House OKs Referendum On Waste Sites

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly convened today to consider emergency bills that would provide insurance coverage which many homeowners and businesses say has become all but impossible to find.

insurance Commissioner Jim Long, said in a special message to the Legislature that the bills Long has proposed should be passed, "not as a cure-all, but as an appropriate first step" toward easing the insurance crisis.

Carolina should host a repository for high-level radioactive wastes. The referendum would be held during the May 6 primary election.

The House suspended its rules to allow consideration of bills that would improve voting accessibility for the elderly and handicapped, clarify laws on court costs, and rework a section of the Administrative Procedures Act, which deals with executive branch regulatory authority.

The Senate, however, rebelled at proposals to raise additional issues. It voted down motions to permit introduction of the APA bill and another that would permit the state attorney general to initiate the removal of a sheriff from office if convicted of a crime.

problems plaguing insurance in North Carolina: a shortage of liability, property and casualty insurance. The other problem, soaring premiums, will be addressed in later sessions.

Johnson & Johnson Drops Over-Counter Capsules

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Johnson & Johnson will no longer produce over-the-counter medicines in capsules because it cannot guarantee their safety, but whoever killed a woman with cyanide-laced Tylenol has not beaten the health care giant, its chairman says.

not going to defeat us." The decision to stop production came nine days after a New York woman was killed by cyanide-contaminated Tylenol capsules and 3½ years after seven people in Illinois suffered the same fate.

County Schedules Early Revaluation Of Property

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Citing a decline in the value of farm property and new laws designed to make the valuation of farmland more uniform across the state, the Pitt County Board of Commissioners voted Monday to revalue property in the county a year earlier than normal, with county employees doing the work.

Gaskins said. Before making their decision, the commissioners received an estimate from County Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee that the cost of the revaluation would not exceed $326,100. He said the estimate included $210,000 for "a consultant to set land value," $105,000 for additional employees and $11,100 for supplies (including printing and reproduction of maps to be used in the field).

Hardee also reminded commissioners that laws passed by the 1985 General Assembly will require all counties in the state, beginning in 1987, to value farm land based on soil type and income, taking into account a 9 percent capitalization rate. He said "five year production (income) figures" will be supplied by the state to all counties.

PCC Says Classes Provide Needed Training

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The administration and faculty of Pitt Community College are working to combat shortages of trained vocational workers in the state, according to PCC officials.

The president of the state Department of Community Colleges recently announced a major statewide initiative to increase enrollments in vocational education programs and to improve the quality of training available through both the public schools and community colleges.

"Pitt Community College provides individuals opportunities for acquiring occupational skills in demand in the local, regional and state economies by offering a full range of technical and vocational programs," said Dr. Charles E. Russell, president of PCC. "The programs are designed to prepare graduates or early learners with skills needed for good on-the-job performance and with the conceptual foundation to enable them to adapt to a changing work environment."

According to Robert W. Scott, president of the Department of Community Colleges, dwindling numbers of trained vocational workers and inadequate education for first-time workers add up to long-term trouble for North Carolina.

In a speech to the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce last week, Scott cited a recent occupational forecast commissioned by the State Board of Community Colleges which studied 58 occupational areas in which the community college system provides training. Forty of those areas are expected to have shortages.

"Pitt Community College is training in a majority of the occupations that are predicted to have need over the next months and years," according to Dr. Edgar L. Boyd, dean of students at PCC.

Some of the occupational voids mentioned in the survey which PCC is working to fill include nursing assistant, legal assistant, electronic servicing, secretarial and stenographic, commercial art, real estate, surgical technology and law enforcement.

Leslie Rogers, placement officer at PCC, said 250 job openings were listed at PCC last year. She said the purpose of the career planning and placement center, which is open to all Pitt County residents, is "to have current information about available jobs and help folks make a career decision."

She said teachers in each program at PCC keep abreast of the job situations through an advisory committee composed of a cross-section of people involved in the field. Staff members also talk to local businesses and individual employers in the area.

"It's not just the person with the high technology skills that are in demand," Ms. Rogers said, "it's also the basic graduate with math skills."

"Our students graduate trained for a job," she said. "They go in and immediately have a cost-effectiveness for the employer. They have applied skills and are ready to work. They don't need the training that someone with a four-year degree from a college needs in order to a job."

Boyd said the local community college's growth in the past several years has resulted from part-time students who return to school to update their skills or learn new skills.

"We're in the business of occupational education," Boyd said. He noted that 65 percent of the PCC graduates are employed in the fields they trained in at the institution. He said 17 percent of the graduates continue their education.

"We are always looking at other areas to implement at PCC to fulfill the need" for trained workers, Boyd said. "The manufacturing engineering program is the newest at PCC."

In The Area

Thefts Investigated

Greenville police said five thefts were reported to the department on Monday.

Officer E.M. Haddock said a 25 horsepower boat motor was taken from 2700 Jefferson Drive in an incident reported at 9:07 a.m., while Officer G.W. Williams said a coin operated newspaper rack containing an estimated $45 in change was taken from the post office on East Tenth Street in an incident reported at 11:50 a.m.

Officer M.J. Nobles said a jacket, which was later recovered, was taken from Jeans Glory on Evans Mall in an incident reported at 2:14 p.m., while Officer J.K. McCarthy said 30 gold-colored chains valued at $130 were taken from a car parked on Hooker Road in an incident reported at 4:16 p.m., and a wallet containing $22 in cash was taken from Sears Roebuck & Co. at Carolina East Mall in an incident reported at 6:48 p.m.

Multiple Charges

Jerrold Douglas Spellman, 36, of 1911 N. Pitt St. was arrested by Greenville police Monday on two counts of breaking and entering, and one count each of larceny and possession of stolen goods.

Officer J.G. Bridges said Spellman was charged with breaking and entering, larceny and possession of stolen goods in connection with the theft of a .22 caliber pistol, a camera and coat from a car parked at the King and Queen Restaurant on Eastbrook Drive that occurred on Friday night.

Bridges said the property was recovered a short time later from a car parked at Branch Banking and Trust Co. on Arlington Boulevard, and the car was impounded.

Officer D.W. Nichols said the camera, coat and pistol were recovered by officers investigating a report of a vehicle break-in at the BB&T office. Nichols said Spellman was charged with breaking and entering in connection with that case also.

Film Scheduled

The movie "Joni" will be shown Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the chapel of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, 510 S. Washington St. The film is based on the autobiography of Joni Eareckson, a quadriplegic young woman.

Scheduled meetings for Greenville and Pitt County governmental agencies for the week of Feb. 16-22 include:

Wednesday
10 a.m. — Pitt County Board of Commissioners, workshop, first floor conference room, county office building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

7:30 a.m. — City of Greenville method of election information meeting, third floor council chambers, City Hall, 201 W. Fifth St.

Hospital Grants

The Duke Endowment has awarded three area hospitals more than $52,000 in operating grants.

Receiving money were Pitt County Memorial Hospital, $46,371; Beaufort County Hospital, $6,286, and Robersonville Community Hospital, $118.

In North Carolina and South Carolina, 172 hospitals have received similar funds amounting to about $3.1 million.

The hospitals will use the money to cover costs of indigent care and data-gathering services, according to Ashley H. Gale Jr., director of the endowment's hospital and child care divisions. The grants were approved by trustee's at their February meeting.

Accountants Meet

The Eastern Carolina chapter of the National Association of Accountants will meet Wednesday at 6:15 p.m. at the Holiday Inn.

Edward Wheatly, chairman of the department of marketing at East Carolina University, will be the guest speaker.

Wheatly, a consultant to national and multinational firms, has authored three books and 25 articles. He will speak to the group on "Marketing Professional Services."

For more information, call Paul Setliff at 752-4126.

Benefit Car Show

The second annual car show to benefit the United Cerebral Palsy Developmental/Educational Center in Greenville has been set for the weekend of May 16 at The Plaza, according to Ann Wilson, car show chairman.

The event, "Ultimate Cruise-in at The Plaza," is sponsored by the Advisory Council of the United Cerebral Palsy Center. Trophies will be awarded in 12 classes, with over 125 entries expected.

Subcommittee chairmen named include: Mike Waters and Bill Wilson, trophies; Bernie Stanley, prizes; John Moore, entertainment and dance; Deborah Waters, games; Dick Kinley, food services, and Jamie Wilson, registration.

Play Presented

First graders at Sadie Saulter School presented a play titled "Parade of Months" for other students. The drama focused on the month of February and its holidays.

School Visit

Elizabeth Ruffin and Joanne Honeycutt of the Greenville Museum of Art spoke with fifth graders at Falkland Elementary School recently. The two showed students a variety of art from the museum including poetry, sculpture, oil and water colors.

The meeting includes a meal. For further information call 752-2934.

Club Honored

The Pitt County branch of the NAACP honored the Brotherhood Club of Greenville at its Emancipation Proclamation banquet with a plaque for community services.

The Brotherhood Club of Greenville was cited for its all-day annual cookout at Thomas Foreman Park, its voter registration drive and its sponsorship of needy families on holidays. The club also helps provide shelter for the homeless and collects clothes and furniture for the needy.

Request Approved

The Greenville Police Department has approved a solicitation request by the Pitt County Alumni Association to raise money through March 5 for the Gladys Howell Scholarship.

Engineers' Week

Mayor Leslie Garner has proclaimed the seven-day period through Friday as National Engineers' Week in Greenville.

In making the proclamation, Garner cited contributions of engineers to economic prosperity, national security and science.

Platform Collapses

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A construction platform at a new office building collapsed, sending one worker falling eight stories down an elevator shaft and injuring three others, authorities said.

Donald L. Benson, 30, was working on the platform in the shaft Monday when apparently either the platform or its supporting lines gave way. He fell 100 feet from the 10th floor to the second floor, authorities said.

Benson, of Lancaster, S.C., suffered a broken leg and was in satisfactory condition today at Baptist Hospital after knee surgery, a spokeswoman said.

Three other construction workers were injured by debris that fell down the shaft to the basement where they were working, police said.

Vaughn M. Stallings, 38, of Fort Mill, S.C., received chest injuries and head lacerations and was in satisfactory condition at Baptist, a spokeswoman said. Paul Keziah, 18, of Rock Hill, S.C., was treated for back injuries and released.

Rescue officials said a fourth man was slightly injured but refused treatment.

Benson and the debris broke through timber and plywood safety platforms on other floors of the 20-story building, said Earl Guill, construction manager for The Webb Cos. The platforms are placed on different levels of a construction site to prevent injuries from falling tools or debris.

Construction on the $30 million building began last summer and was scheduled to end Nov. 1.

The state Department of Labor is investigating the accident.

Senators Support Special Session

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

State Sens. Thomas Taft and Robert L. Martin both say the difficulty of securing adequate liability insurance in North Carolina justifies the special session of the Legislature that opened today.

Both officials also said that private insurance companies are supportive of what the insurance commissioner is trying to do.

The legislative session was called at the request of Insurance Commissioner Jim Long, whose office has drafted emergency legislation in light of problems faced by many businesses and agencies in securing adequate liability coverage.

"The special session is necessary to help North Carolina fill in the gap in the availability of certain kinds of coverage," Taft said. "This session is not meant to resolve all our insurance problems at this time, but we can certainly take steps that will give some relief soon."

Taft said the session should result in giving insurance companies "standby steps to take to make sure those needing it can get necessary insurance."

Taft said the effort is "receiving tremendous support from all local insurance agents. We are very encouraged by this attitude."

Taft is chairman of one of three standing committees of the Senate Insurance Committee looking into the situation.

Martin said "some areas of liability insurance coverage in North Carolina are in pretty bad shape. Something is going to have to be done. I'm not sure at this time what the best solution is, but I am entirely supportive of what the insurance commissioner is trying to do in calling this session to consider solutions to this pressing problem."

Program Of Work

The Greenville City Council in workshop session Monday outlined a program of work for the next two years.

Labeled as top priorities were budgetary matters such as loss of federal and state funds. The proposed change in the city's method of election, annexation and industrial growth were also targeted as critical items of work.

Other matters discussed by the council included long-range planning issues involving the medical district, road development, and zoning. Work is already under way on those items.

State's Distinguished Women To Be Honored

RALEIGH — Distinguished Women of North Carolina will be honored at a banquet March 21 at the Marriott Hotel. Ninety-one women have been nominated to receive the award this year.

Gov. Jim Martin will present as many as five awards at the banquet.

Among the Pitt County nominees are Laura Ellen Webb of Ayden, Edna Earle Baker of Farmville, Barbara K. Cleary, Jean Poole Creech, Dr. Malene Grant Irons, Mary Anne Pennington, and Helen Weaver, all of Greenville, and Annie Marable Brown of Simpson. Janice Hardison Faulkner, also of Greenville, has been nominated representing Martin County.

The banquet will start at 7:30 p.m. and is open to the public. It will follow a reception at 6:30 honoring the nominees. The banquet is being sponsored by the N.C. Department of Administration and the N.C. Council on the Status of Women.

The awards were presented for the first time in 1964 as part of the council's 20th anniversary observance. This year's presentation again coincides with Women's History Month in March.

A selection committee appointed by Helen Laughery of Rocky Mount, council chairperson, will determine the award recipients.

Reservation deadline is March 10. For further information contact the N.C. Council on the Status of Women, 526 N. Wilmington St., Raleigh, 27604, or call 733-4391.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Ellis Island. It has, of course, played an extraordinary part in American history. During its life as a U.S. immigration station (chiefly from 1892 to 1924) more than 12 million people passed through its Great Hall and began a new life in America.

Ellis Island was abandoned until, in 1965, it was designated as a National Monument and became part of the National Park Service. Recently a campaign was launched to ensure its preservation.

One of the projects whose proceeds are devoted to help accomplish this is a fascinating cookbook, "Tastes of Liberty: A Celebration of Our Great Ethnic Cooking." Chateau Ste. Michele, Washington State's pioneer wine producer, published the cookbook as a founding sponsor of The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation. Stunning color illustrations, binding, paper and type make this volume worthy of the finest cookbook collections.

