Crude Oil Prices Hit Lowest Level Since 1979

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil prices have fallen below $15 a barrel for the first time in seven years, triggering "panic selling" by traders increasingly pessimistic about prospects for the oversupplied market, analysts say.

"All the phones started ringing with sell orders," Madison Galbraith, senior energy specialist with Merrill Lynch Energy Futures in New York, said Tuesday. "I've never seen it this low since I've been in the marketplace."

The price for March delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, fell Tuesday to $14.77 for a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, down $1.24 from the previous session's close.

Prices of other petroleum products also dropped, notably home-heating oil for March delivery, down 2.68 cents to 49.88 cents a gallon, and unleaded gasoline, down 3.20 cents to 43.55 cents a gallon.

It was the lowest price for West Texas Intermediate since the exchange began trading that grade in 1983, and analysts said it was the lowest price paid for any oil on the open market since early 1979, before the Iranian revolution disrupted world supplies.

"It seems a lot of this is a momentum-type thing, panic-type selling," said Peter Beutel, assistant director of Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc., an energy futures trader in New York.

"Panic selling" is a term used to describe a market in which traders, believing prices only are headed lower, sell their oil no matter what the price.

Uncertainty about the outlook for oil intensified after Mexico, a non-OPEC producer, cut prices last week to an average of $15 a barrel. Some dealers also said there was anxiety because there was no indication production by other countries will decline.

More signs of a long-term slump came when three U.S. oil companies said Tuesday they had reduced the contract prices they pay producers by up to $2 a barrel for various grades of crude.

The reductions by Diamond Shamrock Corp., Conoco Inc. and Marathon Petroleum Co. were the latest cuts that have brought postings down to the $18-$21 range, compared with $27-$29 a few months ago.

Prices on the open market have dropped by more than 50 percent since November because of a struggle between the once-mighty Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and non-OPEC producers.

Rich OPEC nations, led by Saudi Arabia, have been flooding the market with cheap oil to undercut competitors and get more customers. Saudi Arabia long had been threatening a price free-for-all after failing to persuade oil producers in and out of OPEC to adhere to production quotas to prop up depressed markets.

The price war has aggravated divisions within the decaying 13-nation cartel, pitting the Saudis against poor members led by Algeria, Libya and Iran, which say they cannot afford to lower prices.

Author Alex Haley Sees America As 'Tasty Dish' Of Ethnic Groups

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"Roots" author Alex Haley expresses a strong belief that America's strength lies in a great extent in its unity of diversity. He emphasizes, too, his conviction that pride in one's ethnic heritage is a virtue to be fostered as an important factor in total American pride.

Haley is in Greenville on a two-day visit — Tuesday and today — as the guest speaker for the fifth annual Lecture-Seminar Series at East Carolina University. His visit here coincides with the observance of February as Black History Month in North Carolina.

"I don't like the concept of America as a melting pot," Haley said at a press conference held on the ECU campus Tuesday afternoon. "For me a melting pot connotes an uninteresting bland bowl of oatmeal. I prefer instead the metaphor of a colorful salad."

In this context, Haley likened each ingredient to a different ethnic group bound together with a dressing that equates to a binding interest of all ethnic groups. "The end result is a colorful, tasty dish, yet one in which each ingredient still maintains its individual characteristic," he said.

Pride is a word that Haley used often in his remarks to the press corps. He readily admitted that he is proud of the fact that it has often been said that "Roots" gave birth to a renaissance of a desire to know more about one's ethnic heritage.

"It is not only the black race, but all ethnic groups in America who are now looking back to discover more about their origins," he said. "In the early days when large numbers of immigrants arrived on our shores, a pattern was established. The older people maintained traditional ties and languages. The younger generation, eager to be assimilated in a new society, broke old ties, often to the extent of changing their names. They were for the larger part not interested in their origins, and as a result, their knowledge of their old countries was lost to their families.

"Today," Haley said, "many of the grandchildren and great-grandchildren of these early immigrants are interested in discovering something about their origin, their past heritage. Often, it is difficult, just as it is with blacks, as they have so little to go on in their search."

Volcker Says Declining Rate Of Dollar May Fuel Inflation

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker warned today that recent sharp declines in the dollar, while holding out the potential of helping farmers and manufacturers, also posed a danger of re-igniting inflation.

Volcker said the declines in the foreign exchange value of the dollar, which have been dramatic in recent days, were a "two-edged sword" carrying with them the promise of helping depressed trade sectors but also threatening other dangers.

"Economic history is replete with examples of countries that, in attempting to correct over-valuation of their currencies, failed to take advantage of their improved competitive positions," Volcker told the House Banking Committee.

"Too often, they lapsed into a debilitating and self-defeating cycle of external depreciation (of their currency) and internal inflation, at the expense of an eroding loss of confidence, higher interest rates and impaired growth," he said.

Volcker's comments came as he laid out the central bank's money targets for 1986, which were set last week at a meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee, the Fed's policy-making arm.

Volcker said the Fed had made no "significant change" in monetary policy in recent weeks. The comments indicated that the Fed would not be moving to push interest rates lower in coming weeks.

Until recently, many analysts had been predicting that the Volcker-led central bank would do something dramatic, such as cutting its discount rate, to signal its intention to push interest rates lower.

Those hopes have faded, however, as the economy has shown surprising strength without the benefit of a further nudge from the Fed.

Part of the renewed vigor is coming from a steep plunge in oil prices over the past month. With oil now selling on the spot market for around $17 a barrel, down from $25 a barrel just a month ago, many economists are busy boosting their estimates for growth this year.

They contend that with oil prices lower, consumers and businesses will have more money to spend on other things. Additionally, falling prices for oil will help hold inflation down and will translate into higher growth in inflation-adjusted terms.

The hope for lower inflation has helped to fuel further declines in interest rates. Yields on bond prices last week tumbled to their lowest level in more than six years following news that wholesale prices, led by falling energy prices, dropped sharply last month.

Mike Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, predicted Tuesday that Volcker would not give any indication the central bank planned to ease credit restraints further. Evans said he believed Volcker was worried that the bank would lose its inflation-fighter image if it sought to push rates lower now.

"Volcker is not as convinced as many people that inflation is licked. I think he will identify the recent decline in prices as strictly temporary," Evans said.

The Reagan administration has been contending that the economy will grow at a 4 percent rate, from the fourth quarter of 1985 to the fourth quarter of this year.

Many analysts dismissed this prediction as far too rosy a little over a month ago, contending that growth would likely be little improved.

WON A BOAT?

I have received a call from Marine Industries of North America, said to be headquartered in Los Angeles, saying I have won a boat and that, if I will send a fairly large amount of money for shipping and handling, it will be sent to me. I didn't fall, but I think others should be warned. There isn't any chance that this is legitimate, is there?

Virtually no chance at all, Billie Miller of the Consumer Protection Division of the North Carolina Attorney General's office said.

ECU Names Chief

Washington Police Chief Johnny Rose announced Monday that he will resign next month to return to East Carolina University as chief of its campus police.

According to Charles R. Blake, assistant to the chancellor at ECU, Rose will assume his duties as chief of police and assistant director of security at ECU on March 17. Rose, 38, will replace the retiring Francis Eddings.

Rose has 14 years of experience in law enforcement. He has served as Washington chief of police since 1981. He was employed by the ECU campus police from 1975 until 1981, serving the university as a police officer, sergeant, lieutenant and investigator. He was a patrol officer in Washington from 1972-75.

A native of Pantego, Rose earned a degree in corrections with a minor in law enforcement administration from ECU. He is enrolled in the ECU master's program in public administration. A graduate of Pantego High School, he took law enforcement training at Beaufort County Community College.

He and his wife, Laurie, have two children.

Planning Board Seeks Information On Tightening Billboard Controls

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission on Tuesday directed city planners to submit information on state municipal sign ordinances to be considered by the board in development of tighter sign regulations.

Commissioners requested that planners present details on how other cities have handled control of outdoor advertising signs (billboards), height and square footage limitations and cases where sign control ordinances were enacted with provisions to phase out signs not conforming with new regulations.

According to city planners, Greenville currently regulates ground and free-standing signs.

Ground signs may not be over 50 square feet and cannot exceed five feet in height. They may be located up to street right-of-ways.

The display area of free-standing signs is currently unlimited in size, however, the City Council in January passed a resolution limiting height of signs to 35 feet in all zones.

The city also allows an unlimited number of signs to be located in most zoning districts.

The commission will discuss information presented by planning staff members at its monthly meeting in March. After the commission develops sign-control regulations, the matter will be sent to City Council for final action.

In other business Tuesday, commissioners approved and sent to the Greenville Board of Adjustment a preliminary plat of Fox Run Apartments by BOA because the number of units proposed for the development exceeds the amount allowed by the city.

Tagged to commission approval of the preliminary plat was a recommendation that BOA members consider placing fencing requirements on the development to screen a swimming pool and club house proposed for location at the front of Fox Run.

Fox Run is to be located on U.S. 264 bypass, west of Laughinghouse Drive. The development, if approved by BOA, will have 18 buildings containing 174 multifamily units on a 9.44-acre tract.

Also approved were preliminary plats of Summerfield Phase II, Dalton T. Jones Subdivision, Courtney Square Phase IV and Planter's Walk Subdivision.

Program Aims At Helping Kids Cope During Divorce

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Every year, the parents of more than a million children get divorced. It's a decision that's tough on parents, and maybe even tougher on kids, says University of Rochester psychologist Joanne Pedro-Carroll.

"Many studies have shown that such youngsters are at high risk of becoming 'problem' children in the classroom," she says, "ones who fight too much with classmates, who seem perpetually distracted, who cry or lose their temper over small provocations, or who are so withdrawn that they don't participate in class or make friends."

She has developed a preventive program operating in 28 schools in and around Rochester to help such children. The program is designed not only to relieve the sense of isolation and stigma that so many children feel when their parents split up, she explains, but also to teach the skills that children need to cope with the disruption of their family.

"Over a period of several weeks, children share feelings in support groups and discover that they're not alone," Pedro-Carroll says. "This is an important step, but equally important, children also learn ways of resolving conflicts with others."

The techniques used to teach problem-solving skills vary with the ages of the children involved. In grades 1 through 3, leaders often use games, puppet shows or cartoons to convey the main steps involved in solving problems.

A technique that is popular with older children, Pedro-Carroll says, is to role-play divorce-related scenarios on "WKID-TV," in which pupils take turns being members of a "panel of experts" on separation and divorce. The experts' job is to comment on divorce-related questions, and suggest solutions for possible problems posed by the "studio audience" made up of other group members.

Panelists answer questions like "Is it true that kids can cause their parents' divorce?" or "Will I lose my friends if they find out my parents have split?"

From this exercise, Pedro-Carroll says, children develop a sense of mastery and take pride in their ability to help themselves and each other with difficult issues.

Because the "Children of Divorce" project is a low-cost way to improve the academic performance of the many school-age children whose parents separate, Pedro-Carroll hopes it will be widely imitated in districts across the country.

Though there are a few other similar programs around the country, possibly none is so thoroughly committed to research as Rochester's.

Pedro-Carroll supervises extensive testing of children, teachers and parents under scientifically controlled conditions to see whether the therapy has a measurable impact.

Results from testing the approximately 215 children who have participated in the intervention programs have been encouraging, she says.

"After going through the program, most children become less anxious and worried and report feeling happier and more in control of their lives," she says.

Teachers say that after children participate, they display fewer learning problems, appear less fearful, aggressive or moody. Teachers also say that children show an improved ability to get along with schoolmates, speak up for themselves, follow rules and tolerate frustration.

The idea for the intervention came about when Pedro-Carroll was completing work on her doctoral degree in clinical psychology in 1982. She found that frequently children mistakenly blame themselves for their parents' problems, and exhaust themselves worrying about them.

"I reasoned that if I could show children how to distinguish between problems they can't solve ('How can I make mom and dad get back together?' for instance) from problems they can do something about ('How will I get Danny to stop teasing me at recess?') then the kids could focus their energy on matters important to their own development."

To keep the costs of the program low and reach large numbers of children, Pedro-Carroll designed the program to operate in schools.

"Schools are ideal, because outside of the family, school is the most important socializing influence in a child's life," she says. "And by training school professionals to conduct the sessions, we can help children for a fraction of what private counseling would cost."

Scientists aren't entirely certain why thousands of people die every year after shoveling snow. They suggest, says the American Heart Association, that the heartbeat loses rhythm as a stressed body tries to return to normal. They recommend that anyone older than 40 shovel snow very carefully, with frequent rests.

Selective Service Changes Keep It Marching In Step

DEAR ABBY: Your fans have recently pointed out the advantages and disadvantages of bachelorhood. In a response to "Proud Bachelor," you said, "And let's not forget that bachelorhood has its privileges. In time of war, they get to go first."

Although this was true at one time, it is no longer true. The Selective Service System has also changed with the times in an effort to deliver manpower needed by the Department of Defense in an emergency in the time required, and to do so with equity. We believe we have accomplished this.

Prior to the reforms of the early '70s, there were many inequities—student, occupational, paternity deferments. All these have been eliminated. In a future emergency, who would go will be determined by random selection based upon birth date.

The Selective Service also instituted other changes to assure a fair and just system of selection. The changes include board members who are trained and representative of the public they serve, and an organized alternative service for conscientious objectors.

Peacetime registration has made it possible to mobilize our manpower in an emergency at least six weeks faster than if registration did not exist. Since the president reinstated Selective Service registration in 1980, over 15.3 million young men, or over 99 percent of our draft-eligible population, have registered.

So, Abby, whether a man is married or not doesn't matter. Each one of the 15.3 million men who has made that trip to the post office to register with Selective Service deserves our thanks.

THOMAS K. TURNAGE,
DIRECTOR,
SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM,
WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR MR. TURNAGE: And you have my thanks for the update as well as the information concerning the changes in the Selective Service system.

I found especially informative the reasons for deferments, postponements and exemptions. I am sharing them with my readers:

- Conscientious objectors perform service to the nation in a manner consistent with their moral, ethical or religious opposition to participation in war in any form. Depending upon the nature of his beliefs, a conscientious objector serves either in a non-combatant capacity in the armed forces or in a civilian job contributing to the national interest.
- Ministers may be exempted from service.
- Ministerial students are deferred from service until they complete their studies.
- Surviving sons or brothers in a family where the father, mother, brother or sister died as a result of U.S. military service, or is in a captured or missing in action status, are exempt from service in peacetime.

- Hardship deferments are available for men whose induction would result in hardship to persons who depend upon them for support.
- Members of reserve components (including the National Guard and advanced-level ROTC cadets who have already signed a Reserve contract) are eligible for a separate classification and perform their military service in the National Guard or the Reserves.
- Certain elected officials are exempt from service as long as they continue to hold office.
- Veterans generally are exempt from service in peacetime.
- If an alien served at least 12 months in the armed forces of a country with which the United States is involved in mutual defense activities, he is eligible for the same classification as a man who has completed U.S. military service.
- Dual nationals may be exempted from U.S. military service if their other country of nationality has a treaty or agreement with the United States providing for such an exemption.

QUICK CROCHET...purse is made from machine-washable polyester cord.

Pat's Pointers — By Pat Trexler

It seems a woman can never have too many purses, and today's high prices can make shopping for them very discouraging. But here's good news for crocheters: a super purse, roomy enough for all your valuables but not at all bulky. And you can make it for under $11! Best of all, you can whip it up in a matter of hours, taking your choice of shoulder strap or regular length handle.

Make with a large hook and machine-washable polyester crochet cord, it has that Aran Isle look that never goes out of fashion. You will enjoy making and using this bag so much that you are sure to want to make others for gifts.

To obtain directions for making the Quick Crochet Purse, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-0216 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 15922, Lenexa, Kan. 66215.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0216 by sending a check or money order for $10.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, off-white crochet cord and full instructions.

So often people tell me, "Oh, I can crochet — I just can't understand and follow written instructions." I believe this is because crochet instructions look much more complicated than they usually are.

I suggest that anyone using ordinary crochet instructions write out those instructions themselves, spelling out all abbreviated terms and following them step-by-step rather than trying to understand the whole pattern at once. By following this suggestion, most crocheters find they can successfully follow any set of instructions.

Decreasing and increasing in crochet patterns is frequently puzzling to many. To decrease, you may be told something like this: "Dc in each of next 2 sts, holding back last lps of each st, yo and thru all loops." It's no wonder that many don't know what to do!

Unabbreviated, this means: Work a double crochet in each of the next two stitches, holding back that last loops of each stitch. Next, yarnover and pull the hook through all of the loops on the hook." Even this may be confusing, so I will explain further.

To do this, work a double crochet to the point where you have two loops on the hook. Now, leaving these two loops on the hook, work a double crochet in the next stitch to the point where you have a total of three loops on the hook. Your final step will be to wrap the yarn around the hook (yarnover) and draw this yarn through all the loops on the hook at once. You will now have one stitch where you previously had two.

This same decrease can be worked with single, half-double or triple crochet stitches. Just remember to always work to the point just before you are to "yarnover and pull through the loops" for the last time in any stitch and then work the next stitch, pulling the hook through all loops on the hook for the final step.

To decrease at the beginning of a row, you will sometimes be told to slip-stitch across a certain number of stitches. At the end of the row, you might be told to simply leave some stitches unworked and turn the work before reaching the end of the row.

Increases are frequently made by simply making two or more stitches in the space where only one stitch is usually worked.

If you are not given specific instructions for increasing or decreasing — and often you will be — you should be safe in using the methods described above.

Dancers Offer Pointers On Keeping Feet In Good Shape

CHICAGO (AP) — The best dancers make it look effortless. But behind every beautiful move is a lot of work and upkeep of those vital body parts — the feet — says dance therapist Bernadette Hecox.

"If their feet are neglected, dancers are apt to experience injuries and foot problems," says Hecox, an instructor of anatomy and movement analysis in the Dance Division of the Juilliard School in New York, and consultant to Dr. Scholl's Foot Health Council.

"I love my feet; they're my instruments," says Richard Stafford, dance captain for the Chicago contingent of the national touring company of the musical, "Cats." To help keep his feet finely tuned, he says, he takes good care of them and pampers them with regular soaking and massage.

The most common foot condition Hecox observes among dancers is blisters caused by friction of shoes rubbing against skin.

"Red, tender spots that signal developing blisters can be protected with moleskin to help prevent further friction," she says.

Excessive callus buildup is another common problem among many dancers, and Hecox advises them to reduce calluses daily with a pumice stone or file.

"While moderate callus buildup on the bottom of the foot provides protection for dancers' feet, excessive callus buildup may hamper dancing," she says. "The callus can become so hard that it splits, which is painful and may lead to infection."

Because they generally dance on hard floors, most dancers experience foot shock — stress put on muscles, bones and ligaments, Hecox points out. She suggests one simple way dancers can alleviate foot shock is by adding insoles to their shoes to provide an extra layer of protective cushioning for the bottom of their feet.

"In our show we do a lot of jumping, which puts a lot of pressure on the feet," says Marvin Engran, a dancer in "Cats." "Before a performance I tape my feet and ankles for extra support."

Another important consideration in preventive foot care for dancers is a warmup.

"Before I begin to dance, I spend a lot of time stretching," says "Cats" dancer Douglas Graham. "I do foot circles inward and outward to get the muscles going, then I do a series of rolling movements to exert pressure on the balls of the feet."

Hecox says dancers can give their feet the care they deserve by adopting a regular grooming regimen: Soak feet regularly in lukewarm soapy solution, dry feet thoroughly and powder them, use a pumice stone or file to reduce calluses, cut toenails straight across to avoid ingrown nails, and massage feet with a conditioning lotion to soften them.

The Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter opened on July 1 and is located one mile south of Bells Fork of the County Home Road.

Shivering is part of our body's natural mechanism to keep warm. Shivering, doctors say, increases the body's metabolism, so that more heat energy is generated and warmed blood is pumped more quickly to extremities.

Power Play

Allowing the nation's first large-scale peat-mining operation to locate in Hyde County without any state peat regulations in place amounts to planned assassination of the North Carolina coast's commercial fishing industry.

Developers of the proposed peat operation are the ones putting the gun to the heads of fishermen in the form of a lawsuit designed to force the state to issue required permits — regardless of the impact on the environment.

The state of North Carolina should not be intimidated by this power play. The fishing industry is vital to the coastal area's economy. Big bucks go into private pockets and state coffers from fishing interests. Allowing a competing industry (peat mining) to set up shop without knowing the potential impact on water quality in estuarine areas is haphazard. Allowing the industry to operate without having any concrete guidelines regulating its operation is equally capricious.

