Council To Study Changes In Elections

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville City Council, at a workshop meeting Monday, reached a consensus to concentrate for now on a proposal to divide Greenville into four single-seat districts as the basis for future city government elections.

Proposals to change the terms of office for the mayor and Council members were delayed.

The possible adoption of a change in the city's method of election has been designated as one of the major concerns of the current Council.

At this time the Council is proceeding with plans to hold a series of public hearings prior to the adoption of a new election system or decision to retain the current method.

The district representation method of election involves electing a single member from each of the four districts, with two other members being elected at large by all voters in the city.

The election method considered by the Council Monday also incorporated suggestions for a four-year term for the mayor and Council members, as opposed to the current two-year term of office. Also under discussion was the possibility of staggered terms for Council members.

Terry Shank, speaking on behalf of the Pitt-Greenville League of Women Voters, said league members "strongly advocate the district form of election, one supported by the national league position on representative government." On the issue of two- or four-year terms of office, Mrs. Shank said the league supports continuation of the two-year term of office, which "we believe encourages change, allows for quicker replacement of ineffective officials, and greater citizen involvement."

After considerable discussion of separating the proposal into two component issues — district representation and terms of office, Council members agreed to concentrate initially on the district representation portion of the proposal and to consider the issue of terms of office later.

City Attorney Mac McCarley informed the Council that insofar as the Justice Department was concerned, the information to be presented to that agency for review could include or exclude the matter of office terms. He added that whichever decision was made, the important thing was to present a clear, concise information packet to the Justice Department.

Any changes in the city's election process require approval of the U.S. Justice Department under the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Bobby Bowers, an election consultant from Columbia, S.C., will work with the Council in formulating any changes in the method of election.

In the matter of a suggested exchange of property within the city limits between the city and county,

FCX Says Area Changes Will Be 'In Name Only'

The sale of financially troubled FCX Inc. to Southern States Cooperative Inc. won't change the way the Farmville-based FCX functions, FCX officials said today.

"I understand we'll operate in much the same manner, and the change will be in name only," said John Barefoot, manager of the FCX Feed Mill in Farmville. "The local retail outlets are expected to operate primarily the same."

The sale means the demise of the Raleigh-based cooperative, but it keeps alive the cooperative system in North Carolina. J.L. Sales Jr., chairman of the FCX Board, said Monday. He said he was pleased the sale of FCX's assets for about $26 million was made to another farmer-owned cooperative.

"The preservation of a cooperative system in the Carolinas is extremely important to Carolina farmers," Sales said. "The cooperative system gives the member-owners it serves a voice in the business they patronize, and therefore they have some say in what products and services are provided. This is very important because of the diverse farming activities in the Carolinas."

"There won't be all that much difference," said Jim Holloman, manager of Farmville FCX Services. "Since Southern States is a co-op, there will be very little change."

"We will keep the same type of operation, which is very good for the farm economy," Holloman said.

Holloman said the workers in the Farmville FCX are secure in their jobs.

"I can speak only for this location, but we are retaining 100 percent of our retail employees, and the company as a whole plans to retain as many employees as possible," he said.

Southern States, which operates businesses in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Kentucky and West Virginia, said in September it was negotiating to buy FCX's assets.

Southern States' sales revenues for the year ended June 30 were $667 million.

Luther Wright, transportation director for the Richmond, Va.-based Southern States, said he did not know how many of the some 700 FCX employees would be retained, but it would be "a high percentage."

FCX's operating assets include accounts receivable, merchandising inventory and real property. The real property consists of: three feed mills, six fertilizer and blend plants, four seed and farm supply distribution centers, 11 grain facilities and about 60 service merchandising centers.

In November, the company announced that it had reached an agreement in principle to sell its South Carolina assets as part of its reorganization, a transaction that was completed three weeks ago.

Included in the sale to Atlanta-based Gold Kist Inc. was 21 of its 25 FCX's farm-supply stores in South Carolina, plus grain markets, a feed mill and all FCX egg production, poultry and hog operations in North Carolina and

Changes In Pitt Program Delayed

By STUART SAVAGE

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners postponed action on proposed changes to the sedimentation and erosion control ordinance following a public hearing Monday and agreed to give more study to a request from the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center for $15,000 to operate the swimming pool at the center for three months.

Commissioners postponed action on the sedimentation and erosion control ordinance revisions until they can study the changes.

County Engineer Phil Dickerson told the board that the changes, required by the state, designate persons responsible for violations of the ordinance.

Joe Gantz, chairman of the board of the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center, in making a request for operating funds for the pool for the next 90 days, told commissioners that "over the last few years" the ECVC has "been able to maintain the pool" by itself.

Gantz said the pool is used by 300 persons — "mostly retired people" — each month.

The direct cost to operate the pool for one year amounts to $53,500, Gantz said, while total income — from fees charged persons using the pool — is only $19,906, resulting in a direct loss of $33,594. With overhead expenses amounting to $113,235 — including about $60,000 to heat the pool — the total loss amounts to some $146,800 a year.

"Everyone wants to use our pool and nobody wants to pay for it," Gantz said. "As a matter of fact, the center can't afford to pay for it. This kind of loss cannot be sustained."

Gantz suggested that the $15,000 would enable ECVC to continue to operate the pool until spring, and allow the ECVC board time to search for ways to keep the facility open.

Daneel le Roux, ECVC's executive director, said "we do not want to close it down. But we feel like it is unfair to our staff ... to produce the money to keep the pool open." Although the pool provides recreational opportunities that benefit the community, he said, recreation is not a primary mission of the ECVC.

In other business Monday, commissioners scheduled a public hearing on changes in the subdivision or-

DROP PENS

Sunday I took a stray dog to the Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter only to find the facility closed and the drop pens no longer in existence. I brought the dog home and last night she had puppies. I now have 12 dogs I don't want. It appears we have a nice new facility that doesn't offer the service of the old.

The working public needs a humane place to drop unwanted animals that is available to them after normal working hours.

Trucking Officials Say Service Will Continue

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Reporter

The possible demise of McLean Trucking Co., which filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws, shouldn't affect freight service to Greenville and surrounding areas, Pitt County officials said today.

"I haven't seen a sign to indicate any change to the local industrial base," said John Chaffee, director of the Pitt County Development Commission. "There's several local carriers filling the void."

McLean, the nation's fifth largest trucking company, began laying off its truck drivers, mechanics and other employees Jan. 10 as it moved to close down its operations. The shutdown put 9,800 workers in 45 states out of work and idled about 9,000 tractor-trailer rigs, the company said.

The company, in a prepared statement, said it filed for Chapter 11 protection in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Charlotte because of "its inability to obtain further financing under its lending agreement and continuing losses due in part to a seasonal slowdown in business and the worsening discounting of freight rates in the industry."

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Marvin Wooten approved the firm's request for Chapter 11 designation so banks could honor $7.5 million in payroll checks, but an attorney who has represented the company says he believes the company will go out of

Car Bomb Kills 22 In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded today near an office of President Amin Gemayel's Phalange Party in a crowded commercial district of Christian east Beirut, killing at least 22 people and injuring more than 100, police said.

The blast was caused by an estimated 550 pounds of explosives and damaged several buildings, set fire to others, and destroyed more than 30 cars, police said.

Chief Warrant Officer Yussef Bitar said that besides explosives, the car, a Mercedes, was loaded with gasoline tanks and oxygen bottles to turn it into a massive firebomb.

Blood-spattered Red Cross rescuers carried out scores of blackened bodies from the smoldering wreckage of buildings, and other corpses lay in ruined automobiles.

Bitar had earlier put the death toll at 25, but police later changed the figure to at least 22 dead and 102 known wounded.

Rescue officials said bodies were still lying inside the fire-blackened buildings, and that the death toll could rise.

The forces of the blast shortly before noon hurled parked cars into buildings, broke windows in a four-block radius and gouged a 19-foot-deep hole in the street. Rescuers searched the rubble of damaged buildings for casualties as thick black smoke billowed over the district.

Police declined to say if the target was the Phalange office, which was 30 yards from the explosion. The only damage there was shattered windows.

"It was a big, huge explosion," said Badieh Khoury, a shoe shop owner, as he surveyed blood-spattered boxes in his wrecked store. The blast hurled a blue Volkswagen car into his store, seriously wounded three of his employees.

"I escaped because I was in the back room," he told The Associated Press.

Police said they did not know who parked the Mercedes on a corner near a cluster of movie theaters, restaurants, a department store and a gas station.

The car bombing was the first in Beirut this year and followed a week of fighting between Gemayel's supporters and Syrian-backed Christian and Moslem rivals which severely damaged prospects for a recent Syrian-brokered peace plan.

Phalange fighters and other Christians loyal to the 43-year-old Maronite Catholic president crushed a pro-Syrian Christian rival last week and now are facing other leftist Christians and Moslem militias that blame Gemayel for wrecking a Syrian-sponsored plan to end Lebanon's 11-year-old civil war.

The blast occurred as crack Syrian army units were reported to have deployed in the central mountains facing Christian forces loyal to Gemayel.

Electronic University Offers Studies Through Home Computer

By JULIE AMPARANO
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hate getting up at the crack of dawn for that early-morning class? Can't stand the scramble for campus parking? Crowded classrooms getting you down?

Your problems may soon be over. At the Electronic University, it's possible to snag that sheepskin without once setting foot on a college campus. Enroll in TeleLearning Systems' program and a college degree is as close as your home computer.

"It's that easy," said Ronald F. Gordon, founder and president of TeleLearning Systems, an educational telecommunications program that connects a student's personal computer with an instructor.

"It doesn't matter if you live on one side of the continent and the school is on the other end," said Walter Rowen, the university's director of public relations. "As long as you have a computer and a telephone, you're all set."

The courses range from Right Brain Drawing to Information Systems for Management and cost between $45 and $295. The two-year-old Electronic University leads to two associate degrees, two bachelor's degrees and three graduate programs.

"Of course, the Electronic University doesn't issue degrees," Rowen said. "We just hook the student up with the school that'll grant the degree." Presently only two accredited institutions — Thomas A. Edison State College of Trenton, N.J., and City University of Bellevue, Wash. — provide classes for credit on the network.

"One day with the Electronic University, it'll be possible to take a course from leading authorities in various fields," said Gordon, the former chief executive officer of Atari Inc. "Imagine taking an art course from the leading expert at Yale, a computer science class from a wizard at Stanford and public policy from a Harvard professor."

Electronic U., which currently serves about 14,000 students, obviously is not for everyone, Gordon says. For one thing, extracurricular activities are a bit slim. There are no fraternities or sororities, dormitories or football games.

"There's just you and the computer," he said. "But for thousands who for one reason or another can't finish a degree program because of the restraints of attending class on campus, the Electronic University might be the answer."

Gordon says the San Francisco-based educational network primarily caters to the disabled, those living in remote areas and people who are too involved in their career to take time out to go back to school.

To take a course, students must own an IBM, Commodore 64, or Apple II home computer and a modem which allows them to connect to the college instructor's computer. Instructors relay assignments through the computer, where they are placed into an "electronic mailbox," allowing students to retrieve lessons at their convenience.

"One student might like to work early in the morning whereas another might work late into the night," Gordon said. "It offers great flexibility."

Questions on the material are entered into the computer and answered by the instructor within 24 hours. For "live" conversations by computer, instructors can be reached during office hours, Rowen said.

After preparing with TeleLearning courses, students qualify for degrees by passing non-computerized tests prepared by faculty members. All exams are proctored and administered by authorities at a local college or library.

You can't get your black belt in parenting until you are the veteran of a party held in your home by your teen-age children.

This is the ultimate test of restraint and endurance.

Many parents have tried it, but it is some time before they can speak of it or put it in perspective. To begin with, there is no such thing as a "small" party, by invitation only. Kid's parties went public 15 years ago. That means when your child whispers in the ear of someone in the restroom to be at your house Friday at 8, their voice is picked up by a party network and broadcast to every country in the free world.

At 8 p.m. Friday, they will come by cars and buses. A few will fly in and converge upon your house like a thousand camels with sponge tongues and hands that work like scissors going up and down the table of food.

One mother who thought a group of "quiet, reserved, not-too-popular" kids would consider bobbing for apples and eating a few cupcakes as a treat was overwhelmed by 17 uninited guests who turned her living room into a house of horrors. She is still afraid to answer her phone and face the wrath of other mothers who charge, "What kind of parties do you give?"

Another couple returned from a weekend out of town to discover their living room furniture had been rearranged, there were cigarette burns in the carpet dead center under the dining room table, a living room stack table lost a leg every time they lifted it, and a prickly pear cactus was in the middle of the back yard. (They live in Connecticut.)

