Shultz Says Force 'May Be Necessary'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz, faced with a stony European rebuff of sanctions against Libya, says the United States has just about exhausted its economic ammunition and may need to use force against terrorism.

"We are prepared to use the measures that are effective and are necessary," Shultz told a news conference Thursday. "Force is not always the best means, but it may be necessary."

He repeated Reagan administration charges that Libya was sponsoring terrorists, including those who attacked the Rome and Vienna airports in December, and described the U.S. response as "gradually escalating economic sanctions against Libya."

But he added, "I think by this time we're pretty much at the end of the road and all of the things one can think of economically have pretty much been done now."

On the use of economic warfare against terrorism, he said, "No one contends that these actions by themselves are likely to have a decisive effect."

Within the Reagan administration, Shultz has been one of the leading advocates of measured and focused military retaliation against terrorism. The Defense Department has stressed the difficulty of using U.S. might in such cases, especially when it might bring the United States into conflict with well-armed nations such as Libya, which has a large air force.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a constant critic of the Reagan administration, suggested Thursday that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy be assassinated, a move that White House spokesman Edward Djerejian quickly called "not a policy option of the United States government."

Metzenbaum said in a broadcast interview, "Maybe we're at the point in the world where Mr. Khadafy has to be eliminated," and said he was using the term "literally."

Despite explicit allied rejection of sanctions against Libya, Shultz said he was sending Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead to Europe to try to persuade governments to join the effort. None of the allies have so far.

The trip will begin early next week, and West Germany, Britain, Italy, France, the Netherlands and Belgium are on the list of nations he may visit. Italy, West Germany and France are among Libya's biggest trading partners.

Italy, which is second only to the Soviet Union in arms sales to Libya, on Thursday said it would be careful not to export to Libya what Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti called "particularly dangerous arms" during the heightened tension between

Attorneys Request Extension

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Attorneys for the consolidated Pitt County Board of Education on Thursday filed for a 20-day extension for response to a lawsuit filed against them in December by a local minority rights group.

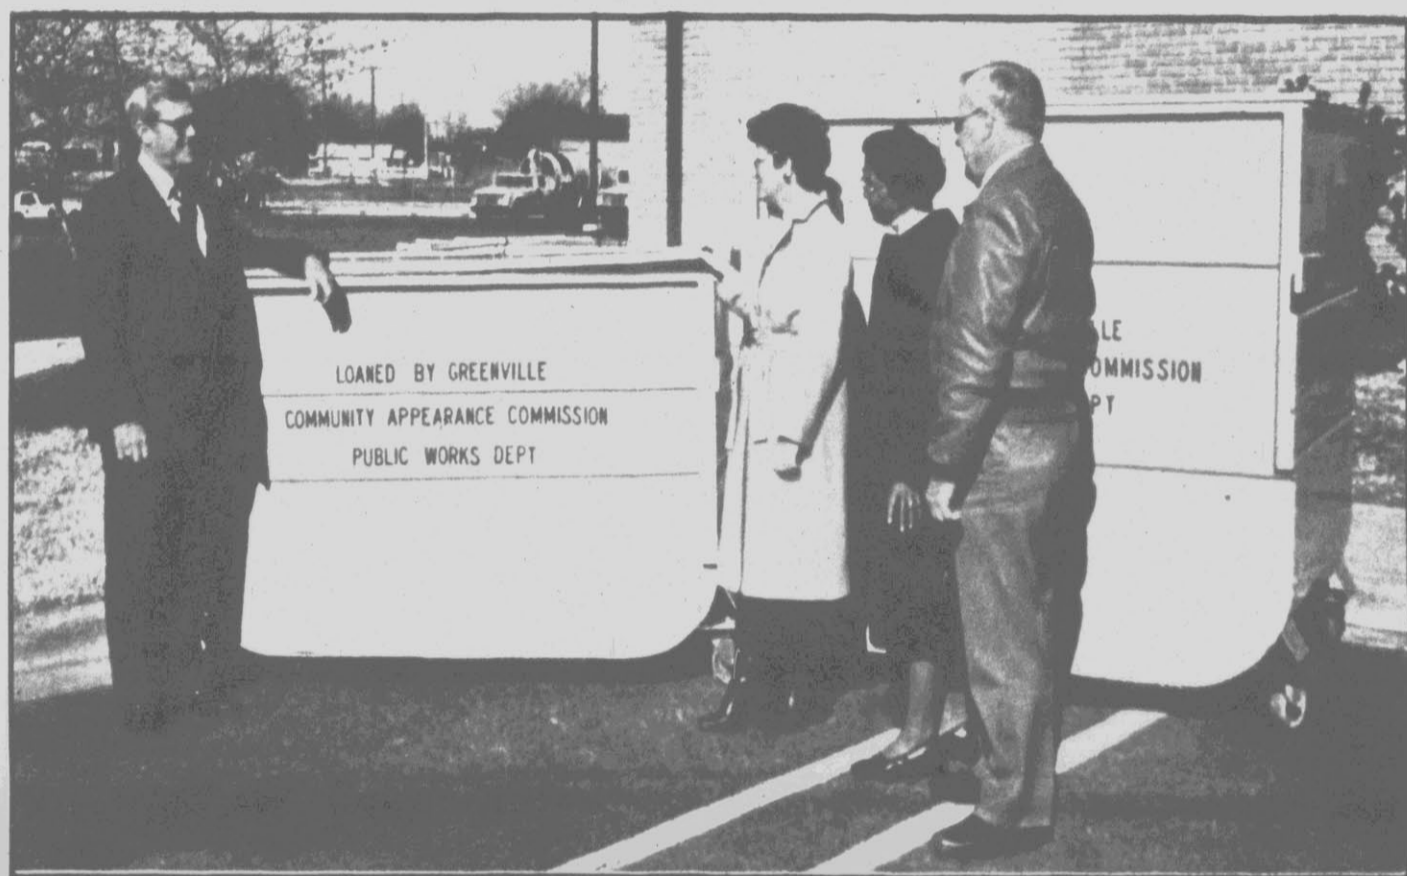

According to attorney Richard Schwartz of the law firm Tharrington, Smith and Hargrove of Raleigh, the request for an extension was filed in the clerk's office for U.S. District Court in Raleigh. A spokesman for the clerk's office said today a decision on granting the extension had not been made.

The board agreed Wednesday to retain the Raleigh law firm to represent its members, and Schwartz, who is handling the case, said his "unfamiliarity with the case and the fact that I haven't had a chance to meet with my clients" prompted the request for an extension. An extension of this type is usually routine, he said.

A complaint filed Dec. 18 in U.S. Eastern District Court in New Bern by the Concerned Citizens for Justice, a local minority group, alleges that the board is operating illegally because three additional minority members appointed in June 1985 are in violation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. According to that act, the U.S. Justice Department must "preclear" or approve changes made in a board's structure or method of election.

Based on Justice Department policy, official approval is not given until a change is ratified by a legislative

Khadafy Blasts 'Threats'

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy said Libya may counter American economic sanctions by freezing all U.S. assets, and said more American "threats" could push the North African country closer to embracing communism.

At a late Thursday news conference, Libya's radical leader accused the United States of endangering security in the Mediterranean and of acting like a "stinking, rotten crusader" toward Arabs.

"This hostile position can only be explained in racist and crusade terms," Khadafy added, referring to the 11th-13th century armed expeditions by European Christians to seize the Holy Land from Moslems.

On Tuesday, Reagan ordered U.S. companies and an estimated 1,000 to 1,500 American citizens out of Libya, and froze Libyan assets in the United States and in branch banks overseas. The actions were in retaliation for Libya's alleged sponsorship of terrorism.

U.S. and Israeli officials accuse Libya of backing the Abu Nidal Palestinian faction they blame for the Dec. 27 massacres at the Rome and Vienna airports. Nineteen people were killed, including four terrorists and five Americans.

In reaction to the American sanctions, Libyan legal specialists are studying responses that include the possibility of freezing U.S. assets, Khadafy told reporters invited to an office in his heavily guarded barracks.

American sanctions "will not affect us since they were taken into consideration years ago," Khadafy said. "Reagan is stupid enough to believe that (sanctions) were something that were unexpected."

(U.S. sources have predicted Khadafy might seize the assets of American oil companies in Libya, estimated at about $400 million.)

Khadafy spoke at the news conference in Arabic, and his remarks were translated into English. Later, he was asked in an interview with a group of Western journalists how the conflict with the United States would

School Grant Funds Missing

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

An investigation is under way by the State Department of Public Instruction into the disappearance of $25,000 in private funds earmarked for South Greenville school but were being held by the state.

According to Reeves McGlohon of the associate state superintendent's office, the department is "currently involved with the State's Auditor's office in investigating the grant monies that were to be made available to South Greenville." The investigation was initiated by the Department of Public Instruction in early December and also involves the California State Auditor's Office, he said.

The funds, part of a three-year $100,000 studies enrichment grant to the school from the Atlantic-Richfield Co., were being held by the state for South Greenville School. The funds were designated for a Tidewater Virginia Study Tour to Williamsburg, Va., for fifth-graders. The trip has been canceled, say school officials, meaning deposits for reservations have been forfeited.

"The issue involves one of our employees but it is in appropriate for me to talk with specificity at this time about the situation," McGlohon said. "There is no hint of impropriety on the part of South Greenville or the school system."

McGlohon said the investigation "does not involve state monies or any monies that came to the state." The funds "supposedly came from Atlantic-Richfield" and "should have gone directly to Greenville City Schools," he said.

"The role of the state Department of Public Instruction was as an intermediary between a funding source and the school," McGlohon said. For this reason, he said, "no state funds are available or in place to subsidize that activity."

"We are sorry that the students missed this opportunity but there are no state funds that can be utilized," McGlohon said.

South Greenville teachers and parents involved with the project say they are upset and plan a meeting for 7:30 p.m. Monday in the school's cafeteria.

Greenville Superintendent Eddie West said that his office "has made efforts to find resources to give the fifth-graders this opportunity" but "that amount of money is not available at the county level." West said he made an unsuccessful "personal appeal for funds for the students of the fifth grade."

"It is regretful that events beyond the control of the Greenville Board of Education and the school system are causing students to be denied an enriching educational opportunity," West said. "I recognize the hard work and devotion on the part of the teachers for this project."

Church Denied Zoning Change

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Public hearings on rezoning requests constituted the major field of action by the Greenville City Council at its meeting Thursday night, with action taken to approve four requests and to deny one. Additionally, annexation was approved of one 15-acre area.

The rezoning request denied was that of a 2.76-acre tract on the western side of Memorial Drive north of Country Club Drive, property owned by the Gloria Dei Lutheran Church. H.D. Weaver, spokesman for the church, was seeking to have the property rezoned from its present R-15S (residential, single family) zoning, to Office and Institutional (O&I-II).

Weaver told the Council the church has owned the property for some time, and that it had become apparent the membership could not at any foreseeable time have sufficient funds to build a church at the site.

Connally Branch, agent representing the church group, contended that the current residential zoning would make the property basically unmarketable, due to the prohibitive cost of the property. Branch said it would be readily marketable with an O&I zoning.

Area residents speaking against approval of the rezoning request were Kenneth Haigler, Billy A. Hurst, Ernest Holt, David W. Hawkins, Dr. Seymour Bakerman, and Ann Dunn on behalf of her mother, Mrs. Albion Dunn.

Arguments they presented included a desire to maintain the residential status of the neighborhood, which they say goes back in time to nearly 50 years ago; claims that representatives of the church did not seek the opinions of area residents of the area prior to making the rezoning request; the fear that a domino effect could come about in that other property would be rezoned into non-residential status, and that when it comes to property, churches are involved in a business proposition like any other buyer or seller.

Holt, who said he was Lutheran at the time the property was bought by Gloria Dei Lutheran Church, noted the property was actually purchased on behalf of an out-of-area Lutheran mission, not by the local membership.

The council unanimously denied the church's rezoning request.

In the rezoning request for an additional 50 feet (4/10ths of an acre) requested by Carolina Dairy Products in an area west of Greenbriar Subdivision from multifamily residential to highway commercial, area resident Steve Simonds opposed granting approval, saying he felt the requested rezoning was not compatible with the character of the neighborhood.

Earlier action by the Council approved rezoning of a larger land area, adjacent to the 50-foot strip, also for rezoning to highway commercial, and unanimously approved the request sought for the additional strip of land.

The other three rezoning requests, all without opposition, were approved. They are:

•Rezoning from O&I to downtown commercial fringe a 2.55-acre tract located in an area bounded by Charles Boulevard, 10th Street, Charles Street and 11th Street. The request was on behalf of Herbert Wilkerson and others.

•Rezoning of a 8,393-square-foot tract, Lot 6 of Arlington Plaza Subdivision, from O&I to shopping center. The request was made by J. Bryan Kittrell III.

•Rezoning of a request by Greenville Industries Inc. to rezone a 46-acre tract of land located off the western right-of-way of N.C. 11, north of Greenville and adjacent to Staton House Fire Station from residential/agricultural to unoffensive industry. John Chaffee, speaking for Greenville Industries, said the area would in time be a desirable one for certain types of industry, especially when the extension of the U.S. 264 bypass was completed.

The annexation approved, following a public hearing without opposi-

Former Fraternity Housemom Keeps Up With Her 'Sons'

By GAIL SULLIVAN McKISSICK
Stillwater NewsPress
STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Her "sons" and their sons and grandsons number many hundreds now. They are scattered all over the country and have lived in many corners of the world.

At her retirement in 1961, Katherine C. Woods held the distinction of the longest service as a fraternity housemother in America in what began for her as a temporary position in 1924. She believes the record still holds today.

Still beloved by her sons, the men of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, she was honored recently with a reception at the chapter house at Oklahoma State University. And Mayor Calvin Anthony proclaimed her 95th birthday as Katherine C. "Mom" Woods Day.

Although she retired almost 25 years ago, she continues to be the confidante of the young men of SAE and is cherished by active members and alumni. They still visit at her home near the fraternity, learn the history of their chapter and receive the benefits of her wisdom.

Born and reared in Oklahoma City, she is the daughter of a pioneer father, a Sooner, she says, who rode in on horseback in 1889. Her mother came in on the first train and they met and married in 1889. "I really was a pioneer baby," she says proudly.

It was providence that led her to her position as housemother in 1924, she says. She agreed to act as housemother on a temporary basis for a local fraternity, Chi Beta.

"They were the loveliest boys," she says, "the finest young men."

Some were older than she, having served in World War I. "But I didn't let them know it," she says. It was a challenge too, she says, to help the men with the petition and subsequent activities required to make the chapter an affiliate of SAE.

