$1.5 Billion Overcharge By U.S. Utilities

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Public interest groups said Saturday that 134 of the nation's biggest privately owned electric utilities charged consumers for $1.5 billion in federal income taxes which, because of tax breaks, the utilities wound up keeping.

In addition, the groups said, 43 utilities paid no federal income taxes at all.

The report by the Environmental Action Foundation and the National Consumer Information Center was based on Federal Power Commission records for 1975. It was the second annual report by the two private citizens' groups.

"Electric utilities charged their customers $2.2 billion for federal income taxes (in 1975), but paid only $728 million to the Internal Revenue Service, resulting in an overcharge of $1.5 billion," the report said.

"This is over one-half billion more than the $936 million overcharge reported by EAF in a similar study last year based on 1974 data."

A spokesman for the Edison Electric Institute, which represents several privately owned utilities, characterized the allegations as "the same old, tired charges they've made for years."

"We pay hundreds of millions in taxes every year, not only federal but state and local," the industry spokesman said. "There are certain tax benefits for certain things. Accelerated depreciation for instance — every industry enjoys that.

"They're just advocating public power. Generally public public power groups in the United States pay no taxes at all, but they don't say anything about that."

The report by the two groups, entitled "Phantom Taxes in Your Electric Bill," blamed the situation on tax breaks granted to the utility industry since 1954.

The largest single break is accelerated depreciation, which allows a company to "postpone indefinitely the payment of certain taxes," it said, and "a second tax loophole, the investment tax credit, provides additional tax savings."

Chicago's Commonwealth Edison Co. showed the largest single tax "overcharge"—$110 million—according to the report.

Other utilities listed among the top 10 in terms of "overcharges" were Georgia Power, $91.2 million; Duke Power, $64.3 million; Consolidated Edison, $62.5 million; Alabama Power, $57.9 million; Florida Power and Light, $53.7 million; Public Service Electric and Gas, $51.8 million; Philadelphia Electric, $42.6 million; Carolina Power and Light, $37 million; and Detroit Edison, $35.9 million.

Carolina Action Claims

N.C. Utilities Overcharge By $102 Million

RALEIGH (AP) — A consumer action organization charged Saturday that Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light Co. collected $142 million from customers in 1975 for federal income taxes, but paid the government only $40 million.

Carolina Action released the figures from a study completed by Environmental Action Foundation (EAF) and the National Consumers Information Center.

The statewide organization said Duke Power charged customers nearly $92 million for taxes and paid only $27 million. CP&L, it said, collected more than $40 million while paying only about $3 million.

Officials of Duke Power and CP&L were not immediately available for comment.

Rick Morgan of Washington, research coordinator for the utility project of the EAF, said the study shows that Duke and CP&L were among the top 10 electric companies in the nation that overcharged. He said they ranked 3rd and 9th, respectively.

Carolina Action said the situation exists because of certain accounting methods and tax breaks utilities are permitted to use under federal law. It said the largest tax break, accelerated depreciation, allows a utility to postpone indefinitely the payment of certain taxes. The second tax loophole, the investment tax credit, provides additional tax savings, the organization pointed out in its announcement.

It said these loopholes have the affect of being an interest-free loan from consumers of North Carolina. Paul Allen, a Carolina Action member, said that "unbounded expansion of CP&L has been more to get money out of our pockets than to put electricity and heat into our homes."

Allen said that in its hearing Jan. 11 to examine future electrical growth, the State Utilities Commission should not be deceived by the utility companies' "tricky bookkeeping. They will exaggerate future demand for profits, not for necessity."

Navy Jet Fighter Shot Down During Exercises

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — The shooting down of a Navy jet fighter by a Marine F4 Phantom jet firing unarmed, heat-seeking missiles was still under investigation Saturday, a Marine public affairs officer said.

Capt. James Pendergast of the Cherry Point Marine Air Station said the accident occurred Friday during a joint Marine-Navy exercise in restricted airspace about 40 miles southeast of Cherry Point.

An official with the Atlantic Fleet headquarters, Norfolk, Va., said the Navy A4 Skyhawk was participating in the training.

Since the missile was unarmed, the Navy plane did not explode, but crashed into the ocean. Pendergast said the projectile went through the aircraft.

Navy Lt. Jerome L. Petykowski, 30, stationed at Virginia Beach, Va., was piloting the Skyhawk. He ejected safely and was picked up by a Marine search and rescue helicopter after being in the Atlantic Ocean about an hour. He was taken to the Naval Hospital at Cherry Point and released after being treated for minor injuries.

Marine Col. Mark Gravel said the incident took place when the pilot of the Phantom was maneuvering toward the course of an MQM74 drone being used as a target. He was apparently being directed toward the target by ground radar.

The Marine pilot saw the Navy plane and apparently assumed he was seeing the drone. The Navy plane was towing another target for use in the event that the drone malfunctioned. When the Marine pilot spotted the Skyhawk, he fired two Sidewinder missiles, one of which struck the Navy plane.

Pendergast said the Marine plane was manned by Capt. Chuck Allison, pilot, and 1st Lt. T. E. Helman, radar intercept officer, both from the Beaufort, S.C., Marine Air Stationm.

Navy Cmdr. John Barry, commander of the U.S. Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk, told reporters the Navy plane was on a "routine training mission" when it crashed.

Action Planned Against Highway Patrol Members

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Disciplinary action is planned against members of the North Carolina Highway Patrol in the handling of a roadblock last month in which a Virginia state trooper was killed, Transporation Secretary Perry Greene said Friday.

Greene refused to reveal details of his planned actions. Patrol members who will be disciplined and allegations against them will be revealed next week, he said.

The News and Observer of Raleigh cited unnamed sources as saying that at least one commissioned officer will be disciplined. A commissioned officer was called at home and told of the abduction of the Virginia trooper but went back to sleep, the newspaper said it was told.

Greene and his staff studied a report from the State Bureau of Investigation on the incident and there was also an internal investigation.

Killed Nov. 15 was Virginia State Trooper Garland W. Fisher. The roadblock was on Interstate 85 in Granville County, just north of Durham.

Fisher had been abducted and forced to drive toward Atlanta in his unmarked patrol car from Dinwiddie County, Va. Fisher had stopped a man for investigation of a traffic offense.

Reuben Sonny Conley, 33, of Atlanta, has been charged with murder in North Carolina and kidnaping in Virginia in the case. The murder charge will go to the Granville County grand jury.

Fisher was shot and forced at gunpoint to drive toward Atlanta. North Carolina state highway patrolmen improvised a roadblock with a tractor-trailer rig and the abduction ended there in a hail of gunfire.

Testimony in a probable cause hearing in Oxford showed the shooting began when a North Carolina highway patrolman stopped Fisher's car by firing his shotgun into the windshield.

Greene said Friday that the Highway Patrol failed to use other available law enforcement units to try to rescue Fisher.

Rain Did Not Dampen Parade

By BARBARA MATHEWS
Reflector Staff Writer

A cold December drizzle failed to dampen the spirits of Greenville citizens yesterday morning as thousands lined the streets for the annual Christmas parade.

Greenville's Clown Alley distributed balloons to the children, beauty queens smiled and waved from their cars, Brownie scouts threw candy, and six local high school bands marched to the tunes of familiar carols as the crowd awaited the arrival of the star of the parade.

Lt. J. H. Tripp of the Greenville Police Department estimated the crowd at "nearly 10,000" and noted the turnout was "the best I've ever seen" despite the overcast skies.

Forty-six groups participated in the Christmas parade, and over a dozen floats were featured.

The parade was sponsored by the Greenville Jaycees. Commercial sponsors included the Peps Cola Bottling Co., the Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Burroughs-Wellcome Corp., First Federal Savings and Loan, the Greenville Chamber of Com-

$11 Million Gift To UNC-Chapel Hill

CHAPEL HILL — An $11 million gift to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the largest ever received, was announced Friday by UNC-CH Chancellor Ferebee Taylor.

The bequest came from the estate of Dr. Joseph E. Pogue, a graduate of the university, and his wife, Grace J. Pogue.

In making the announcement the chancellor asked that the Pogue gift be added to the university's Endowment Fund and that income from it be used to augment the university's development program, library acquisitions, faculty research and study projects, the University Research Council, fellowships, scholarships and a "special opportunity" fund to be administered by Taylor.

At the time of his death in 1971 Dr. Pogue was a retired vice president of Chase Manhattan Bank of New York. He was a native of Raleigh and was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of science by UNC-CH in 1963.

Pitt United Fund Over The Top

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

A $34,000 pledge from Burroughs Wellcome Co. and its employees here has pushed the 1976-77 Pitt County United Fund campaign over the top.

Don Parrott, UF campaign chairman, announced that with the Burroughs Wellcome pledge, the campaign has collected in excess of $260,000. The fund goal was set at $248,418, he noted.

"Most of the credit for surpassing the goal is due to the industrial citizens of Pitt County and the outstanding work of the divisional chairmen," Parrott commented.

The campaign, officially launched on Oct. 1, surpassed the set goal in just over two months, aided by several generous pledges and contributions from area industries and their employees.

Last year, the United Fund set a goal of $222,044 and collected $233,432. The 1976-77 goal was a record figure for the Pitt United Fund.

At Burroughs Wellcome, a staff of 65 employees, covering all departments, volunteered to collect UF pledges, it was pointed out. Paul Kelly headed the company campaign as chairman and was assisted by Bernice Lee and Donn Morgan acting as vice chairmen.

Results of the plant-wide solicitation were announced by G. Henry Leslie, plant manager, who commented that, "Our contributing employees will share a deep sense of satisfaction and pride as employee and company contributions of almost $38,000 have been pledged for the benefit of those less fortunate than ourselves."

Combined company and employee gifts by Burroughs Wellcome to counties other than Pitt were: Beaufort ($1,787), Martin ($980.50), Craven ($549), and Edgecombe ($140).

Spanish Official Kidnaped

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Suspected Basque separatists Saturday kidnaped the President of Spain's Council of State —the fourth-ranking government official—in a lightning raid in downtown Madrid only four days before the national referendum on democratic reforms.

The abduction of Antonio Maria de Oriol Urquijo, 63, an arch-conservative and scion of one of Spain's wealthiest and most powerful families, was carried out so quietly and quickly his bodyguards in an adjoining room did not even hear it.

Oriol was snatched from his downtown office near the Prado Art Museum by at least four men carrying submachine guns. They ordered his son and secretary to lay down on the floor and rushed the politician to a waiting car.

N.C. Milk Prices Up

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina housewives are finding higher prices on fresh milk at their supermarkets, the state Milk Commission has found.

Cause of the price increase in the grocery coolers was laid to the commission approving a higher price for raw milk to farmers. The staff of the Milk Commission checked supermarkets in 10 cities and found that most stores raised milk prices between four and 10 cents a gallon.

More Weapons Discovered

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — New caches of military arms and explosives were discovered in the Southern California desert Saturday and federal authorities stepped up their involvement in what is believed to be the largest stockpiling of illegal weapons in U.S. history.

"It keeps snowballing," said a spokesman for the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Deparment. "We don't know where it will end or how much stuff is actually out there."

Fresh finds of hidden military equipment were made Saturday in three separate areas of Southern California—from Lancaster, where six tons of arms and explosives were found in bunkers earlier, to Ontario where some three tons have been seized, to the San Bernardino County desert community of Wrightwood.

In custody in connection with the case is Donald D. Wiggins, 41, Ontario, a self-employed foundryman, who surrendered to authorities Thursday and reportedly led them to a desert area near Lancaster where most of the weapons were found.

Authorities said Wiggins is known to have had past ties with right-wing organizations.

"There is enough to equip a 200-man company of military personnel," Sheriff Peter Pitchess told a news conference prior to Saturday's new finds. "We are satisfied it was placed by a paramilitary organization. It could very likely be a group who planned to overthrow our form of government."

Police in Ontario, acting on a tip, raided Wiggins' home early Saturday and discovered a hidden cellar filled with a submachine gun, machine gun parts, a sawed-off shotgun and ammunition.

"There was enough material to fill the back of a pickup truck," a police spokesman said.

Then, later in the day, San Bernardino County officials reported the discovery of "several" 20-gallon barrels filled with arms and explosives along with gas masks and antitank gun on a road near the small town of Wrightwood. A bomb squad was sent to the scene.

The location was approximately 100 miles northeast of Lancaster, where six tons of weapons and military supplies were found hidden in four bunkers.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department said a link between the two finds could not immediately be established. But he said it was known Wiggins owned property near Wrightwood.

Rhodesian Compromise?

BY JIM ANDERSON

LONDON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland Saturday hammered out a compromise plan designed to save the Rhodesia conference, threatened by what one official called the "tribal dances" of the opposing factions.

Kissinger, on his last foreign tour as secretary of state, met privately with Crosland in an effort to find a compromise to break the deadlock at the Geneva talks and pave a way for creating an interim government to lead the breakaway colony to black majority rule.

Under the compromise they worked out, Britain agreed to send a resident commissioner to act as chief of state during the transitional phase and place Britons in control of the key defense and police ministries.

No British troops would be involved in the British presence.

Officials said they hoped the plan would overcome objections by both black and white negotiators to the original Kissinger plan that called for a mixed black-white interim government under a black prime minister but with the defense and police ministries in the hands of whites.

All four black delegations to the Geneva conference object to whites retaining control of the police and army during the transition period.

YDC Vote For Veto, Right To Succeed For N.C. Governors

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The North Carolina Young Democrats voted Saturday to lobby for legislation giving the governor veto power and the right to succeed himself after hearing a lively debate on the subjects by former Gov. Robert Scott and former House Speaker Jim Ramsey.

The Young Democrats also voted to push for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment in the upcoming session of the North Carolina general assembly.

In the debates, Scott spoke in favor of granting the governor veto power and the right to succeed himself.

Veto power, the former governor said, would make for a better balance of power between the legislative and executive branches of government.

"To say that North Carolina does not need the veto power is to say that the framers of the U.S. Constitution were wrong in granting the President the veto power and that the other 49 states are wrong in the drafting of their constitutions," said Scott.

"What we have here in North Carolina is a situtation where the legislature does in fact erode the powers of the executive branch," he said. "In order to have a proper system of checks and balances, North Carolina does need the veto power."

Scott said the question of a governor succeeding himself is "a question of whether the people of North Carolina would have the right to keep a governor they think has done a good job. Right now they do not have that right."

Ramsey said "you have more representative legislation passed when the governor does not have veto power."

"If the governor had the veto power, then at that point there would be a lot of legislation passed in an attempt to outmaneuver the governor," said Ramsey.

"I think that the fact that the state of North Carolina did not have the veto power during the last four years was the best thing that ever happened to this state to keep the general assembly from playing politics with the executive branch," he said.

To Issue Warrants For Persons Keeping Overdue Library Books

Final notices to delinquents in returning materials to the city libraries in Greenville are now being mailed, Library Director Elizabeth Copeland has announced. The notice informs persons who have not responded to previous notices that "If the books are not returned or restitution made within 72 hours you may expect a warrant to be served by the sheriff of the county in which you reside."

Efforts to have long overdue books as well as other materials returned to the library began last summer. At that time, letters were sent to persons with overdue materials informing them of the new stringent policy and stating that overdue accounts would be turned over to an attorney "who will take legal action to settle the accounts." That same letter also stated that if overdue material was returned with the letter, "no fines will be charged."

According to Ms. Copeland, the first letters resulted in the recovery of some long overdue material.

A second letter, sent a couple of months ago, again brought to the attention of persons with overdue books that North Carolina law G.S. 14-398 makes unlawful containing of public library property "a general misdemeanor if the value of the property is less than $50;" and if the value is more than $50, "it is considered a felony."

This letter was signed by attorney Garry T. Pegram, The letter being sent out now with the 72 hours return of materials stipulation or face being served a warrant, Ms. Copeland said, is the final warning to be issued to those who have not responded to earlier letters.

Selected For G.A. Interne

Susan McIntyre, an ECU student from Morehead City has been selected as one of 12 students from seven campuses who will serve legislative intern during the 1977 session of the General Assembly.

Selected by academic and government leaders, the students will spend 25 hours a week working as staff assistants to legislators and legislative committees while participating in an academic program at NCSU.

Band Boosters Meet Tuesday

The Greenville Band Boosters Club will meet Tuesday, Dec. 14 at 8 p.m. at Rose High School in the Band Room.

At the meeting, a program of Christmas music will be featured with elementary band students under the direction of Ms. Dottie Jo Knight.

All interested persons and music lovers are invited to attend. There is no admission charge.

A.G. Cox PTA Meets Monday

A.G. Cox School P.T.A. will meet Monday, December 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the school multipurpose room. A Christmas music program will be presented by the seventh and eighth grade chorus and the beginning band. Following the program an open house will be held in the new media center.

News Briefs

North Carolina Not Interested

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina is not interested in the federal government taking over Mount Mitchell State Park near Asheville, Gov. Jim Holshouser has told Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe.

Holshouser said in a letter to Kleppe on Friday that the state has no objection to a federal study of the "Mount Mitchell Black Mountain range to consider its feasibility and suitability as a national park."

He said he hoped the study "may identify some changes in land uses which will create additional recreation opportunity, but it is considered unlikely that the State of North Carolina will cede their right, title and interest in Mount Mitchell State Park to the federal government.

Works On Cabinet Selection

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter worked at selecting a Cabinet Saturday in a process described as part of a three-pronged search by himself, Vice President-elect Walter Mondale and talent scout Hamilton Jordan.

Press Director Rex Granum said Carter was "bouncing names (of prospective officeholders) off some of his advisers by telephone."

He said Carter would make no announcement of appointments at least until Tuesday, if then.

Tobacco Stabilization Plan To Be Continued

WASHINGTON (AP) — The usual policy of allowing flue-cured tobacco to be sold competitively from stabilization will continue next year as the U.S. Agriculture Department backed down from an earlier decision to halt the practice for one year.

The department announced on Friday that it has changed its mind. On Nov. 24, the USDA said it had decided to tie sale prices from stabilization to the support prices to protect tobacco farmers' export markets.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. is grower-owned and buys tobacco with federal loans if it won't sell for at least one cent above the support price. The corporation later sells the leaf on the market and any addition profit goes to the farmer.

In a statement issued Friday, the USDA said, "New information supplied by tobacco exporters, manufacturers and growers indicates that tying sales prices to support prices may not stimulate additional exports while causing possible confusion in domestic tobacco marketing."

merce and the Integon Corp.

According to James L. Bullock, Jaycee parade chairman, the parade was a success.

"It really went well," he said.

"It was well-organized this year. The parade got started exactly on time, and all the groups were there and ready to go.

"We had no problems whatsoever. It went smoothly, and we had a good turnout."

The Southern Wayne High School Band took first place in the band competition. J. H. Rose High School took second place, and Washington High School came in third.

The float competition was won by the Miller Brownie troop and the Linda Seykora Brownie troop, who tied for first. The E. B. Aycock Spanish Club float took second place, and the Linda Parham Girl Scout troop float came in third.

Beaufort Open Pit Is Sierra Meeting Topic

Plans for a $250 million dollar open pit phosphate operation in Beaufort County will be the topic to be discussed at a meeting of the Sierra Club, to be held Monday, Dec. 13 at 8 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church on Elm Street.

Speakers scheduled to discuss the topic include Rusty Walker, Director of Public Relations, N.C. Phosphate Corp., Dr. Stanley Riggs of the Geology Dept., East Carolina University, and Douglas Nelson from the N.C. Marine Laboratories, Morehead City.

Myra Sexauer, publicity chairman for the local Sierra Club, notes that the Aug. 1976 is sue of National Wildlife magazine has expressed concern about "the building of a 23,300 foot channel and a ten acre turning basin in the heart of South Creek's most valuable wildlife habitat."

A public hearing on this project is scheduled, to be held by the Corps of Engineers at 7:30 p.m. on December 15 in the auditorium of the Washington High School.

The purpose of the local meeting is to hear facts on the proposed project prior to the public hearing. All interested persons are invited to attend.

Fitting Portrait For County

A portrait of Sir William Pitt, for whom Pitt County is named, is being unveiled at 3 p.m. today at the Pitt County Courthouse.

The portrait was done by William C. Fields III of Fayetteville and was sponsored by the Pitt Historical Society with financial assistance from Pitt County bicentennial funds.

The portrait is a copy of one done by Richard Brompton and originally hung at the Pitt estate in Kent, England. Now the original is at Chatham College in Pittsburgh.

A number of people have been active in obtaining the portrait of the man for whom our county was named. Most prominent among them is Miss Jesse Rountree Moye.

It is proper that the William Pitt portrait will hang in the Pitt County Courthouse and it is most fitting that this unveiling will take place during the nation's bicentennial year.

Well Qualified For The Task At Hand

Sen. John Henley, D-Cumberland, has been named N. C. Senate majority leader for the second term

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, was named assistant majority leader.

Both Sen. Henley and Sen. Royall are well qualified for these positions.

Many Eye Test For Helms

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The political jockeying is well underway among Democrats anxious to test the strength of U.S. Senator Jesse A. Helms, Jr.

The six-year Senate term will be decided in the 1978-off-year election. Helms, a Republican and outspoken conservative, will be completing his first term. The other North Carolina seat in the Senate is held by Democrat Robert Morgan of Lillington, and will not be tested until 1980 under the staggered election system.

Helms, a former newsmans and editorial commentator on Raleigh's channel five is the last Republican in a position of power in North Carolina, Democrats are saying as they gear up for that race. Governor-elect James B. Hunt, Jr., says he will take an active political interest in that race once the Democratic primary has tagged a candidate.

Five Running

At least five prominent contenders are already committed or soon will be:

Raleigh lawyer Hugh Cannon has filed for election, and is already lining up support and financial pledges. He was chief of administration under Gov. Terry Sanford, and is a member of the Sanford law firm. Cannon says he is running on a conservative position and believes a winning candidate must be to the right in order to successfully challenge Helms.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten has been less than secretive about his desire to be a U.S. Senator. The Boone native who worked as a legal counselor to the Watergate Committee chaired by former U.S. Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr., of Morganton, is already at work building the mailing lists needed for a campaign, and sending out newspaper clippings and congratulatory notes to various Tar Heels who are mentioned in their hometown papers for various accomplishments.

Charlotte Banker Luther Hodges, Jr., son of the former governor, is considered a sure candidate and was recently named to head a division of the fund drive for a stadium at East Carolina University, an obvious bid for Eastern recognition. He says he wishes his name were not mentioned prominently in speculation — just now. But later?

In Morganton, the son of the former senator of Watergate fame is considered in the race. Sam Ervin, III, a Superior Court judge, is moving quietly and carefully because of possible problems by getting too active while on the bench, but most observers consider him definitely a candidate.

And from Greensboro, a state senator who is widely regarded as the leading intellect in that chamber is well along the road to running. State Senator McNeill Smith, those close to him insist, will enter the fray. His liberal image will likely provide the bad scope of philosophies from right to left to provide some choices.

Several experienced politicans predict a falling off of candidates before things firm up; expecting that no more than perhaps three candidates will finally face off in the primary.

One reason for that is the lack of funds available due to restrictive campaign funding laws, and to a general reluctance of people to commit money to a political campaign these days.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter: Back To Detente

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Apparent acceptance by President-elect Carter of the Brezhnev-Kissinger explanation for why a SALT II agreement was not signed this year points to precisely. the same course that hard-liners had feared if President Ford were elected.

In a CBS interview Nov. 29, Carter blamed the stalled strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) on "an incompability among the (Ford) cabinet officers" and election year politics. Like Leonid Brezhnev and Henry Kissinger, the President-elect did not mention Soviet refusal to budge an inch on critical points.

This position on SALT, plus a friendlier attitude toward detente by President-elect Carter than was shown by candidate Carter, and the names now falling into place as his national security team add up to a positive reaction to the Kremlin's new peace offensive. The first step could be early negotiation of a SALT II agreement along the lines of one pushed by Secretary of State Kissinger and Chairman Brezhnev and opposed by the Ford Defense Department and Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA).

All this is made less than certain by Carter's willingness to double-reverse any issue, particularly one where he is a novice. Moreover, the fraction of hard-line Democrats in Congress will try to slow down Carter. Nevertheless, current evidence indicates the President-elect moving slightly left in foreign policy as he is moving slightly right in domestic policy.

At issue are two new weapons systems not specifically covered under the SALT II understanding at Vladivostok: the Soviet Backfire bomber and the U.S. cruise missile. Typically, the Russians want an agreement permitting unlimited Backfire production and virtually curtailing the cruise missile.

Indeed, had President Ford won, he and Kissinger were ready to push just such a treaty, spruced up by some face-savers. Carter's campaign statements, while cryptic, suggested he might sacrifice the cruise missile — perhaps too severe a loss for the U.S. arsenal — but only in return for the Backfire bomber also being included under the strategic weapons limit.

Carter's comments to Walter Cronkite Nov. 29 represent a shift. Asked about unpleasant surprises in transition briefings, Carter replied somewhat unresponsively but most significantly: "The lack of progress in SALT because of an incompatibility among the cabinet officers and their opinions about what ought to be done...I can understand that the election year in our country is a time for delay, and for an absence of commitment to the resolution of a problem."

Cronkite next posed a remarkable question: "Have you learned anything that would give you cause to believe the Soviet Union has as much right to be suspicious of us and our motives as we have to be suspicious of them?"

Instead of snapping back a flat no, Carter paused and said, "I don't know how to answer that question," then, again unresponsively but significantly, revealed he had asked Kissinger whether the Russians had ever lied to him. "And he said no," Carter reported, adding: "I know that one major falsehood could precipitate an international crisis, but to know that has never occurred in Secretary Kissinger's experience is a very encouraging thing."

This extraordinary exchange reflects Kissinger's fabled persuasiveness. One of many instances where, contrary to Kissinger, the Soviets did not tell the truth directly affects SALT. Brezhnev's claim of a 1,000-mile range for the Backfire bomber is one-third the softest-line CIA estimates; the more accurate range may be 6,000 miles.

Carter was reacting favorably to the Kremlin's peace offensive. The message that Moscow plans no "test" for the new President but wants to pursue detente was carried to him by such disparate couriers as Averell Harriman, 85-year-old Democratic pioneer for detente, and William Simon, Republican Secretary of the Treasury.

Whereas Ford-Kissinger desires for a soft-line SALT II agreement were opposed at the Pentagon by Dr. James Schlesinger and later by Donald Rumsfeld, there may be no such counterweight in the Carter administration. Dr. Harold Brown of Cal Tech, frontrunner to become Secretary of Defense, is an ardent arms controller and foe of the cruise missile. Secretary of State-designate Cyrus Vance is not renowned for swimming upstream.

Schlesinger returning as Secretary of Defense could counteract all this. But that prospect appears ebbing, with more talk today of Schlesinger becoming intelligence chief. Even in that less influential post, he could insure that the new President receives unadorned intelligence about the Soviets that could inhibit what is becoming a mad rush back to detente.

RELIGION IS HUMAN NATURE

We often hear people say, when they hear of a case of ingratitude, faithlessness, or diswoyalty, "Well, that's human nature." But they seldom call it human nature when they encounter a noble deed of sacrifice of altruism.

Actually, the goodness in mankind is just as much a reflection of human nature as evil propensities. No graver mistake can be made about humanity as a whole than to imagine that it is motivated exclusively by selfish interests. History abounds with instances of selfless actions which reveal the real spiritual nobility of which mankind is capable.

If you are cynical adout your fellow mankind, ask yourself whether the affection of your mother and father for you is based on self-interest, or whether your feeling for your best friend has a dollar and cents value.

You will soon see that in spite of notorious and frequent aberrations, human relations are based on love, trust, and good faith.

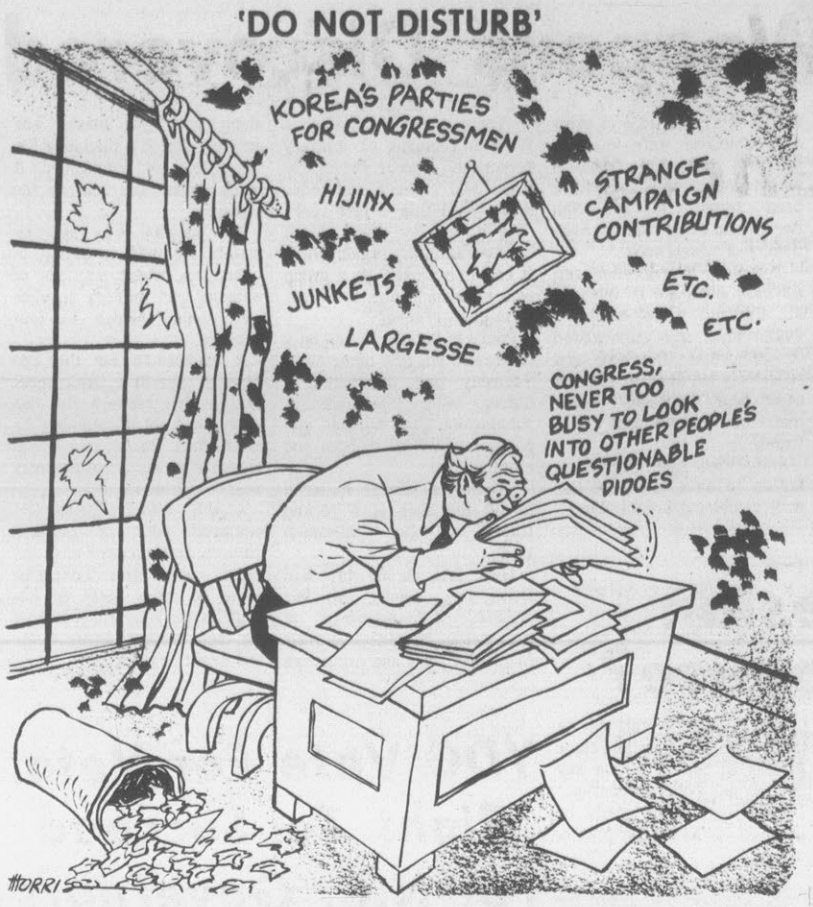
'DO NOT DISTURB'



By ALVIN TAYLOR

Sunday Morning Notes

Something called a scanner came into The Daily Reflector offices recently, and another era in newspaper production began.

The thing actually reads the typed copy which newspaper reporters produce, displays it on a television screen, where an operator makes corrections which have been inked in by reporters and editors. Then the signals are transmitted to a Videosetter which exposes the characters on photographic paper. When this is developed you have the actual type which the reader sees as columns of news stories in the printed paper each day.

The scanner eliminates the necessity of operators typing out each story, that the reporters write, into paper tape which previously ran the Videosetter.

The tape punchers, in turn eliminated the old Linotype operators who "set" stories in metal lines of type from which newspapers were printed. Linotype operators in their time eliminated compositors who laboriously picked up each individual letter by hand to form the lines and news stories which made up newspapers of the day.

The entire transformation in typesetting has taken around 100 years. Before that there was little change from the invention of moveable type.

There are lots of legends about the metal type days. There is the story about the time when The Daily Reflector was moving its offices from the east side of Evans Street to the west side. Type was still being assembled one letter at a time. An employe was carrying the front page of the paper across the street to be printed on the press in the new location. The page form was heavy so he balanced on his head. Unfortunately his head went through and the tiny bits of metal scattered along Evans Street.

Or the time, after Linotype came into use, when an employe was placing one of the heavy front page forms on the printing press used at the time. As he was about to push the form in position on the press, the entire morning's work fell out on the floor. That meant several hours' work straightening it all out.

And, of course, there were countless times when page make-up men dropped

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

As a leader of a very fine and hard-working 4-H Club of Pitt County, I would like to share a point of deep concern.

There are 25 clubs in the county and all are hard workers. They are continually doing deeds of interest for Pitt Countians. These young people are our citizens of tomorrow.

I would like to see a column set aside each week to relate to the public news of our 4-H activities.

At the present time some of the clubs are involved in a program at the Extension office entitled, "Attitudes Toward the Aged and the Aging." An elderly person is being interviewed by each club member. This is bringing the young and the elderly in closer contact with each other with hopes that each will be understood. This is a step toward closing the "generation gap" we hear so much about.

I feel that somewhere in your paper a column can be set aside for 4-H clubs. We are not asking for free publicity, but we would like to be heard. It's always nice to hear good news, especially about our teenagers.

Each club has a reporter. If we can have a place in your paper, it would be their responsibility to forward the news to you.

Thank you for taking the time to read my letter and letting me express my opinion.

Mrs. Jean Bullock
Falkland Hustler 4-H Club

Editor's note: The Daily Reflector frequently gets requests for columns on various organizations' and agencies' activities. Rather than allotting large blocks of space on a regular basis, we prefer to include articles whenever and wherever needed. We do encourage the submission of articles on activities of clubs such as yours and seek to use all we possibly can.

To the editor:

Today I received your editorial of Nov. 11 entitled "Energy Is Top Carter Problem." Your point that our energy situation is serious is certainly one that the American public is not aware of. You have provided a real service to your readers by discussing this problem.

I hope you will have the opportunity to discuss how the divestitute issue will affect our energy situation in some future editorial. As you know all these various energy subjects such as delayed OCS development, threats to break up the industry, counter-productive regulation of natural gas and price regulation all have played a major part in the process of making the United States 42 per cent dependent on foreign oil.

I am an East Carolina graduate and Greenville seems to be my second home because I am on the Alumni Board of Directors, the Pirate Club Board of Directors and have season football tickets. Thank you again for your fine editorial.

Fame Came Late

LONDON (UPI) — When the French government recently suggested a definitive exhibition of the works of sculptor Henry Moore, it was talking in terms of statues worth at least $35 million spread around the Orangerie of the Louvre.

The French wanted to outdo even the great retrospective of Moore's masterpieces staged brilliantly in natural settings in Florence in 1972. At 78, famous and wealthy, Moore finds all this very gratifying but Yorkshiremen are noted for quiet humor and no one would forgive him a chuckle or two. For it was not always thus. Success came late to Moore; only in the last quarter of a century has he gained the recognition most critics agree should have arrived much earlier. Until then he could not sell enough to live on so he taught art for 14 years at a salary of five pounds a week.

He spent $153 in materials for his first exhibition when he was 30 and sold a grand total of $51 worth. Now his name alone can lift any of his works into the thousands of dollars class.

Moore was interested in art at an early age and his imagination was fired particularly by reading about Michelangelo.

"I wanted to be a sculptor in the days when people said there was no such thing as an English sculptor," he once said. "It was like an Eskimo saying he wanted to be a world tennis champion."

While his father did not share this skepticism he insisted that his son learn to teach so that at least he would be sure of eating. He was wounded in the first World War and went to art school afterwards. There were no sculpture classes so one was started especially for him. This intense concentration on his talents soon found him in the Royal College of Arts.

His striking family groups, his use of space (holes, said the uninitiated) in his statues gradually won wide acceptance, decorations from several coun-

Frederick Arthur George VI, the Duke of York, became the King of England today when King Edward renounced the throne to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The brothers of Windsor, George VI, the King, and Edward, the man, enacted a dual drama of duty and freedom today. The king was amid the trappings and pomp of another age, the man, alone on the windlashed decks of a British warship awaiting the journey to meet his betrothed.

The Japanese news agency said today that Chinese marshall Hsi-liang who kidnapped Chang Kai Shek, the premiere of China at Sianfu has issued a circular telegram demanding immediate war against Japan by the Chinese National Government.

Regulations 'Bother' Business

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In almost any survey of what bothers business people, you will find high on the list, if not in first place, the difficulties of dealing with government regulations.

A National Chamber of Commerce survey this year ranked "government regulations in general" as the most urgent business problem. The National Federation of Independent Business ranked regulations third.

You might conclude from this that government is the enemy of business, a monster that stalks its every move, destroying the free economy, devouring profits and neutralizing the competitive spirit....

Until you realize how comfortable each can be with the other.

The head of a large airline remarks that it would be madness to eliminate the Civil Aeronautics Board and permit open competition. Brokers argue that competition is ruining the securities business.

Small businessmen who often complain about the burdens of regulation, nevertheless oppose repeal of the Robinson-Patman Act, which tended to reduce competition among retailers.

Consumer advocates demand deregulaton of prices for air, rail, sea and truck transportation, but then seek federal chartering for large corporations, a move that would subject the markets to even more regulation.

All these examples were cited recently by a regulator, Roderick Hills, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, one of whose jobs has been, ironically, to introduce more competition to securities trading.

As Hills views the battle between competitive business and government regulation, we are destined to have more of the latter unless:

—The business community can convince itself and the public that free market competition is a far better regulator than government....

—The public is assured that the business community will act responsibly if freed from some existing regulations.

While business rails against government regulation, Hills suggests that business often seeks government regulation and benefits from the reduction in competition that can result.

Perhaps, he suggested to the Economic Club of New York, business isn't as committed to competition as it would have you believe. Perceiving this, he said, much of the public also shows a disinterest in free enterprise.

Regulation, he indicates, often originates in the absence of competition. And it often persists because of the importance to some businesses of being protected from competition.

Question: Does business believe in itself? In competition? Does it support government activity in the marketplace when that activity bails out a particular company?

And oppose it only when that activity does not serve to make life easier for it?

Spiritual Experiences

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — One of the less explored aspects of spiritual life in America is what might be described as the "religious experience" — an "other worldly" feeling of union with a Divine Being.

Nearly 75 years ago, William James made the first attempt to study this phenomenon which he describes in his classic, "The Varieties of Religious Experience." Now, by means of national scientific surveys of public opinion, it is possible to take a more systematic approach to this aspect of religion.

From such a survey a surprising finding emerges. As many as three in 10 adults, 31 per cent, nationwide report having had such an experience at some point in their lives. Also most are able to recreate details of the experience—even the exact date of the occurrence.

Profound Effects

Such an experience appears to have a profound effect on the outlook and direction of a person's life. A 29-year-old office worker in Lynwood, Wash., recounted the following experience to a Gallup interviewer.

"I was reading the Bible one night and couldn't sleep. A vision appeared to me. I was frozen, motionless. I saw an unusual light that wasn't there — but was. There was a greater awareness of someone else being in that room with me. And ever since, it is as if someone else is walking with me. This happened in 1973."

Many recount experiences at the time of crises, often in answer to prayers. One young mother recounts this experience:

"My little boy was run over by a car and critically . injured. The doctors said he was dying. But I prayed to God for his life and I felt in my entire being a joyous sensation. I knew then he would be spared. God answered my prayer."

A 37-year-old housewife from the west Coast told a Gallup interviewer, "It's indescribable, except that all of a sudden you have no more doubts that there is a God—no more questions — you just know!"

One man describes his dramatic experience this way:

"I was in the hospital with phlebitis and my heart ' stopped. I experienced a feeling of a spiritual existance ' after death."

One of the most interesting aspects of these phenomena is that they happen to the non-churched and the non-religious as well as to persons who attend church regularly or who say religion plays an important role in their lives.

The following question was put to a representative sample of U.S. adults:

"Would you say that you have ever had a religious or mystical experience, that is, a moment of sudden religious insight or awakening?"

A total of 31 per cent replied in the affirmative. Interpreted in numbers of adults, this percentage would represent approximately 47 million.

It should be pointed out that the focus of the survey question is on religious experiences of a sudden or dramatic nature; the percentage of 31 per cent would undoubtedly be much higher if the question had been designed to include religious experiences of general nature as well.

Following are the results by groups, showing remarkably little difference in terms of the sex and educational level of respondents:

Per Cent Saying Have Had A 'Religious Experience'
NATIONWIDE	31%
Women	34
Men	27
College background	29
High school	31
Grade school	30

The experiences described tend to fall into the following general categories:

1. An "other-worldly" feeling of union with a Divine Being, carrying withit the conviction of the forgivenessof sins and salvation 10%
2. Dramatic spiritual awakening related to nature (sunset, stars, the universe,life itself, etc.) 5
3. Experiences related to healing 5
4. Experiences involving visions,voices and dreams 4
5. A sudden insight and turning to Godin a moment of crisis (death or near-death, war, car accident, etc.) 2

Unable to describe experience 5

What Is Significance?

What do the survey findings tell us about the spiritual state of the nation?

At a time when the charge of superficiality is sometimes levelled at religion in America, it is reassuring to some observers to discover that religious faith for many people appears to rest upon what is probably the firmest foundation — that of personal experience.

Whether one regards these experiences as in the nature of self-delusion or wishful thinking — the important fact remains that, for the persons concerned, such experiences are very real and meaningful.

Most important perhaps is the finding that these religious experiences are widespread and not limited to particular groups. The devout would say that God has opened a way to find Him, regardless of one's circumstances in life -regardless of whether one is rich or poor, educated or uneducated, churched or unchurched.

The results reported today are based on in-home interviews with 1,553 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Aug. 27-30.

galleys of metal type — something that infuriated Linotype operators who saw hours of their work hopelessly pied (scrambled) on the floor.

So much for the old days. We newspaper workers can only take comfort in the knowlege that at times all those computers go haywire, too. When they do,the things they put into type make the scrambling of metal type days look simple by comparison.

Industrialists Don't Give Washington Orders

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

A fine fluttering arose a couple of weeks ago in the dovecotes of the publishing business when Norman Cousins killed a piece by John Hersey. In all the subsequent yawping about "censorship," not much attention was paid to what Hersey had to say. In my own view, what Hersey had to say was mostly, though not entirely, hogwash.

Cousins is editor of Saturday Review. Hersey is a justifiably acclaimed novelist and journalist. In working up a pre-inaugural edition of the magazine, Cousins had an idea: Let Hersey write the Inaugural Address he would like to hear President Carter deliver. Hersey turned in his copy and Cousins didn't like it. So Cousins paid the author his fee and spiked the piece.

I have been in the writing business all my life, and it is beyond me what the howling is about. As an editor, I many times bought, paid for, and killed pieces that failed to meet expectations. As a writer, I have had plenty of my own stuff killed. These misfortunes are an inescapable aspect of editorial judgment. Hersey has a right to free expression, but he has no right to have his work printed in Saturday Review. If he wants guaranteed publication, let him round up five million bucks and put out his own magazine. Or let him peddle his rejected piece somewhere else.

This is what Hersey did in the case at hand. He offered it to New Republic, which seized gleefully upon it, with the result that an eager public was not denied Hersey's brilliant insights after all. Hersey's theme was the greed, immorality, and general viciousness of American industry. His insights weren't all that brilliant. The piece was little more than a shrill diatribe; it embodied a view of business that was earnest, passionate, and cockeyed.

If Hersey had drafted his polemic with some sense of artistic restraint, the whole contretemps might have been avoided. Speaking simply as one conservative, I have no quarrel with his premise: In today's global economy, American multinational corporations exercise power; the great multinationals exercise great power; and great power is likely to be greatly abused.

The past couple of years have provided abundant documentation of corporate evils that richly deserve denunciation — bribery, corruption, price-fixing, shoddy practices, gross contempt for the public interest. But unless one's purpose is merely to write an anti-business screed — which is hardly the function of a President's Inaugural Address — the evils ought to be kept in a reasoned perspective.

Hersey's perspective provides the distorted image of a mirror house. He indicts business for "keeping the government from taking effective action for the, safety and well-being of the citizenry," and he cites a string of examples. But he begs the questions. He acknowledges no room for disagreement with his own opinions.

For instance, he denounces business for seeking a slowdown of controls of automotive pollutants; but in the view of many responsible persons, industry's objections to some of the proposed controls were entirely valid. He indicts the electric power industry for "inadequate safety precautions in nuclear plants," but on the record the precautions have been amazingly adequate. He deplores Mr. Ford's veto of the strip-mining bill, but roughly half the Congress regarded that bill, viewed in its entirety, as a bad bill.

Hersey is aghast at skyrocketing hospital costs. So are most of us, but to attribute this to business influence is sophomoric. He says flatly that federal consumer protection is "nonexistent," which is simply not true. He charges that business profits are "on the wing," but in terms of constant dollars it is not so. He imputes to business alone, mentioning no other influences, the "immorality and greed" that permeate Washington. His notion is that the business community "manages" the government.

This is a notion that must startle the typical businessman who now strangles in the red tape and regulations imposed by this self-same government he is supposed to be bossing around. Industrialists of my acquaintance are not giving orders to Washington; they are glumly taking them in the form of controls that grow constantly more pervasive. Hersey surely is entitled to his own perfervid view of things, but Cousins, as I see it, had both the right and the authority to kill a woefully imbalanced piece.

Wimpy Lassiter: Pool Is The Toughest Sport

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. — Wimpy Lassiter pines for the day when he'll be able to shoot another high-stakes game of nine ball or straight. It's been a long time since he has. He's down on his prospects, but not his skill.

In fact, it is precisely his skill which sends most pool devotees to rack their cue sticks. "Pool's a funny game," he explained recently at his home in Elizabeth City, North Carolina. "If you happen to catch somebody you can beat, you won't beat him but once or twice. Then, perhaps, you'll never play him again. Good players don't want to play each other because it's too tough.

"I've only played one man since 1948 for big stakes. You see, you've got conditions. You're going to get them on a tough table, and make em play for a long time, and, if you can, you make em play for their own money. So it's not going to be so easy. They've got easier customers than me, so I can see why they won't play me." Wimpy is a tough customer on the green.

He has been shooting pool for 45 years. He won the world championships in 1955, 1957, 1963 and 1967. He lost in 1972, the last year a world championship was held.

He started shooting pool at an early age when the confectionery, up the street from where he still lives, fixed up a table. He liked the game right away.

"Prior to that — heck — I played baseball. I could do almost anything with a baseball. I enjoyed that and slingshots, you know, like a young boy does. But when pool entered, I gave up all sports. You know, it just caught me; it fascinated me.

"My mother and father didn't want me to go in the pool room. Everybody — so-called — looked down on the pool room. It's just a game. The pool room is just a meeting place.

"But I kept on playing. Oh, I kept on playing. My folks finally gave up on me when I was about sixteen. I had to play.