Something that resembled chicken grease had been spilled on the deck, there was a case of empty beer bottles in their daughter's bedroom, and a month's supply of meat had vanished from the freezer.

It wasn't until a few weeks after the party that a woman who runs a community service office phoned and said they owed her for a phone call made from their house to a Coast Guard cutter off the coast of Kodiak, Alaska, that had been charged to her number.

Their children pleaded innocence. It takes all the understanding and forgiveness a parent can muster to deal with these social disasters. They tell themselves it is all a part of the growing-up process. They tell themselves it is a learning experience that their children will benefit by. They tell themselves they can change their name, move to a new neighborhood, go on the "Newlywed Game" and start all over again.

Some parents even have a sense of humor about it. Like the woman whose daughter's girlfriend called her boyfriend on the Coast Guard cutter in Kodiak, Alaska. "I can laugh at it now," she smiled.

"Does that mean you'll leave them in charge again while you go out of town?"

"Don't press!" she snapped.

Raw, chilled turkey may be kept one or two days in the refrigerator. Frozen, whole turkey will keep its quality in the freezer for a year.

Mother-In-Law Issues Strong Visit Policy

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for two years and have one child. We live on the East Coast. My in-laws, who live on the West Coast, visited us this last Christmas. When she was here, my mother-in-law made it clear that she wants all her children to be with her next Christmas. My in-laws are in their early 50s, in good health and quite well-off financially.

I think her request is outrageous and beyond our means. Although I have a good job, we are heavily in debt: $5,000 for a new car, $7,500 for my university loans, and $5,000 for other debts to begin our new home. I mentioned that it might be too expensive for us to be with them next Christmas, and my mother-in-law put us on notice to start saving now so we could make it!

Her other children are also struggling to make ends meet, but she informed them that they are expected to start saving now!

Abby, is this woman within her rights to make such demands? And am I within my rights to tell her I think she's asking too much?

FURIOUS SON-IN-LAW

DEAR FURIOUS: She is within her "rights" to issue any kind of invitation she wishes. And you are within yours to decline if you feel it's beyond your means. Whether you permit yourself to be manipulated is still your choice.

DEAR ABBY: I am an electrologist. A woman came to me to have the hair on her upper lip removed by electrolysis. I just finished her fifth treatment, and I do not think I can give her another. Abby, this woman has the worst body odor I have ever encountered! I noticed that her hair is always filthy. I don't believe she bathes at all. She smells so bad that it's impossible for me to work on her. Also, the room smells after she leaves.

Her husband drives her to her appointments, and I cannot for the life of me understand how he can live with her and let this go on.

How do dentists, physicians, opticians and other health-care professionals handle a problem like this?

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: You assumed that because the woman's hair is filthy and she smells bad, she doesn't bathe. A reasonable assumption, but it may not be true; she may have a serious medical problem of which she is unaware, so it would be a kindness to recommend that she see her physician about her chronic body odor.

Health-care professionals should (and most do) instruct patients with chronic body odor due to carelessness to bathe and wear clean clothing for their next visit.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Can't Win," who received a telephone call (from Europe) informing her that a mutual relative had died suddenly. She was asked to notify the immediate family who had already left town to attend a family wedding. "Can't Win" did as she was told and was severely criticized for having "spoiled" the wedding. Some relatives thought she should have waited until after the wedding to convey the sad news.

A similar incident happened to me—in reverse. My best friend's father passed away suddenly while I was vacationing in California. His friends and family thought it would be better not to notify me since there was nothing I could do about it, and it probably would ruin my vacation.

Although I appreciated their good intentions, I regret that I was not notified. Whether I would have returned immediately is hard to say, but at least I would have had the opportunity to make that decision.

Filing Assistance

R.B. McLamb, local revenue officer for the N.C. Department of Revenue, said that personnel to assist in filing state income tax returns will be available each Monday through April 15.

Assistance is available between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. at the Greenville office, located at 400 N. Greene St.

McLamb said taxpayers should bring the preaddressed forms which were mailed to them from Raleigh when they visit the office.

Taxpayers filing their own returns should mail those which indicate a refund to the N.C. Department of Revenue, P.O. Box R, Raleigh, 27634. Other completed returns should be mailed to the N.C. Department of Revenue, P.O. Box 25000, Raleigh, 27640.

Award Nominations

Nominations are being sought for the "Citizen of the Year Award" presented by the Ayden council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

A spokesman said citizens of Ayden and chamber members should send a nominee's name, resume and reason for nomination to the Ayden Council, Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 31, Ayden, 28513, before Feb. 10.

Nomination forms may be obtained at the town hall, Planters and Southern banks and the chamber of commerce office.

The award will be presented at the council's annual meeting on Feb. 25.

Nominees should qualify in the areas of civic activities, business involvement, general reputation and contribution to the community.

Past recipients are Pierce Sumrell, J.J. Brown, Ross Persinger and Don Russell.

The board of directors recently adopted a 1986 budget of $14,111.

Shad Theme

A secondary theme dealing with Halley's Comet is being sought for the 1986 Grifton Shad Festival, organization officials say.

Fish is always the primary theme for the celebration but a secondary theme is selected each year. Suggestions should be mailed to Grifton Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, 28530.

Guest Performer

Julie Palmer, visiting artist at Pitt Community College, performed a selection of jazz music at the recent meeting of the Town and Country Senior Citizens. She was accompanied by Jo Lewis.

Dr. Lawrence Brewster will write of history of the club, which will be 25 years old this year, to be read at a party in September.

A Valentine's Day party will be held at The Plaza at 10:30 a.m. on Feb. 14.

An Older Adult Walking Club is being organized by the Plaza, the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department and the East Carolina University Medical School, members will told.

The club's silent auction will be held in April.

Trips planned by the club this year are to Epcot Center, Pennsylvania and New England. Interested persons should contact Sarah J. Ashton at 752-2912.

Motor Repair

A 30-hour outdoor motor repair course will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday in trailer 13 at Pitt Community College.

The class will meet from 7-10 p.m. Thursdays. Registration will be held at the first meeting.

Fishing Contest

The annual Grifton Shad Festival hickory shad fishing contest is officially open, contest chairman George Sugg has announced.

Although the first fish of the season is usually caught in early February, the contest traditionally opens on Jan. 1 and closes the first day of the Shad Festival, which is April 9.

For further information contact Sugg at the Sport Shop in Grifton.

Civitan Guest

Steve Wilson, state regional DWI specialist, gave a slide presentation on "DWI Killers" to the Tar River

Civitan Club Monday night.

The slide show illustrated state statistics through the dramatization of a tragedy. In his discussion, Wilson stressed both the danger and the financial, physical and mental costs of driving while drinking.

Hester Latham, president, explained the coordination of schedules for the club's two biggest fund-raising activities — the Save-A-Babe infant safety seat program and the soft drink sale at ECU Theater productions.

Emerson Spoke

The Optimist Club of Greenville recently heard a talk about the Boys Club of Pitt County by Chet Emerson, Boys Club executive director.

The club meets each Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant. For information, contact Carl Knott, 758-1314.

Ground Breaking

A ground breaking was held this morning launching construction of the administrative office building for the Methodist Home for Children in Raleigh.

Bishop C.P. Minnick Jr., resident bishop of the N.C. Conference of the United Methodist Church, officiated at the service. Also participating were Carolyn Russell of Goldsboro, president of the board of trustees; Dr. Bert Warren of Farmville, past president; Charles Braswell of Raleigh, and the Rev. Jean Hood of Wilson.

Greenville Ranks 10th In Authorized Building

BY DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville placed 10th among 44 selected North Carolina cities for the value of construction authorized in November, according to figures released by the North Carolina Department of Labor.

With a construction value of more than $4 million, Greenville finished slightly behind High Point, with $4.2 million, and well ahead of Asheville, with just under $3.3 million.

In November, for the eighth time in 1985, Raleigh led the 44 reporting cities in value of construction authorized, with $41,438,633, followed by Charlotte, at $32,174,512; Durham, $23,965,856; Greensboro, $13,175,018; Wilmington, $12,756,485; Cary, $10,442,177; and Winston-Salem, $7,813,256. Fayetteville reported more than $6 million, followed by High Point and Greenville.

The North Carolina Department of Labor reported 13 authorized single-family units in Greenville with a value of $999,965. The figures also showed 13 authorized non-residential constructions with a value of $2.5 million and 41 additions or alterations totaling $552,031. There were no multifamily units authorized for Greenville in November.

Greene County had one authorized non-residential construction and two additions for a total of $16,000 in November, the state Department of Labor reported.

The Department of Labor report showed authorized construction for 14 single-family units, three non-residential units and seven additions/alterations for $648,470 in Martin County in November.

The report said $5.1 million of construction was authorized for Pitt County in November. The report said 67 single-family units, 10 multifamily units, 17 non-residential units and 48 additions/alterations were authorized in the county for the month.

Meanwhile, November building activity in the 44 selected North Carolina cities fell 26.2 percent when compared with November 1984. State Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks attributed the decline primarily to a reduction in multifamily units, which had set a record in November 1984 and had been at high levels in recent months.

Brooks said the total of 3,974 units authorized in the cities decreased from 5,385 in November 1984 and 36.9 percent from October's 6,296.

Estimated value of the units at $193.3 million, dropped four percent from the November 1984 total of $185.9 million, and 26.5 percent from $263.1 million in October.

multifamily dwelling units fell 53.6 percent from November 1984, but permits for single-family homes were up 1.9 percent. A 39.2 percent loss was registered in non-residential construction, and additions and alterations were down 2.4 percent.

multifamily units, at 1,165, decreased from 2,512 in November 1984. Value, at $28.7 million, dropped 50.6 percent from $58.1 million. Units decreased 51.7 percent from October's 2,410, with value down 62 percent from $75.5 million.

Single-family permits, at 1,161, rose from 1,139 in November 1984. Value, at $63.6 million, gained 11.7 percent from $57 million. Permits decreased 28.8 percent from October's 1,631, with value down 22.7 percent from $82.4 million.

Compared to November 1984, the average construction cost for a single-family home increased 9.5 percent, to $54,830 from $50,052. The average rose 8.6 percent from $50,511 in October.

For non-residential construction, 396 permits were issued, down from 451 in November 1984. Value, at $68.2 million, increased 54.6 percent from $44.1 million. Permits declined 39.2 percent from October's 651, with value down 2.3 percent from $69.8 million.

ECU Criteria

East Carolina University's trustees have given final approval to criteria that will be used in recommending a new chancellor to replace Dr. John Howell, who will retire on or before June 30, 1987.

Howell announced his retirement last August. The establishment of criterion for his replacement is the first major step in the search for a new chancellor.

ECU board Chairman Ralph Kinsey Jr. of Charlotte says the selection process should be completed so two nominees for the ECU post can be submitted to the president of the University of North Carolina system in January 1987. The UNC president then would submit one name to the Board of Governors for approval.

A final review of the criteria was conducted by the trustees during an executive session last Friday.

Changing Role

Over the past few years we've wondered at the decline in young adults turning to the teaching profession ... fewer feeling a vocational call. The question was re-raised on reading a recent report of school systems in the U.S. importing teachers from abroad.

Education authorities in North Carolina have been warning that if all our teachers approaching retirement age actually did so, the schools would be extremely short-handed because there were not enough replacements standing in the wings. If this is true, why is it true?

An apparent answer was also obvious: the field was no longer attractive.

What made it that way? How could the experience of guiding children through 12 years of learning and watching the growth of comprehension and appreciation of their world become something to avoid rather than enjoyed?

Something has to be said about outside pressures. A good education has become a national goal not only in the interests of creating a better citizenship role but with it improved economic conditions among heretofore deprived segments of the population. There was also aspirations for expanded horizons in the arts and sciences in order to assure a continued major American contribution in those fields.

Those ambitions lent themselves to debate, disagreement and discord; they inspired studies and surveys as well as attempts to change the way things were done in the schools.

Teachers were involved. The news media was also heavily involved, reporting and commenting with fervor. Education is and was everybody's business. Inevitably the darker side of those studies, surveys and disagreements were a frequent focus of attention. Maybe it was overdone, contributing to disaffection for the teacher role.

Educators themselves contributed to the discord and uncertainty, adding to the cloud of doubts over the field. Even so, all of us know that in all fields of endeavour there is a quiet majority who hang in there despite bad days, weeks and months because their chosen vocation is precisely that ... a matter of dedication. It is that way in the teaching ranks, too.

Another contributing factor: many young people who might have opted for teaching saw larger financial rewards in other fields.

