President Says 'No Plans' To Use Force In Nicaragua

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, warmly received in his first visit to Grenada since sending invading troops there to block a communist takeover, says he has no thought of similar action in Nicaragua.

"I think it's an entirely different situation," Reagan told reporters Thursday as he posed for photographs with Sir Paul Scoon, governor general of Grenada, during a four-hour visit to the island nation. "So you're ruling out use of U.S. force in Nicaragua?" Reagan was asked.

"We never had any plans for such a thing," he answered.

Addressing an estimated crowd of 20,000 or more Grenadians at a playing field that was a command post during the 1983 invasion, Reagan indicated, however, that he plans to keep up the pressure on Nicaragua's leftist government.

"Today, in Nicaragua, we see a chain of events similar to what happened here," he told the Grenadians, who chose a democratic government after Marxist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop was murdered by fellow leftists, paving the way for the U.S. invasion.

"I will never be sorry that I made the decision to help you," said Reagan.

The president laid a green wreath, wrapped in lavender ribbon, at an oblong-shaped granite memorial to the 19 U.S. servicemen killed in the invasion.

The audience that jammed Queen's Park in St. George's, the Grenadian capital, interrupted Reagan's speech with applause more than two dozen times.

At the airport, at St. George's Medical School, at the park and along his motorcade route, Reagan was greeted with signs of thanks for the U.S. action and other assistance.

One sign said, "99 per cent of Grenadians think you saved their lives."

Another, held up by a child from an international school, said, "Room 82 thanks you."

People jammed bleacher seats at the park and stood in an adjacent field and on the brow of a nearby hill. Prime Minister Herbert Blaize said it was the biggest crowd in the history of the island, which has a population of about 90,000.

"I can't tell you how moved I have been," said Reagan, speaking as evening shadows lengthened and a freshening breeze off the ocean whipped U.S. and Grenadian flags scattered throughout the crowd.

The president planned a meeting with House Republicans on Capitol Hill today, but aides said it would deal with domestic issues, not with his bid for $100 million in assistance to rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist regime.

Negotiations Resume

Eastern's Pilots Agree To Support Strike Plan

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines pilots voted overwhelmingly to support a strike, despite resumption of contract talks with management and the carrier's threat to shut down if a strike occurs, union officials said today.

The strike authorization was approved by union and non-union pilots 3,566 to 154. The count was completed today with the tally of ballots mailed in by members of the Air Line Pilots Association, which represents 4,300 Eastern pilots.

"If the company does not reach a fair and equitable agreement, across the bargaining table with us, there will be a pilots' strike," said Larry Schulte, chairman of the Eastern ALPA Master Executive Council.

Regardless of the state of negotiations, a strike will occur automatically 12:01 a.m. Wednesday if no agreement has been reached, Schulte said.

"I think we are still far apart," he said.

Talks between Eastern and its pilots resumed Thursday under the guidance of federal mediator Robert Brown, with Eastern threatening to suspend flights and lay off thousands of employees in the event of a strike.

Eastern President Joseph Leonard, in a bulletin to managers Wednesday, said little progress was being made in negotiations and the company, which had pledged to keep flying as many routes as possible, would shut down "in the event of a strike by any of our units."

"We intended to try to continue, but with the ongoing marketplace pressures, the complexities of trying to mount a reliable operation and maintain consumer confidence, we decided it wouldn't be feasible," Eastern spokesman Jerry Cosley said Thursday.

If there is a strike, most of Eastern's 40,000 workers would be laid off, he added.

Cosley said Eastern will resume talks soon with its flight attendants, whose contract expired Jan. 20. The union representing the 6,000 flight attendants has said it will strike March 1.

Eastern recently laid off 1,010 flight attendants and cut salaries while increasing work duties for the others.

Flight attendants leader Robert Callahan said he would meet with his negotiating team to prepare for new talks. Federal Mediation Board Chairman Walter Wallace is in Miami to work with the flight attendants and management if the negotiations resume.

Eastern, $2.5 billion in debt, faces a Feb. 28 deadline from its major creditors to present a plan for profitability. The airline is seeking hundreds of millions of dollars in new wage concessions from its three major unions, including the machinists union.

School 'Benefactor' Receives New Job

The state employee who paid more than $13,700 out of her own pocket for a trip South Greenville Elementary School fifth grade students took last year to the Tidewater Virginia area began a new — and lower-paying — job today with the Department of Public Instruction in Raleigh.

Dr. Thelma Lennon, an employee of the department for 23 years, was suspended without pay from her $42,828-a-year job as head of the grants development office on Jan. 17. That action came after an investigation was started to determine why there was no money available to pay for a trip this year, Reeves McGlohon, associate state superintendent, said Thursday. But McGlohon said Dr. Lennon was to be reinstated today but would be reassigned to a drop-out-prevention job paying $36,252-a-year.

Greenville school officials were notified in October 1984 that the Atlantic Richfield Corp. had made $50,000 available to fund a fifth grade study tour of Tidewater Virginia. She later notified Greenville school officials that the funding would come through the national Institute for the Advancement of Career Education — a California-based organization of which she was a member of the board of directors.

After the Greenville school board set up accounts to handle the grant, Dr. Lennon notified school officials that all transactions would be handled through an escrow account at the State Employees' Credit Union.

Ultimately, the expenses for the trip — $13,729.93 — were paid for by Dr. Lennon with personal money orders.

A report by the state auditor's office, made available Thursday, said there never was a grant and that all expenses incurred by the South Greenville fifth grade students' trip last year were paid by Dr. Lennon from her personal funds.

State Auditor Edward Renfrow said Thursday that he did not know why Dr. Lennon had paid for the trip herself. But he suggested that after notifying Greenville school officials of the grant, "when it didn't materialize, I guess she felt an obligation."

Ex-CIA Worker Convicted As Spy Commits Suicide

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — Convicted spy Larry Wu-tai Chin committed suicide today, the U.S. Marshals Service said, two weeks after the retired CIA translator was convicted of spying for China.

Chin killed himself by placing a plastic bag over his head, said a Justice Department official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Chin was pronounced dead at 9:35 a.m. EST, said William Dempsey, a spokesman for the Marshals Service.

He was being held in the Prince William County jail pending sentencing March 17. Convicted on all 17 counts of conspiracy, espionage and tax evasion, he faced a maximum sentence of life imprisonment and fines of up to $2.5 million.

Dempsey said marshals are investigating the death in the suburban Washington jail, along with Prince William County authorities.