"We played for fifteen cents a game. Four and five in it and it was big money — you know, to win forty-five or sixty cents a game. I know. I worked in a grocery for awhile and made eight and a third cents an hour, a quarter every three hours."

Wimpy, whose given name is Luther Clement, got his nickname just about the time he got good enough to be able to line up his shot, turn his head, shoot, drop the ball, and continue that way for as many as 40 or 50 shots before missing. He was once timed pocketing 15 balls in 45 seconds.

"A school janitor, Mr. Wiggins, named me that. It was in that era when the cartoon Wimpy and Popeye and Olive Oil had just come out. I ate thirteen hot dogs one afternoon at the baseball game, and drank twelve Orange Crushes. It stuck with me all these years."

So did his virtuosity. Now he's 58 and can't get a hustle. His picture is in all the record books. He's been on television. Pool shooters give him a wide berth. At first when he was a boy, pros came to Elizabeth City to shoot him. Gradually, he had to start looking for games: in nearby Edenton, then Kinston, Greensboro, up to Washington, D.C., Norfolk, Virginia, and Charleston, West Virginia.

"All the great players would congregate and make games in Charleston," he recalled wistfully. "They don't hardly do that anymore. It's a thing of the past."

Wimpy took his cue stick and $20,000 to Las Vegas four years ago. He spent three days trying to find someone to play for high stakes. "I didn't get a taker. Not a taker! That's hard to believe, because every player in the world was there, and if you are going to get somebody to play you for money, it's going to be in Vegas."

So, to keep some money in his wallet, Wimpy plays a few exhibitions. But neither the games nor the traveling appeal to him. "The public wants to see trick shots. And anybody can make trick shots. But if you run a hundred balls or so, they'll say, 'Oh, that was nothing.'' They don't realize how difficult it is. Pool is the toughest sport there is.

"I'm 58, and it looks like to me some of them young cats would come after me. I can get a whole lots of money to play pool with. I can get thousands and thousands of dollars. But none comes after me. They always fly over Elizabeth City and never fly into it."

So Wimpy wonders what will become of him. His life, his identity, is pool. "It's the only thing I know — the only thing I can do well."

Somehow, The Perfect Tree Just Eludes Us

Every year we try to find the perfect Christmas tree. Every year we fail. Two years ago the branches of the one we bought had been cleverly arranged to conceal the fact that the tree had been attacked by a beaver. Last year's tree had termites. I was determined that this year's tree would be different.

"We're going to buy our tree tonight," I told Phillip on Dec. 1st.

"I haven't even recovered from Thanksgiving, yet," he said. "Can't this wait a few weeks?"

"No, it can't. I just read an article on choosing the perfect Christmas tree, and it says that all the trees are cut at the same time in November. So if you want one that's not dried out, you better get it now. The sooner you put it in water, the better."

Phillip couldn't fight such wisdom, so after supper the three of us went out to find a nice, moist tree. Unfortunately, the only thing on the tree lot that was moist was Meg. Furthermore, it was freezing cold outside. It was not a good night to choose a tree. But Phillip and I dutifully examined each tree while Meg amused herself by forcibly dripping kisses on some poor child half her size. Finally, we found a tree that looked suitable.

"It doesn't seem to have any holes," Phillip said through blue lips.

"Let's see how it looks decorated," I said, blowing to form a few icicles on its branches. "Now shake it to see if the needles stay on."

He gave me an icy glance. "Are you kidding? If I were shaking any harder, I could generate electricity. And we need some, considering how dark it is on this lot. I can't see a thing. Only an idiot would come out on a night like tonight. Let's go home."

"Wait a minute," I said. "I haven't finished looking. This one seems to be a little dry."

"I said, 'Let's go home!' "

"Don't you want the best tree we can possibly buy? Do you want to have to cover up faults instead of concentrating on enhancing the tree's good points when we start decorating?"

"Listen. If we don't buy this tree," he shivered, "the only things you're going to be decorating this Christmas are the potted plants in your hospital room."

We bought the tree. And sure enough, the second we handed over the check, the tree started shedding. By the time we got it home, it no longer resembled a tree. Instead, it looked like an emaciated reindeer. It had been cut in November all right — November, 1975.

"Just look at this mess!" I cried after we hauled the tree through the door. "It's just awful. I told you, but, no, you wouldn't listen. So now, what have you got to say for yourself?"

Durable Brezhnev At 70 Is Still Supreme In Soviet Union

BY CHARLES P. WALLACE

MOSCOW (UPI) — At an age when many statesmen retire to reflect on their past glories, Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev enjoys greater power and prestige than ever before.

Brezhnev celebrates his 70th birthday Dec. 19, and has defied pundits who predicted his decline through waning political strength or physical infirmity.

Although he has not escaped maladies which afflict the aged, Brezhnev has displayed remarkable vitality lately.

Others in the aging leadership, notably Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, appear to be curtailing their work because of disability. Brezhnev's health shows no visible signs of serious impairment.

Politically, he is the supreme figure in the so-called collective Kremlin leadership.

Brezhnev's position has generated a rising pitch of official adulation, leading some Western observers to speak of a "personality cult," a phrase once reserved for dictator Josef Stalin.

Few observers doubt that Brezhnev's 70th birthday will be used as the takeoff point for even more emphatic praise. Rumors abound that leading poets have been commissioned to draft paeans for the occasion. There was even talk of a theater company producing a play about Brezhnev's life, but those plans apparently were scrapped.

At the very least it seems likely Brezhnev will be given his third Hero of Socialist Labor gold star, which would make it legally possible for a statue of him to be built in Moscow while he is still alive.

During the parade marking the Nov. 7 anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution this year, every third person appeared to be carrying a portrait of Brezhnev.

While speculation was rampant that he was on the verge of stepping down, Brezhnev as party general secretary dominated the party's 25th congress in February with a speech establishing the Kremlin line on foreign policy, domestic affairs and ideology.

Three months later, following the death of Defense Minister Andrei Grechko, Brezhnev was named a marshal of the Soviet Union.

The official press disclosed at the time that Brezhnev heads a national defense council, which appears to make him de facto commander in chief.

On the day of his military promotion (Brezhnev had been made a general of the army the preceding year), a bronze bust of him was unveiled during a nationally televised ceremony from his home town of Dneprodzerzhinsk in the Ukraine.

The timing of the events made the collective leadership seem a great deal less collective.

Nonetheless, Brezhnev seems to have avoided going so far out on a limb that others in the leadership will attempt to cut him down, as he helped do to the late Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev in 1964.

When the Soviet grain harvest was ruined by drought last year, the blame was directed at Agriculture Minister Dmitry Polyansky.

The harvest this year is a bumper crop, and it was Brezhnev who broke the news and received much of the praise.

Kirilenko called Brezhnev "vozhd" (chief), a term which was applied to Lenin and Stalin, but never was used for Khrushchev.

"You more than anyone," Kirilenko told Brezhnev, "raised the greatness of our land and wisely changed the development of the world in the direction of detente and consolidation of strong peace so that you won the deep love of millions of people on earth."

Brezhnev has led his country longer than Lenin or Khrushchev.

While no one outside the Kremlin inner circle can be sure, Brezhnev seems to be in good shape for a man of his age.

In addition to his trips to Yugoslavia and Romania, he visited Berlin in June and has received dozens of foreign visitors in recent months.

His last serious health problem is usually traced to two years ago, when he vanished from public life for nearly two months. Kremlin officials told diplomats he had suffered a "cold-type illness."

Whatever the real problem, Brezhnev returned to work looking tanned and rested.

Following his mysterious illness, the chain-smoking Brezhnev gave up cigarettes on doctor's orders.

He is increasingly bothered by a tendency to slur his speech. Some analysts took this as a sign of serious ailment — possibly cancer of the jaw. Others felt it could be due to poorly fitting false teeth.

A minor stir was caused when Brezhnev was seen wearing a hearing aid in Yugoslavia. He has been wearing it above his ear for two years, but those outside his immediate reach rarely have seen it.

Speculation about Brezhnev's health invariably leads to talk about his eventual departure from the scene.

Although none of his predecessors voluntarily stepped aside, the feeling persists that Brezhnev will elect to hand over power without upheaval.

If he does it soon, analysts believe Kirilenko could serve as interim leader while the transition is under way.

Prostestors March During Nobel Prize Ceremonies

The only Nobel the United States did not win was the peace prize, which was not awarded this year.

During the awards ceremony Friday, some 2,000 demonstrators marched outside the hall to protest the awarding of the economics prize to Milton Friedman of the University of Chicago. Protesters claimed Friedman supports the right-wing military government in Chile, an allegation he has denied.

Inside the hall, where King Carl XVI Gustaf presented the prizes, a single demonstrator in white tie and tails jumped up from his seat and shouted "Friedman go home!" and "Long live the Chilean people!" The incident occurred just two minutes before the ceremony was to begin, and the man was quickly hustled away.

Nobel Foundation chairman Sune Bergstrom, commenting on the all-American field of recipients, said, "The American predominance has now presumably attained its apogee."

Friedman, who ignored the outburst in the hall, said of Bergstrom's comment: "I hope he's wrong, but he may be right. It should be emphasized that we've led these awards over the years because of our open immigration policy. Now that's changed. It isn't what it should be."

Baruch Blumberg, one of the two winners of the medicine award, said of the American sweep: "It's our concern that it continues. But I wonder if it's possible now that basic, not goal-directed, research is getting less support from the government."

In remarks at the banquet following the ceremony, literature laureate Saul Bellow said: "There are not many things on which the world agrees. But everyone I think acknowledges the importance of a Nobel Prize.... I acknowledge the honor of this award with profound gratitude."

The other prize recipients were:

Burton Richter of Stanford University and Samuel C.C. Ting of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for physics; William N. Lipscomb of Harvard for chemistry, and D. Carlton Gajdusek of the National Institute for Neurological Diseases, who shared the prize for medicine with Blumberg.

1974 Coastal Act Being Challenged

SWAN QUARTER, N.C. (AP) — The constitutionality of North Carolina's 1974 Coastal Management Act is being challanged by some 75 farmers and fishermen.

The challenge is in the form of a suit filed in Hyde County Superior Court Thursday. The suit claims the act is unconstitutional because it applies to only 20 counties and the state constitution requires laws to apply statewide, said Darris Koonce, attorney for the group.

Still pending are suits making the same allegations which were filed by the Carteret County Board of Commissioners and a private group from that county which calls itslf Citizens to Save Our Lands.

On Oct. 8, the Carteret County Commissioners filed a suit charging that the law gives vaguely defined powers to the Coastal Resources Commission. The suit questions the commission's ability to "deprive the county and other landowners" of their property without adequate compensation.

The act sets up a system of regulating land use in the 20 coastal counties and is aimed at protecting the coastal environment. It provides for permits from the state and county levels to control development of fragile areas.

David Stick, chairman of the Coastal Resources Commission, set up to enforce the act, said recently the suits will not slow the work of his group which, he said, has a mandate from the General Assembly. The commission is attempting to identify fragile area and establish permit agencies.

Defendants in the latest suit are the state Department of Natural and Economic Resources, the Coastal Resources Commission and the Hyde County Planning Board.

The suit charges that the law is a "private or special act not within the meang of the constituion." It further alleges that the act discriminates between landowners in that it puts restrictions on those under the act with no restrictions on landowners not under the act.

Contractor Allowed To Correct Error

RALEIGH (AP) — Because engineers for the state Department of Transportation said a construction company could otherwise be driven out of business, the State Transportation Board has agreed to allow the firm to correct what it decided was an honest error in submitting a bid.

Blythe Industries of Charlotte had unintentionally underestimated the project by $800,000, company and department officials said Friday at a board meeting. The project is in Gov. Jim Holshouser's home county of Wautaga and Friday's meeting was the board's last during Holshouser's term of office.

During the meeting, the board approved 36 projects in 30 counties worth $34.9 million, including the Watauga County project. That brought value of road contracts awarded this year to more than $200 million.

Blythe's error was on a project near Boone which calls for 5.2 miles of paving and grading on U.S. 321. The company had mistakenly underestimated the cost of grading and paving by $800,000.

Blythe's bid was $5.46 million and the department's engineers had estimated the cost at $6.26 million. The next lowest bid was for $6.81 million.

The board voted to let Blythe have the contract, expecting courts to recognize the mistake as an honest error if there was legal action. The engineers told the board that Blythe probably would go out of business if it had to forfiet its bid bond because of the error.

Contract Awarded To Develop New Helicopter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration is going ahead with development of an Army attack helicopter that could cost $3.6 billion. But officials deny the move is intended to influence President-elect Carter's decision on production of the aircraft.

The Army on Friday awarded a $317.7 million contract to Hughes Helicopters to develop a more powerful tank-attack helicopter. The Army wants to build 536 of the helicopters, the first to be ready for combat in about six years.

Officials said it would still be up to the incoming Carter administration to decide whether full production will be authorized.

However, if Carter vetoed the project, the government would have to pay a penalty in cancellation charges to the contractor.

Carter has not stated his opinion of the proposed helicopter.

On Dec. 2, the Pentagon awarded $704.9 million in contracts for production of the highly controversial B1 Air Force bomber, putting Carter in the position of having to roll back a program that is already under way if he decides against the bomber. Carter had said during the campaign he didn't think the B1 was needed now, but has since added that he hasn't made a final decision.

As for the helicopters, Asst. Army Secretary Edward A. Miller denied any speed up in scheduling that would make it more difficult for Carter to block the project.

"We are on schedule within one day," he said. He said there had been testing of competitive helicopter prototypes throughout the summer, and the development award was made at this time as planned last June.

Hughes Helicopters won the contract over Bell Helicopter Textron. Miller said the Hughes firm promised a better performing aircraft and projected a lower cost for the entire project, including development and production.

The proposed helicopters will be able to fight at night and in bad weather, unlike present helicopter gunships, and will be armed with a new Hellfire anti-tank missile with double the range of current weapons, Miller said.

The Army is also expected to decide before the end of the year on a second new helicopter which eventually could cost $3.4 billion for more than 1,100 aircraft. Its purpose would be transport and it would replace the UH-1 "Huey" which was used extensively in Vietnam.

First White House Of Confederacy Opened Again

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Its $250,000 facelift almost complete, the First White House of the Confederacy is again open to the public—with the best wishes of President-elect Jimmy Carter.

To the strains of "Dixie" from a local fife and drum corps and with a Civil War vintage canon thundering a salute, the one-time residence of Jefferson Davis, the one—and only—president of the Confederacy, reopened its doors Friday.

"We all love and cherish the involvement in our history a hundred years ago," Gov. George C. Wallace told a crowd of about 200 persons at the historical landmark, closed for renovation since last spring.

But, he added, "we're glad the breeach has been healed and the people of this nation live in peace and tranquility."

Wallace read a telegram from Carter congratulating the First White House Association for the three-year restoration project that saved the 150-year-old, two-story structure from ruin.

"This comes at a time during our Bicentennial year when all Americans are reflecting with pride upon our great history and heritage that today brings us together as one united nation and one great people," Carter said in the message.

French Senior Counselor Was Murfreesboro Visitor

MURFREESBORO, N. C. (AP) — The senior counselor of the French Embassy in Washington visited this small northeastern North Carolina community Saturday to pay his government's respects in memory of Gen. Lafayette.

Murfreesboro was a stopping place for the Revolutionary War general when he visited this country in 1825.

The embassy official, Jean Pierre Masset, was at his diplomatic best as he entered Chowan College's Marks Hall for a lecture on French economy.

He was confronted by one of a number of demonstrating Iranian students who identified themselves as members of the Confederation of Iranian Students.

They were protesting the jailing in Paris of two Iranian students following an altercation with police on Nov, 3. They also claimed on handbills that four Iranian students had been deported after the incident.

Later in the day, he presented Murfreesboro with 21 regimental flags symbolic of the 21 regiments that fought under Lafayette with Gen. George Washington's forces in the American Revolution.

Others chosen for the honor were Savannah, Ga., and Yorktown, the Tidewater Virginia community where British Gen. Cornwallis surrendered.

Chrysler Corp. Will Challenge Recall Order

AN EXPECTANT CROWD — awaited the arrival of Santa Claus Saturday morning as the annual Greenville Christmas parade celebrated the 1976 holiday season. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. says it will challenge a precedent-setting government order to recall 208,000 of its large-engine cars because they emit too much carbon monoxide.

Friday's recall order by the Environmental Protection Agency involved nearly one-fifth of Chrysler's 1975 models.

In the past, EPA has ordered auto recalls to correct manufacturing defects, but the agency said this was its first recall involving "improper design and adjustment procedures."

It was the first time the agency has tried to hold an auto company responsible for excessive pollution resulting from improper engine adjustments made after the cars were sold.

The recall stems from previous EPA complaints that a high percentage of the cars exceed antipollution standards once in customer hands, even though the same vehicles were in compliance when they left the factory.

EPA gave Chrysler 45 days to come up with a plan for fixing 1975 cars with 360-and 400-cubic-inch engines, at no cost to the owners.

Affected by the recall are the Chrysler Cordoba and Newport; Plymouth Fury and Gran Fury and Dodge Monaco, Charger SE and Coronet.

EPA said the carburetor design of those models made them so sensitive to slight changes in adjustment that they were routinely misadjusted by Chrysler dealers and others.

The result, said EPA, has been excessive carbon monoxide emissions, as well as a "rotten egg" odor from catalytic-converter antipollution devices.

The agency said other car makers have been using carburetor designs for several years that avoid this problem.

Carter Trims Staff

AMERICUS, Ga. (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter has ordered his staff in Plains trimmed, and at least four of Carter's key press aides have left the staff in recent weeks.

Asked about the cutback, Press Director Rex Granum said Saturday the reduction was designed to save money. Other sources, however, said some of the departures appeared due to personality conflicts.

Says Tax Cut Not Needed

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — No federal tax cut is needed to stimulate the nation's economy, the president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va., said Friday.

"I really don't think it is needed," said Dr. Robert P. Black, the speaker for the annual meeting of this town's Chamber of Commerce. "I think housing, business expenditures on plants and equipment and consumer outlay are going to increase pretty significantly. In fact, I think this is already going on."

Lisbon Has Water Crisis

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Schools were ordered closed Saturday because of sanitation problems on the third day of Lisbon's water crisis. A mob of 300 panic-stricken housewives raided a truck delivering water to a bakery.

The shortage, caused by a sabotage explosion Thursday on the main aqueduct depriving the city of 90 per cent of its water supply, apparently was aimed at creating unrest for Sunday elections.

Ranks With Heroin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Barbiturates and tranquilizers must be ranked with heroin in terms of the deaths and injuries they cause, the Strategy Council on Drug Abuse said Saturday.

The council, created by Congress in 1972, said federal agencies should balance drug law enforcement with more attention to drug abuse prevention, treatment and rehabilitation.

"A major theme of the federal strategy is that only with the full and efficient utilization of all available resources can we hope to contain the drug problem," the report said.

Overturns Land Expropriation

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A federal judge has overturned former President Luis Echeverria's expropriation of 250,000 acres of farm lands for peasants in Sonora state and ordered the land returned to its former owners, it was announced Saturday.

The leader of a rural farm workers' organization immediately warned that the nation's landless peasants could be forced into armed revolt if Mexico's new government backs the reversal of Echeverria's expropriation order and attempts to oust the peasants from the land.

NEW YORK (AP) — The prosecution in the kidnaping case of Sam Bronfman 2nd says there are no plans to charge the whisky heir with perjury after a jury convicted two men of extorting $2.3 million from Bronfman's father but innocent of kidnaping his son.

"There is no evidentiary basis to do so," Westchester County Dist. Atty. Carl Vergari said Friday. "We believed in our case from the outset. We do not believe Mr. Bronfman was involved in this kidnaping nor was he homosexually involved."

The defense claimed the Aug. 8, 1975, kidnaping was a hoax engineered by Mel Patrick Lynch and Bronfman to extort money from Bronfman's father.

Lynch, 34, a New York City fireman, and Dominic Byrne, 54, a limousine service operator, were convicted of extorting the $2.3 million ransom from Bronfman's father, Edgar Bronfman, head of the Seagram distillery empire.

Bronfman said the acquittal of Lynch and Byrne on kidnaping him "makes me mad — it makes me real mad."

"They were guilty — they weren't convicted. That's a mistake but that's a mistake we live with in our system ... In this case, I don't think the system worked," he told a post-trial news conference in the Seagram building, a Park Avenue monument to the Bronfman family's whiskey fortune.

Lynch testified that he and Bronfman had a homosexual relationship and that the latter threatened to expose him to his fire department superiors unless he went along with the phoney kidnaping to extort money from the elder Bronfman. The younger Bronfman denied Lynch's testimony.

Byrne's lawyer argued that he was duped into going along through his long-time friendship with Lynch, a fellow immigrant from Ireland.

Lynch admitted he delivered ransom demands to Edgar Bronfman, and picked up the $2.3 million ransom. But he said he did so at Bronfman's behest.

During four days of testimony, Bronfman denied he had a homosexual affair with Lynch, and denied he plotted the abduction. He said he had an ample $32,000-a-year income from a $20 million trust fund.

Bronfman claimed he was seized by a ski-masked gunman at his mother's estate in Purchase, N.Y., about 25 miles north of Manhattan.

Held nine days at Lynch's apartment, Bronfman said he was blindfolded and bound, guarded at gunpoint and in fear of his life. On Aug. 17, police and the FBI rescued him and recovered the ransom.

Jurors said they were influenced in their verdict by an incident while Bronfman was taping an appeal to his father to ransom him and cut short his ordeal as a captive. On the tape, Bronfman abruptly halted an emotional appeal to his father to command: "Hold it! Do it again!"

The defense argued that this was evidence that Bronfman was in command of the situation, rather than at the mercy of the kidnapers.

Juror William Link, 30, of North Tarrytown, N.Y., agreed and accused Bronfman of a similar act on the witness stand. Link explained: "He would start to break down, then re-compose himself. He would talk to the judge, then turn toward us and go into his act."

Lynch and Byrne face a maximum 15 years each in prison when they appear Jan. 6 for sentencing

State Supreme Court Justice George Beisheim Jr. in White Plains, where the eight-week trial was held. They could have gotten a minimum 15 years for kidnaping or a maximum of life.

Poison Gas Cloud In La. Dispersed

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A 42-mile-long cloud of poison gas broke up in steady light wind and rain Friday night, and 10,000 evacuees went back to their homes as it passed.

State police said not even a smell remained to indicate where the gas had been.

The gas spewed from a ruptured chlorine tank at the Allied Chemical Co. plant north of the city. In a yellowish-green cloud, the chlorine gas drifted northwestward, fanning out into a long, skinny triangle 42 miles long and four miles across, its apex at the ruptured tank.

The area was largely cane fields, with the community of Scotlandville and Southern University the only heavily-populated areas in the path of the cloud.

Some 10,000 persons fled from the path of the gas, bridges were closed, road blocks established and boat traffic on the Mississippi River halted. Among the evacuees were 6,000 students from Southern University dormitories.

State police said there were no injuries reported.

What caused the tank to rupture was not known Friday night.

For about five hours, the gas spewed uncontrolled, and plant officials told Louisiana Commissioner of Administration Charles Roemer there was no way to cut off the flow.

However, workers were able to get a partial patch over one of two holes in the tank, cutting the flow by about two-thirds. With the jet of gas reduced, a water spray neutralized the soluble gas, Roemer said.

Ahead of Roemer is the task of totaling up the cost.

"Gov. Edwin Edwards said to do whatever is necessary to protect life and property and keep up with the costs to give the bill to Allied," he said. Roemer supervised the evacuation and return from a command post high up in the state's skyscraper Capitol.

Recital Honors Charles White, Sr.

Ann White Haun, daughter of Mrs. Charles A. White, Sr., will present a recital in memory of her father, the late Charles Alexander White, Sr., at 8:15 p.m., Monday, Dec. 13. The recital, sponsored by the ECU School of Music and Mendenhall Student Center, will be held in Mendenhall Student Center Theater.

The late Mr. White was an advocate and faithful supporter of music in Greenville and at East Carolina University.

For her program, Ms. Haun has chosen Bach's Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue; Brahms' Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Handel; Chopin's Sonata in Bb minor, Opus 35; and Prokofiev's Toccata, Opus 11.

Ms. Haun was the 1962 winner of a state competition and was the 1973 winner of the UNC concerto contest. In 1974 she performed with the UNC Symphony Orchestra. She holds degrees in piano performance from the University of Illinois and the University of Northern Colorado, where she is now a doctoral student.

She and her husband, Errol Haun, an instructor of piano on the Northern Colorado faculty, have made several concert tours, including one in the Trust Territory of the Pacific, sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts. In March they will perform with the Greeley Philharmonic Orchestra.

The concert Monday is free and the public is invited to attend.

IN CONCERT...Greenville native Anna White Haun, now living in Colorado, will be in concert at 8:15 p.m. Monday, Dec. 13 at Mendenhall Student Center Theater. The concert is in honor of her father, the late Mr. Charles A. White, Sr.

'and love is a song, child-sung'

Tar River Poets. Poetry Forum Series, Number 17, Fall 1976. Edited by Frank Motley and Vernon Ward. Greenville, N.C., East Carolina University. 52 pp, $1.50.

It's good news when a young poet of promise comes to light. Jeff Rollins, the first ECU student to be the featured poet in the Tar River Poets series, deserves this honor.

In half a dozen poems, including a relatively long poem, Giving Blood, Rollins gives us poems that sing with the rightness of words. These are poems that create moods and images free of frenzied striving that mars the poetry of far too many young poets.

..." Romance is a flight from terror,/ and love is a song, child-sung, we/ ever sing ourselves." (from Once, At Night). ..."He sighs of summer and grasses,/ enraptured in remembering the promise/ that dreams may be made into flesh;/though broken again and again broken,/ he still believes." (from After Narcissus). ..."The plastic bladder/ fills with the blood of his parents,/ and of their parents/ fills with something of song,/ of weeping/ and with that first breath/ that sent us unprepared into life."(from Giving Blood).

In a very real sense, Rollins, like Whitman, sings of himself, only in a music more gentle.

There's other good poems from the 21 contributors besides Rollins whose work appears in this volume. Some are excellent, some are so-so. A few are best read and immediately forgotten.

It's not easy, even if space was not a factor, to select at random sample lines that best convey the tenor of a volume of poems. Nevertheless, the following choices should reveal something of the rewards this volume offers:

...Claire Pittman: "Our minds are stained/ With the blood of ancient enemies./ Our hearts tattoo a rhythm/ From the past/ We have grown swift and strong/ And cunning,/ We have become at last/ Dream-men of Olduvai;" (from No Escape).

...S. Phillip Miles: "this morning was delivered/pale and trembling,/ and on time." (from Dawn).

...Helen M. Parks: "Silver sage draws down the moon / And spreads cold light upon the sand./ Short grasses flower, set their seed/In the shadow of an ancient sea." (from "8").

...Taylor Koonce: "Backward, now, I count the hours / Remembering walks and talks/ picnics/ flowers/ sudden showers./ I recall them all —/ now nothing;/ And nothing seems so very small/ when once I thought I had it all." (from On Nothing).

...Marty Gartman: "Then I shall make a study of your face/ and contemplate the path/ a smile might trace/ should you allow one there." (from Still Life).

...Eugene Robert Platt: "Out of step, now, with military movements,/I shuffle my feet, let my hair lengthen,/and grow philosophical about the people/ we were ready to kill." (from War Games (for Vernon Ward)).

...Kathleen Platt: "But this music of the night / is what I have taken from the world/ for my own." (from Human Traffic).

...C. Sylvester Green: "They put around him/ A screen/ To shut out/ Ugliness." (from Public Ward).

This issue of Tar River Poets continues the democratic policy of the series in providing local poets an outlet for their creative efforts. Purists may argue with the editors for publishing run-of-the-mill efforts with more noteworthy efforts, but such criticisms are beside the point. What is important is that it gives us the chance to be exposed to our local poets, good and bad.

Tar River Poets should be a welcome and rewarding gift for someone on your Christmas list who is a poetry lover.

—JERRY RAYNOR

'The Messiah" Today At Wright

A performance of The Messiah by the East Carolina University School of Music will be given at 3:15 p.m. today in Wright Auditorium. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

Approximately 180 performers will be in the performance, including a combined chorus of 150 and an orchestra of 30. Choruses taking part are the Concert Choir, Brett Watson, conductor; the University Chorale, Charles Moore conducting; and the Women's Glee Club, Edward Glenn, conductor. The performance will be conducted by Robert Hause, conductor of the East Carolina Orchestra.

This will be the first performance of Handel's The Messiah by the School of Music since 1967. Each year the School of Music presents a concert in keeping with the Christmas season.

Cypriot Art Exhibition

By GRANT DILLMAN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Artists of Cyprus have managed through the centuries "to adapt foreign influences to their tastes, and to produce something genuinely, uniquely Cypriot," says the catalog issued in connection with the Smithsonian Institution's newest exhibit.

Unfortunately for the Cypriots, history has provided countless tests of that ability.

Rich in resources and strategically located at the crossroads of Asia, Europe and Africa, Cyprus has been invaded repeatedly.

The results of this artistic cross pollination are reflected in a striking display of 178 artifacts just placed on view at the Smithsonian Museum of Natural History. The collection will remain in Washington through Jan. 17.

Sent to this country as a Bicentennial tribute, the exhibit will appear next year in Mobile, Ala., from Sept. 9 to Oct. 23 and in Columbus, Ohio, from Nov. 18 to Dec. 31. The 1978 schedule includes Charleston, W.Va., from April 6 to May 19 and may be expanded to include Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago.

The objects — some never before seen outside Cyprus—are divided into three main categories: antiquities, medieval art and popular folk jewelry.

They include jade-like stone idols, small bronze tripods, terracotta figures, sculpture and pottery.

Cyprus is the island where Aphrodite supposedly washed ashore soon after her birth, and Cypriots have long been intrigued with love and romance. The exhibit displays this in the form of a voluptuous fertility goddess and the traditional bull representing fertility.

There are offbeat toys—including an oddball donkey and a mesmerized owl—and glazed pottery with intricate animal and floral designs.

While the influence is predominantly Greek, the exhibit also reflects successive civilizations that have washed across the island in the past 8,000 years, including the Minoans and the Romans.

"The Cypriots have always known how to adapt foreign influences to their tastes, and to produce something genuinely, uniquely Cypriot," says the Smithsonian catalog.

Because of continuing turmoil over Cyprus, excavation of the island's cultural treasures has been a slow and sometimes dangerous project. There are at least 63 known archeological sites, however, with more being discovered all the time.

Notes On Events

'Love Letter' Gets Top Award

Gina Gilmour took the top place award for an oil painting of a group of parakeets titled Love Letter to Levi-Strauss.

The silver medal went to Audrey J. Olson of Raleigh for Mahagony Creeper, a mixed-media work. Carla House Ethier of Chapel Hill won the bronze medal for an acrylic painting, Untitled.

A total of 127 works were chosen for this year's show. Among artists whose work was selected by the jury are a number of Greenville artists.

Mint Announces Christmas Program

The Performing Arts Department of the Mint Museum in Charlotte announces two Christmas programs to be presented in the Museum during the holiday season.

Today at 2:30 p.m. the Mint Museum Theater Guilds production of The Chester Shepherd's Play will be presented in the Golden Circle Theater.

The play is a 14th century Christmas play with old English dialect and music of that period.

At 3 and at 4 p.m. Dec 14-17 and at 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. on Dec. 18, a free Christmas puppet show will be presented by the Queens Minkins Puppeteers. Seating is limited and free tickets- must be picked up in advance at the reception desk of the Mint Museum. Interested persons are to call (704) 334-9726.

Hospitality House

A festive program of Christmas music is the theme of Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" over WITN-TV, Channel 7 today from 11:30 til noon. Two groups are providing the sounds of music; the ECU Madrigal Singers with Dr. Charles Moore, and The Choraliers, women singers from Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station.

Kay is also making a plug for Christmas seals. She is the chairman of the campaign to sell seals in the multi-county Eastern Lung Association area.

Angel Street

Patrick Hamilton's Victorian play Angel Street will have its final nights of performances December 17-19 at 8 p.m. on each of three evenings at St. Joseph's Performance Center, 804 Fayetteville St., Durham.

The play is a Pocket Theater production. Tickets, at $2.50 each are available from Reflections in Chapel Hill or at the door.

Seeking New Talent

The Southern Federation of States Arts Agencies, a regional cultural organization, is seeking to find high quality performing arts group to tour in the southeast in 1977-78.

The SFSAA, created in 1975, is serving Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, Tennessee, and North and South Carolina, in an effort toexpand and cultivate the arts by sharing quality performing arts throughout the South.

Performing groups interested in participating in SFSAA tour programs should have a regional or national reputation and the ability to submit a representative history that demonstrates a high level of accomplishment

Further information can be obtained by contacting the Director of Performing Arts, SFSAA, 1510 Lynwood Ave., Winston-Salem, N.C., 27104, or by phone 723-9182.

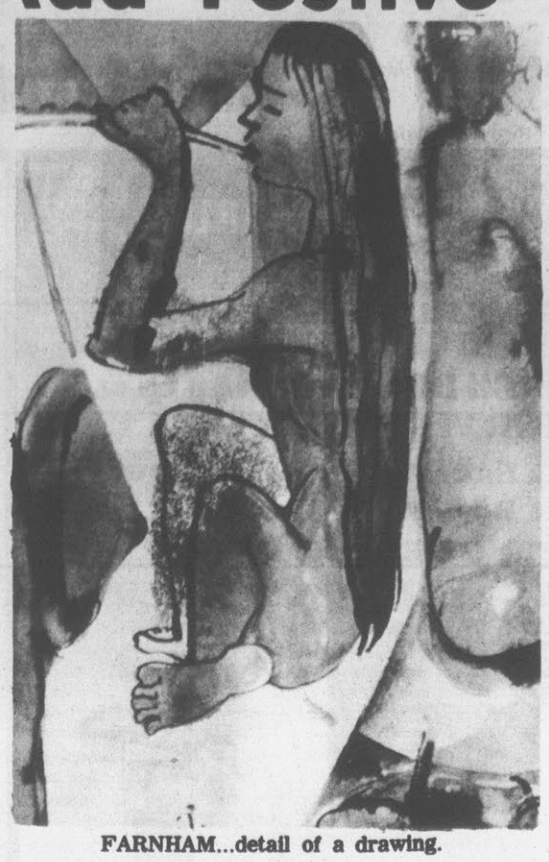
Art Shows Add Festive Note To Holiday Season

NEEL...A pilgrim in Nepal.



FARNHAM...detail of a drawing.

Art shows all over town this week are adding one more festive note to seasonal celebrations. Among several now on view, three are considered here.

At the Greenville Art Center, East Carolina University School of Art faculty members Dr. Emily Farnham and Francis Neel are showing selected works that span a number of years for each of the two.

Farnham's art of more than 40 years ago down to a sizeable array of very recent (1976) paintings point to a remarkable development in her work. The newer works are definitely fresher, younger and more vital. Reflections In A Blue River, for example, is a zestful, beautifully textured mixed media work. Another 1976 work, also in mixed media, Mardi Gras, is a rollicking rendering of that happy festival. Gone is the angularity and stiffness of earlier portraits and figure drawings.

Dr. Farnham additionally shows three precisely constructed wooden diptychs; about a dozen color photographs, and paintings covering a period of years. This is not exactly a retrospective showing of her work, though it does give a broad spectrum of four decades of her efforts.

Francis Lee Neel uses most of the space allotted him to show 100 eight-by-ten mounted color photographs. Subject matter is drawn from extensive travels in far away places. Mexico and India, Morocco, Iran, Japan, Nepal, Pakistan, Egypt, Italy, Iraq and Honduras. These reveal the allure of exotic lands and serve to underline the common humanity of man whatever his physical surroundings.

A brief look at Neel's earlier work is afforded in a quartet of figure studies; and he is represented by several of the carefully designed, stylized forms that seem to be his chief preoccupation in painting.

Perhaps no artist in this area can project the inner and outer beauty of flowers the way Marilyn Gordley does...a talent she makes clear again in a sumptuous tapestry-like painting of roses, The Rose Admires Her Beauty and on a smaller scale in a drawing of zinnias.

Tran Gordley's forte in his current paintings is a clean-cut design combined with rich areas of color. He gives attention to food in paintings such as Peach Blueberry and a gold and honey painting of Buns. He also shows a fine drawing of arms and an amusing pun in a drawing titled Buns.

...A third current show briefly considered here is that of paintings by several graduate art students of ECU in the lobby of the North Carolina National Bank at First and Greene Streets.

Mike Brake, Tony Eder, Andy Giles, Kimberly Irwin, Robert L. Jones, Jr., Charles Kesler, and John Robert Morris are the students involved.

Among several good works in this show, Jones' Elegy To Me, Republic of China and Morris' American Master Series are especially impressive.

A Story Of Young Sailor Girls

On, Sail On. By Virginia Williams. Illustrations by Effie Raye Bateman, Marine sketches by Ms. Williams. Belhaven, N.C., 72 pp plus 12 pp inset of drawings. $2.75

Young girls can feel proud of the story of a special pair of seagoing young lassies. And better yet, it's a true story. Back in the 1950's, what happened to twins Judy and Donna Williams is surely the kind of adventure day dreaming girls (or boys) long for. The parents of the twins sold their New Hampshire farm, bought a sailboat which they named "Ah Youth" and made it their traveling home on the seas.

On, Sail On is the delightful account of one segment of voyages undertaken by the four Williams sailors — the father (Captain); the mother (mate); and the twins (crew).

This exciting fragment covers the brief period beginning with sailing for the Bahamas and ending with a decision to buy land on the island of Abaco near the tiny village of Little Harbor.

The day-by-day adventures are marveously rich in color and variety — the magic world of undersea caves, fishes and strange plant life; fishing for pleasure and food; collecting shells; exploring the island with new found friends; and acquiring necessary skills as a trustworthy crew member.

The story teller (Ms. Williams) has a flair for making a few words say a lot: ..."Ah Youth's course was the way the wind blew, the way the heart desired." ..."Clouds streaked across the sky and erased the sparkle from the water." ..."the girls saw tight clusters of bats hanging patiently, waiting for dusk and dinner time."

The world of On, Sail On is an idyllic world, a beautiful fantasy that came true and can now entertain land-locked readers.

Recently, Mr. and Mrs. Williams spent a couple of years in Belhaven working on a new family boat for two, a shrimp boat. It was during their stay in Belhaven that she spun this account from her notes and also contributed the Marine sketches. Effie Raye Bateman edited and designed the book, adding her illustrations. On a hand-operated press, Ms. Bateman has printed and assembled 500 copies.

Despite a few mispelled words and one or two obvious word errors, this is a treasure of an adventure book that will bring joy to young (and older) readers. On, Sail On can be ordered from: EEii's, Belhaven, N. C. 27810 for $3.05 ($2.75 plus 30 cents postage).

Membership Drive For Art Society

With Christmas almost here and 1977 just around the corner, board members of the East Carolina Art Society have announced that it is new membership time and time also for renewal of old memberships due to expire.

The society is the governing board responsible for operation of the Greenville Art Center, located at 802 Evans Street.

Memberships, issued on an annual basis, are $15 per individual and $25 for a full-family membership. Other categories of memberships are: Donor, $25; Benefactor, $50; and Sponsor, $100. The latter category is open both to individuals, families and business firms and corporations.

The Greenville Art Center is operated from funds realized from memberships, from proceeds raised from special projects such as the sidewalk art show and the annual Fine Arts Ball, personal contributions, and from funds budgeted by the City of Greenville and Pitt County.

A cultural focal point for Greenville and eastern North Carolina, the Art Center presents several changing exhibits annually, including student shows, and has a permanent collection.

Persons or firms interested in complete membership details are to contact Ms. Edith Walker, the director, at 758-1946 Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and noon, and 2 to 5 p.m.

Leslie Ford Show At LCC

The featured show of art at the Lenoir Community College Gallery for the month of December is an exhibit of drawings by Leslie Ford of Greenville.

Ms. Ford holds the master's degree in fine arts from East Carolina University and has exhibited in a number of shows, both in North Carolina and in other states.

Greenville Among 12 Affiliate Art Museums

The people of North Carolina own more than $40 million worth of art — perhaps the most valuable and important collection in the southeastern United States.

Until recently, the collection has been displayed primarily in Raleigh in the North Carolina Museum of Art (NCMA). However, under a new system of a statewide network of affiliate galleries, more of these works of art can be brought to the people in various geographical locations.

"This is one of the most exciting things we have ever done," Moussa Domit, NCMA director said. "In a sense, the museum is expanding its walls to include the entire state."

One of the services being provided the 12 affiliate galleries scattered across North Carolina is that of exhibitions specially prepared for showing in smaller galleries. The first exhibition going out is a selection of 25 original hand-colored aquatint engravings from Audubon's Birds of America, the famous folio published in 1827-28.

The 12 affiliate museums are: the Greenville Art Center, Ackland Art Center, Chapel Hill, Asheville Art Museum, the Duke University Museum of Art, the Fayetteville Art Museum, the Mint Museum, Charlotte, the Northwest Art Gallery, North Wilkesboro, the Rocky Mount Arts and Crafts Center, St. John's Art Gallery, Wilmington, the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, Winston-Salem, and the Weatherspoon Art Gallery, Greensboro.

Book News

By JOE R. STINES

Tom's Midnight Garden by Philippa Pearce (1958) is a book of fantasy which develops into such an escape that the reader is stunned by its play on time. There are many themes including love and friendship hidden within the remarkable structure of this story. Human emotions are important from the very beginning as Tom leaves Peter, his brother who is sick in bed, for a stay with his aunt and uncle to the ending where he gives old Mrs. Bartholomew a final hug before leaving for home. This story of adventure and fun uses time, an element often taken for granted by children, as its major theme. Tom, bored by his aunt and uncle's apartment, hears the downstairs clock strike 13. From that moment forward he has a playmate, Hatty, and together they romp through an enchanting garden which knows no time limit.

From Hatty, Tom learns a great deal about life and he does this through play. Reason has little place within Tom's Midnight Garden. More than anything the author proves that even the most boring environment can become exciting and fun with a little imagination.

Using an informative question-and-answer format such as: "Where do sharks live?" . . "Are all sharks dangerous?" . . ."How often do sharks have to eat?", Ann McGovern in her latest work merely introduces young readers to her subject. Her presentation is unsensational and objective with black line drawings by Murray Tinkelman which add a feeling of calmness to McGovern's rational approach. Large, clear print and effective use of white space makes it easy to read and pleasing to the eye. The inclusion of an index is an added bonus for the elementary age scholar. Sharks (1976) by Ann McGovern is sure to arouse excitement and curiosity among its young readers.

Pirates Struggle To 56-54 Victory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's basketball team may have been looking ahead to stronger Georgia Southern or backwards to even stronger Maryland last night when they should have been looking UNC-Wilmington right in the eye.

It nearly cost them, as the Bucs had to struggle for their young lives to come away with a 56-54 win over the Seahawks.

It took some last second heroics by Louis Crosby, Jim Ramsey and Greg Cornelius and Larry Hunt to pull it off, however. With just under two minutes on the clock, Wilmington pushed out into a three-point lead, and looked to be in firm command.

But they went to the basket to pad their lead, missed and East Carolina erased the boards. Crosby hit a jumper with 1:30 left after Herb Gray had pulled the Bucs to within one on a jumper just 14 seconds earlier. Crosby was also fouled on the play, completing the three-pointer to put the Pirates into a 55-53 lead.

Wilmington came back down and made a free throw with 1:10 to go, but they later missed another with less than a minute to go, and Hunt prevented them scoring off a rebound andforced a turnover. Ramsey then made another free throw with five seconds left to provide the Pirates with the two-point win.

Coach Dave Patton said he couldn't understand it. "I don't know how we can play like we've been together for 50 years one night, and look like first graders the next," he said. "We certainly shouldn't have been looking ahead when we have a team like Wilmington in here."

At any rate, the Bucs appeared flat for the game, hitting just seven of 26 shots in the second half, a poor 26.2 per cent. East Carolina made only 33.9 per cent of its shots during the night, mainly from a seeming lack of concentration.

The Pirate defense was again a sticky one forcing the Seahawks to commit a number of mistakes and shoot only 37.7 per cent. Still, the game could have been a runaway, and at times early in the second half looked as if it could.

Fortunately for the Pirates, they were able to control the boards, pulling in 52 rebounds, as compared to 37 for the Seahawks. Hunt led the parade with 11, while Greg Cornelius and Ty Edwards each had seven. Edwards also blocked two shots and had his best outing of the year.

East Carolina fell behind in the opening minutes, going nearly five minutes without scoring. Wilmington couldn't crack the sticky Pirate defense, however, and could score only once during that same period. East Carolina took a 4-2 lead, but then fell back again, as Wilmington returned to the lead.

The Pirates regained it on a tap-in by Hunt with 12:28 left in the half, and from there pushed out to an eight point spread at 16-8. Wilmington struggled back to a threepoint deficit, but could come no closer the rest of the period.

The Pirates scored late on a three-point play by Hunt, followed by a baseline jumper by Cornelius and built their lead back up to eight, then led at 32-23 at intermission.

Early in the second half, the Pirates pushed their lead out to as much as 13 points, scoring the first two baskets of the second half. Gray hit the first and Don Whitaker followed with another for a 36-23 lead.

But after that, the Bucs began to run into trouble. Their shots refused to drop, and they began to lose their poise for the first time this year.

Wilmington continued to clip away at the lead, slowly cutting it away. Finally, with 6:32 left, they tied it at 45-45, then pushed in to a 47-46 lead with 5:41 left as Ricky McKoy hit. East Carolina tied it up at 48-48, but fell back again, as Greenville native Lonnie Payton hit for a 50-48 lead with 3:30 to go.

Wilmington then held the lead until Gray and Crosby connected to put the Pirates into the lead, this time for good.

Gray led the Pirate scoring for the second straight game, hitting 12 points. Hunt added 11, and Whitaker had 10.

