will be held Sunday, December 5 at 3 p.m. at New Covenant Holy Temple Church in Grifton. The service will honor Rev. Ollie Harris. Rev. James Roberson and the Lawson Chapel Choir of Kinston will conduct the service. The public is invited.

Post Voted N.C. Mayor

DENVER — Scotland Neck Mayor Fred Harrison has been elected to a two-year term on the board of directors of the National League of Cities during the national organization's annual meeting here.

Harrison is the only North Carolina municipal official elected to the prestigious board of the National League of Cities.

Scotland Neck, with a population of 2,800, is the smallest municipality represented on the NLC board.

Harrison, mayor for 19 years, is a past president of the N.C. League of Municipalities, chairman of the Region "L" Council of Governments, and is currently serving as president of ElectriCities, an organization representing 71 towns and cities in North Carolina which distribute their own electric power.

Upside-Down Money Found

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Uncle Sam isn't laughing, but a batch of funny money — real $1 bills with some upside-down printing — is bringing smiles to the faces of dealers and collectors.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington issued the dollar bills with the serial numbers, Federal Reserve Bank seals and Treasury Department seals upside-down. More than 100 of the bills have been found in the Philadelphia area, and they're being bought and sold for as much as $125 each.

"It's the largest-scale U.S. paper money error in many years, and also one of the most dramatic," said Norman Pullen, a coin dealer in Robbinsville, N.J.

Officials at the printing bureau said they did not know how many of the bills were circulated, but estimates range from 400 to several thousand.

"We are aware of the fact that it happened, and we're taking steps to prevent it (in the future)," said H.T. Krisak, superintendent of the bureau's management service division.

The Washington mint prints all bills, then distributes them through a network of Federal Reserve banks, each of whose seal appears on the currency.

The misprints have been found on bills of the 1974 series bearing the seals of Atlanta, Chicago and Kansas City, Mo., as well as Philadelphia.

Christmas Homes Tour Set For Tuesday

By PATRICIA MOORE
Tour of Homes

How did a local couple convert a house-filling station into a comfortable home? What would you expect to find in the homes of an attorney or a university president? What kind of home would a contractor build for himself? Where does a football coach live? What is the home of furniture dealer like?

For their 1976 Christmas Tour of Homes, the women of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church have drawn from their local community six homes completely different in architecture and interior decor, each offering some insight into the people who live there. On Tuesday, Dec. 7, people from throughout eastern and Piedmont North Carolina will come here for the second Tour of Homes, which will include a Candlelight Tour and a "Christmas Tree House" with hand-crafted gift and decorative items, as well as a "Sugar Plum House" filled with homemade gourmet, baked and sweet selections.

In 1936, when Mr. and Mrs. Lee H. Hannah decided it was time to select their permanent home, they were faced with the necessity of finding a house to put on their property. They did not want to build, so they bought a Dutch colonial house complete with a filling station attached. They had the house moved to their adjacent lot, made the filling station into servant's quarters, and then used ingenuity to add small rooms on either side of the home, enlarge the kitchen, add a sunporch to the rear of the building, and charge the exterior completely by adding a large columned porch.

The result was a colonial home which is the setting for Mrs. Hannah's oriental rugs and antiques, some of which belonged to her mother, as well as momentoes from trips she and her husband have taken over the years.

What originally was a small screened porch on the left side of the house is now a tiny room which accommodates an antique pine sideboard set off by a stained glass window which came out of Mrs. Hannah's family home.

In the adjacent dining room is a small wooden high chair which three generations of Hannahs have used. And there is a bouquet of peafowl feathers from her mother's farm in Craven County.

THIS STATELY COLONIAL HOME . . . was once was Dutch colonial in style, but was moved and redesigned by its owners, Mr. and Mrs. Lee H. Hannah.

Not to be missed in the sun porch room is an old buggy seat covered in white leather, which was hand painted with a horse scene. An old chopping block serves as a side table for it.

A small walnut conversation chair graces the bedroom at the top of the stairs. Once this same chair, another family piece, was covered with gold gilt and was upholstered in satin-like material. In the master bedroom is a four-poster bed of curly maple which belonged to one of Mrs. Hannah's grandmothers. The bed has never been refinished. The only change it has seen over the years is the discontinued use of the canopy.

Antique lovers will find more old furnishings blended with the traditional in the country French home of Attorney and Mrs. James C. Lanier Jr. The entrance hall, with its wall of alternating smoked glass mirrors and wallpapered panels of bright pastel colors, is the cue to the decor of the rest of the home, as well as a background for an antique side chair of solid wood.

Mrs. Lanier relied on advice from several decorators to achieve the effect she wanted—the use of warm colors and at the same time, the traditionalist influence.

Their family room incorporates Lanier family pieces as well as some unusual keepsakes from Mrs. Lanier's family. In one corner of the rustic room is a large one-piece pine corner cupboard with original hinges. Adding color and interest is a buggy robe, resting on the back of the sofa, which belonged to Mrs. Lanier's great grandparents. On the fireplace is a wicker picnic basket used by her grandmother. Rough plaster walls with rough wood paneling up to the chair rail sets off these and other antique pieces, such as a cane rocker and a cherry dropleaf table.

Antique Accents

Adding interest to the breakfast room-kitchen counter divider are three small antique items: a wooden milking pail, brought from Ireland by one of Mrs. Lanier's grandmothers, and now used to hold fruit; her great grandfather's wine bottle encased in a wicker basket; and her great grandmother's coffee grinder.

Of particular interest in the upstairs hall is an 18th century French commode with Wedgwood medallion insets on either door. A mirror of Venetian glass hangs above it. While the master bedroom is furnished with antiques, including a mahogony Empire secretary, the children's rooms are more contemporary. Green carpeting ties the varied color schemes and furnishings together.

Practically every style of art originating in the 20th century is reflected in the faculty and student works in the home of East Carolina University President and Mrs. Leo W. Jenkins.

When the Jenkins moved into the president's quarters some 16 years ago, Jenkins decided that the home would be a fitting showcase for the School of Art. It was also at that time that the state, for the first time, allocated funds to furnish the downstairs.

One of the most outstanding paintings in the home is a Pennsylvania snow scene by Francis Speight, nationally prominent artist who is a professor emeritus at ECU, which hangs in the dining room. Nearby, on the same wall, is an abstract acrylic by former student Jenny Barone, who used the plastic lift technique. The central part of her work is a photosilk screen.

A large fabric painting by Paul Hartley, a former student now on the faculty, hangs in the entrance hall. This colorful work is acrylic above and fabric below, set off with a frame also made of fabric.

Among paintings in the living room is a diptych—two matching canvases—by Lee Armstrong White, which complements the decor of the room and lends drama to the large wall it graces. This work involves the transparent use of color, called staining.

In the sun room are two impressionistic oil portraits by Tim Sechler and Sheila Bumgardner, and an unsigned surrealistic landscape. A small den adjacent to the dining room contains a collection of student pottery, as well as a landscape oil of an East Carolina farm scene by Betsy Ross, former student now on the faculty, and a large landscape in oil, by Paul Martick, using abstract impressionism.

Several thousand persons are received in the Jenkins home annually. They find a spacious house, traditionally furnished, with Jenkins family momentoes in certain reserved places, such as the sun porch and a small hallway which parallels the large entrance hall. Here are photographs and picture portraits of famous visitors such as musicians, politicans and athletes, as well as family and friends.

Contractor Ed Tipton's love of history led to the choice of the three-story 18th century Georgian home he and his wife Gloria built three years ago. The house is laid in 18th century Flemish bond, featuring decorative brickwork including bonded jack-arches, twin offset chimneys and brick band. A stickler for detail, Tipton's brick mason visited Williamsburg and historical Virginia twice to make sure the chimneys were properly styled.

The recessed front door is strictly Georgian in style, with a recessed alcove of four "lights" (panes) above it, set in handmade woodwork.

The interior of the home features the three-piece cornice treatment throughout the downstairs.

In the family room, the oversized fireplace has a recessed and raised, curved hearth, the trim set off with dental molding. Paneling on either side of the fireplace is of random length and rough sewn walnut. Doorways have two-piece molding featuring beaded door casing and whelped back band, as in the 18th century style.

Tipton's small library has the same random length walnut paneling found in the den, but here a completely different effect is achieved because it is polished. Furnished in the Chippendale style, the room contains a light oil painting of a rural country scene and was brought from Lebanon by Tipton's great grandmother. An Oriental screen print is on the opposite wall.

The adjacent downstairs power room is striking, with its foil wallpaper of blues, browns and whites above the walnut paneling. A shall-shaped sink is encased in a brown marbelized vanity top.

Football Coach Pat Dye and his family occupy a spacious contemporary home which will double as the "Sugar Plum House" on the day of the house tour.

Casual Home

Here, Mrs. Dye drew on previous experiences with a decorator and advice from local ones to indulge in one of her favorite pastimes—creating a confortable, casual home for her busy husband and four children, all of whom, along with herself, enjoy active, outdoor activities.

In the summers, the screened in porch just off the den and kitchen is a favorite resting place, with its handing baskets—some rooted by Dye—and its ceiling fan, which Dye installed himself.

Attention in the den is drawn to the large white brick fireplace which runs the width of the room. Here, the Dyes have a matching pair of fireside chairs upholstered in a fine stripe, picking up the golds used in the sofa, drapes and carpeting. On the wall leading to the kitchen is an old Coca-Cola clock from Dye's father's country store.

The living room is a contrast with its color scheme of pastel blues, green and oyster, all found in the sofa fabric. A pair of chairs upholstered in soft blue complements the sofa. On top of the piano, which belonged to Mrs. Dye as a child, are a pair of Staffordshire porcelain figurines of Mary and Joseph.

The traditional home of furniture dealer Joseph M. Taft Jr., his wife and four children, which will be the site of the "Christmas Tree House" is awash with vibrant colors.

An Oriental influence, generally very subtle, is to be found in most of the fabrics and wallpapers.

It is the family room which incorporates colors used throughout the entire home. Artwork, some of which was painted expressly to complement the color scheme, depicts favorite family scenes, was executed by personal friends, or both.

For example, a colorful painting of one of Mr. Taft's favorite fishing spots, done by Greenville native Rachel Steinbeck Sturz, hangs over the sofa. Over the fireplace is an oil painting of a Lake Junaluska scene, the favorite family vacation sopot. And on a table is a metal sculpture of a man bass fishing, executed by Greenville artist Billy Johnson.

The back wall of the room is decorated with a collection of black and white artwork. Included are sketches of the "First Pitt County Courthouse" and "Old Winslow Stables on Washington Street" by Ms. Sturz; sketch of Hatteras by former resident Sami Felmet; sketches by Webb Garrison; and other of the Outer Banks, a hunting scene with waterfowl, and Williamsburg lithographs.

In the living and dining rooms, Mediterranean blue carpeting and white walls set off the rich mahogony woods used in furnishings. Matching sofa and drapery fabrics in the living room complement the decor.

Decorations for the family Christmas tree in this room are the realization of a long held desire by Mrs. Taft for a tree decorated entirely with Chrismons.

Hours for the Tour of Homes are 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. for the daytime portion and 7 to 9 p.m. for the Candlelight Tour. Tickets will be available on Tuesday at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, which will serve as tour headquarters, or advance tickets may be purchased from Mrs. Charles E. Kavanaugh, ticket chairman, for $4.50. The ticket price the day of the tour will be $5.50.

Programs of Christmas music will be presented in five of the homes during the Candlelight Tour.

Mrs. Jasper L. Lewis Jr. is chairman for the 1976 Tour of Homes.

Margaret Truman Writes Of 'Courageous' Women

EDITOR'S NOTE — Margaret Truman has just finished her fourth book and she's packing in two or three interviews a day to promote it. They are self-deprecating interviews in which the president's daughter wonders why people think she's interesting.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Margaret Truman was 21 years old when she moved into the White House.

Today, at 52, she says, "Everything has been uphill since."

She never became the singer she set out to be when her father was president. But she has raised four sons as the wife of a newspaper executive and has just finished her fourth book, "Women of Courage."

In that book, Miss Truman tells the stories of 12 women who in one way or another struggled courageously for a cause or belief. Most are unknowns, like Kate Bernard, who fought for the rights of Indian children in Oklahoma, or Prudence Crandell, who pioneered education for black children in Connecticut, or Elizabeth Blackwell, who became America's first doctor, in 1847.

Elizabeth Blackwell disturbed the status quo, Miss Truman writes, much as Miss Truman herself did when she tried to become a singer. "Could I ... have endured the loneliness and discouragement that Elizabeth Blackwell had to put up with in her struggle? ... I doubt it very much."

Still a rather private person, Mrs. Clifton Daniel is packing in two or three interviews a day as she travels the country to promote the book. Not that she is willing to say a lot about Margaret Truman.

"I don't know why people think I'm interesting," she says.

May one ask for whom Mrs. Daniel voted this November?

"You certainly may not," she answers rather primly but with a laughing glint in her eyes. "But you may remember that I'm a Democrat."

Would she care to compare Independence and Plains?

"I've never been in Plains."

She and her husband, an associate editor of The New York Times, live in a midtown co-op with their four sons, aged 19 to 10. Clifton Daniel recently returned to New York after a stint as the bureau chief of The Times' Washington operation. The welcome home parties, plus the many interviews connected with her book, have made Mrs. Daniel's schedule a bit of a nightmare.

"I'm so frustrated. I've only gotten to Bloomingdale's once," said the woman whose father called her Margie, pronounced with a hard "g."

She is not fond of recounting those years in the White House.

"I practically never think of the White House," says Mrs. Daniel. "I recently drove by it and didn't even look at it."

Besides her music, Mrs. Daniel has acted in summer stock and has written about her White House life (one book, "Harry S. Truman," was a best seller) in the years since her famous dad told off the critic who said she couldn't sing.

She dreads being asked to speculate on what her father would have done on this or that situation, a game she refuses to play.

"I never spoke for him while he was alive. I have no intention of speaking for him now," she says in the simple and direct manner her father would have used.

A slender blonde of medium height, Mrs. Daniel says she is pleased by the growing acclaim her father has received in recent years.

But the thing that pleases her most was the timing.

"I'm very happy he was alive to see it," said Mrs. Daniel, whose father died in 1972. Now she says that she tries to get back to Independence as often as she can to visit her mother, Bess Truman.

Her eldest son, Clifton Daniel Jr., is currently working at CBS, taking a year off from college. The next two sons are in prep schools and the youngest is enrolled in a private school in Manhattan.

The boys, she says, have handled the fact that they are a president's grandchildren with relative ease.

"They were conditioned to that early on. I told them anyone's grandfather could have been president. As boys, they were around other children who also had famous grandfathers."

In her new book, Mrs. Daniel writes: "The women I've chosen to write about ... share one transcendent quality. All of them in some way, at some time, acted courageously."

And the book itself is dedicated to her mother, "who is definitely a woman of courage."

Miss Purser Was Wed Friday

The marriage of Bonnie Gwen Purser and Bob Lee Taylor was solemnized Friday evening at 7:30 in a ceremony performed at the home of the bridegroom's family.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Ed Gunter of the St. Luke Baptist Church, Sanford. Pianist for the ceremony was Lindsey Rosebrock.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Evon Dixon Purser of Winterville. She was given in marriage by her uncle, Ronald Carroll. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Earl Taylor of Greenville.

The bride wore a gown of qiana nylon trimmed in Brussel's lace at the neckline, waist and sleeves. The lace also encircled the full chapel train. Her headpiece was a mantilla of imported bridal illusion and trimmed in matching lace. The bride carried a cascade of white carnations and pom pons.

The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Susan Purser of Winterville, She wore a light blue satin gown fashioned with sheer sleeves and carried a long-stemmed red rose.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride attended Central Carolina Technical Institute, majoring in veterinary technology and is now working at Willow Grove Veterinary Hospital. The bridegroom attended Appalachian State University and now works in Robersonville as a supervisor at Central Soya.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the Taylors.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My son slouched into the kitchen last night, threw his books on the countertop and said, "I've just had the worse day of my entire life and it's all your fault!"

"How do you figure that?" I asked.

"Just because you made me go back up to my room and turn off all the lights before I went to school, I missed the bus. Then, with all your nagging about cleaning up my room, I couldn't find my gym clothes and got 15 points knocked off my grade."

"The gym clothes were folded and in your bottom drawer."

"Yeah, well, what yo-yo would expect them to be there?"

"You've got a point."

"I hope you're happy," he grumbled. "I have failed English."

"I did that?"

"That's right. I told you I had a paper that was due before lunch and you made me turn my lights off last night and wouldn't let me do it."

"It was 1:30 in the morning."

"Just forget it. It's done. Did you have a good lunch today? I hope so because thanks to you, I didn't get any."

"What's THAT got to do with me?"

"You're the one who wouldn't advance me next week's allowance. And more good news. You know the suede jacket you got me for my birthday last year? Well, it's gone."

"And I'm to blame for that?"

"I'm glad you admit it. All I hear around here is, 'Hang up your coat, hang up your pajamas, hang up your sweater . . . and the one time I take your advice and hang up my jacket on a hook in the lunchroom, someone rips it off. If I had just dropped it on the floor by my feet like I always do, I'd have that suede jacket today."

"It sounds like quite a day."

"It's not over yet," he said. "Didn't you forget something?"

"Like what?" I asked

"Like weren't you supposed to remind me I had ball practice after school?"

"I put a note on your desk."

"Under all that junk I'm supposed to find a note! It would serve you right if I got cut. And I might just do that. I swear, I was talking to some of the guys and we decided parents can sure screw up their kids."

I smiled. "We try."

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

A local beauty shop, La Kosmetique, was mentioned in the November issue of "Mademoiselle" in a column entitled "Hair Update."

The cross-country concensus was the pooling of resources—a list of hairdressers from past research and names which were recommended by the magazine's College Board.

The magazine sent questionnaires on cuts, care, color and the treatment one would get as a customer.

The column tells of the three directions hair's taking—longer, sleeker or tousled.

Mrs. Nell Perry, owner-manager of the Greenville shop, received the questionnaire in early summer. The questionnaire asked about services provided, prices, theory, hair cuts, conditioning, hair color, special effects, styling techniques, etc.

The questionnaire was filled out, returned and forgotten. This month's issue had been in the shop for about three weeks before Mrs. Perry discovered the shop's name printed in "Mademoiselle."

The Rocky Mount Garden Club is presenting a holiday house tour this afternoon from 1:30-5:30 featuring "Benvenue," home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Lane, 330 Southern Blvd.

"Benvenue" in its original form was built in 1830 by Redmond Bunn, but in 1844, a larger house was built in front of the original one. Now having been fully restored, "Benvenue" is an example of Italianate architecture.

A number of dependencies still remain on the grounds including an old school house, post office, root house, smoke house and spring house.

The rooms of the house and buildings have been decorated for the holiday season by garden club members. The Christmas tree in the sitting room is adorned with handmade ornaments, gingham ribbons and miniature dried arrangements. A bake sale will be held in the school house.

Assemble-It-Yourself Furniture Coming In Varied Styles

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Consumer assembled furniture is being touted as offering more comfort and higher styling, in order to attract mature homemakers as well as youthful customers.

At least that's the message from the Southern Furniture Market Center's fall show at High Point, N.C., where more of the knockdown furniture was shown. Easy to store and moderately priced, the furniture ties up less money in inventory because it offers quick factory-to-store delivery, a big plus for dealers. Then, too, customers can walk right out of the store with the easy-to-carry boxes.

The assemble-it-yourself furniture has been popular for a long time, particularly because its portability appeals to a society that moves about. But its consumer appeal was often limited to young people who liked the stark appearance.

Styling has changed. One line (James David) softens the look, featuring upholstered chairs with fully upholstered arms with button tufting and plump cushions of 100 per cent woven cotton fabric upholstery. What's more, the upholstery is now interchangeable. New fittings include natural-color nylon, rust-color corduroy and chamois-color vinyl, and can be ordered easily.

New pieces in this line combine real wood insets (redwood cut across the grain) with basic structural chrome, reflecting the trend to natural products. The wood panels are inset into the chrome frame of one glass and wood-topped table. It softens the look of metal and makes it more compatible with other furnishings.

In addition to lounge chairs, sofas in velvet, settees, ottomans, dining tables and chairs, the wide range of furniture includes magazine racks, serving carts and planters. Tall etageres can be linked with tempered glass shelves.

Casual chairs of one system can be combined into love seat or sofa with or without arms by a hidden locking device in the bases.

Unwed Father Refuses to Help

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: The son of a wealthy professional man has gotten a girl pregnant. That may not be unusual, but the boy's father bought him a new car with the understanding that the boy not marry the girl. This I consider most unusual.

The girl is forced to go on welfare. The cost of pre-natal care and delivery, plus the cost of raising the child will be at the taxpayers' expense.

As a taxpayer I resent the idea of supporting the grandchild of a wealthy man. However, what do you advise in such a situation? The district attorney seems to feel that welfare is the answer.

DEE DEE ESS

DEAR DEE: Pity a male who is old enough to become a father but isn't man enough to handle his own problems. The wealthy professional man who would bribe his son to forestall marriage, but then offer no financial help to the girl and/or the child is as morally guilty as the son for evading any responsibility for the consequences of his actions.

To fill the gap created by such moral cop-outs, the U.S. government has created Aid to Dependent Children. And for the sake of the innocent children, it's a good thing it did.

DEAR ABBY: We are older people who have just bought a light-colored carpet. We cannot afford to replace it, so we have bought 10 pair of slippers for guests to put on before coming into our house.

The problem: We have a dear friend (he's also a relative) who refuses to remove his shoes and use the slippers we have provided for our guests.

His wife still comes, using the slippers, but he refuses to come if he has to wear the slippers.

Please advise us.

MINUS ONE GUEST

DEAR MINUS: Carpets, including light-colored ones, were made to walk on. If you want this uncooperative guest to visit you, make an exception to the rule and don't make a big deal out of it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BIBLE STUDENT IN ASHVILLE, N.C.: Psychiatry is NOT an atheistic concept. The greatest textbook on human behavior ever written is the Bible in which the principle of psychoanalysis was set forth 3,000 years ago.

"And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." (New Testament, John VIII; 32)

Not until one knows "the truth" about himself, complete with all the grim hostilities, insecurities and unresolved conflicts, is he truly "free."

It is the role of the psychiatrist to remove the camouflage, self-deception and rationalizations, and to bring the unconscious conflicts into the conscious mind where reason can deal with them. Once reason is gained, the cure begins, because the truth does make one free.

DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat at home alone, loving me just the same.

It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them.

I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have their parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think.

TOO LATE

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion that really works for people who are bothered by obscene telephone calls:

The minute you hear an obscene word, say, "Just a moment please," and walk away from the phone without hanging up. The caller will think you are coming back, but when he waits and waits and you don't return, he will tire of waiting and hang up. He can't break the connection because your phone is off the hook. This will make it impossible for the caller to use his phone to harass other women. Also, he will never want to call you again and be deprived of his depraved fun.

OFF THE HOOK

DEAR OFF: Your suggestion will work, but while punishing the caller you are also depriving yourself of the use of your phone. Ma Bell recommends that you hang up immediately, and if the calls continue, to call the police who will undertake certain surveillance procedures in cooperation with the phone company.

It seems to me that the wisest course of action would be to keep your caller's line connected to yours (by not hanging up) and then go to a neighbor's phone to report the obscene call to both the phone company and the police.

DEAR ABBY: I was married to Jim eight years ago. We had two sons, then we were divorced. Two years later Jim married my younger sister. They had twin daughters.

My question: Are my sons and my sister's twin daughters just first cousins? Or are they more closely related?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: Your sons and your sister's twin daughters are first cousins. But because they have the same father, they are half-brothers and sisters, which is a closer relationship.

Scout Jamboree Plans Drawn Up

By JOHN RUTHERFORD

BUTLER, Pa. (UPI) — The Boy Scouts of America will hold its ninth national jamboree next August in Moraine State Park.

Greater emphasis will be placed on improving the quality of local units, according to a Boy Scout official at the national headquarters in New Brunswick, N.J.

With this in mind, next year's jamboree is specifically designed to offer Scouts "a chance to learn leadership and program ideas that they can apply upon their return home to improve the quality of scouting," said Mark R. Wille, jamboree news executive.

Participation will be selective in contrast to earlier jamborees that were open to any Scout.

The jamboree is being billed as a "once-in-a-lifetime" experience for 40,000 Scouts and their leaders next Aug. 3-9 on 16,000 acres of park land 50 miles north of Pittsburgh. The site is the same as the 1973 jamboree-east, but a jamboree-west held three years ago in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, will not be held next year.

A merit badge midway will offer audience participation in some 60 fields from personal fitness and first aid to atomic energy and gardening. An arts and science fair will feature Scout demonstrations in such areas as sculpture, crafts, music and the sciences.

There will be a national cooking and baking contest, as well as competitive events that will be measured in metrics instead of inches.

Also with an eye to the future, practical demonstrations of pollution control will include wind, water and solar energy projects.

In line with the Bicentennial, events will include a Liberty Bell race (erect a tripod, hoist a heavy bell and ring it) and a Bicentennial salute (flag pole construction).

Six regional cultural centers will depict the life styles of America: a Polynesian village with poi and coconuts; the Mexican and cowboy heritages of the Southwest; Indians of the plains; pioneer spirit of Lewis and Clark; contributions of the Cajuns; and colonial America of early New England.

Swimming, boating and fishing will be available on Lake Arthur, and major arena shows are scheduled for both the opening and closing night. The arena shows will feature celebrities and fireworks and will be open to the public.

The first national jamboree was held in 1937 in Washington, D.C.

Epiphany Known By Other Names

NEW YORK (UPI) — The winter holiday of Epiphany has several other names: Little Christmas, Twelfth Night or Three Kings Day. Border Area 'Debatable'

BEWCASTLE, England (UPI) — For centuries the boundary between England and Scotland was ill-defined and the wild, desolate moors northwest of here were known as the Debatable Land. Border clans, chiefly the Armstrongs, the Grahams and the Eliots (still among the most common names), populated the area. These tough people owed allegiance to neither crown and pillaged indiscriminately to south and north.

Near the border on the Bewcastle fells stands Christianbury Crag (1,598 feet), the home of one of the very few herds of wild goats in England.

The area was once the northwest frontier of the Roman world. It is said St. Patrick may have been born in this village of a native woman by a Roman officer.

Among the attractions in the area is Hadrian's Wall, which the Romans built across the north of England, from Carlisle to Newcastle.

Santa's Helpers Remail Letters

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Air Force is sponsoring a "Santa's Mailbag" program this year for children to receive a letter from Santa Claus postmarked "North Pole, Alaska."

Military and civilian volunteers from Eielson AFB, Alaska, act as Santa's helpers to remail the letters so the children receive a letter from Santa Claus bearing the North Pole postmark.

If parents would like a child to receive a letter from Santa Claus, the letter should be written by the parent to the child, placed in a stamped envelope addressed to the youngster and mailed to: Det. 2, 11th Weather Squadron, Santa's Mailbag, APO Seattle 98737

They Feasted On Roast Peacock

NEW YORK (UPI) — English Christmas celebrants years ago feasted on roast peacock stuffed with wild herbs and spices. Its beak was gilded and its tail feathers were used as garnish.

American author Washington Irving once wrote of being served what appeared to be peacock, only to find that the colorful plumage covered a pheasant pie. His host had lost so many of his peacocks the previous summer than he was loathe to kill one for the holiday dinner.

Holland Marks An Early Feast

NEW YORK (UPI) — In Holland children don't have to wait until Christmas for St. Nicholas to leave presents. The feast of St. Nicholas is observed on Dec. 6. His arrival on the eve of that day is accompanied by a shower of candies and nuts dropping on the floor when he enters the room to the singing of children. Youngsters set out their shoes that night instead of stockings to be filled with gifts.

Peace Corps In Philippines Marks 15th Birthday

BY VICTOR LANIAUSKAS

MANILA, The Philippines (UPI) — Jim Turner remembers the speeches and ceremonies that greeted him and his fellow volunteers 15 years ago when they stepped off the plane and into the sweltering heat of the tropics.

Turner was a member of the first group of American Peace Corps volunteers assigned to the Philippines. Following the speeches and welcoming parties, the group of 128 spread out over the archipelago of more than 7,000 islands, mostly teaching English and quickly learning the realities of poverty.

"It was a hell of a job we tried to do," said Turner, 38, a native of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. "We came in to work miracles, and I guess some of us worked them. Mostly, though, we just tried to survive."

Unlike most of the other volunteers, Turner stayed on after his two-year stint and has since become a successful businessman in the Philippines.

He has interests in two barrestaurants in the Manila tourist belt and works for a large business firm with wide-ranging projects throughout the country. He also has taught political science in one of Manila's universities.

The Peace Corps, on the other hand, has had a much more difficult time justifying its continuing presence in developing nations of the world.

John F. Kennedy first formally proposed the creation of an American overseas volunteer force in a speech near the end of the 1960 presidential election campaign.

Kennedy told a San Francisco audience he wanted an American Peace Corps to thwart the propaganda efforts of the Soviet Union in developing nations.

The Kennedy proposal ignited an altruistic blaze in the hearts of the nation's youth and drew sympathetic support from a Cold War-conscious electorate.

Less than a year after Kennedy's election, the first of some 60,000 volunteers went off to developing countries in Asia, Africa and South America, certain only of a desire to "do something."

"The 350 volunteers here have a fairly small effect in the overall sense, which may be improved with recruitment of more specialized people," says Marsh Thomson, director of the Philippine Peace Corps program, largest in the world today.

The jobs given the early volunteers, who first had to survive rugged physical training and crash courses in some of the world's more obscure languages, consisted primarily of English language teaching and vaguely defined community development assignments in remote areas.

"Hell, everyone used to take for granted that we were here for a two-year vacation," said one former female volunteer at the Manila anniversary celebration which coincided with the arrival of the 100th group sent to the Philippines. She asked not to be identified.

"You come into this isolated little barrio (village) and everyone thinks you're either nuts for giving up a comfortable life in the states or just a CIA snooper compiling data on them. How can you achieve anything in a setup like that?

"After awhile, I just sat back and waited out the two years, smiling as much as I could and counting the days."

The community development projects are still there, but Thomson notes the education programs have been eliminated in a major emphasis shift within the last five years.

Trying to shed its liberal arts education image, the Peace Corp now aims its recruitment campaigns at farmers, mechanics, nurses and people with advanced training in agronomy, urban planning and medicine.

"We've succeeded in converting entirely to food production, health programs, nutrition, research areas in technical fields and development planning," Thomson says. "We get into education (in the Philippines) only in specialized areas such as work with the blind and deaf."

Getting Congress to approve Peace Corps budgets, however, has never been easy.

For the more conservative politicians, the Peace Corps, especially during the Vietnam war years, remained a liberal scheme and haven for draft dodgers.

But the turbulence of the late '60's, fueled primarily by increased U.S. involvement in Indochina, partially solved the Peace Corps budgetary difficulties. The volunteers stopped volunteering.

The program had shrunk from about 15,000 volunteers and trainees in 1966 to some 10,000 by 1970. More disturbing than the loss of enthusiasm for the program in the U.S. was the fact that only 10 years after its inception, nine nations had requested the Peace Corps to leave their countries and a number of others wanted its presence considerably reduced. Since then, several more countries have asked the Peace Corps to leave.

In 1971, former President Richard Nixon decided to revitalize the waning popularity of the Peace Corps by lumping it with six other federally-funded volunteer agencies into a super corps called "Action".

Five years later the conglomerate appears to be healthy. With the end of the Vietnam War, and perhaps as a result of the ensuing domestic economic difficulties, the Peace Corps appears now on the verge of a rejuvenation.

By early 1976, there were nearly 8,000 volunteers and trainees overseas. More importantly, Peace Corps officials claim applications from would-be volunteers are rising sharply to about 30,000 per year compared with 19,000 in 1970.

To add to the optimism, President-elect Jimmy Carter's mother, "Miz Lillian," has become the most famous Peace Corps "alumna." She joined the Peace Corps 10 years ago at the age of 68 and spent two years in India working in health centers.

Ancestral Home Open

PENRITH, England (UPI) — Hutton in the Forest, the ancestral home of Lord and Lady Inglewood, will be open to the public again in 1977, from May 26-Sept. 29. Located six miles northwest of here, in Britain's Lake District, the house is a 14th century pele tower with later additions which has been in Lord Inglewood's family since the early 17th century.

Pele towers were found on both sides of the Scottish border through the later Middle Ages. They consisted of three rooms, one above the other, and were used as defense against raids by marauding bands.

Gardens and terraces surrounding the house date from the late 17th century.

Lord Inglewood is a former member of the British parliament and a direct descendant of Sir Henry Vane the Elder, who in 1636, at the age of 23, became governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony. Defeated the following year by John Winthrop, he returned to England where his close collaboration with Cromwell led to his execution after the Restoration. There is a statue of him outside the public library in Boston and his portrait hangs in the dining room of Hutton in the Forest.

The long gallery, rare in this part of England, beautiful carvings, tapestries and furniture acquired by the family over the centuries are of particular interest in the six rooms which will be shown Thursdays only, excluding Aug. 4 and 11, from 2-5 p.m. There is a small admission charge.

This Year, Old Man River Proves Unpredictability

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS (AP) — "You never turn your back on that old river out there," the old man on the dock said. "Just when you think you've got it figured out, that Mississippi will turn the tables on you and you'll get bit."

The Mississippi is currently proving him right.

Long feared for its spring floods, the river has lately turned to the other extreme.

A summer-fall drought has reduced the river to a mere shadow of its former self, dropping water levels from Alton, Ill., to New Orleans, forcing river traffic into unaccustomed narrow channels.

Those narrow channels often contain hidden sand bars to trap the unwary river pilot and a long string of barges.

At Memphis the Mississippi fell below the zero mark on the river gauge Aug. 10 and dropped to a record low of minus 5.7 feet shortly thereafter. Since then it has risen slightly, but has basically remained on the downside of the scale.

Beneath a bridge at Memphis, the remains of an old wooden barge — a type that hasn't been seen on the river in 30 years — suddenly appeared on what had been the river bottom until the water receded. Its wreckage drew curious boatmen and photographers for weeks.

Downstream, at Helena, the low water uncovered the wreckage of an oil barge that slammed into a bridge pier four years ago. A salvage crew hurriedly cut the remains apart and towed them away before the river could reclaim them.

Rivermen cursed as they were forced to take expensive and time-consuming measures to cope with the low water.

Barge-loads of grain destined for New Orleans take eight days to go down river from Memphis in normal time. But as the water level dropped, the time increased to 14 or 15 days.

The towboat companies were forced to reduce their normal tows from 18 tows to eight or nine barges loaded with 900 tons of freight instead of the normal 1,500 tons.

Despite around-the-clock work by Army Corps of Engineers dredges, there simply isn't enough water to safely float a normally loaded barge through the shallow spots.

To make things worse, the receding water has forced traffic into narrow channels which made it difficult and even impossible to negotiate without cutting a string of barges in half.

An unwary river pilot who manages to get his tow hung up on a sandbar can block the entire river for hours until he can free himself.

When will it end?

Jerry Clemons, a National Weather Service hydrologist, offered little hope for improvement until spring.

Ten Tips On Choosing Toys

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new consumer information service on toys in the J. C. Penney Co. Christmas catalog includes 10 tips on choosing toys and advice on what to expect of a toy.

It says a good toy should help a child to grow in one or more of the following ways: by exercising the use of large and small muscles, developing motor skills and coordination, strengthening the child's ability to solve problems, deal with language, numbers and other information, encourage the child's imagination and inventiveness in play and give the child practice in interacting and communicating with people.

Pet Dog Has A Pacemaker

PALOS HEIGHTS, Ill. (UPI) — A year after her second pacemaker implant, Minnie appears to have fully recovered and doctors predict she could survive to the ripe old age of 14.

Minnie is a miniature schnauzer, the 10½-year-old pet of Shirley Garness of this Chicago suburb. The dog possibly is the longest surviving canine recipient of the surgery generally associated with two-legged patients.

Minnie's developed a condition with a long medical name, which prevented her heart from beating at the usual frequency of more than 100 per minute, in April, 1972. Medication helped for a while, but then Minnie's pulse dropped to 30 beats per minute.

At that point, barking would cause her to faint.

Mrs. Garness says she learned from her veterinarian that a pacemaker implant was possible. She contacted Dr. Stanley Harris of Independence, Mo., who performed the implant in a one-hour operation October, 1974.

Minnie appeared to recover well from the rare animal surgery, with her pulse rate set at 80 beats per minute, but a complication caused problems a year after surgery. The pacemaker implanted in the pet was one of those recalled as defective by the manufacturer. And so it was that Minnie's pulse increased from 80 to 220 — twice the normal rate — in November, 1975.

Mrs. Garness says the new pacemaker installed that month is superior to the old one because it only issues a pulse when Minnie's heart fails to do so. The old pacemaker had kept Minnie's pulse at 80 beats per minute, even during sleep.

Mrs. Garness says Minnie now chases cats and squirrels, races up steps two at a time and acts in most other ways like any other frisky pet. To those who say two pacemaker implants involved too much expense and effort for a pet, Mrs. Garness has a ready answer.

"I have a very dear friend who said to me, 'That's a lot of money to go for a dog, blah blah,' and I said to her, 'If you ever have to wear a pacemaker, be thankful that she has one now, because that's where research is done," she said a dog, blah blah,' and I said to her, 'If you ever have to wear a pacemaker, be thankful that she has one now, because ct figures were. She says the cost was not important, and that she would do it again if needed.

"She's been such a joy to me for all this time," Mrs. Garness said, "and this was my chance to pay her back."

Ministers Were Carol-Composers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Some of the most revered Christmas carols were composed by ministers, says researcher Sally Hopkins of Hallmark.

"O Little Town of Bethlehem" was written by Episcopal minister Phillips Brooks as a poem in 1868; Louis Redner composed the music. Another Episcopal minister, John Henry Hopkins Jr., wrote the words and music for "We Three Kings of Orient Are" in 1863.

"It Came Upon a Midnight Clear" was the work of Edmund H. Sears of the Weston, Mass., Unitarian church.

MEATLESS MEAL

NEW YORK (UPI) — Christmas Eve supper in Poland traditionally is meatless because that date is a fast day. One traditional dessert for the meal consists of compote of 12 dried fruits, symbolizing the 12 apostles.

Task Force Hunts Banditos Hunting Illegal Aliens

By CLARENCE ZAITZ

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A special 10-man task force of the San Diego Police Department is in the San Ysidro substation regrouping for another night-time foray into "no-man's land" when comes a phone call from the Border Patrol.

"There's been an attack ... we have a victim ... we have one suspect and are seeking more ... help us."

It's from a stretch of border only one-half mile from the police station, an area notorious for attacks on illegal aliens. The task force is there quickly.

They hear the chatter on their walkie-talkies:

"Where ya at? . . . Where ya at?. . . We've got one, I think there's two more. . . . There might be another victim ... He may be hurt ... Look for him."

Neither the border patrol nor the sheriff's helicopters are available at this moment to light up the scene and speed the search.

A call to the substation: "Send some flares up here, we need light."

Within five minutes Lt. Burle Snyder is bouncing over rutted roads and up a hill. He fires flares that illuminate the brushy, steep canyons.

But the search is quickly abandoned when it is determined there was only one victim and three suspects.

The 21-year-old victim had lost 35 cents and a blue denim jacket to three young men, ranging in age from 19 to 23 and armed with an 8-inch dagger. He was luckier than most. He was not beaten, shot, stoned, or slashed.

The suspects are locked in a police a car along Main Sign Cut Road, a dirt trail which runs adjacent to the 12-foot high chain-link fence which is the border at this point.

Clinging to the fence on the Mexican side are a dozen young children, watching.

In that no-man's land which stretches eastward from the Pacific Ocean 18 miles into the mountains, such dramas occur almost nightly.

There are only four miles of the 12-foot fence along here, and the Border Patrol can't keep the holes in it patched fast enough.

And farther east, where the slums of Tijuana gradually slope downhill into the U.S. and to the canyons — Spring Canyon and Deadman's Canyon are the most treacherous — the poor from south of the border carefully tread their way through brush and rocks, over cactus and rattlesnakes, worrying all the while that the Border Patrol will capture them and end a dream of life in the U.S.

The Border Patrol estimates 40 per cent of all illegal aliens who enter this country come through this 18-mile stretch.

Today these aliens are falling victims to the banditos, gangs of up to 20 young men and boys from both sides of the border.

The illegal entrant usually carries everything he owns with him, but he's not likely to report the crime to police.

"He's hiding from everyone in the whole world in the first place," as Snyder explains.

As a result, this is an area where 125 robberies, four rapes and three murders were reported in the first nine months of this year. And police estimate only 10 to 25 per cent of such crimes were reported.

Usually a victim will report a crime only when he needs medical help, or when he is apprehended by the Border Patrol or customs agents.

By the time the crimes are reported to San Diego's San Ysidro police station — a quarter-mile from the border — the police have what Snyder calls "a cold crime." So much time has passed by then there's virtually no hope of finding the criminals.

That's why the San Diego police are conducting a 60-day experiment with the special task force of Spanish-speaking police handpicked from the patrol ranks. Their's is the task of proving that concentrated law enforcement will wipe out border banditry. Applications are pending for federal funding for a permanent program.

The men of the task force disguise themselves as illegals, mingle with the aliens working their way across the border, and arrest those who attack them.

Or, they down used Army camouflage clothing and lie in wait along the trails most often used by the aliens, ready to swoop down on the banditos.

So far the decoys have apprehended more than two dozen young men, mostly from Tijuana.

Sgt. Jesus Manuel Lopez, 29, leader of the force, tells what it's like out there:

"We are scared 60 per cent of the time and mad a lot of the other 40 per cent."

Loaded down with a shotgun, handgun, handcuffs, flashlight, walkie-talkie and a canteen, the cops crawl around in the darkness, on the lookout for rattlesnakes and a low-growing cactus which has already sent some to the doctor.

"Rocks are the weapon the border bandits use most," Lopez said. The rocks are everywhere. They can do a great deal of damage and cannot be identified as evidence as readily as guns or knives.

In the border area at twilight the lights of Tijuana blaze into the sky. Children yell at play in the rutted roads of Colonia Liberdad, a residential area adjacent to the border. Dogs bark.

Meanwhile, on the rock-strewn, barren hills which slope downward across the border into California, scores of people sit in groups. They await darkness as though waiting for a fireworks show.

And waiting across the canyon on the rugged California hills are the four-wheel drive vehicles of the Border Patrol and the San Diego Police Department.

Just as soon as total darkness falls the aliens will swarm across the border. They'll pick their way through rugged brush canyons, often lead by paid guides. They will climb up the steep sides on the U.S. side, and hope they can make it to a rendezvous point before they are intercepted.

In the calm of daylight, Lt. Snyder surveys the area.

"Look at this," he says, kicking at a wallet. He points here and there at pieces of clothing, parts of shoes, pieces of paper, all sorts of evidence apparently discarded by robbers.

Christmas Holiday For UN Diplomats

By R. M. SORGE

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Whether they admit it or not, Christmas is a holiday for just about all United Nations diplomats. Most of them, Christians and non-Christians, admit it.

About December 25, the U.N. will close its doors for two days after three months of gruelling debates, verbal confrontations and pressurized diplomatic dickering on world affairs in the General Assembly.

Usually the Assembly adjourns its regular session between Dec. 15-20, and diplomats scatter to relax, no matter how and where. This year the official closing date is Dec. 21. Already half way in the session, diplomats were worn out, because they had to attend more Security Council sessions than ever before during the summer. These sessions were followed by the complicated Conference on the Law of the Sea from Aug. 2 right up to the time when the assembly convened on Sept. 21.

"We have had hardly a day off this year, and any holiday is welcome," says the delegate from a Moslem country. "On Christmas most of us depart for resort areas."

How do other non-Christian diplomats celebrate or ignore Christmas? A few U. N. missions keep their offices open for business as usual on Dec. 25, for state reasons or other, among them the Russians, the Chinese and the Israelis. They celebrate New Year's a bigger way.

"We go to Christmas parties if invited," said an Israeli diplomat. Some Jews celebrate Sylvester Day, Dec. 31, and New Year's Day. For Jews it is the beginning of the civil year, opposite the religious year." He said the Jewish school his children attend is open on Christmas Day, but he has some trouble getting them there because school buses are not running. "We are forming car pools."

Similiarly, the Russian school in Riverdale is open, and Soviet chidren have to attend. They will be compensated with a two-week vacation beginning on New Year's Day. That time they will spend at the Soviet Oyster Bay estate near Glen Cove, Long Island, skating, skiing or whatever the weather permits. Soviet diplomats spend New Year's Eve together listening to messages from Radio Moscow.

