Assembly Haggles Over Count Method

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The National Assembly controlled by President Ferdinand E. Marcos debated for four hours today over how to conduct its count of the presidential election, the only tally in the closely contested race that is legally binding. Challenger Corazon Aquino pledged, "We are going to take power." An hour after Mrs. Aquino spoke at an outdoor Roman Catholic Mass, a supporter holding up a "Marcos concede" poster was shot to death on a truck bed where Mrs. Aquino had sat, and a second person was wounded.

Mrs. Aquino had left when the shooting occurred.

The assembly began a special session today to count votes from Friday's election, but adjourned after four hours of debate over procedure. Officials of Marcos' governing New Society Movement have predicted it could take at least two days to open sealed envelopes containing tally sheets from across the 7,100-island nation.

Marcos, whose current six-year term is due to expire in 1987, called the special election as a test of his popularity.

So far, only unofficial tallies have been made, with the Marcos-appointed Commission on Elections showing him in the lead and an independent watchdog group showing Mrs. Aquino leading.

The assembly galleries were packed, and thousands of Aquino and Marcos supporters gathered outside the assembly building, chanting their candidates' names.

Elsewhere, Marcos supporters demonstrated against a group of 20 U.S. pollwatchers who told a news conference they had seen evidence of widespread election irregularities. A second foreign observer group, Aquino supporters and a group of government-employed vote counters all have charged the election was being rigged to favor Marcos, who has been in power for 20 years.

However, Marcos, interviewed today on the ABC-TV program "Good Morning America," said, "We have the evidence ... that it is the other way around. It is the opposition that has been buying (votes)." The election commission said that with 28 percent of the precincts reporting, Marcos was leading with 3,056,236 votes, or 51 percent, while Mrs. Aquino had 2,903,348 votes, or 49 percent.

The independent watchdog group, National Movement for Free Elections, or Namfrel, said its count showed Mrs. Aquino with 5,566,319 votes, or 54 percent, and Marcos with 4,806,166, or 46 percent. It said 49 percent of precincts had reported.

Marcos was leading in three other unofficial counts. "Let the Parliament finish their canvass," Marcos told ABC. "The problem is that everybody is trying to be the authoritative canvasser."

He called on the election commission and Namfrel to continue their counts so they can be compared with the assembly tally.

If the assembly count is appealed, a decision must be made within one year by a council made up of three members of the governing party, three opposition members and three Supreme Court justices, who are Marcos appointees.

In a statement before leaving today, the official U.S. observer team again urged the election be brought to a "credible conclusion without

NASA Mum On Personal Effects

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Navy divers and specially equipped NASA vessels probed the Atlantic for wreckage from the space shuttle Challenger and officials said underwater recovery operations could take several more weeks to complete.

The recovery efforts continued amid reports that seachers have found some of the personal effects of the seven astronauts who were aboard Challenger when it blew up, including a helmet that was fished out of the water. But NASA spokesmen have refused to confirm that any such remains have been retrieved.

No major finds were reported over the weekend. "It's methodical work, not only in finding and identifying any large pieces but in figuring out how to bring them up," Jim Mizell, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman, said about the combined Navy-NASA search for crucial components of the shuttle Challenger.

Three NASA ships used sonar and unmanned submersibles in two different areas over the weekend, searching for the shuttle's crew cabin and two solid rocket boosters.

One of the rocket boosters is the focus of an investigation into the cause of the explosion that destroyed the shuttle Jan. 28 and killed its seven-member crew.

"(The vessel) Independence was outfitted Saturday with remote underwater camera equipment and is positioning on an area about 40 miles east of Cape Canaveral to search for the right hand SRB (solid rocket booster)," said a NASA statement.

Recovery of that booster is considered crucial to the investigation by a presidential commission.

The group has asked the space agency for all internal documents dealing with problems involving the seals on the shuttle's solid rocket boosters. It planned to interrogate NASA officials at an open meeting Tuesday after reviewing the documents in a closed-door session today.

Video and still photos of the moments before the explosion show a plume of fire shooting from the side of the right booster toward the external fuel tank. The Navy ship Preserver, meanwhile, was moored about 18 miles northeast of Cape Canaveral, concentrating on locating and recovering a potentially ex-

Broyhill Makes Campaign Stop

By STUART SAVAGE

Campaigning in Greenville today, Congressman Jim Broyhill, who is seeking the Republican nomination to the U.S. Senate now held by Sen. John East of Greenville, said he believes in economy in government, policies that will create new jobs and protect present jobs, and a strong national defense.

Broyhill, at a breakfast at the Sheraton Inn, said the president "has had a great record over the past five years. The president has headed us in the right direction."

But he suggested that in order to continue on the present course, the Republican Party must maintain its majority in the U.S. Senate. The senate race this year is "very important (and) can determine the direction of the state...the nation" in the future, he said.

"If we want to continue going in this direction as a nation...it is important to win this Senate seat," Broyhill emphasized.

As a member of Congress Broyhill said, he "wears more than one hat." In addition to representing his constituents in the House, "I come home and listen to the people. You have a responsibility to listen and make sure you're getting the views of the people you're elected to represent."

Broyhill, who said because of various redistricting during his years as a congressman "I have served 18 counties in the state...a million people," said "I believe in economy in government. I believe in economic policies and trade policies that will create new jobs...protect present jobs...the free enterprise system...and a strong defense."

According to Broyhill, "my goal is

Cox Says He Will Not Run

Percy Cox has withdrawn his candidacy for a seat on the Pitt County Commissioners, Greenville Township.

"The N.C. Attorney General has ruled that any business Cox Armature Works would do for the county would be a conflict of interest," Cox said. "My family and I have decided that this would not be in our best business interest as we do so much work for the county."

Cox said that the fact he had sold and given his stock in the business to his children and that he was retired, did not in the attorney general's decision change the conflict of interest factor.

That, plus the confusion over the residence factor which has come up lately, with the possibility of a challenge, "leaves me no choice but to withdraw at this time," Cox said. "I don't like to back out, but my family and I all feel it's the only thing I can do under the circumstances."

Experts Say Swap Shows New PR Skills Of Soviets

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — The expected release of Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky in an East-West prisoner exchange this week shows the Kremlin's increased skill at public relations, Western specialists on the Soviet Union say.

On Sunday, U.S. sources in Berlin said the trade will take place on Berlin's Glienicke Bridge on Tuesday afternoon. "There has been no change in plans," said one U.S. source, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

However, the Hamburg newspaper Bild, the first to report news of the exchange, reported that the trade would not occur on the bridge but at a site "not previously used for spy swaps." The bridge has been used for East-West exchanges in the past.

Western specialists on the Soviet Union interviewed by The Associated Press said they view the trade as an attempt to focus attention on an apparent Soviet humanitarian gesture — the release of Shcharansky.

Moreover, they say, by freeing Shcharansky along with imprisoned spies, Moscow can continue to claim he is a Western agent.

"In this exchange they hope very much to get through to the world their version that he is a spy," Wolfgang Leonhard, a professor of Soviet history at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., said in a telephone interview.

Shcharansky, 38, a mathematician and computer scientist, was sentenced to 13 years in prison and labor camp in 1978 on charges of spying for the United States.

Both Shcharansky and U.S. officials deny he was an American agent, and the United States has repeatedly called for his freedom.

Shcharansky, a Jew, has said his only crime was seeking to emigrate from the Soviet Union to Israel.

In Tel Aviv, Israel radio today said Shcharansky's wife, Avital, who emigrated to Israel in 1974, has not received any official confirmation he

Pre-Mardi Gras Activities Held

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Throngs of boisterous revelers, many drinking and dancing, jammed the city's littered streets for pre-Mardi Gras parades, including the famed Bacchus procession dedicated to the god of the grape.

Actor John Ritter of television's "Three's Company" reigned as Lord Bacchus, casting wine-colored doubloons to the crowd Sunday night from high atop a tractor-pulled float.

Occasionally rising from his swivel throne, Ritter, in crown, sequined white cape and vestments, bowed to the crowds as the 27-foot parade rolled down fashionable St. Charles Avenue.

A gladiator aboard a white chariot escorted Lord Bacchus, and two dozen lieutenants in plumed Roman helmets and purple capes rode horseback behind, scattering aluminum doubloons.

As marching-band music reverberated through the air, other wildly costumed float riders tossed out "treasures," usually cheap beaded necklaces and plastic cups, but also an occasional bikini bottom.

The floats of Bacchusaurus and King Kong and his brood were joined this year by what some touted as the largest float in Carnival history, a 105-foot alligator that had to be built in three sections.

"I came all the way from Omaha, Nebraska, where it was zero today," said Janet Anderson, 50. "This is my kind of party, and it's a lot warmer too."

"Oh, I love it around here. I've been coming for years," said Gene Kulehn 51, a Westwego resident who wore a lucky cowboy hat sporting red and blue feathers to the toy Indian spears and tomahawks he caught over the years at parades.

"This is like a college reunion," said Claudia Brian, a Baton Rouge accountant who parked a camper in a lot beside the parade route and put lawn chairs on the roof.

A light drizzle fell for a time around the scheduled start of the parade, and the floats began rolling nearly 90 minutes late. But by then, the rain had ended.

The pagan-like festivities climax Tuesday with Mardi Gras — in French, Fat Tuesday. That is the day before the start of Lent, the solemn Christian observance that ends with Good Friday and Easter.