Dave Wolff was the lone Seahawk to hit double figures hitting 11 points, nine of them coming on the foul line.

East Carolina, now 3-2, plays host to Georgia Southern on Thursday night, looking for its fourth win at Minges.

Duke Rallies

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Guard Tate Armstrong hit on a 15-foot jump shot with two seconds remaining to give Duke a hard-fought 65-63 victory over Richmond Saturday night for its fifth straight basketball victory.

Richmond led 6l-57 with three minutes remaining, but two Armstrong free throws and a tip-in by Mike Gminski tied the game at 6l-all. Craig Sullivan, high man in the game withh 27 points, responded with a lay-up, but Duke tied the game again on an Armstrong jumper with 1:22 left.

Richmond tried to spread things out to hold for one last shot, but Sullivan, who appeared open inside, missed a lay-up with 1:01 left. The Blue Devils got the rebound and ran the clock down to 13 seconds before calling time out.

Armstrong, held at bay almost the entire night, wound up with 15 points. He hit a game-winning basket with two seconds left Saturday night to give Duke an 83-81 victory over Washington.

Mark Crow led Duke's scoring with 20 points. The Blue Devils are 5-1 for the season. Richmond is 4-2.

Tar Heels Hang On For Victory

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Phil Ford scored 24 points, including two clutch free throws with four seconds left, as North Carolina's 12th-ranked Tar Heels hung on Saturday night for an 81-77 basketball victory over Virginia Tech's Gobblers.

The Tar Heels, upping their record to 4-1, built a 65-58 lead with 7:36 left before the Gobblers whittled the deficit to 77-75 with 2:15 remaining. With 1:21 left, Bruce Buckley hit a pair of free throws that boosted North Carolina's lead back to a safe four points.

Tech, 3-2, was down by 22-11 in the first half before rallying to tie the score at 33-33 at intermission. But the Tar Heels went ahead and remained there the rest of the way.

Walter Davis had 17 points and John Kuester 14 for North Carolina, which hit 23 of 30 free throw tries to 15 of 23 for the Gobblers.

Virginia Tech, which had a 40-27 rebound advantage, was led by Duke Thorpe with 21 points and Ron Bell and Marshall Ashford with 12 each.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney scored 17 points and Kenny Carr added 16 as North Carolina State posted an 83-70 college basketball victory over Nevada-Reno here Saturday night.

Clyde Austin added 14 points, all in the second half, while Brian Walker had 11 and Glenn Sudhop scored 10 in a balanced Wolfpack attack.

N.C. State alternated from zone to press defenses, jumping out to a 12-0 lead and never trailed in the game.

VMI Holds Off Old Dominion

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Two jump shots by John Krovic in the second half gave Virginia Military the lead for good and the Keydets held off a late charge by Old Dominion for a 62-60 basketball victory Saturday night over the Monarchs.

Krovic put the Keyets ahead 54-53 with a jumper with 8:11 left, then made it 56-53 with another jumper with 5:38 remaining after VMI had stalled for 2½ minutes.

Ron Carter led the Keydets with 24 points and Dave Montgomery added 10.

Apps Fight Back

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Appalachian State's basketball Mountaineers fought back from e 16-point deficit, sparked by Darrel's Robinson's 19-point effort, to defeat William & Mary 68-59 in a Southern Conference basketball game tonight.

The Mountaineers were down by as much as 24-8 with 8:53 left in the first period. "Out kids just kept fighting back" said Appalachian coach Bobby Cremins.

It was the fourth victory against two defeats for Appalachian. Willliam & Mary is 3 and 2.

Others in double figures for the winners were Tony Searcy with 13 points, Walter Anderson and Alvin Gentry with 11 each, and Calvin Bowser with 10.

But the high scorer for the game was John Lowenhaupt of the Indians with 24 points. Matt Courage had 13 and Jack Arbogast 10 for the visitors.

Steelers Roll Over Houston

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers, ignited by Terry Bradshaw's 21-yard touchdown pass to Lynn Swann, defeated Houston 21-0 Saturday to climax a nine-game winning streak that returns them to the National Football League playoffs and a chance for an unprecedented third straight Super Bowl title.

Pittsburgh, which lost four of its first five games, clinched the American Football Conference's Central Division title with the victory and will face either Baltimore or New England in the first round of the playoffs.

Bradshaw, starting for the first time in three games, hit Swann between two Oiler defenders at the Houston one-yard line and Swann dipped into the end zone with 2:59 left in the first half.

The Steelers offense, which had stymied by a rugged Oiler defense, got the scoring chance when cornerback Mel Blount intercepted a pass by Dan Pastorini and returned it 28 yards to the Houston 13.

Franco Harris put the Steeler ahead by two touchdowns in the third quarter on an 11-yard run, with Bradshaw throwing a decisive block. Harris started to his right, then suddenly reversed to the left. Bradshaw took out two potential tacklers, and Harris drove down the sideline to score.

The Steelers drove 79 yards on 10 carries in the fourth quarter, with Bradshaw diving the final yard to end the Oiler season with a 5-9 record. Pittsburgh finished the regular season at 10-4.

Pittsburgh's Rocky Bleier and Harris each went over 100 yards in the game. Each runner rushed for more than 1,000 for the season.

Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini, getting his first start in five games, got the Oilers into Pittsburgh territory only twice in the game.

In the second quarter, Houston reached Pittsburgh's 37 with the help of a defensive holding penalty against J.T. Thomas and an offside penalty against Joe Greene. After three incomplete passes, Skip Butler missed a 55-yard field goal try.

Houston's only other penetration past the 50 came on the first play of the fourth quarter when linebacker Gregg Bingham intercepted a Bradshaw pass and ran it to Pittsburgh's 43.

Clark, signed Friday to punt for the Oilers, kicked 11 times for a 34 yard average, but his efforts included one 16-yarder that gave Pittsburgh superb field position.

Bleier finished with 107 yards on 22 carries for his fourth 100-yard performance of the season. Harris got 104 yards on 23 carries.

He was charged with kicking the ball during a scramble for a fumble by Harris. The penalty gave Pittsburgh a first down at the Houston 34.

DIVING MISS — Pittsburg Steeler Ernie Holmes (63) dives for Houston Oiler running back Ronnie Coleman (47), but Coleman slipped away to pick up six yards around his left end. The action came in the second quarter of the game, played in Houston, yesterday. (AP Wirephoto)

Buc Runners Dominate State Invitationals

RALEIGH — While there was no team scoring officially, East Carolina University's track team dominated the N.C. State Invitational Track Meet in Raleigh yesterday.

The Pirates won three of the 15 men's events and placed a number of people in other events.

Marvin Rankins broke his record of last year in the 60-yard hurdles with a time of 7.2 seconds. Last year, he won the event in 7.3. His time qualified him for the NCAA nationals to be held next spring.

Otis Melvin captured first place in the 60-yard dash with a time of 6.2 second, tieing the track record held by teammate Larry Austin. Austin finished second in 6.2, followed by James Rankins in fourth at 6.3 and Donnie Mack in fifth at 6.4.

The other victory came in the long jump, where Billy Etchison won with a leap of 23 feet, 2¾ inches' set setting a new track record. The old mark was held by Pirate George Jackson at 22-9. Mike Hodge of East Carolina was second in 23-2½, and Herman McIntyre was fifth at 22-1¼.

In the 440 yard run, Charlie Moss tied for fourth with a time of 52.3 seconds. James Freeman finished third in the 600-yard run in 1:16.3, while Valdez Chavis was fourth in 1:16.6, and Ben Duckenfield was fifth in 1:16.8.

James Willett was fourth in the 880-yard run in 2:01.9, with James Green fifth in 2:02.4.

Al McCrimmon finished third in the high jump in 6-6¼, while McIntyre was third in the triple jump in 49-6½, followed by George Jackson in 47-9, and Mike Hodge at 47-3¼.

The East Carolina "B" mile relay team finished second in 3:31.4, while the "A" team was third in 3:32.7.

Lady Pirates Fifth In Meet

DURHAM — East Carolina's women's swimming team finished fifth yesterday in the NCAIAW State Swimming Meet held here.

UNC-Chapel Hill dominated the event, rolling up 811 points for a first-place finish. N. C. State came in second with 668, followed by Duke with 369.

Appalachian State was fourth with 218 points and the Lady Pirates fifth with 186.

Mercer scored 121 points for a sixth-place finish and UNC-Greensboro was in seventh with 110 points. Pfeifer was eighth with 69 points and St. Mary's ninth with 13.

The Lady Bucs picked up nine places, with third the highest. That was scored by Cathy Callahan in three-meter diving.

East Carolina had two finishers in the 100-yard butterfly. Cindy Sadler was ninth and Lynn Utegaard 14th. S. Burns and K. Wade both placed in the 100-yard freestyle. Burns was 10th and Wade 13th.

In the 100-meter backstroke, J. Innman was 14th and Utegaard 16th for the Lady Pirates. E. Bond posted an eighth-place finish in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Burns finished 14th in the 200-meter individual medley and the team was fourth in the 200-meter freestyle relay.

Will Hold Meeting On New Conference

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Fourteen schools from a ten-state area have been invited to attend a meeting in Miami, Fla., which could lead to the formation of a new conference, the Daily Reflector has learned.

Approximately 14 schools have been invited to attend the meeting, and according to an informed source, all have accepted the invitation. The meeting is to be held at Miami's Fontainebleau Hotel on January 10, 1977, during the NCAA's convention.

East Carolina University, one of the schools involved, according to the report, had no official comment on the report.

Among those included on the reported guest list are William & Mary, East Carolina, Louisville, Miami (Fla.), Cincinnati, Memphis State, Southern Mississippi, South Carolina, Florida State, Richmond and Georgia Tech.

The source said that three other schools also had indicated that they would attend, but their names were not available.

The meeting would be a follow-up to a previous meeting held earlier this year, in which several schools from the Virginia-North and South Carolina-Florida and Mississippi area were in attendance. It was decided at that meeting to continue talks at a later date.

Several of the schools planning to attend are members of the present Metro-Seven basketball conference. However, proposed action by the NCAA during its meeting would take away the automatic berths in NCAA tournaments. Such a ruling would not give automatic berths to conference which have less than a certain number of sports, about seven.

If such action is passed, the Metro-Seven, and several other basketball-only conferences would probably cease to exist.

Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor of East Carolina University, has been one of the key figures in the pursuit of the formation of a new conference since it was announced that East Carolina would leave the Southern Conference.

The meeting will come just before the NCAA meeting gets fully underway at Miami, and it is also reported that an NCAA official will be on hand at the meeting to give any information that may be needed on the possible formation of a conference.

The source also said that a follow-up meeting might be called for later in the week, pending the outcome of some of the proposed legislation.

All of the schools invited to attend the meeting are independents or will be at the end of the current academic year. Should a new conference be formed from the group, or from later additions, it was felt that some sort of divisional setup would be established for playing of other sports besides football.

Holtz Takes Job At Arkansas

By HARRY KING
Associated Press Writer

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Lou Holtz accepted the job as head coach at Arkansas Saturday by saying his decision to leave the New York Jets was a difficult one, but that he would not look back.

"That's why the Lord put eyes in the front of your head instead of in the back," Holtz said.

Holtz, 39, was given a five-year contract. Athletic Director Frank Broyles said Holtz would have the option to renew the contract each year.

Broyles said Holtz would receive the maximum salary allowed by state law, $36,000 a year. Steps are expected to raise his salary.

Holtz is succeeding Broyles, whose resignation was accepted Saturday by the university's board of trustees. Broyles resigned after 19 years as head coach. He began serving as athletic director in 1973, and will continue in that post.

Moments after the board accepted Broyles resignation, it hired Holtz.

Holtz emphasized during a news conference that he was Lou Holtz and not Frank Broyles.

His relations with the Jets management, he emphasized, were good.

Louisville Upset

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue's Eugene Parker scored two free throws with 50 seconds left Saturday, and the Boilermakers scored a 72-70 college basketball upset over 14th-ranked Louisville.

As the buzzer sounded, a shot by Louisville's Darrell Griffith threatened to send the game into overtime. But the attempt failed, hitting the rim on the short side, guaranteeing the victory for Purdue, 4-2.

Parker, a junior guard, led the Boilermakers with 19 points and freshman center Joe Carroll added 15 points and 10 rebounds.

Rick Wilson led the Cardinals, 3-2, with 16 points.

Pate, Stockton Forge Into World Cup Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — The United States team of Jerry Pate and Dave Stockton shook off their role of also-rans and forged into the lead Saturday in the third round of the World Cup international golf tournament.

Pate, the U.S. Open champion, had a 69 and Stockton a 71 despite mutual putting problems that prohibited them from making it a rout.

"Jerry three-putted two times and I missed one from two feet," said Stockton, the National PGA champion. "We kind of refused to let ourselves run away with it."

The defending champion Americans, who have won the team title in 13 of 23 previous World Cups, had a three-round total of 437, one-under-par.

Spain was next at 438 and Taiwan was another stroke behind at 429. No others in the field of two-man teams from 48 nations were within seven strokes of the lead.

Taiwanese veteran Kuo Chiehsuing clipped two more strokes off par with a 70 and retained a one stroke lead in the individual competition with a 210 total, six-under-par on the 7,181-yard Mission Hills Country Club course.

"If I can have another 70 tomorrow, I think I will win," Kuo said.

Simon Owen, who won the National Open in his native New Zealand only last week, remained one stroke off the pace at 211 after a third round 70.

Ernesto Perez Acosta, Mexico's leading performer, fashioned a 69 in the bright, warm and sunny weather and was just two strokes back of the individual leader at 212.

Pate's 69 put him in contention for the individual championship and a spot in the rich World Series of Golf, but he was completely unconcerned about that aspect of the competition.

"I don't even know who's leading or how many under par he is or where I stand in the individual competition," Pate said after posting his 213 individual score. "We came here to win the team title and that's all we're interested in."

Stockton was well back at 218.

The Americans, who had been in and out of the lead most of the day, nailed down the top spot for good when both birdied the difficult 16th hole. Stockton hit a two-iron to within six feet and Pate's crisp three-iron shot left him with a 10-footer. Both made their putts.

"It was a real key hole for us," Stockton said.

Football Titles

Montana State won the NCAA Division II championship and Texas A&I won a third consecutive NAIA Division I crown by extending its winning streak to 39 games, highlighting college football action Saturday.

Montana State quarterback Paul Dennehy led the top-ranked Bobcats to two second-period touchdowns and a 24-13 triumph over No. 3 Akron.

Vikings Thrash Miami Behind White's Catches

By JOHN R. SKINNER
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings stopped Miami with a strong first-quarter goalline stand, then went on to thrash the Dolphins 29-7 Saturday behind three touchdown passes to Sammy White to clinch the home-field advantange in next weekend's playoffs.

"I'm sure it had a lot to do with the game," said defensive end Carl Eller, who stood tall as the Vikings stopped Miami seven times within the sevenyard line in the early first-period series. Four plays came inside the two.

"I don't know if it took anything out of the Dolphins, but it made us feel a lot better, especially after the offense took over," Eller added.

Quarterback Fran Tarkenton said he found the ball "as close to the goal line as it could be without touching" when he began a 99-yard-plus scoring drive. He said he took advantage of double-coverage on Ahmed Rashad as he made White his primary target, including on a nine-yard pass for the game's first touchdown.

"It seemed thes were more concerned about Rashad," said Tarkenton. He had gone to Rashad 51 times in previous games for 693 yards, compared to 42 throws for 786 yards to White.

"They were leaving me one-on-one (with cornerback Jeris White) most of the time," said the first half.

Fred Cox, who missed his first two conversion kicks and a 24-yard field-goal attempt, connected on a 30-yard field goal just before halftime for a 15-0 lead.

The Vikings, finishing the regular season with an 11-2 record and the National Football Conference's Central Division title, will host the NFC's wild-card team — either Washington or St. Louis — next week. Washington can grab the wild-card spot by beating Dallas on Sunday.

White finished the game with nine receptions for 120 yards as Tarkenton riddled the Dolphins with 15 completions in 23 attempts for 184 yards.

A fumble by the Vikings' Autry Beamon of the game's first punt was recovered by Miami's Gary Davis to give the Dolphins possession at the Minnesota 34. Miami gained a first down at the seven. Three plays later, Minnesota cornerback Nate Allen was called for defensive holding to give the Dolphins a first down at the two.

But four succeeding runs, three of them by Davis, failed. Defensive end Carl Eller wrapped Davis up inside the one on the last two plays.

The Dolphins didn't score until backup quarterback Don Strock moved them 59 yards in 11 plays for a fourth-quarter touchdown on a two-yard pass to Stan Winfrey.

Strock was put into the game after heavily booed Bob Griese completed only three of 11 passes for 30 yards, with one interception, in the first half.

An interception of a Strock pass by linebacker Matt Blair at the Miami 20 set up Minnesota's first score of the second half on McClanahan's run.

Tarkenton was replaced by Bob Lee after moving the Vikings 51 yards in four plays to a final touchdown minutes later. Tarkenton completed passes of seven and 33 yards to White before the touchdown toss.

Pirates Swim To Easy Win Over Appalachian

The East Carolina men's swimming team romped past Appalachian State yesterday afternoon in Minges Pool, recording an 83-54 victory.

The Pirate swimmers are now 3-0 this season, 2-0 in the Southern Conference. East Carolina extended its victory string over Southern Conference opponents in dual meets to 24, dating back to 1965-66.

"I was pleased overall with the way our guys swam," said coach Ray Scharf. "Many of our times are from four to six weeks ahead of last year.'

"I was especially pleased with the way Keith Wade swam the 200 'fly, Doug Brindley in the 1000 free, John Tudor in the 200 IM with a new varsity record and Ted Nieman in the 500 free."

One varsity record, that by John Tudor in the 200 IM with a time of 1:58.39 (old mark, 1:58.81) and eight of 13 meet records fell against Appalachian. This was done with the majority of the ECU swimmers not performing in their usual events.

Only one pool mark was beaten, that by John McCauley in the 50 free with a 21.27. He previously held the pool record with a 21.51, set last year.

The Pirates will not swim again until after the Christmas break, facing the University of Maine in the Minges Poole on Jan. 13 at 7:30 p.m.

UCLA Upset By Irish

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Freshman Rich Branning scored four points in the last 45 seconds to lead seventh-ranked Notre Dame to an upset 66-63 college basketball victory over the third-ranked UCLA Bruins at Pauley Pavilion Saturday.

UCLA did not score during the last six minutes of the game, holding a 63-60 lead at that point.

The Bruins went into a stall offense with 2:17 remaining when David Greenwood was fouled by Dave Batton.

Greenwood missed the first of a one-and-one foul situation. Notre Dame recovered the rebound and Branning drove around Bruin guard Brad Holland for a layup, giving Notre Dame the lead, 64-63, with 45 seconds remaining.

Holland missed two shots in the final 12 seconds and Branning was fouled with one second remaining, converting both free throws for the three-point victory.

Kinston High School's Vikings, smarting from their first defeat of the year earlier in the week at the hands of Raleigh Broughton, took out their frustrations on the Rose High School Rampants Friday night.

The Vikings recorded their second straight lopsided win over the winless Rampants, 101-68.

In the first meeting of the two teams, Kinston romped to a 104-84 win, but it was even worse when the Vikes visited the Rose court.

The Rampants could do little right in the game, while the Vikings did little wrong. The Vikings had a hot hand all evening long, while Rose had to struggle for everything it got.

The game was virtually over before the first period had been completed. Kinston ran hard and shot well as it launched through 32 points during the first eight minutes, averaging four points per 60 seconds. Rose, during the same span could offer by 10 points, and trailed by 22 after just one frame.

The Rampants were able to nearly match the Vikings during the second period, 23-20, but they were unable to make any headway in cutting into the lead.

By halftime, Kinston was in firm command, 55-30.

Things got no better for the Rampants during the second half. Kinston cooled somewhat, but still tossed in 21 points during the frame. Rose was held to 14, and seven more points went into the margin. That made it 76-44, a 32-point bulge, as the two teams took the court for the final frame.

Kinston didn't ease up at all during the final quarter, offensively, at least, scoring 25 more to pass the century mark for the second time against the Rampants. Rose was still unable to outhit their guests, but did put through 24 points.

Athletes In Action Top Pirate Wrestlers

East Carolina University opened its home wrestling season last night with a 25-16 loss to the Athletes In Action—East. The match was an exhibition affair with the loss not counting against the ECU yearly record.

Paul Osman, wrestling at the 134 level, took the lone superior decision for East Carolina, downing Gary Taylor, 11-2. The Pirates recorded no pins.

Match victories were also recorded by Harry Martin (126), Steve Goode (158), Phil Mueller (167) and John Williams (190).

Olympic gold medalist John Peterson was forced into the third period by freshman Jay Dever before winning by a pine with 7:07 elasped.

ECU's Mueller is yet to be beaten this year, stopping previously unbeaten AIA opponent Tom Keeley.

The Pirates led only once in the match, 7-6, and tied the score at 13-13 with three matches remaining. East Carolina and the AIA each won five matches, but pins made the difference in the score.

East Carolina is in action again December 27-28 at the Wilkes Open in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. They return home on January 6 against West Chester for the first of seven straight home matches.

Summary:
118: Mike Whitfield (AIA) won by forfeit.

Late Football Season Slowing Jaguar Start

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Due to the success of the Jaguar football team, Farmville Central's basketball program got off to a late start. But, coach Mike Terrell is expecting a good season as soon as his players get over their rustiness.

"We anticipate a good year, but we've been a little slow getting started," according to Terrell.

Farmville Central has eight people returning off of last year's squad, which was 13-12 for the year and finished in a tie for third place in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

Three of those players were regular starters last year and a fourth started a few games for the Jaguars.

Forwards Timmy Ward (6-1, senior) and Keno Farrow (6-0, senior) both started for Farmville Central last season, along with 6-0 senior guard Jeff Fields. In addition, 5-10 junior guard Rufus Mayo started in a few games.

These four will be starters this year, along with 6-4 senior center, James Baker.

Four other players are expected to see some playing time for the Jaguars this year. They are guard Amos Joyner (5-10, senior), guard/forward Terry Gorham (6-0), center James Gorham (6-2, senior) and forward Douglas Dixon (6-1, senior).

Terrell said the Jaguars will have a balanced scoring attack this year with Fields, Farrow Baker and Ward all capable of having hot nights.

On offense, Farmville Central will run a 1-2-2 against both zone and man-to-man defenses. The Jags will run a man-to-man defense themselves, with possibly some zone, according to Terrell.

North Pitt is the team to beat the in conference this year, Terrell said. The Panthers return three starters, including standout Donnie Perkins. D. H. Conley could also have a tough team, Terrell said.

"I think the conference is going to be real strong," Terrell said. "I hope we can be one of the better teams in the conference, but there are going to be five or six good teams.'

"You are always a little rusty at first, but we are planning on coming around and having a good team."

Washington In Win Over Tigers

WILLIAMSTON — Washington High School's defending champions solved their problems with Williamston in a Northeastern Conference game early Friday night and took a 56-41 victory over the Tigers.

The Williamston girls had no trouble in their game however, streaking to a 55-28 win. The Williamston junior varsity also won, 46-44.

In the girls' game, Williamston ran out to a 16-6 lead in the first period. Washington came back to cut the lead to 22-14 at halftime.

In the third frame, however, Williamston put the game on ice, outhitting the Lady Pack, 21-6. That gave the Tigerettes a 43-20 lead. They finished off Washington with a 12-8 final period margin.

Paula Bennett led Williamston with 18 points and Jo Anna Lilley added 12. Janet Campbell had 10 to lead Washington.

In the boys' contest, Williamston was able to slip into a 9-8 lead after one period, but they couldn't hold on. Washington outhit them, 14-6, in the second frame, and carried a 22-15 lead into the dressing room.

Washington added four more points to the lead in the third period, upping it to 36-25. The Pam Pack outscored Williamston, 20-16, to wrap it up.

Roy Thompson led Washington with 20 points, while Alvis Rogers had 13. Williamston was led by Barry Wallace and Ronald Brown, each with 10.

Saratoga Nips Farmville, 72-71

FARMVILLE — Terry Tillery and Ralph Bailey combined for 43 points to lead Saratoga to a come-from-behind 72-71 win over Farmville Central.

The Cougars had to overcome a 34-point performance by Farmville Central's Kenno Farrow and a 3-point Farmville lead at the end of the third quarter to get the win.

Jaguar James Baker was the only other player in double figures. He hit for 15 points.

Saratoga also took the girls' game, 57-55 on a last-seond tip-in by Cheryl King. The Cougarettes jumped out to an 18-4 lead in the first quarter, but the Lady Jags fought back to take the lead and it took the tip by King to win it for Saratoga.

King led the Saratoga scoring with 15 points and Pat Peoples had 14. Charlene Boykin picked up 11 for the Cougarettes and Pam Eastwood added 10 more.

Julia Moye paced the Lady Jags with 17 points while Diane Barrett picked up 14 and Jennifer Counterman had 12.

In the junior varsity contest, the Baby Jaguars defeated the Cubs, 60-41.

The losses were the second for the boys and the first for the girls in three outings. Farmville Central travels to Eastern Wayne next Friday night.

Pantego Rips Bear Grass Five

PANTEGO — Pantego High School slammed the Bears of Bear Grass in a pair of basketball games Friday night. The Pantego boys took an 82-50 decision, while the girls worked up a 52-26 win.

In the girls' game, Pantego doubled up on Bear Grass in the first period, 8-4, and then nearly did it again in the second frame, 11-6. That put the Squaws into a 19-10 lead at intermission.

In the third period, Pantego upped its lead to 31-18, with a four-point edge in scoring. But in the final period, Pantego ripped the Bears for a 21-8 margin, winding up the win.

Ingrid O'Neal led Pantego with 21 points, while Dalphene Harris had 15. Patricia Taylor led the Bears with 11.

In the boys' game, Pantego slipped out to a 13-11 lead in the opening frame. They pulled further out in the second quarter with an 18-12 advantage, making it 31-23 at the half.

The third period proved to be the killer as the Warriors hit 31 points, while holding the Bears to 14. That ran the lead out to 62-37. Pantego finished off the Bears with a 20-13 margin in the final period.

Terry Freeman led Pantego with 23 points, while Andrea McCloud had 20 and Donnie Carter had 11. Dwayne Baker had 19 and Robert Harrison had 10 for Bear Grass.

Hofstra Might Become A Household Word

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Hofstra is hardly a household name—not even in Pittsburgh.

"We had a cab driver and a bus driver on the way into town say, 'Hofstra Who?' " noted Coach Ralph Gaeckler.

But the Flying Dutchmen could be known in some households tonight if they beat Southern Illinois in the finals of the Pittsburgh Classic.

The college basketball team with the anonymous image defeated Duquesne 76-70 Friday night to advance to the championship round against the 17th-ranked Salukis, who beat Pitt 72-67.

Here's a quick rundown on the Flying Dutchmen: They're off to a 4-1 start this season after compiling an 18-12 record last year and winning the East Coast Conference playoffs. Defeated by Connecticut 80-78 in overtime in the NCAA regionals, the Flying Dutchmen have returned one of the nation's most fearsome rebounders in John Irving.

Irving's performance complemented a 29-point night by Rich Laurel and preceded another superb show by Mike Glenn of Southern Illinois. The Salukis' extraordinary guard poured in 32 points to help turn back Pitt.

In other tournaments Friday night, sixth-ranked San Francisco defeated No. 15 Tennessee 86-77 and Utah trimmed Seton Hall 95-86 in the Utah Classic at Salt Lake City; Idaho State whipped Georgia Tech 88-72 and Marshall stopped Columbia 79-78 in the opening round of the Marshall Memorial Invitational in Huntington, W. Va.; North Carolina-Charlotte downed Lamar 91-86 and New Mexico State stopped Northern Arizona 82-77 in the Roadrunner Invitational at Las Cruces, N.M., and Niagara defeated Xavier of Ohio 46-44 and Brigham Young trounced Seattle 91-65 in the Cougar Classic in Provo, Utah.

Also, Long Beach State outscored Butler 63-50 and Southern Cal trimmed Grambling 83-75 in the Trojan Classic in Los Angeles; St. Francis, Pa., walloped Georgia State 74-56 and Stetson turned back LIU 57-47 in the Hatter Classic in Deland, Fla.; Texas A&M whipped Houston Baptist 87-72 and Southwestern Louisiana nudged Centenary 91-88 in double overtime in the Bayou Classic in Lafayette, La., and Cal State Fullerton beat South Alabama 89-71 and Pepperdine trimmed Azusa Pacific 83-62 in the Malibu Classic in Los Angeles.

Sophomores James Hardy and Winford Boynes each scored 18 points to lead San Francisco past Tennessee. Jeff Judkins scored 29 points, mostly from the outside, and Buster Mathenay muscled in many of his 27 points from underneath the basket as Utah defeated Seton Hall in the second game of the utah Classic.

Ed Thompson's 25 points powered Idaho State past Georgia Tech. Greg Young sank a short jumper with 14 seconds remaining as Marshall nipped Columbia.

North Carolina-Charlotte defeated Lamar as Cedric Maxwell scored 25 points and pulled down 13 rebounds. Forward Richard Robinson connected for 27 points to lead New Mexico State over Northern Arizona.

Clarence Ruffen's 16 points paced Long Beach State over Butler in the opener of the Trojan Classic. Southern Cal won the nightcap over Grambling as Greg White scored 28 points.

A 17-point performance by Larry Walker powered St. Francis, Pa., past Georgia State. Mel Daniels scored 18 points and led a second-half charge as Stetson trimmed LIU in the second game of the Hatter Classic.

Panthers Hold Off Roanoke For Victory

ROBERSONVILLE — North Pitt split a pair of games with Roanoke Friday night, winning the boys' game, 62-50, but losing the girls' contest, 37-15.

In the boys' game, the Panthers jumped out to a 19-6 lead in the first quarter and built it up to as many as 20 points before a fourth-quarter rally by Roanoke cut it to eight at one point. A North Pitt flurry near the end of the game made the final score 62-50.

Virgil Pilgreen led the North Pitt scoring with 26 points and Jimmy Hardy had 11. Roanoke held Donnie Perkins to under 10 for the first time this year. He finished with nine.

Rick Duggins scored 13 points to pace Roanoke and Lowell Williams had 12.

The Squaws were never really threatened in the girls' game as they held the Pant-HERS to two points in the first quarter and no points in the third period.

Phyllis McNeil scored 12 points for Roanoke and Yvette Modica added 10 more. Cynthia Barnes was the high scorer for North Pitt with five.

The win was the third straight for the North Pitt boys while Roanoke drops to 0-4. Roanoke's girls are now 3-1 and the Pant-HERS are 0-3.

Roanoke will entertain North Johnston next Friday night while North Pitt will host South Edgecombe Friday.

Marvin Barnes Has Found A New Interest: Basketball, Leads Win

By The Associated Press

Marvin Barnes is on the rebound. The troubled forward of the Detroit Pistons has a new-found interest—basketball.

"All I want to do is play basketball and try to get a ring on my hand," said Barnes after helping the Pistons to a 106-104 National Basketball Association victory over the New York Nets Friday night.

Barnes is considered to be so talented that Pistons' General Manager Oscar Feldman paid $500,000 for him in the American Basketball Association dispersal draft.

But despite his talents, Barnes has been considered a problem. He has left his teams several times, has come down with "mysterious" injuries and most recently, had a one-year suspended sentence for a assault charge revoked when he violated parole by carrying a gun.

In the other NBA games, Phoenix defeated Boston 107-103; Portland trimmed Buffalo 103-102; Washington stopped Indiana 98-88; Chicago defeated New Orleans 92-78; San Antonio ripped Milwaukee 136-120; Los Angeles whipped Houston 109-99 and Seattle topped Golden State 99-93.

Phoenix 107, Celtics 103

Ricky Sobers scored 25 points and backcourt mate Paul Westphal added 21 as Phoenix built a big lead and hung on to beat Boston. The Suns, beaten for the NBA championship in a six-game playoff with the Celtics last spring, evened their record at 10-10.

Trail Blazers 103, Braves 102

Larry Steele scored 11 points in the fourth quarter as Portland held off a Buffalo rally. Buffalo, playing with a makeshift lineup, never led in the game.

Bullets 98, Pacers 88

Wes Unseld returned to the game after spraining an ankle and scored 11 points in the fourth quarter to lead Washington to a come-from behind victory over Indiana.

Bulls 92, Jazz 78

Chicago continued its mastery of New Orleans with an easy victory behind Norm Van Lier's 17 points. Although the Bulls have won only five of 20 games this season, they have beaten New Orleans twice in the past week.

Spurs 136, Bucks 120

San Antonio, led by 23 points by Larry Kenon and 22 by Mike Gale, opened a 16-point second quarter lead and held off a Milwaukee rally for a runaway victory over the Bucks.

Lakers 109, Rockets 99

Lucius Allen scored 20 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 18 to propel Los Angeles over Houston. The Lakers led by as much as 29 points midway through the fourth period.

SuperSonics 99, Warriors 93

Fred Brown scored 23 points as Seattle defeated Golden State for the SuperSonics' 29th consecutive home-court victory. Brown was particularly effective in the third quarter when he scored 12 points and helped the Sonics step out to a 75-65 advantage.

Seattle After Record Victory

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Call it a tale of two cities.

And there is Tampa, whose bright sun never seems to shine on the Buccaneers.

The first season ends Sunday for these two babies of the National Football League. The Seahawks have a shot at matching five other expansion teams—Minnesota, Atlanta, New Orleans, Cincinnati and Miami—which ended their first seasons with 3-11 records. Seattle is 2-11 heading into Philadelphia.

The Bucs have a chance to achieve a feat unmatched in the history of the league. If they lose to New England, they'll have staggered through a 14-game season without so much as a tie to show for it. The worst previous records were 0-11 by the 1942 Detroit Lions and 0-11-1 by the 1960 expansion Dallas Cowboys.

In Sunday's other games, it's St. Louis at the New York Giants and Washington at Dallas with the Cards and Redskins fighting for the National Conference wild card, Cleveland at Kansas City, Cincinnati at the New York Jets, Green Bay at Atlanta, Buffalo at Baltimore, Denver at Chicago, San Francisco at New Orleans and San Diego at Oakland.

Today, Pittsburgh is at Houston with a chance to win the American Conference Central title, Minnesota visits Miami and, tonight Los Angeles is at Detroit.

Seattle's southpaw quarterback, Jim Zorn, has a chance to set a rookie single-season passing record. He has thrown for 2,334 yards and needs 173 to equal Dennis Shaw's 2,507, set in 1970 for Buffalo.

New England quarterback Steve Grogan has thrown for 18 scores and run for 11 to account for 29 of the club's 42 touchdowns. He will be operating against a Tampa Bay defense which has given up 20 touchdowns rushing and 19 passing. Steve Spurrier, who sat out the Bucs' 42-0 walloping by Pittsburgh last week, returns as the quarterback with Terry Hanratty returning to the bench.

Zisk Goes To Chisox

This all came about Friday night at baseball's winter meetings, just three hours before the midnight (PST) interleague trading deadline when the Pirates acquired Gossage and Forster from the Chicago White Sox in exchange for Zisk, a hard-hitting outfielder and Silvio Martinez, a rookie right-handed pitcher.

Tanner knew what he was bargaining for because he had both pitchers when he managed the White Sox from 1972-1975.

"Gossage and Forster will be used as relievers," said Tanner, who managed Oakland last season and was dealt by the A's in November for catcher Manny Sanguillen and $100,000.

In other transactions Friday, the St. Louis Cardinals reacquired third baseman Ken Reitz from the San Francisco Giants for right-handed pitcher Lynn McGlothen and the Cleveland Indians sent right-handed pitcher Jackie Brown to the Montreal Expos for first baseman Andre Thornton.

During this week's meetings 40 players changed teams in 14 deals. This amounts to a sharp decline from last year when 64 players were involved in 23 deals.

One factor, for the first time in history, is another interleague trading period is set for Feb. 15-March 15. The new free agent provision and multiple-year contracts are other causes of light trading.

Jamesville Captures Win

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville's Bullets held Bath to only two points in the third period to post a 49-40 win over the Pirates.

The Bullets, down by three at the half, outscored Bath 10-2 in the third quarter to take the lead and coast to the victory.

Ricky Whitehurst paced the Bullets with 21 points and Eric Davis added 13. Terry Rodman scored 14 for Bath.

Jamesville's girls had no trouble with the Lady Pirates, rolling up a 46-32 win. The Lady Bullets were paced by Joyce Manning with 18 points. Molly Hopkins had 15 for Bath.

The wins up the records of both Jamesville teams to 3-1. They will be in action again Tuesday night when they host Chocowinity.

68, Will Climb Jagged Peak On New Year's Day

By DAN CHISZAR

DENVER (UPI) — Grizzled mountaineer Paul Petzoldt shifted his burly frame in a chair and dedicated his traditional New Year's Day climb of Wyoming's jagged 13,766-foot Grand Teton Peak to the old folks at home in 1977.

"I get all sorts of letters from people in retirement homes who read about my climbs," said the white-haired Petzoldt, 68, while in town to work on a mountain climbing film.

"I suppose a lot of these senior citizens sort of project themselves onto me, and I love it. They look on me as the old guy who is still active.

"Hell, I don't mind getting old. I hope they read about this climb and feel good about it."

Petzoldt, who in his salad days developed a reputation as a gambler, barroom brawler and adventurer, first climbed the northwestern Wyoming Peak at 16. Since then, he has climbed the mountain hundreds of times and once did it seven times in one day.

But, it wasn't until 1936 that he made his first treacherous mid-winter ascent. In 1965, Petzoldt scaled the peak with members of the National Outdoor Leadership School which he founded the same year in Lander, Wyo.

Every year since, Petzoldt has led a New Year's Day expedition up the mountain. The climbers have been successful in reaching the top in six of 11 attempts.

Each year, high winds whip up snowstorms on the mountain and temperatures drop far below zero. Avalanche danger is always present, but Petzoldt has yet to lose a climber in the mid-winter assault.

Only nine of the 27-member party made the summit on the last climb. Petzoldt said they were foolish to try it.

"Last time the group took more chances than they should have," he said. "They pushed on to the summit when they should have turned back. They had to climb down the peak in the dark, which is too risky. If I had been along on the final assault, we would have turned back."

Petzoldt sipped some coffee and then his talk drifted into his past.

"My values as a young man were 50 years ahead of time. I liked adventure.

"During the Depression I rode freight trains across the country. In my early days at Jackson Hole, Wyo., I learned about gambling by playing poker. I became a fairly good gambler and once worked as a dealer at Las Vegas.

"While going to high school, I worked with a restaurant cook who was a punchy, ex-sparring partner of Gene Tunney. He got the idea that he was going to make me the new world's champion. He trained me, and I fought around Elk's Clubs and smokers.

"I never had to fight very much. After I was in Jackson Hole a couple years, I fought a bully who had shot a couple guys and bit off one guy's ear. I won and nobody much wanted to tangle with me anymore."

Petzoldt was convicted of assault and battery about a year ago for tangling with a young man outside a Wyoming hotel bar. The only ill effects Petzoldt suffered from the fight were a $100 fine and $5 court costs.

"You know, I should lose a few pounds to make this next climb. I weigh about 250 pounds now, but I'm physically tough. I was in the mountains all last August carrying a 60-pound pack. I'll be doing a lot of downhill and some cross-country skiing in preparation for the climb."

Petzoldt's bushy eyebrows knitted into a frown on his ruddy face and he glanced downward.

"I always said I wasn't going to stop until I'm 80, so maybe I should keep going as long as I'm in good health. If I'm in good enough shape, I'd like to make a special effort to make the summit."

Petzoldt said he didn't try for the summit last time so the expedition's younger members would have a chance. He also said he would have slowed them down.

Petzoldt will select by late November two 12-member teams for the next climb. They will leave Lander the day after Christmas and cross-country ski to Bradlee Lake in Grand Teton Park.

The climbers will trek to the Middle Teton Glacier at the 11,000-foot level by Dec. 29 and spend the next day preparing for an assault on the summit, which includes the last 600 nearly vertical feet up the steep granite peak.

"My sincere desire to make the summit is not going to affect my judgment once I'm there," Petzoldt said. "It will depend on a lot of things like weather conditions and how I feel.

"I just have a feeling that maybe I shouldn't press my luck too far. I'd like to grow old gracefully and not try to give the idea that I was as good as I ever was. I don't want to be anything but my age."

Coloring Books To Pay The Bill

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Jaycees are selling giant coloring books to help pay for dugouts at the baseball field at A.G. Cox School field. The giant coloring books measure two feet by three feet and follow a Christmas theme.

According to Warren Averette, project chairman, the Jaycees have sold 300 of the coloring books and have 510 more to sell. Anyone interested in buying a coloring book should call 756-1022 or contact any of the Winterville Jaycees.

NOT YET ENOUGH

ATLANTA (AP) — Nearly 35 million Americans have received swine flu innoculations, more than one-fourth the number targeted for shots but not enough to halt an epidemic, a federal health official said today.

Lots Of Surprises Involved In Playing Santa Role

By ANTHONY POLK
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The little girl, her eyes wide with fear, shakes her head, wanting none of this. But an inexorable force—her mother's hand—drives her toward me and I am delighted.

My head enshrouded with wiry white hair, my body and a life preserver swathed in heavy red velveteen, I have been up here in this nook of Christmas cheer for a full five minutes— trying, desperately, to lure some kid to my throne.

But despite my plaintive Ho, Ho, Hos, and smiles as idiotic as those of the mannequin skaters in the Christmas scene of styrofoam snow surrounding me, I get no takers.

Until this little girl. She seems near tears now, and with each step toward me, she plants her feet more firmly. But her mother—bless her— keeps on shoving.

"Don't you wanna see Santa," Momma says.

"Nooo," wails the child.

Why me? I have seldom seen an out-of-demand Santa. But here in this sprawling, northeast Atlanta shopping mall, replete with all the signs of Christmas—gas window displays, solemn Salvation Army collectors—shoppers with kids in tow cast me quick glances, but pass me by.

Finally, she is on my knee and, as the Salvation Army band down the mall rolls into "Come All Ye Faithful," I try acting like Santa.

I ask her name. She mumbles. I ask her age. Nothing. Has she been good this year? Silence. My stomach sinks.

I ask her what she wants for Christmas. She quivers, her eyes cast down at her tiny, clenched hands. I begin to sweat. I look to my helper, who chooses that instant to snap her picture.

The girl begins sliding off my knee—she has asked for nothing, I have promised nothing— but I haven't the heart to stop her.

She flees to her mother so quickly I forget to give her a candy cane. And, I forget to slip her a leaflet for her mother, telling how photographs of this event can be purchased.

My helper, chagrined, quickly rectifies both mistakes.

To my surprise, a line has formed during all this, and I wish I were once again out of demand.

But the next kids prove to be veterans. Troopers all, they march into my kingdom, plunk themselves on my knee, answer the requisite questions, name, age, grade, behavior during the year—all good—and then they rattle off their lists—of presents the likes of which I have never heard.

One of these, Robby, 8, is clearly past the age of innocence. But his mother wants a shot of him and a friend with Santa so up they come.

Robby has a great shock of brown hair falling across his forehead, and he looks like a fellow whose mother thinks him an angel, while his neighbors know him to be a rascal.

He says he has been good all year, but I press him.

"All year long," say I. "You haven't done one thing wrong?"

"Nope," he says.

My helper, Mary Gracy Phillips, 18, who landed this job after a tour as an Easter Bunny at the mall last March, chooses this moment to tell us to look up.

To Robby, I whisper: "You haven't thrown rocks at anyone all year?"

A mischievious grin creases his face. The camera clicks.

I am laughing when Robby and friend leave, but momentarily I am sad—and angry. I am bathed in sweat now, my beard-hairpiece is askew and I can hardly breath. But I am tired too, tired of telling my charges to look up and smile for the camera, of telling them to wave at mommy. Tired too of the hollowness of my voice, the insincerity I know the kids can hear.

But I try again.

Catrina is on my knee. She says she is "three," holding up one finger. She begins detailing the loot she expects to find under the tree Christmas morning. What with the din of the mall, the Salvation Army band—now doing "Peace on Earth"—and the strap of my hairpiece all but closing my right ear, I hear little now.

But I do catch that she wants a "mouse trap."

"You got mice?" I ask.

Her face clouds. "No," she informs. "It's a game."

I throw back my head, laughing, all knowing. "Of course," I say. "I have been making them all year."

She beams, and for the first time all day, I figure I have pulled it off. Catrina leaves, and I decide it's my time too.

As I trudge from my kingdom, a mother pushing a stroller stops.

I bend down to wish the babe Merry Christmas.

She begins to Cry.

Graffiti Is Thesis Topic

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Janice Dee Gilbert, who goes around peering at the handwriting on the wall, thinks today's graffiti may be tomorrow's history.

"Topics too sensitive, too bigoted and too outrageous for the traditional historian are the natural province of graffiti," said the University of New Orleans graduate student.

She speaks with some expertise. She wrote her English master's thesis on "Graffiti in New Orleans: A Study of Folk Epigraphy."

Besides scanning wall scrawls available to all passersby, Miss Gilbert took her search for a degree of enlightenment to powder rooms and restrooms in bars, chaperoned by friends who scouted and guarded while she peeped in and jotted in the male facilities.

Graffiti may be traced back to 15,000 B.C. in French caves. "The first known graffito using a written language was found in 1856 in the subterranean chambers of the Palatine and is dated from A.D. 3," Miss Gilbert said.

"The anonymous nature of graffiti lends courage to the most timid soul," said Miss Gilbert, who noted she could never catch anyone in the act of writing graffiti.

Religious Repression Growing In Many Countries

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The setting was pastoral Riobamba, outside of Quito, Ecuador. The subject was equally "pastoral" — the shared experiences of Roman Catholic bishops from Latin America and the United States.

Suddenly, however, the retreat-like atmosphere was shattered.

