Good News About A Program For Runaways That Really Works

Going

Hugh Patrick Brown

Nannette Krupa, 15, of Staten Island, N.Y., didn't want to ask parents for bus fare home.

Concern over runaway children, prompted in part by several articles appearing in PARADE over the last four years, has led to increasing efforts by federal, state and local authorities, and by citizen groups, to help. Two years ago, one man, a New Jersey police officer, came up with a simple idea—free bus rides home—that has taken thousands of runaways off the streets and brought them back to their families. In the following article, Al Santoli identifies and reports on some of those who have been there—and have come back.

SIXTEEN-YEAR-old Dennis Gaudet was having a lot of problems both at school and at home in East Hartford, Conn., and so, last Dec. 4, he ran away.

He had about $200 in his pocket and a few sets of clothes stuffed into a pillowcase, and he hopped a bus to Miami, daydreaming, he said, of "beaches, girls, palm trees and mainly having a good time."

But when Dennis, who is shown on the cover, arrived in Miami at 3 a.m., only an empty bus station and dark, empty streets were there to greet him. He says: "I began to get scared. I walked until I found a Howard Johnson's. I went to a pay phone to call a girlfriend back in Connecticut to tell someone where I was. I wanted to show off. I reached for my wallet. It was gone. I searched through all my things, but I couldn't find it. All of a sudden I had no money for a room, no money to eat and I lost all my pictures of my friends. I sat down on my bag and cried."

For the next couple of days, Dennis learned some hard lessons about survival. Finally, he made a late-night phone call to his godmother, who told his mother where he was. His mother urged him to call a toll-free number for runaways, where he found out about the Trailways Operation: Home Free program.

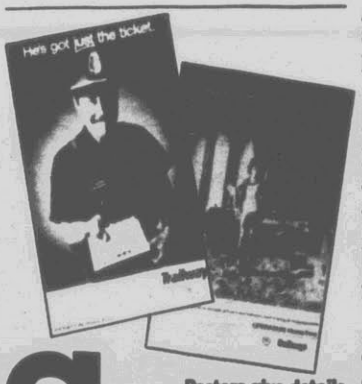

After completing the necessary formalities at a police station, Dennis was placed in a youth shelter—the Miami Bridge—where he spent the next day, waiting for a bus to Hartford.

Dennis reflects: "At the shelter, I met kids with child-abuse problems, runaways, kids kicked out of their homes or who had stolen. I felt like I wasn't supposed to be there, but I was just like the rest of them. I used to think that I was special. But now I know that I'm not. I spent the whole next day thinking about home and crying sometimes. Because I wanted to be there so bad."

"Running away meant getting back at my mother," he adds. "I thought it was cool and the thing to do. But when you run away, it's not what you think it is. Especially when you have no money, a few clothes and nowhere to go."

Each year, more than a million children run away from home, joining thousands of young people scratching out a day-to-day life on our streets. Hunger, drug addiction, alcohol abuse and theft become a way of life. Many are exploited by sex peddlers. Some do not survive at all—an estimated 2000 unidentified bodies are found annually by the police.

Many runaway children have the same feeling Dennis Gaudet had: They want to go home. And, thanks to the efforts of a small-town police captain and a national bus company, they are being given a chance to do so—without cost or prosecution.

Posters give details on free rides home.

Since it began, Operation: Home Free has returned thousands of runaways to their homes

Capt. Richard Voorhees of Bridgewater Township, N.J., was attending a seminar on the runaway problem in February 1984 when he heard an emotional speech by John Walsh, whose son Adam had been abducted and murdered. Voorhees, himself the father of three, recalls: "Walsh blasted the police for not doing enough. There were no laws in the book or tools to help missing kids. Frankly, many police departments were not getting involved. Running away isn't really a crime, so police can't do much unless kids come to them for help."

Voorhees knew that runaways, who come from all kinds of families and all economic levels, are usually unprepared for a lonely and bitter life on the street but are reluctant to call their parents and afraid to seek help from others.

Realizing that a troubled child might hesitate to approach a police officer—and seeing the lack of resources available to the police—Voorhees wrote to The Trailways Corp. and proposed free rides home for runaways.

Three months later, Trailways introduced Operation: Home Free, a nation-

Couple Marries In Double Ring Ceremony On Saturday

The wedding ceremony of Molly Kay James and Charles Edwards Nichols Jr. took place Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The Rev. E. Gordon Conklin and the Rev. Gregory P. Rogers conducted the double ring ceremony in Oakmont Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Peggy Manning James and the late Alton Ray James and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edwards Nichols, all of Greenville.

MRS. NICHOLS

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother. Elizabeth Winchester of Greenville was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Cathy Montgomery of Blythewood, S.C., and Debbie McLeod of Atlanta, Ga., sisters of the bride, Lisa Fisher of Greenville and Lisa Parrott Douglas of Carrboro.

The flower girl was Anna Braswell of Kinston, cousin of the bride. Chip Brock of Winterville, cousin of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man while ushers included Bobby Nichols, brother of the bridegroom, Chap Tucker, Glenn Dykstra and Robert Still, all of Greenville.

Dr. Sam C. Winchester Jr. was organist. Marsha Carter sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer." Joseph Sasser sang "I Could Never Promise You," accompanied by guitar.

The bride wore a white formal satin gown featuring a portrait neckline. The fitted bodice was reembroidered with pearls and the tapered sleeves were accented with alencon lace and ended in calla points. Motifs of alencon lace were featured on the full skirt and formed a border on the hemline which extended into a chapel petal train. She wore a waist length veil of bridal illusion attached to a headpiece of alencon lace etched with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. She carried a silk cascade of white rubrum lilies, miniature tiger lilies, white roses and stephanotis tied with white satin ribbon.

The honor attendant wore a rose matte taffeta gown designed with a shirred draped neckline over circular ruffles and featured a gathered skirt. She carried a tradtional bouquet of mauve, burgundy, pink and white mixed silk flowers. Bridesmaids were dressed identically and their bouquets were similar. The flower girl wore a gown styled identical with a sash. She carried a basket of mixed silk flowers trimmed with ribbon streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a periwinkle blue crepe floor length gown and the mother of the bridegroom wore a periwinkle silk floor length gown. Each wore an orchid corsage and were remembered with long-stemmed red roses from the bridal couple. The grandmothers of the bridegroom were given white pom pons corsages.

A reception was given by the mother of the bride in the church fcellowship hall. Janie Suskiewich and Joan Manning, aunts of the bride, served cake and Betty Lou Brock and Shirley Barnhill, aunts of the bridegroom, poured punch. Hamilton-Brewer Vows Solemnized

Tina Rose Brewer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Ray Brewer Sr. of Greenville, and Stephen Ray Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Hamilton Jr. of Beaufort, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon.

The three o'clock ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Glenn Evans of Greenville assisted by the Rev. Keith Hamilton of Texas, brother of the bridegroom, in the home of the bride's parents.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory traditional bridal satin floor length gown with a cathedral train. The fitted bodice had a Victorian neckline with re-embroidered alencon lace motifs encrusted with seed pearls. Scattered beaded alencon lace motifs with schiffli embroidery inserts adorned the cathedral train and scalloped schiffli embroidery bordered the hemline. Her mantilla of scalloped bridal illusion with seed pearls and beaded alencon lace motifs flowed from an alencon lace cap etched with seed pearls. She carried a formal cascade of phalaenopsis, cymbidium orchids and fuji mums tied with off-white satin.

Kelly Morris of Greenville was honor attendant and wore a royal blue matte taffeta gown designed with an off-shoulder neckline accented with contrasting blue flowers. The basque waist was accented with a back peplum. She carried a classic bouquet of mixed blue delphiniums and alstromerias.

The best man was the bridegroom's father. Ushers were George Cottingham of Beaufort, Craig Hamilton of Wilmington, brother of the bridegroom, Keith and Ray Brewer Jr. of Greenville, brothers of the bride.

A program of piano music was presented by Diane Hawkins. Kenneth Cobb sang "Wedding Prayer," "One Hand, One Heart" and "We've Only Just Begun."

The mother of the bride wore a periwinkle blue dress and the mother of the bridegroom wore a dusty pink dress. The bridegroom's paternal grandmother wore a peach colored dress and his maternal grandmother wore a dusty rose dress. All were remembered with orchid corsages.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception at their home. Wanda Hamilton poured punch and Mrs. Howard Evans served cake.

Marie Cox directed the wedding.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given Friday night at The Colonial Inn in Farmville by the parents of the bridegroom. A shower was given for the couple in Beaufort prior to the wedding.

The couple will live in Greenville after a trip to Hawaii.

MRS. HAMILTON

The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and attends Pitt Community College. She is employed by Kentucky Fried Chicken. The bridegroom graduated from Beaufort High School and served in the U.S. Navy. He will be self-employed in electronics repair.

Insuring Older Homes Could Cost More Than Newer Ones

From COUNTRY HOME

When it's time to buy insurance, owners of older and historic houses may pay more for less — if they can find brokers.

According to Country Home magazine, many insurance companies regard old houses as firetraps. They also know that old-house materials and workmanship can cost more to replace than modern versions. Some companies simply won't insure old houses, especially those in neighborhoods with high arson and break-in rates, or in the country far from fire and police protection.

In underwriting policies, insurance agents use formulas designed for typical, modern suburban houses. Old houses with hand-carved woodwork, ornate molding, and mechanical systems of unknown vintage make insurers nervous.

"It's a touchy and difficult subject," says David Helphrey of the Chicago insurance firm of A.W. Ormiston & Co. He says firms also fear that high claims for older houses will drive up rates for other homeowners. He cites a claim made when an original gas lantern disappeared from a historic house. "It cost $6,000 to replace. A new lantern would have cost $50."

"Even if everything in an old house looks perfect," and Wyatt Pringle Sr., an insurance agent in the historic area of Beaufort, S.C., "the heart pine can be dried out and fire prone. Elaborate crown molding can be almost impossible to replace. These are unknowns that can't be assessed."

In such cases, the house's replacement value — the cost to rebuild — will skyrocket because of the skilled artisans and costly materials involved.

All these factors lead to higher premiums. For starters, an old house probably won't qualify for the "preferred rate" discount of 20 percent. Craig Conwell, an account executive with Marsh & McLennan Inc., quoted prices ranging from $857 to $1,190 annually for a house insured at $200,000.

Homeowners can take some steps to get the best rate and most effective coverage. "You must sell the underwriters on your house," says Pringle.

Experts recommend:

— Have an independent appraiser inspect your house. Although it can cost up to $800, the in-depth appraisal "can be used for ammunition when bargaining for the best rate," says Helphrey. "It's also an excellent tool for claims."

— Install an alarm that immediately alerts the police or fire department in case of emergency.

— Keep plumbing, heating, wiring, and roofing up to date. Consider overhaul or replacement if these systems are more than 30 years old.

— Create a photographic record of your house focusing on architectural details inside and out.

— Document your house's historic value.

— Contact police for security tips.

— Shop around, but be willing to pay the premium for insuring the full replacement value.

KIDS AND FOOD

NEW YORK (AP) — Explain to your child which foods are good for him and which aren't, but don't force him to eat something he really dislikes, advises Family Circle magazine.

Take that food away and keep it off the menu for a while, the publication suggests. If your kids hate vegetables, for instance, try "disguising" them by mixing them with something they like, the magazine adds.

SUNGLASS PREFERENCES

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — The taste of men and women in sunglasses differs, according to an analysis of last year's sunglass sales by the Sunglass Association of America, with headquarters in Norwalk. The study showed that men prefer metal-framed sunglasses over plastics, while the reverse is true for women.

VET CENTER — David Lynch, readjustment counseling specialist; Harold McMillion, team leader, and Janet Nelson, office manager, go over plans of operation at the new Greenville Vet Center, which is expected to serve about 30,000 veterans in eastern North Carolina. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Vets ...

Post-traumatic stress disorder is a fairly new theory among psychologists and psychiatrists, according to Lynch.

"This comes out in somebody who was under a tremendous amount of stress at one time, but it didn't bother them then," Lynch said. "But at a later time, the person reflects on it, bringing dreams, memories, and sometimes the person goes back into the act that brought on the stress."

"We're very much involved in training local health facilities on how to treat veterans," McMillion said. "Greenville was selected because of its growing medical community, its location and its growth."

The Greenville Vet Center is the fourth in North Carolina. The other three are located in Fayetteville, Charlotte and Greensboro.

"We serve all of eastern North Carolina," McMillion said. "That's basically all places east of Rocky Mount and Wilson."

Lynch estimated that about 30,000 Vietnam veterans are in the area served by the center.

The services of the Vet Center are funded by the Veterans Administration and there is no charge for any of the services to either the veteran or family members. The Vet Center is supported by the V.A. Medical Center in Durham.

"Our main concern at this point is reaching the people outside Greensboro who don't know about us," McMillion said. "Then we can help veterans and their families get back together and help straighten out some lives."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Abby Waits For Answer On Costs Of Boys, Girls

DEAR ABBY: Please help us settle this debate: My sister is expecting a baby soon, and we were discussing the cost of raising a girl vs. a boy from infancy until age 18. I say it costs more to raise a son; my sister says I'm wrong—it costs more to raise a daughter. What do you say?

STILL DEBATING

DEAR STILL: Having raised one of each, I would guess it's more costly to raise a girl. However, if there are any statistics available, I hope someone sends them to me.

Watch this space for a possible official answer.

DEAR ABBY: I have heard that the AIDS virus can be found in bodily secretions. This includes tears, perspiration, urine, saliva, etc. Well, when people swim, they open and close their mouths, so a swimmer with AIDS would be mixing his saliva with the pool water, right?

I had planned to take parent-tot swimming lessons with my infant daughter at a public pool, and now I am concerned for her health and safety.

Please ask your professional sources if a person can get AIDS from a swimming pool that has been used by a person who has AIDS.

CONCERNED PARENT

DEAR CONCERNED: The AIDS virus is very fragile. According to the Mayo Clinic, exposure to such common household chemicals as hydrogen peroxide, rubbing alcohol, Lysol or a 10-percent solution of household bleach will kill the virus. According to the Centers for Disease Control, the chlorine in a swimming pool will also serve as a reliable antiseptic.

DEAR ABBY: Here are some suggested replies to "How come a nice girl like you isn't married?"

Just lucky, I guess.

I'm fussy.

I don't really know. Why did you marry?

I enjoy being single too much.

I haven't received the calling yet.

Not everyone is meant to be married.

Now, for the truth: I was 22 years of age when World War II broke out. In the next six years, 55,000 Canadian lads were killed, many more were seriously wounded, and others married foreign girls.

On the 40th anniversary of "D Day"—June 6, 1984—I wrote the following:

They marched away — strong, tanned, fit, lighthearted young men of Canada.
Girls they left behind are often asked why they never married.
No one can see beyond the brave front they put on, to comprehend
the uncompleted lives, aching hearts,
and loneliness,
year after year after year.

"Why aren't you married?" is not a kind of question to ask a woman at any time.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ALL MY CHINESE READERS: Gung Hay Fat Choy!

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 30-year-old man who's very thin on top. Recently, a friend (bald) talked me into purchasing a hairpiece for $300.

Before I bought the hairpiece, a young woman flipped over me, but after she saw me with that $300 mistake on my head, she wanted nothing to do with me. I am the same man with or without the hairpiece.

Please, bald men everywhere, rise up and be yourselves! You will save yourselves a lot of money and bother. And if a lady doesn't like you the way you are, that's her problem.

Sweet And Sour Sauce Flavors Seafood Variety

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If there's one Chinese dish that Americans have favored over the years it's shrimp or a whole fish served with a sweet and sour sauce.

Should you be moved to try making Sweet and Sour Shrimp at home, I've found a splendid recipe for you. It comes from "Chinese Seafood Cooking" by Stella Lau Fessler (NAL-Plume).

Although the author is at present living in China, during the years she worked on "Chinese Seafood Cooking" she divided her time between lecturing in Chinese at Cornell University and conducting classes in Chinese cooking in her home. It's easy to tell, from her book, why her cooking classes became famous around Ithaca because her recipes sound particularly delicious and her directions are extremely clear.

SWEET AND SOUR SAUCES

SWEET AND SOUR SHRIMP

8-ounce can unsweetened pineapple slices
Sweet-Sour Mixture, see recipe
1 pound medium shrimp (24 to 28)
1-3rd cup cornstarch
1 tablespoon medium sherry
1 tablespoon soy sauce
6-ounce green pepper
6-ounce red pepper
Vegetable oil

Drain pineapple, saving juice (½ cup) for Sweet-Sour Mixture. Cut pineapple slices into small wedges. Reserve juice and wedges.

Make up Sweet-Sour mixture and reserve.

Shell and devein shrimp. In a medium bowl stir together cornstarch, sherry and soy sauce until smooth; add shrimp and mix well to coat; reserve.

Seed and derib green and red pepper; cut into about ¾-inch squares.

In a 10-inch skillet, over medium heat, heat one tablespoon oil. Add peppers and stir-fry for a minute or two. With a slotted spoon remove peppers and reserve. Wipe skillet with a paper towel and set aside for later use.

In a wok, heat two cups oil to 375 degrees. Add half the reserved shrimp, one at a time, and fry until golden brown and crisp — a few minutes. Remove shrimp to paper towels to drain. Repeat with remaining shrimp; reserve.

Into the 10-inch skillet over medium heat pour the reserved Sweet-Sour Mixture and, stirring constantly, cook until clear, thickened and boiling. Add reserved pineapple wedges, peppers and shrimp. Mix and reheat briefly. Serve hot with rice.

Makes 4 main-dish servings.

SWEET-SOUR MIXTURE: In a small bowl stir together one tablespoon cornstarch and 3 tablespoons sugar. Gradually whisk in ½ cup pineapple juice (reserved from pineapple slices), ¼ cup cider vinegar, ¼ cup ketchup and 1½ teaspoons soy sauce until smooth. Stir in 1 finely chopped garlic clove.

FIRE DEPARTMENT CONDUCTS HOTEL STUDY

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A survey of hotel fire safety codes in 10 major U.S. cities has shown that a majority of the codes do not set flame-resistance standards for upholstered furnishings or mattresses.

The Boston Fire Department conducted the study, which examined the codes in the top 10 business travel cities. They are: Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Houston, Los Angeles, New York, San Francisco, Tampa and Washington, D.C.

The study was underwritten by Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., a major manufacturer of the glass fiber yarns used in producing new flame-resistant fabrics.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Don't let a decorator talk you out of a color you like for one you dislike or feel lukewarm about.

Some decorators have a tendency to use the same fabrics over and over again although there are certain rules one does need to go by. For example, if a room has a northern or eastern exposure, warm hues or colors should be used such as red or orange to warm the room. If a room has a southern or western exposure, a cool color should be used such as blue or green.

It is much more interesting if one room has a floral fabric in window treatments, an adjoining room a stripe and perhaps the next room a solid. Variety once again adds interest.

It also has a more enlarging effect if three colors are used but in different proportions and varying intensities. For example, with a color scheme of blue, rose and yellow, one bedroom could have a navy blue dominant color with yellow as the secondary color and rose as the accent color. The next bedroom could be dominant rose with baby blue as a secondary color and yellow as an accent.

At Betsy Drake Interiors, we have the resources and professional decorating background to help you achieve the special look you seek in home or office decorating. We invite you to visit our showroom or call to schedule an appointment in your home or office. We look forward to working with you and turning your dreams into reality.

Halley's Comet Set To Make Swing Around Backside Of Sun

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Halley's comet, invisible from Earth but watched by the Pioneer Venus spacecraft, begins its return trip to the outer reaches of the solar system this weekend as it swings around behind the sun at 122,000 mph.

"If you were riding on Halley's comet, this would be the climactic time of its entire 76-year orbit," said Alan MacRobert, an editor at Sky & Telescope magazine in Cambridge, Mass.

The most recent calculations of the comet's orbit showed it would reach perihelion — its closest approach to the sun at a distance of 54,575,000 miles — at 6 a.m. EST Sunday, said Ravenel Wimberly, a computer scientist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena.

The comet is now on the far side of the sun from Earth. Although not actually blocked by the sun, the comet disappeared from the view of Earth-bound observers in late January because of the sun's glare. It is expected to reappear late this month or in early March.

Before the comet vanished from view, its dust tail "was at least 10 million miles long and growing. It was very healthy," said University of Hawaii astronomer Dale Cruikshank. "That gives us high hopes for a very active comet when it comes out from behind the sun."

Wimberly said the comet's speed at perihelion was calculated as 122,000 mph, its highest speed during its elongated orbit. It slowly loses speed as it heads away from the sun.

In about 38 years — half its average 76-year orbital period — Halley's comet will reach aphelion, its farthest point from the sun at about 3½ billion miles. At that point, the comet, moving at only 2,000 mph, will be between the orbits of Neptune and Pluto, the solar system's outermost planets.

The comet is being observed by the Pioneer Venus Orbiter spacecraft, also known as Pioneer 12, from its orbit around the planet Venus. The satellite doesn't have a camera, but does measure ultraviolet light emitted by the comet.

Those measurements will be used to construct picture-like images of the comet, said Richard Fimmel, Pioneer project manager at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center in Mountain View.

NASA engineers send daily orders to maneuver the probe so it can keep watching the comet through March 6, Fimmel said.

"For a couple of weeks before and after perihelion, it (the comet) is close enough to the sun that the sunlight is shining down on its surface with almost three times the intensity that sunlight shines on Earth," MacRobert said.

That makes ice and gases evaporate from the comet.

"After a very long period of time, there is a chance the comet will dwindle away altogether," Cornell University astronomer Carl Sagan said from his temporary office at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. "But it's been here since the last Ice Age and is unlikely to dissipate for many tens or hundreds of thousands of years."

Even though the comet receives the most sunlight at perihelion, it will at its brightest one to two weeks later, the period of greatest evaporation of light-reflecting material, Cruikshank said.

"A comet brightens because it absorbs heat from the sun. But it takes days for the heat to penetrate into the body of the comet," he explained.

At its brightest, the comet still won't be visible from Earth. But it makes its closest approach to Earth on its current journey, about 39 million miles from the planet, during the afternoon of April 10 in North American time zones.

After the comet emerges from the sun's glare, it will be visible from mid-northern latitudes — Europe, Japan and all but the northernmost United States — very low above the southeast horizon just before dawn, MacRobert said. From the tropics and the southern hemisphere, it will be visible just above the eastern horizon, he added.

Thousands Jam Streets In Miami's 'Little Haiti'

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — As many as 5,000 people thronged the streets of Miami's Little Haiti on Saturday night as the refugee community returned to celebrating the downfall of Haiti's President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier, police said.

Many revelers wore bright T-shirts, and vendors sold red-and-blue buttons, balloons and T-shirts. Red and blue had been the nation's colors before the Duvalier regime.

The deposed dictator fled Haiti on Friday in the face of a mass uprising. He and his family were given temporary exile in France, and are staying in a luxury hotel in Tallories, in the southeastern part of the country.

Police said the crowd was well-behaved, and the only injury reported was a minor cut when a man fell.

Posters on a bandstand expressed some anti-American sentiment, proclaiming "No U.S. Intervention in Haiti" and "Duvalier Is Gone But Watch Out For The Big Bird." The Big Bird was depicted as an eagle holding a piece of the map of Haiti in its mouth.

In New York, about 15,000 members Haitians held an orderly demonstration, police said.

A 100-block march from the Miami refugee neighborhood to a bayside memorial and back, scheduled for Saturday before Duvalier fled Haiti, was canceled.

The march to the John F. Kennedy Torch of Friendship had been planned to protest Duvalier's refusal to give up control of his impoverished Caribbean nation. The Torch of Friendship was dedicated in the 1960s and has served as a symbol of freedom to Miami's Latin American and Caribbean exile communities.

The leader of the estimated 60,000-member Haitian community, the Rev. Gerard Jean-Juste, said he agreed to keep revelers out of the streets until 6 p.m. so customers could reach local businesses during the day.

Friday's celebration, which began before dawn with news of Duvalier's departure, ended quietly and promptly with an informal vote to go home around midnight.

"They all broke up very peacefully. They surprised me how quickly they left," said Miami police spokesman Juan Santos.

Three shootings occurred late Friday among a crowd of 2,500 in the cordoned-off, two-square-block area, but none was serious, police said.

One man suffered a wounded arm, one a wounded hand and one an injured leg in the shootings, Santos said. He said all three were in stable condition at Jackson Memorial Hospital.

A riot squad was sent in immediately after the shootings but was called back within minutes, Santos said. No arrests have been made, he said.

Earlier, about 100 Haitians gathered outside the Haitian consulate in downtown Miami after news of Duvalier's flight spread. They chanted "Down with Duvalier!" and called for the Haitian consular officer to come out.

Helmeted Miami police kept the crowd from the door, and the demonstrators left after three of them were allowed to enter the consulate under police guard to see that no one was inside.

They also were allowed to hang a red-and-blue flag inside. The late Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, in power from 1957 until his death in 1971, had changed Haiti's colors to red and black. The elder Duvalier, father of Jean-Claude or "Baby Doc," claimed to have voodoo powers and apparently chose black for mystical reasons.

In Boston, two men were arrested Friday after a group of people rampaged through the Haitian consulate, smashing Duvalier portraits.

registered passengers who boarded or left the train at Jasper and Hinton, its last two stops.

Survivors, some transported by helicopter, were treated at Hinton Hospital, where 64 were released and three were admitted, said employees. At least a dozen seriously injured were taken to Edmonton by ambulance. Police set up a makeshift morgue in Hinton, a town with a population of 1,800, Jennings said.

Herman Adams of Paradise Valley, Alberta, limped off an ambulance bus went into the hospital. "All I can tell you is it just felt like our car went up a couple of times and then down and over on its side," he said.

The estimated number of dead would place the crash among the worst in Canadian history. On Sept. 1, 1947, 31 people were killed when two passenger trains collided head-on at Dugald, Manitoba.

In remote areas in most of Canada, particularly in the west, passengers and freight trains share the same tracks, but freight has the right-of-way. Cross-country Via Rail passenger trains are often a half-day behind schedule because they must frequently move onto sidetracks to let freight trains pass.

The last major fatal train accident in Alberta left five people dead in March 1983 when a Via Rail dayliner slammed into four empty cars on a siding near Carstairs, 37miles north of Calgary. Officials said a work crew had left a switch open, diverting the dayliner onto the siding.

Flares Cause Aurora

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — One of the strongest geomagnetic storms since 1976 disrupted communications across much of the northern United States on Saturday, a spokesman at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said.

The disruption of the Earth's normal magnetic field meant problems for satellites, radios and aircraft, but also meant a "northern lights" display much farther south than usual, a spokesman at NOAA's Space Environment Services Center said.

The spokesman, Bill Brennan, said this week's storms — the worst of which started at midafternoon Saturday and was expected to last 24 hours — were linked to a series of powerful solar flares this week.

In a geomagnetic storm, a surge of energy from the sun enters the earth's magnetic field and causes all sorts of electrical interferences.

While such a phenomenon can also mean difficulties with power distribution and phone lines, engineers monitoring such systems can make adjustments to deal with the problems, Brennan said.

The aurora borealis from Saturday's storm was expected to be overhead in the latitude that encompasses both New York and Chicago, Brennan said.

In fact, the storm's intensity meant that "if the skies are clear, you will be able to see an aurora from almost anyplace in the United States," Brennan said.

Visits Easier

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — East Germany is permitting more East Germans to visit family and friends in West Germany, the weekly Spiegel magazine reported.

The new regulations allow East Germans previously banned from visiting West Germany to see relatives and friends there in certain "humanitarian cases," the magazine reported, without citing its sources.

Relics Found

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A museum expert termed an ornamental casket recently unearthed from beneath an abandoned castle "the find of a century," and a newspaper said remains inside may be those of a saint.

The casket, covered with gold-coated copper sheeting and enamel, is "a unique work, such as has not been found in entire Central Europe," Dagmar Hejdova, director of Prague's Applied Art Museum, said. "It's a monumental ... Romamesque goldsmith work of world importance, without exaggeration the find of a century."

The casket was found at Becov Castle, about 70 miles northwest of Prague, Ms. Hejdova said. "The reliquary is no doubt the work of the (German) Cologne-Mosel circle where similar works were created in the second half of the 12th century."

Warriors Paste Bullets, 85-45

LEGGETT — North Edgecombe romped to an 85-45 victory over Jamesville Friday night in Tobacco Belt basketball play and eliminated the Bullets from the post-season league tournament.

Jamesville's girls pulled out a 49-47 victory over North Edgecombe in their game on a last second shot by Tammy Crisp.

The loss dropped Jamesville's boys to 2-14 on the year in league play, 2-15 overall. With but two games left to play, the Bullets can do no better than tie Bear Grass for eighth place — the last to qualify for the league's tournament in two weeks. However, the Bears won both of their regular season meetings, thus closing out the Bullets.

North Edgecombe, meanwhile, took a step closer to the league title by boosting its record to 13-1 while the Warriors are 14-4 in league.

The Warriors rushed out to a 21-8 lead in the first period and never were in danger after that. They pushed their lead to 37-18 by halftime and ran up a 61-31 lead after three periods.

North Edgecombe outscored the Bullets, 24-14, in the final period to complete the rout.

Ronald Whitaker led North Edgecombe with 18 points while Clifton Williams added 12, Keith Blaylock had 12 and Phillip Conyers added 11. Jamesville was led by Eric Spruill with 15 and John Hagan with 12.

In the girls' contest, it was tight all the way. North Edgecombe took a 16-12 lead after one period, but Jamesville came back to close to within one at the half, 26-25. The Lady Bullets then took the lead in the third period with a 13-8 advantage, 38-34. North Edgecombe hung tight, however, and tied it at 47-47 before Crisp hit with one second left to go to give the Lady Bullets the win.

Crisp finished with 23 points while Cindy Getchell had 10. Shonika Hill led North Edgecombe with 14 while Karen Tillery hit 12.

Jamesville's girls are now 7-9 in league play and 8-9 overall. North Edgecombe falls to 3-11, 3-13.

Jamesville travels to Aurora on Tuesday.

JV Game: North Edgecombe 51, Jamesville 29.

Light Always Knew She'd Be The Boss

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — Actress Judith Light wasn't in the least surprised when "Who's the Boss?" — the ABC sitcom which casts her opposite ex-boxer Tony Danza — KO'd NBC's "The A-Team" and became a bona fide hit in its second season.

And she doesn't ascribe any of the show's sudden success to the plastic Mr. T doll that sits in a corner of her Hollywood dressing room and has a hatpin protruding from a sensitive spot in its anatomy.

She is, she says, "a Mary Poppins at heart"...a hopeless optimist who, having broken her vow never to sully her thespian reputation with a role in a sitcom, assumed that her guardian angel would not permit her to be associated with a failure. As it happens, Miss Light is pretty good at breaking promises to herself.

"When I started out as an actress in New York, I was like all the other young idealists I hung out with — I agreed that no matter how broke I was, I'd never work on a soap opera, because if you deserted the theatuh, you were not a true artist. But when I was offered a part in 'One Life to Live,' I decided high ideals didn't pay the rent, and took it."

Miss Light's other personal pacts ruled out any romantic relationship with a fellow actor, and forbade her from following the herd and forsaking New York for California. First, she came west to parlay her five years on "One Life to Live" into an assault on primetime; then she married Robert Desiderio, a former co-star from the soap opera who had become the only man in her life.

Omar Sharif Plays Swinish Sultan

By Robert DiMatteo

There's something for almost every taste on this week's schedule, as the networks parade an array of made-for-TV movies.

Want to submerge yourself in the story of an ardent freedom fighter who works to overthrow a tyrannical sultan? Then tune in to ABC's Harem (Feb. 9, 10), one of those dramas that takes a little bit from the headlines and a lot from the cliche stockpile. Fans of matinee idol Omar Sharif can swoon over the actor in the role of the cruel despot. It takes a lot these days to get Mr. Sharif away from the bridge table — although based on the roles he chooses, it can't be that he's too selective. "Harem" co-stars Ava Gardner and "Jewel in the Crown" sensation Art Malik.

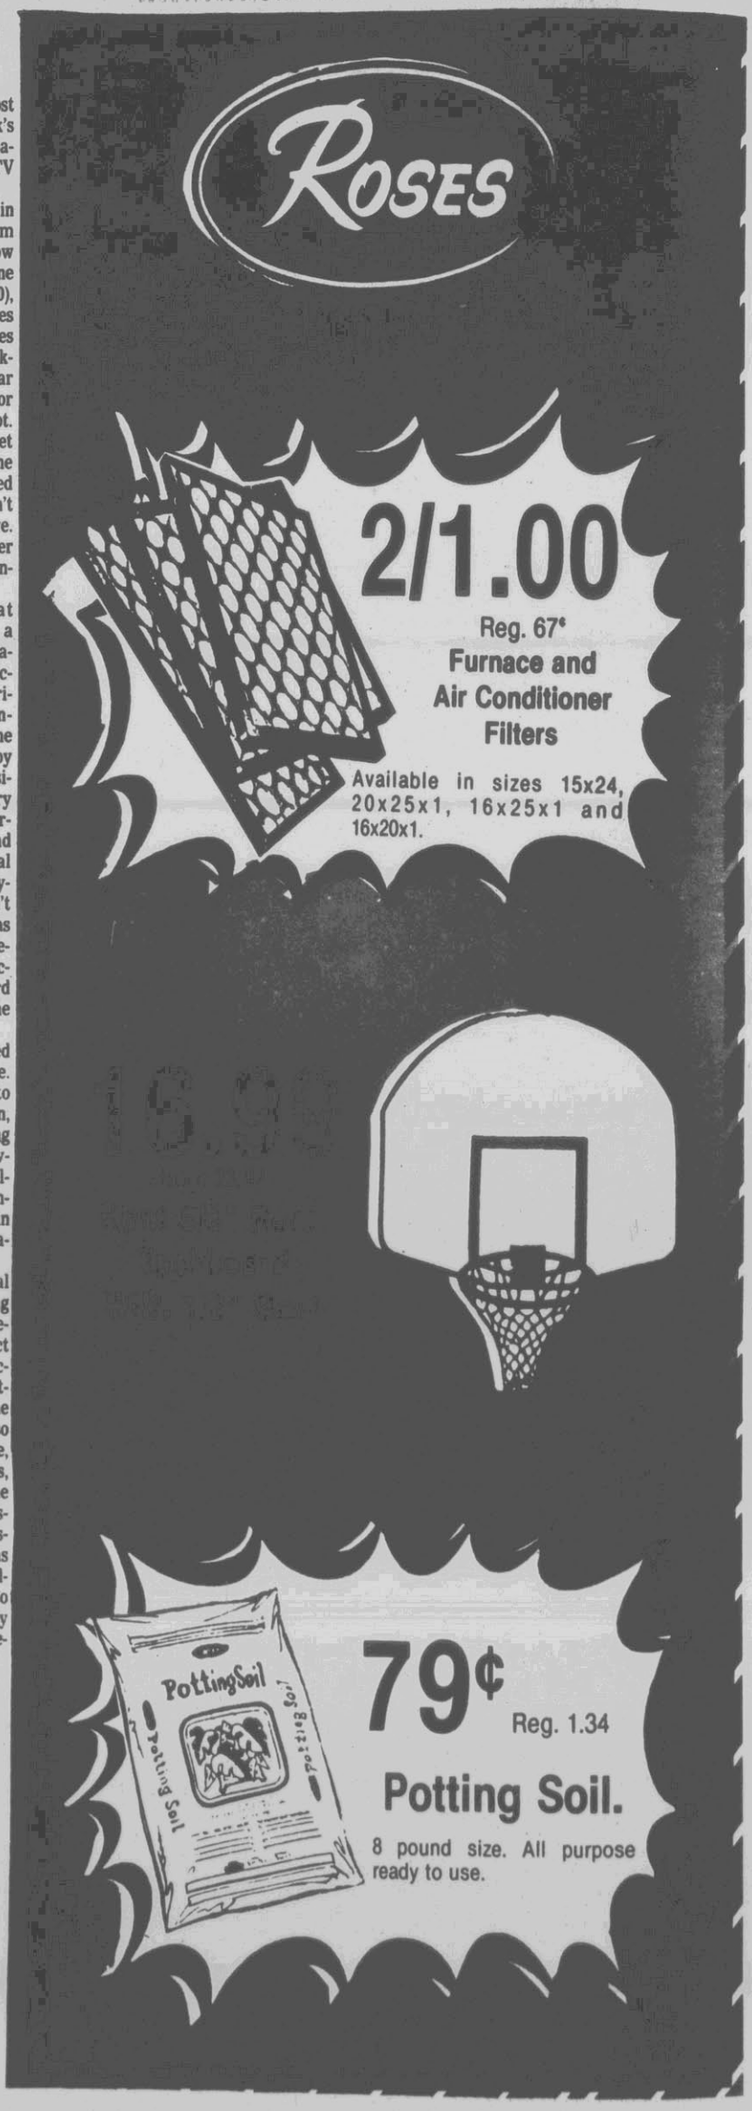

The same night that "Harem" begins, NBC offers a clearly headline-inspired drama, Under Siege (Feb. 9), a fictionalized study of the American response to foreign-inspired acts of terrorism in the United States. Co-written by Bob Woodward ("All the President's Men"), this cautionary political thriller pivots on a terrorist rocket attack in broad daylight on the U.S Capitol. Hal Holbrook, a specialist at playing public figures (when he isn't doing Mark Twain), turns up as the beleaguered president. Peter Strauss, E.G. Marshall, Victoria Tennant, George Grizzard and Paul Winfield round out the talented cast.

CBS has two issue-oriented "made-fors" on its schedule. Child's Cry (Feb. 9) delves into the subject of child molestation, with Lindsay Wagner starring as a social worker who discovers why a 6-year-old boy (Taliesin Jaffe) is so unusually withdrawn. Peter Coyote appears in the crucial role of the boy's father.

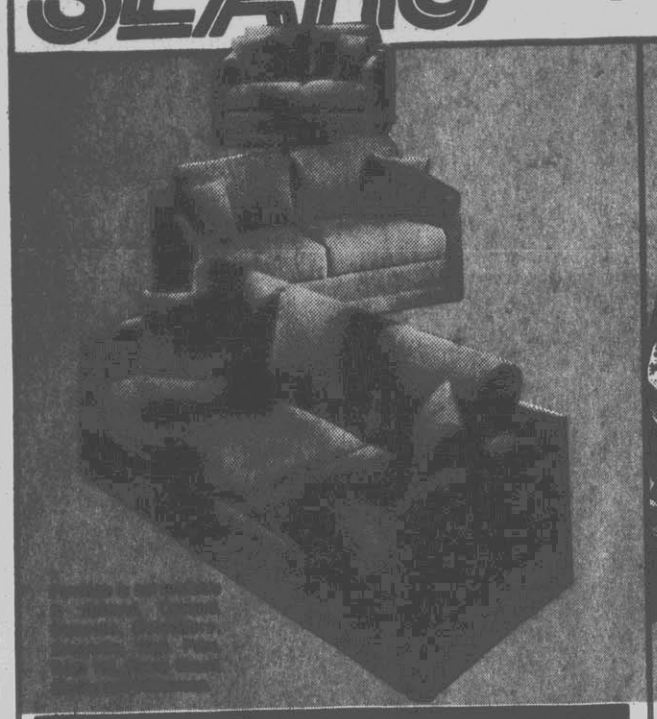

On Feb. 11, CBS airs Vital Signs, a tale of the debilitating effects of alcohol and drug dependency. This familiar subject is seen from a fresh perspective: the alcoholic is a respected surgeon (Ed Asner), and the heavy drug user is his son, also a doctor (played by Gary Cole, star of "Fatal Vision"). Thus, the film becomes a study of the pressures that a certain profession can bring to bear upon susceptible individuals, as much as it is a portrait of drug dependency. "Vital Signs" manages to be a well-acted, reasonably probing example of the issue-movie.

No More Rich Mitch

Mitch Snyder walked away from a $50,000 Madison Avenue job to devote his life to helping the nation's homeless and destitute. Martin Sheen stars in a fact-based account of the activist's national-awareness campaign in "Samaritan: The Mitch Snyder Story," now in production in Los Angeles. Also raising consciousnesses in the CBS film are Cicely Tyson as a plucky homeless woman and Roxanne Hart as Sheen's girlfriend.

The Shark Talks About Quitting

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian pulled a Frisbee-sized wheat wafer from a drawer, took a few bites and washed it down with a glass of water. It didn't look much better than the towels he often chews during close games.

"My fibers," he explained. "I try to eat a lot of fibers."

A stint at the famous La Costa health spa near San Diego during the off-season has transformed Tarkanian into a health freak. He looks 10 years younger since eschewing spicy Armenian dishes for wheat wafers, bean curd and an exercise bicycle.

But even as he celebrates his 25th season as a college basketball coach, Tarkanian talks about leaving a game that has consumed his life since 1956, when he made his debut as head coach of San Joaquin (Calif.) Memorial High School.

"I'm getting very tired and very old," said the 55-year-old coach of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas team. "I don't know, but I don't figure I'll last too much longer.

"It's tough having coached this long because you can't remain calm. I don't know how to remain calm during a game," he said. "I think a team reflects a coach's personality and I'm a very intense coach. I want my guys intense before a game, just like I am."

Friends say they can't imagine basketball without Tark, whose .814 winning percentage on the major college level (428-98) is the highest among active coaches.

Yet he feels his battles with the NCAA have left him scarred in the eyes of the public and have overshadowed a career in which his teams have won at least 20 games every year but one since he took over at Long Beach State 18 years ago.

"I'll be bitter my whole life," Tarkanian said. "I can never make up what they did to me."

The National Collegiate Athletic Association tried to suspend Tarkanian for alleged violations in the UNLV basketball program during the mid-1970s. But following a two-week trial in 1984, a district judge ordered the NCAA to drop any action against Tarkanian and later ordered both the school and the NCAA to pay most of his attorneys' fees.

Tarkanian speaks less of the NCAA these days, professing not even to know the status of a its appeal.

He'd rather talk about the surprise of having a 21-2 team, ranked No. 9 in the nation despite the lack of a decent big man and the loss of three starters from last year's squad. The Runnin' Rebels have a chance to win 30 games even before the conference and NCAA tournament.

"It amazes me that we've been able to keep up with the top teams," Tarkanian said. "We don't have great players in every position, but we've got guys who know their jobs and do them well."

These aren't exactly the Rebels of 1976-77, who averaged more than 110 points a game and gave Tarkanian his only trip to the Final Four. They have, however, scored more than 100 points three times this season, while averaging a respectable 78 points a game.

UNLV's losses so far — with only eight of their first 23 games at home — all have been to North Carolina teams. The Rebels fell 65-60 to North Carolina in the Alaska Shootout and dropped a 80-73 decision to North Carolina State in Hawaii.

"If we had some good post play we could really do well," said Tarkanian, who has been disappointed in the play of 6-10 Indiana transfer John Flowers and in the development of 6-9 sophomore Rickey Robinson. "We're really hurting inside and when we play a tall team like North Carolina State we really have trouble."

The Rebels have gotten where they are almost entirely because of three players, hometown guard Freddie Banks and forwards Anthony Jones and Armon Gilliam.

The 6-8 Gilliam has been the team's only real inside threat, averaging 15 points a game and 8.7 rebounds. Banks and Jones play the perimeter, taking advantage of the PCAA's three-point line with 20-foot-plus bombs that land often enough to make them the leading scorers with 18.6 and 16.7 points a game, respectively.

"The reason we're good is all three of those kids we have back are all having great years," Tarkanian said. "If those three weren't having great years we'd be a mediocre team. We have a point guard who can't shoot and no center."

UNLV has trouble getting blue-chip freshmen, a problem Tarkanian blames on false images parents and teachers have of Las Vegas as a community and on his battles with the NCAA.

"If we could get freshmen it would be the easier way to go," he said. "We compete with the Bradleys, the Drakes. We don't recruit against the UCLAs, the Michigans, the Kentuckys."

Alex English Is A Poet; But Very Few Know It

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

"When I open
you to see, I get chilled.
Why is that?"

DENVER (AP) — Alex English wrote that when he wasn't playing basketball for the Denver Nuggets, something he does very well and with little fanfare.

Indeed, the NBA's poet laureate is so low-key he once scored 54 points against the Houston Rockets and shocked his teammates, who didn't realize his final total until the game was finished.

"That's just the way Alex is," Coach Doug Moe said. "He does his thing night after night, and you don't notice him until you read the box score after the game. When a guy gets so great, you sort of ignore everything he does."

Not everything.

English, making his fifth All-Star Game appearance on Sunday, is the National Basketball Association's leading scorer with a 29.4 points-per-game average. Those aren't just pretty numbers for this season.

The 6-foot-7 forward annually is among the league's leading scorers, averaging 26 points during the past five seasons — second only to Utah's Adrian Dantley.

Yet his style — quiet, unassuming — sometimes obscures his productivity.

His game is characterized by grace, not power.

Disdainful of the rim-rattling slam dunks that dominate the game, English prefers the soft bank shot off the glass. His floating jump shot, released with maximum arm extension and difficult to block, seems always to settle gently into the net.

"You imprinted your style upon my mind and now that you're
it's very hard to erase.
I need a new eraser."

Some might say he needs a new image, largely because he's relatively anonymous outside Denver despite superstar stats.

He thinks he knows why.

"There's nothing spectacular about my game," English said. "I'm not a Dr. J or a Michael Jordan. People who go to NBA games like to see ferocious slam dunks, the alley-oop play, slick ball-handling. That's not my style. And I'm not going to change now."

Furthermore, he says, toiling out of the public eye is fine with him.

English hungered for recognition when he first broke into the league with the Milwaukee Bucks in 1976, a second-round draft pick out of South Carolina.

"Early in my career, I might have regretted not playing in L.A. or New York," said English.

"I guess I was more concerned with notoriety then. You don't get the recognition in Denver you might get somewhere else. But I've had time to grow and accept it. I don't regret playing here.

"Now I realize I wouldn't have had any privacy somewhere else, I wouldn't have been able to go anywhere without being stared at or asked for my autograph. It's sort of nice that some recognition is coming at the end of my career. It doesn't matter so much to me now."

"I thought for years that I would have to please others to be accepted.
What a struggle that was.
Now I know that I have to please me before I can please another.
Now that I know this the struggle's easier."

After two nondescript years in Milwaukee, English became a free agent and signed with Indiana, averaging about 16 points a game before being traded to Denver in a 1980 deal that sent George McGinnis back to the Pacers.

English averaged 23.8 points the 1980-81 season, his first full year in Denver. But the Nuggets decided to offer him to the San Diego Clippers for a first-round draft pick, even-up.

("Thank God there are people in the world dumber than me," Moe said.)

The Nuggets said they didn't think they could match an offer sheet English had signed with Seattle, but eventually both sides came to terms and English stayed.

Now they're at it again.

English, who earns $825,000 a year, will need a new contract at the end of this season. He says he'd like to stay in Denver.

Though the Nuggets initially balked at his original salary proposal in August, team officials now say they intend to re-sign English.

"I'm upset they didn't negotiate and get it over with," English said. "I thought I had done a lot for this team, and I shouldn't have to go through free agency. I feel Mr. Shlenker (owner Sidney Shlenker) will deal with me fairly. I'm trying not to think about it during the season."

"For an instant
I felt that you truly wanted to share friendship, then you asked me the cost of the car I drove..."

At 32, English is one of the league's elder statesmen, but he bristles at suggestions his career may have peaked.

"My body is holding up well. I think I'd like to play three more years, at the most. Then I could feel good about retiring and spending more time with my family."

And his poems?

"Oh, sure," he said. "I may have another book of poetry out this spring."

He writes whenever the mood suits him, sensitive sentences that expose feelings few of his colleagues would consider revealing.

So far, English has put together two self-published collections of his work.

Vandy Starting Tough Testing

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vanderbilt, still operating its sports program in the shadow of last year's steriod scandal, has started one of the toughest drug testing programs for athletes in the 10-member Southeastern Conference, according to a Nashville newspaper's survey.

While testing programs at Vanderbilt and the University of Georgia were ranked as the most stringent in the conference by the Nashville Banner, the city's afternoon newspaper, precautions taken at the University of Tennessee were said to be among the league's weakest.

At Vanderbilt, athletes are given one major drug test and are then subject to random tests throughout the year, said Athletic Director Roy Kramer.

Athletes at Tennessee need only pass an announced preseason test. Those fail are the only ones subject to further testing during the year, university officials said.

Vanderbilt athletes face mandatory suspension after testing positive a single time for cocaine or steroid use, and face mandatory suspension after testing positive twice for marijuana. University of Tennessee athletes can fail up to three drug tests before facing possible suspension.

Concern about drug use has increased in the SEC since charges of sale and delivery of cocaine were lodged by Knoxville authorities against former Tennessee football players Tony Robinson and Kenneth "B.B." Cooper.

ED ROSE is a effective business manager. Ed has professional training, leadership and experience in a major international corporation directing others. Ed knows what needs to be done to fix the problems in the courthouse. In private industry, managers are faced with limited resources and shortages of manpower on a daily basis. These managers must be cost effective and protect the corporate dollar, or they are very quickly shown the door!. Night court is simply not a solution, since we are also short on jail space. Expanding the courthouse, placing a heavy tax burden on you, is a bad solution. Ed Rose thinks we need new leadership and better utilization of our present resources in the courthouse. This coming election for Clerk of Superior Court, Ed Rose is giving the voters of Pitt County a real choice in the May 6th Primary. Vote Ed Rose and we will be proud of our courthouse. Dear friends, I will see you all next Sunday in the Personals. Send a small tax deductible contribution. Sponsored by Ed Rose, Democrat for Clerk of Superior Court, P.O. Box 8384, Greenville, N.C.

Subject: "Under Siege"

By Connie Passalacqua

Sometimes life really does imitate art. In 1979, "The China Syndrome," a film centering on the aftereffects of a meltdown in a nuclear power plant, opened a few scant days before the Three Mile Island power plant in Pennsylvania had a meltdown. Now, NBC has turned over three prime-time hours to "Under Siege," a TV movie that examines the profound effects of a murder spree instigated by a fictional international terrorist. The movie, airing Sunday, Feb. 9 on NBC, includes many deadly incidents instantly recognizable as terrorist attacks that have taken place recently. And may very well take place again.

A disguised stranger pulls a bomb-laden truck onto a military base, detonates the bomb and kills himself and hundreds of innocent GIs. Many die when bombs are detonated in a shopping area. Airplanes become death chambers to unsuspecting passengers. All of these horrors occur in "Under Siege," and none too subtly copy the recent real-life terrorist-caused tragedies in Beirut, London and Athens. Only here, the military base is in suburban Maryland, the shopping area is in downtown Washington, D.C., and the airplane blown up is on a shuttle flight originating in Boston.