More than 1 million people are expected to jam the city and its historic French Quarter, where streets are too narrow to allow the passage of the giant floats.

On Tuesday, members of the Zulu Social Aid and Pleasure Club kick off the wild whirl with a parade followed by several gaudy pageants.

NEW YORK (AP) — Marilyn Klinghoffer, who symbolized the vulnerability of innocent people to terrorism after her wheelchair-bound husband was tossed into the sea during the Achille Lauro hijacking, has died of cancer at age 59.

Mrs. Klinghoffer testified before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee about the October hijacking of the cruise ship by Palestinian terrorists in which her 69-year-old husband, Leon, was shot and his body thrown into the sea.

"My husband's death has made a difference in the way people now perceive their vulnerability," she told the panel. "I believe what happened to the passengers on the Achille Lauro and to my family can happen to anyone at any time and at any place."

Mrs. Klinghoffer died early Sunday after a two-week stay at Lenox Hill Hospital, said Letty Simon, a family spokeswoman. Ms. Simon said Mrs. Klinghoffer had been diagnosed as having cancer in 1984, but declined to give further details of the illness.

"Mrs. Klinghoffer was a courageous woman who stood for her principles in speaking out eloquently against terrorism," White House spokesman Michael Guest said Sunday. "The president will be sending his condolences to the family."

Last October, the Klinghoffers, celebrating their 36th wedding anniversary, joined nine friends from the New York area for a Mediterranean cruise aboard the Italian ship when it was hijacked Oct. 7.

The passengers were later freed. Four suspected terrorists were apprehended following the hijacking when U.S. warplanes intercepted the plane they were on and forced it to land in Italy. The four have been convicted on weapons charges and are in undisclosed Italian prisons awaiting trial for murder and hijacking.

A fifth man on the plane, Palestine Liberation Organization official Mohammad Abbas, who allegedly masterminded the hijacking, was released by the Italians. A warrant for his arrest was issued later by Italian prosecutors, but his whereabouts remain unknown.

At a meeting in New York with President Reagan she told the president that she spat in the faces of the terrorists while she identified them for authorities in Italy.

"God bless you," Reagan replied, according to Ms. Simon, who served as spokeswoman for the Klinghoffer family throughout their ordeal.

At a news conference in late October, Mrs. Klinghoffer recalled being ordered to climb a staircase to the upper deck of the ship.

"I attempted to push my husband in the direction of the staircase," she said. "The terrorists ordered me to leave him. I told them that I couldn't leave him and begged them to let me stay with him. They responded by putting a machine gun to my head and ordered me up the stairs."

"That was the last time I saw my husband."

After the slaying of Klinghoffer, an appliance manufacturer who was left partially paralyzed from a stroke suffered 10 years earlier, his widow helped found the Leon Klinghoffer Memorial Foundation to fight terrorism. The family has proposed that Marilyn Klinghoffer's name be added the foundation's name, Ms. Simon said.

"In the time I got to know her, I saw a really brave woman who I think typified the American spirit that we look to," said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y. "One of tremendous courage, who was unafraid, who was proud of her country and who was supportive of our president and his actions."

"She was just not going to knuckle under to terrorism," he said.

Mayor Edward I. Koch, who had visited the Klinghoffer daughters shortly after they learned of their father's death, said Sunday that Mrs. Klinghoffer "taught the world a lesson in courage in the months following the murder of her husband. ... She gave a message to the world in denouncing terrorism and became an inspiration for all of us."

Mrs. Klinghoffer had worked as an assistant personnel manager at Gralla Publications, a business and trade magazine publishing company.

Mrs. Klinghoffer is survived by her daughters Ilsa and Lisa; a son-in-law, Jerry Arbitter, and her mother, Rose Windwehr.

Guard Calls Off Search For Men

BODEGA BAY, Calif. (AP) — The Coast Guard has suspended a search for four people hurled into the icy Pacific after a huge wave shoved their chartered fishing vessel onto its side, killing five others and injuring 22 who were all thrown overboard.

The search for the missing men was suspended Sunday night and would be resumed "only if there is some evidence that there is some probability of locating any survivors," said Coast Guard Lt. John Carroll, adding that such chances were "slim."

The accident occurred Saturday afternoon during a day of fishing aboard the 65-foot Merry Jane when a swell estimated at 16 feet struck the boat, causing it to roll.

Ken Dern and his 7-year-old son, Kory, were talking about what a beautiful day they had fishing when the wave knocked the vessel over.

"I grabbed hold of the railing with one arm and held my son with the other as we went under," said Dern, 35.

"I saw the ocean dotted with heads of people and ice coolers. The people who could walk were throwing life jackets out to them."

The boat left Bodega Bay, located 50 miles north of San Francisco, at 7 a.m. Saturday with 48 passengers and three crew members, said Rich Tiesso, owner-operator of the vessel.

Twelve fishermen were plucked alive from the sea within minutes of being knocked overboard, but five others died before they could be reached. Ten of the 12 were taken to hospitals and 12 people aboard were hurt when they were slammed against structures on the boat, officials said.

Two people remained hospitalized Sunday night, in stable and satisfactory conditions, at Santa Rosa Memorial Hospital and Palm Drive Hospital, hospital officials said. One patient was released Sunday morning. The others were released Saturday after treatment.

Dennis McAllister, who was dangling from a sling beneath a sheriff's helicopter, said he almost reached one of the four Sunday before he lost his grip.

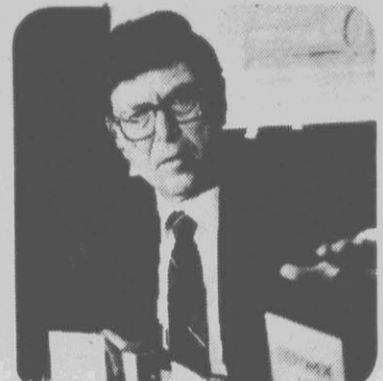

"We went back for a second attempt to find it, but we had no success," he said.

Three of the four men have been identified as George Bell, Randy Bell and Walt Heydon, Coast Guard Petty Officer Greg Wist said. The Bells were related but Heydon did not know how.

The Coast Guard identified the dead as Edward M. Luis, 69, of Santa Rosa; Xavier F. Tirado, 51, of Fremont; Charles P. Holzberger, 69, of Troy, Mich.; Everett M. Anderson, 27, of Richmond; and John Haley, 60, of Citrus Heights.

Last year, 15 fishermen were killed in accidents near Bodega Bay, mostly attributed to rough seas. "It is a treacherous coast, sea and swells," said Bob Black, supervisor of the Spud Point Marina, where the Merry Jane docks.

Senator Pete Domenici has been saying that a tax increase will have to be part of any effort to reduce the deficit in the 1987 federal budget. Be thankful the nation is at peace. The War of 1812 led to the nation's first sales taxes on gold, silverware, jewelry, and watches. The nation's first income tax was instituted in 1862, during the Civil War. ## Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S., P.A.
Prettier Smile from "Bonding"

One of the most exciting revolutions in cosmetic dentistry is the use of composite materials that can be molded onto your teeth to change their shape, fill spaces, and result in the smile you've always wanted.

The dentist can now close spaces between teeth, cover discolored teeth, making them lighter and more attractive. He can rebuild and reshape disfigured or chipped teeth, often making crowning unnecessary. He can fill in eroded areas; lengthen front teeth that have worn down; and hide gold or amalgam fillings that show when a person smiles. It is also possible to bond tooth-colored plastic facings onto natural teeth, to cover tetracycline-stained or discolored teeth. And this can be done almost invariably without drilling and in one office visit.

An acid-etching prepares the tooth surface, the composite is placed on and shaped into the desired appearance and hardened when activated by ultraviolet light. This is today's answer for those who have long been unhappy with the appearance of their smile. Call my office today for a consultation and let me show you how to smile with confidence!

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Parents Should Stop Abusive Treatment

DEAR ABBY: I am compelled to respond to "Worried Mom," who learned that her 17-year-old daughter had been hiding the fact that her boyfriend of 2 1/2 years had been beating her up.

Our daughter, Denise, was buried at the tender age of 24 because she, too, would not listen to our pleas to break up with an abusive boyfriend. Unfortunately, she married him.

We tried many times to get her to leave him because we feared one day he would kill her—hoping and praying all the while that we were wrong. Well, we were not wrong.

In August 1980, he beat her to death. She had been so badly beaten, we were not even allowed to view the body.

"Worried Mom," please take Abby's advice, and forbid your daughter to continue seeing this abusive character unless he gets counseling and corrects his abusive behavior. And see that your daughter gets counseling, too.

Abby, perhaps you can mention Parents of Murdered Children, the support group that has helped my husband and me to survive this terrible tragedy. It was founded by Bob and Charlotte Hullinger of Cincinnati in 1978 after their daughter, 19-year-old Lisa, was murdered. COMPASSIONATE MOTHER, LOUISVILLE, KY.

DEAR MOTHER: I'm glad you wrote. I phoned Charlotte Hullinger and learned that Parents of Murdered Children now has 46 chapters in the United States; chapters also are in England and Australia.