"We do not celebrate Christmas and do our normal work," said a diplomat from the People's Republic of China. "But we have a three-day New Year's celebration in January. Then our offices are closed." Chinese children visiting the American School to learn English spend their Christmas vacations in their apartments at the mission.

People exchange greeting cards with these and other non-Christian diplomats, but avoid religious themes. "Season's Greetings" is welcome in any home. A Russian friend last year popped into our office with a gift-wrapped bottle of vodka. "It's not our holiday, but yours," he said cheerfully.

"We don't celebrate the religious side of Christmas, but we enjoy the social side," says a Hindu Indian. "We like to join Christmas parties. Our children are happy about getting Christmas vacations like their American schoolmates."

THE GRAY WOOD . . . of house timber and the darker wood of a living tree create a harmony that is pleasing to the senses. Here too, a tree seems to direct a growing limb protectively toward the silent house.

ONE WONDERS . . . if the same hands that planted these trees were those that helped fashion the house standing behind this sky-reaching line of trees.

Harmony In Wood

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

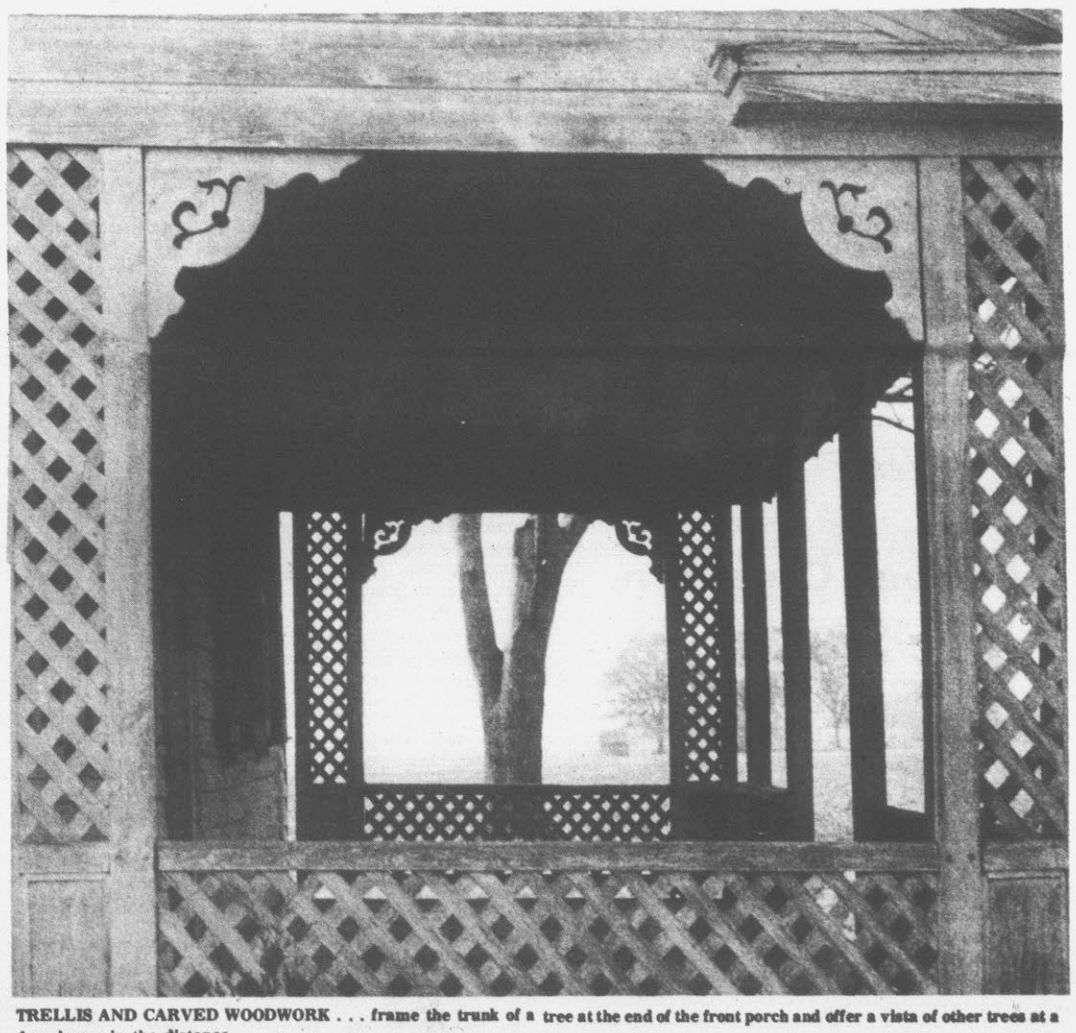
Abandoned wooden homes are a common sight along the roads of eastern North Carolina. For the most part, these houses are forlorn looking frame boxes in final stages of deterioration, and often are situated in treeless, shrubless patches of earth.

Now and then, however, a particular unoccupied house takes on an aura of appealing dignity in its desertion, almost as if it was proclaiming that it will stand tall and proud until time and nature take their final toll; or if fortune is kind, that it patiently awaits rescue from final ruination through restoration.

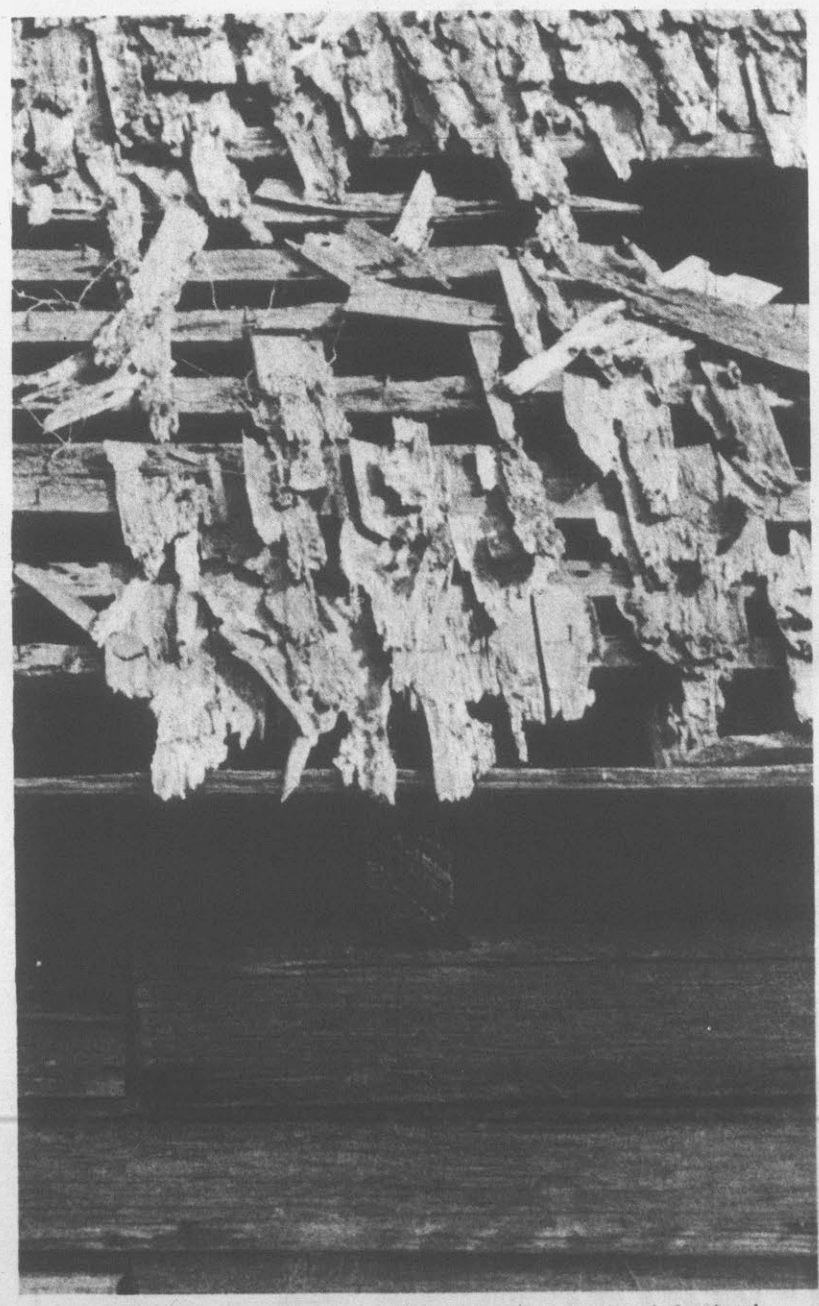
Such a house is the large, but basically unimposing structure shown on this page, a house located in a spacious tree-filled yard in the Lake Landing Community of Hyde County.

Despite visible signs of first decay — a sagging shutter, a split board or two, this sun and rain weathered house from which paint has long ago disappeared is in harmony with the stand of magnificant old trees that enclose and stand sentinel around it.

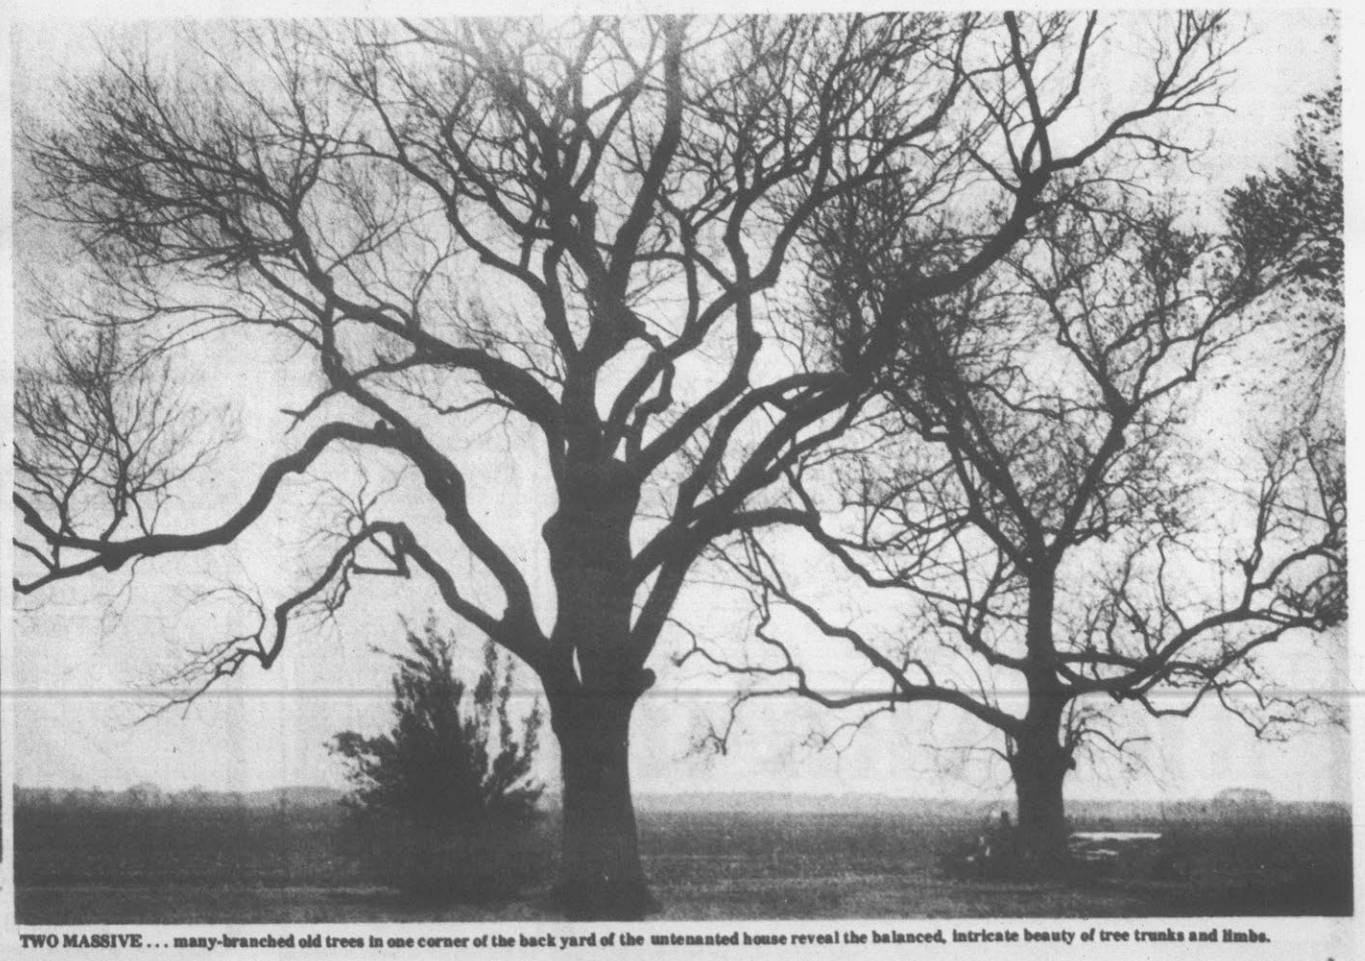
And when winter comes and makes leafless the sturdy, many branched old trees, the harmony between the living wood of the trees and the gray planks of the house's timber is strikingly heightened.



TRELLIS AND CARVED WOODWORK . . . frame the trunk of a tree at the end of the front porch and offer a vista of other trees at a farmhouse in the distance.



A SMALL OUTBUILDING. . . .behind the house is slowly losing its battle of survival against time and nature, as the building's wooden shingles disintegrate and the fragments fall to the ground for a final round of decay.



TWO MASSIVE . . . many-branched old trees in one corner of the back yard of the untenanted house reveal the balanced, intricate beauty of tree trunks and limbs.

Richard II Opens Dec. 8

The East Carolina Playhouse will present William Shakespeare's classic, The Tragedy of King Richard II, December 8 at 8:15 in the Studio Theatre on the East Carolina University campus for eight performances from Dec. 8-11 and 13-16.

Richard II is the story of a weak king who falls victim to beguiling courtiers, his own bad decisions, and poor temperament. Shakespeare once said Richard is a leader who is "imperious and oppressive" at the play's beginning, but learns from his loss of the crown to be "wise, patient, and pious."

In the role of Richard II is Martin Thompson who reeently appeared as Mr. Lutz in The Student Prince.

Suzanne Howell debuts in a lead role at the Playhouse as Queen Isabella, the domineering and fiesty mother of Richard.

Other familiar faces to recent Playhouse audiences are Mick Godwin as the Duke of York, Rodney Freeze as Bolingbroke, Rosaline Jacobi as the Duchess of York, and Bill Vann as Fitzwater.

Richard II is directed by the Playhouse's Summer Theatre director/producer, Edgar Loessin.

Tickets are $2.50 general admission. The McGinnis Auditorium box office is open 10-4 Monday through Friday. For reservations call 757-6390.

At 7:30 p.m. on Monday, December 6, the Greenville Community Chorus will present its annual concert of seasonal music at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Approximately 60 members of the chorus will be singing in this concert, for which David Foster is organist.

The featured work for this year's concert will be Dietrich Buxtehude's "Rejoice, Beloved Christians." Soloists are Patricia Hiss, soprano; Ann Langdale, mezzo-soprano; and Norwin Pierce, bass.

Other selections will include contemporary arrangements of traditional carols by Robert Shaw and Alfred Burt, and contemporary arrangements of early Polish and French carols.

The audience will be asked to join in singing a number of well-known favorite hymns.

The composer Buxtehude (1637-1787) gained fame for his compositions which he played at St. Mary"s Church in Lubeck. Hearing about his work, the young Bach walked the 200 miles from Arnstadt to Lubeck, and remained for four months. Buxtehude's music became the model for Bach's Chorale Cantatas.

North Carolina Unveils Statue Of Sir Walter

SCULPTOR AND MODEL . . . Sculptor Bruno Lucchesi holds the model of the 11 foot bronze statue of Sir Walter Raleigh which was installed Friday at the newly-completed Bicentennial Plaza in Raleigh. (Photo by Walton Haywood).

Sir Walter Raleigh finally made his first trip to the capital city of the state where nearly four centuries ago his efforts established the first English colony in the New World.

He came last week in the form of a bronze statue.

Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr. unveiled the statue at 10 a.m. Friday, Dec. 3, in ceremonies held at the newly-completed Bicentennial Plaza across from the Legislative Building. The statue's sculptor is Bruno Lucchesi of New York.

In 1901 school children from all over North Carolina were asked to contribute pennies to erect a statue to Raleigh. The idea caught on, and the youngsters eagerly deposited their pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters in order to, in the words of Durham banker Gen. Julian S. Carr, "acknowledge our debt to genius and enterprise after three long centuries — so will we honor virtue, elevate our state in the regard of mankind and inspire our children with the lessons that build character."

Under the auspices of the group called the Sir Walter Raleigh Commission, the money grew, but was never put to use. Part of the money was lost in bank failures during the depression years, but some $10,226 remained with the state treasurer.

From time to time, efforts were made to revive the Sir Walter Raleigh Commission but it was not until 1972 that it was reactivated. Then, in late 1975, under the guidance of Ruth A. Adams, chairman of the commission, a statue was finally authorized.

Lucchesi fashioned a three and one-half foot tall model in New York; then took the model to Pietrasanto, Italy, near his birthplace, to have an enlargement made and cast in bonded bronze.

The 11-foot-statue arrived in Raleigh last week by truck from Baltimore where it had arrived by ship from Italy.

Lucchesi inspected his work and discovered only a little "dusting" was necessary to remove action of the salt air on the statue's bronze coating. A concrete pedestal is being erected for the statue.

Jackie Peele Senior Show

One senior art show is scheduled to be on view this coming week. Jackie Peele will be exhibiting in the Kate Lewis Gallery for the period Monday, Dec. 6 thru Friday, Dec. 17.

The public is invited to view Peele's show at the gallery, located in Whichard Building at Wright Circle during hours the building is open.

—A Review—

Aycock Brown's Outer Banks

Aycock Brown's Outer Banks. Edited By David Stick. Norfolk, Va. Donning Company, Publishers, Inc. 208 pp (large format), illustrated. $14.95.

Just about all the world knows about North Carolina's endlessly fascinating Outer Banks. Along with Cape Cod, the French Riveria, and Japan's Inland Sea, it is one of the most visited, most written about and possibly one of the most day-dreamed about stretches of sea and sand anywhere on earth.

What fewer people are aware of is the significant role that Aycock Brown's constant flow of photographs has played in publicizing the subtle lure of the curving ribbons of sand islands, which along with historic Roanoke Island comprise the Outer Banks entity.

For a little more than a quarter of a century, Aycock Brown has been doing "his thing" and doing it with a dedication, an intensity even, that comes only when a person truly loves what he's doing.

And that is what this handsome book is about—Brown's photographs interspersed with vivid vignettes about Brown from 19 friends and colleagues, young and old. Contributors range from the very young—Dare County Tourist Bureau manager John Blizzard to retired professionals such as photographer Joseph Roberts of the National Geographic and Gilbert Love, a former travel columnist for the Pittsburgh Press. In between are writers, editors and photographers representing newspapers, TV and magazines.

In their own way, these 19 men come to one common conclusion—Aycock Brown is an irresistible original, a man likely to be remembered as much for the gift of himself as for his photographs. Theirs are not sentimental, coddling words of stereotyped praise for an old buddy. Their comments are laced with stringent honesty rare in a book such as this.

"... An editor would look at one (photograph) with Brown's name on it and tell the desk man to run it. 'It's not that good,' he'd say, 'but Aycock's going to raise hell if I don't print it or else fill my mailbox with shipments of those Dare County Figs. I don't know which is worse.'" (James Maddrey, columnist, Virginian-Pilot, Norfolk).

"... He has a very rare quality which perhaps only another photographer would recognize . . . an inherent instinct about photography . . ." (Joseph Roberts, retired National Georgraphic photographer).

Referring to Brown's seemingly inexhaustible capacity for work, John Blizzard notes: ". . . Some have called him workaholic. Some have called him fool. Modestly, Aycock probably would choose the latter and go on. . . as he always seems to find the time to do . . . (the job)."

This trio of brief excerpts give but a hint of the many facets of the colorful character of Brown as reflected by colleagues who perhaps best know and understand him.

It's easy to dwell on the pleasures of the text at the expense of the heart of this volume—Aycock Brown's photographs.

On the presentation of photographs in Aycock Brown's Outer Banks, I find myself torn between two opinions. One is disapproval of the inclusion of over 300 photographs, which necessarily sacrifices the effectiveness of many excellent photographs reproduced in much too small a format. The second is hesitant approval of giving readers the greatest possible visual sampling of Brown's comprehensive scope of photographic coverage of the Outer Banks.

As it stands, Aycock Brown's Outer Banks appeal and value must rest primarily on its comprehensive documentation of the Outer Banks in the past quarter century; a time incidentally that has seen the area emerge from relative isolation into a tourist Mecca. There's photographs of fishermen and pin-up girls, fishing boats and "The Lost Colony," Coast Guardsmen and flowers, birds and bridges, shanties and tourists, gnarled trees and dramatic sea rescues, and always the ocean in its moods of tranquility contrasted against the awesome aftermath wrought by hurricane hurled water.

What I'd like to see now is a sequel (or better yet two) to this chiefly introductory volume; one to present more selectively the best of Brown's photographs; and one to probe more deeply the life and achievements of this remarkable Tar Heel who found his place and purpose in life far eastward of his mountain birthplace.

All too often, deserved praise for a job well done comes too late. It's gratifying that Aycock Brown's Outer Banks has appeared while the still energetic, youthful Brown (in his early 70's) is around to know that as a person and for his work to promote the Outer Banks, he is appreciated.

Jerry Raynor

Note: The first printing of Aycock Brown's Outer Banks has been sold out, but a second printing is due to appear Dec. 15.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By MEREDITH FOLTZ

Sheppard Library's new fiction for young adults includes three novels in which the central characters are girls growing during World War II. Christine Nostlinger's FLY AWAY HOME depicts the life of eight-year-old Christel Goth after Hitler's army has abandoned Christel's home, Vienna, to the Russians. Christel and her family, more fortunate than many Viennese, are able to stay in a suburban villa left in their care by a fleeing Nazi. A friendly Russian major and his soldiers soon arrive and move into the villa with Christel's family. Despite the restrictive presence of the Russian forces, Christel never shies away from the promise of an adventure Those adventures range from harmless to dangerous, but Christel reports them honestly, without excusing her occasional foolishness. Although Christel gains some adult insights from her experiences, her charm lies in the determination with which she pursues childhood pleasures in the midst of war.