The Marshals Service contracts with county jails to house convicts while they are awaiting sentencing.

At his conviction Feb. 7, Chin's attorney, Jacob Stein, said his client had spied for China because "he wanted to bring these two nations together."

Chin, 63, had testified that he stole secret U.S. documents in hopes the papers would help break the ice between then-President Nixon and Chinese Premier Chou En-lai.

The charges spanned three decades. He was the first American ever convicted of spying for China.

REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

PRAISE FOR COLEMAN

I sometimes see consumer complaints in Hotline. I'd like to praise a company. My husband and I bought a Coleman "Genesis" family-sized tent about six years ago and used it extensively. When its waterproof quality seemed to wear out recently, we tried treating it with a water repellent and it didn't work. My husband then called the company in Kansas and asked for suggestions about how we could restore the waterproofing. "Just pack up the tent and send it to us — to my attention," one of their customer representatives told him.

A couple of weeks later, we received a brand new Coleman tent bigger and nicer than the first! It had been replaced free of charge. We are convinced Coleman is a company with integrity. C.T.

Gerber Checking Reports Of Glass Found In Its Baby-Food Products

By The Associated Press

Despite reports of glass fragments in Gerber baby food jars from at least eight states, company and federal officials maintain the incidents are "isolated cases" among more than a billion jars produced annually.

"There are countless numbers of these products distributed all over the world, and to have four or five cases be symptomatic of a flaw running throughout the industry would be a little difficult to justify," Emil Corwin, a U.S. Food and Drug Administration spokesman in Washington, said Thursday.

Glass fragments had been confirmed in two jars of baby food in Georgia, but may have gotten there innocently, he said. The agency was awaiting results of laboratory tests on other samples from Georgia and Florida suspected of containing glass.

Glass also was reported found by parents feeding infants in Nebraska and Washington state, and other states reporting similar cases were Maryland, Michigan, Tennessee and New York.

"The assumption is at this point, these problems arose in transit, during shipment of the stuff — the boxes were dropped here or there or something happened in the packing, unpacking and putting on the shelves, or even during bagging in the supermarket," Corwin said.

Jars broken in transit can leave fragments clinging to the outside of other jars that can be sucked into the intact jar when its vacuum seal is broken, Corwin said.

The FDA is advising consumers against buying glass containers with sticky outsides or food stains on the label that could indicate a broken jar in the shipping case, he said, adding that consumers also should listen carefully for any grating sound when opening a glass jar.

Corwin said the FDA had followed up on nine complaints in four states, but found glass only in one of the Georgia incidents, where fragments were found in two of three jars turned in by a consumer.

The jars contained different foods, he said, and checks of other samples from those lots failed to disclose any glass fragments.

Corwin said recent investigations of Gerber's home plant in Fremont, Mich., and three others found "good, state-of-the-art manufacturing systems in place." The plants are being revisited in light of the recent reports, he added.

Since midweek, stores and supermarket chains in Georgia, Tennessee and New York state have removed Gerber baby food jars from their shelves.

A Gerber spokesman said Thursday that the incidents were isolated. "We're investigating each incident on an individual basis. Our quality control people are taking a look at the evidence. As a matter of fact the FDA feels these are isolated cases, also," said Steve Poole, a spokesman for Gerber Products.

"In some cases it's proven to be case breakage. In other cases it's proven to be an inaccurate or an incomplete or, possibly, false report," he said.

Gerber last recalled of 550,000 jars of apple-plum and apple-cherry juices in October 1984, after glass fragments were found inside some of the containers bought in Rhode Island.

One of the world's largest baby food makers, Gerber produces more than 1 billion jars a year.

Children Liking Teacher Is Major Factor In Successful Teaching

By REDBOOK
A Hearst Magazine

World famous pediatrician Dr. Benjamin Spock believes your child's teacher must pass three tests to receive top grades — and the most important one is whether your child likes him or her.

"Children learn best by identifying with an adult who likes them, and one whom they like and admire," Spock wrote in his "Parenting" column in the March issue of Redbook.

"When children like a teacher it means they feel the teacher loves them and is trying to understand their individual problems. This is a major factor in successful teaching."

Spock said children can't learn if they are afraid of their teacher or of failure.

"The second sign of a good teacher," he said, "is that he or she spends most of the time spotting individuals who are stuck and helping them get unstuck rather than lecturing to the whole class."

Spock said that includes motivating youngsters, giving extra-challenging assignments to extra-bright children and less difficult work to slower ones so they don't become discouraged. Friendliness and patience are marks of a good teacher.

may respond to students who are stuck by threatening them with low marks or being left back. That is more likely to paralyze a child than stimulate him.

"The third mark of a good teacher," Spock wrote, "is the ability to encourage initiative, responsibility and creativity."

"These qualities must be cultivated in all children if they are to be ready for adult jobs that are better than humdrum or bottom-of-the-ladder."

Spock said children do not learn these things from books or lectures — only from being given the chance to practice them.

"You can teach a child to take responsibility only if you give responsibility," he said.

Parents can get some idea about whether their child's teacher fits this profile from their youngster, but Spock advised a school visit — not for half an hour but for half a day.

Be on the alert for complaints from your child about a teacher he or she finds frightening or who doesn't seem to make the work understandable.

Spock suggested listening sympathetically, without making judgments, telling the child something like, "I understand how that would upset you, being scolded in front of the whole class."

If an offer to visit the classroom does not tip the teacher off that there is a problem and that he or she might be more considerate of your child's feelings, it might be a good idea to make an appointment for a conference — not to complain but to ask how the child is doing.

"Rather than blaming the teacher," Spock advised, "you can refer to the problem in terms of the child's sensitivity. 'He worries whether he can do well enough' or 'When he can't understand something right away, he gets panicky.'"

If the child remains tense and unhappy, parents can approach the principal for help. Parents should not go in attacking the teacher — it will put the principal on the defensive. Instead, talk about the child's sensitivity and apparent slowness. The principal can read between the lines and may suggest moving the child to another class.

"If this doesn't happen and you live reasonably close to another school, public or private, a transfer may be considered," Spock wrote in Redbook. "This solution usually has the disadvantage of separating the child from the other kids in the neighborhood. Children of school age want very much to be 'regular,' so you have to balance one need against the other."

Women Find It Hard To Balance Work, Homes

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Many women today are finding it difficult to balance their professional lives with their personal lives, says Dr. Conalee Levine-Shneidman, a psychologist and expert on career development.