Despite the horrific events, "Under Siege" presents itself calmly and with dignity. It is notable for its lack of sensationalism. There are no screaming New York Post headlines. The focus instead is on crisis management, and centers on the questionable decision-making processes of the spineless president, Madison Monroe (Hal Holbrook), as he is cajoled and manipulated by the very opinionated members of his cabinet. His chief aide, Haldeman-like Geoffrey Adams (Mason Adams), wants him to immediately retaliate against Iran — even though the terrorists have not yet been proven to be Iranian. Hawkish Secretary of State Harold Sloane (E.G. Marshall) and CIA chief Bernard Hughes (Fritz Weaver) almost chomp at their respective bits, as the domestic crimes are not within their jurisdiction. Decisions and total responsibility for action fall on FBI Director John Garry (Peter Strauss).

What happens if the United States is attacked by terrorists? Mason Adams, Hal Holbrook and Fritz Weaver (left to right) star in "Under Siege," a three-hour movie about such a terrifying idea. The film airs Feb. 9 on NBC.

Readers Pick Their Favorite Videos

By E.A. Vare

The Rock On TV annual Readers' Poll results are in, and a big thank you to all the readers who took the time to express their opinions. Another big thank you to Mary Toledo, who worked her fingers (and toes) to the bone, tallying up the numbers.

Here then, the winners:

Best All-Around Music Video: "We Are the World" by USA for Africa. Coming in a close second was "Take On Me" by newcomers A-Ha.

Best Video by a Male Artist: "Every Time You Go Away" by Paul Young. This long-shot comfortably beat runner-up "Raspberry Beret" by Prince.

Best Video by a Female Artist: "Material Girl" by Madonna. Madonna leaped in leagues ahead of her closest competitor: Tina Turner's "What's Love Got to Do With It."

Best Video by a Group: "Take On Me" by A-Ha. Second-place finishers were Dire Straits ("Money for Nothing"), who tied with USA for Africa.

Most Impressive Debut: "Take On Me" by A-Ha. No one else even came close.

Worst Video of the Year: "Cry" by Godley and Creme. As directors, you love them; as performers... well, not quite.

Best Song of 1985, Regardless of What the Video Looked Like: "We Are the World" by USA for Africa. A sentimental favorite all around. Runner-up was Dire Straits' "Money for Nothing."

Bruins Hold Off Rose, 69-63

STANTONSBURG — Wilson Beddingfield held off Rose High School in the final period of play to gain a 69-63 win and preserve its share of first place in the Big East standings.

Beddingfield's girls also maintained a share of first, knocking Rose out of a three-way tie for the lead, with a 46-41 win.

The win boosted the Beddingfield boys' record to 8-2 in conference play and 16-2 overall. The girls are now 8-2, 11-7.

Rose's boys fall to 4-6, 10-8, while the girls are now 7-3, 13-6.

David King scored the first two baskets of the evening for the Bruins, giving them a 4-0 edge. Then, after Martin Norville broke the ice for Rose just over a minute into the game, King added two more baskets to run the lead to 8-2.

Norville again broke the ice for the Rampants and Beddingfield turned the ball over four straight times after that to allow Melvin Jenkins and Lenny Langley to help Rose scramble back. Langley's steal and layup finally tied it up at 14-14 at the end of the period.

Jenkins then put Rose into the lead for the first time wth 6:10 left in the game, but Randy Cotton tied it up for the Bruins again. Gus Ward followed with a pair of outside jumper to help Beddingfield move out to a 22-16 lead.

Thanks to good board play — a 21-9 rebounding advantage in the first half — and some missed free throws by the Rampants, Beddingfield then held its lead at 32-28 at intermission.

Beddingfield slowly built its lead to nine points early in the third period but turnovers again helped the Rampants get back into the game. Langley scored with 1:40 left to cut the lead to 44-41 and two free throws by Jenkins cut it to 44-43 with 1:04 left.

Ricky Outlaw hit to give Rose the lead once more, 45-44, but Ward scored on a breakaway to hold a 46-45 lead at the end of the period.

Rose hung close to the Bruins and Outlaw hit with 2:10 left to close it to 58-56. After an exchange of baskets, George Atkinson hit a pair of free throws to make it 62-58 and Ward followed with a basket for a six-point spread.

Rose closed back to within three, 64-61. Jenkins then fouled out and the Bruins made one of two at the stripe, followed by a Curtis Perkins basket that cut it to 65-63.

Rose was not to score again, however, as Beddingfield hit two at the line and added a basket for the final six-point margin.

"Our front court people should have stayed home," a disappointed Coach Jim Brewington said. "They let Beddingfield's height really intimidate them inside, especially on their offensive boards."

King led the Beddingfield scoring with 25 points while Ward added 16 and Gregg Ballard had 11. Jenkins paced Rose with 21, while Outlaw had 12 and Langley had 11.

Rose's girls, fighting to stay in a share of first place, took a 13-10 lead in the first period. The game slowed in the second quarter and Beddingfield held an 8-4 advantage. That pushed them into an 18-17 lead at intermission.

The third period proved the difference. Beddingfield came out burning and outscored Rose, 21-12, to raise their lead to 39-29. Rose outscored the Lady Bruins, 12-7, in the last period, but it wasn't enough.

Jennifer Johnson led Beddingfield with 14 points while Alisha Vines had 13. Vicki Parrott led Rose with 10.

"They outhit us from the line, and that was the difference," Coach Bill Kuykendall said. Beddingfield made 14 of 22 shots while Rose canned only three of ten.

"I thought we played very well. We played man-to-man defense the whole game and did a good job with it.

"(Kim) Dupree got hurt in the third period and we didn't make an adjustment when she was out," the coach said. "Those four or five minutes were enough for Beddingfield to build out to an 11 point lead. Kim came back in in the fourth period and we were able to cut it back to three, but no closer. If we had made a couple of layups we missed, we might have pulled it out.

"Still, it was a good game to watch. We played hard and I thought we had a chance to win."

Rose travels to Kinston on Tuesday.

HAVELOCK — Waldo Richards scored 27 points to help offset 30 by Conley's Ricky Farrow as Havelock defeated the Vikings Friday night, 67-55, in Coastal Conference action.

Havelock's girls also came away with a win, downing the Valkyries, 52-40.

The two boys' teams were tied after one period of play, 13-13, and things didn't change a bit in the second quarter. Both pumped in 19 points to run the score to 32-32 at intermission.

In the third period, Conley finally managed to inch ahead, taking a 44-42 edge into the final period. But the Vikes ran out of gas in that quarter, as Havelock roared to a 25-11 margin to win the game.

Alvin West added 14 points for Havelock.

Conley's girls stormed out to a 12-6 lead in the first period of their game, but couldn't hold onto it. Havelock came back with a 16-9 margin in the second quarter and took a 22-21 lead into halftime.

Patti Carr and Paige Bragg each had 12 points to lead GCA. No one scored in double figures for Wake.

"We got some momentum established with the early lead and were able to take the ball down inside on them. We got them into foul trouble and pulled away from there," Thatcher said.

GCA's boys slump to 9-7 with the loss while the girls are now 12-2. The Knights play host to Wilson on Tuesday.

Pride In Heritage

By ROBERT O'MEARA
Associated Press Writer

KESHENA, Wis. (AP) — At Menominee High School, the reading, writing and mathematics of modern education mingle with the sounds of the Menominee language, the beat of drums and the cadence of tribal dances.

This is the 10th school year since the Indians of the Menominee Reservation separated from the Shawano-Gresham School District to open their own district among the pines of northeastern Wisconsin.

"In Shawano, we had no cultural programs of any kind, no language," said Lisa Waukau, a social studies teacher. "Most Americans can go to Ireland, England, Europe or whatever and find their background.

"Ours is a strong oral tradition and we came close to losing our language. It helps to know who you are," she said. School officials say the move has paid off in a new pride in the students' Indian identity and heritage.

"The big advantage has been the improvement in the students' basic performance, their basic education, and a greater performance in extra-curricular activities," said Superintendent John Tomasich, 57, who was assistant superintendent in the Shawano-Gresham district for 15 years.

A reservation-owned sawmill is the main source of income in this forested county, whose boundaries match the reservation's. Poverty is common; unemployment in October ran 16.5 percent compared with a statewide rate of 6.2 percent.

The district has 921 students attending an elementary school and the high school at Keshena and an elementary school at Neopit. Like other public school districts in Wisconsin, it is under supervision of the state Department of Public Instruction and meets all state curricula requirements.

The sleek, modern high school opened in 1982 with 24 classrooms and has 401 students attending seventh through 12th grades.

The district received its charter to leave the Shawano-Gresham district on July 1, 1976. The action came following a petition by Menominee residents.

"People here felt they should have control of the education of their children rather than sending them to an outside school system," Tomasich said.

Ninety-eight percent of the students are native Americans, mostly Menominees, but some are members of other tribes such as the Stockbridge-Munsee and Oneida.

The Menominee language is a required subject in all elementary grades and an elective at secondary levels. Participation is encouraged in Indian cultural activities, such as art and music, including student powwows," Tomasich said.

The tribal legislature requires that all students stay in school until their 18th birthday unless they graduate earlier. The dropout rate for Menominee was 4.9 percent in the 1983-84 school year, down from 5.9 percent a year earlier. The statewide rate was 3.6 percent in 1983-84.

"I am of the firm opinion that if the school did not make the effort to maintain the Menominee language, it would have disappeared in the near future," Tomasich said.

Twenty-five percent to 30 percent of the teaching staff have native American backgrounds. John Teller, a Menominee language teacher, and Ms. Waukau are Menominees who attended school in Shawano before the current district was created.

Menominee also fields a forensic team that was invited to the statewide competition last school year and came away with an 'A,' the highest rating.

The dance group regularly tours other schools around the state. Principal Richard Peters says the school was designed to take advantage of the Indians' interest in ecology, with the botany classroom looking out over a wetland.

"Our curriculum reflects the tribe's care for the environment. Biology is a required course," he said.

All students, except those in chemistry or physics, are required to take courses in environmental science.

Courses include French, American history, mathematics, business and traditional arts such as oil and watercolor painting. But a Menominee student can also learn to tan a deer hide in the Indian manner, do traditional beadwork and produce pottery of native clay.

The Menominee Eagles, part of the Central Wisconsin Conference, field teams in baseball, basketball, track, soccer and volleyball.

About 30 percent of the high school's graduates go to colleges and vocational-technical schools, Peters said. Statewide, the Department of Public Instruction says, 53.7 percent of seniors graduating from public high schools in 1984 said they intended to attend post-secondary schools.

The district, which had a budget of $4.1 million this year, is 40 percent federally funded and 50 percent state funded and gets 10 percent from property taxes, Tomasich said. No funds come directly from the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs.

For all its successes, the school has produced a generation gap between parents and students.

Three One-Act Operas Next For ECU Opera Theater

ECU News Bureau

Three one-act opera comedies will be presented by the East Carolina University Opera Theatre Feb. 20-22, in three nightly performances scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

Each evening's program will include "Trial by Jury" by the British operetta team of Gilbert and Sullivan, "The Music Cure" by Philip Hagemann (a southeastern premiere) and "Gallantry" by Douglas Moore.

The three operas represent "stepping stones, even if uneven ones, into the latter half of the 20th century," said Dr. Clyde Hiss, Opera Theatre director.

"Trial by Jury," an early result of Gilbert and Sullivan's collaboration and their first success, was immediately popular when it was first produced, as a "curtain raiser" for a D'Oyly Carte production of "La Perichole."

"The Music Cure" is a setting of a George Bernard Shaw play, satirizing several elements of modern society, as Gilbert and Sullivan satirized social and political trends of their day. Direct quotes from classic composers highlight the work.

"Gallantry," subtitled by its composer "A Soap Opera in One Act," presents a series of "daytime serial" hospital scenes interwoven with the obligatory "commercials" in a parody of modern daytime television. Composer Moore, best known for his "The Ballad of Baby Doe," has written several other operatic works.

The ECU Opera Theatre, a company sponsored by the ECU School of Music, includes advanced voice students, faculty members and singers from the local community in its regular productions. All works presented by the Opera Theatre are sung in English.

Tickets for the February comedies production are available at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center, at $4 for adults and $2.50 for students. Reduced rates on adult tickets are available for persons in groups of 10 or more.

Paul Tardif Featured Performer

"Jazz for Solo Piano," a concert and lecture featuring Paul Tardif, will be presented Friday at an open house form 10 a.m. until noon in Room 105 of the A. J. Fletcher Music Center on the East Carolina University campus.

The event, an open house, is sponsored by the Friends of the ECU School of Music and their friends. It is open without charge to the public, and refreshements will be served.

Tardif will discuss and perform works by jazz greats such as Duke Ellington, Keith Jarrett and Dizzy Gillespie.

A member of the ECU music faculty since 1971, Tardif has been awarded the Artist's Diploma from the Salzburg Mozarteum, Austria.

His performances have included those as soloist with the North Carolina Symphony in a Greenville concert, as well as in various Carolina cities.

He has been pianist for the Kennedy Center Honors gala, the 1981 inaugural concert, and at a Martin Luther King special. He and clarinetist David Wright have recorded on the Digital Arts classical label.

Reservations to attend the open house are not necessary, although it would be helpful if those who plan definitely to attend would call Mrs. Julia Allen at 757-6851.

A News Analysis

Gorbachev Sticks To Old Soviet Views In Interview Prior To Party Congress

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE — Andrew Rosenthal has been reporting from the Soviet Union for The Associated Press since 1983.

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev's latest press interview offered views on issues ranging from Stalin to "Star Wars," and a statement that physicist Andrei Sakharov will not be allowed to emigrate because he knows state secrets.

But the Soviet leader's written answers to the French Communist Party daily L'Humanite, published Saturday in Moscow and in Paris, said nothing new about Soviet policy.

Gorbachev held to established Kremlin positions on Afghanistan, dissidents, Soviet Jews, arms control and U.S.-Soviet relations.

He repeated his cure for Soviet economic problems: a "serious restructuring" of society, politics and industry coupled with sweeping modernization and top-level personnel changes.

His comments seemed to offer a preview of the 27th Communist Party congress that begins Feb. 25.

In addition to being a forum for discussing party and government policy, the congress is expected to give Gorbachev the opportunity to further his changes in the top party echelons since it will ratify membership of the powerful Central Committee.

Gorbachev's answers conformed with his more relaxed, open image. The interview gave him an informal platform for expounding on key issues before the congress, and also for addressing some touchy questions such as those on Josef Stalin and Sakharov.

That he answered these questions was the biggest surprise in the interview, distributed by the official news agency Tass in English translation and by the Soviet Foreign Ministry in five other languages.

Gorbachev has shown more candor on touchy issues than his predecessors, but his answers carefully conform to known Soviet policy.

Except for his role as commander during World War II, Stalin has largely disappeared from official Soviet history. Gorbachev is believed to be the first Kremlin leader to discuss at any length the longtime Soviet ruler, whose memory still evokes powerful, conflicting emotions of horror and admiration.

Gorbachev said "Stalinism is a concept made up by opponents of communism and used on a large scale to smear the Soviet Union and socialism as a whole."

But he went on to say the Soviets have been largely successful in overcoming Stalin's "cult of personality."

In doing so, he made an unusual reference to the 20th party congress, held 30 years ago, at which then-leader Nikita S. Khrushchev denounced Stalin.

But Gorbachev did not mention Khrushchev — now an official nonentity — or his so-called "secret speech," or directly refer to Stalin's repression and purges.

Gorbachev has referred to Sakharov before, but not in detail. His comments in the interview essentially repeated statements by lower-ranking officials.

He said the once-honored physicist who became a dissident in the 1960s violated Soviet law and "measures were taken ... in accordance with our legislation."

Gorbachev said Sakharov "still has knowledge of secrets of special importance to the state, and for this reason cannot go abroad."

He did not explain that Sakharov was banished without trial in January 1980 to the city of Gorky, which is closed to Westerners, after criticizing the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan to oust one Marxist government and prop up the pro-Moscow administration of President Babrak Karmal.

"Sakharov lives in normal conditions, conducts research and remains an academician of the U.S.S.R. Academy of Sciences," Gorbachev said. "He is in normal health as far as I know."

On other subjects:

—Gorbachev said Soviet Jews live well and enjoy full civil rights.

—He repeated the Kremlin's argument that there are no "political prisoners" in the Soviet Union, only those who violated laws against anti-Soviet slander, agitation and propaganda or committed treason. He estimated there are about 200 of these prisoners.

—Gorbachev said Soviet authorities use censorship only to prevent publication of military secrets, "propaganda of war, violence, savagery, humiliation of the individual and pornography."

— The Soviet Union wants to pull out of Afghanistan, but is prevented from doing so by interference from Pakistan and the United States, Gorbachev said.

—He said he thinks President Reagan sincerely believes in the value of the Strategic Defense Initiative, the plan for a space-based missile defense system commonly called Star Wars. But Gorbachev added that "in implementing (it) ... Washington, in fact, deliberately aims to thwart the current (arms) talks and erase all the existing arms control agreements.

—Gorbachev said "one has to be cautious" about a return to detente. "Certain indicators are appearing and the reason lies not only and not so much in separate shifts in the field of Soviet-American relations: they are too limited, too peripheral. . .. But a certain change in the political atmosphere has already made itself felt."

Something Must Give On Budget

The best that can be said for President Reagan's near-trillion dollar budget for fiscal 1987 is that it provides a launching pad for Congress to do its rewrite work.

It's regrettable the president and congressmen are prone to early promises that cannot (or should not) be kept. The passage of time brings with it changing conditions or perceptions of a given need or obligation, with cause for reshuffling of priorities.

Example: the no-retreat on defense outlays and the no-tax increase pledge.

Throughout the Reagan years there has been an ongoing increase in military expenditures. Somewhere along the line we'd expect to reach a point wherein past neglect had been overcome and current needs basically met so the severe budgetary drain could be eased. That has not been the case.

Instead, Congress is asked for a 6.2 percent increase over last year's allocation as well as a proposed 37.8 percent increase over the next five years.

In contrast, the Reagan budget would slash, freeze in place or eliminate scores of civilian programs. Civilian America, from whom government draws the sums to operate, sees its share of available money shrink.

Social Security was left untouched. Even the annual cost-of-living increase is still in place. Other domestic programs endured most of the fund-cutting proposals.

Agriculture, health programs for the the poor and elderly face funding cuts as does the national student loan program. Elimination of several programs is proposed as well as the selling-off of a variety of federal assets.

The package falls within limits of the Gramm-Rudman law which aims at eliminating deficit spending. Those limits are going to become more constrictive with each budget year. At some point something is going to have to give: either defense or the no-tax-boost pledge.

Congress' work on the budget is supposed to be completed by April 15 (four months earlier than was accomplished last year). We look for sharp differences between that body's priorities and that of the administration.

Council's Phone Decision Proper

The City Council last week acted properly in refusing to reopen debate on Greenville participation in extended area telephone service.

Council member Nancy Jenkins offered a motion to reconsider the October 1985 resolution which expressed that council's interest in extended area telephone service and asked Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. to "provide this much needed service."

Subseqently CT&T conducted a vote on toll free service between Grifton and Greenville and Grifton and Ayden. Grifton and Ayden subscribers voted favorably but Greenville subscribers registered disapproval. That, nevertheless, is no reason for community leaders to alter their stand. Extended area service is still a desirable goal for our county and our leaders should attempt to educate the public to the obvious advantages.

Councilman Ed Carter said he favored extended area service for the city and county because it would serve as a uniting force. It certainly will and, if we want Pitt County to develop as a regional entity, we must do all we can to pull its various areas together. To accomplish this, one of our goals should be a phone system in which all the county's residents can call each other without paying a toll charge.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Do dreams foretell the future? Is there such a thing as extrasensory perception? Can two people transfer thoughts across a room, or thousands of miles away.

There are many who believe that thought waves can be perceived by other people. We have heard of twin girls who said one was aware when the other had a baby even though they were hundreds of miles apart. Serious scholars have studied cases where individuals have known the exact time of death of a loved one, perhaps through a peculiar feeling or perhaps through a flash of knowlege. Still there is no scientific way to prove such things. It could be a phenonenon or it could be a coincidence.

Last week we wrote of Sue and Scott Hinson's dog, Sam, who was taken to Chapel Hill to stay with Sue's parents. He disappeared and later a hunter called to say he had found Sam's body in the forest. He had been killed by wild dogs.

Sue says that about the end of the first week after Sam was gone "I had a dream that he was dead and that his body was located in a treed, hilly area of Chapel Hill.

"The next morning, when I told Scott about my dream, he reassured me that Sam was alive and probably just out hunting somewhere. Scott went on, however, to recount that as he was coming home from work the day before he saw a beagle that looked exactly like Sam standing beside the road in a deserted stretch between Ayden and Greenville. 'It looked so much like him that I had to take a double take,' Scott said, adding 'of course it couldn't have been him, because he's in Chapel Hill.'"

Sue continued, "Two weeks later, a few days before the hunter found Sam's body, I had another dream that Sam was found. My mother, who was down helping us with our new baby, upon hearing about my dream, reported that she, too, dreamed his body was found and that it was found in a treed, hilly area of Chapel Hill. The next day when my mother returned to her home in Chapel Hill, she received a call from the hunter who said he had found Sam. He said that he found the body under some trees on top of a hill and that it appeared that he'd died two weeks before," Sue said.

"Now I don't put much stock in dreams, but in this instance, it's hard not to believe that in some way, Sam was saying goodbye."

A coincidence? Who knows?

IF THEY COULD ONLY DO IT!

Shultz Displays Optimism

Barry Schweid

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Reagan weighs a response to Mikhail Gorbachev's arms control proposal, negotiations with the Soviet Union on nuclear weapons and other vital issues are at a standstill.

But Secretary of State George Shultz, who will have as much to say about the response as anyone, is taking an unusually optimistic view of the talks to be held by the two superpowers this year.

"We may be at a rare moment of opportunity," he told the House Foreign Affairs Committee this week.

Meanwhile, both Shultz's State Department and the tiny but influential Arms Control and Disarmament Agency have recommended to Reagan that he write a positive letter to Gorbachev.

Shultz and Kenneth Adelman, the arms control director, would seize on the Soviet leader's offer to rid Europe of medium-range nuclear weapons as a potential opening for an agreement.

Shultz would go further and show interest in what Gorbachev had to say in his Jan. 15 disarmament plan about reducing and then eliminating longer-range nuclear weapons.

The Pentagon, on the other hand, suggested Reagan stand firm. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger sees no real change in what Gorbachev proposed.

With this conflicting advice, it's hard to know where the president will come down. Besides, in nuclear weapons negotiations, Reagan has shown a streak of independent judgment.

Still, the conclusions reached by Shultz on how to deal with the Soviet Union could be decisive.

His statement to the House committee suggested he wants to separate the nuclear threat from Latin America, for instance, where Shultz and other conservatives detect a Soviet plot to spread communism.

"The Soviet Union continues to pose the most profound challenges to American and free world interests and ideals," Shultz said. "Our countries are governed by irreconcilable views of the world."

Nevertheless, he said, "the realities of the nuclear age mean that we must pursue constructive relations with the Soviets whenever we can do so without violating our principles. As the Geneva summit showed, constructive negotiations are possible."

Shultz has been secretary of state for 3½ years. That is longer than his four immediate predecessors: Alexander Haig, Edmund Muskie, Cyrus Vance and Henry Kissinger.

Despite the long service, Shultz has left no special mark on history. He is not identified with any particular initiative, as Kissinger, for instance, was with the U.S. opening to China and "shuttle diplomacy" in the Middle East.

In fact, during Reagan's five years in the White House there has been no major agreement with the Soviet Union, no settlement of the disputes between Israel and its Arab neighbors nor marked racial progress in Southern Africa.

Shultz has pounded the table about terrorism and issued dire warnings. But episodes of violence still harass the United States and other democracies.

He has concentrated on promoting steadiness in U.S. foreign policy. As an adviser to Reagan, particularly with regard to the Soviet Union, he has usually counseled moderation. Apparently, he has considerable influence on the president.

A Need For Cooperation

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Attorney General Lacy Thornburg's recent constitutional advisory that the governor could not be required to consult with the Advisory Budget Commission was greeted with smiles by all involved.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan immediately appeared before the Legislature's Governmental Operations Committee and recommended that the Executive Budget Act be changed. In the future, the act should only say the governor may choose to consult the ABC.

Gov. Jim Martin said he found the ruling just dandy and, of course, promised to keep "working closely" with the ABC.

When that many politicians start smiling, hold onto your wallet.

It makes no difference that Ramsey and Jordan are of one party and Martin of another. When it comes to their three offices and the ABC, they know a good deal when they see one, and they aren't about to let it slip away.

The three each get to appoint five members to the ABC. That board then holds hearings around the state, meets with the governor's budget analysts and then helps the governor formulate the budget that will be proposed to the General Assembly.

In theory, the idea is to broaden participation in the drafting of a budget. In reality, the ABC does just the opposite. It helps concentrate power in the hands of the governor and a few powerful legislators.

During the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat, the joint Hunt-ABC budget was virtually sacrosanct. Only minor changes were made by the Legislature's budget committees except in 1981 when then Sen. Bob Jordan and then Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, headed a drive to cut a percentage point or two of spending. Those were hard times and money was tight.

Other efforts to significantly change the budget were met with the kind of hardball discipline one expects to find in a military academy. Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln, moved to change a key road funding measure in the 1980 budget and actually won. Overnight, Hunt's budget henchmen visited enough legislators who needed something from him to turn that vote around the next afternoon.

By working together, the governor and the legislative leadership can basically eliminate the vast majority of the Legislature from playing a major role in the budget. The appropriations committees still hold four months of budget hearings every session, but they'll make relatively few changes, none of them major.

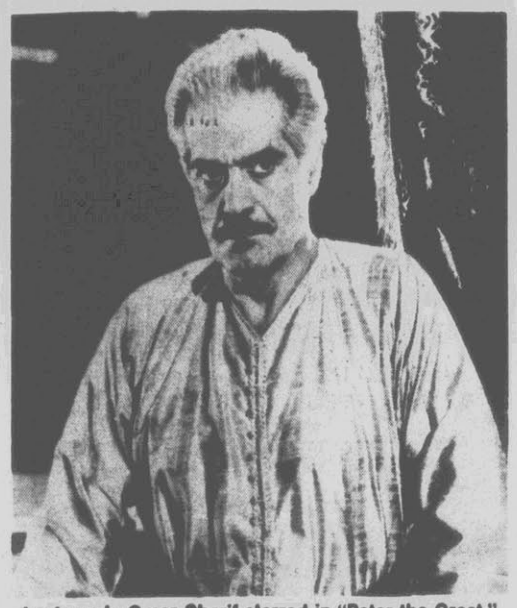

The budget that is forged by the ABC and a governor of the same party is delivered to the Legislature as a fait accompli, that is, as a document that just needs a rubber stamp. With a Republican governor and a Democratic Legislature, things may be a little different.

Don't expect complete agreement between Martin and the ABC. But there'll be pressure on both Martin and the ABC to agree as much as possible.

Martin knows he doesn't pass a budget. He can propose one and the Legislature can throw it away. He needs the leadership's cooperation to get his ideas funded.

For the Legislature, the incentive to cooperate is some kind of relief from Martin's personal political appeal. For every item the leadership and Martin agree upon, Martin has one less issue to raise in his press conferences.

Finally, they have a mutural interest. They've got to protect this cozy deal they have with each other for themselves and future generations of politicians. Don't want the entire assembly getting involved in the budget. No telling what would happen then.

Last week, Omar Sharif starred in "Peter the Great." Now he tackles another action-packed epic — as the Sultan of the Ottoman Empire — in "Harem," airing Sunday, Feb. 9 and Monday, Feb. 10 on ABC.

Soap star stays slim by walking, dieting

By Renee Ross

A performer's dressing room is her home away from home, and Laura Carrington makes sure hers is comfortable.

"I hate fluorescent lights," explains the actress, who plays Lisa Baron on the ABC soap "One Life to Live."

Laura Carrington

"When I was in school I couldn't study under them," Miss Carrington, 27, adds, "and I still have a hard time. So I bring my own lamps from home."

She also steals a few fleeting moments to exercise in her dressing room when she's not busy on the set. "I bring my Walkman to work, and at lunchtime I do aerobics and stretches that I learned in dance class," explains the 5-foot-6, 110-pound Brooklyn-raised actress, who has also appeared in music videos with Lionel Richie, Clarence Clemons and Randy Newman. "It makes me feel so much more energetic."

When her workday is over, Miss Carrington finds that walking can be a great stress reliever.

"I've walked as much as 60 blocks from the studio to my home downtown," says Miss Carrington, who describes her heritage as a mix of Chinese, East Indian, African, Dutch and Arawan Native American. "It's a long haul, but by the time you get home, any tension you accumulated during the day is definitely gone."

Miss Carrington also believes in eating well, and has followed a vegetarian diet for the last five years. She explains: "I began gradually, and pretty soon didn't even like the taste of meat anymore."

The actress also finds America's current mania for fitness to be a worthwhile obsession.

"Hopefully, everybody will do a little bit for their health," she says. "Like anything else, when exercise is new to someone, they get excited about it. It's to be expected that some people are going to lift too many weights or run too many miles.

"But with all the energy they're putting out," Miss Carrington adds, "they're still influencing many more people for the common good. Hopefully people will learn to pace themselves accordingly.

"I know that when I begin doing something positive in my life, it soon becomes second nature. Then I don't have to think about it anymore because I've developed a healthy habit."

Stahl's still cooking after all these years

By Gregory Garver

HOLLYWOOD — According to press releases for the syndicated show "It's a Living," Richard Stahl "portrays Howard Miller, the dry-witted cook at Above the Top." It is a remarkable bit of casting because Stahl, in real life, is a dry-witted former cook.

Richard Stahl

"I worked at the Hotel Del Coronado when I first got out of high school," says Stahl. "My job was to come in at 4:30 in the morning, and get all the waffle and pancake batter done. I was the waffle, pancake and toast man in the morning, and the salad and sandwich man in the afternoon."

But Stahl says he was consumed with the desire "to become a hot-shot actor," so he quit his restaurant job to tackle show business.

"If I'd have stayed being a chef," he says, "I would have gotten to travel — chefs always travel — and I would have gotten to eat."

Stahl is still the family cook. "I like it and I'm good at it," he says. "I've been married for 26 years, but our children are only 12 and 8. We finally got around to having kids," he adds with a smile, "after 14 years of marriage. With kids, you know, you go out to a restaurant, spend $11.50 for their entree and they eat only the french fries and the bread.

"So I got to cooking for the kids. And I have found ways of making things that kids like to eat," he explains. "They like to eat potatoes, so I have fancy potato dishes, like my Potato Volcano."

Stahl has been acting for 30 years. When the going got rough, he practiced a magic act, parked cars and, while he was studying in New York, was a stage manager for an off-Broadway theater.

Stahl, his wife and a few friends were also part of the improvisational group, The Committee. Howard Hesseman and Barbara Bosson were among those also involved.

Since Stahl has been cooking up a career storm since 1962 (that's when he claims he started making a decent living), these days, cooking is just a hobby in his life.

And on "It's a Living," it's a prop.

SUMMER THEATER GRANT . . . Ann Coatney of Normal, Ill., a junior arts major at East Carolina University, accepts a $20,000 grant from Sen. Thomas Taft, and Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr, left to right. The grant has been awarded by the N. C. Arts Council. Grant To Summer Theater

ECU News Bureau

A $20,000 grant has been awarded the East Carolina University Summer Theatre by the Theatre Arts Section of the North Carolina Arts Council, a division of the N. C. Department of Cultural Resources.

Designated for salary support of artistic personnel and for a marketing campaign, the award is one of the largest to be awarded the ECU Summer Theatre, which last year employed 125 actors, singers, dancers and technical support personnel.

The Theatre Arts Section of the Department of Cultural Resources recommends awards to professional theatre companies from funds appropriated by the General Assembly specifically for this purpose.

"We are especially pleased to receive this salary support because it enables us to hire quality professional artists and also to use some talented North Carolinians who might otherwise leave the state in search of theatre work," said Edgar Loessin, Summer Theatre producer.

Scott Parker, the theatre's general manager, said the company was "particularly grateful" to three area legislators: Sen. Thomas Taft and Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. who were, he said, "instrumental in the appropriation of funds to the N. C. Arts Council."

"These three gentlemen are longtime supporters of professional theatre in the state and of the East Carolina Summer Theatre," Parker said.

Outdoor Drama Auditions

CHAPEL HILL — North Carolina performers and theater technicians who want to participate in the annual outdoor drama summer employment auditions sponsored by the Institute of Outdoor Drama of the University of North Carolina should ask for their applications and instructions as soon as possible.

Regional auditions for 15 of the country's outdoor historical plays are set for March 1 and the registration deadline is Feb. 21.

The Institute of Outdoor Drama, a research and advisory agency of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, sponsors the annual group auditions on the campus as a service to performers and technicians and to outdoor theatre companies who are now hiring for the summer season.

About 200 actors, singers, dancers and technicians from the area join those from all over the eastern U.S. who have come to Chapel Hill to audition for summer jobs during the one-day sessions.

Action begins as early as 7 a.m. Saturday when lines will begin to form at the Institute office in Graham Memorial Hall. General auditions get under way in Memorial Hall and the Carolina Union Building at 9 a.m., with singing and acting auditions scheduled through the morning, and dance auditions, callbacks and technicians' interviews continuing into the evening.

North Carolia companies to participate include: "Blackbeard's Revenge," Emerald Isle; "Horn in the West," Boone; "The Libery Cart," Kenansville; "The Lost Colony," Manteo; "Strike at the Wind," Pembroke; "The Sword of Peace," Snow Camp; and "Unto These Hills," Cherokee.

Out-of-state companies looking for talent for the summer include Rusty Mundell's new play at Park Rapids, Minn., "Viking!"; "Trumpet in the Land" at Dover, Ohio; "Honey in the Rock" and "Hatfields and McCoys," both of West Virginia; "Tecumseh!," Ohio; "The Smoky Mountain Passion Play," Tenn.; and "The Lone Star," Texas.

For more information and applications, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Auditions Director, Institute of Outdoor Drama, 202 Graham Memorial 052A, Chapel Hill, NC, 27514; telephone, 962-1328.

New $7.5 Million Wing For Charlotte's Mint Museum Opens

CHARLOTTE — A new $7.5 million wing to Charlotte's Mint Museum has opened. The museum has now grown from six galleries and 11,000 square feet to 25 galleries and 36,000 feet of exhibit space.

Charlotte voters approved a $3.5 million bond, coupled with $4 milion raised privately by the museum's board of truestees, who met their commitment through a multi-million dollar gift.

The gift was a collection of 200 paintings donated by Harry and Mary Dalton. It was the singular most important gift in the museum's history, substantially strengthening its holdings in European and American art.

The Dalton collection, which includes such European artists as Franceso Guardi, Camille Pissarro, Maurice de Vlaminck, John Constable, JMW Turner and Giorgio de Chirico; and American artists such as Benjamin West, Thomas Sully, Winslow Homer and Frederic Remington, are interspersed throughout the chronological layout of the European and American galleries.

A distinct red line in the gallery labels identifies a Dalton collection work.

The Mint Museum will be 50 years old in the fall of 1986. The building, though, dates back to 1837, and was designed by the American architect William Strickland as a federal mint to coin the gold ore from the Piedmont's gold mines.

It has served as a Confederate Army headquarters, an assay office, a laboratory for Thomas A. Edison, a federal courthouse and a Red Cross headquarters.

Scheduled to be demolished to make room for an expanding post office in 1932, the building was saved by a citizens' group headed by Mary Myers Dwelle. The building was moved and reassembled in its present Eastover Park location not far from downtown.

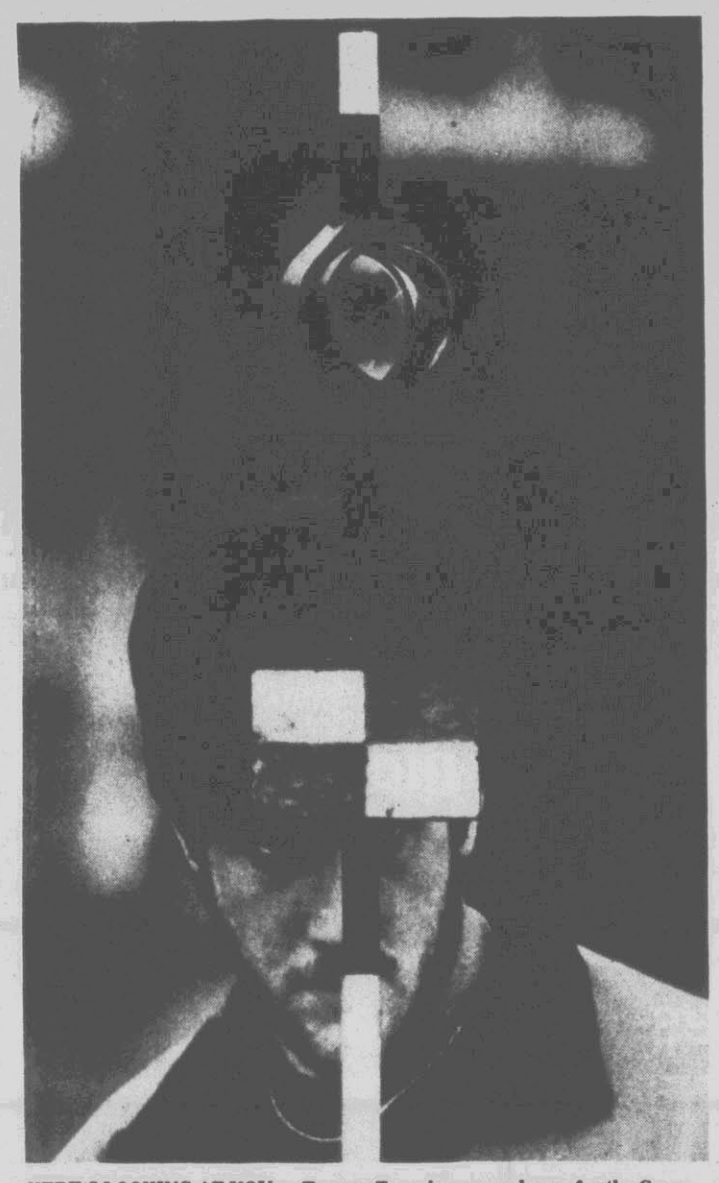

The Mint's collection is wide ranging. European paintings represent a survey collection of Italian Renaissance, 15th to 17th century Northern European, 17th and 18th century Continental and is strong in 17th to 19th century English Art. The 19th and 20th century American art collection is perhaps the highlight of the galleries.

The Delhom Collection of European pottery and porcelain is one of the nation's finest. The Delhom-Gambrell Research Library contains rare volumes documenting the field.

Other collections include pre-Colombian art, a 6,000 piece costume collection, antique maps, contemporary American prints, African utilitarian and ceremonial objects and a display of gold coins minted at the facility.

The museum also operates the Hezekiah Alexander Homesite, a historic 1774 quarried stone colonial home. Featured at the house is a permanent exhibit, "Settling the Carolina Frontier," along with traveling exhibits.

For more information about the museum, call 704/337-2009.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

Differences: 1. Jacket is opened wider. 2. Hat is different. 3. Arm is moved. 4. Sign is missing. 5. Skirt is shorter. 6. Pocketbook is smaller.

SUM FUN! Twenty-one multiplied by 6 equals 126, an instance in which all three digits used in the multiplication appear in the product. Now then, see if you can deduce quickly a number multiplied by three, see right, that will produce the same result — all three digits in the product.

Fifty-one times three will produce one five three.

● HOG TIED! "Give me one of your hogs and I'll have twice as many as you have," said Aye. "No," said Bee, "give me one of yours and we will both be even." How many hogs has each?

Aye has seven hogs, Bee has five.

LOVE NOTE TO PONDER

Suppose you are the recipient of the Valentine message above. Can you make it out? That is to say, can you discover a way to read it?

Oddly enough, instructions for reading the message are contained within it. But, say you, where do I begin?

For your information, the message begins with a word having a capital letter and proceeds word by word to form a timely short verse.

What does it say?

It says: Read down and up and you will see that I love you. Do you love me?

HEART LINE! Person-to-person conversation is being carried over one of four lines above. Just which one?

FISH STORY! Apply crayons or colored pencils neatly to numbered segments above: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Green 7—Dk. brown. 8—Purple.

QUILT ANY TIME, ANYWHERE

Now, you can relax and enjoy your quilting when and where you have the time by using the Lap Quilting method.

Yes, if you love to quilt by hand, but don't have the space for a large quilting frame, then follow this method of quilting on a small portable frame in your lap. You just pin individual blocks onto a collapsible tapestry frame and then sew backing, batting and quilt top together. Using this technique you can accomplish a great deal in a short time, because your work is always available to pick up. You can work on it whenever you have a few minutes—even travel with it.

First the book teaches you all the quilting basics. Then it shows you how to create traditional designs and use them in quilts and pillows and unusual items like whimsical tea and coffee cosies, table runners with matching hot mat covers, pot holders, oven mits, and even colorful shoe and laundry bags. You also learn how to make imaginative gifts like sets of quilted placemats with matching serviettes, guest towels, baby quilts, patchwork wall hangings, tote bags, eyeglass cases and book covers.

And for Christmas you get instructions for ornaments, a patchwork Christmas tree and crazy patchwork Christmas stockings. Detailed diagrams and color photographs show you how to make all of these projects and combine patterns, quilting and appliqué in different ways so that you can create your own designs.

The twenty-five projects in Lap Quilting offer something for quilters at all levels. So don't delay. Order your copy today.

Jim Delfino
Head Groundskeeper

"CHEMLAWN GOES THAT EX TO GUARANTEE A THICKER, GR

I'm a professional groundskeeper. Candlestick Park is my lawn forty hours a week, and I see to it that the grass is flawless from home plate to center field. A small job it's not. Fortunately, I have a full-time staff of professionals to make perfect turf seem easy.

After hours, though, the stadium's ground crew doesn't follow me home. But then, you probably think a guy like me insists on looking after his own yard, right? Not quite. At home, just like on the job, I depend on the help I get from lawn care professionals. In other words, I count on ChemLawn. My ChemLawn Specialist always goes the extra yard to see that my lawn's in the best of health, and looks it.

"Grass this green doesn't just happen. It takes hard work."

The ChemLawn Specialist knows that grass can't be taken for granted if it's to become its thickest, greenest and healthiest. Constant attention is needed to develop vigorous turf with a strong root system. This is especially true for southern turf in constant battle against extreme hot weather and insect rampages.

Be assured he'll be on guard for any subtle signs that could mean potential insect or disease damage. He'll do his best to get them before they get a foothold.

He knows when to treat for weeds. When to feed. He'll tell you when and how to seed. And he knows how to feed and care for the different kinds of southern grasses, each with its own special needs.

The ChemLawn Specialist keeps close tabs on all of this, and more. He'll develop a customized program of lawn care to see that your lawn becomes as thick and green as it can be. Guaranteed.

"Their lawn care specialists are well-trained, full-time pros. Not just kids on a summer job."

It's a fact. Many ChemLawn Specialists have a college background in agriculture or agronomy. Add to this a continuing program of staff seminars and study of agronomics, and you'll see that the ChemLawn Specialist has a professional's credentials.

To introduce himself to you, your local ChemLawn Specialist will give you a complete lawn analysis. It's absolutely free, no strings attached. He'll study grass types and density, thatch depth and weed intrusion for valuable clues to what your lawn needs. Naturally, he'll also look for signs of disease and harmful insects. (You don't even have to be at home when he does all this. He'll leave the results on your door, and get back to you later to discuss them.)

Based on what this close inspection reveals to the specialist, he'll come up with a plan tailored to your lawn, and give an exact price quote.

And here's a nice surprise. The cost of ChemLawn care is little more than you'd spend to do the job yourself, when you consider what you'd pay for the necessary materials and equipment. Not to mention all your time spent buying and applying them.

"They give your lawn what it needs, when it needs it."

Lawns are finicky eaters. Yours has nutritional needs that are determined by grass type, the makeup of the soil, shade conditions and the season.

Your ChemLawn Specialist delivers a program that's suited for your lawn to provide the best results possible. For instance, if your grass type is Bermuda, can you tell when your lawn is "starving" and needs extra Nitrogen? Or if your grass type is St. Augustine or Centipede, do you know when it's "tired" and needs a pick-me-up of Phosphorus or Potassium? Whether yours is either grass type or a mix, your specialist's proper care and feeding will give your lawn the right nutrients at the right time.

For weed controls, too, timing is important. Your ChemLawn Specialist will avoid weed controls in the hottest weather when they are potentially harmful for your grass. Instead, he'll wait for favorable conditions and apply them when it's safest for your lawn.

Bugs don't conform to a gi calendar. Should they be in co

Country Crossroads: Dream Come True

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Two years ago Cecil and Pat Brown of Route 1, Richlands, saw a long-time dream come true. Their Country Crossroads Barbecue and Steak House opened for business.

"I have always enjoyed people and cooking barbecue for different families," Brown said.

"When Cecil first started talking about his idea, I thought it would be just a small barbecue and sandwich place. One day he came home with some blueprints and said, 'This is what I want it to look like,'" said Mrs. Brown.

The trees for the log cabin restaurant were cut on the location of the restaurant, which is part of Brown's family farm. "I took down five old buildings to get the wood for the inside and other areas in order to have a rustic looking effect. I treated the logs and wood before the building was built," said Brown.

Brown constructed the building with the help of two high school boys, all working part time. In February 1983, they started taking down the buildings and in March they cut the trees for 98 logs. The cement floor was poured in May. The first log was put into place in June and the building was completed by Thanksgiving.

When asked why his choice was a log building, Brown said, "I have always liked the looks of log buildings — it different — like getting back to where our nation came from. We are located out in the country away from everything. This area is called Cyress Creek. Actually we are sitting in the hub of Jacksonville, Richlands, Wallace, Burgaw, Kenansville and Topsail Beach," he said.

LONG-TIME DREAM...of Cecil and Pat Brown was the opening of their restaurant two years ago. Craft shows are held each spring and fall on the grounds surrounding the restaurant.

"We opened Dec. 8, serving barbecued pork, chickens and steaks, which are our specilities. Each is cooked over oak and hickory wood and charcoal," Brown said. The restaurant is open Thursday through Saturday for lunch and dinner.

"We have a family atmosphere at the restaurant," he added.

Everything on the menu is home cooked. "We even peel potatoes for our french fries and desserts are made from 'scratch,'" said Mrs. Brown.

The decorating decor of the restaurant's interior is red and white, including the curtains, tablecloths and napkins. The colors were chosen by Mrs. Brown and all were made by Mrs. Brown; her daughter-in-law, Donna Brown, and a neighbor, Pat Shepard. The girls dress in red- and white-checked dresses for nighttime serving hours.

"When the sewing was going on, I came home one day and there was wall-to-wall material and sewing machines in our den," said Brown.

Brown works full time at Camp Lejeune and Mrs. Brown is a housewife. "She's my high school sweetheart," said Brown.

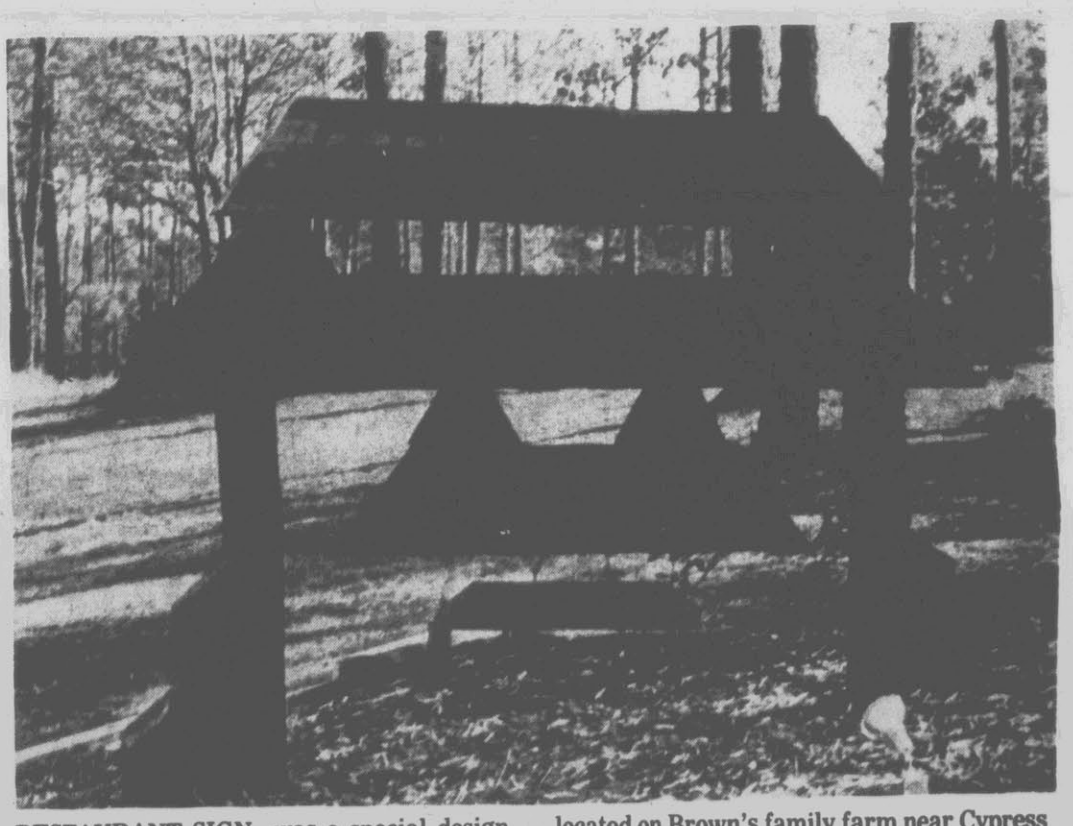

"We are trying to grow slowly in our restaurant. We try to get out and meet all our customers," he said.

Future plans for the restaurant include more landscaping and a dining room just for parties. Brown is now building two new grills.

Special happenings at the restaurant are spring and fall craft shows. The show in October 1985 attracted 22 crafts people.

A RUSTIC LOOK...decorating decor was carried out by the couple on the inside of the restaurant using wood from old buildings and logs which was specially treated by Brown. The couple is pictured in front of the fireplace.

RESTAURANT SIGN...was a special design created by the Browns. The restaurant is located on Brown's family farm near Cypress Creek.

Folk-Cooking Is Popular In County

Folk-cooking" can be defined as cooking with recipes handed down from generation to generation.

Pete Jones is a folk-cook at the Skylight Inn in Ayden. Six days a week, he is up at 3 a.m. to start fires of hickory and oak to cook his pigs the same way his great-grandfather, Skilten Dennis, cooked when he started selling baruecue in 1830.

