

Bond Authority Set Up Here

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A bonding authority, empowered under an act of the 1975 General Assembly to issue bonds to finance industrial facilities or pollution control systems for private industry or public utilities, was formalized in Pitt County, yesterday.

County Commissioners in October gave notice of the Board's intent to establish the Pitt County Industrial Facilities and Pollution Control Financing Authority. Yesterday, the seven members appointed by commissioners as members of the authority took the oath of office and elected officers. Members of the authority include: William F. Cox, elected chairman; Richard K. Worsley, named vice-chairman; Reid Hooper, chosen treasurer and assistant secretary of the authority; J. I. Morgan III; Norman Worthington; Harold Staton and Riley Cox. Reese Hart, director of the Pitt County Development Commission was selected by the authority as secretary.

The bonding authority, subject to the approval of the Local Government Commission and the Department of Natural and Economic Resources, has the power to issue bonds to finance new industrial construction or expand present facilities. There is a $5 million limit on industrial construction.

The authority also has the power to issue bonds, subject to state agency approval, for the construction of pollution control facilities for private industry or public utilities. There is no limit on funds for pollution control installations.

In essence, the authority is designed to issue bonds for construction of facilities and in turn, receive leasehold payments from the recipients to finance the authority's operations as well as to retire the bonds.

Through bond financing, lower interest rates are possible, hopefully more jobs become available; and by attracting good industries, higher wages are paid.

The annual meeting of the authority was set as the first Monday in February, at 7:30 p.m.

PTI Seeks C-College Status

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt Technical Institute officials met last night with County Commissioners, asking the board's endorsement of community college status for PTI.

Sen. Vernon White, chairman of the technical institute's Board of Trustees told commissioners, "We're here tonight to ask you to support us in becoming a community college...in name as well as in fact." He pointed to the fact that PTI currently offers several curriculum programs as well as its technical and vocational classes.

Adding a two-year college parallel program, he pointed out, would enhance the vocational training at the school, rather than detract from it.

The state, he said, is limiting "universities, as to their growth." It costs $3,000 per student to operate the 16 institutions in the university system, while costing only $1,000 per student to operate community colleges. As a community college, White noted, the local school would have "an open door policy," accepting any high school graduate for the two-year college parallel curriculum.

White told the board, "It will cost the county board a small amount, but be of great benefit to Pitt County. If we did not think we were right, we wouldn't be here."

"We are not asking you to decide tonight," White continued, "just consider it...act in the near future."

If commissioners endorse the proposal, a bill would be introduced in the 1977 General Assembly to elevate PTI to Community College status.

Several years ago, a request by PTI to become a community college was put to a vote of the people. At that time, voters participating in the referendum rejected the change.

PTI president Dr. Bill Fulford told commissioners last night that at the time of the referendum, several members of the school's board of trustees had reservations about the change.

"Now PTI has matured" and all the trustees support community college status for the school, Fulford noted. He said the school has improved the quality of its faculty and improved the quality of instruction and is now serving 2,400 full-time equivalent students.

He said "Pitt Tech is performing the function of a comprehensive community college." at the present time, without the prestige the name change would bring and without the benefit of having the two-year college parallel curriculum.

"We would like for PTI to be fully responsive to the people of Pitt County. Let's give our people the whole pie," Fulford urged.

The public, according to Fulford "is paying for community college status, whether we have the program or not," by supporting the other 20 community colleges across the state.

A community college in Pitt, he said, would be of economic benefit to the county by allowing local students to attend school in the county rather than traveling to Lenoir, Wayne, Martin or other community colleges.

According to Fulford, if 150 students were enrolled in the two-year college parallel program, the school would receive about $250,000 in state funds for support of the program, while costing the county only about $15,000.

PTI board member Clifton Everette, who opposed the change originally, told the commissioners last night "I am convinced beyond doubt that what we are seeking to have you approve is worthwhile. A wise man changes his mind. A fool never does. In 1970 I opposed it. I changed my mind."

Everett said, "To serve the people of Pitt County as adequately and fully as we ought to do, we ought to be a community college."

Trustee Mrs. Kay Whichard said "I feel we are really behind in this step." The vocational

OPEC Security Mounts

By NICK LUDINGTON
Associated Press Writer

DOHA, Qatar (AP) — Sea, air and land security was mounted today for oil ministers of the 13 major oil exporting countries as they gathered for a meeting in which they are expected to raise the price of oil by 8 to 15 per cent.

Ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, who begin their session Wednesday, will argue recommendations ranging from a freeze or token increase to a massive 25 per cent or more. Observers predict they will settle somewhere in the middle.

To avoid a raid similar to that on an OPEC meeting in Vienna a year ago, the 4,000-man police and armed forces of this Persian Gulf sheikdom are taking stringent security precautions.

The conference room of the 342-room Gulf Hotel is equipped with electronically operated bulletproof shutters. Two floors are reserved for security men. Every room has been searched with electronic devices.

A guerrilla reported to be the international terrorist Carlos led an attack on the Vienna meeting. Three persons were killed and ministers from the richest oil countries were kidnapped. The ministers were released in Algeria after payment of ransom.

The industrialized West, led by the United States, has mounted a diplomatic campaign against a large price increase at this meeting. U.S. officials say any rise of more than 8 per cent cannot be absorbed and could renew the international recession.

American officials say a 15 per cent increase would up U.S. inflation from the present 6 per cent a year to 7 per cent. Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi of Iran, who favors a 15 per cent increase, says it would add only "a fraction" to inflation.

OPEC experts argue that inflation in manufactured goods and services that oil countries import from the West is 26 per cent since OPEC's last 10 per cent increase in oil prices in October 1975.

College Draws Criticism As Carter Is Elected

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even as presidential electors confirmed Jimmy Carter's election to the presidency, some called for abolition of the Electoral College as a cumbersome mechanism that could thwart the will of the voters.

As if to dramatize their point, a maverick elector in the state of Washington cast his vote for ex-Calif. Gov. Ronald Reagan, who was not even on the ballot in the general election.

"A very curious institution," college professor Lawrence Longley said in describing the Electoral College before joining with 10 other Wisconsin electors who urged that it be dissolved before the next presidential election.

In Iowa, elector James Senior said, "The real electors are the people who vote on election day."

By a seven-to-one vote, the Iowa electors went on to recommend that Congress either abolish the system through constitutional amendment or change it to prevent some future presidential candidate from losing the popular vote but winning the White House in the Electoral College.

Their fears did not materialize this year.

On Monday, the electors gave 297 votes to Carter, 240 to his Republican opponent, President Ford, and one to Reagan. Carter needed a simple majority of 270 from the 538 electors to win.

Republicans in Ohio had charged voting irregularities and sued to halt the certification by the state's 25 electors. But a federal judge cleared the way for the ballots to be cast routinely.

While the electoral vote was being recorded in 50 state capitals and the District of Columbia, official popular vote figures showed Carter's winning margin in the Nov. 2 election was 1,681,135. Carter received 40,827,292 votes and carried 23 states and the District of Columbia to 39,146,157 and 27 states for Ford.

The last act in the process of making the election official comes Jan. 6 when Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller will formally announce the outcome — to the surprise of no one — at a joint session of Congress.

Designate Urban Renewal Money

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Redevelopment Commission has voted to designate urban renewal money to pay for some 800 feet of pipe that will be used to cover a large open ditch in the proposed Southside housing development.

Executive director Joe Laney told commissioners last night that the Department of Housing and Urban Development as well as the local Planning and Zoning Commission has asked the Housing Authority to cover the ditch.

The Authority plans to construct 111 units of public housing on the site located off Evans Street, the director pointed out, and since the Authority is working on a set housing budget, no money is available for purchase of the pipe.

Money is available in the Redevelopment Commission's Southside urban renewal budget for such items, it was explained. The city has volunteered to install the pipe, Laney mentioned.

He said that a 72-inch pipe will be necessary to cover the ditch, which cuts across the northern section of the property from 16th Street down to Evans. At an estimated cost of $60 per foot, the pipe would cost approximately $48,000 based on liberal figures.

Laney said that the ditch carries a great deal of water and empties into Green Mill Run. Installation of the pipe would not affect the route of the water, he added.

Considering the safety factors involved with children in the housing area, it was agreed that covering the ditch is the best solution to the problem.

In other business, the commission's rehabilitation officer Ed Cobb reported that during the year, eight rehabilitation grants were secured in the West Meadowbrook area at a total assistance figure of nearly $40,000.

In addition to the grants completed, nine individual renovations were accomplished by private owners without any public assistance at a figure of some $5,000 to $6,000 each.

In Southside, Cobb reported, the rehabilitation staff here was able to generate some $45,000 in HUD loans and grants to improve structures.

Overall, roughly $85,000 in assisted renovations were accomplished during the year through loan and grant work, he said.

Commissioners approved an amendment to the contract with attorney James C. Lanier Jr. for title work involving parcels in West Meadowbrook under the Community Development program. The amendment calls for an additional $1,500 to cover the expense of complicated title work that was necessary over and above the original work stipulated in the initial $15,000 contract.

Laney explained that the title work on some of the 150 parcels became very involved and a two-block area with some 45 parcels revealed no established property titles. The amendment covers the work on the 45 parcels, which also called for a reworking of all records supported by engineering and surveying.

The director, reporting for absent real estate officer

Kirby Boyd, said that no acquisitions were handled in the Central Business District since the November meeting, while four demolitions, involving the structures known as the Mumford Buildings on Dickinson Avenue between Taft Furniture and Five Points, were accomplished.

In Southside, two parcels were acquired on Howell and Greene Streets. Three acquisitions took place in West Meadowbrook and no demolitions, Laney reported.

Southside project manager Faye Brewington said that two families were relocated from the project area since November and one tenant moved from the Meadowbrook area.

Ayden Town Board Votes Against Blue Law

By SUSAN QUINN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The Ayden Town Board voted against closing all businesses on Sunday, in a four-to-one roll call vote, Monday night.

Commissioner Ray Harris made a motion to change the present ordinance and to close all businesses in Ayden on Sunday. Commissioner Elliott Dixon seconded the motion.

ed that he seconded the motion to allow for discussion on the motion.

"I am opposed to the motion, but in order for the board to take action I felt it was necessary to second the motion so that we could discuss it. There are some businesses that have long been established here and are open on Sunday and it would be unfair to suddenly close them. If a person wishes to shop and go out to eat on Sunday that is their prerogative. If a person wishes to stay home or go to church on Sunday that is their prerogative. It is not the prerogative of this town to tell people when to operate and when not to operate," Dixon said.

