County Mapping Project Wins Approval Of Board

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt County Board of Commissioners on Monday gave tentative approval to a $854,021 countywide land-mapping proposal, but withheld approval of bids for additions to North Pitt and D.J. Conley high schools until school officials negotiate with the low bidders in an effort to bring down the cost of the projects. Landmark Engineering of Cary, which submitted a proposal amounting to just over $854,000 to produce 929 orthophoto maps, 197 soil maps and cadastral maps of 42,000 parcels of land in the county, received the recommendation of Pitt County Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee.

Acting on Hardee's recommendation, the board gave tentative approval to the project pending a meeting with Landmark Engineering officials. Other firms submitting proposals for the three-phase project included: Floyd Browne of Sanford ($798,177); Kimball Associates, a Pennsylvania firm ($857,253), and Black & Veatch ($2.38 million).

In recommending Landmark, Hardee said the firm has done 40 percent of the land mapping work in the state, does all the work in-house, and is a North Carolina firm with offices easily accessible to county officials.

The Floyd Browne firm, which submitted a proposal amounting to just over $798,000, Hardee explained, would have to sub-contract portions of the project.

Don Holloway, manager of the state's land records management program, said 65 counties have com-

County Manager Plans To Retire

Pitt County Manager Reginald Gray said Monday he will retire Dec. 31.

Gray, who will be 62 on Sept. 25, said in a letter to Bruce Strickland, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, "My sole reason for wanting to retire ... is that I have been advised by my doctor that I should retire as soon as I could."

Gray said, "I am advising you at this time of my plans in order to give the Board of Commissioners sufficient time to employ my successor and not feel pressured to hurry the process. It is my desire for the board to hire the best candidate possible to carry on the affairs of Pitt County."

A Pitt County native, Gray flew 33 missions, most of them over Germany, as an Army Air Corps bomber pilot during World War II. He later graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a degree in accounting.

He has been the county's chief administrative officer — first as county auditor, then as county manager (1970) — since Aug. 15, 1952.

Gray's letter said that, during his almost 34 years service, "Pitt County has provided me with a very rewarding career and one which I have thoroughly enjoyed. I will be leaving with a great deal of self-satisfaction (and) I sincerely thank the commissioners for the opportunity they have provided me."

Pitt County, Gray said, "has experienced unparalleled growth which has provided opportunities for our citizens that are hard to comprehend. I hope that I have contributed a small part thereto."

Off-Duty Jobs Are Barred

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Allegations that Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes and City Manager Gail Meeks acted in a discriminatory manner and stepped beyond their bounds as city employees by prohibiting off-duty police to work at a local bingo establishment will be addressed by the City Council Feb. 24.

The issue was raised at the Council's workshop session Monday by Greenville attorney Fred Mattox.

Speaking on behalf of area bingo parlor owner Lou Hallow, Mattox said the decision to refuse Hallow the right to hire off-duty policemen could be seen as "an obvious discrimination." Mattox said that, under the city's personnel ordinance, other employees would be allowed to work for Hallow as long as that employment would not be in conflict with the city's public purpose or interfere with job performance with the city.

Mattox said that he had requested, but still had yet to receive, detailed information from the city to support a written statement by City Attorney Mac McCarley saying that use of off-duty policemen at the 10th Street bingo establishment lent "an air of legitimacy in an environment which we have to monitor very carefully for violations of the gambling statutes."

"Would not the same philosophy hold true for off-duty policemen working the local bars," Mattox questioned the Council after reading segments of McCarley's letter.

Council Says No To More Debate On Phone Service

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

A motion by Councilwoman Nancy Jenkins to reopen discussion on Greenville participation in extended area telephone service died for lack of a second during a Council workshop session Monday.

Ms. Jenkin's motion to reconsider an October 1985 resolution expressing the former Council's interest in extended area telephone service followed a presentation by Nancy Colville, an area citizen opposed to city endorsement of Carolina Telephone and Telgraph plans to provide extended service from Grifton to Greenville and Ayden to Grifton.

Ms. Colville said she objected to extended area service because, she said, it would unfairly penalize Greenville residents and would put a burden on area citizens living on fixed incomes.

"These Greenville residents desperately need a telephone and yet, at some point, are not going to be able to afford one. As early as June 1985, phone bills were increased by $1.03 for interstate fees. How much more are we in Greenville expected to absorb to keep the county residents satisfied?" she said.

Ms. Colville also said she was concerned that county residents are "already benefitting (from) Greenville's economy and growth," and are "availing themselves of facilities provided and maintained by city tax dollars paid solely by Greenville residents."

According to Ms. Colville, only "2,000 county residents" would benefit from extended area service, while all subscribers, both from the city and county, would be paying for it.

TWO PERCENT TAX ON CARS

I want everyone to know that only 2 percent sales tax can legally be charged on a car and not more than $300 on any car. I have seen people charge the 4½ percent charged for other goods and pocket the difference. This isn't fair to the buyer and the only way to prevent it is for everyone to be informed. C.D.

Hotline confirmed what you say with the local office of the North Carolina Department of Revenue. You may report those who have charged more to this department. Be prepared to back up your assertions with proof.

Huggins Seeks Seat On Board

Rufus Huggins filed as a candidate for the Greenville Township seat on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday.

Huggins, a Greenville native and 1960 graduate of C.M. Eppes High School, joined five other candidates seeking the seat now held by Kelly Barnhill, who chose not to seek reelection.

A veteran of four years in the U.S. Air Force, Huggins attended Pitt Community College, concentrating in business administration and industrial management. He is currently a sales representative for Southern Life Insurance Co.

According to Huggins, "Pitt County is rapidly changing from an agricultural community to one which has diversified interests: medical, education and industrial. The leadership must be capable of analyzing the local needs and planning for future growth and orderly development."

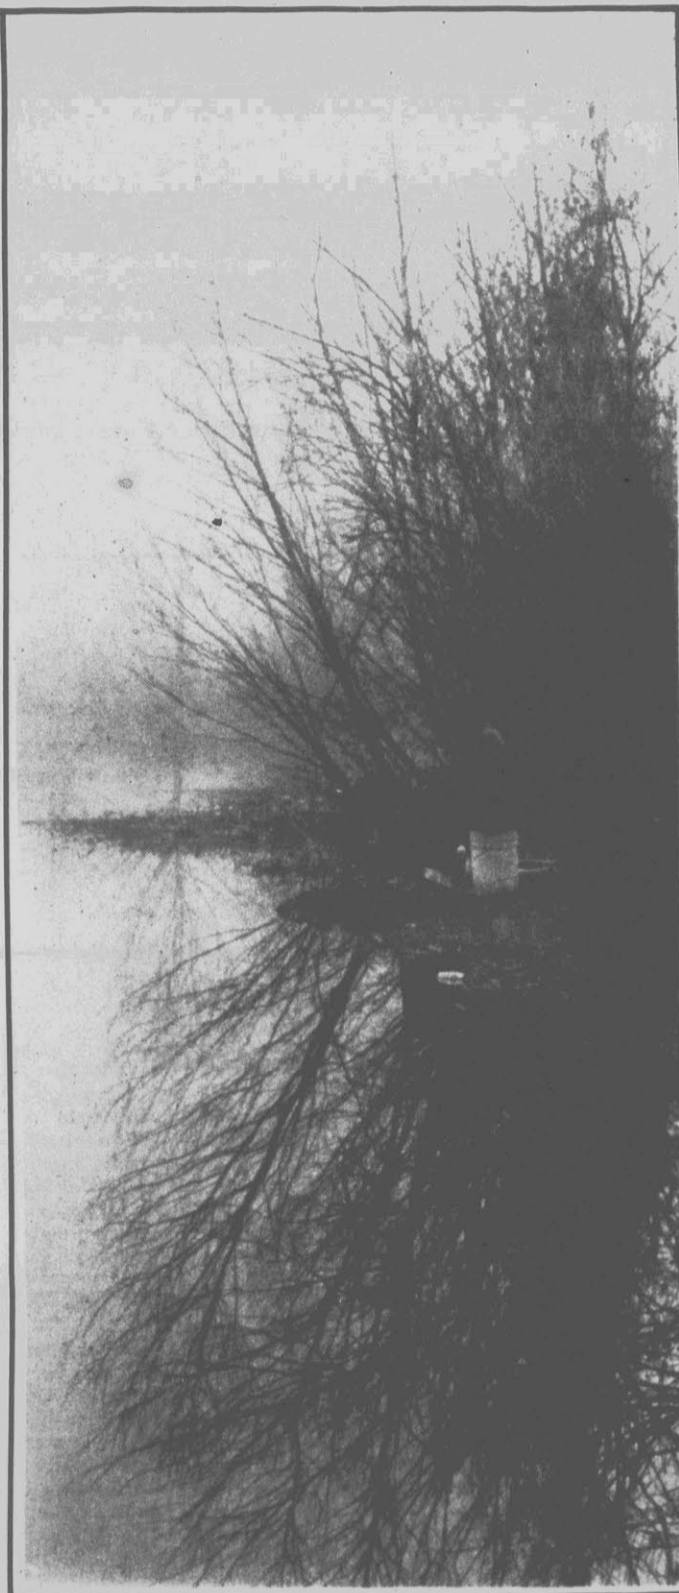

Huggins, saying he favors more public involvement in county government, also suggested that "with the constant decrease in the availability of federal funds ...

prudence must be exercised in the use of taxpayers money so as to circumvent the need for a tax increase."

Huggins had been precinct chairman of Greenville 4 for the past 10 years, is a member of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee and is a former member of the party's state executive committee. He has served as a member and chairman of Greenville's Recreation and Parks Commission, as chairman of the Greenville Energy Commission, a member of the mayor's advisory commission to develop a 10-year transportation plan, as well as the mayor's advisory commission to study the electoral process in the city.

Huggins, chairman of the city's Human Relations Council, is also a member of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Southern Leadership Conference, Mount Herman Lodge 35, and the Higgs Neighborhood Association.

He is married to the former Ann Floyd and they have three children.

Drive To Raise Funds Launched

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

South Greenville PTA President Kurt Fickling told members of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night that plans are under way to raise funds locally for a trip by South Greenville fifth graders to Tidewater Virginia this spring.

A committee is being formed to approach area businesses and agencies to raise the necessary trip funds, he said today. Funds from a private grant to finance the students' trip have been reported missing at the state level.

Fickling told the board unorthodox procedures were used to pay for last year's trip, which also was to be financed through the grant. He said pressure would be put on state officials to make public the status of the ongoing audit of the missing funds.

Efforts to locate the funds or to have replacement funds authorized from the state's contingency and emergency (C&E) funds have failed.

The missing funds are from an Atlantic-Richfield Co. grant of $50,000 covering a three-year period. About $16,000 was expended on the trip for the first year in the spring of 1984, with some $16,000 plus earmarked for this spring and again for the spring of 1987.

Based on a recommendation by State Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips, Gov. Jim Martin has informed local officials replacement of the funds from the contingency account would not be appropriate. The governor has advised, however, that Phillips "has assured me that he will keep me advised of any new facts which may come to light bearing on the appropriateness of contingency and emergency funds in this case."

In letters of Jan. 28 and Jan. 30 to local officials, Martin referred to the unaccounted-for funds as "unrealized travel funds."

Fickling Monday night added to the confusion when he told the Greenville board publicly for the first time that the 1984 trip was paid for through a state employee's personal account.

"We are still wondering why

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

There's a theory being advanced by television that when marriage begins, ratings fall. There is no life after bed, so hold off the physical stuff for as long as you can to keep the principals interested.

So, we have Scarecrow locking eyes with Mrs. King, Christine exchanging "looks" with Peter on "Hotel," Tony and Angela touching hands on "Who's the Boss?" Laura titillating Remington Steele and Diane and Sam fighting one another with verbal sexual innuendos on "Cheers." The list goes on.

What are we saying here? That marriage can't pull a 30 share? That no one wants to watch legalized sex? Or is there that nagging fear that a marriage series can't last 13 weeks without being canceled?

I saw a story the other day that said Spenser ("Spenser: For Hire") and Susan have no plans to pair up in a legal union as it might "dampen the ardor."

Have you any idea how that makes married people feel? I'll tell you how it makes us feel... like the fireworks are over and we're hanging around sorting socks until the Social Security checks come.

Are all married people in the world stupid? Do you honestly think they'd exchange the "Love Boat" for "Animal Kingdom"?

You know what the problem is? Love is hard to show because it was never meant to be a spectator sport. Love is where a person voluntarily gives himself to another human being, and most people wouldn't recognize it if they saw it. Love isn't particularly dramatic, intoxicating, passionate, noisy or spine-tingling.

Can't you see a producer pitching this love story to a network? There's this couple who have been married for 30 years, and for 30 years she has given the only maraschino cherry in the can of fruit cocktail to her husband because he enjoys them. In 30 years, he has never guessed that she adores maraschino cherries as much as he does.

There will be weeks when nothing big will happen in the series. They'll live humdrum lives and survive whatever life hands them. Sometimes, it won't be a comedy format. They'll argue, insult one another, rip away the veneer that covers a nerve, threaten and accuse without so much as an apology or kiss before the commercial.

They'll spend a whole episode arguing about who filled up the gas tank last, but when they bury a child, they will say nothing.

Dull? Boring? Uneventful? It would seem so. But all married couples at one time or another played the scenes being played by Christine and Peter, Laura and Remington, Sam and Diane. They've made the small talk, danced the ritual dance of superficiality and come up panting and exhausted.

They decided to take the risk, get married, and see if they could "sustain the ardor." You won't need a Nielson family to tell you if you're a hit. You'll know.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Kids Across The U.S. Saying 'No' To Drugs

DEAR ABBY: Last August you printed a letter from Angel Wiltz describing the "Just Say No" clubs, made up of children 7-12 years old who use positive peer pressure to support each other in their commitment to lead drug-free lives. As a result of Angel's letter in your column, 8,000 people wrote or phoned for information, and hundreds of clubs have formed in cities and towns across the country!

