Intervention Feared After Ship Incident

By NABILA MEGALLI
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran's interception of a U.S. freighter has increased fears in the Persian Gulf of superpower intervention in the Iran-Iraq border war as Iran apparently escalates its campaign to detain any ships suspected of supplying Iraq.

An Arab diplomat based in Kuwait said he believed "the Americans would not hesitate to shoot to kill if their ships were endangered in the region." He spoke on condition of anonymity.

"The French at one stage sent a warship to escort a French-flag merchant ship in the gulf, and in recent weeks the Iranians harassed a British ship, and now we have the Americans being forced to protect their ships," said another Arab diplomat, also speaking on condition of anonymity.

"The situation is fraught with danger, and the American warships are not exactly safe to play with," said the diplomat, who also spoke on condition he not be identified.

The U.S. warships — the destroyer Conolly and the frigate Boone — were sent as a precautionary move to the Gulf of Oman, where the U.S. freighter President Taylor was stopped and boarded Sunday by Iranian sailors. U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said the warships were there "to prevent anything other than what happened."

A maritime shipping agent in the United Arab Emirates said U.S. Navy units were "shadowing" American merchant ships in and near Persian Gulf sea lanes to protect them against harassment by Iran.

In Washington, however, State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said in a statement Monday that a nation at war traditionally has "certain rights" under the rules of naval warfare to find out whether neutral freighters are supplying contraband to the enemy.

"We are continuing to assess the facts of this particular incident, not all of which are yet known, to determine whether the stop-and-search was appropriate under the circumstances," Kalb said.

Iran has said the move was allowed by international law. The 39,000-ton President Taylor, the first U.S. ship stopped by Iran, was bound from Pakistan to the gulf port of Fujaira in the United Arab Emirates.

No property damage or injuries resulted. Iran and Iraq have been fighting an indecisive border war since September 1980, when Iraq sent troops into Iran.

Neutral tankers first came under attack in 1983 when Iraq, determined to deprive Iran of the oil revenues needed to fight the war, threatened to attack any ships coming within 50 miles of Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal.

Iran — which unlike Iraq, is not an Arab state — retaliated by raiding Arab and other vessels in international waters south of the zone declared off-limits by Iraq.

Iran's Parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, warned at one point that if the Persian Gulf sea lanes were not kept secure for Iran's oil exports, then they would be "made insecure for all" countries.

On Oct. 18, Iran tried to intercept a French freighter, prompting a French warship in the vicinity to move in and chase away the Iranians.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Monday that in 1985 the International Maritime Organization reported 16 civilian ships were detained and searched by Iran's navy.

He said Iran confiscated cargo from Chinese and Danish ships on the grounds that it was bound for Iraq, and ships with West German, Japanese, Dutch, Italian and Yugoslav owners also were stopped and searched.

Perez de Cuellar also said the International Maritime Organization reported 45 other incidents in the gulf in 1985, including Iraqi air attacks on ships sailing to or from Iranian ports.

The United States is neutral in the Iraq-Iran conflict, but last year restored relations with Iraq after an 18-year break.

Meanwhile, the direct hostilities between Iran and Iraq showed no signs of ending. The two sides report almost daily skirmishes along their 733-mile warfront, each claiming victories that cannot be independently confirmed.

Arab diplomatic sources here said Iraqi air superiority probably would keep Iran from decisive victory should it invade Iraq, while the Iraqis have

Haigler Named New BW Chief; Sullivan Leaves

Theodore E. Haigler Jr. is the new president of the Burroughs Wellcome Company, officials have announced. He succeeds William M. Sullivan, who resigned Monday to pursue other business interests.

The announcement of Sullivan's resignation and Haigler's succession to the presidency of the pharmaceutical firm which has its manufacturing facilities in Greenville was made to company employees Monday afternoon.

Haigler, 61, who has business and law degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is the former vice president and chief financial officer of the company. Sullivan, who had been president and chairman of the company, will have his title as chairman assumed by A.J. Shepperd, chairman of the company's British parent company.

Haigler has been with Burroughs Wellcome since 1970 when he was named chief financial officer. A native of Johnsonville, S.C., he previously has been a comptroller for Martin Marietta Corporation in New York and for Superior Stone Company in Raleigh. He is a director of the Durham-based CCB Financial Corporation, holding company for Central Carolina Bank, and a trustee of Rex Hospital in Raleigh.

Sullivan has been with Burroughs Wellcome since 1973 as vice president, secretary and general counsel. He became executive vice president in June, 1981, then president in November, 1981, when Fred A. Coe Jr., president for 13 years, resigned.

The company, said to be the pharmaceutical firm with the 16th largest sales in the U.S., employs 1,400 persons in Greenville and 1,000 at its research and development arm in the Research Triangle Park. The Wellcome Foundation Ltd., the London-based parent company, reported sales of $1 billion for the fiscal year ending in September.

Proposal Worries New Bern Public Radio Facility

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A public radio station in New Bern is criticizing a proposal to establish a second eastern North Carolina public radio station near Farmville.

Edward G. Macomber, general manager of WTEB public radio in New Bern, said today the station's "main concern is survival at a time when we are just getting our wings dry. Another public radio station in the area would definitely result in considerable duplication of programming, and would duplicate efforts each year to raise private funds for two stations serving basically the same area."

The second public radio station, if established, would operate at a location near Farmville under the auspices of the University of North

Jones Will Run

FARMVILLE — First District Congressman Walter Jones announced here this morning that he filed today for re-election to his 12th term in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Jones, who will be 73 in August, said "I intend to campaign on the value of my seniority as well as my position as chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, and equally important, as ranking member of the House Agriculture Committee."

"I believe that my voting record through the years meets with the approval of the majority of the people in the 1st District (and) I am confident that no other congressional office has rendered greater personal service to their constituents than has our office."

Jones said "based on this record and the power of seniority, I thought it only fair to offer my services again to the people of our great 1st District for the 100th Congress."

A 1934 graduate of N.C. State University, Jones served in the N.C. House of Representatives from 1955 to 1959, then served in the N.C. Senate in 1965 and 1966, before his election to Congress in 1966.

Tucker Will Seek Pitt Board Seat

Incumbent Pitt County Commissioner Burney Tucker of Winterville, filed for re-election to the board on Monday.

Tucker, a commissioner for the past 14 years, said "Pitt County is one of the leading counties in the state. I'm glad to have had a part in its development and hope I can continue to serve the people of the county."

A Winterville High School graduate, Tucker worked for the Pitt County school garage from 1938-42, when he enlisted in the U.S. Navy. After his discharge from the navy in 1945 as a chief petty officer, Tucker worked on the tobacco market, then from 1947-50 served as a veteran's instructor with the Pitt County school system, then was deputy tax collector with the county until 1955.

He left the school system in 1955 to enter the fertilizer business, where (Please turn to page 10)

Quilting Styles Will Aid Historical Dates

From COUNTRY HOME
An in-depth knowledge of textile history is necessary to accurately date quilts from America's past. Particularly in isolated areas, quilting changed little over the years, so only a quilt's fabric — not its style — is of use in deducing its story.

While few collectors can claim such expertise, most do enjoy knowing from whence their quilts came. According to Country Home magazine, even the novice collector will be able to place a wide number of quilts in their proper historical perspective by learning to recognize the most typical quilting styles of certain major epochs.

During the years between the American Revolution and the beginning of the westward migration, bedcovers blossomed with cotton cutouts salvaged from leftover bits of expensive European chintz. Using a method called broderie perse (Persian embroidery), women carefully snipped around the bird and flower motifs of the imported chintzes and applied them on fields of plain domestic cloth to make the most of the patterned fabric available to them. Patchwork precursors of the pioneer quilts were also common, and many combined both the patchwork and the broderie perse techniques. Early quilts were usually constructed by adding border strips to a large, central fabric panel, giving the bedcover a framed effect. Two other early quilt types are linsey-woolsey and white work. Linsey-woolsey quilts were made from large, vividly colored pieces of homespun sewn to a linen or wool backing and lavishly quilted in large floral or feather motifs. White work bedcovers, often called bridal quilts, were quilted in intricate patterns using the tiniest of stitches.

During the years of the westward journey, from 1840 to 1870, the majority of America's pieced quilts were stitched. As families moved West, fabric (though readily available in the East) once again became a scarce commodity. That scarcity led to uniquely American patchwork masterpieces.

These were the years of the Hole in the Barn Door, the Rocky Mountain Puzzle, and hundreds of other patchwork patterns that reflected both the joys and sorrows of women's lives during pioneer times. Each one a work of art created out of the scrap bag, these quilts were stitched of geometric pieces painstakingly cut from years of cast-off clothing and tired household linens. Only on occasion were these precious scraps teamed with a new piece of cloth.

Techniques as well as tastes changed during this part of the 19th century. Overblown chintzes and monochrome copperplate prints made way for tiny domestic calicoes, roller printed in a new range of hues made possibly by the advent of color-fast synthetic dyes. The cramped quarters of prairie homesteads called for quilting on a smaller scale, so women turned to piecing and appliqueing lap-sized blocks rather than beginning with a quilt-sized piece of cloth.

Applique quilts remained popular during these years, particularly in the more affluent East and South. But, because they usually required new cloth to execute their careful color schemes, applique quilts often lack the earthy exuberance of the scrap bag quilts from the same era.

By the 1860s the sewing machine had begun to lighten the daily sewing tasks of thousands of American women, but quilting itself remained primarily a manual task. Practicality aside, quilting by machine would have put an end to the quilting bee — that cherished social event that made pioneer life a little easier to bear.

Hastily thrown up shanties along the westward trail made way for gingerbread mansions filled to the rafters with sumptuous furnishings and awash with a rainbow of brilliant colors. The quilts of the late 1800s illustrate the extravagance of the Victorian age. In fact, the quilts that most typify those years when Victoria last reigned in England are not really quilts at all, but thin parlor throws meant to thrill the eye — not warm the body. At home on the tabletops, sofa arms and piano backs of overstuffed parlors, these throws had neither quilting nor batting.

Pieced from the best silks, satins and velvets (materials newly available to the growing middle class), the patchwork throws of this era are rich mosaics of color and texture. Fine quilting was no longer the skill of importance; proficiency in embroidery and the mastering of a multitude of stitch types was emphasized.

The end of World War I signaled the beginning of a decade of affluence and optimism unparalleled in America's history. For the first time, increased applications of technology blessed the middle class with both leisure time and the money to enjoy it.

Yet, during the decade of the 1920s when machines made almost anything possible, there surfaced an odd nostalgia. Collecting antiques became all the rage, and the art of quilting experienced an unprecedented renaissance.

The typical quilts born of this nostalgia were not children of necessity; warm, woolen blankets were readily available at the nearest department store. Instead, many women bought yardage specifically for their quilted creations, indulging in the rainbow of pastel hues that saturated the market.

Inspired by patterns in magazines and newspapers, or aided by mail-order kits, women all across the land stitched up thousands of quilts in such patterns as the Double Wedding Ring, Sunbonnet Babies or the popular Dresden Plate.

During the 1930s utilitarian quilts kept many a body warm on a chilly night. But there was also a bright outpouring of intricately patterned bedcovers that belied the darkness of the era. Pieced with tiny squares snipped from shirts, dresses and gaily printed flour sacks, these fabric masterworks expressed a hope for the future that has been shared by quilters during all eras of our history.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

A lot of animals hibernate in the winter with success.

Humans are not one of them. Researchers say people who live in the snow belt suffer from winter attacks that bring on "dark moods" and they don't know why.

There is one theory that suggests our ancestors hibernated much as bears do. They just slept through the long winter.

Another study proposes that our ancestors stored fat for the coming winter. (I'll buy that!) Still another trick of early survival was instead of mating all year around, they timed their reproduction so that the young were born in the spring or summer.

Whatever they did, they did it in a full-length fur coat and did as little as possible. The trouble with humans is they carry on in winter with "business as usual." If the snow covers their driveway, they remove the snow. If ice threatens their car, they cover it with a blanket. If there is a life-threatening blizzard, they get a snowplow to take them to the beauty shop.

I say humans are not physically or mentally prepared for winters. It's a time when they put on fur-lined boots, a coat, heavy gloves, scarf and hat to go to the mailbox to discover a card from Ed and Lois from St. Petersburg with a pink flamingo on the front of it and a message, "Please keep Killer for another week. Decided to stay over."

It's a time when an Act of God closes schools and as soon as their kids arrive home, they con mothers into driving them back to the schoolyard to "play."

Little things bother people in the winter months that they ordinarily could slough off. Having a stranger say, "Have a good day," is grounds for assault. What do they know about you? What is good? What is day? If you wanted advice from them, you'd ask for it.

Having all their warranties on a winter schedule really ticks them off. You'd think manufacturers would stagger them out so that some appliances would break down in summer, but no, all of them are timed to expire on a weekend during the worst storm in the history of the state.

I am intrigued by the hibernation theory. No wonder bears are so frisky in the spring. Did they sit around and watch the garden hose swell and burst? Did they watch the plastic house plants drop and fall off the stem from the weight of the dust? Did they sit by the window and watch the mailbox rust and drip down the side of the house?

Researchers have also hit upon something else. Light can brighten your depressive moods in the winter. A fluorescent bulb or ray from a lamp can make you feel good again.

Maybe. But if anyone hits a light switch before I clean this dump, I'll break their arm.

Woman Turns Down Dinner Invitation To Stay At Home With Her Pride Intact

DEAR ABBY: I'm a divorced woman who knows what it feels like to be overlooked, forgotten or just plain excluded on special holidays, so I rounded up all the "strays" I know and invite them over for a Christmas Eve meal. It's not a formal sit-down dinner; it's a casual, serve-yourself buffet sort of party, and all seem to enjoy themselves.

Well, how is this for a slap in the face? About 10 a.m., I phoned someone I thought would appreciate the invitation and said, "Hi, if you're not doing anything special tonight, come on over for dinner about 6 p.m."

This friend said, "Thank you, but I have plans." (I could tell the way she said it that she didn't have any plans, but I wasn't going to beg her.) I learned later that she sat home alone, but had too much pride to admit it. My question: Don't you think a person who has no plans is foolish to turn down an invitation for this reason? Also, is there something wrong with the way I worded my invitation?

ALSO HURT

DEAR HURT: Not everyone is comfortable admitting that he or she has nowhere to go. Since it's become a tradition to "round up strays" at holiday time (and I hope you don't use that expression publicly), why not invite them a week or so ahead of time? Their pride would be salvaged, and a good time could be had by all.

DEAR ABBY: As a Christmas gift, a co-worker gave me a membership to an organization she is very much devoted to.

I have never attended a meeting, or expressed any interest in joining the organization. In fact, I would prefer not to have my name listed as a member.

Can I be made a member of an organization without my permission? I don't want to insult this woman, nor do I want to sour our relationship because we have to work together, so please tell me how I can cancel my membership without offending her.