She said: "Most parents of murdered children have told us that after their child was murdered, their friends deserted them. It's a universal phenomenon that friends and neighbors want nothing to do with these parents out of fear, and denial that the tragedy had ever happened and could happen to them. They rationalize that the parents are in some way 'guilty'—that it would not have happened had they taken better care of their kids who were in the wrong place at the wrong time."

"We have a support network of 250 contact people all over the United States who will take telephone calls and answer letters. We want parents of murdered children to know that they are not alone. There is enormous comfort in being able to discuss our grief and anger with other parents who have survived that terrible experience. We have monthly meetings and put out a newsletter containing pertinent information."

"We are having a convention in Cincinnati, Aug. 22-24, 1986. Anyone desiring information about us may write to our national headquarters: Parents of Murdered Children, 1739 Bella Vista, Cincinnati, Ohio 45237."

"Please send a long, self-addressed, stamped (39 cents) envelope for a personal reply plus five pieces of literature."

"Our telephone, manned by compassionate members, is (513) 721-LOVE (or 5683)."

"We are a non-profit organization and will talk to any parents who need our support."

DEAR ABBY: "Nameless, Please" fell in love with the voice of a telephone operator of a place with which he did business and wanted to know if he should ask her for a date. You told him he would be crazy not to.

That was good advice. I, too, did the same thing, but I was a bit cagier. I got a friend to wangle her name and address from the company and then phoned her and managed to arrange a date. On the way to pick her up at her home, I got cold feet. What if she were twice my size and twice my age? I got even more cagey. I decided that if she were all I had hoped for, I would say, "I've got a pocket full of money and a car full of gas—where would you like to go?" If she were not, I would say, "My car broke down a few blocks away and I've got to go back to meet the tow truck. I'll give you a call later." She was. We dated. "Voice" and I celebrated our 45th wedding anniversary last December.

OLDER BUT NOT CRAZY

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Odd Move

President Reagan's decision to put the probe of the space shuttle explosion in the hands of an executive-appointed committee is not becoming.

The probe board — made up of what Reagan called individuals with "no ax to grind" — will assume responsibility for investigating the crash. Reagan says by abolishing NASA's interim investigations board, he's circumventing allegations that the inquiry might be one-sided. Yet half the commission members have current or past ties to NASA or the space program. That spells a four-letter word — bias.

The move radiates presidential insecurity about NASA's ability to probe the cause of the explosion, not concern over a one-sided investigation. The president lacks confidence in NASA if he snatches a critical investigation out of its hands. And if he doubts one of the nation's largest, most professional agencies, that damages his own credibility.

The argument that Reagan might be "protecting" the space agency is vague. If protection is his motive, which is unlikely, it is another show of weakness for the chief executive. NASA is an open, public-oriented agency. It has handled the investigation of the explosion with a frankness that inspires public trust. After three decades of struggling for funding, support and credibility, NASA can fight its own battles. It doesn't need to be protected.

More likely, Reagan is afraid of NASA's openness. He wants his thumb on the inquiry — throw pathological expertise to the wind — and by presidential designees investigating the explosion, he's got that control. If Reagan can't stomach openness in an agency that has the scientific capability and reputation for thoroughness that NASA has, then he's revealed his own insecurity. The president's move is a feeble one, imbued with disrespect for NASA's time-tested ability.

To further the insult, while he snatched NASA's investigative authority away with one hand, the president offered a $7.7 billion budget increase with the other. An out-of-the-blue increase in spending at a time when funding for most federal agencies will be cut or frozen has to be hush money.

President Reagan's decision to have an independent probe commission is a weak move, and an odd one for an administration that strives for and brags about strength.

Changes

Last week was a milestone of sorts for the older portions of Greenville.

A house at the northeast corner of Eighth and Cotanche streets fell to the wrecking crews. The property had been purchased by East Carolina University in November for $104,200 as a part of its continuing program of acquiring property westward to Cotanche Street. The demolition's significance was it was the last house to go in the area fronting on Mendenhall Student Center. Mostly the property has been developed for parking, although some houses along Ninth Street have been retained and used for university functions.

Once the area had included some of the community's finest homes and was considered one of the most desirable areas in which to live. This was in a time when the college's enrollment was less than 2,000 and there were no college buildings close to the area.

Inexorably enrollment and campus grew and the residential area became more needed for university expansion than for homes. Gradually old families moved out and houses were demolished until now there is a clear view from Cotanche to Mendenhall.

There is little else which so graphically illustrates the dramatic changes which our community and campus have seen in recent decades.

Shared Costs Pose Problems

RALEIGH — Several years ago, the completion of the southern portion of the Raleigh Beltline created a problem for city officials. Motorists taking the main exit had a mile-plus drive through congested neighborhood streets to reach downtown.

The state didn't plan to build a suitable connector for years so city officials made a precedent-setting offer. If the state would start work on the Dawson-McDowell streets connector immediately, the city said it would put up $3 million toward the project. The state jumped at the offer and the connector is almost completed now.

Since that move in late 1983, municipal governments around North Carolina have put up more than $50 million as inducements to speed up state road projects within their boundaries. This movement represents a major departure from a policy that dates back to the Depression. Since that time, roads have been the responsibility of the state. Now a study commission on the Highway Fund's financial problems has recommended expanding that local involvement in road projects. The commission suggests that a revolving loan fund be established to help cities help the state.

At the same time, however, others are warning of the dangers involved in moving away from the tradition of total state funding for roads. Rep. Bobby Hunter, D-McDowell, recently warned a state legislative study commission that local funding for roads would allow the more affluent municipalities "to buy road priorities."

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles agrees. In a speech on the need for home rule for local governments, Boyles supported the idea of local funding for roads, but only if they provided all the money needed for a project. Any type of shared responsibility would work to the detriment of poor areas which could not afford to participate in such a program, he said.

A representative of an affluent area also agreed. Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt told another study commission that a system of shared spending for road construction will rob poor counties of their roads. He also warned that affluent cities, like Charlotte, aren't affluent enough to undertake such an expensive new responsibility. "I don't know where we'd find the funds," he said.

What is most startling about the shared-expense concept is that it comes at a time when local governments are in a major financial squeeze. They're finding it difficult to fund their current programs without adding new responsibilities to municipal and county budgets. In fact, Gantt's remarks came at a meeting of a committee looking for solutions to the local government funding crisis.

Hunter said the shared responsibility approach offers short term inducements but long term problems. Sure, some roads like the Dawson-McDowell connector get built ahead of time. But the experience of other states show that in the long run that creates a mess.

"Other states have cities taking care of roads and that's where they get into problems," Hunter said. "Our cities and counties are going to be taking a pounding with the loss of (federal) general revenue sharing and, then, Gramm-Rudman (the federal budget balancing law.) I don't think they're going to be in a position to do it."

Hunter also warned that by directing highway resources to the cities, the state would work contrary to its goal of providing balanced statewide growth. Urban areas, and their traffic problems, will grow disproportionately and with that will come the need for more urban roads.

Sanford Takes Unifying Stance

DURHAM, N.C. — Terry Sanford had big plans for 1986. Having completed a 15-year stint as president of Duke University in 1985, the sandy-haired, 68-year-old former governor of North Carolina was looking forward to using his new sailboat, mowing the lawn, and helping his son, a developer, in business.

The last thing he wanted to do, he says, was become a candidate for the U.S. Senate.

With Sen. John East, the incumbent Republican, out of the Senate race, the national Democratic Party had made this state a prime target in its effort to recapture the Senate. But the party wasn't able to induce several of its younger members to take up the challenge. So they turned to Sanford as a unifying figure to win back a seat the party hasn't held in 10 years.

"I suppose I let my supporters flatter me into running for the Senate," Sanford concedes.

While most Democrats expect Sanford to waltz to victory in the May 6 primary, they are not confident about his victory in the fall. Sanford is then likely to face a pragmatic, though conservative, Rep. James Brohyll in the general election. But what frustrates many Democrats more is their inability to lure fresh faces into public life.

Public service requires immeasurable dedication, sacrifice and energy. (It is no coincidence that a third of the U.S. Senate jogs regularly.) The suggestion that he isn't up to speed ruffles Sanford. "My mother is 95 years old and she still has a driver's license," Sanford snaps. "I intend to serve a couple of terms in the U.S. Senate."

Yet he can't deny that a majority of the voters in his state do not belong to his generation. And that can present a problem. At a reception for freshmen undergraduates at Duke University several years ago, Sanford was asked whether he thought it was right that two gay ROTC members had been discharged because of their persuasion. A baffled Sanford said he couldn't understand why they were released from ROTC for being happy. The crowd had enjoyed a few chuckles by the time an aide had informed him of the intended meaning of the word "gay."

Surely being tuned into a different vocabulary doesn't condemn a man in public life, but it's indicative of generational cleavages.

It's not as if Terry Sanford hasn't been around or that experience isn't important. Sanford served as governor from 1961 to 1965. In 1972 and 1976 he took wild stabs at the Democratic presidential nomination. In both instances, he embarrassed himself, particularly in 1972 when Gov. George Wallace beat him in his own backyard. When a friend asked Sanford why he was running for president in 1976, he said some good people had put up the money and he didn't want to disappoint them. He knew he didn't have a chance of being elected.

In spite of believing he could do more than was humanly possible, Sanford has a proud record of public service. As governor, he was ahead of the pack on educational reforms. He raised the salaries of the state's public school teachers and planted the seeds for one of the largest community college systems in the country.