Someday it's going to be all sorted out and put back on track, but until then we're going to have to wait and wring our hands.

Cry Foul

Remember the Connecticut challenge of almost a year ago for "first flight" fame? We do; and as the day approaches for "proving" that claim by test-flying a replica of what some boast to have been the first airplane to fly (in 1901). We are already crying foul.

An alleged replica of the alleged aircraft flown by Gustave Whitehead in the Bridgeport, Conn., area will be tested only a few weeks hence. Believers say if the replica flies, so did the original. This is wishful thinking. The Wright Brothers made their place in history by flying. There is no evidence Whitehead preceded the Wrights in going aloft.

The Bridgeport replica will be tested by an experienced ultralight aircraft pilot ... no untested amateur. The replica has an advantage in up-to-date technology applied to a primitive design.

One could not compare, for example, the power of a small engine designed and assembled 85 years ago with the technology of today that would go into duplicating Gustave Whitehead's design.

Bridgeport should go back to kite-flying.

New Standards May Help

WASHINGTON — Grambling State University President Joseph Johnson suggests the National Collegiate Athletic Association's new entrance standards will ultimately lead to a form of academic apartheid.

But the NCAA's reaffirmation last week of its 1983 decision to impose tougher academic requirements may, in fact, help to liberate education from the excessive stranglehold of athletics. And minorities could be big beneficiaries of the change.

At the NCAA convention this month, Johnson echoed widespread complaints — most of them from coaches and administrators of black schools — that the NCAA's new rules, which recognize standardized test scores, would discriminate against blacks in general and those from inner-city schools in particular.

"All of the evidence gathered since 1983 shows that a travesty of justice will be perpetrated on thousands of young men and women" if SAT and ACT results are considered, Johnson said. Such a requirement could only be the product of "misguided, misdirected elitists."

Yet the new rule, which won't go into effect for two years, seems rather mild. To be eligible for NCAA competition, a freshman athlete in fall 1986 will have to have earned either a 2.2 average in a core curriculum of 11 courses or combined 660 on the SAT. By the 1987-88 school year, the range is scheduled to become 2.0 and 700.

One of the problems with the change is that most colleges have so lowered their entrance standards over the years that even a little bit of academic integrity causes a tidal wave of outrage.

Johnson is right to point out that black athletes are more likely to lose with the tougher requirements. Half of all white high school seniors, for example, have taken three or more years of math, compared to 39 percent of black students. The average reading proficiency of a 17-year-old black student is equivalent to that of a 13-year-old white student. Only 20 percent of all black 11th graders, according to the Southern Regional Education Board, read well enough to do college work.

Yet it's symptomatic of the increasingly remedial nature of higher education that college officials have minimized their expectations, academically, of athletes in general. In a trial involving a college professor who was dismissed from her job for denouncing preferential treatment of athletes, the attorney for the defendant, the University of Georgia, conceded that point:

"We may not make a university student out of (an athlete), but if we can teach him to read and write, maybe he can work at the post office rather than as a garbageman when he gets through with his athletic career."

Yet a survey by the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph and News in 1984 found that only 17 percent of the black football players and only 4 percent of the basketball players at the University of Georgia had earned degrees. In a world where so few athletes survive in the pro ranks, does Johnson really believe that lenient academic standards are conducive to long-term economic security?

One of the most dangerous delu-

WASHINGTON — Desmond Tutu, the Anglican bishop of Johannesburg, was in town recently. Peter, Paul and Mary, the folk singers, were here, too. Their purpose was to stir up American public opinion in favor of stiffer sanctions against South Africa. Let me wish them no luck at all.

Economic sanctions simply do not work. As a weapon of international persuasion, they are about as effective as popguns. The United Nations imposed drastic sanctions upon Rhodesia; they failed utterly. We imposed sanctions upon Poland; nothing happened. Our government has forbidden trade with Cuba for the past 25 years; Cuba goes its way. Most recently the president has laid heavy sanctions upon Libya; our noble allies have pooh-poohed the effort.

State business and political leaders are looking at the assets of the three largest public employee pension funds, and suggesting that somewhere between 1 percent and 5 percent of those assets — $100 to $500 million — be earmarked for state-based businesses that need venture capital.

Venture capital is the money that new businesses need to stay solvent while they establish themselves in the market. It is a high risk investment, but one which pays high dividends. One venture capitalist backed Apple Computer Co. with $425,000 and his stock in the company is now worth $100 million. But State Treasurer Harlan Boyles also notes that 24 out of every 25 companies backed with venture capital ends in failure.

So it will be with South Africa. If Bishop Tutu's efforts succeed, and American corporations are forbidden to do business there, the economic vacuum will be swiftly filled. A significant number of blacks who work in American-owned plants will lose their jobs. The example of these non-discriminatory industries will be lost. If there is money to be made in South Africa, someone else will step in to take it.

Formal sanctions will have little effect. Neither will the kind of ritualistic demonstrations we have seen outside the South African Embassy over the past year. These nicely orchestrated events have all the spontaneity of a good Swiss clock. At the appointed hour the celebrities pop out, march to the door and get politely turned away. The police gently arrest those who have signed up for the afternoon's program. All hands are taken downtown to be booked. With a round of handshakes the defendants are released. No one is ever prosecuted; no one is even inconvenienced. This is apartheid chic, the trendy thing to do, but it is inconceivable that ego trips in Washington produce guilt trips in Pretoria.

Violent measures within South Africa offer much worse alternatives. Bishop Tutu morosely speculated on the kind of "naked terrorism" that he sees ahead. "Virtually all school buses in South Africa carry only white children," he said. "They are the softest of targets." He also suggested that the outlawed African National Congress might recruit black servants to poison their white masters. "Here's something we want you to slip into their early morning coffee." The murder of children or the poisoning of white adults would trigger a passionate reaction among all elements of the white community. Many blacks would be as outraged. Moderate white voices would be effectively hushed. Positions would polarize, and South Africa's armed forces would mount bitter and bloody reprisals.

What, then, might be effective in putting an end to the most shameful elements of apartheid? Reform will have to come from within. The best the United States can do is to encourage the voices of moderation, some of them within the Botha government, in the quiet search for a not intolerable political solution. Patience, moral suasion, good example — these tools may be effective in ways not immediately visible. Reforms of great magnitude take time.

Well, say virtuous Americans, time's up! Our patience is exhausted! We want our moral values adopted now! Whay hypocrites we mortals are. Americans as a breed have no sense of history. They have forgotten, or have never learned, our own history of slavery and racial segregation. They are blind to the terrible apartheid we imposed upon our Indian tribes. They overlook the years and years that were required before attitudes changed.

During his visit here, Bishop Tutu was presented with a petition reportedly signed by 1 million Americans demanding freedom for South Africa's blacks. How many of those 1 million signatories, I wonder, reflected for even an instant upon the highly selective nature of their outrage? Are they as concerned about freedom and democracy elsewhere in Africa? Here in Washington the Soviet Embassy is only half a mile away from the South African Embassy. Do Peter, Paul and Mary sing their folk songs there?

The encouraging thing is that reforms are in fact taking place within South Africa. Changes are coming about that would have seemed impossible only a decade ago. More reforms are on the way. There is increasing talk of federation. Let us strive for patience and perspective and let us remember that in this affair we are outsiders. Given our own past and present record of race relations, we are not even attractive outsiders at that.

Putting Up 'Venture' Funds

The state could realize two major benefits from the investment of pension fund assets in venture capital, according to business and political leaders. Such an investment, earmarked only for North Carolina companies, could help spur economic development in the state, especially in poorer areas. If managed wisely, a venture capital fund could also make a tidy profit for the pension funds, thus reducing the amount of tax revenue that would have to be committed to it in the future.

But at this time, the investment of pension funds in this way would be illegal. The General Assembly, following a mandate of the state Constitution, has mandated that designated portions of the pension assets go into specific, well-established investment areas like bank accounts and low-risk stocks.

The legislative study commission is looking at the issue of investing pension funds as venture capital. Boyles reports that the administration of Gov. Jim Martin has also discussed the idea with him.

At N.C. State University's Emerging Issues Forum this month,

Raleigh entrepreneurial consultant Kirsten Nyrop called on the state to put a small portion of the pension assets into North Carolina based venture capital endeavors. Wealthy investors in North Carolina, Ms. Nyrop said, "are not comfortable with high risk, high return venture capital funds."

Later that week, Charlotte venture capitalist Walter Wilkinson told the legislative committee that pension funds were the biggest investors in venture capital funds in America. Of the $18 billion invested in venture capital now, 34 percent — about $6.1 billion — came from pension funds, including some private funds based in North Carolina.

Boyles, who is responsible for the public employee pension funds, says their investment in new North Carolina based businesses offers a "tremendous opportunity" for economic development here. But he suggests that the state start out with non-pension fund money.

He suggests that the state sell its stock in two North Carolina railroads and invest the approximately $125 million that would raise in venture capital funds. After "you have an established program and established track record," the legislature could decide if it wanted to commit pension funds, he said.

Legislators on the study commission said that all the risk in such an investment would be borne by the state because benefits to retirees are prescribed in the statutes. Any losses would have to be covered by the state, they said. Nor would any profits be used to increase benefits.

Strength For Today

Every now and again we run across the type of person whose career is either being progressively ruined, or else has been ruined, by conceit.

Someone has said that conceit is vanity driven from all other objects and forced to appeal to itself for admiration. Especially in the case of young men, it acts as a solvent to the career which may be in the process of building. Once people get the idea that a man thinks more of himself than his abilities justify, friends begin to turn away in great numbers, and those who under ordinary circumstances would cheer, now join the ranks of those who jeer.

A person afflicted with this miserable vice should pull the brake hard every time he feels disposed to talk about himself and to see to it on all occasions that he keeps what he considers his superior qualities a carefully guarded secret.

Doctors' Costs Going Up For Malpractice Insurance

RALEIGH (AP) — Medical malpractice premiums could jump about 30 percent for doctors insured by one of the two major companies covering North Carolina doctors, a company executive says.

Medical Mutual Insurance of North Carolina may boost rates about 12 percent because of its competitor's recent moratorium on insuring new doctors who set up their own practices, said Douglas Phillips, Medical Mutual's executive vice president.

An additional increase may be needed because of more malpractice claims and larger jury awards against doctors, he said.

A spokesman for the competitor, St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., told a legislative commission studying medical malpractice issues last week that it had declared a nationwide moratorium on new malpractice business effective Jan.

1. Doctors not already covered by St. Paul and with new practices set up in North Carolina apparently will be forced to go to Medical Mutual for coverage.

Phillips estimated that 100 to 200 more North Carolina doctors would turn to Medical Mutual for malpractice coverage in 1986 because of St. Paul's moratorium.

"It's going to tax our capacity," he said Monday.

St. Paul, the nation's largest provider of medical malpractice insurance, covered about 4,500 doctors in North Carolina last year. Medical Mutual, a North Carolina doctor-owned company, covers about 3,900 doctors in the state. One other company, Pacific Employers Insurance Co., offers coverage to doctors in internal medicine.

Medical Mutual could not cover more doctors without increasing its reserve funds, which are required by state law for covering potential losses, Phillips said. To increase reserve funds, the company could raise premiums or insist that more doctors invest in the company, he said.

This weekend the company's board of directors will meet to consider both possibilities. About half the doctors covered by Medical Mutual have participated in the investment program, Phillips said.

"We're going to have to take a long, hard look at that," he said.

Last year, Medical Mutual's yearly malpractice premiums for a standard $1 million in coverage ranged from $1,800 for a family practitioner to $18,595 for a neurosurgeon, he said.

At St. Paul, premiums in the state ranged from $1,733 for a family practitioner to $17,928 for a neurosurgeon.

Insurance companies have blamed the premium increases on a growing number of malpractice lawsuits and larger jury awards against doctors. But some lawyers have argued that insurance companies are charging higher premiums than necessary.

About one in 25 physicians were sued for medical malpractice in the state in 1984, according to a report released last week by the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers.

State Courts To Slow Hiring

RALEIGH (AP) — Vacancies in the state's judicial branch will not be filled for 30 days, if at all, under a hiring slowdown ordered by North Carolina Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph Branch.

Drafted by the Administrative Office of the Courts, the slowdown policy that took effect Monday is similar to the executive order given by Gov. Jim Martin on Jan. 8.

"We may have taken it a little farther," said Franklin Freeman, director of the Administrative Office of the Courts.

Both orders are viewed as first steps toward dealing with the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act, which is designed to balance the federal budget by 1991. If Congress does not meet a budget reduction schedule, automatic cuts in defense and domestic spending will be made.