UNWILLING MEMBER

DEAR MEMBER: Thank her for the gift, then tell her that since you have no intentions of becoming active in the organization, you must decline the membership. I can't guarantee that you won't offend her, but it beats being a member of an organization you would not care to join.

DEAR ABBY: I was married last October in a very elaborate wedding. I am just finishing up my thank-you notes to all the wonderful people who shared in our day and gave us such lovely gifts.

My problem is that well over 200 people attended our wedding, and three of them gave us no gift. Two of them are co-workers who brought their husbands.

Do I send these people thank-you notes for coming to my wedding? How do I know their gifts were not lost? It really is an awkward situation. I certainly didn't invite people to get a gift, but what do you do when you don't get one?

PERPLEXED BRIDE

DEAR PERPLEXED: You need not write to thank the guests for attending your wedding. If you did not receive a gift, it's safe to assume that none was sent.

Wait a while. If perchance some gifts were lost, in due time the senders will probably drop a subtle hint to let you know they are still waiting for your thank-you note. Then you may let them know that their gift was not received.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Hill Steps Down

Douglas Hill, chairman of the Pitt County Republican Party for the past 10 months, said today that he has resigned as chairman. Lorraine Shinn, the party's vice chairman, will act as chairman until a replacement is chosen.

Hill, who noted he resigned because of business reasons, said "It has become painfully obvious to me that with my present time constraints, I can no longer be an effective chairman. The Pitt County Republican Party deserves someone who can devote the time and energies necessary to continue our viability and visibility."

Hill said a nominating committee has been named, and "if all goes well," the executive committee "will elect a new chairman at our next meeting."

Mothers' March

The 1986 Mothers March to raise funds for the March of Dimes campaign against birth defects is scheduled in Greenville and Pitt County from Jan. 18-Feb. 2.

Over 300 volunteers will call at an estimated 5,000 homes in the area in this annual nationwide campaign. Dr. Malene Irons is the chairperson of this year's local march. Money collected during the campaign helps support programs in birth defects research, medical services and education programs.

For further information or to volunteer call the Coastal Plains chapter of the March of Dimes at 355-6393 during regular office hours.

MISSING FUNDS MEETING — Parents and members of the PTA met Monday at South Greenville School to discuss a proposed field trip for students to the Williamsburg and Jamestown areas of Virginia. The trip was reportedly to be funded from a three-year $100,000 grant from the Atlantic Richfield corporation being held by the Department of Public Instruction for South Greenville School. PTA President Kirk Fickling has recently been informed by state school officials that the funds are unavailable. State officials are conducting an investigation into the allegedly missing funds and Pitt representatives Walter Jones, Tom Taft and Ed Warren are pursuing leads on replacing the money. Funds are needed by March 12 to secure transportation, rooms and admission to the historical sites. Around $300 for deposits is needed by Wednesday. (Reflector photo by Chris Bennett)

Special singing will be offered each night and a nursery will be provided.

Dr. Cohen Speaker

Dr. Steven I. Cohen, local family chiropractor, recently spoke at a post-graduate program on micro manipulation and kinesiological problems for the treatment of bone and joint disorders. The seminar was held in New York, N.Y. and was attended by over 4,000 doctors from throughout the world, including Dr. Cohen's staff.

Firestone Gift

East Carolina University was awarded $355 in matching gifts from the Firestone Trust Fund during

Thefts Reported

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of eight thefts reported to the department Monday.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said building materials were taken from a construction site at Quail Ridge Condominiums in an incident reported at 8:08 a.m., and a video cassette recorder was taken from the Radio Shack store at The Plaza Mall in an incident reported at 10:18 a.m., while Officer P.W. Scheutzow said a purse containing a Masonic ring valued at $579, $15 in cash and a watch was taken from Hillcrest Lanes on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 9:12 a.m.

Officer T.A. Lee said an equalizer valued at $150 was taken from a car parked at Phelps Chevrolet Co. on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 10:26 a.m., while Officer J.A. Bartlett said a compact disk valued at $15 was taken from Apple Records at 204 E. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 4:04 p.m.

Officer R.S. Sawyer said a video cassette recorder valued at $400 was taken from Channel 1 Video at The Plaza Mall in an incident reported at 4:51 p.m., while Officer H.D. Hines said $400 in cash was taken from 201 Pearle Drive in a break-in reported at 7:10 p.m.

According to Officer P.W. Worthington, a calculator was taken from Wainwright's Amoco service station at 1201 W. 14th St. in a break-in reported at 9:50 p.m.

here last night on charges of death by vehicle.

Officer B.M. Hamill said the charge resulted from a Nov. 26 traffic accident in which Karl Altuner, 43, of 100B Brookwood Drive died.

Hamill said Altuner, a pedestrian, was struck by a truck driven by Mims near the intersection of Tenth and Verdant streets. The collision occurred about 4:04 p.m.

Symposium Set

A medical symposium presenting a comprehensive update on breast cancer will be held by the East Carolina University School of Medicine Wednesday.

Sponsored by the ECU Department of Surgery and Clinical Pathology and Diagnostic Medicine, the day-long symposium will include a number of ECU medical specialists who will consider current standards of diagnosis and treatment of breast cancer as well as controversies about the most appropriate approach to care.

The program has been planned for physicians but may be of interest to other health care professionals.

Board Approves Grant Guidelines

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Town of Ayden Board of Commissioners last night adopted guidelines for the Community Development Block Grant program for the town. Representatives of Talbert Cox & Associates were present to discuss and review the documents with the commissioners.

Russell Houston of Grifton was approved as the attorney to perform title opinions for property acquisitions and other legal services for the Community Development Block Grant program in Ayden.

The commissioners approved a written policy concerning tree trimming in the town, outlining the responsibility of the electric department and of the citizens. The ordinance states that written notice will be given to residents when extensive tree trimming is necessary in the area.

The board approved a letter to be sent to the residents of Edgewood and New Circle in Ayden concerning the town's 10-foot easement along the back boundary of the residents' property. The letter informs the residents that they have until June 1 to remove fences, buildings and trees from the easement so that the utility lines that run behind the houses may be upgraded.

The commissioners approved the audit report completed by Certified Public Accountant Lloyd Moody. The approval was necessary in order for the town to comply with public notice for Revenue Sharing.

Jordan Horne of the town's electrical department discussed with the members the town's electrical line loss. He said that the electrical lines in Ayden have a "95 percent power factor," making the system "about as efficient as it can be."

West Says Counsel Urged Cancellation

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Monday's scheduled meeting of the consolidated Pitt County Board of Education was canceled, say school officials, because the board's attorney recommended the move in light of a recent lawsuit filed against the board by a local minority rights group.

"We canceled the meeting on advice of legal counsel," Pitt and Greenville Superintendent Eddie West said today. The consolidated school board will govern the unified school system created by the scheduled merger of Greenville and Pitt County schools in July, 1986.

The complaint, filed Dec. 18 in U.S. Eastern District Court in New Bern by the Concerned Citizens for Justice, a local minority group, alleges the board is operating illegally because three minority members appointed to the board in June, 1985, are in violation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Three judges — U.S. District Judge Terrence W. Bowles, U.S. Circuit Judge J. Dickson Phillips Jr. and

Chief U.S. Eastern District Judge Earl Britt — have been appointed to hear the complaint, the Clerk of Court's Office in New Bern said today. The suit asks that a three-judge court hear the case and grant an injunction to prevent the consolidated board from operating. In addition, the complaint requests the court void all action, contracts or policies approved by the consolidated board and that the school board pay the group's legal fees for the suit.

Attorneys for the consolidated board — Tharrington, Smith and Hargrove of Raleigh — asked for and were granted, a 20-day extension for response to the suit. The board must reply by Jan. 30.

The suit alleges that the three minority members appointed to the board in June, 1985, did not receive "preclearance," or approval, by the U.S. Justice Department. Based on the Voting Rights Act of 1965, the Justice Department must "preclear" changes made to a governing board's structure or method of election.

Based on Justice Department policy, however, official approval is not given until a proposed change is ratified by a legislative body. The North Carolina General Assembly ratified the minority appointments in June 1985 and the school board applied for preclearance in July 1985.

A letter to school board attorneys in September 1985 from the Justice Department said further information — specifically voting records of Pitt County by township since 1965 — was needed to grant preclearance. Attorneys and officials compiled the information and were scheduled to file it with the Justice Department today.

Physicist Dies

MAGALIA, Calif. (AP) — Jacob H. Wiens, a nuclear physicist who worked on the Manhattan Project that developed the atomic bomb, died Friday. He was 75.

Wiens worked at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory and his most significant achievement, shared with Luis Alvarez, was the creation of mercury from gold, said his daughter Harriet Jakovina of San Jose.

Widow Testifies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weeping as she testified, the widow of a former Army major told of watching her husband go into cardiac arrest hours after Navy surgeon Donal Billig performed a heart bypass operation on him.

"I just knew what the outcome was going to be," Lily Grubb of Lancaster, S.C., testified at Billig's court-martial.

Billig, a Navy commander and a former chief heart surgeon at Bethesda Naval Hospital, is charged with five counts of involuntary manslaughter, one of them stemming from the surgery he performed on retired Army Major William Grubb.

Mrs. Grubb was the first of five family members to take the witness stand in Billig's court-martial. The widow is a certified registered nurse who specializes in anesthesia.

Under cross examination she told of her husband's long history of heart trouble, including the fact that when he entered the hospital in August 1974 he suffered chest pains even when he was lying in bed.

She acknowledged that her husband had signed an authorization form that listed risks of the surgery as being death, stroke, and damage to the heart, among other things.

She also said she had a damage suit pending against the Navy but she could not remember how much she was asking.

Teachers Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — Some high schools in North Carolina may not have enough teachers to carry out the longer school day the state will require next fall, state education officials say.

William Church, a special assistant for secondary education with the state Department of Public Instruction, said one high school with 64 teachers will need about 70 teachers next year to meet the requirement. Two other high schools said they would need no more teachers, he said.

A Question Of Luck

RALEIGH — North Carolina is about to learn just how lucky it can be.

This week, the U.S. Department of Energy will release a list of 15 places it wants to explore in depth as possible sites for a high level radioactive waste storage facility. At least 30 North Carolina rock formations are being considered for inclusion on that list.

But even if North Carolina gets lucky and none of its rock formations are on that short list, the location of a high level radioactive waste storage facility in the east is likely to cause the state problems. The state's central location along the east coast means that no matter where the facility is put, nuclear waste will have to travel through the state to reach it.

Members of the legislature's Study Commission on High Level Radioactive Waste heard of a number of transportation problems that will face North Carolina whether or not the storage facility is eventually located in the state. The high level waste will be spent fuel rods previously used by nuclear power plants and defense department facilities.

If the facility is located in western North Carolina, South Carolina or Virginia, then Interstate 40 will serve as a sort of funnel for waste being shipped from nuclear power plants in the midwest, said Sen. Charlie Hipps, D-Haywood, chairman of the commission.

"I just see tremendous transportation problems with a highway that has not stabilized after 15 or 20 years of existence," Hipps said in reference to the frequent rock slides along I-40.

Hipps showed the committee photographs of rock slides that have occurred along the interstate and he went into great detail describing the rutted condition of the road. He said the state was very fortunate that a truck carrying hazardous chemicals or low level radioactive wastes has never been caught in one of the rock slides.

If one of these trucks was involved in an accident, the state would need a trained corps of properly equipped patrolmen who could respond.

"You can't just reach out to the Highway Patrol and think that all of a sudden you're going to have the answer you're looking for," said Sen. Monk Harrington, D-Bertie. The patrol can't handle such emergencies, he said.

Hipps demonstrated that point. He spoke of a newspaper photograph of a patrolman scanning a truck with a Geiger counter. The device, it turned out, was the patrolman's personal property. "We need a better response than someone standing around with a Geiger counter," Hipps said. Patrolmen need to be taught proper inspection methods and the transport trucks must be subjected to regular inspections, Hipps and other legislators said.

Janet Hoyle of the Blue Ridge Environmental Defense League said the patrol wasn't the only agency unprepared for high level transportation. "I have a great deal of concern whether DOE is capable of transporting high level radioactive waste safely," she said.

When a facility is finally opened in the mid-90s, the increase in high level waste traffic will be tremendous, she said. Neither DOE, nor anyone else, has experience transporting such large amounts of this material. She also expressed serious safety concerns about the containers used to store the waste during transport.

Sure to add to North Carolina's problems is the likelihood that DOE will locate a retrievable waste storage facility in Tennessee. When that facility opens, waste will begin traversing the state's highways.

Modest Millard

It's especially noticeable in January (which includes his birthdate), but the belittling of President Millard Fillmore is almost a year-round custom. One reads, for instance, that he was "one of the nation's less distinguished presidents".

Would-be comics keep the image alive through December and then the cycle begins anew. The record should be set straight; which is why we have this limited space on the editorial page.

This one's for Millard.

Did you know that at age 14 he was apprenticed to a cloth-maker who treated him so badly the boy finally threatened him with an ax? True. He bought and paid for his freedom ($30) when he was 19 years old.

After that low point our former president went to school and fulfilled the dream that frequently arises even now in the third grade: he married his teacher.

In due course he studied law, was elected (and re-elected) to the New York Assembly; elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, and finally became chairman of the Ways and Means Committee where he was the chief author of a tax-raising law.

Fame followed.

When he became vice president (Zachary Taylor headed the ticket), he was that traditional breath away from the White House which became his home when Taylor died in 1850. Mrs. Fillmore brought the first cooking stove into the White House and set up the first library there.

For his part, the newcomer's administration saw reduction of the basic postal rate from 5 cents to 3 cents (no small feat then, and even more remarkable these days), and Commodore Matthew Perry was dispatched to the Far East where he "opened up" Japan.

That may have been another reason for modern disparaging reviews of his presidency. (General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and AMC have long memories.)

Oxford offered him an honorary degree, but Modest Millard declined, saying he had done nothing to deserve the honor. His own party, the Whigs, felt much the same way and instead of nominating him to run for the presidency they chose Winfield Scott.

There are gaps in our account, which include his efforts to gain a compromise between the slave states and free states. He may have staved off the War Between the States for 10 years, but there could have been no real compromise between the two interests and on that he fundered. We suggest there were worse presidents.

Donors

Blood bank officials are concerned about a belief that donating blood exposes one to the dangers of AIDS.

It is frustrating to those who collect blood and those who draw on the supply for medical cases in which blood is needed. Somehow the dreaded Acquired Immune Deficiency disease has been connected with blood donation and blood bank officials fear it is causing the drop in blood donations. They emphasize that sterile supplies are used in the blood-giving process and fears of contracting AIDS are unfounded.

The problem apparently arose because some large users of donated blood were believed to have contracted the disease. A poll shows that more than a third of Americans believe AIDS can be contracted from giving blood. Possibly because of this a blood shortage has developed across the nation. Blood bank officials hope to counteract this concern with a public media campaign.

Blood is needed for accident victims, persons undergoing major surgery and for certain victims of disease. It can mean the difference between life and death in some cases. Maintaining an adequate blood supply is essential to our general health needs and it requires individual commitment to see that the need is met.