The issue is environmental and economic. A peat-mining operation would bring new jobs to a traditionally maritime area. The question is, can the two co-exist without ecological and consequent economic damage to the older, profitable industry? That uncertainty must be resolved before any permits to operate are signed. The state must, through peat regulations, guarantee that the livelihood of commercial and sport fishermen will not be threatened.

With oil prices plunging, the profitability of peat mining is more questionable than it was five years ago. Peat, touted during the energy crisis as a cheap source of fuel, now may be too expensive to produce to compete with tumbling oil prices. This factor must be considered when weighing environmental impact against economic gain.

The peat industry's use of public waters — discharges into state canals specifically — brings cries of foul from fisherman. Their fears are justified. The dangers of increased siltation, freshwater run-off and elevated mercury content from peat mining are real. The fragile areas affected are critical breeding grounds for marine delicacies that bring a pretty price.

The peat industry's use of public waters also directly competes with the fishing industry's need for more marine nurseries — a need that fisherman have asked state Marine and Fisheries Commission to give top priority. The survival of the fishing industry depends on its capacity to produce, and peat mining without guidelines threatens that ability.

The state should stand its ground on the question of regulations. It has a statutory obligation to protect water quality, not give unsubstantiated promises of "everything will be all right" a ready stamp of approval.

ECU Search

East Carolina University has formally begun its search for a chancellor to succeed Dr. John M. Howell with the naming of an 11-member chancellor search committee.

The committee was announced last weekend by C. Ralph Kinsey Jr., chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees. Kinsey will also serve as chairman of the search committee. The committee is made up of five members of the board of trustees, three faculty members, two alumni representatives and one student representative.

Howell will retire no later than June 30, 1987, after serving as chancellor since 1982.

The committee is expected to begin screening applications by early March and to begin interviewing of selected candidates by late spring.

Kinsey hopes that two nominations can be submitted to the board of trustees and then to the president of the University of North Carolina system by January 1987.

The chancellor selection is a long and tedious process. However, selecting the person who will lead East Carolina University into its next era is vitally important. Undoubtedly the selection committee will spend many hours considering the candidates before making a decision.

Child Support Laws Changing

RALEIGH — A federal child support enforcement law that will become effective in October will force major changes in North Carolina state law and the way state courts operate.

"I see on the horizon a significant impact on the courts system of this state, particularly for the clerks of court and the district courts," Franklin Freeman, state administrative officer of the courts, told the N.C. Courts Commission.

The U.S. Child Support Act of 1984 does not actually mandate any state court changes. It follows a far more typical federal practice of tying state changes to the availability of federal funds. If the state doesn't change its laws, then the feds will cut what is known as "IV-D" child support grants to the state.

The federal law contains two major provisions. The first mandates speedy handling of child support legal suits. The second establishes a system of wage garnishment for any parent who falls behind even once in his child support payments.

A legislative study committee has begun meeting to draft legislation to bring North Carolina law into compliance with the federal law.

The first trick is to get North Carolina courts to dispose of 90 percent of all child support legal suits within 120 days of filing. These are cases where child support has already been ordered by a judge and the parent ordered to pay it (usually the father) falls behind. The mother then sues.

In an interview, Freeman said he can't predict the potential impact on North Carolina courts. His office is conducting a study now to determine how long these suits take to move through state courts.

If they aren't meeting the federally mandated schedule, Freeman says, there are three alternatives. The Legislature can create new judgeships in the districts which aren't meeting the timetable and keep all these suits in court.

The second alternative, one suggested by the federal legislation, is the creation of an expedited hearing process for such lawsuits. Magistrates and clerks of court would hear the cases and order the child support payments to resume. This, however, would mark a departure from state legal tradition which the Legislature might not want to embrace.

The third alternative is to order the courts to expedite child support hearings and make people involved in other kinds of lawsuits wait longer for court dates.

David Beal, clerk of Surry County Superior Court, told the commission that the law will also mean a great deal of new work for clerks and private business people.

Any parent who is late by 30 days in making a court-ordered child support payment will have the money taken out of his wages. The clerk will have to keep up with each parent who comes under such a garnishment and send the proper forms to his employer every time he changes jobs.

Private employers will then have to send the money to the clerk, making sure that they follow a number of federal regulations.

The new federal law will affect only child support payments which come under the federal "IV-D" program, a program originally designed to help welfare parents collect the child support due them and thereby get off the welfare rolls. But Freeman says that once the system is up and running it will affect almost all child support cases. The state can't operate two court systems, he says, and the "IV-D" program is now open to any mother who wants its help, whether or not she is receiving welfare.

Living With The Philippines

WASHINGTON — As the inevitability that Ferdinand Marcos would declare himself president of the Philippines for another six years became clear, Reagan administration policy-makers dug in for the grimy task of trying to keep Congress from destabilizing his regime.

They are certain the U.S. government must continue and probably increase aid needed to combat the communist insurgency, no matter how deep the election fraud. Accounts of some dispassionate observers, however, claim that the image of a stolen election may be exaggerated.

But apart from stolen votes, the Reagan administration consensus is that there is no alternative to living with Marcos. The notion growing in Washington that he ought to be bundled aboard a U.S. warplane for parts unknown contradicts this truth: The Philippine republic is not Haiti; Ferdinand Marcos is not Baby Doc Duvalier. Another truth: Marcos rules a Third World country, not a Western nation with several hundred years of democratic experience.

For all the unprecedented American news coverage of the election, the politics of the former U.S. colony are mistakenly cast starkly as good and evil. The assumption infuriating Washington is that in a free election Corason Aquino would have been the landslide winner. That assumption is no more verifiable than the claimed Marcos re-election.

Outrage here has been fed by Marcos' performance on election day. Even sharply anti-Marcos officials at the U.S. Embassy in Manila supposed that the ruling party's political machine was sufficiently well-oiled to control the election without visible and outright vote theft. The big surprise on election day was not Marcos' chicanery but his ineptitude.

Sensitive intelligence reaching here from Manila documents the theft. One Reagan administration official who has taken an even-handed position was stunned by Marcos' "blatancy," particularly in purging registered voters to hold down the turnout in pro-Aquino metropolitan Manila.

Yet, that same official points out something sadly ignored in Washington: Millions of Filipinos did in fact vote for Marcos as other millions did for Aquino. That support in a two-way race puts him in a different category from other authoritarian rulers around the globe — Duvalier for example. To officials here, that clouds the justification for U.S. intervention.

But did Marcos really get millions of votes, or did they flow from a fraudulent ballot point pen? Members of the official U.S. observer team say the former. "The procedure we saw at the retail level here (inside polling booths) was more open and public than anything you could find at home," one observer, journalist Ben Wattenberg, told us on returning to the U.S. Contrary to the popular assumption, he suggested the cheating would have had to come from the top, not the bottom.

The first impression of the balloting by the head of the observer team, the judicious Sen. Richard Lugar, was that "the will of the voter will be expressed." He switched and suggested voter fraud after the Marcos apparatus, in its ham-handed style, shamelessly exploited his first statement and when Namfrel began beating the publicity drum.

Nanfrel (National Movement for Free Elections) was the primary source for Aquino's victory claim just as Comelec (the government's Commission on Elections) was for Marcos's. It may be no less partisan than Comelec. In Manila last month, every Namfrel leader we interviewed was an impassioned Marcos foe. While Wattenberg attested to the validity of many Namfrel claims, he charged it with conducting "a monster press hustle."

Central to its "hustle" was this theme: If Cory Aquino loses, the election is fixed. Actually, Marcos spokesmen do not challenge Namfrel's figures (which gave Aquino a comfortable lead) but claim it quit counting when the tally moved into Marcos country.

Can Anti-Religion Be Religious?

WASHINGTON — In recent years the Supreme Court has grappled with some tough cases involving the separation of church and state, but a case now developing in Mobile County, Ala., eventually may provide the toughest case of all.

It raises a thorny question: In their effort not to indoctrinate children in "religion," are the public schools in fact indoctrinating children in "religion"?

Under the Constitution, as we know, the states may not in any way foster an "establishment of religion." There can be no official prayers, no reading of Bible verses, no recitation of the Lord's Prayer, no posting of the 10 Commandments in a classroom. This is well understood. A teacher who sought to convince pupils that God exists, and that a divine power created our solar system, would be in deep trouble.

But what if the thrust of public school instruction is in the opposite direction — that God does not exist, and that our universe came into being by accident? Is it "religion" to teach that God is, but not religion to teach that God is not?

The questions lie at the heart of a suit brought by 600 parents against the school commissioners of Mobile County. The plaintiffs contend that "Secular Humanism" is for all constitutional purposes an establishment of religion. They assert that this religion is being systematically taught through the textbooks and teaching materials used in Mobile schools. They ask a U.S. district judge to halt the use of these texts and to order them replaced by others in which God gets a fair shake.

What is "Secular Humanism"? Its doctrines have been clearly defined in the Humanist Manifesto of 1933, in a second Humanist Manifesto of 1973, and in a Declaration of Humanism in 1980. Humanists describe themselves as "non-theists." They hold that man has no "soul," that man is only a complex animal, that God is a "myth," that professions of faith in God (such as "In God We Trust") are "meaningless and irrelevant."

To the humanist, science and reason are the be-all and end-all. There is no life after death. Orthodox religious teachings are "sham." Man's purpose on earth is to pursue his own happiness. Sexual conduct should not be "unduly repressed" by the "intolerant attitudes" of orthodox religions. There are no absolute moral or ethical values. These are "situational."

The trouble, from a constitutional standpoint, is that these convictions amount to articles of faith. The Supreme Court itself has held, in the Torcaso case of 1961, that "among religions in this country which do not teach what would generally be considered a belief in the existence of God are Buddhism, Taoism, Ethical Culture, Secular Humanism and others." As a matter of law, Secular Humanism is as clearly a religion as Christianity or Judaism.

Are its precepts embodied in public school curricula? The evidence appears to be overwhelming in support of that view. Plaintiffs in the Mobile case have offered half a dozen expert witnesses who have testified to the literally "godless" nature of teaching materials. Such prominent humanists as Charles Francis Potter and Paul Blanshard have described education as "a most powerful ally" and "the most important factor moving us toward a secular society." A recent (1983) prize-winning essay in The Humanist, official journal of the American Humanist Association, expressed a conviction that "the battle for humankind's future must be waged and won in the public school classroom by teachers who correctly perceive their role as the proselytizers of a new faith."

All this is deeply troublesome. I hold no brief for the kind of rabid fundamentalist who would ban the reading of "Romeo and Juliet" because it promotes illicit sex. There is something loony in the notion that "The Scarlet Letter" sanctions witchcraft. The idea of federal judges functioning as textbook committees is a melancholy idea.

All the same, I think the Mobile County plaintiffs have made their case. One of these years the Supreme Court will have the last word.

Strength For Today

As I stood in a bank recently waiting to have a check cashed, I noticed a pile of yellow slips on the teller's counter. They were marked "Overdrawn Accounts."

Many people are over-drawing their physical accounts. They are working too hard, resting too little, indulging themselves as regards food and drink. They are putting too much of a strain on themselves.

Still others are over-drawing their home accounts. They are mean and grouchy on occasion, making their spouse wonder why they ever accepted this proposal of marriage and making the youngsters want to be any place except at home. There are some people who never seem to know how to appreciate a friendship — only how to use it.

There have to be limits to all the good things we enjoy in this life. As long as we remain within these limits, we can be happy and productive. But when we over-draw them, suddenly we find we are in bankruptcy.

Car Buyers Cautioned By State

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials are asking car buyers to beware of out-of-state companies offering extended warranties and service contracts for automobiles by mail.

The warranties and contracts may be "unlawful business arrangements" and could leave car buyers unprotected if the companies go bankrupt and can't make good on the contracts, said Donald M. Wright, deputy commissioner in charge of consumer services at the state Department of Insurance.

The companies apparently have been using the state's public records on motor vehicles to identify potential customers and make their sales pitch, Wright said.

The insurance department is not concerned about warranties and service contracts offered by auto manufacturers or through auto dealerships, Wright said.

But he said Lifeguard Inc. of Nashville, Tenn.; American National Warranty Inc. of Arlington, Texas; and Colonial Auto Warranty Corp. of Scottsdale, Ariz., had also been soliciting North Carolina customers for auto service contracts. He added that the first two companies recently agreed to stop soliciting in North Carolina.

Haley ...

relates to achievement, Haley said when he first began writing "I was concerned about the competition I had to face, all those white writers who were already successful. But I came to the conclusion that we black people worry too much about white people. I decided what I needed to do was not to worry about competing, but to concentrate on perfecting the art of writing."

"Later, after 'Roots' was published, the august New York Times published a story saying my book had become the greatest publishing success in the U.S. I don't think I would have achieved this if I had continued to concentrate on worrying about my competition."

Haley mentioned "experiencing a bit of nostalgia when I saw a roadside sign this morning indicating the miles to New Bern. I recall that town with fondness," he said, "I was stationed there at one time."

Haley served 20 years in the U.S. Coast Guard before retiring in 1959. It was during his service years that Haley began to hone his ability to write. "Oh, how I'd like to be young, to be a sailor again," he said.

At one point, Haley touched on what he considers a misconception by some Americans in their image of the South. "I travel a lot, am in touch with people in Hollywood and New York. They feel Southerners are not with it when in fact we have got more soul, are more polite, better raised and are more sensitive than people in many areas. And the South still remains the American symbol for creative pursuit, especially in writing."

Asked if time spent in travel created problems in time available for his writing, Haley laughed. "You should ask my publishers that. They are absolutely unhappy about the time I spend on travel. It does to an extent delay my work, but I love going out meeting people, being in touch with them. I'd really like to stay at the places I visit longer than just a day. Greenville is only one of six places I'll be staying in this year for more than a single day."

Commenting about work now in progress and planned for the future, Haley said "three weeks ago I made an agreement with Lamar Alexander, our governor in Tennessee, to write a history about Tennessee."

"What I consider my most exciting book is one I'm working on, the story of Madame C.J. Walker. She was the first woman who ever earned a million dollars, a fortune she acquired through the manufacture and sale of hair preparations. Writing it is more like painting a canvas than writing a book. And already, I've had tentative approaches for the book to be turned into a Broadway musical."

During his two days in Greenville, Haley was on a busy schedule. His lecture Tuesday night at Hendrix Theater drew an overflow attendance.

First Blimp

PEKING (AP) — China has built its first blimp, the 99-foot-long "Bee Six," which has space for eight people in its gondola, the official Xinhua news agency said.

The blimp was built by the ultralight airplane research section of the Peking Aeronautical Engineering Institute and has a carrying capacity of 660 pounds. It was made of non-rigid material and can be folded into a 52-cubic-foot bag when deflated, the report said.

The blimp is designed to fly at an altitude of 9,900 feet and a maximum speed of 12 miles per hour, steered by a small engine powering a propeller.

It will be used for sightseeing, photography and advertising.

Burroughs Wellcome To Retain Capsules

RALEIGH (AP) — Executives at Burroughs Wellcome Co. in Research Triangle Park are considering whether the company's capsule products can be made more resistant to the kind of tampering with Tylenol capsules that led to the death of a New York woman from cyanide poisoning.

But unlike Tylenol's manufacturer, Burroughs Wellcome is not considering a halt in production or sales of its over-the-counter capsule products, a company spokesman said Tuesday.

Burroughs Wellcome redesigned its packaging in 1982 so its capsules are sold in two tamper-resistant forms: "blister" packages or sealed bottles.

"At this time, we don't have any reason to believe these actions are not adequate," said W. Thackara Brown Jr., director of public affairs for Burroughs Wellcome.

Two bottles of Extra-Strength Tylenol produced by Johnson & Johnson were found to be tainted with cyanide after a 23-year-old New York woman, who had taken some of the capsules, died Feb. 8.

"Obviously, as a result of what happened to Johnson & Johnson, we are reviewing our situation, Brown said. Company are asking themselves, "Are there any additional steps we could take to further ensure the integrity of our capsule product?" he said.

Teen-Age Pregnancies Cost Government $16 Billion

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a new report revealing that the nation has a $16 billion annual bill for teen-age pregnancies, a congressman and a children's advocate have told Congress that the best way to reduce the payments is to provide additional money for job training and education.

Their comments to a House Ways and Means subcommittee Tuesday came as a report by the private, non-profit Center for Population Options said the 385,000 first-born babies born to adolescents in 1985 will receive $16 billion in welfare benefits over the next 20 years.

The same study said that teen-age childbearing cost the nation $16.6 billion last year in welfare and other government costs. This estimate includes payments for the aid to Families with Dependent Children, Medicaid and food stamps as well as the costs of administering these programs.

The center, dedicated to preventing unwanted teen-age pregnancies, said that by the time the first-born babies reach age 20, the government will have spent $6.04 billion to support them through AFDC, Medicaid and food stamps.

Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., chairman of the Ways and Means subcommittee on public assistance and unemployment compensation, said half of all black children live in families headed by one parent, usually the mother, and that half of all black teen-age girls become pregnant.

In the inner cities, he added, nearly all black teen-age mothers do not marry but usually drop out of school permanently and begin a "dead-end" life on welfare. The typical young men who got them pregnant "have neither the financial capability nor the emotional maturity to be fathers" and members of the family, he said.

Ford said he cannot blame the welfare system for the rise in single-parent black families, but he said it should be overhauled to provide opportunities and incentives for young people to become self-sufficient.

Rather than spending cuts, Ford urged a bigger government investment in job training and education for welfare recipients and day care facilities for their children.

"While we are all concerned about the federal budget, it's time we realized that accountants are not the best people to ask about society's obligation to the needy," he said.

The subcommittee hearing began with a 90-minute screening of a CBS-TV documentary entitled "The Vanishing Family — Crisis in Black America," which took a close-up look at households headed by unwed teen-age mothers in a black neighborhood in Newark, N.J.

Marion Wright Edelman, president of the Children's Defense Fund, said the problem of teen-age pregnancies "affects everyone's daughter, everyone's family, stradding class and race. It is all of our problem. It's an American problem."

Besides jobs and education, she said teen-agers need adults to set a better moral example, with help from schools, churches and other community groups, and parents who will give them straightforward talk about sex and parental responsibility.

She also suggested changes in television fare, which "uses sex to sell everything from toothpaste to blue jeans."

Joyce Ladner, professor of social work at Howard University, said that in the "little tight boxes" of the inner cities, "it's not a question of morality but rather deprivation of opportunity."

Douglas G. Glasgow, vice president of the National Urban League, urged the government to adopt an "employment and incomes policy for black families," with emphasis on moving young parents into the job market.

East German Official Visits Bonn

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The president of communist East Germany's parliament, the highest-ranking official of his country ever to visit West Germany, arrived today in Bonn.

Horst Sindermann, 70, is the guest of the opposition Social Democratic Party because the coalition government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl could not agree to extend an invitation to him.

Sindermann smiled broadly as he got off the East German Interflug jetliner, and said he was seeking better relations between East Germany and West Germany.

Hans-Jochen Vogel, the Social Democrats' leader in the West German parliament, led the greeting party.

The trip comes amid continuing uncertainty over whether Erich Honecker, East Germany's aging leader, will visit West Germany and his childhood home in Saarland. Honecker had planned to visit West Germany in September 1984, but canceled at the last minute under Soviet pressure.

Both countries publicly have been making an effort to improve relations, a process in which official visits over the border play a big role.

Right-wingers in Kohl's Christian Democratic party long have opposed the establishment of contacts between the East and West German parliaments, arguing that the East German Volkskammer is not democratically elected.

On his arrival at Bonn-Cologne airport, Sindermann was asked if he was surprised that the West German government had not invited him. "The DDR (East Germany) is a sovereign state. It is received in all countries of the world. Why not in Bonn?" he said.

Sindermann has requested, and was granted, meetings with Kohl and Philipp Jenninger, president of the West German parliament.

Because of pressure from some fellow Christian Democrats, Jenninger will receive Sindermann in his villa on the Rhine River instead of in his parliamentary office.

Although the West German government did not invite Sindermann, it has plenty to discuss with him. At the top of Bonn's list is human rights, especially a desire for more travel between the two German states, officials said this week.

One of the last "old guard" Communists who was jailed by the Nazis and who helped found East Germany after World War II, Sindermann has long been known as a hard-liner on human rights.