She said her study of 300 women across the United States showed that most, regardless of age or geographical location, reported they felt a pull between what was expected of them at work and what was expected of them at home.

"What they felt at home was that they were required to be soft and loving and nurturing. But at work, they were required to be logical, tough and hard-edged," she said.

The women declared they often found it difficult to integrate these two conflicting images, Levine-Shneidman said, speaking here at a conference, "Women and Success: a Second Look," sponsored by the National Women's Economic Alliance Foundation and the Clairol Scholarship Program.

"Some women felt they were being duplicitous," she said. "In other words, they were putting on an act, so to speak."

She pointed out that women have traditionally been raised to have more access to their emotional lives than men; that women are just now learning to have access to the logical part of their lives, which can enable them to be tough and hard-edged in business.

"Instead of enjoying the richness that this gives women, namely, that they can draw upon a broader spectrum of feelings than men in general can draw upon, they put themselves down for it," she said.

"It is not duplicitous when you are one way in the workplace and another way at home. It just simply means that you have a lot of resources that you can draw upon; you're not being a phony."

Levine-Shneidman, a former associate professor of psychology at New York University Graduate School, is currently in private practice. She is the author of the book,

"Too Smart for Her Own Good."

At the conference, awards were presented to three women who had made a change in their lives after the age of 30, and as a result had made significant contributions in their professional fields.

The "Rising Star" award winners were: Donna Epp, president of Creative Fabric Design, Deer Park, N.Y.; Janet Janson, an audit-supervisor at Coopers & Lybrand accounting firm, Columbus, Ohio; and Dr. Judith Kaur, a hematologist-oncologist at Mid-Dakota Clinic, Bismark, N.D., and an assistant professor of medicine at the University of North Dakota.

PAINTING WITH ARTHRITIS
ATLANTA (AP) — Pierre Auguste Renoir, the French Impressionist painter, was born Feb. 25, 1841, and this year marks the 145th anniversary of his birth.

Few people realize that Renoir painted some of his most important works with hands that were badly crippled with arthritis. In his later works, Renoir seemed to focus on dexterity and the use of the hands.

"Jean Renoir, the Artist's Son," painted in 1900, shows a young boy doing needlework. The year before his death in 1919, Renoir painted "Woman Tying Her Shoe."

Baby Sitters Should Be Paid Extra To Do Domestic Work

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who has baby-sat since I was 14 to earn money for college. I am reliable and really like children. Some places where I baby-sit I am expected to clean up the kitchen, do the laundry and even the ironing. I am never told that I have to do these extras—the lady just says, "After the kids are asleep, maybe you could do this or that?"

I never get paid extra for doing these things, but I always end up doing them anyway. I rarely watch television; I either do my homework or read because I want to be able to hear the kids if they wake up and need me.

If you print this, maybe it will help other sitters who have the same problem. Thank you for a whole lot of sitters.

ANYTOWN, U.S.A.

DEAR ANYTOWN: Cleaning up the kitchen and doing the laundry are domestic duties that no sitter should be expected to perform without extra pay. Sitters, stand up for your rights!

When you accept a job, it should be clearly spelled out what your duties will be.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you in the hope that this might appear in your column and educate some of your readers about Canada. I live in New Liskeard, Ontario, and every time I go to the United States, I get fed up with some of the people who think there is snow falling up here 365 days a year—that Canadians live in igloos, travel by dogsled and dress like lumberjacks. I met a girl in Alabama who thought Canada was one of the states in the United States!

We have beautiful summer weather when the snow disappears and is replaced by temperatures in the 80s or 90s. I don't know anybody up here who has ever traveled by dogsled. We dress like most Americans, and live in houses just like you do.

Why are you people so ignorant of us? The farther south I travel, the more ignorant the people are. Canadian schoolchildren learn about your country in school. Why don't your schools teach your children about us?

ROBERT S., ANNOYED CANADIAN

DEAR ROBERT: Obviously the ignoramuses you've met in the United States are confusing Alaska with Canada. We do teach our children about Canada—but apparently we're not doing a very good job of it. I hope this inspires some of our school-teachers to familiarize their students with our good neighbors to the north. They have long been our best friends.

DEAR ABBY: You told "The Woman He Pushed Aside" that unless he was hypnotized or kidnapped, he was a free agent, thus perpetuating the common myth that a person in a hypnotic trance can be made to do things against his basic nature. This is not true. If it were, a criminal could be "made" not to break the law, lazy people could be "made" to be productive, and I would be a lot richer.

HYPNOTHERAPIST

DEAR HYPNOTHERAPIST: Men and women are not by nature monogamous, they are polygamous, so a man who has

SAVORY SHRIMP — An easily and quickly made skillet dish from "Tastes of Liberty: A Celebration of Our Great Ethnic Cooking."

Celebrating Ethnic Cookery

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Ellis Island. It has, of course, played an extraordinary part in American history. During its life as a U.S. immigration station (chiefly from 1892 to 1924) more than 12 million people passed through its Great Hall and began a new life in America. Ellis Island was abandoned until, in 1965, it was designated as a National Monument and became part of the National Park Service. Recently a campaign was launched to ensure its preservation.

One of the projects whose proceeds are devoted to help accomplish this is a fascinating cookbook, "Tastes of Liberty: A Celebration of Our Great Ethnic Cooking." Chateau Ste. Michele, Washington State's pioneer wine producer, published the cookbook as a founding sponsor of The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation. Stunning color illustrations, binding, paper and type make this volume worthy of the finest cookbook collections.

The recipes are well-chosen and clearly written. Chapters, each with a worthwhile introduction, are devoted to recipes from Italy, Germany, Greece, Great Britain, Eastern Europe, Iberia, Scandinavia, France and Jewish cookery.

From the chapter on Iberia, we chose to try Gambas al Ajillo (Garlic Shrimp) and found it delicious — especially when served with crusty bread and white wine.

"Tastes of Liberty" is available for a minimum $20.00 contribution to Tastes of Liberty Cookbook, Liberty Centennial Fund, P.O. Box 4115, New York, NY, 10163.

GARLIC SHRIMP (Gambas al Ajillo)

- 2 to 4 cloves garlic, peeled and thinly sliced
- 1/2 teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
- 1 bay leaf
- 1-3rd cup olive oil
- 3/4 pound small to medium shrimp, shelled and deveined
- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 1 to 2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

Cook garlic with pepper and bay leaf in oil in large shallow skillet over medium-high heat until garlic is golden, 3 to 4 minutes. Add shrimp and cook just until they turn pink, 2 to 4 minutes. Do not overcook. Remove bay leaf. Transfer to serving dish, sprinkle with lemon juice and parsley and serve immediately.