Public Forum

To the editor:

January 20 is the first national holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr. Recognition of the impact his efforts have had on the racial equality issue is well-merited.

America was founded as a nation under God with the belief that all men are created equal with certain inalienable rights. Yet, up to Lincoln's time slavery was in practice with people being held in bondage.

The homage being paid to Dr. King's memory is a sign of some progress. However, for the progress to continue today's society must work towards eliminating hypocrisy and instead attempt to practice morality and responsibility in the true sense. Only then could the brotherhood of mankind be achieved.

Let us not forget that according to the Christian creed, in God's eyes we are equal. And, our nation was founded as a nation under God. Then, and only then will Dr. King's dream of racial equality become a reality.

Campaign Gets Tough

WASHINGTON (AP) — "What's a good vice president?" asked William Simon, who said he was once considered for the job. "What the hell's a veep ever done?"

"I think there is a difference between cheerleading and leading," said former Gov. Pete DuPont.

Welcome to the start of the "get tough" phase of the 1988 presidential campaign.

The remarks of Simon and DuPont, who have White House dreams of their own, were early shots at Republican front-runner George Bush. They were included in a series of interviews published in the latest edition of Conservative Digest, a publication not notably supportive of the vice president.

Bush was among those interviewed. Others included Republicans Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, former U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, Pat Robertson, the television evangelist, Lewis Lehrman, who runs a grassroots group that lobbies for President Reagan's agenda, and Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas.

The questions and answers offered some insights into the issues conservatives care about as they look ahead to 1988 and how various potential candidates would handle those concerns.

Abortion, school prayer, a balanced budget amendment, the gold standard, how to deal with the State Department bureaucracy, the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission were among the issues raised.

Simon and DuPont were the only ones who took advantage of the opportunity to get off shots at Bush.

Simon, a former Treasury secretary, was more circumspect.

He didn't take a direct shot at Bush; he just belittled the vice president's job. "I was up for vice president," he said. "I was one of the 'finalists' considered by Gerald Ford (in 1976) and Ronald Reagan (in 1980). I thought about it a lot and at that time I would have accepted. But under the Constitution, the vice president has only very limited functions."

DuPont pulled no punches.

"I have concerns about his presidential ambitions," he said of the vice president. "The last time George Bush spoke his mind on economics he took very different positions than have been taken by the Reagan administration," added DuPont, referring to Bush's position when he was campaigning against Reagan for the 1980 GOP presidential nomination.

The vice president is assiduously wooing conservatives and he described himself as "a conservative who believes in the idea of limited government."

He also said he was determined to avoid saying anything that could be interpreted as disagreeing with Reagan.

"I am not going to say anything in this interview, or any subsequent interview, that will put daylight between me and the president," said Bush.

The interviews offered an opportunity to spot some of the differences that are likely to become part of the presidential election debate.

Bush, Dole, Simon, Robertson, Gramm and Mrs. Kirkpatrick said they support amending the Constitution to require a balanced federal budget. Kemp, DuPont and Lehrman said they favor a balanced budget but were concerned about an amendment that could force tax increases.

All of them favored voluntary school prayer and the views on abortion ranged from Lerhman's flat opposition under any circumstances to Mrs. Kirkpatrick saying that while she considers it "always to be avoided ... I do not believe that in every conceivable circumstance abortion is the worst possible evil."

Bush denounced as "absolutely crazy" the idea that either the Council on Foreign Relations or the Trilateral Commission were "subversive organizations."

Lehrman said he agreed with the characterization of both groups as "at best front groups for the liberal establishment."

Mrs. Kirkpatrick said, "Actually, I belong to both of them."

Strength For Today

We read in the Book of Genesis how the patriarch Jacob, after one of the perilous crises of his life, started his onward march and was met by the angels of God.

He called the place of meeting "Mahanaim," which meant "two hosts" or "two companies." Jacob realized that as he and his company of retainers strode the highway of life, there was another company, invisible and heaven-sent, with which God would support them.

The assurance of religion is that we are supported at all times by powers greater than anything known in the world. There is always a second host marching along beside us to support us in the hour of crisis. Because these powers are not visible to our sight, many people disbelieve in their existence. But the people who have known the support and deliverance of these powers need not be assured of their reality. They know that another company, invisible and heaven-sent, walk the pathway of life with them.

Guatemala Installs First Civilian Chief

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The first civilian elected to govern Guatemala in 16 years says his priorities upon taking office today will be to improve the ailing economy and control human rights abuses.

Vinicio Cerezo, a 43-year-old lawyer and Christian Democrat, will be inaugurated at a midday ceremony, becoming the first civilian president since Julio Cesar Mendez Montenegro, who served from 1966-70. He replaces chief of state Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores.

Vice President George Bush is scheduled to meet Cerezo before the inauguration. Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, under heavy security guard following a threat on his life, also is expected to attend the ceremony.

Cerezo said Monday what he needs most from the United States during his term is "unconditional economic aid and willingness to truly support an autonomous democracy at the service of national and Central American interests."

This country of nearly 8 million, half of whom are descendants of the Maya Indians, has an international debt of $2.3 billion. Its economy slumped in the late 1970s when world demand for its chief exports of coffee, cotton and sugar plunged.

Cerezo also says he will reorganize the police so they are under political control and will name a Supreme Court that is independent and honest enough to rule against those who violate human rights.

Widespread killings of thousands and disappearances of Indians in the northwest highlands and professionals, labor leaders and students in cities during the late 1970s and 1980s made the country an international pariah and cost the country most of its U.S. aid.

The killings have been blamed on rightist death squads helping the military.

Even before taking office, Cerezo began taking a more active role in Central America, saying he would not support any U.S. effort to isolate the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua.

"I won't because isolation means confrontation," he said Monday. "We want peace (which) means discussion, conversation, contacts and integration."

But he is not expected to stray far from Guatemala's past position of leaning more toward the positions of the U.S. allies of Honduras, Costa Rica and El Salvador than Nicaragua.

He has proposed creating a directly elected Central American parliament to deal with regional problems. He also is calling for renewal of the Contadora group's efforts to find a peace agreement for the region, but says the group — Mexico, Colombia, Panama and Venezuela — will end when its work is over.

Nicaragua's Ortega, in a news conference here Monday, accused the United States of trying to divide the region.

"What fits best into the North American policy is to make it appear that the confrontation is among the Central Americans themselves, when we all know that it is not among the Central Americans," he said.

He said Central American governments do not want confrontation in the region but said the United States was using economic aid to pressure some governments to accept its "policy of confrontation."

Ortega was receiving special protection following a Dec. 15 threat from the Secret Anti-Communist

Army, a clandestine group that claimed responsibility for political assassinations in the late 1970s and early 1980s but had not been heard from until shortly after the Dec. 8 runoff election.

In the final days before leaving government, the military issued decrees in an apparent last effort to protect itself and in part take care of some difficult tasks for Cerezo's government.

One decree declares amnesty for people who committed political crimes after the March 23, 1982, military coup. It appeared to be an attempt to protect the military from prosecution for human rights violations but also apparently could be applied to the left.

The 1982 coup brought Gen. Efraim Rios Montt to power and Mejia Victores deposed him in a military reshuffling Aug. 8, 1983.

Briefing Planned On MIAs

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — The leader of a congressional delegation en route to Vietnam said he will brief that country's leaders about a planned U.S. Senate hearing on the possibility that Americans are still alive in Indochina.

Sen. Frank Murkowski, chairman of the Senate Veterans Affairs committee, heads a 26-member entourage that includes another senator and two congressmen traveling to Vietnam and Laos seeking further details on the fate of Americans — living or dead — in Southeast Asia.

Murkowski, who said his committee will hold hearings Jan. 29-30, said he does not rule out the possibility that Americans may still be alive in Vietnam or Laos nearly 13 years after the end of the war.

"I am not without a reasonable doubt," he said.

During the hearings, the Alaska Republican said "anybody who has something substantive pertaining to live sightings will make their statements, and then we will ask the (Reagan) administration to respond."

"We would like them to respond on an individual, case-by-case basis, so perhaps we can narrow down the number of unexplained live sightings," said Murkowski. "I intend to let all the people with information, and who want to be heard, testify."

Murkowski said he would thank the Vietnamese for their apparent willingness to follow up on such reports, and also tell them of his upcoming hearings on the issue.

On Monday, a top Pentagon official said the Vietnamese government has pledged to investigate nearly 100 "live sighting reports" of missing Americans, which remain under scrutiny by the United States.

Richard L. Armitage, U.S. assistant defense secretary for international security affairs, said in Washington that hundreds of live sighting reports have been dismissed in the past decade by the Pentagon as fabrications or because men allegedly involved already were accounted for.

But he said, however, that 95 reports "are under continuing investigation in an attempt to confirm the information."

Also on the fact-finding tour, which will take the delegation to the Philippines, Thailand and Laos are Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Rep. Bob McEwen, R-Ohio, and Rep. Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla. McEwen and Bilirakis serve on the House Veterans Affairs Committee, and DeConcini is on the same committee in the Senate.

The group was to tour the Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the U.S. Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu before proceeding to the Philippines today.

The Police Department has initiated a "Citizen Ride Along" Program for Greenville residents who are interested in seeing how police operate while on patrol. If interested, call 752-3342 for details.

Coup Attempt Reported

South Yemen President Said Injured

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer
MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Persian Gulf sources said today that President Ali Nasser Mohammed of Marxist South Yemen was critically injured in a coup attempt. In London, the Foreign Office said unidentified planes today bombed the airport in Aden, South Yemen's capital.

Diplomats in Aden reported the bombing and also said tanks were seen in Aden's Khormaksar district, according to the British spokesman, who demanded anonymity.

He said small-arms and artillery fire were heard in Aden throughout Monday and resumed at dawn today. He said the rebels' identity was not clear.

"A Japanese freighter called the Daffodil reported by radio to its headquarters in Japan that heavy fighting involving tanks at the Aden harbor and gunboats in the waters broke out," one shipping executive told The Associated Press.

"A Japanese executive, speaking on condition of anonymity, said, 'We are told that at least four (merchant) ships were on fire Monday night' in Aden harbor. He said several seaside buildings also were ablaze.

"State-run Aden Radio on Monday confirmed a coup attempt and said the four ringleaders were executed.

The men it named included leaders of a political faction closely tied to the Soviet Union and opposed to any overtures to pro-Western countries.

Mohammed is considered less pro-Soviet and less doctrinaire.

The broadcast, monitored in Bahrain, said former President Abdul Fattah Ismail and Ali Ahmed Nasser Antar, vice chairman of the governing presidium and a close associate of the president, were among the plotters and were executed after a summary trial.

A gulf shipping executive, who spoke on condition he not be identified, told the AP, "We have information received by wireless from the port of Aden about President Mohammed being hospitalized for serious injuries he suffered in the assassination attempt."

"Our men in Aden have been told by official and rebel sources that the president was critically injured," he said.

Knowledgeable sources in touch with Aden said Soviet military vehicles were being used in fighting between rebels and troops loyal to the government, but it was not clear by whom.

The Soviet Union has important naval bases in Aden and on Socotra Island in the Indian Ocean. South Yemen, an impoverished country about the size of Nevada, is on the southern Arabian peninsula on strategic shipping routes.

South Yemen, one of the world's poorest nations with a population of 2 million, signed a 20-year treaty of friendship with the Soviet Union in 1979.

Shipping sources said government forces cordoned off Aden's suburbs of Tawahi, Khormaksar and Me'alla, and reported street fighting was heaviest in the Mansoura suburb.

Control tower sources in Cairo said earlier Aden airport had been closed. Planes from Soviet bloc countries fly to Aden from Cairo.

Aden Radio said nothing Monday about injuries to the president, but it went off the air at midnight. All telephone and telex links with Aden were interrupted.

The Monday broadcast also reported the executions of Ali Salem al-Biadh, minister of local administration, and Ali Shayie, a ranking member of the ruling Yemen Socialist Party. It said accomplices were held, but gave no details.

In Rome, the Foreign Ministry said the Italian Embassy was heavily damaged by artillery fire Monday. Ministry spokesman Daniele Verga said the building caught fire and was evacuated, but no one was hurt. He had no other details.

Prime Minister Heider Abu Bakr Al-Attas was due in Peking Tuesday morning for a four-day goodwill visit, but officials at the South Yemen Embassy in Peking said he delayed his arrival for at least 12 hours. He broke his journey in New Delhi, India, where he is monitoring developments, they said.

An aide in New Delhi, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Al-Attas held an emergency meeting with his aides in his hotel suite Monday night. Al-Attas is the No. 2 man in South Yemen, behind Mohammed.

Ismail, the most prominent of those named as conspirators, was a former underground trade union leader and longtime Marxist-Leninist.

In 1969 and 1978 he helped oust South Yemen presidents who had sought to block Marxist programs or improve contacts with conservative Arab states. In December 1978, Ismail was elected president of the Presidium of the Supreme Peoples Council, effectively becoming head of state. He resigned in 1980 and moved to Moscow when opposition to his leadership grew in party ranks.

Mohammed replaced Ismail as president. Western diplomats in neighboring countries said recently he apparently wanted better relations with pro-Western Arab states, such as Saudi Arabia and Oman. At least one other plot to topple Mohammed has reportedly been foiled in the past five years, but the reports have not been officially confirmed.

NASA Ponders Shortened Flight

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Like many shutterbugs whose cameras give out at a critical moment, Columbia's astronauts tried and failed today to fix a photo device that could provide clear shots of Halley's comet.

Space agency officials, meanwhile, were considering ending the shuttle mission a day early.

"I just finished working with the image intensifier again, and there is no amplification at all," crewman George Nelson reported after he had attempted for several hours to fix the instrument following instructions radioed from Mission Control.

Controllers said they would try to work out an alternate solution.

The light image intensifier failed Monday when Nelson photographed the comet. He took the device off the camera and instead shot a series of 30-second exposures, but officials on the ground said they may be no better than those taken from Earth by amateurs.

Rep. Bill Nelson, a Democrat who is riding as a congressional observer, radioed his first words from space today when he reported on two medical experiments he is conducting on his body. "In addition, I'm having a ball," he reported.

Flight director Jay Greene said Monday he expected shuttle managers to consider shortening the much-delayed mission from five days to four. This would help the National Aeronautics and Space Administration keep on its tight schedule of 15 shuttle launches this year. A decision was expected today.

If the flight is shortened, the crew would land here Thursday. Greene said it is important to get Columbia back to this spaceport to start preparing it for its next flight, an astronomy mission set for liftoff March 6.

"We're tight on the next two flights," Greene said. Challenger is scheduled for launching Jan. 24 with schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe aboard.

The schedule tightened when Columbia endured seven launch postponements before finally getting off the ground on Sunday.

The seven-man crew spent much of its first full day in orbit Monday setting up experiments and fixing minor mechanical malfunctions.