The Frankfurt-based International Society for Human Rights announced Tuesday that it planned a six-hour demonstration today in front of East Germany's mission in Bonn.

Participants will be members of divided families whose relatives have not been allowed to leave East Germany, the society said in a statement.

PROPOSED CHANGE IN THE METHOD OF ELECTION FOR THE GREENVILLE CITY COUNCIL

State law allows cities to change the way members of the City Council are elected. The City of Greenville is considering changing the present method of election in an effort to ensure that the City Council is representative of all citizens.

DISTRICT REPRESENTATION

Under the present system of election the six members of the City Council are all elected at-large. The proposed change is to divide the city into four single-member districts and elect one council member from each of these four districts. The voters of each district would elect one council member who must reside in the district. All of the qualified voters of the city would elect two at-large council members.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

The City Council wants to hear your opinion on the proposed change. There will be a series of public presentations at locations in each of the proposed districts and one public presentation in the City Council Chambers to explain the proposal and answer questions.

The first presentation will be conducted by Mr. Bobby Bowers, an election study consultant assisting the City with the proposed change. This presentation is scheduled for Wednesday, February 19, 1986, at 7:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers located on the third floor of the Municipal Building at 201 W. 5th Street.

The dates and locations for subsequent meetings to be held in each of the proposed districts are:

- Holy Trinity Church, corner of Skinner and Spruce Streets
Monday, March 3, 1986, 7:30 p.m.
- Wahl-Coates Elementary School, East 5th Street
Tuesday, March 4, 1986, at 7:30 p.m.
- Mt. Calvary Free Will Baptist Church, corner of Hudson and Ward Streets
Wednesday, March 5, 1986, 7:30 p.m.
- E.B. Aycock Jr. High School Gymnasium, 1325 Red Banks Road
Thursday, March 6, 1986, 7:30 p.m.

CONSIDERATION BY THE CITY COUNCIL. After these public hearings, the City Council will hold a public hearing. At this public hearing interested citizens will be given an opportunity to express their opinion on the proposed change. No official action may be taken until after an official and advertised public hearing.

FURTHER INFORMATION. If you need further information, or have questions, contact City Attorney Mac McCarley at 752-4137.

France Sends Troops

PARIS (AP) — France is sending a "dissuasion force" of 500 soldiers and 12 jetfighters to Chad to help the government counter an offensive by Libyan-backed rebels who control the northern part of the country.

A rebel spokesman in Paris, Abderrahman Moussa, claimed Tuesday that guerrillas were holding several former government towns along a 400-mile front from Ziguely to Oum Chalouba, and that two government garrisons had defected.

However, Western correspondents visited Oum Chalouba on Tuesday, and said that it remained firmly in government control despite heavy damage. The government of President Hissene Habre's government said in a communique Tuesday that the rebels were fleeing in disorder.

France said it was sending in the "dissuasion force" after a Soviet-built Tupelev jet dropped a single 4,400-pound bomb on the airport at N'Djamena, the capital, on Monday.

France says Libya has Tupelev jets and blamed Col. Moammar Khadafi's government for the attack, but Libya said the rebels have their own planes and carried out the attack. The bombing came a day after French planes bombed an airstrip in the rebel-held north.

French soldiers were being sent to Chad to operate and maintain 12 Jaguar and Mirage F-1 jets, French sources in N'Djamena said Tuesday.

Over the weekend, French Defense Ministry sources said 200 commandos were being sent to protect French aircraft bringing military supplies to the Habre government.

The sources did not say whether those 200 commandos were among the 500 soldiers France was providing.

The French sources said a 1,500-member French force of infantry and paratroopers is stationed in the neighboring Central African Republic and can be flown to Chad swiftly if needed.

Terrorists Prompt U.S. To Turn Embassies Into Armed Fortresses

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — At one time, practically anyone could walk in off the street unchecked to visit most of the U.S. embassies or consulates abroad. Today, in the age of terrorism, they are becoming fortresses.

Lost behind barriers, checkpoints, guards and electronic devices is the original idea of having the high visibility and easy access of U.S. missions portray an open American society.

But Tuesday's terrorist car-bomb explosion inside the U.S. Embassy compound in Lisbon, Portugal, underlined a continued vulnerability.

Officials said the bomb had been placed in the trunk of an embassy employee's car while it was outside the compound.

Here in Rome, a graceful but sturdy 9-foot fence has been erected around the 19th-century villa that is the U.S. Embassy. At the push of a button, barriers rise up to stop suicide car bombers. Other equipment and procedures also have been improved as part of a $3-million security program.

The "hardening" of the embassy in Rome is just one small part of a monumental U.S. State Department plan to replace or renovate U.S. diplomatic missions worldwide, to guard against terrorist and other threats by turning these American outposts into mini-bastions.

If approved by the U.S. Congress, a proposed five-year reconstruction program will cost more than $3 billion. It calls for major projects at 126 of the 262 U.S. diplomatic missions, 62 of them to be new buildings. An additional $1 billion will be spent on armored vehicles, expanded guard forces and other security needs.

"We've got a lot of vulnerability in our buildings, and that's the urgency of the security construction program," Robert E. Lamb, director of the State Department's new Office for Diplomatic Security, said in a Washington interview.

The rethinking on diplomatic security was first spurred by the 1979 seizure of the U.S. Embassy and the taking of American hostages in Iran. But it assumed near-emergency status after the deadly car-bombings of U.S. Embassy buildings in Beirut and Kuwait in 1983-84.

Around the world, U.S. embassies are taking on a new look, an Associated Press survey indicates.

Perimeter walls have been made stronger and higher. Bulletproof glass has been installed in many windows. Ambassadors are shuttled around town in new armored cars. And flowers are blooming everywhere — huge concrete barriers, disguised as tub planters, have been placed in the path of any would-be suicide car-bombers.

The toughest measures have been taken in some of the hottest spots.

In El Salvador, where the U.S. Embassy plays a key role in the Salvadoran government's war against leftist guerrillas, the entire building has been wrapped in sheets of fencing designed to shield the windows from a direct rocket hit.

In the Philippines, scene of frequent anti-American demonstrations, the Manila embassy has become almost as heavily guarded as Ferdinand E. Marcos's presidential palace. A new inner fence has been built on the embassy grounds, and scores of shield-bearing officers block the gates whenever rumors spread of an impending protest.

At the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait, a tough, three-stage security gantlet has been laid down, typical of many American diplomatic compounds these days.

At the single street entrance to the walled grounds, a visitor must show identification to a Kuwaiti guard. Inside the compound, the visitor then undergoes a metal-detector check at an inner fence. Reaching the embassy building, he is buzzed through an electronically locked door by a U.S. Marine guard.

Naturally, some of the precautions are not openly discussed.

Said Arthur Berger, U.S. Embassy spokesman in Tel Aviv, Israel, "We have instituted a number of security measures, some of which are visible and others which aren't."

Kuwait and Israel lie in a region exploding with Arab and Iranian anti-Americanism. But even in quieter corners of the world, embassies are on guard.

In sleepy Asuncion, Paraguay, for example, embassy visitors carrying pocket knives must leave them at the street entrance. In relatively unthreatening Tokyo, Marines will soon take over guard duty at the front gate of the 10-story, glass-walled embassy, which has been the most accessible in Asia.

But the Middle East has gotten immediate priority in the State Department security program.

An emergency 1985 appropriation finances construction of 11 new embassies and consulates, mostly in Middle Eastern countries, such as Jordan, Oman, North Yemen and Bahrain.

The U.S. National Academy of Sciences, meanwhile, has drawn up recommendations for a prototype embassy designed with security upmost in mind. For one thing, it will mean fewer windows, less glass in the 62 buildings to be constructed under the proposed five-year program.

Greenville was named in honor of General Nathaniel Greene, hero of the Battle of Guilford Courthouse.

Army Recruiters Fall Short

CHALLENGER — Retired Army sergeant Melvin C. McIntire, left, heads to federal court in Raleigh Tuesday for a hearing on his suit against the government over the POW-MIA issue in Southeast Asia. AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the nation's military services has failed to meet its quarterly recruiting goal for the first time in almost five years, but top officials are dismissing the shortfall as insignificant.

The failure by the Army to reach its objective for the three months ending Dec. 31 was disclosed Tuesday in the latest Pentagon "Military Manpower Strength Assessment."

The report said the Army missed its goal by 600 people, enlisting 31,900 men and women, or 98 percent of its goal of 32,500.

Although the shortfall was a small one, it was the first to materialize for any service since the third quarter of fiscal 1981. The Army also missed its recruiting goal that quarter by 2 percentage points.

The shortfall thus ends a series of "100 percent" reports that began in 1981, when Congress agreed with President Reagan that military pay had fallen too far behind civilian wages.

Under the Reagan military buildup, military personnel received a 14.3 percent pay raise in fiscal 1982, followed by 4 percent increases in fiscal 1983, 1984 and 1985 and a 3 percent boost this year.

Since 1981, one or another of the services has occasionally slipped in meeting a goal for specific classes of individuals; for example, goals for men or women or individuals with previous military experience. But the overall numerical goal had always been met.

Because of the Army shortfall, the Defense Department as a whole missed its overall quarterly goal by 1 percent, the new report shows. Instead of signing up 77,400 men and women for the four services, the Pentagon signed up 76,900, the summary states.

Lt. Col. John Cullen, a spokesman for the Army Recruiting Command at Fort Sheridan, Ill., said the quarterly report had not prompted any alarm because the Army was well on its way toward meeting its annual goal of 135,000.

Cullen said Army recruiters appeared assured of meeting the annual objective thanks to delayed entry sign-ups. Under that program, a recruit can postpone his actual entry into the military to assure a place in a particular training school.

Cullen said the Army believes it will sign up enough delayed-entry recruits by May to assure the annual goal is met.

Lt. Gen. Edgar A. Chavarrie, the deputy assistant secretary for military manpower and personnel policy, agreed the quarterly dip was "not enough to unduly alarm anyone here."

"We don't believe this is really enough to establish any trend," Chavarrie added.

Both men also said nine of every 10 recruits have a high school diploma and that re-enlistment rates remain stable.

"The department considers this an excellent performance in view of the increasingly difficult recruiting environment," the Pentagon added in a prepared statement.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger earlier this month requested another 4 percent pay raise for active-duty personnel, saying the wage boost was needed because "our recruiters will face greater challenges in fiscal 1986 from sustained economic recovery and a further decline in the military-age youth population."

According to the latest report, the Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force continued to match or surpass their goals during the three-month period.

The Navy signed up 21,400 men and women compared to a goal of 21,300, while the Marine Corps matched its goal of 7,900 and the Air Force hit its target of 15,700.

Lawyers Debate Challenge To U.S. Handling Of MIAs

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A change in the U.S. government's position on the issue of whether Americans are still being held in Southeast Asia suggests "there's a fox in the chicken coop," a Fayetteville attorney says.

"There appears to be an admission, finally and at last, that we do have Americans in captivity," said Mark Waple, who represents a highly decorated ex-Army major, a retired Special Forces sergeant and the relatives of four U.S. servicemen, one of whom is listed as a POW by the U.S. government. The families of the three other servicemen are contesting the identification of remains returned as those of their relatives.

In pretrial hearings Tuesday on a class-action lawsuit filed in Fayetteville last September, Waple and lawyers for the government disagreed on whether the Reagan administration or the courts should determine if POWs remain in Southeast Asia.

"To date we have no proof of POWs in Southeast Asia, but we are not prepared to dismiss that possibility," said U.S. Attorney Samuel Currin, who argued that the lawsuit should be dismissed because it is a foreign-policy issue rather than a judicial matter.

Filed by two former Green Berets, the lawsuit contends that American servicemen are being held prisoner in Southeast Asia and seeks to force the U.S. government to do anything short of war to bring them home.

"The important question here is how best can the U.S. resolve the POW issue — how we want to determine if there are POWs in Southeast Asia," Currin told U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle. "That has to be decided by the administration and its diplomatic channels. It's certainly not the question this court can decide."

Boyle was expected to rule in the coming weeks.

Waple said U.S. government officials have been trying since 1973 to "discredit and disprove ... good intelligence information which would lead to the conclusion that hostages are being held" in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.

"That contention is not a political issue. That is an issue of fact," Waple said.

Currin said the Reagan administration was pursuing the POW issue as one of its "highest priorities" and that the government's efforts could be "seriously undermined by any kind of judicial intervention."

Last week, Vietnamese officials told visiting congressmen that missing Americans might still be living inside Vietnam, in remote areas not under full government control.

New Storm Pounds Western States As Thousands Flee Homes To Safety

By MARTIN STEINBERG
Associated Press Writer

The fifth powerful Pacific storm in an eight-day barrage that has left at least 10 people dead pounded the West today as more than 10,000 people remained out of homes invaded by floodwaters, landslides and avalanches.

People in western Nevada along the Truckee and Carson rivers and across much of northern and central California, where sporadic looting was reported Tuesday, were told to brace for possible flash floods today. Up to a foot of new snow was expected by this afternoon in the Sierra Nevadas and in Idaho, Montana and Wyoming.

States of emergency have been declared in three California counties, four in Nevada and one in Utah. The National Guard was mobilized in Nevada and California to help in evacuations and sandbagging, and the Navy assisted in the rescue of evacuees stranded in a Guerneville, Calif., church.

At least 10 people were killed and four missing since the waves of Pacific storms began pummeling the region Feb. 11.

After a brief respite, the latest storm struck Tuesday night and northern California again was hit hardest.

"We're getting some pretty good downpours out of it, (but) it doesn't compare with Friday's, which was the worst of the bunch," said Bob Diaz of the National Weather Service in Redwood City, Calif.

The break earlier Tuesday enabled rivers that had reached their highest levels in 31 years to recede slightly, but forecasters said showers were likely with locally heavy downpours into the weekend.

"Thursday, we'll have a pretty good lull from what we've had in the past week, but Friday we'll get more. It could very well end Sunday," Diaz said.

By Tuesday night, the storms had poured nearly 22 inches of rain on Kentfield, 40 miles north of San Francisco, and the Heavenly Valley ski resort reported 9 feet of snow. In Utah, Wellsville had 10.56 inches of rain in five days and Bald Mountain, Idaho, got nearly 50 inches of snow.

The Napa River receded Tuesday night to 24.9 feet, just below its 25-foot flood level, after reaching 30 feet Monday, breaking a 31-year-old record. The Russian River hit 46.9 feet in Guerneville, almost 15 feet above flood stage.

Mudslides and avalanches unleashed by the storms closed major highways, damaged and destroyed hundreds of homes and threatened hundreds of others.

More than 9,000 northern California residents were in evacuation centers or with friends or relatives today because their homes were flooded or threatened by landslides. About 500 people were forced from homes in northwestern Nevada, most in the Dayton area southeast of Reno. Floods damaged or destroyed nearly 300 homes in northern Utah.

More than 20,000 people were without electricity Tuesday in northern California, Pacific Gas & Electric and Sierra Pacific Power reported.

California Gov. George Deukmejian declared emergencies Tuesday in Napa, Sonoma and Humboldt counties.

Near Marysville, Calif., looters broke into two of 15 houses that were evacuated, said Sgt. Ron McCarty of the Yuba County sheriff's office.

In Napa County, California's main wine-growing region, flooding forced 4,200 people to flee their homes, and damaged 4,000 homes and up to 100 businesses, said Mike Vagnerini of the sheriff's department.

"We have evacuated everybody, so far, that needs to be evacuated," Napa County Red Cross disaster chairwoman Doris Zylinski said Tuesday. "Napa's really isolated. We have slides or torrents on all highways, in and out. I don't think anybody can get into Napa right now."

The 1,350 residents of Hamilton City in Tehama County, Calif., fled as the Sacramento River rose to within a foot of the top of eroding levees.

"The problem is right now we're on a teetering edge," Tehama County Sheriff's Sgt. Jeff Ogden said today. "Any increased release from the reservoirs above us or any additional rainfall will have an immediate effect on us. It's just a hurry-up-and-wait point right now, and see what mother nature's going to do to us." About 1,500 left Thornton because of a possible levee failure, and more than 1,500 others fled homes in other communities.

The National Guard, assisted by sheriffs' deputies and the Navy, rescued 597 evacuees stranded in a Guerneville church and 280 others because of flooding, said John McCamman, a spokesman for the city.

The Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter opened on July 1 and is located one mile south of Rells Fork of the County Home Road.

Farm Credit System Posts $2.69 Billion Loss In 1985

By BILL MENEZES
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Farm Credit System's 1985 loss of $2.69 billion, its first annual deficit since the Depression, reflects the continuing slump in a farm economy battered by low commodity and land prices and foreign competition, officials say.

The $70 billion Farm Credit System, a cooperative banking system which provides most of the nation's agricultural loans, on Tuesday reported the loss came primarily during the last three months of 1985, when the 37 regional banks reserved additional hundreds of millions of dollars to cover burgeoning losses from loans to strapped farmers.

Analysts said the massive net loss had been expected, although its magnitude highlighted the system's troubles and the poor state of the U.S.

farm economy. The system posted a $373 million profit in 1984.

Mounting losses within the system had prompted Congress to approve bailout legislation authorizing the Treasury to provide a line of credit if needed. The measure, signed by President Reagan in December, also restructured the Farm Credit Administration into an "arms-length" regulator of the credit system.

"At this point in time, given the continued downward spiral in agricultural commodity prices and agricultural land values, it looks as though their capital position will continue to be under pressure for a while," said Tony Smith, financial analyst for L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin in New York.

James Roll, senior vice president of the Federal Farm Banks Credit Funding Corp., the system's security-selling unit, said the report released Tuesday did not state a separate fourth-quarter loss for the system because for the first time the report included not only its 37 banks but also Production Credit Associations and other service units.

Farm Credit in September reported a nine-month loss of $426.3 million.

The quarterly loss topped the $1.16 billion loss posted by Continental Illinois Corp. in the second quarter of 1984 as the largest in U.S. banking history.

Among private industry, it would be second only to the $4.87 billion loss reported by American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in the fourth quarter of 1983, which stemmed from a $5.5 billion charge for accounting changes and devaluation of assets in the splitup of the Bell System.

A news release by Farm Credit said continuing declines in farmland values and low commodity prices in 1985 had hampered farmers' ability to raise enough money to pay their debts.

"Numerous factors, including changing government agricultural policies, reduced agricultural exports resulting from a strong dollar and expanded foreign agricultural capacity, high real interest rates, abnormal weather patterns and low commodity prices have led to a near record number of farm and ranch insolvencies," the release stated.

The Farm Credit System is cooperatively owned by its farm borrowers and is made up of 37 regional banks that issue operating and mortgage loans through local land bank associations and production credit associations, and also make loans to farm cooperatives.

The system's allowance for loan losses stood at $3.19 billion on Dec. 31, compared with $1.326 billion on the same day a year earlier.

Non-accruing loans, generally those that have been delinquent 90 days or more, soared to $5.323 billion by Dec. 31 from $1.838 billion a year earlier.

Other high risk loans on which "a higher than normal degree of loan servicing is required" totaled $4 billion at year end.

Net outstanding loans dropped to $66.6 billion at year end, from $78.5 billion a year earlier, while total capital plunged to $8.4 billion by Dec. 31, from $11.8 billion a year earlier.

Total assets were $79.83 billion at year end, down from $87.05 billion in 1984.

NASA Unaware Of Cold Rocket

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top NASA officials who gave the go-ahead to launch the ill-fated Challenger mission were never told of a low temperature reading of 7 to 9 degrees on the shuttle's right booster rocket prior to liftoff, according to the space agency.

Jesse Moore, head of the space shuttle program and the top-ranking official involved in the launch decision, told a Senate hearing Tuesday that if he had known of the reading "I would have asked more questions."

The temperature on the morning of the Jan. 28 launch have been a focus of a presidential commission's investigation into the shuttle accident because of concern that the cold might have affected the performance of critical O-ring seals between segments of the shuttle's two rocket boosters.

At the time of the launch the air temperature had risen to 38 degrees, but a dramatically lower temperature on the surface of the booster might have been an indication that super-cold liquid hydrogen was leaking from the huge external fuel tank, investigators say.

Richard Feynman, a physicist on the presidential commission, said he does not believe the low temperature readings were caused by a cold hydrogen leak. In Wednesday's editions of the Washington Post, he said the readings could have been a result of breezes blowing past the cold external fuel tank onto the booster rocket.