She still speaks with emotion about the closing of the fraternity house during World War II and saying goodbye to the fraternity members, some of whom might never return.

"I was as much in the army as they were," she says, recalling the 800 lithographed newsletters she sent them each month. The newsletters were financed by the alumni.

Sometimes the correspondence brought fraternity brothers together. Once, when Mrs. Woods noticed that two of the men had the same APO number, she put them in touch with each other. Far from home, they had a tearful reunion on the Italian Riviera, she says. After the war, the fraternity house was a dormitory for independents. One day, eight of the men appeared — one still on crutches — and persuaded those in charge to allow them to live in the basement of the house. Mrs. Woods recalls being careful not to show partiality, but she says she had a special soft spot for those eight who had returned from the war.

Mrs. Woods was housemother to oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr. and former Oklahoma state senator Robert Murphy.

Testimony from some of the men shows that she played no small part in their lives. Byrle Killian, now a member of the Oklahoma State Board of Regents, says when he was a senior he practiced lectures for an adult Vo-Ag class in Perkins with her.

"She was my critic and my student," he says, adding that he uses something that she taught him every day.

One of the men returned years later to say, Mrs. Woods recalls, "I've been a success in my position, and I've come back just to tell you I would not have been a success if it hadn't been for you and the training you gave us."

Milford "Micky" Smith, notes that each SAE fraternity brother had to memorize "The True Gentleman" and recite it as a pledge. "She made each of us one," he said.

In reflection, Mrs. Woods says her sons were always "so kind, so good, so precious, and they still are."

"I love that house because it was my home for so long. It was a glorious life; the Lord has been good to me. I can't believe I'm 95," she says. Except for some sight and walking problems, she says she doesn't feel her age.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Mom Says Child's Room Is His Castle

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a 13-year-old son. I believe if a child wants his bedroom to be messy, with clothes and other belongings strewn all over the place—on chairs, doorknobs, the floor—so be it.

The bedroom is supposed to be a private, comfortable place a child can call his own. How can that be when parents holler, scream, yell and threaten at whatever trips their trigger?

My son will be brought up to know that his bedroom is his—not mine.

I don't know how many others would agree with me, but I was raised by a mother who screamed, yelled and threatened me if my room wasn't in perfect order, and all I have is bad memories of my childhood.

MODERN MOM
IN ENID, OKLA.

DEAR MOM: Kids (especially messy ones) will love your letter. Mothers will hate it. Me? I say, keep the doors to the kids' rooms closed, and go in once a week to rake them.

I would, however, insist on one rule: If there is any snacking in the bedroom, all dishes and leftovers should be taken to the kitchen before bedtime.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I am 28 and the mother of two darling children. I've been happily married for five years and I really love my husband. He's good to me and the kids, but here's the problem: I am very much attracted to my husband's brother, and he's attracted to me. We kid around and flirt a lot, but haven't done anything about it except maybe a quick kiss in the kitchen. Abby, it's getting harder and harder to fight these feelings.

Maybe if I have a fast fling with this guy and get it over with, I will finally get him out of my system. What do you think?

ALL IN THE FAMILY

DEAR ALL: I think you should try harder to fight these feelings. No flirting, no eye contact, no kidding around, and no quick kisses in the kitchen or anywhere else.

Forget the fast fling. It could fling your marriage right into the divorce court.

***

DEAR ABBY: Will you please settle an argument between my daughter and my husband? It's about the J.C. Penney Co.

My daughter claims that the "J.C." in the J.C. Penney Co. stands for John Cash.

My husband insists that the "J.C." stands for Jesus Christ. Who is correct?

EDIE FROM
DAYTONA BEACH

DEAR EDIE: Neither, but your daughter comes closer. Although the founder of the J.C. Penney Co. was the son of a Baptist minister and a very religious man, the "J.C." in his name stands for James Cash, not Jesus Christ.

***

DEAR ABBY: Many people down here in the deep South who have arranged their lives around shift work owe you a debt of gratitude for helping to eliminate the old concept that uninvited guests should be welcomed with open arms at all times.

Now we need your help in another area: Recently I attended services in a small Protestant church where a very sincere layperson delivered an impassioned address, closing with, "Would those who would like to rededicate their lives, please come forward and kneel at the altar?"

As I looked around the church, I saw that about three-fourths of the congregation was over 55 years of age.

As anyone involved in the health care field can tell you, their reason for not wanting to kneel could range from A to V—arthritis to vertigo.

Please inform the clergy to consider the age of most church congregations and use the phrase, "Come forward and gather at the altar" instead of kneel. I'm sure the response will be greater.

ARTHRITIC WITH VERTIGO

DEAR ABBY: Whew! Truly unbelievable is the only way to describe the response. In the past weeks, over 30,000 letters have been received! Your readers are wonderful, Abby!

As you well know, I can't answer all these letters personally, but with help from my project officers, we've been able to distribute letters throughout the entire island of Okinawa, and although I can't assure a reply to each and every letter, we are doing our best to get them all answered.

I just want to say that you and your readers have made a lot of Marines and sailors on this end of the world very happy. Thanks again!

SEMPER FIDELES,
MEL IN OKINAWA

DEAR ABBY: The success of "Operation Dear Abby" has been phenomenal, with mail pouring in at the rate of some 3,000-plus letters per day. Corporal Hebert has assigned the distribution to the Marine camps here on the island, and personnel from Camp Schwab in northern Okinawa to Camp Kinser in southern Okinawa are receiving your letters. The boost of morale has been profound, and a lot of us now feel that "America cares."

Undoubtedly, a lot of friendships will be forged from this effort. Some will last a lifetime, others for only a fortnight. From the grandmother and the widow, to the sweet 16-year-old, we thank you for your interest in our profession and our duty. The hundreds of pictures, your descriptions of your towns, and the accounts of your lifestyles are relished.

America, we are truly proud to be in a capacity to serve you and protect our way of life. A quote says it all too well: "Freedom has a sweet savor that the protected will never know." Abby, please sign us ...

OKINAWA, JAPAN

DEAR ABBY: Here's my advice to people whose neighbors have no covering on their bathroom window and are providing a free show for the folks next door:

One picture is worth a thousand words. The neighbors who are getting a free show should take several pictures of the "free show," then give them to their neighbors, saying the pictures will be entered in a photo contest and their opinion of which one is best would be appreciated.

CHUCK HOWARD,
BROOKFIELD, WIS.

DEAR CHUCK: While an uncovered window is an invitation to violation of privacy, taking pictures of a "free show" is a blatant violation that could be cause for legal action, so I'm chucking your advice, Chuck.

Chinese Cooking: The Microwave Way

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
"The Hong Sisters Microwave to the Orient" by Lucy Hong Mow and the late Mary Hong Saunders is a privately published spiral-bound cookbook that first appeared in 1976. It has been so successful that it is now in its 4th printing.

When I talked to Lily Hong Mow over the phone recently I discovered that she is a school of nursing educator. Cooking is one of her important side interests. Because she has cooked for her husband and their three children (now grown) she has had plenty of practice.

Her cookbook is the outcome of her interest in adapting Chinese recipes — many of them learned from her mother — to microwave cooking. These are dishes that "provide variety in taste and are commonly served in Chinese homes." Here is one we tried in our own kitchen with good results.

SHRIMP WITH BLACK BEAN SAUCE

- 1 pound fresh shrimp
- 1 tablespoon dried black beans, (dow see), rinsed
- 1/2 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
- 1/2 tablespoon minced garlic
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 1/2 pound ground pork
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch mixed with 1 tablespoon water
- 1 tablespoon curry powder
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 2 green onions, cut into 1-inch lengths
- Shell and devein shrimp.
- Mash together black beans, ginger and garlic; mix in soy sauce and sugar.

Put oil in a 2-quart casserole; add black bean mixture; cook in a microwave oven on high, uncovered, for 1 minute.

Blend pork with cornstarch mixture; add to casserole; stir and break up pork; cover, cook on high, for 3 minutes; stir once.

Add shrimp, curry and water to casserole; toss to blend flavors; cover and cook on high for 6 minutes, stirring once.

Add egg and green onions; toss, cook 1 minute. Spoon sauce over shrimp before serving.

The timing in this recipe applies to a 600- to 650-watt microwave oven.

Teen Killer Goes To S.C. Electric Chair

By WILLIAM STRACENER
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Condemned killer James Terry Roach, whose case touched off renewed national debate about the death penalty for juvenile offenders, was executed before dawn today after expressing hope his death "someday save another kid."

Roach, who was 17 when he pleaded guilty to the murders of two Columbia teen-agers, was pronounced dead at 5:16 a.m., corrections officials at Central Correctional Institution in Columbia said. But he maintained from his arrest until his death that he was not the triggerman.

The 25-year-old Seneca native struggled to read his final statement while strapped in the chair as his attorney held it for him.

"I pray that my fate will someday save another kid that ends up on the wrong side of the tracks," Roach said in his statement. "To the families of the victims, my heart is still with you in your sorrow. May you forgive me just as I know that my Lord has done."

David Bruck, one of Roach's attorneys, said the inmate wanted to feel his death had some meaning. He learned about two 15-year-old girls on Indiana's death row and hoped that his execution might spare them and other youthful offenders around the country, he said.

Bruck witnessed the execution and said Roach had maintained his calm until the end. "From somewhere deep within himself, Terry Roach summoned a great deal of courage. . . I thought he was quite brave," Bruck said.

Roach laughed nervously while waiting for the sentence to be carried out, and tapped his right fingers on the arm of the chair intermittently, said media witness Sean Calles of WIS-TV.

"He was very calm about everything," said Calles. "He showed no emotion."

About 220 death penalty proponents and 60 foes of capital punishment gathered outside the century-old prison on the Congaree River in the chilly darkness. Many proponents were in a festive mood. "Let's send up another one while the generator's still warm," shouted one proponent in the crowd.

On the opponents side, some held candles, but there was only silence.

The proponents' group began singing "Na na na na, na na na na, hey, hey, goodbye," as a hearse quietly drove by with Roach's body.

Deputy Corrections Commissioner Doug Catoe said that open lines were kept to the state attorney general's office and the governor's office, but no calls came.

The current was turned on at 5:07 a.m. and Roach's "body stiffened, went rigid, strained against the strap and remained that way until the current turned off a minute later," said media witness Jim Faile of the Darlington News and Press.

"His body slumped when the current was turned off. When the current was reapplied, his body became rigid again. There was some steam. Whiffs of steam (or smoke) appeared to come from the electrode on his ankle and his right leg above the strap took on a purple color."

Richland County Sheriff Frank Powell, whose office prosecuted the case, witnessed the execution. He said death in any form is terrible, and he wished the event could be filmed and showed to every prisoner in the United States "to show the finality of a life of crime."

Roach's execution came after the U.S. Supreme Court turned down his last legal appeal Thursday night and after last-minute pleas for mercy to Gov. Dick Riley from Nobel laureate Mother Teresa, former President Jimmy Carter and the secretary general of the United Nations.

With two dissenting votes, the U.S. Supreme Court refused late Thursday to grant a stay.

Roach was the second person put to death in South Carolina and the 51st in the nation since the death penalty was reinstated.

Roach's attorneys argued that his life should be spared because he suffered from the mentally debilitating Huntington's disease and also because international accords prohibit the execution of those who are younger than 18 at the time of their offense.

Similar arguments made to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals earlier Thursday also were unsuccessful.

Several international human rights groups, the secretaries-general of the United Nations and the Organization of American States, Mother Teresa and former President Carter made appeals on Roach's behalf.

But Riley refused to grant clemency for Roach, as he refused co-defendant Joseph Carl Shaw, who was executed Jan. 11, 1985 for his part in the slayings.

Roach pleaded guilty to the 1977 murders of Carlotta Hartness, 14, and Tommy Taylor. The Columbia teen-agers were attacked as they sat in a parked car at Polo Park, across from their high school.

Taylor was shot in the face and Miss Hartness was taken to nearby woods, raped, shot in the back of the head and mutilated.

Festive Crowd Awaits Execution

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — About 300 people gathered outside the Columbia Correctional Institution early today, at least two-thirds of them supporting the execution of James Terry Roach.

The crowds, separated by their points of view on capital punishment, stood about 300 yards apart on Williams Street across from the prison grounds in downtown Columbia.

People started gathering just before 4 a.m. with those favoring the death penalty displaying signs for reporters and television cameras that said such things "Plug Him In" and "Fry Him."

When a reporter asked one man why he was there, he shouted, "We never tailgated an execution before," a reference to tailgate parties held in parking lots before college football games.

The proponents, mostly people in their late-teens and early 20s, stood at the northeast corner of the prison. The mood was festive, with people laughing and joking. Some had been drinking and appeared oblivious to the chilly, 41-degree temperature.

One man wore a T-shirt that said, "One down, 35 more to go," with a drawing of an electric chair on it. Another wore a shirt that said simply, "Death."

Betty Stoudemire Slusher of South Congaree said she was there because the two men convicted of killing her husband, Larry Gilbert and J.D. Gleaton, were near the top of the list of those to be executed.

"I was here for the first (J.C. Shaw, who was convicted along with Roach), I'll be here for the next and I'll be here for the rest," she said. "I didn't come here for the pleasure, I came here for the rights."

Mrs. Slusher said she was tired of hearing about criminals' rights.

"I don't think you should have any rights if you go out and kill someone," she said. "The victim's families don't want vengeance, we want justice."

Three hundred yards away, at the prison's southeast corner, the death penalty opponents stood and watched quietly. A few held candles, waving them periodically.

Census Reports Drastic Drop In Farm Population

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Even when survey errors are discounted, 1985 saw one of the sharpest year-to-year declines in the U.S. farm population in a decade, government census experts say.

Moreover, the income of farm families continues to lag behind that of city folks, according to a report issued Thursday by the Census Bureau and the Agriculture Department.

According to preliminary survey figures for 1985, the farm population declined 7 percent, or 399,000 people, to 5,355,000 from 5,754,000 in 1984.

Part of the loss in farm population was blamed on the financial crunch suffered by farmers during recent years, in which thousands of families have been put in jeopardy by huge debts and declining assets.

The sharp 1985 drop in population was challenged by one of the report's overseers, who said much of the year-to-year decline was due to changes in sampling techniques.

Although the report did not include the new farm population estimate for 1985, census officials provided that figure to The Associated Press upon request.

The report said the estimated 1984 U.S. farm population of 5,754,000 was down 33,000 from 1983, but that the decline was "not statistically significant."

During the 1970s, annual farm population losses averaged 2.9 percent, including a drop of about 7 percent from 1975 to 1976, a period when the U.S. farm economy was on the upswing with record exports and rising land values.