Astronaut Steve Hawley planned to spend today pointing a pair of telescopes at various stars and sectors of the universe to search for sources of ultraviolet radiation.

How To Subtract 2000 From 1040.

It doesn't take much figuring to realize that an Individual Retirement Account from BB&T is one of the best tax write-offs you can have. You can shelter up to $2,000 on your tax return for 1985 if you make your contribution by April 15, 1986. There's no need to itemize, either.

Choose Your Own Plan.

At BB&T, you have a variety of investments to select from, including both fixed and variable rate options.* You'll earn high rates while your account grows on a tax-deferred basis. Through our discount brokerage service, we also offer a self-directed plan which allows you to invest in stocks, bonds, mutual funds and other securities.

Just as important, we provide a friendly, knowledgeable person to help you make the choice that's right for you.

Choose Your Own Terms.

Of course, you don't have to have $2,000 to open an IRA at BB&T. You could get started this year with $100 or more.

Once your account is open, you can choose your own deposit schedule. You could do it once a year. Quarterly. Once a month. Skip months. We're very flexible.

Choose The Security Of The FDIC.

After all, it's your retirement. When you open a BB&T IRA, your account is insured separately to $100,000 by the FDIC.

So, get an additional deduction by getting started on your retirement plan. But do it soon. Because there's a time in your life for a BB&T IRA. And that time is now.

BB&T IRA

Clues Sought To Help Identify Crash Victims

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
GANDER, Newfoundland (AP) — U.S. Army experts are likely to take two months or more to complete a painstaking search of the rocky hillside where a chartered troop carrier crashed last month, killing 248 soldiers and eight crew members, officials said.

Working on hands and knees in temporary plastic shelters, personnel from the Army's graves registration service picked with trowels, rakes and gloved hands Monday at the damp stony earth, looking for clues to identify more than half of the bodies from the Dec. 12 crash.

So far, only 120 bodies have been identified and returned to their families for burial. The rest are at the Dover Air Force Base in Delaware.

Heavy rains Monday night on top of a four-inch snow blanket promised to make the work even tougher, especially since much colder weather is predicted later this week.

"The primary job here is to recover remains and parts of the plane," said David Owen, the Canadian Aviation Safety Board's deputy investigator-in-charge for the crash probe.

A U.S. Army contingent of 43 people led by Maj. Gen. John S. Crosby arrived in Gander last week to prepare for the search. About 30 Canadian police officials are assisting.

Workmen have erected about a dozen 33-foot-square wooden frames covered with plastic sheeting, which are warmed with propane heaters to melt the snow before the search of each section begins.

When one square has been scoured, the workmen pull down the shelter and set it up again in a new spot. They are hoping to find watches, wallets, rings, clothes, body parts or anything else that might help fit names to the still-unidentified bodies.

Any items that are found are to be sent to Dover. Elaine Henry, an Army spokeswoman in Washington, said the first shipment from Newfoundland included "a small amount of partial remains, personal effects and several sets of dental records that had been covered by the snow."

Owen said he expected it would take at least two months for the searchers to cover the entire hillside where the Arrow Air DC-8 crashed, exploded and burned.

The 248 soldiers on board were members of the 101st Airborne Division, returning to Fort Campbell, Ky., from peacekeeping duty in Egypt's Sinai peninsula. The plane refueled in Frankfurt, West Germany, and again at the Gander International Airport.

Canadian investigators say they still do not know why the plane crashed just after take-off from Gander, falling to the ground about a half-mile from the end of the runway and just short of Gander Lake.

LOOKING FOR CLUES — U.S. Army personnel dig through the dirt in a makeshift shelter Monday in Gander, Newfoundland, looking for clues to help identify more than 130 U.S. soldiers killed in the Dec. 12 plane crash. Of the 256 victims, only 119 have been identified. (AP Laserphoto)

Agencies Learn Program Cuts Will Begin March 1

By The Associated Press
Reductions exceeding 4 percent in civilian and military programs will start March 1 to satisfy a new balanced-budget law, probably producing major disruptions throughout the federal bureaucracy, the Reagan administration says.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that the Office of Management and Budget notified federal agencies of the cuts necessary to implement the Gramm-Rudman law, which seeks to reduce the annual deficit to zero by 1991, beginning with a $172 billion reduction this year. Cuts in specific programs were not disclosed.

Gramm-Rudman, named for sponsors senators Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Warren B. Rudman, R-N.H., exempts Social Security and certain benefit programs like food stamps.

Also Monday, a private research group blamed budget-cutting for a record number of jobless people forced to survive without unemployment benefits last year.

The Washington, D.C.-based Center on Budget and Policy Priorities said 67.4 percent of the country's 8.3 million jobless had no unemployment benefits during any given month in 1985, compared with 75 percent a decade ago when a recession was ending.

In other economic news:

- A Harvard University study predicted sharply higher oil prices before the end of the decade, despite a glut that has depressed prices. The study also said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is stronger than widely believed.

- Savings and loan associations reported lower earnings in the third quarter of last year compared to the previous quarter, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said, attributing the decline to a drop in net non-operating income.
- Profits were reported by 81 percent of all the thrifts in the July-September quarter, down slightly from 83 percent during April-June, the board said.
- The Supreme Court ruled that the federal government could allow national banks to expand into the discount securities brokerage business without violating a law limiting banking services.
- Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction to their highest levels since November. The Treasury Department sold $7.4 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.23 percent, up from 7.05 percent last week. It sold $7.4 billion in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 7.28 percent, up from 7.11 percent last week.
- Steel production rose to 1.7 million tons in the week ended Jan. 11, an increase of 8.8 percent from the previous week's 1.563 million tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported. Production amounted to 68.1 percent of capacity during the week compared with 61.4 percent the previous week.

Report Says Ozone Layer Losses Are Accelerating

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — New research suggests that depletion of the earth's protective ozone layer by man-made gases could be greater than previously thought and greater in far northern regions than toward the equator.

Ozone, a form of oxygen that is a pollutant near the ground helping to form smog, might even increase at low altitudes near the equator, according to a draft report prepared by 150 scientists from 11 countries.

The report, made available Monday, raised the question of whether the predicted stripping away of protective ozone might already be occurring, based on an unexplained but now confirmed "hole" that occurs in the springtime in the ozone layer above Antarctica.

Relatively high concentrations of ozone about 12 miles to 30 miles above the surface of the earth make life possible by screening out ultraviolet rays of the sun.

Less ozone at high altitudes means more skin cancer, more crop damage, possible eye damage in some species of cows and a shorter life for plastics, scientists say.

Since 1974, scientists have predicted that chlorofluorocarbon compounds could attack the high-altitude ozone layer. For this reason the United States banned those chemicals as aerosol propellants in 1978, but their use is still increasing worldwide because of their versatility and safety as refrigeration fluids and as foam blowing agents.

The report, coordinated by scientists from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said new estimates of the rates of the dozens of chemical reactions involved suggest the average amount of ozone above the earth would fall 4.9 percent to 9.4 percent, depending on the mathematical model used, if chlorofluorocarbons were released at 1980 rates.

A National Academy of Sciences report two years ago estimated the decrease at 2 percent to 4 percent.

So-called two-dimensional models, which take into account distance from the equator as well as height, yield decreases of 4 percent to 5 percent at the equator, 8 percent to 9 percent at 40 degrees north latitude — the latitude of Philadelphia — and 9 percent to 14 percent at 60 degrees north latitude, the latitude of Oslo and Leningrad.

"There are a lot of very fair-skinned people at those high latitudes," said Steve Seidel, an EPA policy specialist working on the problem.

Fair-skinned people are more vulnerable to skin cancer.

Below about 60,000 feet altitude and about 40 degrees latitude, ozone could increase, even though the total amount in the atmosphere above those places would be less, the models predicted.

Since the late 1950s, a team of scientists from the University of East Anglia in Britain has been measuring the amount of ozone above a station at Halley Bay, Antarctica. Since about 1966 the amount in October — the Antarctic spring — has steadily fallen until it is now about 60 percent of what it used to be, with most of the decline coming in the 1970s.

Satellite observations from 1979 on reported last year have confirmed this trend, the report noted, adding that it is "not obvious" what the still-elusive explanation will mean for predictions for the world as a whole.

"It is not yet evident whether the behavior in Antarctic ozone is an early warning of future changes in global ozone or whether it will always be confined to the Antarctic due to the special geophysical conditions that exist there," the report said.

"It's real, and it's not something anyone is even venturing a guess about at this point," Seidel said.

Un-fare

Together, the Piedmont Commuter System and Piedmont Airlines have low fares that are tough to beat everywhere we fly. Below, we've listed just a few.

But, what really makes things unfare is that you can fly for these low prices, and still receive the kind of service that other airlines look up to. In fact, a recent independent survey appearing in USA Today reports that frequent travelers rate Piedmont Airlines' service the best in America.

So, next time ask your travel agent to book the Piedmont Commuter System. Or call toll-free, 1-800-438-7833.

Pizza Stabbing
SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — A woman stabbed her husband five times after he refused to go out for a pizza during the first half of the American Football Conference championship game, police said.

Edward Kaushas, 33, was in serious condition Monday at Scranton State General Hospital, police said. His wife, Sandra, 29, was charged with aggravated assault, recklessly endangering another person and simple assault, police said.

Yelena Bonner 'Doing Well' After Operation

By CAROLYN LUMSDEN
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Family members hope to reach Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov by telephone to tell him about his wife's heart surgery, although Yelena Bonner is still recovering from the operation and cannot speak to him herself.

"It won't be possible for her to talk tomorrow at all," Efram Yankelevich said Monday night after visiting his 62-year-old mother-in-law at Massachusetts General Hospital, where she is recovering. "She's still under sedatives. She's still half asleep."

Earlier in the day, surgeons bypassed six arteries — three main arteries and three branches, said Martin Bander, spokesman for Massachusetts General Hospital.

"The operation went very well and she is now doing well in intensive care," he said.

The bypass operation on Mrs. Bonner, herself a physician, took just over four hours and ended about 12:30 p.m., Bander said. He said Mrs. Bonner was in satisfactory condition and would be at the hospital for eight to 10 days.

She had hoped to place a call to Sakharov, exiled to the Soviet city of Gorky, from her private hospital room. But the call scheduled for 11 a.m. today would be made from the Yankelevich home in the Boston suburb of Newton, her son-in-law said. "He (Sakharov) received, already, a telegram which told him to come to the post office" in Gorky, an industrial city 250 miles west of Moscow, Yankelevich said. Sakharov has no telephone and must use a public one.

The call would be the first conversation relatives have had with the dissident since a Dec. 28 call, which was interrupted by static after several minutes.

The family also received several postcards from Sakharov on Dec. 28 bearing New Year's greetings to physicists in the United States, but they had expected more postcards from the Nobel Peace Prize winner by now, Yankelevich said.

Mrs. Bonner was staying with her children on a temporary visa granted by Soviet authorities after years of protests by Sakharov and just before the November summit meeting between Soviet and U.S. leaders in Geneva.

Bander said he didn't know if Mrs. Bonner's visa, scheduled to expire March 2, would have to be extended because of the surgery.

"She was feeling very bad before she went into hospital and she was having trouble walking and breathing," Mrs. Bonner's mother, Ruth Bonner, told The Associated Press. "Clearly, the operation was necessary, and I hope it will ease her condition."

Tests at Massachusetts General Hospital last month showed Mrs. Bonner suffered a heart attack in 1983, which went untreated by Soviet doctors because Mrs. Bonner said she did not trust any she was allowed to see.

Her heart pain was caused by clogged arteries that cut down the flow of blood to the heart. Bypass surgery would bridge those narrowed arteries to carry more blood to the heart.

Dr. Adolph Hutter, chief cardiologist at the hospital and Yelena Bonner's doctor, said doctors decided to operate because medication had failed to stop her pain. The procedure was performed by two cardiac specialists at the hospital, Drs. W. Gerald Austen and Cary W. Akins, Bander said.

He said the surgeons used five veins from one of Mrs. Bonner's legs and an artery from her chest wall to bypass the clogged arteries to her heart.

The family has refused to discuss how Mrs. Bonner's medical bills will be paid. Mrs. Bonner also needs eye treatment for glaucoma, the family said.

Mrs. Bonner, a pediatrician, was sentenced to exile in Gorky two years ago for slander against the state. Her husband was sent to Gorky in 1980 without a trial. He is an outspoken critic of such Soviet actions as the invasion of Afghanistan.

Sub Disagreement

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A British military expert says Sweden let an intruding Soviet submarine escape in 1982 after secret diplomatic contacts with Moscow, but Swedish officials denied the report.

Professor John Erickson, a Briton who is an expert on the Soviet Union at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, said in an interview on Swedish public television Sunday night that he was "almost certain" Sweden let the submarine escape in October 1982 after a monthlong hunt in Hors Bay near Stockholm.

But former Defense Minister Sven Andersson denied Monday that the submarine escaped as a result of a "diplomatic game" between Sweden and the Soviet Union.

Police Say Bodyguard Arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private bodyguard hired by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was arrested Jan. 7 when he tried to enter a Senate office building with two automatic weapons, U.S. Capitol police said today.

The bodyguard, Charles J. Stein Jr., 47, of San Fernando, Calif., was arrested at the entrance of the Russell Senate Office Building after he asked police where he could put his Barrett machine gun, Uzi automatic pistol and ammunition, said Lt. Jeffrey Zanotti.

Stein was charged with various firearms violations and later released on his own recognizance. He is traveling with Kennedy and two of the senator's sisters on a 12-day South American trip to discuss the debt crisis, according to a report in today's Washington Post.

Bob Mann, Kennedy's press secretary, told the Post that Kennedy hired Stein because "the senator's primary concern was leaving the city with adequate protection for himself and his sisters (Jean Smith and Pat Lawford) who are traveling with him."

Hours before the party left the United States, Stein arrived at the Russell Senate Office Building and asked the guard where he could check his weapons, the Post said.

Stein, who is licensed to carry weapons in California but not in the District of Columbia, was placed under arrest, Zanotti said.

"Everybody was very cooperative in this," Zanotti said. There was "no resistance at all" from Stein, he said.

"This was an unfortunate incident that occurred with very good intentions on the part of Mr. Stein and the part of the police. He was just trying to be up front by telling the guard about the guns," Mann said.

Stein "assumed he was doing the appropriate thing, but because of this technical glitch in the law, he was stopped," Mann said.

Nevertheless, Mann said, "this office is in strict support of gun control laws and we take no issue with everyone following legal procedures."

The arrest prompted Kennedy to call Attorney General Edwin Meese III in an apparent effort to have Stein released and retrieve his weapons, according to a Justice Department source quoted by the Post.

Stein, who has been hired by Kennedy for several other trips, was ordered to leave his weapons in the United States because of a district law requiring that the arms be held for evidence and then destroyed.

Meanwhile, Mann said security arrangements were worked out with the Treasury Department which oversees the Secret Service. Treasury Secretary James Baker authorized Secret Service protection for Kennedy for the first two days of the trip.