Moore told the space subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee that the reading was recorded on a hand-held infrared scanner used by workers examining the shuttle for ice contamination on the morning of the launch. No word of the low temperature reading was ever relayed to officials charged with deciding whether to go ahead with the launch, he said.

"Would that have caused you to have a material concern?" asked Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich.

"I believe I would have asked some more questions about what the reading indicated," Moore responded.

But Moore cautioned several times that the instruments making the low temperature readings are difficult to operate and he said the likelihood of error could be "quite substantial."

Nevertheless, several senators indicated concern about the breakdown in communications and asked William Rogers, chairman of the presidential commission investigating the accident, whether such breakdowns had led him to conclude that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's launch decision-making process was "flawed."

Rogers, however, would say only that the commission intends to elaborate on the "flawed" remark — which was made last week — at a future public meeting.

Even so, several senators suggested enough questions had been raised to cast a cloud over NASA's reputation for safety and efficiency.

"At this juncture it seems to have been an avoidable accident, rather than an unavoidable one," said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., citing the low temperature reading and the space agency's long concern about the problems with the O-ring seals, declared, "Something has gone wrong as far as NASA quality assurance."

While Rogers insisted that "it would be a mistake" to concentrate on any one possible cause, he said the right-side solid-booster rocket "appears to be the area where the trouble started."

The booster has been the focus of attention since photographs revealed a plume of fire appearing to shoot from the rocket seconds before the shuttle exploded 73 seconds after liftoff, killing the spacecraft's crew of seven.

Other photographs have shown puffs of black smoke emerging from near a seam on the rocket less than a second after liftoff. Both were in roughly the same area as the low-temperature reading four hours before the launch.

The affect of the cold on the rubber sealing rings also was the subject of lengthy disagreement between NASA and the booster's manufacturer, Morton Thiokol, the night before the launch, agency officials acknowledged.

But William Graham, acting NASA administrator, said Morton Thiokol eventually agreed that the launch should go ahead. Pressed by senators to elaborate on the disagreement, Graham declined. He said it would be best for the presidential commission to discuss the matter.

The NASA officials, meanwhile, reiterated that there were no procedures that would have allowed the Challenger crew to separate the orbiter during the first two minutes of flight and escape.

"The program placed its emphasis on the reliability of the solid rocket boosters themselves," Moore told the subcommittee.

Fireball Explodes

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — A fireball as bright as the moon streaked across the nighttime sky and exploded above southwestern British Columbia and northern Washington state, an astronomer here said.

The Washington State Patrol office in the Bellingham-Everett area received a few telephone calls from people who believed they had seen a UFO after the fireball appeared around 9 p.m. Tuesday, said Dean Munday, a patrol spokesman.

"We looked up toward the Big Dipper and we saw this brilliant magnesium-blue flare-like object streak out of the southeast sky, out of the constellation of Leo, the lion, and pass directly underneath the bowl of the Big Dipper," said astronomer David Dodge of the Southam Observatory.

"As it did, it blew up before our eyes, leaving behind a short-duration red train of light, and there were all kinds of sparkles coming off it, too. It was really, really brilliant."

Dodge said an exploding fireball occurs when a sizable rock smashes into the atmosphere and the friction creates intense heat and light. Known technically as a bolide, an exploding fireball is brighter and more active than a meteor.

But William Graham, acting NASA administrator, said Morton Thiokol eventually agreed that the launch should go ahead. Pressed by senators to elaborate on the disagreement, Graham declined. He said it would be best for the presidential commission to discuss the matter.

The NASA officials, meanwhile, reiterated that there were no procedures that would have allowed the Challenger crew to separate the orbiter during the first two minutes of flight and escape.

"The program placed its emphasis on the reliability of the solid rocket boosters themselves," Moore told the subcommittee.

By now, most people know about the tax advantages of an IRA.

But you may not know about the big difference it can make when you're making all your IRA deposits as early in the year as possible.

For example, if you deposit $2000 in an IRA in early January instead of waiting until you file your tax return the next year, and keep doing that for the next 20 years, you'll come out with over $10,000* more interest.

For all the details, come see us. The time to start is now. The place is right in your neighborhood.

*Assuming an interest rate of 9% compounded daily, the additional interest earned over 20 years on a $2000 IRA invested on January 1 each year compared to a $2000 IRA investment made just prior to filing your tax return a year later.

JAMES O. EASTLAND

Ex-Senator Eastland Dies At 81

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP) — Former Sen. James O. Eastland, who served as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee for a record 22 years, died today. He was 81.

The Mississippi Democrat died just after 4 a.m. at Greenwood-LeFlore County Hospital of "multiple medical problems complicated at the end by pneumonia," said hospital spokeswoman Liz Hare.

Eastland held a unique place in Mississippi political history after ruling as the state's top power broker for three decades and the nation's ranking senator under three presidents.

The cigar-smoking Eastland was known by his Senate colleagues as "The Chairman" during his 22 years as head of the influential judiciary committee.

To much of the country, he became a symbol of Southern resistance to desegregation in the 1960s because of his opposition to civil rights legislation, but his state reputation thrived on it.

At home, they called him "Big Jim" and he wielded a major influence, sometimes shaping the course of politics through frequent behind-the-scenes endorsement of gubernatorial candidates. Observers say he played key roles in the elections of Govs. Ross Barnett (1960-64), Paul Johnson Jr. (1964-68) and Bill Waller (1972-76).

Eastland retired in 1978 after 36 continuous years in the Senate and returned to his Doddsville home, where the family farms 5,800 acres of rich Delta farmland.

Many politicians paid homage for several more years, before the state finally accepted his retirement.

When asked last fall if he missed the political life, he responded, "Not a bit. Not a bit." And would he change anything? "I voted my convictions on everything."

Eastland was thrust unexpectedly into the Senate in 1941 when then-Gov. Paul Johnson Sr. appointed him to fill the unexpired term of the late Pat Harrison. He did not run for the balance of Harrison's term — "I wasn't known. I did not think I could be elected."

But he decided to enter the 1942 race for the next six-year term and won, staying in Washington to serve under eight presidents. He held the post of president pro tempore of the Senate under the last three — Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter.

Eastland had no criticism of any of the them: "I feel that all of them have been doing a good job." He also said he never aspired to the office they held.

"I never aspired to the governor's office either," he added. "It is a political graveyard. For everyone you make happy, you make a whole lot unhappy."

A lifelong Democrat, Eastland was sympathetic to Nixon after the Republican president authorized $750 million in aid following devastating Hurricane Camille in 1969. When Nixon asked him for help in the 1972 election, he said, "I said ... you don't need any help, but you can get it. They turned the state over to me."

Official Wants Busing Ended In Some Schools

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Justice Department's civil rights division is encouraging school systems that have met the terms of court-ordered desegregation plans to attempt to end cross-town busing.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds said Tuesday that as a result of many court-ordered busing plans, white residents have fled to the suburbs. He said white flight "sort of goes hand in glove with the cross-town busing formula" in most larger school districts and "many" of the smaller ones.

"There is a general recognition among all groups that the cross-town busing plan ... has worked less than perfectly," said Reynolds. "There are a host of pressure points" among both minorities and whites "to take this yoke off and move to something that will begin to treat ... what are some real serious woes within the public education system."

The Justice Department is involved in 120 court-ordered school desegregation cases in which the systems subsequently have been found by courts to be unitary, or free of the remnants of racial segregation, Reynolds said. The courts have not yet dismissed the 120 cases.

At a press briefing, Reynolds said the department is involved in another 30 to 50 school busing cases in which the courts declared the systems to be free of racial segregation and dismissed the cases. He was uncertain how many of the 30 to 50 subsequently have modified their desegregation plans.

His comments follow a Feb. 6 federal appeals court ruling involving the Norfolk, Va., school system.

In that ruling, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a school board plan that would end the busing of elementary school children for integration, while continuing it for older students. The recent school board plan was designed to stem the movement of white residents out of the city.

"You have around the country now in virtually all school desegregation cases all parties resisting the notion that we go to a cross-town busing plan," Reynolds told reporters. He said that "my sense is that Norfolk will simply add some more force to that existing momentum."

Marcos Warns He Will Prevent Civil Disturbances

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos said today he plans to use his powers "to the limit" to prevent disturbances in a civil disobedience campaign his opponents called in an effort to force him from office.

A statement from the presidential palace said Marcos issued the warning at a caucus of the ruling New Society Movement, which started late Tuesday and ended early today.

Marcos said he has "certain powers to dismantle the machineries of civil disobedience" and that "I will exercise to the limit the provisions of the law and the constitution to prevent turmoil."

The statement did not specify, however, what powers Marcos was referring to. He said repeatedly during the campaign for the Feb. 7 presidential election he had adequate powers to deal with any emergency, and would proclaim martial law again only if there was heavy street fighting in large cities between the government and communist guerrillas.

Marcos, who the official Philippine

News Agency said was "apprehensive" about the planned civil disobedience, called the caucus as people began heeding a call by Corazon Aquino to boycott companies controlled by Marcos' relatives and associates to protest his proclamation as the election winner.

Mrs. Aquino accuses Marcos of rigging the polls and robbing her of the presidency in an election that has been widely criticized here and abroad as fraudulent.

In addition to the boycott, Mrs. Aquino has called for a general strike and a school boycott on the first working day after Marcos' scheduled inauguration on Feb. 25.

Speaking at a rally by 20,000 cheering supporters in Angeles City, 50 miles north of Manila, Mrs. Aquino said today the protest she and vice presidential running mate Salvador Laurel are leading "is not just for today or for this week. Let us not stop until we have brought Marcos down."

She addressed Marcos directly, saying, "This is the message that I would like to be sent to Marcos and his puppets: Do not threaten Cory Aquino. She is not alone. I know that many of my countrymen will come to my help if Marcos and his puppets have evil designs against me."

Mrs. Aquino also renewed a call on foreign countries not to recognize Marcos' government, adding in Tagalog that she was going to meet Thursday with the ambassadors of Japan and some European countries.

"I will ask them, 'Are we friends or are we not friends? Don't you believe it was Cory Aquino and Doy Laurel whom people voted?'" she said.

Mrs. Aquino said she told Philip Habib, President Reagan's special envoy, that if he came to tell her to cooperate with Marcos, he needn't have come.

Habib was holding a fourth day of meetings today. The U.S. Embassy spokesman, Allan Croghan, said he could not give any details of Habib's schedule except that he was meeting with a "broad range of people in government, business and church in his task of making an assessment for the president."

Croghan said Habib likely would be in Manila through the weekend. He said there had been no decision on U.S. government official attendance at Marcos' inauguration.

Meanwhile, employees of the Philippines' biggest bus company, Pantranco, went on strike today. A union official said the strike was to press wage demands, and was not politically motivated.

The underground National Democratic Front, in a statement received by The Associated Press, said the 20-member U.S. observer team sent to observe the election was "a dud."

The group, which includes the Communist Party, called for "open and clandestine, armed and non-armed" struggle against Marcos' government.

There has been no evidence of increased rebel activity since the election.

Foreign exchange dealers reported the Philippine peso held today at 22.04 to the U.S. dollar following its fall from 19.98 on Tuesday, its biggest single-day drop in years. It has fallen about 15 percent in value since the election after holding at about the same level through the campaign.

The government says value of the peso is determined by trading among international banks in Manila, but economists say it is closely controlled ed by the Central Bank.

In the first signs of an economic boycott called by Mrs. Aquino, the stock price of San Miguel Corp., the country's largest manufacturer, slid, and several banks reported unusual withdrawals.

Senate Faces Vote On Cutting Off Aid Package To Philippines

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress reacted to reports of fraud in the re-election of Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos by proposing to label the elections unfair and by considering a halt all U.S. aid to the key Pacific ally.

A proposal introduced Tuesday and sponsored chiefly by Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., says the Feb. 7 elections "were marked by such widespread fraud that they cannot be considered a fair reflection of the will of the people of the Philippines."

The Senate was scheduled to debate and vote today on the non-binding resolution, which notes that "America's interests are best served in the Philippines by a government which has a popular mandate."

It also noted that the balloting "was plagued by widespread fraud on all levels."

But the final draft was not as critical of the election as an earlier version, which flatly declared the election was fraudulent. That version was drafted chiefly by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

The final draft was revised chiefly at Dole's request, according to legislative sources speaking on condition they not be named.

Earlier in the day, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., introduced a bill calling for an immediate halt to U.S. aid, which he estimated at $250 million in the current fiscal year.

The actions came as Congress returned from a recess that began shortly before the Feb. 7 Philippine balloting.

The Marcos-controlled National Assembly declared him a winner last weekend over opponent Corazon Aquino, but Mrs. Aquino and her supporters say she won and that her victory was stolen by Marcos.

Democrats and Republicans both criticized the balloting and said the United States should consider halting aid.

President Reagan sent veteran envoy Philip Habib to the Philippines to talk to all the parties concerned, and the White House said Tuesday it would not act until Habib returns.

"We're waiting for Ambassador Habib to report back to the president on what he has been able to find out about the election and about the attitude of the two principals as to the future," White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said.

Earlier Tuesday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said it was too early to halt aid.

At the White House, Speakes said, "We think that a number of qualified members of Congress discussing the cutting off of aid, the removal of military bases, are very premature."

The Philippines is a key U.S. ally in the Pacific and is the site of the two largest American military bases outside the United States.

Sasser said American aid should be halted as a way to "withdraw U.S. taxpayer support for the corrupt, authoritarian regime."

He said "a ballpark figure" is that his proposal would halt $150 million to $180 million because the rest of the estimated $250 million in U.S. aid has already been obligated.

Sasser's bill affects military and economic aid, along with construction planned at the U.S. bases, Clark Air Base and Subic Bay naval station.

The City has revised its noise control laws. For details on noise regulations and permits, call the Police Department at 752-3342.

Drugs May Be At Safest Level

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug companies, facing new scrutiny after the latest Tylenol-capsule poisoning, have reached the limits of current technology in making over-the-counter drugs tamper resistant, says an industry spokesman.

Although technicians are struggling with the problem, "there very well may be nothing further that we can recommend to improve" current protections, said John T. Walden, senior vice president of the Proprietary Association, which represents non-prescription drug makers.

In general, he said Tuesday, companies plan to stick with what they consider effective tamper-resistant measures, keep looking for improvements and keep selling drugs in capsules despite bad publicity.

Johnson & Johnson, parent company of McNeil Consumer Products Co., which makes Tylenol, said Monday that production of the drug in capsules was being stopped after cyanide-laden Tylenol capsules were linked to the death of a New York woman — and also were found in another bottle in the same community where hers were bought.

However, Walden said, "The rest of the industry has no plans at this time to walk away from capsules."

Eliminating capsules wouldn't stop someone intent on deadly tampering but would only deprive people who find capsules easier to swallow than tablets or want or need them for other reasons, he said.

"I find no new breakthroughs" in making packages more tamper-resistant, Walden told reporters after leaving a meeting of packaging and quality-control experts who discussed the subject.

"We're discussing all technologies," he said, including a relatively new system of sealing capsules by sound waves — leaving them in one piece rather than two to make tampering more noticeable.

But in the end, he said, "all commodities are vulnerable to the dedicated tamperer."

Federal Food and Drug Administration officials, besides technical experts from more than two-dozen private companies, attended the closed-door meeting, which took place at a downtown hotel.

When asked about the possibility of federal action to restrict or ban capsules, Walden said, "I hope and I expect the federal government does not see this as anything but an overreactive and unhelpful solution."

Federal officials at the meeting declined to meet with reporters.

Walden said he didn't know when, or if, there would be another meeting of the group — known as the Expert Technical Committee — which he said "was instrumental in 1982 in helping the industry and the FDA in coming up with the present tamper-resistant packaging."

He acknowledged that the poisoning in Bronxville, N.Y., coming 3½ years after seven people in Illinois were killed by cyanide-tainted Tylenol capsules, had created a "very large" public relations problem.

However, he defended the drug industry's safety record, saying it should be noted that the uproar was over "two capsules of one version of one company's medication found in one neighborhood of one community."

Legislators Approve Insurance Package

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — While Insurance Commissioner Jim Long praised the General Assembly's approval of legislation to ease an insurance "crisis" in the state, one industry spokesman predicted it will bring higher premiums and could force small firms out of business.

"I am delighted," Long said after the overwhelming approval during a special legislative session Tuesday. "I hope this will convince the industry to work with us ... so that the triggering mechanism (making coverage mandatory) will not take effect."

But Benjamin Seagle, a lobbyist for Aetna Life & Casualty Co., issued a warning.

"This is not the answer," he said. "Somebody's going to have to pay for this."

Designed to prod the insurance industry into providing types of coverage that have become scarce in North Carolina, the emergency legislation empowers Long to establish risk-sharing pools if the industry fails to end the shortages.

All companies licensed to write the liability, property and casualty, fire and homeowners insurance in North Carolina would be required to participate in the pools, which would be formed to make the insurance available to all customers able to pay for it.

The special session resulted from a public outcry over growing scarcity of insurance coverage. A wide range of professions and businesses have had trouble finding companies to insure them.

Since September, insurance firms have dropped about 12,000 commercial North Carolina policies, mostly in what are considered high-risk groups such as doctors, transporters of migrant workers, child day-care centers, cities and towns, and hazardous waste handlers.

The insurance industry blames the problem on soaring numbers of lawsuits and damage awards. Others accuse the industry of manufacturing the shortage to fatten its profits.

Long asked Gov. Jim Martin on Feb. 5 to call a special session of the Legislature, which had not been scheduled to reconvene until June. At Long's urging, two bills were passed.

The first would:

- Authorize Long, if he determines after conducting hearings that enough of a certain type of insurance is not available, to form a risk-sharing pool.
- Extend throughout the state the "Fair Plan," which formerly guaranteed fire insurance, through pool arrangements, only in areas of 10,000 people or more. Additionally, Long could add homeowners insurance to the Fair Plan if that shortage persists.

Long said he would invoke the mandatory coverage provisions only as a last resort.

The Senate tentatively passed the bill 48-0, then gave it final approval on a unanimous voice vote. In the House, the tentative vote was 107-3 and the voice vote was unanimous. Voting against the measure were Reps. Ivan Mothershead, R-Mecklenburg; Walt Windley, R-Gaston; and David Noles, R-Lincoln.

The second bill, also passed easily, permits three legislative committees studying the insurance crisis to propose additional action in the June budget session instead of waiting until the 1987 long session, as originally ordered.

Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, chairman of the Senate Insurance Committee, said in a floor speech that people were "literally being put out of their homes" because they could not find insurance.

"It's a crisis," Johnson said. "I don't think anybody here denies that fact."

He said even Sen. Bob Shaw, R-Guilford, had found himself among the restaurant owners who had had their insurance canceled.

In the House, Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, protested that the mandatory coverage bill flew in the face of free enterprise and might be unconstitutional. "Let us hope that the courts will see that we were dealing in the utmost good faith," Miller said.

"I dislike having to mandate private enterprise assuming a burden of society," he said. "Nevertheless, that is the course we have chosen."

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, chairman of the House Insurance Committee, responded that the free market had had its chance to correct the "helter-skelter" situation.

"The problem has been their for a good while and it's not being solved," he said.

Other Insurance Issues Lie Ahead

RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislature's approval of bills that will force insurers to provide hard-to-get liability coverage left untouched the issue of the soaring cost of insurance.

"Today is the christening of what's going to be a long, long battle," said Alan Briggs, lobbyist for the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers, which is fighting proposals to make it harder for people to file liability suits.

In a special session Tuesday called by Gov. Jim Martin, the General Assembly authorized Insurance Commissioner Jim Long to order insurance companies to provide liability, property, casualty and homeowners policies through pool arrangements if the industry does not end a statewide shortage on its own.

Tuesday's session dealt only with availability, which Long called the most pressing of many insurance problems facing North Carolina and other states.

Long said the other major issue is the rising cost of insurance that's still available. That is among the topics being investigated by three legislative committees, which are authorized under a bill passed Tuesday to recommend action when the assembly meets again in June.

Rate increases have been particularly steep for medical malpractice insurance. One study committee is investigating just that matter.

It has inspired doctors, insurers and some legislators to call for "tort reform," or changes in the legal system to crack down on the numbers of negligence suits filed, the damages being awarded by juries and the money lawyers earn representing those who sue.

Another topic that may come up in June or next year is the Safe Driver Insurance Plan, under which rates increase when drivers are cited for violations. Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, says the system is in a "mess," with rates soaring even for people with long records of safe driving.