Bad Vote

The City Council, with Mayor Les Garner casting a tie-breaking vote, has approved a resolution favoring transfer of Highway Patrol and drivers education program monies from the state Highway Fund to the General Fund.

The mayor was joined by council members Lorraine Shinn, Nancy Jenkins and Ed Carter in favoring the resolution.

They shouldn't have done that. Shifting the Highway Patrol and drivers education budgets to the General Fund no doubt would free up some funds for more highway construction, admittedly something that is badly needed. The other side of the matter, however, is that the budgets would have to come from the General Fund and that would mean $85 million would be diverted from other state programs.

North Carolina has too many needs for that to happen. Teachers' salaries are too low, prisons are overcrowded, mental health is underfinanced and there are capital improvements needs for university campuses and other phases of state government. Succinctly put, there simply is not that kind of money to be had from the state's General Fund.

Councilman Bill Hadden, in opposing the resolution, pointed out that the state surplus is dwindling each year and there will be heavy demands on the General Fund because of recent and expected cuts in federal funding.

If the state is to rob one pocket to fill another, it will accomplish nothing in meeting our total needs.

The Greenville City Council should not casually approve resolutions put before it. If those who voted favorably in this matter had thought for a moment, they would have recognized that other possible solutions for the Highway Fund's needs should be explored.

Advantages

Having a respected center of higher education in a community's backyard carries with it a number of advantages, not the least of which is its capacity for luring prominent personalities in a broad spectrum of fields to appear, speak and share their expertise and observations with audiences. Chances of author Alex Haley appearing in our area without the presence of a university are almost nil ... and an opportunity missed.

Haley had thoughts to share: thoughts born of his craft and experiences of a lifetime. They inspired reflection on the Southland and misconceptions shared by some Americans beyond its borders.

We liked his touch in commenting that, "I travel a lot, am in touch with people in Hollywood and New York. They feel Southerners are not with it when in fact we have a lot more soul, are more polite, better raised and are more sensitive than people in many areas. And the South still remains the American symbol for creative pursuit, especially writing."

Few could (or would) put it better. It also tells a listener something about Haley's qualities as well as about his roots.

Small wonder the author's presence drew an overflow audience.

Budget Principles Are Sound

WASHINGTON — President Reagan sent his 1987 budget to Capitol Hill on the morning of Feb. 5. Several of the merry morticians of the Democratic Party at once pronounced it "dead before arrival." They are wrong. This budget is very much alive. With some relatively minor adjustments, it is quite likely to be adopted before the fiscal year begins in October.

The prospect naturally alarms governors and mayors. Their federal aid would be cut by about 10 percent, from $108.8 billion in 1986 and $99 billion in 1987. The prospect distresses college students. Many of them would find it tougher to get guaranteed student loans. Substantial cuts would be made in both rural and urban housing. Families with incomes above $20,000 would have to pay for their children's hot school lunches. The president wants to abolish the Small Business Administration, to raise interest rates for REA electric cooperatives, to get rid of Amtrak, and to sell off large chunks of government property. There's some shock here for almost everyone.

But on examination, the president's budget makes good sense. It is firmly grounded in political principles that most Americans regard as sound principles. One such principle is that the national government should assume only those responsibilities that truly are national in scope. Other political responsibilities should remain with the states and the localities. Another sound principle is that people should pay for benefits that affect them individually. A third sound principle is that the federal government should leave to the private sector those functions that may efficiently be handled there.

Applying those principles, the president recommends an end to grants-in-aid for local sewer and water systems. Clearly these are not "national responsibilities." They are local responsibilities. He proposes that people who visit national parks pay higher fees for their recreation. What's wrong with that? He asks Congress to sell the government's oil production facilities at Teapot Dome. The government has no business in the oil business.

When the budget figures on social services became known, a terrible howl arose that the president was grinding the faces of the poor. No cuts are proposed in benefit levels for veterans' pensions, food stamps, Supplemental Security Income, or Aid to Families with Dependent Children. Medicaid grants to the states would be cut by $1 billion, but nothing prevents the states from replacing the federal money with their own money. The federal government still would be providing nearly $26 billion to finance Medicaid for 23.6 million poor Americans.

The president has proposed spending roughly $282 billion on national defense. Most of the howling is directed toward that apparently fat target. The theme is, "Don't cut us, cut defense." We will be hearing that refrain for the next eight months. The defense figures ought to be kept in perspective. In constant dollars, unaffected by inflation, the defense budget would go up by less than $6 billion over 1986, only $10 billion over 1985. These are not excessive increases.

Yes, Congress will make changes — plenty of changes — in the president's budget. But if the target of a $144 billion deficit is to be preserved — the target established by Congress last December — most of the president's recommendations will have to be accepted. The relative percentages within the budget will not be greatly altered. I don't expect Congress to sell off the Bonneville Power Authority — that's asking a bit much — but wait and see: This "dead on arrival" budget, in its key provisions, will be kicking up its heels when the autumn leaves begin to fall.

— Paul T. O'Connor —

Changes That Count

RALEIGH — A proposed change in North Carolina's lobbying laws may have spared a Cary town councilman from an embarrassing mistake.

Councilman Chuck Montgomery was considering a run for the seat in the state House being vacated by Rep. Ray Sparrow, D-Wake, who is running for the state Senate.

Montgomery first talked over the idea with law partner Al Adams of Raleigh, a lobbyist at the General Assembly and formerly a House member. Adams warned Montgomery that his election to the House could prove costly to the law firm.

A proposal has come out of the assembly's Study Commission on Legislative Ethics that would bar the business partners of legislators from lobbying in the General Assembly. If Montgomery won, then Adams and other members of the large law firm would be barred from lobbying.

Adams said the financial loss would be substantial.

Montgomery said that prospect "just made it too complicated to work out" and he dropped the idea of running for the House.

Good thing he did, too, because had he filed he would have been in a real bind.

Montgomery moved last summer and thought that when he did so he moved into Sparrow's district. He hadn't. He was still in another district represented by Rep. Betty Wiser, D-Wake, whom Montgomery and Adams have long supported.

Montgomery says the realization that he lived in the wrong district made the question of the proposed new lobbying law a lot easier to take. And he says he thinks the lobbying law is a good idea. "That bill will probably prohibit me from (serving in the Legislature). But I think it's a good bill. You can't be on both sides of the street."