The cuts could mean a loss of more than $300 million in federal funds in North Carolina in the next two years.

Freeman and Ivan Hill, personnel administrator in the administrative office, will review any requests to waive the 30-day waiting period and will determine if vacancies will be filled. Freeman said he would examine whether all filled positions are needed.

"All vacancies will be carefully scrutinized to determine if a reduction in the workforce is feasible," Freeman wrote in a memo to judicial branch employees. Savings will be used to help offset federal funding reductions, the memo said.

The hiring slowdown would affect about 2,200 of the 3,700 judicial branch workers, he said. Those not affected include judges and most clerks of courts and magistrates. Also affected are appellate defenders, public defenders, research assistants, district attorneys and administrative assistants to district attorneys.

The hiring slowdown will affect juvenile probation officers, most positions in the Administrative Office of the Courts and most support personnel for judges and public defenders, including secretaries, Freeman said.

He said he did not know how much money the state would save by slowing hiring in the judicial branch. Only about 10 positions were vacant Monday that would be affected by the order.

"If in fact Gramm-Rudman-Hollings has the effect on the state budget that is anticipated, then certainly we need to be in a position like everybody else to deal with it in as efficient manner as possible," Freeman said.

Tim Pittman, Martin's press secretary, said the governor was pleased with Branch's order. He also said Martin had no objection to allowing Freeman to determine which positions should be filled.

Wake Man Charged

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — A Wake County man has been charged in the slayings of two Raleigh sisters — one of them the mother of his children — who disappeared two years apart and were found buried this month in Hoke County, officials say.

Edward Cummings, 44, of Willow Springs, was arrested Monday afternoon at his home. He is charged with murder in the deaths of Teresa Puryear, 15, who had been missing since 1983, and Karen Puryear, 22, who had been missing since November, said SBI district supervisor Ray Davis of Fayetteville.

CAP Conducting Search

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) — Civil Air Patrol squadrons from North Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia were expected to resume their search today for a plane that disappeared Friday on a non-stop flight from Ohio to Atlanta.

Maj. Charlie Bustle, mission coordinator, said the North Carolina units of the Civil Air Patrol were concentrating their search from Asheville to Murphy for a twin-engine Cessna 337 Skymaster.

Bustle said the names of the five people on board the aircraft have not been released, and the pilot did not file a flight plan.

Name Change For Centers

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina may soon have three aquariums on its coast — thanks to a name change.

State officials are considering renaming the three N.C. Marine Resources Centers and calling them aquariums, said C. Neal Conoley, director of the N.C. Office of Marine Affairs. Although the centers attracted more than 1 million visitors last year, state officials don't think their names have much pizzazz.

The centers are at Roanoke Island near Manteo, Bogue Banks at Pine Knolls Shores and Fort Fisher near Kure Beach. The centers, which opened in 1976, contain about 200 species of fish on display.

Senior Indicted By Jury

DURHAM (AP) — Northern Durham High School senior David M. Mancuso was indicted Monday by a Durham County grand jury on a charge of first-degree murder in the shooting death of a classmate.

Mancuso, 17, was arrested Jan. 10 and charged with the murder of Durham cheerleader Norma J. Russell, 17, who was shot several times in the chest Jan. 9 as she sat in her car in the school parking lot.

Witnesses told officials they saw the two talking moments before the shooting. Friends said Mancuso was distraught because Miss Russell had spurned his attempts to date her.

Argument Ends In Shooting

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A 42-year-old man has been charged with felonious assault after he allegedly shot his brother-in-law during an argument over who was the tougher, authorities said.

Gilbert Mack Shook of Fayetteville was released on $1,400 bond after being charged Sunday with shooting David Earl Davis, 44, of Fayetteville in the lower abdomen, a spokesman for the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department said.

Davis was in stable condition Monday at Cape Fear Valley Medical Center, hospital officials said.

Inmate Hangs Himself

BURLINGTON (AP) — A 40-year-old Burlington man who was found dead in the Alamance County Jail tied two socks together and hanged himself, according to authorities.

James Wayne Parker was found on the floor of his cell Sunday, a spokesman for the Alamance County Sheriff's Department said. The spokesman said a pair of socks had knotted together to form a noose that was hanging from a window. Officials said a suicide note was also found in the cell, but the contents of the note weren't disclosed.

Parker was convicted Friday on several charges, including assault on a law enforcement officer with a firearm, incest and taking indecent liberties with a minor. He was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

PTL Slashes Work Force In Cutback

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The PTL television ministry has confirmed that it has laid off 25 percent of its work force to cut costs.

PTL released a statement on Monday saying it has cut its work force by 25 percent. More than 2,500 employees have worked at PTL during the past year.

The PTL statement did not reveal specific numbers or say over what length of time the layoffs have occurred. A fourth of 2,500 employees is 625.

On a PTL broadcast last week, Tammy Bakker, wife of PTL President Jim Bakker, tearfully told viewers of recent layoffs.

"We're having to let many, many, many of our staff members, that we really love, go because of financial problems," she said, "and due to the fact that we've got to pare this ministry down."

"We are even having a hard time meeting the payroll right now," Mrs. Bakker said.

She said many people had pledged money during PTL's two-week telethon in the fall but failed to make their promised contributions.

"If everything had come in that was promised, we wouldn't be having that problem today," Mrs. Bakker said.

She also spoke of the climbing costs to PTL of running its 2,300-acre Heritage USA complex north of Fort Mill.

In the past 13 months, PTL has opened a 500-room hotel, neared completion of a 5-acre water park and begun building a 500-room hotel addition. It also has financed operations including 24-hour TV programming, a home for single mothers, campgrounds and a popular Christmas lights display.

"When we get this ministry down to a roar, a dull roar, and get the right amount of people here, and get everything, it will work the best it's ever worked," Mrs. Bakker said.

PTL President Bakker has been absent recently from the TV program he shares with his wife. His wife told viewers Bakker is working from 4 a.m. to midnight on the ministry's budget.

In its statement Monday, PTL said the ministry received record income during 1985 — and had record expenses and capital expansion. It expects another record year in 1986, the statement said.

PTL executives have said the ministry took in more than $100 million in its 1984-85 budget year.

PTL depends heavily on tax-deductible contributions from people watching the "Jim and Tammy show" nationwide.

"The ministry is currently completing a very lengthy self-study and budget process to keep it within its income levels for 1986," the PTL statement said.

"It was determined that the ministry would be well-served and be able to function successfully with a staff that was 25 percent smaller. That has been accomplished."

Annual Cost At Public Colleges Up 7 Percent

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharp increases in tuition at the nation's four-year public colleges and universities helped boost annual total expenses for tuition, room and board to an average of $3,621 for home-state students and $5,553 for non-residents, a new survey shows.

This year's average bill of $4,587 for all students is 7 percent higher than in 1984-85, but it still is only about half of what the typical private college charges.

The figures come from a report released Monday by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities and the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Tuition alone jumped by 8 percent to $1,278 for students attending college in their home states and by 11 percent to $3,210 for out-of-state students.

Room and board cost $2,343 at the typical public campus this year, up 5 percent, or $101, over last year.

Texas, for years the home of the nation's least expensive public universities, posted the steepest percentage increases. The Lone Star state raised tuition and fees for residents 57 percent from $446 a year to $701, while out-of-state students saw their bills soar 162 percent from $1,437 to $3,764.

The Texas legislature boosted the cost of higher education in the wake of a budget crunch brought about largely by depressed oil and gas prices.

Louisiana, another state hit by falling energy prices, had the second highest increase in tuition and fees, 27 percent for residents and non-residents alike. That boosted tuition and fees to $1,071 for home-state students and to $2,134 for non-residents.

A year at one of the nation's most prestigious private colleges can cost $15,000 or more. That has triggered a flood of applications in recent years at many prestigious public universities. Several guide books have hit the market recently touting what one author calls "The Public Ivys."

One campus that bucked the national trends was the University of Oklahoma's Health Science Center, where tuition and fees for undergraduates were lowered from $1,338 to $857 for residents, and from $3,624 to $2,719 for out-of-state students.

Hawaii, Nevada, the District of Columbia and Guam did not raise tuition or fees for 1985-86. Delaware, Montana and Washington recorded 20 percent increases. Alaska raised its charges by more than 15 percent. Nebraska posted a 14 percent increase and Tennessee 13 percent.

Five states boosted the charges by 11 percent: Georgia, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri and New Jersey. Virginia and North Dakota also had increases of 10 percent or more.

Twenty states raised tuition and fees by 5 percent to 9.9 percent: Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

A dozen states raised their charges by less than 5 percent: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Idaho, Maine, Michigan, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon and Wyoming.

The price differential for home state students and outsiders also exists at the graduate school level. The public universities charged residents an average of $1,427 tuition and fees, while non-residents are paying $3,199.

Law school tuition and fees rose by an average of 12 percent to $2,063 for residents and $4,722 for non-residents. Most other professional schools raised their charges by 7 percent.

Medical schools now charge home-state students an average $4,444, while outsiders pay $9,360; veterinary schools charge $3,264 and $7,280; and dental schools $4,583 and $9,002.

Consumer prices rose less than 4 percent in 1984. The college associations contend their campuses have had to raise tuition faster than the general rate of inflation to boost faculty salaries, raise student aid, buy computers and other new equipment and establish new academic programs.

Laborer Hits Big Jackpot

NEW YORK (AP) — Pasquale "Pat" Consalvo wants to keep on working after winning New York's Lotto game, but heaven only knows what a construction worker who is worth $30 million carries in his lunch pail.

"I enjoy working," said Consalvo, 59, after it was announced that he had won the second-largest individual lottery jackpot in North American history.

For 25 years, Consalvo has worked as a mason and laborer on renovations and alterations. He is a member of Local 23 of the construction workers union, and makes about $800 a week; to make sure that he did not report for work Monday, relatives and friends ripped up his work clothes.

So instead, he went to a news conference, where he complained that he had not slept since learning of his good fortune Saturday night. For two nights and two days, the Consalvos celebrated with noise, champagne and Chinese food.

The father of three and grandfather of three said his immediate plans were to "go home and lay on my couch." Otherwise, he said, he would spend his winnings on his family, perhaps buying a new car to replace his '84 Oldsmobile or buying jewelry or a fur for his wife, Angelina.

"I'm too shocked for words," said Angelina. "All I want is for my children to enjoy it, and for them to have good health."

After taxes are withheld, the Consalvos will receive 21 payments of at least $1,142,857 each, spread over the next 20 years.

That jackpot had grown since Dec. 28, the first of six drawings which passed without anyone selecting all six numbers in the twice-weekly lottery.

The previous record jackpot in New York, $41 million, was set last August. That windfall was shared by the holders of three winning tickets, including 21 Mount Vernon factory workers who split one ticket.

The largest payout to one person in North America remains $40 million to Michael Wittkowski of Chicago, who won the Illinois lottery in September 1984. Wittkowski shared the money with his father, brother and sister.

The Consalvos bought four tickets for Saturday's drawing. As is the family custom, the tickets were purchased by their 25-year-old niece, Neila Nuzzi, at Paul's Sweet Shop near the three-story home where the Consalvos have lived for the past 16 years.

Ms. Nuzzi was chosen because it is believed she has an "in." She is a faithful churchgoer.

If this service is not available, I and others will continue to be the recipient of unwanted guests by the dozen. Why can't the county construct new drop pens? T.B.

There are no plans to construct drop pens, Brenda Tripp, animal control officer said, because it is the animal shelter staff's contention that this is not best for the animals. "We need information on the animals we take in and we don't think it's best for any of them to be left outside in pens long hours without food or attention," she said.

She said the shelter is open from 1 to 5 p.m. each weekday and from 9 a.m. to noon each Saturday. In addition, she said, both the city and the county pick up animals when called. For pickup within the city, call the shelter, 355-2817; for pickup anywhere in the county outside Greenville, the Pitt County Health Department Rabies Control Section, 752-4141.

She said she believes that one reason many people liked the drop pens at the old shelters was that they could leave animals anonymously. She said the staff does not have negative judgments about people who bring in animals. "We see this as the responsible thing to do whenever an animal is unwanted and cannot be assured of having the proper inoculations, spaying, neutering, etc. You are assured that the animal will then be placed in what we believe is a good situation or cared for well at the shelter and destroyed painlessly after a reasonable time," she said.

Especially when there is reason to believe that an animal found by one person belongs to someone else, it is helpful to have all the information possible in order to locate the owner, Ms. Tripp said.

Airlines Luring Military Pilots

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite generally rosy recruiting and retention rates for the all-volunteer military, the Navy and Air Force are continuing to face a drain of manpower in one key area: pilots.