"That's something we'll definitely want to take a look at," Nesbitt said.

But some legislators said any attempt to push major reform through during the summer session could meet stiff resistance. "They're in for a battle royal if they try to bring up tort reform in June," said Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said some tort reforms could be looked at this year — such as limiting damages that can be assessed against local governments. "But I don't want to ... (get) into broad issues like limits on pain and suffering awards," he said. "Those topics need to be handled in a long session when we have the chance to really look at them carefully."

Even so, Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, predicted that the June session would be "the longest short session in history."

H & Block, Inc. opened their newest office in Greenville with a Ribbon Cutting Ceremony and Open House last Friday. Mayor Les Garner officiated the ceremonies and cut the ribbon to the new office located at West End Shopping Center (soon to become the Greenville Buyer's Market) on Memorial Drive.

Other guests included Mr. Jackie Moye, candidate for Sheriff; Mr. Julian (Buba) Rawl, owner of the center and Billy Whitehurst of Slade Construction, who completed the interior office.

Also present were Ann Kozak, District Manager for H & R Block, Inc.; Harriet Jarman, Paula Carmichael, Mrs. Faye Best, Mrs. Peg Davies, as well as other Block personnel.

Mrs. Kozak stated that the need for a third office was due to the continued growth of the firm. "In order to serve our clients with the finest service and a quality tax return, we felt a third office was needed. Our hours are Monday thru Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. and Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. We invite all Pitt County residents to stop by and see our new office."

Vote On Waste Site Approved

RALEIGH (AP) — As the Legislature scheduled a non-binding referendum on whether highly radioactive waste should be dumped in North Carolina, one lawmaker accused his colleagues of becoming interested only when the issue affected large cities.

"The federal government is now doing to us what we have already done to ourselves," said Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, who tried unsuccessfully last year to get support for a plan to block a low-level radioactive waste incinerator and a hazardous waste handling facility from his district.

"I made an impassioned plea last year," Locks said, "but I got a deaf ear from many legislators in our metropolitan areas. I said then that we may be first, but you will be worse. It has turned out to be prophetic."

The Legislature approved the referendum, which will be held during the May 6 primary, during a special session Tuesday.

Two North Carolina sites, one near Raleigh and the other near Asheville, are on the U.S. Department of Energy's list of 12 potential sites to host a disposal facility.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said he supported the referendum, but chided legislators for not showing enough similar concern over a PCB landfill in Warren County or a low-level radioactive waste incinerator in Bladen County.

"Where were you?" Mavretic asked. "This state ought to get ahead of low-level and high-level radioactive waste, but we haven't done it. Now it's in Wake's backyard and now it's in Buncombe's backyard."

CHURCH FRESCOES — Episcopalians in West Jefferson want to move three old churches to new locations, including two with wall frescoes such as this version of "The Last Supper." Some residents of West Jefferson are opposed to the move, saying it would destroy the frescoes. (AP Laserphoto)

Churches Planning To Move Frescoes

WEST JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — Moving a fresco is like amputating a leg — it should be done only in the event of an emergency, a New York art conservator says.

Constance S. Silver said if the frescoes on the walls of two Ashe County churches are moved, they could be irreparably damaged.

Members of the Episcopal Parish of the Holy Communion are considering moving St. Mary's Church in Beaver Creek, Holy Trinity Church in Glendale Springs and St. Matthew's Church in Todd to 157 acres in Fleetwood bought by the parish in December.

St. Mary's and Holy Trinity feature frescoes painted by North Carolina artist Ben Long.

Ms. Silver's visit Monday to Ashe County was sponsored by Friends To Preserve The Frescoes, The Ashe County Arts Council and The Ashe County Historical Society.

All three groups oppose the proposed move, which the parish said is necessary because the churches don't have enough room for visitors or parking. But Ms. Silver said that doesn't justify the risks of moving the frescoes.

"I think most practicing conservators would shy away from this project," she said. If the church found a conservator to oversee the project, she said, it would cost tens of thousands of dollars.

She said Long's fresco of "The Last Supper" in Holy Trinity, which was painted in 1980, is still too fresh to move well. The sand and lime in a fresco usually take 50 years to dry, she said. If the fresco isn't set it could crumble.

Mecklenburg To Study Proposal For Recycling County's Garbage

By TOM MINEHART
AP Business Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — There may be gold in them hills, but Joe DiBruno says there's money in your garbage.

DiBruno, president of Charlotte-based National Gas and Power Co., says his firm can recycle 80 percent of a city's garbage into salable products like fuel briquettes, aluminum, scrap iron, compost and eventually fuel alcohol and fuel gas.

The Mecklenburg County commissioners Monday gave the company the go-ahead for a 60-day feasibility study. They want to see if the firm can handle 400 tons of the 1,800 tons of garbage the county produces each day.

"Our goal in this project is to make it an independent operation," said DiBruno. "The facilities would fund themselves."

Mary McDaniel, chairman of the county's Waste Management Advisory Board, said officials in Charlotte and other areas running out of landfill space are encouraged by private enterprise taking the initiative in waste recycling.

"I think it's a great idea," she said. "But it remains to be seen what they'll come up with. ... I'm concerned about the markets for any of this (recycled material) ... It's one thing to collect all the paper and another thing to sell it."

DiBruno said a major product of the company, which operates a prototype plant in Richmond, Va., would be paper-based briquettes that burn with up to 85 percent of the energy of coal. These could be sold, as could the scrap metal and other products.

The second stage of the process, which so far is not in large-scale operation, turns the briquettes' cellulose into profitable ethyl alcohol. And DiBruno envisions a third stage that would take the by-products of this process and turn them into methane gas.

If the first-stage plant is built, the city or other garbage producer would pay the company a tipping fee of about $12 per ton to dump the garbage.

DiBruno estimates this would pay for the plant investment and that the plant could go on to make a profit of up to $15 per ton.

About 20 percent of the garbage the plant would take in could not be recycled, but DiBruno said it would be the inorganic brick and rubble that landfill operators consider "preferred fill." Ms. McDaniel said the firm, in turn, would pay the county a tipping fee to dump this in a landfill.

DiBruno is so optimistic that he is already thinking about finding a site for a $10 million first-stage plant in Charlotte that could handle up to 1,000 tons of waste a day.

"We hope that with the success of the first-stage plant, we'll be able to start several other first-stage systems in a 50-mile region," he said. These plants, each employing more than 30 workers, could feed into a regional ethyl alcohol plant, costing between $80 million and $100 million.

"If we go regional, we could be a major employer in the area," he said. "We'll go all over the state. We'll sit down with county governments wherever we're needed."

DiBruno said National Gas and Power Co., now grossing about $2 million a year with plants in Georgia, could become a $20 million company within a year as pending contracts are signed.

Each plant would be entirely enclosed and would emit no odors and few noises, he said. "It would be nothing more than a factory to neighbors — it's just that our natural resource is their waste."

Ms. McDaniel said that the county's goal is to be able to recycle 30 percent of its waste and convert another 40 percent to energy by 1995. Today, only about 1 percent is recycled through small donation centers.

Agencies Prepare For Budget Cuts

By The Associated Press

Visitors to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park might not find a campsite this April because park officials may delay summer camping area openings to meet their share of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget cuts.

And at the opposite end of North Carolina, Cape Hatteras National Seashore officials will delay by two weeks the posting of lifeguards at two of three beaches this summer. They say it will help them meet $150,000 in required budget cuts.

Those are just two examples of services that will be curtailed under the deficit-reduction law. Most federal agencies must trim their expenditures by $11.7 billion beginning March 1 for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

Legality Of Repairs Questioned

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Justice Department has asked the Department of Transportation to request an opinion on the legality of spending $1.5 million from the Highway Fund to renovate a railroad bridge in New Bern, officials say.

For some agencies, such as the Soil Conservation Service, Gramm-Rudman-Hollings will be felt deeply. For others, like the FBI, it will hardly make a dent.

The conservation service, which helps farmers and landowners prevent soil erosion, will lose 26 positions from its force of 291 in North Carolina.

"Hopefully, we can do it through attrition," said Coy Garrett, the agency's director in Raleigh.

The FBI is expected to do its share by postponing some purchases of new cars for its fleet, said Robert Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina.

The privately owned bridge crosses the Trent River. Its draw span is to be renovated at public expense to enable larger boats to get to and from a privately owned boat works.

Eugene A. Smith, a deputy attorney general, said he visited DOT Deputy Secretary Billy Rose Tuesday and suggested "that it would be well for them to ask for an opinion before they expended the funds."

DOT Secretary James E. Harrington put the appropriation on hold last summer because of legal questions of his own. But he said in an interview Tuesday that he had not decided whether to ask the attorney general for an opinion.

A question has been raised about the constitutionality of the expenditure because the state constitution allows the payment of public funds to private entities only if the expenditure is for "a public purpose."

In a December memo to Rose, Smith wrote that if the private boat works were the sole beneficiary, "then it would be apparent that this is not a public purpose."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned downward today, faced with some selling pressure after its recent runaway rise.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial slipped 1.37 to 1,677.41 in the first hour of trading.

Losers took a 3-2 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders were focusing their attention on testimony to be given today by Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, before the House Banking Committee.

Volcker was expected to tell the legislators that the Fed hasn't made any significant change lately in its monetary policy.

Brokers said such a position could be taken as a mild disappointment by traders who have been hoping for some overt move toward easier credit by the Fed, such as a reduction in the discount rate.

Some observers also believe the market is due for a pause after more than 175 points in the Dow Jones industrial average over the last four weeks. But they also noted that any pullbacks lately have quickly attracted a new surge of buying interest.

Singer climbed 1 1/2 to 47 1/4. The company plans to spin off its sewing machine and furniture businesses.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines was unchanged at 158 3/4; American Telephone & Telegraph slipped 1/4 to 21 3/4, and Eastman Kodak was down 1/8 at 50 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .10 to 128.20. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .37 at 247.43.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 14.33 to 1,678.78.

Gainers outpaced losers by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 160.2 million shares, against 139.92 million in the previous session.

PCMH Trustees Approve Bylaws For Proposed Children's Hospital

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees on Tuesday night approved bylaws for a proposed Children's Hospital, in effect giving the go-ahead for the development of a children's hospital within PCMH which would include all nurseries and pediatrics divisions.

Dr. Jon Tingelstad, who heads the pediatrics department of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, presented the concept several months ago, saying the delineation would be useful for administrative, public awareness and fund-raising purposes.

A contract with Omni Flight, which furnishes helicopters and pilots to the hospital, for its EastCare air ambulance program, was extended two months. A committee composed of Marvin Baldree, David Brody and Wayne Peterson was appointed to recommend whether the hospital should continue to do business with this company or find an alternative before the two months is up.

The basic charge for a day in the new pediatric intermediate care unit to be opened soon was set at $350, based on recommendations from the vice president for finance.

Approval was given for PCMH participation in a National Medical Disaster Plan which would make available 100 to 150 beds at PCMH for victims of a major disaster anywhere in the country. Employee training for coping with disasters will be afforded the hospital for participation in this program, along with credit from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals for participating in semi-annual training for disasters.

It was reported that installation of the hospital's new computer system is under way, with teaching and modeling being done in conjunction with a facility in Malvern, Pa. A building to house equipment is being constructed and software delivery is set for April 7-11, Ed McFall, vice president for information services, said.

Board member Harry Leslie was congratulated for having been named Pitt County Citizen of the Year.

Capital budget requests of $206,734 were approved. Included were cardwriters for emergency-outpatient, admissions and rehabilitation administration at $51,535; a non-invasive blood analyzer for respiratory therapy at $68,000; a bench top tissue processor for pathology-anatomy at $15,200; grading, lights and gates for additional parking at $40,525; a four-channel monitor for anesthesiology at $17,063; and controllers with stands, I-meds and IV poles for central services at $14,411.

A strategic planning concept for the hospital was approved and a strategic planning committee was named. Members are Dr. William Laupus, Dr. Edwin Monroe, Dr. John Rose, Dr. Walter Pories, Dr. Robert Brame, Dr. Frank Longino, Charles Gaskins, Bernice Turnage, Norma VanVeld, Dave McRae, Marilyn Rhodes, Ralph Hall, and Jack Richardson. Ex-officio members are Reid Hooper, Roy Clark Jr. and Fred Brown Jr. A meeting of the group with consultants will be held at 6 p.m. Feb. 27.

The nominating committee presented a slate for next month's election that included Reid Hooper, chairman; Gene Paramore, vice chairman; Mamie Smith, secretary; Bernice Turnage, treasurer; Norma VanVeld, assistant treasurer, and Dr. Jeffrey Senter, Dr. Frank Longino, Robert Hackney and Wayne Peterson, at-large members of the executive committee.

Marilyn Rhodes, vice president for nursing services, gave a patient services report on gerontology services offered by the hospital. It was reported that Ms. Rhodes has been awarded a scholarship for special study at the Whorton School of Business of the University of Pennsylvania.

Discussion is under way with the East Carolina Home Health Services agency for some affiliation between that agency and East Carolina Health Services, a subsidiary of PCMH, Richardson reported.

Dr. Lee West gave an annual report on the activity of the Quality Assurance program of the hospital.

Dr. Charles Scarantino reported on the work of the Radiology-Oncology program begun last July. He said it has exceeded expectations in terms of use and services offered or expected to be offered soon.

Full staff privileges were approved for Drs. Carol Scott, Barry Hainer, William Rucker and Erle Austin.

Provisional privileges were approved for Drs. Badri Haimra, David Miller, Robert Sexton and Debra Wright.

Privileges to perform laser surgery were approved for Drs. Emmett Walsh, Stefano Marcuard, Duane Webb, Walter Pories, Howard Satterfield, and Douglas Newton.

Privileges to perform therapeutic apheresis was approved for Dr. Ernest Larkin.

She said there are many — and she emphasized many — companies making calls and sending letters to North Carolina citizens now making extravagant claims like these. The boat some have received is an inflatable raft with a battery-operated motor — without the batteries — she said.

Don't fall for the line, she said, and do turn in all the information you have to your local postmaster, who will forward it to the regional postal inspector. Use the postal inspector, even if you were solicited by telephone, because the company is asking you to send money through the mail and probably promising to mail the "prize."

It's very difficult, if not impossible, to get your money back, if you're dissatisfied, from these companies, so don't take a chance that your offer will be different from all the rest, Ms. Miller said. It probably will not be.

Rambo Banned

BOMBAY, India (AP) — India has banned the U.S. box-office hit "Rambo" because of what it says is the movie's anti-Soviet and anti-Vietnamese content, an official said.

"The film was seen last week by the examination committee of the Censor Board and banned outright," Anna Dani, regional officer of the Censor Board, told The Associated Press.

Farmville Teams Advance To Tourney Semifinals

BY DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's boys downed North Pitt, 56-46, and the Lady Jaguars upset South Lenoir, 52-44, last night as both teams won first round games in the Eastern Plains Conference high school basketball tournament.

Both teams advance to the semifinals where they will meet C.B. Aycock on Thursday night in Farmville's Gym.

The Lady Jaguars will meet the number two seeded Lady Falcons, a 60-28 winner over Pamlico last night, at 6:30 p.m., while the third-seeded boys will meet C.B. Aycock, which is also seeded second, at 8:30 p.m.

In the girls' game, Farmville Central, seeded sixth in the tournament, defeated third-seeded South Lenoir with a second half showing.

Lisa Lang, who played the entire fourth quarter with four fouls, led the Lady Jaguars with 26 points. Susie Stencil contributed 12 points for Farmville.

Teresa Williams led the Lady Devils with 16 points, and Sonya King added 13.

Farmville and South Lenoir played to a 8-8 tie in the first period, but the Lady Devils ran off eight straight points to take a 16-8 midway through the second quarter.

The Lady Jaguars clawed back as Lang and Stencil combined for five points to cut South Lenoir's lead to 17-14 with 1:45 remaining in the half.

Williams hit a 15-foot jumpshot with 59 seconds remaining, but Lang and Wanda Bullock scored the final four points of the first half to make it 19-18.

King scored seven points in the third quarter as South Lenoir outscored the Lady Jaguars, 15-12, to take a 34-30 lead into the final period.

In the fourth quarter, Farmville ran off 10 unanswered points to take a 40-34 lead with 3:26 left in the game. During the stretch, Lang, who tallied 10 fourth quarter points, sank three layups.

South Lenoir didn't score in the final frame until Michelle Hardison sank two free throws with 2:26 left. South Lenoir closed the gap to 43-42 when Williams hit a 12-footer with 1:30 remaining, but Vicki Vandiford made two free throws, and Kim Harrison completed a three-point play to give the Lady Jaguars a 48-42 lead with 59 seconds left.

Williams hit an outside shot to cut it to 48-44, but Lang scored the game's final four points to make the final score 52-44.

The Lady Jaguars improved to 6-15, while the Lady Devils fell to 9-14.

Farmville Coach Hilda Worthington said she was not surprised by her teams upset win.

"We've been so up and down this season, they're capable of doing anything," she said. "Anything is possible when you have good young athletes."

Playing at home and Lang's ability to stay one step ahead of a fifth foul were the keys to the victory, according to Worthington.

"No matter what is considered, it is good to play at home," she said.

"And Lisa Lang backed off defensively like she was told and was around to contribute in the fourth quarter."

In the boys game, Dennis Tripp muscled his way inside for 16 points, and Kennedy Williams scorched the net from the outside to lead the Jaguars over North Pitt, which finished the season at 6-17. Maurice Jones scored 17 points and Ashely Sheppard added 12 points for the Panthers in a losing effort.

Williams and Tripp combined for all of Farmville's points in the first quarter, but the Panthers matched their efforts, leaving the score tied, 14-14, as the teams entered the second period.

Don May, who finished with 12 points, scored six points as the Jaguars outscored the Panthers, 12-10, in the second quarter to take a 26-24 halftime lead.

Jones sank two free throws with 1:03 left in the third period as North Pitt took a 37-35 lead, but Reggie Mitchell hit a jumper, and Tripp dribbled the length of the court with a rebound and hit a layup as the buzzer sounded to give the Jaguars a 39-37 lead after three quarters of play.

After the Panthers scored the first three points of the final period to take a 40-39 lead, Farmville ran off eight unanswered points to take a 47-40 lead. North Pitt was held scoreless for almost six minutes during the stretch.

Olinka Little, who scored six points, finally sank a shot for North Pitt with 1:44 left in the game to cut Farmville's lead to 47-42.

The Jaguars outscored the Panthers, 9-4 in the game's final 90 seconds to make it 56-46.

The Jaguars upped their record to 11-10.

Farmville Coach Mike Terrell expected North Pitt to be a formidable opponent.

"North Pitt is a lot better than their record," he said. "In the tournament, anyone can beat anyone else."

Terrell was elated after the Jaguars dispelled any possibility of an upset.

"I'm very pleased," he said. "It's always tough to win the first game of the tournament."

Robertson Records Rare Quadruple Double Stats

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

Alvin Robertson became only the second NBA player to post double figures in four statistical categories in one game, but the only history that was important to him was a one-point loss Phoenix handed San Antonio on Feb. 1.

Robertson had 20 points, 11 rebounds, 10 assists and 10 steals Tuesday night in the Spurs' 120-114 victory over the Suns. It was the first time that double figures had been reached in those four categories.

Nate Thurmond had 22 points, 14 rebounds, 13 assists and 12 blocked shots on opening night in 1974-75 for the Chicago Bulls, the only other known "quadruple-double."

"I feel happy and excited about the stats, but winning the game is most important," Robertson said. "A win is the ultimate satisfaction I can get."

On Feb. 1, Robertson was outplayed by Walter Davis, who outscored him 28-13 in a 112-111 Phoenix victory in San Antonio. Davis had 22 points in Tuesday's game.

"What can you say about Alvin? He just battles for you the whole game," San Antonio Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said.

In other NBA games, Cleveland defeated New York 111-105, Denver beat Washington 101-90 and Sacramento stopped Houston 115-105.

Despite Robertson's efforts, Phoenix almost won the Suns-Spurs game at the free throw line. Through three quarters, the Suns were 30-for-33 at the foul line, and had 21 more free throws in the fourth period, but missed 12.

"It looked like we were going to do the same thing we did last time," said Fitzsimmons, referring to the Feb. 1 loss. "In the second half, it seemed like the one way they could score was at the free throw line."

"We did what we had to do to get back in the game," Phoenix Coach John MacLeod said. "But you have to hit those unguarded shots where the referee hands you the ball and everyone watches you shoot. This game was similar to the game here two weeks ago, but we couldn't pull it off."