Nonetheless, next time he moves, the councilman will probably check more closely to find out which side of the street the House district line runs down.

Legislators were discussing recent contradictory legal precedents in the insurance field when this bit of truth slipped from the mouth of Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake:

"If the Supreme Court were consistent, half of us lawyers would be out of business."

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, a lawyer, must be wondering how well he'll do the next time he argues a case before Supreme Court Judge Giles Clark.

The two are members of the N.C. Courts Commission. During a recent meeting, it was noted that Wicker's wife Alisa is expecting twins.

Parks Helms, committee chairman, said, "I don't know if we can stand two more Wickers." That was tough enough ribbing for the young lawmaker. Then Clark chimed in, "It'll be better than having two more of him."

Here's some kind of slip of the tongue.

Rep. Donald Dawkins, D-Richmond, was questioning Ann Frazier of Roanoke Rapids, a conservative opponent to public school sex education programs, at a recent legislative hearing.

During the questioning, Dawkins mistakenly addressed Mrs. Frazier as "Mrs. Christian."

No one seemed to notice.

Public Forum

To the editor: The citizens of Greenville should be proud that the mayor and City Council took a stand to support the strengthening of our Highway Fund for financing highway construction and maintenance.

Over the years, the General Assembly has funded the Highway Patrol and Driver Education Program from the Highway Fund rather than the General Fund. This year alone, $85 million will be drained from gasoline tax revenues to support these programs with no relation to highway maintenance and construction. Eighty-five million dollars can go a long way. For example, the new U.S. 264 from Wilson to Greenville, exclusive of the Wilson and northwest Greenville bypasses, will cost approximately $78.9 million.

The General Fund is much better equipped to handle the Highway Patrol and Driver Education budgets. This year, the General Fund is growing at an annual rate of approximately 9 percent, which translates into an expected surplus of $290 million. To the contrary, Highway Fund revenues are growing at an annual rate of just over 1 percent. The shift of the Highway Patrol budget and Driver Education Program budgets to the General Fund can be met with this large surplus and not affect any current appropriation for education or other programs.

For the long term, a gasoline tax increase may be necessary. But so long as alternatives exist to increasing taxes, they should be explored and given priority. The resolution adopted by the city of Greenville demonstrates great strength and courage at a time when our Highway Fund needs help. The citizens of Greenville should be grateful and proud. I am.

who own homes dropped to a 17-year low, 63.9 percent, in 1985. According to the League of U.S. Savings Institutions, the average contract mortgage interest rate declined to 11.1 percent last year, down from 12.2 percent in 1983. During the same period, however, the median price of all homes nationally rose from $65,000 to $75,000.

Through Dec. 31, 1985, the number of people diagnosed as having acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) approached 16,000, and the U.S. Public Health Service predicts that the number will double in 1986. Fittingly, President Reagan and the first lady have publicly thrust AIDS to the forefront of the government's health concerns. Yet in the administration's 1987 budget proposal, the funding for AIDS-related research would drop to $213 million, from $244 million.

Labor Secretary Bill Brock said recently that the Jobs Corps had "accomplished a great deal in helping some of our most severely disadvantaged young men and women rise above poverty." Unfortunately, that commendation is not reflected in the Reagan administration's 1987 budget proposal, which would — beginning this year — shut down all but the best centers due to "the very high costs (of the program) per enrollee."

A majority of Americans believe that their tap water is sufficiently contaminated to warrant major efforts to clean it up, even if that would mean higher monthly water rates. Among the other findings of a recent survey by the American Water Works Association Research Foundation was that 13 million households, or 15.4 percent of all public utility customers, now use bottled water.

It's a well-known fact that women workers earn about 60 cents for every dollar working men take in. Yet this maxim holds true even in a field where one might expect the wage rate to be less sex-biased: science and engineering. The National Science Foundation reports that the increased number of women receiving degrees has not brought about a complementary rise in employment. The Foundation said that salaries received by women scientists and engineers averaged about 71 percent of those earned by their male counterparts.

Former senator George McGovern (D-S.D.) is said to be leaving Washington to become a college president. However, he won't be wandering too far; the school, St. John's College, is situated in nearby Annapolis, Md.

Several congressmen recently enjoyed the national spotlight as partial victors in a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget act. Yet behind the scenes was one Ralph Nader, who came up with the idea for the suit in the first place.

Strength For Today

Few people realize the relationship existing between religion and democracy. It was when men, through a reaffirmation of their religious beliefs, came to realize their true value as men that they began to resent the tyranny of kings and nobles.

The outcome of this historical development is that we can keep democracy only by preserving intact the religious devotion out of which it arose. Just as soon as the spiritual life of a nation begins to decline, then all sorts of adverse political conditions begin to make their appearance.

Humanity is more confused today than it has been for centuries, and this confusion comes not from political causes but from spiritual causes.

Vital religious faith and healthy political life go together. The latter is the outgrowth of the former.

Study Shows Workplace Fitness Programs Make Happier Workers

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — On-the-job fitness programs that reward participants would get more Americans into shape and feeling better, with a lower risk of heart attack, researchers said in a new study published today.

Such a program was offered to 2,600 employees at four companies, and almost one-third of the men and one-fifth of the women who didn't ordinarily exercise began working out within two years, the study found.

"The changes we observed in exercise and fitness were not limited to any particular group. ... This was not a bunch of white-collar executives taking up marathon running," said researcher Steven N. Blair of the Institute of Aerobics Research in Dallas.

"The work site may be a very effective place to encourage widespread exercise since most adults are employed outside the home," the researchers said in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The four Johnson & Johnson companies offering the program began with an annual health screening. It included questions about health habits and measured blood pressure, blood-fat levels, body fat, height, weight, and capacity for physical work or aerobic power, the researchers said.

The health screening was offered on company time at no expense to employees, and exercise facilities and programs also were offered free on or near the workplace. Employees participated on their own time, researchers said.

The exercise program developed by the Brunswick, N.J.-based Johnson & Johnson is part of a larger plan called "Live for Life," the researchers said. That plan helps workers stop smoking, control weight, manage stress, learn about nutrition and detect high blood pressure.

"They (company officials) tried to change the health culture through awareness, motivation, incentives for each mile that you run, each aerobic dance class that you attend," Blair said.

Participants were compared with 1,700 employees at three other Johnson & Johnson companies that offered only the annual health screening.