After that, U.S. embassies in each country were providing Stein with two semiautomatic weapons and Stein was to return the arms afterward, Mann said. The Kennedy party is visiting Brazil, Argentina, Peru and Uruguay.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed in early trading today, carrying over some of the strength that surfaced late in Monday's session.

Blue chips spurred ahead soon after trading got underway but ran out of steam quickly. By 10:30 a.m. on Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 2.64 points to 1,517.89.

But gainers outnumbered losers by almost 2 to 1 in the early tally of all New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders focused their attention on the latest information about the economy.

The Commerce Department reported that retail sales, driven chiefly by a rebound in auto sales, rose 1.9 percent increase last month, marking the biggest gain since September.

Ala Moana Hawaii led the active list, up 1/8 at 17 1/8.

Also among the actively traded issues, Long Island Lighting was down 1/8 at 9 7/8, Boeing was down 3/8 at 48 1/8, American Telephone & Telegraph was down 1/8 at 23 3/8 and Chubb was up 1/8 at 57.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.28 to 119.47. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.54 at 244.76.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 7.00 to 1,520.53.

Advances outpaced declines by about 9 to 7 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 108.68 million shares, against 122.78 million in the previous session.

Security Alert Said Increased

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — NATO officials in Denmark said today that security at the Western defense alliance's installations in Denmark and Norway had been increased due to warnings of possible Palestinian terror attacks.

Erik Alstrup, spokesman for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's local Baltap headquarters told The Associated Press that extra guards had been placed around its facilities and that surveillance had been increased.

"We are on a low level of increased alert," he said.

Alstrup said the measures were taken following the international police organization Interpol's warning to the Dutch, Danish, Norwegian and Swedish governments last Thursday that terrorists might strike in the region.

Security at Copenhagen's Kastrup International airport as well as Israeli, Jewish and American interests in the Danish capital also was increased, and remained at a higher-than-normal level today.

The American Embassy in Copenhagen said it was not carrying out any telephone alerts to U.S. citizens living in Denmark. Ray H. Burson, an embassy spokesman, said, "If people come to us and ask if the level (of alert) is up, we tell them it is."

Burson said Denmark did not have concentrations of Americans as large as those in the Netherlands.

On Monday, U.S. diplomats in the Netherlands began such an alert in an effort to warn about 10,000 Americans of the possible danger.

"We call the larger concentrations of Americans, a firm or a school for Americans, and we let them know, and they let other people know," said Sam Wunder, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in The Hague, Netherlands.

Iraq has called repeatedly for peace. The Islamic Conference Organization, the non-aligned nations and the gulf Arab countries have tried to mediate, but Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has declared the struggle a "holy war" to overthrow Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and give Iraq a "genuinely Islamic" government.

Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Macomber pointed out that personnel at WTEB are not basically opposed to an additional public radio station, but that the action comes at a time when WTEB is just at the stage of getting its feet on the ground.

"It takes three or four years for a public radio station to build an audience," Macomber said. "When local people, particularly those in Greenville several years ago asked WUNC to consider a public radio station for the area, the Chapel Hill people did not respond favorably. That was before WTEB became established."

Reasons stated by WUNC manager Gary M. Shivers for placing a public radio station in the Greenville vicinity, according to Macomber, are not precisely valid.

"Engineers for the Chapel Hill application study claim that a station near Greenville would reach an audience of 300,000. That clearly is not so. There is perhaps a populace of 300,000 in the area, but certainly not that number in a listening audience."

On the issue of duplication, Macomber cited instances where major programming duplication would result. "The two hour segment of morning news, the one and one-half segment of afternoon news, the Saturday broadcast of the Metropolitan opera, a two hours variety show are examples of the same programs both stations will carry," he said.

Macomber says he feels "opposing the WUNC station to some degree will not do any good. What we do firmly believe is that we need to con-

Higher Oil Prices By End Of Decade

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — World oil prices could rise sharply before the end of the decade, reversing the declines of the past four years, according to a study by energy experts at Harvard University.

The researchers wrote that the current view that world oil prices will remain soft well into the 1990s underestimates the strength of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

They said that while the recent decline in oil prices was anticipated, an even faster decline had been projected, "strengthening our conclusion that OPEC is showing surprising cohesion and resilience in keeping prices up despite slack capacity."

"However, a slow but strong recovery of demand in the face of such low prices and growing GDP (gross domestic product) was projected to force oil prices well above current levels by the late 1980s. This result is counter to the widespread expectation that prices will remain constant or decline into the early 1990s" their report said.

Asked about his health, Jones said this morning that "I have a clean bill of health from the House physician and from my local physician. I plan to work hard to serve the people of this district."

Questioned about the future of the tobacco program, Jones said "this administration has been totally unsympathetic" to the needs of farmers, and said lawmakers are expected to act on the tobacco program — the Helms bill — "the first week or so after we get back in session."

"(U.S. Rep.) Charlie Rose never did offer a bill. All we had before us was the Helms bill. If it will reduce the excess holding of Stabilization, it will be well worth it," Jones suggested.

Jones also said he hopes the congress can enact legislation which will continue the moratorium on farm foreclosures.

continue to strive to serve eastern North Carolina in quality programming."

Shivers, manager of WUNC, Chapel Hill, also contacted by phone, says the coverage by a station in Farmville "would be for a different area basically from that of WTEB. It is true that our signal would overlap about 30 percent the coverage by WTEB in New Bern or for that matter any other non-commercial radio station such as the one at Warrenton and in Kinston.

"Listeners in Greenville, and in particular about 220,000 who live in areas not served by any public radio at all, have enthusiastically supported the idea of a station that would reach such listeners," he said.

On the matter of program duplication, Shivers said "the overlap in programs would be in those areas where both stations would use nationally syndicated programs. Even that applies only to areas covered by both stations. But radio is by nature a local medium, so local coverage would be different one from the other."

"If all the applications for operation — and there are several levels to go through — are approved, the earliest that work could begin on construction of the UNC station would be about August of this year, with operations to begin in August of 1987," Shivers said.

Shivers revealed that "if approval is authorized for the station, 'our initial efforts would be to provide two full time news reporters, who would be in the area producing feature items for broadcast."

Vandy's Shot Nips Tribe, 54-52

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — It was a long time in the making — eight years to be exact — but when the controversy cleared over Curt Vanderhorst's follow shot, the Pirates of East Carolina had defeated William & Mary 54-52 in Colonial Athletic Association basketball action Monday.

The Pirates took a 58-56 win at William & Mary Hall during the 1977-78 season under Coach Larry Gillman, but the Indians mastered their home court until last night.

The victory also snapped a conference losing skid on the road which dated back to ECU's first game in the ECAC-South, a 66-64 win over George Mason during the 1981-82 season.

"Our kids have got to think they can win on the road in the league," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said.

But the game ended with a minor controversy over whether Vanderhorst's shot came after the final buzzer. Scott Hardy launched a 16-footer with two seconds on the 45-second clock and four on the game clock.

The 45-second clock sounded before Hardy's shot rolled off the rim, and William & Mary Coach Barry

Parkhill said, "I think our kids reacted to the shot clock, which is louder than the game clock."

"After (Vanderhorst's) shot went in, we automatically need to call timeout, but (the game clock) ran out before we could. Give credit where it's due; East Carolina played it till the end."

The officials conferred briefly to determine if there had been a malfunction of the game clock or if the contest was over.

"There's no interpretation necessary," Harrison said in his post-game press conference. "It's cut and dry; I just didn't know if the shot clock went off first or the game clock. The shot doesn't have to hit anything (before the shot clock is reset). The horn never should have sounded."

Vanderhorst, who finished with 11 points, said he was just following orders.

"Coach (Harrison) tells us to keep playing till the final buzzer," Vanderhorst said. "I'm just happy to have been in that situation to give us a win on the road. I think (William & Mary) relaxed a when they heard the first horn."

But if the Tribe relaxed on that play, it was probably the only one of the second half as William & Mary erased a 10-point deficit in the final 14:14 and took the lead with 5:06 remaining.

Hardy dished off an assist to Marchell Henry for a layup with 14:14 remaining for a 39-29 ECU lead, but Ken Lambiotte led an Indians' charge and knotted the score 41-41 with two free throws at the 9:19 mark. Lambiotte, brother of N.C. State freshman Walker Lambiotte, posted 10 points in that spurt and finished with 11.

Keith Sledge connected on a 17-footer to put ECU ahead, and Greg Burzell tied the score 43-43 with 8:42 left.

Sledge and Henry sank shots from outside for East Carolina, but William & Mary outscored the Pirates 9-2 through the 4:28 mark for a 52-49 lead.

Vanderhorst hit from the corner with 3:39 left and added a free throw at the 1:18 mark to even the score 52-52.

The Pirates got the ball with 47 seconds left on the game clock and held the ball for the final shot.

"I know Barry's struggling right now; but he's a doggone good coach and they'll be back," Harrison said. "Don't ever second-guess the guy; he knows what he's doing."

"I was very disappointed in the amount of offensive rebounds we gave up, but late in the game I felt like our defense was very good. Tempo-wise, they had us in the tempo they're best at. We talked about it at halftime."

Hardy put the Pirates ahead 27-24 with a 17-footer at the end of the first half, but ECU had enjoyed an 8-point lead with 12:24 remaining. W&M's Bob Dail evened the score 7-7 with 16:18 left in the half, and ECU went on to post eight unanswered points for a 15-7 lead with 12:24 remaining.

Scott Coval posted two field goals and Lambiotte added a free throw as the Tribe cut the gap to 15-12 at the 10:03 mark.

Dail sank two free throws with 5:11 till halftime for a 22-21 Tribe lead, and the advantage switched three more times before Mark Batzel knotted the score at 25-25 with 40 seconds remaining.

"We had them a little on the run," Parkhill said. "I can find no fault with our kids. They played hard."

"In the first half, we had some kids in there shooting who have not been getting a lot of playing time," Harrison said. "This is the first win on the road in the league in three years; we're going to enjoy it for now."

Henry led the Pirates with 18 points, while Vanderhorst added 11.

The Pirates, now 7-7 overall and 2-2 in the CAA, is alone in fourth place in the league. East Carolina travels Saturday to UNC-Wilmington for another Colonial Athletic Association matchup, then visits Penn State Monday in a non-conference clash.

Lady Pirates Roll, 89-54

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina placed all five starters in double figures, led by Loraine Foster's 16, as the Lady Pirates rolled up an 89-54 victory over the Tribe Monday night.

The win was the second in as many Colonial Athletic Association starts and tied the Lady Pirates with James Madison for first place in the league standings.

William & Mary was losing its second league outing and falling to 2-10 on the season.

After the first few minutes of play, the outcome ceased to become a question. The question then was only what the margin would be.

It was the third game in just four nights for the Lady Pirates, who hosted the Lady Pirate Classic this past weekend, finishing second to 12-ranked LSU.

"There was not a let-down after the tournament," Coach Emily Manwaring said. "The intensity from Saturday night was still evident. The let-down was something we wanted to avoid."

Manwaring said the Lady Pirates' goal for the game was the same as it was in their opening game against Richmond — to dominate play in every department. And, except for one department — free throw shooting — the Pirates were atop the game.

East Carolina fired in 51.9 percent of its shots including 58.3 percent in the second half, while holding the Indians to just 35.7 percent. They outrebounded the Tribe 44-35 including a 22-12 margin in the second half. They had fewer fouls, more assists (21-11) and fewer turnovers (14-26).

But, they failed to counter Karen

Jordan at the foul line. Jordan, the top player for the Indians, canned all 11 of her free throws to finish with 17 points for William & Mary. She also jerked away 10 rebounds, high for the Tribe. Overall the Indians hit on 14 of 17 free throws. ECU made just nine of 17.

"Everybody came to play," Manwaring said. "Even when we subbed, we didn't take a step backwards. We were playing a team that we have traditionally dominated over the years, and we're still trying to develop the killer instinct. It's coming — more so than against Richmond."

"We work hard, we practice hard and we play hard," Manwaring said. "We deserve what we get and we don't feel sorry for anyone."

Defense was a key factor in the game as the Lady Pirates recorded 15 steals among the 26 turnovers, and blocked eight shots, three each by Gretta O'Neal and Alma Bethea.

East Carolina jumped ahead on the opening shot, but William & Mary came back to score the next two baskets to take the lead, 4-2. Delphine Mabry and Sylvia Bragg scored the next two to put ECU back ahead, but the Indians twice more tied it up before finally falling behind for good.

Bragg's 12-footer with 16:14 left put ECU up, 8-6, and the Lady Pirates ran off the next 10 points, six of them by Foster, for an 18-6 lead. The margin climbed to as much as 17 during the half, and never got closer than 11 after that. ECU lead at intermission, 42-28.

In the second half, the Pirates quickly stretched the lead out to 20 points, reaching that at 50-30 on a Mabry steal and layup. The margin reached 30 at 70-40 as Bragg hit a (14-26).

Alarie, Dawkins, Amaker Pace Duke Past St. Joe's

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mark Alarie and Johnny Dawkins scored 43 points between them, but Duke Coach Mike Krzyewski reserved his praise for Tommy Amaker, the Blue Devils' little point guard.

Amaker collected just six points as unbeaten, third-ranked Duke routed St. Joseph's 87-66 Monday night for its 15th victory.

But without the 6-foot, 2-inch junior from Falls Church, Va., the Blue Devils from the Atlantic Coast Conference would not have had such an easy time.

The 155-pound Amaker handed out 10 assists, made five steals and was charged with only one turnover in the fast-paced game.

"He is as good a point guard as there is in the country," Krzyewski said.

Amaker boosted his season assists average to 6.9 per game. And he has just 31 turnovers this season.

"We played one of the best games if not the best," said Amaker. "Everything clicked for us."

Amaker said the team was flat in the first half, which ended with Duke ahead 41-39.

"I started doing the little things and helped get us going in the second half," Amaker said.

Mark Alarie scored 22 points and Johnny Dawkins 21, with David Henderson chipping in 18. The 6-8 Alarie also grabbed nine rebounds as Duke beat St. Joseph's off the boards, 36-24.

Duke scored the first nine points of the second half to boost its lead to 50-39.

St. Joseph's, which had an eight-game winning streak snapped, closed to 56-51, and trailed only 63-57 with nine minutes left.

But Amaker, Alarie, Dawkins & Co. opened up to outscore St. Joseph's 22-3 in the next 8 1/2 minutes for an 85-60 lead.

Rodney Blake's 19 points and nine rebounds led St. Joseph's, 9-3. Maurice Martin scored 18 for the Atlantic 10 conference team.

"We had a terrific second half, played dynamite basketball," said Krzyewski. "And I'm not a guy to overly praise my team."

Krzyewski said he was "bewildered as to how well we played in the second half against a real good team."

Krzyewski, who is in his seventh season at Duke, said this year's team is the best he's had.

Duke, which is trying to better its longest winning streak, 19 games in 1963, meets Wake Forest at home Thursday night and then invades No. 1-ranked North Carolina Saturday in a pair of Atlantic Coast Conference games.