Machine gun-armed troops of the Ecuadorian government burst into the conference room, herded the bishops and other church officials onto a bus and took them to a military barracks where they were held for 27 hours without food before being released and expelled from the country.

The government said their talk was subversive.

While no one was hurt and no one was injured, the incident underscores a growing tension between churches and repressive governments.

The persecution of believers for living out their religious faith is nothing new. The Holocaust — the slaughter of the Jews in the 1940's — stands as the 20th century's most supreme and hideous example of religious persecution.

And while the kind of religious repression that is increasingly being reported today is not on that scale, a growing number of both Christians and Jews are finding themselves in sharp conflict with the governments under which they live.

Much of the new repression stems from the growing influence in Third World countries of the "theology of liberation," which calls on Christians to work for the economic liberation of the poor and the oppressed.

"We ought never doubt for a moment that we are called to witness in a world that is every bit as threatening to followers of Jesus Christ as it was in New Testament times," Dr. Kenneth L. Teegarden, general minister and president of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), recently told his denomination's governing board.

Citing examples of Disciples missionaries arrested in the Philippines and Paraguay, he said "identification with the poor and the oppressed is now — as it was in the time of Jesus Christ — too much for people in power to bear."

In Latin America, Asia and southern Africa, growing numbers of activist clergy and lay people are finding themselves threatened, exiled, imprisoned and sometimes executed for speaking out on behalf of the poor or the oppressed.

In October, Jesuit Father Joao Bosco Penido Burnier was clubbed and then shot at a police station in Brazil, when he sought the release of two women allegedly being mistreated by police.

Clergy and laity alike have been tortured and executed in Chile and there have been reports of the mysterious deaths of priests in Colombia, Bolivia, Argentina and Paraguay, with arrests and deportations in those countries as well as Ecuador, Peru and Uruguay.

In Seoul, South Korea, some dozen Christian leaders have been imprisoned by President Park Chung Hee for reading a statement in the Seoul cathedral calling for restoration of democratic civil rights in that country.

"The future looks very bleak to me," said Mrs. Faye Moon, wife of one of those imprisoned. "There's only one way a dictator goes; he never goes backward but only becomes more and more repressive."

The South Korea situation has brought forth protests from a wide range of U.S. religious organizations but to date the government, which heavily subsidizes the Park regime, has been unresponsive, according to church leaders.

In southern Africa, where white minority regimes dominate black majorities, the conflict between church and state is at its sharpest.

In Rhodesia, Carmelite Bishop Donal Lamont was sentenced to 10 years in prison on Oct. 1 on charges surrounding alleged contacts between church missionary personnel and anti-government guerrillas.

All of the black nationalist leaders leading the struggle against the white minority regime of Ian Smith are either Christian clergymen or church trained and educated. Most notable among them is United Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa, head of the African National Council. Ndabaningi Sithole is an ordained minister of the United Church of Christ, Joshua Nkoma is a lay preacher in the British branch of the Methodist Church and Robert Mugabe is a practicing Roman Catholic.

Among the Soviet bloc countries, religious repression appears to be more related to practicing the faith than attempting to apply it to political or economic situations.

The West German (Roman Catholic) Bishops Conference recently reported that in the Soviet Union "thousands" of people in labor camps are there "for religious reasons."

Rose Styron, a board member of Amnesty International, has estimated that half a million people are being detained by governments around the world, many of them religious leaders "even though they have neither advocated nor engaged in violence."

SIX-LEGGED FROG — This is one of two six-legged frogs being kept at the Redmond (Ore.) High School. The frogs were found in a nearby pond. Students are waiting to see if the abnormality can be reproduced. The six-legged frogs use all six legs when they swim and students say they can easily beat a normal frog in a race Walt Wolfe, a biology teacher at the high school, said it isn't known yet if one is a male and the other a female. Officers Of Realtors Are Installed

Jack Duffus was installed as president of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors for 1977 on Friday evening.

Other officers installed for the coming year by William D. Seawell of Greensboro, 1976 president of the North Carolina Association of Realtors, included: Dan Powers, vice president; Trish Byrum, secretary-treasurer; and Jeannette Cox, state director.

JACK DUFFUS

Directors installed were Bill Clark, Louis Clark, Phil Carroll, Mary Lib Faser and Ollie Harrington, as well as the new slate of officers.

Duffus is owner and manager of Duffus Realty here and is 1976 president of Multiple Listing Service. He retired as a colonel from the Air Force with some 30 years service.

During the business meeting following dinner, Jeannette Cox, outgoing president, presented Henry Leslie, chairman of the Pitt Memorial Hospital Gifts Committee, a check for $1,000 toward the new facility as part of the $5,000 commitment from the board over a five-year period.

Will Telecast From Holy Land

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — A television special from Jerusalem by TV minister Rex Humbard is scheduled to be telecast around the world by satellite Dec. 23-24.

It will be heard in English in the United States, Canada, Nigeria, the Philippines, Australia and Tasmania. It will be simultaneously translated into Portuguese for release on a network in Brazil, into Spanish for Puerto Rican and Chilean viewers, Japanese for Japan and French for Quebec.

Climbing School In The Sinai

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israel's Society for the Preservation of Nature has opened a school to train teachers and guides for mountain-climbing tourists in the Sinai Peninsula.

It is headed by Stephen Golt, a recent immigrant from the United States.

Lab Seeking Toy Safety

By PAUL LOONG

HONG KONG (UPI) — There's a place in Hong Kong that wreaks havoc on toys in an attempt to keep them safe for children throughout the world.

The Hong Kong Standards and Testing Center crushes, burns, bites, stretches and twists toys. Any teddy bear or toy car that fails to stand up to these tortures is returned to the manufacturer.

The significance of the testing center is reflected in the fact that Hong Kong is the world's largest exporter of toys, a position it took over from Japan in 1972.

"We do about 400 tests on toys every day," said director Cecil Chan. "Items submitted go through a program of safety testing designed to make sure they are fit for export to the countries hewing to the Federal Hazardous Substance Act regulations."

The center serves as a nonprofit independent testing agent for the Toy Manufacturers of America trade asssociation, Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., the Canadian Standards Association, the British Standards Association and other organizations, Chan said.

The testing is entirely voluntary, he said. "It is a relatively cheap and valuable service to overseas buyers and local manufacturers alike.

"A U.S. buyer, for example, can ask a local manufacturer to send toys here for testing before shipping them all the way to America," he said. "That is better than having the shipment arrive in the United States before finding out that it falls short of requirements laid down by the Consumer Product Safety Commission."

"Having toys tested here would also show that the buyer has tried to ensure safety in the toys imported; it is a kind of legal safeguard against prosecution," he said.

Hong Kong has been the United States' largest foreign toy supplier since 1971. More than $144 million worth of toys were sent to the U.S. in the first eight months this year.

A local manufacturer with an order from the U.S. will send six to 12 samples of a shipment to the center. Sometimes a buyer asks the center to select the samples to ensure objectivity. They then are tested for toxic substances, irritants, sharp points and edges.

Noise-making toys such as toy guns are tested for acceptable noise level. Toys made of volatile, flammable material are tested to determine their flashpoint.

Almost all toys have to go through impact, bite, flexure, torque, tension and compression tests. The center has $700,000 worth of instruments for this purpose, Chan said.

An individual test costs from $3 to $30. The cost of putting a toy through all tests would be about $100.

A product that passes all required tests is given a quality certificate.

"If it fails," Chan said, "we offer free consultant service to the manufacturers to tell them what they have to do to make their products meet the standards."

"In some cases, it is a matter of remolding one part of the toy or improving the material used. Sometimes this can be done within 24 hours," he said. "Plastic toys, for example, should not have sharp edges even when broken. And they won't have sharp edges if the manufacturer watches the quality of the plastic carefully."

Chan said the greatest problem the center must cope with consists of varying sets of standards from country to country.

"Through the International Committee on the Toy Industry, of which the Hong Kong Standards and Testing Center is a member, we are trying to come up with a harmonized international standard for toys," he said.

That way, toys acceptable to one country would also be acceptable to another, he said.

Culture Proves A Bigger Draw

The Fisher Theater in Detroit's inner city sold 54,600 season tickets for its cultural season and is still counting. The Datroit Lions, who fled to suburban Pontiac, had a final season ticket count of 48,862, down from last season.

Beaver Making Comeback In The South

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — The furry little beaver, symbol of America's pioneering past that once was nearly trapped to extinction, is making a comeback in the South to the delight of conservationists and the woe of big timber owners.

There are close to a million beavers now in Alabama, Arkansas, eastern Texas, Mississippi, , Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, western Tennessee and western Kentucky, according to an admittedly "wild guess" by Dr. Ed Hill of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Hill said the busy creatures are doing, as expected, an efficient job of flood and erosion control on hundreds of streams in the South. With dams constructed of tree trunks and limbs, they increase wildlife habitat and provide water impoundments for irrigation and livestock. But they also cause sometimes large timber losses and occasionally flood a farmer's field of cotton or soybeans.

The timber destruction and crop damage are the reasons the beaver now is considered a problem in some states, Hill said. But the desire of commercial timber growers to eliminate the beaver has clashed with the viewpoint of environmentalists, state wildlife officials and even some farmers who value the good things the beaver does.

"Back during the late 1800s they were trapped to near extinction by Hudson Bay personnel who came into the southeast," Hill said. "They were completely eliminated in some areas.

"But the game and fish divisions in some states did live trapping and moved some of the remaining beavers around. They took very well to the restocking program and became re-established in the whole southeast region."

The re-stocking took place in the 1930s through the 1950s, Hill said. In the meantime, the beavers' natural enemies, such as bears, mountain lions and wolves, were driven out by man. The oldtime professional trappers passed out of the picture. With few natural enemies and being an animal relatively free of disease, beavers thrived and multiplied.

The Georgia Forestry Commission conducted a survey last year which showed that the area on which trees were damaged increased 128 per cent over the level shown in a 1967 study. The commission said there were approximately 287,700 acres inhabited by beaver in Georgia. It put the loss of commercial timber at more than 2.8 million cords of pulpwood and one billion board feet of saw timber. The timber loss was valued at more than $45 million in the 10-year period.

The commission said, however, that in most counties there were landowners who desire to keep the beaver for the benefits his activities produce.

Hill, a wildlife researcher stationed at Auburn University in Alabama, said there were an estimated 10,000 acres of beaver ponds in Alabama, a similar acreage in South Carolina, and 23,000 acres of beaver-flooded land in Mississippi. Larry Thomas, of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Atlanta said some of the 38 federally-controlled wildlife refuges in the Southeast were reporting some timber damage caused by beavers, especially in the Delta and Piedmont areas. But he said that in refuges farther south where alligators are present, beaver populations are held in check.

According to Hill, the beaver has not become a problem in the west because of a lack of streams. In the north and east, he said, beaver never has been restocked in some states, while trappers in such states as Ohio, Maryland and Pennsylvania keep their numbers down.

"My own personal philosophy is that I would like to see people utilize this natural resource because it is renewable," Hill said, citing the value of the beaver for its food and fur.

"Our research efforts have proven that you can control beaver on small watersheds by trapping. We recommend a scheme of trapping that involves two weeks of trapping during two successive years."

A Big Crop In Crickets

He's a cricket farmer, a business he sort of backed into 10 years ago.

"What made it so tough was the fact that no books have ever been published on cricket farming," said Nichols. "I had to learn everything the hard way, but I've worked out a system that lets me produce up to 1.5 million of these little fellows at a time."

The 60-year-old Deridder man began raising crickets to use as his own fish bait. Then, when his chirping horde began hatching faster than he could put them on a hook, he began selling his surplus to other fishermen.

Now, from his cricket farm in an old World War II mess hall at Beauregard Parish Airport, he wholesales only to bait dealers.

Nichols raises brown crickets imported from Australia. "They are more prolific than our native blacks and are in greater demand by fishermen because fish bite them better," he said.

Crickets, he found, flourish best at 90 degrees. "At that temperature, they are ready for market within 45 to 46 days," he said. "Lowering the setting to 85 degrees can retard development as much as a week."

The insects are voracious eaters. Nichols may need up to a ton of high-protein chick mash every four or five days during peak spring months. His annual feed bill is about $2,400.

Easter Seal Chapter's Activities Commended

William T. Kissam, Acting Director of the North Carolina Easter Seal Society commended the Northeast Chapter for being one of the most active chapters in the state at its quarterly dinner meeting Tuesday night.

The Northeast Chapter, encompassing 19 counties of northeastern North Carolina, was founded three years ago and is actively expanding to meet the needs of handicapped children and adults throughout the region.

The Easter Seal Society is a volunteer organization consisting of concerned citizens from all over northeastern North Carolina who feel they can help the disabled citizens from their counties.

The Northeast Chapter not only purchases special equipment but also provides a large variety of services for the handicapped population of the area. Many needs are met not just for the physically handicapped population of the area. In Greenville, the Society provides daily transportation for students at ADAP. Also, working with the Greenville Recreation Department, the Society participates with a group of high functioning mentally retarded and physically handicapped young adults.

The Chapter Board is presided by Vann Latham. Members from Pitt County are Mark Banks, David Ruffin, Hester Latham, Susan Seymour, George Hamilton, Emmett Peaden, Alice Keene, and Carlton Hardee.

The goals for the coming year were discussed and the Board agreed that the Easter Seal Society in this area will work toward a stronger volunteer base. A monthly newsletter has been inaugurated to assist the communications and effectiveness of the volunteers. Several fund raising projects were also planned.

People Of Essex Do Without TV

By MIKE GOODKIND
Associated Press Writer

Some of the 17 ranchers and park rangers who live in the nearby hills can pull in stations broadcasting from Phoenix, Ariz., 270 miles to the southeast. But the 50 folks clustered around the post office, gas station and elementary school in the Mojave desert here get nothing. Even the closest stations — in Las Vegas, 110 miles away — are blocked by hills.

The Denver Research Institute says that one million U.S. households receive inadequate service on only one channel. Essex, with no service at all, is lumped into that figure along with isolated communities without TV in several other states.

"It's really boring here," says 13-year-old Toni Smith, who rides a bus 40 miles to attend junior high school in Needles.

"Television is an excuse for not doing something about loneliness," says Phil Acosta, 19, a highway maintenance worker. "Without TV I go out and make friends."

"I think you have politer kids here," says Margaret Stevens, 57, who was raised in New York and whose husband, Al, is the schoolteacher. "Everyone knows everyone. Kids are forced to talk with their parents. You just can't sit in front of the TV and stare."

Many of the older people spend free time roaming the brush country in four-wheel-drive jeeps, a substitute for TV entertainment. The kids make believe they're truck drivers, but that reflects the nearby interstate highway, not TV.

Just about everyone in Essex owns a TV set. Most moved here in recent years and brought with them the sets they had watched in other towns and cities.

Modern technology could bring television to Essex, but the several thousand dollars needed for a mountaintop device to relay a TV signal would have to be split among the townspeople, and they have decided it would be too expensive.

"Most people here just sort of scratch out a living," says Walt Smith, who runs a service station. "They're here because they like living in the desert, not because they want to be rich."

The sign which once flanked U.S. 66 reads, "Essex, Pop. 100." The sign is still there, but most of the people and Highway 66 aren't.

When the interstate bypassed Essex in 1973, U.S. 66 became a county highway. The cafe, bar and motel have since been boarded up.

The 17 kids at the Essex school, aged 5 to 12, have all seen television. Some have lived in Los Angeles, 250 miles to the west.

Paula Plantz, 12, says she especially misses "The Brady Bunch."

"On Mondays here there really isn't anything to do, so my mom and I bake cookies and stuff," says Paula. "On Tuesday there's square dancing class over in Needles, and on Wednesday we have square dancing right here. On Thursday we have the movies ... Let's see, last time we had "Davy Crockett," and before that we had Elvis Presley.

"And then on Fridays we usually go into Redlands or I go up to my friend Audean's house."

Doug Smith, who is in his mid-40s, gave up a successful sand and gravel business in Riverside to return to Essex. He says, "I like to watch football games, and maybe if we had it, people wouldn't always be running off to Needles to go to the movies."

Most of the children say they do a lot of reading, but their teacher, Al Stevens, 58, says they "really don't do any more reading than kids elsewhere ... They seem to like stories about the outdoors which reflect what they see around them."

Big Collector Of Old Bricks

ROSSENDALE, England (AP) — More than two tons of old, well worn bricks clutter Henry Holt's life. There are more than 700 of them piled high in his home, throughout his garden and around his nearby small land holding.

He loves them. Indeed, he plans to open a museum to show what he claims is the finest exhibition of bricks in the world.

Holt, a 63-year-old retired building and timber merchant, has been collecting bricks for 15 years, ever since he looked down at the rubble of an old cotton mill and saw a brick bearing his surname staring back.

"It started me thinking," said Holt. "'E Holt, Rossendale'. I'd never even heard of the firm and I became curious. I took the brick home and from then on I was hooked. I can't pass a brick now without turning it over to see who made it."

"They need proper care," said Holt, who plans to take over a building near his home for the museum. He believes it will be the first of its kind. "People will then be able to appreciate the fascination of bricks. I can see the day when brick collecting will be a popular hobby."

His wife, Mary, already does.

"Now I've grown as keen as he is," said Mary, a retired schoolmistress. "Brick collecting gets into your blood." She is busy cataloguing all her husband's bricks.

At first, Holt collected bricks only from his native Rossendale. But then he went farther and farther afield on carefully planned expeditions to important buildings that were being torn down. He has become a familiar figure amidst the ruins of old mills, churches, and, especially, railway stations.

Some of his most prized specimens — coloredglass bricks — have come from the subways and public conveniences of long unused stations. His oldest specimen, a railway brick, dates back to 1865.

Only bricks with a date or an inscription interest Holt. From these he is able to build a history of brickmaking in several regions, plotting the rise and fall of individual firms.

Inscriptions are found in the "frog" of the brick, the hollow part where the mortar is placed. There are also patterns in the bricks, such as diamonds and a rare figure of eight. One of his bricks contains the EIIR symbol, a tribute to the 1953 coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

Some bricks even have printing errors, and letters that have been inverted. Holt believes that, should his hobby catch on, these specimens should be worth their weight in gold.

People are always curious when they see Holt looking for bricks.

"When they discover something about my hobby," he said, "they usually stay to help."

UN CONFERENCE

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina will host the UN Conference on Water from March 14-17, 1977. UN organizers are already making plans for the conference, which will focus on the problems of the year 2000, when experts say more than 8 billion people will inhabit the earth. More than 150 countries are expected to participate in the conference.

The custom of using a Christmas tree began in Germany and was first mentioned in an anonymous chronicle in 1605.

Dilemma In Search Of Energy Sources

By BILL RAWLINS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An environmental battle over the biggest coal strip-mining operation ever proposed for Tennessee spotlights a national dilemma in the search for new energy sources.

AMAX Coal Co., Indianapolis, Ind., has been denied a water quality permit by the state as the first step in its plan to strip the coal from an acre a day of southeast Tennessee for the next 20 years. It is appealing to the state Water Quality Control Board, since the water quality permit is the first step to a surface mining permit under state law.

Despite detailed plans by AMAX to reconstruct several small streams and reclaim the land as it goes, the state contends the environmental damage to the water would make the proposal impossible.

Thirteen months earlier, when the Tennessee Valley Authority was seeking a license to operate the world's largest nuclear power plant near Hartsville, Tenn., several witnesses said TVA had not fully explored the potential of coal-fired steam plants, which now generate most of the agency's power for seven Southeastern states.

TVA subsequently lost a battle with the Environmental Protection Agency and was forced to install $250 million worth of equipment to remove sulfur dioxide from the stacks of its coal-fired plants. It contends nuclear power is safe, cheaper and cleaner.

At that time, Dr. Charles Roos, a Vanderbilt University physics professor, claimed TVA was manipulating its figures to show that nuclear power costs less than coal.

TVA, incidentally, says AMAX has not discussed selling the coal it hopes to mine in southeast Tennessee to that agency, although an AMAX spokesman said some of the coal would be for the electric power industry. Most of it, however, is believed destined for overseas steel mills; the only substantial coal produced in southeast Tennessee now is shipped to Japan.

Among those who have recently expressed concern over delays in finding new sources of energy is John Shacter, a chemical engineer employed by Union Carbide Nuclear Co., Oak Ridge.

As chairman of the energy education and communications committee of the American Society of Chemical engineers Shacter recently complained that neither President Ford nor President-elect Jimmy Carter had dealt adequately with the energy crisis during the summer campaign.

He said he is not familiar with AMAX's operation and cannot comment on it specifically. But, emphasizing that he was speaking only as one individual, he said, "In broad terms, if we're looking for the perfectly clean, absolutely safe energy source that has absolutely no effect on the environment, whatsoever, there is no such energy source."

Much of the cross-examination by attorneys representing the state and five different environmental groups at the Water Quality Control Board hearing dealt with the effect of the AMAX operation on water wells, springs and aquatic life, including micro-organisms.

AMAX conceded it would interrupt the flow of at least one stream during its mining operation. But, witnesses said, any streams would be reconstructed and the land would be reclaimed.

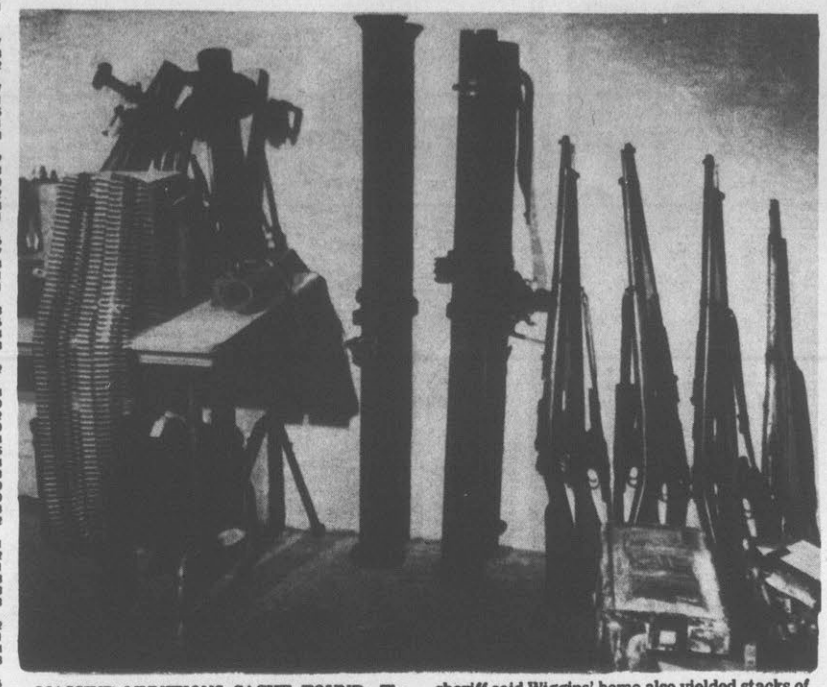
Many of the streams in the area are narrow and shallow and are wet only in rainy weather. Ollie Smith, a Nashville geological consultant to the company, said he found only five springs in the 10,000 acres which AMAX plans to mine during its first nine years. There are no municipal or public water supply systems which would be effected, he said.

But he and Dr. Ron Gilbert, another consultant, conceded the water table could be lowered as much as 100 feet by the mining operation.

If necessary, the company says, it will deepen wells.

Among those testifying was S. Leary Jones, who retired Nov. 1, 1975, as director of the health department's water quality control division. The division issues water quality permits to strip miners, although AMAX did not file its application until Jones had been retired a month.

It was not turned down for another three months, although Jones testified he knew of AMAX's plans before he retired.



MASSIVE MUNITIONS CACHE FOUND—The Los Angeles County Sheirff said Friday these weapons were part of eight tons of munitions found on property owned by Donald Wiggins of suburban Ontario, east of Los Angeles. The sheriff said Wiggins' home also yielded stacks of Nazi and right-wing literature. Wiggins told police another man stored the material on his property. (AP Wirephoto)

Active Trading

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Talk of a tax cut to stimulate the economy gave the stock market a strong upward push this past week in the busiest trading in nine months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 22.60 to 973.15, reaching its highest level since early October.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index recorded a 1.94 gain to 104.70, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index picked up 1.13 to 56.33.

Big Board volume averaged 26.66 million shares a day, providing brokers with a nice year-end infusion of business. It was the busiest week since March 8-12, when the daily average was 27.25 million.

Topic A all week on Wall Street was the possibility of some early moves by President-elect Carter to pump some life into the recently sluggish economy.

Emissaries from several different groups proposed to Carter a combination of tax reductions and spending increases on the order of $15 billion.

Carter remained noncommital about what he might decide. But Thomas "Bert" Lance, who has been named to be the new president's budget chief, said he believed Carter would choose to push for a tax cut, and investors seemed to be thinking the same thing.

In addition, Wall Street seemed to be going on the assumption that a tax cut would prove to be the proper medicine for the economy's ills.

Jan. 1, 1977. You've just missed a tax break.

Oh, what a difference a day makes! Open an Individual Retirement Account at First Federal Savings by December 31, and you get a '76 tax break. Wait 'til January 1, and you don't.

Who qualifies? Anyone not covered by a retirement plan, whether you're an employee, or self-employed. If you both qualify, you and your wife or husband can set up separate IRA's for double retirement income.

Here's how First Federal Savings IRA works. You can save as much as $1,500 or 15% of your income (whichever is less) every year, in one lump sum or in small amounts over the year. You pay no taxes on your retirement contributions or the interest they earn until you retire . . . when your tax rate should be substantially lower, and your exemptions higher.

Your retirement savings will grow fast, too, because First Federal Savings pays high interest on both passbook accounts and certificates of deposit. Get all the facts on First Federal Savings IRA. Fill out and mail this coupon today, or come in and see us. If you work during our office hours, we'll be happy to meet with you any evening. Just call for an appointment.

Aeroflot Using Aerial Microbus

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet airline Aeroflot has begun using short-range turboprop planes which are manufactured in Czechoslovakia, the Tass news agency reports.

Described as an "aerial microbus," the L-410 plane is being used to carry passengers and freight on domestic flights.

JC Awards Night Slated

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Jaycees will honor the Outstanding Young Farmer, Outstanding Young Educator, and Outstanding Young Law Officer in January, according to Steve Evans, President.

An award will be given to each of the men honored, for having demonstrated acheivement, leadership, and ability in his area of endeavor. The nominee must be a resident of the Winterville area, and must be between the ages of 18-35 not becoming 36 years old before January 1, 1977.

Nomination forms may be picked up at Ray's Barber Shop, Nobles Exxon and the Depot Grill in Winterville.

All nomination forms must be received by the Winterville Jaycees Awards Committee before midnight, December 30, 1976.

The Selection Committee will be composed of five outstanding Winterville Community residents who are not Jaycees.

Nominations should be sent to Winterville Jaycees in care of Randy Avery, Chairman, P.O. Box 805 Winterville, N.C. 28590.

Everything you always wanted to know about IRA.

Q. What is IRA?
A. An Individual Retirement Account.

Q. How does it work?
A. Each year you deposit a portion of your income to your IRA. The amount you deposit can legally be up to 15% of your annual earnings, but cannot exceed $1,500 per year.

Q. Does IRA earn interest?
A. Yes. The highest rate allowed by law.

Q. How is it different from a regular savings account?
A. There are some big differences. The amount you deposit isn't subject to taxes. For example, if you earn $15,000 this year and deposit $1,500 to your IRA, your tax base would drop to $13,500. The tax break applies to interest earned too.

Q. How do I start an IRA?
A. Come to Home Savings before December 31, and we'll be glad to get you started.

Evening Candlelight Homes Tour Set

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Sunday, December 12, 1976—C-1

Old houses. They are often eyesores. They litter the backroads, lower the property values in older neighborhoods. Their paint peels; their porches sag; their floors are rotten; jagged glass juts from their windowsills. Yet, which one of us has not detected, at one time or another, a quiet charm amid this decay? Which one of us has not longed to capture our own piece of history by renovating one of these run-down or abandoned buildings?

Few people are ultimately willing to invest the enormous amount of time and energy necessary to realize this dream, but the Christian Women's Fellowship of the First Christian Church in Farmville has arranged for some who have to share their homes for a few hours today with the rest of us. Only one of the six houses in Farmville's first Candlelight Christmas Tour of Homes has been built since 1921, and four of the homes were in advanced states of disrepair when the present owners acquired them.

The oldest home on the tour, YE OLE HOUSE, belongs to Jackie and Hardy Moye. Mrs. Moye has traced the house back to the 1820's, and she believes further research will prove that the house is even older. Built by Mr. Moye's ancestors on the original road into Greene County, the house sits about half a mile back from Highway 13. The land the house sits on was given to the Moye family in a land grant from England.

The Moyes have been working on the house, which they use as a farm office and a recreation house, since 1969. Their first task was to tear down a 100 year old addition which threatened to ruin one side of the original house. They added a new face to the fireplace to support the existing brick and left the original beams and the studs in one wall exposed. Although the hand-whittled stairs are now carpeted for safety, it is possible to view their underside from a closet in Mr. Moye's office. The house was put together with hand-whittled pegs approximately one inch thick. The original wainscoting still graces the walls downstairs, and the original pine panelling is the major attraction of the room upstairs. One of the more interesting articles in the house is a hand-written land deed dated 1848.

HEATH HOUSE on Contentnea Street, the home of Glenda and Butch Heath, was built in 1915 by John Baker. For many years it was used by the Catholic Church as a convent, but when Heath bought it from the church in January, 1976, it had been unoccupied for six or seven years. It was in such terrible condition that the banks were extremely reluctant to loan the Heaths the money to restore it. The floors were rotten, and the back of the house was burned out. However, by July the Heaths were ready to move in. Where the hole in the back of the house had been, there was a new kitchen. Closed-up fireplaces in the living room and dining room had been reopened and rebuilt. The attic had proved to be a treasure trove, yielding, among other things, an early recliner (now in the den) brought by the Bakers from Virginia, and the Queen Anne chair which now sits in the entrance hall near a solid oak kneeling bench, one of six left by the nuns. The original hand pump still sits on the back porch.

A young couple, the Heaths are understandably proud of their elegant old home. The most interesting rooms are the living room, which is decorated with Victorian furniture and which features a dome ceiling, the dining room with its original wainscoting, its beautiful bay window, and the 116-year-old Beltar clock over the mantel, and the transverse hall which runs from the front door to the back. On the front door modified scroll molding accentuates the door's oval pane of bevelled glass and the fan lights and side lights, also of bevelled glass. Most of the glass in the house is original.

The home of Leslie and Jay Brumbeloe, at 416 E. Wilson St., had also been unoccupied for six years before they bought it. In fact, it had been condemned, and the City of Farmville was pressuring the owner to tear it down. Instead, the Brumbeloes, who have renovated several other old homes in other towns, transformed it into a showplace of which the whole neighborhood is proud. They did almost all the work themselves with the help of Charles Rogerson from Grimesland, a general carpenter and an authority on old houses. They added only one room, the kitchen, but they rearranged the entire back portion of the 77-year-old home.

The den is the family's favorite room, and it illustrates dramatically Mrs. Brumbeloe's principal rule-of-thumb — "use everything." The den features a cathedral ceiling with exposed beams left over from other parts of the house. The focal point of the room is the house's original chimney, which was uncovered by the Brumbeloes and which reaches to the ceiling.

When Mr. and Mrs. Harold Flanagan renovated their 1921 home on Grimmersburg St. they added a large new addition to the back of the house. The new part includes a kitchen, a breakfast room, a utility room, a family room, and a huge recreation room upstairs. Purchased by the Flanagans in 1973, the older part of the house features the original wainscoting, the original windows, and peg floors of random-width pine. The fireplace in the living room was reopened and faced with brick handmade around 1750 and brought from the birthplace of Flanagan's grandmother. The house is decorated in Williamsburg colors and with 18th century furniture.

Like the Brumbeloes, the Flanagans are quite proud of their den. Tierpoles from tobacco barns dating back to 1907 were used for the ceiling beams. The fireplace is the focal point of the room. A replica of an early American fireplace, it has a 10-foot hearth with a crane and two bars for hanging pots. The opening is five feet by eight feet and is faced with Silas Lucas handmade bricks. Master craftsman Thomas Batts estimated that he laid enough brick in the fireplace to brick most small homes.

Another old home on the tour is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Turnage. Unlike the others, this home has never needed renovation. Mr. Turnage's great-grandfather's brother, Moses Turnage, built the house, and the Turnage family has lived in it for almost a century and a half. The front part was built in the 1830's; the back part was added approximately 100 years ago. One of the most interesting family heirlooms in the house is the portrait of Turnage's mother, painted in 1897 from a tintype done when she was 16 years old. This portrait hangs above the sofa in the living room. In back of the house stands a camellia bush planted over 80 years ago by this same lady. The house will be decorated for the tour with camellias that the present Mrs. Turnage grows.

The brick colonial home of Mrs. Frank Dupree, III is not as old as the other homes on the tour, but it, too, has a number of lovely antiques. SYCAMORE MANOR is decorated with 18th century furniture and Williamsburg fixtures. In the living room there is an antique mantel and a solid brass antique fan recently acquired from Lexington, Ky. The dining room has antique panelling from Williamsburg and an antique cupboard. Mrs. Dupree is especially proud of her collection of oil paintings and the unusual marble and brass lamps throughout the house.

Mrs. Chester Norville is in charge of organizing the tour, which will be conducted between the hours of 4 and 8 this afternoon, Dec. 12. Tickets cost $3.00, and they will be on sale from 4 to 8 in the sanctuary of the First Christian Church. They may also be bought from any member of the church.

Couple Exchanges Vows In Evening Ceremony

AYDEN — Ayden United Methodist Church was the setting of a candlelight ceremony Saturday evening at eight o'clock uniting Joanne Ray Bulow and Robert Stephen Venters in holy matrimony.

The church was decorated with candelabra, greenery and white poinsettias. The mothers' pews were tied with green velvet bows centered with white poinsettias.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. John Blackwell of Ayden, organist, and Miss Lisa Johnson of Greenville, who sang "Day By Day" and I Can't Help Falling In Love."

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Nancy Bulow and the late Mr. William F. Bulow of Ayden. She was given in marriage by her brother, Michael D. Bulow. She wore a formal gown of polyester organza and Venise lace. It was fashioned with a scoop neckline and an empire bodice with Venise lace accented with seed pearls. All lace detail was repeated on the long bishop sleeves, on the A-line skirt, and built-in chapel train. The headpiece was a capulet bordered with Venise lace from which fell to fingertip tiers of silk illusion. She carried a cascade of white roses, red roses, and evergreens.

The matron of honor was Mrs. William F. Bulow III, sister-in-law of the bride. She wore a formal gown of green chiffon fashioned with a V-neckline. Jill Bulow, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a formal gown of green chiffon with a round neckline. They each carried a cascade arm bouquet of red carnations and holly with beribboned bells. Their headpieces were of red carnations and holly.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of pink knit. The mother of the bridegroom wore a blue print formal gown with matching jacket. The mothers' corsages were of miniature white carnations.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Dorothy Venters and the late Spurgeon C. Venters of Ayden.

Best man was Ronald Venters, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Jeffery Jarvis and Glenn Cannon, both of Ayden.

The bride's mother entertained friends and wedding party after the rehearsal at the fellowship hall of the church. After the bride and bridegroom cut the first slice of the three-tiered, heart-shaped cake, the cake was served by Mrs. William Burke. Punch was poured by Mrs. Herrin Smith.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will live in Ayden. The bride is employed by Daniel W. Harris, D. D. S. The bridegroom is employed by Dupont.

The bride was entertained at a miscellaneous floating shower at the home of Mrs. Dixie Harris of Ayden. Hostesses were Mrs. Daniel W. Harris, Mrs. Dixie Harris and Mrs. Warren Wall.

A tea was given in honor of the bride at the Ayden Christian Church. Hostesses were Mrs. Wilson Venters, Mrs. Ronald Venters, Mrs. Charles Venters and Miss Camille Venters, all of Ayden.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Okay, you all know how I feel about camping.

A Motel 6 is about as primitive as I want to get. I just cannot understand people who are turned on by swishing their silverware in a mesh bag through a stream where a dog just relieved himself.

That's why it came as a bit of a surprise when Wanda called last week and said, "Before the football game next Saturday, we're going to have a tailgate buffet."

"How far is the tailgate buffet from my all-electric kitchen?"

"Don't start that again," she said. "You have to be the most boring, unimaginative person. I know. Don't you ever like to try anything different? We'll pack a lunch, allow ourselves an hour or two before the game and have a fun time eating off the tailgate of the station wagon."

"You're right as usual," I told Wanda later. "This is fun. I don't think I've had so much fun since I slid down the deck of the Titanic without spilling a drop of my iced tea."

"Well, if you're not having a good time," snapped Wanda. "It's your fault . . . crouching back there behind the spare tire. Why don't you stand around the tailgate like the rest of us?"

"I'm cold! Besides, the sandwich is dry."

"You're eating your glove."

I crawled out of the car and planted my feet firmly in the fresh tar, not daring to believe what I saw. The parking lot was an orgy of campers, folding tables, and tailgates. The entire football field was under siege. One lighted match and the entire place was set to blow.

"Isn't this great?" chirped Wanda. "You know, even the food tastes different out in the air."

"You're right," I said. "This doughnut tastes like it flunked its emissions test."

"One of these days," said Wanda softly, her eyes fixed vacantly, "we're going to go to a football game in a camper. We'll have our own stove where we can cook steaks and a refrigerator where we can store salads. And there'll be big, comfortable chairs and sofas where we can sit down and have a drink. We won't even have to climb into coats or boots and sit on hard bleacher seats. We'll watch the game on a colored television set..in comfort."

"Wanda! You have just described your own home'"

"I knew you wouldn't understand. Are you coming?"

"A car just ran over my foot," I grimacco.

"Did anyone ever tell you you're a complainer?"

New Cookbook Published

A new recipe book that tells among other things how to prepare a congealed beet salad with horseradish dressing has just been published.

The 328 page cookbook, titled The Oratorio Singers at Ovens is a 328 page, yellow spiral-bound volume with Southern as well as more cosmopolitan recipes.

Published as a fund raising project for the Charlotte Oratorio Guild, it is available through mail from: Charlotte Oratorio Office, Spirit Square, 110 E. 7th St., Charlotte, N.C. 28202. Price is $5.95 plus 75 cents postage (and 24 cents tax for N.C. residents) for a total of $6.94.

Ask Friends About Staples

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Two of my friends recently had surgical staples placed in their ears by a doctor to help control their overeating.

Can you give me some information concerning the validity of this procedure? Is it a physical technique or is it just psychological, such as doctors giving patients "sugar pills"?

Can these staples be harmful to a person's health?

CURIOUS IN TEXAS

DEAR CURIOUS: It's psychological. It has worked for some, but not for all. The only danger (which is slight) would be possible infection from the staples. Ask your friends who have them. They should know.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing this for our whole family. Our problem is our 30-year-old sister. She is very intelligent, holds a highly respected position, and makes a fantastic salary, but she thinks our bathroom is a library.

She takes magazines, books and newspapers into the bathroom and stays for hours. It's the only bathroom in the house, and besides our parents there are four of us younger kids living at home.

If anyone knocks on the door to use the bathroom, she gets angry.

Please put this in your column. She reads it every day—in the bathroom.

KID SISTER

DEAR SISTER: Your sister may be very intelligent, but she is also very inconsiderate. If she plans to continue living at home and using the family bathroom as a library, she should use some loot from her "fantastic salary" to build a second bathroom.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Santa Packing Diamonds For Newly Engaged

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

About half the diamonds bought in America this year will arrive in Santa's pack.

Most will be engagement rings. It's a good way for a fiance to buy a dual-purpose gift. Gets him off the hook for buying a Christmas present as well.

"I did it myself," said Peter B. Elder with a broad smile. Elder is advertising and promotion manager for the Diamond Information Center, which represents the world's largest diamond marketing company, DeBeers Consolidated Mines. DeBeers sells about 85 per cent of the world's diamonds.

"It's not so much a tradition as a convenience to give a diamond engagement ring at Christmas. You don't have to give anything else.

"In the jewelry business roughly half of all diamonds are purchased around Christmas.

"That's why June is big as a marriage month. It's convenient to have a six-months engagement, then be married."

Elder said about 80 per cent of the Christmas market consists of women's rings, including engagement rings and right-hand, or cocktail rings. "Diamonds are no longer the province of the extremely wealthy," he said. "Increasing numbers of people get diamonds for Christmas; maybe 60 per cent are rings and the remaining 40 per cent pendants, earrings, bracelets, brooches."

"The single most popular setting for engagement rings hasn't changed for generations," he said. It is still what is known as the Tiffany setting, a single solitaire round stone on a gold shank. This year's choice is a narrow band.

Elder said 10 to 15 per cent of the engagement diamonds given each year are heirlooms; only about five per cent of the households in America get a new diamond annually, exclusive of engagement stones.

An engagement ring these days comes as no surprise to the recipient. Bender said it's been a long time since a man shopped alone and surprised his fiancee with a bended-knee proposal and a sparkler to follow. He said the trend toward shopping together has been more pronounced these past six or seven years, as emerging women were given a choice in everything.

Women also usually have a preference in the shape of the stone they want. The round, or brilliant cut, is the favorite, but some go for the emerald cut, a tailored style whose popularity dates from the so-called art moderne period, introduced at the French Exposition of Arts and Industry in 1925. Diamonds were cut with straight sides to fit symmetrical designs.

Emerald cuts have 58 facets like a brilliant, but they are arranged either as an oblong or square. Less of the original weight of the stone must be ground away to make this shape. It is apt to cost more than the same weight brilliant, however, because it requires a better quality rough stone. The design is so clear and revealing that even small flaws show up more quickly than in other cuts. Other cuts are marquise (a pointed oval), pear-shaped and oval.

Elder said the major consideration for young people today is cost. He estimated the retail price of a good-quality, half-carat diamond ring at $600 and up, and the average price in the $400 range. In general the round, or brilliant, cut is less expensive than the others, simply because more rough stones are found in nature that lend themselves to the brilliant cut. The larger the diamond, the rarer, and the higher the cost. Clarity, color and cut also influence price.

Young people today may be antimaterialistic, rejecting traditions and ritual for ritual's sake, but they still buy diamond engagement rings, although for different reasons than traditional couples who look upon a ring as a public announcement of their commitment to marry.

"It's not so much a public symbol as a private symbol, a token between them of the engagement period when they are growing to know each other," said Elder.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

It's all there — the honking horns of the taxis, fast moving traffic, fast moving people and the glittering lights of Broadway — in New York City.

Last Thursday night a group left by bus from Greenville to spend two nights and two days in New York. Our tour escort was Maycie Culbreth. Arriving Friday morning, several of us saw for the first time, bumper-to-bumper traffic of workers traveling into the city via the Lincoln Tunnel.

After arriving at our hotel, the New York Sheraton, we had a tour of Manhatten that included the sights in Chinatown, the Bowery, the Battery, where we saw at a distance the Statue of Liberty, the theatre district, both the women's and men's garment district, Wall Street, the twin Trade Towers, the Empire State Building and the United Nations Building.

Friday evening was highlighted by dinner and a show at the Playboy Club. The show included musical selections by Carol Cass and a monologue by Jackie Vernon. The Bunny Girls added to the evening's activities, acting as hostesses, taking and checking reservations and taking pictures at the individual tables.

Saturday morning in Sak's on Fifth Avenue, we saw several designer originals and many, many people shopping, possibly in preparation for the holiday season. After leaving Sak's, we walked to St. Patrick's Cathedral, which is in size and to say the least, very beautiful. Here, I was really amazed to see a wedding ceremony being performed while several thousands of people walked up and down the aisles of the cathedral.

The Christmas Show, that afternoon, at Radio City Music Hall was excellent. The famous Rockettes performed the dance of the wooden soldier.

That evening, the group attended a performance of "Guys and Dolls," which was held at the Broadway Theatre. Following the performance, several of us walked down to Times Square and then back to our hotel.

In preparation of leaving early Sunday morning, we finished packing, rode the subway and had breakfast in a delicatessen.

The trip, from beginning to end, was fun and exciting and I am ready to return again for another short stay.

New Members Enrolled By WOTM Thursday

WOTM members also voted on additional candidates and discussed final plans for the chapter's annual Christmas party Dec. 18.

Miss Ada Jones, a member of the chapter and a past deputy grand regent for North and South Carolina, spoke to the new members. She cited the value of membership in the Women of the Moose and urged active participation of all members to attain membership advantages.

Mrs. Helen Turner, on behalf of the Social Services Committee, welcomed the new members, including: Mrs. Patsy Cannon; Mrs. Sandy Helms; Mrs. Doris Oakley; Mrs. Hazel Faulkner; Mrs. Helen Stancil; Mrs. Mary Lou Jones; Mrs. Carolyn Nowak; Mrs. Frances Dirisio; Mrs. Nacy McLawhorn; Mrs. Tiny Lu Fulford; Mrs. Elaine Umphlett; and Mrs. Delores Berg.

Visitors were present from WOTM Chapters in Washington, Wilson and Goldsboro.

Refreshments were served following the meeting.

Musical Program Given Wednesday

The December meeting of the Welcome Wagon was held Wednesday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

It was announced that the bridge benefit will be held Jan. 28 and that the Share-a-Craft group will not meet this month.

The Bienvenue Book Club will meet Dec. 16 for the Madrigal dinner at 7 p.m.

The next board meeting will be held at the home of Elaine Taylor Jan. 5 at 10 a.m.

Holiday Meet Held By Patient Circle Wednesday

The Patient Circle of the King's Daughters held a covered-dish Christmas luncheon at the home of Mrs. R. E. Corbett Jr. Wednesday.

Mrs. Clara Moye Shackell conducted the business session and plans for Christmas activities were discussed. A special committee was named to make plans.

A Christmas program was given by Miss Louise Williams, who spoke on "Christmas Is Always."