Skilten cooked his barbecue at home and sold it along with cornbread from a wagon. Since then the family method of cooking the barbecue has been passed down from father to son, to brothers, to sisters and cousins for 156 years.

Pete learned by starting to work with his uncle, Emmett Dennis, when he was 7 years old. His son, Bruce, has also worked with his father in the family business since an early age.

Their barbecue flavor has won many awards, one from the National Geographic in 1980 labled it the "best in the country."

Pete serves a flat cornbread that is unique to the area. It is flat, crusty and crisp on the outside and mushy on the inside.

A local Grifton cook, Adelide Murphy, cooks hers the same way her mother and grandmother did. Another such recipe is the one Lizzie Forrest of Grifton uses for her collards — cooking them the same way her family has done for generations.

Bell Lovick's family recipe is for chitterlings.

Folk-cooking is one aspect of the folk art project being done in Grifton funded partically with a grant from the N.C. Arts Council, a state agency.

Grifton liaison for the project is Charlotte Betts, who is looking for family recipes. For information call 524-5356.

'Restaurant Owns Its Owner'

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Daisy King's first restaurant in Nashville, Tenn., was established in an old Victorian house located on property which was being developed into a shopping center.

"The developers were interviewing tenants and Miss Daisy's Tearoom operated there for eight years," said Mrs. King.

"I started my business while I was in my late 20s. I was a home economics major which I taught for five years. After the birth of my first child in 1971, I didn't work professionally for three years and was involved in charity work and planning social events and menus," she said.

"With my foods background, I knew nutrition and all the ingredients of serving nutritious food and making it attractive. I didn't know the business end, but I learned along the way. My first cash register was a cigar box. On my first day of serving, I served 110 customers which grew to 250-300 for lunch each day," she said.

Miss Daisy's Restaurant is now located in the H.G. Hill Shopping Center in Nashville and has full service, lunch and dinner. The restaurant structure is Williamsburg in decor.

"When you own a restaurant, it literally owns you because you stay there and work," she said.

The specialities at Miss Daisy's Restaurant are creamed chicken served on corn bread with side dishes of cranberry salad and marinated carrots, bourbon and chocolate pecan pie, turkey salad almondine served with a hot cheese bread, veal scallopini and hot spiced tea. "We serve Southern foods with a gourmet flair," said Mrs. King.

"The key to Southern cooking is pure foods. I use a lot of creavitity and seasonings. When I cook vegetables, I use chicken broth in place of ham hock," she said.

Mrs. King has authored three cookbooks and spends some time traveling while promoting them and holding autograph parties. She travels about two days per week promoting a ne" sausage recently marketed by Swift Co. She gives cooking tips on TV's P.M. Magazine and WFVF-Channel 5's "Talk of The Town."

When it was announced that Tennessee would have a giant statewide celebration, inviting all who have ever lived in the state to homecoming festivities, people across the state contributed more than 3,000 receipes to "The Original Tennessee Homecoming Cookbook." The best of the recipes were selected and edited by Mrs. King. Original recipes and ones handed down from generation to generation are included in the cookbook.

She will be traveling across Tennessee, getting signatures of people with winning rcipes to sign the cookbook. The book will then be given to Lamar Alexander, governor of Tennessee, during Homecoming '86.

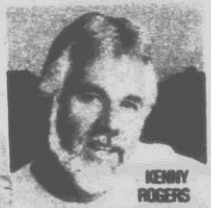

Conceding that her hectic schedule hasn't been easy, Mrs. King said she couldn't have done it without the blessings of her husband, Wayne; sons, Kevin and Patrick, and Wayne's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman King.

DAISY KING...shows a copy of Tennessee Homecoming Cookbook which she edited. She owns and operates Miss Daisy's Restaurant in Nashville, Tenn.

PRE-MED ADVISER — Dr. Wayne Ayers, left, adviser at East Carolina University for students interested in health professions, talks with Lindsay Stevenson, an ECU student who is pursuing a second degree in biology with the goal of going to medical school.

Professor Offers Counsel For ECU Health Students

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Wayne Ayers, chairman of the East Carolina University Pre-Medical and Pre-Dental Advisory and Evaluation Committee, answered his home telephone one Monday about 2 a.m. and was greeted by a shout: "Dr. Ayers, I've been accepted. I'm going to medical school!"

"That's nice," he muttered. "Get some sleep and call me in the morning."

But by the time the call was over, Ayers was awake and stayed awake, excited that his young friend's long-held dream of going to medical school was about to get under way.

When Ayers came to Greenville to teach chemistry at ECU in 1963, students who went on for health professions education did so pretty much on their own. It wasn't until shortly before that time that a student, a young woman, let it be known she had to be recommended by a committee from her undergraduate school in order to be considered at the medical school of her choice. The committee was formed, but it was strictly for evaluation and recommendation, not for guidance.

Today, Ayers devotes more than half his working time to advising, counseling, preparing and emotionally supporting pre-health professions students. Though he continues to teach some organic chemistry courses, he now answers to the dean of arts and sciences and has the title, coordinator of pre-medical studies.

Any student who declares that he or she wishes to go to medical or dental school after college or into related fields like optometry, podiatry or veterinary medicine, comes into contact with Wayne Ayers. Many meet him before they enter East Carolina because he often has visits from prospective pre-health professions students and their parents.

The acceptance rate for ECU students seeking to enter medical school is about equal to the national average — 46 percent. Some years the percentage has been as high as 59 percent; some years the dental and optometry school acceptance rate has been 100 percent.

"I think this speaks well for us," Ayers said, "when you consider that many of our students come from disadvantaged backgrounds — from small high schools and families in which no one before them has been to college. Some haven't have exceptional SAT scores nor exceptional grades entering. Some haven't done well during their freshman years, but have improved. There are varied backgrounds, varied factors, but we encourage the best performance of them all. And we don't make it easy, because that would be doing them no favors and would reflect badly on us once they're accepted."

Dr. Bob Sammons, a resident in the department of psychiatry at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, said, "I have two brothers who were pre-med at other schools, so I know for sure how fortunate I was to have Wayne Ayers for a pre-med adviser. One of my brothers who went to a much more expensive, supposedly more prestigious, school than ECU said his pre-med adviser basically told him, 'Go to class, make all A's, come back when you're a senior and, if you've done well enough, I'll write you a letter of recommendation.'

"Wayne Ayers writes the most thorough letters of recommendations for his students you will ever read. They're not overinflated. They have to be true or it would reflect badly on him, the school and the student down the road. But each letter demonstrates how very well he knows the student, the true interest he has in him or her as a person and the care that's been given to helping him or her plan his curriculum, extra-curricular activities, and work experiences."

Dr. Angelo Volpe, ECU vice chancellor for academic affairs, calls Ayers, "the vital cog in our pre-health professions program."

"No university could ever pay for the interest, energy and dedication Wayne Ayers brings to the job," he said. "It's as if he takes every student he advises and does everything in his power to inspire and encourage the realization of the highest potential that is present. He gets amazing results."

Ayers has served as faculty adviser to the ECU chapter of Alpha Epsilon Delta since its formation in 1976. On Saturday night the local chapter of the national pre-health professions honor society celebrated its 10th anniversary with a banquet. Among the awards given was a scholarship named in his honor and given each year since 1979.

"Most people don't have scholarships named for them until they're dead," Volpe said. "I tell Wayne, if for no other reason, that makes him special."

Sammons said the fund for the scholarship was started by a group of grateful students who participated in two-week Medical College Admission Test (MCAT) preparation courses held by Ayers during several summers in the past. "These courses, which would cost thousands of dollars elsewhere, he put on for very nominal fees," Sammons said. "And he would accept no gifts from any of the participants. That's why we set up the fund."

The summer MCAT course has been discontinued, but four-Saturday MCAT preparation courses are still held here, Ayers said.

Ayers is quick to point out that he is not the only member of the Pre-Medical and Pre-Dental Advisory and Evaluation Committee. He gave special praise to Dr. Gerhard Kalmus, a biology professor who is vice chairman of the committee.

"Every one of the committee members is dedicated," he said. "They spend untold hours in groups of three interviewing students who wish to be recommended for health professions schools and it is based on reports from these interviews that many students are accepted or rejected for consideration by the medical and dental and other health professions schools.

"For instance, in 1982 there were 35,730 people who applied for medical school nationwide, 738 in North Carolina. Of these, virtually all had the grades that would have been needed, usually a 3.4 average or better.

"So what made the difference for most was how they did on their interviews with medical school admissions committees. These pre-med advisory committee interviews are superb preparation for those interviews, we believe."

Ayers must maintain communication with other professionals in health education, so he can be abreast of what students need to know and be. He keeps close contact with the ECU medical school.

Bus ...

these buses," he said. "We haven't had any problems. This is just preventive."

Only medium trucks and school buses manufactured between 1978 and May 1985 with front axle capacities of 5,000, 6,000, 7,500 or 8,000 pounds are affected, according to Bill Greenhill, Harvester's manager of external communications.

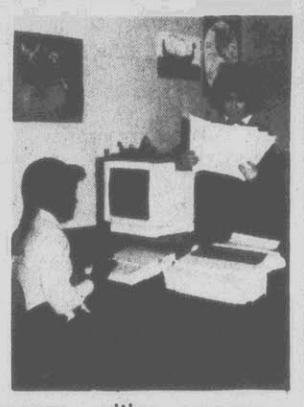

"There have been no accidents or injuries," Greenhill said last week. "There have been three incidents of failure of the steering arm on school buses and 19 failures on medium trucks."

Greenhill said Harvester studies have shown that "fatigue cracks" can occur in the steering arm of affected vehicles when the steering wheel is repeatedly turned to a lock position while the vehicle is standing still or just starting up. He said the arm has been redesigned and strengthened.

Greenhill said the Chicago-based company has already warned appropriate agencies in all 50 states and Canada about the problem in the school buses. He said owners of fleets of the affected trucks also had been notified.

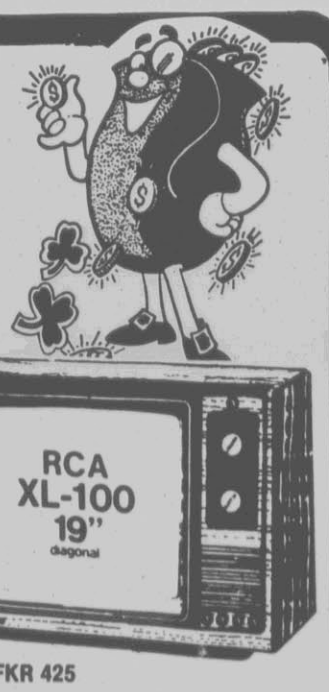

"We are preparing to notify all (individual owners) who are affected beginning next week," Greenhill said.

Doctors May Have To Defy Gunmen In Beirut's Hospital

By HALA JABER
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — When fighting rages in Beirut, the American University Hospital looks more like a MASH unit under fire than a teaching facility.

The hospital, the main medical center in Moslem west Beirut, handled nearly 800 casualties, one-third of them surgical cases, in one two-week period last summer.

Hospital chief of staff Dr. Farid Fleihan estimates his medical teams have treated more than 30,000 war casualties since the civil war between Christians and Moslem erupted in April 1975.

"I don't think there are many hospitals around the world who've faced what we have and come through in the last 11 years," Fleihan said in an interview.

Young interns among the 340 medical students carry stretchers and more experienced students man the operating theaters and emergency rooms.

There's an unwritten agreement among Beirut's warring militias to keep the hospital a neutral zone. But the violence often spills over as militiamen are brought in as casualties.

Rival factions have shot it out in the corridors of the 420-bed hospital or outside in the street.

One gunmen blew himself up with a grenade in an emergency room, destroying X-ray machines.

"Fortunately there were no staffers in there at the time," Fleihan said. "The man had ordered nurses out of the room while he undressed."

Militiamen have put guns to the heads of surgeons operating on their buddies, warning them they'd be shot if their patients died.

No doctor has been shot yet. But several, mainly Christians, have been kidnapped.

The hospital's director, David Jacobsen, is one of six Americans still held by Shiite Moslem extremists. Jacobsen, 54, of Huntington Beach, Calif., was grabbed May 28 by gunmen near the hospital which is part of the American University of Beirut.

During last summer's bloody fighting between Shiite Moslems and Palestinians, when 600 people were killed and nearly 2,500 wounded, Shiite gunmen dragged bleeding Palestinian guerrillas from operating theaters.

The morgue was stacked so high with bodies that the hospital had to use refrigerated trucks to store the corpses. Some Shiites refused to let doctors treat wounded Palestinians until their men had been patched up.

"Armed militiamen come into the emergency rooms with their wounded friends," Fleihan said. "The room fills up with casualties, relatives and gunmen. In the end you find you've got 200 patients and 600 other people, many of them with guns."

Fuleihan added: "The gunmen, naturally, want their friends treated first, even if their wounds are minor compared to everyone else's."

"You have to be a diplomat as well as a doctor, just to calm things down," he said. "I've seen militiamen bring in dead brothers or comrades and order doctors to make them well again. When you tell the gunman his friend is dead, out come the guns. It takes a lot of careful, calm talking to cool things down."

But even when things are relatively quiet, the hospital's problems continue.

"There's the aftermath," Dr. Assad Taha, a Shiite who heads the orthopedic department. "Things don't clear up when the casualties stop pouring in.

"Many of these patients need long follow-up treatment. Many doctors keep seeing the same patients for two or three years during which time they might perform four or five operations. The rush goes on long after big battles," he said.

Most of the casualties are civilians caught in the crossfire between Lebanon's feuding factions. Few are private fee-paying patients.

Most are covered by Lebanon's social security system, but the government, saddled with a collapsing economy, owes the AUH an estimated $5 million in unpaid fees.

That's on top of an operating deficit of $5.5 million, partly because there are so few private patients. The hospital was originally designed to accomodate 60 percent private patients.

"The presence of so many militiamen keep private patients away," said Fleihan. "Until 1984 we used to get significant help from the U.S. aid program, but American legislators these days are not in the mood to support hospitals in Lebanon. That's why we're facing a financial crisis.

He said the only financial help the hospital got last year was $1 million from Saudi Arabia.

Researchers Study Nomadic Herders

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Subsistence herding may be the cornerstone of ecological stability, rather than a factor in turning arid lands into deserts with the famine that inevitably follows, say a team of international scientists.

The researchers, including several anthropologists from the State University of New York at Binghamton, are halfway through a decade-long study of the Ngisonyoka Turkana people of northwest Kenya.

Based on a project begun in the 1970s by another Binghamton anthropologist, Neville Dyson-Hudson, this project has been supported since 1980 with funds from the National Science Foundation. The team, including wildlife and livestock ecologists and sociocultural and biological anthropologists, has studied 9,650 herders and their livestock: 85,200 sheep and goats, 9,800 cattle, 9,800 camels and 5,300 donkeys, for roughly five years.

The team hails from Binghamton, Cornell University and universities in Ohio, Georgia, North Carolina, Arizona and Kenya.

Waste Disposal

CLEVELAND (AP) — Though many people assume that hazardous wastes will last forever and that cleaning up toxic sites is either impossible or impossibly expensive, that's not necessarily so, say members of a research group here.

"In fact, there are means of destroying hazardous materials," says Steven Elmquist, president of Cleveland Research Laboratories Inc. "They simply haven't been fully developed."

The Cleveland researchers believe they have discovered a safe, effective and relatively inexpensive means of permanently destroying hazardous wastes. Their process makes use of thermal mineral-processing techniques originally developed in the iron ore and steel industries, Elmquist explains.

"We've proven in controlled tests on synthesized hazardous waste material that our process ties up heavy metals and destroys organics in liquids, sludges and contaminated ground soil," he says. "The slag that results from the process is non-hazardous. It easily passes the Environmental Protection Agency's standards for toxicity."

Elmquist became familiar with the thermal processes during his career in industrial engineering research. To transform an interesting idea into a working process, he turned to a new State of Ohio program designed to support this kind of high-tech, entreprenurial activity.

He applied for and received a $46,000 grant from the Thomas Edison Program to help pay for research on the process at Cleveland State University.

Elmquist points out that he also benefited from another element of the program — a business "incubator" in Cleveland that provides business planning, marketing and other types of assistance to technology-based startup companies.

Ruling May Ax Budget Cutters

A News Analysis

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers have vowed to press ahead in complying with the nation's new budget-balancing law despite a court decision invalidating much of it, but they might find their appetite for program-slashing considerably diminished if the Supreme Court upholds the ruling.

In any event, Friday's judgment by a special three-judge panel that the automatic spending cut mechanism of the Gramm-Rudman law is unconstitutional has added further confusion to an already chaotic budget-writing season.

The ruling will have little immediate impact since the judges delayed its effect pending an appeal to the Supreme Court. Lawyers associated with the case do not expect a final decision until early summer.

Indirectly, the ruling could serve to weaken overall resolve to make a major dent in the deficit this year, some lawmakers say.

"It turns down the fire on the deficit a bit," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. He said he was relying on constituents to "turn that fire right back up."

But as this year's House and Senate elections get nearer, politically unpopular spending cuts could become even less palatable — especially if the Supreme Court agrees with the lower court and sheathes the budget ax that the Gramm-Rudman law had suspended over Congress.

The law requires that the deficit, which was $211 billion last year, be reduced to zero by 1991 in a series of large installments. If lawmakers fail to meet any of the annual targets, the budget ax falls and makes the cuts for them.

It was this automatic triggering mechanism that the special three-judge panel declared unconstitutional. The court left intact the rest of the law, including its set of decreasing deficit targets that chart the way to a balanced budget.

The court decision, which surprised few on Capitol Hill, was handed down two days after President Reagan submitted his fiscal 1987 budget — a plan tailored to meet next year's Gramm-Rudman $144 billion deficit target.

But tucked in with $38.2 billion in deficit-reduction measures was a proposed $16.4 billion increase in defense outlays. Democratic and Republican leaders agreed that Reagan's mix of deep domestic cuts and big defense increases just wouldn't sell — no more than it did last year.

House Republicans indicated they would come up with their own budget. House Democrats announced field hearings around the nation this week in an effort to discredit the Reagan budget. And Senate Republicans renewed their appeal for a compromise that would include some sort of tax increase.

Administration officials testily defended the budget, insisted that it was too early to talk compromise, and said there was no way the president would consider a tax increase to balance the budget. Reagan himself conceded his fledgling budget appeared ready for "artificial respiration."

Against that crossfire came Friday's ruling — just as Congress was about to catch its breath with a weeklong recess.

The court said the law's mandatory cut mechanism was unconstitutional because the job of enforcing the cuts was a function of the executive branch while the official designated to detail them — the comptroller general — worked for Congress.

If the Supreme Court agrees but leaves the rest of the act standing, Congress would still be required to meet the annual deficit reduction targets — but across-the-board cuts could only be put in place if Congress voted to do so. That could mean a return to the same sort of situation that produced a spending stalemate last year.

If Congress refused to make the cuts, it would technically be in violation of its own law. But that's as far as it would go. No one could force Congress to make the cuts.

In fact, Congress passed a law in the mid-1970s requiring a balanced budget beginning in 1981. Despite heated complaints by his author, fomer Sen. Harry F. Byrd, a Virginia independent, the law has been ignored by Congress ever since.

During the 1950s, Congress passed an earlier version of the Gramm-Rudman bill. In an effort to balance the budget, Congress voted to establish a permanent limit to the national debt — the accumulation of decades of annual deficits.

With a limit on borrowing authority, a balanced budget would be automatic after a certain number of years.

But Congress wiggled out of that one, too, by repeatedly increasing the debt limit. Today, the national debt is soaring toward $2 trillion. And increasing the debt limit to allow additional deficit spending has become an annual ritual.

"The court decision does not make deficits go away. With or without Gramm-Rudman, Congress faces some tough choices for the next few years," said Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., one of the 12 congressional plaintiffs whose lawsuit challenging the law produced Friday's ruling.

Still, without the threat of blind, across-the-board cuts that Gramm-Rudman provided, Congress may be as unable to agree on a measure to meet the deficit targets as it was last year in agreeing on any major spending legislation.

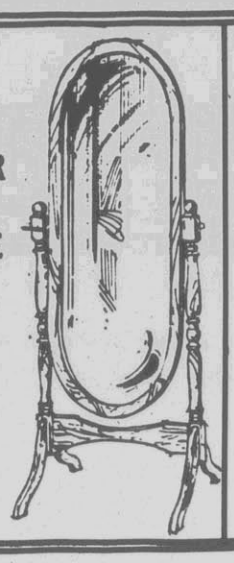

"The congressional budget process is foundering," Reagan said in his budget message to Congress. "Last year it fell apart time and time again. The budget resolution and appropriations bills were months late in passing, and few real deficit reductions were achieved."

Navy Seeks Shuttle's Upper-Stage Rocket

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Navy divers fought rain and choppy seas Saturday to probe the ocean bottom 16 miles east of Challenger's launch site for a new piece of wreckage: the upper-stage rocket that was to have propelled a communications satellite into stationary orbit.

There was no word on recovery efforts of the shuttle's flight deck, its solid-fuel boosters or the remains of the seven crew members killed when the shuttle exploded shortly after liftoff Jan. 28.

The 17-foot by 10-foot upper-stage rocket was believed to be in one piece and was being considered "a hazardous object" because of its normal load of 27,400 pounds of solid propellant, said Cmdr. Arthur E. Norton, a Navy spokesman.

The rocket would have propelled the satellite into permanent orbit 22,300 miles above the Earth.

Norton said the USS Preserver, a Navy rescue and salvage ship carrying 22 divers, had navigation and communications problems getting to the search site because of heavy rain and lightning. The NASA ship Freedom Star marked the area with flares, and "a few divers" using scuba gear went into the water "just to take a look," he said.

The ship did not report any sightings.

The Preserver, capable of lifting up to 10 tons, joined four NASA vessels using sonar and robot submersibles to locate shuttle wreckage that has sunk to the ocean floor. The Preserver's "hard-hat" divers use helmets and pressure suits to operate in water up to 230 feet deep.

A surface search conducted by the Coast Guard was called off Friday since "any remaining surface debris has now been carried well out of the local area by winds and current," said a statement by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The Preserver's divers include members of an explosives ordnance disposal unit. The water depth at the search site is 100 to 120 feet.

"The divers will be taking photos and using those with sonar images to identify whatever they may encounter," said Norton.

He said the upper-stage rocket, weighing about 32,000 pounds, was spotted by sonar soundings.

"I'm told that it's good imaging. They're pretty confident that it is what they think it is," he said.

Asked about efforts to recover parts of the crew cabin or the casings of the shuttle's solid rocket boosters, NASA spokesman Hugh Harris said: "I haven't been able to determine if they've been able to locate any of these targets, or even precisely what they are. ... This sighting is different from any of those."

The 11-day surface search conducted by Coast Guard, NASA, Air Force and Navy vessels and aircraft covered 172,500 square miles of the Atlantic. More than 12 tons of wreckage was recovered, NASA officials said. The pieces are being used in attempts to find the cause of the fiery explosion.

Other than the crew cabin, the most sought-after piece of wreckage is the right solid rocket booster. Video and still photographs appear to show a tongue of flame spurting out from its side, and the speculation is that it ignited the liquid fuel in the external fuel tank and caused the shuttle to explode in a fireball.

Officers Killed By Bomb

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At least one pipe bomb exploded inside a house Saturday, shaking the neighborhood and killing the two police bomb squad officers who were trying to defuse the device, authorities said.

Detective Arleigh McCree, 46, a noted explosives expert who directed bomb-squad operations during the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, and Officer Ronald Ball, 43, were killed, said Police Chief Daryl F. Gates.

Gates said he believed it was the first time a member of the department's bomb squad had been killed on duty.

"There haven't been any in my 36 years with the department," he said.

Gates said the incident began Saturday morning when officers served a search warrant at the North Hollywood home of Donnell Morse, 35. The warrant was in connection with the Feb. 4 slaying of an unidentified union official, he said.

While searching the garage, officers found two pipe bombs in a storage cabinet and the bomb squad was called, Gates said. McCree and Ball arrived and began working to defuse one of the bombs when it exploded about 11:30 a.m.

"Arleigh said before working on the device that they (the pipe bombs) were indeed booby-trapped," Gates said, adding it was unclear whether one or both of the bombs exploded.

"We'll go through the house and try to determine if there are any more in there," Gates said.

Morse, a makeup artist for a television studio, was booked for investigation of murder, Gates said. His brother and a sister, who also apparently lived in the house, were being questioned, he said.

Gates said McCree was a 21-year veteran of the department, and that Ball had been on the force for 17 years.

"Arleigh McCree has been doing this for the better part of 20 years," Gates said. "He headed up bomb operations during the Olympics, he's been to Lebanon, he's worked with the Marines.

"Arleigh's been a friend of mine for years."

Details of the explosion and the deaths were withheld for more than four hours. Police cordoned off the area 15 miles north of downtown Los Angeles and refused to make any statements to reporters.

Reagan Defends Budget Cuts, Sees 'Banner Year'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told Americans on Saturday to "get ready for a banner year" and ignore warnings that his proposed budget cuts would "wreak havoc throughout the nation."

In his weekly radio address, delivered from the White House, Reagan also pledged to push for elimination of the federal deficit within five years despite a setback in the courts.

A special three-judge panel ruled Friday that a key enforcement provision of a new deficit-reduction law is unconstitutional. The decision is being appealed to the Supreme Court.

"Whatever the outcome, we intend to go forward with our plan to bring the federal budget into balance by 1991 without undercutting the progress we have made in defense, without cutting Social Security or essential support programs and without raising your taxes," Reagan said.

The president charged that "those who have carped loudest about the need to cut deficits suddenly cried 'foul' when confronted with real proposals to cut deficit spending and eliminate government waste."

"Think of it — self-proclaimed deficit warriors, saying that a nearly trillion-dollar budget ... is so inadequate it would wreak havoc throughout the nation," Reagan said.

The president last week proposed a $994 billion budget for fiscal 1987 that would make deep cuts in domestic programs while continuing increases in military spending.

Critics on Capitol Hill declared the budget "dead before arrival."

Nominee

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans to nominate J. Daniel Mahoney, former chairman of the New York State Conservative Party, as a judge of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the White House announced.

The Playhouse Version Of 'Learned Ladies'

Moliere Comedy Opens Wednesday

"A little learning can be dangerous... and hilarious," or at least that's what the ECU Playhouse hopes to demonstrate when it produces Moliere's 17th century comedy, "The Learned Ladies," in McGinnis Theatre, Wednesday through Saturday at 8:15 p.m.

Audiences the world over have come to know "The Learned Ladies" as one of Moliere's plays that pokes fun at phony learning, fake poetry and pseudointellecutualism. The topic is also one of early feminism as Moliere has some fun at the expense of women who fancy themselves intellectuals. Lusting for learning, they convert an upper middle-class household into a high fashion school. The usual order of the house is turned upside down; the women of the house becomes the ruler and the man her slave.

Some lines about the proper feminine role may make 20th century women bristle, expecially when the husband in the play mocks his wife's intelletual interests with, "I don't know what your soul's been eating of late, but it's not a balanced diet, at any rate." Despite such sentiments, the play isn't an attack on educated women, but on pretentiousness. Moliere ridicules the women only because they stumble so ludicrously in their pursuit of culture.

Director Edgar Loessin calls the play "the equivalent of 17th century vaudeville, with farcial characters who behave as if they were in a cartoon.

Moliere, whose real name was Jean-Baptiste Poquelin, is generally accepted as the greatest comic dramatist of France and the author of some of the most brilliant comedies of all theatrical history. Some of the best known plays are "The Imaginary Invalid," "Tartuffe" and "The Misenthrope."

The ECU production marks the second time this particular translation has been used in North Carolina. Dr. Wallace Fowlie, professor of Romance languages at Duke University, is the translator, and he has given his permission for this work to be used by the ECU group. "Dr. Fowlie has an extraordinary feeling for humor in this play. That it is such great fun is in large measure due to him. We are very fortunate he has allowed us to use his translation," Loessin said.

Because the play is set in fashionable 17th century France, the requirements of the costuming and decor are particularly demanding. Costume coordinator Keith Lewis estimates that the actors will be wearing costumes and wigs valued at more than $10,000. Some of the women's period silk dresses are from the N.C. School of the Arts, and both men's and women's human hair wigs have been especially designed for the production in New York.

The scenery staff of McGinnis Theatre has raised the height of the stage floor and extended it out some 10 feet beyond its usual boundaries, over the orchestra pit, so that the actors will be much closer to the audiences than is often the case in McGinnis.

"The Learned Ladies" is the third major production this season by the ECU Playhouse. Reserved seat tickets are currently on sale in McGinnis Theatre Box Office, Fifth and Eastern streets. The box office is open Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, call 757-6360.

Details Listed On Artists Series For The 1985-86 Season

The East Carolina University Department of University Unions Artists Series Committee has slated a roster of performers in the coming 1986-87 season that includes singer Burl Ives; pianist Alicia DeLarrocha; the Czech Philharmonic; the Suzuki Talent Education Tour, and North Carolina's and ECU's Symphony Orchestras.

The 1986-87 season will open with little musicians from Japan in a concert of works by Bach, Vivaldi, Mozart and Beethoven. These violinists are of Shinichi Suzuki's Talent Education Tour, and they have been touring across the United States since 1964. They will appear at ECU Oct. 21.

Burl Ives will bring his music to the stage in concert Nov. 5. He has been a prime member of the American musical scene for about five decades.

In a gala re-opening performance at the newly remodeled Wright Auditorium, two state orchestras will blend their talents in a grand concert of some 130 musical instruments. The North Carolina and ECU Symphony Orchestras will perform a joint concert Nov. 16.

One of the world's widely recognized symphony orchestras has made Greenville a stop on its fifth tour of the United States. The Czech Philharmonic began in 1896 with conductor Antonin Dvorak, and the Feb. 12, 1987 performance will be under the direction of Vaclav Neumann and Jiri Belohlavek.

Concluding the season will be a performance by pianist Alicia DeLarrocha. Her concert is scheduled for March 23.

The newly renovated Wright Auditorium has been remade into the finest concert hall east of Raleigh. Acoustics have been engineered for maxium sound without distortion. Every seat in the house affords a fine view of perforers. Upholstered chairs and carpeting have been added to Wright Auditorium, as well as reserved seating.

Tickets for the series are priced at $20 for students high school age and under, and $50 adults. For additional information, call Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, Monday through Friday between 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. The number is 75f7-6611, ext. 266.

Central American Stateline Special

CHAPEL HILL — A four-man crew from the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television spent eight days in Central America gathering information and conducting interviews for two special "Stateline" episodes.

For the "Love Thy Neighbor" episode that will air Wednesday, "Stateline" followed Donna and Cass Ballenger, a Hickory couple who has taken medical supplies to Guatemala and El Salvador, and firefighting equipment to Guatemala for the past 10 years. They have also sponsored orphanages in Honduras.

"The Ballengers accompanied us to show us what they have done over the years and to follow up on their efforts," said Marc Finlayson, "Stateline" reporter for both episodes.

"On this trip," Finlayson said, "the Ballengers brought a small sterilizer for a clinic in San Juan Sacapepequez, Guatemala, and also a boxful of toiletry supplies — individual bag filled with wash clothes, tooth brushes and toothpaste — for the wounded soldiers in the San Miguel military hospital in El Salvador." The toiletry supplies were assembled by a Hickory Eagle Scout candidate.

The second episode, "Witness for Peace," airs Feb. 19. "Stateline" spent three days in Nicaragua reporting on the efforts of the church-based group that began in North Carolina to non-violently protest United States support for the Contras, who are currently fighting the Sandanista government of that country.

Finlayson said most of the time the crew spent was with two volunteer ministers; one from Concord and the other from Granite Falls. "Both are long-term volunteers. These people make the commitment to stay in Nicaragua for up to a year at a time. They have been there since last summer, living and working in Nicaragua."

The "Stateline" crew traveled through the four Central American countries in January. This marks the first time the program has left the country to report on stories about North Carolinians and their activities.

The show airs every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. and Sundays at 12:30 p.m. on local UNC television, channel 25.

One Lost Colony Search Sidelined, Second Search Continues

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Aerial photographs and soil tests believed to show the remnants of America's first British settlement on Roanoke Island instead revealed cut trees and roadwork from 20th century projects, archaeologists say.

John Walker, research archaeologist with the Southeast Archaeological Center in Tallahassee, Fla., said in a recent telephone interview that researchers were no closer to finding the site of the colony established in 1585 by Sir Walter Raleigh.

"Our evidence was totally 20th century instead of 16th," he said.

"The major central feature, which was thought to be possibly part of a bastion there, was actually where, circa 1965, the park put in the road that comes around in front of the Fort Raleigh Visitor Center," Walker added. "In doing so they went through some pine trees that had to be cut. They burned some and what they didn't burn they left outside the circle."

Depressions that seemed to line up with the modern reproduction of the earthworks fort at the park apparently stemmed from work to straighten the curve in a nearby road in 1921, Walker said.

"A local gentleman who must be 80-years-old said the route had been changed through what was then his father's field," he said. "It ran at an angle up across the field to the fort and then back."

Walker said he would recommend resuming the investigation further to the west on the island, where some 16th century artifacts were previously found. But he admitted there was no certainty the settlement could be found.

"With very sandy soil and cultivation in that general area, something could be plowed down, blown down," he said. "There are sand dunes in some cases 6 to 8 feet deep. And it could be that ... the remaining (restored) fort is really an outworks of something that has been totally destroyed."

While the findings were a setback to the National Park Service operation, they gave new impetus to work by East Carolina University archaeologist Gordon P. Watts, who has been working under the assumption that the settlement site is now under water.

"We have identified probably 50 targets or target site clusters and are going through analyzing them and picking out those that might be most representative of material from the Raleigh colony," Watts said, adding that he hoped to check the most promising sites this summer.

Watts, who participated in a 1973 expedition that discovered the wreckage of the armored Civil War gunboat USS Monitor and later helped raise its anchor, said scientists believe the sea level has risen 4 feet since the 1500s. He said parts of Roanoke Island have eroded as much as a quarter of a mile.

The original colony was established in 1585 but colonists returned to England when supplies ran low. A second group led by John White reestablished the colony in 1587. White returned to England for supplies and, after being delayed by the war with Spain, got back to Roanoke in 1590 to find the colony had vanished.

Houses had been taken down and a palisade erected that included a post engraved with the word "CROATOAN," possibly referring to neighboring Indians or a nearby island.

Finding the settlement site is unlikely to shed any light on the mystery, Watts said.

"If there is reasonable preservation of the archaeological record, then we'll be able to find something of how the settlement was organized ... something of who was involved in the settlement," he said. "There is the remote possibility that if people died at the site and were buried there, some physical remains might survive intact.

"But unless whatever happened happened at the site and some evidence of that occurrence remains in the archaeological record, I suspect that will remain just as much a mystery as it has been for the past 400 years."

FINALE FOR A HUGE ONE — The trunk of a huge tree in the historic village of Bath, its massive limbs sawn off, lies on the ground after being felled because of deterioration that posed a hazard to a nerby house. The stump of the tree, mesuring more than four feet in diameter, contains more than 100 growth rings, indicating that the tree graced the residential yard for well over a century. WOMEN AND HISTORY

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Women of the 18th and 19th centuries made contributions to the writing of history that are perhaps only now being appreciated, says Bonnie Smith, a historian at the University of Rochester.

"Historians today ask whether it's better to write about great public figures or the lives of ordinary people," Smith says. "If you look back, women writing 200 years ago wrestled with the same questions. They enlarged the scope of history by writing about things that men didn't, from court customs to domestic life."

As a result, she says, their histories assumed some novel forms. Some were even written in verse.

PAINTING ACQUIRED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Madonna and Child," a major newly discovered painting by the 15th century Italian artist Jacopo Bellini, has been acquired by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

The museum says the acquisition is a rare example "by this Venetian master of the early Renaissance as very few examples of Bellini's work survive today."

It says of the work, "Bellini has infused one of the most popular subjects of Christian art with a sense of humanity rarely encountered during the early Renaissance. The Madonna's introspective gaze is knowingly echoed by the Child's; they share an awareness of the tragic future

SILK: A NATURAL WONDER — Tips for care and travel

Silk is as good an investment now as it was in 2600 B.C. when Chinese Empress Si Ling Chi accidently discovered it by dropping a silk worm cocoon into her hot tea. According to legend, the hot liquid dissolved the sticky gum binding the cocoon so that it unravelled into one continuous fiber.

A silk filament can be as long as 3,000 feet, and it is the strongest of all natural fibers. Silk garments can last for centuries. Charlemange's coronation robe dates back to A.D. 800. On display in St. Peter's Church in Rome, this ancient silk robe looks as good as new.

Today's silk garments can also last for years with proper care. Read the label of any new silk item to determine whether it should be washed or drycleaned.

The Silk Institute recommends hand washing for the following: China silk, India silk, crepe de chine, pongee, shantung, tussah, dupioni, jacquard, raw silk and spun silk. Some silks may lose dye if washed. Check by wetting a small portion of an inconspicuous part of the garment or a snip from the seam. Blot the wetted area between paper towels, applying strong pressure. If color "bleeds" onto the paper towels, the garment is not colorfast and should be drycleaned.

Silk such as chiffon, georgette, taffeta, satin silk and charmeuse should generally be drycleaned. Dark colors or bright patterns may fade with washing. If washed, launder separately. Other garments that should be drycleaned include those with elaborate details, such as embroidery, lace, pleats or ruffles, and those with a lining, interfacing or covered buttons.

Silk will last for years, if washed correctly. Often, washing improves the luster of the fabric.

To hand wash silks, handle them gently and wash garments separately and quickly. Use warm or cold water and detergent. Swish suds thorugh the garment. Avoid rubbing or twisting because silk loses up to 30 percent of its strength when wet. Rinse thoroughly and roll the item in a clean bath towel to remove excess moisture.

Machine washing of silk is possible, if a washer has a gentle cycle with a slow agitation speed. A short, 2-minute wash time is also important.

To dry, hang silks on plastic hangers. Straighten garments and smooth out seams. Never use wire hangers as they can cause rust stains, and never let garments dry thoroughly before ironing.

Silk fabrics should be ironed when damp. If silks cannot be ironed immediately, keep them damp by wrapping in a towel or plastic bag and storing the items in the refrigerator.

When ironing silks, there are three general rules: (1) Wash or dryclean silks soon after they are soiled; (2) Prevent fading by never exposing silks to the sun, the harsh lighting, or to dry heat for long periods of time; (3) Do not store silk garments in plastic bags. Silk has to breathe;

(4) Never stretch or pull silk. It has poor springback qualities; (5) Buy silk garments that are slightly larger rather than just right. Some silks may shrink; (6) Let deodorants dry throughly before putting on a silk garment. Wet deodorant leaves permanent stains: (7) Avoid using chlorine bleach or starch on silk.

Silk can be a perfect travel companion provided it is handled in the following way:

•Pack silk garments by wrapping them with tissue in a suitcase;

•Hang clothes on padded hangers upon reaching your destination. (Bring your own hangers for convenience);

•Steam out wrinkles by hanging silk garments in the bathroom when you shower. Avoid any drops of water from hitting the garments;

•Carry a travel iron for quick touchups.

Researchers Develop A How-To Kit Teaching Kids

By SUSAN PRICE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — One baby's eyes follow a bright ball as it moves. Another slides a flat, red disk into a round hole. Another drops a round yellow ball into a box. Child's play, right?

Yes, it is child's play, but the games also help babies, even newborns, learn, say two researchers who have developed a package of materials for day care centers to teach youngsters under 2.

"We are just moving into group care for children under 2," said Isabelle Lewis, co-author of the "Partners for Learning" package. "There are really not that many places and there are not that many materials."

Designed by Dr. Joseph Sparling and Ms. Lewis at the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center, the kit includes many toys that seem familiar, but that have been redesigned for younger children.

"We felt the toys on the market were not developmentally that appropriate for the youngest group of children. And certainly some of them are not well thought out as far as research tells us what the child should be doing," Ms. Lewis said.

"So many people think, 'Well, I'm going to get a shape box for the younger children, so I'll get a shape box that has fewer holes than the one for 3-year-olds.' But it just doesn't work that way," she said. "In designing these things, we have to keep in mind that we're talking about the very youngest children."

In addition to the toys, books, posters and games designed to help in the development of infants and toddlers, there are training guides, study books and evaluation materials for day-care employees.

The training guides help day care employees learn how to use the materials, but also how to encourage or "prompt" the children to use the toys and games, and how to support them with more and more specific terms of praise.

"There are lots of ways, hugging and kissing and clapping and then later, as they get better, saying more and more words of praise or support, like 'You really jumped high' instead of just 'Good girl.' There's nothing wrong with saying 'Good girl,' but it doesn't tell her what she did that made you happy," Ms. Lewis explained.

There's even a newsletter to send home with parents to let them know what their children are learning in school.

The researchers had plenty of opportunity to test their materials, since the Frank Porter Graham Center has its own day-care center. They plan two more "Partners" packages to extend the educational curriculum to age 6.

Every item in the kit can be used in more than one way, including an apron with huge pockets. The pockets can help with a "peek-a-boo" game for infants, and can carry different items for a busy day-care employee working with several youngsters at once.

A puzzle included in the package can be extremely simple for a very young baby, such as putting a round, flat disk into a round hole, or more complex, with four puzzle parts, including one that will fit only one way.

"Everything has an activity card that has one activity, and many of them, like the puzzle, have a series of activity cards telling you exactly how to use them," Ms. Lewis said.

"We didn't just put anything in for the sake of putting it in because it's pretty or it's cute or it's a good idea," she said. "If we think it's a good idea, we put in lots of cards to show you how to use it and enhance the idea."

Conversation books designed by Sparling and Ms. Lewis have attracted the interest of Johnson & Johnson, which now includes the books with its own line of children's materials.

The materials are available through Kaplan School Supply Corp. in Winston-Salem, and individual items in the kit can be purchased separately.

Train Collision Kills At Least 30 People

HINTON, Alberta (AP) — A passenger train collided with a freight train in the Canadian Rockies Saturday and a Via Rail spokesman said 30 to 40 people perished in the heap of twisted, burning rail cars. Medical workers said 80 people were injured, at least a dozen seriously.

The accident occurred at 8:40 a.m. MST (10:40 a.m. EST), 10 miles east of Hinton, a pulp-mill town on the main Canadian National railroad line, said Bill Dewan, a spokesman for the principal cross-country freight line. The freight train, with 114 cars and three diesel locomotives, was westbound, he said, and the nine-car passenger train, also with three diesel engines, was heading east.

"I was sitting having breakfast and all of a sudden all hell broke loose," said Douglas McDonald, 44, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, a bartender-steward on the passenger train. "It kept on coming, it hit, then it hit again. All of a sudden, the windows started coming in. I was looking out that window," he said, holding his ribs and pointing, "and I left out that window."

Passenger Bruno Belanger said, "The dining car ended up getting split in half, like a sardine can, and some people were lucky to get out of there."

Estimates of the number of passengers ranged from 101 to 120. Of the 24 crew members on both trains, seven were missing, said Dewan.

He said the accident occurred on a slight curve after the freight train entered a single track from a double track. The trains collided about 75 yards from where the section of double track ended.

"The train should not have left the double track section, and whether its failure to stop was due to signal failure or human failure is what is under investigation," he said.

Seventy-six cars from the freight train, half carrying grain, were derailed and all but three cars of the passenger train — including three sleepers — left the track. Officials at the scene said all 20 freight cars carrying ethylene dichloride remained on the track.

A fire that broke out after gas tanks ruptured was extinguished by firefighters in helicopters and on the ground, Dewan said.

Witnesses said 30 cars were strewn about and piled on top of each other in a 100-by-50-yard mass of smoldering, twisted steel along a flat stretch in thick forest country. Smoke curled from the wreckage and piles of yellow sulphur, grain and pipe from the freight train were scattered along the tracks.

The accident occurred near Jasper National Park, on the border between Alberta and British Columbia and 175 miles west of Edmonton, the provincial capital.

"We have ... received word that there are between 30 and 40 deaths," said Cedric Jennings, spokesman for Via Rail, the Canadian passenger train service, in a radio interview from Montreal. He said there were 103 passengers on the train.

Dewan said the train carried between 101 and 120 passengers. There was no accurate count, he said, because the conductor had not yet

Center For Vets Ready

BY DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Several hundred eastern North Carolina veterans of the Vietnam War are still feeling the ill effects of the conflict, and the head of the Greenville Vet Center says his staff can help.

"To many Vietnam vets, the war is not completely over, and the Vet Center is very much involved in trying to help them," said Harold McMillion, team leader of the center.

The Greenville Vet Center's grand opening and dedication is scheduled for Tuesday at 1 p.m. Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., is expected to attend.

McMillion says the center has been open for a few weeks. "We just got our phones put in, and it's just finishing touches now," he said.

The Vet Center Program was established by Congress in 1979 to acknowledge a need for counseling services for Vietnam veterans and their families.

"Congress legislated funds to start the 'Vietnam Era Veterans Outreach Program' in order to help Vietnam veterans in readjustment counseling," McMillion said. "The storefront operations have been developed to allow veterans to just walk in and talk to other vets about their problems."

Several members of the staff are veterans. McMillion and David Lynch, readjustment counseling specialist, are both combat Vietnam veterans.

Although the Vet Center's primary mission is to serve Vietnam veterans, other veterans are eligible for services.

"We are able to work with non-Vietnam vets and their families," McMillion said.

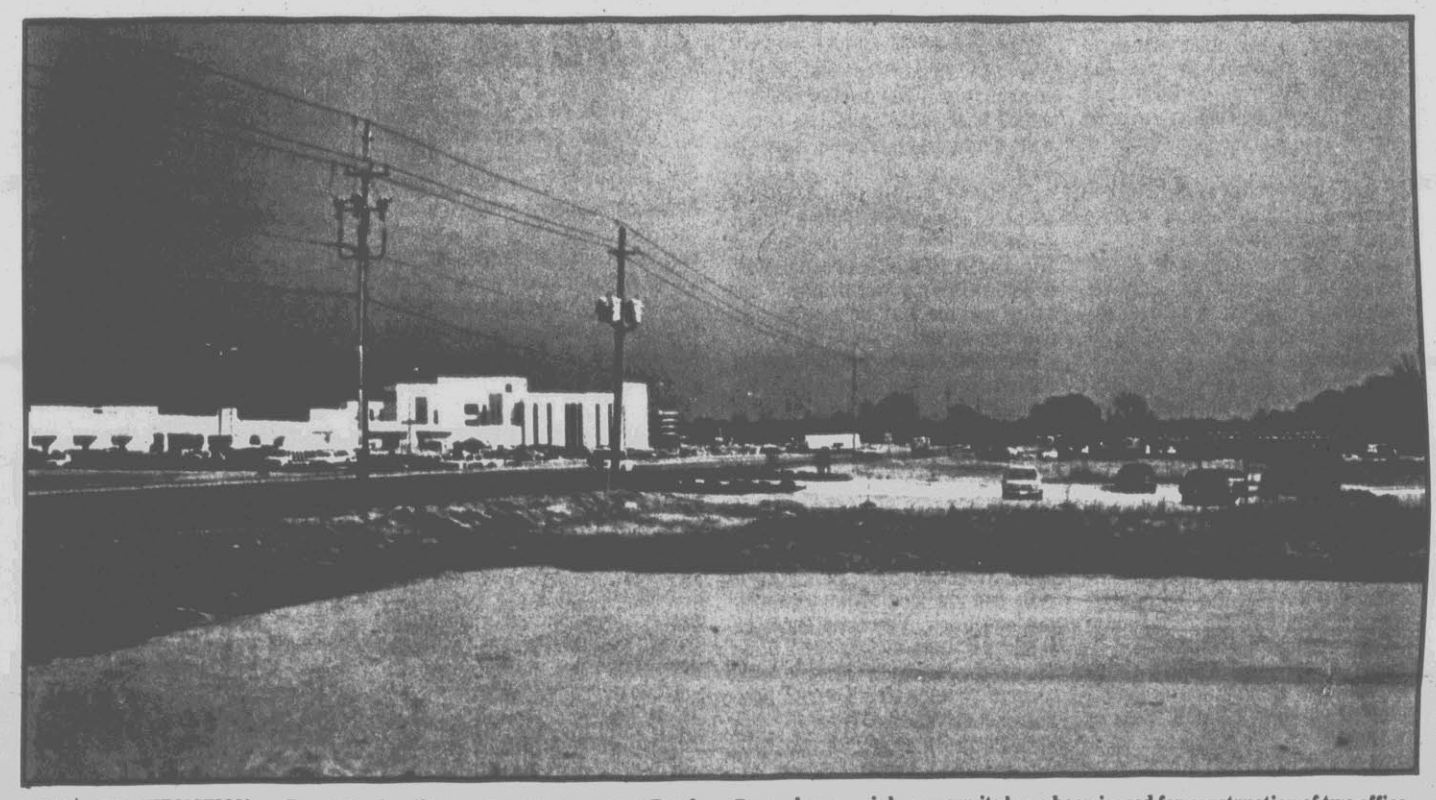

The Greenville Vet Center is primarily a couseling program and offers individual, group, family, marital and employment counseling.

McMillion says the facility doesn't provide medical care or process claims, but it does provide a variety of services.

"We provide counseling to deal with post traumatic stress disorder, psychological problems, family abuse, alcoholism and unemployment," he said.

The Vet Center staff is available for crisis intervention, community in-service training on post-traumatic stress disorders and issues pertaining to the veterans military experiences.

Medical District Study Proposals

Review May Take Six Months

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The future of the Pitt-Greenville Medical District lies just around the corner — six months around the corner, to be exact.

That is how long city officials say it will take to review and refine Medical District Study Committee recommendations on development of acreage surrounding Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

No longer than six months should be spent on review, however, according to city planning board Chairman Ric Miller. "We can't keep dragging this thing out. We ought to do something within the next six months or at least take the moratorium (on rezoning requests on property within the district) off. I don't think in good faith or good conscience we can leave it on forever," he said in an interview Thursday.

The Greenville City Council in August 1985 passed a resolution expressing its intent not to consider any rezoning requests on property located in the medical district until the MDSC report was complete and had been passed on to the council. The August resolution on rezoning requests followed a less restrictive resolution that was passed shortly before the council created the MDSC in December 1984.

Submitted Dec. 9, 1985, approximately a year after it was commissioned, the MDSC report is now being studied by city and county planning officials as well as representatives of the Greenville Board of Adjustment, the study committee, PCMH and others. Chamber of Commerce delegates have also been asked to participate in the review, according to Greenville Planning Director Bobby Roberson.