Outside of education, Sanford pioneered an anti-poverty program — the North Carolina Fund — that was used as a model by the Office of Economic Opportunity. His administration was notable for its radical moderation at a time when other Southern governors were resisting desegregation.

Yet, in talking with this thoughtful gentleman, who all too often answers questions in platitudinous monologues, one isn't sure why he's running for the Senate other than to help his party regain control of that body and mix North Carolina's reputation for far right leadership.

One comes away from listening to this careful, restrained statesman with a wish that somehow he were 25 years younger.

Strength For Today

Some time ago a young woman was brutally slain as she walked to her apartment house after leaving the subway. Scores of windows in nearby apartments went up, but nobody came out to accost the murderer.

When questioned about their presumed indifference, practically all who witnessed the murder had only this as their excuse: "We didn't want to become involved."

Sometime later, one of the group who saw the crime and had slammed down his window was telling about the murder. One of the listeners, a rough-looking character, cupped his hands and yelled, "Where was youse?"

The question was certainly in order. Some great responsibility arises and we side-step it. There are cries of pain and anguish, and we slam down our windows and go back to bed.

We need to keep asking ourselves the question, "Where was youse?"

Oil Barons Are Humbled

There are some people who are laughing because the oil barons now have to sell spare oil at $17 a barrel. I don't happen to be one of them.

It's true that OPEC had every intention of sticking it to the non-oil-producing countries, but that doesn't mean we should all be acting like Chicago Bear fans.

Many of the oil producers have been humbled by the glut.

Just the other day the oil prince, el Glamie, a polo-playing friend of mine, stopped me on 14th Street and asked me if I wanted to buy a "genuine" Rolex watch. When he recognized me he seemed embarrassed.

"Your Highness," I said, "what are you doing selling Rolex watches on 14th Street?"

"Where would you sell them if crude was dropping to $16 a barrel?"

"But surely you'll still make more money selling oil than watches."

"I might, except everybody has a lien on my crude. I can't ship a barrel of it without some credit union seizing it in a foreign port. Fortunately they don't know about my watch business."

"Why watches?" I asked him.

"When oil was $36 a barrel I bought 10,000 watches to hand out as tips to the hotel help when I traveled abroad. Now it turns out the watches are worth more than my oil. Don't you need a timepiece that will tell you the phase of the moon?"

I said, "I can't believe you're that broke. What about the military equipment you bought? That's got to be worth something."

"Master Charge took it all back when I missed two payments."

I never thought I'd see a Middle East prince down on his luck."

"Neither did I," el Glamie said. "The last time I was in Washington I slept at the White House. Now I'm sleeping across the street."

"In a hotel?"

"No, in Lafayette Park. Do you know what is driving the price of oil down? It's greed."

"I thought that's what drove the price of oil up. As I recall it was OPEC's greed that almost bankrupted the world."

"That wasn't greed. That was supply and demand. There wasn't enough oil to go around so we had to raise prices."

"But doesn't the reason they tumbled also have to do with supply and demand?"

"No, that was lust. Everybody who was pledged to drill so much crude cheated and caused a glut. Then because of the glut they had to produce more crude which produced more crude and then it was just glut, glut, glut."

I asked the prince, "How can you expect OPEC to honor their quotas when they are in hock up to their ears for so many of the good things in life? I would think you would keep drilling even if you got $5 a barrel."

"I would," the prince said, "only I don't own the oil. The insurance companies do."

"How come the insurance companies own your oil?"

"I borrowed $100 million to build a new airport and air-conditioned polo field."

"Why would you do that?"

"To attract tourists so my country no longer has to depend on oil."

 Saturday's Cryptoquip: THE REGAL PRINCE'S SNOBBISH BIOGRAPHER REALLY COLLECTS ROYALTIES.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals P

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

to be the most effective person I can be in representing your interests in Congress. Getting headlines for Jim Broyhill is not the goal. Getting things done for the people I represent is (the goal).

Saying "we're going to keep it (the campaign) positive. The people of this state are tired of negative campaigning," Broyhill said his campaign has raised about $600,000 so far.

"The campaign is gaining steam...gaining supporters (from) Republicans, Democrats, independents who believe in traditional North Carolina values."

Questioned about the future of tobacco, Broyhill said "the tobacco issue, smoking and health, has been with us for many years."

"The fact is," he said, "tobacco production has gone down by 50 percent in the last decade (and) unless we make basic reforms...we're going to be hurting."

Broyhill suggested that the Helms bill, introduced last year by Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, should "make domestic flue cured tobacco more competitive. We have to get that program through." But Broyhill said "we need a unified front, otherwise the program will continue to erode."

"The core of the problem is getting rid of the surplus (tobacco)," which he said the Helms bill will do.

A measure suggested by Democratic Congressman Charles Rose, but never introduced in the House, would not have addressed the surplus problem, Broyhill suggested. He added that Rose has now endorsed the Helms plan.

In other campaign stops in Greenville today, Broyhill toured the Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co. plant, then met with East Carolina University Chancellor John Howell at 11 a.m. He met with the ECU Students for Broyhill at 11:30 and spoke at a Kiwanis club luncheon meeting at the Holiday Inn before leaving for another campaign function in Raleigh later today.

A Quick Journey

FARMVILLE — Two balloons released Friday about 1 p.m. by children in Sweetwater, Tenn., were found Saturday about 4 p.m. near Farmville by Byron Bateman, 10, and his cousin, Gene Bateman, 25.

The Batemans found the balloons — a yellow one and a blue one — in a pasture near the home of their grandmother, Mrs. Edna Bateman, off the Chingupin Road east of Farmville. The strings of the two were entangled with each other. Inside were the names, Christal Miller and Becky Buchanan.

Marge Gowan, Reading Is Fundamental (RIF) coordinator at Sweetwater Elementary School, contacted this morning, said each of the approximately 600 students at the school let go a balloon with a signed message inside as the culmination of a RIF "In Celebration of Reading" project held last week. She said the two which reached Pitt County are the only ones from which the school has heard so far.

Byron shared his find at Sunday School at Bell Arthur United Methodist Church yesterday and he and his grandmother plan to write to the girls in eastern Tennessee.

plusive satellite booster. The 16-ton device, composed of two solid-fuel rocket motors, was to have powered the $100 million TDRS satellite carried aboard Challenger into a higher orbit.

Navy Cmdr. Arthur E. Norton said the device was discovered by sonar late last week, but divers have failed to pinpoint.

He said the Navy was directed by the space agency on where to go and what to look for. One reason for quick recovery of what he called "a hazardous object" could be the potential danger to the search vessels and personnel, Norton said.

"It's a fairly large-size explosive in pretty shallow water," Mizell said. "There's a lot of maritime and fishing boat traffic out there ... I would think it's almost a duty to try to pick it up."

75-59 Win For Devils

Duke Explodes Jackets' Sting

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mark Alarie scored 10 points in the first five minutes of the second half Sunday and, along with Johnny Dawkins' 22 points, guided No. 4 Duke to a 75-59 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball triumph over second-ranked and struggling Georgia Tech.

Alarie finished with 24 points as Duke climbed to 22-2 and 9-2 in the ACC. Georgia Tech has lost two of its last three, both ACC games, and dropped to 18-4 and 6-3.

The combination of a ball-hawking defense and Georgia Tech's early cold shooting helped the Blue Devils race off on a 16-6 spree at the start of the second half. Alarie scored four straight baskets in the spurt, and it was his layup which capped the streak and gave Duke a 50-39 edge with 15:41 left to play.

The Yellow Jackets got within 52-46

MARK ALARIE

at the 9:55 mark on a Duane Ferrell drive, but Duke started another scoring run. Six straight Blue Devil points pushed their edge to 62-49 with 5:49 left, and the lead grew as large as 68-53 on a Dawkins dunk with 3:25 remaining.

The final score was Duke's biggest advantage.

John Salley led Georgia Tech with 17 points, while Mark Price scored 12. Bruce Dalrymple had 11 and Tom Hammonds 10.