Officers for the coming were installed including: Miss Mary Wells, president; Mrs. Shackell, first vice president; Mrs. Thomas L. Hannaford, second vice president; Mrs. Harvey Turnage, third vice president; Mrs. Adrian Brown, recording secretary; and Mrs. Roy Lokken, corresponding secretary.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hubbard of Rt. 2, Ferrum, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Shirley Hubbard Clark, to Harold David Stroupe, son of Mrs. Edith G. Huffstickler of Gastonia, and the late Mr. C. Hugh Stroupe. The wedding will take place Jan. 22.

Varied Background In 3 Comediennes

By CLARENCE ZAITZ

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — What an unlikely trio of comediennes:

Dottie Archibald draws heavily on her experiences as a housewife to fulfill what she calls one of her housewife's secret desires — to be a commedienne. When she auditioned, it was her first time on stage "since I was a dafodil in the third grade."

Judy Carter mixes magic with humor. Her best ideas come to her in dreams, she says. Celery is a common prop in her act "because it's such an innocent vegetable."

Julie McWhirter does 100 impressions and characters. She developed her "munchkin" voice "when it bounced out of me while I was riding in a jeep with my brothers back home."

The three appeared at the Comedy Store South here recently. Carter and McWhirter already have television credits behind them. But they admit this was like going to school — which is exactly what they needed, because they aspire to achieve fame.

Mrs. Archibald, in her 30s, a housewife and mother of two, decided a year ago to fulfill her secret desire. She spent two months writing material and practicing before a mirror, then appeared weekly on amateur night at the Comedy Store in Hollywood.

"I bombed. No one laughed."

The only laugh she got, she says, was from her chemist husband when she told him she was going into show business.

She went back to the Comedy Store for three months in which she came up with a routine that drew laughs. "And I knew this was it."

There aren't many women comediennes in the mold of Joan Rivers and Totie Fields. Most women who do comedy do it as an incidental to their acting.

But Mrs. Archibald says there is a world of material only a woman can do. A man, she says, can't do the houseplant bit that is a part of her routine.

"What do men know about houseplants?"

She also does a bit about camping — from the perspective of a woman who "cleans the dirty frying pans" while the husband is out getting close to nature.

"Let's face it," she said, "Any woman who says she's looking forward to camping should be locked up ... there's something wrong with her."

Miss Carter, 25, has been dabbling with magic since she was 8. She has performed on street corners and passed the hat to finance her travels in Europe. Once, in Greece, she was arrested for it.

She always thought magicians were too serious, so she included humor and the accordion in her act. "I only know three tunes, and I can't sing or dance."

Her illusions include burning and then retrieving a dollar bill and sawing in half a volunteer from the audience — right there atop the piano.

"I like to use common, everyday items in my show," she says. "Magicians mostly use items such as 'this common Japanese pagoda.' My God, how many people do you know who have a Japanese pagoda around the house?"

At one point, she opens a box and on comes a television image of her lying in bed. It talks back. She carries on a lively banter with her audience guest — and with her image on television.

"I got that idea from my grandmother. She used to always talk back to the soap operas."

She is investing $3,000 in a new garbage can act for her January opening at Hollywood's Magic Castle. And she is taking a month off to be available for the audition season for new television pilots.

Miss McWhirter was the fairy lady on the Rich Little show last year. She is a regular with Jonathon Winters in those plastic bag commercials. A year ago she started standup comedy because she ultimately wants to do Las Vegas shows.

An Indianapolis girl who broke into the business five years ago by doing cartoon voices, she was doing well in television until her friends urged her to enter a comedy talent contest.

She does impressions of entertainers including Olivia Newton John, "who's easy," and Cher, "who's really hard." One voice she hasn't been able to successfully copy is that of Lucille Ball.

"I'm not a joke person," she says. Her nightclub act consists instead of readily recognizable impressions, and humorous, ficticious characters. One of her newest is Juanita Jean Rayette, a composite of country and western singers. She dons a bulky blond wig with long trailing tails for that one.

Miss McWhirter said she hopes within six months to have her act polished enough for Las Vegas and Reno. What has to be added now, she said, is more singing and dancing.

So there they were, all on one bill, three budding commediennes.

Keeping Old Traditions

MYSTIC SEAPORT, Conn. (UPI) — Christmas season at Mystic Seaport recaptures the essence of Christmas as it was celebrated in the New England coastal villages of the 1870s.

Throughout the holiday season decorations will be simple and the village will remain subdued, reminiscent of the time when Christmas was solemnly acknowledged as a strictly religious holiday.

All 60 Mystic Seaport exhibits will remain open during the Christmas season, except on Christmas Day itself, and indoor craft demonstrations of ship-carving, ship model-making, small-boat building, ship restoration, weaving and open-hearth cooking will continue daily.

Children who visit the Seaport at Christmastime may help decorate the sea shell tree in the Children's Museum and make shell decorations for their own trees at home. They may also learn to make hand-tint Victorian Christmas cards and play with reproductions of Victorian toys, games and coloring books.

The traditional Carol Sing Day at Mystic Seaport will be Dec. 19, the Sunday before Christmas, when the museum grounds, all exhibits and a full schedule of special programs will be open free to the public, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

On The Young Side

By JANET GANTT

Holiday spirit has become apparent in the halls of Rose High School. A Christmas tree provided by the Student Government Association was erected in the school commons.

Students were busily preparing for various holiday activities. Senior inductees of the National Honor Society received a special Christmas present as they were tapped during the week.

A special performance by Rose High's music department was held Wednesday night. Staged in the school gymnasium, the program included selections by the Concert Choir, Ensemble and Glee Club. To further complement the choruses, orchestra students from Rose and E. B. Aycock Junior High School accompanied them in a performance of Mozart's "Gloria." Concluding the "Holiday Music" performance were two Christmas numbers by the Concert Band.

Art Club

Art Club members withstood the cold Saturday morning and afternoon while working at the art sale. Crafts, pottery, paintings and many other forms of art work were available for display and sale at Pitt Plaza. The Art Club sale is a yearly project that enables the general public to admire and purchase the creations of future artists.

Seniors took another step toward graduation this week. A representative visited Rose to help upper classmen order their caps and gowns for the spring ceremony. Seniors were also asked to complete a form for senior statistics to be printed in the yearbook. Available at the check—out counter, forms must be turned in to a "Visa" staff member before Dec. 15.

Members of the Anchor Club experienced some good old--fashioned fun Saturday night. Girls and their guests went on a hayride and afterwards gathered for hot chocolate. Anchors are also planning a service project for the holiday season. Sponsoring a family to make the holidays merrier for someone else will be undertaken by the club.

Outstanding seniors were tapped into the National Honor Society Thursday morning. Inductions will be held Monday night at Immanuel Baptist Church.

Inductees are Selene Wheless, Walter Kortschak, Tammy Levey, Francis Salisbury, Brenda Foley, Craig Logue, Larry Boyette, Anna Marie Payne, Billy Williams, Dave Middleton, Robert Vick, Mike Dixon, John Lawler, Ann Grossnickle, Mary Ann Bennett, Denise Arnold, Beth Lancaster, Gary Porter, Keith Britt and Linda Rose Tucker.

These seniors will join members inducted as juniors to form the 1976-77 NHS. Congratulations to the new members.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There are all kinds of opportunities coming your way, so be prepared to use your finest talents. You can easily gain the goodwill and cooperation of others at this time.

ARIES: (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day to show gratitude to those who have done you big favors in the past. Plan some time for health treatments.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Engage in hobbies that please you. Reassuring mate of your affection is wise now. Take no chances with your reputation.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Showing originality can impress friends favorably today and tonight. Avoid one who is detrimental to your welfare.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study those lofty ideas that can bring you greater happiness and success in the future. Relax at home tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Think more abundantly and make a better life for yourself through right thoughts and actions. Attend to small tasks that must be done.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Display your fine talents to influential persons via the social avenues you like and you can make real progress. Show that you have poise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handle tasks that can't be done during busy work-week. Obtain advice you need from a trusted adviser. Make the evening a happy one.

SCORPIO (Oct 23 to Nov. 21) Friends can now give you good advice on how to gain personal aims. Express yourself along more cultural lines.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle those public activities that will stamp you as a fine citizen. Show others that you have fine talents.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact wise persons you know and gain advice that will help you in career matters. Strive for happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use your hunches in coming to a decision where an important matter is concerned. Guard your reputation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) First think over what you are going to say before you have an important conversation with another. Avoid friction at home.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be a walking encyclopedia of data with the ability to formulate plans until aims are reached. Teach the basic principles of any undertaking so that your progeny will not get entangled in anything unsavory.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1976

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when you make little headway and can have a considerable amount of trouble if you attempt to force your views on others. At the same time you can accomplish much by using tact and diplomacy in your dealings with others for long-time benefits.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Put practical matters in fine order so that you need not worry about them in the future. Discuss your ideas with co-workers that can make the future brighter. Avoid the social in late afternoon.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Discuss how you want the future to be with a loved one and come to a mutual agreement that is satisfactory to both. Exercise patience if you want to put that special talent to work properly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be diplomatic at home if you want to get that plan working that will benefit all who are there. Entertain at home but on a modest scale.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Double check any information you have regarding new projects to be sure it is accurate. Have necessary discussions with partners. Come to an agreement as to individual duties to be performed.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your monetary position and know how to better it immediately by right methods. Consider a new venture that could be beneficial to you in the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't be overly critical of a co-worker who could help with a plan that could be profitable to both. Try to help a friend in need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get busy making constructive plans for the future that will gain you what you want most. Be more willing to handle duties for mate or loved one. Take time for modest entertainment tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Think out how you can improve your relationships with friends and try to please them more. Make plans now to gain personal aims more easily, quickly. Be wise in handling business matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Show bigwigs that you will go along with their ideas and gain their favor now. Use more practical methods so that you can become more successful in your career.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get that new venture working in the right direction and you can have success with it. A new associate may be slow at the beginning but then becomes quite dynamic and is a big help to you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good day to keep promises that are important to your welfare and well-being. Show true devotion to a loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get your points across to a partner who expects a good deal from you and get good results. Handling a civic matter well brings added prestige, good results, too. Be social in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be filled with constructive ideas but is apt to act too quickly and without sufficient preparation if not taught early to make right plans, study details connected with them first and then to carry on with them. Then the success here can be phenomenal.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Rare Thai Jar In N.Y. Exhibit

NEW YORK (AP) — A rare, 15th-century, Thai stoneware jar is part of an exhibition of Southeast Asian Ceramics on display at the Asia House Gallery here.

The jar, decorated with motifs of both Indian and Chinese origin, was brought to the United States from Wut Srikomkan, a temple in northern Thailand where it has been housed for some time.

The exhibit will also travel to the Philadelphia Museum of Art, the Honolulu Academy of Arts and the St. Louis Art Museum in 1977.

Not All Are Delighted Over 'Network'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Television is not the truth! Television's a — amusement park! Television is a circus, a carnival, a traveling troupe of acrobats, story tellers, sideshow freaks, lion-tamers and football players. We're in the boredom-killing business!"

The words, written by Paddy Chayefsky and delivered by Peter Finch, spring startlingly from the movie screen. At the Regent theater in Westwood, adjacent to the UCLA campus, the words were received with delight by the generation Chayefsky and Finch were referring to.

"Right now there is a whole and entire generation that never knew anything that didn't come outa this tube," rants Finch, portraying the demented TV news anchor man, Howard Beale.

"This tube is the gospel! The ultimate revelation! This tube can make or break presidents, popes, prime ministers. This tube is the most awesome goddammed force in the whole godless world! And woe is us if it ever falls into the hands of the wrong people!"

And so Howard Beale rages on the coast-to-coast hookup of the mythical United Broadcasting System in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new film, "Network." Not all viewers were as delighted as the television generation in Westwood Village.

Gene Shalit of NBC's "Today" hated "Network." So did Time magazine's reviewer. They dissented with such critics as Rona Barrett ("Best thing I've seen since 'Citizen Kane'") and Charles Champlin of the Los Angeles Times ("Chayefsky does not bite the hand that feeds him ... he rips it off at the shoulder").

The most interesting reactions came from TV's news Establishment, as reported by Newsday's Jerry Parker. David Brinkley declined comment. Walter Cronkite, whose daughter Kathy plays a Patty Hearst type in "Network," called it "kind of an amusing farce." Barbara Walters feared "people will think they're getting the inside story, and they're not; they'll never be that kind of show-biz approach to the news." Commented Edwin Newman: "Thoroughly incompetent."

Do the TV bigwigs protest too much? Certainly "Network" could be rejected if taken at face value. No network has ever retained an anchor man undergoing a nervous breakdown in public, as does Howard Beale (he promises to commit suicide on-camera after being fired for low ratings).

But Chayefsky is a satirist in the Swiftian manner, and he employs the blugeon as he did against the medical profession in "The Hospital."

Australian-born Peter Finch ("Sunday, Bloody Sunday") was a peculiar choice for the addled anchor person of an American TV network, yet his performance makes an Academy nomination seem obligatory. He, as well as William Holden, Faye Dunaway and Robert Duvall, shine under the direction of Sidney Lumet, a graduate of TV's golden age of drama as was Chayefsky ("Marty," "A Catered Affair.")

NETWORK SCENE — Peter Finch is shown in his role as a tormented TV news anchor man in the movie "Network". Finch says he studied all the network anchor persons while preparing for his role, but resisted copying any of them. (AP Wirephoto)

'Round-The-World Sailing Race Is Lengyel's Goal

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — There are yacht races and there are yacht races. Now someone is organizing what may be the last word in yacht races: 'Round the world in a single-handed boat.

"That, I suppose, is the ultimate boat race," said Bob Lengyel, a swarthy 50-year-old seaman who plans to enter that race in 18 months in a 26-foot, single-masted Dawson-26. It's the same boat Lengyel used in the England-to-America run ealier this year.

BOB LENGYEL leans on the mast of a sailboat. He plans to enter an around the world race in a single-handed boat. (AP Wirephoto)

"It'll be lonely out there," he said a bit wistfully. "It'll take about seven months, with four stops for rest." Details haven't been worked out, but Lengyel can wait. The sea is his life.

Lengyel, unlike most other skippers who enter such races, is not wealthy. In fact, he's a throwback to another era, a character out of a John Masefield poem or a Joseph Conrad novel.

"I own my boat, the 'Prodigal'," he said, "and all of this," pointing to a weathered canvas bag. "That's it. Everything I own. I don't need more than that, do I?"

Single-handed yacht racing isn't an afternoon lark. Thirty-eight of the 125 boats that started the Observer Singlehanded Trans-Atlantic Race last June 5 withdrew. Two persons died, many were injured.

Lengyel was the last of 73 skippers who finished in under 50 days, and some of the veteran racers said he should never have made it because he raced with almost no sophisticated ocean gear.

"The sea is my life," he said. "I mean, it's like a woman you love but you can't trust. I've been at sea all my life, since I was 16 when I lied about my age and joined the Merchant Marines.

"I love her, but I know she can kill me, Yeah, I know, I'm romantic as hell. But I don't think people today think the same way about the see as they used to."

He looks the part. His gnarled hands have knots of abuse at the knuckles; his skin is dark and leathery; his beard looks like one that Richard Henry Dana or Ernest Hemingway had in mind; his muscular arms are scarred; and his eyes never seem to focus on anything close.

"I suppose you might say it's like being in love with a punch in the mouth," he said. "I can't explain it, really, but I haven't thought about it in real terms. It's just that today, 1976, people don't have the same romantic images about the sea as they used to.

"I like being alone out there. But it's good to get back to land every now and then, even if I do feel ill at ease."

Lengyel isn't exactly the prototypical seaman with a girl in every port, but he said, "My love life is good. Very good. I know women all around the world and I usually end up having a pretty good time.

"I lived with a woman in San Francisco for a long time — we have three kids. My 17-year-old girl doesn't have much use for the sea, but my two younger ones, a 14-year-old boy and a 10-year-old girl, they can't wait to go sailing at sea."

He never married.

He spent $18,000 for his boat and all the equipment on it, nearly every cent he had. He spent years saving to buy it.

Israel Sees A Market In Health Spa Allures

By KEN KLEIN

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel plans to add another drawing card to its tourist trade by developing ancient mineral spring health resorts once used by Roman conquerers, King Herod and Persian rulers.

"We'll be tapping an additional market," says Michael Gidron of the Ministry of Tourism. "We not only want to be considered as the land of the Bible, but also as the land of fun and health."

Israeli officials predict a record 800,000 foreigners — equal to almost a fourth of Israel's population — will have visited the Jewish state in 1976, due in part to heavy bookings for health spas.

By next fall, Israel plans to complete health spas along the Sea of Galilee capable of treating 3,500 persons for rheumatic and respiratory diseases. Average cost for a two-week stay is $364 or $26 per day — cheaper than similar spas in Switzerland and Germany, said an Israeli spokesman.

According to legend, King Solomon ordered a group of demons who feared the king to enter the earth and heat the waters of a spring near the Sea of Galilee. When the demons began their work, Solomon made them deaf so they would not hear of the king's death and the curative springs would continue.

The shores of the Dead Sea — the biblically famous home of Sodom and Gomorrah — offer natural healing powers found nowhere else in the world, the Israelis claim.

King Herod, his diseased body racked with spasms, itching and shortness of breath, bathed in thermal springs near the Dead Sea some 20 centuries ago. Apparently the springs had little benefit for the elderly king because he died shortly after the bath, wrote Josephus Flavius, a first-century historian.

Hoping for better results, Israelis plan to treat mild ailments like muscle and joint diseases, asthma and emphysema, and will concentrate on curing psoriasis, a skin disease afflicting 2 per cent of the world's population.

"Research concludes that the Dead Sea is excellent for helping psoriasis victims. It is the lowest point on earth so the sun's ultraviolet rays are weak, the climate is moderate all year, the humidity is low, the air is pure and the sky is clear 300 days a year," said Eli Rosenthal, an Israeli pioneer in Dead Sea development.

Of 577 Europeans with psoriasis receiving mineral water and sun treatment at the Dead Sea between 1971 and 1973, 94 per cent improved or recovered, according to Danish researchers brought in to certify the Dead Sea's medicinal value.

Israel invited more than 200 foreign medical experts and educators to the 28th congress of the International Federation of Thermalism and Climatism in October, 1976.

Those Misfits Of Boyington Team Did OK

PAPPY BOYINGTON, left in 1944 and as he looks today, at right, says his "Blacksheep have become judges, lawyers, doctors and stockbrokers.(AP Wirephoto)

Boyington, medal of Honor winner credited with shooting down 28 enemy aircraft in the South Pacific, and his unit of fighter pilots are subject of the television show "Baa Baa Black Sheep." The show depicts the exploits of men the Marine Corps branded misfits.

Boyington said many of his "black sheep" have been successful since the war. The unit's alumni includes two judges, seven lawyers, three physicians, seven career Marine Corps officers and "a couple" of stockbrokers, he said.

Boyington, 63, a Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, native, works as a technical consultant for the television series. He called the show "completely gratifying."

The series, based on Boyington's story of his war exploits, is about 90 per cent accurate, he said. "We're making dramatizations," said Boyington. "This is not a documentary."

Most members of his squadron who have seen the show were "delighted" with the production, he said, though some pointed out minor inaccuracies such as the use of different model aircraft and lights on runways.

Boyington said "there are some things we actually have to tone down" to make the fighter squadron's exploits suitable for television. Some salty language and derogatory terms for the Japanese were deleted, he said.

Some of Boyington's men gathered in Honolulu last month for a reunion, and there were those who suggested the show is more fantasy than fact.

"You think of history a lot differently when you're a distinguished grandfather and a peer in your community," said Boyington.

The retired Marine Corps officer said the series isn't out to glamorize combat. "We are not in the slightest promoting war," he said.

Boyington said he didn't fight in World War II under the illusion that it would be the war to end all wars. He said he joined the Marines as an aviation cadet in 1935 not to "shine shoes and polish brass, but because of the reputation of the Corps."

He admits his methods for running a fighter squadron were unorthodox. "This was our thing," Boyington said. "We ran the squad by our own rules."

Boyington said he's pleased the new television show appears to be a success.

No Twinkling In Eyes Of Kaye As Capt. Hook

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Danny Kaye insisted he was no child at heart at the age of 63. Not one bit.

"I left my childhood behind 100 years ago," he said. Then he jammed a thumb into his mouth and added with a pregnant pause:

"Arthur J. Malcolm once said that to be a child at heart is to be stupid." And just who is Arthur J. Malcolm?

Silence, and that inevitable twinkle in his eye.

Don't look for that twinkle on NBC Sunday night, however, when Kaye plays a mean old Captain Hook in "Peter Pan."

The "Hallmark Hall of Fame" had stored for a year this brand new version of the classic tale in which Mary Martin und Cyril Ritchard starred for a generation of reruns. The occasion of its broadcast is Hallmark's 25th anniversary on NBC.

Mia Farrow plays the title role, John Gielgud is the narrator and Julie Andrews sings "Once Upon a Bedtime" off camera in a production with 14 new songs by Anthony Newley and Leslie Bricusse.

On his way to Europe for yet another journey on behalf of the United Nations Children's Fund, Kaye allowed that he liked the old production just fine. It reminded him, he said, of crystal radios.

"It looked absolutely primitive," Kaye recalled. "It was TV in its infancy, and they shot it like a stage play."

Wearing a houndstooth sport jacket, dark trousers and white socks, Kaye was alternately outrageous and impish—as always.

No prude in private, he said he nonetheless demands only those roles that might be classed as good clean entertainment.

"This is a standard of mine that is not inflicted on me either by my profession or by my colleagues," he said, waxing serious for a rare moment. "It is a standard I set myself."

He insisted, however, that he would not impose his standards on anyone else. Nor should anyone, he said. His advice was that individuals who don't like dirty movies or violent TV programs should make a pocketbook protest and simply shouldn't watch them.

Besides "Peter Pan," which airs at 7:30 p.m. EST, other promising shows this weekend are (all times EST):

FRIDAY:

"Report to the Commissioner," a police drama starring Michael Moriarty, CBS at 9 p.m.

"Rudolph's Shiny New Year," an animated Christmas special featuring the voices of Red Skelton, Frank Gorshin and Morey Amsterdam, ABC at 8 p.m.

SATURDAY:

An attractive young reporter makes a play for Ted Baxter on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show," CBS at 8 p.m.

Dick Van Dyke stars in "Lt. Robin Crusoe, U.S.N.," who crashes in the Pacific and finds solace on an uncharted island, NBC at 8 p.m.

Live coverage of the Los Angeles Rams and the Detroit Lions playing from Detroit, ABC at 9 p.m.

SUNDAY:

Evening at Symphony, with Michael Tilson Thomas conducting works by Brahms and Schoenbrg, PBS at 8 p.m.

IN NEVER-NEVER LAND — Would-be villain Capt. Hook, played by Danny Kaye, is frightened by Mia Farrow, as Peter Pan, in a scene from the upcoming telecast. (AP Wirephoto)

Neoricans; New Ending To The West Side Story

By GUY GUGLIOTTA

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Jorge Calderon stamped down hard on the gas pedal, pushing his taxicab into the middle of San Juan's evening commuter crunch. He squirted through a narrow gap between a convertible and a bus to gain ten yards, then lost it swerving to avoid a panel truck.

Cursing in a mixture of Spanish and English, he honked the horn, jammed on the brakes and jerked to a halt. He had just missed the yellow light at the next intersection.

"I tell you one thing," he said, turning to his passenger. "The traffic here is just as bad as it is in New York."

Calderon was born in the impoverished Puerto Rican municipality of Orocovis 39 years ago. He went to New York in 1954, moved into an East Harlem tenement with his sister and got a job as a bus boy.

In 1973, after 18 years as a short order cook, doorman and cabdriver, Calderon, his wife and his two daughters moved back to Puerto Rico. He bought a house, purchased his own taxicab and sent his children to a private Catholic school.

Calderon is one among hundreds of thousands of "Neoricans," a bit of newspeak used to describe — sometimes pejoratively — Puerto Ricans who have lived in the mainland United States for an unspecified length of time, but who, for a variety of reasons, decided to come home.

The Neorican phenomenon has been a feature of the Puerto Rican scene for decades, ever since the first islander returned from Spanish Harlem with a pocketful of greenbacks and a dream for the future.

But recent and startling changes in the migration pattern suggest that Neoricans and their children will have a profound, and perhaps even a decisive effect on the future of Puerto Rican society.

Between 1952 and 1971, Puerto Rico lost 585,614 citizens through migration to the mainland United States, according to Commonwealth statistics. In 1956, a year before Bernstein's "West Side Story" opened on Broadway, net emigration from Puerto Rico reached 61,647. By 1970, the U.S. Bureau of Census estimated that there were 1.5 million ethnic Puerto Ricans living on the mainland, more than half as many as lived on the island itself at that time.

But the exodus is over.

The mainlanders are coming home, not in a trickle, but in a flood. Between 1972 and 1976, Puerto Rico gained 194,524 people through migration, an average of some 39,000 each year and a virtual reversal of the previous 20-year pattern.

At first, analysts blamed the change on the deteriorating mainland economic situation. Once plentiful job opportunities were dwindling with the onset of world recession, and disillusioned Puerto Ricans were going home.

But subsequent research showed that economic problems play a relatively minor role in the migrants' decision to leave the mainland. More typical, if somewhat extreme, is Calderon's case:

"When I first got to New York, my sister didn't give me a key to her apartment, so I always had to knock on the door when I wanted to get in.

"One night I go up there and I'm pounding on the door and I see a dead body lying on the stairs, blood all over".

"Then all of a sudden there's a cop standing next to me, looking at me funny. My sister isn't home, I don't speak any English and I'm thinking, 'Ave Maria' he thinks I did it.

"Then he says to me, 'Who are you, Chico? And a lot of other stuff I don't understand. I tell you this, if the lady next door hadn't come out and told the cop who I was, I don't know what would have happened.

"Right then, I say to myself, man, you make your money here, but when you got it, you go home.

"It took me 18 years, but I got out."

Sociologist Pedro Vales, co-author of a study entitled "Social Dynamics of Return Migration to Puerto Rico," found that 63.6 per cent of the returning migrants in his sample came back to the island for "personal reasons," as against only 14.8 per cent for "economic reasons."

The personal reasons include health problems, family difficulties, homesickness, access to Puerto Rican schools and "other personal reasons."

This last category, which accounts for 11.4 per cent of the returnees, encompasses a variety of complaints reflecting "a desire to escape a violent social climate that many think is getting worse all the time," Vales said in a recent interview.

Puerto Ricans in mainland inner cities, like everybody else, are worried about crime, drugs, juvenile delinquency and raising their children in an atmosphere they consider deadly.

"Who needs it?" says Calderon. "Okay, there's crime here and maybe my kids are having a little trouble learning English, but we live in a nice place. It's a good life here."

Calderon's nice place is Bayamon, a sprawling city of 154,000 about 12 miles southwest of San Juan that mixes traditional Puerto Rico with an expanding industrial base heavily influenced by mainland techniques and by the returning migrants' management skills.

Pushcarts selling "chicharron de Bayamon," the fried pigskin for which the city is famous, coexist with places like "New York cleaners" which offers "1 Hour Service" in English, then guarantees it in Spanish.

Even more incongruous is the quiet residential suburb of Levittown, the Puerto Rican cousin of the mainland towns of the same name.

It is populated almost exclusively by migrants, most of them retired people working on second careers, or young managerial types and skilled workers with mainland training.

Jose Betacourt, 27, was born in Santurce, the old commercial and residential section of San Juan, but his first memories as a child were of the New York's South Bronx, a once lower middle class immigrant neighborhood that in the postwar period has turned into one of the meanest slums in the United States.

Betancourt moved back to Puerto Rico in the early sixties when his mother developed asthma. He learned Spanish in high school, joined the army and went to Vietnam. He lives in Levittown now with his wife and five children and works as plant manager for a tool company in Bayamon.

"I go back to New York every once in a while, but I would never live there," he said. "I've seen some bad places, but after 7 o'clock at night you're taking your life in your hands to go out on the street."

But Betancourt said he still likes the mainland and would rather live there "if I didn't have a family. But somewhere else, not New York."

Betancourt and others like Willie Marrero, a retired U.S. Air Force sergeant, mention the difficulty many returning migrants have adjusting to island life after being away.

"A lot of people just don't make it here, because they can't relate to the people," Betancourt said. "They're too used to the rush, rush, attitude and that really turns people off in Puerto Rico."

For Marrero, 50, coming home was an attempt to shrug off 20 years of military service, a life of world travel and the housing and purchasing privileges that go with being in the armed forces.

"We moved back here to be close to the family, and it was rough at first," he said. "But we've gotten used to it now and we're pretty comfortable."

Prof. Vales, himself an admitted "failed migrant" who graduated from Fordham University in New York and spent time in Philadelphia before returning to Puerto Rico, noted three basic types of returnees in his study.

The first are those like himself who "stay a short time, then return never to leave again." The second group includes "those who returned after a successful experience that lasted many years."

But the third group, "by far the largest," according to Vales, are those who "are in a state of constant migration".

"They never burned their bridges behind them when they left, but they built new bridges in the states," Vales said. "When they're in the U.S. they're homesick for Puerto Rico. When they're in Puerto Rico, they're homesick for the U.S."

These migrants, a great many of whom live in Levittown, are in the strange position of belonging to two cultures, or not belonging to either.

But the middle class migrants of Levittown and Bayamon, whether they discarded U.S. culture, or immersed themselves in Puerto Rican culture, are big boosters of the United States.

Washington, A 'Hot Book Town'

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For three years, a $19.95 book titled "Zero-Based Budgeting" languished on the shelves of the Sidney Kramer Book Shop in downtown Washington.

Then Jimmy Carter started talking about zero-based budgeting, a procedure to require every government agency to start from scratch in justifying its annual budget request.

"In six months, we sold 250 copies," says store owner Bill Kramer. "I expect to sell 500 more in the next three months."

For other reasons, too, Washington booksellers are glad to see the Democrats come back in power. They believe Democrats buy more books, for the government and for themselves. Almost every government agency has its own library.

"Its been a long, lean eight years," says one book store owner.

The book business here slumped during the election campaign. Shopowners say that happens every four years, reflecting Washington's uncertainty about the future.

"Books! Heck, you couldn't even sell a pair of shoes in Washington this summer," says David Tenney, manager at Sidney Kramer's.

"But now we're selling books to bureaucrats who are trying to prepare. They're reading to get ready for President Jimmy."

"I ordered six copies of that Erma Bombeck book, 'The Grass Is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank,'" says one shop owner. "And I've got four left."

"In Washington you sell all the books you can get on Ethiopia — I kid you not," says Jim Tenney, who projects $1 million in annual sales at the Book Annex, which he opened in Georgetown four months ago.

"There's a big market here for serious political, economic, social studies about foreign places," he says.

"Economics does well; philosophy does exceptionally well. So does ancient history. I put a three-volume, $75 set of books on the history of the Crusades out on a Friday afternoon, and on Saturday it was sold. I don't know where I could send you in New York City to find that sort of book."

"Smarter people," says Mrs. Martha Johnson, who runs the Francis Scott Key Book Shop in Georgetown.

She says "department store novels" — bestsellers like Jacqueline Susann's "Delores" or Harold Robbins' "The Lonely Lady" — "will not sell at Francis Scott Key."

New York publishers look down on Washington, booksellers here believe.

"They think that Washington is unliterary, that garbage sells here," says Carolyn Zimmerman, manager of Brentano's.

"But actually, if on Monday morning I don't have the book that was on the cover of the Sunday New York Times Book Review, I hear about it from my customers."

David Tenney (a distant cousin of Book Annex owner Jim Tenney) likes to tell how a New Yorker flew to Washington, rushed to Kramer's for a copy of The Club of Rome's "Limits to Growth," then returned to New York. "He needed it that day and he couldn't find it in New York," he says.

Mrs. Zimmerman used to manage Brentano's Pentagon branch.

"Military biographies — that's what they wanted," she says. "Anything about Napoleon would sell. And cookery, home repairs, auto repairs — they're great do-it-yourselfers in the Pentagon."

At the Globe Book Shop, a block from the White House, buyer Ann Landrum says, "Anything to do with politics goes over. We sold out of 'The Final Days' an hour after it came in."

Booksellers say John Dean's "Blind Ambition" and other Watergate books sell well. So do heavy books like Herman Kahn's "The Next 200 Years" and the Club of Rome's "Reshaping International Order;" Ralph Nader's books, and memoirs by elder statesmen.

Jim Tenney thinks John F. Kennedy gave the Democrats a good reputation among bookstore owners. "I remember when JFK got on an airplane with a copy of Lord Devid Cecil's biography of Lord Melbourne, there was a big run on it," he says.

Tenney ticks off the names of seven or eight bookstores which have opened in the last six months. Bill Kramer has opened three since inheriting his Sidney Kramer Books, founded in 1946 by his late father.

"Washington's a hot book town," he says.

Inner City Will Soon Be Ready

DETROIT (AP) — This municipality will soon have a city within a city that is larger than many towns, villages and suburbs around the nation.

When Renaissance Center, Detroit's new $337-million waterfront complex in the downtown area here, begins full operation in early 1977, it will have up to 20,000 persons as employes, guests and diners, in the four 39-story office towers, the 70-story Detroit Plaza Hotel and the three-level shopping mall.

Museum Acquires Ancient Work

DALLAS (AP) — The Meadows Museum of Southern Methodist University has acquired a painting by 16th-century Spanish artist Fernando Yanez de la Almedina. The painting of St. Sebastian is "one of the museum's most important acquisitions to date in terms of rarity and quality," said Museum Director William B. Jordan.

The work is a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Algur H. Meadows and the Meadows Foundation, Inc.

A Candlelight Christmas

Diane Von Furstenberg . . .

Design: My Thoughts

When Diane Von Furstenberg does a dress, it's real and really beautiful. The fabric is as real and supple as your own skin. It moves with, and against your body in a most sensuous way. The colors are the truest tones in the spectrum. The prints are as real as Nature itself. The result is bodydressing like this: to wear, to walk in, to travel with . . . always with a beautiful sense of the reality of being a woman of the world today. Wear a dress—feel like a woman in clothes that make sense.

A. Versatile and very smart looking "String" print trio. A great traveling companion. $138

B. Sleek, exciting and sexy . . . that's Diane's long sleeve "Snowball" print that can be worn as a front or back wrap dress. $90

Winter Travels

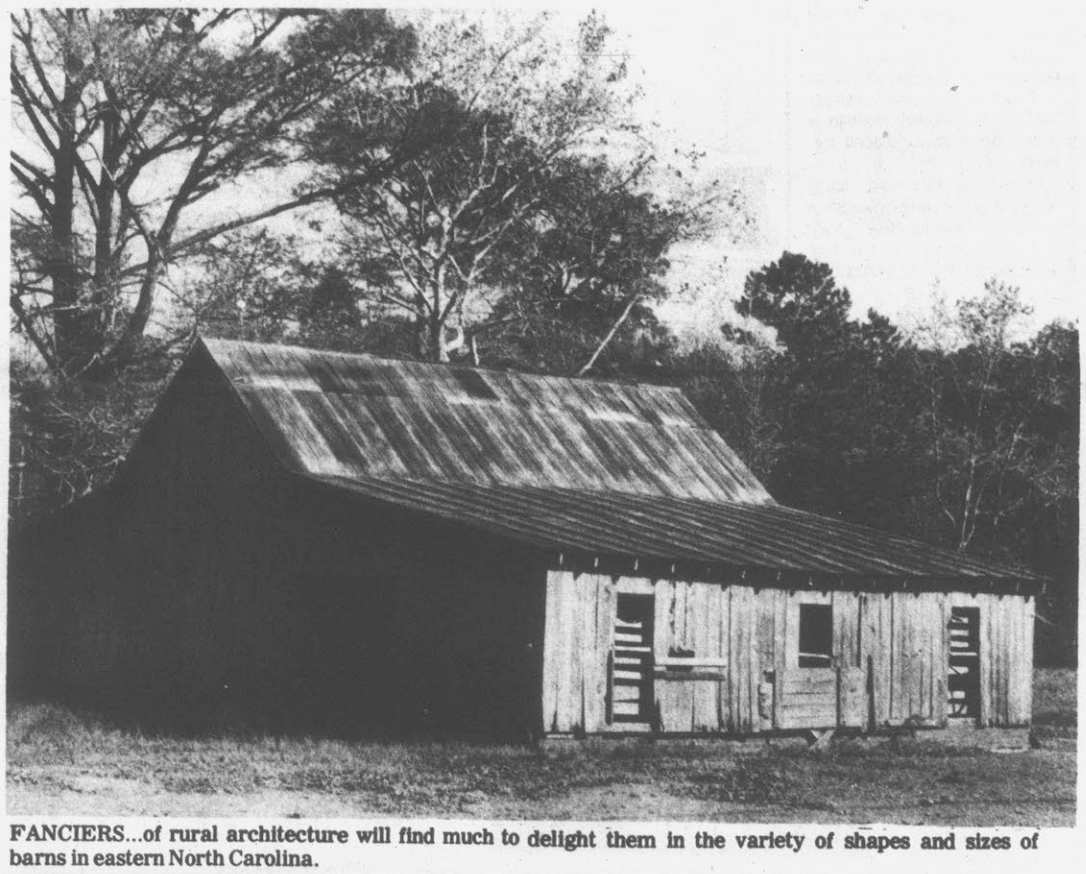
Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

A SEGMENT...of the restored waterfront at Washington is reflected in the waters of the Pamlico

In many ways, winter days are the best of all days to get in some local area sightseeing. One big bonus is not having to fight hungry mosquitoes and determined deer flies.

More to the point is the fact that in winter months distant vistas are no longer obscured by tall growths of field crops. Buildings, individual trees, stream banks and entities of landscapes take on a sharper focus in the absence of summer's profuse green.

On this page, a cross section of typical eastern North Carolina scenes are shown. These were photographed along U.S. 264 between Washington and Stumpy Point. Most any road traveled will produce its own quota of noteworthy things to see, whether it's a two hour drive on the back roads of Pitt County or a three day planned round-robin trip covering several counties.



FANCIERS...of rural architecture will find much to delight them in the variety of shapes and sizes of barns in eastern North Carolina.

BOATS...are to be seen everywhere in North Carolina's coastal counties. The small boats shown here are beached along a canal at Stumpy Point Bay.

PLAN YOUR HOME

DESIGN DISPLAYS SCREENED PATIO

By Jerry Bishop

AIRY HOME SHOWS FORMAL, INFORMAL AREAS

Borrowing its screened patio from the past, the Umberland contrasts old and new in a successful, livable plan.

One level living with a contemporary flair is the aim of this three bedroom home, and formal living areas, bedrooms, and family living areas are all painstakingly defined and separated.

Glass, stone, and an interesting front porch treatment accent the facade. Inside, the gracious foyer takes command to permit guest access to living room at right. For family, the hallway beyond the foyer leads directly to bedrooms and family room.

For entertaining, the living room is spacious and well-placed. It reaches nearly 21 feet, connects to a formal dining room, and is hidden from the family room by double doors.

Grouped behind formal areas, the open family room and kitchen form an activity center that is a highlight of the plan. Not only does the area create a wealth of unobstructed space, it overlooks and connects to a screened, covered patio for summertime meals or breezes without bugs.

Tucked between kitchen and garage is a combination laundry/half bath, and a storage room is within easy reach.

The master bedroom, well supplied with natural light and closet space, is favored with a large bath with double sinks. Another bath serves the two front bedrooms and is convenient to living areas.

With an entry into the kitchen and rear yard, the double garage is accessible, and the area is large enough for some main level storage. Additional items can be stored in the large basement.

Many Do-It-Yourselfers Got That Way Reading An Authoritative Book

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Many young men become do-it-yourselfers the way their brides become cooks — by reading books. And women, too, are surprised to find they can tackle a lot of home jobs just by reading.

In the past such books may have been too complicated for amateur workers — written as textbooks for vocational school workshops, trying to cover too much ground or not clarifying details.

Now there are books devoted to one subject, generously illustrated with step-by-step directions. One collection includes books on plumbing, electrical repairs, outdoor repairs, closet and storage areas, carpentry, decks, pruning, landscaping and so on. You decide what you want to know and you acquire one of the inexpensive books on the subject.

For example, "Plumbing," describes and illustrates the fittings necessary in repairing or building pipes and the like, making repair jobs simpler. One need not be at a loss when confronted with a slip coupling, a reducing bushing or whatever when shopping in a supply store. The book shows, too, how the pipe fittings go together, and so on.

As for pipe data, a big chart clarifies types of pipe and how they are used. One learns that galvanized steel, generally found in older homes, may be recommended "if lines are in a location subject to impact." Flexible copper tubings are the most popular types used and plastic pipes do not burst in freezing weather. It describes efficiency factor (water), types of fittings (solder, screw-on), how they are stocked, their life expectancy and whatever. A little knowledge may not turn a do-it-yourselfer into a plumber, but it will help in a lot of emergencies — like those long weekends when you can't get a plumber.

The book, "Carpentry," provides do-it-with-a-helper advice as well as do-it-yourself. A sawhorse could be the first item built with the book, especially if the do-it-yourselfer likes to use a dining room table or chair seat as a sawhorse substitute. From this book it can be learned how to refinish floors and ceilings, and how to take care of a workbench and tools. It is good for beginners because it provides basic information on tasks that a budding do-it-yourselfer might enjoy doing.

For women especially, the book "Electrical Repairs" can be a household tool of sorts. Various switches and fuses and circuit breakers are explained and illustrated. Showing how to throw the main circuit breaker to off in an emergency may be worth the price of the book.

It goes on to describe how to correct short circuits, how to connect wires, adding branch circuitry, and so on. How to repair lamps and appliances, and solutions to certain problems are offered also, along with troubleshooting charts for toasters, irons, blenders, fans, portable electric heaters, shavers and even vacuum cleaners.

Check the problem, look up the cause and find the solution, whether it is making the toast lighter or correcting a too-noisy mixer. There is also a home security guide chapter which tells about the various kinds of equipment, how they are installed and how they function.

Portable Storage Unit Design

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In an effort to find alternatives to expensive furniture for her clients by resorting to cabinetry and built-in furniture, interior designer Yvette Gervey of New York has developed a number of structural ploys. Some could even be do-it-yourself projects.

She raises floors, adds storage walls, conceals beds in walls and builds in sofas and chairs to provide a look of individuality. What's more, it has been done within the framework of "you can take it with you" — when you move. People have often been reluctant to go the built-in route because the investment would be a financial loss if the home was rented or if it was to be sold eventually.

"Originally I designed moveable storage wall units for my own rented apartment. They are shelves set within frames that can be used individually or hinged together to make a complete wall to lengthen an L-shaped room or to be placed in front of a wall," she says.

She uses such units as music centers (they are deep enough for television), for storage and so on, covering the plywood frames with suede cloth. She has hung graphics in front of the open shelves, she points out.

Although Mrs. Gervey doesn't have a background in architecture, she works with architects on her ideas and is involved with a cabinet shop that builds various objects to her specifications.

In one guest room she put a standard Murphy bed into an alcove, building the wall out on either side slightly, making her own structure by covering plywood with canvas. The bed is lowered by pressing a button which reveals bookcases within the alcove. It, too, can be easily moved to another home.

At the moment Mrs. Gervey is working on a condominium bedroom in Florida, where she has placed modules of redwood decking, which has been weathered gray, over the floor of one half of a bedroom to raise the area. On the decking she has placed a bed with a headboard of gray steel — the only thing is the room — so that it overlooks the 40-foot deck light outside the windows.

"The grayed look is a wonderful contrast to the bright colors that are normally used in Florida," she explained.

People are no longer interested in having a lot of meaningless rooms with expensive furnishings that are carbon copies of what everyone else has, she says. They can have a total environment in decorating by using structural means. Any money left over can be used for paintings, sculptures and plants. Young people, especially, welcome the idea, but older people "who are with it" also like the structural theme.

In her two-bedroom, two-bath rental apartment she tore out a wall (with the landlord's permission) because "our family was not accustomed to living in such close quarters." Without that wall she can have a large area when she wants to entertain, and it can be closed off with the storage units when she doesn't need to use it.

She uses platform seating that is covered with sisal, which she also uses on the walls, and there are a lot of mirrors. The whole concept is to focus on the windows with the special view of the city from the 37th floor.

She completely renovated a 100-year-old home "in terms of architecture" for the well-traveled owners, who are collectors. The addition of wood, fabrics and handicrafts turned each room into a showcase of a country to accommodate their treasures. A library was done in Tudor, a dining room resembled one in a French chateau, a pool room was a London import.

"The house now looks like a travelog of the owners' lives. It has more meaning than if they had just purchased furniture of the period," she maintains.

Probing Safety Of Insullation

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has opened an investigation into the home insulation industry to determine whether the materials used are fire hazards or dangerous in other ways.

The investigation was prompted by the district attorney's office of Metropolitan Denver, which filed a petition on the subject with the Consumer Product Safety Commission. The commission has ordered an investigation.

The petition catalogs several alleged potential problems with three kinds of insulation: glass wool, plastic foam and cellulose made from recycled paper. It points out that the insulation business is booming as one way of saving fuel energy. The industry probably would be booming even more if Congress had gone through with an earlier proposal to give home owners a tax credit for insulating their dwellings.

The petition predicts a dramatic increase in demand for home insulation products that will magnify the problems.

It said uniform safety standards and testing methods do not exist among the various levels of government. It also said conflicts in, or the absence of, federal, state and local laws and ordinances regulating home insulation contribute to the risks.

Consulting engineer Philip Stern said the Denver petition is an attempt to air the issue and find out what's going on. He said the city had a severe problem last year involving a few fires that may have been caused by cellulose insulation. He said the district attorney's office was hampered in prosecuting the case because no rules existed to say how fire retardant the materials should really be.

He also said consumers are confused on the issue of home insulation: "The amount of ignorance that exists is incredible."

The petition says a discouraging number of fires and other hazards have been observed with the shredded paper type of cellulose insulation that is supposed to be treated for fire retardancy before installation.