Oakland Parents in Action, sponsor of the "Just Say No" charter club, has published a book explaining the clubs and how to start one. The book includes suggestions for projects and activities, discusses fund raising and recruitment, and lists a number of resources for information about preventing drug abuse. "Just Say No: Stopping Drug Abuse Before It Starts" costs $3.50. Checks should be made out to OPA, and orders under $10 must be prepaid. (Quantity discounts are available.) "Just Say No" clubs are organizing an international Walk Against Drugs on May 22. Five million children and teen-agers are expected to take part. Information about the walks is contained in the book. Oakland Parents in Action is compiling a national "Just Say No" directory, and is asking clubs around the country to contact us so that they may be included.

We now have a toll-free "Just Say No" information line—(800) 258-2766 — which operates Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Pacific time.

Abby, you have helped us so much already. Will you please help us again and put this in your column?

JOAN BRANN, PROJECT DIRECTOR, OAKLAND PARENTS IN ACTION

DEAR JOAN: I just said yes!

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am vastly smarter than virtually everyone I know—at least I think I am.

This troubles me, because shortly after I have begun a conversation with someone—anyone from my dentist to my wife—I begin to realize that they are intellectually inferior, and I regard what they say as only amusing, if not utterly stupid. Yet, I don't want to become an isolated hermit, or associate exclusively with super-intellects. What should I do?

SMART BUT CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: For openers, you could quit rating everyone you meet by where you perceive them to be intellectually. Why not relax your standards a bit, and try harder to find something worthwhile in what your wife has to say—and your dentist as well?

I think your chances for becoming a hermit are infinitely better than associating exclusively with the super-intellects, who may find you more confused than smart.

Biographer Says Myth About Black Doctor Hard To Dispel

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

People love myth and thrive on irony. Dr. Charles E. Wynes, biographer of Dr. Charles Richard Drew, famed black blood bank developer, surgeon and teacher of surgery, believes

"This love, possibly even need, for myth, is why it's difficult, if not impossible, to dispel a rumor-turned-myth that has existed apparently most of the nearly 36 years since Dr. Drew died April 1, 1950," Wynes said.

Wynes, a University of Georgia history professor, discussed the myth during talks presented at East Carolina University on Monday. "The myth is that Dr. Drew, whose work gave the world blood banking and saved countless lives during World War II and since, bled to death outside a 'for whites only' North Carolina hospital which refused to admit him."

In an afternoon talk at Mendenhall Student Center, Dr. Wynes related his research for the biography which has included interviews with Dr. Drew's widow, his four children, his brother, his sister, three black physicians who were with him in the automobile accident which killed him, the doctors who attended him at Burlington's Alamance General Hospital, and a former student, then a Winston-Salem physician, who arrived at the hospital soon after the accident.

All have told him the same story: Dr. Drew, 45, was hopelessly injured when he was thrown from the car he was driving and it rolled over him, inflicting crushing injuries and nearly severing a leg. He had apparently fallen asleep at the wheel of the 1949 Buick, then jerked the wheels back onto the pavement of U.S. 29 near Haw River when one of his passengers yelled 'Hey, Charlie' to wake him up.

His three companions, black physicians bound with him to Tuskegee, Ala., to do volunteer work in a free clinic there, were less seriously injured, though one was admitted to Alamance General, where he remained several days.

It is ironic that the blood bank developer probably bled to death internally, Wynes said. But blood given

State Needs Money For Airports

Power Play?

If Gov. Jim Martin prohibits the Legislature from making appointments to executive branch committees like he's threatening to, the impact on state policy-making could be serious.

Executive branch committees, such as the Child Day Care Commission and the Advisory Budget Commission, are powerful study groups. They bring together a diversity of experience and expertise and lay the ground work for policy-setting in state government. In 1984, legislators served on 56 of 365 of these committees, according to the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research. Appointees of legislators also serve on dozens of these bodies.

Gov. Martin is considering legal action to stop the Legislature from making appointments to these committees, according to the governor's special counsel. Martin says the issue is separation of powers — the Legislature shouldn't be reaching over, he says, and picking the people to serve on a governor's commission. The state Constitution calls for the legislative and executive branches to be separate, Martin's counsel has been quoted as saying, and one branch shouldn't meddle with the other by making appointments.

We detect something here besides a concern over separation of powers. A little power play, perhaps, on the part of the governor and his counsel?

Excuse us, but we didn't know that governor's commissions were exclusively for the executive branch. We thought they were designed to merge a diversity of backgrounds and opinions into a single resource. In our opinion, they can't do this if one person — or one branch of government — controls who sits on them. The legislators — and their appointees — each bring distinctly different skills to these important committees.

Martin may deal with this issue, counsel says, by having executive appointees not recognize the vote of legislative appointees at an executive branch committee meeting. The intent would be to force the legislative appointees to file suit. Not only do we think this move is immature behavior, we also think the legal questions are moot points.

Gov. Martin should continue to rely on his resources in the Legislature for appointments to executive branch committees. A governor's commission bearing only executive-appointed members would be a one-sided commission. One-sided commissions set one-sided policy.

RALEIGH — Here's another item to put on North Carolina's $25 billion list of infrastructure needs: airports.

The state's aviation director told a legislative study committee last month that North Carolina's airports will need $150 million worth of improvements over the next five years. And that figure doesn't include the major airports in Charlotte, the Triad and the Triangle which are generally self-supporting.

For the last several months, Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington has been saying the state needs a dedicated source of revenue for airports. When he was asked to speak to the legislative committee that watches his department, he brought along Will Plentl, state aviation director, to detail the state's airport needs.

Four factors are responsible for the money problems the state's airports now face, Plentl said.

North Carolina has 72 public airports and 40 of them are at least 20 years old, Plentl said. Routine maintenance of those airports has been a local government responsibility. Landing fees, rent and local tax revenues are supposed to cover those costs.

But many of these older airports now face major runway reconstruction, Plentl said. That "exceeds local capacity to finance. In many cases, reconstruction costs will run higher than the original construction costs," he said in an interview. He estimates those current needs at between $5 million and $10 million.

North Carolina is also seeing a tremendous increase in air travel that will create a need for expansion at many airports. Commercial air travel has increased an average of 16 percent a year for the last decade and private air travel 10 percent.

Airlines are moving to feeder-hub systems in which cities like Hickory and Kinston will feed passengers to hubs like Charlotte and Raleigh. The commuter airlines which will do that feeding need good small airports. The administration is also stressing the importance these airports play in the economic development of the non-metropolitan areas of the state.

Some towns either don't have an airport or have one that is totally inadequate. Plentl said the third factor contributing to the airport infrastructure problem is the need for new airports. He estimates a need of 24 new airports, six to nine of them within the next five years.

Finally, as general aviation increases at such a fast pace, there is a need to improve the safety and weather equipment available at smaller airports. That equipment can be expensive.

"There's no way, we recognize, that that kind of money can be handled at the state level," Plentl conceded in reference to the $150 million total. But Harrington says the state can do more for aviation.

In this year's budget, $3.4 million is earmarked for the aviation program. That roughly offsets the amount of sales tax paid on aviation fuel. Harrington wants the sales tax paid on that fuel formally dedicated to the aviation program and he says that more than $3.4 million is needed. (He has not proposed to increase the tax, however.)

Plentl said that however new money is raised for the aviation program, it ought to come from airport users and not the general taxpayer.

Members of the committee took notes and added the figures to the already tabulated needs for state roads, schools, water and sewer lines, and government and university buildings.

Packard Report Awaited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior White House officials are eagerly awaiting the report of a presidential commission that, ironically, could have some embarrassing things to say about the Reagan administration.

The Packard Commission, as it is known, was created last summer by President Reagan to investigate a defense procurement system whose abuses were showing up as ordinary pliers that cost taxpayers hundreds of dollars, kennel costs for industry executives' dogs that were being boarded at public expense and — worst of all — billions of dollars wasted on weapons that didn't work.

With critics and officials alike pointing to one violation after another, it was beginning to appear as though misbehavior and perhaps even criminal misconduct were standard practice in the military-industrial complex that President Dwight D. Eisenhower warned about in his farewell message to the nation a quarter-century ago.

Partly because Reagan was in office when the abuses came to light and also because some critics charged his massive defense buildup made it easy for officials and contractors to circumvent procurement procedures, Reagan was getting a political black eye as the revelations continued.

Former Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard, who came to government during the Nixon administration from the successful Hewlett-Packard high-technology company he helped found, was named by Reagan to head the 15-member commission.

Reagan's executive order creating the panel said, "The primary objective of the commission shall be to study defense management policies and procedures, including the budget process, the procurement system, legislative oversight and the organizational and operational arrangements, both formal and informal, among the office of the secretary of defense, the organization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the unified and specified command system, the military departments and the Congress."

But members of the commission staff acknowledge the panel is driven by the public outcry following horror stories over spare parts and congressional reports suggesting interservice rivalry and poor communication not only lead to inefficiency but could cost lives in combat.

Now, as the commission settles on the draft of its first report, White House officials are hoping it will give them a chance to seize the issue before their opponents can use it to clobber them.

"I think it will provide a good opportunity to get away from the defensive posture relative to that whole issue of waste and inefficiency in the Defense Department," one senior Reagan aide said, speaking on condition he not be identified.

Another source with broad experience in defense matters said the commission report also could lead to money-saving reforms that might help the Pentagon avoid painful program cuts that it otherwise would be forced to accept under the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law.

Others in the White House are known to believe the president should champion any new, progressive ideas the Packard Commission recommends to help rebuild bipartisan support for defense programs such as "Star Wars" missile defense system and the MX intercontinental ballistic missile.

Congressional backing for both programs appears to have eroded in recent months, and Reagan advisers believe Gramm-Rudman and a new round of procurement scandals could combine to increase the pressure for still further cuts in the defense budget.

should be allowed to teach in public schools.

Some of the Democratic Party's most prolific financiers have been reviewing the pack of potential presidential candidates, and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo is high on their list. IMPAC '88, a political action committee formed in late 1984 by fund-raisers for Walter Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., has been addressed by the likes of Cuomo, Hart, Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt. Cuomo's presentation was the most impressive, many of the group's members said, agreeing that Babbitt was the most disappointing.

Addressing a luncheon audience at the recent NCAA convention, Tom Brokaw of NBC News noted that he was flattered to have been invited, "particularly since, for $10,000 and a new convertible you could have had the top running back from SMU." Southern Methodist University is on NCAA probation.

Letdown

We've seen it before: anticipation plus imagination frequently leading to a letdown. In our case Halley's comet became a victim.

Long before the phenomenon reached the range of earthly vision we were avid readers of accounts by those who shared an earlier experience and shivered with awe and delight at pictures depicting a fiery tail extending across the skies for uncountable miles to frighten the superstitious, the unwary and unlettered half out of their wits.

Professionals advised the 1986 visit would be nothing like that shared by the world in 1910. Still, we thought, a comet is a comet; and comets have tails and (hopefully) nobody could really know for sure just what we're going to see because this time it'll be different from experiences of the past.

There are long weeks to go in the heralded visit with nights for the potentially best views yet to come, but the flames of anticipation have turned to ashes.

Those best-viewing nights are still weeks away, but no matter — the dream of witnessing a spectacle is gone. There are feats of man-made Voyager II to keep us warm.

No Medicine For Congress

WASHINGTON — One of the routinely most annoying things about congressmen is their tendency to exempt themselves from the laws they write.

Capitol Hill excluded itself, for example, from the Social Security system and therefore the pain of Social Security taxes. It also passed equal opportunity laws with an exemption for the House and Senate.

The latest evidence of congressional hypocrisy comes in the form of a House bill to curb the hiring of former federal officials by foreign governments and businesses. The measure, sponsored by Democratic Reps. Marcy Kaptur of Ohio and Howard Wolpe of Michigan, would prohibit Cabinet members, White House staffers and most presidential appointees from representing foreign interests for at least 10 years after leaving public service. Neither congressmen nor their staff members would be subject to the bill's prohibitions.

On one hand, Kaptur and Wolpe have hit on a good idea. Washington's "revolving door" syndrome, which has long marked relations between the Pentagon and military contractors, has become a major byproduct of America's regulation of international trade and finance. Seeking favorable U.S. treatment on tariffs, loans and grants of aid, foreign governments and companies have hired scores of former American bureaucrats to open doors and lend expertise learned in public service.

Oftentimes the syndrome has placed American officials of such agencies as the office of the U.S. trade representative face-to-face with their future employers.

Some critics argue that the only practical solution is stricter enforcement of the Ethics in Government and Foreign Agents Registration Acts. Both laws involve bans and disclosure requirements, to which neither the federal government nor foreign lobbyists pay serious attention.

But Capitol Hill is one of the biggest sources of new blood for the lobbying community. If the revolving door is a problem, it won't be remedied until Congress subjects itself to its own medicine.

The Republican National Committee was much criticized recently for authoring a poll designed to measure public opinion of Vice President George Bush. Although Bush partisans insisted that questions related to the vice president had been merely "piggy-backed" onto a survey on terrorism, a quick look at the survey proved the contrary. Some critics still say Bush should pay for the poll out of his own pocket.

But in the uproar, one of the poll's most disconcerting findings went virtually unnoticed. When asked to name the person they felt warmest toward, respondents named former U.N. ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick after President Reagan and Chrysler Corp. chairman Lee Iacocca.

Education Secretary William Bennett has been treading on thin ice recently — at least from the point of view of American conservatives. In January he told the Washington Times that "a person can be educated without ... acknowledging God as the center of the universe." He also declared that homosexuals

Strength For Today

Let people have their own individuality. Sometimes we hammer at them, trying to change them and bring them into what we consider a proper image. Parents are often guilty of this vice.

There has to be discipline, of course, in every area of life. All branches of the military require discipline, for without it the whole military organization would go to pieces. There are men in the business world who control the policies of thousands of persons beneath them, and this is not always bad. It depends on whether the man at the top has common sense, character, and the saving grace of humility.

It sometimes takes restraint on our part to let other people express themselves frankly. But people who are really successful have mastered the art of letting others express their personality, and they gain wisdom from participating in the experience.