"Daily energy expenditure in vigorous activity increased 104 percent among employees at companies offering the health-promotion program (including exercise), compared with a 33 percent increase among employees at comparison companies," the researchers reported.

While almost 20 percent of women and 30 percent of men in health-promotion companies began regular vigorous exercise, only 7 percent and 19 percent, respectively, did so in the health-screen-only companies, the researchers found.

"To get the amount of change that we saw on the total population, I think, was a striking finding," Blair said in a telephone interview. "And I'm not bragging on myself. Johnson & Johnson designed the program. All I did was analyze the data."

Charles Steals Show In Texas

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Prince Charles, a special guest at Texas' 150th birthday party, was treated like a king — for a day. In turn, he stole Texans' hearts.

The prince came to the capital city Thursday bearing a gift to the state's year-long celebration of its independence from Mexico.

It was his third stop on a Texas trip that already had taken him to Dallas and Houston and wound up today in San Antonio.

In a ceremony on the Capitol steps, which shows the workmanship of Scottish stonemasons, Prince Charles presented Gov. Mark White a picture of the old Texas Legation on St. James Street in London.

"I do wish you a very, very happy birthday, indeed. And hope that most of you live to see the next 150 years," Prince Charles told a crowd of more than 3,000, some of whom had waited for six hours to see the heir to the British throne.

But considering the gifts the 37-year-old prince received, one would think it was his birthday.

On arrival at Bergstrom Air Force Base, Charles was presented three Western-style hats. One, a size too large, dropped to his ears. Two were for his young sons.

At the pink-granite Capitol, the prince received a 1½-foot wooden gavel, which he jokingly said could be put to good use "for maintaining discipline in the home," as well as a Texas flag, an 1838 map of Texas printed in London and a collection of limited edition replicas of 10 flags of the Republic of Texas.

Texas was a republic before it became a state in 1845.

Charles said the United Kingdom "was one of the first nations, believe it or not, to recognize the newly independent state of Texas."

White said, "Although Great Britain's flag never flew over the state of Texas, nor was it one of those six that did, you can tell that your presence here today has captured the hearts of all Texans, your highness, and we're delighted to have you."

Cynthia Bernal, a secretary who had driven 65 miles to see the prince said, "When other people want to see Bruce Springsteen or Michael Jackson, I don't bother. For the prince, I bother."

At night, Charles used a three-foot sword to cut the world's largest cake, which weighed 45 tons and was large enough to feed 300,000 people.

He joined Lady Bird Johnson, widow of President Lyndon B. Johnson, at a $5,000-a-couple dinner, with the proceeds going to restore the Capitol, and attended a concert by Texas entertainers, including country and western singer Willie Nelson.

Nelson, wearing a T-shirt and black denim jacket, stood in a receiving line next to former CBS newsman Walter Cronkite, and said Charles told him he had once met Johnny Cash.

"He's a nice guy," Nelson said of the prince. "I don't envy him having to do the socializing he has to do."

Two Killed

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Two people were killed in the crash of their Cessna 152 airplane early today in woods near a Wilkesboro residential area, a Wilkes County dispatcher said.

The Cessna 152 airplane went down about 12:50 a.m. in woods near the Forest Hills subdivision, according to Claudia Stamey, a dispatcher for the Wilkes County Communications Center. Authorities found the wreckage about 2 a.m.

Wilkesboro Police Chief Gary Parsons said the plane apparently had engine problems just after taking off from the Wilkes County Airport.

Ms. Stamey said no survivors were reported. She also said there was no fire.

Condor Born

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The director of the Chapultepec Zoo said a day-old Andean condor was in good condition and had been given its first food.

The young female condor weighed about 4 pounds, 4 ounces when it was born Wednesday and measured just under five inches, said Maria Elena Hoyos, the zoo director.

Can Workers' Strike Spreads

PITTSBURGH (AP) — No talks are scheduled in the strike by 15,450 members of the United Steelworkers against five of the largest metal can makers in the United States and Canada, a union spokesman says.

About 13,600 workers struck four U.S. companies Monday morning, and 1,850 workers walked out against Continental Can of Canada Ltd. at 12:01 a.m. Thursday following the breakdown of bargaining in Hollywood, Fla.

The U.S. companies are Continental Inc. of Stamford, Conn. with 6,000 union employees; American Can Co. of Greenwich, Conn., with 4,500 employees; National Can Corp. of Chicago with 2,500 employees; and Crown Cork & Seal Co. of Philadelphia with 600 employees.

Dick Fontana, spokesman for the Pittsburgh-based USW, said Thursday that union officials remained willing to resume bargaining at any time, but no talks were scheduled. The companies have refused comment.

Wages and benefits are central issues in talks with all five companies.

Hourly pay ranges from $11 to $16 in addition to benefits worth $9 to $14 per hour. Union officials said the best offer from any of the companies was National's proposal to substitute a $400 year-end bonus for any increase in the hourly rate.

Crumbling Levee Floods Two California Towns

By MARTIN STEINBERG
Associated Press Writer
Rescuers in helicopters worked feverishly today to lift to safety the remaining residents of two northern California towns flooded by a wall of water released when a levee unexpectedly crumbled, forcing 21,000 people to flee, many in panic.
Crews dumped truckloads of huge rocks today into the levee near the confluence of the Yuba and Feather rivers, which already had receded several feet since the breach occurred about 6 p.m. PST Thursday. It was the second levee to give way Thursday under the weight of nine days of rain.

Elsewhere in the West, cleanups were under way in the wake of waves of Pacific storms that killed at least 17 people, flooded thousands of acres and homes and set off hundreds of avalanches and mudslides. Preliminary estimates put the damage in California, Nevada and Utah near $100 million, and officials estimated that 20 percent of Napa County's vineyards were damaged.

About 33,000 people have had to flee their homes, including the 12,000 in Linda, Calif., and 9,000 in nearby Olivehurst evacuated Thursday.

A half-dozen police and National Guard helicopters plucked people from rooftops in Linda, whose residents were taken to five shelters within two hours of the breach, said Bill Helms of the state Flood Control Center in Sacramento.

Residents screamed, tapped pans and waved flashlights to attract the airborne rescuers "to come and get them from their rooftops," said David Gordon Hall of Sacramento radio station KFBK, who was in Linda. A 40-foot breach grew to about 100 feet by this morning, said Naser Bateni, supervisor of flood control at the state Department of Water Resources. The breach was a surprise because the Yuba River was 5½ feet below flood stage and receding when the levee crumbled, said Bateni.