These hazards and some of their causes include wide fluctuations in fire retardancy due to poor quality control in manufacturing; the danger of incompetence in manufacturing, typified by lack of knowledge of proper levels of fire retardant; and the unknown nature of the permanency of certain fire retardants used.

Gardening Questions

Q. Does the Wax Plant need frequent watering at this time of year? (Mrs. E. T., Wilson)

A. Wax plant (Hoya carnosa) at this time of year should be kept in a cool place with soil nearly dry. (Henry J. Smith, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. How do I know for sure that my garden needs lime? (H. F., Greenville)

A. The only certain way is by having a soil test made. Information on soil testing and mailing boxes are available from your county extension office. The service is provided free by the N.C. Department of Agriculture. (W. W. Reid, extension horticulturist)

Q. What causes the white fuzzy stuff found on the bark of my crabapples? (E. B., Kenansville)

A. Woolly apple aphids. These pests do the most damage to the roots of your crabapple. They cause galls to form on the roots, much like the galls caused by root knot nematodes. Some of the aphids migrate to the upper parts of apple trees, where they overwinter in scars and rough places in the bark. Others of them migrate to elms, where they spend the winter as eggs on the bark. The eggs hatch in the spring, and the resulting aphids cause galls on elm leaves. They then migrate back to the apple trees. You can control woolly apple aphids with diazinon. Use according to label directions. (Jim Baker, extension entomologist)

Q. Since moving to Eastern North Carolina, I've heard a lot about Scuppernong grapes. Aren't grapes simply grapes or is there a difference between Scuppernongs and Concords? (L. G., New Bern)

A. There is definitely a difference. The Scuppernong is an old variety of Vitis rotundifolia, while Concord is a very popular variety of Vitis labrusca. Both species are native of Eastern North Carolina. However, the Scuppernong types, or Muscadines as they are usually called, are not cold hardy north of the cotton belt of the United States. (Joe Brooks, extension horticulturist)

'Propositions' Thinly Veiled On CB Radios

MEDINA, Ohio (AP) — "C'mon good buddy, this is the Lady of the Night," the woman's voice purrs. "Would you like some company?"

Propositioning by Citizens Band radio isn't new. But CB's popularity with the general public has shown the nontrucker that prostitution may be available in the cab like it is on the curb.

One popular ploy, said James Bigam, chief of detectives for the Medina County Sheriff's Department, is for the hooker to ask a trucker if he wants company. His answer might be a description of his rig and a suggested rendezvous.

In fact, said Bigam, detectives often overhear such prattle between prostitutes and drivers around big truckstops in the county.

Prostitution-by-CB caused a stir recently in the Louisville, Ky., area. A woman calling herself "Shady Lady" told a newspaper reporter she sometimes made $500 a night propositioning truckers over her radio.

She said she would suggest a driver meet her for coffee.

Other women claiming the "Shady Lady" handle began getting calls from truckers looking for a "cup of coffee."

"It ain't funny," said one woman member of a CB club in the Louisville area. "Not every 'Shady Lady' is a shady lady. I know one 'Shady Lady' who's my friend, and she's certainly not a prostitute.

"I hear on my radio what she's been getting. She's been getting asked if she serves coffee, stuff like that."

Said another woman CB-user: "I thought it was just a way women made contact with men and stuff. After I found out more about it, I discovered that wasn't what Citizens Band radio was intended for."

Bigam, in Ohio, said the propositioning is particularly common on weekends, off the main roads.

"One woman we did arrest but couldn't convict told us off the record that there's good money in it. She said she may do it about four times a night for $25 each time," he said.

"Our biggest problem is that it's hard to control and make arrests," Bigam said. He said the drivers usually aren't willing to testify against the hookers, and anyway, they're on the road when the case comes up in court.

A spokesman for the Federal Communications Commission said the government agency is in a bad spot even though CB calls can be monitored. The prostitute has to make a straightforward proposition for it to hold up in court.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The police guns fired in the dusty streets of Soweto to crush black revolt were loaded over three centuries ago and now they're raising visions of Armageddon in the land of apartheid.

The battle lines were first drawn when whites landed in Cape Town in 1652, and the conflict spread as white pioneers in wagons drawn by oxen penetrated South Africa's interior.

Today four million whites rule 18 million blacks, 2.3 million persons of mixed race, and 709,000 Asians.

Can such domination continue? The Zulu wars of the 19th century were a black rebellion against white control. So was the resistance to apartheid that resulted in the Sharpsville massacre of 1960. Now there is another major, perhaps historic, explosion of black frustration. The racial fighting since last June has left 370 blacks and three whites dead throughout the country. Numerous black leaders have been jailed.

"People must be left in no doubt at all that the white man in South Africa is prepared to shed the last ounce of blood to protect what is legitimately his," says Wimpie de Klerk, a prominent white newspaper editor.

"If indeed that is the attitude going the rounds of this country, I want to give an equal assurance that black people are prepared to shed the last ounce of blood to ensure that they get what is legitimately theirs," retorts Percy Qoboza, a prominent black newspaper editor.

The future of South Africa, a strategic, minerally rich and beautiful land, hangs on whether those two views can be reconciled.

Optimism fades with a glance at the Soviet-backed black nationalist guerrilla wars in neighboring Rhodesia and in South African controlled South-West Africa (Namibia).

Hope is fragile in the face of white intransigence, the crowded jails, the oppressive structure of racial discrimination and black anger.

White-ruled South Africa could become a lonely pariah on a black continent in a world that rejects a system that U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has branded "incompatible with human dignity."

But the white police who quelled the rioting in Soweto and the other segregated black townships with guns and tear gas underlined a fact of life: South Africa's government is able and willing to crush dissent.

Black militants speak of revolution, the start of urban terrorism and even guerrilla war to end white rule here. There is little doubt that strategic bombings of key buildings in major urban centers, guerrilla incursions from, say, a black-ruled Rhodesia or Mozambique, general strikes and continued black upheaval would have an impact.

But few observers question the ability of South Africa's military and police to deal ruthlessly with uprising at home and guerrilla attacks across its borders. By African standards, South Africa's military might is awesome and the most technoligically advanced south of the Sahara.

The answer, according to the philosophy of Prime Minister John Vorster's government, is partition of the land into independent white and black areas.

The independence on Oct. 26 of Transkei, the first of nine black tribal homelands to be granted sovereignty, says the white government, is the wave of the future. The blueprint calls for partitioning that grants the black majority 13.7 per cent of South Africa's land area with the remainder reserved for whites.

Blacks now living in "white" urban areas would continue to be regarded as citizens of the rural tribal homelands without claim to any political rights in the larger "white" homeland.

"There is no other option as a solution to our problem but separate development," says Minister of Police James T. Kruger. "We will have to learn to love this policy — all South Africans, black and white and love it, warts and all, because there is no option."

Nor did Kruger, a key figure in the government, see any chance of the nine million blacks living in white areas being incorporated into white political life.

Blacks in white urban areas, although they may never have seen their officially designated homelands, are still regarded as citizens of those homelands. They are, in this view, regarded as "temporary sojourners" in white areas.

But the official view is increasingly under attack not only by the small white opposition parties ranged against the ruling Nationalist Party but by leading members of the Afrikaner establishment. The Afrikaners are descendants of Dutch and French Huguenot pioneers, and they dominate the National Party and South African political life.

"The system can't work as it is and it is not going to work as envisaged," says Ben Vosloo, an Afrikaner academic. "We have to find a new blueprint for the country."

What is being discussed, by Afrikaner academics, businessmen, clergy and some politicians, from a variety of angles, is a political formula that would accommodate all races while preventing whites or blacks from dominating each other.

Some have suggested a form of federation or confederation between white and black homelands while others have suggested partitioning the land into black, white and multiracial zones.

"No formula that does not have equal rights as its clear goal will not meet the demands of the times," says Piet Cillie, editor of Die Burger, one of the most influential Afrikaner newspapers.

Jan Marias, a prominent Afrikaner banker and head of the South African Foundation, echoing the views of many fellow businessmen, also has called for a "redesigned and refined homelands policy and-or a federal concept ensuring a secure and happy future for all whites as well as blacks."

Whatever the future, Vorster has warned that the alternative to a peaceful resolution of Southern Africa's problems is "too ghastly to contemplate."

It is that alternative that may ultimately convince South Africans of the need for change.

Bank To Finance Reforesting

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina will plant selected tree species in a general reforestation program over 250,000 acres throughout the country. The Inter American Development Bank approved a $30-million credit for the program, which will benefit approximately 3,000 producers who are dependent upon the forests for raw materials.

MOORE'S

Age Fails Dim Zest And Work Of Melvin Belli

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lawyer Melvin M. Belli, who estimates he's won as much as $100 million in civil damages in a stormy career of fighting a "system stacked against the little man," considered the approach of his 70th year.

He gave the prospect a moment's thought, stretched his well-fed bulk on a squeaky spring chair in a corner of his opulent Victorian office and murmured, "I'm going to practice as long as I can."

In his 43 years of practice, Belli has indeed made an impact upon the sector of law dealing with personal injury, notably medical malpractice. Not for nothing is he known as "The King of Torts," the odd legal tag for a wrongful civil act for which the victim may sue.

Despite the reputation for his specialty, Belli's most spectacular case was the unsuccessful defense of Jack Ruby, the man millions of television viewers saw kill Lee Harvey Oswald, assassin of President John F. Kennedy. Ruby died before a second trial.

Belli, who blames the 1938 death of his father, Caesar, on an improperly filled prescription, refined a courtroom technique he describes as "show-and-tell." Stated simply, his theory is: "Showing the jury what happened is better than only telling them."

Belli claims he literally stumbled on the value of demonstrative evidence early in his career after he tripped and dumped dozens of prison made knives in front of a jury trying a San Quentin inmate for murder. The panel, convinced of self-defense, came back with an acquittal.

"I had learned a valuable lesson," he said, "one which had been only half realized" during his education at Boalt Hall, the law school at the University of California at Berkeley.

With this firmly in mind, Belli commenced the second trial of a damage suit brought by Katherine Jeffers, a woman who stepped off a San Francisco streetcar in 1941, was knocked down by a trolley going the other way and lost her right leg below the knee. The first award of $65,000 was set aside as excessive.

The second time around Belli came into court carrying a package wrapped in butcher paper. Day after day the unopened package lay on his table. A chill ran through the courtroom.

Had Belli brought the amputated leg into court?

The attorney for the railway argued that the woman could be fitted with an artificial leg that would leave her as good as new. Then Belli slowly started opening his package, knot by knot. Finally, he ripped off the paper, turned suddenly to the jury and held aloft an artificial limb.

Belli dumped the ersatz leg into the lap of a juror, intoning with bitter irony, "Take it. Feel the warmth of life in those soft tissues of its flesh, feel the pulse of blood, touch the rippling muscles of the calf."

The jury came back with a $100,000 verdict.

Up went the skull and crossbones on a staff atop the Belli Building. The flag is hoisted to the top for a win, to half-staff in a loss.

Belli's loves are Lia, his fourth wife, their daughter, Melia, and Caesar, his son by another marriage, and the building at 722 Montgomery St. Outside hangs a shingle: "Melvin M. Belli. Lawyer."

Entering the Belli Building is to walk into the last century, a boggling splash of red velvet Victoriana and Old West, 150-year-old redbricks, huge redwood beams, pillars that were once ships' masts, and old wrought iron.

The walls of Belli's office are covererd with 10-tier bookshelves crammed with Blackstone, Belli and bourbon bottles, and dozens of other ancient bottles and apothecary jars standing sentinel on the shelves. The high ceilings are trimmed in gold, with an occasional golden cupid gazing down. Behind a huge 1800s desk a fireplace glows anytime Belli is in. A huge mahogany bar that came around the Horn and slaked the thirst of the menfolk of Belli's birthplace in Sonora, in the Sierra foothills, bulks huge along one side of the room.

Belli was discussing judgeships, and how lawyers like himself, getting on in years and with many battles behind them, might welcome an appointment to the bench.

"I would never want to be a judge," insisted the gray-thatched barrister. "I think I'm too controversial to be a judge." So he's busy with civil actions, a promotion tour for his new book, and plans to visit Tibet — the one place in the world he says he's never been — to write a magazine article about that little-known country.

Belli was born on July 29, 1907 to Caesar Arthur and Leonie Mouron Belli. The lawyer-to-be said of his juvenile education, "I always wanted to know why a thing was so ... I liked to chew over things."

When he was 10, the family moved 50 miles from Sonora to the boomtown of Stockton, where, shortly before his scheduled graduation from high school, Belli got roaring drunk and was denied commencement by a vindictive principal — temporarily.

It was then that Belli received his first important lesson in the power of the law. His father went to see a friendly old judge who slapped together 15 yards of writs, habeas corpuses, bench warrants, subpoenas and old bail bonds, and "served" them on the principal.

"And I got my diploma on the spot. It was the most majestic legal encounter in my entire life. I knew I'd be a lawyer — the best damned lawyer in the land."

Belli says that early on he wanted to get into personal injury or tort law. "I felt that our economic system, like our criminal system, was stacked against the little man ... maybe the poor man in America could have as much justice as the rich man."

Two years ago the California State Bar suspended Belli for a month for allegedly violating legal ethics by appearing in an advertisement for a whiskey. The Jolly Roger was dropped to half-mast, and Belli charged off to Japan for the duration.

Belli crossed swords with the California Bar again last year over his criticism, on the Merv Griffin Show, of a judge Belli claimed should have disqualified himself in an injury case in Washington.

After defending himself, Belli was cleared and received only a reprimand for making "injudicious statements."

Today, a millionaire many times over, Belli has an office in Los Angeles in addition to his ornate office in San Francisco. Each supports 10 lawyers, two researchers and two investigators. In addition, Belli is in partnership with a group of lawyers in New York and another in Washington.

Belli said the minimum fee in his office is $15,000.

The exception: "If there's a hardship case; they've been to other lawyers and it's a case where somebody's got to do something because the poor bastard's going nuts, then we'll take on a case like that."

The word most often used to describe Belli is "flamboyant." Belli loves it. He's proud to bursting of his talent as a lawyer, and his elegant style — from his Texas boots to his red-lined Seville Row suits.

Brazilian Mining Town Has Colorful History

By MARY LENZ

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Long before Texas oil millionaires browsed through catalogue offering his and hers Chinese junks for Christmas, a black Cleopatra in a boom town in Brazil was presented with her own galleon and a new lake to sail it on.

Such tales of fabulous wealth and forgotten orgies still abound in Diamantina, Brazil, an 18th-century diamond mining center that has a flavor similar to a Texas oil town.

Diamantina, which is also the birthplace of Brazil's late president Juscelino Kubitschek, is out in the middle of nowhere in the central Brazilian state of Minas Gerais. The town lies in a small valley in a sterile rocky region of sparse vegetation and bright sunlight not unlike some of the tougher regions of the American Southwest.

In the Diamantina area, poor, black, heavily muscled men called "garimpeiros" — free lance miners — still sift through gravel from shallow streams, looking for diamonds with the simple technology of 200 years ago. The swollen bellies of their children testify to the fact that they're not doing too well.

Local people can point out a few examples of men who became wealthy working the diamond fields. You can still run into leathery-skinned, muddy-booted men in sweat stained khakis that you'd never suspect owned their own diamond mines, just as you'd never suspect some of the weather-beaten, grizzled old men in West Texas towns own millions of dollars' worth of oil property.

But the region's glory lies mainly in its past.

The most dramatic local legend is the story of Xica (pronounced Sheekah) de Silva, a Negro slave who became one of the richest, most pampered women in Brazil during the diamond heyday of the 1700s.

Xica was the mistress of Joao Fernandes de Oliviera, an official sent from the Court of Portugal with a concession granting him exclusive monopoly in mining the gems. The concession was signed January 1, 1747, and Fernandes remained in power until 1759, when he was called back to Portugal in disgrace. The enormous fortune he amassed in the diamond fields and the spectacular way he spent it on Xica aroused wrath in Lisbon and caused his downfall.

Xica, whom Fernandes freed, enjoyed living it up. He built her a lake and gave her a boat to sail on it when she grew unhappy in the dry and rocky inland town where she could not see the ocean, according to the legend.

Xica recently became the subject of a Brazilian movie, a colorful and spicy version of her profligate life. Neither history nor the movie explain what happened to the heroine when her lover was taken back to jail in Portugal.

Drug Traffic Poses Yugoslav Problem

By IVAN STEFANOVIC

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav officials are concerned about a sharp increase in the flow of drug traffic this year.

In the first eight months of 1976, customs officials seized over 3,200 pounds of opium-based drugs valued at $2.4 million. In the previous five years, the total was about 4,700 pounds.

The drug trail through Yugoslavia comes from the Orient through Bulgaria and leaves at one of the Austrian border checkpoints on the way to central and western Europe. Yugoslav officials say most of the smugglers are Turks, but also Lebanese, Pakistani, Jordanian, German and British passport holders.

A Turk was caught with the largest amount of smuggled drugs this year — about 650 pounds.

Interpol and United Nations agencies are among the international bodies which help Yugoslav officials keep track of the drug traffic.

"Judging by the way the drug is transported and 'explanations' offered by the smugglers, our suspicions are confirmed that organized networks of smugglers are involved," says Vido Popadic, a counselor in the federal customs office in Belgrade.

"The fact that usually poor people are driving expensive limousines and carrying vast quantities of the costly drugs rules out the possibility that it is a one-man affair," he said.

CB Operators Are 15 Million Strong

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
United Press International

Start "ratchet-jawing" with the CB "good buddies," who are taking over the country faster than crab grass and Southern Baptists, and you get the notion that if the sun spots hold off they will save the Republic.

Now some 15 million strong and growing, these citizens band radio operators claim they are saving lives and helping others — while protecting themselves from a speeding ticket — by broadcasting reports of reckless drivers, summoning aid for stranded motorists, reporting hazardous driving conditions and even helping catch fugitives.

Listen to "The Frog," Ron Gallagher, in upstate New York:

"I was rolling past the plant where I work late one night when the security guard gave me a shout saying the state police had put out a report about two guys escaping from the local mental institution.

"As I rolled along I-84 there were two guys hitchhiking. Since it was 2 a.m. and they were midway between two exits, where no one would've dropped them off if they were just passing through Orange County, I called the guard back. He called the nearby state police barracks and they picked the guys up a few minutes later."

Most of the "top bears" queried by UPI in state highway patrol dens from coast to coast agreed that CB radio operators actually help slow down traffic with their "Smokey reports."

Illinois state police are even installing CB radios in about 900 police cars.

"We're going to plug into this CB network," said Lt. Sam Nolen, a field operations officer. "We're trying to turn it from a negative thing into a positive thing.

"You'd be surprised how well CBers react to requests for help. The trucker who will just take delight in broadcasting that Smokey is hiding behind a signboard is the same guy who will hear a broadcast about a robbery, spot the car we're looking for and let us know in time to make the arrest."

Other police agencies argue that it also tips off the criminal equipped with his own "ears."

Whether police consider it a boon or a threat, today one of every 11 passenger cars, three out of five long-haul trucks, and probably Santa's sleigh, is equipped with a CB radio. That's 70 per cent more than last year.

The Federal Communications Commission has now issued a total of 7,101,776 "class d" licenses as compared with a total of only 1,530,824 as of June, 1975. (That doesn't measure the number of unlicensed CB rigs in use.)

It's a $1 billion industry expected to continue booming.

"I see no reason why it should not continue to grow until we have 60 million licenses," says Charles A. Higginbotham, who is known as the "czar of CB" as chief of the FCC's safety and special radio services bureau.

Rednecks and truck drivers riding the lonesome highways of the Midwest and the South may have been the founders of the cult, which was given impetus by the truckers strike of two years ago and a honky-tonk song called "Convoy."

But a "breaker, breaker" call today could summon such sophisticates as Betty "First Mama" Ford, the President's wife; Peter "Music Man" Duchin, the orchestra leader; Roger "Racer" Penske, the builder of racing machines; Anthony "Silver Fox" Forstmann, the investment banker, or his wife, "Tin Lizzie," the former Charlotte Ford.

And just as the telephone gave birth to the obscene phone call, the CB radio has opened new horizons for fantasy — sexual or otherwise. In the anonymity of the airwaves, the CB operator can adopt a new personality.

The bashful can give himself a macho handle such as "The Tennessee Baby-maker" and emulate the glib romeos of the road.

Silence.

"How 'bout it, Sweet Lips. This is Beachboy. You gotta copy on me?"

Sheler heard someone push the talk button of a mike.

"I waited for what I thought would be Sweet Lips answering Beachboy's call," he said. "Instead, a dog started barking, right over Channel 11, without giving his call letters or anything."

Then the Beachboy came back.

"Yeah, that sounds like her all right. Negative contact on that, Sweet Lips. This is the Beachboy. We gone bye-bye."

Bill Kanner, editor of "CB World," one of about 40 such magazines now on the market, says, "Basically, it's a gas."

"It's a new way of pretending," Kanner said. "It's a whole new way of dealing with people."

As already noted, CB is no longer just a man's world. The ratio of women holding CB licenses — known in different circles as belles, chicks or beavers — has increased from 1 in 40 to 1 in 20, and that doesn't count those operating on their husbands' licenses.

Some hookers specializing in the trucker trade, the "Pavement Princesses," have found the radio a valuable tool. But one groupie known as Lil, who lived in a small house by the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge in Brooklyn, became a legend by never charging and even sometimes lending money to a steady stream of truckers in and out of the Big Apple.

In another part of Brooklyn, the sultry voice of a girl named Angel kept an entire neighborhood entertained with her late night conversations with her boyfriend, whom she had met via CB. It would go like this:

"I wish you were here with me now."

"Me, too."

"Oh, honey, I can really feel you close by." "Me, too."

One night when another party broke in to object to the "disgusting language," there arose a chorus of "Shut up. Mind your own business."

Most of the CB rap is not as sexy, but can be just as funny. This was picked up on U.S. Route 30 running through the "Dutch country" of Lancaster County, Pa.:

"Breaker one-nine. You Westbounders on the three-oh got a horse and buggy on the move just east of Paradise. The horse is dropping markers so you'll have plenty of warning before you see it."

As the party of the good buddies gets bigger and bigger, a cloud looms on the horizon. Actually, it's a sunspot. Some scientists are predicting that by 1978 the sunspot cycle will have a devastating affect on transmissions on certain high-frequency bands.

Also, with a new 40-channel radio coming on the market sometime after Jan. 1, applications for licenses have dropped off in recent weeks. The Federal Trade Commission's Consumer Alert has been urging consumers to wait about buying a rig, claiming a survey showed that most did not know a new type of radio was coming.

That upsets the CB manufacturers to no end. They claim it leaves the impression that the presently available 23-channel rigs are not perfectly good radios. They also point out that the 23-channel sets may be purchased today for about $50 and the new models will be about $100.

The very fact that the price of 23-channel sets is going down has lured many others into radio shops. Jeffrey Sheler in Grand Rapids tells how he became a good buddy:

"CB's drive me batty. Whenever I listen to one I can't decide which is more irritating, the shrill squeals and noisy static or the hillbilly jargon. I swore I'd never own one.

"But when the 23-channel jobs recently started selling for less than half price, I waffled. About a week ago I found myself standing at a counter, staring at a little black box with a microphone dangling from the front of it.

PUBLIC NOTICES

NOTICE

The North Carolina Clean Water Bond Act of 1971, as amended, requires that public notice be given of receipt of each eligible application for a State grant from funds allotted for use in the various counties of the State to aid in financing the cost of construction of water supply system projects.

The Division of Health Services has received an application from the Town of Winterville in Pitt County for a State grant under the North Carolina Clean Water Bond Act of 1971. The application seeks a grant of $22,108.00 from funds allocated for use in Pitt County. This grant would be applied as a portion of the construction cost of a water supply system project. The project consists of the installation of approximately 15,700 linear feet of 6-inch water mains to complete a loop for existing water mains and to serve an area about to be annexed by the Town of Winterville.

YOU BET THIS is a lot of home. Why, with 5 bedrooms, 2½ baths, formal living and dining rooms, family room, huge foyer, 2 kitchens, one with breakfast area and back entrance, we're talking about close to 4000 square feet. Built around the turn of the century, you should take note of the construction. Deep corner lot, great location and 3 room house in back that goes with this property now being rented. By the way, we're in the process of painting the big hguse from top to bottom. With FHA commitment, there's a low down payment. In Ayden. Give us a call today and see how easy this one is to own. $37,500. Call Moseley-Marcus Realty, 746-2135, nights and weekends, 746-3472 or 746-4574.

YOU WILL PROBABLY want to do some painting inside but we believe with the size, location and condition of this 1660 foot home in Ayden, it is well worth the $30,500 asking price. 3 big bedrooms gives plenty of room for that large furniture, impressive 14' x 23' living room with cherry red brick fireplace, formal dining, 1½ baths, attached garage and lot with trees. Move in before Christmas. Ayden. Moseley-Marcus Realty, 746-2135, nights and weekends, 746-3472 or 746-4574.

AN OPPORTUNITY to own your home at a most affordable price. Central heat and air, 3 bedrooms, formal dining, living rooms, work-saver kitchen, bath, utility room, separate storage building and 80' x 120' corner lot with pecan trees. The price - $18,500. In Ayden. Immediate occupancy. Call Mosely-Marcus Realty, 746-2135, nights and weekends, 746-3472 or 746-4574.

WHEN WE SAY located away from the hustle, bustle and noise of the city, we mean just that. 12 acres - 3 cleared, 9 wooded. In Saint John's Community. Approximately 10 miles southeast of Ayden. If you like peaceful, quiet and relaxing surroundings, check with us on this property today. Excellent for house or mobile home. $13,500. Call Moseley-Marcus Realty, 746-2135; nights and weekends, 746-3472 or 746-4574.

TOYOTA

INTRODUCING

"The Answer"

Corolla 2 Door Sedan
Model 1401

THE ANSWER—With the lowest price and highest gas mileage of any new car sold in America, the 1977 Toyota Corolla two-door sedan is the answer to everything the consumer has been looking for in a small car. Powered by a 1.2-liter, four-cylinder engine, the car has a price of $2,788. It achieved 49 miles per gallon on the highway and 36 m.p.g. in the city in EPA economy tests. In California and high-altitude areas, the mileage varies because there the car is powered by a larger 1.6-liter, four-cylinder engine to meet stricter emission standards. The two-door sedan features a four-speed manual transmission, new grille design, power front disc brakes, high-back bucket seats, styled-steel wheels and power-boosted flow-through ventilation.

Or 3 Years
New Car Warranty

USED CAR WARRANTY — 12 MONTHS OR 12,000 MILES

This guarantee applies to cars selling for $1000.00 and up. On a 50-50 basis. All work must be done in our shop. This warranty does not apply to any sport cars, high performance or air cooled engines or 4 speed transmissions (except economy cars). Most good used cars (even if they look like new) are only guaranteed for a month. Or for a thousand miles. No more. And some are not guaranteed at all. But at Tarheel when we say a used car is in excellent condition, we're willing to stand behind it. We're willing to do something a little extra for it. So we guarantee its motor, its rear end and its transmission for twelve months or twelve thousand miles. If you're in the market for a better used car, come out to Tarheel and look at ours. We'll show you some as good as new. Guaranteed. Asterisk denotes warranted car.

Handicapped Have Turned Militant

By DIANE SILVER

DETROIT (UPI) — "You have to understand that you are a cripple. You have a certain station in life and you cannot rise above it."

Eric Gentile, paralyzed from the waist down in a motorcycle accident 12 years ago, will never forget those words.

Uttered by an angry nurse who wanted him to follow hospital rules, they made him realize what it means to be handicapped.

At 22, Gentile not only had to accept the fact that he would spend the rest of his life in a wheelchair, but, as an experienced draftsman, he found it nearly impossible to get a job. When he did find one, it was for half the salary paid able-bodied employes.

He could no longer ride a bus, enter most buildings or use public restrooms. Universities in many states would refuse to enroll him, even if he was qualified.

In short, it meant that a society which previously accepted him, now considered him an outcast.

"I think those words have been engraved in stone in my memory," he said, recalling the nurse's outburst.

That was in 1965.

Since then, Gentile has been in the forefront of a civil rights movement of militant handicapped. They are demanding — not asking — for the right to mobility, employment and education.

Gentile, now a building designer at Michigan State University, set up a political action group, helped write the state's new handicapped civil rights law and published newsletters to help the handicapped organize.

The lobbying efforts of Gentile and other handicapped persons in organizations like the National Association of the Physically Handicapped and the Paralyzed Veterans of America led to legislation in more than 20 states giving the handicapped the same civil rights guarantees enjoyed by blacks, women and other minorities.

In 1973, marches and letter-writing campaigns helped pressure Congress into enacting a new federal law prohibiting discrimination against the handicapped in employment and education.

Since then, handicapped organizations in dozens of cities have filed suit against mass transportation agencies operating buses inaccessible to people in wheelchairs.

The movement is relatively new. Before this decade few handicapped organizations existed and the ones that were around were timid, the militants say.

Many of the militants are like Judy Taylor, head of MSU's handicapped student program and a quadraplegic. She began working for black civil rights in the 1960s and switched to organizing the handicapped when she says she realized that a person in a wheelchair faces the same kind of discrimination as blacks.

"These are a new breed of handicapped people," Delany said. "There are a lot of Vietnam veterans who feel they have given their best to their country and don't like the situation they are left in. They are not used to being rolled over by society. They don't have the traditional attitude of the handicapped of accepting (discrimination) and staying at home behind closed doors."

There are some 44 million handicapped persons living in the United States, including the mentally handicapped, deaf and blind. Nearly one million reside in Michigan alone.

Of the more than 11 million handicapped of working age, the President's Committee on the Handicapped says that in 1970, 42 per cent were employed compared to 59 per cent of the total population.

Despite a federal law prohibiting inaccessible mass transportation, no mass transit agency in the nation operates buses with powered lifts for wheelchair users.

Lawsuits are pending in Detroit, Milwaukee, Philadelphia and other cities that would force local authorities to purchase accessible buses. But the courts have consistantly ruled against the handicapped on grounds the technology to build the buses does not exist.

Despite laws in several states, including Michigan, outlawing inaccessible construction, stairs still bar the handicapped from buildings. Curbs obstruct their movement in cities. Tiny restrooms in public buildings and restaurants are effective bars to the wheelchair user.

But the handicapped say the biggest barrier they face is not physical. It is the attitude of an able-bodied society that considers them "devalued" people.

When Gentile was hospitalized after the motorcycle accident he said nurses, doctors and visitors all seemed to think his life was over because he was confined to a wheelchair.

"A lot of people were trying to tell me to accept what they considered the standard issue (life) for the handicapped: a shawl, a book and a corner."

That attitude still exists, Gentile said.

"I've fought awfully hard to get where I am and that's not much," he said.

One of the biggest battles activists like Gentile face is changing the attitudes of the handicapped themselves. For too long, the activists say, handicapped persons have been afraid to fight for their rights.

The attitude of these militant handicapped, who prefer to call themselves "handicappers," is described by Gentile in a 1969 poem:

"If you're a handicapper, unwilling to fight for yourself, you're doomed to 'life' on the social shelf,

Where 'living' is a handout, or a cripples pay,

Film Story Of Big Immigration

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — An educational film, "People," tells how America's greatest wave of immigration carried 16 million persons through the gates of Ellis Island between 1890 and 1930.

Yugoslavs Offer Boat Excursions

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The Belgrade Tourist Association, in an effort to attract more tourists and keep them longer in the Yugoslav capital, has begun operating boat excursions along the Sava and Danube rivers.

Two two-hour trips daily include sightseeing from the rivers which divide the old part of Belgrade from the new.

Flowers Mark Aerial Service

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Flower Aviation lives up to its name.

The private aircraft service uses young women in flowered skirts on the landing field to guide planes in for refueling at the municipal airport here. A flowered carpet is laid at the craft's door. Crew and passengers are greeted with fresh-cut daisies.

Center Claims Heaviest Tree

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The world's heaviest Christmas tree, tipping the scales at over 56,000 pounds, is located in the Crown Center urban renewal complex here.

The 86-foot, semi-artificial tree is actually a combination of white spruce branches fastened onto reinforced steel. The 80-foot steel trunk weighs 20,000 pounds. Hoops and brackets account for 7,700 pounds, branches for 27,000 pounds, and lights and garlands for 2,000 pounds.

After New Year's, the branches are turned into mulch and chips for the city's nature trails.

Count 200,000 Degrees Issued

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania State University recently awarded its 200,000th degree.

"It took us from our first graduating class in 1861 to 1965 to award our first 100,000 degrees," said John W. Oswald, university president. "And now, in only 11 more years, we have graduated another 100,000 — a very impressive phenomenon."

A Dream Comes True When Mia Farrow Stars As Peter Pan

FLYING TO NEVER NEVER LAND — Mia Farrow, as Peter Pan, points the way to Never Never Land in "Peter Pan" the new musical production of the classic story which is the Silver Jubilee presentation of the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" as "The Big Event" airing on Sunday, December 12 (7:30-9:30 p.m.) on NBC Channels 6-7

"I didn't find it as frightening as I expected," said Mia Farrow, talking about the flying sequences for her starring role in "Peter Pan." "It's something I always wanted to do."

Mia stars in the special which will be "The Big Event" colorcast Sunday, Dec. 12, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7-28.

With the help of special apparatus, Mia flew through the air with ease, according to Nina Kirby of the Kirby Flying Ballet Company, which has been instructing and whirling a variety of Peter Pan performers across the English stage for more than 70 years. Nina said: "Mia took to it immediately. She is a very good flyer indeed; very light and very well balanced."

Mia said that flying through the air was a dream come true, literally. "Flying has come into my dreams ever since I can remember. No wings or anything like that. In the dreams I find myself flying naturally but the extraordinary thing is that I so often find I can't put brakes on and I go faster and faster. This seems to wake me up without my ever having landed."

On the set of "Peter Pan," of course, she did have to land; one of the trickiest parts of her solo soaring. "This is the only time one is allowed to look down," Mia said. "The first thing you are warned against is looking down when you are in the air. But when landing, you do look down and allow yourself to be taken to the ground naturally. If you don't, you come down like a sack of potatoes."

As to Peter Pan, Mia said: "I used to wonder why Peter Pan should always be played by a girl and not by a boy. As I have grown older, I've come to realize that it is a tradition which lives on and on."

When she was 21, Mia came very close to playing Peter Pan in a movie version but production plans fell through. "I was relieved because I still hadn't brought myself around completely to thinking of Peter Pan being played by a girl."

'Twas The Night Before Christmas' Airs Friday

The poem has been reprinted more than any piece of poetry in the English language, translated into almost every foreign tongue on earth, embossed in braille, and recited on stage, screen and television.

The poem is Clement Clarke Moore's "A Visit From St. Nicholas," popularly known as "'Twas the Night Before Christmas," and on Friday, Dec. 17, 8:30 to 9 p.m., an animated musical special adapted from Moore's world-famous work, narrated by Joel Grey, will be broadcast on CBS Channel 9-11.

On the afternoon of Dec. 24, 1822, Moore, a spare, dignified professor of Greek and Oriental history, left his spacious home in New York City, and called for his sleigh and horses. Moore was headed downtown to Washington Market to buy the Christmas turkey. Little did the scholar know that on his return trip he would compose a poem in which his description of Santa would frequently be hailed as "the greatest piece of genre word painting in the English language.

That, however, is exactly what happened. Moore was a devoted father and had already decided he wanted to bring his children something special that Christmas. He decided the perfect gift was a poem about a visit from St. Nicholas.

Answers Questions About Santa Claus

A whole bag of questions about Santa Claus are answered in "Santa Claus Is Coming To Town," a special one-hour Christmas musical fantasy, to be rebroadcast Sunday, Dec. 12, 7 to 8 p.m., on Channel 3-12.

Featuring the voices of Fred Astaire, Mickey Rooney, Keenan Wynn, Paul Frees and Joan Gardner, the program tells the story of Santa Claus and answers some of the questions that plague millions of youngsters around the world.

Belivers of all ages will learn that Santa's reindeer flew because they were fed magical corn, that Mrs. Claus' first name is Jessica, and that Santa was forced to go down chimneys when the Burgermeister outlawed him in Sombertown and ordered doors and windows locked.

The story beings when an abandoned baby is brought to Tanta Kringle and the little toymaker Kringle elves. They name the child Kris and bring him up. Through the years the Kringle toys accumulate, and Kris decides to scale the Mountain of the Whispering Winds, reigned over by the raging Winter Warlock, and deliver the playthings to the children of Sombertown.

Perry Como To Host 'Christmas In Austria'

It's Christmas in Austria. Palace halls and mountain farm houses are decked with boughs of holly. Snow - covered hills come alive with the sound of yuletide yodlers, glockenspiel bells, caroling choirs — and Perry Como.

This season marks Mr. C's first trip to the country that gave the world "Silent Night" over 150 years ago. Thanks to the magic of television, Perry takes us along, in a program co-produced and broadcast by the U.S. and Austria. The unique special, "Perry Como's Christmas in Austria," airing Monday, Dec. 13, from 10 to 11 p.m. on NBC Channel 6-7-28, explores all the rich tradition and beauty of the holiday as it is celebrated in Vienna, Salzburg, Arnsdorf and Dienten.

The show is best described not as a travelogue or a variety/special but a "mini-musical" with a minimum of dialogue and a cast of hundreds, headed by guest stars, Sid Caesar and Senta Berger, and featuring five-time World Cup champion skier, Karl Schranz, the Vienna Boys Choir, the Salzburg Marionette Theater as well as many Austrian folk artists.

With the help of the Austrian National Tourist Offices in Vienna and Salzburg, the production staff scouted locations and combed the Alps for folk talent during a three-week pre-production period in July.

As a result, groups like the Vienna Waltz Champions and the Stierwasher folk dancers, with their traditional wood-chopping mountain ax dance, make their debut on American TV.

And, of course Austrian citizens from wigmakers to mirror polishers in the Schonbrunn Palace's Hall of Mirrors were engaged to participate in the show both behind - the - scenes and on - camera.

COMO — "Perry Como's Christmas in Austria" celebrates the holiday season with guests Sid Caesar, Senta Berger, the Vienna Boys Choir and Olympic skiing champion Karl Schranz in Vienna, Salzburg, Dienten and Arnsdorf the town where "Silent Night" was composed. This special airs Monday, Dec. 13 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC Channels 6-7.

Divorce Discussed

What about the children? How will they feel? Will they understand?

These are questions frequently raised when two adults reach the critical decision they can no longer coexist as man and wife. And, no matter how delicately the situation is handled, in the end, only the children know the answers.

In "Me & Dad's New Wife," an "ABC Afterschool Special" airing Wednesday, Dec. 15, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., a glimpse into the life of one young girl who is caught in such circumstances is revealed through the character of Nina Beckwith, as portrayed by Kristy McNichol. In Nina's case, the situation is further complicated by the remarriage of her father.

The drama which unfolds, as Nina discovers that her dad's new wife is also her math teacher, has powerful impact for the 12 year old, who must not only accept the fact that her father has remarried, but that she must interact with the woman almost every day.

I believe the story of Nina Beckwith, which is both serious and filled with humor, is an important one for all youngsters — and adults — whether or not the situation is one with which they must contend, since there are few of us who have not been touched in some way by divorce, personally, or through the divorce of a friend or relative.

It is not a new phenomenon, but only in recent years has it emerged from the closet as a topic of open discussion.

With this exploration of the aftermath of divorce, I hope young viewers will comprehend the importance of allowing others to live their lives, unhindered by past relationships.

The pain endured by Nina, upon facing the reality of her father's remarriage is difficult for her to bear, but we also see that children are not the only ones who suffer in such cases, as Nina creates serious difficulties for her dad's new wife.

Nina's selfishness, which is the result of her conflicting emotions, causes pain for everyone involved.

However, it is equally important to understand the resolution of the problem in which everyone rejects hysterics and reciminations, creating, a lighthearted atmosphere of tenderness and calm deliberation.

"Me & Dad's New Wife" presents the problems accompanying the aftermath of divorce in a setting of warmth and light humor, making it an ideal story for adults to watch with their children.

Kiley Narrates Special

"The Land," a program examining the history of land development and its use in America today, will be presented Sunday, Dec. 12, 5 to 6 p.m., on NBC-TV. Richard Kiley is the narrator.

The program, a presentation of the United States Catholic Conference, was written by Philip J. Scharper and was filmed on location in Louisiana, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming and Montana.

It is clear, the program points out, that land policy was put together piecemeal, almost haphazardly, over the last 200 years. Yet, it has proved to be the most successful program of agricultural development anywhere in the world.

But there are signs that our land policy can be haphazard no longer. Because America has no clear and consistent land-use policy or a comprehensive long-range energy policy, the program will explore the question: how shall we best use our remaining land and water, as we rush toward a future which will demand both more food and more energy?

"As our cities fail to provide a quality of life acceptable to their citizens, disenchanted families are moving into suburbs and country communities, preempting agricultural and grazing acreages," says producer-director Martin Hoade.

'Seven-Ups' Debuts On TV

BUDDIES — Tony LoBianco left, and Roy Scheider are childhood buddies who have wound up on opposite sides of the law in "The Seven-Ups", an action drama airing on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Sunday, December 12 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC Channels 3W-5-12.

Roy Scheider, star of "Jaws," recreates the role of the real-life undercover cop he first played in "The French Connection" in the television premiere of "The Seven-Ups" on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Dec. 12, 9 to 11 p.m., on Ch. 3-5-12.

Produced and directed by Philip D'Antoni, who created a new tradition of tension by sending cars careening wildly through city streets in "Bullit" and "The French Connection," "The Seven - Ups" also builds to a frenzied climax as brakes scream and metal rips in a breathless end-of-the-chase that ravages the avenues of New York.

The title of the movie comes from a special squad, headed in real life by officer Sonny Grosse (here called Buddy), which only pursues criminals whose offenses call for seven years or more in prison. (The real officer Grosse provided the story and served as technical advisor for the film.)

Buddy (Scheider) uses an old but errant friend, Vito Lucia (Tony Lo Bianco), to gain information on a variety of underworld figures, never suspecting that Vito, in turn, is using information to shake down the criminals with the supposed "protection" of the Police Department.

Scheider effectively carries his terse tough - guy role while not tempering it with much range, and Lo Bianco is excellent as the scared stool - pidgeon. Actor Richard Lynch provides one of the most menacing faces on the screen in his portrayal of Moon, and Bill Hickman, as Bo, is everything a stunt - driving terror should be.

Marks' Trilogy Airs

You could — and perhaps you should — call it "The Johnny Marks Season." Well, what other composer has three shows on as many networks devoted exclusively to his music in December?

In any event, the Johnny Marks trilogy wraps with the glittering presentation of "Tiny Tree," Sunday, Dec. 12, 7 to 7:30 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7-28. "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer" — thirteenth prancing year! — and "Rudolph's Shiny New Year," a new show, preced "The Tiny Tree," which is being broadcast this year for the second time.

Why the Marks mania? It could be because Johnny Marks, from Mt. Vernon, New York, has made a contribution to our culture. Marks has captured the imagination. Like this:

Until a few years ago, your heard Christmas carols at Christmas — over and over and you wondered: Will this ever end? But then Irving Berlin wrote "White Christmas" and a skinny man named Johnny Marks wrote "I Hard the Bells on Christmas Day" and "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer" and before you could say "I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa Claus," a whole new secular sound in Christmas music was born.

In addition to "Rudolph" and "I Heard the Bells," Marks has composed such other seasonal favorites as "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree" and "A Holly, Jolly Christmas."

"Naturally, I'm delighted the songs caught on," Marks says, "but I never started out trying to write Christmas songs, as such. It was an accident. I had not thought of 'Rudolph' as a strictly Christmas song. But people started calling it a Christmas song, and that was all right with me.

"All of the other songs I've written since with a Christmas theme seemed to materialize naturally. It was like in the case of 'The Tiny Tree': They showed me the story line and I wrote the songs Roberta Flack sings in the show, and the rest of the music, based on that."

Marks cannot remember the first song he wrote, "but I do remember putting 'Trees' to music at a very early age."

"Trees" — in the plural — was not so hot. But Johnny Marks persisted and today he has no regrets. After all, he thinks his songs in "The Tiny Tree: — singular — are singular. That is, he thinks they are among his best.

Conducts Orchestra

Michael Tilson Thomas is a young conductor known for his ease with modern and romantic sounds. He's a natural, then, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday, Dec. 12, at 8 p.m. on PBS, when "Evening At Symphony" presents a program of Schoenberg's modern and Brahms' romantic music.

Arnold Schoenberg was a man who dealt with the elemental in music at the same time great men in other fields were casting off superstition and cant: in 1900 Freud published the "Interpretation of Dreams" and Max Planck published his quantum theory; in 1906 Einstein evolved the relativity theory; in 1903 the Wright brothers got the airplane off the ground; in 1909 Schoenberg composed his "Five Pieces for Orchestra," the piece heard first on this "Evening at Symphony" program.

Mostel, Garson Star In 'Little Drummer Boy Book II' Monday

SPREAD JOYOUS NEWS — The Little Drummer Boy, with some of his animal friends, follows the Wise Man, Melchior, to spread the news about the birth of the Christ Child in the new animated Christmas special, "The Little Drummer Boy Book II", which will have its first colorcast on Monday, December 13. (8-8:30 p.m.) on Channels 6-7.

"The Little Drummer Boy Book II," a new animated musical special for the Christmas season headlining Zero Mostel, with Greer Garson as the storyteller, will be colorcast Monday, Dec. 13, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on NBC Channel 6-7-28.

The special is a sequel to the popular Yuletide animated special, "The Little Drummer Boy," which was broadcast for the last eight years.

"The Little Drummer Boy Book II" features the song, "Do You Hear What I Hear?," and includes an original tune, "The Gold and Silver Itch," plus "The Little Drummer Boy."