THE OTHER WAY ROUND by Judith Kerr is the story of Anna, a German refugee living with her family in London. Despite their staunch anti-Nazism, the family repeatedly encounters obstacles to full participation in English society. Nevertheless, Anna finds a secretarial job and, with her earnings, is able to afford art lessons. German bombing raids disturb Anna's nights, but romantic daydreams about her art teacher fill her waking hours. The experience of this first love, the change in her relationship with her parents, and the discovery of her artistic abilities are the events which distinguish Anna's life during the war.

The third World War II novel, AXE-TIME, SWORD-TIME by Barbara Corcoran, is set in the United States. Although Elinor Golden has a learning disability, she has managed to graduate from high school. Her mother insists that an additional year of high school will insure Elinor's acceptance by a college, but Elinor and her father realize that traditional schooling will do her little good. She defies her mother by volunteering to be a "plane spotter" and then by leaving school and getting a job. Aside from providing a specific historical backdrop for Elinor's personal development, the war does not play as important a role in AXE-TIME, SWORD-TIME as it does in the other two novels. Nevertheless, each novel can be an interesting introduction to the events and people of the second World War.

A Valuable Art Aid

Ocular, The directory of Information and Opportunities for the Visual Arts, is a new quarterly publication first published in the spring of 1976, now three numbers old.

Concise, alphabetically and categorically structured, this publication provides public schools, art museums, and other institutions a continuing timely source of valuable information.

Categories covered are: Exhibits; Symposiums, Lectures, Films; Art and Legislation; Grants and Fellowships; Employment Opportunities; Competitions; Workshops; and Traveling Exhibits.

With the increasing availablity of grants, and scholarships, the proliferation of regional, national and international competitions; and the broad range of traveling exhibits available to public exhibitors, it is literally impossible for planners and organizers to keep abreast of developments by relying on scattered information.

Subscription is $12 for one year, from: Ocular, 1549 Platte St., Denver, Colorado, 80202. Two and three year rates at reduced prices are also available.

Gordleys In New Show

During the month of December, ILLUMINA, the Student Art Exhibition Committee, is presenting a show of art work by ECU faculty husband-wife painters Tran and Marilyn Gordley.

The show is being held in the Mendenhall Gallery and can be seen during center hours from 8:30 a.m. to 11 p.m.

"Something For Everyone"

Said Passed On By Repairman

NEW YORK (UPI) — There are a number of stories current about how Franz Gruber, an Austrian organist, came to write "Silent Night" on Christmas Eve of 1818.

Peter Duchin, author of a newly published book of carols, "A Musical Christmas with Peter Duchin," prefers this version:

A priest, Joseph Mohr, asked Gruber to compose music to a Christmas poem Mohr had written. The church organ was broken, so Gruber scored the composition for choir and guitar. A repairman called to fix the organ heard the work, liked it and passed it on to other churches. It gradually spread throughout Austria and the world.

LEADS NATION

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — Minnesota leads the nation in turkey production, followed by California and North Carolina, according to Kansas State University.

01 PUBLIC NOTICES

NOTICE

The North Carolina Clean Water Bond Act of 1971, as amended, requires that public notice be given of receipt of each eligible application for a State grant from funds allotted for use in the various counties of the State to aid in financing the cost of construction of water supply system projects.

The Division of Health Services has received an application from the Town of Grimesland in Pitt County for a State grant under the North Carolina Clean Water Bond Act of 1971. The application seeks a grant of $15,000.00 from funds allocated for use in Pitt County. This grant would be applied as a portion of the construction cost of a water supply system project. The project consists of construction of a second well, valves, tie in lines and necessary appurtenances to assure the Town of a continuous supply of potable water.

All This Plus Our Exclusive 100,000 Miles Or 3 Years New Car Warranty Only At Tarheel Toyota

USED CAR WARRANTY — 12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance or air cooled engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willing to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. Asterisk denotes warranted car.

'Saturday Night At The Movies' Presents An All-Disney Program

PARTNERS IN PARADISE . . . Floyd, the chimp, develops a taste for bay rum, while Crusoe (Dick Van Dyke) tries for a clean shave in this scene from Walt Disney's "Lt. Robin Crusoe, U.S.N." This hilarious island adventure makes its television premiere when NBC prerents an "All-Disney Saturday Night at the Movies," on Dec. 11 at 8 p.m. on Channels 6-7. Preceding "Crusoe" will be "Nature's Half Acre," the Academy Award winning featurette from Disney's "True'Life Adventure" series.

To steal a scene from a comedy genius like Dick Van Dyke is nearly impossible, but leave it to a chimpanzee named Dinky to make a monkey out of his fellow performer.

Van Dyke and Dinky join Nancy Kwan in Walt Disney's rollicking adventure - comedy, "Lt. Robin Crusoe, U.S.N." This hilarious updated version of the Crusoe tale comes to TV for the first time on Saturday night, Dec. 11, at 8 p.m., on Channel 6-7-28, when NBC Presents an "All - Disney Saturday Night at the Movies." Also on the program is "Nature's Half Acre," the Academy Award winner from Disney's "True - Life Adventure" series.

When Dinky and Van Dyke discover each other on a deserted South Pacific island, it doesn't take long to see which of the species is the brains of the outfit.

After the marooned twosome build a quaint bamboo bungalow, they get down to the real business at hand - poker. Dinky proves to be a veritable card - shark by constantly outplaying the unfortunate Van Dyke. And to make matters worse, the Dinker gets Van Dyke drunk and eventually wins the entire game.

To further prove that monkey is master over man, Dinky also bests Van Dyke on their pitch and putt golf course. A natural swinger from limb to limb, Dinky shows he is quite a swinger on the links, too.

The chimp's superiority isn't just limited to the above contests. Dinky foils Van Dyke at the latter's own game. The taller of the two orders that no one is to enter the bamboo hut and disturb a sleeping Nancy Kwan. Dinky obeys in the best of Navy tradition by keeping the man who gave the orders at bay with a samurai sword. Thus, Van Dyke is forced to spend a very wet night in the middle of a tropical rainstorm.

And Van Dyke is dealt yet another insult when man and beast are finally reunited with civilization. Van Dyke is all but forgotten when Dinky, playing a long-lost astro-chimp, becomes an instant celebrity.

All in all, Dinky and Van Dyke have more fun than a barrel of monkeys and their efforts make "Lt. Robin Crusoe, U.S.N." a barrel of laughs.

'Disneyland Christmas' Presented Wednesday

Art Carney stars as a delightful old grouch who finds the Yuletide spirit in "Christmas in Disneyland," a one-hour special presentation airing Wednesday, Dec. 8, 8 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV, with special guest stars Sandy Duncan and singer/actor Glen Campbell.

As Gramps, a crusty old character, Art Carney visits the famed theme park, Disneyland, in Anaheim, Calif., with his two grandchildren, Terri and Brad, played by Terri Lynn Wood and Brad Savage (Savage co-stars in "The Tony Randell Show"). At Disneyland, Gramps vies for the dubious distinction of the "Biggest Disbeliever of Them All." That is, until a charming sequence of events convinces him that he is indeed a believer in the holiday spirit.

With Disneyland transformed into a Christmas paradise, Sandy Duncan acts as a guide through the park and to such characters as Dr. Wunderbar, who is also played by Carney.

Gramps also meets the legendary Disney characters, Mickey and Minnie Mouse, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs and a host of others who help to change his mind about the holiday.

Glen Campbell plays a variety of roles, including Santa Claus and his own grandfather. Among the spectacular special effects used in the production is one in which a candlelight choir of more than 500 persons performs on Disneyland's Main Street, USA.

DISNEY FAVORITES—Sandy Duncan joins Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck when she guest stars in "Christmas in Disneyland," starring Art Carney, Wednesday, Dec. 8 (8-9 p.m.) on ABC Channels 3W-5-12. Glen Campbell also guest stars.

Rodgers' Special Airs On CBS Thursday Night

Theatrical history is full of stories about artists who started out to create thehit of the century only to come up with a pretentious flop.

There are two show business giants, however, who assembled a show with all the elements of a dud. And turned it into one of the hits of this or any century.

The giants were Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II; the show was "Oklahoma!"

The basic rules of how not to present a musical production are outlined by Gene Kelly in his narrative portrayal of Hammerstein in "America Salutes Richard Rodgers: The Sound of His Music," two-hour musical salute to the famed composer, Thursday, Dec. 9, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

First, Kelly lists, open your show with one of your best songs and sing it while the audience is still getting settled.

Also, eliminate the girls' chorus line — if you must have some dancers, put them in long dresses so no one is distracted by shapely legs.

Try to avoid any funny lines, and keep the story commonplace.

Use all your songs in the first act and do nothing but reprises in the second.

Find a lyricist who hasn't had a hit show in 11 years, a choreographer whose claim to fame is one single ballet, and a production company that's ready to go out of business. Then, keep the publicity and advance sales to a bare minimum so the whole show is your personal secret.

Strictly adhered to — and, backed by the genius of a Rogers and a Hammerstein — these rules just might result in a "failure" that could run five years on Broadway, attract SRO audiences for 2,212 performances, tour successfully for over 10 years, survive unnumbered revivals in cities and hamlets around the world, be translated and performed in French, Norwegian, Danish and Italian, and finally emerge as a feature motion picture — "Oklahoma!"

A newcomer just might make some of those aspicious mistakes. It took a couple of old pros to make all of them — while laughing all the way to the bank and whistling the score enroute to immortality.

Inspired Career

When Bob Crane guest-stars on "Gibbsville," it will be the first time he has worked with Gig Young, who inspired him to pursue a career in acting.

Crane plays Douglas Sawyer, a popular but heartless newsman, in the "Trapped" segment of "Gibbsville," Thursday, Dec. 9, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC Ch. 6-7-28.

McCook Is Musical

To date, viewers of "The Young and the Restless" have been given a small sampling of the musical side of John McCook. Now they're about to be treated to a king-size helping of it.

McCook, who is featured as Lance Prentiss in that daytime serial, is one of the stars of "After Hours: From Janice, John, Mary and Michael, With Love," an afternoon special spotlighting the musical talents of four popular daytime serial actors, to be presented Wednesday, Dec. 8, 3 to 4 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Janice Lynde, McCook's colleague on "The Young and the Restless," is the "Janice" of the musical special's title. Its other stars are Mary Stuart and Michael Nouri of "Search for Tomorrow."

Singer - musician - actor McCook has appeared often in stage musicals on the east and west coasts and in Las Vegas. But on "The Young and the Restless," which mixes straight drama with some music, McCook, in his role of wealthy businessman Prentiss, has been able to musicalize only about eight times.

"To me," McCook says, "this forthcoming musical special can be a fine opportunity to break out of my daytime serial role. There are no fans as loyal or intense as daytime drama fans, but I have the feeling that many of them identify their favorite actors on the series according to the characters the actors portray, rather than by the actors' real identities. It wouldn't surprise me to discover that there are an awful lot of television viewers who are deeply interested in Lance Prentiss, but who have only a hazy idea of who John McCook is.

"I think it's safe to assume that a vast portion of those daytime viewers will be watching our musical special and, on that date, I'll be able to emphasize to them the fact that inside fictional Lance Prentiss lurks a non-fictional guy named McCook."

Jazz Show Airs

Anyone who gets around to compiling a bop catechism might be interested in a conversation recently overheard.

"Bli bah, bop sheep, have you any cool?" a sideman trumpet player asked Dizzy Gillespie.

"Bells man! Bah da da, one horn full," he replies.

To the unboptized, this exchange is about as meaningful as the reading of a Singhalese tabloid. But the Dizz meant that he'd been blowing wild during the taping of "The Original Rompin' Stompin' Hot and Heavy, Cool and Groovy All Star Jazz Show," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Festival of Lively Arts for Young People" series, Sunday, Dec. 5, 5 to 6 p.m.

Jazz was never the same after the advent of the bebop innovators, among them Gillespie, the late Charlie Parker, Thelonious Monk, and Kenny Clarke. Their music flowered in the 1940's, became respectable in the 1950's, and, after hitting a very low note in the 1960's, snapped back in the 1970's. Through it all, Gillespie has remained one of the kings of jazz, achieving the greatest influence on trumpet playing since Louis Armstrong.

'Goofy Takes A Holiday' Airs

When one thinks of recent detective programs, more often than not the shows are accompanied by a daring, dangerous high speed car chase. Perhaps the first picture to popularize this automotive action was "Bullitt"; later came the classic pursuit in "The French Connection."

Now comes the hilarious, equally exciting street scenes from "Goofy Takes a Holiday," an all-cartoon comedy to air on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday evening, Dec. 5, at 7 p.m. on NBC Channel 6-7-28.

Just as Steve McQueen in "Bullitt" soared over the streets of San Francisco, and as Gene Hackman raced the subways of New York by car, so too does private eye Johnny Eyeball lend his fearless performance on wheels to the screen. Eyeball is but one of several roles played by that versatile performer, Goofy, as he dreams his way around the world in one funny adventure after another, including a bull fight in Mexico and a tiger hunt in India.

When Eyeball goes on the case to "find Al," he soon finds himself modeling the latest in cement overshoes. This and other events lead to a climactic car chase where three different autos pursue each other through all parts of the city.

Goofy performs feats of daring that neither McQueen or Hackman would think of doing. When the chassis of his car becomes separated from the body, the Goof carries the framework and continues the chase on foot until he can reunite himself with the rest of his auto.

As if this isn't enough, this daring detective becomes a human bridge between two vehicles by locking his hands and feet to the bumpers of each car. This is no easy task, especially when the cops chase the robbers, and vice versa, across his out-stretched body.

The three automobiles speed down the treacherous curves of a steep mountainside, through darkened tunnels and onto city streets. When the trio eventually ends up on a railroad trestle with trains fast approaching from opposite directions, a nifty bit of precarious perching allows the vehicles to escape catastrophe and resume the chase.

Johnny Cash's Christmas Special Airs Monday Night

Johnny Cash's farm lies in a westerly direction from Nashville, through rich, rolling farmland.

You pass through Bon Aqua, over the railroad tracks, and ask directions at the one local gas station.

The farm, 107 acres in all, is dotted with clusters of trees and sectioned off by white rail fences.

The farm house dates from 1831. Every room is equipped with a wood-burning fireplace.

On a recent brisk fall afternoon, fires were roaring in all the downstairs fireplaces as cast and crew gathered between scenes for the "Johnny Cash Christmas Special," to be broadcast Monday, Dec. 6, 9 to 10 p.m., on Channel 9-11.

"We've been on this piece of land for five years," says Johnny Cash. "We used the farm for a getaway place from our tours and work. It's a retreat and a chance to get back to nature and the farm — without really farming."

To someone from the city, the farm appears to be a Currier and Ives print come to life.

"We have a few cattle and we cut hay to feed them. We used to have Black Angus and stuff, but now it's what we call commercial livestock," states gentleman farmer Cash.

The entrance ahll to the lovely rustic farmhouse is adorned with color and black-and-white photographs of members of the Carter-Cash family and other notables, including Rick Nelson and the Rev. Billy Graham, a guest on this special.

"I really haven't done much to this house," says June Carter Cash, although this is belied by the fact that there is inviting warmth in every room and enough bedrooms to accomodate comfortably 30 guests.

"The house originally belonged to a General Weems who shot a couple of Yankees right there in the front yard," continues June, "but that was a long time ago. Now you're likely to be met with a plate of food and a welcome to come on in."

In the kitchen, there are hutches and a large country table and pine paneling. There are calico curtains at the windows and green plants everywhere. There is the noticeable absence of a telephone.

"At Christmas time," claims June, "this is a great place to come, travelingover the Piney River by sleigh — if there's enough snow."

There was no show that afternoon, but viewers can share a bit of the good country living with the Carter-Cash family and friends on this Christmas special.

CASH FARM—On Johnny Cash's farm in Bon Aqua, Tenn., Tony Orlando (1) joins June Carter Cash and Johnny in the "Johnny Cash Christmas Special," a holiday celebration of music and friendship, Monday, Dec. 6 (9-10 p.m.) on CBS Channels 3N-9-11.

Turns To Television

Laurence Olivier has taken on a new challenge at the age of 69 — television production — and welcomes it for "the spiritual uplift that comes with work."

The renowned English actor is now artistic and creative producer for "A Tribute to American Theatre," a long-term NBC-TV series of special two-hour dramas drawn from the works of 30th century American playwrights.

Olivier, who has rarely appeared in productions for United States television, will perform in the plays occasionally, as he does in the premiere presentation of Tennessee Williams's Pulitzer Prize-winning drama, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." Olivier portrays Big Daddy in a cast which includes Natalie Wtod (Maggie the Cat), Robert Wgner (Brick) and Maureen Stapleton (Big Mama). The play will be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" Dec. 6, 9 to 11 p.m., on Ch. 6-7-28.

When asked in England why he was undertaking TV production at this time, Oliver said: "I stood out doggedly and stubbornly against television for too long. Then I realized I belonged to an age of TV and one has to get on with it. I had never seen the classics done really well — especially Shakespeare — and I thought they did not belong to the medium. Now I guess I knew in my heart that it was a wrong assumption."

Televiscon and films will be the major outlets for Olivier's talents from now on, he said. The star, who has been acclaimed as one of the greatest actors in the history of the English-speaking stage, has been recovering from a muscular disease which has troubled him for two years.

Olivier said: "The stage is not in my compass at the moment. It demands a certain type of energy which I do not have." Looking to the future, he said: "Quite frankly, at my age, leading roles are hard work." Then, with a tinkle in his eyes, he added: I shall just have to steal everybody else's thunder! I could cope with that."

Smouldering conflicts, greed, envy, lust, self-delusion and affection among family members on a plantation in Mississippi are brought to the surface in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

Lowry Ties The Knot

"There's almost as much hoopla getting married on TV as there is in real life," laughed Judith Lowry, the doughty, 86-year-old who plays Mother Dexter on "Phyllis."

The spry octogenarian was referring to her impending television wedding to a fellow oldie, 92-year-old Burt Mustin, as the highlight of a two-part "Phyllis" episode to be broadcast Mondays, Dec. 6 and 13, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS Ch. 3N-9-11.

The marriage of Mother Dexter to Mustin s character, Arthur Lanson, will be a formal ceremony conducted by the bride's son, Judge Jonathan Dexter, in the family home.

"I've been fitted for a beautiful wedding dress and the whole works," said Miss Lowry during a rehearsal break. "Why, I never did all this for my own marriage. In fact, all I wanted to do was elope. I got talked out of that, though, because my family wanted to be there to cry over me."

Miss Lowry's real-life marriage to fellow-actor Rudd Lowry was held in the New York apartment of her sister, in 1919. "I didn't want a formal gown," said the actress, "so I bought a nice going-away suit for the occasion." Mr. Lowry died in 1965.

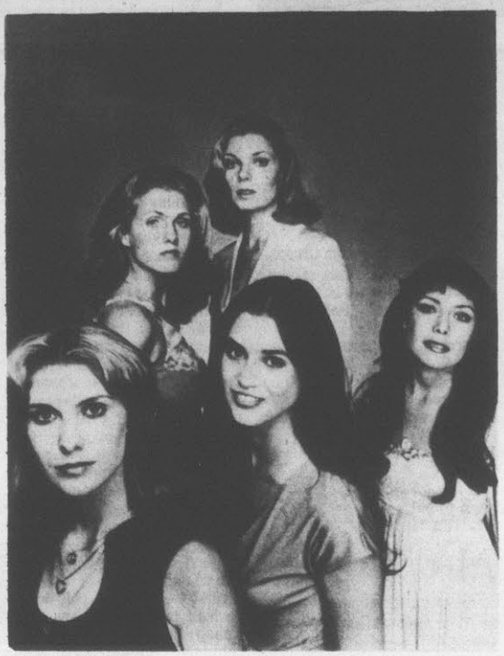
Five Women Featured On Series



SERIES' WOMEN — These are the attractive and strong-willed women in the lives of Rudy Jordache and his surrogate "sons," Wesley Jordache and Billy Abbott, in "Rich Man, Poor man - Book II," which airs on Tuesdays (9-10 p.m.) on Channels 3W-5-12. l to r.)-Kimberly Beck as Diane Porter and Susan Sullivan as Maggie Porter, Diane's mother, with whom Rudy is romatically involved.

There are five attractive and strong-willed women featured in "Rich Man, Poor Man — Book II," who are interwoven throughout the story lines of the series which is seen Tuesdays, 9 to 10 p.m., on ABC Channel 3-5-12. Anyone of them — Colleen Camp, Penny Peyser, Cassie Yates, Kimberly Beck and Susan Sullivan — could well qualify as a sex symbol.

The newest male sex symbol of primetime TV is also in 'Rich Man' — Peter Strauss. Strauss burst upon the TV screen last winter as Rudy Jordache in the 12-hour-novel, and audiences immediately flocked to the tube and to Strauss who, as a U. S. Senator and bedroom partner of Susan Blakely, kept them tuned in.

Actually, 'Rich Man' was not made to continue on TV, but it has. Strauss explains what happened.

"Once Book I was done, everyone smelled success. Some wanted to know 'how do we keep it going?,' while others said, 'leave it alone.' but it was finally decided to continue it, but not necessarily as just another sequel. Only one of us was needed, but both Nick (Nolte) and I had already said 'no.'"

Irvin Shaw, author of the book, agreed to view the first twelve hours (he had never seen it) and loved it. He then sat down and, in three days, wrote 90 pages. Four TV writers in turn took the continuation and, as Strauss says, "came up with something much better than a run-of-the-mill story.

"Julie Prescott Jordache (Miss Blakely) was written out (she died in an accident in the first two hours) because it would have forced us back into a conventional story," Strauss explained. "Rudy was in a state of chaos at the end of the first book— and something had to be done.

Strauss feels that the new show is even better than the old one. "We want to go one level higher with the new show. The first served its purpose and showed that the scope of it could work. The only thing we will continue is to lead the audience on, teasing them each week so they can't wait for the next week."

Strauss says that there is a wealth of material from Book I that was never used. "We may go back to it, but — for the most part — we want to go forward. If we do go back, it will be flashbacks of Tom, Nolte, incidentally, doesn't regret being killed off. Films opened up for him."

Since the father's (Ed Asner) death was ever really determined, will he come back?

"If the ratings sag," Strauss laughed, "he could come back with seaweed all over him, saying, 'Guess where I've been!'