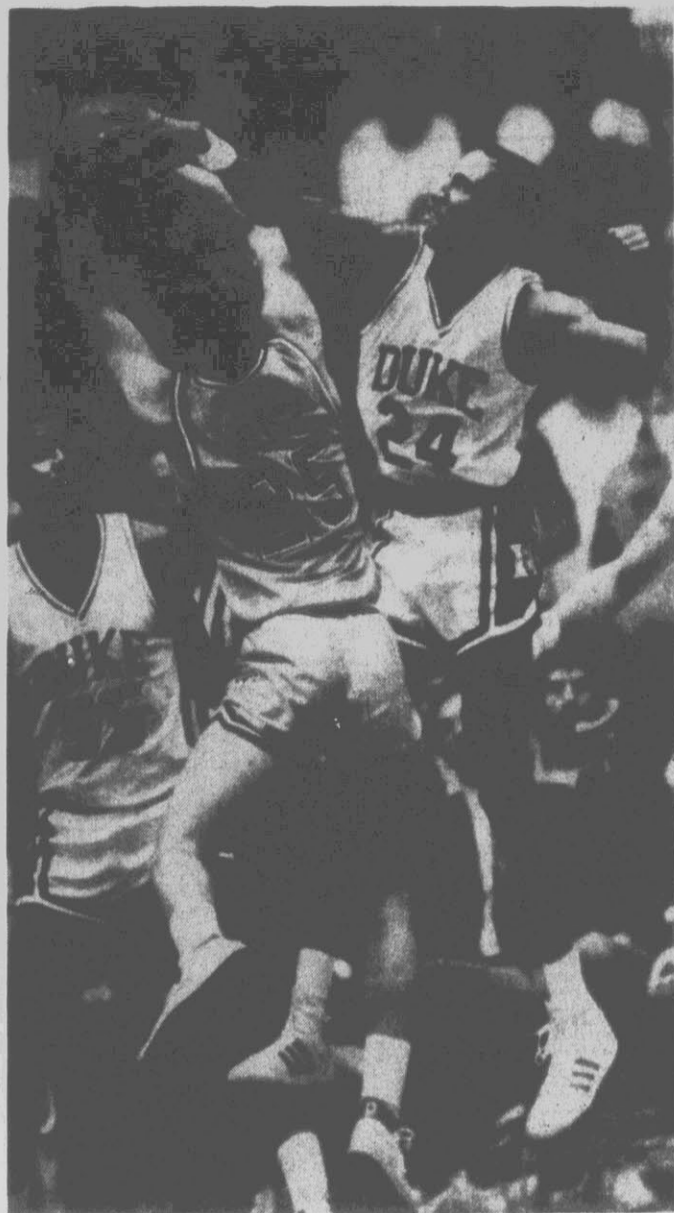

Georgia Tech committed 21 turnovers, 12 in the second half, and cooled off to 46 percent from the field after shooting 56 percent in the first half.

Duke shot 45 percent in the opening period, but warmed up to 60 percent in the second half and finished at 52 percent.

Earnhardt Wins 8th Busch Clash

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The eight annual Busch Clash was a guessing game and Dale Earnhardt guessed right.

Earnhardt ran off with $75,000 in the Clash Sunday at Daytona International Speedway, holding off the Ford Thunderbird of Bill Elliott over the last half of the race.

"Everybody was guessing because we haven't really had much practice time," Earnhardt said. "We were lucky enough to figure everything out in (offseason) tests. That was the biggest reason everything went well today."

Asked if he learned anything in the 20-lap, 50-mile sprint race, he chuckled and replied: "I learned I can beat that Ford."

Earnhardt, driving a year-old Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS upgraded to 1986 specifications, was referring to the Elliott's Thunderbird, which won 11 poles and 11 superspeedway races in 1985.

Earnhardt, 33, took the lead on the sixth of 20 laps in the 50-mile sprint race for the previous year's pole winners.

"Once I got out front, I felt like I could win it," Earnhardt, who went on to the Winston Cup championship in 1980 after opening the season with a victory in the Clash, said.

DALE EARNHARDT

Elliott, who's crew-chief brother, Ernie, spent Sunday at his hotel with the flu, and who was fighting off a bug himself, said, "We made a wild guess at the suspension settings under the car and turned out pretty close. But that wasn't good enough.

"I couldn't hold Dale in the corners. We were pretty strong down the straights, but those last four laps, I'd turned the wheel and the car would still wash up the track in the turns."

The winner crossed the finish line about two car-lengths ahead of Elliott. Earnhardt averaged 195.865 mph, which tied the race record set by Terry Labonte last year when the race was run in the same 15 minutes, 19 seconds.

Earnhardt earned the $50,000 first-place money as well as an additional $25,000 in lap prizes.

Elliott took home the $21,000 second-place money, while Neil Bonnett, earning $10,000 in lap money, came up with a total of $26,000 for third place.

Earnhardt started fourth in the eight-car lineup, but quickly moved up to challenge two-time Clash winner Bonnett for the lead.

Bonnett, driving another Monte

Carlo, held off Earnhardt for the first five laps. But, after the only caution period in the race, Earnhardt moved into the lead on the official sixth lap and held it the rest of the way.

Laps run under a caution flag do not count in this event.

Geoff Bodine, in a Chevrolet, spun between turns three and four on the fifth trip around Daytona's 2.5-mile tri-oval. He was next to Earnhardt's car when he lost control, then nearly gathered in Elliott as he slid wildly down the banking.

But Bodine, who finished fourth, managed to miss the other cars and the wall, eventually pulling into the pits for new tires and some front-end adjustments before continuing.

Labonte finished fifth, followed by Rusty Wallace, the wild-card entry in this race for the second straight year, Harry Gant and defending Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip, who earned last-place money of $10,500 after struggling the entire race with chassis setup.

Steen Sets World Best

TORONTO (AP) — Dave Steen of Toronto, who finished eighth in the decathlon at the 1984 Olympics, set a world best in the indoor pentathlon at the University of Toronto Track Classic Saturday night.

The 25-year-old Steen set the mark with 4,245 points, 26 points better than the previous best set by two-time Olympic decathlon gold medalist Daley Thompson of Britain in 1984. Thompson had eclipsed the world best of 4,105 points set two years ago by Steen at the Toronto meet.

Virginia Takes Missouri 64-62

By DOUG TUCKER

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Virginia left Mid-America with a 64-62 victory over Missouri Sunday because Richard Morgan, a freshman, has rare presence of mind.

The Cavaliers of the Atlantic Coast Conference were clinging to a 2-point lead in the final seconds of the remarkably crisp, clean game. The Tigers of the Big Eight called a time out with 20 seconds left, then came down court.

Morgan waited, then pounced, coming up with a steal as the final seconds ticked off, denying Missouri a chance at tying the game.

"There was about 3-5 seconds left to go and I knew they had to go to (Jeff) Strong sooner or later," said Morgan. "I anticipated it and I just happened to get the ball."

Olden Polynice canned a pair of free throws with a little more than two minutes left for what proved the winning points as Virginia raised its record to 15-6 and plunged Missouri, with its third straight loss, to 17-10. The score was tied 34-34 at halftime of the see-saw affair and neither team ever led by more than three points after intermission.

"That was one of the finest games I've ever been involved in," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "Norm Stewart really had his team prepared for us. At the end we were very fortunate to win the game. Missouri played as well as any team we've played this year."

After losing Saturday night at home to an underdog Nebraska squad, Stewart started a lineup that included three freshmen.

"They definitely threw us a curve with that one," said Virginia's Tom Sheehey. "They were trying to keep us one step off and it worked for a while."

Stewart could not fault the effort of his Tigers.

"I thought we came back from yesterday's ball game and really played well," he said. "The little things beat us. We didn't block off the free-throw line twice."

All three officials were from the ACC. Virginia hit 14 of 18 free throws. Missouri hit two of the three free throws they were given.

"They were on the free-throw line a lot," said Stewart. "They went inside a lot, and it worked well for them. It was a tremendous ballgame."

Stewart said his surprise lineup was "an experiment."

"We're out of the conference, so we can do some different things," he said. "We can experiment a little. I thought they responded well."

Greg Church, a freshman forward, hit his first four shots from the field.

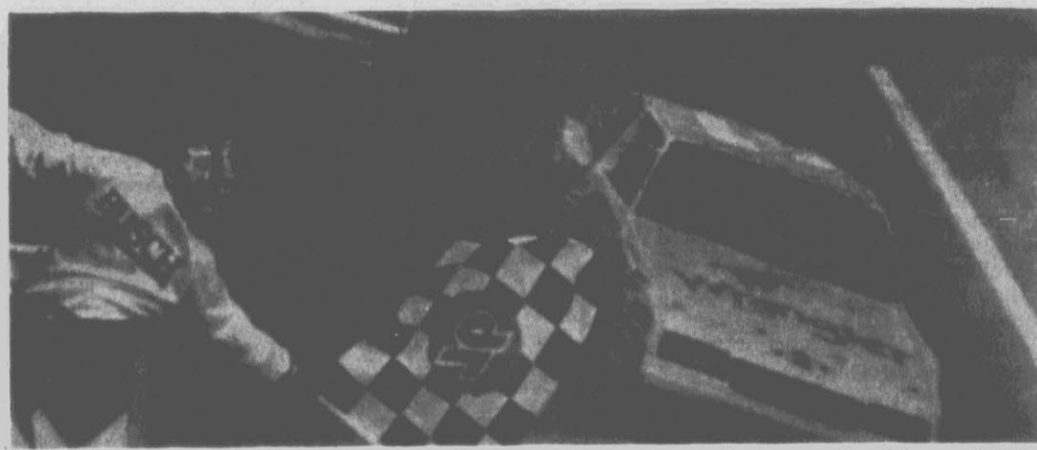

"And he played acceptable defense," Stewart said. "I was really pleased with Church and (guard Steve) Musser. They gave us a good effort."

Polynice led the Cavaliers with 14 points while Mel Kennedy had 13 and Morgan tossed in 10. Derrick Chievous topped the Tigers with 16 points.

139-132 Victory

East Stars Outscores West

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — It was some 12 hours before the 36th annual NBA All-Star game and East guard Isiah Thomas stood eye-to-eye with West Coach Pat Riley in an elevator.

"There's a rock 'n' roll party going on, Isiah, what's the hurry?" kidded Riley.

"Coach," Thomas shot back, "I've got to get a good night's rest. We want to give your guys a hard time tomorrow."

"I knew right then we were going to have some trouble," Riley said. "Isiah had that look in his eye."