The report said the median income of farm families was $18,925 in 1983, the most recent year studied. That was only three-fourths of non-farm family income. Median income means that half of the families had larger incomes that year, half less.

In 1983, one-fifth of all farm families had incomes below the federal poverty level, compared with 12 percent for non-farm families, the report said. The income poverty level in 1983 was $10,178 a year for a family of four.

At the Census Bureau, Diana DeAre, one of the report's authors, called the apparent 7 percent decline in the farm population last year "the most significant change" so far in the 1980s.

But USDA's Calvin L. Beale, head of population studies in the department's Economic Research Service, said the figures should not be taken at face value.

In 1983, he said in an interview, the census survey showed an increase in the farm population. Then in 1984 the survey showed a decline of 33,000 people, which "struck me as unrealistically low."

"I think there has been a real and actual decline in the farm population, but in my opinion it's not 7 percent from '84 to '85, and only half of 1 percent from '83 to '84," Beale said. "I just feel the '84 number was a high bounce, as it were, in the sample. Also, they've been changing the sample design during this time."

Beale, who is widely known as a demographer and expert on rural population, said he thought the 1985 figures were sound, but that they should be compared over a longer period and not on a basis of year-to-year.

"There's a decline that reflects the farm crisis, but I don't think the actual change was 7 percent" last year, Beale said.

"For myself, I would doubt that more than half of this change is real in a year-to-year basis, and I would strongly suspect that the rest of it could be accounted for simply by the problems that are inherent in the sampling."

But even if only half of the 7 percent decline was real, it would be a significant change in the farm population, "no question about it," he said.

Beale said he thinks the farm population decline will continue in 1986 but not at the 1985 rate.

"If I had to guess, at this point, I would doubt that '86 would show more than half as much decline" as the figures did for 1985, he said.

The report did not include breakdowns by state or by size of farms. As defined by the government, farms are places that have sales of agricultural products amounting to $1,000 or more a year.

In 1984, the report said, about one out of 41 persons, or 2.4 percent of the U.S. population, lived on farms.

According to USDA records going back to 1910, the nation's farm population peaked at 32.5 million in 1916, which was about one out of every three Americans at that time.

Shell Boycott Called

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aiming a blow at apartheid racial policies, the AFL-CIO is calling on consumers to boycott Shell Oil Co. products until the company's multinational owners cut business ties to South Africa.

Withdrawal of investments by the parent company, Royal Dutch Shell, would undermine the white-ruled South African government, union leaders said Thursday at a news conference.

"We hope that the boycott will convince Shell to disinvest in South Africa," United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber said, snipping in half a gasoline credit card and urging consumers to do the same.

Safeguards

As have others, we sometimes privately wondered how it could be that professional health-care practitioners barred from practicing in one state could simply move to another and hang out their shingle. A little added light has been shed on that weakness in protecting the public.

Some clarification comes from Sen. John Glenn, sponsor of legislation that would permit states to check backgrounds of some doctors found unfit to serve their people.

Remedial legislation has been in the works since 1984 but somehow the Senate just never has gotten around to it; and that measure has its limitations, too.

The bill would establish a national computer tracking system to identify those stripped of the right to practice in one state. It would also provide the Department of Health and Human Services new authority to prevent them from participating in Medicare and Medicaid as well as Veterans Administration health programs.

The proposed law would affect those convicted of dispensing controlled substances or neglect or abuse of patients, kickbacks or submitting false claims. They would be barred from participating in the federal health programs. State licensing boards would be required to report any sanctions imposed on practitioners in their jurisdiction and all surrenders of licenses.

As we read the account, the Senate measure would protect patients using federal health programs but not those who turn to the private sector. In short, it closes one door to the unfit but leaves another open.

One might wonder what the American Medical Association has been doing in that direction. Well, AMA President Harrison Rogers testified last July the organization "currently" alerts state authorities when a physician licensed in the state has a license suspended or revoked for cause in another state. It puts the ball back into province of individual state boards.

It also suggests not all licensing boards are (a) reading their AMA mail, or (b) often do not act upon the available information. State governments bear the brunt of responsibility for protecting their people in yet another arena.

Ready For You

The Internal Revenue Service is one of those rare governmental agencies that takes in more money than it spends. If that current ever goes into reverse we're in deep trouble.

The agency had a bad year in 1985. There were computer problems (we have them, too), some of its staffers became unglued under stress, some taxpayers' returns were disastrously lost and so were refunds they were counting on. If something could go wrong, it did.

Nobody knows how many returns were irretrievably lost; and they say in some circles two words ... tax refunds ... made strong men and stronger women weep.

There were also an estimated 100 million phone calls that went unanswered.

This year the computer capacity has been expanded and worker training stepped up. More telephone circuits have been installed. There are more employees, trained and forewarned of all that could happen.

"We are making sure", says one official, "that anybody and everybody having anything to do with front-line phone assistance or walk-in assistance is trained in communicating with the public." In other words, quick, courteous and correct.

The IRS is ready for you. Are you ready for the IRS?

Coverup For Furniture Spat

WASHINGTON — In a covered-up quarrel that threatens a rupture of President Reagan's arms control negotiating team, former Sen. John Tower's wife has brought administrative proceedings against retired Gen. Richard Ellis for taking back furniture he says she removed from his Geneva apartment last fall.

In Geneva, Tower is a top negotiator and Ellis a senior arms control official. Lilla Tower took the furniture in the apparent belief that it was "government issue." When the Towers went on vacation, Ellis retrieved the furniture he said was his own. A furious Mrs. Tower pulled rank and demanded the pieces back.

Although a secrecy mantle has muted the unseemly affair, Mrs. Tower next demanded that the U.S. Mission in Geneva bring an "administrative action" against Ellis to recover the disputed furniture. Caught in the squeeze that involves the wife of a powerful ex-senator who might be the next secretary of defense, the State Department is trying to negotiate a settlement (so far, without success).

With bags packed for Agriculture

Secretary John Block and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce, the Reagan Cabinet shuffles figures to intensify in 1986 with an additional four departures possible.

While House aides wonder how much longer Malcolm Baldrige will be content to remain as Secretary of Commerce, since he has no immediate prospect for the Defense portfolio he wants. They also think Elizabeth Dole might quit as Secretary of Transportation if her husband, Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, launches a campaign for president.

A footnote: Pressure inside the administration is building for California food industry executive Richard Lyng, Block's former deputy secretary, to succeed his old boss. But Republican strategists feel a farm-belt politician is needed. Two Iowans, former Gov. Robert Ray and Rep. Cooper Evans, are on the short list.

Vice Adm. John Poindexter, President Reagan's new national security adviser, played it mum in his first test: the acrimonious internal debate over Soviet SALT treaty violations in which the diplomats beat the military.

A major question was whether the president's report should charge the Soviets with a "continuing" or an "expanding" pattern of violations. The State Department wanted the former, but Pentagon hawks insisted new evidence supported the latter. Conservative Republicans regard Poindexter as a kindred hard-liner and hoped for his help.

But Poindexter, no expert on SALT Treaty compliance which predecessor Robert McFarlane kept in his own hands, stayed out of the fight. Without his help, the Defense Department lost. White House insiders say Poindexter privately backed the Pentagon, and probably would say so in a future fight.

Ed Rollins, who caused a stir as Reagan-Bush campaign manager in 1984 when he announced support of George Bush for president in 1988, has quietly been read out of the vice president's political inner circle.

Ironically, endorsing Bush nearly cost Rollins his return to the White House as chief political aide following the re-election campaign. The new chief of staff, Donald T. Regan, did not want senior staffers who had their eyes on 1988. He was talked into naming Rollins, who since has resigned to form a political consulting-lobbying firm.

Bush's current political tactician is Lee Atwater, another Washington-based consultant who was Rollins' deputy in the 1984 campaign. Rollins has been informally advising television evangelist Pat Robertson about his presidential ambitions and could end up in his campaign.

As a side effect of House passage of the tax reform bill, Deputy Secretary Richard Darman will stay at the Treasury as its principal architect in the Reagan administration at least until its final fate is known in Congress.

We reported that Darman had talked to a headhunter about possible corporate directorships in the spring, and the White House later confirmed to us that an imminent "divorce" between him and the administration was expected. Had the House killed the tax bill, Darman would have been blamed in Congress and the White House and probably departed.

Possibly 'Lost In Space'

RALEIGH — When a bureaucrat sets pen to paper, there's no telling what wisdom he'll produce. A Department of Correction official authored a memo last summer which appears to unlock some of the mysteries of the universe.

Scott Harvey, DOC deputy secretary, circulated a memo on Aug. 1, 1985, which attempted to explain the department's "management nucleus structure and relationships necessary for harmonious progress." The memo was surreptitiously provided to N.C. Insight magazine and appeared in the winter issue.

"We can think of ourselves as bodies of matter in a universe orbiting around the heart of the Department — the Secretary," he wrote. (Notice how bureaucrats overuse capital letters to make themselves look important.) "There is a sub-set to this universe the bodies of which orbit around the Deputy Secretary. But the sub-set is not independent of the universe. It is an orbit within the influence of the main orbit.

"Order is established by the effect of the relative mass and proximity of each orbiting body on the others," he continued.

The Harvey memo went on for a total of two and one-half pages. Having read and printed the entire memo, the editors of N.C. Insight wrote: "We're not sure whether the writer is in elliptical orbit or just plain lost in space. Perhaps Dr. Spock will enlighten us on that point."

It's good to see that our state leaders can maintain a sense of humor even about the most serious subjects.

When the Legislative Study Commission on High Level Radioactive Waste opened in Raleigh recently, these gems were uttered.

Sen. Charlie Hipps, D-Haywood, sardonically expressed concern that a federal repository for such waste might be located near retirement and tourism spots in western North Carolina. "I'm not sure we could advertise to come retire next to the second repository site, or vacation there, either."

Tom Elleman, an engineering professor and commission member, said, with a bit of understatement, that a repository, "is not the kind of facility one goes out and seeks, like an industry or Epcot Center."

Then there was the Unintentional Pun of the Year from Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, who apologized for knowing nothing about the problem of high level radioactive waste. "I'm starting from Ground Zero," he said. Ground Zero describes the point immediately underneath an exploding nuclear bomb.

Several of the potential storage sites for the highly radioactive waste are in Mount Airy granite rock formations. A state scientist describing that type of rock reminded legislators that a great portion of the Legislative Building is constructed of Mount Airy granite. To which one press corps wag responded, "Good, so store it here."

The mail and phone calls a legislator gets from home don't always represent true public sentiment on legislation. Rep. Larry Justus, R-Henderson, has learned in his first term.

Justus says that during the time the new anti-pornography law was being considered he received only positive feedback about it from constituents. Things changed after the session ended, however, Justus told his colleagues at a recent study commission meeting.

"My diesel mechanics chased me out the door" of the garage to explain their feelings, Justus said with a laugh. Apparently the mechanics feared that their favorite pin-up calendars were now going to be banned.

A REAL TOUGH ONE ON THE TABLE!

—Barry Schweid—

Force May Yet Come

WASHINGTON (AP) — For nearly two years, Secretary of State George Shultz has been saying publicly that swift retribution may be the best deterrent to terrorism.

Except for the interception of the Achille Lauro hijackers last October, however, the Reagan administration has responded with caution and economic penalties.

But now, lacking support from European allies and recognizing sanctions have their limits, the United States may be preparing to employ force in some unspecified way.

"We are prepared to use the measures that will be effective and are necessary," Shultz told a news conference Thursday. "Force is not always the best means, but it may be necessary on occasion."

President Reagan came to office five years ago vowing "swift and effective retribution" against acts of terrorism. He had described President Carter's handling of the hostage crisis in Iran as a "humiliation and disgrace."

Welcoming the Americans home from Tehran on Jan. 27, 1981, Reagan declared: "We hear it said that we live in an era of limits to our powers. Well, let it also be understood, there are limits to our patience."

And yet, when the U.S. Marine headquarters and the U.S. Embassy in Beirut were bombed, Navy gunships fired into the hills of Lebanon but America withdrew from that hapless Middle Eastern country.

Last June, during the TWA hijacking in which an American sailor was murdered, Reagan slammed the wall in frustration. In October, he pressed for the prosecution of the Achille Lauro hijackers for the slaying of an elderly American passenger.

The most outspoken among administration leaders in pushing an "active defense against terrorism," as he called it in 1984, Shultz always has doubted the efficacy of sanctions — especially when they are applied unilaterally.

Reminded of this by a reporter, Shultz said the United States was "making a statement" in ending virtually all economic activity with Libya, that it had to do what was right even if no other government followed the U.S. lead.

The suspension of business dealings and the freezing of Libyan assets "undoubtedly have some effects," Shultz said. But, he acknowledged, "no one contends that these actions, by themselves, are likely to have a decisive effect."

In fact, Shultz said, "by this time we are pretty much at the end of the road. All of the things that one can think of, economically, have pretty much been done now."

He is sending his deputy, John C. Whitehead, to Western Europe next week to turn his well-honed powers of persuasion on the foot-dragging allies. The Europeans have much more invested in Libya than the United States, which began distancing itself from Col. Moammar Khadafy in 1981.

If the allies and Japan support the U.S. anti-Khadafy campaign, the economic approach may be extended. Shultz hasn't given up hope of help. "Peoples' thinking is moving, it's dynamic," he said.

The former labor negotiator remembers hard positions yielding to persuasion and compromise.

But events since the Dec. 27 mayhem at the Rome and Vienna airports rebut his optimism. Italy, West Germany, Britain and other countries with lucrative economic ties to Libya have expressed doubts about the merits of the U.S. economic campaign. Moslem governments have gone further and denounced the "imperialist-Zionist threat" to the regime in Tripoli.

Strength For Today

Why do we need to worship? Is there anything particularly advantageous in getting together with fellow believers once a week or more and going through very much the same ritual we did the last time we assembled?

Yes, there is a great advantage to worship. We need to remind ourselves constantly that we believe certain things and that we have surrendered our wills to the domination of these beliefs. Association with others of like mind strengthens our faith.

All these activities, customs, rituals, associations tend to keep us constantly reminded both of the things we believe and of their value. Because we cannot see God and many of His workings, we easily tend to forget all about Him and His power. Worship reminds us again of His presence in His created universe. It also restates a definite pattern of behavior and a source of hope which we all need.

IRS Checks Refunds For Loan Defaulters

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who have defaulted on federal loans could end up tangling with the Internal Revenue Service if they try to collect tax refunds this year, the government says.