Satisfied With Role

Hope Lange, who once said she did not want to portray women whose main function was to sit at home and pour coffee, got her wish with a role as a U.S. Navy doctor trapped in a submerged submarine, in "Fer-de-Lance," to be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Show" Tuesday, Dec. 7, at 12:30 a.m. on Channel 9-11.

"I took this part because it seemed like great fun," she explained. "Perhaps the most difficult facet of the role was learning the medical terminology."

Blue jeans and a faded blue shirt made up her entire wardrobe throughout the film, in which she co-stars with David Janssen, but the lovely blonde actress, noted as being one of Hollywood's most tastefully dressed stars, was happy with that limited collection of "most comfortable" costumes.

Prior to the start of "Fer-de-Lance," Miss Lange had completed starring roles in two other motion pictures and was ready for a short vacation. The actress, who didn't want to play women who just sit around pouring coffee, admitted that she now was looking forward to time off, where all she had to do is sit around and pour coffee.

McMILLAN'S SPECIAL GUEST

Julie Sommars will guest star in the "Coffee, Tea or Cyanide" episode of NBC-TV's "McMillan."

FOLLOWING DAD'S LEAD

Efrem Zimbalist Jr.'s daughter, Stephanie, has been signed to play the title role in the TV movie, "Yesterday's Child." Slated to star in the film are Shirley Jones and Claude Akins.

'Catch-22' Premieres

PILOT—Alan Arkin forces a smile but there's sheer terror behind those eyes when he stars as Yossarian, an Air Force pilot who can't seem to ever finish his combat duty in "Catch 22," Joseph Heller's best-selling dark comedy of the realities of war making its television premiere on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Dec. 5 (9-11:25 p.m.) on Channels 3W-5-12.

The only way to get out of flying more combat missions is to prove that you're crazy, but if you're sensible enough to want to stop flying combat missions then you are obviously not crazy, and that's the catch in "Catch-22," Joseph Heller's contemporary classic which makes its television premiere on "The ABC Sunday Night Moive," Dec. 5, 9 to 11:25 p.m.

Alan Arkin, Art Garfunkle, Bob Newhart, Anthony Perkins, Martin Sheen, Orson Welles, Paula Prentiss and Jon Voight are among the performers in the all-star cast in the dark comedy of military frustrations during World War II. The film, directed by Mike Nichols from a screenplay by Buck Henry, is based on Heller's best-selling novel.

Tossarian (Arkin) is a young bomber pilot trapped in the surreal, wonderless land of war where a depressed pilot crashes his own plane to punish himself, the quartermaster trades medical supplies for fresh eggs, the Major's office is open to received complaints only when he isn't there and, every time Tossarian completes the required number of bombing missions, the number is raised to require one more. In Joseph Heller's vision of war, the inmates are running the asylum.

Wood Co-Stars In Monday Night Movie

"This was a rare gift which seemed to fall out of the sky," said Natalie Wood, talking about co-starring with husband Robert Wagner, Laurence Olivier and Maureen Stapleton in the new production of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" airing as an "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" colorcast Dec. 6, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7-28.

"It was Olivier's idea to have R.J. (as Natalie calls her husband) and me in the play. And there was no way we were going to turn him down!"

In the Tennessee Williams' play, Natalie plays Margaret (Maggie the Cat), the frustrated wife of alcoholic Brick (Wagner). Olivier is Brick's father, Big Daddy, and Maureen is Big Mama.

Natalie has portrayed a Williams heroine once before, in the film, "The Property is Condemned." She said: "I was Alva in that one. She was the predecessor to Blanche Dubois, who was the Williams heroine in 'A Streetcar Named Desire.' While Alva is tragic, Maggie, in 'Cat,' is not doomed at all. Maggie is tough, very direct and really a very honest person. She's very straightforward . . . and very strong."

The Wagners have had a long friendship with Lord Olivier and Natalie said that he had wanted her to appear in two earlier productions with him. "He asked that I play his daughter in 'The Entertainer' and he also wanted me in 'Term of Trial.' I just couldn't get free to do either one.

"Recently, R.J. and I saw him in Los Angeles after he had completed work on the movie 'Marathon Man.' I knew he was talking to NBC about 'A Tribute to American Theatre' but he never mentioned to either R.J. or me that he wanted us. We didn't know about it until we received a call from NBC."

What was it like working with Olivier? Natalie had a one-word reply: "Fantastic." She said: "I didn't have as many scenes with him as my husband did. I wish I had more. Olivier is a wonderful, wonderful man. I first met him some years ago through Spencer Tracy. I've always been a great admirer of Olivier. But then, who hasn't?"

Natalie said that production went smoothly at the Granada TV studios in Manchester, England. "From an actor's point of view," she said, "it was a dream. Four cameras were used and we did big chunks without breaks. We really were able to capture the mood of a scene."

The play was taped during the height of the summer heat wave which smothered England. "We were lucky," said Natalie. "Our studio was probably the only building in Manchester which was fully air conditioned."

GRIER IN 'SPINOFF'

Former football 'great,' Roosevelt Grier, has just completed filming a spinoff of CBS-TV's "Kojak." Grier stars in the new series, yet to be named.

WAYNE ROGERS JOINS 'GALA'

Wayne Rogers has been set to guest on "Gala! Gala!," the French-American Benefit Circus TV special.

Crime Linked Couple

George Maharis stars as Walter Burr, a man who kills his older brother, a wealthy doctor, when he is refused a loan, and then is held in a love bondage by the housekeeper who knows of the crime, in "Come Die With Me," the "Mystery of the Week" airing Wednesday, Dec. 8, at 12:30 a.m. on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

Eileen Brennan, a featured player in the Oscar-winning film, "The Sting," co-stars as Mary Thatcher, the housekeeper.

After the murder of Frank Burr, Mary insists that Walter stay on with her and establishes an alibi for him that appears to be foolproof. Detective Jenkins, however, suspects the pair, but has no evidence of their involvement in the crime.

Namath Stars As C.C.

Football star Joe Namath teams with Ann-Margret in the hard-hitting story of a motorcycle gang, in "C.C. and Company," to be seen as "The CBS Late Show" Friday, Dec. 10, 11:30 p.m., on Channel 9.

C.C. and his gang rescue Ann, a fashion - magazine writer, when her limousine breaks down on the road. C.C. then has to save the girl from the members of his gang when they try to force their attentions on her. This widens a split in the gang that had been increasing because of C.C.'s grandstanding, which isn't helped when he rides in a tortuous European - style race and wins. Although the gang respects his skill and wants to capitalize on his winnings, when C.C. refuses to comply with the group, the leaders kidnap Ann and threaten to seek revenge on C.C. through her.

Chicago Symphony Makes Debut

Sir Georg Solti will conduct the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in an all Mendelssohn program for the Great Performances "Fine Music Special" Wednesday, Dec. 8, at 9 p.m., on PBS. The program, taped in Chicago's Orchestra Hall, marks the American television debut of both Solti and the orchestra. In many cities this "Fine Music Special" will be broadcast simultaneously on FM stereo.

The hour - long program features excerpts from Mendelssohn's incidental music to A Midsummer Night's Dream, and his Symphony No. 4, in A Major, Op. 90 (the "Italian"). Solti, who has been Musical Director of the Chicago Symphony since 1969, brought the orchestra to international prominence and has eagerly awaited the opportunity to televise his work with them. "I've wanted to do this program for seven years," he emphasized. "It's a kind of historical document, a visual record of my work with this fantastic orchestra. A conductor would have to live 70 years and conduct every night of his life to reach the live audience he can reach in one night on television."

Felix Mendelssohn's compositions are major landmarks of 19th Century German Romanticism, and favorites of Solti, who selected the music for this Great Performances debut. The popular Midsummer Night's Dream spans Mendelssohn's creative lifetime; the Overture was written when he was 17, the remaining incidental music almost two decades later. His world famous Wedding March is included in the performance.

The "Italian" Symphony is Italian primarily in its stylistic use of rhythms and melody. Mendelssohn began the work while visiting in Italy, but finished it in Berlin two years later. Its lively use of dances like the Tarantella and Saltarella contrast with its Germanic form and development.

Sir Georg accepted the post of Musical Director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra while still Music Director of London's Royal Opera House. He remained at Covent Garden until 1971, and the following year was knighted by Queen Elizabeth. He conducted the Chicago Symphony for a series of outstanding concerts in New York's Carnegie Hall, and took the orchestra on two major European tours, in 1971 and 1974.

CONDUCTOR — Sir Georg Solti conducts the Chicago Symphony in an all Mendelssohn program for their American television debut. This "Fine Music Special" will air on "Great Performances," Wednesday, Dec. 8 at 9 p.m. on PBS-TV.

Lemmon Stars In Movie

Jack Lemmon stars in "Save the Tiger," which will be broadcast for the first time on television on "The CBS Wednesday Night at the Movies" Dec. 8, 9 to 11 p.m. Lemmon, who portrays a disillusioned businessman struggling to keep his self-respect alive, won an Academy Award as Best Actor for his performance in the 1973 film.

Lemmon, who also won an Academy Award for his role in "Mister Roberts," has appeared in a long list of motion pictures, including "Some Like It Hot," "The Apartment," "The Days of Wine and Roses," "The Fortune Cookie," "The Odd Couple," "The Out-of-Towners," "The War Between Men and Women" and "Avanti."

The 51-year-old actor was born in Boston and is a graduate of Harvard. He has appeared in several Broadway productions and is equally at home in comedic roles and those that are mildly leacherous.

NOW FOR PEACE — Sam Elliott, right, stars as a World War I battle hero who becomes a career officer in peacetime and Darleen Carr portrays the nurse who tends his wounds and later becomes his wife in Chapter Three of "NBC's Best Seller: Once An Eagle" to be colorcast Thursday, Dec. 9 (9-10 p.m.) on channels 6-7.

Best Sellers Continue

The idea of "Best Sellers," NBC's new Thursday night series (10 to 11 p.m.), is not new. It took seven years to get it on the air.

Charles Engle, who is in charge of the new series, said. "We offered 'Best Sellers' to ABC first, in 1969, and they turned it down.

"However, they did take 'Rick Man, Poor Man' later. Before 'Rich Man,' we tried 'Vanished,' then 'Q.V. VII,' but this new long form for TV didn't really come into being until 'Rich Man.' "

The series opened with "The Captains and the Kings," and the second one, "Once An Eagle," began last week.

Engle said that there is a staff at the studios that has been reading books for well over a year. "Rights tend to vary for how many hours we do," he says, "And rights for each book varies with the agent. I think the rights for 'Captains and Kings' was about $75,000."

Engel emphasizes that the actors seen in "Best Sellers" are not necesarily TV actors. "They are important, he stated, "but not near as important as the writer. The writer is the most important ingredient in anything."

One of the writers for the script of "Once an Eagle," says that in the military story, "a dogface in the field rises to the rank of general and comes into conflict with another general who comes out of West Point and rises through the Pentagon.

"It is the developing of the characters before World War I and through Wrold War II. Aton Myrer, the author, had Gen. (Josph) Stillwell in mind when he wrote this, I think."

HOLLYWOOD — Watch for a spin-off from "Welcome Back, Kotter" based on the private life of Arnold Horshack — Ron Palillo to you.

Janice Lynde of "The Young and the Restless" was stricken with a serious virus earlier this month, which found the rest of the cast going out of their way to avoid the pretty young star for fear they'd catch it. Scheduling forced Janice to work despite her illness.

Larry Linville, the popular Maj. Frank Burns on "MASH," appears headed for an exit from the show after this season unless current negotiations can persuade him to return. His original pact expires at the end of the current season. If he doesn't return don't be surprised to hear about his marriage plans to girlfriend, Vana.

Ken Olfson, who portrays the unemployed actor Terry on Nancy Walker's series, says he's fulfilled a life-long dream — to work on television in a situation comedy. It's been his ambition since he started his career a decade ago.

It's still a bit touch and go but things have pretty well settled down on the set of "Laverne & Shirley" in the aftermath of Cindy Williams walking off the show and demanding that her role not be supportive to Penny Marshall's. The co-producers and creators of the series as well as the entire writing staff were pink slipped as a result. Ironically, the new producer, Monica Johnson, whom Cindy demanded be hired, is one of Penny's closest friends.

Donny Most, who co-stars in "Happy Days," has joined the rank of actors who are singers, as well. Donny, who has studied voice since his childhood in New York, has cut a record. His first single is "All Roads," with "Better to Forget Him" on the flip side.

"General Hospital's,' Craig Huebing is really looking forward to the chilly month of December. No, it's not because he's posted a long list to the North Pole. "My book of poetry, 'Daylight Moon,' will be released in December," he says, "and it's going to make this Christmas very special for me."

"FANTASY ISLAND" IS COMPLETED

Production has been completed in Hollywood on "Fantasy Island," a new motion picture which will air on ABC-TV.

Starring in the drama are Bill Bixby, Sandra Dee, Peter Lawford, Ricardo Montalban, Hugh O'Brien, Eleanor Parker, Victoria Principal, Christina Sinatra and Loretta Swit.

Communist Party Probed

Why they vote Communist, what's behind the emergence of the far left in Italy, and what it means to the rest of the West at the subjects of "Friends, Romans, Communists," a CBS News Special to be presented Friday, Dec. 10, 8 to 9 p.m., on Channel 9-11. Luigi Barzini, author of the best seller "The Italians," is Special Correspondent on the broadcast.

Barzini, a journalist who worked for some years in the U. S. before returning to his native Italy, has observed the Italian political scene from inside and out, as a member of the Italian Parliament as well as a political reporter.

"We look at Italy as the first modern, industrialized nation to freely, democratically elect large number of Communists to office," Brazini says. "Communism is a powerful force in Western Europe today. They like to call it "Eurocommunism" here, meaning they don't take order from Moscow. You can accept that or not.

"I really believe that the current Italian Communists believe they are democratic. But if they get into office, and encounter the recalcitrance of a people who have been taught by masters to disregard and contravene anything the government dŏes, they will be forced to be undemocratic. Once they get into office, they do not meal to leave office."

The broadcast gives many reasons why Italy could be the proving ground of the new politics:

— Inflation: the lira dropped 25 percent in a year, while the cost of living rose 20 percent in the same period.

— Sixty percent of older institutions, like the family and the small towns of the South where so-called "white widows" mourn husbands who moved north to find work and, in turn, are displaced persons who find a sense of community in the Communist Party.

— The abandonment of thousands of farms.

— Disillusionment and impatience with the Christian Democratic Party, the power in government for the past 30 years.

— The ability of the Roman Catholic Church and the Italian military to adapt to any change.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT—Luigi Barzini explores the many conflicts of a nation, Italy, which has an omnipresent past and is paradoxically the proving ground for a new politics, on "Friends, Romans and Communists," a CBS News Special airing on Friday, Dec. 10 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS Channels 3N-9-11.

Chinatown Explored

Last year, 20,000 Chinese immigrants arrived in New York from Taiwan and Hong Kong. Few spoke any English, but all knew one word: Chinatown, the most crowded neighborhood in New York City. Chinatown, the community with its own standards, customs, and politics. "Chinatown" will be broadcast Friday, Dec. 10, at 9 p.m., on PBS.

Tourism is the major industry, but beneath the veeer of paper dragons and firework-filled celebrations are a people struggling to make a living against the language and cultural barriers of the city around them. Poverty is everywhere. The dilapidated housing is the oldest in the city. The tuberculosis and diabetes rate is there times the national average.

"Chinatown," a 60-minute videotape documentary, is a revealing, often startling, look at the Chinese community in New York City. The Downtown Community Television Center (DCTV), a group of young video documentarians livin in Chinatown, produced the special.

Jon Alpert, co-director of DCTV, and narrator of "Chinatown," describes the program as "the story of our neighbors. More than a year in the making, 'Chinatown' could only have been produced by a group like DCTV," executive producer David Loxton said. The latest lightweight, portable video equipment combined with a thorough knowledge of the community, allowed the video documentarians access to areas and aspects of Chinatown rarely seen on television.

"Chinatown" examines many aspects of life in this unique community: The Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Associaton, the unofficial government of Chinatown; the Lee Family Association, which loans money at what Alpert describes as "exoirbitant prices"; Chinese schools and newspapers; changing Chinatown attitudes toward Communist China; even the New Jersey Chinese truck farmers who supply the exotic vegetables for Chinatown's stores and restaurants.

Laughs Flow Freely

Barbra Streisand and Ryan O'Neal star in an outrageous salute to the days when comedy was king and the laughs flowed freely in "What's Up, Doc?," to be rebroadcast as "The ABC Friday Night Movie" Dec. 10, 9 to 11 p.m., on Channel 3W-5-12.

Peter Bogdanovich directed the zany romp, and Chicago Sun-Times critic Roger Ebert said, "Bogdanovich proves himself a master of screwball comedy — a genre which, until just now, everybody thought was dead."

Rudolph Airs Friday

With the happiness of the world at stake, the character of Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer takes on heroic proportions in "Rudolph's Shiny New Year," an all-new animated-animagic Christmas special, featuring the voices of Red Skelton, Frank Gorshin and Morey Amsterdam. The special program airs Friday, Dec. 10, 8 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV.

In this new adventure, Happy, the Baby New Year, is missing, and that has Father Time (Red Skelton) worried. So, with Santa Claus's permission, Rudolph (Billie Richards) is assigned to undertake the crucial mission of finding him.

TIME FOR ANOTHER ONE

Patty Weaver (Trish Clayton on "Days of Our Lives,") has recorded another album. The first one, "As Time Goes By," was such a smashing success that producer-arranger Mundell Lowe thought it was time for a second.

Patti also recorded a song with her best friend, Mary Kay Place, Loretta Haggars on "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." The two can be heard on Mary's album, called "Loretta." Talented Mary Kay, in addition to the series and cutting another album, is writing a screenplay.

MISTER JAW—Ver-r-y Interesting - is Arte Johnson's career - Starting out in his first role as a 65-year-old Frenchman, Arte is now the voice of Misterjaw, the shark on "The Pink Panther Laugh & ½ Hour & ½ Show," Saturdays (8:30-10 a.m.) on NBC-TV.

Misterjaw Is Familiar Voice

Misterjaw, the shark on NBC-TV's children's show "The Pink Panther Laugh & ½ Hour & ½ Show" (Saturdays, 8:30 to 10 a.m.), is a new character to viewers of the series. However, his voice is familiar: comedy actor Arte Johnson.

Johnson, who once called himself a "carefree screwball," says his first name came through a printer's error. The typesetter failed to separate the end of his first name with his middle initial, "E."

He was a journalism major in college (University of Illinois) and switched his talents to showbusiness after a stint in public relations in New York City.

His singing and musical career started, you might say, in a New York basement apartment, where he was encouraged by his room-mates to try out at the old Ziegfeld Theatre. After showing off singing and dancing talents, Johnson was given a role in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" — as a 65-year-old Frenchman.

Back and forth from Hollywood, Johnson got involved in a wide assortment of odd jobs, many of them unrelated to show business, and was then signed to do "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In." He quickly became one of the funniest regulars on 'Laugh-In.'

"I am a cartoon fan from childhood days," said Johnson. "That was before TV and I loved Bugs Bunny and Elmer Fudd. The 'Misterjaw' cartoons are very funny, even to me now. But they're more sophisticated than the cartoons I used to watch. Children today are more sophisticated."

Johnson and his wife, Gisela, have no children. "But there are two kids in our family — Gisela and me," he said. German-born Gisela was raised in a cartoonless atmosphere and could never understand Arte's appreciation of them. "Then," Arte said, "when she found out that I had done the voice for one, she decided to watch and now she loves cartoons. We get up on Saturday morning and watch the whole lineup."

"I wish we had had such good cartoons around when I was young. Kids today are really lucky in a way," he continued, and added, "Then again, we used our imaginations more with radio than they have a chance to do with television. We had to imagine what a dinosaur looked like if we'd never seen one in a book. Kids today know right away. They learn so much by osmosis. They don't even realize they're learning."

There's no doubt about it — the man who made "Verry interesting" a household one-liner, is happy to be totally immersed in cartoons these days.

Shows Censored

Both "The Secrets of Isis" and "Shazam!" air Saturday mornings on CBS-TV, 10:30-11:30 a.m., for a younger audience than "Wonder Woman or "The Bionic Woman." Because of this, the shows are subject to strick censorship, and violence has been eliminated altogether. The stories of "The Secrets of Isis" usually focus on a youth with very real problems, such as cheating in school or jealousy of a rival.

The reincarnation of an Egyptian goddess, Isis has appeared with Captain Marvel on both "Shazam!" and on her own program. In reality, Isis is a high school teacher named Andrea Thomas (played by JoAnna Cameron), and the attractive Andrea becomes the dynamic Isis by touching an ancient Egyptian amulet in saying, "Oh, mighty Isis!" Andrea then becomes Isis, her clothes, changing to those of the Egyptian goddess.

She can control the elements, stop or reverse time, and she can ride the 'zephyr winds' to simulate flight.

The title role of "Shazam" is that of a four thousand year old man with a long white beard. That's the ancient wizard, Shazam, who gave Billy Batson the power to become the world's mightiest Mortal, Captain Marvel, by speaking the sorceror's name.

One might assume that the crafty old magician had trimmed his beard down to a neat mustache, climbed into a sports coat, and appeared on the scene as Mr. Mentor, young Billy's new companion in the TV series. Actually, Mr. Mentor is supposed to be the person who has the power to become Captain Marvel, and who is now helping train his young replacement, Billy.

Mr. Mentor is played by Les Tremayne. On radio, Tremayne piloted planes with Captain Midnight, was an F.B.I. agent, and solved cases as both the Thin Man and the Falcon. He also counciled the All-American Boy, Jack Armstrong, in the role of Coach Hardy.

Michael Gray is young Billy Batson, whom Mr. Mentor councils, and who can tune in on the Elders — Solomon, Hercules, Atlas, Mercury, Achilles and Zeus, whose famous powers have been combined in the red-suited figure of Captain Marvel. When Billy says the magic word, "Shazam!," he is transformed into the super-human captain.

Jackson's Goal Is The Super Bowl

Harold Jackson wants to get rid of the 'ifs' in the Los Angeles Rams football season.

"For the last two years at the end of the season, we would have to say: 'Well, we would have had a pretty good year . . .,'" the diminutive Ram All - Pro receiver says, "If only this had happened . . . . if only we hadn't done that.

"When we get rid of the 'ifs,' we'll be in the Super Bowl. That's my personal goal — my only personal goal."