"Sunday is a special day and the businesses should be closed. I was disturbed to see a full page ad in the newspaper Sunday advertising the fact that Ayden has no blue law," Harris said.

When asked the definition of blue law, town attorney, Robert Booth explained that a blue law limits trade on Sunday.

Rev. Stanley Wingard spoke in favor of closing the stores on Sunday.

"In the petition that we circulated it stated that all matters of necessity should be recognized and open. My feeling is that to operate a regular business beyond necessity is not on the practical side of observing the Lord's Day," Rev. Wingard said.

"Sunday represents the resurrection of Christ. I'm here to preach as a prophet of God and if I had remained quiet I would not have done my duty," Wingard added.

Willis Manning pointed out that preachers are paid for their business on Sunday.

"You get paid money to preach on Sunday. That is your way to get money. If you can get paid for working on Sunday, why can't I," Manning said.

Johnny Hill replied that a preacher is called rather than hired to a church.

"Before you vote, I'd like to see you leave religion out of this. This country was founded on the freedom of religion. This is a civil matter. The last public U.S. maneuver like this, much to our distaste, wound up in loss of prayer in the schools. I hope that

Violent Jamaican Campaign Nears End

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer
KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — The most violent political campaign in Jamaica history neared its end today, and the government banned election-eve political meetings following the shooting of one candidate and a mob attack on another.

In a final telecast before the election of a new Parliament Wednesday, Prime Minister Michael Manley paid tribute to the wounded candidate from his People's National Party (PNP) and many other "unsung heroes" he said had died as a result of political violence.

Police said Ferdie Neita, an automobile mechanic, was shot in the side as he was helping put up a speaker's stand in Spanish Town. He was reported in serious condition, and the police said they picked up eight persons from the local office of the anti-government Jamaica Labor Party (JLP) for questioning.

The JLP, which is headed by Edward Seaga, reported that a mob surrounded a car in which Colin Williamson, one of its candidates, and two supporters were riding, riddled it with bullets and firebombed it. The JLP said Williamson was not hurt but one of his companions was hacked with a machete and critically injured.

The security forces announced that a ban on motorcades and marches had been extended to political meetings. Manley said the ban was ordered "to ease the pressure on manpower" and to enable the police and the army to deploy for the balloting.

The British Commonwealth island in the Caribbean has been under a state of emergency since June because of mounting criminal and political violence. Seaga claimed Sunday that nine of his men had been killed since the campaign began three weeks ago, and at least four or five of Manley's supporters have been reported killed. Dozens of supporters of both parties have been injured. Manley, who has been in power since 1972, urged the voters not to let fear of violence keep them at home. The election is rated as a tossup with the government party given a slight edge, and a heavy turnout is expected to help it.

Both parties are products of the trade-union movement, but the JLP is more conservative. Manley has campaigned for another five-year term to expand his program of "democratic socialism," which he claims is narrowing the gap between the island's rich and poor. Seaga attacks the ties the prime minister has developed with Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro, accuses him of leading Jamaica toward communism and says if he gets in he will seek foreign investments to improve the economy.

IRA Holds Pre-Christmas Blitz

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army strewed bombs across Belfast and at three other places in Northern Ireland, blocked roads with hijacked cars and trucks and killed a cripple who couldn't move fast enough.

Monday's pre-Christmas blitz was the worst outbreak by the IRA's Provisional wing in several months. The Roman Catholic guerrillas said they were protesting "intolerable conditions" to which IRA men were subjected in the Maze prison southwest of Belfast.

Police said Roy Young, a 23-year-old Protestant paralyzed on one side by polio, was killed because he did not immediately obey when three masked gunmen burst into a Belfast brush factory and ordered the employees to lie on the floor.

Young was shot in the head and back. The gunmen allowed the 200 other employees to escape before three bombs wrecked the factory.

Other bombs went off at the Landsdowne Hotel, a bus depot and a restaurant in downtown Belfast, panicking Christmas shoppers. Gunmen fired on employees fleeing the hotel, but Young was the only casualty reported in Belfast.

He was the 1,678th reported death in more than seven years of Catholic-Protestant warfare in Northern Ireland. More than 15 fake bombs were planted in Belfast streets to disrupt traffic and cause panic.

Outside the capital, five bombs devastated the main street of Bellaghy, a village near Londonderry. Two butcher shops, a cafe and a gas station were destroyed, but no casualties were reported.

Three policemen were injured, one in an explosion on the Dublin-Belfast expressway and two others in a bomb blast at Lurgan, 20 miles southwest of Belfast.

An IRA statement charged that for 11 weeks members of the guerrilla army in Maze prison "have been held in solitary confinement, naked in unsanitary conditions and forbidden to attend Mass, all because they rightly refuse to accept criminal prisoner status."

The statement was referring to about 40 IRA men who refuse to wear prison garb or occupy cells because the British government refuses to classify them as political prisoners, a category which has various privileges denied common criminals.

you will think twice before legislating civil rights," Dave Bosse said.

"I'd like to see the businesses closed on Sunday, but I do not feel that this motion would work," Commissioner Carl Speight said.

Following the vote on the motion, Commissioner Speight made a motion to close the stores from 7 to 9 p.m. in addition to the present ordinance which closes stores from 10 a.m. to 12 noon on Sunday. The motion died for lack of a second.

The board amended the budget to include Anti-Recession Funds in the amount of $1,577. This money will be used to make repairs at the Ayden Community Building.

Ralph Ford reported that the Planning Board had recommended that the board consider having future subdivisions in the Ayden Planning Area install underground electric services. Ford explained that the underground electric services would improve the appearance of the area and improve the tax base. Ford also suggested a survey which would determine the cost of replacing old area lines with underground service as the old lines demanded replacement. This action would require an amendment to the subdivision ordinance so the board scheduled a public hearing for January.

Jerry Cox presented a report on the Community Development application and announced the costs and improvements that are being proposed. The board will review the application at its January 3 workshop meeting.

The board voted to make a joint application with the Town of Grifton for a Coastal Plains Grant. The grant would be used to conduct an Industrial Site Survey between Grifton and Ayden. The board had previously proposed to have the joint application with Winterville, Grifton and Ayden, but Winterville did not respond to the proposal. If Grifton does not wish to join with Ayden in applying for the grant, the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewerage District may submit an application.

The board adopted a policy on returned checks. A five dollar service charge will be charged for returned checks for utility bills. If a person has two returned checks within a six month period utility services will be disconnected and in addition to a $5 service charge a $5 reconnection fee will be charged. The policy will be effective January 15, 1977.

In other business the board: —Accepted the audit report presented by Cecil Mizelle. —Voted to purchase a Christmas Greeting advertisement in the Ayden News-Leader. —Adopted a flood plain regulation amendment which lists new criteria for flood plain building. —Received additional taxes added to the 1976 tax levy. The board voted to request information from the Pitt County Board of Commissioners of why the Free Will Baptist Press was not exempt from the taxes. —Voted to close the town offices December 24 and 27 in observance of Christmas Holidays. Garbage pickup will be provided on Monday.

Hold Annual ECU Assembly

The traditional East Carolina University Christmas Assembly for faculty, student body and the public will take place at 11 a.m. Friday, Dec. 17.

Following the pattern of recent years, special music will be presented by various instrumental and vocal groups from the School of Music. In addition, ample audience participation in singing Christmas carols will be part of the assembly.

Chancellor Leo Jenkins will bring a brief Christmas message.

The event is without admission and is open to all friends of the university.

AN UNLIKELY PLACE... for a hand pump, it would seem, is the 200 block of East Third Street, but Greenville Public Works employee Frank Jones spent much of Friday afternoon welding its handle. He said there was an underground water tank that had to be emptied and removed before the sidewalk could be laid. His co-worker Braxie Cox (left) assisted. (Reflector Photo by Carol Tyler)

Arrest Youths For Threats

Two juveniles were apprehended this morning by Pitt juvenile officers and charged in connection with two bomb threats called in to D. H. Conley School in the Hollywood community.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that the officers arrested the youths, 14 and 15 years old, around 10 a.m. on two counts of calling in a bomb hoax.

He said that the first call was received Monday morning at 8:30 and the second call was received at the school at 8:16 a.m. today. Both calls indicated that a bomb was located in the school building and would explode, the sheriff added.

Hearing Set

In Firing Case

RALEIGH (AP) — A superior court judge says a hearing is needed to settle the claim of a former state employe that he was fired for political reasons from the Department of Transportation.

Judge Donald L. Smith Monday ordered a trial in the case for early February.

William E. Woodruff, who had been employed by the department since 1949, has been drawing his $1,000-a-month salary under court order since he was dismissed 11 months ago.

Will Auction 56 Bicycles

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said today that 56 bicycles will be sold at auction Wednesday morning.

Cannon, noting that the proceeds from the sale of the bicycles will go to the school fund, explained that the two-wheel vehicles are those that have been recovered by the police department during the past year.

He said every effort is made to return bicycles that have been stolen and recovered by officers, or abandoned by their riders, to their rightful owners. But he said, bicycles that have not been licensed as required under the city code sometimes cannot be properly identified and therefore, cannot be returned.

The sale, to begin at 10 a. m. will be held in the alley beside the Police Department. In the event of rain, the chief said, the sale will be held at the Fire Department.

The bicycles will be on display for viewing by prospective bidders for a time prior to 10 a.m.

Most Perfume Is Sold At Christmastime

By United Press International
Christmas is the best smelling time of the year. Seventy-five per cent of all perfume sold in America is sold to men at Christmas time. Women's fragrances alone are a $950 million a year industry; add $650 million for men's toilet water and cologne.

The recession apparently has had little impact on this area of gift-giving. Annette Green, director of the Fragrance Foundation, the nonprofit educational arm of the perfume industry, says the annual growth rate has been about 15 per cent every year for the past five years.

Ms. Green also said more and more people are criss-crossing lines, with women using men's fragrances and vice versa.

Tom Cannariato, a West Coast cosmetics executive, sees this as the trend of the future.

Ms. Green is not so sure unisex scents will eventually replace those formulated specifically for men or women. She thinks a third category will develop, a light, splash-type fragrance suitable for either sex.

Not so, says Cannariato. "In the next 10 years we're going to see a unisex approach to fragrance." Cannariato is marketing vice president for Merle Norman Cosmetics and the company's resident "nose" or perfumer.

He feels people are heavily influenced by advertising that promotes fragrances as being for either men or women, but not for both. As a result, he thinks people have preconceived ideas about what is a "masculine" or a "feminine" scent.

"Most men are still type-cast into wearing outdoorsy fragrances," he said, despite the fact that many of the "notes" found in men's colognes, such as roses and jasmine, are not identified as "masculine."