Phoenix forward Larry Nance said the Suns' upset victory over the Boston Celtics on Monday may have taken its toll.

"Our team expended ourselves last night in the Boston victory," said Nance, who had 17 points for the Suns. "And it might have had an effect on tonight's game. But that's life in the NBA."

The play of Robertson and Mike Mitchell, who led the Spurs with 27 points, enabled San Antonio to lead from start to finish.

The Spurs led by 18 points before the Suns rallied in the fourth quarter to cut the deficit to 112-111. A jumper by Mitchell gave San Antonio a three-point lead and Robertson followed with a steal that led to a basket by Artis Gilmore, making it 116-111.

"I just got a lucky play," a smiling Robertson said after the game.

Nuggets 101, Bullets 90

Alex English sparked a 15-1 run in the fourth period with eight of his 38 points, lifting Denver to its victory over Washington.

The Nuggets led 66-43 early in the second half before the Bullets closed the gap to 80-78 with 7:19 left in the game.

Kevin McKenna and Gus Williams each had three-point goals to highlight the rally, but English followed with five consecutive points as Denver pulled away again.

Cliff Robinson led Washington scoring with 17 points, while rookie Manute Bol had eight blocked shots.

Kings 115, Rockets 105

Reggie Theus scored 18 of his 22 points in the decisive third quarter of Sacramento's triumph over Houston, the Midwest Division leader.

Mike Woodson also had 22 points for the Kings, who outscored the Rockets 40-31 in the third period for an 88-79 advantage going into the fourth quarter.

Ralph Sampson, playing center for the second straight game because of Akeem Olajuwon's knee injury, led the Rockets with 24 points, 13 of them in the final period.

Cavaliers 111, Knicks 105

Cleveland handed New York its seventh consecutive loss as Roy Hinson scored 21 of his game-high 34 points in the second half and John Bagley added 20 points and 10 assists.

The Knicks got no closer than four points after an 8-0 run gave the Cavaliers a 68-62 lead in the third quarter. World B. Free had six of the eight points in the spurt.

Hunt Wins; Rose Hopes Dim

BLACK CREEK — Rose High School's hopes of making it to the Sectional playoffs next week suffered a serious — and possibly killing blow — last night as Wilson Hunt gained a 62-58 victory over the Rampants.

Rose's girls, meanwhile, maintained their tie for first place in the Big East standings with a 37-30 win over the Lady Warriors. Rose has now clinched a spot in the Sectionals and can ice no worse than a tie for the title with a victory on Friday over Northeastern.

The Rampant boys, however, are on the edge of being eliminated. Currently in sixth place, they would only have an outside chance if they were to win over Northeastern on Friday — and see Northeastern lose tonight to Rocky Mount and Northern Nash bow to Hunt. That could create a three-way tie for fourth place.

First — however — Rocky Mount must pull off the upset tonight. A Northeastern victory would make Friday night's game only academic. Rose currently is 6-7 in league play and 12-9 overall. The Rampettes climbed to 10-3 in the Big East and 16-6 overall.

After both Hunt and Rose had scored on their opening possessions, the Warriors rushed out to a 9-2 lead paced by two baskets each by Reggie McRae and Junior Harris. Anthony Barnes then stole the ball and went for a layup to open the lead to 11-2 with 5:12 left in the first quarter.

Then, after Ricky Outlaw broke the ice for Rose, Hunt added two more baskets before Earrol Wooten connected. Martin Norville added a second basket for Rose, but Hunt countered that. Wooten then hit on a jumper with 21 seconds left to cut the lead to 17-10 and the quarter ended at that.

Wooten stole the ball for a basket and Outlaw scored on a pair of baskets to help Rose rally to an 18-17 lead with 6:00 left. The two swapped the lead before McRae returned it to Hunt at 21-20 and Hines hit two free throws for a three-point edge. Wooten hit twice to put Rose back up, 24-23, but Hines hit and Anthony Barnes made a three-point play to give the Warriors a 28-24 lead with 1:42 left in the half.

Turnovers and fouls helped Hunt stretch the margin to 32-24 before Outlaw's three-pointer cut it to 32-27 at halftime.

Rose pulled back within three points with 4:40 left at 36-33, but Hunt posted two straight baskets to run it back to 40-33.

Wooten sparked Rose back to within two, 40-38, but Hunt got the next four before the Rampants hit again.

Both Melvin Jenkins and Lennie Langley picked up their fourth fouls in the remaining time in the period, and Hunt was able to stretch its lead out to 49-42 at the end of the frame.

Hunt opened a 52-44 lead early in the final quarter, but Wooten and Outlaw cut it back to 52-48 with 5:02 left. Hines made a three-point play, and Langley canned two free throws to run it to 55-50.

Hunt then scored five straight points to open up a 60-50 lead with 2:28 before Rose made one last gasp rally. Led by Outlaw and Norville, Rose closed with within two, 60-58 with 1:15 left.

But Jenkins and Langley both fouled out in the next few seconds, the latter sending Harris to the line.

However, it was then discovered that Harris had committed his fifth foul earlier and not been removed from the game. He was then sent to the bench and Robert King came on in his place to shoot. Rose agreed that Harris should be allowed to shoot and then leave the game, but the officials ruled King would take the shots. He hit one and made it 61-58 with 48 seconds left.

Rose then turned the ball over twice in a row without getting off a shot and Brad Neal made one more free throw at the horn to finish off the scoring.

Rose shot well, hitting 47 percent, while holding Hunt to 40.7. Hunt, however, held a 34-31 rebounding edge. McRae led Hunt's scoring with 15 points while John Finch had 14 and Harris had 13. Rose was led by Woten with 20 and Outlaw with 19.

The girls' game was not a slow down, it just looked that way. Hunt was missing one of its top players and Rose suffered through a poor shooting night.

The Rampettes were in the lead, 8-6, after one period, but Hunt stayed with them in the second quarter and trailed by only one at the end of the half, 13-12.

In the third quarter, Rose held a 9-6 edge that opened the lead to 22-18.

In the final quarter, Rose held onto the lead until Hunt made a late run at them, closing the gap to 32-30 with 1:30 left in the contest.

But Vicki Parrott stole the ball and fed Pam Smith for a shot underneath. Then, after another steal, Smith was fouled and made one of two. Chris Holec then scored the final basket of the night to give Rose the seven-point win. Kim Bridges and Holec both finished with 10 each for Rose. Gloria Cox led Hunt with 14 points. Rose will close out the regular season on Friday, hosting Elizabeth City Northeastern.

Taylor's Shot Allows Redskins To Advance

WILLIAMSTON — Roanoke High School's Ricky Taylor hit a shot at the buzzer to give the Redskins a 57-55 upset of Ahsokie in the first round of the Northeastern Conference basketball tournament being played at Williamston High School.

In other games, Edenton pulled off a mild upset of #4 seeded Roanoke, 46-41, in a girls' contest, and Northampton East downed Williamston 46-45 in overtime.

In tonight's first semifinal games, Plymouth meets Edenton in a girls' game and Plymouth takes on Roanoke in the boys' event. Thursday's other semifinals send the Ahsokie girls against Northampton East, while the Northampton East boys face Edenton. The championship games will be played on Friday.

In the opening game of the night, Edenton pushed out into a 9-5 lead over Roanoke. They outhit the Lady Redskins, 13-11, in the second quarter to open up a 22-16 halftime lead.

Edenton continued to pull away in the third period, taking a 32-25 lead into the last quarter. Roanoke outscored the Lady Aces, 16-14, to no avail, in the final frame.

Stephanie Elliott and Arlene Twine each had 11 points to lead Edenton, while Joyce Outlaw and Soyna Teele each had the same number for Roanoke.

The second game went to the wire as Northampton nipped the Tigers in overtime.

Williamston burst out into a 14-7 lead in the opening period of the game, and outscored Northampton, 12-6 in the second quarter. That gave the Tigers a 26-13 lead at the half.

But Northampton rallied in the third period, 16-8, and cut the lead back to 34-29. They again outhit the Tigers in the final period, finally tying it up at 40-40, with about two minutes to play. Both teams had opportunities after that, but neither could hit in the time remaining.

In the overtime, Northampton quickly established the lead, scoring three field goals against five free throws for Williamston.

Ronald Joyner led Northampton with 14 while Charles Harris had 13. Williamston was paced by Robert Slade with 10.

In the final game of the evening, Roanoke and Ahsokie battled right to the final second of play.

Roanoke opened into a 16-10 lead after one period but Ahsokie came back, 13-8, to cut the lead to 24-23 at the half.

In the third period, Roanoke again pulled away, 17-14, to take a 41-37 edge. But Ahsokie fought back and kept it close, tying it at 55-55 in the closing seconds. Taylor then hit the game-winner just at the horn for the Redskins.

Richard Moore led Roanoke with 22 points while Taylor had 14 and Derek Boyd added 11. Tony Outlaw led Ahsokie with 15 while Keith Mitchell had 14 and Chip Taylor had 10.

Pack, Conley Are Defeated

VANCEBORO — North Lenoir High School canned 15 of 18 shots at the free throw line in the final period and upset third-seeded Washington, 57-54, in the first round of the Coastal Conference Tournament last night.

East Carteret's girls ousted #7 D.H. Conley, 52-40, while #2 West Craven's boys dropped East Carteret, 61-54, in the other games.

Tonight, Washington's top-seeded girls take on North Lenoir in a semifinal game, while #1 West Carteret meets Conley in a boys' game. The other semifinal games on Thursday, send Havelock against East Carteret in the girls' action while North Lenoir and West Craven collide in the boys' game. The finals will be held Friday night.

Washington eased out into an 11-9 lead after one period of the boys' game, but North Lenoir hurried back in the second period and outhit the Pam Pack, 19-11. That pushed the Hawks into a 28-22 lead at intermission.

Washington rallied in the third period, 16-14, and cut the lead back to 42-38. But in the final quarter, North Lenoir — which did not score from the floor — held off Washington by making 15 of 18 at the line to claim the upset win.

Derek Oliver led the Hawks with 19 points while Benny Sutton had 16 and Dave Hinson had 11. Washington was led by Alton Ore with 23, Frankie Warren with 14 and Eugene Battle with 12.

East Carteret held an 11-7 lead over Conley's girls in the opening period and was able to stretch the lead to 26-20 by the end of the half.

The third period proved to be the killer, however, as the Lady Mariners outhit the Valkyries, 18-6, to push into a 44-26 lead. Conley tried to rally, 14-8, but was too far back.

Kim Oden led the Lady Mariners with 17 points while Wendy Fincher and Tina Robinson each had 14. Conley was led by Trellaney Boyd with 21 points.

Knights Down Goldsboro

Robin House scored 24 points and Paul Hollingsworth added 20 to lead Greenville Christian Academy to a 52-45 victory over Goldsboro Christian in the first round of the Eastern Carolina Christian Conference basketball tournament last night.

Greenville, now 11-8 overall, will advance to the semifinals of the tournament and will face regular season champion Wilson Christian on Friday at 7:30 p.m. The remainder of the tournament will be played at Wilson.

The two teams played evenly throughout the first period which ended in a 16-16 tie. In the second quarter, Greenville managed to ease away with an 11-8 margin. That gave the Knights a 27-24 lead to take into the dressing rooms.

In the third period, Goldsboro hung with the Knights, however, keeping it close with a 12-11 scoring edge. That left Greenville up, 38-36, as the final quarter opened.

In that period, Greenville outhit Goldsboro, 14-9, to take the win.

"The game was close throughout," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "I really don't think that either team played up to its potential, though. The foul line was the difference for us." Greenville hit on 16 of 26 and compared to 7 of 17 for Goldsboro.

"We're going to have to play much better to have a chance to beat Wilson on Friday," Thatcher added.

Russell Lanning led Goldsboro with 16 points while Jimmy Boyd added 12.

Greenville's girls will also be in action on Friday, facing Falls Road at 4:30 p.m. The Lady Knights won the regular season title.

Consolation games will be held starting at 12 noon Saturday, with the championship finals to follow.

Chocowinity Teams, Lady Bullets Are Eliminated

COLUMBIA — Columbia High School swept a pair of Tobacco Belt Tournament games from Chocowinity last night. The Wildcats won the girls' game, 44-24, and took a 61-41 victory in the boys.

Elsewhere in the league, Creswell topped Jamesville, 63-30; Belhaven beat North Edgecombe, 85-48, and Bath beat Mattamuskeet, 45-39, all in girls action.

The tournament resumes tonight with the completion of the boys' first round. Bear Grass is at North Edgecombe, Mattamuskeet at Creswell and Aurora at Belhaven. The tournament moves to Washington High School for the semifinals and finals starting Thursday.

Columbia's boys jumped out to a 14-8 lead in the first period of their game. The Wildcats then outhit the Indians, 21-14, in the second period to take a 35-22 lead at halftime.

Chocowinity knocked two off that in the third period but still trailed, 46-35, going into the last frame. Columbia outhit the Tribe, 15-6, in that to insure the win.

T. Holloway led Columbia with 14 points while K. Holloway had 10. Darryl Moore led Chocowinity with 16 while Henry Harri and Gregg Heggie each had 10.

In the girls' game, Columbia held Chocowinity scoreless while scoring 10 of its own. Chocowinity came back with an 11-4 margin in the second quarter, but still trailed, 14-11, at the half.

In the third period, however, the Lady 'Cats took control again, 21-6, and powered into a 35-17 lead. They finished off Chocowinity, 9-7, in the final quarter.

Lavora Spencer led Columbia with 18 points while no one scored in double figures for Chocowinity.

At Creswell, Jamesville was well behind by the end of the first period, 18-7, and never got going. Creswell outhit the Lady Bullets, 16-7 in the second quarter and held a 34-14 lead at intermission.

Both teams scored six in the third period for a 40-20 lead, and Creswell finished off Jamesville, 23-10, in the final frame.

Charlene Davenport led Creswell with 19 points while Sydney Leigh had 12 and Cassandra Davenport had 10. No one scored in double figures for Jamesville.

USFL Preparing To Do Business Without #1

NEW YORK (AP)—United States Football League owners meet today, prepared to do without Myles Tanenbaum, the league's last original owner and architect of its most successful franchise.

Commissioner Harry Usher said Tuesday that the USFL, already down from 14 teams to eight for its first season in the fall, is preparing a contingency schedule with seven teams — minus Tanenbaum's Baltimore Stars, league champion in two of the three spring seasons.

The alternative schedule stems from Tanenbaum's statement last week to the Baltimore Sun that the USFL should consider remaining idle until its $1.32 billion suit against the National Football League is resolved.

Tanenbaum could not be reached for comment Tuesday. Usher said he had not spoken to the Stars' owner and didn't have first-hand knowledge of his intentions.

However, nowhere in the Sun article did Tanenbaum say anything about withdrawing the Stars from the league.

"I think it is important that we come out of the meeting speaking with one voice," said Tanenbaum, who has been a dissenter in league meetings ever since August 1984, when the other owners voted over his objection to switch from the spring to the fall.

That one voice, in fact, is just what normally comes from USFL meetings. After every session, USFL owners have emerged to predict a rosy future and say they've never been more unified. Only later do drabs and drabs of dissent become public.

Still, Tanenbaum's comments threw a crimp into the unity plans for this meeting, which was to be concerned with housekeeping details like scheduling and television — the USFL will be televised in 1986 by ESPN and whatever local outlets choose to pick up games. Among other things, Tanenbaum's words led Herschel Walker of the New Jersey Generals, one of the league's last

Athletes Enjoy Rapport Even If Countries Do Not

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

It's the kind of simplistic, idealistic goal that sounds so good — better understanding between nations through sports. It's what the Olympics sell every four years and what Ted Turner's Goodwill Games hope to produce this summer in Moscow. It's something triple jumper Willie Banks has seen happen.

Banks, the world record-holder at 58 feet, 11 1/2 inches, was at Mexico City in 1979, competing at the World University Games when a questionable drag foul was called on him. "I was mad, because I knew I hadn't fouled," he said. "Then they called one on the Russian, too."

Gennady Valyukevic had not fouled either, at least not as far as Banks was concerned, and the American protested again. "He was one of the best. I wanted to go against him. I didn't want him disqualified. I complained for him, but it didn't work."

Two years later, at a US-USSR joint meet in Leningrad, Banks and Valyukevic met again. "I went in thinking I'd go 57 feet on every jump and I'd win," Banks said. "But I wasn't jumping that well. Then I got one at 56 feet. On Valyukevic's next jump, he wasn't close but they announced longer numbers for him."

It was a classic case of hometown judging, perhaps a little bit of getting even for what had happened to the Soviet at Mexico City. Banks would not sit still for it. "I started arguing with the judge. He pushed me away and I pushed him back. It was getting pretty hot."

This doesn't exactly sound like an experiment in international understanding. Then Banks felt a hand on his shoulder. It was Valyukevic.

"He said to me, 'You know and I know what is going on here. Our job is to compete and enjoy the competition. I respect you and you respect me. We have rapport with each other. We are friends.'"

Friends.

Banks liked the sound of that.

Player's Return Boosts Marshall

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Marshall's basketball team is apparently back to normal after leading scorer Skip Henderson was suspended for one game for violating team rules.

Henderson, a 6-foot-2 sophomore from Cartersville, Ga., returned to Huntington with the rest of the team Monday night from Chattanooga, Tenn., and then practiced Tuesday.

"I'd rather it be over with. I'd rather not comment," Henderson said after Tuesday's workout when asked if he had told a television reporter Monday that he was quitting the team.

"I learned a lesson from it. It's not a good feeling being suspended, not being able to help the team. It's just a bad feeling."

With Henderson absent Monday, Marshall was beaten 81-67 by Tennessee-Chattanooga, ending the Herd's chances for a regular-season title in the Southern Conference.

Henderson, who has averaged 18.2 points a game this season, on Monday told a television reporter and then a radio reporter that he was quitting the team. He was observed Monday loading gear into a car at the team's hotel before teammate Jeff Richardson engaged him in a conversation.

Several hours after news reports broke quoting Henderson's statement about quitting, Marshall officials announced that Henderson had been suspended one game for violating a team curfew rule and had not quit the team.

Marshall coach Rick Huckabay said Henderson was approached by reporters when he "was very frustrated about breaking a team rule."

"People were told something that was not true," Huckabay said. He also said Henderson's absence "had absolutely no bearing" on the Herd's loss Monday night.

On Tuesday Huckabay said, "It's all history now. We had a good practice today and Skip's back in the swing of things. I don't dwell on the past."

Henderson had traveled to nearby Cartersville, Ga., on Sunday night to visit relatives and was late returning to the team's hotel in Chattanooga, Tenn.

St. John's Nips Villanova

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The play of sixth-ranked St. John's in the second half looked as ragged as Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino felt.

And, Massimino wasn't feeling much better after watching his Wildcats rally from a 45-22 deficit with 15:21 to play in the game only to lose 79-76 in a Big East basketball game Tuesday night.

The Redmen grabbed a 30-16 halftime lead, as Villanova shot a dismal 22 percent from the field.

Massimino has been suffering from the flu and sat on the bench with a 103 degree temperature. He got even hotter in the first half, when protesting what he thought was a traveling violation and was hit with two technicals.

"When you shoot 22 percent in a half you won't beat too many teams," said Massimino, sweating profusely and coughing often.

St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca was pleased with the victory, but not exactly thrilled with the way it was accomplished.

"We had things going our way ... but it turned into a ratty game," said Carnesecca. "We started throwing the ball around. We missed free throws."

In the only other Top 20 game played, No. 13 Georgetown smashed Morgan State 81-53.

Villanova slashed the 23-point deficit to 59-49 with 4:53 left behind the shooting of Harold Pressley.

Pressley, who had two points and seven rebounds in the first half, caught fire after the intermission. He scored nine of 11 points at one stage of the Wildcat comeback.

St. John's regrouped to pull away to 67-56 with just 2:32 remaining. But Villanova came back again.

The Wildcats scored seven straight points and with 1:34 left it was 67-63. Three times Villanova got within three points, 68-65, 70-67 and with 15 seconds left 77-74.

"But that's the kind of team Villanova is," said Carnesecca. "They just won't quit. They made things happen."

St. John's picked up its 25th victory against three losses. The Redmen are 12-2 in the Big East, behind Syracuse, 12-1.

Villanova, trying desperately to earn a return to the NCAA Championship Tournament it won last year, dropped to 18-12, and 8-6 in the Big East.