Reagan To Call For Welfare Overhaul

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After a week's delay due to the shuttle Challenger explosion, President Reagan goes before Congress tonight to deliver a State of the Union address calling for welfare overhaul, catastrophic health insurance and revamping of the international monetary system.

The half-hour speech to a joint session of the House and Senate will be carried live by the major radio and television networks beginning at 8 p.m. EST.
Aides have said Reagan will use the speech to "redefine the role of government" for the rest of the century. As part of that, they said, he will order yearlong studies designed to develop proposals for revising federal programs for the needy, initiate a program to protect all Americans from the costs of catastrophic illness and deal with uncontrolled currency fluctuations that aggravate the U.S. trade deficit.

Two officials who agreed to discuss the administration plans said the studies would be modeled after the Treasury Department's analysis of the income tax system, which Reagan called for in his 1984 State of the Union address and which led to his proposal to overhaul the tax system.

A House version of that proposal was adopted at the end of the year, and the Senate is giving the issue top priority now.

The administration officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, said Reagan's fifth State of the Union would emphasize his concern for the American family.
Rather than calling for national sacrifice to meet the stringent spending cuts required by the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law, Reagan is expected to stress the importance of the family budget rather than the federal budget.
The sources said Reagan would take a "pro-family" approach to overhauling welfare programs and related services, proposing to eliminate provisions that tend to encourage the breakup of families and calling for incentives to encourage the poor to overcome their dependence on government aid.
The Reagan study would encompass not only Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the principal federal-state program that provides cash assistance to the poor, but many other programs that provide assistance based on peoples' needs.

TRW FIRE — Firemen on an aerial ladder aim water into a burning TRW manufacturing plant in Harrisburg, Pa., Monday night. Firefighters brought the fire under control early today, averting the scheduled evacuation of more than 16,000 people. (AP Laserphoto)

Plant Fire Controlled

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — An eight-alarm fire that burned through a jet engine parts plant less than a mile from the Capitol was brought under control today, averting the evacuation of 16,000 people, officials said.
Officials feared the fire at TRW's turbine airfoils division might reach a variety of chemicals at the plant and send a noxious cloud of chemicals over sections of the city.
The fire broke out shortly after 7 p.m. and was declared under control about 12:30 a.m., city officials said. A state of emergency, declared as a precaution, was called off 10 minutes later.
"At the moment, no threat to the public health and safety exists,"

Mayor Stephen Reed said.
Some chemicals seemed to have burned, said Reed, who monitored the fire from a command post on plant grounds.
Water mixed with 1,000 gallons of nitric acid and flowed into the adjacent Paxton Creek, but this did not pose a health threat because water supplies aren't drawn from the creek, the mayor said.
Residents within two miles of the plant were urged to stay inside their homes and keep windows closed. Every available piece of fire equipment in five counties was called to the scene.
The fire started in a piece of machinery and spread quickly, said Norm Marriott, a plant security officer.

"I tried to beat it down with (carbon dioxide) but it was too far gone," Marriott said. "It went straight up and out the catwalk both ways."
He said he ordered the evacuation of workers, and everyone got out safely. Two transformers exploded, he said.
Among the substances stored at the plant were substantial amounts of oil and liquid sodium hydroxide, diluted sulfuric hydrochloric acid, diluted and concentrated sulfuric acid, phosphoric acid, sodium-hydroxide powder and zirconium oxide powder.
Reed said he would meet with TRW executives today and urge that they keep the plant, which employs 814 people, in the city. A portion of the plant has been up for sale, he said.

Jet Tests Ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airlines flying older Boeing 747s have begun special inspections of the jumbo jets after the Federal Aviation Administration determined there might be severe cracks in the main frame of some of the huge planes.
The FAA ordered inspections on as many as 160 of the Boeing 747s flying in the United States and advised foreign carriers to do likewise after routine maintenance uncovered cracks in the frame, or rib cage, of four jumbo jets.
In one case, the FAA said, three adjacent frames were found "to be essentially severed" — a condition that "could lead to rapid decompression of the fuselage ... and possible loss of the aircraft."
Spokesmen for a number of air carriers, including Pan American World Airways, United Airlines and Northwest Airlines, said Monday the inspections already were under way and were not expected to disrupt service. They all said the initial findings revealed no cracking problems.
The FAA directive, sent to the airlines during the weekend, calls for Boeing 747s with more than 14,000 landings to be inspected.

East-West Prisoner Exchange Rumored

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A Western government source says a prisoner exchange between East and West that has been reported to include Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky will take place next week on a Berlin bridge.

The White House and West German officials have refused to comment on the reports, which began with a story in Monday's edition of the West German newspaper Bild.

But the Western government source in West Germany said Monday that a prisoner exchange would take place, and Israel radio said the United States had informed Israel that Shcharansky would be freed in three days as part of the swap. Israel radio said the Reagan administration sent a message about the plan to Prime Minister Shimon Peres and Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, but Shamir today denied the report.

"Until this moment we have nothing. I don't know anything about it. I would like to believe it's true," Shamir said in an interview with The Associated Press in Jerusalem.

But he said he would not attach any political importance to the reported swap.

"The release of Shcharansky and maybe some others will be a move of P.R. (public relations) to make Western public opinion more forthcoming toward Russia," he said.

Other Israeli officials in Jerusalem, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the deal involved 12 prisoners held in Western countries to be exchanged for Shcharansky and perhaps one or two other people, whom they did not identify.

Shcharansky's wife Avital, who has campaigned worldwide for her husband's release, was not at her Jerusalem home Monday. The radio said she would meet her husband in West Germany.

A source in Bonn who is in a position to know the details of an exchange said it would take place Feb.

11 on the Glienicke Bridge linking Potsdam in East Germany with West Berlin. It will involve both spies and East bloc dissidents, he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The source would not say whether the Jewish dissident was involved in the swap.

Shcharansky, 38, was a leader of the Soviet human rights movement in the 1970s. He was sentenced to 13 years in prison after being convicted in 1978 on charges, which he denied, of passing intelligence to foreign countries.

His family says his health has deteriorated during his imprisonment.

Bild said Soviet bloc agents — it did not specify how many — would be exchanged for Shcharansky and 12 former Western undercover agents. The mass-circulation paper, which is known to have good Soviet sources, quoted "ranking Soviet sources."

The New York Times quoted unidentified U.S. government officials in its Monday editions as saying U.S. and Soviet officials had agreed to an exchange including Shcharansky and seven to nine other people.

Friedhelm Ost, chief West German government spokesman, refused comment at a news conference Monday afternoon, but he indicated there might be an announcement later.

Bild said the trade was arranged in "months of negotiations" and described it as one of the biggest of its kind.

It said the Soviet bloc agents imprisoned in West Germany and the United States would be released to Soviet and East German authorities. Former agents for West Germany would be freed from East German prisons, Bild said.

The Glienicke bridge was the site of a large East-West exchange last June. It involved 25 people who had been imprisoned by East Germany and Poland, and four convicted or indicted as spies in the United States.

THUMBS DOWN — Corazon "Cory" Aquino shows thumbs-down signs to supporters as they greeted her during a campaign appearance Monday for this week's elections in the Philippines. She has rejected an offer by incumbent President Ferdinand Marcos to debate, but says she would appear with him on ABC's "Nightline." (AP Laserphoto)

Marcos Calls For Debate, Aquino Wants Session On ABC 'Nightline'

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos today issued a surprise challenge to opposition candidate Corazon Aquino to debate him in a nationwide broadcast during the final 36 hours of their campaign.

But Mrs. Aquino quickly rejected the challenge, offering instead to appear live with Marcos on the ABC-TV program "Nightline," and to move the broadcast up a day to avoid conflict with Philippine election laws.

Mrs. Aquino proposed, but did not insist, that the program be broadcast simultaneously on all Filipino radio and TV stations.

At the same time, however, she called it "a national disgrace" that the Philippines should have to rely on a foreign network to provide a neutral TV forum for political candidates.

"This is the price of years of Marcos censorship of the media," she said in a statement relayed to reporters by telephone. There was no immediate response from Marcos to the counter-offer.

Marcos had offered to appear with Mrs. Aquino, who he never has met, shortly after the head of the National Election Commission said that a scheduled joint appearance on "Nightline" would be illegal.

"I invite my opponent to a simple dialogue — no scenario, no scripts, no reading of notes," Marcos said during a campaign speech to the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and foreign guests.

The president repeatedly referred to the meeting as a debate, and said it could take place either tonight or Wednesday.

The election will be held Friday, and Philippine election law requires that all campaigning end at midnight Wednesday.

Marcos noted that he had been accused of trying to avoid a debate. "Let's put this to bed. I have lived in a hostile atmosphere my whole life and I'm happy I have been challenged to debate with her," he said. "I'm trembling all over because of this debate."

Earlier in the day, Victorino A. Savellano, the chairman of the election commission, said the appearance of the two candidates on "Nightline" would violate a ban on election eve political activity.

However, a spokeswoman for the ABC television program said today that there had been no change in the network's plans to broadcast the program at 11:30 p.m. Wednesday Eastern Standard Time, which is Thursday noon in the Philippines.

"Their rules don't control what they do in the U.S.," Laurie Wessner said. "It's status quo as far as I'm concerned until I learn differently from our producers in the Philippines."

She said both candidates still were committed to appearing on the program.

Savellano said it did not matter that the program was not scheduled to be broadcast in the Philippines. "I am not concerned about Americans. I am concerned about Filipinos following the law," he said.

Marcos proposed that he debate Mrs. Aquino on the breakfast-hour "Good Morning, Manila," program Wednesday, but said it could be moved to accommodate Mrs. Aquino.

He said all five Manila television stations could carry it, and that if none wanted to he would order the information minister to pay for air time.

Meanwhile, the military officer in charge of election security said today that 47 people had been killed in campaign violence this year, far fewer than the number slain in previous campaigns.

Lt. Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, the deputy armed forces commander and a close associate of Marcos, told a news conference that the military has a list of 2,544 villages and neighborhoods where there may be trouble in Friday's balloting.

He said the military considered 394 villages "highly probable" trouble spots and another 2,150 "probable" trouble spots. Ramos commands a 119,000-member force charged with keeping peace during the election.

Elections in the Philippines historically have been marked by widespread voting fraud and outbreaks of violence, often aimed at disrupting the voting process.

Official concern this time is heightened by the activities of a growing communist insurgency that has spread to nearly all of the island nation's 74 provinces. Mrs. Aquino's supporters also accuse the Marcos campaign of planning to rig the election, while Marcos claims that the communists back Mrs. Aquino.

Ramos told reporters that among the victims were 10 opposition workers, 20 workers for the Marcos campaign, and 17 people whose political ties had not been determined.

The military listed 62 election-related incidents, of which 27 were violent. During a comparable period in 1980 local elections there were 80 such incidents, in 1981 presidential elections there were 178, and in the 1984 national assembly election there were 918, Ramos said.

The Police Department issues permits for parades and non-profit solicitations.

Reagan Cancels Sale To Jordan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, faced with overwhelming congressional opposition to an arms sale to Jordan, has decided to withdraw the proposed sale of 40 jet fighter planes and batteries of mobile missiles to the Israeli foe.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz informed Congress in a letter Monday the controversial $1.9 billion deal would be postponed indefinitely.

He praised King Hussein as courageous and firmly committed to seeking peace with Israel. But Shultz said the administration understood Congress wanted to see negotiations started before sending new weapons to Jordan.

He took the step in a letter to Sen. Richard Lugar, the Indiana Republican who is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

It was not immediately clear whether diehard opponents would try to force a vote in the House and Senate anyhow. They are believed to have more than enough votes to kill the sale.

But a knowledgeable observer, who insisted on anonymity, said he was convinced Congress would go along with the administration and postpone consideration.

"The deal is done," he said. Shultz promised in the letter to give Congress 30 days' notice before trying to revive the weapons purchase. He also said the administration would not make such an attempt if Congress was out of session.

"The administration will only proceed with the Jordan arms sale after offering Congress adequate time to further review and debate fully the issues involved," Shultz wrote. He said he acted at the direction of President Reagan.

This was the second time the administration had to give up on the deal because of overwhelming congressional opposition. The sale was postponed last year.

Foes are concerned about Israel's security and skeptical that Hussein really wants to make peace with the Jewish state.

"We believe the peace process is crucial to U.S. interests in the region and we strongly support President Reagan's policy of direct negotiations (between the Arabs and Israel)," said the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a pro-Israel lobbying group that had fought the sale.

"It's helpful to remove the question of arms from the discussion of peace. First let the peacemakers do their work before sending in the arms merchants," the statement said.

Last year, American, Egyptian and Jordanian officials predicted negotiations.

Israeli Jets Force Libyan Plane To Land

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli air force warplanes intercepted a Libyan executive jet today in an apparent attempt to capture Palestinian leaders and forced it to land in northern Israel, the military command announced.

The command said it intercepted the jet believing it was "carrying people involved in planning attacks against Israel."

But there apparently were no guerrillas aboard the Grumman Gulf Stream II plane, which carried nine passengers and three crew members, according to sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"They didn't find who they were looking for," said one source, adding that all 12 people would be freed.

"A check of the plane and passengers was carried out, and the plane will be released," the command announcement said. "The passengers and the plane are receiving proper treatment."

Israel radio said the plane had landed at an air force base in northern Israel. State-run Tripoli radio, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, reported the Israeli jet fighters intercepted the plane on a flight to Damascus, Syria, from Tripoli, Libya where several Palestinian guerrilla leaders attended a weekend meeting.

The broadcast said Abdullah al-Ahmar, assistant secretary general of Syria's ruling Socialist Baath Party, was among the passengers of the plane, but did not mention who the others might be.

It quoted Libya's official JANA news agency as accusing the United States of assisting in the interception by "Jewish air pirates."

"Vessels of the U.S. Navy which had been maneuvering off the Libyan coast provided the information about the Libyan plane to the air pirates," the radio quoted JANA as saying.