The names of 750,000 defaulters have been turned over to the IRS, which will withhold overdue money from tax refunds in lieu of loan payments, the Office of Management and Budget said Thursday.

The defaulters owe about $1.6 billion, according to OMB. The budget office said just the threat of IRS involvement in the collection process has already prompted thousands of defaulters to make payments on their loans.

The government had announced last year that it was resorting to "the ultimate trump card" — the IRS — to collect on bad student loans.

The Education Department said former students had defaulted on $3 billion in low-interest loans subsidized by the federal government under the Guaranteed Student Loan program. Another $1.1 billion has been defaulted in the National Direct Student Loan program, the department said.

Richard Hastings, director of debt collection for the Education Department, predicted in August that using the IRS as a collector would be the most successful tactic ever to recover defaulted loans.

Most of the defaulters targeted this year owe money to the Education Department. But the IRS also will be trying to collect money on behalf of the Small Business Administration, the departments of Agriculture and Housing and Urban Development, and the Veterans Administration, OMB said.

In the past, the government has used private collection agencies against defaulters and turned their names over to national consumer credit bureaus. It has also referred the names of thousands of defaulters to the Justice Department.

Telephone Workers Will Help Kids Do School Homework

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Eager to reach out and touch youngsters' lives, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. employees here will call sixth-graders at home after school to help them with homework and explain why education is good.

"They want recognition, they want someone to know they've accomplished something, they need a pat on the back. We hope to be the motivator," said Philip Dodge, 55, an assistant staff manager for AT&T's International Operating Center.

Two evenings a week starting

Tuesday, AT&T operators, technicians and supervisors plan to call the 24 pupils of a Milliones Middle School homeroom, to check on the progress of their math homework.

Another homeroom of about 20 students will be included the following week.

Students who fare well under the program will be invited to the International Operating Center to watch operators on overseas calls as a reward.

Nine AT&T employees have volunteered for the homework helpline.

They picked up the students' math textbooks and assignments Thursday and met their soon-to-be phone pals at the large, inner-city school.

Scott Grosh, an art teacher at Milliones who is coordinating the project, said the AT&T employees will focus on math because it seems to be an area in which the students need help.

"Kids tend to hear things teachers say and say, 'Yeah, that's what teachers say.' Maybe if they hear things from a person with a different background, it will put it in a real-life situation and they'll say, 'Here's someone who's interested in me and helping me,'" Grosh, 30, said.

The volunteers will stay in touch with math teachers and know in advance what homework is assigned.

Analysts Say Market Setbacks Not Dire

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market followed its historic loss with another broad setback, but many Wall Street analysts said the selloff was neither entirely surprising nor a cause of great concern.

In late trading Thursday, the market showed renewed signs of the strength that lifted it to record heights earlier this week. The Dow Jones industrial average ended the day down 8.38 points at 1,518.23, after rebounding from a 20-point drop earlier in the session.

In the broader market, however, about five stocks fell for every one that rose.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones average, the oldest and best known measure of stock price trends, plunged 39.10 points, nominally breaking the record for a single-day decline of 38.33 points set during the Great Crash of 1929.

On a percentage basis, however, the latest slide was much less severe, amounting to 2.5 percent of the average's value, while the drop on Oct. 28, 1929, was 12.8 percent.

The market's sudden drop from record highs might have raised doubts about the 1986 economic outlook, but analysts said the selloff was not dire when viewed in the perspective of how far and how fast stock prices rose in the last months of 1985.

The higher the market soared, they said, the more vulnerable it became to any sort of disappointment like the abrupt rise in interest rates that touched off selling Wednesday.

"Considering the gains we've had, we've given up relatively little," said Newton Zinder, a veteran of more than two decades as a market analyst for E.F. Hutton & Co. "The market was very extended."

From last Sept. 20 through Tuesday's close, the Dow climbed 267.76 points with scarcely a pause. The drop Wednesday took away less than 15 percent of that gain.

And while the stock market is traditionally considered a leading indicator of business and economic trends, Zinder said it was hard to view Wednesday's drop as a negative portent for the economy.

He noted that the downturn was triggered by a government report showing a decline in the U.S. unemployment rate to 6.9 percent in December, its lowest level in more than five years.

As often happens in the stock and bond markets, investors took favorable economic news as unfavorable financial news, because it chilled hopes that the Federal Reserve might relax its credit policy further, allowing interest rates to decline further.

The last big drop in the Dow — 36.33 points on Oct. 25, 1982 — also was blamed on disappointment that the Fed had not made a hoped-for reduction in the "discount rate" charged on its loans to financial institutions. Nine days later, the average soared a record 43.41 points to a then all-time high.

NASA Says Water In Comet Confirmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. scientists have definitively confirmed the long-held theory that Halley's comet contains water, a discovery that space agency officials say marks a new era in the study of the celestial wanderers.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Thursday that a team of U.S. researchers aboard a modified military transport plane last month discovered water in Halley's through use of sophisticated instrumentation attached to a 36-inch telescope.

While some components of water previously have been identified in the comet, the December discovery marks the first time the actual water molecule has been confirmed, said astrophysicist Mike Mumma, head of the planetary systems branch of Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

"This is really a very exciting time for us. It represents the culmination of 10 years of theoretical and experimental work," Mumma said in a telephone interview.

The discovery also brought cheery news to scientists who were devastated when the United States cut funding for a spacecraft to observe the comet while five probes were sent to Halley's by the European Space Agency, the Soviet Union and Japan. Those spacecraft also are looking for water in the comet, NASA said in a statement.

"Although NASA did not send a spacecraft to Comet Halley — as far as the confirmation of water is concerned, the use of the flying observatory was the most cost-effective way the United States could solve this central problem in cometary science," the statement said.

The finding bolsters the common belief that comets are "dirty snowballs," and also will help scientists learn what else is in comets, Mumma said.

"The direct detection of a major parent molecule ushers a new era of direct investigations of the compositions of cometary nuclei and of the physics of cometary comae," NASA said.

In March, NASA's flying laboratory, a modified C-141 military aircraft, will look for methane in the comet, Mumma said.

The aircraft carries a spectrometer, developed at the University of Arizona, which found the water vapor in the comet's coma, or halo, said Goddard public affairs officer Chuck Recknagel.

A theory developed by Mumma and researcher Harold Weaver of Johns Hopkins University holds that comet molecules such as water "can best be detected by measuring their infrared fluorescence spectrum stimulated by sunlight" — the task of the spectrometer.

Comets warm as they approach the sun and cool off as they go away, releasing gases and a particles that reflect the sun's light, thus giving the comet its brightness.

The spectrometer broke down the light caused by the sun's reflection on the water vapor into a pattern of infrared "spectral lines," Recknagel said. Halley's comet was found to have 10 such lines when observed Dec. 21 and Dec. 23 from the flying laboratory at 41,000 feet, he said.

The findings were made as the comet, with its 120,000-mile diameter coma, was streaking through space about 100 million miles from Earth and about the same distance from the sun, Mumma said.

"It was so exciting" aboard the aircraft, Mumma said. "In the first two minutes of data taking, we had lines coming. ... I saw this line appear there (on a computer screen) and get brighter and brighter. My first feeling was one of surprise and I thought, the theory is really right."

NASA had reported last month the probability of 12 tons of water per second steaming off Halley's comet based on observations made by the Pioneer-Venus spacecraft as it orbited Venus 150 million miles from the comet.

"That was not a direct detection of water. It was atomic hydrogen which could be produced from destruction of water molecule," Mumma said. "Nobody has ever identified the parent molecule" until now.

ECU Scholarship

Lee Anthony White, a senior theatre arts and speech communication major at East Carolina University, is the 1985-86 recipient of the ECU Alumni Association's Past Presidents Scholarship.

The award, established by gifts from former alumni presidents, covers the costs of a student's tuition and fees for one academic year. Its purpose is to recognize leadership qualities among the members of the ECU Ambassadors, a student service organization. White is president of the Ambassadors.

He is the son of Haywood C. White of Colerain and a graduate of Bertie Senior High School.

Recipient Named

Kevin Andrew Johnson of Fairfax, Va., a junior urban planning major in the department of geography and planning at East Carolina University, is the 1985-86 recipient of the ECU College Hill Area Residence Council scholarship.

The award covers the costs of a student's tuition and fees.

Johnson has been a member and officer of the College Hill Area Residence Association, one of three student residence groups at ECU, and is also involved in student religious and intramural sports programs.

Johnson, the son of Dan and Gloria Johnson of Fairfax, Va., is a graduate of Robinson Secondary School.

Dean's List Honor

Ayden resident Monica Lynne Stokes was recently named to the fall semester 1985 Dean's List at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

Leadership Award

The United States Achievement Academy has announced that James Ray Cox Jr. has been named a national award winner in leadership service. The Bath native is the grandson of Mrs. Marie B. Cox of Greenville.

ECU History Will Be Ready In Spring

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University will publish its first official history this spring, a work titled "East Carolina University: The Formative Years, 1907-1982."

The history was researched and written by Dr. Mary Jo Bratton, professor and director of graduate studies for the ECU Department of History, and covers ECU's first 75 years.

It developed from an idea by former Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer in 1980, when he was preparing for ECU's 75th anniversary celebration in 1982. Needing information, he reached for the university's official history only to discover that one didn't exist.

Brewer instructed the office of academic affairs to prepare one. The chairman of the history department was contacted, and "eventually it trickled down to me," Dr. Bratton said.

Since ECU had no archives, Dr. Bratton had to first find the documents and organize them before she could begin writing. That task took a year.

"We had documents filed in various places all over the university," Dr. Bratton said. "Most were stored in the basement of Fleming Dormitory and in various closets."

Complete files of the catalogs, bulletins, student newspapers and yearbooks published by the university since 1909 were available at Joyner Library. Dr. Bratton read all of them. She also spent a lot of time at the state archives in Raleigh.

Another resource was people — former students, faculty, staff and administrators. "I was fortunate enough to be able to talk with the last five presidents or chancellors," Dr. Bratton said. "Those who I haven't talked with, I've talked with a member of their family."

Aware that memories can fade with time, Dr. Bratton relied on the written word whenever possible. "What the oral history does is add another dimension that you don't get out of the press account, or out of the records," Dr. Bratton said. "A lot of times you get the underlying reasons for what happened."

"I've talked with a number of people who since I began this project have died," Dr. Bratton added. "I'm very glad I was able to preserve a lot of their memories, many of which I could not incorporate directly into the manuscript, but they're there in the University Archives for other people who might want to do research."

Dr. Bratton organized the book around the four names ECU has had. "First we were a two-year teachers training school with two years of college, two years of high school. That was called East Carolina Teachers Training School. Next we were East Carolina Teachers College, then we were East Carolina College, then East Carolina University. So that presented me with a very obvious division of the book because it's not just a change in name, it's a change in function, responsibility, degrees, programs, and everything."

The book is unique in that each division includes a chapter on campus life. Most institutional histories, Dr. Bratton said, relegate only one chapter to its students. "I think that's one of the most important parts of the book," Dr. Bratton said. "It's more of a social history — not just the recording of names — but their major assumptions, their values, what they were trying to do, what their concerns were."

"I hope it will please the alumni, because I have written it with them in mind. The book will be bound in deep royal purple cloth, with old gold lettering. It's being printed by the University of North Carolina Press in Chapel Hill. ECU's Alumni Association is serving as the official publisher and will also be responsible for marketing."

BLAZE AT INDUSTRY — Greenville and Pitt County firemen search for remnants of a fire Thursday evening that caused minor damage to the Grady-White boat

Fire Damages Boat Plant

A small blaze between two fiberglass boat hulls caused minor damage to the Grady White boat manufacturing facility Thursday evening north of Greenville.

According to Greenville Fire Chief Jenness Allen, firemen were called to the plant around 6:24 p.m. when workers discovered smoke coming from the northern end of the plant in the hull production area.

Allen said firemen using rope lifelines, searched the areas and found the fire between two molded fiberglass boat hulls. The fire was small and Allen said it was contained by the plant's fire sprinkler system. He said eight 25 gallon per minute sprinkler heads were activated during the blaze.

A spokesman for Grady White said this morning the fire was contained to a small area in the hull section. Wanda Paramore, of the personnel department, said workers were on duty, but were on break at the time of the blaze. She said workers saw the smoke and called the fire department. The plant's extensive fire alarm system also was activated.

Ms. Paramore said there would be only a half to a full day of clean-up and the plant would be back in production. She said there was mostly smoke damage in the area of the fire and no other damage resulted from the blaze.

Allen said there were no injuries reported, but some firefighting equipment was damaged. He said some of the residue from the fire stuck to the hoses and ropes.

Plant officials did not have an estimate of damage.

Members of the Staton House, Winterville and Belvoir fire departments also assisted Greenville's eight units at the fire.

Scientist Reports Ancient Bone Found Off Coast

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

A fossilized neckbone found recently near Morehead City belonged either to a sperm whale, a humpback whale, a sei whale or a right whale that lived in the Atlantic Ocean between 10,000 and 20,000 years ago, a scientist says.

Similar whales are found in the ocean off the North Carolina coast today, said Dr. Frank Schwartz, a professor at the University of North Carolina's Institute of Marine Science in Morehead City.

"If we knew what kind of whale it was, we could make a better stab at saying whether this type of whale was found further inland," he said. "It adds another piece (of evidence) that whales and porpoises were being found in various places in the coastal area."

The V-shaped, slate-gray bone from a 50-foot whale is more than 2 feet long, 10 inches across and 18 inches tall. It was found around Christmas by Ernest Willis in a creek bed near Newport, Schwartz said.

"You find whale parts all the time — ribs and jawbones," he said. "But you very seldom find ... neckbones, especially this near the skull. This was the first bone behind the skull."

The ocean then was 200 feet higher because the earth's icecaps had melted during an interglacial period, and the ocean ran as far inland as the fall line near Goldsboro, he said. Humans lived onshore nearby during the same period.

A large set of whale jaws was found near Nags Head in 1982, and quarries in the eastern part of the state occasionally turn up various bits and pieces of whale skeleton, he said. This one apparently was washed out of the earth by rains associated with last year's hurricanes.

Schwartz said the 30-pound fossil is only half of the neckbone. It has cup-shaped depressions on the ends of the V-shaped protrusions that fit onto the skull and a groove on the other end that accepts the prong of the next vertebra. Its shape made it easy to identify as the first vertebra.

Willis plans to keep the bone for a while, then perhaps donate it to a state museum, said Schwartz, who is an ichthyologist — fish scientist — who also studies whales, sea turtles and porpoises.