Carnesecca observed that his team did come at Villanova at the foul line when it counted at the end. Eight of their last nine points were at the line.

St. John's converted both technicals and two free throws assessed on the play, a four point swing.

Willie Glass, who scored 15 for St. John's said St. John's started making a lot of mistakes and rushed their shots during Villanova's comeback.

"But we knew they wouldn't roll over and die." Ron Rowan, who led St. John's with 21 points and added six assists, commented, "They (Villanova) did a good job with their press ... Give them credit."

Walter Berry scored 15 points and grabbed 11 rebounds for St. John's. Mark Jackson had 15 and handed out nine assists.

For Villanova, Pressley scored 24 points and had 20 rebounds, 10 off the offensive boards.

No. 13 Georgetown 81, Morgan St. 53

With Reggie Williams scoring seven points and David Wingate six during a 21-4 streak that closed out the first half, the Hoyas rolled to victory.

"In the beginning, I told the kids we gave them confidence," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson, who reached the 20-victory plateau for the ninth consecutive season.

"We're supposed to beat them ... that's obvious,"

Morgan State, 5-17, trailed only 20-16 before Williams scored his first points of the game on two free throws to launch the streak.

Wingate led Georgetown, 20-5, with 16 points. Williams had 11 and reserve Jaren Jackson had 10 as all 12 Georgetown players scored.

Troy Brown and Thomas Foster scored 17 points apiece for the losing Bears.

Others Seton Hall combined a 23-point performance by Andre McCloud with some clutch free throw shooting in the closing minutes to defeat Connecticut 65-62 in a Big East contest at the Brendan Byrne Arena.

Willie Haynes scored 17 points and St. Peter's used a hounding defense to shut down Dayton as the Peacocks posted a 66-56 victory, breaking the Flyers' six-game winning streak.

Mattingly Wins MVP-Like Salary From The Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly, the American League's most valuable player last season, has won an MVP-like salary from the New York Yankees.

"I feel good about it," Mattingly said Tuesday after agreeing to a one-year contract worth $1.375 million.

The 24-year-old Mattingly was ineligible for arbitration last year and signed a one-year contract for the 1985 season worth $455,000. He then went out and led the major leagues by driving in 145 runs, along with 35 homers and a .324 batting average.

This year, Mattingly sought $1.5 million but, when the Yankees offered $1.1 million, he opted for arbitration. His case was to have been heard Tuesday.

"I'm glad it's over," Mattingly said. "I preferred a three-year contract, something for the Yankees to say to us, 'We know you're going to be productive over a period of time' ... but it wasn't going to happen."

The Yankees "felt comfortable" with their arbitration case, Woody Woodward, the club's executive vice president said. "We presented a fair number. But, when we saw the possibility of settling it, we thought that would be the best approach in the long run."

In other arbitration decisions Tuesday, Boston catcher Rich Gedman lost his bid for a $1 million contract, but three other players — Boston second baseman Marty Barrett, New York Mets pitcher Ed Lynch and Montreal pitcher Bryn Smith — were winners.

Also, Montreal outfielder Tim Raines, who had sought $1.7 million from the Expos — who had offered $1.3 million — reached agreement on a one-year contract, two days before a scheduled arbitration hearing. Los Angeles Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia and Philadelphia outfielder Von Hayes also reached agreement Tuesday without the help of an arbitrator.

Scioscia settled for $3.8 million over four years after his hearing but before a decision had been announced. Hayes agreed to one-year contract, with no terms announced. The Phillies outfielder had sought $700,000 and had been offered

Gedman, seeking to join teammate Wade Boggs as a $1 million arbitration winner, will play instead for the club's offer of $650,000. He was paid $477,500 last year when he batted .295 with 18 home runs and 80 runs batted in. Boggs, who won a $1 million settlement a year ago, is asking for $1,850,000 this time. His case will be heard later this week.

Barrett, who hit .266, won a $435,000 contract, $110,000 more than the Red Sox had offered. He played for $272,500 last year.

Lynch, 10-8 with a 3.44 earned run average last season, won a $530,000 salary for 1986. The Mets had offered $400,000, a raise of $100,000 over his 1985 salary.

Smith, 18-5 with a 2.91 ERA for the Expos, was awarded his request of a $700,000 contract for 1986. He earned $290,000 last year and the Expos had offered $500,000.

The Dodgers, who avoided an arbitration hearing by signing pitcher Fernando Valenzuela to a three-year, $5.5 million contract over the weekend, also gave Scioscia a multi-year deal after his case had been heard by an arbitrator. The catcher batted .296 last year after winning his arbitration and playing for $435,000. He had been seeking $825,000 with the Dodgers offering $650,000.

With Tuesday's results, teams showed 14 arbitration victories to the players' 12. Twelve cases are still outstanding.

Two cases, those involving pitcher Ricky Horton of the St. Louis Cardinals and second baseman Wally Backman of the Mets, were heard Tuesday with decisions expected later in the week. Horton is asking $275,000, compared to the Cardinals' offer of $215,000. Backman wants $425,000, $100,000 more than the Mets submitted. Horton made $110,000 last year and Backman $200,000.

Bubka Says Olson Feats No Big Deal

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — As far as Sergei Bubka is concerned, the accomplishments of pole vaulting rival Billy Olson are no big deal because they've come indoors.

And yet, the Soviet vaulter seems to realize that his American rival's achievements are, at the very least, somewhat noteworthy.

"He's never won the Olympics or the world championships and hasn't even made his national Olympic team," Bubka told reporters through an interpreter at a luncheon Tuesday. "The competitions where he's set his records are minor competitions."

"If Billy Olson were ever in a major (outdoor) championship competition, he wouldn't know which direction to go on the runway."

While Bubka's luncheon remarks, or those of the interpreter, seemed somewhat caustic, he spoke in slightly different terms a little later in a quieter setting.

"I don't want to diminish the importance of his (Olson's) success ... I think he should be paid his due," the Soviet star said.

Reportedly, Bubka drove Olson and his wife to the airport in London last summer, indicating that the two have been on friendly terms at times.

Bubka and Olson meet Friday night in the 1986 Los Angeles Times-GTE Indoor Games at the Forum.

Bubka, 22, was ranked first in the world last year. He set the world record of 19 feet, 8 1/4 inches at Paris last July 13. He also established world indoor bests in the pole vault twice this winter, but Olson has accomplished that feat four times, the last with the current standard of 19-5 3/4 on Feb. 8.

Joe Dial, who set an indoor best that stood up only briefly earlier this month, is also scheduled to take part in the Times Games, as are Vasily Bubka, Sergei's older brother, and Pierre Quinon of France.

The five vaulters are also scheduled to compete Sunday afternoon in the Michelob Invitational at the San Diego Sports Arena.

Apparently, Bubka is still upset over what happened last Friday night at the 79th Wanamaker Millrose Games in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Olson won the event with a leap of 19-0. Both Olson and Dial were given extra jumps after an official ruled they had been interfered with by photographers.

After threatening to quit the meet over the additional attempts given the Americans, Bubka was given one extra jump, but he failed to clear the bar on any of his four jumps.

"I don't want to talk about it anymore," Bubka said. "It is very difficult for me to compete here (in the United States). I don't like the conditions. They're practically insufferable for me."

Bubka said the runways are mostly wood in the United States. In Europe, they are mostly tartan. And he made it clear that outdoor competitions are much more important to him than are indoor meets.

Bubka said he wasn't surprised that the indoor best has been surpassed seven times this winter.

"I can't account for that, but I'm not surprised," he said. "I've shown other vaulters how to break the psychological barrier" of six meters, or 19-8 1/4.

After failing to clear a height at the Millrose Games, Bubka won the pole vault at the Bally Invitational Track and Field Meet in Rosemont, Ill., on Sunday, clearing 19-3 1/4. Neither Olson nor Dial competed in that meet.

"I liked the crowd at Chicago," Bubka said. "It was very supportive and it helped me. The crowd was too noisy in New York, so noisy I couldn't concentrate."

Asked about his most serious rivals, Bubka said, "I don't think in the near future there will be any rival who will seriously challenge me. I've come nowhere near my potential and my major rivals will be the young vaulters unknown today."

"In 1983 I was a virtual unknown when I won the world championships. It's these young unknown vaulters who will be my top competitors in the future."

Victories Don't Please Chrissie

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd isn't satisfied with straight-set victories. She wants devastation.

That's what she got Tuesday night when she routed Terry Phelps 6-2, 6-0 in the quarterfinals of the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships. The match took just 50 minutes and Lloyd won the last 11 games. The result sent a message to the other three players remaining in the women's draw — Lloyd is primed to win this two-week, Grand Slam-like event.

Her next opponent is ninth-seeded Kathy Rinaldi. The other semifinal Thursday will pit second-seeded Steffi Graf of West Germany against seventh-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia.

The men's quarterfinals began today with top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia against 10th-seeded Joakim Nystrom of Sweden, third-seeded Jimmy Connors played sixth-seeded Yannick Noah of France, and fifth-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden played unheralded Milan Srejber of Czechoslovakia in the afternoon matches.

The night match pits unseeded Guy Forget of France against second-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden.

Lloyd said she was disappointed with her play in the first week of the tournament at Boca West. She never lost a set, but several of her opponents played her tough, which is more than could be said for Phelps.

"I just felt a little more pumped up for some reason," Lloyd said. "I played very well. Her game basically is to play steady. But I moved her all over the court."

"It's the first match (here) that I felt I played very well. I played mediocre last week. I hope I play that well in my next match."

Rinaldi, who never has won a set off Lloyd in three previous meetings, was locked in a battle with Bassett until the Canadian made an error at a crucial time. With Rinaldi up 6-5 in a first-set tie-breaker, Bassett set up for an easy overhead at the net and hit the ball long to lose the set. She never recovered and lost the match 7-6, 6-2.

"It was so easy," Bassett said drawing out the "so" for emphasis.

"I got lucky on that point," Rinaldi admitted. "But the point before I missed a forehand that almost went over the fence. It's just too bad that she missed on set point."

Rinaldi said she is looking forward to playing Lloyd, though with a little trepidation.

"The last few times I've played her, I never really have been in the match," said Rinaldi, who at 18 is 13 years younger than Lloyd. "I start off well but can't keep it up. Hopefully, I can be more consistent this time."

While two South Floridians — Lloyd is from Fort Lauderdale and Rinaldi is from Martin Downs — fight it out in one semifinal, the other is a battle of Europeans.

Sukova defeated 14th-seeded Barbara Potter 6-1, 6-2 in 53 minutes Wednesday. "I played very well and she didn't serve very well," Sukova said. "I didn't let her do anything because I was serving well and returning well."

Graf had a much more difficult match. At first, she appeared to be cruising into the semifinals, taking a 6-2, 5-3 lead. But the spunky Garrison fought back to win the second set in a tie-breaker. She ran out of steam, however, and Graf rebounded to win 6-2, 6-7, 6-3.

"I think I could've won it much easier," said Graf, at 16 the youngest of the final four and three years younger than Sukova. "I'm very happy to win this match because it was a tough one. But I should have won it much earlier."

Sukova and Graf have met just once before, in 1983 at Brisbane, Australia.

"I beat her in two sets," Sukova recalled. "But it was her first year on the tour and I think it was her first match on grass. She didn't know what to do."

Cuban Farmers Getting Taste Of Capitalism

By GEORGE GEDDA

Associated Press Writer

HAVANA (AP) — Twice a week, Luis Acosta gets up at midnight and travels to a farmers market on the outskirts of Havana, where he and other entrepreneurs gather to engage in that once-forbidden relic of the pre-revolution era: capitalism.

Acosta, a youthful-looking 66, has to be at the market by 3 a.m. if he is to secure an up-front place to hawk his wares. At the 7 a.m. opening, streams of customers begin arriving, Cubans willing to pay high prices for the wide selection and generally good quality produce.

Scores of farmers markets have been set up all over Havana, the result of a government decision, reached somewhat reluctantly in 1981, to try to ease food shortages through what President Reagan likes to call "the magic of the marketplace."

Acosta clearly likes the system. Since the ban on capitalism was lifted, he has bought an air conditioner and a color television set and replaced wood construction at his home with cement. On this day, he's selling malangas, a potato-like vegetable, for 70 to 80 cents a pound. That is no small sum for Cuban workers, many of whom earn just 200 pesos a month. A peso is roughly equal to $1, with 100 cents to the peso.

Nearby, Pedro Sosa, 34, is hard at work selling potatoes. A small smile betrays his satisfaction with how the day is going. Eight people are lined up to buy his potatoes at 40 cents a pound.

Sosa guesses he'll gross 480 pesos this day, an astronomical sum for most Cubans. But his net income will be considerably less because of the 20 per cent tax he must pay and other costs of his operation.

He's doing a lot better than the flower vendor nearby, who expects net income this day of 15 pesos on sales totaling 30 to 40 pesos.

Like Acosta, Sosa believes in the system. Asked if he is doing better now than he was before, he replied, "Si, claro" (Yes, sure).

The markets are a departure from socialist orthodoxy but, in the wake of the discontent demonstrated during the Mariel boat lift in 1980, the government felt a modest dose of capitalism would improve the diet of Cubans and increase agricultural income.

An economist here said many Cubans had a lot of money but few places to spend it.

In addition to allowing farmers markets, the government set up so-called "parallel markets" as an alternative to the private sector approach. These state-run operations compete directly with the private entrepreneurs, usually operating on the same block. They offer lower prices but the quality and the selection generally are inferior.

The farmers markets and the parallel markets represented new innovation. At both, there is no limit on how much a customer buys, a major shift in a country long plagued by shortages and rationing.

Acosta, the malanga salesman, was operating at a competitive disadvantage on this day. At the parallel market next door, malangas were being sold by the state for 45 cents a pound, 25 to 35 cents below Acosta's offerings.

Still, his stand had customers. Like a good capitalist, he does what he can to get shoppers to come back. After one woman made a purchase, he slipped her a couple of coins and said,

"This is for the bus."

The woman was not placated. The prices, she told a reporter, are too high. "These people are thieves. The state gives me only 60 pesos a month and I have a retarded child," she said.

It was not clear why she didn't shop at the parallel market next door, where the malangas were of similar quality.

The oranges being offered at the parallel market were only a third the price of the farmers market but their dark brown hue made them highly unappetizing. The shoppers ignored them. The tomatoes, all green, also went untouched.

There were no potatoes at the parallel market, making Sosa a monopoly capitalist of sorts at his potato stand next door at the farmers market.

Rationing is still very much a part of the average Cuban's life. Each citizen is entitled to a chicken every nine days and to six pounds of rice per month. Controls on some other items have been lifted over the years and the farmers and parallel markets provide additional unrestricted food sources.

Boosters of the new innovations say they have worked well. Before 1981, long lines at restaurants were common as Cubans who had exhausted their rationing tickets often had a choice of dining out or going hungry. Nowadays, the lines appear to be shorter.

Government statistics indicate food production has increased 20 per cent since 1981, well ahead of the population increase.

Diplomats, however, say the farmers markets have been a disappointment because of government regulations and the frequent periods when business is slow.

Some Cubans envy the new entrepreneurs. A Cuban professional, watching Sosa pile up pesos at his potato stand, said, "If I had a piece of land, I would become a farmer instantly."

Monastery Offers Refuge To Christians

KHINSHARA, Lebanon (AP) — More than 1,000 Christians have taken shelter in the mountain monastery of St. John here after being driven from their villages by their own guns in fighting between Christian and Syrian-backed forces.

Their plight is the result of one of the many ironies of Lebanon's 11-year-old war of multifactional militias. After fleeing Christian guns, the refugees now find themselves under the care of pro-Syrian militia.

The Christian refugees' home villages in Lebanon's central mountains are in territory held by leftist and Moslem opponents of President Amin Gemayel and his Christian forces.

"I can't believe that we were shelled by our own people," lamented an elderly refugee, Mary Salibi, in the vaulted cellar of the 300-year-old monastery near Khinshara in Lebanon's snow-streaked central mountains.

"The Christians bombarded us with 155mm artillery. My home is destroyed. Where do I got now?"

Like many of the homeless Christians she had to run the gantlet of snipers, rocket barrages and artillery shelling when she fled her home village of Shreen, heading east towards the Christian heartland.

She found sanctuary in the monastery, a Greek Catholic seminary abandoned by its monks and students when the fighting flared Jan. 15.

Doormen See Red Over Tip's Uniforms

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The doormen who stand watch outside the House chamber are seeing red over House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.'s request that they wear green. House officials say the green blazers, each costing $70, are a matter of security for the House and decorum for the doormen, who guide visitors into the House gallery. But like other federal employees, the doormen haven't had a pay raise in a year, and some are grouching about O'Neill's request.

"The speaker did it because the public must be under the control of people who have obvious authority," O'Neill's spokesman, Chris Matthews, said of the green blazer proposal. "There is no way for the public to know who's in charge outside the chamber."

Asked whether the uniforms for doormen were necessary in view of the normal stationing of uniformed Capitol Hill police officers outside the chamber, and the fact that doormen currently wear plastic security badges, Matthews replied, "He (O'Neill) feels this is necessary."

Asked whether he or O'Neill knew the doormen would have to pay part of the cost of their uniforms, Matthews replied, "I don't think so. I don't know."

House Doorkeeper Jim Molloy has asked the House Administration Committee to approve $3,500 to pay for the uniforms.

"For years, we thought we should improve the image around here," said Molloy, who told the committee in a letter that the "improvement would help all members and officers of the House and visitors to identify doormen and also enhance the decorum of the House."

But the request also comes at a time when Molloy may have to pare his payroll by about $500,000, if budget cuts under the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction measure take effect.

The request for money to pay for the doorkeeper's uniforms was referred to the House Administration's personnel and police subcommittee.

Opening lead: King of ♥

We are indebted to Jean-Paul Meyer, editor of "Le Bridgeur," for this deal. Cover the East-West hands and decide how you would tackle six clubs after the lead of the king of hearts. Trumps are 3-1.

Once South showed the strength for a high reverse with his bid of three clubs, North was slamward bound. He cue-bid his ace of hearts en route in case that card was what his partner needed for a grand slam.

Obviously, you should win the ace of hearts and draw three rounds of trumps. If diamonds are 4-3, you can claim your slam, so next you cash three high diamonds, sluffing a heart and a spade from hand. Unfortunately, West shows out on the second diamond. What now?

All you need to land your slam is to find West with one of the missing spade honors. Cash the ace of spades and lead the jack. If West does not cover, discard from dummy. East wins and returns a red card, which you ruff. Now lead the ten of spades. If West does not cover, discard from dummy to repeat the ruffing finesse, which wins. You can ruff your last spade on the table.

It's an excellent slam. You lose only if diamonds break 5-2 or worse and if East has both missing spade honors guarded at least once. The combined odds are better than 90 percent.

Youth Drug Addiction Up

COCHABAMBA, Bolivia (AP) — Drug addiction among youths has become a major concern in Bolivia, an impoverished nation that has traditionally exported the cocaine habit elsewhere.

In what Health Minister Carlos Perez calls an "alarming problem," the number of teen-aged and younger addicts in Bolivia has risen from 25,000 in 1980 to 80,000 today, nearly 5 percent of the youth population in a country of 6.4 million people.

The incidence of addiction in Bolivia's urban centers is now similar to that in New York, Los Angeles or London, says Dr. Nils Noya Tapia, who runs a private drug treatment clinic in Santa Cruz, the country's second city.

Here in Cochabamba, a farming center of 200,000 people near the coca leaf-growing region, children as young as 6 roam the streets selling "pitillos," cigarettes laced with coca paste, for the equivalent of 75 cents each.

Coca paste is made from coca leaves, chewed legally here since ancient times as a medicinal herb or a stimulant. The illegal paste is exported, most of it to Colombia, for refinement into cocaine. Bolivian paste produces about half the cocaine consumed in the United States and Western Europe.

The sale of the paste has brought Bolivian traffickers up to $450 million a year, as much as the nation's legal income from all other exports combined.

However, Brazil's late entry into paste production has glutted the market and driven the price down from $5,000 to $350 a kilogram — 2.2 pounds — in the past five years, making paste affordable to more Bolivians.

"The traffickers are now looking to the domestic market to sell their products," Noya Tapia said at his Santa Cruz clinic.

West Bank

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A bus driver received a slight eye injury from a bomb that exploded as he drove by King Solomon's pools seven miles south of Jerusalem, according to an army spokesman.