The program is based on the latter, which tells about a little orphaned drummer boy's unique gift to the Christ Child at Bethlehem. The new production opens with the Little Drummer Boy, Aaron, at the manger. His adventures begin when he decides to accompany Melchoir, one of the Wise Men, on an important journey. Melchoir is on his way to visit Simeon, the bellmaker, to ask that he ring his silver bells so that the whole land will know about the birth of the Christ Child. The sad plight of Simeon, who loses his prized silver bells to an unsavory group of tax collectors, and the actions of the Little Drummer Boy to regain the bells before they are melted down, form the plot of the story.

Mostel is heard as Brutus, the tax collector. David Jay speaks for the Little Drummer Boy. The roster of performers includes Robert McFadden, Ray Owens and Allen Swift.

The new tune, "The Gold and Silver Itch," is among 150 original songs created by lyricist Jules Bass and composer Maury Laws during the past 13 years for animated specials.

Bass said: "The songs Maury and I put together serve their purpose. It would be great if one of them because a commercial hit, but that's not the reason they're written. Ours are very specialized numbers, tailored to a particular animated sequence in a show. They are designed, both in melodies and lyrics, to tell a specific story and to create a special effect. Our guideline is: Will it fit the program?"

According to Bass, no decision is made about melodies until a script is completed. He explained: "We then look for a spot where a song would help. I write the lyrics and give them to Maury for a melody."

'Victory At Entebbe' To Be Broadcast

It is Sunday, June 27, 1976. The scene is the cabin of an Air France jetliner bound from Tel Aviv to Paris, with a stopover in Athens.

Aboard are more than 200 people — young and old, men and women, Jews and non-Jews. Also aboard is a team of terrorists headed by a German man and a German woman.

Their ultimate destination — as yet unknown.

The events of the next few days will galvanize the world with the terror of hijacking, the drama of international negotiations and the pulse-racing intensity of one of the most startling and heroic military coups in history — the Israeli raid on the terminal at Uganda's Entebbe Airport to free the hostages.

This is the story of "Victory at Entebbe," the three-hour dramatization of the events that captured world attention last summer. The production will preempt an entire evening's programming on ABC-TV, airing Monday, Dec. 13, 8 to 11 p.m.

A total of 31 people were killed in the daring Israeli action—but 103 persons were rescued, and aserious international incident was averated.

Because of the special nature of "Victory at Entebee," many of the world's leading actors and actresses — including several who have rarely appeared on television — chose to participate.

They include Helmut Berger (German terrorist), Linda Blair (Chana, a passenger), Kirk Douglas (Chana's father), Richard Dreyfüss (Col. Yonatan Natanyahu), who led the raid on the terminal in uganda), Helen Hayes (Mrs. Wise, the passenger who died — or was killed — in an Uganda hospital), Anthony Perkins (Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin), Burt Lancaster (Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres) and Elizabeth Taylor (Chana's mother).

Also starring are Theodore Bikel (as a concentration camp survivor who was a passenger, David Groh (as a middle-level Israeli government worker who was a passenger), Harris Yulin (as Gen. Shomron, who planned the attack) and Jessica Walter (as a nurse on the flight).

Starring in the musical adaptation of the story is Johnny Whitaker as Tom. Also starring is Celeste Holm as Aunt Polly and Warren Oates as the villainous Muff Potter.

Twain's tale is episodic, depicting memorable bits of the adventurous lives of Tom and his best friend, Huck Finn, including Tom's brush with a fence painting chore, and the climactic chase through caves as Tom and Becky Thatcher try to escape from the dangerous Injun Joe.

Denver's Christmas Special Will Air Tuesday Night On ABC

John Denver, the singer - composer - guitar player who writes and sings about things the Dylans and Lennons have largely ignored, hosts his own holiday season special, John Denver's Rocky Mountain Christmas," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, Dec. 14, 9 to 10 p.m., on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

Valerie Harper of "Rhoda" fame, top vocalist Olivia Newton - John and young comedian Steve Martin will be his guests.

The special was taped in his hometown, Aspen, Colo., an area with which the singer is closely identified through his music. One of his most popular hits is "Rocky Mountain High."

John moved to Colorado just six years ago, and he admits that he is still overwhelmed by his surroundings.

His home is situated on seven acres of land and, if he's not composing or rehearsing songs, he's usually out trying the nearby ski slopes or backpacking through the hills. He helped design the house and insisted that all the power lines be placed underground to ensure an unobstructed view of the mountains.

John says that he's found his TV specials "were the easiest things I've ever done, which kind of surprised me. I expected them to be more difficult.

"I really don't notice any difference between singing on TV and singing in concerts, except you're playing to a live audience. The camera penetrates a lot more and it doesn't miss anything. That's a lot different than when people are sitting 30 or 40 or more yards away in a concert hall."

Highlights of the show include John and his guests singing in a specially built plastic dome decorated with spring flowers with the Rockies visible beyond. They are later joined by neighbors as they participate in an old fashioned pass - the - guitar holiday sing - along. This relaxed concert takes place in a mountain lodge. A surprise element of the special is Denver demonstrating his expertise as a downhill skier by taking on one of the most difficult runs in the Rockies.

Ball Stars In 'Mame'

Lucille Ball stars as a high-spirited woman with a zest for living life to the fullest in "Mame," the musical comedy to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Dec. 18, 8:30 to 11 p.m., on Channel 6-7-28. Beatrice Arthur and Robert Preston co-star.

Ms. Ball provides a strong characterization in this entertaining chronicle of one woman's efforts to open up as much of life as possible for herself and those around her.

The story begins sometime in the '20s as Mame suddenly inherits a young nephew, Patrick Dennis (Kirby Furlong), whom she decides to raise after her own manner (nightclubs, police raids, etc.). Patrick finds living with his aunt an invigorating experience, since Mame is a swinger who makes living an art. Even when problems arise, Mame sustains herself long enough to snare a rich southern gentleman, Beauregard Burnside (Preston).

As a happily married woman, she quickly adjusts to a first-class life style that is abruptly terminated by Burnside's accidental death.

Mame returns home and finds that Patrick, now a young man, is on the verge of marriage. Sensing that the family of the intended bride has ulterior motives, Mame scares them away. Patrick later marries Pegeen, a former maid in the Burnside household. They eventually provide Mame with a "grandson" to accompany her on her world travels.

VIBRANT WOMAN — Lucille Ball stars as Auntie Mame, a woman who seeks to live life to the fullest, in "mame," the film musical based on the Broadway hit, to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" December 18 (8:30-11 p.m.) on channels 6-7.

Shakespeare Classic Presented Tuesday

From William Shakespeare to Harold Robbins, no writer has created a character which has captured the imagination of the world as completely as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has done with his inimitable Sherlock Holmes. For three-quarters of a century, the colorful British detective has inspired readers to analyze and investigate the three novels and 60-odd short stories in which he appears, creating a Holmes cult around the world which has never been equaled by any other fiction writer.

Tuesday, Dec. 14, the most popular of Doyle's writings, "The Hound of the Baskervilles," airs as "The CBS Late Show," beginning at 12:30 a.m. on Ch. 9-11. Starring as Holmes in the 1939 production is Basil Rathbone, and Nigel Bruce portrays Dr. Watson.

Dedicated Holmes buffs still hold regular meetings to discuss their hero. The cults, among them the Baker Street Irregulars and the Orange County Sherlock Holmes Society, have made virtual shrines of the London haunts Doyle described in his stories. The old Northumberland Hotel (a locale Doyle used in "The Hound of the Baskervilles") is now the Sherlock Holmes Tavern. Holmes' supposed residence, located in the novels as 221 Baker Street, was leveled during the blitz attacks of World War II and a modern office building now stands on the site.

But directly across the street is a new Sherlock Holmes Hotel. Many London pubs feature Sherlock Holmes memorabilia and devoted Holmes fans make pilgrimages to the English capital to retrace the fictional footsteps of their hero.

The movies, stage and television have contributed to the cult by making Sherlock Holmes into the most recurring character in 20th - Century drama. From the 1915 Danish motion picture to present times, Sherlock Holmes has been portrayed by some of the screen and stage's most noted players. Others, besides Rathbone, are William Gillette, Raymond Massey, Peter Cushing, John Barrymore, Reginald Owen, Sir John Gielgud, Fritz Weaver, Ronald Howard and Christopher Lee.

Lewis Is Comical

Jerry Lewis stars as a bumbling, fumbling department store employee in "Who's Minding the Store?", a hilarious comedy to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Late Show" Friday, Dec. 17, at 11:30 p.m., on Channel 9.

Jill St. John, Ray Walston, John McGiver and Agnes Moorehead co-star.

Lewis plays Norman Phiffer, a poor, hard-working poodle-walker who is madly in love with Barbara Tuttle (Miss St. John), a department store heiress. When her mother (Miss Moorehead) learns of the romance, she tries to break it up by getting Norman a job in her husband's store and by instructing the manager (Ray Walston) to assign a series of impossible chores for Norman to perform.

Nightmare Vacation

David Birney, Farley Granger and Tyne Daly star in "The Haunting of Penthouse D," a chilling deception, intrigue and murder, which will be presented as the "Wednesday Mystery of the Week," Dec. 15, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC Channel 3-5-12.

The story begins with the promise of a pleasant stay in a luxurious Manhattan penthouse for Libby Phelan (Miss Daly), a young woman who has suffered emotional stress after witnessing a fatal attack on her father by two hoodlums.

Her friends, New York fashion model Dolcina Hunt, invites her to spend some weeks with her at her penthouse apartment to help her erase the memory of that horrible incident. But Dolcina is suddenly called away to an assignment abroad. She insists that Libby stay on alone until the assignment is completed, and Libby Agrees.

She discovers that she is never quite alone. Overturned furniture, pictures that move, water that suddenly runs from a faucet, and a picture of Dolcina appearing at the bottom of a filled bathtub are among the terrors of her nights.

Libby cannot know that she has been cast as the central figure in a plot to murder the wife of Dolcina's married beau.

Dolcina Hunt is portrayed by Carol Mallory.

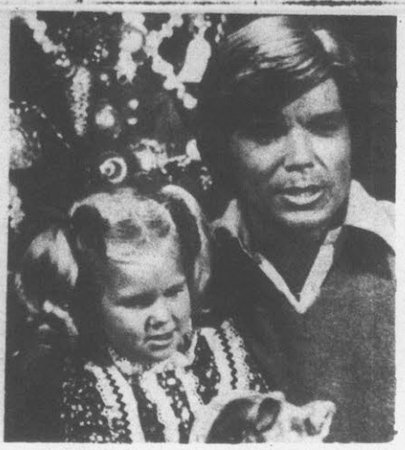
Special Is A Family Affair



SINGERS — There will be a song in the air when NBC telecasts two very special Christmas specials Wednesday, December 15. "The John Davidson Christmas Show (8-9 p.m.) has an all-family theme featuring John and his daughter Jennifer pictured above. "The Mac Davis Christmas Special—When I Grow Up" (10-11 p.m.) views the holiday season as seen through the eyes of children. Richard Thomas and Raquel Welch are guests.

John Davidson's parents loved the recent commotion around their house. For eight days there were about 100 cast and production people on their property, and that of their sons.

Having "company" is nothing new to the Davidsons. "We used to tell our parishoners, 'If you go past our house without stopping, we'll find you a quarter, to be given to charity,' " said Mrs. Davidson.

Her husband, the Rev. James Davidson, was minister of the First Baptist Church in White Plains, N. Y., for 17 years beginning in 1954.

Today, they live across the road from their entertainer-son and his family. Their two homes and the ranch property in Hidden Hills, Calif., is the setting of "The John Davidson Christmas Show," airing Wednesday, Dec. 15, 8 to 9 plm., on NBC Ch. 7-28. The all-family show special will include various Davidson family members, John's in-laws and their families, his guests, the Lennon Sisters, and their families.

"John mentioned the idea of using our two homes for this Christmas special last spring," said the Rev. Davidson. "We were delighted at the idea."

The two properties sit on eight acres of land. The Davidson home was used for all the interior scenes, while the minister's sizeable front yard was used for the exterior snow scene, created through special effects.

"It was an incredible sight," said Mrs. Davidson of their snow-covered property. "It looked so real. I looked out the window and saw one of the special effects people working in a shirt and I wondered, 'Oh, why doesn't he put on a jacket!' Then I remembered it wasn't real snow and that the temperature was in the 90s."

The Rev. and Mrs. Davidson are particularly pleased that their famous show business son has incorporated some family traditions in this holiday special.

"We always had a Nativity scene with the children playing the different roles," said Mrs. Davidson. "We also read the Christmas story to the children."

The Rev. Davidson reads that story on the show as the various youngsters act out the roles in a specially constructed barn on the Davidson property.

There also will be a family band segment, perpetuating a home tradition.

Star In 'Getaway'

Steve McQueen and Ali MacGraw star as a couple who become involved in a deadly swap — his freedom if he'll hold up a bank — in "The Getaway," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Dec. 15, 9 to 11:30 p.m., on Channel 9-11. Also starring in the film are Ben Johnson and "All in the Family" star Sally Struthers.

Doc McCoy, a man stuck behind bars, arranges with his wife, Carol, to make a deal with a crooked parole - board official. The exchange will spring Doc from prison in return for half his take from a dangerous bank heist. The holdup succeeds, but once Doc and Carol have the money, the deal starts to fall apart.

DREAMERS — Singer Natalie Cole and some very special four-footed friends join Oral Roberts in his one-hour special "Christmas Dream," to be telecast on Thursday, December 16 at 10 p.m. on Channel 3N-6.

Oral Robert's Christmas Special

The appearance of a mysterious celestial body reported hovering in the vicinity of Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Oklahoma, in late October caused a shock wave of reaction throughout the usually conservative midwestern community. Thousands of curious bystanders crowded onto the campus to observe the phenomenon.

The star - shaped being was spotted in the vicinity of Roberts' Prayer Tower, surrounded by what appeared to be a large sheep, a camel, and a donkey. The four-footed creatures allegedly were conversing amiably with students and faculty and seemed unimpressed with the attention lavished on them by the public.

Investigation disclosed that what may have appeared to some to be a portent of the second coming was actually an annual celebration of the first coming. Oral Roberts was taping his latest one-hour Christmas Special, to be telecast Thurs. Dec. 16, at 10 p.m., on Channel 6, and the larger - than - life critters were new creations from the imaginative genius of Sid and Marty Krofft, who built the symbolic animals for the Roberts show.

In a de' ja vu sequence, Krofft's characters, symbolizing the first Christmas, visit the Prayer Tower on ORU's campus in search of their "Christmas Dream," the title of the Special. Reaching back in their memories for that first star - studded night, the creatures reflect on the long step mankind must make from a dream to reality. How they must reach out beyond their dreams to mold fantasy into fact, to bring to fruition their vague hopes for the future.

HOLLYWOOD — There's increasing speculation that Paul Michael Glaser of "Starsky & Hutch" will wed girlfriend Elizabeth Mayer during the upcoming holidays. Paul's neither denied nor confirmed the rumor, but most Hollywood observers suggest you bet on it.

This will be the last season of "The Sonny and Cher Show." Sonny's very uptight with the censorship clamped on the show and Cher's been quoted as saying that she's simply biding her time. CBS had made nothing official at this writing, but don't expect it to be back next Fall unless it's ratings do a hurry-up turn around.

It looks like Roz Kelly will do a spin-off pilot in the role of Pinky Tuscadero, Fonzie's TV girlfriend.

Henry Winkler, meanwhile, is keeping busy not only with "Happy Days" but with the film in which he'll star that begins production in February, called "Heroes." Henry stars in the film and — not only has he been involved in writing the script — he's personally auditioning a long list of actresses, one of which will be his leading lady.

Emily McLaughlin, Jessie Brewer on daytime's "General Hospital," is now a patient at the UCLA Medical Center, where she's described as in "guarded condition" - in the aftermath of her hospitalization for a bleeding ulcer. There's no time-table as to when she will be able to return to the show.

Conrad Bain, "Maude's" neighbor Arthur, doesn't usually mention it but he's quite an accomplished sculptor. Most of his work is hidden in the garage of his home, but it's his weekend hobby and something he says he'll some day show to outsiders.

A bomb threat closed down production on "Mary Hartmen, Mary Hartman" for part of one day recently. A search of the set by police and firemen failed to locate any bomb.

Don't be surprised if Theresa Lamont (Nancy Merchand) on "Another World" is soon announced as the feminine lead on NBC's new serial, "Lovers and Friends." That show will premiere in mid-January with the cancellation of "Somerset."

"THAT WAS THE YEAR THAT WAS"

The nation's Bicentennial year will be the subject of a satirical musical review, "That Was the Year That Was," on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Dec. 26.

'TV'76' will feature the work of award-winning writers, and the special will be based on the BBC and NBC-TV series "That Was The Week That Was."

Couple Stars As Pioneers

PIONEERS — Even the most trying times cannot spoil the holiday spirit of Roger Kern and Linda Purl when they star in "young Pioneers Christmas," a continuation of the story of a young couple homesteading on the prairie which airs on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," December 17 (9-11 p.m.) on Channels 3W-5-12.

When he was growing up on his parents' ranch in Northern California, Roger Kern avidly watched western movies and dreamed of some day becoming a cowboy. As it turned out, he became an actor instead, but his chosen profession has taught him that life in the Old West was not as glamorous as he thought.

Kern and Linda Purl star as David and Molly Beaton in "Young Pioneers Christmas," a holiday special airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Dec. 17, 9 to 11 p.m. The film is a sequel to one of last season's most popular dramas, "Young Pioneers," and both films have been a revelation to the young actor.

"Hollywood has glamorized the Old West to a point that it's hard to get a handle on what really went on," he said. "The research done for both of the 'Young Pioneers' films revealed that most of the settlers in the West were kids from the East. They were not prepared for the fierce weather, the crop failures and the hard work. Many of them gave up and went back home. When we talk about pioneer stock, we're really talking about those who su vived."

"Young Pioneer's Christma takes place during the Chri mas season. What we now tal for granted as the happies tin of year was not the case 1 years ago.

"Christmas was one of t roughest times of year for t settlers," Kern said. "Th weather was always bitter ar the small town stores just didn carry things that could be give as gifts. Most parents could n afford gifts, anyway, so mo children got presents like mi tens, shawls or other clothes tha could be made from remnants.

"A Christmas tree was a rar sight. In our film we use one tha is made of pine cones which wa just about the only way a pionee could have a tree."

Kern believes that "Youn Pioneers Christmas" will mak people more aware of wha people really went through in th West.

"I think that many de dants of the pioneers wil preciate their heritage mo doubt many of them really know what kind of hardships their ancestors went through."

Determination, Love Pays Off For Frosty

What does a piano player have in common with a snowman? For Jimmy Durante it was determination coupled with a love of music that paid off. For Frosty the Snowman, it was determination coupled with love of life which helped him overcome his obstacles.

Veteran comedian Durante helps keep the ice from melting when he narrates the story of "Frosty the Snowman," an animated musical special, to be rebroadcast Friday, Dec. 17, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on CBS Channel 9-11.

Durante, the piano - demolishing, gravelly - voiced comedian with a talent for creating chaos out of the English language, loved doing the holiday special.

"Frosty, as he tries to keep from melting, is an inspiration for children," said Durante. "He teaches them that it's possible to get what they want out of life if they work hard enough to get it."

Durante is a product of Manhattan's Lower East Side. As a youngster, one of his first jobs was delivering newspapers in Manhattan's Broadway area. Many of his customers were in show business.

"I would hear a lot of them playing the piano," he recalls. "I kept thinking that the guy who plays the piano has the swellest job in the world. I wanted to be like him."

The success story started one day when his father bought young Durante a piano and hired a piano teacher for him. Jimmy worked at many odd jobs to help pay the bills, and would practice on the piano day and night in between jobs. In no time at all, he was earning a few dollars a night playing at neighborhood parties and athletic club dances.

At 17, he got a job in one of the "wildest joints" in New York's Coney Island, Diamond Tony's saloon.

"Twenty - five bucks a week. Hours from eight in the evening until unconscious."

Then followed other jobs in saloons and dance halls on the Bowery, at Coney Island and in Chinatown — and once as an accompanist to a singing waiter named Eddie Cantor.

"At that time I didn't sing yet or tell jokes. I devoted myself to the keyboard."

But it wasn't long before Durante's versatility blossomed, and he became a household name. Indeed, determination paid off. And, like Frosty the Snowman, Jimmy Durante has melted the hearts of millions.

Actor Makes TV Debut

After a radio career that spanned 34 years — 21 spent portraying Fibber McGee — Jim Jordan will make his television acting debut in "Old is Gold," a segment of "Chico and the Man" airing Friday, Dec. 17, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on NBC Ch. 6-7.

Jordan, who has been in retirement since 1961, was vacationing in Egypt when he received a cable from series producer Hal Kanter offering him a guest role.

"Because Hal and I have been friends for years," said Jordan, "I didn't need any time to think it over. I just responded with, 'Sure.'

"I thought I was accepting a cameo role. What a surprise I was in for. It scared me when I found out what I was expected to do."

In the episode, Jordan, 79, guest-stars as James Maxwell, an aging muffler mechanic hired by garage owner Ed Brown (series star Jack Albertson). However, Brown will not allow Maxwell to perform any meaningful task because of his age.

Salute Christmas

Donny and Marie Osmond will join their parents, brothers, sisters - in - law, nephews and friends in their hometown of Provo, Utah, for "The Donny and Marie Osmond Family Christmas Special," Friday, Dec. 17, 8 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Among the friends will be a very special one named Andy Williams, who first presented the Osmonds to a national TV audience in the 1960s, on his own series. Paul Lynde will guest star.

One of the highlights of the show will be the Osmonds showing their friends how they go out in the snow and get their own Christmas tree and how the entire family is involved in the holiday preparations and celebrations.

In another segment, the youngest performing Osmond, Jimmy, heads for the drums while his mother and brothers Virl, Tommy, Alan, Wayne and Jay play saxaphones in a rendition of "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town."

A 'guaranteed delight' will be Paul Lynde playing a very reluctant department store Santa Claus and reading his version of " 'Twas the Night Before Christmas."

Russian Culture Showcased On NBC-TV

A showcase of Russian culture will be presented in a prime-time entertainment special on NBC-TV under terms of an agreement between the network and the Soviet Union, it was recently announced by Herbert S. Schlosser, President, NBC.

The agreement was concluded recently at NBC's New York City headquarters during a meeting attended by Julian Goodman, Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer, NBC; Schlosser; Robert T. Howard, President, NBC-TV; Anatoly M. Dujev, Chief, Ministry of Culture of the U.S.S.R.; and other executives representing NBC and the Soviet Union.

The special will bring to viewers the Festival of Music and Dance of the Soviet Union, a stage presentation featuring leading performers from various sections of the U.S.S.R.

Included in the colorcast are performances by the Georgian State Dance Company; the Piatnitsky choir, dancers and orchestra; the Ukrainian Dance Company; Mengo (the Dance Ensemble of the Northern Nations); singer Vladimir Saian of the Tuvin Philharmonic; the Komuzisty Chamber Ensemble of the Kirghiz State Philaharmonic; artists from the Tadzhik Republic; the Romen Trio; and pantomime artists Natalia and Oleg Kiriushkin.

The Festival of Music and Dance of the Soviet Union was produced and directed by its artistic director, the noted choreographer Igor Moiseyev. A leading American personality will host the special telecast on a date to be announced.

Schlosser said: "This represents a new opportunity to improve and expand communication between the United States and the Soviet Union and a new avenue to greater understanding between the citizens of the two nations."

During the meeting Howard told the Soviet delegation: "We are delighted to have you here and delighted that we could come to an agreement on your very fine program." Ezhov responded: "We are very happy that you invited us to NBC, which is known in the Soviet Union and throughout the world. Prospects for cooperation in the future are excellent. This is only a first step but a big one."

The director for the United States television presentation of the performances, which took place in Las Vegas, is Michael Gargiulo.

TO G. McDONALD, SHALLOTTE, N.C.: 51-year-old Robert Conrad (Pappy Boyington in "Baa Baa Black Sheep") was born in Chicago and has been performing since he sang "White Christmas" in a school musical at the age of 8. He had roles in several TV series before his 4-year run as co-star of "Hawaiian Eye," followed by another 4-year stint as star of "Wild, Wild West." An amateur boxer in his earlier years, Conrad's still a physical fitness buff who jogs daily. Once a real 'party-goer,' he now lives a quiet life off-camera, occasionally 'surfacing' with his daughter on his arm.

The 'word' is that John Travolta's sensitive portrayal of the boy definately qualifies for an Emmy nomination. He's also predicted to take the 'Fonz's' place as TV's No. 1 heart-throb. Travolta's address is: ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT IS LOW — As Bob Cratchit and his lame son Tiny Tim face the results of Scrooge's miserliness, on "A Christmas Carol," holiday special animated from the pages of Charles Dickens, to be rebroadcast Saturday, December 18 (4-5 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

"DELVECCHIO" STAYS

"Delvecchio," which premiered on CBS-TV last September, has been given the 'go-ahead' for 9 more segments.

Judd Hirsch stars in the cop show that has had mild ratings and was 50th in the last national Nielsen survey.

Exceeded Dickens' Expectations

"Bah! Humbug!"

Almost anyone in the English-speaking world who has heard of Christmas is also familiar with this expression of discontent synonymous with Ebenezer Scrooge, that greedy curmudgeon of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol."

The phrase succinctly expresses the sentiments of the miserly main character in the Dickens classic which will be rebroadcast as an animated musical special Saturday, Dec. 18, 4 to 5 p.m., on CBS-TV. Ken Sampson is the narrator.

The universal association of Scrooge and "Bah! Humbug!" is evidence of the prennial popularity of "A Christmas Carol," for which Dickens had no particularly great expectations when he began to write it in the winter of 1843.

Who would expect that a ghost story about a grumpy senior citizen living a solitary existence in a gloomy section of Old London would enchant generations as a heart-warming Christmas gem?

Oakland Enters Championships

DAVIS — The Oakland Raiders have won many football games over the last few years. Clarence Davis, the six year veteran, is one of several reasons why the talented all-around running back will lead the Raiders into the first round of ABC playoffs televised on NBC-TV on Saturday, December 18 and Sunday, December 19.

By virtue of a 26-7 win over the Philadelphia Eagles in the elventh game of the season, the Oakland Raiders earned the Western Division Championship for the fifth consecutive year and for the ninth time in the last 10 years. This also marks the eighth season with at least 10 wins. The Raiders hit the 10-win mark first in 1963 and have dominated all of professional football in terms of winning percentage. From '63 through the eleventh game of 1976, the Oakland Raiders have posted 136 wins, 46 losses and 11 ties for a .747 percentage. Dallas is second best with 126 wins, 64 losses and 3 ties for a .663 percentage. The Baltimore Colts rank third with 122 wins, 66 losses and 5 ties for a .647 percentage, while Minnesota is fourth with 120 wins, 66 losses and 9 ties for a .641 percentage.

Despite Oakland's glittering success in the regular season, the team has been close to the Super Bowl six times in seven years. Each time they failed to survive the playoffs, and on five of those occasions the Super Bowl Champion had eliminated Oakland.

"I just don't consider the Raiders to be losers because we aren't in the Super Bowl," says head coach John Madden. "I heard Preston Pearson being interviewed after the last Super Bowl in Miami. He said that he was a loser and he didn't know how he would be able to face the good people of Dallas after disgracing them. Can you imagine that? They just didn't win the Super Bowl. They fell three seconds short. Nobody else came that close. They were winners. Why can't they think of themselves as that?

"The Oakland Raiders were winners too. We had a fantastic year in '75; only a fool would call us losers. I refuse to let our players think efforts made them lousy. I just hate that whole mentality that says if you don't go all the way, you aren't worth a pitcher of warm spit. I'm proud of our team."

The Oakland Raiders and John Madden just keep on winning, in fact Madden's record is fantastic. He is less than 25 victories behind Vince Lombardi and his winning percentage is better. The difference is that Lombardi gained tremendous notoriety because his teams won lots of championships and Madden's do not. This is another year, and the 40-year-old Madden has a great future; this year just could be the start of a series of titles for the Raiders.

Gray Flashes

Mel Gray may just be the most dangerous wide receiver in the NFL. He and the rest of the St. Louis Cardinals play the New York Giants in their final regular season game Sunday, Dec. 12, at 1 p.m. on CBS-TV.

Gray's blazing speed makes him a constant TD threat. After being clocked at 4.3 in the 40-yard dash and 9.2 in the 100, every defense back in the league began to have nightmares. Last year Mel caught 48 passes for 926 yards, and 11 touchdowns. That means that Gray got one touchdown for every four catches, and no other receiver in football is more dangerous.

With a rule change in 1974 that did away with the bump and run. Gray is even a greater threat. Now the defensive backs can only take one shot at the receiver as he comes off the line of scrimmage. As Gray puts it: "With me being small and with my speed, they've got to get a good hit on me the first time now, because once I'm past a man, I'm gone.

Tarkenton To Lead Vikings

Minnesota's FATs - that's FAT's as in Francis Asbury Tarkenton.

Sixteen years ago, out of the University of Georgia, this 6-foot, 190-pound fellow broke into the NFL. He was told he'd have as much success as the Ed sel.

"It took a long time," Tarkenton says, "for established pro football writers and pro football people to accept me, because I wasn't in the classic mold of what they thought a quarterback should be. I wasn't big enough and, of all things, I actually ran out of the pocket. That was a dastardly thing to do - for a quarterback to scramble around. Of course, they said I'd get killed. They said I wouldn't get past the first few years because I did it."

"The Scrambler's" durability is obvious. He has never missed a game because of an injury. He has played with some 'hurts,' however - half a season with a separated shoulder and last season with a sore arm.

His former Viking coach and nemesis Norm Van Brocklin hisses: "Tarkenton always blows the big ones. He wins the games he's supposed to lose, and loses the games he's supposed to win."

Always in the shadow of the great Johnny Unitas, Fran surpassed his record in passing yardage this season and is now the NFL career record holder in passing attempts, completions, and touchdowns.

As Tarkenton and Minnesota move into the playoffs this season, the stigma remains - the haunting echo of Van Brocklin's words - "Fran can't win 'the Big One,' the Super Bowl!" Maybe this season "The Scrambler" and the "Purple Curtain" can put it together.

Tarkenton donated his entire loser's check of $7,500 to funds for ailing and handicapped children after his team's defeat in Super Bowl VIII. He has consistently performed well to become a true champion on the field and has demonstrated a compassion for his fellow man off the field. Whether Minnesota wins their way through the playoffs or not, Fran is a champion in his own right and doesn't have to walk in anyone's shadow.

Sugar Bowl To Be Telecast January 1

Pittsburgh, the nation's number one ranked college football team, takes on Georgia in what promises to be a classic Sugar Bowl showdown, to be televised nationally on ABC-TV, Saturday, Jan. 1.

The game, from the Superdome in New Orleans, highlights an attractive post - season football schedule set for national television on the network, including the UCLA - Albama battle in the Liberty Bowl on Monday, Dec. 20, from Memphis, Tenn., and the Notre Dame - Penn State clash in the Gator Bowl on Monday, Dec. 27, from Jacksonville, Fla.

In addition, ABC Sports will again nationally televise the Hula Bowl on Saturday, Jan. 8, featuring an outstanding collection of the nation's most heralded college football stars.

Pittsburgh will be led into the Sugar Bowl by Tony Dorsett, the NCAA's all-time leading ground gainer who is an odds-on favorite to win the 1976 Heisman Trophy. Under Johnny Majors, Pitt will be making its third bowl appearance in four years. The Panthers last participated in a major bowl (Sugar) in 1955, where they lost to Georgia Tech, 7-6.

UCLA and Alabama will be meeting for the first time and each team will be eyeing its second consecutive bowl victory. "Bear" Bryant's Crimson Tide defeated Penn State, 13-6, in last year's Sugar Bowl and the Bruins defeated Ohio State, 23-10, in the Rose Bowl.

'First Christmas' Presented

The stars on stage were only 3½ to 10 inches tall and they wouldn't make a move without the help of people waiting in the wings.

These 'performers' were especially constructed and totally maneuverable dolls and they were in camera focus for the special, "The First Christmas" — The Story of the First Christmas Snow, an animated musical to be aired Saturday, Dec. 18, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on NBC Chanel 6-7-28.

The show has Angela Lansbury as star storyteller who provides the voice of a leading character, Sister Theresa. Cyril Ritchard also stars, as the voice of Father Thomas. Original songs and Irving Berlin's "White Christmas" are included in the show.

Arthur Rankin Jr. and Jules Bass, producers and directors of the special, developed the "Animagic" (dimensional stop-motion photography) animation process, which uses dolls whose movements are achieved without the use of strings.

Discussing the process, Rankin said: "It's very complicated, probably the most complicated, most expensive type of program presented on television." Bass added: "Patience is a most important ingredient in our productions. Without it, nothing would come out right."

Pointing to line drawings — some in color — on the walls of their Manhattan offices, he continued: "We start with the drawings. The characters are placed side by side as if they were in a police line-up. We do this to get the sizes of the figures firmly established. Then, using the drawings as guides, the three-dimensional figures are carved and constructed. We use skeletal armatures inside each of them, making it possible for the figures to be moved. We have changes of expression on hand at all times — materials we can add or remove to change the shapes of the mouths or eyes."

Bass said: "When we go into production we move each figure fractionally—an arm, a foot, a mouth, a leg — one photo frame at a time. The script is rehearsed on stage just as it would be in a live production. A specific technician is responsible for the acting and movement of his assigned figure.

Christmas Spirit Nutshelled

He's awkward at parties. He sometimes stands like a stick in the corner, laughs before the joke is finished or spills his ice cream. His pals call him hopeless, wishy-washy, blockhead and failure-face. But without Charlie Brown, the rest of Charles M. Schulz's little Peanuts would miss a lot of points.

To whom else could they turn for the best of all cures for disillusionment — "a chocolate cream and a friendly pat on the back" — free? Self-appointed Peanut psychiatrist Lucy might advise the cream, but she'd charge her usual five-cent fee for the idea — and she's not known for many pats on the back that don't send a Peanut sprawling. And who but Charlie Brown would make a project of figuring out for the clan what things are all about — really important things like Christmas?

With help from thumb-sucking Linus, Charlie discovers the real meaning of Christmas for the other Peanuts on "A Charlie Brown Christmas," animated Peabody and Emmy Award-winning special to be rebroadcast Saturday, Dec. 18, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on CBS Channel 3N.

Linus is as deep a thinker as Charlie Brown, but he works out his little philosophies more privately and has come to the conclusion that there are certain topics you should rarely discuss in public, even Peanut public:; politics (as proved by his campaign speeches) and special things you believe in, like a Great Pumpkin.

Charlie Brown, on the otherhand, is never satisfied until he has shared with the clan any answer he may have found. The pint-sized roundhead is also willing to share his beliefs, his hopes and his opinion of himself.

"I want people to say, 'You know, that Charlie Brown is a great guy,' " he once told Lucy during an 'analysis session.' "I want to be a special person. I want to be needed."

When poor Charlie gets uptight about the commercialism of the yuletide season on "A Charlie Brown Christmas," he pays his fee and tells Lucy that he feels "sort of let down."

As the other Peanuts get entangled in the season's trimmings, Charlie digs through the wrappings for the real gift of Christmas.

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR IRVING MANSFIELD, widower of Jacqueline Susann, author of "Dolores"

Was "Dolores" based on Jackie Onassis, and do you know whether she has read the book?—Steve Gargan, Grand Rapids, Mich.

● Since the plot concerns the widow of an assassinated U.S. President, who later marries a shipping tycoon, draw your own conclusions! When Mrs. Onassis was asked whether she'd read the book, I'm told she said: "Have I read it? I'm living out the sequel." By the way, the book is going to be made into a film. When I saw Telly Savalas recently, I told him to put his oar in for the role of the Greek shipping tycoon, a natural since Telly's Greek. Telly, who's going to make three films for Universal (one of the companies interested in the book), is keeping his fingers crossed, hoping that if they do buy it, he'll get the part.

FOR EDGAR BERGEN, ventriloquist

● The one thing I don't do is worry or wonder about the future. (It's nicer to dwell on the past!) I exercise more than I used to, eat what's good for me instead of what I like. Most important: I try to avoid doctors. Seems to me they're in love with pills. Also, I've become spiritual. I haven't given up sin—it's the other way around!

FOR JUDITH GUEST, author of "Ordinary People"

Why did you feel a twinge of guilt when you heard that your manuscript would be the first unsolicited manuscript Viking Press had accepted in 27 years?—Mary Leonard, Sacramento, Calif.

● Because I never lived in a garret, never had to deprive myself while writing as a housewife. My first reaction was disbelief. Then ecstasy.

FOR SANDY DUNCAN, actress

Are you as giddy as you appear to be on talk shows? If not, why do you seem that way?—E.B., Steubenville, Ohio

● The real me is half-way between serious and silly! The problem began with my first talk show. I found it very hard to go into details about my private life. I skirted those questions by dwelling on funny things, like the time I chased a lizard out of my bedroom. I avoided the personal stuff but got labeled a dizzy blonde.

FOR DAVE GARROWAY, former talk show host

I hear you have some strange hobbies. What are they?—F.S., Santa Monica, Calif.

● I don't know that autos and astronomy are strange. I've owned 60 sports cars over the years, including 15 antique Rolls-Royces. I'm also into sports cars and racing. I have a collection of astronomy instruments including a 100-year-old 9½-inch telescope made by Alvan Clark, the Stradivari of telescope lens makers. (The Smithsonian Institution wants it.)

FOR DICK CLARK, host of "American Bandstand"

Many dancers on your show come back every week. Are they hired for the show, or do they buy season tickets?—Leon Yankwich, Urbana, Ill.

● For almost 25 years, admission to American Bandstand has been by invitation only—but it's free. The dancers on the program are strictly audience participants. Many come back and become regular attendees and are therefore seen frequently.

FOR ROBYN SMITH, jockey

Do the men in your sport ever deliberately try to embarrass you?—A.R., Aberdeen, S.D.

● When I first started riding, there was a great deal of prejudice against girl jockeys, but since I've become successful (and many other girls are riding, too), my only real moments of humiliation are when my horse runs a disappointing race, and the crowd yells, "Why don't you get back into the kitchen?"

● Behave in a rude and merciless way. Most of our friends have the intelligence to call before dropping in. To those who don't, and arrive, saying, "I just happened to be passing by," I say, "Well, then, keep passing." The only exception to this rule would be if Artur Rubinstein wanted to come in and give a piano recital for me.

FOR ANN LANDERS, columnist

Where did you get the phrase, "Wake up and smell the coffee" (a euphemism for face the facts)?—B.L., Bartlesville, Okla.

● From my twin sister's mother-in-law, Mrs. Jay Phillips, who lives in Minneapolis. She's my great friend. I heard her say it about 25 years ago and have been using it ever since.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Can you tell me what Annette Funicello is doing these days? I always used to watch her on the Mickey Mouse Club's show.—B.N., Asbury Park, N.J.

● After the series ended, Annette went on to make "beach party" pictures (with horribly teased hair and skin that never tanned), and in 1965 married her agent, Jack Gilardi. For a few years, because of their three children, Annette kept a rather low profile, with only occasional TV guest appearances. Annette—who was Walt Disney's favorite mouseketeer—was recently on Frankie Avalon's CBS-TV series, "Easy Does It." Incidentally, did you know that the Mickey Mouse Club is going to be revived next year? And you might also be interested in a book that's coming out soon, Forever Hold Your Banner High, by Jerry Bowles, which traces the history of the Club and what's happened to the cast during the past two decades.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT SCHOOL TESTS

They can slow down bright kids, discourage creativity—even endanger a child's future. But now educators are doing something about the problem.

By Polly Dranov

CHOOSE THE BEST RESPONSE
IQ tests show:
a) How smart a child is
b) How well he understands English
c) What grade he should be placed in
d) All of the above
e) None of the above

Confused? It's a confusing question, one that educators have been debating for years. In fact, a rip-roaring argument is going on right now about the value of all standardized tests kids take in school—the IQ tests, the achievement tests, the aptitude tests and even the reading readiness tests. On one side are influential educators who claim the test results are not only misleading and useless to parents and teachers but also are unfair to children. On the other are state governments, local school boards and administrators who rely on tests to judge the kind of job our schools are doing.

One thing, though, everyone agrees on—the scores kids get on these tests have a tremendous impact on their schooling. Take the case of Jerry, a restless nine-year-old who was doing pretty well in school until he took an IQ test in fourth grade. His score was low, much lower than his schoolwork indicated it should be. Jerry's teacher was a little surprised—she knew he often had a hard time sitting still in the classroom, but his work was pretty good.

Jerry never knew the results of the test, but he did sense that his teachers expected less of him, and in the fifth grade his marks began to slip. They went even lower in the sixth grade. By the time he was 16, Jerry had dropped out of school. Then, a few years later, he met a girl who didn't want to marry a high-school dropout. She convinced him to finish at night school, where he was required to take another IQ test. Somehow, his "intelligence" had miraculously jumped about 20 points. Jerry was not "slow" and never had been.

Why did he score so low on that fourth-grade IQ test? There could be dozens of reasons. Maybe he was coming down with a cold. Maybe he was more restless than usual that day. Maybe he misunderstood the instructions and lingered over a tough question instead of moving on to the next one.

Luckily, Jerry got a second chance. But thousands of others aren't that lucky, and more and more educators are protesting that standardized tests are unfair to all children. Jerrold R. Zacharias, a physics professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is passionate on the subject. "Our efforts to measure so-called intelligence have had an imprisoning and destructive effect on the lives of children. In fact, I believe the entire enterprise of standardized machine-scored aptitude and achievement tests has been grossly misused," he wrote in a professional journal for elementary school principals. Says Bernard McKenna of the National Education Association (N.E.A.): "These tests take time and cost money. They're frustrating to the kids and most of them simply aren't very useful."

In particular, IQ tests serve no useful purpose, say Dr. McKenna, Dr. Zacharias and many other educators, if only because no one has ever defined intelligence. "The best research on intelligence tells us that there are between 50 and 100 different types. IQ tests get at two or three—verbal and mathematical reasoning and the ability to recall. They're really low-level achievement tests," says McKenna.

Other problems, the N.E.A. feels, are that some of the standardized tests kids take in the public schools "are either invalid and unreliable or out of date or unfair. They should be withdrawn from use." The group is against using test results as a basis for allocation of Federal, state or local funds or for judging student progress.

Here's one example of what the N.E.A. is talking about. All tests have to be constructed so that they can be graded by a computer. That means there can only be one "right" or "best" answer. But often none of the choices is precisely right, so the student is left to figure out what is best. This confuses a lot of youngsters—particularly the bright ones who know that none of the answers really fits. The kids who do best, therefore, are the ones who guess what the tester wants.

The tests also penalize children who don't work fast, who don't work well under pressure and who are puzzled by questions that are ambiguous, meaningless, misleading or simply irrelevant to anything they know or care about. In fact, Jerrold Zacharias contends that the test makers themselves are often ignorant about the subject matter and unclear about what they want the tests to disclose.

Furthermore, testing profoundly affects the entire educational process. Educators are especially appalled at the increasing practice of releasing test scores to the press. The argument in favor of this trend is that the public has a right to know how well the schools are doing their jobs. Everyone agrees that a need exists for school evaluation, but educators don't think standardized tests are the best way to go about it, particularly with the tests currently in use. They also point out that, for this and other reasons, teachers find themselves "teaching to the tests" in an effort to boost the scores of their students—even though they often don't believe that the tests have any relevance. And published scores can mislead parents into panicking at the thought that their kids aren't very bright or are enrolled in a school where achievement levels are lower than at other schools in the district, the state or even the whole country.

Worst of all, of course, is the effect on the youngsters themselves. The stigma of a low test score—both for classmates and teachers—is hard to shake, as witnessed by Jerry's experience. His was a case of a "self-fulfilling prophecy," which means that everyone accepted the judgment of the test; Jerry wasn't expected to do well on the basis of that score, and, so, without encouragement at home or at school, he began doing poorly.

Fortunately for us—and our children—educators are working on ways to cope with the problem. For instance, figuring that every child will be subjected to at least six full batteries of standardized tests during a public-school education, two of Dr. Zacharias' colleagues at MIT have come up with what they call a "due process" procedure. It would require principals to send a note to parents describing the test, explaining who will take it, who is expected to benefit and how, what the results will be used for, whether or not a student's name will be known by those studying the results, whether or not the score will become part of the child's permanent record, the consequences of not taking the test and any description of the report that will be made to the parent AND child on the basis of the results. Thus informed, parents could refuse to permit their children to take the test if they saw fit.

That kind of procedure could enlighten parents about what kinds of tests their youngsters take and why. Even so, parents have to be on guard against taking the results too seriously. Essentially, we've got to keep in mind that the tests, at best, are an imprecise measure of a child's abilities and, at worst, are downright misleading and unfair. Both teachers and parents must be alert to the fact that their impressions of a child's talents and abilities are far more reliable than any computer.

Walter Lippmann summed it all up way back in 1920: "If the impression takes root that these tests really measure intelligence, that they constitute a sort of last judgment on the child's capacity, that they reveal 'scientifically' his predestined ability, then it would be a thousand times better if all the intelligence testers and all their questionnaires were sunk without warning in the Sargasso Sea."

Final Net vs. Aerosols: a head-on comparison

In the first place, (1) Final Net is not an aerosol. There's no wasteful propellant mixed in. Final Net gives you concentrated power, for a really great long-lasting hold. (2) Final Net holds your hair in any weather without leaving it tacky. (3) Final Net spritzes exactly where you want it—no need to spray and spray in hopes of hitting the right place. (4) If aerosol hairsprays bother you here, Final Net won't. You'll find (5) in your pocketbook, because 8 ounces of Final Net go as far as 24 ounces of aerosol hairspray. (With aerosols, you're paying for a lot of propellant.) Final Net over aerosols. Really, there's no comparison.