The U.S. Navy has been conducting maneuvers off the Libyan coast after the United States and Israel accused Libya providing support to the Abu Nidal terrorist group that claimed to have attacked the Rome and Vienna airports Dec. 27. Those attacks claimed 20 lives, including five Americans and four terrorists.

In Washington, Secretary of State George Shultz was asked at a congressional hearing about the report of the interception. "I haven't heard that, senator. No," Shultz replied to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Today Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said in Jerusalem during an interview with The Associated Press, "the time will come" when Israel will track down Abu Nidal, whose real name is Sabry al-Banna.

Search For Shuttle Debris Centers On Ocean's Floor

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The search for wreckage of the space shuttle Challenger focused on the bottom of the sea today as the surface search was cut back significantly because so little floating debris is being found.

"The search has been scaled back today," said Lt. Cmdr. James Simpson, a spokesman for the Coast Guard, which is directing the search.

He said that only four Coast Guard cutters, four planes and two helicopters were scouring the surface today. That is a drop from the 15 ships and 10 aircraft that were on the scene Monday.

Two NASA ships with sonar and robot submarines that can see "hundreds of times better than the human eye" continued scanning the ocean bottom about 85 miles northeast of here for the shuttle's cabin or what remains of it and other parts of the broken ship.

Simpson said 12 tons of floating debris had been retrieved and taken to a hangar at the Kennedy Space Center where it is being examined. That's a fraction of the 123-ton weight of the shuttle and its cargo.

Members of an interim investigation board continued studying debris and data to support the presidential panel named to find out "how it happened and how it can be prevented from happening again."

The board as such was disbanded when President Reagan named the panel Monday. But the members, many of whom were very close to the shuttle program, will continue the probe they began within hours after the disaster that happened a week ago today.

NASA spokesman Hugh Harris said the interim board members would release no information until they had met with the presidential commission. Shuttle director Jesse Moore, who had headed the board, was to fly to Washington today, and the commission is to hold its first meeting there Thursday.

Human body parts recovered from the Atlantic Ocean, meanwhile were being examined to determine if they were remains of any of the seven astronauts, sources said Monday.

The interim board, which had been headed by shuttle director Jesse Moore, established teams of specialists to examine the photographs, recorded radio data, background and other information on each of Challenger's systems. These panels will continue their work.

The job of the presidential commission will be to oversee the investigation and review the findings, call on outside experts for analyses and then draw conclusions and make recommendations.

"As we move away from that terrible day," the president said, "we must devote our energies to finding out how it happened and how it can be prevented from happening again."

Reagan's action relieved the National Aeronautics and Space Administration of the job of investigating itself and handed the responsibility to a board "with no ax to grind either way."

Many congressmen had been pressing for an independent panel that would not have to answer to the space agency, but White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the appointment "in no way reflects" on the effort by NASA.

Heading the commission is William P. Rogers, secretary of state during the Nixon administration. The vice chairman is former astronaut Neil Armstrong, the first man to walk on the moon.

Other members include Chuck Yeager, the first man to break the sound barrier; Sally Ride, America's first woman in space who will represent the interests of the astronauts; scientists, government officials, technical experts and executives.

Reagan told the group to issue a report within 120 days.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, reported that some body parts had been recovered from the ocean near here and that they were being examined to determine if they were remains of any of the astronauts.

NASA has acknowledged that only one bone fragment was found last week and has not reported on its examination.

At the White House ceremony introducing the new board, NASA acting director William R. Graham refused to comment directly on the report.

West Explains Two State Programs To School Panel

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Two state-mandated programs that will significantly change the pattern of public schools in North Carolina were brought to the attention of the Greenville Board of Education at its February meeting Monday night by Superintendent Eddie West.

One is a summer school program that will require summer school pleted or are in the process of upgrading their land records systems, and said Landmark has done about 40 percent of them. He said Landmark is among the nation's best at photogrammetric engineering — the art of making precise measurements from photographs.

Because the mapping work is considered a professional service contract, commissioners are not required to accept the lowest bid.

The sequence for updating the county's land records involves first making aerial photographs of the entire county. Then by using ground surveys to locate reference points and record scale and elevation points, orthophotos — which are photos that have been corrected for scale — can be made.

After the orthophotos are produced, cadastral maps, which provide precise boundaries for land parcels, and soils maps, which show what type of soil is at a particular site, are produced.

Commissioners delayed action on approved bids for additions to the two high schools after school Superintendent Eddie West reported the low bids for the two additions totaled $3.07 million, not including a bid of $431,247 for casework for science and homemaking labs. Estimated costs of the projects had been $3 million.

In other business Monday, commissioners gave formal approval to the lease of 7½ acres of land across Moye Boulevard from Pitt County Memorial Hospital to the hospital for a parking lot and approved locating a storage building for the hospital on other county property; approved an 8,000 square foot addition to a metal building at the hospital to house a new computer system, at a cost of $350,000, and gave approval for the issuing of $9.5 million in industrial revenue bonds for Standard Register Co.

The board also agreed not to accept an offer from the city of Greenville to purchase a site on 14th Street for a farmers market; named County Engineer Phil Dickerson and County Planning Board Chairman Earl Keel to a joint city-county group to study proposals for the creation of an East Carolina Medical Park, and approved the purchase of a riding lawnmower and a sweeper — for $17,943 — to be used in maintaining the county solid waste container sites.

Dickerson noted that the county now pays some $16,000 per year to private contractors for container site clean-up. He said that, with the new equipment, the county will be able to maintain all sites with county employees.

County Agricultural Extension Service Chairman Leroy James reported that income from tobacco in Pitt County last year totaled some $41.7 million, down from $52.6 million

"Does that (practice) add an air of legitimacy in an environment conducive to a violation of alcoholic beverage control laws? Does working as a used car salesman add an air of legitimacy to a violation of the motor vehicle laws?" Mattox added.

Saying he recognized the political nature of the subject, Mattox said he was bringing the matter before the Council because city policy states that Council approval is needed for changes and additions to the police department's standard operating procedure manual. "Apparently a decision has been made by the chief and ratified by the city manager" without Council approval, Mattox contended.

"I do not feel the chief is deliberately misusing power or that the city manager has conspired with him," Mattox said. He added, however, that to acquiesce would "create a dangerous precedent that should not go unchallenged."

Stating that his client was a "good citizen" who was operating a legitimate business in a lawful manner, Mattox urged the Council not to condone such "arbitrary and unnecessary restrictions upon lawful activities" by the police chief and city manager.

In an interview this morning, Mrs. Meeks said the decision not to allow off-duty police officers to work at the bingo parlor "was not a hasty one. It was thought out and was made in the best interests of the city and our law enforcement agency."

Mattox said that since off-duty police officers were withdrawn from the Hallow payroll, there have been at least two incidents at the bingo parlor. "One of these involved the mugging of a lady in the parking lot by a purse snatcher."

"Our citizens have the right to expect to come and go safely in our community. Our policemen are trained as law enforcement officers and are better qualified to ensure the public safety than anyone else ... (and) as we all know, the simple presence of an off-duty officer will tend to keep those of evil intent away," he said.

Recent action by the North Carolina General Assembly legalized bingo games and raffles. Hallow conducts "beach bingo" games at his 10th street establishment. Beach Bingo games are those that do not offer prizes in excess of $10 per game.

one for elementary grades at Wahl-Coates and the high school summer program at Rose High.

A provision in the summer school program gives parents of children scoring below the minimum percentile a choice of having their children attend the summer school or not attending and being retained in the same grade level in the coming school year.

Charles Ross, director of education for the city schools, said the program will require immediate studies of scores, teacher availability, programming of courses, and transportation needs for such a program.

The second mandated program is that of implementation, beginning with school year 1986-87, of a 5.5 hour instructional day. This, West explained, will entail considerable changes in curricula scheduling, changes in some operational procedures, and arrangements of non-study activities to fit into the schedule.

Both these mandated changes, Ross said, will most likely result in a need for additional teacher personnel, and a major rescheduling of transportation needs.

The two matters will be discussed in more detail at future board meetings.

Dr. West presented a summary of low bids for construction of additions at D.H. Conley and North Pitt High Schools.

The summary shows: general contract, $2,012,209; plumbing contract, $205,870; HVAC contract, $427,797, and electrical contract, $259,975, for a total of $2,905,851.

Only two bids were received for casework, with bids for that item being let again.

Since the money for the bids is coming from capital reserve funds for both city and county schools, both school boards need to act on accepting the bids. Approval was given by the city board Monday night.

In personnel matters, approval was given in the certificated personnel category to four resignations; a leave of absence; two transfers, and the hiring of seven new employees. In the classified personnel area, there were two resignations, two leaves of absence and the hiring of four new personnel.

A resolution was passed acknowledging the week of Feb. 2-7 as National School Guidance and Counseling Week, and congratulations were extended to Patricia Mitchell on being selected the school system's "Teacher of the Year" for the 1986-87 school year. She is a third grade teacher at Pactolus Elementary School.

In executive session, the board discussed property matters, but no action was taken as a result of the discussions.

in 1984, while gross farm income in 1985 amounted to $105 million as compared with $123 million in 1984.

James said that for the first time in history, income from poultry exceeded tobacco income statewide in 1985.

County Tax Collector Bill Smith reported that $7.8 million was collected during the month of January. County Finance Officer Margaret Roberts noted that as of Jan 31, $14.19 million or 86 percent of the total $16.52 million 1985 tax levy had been collected.

In a discussion of county landfill operations, Dickerson told commissioners that if the landfill were moved to a new site, it would cost an additional $1.2 million to $1.5 million a year because of a requirement to line new landfills. He also suggested that if the county were to move to the use of an incinerator rather than a landfill for solid waste disposal, the additional cost would be $4 million to $4.5 million a year.

He said the present landfill is projected to last another 14 to 15 years.

If CT&T receives approval from the North Carolina Utilities Commission to go ahead with extended area service, Greenville residents will pay 43 cents for the service, while city businesses will pay $1.07, telephone company officials said today. The charge in Ayden will be 49 cents per residence and $1.16 per business. Grifton residents will pay $1.99 per household and $4.80 for businesses.

Council members speaking out against Ms. Jenkin's motion to reconsider the city's position on extended service included Janice Buck and Ed Carter.

Ms. Buck said the former Council was looking at a "broader picture" when it passed the resolution last October urging CT&T to extend the local call area to Grifton.

Carter concurred with Ms. Buck, saying he could not "divorce" himself from the rest of the county and that extended service would be in the best interest of the city and county because it would serve as a uniting force.

Carter also said it was "ludicrous" for residents of outlying county townships to have to pay for long distance calls to "find out what their children are doing."

Ms. Buck and Carter added that they were in favor of the service despite results of a recent mail-in poll conducted by CT&T showing that a majority of Greenville residents were against the service. Ayden and Grifton residents were in favor of extended area service.

Of the 57.1 percent of Grifton residents who voted in the poll, 977 were for the service and 101 were against it.

In Ayden, of the 35.8 percent of customers who voted, 920 were for and 382 were against.

Voting against the proposal were 8,279 Greenville residents. City residents voting in favor of the service totaled 2,785. About 35.8 percent of Greenville customers participated in the poll.

Supporting Ms. Buck's and Carter's stand on the issue were Council members William Hadden and Inez Fridley. Councilwoman Lorraine Shinn was not at the meeting.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average reached 1,600 for the first time today as the stock market continued its recent upsurge.

Analysts said enthusiasm over falling oil prices and a strengthening economy kept the bull market going strong.

Dow Jones's average of 30 blue chips touched 1,600 briefly in early trading, then slipped back by 10:30 a.m. on Wall Street to 1,596.90, up 2.63 from Monday's close.

Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

him did no good because the vena cava, the major vessel returning blood to the heart, was severed. And there were many other injuries.

Nevertheless, the doctors in Burlington worked to save him and were consulting with physicians at Duke University Medical Center when he died, Wynes said.

Wynes said that the myth relating to his death not only has been spread by word of mouth, but has appeared in a history book which, in a later edition, deleted it; in a Time Magazine article in 1968; on the television show, M*A*S*H, and in a New York Times article as late as 1981. No wonder it's widely believed, he said, though Dr. Drew's family and colleagues have tried repeatedly to dispel it in numerous articles and interviews.

He said he believes that one reason the story persists is that Dr. Drew has become a symbol for patients of minority ethnic backgrounds who may have been less than first-class treatment in hospitals during racial segregation.

In his earlier lecture at the ECU Medical School, Wynes detailed the life of Dr. Drew, who was born into a middle-class black family in Washington, D.C., and educated at Amherst College and McGill University. He said Drew excelled at everything from football to scientific research and brought out his humanity and his genius. He said he has material for additional papers, including letters written to his wife, Lenora, and letters to students that Wynes said Drew wanted to be remembered, he told others more than once, not for his blood bank work done prior to and while he headed the United States' Blood for Britain program during World War II, nor for prowess as a running back at Amherst and McGill, but for his surgical ability and his teaching of so many board-certified surgeons at Howard University.

Council Delays Proposal

Greenville City Council members said Monday they needed more information before they would agree to endorse a proposal to shift funding responsibilities for the Highway Patrol and driver's education programs from the state highway budget to the General Fund.

The decision to carry consideration of the proposal over until the Council's Feb. 24 workshop came after state Board of Transportation member Randy Doub petitioned the Council to add its stamp of approval to the plan.

According to Doub, the shift in funding responsibilities is needed to allow the highway fund to keep pace with growing state traffic needs.

Transferring Highway Patrol and driver's education programs to the General Fund would free up about $85 million that Doub said is needed to meet an expected highway budget shortfall of $100 million.

Doub said the programs could be funded out of the General Fund surplus, which is expected to total $290 million this year.

Thelma Lennon paid the expenses of last year's trip by means of money orders written on her personal account," Fickling said. Mrs. Lennon at that time was a special assistant administrator, working with grants, in the state Department of Public Instruction.

Reeves McGlohon, a spokesman for the department, said today that "Mrs. Lennon has been placed on suspension without pay until the final report of the audit being conducted is concluded. She was placed on suspension on Jan. 10."