The Detroit Lions host the Los Angeles Rams Saturday, Dec. 11, at 9 p.m., on ABC-TV.

A hard worker himself, Jackson startles some observers with the quality of his blocking. It is not often that a receiver like Jackson will take on much bigger opponents with such intensity.

"Basically, we're a running club," Jackson says frankly, "and I don't get as much chance to catch passes as I would with a passing team. Our timing is so precise, though, that I don't have to knock a man down to keep him out of the play — all I have to do is fight him, hold him up."

As a receiver, however, Jackson is the 10th leading active one in the NFC. Last year he led the team in receiving for the third straight season, catching 43 for 786 yards and seven TDs. In the last three years, Harold has been the deep receiving threat in the Rams' passing attack. He counts the high point of his nine - year career as the Sunday in 1973 when he caught four touchdown passes in the Rams' 37-31 win over the Dallas Cowboys.

RAMS — Harold Jackson, wide receiver for the Los Angeles Rams, has performed brilliantly for the Rams just as he did in Philadelphia when he was all-pro in 1969 and 1972 and led the NFL in receiving yards both seasons. The Rams and the Detroit Lions will clash on Saturday, Dec. 11 at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Jackson was an All - Southwest Athletic Conference end while setting a Jackson State pass - catching record his senior year. He also ran a 9.5-100 on the track team.

Born in Hattiesburg, Miss., Harold lives there during part of the off - season where he operates a clothing store. When he's away, his sisters run the women's department and his brother has the men's department.

Perhaps at the end of this season there will be no more 'ifs' for Harold Jackson. Maybe he and his Ram teammates will emerge as the new Super Bowl Champions, and Harold will have finally attained his personal goal.

Tatum Hits Like A Train

Jack Tatum is one of the hardest - hitting defensive backs in pro football. Tatum joined the Raiders in 1976 as their Number One draft pick. Since then his career can best be described with one word — fantastic. (Tatum and his team mates challenge the Cincinnti Bengals Monday, Dec. 6, at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV's "NFL Monday Night Football.")

Last season was Tatum's third straight year of winning Pro Bowl honors, and he also intercepted four passes which brought his five-year total to 17. He continued to wipe people out with his vicious tackles that have become his trademark.

The only aspect of his career that bothers Jack Tatum was the 1972 playoffs with Pittsburgh. All of the Raiders' fans remember that controversial pass play which enabled Franco Harris to score the winning touchdown, and Tatum still remembers the play vividly. He was covering his man when he saw Bradshaw throw the ball to Frenchy Fuqua. Tatum claims he could not get to Frenchy in time to knock the ball down, so he aimed for the middle of his back, hoping to at least make the tackle. Maybe, he thought — just maybe — he could make him 'cough it up.'

After Tatum hit the ground, he heard the crowd screaming and looked up to see Franco racing towards the goal line. Tatum claims the ball never touched him, so it must have bounced off of Fuqua. If this were the case, the play would have been illegal because the ball touched two offensive players.

Rucker Did It Again

Mac Speedie did it Nov. 25, 1951, against the Chicago Bears.

Darrell Brewster did it Dec. 6, 1953, against the New York Giants.

Ray Renfro did it Nov. 22, 1963, against the Philadelphia Eagles.

Did what? Why, score three touchdowns on passes for the Cleveland Browns.

And now, after an interval of 13 years, Reggie Rucker has joined the select group with his work against the New York Jets in their 38-17 Opening Day victory at Cleveland Stadium. (He and the other Browns meet the Houston Oilers, Sunday, Dec. 5, at 1 p.m., on NBC.

"I never caught three touchdowns in a game before," Rucker said. "In fact, I caught only three all last season." Ironically, the first of those came on an option throw by Willie Miller after the wide receiver took a handoff on a reverse against Minnesota.

"A lack of touchdown passes isn't always a reflection on the individual, though," Rucker pointed out. "There are a lot of things to be taken in consideration."

"We have a much more talented group on offense this season and it frees me to do a lot more things than last year. Other teams are in a constant quandry whether to double - cover me or Paul Warfield. It's a pleasant situation."

Rucker's first season with Cleveland, after being obtained in a swap with New England on the first day of the 1975 draft, was eventful in another important way, too. He popped a cartilage in the early days of camp a year ago, yet played all season with the injury.

"I was doing some running when I heard something click," Rucker recalls. "The coaches were patient while I rested the leg some three weeks, then I went on and played the entire season.

"Shortly after the final game I was playing some basketball when I felt a burning sensation in the knee. I knew right away what it was, called the doctor, and had an operation in January."

Rucker worked hard to rehabilitate the leg, but admitted, "Even six months isn't all that long for something like that. The injuries I've had are just the hazards of being a receiver, though."

The knee problem made Rucker's first year accomplishments with the Browns even more remarkable. Especially considering his 60 catches were the most for any Cleveland receiver since Mac Speedie's 62 way back in 1952, and his 770 yards topped everyone since Gary Collins' 786 in 1969.

Now Reggie's at it again.

'The Voice' Celebrates 25 Years

Lee Vines anticipated a limited engagement. But 25 years later, the "Voice of Hallmark" is still at the microphone.

"For announcers," Vines recently said, "anything over 13 weeks work is unusual." The job proved more than unusual. On Sunday, Dec. 25, when he reminds TV viewers which product to choose when they "care enough to send the very best," Vines will introduce "Peter Pan," the 121st broadcast in TV's longest running and most honored dramatic series: The Hallmark Hall of Fame.

The series' Silver Jubilee offering co-stars Mia Farrow and Danny Kaye.

Vines' duties include introducing and closing the show, re-introducing the performance after commercial breaks and serving as the voice in certain commercials.

Recalling how he became the only announcer in Hall-ofFame history, Vines said: "I was the last announcer auditioned. I was late and everybody was waiting. I don't know how many voices they'd listened to. I read through the audition script, and later the executive producer told me everybody nodded and said 'that's it.'"

Over the past 25 years, Vines says, he's flubbed only one of his sponsor's lines. "I was talking about gift wraps and it came out 'riffed gaps.'" The sponsor must not have been offended.

Some of the greatest luminaries in show business have been associated with the Hall of Fame. Not all received top billing.

Vines remembers buying lunch for an out-of-work actor who held Hall-of-Fame cue cards to make a buck.

"He was a very plain looking guy, not the kind you'd expect to be a star," the veteran announcer says of the late James Dean.

Vines started as a 17-year-old announcer in Camden, N. J.

"I was the announcer for a high school play that was broadcast over a local radio station. The program manager asked me if I wanted a job."

A job didn't mean a salary. "I started at zero dollars a week."

TV Was Inspiration For Rodgers

The ideas that spawned Richard Rodgers' 42 musical shows came from many different sources - from novels, from Shakespeare, from stories, from memories. And at least one inspired by the television screen.

That musical and the star who opened in it on Broadway will be spotlighted in a repirse of its most memorable song during "America Slautes Richard Rodgers: The Sound of His Music," a two-hour, all-star tribute to the distinguished composer, Thursday, Dec. 9, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N-9-11.

As he recalls the circumstances, Rodgers was watching late-night television when his flagging attention was aroused by a young singer who was a guest artist on the program.

The girl was Diahann Carroll, whom Rodgers knew slightly from the Broadway theatrical community. This time, seeing her perform in a solo spot, he was deeply impressed by her beauty, grace and chic. He decided to write a show around her.

In due time, he did just that, writing both the music and lyrics for "No Strings," the love story of an American model and a novelist-turned-dilettante who meet in Paris and pursue an ill-starred romance through some of the most glamorous spas on the continent.

The song Miss Carroll introduced in that show was "The Sweetest Sounds," which she will sing, among other Rodgers melodies, in the special.

In a personal tribute to the genius of one of the American theater's greatest composers, Miss Carroll says: "To me and millions of people all over the globe, the sweetest sounds we've ever heard are the sounds of Richard Rodgers' music.

"To sing a Richard Rodgers song, you don't have to be a professional. All you need is a love of music and an appreciation of life."

The star-studded musical special will feature multi-talented Gene Kelly and Henry Winkler as they represent Rodgers' two famous lyricist partners - Oscar Hammerstein II and Lorenz Hart - reminiscing about thir classic collaborations with the preeminent composer and showman.

In addition to Miss Carroll, the program will feature selections by Vic Damone, Sammy Davis Jr., Sandy Duncan, Lena Horne, Cloris Leachman, Peggy Lee, Frank Sinatra and John Wayne.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR BETTY ROLLIN, author of First, You Cry

Has your mastectomy left you with a fear of another incident of cancer?—R.M., Reno, Nev.

● The peculiar thing about my surgery is that I felt in perfect health up to the day I had it, and that's exactly how I feel today. I was never prone to viruses or minor ailments, and, thankfully, my record is still unblemished. However, my operation is not the kind of thing one can easily forget; after all, I see the scar twice a day. So I'm sure that for the next couple of years, there'll be a slight concern in the back of my mind. But I can truthfully say the whole ordeal was not as bad as I had expected. Even after surgery, the pain was not agonizing; all I felt were wound aches, something like having a cut. That was the biggest and nicest surprise—knowing one can survive a mastectomy and end up fit and rarin' to go.

FOR PETER FRAMPTON, British rock star

Did you get where you are today through your good looks or talent?—K.M., Jackson, Tenn.

● Wherever I am today I got from serving a long musical apprenticeship. I've lost count of the number of bands I played with. When I started getting popular, I didn't believe it. I thought fans paid more attention to my face than to my music. I became a bit more sure of myself when my first album sold well. I realized that when my record is on the turntable, people are listening to me, not looking at me.

FOR PATRICIA NEAL, actress

You overcame your massive stroke so well years ago. How did you do it? What advice do you have for stroke victims?—Mrs. Leonard Krause, Joliet, Ill.

● Mental rehabilitation should start the first possible moment after brain damage has taken place. I started work on my speech disability 10 days after recovering consciousness. Every day or week lost affects the final result because the patient's recovery decelerates with the passage of time. The first six months are the best, achievement-wise. The next six, results are slower.

FOR JOHN WAYNE, star of The Shootist

When have you been most disillusioned with yourself?—J.H.S., Hollywood, Fla.

● Every April 15—I.R.S. Day—always was, is, and I'm sure always will be a time of disillusionment for me. I've never been as good a manager as I am an earner.

FOR PETE ROZELLE,
Commissioner, National Football League

Why is the N.F.L. opposed to legalizing betting on professional football games?—L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● The N.F.L. opposes such legalized gambling because we do not believe it to be in the best interests of the game, the players, the coaches or the true fan. When the day comes that a fan is more interested in how many points a team wins by, rather than the fact of whether it wins, pro football will have become no more than a betting vehicle.

FOR SANDRA HARMON, author of A Girl Like Me

Since you're pretty and smart, I bet you get many compliments. How seriously do you take them?—H.M., Galveston, Texas

● Usually with a pinch of salt, but I must say my first sincere compliment changed my life. I wanted to be a writer and got my first break when I landed a job working for TV's Dick Cavett, where a woman with whom I worked said I "turned out good stuff." I'd never received this kind of professional encouragement before, and it worked wonders.

FOR DINAH SHORE

Your outfits are super. Who designs your clothes?—Mrs. Nancy Schwander, Grand Rapids, Mich.

● My wardrobe consultant, Marianne Ryan. She goes to stores and boutiques and picks things she thinks I'd like and that would look good on me, off the peg.

FOR JAMES KILPATRICK, columnist

Do you and Shana Alexander just naturally disagree about everything or are you assigned to represent a particular viewpoint on TV's "60 Minutes" Counterpoint segment?—Mrs. Jane C. Reynolds, Savannah, Ga.

● Yep, we just naturally, honestly, sincerely and emphatically disagree on almost every major issue that comes along—but we try not to be disagreeable about it.

FOR PAUL ANDERSON, listed in the Guinness Book of World Records as the strongest man in the world

Were you an unusually strong child?—M.N., Colorado Springs, Colo.

● No, quite the reverse. I was a normal kid until I was seven, when I got nephritis, and I remained sickly until age 12. To rebuild my health and get myself in shape for playing football, I became interested in exercise and nutrition. By 14, I was on my way towards a 59-inch chest, a 36-inch thigh and a 23½-inch neck.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I've a talent for facts and figures, and, while I doubt I can become another Sylvia Porter, I'd like to know whether there's a future for women in finance.—Joan Hirstrom, Washington, D.C.

● These days there's a future for women in everything. Look at Mary Brook, Director of the U.S. Mint. One who'd surely back you up is Myrna Liebowitz, President of the Women's Stockbrokers Assn. She's presently conducting a series of seminars aimed at women—"Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Finance But Were Afraid to Ask." She's kicking off her campaign in the East. Said Myrna: "Women own more than half the total wealth in the U.S. but are not keeping pace with men with regard to finance." She begins her seminars with this tip: "Don't buy stocks on advice from hairdressers, butchers, bakers or cabbies. Most of them are sure losers."

Tar/Taste Theory Exploded.

Taste-science breakthrough gives low tar MERIT the flavor of cigarettes having 60% more tar.

By locating certain flavor-rich ingredients in cigarette smoke, ingredients that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar, researchers at Philip Morris have disproven the theory that cigarette flavor depends on the amount of tar that goes with it.

They've discovered how to pack flavor—unprecedented flavor—into a cigarette that delivers one of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

The discovery is called 'Enriched Flavor.' It's extra flavor, natural flavor, and only MERIT has it.

LOW TAR–'ENRICHED FLAVOR'

Tests Verify Taste

In taste tests involving thousands of cigarette smokers like yourself, MERIT was reported to deliver as much—or more—taste than current low tar leaders.

What's really startling is that these brands have up to 60% more tar than MERIT.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough.

MERIT. Incredible smoking satisfaction at only 9 mg. tar.

A CONSUMER'S GUIDE TO SUCCESSFUL SURGERY

By Dr. Seymour Isenberg and Dr. L. M. Elting

Before you willingly bare your flesh for the cut of the surgeon's knife, listen to this:

- 2.4 million unnecessary operations were performed in this country in 1974.
- 11,900 of these patients died.
- Cost of this surgery was more than $3.9 billion.

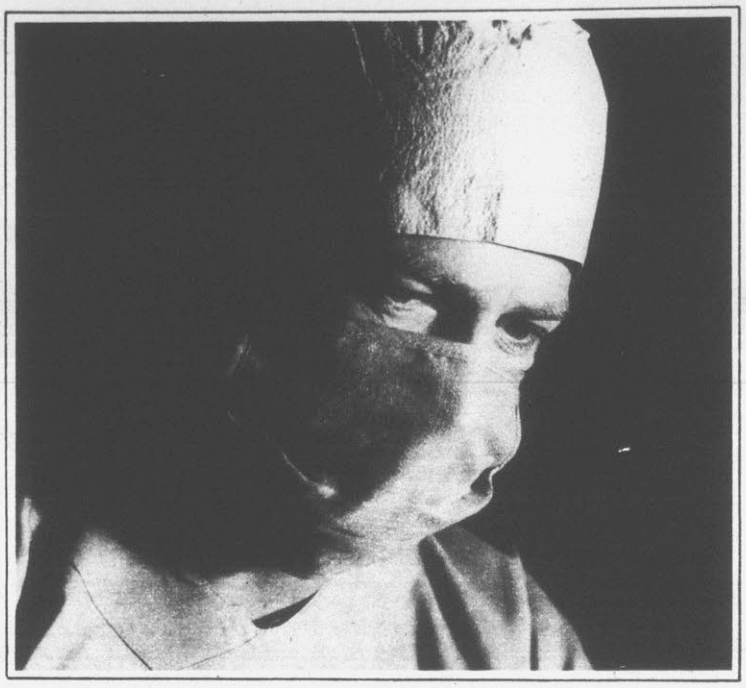
Frightening figures, aren't they? But now you can protect yourself and your family if you remember this advice from Dr. Seymour Isenberg and Dr. L. M. Elting, two osteopathic surgeons whose book helps to eliminate the guesswork from prospective surgery. Isenberg and Elting have worked as a surgical team for close to a decade and have trained and operated at leading hospitals throughout the country.

Here's what they say.



H. Armstrong Roberts

How To Choose A Surgeon

Choosing a good surgeon is the obvious first step in protecting yourself, but most of us give less thought to this than to the choice of a bathrobe.

It's wisest to begin by consulting your family doctor. Hopefully, you will then be able to start your search with a recommendation you can trust. Remember, too, that once you get home from hospital surgery, you will be in your family doctor's hands.

Should you choose a "name" surgeon? If nothing less than getting the best is all that will satisfy you, that is what you should do. But you may be disappointed.

For one thing, unless the surgeon is around the corner, the operation will probably involve traveling, possibly a great distance. Also, the time and availability of famous men are spread so thin, you may not get to see much of the original. Your care probably will be done via duplicate—another doctor on the staff.

Once you've made the trip to see your surgeon for the first time, here are a couple of considerations you might keep in mind:

Where he went to school won't necessarily have any bearing on his efficiency. Medical schools are no longer graded and broken down into classes. The age of the surgeon is often no indication of experience or knowledge. Whether your surgeon is a member of your race or religion doesn't make him a star in the operating room. (Incidentally, don't be impressed by the number of certificates papering the wall. They're not a definitive indication of high-quality care. Hung high enough, Rotary Club affiliations look equally imposing.)

Your First Visit

It is important, initially, to notice how the surgeon talks to you. Is it in a friendly, relaxed manner or like an interrogation? Do you feel like a criminal or an equal? Is it a rushed situation with the phone constantly ringing and assistants parading in and out? How welcome are your questions? In short, how does the surgeon respond to you?

Next, general questioning may start with routine queries, such as: how long will the bandages stay in place? Will the removal of the stitches hurt? How long will I be in the hospital? How long before I can get out of bed at home? Drive a car? Sit in the sun? Will I bleed easily? Will the wound take long to heal?

From there, get more specific:

How long will I be out of work and will the operation affect what I do for a living? If you're a ditch digger and you have a hernia repair, your convalescent period will be longer than if you are an office worker.

How much will it cost? Get this straight right off. Many patients hesitate to question a doctor about his charges; others feel it's none of their business because their insurance will cover it. Both attitudes are wrong. Unless one surgeon has such an extensive reputation that he can charge what the traffic will bear, the fees of most surgeons in a given area are usually standard for a particular operation. Remember, though, that the surgical fee has nothing to do with the hospital fee. The surgeon's fee also will probably be above what your insurance pays. In some instances, your surgeon may ask that you pay him first and then be reimbursed by your insurance company.

Are you going to do the surgery, doctor? In a teaching hospital, your chosen surgeon may not put a glove on you; he's there as an instructor to the residents. You may not care as long as he's guiding the procedure, but then again, you may. You are paying him, not an underling. In a community hospital you stand a better chance of having the surgeon you choose perform the operation.

Who will assist your surgeon? The first assistant must be a doctor who could take over should something happen to the surgeon. Insist on this. Never should the first assistant be a registered nurse, no matter how capable. In small hospitals, your family doctor may assist. Even if he doesn't, you may want him at the table. He is entitled to bill you for this service.

Where will the incision be? You obviously want the smallest cut possible in the least noticeable area. While the surgeon cannot commit himself to the exact number of inches, he should be able to indicate to what extent you will be carrying his mark. The less cutting, the less chance for an ugly scar.

What kind of healing can I expect to have? Fortunately, most people heal normally and rapidly, and wounds, regardless of their size, mend within a week. But there are individuals who form keloid scars—large, unsightly ones—and there is no way to stop this. You should also let your surgeon know if you have ever had any difficulties in healing, and if you have any other health problems. If you are a diabetic, for instance, this can affect the way you heal.

Who will be responsible for my aftercare? More patients are lost after an operation than in the operating room. You don't want to be one of them. If your surgeon is merely going to perform the operation, you have a right to know beforehand. So even if the surgeon assures you that he will be responsible, find out what—if any—responsibilities are distributed, and to whom. An associate? The resident or intern? The nurses? Your family? While you don't expect the surgeon to hold your hand every postoperative moment, you should expect to see him at least once a day to check you over. You aren't just paying him for the surgery proper.

Getting Another Opinion

The surgeon may tell you he would like another opinion on your case, even though he feels pretty certain about what to do. But if he doesn't, or fails to answer any questions to your satisfaction, tell him you want to check his recommendation for surgery with someone else and ask to whom he can refer you. If you do see a consultant, be sure he gives you his opinion directly, not relayed through your surgeon. Some consultants will spend time with you and, when they are finished, will say, "All right, Mrs. Jones, I've examined you and gone over your reports, and I'll get back to your doctor with my opinion." Forget it. That's not why you went. If you can't get the opinion of a consultant firsthand, you're right back where you started—with only one opinion.

Observations™

Doomsday revisited. A few years ago, predictions were rife that the world was running out of resources, and that pollution would soon ravage the earth. The doomsayers' solution: put the brakes on economic growth. We've always taken issue with such dire prophecies, believing that orderly economic growth is the path to a higher standard of living for the world's underprivileged. Now, the U.N. has issued a summary report that reinforces our optimism. A three-year study by an international team of economists says man has the resources and the technology to improve human living standards - and, by the end of the century, can even reduce by half the gap between the rich and poor nations. The main limits to rapid and sustained economic growth, the study finds, are political and social restraints on the economy's ability to develop. As Pogo might have put it, the future is really us.

What causes inflation? Business, raising product prices? Labor, pushing wages higher? Actually, it's not that simple. Inflation also involves government spending policies, and the amount of money in circulation. Want to learn more? Watch "America: The Super Market," a series of 20 TV programs produced by the Law and Economic Center of the University of Miami School of Law in cooperation with KNBC in Los Angeles. The 30-minute shows also probe the workings of competition, monopoly, profits, investing and taxes. The series, funded in part by Mobil Foundation, can be seen on NBC stations in Washington starting tomorrow; Cleveland, January 3; New York City, January 31. Syndication elsewhere is also in the works. Watch for it.

"I NEED A NEW FILE FOR GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS"

Instant conservation. It's sometimes simpler than you think to save money and conserve energy. For example: never use a bigger appliance than you need. (Why waste your oven on a toaster-size job?) Another example: never use a burner that's larger than your pot.

Bottom of the barrel. To its regret, Eli Lilly and Company, the pharmaceutical firm, spends more time filling out government forms than on cancer and heart disease research combined. It calculates the cost of the paperwork at $15 million a year, which, theoretically, adds about 50 cents to the price of every prescription for a Lilly medicine.