Following review, Roberson said several public hearings will be conducted by the planning commission before the matter is sent on for final council consideration. Roberson said owners of all property located in the district also will have to be contacted prior to council consideration.

In its raw form, the MDSC report calls for such changes as enlargement of the medical district from its present size of 1,790 acres to 5,300 acres and creation of a non-profit East Carolina Medical Park Corp. to oversee development of the area. The report also suggests that district zoning classifications and development standards be tightened to promote quality development.

Although city, county and health care officials have voiced concerns about certain aspects of the plan, most representatives of those agencies have said that the report is a good beginning.

Dean William Laupus of the ECU School of Medicine said the study is "outstanding" and said he would "hate to see it get lost in the halls of the city and county."

"I think it (final action) needs to be accomplished as fast as it can be carefully done," he said.

Laupus said, however, that jurisdictional concerns over land use could delay progress. "There are turf problems in a sense as to what the city can and cannot annex and this will have to be worked out between the city and county as to what's best for both parties," he said.

County Planner Phil Dickerson and Assistant County Manager John Bulow said in a typed report given to municipal officials prior to last week's first meeting of the review committee that while MDSC plans for development were "admirable" that "much work remains to be accomplished."

Concerns voiced by Dickerson and Bulow in the document include mutual agreements between the city and county about what areas need to be controlled in the district and by whom they need to be controlled.

The county representatives also wrote that there were "no apparent provisions existing for input from the county regarding development standards, zoning classifications, etc. ... As mentioned previously (in the memo) the county has a vital interest as a property owner and a governmental unit.

"All committees and boards associated with the development of the plan are appointed by the City Council with no county control," the letter continued. "The process proposed for selecting these appointees appears to insulate them from accountability to the public."

Since the memo was distributed, three county representatives — Dickerson; Earl Keel, Pitt County planning board chairman, and Ralph Hall, PCMH vice president of facility management — have been added to the review committee.

An additional matter that review committee members should concern themselves with is the possibility that the medical district could be inundated with special use permit requests before recommendations are forwarded to the City Council, city planning board Chairman Miller said.

Pitt Has 58 Buses On List

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Officials say 58 school buses in Pitt County contain a potentially defective steering mechanism that has prompted International Harvester to recall 55,800 buses nationwide beginning Monday.

The buses can continue to be used without danger, however, until the mechanism is replaced, school and Harvester inspectors agree. The buses were recalled for what Harvester called "fatigue cracks" in the steering arm of buses manufactured from 1978-85.

According to Barry Gaskins, public information director for Pitt County schools, Harvester has assured the state "there is no danger" of injury from the defects, and the local buses will continue to be used until replacement parts are available. He had no information on how long it would take to get replacement parts.

"The steering arm of the steering section of the buses tended to fatigue through a period of use, based on International Harvester records," Gaskins said. "The mechanism has failed but there are no accidents or fatalities related to the failure."

School bus recalls "are not unusual," Gaskins said. "It is a minor problem."

The State Department of Public Instruction will send Pitt County the serial number of the affected buses, Gaskins said, and county bus garage employees will begin substituting steering arms as replacements are available.

Replacing one steering arm takes approximately one hour, Gaskins said. The system's fleet of substitute buses will be used while repairs are being made. The Pitt County bus garage, which operates buses for both the Pitt and Greenville school systems, has a fleet of 202 buses. Gaskins said 75 are model years 1978-85 but only 58 have the questioned steering arm.

In North Carolina, about 3,000 school buses will be affected by the recall, according to Department of Education transportation director Norfleet Gardner. Gardner said he hoped to repair about 150 buses a day.

"We've already set in motion a plan to get this job done," Gardner said. He said the local school systems will do the work while the buses are parked.

"We've had good success out of

Mapping Program Will Improve Land Records

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Counties, since the beginning of local government in North Carolina, have had the major responsibility for creating and maintaining the only legally acceptable documentary evidence of property rights for lands within their jurisdictions.

In years past — patricularly in predominantly rural counties with few land transactions — simple, manual recordkeeping procedures were adequate. But with today's increases in land values and the number of land transactions, there is a need for rapid processing, indexing and filing, and more accurate mapping, according to Pitt County Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee.

Pitt County officials for several years have been looking toward a new mapping program to be used as the basis for the county's land records system. Last week, the Board of Commissioners gave tentative approval to an $854,000 proposal which will give the county a state-of-the-arts mapping program before the end of 1988.

Pitt County now uses federal Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service aerial photography enlargements as basic land records maps. But image distortions inherent in all aerial photography "leave much to be desired as an adequate mapping system for tax and other reference purposes," Hardee said.

Under the proposal given tentative approval by county commissioners, Landmark Engineering of Cary will produce 929 orthophoto maps, 197 soil maps and cadastral maps of 42,000 parcels of land in the county.

The sequence for updating the county's land records involves making aerial photographs of the entire county. Then by using reference points, scale and elevation established by ground surveys, orthophoto — which are photos that have been corrected for scale — are made.

After the orthophotos are produced, dadastral maps, which provide precise boundaries for land parcels, and soil maps, which show what type of soil is at a particular site, are produced.

According to Hardee, since the orthophoto is accurately scaled, it is used as a permanent base map that can be kept up-to-date without loss of accuracy.

As part of the proposal, the cadastral and soils maps will be digitized so the information they contain can be stored in the county's computer. By using computers to store the information, the records can be tied together and can be retrieved and updated at less cost than remapping. And each parcel of land will be given a number, so if a map of a particular parcel is needed, it can be printed by the computer on command, Hardee said.

The new system was approved by the state in 1978, Hardee said, and eventually "all counties will have a system just alike."

The maps are "something that many different departments" such as the register of deeds, the tax supervisor and collector, the clerk of court, the county engineer and planner, the building inspector, will have use for, Hardee said. As an example, he said the new maps will allow the tax supervisor's office to do a better job in valuing property. "The soil maps are necessary because of a new law on valuing farm property ... it has to be valued by soil type," he said.

"Once we have the maps, we will be able to build a data base that all departments can draw information from," Hardee said. "Eventually the land records management program will tie together this office, the register of deeds ... everything will be tied together."

Another benefit of the new maps? They provide precise boundaries for land parcels and "we'll probably find some property, not an awful lot,

Reagan Knows The Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is by now a familiar scene: the president of the United States, his lips pursed and eyes narrowed as he sits awaiting his turn to eulogize a fallen hero.

Last week in Houston it was the Challenger crew. President Reagan sat outdoors, his wife and the victims' families around him, the wind rustling his hair, now distinctly grayer than it was when he took office five years ago.

He speaks, his voice cracking at the memory of those who died. It was the same in December at Fort Campbell, Ky., where he remembered the soldiers who perished in a plane crash coming home from the Sinai.

At Camp Lejeune, N.C., he sat solemn and hatless in a bitter cold, driving rain to honor those who died in Lebanon and Grenada in October 1983. Last summer, on his way to Andrews Air Force Base, Md., to welcome home the TWA hostages, he stopped for a quiet moment at the fresh grave of Robert Dean Stethem, the Navy diver killed in the hijacking and buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

With hugs for the bereaved, their whispered thank-yous and the words he always deems inadequate, the president, so cheerful and optimistic most of the time, somehow unites the nation in moments of sadness.

"Reagan handles it better than anyone," concedes Christopher Matthews, a White House speechwriter for Jimmy Carter and now an aide to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Dropping none of his outspoken opposition to Reagan's policies, Matthews can't help but admire the role Reagan plays as head of state, which the Democratic aide separates from that of head of government.

"Many countries separate their heads of state and heads of government," he observes, noting they leave the symbolic and ceremonial duties to a hereditary monarch or a president who doesn't dabble in partisan politics. The task of governing is assigned to a prime minister and parliamentary Cabinet. But in the United States, one person fills both roles.

Reagan, his admiring opponent says, seems to understand the American myth just as Churchill grasped the British soul and as de Gaulle inspired the French.

"He knows that Gary Cooper and Jimmy Stewart are real to the American people," Matthews suggests. "There is a cinematic element jo the mythological American hero."

Reagan, indeed, is an ardent hero worshiper. And he leads the nation in praising not just its martyrs but its brave young people, such as the four he introduced to the nation at his State of the Union address Tuesday night.

Sometimes he has confused real heroes with those from the movies.

He once told the nation's Medal of Honor winners about one of their number, a World War II pilot, who he said won the nation's highest award for valor by riding his burning plane into the sea so as not to abandon a wounded crewman trapped in a gun turret. The story could not be documented until a scholar in California traced it to an old war movie Reagan apparently had seen some years before.

Matthews suggests that the president, a former actor with many heroic roles to his credit, "identifies with heroes like the fan in a movie theater."

WASHINGTON (AP) — What do Vietnam Veterans, George and Ira Gershwin, Mark Twain, myasthenia gravis, Polish-Americans and the federal building in Green Bay, Wis., have in common?

Answer: They were all saluted, commemorated, condemned, hailed, renamed or otherwise taken note of by Congress last year, and in many cases honored or singled out by special days, weeks, months or even entire years.

All were specially designated by laws, adopted by the House and Senate and signed by the president, along with measures concerning such groups or matters as American women, older workers, fair housing, world health and cancer prevention.

In 1985, the Senate met for 1,252 hours and 31 minutes over 170 days. The House met for 965 hours and 16 minutes over 152 days. A total of 7,777 bills and resolutions were introduced.

At the end of the legislative process just 240 measures had been passed by both houses and signed into law by the president, including all authorization and appropriations measures needed to pay the government's bills and the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction plan aimed at eliminating the federal budget deficit by 1991.

Of those 240 laws, at least 107 were dedicated to such matters as naming federal office buildings, honoring worthy Americans and setting aside various days, weeks and months to herald achievement, remember anniversaries and give attention to worthy causes and worthy groups.

Consider, for example, congressionally proclaimed anniversaries: There was the 25th anniversary of U.S. weather satellites, the 24th anniversary of the ill-fated Bay of Pigs invasion in Cuba, the 75th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America, the 10th anniversary of the signing of the Helsinki final act, and the 25th anniversary of the Peace Corps.

The entire year was proclaimed by law, "The Oil Heat Centennial Year."

Following tradition, Congress designated days in May and June for Mother's Day and Father's Day and set aside the entire month of June to honor family reunions.

Congress also took time to praise famous men and women:

Gold medals were ordered struck to honor the work of popular song composers George and Ira Gershwin.

May 6 was set aside to honor Dr. Jonas Salk, discoverer of the vaccine for polio; June 12 was designated Anne Frank Day in honor of the teen-ager whose diary became one of the most poignant documents of the holocaust in Europe; and the week beginning June 23 was named Helen Keller Deaf-Blind Awareness Week in honor of the famous pioneer in those fields who was herself deaf and blind.

Congress set aside Nov. 18 to honor Eugene Ormandy, who achieved fame as the conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, and Nov. 30 was designated National Mark Twain Day.

Congress renamed hiking trails and airport control towers. It renamed federal office buildings in several cities to honor, among others, former Rep. John Byrnes, R-Wis., in Green Bay, and former Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, in Salt Lake City.

Worthy groups got special notice: There was Women's History week in March, followed by Older Worker's Week. Jewish Heritage Week in April was followed by a special week for crime victims. Correctional officers were put on the congressional calendar for a week in May, which was also the official month for older Americans. But the Vietnam Veterans got just one day, May 7.

May was a busy month. Congress used it to carve out weeks for Senior Center Week, National Science Week, and it designated the entire month not only for the elderly but for Very Special Arts U.S.A. Month and Better Hearing and Speech Month.

WASHINGTON — Only a few hours after the space shuttle Challenger exploded in flight Jan. 28, Rep. Don Fuqua, chairman of the House subcommittee that controls funding of the shuttle program, diverged from general discussion of the tragedy and reminiscences about various crew members.

"A similar incident almost occurred a year or so ago," Fuqua recalled. Now, he said, the military would be "all over our backs soon."

Fuqua was obliquely referring to a predicament into which the shuttle program has stumbled. Because of oversupply in the satellite market and competition from foreign space programs, the space shuttle needs its military clients, who have booked one-third of the future flights, more than ever.

Yet the Defense Department has been looking for a way to avoid using the manned spacecraft; the Pentagon thinks the vehicle is an unreliable means of transporting military hardware into orbit.

There "is concern that in the future the fleets could be grounded ... as we do airplanes today or if one of the orbiters would be damaged to the point it would have to be pulled out of the fleet," said Edward C. Aldridge, undersecretary of the Air Force, in testimony last April before the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee.

"We fully support the space shuttle and will continue to use it for the great majority of our missions," the Pentagon later added, "but our dependence on a single space launch system is an unacceptable national security risk."

The Air Force has been pushing for $2.2 billion to launch Titan II rockets, with solely military payloads, over a nine-year period. The overall cost of the Titan II, frequently referred to as a complementary expendable launch vehicle (CELV), "is trivial compared to most shuttle flights," Aldridge said. In the event of an international crisis, he added, "it would be worth it to have additional felxibility."

In his national space policy directive, President Reagan recognized the need for a "limited number of expendable launch vehicles to complement the shuttle." The Pentagon has stressed, in fact, that it doesn't regard the CELV as merely an insurance policy.

"There never has been a perfect space launch system," the Defense Department contended. "(We) continue to experience the kind of problems inherent to any system which must operate in the environmental and performance extremes of space ... Should one orbiter be permanently disabled, we would never catch up."

This April, the National Commission on Space was planning to propose the development of a new space vehicle to be used for low-cost space travel and transport. Designed by the government but privately built, what commission chairman Thomas Paine terms a "space railroad" would effectively replace the shuttle currently in use.

The enactment of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings, the legislation under which the deficit is to be eliminated by 1991, has struck fear in the heart of congressional offices, many of which may have to lay off staff members to comply with the 4.3 percent budget cut mandated by the new law. Money for clerks is also slated for cuts, meaning that some "issues caucuses" might have to shut down.

At the same time, the Balanced Budget Act has generated work for those learned in the arcane business of government spending. States, cities and private companies, among others, have been spending thousands of dollars for expertise. For example, Touche Ross & Co., the New York-based accounting firm, charges up to $1,000 each time its chief budget consultant, Stanley Collender, provides advice to clients; some local governments are paying as much as $50,000 to find out how much money they might lose. Assorted think tanks and specialist publications are also cashing in by holding seminars.

Choice For Dole

WASHINGTON — Rank-and-file Republican senators are pondering an ultimatum to Sen. Robert J. Dole after the 1986 election: Seek another term as majority leader or run for the GOP presidential nomination, but you can't do both.

That reflects murmurs of discontent in the Senate Republican cloakroom over Dole's first year as floor leader, which fell a bit short of its high expectations. Dole's colleagues fear his performance in the next two years could suffer if he has one eye on the presidential ball.

If Dole were to step aside, his second-in-command — Majority Whip Alan Simpson of Wyoming — would have a hard time finding the votes to move up. The early favorite: Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, who was nosed out by Dole for the leadership post after the 1984 election and has been preparing a comeback ever since.

Secretary of State George Shultz has been awarded a prestigious new academic chair at Stanford University's Graduate School of Business, suggesting he may leave Washington before the second Reagan term ends.

The designation of Shultz to fill the Jack Steele Parker chair for international economics was approved without fanfare by Stanford's board of trustees several weeks ago. Stanford insiders say the university would not have named Shultz if it believed he would not take the chair for three more years, at age 68. His permanent home is located at Palo Alto, Calif., near the Stanford campus.

At least, Shultz now has guaranteed "soft landing" to use whenever he decides to flee the political and diplomatic wars along the Potomac. Recently he has shown extreme displays of private anger at right-wing critics who complain about his conduct in office.

At a senior White House staff meeting Jan. 28, Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan raised anxious eyebrows with a quiet comment that he would have "something to say" on his staff's split over the president's state of the union address to be delivered that night.

Regan's quiet remark came as Communications Director Pat Buchanan, a central figure in the angry dispute, was giving his routine rundown of the morning's top news. When he started to brief Regan on a page one story in The New York Times reporting the feud, Regan held his hand up for silence. "I'll have something to say about that after today," he said.

A few hours later, the space shuttle tragedy delayed the president's speech a week and threw the White House scheduling into disarray. So Regan's staffers have been forced to wait for what they think is going to be this word from the boss: Cut out the fighting.

Former Gov. Chuck Robb of Virginia showed his eagerness for the national spotlight when, without complete success, he volunteered to lead the Democratic response to President Reagan's State of the Union address.

Although Robb insistently disavows any plans to seek the presidential nomination in 1988, he was anxious to be the first Democrat to appear on the screen responding to the Great Communicator. However, Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, was given the role of opening and closing the response as master-of-ceremonies.

Robb was tentatively scheduled to be the first of four speakers following Mitchell, but the week's postponement of the State of the Union made even that uncertain because of a desire to shape the live presentation to current news developments. The other three speakers were to be Lt. Gov. Harriet Woods of Missouri and Rep. Tom Daschle of South Dakota, both 1986 Senate candidates, and Rep. William Gray of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Budget Committee.

Reagan Support Grows

PRINCETON, N.J. — The public's assessments of President Reagan's conduct of relations with the Soviet Union and of the nuclear arms negotiations have improved sharply in recent months. Reagan currently has greater public support on both key dimensions of foreign policy than at any other time during his five-year tenure.

In Gallup's first (mid-January) 1986 assessment, 65 percent approve of the way Reagan is handling relations with the U.S.S.R., while 57 percent approve of his handling of the nuclear disarmament negotiations.

Last July, when the previous measurements were made, 52 percent gave Reagan a positive rating for his handling of U.S.-Soviet relations, while 49 percent appoved of his efforts in the disarmament negotiations.

Reagan's previous high for handling Soviet relations was recorded in March, 1981, when 58 percent approved. In January, 1985, 52 percent approved of his handling of the disarmament negotiations, his best previous rating for that responsibility.

During the six-month interval between the two most recent surveys, many important international events have occurred, including the mid-November summit meeting in Geneva between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, and the late-December terrorist attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports.

Despite the strong gains in public support for his handling of relations with the Soviet Union and the disarmament negotiations, Reagan's rating for his overall conduct of foreign policy remains unchanged from last July, with 50 percent in each survey giving him a positive grade.

At least part of this apparent anomaly may be rooted in the lower marks he consistently has received for his achievements in such international trouble spots as the Middle East (43 percent currently approve), South Africa (33 percent approved in an October survey), and Nicaragua (26 percent approved last March).

President Reagan's overall job performance rating has been statistically unchanged for the last four months. In the current survey, 64 percent approve of the way he is handling the duties of his office, while 27 percent disapprove and 9 percent are undecided.

However, a small improvement is found in the President's latest rating for his handling of economic conditions. Currently, 53 percent approve and 38 percent disapprove. In October, the comparable figures were: approve 48 percent, disapprove 44 percent. An increase in public approval of Reagan's handling of the economy is found in most key demographic groups.

The latest results are based on in-person interviews with 1,570 adults, 18 and older, conducted in over 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Jan. 10-13. For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 3 percent in either direction.

In addition to sampling error, the reader should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.

Should Help To Savimbi Be Overt, Or Covert?

WASHINGTON — Back on Nov. 22, President Reagan fielded a reporter's question about Jonas Savimbi. In his address to Congress the night before, the president had said that "we will continue to support the heroic efforts of those who fight for freedom." Why, then, asked the reporter, was Reagan's administration opposing even humanitarian aid to Savimbi in Angola?

This was the president's reply: "We all believe that a covert operation would be more useful to us and would have more chance of success right now than the overt proposal that has been made in Congress."

Well, Savimbi was in town last week. In gratifying contrast to his previous visits, when he was royally snubbed, Savimbi has appointments with both the president and with Secretary of State George Shultz. Those of us who believe in the president's pledge — that freedom fighters should be supported — will pray devoutly that the conversations bear immediate fruit. Savimbi urgently needs help, and he needs that help now.

It is immaterial, in my view, whether U.S. support is given "overtly" or covertly." What difference does it make? Heaven knows that Savimbi's enemies make no such punctilious distinctions. The 45,000 Cuban mercenaries are there, fighting against him. The Soviet commanders are there, leading troops against his forces. The Soviets have sent an estimated $2.5 billion in arms to the Marxist rulers who nominally control the destinies of Angola. Let me paraphrase an exhortation every schoolchild supposedly knows: Our enemies are already in the field. Why stand we here idle?

For those who came in late, a word of background may be in order. Portugal gave up its Angolan colony in 1974 after eight years of a struggle for independence led chiefly by Savimbi's UNITA (the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola). At a critical hour in 1975, the Soviet-backed MPLA (Popular Liberation Movement in Angola) seized control of the capital at Luanda. The new communist rulers brought in thousands of Cuban troops; they broke the promise of free elections; and they created a one-party Marxist state.

Ten years later, the MPLA has effective control over barely two-thirds of Angola. Most of southern Angola is effectively controlled by Savimbi's UNITA. His guerrilla forces ore freely throughout the area. They see to civil government and to the administration of justice. They operate nearly 7,000 schools with about 227,000 students. They maintain a small hospital in their provisional capital at Jamba.

By every yardstick that might be applied, Savimbi measures up to all that could be asked of an anti-communist leader in Africa. He has repeatedly defined UNITA's aims: "We fight for an independent Angola, free of all foreign troops. We believe that peasants, not the state, should own farm land. We favor democratic elections, freedom of religion and respect for tribal customs and languages. We are fighting the Cubans and Soviets who would deny us our nation."

The past summer, the nature of the prolonged struggle changed drastically. For the first time, experienced Soviet officers took command of Cuban and MPLA forces. They brought supply columns protected by a new fleet of armored vehicles. They provied air cover with MIG 21s and 23s and the Soviet helicopter gunships. Savimbi skillfully moved his forces and managed to defeat his enemy's effort to capture the key town of Mavinga. In October the rains came, and the Soviet cadre departed.

Next month the rainy season ends. As Savimbi has said, the grounds will harden and the skies will clear, and the Soviets will return.

What does the president propose to do about this? If the United States acts promptly, decisively, imaginatively, the arms that Savimbi so desperately needs may yet be provided. If we respond only with half-measures — with lip service, with blankets, aspirins and tins of Spam — th cause could be lost.

If Angola finally falls to Soviet domination, another 8 million human beings will have been surrendered to tyranny. Given effective support, Savimbi can prevent this. Do we send too little, too late? Or do we send what is needed, now?

Marcos Hints May Void Vote As Opponent Claims Victory

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Corazon Aquino claimed victory and urged her supporters Saturday to defend her lead in the presidential election. President Ferdinand E. Marcos hinted he might void the election before vote-counting is finished, but said he was "playing it by ear."

Unofficial results from Friday's voting, tabulated by the government's Commission on Elections and the grassroots National Movement for Free Elections, known as Namfrel, both showed Mrs. Aquino ahead.

There are 86,036 voting stations spread across the nation's 1,000 inhabited islands, and final election results are not expected for days.

The commission's tally, based on results from 16.65 percent of the precincts, had Mrs. Aquino leading Marcos with 1,819,896 votes to 1,681,635, approximately 52 percent to 48 percent.

Namfrel's count, based on results from 43.15 percent of the precincts, gave Mrs. Aquino 4,901,020 votes and Marcos 4,154,868, a lead of 54.1 percent to 45.9 percent.

Namfrel has been endorsed by U.S. officials and the Roman Catholic church.

Mrs. Aquino, 53, widow of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino, told about 3,000 cheering supporters to "be vigilant" and guard ballot boxes to prevent wholesale fraud.

Eligible to vote Friday were 26 million Filipinos out of a population of 54 million. It was the nation's first two-sided election since 1969, when Marcos defeated Sen. Sergio Osmena Jr. Marcos now has been president for 20 years.

In 1972, Marcos imposed martial law for eight years.

Widespread reports emerged of voter intimidation, vote-buying and ballot-box switching in Friday's election.

Sen. Richard Lugar, co-leader of a team of official U.S. election observers, accused Marcos' supporters of delaying the vote count to manipulate the results.

"My feeling is the count is being managed, manipulated," the Indiana Republican told reporters.

Mrs. Aquino declared victory, basing her claim on unofficial ballot counts. She said she hoped to meet with Marcos in the next few days to ensure "a smooth and easy transition" of power.

"Obviously it is in the interest of our nation that Mr. Marcos concede as soon as circumstances warrant," she said.

But Marcos raised the possibility he might declare the election invalid and serve out the remainder of his six-year term, which was due to expire in 1987.

Marcos called the special election to try to show domestic and foreign critics, particularly in the United States, that he still enjoyed overwhelming support in the Philippines.

When asked at a news conference what he would do if the 20-member U.S. observer team declared the election had been "unclean," Marcos said he would first try to convince the observers the election was honest:

Marcos continued, "If you're trying to move toward the point as to whether I would declare the elections invalid, and either declare that no elections had been held and continue (in office) up to 1987, or call another election, these are matters which I have thought seriously about, and as of now I am trying to play it by ear."

The Philippine constitution does not specifically empower Marcos to cancel an election result, but contains a provision that is so vague it would cover almost any situation.

It states that "whenever in the judgment of the president, there exists a grave emergency or a threat or imminence thereof .. . he may, in order to meet the exigency, issue the necessary decrees ... which shall form part of the law of the land."

Marcos added it would be "very sad for me, very sad for our people," if the Philippines were abandoned by his longstanding American allies because of an election that they thought was unfair.

He said U.S. military bases in the Philippines were vital to regional security, and if they were eliminated his country would probably have "to make some sort of modus vivendi with the other powers in the region."

Washington is concerned that domestic turmoil in the Philippines would jeopardize the key Pacific bases.

Before the election, President Reagan indicated he would significantly increase U.S. military and economic aid if the elections were fair and were followed by economic, political and military reforms.

Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., said a helicopter carrying two members of a U.S. elections observer team was fired on, but not hit, while flying over the southern island of Mindanao.

The official Philippine News Agency reported 80 people have been killed since Dec. 6 in 202 incidents of election-related violence.

The agency, quoting national police chief Lt. Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, said 43 incidents occured in Manila.

Mrs. Aquino told a news conference the elections had been "violent and shameful in terms of fraud and intimidation."

"Tension is high and I hope once Mr. Marcos realizes that my victory is irreversible he will in the best tradition of democratic politics concede rather than prolong the uncertainty," she said.

She said she would not resort to violence but would lead daily demonstrations against Marcos should he try to snatch away the victory she claimed.

A political novice who had spent recent years as a housewife, Mrs. Aquino entered politics after the shooting of her husband in 1983.

Voters cast ballots separately for vice president, and election commission tabulations showed Arturo Tolentino, a member of the National Assembly who is Marcos' running mate, narrowly ahead of Salvador Laurel, Mrs. Aquino's choice.

Marcos countered opposition claims of victory with a detailed, region-by-region tally which he said showed he would triumph.

He said he "may have lost metropolitan Manila," an Aquino stronghold, but said an overall Marcos victory by 1.5 million votes would be the "worst scenario" and 2.2 million the best.

Iraq Claims Two Iranian Jets Hit

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said Saturday its warplanes shot down two Iranian jets, strafed two unidentified ships in the Persian Gulf and made a direct hit on a central pumping station that supplies Iran's main oil export terminal.

"Smoke was seen billowing from its facilities," a military spokesman announced on Baghdad radio after reporting the attack on the Ganaveh pumping station, 25 miles northeast of the Kharg Island oil terminal. The Kharg Island terminal was designed to handle 90 percent of the Persian nation's oil exports.

There was no way to confirm the reports because foreign reporters have seldom been allowed into the areas of fighting since the two nations went to war over a border dispute in September 1980.

The military spokesman said Iraqi ground defenses and warplanes shot down two Iranian jets out of four that had flown into Iraqi airspace and then fled.

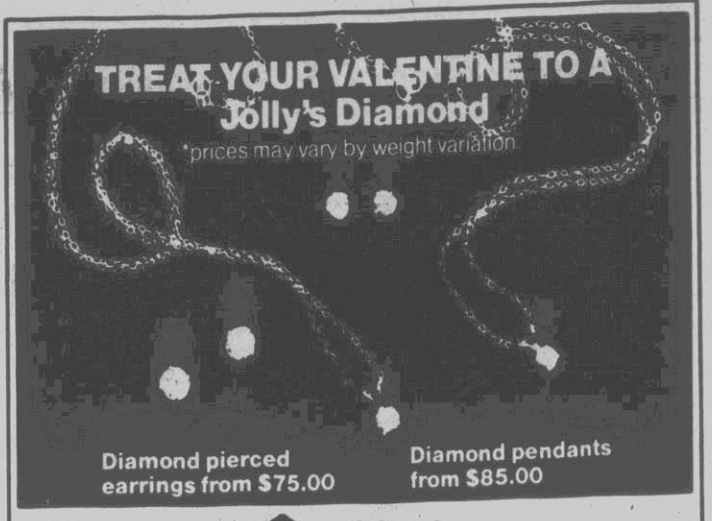

Iraqi jet fighters "intercepted and chased away" four Iranian planes that "tried to raid residential neighborhoods" in southern Basra province, the spokesman said.

An American-made Iranian F-4 was shot down in a dogfight over Iranian airspace and an F-14 was shot down by ground fire, according to the spokesman who was not identified in keeping with military regulations.

The two planes crashed into Iranian territory and the F-14 pilot bailed out, accoarding to the spokesman.

It is believed that Iran has a few warplanes left, almost all American-made, from the days before the revolution led by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ousted the U.S.-backed Shah Reza Pahlavi in January 1979.

Iran has had trouble getting parts for its deteriorating air fleet and has not often used its warplanes against Iraq.

Novelist Godwin To Spend A Week At Peace College

RALEIGH — Novelist Gail Godwin will be in Raleigh Monday through Friday at Peace College, one of her North Carolina alma maters.

Ms. Godwin, a 1957 graduate of Peace, is the College's 1986 Goodmon Visiting Scholar. She will give a free, public reading Monday at 8 p.m., and will spend most of the rest of the week in classes with Peace students.

She is the author of six novels and two short story collections. "A Mother and Two Daughters," published in 1982, was on the New York Times best seller list for 17 weeks and has sold well over one million copies.

Her recently-released novel, "The Finishing School," has earned high critical acclaim. TIME magazine's Paul Gray called it "at once her most artful and accomplished novel and an old-fashioned, irresistable page turner."

Her other novels include "The Perfectionists," "Glass People," "The Odd Woman" and "Violet Clay." Her short story collections include "Dream Children" and "Mr. Bedford and the Muses." Her stories have appeared in Esquire, Atlantic, Harper's, Cosmopolitan, Mademoiselle and McCall's.

Recognition of her work has resulted in two National Endowment grants, a Guggenheim Fellowship and an Award in Literature from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters. She was named Peace College's Distinguished Alumna in 1982.

Although she was born in Alabama, Ms. Godwin's roots remain in North Carolina, where she was reared in Asheville. She received a bachelor's degree in journalism from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1959.

Ms. Godwin's visit is being sponsored by the Betty Lou Fletcher Goodmon Visiting Scholars Program, funded in memory of Mrs. Goodmon, a 1940 honor graduate of Peace.

Chinese Writer Wang Meng Currently Back In Favor

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — Wang Meng, a novelist who was persecuted for 22 years as a rightist, says that Chinese writers have more creative freedom today than ever before.

Chinese writers can now criticize social evils and bureaucracy and depict all kinds of human events, he said, "but the freedom we don't have is to express distrust in the social system, the present political system."

An avowed communist since he fought Chiang Kai-Shek's nationalists in his youth, Wang noted that China has few intellectuals. "So the party and people expect them to be more concerned with the fate of our nation, success or failure of the reforms and stability.

"We favor literary works with a political and ideological inclination toward socialism."

As he talked in the study of the apartment he shares with his wife and daughter, surrounded by piles of books and magazines, Wang deplored the current popularity of lurid tabloids about martial arts, chivalry, crime and sex.

He said a "serious" novel does well if it sells 100,000 copies in this nation of more than 1 billion people. "You can go to the newsstand and not find any pure literature — only thrillers and pulp novels. That's the problem."

One novel attracting readers, Zhang Xianliang's "Half of Man Is Woman," was blasted in the Peking daily for its "animalistic" emphasis on sex, normally a taboo subject.

Wang said he disapproves of the book, in which the hero marries a woman out of sexual desire then tires of her and seeks a divorce. "I question the morality," he said.

He was asked if there was a parallel between his persecution for writing "The Newcomer in the Organization Department" and criticism of Zhang.

Wang said: "This criticism is very much different than the one I had 20 years ago. If there is nothing more than criticism, no writer will be afraid of it. What was so terrible in the 1950s was the aftermath."

Wang lost his Communist Youth League job and party membership and was exiled as an "anti-party, anti-socialist" element because he had written a story about apathetic party cadres. Six years ago, he was allowed back to Peking from hard labor and silent exile in the northwest region of Xinjiang.

"The role I play is to build a kind of bridge between writers and the Party Central Committee," the 51-year-old novelist said.

Invited onto the elite Central Committee in 1982, Wang is also executive vice chairman of the 2,400-member Chinese Writers' Association.

His climb from adversity was swift, but brought with it the danger that by representing the party line on literature he might erode the very freedom he once craved.

While pronouncing this era a new "golden age for Chinese literature," his recent speeches have reminded writers of their "social responsibility" and assailed those who pursue art, or bestsellers, for their own sake.

"I understand the point of view of our friends in the West, where writers are free to do what they want. But in China, if you want to retain freedom, you have to be careful," Wang said.

Wang's writing style is crisp and unsentimental. His themes are symbolic and his endings usually are optimistic.

After many years as a novelist, Elmore Leonard now enjoys superstar status in the field of thriller fiction. Millions of readers know him as the author of the bestseller "Glitz." Now, in "Dutch Threat," three of Leonard's novels have been bound together.

This compilation features books written in the mid 1970s that did not receive as much attention then as they probably merited. "Swag," "The Hunted" and "Mr. Majestyk" are distinguished by Leonard's typical plot twists and exhaustive pace. All three display the author's acute ear for earthy urban dialogue.

"Swag" — Ernest Stickley Jr. is the best there is at grand theft, auto. Jack Ryan's specialty is scheming. Ryan has it all figured out. He's written down 10 rules to sure-fire success and put a .357 magnum in his pocket. Together they can grab enough swag to live the sweet life in summertime Detroit. It looks like a piece of cake — until a department store stick-up is too tempting to pass up, until a freckle-faced doll name Arlene learns too much about their "business," until they break one of Ryabn's rules and suddenly it looks like somebody's going to end up doing 25 years-to-life, for murder.

"The Hunted" — Everybody loved Al Rosen, except those who wanted him killed. Suddenly his quiet existence took a dive. Hotels burned down around him. Cars crashed through sidewalk cafes just to nail him. Snipers tried to pick him out of crowds and someone kept rigging his car with plastic explosives. Al responded by fleeing. But his time was running out and he had no more friends.

"Mr. Majestyk" — Mr. Majestyk had his belly full of killing in Asia. It was his job and he was one of the best, but when he stripped off his uniform, he never wanted to go back to it. That was why he was a melon farmer now, down where nobody knew his past. And that was why a cheap crook named Kopas, a hard-nosed cop named McAllen, and a big-time, high-priced hit man named Renda all figured Majestyk was just another local yokel to be pushed around. But Majestyk is forced to go to war, again.

George F. Will has written in the introduction of "Dutch Threat" that it is a kind of club sandwich for the many thousands of us who have robust appetites for Leonard's work."

THE BEST AMERICAN SHORT STORIES 1985. Edited by Gail Godwin. Houghton Mifflin. 300 Pages. $14.95.

This series has been around since 1915, giving readers 70 years to enjoy what the various editors considered the best short stories of the time.

A check of previous volumes shows most of the introductions are less than memorable, but the one Gail Godwin supplies for this collection of 20 stories is a delight. Godwin gives intelligent reasons for how she arrives at what stories to include and which to omit. The way in which a story opens is what impresses her first and most, and stories that she instantly dislikes, as do admirers of the form, are those that begin: "Sondra, fiddling with the strap of her watch, waits in the Express Checkout line to pay for her blueberry yogurt and arugula leaves."

None of these stories begins poorly nor do they end that way. One of the best made is the lead-off story, Russell Banks' "Sarah Cole: A Type of Love Story." An ironic title, since the story deals with the chance meeting between an extremely handsome man and an extremely ugly woman and the romance that blossoms between them. The ending is not a happy one.

Another standout is "The Piano Tuner" by Peter Meinke. It begins quietly and amusingly, but quickly builds to a horrific ending.

Another good tale is Joy Williams' "The Skater." It tells how the death of a young girl has tarnished the lives of her parents as well as that of her surviving sister.

Snow Covers Southwest, Thunderstorms Hit Florida

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

The Texas Panhandle had snow-covered, icy roads Saturday after its heaviest snowfall in three years and a new snowstorm was rolling in across the Southwest, while severe thunderstorms lashed Florida with rain and tornadoes.

"We're trying to discourage travel," said a Texas Department of Public Safety communications operator who wouldn't give his name.

Parts of Texas got up to 14 inches of snow by early Saturday but most roads were reopened after Friday's heavy snow that blocked several highways, including part of Interstate 40.

Stormy weather contributed to at least nine deaths across the nation Friday.

Tornadoes touched down early Saturday in Florida at Hudson in Hernando County and near the Bartow Municipal Airport in Polk County, the National Weather Service said. An airport building was slightly damaged, and several homes and mobile homes in the Bartow area also were damaged, police said.

The weather service said the Marion County Sheriff's office had reported a tornado outside Belleview, but a sheriff's office spokesman who refused to give his name said Saturday night the area had been hit only by heavy winds that caused some property damage, but no injuries.

The Jacksonville Naval Air Station got 3.07 inches of rain in six hours ending at 1 p.m. EST, causing street flooding in Jacksonville, the weather service said, while Mayport, Fla., got 2.18 inches and McDill Air Force Base got 1.70 inches.

Hailstones as big as golfballs were reported in Florida's Marion County.

A winter storm watch was posted for all of New Mexico, which got up to 19 inches of snow Thursday and Friday, as a new storm spread light snow over the mountains of central and northern Arizona and much of New Mexico.

Thursday's snow all but buried east-central New Mexico, and Tucumcari got 19 inches in 36 hours, with nearly 2 feet in the northern and western mountains. Schools closed in several cities Friday, highways were blocked for a time and Albuquerque's airport had to shut down so crews could clear runways.

In Texas, that storm dumped 14 inches of snow at Borger, with 12 inches at Canyon and Vega and 10 inches in Miami. Authorities in Vega, west of Amarillo in the Panhandle, said many people called to report their doors blocked by 2-foot-high drifts.

Amarillo police Sgt. Margie King said she got stuck in the snow after she was sent to an accident Friday. A wrecker sent to help her also got stuck, and a state trooper and a county supervisor sent to help also got stuck. All five had to be rescued by an Emergency Service vehicle with four-wheel drive.

It was the heaviest snow for the Panhandle since 1983 and the first substantial moisture for the area in nearly two months.

New York City's Sanitation Department still had 845 snowplows and salt spreaders working side streets Saturday after the metropolitan area got from 5 inches of snow in the city to 9 inches in the northern suburbs, its first major snowfall of the season.

Friday's New York storm came on the eighth anniversary of the Great Blizzard of '78, which dumped 18 inches of snow on the city and up to 50 inches on parts of New England on Feb. 6-7. On Feb. 7, 1967, 12.5 inches of snow fell in New York.

A storm that dumped up to 7 inches of snow on Michigan moved out Saturday, helping Monroe County residents recover from flooding caused by gale-force wind pushing water up on the Lake Erie shore. About two dozen families fled their homes early Friday at Stony Point, Luna Pier and Gibraltar, but the water receded by early Saturday, county authorities said.

"Everyone who's lived in the beach areas knows what to do and (they) have their own evacuation plans," said Capt. Dennis Brooks of the Frenchtown Township Volunteer Fire Department.

Stretches of some Michigan highways were closed late Friday by trucks jackknifing on ice and sliding into ditches. "There were semi-rigs laying across the road and cars going into the ditch within a two-mile area," Sgt. Mario Burns said from the Erie post.

Icy roads were blamed for three traffic deaths in Nebraska, two in Michigan and one each in Arizona, Illinois and New Jersey.

BROTHERLY GIFT — Sam Matar, a Carmel, Calif., businessman, says its the thought that counts after getting 25 snakes, including these two pythons, for a birthday greeting from his brother, John Matar of Chicago. The snakes came in retaliation for Sam's gift to John last year: 100 skunks, 50 goats and several head of cattle. Sam says the snakes are going to a trainer in California. (AP Laserphoto)

Baxter Leads Terps By Clemson

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Senior Jeff Baxter, a shooting guard who wasn't shooting, finally got the message.

Sinking seven of 11 field goal attempts after shooting only once in Maryland's two previous games, Baxter scored a career-high 21 points as Maryland defeated Clemson 78-69 in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball Saturday.

"A shooting guard is supposed to shoot," concluded Baxter, who said he was reminded by Coach Lefty Drisell and his teammates at a meeting this week not to pass up chances.

"I took some shots that weren't even my shots," Baxter said, "but I was connecting, so I kept on taking them."

Point guard Keith Gatlin, who added 17 points while hitting eight of 12, also was encouraged to shoot in an effort to take pressure off workhorse forward Len Bias.

Although he hit only seven of 18 from the floor, Bias led the Terps with 24 points and he stopped several Clemson rallies while pouring in 17 after intermission.

"The key was the guards hitting outside," said Bias. "That opened things up a lot. I had a lot of open shots I usually make, but maybe I was too intense."

Drisell said he urged more shooting in the context of the offense because, "we can't keep forcing things to Lenny."

Maryland has a 2-6 record in the ACC and Clemson is 2-7, with the only previous victories by both teams coming over Wake Forest. Each team had lost seven of eight previous games, beating only Wake Forest.

Clemson, 14-9, trailed 38-26 early in the second half before a 7-point string pulled the Tigers to within 39-35.

Bias ended that rally with a field goal, later sank two free throws after Clemson pulled to within 50-48, and his three-point-play gave the Terps a 66-59 lead with 2:53 remaining.

Baxter and Gatlin did the bulk of the scoring for Maryland, 12-10, in the first half, which ended with the Terps ahead 32-22. They combined for 19 of Maryland's first 23 points.

Horace Grant scored 23 points to pace Clemson, which never lead and trailed after Maryland went ahead 10-8. Glenn Corbit had 12 points for the Tigers and Glen McCants had 11.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Freddie Banks scored 26 points, including a jump shot with 1:09 remaining that gave No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas a 67-66 victory over No. 3 Memphis State Saturday.

It was the 14th consecutive victory for the Runnin' Rebels and improved their record to 23-2 overall. The Tigers, playing without 7-foot center William Bedford, suffered their second loss in three games and dropped to 21-2.

Banks scored the last seven points for UNLV, breaking a 60-all tie on a three-point play with 4:31 remaining, then hitting another jumper to make it 65-62.

But the Tigers pulled ahead 66-65 on freshman Marvin Alexander's hook shot with 1:37 left, then Banks untied it.

But with 23 seconds left, Banks missed the front end of a one-and-one and Memphis State called time out.

The Tigers failed to get off a shot before the ball was knocked out of bounds with two seconds left. After another time out, Andre Turner, the Tigers' point guard, had the ball knocked out of his hands as time ran out.

UNLV led 42-38 at the half and pulled out to 51-45.

But the Tigers then went on an 11-0 run capped by freshman Marvin Alexander's tip-in. Then it was the Rebels' turn, a 9-2 run that gave them 60-58 lead.Turner's jumper State evened it at 60 with 4:44 left to set the stage for Banks.

Bedford, the Tigers' leading scorer, rebounder and shot blocker, began his two-game suspension Saturday for using Memphis State boosters' cars during the summer. His replacements, 6-9 sophomore DeWayne Bailey and the 6-7 Alexander, combined for four points and nine rebounds.

Anthony Jones, who sat out 11:32 after picking up three fouls, had 14 points for UNLV while center John Flowers scored 11, all in the first half when Las Vegas led 42-38.

Turner and Baskerville Holmes had 16 points for Memphis State and Vincent Askew had 15.

A record crowd of 18,832 at the Thomas and Mack Center, attended the game.

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Jeff Grayer scored 13 of his 21 points in the second half, including the go-ahead basket with 56 seconds left, as Iowa State defeated fifth-ranked Oklahoma 73-70 in Big Eight Conference basketball Saturday.

Iowa State won its 14th straight home game with its second upset in less than two weeks and hiked its record to 14-7 overall and 5-3 in the Big Eight. The Cyclones defeated Kansas, which was ranked fourth at the time, 77-74 on Jan. 28.

Oklahoma, which had shared the Big Eight lead with Kansas, fell to 21-2 for the season and 6-2 in the conference. The Sooners' only other loss was a 95-92 setback at Kansas.

Oklahoma rallied from a 12-point deficit early in the second half to take a 64-61 lead with a six-point run capped by Tim McCalister's jump shot with 4:28 left.

Iowa State regained the lead at 65-64 on Jeff Hornacek's bank shot with 3:35 remaining and the score was tied twice after that, the last time at 68-68 when Oklahoma's Anthony Bowie drove the baseline for a basket with 1:28 to go.

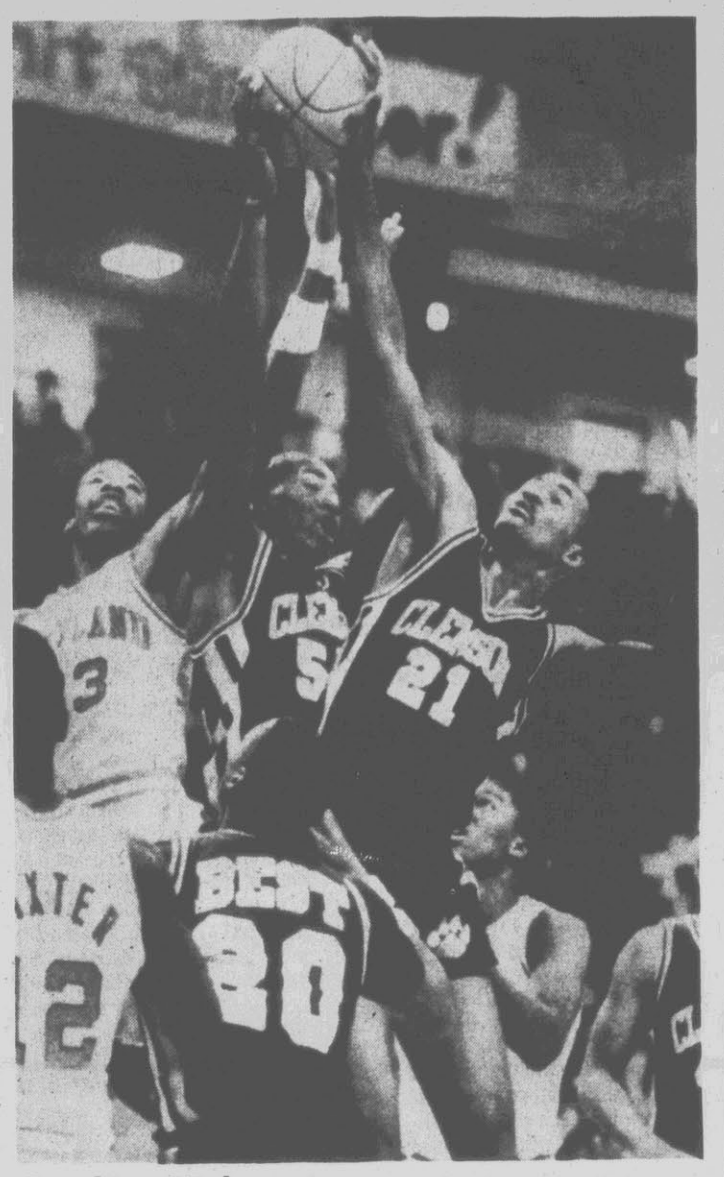

Oklahoma's Linwood Davis stole the ball moments later, but his breakaway layup was blocked by Iowa State's Elmer Robinson. Hornacek then fed Grayer for a jump shot in the lane that put Iowa State ahead for good at 70-68 with 56 seconds remaining.

Hornacek hit two free throws to stretch the lead to 72-68 with 23 seconds left and after Bowie scored Oklahoma's final basket, Hill made a free throw with three seconds remaining.

Hornacek finished with 16 points, Robinson came off the bench to score 11 — all in the first half to help Iowa State to a 41-32 lead at intermission — and Sam Hill added 10.

Darryl Kennedy topped Oklahoma with 17 points, but he was scorless in the last five minutes of the game. Bowie and McCalister scored 16 apiece. The 70 points were the second-lowest total of the year for the Sooners, who had been averaging 92.5 per game.

CHAMPAIGN (AP) — Junior guard Tony Wysinger hit four free throws in the final seconds of overtime Saturday to give Illinois an 83-79 victory over seventh-ranked Michigan.

Illinois had a chance to win the game in regulation play, but Wysinger's jump shot from the corner fell short as time ran out.

Illinois, 15-7 overall and 6-5 in the Big Ten, was led by Efrem Winters, who scored 25 points, and Ken Norman, who added 22. Wysinger, starting his first game since he suffered a separated shoulder Jan. 4 against Iowa, finished with 18 points including six in overtime.

Michigan, 20-3 and 8-3, was led by Antoine Joubert, with 20, Gary Grant with 19, and Roy Tarpley with 18.

The Illini raced to an early lead behind Winters and Norman and led 43-29 at the half. Playing before a packed house at the Assembly Hall and a national television audience, the Illini stretched their lead to 52-35 with 17 minutes to go.

But Joubert and Grant led a furious Michigan rally and the Wolverines took a 61-60 lead with five minutes to go. The Wolverines stretched their lead to 68-64 with two minutes to go before the Illini staged a rally of their own.

Wysinger hit two free throws with 1:30 to go and a basket with only 22 seconds left to tie the game at 68. Michigan lost its chance to win when Grant missed a jump shot and the Illini grabbed the rebound.

In overtime, the Illini took the lead on baskets by Winters and Wysinger.

Schultz Returns As The Newest Patti

By Connie Passalacqua

Dee Dixon of "As the World Turns" was a pathetic, helpless creature. As wife to the cruel and manipulative Dr. John Dixon, she made soap opera history by legally charging him with marital rape and bringing him to trial. Ironically, Jacqueline Schultz, the actress who played Dee, married Larry Bryggman, the actor who continues to play the smarmy Dr. Dixon. On "ATWT," the Dixons were divorced and Miss Schultz left the show.

Two years later, Miss Schultz has returned to daytime as the spunky, fiercely independent Patti Whiting on "Search for Tomorrow." Miss Schultz is the 31st actress to play Patti on the show since its premiere in 1951. In her mid-20s, she's also quite a bit younger than the show's last Patti, who left Henderson about six years ago for California.