"I am not surprised at all at Dr. Phillips' recommendation. It seems to be typical of his laissez-faire attitude about this matter. He told one of our people, Penny Laing, a week and a half ago that Thelma Lennon's writing the money orders from her personal funds for the expenses of the last year's trip was simply a bad misjudgment on her part."

"I can't accept that," Fickling said. "I have written Phillips asking for a public disclosure of the investigation."

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Flanagan Funeral Home.

Navy Surge Pushes Past Pirates

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — East Carolina University held all-America candidate David Robinson to his lowest total of the year, 11 points, but couldn't stop the combined effort to defending champion Navy last night. Navy pulled away in the second half to take a 71-56 Colonial Athletic Association basketball victory over the Pirates.

Seahawks Top Eagles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bobby Jo Springer scored 27 points and teammate Brian Rowsom grabbed 13 rebounds to lead North Carolina-Wilmington to a 74-56 victory over American in Colonial Athletic Association basketball Monday.

The Seahawks took advantage of some hot shooting in the second half, connecting on 63 percent of the shots. North Carolina hit 52 percent of their shots from the floor and made 20 of 27 attempts from the free throw line. The Eagles shot 35 percent from the floor.

American guard Frank Ross, the league's leading scorer, netted 20 points in a losing effort. The Eagles fell to 7-13 and 1-8 after losing their eighth straight game.

Rowson scored 16 points as did Charles Cherry for the Seahawks, who improved to 13-9 and 4-5.

The game marked the second time the two teams have met this year. The Eagles won a 76-to-69 victory over the Aggies on Jan. 6.

troubles offensively, he nevertheless continued his fine work defensively, blocking ten shots. He also pulled away ten rebounds. However, he fouled out with just under five minutes to go.

The 11 points did allow him to keep his double figure scoring streak alive, now at 54 straight games.

And while Robinson was being slowed, Vernon Butler picked up the slack, scoring a game high 28 points.

Navy shot well in the contest, making 54.5 percent of its shots for the night while the Pirates were only making 36.8 of theirs. That was one of the big differences in the game.

"I thought we played hard," Pirate

Coach Charlie Harrison said. "But I thought we were too anxious when we got behind. We didn't score well on our press and you can't press if you can't score."

Harrison said the Pirates were successful in getting the ball inside, too, but didn't get much out of it. "We got a little out of our game plan—we didn't score sometimes when we had a chance to. They shot well and got some awfully good breaks. We made some shots from the outside, but missed some from 12 and 8 feet. I thought our guys gave a good effort and played very well in spots."

Navy took the initial lead in the game and worked up an 8-4 lead before Marchell Henry scored for the Pirates—Henry had the first eight. The Middies then opened the lead to 15-10 on Carl Liebert's layup, and stretched the margin to nine midway the half at 19-10 when Liebert again scored.

Curt Vanderhorst and Henry both scored to close it to 19-14 and after another pair of Navy scores, Vanderhorst and Keith Sledge both hit to make it 23-20. Kaylor Whitaker came up with some key buckets for the Midshipmen, but Sledge's basket cut it to 27-26. Whitaker kept them up, 29-26, but Henry scored with one second remaining to make it 29-28 at the half.

In the second half, however, Navy was able to take command. Butler and Robinson hit to open up a 36-32 lead, and after it reached 39-35, Navy scored eight straight points as the Pirates went six minutes without a point before Sledge scored on an alley-oop with 9:10 remaining. That cut the lead to 47-36.

Navy built up its biggest lead at 58-41 on a Butler basket with 5:08 left, but Robinson fouled out shortly after that as the Pirates were in the midst of scoring five straight points to cut the lead to 59-46.

The Pirates then went to a full court man-to-man press and succeeded in getting the ball on a number of occasions, but missed the shots. Navy was able to break loose on several occasions to get the ball to Butler for easy baskets as he made four buckets during the final few minutes.

Whitaker added 16 points for the Midshipmen while Liebert had ten.

East Carolina was led by Henry with 17 while Vanderhorst had 12 and Sledge had ten. Henry led ECU on the boards with ten.

The win boosted Navy's Colonial record to 8-1. They are 17-4 overall. East Carolina falls to 5-4 in conference play after suffering their first loss in four outings in the league. They are 10-10 overall.

The loss also knocked the Pirates out of a tie for third in the league as George Mason moved into sole possession of third with a 67-49 win over William & Mary.

East Carolina plays at Winston-Salem on Wednesday against non-conference foe Wake Forest, then returns home on Saturday for a CAA game against league-leading Richmond.

Irish 'Hold' Bias, Gain 69-62 Win

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Holding top-scoring Len Bias of Maryland to a game-high 25 points became a victory of sorts for the Notre Dame defense.

"One of our main concerns was not to let Bias get started, and by that I mean not to let him score 40 points," Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said after the Irish 69-62 victory Monday over Maryland in a non-conference college basketball game.

"Basically, we kind of slowed him down. We didn't bring him to a complete stop," Notre Dame's David Rivers said.

Bias was averaging 23 points a game before Monday's contest, which put him 14th on the list of NCAA individual scorers.

That made him worth the extra effort.

"We threw a fresh body at Bias every chance and tried to tire him out," said center Tim Kempton, who took one of the turns against the senior forward.

"Bias gets that kind of coverage often," Maryland Coach Charles "Lefty" Driesell said. "We just didn't play well the second half."

The No. 14 Irish did, with Rivers' 18 points leading the way, Mark Stevenson tallying 16 and Ken Barlow hitting for 18.

"That's a good feeling when the shots fall and you keep the lead when you have it," Barlow said.

Notre Dame hit 26 of 43 from the field and 17-21 from the free throw line, while the Terrapins totaled 27-51 and 8-13.

John Johnson and Tom Jones added 12 apiece for Maryland, 11-10, while Mark Stevenson scored 16 and Barlow added 14 for Notre Dame.

With the scored tied at 43, Notre Dame outshot the Terrapins, 12-3, six each from Rivers and Barlow, in a critical five-minute period for a 55-46 lead from which Maryland never recovered.

The Terrapins managed twice to trim the margin to seven points before the buzzer.

Maryland battled Notre Dame to a 33-33 tie at the half when Lewis hit an eight-foot jumper in the lane as the buzzer sounded.

The halftime tie was the fifth of the Terrapins caught the Irish after briefly holding a 1-0 lead on a Lewis freethrow.

Notre Dame used Jim Dolan in a man-to-man defense and later shifted to a zone to hold Bias to four points in the first 10 minutes. But Bias broke loose in the final seven minutes, hitting eight, including six points in three minutes to dissolve a Notre Dame lead for a 29-29 tie.

The Terrapins substituted early to bring more size against the bigger Irish, who started 6-foot-8, 230 pound Dolan in place of team captain Barlow. Notre Dame, however, held a 14-10 edge in rebounds at the half.

The girls' game will be played first because of commitment by the Rocky Mount coach, starting at 4:30 p.m. That will be followed at approximately 6 p.m. by the junior varsity, with the varsity teams playing at around 7:45 p.m.

North Carolina Retains First On AP's Cage Poll

By The Associated Press
For 15 years, the Western Kentucky Hilltoppers had to look up to see the Top 20 college basketball teams in America.

On Monday night, Western Kentucky celebrated its first appearance in the national rankings since 1971 with a 51-46 victory over Jacksonville, improving the Hilltoppers' record to 18-3.

"It is quite an honor to be ranked," Coach Clem Haskins said of his 19th-ranked team. "Our hard work of the last few years may be beginning to pay off. It's good for the university, but we can't afford to get wrapped up in the polls. We need to keep a low profile, get well prepared to play each time out, and play them one game at a time. The one thing the rankings do for you is get teams motivated to play harder against you."

The last time the Hilltoppers were ranked, they reached the Final Four and were No. 7 at season's end.

Meanwhile, North Carolina remained atop The Associated Press' rankings despite its first loss of the season last week.

After winning their first 21 games of the season, the Tar Heels fell 86-73 at Virginia last Thursday, then beat Clemson 85-67 Saturday. They received 58 of 62 first-place votes and 1,235 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

Georgia Tech, 17-2, which received three first-place votes and 1,118 points, moved from third to second, followed by Memphis State, 21-1, which also lost its first game last week. The Tigers fell one spot after their 76-72 defeat on the road at Virginia Tech on Saturday and had one first-place vote and 1,091 points, 29 more than No. 4 Duke, 20-2.

Oklahoma, 20-1, moved from sixth to fifth, followed by Kansas, 20-3, which had been fourth but suffered a 77-74 loss at Iowa State last week.

Michigan, 19-2, jumped from ninth to seventh with 860 points, 41 more than Syracuse, 17-2, which jumped from its 11th-place ranking last week with a 68-64 victory over St. John's.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 21-2, improved one place from last week, while St. John's, 20-3 and seventh last week, rounded out the Top Ten.

Georgetown, which defeated Louisiana State 74-72 on national television Sunday, led the Second Ten, followed by Kentucky, Bradley, Notre Dame, Virginia Tech, Louisville, Texas-El Paso, Indiana, Western Kentucky and Alabama.

Last week's Second Ten was Syracuse, Georgetown, Bradley, Notre Dame, Indiana, Virginia Tech, Louisiana State, Louisville, Texas-El Paso and Richmond.

Western Kentucky, leader in the Sun Belt Conference race, and Alabama, 15-4 and in second place behind Kentucky in the Southeastern Conference, are both making their first appearance in the Top Twenty this season.

Falling from the ranks of the ranked were Louisiana State and Richmond.

Warren, Duggins Top Scoring

Washington's Frankie Warren and Roanoke's Gloria Duggins continue this week as the area's leading scorers for boys and girls, respectively.

Duggins, despite a season-ending knee injury three weeks ago, still leads the girls' scoring by a healthy margin, the only question being whether they will continue to qualify for the rankings by having appeared in more than 50 percent of her team's games. Duggins finished up with a 27.9 average.

Warren, meanwhile, improved on his lead among the boys' scorers. He improved his average from 18.0 to 18.8 this week while second place showed only a 0.2 increase.

Second place did change hands. Last week's number two scorer, Derrek Boyd of Roanoke slipped to third place at 16.4, while Greenville Christian's Paul Hollingsworth climbed from third to second at 16.9. Chocowinity's Henry Harris continues in fourth place at 16.3 while Trinity's Art Reynolds is again fifth at 15.2.

The biggest climb in the rankings was made by newcomer Martin Norville of Rose, who breaks into the top twenty at 13th place.

Lisa Lang of Farmville Central moved up from third to second in the girls' standings with a 21.1 average. Last week's runner-up, Sarah Gray, got only two points in limited play against Conley after an ankle injury, and slipped from second to third at 19.3.

Ayden-Grifton's Kim Edmonds continues in fourth at 15.7 while Renee Deans of Trinity moves from sixth to fifth at 14.3.

The largest improvement by a girl is by Jamesville's Tammy Crisp who moves up four spots from 16th to 12th.

Trinity continues as area's top scoring boys' team with a 64.7 average, while Greenville Christian moved up from third to second at 62.1.

Trinity also leads the area in defense at 45.8 while Farmville Central holds second at 49.3.

Trinity is again the top team in winning margin, defeating opponents by an average of 18.9 points while Ayden-Grifton is still second at 11.0.

Greenville Christian's girls continued to lead the area in offense with a 55.6 average, while North Pitt moves into second at 47.5. Trinity leads the way in defense, allowing only 18.4 points a game, while Greenville Christian is again second at 28.4.

Greenville Christian's winning margin of 27.2 is again tops while Trinity moves into second at 12.4.

Leaders Held In Check

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

It was a night to forget for National Basketball Association scoring leaders Alex English and Adrian Dantley.

English, averaging 29.5 points per game for Denver this season, managed only 14 points on 6-for-23 shooting as the Houston Rockets edged the Nuggets 104-102. Dantley, averaging 29.3, was held to 12 in Utah's 112-104 loss to San Antonio.

"We were really going after Dantley from every angle every time he got the ball," said Spurs' guard Wes Matthews, who scored nine of his 16 points in the final nine minutes to lead a San Antonio rally. "That may have been the difference in the game. If he gets his usual 29, maybe they win it."

"We really concentrated on Dantley," Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "We wanted to make him give it up every time he got it, which is about what he had to do most of the time. You're doing a nice defensive job any time you hold a guy like Dantley to 12 points. It was a gutty performance by our people."

English was suffering from a hyper-extended knee, an injury that Denver Coach Doug Moe had said earlier in the day would sideline his star forward for two weeks. English, however, said the problem was not that serious.

"My knee never was on a status of not playing," English said. "I hyper-extended it but I was never not going to play."

In the only other NBA game Monday, Sacramento edged New York 94-90.

John Lucas had 29 points and 12 assists and Akeem Olajuwon added 23 points and 15 rebounds in Houston's victory over Denver.

Lucas said the bench should get the credit for Houston, which rallied from a 15-point deficit in the second half to win the 25th time in 26 home games.

"The play of Robert Reid and the rest of the bench was a big difference," Lucas said. "I thought the play of the game was Reid's basket that tied it at 99-99. He told me that he wanted the ball and we got it to him."

After Reid's basket, Olajuwon put the Rockets ahead for good with a three-point play with 57 seconds left.

Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said Olajuwon played with an injured hand.

"He did pretty good for a one-handed man," Fitch said. "He had a hard time shooting but the competitive juice got flowing."

The Rockets trailed 57-46 at halftime as Ralph Sampson, Reid and Jim Petersen picked up three fouls.

Houston, which was outscored 32-19 in the second quarter, fell behind by 15 points early in the third quarter before rallying to an 81-77 deficit starting the fourth quarter.

Wayne Cooper took up the slack for English, hitting 27 points for the Nuggets.

Spurs 112, Jazz 104

Artis Gilmore had 26 points and 12 rebounds for San Antonio, which outscored Utah 17-4 down the stretch.

The Jazz led 92-90 with 8:22 remaining, but the Spurs' spurt gave them a 107-96 advantage. Utah had led 81-73 in the third period.