St. Joseph's coach Jim Boyle said his team played hard.

"But it was against a team I think will be in the final four," Boyle said. "Duke is one of the best teams I've seen in years. They are tremendous. We just got worn down."

Boyle said his Hawks turned the ball over too many times — 22 times to 17 for Duke.

"But they (the Blue Devils) caused that," he said. "We just ran out of gas in the second half."

Krzyewski agreed.

Violations Said Given To NCAA

Some East Carolina University football players allegedly received cash for playing under former Coach Ed Emory, the Greensboro Daily News says in its edition today, quoting unnamed ECU sources.

David Stevens, university attorney, confirmed that unspecified "violations" had been turned up and reported to the NCAA, but would not say whether they occurred during the Emory tenure.

Stevens said that a follow-up report was to be turned in to the NCAA, but that he was not a party to it. According to Stevens, the investigation is now in the hands of Chancellor John Howell, who is currently attending the NCAA Convention in New Orleans and who had no comment on the details.

Emory was fired by the university in December of 1984 and later filed a $1.2 breach of contract suit.

He later settled out of court, accepting ECU's initial offer of paying off his contract.

During the on-going process of the Emory suit, an ECU official told The Daily Reflector off the record that a report had been made to the NCAA but would not discuss it further nor comment for the university. In addition, a former assistant coach under Emory also said that there had been NCAA violations but would not discuss them at the time.

Emory, just prior to his final game as ECU coach, dismissed defensive back Stefon Adams and tight end Damon Pope for allegedly signing with agents prior to the end of their collegiate careers. An in-house investigation which followed turned up no evidence however.

ECU officials this morning referred all comments to Dr. Ken Karr, director of athletics. Karr, however, was at the NCAA Convention and was unavailable.

Education Rules 'Inherently Biased'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Charges ranging from insensitivity to racism are being hurled at the NCAA following passage by the predominantly white governing body of college athletics of eligibility requirements black educators insist are inherently biased.

The end result of Monday's vote, which followed the rejection of two other black school-sponsored proposals, could clear the Division I benches of thousands of incoming freshmen, who would be ruled ineligible because of less-than-sufficient high school grades.

Today, the convention will tackle more sensitive issues, among them:

An involuntary drug-testing program in which coaches as well as students could face penalties.

A plan to expand an athlete's eligibility to a full five years, rather than the traditional four in a five-year span (better known as red-shirting).

Reducing from eight to seven the number of sports needed to remain a Division IA school (after a similar measure to cut the minimum from eight to six failed Monday).

The banning of boosters from taking part in on-campus recruiting (off-campus recruiting by boosters has been prohibited for several years).

The addition to Bylaw 5-1-(j) of the NCAA Constitution — more commonly known as Proposition 48 — employs a mix of high school grade-point averages and Scholastic Aptitude Test or American College Test results — with higher numbers in one offsetting lower scores in others. Proposition 48 was originally passed in 1983.

"I don't understand academicians being that asinine, insipid and bucolic," Eddie Jones, the faculty representative at Grambling, railed after the NCAA rejected, by votes of 47-248 and 66-233, black-sponsored proposals to eliminate SAT or ACT scores as a measure for athletic eligibility. Then, by a 206-94 margin, they approved the proposal that links high school performance with college eligibility.

"Frederick Douglass (an abolitionist) said that absolute power concedes nothing; it never has and it never will. And that's exactly what they've shown us today — that they don't have to concede anything they don't want to concede," Jones said.

Before the vote, Joseph Johnson, Grambling's president, said he believed there was "a hidden agenda at this convention, and that was to eliminate the number of black athletes on college campuses."

And Jim Frank, the first black to be NCAA president and now commissioner of the predominantly black Southwestern Athletic Conference, said, "A great deal of insensitivity have been shown to a small but loyal segment of this association."

One common thread running through many of the black educators' comments was that it would be better to permit the eligibility of a marginal student who might later fail or leave school rather than to keep out marginal ones who, if given the chance, might succeed.

To that end, a Big Ten Conference-sponsored proposal was offered and defeated.

Instead of establishing high school performance as the eligibility criterion, it would have used steadily increasing college grade-point averages for the sophomore through senior years as a measuring stick.

"We're going to get the short end of the stick," Jones said. "The larger colleges and universities can afford to bring in a student, take care of him for the first year, then play him the second, third and fourth years and he doesn't have to maintain satisfactory academic progress because they voted that down. Or they're going to have persons to take the test, the ACT or the SAT, for a student who is at risk and he's going to come out smelling like a rose."

"We can't legislate morality," Jones went on. "We're not opposed to academic standards. But we are opposed to people who don't give others equal access. . . . Joe Paterno (the Penn State football coach) said in 1983 that black students have been prostituted. "Historically, black colleges and universities have taken students who were at risk and they have provided significant support systems for them and they have graduated them. We don't have any problem with educating people."

Those who have voiced support of the use of high school grades and SAT or ACT scores say black students lack the motivation rather than the ability to achieve higher marks and that this will force high schools to do a better job.

Students who fail to achieve the minimum standards — and some estimates put the number at 2,000 high school seniors, male and female — to compete at Division I schools could enroll at Division II or Division III schools or could attend junior college in hopes of improving their grades to Division I standards.

Specifically, under the proposal adopted, this year's graduating high school senior with a grade-point average of 2.200 or higher for a core curriculum of 11 courses in English, math and science must have an SAT score of 660 (the maximum 1,600) or an ACT score of 13 (maximum 36) to be eligible for Division I athletics. The average SAT score of college freshmen now is about 1,200.

If the grade-point is lower, the SAT or ACT score must conversely be higher. A 2.100-2.199 grade-point, for instance, requires 680 on the SAT or 14 on the ACT. The scale ends with a grade-point average of 1.800-1.899, which requires a 740 SAT or 17 ACT.

Johnson, who led the fight against using standardized test scores three years ago, said in his futile plea to eliminate grades or scores as a measure of eligibility: "If there is any integrity, any morality, any shame left in this organization, this is the most appropriate time to show

Heels Maintain Lead In College Basketball Polls

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Sports Writer

Led by North Carolina, the top seven teams in The Associated Press college basketball poll were unchanged from last week's nationwide voting of sportswriters and broadcasters.

North Carolina, 16-0, remained atop the poll for the eighth straight week, receiving 46 first-place votes and 1,280 points, 49 more than Michigan, 16-0, which got 15 first-place votes after registering two Big Ten Conference victories over ranked teams, Illinois and Purdue.

Duke, 15-0, had the last four first-place votes from the panel of 65 and finished with 1,173 points, followed by Syracuse, Georgia Tech, Memphis State and Oklahoma. The first seven teams have a combined record of 104-1, the lone loss being Georgia Tech's defeat at the hands of Michigan in the Tipoff Classic.

Syracuse, 13-0, held fourth place with 1,116 points, Georgia Tech, 14-1, was next with 988, while No. 6 Memphis State, 15-0, had 976 and Oklahoma, 15-0, finished with 909.

Kansas, which has not been out of the Top Ten all season, moved from ninth to eighth with 858 points, while St. John's, which lost to Boston College in overtime last week before rallying for a national television victory over Georgetown, was ninth with 720 points and Nevada-Las Vegas, 12th last week, rounded out the Top Ten with 653 points.

Kentucky leads the Second Ten for the second consecutive week, followed by Alabama-Birmingham, Notre Dame, Louisiana State, Georgetown, Virginia Tech, Texas-El Paso, Louisville, Purdue and Bradley.

Last week it was Kentucky, Nevada-Las Vegas, Georgetown, Alabama-Birmingham, Texas-El Paso, Notre Dame, Louisville, Illinois, Virginia Tech and Purdue.

Bradley, 16-1, is the only new member of the Top Twenty. The Braves' only loss, 81-76, came at the hands of Clemson in the first round of the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu. Falling from the Top Twenty was No. 18 Illinois, 10-5. The Fighting Illini lost to the second-rated Wolverines of Michigan 61-59, and also dropped a 58-51 decision to Michigan State.

Louisiana State, 15-2, dropped from eighth to 14th after suffering Southeastern Conference losses to Alabama and Tennessee.

Georgetown suffered its third loss of the season, 79-74 to St. John's, and fell two more places, to 15th.

Louisville, 9-4, fell just one spot from last week's ranking as the Cardinals suffered their fourth loss of the year, all to ranked teams.

Purdue, 14-3, jumped from 20th to 19th as the Boilermakers split their two Big Ten games last week, an 88-83 victory over Michigan State, and a 75-51 loss to Michigan.

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press' college basketball poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, total points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1, record through Jan. 13 and last week's ranking:

Junior High Basketball

BETHEL — Bethel and Wellcome Middle School split a pair of junior high basketball games Monday.

In the girls' game, Patrina Robertson paced Bethel to a 19-18 win with 9 points. Tracy Nichols led Wellcome with 11.

Reggie Daniels fired in 14 points to lead Wellcome to a 41-36 win in the boys' game. Paul Brown paced Bethel with 12.

WHITFIELD-CHICOD

GRIMESLAND — G.R. Whitfield swept a pair of junior high basketball games over Chicod Monday, winning the boys' game 44-25 and the girls' 27-11.

Eric Edwards netted 18 points and Bershawn Thompson 11 for Whitfield, while Paul Merritt paced Chicod with 12.

In the girls' game, Glenda Hardy scored 13 and Tracy Brown 10 for Whitfield. Nikki Adams led Chicod with 6 points.

CHOCOWINITY-GCA

Chocowinity thrashed Greenville Christian Academy in a pair of junior high basketball games.

China Grice's 29 points led Chocowinity's girls to a 36-23 victory over GCA. Myra Locklear paced GCA with 13.

In the boys' game, Julius Smith posted 10 points to lead Chocowinity to a 60-11 romp. Tony Dobbs netted 8 for GCA.

THREE STAGES
PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, now a member of the Senior PGA Tour, says there are three stages in a golfer's career.

One, there is the beginning when you hope to develop a knack for playing well and you gain enough confidence and ability to become a professional.

Two, there's the time when you do play well and win some tournaments.

Three, there's the time when you advance in age and start to lose your skills. That's when you look for miracles but the sad truth is they're hard to find.

Newman Leads Spiders Past UNC-Wilmington

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — John Newman keyed a second-half surge with 12 of his game-high 34 points to propel Richmond to a 79-63 Colonial Athletic Conference basketball triumph over North Carolina Wilmington Monday night.

The Spiders, who improved to 11-1 and 2-0 in the CAA, outscored the Seagulls 16-3 during a six-minute stretch of the second half to turn a 48-40 advantage into a 64-43 lead on a Newman basket with 6:08 remaining. That basket gave Newman 2,000 career points, second on the Spider scoring list behind Michael Perry, who tallied 2,145.

The Seagulls, 9-5 and 1-3, trimmed the margin to 70-59 on a jumper by Greg Bender with 2:07 to play. They could come no closer the rest of the way.

Peter Woolfolk added 15 points for Richmond.

Charles Cherry paced the Seagulls with 17 points and 13 rebounds. Bender added 14 points and Bobby Joe Springer had 11.

Five North Carolina Counties Listed In Report On Hunger

By CHRISTOPHER B. DALY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — More than a third of the residents of 150 of the nation's poorest counties who are eligible for food stamps never get them, according to a report issued today.

The pockets of highest poverty and lowest participation in the food stamp program are distributed widely but unevenly across the country, although many are in the Farm Belt, says the report by the Physicians Task Force on Hunger at the Harvard School of Public Health.

Texas had the most "hunger counties," with 29, followed by South Dakota and Missouri, while more than half the states had none. Eureka County, Nev., was rated worst, with only 1.7 percent of the needy said to be receiving food stamps.

The list included five North Carolina counties, led by Watauga County at No. 69. Ashe County was 81st, followed by Clay County at No. 118, Beaufort County at 147th and Cherokee County at No. 150.

Officials in areas cited generally criticized the report, with some saying the statistics were skewed because they did not take account of population density and other factors.

The authors of the report said they were surprised so many of the nation's hungriest counties were in the Farm Belt, stretching from Illinois to Colorado and from Texas to the Dakotas. Dozens of "hunger counties" were also identified in the Rocky Mountain states, the Southeast and Appalachia.

None were found from Indiana to Maine, along the Pacific Coast, or in Alaska and Hawaii and scattered states elsewhere.

The researchers blamed much of the problem on what they said was the failure of federal assistance programs to reach the needy.

"Designed to prevent hunger in the nation, the food stamp program serves just over half the poorest citizens for whom its benefits are intended. This decline in the rate of coverage is taking place as hunger is getting worse," the report said.

Specifically, the authors criticize the Reagan administration for tightening food stamp eligibility in 1981. Before then, families could qualify if their gross income was below 150 percent of the poverty line; the eligibility is now below 130 percent of poverty.

Harvard Public Health Prof. Larry Brown, who chairs the group, said copies of the report were being mailed to the White House and each member of Congress.

The task force also issued a general report last year on hunger in America, calling malnutrition a growing epidemic that left up to 20 million Americans chronically underfed.

In the followup study, "hunger counties" were defined as those where more than 20 percent of the residents earn less than the federally defined poverty level — now set at $10,609 for a family of four — and where fewer than one-third of eligible residents actually receive food stamps.

By that definition, the key issue in the report was participation in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's food stamp program, which provides extra food-buying power for recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the principal welfare program. It is funded by Congress but administered by the states.

The study argues that poverty alone does not account for the spread of hunger. In Mississippi, for example, one of the poorest states in the nation, the study found no "hunger counties" because of wide distribution of food stamps.

Brown said the doctors' group would use the findings this year to guide field investigations into why food stamp participation varies so widely.

In all, 150 "hunger counties," representing about 5 percent of all counties, were found in 24 states.

They were: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and West Virginia.

A total of 668,000 people were found to be living below the poverty line in the "hunger counties."

USDA spokesman Charles DeJulius said he had not seen the report and could not comment.

Kate Smith Satisfactory After Surgery On Leg

RALEIGH (AP) — Famous for her rendition of "God Bless America," 78-year-old singer Kate Smith is "doing very nicely" after undergoing surgery to have her right leg amputated, a doctor says.

Miss Smith, who underwent surgery Sunday because of circulatory complications caused by diabetes, was in satisfactory condition Monday at Raleigh Community Hospital.

With a lifelong history of diabetes and high blood pressure, Miss Smith has been in poor health since 1976, when she lapsed into a four-month coma. In 1979 she moved to Raleigh to be near her sister and niece while she recuperated.

"She seems to be doing very nicely," Dr. William G. Sullivan said Monday. "She came through the amputation nicely, but of course we've got several days to go."

Helena Steene said her sister had been getting along well, but last week she complained her foot was bothering her. Miss Smith hadn't been able to walk without assistance, Mrs. Steene said, and it was thought she may have somehow injured her foot.

Patricia Castledine, a friend of Miss Smith's, said she massaged the foot and used lintiment on it, but it didn't get any better. Mrs. Steene said the foot got worse Saturday.