"The police could not set up guidelines quick enough at the different corners on which way to go to get away from there, so people were just going in circles, turning around going in other directions, trying to get out of there," said Marysville resident Jim Leary, who was in the Peach Tree Mall in Linda when the levee crumbled, releasing a 3- to 4-foot-high wall of water that covered cars in a low-lying parking lot.

Crews and volunteers also struggled today to reinforce other Sacramento-San Joaquin river delta levees like the one along the Mokelumne River that collapsed Thursday morning, flooding Thornton. More than 1,300 residents were evacuated Tuesday by officials anticipating the danger.

After the levee near Thornton broke, floodwaters rushed through houses and a cannery, causing about $5 million in damage, officials said.

The rains, meanwhile, continued to ease today, and the forecast called for showers tonight in extreme northern California. As the earlier storms moved east, they brought snow and freezing rain to the nation's mid-section.

Damage estimates for Nevada and Utah were $15 million and $3.3 million, respectively. Butte County, Calif., reported damage of $13 million.

In nearby Napa County, officials reported more than $60 million in damage, including 250 homes destroyed and 2,500 damaged. Deputy county administrator Bob Sorsen said 20 percent of the vineyards were damaged.

States of emergency were in effect in 29 counties in California and four each in Utah and Nevada.

About 50,000 households or businesses in northwest Nevada remained without heat after the sur-ing Truckee River ruptured a natural gas pipeline.

"It looked like a great hand reached in and pulled it out," Southwest Gas Corp. spokesman Dante Pistone said of the twisted pipe that once lay buried 20 feet beneath the river east of Reno. "The force of the water must have been incredible."

The outage also forced South Lake Tahoe, which is heavily dependent on tourism, to urge visitors to stay away, spokeswoman Joan Phillippe said.

The California Highway Patrol began to convoy stranded travelers over Interstate 80 on Thursday, slowly restoring the main artery between northern Nevada and northern California, authorities said.

Hundreds of mudslides and avalanches — 540 in Colorado alone by Thursday, said the Colorado Avalanche Information Center — blocked highways.

In Utah, creeks were receding but officials were watching an earthen dam with a 40-foot crack near Peterson in Morgan County. Sheriff Bert Holbrook said some homes had been evacuated for the night as a precaution.

Since Feb. 11, 24.53 inches of rain has been measured in Kentfield, north of San Francisco. On Mammoth Mountain in east-central California, there was a total of 14½ feet of snow Thursday.

Nine weather-related deaths were reported in California since the storms hit, three in Utah, two Nevada and one each in Wyoming, Oregon and British Columbia. Three people in California were listed as missing.

Flooded

The tops of three homes peek above the waterline after a levee broke on the Mokelumne River in California Thursday, flooding the town of Thornton. More than 20,000 people were forced to flee their homes after the water burst through the levee. (AP Laserphoto)

Analysts Say Court Helps Texaco

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court decision has strengthened the bargaining position of Texaco Inc. in its multibillion-dollar legal battle with Pennzoil Co. over the acquisition of Getty Oil Co., industry analysts said.

But the chairman of Pennzoil said he disagrees with that assessment, suggesting that he is willing to either negotiate or go back to court and let the chips fall where they may.

A three-judge panel of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit ruled Thursday that Texaco would not have to post a $12 billion bond while appealing a Texas court verdict that Texaco improperly interfered with a merger agreement between Pennzoil and Getty.

In upholding an earlier ruling by a federal judge, the panel said the $1 billion bond ordered by the judge in White Plains, N.Y., was sufficient, and that Pennzoil could not attach liens to Texaco property while Texaco goes through the appeals process.

At its White Plains headquarters, Texaco issued a statement saying it was pleased by the appeals court decision.

It "confirms Texaco's ability to appeal the judgment of the Texas State District Court through the Texas appellate courts without the burden of an oppressive bond and liens," said John K. McKinley, the company's chairman and chief executive officer.

In Houston, Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke told The Associated Press that he joined McKinley in being delighted that the case would move forward through the Texas courts.

On Wall Street, Texaco closed up ¼ at 29¼. Pennzoil closed up 1½ at 57½.

Analysts said the court's action put Texaco in a stronger bargaining position, should negotiations on an out-of-court settlement resume. They noted that although Pennzoil had the upper hand in settlement talks while the bond requirement was in force, Texaco might be able to make the case drag on for months or years if freed of the bond.

"It means that Texaco is relieved of the kind of blackmail pressure that the $12 billion bond represents," said Bruce Lazier, an analyst with Prescott, Ball & Turben Inc.

"Without that sword hanging over their heads, they're free to go ahead with the appeals process and negotiate with Pennzoil, knowing that they're not going to have to put themselves in jeopardy."

But to prevent such stalling, the appeals court told Texaco to "promptly and diligently prosecute its appeal" in the Texas courts.

"This is what we'd like to see," said Liedtke.

On Nov. 19, a Houston jury ruled that Texaco had wrongly interfered with a merger agreement between Pennzoil and Getty Oil Co. and then acquired Getty itself. The jury awarded Pennzoil $10.53 billion in damages.

Texas State Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. affirmed the award in December, adding $600 million in interest and saying more interest would accumulate at the rate of 10 percent annually.

In a federal suit filed Dec. 13 in U.S. District Court in White Plains seeking to bar Pennzoil from attaching liens on Texaco assets, Texaco said that because it could not afford to post a $12 billion bond required under Texas state law it would be denied its constitutional right to appeal the adverse verdict.

Border Guards Increase Arrests Of Illegal Aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of illegal aliens being captured along the border with Mexico is running 43 percent ahead of last year, says the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The agency, trying to cope with the greatest surge in history of people flooding across the Southern U.S. border, believes the influx is due mainly to economic problems in Mexico and Central America, INS commissioner Alan C. Nelson told a news conference Thursday.

The increase has led the INS to raise by 200,000 — to 1.8 million — its estimate of the number of illegal aliens who will be taken into custody nationwide in the 1986 fiscal year. About 95 percent of the aliens are caught along the Southern border. Last year, 1.2 million illegal aliens were captured.

The soaring level of apprehensions is due in part to the recent addition of 1,000 agents on the U.S.-Mexico border, increasing the size of the patrol force along the 2,000-mile boundary by one-third.

In January alone there were 53 percent more illegal aliens apprehended than a year earlier. Border patrols last month took into custody nearly 131,500 illegal aliens along the border between the two countries. Apprehensions from October through January were up 43 percent from the comparable period a year ago.