Thomas scored 30 points, dished out 10 assists, and outdueled Earvin "Magic" Johnson Sunday in a 139-132 East victory.

The point guard for the Detroit Pistons was unanimously named the Most Valuable Player for the second time in his five-year career in which he has never missed starting in an All-Star game.

The fiercely competitive play put to rest theories that players coast in All-Star games.

"A lot of fans don't know how important these games are to us," Sidney Moncrief of the East said. "We wanted to win it bad and since we did it is very special."

Thomas admitted he wasn't fired up about the game when he left Friday to come to Dallas.

"I was tired, my feet hurt and my head hurt," Thomas said. "When we landed in Dallas I started getting excited. I was ready to play before I got off the plane."

Thomas played attack basketball against the West, driving down the lane clogged with seven-footers.

"His nature is to attack and he creates so many opportunities when he penetrates down the lane," Riley said.

"He's a small package of dynamite," East Coach K.C. Jones said of Thomas, who scored 20 of his points in the second half.

Johnson, playing gamely on a sore knee which stiffened up on him in the fourth period, had 15 assists but turned the ball over nine times. He scored six points, taking only three shots.

"This is one of the best all-star games ever," Johnson said. "The first quarter was some of the best basketball ever, crisp passing, great shooting, and constant scoring. It made the fans excited."

A sellout crowd of 16,573 jammed Reunion Arena in the first NBA All-Star game ever held in Texas.

"It was great to be on the court with Isiah," Johnson said, "but we were on separate sides and both wanted to win badly."

Thomas said it was a dream come true for the second time in his life.

"When I was a kid, I never dreamed I'd be on the court with the best players in the world," Thomas, a collegiate star at Indiana, said. "Now it (MVP) has happened twice and I find it unbelievable."

He added, "It's hard to describe the feeling. It's very emotional to be singled out as the best when you think of all the people in the world playing basketball."

Thomas said his one-on-one game with Johnson was a kick.

"It's hard going against Magic but then again it's fun," Thomas said. "He's just so good that it makes the game extremely exciting. I could never have the upper hand against him, though, until I win as many world titles as he has won."

Missing from the East lineup was New York Knicks' center Patrick Ewing.

"My right knee is sore and I decided today not to play," Ewing, who added he didn't want to talk about it anymore, said.

Asked if the soreness would possibly keep him out of any Knicks' games, he answered, "Yep."

Ewing's absence forced Jones to play a big-man lineup, which included Thomas as the only true guard. Forward Larry Bird played guard the last 3:50 as the East outscored the West 18-4.

"They had to make an adjustment to contain Isiah," Bird said. "He was a good choice for MVP, no doubt about it."

Bird scored 23 points for the East while the West was led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had 21 points in his record 15th All-Star game.

"I thought we came back from yesterday's ball game and really

West Oldtimers Down East, 53-44

DALLAS (AP) — Oscar Robertson and Calvin Murphy rallied the West All-Stars from an 11-point deficit to a 53-44 victory over the East All-Stars on Saturday in the National Basketball Association Legends Classic.

The West scored the last 13 points of the game. Robertson, known as "The Big O" during his 14-year NBA career, hit a free throw to give the West a 45-44 lead with 4:44 to play. Pete Maravich had made nine straight points to give the East a 44-40 lead.

Arguello Wins In Fourth

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Alexis Arguello was angry to the point that he threatened not to fight Billy Costello.

Victor Valle, Costello's trainer, complained about how Arguello had wrapped his hands, and the Nevada State Athletic Commission ordered him to rewrap them.

"I'm not going to fight," the former featherweight, super featherweight and lightweight champion said minutes before he was supposed to battle Costello in a scheduled 10-round bout on CBS-TV.

Trainer Don Kahn quieted Arguello, so the dream of an unprecedented fourth championship lives.

"The best will always win in the ring," Arguello, who will be 34 on April 19, said.

But for three rounds Sunday before a crowd of about 2,500 at the 11,000-seat Lawlor Events Center, Arguello was not the best — all three judges scored each round for Costello.

Then what Arguello called "a clean right hand to the chin" knocked Costello down at 1:04 of the fourth round. Thirty-eight seconds later referee Mills Lane stopped the fight.

"I'm looking forward to a fourth title," Arguello, who has an 80-6 record, with 65 knockouts, said. "I will keep trying. I tried with Pryor twice."

Arguello was knocked out in the 14th and 10th rounds by Aaron Pryor in 1982 and 1983.

LOOKING FOR HELP — Golfer Bob Tway peers through the branches of a tree as he looks for room to hit his second shot on the 17th hole during Sunday's final round of the Shearson Lehman Brothers Andy Williams Open in San Diego. Tway won the tournament in a playoff. (AP Laserphoto)

USOC Opts Out Of Public Tiff

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Committee, its financial future brighter by millions of dollars, has chosen not to engage in a public tiff over media entrepreneur Ted Turner's Goodwill Games.

The USOC executive board adjourned Sunday after three days of meetings which some believed would produce sharp differences about the 18-sport games to be held in Moscow this summer and aimed at bringing together athletes long estranged by Olympic boycotts.

Instead, the spirited debate unfolded during closed-door committee meetings, and on Sunday it was announced a proposed resolution insisting on USOC participation in non-Olympic games had been scrapped.

Also Sunday, USOC President Robert H. Helmick said that through a soon-to-be-signed agreement with the International Olympic Committee, the USOC will receive $15 million of the money paid for television rights to the 1988 Summer and Winter Olympic Games and at least four times that amount in each succeeding Olympics.

"We've tried to reach a consensus," Helmick said of an ad hoc committee's decision on the Goodwill Games. The committee said the USOC should do nothing to infringe on the right of an athlete or governing body of a sport to participate in international competition.

The Goodwill Games, scheduled July 5-20, are expected to draw about 5,000 athletes from the United States, the Soviet Union and 40 other nations.

Conceived by Turner, whose Turner Broadcasting System will bring 129 hours of coverage to American viewers, the games have been strongly supported by The Athletics Congress, the governing body for track and field and the USOC's most powerful member.

Tway Takes Williams Win On PGA Tour

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bernhard Langer shrugged off the cross-handed putt that misfired and paved the way for Bob Tway to become a first-time winner in the Shearson Lehman Brothers Andy Williams Open.

"I was trying as hard as I could to win. We're professionals. That's what we do. But Bob played very well," Langer said, then observed: "It will probably do more for him than it would for me, so maybe it's best that it happened this way."

And Tway, 26, now in his second year on the PGA Tour, was quick to agree.

"It opens a lot of doors," he said after he defeated Langer with a two-putt par on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff.

"It puts me in the Tournament of Champions, the Masters. It opens up so many more tournaments, so many more possibilities."

"The first win is the biggest. Maybe it will make it easier for the others to come," Tway said. And this one definitely was not easy.

Tway, in the last group on the course, dropped back into a tie for the lead when he drove into trouble, missed the green and bogeyed the 17th hole.

He needed a birdie on the par-5 18th to win the tournament outright but soon found himself facing a six-to-eight foot second putt to save par and force a playoff.

He made it, finishing off a closing-round 39. That put him through 54 holes — the tournament was reduced to a three-round format after Saturday's play was rained out — in 204, 12 under par and tied with Langer. Langer, the West German who holds the Masters title and is vastly more experienced than Tway, played the last round in 68.

The first playoff hole was halved in routine pars. Both hit the green on the next, a par-3.

Langer ran his first putt, from about 30 feet, some six-to-eight feet beyond the cup. Tway missed from 20 feet.

Then Langer, putting through the distracting shadow of a television tower, missed the comeback putt and — tight-lipped — tapped in for bogey. Tway made his little one for par and was a winner.

"An undescrivable feeling," Tway, a 6-foot-4 native of Edmond, Okla. "You play golf all your life hoping this will happen and it finally comes."

The victory was worth $81,000 from the total purse of $450,000. Langer, who has won 17 career international events, and hasn't been lower than 13th in five starts this young season, won $48,000.

Paul Azinger, Mark Lye and Mike Hulbert finished one shot out of the playoff at 205. Hulbert had a closing 67, Lye and Azinger 69s.

Experience Key To Johnson Win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Experience in the ring and in his corner was a winning formula for Marvin Johnson — the light heavyweight champion for an unprecedented third time.

"His experience and my inexperience is what hurt me," Leslie Stewart of Trinidad said after his bid for the World Boxing Association title ended in a knockout Sunday with referee Franco Priani of Italy stopping the fight 56 seconds into the seventh round.

Stewart, 24, who weighed 175 pounds, was bleeding from cuts around both eyes when the fight ended.

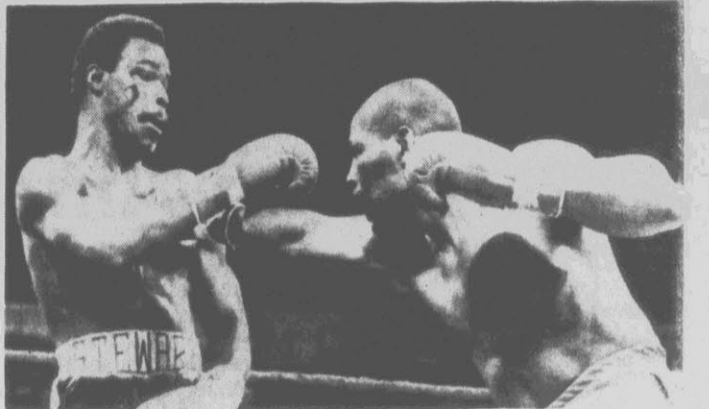

"The blood was bothering me, but I feel the fight could have gone a couple of more rounds," he said after losing for the first time in 19 professional fights.