The recipes are well-chosen and clearly written. Chapters, each with a worthwhile introduction, are devoted to recipes from Italy, Germany, Greece, Great Britain, Eastern Europe, Iberia, Scandinavia, France and Jewish cookery.

From the chapter on Iberia, we chose to try Gambas al Ajillo (Garlic Shrimp) and found it delicious — especially when served with crusty bread and white wine.

"Tastes of Liberty" is available for a minimum $20.00 contribution to Tastes of Liberty Cookbook, Liberty Centennial Fund, P.O. Box 4115, New York, NY, 10163.

GARLIC SHRIMP (Gambas al Ajillo)

- 2 to 4 cloves garlic, peeled and thinly sliced
- ½ teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
- 1 bay leaf
- 1-3rd cup olive oil
- ¾ pound small to medium shrimp, shelled and deveined
- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 1 to 2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

Cook garlic with pepper and bay leaf in oil in large shallow skillet over medium-high heat until garlic is golden, 3 to 4 minutes. Add shrimp and cook just until they turn pink, 2 to 4 minutes. Do not overcook. Remove bay leaf. Transfer to serving dish, sprinkle with lemon juice and parsley and serve immediately.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

All my husband would have to do is look at me and say, "My God, Erma! With your girly you should be an 85-foot redwood."

It would hurt. I'd cry a little. Go to my room. Maybe slam a door or two. Get a divorce. But at least it would motivate me to lose a few pounds.

But does he do that? No, he just shrugs and lays one of his cute lines on me like, "Eat whatever you want. You're an adult." Did you catch the sarcasm?

What I want to eat is Hershey, Pa., and Cocoa Beach, Fla. And he knows it!

I know where he's coming from. He figures if he can keep me in elastic waistbands, I'll have deep-seated feelings of gratitude that he stays married to me. So every chance he gets, he throws in a comment to break down my self-esteem and my discipline.

Lucky for me when I diet I don't have the usual irritability and paranoia that goes with it. I can handle his insensitivity. Like the other day at lunch, I was nibbling on whole-wheat pita bread stuffed with tomatoes and bean sprouts when my husband said, "Can I get you something while I'm up?"

The oldest trick in the world. And you think you know what you've married. He wasn't being polite. He was waiting for me to say, "How about two folding chairs in front of the refrigerator?" I know, you can't dissect every line they use, but when a husband looks at his wife who is on a diet and says, "Need anything while I'm out?" we're talking insensitivity.

I could tell you stories about my husband's callousness while I'm dieting that would curl your hair. Once he tasted a dessert I had made in the blender that brought together skim milk, goat cheese and liver (maraschino cherry optional). He touched his tongue to it and said, "This doesn't taste too bad." Is that supposed to make me feel good?

If my husband really loves me he would never have waited until I got into bed the other night and then asked, "Did you lock the back door?"

I know it sounds innocent enough, but he knew I'd get out of bed, walk the length of the house and not have the strength to get back without eating two cold chicken wings in the refrigerator. There was no doubt in my mind he had been waiting all day to lay that line on me.

As I returned to bed he said, "How long have you been eating carrot sticks and drinking blue milk this time?"

"Twenty-four hours," I snapped. "Why are you dieting? You look all right to me."

See what I mean? He wouldn't say that unless he was seeing someone else.

White Shrine Has Ceremonial

A ceremonial was held by Greenville Shrine No. 7 last week. Receiving the degree of the order were Hester Fryer, William Roger and Julia Medlin MacIntosh.

Margaret Gray, worthy high priestess, paid special tribute to Annie Turner, worthy scribe, Ed Ricks, worthy treasurer, and Jane Adams, worthy chaplain, for their services. Each received a miniature oil lamp decorated with butterflies.

Mrs. Gray also honored new members, Lynda and Richard Dawson, Letha Sumerlin, Jean Riggan and those initiated. She presented each a gift.

Jane Jolly, worthy shepherdess, and Imelda Stang, worthy guide, distributed red velvet Valentines to members. Elizabeth Surrrell and Melaine Bunch were also remembered with gifts.

Four members from the Coastal Shrine in New Bern were welcomed.

Blanche Jackson said the North Carolina-Virginia States Club meeting will be held in New Bern March 1-2.

Giving a Valentine's party after the meeting were Agnes and Melanie Bunch, Lucille Smith, Elba Rowe and Mrs. Surrrell.

Rekindled Romance Sparks Trouble In Two Marriages

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old divorcee. I married Larry (not his real name) when I was 16 and left him (like a fool) for another man when I was 18. I never realized what a jewel Larry was until it was too late.

Larry got married and now he has three children. In the meantime, I've been living with this other guy, "Barney," for six years. We have a child but we're not married yet. We plan to make it legal in the near future.

I have always regretted leaving Larry and have prayed for a reconciliation, but after all these years I never thought I had a chance. Well, I ran into him two weeks ago in a parking lot, and it was like our very first meeting all over again! We have seen each other a couple of times since and now he wants to leave his wife and marry me.

Should I leave Barney and go back to Larry? Let me know soon. Barney and I are booked on a cruise, and we'll lose our deposit if we don't cancel by March 10. Thank you.

LIBBY (NOT MY REAL NAME)

DEAR LIBBY: Slow down. If Larry isn't thinking about his family obligations, he should be. You also have a child to consider as well as a six-year relationship. Don't do anything without considering the consequences very, very carefully. Go on the cruise you've planned with Barney and try to get your head straight before you go off the deep end.

DEAR ABBY: I have seen many letters in your column complaining about snoring bed partners. Your stock answer: "See an ear-nose doctor for a possible minor surgical solution." I have a better idea.

My husband was the champion snorer of them all. Then one day we figured out his snoring might be caused by breathing through his mouth, so we bought some paper "tape" 1 inch wide, and he began taping his mouth closed every night before going to sleep. (He would say, "No more talking, I am going to tape up now.") Then he would press his lips together and tape them shut. After sleeping quietly all night long, he would peel off the tape in the morning. (It peels off easily.)

This worked for 20 years. I have told others. Some say this will stop their breathing. Not so.

MRS. L.P. IN L.A.

DEAR MRS. L.P.: It sounds too good to be true, but I wouldn't recommend it for others without suggesting that they run it by their doctor to make sure it's safe for them.

Realtors Make Valentine Visits

Members of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors visited the University Nursing Center, Rosa Bradley's Home for Adults and to Jimmy Harris, realtor, Valentine's Day.

Valentines and carnations were presented by Doris Mills, Annette Parker-Butler and Pat Terry, committee members. The visits were made in conjunction with the Make America Better Project, conducted by the realtors.

The Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter opened on July 1 and is located one mile south of Bells Fork of the County Home Road.

The United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon is made up of less than 6,000 soldiers from nine countries and has been trying for years to play a peacekeeping role in the embattled land to little avail. There is no real peace and little prospect for future success.

Rules under which the force must operate, as well as its small size, almost prohibit a true policeman's role.

By interdicting their bodies between rival camps or blocking ambitions of the militant hotheads they have perhaps averted some heavier fighting, but at a price.

They have been ambushed, pinned down by crossfire, some members taken hostage, others suffered casualties. Militia outnumber and outgun the peacekeepers and make life an exercise in survival for the foreigners.

Lebanon's government says without the token intervention conditions in the country would be infinitely worse and Western analysts tend to agree. Pressures for a pullout have been increased by Lebanese factions, and the Dutch government has withdrawn its contingent (the Irish may follow suit). Observers fear the UNIFIL will not long remain an entity.

Their departure would be a body-blow to already frail hopes for calming the strife. It would also signal another big setback for the dream of the United Nations as a real force for peace in the world.

Worthwhile

The Greenville Veterans Center has been operating for a number of weeks, though its formal opening was held only days ago. It is the fourth in North Carolina. Others are sited in Fayetteville, Charlotte and Greensboro.

It is primarily a counseling facility with a broad spectrum of fields for returnees from Vietnam as well as other conflicts and serves tens of thousands of veterans in eastern North Carolina.

If anyone has wondered at the interval between the homecoming of servicemen and women from Southeast Asia and now, they shouldn't. The concept was not especially new, but full appreciation of a critical need was slow in taking shape and necessary action. Early centers were primitive in comparison with today's services.

Traumatic stress disorders were known by veterans in other conflicts and their main recourse in those eras were established hospitals and veterans offices across the land.

The Daily Reflector endorses advice of the Regional Readjustment Counseling Services manager, Husher Harris, that veterans visit the local facility. (Call it a scouting mission or familiarization process.)

The center is for veterans and familiarity with the help it offers may lead to realization, "Hey, I can see that!" The office is located at 150 Arlington Blvd.

General Blocked Navy's Plans

WASHINGTON — Gen. Bernard Rogers, NATO's supreme commander, ordered Navy carrier aircraft not to breach Libya's claimed 50-mile-wide Gulf of Sidra for fear of retaliation by Libya and the Soviet Union — much to the anger of the U.S. Navy.

Infuriated 6th Fleet commanders were powerless to overrule Rogers, a U.S. Army general. When the Navy sent two carrier task forces to the edge of the Gulf of Sidra, it planned to send F-14s over Col. Muammar Khadafy's claimed territorial waters. The U.S. says Libya's territory ends at the 12-mile limit.

Rogers insisted that two carrier groups might not be enough to defend the U.S. fleet and its planes if the Soviets helped Libya attack the F-14s with SAM-5s and aircraft. Only if the Navy committed yet a third carrier task force would Rogers change his orders. But none was available.

President Reagan promptly scotched a backstage move to replace Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger with former Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis last month by telling White House Chief of Staff Don Regan he would not consider letting Weinberger leave the Cabinet.

Although Secretary of State George Shultz never showed his hand, insiders said he favored the move to rid the administration of his arch rival. Lewis, sounded out about the Pentagon post, said yes. Key anti-Weinberger Republicans on Capitol Hill also wanted a new man at the Pentagon.

Reagan's quick veto probably killed future attempts to knife Cap. Even Weinberger's harshest critics now say he will remain at the Pentagon as long as he wants. Lewis, who ran Warner Communications until recently, is expected to take over the Union Pacific Railroad as chief operating officer.

Ex-aides of Richard M. Nixon will ask their old chief to say a few kind words during the next few months for his most loyal former aide: Bruce Herschenson, seeking the Republican Senate nomination in California.

As a White House staffer in 1973, Herschenson not only fought Nixon's impeachment but never agreed that he would have to resign even after such loyalists as Patrick J. Buchanan had surrendered. Herschenson, a popular television and radio commentator in Los Angeles the last nine years, has an excellent shot at the Senate nomination.

A footnote: Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, who is not endorsing anybody in his own state's GOP primary this year, will travel to California for a Herschenson fundraiser. That will help validate Herschenson's conservative pedigree.

Industry Shares The Blame

RALEIGH — If the General Assembly slaps the insurance industry with new pool underwriting responsibilities it does not want, the industry will have no one to blame but itself.

Regulated industries like insurance and the public utilities sometimes forget their places and begin acting uppity. When they do, the Legislature will take only so much guff before it slaps them down. That is the lesson the insurance industry stands to learn during the special legislative session called for today.

The industry doesn't like a proposal put forth by Insurance Commissioner Jim Long. It would require joint underwriting pools by all companies operating in North Carolina when a line of insurance is no longer available. The current lack of day care center liability insurance, for example, would be solved by the writing of policies by this pool with all companies sharing either the profits or losses experienced.

Long's proposal doesn't come out of nowhere. It comes only after he, and a special legislative study commission formed to consider the crisis in the insurance industry, repeatedly requested the industry's assistance in addressing the crisis. The industry has answered those requests with stonewalling, arrogance and silence.

Finally, Long had had enough and the legislators on the special committee agreed with him. Briefed on the problem, Gov. Jim Martin called a special session and the Council of State backed him up.

Long says the industry "totally ignored, over and over again" the legislative committee's requests for information about the insurance situation in North Carolina.

On Jan. 10, for example, committee counsel Ken Levenbook wrote to Ruffin Bailey, lobbyist for the American Insurance Association, requesting information on the current and project situations of insurance companies in the state. The committee wanted three insurance industry representatives to appear on Feb. 3. The letter was very specific in the questions the committee had for these people.

No one showed. Instead, Bailey mailed a long statement to the committee which addressed the industry's problems from a national perspective. It was totally unacceptable to the committee.

The industry has given the Legislature its wish list. A representative of Aetna Insurance was on hand Feb. 3 for other reasons so Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, asked him about those requests. If they were all adopted by the General Assembly, Johnson asked, would the current crisis be ended? Would liability insurance become available again? The Aetna representative said the problem was part of a normal business cycle and that if the Legislature would just wait 12 to 18 months, everything would get better.

Long has also complained that the industry's only proposal for solving the problem is a dodge. They prefer a private clearinghouse for hard-to-find insurance but Long says they are ignoring their own proposal and not putting it into place.

Finally, Long's deputy, Bill Hale, reported that some insurance companies have outright flouted recent changes in law by failing to report when they've stopped offering a line of insurance.

Long says the crisis was the reason for the special session but he concedes that both he, and the committee, considered the arrogance of the industry when they asked Martin to call the assembly back.

Politics Can Be Reasonable

Henry Kissinger, after "careful consideration," turned down the race for governor of New York. There are many questions left unanswered. Whose idea was it to ask Kissinger to run, and why did he turn it down?

It all started one morning when... Henry Kissinger looked in the bathroom mirror and his image said, "Let's face it, Henry, they are not going to change the Constitution to permit foreign-born citizens to become president of the United States — although there is no doubt in my mind that you are the most qualified."

"So?" Henry said. "You're going to have to think of something else to keep from getting bored. Why don't you become director general of the United Nations?"

Henry shook his head. "Ted Koppel never asks the director general of the United Nations to go on 'Nightline.'"

The mirror image said, "Then why not campaign for commissioner of the National Football League? It's the most powerful job in America. They can't play the Super Bowl without you."