WOODY ALLEN: How His Misery Makes Others Laugh

After 20 years of psychoanalysis, this astoundingly successful comedian is still plagued by neuroses, phobias, insecurities and guilt.

John R. Hamilton/Globe Photos

A comic misfit who is successful as actor, writer, director and producer.

By Patricia Baum

Friends recall the time Woody Allen ordered a ticket for a dance benefit, saying he was looking forward to a quiet evening in the theater. But for Woody, simple events have a way of getting out of hand, and this evening was no exception because at the last minute he had agreed to escort Mrs. Gerald Ford.

Outside the theater, a nervous Woody, wearing a tuxedo and elegant black and white tennis shoes, ran into flashbulbs, bright lights and television cameras. Then, when he entered the auditorium with Mrs. Ford, the entire audience stood up and enthusiastically applauded. For the rest of the evening Woody felt besieged by thousands of staring eyes and spent the time in ulcerating agony, perspiring profusely and fearing that his stomach might growl. The trauma of that one excursion, he claims, took five pounds off his already wretchedly thin figure.

"I just can't handle that kind of thing," says Woody, seated in the living room of his New York apartment. And as he talks you realize that indeed, like the awkward heroes he has portrayed in such films as Take the Money and Run and Play It Again, Sam, he is barely coping. Off screen he wears a dolorous expression and sounds apologetic as he admits, "I'm not funny in private."

Considering his accomplishments, Woody's lack of self-confidence seems astounding. He has succeeded as a comedian, writer and director. He can boast of two Broadway hit shows, two best-selling books of humorous essays and seven successful films, all of which led one critic to acclaim him as "one of America's precious natural resources" to be preserved at all costs. But success and fame have not erased his timidity, nor eased his suffering. Nor have nearly 20 years of psychoanalysis made a notable difference. Although he has managed to reduce the number of sessions from five to only three a week, he still feels uneasy in any kind of social situation. As he puts it, "I don't relate well to people. I'm not gregarious. I have a few close friends, and that's it."

Attention of any kind can upset Woody, and he goes to odd lengths to avoid it. His favorite camouflage used to be a rumpled beige rainhat worn low over the ears. To further obscure himself he would pull up his collar, hold his hand over his face and stare at the top of his shoes.

Now, with all the publicity surrounding Woody's debut as a dramatic actor in The Front, he's seriously contemplating holing up at home. He would not suffer too terribly, considering the splendor of his surroundings. He may look like an errand boy, but he lives in regal magnificence and clearly enjoys the trappings. His duplex penthouse is elegantly decorated with Early American antiques and expensive art works and offers a breathtaking view of Central Park. His glass-enclosed sanctuary is ideal for writing comedy, practicing his clarinet, reading Camus and Kafka or indulging his fantasies of being Willie Mays, Marlon Brando or others on his endless list of idols.

Woody moved to the penthouse from a brownstone townhouse to escape the teenage fans who followed him home, left notes under his door and threw stones at his windows to get his attention. Unfortunately, even his apartment does not provide him with the security he craves. Once Woody arrived home to find the FBI staked out there to monitor a Presidential parade. Another time lightning zigzagged across his terrace, shaking the building and sending slabs of concrete hurtling to the pavement, while Woody and Diane Keaton sat frozen in terror on the living room couch.

Diane, although a close friend and co-star in several of his films, is no longer Woody's steady companion. And now, at 41, Woody leads a bachelor's existence of "short flirtations." He's tried marriage twice. When he was only 19, he wed Harlene Rosen, a college student. She proved a great subject for jokes ("My wife cooked her first dinner for me, and I choked on a bone in the chocolate pudding."), but they divorced after five years, and she sued Woody for the first-wife one-liners in his nightclub act. Then, on Groundhog Day, 1966, Woody married Louise Lasser, who now is the star of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." That union dissolved after four years.

Brian Hamill

Ex-long-time friend, Diane Keaton

Woody has no objection to attempting marriage a third time, but the odds against his taking this step seem rather staggering. "I'm looking for absolute perfection," he states. "And I'm always disappointed, not to mention them!" He hastens to add, however, that he is certainly not as inept with women as his screen performances suggest. "I don't act like I'm out on a date in Play It Again, Sam—I don't knock over chairs and crash through things," he says assuringly. And if the number of calls Woody receives on a rainy Sunday afternoon is any measure, women seem to adore him.

Woody's personal life doesn't exactly coincide with his Jewish middle-class upbringing. But as Allen Konigsberg of Flatbush, Brooklyn, he gave fair warning of his unusual destiny to his parents, for he was anything but a typical boy. For one thing, he was victimized by an inordinate number of fears—not only of death, kidnapping, water, boats, heights, the dark, but dishwashers and flushing toilets as well. He was also extremely shy and introverted. Unable to bear being called on in class, he would knock pencils off the desk, then bend down pretending to look for them until the bell rang. He loathed school, making grades that varied between below average and way below average.

His sensitive antenna was tuned in elsewhere. Woody was absorbed in magic, which he practiced diligently, spending six to eight hours a day standing in front of a mirror with an array of coins, cards, handkerchiefs and hats. He was addicted to watching comedy, too, either in the movie theaters or the local vaudeville house, where he studied the routines, and then went home and copied them.

By the time Woody was in high school, his comic gift was not only apparent but lucrative. Woody was writing down the gags and jokes that irrepressibly sprung from his creative mind and selling them to newspaper columnists. Before long, he was regularly writing sketches for Sid Caesar, Buddy Hackett, Art Carney and other well-known comedians.

But performing his material was not as easy as writing it. Woody was so terrified and inhibited when he began that his friends had to physically force him onto the stage. His fears were unwarranted, for nightclub audiences responded wildly to his self-deprecating wisecracks and autobiographical jokes, such as "My family didn't have the money to buy me a dog, so they got me an ant; I called it Spot."

Adding directing to his growing repertory of skills, Woody made Take the Money and Run and thus began the long string of popular films which he wrote, directed and starred in. Their success has led many critics to label him as the comedian of our age and to place him in the exclusive ranks of great screen comics like the Marx Brothers, Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton.

How does Woody himself account for his enormous professional success? "What success I do have," he begins in a typical self-putdown, "I think has to do with people identifying with me and seeing in me some of the awkwardness and problems they themselves have. I think it's also related to the fact that I'm always experimenting and diversifying in an attempt to grow, rather than repeating a workable formula." Woody describes his newest movie, to be released early next year, as a contemporary romantic comedy and the most realistic of all his films.

In many of Woody's movies, students and critics have claimed to find deep meanings and social comments. Love and Death, for instance, has been viewed as an attack on the sexual mores of the period, and Sleeper as a satire on advanced technology. Woody himself is amazed by such interpretations because "any meaning is purely accidental and unintended. I've basically been struggling just to get laughs and entertain."

And quite a struggle that is, according to Woody. In fact, he describes it as "sheer anguish" which he endures only for the feeling of accomplishment he gets at the end in having created something permanent that hopefully will play around the world.

"I know I could make a good old-fashioned comedy tomorrow that would be a surefire success," he says. "It would have a strong plot and contain no ideas that question or threaten our middle-class values. But this doesn't interest me any more. If anything, I would like to make comedies that are less and less 'comfortable' to the point where I can use comedy to express the social and philosophical ideas that men like Bergman and Antonioni express in serious films. Then I think I would like to make a film that is altogether serious."

Woody is certainly taking on heavy challenges. But perhaps meeting them will lighten his burden. Maybe the man who has so often said that "my only regret in life is that I'm not someone else" will at last be satisfied to be uniquely talented Woody Allen.

Good Old Faithful. Always got you where you were going. Always did it economically. A whole generation of Americans grew up with Old Faithful. And now, 27 years and 33 million cars later, it's still a symbol of dependability and economy.

Now there's a car that's just as reliable and economical as Old Faithful ever was. It's New Faithful. The 1977 VW Rabbit. With engineering so advanced that automotive experts have hailed it as the kind of car Detroit will be building in the 1980's.

The Rabbit has a new fuel injection system, so it starts up quick as a bunny. Springs like one, too. 0 to 50 in just 7.7 seconds. The Rabbit also has advanced engineering features like negative steering roll radius to help maintain directional stability in the event of a front-tire blowout; rack-and-pinion steering for more direct maneuvering and better road feel; and an independent stabilizer rear axle, low in unsprung weight, for better road holding.

New Faithful lives up to Old Faithful's reputation for economy, too. Because it has fuel injection, you can use the most economical grade of gas.* But you won't have to use it very often. Rabbit gets 37 mpg on the highway, 24 in the city. (That's EPA's estimate for manual transmission. Actual mileage may vary, depending on driving habits, car's condition and optional equipment.)

Dependability and economy. That's what Old Faithful gave a whole generation of Americans. And that's what New Faithful is giving a whole new generation of Americans.

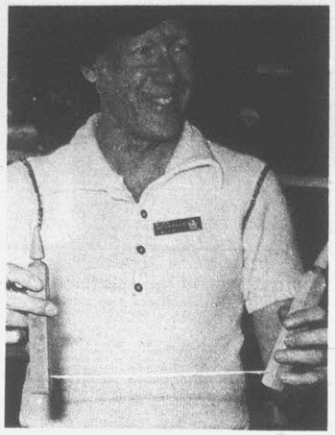
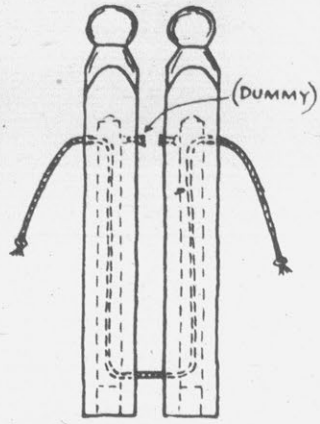
SUNDAY folk toys

The Puritans' answer to curbing children's idleness on the Sabbath. Today's kids will want to play with them all week.





A Handcrafted Toy (under $3 to make)

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Gifts from the heart are often those you make with your own hands.

Dick Schnacke, author-craftsman, has not only contributed significantly to the popularity of the "wihimmydiddie" (a wooden-propeller lie detector) and the "flipperdinger" (a breath-control gadget) but is largely responsible for carrying on a tradition of making children's historically authentic playthings. Some are known as "Sunday toys." (His book, American Folk Toys, published by Penguin Books, $3.50, gives detailed drawings and instructions for all kinds of folk toys.)

Just what are Sunday toys? They date back seventy-five to one hundred years. The toys depict famous stories from the Old Testament: Noah's Ark, the Pillars of Solomon and Jacob's Ladder.

These toys evolved from the strict Puritan ethics of America's early settlers, which rigidly determined the day-to-day activities of children, especially how they spent their idle time on the Sabbath.

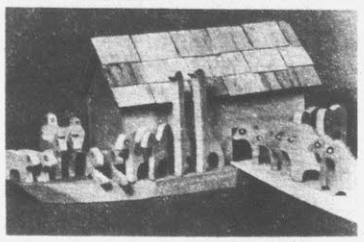
Religious creed dictated that on the Sabbath, children were to pass their time playing only with toys related to stories from the Bible. This, it was thought, would not only re-enforce youngsters' knowledge and understanding of the Bible but would divert their idle hands from devilish mischief.

The three items pictured are simply constructed, yet are ingenious in their ability to mystify and entertain youngsters and adults alike.

The Jacob's Ladder toy is made of thin blocks of wood and ribbonlike pieces of cloth. Through an intricate system of interweaving the ribbons, the toy creates an illusion of a continual flow of flip-flopping blocks. It creates a scene which isn't difficult to relate to the story of Jacob's vision found in Genesis 28:12. The verse describes a dream of a ladder extending from earth to heaven with God's angels ascending and descending.

Another toy with a surprising amount of humorous trickery is the Pillars of Solomon. The idea for the toy comes from 2 Chronicles 3:15-17, in which the pillars at Solomon's Temple are described as being connected by a chain. A trick routing of a rope through the toy allows the owner to convince his friends that magic keeps the rope together after it has been cut.

The Jacob's Ladder toy relates to Jacob's vision in Genesis of a ladder extending to heaven.



Noah's Ark

The Noah's Ark toy has no magic except in its apparent ability to occupy a child's mind for endless hours. Constructed roughly of wood, the ark has a removable roof that, when opened, reveals the animal kingdom. The popularity of the ark even today is exemplified by the fact that the toy greatly resembles a mass-produced item which can be found on the shelves of toy shops.

Schnacke, 57, is a former metallurgist who has been making toys all his life. After deciding to leave his engineering career and plunge into his own business in 1963, he recruited local residents near his home to produce the folk toys. Two years later, he had doubled his prior salary.

Today Schnacke employs 60 craftsmen in mountainous West Va. and ships their output, an assorted line of 116 different folk toys, to more than 500 outlets throughout the United States.

The Sunday toys which he dispenses represent the interesting folklore that is incorporated in all of his homespun items. Stories the toys represent have been handed down from generation to generation.

"There is something so satisfying in preserving the past," says Schnacke, "and doubly so when the skill of your own hands is involved."

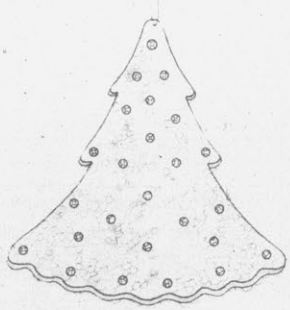
GIFTS TO MAKE

ANYONE CAN MAKE THESE PRETTY TREE ORNAMENTS

These eye-catching decorations can be made, for the most part, from things you already have around the house.

Choir Angel: To make this beguiling figure, you will need some cotton batting, a piece of fabric for the robe, a tiny piece of gold aluminum foil for the wings and a light tone of liquid makeup to paint the face, arms and legs, which are made of cotton swabs. Begin by cutting a piece of the cotton 2" x 5" for your base. The face: a 25¢-size circle of white cardboard. The arms and legs: use cotton swabs, such as Q-tips. Snip off one end of each swab. Paint the white circle face and the swabs with the makeup base. When the arms and legs are moistened with the makeup, gently shape them with your fingers. Let dry. For the robe, cut a 3" piece of fabric, fold at top and glue to cotton batting. Use gold twine or ribbon to gather the robe at the waistline. When arms, legs and face are dry, draw smile and eyes with ballpoint pen. Glue in place; let dry. The angel's book is a tiny piece of cardboard glued in place.



Snowy Christmas Tree: For this you will need about a dozen eggshells, a 6" piece of shirt cardboard, glue, such as Elmer's, plus a few sequins. On the cardboard draw, then cut out, a traditional Christmas-tree shape, 6" tall. Place your eggshells in a bowl, breaking them into small pieces with the back of a spoon, until all the pieces are about one-quarter inch. Place them in a paper cup and pour in enough glue to make a "batter." Apply thickly to cover one side of tree completely. Place the sequins on at the same time. Let dry for half a day. Make new "batter" and repeat the process on the other side. Dry overnight.

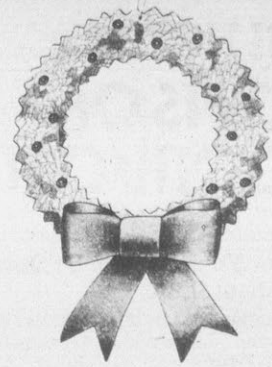
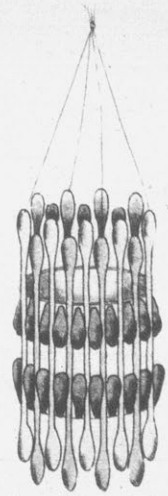
Yuletide Wreath: Would you believe this pretty wreath's main ingredient is split peas? You'll also need cardboard and a little spray paint. Draw a 7" circle on the cardboard; for center, draw and cut out a second circle, 5½". Combine peas and glue in a paper cup and make a "batter." Then apply to wreath. Let dry thoroughly. Repeat on the reverse side. Draw ribbon on white construction paper, cutting out and gluing for double thickness. Before glue dries, shape bow. Separately, spray wreath green, the ribbon red, with a glossy paint, such as Krylon. Glue ribbon onto wreath.





Lace Cage: Although this looks complicated, actually it's a cinch. All you need is a 2" portion of the cardboard center from a paper-towel roll, some swabs and fluorescent paint. Place about 16 cotton swabs on a piece of waxed paper. Paint them, using another swab as your brush. Give the painted swabs plenty of time to dry. Coat the roll with glue, then alternate swabs, as shown, and press in place. Finally, add the snipped-off tips of cotton swabs in between. Let dry thoroughly, about three or four hours.

Christmas Dove: To make this graceful Yuletide symbol, you'll need two pieces of white construction paper, a pencil and glue. Draw the dove's body, wings, tail and beak as shown, cutting out the shapes upon two thicknesses of paper. Glue the body cut-out together. For the other parts, be sure to shape by hand before glue dries. Make the curled feather crest by gluing together two thicknesses of a 2" strip of paper, then roll around a pencil. When dry, glue in place on head.

YOUR NERVES CAN CURE THEMSELVES

once you learn how to de-sensitize them, this doctor's ingenious new way...

If You Suffer From A Single One Of These Torturous Symptoms Of Nerves, Tension Or Chronic Anxiety, THEN THE FACTS BELOW MAY BE THE MOST IMPORTANT YOU HAVE EVER READ IN YOUR LIFE!

Because they reveal, for the first time, how your nerves have tricked you into the following mental symptoms:

constant nervousness and over-irritation... indecision... depression ...loss of confidence in yourself and others... feelings of unreality... overwhelming obsession with one or two horrible thoughts...

a hopeless feeling that your entire personality is coming apart... that your identity is dissolving... or that you may be helplessly drifting into a nervous breakdown!

And—equally as bad—how your nerves have tricked you into the following physical symptoms:

chronic fatigue, that starts in the morning, and grows worse as the day goes on...

"missed" heartbeats—"racing" heart—palpitations—or sudden sharp pains under the heart...

sweating hands—or "pins and needles" in either your hands or your legs...

"churning" stomach... nausea... choking feeling in the throat... inability to take a deep breath... tight band of pain around the head..."ready to jump out of your skin"... strange tricks of vision ...weak spells... insomnia, that goes on night after night after night...

hand shaking... panic spasms... knots in your chest... dizziness... difficulty in swallowing... vomiting... and all the other physical tortures that turn your life into one continuous hell!

And Every One Of These Nervous Symptoms Can Be Controlled... And Then Diminished ...And Then Eliminated—OFTEN BY AS LITTLE AS THIS ONE SINGLE INSIGHT INTO THEIR HIDDEN CAUSE!

And that insight is this:

If you suffer from any of the nervous symptoms listed above, then you must understand at once that your nerves are not ill... they have not deteriorated... they have not lost their true physical health in any way! What has happened to them instead is that they have simply become OVER-SENSITIZED... "rubbed raw" by too much outside irritation ...and are now ready to discharge the emotional and physical symptoms of panic at even the slightest thing that goes wrong!

Thus, the depression... indecision... loss of confidence and all the other emotional symptoms you feel are all caused by OVER-SENSITIZED nerves! And the churning stomach... palpitating heart... never-ending headaches and all the other physical nervous-symptoms you feel are—again—all caused by OVER-SENSITIZED nerves!

And therefore the way to treat ALL these symptoms is NOT with drugs... NOT with shock... NOT with medical formulations or hospitalizations at all! The way to treat these nerves is to change the poisonous-thoughts that are rubbing them raw!

And this is done (as proven by this internationally-famed physician on thousands of patients) in four simple steps! The first of which stops nervous symptoms (both physical and emotional) from multiplying from that moment on! The second of which serves to tranquilize and quiet down those over-sensitized nerves far more powerfully (and permanently) than any drug a pharmacist could ever give you!

The third of which lets you stop fighting those symptoms (which only intensifies them—in an ever-increasing spiral of sheer torment), and—instead—leave them alone in an ingenious way that lets them start healing themselves!

And the fourth of which—the great reward—brings you slowly-but-surely back to the person you used to be! With a new, enduring feeling of control and confidence that nothing can destroy! So much so that this doctor actually comes right out and states bluntly: "The advice given here will definitely cure you, if you only follow it"!

WHAT OTHERS SAY:

"... helped me so much and released me from the particular hell I have been living in since my breakdown six years ago."

"I think of Dr. Weekes with admiration and deep gratitude, as I am sure thousands of other people are doing."

"I am amazed at the progress I made in such a short time."

"It would be no exaggeration to add that your book saved my life."

"The method you give for cure of nervous conditions is so effective—and so simple—I cannot think why nothing remotely like your system has been suggested to me."

"The great reassurance you give about the distressing physical symptoms of a disturbed nervous system is one of the greatest benefits to be derived from your book."

"You cannot possibly imagine what a relief it is to be able to view life normally again, instead of fear-panic all the while."

"I cannot describe the emotion I felt to find, at last, someone who really understood the problem, and to hear her say the condition can be cured. . . ."

"I would like you to know that my nervous condition has so greatly improved through the advice gleaned from your most precious and invaluable book . . . that all symptoms have now disappeared and I rarely need Librium or sleeping capsules."

"My physician is amazed at my progress and of course I showed him your book which he borrowed and read thoroughly and is now recommending to other patients."

"My wife has made a vast improvement since using your book and now feels for the first time like getting away from the hospital altogether. I'm sure if she had had your treatment in earlier years she would never have had to go into the hospital at all."

WHAT THE PUBLISHER SAYS:

HOPE AND HELP FOR YOUR NERVES has already sold over 350,000 copies. Millions of Americans have heard Dr. Weekes on television and radio shows and have read excerpts from the book which appeared in Reader's Digest. If you are one of the many whose nerves are on edge and who sometimes feel panic and don't know why, this remarkable book was written for you.

In Fact, Case History After Case History Proves That Cure May Be So Dramatically Quick That Your Friends And Family Will Beg You To Tell Them Your Secret!

Once again, it doesn't matter what physical or emotional symptoms you are now suffering from... how "deeply entrenched" they are... how long you have been plagued by them... how "old" or "weak" or "out-of-control" you may feel today! Here is specific, step-by-immediate-step advice that will (again to quote directly from the doctor) "banish every unwelcome sensation and regain peace of mind and body"!

For example:

The two-minute self-treatment (you perform one ingenious little action with your chest) that ends sudden panic seizures on the spot—including all their side effects such as dizziness, pins and needles, involuntary stiffening of the joints, inability to breathe, and all the rest.

That "lump in the throat that won't go away"—how to banish it in minutes . . . and enjoy eating any food you wish to once again!