"Take away the advertising and the packaging, and many of the same fragrances will appeal to both men and women," Cannariato said; it has to do with eliminating stereotypic ideas and conceptions.

Cannariato, who describes himself as "a sweatshirt and dungaree type," test-wears his latest creation for what he says "is the sheer pleasure of tearing it apart." Although his company markets fragrances for men, most are aimed at women, so he often personally tests scents intended for women.

He recalled with a mischievous grin that he wore one recently while mowing the lawn in front of his southern California home:

"Several of my friends dropped by, and they all liked the way I smelled!" He said one man, a dentist, even asked when he could buy some.

Cannariato people will choose fragrances during the next decade simply because they smell good and not because they are supposed to make the wearer feel more masculine or more feminine.

He is deeply aware of the psychological effect of fragrances, and feels that people react more emotionally to odors than to other sensory perceptions.

"We carry around subliminal memories of odors," he said, "and these memories are so acute that any reawakening is real and definite, evoking either very uncomfortable or very pleasant feelings."

Fragrance is a subjective and personal thing, he said. People associate odors with the pleasant or unpleasant circumstances under which they first smelled them. For example, most people like the smell of gasoline. "For many of us, the smell of gasoline is intertwined with childhood memories of loving parents, cars and going somewhere."

"To a small child, a trip, even to the grocery store with mother, is a pleasurable experience."

As the child becomes an adult he continues to associate the smell of gasoline with some-

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I can take only so many of these Christmas bazaars with their homemade counters of cleverness and creativity—then I start to regress.

Walking through the rows of homemade cookies, bottle cap abstracts, crocheted hats, and disguised styrofoam, I ask myself, "What are you doing with your life that is meaningful?" "Have you ever finished anything you started including your children?" "You're nothing but a piece of lint in a black wool coat world!"

Eventually, I snap out of my self-pity and become like most women who go to bazaars—not to buy, but to copy the idea and reproduce it myself.

This month, I looked at a wine bottle that had the neck cut off and the edges sanded and was instantly converted to a votive candle holder and I said to myself, "I can do that."

The stitches in my hand come out the 18th of this month.

I looked at a little needlepoint doorknob warmer with a picture of Santa Claus with a little cotton beard and a bell on his thing enjoyable.

By contrast, Cannariato said many people dislike the odor of particular flowers. A child may equate the smell of roses with the time he was stung by a bee, and dislike the aroma of roses evermore.

There's more to fragrance psychology than subliminal associations, he said.

"When you smell good, you feel good and when you feel good, you look good. Fragrance is an easy way to promote that."

little cap and said to myself, "I can do that."

What the heck! How many doorknobs do you know personally who complain of the cold?

I looked at an angel where the body was a simple cone and the head was a styrofoam ball and all you had to do was dip your husband's old underwear in a heavy paste and drape it gracefully over the cone and spray paint it gold and I said to myself, "I can do that."

A lot of men wear gold underwear, especially during the holidays when they don't have to sit a lot.

I looked at a great big old log that someone had just picked up in the woods and there was virtually a jungle of green plants trailing out of every opening and I said to myself, "I can do that."

The exterminator is coming out Tuesday to give me an estimate on how much it will cost to get the pregnant worms out of my woodwork.

I looked at a calico map of the United States that you just run up on your sewing machine out of scraps of material you have around the house and I said to myself, "I can do that."

Eighteen more payments and the sewing machine is mine. The dog ate Colorado which makes a heckuva hole between Utah, Wyoming, Nebraska, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona.

I lied. I can't do any of that!

Christmas Gift—Or Tax Deduction?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Tell me if I'm wrong, but I do not appreciate receiving a card at Christmastime informing me that a gift in my name has been sent to the starving children of Bangladesh, the earthquake victims of Guatemala, or a handicapped war veteran.

I personally donate to many worthy causes, but I also send my friends and relatives Christmas gifts and cards.

When I get one of these "a-gift-in-your-name" certiicates, I feel that I am being used as a tax deduction, which is no gift at all. Care to comment?

USED IN DURHAM, N.C.

DEAR USED: I disagree. In my opinion, one of the more civilized practices of recent years is donating to charity instead of giving extravagant gifts to those who already have more than they need. Knowing that a starving child, an earthquake victim or a handicapped war veteran had received help in my name would be gift enough for me.

DEAR ABBY: How would you handle the following problem if you were "Boy C":

Boy A took a new school book (school property, too) loaned to Boy B and defaced it terribly. Boy B was not around when this happened, and the only one who saw him do it was Boy C.

Should Boy C tell the teacher what he saw?

WORRIED SICK

DEAR WORRIED: On the principle that every citizen has a duty to report a crime of which he has knowledge, Boy C should do so, however, Boy C is justified in asking for anonymity. Otherwise, in today's climate of violence, an act of good citizenship could become an epitaph.

DEAR ABBY: Although I have a full-time job, take care of our home and three children, I still find time to make all my own clothes. I am very proud of my sewing ability, and I certainly save a lot of money.

I receive many compliments on my clothes, and when I tell people I make them, they appear to be amazed. Most say they thought I buy them at one of the most expensive stores in town.

My husband tells me I am wrong to tell people I make my own clothes. He says I should let them think I paid a high price for them.

I think being able to make things that can pass for store-bought merchandise is something to be proud of. I welcome your opinion as well as those who have been through this kind of controversy.

CAROLINA CONTROVERSY

DEAR CONTROL: The choice is between your husband's false pride and yours, which is earned. I vote for the latter.

Industrial Bonds Have Helped

Low cost industrial bonds were not a palatable idea in North Carolina a few months ago. But eventually it became clear that such bonds were needed for the state to remain competitive with all the other states in seeking industry.

Thus Tar Heels approved a constitutional amendment on March 23 to allow the bonds, and North Carolina became the last of the 50 states to have such a provision.

It can still be argued that no state should allow the industrial bonds, but since all the others do, it was clear that our state had to do the same.

And the availability of the bonds has apparently been a shot in the arm for the state's industrial program.

Thomas Broughton, state director of economic development recently reported that seven industries were convinced to locate in the state because of the low cost bonds.

He claimed the industries will employ 2,000 persons and make a capital investment of $165 million.

He said other industries are also interested in the state as a result of the industrial revenue bond approval. "We're off to a good start with the program," Broughton said. "I expect things to get even better as the counties and the state become more experienced in operating the program."

Perhaps a government sanctioned industrial revenue bond program doesn't totally fit the free enterprise system. Regardless North Carolina couldn't go it alone against all the other states. Our voters recognized this last March and approved the constitutional amendment allowing industrial revenue bonds. Apparently we are beginning to see results of that favorable move.

Everybody Expects Cold Winter Ahead

Everybody is predicting a cold winter. Nobody knows why exactly; perhaps it is only because we have had a couple of mild ones back-to-back.

At any rate it has been a chilly fall and a little snowfall last week caused wise heads to nod, as predictions of a snowy winter began anew.

We don't have the insight to predict whether there will be lots of snow this winter, but if you want a firm stand, we're against it.

New Life For Holshouser

By BILL NOBLITT (First of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — At age 42, Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr., is among the youngest former governors North Carolina has ever had. He has a lot of years to be the "elder statesman."

That makes him particularly glad of one tradition in North Carolina political life. The popularity of most outgoing governors plummets near the end of a term. Esteem escalates rapidly once the fellow is out of office. "My polls show I have a 60 per cent popularity rating... that's something any politician is interested in, and that is high. Of course I would like it to be 100 per cent," the short-term governor joked as he relaxed in his office during a recent chat.

Transition

He is relaxed, and happy. The transition from public to private life, he predicts, will not be particularly hard. As a lawyer, he is prepared to re-enter private life, and will do so in a job which will provide maximum personal freedom. He mulled several alternatives, but opted for independence.

He is not particularly disappointed that he will not — as many anticipated — be going to Washington. The regimen, bureaucratic hassles, and pace, he feels, would not have been to his liking.

The governor is taking flying lessons and plans to buy an airplane. That method of travel, he says, is something he got used to, and liked, as one of the "perks" as governor. His security men confess they have not been up with the governor at the controls: "He doesn't need protection up there. We just wait."

Holshouser found his four years "more challenging than I expected," and while he recalls it as a "tough four years, the toughest in my whole life in terms of pressures and schedules and decisions," he would have liked to run for a second term — to see if he could win if nothing else.

He will, at the slightest opportunity, tick off a laundry list of his favorite accomplishments: rural health clinics, parks expansion, kindergarten in the public schools, a highways program run on a professional basis.

But what did he enjoy most, as a person? "Being able to pull right up to the gates at the football stadium and go in and have a seat," he confesses. "Now I realize that is purely selfish... but I did enjoy it."

There are a lot of perks to the office: riding around in Number One with a driver and security people to run errands, servants to fetch and carry, helicopters and airplanes, travel both domestically and overseas: "I will admit I've gotten very spoiled... and I will miss it. But the change will not be as upsetting to me as it has been for some other governors I have known."

Not A Dream

Unlike many of his predecessors, Holshouser has not fulfilled a lifelong dream by sitting in the governor's chair. He first became interested in 1971 as a legislator when he was deeply involved in the restructuring of the university system.

He decided to "give it a try," and the night before election day told colleagues he believed the election was "an inch over or an inch short... when we won, it was stunning."

Would he really have run for a second time, law permitting? That, he said, is speculative at best. Would prospects of a second term change the way a governor operates? "It would change things somewhat. But this elder statesman thing is overplayed... that not being able to run again cuts you loose from political considerations in decision-making. "Decisions must be made with backbone regardless. Also, because even if you are not going to run again, you still want to be popular; to have people like you."

What were his toughest moments? "Commutation of prison sentences. I set up guidelines... reading each case carefully... I worried the most over that. Even with the Paroles Board recommendations and the studies and the fact that a fourth of the terms had been served... I still worried a great deal over granting commutations."

Touching 'Untouchables'

In a little-noticed speech the other day in San Francisco, S. John Byington fell into what amounts to mortal sin. A top-ranking bureaucrat himself, he committed heresy against the bureaucrats' most worshipped institution. Byington said the Civil Service System ought to be reformed.

Zounds! This is the most unheard of thing that official Washington ever heard of. In these parts the Civil Service System ranks above motherhood, Old Glory, apple pie and baseball as the most venerated institution of them all. For the roughly two million permanent civilian employees of the federal government, Civil Service is sword, shield, buckler and security blanket. But Byington voiced some most unkind remarks about how the system works.