Newly tabulated figures covering the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30 show the pilot retention rates of both services declined for the second consecutive year, with the Air Force rate dipping to its lowest level in four years.

Both services blame the drain on stepped-up hiring by civilian airlines. They complain that they have been targeted by commercial aviation as a ready-made source of highly trained fliers.

However, all four services — the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines — managed to meet or exceed their recruiting goals in fiscal 1985, maintaining an active-duty strength of roughly 2.1 million personnel.

The continuing exodus of pilots had been predicted last year by Adm. James D. Watkins, the chief of naval operations, and Gen. Charles A. Gabriel, the Air Force's chief of staff, during budget hearings before Congress.

They cited congressional attacks on the military retirement system, a strong economy and the expansion plans of airlines, which are now largely unchecked by federal regulation.

"Those predictions have been borne out," one Pentagon official who asked not to be named said Monday.

"Both services took another hit in fiscal 1985, although the dip for the Air Force was larger than initially anticipated," the official said. "When you remember how much it costs the taxpayer to train these pilots, it's a matter of serious concern."

Both the Navy and Air Force say it takes roughly 18 months and more than $1 million to train each pilot.

According to the Future Aviation Professionals of America, a trade group based in Atlanta, the major airlines hired 4,544 pilots in 1985, a dramatic increase over the 1,368 hired in 1984. Although precise figures are not available, a survey by FAPA in 1984 found roughly half of the pilots hired had previous military aviation experience.

The latest pilot retention figures were compiled by the two services over the past month. The two services compute their rates in different manners, but both indexes showed a decline in fiscal 1985.

Bennett Challenges Soviets To Use American Teachers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett today appealed to the Soviet Union to "raise the iron curtain" and allow American intellectuals, including Bennett himself, to teach in Soviet classrooms and appear on Soviet television.

Bennett said he would welcome a visit in return by the Soviet Deputy Minister of Education, Marina I. Juravleva, to "teach classes on the Soviet system."

He proposed the exchange in a speech prepared for delivery today to the Chamber of Commerce in Kansas City, Mo. A copy of the speech was obtained Monday.

The tough-talking education chief recalled Winston Churchill's famous 1946 speech in Fulton, Mo., in which the British wartime leader declared, "From Stettin in the Baltic to Trieste in the Adriatic, an iron curtain has descended across the Continent" of Europe, and warned the Western democracies to stand firm against the spread of communism.

Bennett said the preliminary findings of a new study of American youths found that half of those tested "could not even identify Winston Churchill. Nor could half of them identify Joseph Stalin," the Soviet dictator.

"For that matter, I am sorry to report that nearly one-third of our 17-year-olds could not say which two nations were our principal enemies in World War II. Indeed, nearly one-third were unable to find Great Britain, West Germany or France on the map," Bennett said.

His examples came from a survey of high school juniors by the federally backed National Assessment of Educational Progress.

Un-fare

Together, the Piedmont Commuter System and Piedmont Airlines have low fares that are tough to beat, everywhere we fly. Below, we've listed just a few.

But, what really makes things unfare is that you can fly for these low prices, and still receive the kind of service that other airlines look up to. In fact, a recent independent survey appearing in USA Today reports that frequent travelers rate Piedmont Airlines' service the best in America.

So, next time ask your travel agent to book the Piedmont Commuter System. Or call toll-free, 1-800-438-7833.

TOASTING REUNION — Edith Luthi, 31, left, of Holliston, Mass., with her husband, Michael Iossel, 30, and Sandra Gubin, 38, of Kalamazoo, Mich., with her husband, Alexei Lodsev, 33, toast their reunions in Newark, N.J., on Monday. Both husbands are from Soviet Union and until now were not allowed to join their wives in the United States. (AP Laserphoto)

American Wives Reunited With Soviet Husbands

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The reunions of three Soviet men with their American wives after years of Kremlin-imposed separation could be "part of a huge step to real friendship between Russia and America," one of the husbands said.

Two of the Soviets joyously joined their spouses Monday night at Newark International Airport after arriving on the same flight with the third couple, who reunited a day earlier in West Germany.

The three couples are among the 10 the Kremlin promised before the Geneva summit to allow to reunite in the West.

Robin Rubendunst, 25, of Brookline, Mass., hadn't seen her 38-year-old husband, Leonid Ablavsky of Leningrad, since they were married in 1983. She embraced him at the airport and they disappeared without talking to reporters. Sandra Gubin, 38, of Kalamazoo, Mich., gave spouse Alexei Lodisev, 33, a red rose as they hugged. Lodisev, who last saw his wife when she visited the Soviet Union on a tourist visa in September, would not stop kissing her.

"This is the most important day of my life," he said. "My heart goes out to those couples who still are kept apart. No one knows better how very painful their lives are and no one wishes more than I that someday they will be as fortunate as I and be reunited with their wives."

"I'm just feeling terrifically relieved," Ms. Gubin said from within her husband's embrace. "Everybody should have this moment. This is the best moment of my life."

"Today is the birthday of our family," a tearful Edith Luthi, 31, of Holliston, Mass., told reporters.

Her meeting in Frankfurt, West Germany, on Sunday with husband, Mikhail Iossel, 38, of Leningrad, was their first in more than three years. Iossel had never seen his 2½-year-old son, Gregory, and was to meet him today at their home outside Boston.

"Let's try to hope that this small moment, in itself insignificant, is part of a huge step to real friendship between Russia and America," Iossel said.

Ms. Luthi and Iossel and Ms. Gubin and Lodisev toasted their new lives together with champagne.

"I just want to say that this long separation can be forgiven, that finally being together does a lot to dissolve the bitterness that I have been feeling over the last two years," said Ms. Luthi, who met Iossel while studying Russian in Leningrad.

Ms. Gubin, who had fought for 4½ years to be with her husband, said before the reunion that there are at least 20 other Soviet-American couples kept apart by the Kremlin.

"I'm hoping that over the next couple weeks people will be called in and the Soviets will gradually move on the other cases," she said.

Ms. Gubin, a social scientist, was a Fulbright scholar at Kiev University when she met her husband in Kiev in 1980.

After leaving the Soviet Union in 1981 when her visa expired, Ms. Gubin formed the Divided Spouses Coalition, which has flooded U.S. and Soviet officials with pleas to allow divided Soviet-American couples a life together.

She returned to the Soviet Union twice on a tourist visa.

Ms. Rubendunst, a voice student at the New England Conservatory of Music, said before her husband arrived that she met him in a Leningrad art museum in 1983 while on a two-week tour of the Soviet Union. They fell in love and married three months later.

All three men were trained as computer programmers, but Iossel, who writes, said "I just changed from a technical background to a totally humanitarian one."

National Guardsmen Patrol Strike-Bound Hormel Plant

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Dozens of National Guardsmen, riot clubs in hand, stood shoulder-to-shoulder facing angry, jeering strikers outside Geo. A. Hormel & Co.'s flagship plant today, and company officials told workers to stay home until the area is safe.

The plant's manager said the workers would be brought in as soon as guardsmen were able to secure the area.

Gov. Rudy Perpich activated about 600 Guardsmen on Monday after local officials requested help in controlling the strikers.

Union members and their supporters had blocked plant gates with their cars and pickup trucks Monday and yelled "scab" at people entering the $100 million meatpacking plant, which reopened Jan. 13. Police Chief Donald Hoffman said a pickup truck leaving the plant was struck by a bullet Monday, and a Hormel photographer was kicked.

A union leader called the potential for violence a company "fantasy," but the mayor — a striker — said "our concern is for the public safety."

The mood among hundreds of strikers and their supporters gathered early today was angry as they came face-to-face with Guardsmen, taunting, jeering and mimicking the Guard members in fatigues and helmets.

Hoffman met with his officers after the blockade began and "they told me it was lost. It was such a potentially dangerous thing that we needed the governor."

"We're talking about a non-violent struggle, and there's been no violence," said Jim Guyette, president of Local P-9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers, whose 1,500 members have been on strike for five months despite opposition from the parent union, which has agreed to concessions at other Hormel plants.

Asking the governor to activate the Guard "was not a very easy decision, but I guess our concern is for the public safety of this community," said Mayor Tom Kough, a 31-year P-9 member. "I'm sure there are a lot of P-9 members who didn't appreciate that decision, but I think I made the decision as the executive officer of this city, and it's in the best interest of the city to do so."

About 100 meatpackers who had gathered outside the plant's main gate since early Monday ended their blockade shortly after Perpich's announcement. Supervisors and workers inside were then able to leave. However, union members said calling out the Guard was unnecessary and had only served to solidify the resolve of the striking workers.

"I think any time you bring in something like this here and start a situation like the governor has, it unites the workers," said Larry Gullickson, a 19-year P-9 member. "This is where labor should stick together. These are our jobs here and we're not going to let some stupe from outside come in here and take them from us."

Hormel was pleased with Perpich's decision, said plant manager Deryl Arnold. Before the governor acted, he said, there had been "a complete loss of law and order" at the plant.

"The police are powerless to control mob violence, mass picketing, wanton destruction of property, and mob psychology has taken over," he said.

Guyette called those statements "nothing but a fantasy contrived to break the strike."

He said the Austin-based company "has been trying to precipitate some violent outburst by the strikers" to discredit the union, and that "if the governor wants to use the National Guard, I would recommend that he employ it to protect workers from this arrogant, greedy and immoral company."

The blockade occurred on the day replacement workers began working, Arnold said. He refused to say how many had been hired, but said they were chosen from among 3,000 applications.

Thousands Sign Hostages' Ribbon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The families of six American hostages in Lebanon have a present for President Reagan: a 900-foot yellow cloth ribbon signed by more than 7,200 people.

The families hope to present their gift to top Reagan administration officials as a way of keeping attention focused on the plight of the missing Americans.

"We would like to wrap it (the ribbon) around the White House but we know it won't fit," said Tom Anderson, 41, a New York City policeman from Valley Stream, N.Y. He is the cousin of hostage Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

"We want to keep the hostage situation in everyone's mind," he said Monday. "It's easy to forget there are people suffering over there."

Tom Anderson said the Anderson family feels a special urgency because Terry Anderson's father, Glenn, is gravely ill in a Batavia, N.Y., hospital. Terry Anderson was abducted from the streets of Beirut 10 months ago.

During a three-day visit, the families also will go to Capitol Hill and contact the embassies of several Arab nations. They saw Lebanese officials Monday.

The enormous ribbon, composed of 3-foot sections sewn together, urges Reagan to work for the "safe and immediate release" of the six Americans.

Those who have signed it include Americans from all over the country, as well as Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Rep. Raymond McGrath, R-N.Y.

The ribbon was the idea of Heather Lacayo, 16, another Anderson cousin from Santa Rosa, Calif., who started the project last November and convinced Anderson relatives to help collect signatures on cloth.

Heather's grandmother, Irma Stewart, sewed them together.

Heckler Preparing For New Position

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Newly appointed Ambassador to Ireland Margaret Heckler says she is finally comfortable with her promotion out of the Reagan cabinet, but that her political career is not over.

Mrs. Heckler, the former secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, returned to her hometown Monday for a round of get-togethers with old friends in anticipation of her departure Sunday for her new duties abroad.

In June, following a difficult divorce proceeding, she sold her 19th-century home in Wellesley, the wealthy Boston suburb that was her political base for eight terms in Congress.

She said she would retain her voting address in the town. "As for the future, it is very difficult to predict, but I do not consider this the finale for my career," Mrs. Heckler, 53, said at a news conference.

Mrs. Heckler was forced to step down from her cabinet post Oct. 1 following criticism that she didn't manage the sprawling agency properly. Conservatives also claimed that her positions on abortion and funding for AIDS research were too permissive.

President Reagan insisted that she was not forced to resign, but instead was given a promotion.

Mrs. Heckler, the ninth woman ever to hold a U.S. cabinet post, said she now agrees with Reagan that being ambassador to Ireland is a challenge.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed some strength as trading got under way today, but the blue chips lost ground and the stock market turned mixed.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 0.69 at 1,528.44 at 10:30 a.m. on Wall Street.

Advancing issues held a dwindling lead over decliners on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE composite index rose 0.28 to 120.14.

Tandy led the volume leaders in the early going, down 1/4 at 39 3/8. Trading in Tandy stock included some large blocks.

International Harvester, which recently announced plans to change its name to Navistar International, was another heavily traded stock, down 5/8 to 9 1/8.

International Business Machines, down 1 1/2 Monday, rebounded 1/4 to 149 1/2. IBM unveiled a new computer line of workstations today.