COMMUNITY PROJECT — Members of the Coastal Keystone Club, a group within the Pitt County Boys Club dedicated to working on community projects, recently assisted in a house repair project at the home of 83-year-old James Parker. They are shown here just prior to beginning work on the project, discussing the procedures required to do the work. (Boys Club Photo by Joey McKinney).

Boys Club Members Help Pitt Man Repair Home

Members of the Boys Club of Pitt County recently worked on a project that gave a helping hand to 83-year-old James Parker, who got help with household repairs and firewood for the winter.

Laura Newborn, a student nurse with the East Carolina University School of Nursing, pointed out Parker's needs to the attention of Boys Club program director Steve McKinney. Paul Andrews of the Pitt County Health Department gave the club members technical assistance in planning the project.

Parker, unable to do most tasks because of respiratory problems, has maintained a determination to be self-sufficient. His dwelling is one in need of repairs and is without electricity, running water or approved sewage disposal.

Recently, on a Saturday, the Boys Club members worked together to rebuild broken steps and repair deteriorated portions of the porch. They moved and stacked firewood to a point next to the front door so that Parker could more easily get to the wood, which he uses to heat the house and to cook.

The outdoor privy was repaired and relocated to a more convenient site, and the yard was cleared of leaves.

The project was undertaken by members of the Coastal Keystone Club of the Pitt County Boys Club, which is dedicated to carrying out community projects. Boys taking part in the project were: Kirk Dominick, Lloyd May, Coy Triplett, Eddie Aldridge, McKinley Simmons, Joey McKinney, Carlester Crumpler, Clint Parker, Shannon Foster and Jim Green.

Citizen Seeks More Pay For Clothes

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
"Mr. Mayor and City Council people, I want it to be on record that you don't expect me to pay one penny of property tax unless you pay me for my clothes the city destroyed," Robert Lee Cherry said in an unscheduled hearing before the City Council Thursday night.

Cherry, who lives at the corner of Douglas and Contentnea Street and "have lived all my 62 years" in Greenville, is seeking a larger amount of restitution than the city has offered through its insurance coverage for a basket of clothing he says was picked up by garbage men last year and carried to the dump.

"I've never been so humiliated in all my life," Cherry said, "to know the city of Greenville can do this to any human being. I came here to City Hall, talked to City Manager Gail Meeks, who had her insurance people look into it. You know what I was offered for $800 worth of good clothes, a check for $150? You can believe I was not about to take that."

Cherry contends his clothes were in a basket on the back steps of his house, "exactly where I been putting them for 15 years, and nobody ever took them until that day. The man picking up trash for the city that day, ...told me himself he was in hot water about his job, and so was taking everything he saw in yards that looked like it might be trash and emptied it."

City Manager Gail Meeks said the city's insurance company at the time reviewed the case and determined that the city was not negligent in that the basket of clothes was next to the trash to be picked up, but nonetheless decided to reimburse Cherry in the amount of $150 for his loss.

Cherry denied that, saying the clothes on the back steps were at least 15 feet from where his trash was located.

The consensus of the Council was that further determination in the case should be made in an effort to resolve Cherry's complaint.

Churches Form Joint Program

RIVERSIDE, Ill. (AP) — Eight congregations — two Roman Catholic, two Lutheran, two Presbyterian, one United Methodist and one Episcopal — have entered into an ecumenical covenant of cooperation in this Chicago suburb.

They committed themselves to a 10-point program of spiritual, educational and social work in adherence to "the will of Jesus Christ and desire of the respective churches to find ways to express Christian love, cooperation and understanding of one another..."

Similar covenants have been formed elsewhere between Protestant and Roman Catholic congregations, but usually not involving so many of them.

New Episcopal Primate Says Firmer Moral Tone Needed

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A new presiding bishop, taking the helm of a distinctively comprehensive U.S. denomination, the Episcopal Church, says it must work to bolster moral fiber and to strengthen the wider causes of peace and justice in the world.

The task, says the Rt. Rev. Edmond Lee Browning, is to bring nurture, healing and hope to a "troubled, dangerous and broken world."

Browning, 56, a genial, unpretentious Texan of easy humor and keen convictions, is being formally installed Jan. 11 at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C., as 24th primate of a broadly inclusive church embracing Protestant and Roman Catholic elements.

"The church must reach out in behalf of the well being of all kinds of people," he said. "It is to enable them to be what God intended them to be."

That duty, he emphasized, demands both "pastorally sensitive" nurturing of individuals in their varied situations and needs, as well as a "prophetic ministry" of word and actions against social ills at home and abroad.

In U.S. society, he said, the general level of morality has plunged sharply and the church must move vigorously to counter the trend.

"It's very serious," he said in an interview after his election last fall at the denomination's triennial convention in California. "We've been in a moral decline for a number of years. "More than at any time in our history, there's been a tremendous erosion of a sense of values."

He said that along with widespread pornography, television violence and sex, "Rambo"-type movies exalting brute power and weakened marriages has come a self-centered modern focus on "me."

"It's all pervasive," he said. "The sense of obligation to community, to family and to society is lacking. It's a narrow mind-set. The church needs to address the condition. We have a lot of work to do in this area."

Browning, a soft-spoken, 5-foot-8-inch-tall man with pale blond hair, is to head the denomination for 12 years.

He takes the reins from the Rt. Rev. John M. Allin, a courtly Mississippian who steered a moderate, conciliatory course.

He allayed much of the ferment in the late 1970s that resulted from the denomination's revamping its historic, widely influential Book of Common Prayer and admitting women to the priesthood.

While Browning frequently has been termed a "liberal," he discredits labels, seeing himself as pastorally attentive to the diverse elements in the church. He plans "listening" for much of his first year.

"My whole approach is open dialogue with everyone," he said.

However, Browning has made clear he intends to exercise his hefty "pulpit" in battling racism, the arms race, unemployment and poverty — to be "a voice for the voiceless."

"The scandal of increasing hunger among the poor of our country is intolerable during a time of so-called prosperity," he said.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Trend is 50 to 75 cents lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robertsonville, 44.75; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadburn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 44.50; Wilson 44.50; Rowland 44.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Wilson 38.00; Fayetteville 37.00; Whiteville unrep; Wallace 38.00; Spivey's Corner unrep; Rowland 38.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading is 49.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 65 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 48.62 cents fob dock or equivalent. The market is firm and the live supply is adequate to occasionally light for a good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,533,000, compared to 2,222,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market steady with a weak undertone for next week's trading. Supply fully adequate for a light demand. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter was 18 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly steady to 1 cent higher at mostly 2.69-2.82 in East and mostly 2.79-2.90 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans steady to 1 cent lower at mostly 5.39-5.55 in East and mostly 5.29-5.40 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.25-3.36; (new crop wheat 2.40-2.66).

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices edged upward today, showing signs of stabilizing after the rout of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose .12 to 1,518.35 in the first hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by almost 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Signs of a strengthening economy sent interest rates sharply higher on Wednesday, and chilled any lingering hopes that the Federal Reserve might cut the discount rate.

Merrill Lynch led the active list, up 3/4 at 38 3/4. The stock has benefited lately from heavy volume in the securities markets and takeover rumors that have been denied.

Libya and the United States. Shultz admitted that "to date we haven't made much headway with the Europeans," but suggested they take a "good look, a good hard look," at the photographs of the bloody Rome and Vienna airport massacres before making a final decision.

Even if the Europeans continue turning their backs on sanctions, he said, the United States believes its solitary action is necessary to "make a statement" that Americans will have nothing to do with sponsors of terrorism. According to a report issued by the State Department this week, Libya has been behind 59 terrorist acts in the past few years.

The Transportation Department, meanwhile, said that effective Feb. 1, any airline — domestic or foreign — would be barred from selling tickets in the United States for trips that include Libya in the itinerary.

Since all U.S.-Libyan travel already entails a stopover in a third country, the effect of the order would be to require passengers to purchase tickets for the Libyan leg of their trip during the stopover. There are direct flights between Tripoli and most European capitals.

Khadafy told reporters in Tripoli that the American sanctions, which include a freeze on Libyan assets in the United States, would push him closer to the Soviet Union.

Shultz brushed aside such fears, citing an already-close Soviet-Libyan relationship in which the Soviets send arms to Khadafy in return for badly needed cash. He also characterized as "rhetoric" recent Khadafy condemnations of terrorism.

The secretary said that "as on a number of occasions," he raised the Libyan issue with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin during a meeting Wednesday, and told the diplomat "why we are so upset."

Shultz also rejected the notion that tough action against Libya would inflame Arab governments at a time when the United States is hoping for a revival of the Mideast peace process.

At a meeting in Fez, Morocco, more than 40 Arab foreign ministers, who support the Palestinian cause against Israel, called for an end to the U.S. sanctions.

"Those who are in favor of a legitimate peace process in the Middle East, which will try to bring about the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people, should be against this kind of terrorism," Shultz said.

In related news, the Los Angeles Times quoted administration sources in today's editions as saying the Libyan government transferred about $100 million from an American bank to a foreign bank Wednesday, prompting President Reagan's order later in the day to freeze all remaining Libyan assets in U.S. financial institutions.

The freeze was intended to stop Khadafy's regime from shifting any more of its funds out of the United States, said the sources who were not identified in the newspaper.

Officials declined to reveal the exact amount of Libyan funds remaining in U.S. financial institutions, although several hundred million dollars are believed to be involved, the Times said. An administration official told the paper that the Tripoli government had kept as much as a quarter of its total foreign currency reserves in U.S. banks.

maximum. affect Libya's relations with Moscow.

"Maybe the Libyan people will decide one day because of these American threats to be more close in cooperation with the Soviet Union," Khadafy answered in English.

Asked if that meant that Libya, which Khadafy's regime has transformed into a fundamentalist Moslem country, might head toward communism, the Libyan leader replied: "Yes, this is a possibility if the threats continue."

(Moscow is already Libya's chief arms supplier. On Thursday, the official Soviet news agency Tass called on the United States to "seriously weigh the consequences" of what it called a campaign of "state terrorism" against Libya.)

Khadafy has denied involvement in the airport attacks, which both took place near El Al Israeli Airlines counters, and said at the news conference that Libya was not responsible for "individual and suicidal acts ... which Palestinians resort to and deem necessary for the cause."

"But the world must expect further acts of terrorism from the Palestinian people" unless they achieve their goal of a homeland, Khadafy said.

In the subsequent interview, Khadafy said: "I think the right thing is to struggle to liberate Palestine within the (Israeli) occupied territories ... to go after military Israeli objectives."

Smokers Use More Calories

BOSTON (AP) — When people give up cigarettes, they often put on weight. Now scientists have a new theory to explain why.

Swiss researchers today reported evidence that smokers burn up more calories than non-smokers. The researchers found that when people smoked 24 cigarettes a day, they expended an average of 10 percent more energy than when they didn't smoke.

The variation they found "was clearly sufficient to account for at least part of the well-established difference in body weight between smokers and non-smokers," they wrote. "In addition, the present findings help to explain why people gain weight if they stop smoking without decreasing their caloric intake."

The researchers speculate that the increase results from the effects of nicotine on the nervous system and the body's metabolism. There was no difference in the amount of physical activity the smokers and non-smokers did during the experiment.

Pirates Visit Spiders, Indians

While the U.S. Naval Academy is ranked as the top dog in the Colonial Athletic Association basketball race this year, most observers consider the University of Richmond as the team most likely to succeed should the Middies falter.

And so far this year, the Spiders have done little to shake those observations.

Through 10 games this winter, Richmond has been topped but once, that at the hands of fifth-ranked Georgia Tech, the Atlantic Coast Conference pre-season favorite. The Spiders have claimed victories over ACC members Wake Forest and Virginia.

Saturday night at 7:30 p.m., East Carolina will invade Robins Center on the Richmond campus to challenge the Spiders. The game is the first of two CAA games for the Pirates over the weekend. They will be in Williamsburg on Monday night for a 7:30 p.m. meeting with the Indians of William & Mary in the second game.

William & Mary has been less successful this winter, recording only a 3-6 record going into the weekend's activities, including a 52-36 setback at the hands of Richmond in the only conference game thus far for the two.

East Carolina, meanwhile, comes into the weekend with a 6-6 overall record and 1-1 league mark.

"They're just a good team," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said of Richmond. "They're a year older and a year more experienced after having won it all two years ago and come in second last year with virtually the same people. They are disciplined and very quick at the perimeter positions with great strength inside."

That great strength consists of 6-5 sophomore Pete Woolfolk, the rookie of the year in the conference last season, and 6-8 sophomore Steve Kratzer. (John Davis (a 6-5 junior) can play inside and outside. And they play great defense too.

"They have a talented shooter in (John) Newman (6-7 senior who has been all-conference three times), and (Greg) Beckwith (5-10 senior) is probably the quickest guard in the league," Harrison said.

Newman is the leading scorer for Richmond with a 22.1 average. He also is the leading rebounder with a 6.9 mark. Rodney Rice, who starts at one of the guard positions, is at 9.7, while Kratzer is 8.1, Davis, 5.6 and Beckwick 3.1. Woolfolk, who is the first man off the bench, has a 10.0 average.

Harrison adds that the Pirates have been competitive against the Spiders during the past few years. ECU lost by only three points at home last year, and has kept things close during other meetings.

Fatigue may be a factor in the contest. Richmond hasn't played since facing William & Mary last Saturday. The Pirates, however, played Saturday, Monday and Wednesday. "We're tired. It wears on you playing so much and so much on the road. Nine of our last 11 games have been on the road by the time we finish this current swing. That's tough."

William & Mary, meanwhile, is a team almost devastated by graduation last year. Four of the five starting players are gone, along with the top reserve.

"But Harrison says he can't think about the Indians yet. "All I've got on my mind right now is Richmond," he said. "I'll think about William & Mary late Saturday night."

Guard Scott Covall, a 6-1 senior, is the lone returning starter for the Indians. He's also the leading scorer with a 9.6 average. Other starters include forwards Ken Lambiotte averaging 8.0, Tim Trout 8.8, center Bob Dail 7.5 and guard Scott Trimble 6.5. Trout is the leading rebounder with a 6.1 average.

Following the two-game swing the Pirates are idle until the following Saturday, Jan. 18, when they travel to UNC-Wilmington. They then visit Penn State on Monday, Jan. 20, and return home to host George Mason on Saturday, Jan. 25.

Daugherty Powers Tar Heels To 92-68 Romp; Tech Rolls

By The Associated Press

Brad Daugherty had some Madison Garden skeptics snickering about his listed height of 6-foot-11, but North Carolina's senior center had the last laugh.

Daugherty scored a career-high 33 points and missed just one in his 14 shots from the field to power the top-ranked Tar Heels to a 92-68 blowout of Fordham Thursday night.