Rickey Green led the Jazz with 25 points.

Kings 94, Knicks 90

Mike Woodson scored 24 points and his steal with seven seconds left preserved Sacramento's victory over New York.

Patrick Ewing, who led the Knicks with 18 points, hit a 10-footer with 44 seconds remaining to cut the Kings' lead to 93-90. After Sacramento let the 24 second clock expire, New York rebounded a missed three-point shot by Rory Sparrow and set up for another attempt to tie the score, but Woodson intercepted a pass.

LaSalle Thompson added 22 points and 11 rebounds for Sacramento.

Weather Is Winner As Final Round Washed Out

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The weather — Crosby weather — won and Fuzzy Zoeller was the beneficiary in the on-again, off-again AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

Zoeller collected $108,000 after the bizarre wind-up Monday (at one point it was scheduled to go until Tuesday and actually was completed Sunday) of the tournament that once was celebrated as the Bing Crosby.

Crosby's name was gone this year — erased in a bitter dispute between his widow and the tournament organizers — but the weather that provided so much of the legend and lore of his tournament was very much in evidence.

In the end, it was the Crosby weather that prevailed.

It disrupted the tournament schedule; lashed the Monterey Peninsula with hail, rain, wind, thunder, lightning; threw officials into turmoil; prompted the circulation of petitions; was responsible for decisions and the reversal of those decisions, and, eventually, halted the proceedings after three rounds.

This is the way it went: After Friday's play was lost to severe weather, the third round was set to be completed Sunday and it was with Zoeller holding a five-shot lead at 205, 11 under par.

The fourth round got underway Monday in sunny weather, but before Zoeller could complete nine holes, a storm swept in off Carmel Bay, producing "the worst conditions I've ever played in," according to Zoeller.

Play was held up.

Portions of the Pebble Beach Golf Links were inundated by the heavy rains.

Officials announced the day's play was over, lost to the weather; that all scores would revert to the 54-hole totals and the fourth round was rescheduled for play Tuesday.

Zoeller headed for a hospitality tent in a successful search for liquid refreshment.

A number of amateurs, still competing in this unique event, said they would have to withdraw due to previous commitments.

A petition was circulated among the pros requesting that the tournament be called, that play not be held on Tuesday.

Before the official announcement was made, the word reached Zoeller. "I switched to scotch," he said.

And then tournament chairman Lou Russo announced that the decision to play Tuesday had been reversed.

"We have decided to call it off today," Russo said. "It will be a 54-hole tournament and we will pay the full purse."

Under the contract, the sponsor is required to pay only three-quarters of the announced purse when a tournament is reduced to 54 holes.

"These people have been here a long time and they have played hard and put on a good show for us so we think they deserve the full purse," Russo said. He also said the final decision was made before any protest by players had reached officials, sponsors or organizers.

Coach Depressed By Dad's Death

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Holy Cross football Coach Rick Carter had been depressed over the death of his father six months ago and his mother's poor health before taking his own life, but his suicide by hanging still shocked his friends and athletes.

West Boylston Police Chief Robert Barton said in a prepared statement that Carter, 42, was found dead at 8:14 a.m. Sunday in his home by his son, Nick, a 21-year-old student at the small Jesuit college where his father had coached for five years.

Worcester County District Attorney John J. Conte said the death was a suicide and Carter had hanged himself with a belt. He left no note, Conte said. Carter's wife, Deanna, had spent the weekend her husband's seriously ill mother in Kettering, Ohio.

"That took a great toll on him," Carter's aunt, Frances Johnson, said about his father's death. "He and his father were very, very close. His father was a sports person. They were both two of a kind."

It had been a difficult year in other ways as well.

Last season, the Crusaders were 4-5, marking only the third time in Carter's career, which also included coaching stints at Hanover College and his alma mater, Earlham College, that his team had a losing season.

And the Rev. John E. Brooks, president of the 2,500-student college, announced prior to the season that the college was deemphasizing football and would eliminate football scholarships in 1989.

"He was the kind of guy who took his losses as personal," said George Cook, a neighbor, who coached Carter's 12-year-old son, Andrew, in the local Pop Warner Football League. He described the coach as a quiet, family man "who commanded respect in the way he approached life" and had a way with youngsters.

During his 20 years of college coaching, Carter had a record of 137-58-7 and led the University of Dayton to the NCAA Division III championship in 1980.

At Holy Cross, he amassed a 35-19-2 record, making him the coach with the third-best record in Holy Cross history. And in 1983, he took Holy Cross into the I-AA playoffs and was named I-AA Coach of the Year.

His players, who had expected to see Carter at a football banquet scheduled for Sunday night, were told of his death by assistant coach Mark Duffner at a 3 p.m. meeting. There were tears and "stunned silence," said Gregg Burke, sports information director. "We all kind of agreed to let them sit with their thoughts." The dinner was canceled.

"We're all shocked. The coach taught them (Holy Cross football players) a lot about respect," Brooks said. "Hopefully the things the coach taught them will carry them through things like this."

Coaches and counselors would be available to help students and players with their grief, he said. A memorial service was scheduled at the college on Wednesday.

"Most of the team is just shocked about the whole deal," said senior quarterback Patrick L. McCarthy. "It hadn't really sunk in yesterday afternoon. I'll remember him as a coach and as a friend, someone who played a big part in our lives for four years."

"He made us winners. He got us to believe," said Steve Raquet, a former Holy Cross lineman.

Candidates Beat Deadline For Primary

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — As time ran out for election filing for the May 6 primary, John Ingram went against former Gov. Terry Sanford's advice to stay out of the U.S. Senate race, while two Republicans dashed Rep. Tim Valentine's hopes of running unopposed.

Sticking to personal tradition, Ingram, the state's former insurance commissioner, waited until about an hour before the noon deadline Monday to declare his candidacy for the seat held by retiring Republican Sen. John East. Ten Democrats and three Republicans are in the race.

"We have a new front-runner," Ingram told reporters, saying he would defeat Sanford and the other eight contenders for the Democratic nomination.

Meanwhile, Republicans Bud McElhane and William Gaster, both of Durham, filed for the 2nd District race against Valentine, a two-term Democrat.

Eighth District Rep. Bill Hefner, a Democrat, also will face a challenge from either Tom Hendricks or William G. Hamby Jr., both Republicans from Concord who will meet in the GOP primary. Hamby filed Monday.

In an unusual situation for North Carolina, all members of the appellate courts up for re-election face opposition. Democrats dominate the state Supreme Court and Court of Appeals and often have no opposition.

Rhoda Billings, a Republican appointed by Gov. Jim

Martin to fill the unexpired term of retired Associate Justice Earl Vaughn, will seek election in her own right. John Webb, a Democrat and N.C. Court of Appeals judge from Wilson, has filed to oppose her.

Donald Smith, a Republican Superior Court judge from Raleigh, is running against Associate Justice Harry Martin, a Democrat. Another Republican, Arthur Donaldson, is challenging Associate Justice Louis Meyer, a Democrat.

In the appeals court races, incumbent Democrat Jack Cozart is defending his seat against Betty Pearce, a Greensboro Republican. Judge Sara Parker, a Democrat filling the unexpired term of Maurice Braswell, faces a primary challenge from Joseph John of Greensboro. Thomas McNamara, a Raleigh Republican, has filed for the seat.

Here's a rundown on the races for each of the 11 U.S. House seats, now that the books are closed:

— 1st District. Veteran Rep. Walter Jones faces no opposition in the Democratic primary. Howard Moye, of Farmville, has filed for the seat as a Republican.

— 2nd District. Valentine has no Democratic opposition, while McElhane and Gaster will compete for the GOP nomination.

— 3rd District. Four Democrats are vying for the seat being abandoned by retiring Democratic Rep. Charles Whitley: Nurham Warwick of Clinton, state Rep. Martin Lancaster of Goldsboro, Walter Henderson of Trenton, and Whitley's administrative assistant, Lewis Renn of Jacksonville.

The lone GOP contender is state Rep. Gerald Hurst of Jacksonville.

— 4th District. Republican Rep. Bill Cobey, a freshman, has primary opposition in Jo Ann Austell of Raleigh.

Four Democrats are in the race: state Sen. Wilma Woodard, of Garner; Kirsten Nyrop, of Hillsborough; former state Democratic chairman David Price, of Chapel Hill; and Woody Webb, a Raleigh attorney who filed Monday.

— 5th District. Stephen Neal, a Democrat, has no primary opponent. GOP contenders are Stuart Epperson, who narrowly lost to Neal in 1984, and Lyons Gray of Winston-Salem.

— 6th District. There will be rematch between freshman Rep. Howard Coble, a Greensboro Republican, and former Rep. Robin Britt, a Democrat whom Coble unseated in 1984. The "revolving-door" district, as observers have dubbed it, has chosen four different congressional representatives in each of the past four elections.

— 7th District. Rep. Charles Rose, a Democrat, is seeking re-election with no Democratic opposition. Republican candidates are Thomas Harrelson of Southport, and Rudolph Sullivan of Shallotte.

— 8th District. Hefner has no Democratic opposition.

GOP candidates are Hendricks and Hamby.

— 9th District. Another 1984 rematch will take place, this one between Republican Rep. J. Alex McMillan and D.G. Martin, a Charlotte Democrat. McMillan edged Martin by 321 votes in 1984 in the nation's third-closest House race. The seat had been abandoned by six-term Rep. Jim Martin, who was elected governor.

— 10th District. The race for the seat held for 23 years by Republican Rep. Jim Broyhill, who is running for the Senate, has attracted eight candidates, the most of any House race.

Republican contenders include state Sen. Cass Ballenger, of Hickory; state Rep. George Robinson, of Lenoir; and Wood Hall Young, of Minneapolis in Avery County.

Democrats who filed for the race include Denny Ray Hickman, of Hudson; Steve Doley Jr., of Gastonia; Ted A. Poovey, of Granite Falls; Jack L. Rhyne, of Belmont; and Lester Roark, who is administrative deputy to Attorney General Lacy Thornburg.

— 11th District. Republican Rep. Bill Hendon is unopposed in the GOP, while Democrats in the race are former Rep. James M. Clarke and Ralph Ledford, of Hendersonville.

"Should Clarke win the Democratic nomination, it will continue his and Hendon's running battle for the seat. Hendon won his first term in 1980, lost to Clarke in 1982, then unseated Clarke in 1984.

Edmisten Says Crowded Field Could Be 'Disaster'

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The crowded Democratic field for U.S. Senate, which former Insurance Commissioner John Ingram has squeezed into, could mean "disaster" for the party, former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten warns.

"The current Senate race and all of its people is a portrayal of the disarray the Democratic Party still finds itself in, with everyone in the country running," said Edmisten, who emerged the Democratic nominee after the divisive 1984 gubernatorial primary.

"Unless the party can be pulled back together, it spells disaster again," he said.

Ingram on Monday became the 10th Democrat to enter the race and declared himself the front-runner for his party's bid.

"I'm the only candidate in this race who has shown that he can come back from losing an election and win," he told reporters after paying his $751 filing fee at the State Board of Elections barely an hour before the noon deadline.

Trimmer by 50 pounds than when he left the Insurance Department a year ago, Ingram said he did not foresee a divisive primary campaign. He said this year's race presented a "different mix" than the battle for governor in 1984, when he finished far behind in the crowded Democratic field.

"People have said ... that I'm a populist progressive conservative, (and) I'm a person that has people out there who are for me, the things I believe in, no matter what," he said.

Ingram, 56, who is seeking the seat held by retiring Republican Sen. John East, probably is the best-known Democratic hopeful next to former Gov. Terry Sanford, while the other contenders lack statewide name recognition and a strong base of support.

Politicians and analysts say Ingram has only an outside chance of winning the Democratic nomination, but he could play the role of spoiler in forcing a primary runoff with Sanford.

That is especially true if black Fayetteville real estate agent Theodore Kinney manages to draw a substantial amount of the state's black vote.

"If the blacks vote for their candidate and Ingram gets the same group of supporters he has had all the time, it throws open the possibility that he (Sanford) won't win in the first primary," said Walter DeVries, a Wrightsville Beach pollster and political consultant.

Sanford tried unsuccessfully to dissuade Ingram from running, and Ingram said he had tried to talk Sanford into dropping out.

Sam Poole, a Sanford associate, played down Ingram's presence in the race. "It just adds another name to the field," Poole said. "Obviously, Ingram takes a few percentage points, a few votes. We don't know how many. ... We really can't tell yet just how much support he has."

Ingram, a Randolph County native, served one term in the state House and three terms as insurance commissioner. He upset banker Luther Hodges Jr., formerly of Charlotte, to capture the Democratic nomination for the Senate in 1978, but lost to Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in the general election.

In 1984, Ingram finished last among six major candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, receiving less than 8 percent of the vote.

Ingram said Monday he had been advised that an "independent poll" showed him the likely Democratic nominee and victor in the general election. He said he had been told about the poll last week, but said he had not seen the results and would not identify the pollster or say who told him about it.

He shrugged off his 1978 and 1980 defeats, saying he had lost "two or three" elections before winning his House seat and that he had won another term as commissioner after his losing Senate effort.

In a dig at Sanford, Ingram said, "One of the candidates in the race has lost a lot more elections than I have lost and dropped out of elections. And he has not shown that he can come back."

Sanford, who served as governor from 1961-65, ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972 and 1976. He also lost a bid for the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee last year.

Ingram, a Cary lawyer, frequently clashed with the insurance industry during his stormy tenure as commissioner. He routinely rejected rate increases, and the state's appellate courts usually overruled him.

Other Democrats who have filed for the Senate race are: Walt Atkins of Graham; Clinton Moore of Newton; Bill Belk, Fountain Odom and Katherine Harper, all of Charlotte; Theodore McKinney of Fayetteville; and Betty Wallace and Milton Croom of Raleigh.

Republican candidates are: 10th District Rep. Jim Broyhill; David Funderburk, former U.S. ambassador to Romania; and Glenn Miller, leader of the White Patriot Party.