Arrested

Greenville police have arrested Kalvin Jerome Dixon, 26, of 1100A VanDyke St. on charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill in connection with a 9:33 p.m. incident at his home Sunday.

Detective John Nichols said Van Paige of 1601 S. Greene St. was shot four times with a .22 caliber pistol following an argument at the VanDyke address.

Paige, struck in the face, hand and abdomen, locked himself in a bedroom, then crawled out a window and went to a nearby home to call police, Nichols said. Paige was admitted to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of the wounds.

Nichols said Dixon surrendered to officers shortly after the shooting.

Council ...

The Council delayed action until after a meeting with members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners scheduled for Wednesday night.

The property under review is a tract of land owned by the city on West 14th Street across the street from Blount Fertilizers and alongside the railroad tracks. The county wants to lease the land for 30 years. A Farmer's Market is planned for the site. County officials say they do not wish to commit funds to purchase the property until it is known whether the market will be successful.

The county, through the Board of Education, owns the second piece of property involved, the building and land of the former City Schools Administrative Office Building on West Fifth Street adjacent to the site of the proposed new Headquarters Fire Station.

City Manager Gail Meeks has proposed that the city make an offer to the county to exchange the Farmer's Market property for the former city school property. She believes the West Fifth Street property will have a higher appraisal value, and notes this would involve the city's paying the difference in possibly higher appraised land value to the county. She said money is available in the capital reserve fund.

The Council also continued without action a proposed ordinance to revise regulations applicable to withdrawal of rezoning petitions. The changes proposed by the Planning and Zoning Commission would require a 72-hour notice instead of the current 48 hours in a request to withdraw a petition; and would extend from six months to one year the period in which a

"The consensus (of McLean officers) is that with deregulation of the American trucking industry, it would be a futile attempt to reorganize the company."

However, local officials say the loss of the firm will only lead to altered service, not inferior service.

"Service has shifted, but it is not a problem," said Chaffee. "It has just been redistributed among other carriers, and it hasn't left anyone in a lurch."

Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, doesn't foresee any difficulties either.

"We have 23 truck lines serving the area," Walker said. "Being such a productive community, we're fortunate to have a large major and private service area."

"With all those lines to choose from, companies are left in a good position," he said. "Of course, we hate to lose any company, but the others should be able to provide adequate trucking service."

South Carolina.

"FCX recently sold certain operating assets in South Carolina to Gold Kist, Inc. The decision to sell the operating assets in both states to farm supply cooperatives was made because we felt that these assets should remain under cooperative management, as they have been for over 50 years," said Sales, reading Monday from a prepared statement at a news conference at FCX's office in Raleigh.

FCX filed for reorganization with U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Raleigh under Chapter 11 last September to "protect the assets" of the farmer cooperative that serves 35,000 growers in North Carolina and South Carolina.

The decision stemmed in part from problems with the Columbia (S.C.) Bank for Cooperatives that forced FCX to stop issuing checks for grain purchases or its payroll. FCX officials said in September that the bank had changed the terms of its loan with the company.

The sale announced Monday is subject to the approval of U.S. Bankruptcy Court in the North Carolina Eastern District.

FCX officials said after the sale is approved and by March 1986, the liquidation plan will be submitted to the dinance — reducing the minimum size lot with provisional soil (as to drainage only) in areas served by public water systems from the present 25,000 square feet to 20,000 square feet — for March 3.

The board also approved a grant application for $25,000 in state funds to begin a screening program by the Department of Social Services of aged and disabled persons in an effort to establish a plan to keep those who might otherwise go into a nursing home in their own home.

Commissioners, during lunch, met with representatives of the state's Division of Emergency Management for an overview of emergency management at the state level. State Director Joe Myres and Assistant Director Vance Key conducted the briefing.

Commissioners have scheduled a meeting with members of the Greenville City Council for 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Greenville Golf and Country club. The board also scheduled a public hearing on the closing of Secondary Road 1240 near Fountain at the Fountain Town Hall for 7 p.m. Feb. 11.

court for approval and submission to creditors.

FCX will retain its nonoperating revenues under the agreement. "The decision to sell FCX's operating assets in North Carolina to Southern States was made by the FCX Central Board of Directors because the board felt such a sale was in the best interests of farmers of North Carolina," Sales said.

FCX lost $8.3 million between 1982 and 1984 and officials say they also have had trouble collecting its loans to farmers.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1984, FCX reported sales of $291 million and losses of $7.5 million. The previous year the co-op had lost $734,000 on sales of $269 million.

FCX operated about 100 farm supply retail centers in North Carolina and South Carolina and extended credit to farmers for their purchases. The cooperative also buys grain from farmers.

Thefts Reported

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of nine thefts reported to the department Monday.

Officer W.S. Heath said the T-tops were taken from a car at East Carolina Lincoln Mercury at 2201 Dickinson Ave. in an incident reported at 12:34 a.m., while Officer G.W. Williams said a battery was taken from a county-owned car at the Pitt County Office Building at 1717 W. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 8:26 a.m. and a tackle box and seven rods and reels were taken from 1712 S. Elm St. in a break-in reported at 2:20 p.m.

Officer E.M. Haddock said four wheel covers were taken from a car parked at the Sub Station II at the intersection of Fourth and Reade Streets in an incident reported at 9:32 a.m., while Officer S.B. Pass said a radio-tape player was taken from a vehicle parked at the intersection of First and Meade streets in an incident reported at 1:58 p.m. Pass said the theft occurred sometime Friday night.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said $210 in cash was taken from A10 Glendale Court in an incident reported at 2:02 p.m., while Officer L.R. Kepler said 30 cartons of cigarettes were taken from a storage room at Fieldcrest Mills on Dickinson Avenue in an incident reported at 6:53 p.m.

Officer H.D. Hines said a television set was taken from 107 Pennsylvania Ave. in a break-in reported at 8:18 p.m., while Officer J.A. Bartlett said a purse was taken from a vehicle parked at Darryll's restaurant on East 10th Street in an incident reported at 10:18 p.m.

Agenda

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the City Council chambers.

Agenda items include: Requests for rezoning by Derek P. Dunn to rezone a lot on Westhaven Drive from highway commercial to residential, and by J.T. Williams to rezone a 2.40-acre tract off the eastern side of East Fifth Street from shopping center to residential.

Consideration of preliminary plats for Dalton T. Jones Subdivision, across from Agri-Supply Co., three lots on a 59-acre tract; University Medical Park, southeast corner of Stantonsburg Road and Allen road, 58 lots on an 85-acre tract; Willoughby Park, west side of Evans Street extension, three lots on a 22-acre tract, and Willoughby Park, Tract 1, west side Evans Street extension, group housing, 48 units on a 2.97-acre tract.

A request by David Evans, agent, to annex 2.9 acres located in Winterville Township, west of Arlington Boulevard, being a portion of Red Banks Road right-of-way and contiguous to the city limits.

Items for discussion include a review of existing sign regulations, review and evaluation of the Medical District Plan, and an update on the Historic Properties Commission.

Jurors Convict 5 Of Skimming Funds

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Five alleged organized crime leaders, including the reputed boss of Chicago crime, were convicted today of skimming gambling proceeds from Las Vegas, Nev., casinos.

The jury in U.S. District Court convicted the defendants on each of eight counts against them.

The panel had deliberated about 30 hours since Thursday. The defendants were charged with conspiracy and traveling in interstate commerce to carry out the skimming plan. Skimming is the illegal diversion of profits before taxes are collected.

They face penalties of 40 years in prison and $8

Penn State Buries ECU, 85-57

By BOB GENNARELLI
Special To The Reflector
STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — East Carolina's Pirates, shoveling in hand, dug themselves a very deep hole from which to crawl Monday night in Penn State's Red Hall.
And the host Nittany Lions were right there to bury them.
ECU, showing the effects of its fifth straight road game, fell behind early and never recovered, dropping a lopsided 85-57 decision to Penn State before a very happy crowd of 2,118.
"I think Penn State came out hungry and played hungry," said ECU head coach Charlie Harrison. "We're a better basketball team than that. We've played very, very well at times this year, but maybe they took Penn State lightly."

One thing Penn State did not do was go lightly on the Pirates. ECU enjoyed the luxury of a lead just once — at the 19:39 mark of the first half when Leon Bass connected on a turnaround jumper for a 2-0 lead.
From then on, it was all Penn State.
The Pirates did not score again until 4:50 later on two Marchell Henry free throws, and during the drought the Nittany Lions opened up a three-point lead at 7-4. Another 5:08 passed before ECU scored again, and Penn State's lead grew to eight, 13-5.
Another scoreless stretch of 2:42 soon followed, and when Manuel

Jones ended that with a tip in at 6:25 of the first half Penn State's lead had grown to 15, 24-9. In fact, the Pirates did not reach double figures until Henry, ECU's only player to reach double figures with 14 points, sank two free throws to trim Penn State's ever-increasing lead to 17, 28-11.
The Nittany Lions found themselves on the very comfortable side of a 38-23 halftime score, and the second half proved to be a mirror-image of the first for Coach Bruce Parkhill's club. Four of Penn State's five starters reached double figures, with freshman guard Brian Allen leading the way with 19. It was Allen's fourth straight game in double figures, while fellow backcourt mate Paul Murphy ran his double-figure streak to six games with his 14.

"We just played god-awful," said Harrison, who saw his Pirates end the current five-game road streak at 2-3. "That's all it comes down to. They (Penn State) beat us in every aspect of the game. We just didn't attack offensively, and when we got good shots and they didn't go in it took the wind out of our sails."
So did Penn State's defense, which frustrated the Pirates all night. Senior Curt Vanderhorst, in foul trouble most of the game, played just 18 minutes and was held scoreless. Penn State forced 22 ECU turnovers and converted them into 21 points while the Nittany Lions registered 15 second-chance points on the offensive boards to the Pirates' five.

It didn't take long for Penn State's 15-point halftime lead to grow, reaching 21 points at 48-27 before another Pirate drought — this time 5:08 — put the Nittany Lions in front 60-33 with eight minutes to play.
The victory snapped a four-game losing streak for Penn State, evening the Nittany Lions' record at 8-8. ECU dropped to 7-9 and returns to Minges Coliseum Saturday night to host George Mason in a Colonial Athletic Association contest. The win also improved Parkhill's personal record versus ECU to 7-3 dating back to his days as head coach at William & Mary.

"When you play poorly you look for a rhyme or reason for why you played poorly," Harrison said. "But we just played poorly, and I blame myself for that."
"We didn't play with any confidence or any force," he added. "We just stood around. And when you stand around instead of attacking you get beat."

Bearcats KO Louisville

By The Associated Press
The loss was well-deserved, Louisville Coach Denny Crum thought.
Coming off the emotional high of an 83-73 upset of Syracuse on Saturday, the 13th-ranked Cardinals squandered a 56-43 lead before losing Monday night to Cincinnati, 84-82, in a Metro Conference game at Louisville.
"Basketball is a lot like life," Crum said. "If you live in the past, you get what you earn. Tonight, we earned a loss."

Memphis State 68, Southern Miss. 64
Andre Turner hit a layup with 23 seconds left to break a 64-64 tie, and undefeated Memphis State rallied from a 64-59 disadvantage with 2:15 to play to beat Southern Mississippi in a Metro Conference game. The Tigers now have won 18 in a row.
Baskerville Holmes added a pair of foul shots with four seconds left for the final four-point cushion. William Bedford, who had three points in the Tigers' late rally, finished with 24 points, and Holmes had 17.

Sean Connor, to lead 85-57 late in the second half. Hofstra trailed only 39-35 at halftime as Luke Murphy scored all 14 of his points in the first 20 minutes.

Sophomore guard Roger McClendon scored 24 of his 35 points in the second half for Cincinnati, which knocked Virginia Tech out of the Top Twenty last Saturday with a 107-104 victory in double overtime.
Other Top Twenty results Monday: No. 3 Memphis State 68, Southern Mississippi 64; No. 12 Georgetown 76, Villanova 72, and No. 16 Notre Dame 91, Hofstra 67.
Cincinnati, 7-9 and 3-3 in the conference, outscored Louisville 14-4 to pull within three points midway in the second half. The lead changed hands several times before Tony Wilson made a three-point play for an 80-76 lead with 11 seconds to play in the game.
Milt Wagner, Jeff Hall and Pervis Ellison each had 16 points for Louisville, 11-5 and 2-2 in the Metro. McClendon was 15-of-25 from the field, 10-of-14 in the second half, while hitting primarily from the outside.