The bus, belonging to the Egged bus cooperative, was returning drivers to their homes in the occupied West Bank when the bomb blew up, said the spokesman.

Compromise Over Reforms Still Difficult In South Korean Politics

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer
SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The crackdown on dissidents who oppose South Korea's method of selecting a president underlines the paradox of a country with a history of authoritarian rule that has staged an economic miracle and developed a prosperous middle class.

The current conflict between the government of President Chun Doo-hwan and dissidents has its roots in National Assembly elections held on Feb. 12, 1985, and the emergence of the opposition New Korea Democratic Party, which surprised many and alarmed some with its second-place showing.

On the first anniversary of the elections, the party followed through on months of heated political activity by launching a campaign for revisions in the constitution the Chun government promulgated in 1980.

At the center of the campaign was a call for replacing an electoral college method of electing the president with a direct, popular vote. The opposition maintains the present system unfairly favors those in power, and is aimed at keeping it there.

Last Wednesday, the opposition began its campaign to collect as many as 10 million signatures supporting constitutional revisions. Hours after the drive began, authorities reacted by throwing heavy police lines around the headquarters of the opposition party and of the Council for the Promotion of Democracy, a dissident organization largely responsible for forming the party in time for last year's elections.

They also placed Kim Dae-jung, one of South Korea's top dissidents, under severe house arrest. A second dissident leader, Kim Young-sam, was put under house arrest for several hours at one point, and at other times was prevented from carrying out political activities.

Over the weekend, the opposition vowed it would go ahead with the petition drive, and the government vowed just as firmly the effort would be stopped. Chun and his government maintain that only the president or a majority of National Assembly members can institute moves for constitutional amendments, and argue that the petition campaign is illegal.

They have said the issue should not even be debated until after 1988, when Chun's term expires and when the Summer Olympics are to be held in Seoul.

The opposition has termed the call for a political moratorium "nonsense." South Korea has made large economic strides since the peninsula was split into a communist northern half and non-communist southern half after the end of World War II, and since the ravages of the 1950-53 Korean War.

Cities have been built and rebuilt, farmland has been developed, and express highways and trains cross the country.

In Seoul, high-rise office and apartment buildings poke into an often-polluted sky. Broad, clean thoroughfares are clogged with made-in-Korea automobiles. Sleek new subway lines serve the city of nearly 10 million people.

A middle class has been born, still seeking to improve its lot and that of its children.

The economic miracle of South Korea is repeatedly praised, not only by ruling circles in government and business, but also by many others who have benefitted.

But the same people who have their own comfortable apartments, a Korean-made color television set, and perhaps one of the late-model Korean cars, are, like almost everyone else in South Korea, subject to authoritative controls.

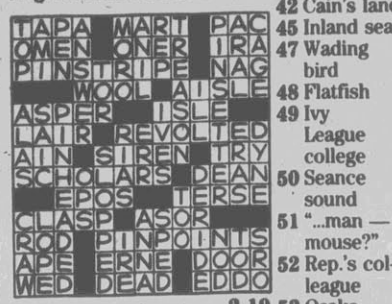

Social stability remains the watchword of government authorities. It is held to be the prime consideration to successfully bring off the Asian Games this year and the Olympics in 1988, and for standing strong against the communist regime to the north.

Dissidents, speaking in impassioned voices, declare that only democracy can bring real unity among the people and enable them to confront and deal with the north, while going ahead with the development of their own country.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, FEB. 20, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An undercurrent of resentment could take away from the otherwise good influences which prevail where both creative and pleasurable activities are concerned.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Even though promises have been broken in the past, think and act kindly and improve the situation at home.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You may have difficulty in carrying on with confidential work if you get into arguments with others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Do not get involved in an argument between an associate and a bigwig or you lose precious time in gaining personal wishes.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Plan your time carefully so that you can handle your job and can still squeeze in other interests.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get your bills paid up and wait until you have more money to spend on the pleasures you like.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Arguments between a family tie and an outsider could cause you to lose much valuable time, if you permit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Keep busy at your job and forget other activities otherwise you encounter much trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you schedule your time wisely, you can handle your business and creative affairs very well today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan how you can coordinate your wishes with family members and follow through. Don't be too extravagant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Deciding whether to get into outside business affairs or get rid of some secret anxiety is difficult.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Pals who desire to be with you could cost a pretty penny, so think before you entertain them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be willing to listen to whatever partners have to suggest since this could prove very helpful to you. Be happy.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will need to be carefully reared and have fine ethical and moral ideals inculcated very early in life so that they become firmly embedded in the subconscious, and then a successful life can be assured. There is the tendency here to want to act too hastily.

FOCUS

Will They Walk Again?

Haiti's Jean-Claude Duvalier may have fled the country, but Haitians are likely to retain their fascination with voodoo. Followers of voodoo believe in zombies, or the walking dead. The belief in zombies provided one solution to the 1918 labor shortage on Haiti's sugar plantations. Sorcerers magically revived corpses and sold them as slaves. Authorities now believe that the corpses were actually drugged into comas, buried, and then revived with other drugs.

DO YOU KNOW — What nicknames were Jean-Claude Duvalier and his father known by?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — The study of fossils is called paleontology.

Stag Party

ACOMB, England (AP) — Groom-to-be Keith Littlewood called the fire department for help after his pals put a ball and chain on his ankle during a stag party. Littlewood, 27, said his friends locked the seven-pound ball and chain on him during a party at his home.

It was meant as a joke, but no one had a key, so Littlewood called the fire department to his house at 3 a.m. Firemen removed the encumbrance with a bolt-cutter.

Boys Play Grownup Role In Uganda Guerrilla Victory

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer
KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Henry Kasule, a cheerful, undersized 14-year-old, has been waging guerrilla war for three years.

He and hundreds of other young fighters — some of them under 10, many of them orphans, and none of them seeming to have matching uniforms — played a vital combat role in the National Resistance Army's seizure of Kampala which put Yoweri Museveni in power last month.

Henry and his peers also represent a violation of the Geneva Convention, which forbids the use of soldiers under 15 years old.

And, despite their reputation for being polite and well-disciplined, the young guerrillas are a source of deep concern for experts who worry about their future.

"They've killed, they've never been socialized, they have no feeling for the wrongness of taking human life," said Cole Dodge, director of the United Nations Children's Fund, or UNICEF, office in Kampala. "We'd like to see them put straightaway into schools in their villages where they can get a good education and learn social limitations."

"They should go to school whether they want to or not," said Archbishop Yona Okoth, leader of the Protestant Church of Uganda. "Otherwise they will ruin their lives."

The National Resistance Army, which now controls all of southern Uganda and is pursuing troops of the ousted military regime into their tribal homelands in the north, defended use of the child soldiers. NRA officials said most were orphaned by violence during previous regimes and needed someone to look after them.

Museveni was asked about the child soldiers' future on Friday, two days after his inauguration as president. He replied vaguely that some would go to school and some would stay in the army.

His press secretary, Ben Kanyangyeyo, was more specific, saying virtually all of them would be enrolled in special military schools once the new government established its educational system.

"Some of them have never seen the inside of a classroom," said Kanyangyeyo, explaining why most shouldn't be sent back to hometown schools. "But they will be productive, whether as soldiers, road builders or whatever."

Most of the boys helping guard a temporary officers' quarters at the Uganda Club, once an elite gathering place for expatriates, said they wanted to go back to school.

As one small soldier did stunts on a bicycle and others rolled barefoot under trees, a 15-year-old called Kawuki said he wanted to return home in Wobulenze in the Luwero District, where some of the worst atrocities by former President Milton Obote's security forces are said to have taken place between 1981 and 1985.

Kawuki said both his parents were killed by soldiers, and he joined the NRA three years ago.

But Henry Kasule, the 14-year-old veteran with a bright smile, said he wanted to stay with the army.

Asked why he joined the NRA, he replied: "I wanted to fight for my country."

One Western aid official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he feared Museveni might want to keep the young soldiers apart from the rest of society as the "morally pure ideological front line of the NRA."

And a Western diplomat, also insisting on anonymity, said Museveni "is looking at these kids as the future of Uganda, as his Praetorian guards."

Despite the mixed views about the child soldiers' future, there is wide agreement about their fighting ability and fearlessness.

A.G. Purvis, a British contractor who watched the climactic battle for Kampala on Jan. 25 from a downtown office building, gestured to a cluster of soldiers and said: "They did a fantastic job — little boys like this."

Purvis said he saw many young boys, and some girls, in the front line of NRA fighters advancing on the last strongholds of the military regime's forces around Parliament.

"It was a constant wall of sound, a constant wall of lead," Purvis said. "Nothing could stop them."

Since the takeover of Kampala, the young soldiers have been praised for their good manners. Kampalans seem amazed by the contrast with the previous army, notorious for soldiers who drank excessively, looted homes, stole cars and harassed civilians without cause.

The NRA has discouraged drinking and smoking by the child soldiers, but many have been puffing cigarettes in Kampala, and one local businessman, who insisted that he not be identified, said he thought some other standards might break down. "These soldiers are the same kind of people as the others," he said. "It's the supervision by the officers that keeps them in line. Without that supervision, they would be drinking and probably stealing."

Dodge, on behalf of UNICEF, is pressing the NRA to think about the child soldiers' long-term prospects.

"Just because they are polite and well-disciplined doesn't mean there isn't a problem to be addressed," he said. "Are these kids the future fanatics? Will they look at northerners as the enemy?"

Children's Television Will Take On French Flavor

By MARILYN AUGUST
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Mary Lopez and her television crew trekked high into the Pyrenees to record the last masters of a whistling language. In Biarritz, they tested a visual telephone system, and they dived to an underwater lab off Toulon. These and dozens of other brief segments on recent scientific developments will be beamed into homes across France and the United States in what is the first Franco-American venture in children's television. Co-produced by FR3 and Children's Television Workshop of New York, the $3.5 million series called "3-2-1 Contact" will be broadcast in France next September. The series has been seen for four years in the United States. The magazine-style show is already seen in 32 countries in dubbed versions. However, the new series has French and American hosts working together for the first time.

"The goal of the show is to show kids how much of life has to do with science," Mary Lopez, the program's host, said in an interview. "Science is everywhere, not just in the classroom, a lab or in a text book. It's also when you go running." It is the first time Children's Television has attempted a co-production. "Just as the principles of science are universal, the joy of discovering science can cross national boundaries and linguistic barriers," said Ed Atkins, one of the program's content directors. As one of the four American hosts on the series, Miss Lopez, 25, a Barnard College graduate and actress, interviews scientists and explains discoveries in language children age 8 to 12 can understand. "It's harder than it seems. I go over the subject thoroughly beforehand, but since the person you interview isn't an actor, you never know what's going to happen," Miss Lopez said. That's not the only problem. In putting together shows, she's been kissed by a killer whale and charged by a raging bull while on camera. She managed to get out of the bull's path. One of the French hosts is David Drach, 21, a student at New York University who began his acting career at age 10 in "Les Violons du Bal," a movie about the Holocaust directed by his father, Michel Drach. The award-winning "3-2-1 Contact," shown on PBS channels, is the brainchild of Joan Ganz Cooney, president of Children's Television Workshop, the creators of "Sesame Street" and "The Electric Company."

"She is extremely aware of how necessary science is to the future of young children," said Fran Kaufman, a Children's Television spokeswoman. One segment taped in Les Eaux Bonnes, a tiny village built into a cliff in the Pyrenees, was about Joseph Carerette, who believes he is the last "whistling shepherd." Carerette told Miss Lopez that because the mountains were so steep and the valleys so deep, shepherds throughout the centuries were forced to communicate by whistling because other human sounds wouldn't carry. The whistles, varying in pitch and duration, slowly developed into a complex language of their own, she said. A shepherd could tell his family miles away when he was coming home and what kind of soup he wanted for supper. According to the beret-clad Carerette, shepherds in the French Resistance whistled messages during World War II. Whistling shepherds are a dying breed, and Carerette says that as far as he knows, he is the only one left. Now in his 60s, he told Miss Lopez that to preserve this special language a little longer, he taught it to his sister.

'Wizard Of Oz' Falters But Still Posts Best Saturday Movie Rating

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Theatrical films, big box office on television before the advent of pay-cable and video cassettes, had a renaissance last week. But "The Wizard of Oz," the most successful long-running film on TV, didn't enjoy the revival as much. "The Wizard of Oz," which has averaged a 26.4 rating since first embarking on TV's yellow brick road in 1956, had an 18.4 rating last Saturday — its worst network performance in 28 showings. Still, Judy Garland's movie classic achieved CBS' best Saturday night movie rating this season. Saturday is the lowest-rated TV night of the week. "We know Saturday night is a night when people view VCRs instead of watching network TV," said Mike Eisenberg, CBS' research director. "That tends to have a depressing effect, but we believed that 'The Wizard of Oz' is 'The Wizard of Oz,' and its magic would sustain its ratings level." The only thing magical on television now is "The Cosby Show," which ranked first again, led its entire Thursday night lineup into the Top 20 and paced NBC to the prime-time ratings victory last week. According to figures released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co., "The Cosby Show" had a 35.2 rating, leading into a one-hour episode of "Family Ties," which was second, and "Cheers," which was fifth. Then came the heavily publicized episode of "Hill Street Blues," in which Capt. Frank Furillo was shot. It ranked 20th with a 19.6 rating — its best performance in nearly two years. In the rest of the Top 10, CBS' "Murder, She Wrote" was third, CBS' "60 Minutes" was fourth, ABC's "Dynasty" sixth, ABC's movie.

STILL A COMEDIAN — Mickey Rooney gets a little help out of the cement at Mann's Chinese Theater in Hollywood Tuesday after he placed his handprints, footprints and signature in the cement for the second time in his 60-plus years in the entertainment business. His first time was on Oct. 18, 1938. (AP Laserphoto)

Transplanted Indians Find Changes In Life Difficult

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

CHISASIBI, Quebec (AP) — "You used to go and meet the boats," Abraham Bearskin, a Cree Indian, was saying. "You had things going. You could see the bay. Now, the only place people go is the commercial center."

Bearskin was talking about life before he and 2,000 other Cree Indians, with a scattering of Eskimos and whites, moved to Chisasibi, and what it is like now in the 5-year-old town, with curving streets, suburban-style homes and a shopping mall.

Home had been a 180-year-old site called Fort George, five miles away, but the old buildings there were threatened by erosion and by a giant hydroelectric power project and the community was forced to relocate.

Switching from the old way of living to the new has been difficult.

The new town is near the mouth of La Grande Riviere, which flows into James Bay, an arm of Hudson Bay, about 700 miles northwest of Montreal. But the people can't see the bay anymore.

Nearly all the adult men still trap, hunt or fish, as they did at Fort George, but when they return from the snowy scrub forests, they hang around a new shopping mall, between the department store, the branch bank, the airline office and the cafe.

Because of the move, the people have better housing and modern facilities, but they miss what 36-year-old trapper George Lameboy called "the home feeling."

"I moved reluctantly. I think everybody did," he said. "Some of us are still more or less in shock," said Bearskin, who is a member of the band council and Chisasibi's director of youth protection.

Meetings of the Cree Trappers Association are conducted entirely in the Cree language, since practically no one older than 45 speaks English or French.

The teen-age sons and grandsons of the trappers, however, favor rock-singer Ozzy Osbourne T-shirts or Oakland Raiders sweatshirts. Their school classes are in English, but they talk among themselves in Cree.

"You see the kids, they like heavy music, they wear the T-shirts of the groups," Bearskin said. "There's a confusion, an adaptation to two societies. You're exposed to things happening down south and sometimes you abuse some things or you retaliate in some way."

The school and the shopping mall show marks of vandalism, and Bearskin said alcohol and drugs are serious problems for many youths. The band council voted last year to ban alcohol in Chisasibi, but beer and liquor are smuggled in and the ban is being challenged in court.

In the multipurpose room of the modern school building, as part of an evening's entertainment for delegates to a recent Canadian Indian conference, middle-aged townfolk danced the traditional Otter Dance, then switched to Irish-style reels.

Onstage beside the fiddler and the electric guitarist, Cree elders showed how to make snowshoes and demonstrated other traditional crafts.

"We're trying to draw the good things from the new society and hold on to the traditional way of life," Bearskin told a visitor.

"The housing is better. Some people were still living in shacks. Running water and electricity — these are things we adopted," he said. "It is a nice community, but it can be depressing too. There wasn't time for transition. I think it's going to take a long time."

Black Folk Tour Set For Tarboro

TARBORO — North Carolina's traditional African-American performing arts will be showcased at Edgemcombe Technical College Auditorium on West Wilson Street in Tarboro Saturday at 8 p.m.

That's when the North Carolina Arts Council brings to town the North Carolina Black Folk Heritage Tour, a concert of spirituals, gospel songs, blues, Br'er Rabbit tales, buckdancing and breakdancing performed by black folk artists.

The concert is presented by master dance instructor Chuck Davis, a Raleigh native who opens the program with a demonstration of exuberant traditional West African dance styles performed by the African-American Dance Ensemble. Davis then explores the history of the black experience in North Carolina through story, dance and song.

Following the "roots" performance by the Africa-American Dance Ensemble, the Badgett sisters of Yanceyville will sing spirituals and jubilee gospel songs in traditional unaccompanied style.

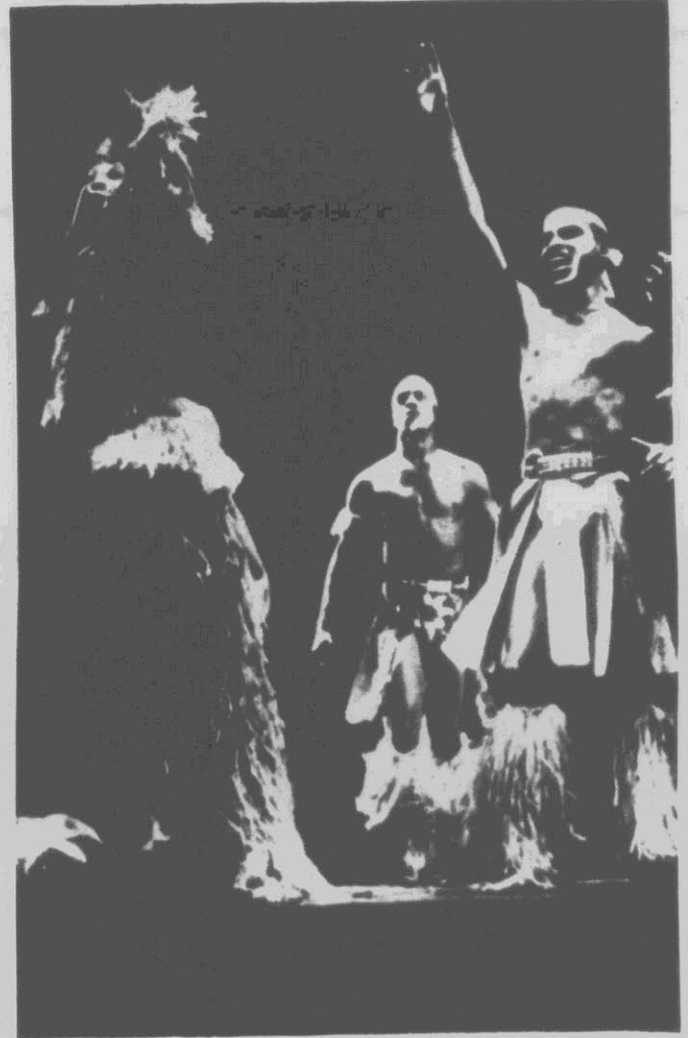

Another segment of the show highlights blues music and buckdancing styles which began to emerge in North Carolina around the turn of the century. These traditions are represented by John Holeman and Quentin Holloway, who have performed around the world in behalf of the U.S. State Department. They will be joined by folk guitarist and buckdancer Algia Mae Hinton.

Celestar Sellars of the Badgett sisters will tell a Br'er Rabbit tale to the children in the audience. Also for the younger ones, a dynamic display of the latest breakdancing routines will be performed by a group from the local community.

The concert concludes with a program of gospel songs by the Mighty Wonders of Winston-Salem.

The concert will be hosted by the Tarboro Ebonette Club and the Tarboro Arts Commission. Admission to the concert is free. Complimentary tickets can be obtained from members of the Ebonette Club or through the office of the Edgemcombe County Cultural Arts Council at 130 Bridgers St., Tarboro.