"Next time I'll be better prepared," said Stewart, who had hoped his youth and physical conditioning would pay off if the fight went the scheduled 15 rounds.

"We lost the fight because both fighters were cut in the first round. They stopped the bleeding in Johnson's corner right away. We were never able to stop the bleeding," Jim Cavo, Stewart's manager, said. "They knew what to do and we didn't. I'll take the blame for the loss."

Johnson unloaded an assortment of jabs and heavy punches to Stewart's head from the opening bell.

"Stewart gave it everything he had, but I was a little too wise and a little too experienced. He fought a good fight, but he didn't seem ready for me," Johnson said.

NBC 'Under Siege' Movie Upsets Arab-Americans

DETROIT (AP) — A television drama about Middle Eastern terrorists operating from a Detroit suburb is part of a barrage of anti-Arab propaganda that threatens the safety of Arab-Americans, community spokesmen say.

"Under Siege," broadcast Sunday night by NBC, depicted terrorism conducted by a group based in Dearborn, a city of about 91,000 bordering Detroit on the west. There are an estimated 20,000 people of Arab descent living in the Detroit area, with 7,564 Arab-Americans in Dearborn, according to the 1980 Census.

"We do not want to further increase the atmosphere that Arab Americans are fair game and a suspect community," said Abdeen Jabara, a Detroit attorney and vice chairman of the Washington-based American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee.

"This is occurring at a time when a spate of movies are being shown ... which portray Arabs or Middle Easterners as violent, terrorist-bent, bloodthirsty — which creates a frenzied atmosphere," Jabara said Sunday.

In Denver, meanwhile, Moslems picketed the local affiliate of NBC as a protest against the showing of "Under Siege" and the local affiliate of ABC-TV, which showed the first episode of a two-part mini-series called "Harem."

Officials at KCNC showed "Under Siege" intact but agreed to preface it with a disclaimer reading: "This program you are about to see raises important civil liberties questions. It is fictional and not intended to reflect adversely upon the character of law-abiding Arab-Americans or American Muslim communities."

Detroit-area Arab-Americans sought without success to have Detroit NBC-affiliate WDIV delete references to Dearborn from "Under Siege."

About 50 protesters picketed outside the station Saturday and about 400 people called the station about the show, 250 of them while it was on the air, said WDIV spokeswoman Eileen Wunderlich.

"Most of the calls were calls critical of showing the movie," Wunderlich said. "They objected to Dearborn or Detroit being mentioned."

Warren David, director of the Arab-American Media Society, said that wasn't enough.

"The overall theme of the movie is that there are a bunch of terrorists in Dearborn and they are plotting to overthrow the government," said Warren after previewing the film last week at WDIV with other Arab-American community leaders.

"When I saw Dearborn on the screen, I couldn't help but think that this is going to provoke a very serious response in the community," David said.

"Arab-Americans feel that in this country there is a great deal of anti-Arab feeling," said spokesman Stephen Menick of the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee. "We feel that we have been singled out by the entertainment industry, which plays upon the emotions of the hour."

The Justice Department ordered the FBI in December to investigate recent bombings of the offices of the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee, including an October attack in California that killed a regional director of the organization.

On Aug. 2, a pipe bomb found outside the group's Boston office exploded in the face of a police officer, severely wounding him. In December, a fire heavily damaged its Washington headquarters.

"We have to explain to Americans that we are ones who feel under siege," Jabara said.

Star Assistance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Country music star Larry Gatlin is giving a helping hand to the nationwide Project Safe Place program to help runaway and homeless children.

"I think before we feed one more person anywhere, or clothe one more person anywhere, we ought to take care of our own," Gatlin said in ceremonies kicking off the federally funded project.

Gatlin said he contributed the song "Runaway Go Home" and music video to publicize the plight of runaways after he saw a Continental Trailways billboard in Illinois offering a free ride home for runaway youths.

The two-minute video will appear on cable television's music channel, MTV, Dorcas Hardy, assistant secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, said Friday.

There are now 273 federally funded shelters in the country, four of them in Los Angeles.

The Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter opened on July 1 and is located one mile south of Bells Fork of the County Home Road.

Hollywood, Government Turn Deaf Ear To Soviet Union's Movie Grumbling

RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union, grumbling about Hollywood's use of communist villains for recent American movie plots, isn't getting much sympathy from the entertainment world or the U.S. government.

While the Soviets complain that the latest adventures of "Rambo" and "Rocky" have fostered anti-Soviet feelings, the profits roll in for western moviemakers in the true capitalist tradition. After all, Hollywood officials say, it's their business to sell movie tickets, not to worry about offending governments.

"The job of the filmmaker is to entertain audiences, not to be a political instrument," says Jack Valenti, president of the Washington-based Motion Picture Association of America. "They tell stories that they think people want to see. It has absolutely nothing to do with political propaganda."

The entertainment industry hardly blinked when the Soviet government newspaper Isvestia lashed out last month against what it called "vituperative anti-Sovietism" in the United States.

Isvestia said Hollywood fomented such attitudes by turning out "such lowly anti-Soviet products" as the movies "Rambo-First Blood Part II," in which a Vietnam veteran tries to rescue Americans in Indochina, and "Red Dawn," about a Soviet invasion of the United States.

But industry spokesmen point out that it isn't government criticism that makes Hollywood tick, it's what sells and entertains.

Veteran Hollywood columnist Marilyn Beck commented, "I never thought I might think the Soviets had a point, but I think that Hollywood has never been long on a general sense of moral responsibility."

"People who are concerned about the Cold War want to cool it down and are upset (about such films). But it's unmistakable that it's profitable," said Harry Chotiner, production executive at Filmvest Inc. in California.

Independent producer Mark Rosenberg, former president of Warner Bros. motion picture division, said he finds the anti-Soviet movies "politically offensive, but I would defend anyone's right to make them, and anybody's right to resist Soviet pressure."

"A corporate officer has a responsibility not only to himself or herself but to board members and stockholders to make movies that are profitable," he said.

And Commie bad guys seem to be what's profitable now.

"Rambo," grossing $150.4 million in box office receipts, was the No. 2

Professor Takes Aim At Myths

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Most cowboys were lousy shots. The streets of New York were meaner than the dusty paths of Dodge City. And "heroic" Wild Bill Hickok was fired for incompetence as marshal of Abilene.

Sorry, pard'ners, but Rutgers University history professor William Gillette is aiming to shoot down time-honored, Hollywood-bred myths of the Wild West.

His class, "Cowboys and Indians," has grown into the most popular history course on campus since Gillette first offered it six years ago, despite its unenticing hour of 7-9:30 p.m. Tuesdays.

On a recent rainy evening, hardly a seat was empty in the 300-seat auditorium as Gillette strode to the podium, dressed in a red checkered shirt, blue jeans with a thick leather belt, and what has become his trademark: a straw cowboy hat.

money movie of 1985. "Rocky IV," the box office hit about the legendary Philadelphia boxer's triumph over a bullying Russian rival, as of last weekend had grossed $119 million in its first nine weeks of release.

Sylvester Stallone starred in both "Rambo" movies and in "Rocky IV." He also co-wrote the second "Rambo" movie and wrote and directed "Rocky IV."

Irv Ivers, president of worldwide marketing for MGM-UA, which released "Rocky IV," noted that the entertainment business "usually picks up on what's self evident" as a current popular theme for a movie.

"I think we're selling entertainment," Ivers said. "I don't think it's anything political at all."

Charles Z. Wick, director of the U.S. Information Agency, said movies generally mirror the mood of a society.

"The Soviet Union should worry not about whether they (the movies) are leading public opinion, but to what extent is it reflecting public opinion," Wick said.

Still, in a mass-media age, "movies do help mold public opinion in the U.S. just like everything else," said Wick, who once was active in film, radio and television as a California businessman.

He said he discussed the Isvestia criticism when he met with Soviet officials last month to arrange the forthcoming U.S.-Soviet cultural exchange.

"I think that they're being offended and not liking it is totally understandable," Wick said. "That is a moot point."

He said he told Soviet officials

"they might not like it, but they have to understand it's part of our system, and it's not an effort on the part of our government to manipulate a fever."

Further, he said, the Soviets shouldn't gripe since the U.S. government often fares poorly at the hands of filmmakers, too.

Helmut Sonnenfeldt, a guest scholar at the liberal Brookings Institution in Washington, said "a normal foreign government as a rule knows better than to complain about such a thing," especially since the Soviet villain is only the latest in a line that has included Indians, Germans and Japanese.

Valenti agreed, saying even if the Soviets do have a point, "there's no way to do anything about it. We have in this country a thing called the First Amendment."

A Buried Treasure

DENVER (AP) — More than $1 million in gold buried in Tupperware containers was found by federal agents who followed a map they found in the home of a man accused of smuggling cocaine, according to a published report.