"I wouldn't mind being football commissioner, except they don't provide you with a private plane or a personal chef. I have to think of the perks."

The image in the mirror furrowed its forehead. "Would you like to be a network anchorman on the evening news?"

"They could use me. Dan Rather has a terrible accent. But I would have to give up going to conservative cocktail parties where I am adored."

The image spit some shaving soap out of its mouth. "You have to get an important job, Henry. How long do you think people are going to accept you for yourself?"

Henry replied, "How soon they forget that it was I who opened up a gateway to China and introduced silks, spices and breadfruit to the New World."

The image in the mirror said, "Don't get discouraged just because you got a raw deal. You are not without influence. After all, you are on a first-name basis with Margaret Thatcher, Francois Mitterrand, Deng Xiaoping and Oscar de la Renta."

Henry blushed, "That's nice of you to say but I'm not going to take any old job just because I know a lot of heads of state."

"That's it!" the image said. "Why don't you become a head of state."

"What state?"

"New York state."

"New York is not a real state like Mozambique or Tonga."

"Nevertheless it is a state and the governor is its head."

Kissinger finished shaving, put on some Brut and said to the image, "May I think about it?"

The image beamed. "Take all the time you want. Gosh, you look beautiful."

Henry had pretty much made up his mind he would run when his wife Nancy came stomping into the bathroom waving a copy of the New York Post. "Are you going to run for governor?"

Kissinger said, "I'm thinking about it."

Nancy said, "You'd better make up your mind. You have to choose between me or Albany."

Henry sighed, "There is no choice, Liebschen."

When Nancy left Henry looked sadly into the mirror and said, "I could have been a contender."

His image was perplexed. "I don't know why she is making such a big deal about Albany. She slept with you in Damascus."

Strength For Today

Recently someone daubed a little acid on some dull, aged chandeliers and immediately discovered that they were made of extraordinary beautiful brass. It took the acid to bring out the beauty of the material.

George Matheson, the great Scottish preacher, was disappointed in love and under the power of this disappointment was led to write the famous hymn which begins, "O love that will not let me go." Phillips Brooks, another outstanding preacher of over a century ago, failed ignominiously as a teacher and turned dejectedly to the study of theology. Later he thrilled the world with his eloquence.

There are thousands of illustrations showing how the little smear of acid sometimes brings out the latent beauty of the object it touches. We call it "learning the hard way." The acid test is effective and illuminating. Don't lose hope if you have to go through that experience.

West Hit By Heaviest Rain In Three Decades

By MARTIN STEINBERG
Associated Press Writer

A powerful Pacific storm pounded the West today after the heaviest rain in three decades unleashed floods that forced hundreds to flee and released mudslides and avalanches that cut off towns and swept away houses.

Waves of storms, powered by winds up to 100 mph, have left at least six people dead and three missing since striking the coast a week ago. More than 18 inches of rain and 8 feet of snow have hit some areas since the storms arrived.

They were expected to ease by this afternoon, allowing rescuers a chance to evacuate more people before another storm strikes by the end of the week, the National Weather Service said.

"We see the light right now at the end of the tunnel. We just hope it's not a freight train," forecaster Jim Henderson in Redwood City, Calif., told ABC's "Nightline" late Monday.

The National Guard was mobilized in the northwestern Nevada counties of Washoe, Lyon, Douglas and Carson City, all affected by Gov. Richard Bryan's declaration of a state of emergency issued Monday night, Al Alcorn of the state department of emergency management said today.

A total of 100 guardsmen were being deployed mostly in Reno to assist in evacuations and bring in equipment, Alcorn said.

Crews piled sandbags to channel the Truckee River through downtown streets in Reno and Sparks, and the weather service said winds up to 100 mph blew over large trucks in western Nevada.

"We've got flooding in a lot of the homes, problems with a lot of the roads — certain areas of different valleys, such as Washoe Valley, are isolated," Otis Turner, commander of the Washoe County flood control center in Reno, said today. "Certain areas such as Hidden Valley are totally isolated because of the water flow at this particular time."

In California's Sierra Nevada, where the storms dropped up to 8 feet of snow, Interstate 80 was expected to remain blocked for up to a week because of a massive rockslide, said

Nevada County sheriff's Capt. Jack Bayer. Another slide covered railroad tracks, forcing an Amtrak passenger train with about 600 people aboard to backtrack to Reno, Amtrak officials said.

An avalanche Monday cut off about 500 people at June Lake, Calif., a ski resort near Yosemite National Park, said Lynn McCourtney of the Mono County Sheriff's Department. Another avalanche struck the nearby town of Twin Lakes, but no injuries were reported.

About 600 people were given shelter around Sonoma County, Calif., where flooding isolated the towns of Sebastopol, Guerneville and Montero, said Kevin Connolly of the county's Office of Emergency Services.

In Marin County, a house slid down a hill and injured four people including a woman who was "literally blown out of the house," said Dennis Brown of the county's Emergency Operations Center.

The Napa County cities of Napa and Yountville were flooded Monday and about 400 people were evacuated from mobile home parks and houses near the swollen Napa River in California's wine country, said Undersheriff Arthur Thompson.

The National Guard was called out to help in sandbagging and rescue efforts in Napa County and another unit was on standby in Tehama County, where the rising Sacramento River threatened communities around Red Bluff.

The Napa River at St. Helena was more than a foot above the 1955 record level of 18.2 feet, while the Russian River near Guerneville was at 45 feet — 13 feet above flood stage and 4.7 inches short of its 1955 record but still rising, Bob Diaz of the weather service at Redwood City said late Monday.

"You'd have to go back to 1955 to find the kind of values that we are seeing in the last 24 to 48 hours," Henderson said of the rain.

In Guerneville, where hundreds were forced to flee their homes during the weekend, officials used helicopters and boats Monday to carry blankets, food and medical supplies to 350 residents stranded in a shelter surrounded by floodwaters, said assistant Sonoma County administrator Mike Crystal.

Sections of U.S. 101, a major north-south route, were closed by flooding and mudslides in Northern California and Oregon, along with other highways near the coast.

In the Santa Cruz County town of Boulder Creek, the ground was too unstable to search for a woman who was missing after a mudslide destroyed her home, said sheriff's Lt. Jim Bonar. Twenty-five homes near the slide were evacuated.

About 30,000 people in the San Francisco Bay area were without electricity Monday, said Pacific Gas and Electric Co. spokeswoman Faith Kramer.

Since late Tuesday, Kentfield, Calif., got 18.63 inches of rain, Santa Rosa 11.55 inches and Pacifica 8.84, the weather service said.

As the storms moved east, they carried blizzard conditions to the eastern Rockies in Montana. More than 5 feet of snow has fallen near Jackson Hole, Wyo., since Wednesday.

Prince Visiting Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Pipers filled the air with the strains of "The Yellow Rose of Texas" as Britain's Prince Charles arrived for a whirlwind visit to help launch the state's 150th birthday party.

Charles, who arrived Monday without Princess Diana, has a crowded itinerary with stops in Houston, Austin and San Antonio before jetting off to Palm Springs, Calif., on Friday.

He came primarily to present computer magnate H. Ross Perot with the Churchill Award, given to those who epitomize the spirit of Winston Churchill. But the celebration of the 150th anniversary of Texas' independence from Mexico piqued the prince's interest.

This morning, the prince planned to tour Electra Communications Corp., which is owned by Cable and Wireless of Britain, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad and Electronic Data Systems, the company Perot founded.

Charles' schedule today also included a visit to the Infomart, a computer marketing center whose design was based on London's famous Crystal Palace.

Perot was to receive the award tonight. The honor, first given in 1981, has previously gone to American statesman and diplomat W. Averill Harriman and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Perot, 55, made headlines by financing a successful 1979 rescue mission into Iran in which two of his employees were rescued from a Tehran prison and by trying unsuccessfully in 1969 to fly medical supplies and Christmas dinners to American prisoners of war in North Vietnam.

Charles stepped off a Royal Air Force VC-10 jet from Britain at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport as British Caledonian Airways bagpipers in kilts played "The Yellow Rose of Texas" and "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

The heir to the British throne was greeted by Gov. Mark White, Dallas Mayor A. Starke Taylor, Fort Worth Mayor Bob Bolen, British Consul General Martin Himes and John Loeb, president of the New York-based Winston Churchill Foundation.

The prince, who did not speak to reporters, left in a limousine.

Passenger Trains Collide, Killing 70

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Two crowded passenger trains carrying about 300 people slammed head-on into each other on a bridge damaged last year by a terrorist bomb, the government news service said. Radio reports said today that about 70 people died.

Initial reports indicated that 15 people had been killed, but a radio station in Valparaiso and others in the areas said today the toll had risen to about 70. They said about 200 people had been injured.

A police officer, who spoke on condition he not be identified told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that the reports of the higher death toll were accurate. An official announcement will be made later in the day, he said.

The accident occurred on a bridge where a bomb late last year damaged one of the two sets of tracks, forcing both east- and west-bound trains to use a single track, the company said.

One train, an eight-car express, was traveling east to Santiago from the coastal city of Valparaiso. The other, with seven cars, was headed west to Valparaiso from the Andean city of Los Andes.

Many of the victims were returning from their vacations in the Pacific coastal city of Vina del Mar and other resort cities in the area.

The state rail company, Ferrocarriles del Estado, reported that two of the victims were police officers who were in one of the trains to investigate the theft of electric wire. Both trains were electrically-powered.

The official news agency ORBE said that the trains were going about 60 mph when they collided.

Railroad officials said rescue operations continued this morning, and the injured were being transported to hospitals in the area and to Santiago, the capital city.

A rail company spokesman, Alberto Araneda, said Monday, "It seems an unfortunate human error" sent the trains on a collision course. The accident occurred at 8:10 p.m.

NASA Presses Hunt For Booster Rocket

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A deep-diving nuclear submarine headed here today to join the seabottom search for chunks of the right booster rocket that may have caused the explosion of space shuttle Challenger.

The NR-1, a seven-man Navy sub which can operate at a depth of 2,600 feet, was being towed from Connecticut by its support ship, the USS Sunbird. The 137-foot sub is equipped with cameras, floodlights and a grappling arm.

Sonar from surface ships and photos taken by a smaller four-man sub, the Johnson Sea-Link 2, indicate parts of the right booster are on the floor of the Atlantic Ocean, 1,200 feet down, 45 miles northeast of Cape Canaveral.

The Sea-Link 2 has been photographing the suspected wreckage for three days and its robot arm has brought a few small pieces to the surface.

Photos and videotapes taken by the sub's crew are being examined by experts at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., which oversees NASA's shuttle engine work.

NASA spokesman Hugh Harris said officials don't expect an answer before Wednesday on whether parts of the right rocket booster have been located.

Salvaging the remains of the rocket, if they have been found, could take several days because of murky waters and swift undersea currents.

The focus of the investigation shifts today to Washington where the Senate subcommittee on science, technology and space scheduled hearings into the Jan. 28 accident that killed Challenger's seven-member crew.

Slated to testify were William P. Rogers, a former secretary of state who heads the presidential commission probing the tragedy; commission member and former astronaut Neil Armstrong, and William Graham, acting administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Recovery of right rocket sections could provide a vital clue to what caused the explosion because NASA photographs show a puff of black smoke bursting from the booster near a seal on liftoff and a tongue of flame spewing from the same area 59 seconds into the flight.

Challenger's fuel tank, holding nearly 500,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen, exploded at 73 seconds, eight miles high.

The presidential commission has focused on the right-hand booster as one of the most likely causes of the explosion.

Engineers particularly want to look at an area near a seal between the lower two of the rocket's four segments, where the smoke and flame were seen.

The joints between segments are sealed by synthetic rubber O-rings intended to keep hot gases and flames confined within the booster casing. The rings are protected from heat and flame by a putty-like substance.

Documents released last week by the commission detail a history of concern among NASA and its contractors about the vulnerability of the rings. The concerns were linked to a 1983 decision to lighten each of the two shuttle boosters by 4,000 pounds and to increase the power of their motors.

The alterations, made so the shuttles could lift heavier payloads, put greater stress on the joints, the documents show.

"Frequency of O-ring damage has increased since incorporation of higher performance motors," said reports by officials of Morton Thiokol Inc., which makes the boosters, and by the Marshall Space Flight Center.

Lawrence B. Mulloy, project manager for the rockets at Marshall, said there were indications of ring damage or erosion on only one of seven flights before the changes were made. He said there were six instances of ring problems in the next 17 flights that preceded Challenger's demise.

Mulloy said the new motor's higher temperature and pressure also could affect the protective putty.

Morton Thiokol officials listed 43 ways to deal with the ring problems. Most dealt with rearranging the rings and none addressed the potential putty problem.

NASA officials testified before the commission that three years ago they waived a requirement for effective backup safety rings on the joints.

They said they continued to launch shuttles even though the failure of a single seal could be catastrophic because they were confident the primary ring would suffice.

Computer Will Keep Eye On Car

TOKYO (AP) — Avenues in Tokyo will be equipped with computer eyes that can read and identify car license plates and within seconds notify police of a vehicle's location, the National Police Agency announced today.

National police already have installed an experimental system on western Tokyo's main Ome Kaido avenue, and three more sets are to be installed secretly on other major streets by the end of the year, said officials of the agency's public relations department.

More may come on other highways and other big cities, said the officers, who refused to be identified in accordance with official rules.

The set costs about $550,000. It operates from sensors installed along the road that tell an overhead television camera of an approaching car.

The camera takes still images of the license plate at very fast shutter speeds. Images of the plate are processed and identified by a main computer and then collated with a list of "wanted" cars.

If a particular car is on the list, the computer tells the time and position of the car to nearby checkpoints and police patrol centers.

The entire process takes only about five to six seconds and the set can track cars at speeds as fast as 62.5 mph, the officers said. They said the system can be an effective weapon against car theft and other crimes using cars.