Meanwhile, fifth-ranked Georgia Tech took an 85-46 rout of Rutgers in the second game of a double-header in New York.

"Hey, somebody get a tape measure," said Fordham coach Tom Penders, whose Rams lost to North Carolina 81-65 last year at Charlotte. "Brad Daugherty has got to be 7-foot or taller. Got to be."

"He's some player. North Carolina has a great club, certainly deserving of their No. 1 ranking, but Daugherty was the one who killed us. He was too much for us inside."

Fordham's tallest starter was 6-7 junior James Robinson.

"It's easy being the big man on this team," said Daugherty, who sat out the last 11 minutes with UNC up by 30 points. "If you're open, you're going to get the ball."

Daugherty connected for 23 of his points in the first half when the Tar Heels led 48-29. Daugherty scored eight points, including consecutive three-point plays, to give the Tar Heels a 74-42 advantage with 11:53 to play.

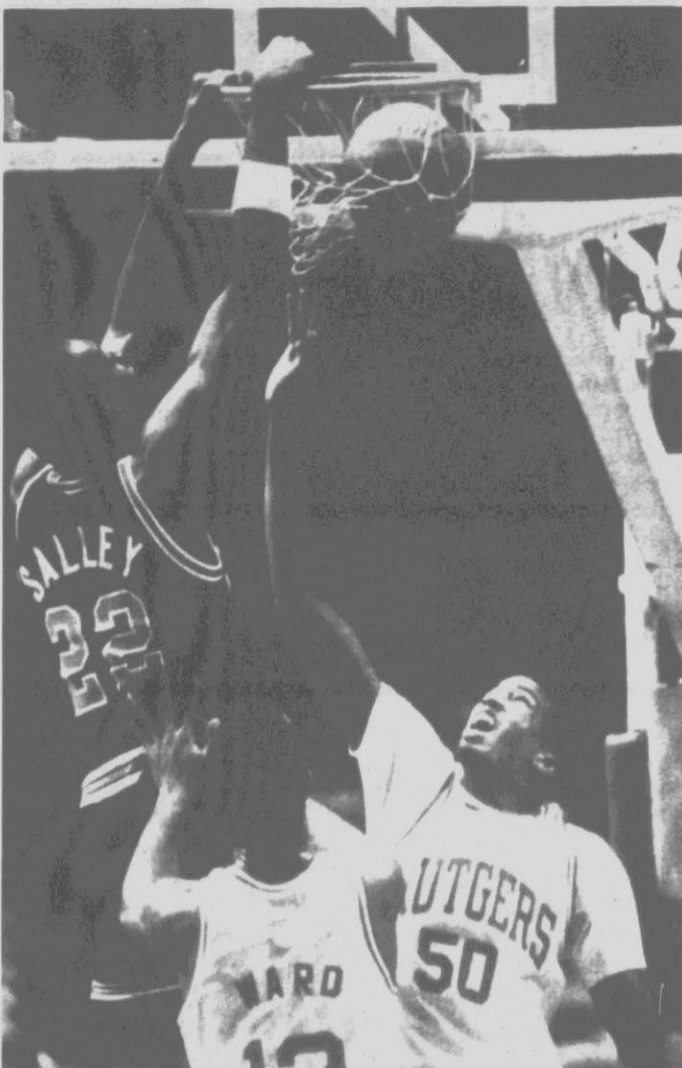

UNC coach Dean Smith then sent in his reserves, and the Tar Heels stayed in command the rest of the way. Senior Steve Hale added 12 points and freshman Kevin Madden had 11.

In other basketball action involving an Atlantic Coast Conference team, John Salley and Mark Price each scored 16 points to lead Georgia Tech to its 12th straight triumph.

The Yellow Jackets used their pressing defense and quickness against Rutgers in boosting their record to 13-1, equaling the second-best start in the school's history.

Duane Ferrell and Tommy Hammonds each scored 12 points for Georgia Tech, while Bruce Dalrymple and Craig Neal added 10 apiece.

The Yellow Jackets led only 14-12 but pulled away with a 14-0 run, capped by Price's blind pass to Salley, who put in a slam dunk. By halftime, Georgia Tech led 42-20, and at the start of the second half, the Yellow Jackets outscored Rutgers 12-5 as the 7-foot Salley hit two baskets and Price connected on three jumpers.

Slam!

Georgia Tech's John Salley (22) goes up for a slam dunk against Rutgers at Madison Square Garden in New York Thursday night. In on the play are Rutgers' Emory Ward (12) and Mark Peterson (50). Georgia Tech won the game, 85-46.

Trinity Sweeps Two In Tourney

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Trinity Christian School won its first two games in the Nashville Bible College Invitational Tournament yesterday, downing teams from Alabama and Virginia.

In the opening game of the day, Trinity topped Florence Christian Academy of Alabama, 67-60.

Trinity jumped out to a 16-7 lead in the first period of the game, but saw Florence come back with a 19-8 edge in the second period. That put Florence up, 26-24 at intermission.

But in the third period, Trinity evened it up at 43-43 and then outscored Florence, 24-17, in the final period.

Art Reynolds led Trinity with 19 points while Edward Everette added 13, Jimmy Powers had 11 and Kyler Welch and Joey Braxton each had 10. Reynolds also pulled down 13 rebounds.

Steven Love led Florence with 22 points while Kip Scott had 19 and Bill Kemp had 12.

"We were a little intimidated by the tournament to start with," Coach Don Southerland said. "We missed a lot of easy shots, but our inside game saved us."

In the second game, Trinity routed Henrico Christian of Richmond, Va., 77-47, again placing five players in double figures.

Trinity held a 12-9 lead after one period and upped that to 29-13 by the end of the half. Henrico managed to clip two off that in the third period, 50-36, but the Tigers raced away, 27-11, in the final period to complete the rout.

Powers led the way with 20 points while Braxton had 18, Welch had 12 and Everette and Reynolds each had 10. Reynolds added 18 rebounds.

Henrico was led by Joey Burns with 14 while Tony Markland had 13 and Dewey Chalos had 12.

"We were more relaxed for the second game," Southerland said, "but the competition is much, much tougher today." Trinity, in the winners' bracket of the double elimination tournament which drew Free Will Baptist schools from across the South, was to face Woodbine Academy of Nashville, Tenn., today. Should the Tigers lose, they were to play again Friday night, while a victory would keep them idle until Saturday night.

Terp Problem: Too Much Bias

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) - Coach Lefty Driesell will have to walk a fine line if he is to solve what he feels is a vexing problem facing the Maryland basketball team.

The way Driesell sees it, superstar Len Bias of the Terps may be scoring too much.

"I don't think a team can win when one player is averaging 22 points a game and nobody else is in double figures," Driesell told a news conference Thursday.

Driesell said he couldn't recall anything similar in 31 years of coaching, while noting: "One of the best teams I ever had, we had six in double figures."

Bias has taken 201 of Maryland's 723 shots in 13 games, a 27 percent mark that is only 2 percent above last season when he averaged 19 points and was named a second-team All-

American.

But with Adrian Branch having graduated, and with two of Maryland's five freshmen now starting, Bias is clearly a marked man when the Terps have the ball.

"I told Leonard to be careful not to try to do too much," Driesell said. "If he does, then the others will slack off and go to him all the time."

"He's so good, I can't tell him to hide and let the others take over," Driesell admitted. "But we've got to get balanced scoring."

Driesell said he was particularly concerned because Bias has only 11 assists despite the many times he handles the ball.

"If the other teams look at the statistics," he said, "they'll say, 'All we have to do is stop Bias and we can beat Maryland.' I don't want that to be the case."

Pats To Put Rush On Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Last Saturday, the Cleveland Browns cruised through the Miami defense for 251 rushing yards and almost blew the Dolphins out of the National Football League playoffs.

Guess what the New England Patriots have planned for the Dolphins in Sunday's American Football Conference title game at the Orange Bowl?

"I'd hate to think we're going to give up 250 yards again," said Miami Coach Don Shula, whose team had to rebound from a 21-3 third-quarter deficit to beat the 8-8 Browns 24-21.

Rushing defense — rather, the lack of it — has been the overwhelming problem this season for the Dolphins, who finished the regular season with the weakest defense statistically among the 10 teams that made it to the National Football League playoffs. In seven of their 17 games, the Dolphins have yielded over 150 rushing yards and three times allowed over 200 — including 201 in a 17-13 loss to the Patriots at Foxboro, Mass.

The rematch, a 30-27 Miami win, was "our best game against the run," said Shula, whose team limited New England to 122 rushing yards.

The Miami defense will be asked to do it again on Sunday, because the Patriots will undoubtedly come out running. New England did that last Sunday, and gained 156 yards against a Los Angeles Raiders defense that had yielded just 100 a game. Craig James led the Pats with 104 yards, the only 100-yard effort by a back against the Raiders this year.

"I think we can run the ball on anybody," said James, whose 1,227 yards in the regular season ranked third in the AFC. "We have a great offensive line. It takes a great effort to stop our running game and it only sets up our passing when you concentrate on our running."

Miami's problem is made more acute by the fact that much of Cleveland's yardage came against the right side of the Dolphins defense.

This week, that side will be facing New England's left-side strength, perennial All-Pro guard John Hannah and tackle Brian Holloway, a three-time Pro Bowler and second-team All-Pro. In addition, center Pete Brock, who missed the first two Dolphin games with an injured knee, will be back.

The Dolphins, who adjusted and shut down the Browns after Earnest Byner's 66-yard touchdown run gave Cleveland an 18-point lead, profess not to be worried.

"We played New England on that Monday night down here as well as we've played this season," Shula said. "We have to play that way again."

"We'll be more prepared for them than we were for the Cleveland game," said nose tackle Mike Charles, who manhandled Brock's stand-in, Guy Morriss, the last time the two teams met. "I don't think the importance of last week's game sank in because we were playing the Browns. We didn't know them that well and we probably underestimated them."

One problem in stopping James, Miami defenders said, is not over-running him.

"James gets as much yardage when he cuts back as he does from moving straight ahead," defensive end Doug Betters said. "You have to make sure you're there because he likes to cut back just as he hits the line."

"Four yards a try. That's all we have to do. Limit them to four yards a try, none of those 8s, 10s and 12s," Betters said. "It's not that tough. All we have to try to do is not to get knocked off the line."

Perhaps the best method of controlling New England's running is for Miami to get ahead and force Tony Eason to throw. In its victory over the Patriots, Miami led 17-7 at halftime and 27-13 in the fourth quarter.

Eason's receiving corps has been depleted by an injury to Irving Fryar, who cut a tendon in the little finger of his right hand in a household accident on Wednesday.

Air Force's DeBerry Top I-A Coach; Sheridan I-AA

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Six years ago, Fisher DeBerry was thinking of leaving the coaching profession. A phone call changed his mind and now, after just two seasons as a head coach, DeBerry is major-college football's Coach of the Year.

"My family is so important to me and I was finding myself — where the university (he was offensive coordinator at Appalachian State) was located, in North Carolina — that I was spending so much time behind the wheel and being gone," DeBerry said. "I felt like my family needed me at that time and I was thinking very seriously about getting out."

But then came the phone call, from Ken Hatfield, head coach at the Air Force Academy.

"Ken convinced me that I wouldn't be gone as much," DeBerry said. "I'm not sure he was right, but you can drive two hours out of Boone (N.C.) and never be anywhere. In Colorado Springs, you can at least be out in about 30 minutes by the time you drive to the airport."

DeBerry arrived in Colorado Springs on March 1, 1980. After one year as quarterback coach, he became offensive coordinator. And when Hatfield went to Arkansas after being named American Football Coaches Association Coach of the Year in 1983, DeBerry succeeded him.

DeBerry received the same honor Thursday night, along with three division winners, at the AFCA's annual Kodak Coach of the Year banquet.

"To be able to win it that close to another person having won it at the Air Force Academy I think is a great, great compliment to the academy," said the 47-year-old DeBerry, who led the Falcons to a 12-1 record and a No. 8 national ranking in 1985.

"I think I'm a classic example to a lot of young coaches that it's important to coach at every level — at the high school level (in Bennettsville and Florence, S.C.), at the small-college level (Wofford, his alma mater), to the mid-size university (Appalachian) to the Division I level.

"I'm a classic example that if a guy's patient, works hard and does what's, hopefully, right, that every blind hog'll find an acorn every now and then."

Now DeBerry is in demand. Three schools put out feelers recently, but DeBerry says he feels "a really, really deep commitment to what the mission of the academy is all about."

Coaching at the Air Force Academy is a little more than just coaching football. The longer you stay at the academy, there's a certain pride there, there's some things that you can sense and feel that are really, really, really important.

"I think there's a definite feeling of commitment now on the part of our young people, but I feel the young people realize the reason they're going to college is to prepare for the future. I think they realize the tremendous opportunities that a service academy can offer them, not just for a career in the military but the quality of education that can lead them to so many other options and outstanding opportunities for their lives."

"I feel a deep commitment to the mission and responsibility that we have to the young people there, what they're going to become. It's exciting to be a part of that growth and development."

The other coaches honored with DeBerry were Dick Sheridan of Furman in University Division I-A, George Landis of Bloomsburg in College Division I and Bob Reade of Augustana, Ill., in College Division II. Reade, whose Augustana team has won three consecutive NCAA Division III championships, won the award for an unprecedented third year in a row, capturing a write-in vote over five regional winners.

DeBerry won the University Division I-A vote over Joe Paterno of Penn State, Jimmy Johnson of Miami, Fla., Bo Schembechler of Michigan and Bill McCartney of Colorado. The vote count and order of finish were not disclosed.

Sheridan, who also was Furman's athletic director, led the Paladins to the national Division I-AA playoff finals, then accepted the head coaching position at North Carolina State. He won over Bob Griffin of Rhode Island, Boots Donnelly of Middle Tennessee, Darrell Mudra of Northern Iowa and Larry Laceywell of Arkansas State.

Landis came to Bloomsburg four years ago to rebuild a program that had known only four winning seasons since 1960. Last fall, the Huskies were 11-0, the only undefeated regular season in the nation among NCAA Division II teams, and reached the national semifinals.

Landis won out over Steve Patton of Mars Hill, Bill Lynch of Butler, Dave Triplett of South Dakota and Bob Cortese of Mesa College.

Reade's 69-8 record in seven years at Augustana impressed the voters enough to select him over the five regional winners — Jim Butterfield of Ithaca, Barry Streeter of Gettysburg, Ken Wable of Mount Union, Larry Wilcox of Benedictine and Dale Widloff of Occidental.