Byington spoke truth. The gentleman is chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, as typical a bureaucracy as one can find in town. His modest little fiefdom employs roughly 900 persons and spends $37 million a year, most of it on benevolently useless ventures. Though he is relatively new to the CPSC, Byington has been around official Washington long enough to know what makes the whole machinery tick.

In his speech to the Commonwealth Club, Byington outlined a few ideas for regulatory reform; true to bureaucratic tradition, he proposed certain expansions of the federal role through "offices of public counsel."

Then, surprisingly, he continued: "Also, certain policies and inclusions within the Civil Service System — particularly as they relate to top management and women — must be revised. Perhaps the simplest way to understand the problem is to ask whether people in broad policy or significant program management positions should spend a lifetime in those positions. If we are content to have a rigidly structured — almost fully tenured — bureaucracy which answers to no one, then the answer is yes. But if we are to encourage flexibility and allow for creative management; if we are to demand social accountability, then the answer is no."

Byington went on to recall that when the Civil Service Act was adopted in 1883, it covered approximately 10 percent of the government's employees. The figure today is approximately 85 percent. One effect of this sweeping coverage, he said, is significantly to reduce the ability to manage the government effectively.

"Three very basic managerial tools have been eliminated for all intents and purposes — the ability to hire, the ability to demote, and the ability to fire."

"A manager in government who finds it necessary to terminate an employee who is contributing little or nothing to the program — or even obstructing the program — must be prepared to spend a minimum of 25 to 50 percent of his or her time for a period of at least six to 18 months on the removal of that person from a Civil Service position."

Rather than endure that experience, Byington suggested, the practice is for an executive "to work around or promote the employee out of the office in order to be rid of the problem rather than to deal with the problem."

Byington urged that career Civil Service restrictions be substantially eliminated from senior policy and program management positions. He had a word of warning for President Carter: The new Chief Executive "will find an often unwieldy and occasionally unyielding bureaucracy with little soul or commitment to new policies and programs." Without dramatic changes, "the bureaucracy will continue to petrify, like a university with a completely tenured faculty and administration." Byington wound up by calling for a major White House Conference on Civil Service Reform.

Fear Court Trend

By RICHARD CARELLI Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Feminists fear recent Supreme Court setbacks to the women's movement may represent the reversal of a court trend that had been beneficial to emerging women's rights.

They say, however, that such defeats will only rekindle efforts to pass the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution as a means of introducing "a different constitutional standard."

"It's hard to believe those nine men can reach decisions like they did today and then go home and face their wives," an angry feminist said Monday.

Fleets of insurgent tanks, supported by infantry and machine gun units, battered for two hours today at government lines in Madrid's University City, but shivering defenses held firm.

An icy wind howled down from the nearby mountains as the fighting broke out anew.

Defenders, however, said the long-awaited insurgent "big push" had not materialized.

It was announced 60,000 non-combatants had been evacuated from the besieged capital in the past week. Of these many were children.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Choosing Centrist Wright

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The election of Rep. Jim Wright of Texas as House majority leader is one of those rare, largely accidental events rooted in small irrelevancies which promises long-term consequences for American politics: a less bellicose, less assertive House of Representatives during the Carter administration and perhaps well beyond it.

Although centrist Wright's selection partly represents some mellowing by House Democrats, he is well to the right of their consensus. His election was more the product of intense, semi-hysterical personal emotions aroused by Rep. Philip Burton of California, petty ambitions, a strange lassitude by liberal lobbyists and just plain luck.

The consequences will be vastly more significant than those causes. Besides being easier for the new President and Speaker to deal with, Wright will contribute to Thermidor in the House — moderate counter-revolutionary reaction following turbulent radical reform. That role was suggested by Wright's brief campaign for leadership, declaring his Southernness would abort any rebuilt Southern-Republican coalition to block Carter legislation. But the outcome was decided neither by that nor his claims of greater empathy with President-elect Carter and the prospective new Speaker, Rep. Thomas (Tip) O'Neill of Massachusetts.

What decided matters were the volcanic personality of Phil Burton and inevitable personal ambition. Burton's high-powered tactics — in partnership with the fallen Wayne Hays — had alienated House members far more ideologically in tune with him than with Wright. Wright picked up additional votes because his elevation to the leadership opened up chairmanships on the House Public Works and Interior Committees.

Moreover, the 47 new Democrats elected in 1976 are, by temperament and background, more cautious and less flamboyant than the 79 freshmen of 1974. While Wright is viewed by many colleagues as a pompous prototype of Hollywood-style Congressmen, he came over to the freshmen as considerably more plausible than either the driven Burton or the brooding Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri.

With the clarity of hindsight, it is now obvious that Bolling, though personally unpopular, would have easily defeated either Burton or Wright in a two-man contest. He never got there because of sheer bad luck and support for Wright among the many freshman Democrats with experience in state and local government.

That support was also indispensable to Wright's one-vote margin against Burton. A case in point: Rep. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland, national party reformer who disagrees with the leftist Burton on few issues. Yet Miss Mikulski, looking back to experience on the Baltimore city council, feared a majority leader constantly challenging the Speaker and President. She voted for Wright.

Perhaps the Mikulskis would not have had they been prodded by the Americans for Democratic Action (ADA), the National Committee for an Effective Congress (NCEC) and other outside groups opposed to Wright. Assuming the choice would be between Burton and Bolling, these groups did not publicize Wright's anemic lifetime ADA liberal rating of 48 per cent. It fell to 32 per cent last year with Wright "wrong" (conservative) on black voting rights, sex discrimination, oil, food stamps, tax reform, nuclear power" defense (including the

Other Editors Say A Speedy Trial

(The Durham Sun)

Increasing the penalties for persons convicted of some crimes, especially against other persons and property, may not be the deterrents North Carolina sheriffs hope they will be unless the criminal justice procedure is revamped.

Regardless of how severe is the penalty for a crime, the person committing such a crime will not see it as a deterrent as long as he or she knows that crowded dockets and defense and prosecution motions for delay means months will pass before the case comes to trial. Except in the most serious crimes, the accused can get out on bail and be free to live as he or she pleases, even to committing similar or other crimes. Appeals after conviction also will delay the beginning of many prison sentences.

The U.S. Constitution requires that an accused person be given a fair and speedy trial. The speed of the criminal justice process can help or hinder the victim. Some persons who have been robbed or have had their homes burglarized often become discouraged when the trial is delayed and delayed.

Some times they or other witnesses refuse to testify after the case has dragged on for months, thereby allowing the accused to remain free. Some people may stick with the process until its conclusion one time but then refuse to get involved again.

Next year's General Assembly should take a look at the criminal justice system and try to provide extra judges where needed, encourage the construction of more courtroom space in larger counties and perhaps rewrite portions of the state criminal code to move some offenses out of the trial system and into the judicial realm of magistrates. Such studies can be done while the legislators are considering the requests from the North Carolina Sheriffs Association.

The recommendations from the county law enforcement officials are good ones, especially where they deal with greater penalties for repeat offenders. But truly speedy trials hold the key to these recommendations becoming deterrents to crime.

Strength For Today

AIMING TOWARD CHRISTIANITY

The Bible has a great deal to say about hypocrites, and everything it says is loaded with condemnation. Many people today are so afraid of being called hypocrites that they actually practice a form of hypocrisy by refusing to acknowledge their religious beliefs.

Yet this reaction is at best overcompensation and at worst cowardice. The devout Christian, if he is entirely honest with himself and others, does not claim to be a Christian — he aims to be a Christian. There is a vast difference between these two situations. He may believe everything a Christian is supposed to believe, but he realizes, with sorrow, that he is fallible and will not be able to achieve his highest religious ideals.

This is not an excuse by which we are to comfort ourselves in our failings. It is a realistic facing of the facts. God does not expect us to be perfect, but he expects us to aim for perfection.

Bond Is Nice Gift Idea, But--

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The lady thought a $25 savings bond would make a nice gift for a favorite child, so she went to the bank and ordered one.

She found that Uncle Sam is a fussy old bureaucrat with as much Christmas spirit as Scrooge. And not much of a merchant either.

"What is your Social Security number?" the teller asked. She told the teller, assuming the number was required for routine, record-keeping purposes.

After paying $18.75, which would mature to the face amount over a five-year period, she accepted the bond, made out to her young friend.

"Do you have a gift envelope or a card to go with it?" she asked. She was disappointed to hear that no such accompaniments were provided. "Wouldn't it have been nice if only a Christmas envelope were supplied?" she thought.

On arriving home she looked at the bond again. There, in bold typewritten letters sitting atop the name of the recipient, was her Social Security number. "What in the world for?" she wondered. "On a gift?"

She had a friend contact the Savings Bond Division of the U.S. Treasury. A spokesman there said that, yes, a Social Security number had to be included on every bond.

"Why?" "It's for record-keeping purposes," he was told. He had thought so.

"But aren't the bonds numbered?" "Yes, but this is the way we retrieve the numbers. It's for the convenience of those people who look up the records."

Why, in an age of instant information retrieval, the number couldn't be computer-recorded, rather than stamped on the gift, wasn't explained.

It was explained, however, that the donor's number need not be stamped on the gift after all.

"You can have the recipient's number rather than your own printed on the bond," the spokesman said.

"But the child doesn't have a Social Security number?" "One can be opened in the child's name."

"But what if the child is only a friend? Would the donor of a gift want to intrude into another person's affairs?"

"This is a rule they've made and they're sticking to it," he said.

That ended that, but opened another subject. "We have had some problems and complaints," the spokesman conceded. "There haven't been all those complaints, but some."

The bond-buyer meanwhile, had decided to return the bond, with misgivings. She had thought a bond would be patriotic. She liked the idea of a gift that would grow or, at least, at 6 per cent interest, not evaporate overnight.

But, she said, she emphatically did not like the idea of having her "brand" on a gift. "My name, yes," she said. "If it said the bond was from me to him it would be appropriate. But not my number."

She returned to the bank. "I'm sorry," the teller said. (Continued on page 5)

WEATHER FORECAST — Mild weather is forecast Tuesday for the Rockies and the Southwest but most of the nation is expected to be cold. Snow is forecast in Wyoming and northern Colorado and the upper Great Lakes. Rain is expected for the Southeast Atlantic coast states. (AP Wirephoto Map)

B-1 bomber), CIA and Rhodesian chrome. As floor leader for President Carter, Wright will quickly fatten his ADA rating. But unlike Burton or Bolling, he will not protest if Carter scripps on social welfare programs in the interests of fiscal integrity.