"I've taken over a role that has a lot of history on the show," says Miss Schultz. "And they've certainly knocked a few years off of Patty. Luckily, she's almost stood still through time."

Patti has come back to town to search for the killer of her 17-year-old daughter Sarah. (In a ludicrous attempt to explain the unseemly age gap between mother and daughter, the "SFT" audience has now been led to believe that Sarah was adopted.) Patti is also about to become romantically involved with reporter Hogan McCleary (David Forsyth), and is still close with her mother, the show's longtime heroine, Jo Tourneur (Mary Stuart).

"Patti's story is a contemporary story of a young woman trying to find herself without needing a man or a mother, yet valuing those relationships," says Miss Schultz. "Today, I think women feel that to be truly complete they have to be independent without alienating themselves from the people who are important to them."

Miss Schultz was born in Queens, N.Y., and grew up on Long Island. She went to college on an opera scholarship, but when she graduated, she returned to what she calls her "first love — acting and doing musical comedy." She's now an understudy in an off-Broadway production of "The Foreigner" and has appeared in other off-Broadway productions of "Pygmalion" and "Hay Fever."

Comparing her "ATWT" and "SFT" roles, she says, "I was the daughter of the main family, as I am on this show. But Patti has more guts and spunk than Dee. Hopefully, on this show Patty will be the one causing problems. This Patti is a spitfire — someone who stirs things up."

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: My sisters say that the little boy who played Jody on "Family Affair" grew up to become one of the doctors on "St. Elsewhere." I want to embarrass them publicly. So whatever happened to Buffy andJody? — JONI VITALUNE, ALIQUIPPA, PENN.

Johnny Whitaker, born on Dec. 13, 1959, in Van Nuys, Calif., portrayed Jody on the CBS sitcom "Family Affair" from 1966-71. Mary Anissa Jones appeared as histwin, Buffy. Whitaker, who prefers John now, is a self-described "serious Mormon." He is currently a theater and cinematic-arts major at Brigham Young University. He speaks seven languages and is interested in international politics. Anissa Jones died of a drug overdose on August 29, 1976, shortly after her 18th birthday. She had downed a mix of Quaaludes and liquor. "Although we played twins, we were roles apart as human beings," says Whitaker of his former co-star. "It didn't keep us from getting along well, but we were being raised in very different homes. I felt terrible about herdeath, but I wasn't all that much surprised." Perhaps your sisters have confused zany Howie Mandel of "St. Elsewhere" for Whitaker. But about the only thing these two men have in common is their curly hair.

Dear Michele: I enjoyed "North and South" so much! And I especially liked Patrick Swayze. Has he appeared in any other films? — PAULA HAYES, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

Thirty-three-year-old Swayze has appeared in the films "The Outsiders" (1983), "Grandview U.S.A." (1984) and "Red Dawn" (1984). His most recent feature is the soon-to-be released "Youngblood," co-starring Rob Lowe and Cindy Gibb. The film's three stars have been frantically working on a video of "Stand in the Fire," a tune performed by Mickey Thomas. Swayze's talents encompass many forms of art; he is an actor, a composer and a dancer. He has written the tune "She's Like the Wind," a country-rock song, and he was a principal dancer with the Eliot Field Dance Company in New York in the '70s. His mother Patsy is a choreographer andlists "Urban Cowboy" among her credits.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I wouldn't want this generation to think that equal opportunity for child-raising and domesticity started with them.

There's always been a group of men who shared responsibilites for kids and chores long before Phil Donahue and Alan Alda came along. But it always had a few bugs to be worked out.

For example, when our first child was born my husband wanted to be a part of it, so he said, "We'll divide the child-raising. I'll take care of the top of her and you take charge of the bottom. I'll stick in the bottle and tickle her chin, and you do whatever you have to do at the other end."

This went on until the child began to cry in the middle of the night, throw up, spit and throw temper tantrums. "I hate to bring this up," he said, "but my end is getting out of control and will take more time than I can give it. Since your end is on automatic and requires very little time now, why don't we just change sides for a while to break the monotony. You take the top and I'll take the bottom."

A couple of months later when his end was running through the neighborhood naked and playing in water and kicking holes in bags of sugar at the supermarket, he said, "You do such a great job at the top, I've decided to give you the bottom and I'll be in charge of maintenance."

"What does that mean?" I asked.

"It means when something breaks down I'll have it fixed. I'll bring in food and drink for fuel and in general keep her in running order."

"That sounds fair," I said. "For starters, you can look into glasses, braces, booster shots and regular visits for her allergies. Oh, and she's beginning to toe in, so check out orthopedic shoes."

"I don't suppose there are any warranties."

"Not a one," I said.

"One second thought," he said, "maybe I should serve as a social director and be in charge of her social activities. I could read her stories and plan birthday parties, take pictures of her eating ice cream and things like that."

"Great!" You can start by teaching her how to ride a two-wheeled bicycle. And there's a Scout cookout this weekend, baton twirling classes and..."

"I'm trying to make this easy for you," he interrupted. "And it's obvious I could best lighten your load by serving as a consultant."

"That sounds O.K.," I said. "Then I won't have to make all those decisions about driving a car, staying out until 2, or whether or not she pierces her ears."

When the second baby arrived I said to my husband, "Here comes another equal opportunity. What role do you want with this one?"

He never hesitated. "Executive producer."

'Pitch A Boogie Makes 2nd Debut

By JIM HOLTE

Saturday night another movie was shown at Hendrix Theater on the East Carolina University campus. It turned out to be quite an affair, especially for a 26-minute, 39-year-old, black-and-white musical comedy.

The showing turned into a celebration, because not every Saturday night can a community watch itself on film, and that's what happened when "Pitch a Boogie Woogie," filmed in Greenville in 1947, had its "re-premier."

As part of its recognition of Black History Month, the university hosted the showing of the only film made in North Carolina with an all-black cast. And to make the first public exhibition of the movie in 38 years even more special, many of the original cast members and musicians gathered in Hendrix to watch and remember their work.

"Pitch a Boogie Woogie" was shot in Greenville in the summer of 1947. Produced by John Warner and directed by his brother William Lord, the film was intended for distribution to black audiences throughout the nation, but a disagreement between the producer and the distributor resulted in the film's commercial withdrawal after playing in only six theaters in the Carolinas.

Four copies remained moldering in Greenville's Roxy Theater until Bill Shepherd found the reels in 1975. Shepherd convinced ECU Professor Alex Albright of the film's potential, and with the help of the American Film Institute, Albright had the film restored.

The movie tells a simple story. Two men, Herman Forbes and Tom Foreman, meet outside a movie theater and dream about owning a nightclub, a "hot spot for big shots."

The main part of the film documents an evening's entertainment in their dream club. Their dream, like most others, comes to an end, and reality is reintroduced by Beatrice Atkinson, who takes a rolling pin to the heads of the two dreamers.

The structure of "Pitch a Boogie Woogie" is similar to that of countless other films of the '20s and '30s. Hollywood directors turned the story into a formula, with Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland singing and dancing their hearts out while putting on a show.

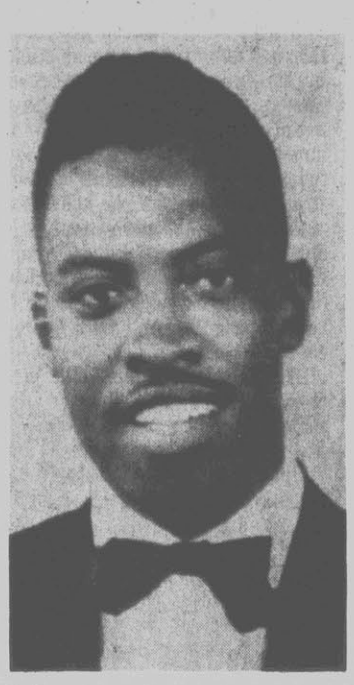

While not as slick as the Hollywood versions, "Pitch a Boogie Woogie" provides the same kind of entertainment, an energetic musical review framed by a simple story. In this movie viewers get a chance to see the kind of entertainment provided by all-black traveling shows in Southern towns shortly after World War II.

Saturday's showing celebrated the discovery and restoration of the film, a significant part of local history. As Ms. Albright says, "The movie is a valuable part of black heritage. It was done for their community. According to black film scholars, they have never heard of any movie being made with stars from the local community. It's a real piece of history."

"Pitch a Boogie Woogie" is also important for film historians. Prior to the 1940s and the consolidation of the film industry in California, independent producers and directors created and distributed small films throughout the United States. But most have been lost, having been recorded like "Pitch a Boogie Woogie" on silver nitrate film. The rediscovery of one of these films is an important contribution to film history.

Saturday's showing may have been most important, however, as a film-family reunion. Herman Forbes, Beatrice Atkinson and Tom Foreman's widow and son were there. Jazz musician Lou Donaldson and the rest of the original Rythm Vets, who provided the music for the film, were there. Bill Shepherd, Alex Albright and friends and supporters were there.

The brothers Warner and Lord would have approved. It was quite a boogie woogie.

Tenor

Joe Little is shown here as a a young tenor in the film, "Pitch A Boogie Woogie." He is now pastor of Cherry Noah's Ark Holiness Church, Newark, N.J.

Helms 'Confident' Over Leaf Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — An aide to U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms says Helms is confident a bill containing legislation to revamp the tobacco program will be approved by Congress soon after it returns from a 10-day recess.

Murray Jones, who works with the Senate Agriculture Committee, which Helms chairs, spoke to about 300 farmers Friday at the annual meeting of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina in Raleigh.

"If we didn't think it would pass, we would tell you," Jones said. "We feel confident it will go through."

Jones came from Washington to speak to the group as a last-minute substitute for Helms, R-N.C., who played a major role in drafting the legislation. Helms could not attend because the Senate was still in session, Jones said.

Jones said work on the bill that included the tobacco legislation would resume in earnest when Congress reconvenes Feb. 18. He said the outlook for the bill was bright because lawmakers with interests in the non-tobacco sections of the bill were as eager to pass it as the tobacco-state legislators.

The tobacco provisions would roll back tobacco price supports and give cigarette manufacturers a say in setting quotas. They also would relieve farmers of the huge surplus they must finance, and tobacco buyers would share future costs of the program.

that's not on the tax books."

The maps will make the records more accurate, Hardee said. "When we get into it, we may find some tracts with more acres and some with less acres'" than is now on record. "It will enable us to do a better job in figuring how many acres are there. Many deeds read so many acres, 'more or less.'"

North Carolina, Hardee said, was the first state to begin such a mapping program and because of its interest in better mapping the state received federal grant funds to finance pilot projects in two counties.

Commissioners have already appropriated $190,000 toward the mapping project. The remainter of the funds will be appropriated over the next two fiscal years. In addition to the local money, the county has received $25,000 in grant funds from the state to aid the project and expects to receive more.

Don Holloway, manager of the state's Land Records Management Program, said since the state began to encourage counties to upgrade their land records systems, Landmark Engineering has won about 40 percent of the contracts. He said 65 counties have completed or are in the process of upgrading.

Orthophotos are the most accurate device for determining the lay of the land without going to it, Holloway said.

When proposed uses are not listed as permitted under the city's zoning ordiance, petitioners have two avenues through which they can secure the right to operate the kind of facility they propose. Petitioners may either bring a rezoning request before the city or go before the Board of Adjustment.

The Board of Adjustment is a fact-finding, quasi-judicial board that issues special use permits if requests meet a series of general restrictions. BOA members may also impose further restrictions on developments, but cannot pass moratoriums on issuance of special use permits.

Since December, the BOA has granted four special use permits for medical district land. Permits were issued for construction of the Ronald McDonald House, two business and professional office facilities on Statonsburg Road and a motel at the corner of Stantonsburg Road and the proposed extension of Moye Boulevard.

The board placed no additional restrictions other than those stated in the city's zoning ordinance on the Ronald McDonald House.

A condition that no more than 50 percent of offices could be devoted to business and professional uses was placed on the two office facilities on Statonsburg Road. The remainder of offices in those structures would have to be for uses permitted under medical arts zoning. Both complexes will have to meet vegetation and sign regulations outlined in the zoning ordinance.

An additional restriction was imposed on one of the office facilities — Executive Park West — that any portion of the multibuilding complex not constructed prior to acceptance of a medical district development plan would have to meet new standards.

Restrictions on the motel to be built by ABC Systems were stricter, city planners said, "because the motel is more of a commercial venture than the more service-oriented offices."

The majority of restrictions placed on the motel by the Board of Adjustment are based on the Medical District Study Committee report. Restrictions cover highway cuts (no more than two per highway), placement and size of signs (limited to one free-standing sign per road front, other signs must be adhered to building walls), landscaping (15 percent of total site must be landscaped), parking setbacks (15 feet from any street-right of way), height of building (no more than two stories), and number of rooms (180 maximum).

N.C. Activity Rises

The level of business activity in North Carolina rose 0.6 percent in December, according to the Wachovia Business Index. Increases in residential building permits and nonagricultural employment were cited for the improvement, according to Wachovia Bank & Trust Co.

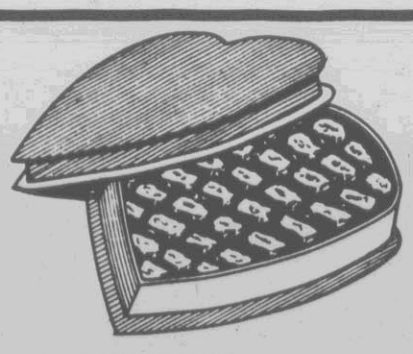

The Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter opened on July 1 and is located one mile south of Bells Fork of the County Home Road.

Spud Webb Wins Dunk Contest

DALLAS (AP) — Not 5-foot-7 Spud Webb, or anyone else present, could describe the perfect dunks he performend Saturday to unseat Atlanta Hawk teammate and defending champion Dominique Wilkins in the National Basketball Association's Slam-Dunk Championship.

Winning Style

Five-foot seven-inch Spud Webb, former N.C. State player, now with the Atlanta Hawks, stuffs the ball during the NBA Slam-Dunk Championship Saturday. Webb won the contest over last year's winner, teammate Dominique Wilkins, former Washington High School star. (AP Laserphoto)

"I can't describe them, it's just something I do," said Webb, who electrified a crowd of 16,500 in Reunion Arena with his acrobatics that included a dunk off a 360-degree spin.

Wilkins called Webb's dunks "unbelievable."

"I didn't think he could hang in the air long enough to do the 360," said Wilkins. "I'm proud to be his teammate. He's the best little guy I ever saw."

Webb, who is from suburban Wilmer-Hutchins, scored a perfect 100 points with two dunks in the finals. Wilkins had 98 points.

Webb's second dunk involved bouncing the ball off the floor and off the glass and catching it with one hand to slam the ball through.

"The crowd helped me get more power into my jumps," said Webb. "I really didn't have a plan. I didn't know what I was going to do until I got the ball."

Wilkins said "I scored over 45 on all my dunks but he got 50s so what are you going to do? Everybody likes to see a little guy do well. And he did a lot of dunks guys 6-7 and 6-8 can't do."

Webb's vertical leap was measured at 42 inches when he was a junior at North Carolina State.

The 6-foot-7 Wilkins, who has a vertical leap of 48 inches himself, said "Spud's leap was 50 inches today."

Webb won $12,000 and Wilkins took $7,500.

Terence Stansbury of the Indianapolis Pacers won $5,500 for finishing third and Gerald Wilkins of the New York Knicks, Dominique's younger brother, won $2,500 for fourth place.

Stansbury provided the most unique leap of the day. He jumped over a person seated in a chair and another man kneeling beside it and slammed down a dunk.

But it was clearly Webb's day.

Asked how he jumps so high, Webb answered "I haven't the slightest idea. When I find out I'm going to write a book about it. I guess it's just God given talent."

He said 5-9 Calvin Murphy, a former NBA player for the Houston Rockets, was his hero.

"I saw Calvin and he said he had his house bet on me," said Webb. "I hope he was just kidding but I was glad he got to see it."

Murphy said later "It was the most incredible thing I've ever seen. I never dunked a ball."

One More Year For Erving

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Julius Erving said Saturday that he has decided to play one more season with the Philadelphia 76ers of the National Basketball Association.

Erving, who is in Dallas for the NBA All-Star game, had been thinking about retiring.

"I haven't made an official announcement," Erving said Saturday in a telephone interview from his hotel room. "I'm going to do that this weekend in conjunction with the (All-Star) game.

"But I have decided to play again next year."

Erving said he would meet with 76ers owner Harold Katz next week to talk about a new contract.

He was on the brink of ending his career last season but decided to play this season and signed a one-year contract for $1,485,000.

Erving, who had promised to decide about next year by Christmas, then he postponed a decision to mid-January. At that time he said he still hadn't made up his mind.

"It's a relief to have made a decision," said Erving, who will be 36 on Feb. 22.

He said his mental, emotional and physical well-being were the key elements in his decision not to end a brilliant 15-year career.

Erving said he had to decide whether he wanted to endure the wearying NBA travel.

"I decided that I could meet the emotional highs and lows of the game and that I was physically able to perform at a level that will satisfy me."

Erving also said that he felt he could play at the level expected of him by Katz and the fans.

West Is Best Among Legends

DALLAS (AP) — Oscar Robertson and Calvin Murphy rallied the West All-Stars from an 11-point deficit to a 53-44 victory over the East All-Stars on Saturday in the National Basketball Association Legends Classic.

The East All-Stars went the last six minutes without scoring a point after "Pistol" Pete Maravich had made nine straight points to give Coach Bill Russell's crew a 44-40 lead.

The West, coached by John "Red" Kerr, scored the last 13 points of the game.

The 48-year-old Robertson, known as "The Big O" in his 14-year NBA career, hit a free throw to give the West the lead for good at 45-44 with 4:44 to play.

Robertson hit another free throw, Elvin Hayes made a pair, Zelmo Beaty tipped in a shot, and Murphy iced the game with a three-pointer.

Maravich had a game-high 15 points and Gail Goodrich added 10 points for the East, while the West scoring was more balanced. Beaty and Murphy each had nine points while Robertson scored eight points.

The oldtimers played 10-minute quarters with the clock running except for timeouts and the last minute of each period.

The oldest player was 60-year-old Slater Martin of thw West, who drew big applause with two rebounds. Martin played in only two minute segments.

Once Kerr told him "I'm sorry, I should have taken you out when you were on our end by the bench."

The East's Bob Cousy created a roar with one of his patented, no-look assists to John Havlicek.

The officials included Norm Drucker, a longtime NBA legend among the referees.

Kerr told him at one point: "Norm, they've been camping in the lane the entire game. Doesn't the breakfast I bought you this morning stand for something?'

Drucker laughed but never called three seconds in the lane the entire game.

Bird Captures Three-Pointer

DALLAS (AP) — Larry Bird confirmed Saturday what everyone has long suspected — that he is the best long-distance shooter in basketball.

Bird barely survived the first round of the NBA's first three-point shooting contest and then went on to win the competition easily with a display of pressure shooting in the finals.

"I'm the king of the three-point shooters," Bird said. "I always thought I was, and I proved it."

Bird won $10,000 for outshooting seven other NBA gunners.

"I was real excited by the crowd and the competition," said the Boston Celtics' star, who will start in the NBA All-Star game Sunday. "I'll probably shoot three-pointers all day tomorrow."

Bird said he had been practicing for two weeks after "my teammates got me fired up by saying I didn't have a chance."

Bird missed the first of his 25 shots in the finals against Milwaukee's Craig Hodges, then made 10 straight, and finished with 22 points out of a possible 30. He made 18 of 25 shots in the final round.

Hodges, who had 25 points in the first one-minute round to only 16 for Bird, had 12 points in the finals.

Trent Tucker of the New York Knicks had 19 points and Dale Ellis of Dallas had 17 in the first round to advance to the semifinals along with Bird and Hodges.

Bird had 18 points, Hodges and Ellis 14 and Tucker 13 in the semifinals. It then took Hodges two 24-second shootouts to eliminate Ellis.

Bird said the extra shots Hodges had to take in the shootout with Ellis helped the Boston forward in the finals.

"He was tired and I knew he couldn't do what he did in the first round," Bird said. "I knew if I got past the first round, I could get into a rhythm. It also helped that I was shooting set shots and he was shooting jumpers."

Hodges acknowledged that his legs were tired from shooting all jump shots.

Q Alistair Cooke, who introduces Masterpiece Theatre on television—is he a British or U.S. citizen? Age? Married? Any children? I would appreciate any information on him.—Sean Allen, Norfolk, Va.

A Alfred Alistair Cooke, born in 1908 in Manchester, England, is the son of an Irish mother and a Methodist lay preacher. He was educated at Jesus College, Cambridge—also at Yale and Harvard—and became a U.S. citizen in 1941. He began broadcasting his radio commentary, "Letter From America," over the BBC in 1946. Cooke says he derives more satisfaction from that weekly commentary, currently heard in 52 countries, than anything else he does, including Masterpiece Theatre. Connie Chung: To CBS?

A Chances are good that, so long as Van Gordon Sauter is back running the CBS news division, Connie Chung—who worked for him in Los Angeles at KNXT-TV—may again find herself working for CBS in New York, Washington, D.C., or elsewhere.

Q Why is Geraldine Ferraro, who was Walter Mondale's Vice Presidential nominee, afraid to take on Alfonse D'Amato of New York in the upcoming race for U.S. Senator? Isn't she afraid of a gigantic smear that will tarnish her family's reputation?—Sal P., Binghamton, N.Y.

A Geraldine Ferraro attributes her refusal to run against Senator D'Amato to the Justice Department's lengthy investigation of her finances. Others suggest that she will no longer run for elective office because she fears further journalistic exposure of family skeletons. Campaigning for high federal office is a rigorous, expensive and often soul-searing proposition. Having endured one such strenuous experience in 1984, Ferraro undoubtedly has considered the grueling effect another campaign would have on her husband, John Zaccaro, and their three children.

Wasserman: Wrong party

A Princess Anne believes in speaking her mind, but she is no hater of mankind, which is what misanthrope means. What she told reporters some time ago was, "I don't actually like children." But she added, "Children ought to have as good a start as possible from the health and education point of view." Once judged the haughtiest and least-liked member of the royal family, Anne has earned public plaudits for her many trips to Africa and diligent work as president of the Save the Children Fund.

Q Is it a fact that the second most powerful person in the White House is Don Regan, the chief of staff, and that, since he is the most ambitious, he is also the most dangerous?—C.S., Washington, D.C.

A The second most powerful person in the White House is easily Nancy Reagan, the President's wife. Don Regan, the controversial former Wall Street broker and Marine lieutenant colonel, is a good choice for No. 3. Regan reportedly is aggressive, confrontational, competitive and compensatory in his behavior pattern (his father was a railway guard in Boston), and there is no doubt about his being ambitious. But ambition should not necessarily be equated with danger. Regan is probably wise enough to know, in the words of the British clergyman Dean William Inge, "A man may build himself a throne of bayonets, but he cannot sit on it." Not for long anyway.

Keith Sledge (24) takes the ball to the basket.

Spiders Run Past Pirates

BY DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Richmond University's John Newman scorched the nets with 26 points as the Spiders used a variety of full-court presses to crawl over a weary East Carolina team 71-52 in a Colonial Athletic Conference game at Minges Coliseum last night.

The conference-leading Spiders, who never trailed in the contest, improved to 9-0 in the CAA and 18-3 overall, while the Pirates fell to 5-5 in the CAA and 10-12 overall.

"They are an awfully, awfuliy good basketball team," said ECU Coach Charlie Harrison. "Richmond was fresh, and while that was not the reason for the total outcome, we were a tired team."

The Pirates just returned home after playing three games in five days on the road. ECU defeated American 65-63 last Saturday in Washington; lost at Navy 71-56 Monday and fell to Wake Forest 65-60 Wednesday night in Winston-Salem.

Meanwhile, the Spiders had a week off after downing William & Mary 67-47 last Saturday.

"The guys have been playing so well and so hard recently, and they are all a little bit tired," Harrison said.

Richmond scored early and often in the first half, and the Pirates spent the rest of the half trying to cut the lead.

"They hit jumpers early," Harrison said. "They shot the ball extremely well early."

Harrison said the Pirate's comeback in the first half, which cut a 14-point deficit to four at halftime, took its toll on his players.

"We expended a lot of energy early to get back in the game and just had nothing left in the second half," he said.

But Harrison said the story of the game was rebounding.

"They beat us on the backboard," Harrison said. "They went up and over us. You can't give good teams like Richmond extra opportunities on offense."

Meanwhile, the Pirates weren't able to generate anything underneath at the other end of the court.

"We were only getting one crack at the basket," he said. "We didn't play well, and they played very well."

From the outset, it looked like it was going to be a tough night for the Pirates.

Richmond jumped out to a 6-0 lead on jumpers by Newman and Greg Beckwith and a layup by Steve Kratzer.

The Pirates got on the board with 17:48 left in the half thanks to two free throws by Leon Bass to cut Richmond's lead to 6-2.

Newman sank a 14-foot jumper, while Keith Sledge rattled home two more free throws for the Pirates to make it 8-4 with 16:32 remaining in the first half.

The Spiders then ran off 10 consecutive points to make it 18-4, while the Pirates were held scoreless for over five minutes.

Marchell Henry ended the dry spell and sank ECU's first field goal of the game to make it 18-6 with 11:24 remaining in the half.

The Pirates began to cut into the Spiders' lead behind the outside shooting of Curt Vanderhorst and the inside play of reserve center Jack Turnbull and Henry.

The Spider lead dwindled to four points as Scott Hardy sank a 15-foot jumper to make it 26-22 with 5:12 left in the half.

Both teams traded baskets with the Pirates unable to get any closer than four, and the buzzer sounded with the Pirates trailing 32-28.

The Spiders came out of the locker room and quickly showed why they are leading the CAA.

Rodney Rice, who had been held to two points in the first half, keyed a second half rally in which the Spiders outscored the Pirates 19-4 to take a 51-32 lead with 10:39 left in the game.

In the stretch, Rice scored seven points and Newman added six.

The Pirates trimmed the lead to 57-42 on a 16-foot jumpshot by Vanderhorst with 6:21 left.

But Newman sank a 15-footer, and Rice and Beckwith each sank two free throws to make it 63-42 with 4:56 remaining.

With the game out of reach, both coaches emptied their benches, and the game ended at 71-52.

Henry led ECU with 12 points, while Vanderhorst added 10.

John Davis, of Chapel Hill, added 12 points for the Spiders, and Rice finished the game with 11.

Harrison refused to dwell on the loss and pointed his attentions to ECU's next game against CAA rival William & Mary Monday night.

"You can't sit on this game," he said. "We've just got to do better things against William & Mary."

"We need to be fresher mentally and physically by then," Harrison said. "We're shooting for a homecourt advantage in the CAA tournament."

Two Pass 1,000 In ECU Victory

RICHMOND, Va. — Both Loraine Foster and Lisa Squirewell passed the 1,000 point mark for their careers as East Carolina's Lady Pirates claimed a 67-59 basketball victory over the University of Richmond last night.

The win kept the Lady Pirates hot on the heels of James Madison University, which is unbeaten in Colonial Athletic Association competition.

Foster, who went into the game with 999 points, surpassed the 1,000 mark with 1:20 left in the first half. Squirewell, who opened the night with 994, got her 1,000th with 9:30 left in the contest.

It marked the third Lady Pirate to surpass the 1,000 point mark this year. Sylvia Bragg scored her 1,000th in the opening game of the season.

Foster finished the game with six points while Squirewell had 13.

The game was one of quarters. East Carolina came out with the press at the start of the first half and quickly dominated things. But after establishing a lead, the Lady Pirates dropped back into a zone midway through the half, and Richmond was able to rally to within 33-29 at the half.

"We got into foul trouble very early," Coach Emily Manwaring said. "Bragg and Foster both got three early and had to go to the bench and that handicapped up. Bragg then got her fourth with 19 minutes left in the game and sat out must of the second half."

In the second half, the Lady Pirates again went to the press and pulled away again. Midway the period, however, they again dropped back into a zone, and Richmond's Peggy Fitzsimmons got hot from the outside, pulling the Lady Spiders back into contention again.

"Our free throw shooting hurt us throughout the game," Manwaring said as the Lady Pirates hit but 15 of 30 tries. "That helped them get back, too.

"Our strategy was to get the ball inside as much as we could. With five minutes left, Richmond switched to a box and one on Lisa, but she hit a couple of key shots from the outside to break that up."

The Pirates then pulled away to take the final eight point margin.

Alma Bethea led East Carolina's scoring with 15 while Bragg had 14, Squirewell had 13 and Delphine Mabry had 11.

Richmond was led by Fitzsimmons with 18 while Laurie Governor had 15 and Beth Babbitt had 12.

East Carolina improved its CAA record to 6-1. The Lady Pirates are 16-6 overall. Richmond drops to 2-7, 6-16.

East Carolina travels on to Williamsburg, Va., to face William & Mary on Monday.

Tar Heels Overpower Wake Forest By 91-62

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina junior forward Joe Wolf said it was just a matter of the numbers not adding up for outmanned Wake Forest Saturday.

"It's hard for a 6-foot-7 guy to try and guard 7-footers for 40 minutes. I think we just wore them down," Wolf said after the top-ranked Tar Heels overpowered Wake Forest 91-62 in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

Center Brad Daugherty had 20 points, Warren Martin added 17 and Wolf scored 16 and hauled down a game-high seven rebounds as the Tar Heels outrebounded Wake Forest 34-21.

"I thought our team did a very good job of using its height," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "We decided before the game we were going to use it against Wake Forest. We have plays to use it. Our guards got them the ball."

The inside prowess of the Tar Heels showed up vividly in their shooting percentage as they hit 73.6 percent from the floor, while Wake Forest hit 44 percent.

"Obviously, we played a great team today," Wake Forest coach Bob Staak said. "They are No. 1 in the nation and if they play the way they did today, they will be very difficult for anyone to beat.

"They have a number of talented players, but it's not like Dean just rolls the ball out there and tells them to play," Staak said. "They throw so much at you at both ends of the floor that it is very hard to maintain your composure for 40 minutes, and that's what we needed to do."

North Carolina opened the game with its small lineup of three guards, but it was the three big men — 6-foot-11¾ Daugherty, 6-11½ Martin and 6-10 Wolf who swept them past the Demon Deacons for a 24-1 record.

The Tar Heels extended a 40-29 halftime lead to as many as 33 points in the second half as they ran their Atlantic Coast Conference-leading record to 8-1.

The Demon Deacons, now 7-16, 0-11 in the ACC, stayed close in the first nine minutes thanks to Mark Cline's outside shooting and the playmaking of 5-3 Tyrone Bogues, who finished with a school-record 17 assists.

Bogues had 11 first-half assists, while Cline, who finished with a career-high 26 points, scored 13 of Wake Forest's first 23 points, including a jumper from the top of the key with nine minutes left to tie the score at 23-23.

Wolfpack Upsets Cardinals, 76-64

RALEIGH (AP) — It has taken some time but North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano says his Wolfpack is becoming a force to be reckoned with.

"I told them (the team) it took us six games to become a mediocre team, and it could take us the rest of the season to become a good team," Valvano said, after the unranked Wolfpack upset 16th-ranked Louisville 76-64 Saturday.

"The way things went ... we are going to be tough to beat," Valvano said. "A lot of things went our way."

The force behind the victory was sophomore center Chris Washburn, who scored a career-high 27 points. But the defense, led by Nate McMillan, also played the part, helping to force 19 Cardinal turnovers.

"We had a real tough time on Washburn," said Louisville coach Denny Crum. "We did a decent job on the rest of them, but we didn't handle him very well."

The Wolfpack led by as many as 11 points, but Louisville kept chipping away, pulling back to within striking distance. However, N.C. State's defense always stiffened.

"Whenever they needed something, they seemed to get it," Crum said. "We got pretty good shots .... Our biggest problem was that we couldn't stop them from scoring."

N.C. State, 16-6, trailed only once at 2-0 and built the lead to as much as nine points in the first half with the help of 11 Louisville turnovers. Washburn and forward Charles Shackleford combined for 17 of the Wolfpack's 36 first-half points as they took a 36-29 lead.

The Wolfpack then grabbed a 61-50 lead with 7:55 left on a three-point play by Ernie Myers. However, the Cardinals cut that lead to 65-60 with 2:49, outscoring the Wolfpack 10-4.

But N.C. State ended the threat with six straight points, including a Washburn dunk after a steal. The Wolfpack then spread its offense, forcing Louisville to foul in the final two minutes, when N.C. State hit five of six from the line.

Shackleford and Nate McMillan each added 12 for the Wolfpack, winners in seven of its last eight games, including a victory over Kentucky last weekend.

Forward Billy Thompson led the Cardinals, 15-7, with 21 points, while Jeff Hall added 12 in a six for seven shooting performance.

Valvano Named New State Athletics Chief

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano, named Wolfpack athletic director on Saturday, said he would do both jobs as long as he could do justice to the dual role.

"My goal has always been from day one to do what's best for the university, the athletic department and the basketball program," Valvano said after the North Carolina State University Board of Trustees unanimously elected him to replace the retiring Willis Casey, effective in July.

Valvano will continue as the Wolfpack basketball coach "for an indefinite period, at least through next season and until he hires a new head basketball coach," NCSU Chancellor Bruce Poulton said in a prepared statement.

But Valvano declined to say how long he might continue coaching basketball.

"To give a definitive statement right now (on how long to coach) would be impossible, but I think I can do both jobs, " he said. "I wouldn't have taken it if I didn't think I could.

"If it ever got to the point where I felt like I was not competent in both jobs, I would think about not coaching basketball any more."

Valvano, who came to N.C. State in 1980, will take over as athletic director July 1, becoming the only Atlantic Coast Conference coach to hold both jobs. He was was awarded a 10-year contract during the 1982-83 season, the year he led the underdog Wolfpack to the NCAA national championship with a 54-52 victory over Houston.

Alabama-Birmingham basketball coach Gene Bartow and North Carolina-Charlotte basketball coach Jeff Mullins also serve as athletic directors, but neither school has a football team.

"Jim Valvano's popularity, energy and vision represent the qualities that make good leaders," Poulton said. "His ability to communicate with all segments of our society promises great things for our entire athletic program and the university in general."

Valvano became the front-runner for the job after Dick Sheridan, who was named to replace Tom Reed as N.C. State's football coach in December, said he was not interested in the job. Sheridan was both football coach and athletic director at Furman before coming to N.C. State.

Poulton said the search committee selected Valvano from more than 60 applicants.

Valvano, 39, was head basketball coach for five years at Iona, where he also served as athletic director. During his final two seasons, he led the Gaels to two NCAA tournament bids.

Valvano also coached at Johns Hopkins in 1969-70 before moving on to coach three seasons at Bucknell.

Valvano led the Wolfpack to a 14-13 record in his first year and improved his record 104-57 at N.C. State at the beginning of this season. The Wolfpack was 23-10 last season and made it to the final eight in the NCAA tournament.

Before starting his 17-year stint as athletic director, Casey coached the Wolfpack swimming team from 1946 to 1969, compiling a 188-29 record and 11 conference championships.

This past November, Casey was elected to the North Carolina Sports Hall of Fame.

New State AD Jim Valvano.

Boy George, Mr. T Star In Lovefest

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Boy George and Mr. T. What a pair! What a tableaux they make together! Just a coupla former People magazine cover boys — class of '83 — sitting around at a Los Angeles press conference shilling for the Boy's upcoming appearance on "The A-Team."

But seriously folks, we're talking a couple of degrees short of desperation here. "The A-Team" has been hurting in the ratings since its meteoric rise in 1983, and George and Culture Club have seen their star eclipsed by the likes of new teen-pop singing idols like Madonna and Wham!. Well, why not bring these two fading phenomena together?

In the episode airing Feb. 11, George plays a singer who is mistakenly booked into a rough-and-tumble country-and-western nightclub. The crowd was expecting someone called Cowboy George and got our lovable gender-bender instead. But they end up loving him anyway.

Boy, who says his favorite shows are "I Love Lucy" and "The Munsters," told reporters recently at a press conference that he sees nothing wrong with "The A-Team," which has been cited by numerous watchdog groups as the most violent program on television.

"I don't think it's that violent, really," says the Boy. "I think something like 'Gremlins' is incredibly sadistic and kids love it. No parent can really stop their kids from enjoying things like that because kids are sadistic. If you're the overweight kid at school, you know what it's like. Kids are very spiteful and get off on things like that. Kids love watching Mr. T beating people up."

Home Again

al program endorsed and co-sponsored by the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP), which subsequently named Captain Voorhees its Police Officer of the Year.

Meanwhile, in less than two years, Operation: Home Free has reunited more than 7000 children with their families in every part of the country. Here is how the program works:

A runaway child needs only to approach a police officer, who then checks to verify his or her status. The officer then goes to the Trailways terminal, arranges for a free ticket home and sees the child onto the bus. Parents and hometown police are notified of the arrival time. There is no arrest or fine, and the child is treated as a full-fare paying passenger.

Captain Voorhees, who has worked with troubled children for 25 years, says: "A child with no way to get back home is more likely to commit crimes or be exploited. In many cases, they get involved with drugs and prostitution. Even if kids try to act big and tough, they are really naive, impressionable and easily taken advantage of. As responsible adults, we have to let the kids know that there is a way back—you don't have to sell your body to get home."

Nicole Nordhorn, a 17-year-old from the Seattle area, had spent nearly two years on the streets of West Coast cities before she was told about Operation: Home Free by a police officer in Oregon. Now finishing high school with ambitions of becoming a fashion designer, she reflects: "The Trailways program is a good thing, because I met many kids who wanted to go home but couldn't afford it. I was one of the lucky ones. I saw a lot of kids on the street just destroyed by the experience."

Nannette Krupa, 15, of Staten Island, N.Y., is an honor student and athlete who last May made a spur-of-the-moment decision to run away with a girlfriend following a family misunderstanding. She got on a bus for Richmond, Va., with less than $100 in her pocket and soon realized she had made a mistake.

"As soon as I got off the bus in Richmond, I saw a huge poster—'Trailways: Home Free,'" she says. "That day we walked around the streets not knowing anybody. I realized that running away wasn't what I thought it would be. Still, I didn't want to ask my parents for money to come home because I had brought this problem on myself. If it wasn't for the Home Free program, I might not have come home. Seeing that poster and knowing somebody out there cares and wants to give you a second chance means an awful lot."

Kenneth Hill, 16, of Louisville, Ky., had hitchhiked to Jacksonville, Fla., and slept on the beach for a week. "An officer started talking with me, I guess because I looked young," Hill recalls. "He said, 'You really don't want to go to the place where juveniles are held.' I said, 'No, I want to go home.' But I didn't have enough money to pay my own way. He said, 'OK, we'll get you home.' I'm glad that Trailways helped me out."

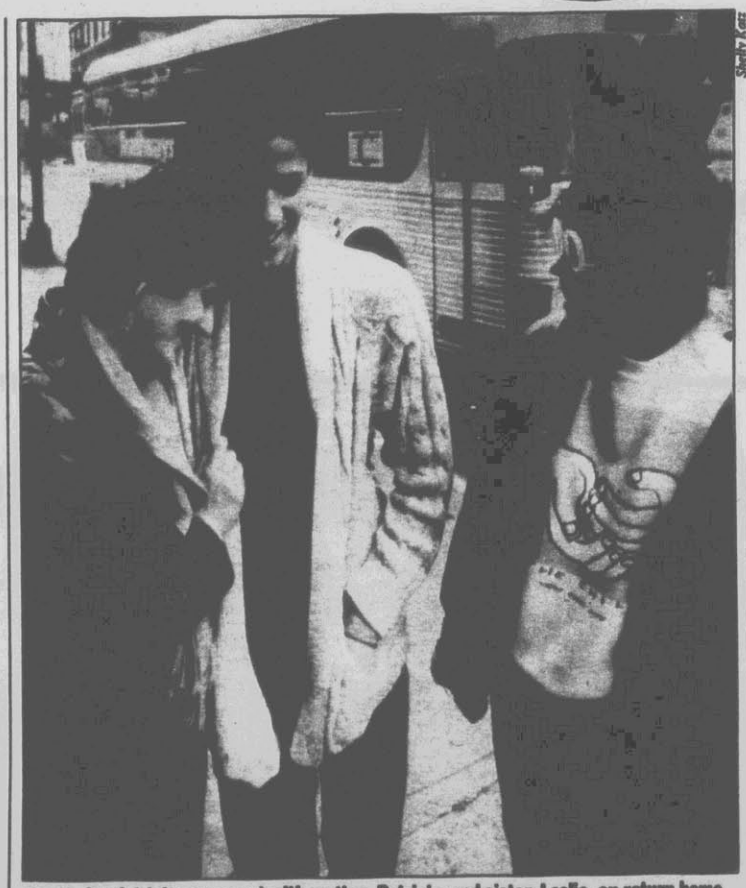

Children run away from home for a variety of reasons, Captain Voorhees says. In some cases, a child may be attempting to exert his or her sense of independence or adventure. But most cases are due to underlying problems at home. Whether it is because of parental marriage problems, child abuse or just basic communications problems, the child feels the situation is out of control.

"At some point," Voorhees observes, "kids get so uptight, with nowhere else to turn. They think life might be better someplace else. There are some kids who just don't want to go home. There also are fathers who say, 'We don't want them either.' So what can you do? In one case, we had to put a 15-year-old girl in a shelter because her father refused to be responsible. She had been on the road for almost a year, hitchhiking around the country, doing anything she could to get by. You could see this child had been through so much already.

"The successful thing about the Trailways program is that it has at least given any kid who wants to return home an avenue or way to do it. Some of the kids that take advantage of the program go back to pretty bad environments. But at least there's some love or something there that makes them want to go back."

Trailways—whose fleet of 1500 buses serves more than 12,000 cities, towns and communities—has undertaken its own campaign to advertise the Home Free program. At company headquarters in Dallas, spokesman Roger Rydell says: "The program is only good if kids know about its availability once they're for the last time. I would hardly have known him. The cerebral hemorrhage that had caused his death also had caused extensive discoloration and distortion of his face. Besides, it had been more than nine hours after his death before the embalmers, tardily summoned, had reached the little house in Warm Springs and performed their labors. I was relieved when Anna closed the casket. Mother's judgment to allow no viewing was entirely correct.

The Soviet ambassador, however, phoned again, insisting that he be allowed to view the body and that a member of his staff—an agent of the NKVD, the Soviet secret police, I have always supposed—must be allowed to see it too. The ambassador was none other than Andrei Gromyko. He had, he said, specific orders from Generalissimo Stalin to view the body.

I was present when Mother spoke to him this second time. She remained courteous but firm. Then, Gromyko said, he must speak with her personally. He soon arrived at the White House with a man who was obviously a secret police agent. My sister and I were present during this meeting. Mother did not budge from her decision not to allow the viewing of Father's body. Gromyko was visibly disturbed.

Eighteen months later, I was to learn why.

I had met Stalin before. I had accompanied Father to the conference at Tehran, where I had had the opportunity to become personally acquainted with the Soviet dictator. Also, I had been one of the officers sent to negotiate with Stalin about the establishment of a U.S. air base at Poltava, in the Crimea, from which we could mount shuttle bombing and reconnaissance missions. In short, I knew Stalin, and he knew me. That is why Gardner Cowles, publisher of Look magazine, decided I was the right man to go to Moscow late in 1946 for an exclusive interview.

Some six weeks were required to make the arrangements, but ultimately I was advised that Generalissimo Stalin would receive me in the Kremlin in November. I should come to Moscow. The appointment would be set up after I arrived.

I spoke no Russian. Indeed, as my father often had done, I had relied exclusively on Soviet interpreters during my past conversations with Stalin. It seemed this would put me at a serious disadvantage during my visit to the Soviet Union, so I enrolled in a crash course at Columbia University and in a few weeks was given a grounding in the elements of conversational Russian. The course proved invaluable.

My then wife, Faye Emerson, the actress, accompanied me on this journey. We arrived in Moscow aboard Aeroflot, were taken to as good a hotel as Moscow offered, were assigned a guide—and advised to take a few days to see something of the Soviet Union, since the Generalissimo could not receive me for another week or so.

Although I began to suspect that the interview had been postponed indefinitely and that we might have to return to the U.S. without actually interviewing Stalin, he was in fact as good as his word on this occasion. After the few days' wait, I was ushered into the presence of the powerful Soviet dictator, a man in the fullness of triumph who held the lives of millions in his hands.

UPI/Bettmann

Mrs. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill lay wreath on FDR's grave in Hyde Park, N.Y.

After FDR's death, his son learned that Stalin had kept a secret from the President and Churchill. Did Churchill also have a secret?

He was a rough, pockmarked man, with the body we consider characteristic of the East European peasant: short, broad-shouldered, heavy, with powerful hands, short fingers, short fingernails. There was a certain vague grossness of appearance. He was neatly dressed in the quasi-military uniform he favored—gray tunic, black trousers.

Stalin spoke in a rumbling, throaty voice. I suppose his most memorable characteristic was his evident self-confidence. He had, after all, murdered everyone who ever had opposed him, and he had the power to murder anyone else who ever would. He was secure in his power and feared very little in this world, if anything. He could afford to be pleasant when he wanted, rude when he wanted, or viciously cruel if it suited him. Everyone who entered his presence—not excluding the son of the former President of the United States—was at his mercy. What, after all, could President Truman have done had Stalin ordered my execution and sent me home in a box?

The conversation was frank. He addressed the questions Gardner Cowles had given me to ask him. He seemed in no hurry. In spite of my very mixed personal feelings about the man, I was gratified by the amount of time he gave me and by the relaxed, forthcoming tenor of the conversation.

As usual, there was only one interpreter—his. Very quickly, it became apparent that Stalin was reacting to my questions and comments substantially before the interpreter had translated them. If I said something faintly humorous, he would smile before the translation even began. I essayed a joke. He laughed before the interpreter had said a word.

"Generalissimo Stalin," I said, "I have begun to believe you understand English."

"Ha!" he laughed. "Caught me out, have you?" He spoke English. It was heavily accented, but it was English. "Yes," he went on to say. "I speak a little English. Understand more."

"It wasn't quite fair, was it," I asked, "for you to pretend to my father that you did not understand a word of English when in fact you did? During all your discussions with him and with Mr. Churchill, you had the advantage of being able to organize your thoughts while you were ostensibly listening to the interpreter."

He nodded. "Yes. And I fully intended to have that advantage and make the best use of it."

The conversation remained cordial. Mother had sent with me a request to say something in her behalf. So I did...

"Generalissimo, my mother has asked me to intervene for her in a small matter. As you may know, she has repeatedly applied for a visa to visit the Soviet Union, and it has been repeatedly denied. She would like to see your country. Couldn't you arrange a visa for her?"

Abruptly his face darkened. "No," he said gruffly. "It is a concession to receive you. I have good reason to be most angry with your mother and also with you."

"But why?" I asked. I honestly had no idea why he was angry with my mother.

"When your father died," said Stalin, "I sent my ambassador with a request that he be allowed to view the remains and report to me of what he saw. Your mother refused. I have never forgiven her."

"But why?" I asked, astounded.

"They poisoned your father, of course," he growled angrily. "Just as they have tried repeatedly to poison me. Your mother would not allow my representative to see evidence of that. But I know. They poisoned him!"

"'They'? Who are 'they'?" I asked.

"The Churchill gang!" he roared. "They poisoned your father, and they continue to try to poison me. The Churchill gang!"

WHEN SENILITY IS THE WRONG DIAGNOSIS

MENTAL confusion in the elderly can be frightening—for them and for their families. Does it mark the start of a long, sad, expensive decline into chronic senility? Will it lead inevitably to a nursing home? Sometimes the answer is given as "yes" when it should be "no."

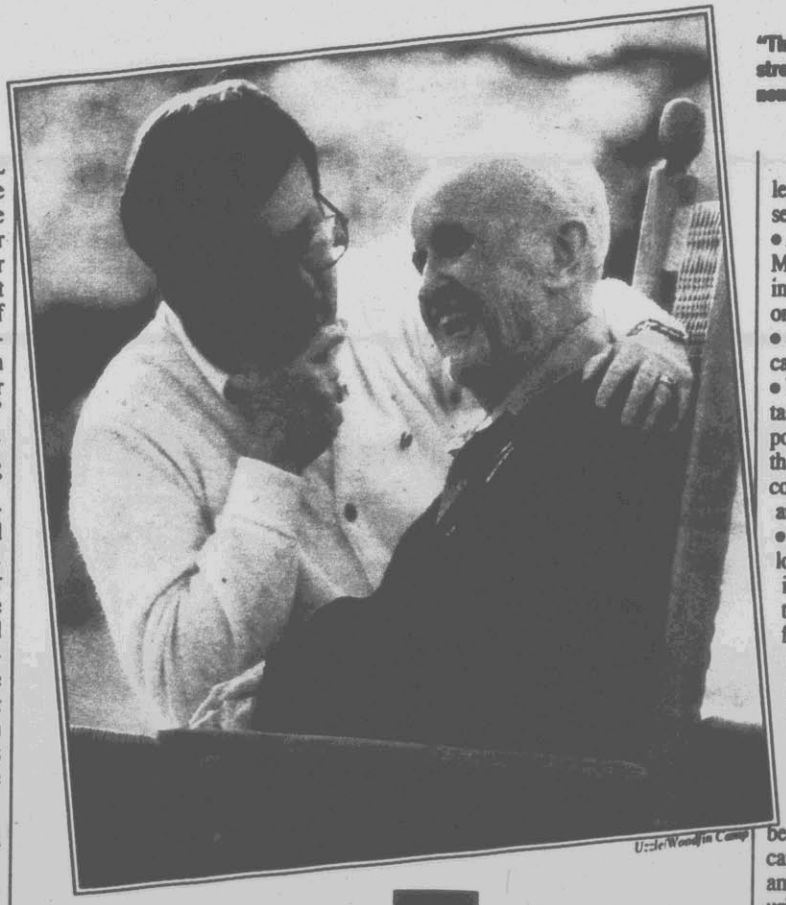

Aging doesn't inevitably mean senility. "The older brain is usually a strong, intelligent and well-nourished organ," says Dr. Leslie S. Libow, chief of medical services of the Jewish Home and Hospital for the Aged in New York City. Only about 5 percent of Americans over 65 and 10 percent of those over 75 have chronic senility such as stroke-induced dementia or Alzheimer's disease. Doctors identify 10 major areas of treatable brain failure, any one of which can look like senility. Studies indicate that such conditions are overlooked as much as 30 percent of the time. That's where family knowledge can help.

To diagnose brain failure, doctors expect to see difficulty in at least three of these five areas: memory, language, personality, visual and spatial skills, and reasoning ability. Forgetfulness alone usually is not a determining factor.