Pitt Invitational Opens Tonight

WINTERVILLE — The Pitt Community College Invitational opens tonight at 7:30 p.m. with Martin Community College facing Beaufort at A.G. Cox Middle School.

In the 9:15 game, Pitt faces Wilson Tech. Roanoke-Chowan Tech will battle Sampson Tech at noon Saturday.

The championship game of the double elimination tournament is scheduled for Sunday at 4 p.m.

Bears To Counter Brown With Gault's Coverage

By The Associated Press

Feet, both flying and freezing, are a major concern as the Los Angeles Rams and Chicago Bears prepare for Sunday's National Football Conference championship game.

The Bears, concerned with the kickoff-return antics of the Rams' Ron Brown, plan to use their own world-class speedster, wide receiver Willie Gault, on kickoff coverage. He'll be the last line of defense against Brown, an Olympic sprinter who ran back three kicks for touchdowns.

While the Bears looked for ways to counter the Rams' speed, Los Angeles kicker Mike Lansford was trying to figure out how to protect his bare foot from the mid-winter cold in Chicago's Soldier Field.

"I really don't know yet what I'll do," said Lansford, who will take a variety of footwear to Chicago.

"If it gets real, real cold, I'll wear the scuba boot. The ski boot's for me to wear on the sidelines."

Although the gametime forecast is for temperatures in the 30-40 degree range, the Rams, who flew to Chicago Thursday night, have been preparing for sub-freezing conditions. Lansford and the rest of the team worked out this week at sun-splashed Rams Park wearing assorted cold-weather gear, including gloves and various items of the rubber-like scuba wear.

Lansford, who connected on 22 of 29 field goals this season and led the Rams in scoring with 104 points, said that even if his foot gets extremely cold, he won't feel any pain when he kicks.

"There's so much adrenalin going out there, you can really block out the weather, ignore the cold," he said.

"You've got to realize, this is my job, to kick the ball through the uprights regardless of the conditions. And this game is to go to the Super Bowl."

Lansford, a fourth-year pro out of the University of Washington, said the pressure of possibly being the man to win or lose the game also goes along with the job.

"Being a kicker, I'm subjected to pressure every game," he explained. "This is a bigger game, obviously, but I'm going to approach it as just another game."

"I've kicked under pressure before. I kicked a (42-yard) field goal with two seconds left to beat New Orleans and put us in the playoffs a couple of years ago."

Chicago Coach Mike Ditka has said the only good thing about kicking off to the Rams is the idea that the Bears would have just scored. But with Brown waiting for the kickoff, the Rams have the NFL's best retaliation threat. That's where Gault comes in.

Reed Will Make His Explanation

RALEIGH (AP) — Former North Carolina State football coach Tom Reed says he will meet with Wolfpack football players next week to explain his reasons for resigning from that job last month.

Reed announced his resignation as the players were leaving school for the semester.

"I'm kind of thankful that I did not have an opportunity to talk to them at that time because that would have been a difficult time," Reed said in an interview with WRAL-TV in Raleigh. "We're going to have a chance to go over a few things and talk with them as a group, get things on an upbeat note."

Dick Sheridan, the football coach at Furman, was named to replace Reed.

Reed didn't say at the time of his resignation what his future plans would be, and he didn't reveal anything in the television interview, which was shown Thursday.

"I love football," he said. "But I don't know what opportunities are going to present themselves immediately."

When asked whether he was pressured into resigning by N.C. State athletic officials, Reed said the decision was his own.

"The reasons go on and on and on. I'm a very strong-willed person," Reed said. "That's one thing I preached to the players, that dignity is the most important thing you can have in your whole life. It's not the money ... but the dignity and pride you have in your life will live forever."

Junior High Basketball

BETHEL — Bethel Elementary swept a pair of junior high basketball games against Chicod Thursday.

In the boys' game, Randy House netted 22 points to lead Bethel to a 51-29 win over Chicod. Roosevelt Hines chipped in 11 points and Paul Brown 10. Keith Pugh posted eight points for Chicod.

Bethel defeated Chicod 26-8 in the girls game behind Letitia Council's 12 points.

COX-WHITFIELD

WINTERVILLE — A.G. Cox defeated G.R. Whitfield 49-28 in the boys' game, but Whitfield took the girls' game 19-15 Thursday in junior high basketball action.

Terry Williams scored 12 points to lead Cox in the boys' game, while Eric Edwards paced Whitfield with 16.

In the girls' game, Glenda Hardy netted 14 points for Whitfield, and Stacy Gardner paced Cox with 8.

FARMVILLE-WELCOME

FARMVILLE — Wellcome Middle School defeated Farmville 31-19 in the boys' game, and Farmville took a 27-22 win over Wellcome in the girls' game Thursday in junior high basketball action.

V. Best paced Farmville's girls with 17 points, while Renee Thigpen posted 10 for Wellcome.

In the boys' game, Reginald Daniels led Wellcome with 11 points, while Jarvin Lang had 9 for Farmville.

Every card tells a story. You can learn as much about declarer's hand from what he does not play as from what he does. Here's an example of what we mean. You might like to cover the East and South hands and see how you would fare on defense against South's contract of three no trump.

Let's suppose that North-South reach this normal contract via the auction shown. There is no reason for you to lead anything other than a normal fourth best of your longest and strongest suit. Dummy's jack of clubs wins the first trick and declarer continues with the queen.

What do you know about the hand? You should realize that, if you duck, you have given declarer his ninth trick! Also, unless you can take five tricks in a hurry, there is no way that you are going to stop declarer from making his game.

What's the tip-off? The fact that declarer did not go after diamonds, the suit from which he surely expects to get most of his tricks, can mean only one thing: declarer does not need to establish the suit because he has the ace. Therefore, if you allow declarer to win a second club trick, he can take six diamonds and the ace of spades for his contract.

Equally obvious, then, is that you must win the ace of clubs and attack hearts. The only suit in which you can hope to collect four fast tricks is the one bid by declarer. True, you will need a considerable amount of luck; partner will have to hold at least three hearts including the A-10-8. But slim though this chance is, any hope is better than none at all. Your shift to a low heart brings its just reward.

Faircloth Expected To Enter Senate Race

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten says ex-Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, expected to declare his candidacy for the U.S. Senate next week, is the man Democratic Party officials are looking for. "I think he's the person who can bring the party together, and he can bring people to the Democratic fold that nobody else can," he said in a telephone interview. "He's leaning very heavily toward announcing the first of next week," said Edmisten, who defeated Faircloth and four other contenders for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1984. Faircloth supported Edmisten in his successful primary campaign against former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox. Edmisten lost to Republican Jim Martin in the general election.

Speaking Thursday on condition that they not be identified, Faircloth supporters said the Clinton businessman would file for entry into the race for the Democratic nomination by Wednesday, depending on the pace of his continuing recovery from hernia surgery last weekend.

Edmisten said his own network of supporters was ready to unite behind Faircloth, who he said has an image as a "good moderate to conservative with a great vision for the future."

Reached by telephone at his home, Faircloth said he would issue a statement the first of next week, but would not elaborate on its contents. "Things do look real good," he said. "And this isn't just hopeful candidate enthusiasm. I have called literally hundreds of people across the state, and so far I haven't found anybody who said they would not be supportive. ... I feel a united effort coming forth that I never expected."

Former state Sen. Melvin Daniels, of Elizabeth City, who announced last fall he would run for the Senate nomination, said Thursday he would forgo the race — a decision based partly on what he called Faircloth's likely candidacy.

"I believe he will file as a candidate next week," Daniels said. He said he could not match the fundraising ability of Faircloth and another eastern North Carolina candidate, Greenville attorney Marvin Blount.

Edmisten and Daniels said they did not expect former Gov. Terry Sanford to enter the race for the seat held by retiring Sen. John East, R-N.C. Sanford and Faircloth are longtime political allies.

Sanford, who showed interest in the race last September but later announced he would not run, reportedly is reassessing that decision and has been contacting supporters.

Filing for the office this week were Blount, Charlotte businessman William Belk, Mecklenburg County Commissioner Fountain Odom, and Betty Wallace, a state education official from Raleigh. Katherine Harper, a Charlotte businesswoman, has said she will file next week.

None of those hopefuls has statewide name recognition, and Democratic leaders have searched for a more prominent figure since former Gov. Jim Hunt removed himself from consideration in September.

On the Republican side, David Funderburk, a former U.S. ambassador to Romania, repeated his challenge to Rep. Jim Broyhill to debate.

"Should you again decline my invitation ... I can only regretfully conclude that in this campaign it is your intention to avoid any direct discussion of important issues," Funderburk said in a letter to Broyhill, copies of which were distributed to reporters.

Funderburk, who is supported by the National Congressional Club, said several television stations had agreed to provide air time and facilities for debates. He said he would adjust his schedule to fit Broyhill's if the GOP congressman would participate in debates.

Broyhill spokesman Doug Haynes said Broyhill had no plan to debate Funderburk, but was not ruling it out.

"He feels that he has nothing to gain from a debate, really," Haynes said. "He is taking his campaign around the state and letting voters know his stance on the issues."

Broyhill has agreed to appear in a forum for Senate candidates of both parties Jan. 31 in Chapel Hill, Haynes said. The forum will be sponsored by the North Carolina Press Association.

IN THE STATE

Speakers Balk At Waste Plant

RALEIGH (AP) — If North Carolina is drafted to host a regional treatment facility for low-level radioactive waste, the state should refuse to bury the waste, said speakers at a public hearing.

"Do nothing, require nothing, and permit nothing without a comprehensive, well-thought-out plan of how we're going to handle this waste disposal ...," Cumberland County attorney Neil Yarborough said Thursday. "I think the entire history of nuclear waste disposal is one which is replete with improvisations, temporary solutions and subsequent disasters."

Speakers said the waste should be stored at the sites of waste generators such as nuclear power plants before it is compacted or burned.

The hearing was designed to give North Carolina's two members of the Southeast Compact Commission for Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management input as they prepare a report for the commission.

Each state in the compact, except South Carolina, which currently hosts the region's only disposal facility at Barnwell, S.C., must submit reports describing the terms under which it would agree to host a radioactive waste facility; the type of facility appropriate for the state; and a schedule for developing a waste facility.

Ultimately, the compact will select a state to host the facility if none volunteers. The Barnwell facility is scheduled to stop receiving regional wastes in 1993.

State Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, and Duke University researcher William Briner, North Carolina's two compact members, promised to consider the speakers' remarks in compiling their report due Jan. 27.

But they expressed frustration that several speakers called for policies that did not appear consistent with the mandate to deal with nuclear waste on a regional basis.

Miller said one proposal that cropped up frequently was to store the wastes at the site of generation, which would require having many facilities in all eight states and fly in the face of the regional concept.

Federal Judges Refusing To Work

GREENSBORO (AP) — Until Congress changes a law that requires retired federal judges to pay Social Security taxes if they work, two of the state's U.S. District Court judges have refused to take on any new cases.

Judges John Larkins Jr. and Franklin Dupree Jr., both of the Eastern District, are continuing to handle the caseload assigned them before Dec. 31.

But "both have declined to take any new judicial assignments until Congress does something about this mess," said Richard Leonard, court clerk for the Eastern District.

U.S. District Court judges Eugene Gordon of the Middle District and Woodrow Jones of the Western District are continuing to take new cases, officials said.

Appointed for life, federal judges continue to receive full pay after they retire, or take "senior status." Most continue to work, but with a reduced workload.

Congress included senior federal judges in the Social Security system in 1983 when it required all federal employees to begin paying the tax. But it exempted the judges until Jan. 1.

Now, judges on senior status who continue working must pay up to $3,003 a year in Social Security taxes and forfeit some benefits. Since judges receive the same salary whether they work or not, any work is voluntary.

"They are volunteering to perform these services, and the pay they receive as a result of that is going to be subjected to tax," said Marshall Hurley, an aide to U.S. Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C. "If they stay at home, they are not subject to that tax. Imposing the tax gives them an incentive not to go back to work."

Congress adjourned for Christmas without approving a bill that would extend the exemption. If the exemption is not extended by Congress soon, it could cause problems for the courts, officials say.

"It's requiring some reshuffling," Leonard said. "If it's a brief period of time, we can cover. If it drags on indefinitely, we'll begin to see a backlog developing."

Liability Surcharge To Climb In April

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Reinsurance Facility has approved a new annual surcharge of 38.9 percent, effective April 1, for all private passenger automobile liability policies and a 6.2 percent surcharge for commercial liability policies issued through the facility.

The reinsurance facility was created to insure those drivers who are classified as high risks and who insurance companies are unwilling to insure voluntarily. State law requires that drivers have liability insurance and it requires that insurance companies provide the coverage.

State law allows insurers to place high-risk policies in the facility and to share the losses incurred in claims on those policies among all companies selling automobile liability insurance.

'We Are The World' Tops Grammy Nominees' List

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "We Are The World," the anti-hunger anthem recorded by 45 top artists, received six nominations for the 28th Grammy Awards, while Dire Straits and its leader Mark Knopfler led in other top categories.

"We Are The World," which raised $44 million in contributions to feed Africa's hungry, received top album and record nominations, a song of the year nod for Lionel Richie and Michael Jackson, best performance by a pop duo or group, best recording for children as performed by a group called Children of the World, and a nomination for best short form video Thursday.

The awards will be presented Feb. 25 and broadcast by nationally CBS-TV.

"The Grammy nomination is an opportunity for this song," said promoter Ken Kragen, who organized USA For Africa, the 45 pop stars who recorded the song. "The message of this song is the most important message of our time."

Knopfler was named in eight categories, all except one tied to his work with Dire Straits, a no-nonsense British band that offers well-crafted guitar work.

However, the band received only three nominations: for best album, record and best rock performance by a duo or group. The last two categories were for their hit "Money For Nothing," a working man's view of easy money in the rock world.

Phil Collins, Tina Turner and Sting had five nominations each, while rocker Bruce Springsteen received one nomination, record of the year, for his "Born In The U.S.A." single.

Classical producer Robert E. Woods received seven nominations and producer David Foster received six. Former Eagle Don Henley and Huey Lewis each received four.

Other nominees included Whitney Houston, whose self-titled debut LP won nominations for best album and best pop vocal performance with "Saving All My Love For You."

A former model, Miss Houston is the daughter of gospel singer Cissy Houston and niece of pop superstar Dionne Warwick.

Julian Lennon, son of slain ex-Beatle John Lennon was nominated for best new artist, and Stevie Wonder for best male pop vocal performance for "Part-Time Lover."

Cyndi Lauper was nominated for best rock solo performance on "What A Thrill." Veteran San Francisco rockers Starship, descendants of the 1960s group Jefferson Airplane, were nominated for best rock vocal performance by a duo or group for "We Built This City."