More important, Wright has no interest in continuing the House or runaway usurpation of executive functions. Wright's voting record over the last four years of constant congressional assault on presidential prerogatives was restrained, cautious and outside the Democratic mainstream.

In addition, Wright moves the House power equation rightward. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois emerges as a major new force not only because of his appointment as assistant majority whip but by playing the decisive managerial role for Wright. The gradually vanishing Dixiecrat faction, led by Rep. Joe Waggoner of Louisiana, was on the winning side after years of defeat in the Democratic caucus. With Burton as leader, the Rostenkowskis and Waggoners would have been in Siberia.

Bewildered liberals hope Wright will be crushed between O'Neill, seeking to be the first strong Speaker since Sam Rayburn, and the liberal, aggressive new majority whip, Rep. John Brademas of Indiana. "I think Jim will be a very quiescent majority leader," one House insider told us, adding he doubts Wright will ever become Speaker.

But this seems the same underestimation preceding Wright's election Dec. 6. Vigorous and shrewd at age 53, he will not only immediately moderate the mood of the House but probably moderate it for a long time to come.

Instead, Washington was contacted again. "The Fed would have to give her special permission," the spokesman said. "I've never heard of a case in which they have."

"Then, what can...?"
"She can give the bond to the child. Once it's made out, the owner owns it, and that's it."

There was a pause. "Do you want the number of the people in Public Debt where the rule was made up?" he asked. "Drop it," said the caller.

Said the bond-buyer: "Merry Christmas, Uncle Sam."

Say 'Mormon Will' A Forgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An attorney for the estate of Howard Hughes says gas station attendant Melvin Dummar was involved in forging the mysterious Hughes "Mormon will" which names him as one of the billionaire's heirs.

Attorney James Dilworth also told Superior Court Judge Neil A. Lake on Monday that the FBI concluded 10 days ago that fingerprints on an envelope containing the document belonged to Dummar. The FBI, however, would not comment.

"It's been our belief for months that Mr. Dummar was, and had to be, involved in the forgery of this will," said Dilworth.

Dummar was not available for comment, but his attorney, Roger Dutton, suggested in Ogden, Utah, that someone may have attempted to transfer his client's thumbprint to the envelope. Dummar claims he found Hughes wandering in the desert in 1968, gave him a ride and loaned him a quarter. He was named in the handwritten will to receive one-sixteenth of his estate — an estimated $100 million or more. Dummar has said he had no knowledge of the document until it was made public.

Dilworth is a Texas attorney representing three of Hughes' maternal cousins in the hearings being conducted before Judge Lake to gather depositions prior to a Jan. 10 Las Vegas probate trial on the will's authenticity.

The court was also told that Dummar's fingerprints have shown up on a book and a magazine article about Hughes in the library of the college Dummar attended. Both publications contained samples of Hughes' handwriting.

Dutton said his client had never handled the envelope nor had any connection with the enclosed document. Dummar swore to that effect in a deposition last week in Salt Lake City.

"There's no way it could be (his fingerprints), unless somebody is trying through modern technological means to set up a case against my client," Dutton said. "We deny that Dummar has had anything to do with carrying forth the production or bringing of the will." Dutton also said the fingerprints on the book "Hoax" and on a 1971 Life magazine article on Hughes were explained by the fact that Dummar looked at some Hughes biographical matter at Weber State College in Ogden out of curiosity after being named in the will.

The crudely written will, which contains numerous spelling errors, was found in the Salt Lake City headquarters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) three weeks after Hughes' death on April 5. It has been called a fake by Hughes relatives.

Committee Holds Meet

The Executive Committee of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency met December 8 in Greenville.

The committee approved manuals for Project Review and Personnel Policies as well as an agency policy relative to public access to agency records and data. Approval of the Project Review manual enables the agency to begin reviewing new institutional health service proposals. Institutions such as hospitals, nursing homes and health departments which seek reimbursement from federal sources must first receive approval of the ECHSA when any new service or a capital expenditure of over $100,000 is proposed.

The committee also approved several changes in the corporation by-laws to establish a procedure for replacing board members who resign or are removed for cause.

The committee approved the nominations of four new members to the governing body. They are as follows: Mrs. Lucille Gorham, nominated by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners; L.H. Moseley and William Howell, nominated by the Region L Council of Governments; and Sidney Ellen nominated by the Northampton County Board of Commissioners.

A unanimous vote was made to endorse the activities of the Northeastern North Carolina Professional Standards Review Organization.

"Those decisions were disastrous."

The nine men are the justices of the Supreme Court, which Monday dealt two blows to women's rights groups. Those groups were still smarting from the court's ruling last week that employers with employee disability programs are not legally required to provide women with pregnancy benefits.

The court ruled unanimously Monday that divorced women are not entitled to all the Social Security benefits that go to married women.

The justices also let stand a Kentucky law requiring married women to adopt their husband's last name before receiving a driver's license.

Together with last week's decision on pregnancy benefits, these decisions are being pointed to by leaders of the women's movement as evidence that the court may no longer be as receptive to their complaints as it recently was.

Whether there is in fact a new trend on the court should become clearer in coming months when the court hands down decisions in some pending cases that have interested the women's movement.

The women's movement had fared well in the courts since 1971, most notably advancing when the Supreme Court ruled in 1973 that abortion is the private right of any woman in her first three months of pregnancy.

The court has since struck down various attempts by states to regulate abortions in the first three months.

Women's rights also made strides before the high court in areas such as equal pay for equal work, equal opportunities in education, including school sports, and equal treatment in the business community in hiring and credit practice.

But this month's decisions are being viewed as a drastic reversal.

Feminist leaders called the court's pregnancy decision the greatest single setback to the women's movement in the past five years.

Judy Lichtman, a spokeswoman for the Women's Legal Defense Fund, said after Monday's two decisions: "We have been hit by the legacy of some rather conservative appointments to the court."

"If this series of decisions says nothing else to us, it ought to raise the effort of feminists to work all the harder for passage of the ERA. We now see the need to operate with a different constitutional standard."

To which one can add only, amen, brother. Jimmy Carter has yet to mount his much heralded campaign for reorganization of the government. The reverend gentleman will find in his path a massive bureaucracy, massively entrenched. The everyday operations of government could not get along without it; but no incoming president can get along with it. Unless Mr. Carter is willing to press for Civil Service reform along the lines Byington recommends, Mr. Carter will discover that he has lost the war before he really begins to wage it.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mostly lower today in active trading. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 4.24 to 970 at 11:30 a.m. But declining issues held only a narrow lead over advances, as the losses centered on the blue chip issues in the Dow average.

Ruling Pleases Gilmore

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gary Gilmore, said to be "very happy" that the U.S. Supreme Court lifted its stay of his execution, broke his 25-day hunger strike after hearing the news.

But an obstacle of his own making stood between the convicted murderer and the firing squad — his bid for freedom on a legal technicality.

Attorney Ronald Stanger said he would file a further action today in connection with last week's request for his client's freedom under a state law requiring that executions be carried out no later than 60 days after sentencing.

A lieutenant at the Utah State Prison said Gilmore, who had refused solid food since Nov. 19 because he was prevented from contacting his girlfriend, ate an orange and two cheese and luncheon sandwiches just before midnight. He later had an apple and some milk.

The lieutenant said he didn't know why Gilmore had ended his fast, but he said the prisoner had still not talked with his girlfriend, Nicole Barrett. She was confined to a mental institution following their attempted double suicide last month.

Gilmore, who has consistently said he preferred speedy death to a life in prison, said in his request for a writ of habeas corpus last week that Utah officials had not free him because they failed to execute him within the required 60-day period.

That period expired on Dec. 6, the day Gilmore, 36, was to have died for killing a Provo motel clerk during a robbery last July.

But the high court stayed the execution on Dec. 3 so it could consider whether to hear an appeal of the sentence by Gilmore's invalid mother, Bessie, of Milwaukee, Ore.

In voting 5 to 4 to lift its stay Monday, the Supreme Court returned the case to the 4th District Court in Provo, where Gilmore was first sentenced. The high court said it was satisfied that Gilmore knew what he was doing when he accepted his condemnation to death.

But three dissenting justices said the key issue was whether Utah's capital punishment law was constitutional and that Gilmore's own desire to face the firing squad makes no difference.

The fourth, Justice Thurgood Marshall, said he disagreed specifically with Chief Justice Warren Burger's view "that Gilmore has competently, knowingly and intelligently decided to let himself be killed."

Stanger, who visited Gilmore Monday night, said his client was "very happy" the high court acted quickly.

Mrs. Gilmore's attorneys,

Stanford law professor Anthony Amsterdam and Salt Lake City lawyer Richard Glaque, declined comment.

Opponents of capital punishment said they would try to get another stay even though Gilmore doesn't want it.

"We're not going to give up at this point," said Jinks Dabney, an attorney for the Utah branch of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Efforts to prevent the execution also were expected from lawyers for other death-row inmates who fear Gilmore's death could hasten their own.

It was uncertain what the state's next move would be, although one attorney said Gilmore probably would face District Court Judge J. Robert Bullock for another execution date.

Carter Will Wear Jeans

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Carter says he will "absolutely" wear blue jeans in the White House — but not while he receives a French ambassador who's wearing a morning coat.

The President-elect also confided in an interview with ABC's Barbara Walters that he and wife Rosalynn usually sleep in a double bed and plan to continue doing so.

"It's much more comfortable in a double bed," he added. Miss Walters raised the question of blue jeans during the interview taped in Plains, Ga., Nov. 27 for airing Tuesday night.

"That's my normal attire," Carter said. "I did it all the time, all the time I was governor, you know."

But he hastened to add that "I would not embarrass the nation by having a formal conference with the French ambassador and my wearing blue jeans and his wearing a morning coat."

"I would do the proper things about dress," Carter also said he doesn't plan to stop jogging for exercise once he's in the White House.

Asked if he might be seen jogging around the White House in the morning, with reporters in tow, he laughed and replied: "Whether you'll see me or not, I don't know. But I'll be jogging."

"That's my normal attire," Carter said. "I did it all the time, all the time I was governor, you know."

Godette Set For Bowl Game

A third member of the East Carolina University championship football team has been tabbed for post-season play. All-America defensive end Cary Godette was invited yesterday to play in the American Bowl in Tampa, Fla., on January 2 at Tampa Stadium. Godette will report for practice on December 29.

Earlier, Reggie Pinkney was invited to play in Friday night's North-South Shrine Game in Pontiac, Mich., while Ernest Madison was invited to play in the Senior Bowl game January 8 in Mobile, Ala.

Godette was named to the Associated Press All-America team this year and was honorable mention as a junior. For three years he was named All-Southern Conference and all-state for the last two years.