"There was a drastic change in the appearance of her foot," Mrs. Steene said. "I can't describe it. It was bad."

Mrs. Steene said that the family has been told Miss Smith will probably be hospitalized for a long time. Sullivan said he amputated the leg above the knee to prevent the circulation problems from spreading.

Man's Bond Set

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County Superior Court judge has set bond at $100,000 for a Raleigh man whose conviction for the rape of his 3-year-old daughter was overturned by the state Supreme Court last month.

Judge Edwin S. Preston Jr. on Monday also appointed Raleigh attorney L. Michael Dodd as a new attorney for Francis V. Fearing after his original trial attorney, Gerald L. Bass, asked to be excused from the case.

Bass said he thought another lawyer could approach the defense from a fresh standpoint.

Fearing was sentenced in September 1984 to life in prison after a conviction on first-degree rape, incest and taking indecent liberties with his daughter. The girl was found wandering outside on an October morning dressed only in her nightgown and panties.

The child did not appear at her father's trial after a judge ruled she was too young to testify.

Instead, a doctor, nurse and social worker who examined the girl were allowed to testify on what she had said to them about being sexually assaulted. On the basis of that testimony, Fearing was convicted.

But in December, the N.C. Supreme Court ruled that Judge Anthony M. Brannon erred in the original trial by ruling, without having talked to Fearing's daughter, that the child was incompetent to testify. It ordered a new trial for Fearing.

In an opinion written by Associate Justice Louis B. Meyer, the Supreme Court overturned Fearing conviction, not because Brannon allowed hearsay evidence, but because he had not personally observed and evaluated the child.

Brannon made the ruling after Evelyn W. Hill, the prosecutor, and Fearing's defense attorney agreed that the girl was too young to understand the meaning of an oath in court.

The girl, who was 4 at the time of the trial, is now 5. She is in foster care.

Preston set the bond after Ms. Hill argued that Fearing's case was likely to end in another conviction and life sentence.

Ms. Hill told Preston that Fearing's new trial was granted on procedural grounds unrelated to the evidence used to convict him. No date has been set for the new trial.

Sanford Joins Crowded Field

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Analysts say former Gov. Terry Sanford's lengthy experience in government and politics gives him instant front-runner status in the Democratic Senate race, but the party's other six contenders have no plans to pull out.

Sanford joined the crowded field Monday, paying his filing fee at a state Board of Elections office filled with his supporters, many of them students at Duke University, where he was president until he retired in July.

Asked what the biggest campaign issue was, Sanford said, "I don't want to sound trite, but I think it's the soul of North Carolina."

"I think we've forgotten where we're going," he said. "I think we've forgotten that we are a state that is willing to invest in young people and cares about what's happening in the world. I think we've gotten far too self-centered ... (and) gotten on far too many narrow issues."

Sanford said he would support policies aimed at lowering the nation's budget deficit, the U.S. trade imbalance, rescuing American agriculture and bolstering education and basic research.

"You don't call ... positions like that liberal or conservative," he said. "You call them sensible and practical."

Sanford, who served as governor from 1961-65, announced Saturday night he had reversed his decision of last September to forego the Senate race. He said party activists, concerned that no Democrat with statewide name recognition had entered the campaign, prevailed on him to reconsider.

Former state Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, who had planned to enter the Senate campaign this week, was reportedly reconsidering in light of Sanford's move. Faircloth, who finished third in the 1984 Democratic gubernatorial primary, is a longtime Sanford ally and has expressed reluctance to clash with him.

Faircloth could not be reached for comment Monday.

On Sunday, Faircloth said he was stunned by Sanford's sudden entry into the race. He and Sanford met for two hours Friday, and sources said both wanted to run and were urging each other to stay out.

Sanford refused Monday to answer questions about Faircloth.

Sanford defended his change of heart about the race, saying he originally had decided against running because he expected other prominent Democrats to run.

Instead, "we did not see develop the kind of field that most Democratic leaders around the state, for whatever reasons, felt could win against the Republicans in the fall," he said.

The other Democratic candidates are Charlotte businessman William Belk; Marvin Blount, a Greenville attorney and former Superior Court judge; Fountain Odom, a Mecklenburg County commissioner; Betty Wallace, a state education official from Raleigh; Katherine Harper, a businesswoman from Charlotte; and Raleigh businessman Milton Croom.

Those candidates have displayed irritation at being portrayed as second-rate, and grumble that some party leaders sought a big-name candidate after speaking last fall of the need for new blood after former Gov. Jim Hunt decided against a Senate bid.

"They got the fresh faces ... and now, apparently, they don't want them," Odom said Monday.

While insisting he would not "target" Sanford for criticism, Odom pointed out that at 47, he was in a position to serve longer than Sanford, 68, who Odom contended would serve only one term.

Sanford laughed off the age issue. "We've got a person in the White House who's older than I am, and I don't wear a hearing aid," he said.

He said he hoped to spend less than $1 million and use as little television advertising as possible. He vowed to conduct a high-road campaign without "cutting up anybody."

Nevertheless, Sanford had harsh words for the National Congressional Club, the conservative political action committee allied with Republican Sen. Jesse Helms. The club is backing David Funderburk, former U.S. ambassador to Romania, in the GOP Senate primary, and club leaders already have tagged Sanford as a liberal.

"I think they perform the kind of activities and run the kinds of campaign that are a disgrace to American society," Sanford said. "They think it's honorable to cheat to get there, and if you get there, that's the important thing."

Carter Wrenn, executive director of the Congressional Club, said, "For someone to say they want to run a positive campaign and then paint their opponents with that kind of smear shows how hypocritical Mr. Sanford can be."

Leaf Leaders Seek Delay

RALEIGH (AP) — Tobacco leaders are keeping their fingers crossed that Congress will delay a growers' referendum scheduled for later this month on whether to continue the federal tobacco program.

Tobacco leaders want a law passed delaying the vote, which is taken every three years, because pending legislation would change how the federal tobacco program operates.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp.'s board last Friday recommended such a delay, and other tobacco experts said Monday the move would be desirable.

Because of uncertainty over the leaf program, stabilization has advised growers to count on an average support price this year or about $1.44 a pound.

Congress reconvenes Tuesday, three days before the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service is scheduled to mail referendum ballots to tobacco growers.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported today that sources say the staff of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is considering legislation to delay the vote by at least 30 days and also postpone an announcement of the burley tobacco quota scheduled for Feb. 1.

Stabilization's board also recommended that the U.S. Department of Agriculture delay setting this year's no-net cost assessment because the proposed legislation would affect the size of the fee farmers pay to fund the program, said Fred Bond, general manager of the Raleigh-based cooperative.

If the referendum scheduled for Jan. 27-30 is held and a new tobacco program is enacted later, the new program may require a second referendum. So the delay would not only clarify what farmers are voting on but also could save the cost and confusion of an additional vote.

"Any time you start to throw two referendums and two quotas at the farmer, it's just going to confuse him even more about what to expect for this year's crop," said John Cyrus, tobacco affairs chief for the state Department of Agriculture.

"I think everyone is in agreement that we don't need two referendums," said T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina.

McLean Trucking Might Have Been Latest Victim Of Free Enterprise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress thought a healthy dose of free enterprise would restore the trucking industry to robust health, but McLean Trucking Co. is just the latest example that the cure has proved crippling in North Carolina.

The Motor Carrier Act reforms in 1980 eliminated many entry barriers to interstate hauling. In that year, 278,000 North Carolinians worked in the trucking industry.

By 1984, that number had shrunk to 220,000, said Eb Peters, executive vice president of the North Carolina Trucking Association.

Like many other trucking giants, the Winston-Salem, N.C.-based McLean, which filed for bankruptcy reorganization last week, has been unable to adapt to a deregulated environment.

Small carriers have sprung up by the hundreds, and a few have prospered now that established companies can't dominate routes and fix rates with the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The number of carriers registered in North Carolina rose from fewer than 2,500 in 1980 to 4,200 a year ago, Peters said.

But the industry as a whole is suffering, as more companies compete for less business in a highly uncertain environment.

Deregulation is only part of the industry's bind.

David Gordon, a spokesman for the American Trucking Associations in Washington, said truckers' profits have been slashed by the surge in imported goods, the move to lightweight materials by American manufacturers and a sharp rise in liability insurance premiums.

More imports in the auto industry, for example, mean fewer hauls between domestic parts suppliers and automakers, Gordon said.

By the first quarter of 1985 — the latest reporting period available — 45 percent of the nation's motor carriers were operating in the red, Gordon said. Between 1980 and 1984, he said, about 4,500 of them filed for bankruptcy.

Deregulation forced many companies, long guaranteed a living by secure routes and set rates, to sell themselves for the first time.

Some truckers, Peters said, have been slow to catch on to modern marketing techniques.

"It just took some of the companies a couple of years to adjust their practices to deregulation," Peters said.

Union contracts and costly maintenance operations have further saddled the large, established companies. And safety has emerged as a concern in the past year, when truck accidents rose 18 percent nationwide.

"We think there's a connection between safety and maintenance and the pressure to make a profit," Gordon said.

Under the 1980 reforms, trucking companies may still get together on rates, although individual operators may undercut the agreed-on price.

But a new round of deregulation by the U.S. Department of Transportation would forbid any rate talks under threat of anti-trust prosecution.

A Transportation Department bill before Congress would leave the industry virtually free of rate and route regulations.

The 1985-86 tax rate for the City of Greenville is 63 cents per $100 property valuation. Call the City Tax Office at 752-4137 for more information.

Former GI Finally Gets Bronze Star

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Sherman Hester says he was a 25-year-old combat infantryman when he was recommended for the Bronze Star medal, but the 66-year-old Winston-Salem man didn't receive it until last week.

"And the interesting thing is that the fellow who told me I won it and helped me get the medal was the officer who helped recommend me," Hester said.

The episode began about 13 months ago when Edgar A. Parsons of Chapel Hill saw Hester's name in the bulletin of the veterans of the 69th Infantry Division.

In the final months of World War II in Germany, Parsons recognized Hester as a member of his platoon. He got in touch with Hester and the two talked about their war experiences.

"He remembered me as a Southern boy in the middle of a Yankee-dominated unit," Hester said.

Parsons said he remembered Hester as a man "who knew a great deal about how to live in the woods." Parsons had gotten wet in the snow in Belgium, and, as night fell, he began to shiver.

"I was apprehensive about spending the night in wet clothes," Parsons said.

Using his knowledge of the woods he learned during his youth, Hester cut down some trees, splintered the wood and started a small fire to dry Parsons' clothes and to warm him.

"It was good for me to be able to do it," Hester said. "He was a second lieutenant and our platoon leader, and I was just a private, but I helped."

In the midst of their reunion last year, Parsons asked Hester if he knew that he had won the Bronze Star, one of the Army's highest awards for valor. Hester said he didn't.

Parsons then wrote a letter to the Department of the Army that told about Hester's participation in an assault on the Siegfried line in Germany on March 9, 1945 and asked that the medal recommended earlier be awarded.

The Army wrote Hester that his records were destroyed in a fire and asked Parsons and Hester to supply as much information as possible. The two former soldiers complied, and the Army reconstructed part of Hester's records and established his eligibility for the honor.

He said the Army has discovered he was also awarded the European Theater ribbon with three battle stars, the World War II Victory Medal, the Good Conduct Medal and the carbine and rifle marksmanship awards.

"And," Hester said, "they send me a brand new medal for every one of them along with the Bronze Star Medal."

Burlington Sale Noted

GREENSBORO (AP) — The purchase of Burlington Industries Inc.'s domestic division would give J.P. Stevens & Co. about 23 percent of the nation's sheet business and 23 percent of the domestic towel business, officials say.

Plans by Burlington Industries Inc., the nation's largest public textile company, to sell its domestics division to Stevens for an undisclosed amount were announced Monday.

Burlington's domestics division, which it has operated since 1955, has contributed 7.5 percent of the company's total sales in 1985, selling $202.3 million in sheets and towels, officials said.

Industry analysts have said that such a purchase gives Stevens a larger share in the home furnishing business, which it has said it wants to emphasize. The sale also rids the Greensboro-based Burlington of a small division that did not produce any top-selling lines.

"A big company like Burlington wants (its product lines) to be No. 1 or 2 and, in the worst case, No. 3," said Jay Meltzer, an industry analyst with Goldman Sachs in New York. "They want to be the big guy on the block and in this case they weren't."

CHECK YOUR DOCTOR'S VITAL SIGNS.

I AM A COSTWISE
DOCTOR

Signs like this are appearing in doctors' offices across the state. Doctors who display them have joined Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina in the battle against rising health care costs. They have become CostWise doctors. That's important for you to know. Because health care costs affect everyone. When costs go up, coverage premiums ultimately go up too.

Under the CostWise program, participating doctors agree to accept the amounts we allow for various treatments. In fact, you won't even have to file a claim form. The doctor will handle it for you. Your only obligation will be the co-payment, or deductible or non-covered services if applicable.

Of course, to benefit from all this you have to be a Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina member.

The CostWise doctors deserve a lot of credit. Because they're helping slow the rise in premiums and co-payments. Thanks to them, you'll be getting the best possible medical care at the lowest possible cost.

So check your doctor's vital signs. And if you see one that says CostWise, you'll know you're in the right place.

Dayan's Daughter Writes About Her Father's Life

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Gossip columns abounded with the exploits of Moshe Dayan, Israel's famed warrior-statesman, when he was alive.

Four years after his death from a heart attack, the nature of the elusive man behind the eye patch is still the subject of controversy and heated emotion.

The latest installment in the still unfolding tale of Dayan's behind-the-scenes life has come from his daughter, Yael Dayan, a 46-year-old novelist.

Her book, "My Father, His Daughter," published by Farrar, Straus & Giroux, portrays the late general and peace negotiator as a brilliant war tactician and visionary statesman.

In private, she wrote, he tended to be autocratic and a womanizer. However, she described him as primarily a loving family man who endured constant pain as a result of his eye wound.

Dayan lost his eye in Syria in 1941 when a rifle bullet struck the binoculars he was looking through during a battle between his British-backed Hagannah guerrilla unit and Vichy French troops.

An almost-worshipful tone pervades most of the book, except for the final chapters which are tinged with disillusionment.

"The fact was that my father's priorities and life style changed in the last 10 years of his life, perhaps reflecting weakness or vulnerability, obsessive materialism, and eventually egocentric self-pity," Yael wrote.

Those years were marked by Dayan's divorce in 1971 from his first wife, Ruth, his immediate remarriage and the tarnishing of his career during the 1973 war, when as defense minister Israel's army was caught unprepared by a combined Egyptian-Syrian surprise attack.

One explanation of the change in Dayan was supplied by Ruth Dayan, Yael's mother, who is quoted in the book as saying that her husband had drifted away "not because of comforts found in other beds ... but because he succumbed to being a legend."