Madonna was nominated for best female pop performance for "Crazy for You." John Fogerty, onetime leader of Creedence Clearwater Revival, capped a comeback year with a male rock performance nomination for his album "Centerfield."

Two members of the old Eagles rock band also were nominated: Henley's angst-filled "Boys of Summer" single was nominated for record and song of the year, and Henley was nominated with others as producer of the year. Glenn Frey's "The Heat Is On," a snappy tune from the movie "Beverly Hills Cop" was nominated for best male pop vocal performance.

Knopfler was nominated with Sting for writing a song of the year, "Money for Nothing," and for his work both as a producer and a musician on "Brothers In Arms" and "Money for Nothing." He also was nominated for best engineered recording for the Dire Straits album, best producer, and best country instrumental with Chet Atkins for "Cosmic Square Dance."

Collins, who recently returned to the studio for drummer duties with the long-lived British group Genesis, was nominated for album of the year with his "No Jacket Required" LP, pop male vocal of the year, best short form video, best pop performance by a duo or group for his "Easy Lover" single with Philip Bailey, and producer of the year.

Sting, who launched a solo career with his jazz-influenced "The Dream of the Blue Turtles" album, was nominated for best album, best jazz instrumental for the title track, best song along with Knopfler for "Money for Nothing," best video of more than 30 minutes for an appearance with his old group The Police, and best-engineered recording for "The Dream of the Blue Turtles."

Miss Turner, who won three Grammys in 1985 to cap a smashing comeback year, was nominated for best pop female vocals for "We Don't Need Another Hero," best rock solo performance for "One of the Living," best rock performance by a duo or group for "It's Only Love" with Bryan Adams, and two video nominations.

Movie Planned

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Actress Faye Dunaway says she hopes to film a movie in North Florida soon, an adaptation of the novel "Cold Sassy Tree." Miss Dunaway was in Tallahassee on Wednesday to have lunch with Gov. Bob Graham and discuss the project.

24-Hour 'Smile' Channel Launched On Cable TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Feeling a bit blue? Is life getting you down? Is TV keeping you down? Looking for a little levity to complement Cable News Network?

Take my channel ... please!

Henny Youngman's famous line could be the promotional come-on for the latest in cable television's single-minded networks, the Comedy Channel. First came all-day movies, then 24-hour networks for weather, sports, news and music videos.

Now, if Tom Kay, creator of the Comedy Channel, has his way, cable audiences always can have the last laugh.

Think of it this way: You'll never have to feel alone anymore. Anytime, any day, you can be in your living room yukking it up with strangers. Only in America could you find a 24-hour comedy channel with a 'round-the-clock laugh track.

"What the world definitely needs is more laughter," said Kay. "Laughter is one of life's great pleasures, and it's a lot healthier than Valium."

The channel's slogan is "Turn On the Comedy," and its logo is a heart "because everybody likes to laugh," said Kay, 31, who 10 years ago was a solar energy consultant. Now he finds himself working to get his 24-hour smile button off the ground.

"By the end of the year I expect to be on the cover of Time magazine," he said. For the past three years, he's been lining up programs, staff, backers, and cable systems.

Kay said Ben Schulman, former banker and real estate executive and Kay's landlord at the Schulman Video Center in Los Angeles, is the Comedy Television Company's chief financial supporter. Kay said he needs at least $20 million for the channel's first two years.

Charles Manatt, former chairman of the Democratic Party, is a partner in the law firm representing the venture. The company is negotiating for satellite space and expects to announce a start-up date at the National Cable Television Association show in March.

Kay expects to be in 5 million to 10 million homes at the beginning and 13 million by the end of the year.

"We're riding on the coattails of 'The Cosby Show' and 'Ghostbusters,'" Kay said. "We did market research studies and found that what makes a channel work is strong identification, like Playboy, Disney, news, MTV, weather and sports. Comedy has strong grabbing power."

Tom Trbovich, longtime director for films, sitcoms and the "We Are the World" music video, is in charge of the channel's production look.

"It won't look like anything else," said Kay. "We'll have one funny bit after another, everything and anything that's funny."

There will be comedy hosts, like the veejays on MTV, and continuing oddball characters, including a pair of pet monkeys named Bozo and Suzie.

FOCUS

Evading the Issue

These legislators may be happy about the new tax-reform bill that recently passed the House. But law-abiding citizens might be even more content if the Internal Revenue Service could nab the tax evaders who indirectly force us all to pay higher taxes. For example, each year bookies in the United States evade about $4 billion annually in federal taxes. No taxes are paid on more than $50 billion worth of bets on horse racing and other sporting events.

DO YOU KNOW — The Internal Revenue Service is a branch of what federal department?

NOTICE

Pursuant to Section 73.3594 of the Rules of the Federal Communications Commission, the applicant East Coast Media Limited, of Greenville, North Carolina, gives notice of the following:

The applicants designated for hearing are Community Service Telecasters, Inc., East Coast Media Limited, and Dr. James Wingate, d/b/a Winard Broadcasting.

All applicants propose to operate a commercial television station on Channel 38, Greenville, North Carolina.

The hearing shall convene at 10:00 a.m. on January 19, 1986, at the offices of the Federal Communications Commission, Washington, D.C.

The issues in the hearing as listed in the FCC Order of Designation of Hearing are:

a. To determine, with respect to Winard Broadcasting, whether there is a reasonable possibility that the lower height and location proposed would constitute a hazard to air navigation.

b. If a final environmental impact statement is issued with respect to Community Service Telecasters, Inc., which concludes that the proposed facilities are likely to have an adverse effect on the quality of the environment.

i. to determine whether the applicant's proposal is consistent with the National Environmental Policy Act, as implemented by Sections 1.301-1.319 of the Commission's Rules; and

ii. whether, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to (a) above, the applicant is qualified to construct and operate as proposed.

c. To determine, with respect to East Coast Media Limited, whether its proposal is consistent with Section 73.3555 of the Commission's Rules and the Commission's cross interest policy and if not, whether grant of its application would be consistent with the public interest.

d. To determine which of the proposals would, on a comparative basis, best serve the public interest.

e. To determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the foregoing issues, which of the applications should be granted.

The application of East Coast Media Limited, is on file for public inspection at 913 915 Dickson Avenue, Greenville, North Carolina, 27834, January 1, 3, 8, 10, 1986.

JOB ANNOUNCEMENT

Pamlico Sound Legal Services (PSLS) has a temporary "Community Educator Assistant" position available immediately. PSLS provides free legal assistance to low income people in Beaufort, Dare, Craven, Hyde, Jones, Martin, Pamlico, Pitt, Tyrrel and Washington Counties.

The job entails identifying legal issues within the program's client community which are susceptible to resolution through a community legal education approach and devising and implementing community legal education activities as an assistant to our Community Educator to address these issues.

AVAILABILITY
 The position is available for a period of six (6) months and may become permanent contingent, among other things, upon funding.

QUALIFICATIONS
 Applicants should have work experience or academic training in community education, adult education and education media for community based groups. They must have writing and speaking skills to communicate with people having a broad range of formal education and demonstrate a commitment to working with problems of low income people. Applicants must also have a N.C. Driver's license and a willingness to work some evenings and weekends to carry out the job duties.

SALARY AND BENEFITS
 The beginning salary is $11,887 annually. PSLS also has an excellent fringe benefit program.

HOW TO APPLY
 The position is available immediately. To apply, submit a letter stating your interest, a resume, and a list of three references no later than February 7, 1986, to:
 Dianne Bohannon
 Administrative Assistant
 Pamlico Sound Legal Services
 P.O. Box 1187
 New Bern, NC 28580
 PSLS is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. Minorities, women, elderly and handicapped persons are encouraged to apply.

Today's Cryptquip clue: R equals N

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JAN. 11, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day for doing whatever requires your attention of a routine nature in such a manner that is more up-to-date and more in alignment with current conditions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Know what your personal desires are and try to handle them in a more interesting manner and be happier.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A good day to handle some public or credit affair that can bring you greater success. If you need a favor, don't approach an old fogey.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get into new kinds of activities that can bring you excellent benefits. Put your ideas to work quickly.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Plan some new way to handle your business affairs so they will be easier and more profitable in the future.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Put aside that Leo pride and contact those who can aid you at this time and you will get ahead faster.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to shop around for mechanisms that can make your work load easier and more profitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can enjoy usual recreations with greater relish now. Keep a promise to your mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You want to make radical changes at home, but this is not the right time to do so, so study your plans better.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to handle correspondence and travel matters wisely. A word of praise to your partners will bring excellent results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy at any repair work you can do yourself and save money. Let your budgeting be more modern and get better results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get your most original plans worked out successfully today. Take time to see persons whose ideas are as progressive as yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If there is something you do not approve of at home, make the changes quickly and be happy.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be alert to whatever is going on, especially current events, and will also be very aware of modern conditions in the world. Don't try to change the unique way of doing things since the greatest success can come because of this trait.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Publication

PEKING (AP) — China and the Soviet Union will publish jointly an old transcript of the classic Chinese novel "A Dream of Red Mansions," the official Xinhua News Agency said.
 Xinhua said the transcript, kept in the Leningrad branch of the Institute of Orientalology of the Soviet Union's Academy of Sciences, was taken from China by a Russian in 1832. A microfilm of the transcript was shipped to China from the Soviet Union last November, Xinhua said. The 3,500-page, 35-volume transcript is the 12th China has found of the 16th century novel about Chinese nobility.

Resignation Shocks British

Cabinet Dispute Splits Tories

LONDON (AP) — The governing Conservative Party was reported today to be split "top to bottom" over the resignation of Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine, who declared that honor dictated he quit in a dispute over the sale of a helicopter company.

After stalking out of a Cabinet meeting Thursday, Heseltine told a news conference he quit because Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was trying to silence his campaign against a U.S.-led takeover of Britain's only helicopter manufacturer, Westland PLC.

His resignation shocked fellow ministers, who had just agreed that any statement on the Westland sale had to be cleared by the Cabinet.

The London Times said today that the Conservative Party was "split from top to bottom" over Heseltine's resignation.

"Senior politicians across the political spectrum, past and present, ... agreed that the extraordinary events which led up to Mr. Heseltine's departure, with Cabinet minister openly against Cabinet minister, are unprecedented this century," the Times said.

It quoted Lord Home, Conservative prime minister in 1963-64 as saying, "I cannot recall any parallel to this," Lord Wilson, Labor prime minister from 1964-70 and 1974-76, was quoted as saying, "I don't recall anything like it. ... It is much more public than anything that happened in my time."

The British domestic news agency Press Association reported, "Allegations Mr. Heseltine made about (the) prime minister ... have re-awakened doubts in the minds of some Tory members of Parliament about her style of leadership."

"And some Tories, disturbed by the allegations, are privately inviting Labor to (draw up) a motion of censure on Mrs. Thatcher, promising that they would not vote against it," it said.

Heseltine told the news conference, "If the basis of trust between the prime minister and her defense secretary no longer exists, there is no place for me with honor in such a Cabinet. ... I had no choice but to accept or to resign. I left the Cabinet."

He said Mrs. Thatcher had permitted "a deliberate attempt to avoid addressing" such vital issues as defense procurement and "Britain's future as a technologically advanced country."

"This is not a proper way to carry on government and ultimately not an approach for which I can share responsibility," he said in his statement, which repeatedly elicited gasps of amazement from British reporters and Defense Ministry officials.

Heseltine wants a British-European consortium to buy Westland, which lost $138 million in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30. Westland's board of directors, however, unanimously accepted a bid from the U.S. company Sikorsky, a subsidiary of United Technologies, and the Italian automaker Fiat.

Westland's stockholders are due to make a decision next Tuesday. The two bids were nearly equal at about $105 million.

The government had declared itself neutral in the matter, but Heseltine argued that under the U.S. company, Westland "might tend to become little more than a production facility for Sikorsky and to lose its own helicopter design and development capacity."

Since shortly before Christmas, he and Trade and Industry Secretary Leon Brittan repeatedly clashed over the Westland issue in statements and media interviews, reportedly to the intense annoyance of Mrs. Thatcher.

Cabinet discussion is supposed to take place behind closed doors.

In a letter to Heseltine released by Mrs. Thatcher's office, she said she accepted his resignation with great regret and thanked him for his contribution to Conservative governments over the years. Her office had no other comment.

Heseltine, 52, a former environment secretary, was made defense secretary by Mrs. Thatcher in 1983.

After Heseltine left the Cabinet meeting, Mrs. Thatcher quickly asked George Younger, who has been secretary of state for Scotland since 1979, to take the defense post. Younger, 54, accepted.

Opposition politicians quickly exploited Heseltine's departure. David Owen, head of the centrist Social Democratic Party, said Mrs. Thatcher had a "presidential style" contrary to the British tradition of a prime minister's being first among equals.

Airliner Receives Bomb Threat

ROME (AP) — An Air France jetliner flying to Greece with 111 people aboard made an unscheduled landing at Leonardo da Vinci airport today after an anonymous caller telephoned a bomb threat, police reported.

A preliminary search by police bomb experts turned up no explosives aboard the Airbus 300, police said.

The jet was flying over the southern Italian city of Naples on a flight from Paris to Athens, Greece, when flight controllers ordered it to land at Rome's airport, police said.

Police said an anonymous telephone caller told an Olympic Airways office in Athens that a bomb was hidden on the plane.

Athens Airport security sources told The Associated Press that an anonymous woman called the Olympic Airways central switchboard at Athens' airport to say a bomb was aboard Air France Flight 600.

The sources said the woman said the plane would blow up when it landed at Athens airport.

Athens security officers notified the pilot, and the plane touched down at Rome's airport at 11:50 a.m. It parked at a remote corner, surrounded by fire trucks and am-balances while bomb disposal experts searched the plane, Italian police said.

The passengers and the crew were taken to the terminal, police said.

Last June 14, security at the Athens airport was criticized after Shiite extremists hijacked TWA's Athens-to-Rome Flight 847 and diverted it to the Beirut airport in a standoff that lasted until June 30.

Deadly Rains

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Four days of torrential rain in central Sri Lanka caused floods and landslides that killed at least 21 people and left 8,000 more homeless, officials said.

Sri Lanka, the island formerly known as Ceylon, is located off the southeast coast of India.

In the Maturata area of the central tea-growing district of central Nuwara Eliya, a landslide buried three homes, killing all 14 residents. A separate landslide in the same area killed another seven people, officials said.

Officials said most of those left homeless by flooding came from the rice-growing flatlands of the north-central and eastern provinces.