The elderly don't always respond to illness as younger people do, notes Dr. Richardson K. Noback, professor at the University of Missouri-Kansas City School of Medicine. He recommends that family members watch for changes in behavior. "We look for change in the elderly person's usual routine, usual performance, usual appearance, usual emotional balance," he says. Such changes might herald chronic decline. But they also might result from any of the following treatable causes:

• Drugs. Misuse of medicines and alcohol are probably the commonest causes of treatable dementia. Dr. Noback recalls the case of a 71-year-old woman whose family believed she had suffered a stroke. "The woman was pretty much out of contact," Noback says. "I asked if the change had come suddenly, because that's the typical presentation of a stroke. No. We went through the usual tests and all her medications and came up with not very much. We said, 'Something odd is going on' and kept quizzing the family. Well, finally, a daughter remembered seeing her mother substituting some other medicine for her arthritis aspirin."

"Valium," Noback resolves the mystery. "She had it from a legitimate source, another physician. Valium has a very long half-life and, because she's elderly, it took her longer to get over the effect. In the course of about a week, this lady became an alert, strong-willed but delightful person again."

Ursler Woodfin Camp

"The older brain is usually a strong, intelligent and well-nourished organ," says one expert.

Ten causes of brain failure in the aged can be treated or cured—yet doctors frequently overlook them

Alcohol, in particular, can be a problem, sometimes leading to withdrawal seizures that mimic the effects of strokes.

• Accidents. Falls can cause concussion. More insidiously, falls can cause bleeding within the skull that puts pressure on the brain, which surgery can relieve.

• Poor vision/hearing. Confusion caused by either can be easy to correct.

• Malnutrition. Because the sense of taste fades with age, the elderly may eat poorly. Dr. Libow points out that more than 10 percent of Americans over 65 consume deficient amounts of thiamin and riboflavin and are low in vitamin C.

• Infection. Infection doesn't always look the same in the elderly as it does in the young. Tuberculosis, meningitis and encephalitis all may show up first as confusion rather than with obvious fever or pain.

• Depression. Insomnia, loss of family, friends, status or income are clues that help distinguish the confusion of depression from that of senility.

• Metabolic problems. The body's processes for maintaining itself can become disordered with age; the results can mimic senility. Diabetes, for example, is usually signaled by increased urination and thirst as well as confusion.

• Dehydration. The mechanism that signals thirst can be sluggish in the elderly. Medicine prescribed for high blood pressure also can cause dehydration.

• Heart problems. Confusion, rather than pain, can be a major symptom of heart attack in the elderly.

• Brain problems. Tumors, epilepsy and small transient strokes are frequent culprits. So is hydrocephalus, a low-pressure buildup of fluid on the brain.

The major chronic dementia, Alzheimer's disease, is not yet curable. Its diagnosis depends on ruling out other causes, such as the 10 mentioned here. This may require multiple tests—and perhaps getting a second opinion—but tests are less expensive and less freighted with anguish than consigning a loved one unnecessarily to a nursing home.

ing moral sense as well as their cadences and flourish. He became an orator whose style was full of alliteration, metaphor, "fizzlegigs and fireworks" and the rigorous pungency of epigrams.

It was almost certainly from a poem of Longfellow's that he got his much-cherished image of "the ship of state," and the Library of Congress' records show that he checked out The Song of Hiawatha for two years solid. As the historian Henry Steele Commager once said, poets have always understood Lincoln best. Not just the mythic Lincoln to whom Carl Sandburg devoted his life—portraying him as wise, honest, cheerful, practical, ingenious, prankish, full of zest; but also the secretive man who was extremely moody and remote, obsessed with death and constantly jolted by a headstrong moral courage, the man who refused to let the radiant idea of the Declaration of Independence be dimmed by "the vast moral evil" of slavery.

As the austere Greek architecture makes plain, this is really a temple, not a memorial—a shrine to an ideal. Lincoln was, as Ralph Waldo Emerson rightly said, "the true history of the American people in his time." A common man, caught up in the whirlpool of an era, he embodied what Americans hoped for as a thumbnail sketch: honest, fair, hard-working, unprejudiced, patriotic, full of vision. What ennobled him, in part, was an unflagging belief in America's "experiment in popular government." He understood that the central idea of the Civil War was not North against South, but whether popular government could prevail at all.

Visitors to the memorial often explain to their children that he "freed the slaves," but Lincoln wouldn't have said that. He understood that people who keep slaves become slaves themselves—slaves to the degradation of the human spirit. "If slavery is not wrong, nothing is wrong," he insisted, gambling that a truth so self-evident would protect him, as it never could, from nay-sayers and hotheads.

When he died, a vivid and gripping symbol died. Tolstoy lamented that of all national heroes, Lincoln was "the only real giant." His body toured the country, from one whistle-stop to another, on a final campaign trail, until it was barely recognizable except as the remains of a patron saint. A huge crepe arch over Broadway, in New York City, said what a mourning world already knew: "The great person, the great man, is the miracle of history." And, in Huntington, N.Y., Walt Whitman filled his house with funeral lilacs and began a memorial vigil he would commemorate every year until he died, for "the sweetest, wisest soul of all my days and lands," a man he had known personally, "O powerful western fallen star."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Even while at Sunday pursuits, concentrate on how to have greater abundance in the days ahead.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do whatever you please today and get your ideas across to others easily since you are thinking wisely now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can readily comprehend the principles behind any undertaking, so give a good education that will also teach how to make good ideas become a reality and how best to make them work. Teach to be more objective since there is a tendency here to be too bashful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Steer clear of a friend who is irritated early in the day and get busy with your correspondence and communicating.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You had better study that mundane affair more carefully before you handle it. Take care of important business matters first.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't let that new idea take you away from a plan you have to get the things you personally like.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have much imagination and have high ideas and ideals, so be encouraging with your charming progeny. There is also the ability to handle details very well which can be most helpful to make such a reality.

Chief Charged

BALDWIN, Mich. (AP) — A rural police chief has been charged with murder in the shooting of a friend's 20-year-old son during an argument, police say.

Yates Township Chief Delbert Dotson, 60, of Idlewild, was arraigned on a second-degree murder charge in the death of Kevin P. Horner, said state police Sgt. John Koneska. Dotson was held in Lack County Jail on $500,000 bond pending a preliminary examination.

Horner was shot in the chest at the home of Margaret Horner, the victim's mother, said Lake County Prosecutor Mark Ravin. Dotson was there in a "non-official capacity" and was a friend of Mrs. Horner, Koneska said.

"There was an argument that just escalated for whatever reason," Ravin said. "It started with the mother and the victim, and it just blew up."

ASK ME ABOUT TV

By Val Carew

I am in love with Bruce Willis, that sexy, sophisticated hunk from "Moonlighting." What can you tell me about him? — A.F., McGaheysville, Va.

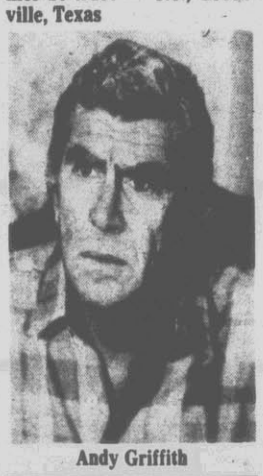

Bruce Willis

Willis, who portrays gumshoe David Addison on the ABC series, was born in Penns Grove, N.J. on March 19. His New York stage credits include "Heaven and Earth," "Bayside Boys," "Bull Pen" and "The Ballad of Railroad William." In 1984, he starred in Sam Shepard's critically-acclaimed play "Fool for Love" for four months.

Willis' regional theater credits include "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," "Sweet Bird of Youth," "The Little Foxes," "Two Gentlemen of Verona," "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Of Mice and Men." His feature films include "The Verdict," "Prince of the City" and "The First Deadly Sin."

You may have also seen Willis in several shows, including "Hart to Hart" and "Miami Vice." The thespian likes skiing and plays the harmonica. By the way, A.F., the 6-foot hunk is single.

I recently heard a rumor about a possible movie which would reunite the old Andy Griffith gang. The show was a favorite of mine. Could the rumor be true? — T.C., Greenville, Texas

Andy Griffith

It's more than a rumor, T.C. There is talk of such a project, and while contracts haven't been signed, it appears the former cast members are eager to do the film. I'll try to keep you posted on further details.

TV Chatter

TV UPDATE dined with Donna Reed at Larry Hagman's Malibu beach house last year — the celebration marked the arrival of Miss Reed as the series' new Miss Ellie — we found the actress looking extremely stylish and sounding very candid. Miss Reed, who died at age 64 on Jan. 14 after a short bout with pancreatic cancer, revealed she didn't enjoy watching her old films, including the gems "It's a Wonderful Life" (1946) and "From Here to Eternity" (1953), for which she won an Oscar for her role as a prostitute. "There's something painful about watching them," Miss Reed confessed. "It's all in the past, and I have no need to go back." But when the actress watched "The Donna Reed Show" (she kept the classic 1958-66 ABC series on video), she claimed she "saw someone who was looked wonderful and terrific."

Dick Cavett has learned who his friends are. When he was about to begin production on his new USA Network series, "The Dick Cavett Show," he contacted several of his celebrity comrades, asking them to appear on the cable talk-show. Many of them — including Joan Rivers, Mary Tyler Moore, Lucille Ball, Richard Pryor and Daniel J. Travanti — said yes. But others gave Cavett the thumbs down. "Mike Nichols and Jack Nicholson turned me down," Cavett, 48, says. "Then I called Cary Grant, but he told me he'd never do it because he was afraid that people would see how dumb he was. And at 2:44 one morning, Mr. Sinatra woke me out of my sleep, refusing to come on because — and I quote — 'I don't like parties.'"

Deborah Mullowney recently found herself in a hairy situation. The actress, who plays Sloane Denning on the CBS soap "Capitol," received several phone calls from a woman who described herself as actress Claudette Colbert. It seems the legendary Miss Colbert, impressed by Miss Mullowney's coiffure, wanted to know who styled the soap star's hair. But Miss Mullowney, who is also known as Mrs. James Farentino, assumed the calls were cranks and never rang back. Then she found out the hair-raising truth: The calls really were from Miss Colbert, who was forced to call CBS to get the name of the stylist, Mickey Song. Miss Mullowney's reaction? "From now on, I'll return calls," she says. "Even wrong numbers!"

Just as Judd Hirsch sat down in a Manhattan restaurant recently, a fan taxied over to his table, asking for an autograph. But then the fan, noticing how grizzly and gray the 50-year-old actor looked, did a double take. Was the former "Taxi" star really that old? Hardly. Hirsch is currently starring as an 80-year-old man in the Broadway hit "I'm Not Rappaport," and simply didn't take off his makeup, beard and $1,000 gray wig. ... Treat Williams, soon to be seen in the upcoming film "The Men's Club," is flying high. The actor recently received his helicopter's license, certifying the prince of the city as the king of the skies. ... Barbra Streisand has decided to cash in. The singer has put her Malibu beach property up for sale. The asking price? $25 million, negotiable. Interested in taking a peek? Bring along a certified check for $1 million, which is Babs' requirement for those "just looking."

SOAP OPERA WEEK

Sherilyn checks out of 'General Hospital'

By Kimberly Redmond

What's become of Sherilyn Wolter, the actress who portrays Celia Holt on "General Hospital"? She's my favorite actress, but in the last few months she's only appeared on the soap on an occasional basis. — A.O., Winthrop, Maine.

Sherilyn Wolter

The "GH" storylines have shifted away from Celia in the past several months, and her character has not been seen very much. At press time, Miss Wolter had announced that she wouldn't be renewing her contract with the ABC soap. In the past, many soap stars have used similar statements during contract negotiations, but it seems likely that Miss Wolter will exit within the next few months.

My friend insists that Lauralee Bell, the actress who portrays teenage model Cricket on "The Young and the Restless," is related to someone else on the soap. Is this true? — R.H., Bangor, Maine.

Lauralee Bell

Miss Bell is the daughter of "Y&R" headwriter Bill Bell. She has been portraying Cricket whenever she's on vacation from her college studies. Miss Bell, who's a native of Chicago, Ill., was attending a California school, but recently transferred back to the Windy City.

I am positive that Barbara Berjer, who plays housekeeper Bridget Connell on "Another World," was once on another daytime soap opera. Can you tell me on which soap she appeared? — J.M., Tampa, Fla.

For several years, Miss Berjer starred on another soap, "The Guiding Light," the CBS soap in which she portrayed Barbara Thorpe. Her character was eventually written out, and has never been heard from since.

A Family Affair

CBS's made-for-the-tube "Two Young People" stars Bill Bixby, Dee Wallace-Stone, James Naughton, Megan Follows and Dermit Mulroney, and is currently in production in Florida for future network broadcast. The new motion picture focuses on the familial chaos generated when a step-brother and step-sister fall in love.

DAVID FUNDERBURK

Funderburk Downplays Criticism

In one of his campaign stops before the Republican primary for the U.S. Senate, candidate David Funderburk told a group of local supporters Saturday that even though opponents consider him to be the underdog, his organization is ahead of schedule.

"We have to make sure we keep a conservative in the seat," he said. "There is no limit as to what we can accomplish as a party and country. Sometimes the media don't always do this."

In other areas, Funderburk downplayed a report in the National Review, a conservative magazine edited by William F. Buckley, which cited Funderburk as being responsible for "losing one of the most important Senate races because of an all-conservative faction fight."

"My reaction to the National Review piece," Funderburk said, "was that it was not valid at all. We have contacted them to make sure they see both sides of the story."

The 41-year-old former ambassador to Romania also said his campaign would concentrate on recruiting young people to the Republican party.

In response to a recent court decision declaring a portion of the Gramm-Ruddman budget-balancing bill unconstitutional, Funderburk said Congress should go ahead with the passing of it. "I think it will probably be shown as constitutional. Congress will have to decide what the priorities are now," he said.

Funderburk, chairman of Campbell University's Division of Social Science, lives in Buies Creek.

Charlotte Officials Decry Bus Decision

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A federal appeals court decision allowing Norfolk, Va., to end cross-town busing of elementary school students will not directly affect North Carolina's desegregation efforts, school officials say.

"But anytime a decision like this is made, it makes our fragile system just a bit more fragile," said Charlotte-Mecklenburg school board Chairwoman Carrie Winter.

Charlotte-Mecklenburg began busing for desegregation in 1970 and has since been cited by national education groups for its success in achieving racial balance.

"In my opinion, they never really had integration in Norfolk the way we have it here," said Jay Robinson, superintendent of Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools. "They've been fighting desegregation just about as long as we have spent trying to make it work. We're in a completely different situation."

But legal experts say the decision adds to an anti-busing climate nationwide.

Julius Chambers, the civil-rights lawyer who fought to end segregation in Charlotte-Mecklenburg schools, is now executive director of the New York-based NAACP Legal Defense Fund. He said the decision would reverse 30 years of "painstakingly built progress."

"We are extremely disappointed," Chambers said in a telephone interview from New York. "The court may have opened the door for a number of school districts to resegregate."

Norfolk's plan, to be implemented next fall, would create 35 neighborhood elementary schools, 10 of them nearly all black.

In arguing for its plan, the board said the school system had 56,000 students and was nearly 60 percent white before court-ordered busing began. The system now has 35,375 students, 59 percent of whom are black.

Curbing busing would encourage white families to keep their children in public schools and prevent the system from becoming nearly all black, the board argued.

The appeals court accepted the board's argument.

Roanoke Study Fails To Locate Old Fort

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Aerial photographs and soil tests believed to show the remnants of America's first British settlement on Roanoke Island instead revealed cut trees and roadwork from 20th century projects, archaeologists say.

John Walker, research archaeologist with the Southeast Archaeological Center in Tallahassee, Fla., said in a recent telephone interview that researchers were no closer to finding the site of the colony established in 1585 by Sir Walter Raleigh.

"Our evidence was totally 20th century instead of 16th," he said.

"The major central feature, which was thought to be possibly part of a bastion there, was actually where, circa 1965, the park put in the road that comes around in front of the Fort Raleigh Visitor Center," Walker added. "In doing so they went through some pine trees that had to be cut. They burned some and what they didn't burn they left outside the circle."

Depressions that seemed to line up with the modern reproduction of the earthworks fort at the park apparently stemmed from work to straighten the curve in a nearby road in 1921, Walker said.

"A local gentleman who must be 80 years old said the route had been changed through what was then his father's field," he said. "It ran at an angle up across the field to the fort and then back."

Walker said he would recommend resuming the investigation further to the west on the island, where some 16th century artifacts were previously found. But he admitted there was no certainty the settlement could be found.

"With very sandy soil and cultivation in that general area, something could be plowed down, blown down," he said. "There are sand dunes in some cases 6 to 8 feet deep. And it could be that ... the remaining (restored) fort is really an outworks of something that has been totally destroyed."

While the findings were a setback to the National Park Service operation, they gave new impetus to work by East Carolina University archaeologist Gordon P. Watts, who has been working under the assumption that the settlement site is now under water.

Adviser Removed

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's top adviser on public school matters has been removed from his position, administration officials say.

Gene S. Baker, a former Wayne County school principal, said he was informed Thursday that he was being relieved as the governor's education adviser. Baker said he wa 'old to go on vacation and await reassignment to an undetermined post in another state agency.

Baker, 48, represented Martin before the education committees of the Legislature and was the liaison with public school education groups.

"He (Baker) is no longer working in the governor's office," said James Lofton, Martin's chief of staff.

Baker, the Republican candidate for state superintendent of public instruction in 1984, is the Republican Party chairman for the 3rd Congressional District.

"There are not hard feelings, no problem," Baker said. "I like my job, I enjoyed it. I look forward to my next assignment. I am not going to say anything else."

THE HISTORY OF VALENTINE'S DAY...

Valentine's Day, Feb. 14, is the most romantic holiday of the year and there are a number of stories about its start, according to Cox Floral Service of 4th Street & Arlington Blvd. in Greenville, N.C.

One legend has it that St. Valentine was a young Roman cleric who was imprisoned by the emperor and who sent a note of gratitude—a Valentine—to his jailer's daughter for being kind to him.

Another story claims St. Valentine was executed for performing marriage ceremonies for Roman soldiers in defiance of the law, the emperor preferring bachelors in his army.

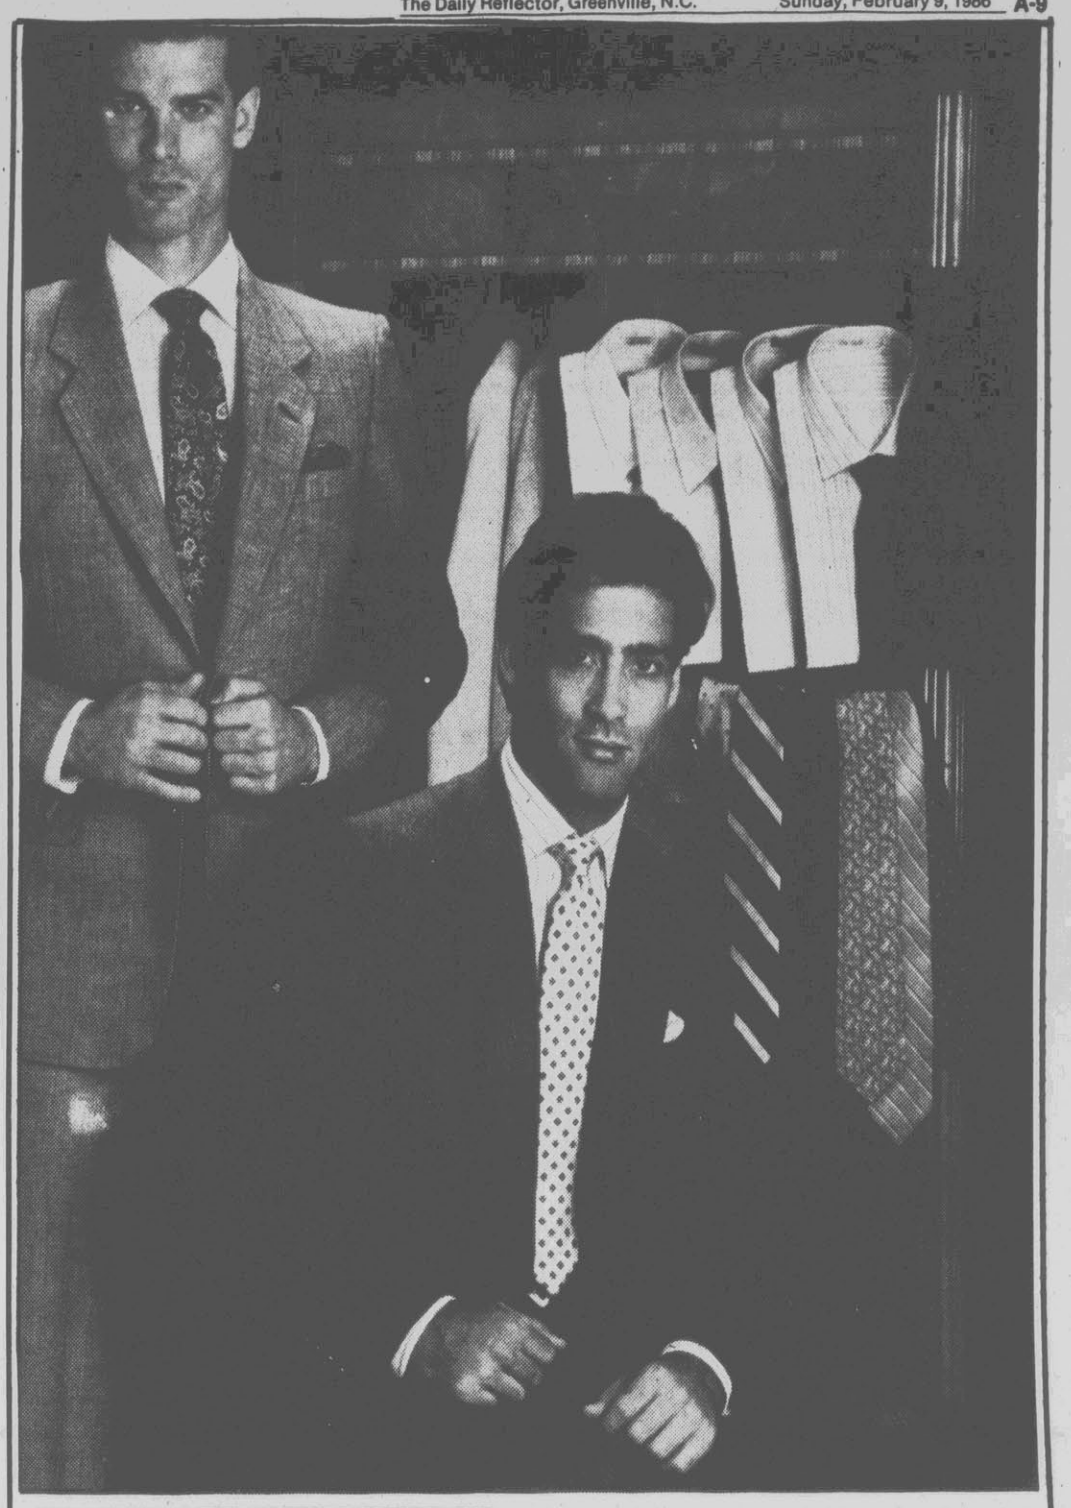

Still a third legend claims that St. Valentine was an imprisoned Christian who wanted to get word to his family that he was still alive. Violets were growing outside his cell window and he managed to pick the leaves and pierce them with the words, "Remember your Valentine." The leaves, goes the story, then were delivered by a dove. This may explain why flowers are a traditional Valentine's Day gift.

There also are a couple of stories about why Valentine's Day is celebrated on Feb. 14. Some say it's the date St. Valentine was martyred. Others believe it was selected Feb. 14 is the day when birds choose their mates for the year.

Officials Concerned About Wild Annual Rio Carnival

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Free of two decades of military dictatorship, Brazilians are concerned about the spread of AIDS during the four days of pre-Lenten revelry which began yesterday and will continue through Tuesday.

"Without a doubt, this will be our merriest Carnival ever," Trajano Ribeiro, Rio's tourism director, said in an interview. "Everyone is relaxed and in a good mood. The fear that existed under the military regime is a thing of the past. What you have now is a fraternal spirit."

But health authorities are worried about uncontrolled sex, both heterosexual and homosexual, and a possible increase in the number of AIDS victims, who now number about 500 known cases in Brazil.

Carnival is traditionally a time of wild abandon among men and women and also a mecca for homosexual men, highlighted by a ball called "Grande Gala Gay."

"Thousands of posters and brochures about AIDS will be distributed during Carnival," said Idelson Alan Santos, spokesman for the Health Ministry. "We will use television to inform citizens how the disease is transmitted and how to avoid getting it."

A member of the Brazil's national all-star soccer team, popularly known only by his first name Socrates, has taped public service TV spots about AIDS, urging the use of prophylactics. He also is a medical doctor.

Santos said foreigners coming to Brazil for Carnival may receive questionnaires at the airport asking if they are in high-risk AIDS groups, such as homosexuals and hemophiliacs. The health official added, however, that answering will be voluntary and no tourist will be turned away for refusing to do so.

Ribeiro, the tourism chief, said 500,000 foreigners are expected in Rio during Carnival, mostly from the United States, which has the world's highest number of AIDS victims.

A main attraction in Rio is the parade of "samba schools," neighborhood clubs that compete for prizes for the best performances, music and costumes.

The lyrics for Carnival music traditionally have double meanings and sexual and political references. This year they have been written without concern for the censorship-heavy military regime that stepped down last March after 21 years in power.

"This year, the 'samba schools' really are letting go," said Nei Lopes, a Carnival-song composer.

"That's what happens in a democracy," Ribeiro said. "People love to speak out. Before they couldn't. Now they can."

THE CALM, THE RAGING — A calm, relaxed sunbather soaks up the rays as waves up to 35 feet pound a breakwater at Shark's Cove on Oahu, Hawaii's north shore. Area beaches, which were closed Wednesday because of the high surf, reopened Thursday when the surf subsided to ten feet. (AP Laserphoto)

Give Up Careers For Basketry

BETTER LIVING . . . Tom Thompson, 40, is weaving his way through life in Paxton, Fla. He took up basket making after giving up a successful career in the insurance business because it was too stressful. (AP Laserphoto)

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

PAXTON, Fla. (AP) — Tom Thompson had achieved success four years ago in the insurance business, supervising sales and six other employees throughout the Florida Panhandle.

He was pulling down a good salary and his wife, Pam, had just left her teaching job at Paxton High School to give birth to the first of their two children.

But Thompson gave up the security of a steady job to embark on a new and uncertain career of trying to revive a piece of Americana, the dying craft of making wooden baskets.

The stress of selling insurance, including twice-weekly commutes to his office in Tallahassee, about 140 miles away, just had proven too great for a man with heart trouble.

"Really, I just threw it all down and said the hell with the economic spiral," said Thompson, 40, during a recent interview.

"I just decided I would do something where I would work when I wanted to," he said.

Bearded and seldom without his tattered Indiana Jones-style fedora, Thompson also is gaining a reputation as a storyteller, spinning yarns about such things as moonshining and 'possum hunting from his Panhandle boyhood as he weaves baskets at craft shows and folk festivals.

He talked about his new lifestyle while splitting white oak outside the family's mobile home in this hamlet northeast of Crestview on the Alabama state line where he was born and raised.

"We stayed about two years eatin' a lot of squirrel and rice and deer," he said.

It took nearly that long to learn his new craft, said Thompson, an Air Force veteran who had been a printer at weekly newspapers in nearby Florala, Ala., Milledgeville, Ga., and Andalusia, Ala., before getting into insurance.

He got his inspiration a few months before quitting his insurance job. Thompson had noticed a small basket his wife had made several years earlier. As a student at Troy State University in Alabama, Mrs. Thompson had gone to a craft show where T.M. Norris, an aging basket weaver from Goshen, Ala., taught her to make the basket from strips of white oak.

"We were sittin' around one night and I said that ought to be easy enough to make," Thompson said. It wasn't.

He read up on wooden baskets in a Reader's Digest book titled "Back to Basics," went into the yard and tried to split the first tree he saw into strips thin enough to weave. But it wouldn't split properly.

He reread the article and discovered he'd missed two words: "white oak." Few other kinds of trees are suitable for baskets and not even every white oak can be used Thompson later discovered.

The couple bought a basketry book and tracked down Norris — Mrs. Thompson had forgotten his name but remembered he lived in Goshen — and he passed on some of the things he had learned in a lifetime of making baskets.

Thompson said they were fortunate because the few basket makers who remain are very elderly and most of them are reluctant to pass on their secrets.

The craft was handed down from the Indians to pioneers who made baskets for a variety of chores, including gathering eggs, cheese making and carrying food to farm animals. The most common type in the South was a large barrel-shaped basket for picking cotten.

As the Thompsons became more proficient, they found a ready market for their baskets, many of them purchased by collectors. At the rate of about 15 to 20 baskets a week they find it difficult to keep up with demand.

Mrs. Thompson, 33, never questioned her husband's decision.

"My wife knew that if I stayed in insurance I'd be a dead man with all the stress," Thompson said.

Instead, she joined him and has given up any notion of returning to teaching in a school although she remains a teacher.

"We are teaching baskets now," Mrs. Thompson said. They now devote more time preparing materials for and giving lessons than to making baskets. Ironically, some of their students are Creek Indians whose ancestors had long ago passed the craft on to the white man.

"There is a big resurgence now back to old time things," Thompson said.

He said he never imagined he would be so successful. Although he'll never get wealthy making baskets, Thompson said he is worried it may be too much of a good thing.

"It's getting to the point where it's getting a mite stressful," he lamented.

Rain In Arabia

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

ABHA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — In a country of barren wastes and oases, people in this remote, mountainous corner of southwestern Saudi Arabia face a different problem: too much rain.

Spring and summer storms, fueled by the annual Indian Ocean monsoon some 500 miles to the east, roll up the coastal plains along the Red Sea, crest the ridge line at 10,000 feet and dump torrents of rain and hail on settlements of Saudi Arabia's Asir province.

Provincial officials say Asir can receive as much as 24 inches of rain a year, almost 10 times as much as falls on the big port of Jidda 400 miles north of here.

The rains transform this region of rugged stone hills and deep, fertile valleys into a blanket of green, with forests of juniper and acacia trees. Terraced farms rise up along the steep slopes.

"Many people are surprised to find such a place in Saudi Arabia," said Ibrahim al-Sayyed, director-general of Asir's Office of Tourism Development.

Over the centuries, Asir's climate has created a way of life unique in Saudi Arabia, where most national customs and dress reflect the demands of survival in the desert.

Because rainfall is normally brief but intense, farmers terrace their mountainside fields to keep storms from washing away their soil.

Instead of cloth headgear favored my most Saudis, farmers in the fields of Asir traditionally wear hats resembling Mexican sombreros while they cultivate crops of grains, vegetables, melons and pomegranates that make Asir one of Saudi Arabia's key agricultural areas.

Since the coming of oil riches to Saudi Arabia in the 1970s, sturdy concrete houses have been built to replace Asir's traditional mud dwellings, which were always vulnerable to the heavy rains.

"I remember one storm 30 years ago that washed away nearly every building in Abha," al-Sayyed said. "Everyone had to move into tents until the rescuers could reach us. It was great for the kids. We had no school for weeks."

The local government has built about 50 dams throughout the province over the past 15 years to prevent flooding and provide water year-round between the rainy seasons.

With such an unusual climate, provincial officials are trying to encourage Saudis and other Persian Gulf Arabs to vacation here.

Three thousand or so inscriptions on Sweden's ancient rune stones often tell of Vikings who died in foreign lands, National Geographic says. Messages on the sones are written in a 16-character alphabet, limited to bare facts and terse verse.

Greenville Little League Has Served Youngsters Since 1951

A TYPICAL GREENVILLE LITTLE LEAGUE TEAM . . . Since its founding in 1951, there have been many groups of Little League players in Greenville. The team pictured here is the 1985 Sportsworld Team, the champion city team for 1985. Team members are shown with their manager, Ron Wing.

How does a child, aged 9 to 12, become a member of the Greenville Little League and share in this sport and social experience?

First is registration. A parent must complete the child's application and present a certified birth certificate.

Then they have to try out by attending at least half of the try-out sessions.

Registration for the Little League for the coming season will be on Friday and Saturday at both Carolina East Mall and The Plaza.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. Sunday, February 9, 1986 D-1

(Editor's Note: Patrick Bizzaro teaches English at East Carolina University and is manager of the Kiwanis Little League Team in Greenville).

They all laugh and shake their heads.

"Remember Booger Scales?" they might ask each other of the former Little League umpire. "Remember how he'd call a third strike on ya? He'd shout, 'You're dead as a duck.'"

Many of them laugh and shake their heads together because they are still friends and business associates.

"There are a lot of benefits to playing Little League baseball," says Tommy Whichard, coach of Kiwanis and member of the Elks Little League team from 1955 to 1958. "Kids get a different kind of experience by playing ball. They get to meet new people and learn to deal with different authority figures. Little League baseball is definitely good for socialization."

Take a look at the "Division III Tournament — August 12-13, 1960" program to see what kind of socialization takes place among Little Leaguers.

On the cover is a black-and-white photo of Elm Street Park Little League field where nearly 7,000 children have played organized baseball since its inception in Greenville in 1951. In the photo, the trees are a little shorter — 26 years shorter. And, like Little League itself in Greenville, the field has aged and, with the years, there have been some changes.

Take, for instance, the description of East Carolina College with its four thousand students. Or note Greenville, much smaller then, with 325 stores, 60 industries, three banks and 44 churches.

As Greenville has changed, so have its youth. Those who once ran the bases now run the businesses, industries, and Little League programs.

Donnie Taylor is pictured in that 1960 brochure, a power hitting pitcher and catcher for the North State team which would compete with teams from North Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Tennessee to represent the South in the Little League World Series.

Taylor holds the record still for the most home runs in the regular season. In 1961 he hit 15 home runs in 15 games, a record tied recently by Timmy Moore who hit 15 but needed 18 games to do it.

"Back in those days," says Taylor, "the teams were stronger. More kids used to try out, for one thing, and the competition was better. I recall that every team had at least two strong pitchers and that kept the scores a lot closer."

Taylor, who has continued his involvement in Greenville Little League over the past ten years by umpiring, mourns the fact that fewer children take advantage these days of the well-run, well-organized Little League program in Greenville.

"One of the things kids miss out on," says Taylor, "are the good friendships you develop. When I played I made friends from all over the city and a lot of them are good friends of mine still."

Taylor recalled many of the players from the 1960 all-star teams.

"Charles Allen who works for NCNB," recalls Taylor, "was a great pitcher for Jaycees. He was just about the only kid I couldn't hit a home run off.

"And then there was Jack Cobb who pitched for Kiwanis," continues Taylor. "He pitched the only perfect game ever thrown at Elm Street."

Taylor pointed out that that 1960 team included Steve Fuller who became one of the finest three-sport athletes in the history of Rose High School and went on the play for The University of North Carolina.

The team also included Jerry Clark who played professional baseball in the Cleveland Indians' organization.

Many of the players listed in the 1960 program have remained in Greenville. Three examples are Grant Jarman, Allen Hahn and Billy Ipock.

Jarman, whom Taylor describes as "an excellent singles hitter," runs his own business in town and believes strangely in the value of Little League baseball.

Hahn is a Greenville attorney. And Ipock, who challenged Taylor for the home run title by swatting 11, is a former manager of the Happy Store.

Many adults are involved as managers and coaches. Roy Berbert, who for sixteen years has managed teams in the Greenville Little League, claims that one of the most positive experiences a coach can have is that of watching his players grow and enter new dimensions of their lives.

"I've really enjoyed just following the kids I've had," says Berbert, "as they've played Prep League, Babe Ruth League, and high school ball.

One of Berbert's "pupils," Ronnie Chapman, has gone on to play professional ball in the Yankee organization.

Ron Wing, manager for the past four years of the Sportsworld team, assisted Berbert for two seasons.

"My most positive experience as a manager," says Wing, "happens when I get a kid on my team who came in and couldn't throw the ball ten feet. We work and work and then the kid becomes one of the best defensive players I've got."

Wing also cites the fact that Little League coaches have an opportunity to take children with bad attitudes about themselves and their relationships with others and help those children straighten themselves out.

"For most of these kids," says Wing, "Little League is their first involvement with a team sport and with being coached. I think a sport can teach a kid how to win and lose, how to set goals for life itself. They learn to play hard and do their best."

Wing is quick to point out that success isn't required. "If the kid fails, a coach or somebody should explain that you can't always be successful. To strike out is not the end of the world."

Berbert concurs. "A lot has to do with the coach and his emphasis on winning or developing a child's athletic abilities.

Ron Vincent, baseball coach at Rose High School, has also benefitted from the Greenville Little League program.

"I think Little League should take a child to a certain skill level," explains Vincent. " In my estimation, no Little League program in the area prepares players as well for their next level of play as they do in Greenville."

Wing, the manager of the champion team, cites his work with that group as his single most memorable experience.

"The kids from the 1984 team went through two years of Little League All-Star experience," recalls Wing. "The first year, 1983, we lost.

"But the second year, that group of youngsters was better able to handle the pressure of that level of play."

It is not surprising that this past season, eight of those players made major contributions on the Greenville Prep League All-Star team, finishing as one of the eight best teams of 13-year olds in the country.

Vincent also coached the 1970 Greenville All-Star team, the previous Greenville state championship team. That team boasted Michael Brewington who now plays professional football with Memphis, Kelly Heath who plays professional baseball and Macon Moye who played baseball at East Carolina.

Vincent will soon inherit one of the groups of Greenville Little League players, the team that won the North Carolina State Championship in 1984 and played that year in St. Petersburg to represent the Southeast in the World Series.

Kelly Hill, A 75-Year-Old Martin County School Building

Our southern landscape is dotted with reminders from the past, including old county school buildings, many of them located along modern paved roads.

Kelly Hill School is a fine example. Tucked in a corner of the Farm Life Community of Martin County, the white wood structure sits about one hundred feet off Highway N.C. 171 — the Washington-Jamesville road. The school is adjacent to the now-closed Raymond Gurkins general store.

Kelly Hill School is owned by Gurkins, and is currently in use as a storage facility. The large, rambling Gurkins homestead with traditional spacious porches, across a paved country road from the store, seems to keep company with the old school.

Simple, Attractive Design

The basic design of the building is rectangular. Two tall, slim windows balance the school's front entry door, and three more windows of the same dimension are located along each side. A few years ago, the school was temporarily turned into a repair shop. Now all the windows are boarded over and the wooden roof shingles replaced by a metal roof for more adequate protection.

Simple wooden steps lead to the interior. The building rests on a brick foundation, and stands about 18 inches off the ground. A picket lattice work, once painted dark green, encloses the foundation.

There are two interesting aspects of the exterior design.

For one thing, the building was constructed with a higher than normal pitch, creating a resemblance to churches of the same era. It is this, along with the noticeable "star" near the top front of the building which has caused people to believe that this was once a church rather than a school.

Speculation On The Star

The star is approximately two feet in size from point to point, and encloses the front ventilation opening for the school. While the reason behind the star design is not recorded in the school's history, local residents who recall the earlier days of the school supplied a few "hearsays" from the past.

One was that carpenter working there was also a minister, who chose to leave his mark by adding the star. Another hearsay is that at the time of the construction, the Christmas season approached and the star was added as a holiday whim.

While it may never be determined why the star design graces Kelly Hill School, it does add a distinctive touch, and also makes it easier to locate on a drive along the highway.

Earlier School

The original country school building serving the Farm Life Community was located about where the present Farm Life School now stands. It was known by two names — Hardison Mill School and Amberst.

In 1885 the school's local committee was comprised of W.H. Daniel, H.T. Manning and J.C. Getsinger, Jr. The 1885 census shows 64 persons of school age in the district. An amount of $72.32 was appropriated for the school's operation that year.

The Hardison Mill (or Amberst) school continued in use until the Kelly Hill School was built in 1910. Following a controversy of 15 years over the site of Hardison Mill School, the site known as Kelly's Hill was chosen for the new school, on land purchased from trustees of the Williamston Methodist Church.

The first census (1910) of the new district showed 47 persons of school age, and the local committee was composed of J.L. Coltrain, James A. Roberson and John D. Mizelle.

Kelly Hill School was consolidated in 1922 with other schools in the area to form the a new, much-enlarged school, the brick Farm Life School, which is still in operation as part of the Martin County school system.

Vestiges Of Age

Time has taken its toll on the building, especially the interior. When you enter Kelly Hill School today, you can see part of the ceiling is missing. The pale green interior paint is now chipped and worn. But where the wall meets the ceiling, there is a marvelously constructed rounded curvature, unusual in the architecture of rural schools. It is a detail that lends a touch of softness to the angularity of spacious single room of the building.

An unusued chimney flue in the center of the ceiling is evidence of a wood stove that provided heat.

Memories Of Old-Timer

Asa Hardison, one of the oldest residents of the Farm Life Community, remembers studying at Kelly Hill until he was about 15-years-old. His school days there constituted all the formal education he was to have.

As was usual in country schools in the early 20th century, several grades were housed in a single room, from grades one through the seventh grade.

Hardison recalls when he attended at Kelly Hill, the school year ran about three months. He says he had a lot of fun with his friends at schools, but mostly that he "remembers Kelly Hill as a place of discipline and where the fundamentals of education were taught and high ideals established.

"Everybody went to school barefoot (in good weather) except the teacher," he recalled with a smile. "Sometimes we had to recite no fewer than a half dozen lessons each day, but I don't ever remember having a test. It's a good thing too!" he laughed.

"We didn't have a lot of special events, just a little something extra at Christmas, maybe, but I do remember how much I looked forward to recess time. I ran many a yard around that old place, throwing a ball over the school house, enjoying playing with my friends."

Other things Hardison particularly remembers are hard benches and lunch time.

"The benches were simply slabs off a log with holes bored in them, and pegs for legs," he said. "It was hard to sit still too long, but squirming was not acceptable."

Hardison said for school lunch, "my lunch pail was no different from my classmates. Generally, my tin bucket held a layer of meat, a layer of potatoes, a small pan of biscuits, a pint of homemade molasses in a bottle, and maybe, if you were real lucky, a layer of molasses cakes on top." He said that sometimes a raw sweet potato was carried in his pocket as a special treat at recess.

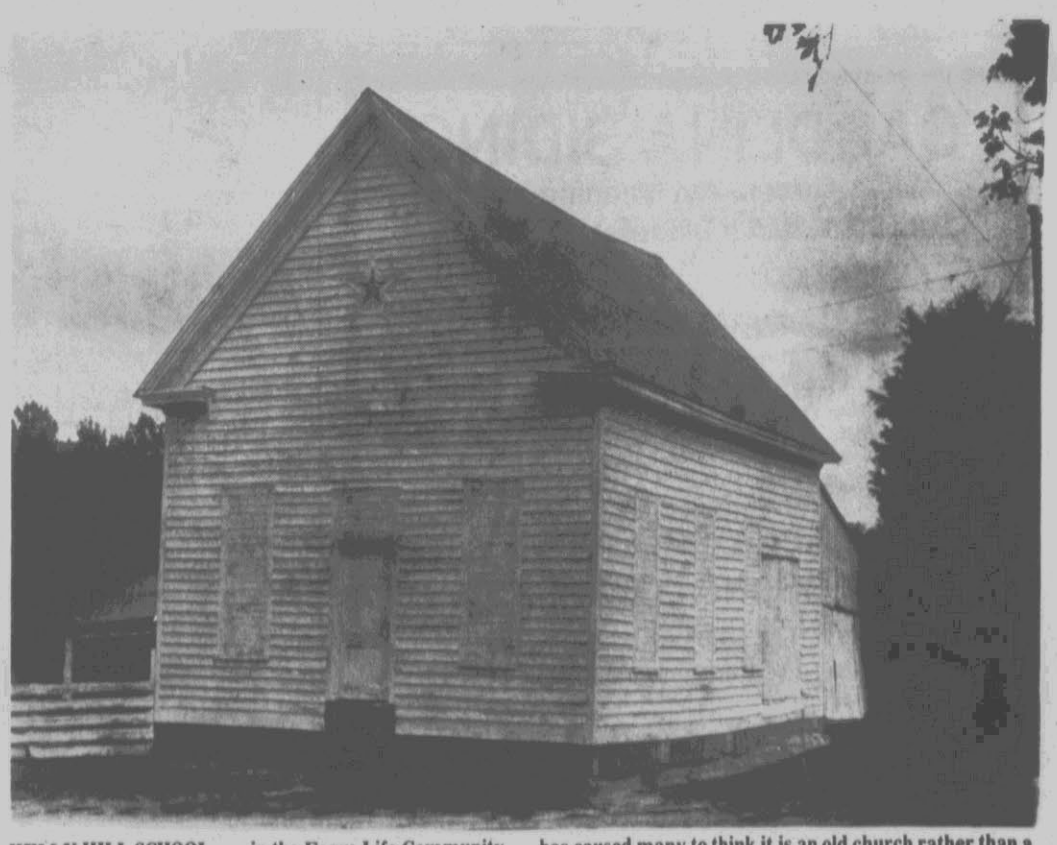

Withered Reminder

A withered testimony remains on the front interior wall of the school, left from the last group of children who studied at Kelly Hill. Strung out across the tall wall are the words "MERRY CHRISTMAS," made of holly and cedar.

Some of the foot-high letters are gone now, and there are holes in the garland. Today the remaining holly leaves and cedar sprigs are brown, brittle.

But even so, a perceptible feel of contentment can be experienced in being inside Kelly Hill School — the sense of a realization that speaks of fulfillment, creativity, expansion of the mind and sustenance for the soul.

ESC Recovers $962,202 In Jobs Insurance Fraud

Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville Employment Security Commission office, reports that during 1985, $962,202 was recovered statewide for the unemployment insurance fund. The state scored a 92.6 percent recovery from 102 convictions for fraud.

"In Pitt County, we had 13 fraud cases with a 100 percent conviction rate," Hannan said. "The money value of recovery in Pitt County could not be established as the state office does not break down the recovery of funds by individual counties."

North Carolina ranks fourth nationally in prosecution of unemployment insurance fraud. "North Carolina will prosecute for any amount, from $1 up," Hannan said.

Filing for unemployment insurance and thereafter committing fraud is deemed a misdemeanor. A person committing fraud could receive two years' imprisonment plus $1,000 in fines for each week of benefits received through fraud.

Each North Carolina county is served by members of the fraud investigation unit. The two categories in which fraudulent claims are filed are those who return to work and continue filing and those who work part time and do not report all of their earnings each week.

"We now have methods to learn of full or part-time earnings," Hannan said. Money that pays for unemployment benefits to unemployed workers is from a fund that is maintained through taxes paid by the employers of North Carolina.

Mass Graves Indicate Multiple Killings During Fighting In Yemen

ADEN, South Yemen (AP) — Two weeks after fighting ended between rival Marxist factions, authorities are digging up graves and finding other evidence that indicates both sides carried out mass killings, informed sources say.

The sources, who insisted on anonymity, said the discovery of the graves in Aden is expected to shed light on the actual toll from 12 days of fighting that erupted on Jan. 13 in this Marxist Arab nation, a key Mideast ally of the Soviet Union.

Thousands of people were reported killed in the battles around the capital of this impoverished nation on the southwestern tip of the Arabian Peninsula, but any exact toll is unknown.

"Bodies are still being found in common graves scattered in the capital," said one well-placed source who spoke on condition he was not identified.

"Twenty bodies here, thirty there; it's appalling, gruesome," he said.

There was no independent confirmation of mass graves being uncovered.

Despite claims by the new regime that most of the killings were committed by forces loyal to the deposed government, evidence suggests rebels also carried out "systematic killings" to eliminate pockets of resistance in Aden, other sources said.

The new hardline Marxist regime led by Heider al-Attas has not produced any casualty report since the rebels ousted President Ali Nasser Mohammed in fierce fighting around the capital.

Officials say initial casualty reports putting the death toll at 12,000 were "grossly exaggerated." But they admit the toll will likely run into "thousands."

The sources said most of the casualties appeared to be fighters or party activists. But scores of civilians were killed in the crossfire and in huge artillery barrages that raged in the early phase of the bloody conflict.

A key factor in the low estimates of civilian casualties was that people living along Aden's sprawling seaside suburbs fled hours before the warring factions moved in mortars and tanks, the sources said.

"The most amazing thing is the dead outnumbered the wounded," said another source, who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

The sources said many killings occurred inside military compounds when rival army factions shot it out.

Members of the ruling Yemen Socialist Party were also slaughtered by rival forces at the height of the fighting for control of Aden, the sources said.

They added that most of those killed were hurriedly buried in mass graves in and around military compounds in Aden and near Zenjebar, capital of Abyan province 50 miles east of the capital.

"Both sides carried out the killings," said one source. "But we are only getting the winners' version."

The government has set up "special committees" to investigate casualty reports and to investigate the fate of missing people, he said.

John Paul Beatifies Indian Nun, Priest

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Saturday performed the first beatification ever on Indian soil, venerating a nun and a priest for their legendary powers of healing and devotion to the destitute.

The 65-year-old pontiff beatified Rev. Kuriakose Elias Chavarra, a 19th century priest who established India's first native order of monks and nuns, and Sister Alphonsa, who died in 1946 after a life marked by physical disease and suffering.

In Roman Catholic rites, beatification is a first step toward possible sainthood.

"I pray that the beatification of these two exemplary religious (figures) of India will give you renewed zeal for your precious vocation," John Paul told priests gathered for the ceremony.

Although it was the first beatification service in India, an Indian Franciscan missionary, Gonsalo Garcia, achieved sainthood when he was canonized in 1863 in Japan where he worked among the sick.

Chavarra established India's first indigenous priestly order near Kottayam in 1831 and the first indigenous order of nuns at Koonmammavu, also in Kerala, in 1866. He died in 1871.

Sister Alphonsa, who disfigured herself by stepping on hot coals to avoid marriage and fulfill her desire for life as a nun, died after suffering from tuberculosis, typhoid fever, ulcers, malaria and other diseases.

Thousands of pilgrims flock each year to her hilltop tomb to pray for guidance and relief from suffering and pain.

"Sister Alphonsa is remembered for her unwavering smile and kindness in the face of intense personal pain, while Chavarra stood out as a builder of the church and a friend to society's outcastes," the pope said.

The ceremony was held in Kottayam in Kerala state, the Catholic heartland of south India where both lived.

Both belonged to the Syro-Malabar rite, which traces its orgin to the Apostle Thomas, who the church says brought Christianity to southern Indian in the 1st century.

Saturday's ceremony was the first time a pope has performed the Mass using Syro-Malabar rites. Syro-Malabars, who use the ancient Syriac language in rituals, came to India centuries ago from the Middle East.