Second Ten
Georgetown 76, Villanova 72
Georgetown built an 18-point first-half lead behind Reggie Williams, then hung on to beat Villanova in a rematch of last year's NCAA championship game. Villanova, which upset Georgetown for the national title last April, cut the gap to four points with 6:33 left, but Williams scored four points from the foul line during a 6-1 run that put Georgetown comfortably in front. Williams wound up with 22 points for the Hoyas, 14-3 and 5-2 in the Big East Conference.
"I'd love to trade a regular-season game for a national championship," Georgetown Coach John Thompson said of the victory. Then, speaking of Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino, Thompson said: "He would have loved to have won this game, and I would have liked to win the last one."

Notre Dame 91, Hofstra 67
Donald Royal scored 20 points, and Notre Dame led by as many as 28 points in the second half en route to its romp over Hofstra.
The 11-2 Irish ran off eight straight points, four each by Scott Hicks and Center David Robinson scored 37 points, and Vernon Butler had 26 to become Navy's all-time leading scorer as the Midshipmen defeated Delaware 108-63 in a non-conference game. Butler has 1,695 points and also set a Navy record for consecutive starts with his 110th.

Freshman guard Kevin Presto scored six of his 22 points in the final 33 seconds to lead Miami to an 83-75 upset of cross-state rival Florida State. Miami, 9-7, which resumed basketball this season after 15 years without the sport, saw a 10-point lead reduced to 77-73, before Presto hit six straight free throws.
Melvin Mathis had 13 points and 12 rebounds to lead Drake over Wichita State 54-47 in the Missouri Valley Conference. The victory was the first for Drake in its last 15 games with Wichita State, dating back to 1979.

ECU-Miami Date Change
East Carolina will square off against Miami of Florida on Thanksgiving night at the Orange Bowl, ECU officials announced yesterday afternoon.
The game was originally scheduled for Nov. 22 but was moved to Nov. 27 at the request of Miami to enhance television possibilities.
The move will give the Pirates two open dates in November. East Carolina will open the month with a home game against Southern Mississippi Nov. 1, play Cincinnati on Nov. 15 and then have 12 days to prepare for the Hurricanes.
The Pirates completed the 1985 season at 2-9.

Heels Unanimous Atop AP's Poll

By The Associated Press
North Carolina, survivor of a showdown meeting with Atlantic Coast Conference rival Duke and a dramatic come-from-behind victory over Marquette, is the unanimous choice as the top team in The Associated Press college basketball poll.
The Tar Heels, who beat second-ranked Duke — the Blue Devils moved up from No. 3 despite the loss — in the inaugural game Saturday at the athletic center named for Coach Dean Smith, and Marquette on Sunday, got all 1,240 points for the first time this season.
North Carolina, 19-0, was followed by Duke, 16-1, which received 1,089 points Monday in voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Blue Devils were 20 points ahead of Memphis State, still unbeaten at 17-0.

A third ACC member, Georgia Tech, was fourth with 1,058 points, followed by Oklahoma, also 17-0. The Sooners had 997 points, just two more than Michigan, which lost last week to Minnesota to fall from its No. 2 ranking.
Kansas, with 889 points, was seventh, followed by St. John's, 754; Syracuse, 674, and Nevada-Las Vegas, 669.
Syracuse, fourth last week, dropped to ninth after losing a Big East Conference game to Georgetown, 73-70, and a nationally televised game at Louisville on

Lady Pirates Pluck Eagles

WASHINGTON, D.C. — East Carolina's Lady Pirates used their quickness and defense to come away with a 77-73 Colonial Athletic Association basketball victory over American University last night.
It was the first CAA road game of the season for the Lady Pirates, who have now run their record to 14-5 overall and 4-0 in league play.
"The difference in the game was steals," Coach Emily Manwaring reflected afterwards. "We had 14 to their five. Del (Delphine Mabry) had six of those and most of the time got layups from them." Mabry hit on seven of eight shots from the floor, mostly on breakaways after steals.
"We used a full-court zone press the entire game and they just couldn't handle it. They were well-prepared, but our quickness was too much for them."

eight rebounds.
"It was a good team effort in a hostile gym. We held our composure when they cut it to two and it was a good road win for us."
Foster led the ECU scoring with 18 points while both Bragg and Squirewell had 16. Mabry added 15.
American was led by Kelly Lane with 21. She also pulled in a game-high 13 rebounds. Beth Shearen added 17 while Kathy Hughes and Dana Diller each added 12.
American falls to 11-5 overall and 1-3 in CAA play.
East Carolina is idle until Saturday when it visits George Mason, then ventures into James Madison — its chief CAA rival — on Monday.

The game stayed tight most of the way, with East Carolina holding only a 39-34 lead at intermission. In the second half, the Lady Pirates opened up as much as a 12-point lead at 62-50, but American refused to wilt and fought back, finally closing the gap to 72-70 with 2:19 remaining in the game.
But East Carolina made another basket to get back out by four, and then used the free throw line for the final three points to hold off the Lady Eagles.
"We outshot them, hitting almost 54 percent on the night," Manwaring said. American hit but 46 percent. "We had some great outside shooting from (Lorraine) Foster and (Sylvia) Bragg. (Lisa) Squirewell also hit well from inside. Alma (Bethae) didn't shoot that much but she got

States Evading Major Tax Cuts

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The spotty national economy and uncertainty about pending federal budget cuts are prompting most state legislatures to forego tax cuts this year, a survey shows.

While 20 states cut taxes in 1985, only a handful of states, mostly in areas where the economy is roaring, are considering cuts in 1986 as legislatures around the country begin meeting this month, a survey by The Associated Press found.

And reflecting the unevenness of the economy, farm-belt, oil-producing and other economically hard-hit states face sizable shortfalls in their budgets and are looking for ways to cut spending and raise money without taxes.

"When I go through this budget I see a lot of sleeping crises," said Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm, who has already ordered 2 percent cuts in state spending.

"It's a very bleak picture," said state Sen. Hinton Mitchem of Alabama, where Gov. George C. Wallace is proposing a 4.5 percent cut in spending by most state agencies for fiscal 1987. "It makes me depressed to review it."

But other states are flush with surpluses. "California has gone from IOU to A-OK," Gov. George Deukmejian boasted.

Nationwide, the states are projecting at least $2.8 billion in total surpluses, with California's $1.16 billion the largest. Others include Massachusetts at $500 million, Illinois with $200 million, New Jersey with $190 million and Virginia with $302 million.

But projected deficits amount to at least $1.7 billion. Half that is in Minnesota, with other big shortfalls forecast in Florida, Kansas, Oklahoma and Wisconsin, and smaller ones in South Carolina and Utah.

States where the talk is of a tax cut include Connecticut and Pennsylvania, both with surpluses. In Michigan, where legislators temporarily raised taxes three years ago, a surplus is bringing calls for a speedup in the automatic tax rollback.

California may consider repeal or changes in the unitary tax on corporate profits. In New York, in the second year of a major tax-cut program that will bring about $1.1 billion in cuts, Gov. Mario Cuomo said there is no surplus but Republican legislators still want additional tax cuts.

A tax increase is proposed in Kansas, where Gov. John Carlin wants a 1 percentage point boost in the sales tax. In Hawaii, there's consensus for a hotel room tax, and excise taxes on gasoline or cigarettes are proposed in Colorado, Virginia and Washington.

Prompting financial caution is the uncertainty over what federal budget cutting will do to federal aid to states and cities. In North Carolina, where taxes were cut last year, Gov. Jim Martin has ordered a government hiring slowdown out of concern the state could lose $200 million in aid.

Searching for money-raising alternatives, Florida, Louisiana and West Virginia are considering allowing gambling casinos. Kansas is considering legalizing betting on horse racing.

In Louisiana, where taxes were raised $650 million in 1984, Gov. Edwin Edwards is proposing a state lottery and casinos to bring in more money.

Without it, he said, "We will lose 10,000 state employees. ... The poor will suffer, the elderly, the mentally ill — all those who can least afford to lose services."

In Oklahoma, where revenues are declining with the price of oil, Gov. George Nigh has proposed a budget calling for 9 percent cuts in most state agencies. This comes after two years of record tax increases.

In some cases, tight budgets directly follow enactment of tax cuts. Among them was Minnesota, which cut its income tax 16 percent, or about $915 million. This year, Minnesota has the largest projected budget shortfall among the states — perhaps as large as the tax cut.

Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich said the state will dip into the $450 million it had socked away and will make up the rest through budget cuts.

Wisconsin, which reduced tax rates last year, faces a $345 million shortage when the fiscal year ends June 30. Gov. Anthony Earl is expected to propose spending cuts but no new taxes.

Other states facing budget cuts include Hawaii, Iowa, and Kansas; no-growth budgets are expected in Illinois and West Virginia.

Steven Gold, fiscal director for the National Conference of State

Legislators, said the $1 billion reduction in state taxes last year means there won't be much tax action this year.

"Most states have brought their tax systems into equilibrium so there's no strong pressure for increase or decrease," he said. "In most states it's going to be a quiet year."

Other issues also face legislators. More than a dozen states have proposals to deal with the growing crisis in liability insurance, such as limiting damage claims, and many states are considering action on prison improvements.

In Maryland, the big issue is preventing another savings and loan crisis and paying off depositors in failed, privately insured savings and loans. Rhode Island's legislature is considering impeachment of state Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph A. Bevilacqua for his acknowledged ties to reputed mobsters.

Royal Yacht Stirs Refugees' Emotions

LONDON (AP) — Most Britons never get near the yacht Britannia, the 412-foot-long floating palace that carries the royal family around the world, let alone make use of its 56-seat dining room, stately ballroom and superbly fitted cabins.

So Peter White, a 62-year-old security guard at the British Embassy in South Yemen, got a bit emotional when he saw the Britannia offshore from a Yemeni beach ready to evacuate foreigners from that Arab country's bloody civil war.

"We certainly got a lump in our throats," White said here Monday. He and more than 600 other refugees were plucked last weekend from oil-smeared Gulf of Aden beaches by Britannia's 277-man crew as rockets and tank shells burst around them.

"We would just like to say thank you to the queen," he said.

"The crew of the yacht were fabulous," White added. "They treated us like kings and queens and Her Majesty can certainly invite me on board again any time."

Britannia takes its name from the poetic female figure symbolizing Britain and its former empire.

As authors Graham and Heather Fisher write in "Monarchy and the Royal Family," the 3,990-ton vessel "bears about as much resemblance to an ordinary yacht as Buckingham Palace does to the average house."

Its royal blue hull is trimmed with red and gold. Inside, it resembles an oak-paneled country house, with handwoven rugs and bright blue floral patterns on chairs and bed covers.

British taxpayers have grumbled in the past about the yacht's $4.2 million annual operating cost.

"There is more gold braid on board than in the rest of the royal navy and you could eat your dinner off the deck, or off the engine-room floor," William Hamilton, a Labor Party legislator and constant critic of the monarchy, once grumbled.

Its construction cost in 1952 was about $4.8 million and periodic refits since then ran up bills totaling at least $60 million.

But when cameras catch a glimpse of Queen Elizabeth II aboard Britannia, it's obvious she loves the vessel — she's always smiling. She takes official tours on the ship, cruises around Britain on it in the summer and sent her children on honeymoons aboard it.

When the Labor government considered selling the yacht in 1968 to save money, the queen won a tenacious fight to keep it.

Buckingham Palace says the export business that the ship generates at high-level business conferences during royal tours more than pays for its upkeep.

"I never knew anyone refuse an invitation to come on board Britannia," said the last captain, Rear Adm. Paul Greening.

Britannia's baptism under fire came Friday when it was diverted to help the Aden rescue while steaming to New Zealand to receive the queen there in February.

The vessel took on its first refugees Friday night, then sent more boats to the beaches Saturday and Sunday, picking up a total of 659 people of more than 40 nationalities.

Darlene Patterson, 29, one of 24 Britons rescued by the Britannia who flew into London's Heathrow airport Monday, said, "When I heard that Britannia was coming to rescue us, I thought it was some sort of joke."

"Then I saw the royal yacht lit up and I couldn't believe it. I just sat down on the beach and stared."

Ms. Patterson's companion, geologist Martin Reeve-Fowkes, said they had spent four days hiding from the fighting in a rat-infested base-

Government Says Southern Rural Blacks Missing Economic Growth

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department study of 10 southern Georgia counties shows that not only did economic growth in rural areas help white people more than blacks, but that blacks in some ways became worse off than before.

The department's Economic Research Service said that during the period of economic growth between 1976 and 1981, the percentage of white women examined with jobs increased, while the percentage of black men with jobs decreased.

The report said the 10 counties studied, while not typical of rural areas throughout the country, "typify substantial segments of the non-metro South."