The former Havelock High School standout finished his senior season with 16 tackles for loss for minus 96 yards. He had ten quarterback sacks, 37 unassisted tackles and 17 assists.

Godette is considered one of the nation's finest defensive ends from the 1976 season and is expected to be drafted into the pros.

The 5-11, 235 pounder is one of the most awesome players ever at East Carolina, and is also one of the most popular. He twice had major surgery and missed the 1974 season due to injuries. He almost decided not to return in 1976 and complete his last year of eligibility, but made the decision just before spring practice to finish out his career this season.

Godette has won nearly every award possible at East Carolina, including Most Valuable and Best Defensive in 1975, permanent captain in 1975, Most Outstanding Freshman in 1972, twice All-State, three times All-Southern, and finally All-America as a senior.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Godette of Havelock. Godette is the first player from East Carolina to be invited to this bowl game.

Kentucky Coach Suprised After Wildcats Stomp South Carolina

By HERSCHEL NISSESON

The losing coach, who should have been shellshocked, kind of expected his team to get blown out Monday night. It was the winning coach who was surprised.

"We're better than I thought. I've underestimated them and they've given me a pleasant surprise," Kentucky's Joe Hall said after his third-ranked Wildcats buried South Carolina 98-67.

"I have felt all along Kentucky will be ranked No. 1 before the season is over. They certainly looked the part tonight," said South Carolina's Frank McGuire, who isn't used to being treated so badly, and certainly not on his home court.

The only other member of The Associated Press' Top Twenty to see action was No. 15 Syracuse, which trounced Penn State 101-63 behind little Jimmy Williams' 20 points.

Kentucky, 5-0, jumped to a 10-0 lead and South Carolina was never able to recover. At the half it was 52-34 and at one point in the second half the Wildcats led by a whopping 35 points. Jack Givens paced Kentucky with 28 points and Mike Phillips added 23.

"This group of juniors has been playing together for the third year now and they've matured," Hall said. "We've been dominating some very good teams."

Jackie Gilloon topped 1-3

South Carolina with 17 points and freshman center Jim Graziano had 16.

The victory extended Kentucky's winning streak to 15, longest of any major college in the nation. The loss was the worst for the Gamecocks on their home court since they moved into the Carolina Coliseum eight years ago. The greatest margin of defeat previously was seven points.

Williams enabled 7-1 Syracuse to pull away from Penn State with an eight-point burst midway through the first half.

Elsewhere:

—Army boosted its record to 6-0, its best start in eight years, by routing Kings Point 76-52.

—Unbeaten Dayton placed four men in double figures and turned back New Orleans 82-68.

—Wichita State held off Long Beach State 83-78 behind Bob Elmore's 22 points.

—Freshman Dean Uthoff scored 22 points and grabbed 19 rebounds as Iowa State downed California 78-70.

—Sophomore Carl McPipe scored 25 points as Nebraska walloped Northwest Missouri 88-53.

—Houston, which beat Lamar by 10 points earlier in the season, doubled its pleasure and downed the Cardinals 103-83 although Otis Birdsong, one of the nation's scoring leaders with a 33.3 average, managed only 17 on 6-for-21 shooting.

—Matt Hicks scored 26 points to lead Northern Illinois over Wisconsin 81-57.

—Jim Wood's lay-up with 18 seconds left enabled Georgia Tech to nip St. Francis, Pa., 74-72.

—Unbeaten Rice won its sixth straight, trimming Northern Colorado 76-57 as Frank Thomas and Elbert Darden split 42 points.

—Unbeaten Illinois survived a late scare and nipped Cleveland State 72-70.

Track Star Picks Pirates

James Fields, an All-America track star from New Bern High School, has signed a grant-in-aid to attend East Carolina University.

Fields has recorded times of 9.4 in the 100 yard dash, 21.0 in the 220 yard dash and 47.7 in the 440 yard dash.

In the 1976 state high school meet, Fields won the 440 yard dash with a record time of 48.1.

"James is the most versatile, quality athlete ever in North Carolina," said track coach Bill Carson. "Carter Suggs was probably more well known, but James is just as good."

"All the great sprint schools in the country were trying for him, including such schools as Tennessee, Auburn, Arizona and Arizona State. But again, we uphold our tradition here at East Carolina of getting the finest sprinters in the state and the south."

"Certainly, one must credit New Bern coach Howard Matthews for the outstanding job he did with James. Part of the great ability of James must be attributed to his coach."

Other honors for Fields include Athlete of the Year at New Bern High in 1976, East Carolina Invitational Meet champion in the 100-yard dash, Most Valuable Player at New Bern High in track, Most Valuable in the Aurora Invitational, as well as All-America status last year.

Fields is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Perlie Fields of New Bern. He is the second signee by East Carolina this year. Earlier, Tony Burney of Terry Sanford High School in Fayetteville accepted a grant-in-aid to East Carolina.

These two will join the defending championship squad in the Southern Conference in outdoor track.

Some Signees Are Revealed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — College football recruiting has begun in earnest in the state, with North Carolina already boasting two of the top prospects.

The Tar Heels have the signature of Donnell Thompson, 6-4, one of the state's top defensive tackles, on a letter of intent.

Thompson, a 239-pounder, started at Lumberton High.

North Carolina has also signed running back Walter Sturdivant, who gained just under 1,100 yards for Richmond County, according to the Raleigh Times.

North Carolina State has signed Lin Dawson, 6-3, 205-pound tight end from Kinston. And the Times reported East Carolina has a commitment from offensive tackle Jim Robbins, a heavily recruited 230-pounder from Bertie Central High.

Appalachian State University reported it had signed quarterback Steve Brown and tight end Mike Sherman, both from Goldsboro High School.

The Times listed these signees:

Duke—Mike Fuqua (C-LB, 6-2, 208, Eden Morehead); Craig Browning (QB, 6-1, 180, Fayetteville Ross).

McNeese Gets Upset Victory

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Only 15,542 college football fans watched McNeese State upset Tulsa 20-16 in the first Independence Bowl, but they got a good show for their money.

McNeese won the game Monday night on Oliver Hadnot's 25-yard run with 37 seconds left. The Cowboys did it without the services of 16 regular-season players.

Ten McNeese seniors were ineligible for the game because they were redshirted as freshmen, and six others were kicked off the team recently for having a girl in a men's dormitory.

McNeese Coach Jack Doland said his remaining players were angry over talk that without the 16 players, the Cowboys were not a representative team.

"Tulsa just didn't have enough respect for us," Doland said. "This kind of irritated us."

Hadnot's last-minute touchdown was set up by Tulsa mistakes that left McNeese with a first down on the Tulsa 33.

On fourth-and-seven from midfield, McNeese, trailing 16-14, threw an interception. But Tulsa was guilty of pass interference and roughing the passer. McNeese accepted the roughing penalty and retained the ball.

Hadnot's last-minute touchdown was set up by Tulsa mistakes that left McNeese with a first down on the Tulsa 33.

one-yard run in the first quarter and Mel McGowen's 56-yard run with a blocked punt in the third.

McNeese got field goals of 42 and 34 yards by Jan Peebles, who was filling in for one of the 16 missing players, and a one-yard touchdown run by Mike McArthur.

McNeese quarterback Terry McFarland was voted the game's top offensive player. Terry Clark of Tulsa was named the most valuable defensive player.

Steelers Have Been Near End

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It is, in every sense of the word, the meeting of the irresistible force and the immovable object.

On this side, the Baltimore Colts, who pushed around almost everything in their path en route to the American Conference East title. They scored a mammoth 417 points, 58 of them last Sunday in the division clincher.

On the other side, the Pittsburgh Steelers, who can push back better than any other club in the National Football League, who reeled off nine straight victories — five by shutout. They allowed a minuscule 138 points including 28 in that astonishing streak to take the AFC Central title.

Something's got to give. The Colts, who gave the last time this situation arose, can look at the Steelers and say: "We know how you feel, guys."

A year ago it was the Colts who had just completed a nine-game streak. They roared into Pittsburgh and got beaten 28-10 in an AFC playoff opener. Now it's the Steelers who have the nine-game run on the line, and they're the ones on the road for the opener.

"We've been in the playoffs for nine weeks," said Coach Chuck Noll, meaning that the Steelers were always on the brink of extinction. "It's that same kind of feeling. Now everyone has it."

Baltimore Ted Marchbroda remembers what it was like last year. "That's why it's so unbelievable," he said of Pittsburgh's job. "The Steelers won six of those games with a rookie (Mike Kruczek) at quarterback, too. Sometimes you really don't know how good you are until you have to show it all."

The playoffs begin Saturday with Washington at Minnesota in the National Conference and New England at Oakland in the AFC. After Sunday's Oakland-Baltimore game, Los Angeles is at Dallas in a rematch of the 1975 NFC title game, won by Dallas 37-7.

Washington is returning to the playoffs after a one-year absence. The Patriots are in their first since 1963, when they were the Boston Patriots. They were a part of the American Football League and they were buried 51-10 by San Diego in the AFL title game.

Conley Girls Are Improved

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
HOLLYWOOD — D. H. Conley's Vikings are usually right up on the top of the Eastern Carolina Conference standings when it is all over.

But the Conley Valkyries are usually at the bottom of the girls' standing.

This year, new coach Norma Respass is out to see that this trend is reversed—at least for the girls.

"They only won four games last year, but I think we can do a lot better this year. We're still basically a young team, but we can put it all together before the year is up and pull off some surprises," the coach said.

There are only two seniors on the team, and just one of them is a starter, guard/forward Alice Costin. She is one of the few with major experience on the team.

Joining her in the starting lineup are two juniors with some experience, Annie Wooten and Mary McCracken, both of whom can play center and forward. Rounding out the usual starting five are Miriam Paramore and Annie Hardy, both guard/forwards.

The leading substitute is a sophomore Vegrinell Person.

"We are still learning," Ms. Respass said. "Our defense looks good, but we are a little slow. Still, I'd have to say that our future is bright."

"Our girls are hustling. They believe in themselves. Still, the lack of experience is hurting us in many areas," the coach said.

Costin rates as the fastest member of the team. "We can press on defense, and I thought that we would be able to fast break, but now I don't think we're quite fast enough. We are aggressive, however."

"We're getting loose for the shots, but we just need to work on technique. Our foul shooting is good. Rebounding is one of our strong points."

Ms. Respass also feels that she has a good bench. "I think our bench will compare with anybody in the conference," she said. Top reserves, aside from Person are Tina Dixon, Mamie Mitchell, Mary Carmon and Teresa Mills.