Libya Starts Exercise

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The Libyan air force and navy on Saturday began eight days of maneuvers "with live ammunition" off the coast of Libya, state-run television said.

The broadcast in Arabic did not give any details as to how many ships or planes were involved, but identified the maneuver area as the "Tripoli Air Traffic Control Area."

In the last week of January, the area off the coast of Libya was the scene of maneuvers conducted by two U.S. aircraft carriers, the Coral Sea and the Saratoga, and a number of support ships.

Pentagon sources have confirmed the U.S. ships were to return to the area next week for further air and sea operations.

Libyan television said "all air activity will be under visual and radar control to ensure the safety of civilian aircraft." It did not elaborate.

The Libyans are believed to have only a half dozen coastal patrol boats in its navy.

Its air force, however, is known to have more than 2,000 aircraft, including transports, helicopters and jet fighters. The London-based Institute for Strategic Studies has reported these include 50 Soviet-built MiG-25 Foxbats, 175 MiG-23s, and more than 80 French-built Mirages.

Relations between the United States and Libya have been tense following Reagan administration accusations that Libya supported the guerrillas who attacked the Rome and Vienna airports on Dec. 27 and killed 20 people, including five Americans.

On Feb. 1, a Reagan administration ban on all travel and economic dealings with Libya went into effect.

Khadafy on Friday issued a warning aimed at Israel that its civilian aircraft were subject to interception should they enter Libyan airspace.

Woody Allen

He is a man who knows that there are more losers than winners.

FOR THOSE OF US BROUGHT UP to believe Hollywood moviemakers are dashing chaps in ascots and cashmere polo coats and sunglasses, driving Ferraris, snorting cocaine and bronzed by the Malibu sun, Woody Allen is a major disappointment.

He is small, skinny, shy, the old Army jacket he wears should be shipped to earthquake victims, his eyeglasses are strictly for librarians, he is as pale as uncooked fillet of sole, and I do not believe he would recognize cocaine.

He does, however, have a Rolls-Royce.

He also, despite his handicaps, makes great movies. He writes them and directs them and casts them and usually stars in them. He brings them in on time and under budget. He is a man who understands that life is ridiculous, and he translates it, ridiculously, to film. He knows there are more losers than winners.

Woody writes wonderful magazine articles, plays the clarinet every Monday night with a jazz combo in a small Manhattan pub, used to be married to Louise Lasser (remember her, Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman?), had a long affair with Diane Keaton and is now in love with Mia Farrow, a former Mrs. Frank Sinatra.

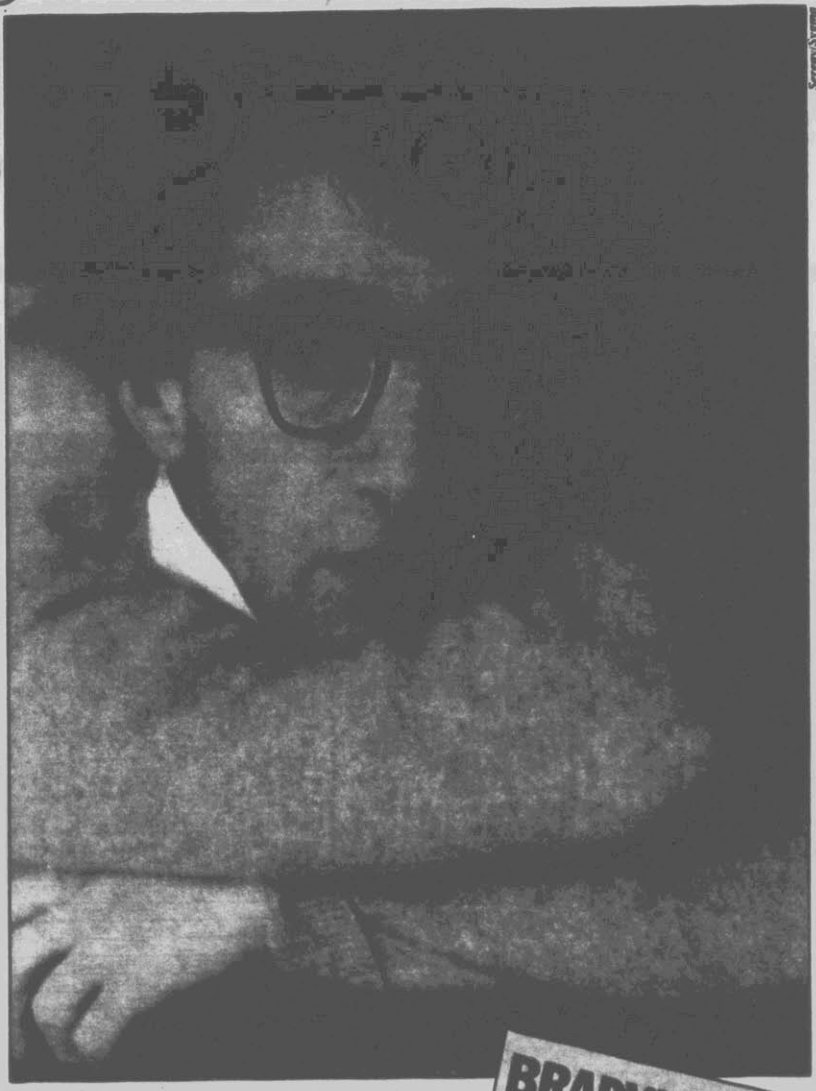

I usually see Woody at dinner. Two or three nights a week, the white Rolls delivers him to Elaine's restaurant on Second Avenue in New York, where he enters head down, lest someone actually catch his eye, and always gets the same table in the back. He is so much a fixture that when a customer asks Elaine where the men's room is, she says, "Turn right at Woody Allen." He has shelved Chateau Lafite for a lighter California red wine. Mia is usually with him. She says hello to everyone while Woody remains silent and observes his sneakers. When they are alone, Mia and Woody play backgammon at the table.

Remember that opening scene in Manhattan where Woody dines with his teenybopper girlfriend, Mariel Hemingway? That was at Elaine's. He makes movies where he lives. This winter, he's been shooting a new one (as yet untitled; he has a mania for secrecy) out at Rockaway Beach, a blue-collar neighborhood in Queens, N.Y. A local was asked: What does Woody look like? "A little guy in a jacket." Woody doesn't even impress Rockaway Beach.

He probably doesn't even have a hot tub.

He's a lunch pail sort of guy who happens to make movies, probably the last man you'd pick in a choose-up game—a skinny, myopic, quirky genius who understands that the average American isn't Robert Redford. It's Woody Allen.

BORN: Dec. 1, 1935, in Brooklyn.
GIVEN NAME: Allen Stewart Konigsberg.
PHYSICAL: 5 feet 5½, 120 pounds.
PERSONAL: Married to Harlene Rosen, 1954-59; married to Louise Lasser, 1966-71; long-term relationships with Diane Keaton and Mia Farrow.
FIRST JOB: Writing jokes for a public-relations firm, at $25 a week.
FIRST SCREENPLAY AND ACTING ROLE: What's New Pussycat? (1965).
FIRST MOVIE DIRECTED: Take the Money and Run (1969).
FIRST PLAY: Don't Drink the Water (1966).
ACADEMY AWARDS: Best Director, Best Screenplay, Annie Hall (1977); film also won Best Picture.

ScreenSyndication

His new film, "Hannah and Her Sisters," just opened. Middle America sometimes ignores Woody. Which is a mistake. Woody Allen is you and me; and he's got the Army surplus jacket to prove it.

BRADY'S BITS

Remember in Annie Hall where the Hollywood sharpers bring out the cocaine and Woody spoils the orgy by sneezing? Did it really happen? Listen, anything can happen to a man who used to be married to "Mary Hartman," lost Diane Keaton to Warren Beatty and now plays backgammon with the mother of Rosemary's Baby.

Annual Church Music Festival Set

COMPOSER . . . Robert Harris will be clinician and conductor for the annual Church Music Festival at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church on Friday and Saturday. Dr. Harris will coordinate the festival with Dr. Rhonda Fleming of the ECU School of Music.

The American Choral Directors Association of East Carolina University is sponsoring its annual Church Music Festival Friday and Saturday at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The ECU chapter holds two national ACDA awards for best student chapter in recognition of outstanding service to the professional community.

Clinician and conductor for the event is Dr. Robert Harris, professor of conducting and director of choral organizations at Northwestern University. Dr. Harris holds degrees from Wayne State University and Michigan State University, with post-doctoral studies at Eastman School of Music.

His compositions have been performed throughout the country. He was a delegate for ACDA to Europe for an exchange of ideas with conductors, and is presently an active conductor, choral elinician and adjudicator in education and church music. Harris is also director of music at Trinity Church of the North Shore, Wilmette, Ill.

The festival has been designed for church musicians of the area and will include a master class in conducting, repertoire, techniques, and mass choir rehearsals and performances in worship.

On Friday at 8:30 p.m., a concert will be presented by the Greenville Choral Society under the direction of Dr. Rhonda Fleming of the ECU School of Music. The second concert, Sacred Music in Worship, will be presented Saturday at 5 p.m. Both presentations, which are open to the public, will be held in Jarvis Church, where the mass choir and ECU instrumentalists will perform.

For registration and other information, call 757-6245.

MORE THAN BOOKS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Some libraries collect more than books.

The Department of Rare Books and Special Collections at the University of Rochester's Rush Rhees Library, for example, houses a fruit knife that belonged to feminist Susan B. Anthony, a lock of abolitionist Frederick Douglass' hair, and even the gun butt that Marlon Brando carried in the 1976 movie "Missouri Breaks."

LARGEST ART FAIR

NEW YORK (AP) — ArtExpo NY '86, billed as the world's largest international art fair, will present its eighth annual exhibition here April 3-7.

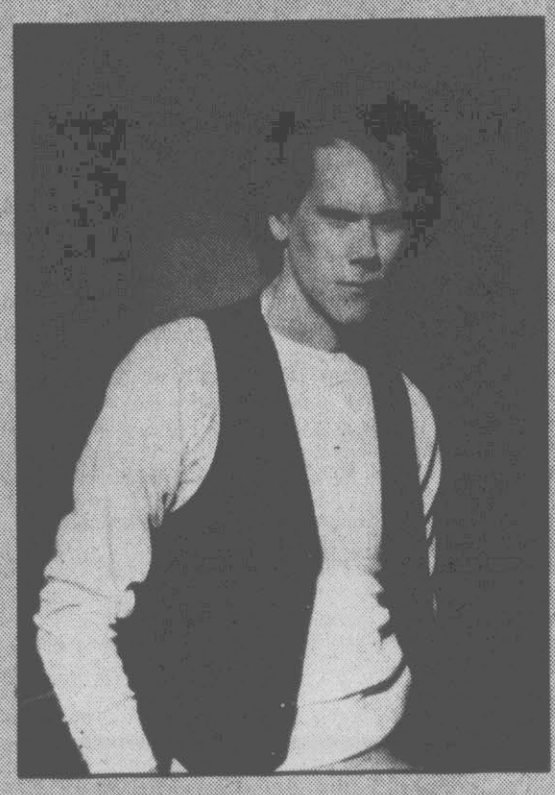

The fair will feature 500 exhibiting dealers, galleries and artists from 25 countries. With over 1,200 booths, ArtExpo says it has the largest number of international exhibitors ever assembled under one roof.

The first persons to drive from San Francisco to New York City is an autormobile were H. Nelson Jackson and Sewall K. Crocker, says National Geographic World. The trip, which they made in 1903, took 63 days.

An atomic-particle accelerator in Switzerland produces temperatures comparable to the heat an instant after the superhot explosion that created the universe, says National Geographic.

GOREN BRIDGE

By CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

1983 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I have some difficulty with lead-directing doubles. Let's assume that the opponents are playing five-card major suit opening bids. As South, what suit do you lead after partner's lead-directing double in the following auctions:

1)

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♢	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dble	Pass	Pass

East	South	West	North
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

I would appreciate your help.—H.P., New Orleans, La.

A.—The first example is a classic case of a Lightner double. Since you do not expect to beat a freely-bid slam on power, the double is lead-directing. It asks partner to attack with dummy's first-bid suit or, if dummy has not bid a suit naturally, with declarer's first suit.

Even though your opponents are playing a five-card major system, West's one club opening bid is natural. Therefore, you should lead a club. Either your partner has a holding such as ace-queen over West's presumed king, or else declarer has a concealed fit for dummy's suit, your partner is void and he wants to ruff.

The second example is not lead-directing in the same sense, since the opponents have not mentioned a suit. However, here, too, partner is not expecting to beat the contract on power — the opponents must have at least 25-26 points in their combined holding unless dummy is a few points light and is banking on running a long suit.

Since partner is not expecting to take enough high-card tricks to set the contract, his double must be based on a long suit with at least one side entry. Your best bet is to lead a short suit, since that is probably where partner has length. If you have to choose between a major and a minor suit, choose the former — the fact that West did not look for a 4-4 major-suit, and that increases both his chances of having length in the minors and, conversely, partner's odds on having length in at least one of the majors.

Q.—Why does the World Chess Championship receive so much more coverage that the World Bridge Championships?—M.S., Philadelphia, Pa.

A.—Bridge players are, in part, to blame for this. If enough wrote to the editors of their newspapers demanding coverage, they would get it.

However, there are also technical reasons for this. It is easier to cover a chess game in the press than a bridge match. The moves of one game take up very little space, whereas full coverage of a bridge match would require pages. Still, if you put pen to paper, at least the daily results would be carried.

A POET VIEWS THE LINCOLN MEMORIAL

Giant Among The Shadows

Diane Ackerman, whose latest collection of poetry is Lady Faustus, has been writing about a series of historic American sites for PARADE.

Jon Marsh

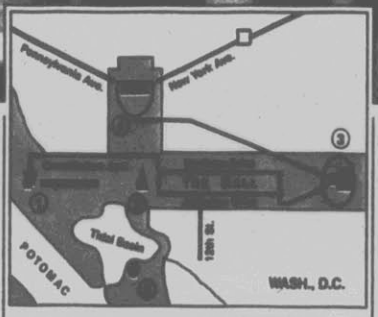

The 19-foot statue was sculpted in white Georgia marble by Daniel Chester French.

A GIANT MARBLE figure sits among the shadows, white revealed by black, as if this were not a likeness of a man but an X-ray, not a statue but the bare bones of the struggle he epitomized. Apart from two murals, there is no color anywhere in the Lincoln Memorial, only black and white. The black molds his massive hands as they tensely grip the chair of state in which he sits. The black engraves a vigorous calm on his face. The black guides his war-weary shoulders into a slouch. The black declares the enormous curve of his forehead: half a world from eyebrows to hair. The real Lincoln was a man often dripping with melancholy, as his law partner said. But this is a pensive Lincoln—watchful, canny and unperplexed—on the verge of standing. Since 1922, he has sat in this pose, at any moment ready to stride down the park to the statue of Thomas Jefferson, his boyhood hero, and shake stony hands.

It is a young Lincoln, though bearded, and much too prettified for the face his contemporaries so often described as craggy, badly hewn and just so "awful ugly" that he himself used to joke about it. His hands are large enough to span the logs he used to split, his clothes cascade in unruly layers, and, as with the real Lincoln, there is just too much leg to put anywhere. He is gangly, if stone can be gangly, and when he stands he will be all angles, as he ambles with his head forward and his hands held behind his back, lost in thought.

How ironic it is that a man whose life was so colorful should be reduced to the stark truths by which he lived. Where are the miscellaneous quirks of his life: the yellow flannel nightshirt; his silk stovepipe hat that was his desk, bank book, diary and filing cabinet; his gray eyes and large ears and protruding Adam's apple; the painful shyness with women that plagued him lifelong; his chasing insects with a carpet slipper in the screenless White House; the red silk handkerchief he would flourish on warm days in courthouses when he was a circuit lawyer; his broad frontier accent, in which can became "kin," heard became "heerd," and learned became "larned"; his fascination with the occult and dreams; his size-14 feet; and especially his rambunctious, unstoppable wit?

Poets know him best—not only the honest, prankish Lincoln but also the moody, remote man obsessed with death

WHEN YOU VISIT

Situated in West Potomac Park, Washington, D.C., the Lincoln Memorial (No. 1 on the map above) is in a direct line with the Washington Monument (2), in the center of the Mall, and the Capitol building (3) to the east. The Lincoln Memorial is open 24 hours a day, year-round. From 8 a.m. to midnight, it is staffed by Park Rangers, who provide interpretive talks for visitors. Other nearby sites include the White House (4) to the north and the Jefferson Memorial (5), south along the Potomac River.

Lincoln's hands are empty in this statue, but they should be clutching books. An American Aesop, he was the fabulist of the perfect illustration, whose sentences always included "That reminds me of a story . . ." He had a great larder of jokes, many off-color and many about himself. A sly and gifted humorist, he used ferocious wit to drive home political points. Self-educated, he knew much of Shakespeare, Robert Burns and other poets by heart, often quoted them, along with the Bible, and absorbed their unerr-

Rear Window May Be GM Key

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A year ago, everybody knew enough about the new Ford Thunderbirds to fear them heading into the Daytona 500.

And the T-Birds lived up to their advance billing, with Bill Elliott setting a Daytona International Speedway qualifying record of 205.114 mph, then running away with the race.

That was only a sample of what was to come as he wound up winning 11 poles and 11 races, all on superspeedways.

This year, however, there are question marks as the NASCAR stock cars head into their season opener and today's opening round of qualifying.

Not that the Fords have slowed down much, if any. It's just that the 1986 General Motors products — the Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, Pontiac Grand Prix 2+2, Oldsmobile Delta 88 and Buick LeSabre — may well be ready to challenge.

The Chevrolet and Buick are basically the same as last year's models, with the key exception of a new, more aerodynamic sloping rear window.

The Pontiac, which is being touted by some drivers as the car that could beat the Fords, and the Oldsmobile are radically different. Both are smaller and more aerodynamic both front and back.

It appeared likely that Elliott's track record would fall today when the top two starting spots for the Feb. 16 race are locked in. But it may not be the Fords that earn the headlines.

"We don't have it together right now like we did last year," said Elliott, who was among about a dozen drivers clocked unofficially at more than 200 mph in Friday's practice sessions.

"Last year, I think we caught some people by surprise a little bit, maybe even a little unprepared. But it sure is a lot different this year.

"The GM cars are quick and we just can't seem to find the speed yet," he added.

Lap speeds are official only during qualifying and the race, but Geoff Bodine was unofficially the quickest Friday. Several hand-held watches caught Bodine's Monte Carlo at 205.152.

And Neil Bonnett's Monte Carlo was timed unofficially at just over 203.

Cale Yarborough, who's Thunderbird started next to Elliott in the front row of last year's Daytona 500, was right at 200 Friday.

"We think we're in the hunt for the pole, but it all depends which guys are sandbagging out there and who's not," said Yarborough, whose team succumbed to engine problems in the 1985 race after making an offseason switch from Chevrolet to Ford. "At least we're not scrambling around like we were last year."

"The guys to beat last year were Elliott and Cale Yarborough, and, until we prove we can knock them off, they've got to be the favorites," said Bonnett.

"Everyone was scratching when we started (Friday)," he added. "The problem is that I don't think anybody here has had more than about five laps.

"By the time we qualify, I'd say the speeds will be up quite a bit. That record probably won't stand."

Reynolds Paces Trinity To Romp Over Raleigh

RALEIGH — Art Reynolds scored 19 points and pulled away 15 rebounds to lead Trinity Christian School to a 69-46 victory over Raleigh Christian Friday night.

Raleigh's girls, however, handed Trinity only its third loss of the year, taking a 34-26 decision.

Trinity opened up a 22-10 lead in the first period and continued to pull away in the second frame, 18-10. That made it 40-20 at intermission.

Both teams scored 14 points in the third period for a 54-34 margin. Trinity then outhit Raleigh, 15-12, in the last quarter.

Joey Braxton added 14 points for Trinity, while Rodney Brown had 10. Edward Everette was credited with nine assists for the Tigers.

Tony Davis led the Raleigh scoring with 15 while Andre Johns added 12.

Raleigh's girls built up a 10-4 lead during the opening stanza of their game. Trinity stayed close, however, by cutting it to 14-9 by halftime.

Trinity continued to pull back in the third period, trailing by only 20-17 as the last quarter got underway. Raleigh, however, held off the Lady Tigers, 14-9, in the final quarter to wrap it up.

Wendy Johnson led Raleigh with 18 points while Renee Deans had 14 and Karen Wells had 12 for Trinity.

Trinity's boys are now 20-2 while the girls are 11-3. Trinity travels to Falls Road of Rocky Mount on Tuesday, seeking revenge for one of their losses.

Why Stalin 'NEVER FORGAVE' Eleanor Roosevelt

Pictorial Parade

Stalin, FDR and Churchill (seated, l-r) confer in Tehran, November 1943: The author, FDR's son, first met Stalin there.

BY ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT

WORD OF MY FATHER'S SUDDEN DEATH AT Warm Springs, Ga., on the afternoon of April 12, 1945, was flashed to England within minutes after it was released in the United States. General Eisenhower was immediately informed. The news then was communicated to the headquarters of the Eighth Air Force, with orders to find me and arrange for my departure for Washington. It was mid-evening in London.

I was at that time commanding officer of the 325th Wing, with the rank of brigadier general. The 325th was charged with taking, processing and interpreting more than one million reconnaissance photographs every day. When word of my father's death arrived at my headquarters, I was in a car on my way to London, where I had been invited to dinner by Lady Sylvia Ashley, the beautiful Englishwoman who would later become the wife of Clark Gable. I was late, and the guests were already at the table when I arrived. Lady Sylvia rose and urged me to accompany her into the foyer. She told me I was to telephone Eighth Air Force headquarters. She said I should be prepared for extremely bad news about my father.

I need hardly tell how shocked I was. My father was only 63; and though we now know he was in rapidly failing health, we did not know it at the time. To the distress of learning that our nation's beloved wartime leader had died was added, for me, personal grief beyond description. We had been very close.

I returned immediately to my quarters at Mount Farm, an air base just south of Oxford, to learn that arrangements had been made for me to return to the U.S. early the next day. Bernard Baruch, one of Father's valued advisers, and Judge Samuel Rosenman, one of his most trusted friends and confidants, had been in London, conferring with Churchill about aid for Britain's postwar economic recovery. I could return to Washington with them on the "Sacred Cow," the Presidential plane on which Father had sent Baruch to England. Just after dawn on April 15, I flew an F-5 to Gatwick. Within an hour, I was in the air with Baruch and Rosenman, on the way to Father's funeral.

My brothers were serving in the Pacific and were unable to return in time. My sister Anna was with Mother. Mother was surrounded by friends, but Anna and I were the only members of the immediate family who could be with her during what must have been the most difficult days of her life.

Pictorial Parade

Eleanor Roosevelt

Not long after I arrived at the White House, Mother told me that the Soviet ambassador had phoned and asked to view the President's body. Mother had politely but firmly refused, and the ambassador had grown quite insistent. She had decided, she told him, that no one but members of the family would be allowed to see her husband's remains. It was her responsibility, she felt, to preserve the image of my father as he had been in life and not to allow a viewing of him in his casket.

"You will not be very happy," she told me, "with the way Father looks now."

Indeed I wasn't.

Anna took me to the East Room, where Father lay in state. When we were alone, she lifted the lid of the big bronze casket, and I looked on Father's face

continued

"Mother did not budge from her decision not to allow the viewing of Father's body. Gromyko was visibly disturbed."

Chargers Allow No Questions

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton wanted no question about it this time.

The first time the Eastern Plains Conference leaders played Charles B. Aycock, it went down to the wire with the Chargers winning a 39-37 squeeker.

Friday night, with the EPC title on the line, the Chargers roared to an 83-66 victory, wrapping up the championship.

Aycock girls took a tighter grip on second place in the league standings with a 45-35 win over the Lady Chargers.

"I'm glad we won in this fashion," Coach Bob Murphrey said afterwards. "Aycock came closest to beating us in the conference and we didn't want to leave any doubt as to who was the better team this time."

And the Chargers left no doubt. Midway through the final period, when Murphrey cleared his bench, Ayden-Grifton had run its lead out to 71-42, never having trailed in the game.

"I'm proud of the way we played tonight," Murphrey said. "We played awfully hard, especially in the first three quarters.

"The real key was the backboards and I thought we dominated them early on. (Doug) Anderson played a super game and so did (Marvin) Smith. Both went to the boards well and we really dominated there."

Ayden-Grifton held a 49-23 edge in rebounding going into the final period — when Aycock was able to be a little more dominate against the reserves.

"I thought we attacked their zone defense better tonight than in the first game," Murphrey continued. "They are quick on defense and can really make you look bad. But tonight, we knew that the title was on the line and we were not going to be denied."

Murphrey said the entire team played well and said that sophomore Eric Blount played well off the bench, scoring 16 points.

"We controlled (Tim) Fuller well tonight too. He got 22 points, but I think most of them came after it was over." Nine of his points came in the final period.

"I just hope we don't let up now that we've won it. We've got two more game to play before the conference tournament. I think we can relax some, but I don't want us to lose our momentum."

The Chargers got the momentum going early in the game. They scored the first six points of the game, only to see the Falcons rally to tie it at 6-6 behind four points by Fuller.

But after that, Anderson tossed in two straight and Danny West added a jumper for a 12-6 lead. Ayden-Grifton led, 13-8, at the end of the frame.

Ayden-Grifton again scored the first five points of the second period, running its lead out to 18-8. Ronnell Peterson and Smith both scored baskets and Smith added the second of two free throws.

The two swapped points over the next few minutes until two straight baskets by Blount ran the margin to 11, 28-17 with 2:05 left in the half.

After a Falcon free throw, Hilton Ellison hit from underneath and Blount tapped back a missed shot for a 32-18 lead.

Aycock, however, scored the final two baskets of the half to cut the lead back to 32-22.

Ayden-Grifton hit the first four of the second half, and after an Aycock basket, the Chargers ran off ten straight, including two free throws by Blount on a technical foul called against Falcon Coach Randy Bledsoe. That helped to up the lead to 46-24 with 3:55 showing.

Aycock made another free throw before Anderson scored for a 48-25 edge.

Ayden-Grifton held a 57-34 lead at the horn.

After scoring the first four points of the final period, Ayden-Grifton continued to pull away, finally reaching a 29-point spread, 71-42 on a driving basket by Smith with 4:18 left.

The Chargers went to their bench after that, allowing Aycock to rally over the final minutes to the eventual 17-point spread.

Anderson led Ayden-Grifton with 22 points while Smith had 18. Blount added 16 and West hit ten.

Aycock was led by Fuller's 22, while Greg Speight had 11 and Tony Tillman had 10.

The win boosts Ayden-Grifton's Eastern Plains record to 10-0, 18-2 overall. Aycock falls to 7-4, 13-6.

Aycock's girls took the initial lead and never trailed in the game, moving out to a 19-point lead early in the third period. But Ayden-Grifton rallied after that and cut the lead to six on several occasions, although their rally never quite was enough.

A key factor was the free throw shooting of the Lady Chargers, who made good on only seven of 24 shots. Aycock made 13 of 26 on the night.

"We've never been able to rely on our free throw shooting to win for us," Coach Kathy Frazier said. "Our offense struggled in the first half. We played better offensively in the second half, and our defense helped us get some baskets, too."

Aycock took an early 8-3 lead and held off the Lady Chargers the rest of the period for an 11-8 lead.

Ayden-Grifton went over 13 minutes scoring only one basket while the Lady Falcons were building up their biggest lead, 30-11. The lone basket came with 36 seconds left in the half after Aycock had outscored A-G, 13-1. Aycock thus took a 24-11 lead into the dressing rooms.

Aycock added the first six points of the third period before Ayden-Grifton finally broke the ice again, this time scoring five in a row. The Chargers cut the lead back to ten, 34-24, at the end of the period.

In the final frame, Ayden-Grifton continued its rally, pulling within six at 34-28 before Aycock scored four straight. Twice more, AG cut the lead to six, but they were never able to come closer as Aycock held on to win.

Kelly Malpass led Aycock with 13 and Crystal Kennedy added 12. No one scored in double figures for Ayden-Grifton.

Aycock's girls are now 8-3 in league play and 14-3 overall. Ayden-Grifton falls to 4-6, 6-14.

Ayden-Grifton travels to Greene Central on Tuesday.

Wake Runs Past Knights, 77-58

Wake Christian placed four players in double figures and rolled up a 77-58 basketball victory over Greenville Christian Academy Friday night.

GCA's Lady Knights, however, came away with a 47-24 victory in their meeting with Wake.

Wake opened up a 21-14 gap in the first period but could only stretch it by one in the second frame, taking a 35-27 lead into intermission.

In the third period, however, Wake put the game away with a 26-13 scoring margin. That ran the lead out to 61-40 lead. GCA outhit Wake, 18-16, in the final period.

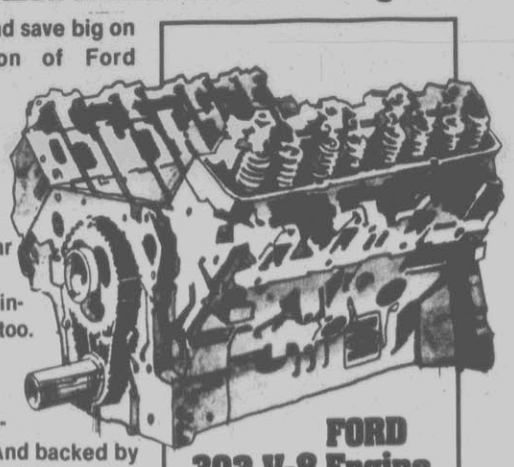

Mike Barefoot led Wake with 15 points while Glenn Bagwell added 14. Both Jimmy Carroll and Thurston Fanny had ten. GCA was paced by Paul Hollingsworth with 23 and Robin House with 14.

"We played consistant," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "It's just when they get on a run they can score quickly. We executed well, but they just had two much talent. They are number one in the state and they played like it."

Irish Upset Orangemen

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Donald Royal scored 11 of his 20 points on second-half free throws as 14th-ranked Notre Dame stunned No. 8 Syracuse 85-81 Saturday in intersectional college basketball.

In scoring their first impressive road victory of the season, the 16-4 Irish got crucial rebounds, amassing a 35-34 edge overall. It was the 18th game this season in which the Irish have dominated the boards.

They also connected on 41 of 48 free throws — including 18 straight in the second half — and held Syracuse senior co-captain Rafael Addison, the school's third-ranking career scorer, without a point for the first time in his college career while snapping a 14-game home winning streak for the Orangemen.

Ken Barlow scored 16 points, David Rivers 14 and reserve Joseph Price 12 in the victory.

Syracuse dropped to 18-3 onthe season despite Dwayne Washington's 28 points and 25 from Wendell Alexis.

Notre Dame, which hit 15 of 18 free throws in the first half, led 39-35 at halftime.

The Irish matched their longest lead of the game when Barlow rolled in an offensive rebound for a 47-37 edge.

Syracuse came back to take the lead 58-57 on a Washington 6-footer with 10:06 to play, but the Irish responded seconds later when Rivers dashed through the press and found Royal for a slam.

The Orangemen took one-point leads twice more, but center Tim Kempton put his club ahead for good 68-67 with a three-point play with 5:55 to go. His layup came off another assist by Rivers, who had four for the game.

The Irish put daylight between themselves and Syracuse in the first half with a 13-for-13 run at the free-throw line before Royal finally missed an attempt with 55 seconds left.

By then, Notre Dame had built a 35-25 lead on a pair of Royal free throws, only to see the Orangemen storm back on a three-point play and two baskets by Alexis.

St. John's (10).....87
Boston College.....75

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Glass scored a career-high 24 points as No. 10 St. John's, forced to play the second half without leading scorer and rebounder Walter Berry, beat Boston College 87-75 in a Big East basketball game Saturday night.

Berry, the seventh leading scorer in the nation at 23.9 and fifth leading rebounder at 11.5, turned his left ankle with 2:28 left in the first half. The junior forward, who had seven points and five rebounds in his limited playing time, did not return but is expected to play Monday night when the Redmen travel to No. 11 Georgetown.

Glass and sophomore forward Shelton Jones picked up the slack of Berry's absence. Glass finished with seven rebounds and Jones scored all of his 15 points in the second half while grabbing a team-high eight rebounds.

The Redmen, 22-3 overall and 9-3 in the conference, broke from a 61-57 lead with 5:56 remaining with an 11-3 burst over a two-minute span.

Jones and Glass accounted for all 11 of the points in the run that gave the Redmen a 12-point lead, like the final margin, their largest of the game. Jones had two three-point plays in the spurt and Glass one.

The closest the Eagles, 12-11 and 3-9, could get in the last three minutes was eight points, which they managed twice, the last time at 74-66 with 1:42 remaining on a dunk by Troy Bowers.

Ron Rowan added 16 points for the Redmen, who led at halftime 34-32, while Mark Jackson added 13.

Dana Barros, who gave the Eagles their last tie of the game at 48-48 with 11:54 remaining, led Boston College with 23 points, while Roger McCready added 21 and Bowers 11.

Georgetown (11).....81
Seton Hall.....54

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Reggie Williams scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds Saturday to lead 11th-ranked Georgetown to an 81-54 Big East Conference college basketball victory over Seton Hall.

David Wingate added 18 points and eight rebounds for the Hoyas, who won their eighth straight game and improved their record to 19-3 overall and 9-2 in the league.

The Hoyas next face St. John's, the last team to beat them, Monday night at the Capital Centre.

The Hoyas overcame a sluggish start to beat the Pirates for the 17th straight time. Georgetown has not lost to Seton Hall since the 1976-77 season.

Seton Hall, 11-13 and 1-9, took a 12-7 lead eight minutes into the contest. But Georgetown scored 10 straight points, getting six from Williams and four from Perry McDonald, to grab a 17-12 lead and never trailed again.

The Hoyas scored the last seven points of the first half to take a 32-21 lead at intermission. Although Georgetown committed 11 first half turnovers, the Pirates took themselves out of the game by missing 23 of 31 shots from the floor and hitting just five of 11 free throws.

A basket by Seton Hall's Mark Bryant at the outset of the second half cut the margin to nine points, but Georgetown scored 10 of the game's next 12 points to end the Pirates' bid at mounting a comeback. Wingate scored six points in the run and Williams added four, giving the Hoyas a secure 42-25 lead with 16:23 left.

Seton Hall eventually closed to within 13 points, but Georgetown used an 11-2 scoring spree to up the margin to 59-37 with just under 12 minutes remaining and the Pirates never got closer than 18 points the rest of the way.

Old Dominion.....54
South Alabama.....52

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Kenny Gattison scored 18 points and pulled down nine rebounds as Old Dominion's Monarchs held on for a 54-52 Sun Belt Conference basketball victory over South Alabama's Jaguars Saturday night.

Gattison, who scored his team's last eight points, gave the Monarchs a 54-48 lead with 3:19 to go, but that was the last score for Old Dominion.

Alan Kortokrax's bucket made it 54-50 with 3:09 left and Darrell Faulkner cut the Monarchs' lead to 54-52 with 1:15 remaining.

The Jaguars got the ball back with 27 seconds remaining, but Jeff Hodge's shot with two seconds remaining was off target and Ricky Brown's tipin attempt at the buzzer also failed.

The victory left the Monarchs with a 16-5 overall record and a 9-2 conference mark. The Jaguars dropped to 14-12 and 3-7.

Keith Thomas added 12 points and Frank Smith 10 for the Monarchs, who hit 22 of 39 floor attempts for 56.4 percent.

Downpour Halts Daytona Runs

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A steady downpour Saturday washed away the opening round of qualifying for the Daytona 500 and added to the drama of preparation for Sunday's Busch Clash.

Officials of Daytona International Speedway and NASCAR rescheduled the time trials to determine the two front row starters until Monday at 10 a.m. EST.

This same situation came up in 1983, when rain wiped out the scheduled opening qualifying round.

On the following Monday, with only a small number of spectators on hand, Cale Yarborough ran the first official 200 mph lap on Daytona's 2.5-mile tri-oval, then came through a spectacular flip on the next trip around track without injury.

The wet weather Saturday actually put a crimp in the NASCAR stock car teams' plans for both qualifying and the Clash, a $180,000, 50-mile dash for last year's pole winners.

The reason is that most of the eight drivers in the Clash also are among the favorites to earn positions up front for next Sunday's Daytona 500.

"This rain really messes up our preparation for the Clash, not to mention qualifying," said Bill Elliott, who set the Daytona qualifying record of 205.114 mph last February. "Our plans are to run the same car in both the Clash and the 500, just changing motors and springs and so forth.

"We didn't have things really sorted out Friday at the end of practice, and the rain came today (Saturday) just as we were lined up. We had changed the engine and some other chassis setting since Friday, and now we don't know if the new motor is stronger or if the chassis setting helped or not."

Elliott, whose Ford Thunderbird still is considered the car to beat, although he did not test that much during the offseason, added, "It's going to make the Clash more dramatic. Now, not only our team but all the others are going to go to the line Sunday with guesses on (Chassis) settings.

"Those who guess right will be at the front of the pack. Those who guess wrong will be at the back. The experienced teams obviously have a bigger advantage here than the less experienced teams."

The Sunday schedule does not include a NASCAR stock car practice prior to the Clash.

Geoff Bodine, who also is in that race and is considered a possibility for the Daytona 500 pole, said his team wants to run the same car both in qualifying and in the Clash.

"We needed a practice," Bodine noted. "We haven't decided which car to run. Without a practice, we're going to have to make a serious decision.

"All we needed was one lap, but I was backing the car out of the garage when it started to rain. Now it's like reaching into a barrel and grabbing something."

One positive note came from Harry Hyde, crew chief for Tim Richmond.

Hyde noted the track surface was particularly slippery in Friday's practice sessions, a leftover from last week's 24-Hours of Daytona sports car endurance event. He said that the rain is likely to remedy that situation.

"I think it (the rain) is going to make the whole field run faster," said Hyde, who directed Bodine's crew last year. "It'll wash the track down good."

Terry Labonte, another of the over 200 mph drivers in the early practice and an entry in the Clash, expressed some hope that NASCAR would change its mind and add a morning practice.

urine samples from their athletes for the presence of drugs, a Banner telephone survey of SEC athletic directors and trainers found.

Most of the SEC schools test for "street" drugs like marijuana, cocaine and amphetamines. Some, like Vanderbilt, Georgia, LSU and Tennessee, also routinely test for steroids, which are used by some athletes in an attempt to increase their muscle mass.

"Testing for cocaine is almost ludicrous," said Tennessee team physician Robert Rubright. "The stuff is dissipated so quickly."

Random testing "suggest more of a police-type of thing. We're not into that," said Rubright, adding that testing at Tennessee "is purely a medical function. There is nothing punitive about it. It's not a witch hunt."

Rubright said only he and the trainer know the results of the first screening test. The coach is not notified unless a follow-up test also is positive for drug use.

Formal counseling is provided after the second positive test, and the player may be suspended if the third test is positive.

Of 325 male athletes tested since the Tennessee program began last fall, 12 had positive tests the first time, but only one had positive results a second or third time, Tennessee's head trainer Tim Kerin said.

Trainers, team physicians and athletic directors interviewed said there are three goals for the drug testing programs — to deter drug use among athletes, to detect and treat drug problems early, and to protect fair competition by preventing use of drugs, like amphetamines and steroids, taken to enhance athletic performance.

But, just as the number of tests and the penalties for failure differ at each institution, opinions about the effectiveness of the testing programs also cover a wide spectrum.

Athletic directors like Vanderbilt's Kramer and the University of Alabama's Ray Perkins believe drug testing is a very important deterrent to drug use among athletes.

But others such as Al Green, head trainer at the University of Kentucky, question whether the programs are "worth the money."

"You can test and test and test," added Louisiana State University head trainer John Anderson, "but ... I don't think we've got a corner on prevention."

Like Tennessee, most schools provide medical help and counseling for drug use but several trainers, including the University of Mississippi's Leroy Mullins, said harsh penalties for drug use also are necessary to maintain "discipline."

Ole Miss athletes who show positive for drug use on two successive tests are automatically suspended from play for at least a year, Mullins said.

Alabama brings the player's parents into the picture after a second positive test, and a third positive reading at Alabama leads to in-patient drug care and at least a year's suspension from the team, trainer Chris Smith said.

Drug testing also is expensive, costing about $20 a test for street drugs and up to $125 per test for steroids.

A key to the success of drug testing may be how the screening is conducted, and what is done with the results.

Hussein-Arafat Peace Effort Strikes Deadlock Over Palestinians' Future

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE — John Rice is based in the Amman bureau of The Associated Press and covers Middle East developments involving Jordan and the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — The strongest effort in years to end the Arab-Israeli conflict appears to have collapsed over a number and a word.

Unless a diplomatic miracle occurs, the Middle East will remain snarled in its long and costly war of terrorism and reprisal, and millions of frustrated Palestinians will remain refugees without a homeland.

The number is 242, a U.N. Security Council resolution that implies Arab recognition of Israel. It is the biggest part of the American price for any dealings with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The word is "self-determination," the PLO's goal for the Palestinian people, and its condition for publicly accepting 242.

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat left Amman late Friday after 13 days of hard bargaining with Jordanian officials, who unsuccessfully sought PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution.

King Hussein had asked Arafat three months ago to publicly endorse 242, so that the PLO could deal with the United States — an essential actor in the year-old Hussein-Arafat peace plan.

Resolution 242 calls for Israel to withdraw from territories it occupied in 1967 and recognizes the sovereignty and security of all states in the region. It fails to guarantee self-determination for the Palestinian people.

Efforts to overcome the deadlock will continue, but both the United States and PLO seem hardened in their stands, and time for agreement is running desperately short.

The American administration will soon be distracted by domestic elections. The current Israeli government, willing to accept territorial concessions for peace, is scheduled to turn over power in October to one that opposes concessions.

Few diplomats or observers in the Arab world believe that Hussein is politically able to follow Israel's advice and go to peace talks without the PLO's blessing.

To do so, he would have to win full support from Syria, his powerful northern neighbor. Syria has shown no inclination to give that backing.

Most observers believe Syria is using its current reconciliation with Jordan to pry the king away from his peace move and away from Arafat, who has resisted Syrian efforts to dominate the PLO.

To go alone would cast Hussein as a traitor in Arab eyes unless he could win back virtually all of the land lost in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, including the sacred sites of east Jerusalem. Israel would never grant that.

To go alone would force Hussein to rely on Israeli and American military protection — a difficult position from which to negotiate.

Ironically, PLO officials argue privately they have already accepted 242 and the Americans publicly call for something very close to self-determination.

But the PLO buys 242 only as a package deal with other U.N. measures on Palestine, including the 1947 partition plan that called for an Arab state side-by-side with Israel, and international status for Jerusalem. The United States refuses such a connection.

The peace plan suggested by President Reagan in 1982 calls for Palestinian self-government in association with Jordan.

The PLO's version of self-determination is a state confederated with Jordan.

"We welcomed self-determination through the Palestinian-Jordanian confederation," Arafat told the Kuwaiti newspaper al-Anbaa just before leaving Amman. "The Americans, regrettably, are still confused."

The Reagan plan was based on the 1978 Camp David accord, the last major Middle East peace initiative. It brought peace between Egypt and Israel, but was fiercely rejected by most of the Arab world.

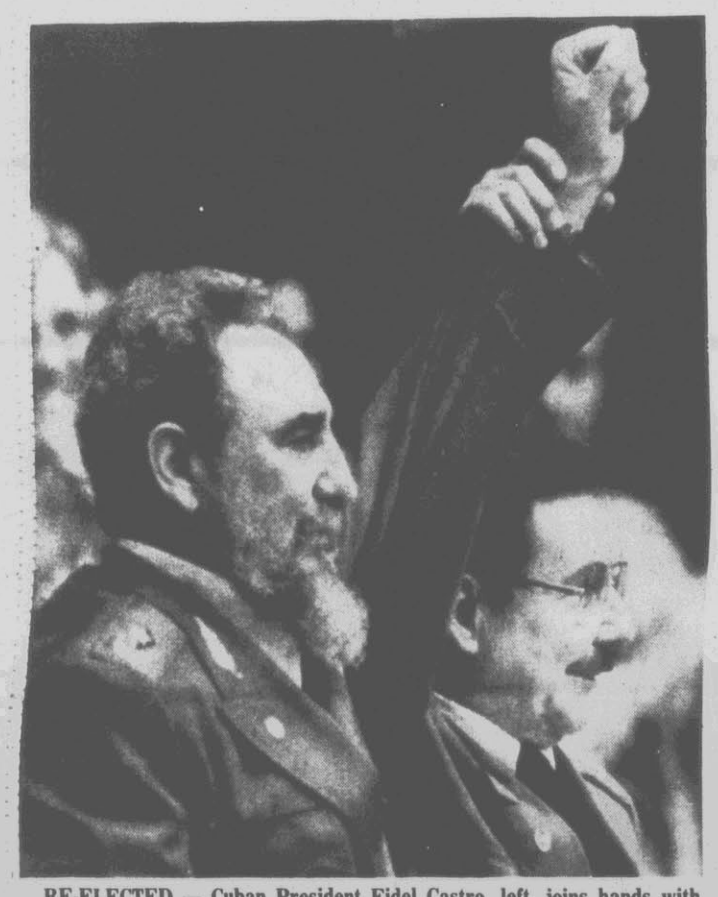

American and PLO officials came close to closing the gap between them during the Amman talks, bargaining through the Jordanians and private channels.

In one proposed statement approved by top PLO officials, the organization accepted talks with the "government of Israel" and dropped a prior demand for explicit U.S. acceptance of self-determination, saying instead it accepted Resolution 242 and all other pertinent U.N. measures.

But Arafat reinserted the self-determination demand during his final meeting with Hussein on Wednesday.

Al-Anbaa quoted Arafat as saying he would "pursue more efforts to give momentum to the Arab cause, and to try to push the American position into more understanding of the Palestinian cause."

But American action is limited by the need to bring along the Israelis, who only recently accepted a very limited version of the international peace conference the PLO and Jordan demanded a year ago. Israel still insists it can never deal with the PLO.

Peruvian President Declares Emergency

LIMA, Peru (AP) — President Alan Garcia imposed a state of emergency and a curfew on Lima and its port Saturday, ordering the military to quell the worst wave of violence in the capital in nearly six years of insurgency.

The state of emergency includes suspension of individual constitutional rights.

A decree published in the official newspaper El Peruano said it would take effect Saturday, and a curfew from 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. would begin Sunday.

The announcement did not say how long the measures would be in effect, but the constitution allows the president to declare a 60-day state of emergency and to extend it when it expires.

Constitutional guarantees that have been suspended include the right to bear firearms, to unrestricted travel, and to hold public meetings. During the emergency, security forces may search homes and make arrests without a warrant.

It was the first time a curfew has been imposed in Lima and its port of Callao since Peru ended 12 years of military rule in 1980.

Areas of the guerrilla warfare zone in southeastern Peru have been under a state of emergency since Maoist-oriented Shining Path rebels began their insurgency in May 1980.

The only other time Lima has been put under an emergency due to rebel violence was in May 1983, when former President Fernando Belaunde Terry declared a nationwide state of emergency after a series of Shining Path bombings around the country.

Farrakhan

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — American black activist Louis Farrakhan is on a five-day lecture tour in this West African nation after being barred from Britain.

Farrakhan, 50, a black-power advocate, has come under criticism in the United States for what was viewed as anti-Semitic rhetoric. He was invited to Britain by a black community group in London, but the Home Office barred his entry, saying he was a threat "to the public good."

He told reporters at Lagos airport he planned to spend five days lecturing throughout Nigeria as part of what he called a "power program tour" of Africa. He also was expected to meet Moslem and business leaders.

Space Gardeners Look To The Future

By ED MORENO
Associated Press Writer

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — There are millions and millions of them in space — 12.5 million, to be precise.

Not stars, but seeds — tomato seeds — tucked away in little canisters inside a special satellite, going around and around and around the Earth under the constant bombardment of unfiltered sunlight and radiation.

Growing tomatoes is one small part of the ecological system that must be studied, tested and perfected before man is ready to settle the last frontier.

"We really don't know about the effects of space radiation," said Diane Dudzinski, a College of Santa Fe biology professor who will supervise student experiments on the tomato seeds when they are retrieved next year.

The satellite carrying the millions of seeds was taken into space by the shuttle Columbia in April 1984. A shuttle mission last September was supposed to retrieve them, but there was no room, and the seeds will stay in space at least until next September.

Ms. Dudzinski said the objectives of the seeds in space program are to stimulate student interest in space science and to "look at the long-term radiation exposure effects on living plants."

She said the growing interest in space biology was prompted by a little-publicized comment President Reagan made during his second inaugural address when he proclaimed his commitment to a "manned presence in space."

Reagan intends for human beings, not just sophisticated robots, to live and work in space, Ms. Dudzinski said, and that means people will need a complete, clean, self-sufficient ecological system including food production, waste disposal and resource recycling.

Ms. Dudzinski has participated in summer fellowships with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the American Society of Science and Engineering Educators since 1982 and is one of several scientists involved in NASA's Controlled Environmental Life Support System experiments aimed at developing a self-contained environment in space.

She said NASA expects to establish a space station by 1992 and that a self-contained environment could be operational five years later.

But space gardeners will have to be prepared for the effects of heat, radiation and unfiltered sunlight on their seeds.

"I'm sure most of the effects will be deleterious," Ms. Dudzinski said.

Radiation experiments have been performed on plants and the plants generally have not done well — some are mutated, some simply die, others are bleached out and still others cannot process the nutrients they need to live.

The shuttle program already has contributed to space biologists' knowledge, Ms. Dudzinski said. As a result of the Columbia mission that landed at New Mexico's White Sands Missile Range in March 1982, scientists learned plants can get confused in zero gravity.

"The plants were distorted," she said. "Now we know that we have to use light or something to get the plants to grow up and the roots to grow down."

She said a gyroscope-type device is being developed in California to create an artificial gravity to help plants grow correctly.

As part of the numerous experiments that must be performed, NASA and Park Seed Co. of Greenwood, S.C., developed the SEEDS program — Space Exposed Experiment Developed for Students.

Next September, when the tomato seeds return to Earth on another shuttle, they will be distributed to colleges and high schools nationwide, where students will see what happens to seeds in space. Ms. Dudzinski said CSF expects to get 300 seeds for its experiments.

The flight seeds will be sent along with other seeds from the same batch that did not go into space, which will become a "control group" by which the space seeds' performance will be measured.

Ms. Dudzinski and student assistant Karen Pecoraro are growing regular tomatoes hydroponically in preparation for the seeds from space. Ms. Pecoraro said the nutrient solution provides "anything a plant could want in life."