Israelis Step Up Lebanese Sweep

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops backed by tanks, gunships and missile boats stormed southern Lebanese villages and reportedly battled hand-to-hand with Shiite Amal militiamen today, the second day of a search for two soldiers captured by Moslem guerrillas.

The Israeli military command said an Israeli sailor on patrol off the Lebanese coast of Lebanon was killed today by gunfire from shore. Lebanon's state-run Beirut radio said three Lebanese fighters were killed and nine others were wounded in the Israeli sweep, which it called an "outright new invasion."

The spokesman for the United Nations peacekeeping force in Lebanon, Timur Goksel, said six civilians also were wounded.

Beirut radio said Lebanese militia fighters engaged the Israelis in several Shiite Moslem villages, hit two Israeli gunboats offshore and shot down an Israeli helicopter gunship near Srafa, 15 miles north of the Israeli border. But U.N. sources in the region denied a helicopter was downed.

The Israeli sailor, Cpl. Daniel Amar, 19, was killed by gunfire from the port of Tyre, 12 miles north of the border, the Israeli military command said. He was the first confirmed Israeli casualty in Lebanon since August. The fate of the two Israelis seized in an ambush Monday was unknown.

Beirut radio said Lebanon instructed its U.N. ambassador, Rashid Fakhoury, to protest the Israeli military operation in the Security Council.

Witnesses said Israel resumed the search for the captured Israelis at first light today, pouring hundreds of armored personnel carriers, tanks and buses filled with soldiers across the mountainous border into Lebanon. They reinforced more than 600 tank-led Israeli troops who punched north Monday from their self-proclaimed security zone in southern Lebanon behind a screen of strafing helicopter gunships.

The Israelis moved into between 15 and 20 Shiite Moslem villages and advanced 12 miles north of the 6-mile-deep occupied zone, but failed to locate the two captured soldiers.

They were the first Israelis reported captured since Israel pulled most of its forces out of southern Lebanon last June after three years of occupation. Israel has maintained soldiers in the security zone to head off guerrilla attacks into northern Israel.

In Israel, the state radio quoted Prime Minister Shimon Peres as saying during a tour of Tel Aviv that Israel will not give up the search "until we discover the tracks of the kidnapers."

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli military spokesman said today that Israeli soldiers had seized two of the alleged captors together with some of their weapons. Military sources said the two men belonged to "an extremist radical Shiite Moslem group."

The Islamic Resistance, a coalition of Shiite Moslem factions loyal to Iran, has said it captured the two Israeli soldiers. It said today they have been taken to a "safe location well beyond Israel's reach" and are being treated for gunshot wounds suffered during their capture.

The coalition, which is headed by Hezbollah, or Party of God, said photos of the captives and a list of demands would be forthcoming.

Reporters waiting near the Israeli border village of Biranit heard machine gun fire rippling across the hills of southern Lebanon at mid-morning, and saw the trails of warplanes in Lebanese skies.

Inquiry Opens In Sinking Of Soviets' Cruise Ship

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — The government began an inquiry today into the sinking of a Soviet cruise ship carrying 739 passengers and crew, and officials rejected the Soviet skipper's suggestion that map errors and a New Zealand pilot were to blame for the accident.

Meanwhile, a naval officer who was involved in rescuing passengers and crew from the Mikhail Lermontov on Sunday night said emergency equipment on board the Soviet liner was in a dangerous state of repair that might have proved fatal had the ship been farther out to sea.

The ship, on a 14-day Pacific cruise, went down in about 100 feet of water about two hours after it hit struck a reef in a channel near the northern tip of New Zealand's South Island.

Rescuers saved all of the 409 passengers and all but one of the Soviet crewmen, an engineer who is presumed to have drowned. Maritime experts said the ship probably could be salvaged.

Prime Minister David Lange described the rescue as a "really remarkable achievement," but said there were "disquieting aspects" about the sinking.

The captain, Vladislav Vorobyev, said in an interview with Soviet television Monday night that New Zealand pilot Don Jamison "decided to take a route where there were no indications of depth on the map."

But New Zealand maritime officials said the charts were "more than adequate," and that Jamison, an experienced navigator, had handed over control of the 20,000-ton liner well before it hit the reef.

Passengers who arrived in Wellington aboard rescue vessels early Monday said Jamison made an announcement to that effect over the ship's public address system well before they felt the jolt of the ship hitting rocks.

The Royal New Zealand Navy's chief hydrographer, Cmdr. Ken Robertson, said today that charts clearly showed where the waters were less than 33 feet deep.

The Leningrad-registered ship, named after a famous 19th century Russian writer, had a draught of 27 feet.

"If I were in command of a 20,000-ton vessel I would have passed well to seaward of all rocks," Robertson said. "I would have no good reason for attempting to go through there."

He said the channel between Cape Jackson and an offshore beacon was one local fishermen could use, but not bigger boats because the strong tides could affect the ship's course.

Jamison, the pilot, has said nothing since the sinking, but Malborough Harbor board officials said his responsibility ended well short of Cape Jackson.

Paul Stewart Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Paul Stewart, the veteran actor who made his film debut in Orson Welles' "Citizen Kane," and who also worked in stage, radio and television, has died. He was 77.

Stewart died Monday of heart failure at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Ron Wise.

The Hollywood resident had been suffering from a lengthy illness, said a friend, actor Bert Freed.

A New York City native, Stewart began his stage career there as a teen-ager. In 1938, he joined the Mercury Theater group started by Welles, actor-producer John Houseman and writer Howard Koch.

Stewart appeared in several of the group's stage and radio productions, including the 1938 "War of the Worlds" broadcast that terrified listeners who believed an actual Martian invasion was being described.

He appeared in Welles' 1941 "Citizen Kane" as Foster Kane's oily valet, Charles, and went on to perform in more than 50 films, as well as playing or directing some 5,000 radio and television shows.

Traditionally Black Campuses Hit By Competition

By The Associated Press
Greater competition for North Carolina's black students has contributed to the increase in out-of-state students at traditionally black campuses in the state's university system, officials at those campuses say.

In addition, a shrinking college-age population and active out-of-state recruiting have caused the rising numbers of out-of-state students, the officials say.

Concerned about the growing number of out-of-state students, the University of North Carolina General Administration has proposed an 18 percent cap on out-of-state freshmen, starting in the fall of 1988. It would apply to all campuses in the UNC system except the N.C. School of the Arts.

Last week, a group of black lawmakers, led by Rep. Daniel Blue, D-Wake, and Sen. William Martin, D-Guilford, asked the UNC Board of Governors to postpone voting on the cap until its impact on black colleges could be assessed.

UNC officials are expected to meet with Blue and Martin in the next two weeks to re-examine the situation. The suggested cap could cut overall enrollments sharply at the traditionally black campuses, officials at those schools said Monday.

"Unless we're able to develop new markets in the state, a cap could be devastating," said Chancellor Jimmy Jenkins of Elizabeth City State University. "And that's not going to be easy with fewer blacks going into higher education."

Three of the four campuses with the highest percentages of out-of-state freshmen in fall 1985 are traditionally black: Elizabeth City State, N.C. A&T and N.C. Central universities.

Traditionally white campuses began competing intensely for in-state blacks after 1981, when the university system signed a consent decree with the federal government to reduce segregation in the system, officials said.

At Elizabeth City State, the increased competition has cut into in-state enrollment, while out-of-state student enrollment has risen, Jenkins said. In 1981, in-state freshmen enrollment was 309, compared to 280 last fall. Meanwhile, out-of-state enrollment had risen from 111 to 135.

Pipeline Spills Phosphate Waste

AURORA, N.C. (AP) — A pipeline rupture that spilled phosphate-laden wastewater into South Creek near Aurora poses no threat to humans or the environment, a state official says.

But the discharge, reported late Sunday, forced Texasgulf Inc. to shut down a wastewater pumping system, company and state officials said Monday.

The discharge dumped about 50,000 cubic yards of clay-filled slurry into the creek, said Bryson Jenkins, a public information officer for the state Division of Environmental Management.

She said the material remained near the pipeline and was not considered a threat. Fish and shellfish could be smothered if the material covered them, she said, but there were no reports of such occurrences.

Mrs. Jenkins described the discharge as "highly phosphorous" but non-toxic.

"There aren't any long-lasting repercussions," she said.

The cause of the rupture had not been determined.

Lorraine Shinn, regional supervisor for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development in Washington, N.C., said the company would be required to clean up the spill. She said NRCDC officials were working with the company to determine what should be done.

Texasgulf spokesman J. Randolph Carpenter said a company worker found the discharge in the creek during a routine inspection of settling ponds Sunday.

Briefing To Discuss Plans

DOE Official Says Waste Dump Will Be Safe If Built

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — If scientists find that radioactive material should not be stored in crystalline rock formations, a nuclear waste dump will not be placed at any of 12 possible East Coast sites, including two in North Carolina, a U.S. energy official says.

"Unless it is proven safe to the public, a repository will not be built in crystalline rock," said Robert Levitch, one of four Department of Energy representatives who met with about 250 people at a Raleigh high school auditorium Monday night.

Last month, the DOE announced that two North Carolina sites are being considered as sites for a repository for spent fuel rods from nuclear power plants and high-level radioactive defense waste.

One site is located northeast of Raleigh in Wake, Franklin and Johnston counties. The other, west of Asheville, covers sections of Buncombe, Haywood and Madison counties.

Fielding a question by environmentalist Wells Edelman of Durham, Levitch said scientists are testing rock similar to 12 potential vault sites to see how it reacts to heat, how water moves through it and other factors.

Meeting in a special session to consider emergency insurance legislation today, the General Assembly also was expected to call for a non-binding referendum May 6 that would let voters show their support or opposition to a repository in North Carolina.

Ralph Stein of the DOE said Monday's briefing in Raleigh and another scheduled for Thursday in Asheville were intended to give residents information they can use in their comments at public hearings scheduled April 2 and April 4.

He said researchers relied on studies and other documents available from state and federal sources to narrow its list of 235 potential sites to the final 12 sites in seven states.

"Your comments are very important to the department," Stein said. "We want you to take a look at what we've compiled and tell us if we made any errors ... in our compilations."

After field studies of the 12 potential sites, five will be nominated for final selection and the three best sites recommended for further study. A final selection, which must be approved by Congress, is not expected before 1998, he said.

Stein said 1982 congressional action setting up the nuclear waste site selection process "realized that public confidence is central" to the success of the program.

But the questions raised Monday night indicated little public confidence for locating a nuclear waste dump near Raleigh.

Those questions ranged from the number of minorities living in the potential repository sites to the safety of special casks that will be used to transport the nuclear waste to the vaults.

Stein, responding to a question from Tom Rose of Cary, said the nuclear waste in the dump would remain dangerously radioactive "for periods ranging up to 100,000 years."

He said the repository would be monitored for 25 years while it received nuclear wastes, then for 50 years while it remained open and for the first 100 years after it was filled and sealed.

"So what you're saying is that for the 100,000 years this stuff will remain dangerously radioactive, it will only be monitored for the first 175 years," Rose said.

Southern Baptists Plan Court Fight

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A power struggle between two factions of the Southern Baptist Convention has top officials of the nation's largest Protestant denomination scurrying to smooth out the differences, which have come to a head in a federal lawsuit.

The convention's executive committee began meeting here Monday to plan its defense against the lawsuit filed in December by a group of disgruntled Baptists.

Robert and Julia Crowder of Birmingham, Ala., and Henry C. Cooper of Windsor, Mo., contend that Southern Baptist President Charles Stanley overstepped his authority during the denomination's 1985 convention last June.

They claim the rights of the delegates to the convention were violated when Stanley, an Atlanta pastor and fundamentalist, declared out of order several attempts to amend his slate of officers.

The lawsuit is the latest move by moderates to voice their opposition to what they said was the stacking of the denomination's administrative bodies with people they call heresy-hunting fundamentalists.

Fighting between moderates and fundamentalists was the centerpiece of the convention's annual meeting last year in Dallas, where a "peace committee" was appointed to try to heal the rift.

The fundamentalist faction says it wants more traditional Bible teachings imposed on the denomination, while moderates want more independence for churches and schools within the group.

However, W.C. Fields, an executive committee spokesman, said the strife is based on more than biblical interpretations. Division stems from a "power struggle" between the groups, he said, and the lawsuit is the latest chapter in that struggle.

The denomination sought to have those who filed the suit barred from inquiring about the internal affairs of the convention, but a federal judge denied the request last week.

However, James Guenther, the SBC attorney, advised the executive committee Monday that the denomination, which represents 14.4 million Southern Baptists, would continue to defend itself on First Amendment grounds.

"In essence, our thrust is that the First Amendment prohibits the court from inquiring into the ecclesiastical governance of the convention," he said.

Fields said the convention, which contends a federal court does not have jurisdiction in the case, will also attempt to have the suit thrown out.

A similar suit, filed last month in an Atlanta Superior Court by churches in Georgia, Louisiana, North Carolina, Texas and Kentucky, asks for an injunction that would force church officials to adhere to convention bylaws and seeks to have the vote on the church officers reconsidered.

Efforts to reach the Crowders or Cooper by telephone for comment were unsuccessful.

Fields said the three had asked the executive committee to reverse Stanley's action and deem it inappropriate, but the committee declined.

Meanwhile, he said the executive committee was concerned that the infighting was distracting the denomination from its current drive to increase membership to 20 million.

"The executive committee generally is trying to find ways to breach this rupture. Too much time, energy and intellect has been devoted to this task. That's diverted us from our main task," Fields said.

While membership has been rising, it has done so at a slow rate. Last year, Southern Baptists added about 136,000 members to its rosters, an increase of one percent, Fields said.

Baptisms decreased by 5.6 percent, a figure that The Baptist Press, the information arm of the denomination, said reflects "that in 1985 it took 41.3 Southern Baptist church members to win one person in Christ."

A Real IRA Opener.

You don't have to have $2,000 lying around to open an IRA at BB&T. In fact, if you can set aside $100 or more by April 15th, you can open a BB&T IRA and take the entire amount of your contribution as a deduction on your tax return for 1985.