"We're still not used to doing a lot of things that I want us to do, but we're learning. These girls want to win and they are willing to work and listen."

As far as the conference race is concerned, Ms. Respass said she hasn't been around long enough to know, but from what she has heard, she rates Farmville Central as the team to beat.

"And I think as the season goes along, we can get better. We want to win tonight, and try to have a winning record going into the holidays. That's our goal."

Evert Picked SI's Athlete Of The Year

By KAROL STONGER
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — As Chris Evert says, someone always comes out of the woodwork in an Olympic year, sweeping national media awards for their prowess from the professionals.

This was an Olympic year, but Chris Evert beat the Olympians in being named Sports Illustrated's 1976 athlete of the year.

The award was announced Monday as Sports Woman of the Year, but Miss Evert beat out all of the men, too — amateurs and professionals. In fact, no man was in the final seven considered by SI's editors.

"Women are taking over the world," Miss Evert said. She is the first woman to own the honor outright since it was instituted in 1954. And she and Billie Jean King, who shared the award with UCLA basketball Coach John Wooden in 1972, are the only tennis players to be named.

"I think it's great," said Miss Evert. "It's great for tennis, and it's great for women. It shows we're appreciated by the press and the public."

Miss Evert, just a week shy of 22, has been in the forefront of international tennis since she was 16. For the last three years, she has been the top-ranked player in the world, winning Wimbledon, the United States, French and Italian opens twice each and the Virginia Slims championships three times. She also earned about $375,000 in tournaments, plus whatever the lode from World Team Tennis and endorsements might be.

"It was my best year," Miss Evert said.

She conceded that she does not have the natural athletic ability attributed to Ms. King and Evonne Goolagong. "But I am strong mentally. Concentration is my biggest asset on the tennis court," she said.

Miss Evert said she also got a big boost from working with Tony Roche of Australia, coach of the WTT Phoenix Racquets.

"He's proven he is the best doubles player in the world — he and John Newcombe have won every major doubles title," she said. "And he taught me to be a good doubles player."

Miss Evert and Martina Navratilova teamed for the Wimbledon title, her first major doubles crown. "I loved it. It was a new thrill for me."

Few thrills in tennis are left for Chris after only six years of international competition, but she says she wants to remain No. 1 and enjoy tennis.

King, in a telephone call from the Los Angeles office of attorney Norman Kaplan, told The Associated Press Monday night that Herbert Muhammad, Ali's manager, had given King 90 days to raise the money for the fight.

Details were incomplete, and it was not known where or when such a fight would be held or how much money would be involved.

But Kaplan, who represents World Boxing Association President Dr. Elias Cordoba of Panama, said: "Ali told the doctor he is going to send him a telegram today (Monday) to confirm it."

King said he met with Cordoba Monday at Kaplan's office and also had talked with Ali by phone in Chicago.

"We got to get the money together, but he (Ali) has agreed to forego any other bouts and fight Foreman," King said.

Ali May Return

NEW YORK (AP) — Don King, who promoted world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali's first fight with George Foreman, says he's been offered a chance to handle a rematch.

King, in a telephone call from the Los Angeles office of attorney Norman Kaplan, told The Associated Press Monday night that Herbert Muhammad, Ali's manager, had given King 90 days to raise the money for the fight.

Details were incomplete, and it was not known where or when such a fight would be held or how much money would be involved.

But Kaplan, who represents World Boxing Association President Dr. Elias Cordoba of Panama, said: "Ali told the doctor he is going to send him a telegram today (Monday) to confirm it."

"We got to get the money together, but he (Ali) has agreed to forego any other bouts and fight Foreman," King said.

Notre Dame Establishes Itself As Giant Killer

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer
It hasn't taken the Notre Dame basketball team long to establish itself as this year's collegiate giant-killer.

The Fighting Irish set about correcting their early-season non-ranking in this year's first game and they edged out highly-regarded Maryland on the Terrapins court. That earned Digger Phelps' crew a No. 7 ranking in the Associated Press nationwide poll of sports writers and broadcasters. Then the Irish really went to work.

Last Saturday, Notre Dame upset UCLA 66-63 at Pauley Pavilion. That victory earned the 5-0 Irish five first-place votes, 601 points and a No. 4 ranking in this week's poll. The Bruins fell from third to ninth place.

third straight week was Michigan. The Wolverines, 3-0, collected 34 first-place votes and 850 points. Michigan beat Vanderbilt 97-76 in its only action last week.

Marquette was second in the balloting, 122 points behind Michigan. The Warriors grabbed a pair of first-place votes for their 4-0 record which includes three victories last week.

Kentucky, 4-0 through Sunday's games, moved up a notch to third. The Wildcats received four No. 1 ballots and 662 points.

No. 6 Cincinnati, with a 5-0 record; seventh-ranked Alabama, which advanced three spots despite not playing a game; 7-0 Arizona, which grabbed eighth place, and 10th-ranked Wake Forest.

Wake Forest's Atlantic Coast rival, North Carolina, was voted No. 11 in the nation. The Tar Heels were followed in the voting by Nevada-Las Vegas, which dropped a 100-96 contest to Utah and subsequently fell from fifth to 12th; No. 13 Clemson; 14th-rated Maryland and surprising Syracuse, which came in 15th.

Defending national champion Indiana was beaten at home by Kentucky and fell from 13th to 16th place. The Hoosiers were slightly ahead of No. 17 Louisville; 18th-ranked Southern Illinois; No. 19 Arkansas and 20th-ranked St. John's of New York.

Has Joe Said His Goodbyes?

NEW YORK (AP) — Will Joe Namath of the New York Jets is giving his regards to Broadway from another National Football League town in the future?

"The owners are pretty unanimous about not wanting him back," The New York Daily News said in today's editions, quoting "a source close to the team."

The Jets and Namath wound up a miserable National Football League season Sunday, losing to the Cincinnati Bengals 42-3. The Jets' 3-11 record matched the worst mark in the club's history while Namath completed just 4 of 15 passes for a meager 20 yards and was intercepted four times.

"Even if I decide I want to play, it's not up to me, it's up to the Jets' management," said Namath, who had asked to be traded to the Los Angeles Rams before the season. "If this was my last game, I'm sorry to see it end this way. We've lost too many games too often. The people deserve better. I wish I'd be around whenever it got here."

Phil Iselin, president of the Jets, said "no decision will be reached about Namath until a new coach is named. At that time, the new coach, (general manager) Al Ward and myself will all sit down and decide what to do."

"We tried to grant Joe his wish and trade him to the Rams in the off-season, but when we talked to them they said he wasn't in their plans."

The Associated Press reported Monday that defensive coordinator Walt Michaels would be named to succeed Coach Lou Holtz, who resigned last week.

Despite more than 23,000 no-shows, some 31,067 fans turned out Sunday to pay their respects to the sore-kneed quarterback who single-handedly kept the old American Football League alive until the merger with the NFL and who guaranteed a Jets victory over Baltimore in Super Bowl III ... and then made good on his boast.

DH MEN FAIL YANKEES
NEW YORK (AP) — Designated hitters failed the New York Yankees in the World Series in their last 15 trips to the plate. Only designated hit for the American League champions came in the first game when Lou Piniella doubled and eventually scored on Graig Nettles' sacrifice fly.

Meanwhile, Dan Driessen did all the designated hitting for the victorious Cincinnati Reds, getting five hits in 14 efforts in four games. He also drew two walks and figured in four runs. Two of his hits were doubles and one a home run that gave the Reds a four-run lead in game three, won 6-2.

Yankee DH men left 11 players on base. DH Carlos May went 0 for 9, Elliott Maddox went 0 for 3 and Piniella 1 for 4.

Holliman Happy With Steady Work

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Acting is a precarious life, and actors tend to practice brooding, mulling and moaning when off-duty. Not Earl Holliman. He'd make Dale Carnegie seem a pessimist.

True, the costar of NBC's "Police Woman" did grouse a bit in a lunch interview about the fact that those who regularly appear in a TV series of ten are passed over for roles in theatrical movies.
"But I tell you, I get up every morning, and I really smile all the way to work," he said. "I like what I'm doing.... It's so nice after all these years to have a job to go to every day."

Holliman hails from Ten-nasas Swamp, La., which is quite a ways from Hollywood. One of 10 kids, raised by a roustabout oil worker in Texas after his natural father died, he's been star-struck since childhood.

And even after all these years of Hollywood life, he still recalls both the excitement and the date he spoke his first words in a movie.

It was June 5, 1952, he was a gangly 24-year-old newcomer, an obscurity in a Martin and Lewis comedy and the immortal line was, "Straight down the hall and turn to your left."

Since then, he's starred in two short-lived series of his own — "Hotel de Paris" and "Wide Country" — and acted in over 30 films, among them "The Rainmaker," "Giant" and "The Bridges at Toko Ri."

Ironically, the last film, a Korean war drama of 1955 vintage, marked the first time Holliman, a former Navy enlisted man, actually went to sea with the Navy.

He enlisted while under-age but was discharged when the Navy found out. A few years later, he signed up legally, became a radioman, but never went beyond the three-mile limit, he says.

"I finally went to sea aboard the Oriskany, an aircraft carrier, out in the South China Sea when we made 'Bridges,'" said Holliman, who spent part of his real Navy tour gaining acting experience in a little theater group at the Navy's base in Norfolk, Va.

"I really went back into the Navy the second time to get my G.I. Bill. I had no other way to go to college."

The money helped finance a semester at the University of Southern California, then acting studies at the Pasadena Playhouse. Odd jobs kept body and soul together until the breaks began.

He considers "Police Woman," now in its third season, "the best time of my life, ca-

CASSIDY IN RECENT FILM — Actor Jack Cassidy, right, rehearses nightclub scene with Broderick Crawford, center, and George Plimpton last November during filming at New York's Copacabana. reer-wise. Even when I had star billing (in films), I never had this kind of recognition. Or this kind of money."

True, the job leaves him pooped. The actor, dog-tired when interviewed, said on most days he rises at 5:30 a.m., if he's going to the studio, and doesn't usually knock off until 6 p.m. But he doesn't mind.

"I really feel like a survivor in this business," Holliman, 48, said softly. "I see people around me, people who were stars when I was beginning. Marvelous actors. They come in, do one scene and leave.

"But it's that kind of business. And I feel lucky."

Opening lead: ♠

Here's a chance to test your analytical skill. Study all four hands and then decide whether you would rather declare or defend four spades doubled.