A copyrighted story in Sunday's editions of the Rocky Mountain News said the gold coins were found in a Nebraska field by agents who followed the map they found in the Hawaii home of William Compton Musson.

He also owned the land on which the coins were found, the newspaper said.

The newspaper, quoting unnamed agents, said the coins were found a year ago but the episode was not previously revealed by the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Musson and two other men were indicted by a federal grand jury in Denver last October on cocaine-smuggling charges. Authorities say the ring brought in 850 pounds of cocaine between 1976 and 1982 for a profit of $4 million.

Charged along with Musson are William Francis Van Nuys, of Long Beach, Calif.; and Gary Erwin Mintz, of Denver.

The News said DEA records say the map was apparently drawn by Musson and depicted a large white cliff that was cracked down the middle and flanked by trees on each side.

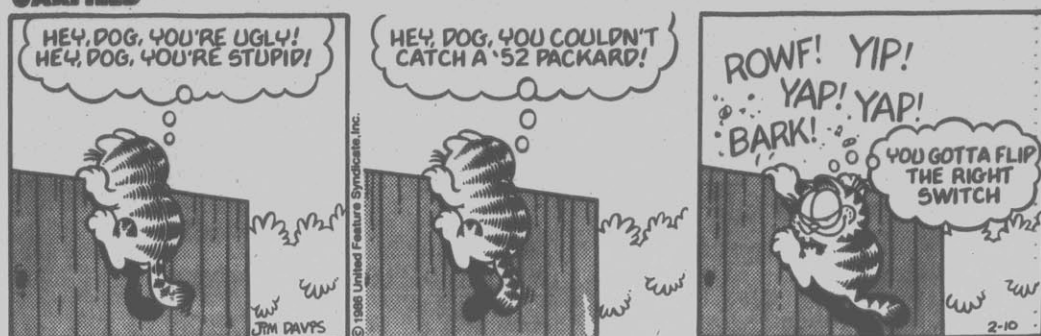

Written on the map was a message: "From trees near center, 20 paces apart."

The agents said they knew Musson owned property in Hawaii, Colorado, New Mexico and Nebraska. They decided to start their search for the treasure on the 640 acres he owned in Sioux County, Neb., near the Wyoming border.

On Feb. 5, 1985, DEA agents found the white cliff and the two trees after several hours of searching Musson's property. Moments later, their metal detector went crazy. Agents began to dig and soon uncovered about a dozen Tupperware containers bearing 441 gold pieces.

Coin experts appraised the gold at about $1 million.

Lawyer Says N.C. Rules Attract Theft Rings

RALEIGH (AP) — Division of Motor Vehicles procedures used in authorizing titles for rebuilt cars are lax and attract car-theft rings to North Carolina like the one state officials recently uncovered, a Raleigh attorney says.

"North Carolina has become a dumping ground (for stolen cars) because of these procedures — it's easy," Ronald I. Kirschbaum said.

One arrest has been made, and state officials say they are still investigating a car-theft ring that stole about 400 cars in New York last year and sold them through unsuspecting dealers in at least 17 North Carolina cities and in three other states.

Authorities believe the ring netted as much as $2 million last year.

"This is probably as large as I've seen," said Donald W. Stahl, director of the License, Theft and Weight Enforcement section of the DMV. "To this point we have recovered — and it changes by almost the half day — 25 known stolen vehicles."

The theft ring bought wrecked cars in several northern cities, stole similar cars in New York City and marked the stolen cars with the serial numbers of the wrecks, Stahl said.

The ring then presented the stolen cars to state inspectors, saying they had rebuilt the wrecks, and obtained North Carolina titles for them, he said.

The stolen cars were sold directly to dealers or through automobile auctions. They wound up in the hands of buyers and dealers in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Florida, Stahl said.

Authorities in the other three states have been notified, he said.

Most of the stolen cars were late-model Cadillacs, Oldsmobiles, Buicks and Chevrolets, Stahl said.

Although 25 cars have been identified as stolen, authorities expected to find about 150 more in North Carolina, Stahl said. The cars were traced to dealers in Raleigh, Durham, Greensboro, Rocky Mount, Sanford, Wilson, Winston-Salem and several other cities.

As part of the investigation, which began in early November, teams of investigators have dismantled suspect cars and used a process to restore serial numbers that had been erased by the theft ring. Stahl declined to discuss the process used to restore the numbers.

The FBI in Raleigh is helping the DMV with the investigation because the case involves interstate transactions.

A Raleigh dealer, Thompson Cadillac-Oldsmobile Inc., bought at least six of the stolen cars through other dealers or auctions, Stahl said.

"I was shocked at first and then mad when I found out what happened," said Mark B. Thompson, co-owner of the dealership. "I guess we're just going to have to be extra careful about where we buy."

Thompson said the customers to whom the dealership sold the stolen cars were asked to return the cars so DMV officials could inspect them.

Kirschbaum, who represents Thompson Cadillac-Oldsmobile, said the state did not require receipts to show how much money was spent to rebuild a car and that rebuilders could easily lie about repair costs to obtain a title without the "R" designation. Thompson Cadillac-Oldsmobile would not have bought the cars later identified as stolen if the titles had shown them to be rebuilt, he said.

Kirschbaum declined to say how much money the dealership lost on the six stolen cars, but he said the dealership likely would sue the state to recover its losses.

William W. Melvin, a senior deputy attorney general, said he did not think the state would be required to pay damages to dealers who bought the stolen cars.

"We don't guarantee that the car is not stolen when we look at it," Melvin said. "There's no way in the world the state of North Carolina is going to take on the position of guaranteeing that (the dealers) are not buying stolen cars."

IN THE STATE

Fearful Flier Course

RALEIGH (AP) — The last time Syble Miller was on an airplane, she flew from the Raleigh-Durham Airport to Dallas for her company's annual sales meeting in 1974. She took the train home.

"I just said to my husband, 'I don't know how you're going to get us back but I'm not getting on that plane,'" said Mrs. Miller, who got home to Burlington three days later on Amtrak.

She is one of an estimated 25 million Americans who are afraid to fly.

But on Thursday nights, Mrs. Miller and 28 others get together to try to conquer their fear of flying. The course, called "Fearful Flier," was organized by USAir and is held at a motel across from the Raleigh-Durham Airport terminal.

For a $195 fee, the seven-session course features instructions in relaxation techniques and principles of aviation. It discusses training for pilots and mechanics and concludes with a one-hour flight, billed as a graduation ceremony.

The people in the course are concerned about everything from the stability of the plane to the qualifications of the pilot.

"I'm not in charge and I can't see where I'm going," Mrs. Miller said. "You're sitting there in this slender steel tube. There are no sign posts up there."

Members of the class spent the first session describing their fears to one another. Last week, retired USAir pilot Frank Petee Jr. led a discussion that covered pilot training, aircraft reliability and turbulence.

"A lot of people think that during takeoff, the engines are at full power, struggling and straining to get that heavy airplane off the ground," Petee said.

A chorus of "That's true," rippled through the room.

"The airplane isn't even using its full power to take off," Petee told the class. "There's always reserve power. All the captain has to do is push forward on the takeoff throttles."

Petee also tried to dispel other myths in the minds of his pupils.

"An airplane does not have to have power to fly," Petee said. "It needs power to get up into the air, but once there ... air is very solid."

A plane can glide, if necessary, to safe landing, Petee said.

"It's not going to just fall out of the sky without power," he said. During bumpy rides, "the airplane is not going to break apart and the pilot is not going to lose control."

Cuts Worry Officials

RALEIGH (AP) — The progress North Carolina has made in assisting the handicapped will be impeded by federal funding cuts expected under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act, state officials say.

"Programs for the handicapped will be tremendously damaged," said E. Lowell Harris, director of the Division for Exceptional Children in the state Department of Public Instruction. "A lot of children will not be receiving the services they need."

Harris said his division is expecting a 4.3 percent to 4.6 percent cut in funding in fiscal 1986, and possibly a 30 percent cut the following year.

He and other officials note that state and federal laws require North Carolina to provide an appropriate education for handicapped children. But several officials said it's unclear how the state will be able to do that if the federal losses aren't replaced, perhaps by state funds.

Cheston V. Mottershead Jr., who runs Tri-County Industries for the Handicapped Inc. from a wheelchair, said he, too, is worried about the impact of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings, a federal budget-cutting measure that could sharply limit federal assistance to states.

"A lot of these (handicapped) programs are partnerships, with the federal government putting up 80 percent of the money and the states putting up 20 percent," said the 49-year-old Rocky Mount man, who in 1978 became the first disabled person to receive the Governor's Distinguished Service Award.

Another Problem?

RAINBOW SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — Wildlife officials say they're already plagued by wild dogs killing game, especially young deer and turkeys, and they fear the introduction of coyotes to Clay and Macon counties could bring more harm to wildlife.

"It's just added one more predator to the list, and this one's the most efficient," said Tomie J. England, a state wildlife enforcement officer.

"We might be seeing the start of something that we'll regret ever got started out here," said Jay Davies, a field representative for the state Wildlife Commission.

No one is sure how many coyotes are here — or exactly how they got here — but in the last year three have been killed and numerous sightings confirmed from the Shooting Creek-Deep Gap area to the head of Nantahala Lake, said Dewalt Hyde, chief of security for the Rainbow Springs Corp. a private hunting and fishing club.