You Name The Terms.

A BB&T IRA is not only easy to open, it's easy on your budget, too. There are no hidden start-up costs. More importantly, the amount of money you decide to contribute each year toward your retirement, up to the maximum allowable $2,000 deduction, is totally up to you.

For example, you could make a deposit once a year. Once a month. Even skip months. Whatever works best for you is the idea behind the BB&T IRA.

You Pick The Plan.

You have the same kind of latitude in choosing how you want your money invested. We have a wide range of investments to choose from, including both fixed and variable rate options.*

Through our discount brokerage service, we also offer a self-directed plan which allows you to invest in mutual funds, stocks, and other securities. In addition, we make the extra effort to help you make the choice that's right for you.

You Get The Security Of The FDIC.

One final point. When you open a BB&T IRA, your account is insured separately to $100,000 by the FDIC. If you want the deduction for 1985, however, the important thing is to get started right away. Because there's a time in your life for a BB&T IRA. And that time is now.

Pitt Board Gives Final Approval To Bids For High School Additions

By STUART SAVAGE
 Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday gave final approval to bids for additions at North Pitt and D.H. Conley high schools, and appropriated $5,000 for site work for a farmers market to be located at the county home farm near Bells Fork.

The board approved the school addition bids — totaling $2.93 million — after school Superintendent Eddie West reported that $125,000 had been cut from the general contract following negotiations with the low bidder. Commissioners postponed action on the bids (which totaled $3.06 million before negotiations) earlier this month, instructing West to attempt to negotiate a lower figure.

West told commissioners the casework for the projects will be rebid. Only two bids were received, the lowest being $431,247, which West said has been negotiated down to $348,721.

Funds for site work for a farmers market were approved after County Engineer Phil Dickerson reported that the cost of site work and parking for the market was estimated to total $30,000. The board approved locating the market on county property at the county home farm — one of the first sites considered during a months-long search for a location — after efforts to have the market located on property owned by the city of Greenville on 14th Street were unsuccessful.

The county has received $73,000 in state funds to build the farmers market building, but the county must provide the land and other costs involved in the project.

"The best you can expect" Dickerson told the board, is to have the building "completed by mid-June. ...I'd rather say the middle of July."

On Dickerson's recommendation, commissioners agreed to have 3,000 square feet of space added to a planned 20,000-square-foot storage building for Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The additional space will be used as county storage. The building will be located on property behind the Health Department and leased by the hospital.

Dickerson said the metal storage facility is expected to cost $8 per square foot and can be used by the county after the hospital has no more need for the space.

Also approved were the purchase of $70,710 worth of computer equipment for the county's data processing department and hardware to be used by the Board of Education, the Department of Social Services, the Health Department and the Sheriff's Department.

In other business, commissioners: delayed action on the proposed closing of Secondary Road 1240 near Fountain; adopted a resolution supporting a request by the town of Farmville to have improvements made at the intersection of SR 1200 (the Stantonsburg Road) and the eastern bypass at Farmville because of the large number of accidents at the intersection; reappointed Joe Butterworth to a 5 year term on the Mid-East Regional Housing Authority, and adopted a resolution designating the week of Feb. 23-28 at County Government Week.

At a 2 p.m. session, commissioners rented 58-acres at the county home farm to Johnny Harris of Route 1, Winterville for a high-bid of $20 per acre and a 12-acre tract of farm land adjacent to the county landfill to Charles Stokes for $30 per acre.

The board has scheduled workshop meetings for 10 a.m. Wednesday, 11 a.m. March 4, and 10 a.m. March 12. The next regular meeting of the board is March 3.

Marcos ...

popularity. Mrs. Aquino claims voters rejected him, and says she was cheated out of victory by widespread vote fraud.

The National Assembly, in which Marcos' New Society Movement has a 2-1 advantage, said Marcos won the election by about 1.5 million votes. Two organizations that provided early, unofficial returns — the National Movement For Free Elections, or Namfrel, and the government's election commission — continued to disagree on who was ahead and announced Monday they would continue their counts.

In another development, Ministry of Justice spokesman George Dee said multiple murder charges were filed today against Marcos ally Assemblyman Arturo Pacificador and six men described as his bodyguards in the ambush slaying of seven opposition supporters on the eve of the 1984 National Assembly elections.

Pacificador, assistant majority leader of Marcos' New Society Movement in the National Assembly, could not be reached for comment today. He has previously denied any involvement in the slayings. He also has denied involvement in last week's killing of Evelio Javier, his rival in the 1984 elections and who was Mrs. Aquino's campaign manager in Antique province.

Meanwhile, the Makati Stock Exchange reported continued heavy selling of stock in the giant San Miguel Corp., the Philippines' largest producer of beer, soft drinks and ice cream. Its stock opened today at the equivalent of 55 cents, down from Friday's 70 cents. Monday's closing price was 57.5 cents.

The newspaper Business Day said it was the biggest single-day stock price decrease in San Miguel's nearly 100-year history.

San Miguel is considered one of the country's most stable companies and was among the major corporations targeted by the opposition. The others are mostly banks owned or controlled by close friends or relatives of Marcos.

Officers of Security Bank and Commercial Bank of Manila, two of the seven banks Mrs. Aquino said should be boycotted, confirmed in telephone interviews today that many clients were taking their money elsewhere in answer to the opposition leader's call.

An officer of Security Bank, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the withdrawals began last week and increased substantially Monday. However, the officer said the bank will not know how badly it has been hurt until Wednesday when it expects to have reports from branches throughout the country.

The Manila Times quoted an executive of Commercial Bank as saying its tellers had to ask Monday for double the usual allocation for withdrawals.

Mrs. Aquino also sought a boycott of five of Manila's major newspapers, which are owned by relatives or friends of Marcos, but the impact of that appeal could not immediately be determined. In a front-page editorial today, the Bulletin Today, the country's largest daily with a circulation of 300,000, said it has always been fair in its reporting.

Government and business sources also confirmed today that several prominent businessmen have resigned from the Presidential Productivity Council to protest alleged election fraud. However, Trade Minister Roberto Ongpin said they were "courtesy resignations" to enable Marcos to reorganize the advisory body he formed late last year.

In another protest, about 3,000 workers and students massed on a Manila square today to demonstrate against what they described in their banners as Marcos' "bogus victory and mandate."

Districts ...

Southern Railroad, Green Mill Run and N.C. 11, has a total population of 9,340 and is 96.57 percent white.

Bowers will be on hand at Wednesday's information meeting to explain the plan to area citizens. Citizens will also be given the opportunity to learn about and discuss the proposed change in method election at neighborhood meetings to be held in each of the proposed districts March 3-6.

Meetings for the various districts will be held on the following schedule: District 3, March 3 at Holy Trinity Church; District 1, March 4 at Wahl Coates School; District 2, March 5 at Mount Calvary Church, and District 4, March 6 at Aycock School.

All meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m.

According to McCarley, community consensus is "absolutely necessary before the council takes official action."

"If we learn during the public meetings that this plan does not have widespread support," he said, "additional alternatives will be developed and proposed for public input."

As part of its education plan, the city will also post maps showing district boundaries and distribute information sheets at City Hall, Shepard Memorial Library (Evans Street and Carver Branch), at local minority churches, community centers and at shopping complexes around Greenville.

Questions about the proposed change in method of election should be directed to McCarley at 752-4137.

Ancient Tribe

PEKING (AP) — Archaeologists have unearthed the remains of an ancient tribe, 107 tombs in which the skeletal remains indicate that all died before the age of 50, the Xinhua news agency reported. It said the site also included a sacrificial altar.

The report said a three-month dig on the capital city's northern outskirts led to the discovery of the tombs and 1,000 artifacts of the Shanrong tribe, which lived near Peking 2,500 years ago.

The altar of 15 large boulders in an oval shape around a taller rock may have been used for sacrifices honoring ancestors or neighboring mountains, the report said. It did not say what kind of sacrifices were made.

Avalanche

HOPE, British Columbia (AP) — An avalanche hit two men as they snowshoed along a highway in this town east of Vancouver, killing one of them, police said.

The second man was buried in the snow, but managed to dig his way out and contacted the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Highways Ministry workers dug out the victim. He was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital in Hope, which is about 95 miles east of Vancouver.

The other was admitted to a hospital suffering from shock.

Fatal Fire

CHICAGO (AP) — A fire swept through a two-family flat on the North Side, killing a man, his daughter and two grandchildren, and injuring eight other people, police said.

The cause of the fire, which broke out shortly before midnight Monday, was under investigation, police Sgt. Michael McMahon said.

The victims were identified as Juan Navarro, 56, his 22-year-old daughter, Iris Navarro, and her two children, Melissa Diaz and Leroy Murphy, whose ages were not immediately available.

Pirates Ending Home Schedule

East Carolina University's basketball team steps outside the Colonial Athletic Association to play a non-conference game against Central Connecticut University on Wednesday. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

It will be the final regular season appearance for the Pirates, whose two remaining games will be on the road this weekend against George Mason and James Madison in CAA action.

Whether the Pirates will have another home game — a first round contest in the CAA tournament — will be determined in that weekend action.

Central Connecticut was originally scheduled to come into Greenville back in early January, but the game was moved because of conference schedules. The Devils played both UNC-Wilmington and Campbell during that first trip south. They lost to UNCW, 94-79, and fell to Campbell, 73-59.

Going into a game last night with Quinnipiac, the Devils were 13-11 on the year, but had won only two games on the road, including a two-point victory over Maine on Friday night.

But the Devils do present a tough nut to crack, flooring a balanced offensive unit that includes four players in double figures.

East Carolina comes into the game after a heart-breaking loss to UNCW on Saturday night in a Colonial game. An ECU victory would have insured the Pirates of no worse than a fourth place finish in the league and a home berth in the first round of the tournament. Now, the Pirates must at least match UNCW this coming weekend to be insured of the berth.

"It wasn't a matter of our playing poorly," Coach Charlie Harrison said of the Pirates. "We played hard and we played well. We shot over 50 percent from the floor, over 80 percent from the line and we rebounded with them. They just played a little bit better than we did. It was a hell of a good college basketball game."

Harrison is hopeful that playing a non-conference foe at this point of the season won't cause problems.

"Central Connecticut is really a very athletic team. They've got great perimeter shooters and great perimeter quickness. We're going to need to play a good hard-nosed game to beat them."

The Devils recently lost their point guard, 5-9 junior Dwayne Jones, who is out for the rest of the season with a broken bone. "Jones was very quick, but with him sometimes they got too up-tempo," Harrison said. "Now with (Renardo) Mack, they are a more disciplined team."

Mack, a 6-0 junior, is running the point now, averaging 2.5 points a game, the only starter not in double figures.

Tony Little, a 6-3 sophomore forward, is the leading scorer with a 16.1 average. He's followed by 6-7 junior Tyrone Canino who is scoring 14.0 at the center position.

Joining them in double figures are 6-4 senior forward Walter Davis at 13.8 and 6-3 senior guard Rich Nappi at 13.7.

Canino has been a terror on the boards, too, pulling an average of 12.8 games. He's rebounded in double figures in 14 games this year, not counting the last two contests. In the two games prior to the Maine contest, he pulled 21 and 23 respectively.

"Little and Davis are very, very good offensive players," Harrison said. "They are athletic and they can shoot. Inside Canino is a very good player also. He's quick, blocks shots and get to the ball easily."

East Carolina will travel to Mason on Saturday night, then close out the regular season on Monday at Madison.

Maryland, Clemson Have Little Trouble In Wins

By The Associated Press

Maryland senior Len Bias says he and his teammates wanted to pick up where they left off when they defeated No. 20 North Carolina State, but the Terrapins had little trouble over Maryland-Eastern Shore.

Bias scored 13 points and grabbed eight rebounds in 20 minutes of action as the Terrapins took a 91-44 rout over Maryland-Eastern Shore Monday night.

In other college basketball action involving an Atlantic Coast Conference team Monday night, Clemson downed Furman of the Southern Conference 75-57. No ACC teams are in action tonight. On Wednesday night, No. 5 Georgia Tech travels to Wake Forest, N.C. State is at Virginia and No. 2 Duke hosts Miami of Florida.

It was after a 67-66 victory over N.C. State last Thursday that Bias and teammates Jeff Baxter and John Johnson, broke a team curfew and were suspended by Maryland coach Lefty Driesell.

The three players missed Saturday's 70-60 loss at Clemson, but they were soon reinstated.

"Nothing has been messed up," Bias said. "We have our chemistry back."

Baxter had 10 points and four assists, while Johnson topped Maryland's five double-figure scorers with 15.

"I was still thinking about what I had done and the problems I brought upon the team," said Baxter, "but when the game started, I was able to forget it. For Len, John and I, this was the best tune-up we could get."

The Terrapins, 14-11, were ahead 29-9 with 8:53 left in the first half, and extended a 44-22 halftime lead to 58-26 with a 14-4 spurt after intermission.

Speedy Jones, with 13, and freshman David Gregg, with 10, contributed to Maryland's balanced attack.

Donnell Boney scored 17 to pace the losing Hawks, who are 3-19 after losing their eighth in a row.

Meanwhile, Clemson's 75-57 victory over Furman guarantees the Tigers a winning season, pushing their record to 17-10.

"With this win I think we have locked up an NIT (National Invitational Tournament) bid," Tiger coach Cliff Ellis said. "We still have a change for the NCAA (National Collegiate Athletic Association) tournament if we win two of the next three, and there is still the ACC tournament. The next three games are going to be tough."

Ellis said defense was the key to the win over the scrappy Paladins, which dropped to 10-16. "Defense makes things happen. In tonight's case, it make our offense go."

Senior forward Glenn Corbit scored 22 points, 16 in the second half, to lead Clemson to the victory.

Conley Upsets Rams, 55-45

VANCEBORO — D.H. Conley's boys basketball team accounted for one of two upsets in the opening round of the Coastal 3-A Conference Tournament last night at West Craven High School.