Physical weakness—perhaps the most dreaded of all symptoms—and (surprisingly) perhaps the fastest of all to banish!

How to deal with the twin monsters of fatigue and guilt! And leave behind emotional exhaustion... morning depression... thoughts that once raced around and around in your mind without cessation! (And leave them all behind—for good!)

Why so many patients who tried these simple techniques actually came out of their nervous sicknesses as far finer and stronger people than they ever were before!

How to recover from chronic tension caused by an insoluable problem! The only sane way to overcome it! How to avoid unnecessary suffering, for both yourself and others! And, perhaps, actually turn your worst defeat into crowning success!

The surest and most permanent way to cure obsessions!

How to tap the forces of Nature, every morning, that are just waiting to cure you!

How to bring happiness back into your everyday life! Not by waiting for some great event or reward... but simply by developing the eyes to see joy in the little things all around you!

And—the final goal: How to develop the kind of nervous control that automatically turns panic off the instant it starts! That frees you forever from "nerve-crutches" such as drugs or alcohol! That lets you pick up your life again from the point where over-sensitized nerves forced you to abandon it, with absolute confidence that you now have the poise and self-possession to accomplish the goals you have always wanted!

Already a best-seller in nine foreign nations, as well as the United States! Read it from cover to cover. We take all the risk! Fair enough? Why not send in the coupon—TODAY!

VITAL NOTE!

To gain the wonder-working benefits of this book in every area of your life starting within the first five minutes after you pick it up—there is absolutely no need to STUDY this revolutionary new book or even read it from cover to cover, or expend any more "literary" effort on your part other than to browse through it at your leisure for one or two thrilling minutes a day!

This is NOT a textbook! NOT a study manual! There are no lectures—not a single "blue-sky" theory to ponder over anywhere!

Instead, for the first time; here are revolutionary new breakthroughs that HELP YOUR NERVES DE-SENSITIZE THEMSELVES... ACTUALLY DRAIN OUT TORTUROUS MENTAL AND PHYSICAL SYMPTOMS, STARTING THE VERY FIRST DAY—all through a few incredibly-simple techniques that you can put to work for you the very first time you pick it up.

Therefore, we do NOT want you to treat this amazing volume as you would an ordinary book! Instead, we ask you this:

Place it on your bedstand, entirely at our risk, for thirty days! Browse through just a few pages every night before you retire! Skip around if you like! But make absolutely no conscious effort to "study" this book, "work" on it, or even memorize a single one of the thrilling techniques you will find on every one of its pages!

Instead, you'll make this startling discovery in these very first thirty days alone. Instantly—simply by leafing through its pages—your mind will automatically absorb the wonder-working procedures laid out for you in this book! Effortlessly, you will respond to its convention-shattering breakthroughs!

Inevitably—hour after hour—day after day—week after week—you will find your body draining away, almost by itself, the tortures of constant nervousness... overwhelming depression... lack of confidence... chronic fatigue... 'skipping' or 'racing' heart... pins and needles in hands or feet... even nausea, shortness of breath, chest and stomach pains, weak spells, and never-flagging insomnia! And much, much more!

All these—gone! For just a few short moments a day!

FROM SWISS SCIENTIST'S PRIVATE FORMULAS—

Cosmetic Chemist develops home treatment for skin that Makes your face look 10 years younger

IN JUST SECONDS A DAY

By Renee Bouchard
Beauty Consultant to Maison Cher

If you are concerned that your face doesn't look as young as it once did, then please read the few informative paragraphs on this page. You'll be glad that you did.

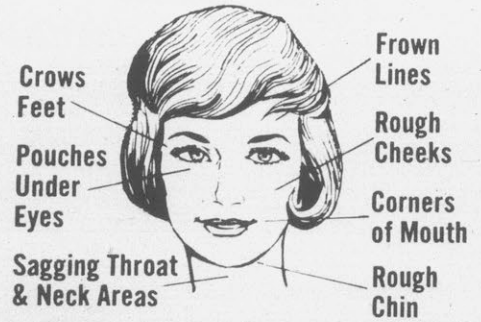
Recently in Switzerland I saw demonstrated a simple home treatment that practically "melted-off" years of age lines, smoothed ugly bumpy skin texture and eliminated uneven skin coloration common to aging skin. Results were simply amazing. Even the faces of young people of 25 to 30 years old that were dried and parched from the sun and wind were restored virtually overnight to a smoother more baby-like glow. With older people, results were even more gratifying. Evenness of color returned, the sagging skin on faces and throats was firmed and the suppleness and elasticity of young skin restored.

Now, these very same secret Swiss formulas have been made available to you in this country —exclusively through Maison Cher.

The Secrets behind the revitalization properties of "New Youth Formula I"

Simply put, this new and revolutionary product has been specifically formulated to enhance the skin's natural mechanism for maintaining suppleness. It contains: special formula collagen concentrates and soluble nutrient proteins to increase the skin's ability to retain moisture and thus elasticity. It also contains a startling new discovery called ALF which helps normalize skin "breathing" while at the same time softening and smoothing dry and rough skin tissues. (Note: Dry and dehydrated skin is one of the prime causes of premature skin aging.) "New Youth I" works to replenish and help retain the precious fluids necessary to keep skin smooth and dewy soft. "New Youth Formula I" gives aging skin specific elements it needs.

Brings Help To These Trouble Areas



No expensive salons, no hours of treatments. Amazingly easy to use, Takes just seconds to apply.

You start the treatment at night just before retiring. After removing all makeup and cleansing your face thoroughly, you gently apply "New Youth Formula I" to chin, nose, forehead, cheeks and neck areas. Blend with fingertips until absorbed into skin. Pat an extra amount on excessively lined areas. Believe it or not, that's all there is to it, and you're finished in just seconds as the "magic" ingredients then take over and do all the work while you sleep.

Results are thrilling

Both men and women find the results a dream come true . . . lined and weathered faces become smooth and soft . . . crows feet disappear and a new glow of youthful color returns to the face. The years seem to just "magically" fade away. For young people under 30, three applications a week is all that is usually required to keep the skin amazingly baby-like. For people over 30, daily use is recommended to normalize complexion and to keep skin looking years younger.

Reg. size, enough for 25 treatments only $4.95

Economy size, enough for 50 treatments only $6.95

Included, an important folder on skin care

With your "New Youth Formula I" will be a simple, step-by-step, scientific skin care home treatment program for problem skin and normal skin maintenance.

Important Facts About Our Skin Care Products

Many leading salons in the United States and Europe sell facial care products for the same purpose as ours but at double or triple our prices. This is also the first time these fine Maison Cher skin care products have been available in the United States at any price. And, they are so new, that they are not available in your neighborhood salon or drugstore—only direct from Maison Cher.

Don't wait. Send today. Unconditional Guarantee

All that you have read here may seem too good to be true, but our guarantee is simple and unconditional. You must see and feel your skin look smoother and younger . . . years younger . . . and you must see this start to happen after only one week. You must also see marked improvement with age lines reduced drastically with further treatments or every cent you've paid will be refunded in full.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Could you be acting kindest to people you dislike?

Does True Friendship Really Exist?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Just what constitutes a good friend is difficult to define.
2. Our thoughts, ideas and attitudes are influenced by our friends to a greater extent than many of us realize.
3. It's easy to tell when one person feels unfriendly toward another, even when he does his best to conceal his hostility.
4. The extent to which a man confides in his closest friends provides a clue to how well adjusted he is.
5. We should strive to convert many of our acquaintances into real friends.

ANSWERS

1. False. Sociology professor William A. Sadler Jr. of Bloomfield College, after evaluating various studies, has concluded: "Genuine conversation between friends is perhaps the highest form of interpersonal communication. Good friends express their convictions, their worries and their deepest uncertainties. They talk openly and get to the heart of the matter quickly because friends understand one another. Friendship bestows communion that enables us to face loneliness with courage and with the awareness that we are not horribly, totally alone in our world." He further observes that the development of deep friendships is difficult for people today because they do not know how to talk openly, intimately and frankly with one another, or they simply will not take the time to do so. People fill their leisure time with so much frenetic activity that there is no possibility of sustaining much meaningful communication.

2. True. A team of behavior specialists at the University of North Dakota cites studies showing that the dynamics of friendship function in a forward and backward direction: "Not only does a person tend to be attracted to others who share his attitudes, but he also tends to attribute his own attitudes to the individuals to whom he is attracted." In addition, evidence indicates that a person tends to develop attitudes that are in agreement with those of the people he likes.

3. True. In an experiment at Cornell University, pairs of people who were friendly to each other, and pairs who were not friendly, engaged in short, videotaped discussions. The tapes were then analyzed to determine in what ways the expressive behavior of the pairs differed. The findings showed marked differences: The friendly subjects spoke more slowly, used longer utterances and used more expressions of agreement—head nods and positive introjections—than did the unfriendly subjects. The unfriendly subjects smiled more, spent more time looking at each other and were less active while listening. The results showed that the unfriendly pairs, finding themselves in an awkward social situation, took refuge in excessively polite and proper behavior.

4. True. Studies at two leading universities produced two revealing findings: When a man's closest friends provide high levels of empathy, warmth and genuineness, a high degree of self-disclosure is related to good personality adjustment; but when his closest friends provide low levels of empathy, warmth and genuineness, then high self-disclosure is related to maladjustment. However, no such relationship between self-disclosure to close friends and personality adjustment was found for females.

5. False. Social psychologists Valerian J. Derlega and Alan L. Chaikin conclude from their study of human relationships that we should limit the number of close friendships we maintain. Cultivating more than a very few such relationships takes more time and energy than most of us have. They point out that "We must maintain different levels of social distance with the various people we meet every day. By limiting contact with most of the people we see, we have time for deep relationships with the few individuals with whom we wish to be close."

JOBMANSHIP

Career Dreams That Backfire

Thinking big about your job future can be fun. It can even be useful if it encourages you to make practical plans for finding and holding the kind of job you enjoy. Some people, however, suffer a chronic sense of disappointment with themselves because they've allowed their career dreams to hide their real accomplishments. Children commonly picture themselves as being important and famous when they grow up. Without realizing it, some adults go on measuring their achievements against that juvenile fantasy.

No matter how they progress in their careers, if their efforts aren't earthshaking enough to be featured in all the newspapers, they're afflicted with perpetual dissatisfaction. Other people ignore career opportunities available to them while they imagine how great things would be "if only they could just get off somewhere and start over." Perhaps the most frustrated career daydreamer is the man or woman who was the "Golden Boy" or "Golden Girl" in high school or college. The triumphs and admiration of early years often set up expectations of supersuccess that adult life can rarely provide. Until people who are caught in these dreams understand what they are doing to themselves, they'll be unable to appreciate their real achievements.

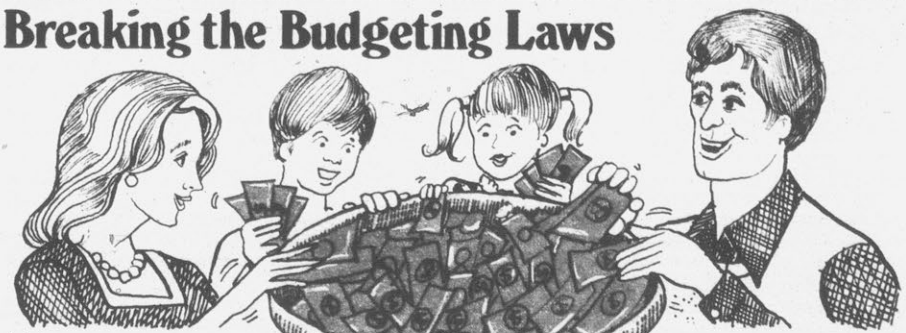
MONEY

Breaking the Budgeting Laws



Not so long ago the basic rule for family financial management was: "Make a budget, and stick to it!" But experts say that's no longer true. Of course, every family should have a general idea of total income and where that income goes. It's also sensible to make appropriate financial allocations for such major expense areas as food, housing, clothes, education and savings. But as a hard-and-fast guide for spending, budgets no longer make financial sense. The family budget, in its broadest sense, must be flexible enough to take into account each family's various preferences and lifestyles. "No family is a statistical average," says a Southern bank executive, "and it's foolish for any family to box itself into a mythical bracket." One family may care more about wearing well-made and stylish clothes than it does about entertaining or dining out. Another may prefer to wear inexpensive clothing and use the money saved for a great vacation. Still another may enjoy special luxuries—good wine, the theater—enough to warrant tightening the belt elsewhere.

A luxury is not always an extravagance. An extravagance is something that costs more than it is worth to you. A luxury may not be essential, but it enriches your life. A New York psychotherapist believes that families should be willing to go outside their budget to buy things that will enhance their closeness, growth or sheer joy in living. "A vacation together is often a more urgent need, and of greater value, than a new living room chair," she says. In short, a budget can be useful if it represents what you and your family want to do rather than merely what you should do. The danger in a rigid budget is that it forces a lifestyle on a family which they may later resent or be psychologically unable to change even if their financial situation improves. A budget should be kept flexible, reviewed from time to time and occasionally ignored. That way, it will do what it's supposed to do: buy you what you really want out of life. —Norman Lobsenz

United States of America Bicentennial Gold Medal

NOW EVERY AMERICAN has the opportunity to possess a unique Gold Proof. To own a Gold Proof such as this has only recently been allowed by The Congress of The United States. Fortunately this act became law in time for the minting of gold Bicentennial commemoratives. To permanently preserve the memory of the Bicentennial year as it draws to a close The Columbia Mint, Washington, D.C. is striking a special commemorative Bicentennial Gold Medal.

This Gold Proof in .500 fine Gold is being struck and issued in a limited edition with a serially numbered certificate of authenticity. Each piece will measure 18mm in diameter and weigh 2.31 grams. The face of the Gold Proof portrays the Dome of the Nations Capitol Building the reverse the famed spire of Independence Hall.

LIMITED EDITION— RARE PROOF FINISH

The Gold Proofs are being issued in a strictly controlled limited edition—limited to the number of orders received postmarked by December 31, 1976, the last day of the Bicentennial year. After that day no further orders will be accepted. The special dies used for the minting of these pieces will be cancelled and retired never to be used again.

Each Gold piece, struck with a flawless Proof finish, from specially prepared dies, will be accompanied by a serially numbered Certificate of Authenticity—forever attesting to its rarity and limited edition status.

A GOLD PROOF TO BE CHERISHED

Now you may possess this unique Gold Proof for just $20 only during the Bicentennial year. The Bicentennial Gold Proof in years to come will have lasting significance for all who acquire it. For many Americans it may well be the most important reminder of this historic occasion—The Bicentennial of the Independence of The United States of America. A possession to be passed on to future generations with pride.

ACT NOW

This specially minted Gold Proof is being issued in a single, strictly limited edition with a restriction of two pieces per order. The total number of pieces issued will be permanently limited to the number of orders accepted and postmarked by December 31, 1976 with the final day of shipment taking place within 30 days of that date. Due to the substantial fluctuations in the price of Gold, the Mint reserves the right to withdraw this offer before December 31, 1976 should it become necessary. AN EASY, PROVEN SYSTEM

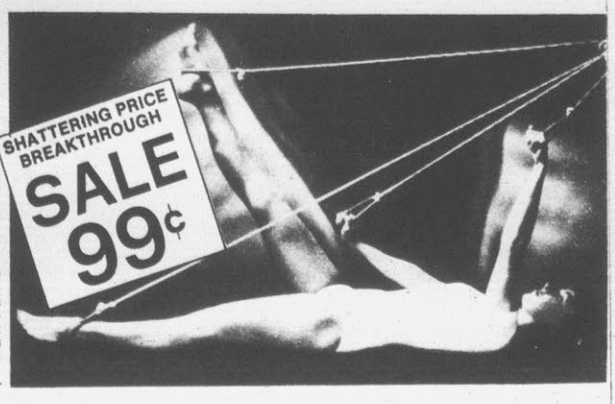
Easy—because you lie on your back and do just basic routines. And yet you exercise and tone every muscle in your arms, legs, abdomen, waist, back, neck and tummy—all the important, problem spots that you want to keep beautiful.

We recommend you start at a moderate 2 to 3 minutes a day. You'll soon want to increase this to 4, 5 and up to 15 minutes at a time. The rhythmic movements you use are so simple because all you do is lift and bend your arms and legs and the "Figure Trimmer" won't let you make a mistake. A simple, fully illustrated instruction booklet is included.

USE ANYWHERE

Yes, use it in your bedroom, living room, even while you're away from home (it's so compact, it folds to fit right in a handbag or attache case and weighs only a mere 10 ounces). Simply attach to bedpost, doorknob, etc., and it's ready to use.



TO HELP WEIGHT LOSS . . .

We recommend a moderate and sensible temporary 15 to 20% reduction in your normal food intake. We don't recommend a fad or crash diet, because these could be harmful. After you reach desired weight loss, just eat normally and continue exercises to feel and look better and younger.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

RHETT AND SCARLETT
Tomorrow is another re-make

The Plots Thicken: The creative genius of Hollywood continues to amaze. Already announced are such exciting major productions as Jaws II, The Exorcist II and Gone With The Wind II. Now comes word of The Bad News Bears II and Airport 1977—this last one to follow the adventures of Airport and Airport 1975. And the producers of The Omen, which has grossed more than $40 million since its release this summer, plan to start shooting The Omen II sometime next year. Omen II will be followed by Omen III, which in due time will be followed by Omen IV. No joke.

Rekindled: Thirty-five years ago, Maurice Kingston, a lonely British sailor, danced with Neoma May Ricks at Sweet's Ballroom. Kingston's ship had been hauled into Mare Island Navy Yard (California) for repairs. While on shore leave, he and Neoma danced at the ballroom, went to movies and tried to forget about the war. Three months later, Neoma waved goodbye from the jetty as Kingston's ship sailed for Britain. Maurice met and married a girl in England. Neoma also married and settled down. They lived their lives thousands of miles apart and forgot about each other—until one day in 1974, when a recording of Glenn Miller's "Chattanooga Choo Choo" awakened Maurice's memories of the American girl. He wrote a letter to a California paper, and it was printed on page one. "My one wish in life has been to return to Oakland, where I met a lovely young girl, Neoma May Ricks," Maurice wrote. "We had a wonderful time together." Neoma saw the letter, and they began corresponding. She had been divorced from her husband for many years. Maurice's wife had died years earlier. So, pretty soon Maurice sent a tape-recorded message: "Would you like to marry me?" Neoma replied, "Yes." They will be married January 29.

Have Young People Really Changed? "Many experts are saying we've come full circle. Students are not like they were in 1970, but they're much more like they were in 1965," says Dr. Patricia Rueckel, psychiatrist and Vice President for Student Development at Georgetown University. "Students are seeking more structure and more direction," she says. "The tension between college administrators and students is over. The students are less innocent, less dependent on elders for choices and decisions. Consumerism has had an effect on them. Professors in the classroom are being questioned constantly about what they teach—the content, the underlying assumptions in it—and most of all about the grade they'll assign for a mastery of it." While suicide is the second-largest killer of college-age students in the U.S. (auto accidents are first), Dr. Rueckel says, "Psychiatry is accepted now; 10 years ago, students worried about parents and friends finding out that they were receiving treatment." What's ahead for the student population? "By 1985, the median college age will be 25," predicts the psychiatrist. "Students are dropping out and 'stopping out' in increasing numbers."

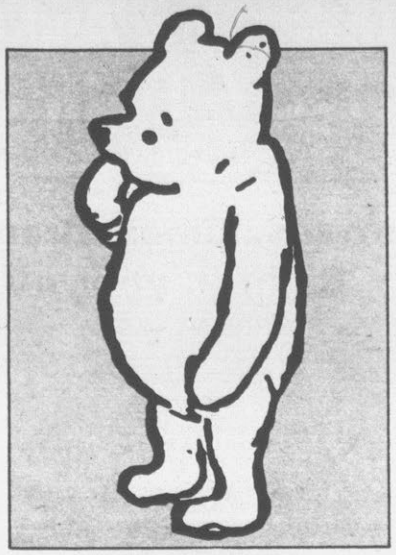
COMPATIBLE?
Which dogs are best with kids?

It would be easier to describe which children are better for your dog. Is your child gentle, aggressive, hostile, pubescent, devoted, infantile, introverted, extroverted? These are only some of the factors that determine which is the best breed of dog for your child. There are some general guidelines: Do not get a toy breed (Maltese, toy poodle, Chihuahua, etc.) for a young child. They're too fragile for rough-housing. Certain herding dogs, such as the Great Pyrenees, Old English sheepdog, collie and Shetland sheepdog, are ideal for all children. You must ask yourself if the dog is to be a protector, companion or playmate. Among the sporting dogs you can live with are the Labrador retriever, the golden retriever, the English setter and the German shorthaired pointer. The Siberian husky, the Samoyed and the standard poodle are thought by many experts to be absolutely the finest dogs for children as playmates and companions.



NOW WE ARE FIFTY
A birthday for Pooh

Incredible though it may seem, the lovable Winnie-the-Pooh is celebrating his 50th birthday this year. It goes without saying that this is an occasion of considerable importance wherever the English language is read or spoken. For Winnie, the most famous Teddy bear of our time, is a unique blessing of the 20th century. It is impossible to do more than suggest the impact that Pooh has made on the world in which he has confidently conducted himself during the last half century. The beneficial influence of Pooh on his admirers has often been noted by observers of human behavior; few, however, have expressed this thought better than the Christian Science Monitor which declared in a widely quoted editorial: "Private research has convinced us that few people in responsible positions in society today have reached eminence without the influence of Pooh . . . and we hope that a great many six-to-ten year-olds, as well as anybody above that age who has not made Winnie-the-Pooh's acquaintance, will follow his adventures that lead, as years go by, inevitably from whimsy to wisdom."

BIRTHDAYS (all Sagittarius): Sunday—Otto Preminger 70; Jim Plunkett 29. Monday—Dave Brubeck 56; Ira Gershwin 80. Tuesday—Eli Wallach 61; Johnny Bench 29. Wednesday—Sammy Davis Jr. 51; Flip Wilson 43; Maximilian Schell 46; James MacArthur 39. Thursday—Kirk Douglas 60; Dick Butkus 34; Redd Foxx 54; John Cassavetes 47; Douglas Fairbanks Jr. 67; Broderick Crawford 65. Friday—Dorothy Lamour 62; Morton Gould 63. Saturday—Carlo Ponti 62; Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn 58; Rita Moreno 45; Brenda Lee 32; Christina Onassis 26.