"Among employed persons, whites increased their share of higher wage jobs," the report said. "Persons who moved into the area obtained higher paying jobs than did other residents. These in-migrants, most of whom were white, in general took larger shares of the new jobs than continuous residents of both racial groups."

Of the residents living continuously in the area in both 1976 and 1981, whites increased their share of employment in professional and technical jobs by 28 percent, compared with a 1 percent increase for blacks.

The report said most people moving into the area were white and tended to be better educated and more highly skilled than those already living there.

"Less-skilled continuous residents, especially blacks, became relatively worse off than before," the survey said.

In general, the report said, "Blacks need to increase their formal education in order to better compete with whites for jobs in the study area. Public investment in formal job training programs may also help blacks move to higher wage jobs."

Any IRA reduces the tax you sent to Washington, but only First Federal's IRA keeps your money at home.

Only First Federal's IRA assures you that your retirement money is to be used here in the local economy. That's because First Federal is the only financial institution that operates offices only in Pitt County. So while a First Federal IRA, your money works right here while you're working right here.

What's more, your tax-deductible IRA contribution at First Federal is insured by the same people who offer you the tax deduction: the FSLIC, an agency of the federal government. As an added bonus, First Federal's IRA investments generally pay higher interest than federally-insured investments at the big banks.

But those aren't the only reasons to open IRA at First Federal. Our customer service representatives are IRA specialists with the knowledge and experience to help you choose the right IRA investment. And unlike most banks, First Federal doesn't limit your investment choices. All First Federal investment products are available as IRAs; we can even help you set up a self-directed IRA that can include stocks and bonds purchased through our discount brokerage service.

When you add it up, First Federal is your first choice for your IRA. Higher rates, federal insurance and personable people, happy to help you choose the right IRA without limiting your investment choices.

And best of all, with a First Federal IRA, you know your money will be working here with you until you're ready to retire.

After all, your money shouldn't leave town before you do.

Diva Wins Top Award

PARIS (AP) — Discotheque diva Regine, owner of 14 posh clubs in five countries, was presented the Chevalier of Arts and Letters for her "talent, courage and keen business mind," according to France's culture minister.

For the flamboyant Regine, 55, Monday's award caps a career begun in the 1950s as a barmaid in a Left Bank club.

"Nightclub work is seen by some as ambiguous and superficial," she said. "For years, I have simply tried to make it a profession and to run a business which, I'm happy to say, has been a success."

Culture Minister Jack Lang alluded to Regine's flight from the Nazis, calling it an experience "you carry with you every day of your life. But your enthusiasm for life and your fighting spirit have carried you through."

Sir Richard Attenborough, the British director of "Ghandi," "A Bridge Too Far," and the current "A Chorus Line," was made Commander of Arts and Letters in a ceremony Sunday at the Paris Cinemateque, currently sponsoring a retrospective of his work.

Burns Says 90 No Different

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "I feel the same way I did when I was 89," was comedian George Burns' reaction to turning 90, his manager said.

Burns celebrated his first day as a nonagenarian with a half-mile walk around his Beverly Hills pool, a game of bridge, a photo session, a nap, a quiet dinner and a good cigar Monday, said manager Irvin Fein.

An entertainer for nearly three-quarters of a century, Burns starred in the "Oh God!" films in 1977, 1980 and 1984, in which he gave a wry and comical version of God, and "The George Burns and Gracie Allen" 1950s TV series with his late wife.

He's booked at the London Palladium for his 100th birthday.

TV Gala Closes King Celebration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first national holiday celebrating the birth of Martin Luther King Jr. came to a close with a three-city, musical finale produced by singer-composer Stevie Wonder and starred with stars.

"This is just the beginning," said Wonder, who has been campaigning six years for national observance of Martin Luther King Day. "It's not just a black holiday anymore."

Simultaneous concerts, produced by Wonder, were taped Monday before live audiences in Washington, Atlanta and New York, then edited in Washington for a two-hour television special broadcast nationally by NBC later in the evening.

Among the performers were Bob Dylan; Peter, Paul and Mary; Bette Midler; Harry Belafonte; Bill Cosby; the Pointer Sisters; Diana Ross; Elizabeth Taylor; Eddie Murphy; Patti LaBelle; Joan Baez; Neil Diamond; Dick Gregory; and Lionel Richie.

Capacity crowds paid $35 to $1,000 a seat to see the shows at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, the Atlanta Civic Center and Radio City Music Hall in New York.

Proceeds are going to the Martin Luther King Center for Non-violent Social Change in Atlanta. Concert spokeswoman Susie Trees said $200,000 was raised from the Washington show, which drew 2,100 people.

"This is the greatest night of my life," said Wonder.

At a 1979 benefit for the King center, Wonder introduced a version of "Happy Birthday" he had written as a tribute to the late civil rights leader. The song gained popularity, and the performance turned out to be the start of the singer's lobbying efforts, which included three marches in Washington and constant pressure on Congress.

When all 38 performing groups and individual stars in the three cities closed Monday's concerts with the song, audiences rose to their feet, sang along and waved fluorescent sticks like thousands of birthday candles.

Earlier in the show, Diana Ross also had members of the crowd out of their seats, holding hands above their heads, as she went through the audience, singing, "Reach Out and Touch." Peter, Paul and Mary, joined by Bob Dylan and Wonder, received cheers for what has been described as the anthem for the protest movement of the 1960s, "Blowin' in the Wind."

Peter Yarrow said later it was the first time the trio, whose recording made the song famous, had sung it with Dylan, its composer.

Filed excerpts of King's oratory were interspersed with the musical numbers, and commentary was provided by celebrities, including District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry and Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, both of whom were young civil rights workers when King was alive.

After the extravaganza in Washington, 1,200 guests and performers gathered at the Civil War-era Old Pension Building, now known as the National Building Museum, for a black-tie supper of barbecued chicken and ribs.

Two movie screens in the mammoth hall were set up for viewing a stereophonic off-air feed of the television production.

The musical event capped eight days of celebration in the nation's capital, where Martin Luther King Day has been celebrated since 1969, the year after he was assassinated.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JAN. 22, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Changes are still the main influence in your life today but they are for the best and if you go along with them, you will be able to have a far greater amount of expansion of your talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good friends can give you the information you need so go after it, and give them a helping hand.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Go to a person you know who will be prosperous in the days ahead. Don't confide in others for they will try to spoil your plans.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A modern thinking individual understands your needs and will help you to satisfy them.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Talk your interests over with experts and gain good advice for improving them. Have an intimate talk with your mate.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) A good day to join some good friend at some special site and discuss important affairs while having a good time as well.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A higher-up can give you good ideas on how to get rid of some situation that has been bothering you for some time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can gain your wishes now if you are willing to make things a little different than you had planned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can now comprehend your family's aims and will help them to achieve them. Don't be stingy with your time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be with an outside partner and reach a fine meeting of minds. Later you have greater success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study into whatever is up-to-date and apply it to your own operations in the future and gain more success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan recreations that appeal most to you and make arrangements for them. You have an innate talent that should be brought out.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Gain further cooperation from those who dwell under the same roof by doing something unusual. Buy a thoughtful gift.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she is apt to have much luck during the lifetime since the mind is sharp and the personality very likable. An inventive ability is here that will impress bigwigs. Make sure you plan for a fine education early in life and teach good manners. One who will attract many fine friends.

Brynner Rite Set

NEW YORK (AP) — Liza Minnelli, Mike Wallace, Sidney Lumet and Alan Jay Lerner will reminisce about Yul Brynner, the king of Siam in the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "The King and I," at a special memorial service Jan. 30.

Among the other speakers at Broadway's Shubert Theater will be Mary Beth Peil, Brynner's last "Mrs. Anna," and Dorothy Rodgers, widow of Richard Rodgers, a spokesman for the Brynner family said Monday.

Brynner, who died in October of cancer, played the bald, autocratic monarch of Siam for a record 4,625 performances, including a Broadway production that wrapped up last June.

Because of Brynner's affection for children and his work for the United Nations, a special "Yul Brynner Cancer Fund for Children" has been set up at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, spokesman Josh Ellis said.

Book Award

CHICAGO (AP) — Patricia MacLachlan's "Sarah, Plain and Tall," a tale of a widower who brings a mail-order bride from Maine to the western Plains, has won the prestigious John Newbery Medal for most outstanding children's book.

The American Library Association announced the awards Monday at its midwinter meeting.

Omar Sharif's visit to new York to film his video-cassette "Play Bridge With Omar Sharif" was the occasion for some friendly bridge with the Goren staff. This hand could easily have been included in those selected for the cassette. To test your skill, cover the East and West hands and see if you can spot the sure-trick line for your contract after West leads a low spade and dummy's jack wins the trick.

The auction was uneventful. Once North discovered that his partner did not have a four-card heart suit, he bid what he expected his side to make.

After the jack of spades wins, you have time to establish the tricks you need in hearts and clubs if you can succeed in keeping East, the danger hand, off lead. At trick two, lead a low club from dummy toward your jack. If East has the ace and steps up with it, you have nine tricks—two spades, four diamonds and three clubs. So East must duck.

If West wins the ace, he cannot attack spades without presenting you with your ninth trick, and you have time to set up a heart. But let's suppose the jack of clubs wins. Now it's time to turn your attention to hearts. However, you still need to protect against East gaining the lead, so it is correct to cross to the table with the king of diamonds and lead a heart to your king. Again East cannot afford to rise with the ace, and if West wins you have the time to set up another club as your game-going trick.

Note that, as the cards lie, you can be defeated if, after winning the jack of clubs, you lead a heart from hand. East captures the queen with the ace and returns a spade to set West's suit, and West still has the ace of clubs as an entry to cash his tricks before you can take nine.

Supersonic Concorde Marks 10th Birthday

NEW YORK (AP) — Admirers call it a marvel that can whisk you across the Atlantic in 3½ hours and is starting to make money. Critics call it a failure that guzzles fuel, shatters eardrums and costs too much for fares.

The Concorde, the supersonic jetliner built by Britain and France, marks the 10th anniversary of its first commercial flight today, having won a small loyal clientele but lost the dream of revolutionizing air travel.

British Airways and Air France remain the only airlines that fly the 204-foot-long, 100-passenger delta-winged plane with a pointy, drooped nose and a cruising speed of 1,370 mph, twice the speed of sound.

After 10 years of government-financed development by Aerospatiale in France and British Aerospace that cost nearly $3 billion, Air France inaugurated its first Concorde service on Jan. 21, 1976, between Paris and Rio de Janeiro, and a British Airways Concorde flew from London to Bahrain.

Flights to New York and Washington have since become the busiest routes, and both carriers have flown more than 1 million passengers on their combined fleet of 14 aircraft.

"It was referred to as a white elephant. That has completely turned around," said Deborah M. Bernstein, spokeswoman for British Airways in New York.

The British Airways Concorde lost more than $5 million in its first year of operation, did not start making money until 1982 and recorded a $17.3 million operating profit in 1985. Air France's Concorde routes lost money until 1983 but made $8.2 million in 1984 and $11.1 million last year.

For $5,104 paid in U.S. dollars, a British Airways Concorde flyer can leave New York at midmorning and arrive in London for late afternoon tea, spend the night and part of the next day, and return home for dinner.

Air France offers similar round-trip service to Paris for $3,630, attributing the lower price to a less-traveled market.

The airlines say the fares are justified because the Concorde halves the time passengers would otherwise spend flying.

"When you're shaving off 3.5 hours by getting them to a location, you're saving them a significant amount of money," Ms. Bernstein said.

Critics say the Concorde's profitability figures ignore the enormous cost of developing the aircraft paid by British and French taxpayers, which never will be recouped. Congress scuttled a project for developing a U.S. supersonic jetliner in 1971 because of its expense and high fuel costs.

The Concorde consumes 44,000 pounds of fuel an hour. By comparison, a Boeing 747 burns 23,500 pounds per hour, carrying four times as many people.

"The economics of the Concorde were just wrong at the beginning," said Paul D. Bordwell, an aerospace analyst with Argus Research Inc., a New York business consultancy firm. "I think the Concorde has shown itself to be a magnificent blind alley."

The Greenville Museum of Art is located at 802 South Evans Street.

Presidents in Private Presidents often get 10,000 letters a day. This mail is opened, read and answered by the White House staff. In order to protect the privacy of the First Family, relatives and close friends mark personal mail with a special code. These people get a sequence of numbers to write on the outside of the envelope. Each President uses a new code. Ronald Reagan's code reportedly has a special meaning to him and his wife. Jimmy Carter used Rosalyn's old phone number.