East's three diamond opening bid left South with a nasty problem. His hand was too strong for a mere three spade overall. His distribution was wrong for a takeout double. His suit was not really good enough to leap to four spades. However, South decided that the last of these options was the least of evils, and West doubled in the expectation of a four-figure penalty.

Did you elect to defend? And did you lead your singleton diamond? If you did, declarer will have no difficulty making his contract. He wins the ace of diamonds and continues the suit. If you ruff high and exit with a plain suit, declarer can hold his losers to three trumps by continuing to lead diamonds. You can ruff, but you will score only your three high trumps.

It does not help to ruff the second round of diamonds and return a trump. Declarer wins and leads another diamond. If you ruff high again and clear dummy's last trump, declarer's only losers will be two trumps and a diamond.

You were on the right track if you chose to defend, but you had better have led a trump at the opening gun if you want to defeat the contract. That sacrifices a trump trick, but you get it back with interest. Suppose declarer wins, cashes the ace of diamonds and continues a diamond. You ruff and again lead a trump. If you defend carefully, your side must score at least two trump tricks and two diamonds.

There is a touch of irony to the hand. West doubled because of his trump stack, yet the only way to defeat the contract is to sacrifice at least one trump trick.

Have you been running into double trouble? Let Charles Goren help you find your way through the maze of DOUBLES for penalties and for takeout. ## He'll Remain Anonymous

HILLSBORO, Tex. (AP) — A certain salesman, who is also a church deacon and now has good reason to stay anonymous, stopped at a roadside trash barrel because he has a sense of civic duty and wanted to throw away a soda bottle without littering.

Down swooped FBI agents, Texas Rangers, sheriff's deputies, and highway patrolmen.

It was the same trash barrel that an extortionist had told a bank vice president to put $4,000 in about a half hour earlier — and the exact time the extortionist had designated.

"It's not every day that you look in a trash can and see money," the salesman said.

He got back in his car and began driving toward Hillsboro to return the money.

"Then I looked into my rear view mirror and saw I had a lot of company," he said.

The salesman was arrested for investigation of extortion, but was quickly released after easily passing a lie detector test in Waco.

But in the meantime, authorities lost their man and the extortionist lost his loot.

Academy Award For King Kong?

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It is easy for the Academy voters to give an Oscar to a Marlon Brando, a Jack Nicholson, a Gene Hackman. But how can I convince them to give one to a 40-foot ape who deserves it just as much? I need the help of the media."

Thus the plea of producer Dino De Laurentis after a preview of "King Kong." Is he serious, or is this just another hype for one of the most exploited movies of all time? He seemed sincere, and Hollywood has learned to take the dynamic Italian seriously.

It is doubtful if Kong will lumber onto the Music Center stage next March 28 to claim the statuette for best performance by an actor. But some previewers tend to agree with De Laurentis that the big beast ought to be considered for it.

"King Kong" opens in an unprecedented 1,043 theaters in the United States and Canada Thursday and in another 1,000 throughout the world before Christmas. Early reviews concur that the film is one of the best remakes ever, equal to and probably better than the 1932 classic.

Kong is the star, no doubt about it. He is at once a terrifying and endearing figure, bewildered victim of a rapacious world. The magic of the film craftsmen, led by Carlo Rambaldi and Glen Robinson, is complete; whether life-size or in miniature, Kong is totally convincing.

Fortunately he has no lines. Lorenzo Semple Jr. has given the other stars — Jeff Bridges, Jessica Lange, Charles Grodin — some of the most banal dialogue since the Captain Marvel serials. Grodin plays the villainous oil-giant operative with everything but a twirled mustache.

But Kong saves it all. The secret, says director John Guillermin, is in the eyes.

"If you believe the eyes, you believe the actor," reasoned the British-born film maker. Indeed the closeups of Kong are persuasive, largely due to the eyes of Rick Baker, the actor inside the man-sized monkey suit. Guillermin purposely introduced Kong in the film via a huge closeup of the eyes as the monster rampages through the forest en route to the sacrificial maiden.

Coffee Boycott Is Suggested

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Soaring coffee prices have prompted officials of at least two supermarket chains to suggest that their customers switch to other beverages to try to bring costs down.

In a move reminiscent of the sugar boycott two years ago, Kenneth Knese, area manager for the nine Justrite stores in Kansas City, Mo., posted signs in his outlets reading:

"We at Justrite feel coffee costs have become ridiculous. Therefore, we are asking you to select a substitute until coffee suppliers reduce their cost to you."

"We did the same thing when the price of sugar went up ... and we think it might work again," he said.

Spokesmen at stores in other areas of the country said they did not plan to encourage any formal boycott, but expected that consumers would revolt without any urging.

"The consumer is smart enough to know," said Ted Simmons of Colonial Stores in Atlanta. "I assume that when the price gets high enough, they'll say the hell with it."

Sugar prices climbed to record levels in late 1974, prompting consumer groups and some stores to urge a boycott. The higher prices — more than $3 for a five-pound sack of sugar — were blamed on increased demand. Consumption dropped and so did prices. By this fall, the average retail price for a five-pound bag of sugar was about $1.15, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Coffee prices, meanwhile, started rising in the summer of 1975 after a frost in Brazil destroyed much of the crop that would have been harvested this year. Political unrest in Africa also cut the world supply.

Recent increases have boosted prices to about $3 a pound at the wholesale level. Retail prices still are under $3 a pound in most areas — partly because merchants are selling cheaper, existing supplies and partly because they are using coffee as a "loss leader" to get customers into their stores.

The Albany and Kansas City stores aren't the only ones urging a boycott. U.S. Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., head of the subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs, launched an inquiry into the increase in the price of coffee.

He noted that there had been several special promotions on coffee recently and said: "If there is a shortage, why are there discounts? The quickest and surest way for consumers to avoid being squeezed to the last drop is to vote with their dollars — refuse to pay the prices."

Socialist Cabinet To Stay In Office

Boa Helps To Teach Love

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — A 4½-foot boa constrictor named Charlie is helping teach a class of eight emotionally disturbed children how to behave — through love, not fear.

When the children behave well, they get to play with Charlie as a reward. Being forbidden to play with the snake is a punishment.

Teacher Stuart Bienhacker said one of his pupils gave him the idea of bringing his pet snake to Randolph Elementary School.

"He was the most hyperactive child in the program," Bienhacker said. "I didn't know what to do with him. He kept talking about how much he loved snakes, and I thought Charlie might be a way of teaching him responsibility and helping him to adapt socially."

Good behavior in Bienhacker's class earns points which are put toward a choice of rewards. Playing with Charlie is the most popular.

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Socialist Premier Mario Soares says his minority cabinet will remain in office despite the slight reduction in its support in local elections this week.

Soares claimed that his party's 33.2 per cent of the votes Sunday, a drop from 36.9 per cent in the parliamentary election last April, represented an effective victory for the policies he has followed since becoming premier four months ago.

"Our support is countrywide and especially well entrenched in the large cities," Soares said in a television debate Monday night with leaders of the runner-up parties — the centrist Social Democrats, the Communist United People's Electoral Front and the conservative Social Democratic Center.

"Our party represents the only solution for the country," Soares declared.

Virtually complete election results gave the Communists 17.7 per cent of the vote, up 2.5 per cent from their showing in

Nineteen Pitt Schools Presented For Accreditation

Nineteen Pitt County Schools were presented for accreditation at the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools held December 12-15 in Atlanta, Ga.

Seventy-two public elementary schools and eighteen public high schools were presented as new members of the Association.

According to Marie Haigwood, Deputy Assistant State Superintendent for Instructional Services, Department of Public Instruction, accreditation by the Southern Association represents a measure of excellence over and above the minimum standards required by the state.

A voluntary effort on the part of the school staff, accreditation by the Southern Association requires a self-study using standards and criteria designed by the accrediting agency. Once the self-study is completed, a committee of educators visits the school and files a report which is reviewed by State accreditation committees and the regional agency.

The Southern Association, one of six regional accrediting agencies in the nation, serves Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia.

Pitt County Schools presented for accreditation include the following: D.H. Conley High School, Ayden Elementary School, North Pitt High School, Ayden Grammar School, Belvoir Primary School, Belvoir Grammar School, Bethel Elementary School, Chicod School, A.G. Cox Elementary School, Falkland Elementary School, Farmville Middle School, Grifton Elementary School, G.R. Whitfield Elementary School, H.B. Sugg Elementary School, W. H. Robinson School, Sam D. Bundy School, Pactolus Elementary School, Stokes Elementary School, and Stokes-Pactolus Grammar School.

With that, Ray's Memphis attorney said the only remaining hope his client has is to tell everything he knows to the committee, in hopes that it will

Wants To Be Ambassador

BOSTON (AP) — Elliot Richardson, the man who jokes about not being able to hold down a job, says his "one firm career goal" is to return to England as ambassador.

However, the U.S. Commerce Secretary didn't say he wanted it more than being governor of Massachusetts or president of the United States, two posts he's considering running for.

Richardson has served as undersecretary of state; secretary of health, education and welfare; secretary of defense; and attorney general in addition to the ambassadorship and his current position.

At a news conference Monday, Richardson said he wanted eventually to be renamed ambassador to England, a position he held in the Ford administration.

"I am available anytime between now and my 76th birthday," said Richardson, 56. "By the time I am an elder statesman, perhaps even a Democratic president would be willing to appoint me."

Richardson also admitted he's been seeking advice from influential Republicans on pursuing the presidency in 1980.

Govm't Could Cause Shortage

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — The federal bureaucracy is smothering America's goal of energy self-sufficiency, an action which may result in severe energy shortages within a decade, officials have predicted.

Godwin Williams Jr., power manager of the Tennessee Valley Authority, said Monday regulatory problems and economic pressures have forced utilities to cancel generating plants which could have produced more than 100,000 megawatts of electricity.

As a result, the possibility exists of severe power shortages in the next 10 years in some parts of the country, he added.

Williams cited delays, higher costs, and a maze of regulatory requirements as reasons for reduced power plant construction. Others, however, pointed more directly at the federal bureaucracy.

Dr. James S. Cross of Washington, D.C., a spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute, said governmental interference in the fuel marketplace has decreased supplies of domestic fuel.

"It has created a nightmare of confusing and often conflicting, regulations which are tending toward government ownership and operation of the private energy sector," Dr. Cross said in a speech to an Energy Awareness Seminar here.

Cross said America's reliance on foreign oil has increased from 36 per cent to 40 per cent of demand in the three years since the Arab embargo. And he said an estimated 43.5 per cent of the nation's oil will be imported next year.

Legislation artificially holding down the price of oil and gas have reduced exploration, increasing the reliance on foreign oil, said Cross.