The Vikings, seeded fifth in the tournament, came way with a mild upset of #4 Havelock, 55-45 in the only boys' game played.

In girls action, #4 North Lenoir beat #5 West Craven, 54-49, while #6 Havelock pulled off a 47-29 upset of #3 West Carteret.

Tonight's schedule will send #2 East Carteret's girls against #7 Conley at 5 p.m. while #3 Washington's boys meet #6 North Lenoir at 6:30 p.m. The final game, also a boys' contest, pits #2 West Craven against #7 East Carteret.

Conley, by winning, will advance to meet #1 seeded West Carteret in Wednesday night's girls' semifinal game. North Lenoir's girls will take on Washington in the girls' game that night.

The other two semifinal games will be played on Thursday, with the finals on Friday.

Conley jumped out to an early lead in the first period of the game, taking an 18-10 lead by the horn. Both teams matched points in the second quarter, each scoring 14 points. That left Conley with a 32-24 lead at intermission.

The Vikings tacked two more points to their lead in the third quarter, outscoring the Rams, 12-10. That gave the Vikings a 44-34 lead to take into the final quarter.

Conley opened its league to as much as 13 points early in the final period, but Havelock made a rally after that, cutting the lead to as little as four points before Conley regrouped and pulled away for the ten-point lead.

"We played real well except for probably the last three or four minutes," Coach Walter Claybrook said. "After they cut it down, we finally got back together. Fred Bryant and Ricky Farrow hit some key free throws for us in the final minute or so to help us push it back out. And I think we did a good job defensively throughout the game."

Conley was led by Farrow, who dumped in 21 points while Troy Ebron added 13. Al West led Havelock with 14 points.

Mattingly Okays Pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly, the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1985, avoided salary arbitration early today by agreeing to a one-year contract worth $1,375,000 with the New York Yankees, The New York Times reported.

After New York Mets pitching ace Dwight Gooden agreed to one-year $1.32 million deal last Friday, the Yankees made the same dollar offer to Mattingly. The Yankees had submitted a $1.25 million offer for arbitration.

Mattingly, who had filed a $1.5 million figure, seemed headed for a hearing today after weekend negotiations with his agent, Jim Krivacs, and Yankee officials were unproductive.

The Times said Krivacs made a proposal to the Yankees Monday night and Woody Woodward, the club's executive vice president called back shortly after with a counterproposal for $1.375 million with no bonus provisions. The deal was made shortly after midnight.

"I feel great," Mattingly said. "I'm glad it's over. I preferred a three-year contract, something for the Yankees to say to us, 'we know your' going to be productive over a period of time,' ... but it wasn't going to happen."

Last season Mattingly, 24, hit .324, while hitting 35 home runs and leading the league with 145 runs batted in. Mattingly also hit 48 doubles, the most by a Yankee since Lou Gehrig's 52 in 1927, and was a Gold Glove winner at first base with a .995 fielding percentage.

"All I wanted the Yankees to do was meet me halfway on a one-year deal," Mattingly said.

In 1984, Mattingly's first full season with the Yankees, he led the AL in batting with a .343 mark with 23 homers and 110 RBI. When New York renewed his contract they raised his salary from $130,000 to $325,000, a figure Mattingly was known to be unhappy with, but helpless to fight since he was not yet eligible for arbitration.

The Yankees used Gooden's deal as a type of dollar barometer in their most recent dealings with Mattingly.

The Mets' 21-year-old right-hander shared the superstar spotlight in New York with Mattingly with a 24-4 record and the National League's Cy Young Award.

Greene Central, by winning, however, must face the regular season champions on Wednesday in the semifinals. For the girls, that means North Pitt, and for the boys, Ayden-Grifton.

Greene Central's boys fell behind early, as South Lenoir pushed out into a 13-5 lead. But the Rams turned that around in the second quarter with a 15-8 margin, cutting the margin to only one at the half, 21-20.

In the third period, the Rams pushed ahead, taking a 30-27 lead into the last period. In that, the Rams used the free throw line to great advantage, hitting 17 of 21 at the stripe to outscore the Blue Devils, 19-16, to the wire.

"We came out slow and got down as much as ten points," Ram Coach Gregg Ashorn said. "But we chipped away at it and finally decided on our defense. We got more patient on offense, and then did a great job at the line in the last period."

Anthony Jones and O.J. Sheppard each had 14 points to lead Greene Central. South Lenoir was led by Mike Isler, who came off the bench with an injury to score ten.

In the girls' game, both teams scored 12 points in the first period. Greene Central then took a 22-20 advantage at intermission.

In the third period, Ayden-Grifton rallied, 14-9, and pushed ahead, 34-31. But the Lady Chargers could score but three points in the final period while Greene Central added 15 to take the win.

Dalen Herring led Greene Central with 18 while Chanel Hooker added 11. Karen Edmonds had 16 points to

Navy Steaming Ahead In CAA

By The Associated Press
Navy's course is still set on full speed ahead.
The Midshipmen, who hadn't been in The Associated Press Top Twenty since a preseason tie for 19th, celebrated its new No. 17 ranking Monday night with a 66-51 Colonial Athletic Association victory over William & Mary.
Navy is 22-4 thanks to an eight-game winning streak and 15 of 16 and William & Mary Coach Barry Parkhill said he "thought all along that they were a Top Twenty team." Helping to convince him even more was 6-foot-11 David Robinson, who scored 19 points, grabbed 14 rebounds and blocked eight shots.
In other games involving ranked teams, No. 9 Syracuse held off Pittsburgh 69-62; 11th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas defeated Fullerton State 92-83; and No. 16 Louisville downed Southern Mississippi 83-74.
Navy's Robinson, who entered the game rated first in the nation with an average of 6.1 blocks per game, scored five of his points during a 17-0 first-half run that turned a 14-12 squeaker into a 31-12 laughter. Joining Robinson in double figures was guard Kaylor Whitaker, who scored 10 of his 16 points in the second half.

"We want the recognition now at the end of the year, and if we can maintain it until the end of the season we'll be happy," said Navy Coach Paul Evans. "It can only help us in the NCAA Tournament seedings."

Top Ten
No. 9 Syracuse 69, Pitt 62
Dwayne "Pearl" Washington scored 23 points, including six key points down the stretch as Syracuse, 23-1 over-all and 12-1 in the Big East, pulled away in the final 1:34. Trailing 55-54, Syracuse scored six straight points for a 60-55 lead with 5:35 remaining. Pitt again pulled within one point at 62-61 but Washington dribbled into the lane for an eight-footer with 1:34 to go and added two free throws at the 52-second mark to make it 66-61.

"When he wants to score, he can score," Coach Jim Boehm said of Washington, who has averaged 28 points over his last five games. "A lot of people expect miracles from him, and sometimes he delivers. When the game is on the line, you want the ball in his hands."
Pittsburgh got 22 points from Demetrius Gore and 18 from Curtis Aiken but scoring star Charles Smith had only nine. Smith, averaging 16.9, committed his fourth foul with 12:24 to play and never scored after that although he returned with more than eight minutes to play.
"You have to take what they give you, and in the first half they took the fast break away," Washington said. "In the second half, I was able to take the ball inside. Somebody had to do the scoring, so I decided to take control."

Second Ten
No. 11 UNLV 92, Fullerton State 83
Freddie Banks scored 27 points — he was 5-for-5 from three-point range — and Anthony Jones added 26 as the Rebels clinched a tie for the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title with a 13-1 league record, 25-3 over-all.
The Rebels held Fullerton without a field goal for nine minutes as they pulled away from a 49-44 lead early in the second half and rolled to a 77-51 advantage.
After Jones' three-point jump shot made it 84-56 with 6:49 left, Coach Jerry Tarkanian cleared his bench and Fullerton responded with a 20-2 spree, forcing Tarkanian to bring his starters back with three minutes left and the lead down to 86-78.

No. 16 Louisville 83, S. Mississippi 74
Billy Thompson scored 19 points, including eight in the decisive final minutes, as Louisville boosted its record to 19-7, including a 7-2 mark in the Metro Conference.
The Cardinals, who had a 23-10 lead in the first half, saw it chopped to one point with 6:17 left but they outscored Southern Mississippi 17-9 the rest of the way.
Pervis Ellison added 17 points for Louisville while Jeff Hall had 15, Herbert Crook 14 and Milt Wagner 12. Southern Mississippi sophomore Derrek Hamilton scored a game-high 27 points, making 13 of 17 shots from the field. "Our guys did a pretty good job, but had the game been at their place, we probably wouldn't have won. We're a little tired," Coach Denny Crum said after Louisville's sixth game in 12 days.

Others
Zedric Macklin scored 26 points and Don Mann added 23 as Murray

State shot 70.8 percent in the second half to defeat Middle Tennessee 93-86 and take sole possession of first place in the Ohio Valley Conference.
Maurice Martin and Wayne Williams each scored 21 points as St. Joseph's, 21-4, extended its winning streak to seven games with a 90-75 Atlantic 10 victory over Duquesne. The Hawks made 32 of 34 free throws.
Willie McDuffie scored 18 points to lead Jacksonville to a 67-58 Sun Belt Conference victory over Virginia Commonwealth, its first in 13 tries against VCU. "I'm ecstatic," Coach Bob Wenzel said after the Dolphins' sixth triumph in the last seven games. "We're hot — the hottest team in the Southeast right now."
Maryland's Len Bias, back after a one-game suspension because of a curfew violation, scored seven of the first nine points as the Terrapins walloped Maryland-Eastern Shore 91-44. Maryland led 44-22 at halftime and extended the margin to 58-26 early in the second half.

Tim Perry scored 14 points as Temple, 21-4, beat Massachusetts 58-47 in the Atlantic 10.
Fairfield boosted its road record to 11-0 by nipping New Hampshire 65-63 on Tony George's two free throws with five seconds left.
Jerome Mincy scored 17 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to lead Alabama-Birmingham to a 70-54 Sun Belt victory over North Carolina-Charlotte.
Billy Gordon's 18-foot jump shot with one second to play gave Western Kentucky a 53-51 Sun Belt triumph over South Alabama.
Kenny Gattison had 16 points as Old Dominion trimmed South Florida 64-57 and clinched at least a share of the Sun Belt title.
Sophomore guard Byron Larkin reached the 1,000-point mark with 23 in leading Xavier of Ohio over Evansville 81-72. Larkin became the 22nd Xavier player to reach 1,000 career points and the first to do so quickly.

McKenna Sparks Bullet Victory

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer
Kevin McKenna, less than three weeks removed from a $500 a week salary in the Continental Basketball Association, played the best game of his NBA career under a heavy burden of pressure.
Unaware that it had already been decided that his second 10-day contract with the Washington Bullets would be extended to the end of the season, McKenna thought he was fighting for a job. He scored a career-high 25 points, 15 on three-point shots, as the Bullets defeated the Los Angeles Clippers 96-94 Monday night.
McKenna, who had scored a total of 11 points in his first seven appearances with the Bullets, said he thought last Saturday's game with Seattle and the meeting with the Clippers would decide his immediate future.
"I knew they were two critical games if I was going to stay," said McKenna, with his fourth NBA team in four years. "I just tried to go out and play hard and not worry about that (the contract expiration)."
McKenna said Bullets Coach Gene Shue told him after Monday's game that the decision to keep him was made Sunday.

In other NBA action, it was Dallas 126, New Jersey 124; Cleveland 111, New York 97; Indiana 124, Chicago 110; Seattle 100, Atlanta 87; Detroit 117, Utah 96; Milwaukee 111, Philadelphia 106; Phoenix 108, Boston 101; and Houston 116, Golden State 110.
McKenna was 5-for-9 from inside the three-point line en route to surpassing his previous NBA career high by four points.
"The first conversation I had with Kevin after he signed the first 10-day contract, he said he felt comfortable shooting three pointers, so apparently he's right," Shue said. "He's got a beautiful shot. He certainly was an important player for us tonight. He just picked up the whole team. If a guy was looking for a pressure performance, he certainly performed."
"He's always been a good shooter," Clippers Coach Don Chaney said. "He got hot and that's what put us out of it. We would rather let him take three-point shots which are lower percentage shots than let him get inside."

Rookie center Manute Bol had 13 rebounds and 10 blocked shots for the Bullets, while Cliff Robinson had 20 points.
Washington led 89-78 with 4:39 left in the game after a 14-6 run, but the Clippers responded with a 9-0 spurt, with Norm Nixon scoring seven points, to get within two points. A dunk by Marques Johnson made it 92-91 in the final minute before Jeff Malone and McKenna made two free throws apiece in the closing seconds to clinch the victory.

Rory White, who along with Cedric Maxwell led Los Angeles in scoring with 17 points, hit a three-pointer at the final buzzer. S ns 108, Celtics 101
Phoenix handed Boston only its 10th loss in 51 games after Larry Bird and Coach K.C. Jones both were ejected for committing two technical fouls in the fourth quarter.
"Those technicals totally turned the game around," Jones said. "We were getting ready to make our move. But Larry got clobbered at one end of the floor and there was no call, so I said something to the officials and Larry did, too. There was no cursing involved."
Jones and Bird were ejected with 9:49 remaining and Mike Sanders, who scored all of his 14 points in the fourth quarter, made three free throws for a 92-75 lead. The Celtics got within five points with 2:14 left before the rally fizzled.
Walter Davis scored 20 points for the Suns, who snapped an 0-8 streak against Boston dating back to 1982. Bird and Dennis Johnson had 20 for the Celtics.

Rockets 116, Warriors 110
Ralph Sampson, starting at center for the first time in two years because of Akeem Olatunji's knee injury, had 25 points and 14 rebounds for Houston against Golden State.
The Rockets got 10 points from Allen Leavell in the fourth period and held the Warriors without a point in a span of nearly 2½ minutes down the stretch.
Purvis Short had 25 points and Eric Floyd 22 for Golden State.