Father, Daughter Want To Be Sheriff

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Cynthia Poovey Carswell's announcement that she's entering the race for Burke County sheriff caught at least one relative off guard — her father, who's also running for sheriff.

Mrs. Carswell, 35, a mother of two teen-agers, filed Monday as a Democrat in an attempt to become the county's first elected female sheriff. If she wins in the May 6 primary, her nomination could set up something of a family feud in November.

Mrs. Carswell's father, Bobby Lee Poovey, is running on the Republican ticket. He said her decision took him "by total surprise."

"She surprised me all right but we aren't that close ... we don't see eye to eye at all," Poovey said Monday night.

Mrs. Carswell agreed that she and her father are not "close-knit."

"We have different ideas," she said. "The other candidates are all 45 to 65 years old — older people with set ideas. Being 35, I can communicate better with the younger generation."

The Morganton woman would not be the first female sheriff in Burke

County. In 1937, when Sheriff Fred W. Ross died of a heart attack, his wife, Nina Corpening Ross, finished out his term when she served about two years, according to her daughter-in-law Isabel Ross of Morganton.

"My mother-in-law was a good sheriff. All the deputies liked her. She was a very pretty woman, with a nice figure — a quiet, modest woman who had it in her to speak out when she had to," Isabel Ross said.

Mrs. Carswell will challenge Bill J. Martin, a former judge removed from office in 1981 by the state Supreme Court, and incumbent Jerry Richards, Burke County's sheriff for 12 years, in the Democratic primary.

Long Proposes Special Session On Insurance

RALEIGH (AP) — A short legislative session is scheduled for June, but the state's insurance commissioner says North Carolina can't wait that long to enact bills to ensure the availability of hard-to-get types of insurance.

"I am deeply troubled by what I feel is apparently a lack of affirmative efforts or commitment by the companies to helping the people of North Carolina in the short run," Insurance Commissioner Jim Long said Monday.

In remarks prepared for a hearing of the Legislature's Liability and Property Insurance Markets Study Commission, Long proposed a special session so he could ask lawmakers for authority to force insurance companies to provide certain types of coverage.

The committee voted 7-1 to recommend that the session be held. The lone dissenter was an insurance industry representative.

"We can no longer sit idly by," Long said. "The property and casualty insurance industry — by its inaction either in the market or in proposing any solutions — has left us little alternative."

After the hearing, Long said he had discussed his proposal with Gov. Jim Martin, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, and that all appeared receptive.

Under state law, the Legislature can be called into special session by the governor or with approval of three-fifths of the House and Senate membership.

Martin's communications director, Karen Hayes, said the governor had not decided whether to summon the Legislature. She said Martin would discuss the situation privately with Jordan, Ramsey and Long today and would hear Long state his case this morning in a meeting of the Council of State.

"Whatever decision is made, he wants to make it carefully and expeditiously," Ms. Hayes said of Martin. "He is very concerned about this insurance issue and has been kept abreast of it."

Jordan also withheld judgment on Long's plan until he gets further details, said Jordan spokeswoman Brenda Summers. She said Jordan hoped the situation could be fixed temporarily without a special session.

"But if they have to have one, he wants to make sure it isn't long and drawn out," Ms. Summers said. "He would want the bills to be lined up so action could be taken as quickly as possible."

Ramsey, reached by telephone at his home in Marshall, said he would not comment until he could talk with Long.

Three legislative committees have been investigating different aspects of what Long called a "crisis" manifesting itself in spiraling premiums and a shortage of liability insurance.

Coverage has become virtually unavailable or unaffordable for day-care operators, engineers, midwives, cities and counties, family physicians and hazardous waste operators, Long said.

Also, he said, "we have continued to hear from an escalating number of other segments of our society who are presently being dramatically affected by the non-availability and ... the non-affordability of insurance."

For example, the only North Carolina company that wrote coverage for transportation of migrant farm laborers has ceased to do so, making it likely that valuable cash crops will go unharvested this year, he said.

Wake County District Court Judge Narley Cashwell was told that Susan Carol Murray received no money for the baby and thought she was participating in a legal adoption.

The baby was illegally adopted by Harold White, 42, and Donna White, 35, who were killed in an automobile accident in Johnston County on Nov. 16. Lee Marie White, less than seven weeks old at the time of the accident, was critically injured but survived. She is in the custody of the Wake County Department of Social Services pending a custody hearing.

Billy Graham Says No Plans To Retire

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost like a patriarch, Billy Graham stood on the floodlit stage, cheers raining down from more than 1,000 religious broadcasters who are, in a way, his descendants.

Suddenly reflective, the North Carolina evangelist told them, "I don't know how many more years I have."

But he quickly added, "I don't intend to retire."

And the applause surged again. Graham, who turned 67 in November, was at the National Religious Broadcasters' convention Monday merely to accept one more award — this one for a new television show on his trip to the Soviet Union — and to briefly plug his upcoming crusade in Washington.

At least that was the plan until the space shuttle exploded last week.

After the terrible end of that flight, President Reagan postponed his State of the Union speech until tonight, and the broadcasters were told neither Reagan nor Vice President George Bush would headline their convention.

"I'm the filler-in," Graham told the crowd.

No one complained of being cheated.

If the warmth of the broadcasters' welcome showed their feeling for Graham, the size of the crowd was testimony to the explosive growth in an field that he and a few others pioneered in the 1950s and 1960s.

He has lived to see Bible-quoting television preachers become a major industry involving millions of dollars. The broadcasters group itself claims 1,150 member organizations operating religious radio or TV stations or producing programs for those stations.

"When I started, I almost thought I was the only one," he said earlier Monday at a news conference. "I wasn't, but I almost thought so."

Now, he said, a time of genuine Christian revival may be coming upon the nation as people look for answers outside technology and modernity that have all but overwhelmed them.

"Thank God there's been a whole generation, two generations in preparation" for preaching and helping Americans who are reaching out in the 1980s, he said.

Not that he'd be proud to claim all the "televangelists" as his heirs or brothers.

"When you've had the explosion like we've had in the past five years, you have both the good and the bad," he said. "You've had some who've tried to exploit."

But he named no names. And he concluded, "I think people can see who is sincere and who is not sincere. The American people are not easily fooled."

Let anyone forget whom they were dealing with, he gave the broadcasters a bit of vintage Graham. And that didn't mean a speech about the morality of cutting federal budget deficits or financing one side or the other in Nicaragua — subjects some other well-known preachers now emphasize.

"There's a heaven and a hell and everybody you meet is going to one or the other," he declared.

He's graying now and needs glasses. But his voice is still strong,

Gently boasting, he said he could show them headlines from the '50s and '60s speculating about him as a presidential candidate.

"Not the second headline but the first headline" on the page, he said.

He talked of a governor who wanted to appoint him U.S. senator when an incumbent died in office, of a president who wanted him to be ambassador to Israel.

Even of movie producer Cecil B. DeMille wanting him to be in pictures.

But he said he told them all: "The Lord has called me to preach, and I don't intend to do anything the rest of my life except preach the Gospel."

Pembroke State Historian Thinks 'Lost Colony' Went To Robeson

By The Associated Press

A North Carolina history professor is trying to convince other historians to adopt his theory that the Lost Colony on Roanoke Island was never lost.

"I firmly believe that part of the Lost Colony's blood is here in Robeson County among the Lumbee people," said Adolph Dial, chairman of Pembroke State University's Department of American Indian Studies and a Lumbee Indian.

The tale of the Lost Colony began in 1587, the year 117 English settlers sailed to Roanoke Island, which is in Dare County along North Carolina's Outer Banks. Several months later the colony's governor, John White, returned to England for supplies.

War with Spain kept him from returning to North America until 1590, when he found the settlement deserted. The word "Croatoan" was carved on a nearby tree.

"We could assume they had gone inland to maybe a hunting ground several miles away," Dial said. "They eventually worked their way to Robeson County and were here by probably 1650."

Robeson County, in southeastern North Carolina, is about 180 miles southwest of Roanoke Island.

While some historians doubt the long-standing theory that Lumbee Indians are descendants of Lost Colony settlers, Dial said the evidence he has collected is substantial. The most persuasive is historical accounts of Indian lifestyle and appearance, he said.

"When the Scots first arrived in the 1730s, they found a people tilling the soil, living in European homes, and Indians with blond hair and blue eyes," Dial said.

The Scots also found Indians who spoke English and had no tribal language of their own. He based his information on the 19th-century writings of Hamilton McMillan, a white Robeson County resident who served in the state Legislature.

Dial said the word "Croatan" also links Lumbee Indians and the Lost Colony. He said the Lumbee Indians were known as the Croatan tribe. In 1911, Indians shunned the name because it had come to be a derogatory term used by white people to signify "mixed blood," Dial said.

The Indians chose instead to be called Lumbee because of the tribe's proximity to the Lumbee River. About 36,000 Lumbee Indians live in Robeson County and the tribe has some 60,000 members nationwide, Dial said.

For further evidence, Dial went to the Pembroke telephone directory.

The majority of Indians listed in the directory have Anglican surnames, including some names identical or similar to those who disappeared from Roanoke Island: Sampson, Jones, Berry, Brown, Sutton, Gibbs and Harris.

Also, many Lumbee Indians share the same name as colonist Griffin

Jones.

"Did that just happen?" Dial said.

William Powell, a history professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill who has done extensive research on the Lost Colony, disagrees with the Lumbee Indian theory.

"There's no historical evidence as to what became of the Lost Colony," he said. "I'm sorry, but I don't think the (Lumbee) people have any basis for making this claim."

Powell said the similarity of names between Roanoke colonists and Lumbee Indians is coincidental.

"These people have family names that are common in South Carolina," Powell said.

As to the Croatan theory, Powell said the Robeson County Indians have used Croatan, Lumbee and Cherokee as their tribal name during the past decade.

House OKs Labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with mounting evidence that youngsters are turning to snuff and chewing tobacco as alternatives to cigarettes, Congress took a first step toward requiring health warning labels on smokeless tobacco and banning its broadcast advertising.

The House on Monday approved a bill on a voice vote that would require one of three rotating warning labels to be added to tins and pouches: "This product may cause oral cancer," "This product may cause gum disease and tooth loss" or "This product is not a safe alternative to cigarettes."

Arrows and circles would draw attention to the warning labels. And television and radio advertising, which now often feature professional athletes touting the products, would be banned.

The Senate, which had approved a similar measure earlier, now gets the bill. The chief Senate sponsors have agreed to the House version.

NBC's 'Peter The Great Wins TV Battle Of The Czar Wars

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Cosby the Great was being given partial credit for NBC's opening-night victory in the crucial miniseries match-up between the network's "Peter the Great" and CBS' "Sins."

"When NBC put in 'Cosby,' we expected they'd get a tremendous lead-in, and they did," said Greg Kasparian, CBS' director of audience measurement. NBC had billed the night "Sunday the Great."

With Danny Kaye starring as a dentist in a special edition of the top-rated "Cosby Show" at 8 p.m. EST Sunday, "Peter the Great" an hour later won the first night of "Czar Wars" over Joan Collins, the star and producer of CBS' "Sins," A.C. Nielsen's 12-city overnight figures revealed Monday.

"Peter the Great," the $26 million, eight-hour epic starring Maximilian Schell, averaged a 23.1 rating and beat "Sins" in each of the 12 major cities measured by Nielsen. "Sins," the seven-hour miniseries starring Miss Collins as a rags-to-riches publishing empress, averaged an 18.0 rating.

Overnight ratings measure the percentage of homes with TV in that area tuned to a particular broadcast.

"The Cosby Show" had a 29.5 rating, Steven Spielberg's "Amazing Stories," which was pushed back to 8:30 p.m., had a 21.5 rating. "Alfred Hitchcock Presents," ranked 37th out of 79 shows this season, was preempted.

CBS' "60 Minutes," the lead-in for "Sins," had its usual 25 rating, but Kasparian said audiences defected to NBC as soon as the "60 Minutes" stopwatch stopped ticking.

ABC, which introduced its weekly "Disney Movie" Sunday and followed it with James Bond's "Octopussy," averaged a 16.2 rating for the night. "Octopussy," going against the two miniseries, averaged a 16.8.

Nielsen's Sunday night national figures, representing the nation's 85.9 million homes with television, will be available today.

It was the first major confrontation of the February sweeps, one of the three-times-a-year periods when ratings for local stations are measured. The networks help their affiliates with special programming during the months of February, May and November.

CBS, chasing top-rated NBC in the battle for prime-time supremacy this season, is counting on big performances from its miniseries, especially the heavily promoted "Sins." Last week, CBS ran numerous promotional announcements for "Sins" during its prime-time schedule.

On Monday, the "CBS Morning News" had a taped interview with Miss Collins, the star of ABC's "Dynasty" who co-produced "Sins" with her husband, Peter Holm. This morning, the "Morning News" was scheduled to interview Marisa Berenson, who also has a role in the CBS miniseries.

Local CBS stations even got into the promotional act. In New York, the WCBS-produced program, "Only in America with Greg Jackson," did a 30-minute interview with Miss Collins that was shown Saturday night and also was carried on CBS' owned-and-operated stations in Chicago and Los Angeles.

"The reason we put it there was to win ratings based on the publicity surrounding 'Sins,'" said Laraine Herman, a spokeswoman for WCBS.

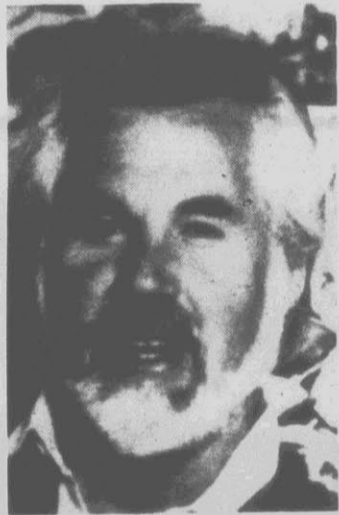

NBC matched CBS plug for plug. Viewers of NBC's Super Bowl Jan. 26 were inundated with scenes from the epic, and the promos continued throughout NBC's programs last week.