In a newspaper article one year after Dayan's death in 1981, Ruth Dayan wrote that her husband had been "bestly" to her. However, she said that because of his great love for Israel she forgave him, "for the terrible insult, for the betrayals, for destroying our family."

The great blow to the family came when Dayan's will was read: He had left virtually all of his multimillion-dollar estate, including an extensive archaeological collection, to his second wife, Rahel.

His son, Ehud, who had taken over the family farm in the Galilee region, was described by friends as distraught and inconsolable. In a vitriolic article published in 1982 he described his father's books as simply a "translation of Israel's wars" into money and said that in another army Dayan could not even have graduated from a squadron leader's course much less become a military legend.

"Greed drove you out of your mind," Ehud wrote.

Referring to his father's 1979 surgery for cancer of the colon, Ehud recalled: "Even as the anesthetic was wearing off you were selling your clinical experiences to a newspaper. If you could you would have sold your intestines by the meter."

Yael Dayan, who wrote that she felt she had a special place in her father's heart, said in an interview in her Tel Aviv home that she did not understand why her father acted the way he had regarding the will. But she added, "I am not being judgmental about it."

She said her father would probably have lauded the candor of her book. "He never avoided exposure. ... I wrote the book feeling he was somewhere behind me."

The frankness gives the reader some intimate insight into Dayan's life, such as his feelings about the famous black eye patch.

"He hated it physically ... and he hated the symbolic value it had acquired. ... At home, the minute he walked in he removed it and we were accustomed to the scar and the deformed skin underneath."

John Ritter Among Hosts For Annual CP Telethon

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Ritter has more than a casual interest in his duties as a host of the national cerebral palsy telethon.

His brother, Tom, is a victim of the disease, which causes brain damage. They are the sons of the late Tex Ritter, a singer and cowboy movie star.

Despite his disability, Tom Ritter is a music publisher, host of a country music show on radio station KCSN and the Southern California chairman of the telethon. He also has a law degree.

"Our Dad wanted both of us to go to law school," said John, "but Tom's the only one who listened."

Tom Ritter will appear on the 21-hour "Weekend With the Stars Telethon" this Saturday and Sunday.

"I'll be interviewing and talking to people with disabilities," Tom said. "You can't cure cerebral palsy because it causes brain damage. But you can alleviate some of the effects and detect and prevent the problems that lead to it. Most cerebral palsy occurs prenatally or at birth. But you can acquire it later in life through a head injury. Some children acquire it through child abuse."

Tom was born with cerebral palsy, although it was not diagnosed until he was 14 months old.

Tom obtained his law degree from Vanderbilt University in Tennessee and now is studying for the California Bar examination. His disease, which causes lack of muscle coordination and speech disturbances, is hardly noticeable. He speaks clearly and walks with only a slight limp.

John Ritter and Henry Winkler will be hosts of the Los Angeles segments of the telethon. Wayne Newton, Florence Henderson and Dennis James will be the hosts in New York.

Gavin MacLeod will preside over segments broadcast live from "The Love Boat" set, with Scott Baio from

Statler's 'My Only Love' Voted Top Country Song

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "My Only Love," a No. 1 hit by The Statler Brothers, was honored at the National Songwriter Awards as the top country music song by fans who also picked "Hello Mary Lou," first popularized by the late Ricky Nelson, as another favorite.

The two songs and the writers who composed them were honored Monday night along with other country music composers at the nationally televised sixth annual awards show at the Tennessee Performing Arts Center.

Statler Brother member Jimmy Fortune, who wrote "My Only Love" for his brother's wedding, won the top award for the second straight year. He won in 1985 for his composition, "Elizabeth."

"My Only Love," which topped on the country music charts last March, also was voted the year's No. 1 traditional ballad in country music.

"My life is truly a fairy-tale come true," said Fortune, 30, a service order writer at a Charlottesville, Va., car dealership when he joined the quartet in 1982.

Fortune said his brother wanted him to write a Lionel Richie-type love song, "but I couldn't do that. It came out to be a pretty good song; they liked it so we recorded it. It turned out to be a pretty good idea."

Country music fans also picked "Hello Mary Lou," a rock 'n' roll hit in 1961 for Nelson, as best traditional upbeat song. The Statlers, who revived the song last year, performed it at the awards show in honor of Nelson, who died Dec. 31 in a Texas plane crash.

"40 Hour Week (For a Living)," recorded by the four-piece band Alabama, won top country-rock song for writers Dave Lusk, Lisa Silver and Don Schlitz. Ms. Silver also won The Rising Star award for achievements as a young songwriter.

"There's No Way," another Alabama hit, was voted top contemporary ballad. The song was written by Lisa Palas, Will Robinson and John Jarrard.

"Mississippi Squirrel Revival," written by Cyrus W. Kalb Jr. and his wife, Carlene, was voted No. 1 comedy-novelty song.

"Baby's Got Her Blue Jeans On," recorded by Mel McDaniel, the newest member of the Grand Ole Opry, won contemporary upbeat song for writer Bob McDill.

Winners were chosen by subscribers to The Music City News, a monthly country music publication in Nashville. Five finalists in each category had been announced in December.

Actress Barbara Eden and "Hee Haw" star Roy Clark were hosts of the two-hour awards broadcast shown live in 25 U.S. markets.

Singer-songwriters Waylon Jennings and Roger Miller were cited for their achievements. Jennings was honored with the first Presidents Award from the Songwriters Guild of America for his help to songwriters. Miller was cited for writing the music for "Big River," an award-winning Broadway musical.

This was the first year the awards were broken down into the six categories. In past years, 10 finalists without regard to music style competed for song of the year.

Movies Blasted

NEW YORK (AP) — Movies such as "Rambo" and "Porky's" are "made by idiots for idiots," says actor Walter Matthau.

When he compares those movies to earlier films, Matthau said, he feels "as though I've been in a time capsule that's suddenly shot back to Earth. When I look around, I don't recognize the terrain anymore."

"Porky II," "Rambo IV," "Mishgass VIII" — pictures made by idiots for idiots," Matthau said in an interview published in February's McCall's magazine. Mishgass is Yiddish for craziness.

But Matthau professed a love for the classics, saying: "I feel so good whenever I hear Shakespeare done well that I don't care if I die in the middle of it."

Matthau is to be host of a 15-week series of Shakespeare plays to be broadcast on public television beginning Jan. 19.

Ruling For Parton

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge has rejected a request for a new trial of a suit that contended entertainer Dolly Parton stole parts of the hit song "9 to 5." U.S. District Judge Terry Hatter on Monday also said he would award attorney's fees to Miss Parton's lawyers when motions were submitted.

Jurors took just 35 minutes in December to return a verdict in favor of Miss Parton, who played guitar and sang for them from the witness stand.

Songwriters Neil and Jan Goldberg filed the copyright infringement suit against the 39-year-old country singer, claiming parts of Miss Parton's "9 to 5," were lifted from their composition called "Money World."

Absolutely Frozen

Are you feeling "absolutely cold" this winter? Physicists remind us that absolute cold — the total absence of heat — has never been attained anywhere in the Universe. Nor will it be! Any refrigeration process becomes less efficient as a substance approaches absolute zero. This is because refrigeration uses molecular motion itself to slow down the molecular motion of freezing particles. Scientists HAVE frozen substances to within .000001 degree of absolute zero.

DO YOU KNOW—What is the temperature for absolute zero on the Fahrenheit scale?

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JAN. 15, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is good for finding ways to make your most cherished longings possible in a successful way. The afternoon brings a considerable amount of confusion.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan how to handle your responsibilities more efficiently in the morning, but later be careful in dealing with bigwigs.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Talk over with a clever partner how best you can gain a greater abundance. After lunch, avoid an argumentative new acquaintance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle your duties efficiently in the morning, but don't argue over a bill after lunch. Be with a long-time associate in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You can go after new goals early and get fine results, but steer clear of a quarrelsome person in the afternoon.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Show some special attention to your mate in the morning, but don't permit a grumpy fellow worker to upset you. Have a romantic evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Reach a meeting of minds with an associate early in the day, but don't be extravagant later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get your surroundings cleaned up in the morning, but do nothing that can irk a family tie. Be clever.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan amusements early in the day, but be sure to drive with care later. Find better ways to express your finest capabilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your attention should be focused on your home in the morning, and in the afternoon do not overspend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact as many partners as you can in the morning, but don't try to force any issues at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Pursue your ambitions in the morning, but later avoid anxieties and be happy. Contact good pals who can be helpful.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be charming in the morning and you can learn just about anything you want. Steer clear of a friend who could limit you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have the ability to make dreams materialize through practicality in early life. Much success can be achieved throughout the lifetime after much hard work, but the later part of life will be full of pleasure and fun. There are philanthropic tendencies in this chart.

Troubles For Turner

ATLANTA (AP) — Turner Broadcasting System Inc. is having trouble completing the acquisition of MGM-UA Entertainment Co. and the companies said they may renegotiate the deal.

The companies said in a statement Monday that their representatives are meeting "with a view to a possible restructuring of the agreement" because of TBS' difficulties in carrying out the current agreement.

Officials of both companies declined to provide details.

The current $1.5 billion merger agreement calls for Ted Turner's Atlanta-based company to offer $25 and a share of new TBS preferred stock for each share in the Hollywood studio.

Store Helps Employees Find Mates

By JIM ABRAMS
 Associated Press Writer
 OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Nichii, one of Japan's largest supermarket chains, has a matchmaking department where its employees can seek a mate. It already has arranged 140 marriages.

"We want to nourish the hearts of our employees," said Harue Nishibata, director of Nichii's 21 Family Club. "That's real social welfare."

Mrs. Nishibata, the widow of Nichii's founder, said the service was inaugurated two years ago to mark the 20th anniversary of Nichii, which with 170 stores nationwide is Japan's fifth largest supermarket chain.

Nichii's women employees were having trouble finding mates, she said, because of a scarcity of eligible men. Of almost 9,000 full-time workers, its 3,400 women average 23 years in age and almost all are single. The 5,600 men are 10 years older on average and generally married.

"Young women are also in a transitional stage," Mrs. Nishigata said. She explained that this was the stage in which families no longer exercise ultimate control over the choice of mates for the offspring but but where many women, and men, still need help in landing a partner.

The 21 Family Club sponsors ski tours, wine parties, boat rides, sports events and seminars, all designed to bring young couples together.

"We want to provide more than just a place to drink and dance," Mrs. Nishibata said in an interview. "We want our young people to get together to talk seriously about life and love."

For those preferring a more direct approach, the club offers the more traditional "o-miai," arranged introductions of young women to marriage-minded men.

The 16 women advisers at 21 Family Club office have extensive files from which to find a type of man who meets the qualifications — from salary and position to looks and hobbies — that a woman is looking for.

If the man agrees, the club sets up a meeting. Then the two parties, to avoid embarrassment, contact the office to say whether the first meeting warrants a second.

Although most young Japanese today prefer to find their own partners, about one-third of all marriages are still the result of "o-miai," where family or friends bring two people together on the basis of similar interests and background.

Mrs. Nishibata said the club arranges 70 to 80 "o-miai" a month among its 2,800 members, made up primarily of young women from Nichii and single men from about 75 companies that do business with the supermarket chain.

The club also recently gave its members a wider choice by tying up with a matchmaking journal that has files on 9,000 unmarried people.

The membership fee is a nominal 5,000 yen ($26) and couples who decide to marry need pay only 30,000 yen ($148) to the supermarket middleman, far less than demanded by ordinary marriage brokers.

Betrothal usually means Nichii will lose a woman employee since many Japanese women still quit their jobs after marriage or pregnancy.

But many women later return as one of Nichii's 9,500 women part-timers, who generally work for less pay.

"We're not in it for the money," Mrs. Nishibata said. "Nichii was created out of a happy merging of several companies and we want to maintain that family spirit," she said.

A Real Hero

ROCKFORD, Mich. (AP) — A 7-year-old victim of Down's syndrome came home from the hospital a hero to his family members, who say the boy's quick action saved his parents from a fire that destroyed their southwest Michigan home.

Raymond Corner Jr. was released Monday from Blodgett Memorial Medical Center in Grand Rapids after treatment for smoke inhalation from Saturday night's fire, said hospital spokeswoman Ann Todd.

His father, Raymond Corner Sr., was in fair condition in the hospital's burn unit, she said.

But family members said it not been for the youngster, his father and his mother, Ann, may not have escaped the farmhouse fire in Kent County's Grattan Township, about seven miles east of Rockford.

"Thank God for my brother," said Edith Dulyea, 25, of Rockford. "They say Down's kids can't do too much, but I'm pretty proud of him. He saved my family, and he can't even talk."

"I know he's smart, but it did kind of shock me that he knew what to do," said another sister, Vernita Corner, 13.

The fire reported about 11:30 p.m. Saturday gutted the two-story farm house, said James Jorgensen, assistant township fire chief. He said Monday that the cause still was being investigated.

After the fire broke out, the boy was roused by the family dog, and he attempted to awaken his mother, said Ms. Dulyea. She said the dog, a terrier named George, perished in the fire.

Teen Shoppers Spent Billions

By NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Bruce Springsteen, fast food, Madonna, videotapes, Prince, MTV and home computers were hot; designer jeans and athletic wear were not, according to a survey of how U.S. teen-agers spent $65 billion last year.

Household items such as groceries and gas accounted for $35 billion of the total as the teen-agers took over shopping duties in many families.

"That's primarily because 50 percent of teen homes have a full-time working mother, and another 20 percent have a part-time working mother," Grady Hauser, vice president of marketing for Teen-Age Research Unlimited of suburban Lake Forest, said Monday.

Fifty-two percent of the nation's teen-age girls, or about 8 million, do the family's weekly grocery shopping, he said.

"The family is still funding the grocery purchases, but teens are doing the buying," Hauser said.

Purchases that the 1,600 teen-agers surveyed bought most often in 1985 were fast food, soft drinks, shampoo, deodorant, toothpaste, clothes, ice cream, bubble gum and movie tickets, Hauser said.

The nation's 29 million teen-agers spent $30 billion of their own money, or $80 per month, on items of their own choosing in 1985.

Hauser, whose company surveys teen-agers nationwide every six months and sells its data to advertising agencies, retailers and others, said he did not have an item-by-item spending breakdown.

He said 48 percent of the nation's teen-agers rented an average of two videotapes per month, for a total nationwide rental of 58 million tapes a month.

That popularity might explain a decline in traditional dating reported by teen-agers, Hauser said, as more teen-agers favor group activities over an evening as a couple.

"They're not stopping socializing. They're inviting groups of friends over for videos," he said.

Home-computer use by teen-agers increased 50 percent in 1985, although only 14.6 percent of teen-age girls surveyed used personal computers at home compared with 30.1 percent of the boys.

Rock music continued to have a huge impact, with teen-agers listening to the radio more than 20 hours per week, and watching MTV, the music television channel.

"It's clear that MTV ... is one of the most effective vehicles at reaching teen-agers," he said. "It reaches 43 percent of all teen-agers weekly."