Bucks 111, 76ers 106
Sidney Moncrief scored 28 points and Terry Cummings 24 as Milwaukee improved its Central Division lead to six games with a victory at Philadelphia.
Two free throws each by Ricky Pierce and Moncrief in the final minute broke a 103-103 tie for the Bucks. After Maurice Cheeks, who led the 76ers with 27 points, cut the deficit to 107-105, Craig Hodges made two more free throws with 19 seconds left to seal the triumph.

Mavericks 126, Nets 124
Rolando Blackman scored a Meadows record 42 points as Dallas handed New Jersey its fifth loss in the last six games.
Blackman hit 10-of-13 field goals and made 22-of-23 free throws to break the old arena record of 40 points by Bernard King of the New York Knicks on April 20, 1983. He had 17 points in the third period as Dallas outscored the Nets 40-27 to erase a nine-point halftime deficit.
The Nets, who got 29 points from Albert King and 28 from Mike Gminski, tied the score at 119 on a basket by Micheal Ray Richardson with 1:33 left. A three-point play by Jay Vincent, who scored 25 points, gave Dallas the lead to stay.

Ahoskie Tops Tigers

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School's girls scored a season high 57 points last night, but it wasn't enough to stop Ahoskie from taking a 74-57 win in the first round of the North-eastern 2-A Conference basketball tournament.
Other action last night saw #2 Northampton East down #7 Roanoke Rapids, 48-23, in another girls' game, while #2 Edenton topped #7 Roanoke Rapids, 72-67, in an overtime boys' game.

In the latter, Roanoke Rapids missed a free throw with three seconds left in regulation to miss out on the upset bid.
Ahoskie's girls, seeded third, eased ahead of #6 Williamston, 14-12, after one period. Then, in the second quarter, led by the scoring of Anita Harrell, Ahoskie zoomed out to a 38-19 lead.
Ahoskie continued to pull away in the third period, 16-12, to take a 54-31 lead. Williamston outthit the Lady Cougars, 26-20, in the final period, to no avail.
Harrell finished with 27 points for Ahoskie, which placed all five starters in double figures. She was joined by Carla Holley with 16, Cindy Smallwood with 11 and Vicki Bracy and Carolyn Valentine, each with 10.
Williamston was led by Chan Miller with 25 while Jan Mills had 17 and Monique Pou had 13.
Tonight's games send #4 Roanoke against #5 Edenton in a girls' game, and #3 Northampton East against #6 Williamston, and #4 Ahoskie against #5 Roanoke in a pair of boys' games.

Tar Heels Still No. One; Navy Cracks Top Twenty

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer
Michigan State is back among college basketball's Top Twenty for the first time in over a year and guess who was first to offer congratulations? None other than Michigan Coach Bill Frieder.
The Spartans, unranked since the eighth week of last season, are 17-6 and No. 19 in this week's poll of writers and broadcasters. Michigan, which has been among the leaders all season, is No. 7 this week and the Wolverines host the Spartans in a Big Ten showdown on Thursday night.
"They belong there, that's super," Frieder said. "I've felt for a long time they belonged in the Top Twenty. I think they deserve to be 12 or 13 but, you know, in the Big Ten we're never going to be ranked as high because we play each other so often. We just beat up on ourselves too much."

Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote, who has earned his money both on and off the court this season, said the Spartans' emergence was a credit to his team, especially to its three guards — Scott Skiles, Vernon Carr and Darryl Johnson.
"We've had a surprisingly good season, so I'm happy for the kids," said Heathcote, whose team has had to make do without a big man. "Now we've got to play No. 7 at their place, so maybe this will be our lone shot at the Top Twenty. But, we're going to enjoy it. We're proud to be there."

Heathcote said the Spartans' next goal is a post-season tournament bid. Last year Michigan State earned its first NCAA berth since Magic Johnson led the Spartans to the national championship in 1979.
"An NCAA berth has been our goal all year," Heathcote said. "We didn't kid ourselves that we were a title contender. We said, 'Let's finish in the first division, let's go NCAA or at least NIT, anything to be playing at the end of the season.' It's not a reality yet, but it's getting closer all the time."

"We've got some quality wins against some good basketball teams. We can score a lot, but we give up a lot. We'll just see how it goes."
Off-court problems have plagued the Spartans the last few years. Heathcote suffered a heart attack in September 1984 and the high-scoring Skiles was arrested three times. The third arrest was for drunken driving last November in East Lansing, Mich., while on probation for a misdemeanor marijuana-possession charge in his hometown of Plymouth, Ind.
For that, Skiles will serve a 30-day jail term, probably at the conclusion of the spring semester.

There was no change in this week's top five with North Carolina, 25-1, Duke, 25-2, Kansas, 24-3, Memphis State, 23-2, and Georgia Tech, 19-4, holding the same spots as a week ago.
The Tar Heels were a unanimous No. 1 pick for the second straight week and for the fourth time this season.
St. Johns, 24-3, is just ahead of Michigan, 22-3. The ranking for the Redmen, who beat then-No. 9 Georgetown on the road and won their 21st straight home game over Connecticut, is their highest of the season. They are the only team not ranked in the preseason poll to crack the Top Ten this season.
Kentucky, 22-3, Syracuse, 20-3, and Oklahoma, 23-3, round out the Top Ten.

Nevada-Las Vegas, sixth last week before losing to Cal-Irvine, leads the Second Ten followed by Bradley, Georgetown, Notre Dame, Indiana, Louisville, Navy, Virginia Tech, Michigan State and North Carolina State.
Last week's Second Ten was Kentucky, Syracuse, Bradley, Notre Dame, Texas-El Paso, Indiana, North Carolina State, Alabama, Louisville and Virginia Tech.

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press' college basketball poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, total points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1, record through Feb. 16 and last week's ranking:

PBS To Show Once-Banned Documentary On N. Ireland

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The two men are community leaders, churchgoers, teetotalers. One is shown walking hand-in-hand with his wife, the other cavorting with his children. It seems like a picture-perfect Kodak commercial, until they start talking about business — the business of hate and death.

Alleged IRA leader Martin McGuinness and Loyalist Gregory Campbell, both elected members of the Northern Ireland Assembly, are the bitter antagonists in a controversial documentary produced by the British Broadcasting Corp. to be broadcast on public television tonight.

"Northern Ireland: At the Edge of the Union" was the program heard 'round the world, but not seen in Britain last summer. It became a political hostage when Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government, contending the program provided a platform to a reputed IRA terrorist, pressured the BBC's board of governors to pull it.

That sparked a one-day strike by BBC workers worldwide, forcing the BBC to go silent for 24 hours. The program, originally scheduled for Aug. 7 on the BBC, finally was shown Oct. 16 after producer Paul Hamann inserted 19 seconds of archival footage, showing bodies being carried away from the site of an IRA bombing in Belfast.

"That was a sop," Hamann said in an interview. "Except for the library film, there was no editing whatsoever. We would never accept any."

The documentary, shot in gray, dank Londonderry, attempts to humanize two extremists who are poles apart in the bloody battle between Roman Catholics and Protestants fighting over the issues of Irish unification and the British military presence in Northern Ireland.

According to the film, many believe McGuinness is the leader of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. He won't respond directly to the allegations on camera, but says he supports the IRA's activities. Since 1968, about 2,500 people have been killed in political violence.

McGuinness is seen speaking at rallies, where black-hooded, rifle-toting IRA soldiers march defiantly through the streets. Young boys and other supporters lock arms and ring the parade, keeping British troops at bay.

At home, he's soft-spoken and subdued, but his eyes gaze vacantly as he explains that he's "involved actively on behalf of my people" against the British forces.

Campbell comes across as more of a firebrand. He called McGuinness "a craven murderer" and says he's in favor of a shoot-to-kill policy against the IRA. He also once applauded the killing of two IRA members, saying "Christmas had come early." After he made that statement, a bomb planted under his car fell harmlessly to the ground as Campbell and his family drove to church.

Now there is a cage around his house, he carries a gun and he has official protection whenever he ventures outside. After walking past the bullet-proof doorway, he steps outside and is immediately met by three armed guards who quickly get into the car with him.

Hamann said there were no ground rules for the interviews but security was exceedingly tight. He talked to them on their home turf "because you get more out of people there. People are more relaxed, particularly the fourth or fifth time you meet."

The documentary effectively juxtaposes words of political hatred with pictures of family love. It ends with each man walking through a graveyard, the ultimate symbol of terrorism.

Hamann said Campbell and McGuinness were "ostensibly nice people. But there was a 5 percent unspoken ruthlessness of personality. ... They each had their own justification for killing people, and a fanaticism that went beyond rational argument."

One reason for doing the documentary, the producer said, "was to show that, when you get to the extreme, these men really are very similar."

Campbell and McGuinness have never met, Hamann said. Although elected from Sinn Fein, the political arm of the IRA, McGuinness never attends the assembly. Hamann said McGuinness runs just to confirm his public support, then boycotts the political process.

"It's the cutting edge of the IRA that will bring freedom," McGuinness says.

For American audiences, this stark, despairing documentary is absorbing on an emotional, human level, but its content will seem a bit foreign. The documentary wasn't tailored for U.S. consumption, so it lacks the background and explanation of the key issues and policies that the British live with on a daily basis.

A 15-minute accompanying update was shot in Northern Ireland late last month by WETA, the PBS station in Washington. It was unavailable for screening.

Steps Taken To Preserve Human Chain

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — A former Secret Service agent who helped provide security for the 10,000-mile journey of the 1984 Olympics torch is now figuring out how to keep anyone from breaking a planned human chain across America.

"There is that 2 percent to 4 percent segment of the population that operates outside of what society deems normal," J.W. "Bill" Mattman said as he recently listed the possible threats to the "Hands Across America" project to raise money for and draw attention to the nation's homeless and hungry.

"You have to always figure somebody will be against whatever it is you want to do," he said. "One of the biggest hazards I see is with drunk drivers on the holiday weekend who are impatient to cross the line for whatever reason."

Police agencies across the country will actually protect the participants in the Memorial Day event. Mattman, with the aid of 20 coordinators across the country, is applying for permits, and will coordinate efforts.

Organizers hope to get 10 million people to join the 4,200-mile chain from Los Angeles to New York, and to raise $50 million to $100 million for the poor. Each participant makes a $10 donation.

As of late December, $800,000 had been raised, said spokesman David Fulton from the project's Century City headquarters. The effort is sponsored by USA for Africa, whose record and video "We are the World" raised millions of dollars for famine relief in Africa.

Mattman, 48, has organized security for former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, and for members of the Saudi royal family. Before leaving the Secret Service in 1979, he was assigned to the signing of the Salt II arms control agreements in Vienna.

He also coordinated the 82-day cross-country run that carried the Olympic torch from New York to Los Angeles for the 1984 games.

Talk Show Host Has Meanest Mouth On London Radio

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — When Brian Hayes begins his daily show, true English ladies and gentlemen may instinctively turn off their radios.

But dozens of other listeners jam the studio switchboard, eager to cross swords with the meanest mouth on London's airwaves.

In New York or Los Angeles, where the abusive talk show has been elevated to something of an art form, Hayes may sound relatively tame. Indeed, he would never stoop to an outright insult.

However, in England, where modesty and fine manners are still regarded as the social norm, Hayes' hectoring, argumentative style is often regarded as thoroughly rude.

The British Broadcasting Corp., which once refused him a job, still wouldn't have him even though his three hours a day of chat and interviews on London Broadcasting Corp., an independent station, attracts up to half a million listeners.

"It's not something that could ever happen at the BBC. We don't believe in being rude to our listeners," said John Stanley, a BBC spokesman.

Don't bother telephoning Hayes to talk about the weather. He only wants callers who can set off a blistering row. Whatever you feel about disarmament, health food, abortion, communism or fluoridated water, Hayes can be relied on to disagree.

The moment he senses the caller wavering, he cuts off him or her. "But let me finish," the caller bleats. "Sorry Trevor, you obviously don't know what you're talking about. Next. Hello, Anne in Kensington ..."

No delicate social deflection here, no "hmm, yes, you're probably right but on the other hand ..." Hayes is happiest when he has pushed his victim into a corner. He sometimes even hangs up without so much as a thank-you.

But Hayes isn't even British. He was born in Australia, which to some English minds explains everything.

Hayes himself doesn't think a true Englishman could have pulled off his kind of show. Anne de Courcy, author of a guide to modern British manners, tends to agree. "We're a small and overcrowded country and I think this is what produces our traditional reserve. An argument becomes a form of trespass into a person's privacy," she said in an interview.

"Hayes runs his show like a pretty tough ringmaster. I know I would never dare to call him," said Clancy Sigal, an American media reviewer living in London.

When he started his show 10 years ago, Hayes said in an interview, he was looking for a format which "was not necessarily part of the perceived national character."

That character, he says, consisted of "a kind of false gentility" for which he blames the BBC. "They had always given the impression that those who speak in public speak in a certain way, have to have a certain accent to be understood, have to be terribly responsible, not be extreme, and that was of course all phony."

Ten years ago British radio was dull, Hayes said. "They didn't know how to run phone-in programs, the idea that these programs were supposed to be about argument, about discussion."

Veteran Actor Dies At Age 76

OSSINING, N.Y. (AP) — Howard da Silva, a veteran actor, director, producer and author who was blacklisted for his political beliefs in the 1950s, has died at the age of 76.

Da Silva, whose career spanned more than 55 years, was best known for originating the role of Benjamin Franklin in the Broadway musical "1776" in 1969. He died Sunday of lymphoma at his home here.

Among his other stage roles were Jud in "Oklahoma" in 1943; Larry Foreman in "The Cradle Will Rock" in 1937; Mendeleh in "The World of Sholem Aleichem" in 1953 and Ben Marino in "Fiorello!" in 1959.

In 1951, after appearing as an unfriendly witness before the House Un-American Activities Committee, he was blacklisted.

A Cleveland native, da Silva moved with his family to New York City, then to Pittsburgh, where he worked in steel mills to pay his way through Carnegie Institute of Technology.