Most are doing well now, their thin little roots coursing around a cloth wick that absorbs the liquid growth solution. But Ms. Pecoraro said they will do better with growing lights and other environmental improvements that must be installed before CSF gets its seeds from space.

Ms. Pecoraro said space crops probably will have to be grown "aeroponically," meaning they would receive their nutrition through an airborne mist because water and dirt would be too heavy to carry into space in large quantities.

Ms. Dudzinski said she fully expects the research she and others are doing will pay off and she already has begun additional work with lettuce, preparing for the day when man's first home-grown meal in space could be a tossed salad.

On The House

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A young couple thinking about buying a house had better have more than one income — unless that single income is in the stratosphere.

It used to be said a family could afford to purchase a house costing about the same as twice its annual gross income. "Its annual gross income" usually referred in those days to the amount earned by the man in the house.

No matter which yardstick is used to determine the potential ability of a family to purchase a house, it really is almost useless. Two families with the same income might not even come close to each other in what they can afford for housing. Family A, with two adults and four children, obviously spends a lot more for food, clothing, medical care and varied other things than Family B, with only two adults and far less expenses. That doesn't even take into account that Family B might have more savings and be able to afford a larger down payment.

How much money can be spent on the purchase of a house and how much for monthly mortgage payments depends on a large variety of factors. Nobody can determine what those figures should be without a detailed knowledge of the family's income, savings, normal expenses, debts, etc.

These days, a young couple must often wait longer to save the down payment necessary to buy their first home. It is ironic that this situation prevails even though incomes are higher than ever in history and mortgage interest rates are lower than they have been in years. That's because, among other things, the prices of houses and the down payment requirements are considerably higher.

A study of 1985 housing finance data was recently released by the U.S. League of Savings Institutions. It was based on 16,300 conventional mortgage loans made by savings institutions in the second quarter of the recently concluded year.

League Chairman Gerald Levy says the move to higher down payment requirements emphasized by the study "will almost certainly mean that young people may have to wait a bit longer to buy their first homes."

The study showed that the typical home buyer in 1985 was nearly 36 years old, three and one-half years older than a similar survey in 1977. Even the typical first-time house purchaser was more than 30 years old last year, the first time such buyers have crossed that age threshold.

One thing that appears to be evident is that conditions are making many home buyers return to more traditional financing patterns. Shorter-term mortgages are more in demand, for one thing. This means increases in home equity, a natural result of paying loans more quickly. Since the more money you have invested in your house is the equivalent of savings, this represents a counter trend to declining personal savings rates. But whatever it means and whether the trend continues, young couples know it is getting more and more difficult to buy a house.

Here's the Answer

Q. — I recently took apart a number of old cabinets with the idea of salvaging the wood. The biggest problem was the large number of old screws that could not be budged. Some of them came out the tiniest fraction of inch and would not come any further. I would like to know if there is any professional way of removing such stubborn screws.

A. — There is no one way. You have to use a trial-and-error method until you find one that works. Some of them, however, cannot be used if salvaging the wood intact is your purpose. The simplest of these is to grouge out the wood around the head of the screw until there is room to grip the head of the screw with a pliers and turn it counterclockwise. When a screw comes out a fraction of an inch, as you said, it usually can be gripped with one of the so-called locking pliers and then turned. This method may not work with ordinary pliers. With a locking pliers, you can grip the screw head, lock the jaws of the pliers and turn. Often it takes a considerable amount of strength to work the screw loose, but it can be done. Presumably you applied and let soak in one of the lubricants designed for "unfreezing" mechanical parts.

Q. — I am somewhat new to the finishing of wood. The other day I stripped the old finish off a piece of furniture and then stained it the shade I wanted. The trouble was the stain took very unevenly. In some places, it was one shade, in others a much darker color. What causes this and how can it be prevented?

A. — The uneven absorption of stain is caused by the use of a wood which is especially porous. Before applying stain, give the wood a coat of shellac diluted 50 percent with denatured alcohol. The shellac is a good sealer for almost every finish except polyurethane varnish, but it is fine for regular varnish.

Q. How tall will an American holly tree grow?
A. The American holly (Ilex ipaca) grows 50 to 60 feet tall.
Q. When should asparagus crowns be set out?
A. Between Nov. 15 and March 15 in the upper Coastal Plains and lower Piedmont. In western North Carolina delay planting 10 to 20 days in the spring and plant 10 to 20 days earlier in the fall. In eastern North Carolina plant seven to 14 days earlier in the spring and seven to 14 days later in the fall.
Q. What are some pointers on using treated wood in the garden?

A. The pressure-treated lumber that looks painted or stained green and is commonly sold at lumber yards has been treated with cromated arsenate or ammoniated copper arsenate. These two preservatives have very low tendency to leach into the soil. Limited studies have shown that there is little chance of ingesting arsenic in vegetables grown near treated lumber. However, because of the arsenic in the wood, it is advisable to wear rubber gloves and a dust mask when sawing the lumber.

Freshly treated creosote lumber can leach into the soil for several years and continue to give off vapors over seven to nine years. Young vegetable seedlings are likely to be killed if planted within six to 10 inches of newly treated creosote lumber the first two to three years. Available research does not verify how much creosote is taken up by plants. Keeping these points in mind and always exercising caution in the garden will assure safety with these materials.

Help Nongame and Endangered Wildlife

Before you mail your tax return, be sure to fill in line 23 of the state income tax form. That's the line that enables North Carolinians to donate a portion or all of their state income tax refund to the North Carolina Nongame and Endangered Wildlife Fund.

Last year, over 32,000 North Carolinians contributed approximately $300,000 to nongame projects through this checkoff. This money continued restoration projects for endangered bald eagles and peregrine falcons, protection of threatened loggerhead sea turtles and management of colonial waterbirds.

Conservation-education projects in schools were also funded, as well as the purchase of unique bottomland hardwood forests along the Roanoke River, and many other activities.

"We're proud of the accomplishments of the Nongame and Endangered Wildlife Program, and grateful for the support we've received from the citizens of North Carolina," said Debbie Paul, supervisor of the N.C. Wildlife Resource's Commission's Youth Activities and Environmental Quality Section.

"We hope to receive their support again this year. Our nongame and endangered wildlife projects in North Carolina depend on how our citizens fill out their tax returns in the next few months," she said.

Instructions on how to contribute can be found on page three of the booklet accompanying form D-400. A portion or all of your tax refund may be donated (but not less than $1). Donations are tax-deductible the following year.

If your tax returns are prepared professionally, tell your accountant that you wish to contribute. If you are not receiving a refund, but wish to support this program, tax-deductible contributions may be sent to the Nongame and Endangered Wildlife Fund, N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, 512 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Coglan Seeks Seventh Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Eamonn Coglan's bid for an unprecedented seventh victory in the Wanamaker Mile and a pole vault matchup between Joe Dial and Billy Olson will highlight the 79th Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden Feb. 14.

Coghlan, the 33-year-old Irishman, never has lost in the Wanamaker Mile. Another victory would give him the meet record which he now shares with track and field Hall of Famer Glenn Cunningham.

Coghlan also owns the world indoor best of 3 minutes, 49.78 seconds, and will be challenged by the next four-fastest indoor milers in history — Ray Flynn of Ireland, American record holder Steve Scott, Frank O'Mara of Ireland and Sydney Maree. Also in the field is Ireland's Marcus O'Sullivan, who ended Coghlan's 15-race indoor mile winning streak this year.

The pole vault marks the first meeting of the year between Dial, holder of the world indoor best at 19 feet, 4¾ inches, and Olson, who broke the world indoor best three times early this season. They will face three other 19-foot vaulters — Olympic champion Pierre Quinon of France, and Vasily Bubka, brother of outdoor world record holder Sergey Bubka, and Pavel Bogatyryov, both of the Soviet Union.

The men's high jump should be another hotly contested event. The field includes Sweden's Patrik Sjoberg and American record holder Jimmy Howard, ranked 1-2, respectively, in the world, along with two Soviets — outdoor world record holder Igor Paklin and former world record holder Rudolf Povarnitsin.

The men's 60-yard high hurdles also has the two best in the world — Olympic champion Roger Kingdom and silver medalist Greg Foster, both of the U.S.

Triple Olympic gold medalist Valerie Brisco-Hooks, nursing a tendon problem, is expected to be ready for the women's 200, against Olympic silver medalist Florence Griffith, Jamaican Olympian Grace Jackson and Pam Marshall.

Diane Dixon, owner of the world indoor best in the women's 400, will meet Romania's Christina Cojocaru and Lillie Leatherwood.

Czechoslovakia's Jarmila Kratochvilova, the outdoor world record holder at 800 meters, will be opposed by Delisa Walton-Floyd and Romania's Ella Kovacs.

Other men's standouts include Calvin Smith, Canada's Ben Johnson and Emmit King in the 60, Mike Conley and Larry Myricks in the long jump, Michael Franks, Antonio McKay and Jamaica's Bert Cameron in the 400, Kenya's Sammy Koskei in the 1,000, and Doug Padilla, John Walker of New Zealand, Henry Marsh and Suleiman Nyambui of Tanzania in the 3,000.

Air Force Suspends Charter Airline's Contract

By SANDY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force on Saturday temporarily suspended its contract with Arrow Air, whose charter flight last Dec. 12 crashed in Newfoundland and killed 248 U.S. soldiers returning home for Christmas.

The suspension came after the Federal Aviation Administration announced it has discovered unapproved, foreign-supplied spare parts in 10 planes operated by the small charter airline, more than half of its fleet.

The FAA said unapproved spare parts were found in DC-8s, the same aircraft that crashed on takeoff in Newfoundland.

The FAA in effect grounded the 10 planes in question until the unapproved parts are replaced. The Air Force went further, suspending military passenger flights indefinitely and military cargo flights through Tuesday.

The Miami-based airline has contracts with the Air Force totaling more than $20 million.

Arrow spokesman Robin Matell said Saturday called the FAA action "totally incomprehensible because all airlines — large and small — operating outside the United States use these same parts."

"The FAA had previously given us permission to use these parts, which were certified by an FAA-approved repair station in Europe," he said.

However, Matell said, the airline agreed to change the parts quickly and expects to have "all planes flying by early next week."

Matell also said that the parts in three of the DC8s already had been changed, so that those planes wouldn't be affected by the grounding. But FAA spokesman Bob Buckhorn said Saturday evening that Arrow would have to provide the government with proof of the corrections before flying them and he did not know if Arrow had done so Saturday.

"Today the U.S. Air Force curtailed Arrow Air military contract passenger flights until such time as the results of an ongoing FAA inspection are known and reviewed," the Air Force said in a statement.

The FAA said the unapproved parts were found in inspections within the last two days.

The inspections were part of an FAA special investigation announced in January of all airlines involved in military charter work.

"In light of the accident in Newfoundland, we certainly felt it was important to take a very close look at all military charter operations," said FAA spokesman Stephen Hayes.

The action against Arrow Air, which could result in heavy fines, was the first stemming from the investigation, Hayes said.

Canadian investigators have yet to announce their findings on the cause of the Gander crash that killed members of the 101st Airborne Division who were returning to Fort Campbell, Ky., from duty in the Mideast. The tragedy sparked House subcommittee hearings last week at which congressmen questioned whether Arrow should continue under government contract until concerns about its performance and safety record were answered.

However, as late as Friday, the Air Force was denying any action would be taken against the airline.

On Saturday, the Air Force said that as a "precautionary measure," it was temporarily curtailing Arrow Air's operations "until the full ramifications of the foreign-supplied parts issue are understood and resolved."

Arrow was scheduled to fly six flights for the Air Force through Tuesday, Col. Pete Sloan said. He did not know the extent of Arrow's contract beyond that period.

Hayes said Arrow purchased the unapproved parts along with an airplane from Iberia Airlines, a European airline.

"A total of 68 spare parts in 10 aircraft — all of them DC8s — have been identified. These parts range from valves and pumps to actuators and brake pads. The use of these parts does not necessarily reduce safety. However, it is essential that each part in an aircraft meet FAA standards.

"Because Arrow does not have the proper documentation for the spare parts — which were obtained from a foreign supplier — the FAA cannot be immediately assured that these parts meet FAA certification requirements," the FAA said.

Hayes said FAA officials met Friday with Arrow management, and the airline agreed to cease using the 10 planes until the parts were replaced.

Hayes said it was difficult to say how long the planes would be out of service, noting that some of them were overseas. "In the case of some of the planes, I believe it could be a very short period of time — a few days," he said.

Computerized Trading Causes Disturbing Trend On Market

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street ended the week with another record high under its belt, but some traders are disturbed by what they call the growing effect of computerized buying and selling programs that influence stock prices without regard to economic fundamentals that historically have shaped the market.

These programs, used by a few big brokerage houses, automatically sell quality stocks and buy stock futures when the stock price exceeds the futures price, and automatically buy stocks and sell the futures when the stock price falls below the futures price. The investors therefore profit no matter what.

Instead of the loud, raucous rallies or selloffs that most outsiders envision when thinking of the stock exchange floor, these mass transactions happen in sterile, silent rooms between pre-programmed computers.

What's more, some traders argue, such automated buy-sell programs bear no relation to a stock's actual value and can hurt investors who play the market based on what they believe the stock is worth.

The big swings of the Dow Jones industrial average, which has risen more than 300 points since late September, are partly attributed by some Wall Street analysts to the automated buy-sell programs, because they are activated at the same time and greatly increase the number of shares traded.

"This is something that's happened only lately. It's surprising the number of people who aren't aware it's going on," said John J. Smith of Fahnestock and Co., a Wall Street investment firm. "It's really had the most profound effect on the swings on the market which we've never had before."

Believers and non-believers in these computerized transactions agree that at least part of the Dow Jones industrial average's record 39.10-point plunge Jan. 8 was linked to a mass of sell-program orders activated by the computers.

Likewise, they say a surge of orders from buy-programs last Monday contributed to the indicator's 23.28-point surge, and played a role in some seesaw market behavior during the course of the week.

"These programs trade hour by hour, day by day. This is going on all the time," said Michael Metz, an analyst with Oppenheimer & Co., a New York investment firm. "They tend to exaggerate moves once they are under way."

On the strength of a 42.43-point weekly rise, the Dow Jones industrial average finished at a new closing high of 1,1613.42, the third record set in the week and the 25th record high since the rally began in late September 1985.

Other readings for the week showed the New York Stock exchange composite index up 1.58 at 123.71, and the American Stock Exchange market value index up 1.70 at 245.57. Volume on the Big Board averaged 149.16 million shares a day, compared with 146.36 million shares a day the week before.

Some investment brokers who do not have computerized buy-sell programs complain it is becoming increasingly difficult to compete against the large brokers that use the programs because they can make the value of a particular stock deceptively high or low.

"If I go out there and smell a sell program, I won't buy," said a trader for the Minneapolis investment firm of Piper Jaffray & Hopwood Inc., who spoke on the condition he would not be identified.

"If I were the public, I wouldn't want to be in this market," he said. "I'm afraid this is going to continue. I'm afraid you're going to see violent moves in this market, with unquestionably large volume."

Others say the large swings in the Dow Jones industrial average are less worrisome because the indicator is now such a large number. Last month's record drop, for example, represented only a tiny percentage of the overall average. "A drop of 20 points in the Dow now is like 10 points a few years ago," said Robert Colby, an analyst with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. in New York. He disputed the argument that the programs influence the market.

"For 15 minutes up to half a day I think the programs can be a dominant force," he said. "But there is no effect on long-term trends."

Some analysts see the programs as an innovation that eventually will lose attractiveness because they are getting more popular.

"That's the history of markets," Colby said. "Something is profitable for awhile, then as more people do it, it becomes less profitable."

Tobacco Products Restricted

RICHMOND (AP) — A store clerk who knowingly sells cigarettes or chewing tobacco to a minor would face up a year in jail and a $1,000 fine under a bill passed by the Virginia Senate.

The bill sponsored by Sen. Madison E. Marye, D-Montgomery, was approved on a 30-9 vote Friday after two floor amendments that would have weakened it were killed.

The bill would make the intentional selling of tobacco products to people under age 18 a Class I misdemeanor.

Sen. Clarence A. Holland, D-Virginia Beach, offered an amendment that would have applied the criminal sanction to parents who allowed their children to obtain smoking materials.

But Marye opposed the change as an effort to weaken the measure, and Sen. Howard P. Anderson, D-Halifax, said Holland's move was intended to give the bill "the shad treatment."

"A parent cannot follow a minor around 24 hours a day and aggressively prevent the minor from purchasing cigarettes," said Sen. Wiley F. Mitchell, R-Alexandria.

Holland's amendment failed on a 29-10 vote.

Sen. Richard L. Saslaw, D-Fairfax, then offered an amendment to reduce the criminal penalty to a Class III misdemeanor, which carries a maximum $500 fine with no jail term.

"I believe the penalty is too severe," said Sen. William E. Fears, D-Accomack. "You can't separate those ages when they come in there. It's bad enough on beer."

He said it would be unfair to place a store clerk under threat of jail when a person convicted of possessing a small amount of marijuana faces a smaller penalty.

But Sen. Joseph V. Gartlan Jr., D-Fairfax, said the marijuana possession comparison was unfair. The proper comparison, he said, would be to look at the penalty for selling marijuana.

Saslaw's amendment failed on a voice vote.

Marye's bill was opposed by Sen. Edward E. Willey, D-Richmond.

"You can't legislate morals," Willey said.

Millions Waiting To Be Claimed In Mississippi

By JOHN DINGMAN
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — There are millions of dollars in unclaimed funds in Mississippi, just waiting for Southerners to claim their share.

The funds, estimated at as much as $4 million, were left in bank accounts, savings and loans, insurance companies, credit unions and similar institutions in the state by people who forgot about them, or died without withdrawing the money.

State Treasurer Bill Cole is the official entrusted with custody of the funds, and he is proud of the fact that the money always will be available to the rightful owners.

"In the past," he has said, "unclaimed and dormant accounts in financial and other institutions were either charged off to the institution with the owner or heirs losing their rights to the property."

In some states, the money becomes government property after a set period of time. But in Mississippi, the cash will be held indefinitely until it is claimed.

Right now, some 600 claims are pending, says Elizabeth Booth, the administrative assistant who handles the funds. They range from a few dollars to one as large as $15,000.

That developed when someone recognized one of the names on the list of unclaimed accounts, and tipped off the family living in a neighboring state. "The account holder had died," Ms. Booth said, "and now we have ten heirs claiming the money."

"They thought the man had nothing, and suddenly they find out he had $15,000 in the bank," she said.

And, she said, the heirs will share in the money once they have established the claim.

They have come up with a will naming them as the inheritors, and are in the process of proving they are the legitimate heirs.

Ms. Booth says the Treasurer's Office tries to handle the claims quickly, but she admits it can be a long process.

Frequently when people write, they do not include the necessary information, such as account and bank records, insurance policies or wills.

That means a letter of inquiry from the state, and still more correspondence from the claimant.

"But we will go the extra mile to try to solve the case," she says.

She is proud of the fact that the office never has had anyone dispute a payment after it has been made, claiming it was given to the wrong person. And she is happy that there is no time limit on the claims.

"When I am dead and gone, the money will still be there," she said.

Lifetime Adds Reruns With Female Appeal

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Lifetime continues to move away from its phone-in format. In addition to adding a third daily movie, the network has now added a new block of reruns, all of them with strong female characters, to fill its 7-9 p.m. (ET) time slot.

The most prominent of the group is "Family," the acclaimed late-'70s prime-time soap about a middle-class family starring Sada Thompson, Kristy McNichol and Meredith Baxter Birney. It airs at 7 p.m. (ET).

Running from 8-9 p.m. (ET) weeknights are five short-lived, seemingly forgettable shows. They include: "Cover Up," the 1984 detective series starring Jennifer O'Neill and the late Jon Erik Hexum; "Partners in Crime," another extremely short-lived 1984 series with Loni Anderson and Lynda Carter as detectives who were both ex-wives of the same man; "American Girls," a 1978 sitcom starring Priscilla Barnes as a TV reporter; "Cassie and Company," Angie Dickinson's forgettable follow-up series to "Police Woman"; and "From Here to Eternity," based on James Jones' World War II novel. The 1980 series, which was spun off from an earlier miniseries, is notable now for the presence of "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson, then a relatively unknown actor.

On St. Valentine's Day, The Arts & Entertainment Network airs a sleeper of a romantic movie: John Frankenheimer's 1973 film "Story of a Love Story." Alan Bates plays a writer who believes he is having an extramarital affair with a French housewife (Dominique Sanda). The movie plays with one's sense of reality in much the same way as Antonioni's classic film "Blow Up."

A mermaid, a caveman, an apeman and a couple of extraterrestrials. HBO believes this motley crew has something in common. In its ever-expanding (or is it increasingly desperate?) search to attract viewers, the pay-cable network has packaged five recent films in a series this week it's calling "Out of Time, Out of Place."

Commander

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The former commander of the Naval Air Rework Facility, accused of misusing $175,000 in public money, has been given a punitive letter of reprimand, fined $3,000, and relieved of his command, Navy officials said.

Capt. Bruce A. Ryan, 43, had been charged with using the money to renovate his office, improve his living quarters and throw private parties, said Navy spokesman Nick Young. He also was accused of giving and receiving unauthorized gifts, Young said.

Ryan is being allowed to retired April 1, officials said.

Soviets Will Allow 19 To Leave

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, just back from a trip to Moscow, said Saturday that Soviet authorities have agreed to permit 19 additional citizens to emigrate, including several long-term "refuseniks."

Speaking at a crowded news conference, the Massachusetts Democrat also told reporters that Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev said "in unmistakable terms that there are no preconditions for negotiating immediate reductions" in intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

The Soviets have been insisting that President Reagan abandon his so-called "Star Wars" space-based missile defense system as a precursor to nuclear arms agreements.

In addition to an intermediate-range agreement, Gorbachev indicated that a comprehensive test ban pact is possible without progress on the Star Wars issue, Kennedy said.

The senator also said that Gorbachev indicated that without specific progress in one of the areas of arms control talks under way in Geneva "he expressed doubt as to whether a second summit would be justified, or whether it should take place at all."

Reagan and Gorbachev agreed at their Geneva summit last fall to hold a second meeting later this year, perhaps as early as June. Questioned about Gorbachev's intentions, Kennedy said he did not mean to suggest that if there is no agreement, Gorbachev would not be willing to meet again with the president.

"But he questioned the value of such" a return meeting, Kennedy said.

Kennedy met with Gorbachev for more than 2½ hours during his three-day visit to Russia and said that he had submitted in advance lists of individuals who had been denied permission to emigrate. He said 25 of them, in the words of the Soviets, have "been favorable consideration consistent with Soviet laws," and soon will be in the West.

He added that six of the 25 already have left the Soviet Union.

In addition, he said he he had "been given assurances at the highest levels that other individuals will be given positive consideration whenever possible under Soviet laws."

Aides distributed a list that showed the remaining 19 refuseniks included two brothers who first applied to leave in 1971: Grigory Goldstein and his younger brother Isai Goldstein.

The list also included Yuri Estrov, who first sought permission to leave the Soviet Union in 1982. The list did not indicate when the other refuseniks had applied for exit visas.

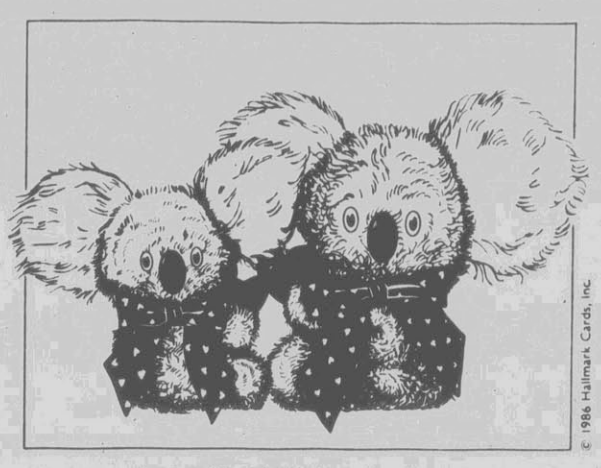

Kennedy said his discussions with Gorbachev covered arms control, human rights and regional conflicts, as well as other bilateral issues. In an extraordinary gesture, the Soviets agreed to tape a television address for broadcast to the Soviet people, and the speech by Kennedy will appear Sunday evening.

Kennedy said there was discussion of the two most prominent Soviet dissidents, Andrei Sakharov and Anatoly Shcharansky "but I will have no further comment on them, it was my responsibility to press the human rights issue forcefully and I believe I fulfilled that responsibility."

In an interview published Saturday in the French Communist Party daily L'Humanite, Gorbachev said Sakharov cannot leave the Soviet Union because he "still has knowledge of secrets of special importance to the state."

The Soviet leader said the dissident physicist who won the Nobel Peace Prize had violated Soviet law and "measures were taken ... in accordance with our legislation."

on the street. Besides distributing posters and advertising, we have the support of the IACP's 15,000 member departments. And we've received solid support from the National Center for Missing Children in Washington, D.C. As police departments, social-welfare agencies and the kids become more familiar with the program, it will do what it is supposed to do—increase the daily number of kids going home."

"When we started the program, we brought home an average of nine children a day," Rydell adds. "Now we're up to 16, so we've almost doubled our numbers. But with the missing children and runaway problem still so great, we will not be satisfied until we're taking 100 kids home each day. We just have to keep getting word out about the program."

During his ride home from Miami, where we first met him, Dennis Gaudet told PARADE: "If anybody asks me if they should run away, I'm going to smack them in the head and tell them what I learned and saw with all the unfortunate kids. And if that doesn't change their minds, they will definitely change after they get out there for themselves. They will probably see other runaways selling their bodies or becoming bums, asking everybody that walks by for a quarter or a nickel... There's no place like home. No matter how bad it is, it's better than the street."

How To Get Home

If you are on the street:
Go to a police officer or station, any youth-service office or child-welfare agency, or any Trailways ticket office. Ask for help. If possible, contact your parents or another relative first to make sure your name is on the Missing Persons list. If your home situation is difficult, phone one of the numbers listed here for advice and assistance.

Parents:
As soon as you suspect that your child is missing or has run away, put his/her name on the Missing Persons list through your local police station.

Runaways or parents can telephone:

The Butterflies of the World

PORCELAIN SCULPTURE COLLECTION

Individually crafted sculptures in fine porcelain with delicate hand-painting.

So exceptional an artist is Brian Hargreaves of Great Britain that he was commissioned to portray the gardens and butterflies of Buckingham Palace for Queen Elizabeth II. And his works have been exhibited at the Smithsonian Institution and the British Museum of Natural History. Now he brings his talent to the design of an exclusive collection of porcelain sculptures: The Butterflies of the World.

This intriguing new collection makes it possible for you to have a garden of butterflies and flowers in your home all year long! Fifteen delightful butterflies in their own natural floral settings — representing all fifteen butterfly families that exist in nature's kingdom.

You'll be able to display this miniature butterfly collection attractively in your home. For you will receive, as part of the collection, a beautiful étagère of brass and glass to hold all the sculptures.

Brian Hargreaves' designs are so finely detailed that each delicate wing of a butterfly and each petal of a flower is precisely as you see it in nature. From the Monarch Butterfly with its bright orange coloring ... to the boldly-striped Zebra Longwing ... and the spectacular Malachite with emerald-shaped wings.

The variety of colors is astonishing. Brilliant reds and rich purples ... soft greens and deep golds ... subtle pinks and pale violets ... every shade and tone nature has given to these charming creatures of flight.

Each imported sculpture will be sent to you along with reference information about the butterfly portrayed, and a Certificate of Authenticity will also be provided.

To acquire the collection, please mail your application by February 28, 1986.

Ashford Makes Fine Return

EAST RUTHEFORD, N.J. (AP) — Evelyn Ashford made a triumphant return to track competition Saturday night, winning the women's 55-meter dash, and Diane Dixon smashed her American record in the women's 400 in the Vitalis-U.S. Olympic Invitationl meet at the Meadowlands Arena.

The victory by Ashford, the 1984 Olympic 100-meter champion and 400-meter relay gold medalist, was highly popular with the crowd of 12.914.

So was the swift race run by the 21-year-old Dixon, who led all the way in winning in 52.13 seconds, well under the mark of 52.20 she had run Feb. 22, 1985 at New York.

The world indoor best is 49.59, by Jarmila Kratochvilova of Czechoslovakia, set May 7, 1982, at Milan, Italy.

Dixon had just missed winning this race last year, losing to Valerie Brisco-Hooks in a controversial finish that was not decided until five days after the event. Brisco-Hooks was entered Saturday night, but withdrew Friday because of a tendon injury.

Ashford had not competed since Aug. 31, 1984, taking time off to prepare for the birth of her first child. A daughter, Raina, was born last May.

The men's 55 meters, won by Ben Johnson of Canada, was run without Olympic quadruple gold medalist Carl Lewis, who pulled out when he discovered he would have to run in a qualifying heat.

Immediately after her victory, Ashford took her daughter from the hands of her husband, Ray Washington, and carried the child around the track in a victory lap.

"I had promised her that if I won, I'd take her around for my victory lap — and I kept my promise to her," the elated Ashford said.

Ashford was simply brilliant. She broke out front quickly and never was headed as she blazed to victory in 6.68 seconds.

During her pregnancy, Ashford had gained 50 pounds, and in her first time back on the track, for a workout last June, she said she couldn't even run around the track once.

But shortly afterward, she had lost all the extra weight and had regained her 5-foot-5, 118-pound figure.

Not only did she run well — she also won her heat easily — but she sparkled in a tight silver leotard.

Ashford did not have an easy race in the final.

Merlene Ottey-Page, the bronze medalist in the Olympic 100 two years ago at Los Angeles, finished a close second in 6.70, with Pam Marshall third in 6.79.

Ashford said that her race Saturday "does not compare to the Olympic Games or any other major competition."

"It was my first meet back and it felt great that I won," she said excitedly.

Williams Golf Is Rained Out

SAN DIEGO (AP) - A steady rain washed out play Saturday in the third round of the $450,000 Shearson Lehman Bros. Andy Williams Open Golf Tournament.

Play was held up at 9:15 a.m. PST when the steady showers flooded portions of the Torrey Pines South course. Play was canceled at 1:10 p.m. PST.

Rain Hits LPGA Event

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — The third round of the LPGA's $200,000 Sarasota Classic was suspended because of heavy rain Saturday.

Play on the par 72, 6,124-yard Bent Tree Country Club course was halted at 10:30 a.m. and tournament officials announced three hours later that the round would resume Sunday morning.

Golfers who already were on the course will begin play where they left off Saturday.

The final round, originally scheduled for Sunday, was pushed back to Monday. The winner will earn $30,000.

Defending champion Patty Sheehan, who shot a 69 Friday for a 36-hole total of 7-under-par 137, held a one stroke over Stephanie Farwig after two rounds.

Allison Finney was two shots back at 139, followed by Patti Rizzo, Barb Thomas and Janes Geddes, all at 3-under-par 141.

None of the leaders had started play before rain washed out the round. Officials said 44 of the 83 professionals who survived Friday's cut of 5-over-par 149 were on the course when action was suspended.

Sheehan, a 14-time tour winner who also led after Thursday's first round, is trying to become the first player to win this 11-year-old event twice.

Indians Ambush UNC-W, 73-64

WILMINGTON (AP) — Ken Lambiotte scored a career-high 18 points and William & Mary sank 25 of 29 free throws to down North Carolina-Wilmington 73-64 in Colonial Athletic Association basketball Saturday night.

The Indians, 6-15 and 2-8, shot 63.2 percent from the floor, including 64.7 percent in the second half. The Seahawks, 13-10 and 4-6, shot only 35.4 percent from the floor.

The Indians jumped out to a 13-2 lead with 15:22 left in the opening half with Lambiotte keying the spurt with seven points. The Seahawks then went on a 16-4 run to take an 18-17 lead on a jumper by Sandy Anderson, who scored 13 points for the Seahawks.

The Indians regained the lead en route to a 34-28 halftime lead.

The Indians increased the lead to 39-28 in the first few minutes of the second half, and although the Seahawks cut the margin to three on several occasions, they could get no closer.

Scott Coval and Greg Burzell added 13 points each for the Indians, while Mark Batzel had 11.

Greg Bender led the Seahawks with 14 points and Charles Cherry added 10 and nine rebounds.

People Turn On Secret Militia

Haiti's Joy Turns Violent

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haitians celebrated the end of 28 years of repressive rule with looting, parades and revenge killings Saturday. Soldiers of the new ruling council disarmed and also protected the hated private militiamen of deposed President Jean-Claude Duvalier.

Reporters told of seeing members of the Tonton Macoutes militia beaten and hacked to death with machetes Friday and Saturday. Associated Press reporter Art Candell saw at least 100 bodies stacked in a sweltering, unrefrigerated morgue at the General Hospital. He was unable to tell how they died or when they were brought to the hospital.

Dr. Sinora Nassar, a doctor who spent 24 hours at the General Hospital's emergency room, told The Associated Press about 20 bodies of civilians and security forces, most with bullet wounds, had been received at the hospital since Friday morning.

Most of the victims were believed to be Tonton Macoutes, the private army set up by Duvalier's father, Francois, to stifle dissent. When Francois Duvalier died in 1971, Jean-Claude, at the age of 19, inherited the militia, the title "president-for-life," and the near-absolute power he held for 15 years in the western hemisphere's poorest country.

He gave it all up Friday, fleeing his Caribbean island nation with his family and 20 guards and aides in a U.S. Air Force plane for a temporary refuge in France.

The new military-civilian council, which took over the government, announced Cabinet appointments Saturday.

It also extended for a second day the 2 p.m.-to-6 a.m. curfew imposed Friday. However, stores in the main shopping district, fearful of looters, closed hours ahead of the curfew.

International flights in and out of Haiti were canceled and the airport was closed and guarded by soldiers.

Sporadic gunfire was heard in the suburbs and downtown as soldiers and police tried to prevent a recurrence of Friday's widespread looting. Street crews swept up glass and debris.

At one Tonton Macoutes station in the hillside suburb of Petionville, soldiers Saturday morning controlled an angry, screaming crowd trying to get at 30 militiamen inside the walled compound.

A Baptist minister who identified himself as Jean E. Raymond said the crowd had gathered to protest the Macoutes' killing of two people Friday.

The Macoutes inside shot and wounded a woman and child in the crowd. The army then surrounded the post, arrested the men who allegedly fired the shots and confiscated rifles from the post.

Also in Petionville, the Leopards, the Army's Special Forces Unit, surrounded the militia's regional headquarters, disarmed eight Tonton Macoutes, and sent them away under army and police guard. They included the Macoutes' commander, Paul Vericain, also the mayor of Petionville.

A reporter for a Haitian radio station who spoke on condition of anonymity said he saw a Macoute shoot himself in the head with a pistol when he was cornered by a screaming mob near the capital's National Cemetery.

Other reporters said they saw youths jump from a pickup truck in the capital's downtown and grab a man believed to be one of the Tonton Macoutes, Creole for "Uncle Bogeymen." The man was thrown into the truck bed and beaten with sticks.

"You can bet there won't be a live Macoute around by next week," said a police officer guarding the ransacked auto dealership of Duvalier's father-in-law, Ernest Bennett.

A band playing drums and traditional instruments danced down a street Saturday morning carrying a human head on an end of pole.

At the international airport, hungry slum residents looted a CARE warehouse where tons of flour and other foodstuffs had been stored. Soldiers fired into the air to disperse the looters, who staggered away bearing sacks of flour on their heads.

The new governing council, headed by army chief of staff Gen. Henri Namphy, said four of its members would hold Cabinet posts.

They are Gerard Gourgue, former president of the Haitian Human Rights Commission, minister of justice; Col. Williams Regala, minister of interior and national defense in charge of domestic security forces; Col. Max Valles, minister of information, and Alex Cineas, who was public works minister under Duvalier, now minister without portfolio.

Others named to the Cabinet were Jacques Francois, foreign affairs; Marcel Ledger, finance and economy; Odonel Fenestor, commerce and industry; Rosnex Desroches, education, youth and sports; Pierre Petit, public works; Rony Auguste, social affairs; Dr. Simphar Boutemps, public health, and Montegue Cantave, agriculture and natural resources.

Gregoire Eugene, founder of the opposition Social Christian Party, said Saturday that Gourgue told him the governing council was considering measures to control the Tonton Macoutes.

"They are considering a communique ordering everyone having a firearm to turn it in at the nearest police," Eugene told AP.

Gourgue predicted two days before Duvalier fled that disarming the Tonton Macoutes "will become one of the major issues facing any new government."

Estimates of the number of Macoutes vary from 10,000 to 15,000. The police and army together number 8,000.

The military forces have more modern firearms and equipment, but the Macoutes were for years the prevailing force in the countryside.

The capital also faced the danger of a food shortage, said George Butler of the private Haitian Development Foundation, which loans money to small businesses.

City markets were well stocked Saturday with citrus fruits and vegetables, but bread, sugar, grains, flour and other basics were dwindling.

"If farm produce dries up from the countryside and the United States doesn't help out, within a week Port-au-Prince will be in a starvation situation," said Butler, of Nyack, N.Y.

"Money needs to be poured into Haiti immediately so the people won't loose hope and think things have gone from bad to worse."

Miss Peele, Mr. Weller Marry In Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — The Memorial Baptist Church was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Jennifer Lynn Peele and Joseph Lawrence Weller. Joseph Peterson performed the double ring ceremony at high noon.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William Daniel Peele Sr. of Route 2, Williamston, and Mr. and Mrs. George Wendell Williams of Route 1, Williamston, and the late John L. Weller.

Mrs. Wayne Hopkins and Mrs. Bermey Stevens presented a program of nuptial music.

Katherine S. Arndt of Raleigh was the matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Deborah Whitley and Angela Peele of Williamston, Sarah Weller of Fayetteville and Donna Weller of New Bern, Patti Malone of Atlanta, Ga., and Pamelas White of Wilmington.

MRS. WELLER

The stepfather of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Dale Hopkins of New Bern, Danny Peele of Raleigh, Jeffrey Weller of Fayetteville, John Weller of New Bern, Tommy Peele and Phillip Peaks of Williamston.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory taffeta designed with an open neckline outlined with alencon lace beaded with pearls and sequins. The fitted bodice was overlaid in taffeta and beaded alencon lace. Matching lace encircled the modified waistline. The Renaissance sleeves were fashioned with taffeta and alencon lace which extended to calla points over the wrist. The full circular skirt and attached cathedral length train were accented by a border of alencon and ruffled chantilly lace. Motifs of matching lace were scattered over the train and skirt. She wore a halo of rolled schiffli lace flowers with a pearl edged pouf, flounce and veil. She carried a formal cascade of white roses, stephanotis and streamers of satin ribbon.

Each of the attendants wore a formal gown of royal matte taffeta designed with an open neckline outlined with ruffled taffeta accented with a self-fabric rossette. Gathered taffeta defined the off-shoulder short cap sleeves. The fitted bodice extended to a basque waistline from which fell the gathered skirt. Each carried a nosegay of white carnations and daisies accented with streamers of satin ribbons.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall given by the bride's parents.

After a wedding trip to Massanutten, Va., the couple will live in Williamston.

The bride is deputy clark at Martin County Clerk of Superior Court and the bridegroom is a superintendent with Perdue, Inc. in Robersonville. She graduated from N.C. State University and he is a graduate of Martin Community College.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner at the church. The couple was honored at a social hour, miscellaneous shower and brunch, dinner party and country shower prior to their wedding.

Surgeons Wanted

If a major war were to break out tomorrow, the U.S. Army would find itself dangerously short of physicians on active duty in the two most critical wartime medical specialties: general surgery (30% short) and orthopedics, the branch of surgery dealing with bones, joints and related structures (59% short). The Defense Department, however—in an internal report compiled in 1984 but not released to the Senate Armed Services Committee until last October—revealed that the military was 100% staffed with physicians who are specialists in dermatology, pediatrics and preventive medicine.

Behind the PLO

Where does the Palestine Liberation Organization, headed by Yasser Arafat, get money to pay its troops and officials and to finance its existence? According to an Arab banker interviewed recently in Der Spiegel (The Mirror), a West German newsweekly, the PLO over the years has structured a financial empire worth at least $6 billion.

Its hub is the Arab Bank, headquartered in Amman, Jordan, with branches in 20 other cities throughout the world. The PLO, the banker maintains, controls 70% of Jordan's economy, also owns hotels in the Middle East, an airline in the Maldive Islands in the Indian Ocean, and a stock portfolio heavy in shares of leading U.S. and European corporations.

Arafat: Head of financial empire?

Occupied Berlin

Forty years after the end of World War II, Germans in West Berlin still are living under laws and orders issued in 1945 by the Occupation Powers—France, Great Britain, the U.S. and the Soviet Union. Those laws are so numerous, arbitrary and complicated that the average West Berliner has small idea of what is legal and what is not.

Under occupation regulations, which number in the hundreds, anyone found hostile or antagonistic toward the Allied powers can be fined or sentenced to jail. A U.S. military patrol recently stopped a resident in Zehlendorf, a surburb of Berlin, and demanded to see his identification papers. The man asked what he had done. The Americans said he had done nothing—they just wanted to see his papers. When the man refused, the patrol turned him over to the West Berlin police. In the ensuing trial in a civilian court, the judge explained that the defendant had committed no crime worthy of punishment. Under occupation law, however, some punishment was mandatory. The judge fined the man $160, which Amnesty International paid.

The Natchez Trace, A Journey Through American History

By SCOTT REEVES
Associated Press Writer

ROCKY SPRINGS, Miss. (AP) — The Natchez Trace Parkway is a journey through some of the most scenic country in the nation and a good chunk of its history.

Stretching nearly 450 miles from Nashville, Tenn. to Natchez, Miss., the parkway follows the route once used by pioneers heading for the frontier.

The history and beauty of the route are detailed in "The Natchez Trace," by Patti Carr Black with photographs by Harold Young, a book recently published by the University Press of Mississippi.

"I've always been interested in the Natchez Trace," said Black, director of the State Historical Museum. "It's a visual reminder of our history all across the state."

Young said he shot about 3,000 frames with a Hasselblad or four-by-five camera over seven years. About 75 photos are used in the book.

"It didn't start out as a book," Young said. "I just started taking pictures. As I drove up and down the trace, I'd just stop and shoot."

Young, a retired insurance agent, already had published a book on the Vicksburg Military Park when a friend suggested he do a book on the Natchez Trace.

"It takes a lot of time to do a book like this — you want different seasons and different lighting. I made many trips up and down the trace."

According to the book, French explorers pushed into the deep South in the eighteenth century and found a number of footpaths linking Indian villages. The explorers called the trails a "trace," or a line of footprints or animal tracks.

The network of paths led northeast from the Mississippi River at what is now Natchez through Choctaw, Chickasaw and possibly Cherokee tribal lands to Nashville. In 1716, the French set up a post at Natchez to trade with the Indians. Traders referred to "the patch through the Choctaw Nation" and the "Chickasaw trace" as they traveled inland.

In 1763, the French ceded the Natchez area to the British. English-speaking settlers used portions of the old Indian trials to enter the new territory. During the Revolutionary War, the Spanish took over the Natchez territory and made it part of the Louisiana Colony.

Spain encouraged people to settle in the territory and American settlers continued to flow down the trace. The United States gained control of the area in 1798 and Natchez became the capital of the new Mississippi Territory.

Towns grew along the route as the Natchez Trace became the primary route for settlers bound for what was then the western frontier.

The trace also was a commercial route, used for the trip home by the "Kaintucks." The boatmen used flatbottom boats to ship farm goods from the Ohio Valley to New Orleans. At the end of each trip, the boatmen generally dismantled their boats and sold them for lumber. They then walked home along the Trace.

With the invention of the steamboat in 1811, river traffic could now easily travel upstream. Within 10 years, there were about 60 steamboats on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers and the importance of the land route began to decline.

By the 1830s, the Natchez Trace was no longer an important national route. The forest and grassland quickly grew back. But sections of it continued to be used for local travel.

During the depression of the 1930s, President Roosevelt searched for projects to create jobs. And in 1937, funds were appropriated for the consruction of the parkway.

The parkway has not been completed around Jackson, and travelers must use Interstate highways to travel through the Capital. When complete, the Natchez Trace Parkway will be 449 miles long, including 313 miles in Mississippi, 33 miles in Alabama and 103 miles in Tennessee.

"It's one of the finest national parks we have," Young said. "I've seen a lot of our parks — I've been as far west as the Grand Canyon. But the Natchez Trace is one of my favorites."

AMERICAN SAMPLER — An American sampler embroidered by a nine-year-old Massachusetts girl around 1800 was sold Feb. 1 at auction. The price realized for the piece was $101,750, a record for an American needlepoint, according to Sotheby's auction house in New York. (AP Laserphoto)

Free N.C. Material

Two booklets focusing on coastal North Carolina have been published recently. Both are free and available to interested persons.

"North Carolina Outer Banks Vacation Guide," a 130 page small format (three by nine inches) publication is primarily a compilation of advertisements of the area. However, it contains a handy calendar of events throughout the year, as well as useful information on park areas, ferries, sights to see, etc.

Small color photographs are liberally sprinkled throughout the booklet.

Anyone wanting a copy is to write to: Dare County Tourist Bureau, P. O. Box 399, Manteo, N.C., 29754.

"Sea Grant North Carolina 1983-1984," a magazine format 40-page publication, is an overview report of the Sea Grant program in North Carolina over a two year period. As an introduction to the program, the booklet is a useful abbreviated resume of topics such as estuaries, fisheries, aquaculture, seafood, coastal processes, marine education, etc. There is also a listing of publications (free and priced) covering coastal topics in detail.

More than two dozen handsome black and white photographs enliven the text.

For a free copy write to: UNC Sea Grant College Program, Box 8605, N.C. State University, Raleigh, N.C. 27695.

Poster Contest Details

MANTEO — The N.C. Beach Buggy Association and the National Park Service are jointly sponsoring an "Operation Beach Respect Poster Contest" that will reach students along the Eastern seaboard of the state.

The contest, open until March 15, will be available to over 100 schools in coastal communities and is expected to reach over 25,000 students.

Thomas L. Hartman, superintendent of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, said the contest is being held in an effort to create and enhance individual student awareness and stewardship for the coastal resources of the state.

The N.C.B.B.A. is providing $650 in prize money for winners in individual and classroom competition. Winning posters will be reproduced by N.C.B.B.A. for display and advertisement. The National Park Service will display the winning posters in its National Seashore visitor centers during May.

The contest is structured for students in grades five through eight — division one, and grades nine through 12, division two.

Interested students should contact their teachers for detailed information regarding the contest and how to enter or request contest rules and criteria from: Superintendent, Cape Hatteras National Seashore, Route 1, Box 675, Manteo, 27954.

The Rich Get Richer

The Beverly Wilshire Hotel —a landmark in Beverly Hills, Calif., patronized by the rich and famous since 1928—was recently sold for $125 million to Regent International Hotels Ltd. of Hong Kong. Hernando Courtright, 81, head of the hotel, who likes to refer to himself as "an innkeeper," purchased the Beverly Wilshire in 1961 for $6 million. Three film stars who invested in the original deal with Courtright—Kirk Douglas, Irene Dunne and Loretta Young—stand to earn a pretty dollar in capital gains.

Where Life Lasts Longest

Americans live longest in Hawaii, shortest in the District of Columbia. So reveals a new study by the National Center for Health Statistics, compiled from 1980 census data and death statistics. The new study shows that the average life expectancy in the islands is 77.02 years but only 69.2 years in the nation's capital.

In addition to those in Hawaii, residents enjoy high life expectancies in Minnesota, Iowa, Utah, North Dakota, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Kansas, Colorado, Idaho, Washington and Connecticut. Residents share lower life-expectancy rates in Louisiana, South Carolina, Mississippi, Georgia, Alaska, Alabama, Nevada, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Delaware and Tennessee.

According to 1984 projections, U.S. citizens can expect to live an average of 74.7 years, with women enjoying a life expectancy of 78.3 years and men 71.1 years. The National Center for Health Statistics study discloses that whites can expect to live longer than blacks in this country. In the District of Columbia, for example, blacks on the average can expect to live 66.96 years, compared with 74.83 years for whites.

Arguello Attempts Another Comeback

By Adam Beckerman

If you saw Alexis Arguello get his gray matter beaten out of him by Aaron Pryor in the 14th round of their first junior welterweight title fight in 1982, it would have been fair for you to assume that this guy would never again step into the ring. The champion, Pryor, had pummeled more than 20 straight punches into Arguello's head and body. It was all quite nauseating — especially when Arguello hit the canvas, twitching.

But he fought Pryor again. And lost again. Then he lost his home in Nicaragua to the Sandinistas, whom he would later fight as a Contra. Then he lost much of his money through drug use and poor investments. Then he nearly blew his brains out with a gun. But having recovered his self-esteem and sense of purpose, Arguello is back. On Sunday, Feb. 9 on CBS, he starts yet another comeback, fighting Billy Costello in a 10-rounder, which he hopes will conclude with the attainment of his fourth boxing crown.

But before the pugilists, there are the dunkers from Dallas. Watching the NBA All-Star game's half-time dunking contest is sports' equivalent to decadent eroticism. One after the other they go, flying, soaring, gliding, bamboombash.

When do you say, "Enough already?" Surely not before you see Atlanta Hawks rookie guard Spud Webb. Spud wears number 4. He is listed as 5 feet, 7 inches. Hawks owner Ted Turner wanted Spud to be given number 4. Turner, whose Superstation was once on Channel 17, had his Atlanta Braves pitcher Andy Messersmith wear number 17 and adopt the nickname Channel. But back to Spud. He can dunk like a bonzai. In fact, he's been dunking since high school, when he was only 5 feet, 4 inches.

Also on Sunday on NBC, the man whom many believe will be college basketball's next coaching legend brings his Yellow Jackets into yet another North Carolina snake pit. White-haired coach Bobby Cremmins of Georgia Tech has his much-publicized salt-and-pepper backcourt of Mark Price and Bruce Dalrymple bombing from outside and feeding inside to top pro prospect John Salley. Duke is the competition.

And bowlers, don't forget to mark next Saturday, Feb. 15 on your calendar. That's when Marshall Holman will be defending his U.S. Open PBA title. Last year, Holman was one of five bowlers to earn more than $100,000. He did it with a sore wrist. If he makes it to the championship round of five, watch his release. When they show it in super-slow motion, you can see him grimace.

At Coffman's, Quality Menswear is our game. Our strength in making a presentation to you is our market and merchandising know-how. We just don't continue to sell an item if the quality isn't there...and our experience tells us that the search for quality is never-ending. Over the years we have seen many "old friends" lose their quality definition, either because of a change in ownership, or just a drop off of personal input by management. Because of this, you often see changes in our merchandising of specific brand names. We just won't continue to buy an item where quality has become a secondary thing.