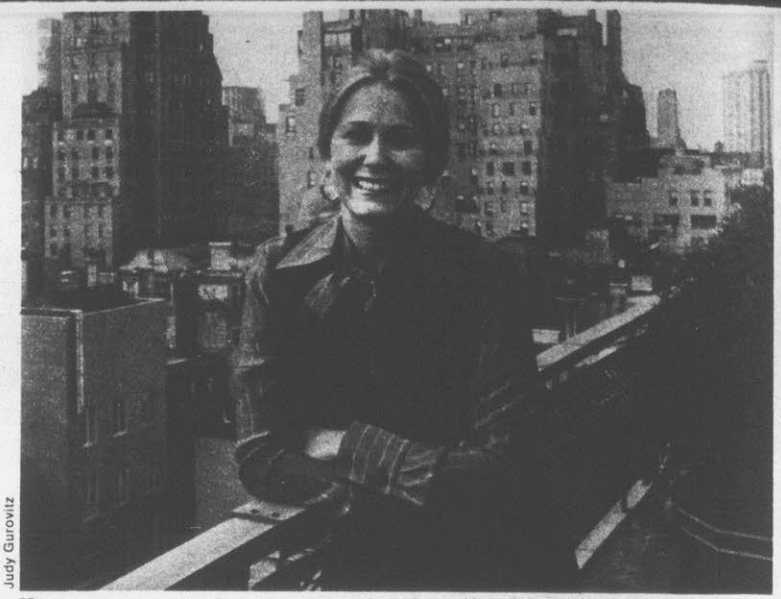
JANE PAULEY: AT 26 SHE'S FOUND ROOM AT THE TOP

In 4 short years she has gone from college senior at Indiana University to co-host of America's Number 1 morning show.



Judy Gurovitz

Her new apartment has a spectacular view: "I want to see all of the city."

By Anita Summer

Jane Pauley. Only a few months ago the name meant nothing to us. But now there she is, every morning on the Today show, wedged in between Tom Brokaw and Gene Shalit.

Outwardly, she's easy enough to describe—a 26-year-old, 5'4" willowy blonde with a flawless complexion wearing a crew neck sweater, loose jacket, flared skirt and high-heeled boots in shades of brown—but how did she get where she is, and what's she like inside?

"Well," she says, "to begin with, I was born in Indianapolis. My father wasn't rich, but we never went without, either." She was raised by church-going parents who were not disciples of permissiveness: "I had to say where I was going, why, with whom, proposed time of arrival and precise moment of departure." She shared her home with cats, dogs, parakeets, goldfish and her older sister Ann, once her nemesis and idol, now her best friend.

At 15, Jane became involved with the N.F.L. (The National Forensic League, the debating, not the sports, organization.) She spoke extemporaneously for her team, wrote speeches on current events and began her love affair with politics and people in the public eye.

Jane graduated from Indiana University in 1972 with a degree in political science. She soon joined WISH-TV in Indianapolis as a reporter. Now, in a few short years, she's come a long way—both geographically and financially: NBC refuses to comment, but reports say Jane is earning from $70,000 to $100,000 a year.

When NBC called her to New York City last summer, Jane was unaware she was one of a hundred people on NBC's list of possible replacements for Barbara Walters. But on July 30th and August 2nd she tried out for Today. Then the five finalists—Betty Furness, Catherine Mackin, Linda Ellerbee, Betty Rollin and Jane Pauley—were each brought back for another week. It was no contest. NBC's screening committee agreed unanimously that Jane was the person. Said Richard Fisher, vice president of TV News: "She stood out as the one most popular with viewers. She was like a shining star."

But, then, everyone who has been associated with her says she is special. She's been defined as "hard working," "no ego," "serious but warm," "dedicated" and "highly articulate." Perhaps her ex-boss, Lee Giles, of WISH-TV puts it best: "On TV she blossoms. She just has that special quality not many people in this business have. You can't define it, it's just there."

Now, though exuding confidence and

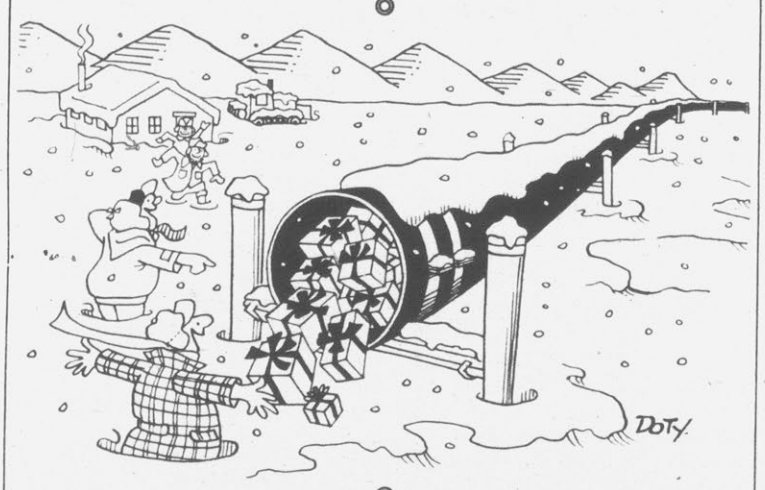
Observations

What do you say to a four-ton elephant? You say "Abracadabra!" and it disappears—if you happen to be Doug Henning. His second Mobil Showcase presentation will be telecast live on NBC December 23. In addition to disposing of his ponderous friend, the magical Mr. Henning will mystify one and all with his "organic" illusions (involving fire, water or air). As a climax (after he's really warmed up) Henning will escape from a flaming box. "Doug Henning's World of Magic" starts at 8 p.m. on the East Coast. For other areas, check your local TV listings. Watch closely!

Peaceful coexistence. How do sport fish and offshore oil wells get along? Swimmingly, according to the National Marine Fisheries Service. Citing experience in the Gulf of Mexico, the Service points out that platforms act as artificial reefs, providing shelter for the small organisms little fish feed on. The little fish, in turn, attract such species as grouper, red snapper, and king mackerel, much to the delight of Gulf anglers. So next time someone hassles you about those offshore platforms, just ask him if he's checked with a fish lately.



The more things change . . . . A magazine editorial headlined "Government Acts Make Oil Crisis Worse Than Ever" described a "growing emergency," and "new threats to the oil supply in the Middle East." It made the point that the government ought to help, not obstruct, efforts to drill for domestic oil offshore. Where did the editorial appear? In the Saturday Evening Post. When? On May 26, 1951, when the U.S. imported 844,000 barrels of oil a day, about one-eighth of today's 6.7-million-barrel-a-day import level. Enough said.

Squeeze play. That's what the oil industry was caught in last year. A recent Chase Manhattan Bank analysis shows that, while worldwide net income for the 29 companies selected for the study fell 30 percent in 1975 (to $11.5 billion), capital and exploration outlays grew 9.5 percent (to a record $26.6 billion). Like so many people, these oil companies were earning less and spending more. So far in 1976, an analysis of selected major oil companies indicates that earnings have improved, but expenditures are also up.

JANE PAULEY

Continued

Judy Gurovitz

poise, she frowns and says, "My nightmare—one that comes back with disturbing regularity—is that I will find myself on the set, totally unprepared, with a mystery guest, holding a script containing gibberish." She also says she panics when she turns off the lights at night: "That's when I agonize about being ready for the next day. Whether that means I'm secure—or naive—remains to be seen. So far," quickly tapping the nearest piece of wood, "I've managed to bypass a myriad of probable calamities—becoming blank, forgetting the guest's name, losing continuity." At the same time, being the focal point of millions of curious eyes does not faze her. "I don't look at or into a camera with fear. While I know I'm vulnerable, I've never had that awful sensation of being alone in front of all those people."

When, with bleary eyes, having just rolled out of bed, you tune in to Jane at 7:00 A.M. and see her so crisp and alert, it's hard to believe she's been up since 4:30. Was adjusting to this new early-to-bed, early-to-rise routine difficult? "No. If it's black outside, it's all the same whether you get up at 4:00 or 6:30. The hardest bit is lights out at 9:00 or 10:00." Doesn't she resent climbing between the sheets when others are out on the town? "I've never been one for socializing during the week. I stay close to home."

After Jane leaves the air at 9:00 A.M., she threads her way through the maze of 14th-floor desks and rooms housing the Today staff at 30 Rockefeller Plaza to her small office, where she plunges into stacks of newspapers, magazines, book reviews, mail and memos. "We're a small group, so we all must constantly scour magazines and papers for interesting and newsworthy people. Our suggestions are given to the producer, and his choices are turned over to a single writer or researcher who accumulates all relevant data. Then, it all comes to me, and I have to determine the thrust of the interview and prepare questions. On politicos' activities, for instance, it's essential that I'm up-to-date until the last second. On authors, I must, of course, read their books."

At 3:30, she can call it a day and go home. An hour nap and then down to homework—watching local and network news, perusing more newspapers, books and magazines. ("Wish I read quicker," she sighs. "Life would be simpler.") Sometimes she'll have dinner with a friend and then return to her apartment on New York's East Side for more TV viewing, reading and writing before going to bed.

Her weaknesses? Splurging on lavish Christmas presents and weekend air tickets to Chicago and Pittsburgh—to visit friends and sister Ann, now a nuclear engineer—and to Indianapolis, where her parents and close friend, newspaperman Bill Shaw, live. Jane, never married or engaged, met Bill three years ago when they worked together on a murder story. "We see each other as often as distance allows. Ours is an exclusive relationship. When you find someone extraspecial, you don't want to end it."

How does Jane see herself, now that fame and fortune are at her door? Stumped at first, she gives the question some thought, then replies: "I'm easygoing, impetuous, friendly and border on the haphazard. I can be funny, but I make a point of announcing when a joke is coming—I don't want it to slip by unnoticed! I have a temper, but it is lost only when I'm under pressure. I'm the world's worst cook, specializing in scrambled eggs, sandwiches and frozen chicken pot pies. I could live on chocolate and Mom's spaghetti. I'm scared of horses and crawling things, dislike the winter, enjoy walking through the woods and watching others fish. I hate housework but, once a month, late at night, turn into a human tornado and get everything clean and sparkling. I'm turned off by pretentious people, even the interesting ones."

Her hopes and ambitions? She lights a cigarette and says, wistfully: "Recognition from my peers and colleagues. I've reached the precise spot that I would have strived for, but my dream now is to arrive at the point when people will associate Today with me, Jane Pauley, not with Barbara Walters. I'm what I'd call an optimistic fatalist, and I believe events work out. Whenever my fortune seems bad, something falls out of heaven on me. Thankfully, I haven't had too many fallouts; I've truly been blessed most of my life."

FAMILY WEEKLY COOKBOOK

Here is our annual treasury of treats to make and to give to special friends. You're sure to find a dish in our collection that will be in just the right "taste." And all of them are easy to make!

By Marilyn Hansen

FRUITED BRAN BREAD

- 1 cup finely chopped dried apricots
- 1 cup golden raisins
- ¾ cup boiling water
- ⅓ cup margarine
- ¼ cup sugar
- ½ cup dark corn syrup
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 medium-ripe banana, mashed (about 1/3 cup)
- 1 cup whole bran cereal
- ¼ cup buttermilk
- 1½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt

2. In small bowl, stir together apricots and raisins. Pour boiling water over fruit mixture; soak for 30 minutes.
3. In large bowl of electric mixer, beat margarine and sugar at low speed until well blended.
4. Stir in corn syrup, then eggs. Add banana, beating until smooth.
5. In small bowl, stir together cereal and buttermilk. Stir together flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Gradually add to low-speed mixer until well mixed.
6. Add cereal mixture, then fruit mixture, stirring until well mixed.
7. Turn batter into soup cans, using 1 generous cup of batter per can.
8. Bake in preheated 350° F. oven for 45 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean.

Dormouse Dollhouse Ridgewood, NJ Bill Margerin

Miniatures are "in" this Christmas from country-style doll houses to gifts from your kitchen. Try our Sesame Crunch, Hunan Glazed Pecans, Mixed Nut Crunch, Frozen Cranberry Orange Relish, Fruit Dressing, Bar-B-Que Sauce, Cranberry Leather, Lemon Bread and Fruited Bran Bread.

SESAME CRUNCH

- 2 cups sesame seeds
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup light corn syrup
- ⅓ cup water
- 2 tablespoons margarine

1. Grease 15½ x 10½ x 1-inch jelly roll pan.
2. In 3-qt. saucepan, stir together sesame seed, sugar, corn syrup, water and margarine. Bring to boil over medium heat, stirring constantly.
3. Continue cooking, without stirring, until temperature reaches 270° F. on candy thermometer or until a small amount of mixture dropped into very cold water forms a ball which is hard enough to hold its shape, yet plastic.
4. Turn onto prepared cookie sheet and spread with greased metal spatula or greased wooden spoon to ¼-inch thickness.
5. Score with sharp knife into 1½ x ½-inch pieces. Let cool completely.
6. Break apart by placing knife in scores and tapping gently with spoon.

Makes 1¾ lbs. or 175 (1½ x ½ x ¼-inch) pieces

CRANBERRY LEATHER

- 2 lbs. cranberries, washed and stems removed
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1½ cups light corn syrup
- Granulated sugar

1. In 3-qt. saucepan, place cranberries and water.
2. Cook, covered, until berries begin to pop. Add corn syrup and cook for 20 minutes.
3. Put fruit through food mill to remove skins and seeds.
4. Return mixture to saucepan.

simmer 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.
5. Line 3 (15½ x 10⅛ x 1 inch) jelly-roll or similar-size pans with plastic wrap, letting it extend up the sides of the pans.
6. Divide fruit mixture equally among pans. With rubber scraper or spatula, spread mixture evenly about ¼-inch thick.
7. Place pans in warm, dry place and let dry 2 or 3 days or until "leather" is easily removed from plastic wrap.
8. With scissors, cut sheet into quarters. Dip in granulated sugar for a frosty effect, if you like. Roll up; wrap securely with plastic wrap or waxed paper and seal ends with plastic tie or small rubber bands. Store in refrigerator up to 3 months or in freezer up to 6 months. Makes 12 rolls

MIXED NUT CRUNCH

4 qts. freshly popped corn
2 cups dry roasted mixed nuts
1¼ cups sugar
⅔ cup margarine
⅔ cup dark corn syrup
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
½ teaspoon baking soda

1. Preheat oven to 250° F.
2. In large, shallow roasting pan or two 13 x 9 x 2-inch baking pans, spread popcorn and nuts.
3. In heavy 1½-qt. saucepan, stir together sugar, margarine and corn syrup.
4. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until mixture boils. Continue cooking for 5 minutes without stirring.
5. Remove from heat. Stir in vanilla and baking soda. Pour syrup mixture over popcorn and nuts. Stir to coat.
6. Bake, uncovered, in 250° F. oven, stirring occasionally, for 1 hour. Cool; break apart. Store in tightly covered container. Makes 1 pound

LEMON BREAD

¾ cup sugar
½ cup margarine
2 eggs
2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup water
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
4 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup chopped walnuts or pecans
¼ cup light corn syrup

1. Preheat oven to 350° F. Grease a 9 x 5 x 3-inch pan.*
2. In large bowl of electric mixer, beat sugar and margarine until well blended and fluffy. Beat in eggs.
3. Stir in flour, baking powder and salt, until well mixed. Add water, lemon rind and 2 tablespoons of the lemon juice; stir in nuts. Turn batter into prepared pan.
4. Bake for 50 minutes. Stir together corn syrup and remaining 2 tablespoons of the lemon juice. Pour over loaf.
5. Return to oven and continue baking for 5 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean.
6. Cool 10 minutes before removing from pan. Let loaf stand overnight for easier slicing. Makes 1 loaf

*For Little Lemon Loaves grease three 5½ x 3 x 2-inch loaf pans. Divide batter evenly among pans. Bake at 350° F. for 40 minutes; spoon 2 tablespoons lemon syrup over each loaf and continue baking for 5 minutes. Makes 3 small loaves

Two tasty, miniature breads: Fruited Bran Bread and Lemon Bread ready for holiday gift-giving.

Three last-minute easy-to-do kitchen gifts might be Bar-B-Que Sauce, Fruit Dressing or Cranberry Orange Relish.

HUNAN GLAZED PECANS

2¼ cups water
1 cup pecan halves
¾ cup light corn syrup
2 cups corn oil

1. In small saucepan, bring 2 cups of water to a boil. Add pecans. Reduce heat; simmer 10 minutes. Drain.
2. Return pecans to saucepan; add corn syrup and remaining ¼ cup water.
3. Simmer over medium heat until mixture reaches 210° F. on candy thermometer or until syrup spins a fine thread when dropped from spoon.
4. Remove pecans to plate with a slotted spoon, not allowing sides to touch. Cool about ½ hour.
5. In a heavy, sturdy 2-qt. saucepan, heat corn oil over medium heat to 300° F. Carefully drop pecans into oil. Fry until temperature reaches 345° F. on thermometer or until few bubbles remain on the surface of the oil.
6. Remove pecans to platter. When cool, drain on paper towels, then store in tightly covered jars. Makes 1 cup

FROZEN CRANBERRY ORANGE RELISH

1 lb. cranberries, washed; stems removed (about 3 cups)
1 large orange, quartered, seeded
2 small lemons, quartered, seeded
1 cup sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
Canned peach or pear halves, drained

1. Put cranberries, orange and lemons through fine blade of food chopper or in blender container, blending at medium speed until fruit is finely chopped.
2. In large bowl, stir together finely chopped fruit, sugar and corn syrup until sugar is dissolved.
3. Turn mixture into suitable freezer container or 8 x 8 x 2-inch baking dish.
4. Freeze about 1 hour or until it is mushy. Spoon into peach or pear halves and serve as relish with roast or other meats. Makes 4 cups

Editor's note: If made ahead, store relish in 2 (1 pint each) freezer containers or jars, leaving ½-inch head space. Store in freezer. Refrigerate until ready to use.

BAR-B-QUE SAUCE

2 cans (8-oz. size) tomato sauce
½ cup dark corn syrup
⅓ cup vinegar
¼ cup minced onion
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon hot pepper sauce

1. In saucepan, combine tomato sauce, corn syrup, vinegar, onion, mustard, Worcestershire and hot pepper sauce.
2. Bring to boil; boil 2 minutes. Pour hot sauce into sterilized jars and seal.
3. Use as a barbecue basting sauce. Also good to pour over meat in roasting pan the last ½ hour of roasting. Delicious with roast beef slices, spareribs, pork chops, veal and chicken. Makes 3 cups

VERSATILE SALAD DRESSING

½ cup light corn syrup
2 teaspoons corn starch
¼ cup cider vinegar
¼ cup orange juice
2 teaspoons paprika
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons celery seed
¾ cup corn oil

1. In medium saucepan, stir together corn syrup and corn starch; add vinegar and orange juice.
2. Bring to boil over medium

Season's Eatings!

◄ STUFFED FRENCH BREAD

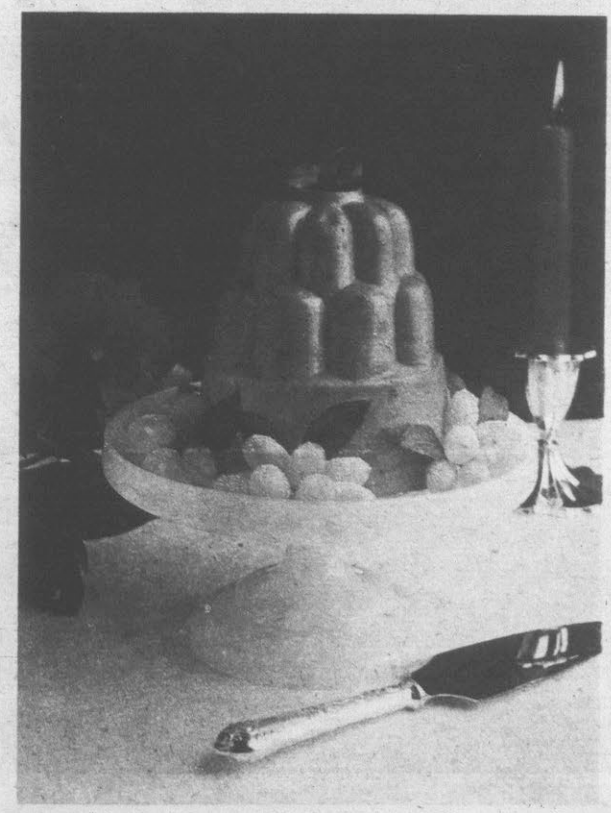
1 (20-inch) loaf French bread, cut in 4 pieces
1/2 cup HELLMANN'S Real Mayonnaise
1/2 cup chopped parsley
2 packages (8 oz each) cream cheese, softened
1 package (0.6 oz) Italian salad dressing mix
1 jar (4 oz) pimiento, drained and chopped

Hollow out bread pieces, leaving 1/2-inch thick wall. Spread interior with 1/4 cup of the Real Mayonnaise; sprinkle with 1/4 cup of the chopped parsley. Combine remaining ingredients; pack mixture into bread. Wrap in plastic film; chill several hours. Cut into 1/2-inch slices.

◄ STUFFED CHERRY TOMATOES

1/2 cup chopped radish
2 tablespoons chopped toasted almonds
2 tablespoons HELLMANN'S Real Mayonnaise
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon grated onion
24 cherry tomatoes, scooped out and drained

Combine first 5 ingredients; spoon into tomatoes. Chill. Makes 24 appetizers.



◄ HOLIDAY MELBA DESSERT

1 can (8 oz) sliced peaches, drained and diced (reserve syrup)
1 package (10 oz) frozen raspberries, thawed, crushed and strained (reserve syrup)
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup heavy cream
1/4 cup HELLMANN'S Real Mayonnaise
1/2 cup chopped nuts

Add enough peach syrup to raspberry syrup to measure 1 1/4 cups. Sprinkle gelatin over syrup; heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin is dissolved. Beat in cream and Real Mayonnaise; chill until slightly thickened. Fold in peaches and nuts. Turn into 3-cup mold. Chill until set.

EVERYTHING HELLMANN'S TOUCHES TASTES SO GOOD.

▲ GUACAMOLE DIP

1 cup mashed avocado
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1/4 cup HELLMANN'S Real Mayonnaise
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons finely chopped green chilies
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 small tomato, finely chopped and drained

▲ ZIPPY ONION DIP

1 cup HELLMANN'S Real Mayonnaise
1/4 cup chopped green onion
2 tablespoons finely chopped celery
1 tablespoon chopped ripe olive
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 small clove garlic, crushed

Combine all ingredients. Cover; chill 1 hour. Serve with sliced raw vegetables and crackers. Makes 1 1/3 cups.

½ cup raisins
½ cup finely chopped candied pineapple or dried apricots

1. Combine butter, evaporated milk, sugar and salt in saucepan over medium heat. Bring to boil. Cook 4 or 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Start timing when mixture starts to bubble around edges of pan.

2. Remove from heat. Add marshmallows, chocolate, vanilla, walnuts, raisins and candied pineapple. Stir vigorously 1 minute (until marshmallows melt and blend).

3. Working quickly, drop by teaspoonfuls onto waxed paper. Cool. Makes about 2 pounds

INDIAN CURRIED CHEESE BALL

1 pkg. (8 ozs.) cream cheese, softened
1 cup finely chopped cooked chicken or turkey
¾ cup finely chopped toasted almonds
⅓ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chopped chutney
1 tablespoon curry powder
¼ teaspoon salt
Flaked coconut or chopped parsley
Assorted crackers

1. In medium bowl, stir together cheese, chicken, almonds, mayonnaise, chutney, curry powder and salt. Chill several hours; shape mound into large ball.

2. Roll in flaked coconut or chopped parsley. For a holiday touch, stick a sprig of holly in the center.

3. For gift-giving, wrap with plastic film and tie with ribbon; set on top of a box of crackers that you have wrapped in foil. Tie all together with ribbon. Makes 2½-cup cheese ball

SUNNY FLORIDA CONSERVE

5 oranges
1 grapefruit
6 cups sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 2-inch piece stick cinnamon
½ cup raisins, ground
½ cup chopped nuts

1. Using the point of a paring knife, remove orange and grapefruit peel in quarters. Dice pulp of oranges and grapefruit removing center membrane and seeds.
2. Put peel of oranges only through food chopper or blender. Put ground peel in 4-quart saucepan with enough water to cover and bring to a boil. Cook until peel is tender, about 20 minutes.
3. Add pulp and juice to undrained rind. Continue cooking about 20 minutes, until mixture reduces to about ½ its original volume and measures approximately 6 cups.
4. Add sugar, salt, cinnamon and raisins; stir until sugar is dissolved. Taste for sweetness; if desired, add ½ cup more sugar.
5. Cook until thickened, about 30 minutes, or until syrup runs off sides of spoon in two drops which "sheet" together. Stir in nuts.
6. Pour into hot sterilized jars or glasses. Paraffin at once.

Makes seven 8-ounce glasses (7 cups)

Turn citrus fruits into sparkling Christmas treasures like Sunny Florida Conserve, Spiced Orange Slices, Honeyed Orange Wedges and Pickled Orange Pears.

We needed a little extra room to make the point that a pound of Miracle spreads 36 more slices than unwhipped margarine.

Miracle Brand Margarine is whipped. Which means that a pound of Miracle goes 50% further than a regular pound. Spreads half again as many slices of bread.

And it comes to you in pretty, reusable bowls with your choice of three colors.

So you get delicious Kraft margarine flavor, whipped to spread smoother and easier, plus a handy reusable bowl.

Miracle. What else could you call it?

SPICED ORANGE SLICES

4 oranges
water
2 cups sugar
½ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon salt
1¼ cups water
½ cup wine vinegar
12 whole cloves
3 pieces stick cinnamon
2 tablespoons dry juniper berries, optional

1. Put whole oranges in saucepan; add 1 quart water. Bring to a boil; lower heat and simmer 30 minutes or until peel is tender. Overcooking will cause skin to split. Drain and slice.
2. Combine sugar, ginger, salt, water, vinegar, cloves, cinnamon and juniper berries; stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Bring to a boil; add orange slices and simmer about 20 minutes.
3. Oranges may be spooned into hot sterilized jars and sealed for future use. Serve as a relish.

Makes approximately 6 cups

PICKLED ORANGE PEARS

5 cups sugar
2 2-inch pieces stick cinnamon
1 tablespoon allspice
1½ teaspoons whole cloves
2 ½-inch pieces ginger root
1 quart vinegar
3 cups water
12 firm pears, peeled, cored and halved
1 orange, sliced
1 can (6 ounces) frozen orange juice concentrate, thawed, undiluted

1. Combine sugar, spices, vinegar and water in 8-quart kettle. Bring to boil; boil until sugar dissolves.
2. Add pear halves, orange slices and undiluted orange juice concentrate; bring to boil.
3. Reduce heat; simmer until crisp-tender (about 20 minutes). Spoon into hot sterilized jars immediately and seal. Store in cool, dry place. Serve as a relish with poultry, fish or meat. Makes about 4 quarts

HONEYED ORANGE WEDGES

6 oranges*
water
2 cups honey
1 cup sugar
¼ cup candied fruit and peel
2 sticks cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground ginger

1. Cover unpeeled oranges with water in saucepan. Bring to a boil; lower heat and let simmer 30 minutes or until peel is tender. Overcooking will cause skin to split.
2. Drain; discard water. Cool oranges. Cut each into 4 wedges.
3. Place wedges in 2-quart baking dish. Combine honey, 1 cup water, sugar, candied fruit and peel, cinnamon sticks and ginger; bring to a boil; boil 5 minutes.
4. Pour syrup over orange wedges in baking dish; cover and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) about 2 hours. Stir wedges once to cover all with honey mixture.
5. If desired, orange wedges and honey syrup may be placed in clean hot jars and stored in refrigerator. Serve hot or cold with poultry, ham, lamb or game.

Makes about 6 cups

*If peel is thick or rough, gently grate oranges to remove some of peel.

THE BASICS OF ACHES AND PAINS

From backache to earache to headache to sore throat... here's how they happen—with some practical advice on how to get rid of them fast.

By Neal Ashby

Sore throat, backache, stomachache, stiff neck—just a few of the aches and pains we all get at one time or another. But why do we get them? What's the fastest, safest way to get rid of them?

To get some answers, we talked with two experts—Dr. Arthur E. Lindner, Associate Dean, New York University School of Medicine, and Dr. Richard M. Stark, director of orthopedic surgery at North Shore University Hospital in Manhasset, N.Y. But remember—although these aches and pains usually will respond to the treatments described below, if they last more than two or three days, they could be symptoms of a more serious problem. In that case, see your doctor as soon as possible.

Backache. The standard one can be caused by a tightening of lower back muscles from lack of stretching, by inactivity (after prolonged sitting or driving) or by strenuous, unaccustomed use (starting an exercise program, for instance). "Moist heat will make a backache feel better, but more important is rest, with knees and waist bent, to relieve pressure on disks, vertebrae, ligaments and muscles of the back," Dr. Stark says.

Constipation. The trigger for this is usually postponing bowel movements for convenience's sake or failing to eat a balanced diet. As a result, waste gets blocked in the intestines, while the liquids needed to help it along may pass through on their own or become absorbed. The waste then grows hard. The objective of any remedy is to get the elimination system working again. "I prefer adding bulk to the diet, rather than the taking of a laxative," says Dr. Lindner. "Eat whole-grain cereals, raw fruits and vegetables—foods that are not easily digested and thus create pressure to be eliminated." Consumption of water, milk, juices and salad oils to help keep the intestines lubricated is also a good idea.

Diarrhea. This is a form of cramps or involuntary contraction of the intestines that robs us of full bowel control. An invasion of bacteria, which disturbs and speeds up normal functioning and irritates nerves, is a frequent cause. Diarrhea often strikes when we visit distant places having different strains of bacteria against which our bodies have no defenses. Away or at home, a nonprescription medicine containing kaolin-pectin generally will put a stop to it.

Earache. Most commonly due to infection and to the scratching of the delicate ear canal while cleaning out accumulated wax. Either way, swelling follows, and the accompanying pressure irritates nerves. For relief: aspirin or a heating pad.

Headache. When the muscles that encircle the outside of the skull tighten, you've got a common headache. Doctors know tension and fatigue can cause this tightening, but they nevertheless have a long way to go before understanding the process fully. So the best advice still seems to be rest and, of course, aspirin and other compounds that help reduce pain.

Heartburn. This pain near the center of the chest is created by a backup of acid from the stomach into the esophagus, where the caustic acid irritates mucous membrane. Antacids still are the quickest way to neutralize the offending acid and to make the esophagus feel better.

Muscle Pain. When one or more muscles is fatigued from overuse or cramped from being pinned down under body weight for several hours during sleep, muscle fiber swells, which irritates nerve endings. Rest or relief from pressure takes care of the problem; an icepack speeds up the reduction of swelling.

Sore Throat. Most are caused by bacterial or viral infections that irritate nerve fibers—tiny cords of sensitive tissue—in the mucous membrane of the throat. The simplest and best treatment is to gargle with soothing warm water containing crushed aspirin. This acts as a mild anesthetic.

Stiff Neck. This often occurs because of "a jarring, bumping or stretching of the neck that we may not particularly notice at the time it happens," says Dr. Stark. "A ligament may be slightly torn, and nerve fibers are telling us they don't like it. In addition, as we grow older, neck pain can be caused by a calcium spur on one of the vertebrae poking into a nerve and causing internal swelling and discomfort." Rest promotes healing, and aspirin reduces pain. Hot, wet soaks also will make a stiff neck feel better.

Stomachache. Basically, it is caused by a swelling and stretching of the intestines following the accumulation of gas. The gas is the result of swallowing too much air while eating. Moreover, some vegetables containing cellulose (such as beans) tend to produce abnormal amounts of gas. Normally, the body will eliminate excess gas. When it doesn't, old-fashioned bicarbonate of soda in water should do the trick.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest . . . plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular prices.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days in which to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days in which to decide, you may return it at our expense, for full credit.

Your own charge account will be opened . . . the selections you order will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are: 8-track tapes and cassettes, $6.98 or $7.98; reel tapes, $7.98; records, $5.98 or $6.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.)

After completing your enrollment agreement (by buying 8 selections within 3 years), you may cancel membership at any time. If you decide to continue, you'll be eligible for our generous money-saving bonus plan. So don't delay—act now!

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you at 50% off regular Club prices (only $3.49 for a record; $3.99 for a tape). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 11 introductory selections. This half-price purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 7 more (instead of 8) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number.

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive medication which actually helps shrink painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation. And in many cases it gives prompt relief for hours from rectal itching and pain in such tissues.

Tests by doctors on patients showed while it gently relieved such pain, it also helped reduce swelling of these tissues.

The medication used in the tests was Preparation H®. No prescription is needed for Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

JOBMANSHIP

Why You May Not Get the Praise You Deserve

"My boss never compliments me no matter how well I do my work," is one of an employee's most common complaints. Some bosses believe paying a salary signifies sufficient approval, but they're bucking human nature. Industrial psychologists have repeatedly proved people need recognition and praise. Bosses who ignore this fact cheat themselves of the extra effort and loyalty their kind words would produce. However, the way you react to praise may well affect the amount of it you receive: Are you the type of person who, when you receive a compliment, relaxes and feels you can coast for a while? Your boss may have noticed that praise has this effect on you and may react accordingly. Or, when you're complimented, do you boast to everyone about it? Your supervisor may not like the impression you're creating of being a "favorite." Finally, your expectations of praise are perhaps unreasonable. Do you wait for a rave every time you satisfactorily complete a task? You can't expect your boss to be bowled over daily by the fact you're able to do your job; that's why you have it! If you never seem to receive your fair share of recognition from a boss who does give deserved praise, one of your co-workers may be stealing credit for your accomplishments. If so, see that your supervisor finds out who contributed what.

PEOPLE AND YOU

The Labor Pains of an Expectant Father

The hysterical father-to-be in a TV or movie skit is always good for a laugh. Now it turns out the poor guy really may be in the grip of a psychological crisis. Psychiatrist Silas B. Coley Jr. and psychologist Barbara E. James of the School of Medicine, University of North Carolina, have completed a study which reveals that fathers-to-be may be undergoing "emotional and physical trauma." Almost one out of five prospective fathers may be so upset that he behaves erratically. These fathers fight with family and strangers, and they deliberately make themselves scarce during pregnancy, when they're needed to go to the hospital, and during the first demanding weeks afterwards. Their behavior may even be bizarre enough to include chronic vomiting or diarrhea during the wife's pregnancy. All new fathers, say the researchers, are under some stress because of increased responsibility, rivalry with the baby for the wife's attention, and sometimes feeling the child locks them into an unhappy marriage. An awareness of these feelings may help the prospective father to understand better his own reactions and the new mother (who certainly has enough tensions of her own!) to realize that her husband's anxieties are not unique. You can obtain a Government leaflet, So You're Going To Be A New Father, which discusses physical changes in the mother as well as attitude changes and new worries both parents may have. Send 55¢ to: Consumer Information Center, Dept. WM, Pueblo, Colorado 81009. —Shirley Sloan Fader

Quips & Quotes

Sunday-School Teacher: "Lot was warned to take his wife and flee out of the city. Unfortunately, his wife looked back and was turned into a pillar of salt."

Little Girl: "What happened to the flea?"

—Samuel J. Stannard

The pert eight-year-old was being punished and sat in the corner of the dining room at a table set especially for her. The rest of the family paid her little attention during her term of penitence, but they couldn't ignore her prayer before settling down to the meal.

"I thank thee, Lord," she was heard to say, "for preparing a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."

—Conrad Fiorello

A woman didn't quite make it to the delivery room, and her baby girl was born in the hospital lobby. Later, when she asked her husband to suggest a name for her, he replied, "Well, why not name her Vestibula?" —Dorothea Kent

NEW SUPER LOW PRICE!

THE FAMED EUROPEAN DESIGN

SCISSORS MOLDED TO YOUR HAND

ENDS CUTTING FATIGUE FOREVER!

- Satin-smooth cushioned plastic handles with contoured finger grips end cutting fatigue!
- So fast, so effortless, you'll think you're using power shears (only lighter!).
- Stainless steel blades with rounded safety "points"!
- Never snags, never frays, glides through everything from paper patterns to heavy fabrics.

The world's most incredible scissors at an incredible price! The idea originated with the Scandinavians—why not a scissors anatomically designed to fit the human hand instead of fight it . . . why not make it out of a cushion-y plastic that would rest rather than tire the hand? The brilliant result – a breakthrough in scissor design . . . is still selling in some better stores for $8 and more!

An Exciting New Dimension in Scissor Performance

You can whiz through the heaviest of velvets to the most gossamer of silks as fast, as perfectly as a professional dressmaker. You can turn corners, make circles, cut angles, zoom straight-as-an-arrow along a table edge so easily it's like the scissors is cutting all by itself (your fingers are along for the ride!),

And you can sas-shay through tricky patterns with incredible ease and precision, end your paper "rip offs" forever – cut coupons and recipes without ruining the rest of the paper! Quality-crafted with the famous Scandinavian features include soft plastic orange handle, and stainless steel blades, 8¼" long. Special safety "points" make it safe for the children's crafts, too! Weighs only 3 ounces. Order now – the sharpest buy of your life at ONLY $1.88 © Greenland Studios 1976

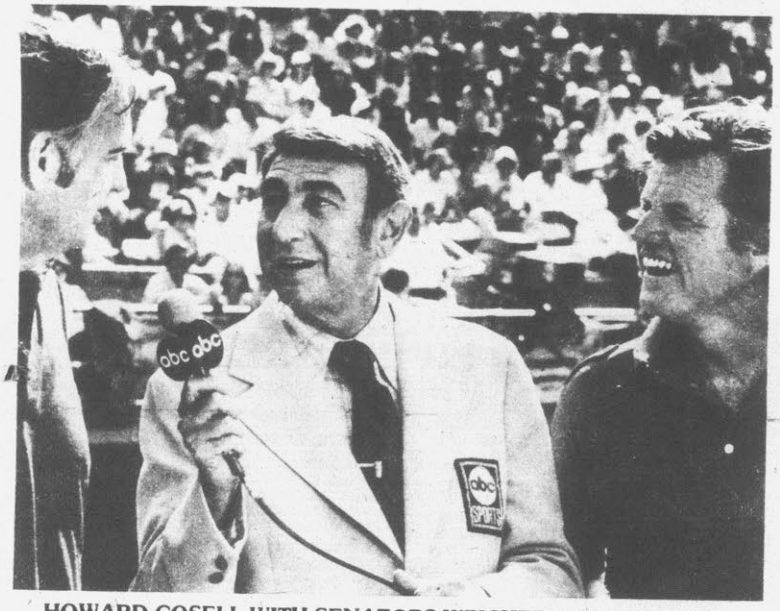
WHAT IN THE WORLD!

You'd better stretch your coffee break: "Let's have another cup of coffee" may be heard less frequently in the coming year. The 1977 coffee crop is estimated to be the smallest in years, says consumer marketing economist Mildred Walker of Kansas State University. The climate of Brazil usually is just right for producing the coffee beans appreciated around the world, but a severe frost in July of this year caused an immediate short supply. And coffee supplies will likely be tight for at least another two years, while trees recover from the frost damage and new trees reach production. In the meantime, look for retail prices to continue their climb.

FLYERS' RIGHTS: Delayed flights can drive you up the wall if you don't know your rights. Did you know that on some airlines you may be entitled to a free night in a hotel if your flight is delayed between the hours of 10:00 PM and 6:00 AM? And that if you are delayed four hours or more you are permitted, at the airline's expense, to make a long-distance telephone call anywhere in the continental United States? These and other airline amenities are explained in depth in a booklet put out by the Aviation Consumer Action Project. For information, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: ACAP, P.O. Box 19029, Washington, D.C. 20036.

BUDDY HACKETT
The show-biz bard

Comedian Buddy Hackett is known as the "Poet Laureate of Hollywood." His first collection of poems is called, The Naked Mind of Buddy Hackett. Although his verse has been compared to Rod McKuen's, Hackett insists he has been influenced by no one. "I don't read other poets," he says. "If people read a poet, it's because they need it. My poetry is me." And it comes out just about everywhere, he says. "Sometimes I'll be walkin' along, and I get a brainstorm. Other times, I'm drivin' with my wife and a poem comes to me, and I say, 'Sherry, take this down.' I write my best things on doilies in restaurants when I'm waitin' for a sammich."



HOWARD COSELL WITH SENATORS WEICKER AND KENNEDY
Nothing but the truth

A sportscaster on his success: "I never wanted to be in sports. I was put into sports broadcasting by accident. I tried to get out of sports seven or eight years ago, but I was stigmatized by then. I should have been in news, national and international. Basically my profession does not deal with truth. It's not allowed. Sport is sanctified, at least as far as the great bulk of the sportswriters of America are concerned and also the sports announcers, because in most cases they need the approval of the owners and commissioners to be hired. But that has never applied to me, and in my case I had the luck of timing. There's no question that I came along when the young people of this society were growing up far differently from my generation, and they had a sense of life and what was happening. They had the horrible unending war in Southeast Asia. They had the narcotics addiction problems. They had the racial anguish to deal with. They were circumscribed everywhere by reality, so they weren't disposed to the notion that sport is Camelot. And I told the truth about sport, and I think the timing was right for me, especially in the age of Richard Nixon." From The Success Trip, by Ross Firestone (Playboy Press, $10.95).

Japan's astonishing low crime rate: Japan is an affluent, mobile, congested and technically innovative country. It has all the attributes Americans consider modern. Yet, unlike most other modern cities, those in Japan have a crime rate that is low—and declining. This might be due to the low-key posture of the Japanese police. They believe a lesson in good behavior is of far more value than a fine. Instead of issuing a parking ticket, they will often have the offender send a formal letter of apology to the chief of the local police station. The kobans, small police stations, serve as bases for patrolling officers. When an officer is out on patrol, he makes a special point of talking to people about themselves and their behavior. If the policeman feels more investigation is called for, he is usually quite adept at getting people to agree to come to the koban for further, less public, conversation. National contests give recognition to officers who are best at on-street interrogation. The kobans are all-purpose sources of help. A mother might come in and ask for water for her baby's bottle. Some kobans issue cards which are prized by children. If a child finds a coin someone has dropped and turns it in, kobans give a printed card filled in with the child's name, the date and the particular deed performed.

Ups, downs and gallstones: Overweight people are more subject to gallstones than normal-weight persons, but recent research reported by the National Institutes of Health shows that the overweights who reduce, re-gain and reduce again are the most susceptible of all to gallstone attacks. The reason: gallstones seem to form when the liver secretes bile that is supersaturated with cholesterol. Obese people's bile carries more cholesterol than that of thin people. During weight reduction, the cholesterol content of the bile is also high. When weight is reduced and stabilized, the cholesterol drops. People with a "Yo-Yo" weight pattern may be staying in a gallstone-forming condition a great deal of the time.

AT THE END
Champagne, anyone?

At the end—the very end—of their lives, some famous folk said some mighty peculiar things. And luckily someone was there to write them down: Writer and philosopher Henry David Thoreau, asked if he had made his peace with God, replied that he wasn't aware of having quarreled with Him, and then uttered two, inexplicable last words, "Moose Indian." When François Rabelais, the French writer, slipped away, he said, "I am going to the great perhaps." Writer Oscar Wilde called for champagne: "I am dying, as I have lived, beyond my means." Torlogh O'Carolan, writer, wanted a cup of Irish whisky: "It would be hard if two such friends should part at least without kissing." For the scariest last line, boxer Max Baer holds the trophy: "Oh, God, here I go!"

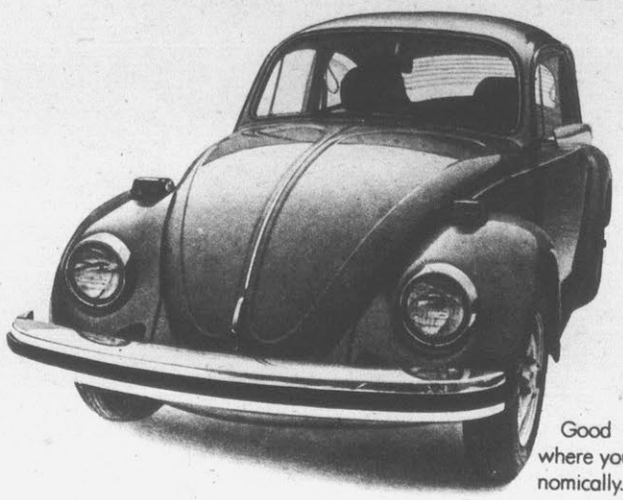
Old Faithful.



Good Old Faithful. Always got you where you were going. Always did it economically. A whole generation of Americans grew up with Old Faithful. And now, 27 years and 33 million cars later, it's still a symbol of dependability and economy.

Now there's a car that's just as reliable and economical as Old Faithful ever was. It's New Faithful. The 1977 VW Rabbit. With engineering so advanced that automotive experts have hailed it as the kind of car Detroit will be building in the 1980's.

New Faithful.

The Rabbit has a new fuel injection system, so it starts up quick as a bunny. Springs like one, too. 0 to 50 in just 7.7 seconds. The Rabbit also has advanced engineering features like negative steering roll radius to help maintain directional stability in the event of a front-tire blowout; rack-and-pinion steering for more direct maneuvering and better road feel; and an independent stabilizer rear axle, low in unsprung weight, for better road holding.

New Faithful lives up to Old Faithful's reputation for economy, too. Because it has fuel injection, you can use the most economical grade of gas.* But you won't have to use it very often. Rabbit gets 37 mpg on the highway, 24 in the city. (That's EPA's estimate for manual transmission. Actual mileage may vary, depending on driving habits, car's condition and optional equipment.)

Dependability and economy. That's what Old Faithful gave a whole generation of Americans. And that's what New Faithful is giving a whole new generation of Americans.

New Faithful. The 1977 VW Rabbit.