He made his New York stage debut in 1928 at the Civic Repertory Theater, and had played 40 different roles by the time he left six years later.

Da Silva moved to the Cleveland Playhouse, where he directed and starred in several plays. In 1936, he made his Hollywood film debut as a White Russian general in "Once in a Blue Moon."

On his return to New York he became associated with Orson Welles' Mercury Theater company. He also appeared in the plays "Golden Boy," "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "Two on an Island," "Burning Bright," "The Adding Machine," "Volpone" and "Compulsion."

He won Academy Award nominations for best supporting actor for his roles as the bartender in "Lost Weekend" and the villainous captain in "Two Years Before the Mast."

His film credits for more than 40 movies include "Unconquered," "The Great Gatsby" and "Mommie Dearest."

Da Silva's last movie appearance, in which he played a photographer, was in "Garbo Talks."

In 1978, he won an Emmy award for outstanding performance by a supporting player in "Verna: U.S.O. Girl."

Opening lead: King of ♥

Even looking at all the cards, it is not easy to spot declarer's extra chance to bring home his spade slam. Indeed, when this hand was played in a team match, two distinguished declarers went down. You don't usually launch into Blackwood when you have three fast losers in a side suit. However, North felt sure his partner had to have either the ace or king of diamonds for his opening bid, so the venture was safe. Against six spades West made his normal lead of the king of hearts. Declarer's problem was to avoid losing two tricks in clubs, and the simple way to accomplish that was to try the club finesse, which had a 50 percent chance of succeeding. Today, however, was not one of those winning days. You can improve on that line by drawing trumps and eliminating the red suits. Then you must hope that West is not at his most alert and lead a club toward dummy, intending to insert the eight and end play East. That worthy will either have to lead a club into your major tenace or else give you a ruff-sluff in a red suit. However, West can foil that by playing second-hand high, and you will again have to lose two club tricks. The opening lead has given you an extra chance—finding East with the ten of hearts. Win the ace of hearts, draw trumps and cash the ace-king of diamonds. Now lead the jack of hearts, forcing West to cover. You ruff in dummy, and trump a diamond in hand to eliminate that suit. Next lead the nine of hearts. If West covers, you must ruff and fall back on the club suit for your contract. If he does not produce the ten, discard a club from the table. As the cards lie, East must win, but now he is indeed end played.

Eastland In Hospital

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP) — Former Sen. James O. Eastland, a Democrat who was one of the most powerful members of Congress during his 37 years in office, remains hospitalized in critical condition. Eastland was admitted Sunday and is suffering from "multiple medical problems," said Liz Hare, a spokesman at Greenwood-Leflore County Hospital. She did not elaborate. Eastland, 81, was taken to the hospital from his Doddsville plantation home and was still in the facility's intensive care unit Monday night. "He has several health problems that they are treating," Elizabeth Eastland said of her husband's hospitalization. "He has improved, he is resting comfortably." Asked what medical problems the longtime senator had, she said: "There are just so many problems, it's one reacting on the other. Some are chronic. I don't think we should identify them." He is "getting good treatment and we are hoping for some improvement," Mrs. Eastland said. Eastland first went to Congress in June, 1941, appointed by the late Gov. Paul B. Johnson Sr. to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Sen. Pat Harrison, D-Miss. He served for three months but did not seek election for the remainder of the term. He was elected to his first full six-year term in November, 1942, and served until his retirement in 1978. At his retirement, Eastland was replaced by Sen. Thad Cochran, the first Republican elected to the U.S. Senate from Mississippi since Reconstruction. At his retirement, Eastland was senior U.S. Senator with 36 continuous years service and was Mississippi's longest serving member of that body. He served as Judiciary Committee chairman for 16 years and was elected president pro tempore following the death of Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., on July 27, 1972.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA IN THE GENERAL SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION COUNTY OF PITT

In the Matter of the proposed Foreclosure of a deed of trust executed by Ralph B. Jarman and Zula J. Jarman in an original amount of $35,211.00 dated December 27, 1984, recorded in Book W-53, Page 295, Pitt County Registry by Richard C. Poole, Substitute Trustee.

NOTICE OF SUBSTITUTION OF REAL ESTATE

See Appointment of Substitute Trustee as recorded in Book 62 at Page 775 of the Pitt County Registry.

Under and by virtue of the power and authority contained in that certain Deed of Trust executed and delivered by Ralph B. Jarman and wife, Zula J. Jarman, dated December 27, 1984, and recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds for Pitt County, North Carolina, in Book W-53 at Page 295 and because of default in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured and failure to carry out or perform the stipulations and agreements therein contained and pursuant to the demand of the owner and holder of the indebtedness secured by said Deed of Trust, the undersigned Richard C. Poole, Substitute Trustee, will expose for sale at public auction on the 24th day of February, 1986, at 12:00 P.M. on the front steps of the Pitt County Courthouse, Greenville, North Carolina, the following described real property (including the house and any other improvements thereon):

Being all of Lot #2 of Deerfield Subdivision as shown on a map thereof prepared by Triangle Engineering and Surveying, Inc., and recorded in Map Book 29, Page 200 Pitt County Registry.

The sale will be made subject to all prior liens (including attorney's fees, foreclosure expenses and trustee's fees), unpaid taxes, restrictions and easements of record and special assessments, if any.

The record owners of the above described real property as reflected on the records of the Pitt County Register of Deeds, not more than ten (10) days prior to the posting of this Notice are Ralph B. Jarman and Wife, Zula J. Jarman.

Pursuant to North Carolina General Statutes 54-21.10 (b), and the terms of the Deed of Trust, a successful bidder may be required to deposit with the Substitute Trustee immediately upon conclusion of the sale a cash deposit of ten (10%) percent of the bid up to and including $1,000.00 plus five (5%) percent of any excess over $1,000.00. Any successful bidder shall be required to tender the full balance purchase price so bid at that time, he shall remain liable on his bid or certified check at the time the Substitute Trustee tenders to him a deed for the property or attempts to tender such deed, and should said successful bidder fail to pay the full balance purchase price so bid at that time, he shall remain liable on his bid or  Yesterday's Cryptquip: AN INEXPERIENCED GARDENER DUG UP EXCUSES.

Today's Cryptquip clue: C equals W

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, FEB. 19, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day when most persons will change their perspective from being social and interested in public activities to an attitude in which they want to quietly settle down and make plans.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Concentrate on good pals in the morning and what you can do to aid them, but later study how you can become more successful.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get out in the business world and know how to improve routines. Be supportive of friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Early morning is best for winding up a project that you have been working on for some time, and then later get into worldly matters.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Solving that problem with your mate can be done early in the day, but later pursue what you personally desire.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get busy and keep any promises made, but do so with a spark of originality for best results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) As the day begins, put extra efforts into any work you have to do and get the approval of a bigwig.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can realize an ambition in the morning, and later get into the specifics connected with it. Keep active and you will be happy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study what it is your mate desires of you and then try to please, so get that plan working early.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get into modern interests that inspire you now, and tonight is fine for enjoying your home and family.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have hit on a new idea for adding to your income and holdings in the morning, so carry through with it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make that plan workable so that you can reach some important goal, and get busy on the work it entails.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Set up a plan of action in the morning to gain your goals of an original nature in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have cheerful friends, do well at school with studies and should have the education slanted along social and humanitarian lines, but later in life will turn to the field of investigations and do very well and will be a fine family person. Encourage participation in sports.

Senators Hear Washington's Plea

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
 Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate marked George Washington's birthday as it has for the last 90 years, listening anew to the first president's parting advice: stay out of debt, avoid foreign entanglements and beware political parties.

Washington never delivered his own Farewell Address to the American people. It was printed instead in a Philadelphia newspaper in September 1796.

The prophetic speech, with its plea to North and South to stay united, was first read in the Senate in 1888, and has been read there annually since 1896 on or around Washington's birthday.

Carrying on the tradition Monday was freshman Sen. John D. Rockefeller IV, D-W.Va., who said after his 44-minute recitation that the speech is "an amazingly current document."

Rockefeller said the American people "would be very impressed" if they ever listened to the 7,500-word address.

As usual, the ritual took place in a nearly deserted Senate chamber. Only Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who occupied the president's chair, a few Senate pages and a stenographer were on the floor. A handful of reporters and 150 tourists listened from the mostly empty galleries. The other senators were still away on a week-long recess that ended today.

Washington explained in his address his reasons for retiring after two terms as president, then went on to proffer some advice to the young republic he had led in war and in peace.

A united country, he said, offers "greater security from external danger" and "an exemption from those broils and wars between themselves, which so frequently afflict neighboring countries not tied together by the same government."

A strong union, he added, "will avoid the necessity of those overgrown military establishments."

"Virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government," Washington said. "Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge."

"Cherish public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as springly as possible, avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering, also, that timely disbursements, to prepare for danger, frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it," said Washington.

When there are debts to pay off, "it is essential that you should practically bear in mind, that towards the payment of debts there must be revenue; that to have revenue there must be taxes; that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient and unpleasant."

Rockefeller told reporters, "My mind moved back about seven feet as I read those comments" toward where Gramm, co-author of the new balanced-budget law, was seated behind him.

Washington also counseled "against the baneful effects of the spirit of party" and warned his country to avoid "permanent, inveterate antipathies against particular nations and passionate attachment for others."

Congress Returns To Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space shuttle Challenger disaster comes in for its first Senate hearing today as Congress returns from a week-long recess and begins to take up fiscal 1987 budget requests.

Investigators of the Jan. 28 explosion that killed seven astronauts are set to answer questions from senators as are National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials.

The Senate also aims to take up two long-stalled proposals. One would clear the way for broadcasts of floor debates. The other is a 36-year-old treaty to outlaw genocide.

In the House, leaders are considering one last push to revive more than $20 billion in program cuts and tax increases jettisoned as lawmakers scrambled to get out of town before Christmas.

The progress of the Challenger investigation will be a prime focus when the science subcommittee of the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee turns to NASA's 1987 budget.

Former Secretary of State William P. Rogers and astronaut Neil Armstrong, chairman and vice chairman respectively of the commission investigating the disaster, are set to report. The subcommittee also will hear from William R. Graham, acting NASA administrator, and Jesse Moore, NASA's associate administrator of space flight.

John C. Danforth, R-Mo., to observe recently that television broadcasts would be "like watching the grass grow."

Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., is among lawmakers who say streamlining Senate rules should go hand in hand with the legislation currently under consideration, which would allow immediate radio broadcasts of floor action and a closed-circuit test of television broadcasts.

The genocide treaty, which arose out of the Holocaust that swept through Europe's Jewish population in World War II, was written in 1950 and the Senate has resisted ratification for decades.

Recent efforts to block approval have been led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who says that its provisions might be turned against Israel.

Actually, Israel ratified the treaty long ago. Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, says the vast majority of American Jews favor the pact.

President Reagan says that he would like to see ratification of the measure, whose formal name is the International Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide.

The package of program cuts and revenue increases being eyed by House leaders appeared to be dead last December.

It was not clear that the House would get to a revival effort this week, but leaders said it would be worth a try.

A recent fossil discovery in Nova Scotia uncovered more than 100,000 bits of bones, skulls, teeth and other traces of fish, reptiles and dinosaurs dating back 200 million years. Two-billion-year-old fossils of algae have been found in Lake Superior. In Australia, cell fossils have confirmed the existence of bacteria as much as 3.5 billion years old. Scientists have also discovered delicate spider web fossils perfectly preserved in amber.

Senators remain at odds over proposed television and radio coverage of floor debates. The House has allowed such broadcasts since 1979.

Fear of grandstanding by media-conscious lawmakers may be one reason for the reluctance of senators to drop their ban on television cameras.

For the most part, though, senators say they hate to part with traditional procedures that could appear disorderly to TV viewers. For example, it is not unusual for a lawmaker to interrupt a seemingly serious debate to insert a snippet of poetry or other lighthearted material in the Congressional Record.

The Senate also often stands idle for long periods, prompting Sen.

Machinery Sales Slump

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new and used farm machinery to farmers are expected to drop again in 1986, in a seven-year slump that shows little sign of easing, according to new projections by the Agriculture Department.

Farm machinery sales peaked at nearly $11.8 billion in 1979. This year, analysts say, sales could be less than half of that, perhaps in the range of $5.25 billion to $5.5 billion.

The latest projection was included in a new outlook report by the department's Economic Research Service. If sales do drop to the level indicated for 1986, they would be down 10 percent to 14 percent from $6.1 billion last year.

Carlos Sisco, who worked on the report, said 1986 machinery sales could be the lowest since the mid-1970s.

The reason for the drop in machinery sales has been the crunch on farm income in recent years and the plummet in farmland values, which has reduced sharply the assets and borrowing power of farmers.

Real estate assets, for example, were shown in the report at $638.2 billion as of Dec. 31, 1985, down from $693.7 billion at the end of 1984. Since Dec. 31, 1980, real estate assets have dropped more than $200 billion, according to the report.

Another decline is expected this year, with farm real estate assets projected in the range of $600 billion to $620 billion on Dec. 31, 1986. Farm debt, meanwhile, continues at near-record levels, estimated at $212.1 billion as of Dec. 31, 1985. The peak was $217.2 billion at the end of 1982.

"Consequently, domestic demand for farm machinery will be further affected," the report said. "Capital expenditures for new and used tractors are forecast to total $1.8 billion to $1.9 billion in 1986, compared with an estimated $2.05 billion last year."

Commuter Crash

LANGHORNE, Pa. (AP) — A runaway oil truck hit a commuter train at a rail crossing and was dragged about 50 feet where it struck a man as it came to a halt, authorities said.

Carl Dodson, 32, of Feasterville, was in fair condition with cuts and bruises this morning at St. Mary's Hospital in Langhorne.

Truck driver William Gentry Jr., 46, of Huntingdon Valley told police he had trouble with his brakes as he approached the tracks and had to veer around cars stopped at the crossing. The truck crashed through the gate and struck the train. No one on the train was hurt and no oil spilled, police said.