On Monday, NBC's "Today" substitute anchor John Palmer said that in "the battle of the miniseries," "Peter the Great" did better in the overnight ratings than "Sins," which, he said, was on "another network." Then he interviewed Ursula Andress, a star from the NBC miniseries, who was in Los Angeles. It was 5:30 in the morning, her time. Schell was scheduled to appear on "Today" this morning.

Because CBS does better in rural areas, Kasparian expects "Sins" to do better in today's national results. NBC officials were elated by the overnight figures. "We're very pleased," said Curt Block, an NBC vice president. "There didn't appear to be any tuneout; we held the audience."

Viewing generally builds throughout Sunday night, and NBC's share of the audience watching TV stayed at about 33 percent for the two-hour "Peter the Great" broadcast.

Coffee, Tea or Addiction

Drought has drastically cut this year's coffee crop. But don't expect high prices to cure many coffee addicts. During the 14th century, Muslims became addicted to coffee by drinking it at religious services. In their marriage ceremony, the Turks dictated that a husband must always keep his wife supplied with coffee beans. In England, wives rebelled against the first coffeehouses claiming coffee made husbands as "unfruitful as the deserts" where coffee was grown.

Actress Goes 'North' For New Mini-Series

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Look who's playing a Yankee in ABC's "North and South, Book II." Olivia de Havilland, who played Melanie Wilkes in "Gone With the Wind," has crossed the Mason-Dixon Line for the 12-hour sequel to the miniseries broadcast last November. The new production will be shown in May.

"I was at my home in Paris when someone called and asked if I'd be in a film about the Civil War," said Miss de Havilland. "I said, 'You mean the War Between the States?'" "He said the role was that of Mrs. Neal, a hospital administrator. I said, 'Southern?' He said, 'No, Northern.' I said, 'You mean you want me to play a Yankee?' He said, 'Well, there are Confederate patients in the hospital.' I said, 'In that case, I'll play the role. I know I would never be forgiven if I played a Yankee and she was indifferent to Southern suffering.'"

Miss de Havilland is the last surviving major star from "Gone With the Wind," which also starred Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh and Leslie Howard. "That's strange because Melanie is the only one who dies in the movie," she said.

From the 1939 epic, she went on to win Oscars as best actress for "To Each His Own" in 1946 and "The Heiress" in 1949; she was nominated for best actress in "The Snake Pit" in 1947. In 1953, she moved to Paris.

"Melanie and Mrs. Neal are similar in that they have compassion," she said, "and their strength is similar. Of course, Mrs. Neal is older." She laughed and added, "Quite a bit older."

"I was very careful to see that their hairstyles were different. I didn't want anything to suggest Melanie. The costumes are of the period, but different. In the North they didn't have much devastation so material was much easier to obtain."

She worked principally in the miniseries with Kirstie Alley. "She reminded me so much of Vivian Leigh," she said.

Miss de Havilland has returned to this country for only occasional roles. She played Henry Fonda's wife in "Roots: The Next Generations." She also was in the TV movie "Murder Is Easy."

"I left because the movie business as I had known it was dying," she said. "Television had just come in. You could feel that the whole world I had been part of was dying. It was very depressing."

Miss de Havilland led a quiet life in France until recently, when French television ran "Gone With the Wind," first in English and then dubbed in French. She said she is now recognized on the street.

"North and South," based on the best-selling book by John Jakes, told of two families whose lives became intertwined despite their regional differences. It ended with the onset of the Civil War. The sequel, based on Jakes' latest book, "Love and War," takes the two families through the war. Jakes is now writing a third book on the war's aftermath.

Miss de Havilland and her sister, Joan Fontaine, an Oscar winner for "Suspicion," were born in Tokyo to English parents. Their father was a patent attorney.

She made her film debut in 1935 in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" for Warner Bros. Studios.

Car Explodes

CHANHASSEN, Minn. (AP) — An explosion in a car that killed a 30-year-old woman and her year-old daughter was felt about a quarter-mile away and forced a five-hour evacuation of about 25 homes, police and witnesses said.
 The victims were inside the car packed with explosives when the material that apparently was to be used by the woman's husband to clear land detonated, said Carver County Chief Deputy Duane Bickett.

 The evacuation, prompted by reports that more explosives were in a nearby home, lasted about five hours after officers found nothing, said Bickett.

The latest bridge program for IBM computers to reach us (Tournament Bridge, by Paul A. Schwartz, Random House Software, $69.95), has some impressive features. It is programmed to simulate random play, in that the computer's defensive play adjusts to the line you adopt as declarer.

For instance, consider this hand, where the directed contract is five diamonds. (We would be reluctant to disturb three no trump with the North hand, since we would fear enemy heart ruffs.) The problem is to avoid losing three tricks in hearts and clubs combined. The opening lead marks East with the king of spades, so West almost surely has the ace of hearts and the ace-queen of clubs for his opening bid.

If you elect to play West for the jack of hearts and take a finesse, East will win and shift to a club to defeat you; if you play East for the jack, West will turn up with that card and you will lose two heart tricks and the ace of clubs.

The winning line is to ruff out two spades and draw trumps, ending in the closed hand. Now lead a low heart. West must duck and the queen wins. Return a heart to the king and West is end played. No matter what he returns, he must give you your 11th trick. Try it.

The drawbacks of the program are, first of all, its price—for your $70 you get only 88 hands. Then nowhere does it show you the complete deals, you have to work them out for yourself. And lastly, while it purports to let you play in a tournament, the fact that you do not get to bid and all contracts are directed means that, although you get a "tournament result," on each hand you can achieve only one of two scores: either you make the given contract or you go down. As against that, the hands are challenging—perhaps even a trifle too much so.

Cubans Convene

HAVANA (AP) — About 1,700 top Cuban communists assemble today for a four-day congress that officials say will lead to top personnel changes, possibly including an enhanced role for the younger brother of President Fidel Castro.

Cuban officials and Western analysts expect the Communist Party Congress in spruced-up Havana to grant broader but unspecified powers to Raul Castro, who at 54 is five years younger than his more famous brother.

A trusted lieutenant of his brother since they were youthful revolutionaries, Raul Castro has received increased attention in recent Cuban news reports and has been assigned many party tasks. If the Cuban leader dies or is incapacitated, he has said his brother will replace him.

The highlight of today's opening session at the Palace of Conventions is expected to be the presentation of a report by the president summarizing the progress the last five years in the "construction of a socialist society."

The book-length report is expected to take Castro all day to read. "I think conditions are optimal for the congress," Castro said recently. "It will be an opportune congress, at an opportune time and with truly promising perspectives."

Local block committees have undertaken an 18-month campaign to give Havana, the Caribbean's largest city with 2 million people, a facelift for the occasion.

About 350,000 citizens have repaired streets, painted buildings, raised flags and planted an estimated 1 million shrubs. Delegates arriving Monday were greeted by hundreds of uniformed school children.

Among the main tasks of the congress will be the election of a new Communist Party Central Committee, Politburo and secretariat, and the presentation of a draft party program.

Conflict Growing Between Doctors, Lawyers

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — An American Bar Association committee has recommended rejecting the American Medical Association's major proposals to restrict malpractice lawsuits, the panel's head says.

The report is to be considered for adoption as ABA policy next week, and reflects a sharp conflict between lawyers and doctors over what the AMA says is a "crisis" created by expensive medical malpractice litigation, The New York Times said in today's editions.

The report's existence was confirmed by Talbot S. D'Alemberte, head of the ABA's Special Committee on Medical Professional Liability and dean of Florida State University's law school.

The report "does not reject everything the AMA suggests," D'Alemberte said. "It does reject the idea, in a number of significant respects, that there should be a special tort system for the physicians."

A tort is a wrongful act, injury or damage for which a civil action can be brought.

The 44-page report said there is no justification for fundamental changes in the system of resolving allegations of medical negligence through lawsuits for monetary damages, the Times said.

"The medical system, in seeking changes in the tort law system, has shown a willingness to trade away the rights of the individuals in the hope of easing a perceived burden on itself," the Times quoted the report as saying.

The AMA proposed limiting damages and attorneys' fees in malpractice suits early last year.

The 271,000-member medical association has argued that accelerating costs from malpractice litigation are driving doctors out of the profession and that reform is imperative to bring malpractice insurance premiums under control.

In Massachusetts, 250 doctors on Monday refused to perform operations or see new patients to protest skyrocketing malpractice insurance fees, health officials said.

The AMA is pushing for limits on punitive damages, on damages for pain and suffering and on contingent fees in which lawyers represent plaintiffs in return for a share of any damages won.

The ABA report agrees with the AMA's increased efforts to discipline their ranks and oust incompetent doctors, and with the AMA's plan for peer-review procedures in all hospitals and other medical service organizations, D'Alemberte said.

The report also called for professional sanctions against lawyers who file frivolous suits and further study of the malpractice issue, the Times said.

The nine-member panel termed "inappropriate" all proposals for federal legislation to restrict malpractice suits and opposed AMA proposals for state legislation, the Times said.

"Although there is a problem in the area of medical malpractice insurance, the term 'crisis' is an overstatement," the newspaper quoted the report as saying.

The committee unanimously urged the policy-making House of Delegates to adopt its recommendations as official policy at the meeting of the 320,000-lawyer association in Baltimore next week.

ABA President William W. Falsgraf, who appointed the committee, said he agreed with its recommendations and expected the delegates would as well.

Dr. James S. Todd, the AMA's senior deputy executive vice president, said having an ABA committee review proposals for changing the litigation system was "like sending the wolves to watch the chicken coop."

"Even lawyers who defend doctors in malpractice suits earn their income by the same inequities that allow the plaintiffs' bar to earn their income," he told the Times.

Comatose Lawmaker Gets New Treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors at the National Institutes of Health are using an experimental cancer treatment to try to save the life of a comatose Illinois congressman, but one hospital official says the procedure is "not that magic bullet."

Authorities said Monday the lawmaker, Rep. John Grotberg, R-Ill., has been unconscious for more than a week at the Bethesda, Md., health center after lapsing into a coma following complications from the treatment.

"The chances for recovery are not known at this time," said Dr. Steven A. Rosenberg of the National Cancer Institute, who has supervised Grotberg's treatment.

Rosenberg, a member of the medical team that treated President Reagan's cancer last year, and colleagues at NCI developed the treatment used on Grotberg.

The therapy involves the combined use of white-blood cells from the patient's body and a protein known as interleukin-2.

The process is designed to send the patient's blood cells — whose disease-fighting capability is beefed up by the interleukin-2 — back into the body to attack cancer tumors.

The experimental treatment was greeted with much fanfare last December after an article published in the New England Journal of Medicine described it and reported encouraging test results.

Joyce Dougherty, an NCI spokeswoman, cautioned Monday — as other officials have in the past — that the treatment is experimental and is not a sure-fire remedy.

"It's not that magic bullet that's going to cure every cancer, I'm afraid," she said.

Rosenberg said the treatment was administered to Grotberg three times and was partially successful on the 60-year-old lawmaker, who has had a long history of cancer. The disease has stricken his colon and liver.

Steve Trossman, Grotberg's press aide, said the family chose not to release any details of the congressman's hospitalization until Monday because they feared the publicity would hurt Rosenberg's program.

In a written statement, Rosenberg said an artery through which Grotberg had been receiving injections of specially treated blood cells and a protein compound became infected and later was removed. Early last week, bleeding at the artery stump and continued infection caused Grotberg's heart to stop and his breathing to cease, Rosenberg said.

The doctor said the patient was revived and taken to surgery for correction of the bleeding. He has been in a coma in critical condition since then, according to Rosenberg.

Rosenberg said cancer patients receiving injections of chemicals occasionally develop artery infections.

Grotberg, a first-term and politically conservative lawmaker, was the only Republican to file candidacy papers for the March 18 primary in his district.

Meanwhile, NCI announced Monday it will provide about $500,000 in aid to six medical centers around the country so those institutions can begin treating patients with the experimental therapy.

Ice Jams Trigger More Business For Explosives

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Ice jams have prompted some communities to use explosives to reopen clogged waterways, but an Army Corps of Engineers official says the practice could backfire.

"The Corps, as a general rule, does not recommend explosives to remove ice jams," Ross Kittleman, a Corps engineer, said Monday. "You often get a surge of water, and the number of instances where you can meaningfully remove ice jams is small."

Kittleman said jams often form in January as temperatures fluctuate, causing alternate freezing and thawing. The surge of water can cause flooding, he said.

While explosives sometimes can be used to clear waterways, many jams break up as water moves through the ice and erodes the floe, he said.

The Coast Guard uses vessels called ice cutters, rather than explosives, to dislodge clogged ice on the St. Clair and Detroit rivers, he said.

In the last few weeks, Pepin Explosives in the Upper Peninsula city of Negaunee has blown up jams in the Chocoy River in Marquette County and the Au Train River in neighboring Alger County, said owner Joe Pepin.

Pepin said the ice-blasting business isn't exactly booming, but that the two jobs this year were twice as many as he had previously during his 19 years in the explosives business.

The most chronic ice jams in Michigan are on the St. Clair River, said Michael O'Bryan, chief of the emergency management branch of the Corps in Detroit.

He said the Corps provides expertise to communities considering blasting out ice, but added that conditions only occasionally call for explosives.

Senators Use Kid's Picture

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Senate has printed a photograph of an Oklahoma City girl on congressional envelopes, the first such printing as part of a drive to help recover missing children.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who sponsored legislation authorizing the printing, said Monday that each week the U.S. Senate Service Department will print a picture of, and information about, a different child on envelopes lawmakers use to answer constituent mail.

All envelopes for that week will display the same photo, which will be provided by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, he said.

The center will report the number of telephone calls it receives as a result of the effort, Metzenbaum said, adding that the printing costs will be nominal.

An estimated 20 million envelopes are used by senators each year to answer constituent inquiries. Metzenbaum said he sends out about 5,000 envelopes a week through the service department.

"The other offices, I hope, in the Senate will follow the lead we have established, and indications to me are that many other offices will do just that," he said.