"Combined with these added resources, we are seeing the greatest surge of people in history across our Southern border," said Nelson.

The commissioner urged Congress to pass immigration reform legislation this year.

"The best deterrent to illegal immigration is to remove the attraction of easy-to-obtain jobs," he said.

Pending immigration legislation would include stiff sanctions against employers who have illegal aliens working for them.

The United States is developing better relations with the Mexican government in dealing with the issue, said Nelson. The INS also is working with states to identify ineligible aliens applying for unemployment compensation, food stamps and low-income housing, an effort that could save $3 billion a year, said Nelson.

The level of drug seizures by border patrols has risen along with the number of apprehensions.

Some $42 million worth of illegal narcotics were confiscated by border patrols in fiscal year 1984, a figure which tripled last year and is expected to hit $150 million this year.

The number of apprehensions almost certainly understates the illegal immigration, INS officials said.

In the 85,000-square-mile McAllen, Texas, sector patrolled by 230 agents, an estimated two illegal aliens escape for each one taken into custody, Silvestre Reyes, chief border patrol agent in the area, told the news conference.

Compared to past years, more families, including women and children, and increasing numbers of Central Americans as well as Mexicans are trying to cross the border, INS officials said.

The number of violent attacks against border patrol agents and illegal aliens has increased recently. The aliens have become prey to border bandits working from Mexican border cities.

Congress Gets $4.4 Billion Plan To Secure Embassies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, conceding America's embassies are vulnerable to "the current security and terrorist problems" overseas, has sent Congress a $4.4 billion plan to make the installations safer with improvements ranging from walls to entirely new buildings.

The five-year program described Thursday would also replace many local employees with Americans at the embassies in Moscow and eastern Europe in an attempt to halt espionage.

The plan would implement the recommendations of a panel that examined security following the disastrous 1983 bombings of two U.S. posts in Beirut.

The first attack by a suicide car bomber destroyed the embassy and killed 49 persons. Six months later, a similar suicide strike at the U.S.

Marine barracks in Beirut killed 241 American servicemen.

Ronald Spiers, undersecretary of state for management, told a House subcommittee Thursday the plan involves spending $700 million in the current fiscal year and $1.4 billion in fiscal 1987, which begins Oct. 1.

Although that would be a large new expenditure at a time when Congress is trying to cut the budget and reduce federal deficits, the plan has won early congressional support.

Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs International Operations subcommittee, told Spiers, "We're concerned about moving forward as quickly as possible. This package is critical."

But Mica warned that "we had better not find a single cent in her that is not necessary for security."

Spiers said that "the United States has always built handsome and accessible embassies and consulates abroad. Our object was to be easily accessible — to demonstrate to other peoples the openness of our society and the hand of friendship we extend to all."

But "the current security and terrorist problems have left those same buildings vulnerable," he said, adding that "our challenge is to strengthen our security against the new dangers so that we can maintain our tradition of openness and accessibility."

The panel that reviewed embassy security proposed the construction of 62 diplomatic missions overseas and the renovation of 40 to 50 others.

In addition to constructing new buildings, said Spiers, the State Department is creating a new office, the Bureau of Diplomatic Security, to coordinate protection efforts.

Of the 91 separate proposals made by the review panel, 45 have already been completed, work on 20 more is under way, and the rest have to wait until Congress passes the proposed legislation, Spiers said.

The State Department is hiring 300 new security agents this year and has improved anti-terrorist training for embassy guards and agents, he said. In addition, more Marines have been added to some posts. Marine guards and civilian security agents are used to guard embassies.

The size of the armored vehicle fleet has been doubled and special anti-terrorist training teams have been sent to "high-threat posts," he said.

Among the new building standards proposed by the review panel and adopted by the State Department, said Spiers, are:

—A 100-foot setback from the street, which would give guards more time to react to car bombers. "Many posts do not meet these standards; thus a new building program is needed," said Spiers.

—Not using buildings which front on busy streets, which have large glass facades, or that share space with other organizations. "All this is clearly and generally undesirable and now simply unacceptable in a great many situations," he said.

The State Department is also beginning to use Americans at the embassies in Moscow and East Europe instead of a "substantial number of local employees."

The increased use of Americans at embassies in communist nations has been called for by a number of lawmakers in the wake of the recent spy scandals.

The Soviets normally use only Soviet citizens to work at their diplomatic offices in the United States and other western nations.

Beach Area Sets Curbs On Students

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Students flocking here for spring break fun and sun this year will also find several new restrictions intended to slow the pace of their six-week party, says Deputy Police Chief Joe Gerwens.

A recently passed ordinance forbids drinking alcoholic beverages in public and a month-old Broward County ordinance bans drinking in cars.

Pedestrians and motorists have been separated along the beachfront by a temporary 2,500-foot-long barrier on State Road A1A, giving pedestrians a full lane of the road to walk in, Gerwens said.

The city has also banned recreational vehicles from public parking near the beach area, said John W. Schlegel Jr., assistant director of Planning and Community Development.

"They were living in them, partying in them and pulling the sanitary plugs anywhere and anytime," Schlegel said.

This also is the first spring break during which the city has had to enforce a new 21-year-old drinking age, Gerwens said. As alternatives to drinking and rowdiness, the city is sponsoring a student olympics and carnival.

In Daytona Beach, a city board approved a plan by hotel owners to seal off balconies during spring break.

The Daytona Beach Board of Adjustments and Appeals on Wednesday granted Chuck and Jack Penrod a variance from a building code that requires a certain amount of natural ventilation in rooms where people sleep.

Chuck Penrod had said he plans to bolt shut doors and windows leading to the balconies of The Plaza of Daytona Beach to prevent students from falling. Balconies will be sealed from Saturday until mid-April.

Pound Animals

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The state Senate voted overwhelmingly to stop the city of Baltimore from selling unwanted pound animals to hospitals for research, rejecting claims such a move would impair medical experiments beneficial to humans.

Baltimore sold 267 pound animals last year at $10 apiece for use in medical experiments, said Stone.

Italian Official Wounded In Terrorist Attack

ROME (AP) — Terrorists shot and wounded an aide to Premier Bettino Craxi today as he stopped to buy a newspaper on his way to work, police said.

Police said the aide's bodyguard, who was driving him to work, immediately fired back at the four assailants, who approached the car on motor scooters. The bodyguard killed one of them, a woman, and authorities were hunting for the three others. They said they believed the bodyguard also had wounded one of the attackers.

Police said 42-year-old Antonio Da Empoli, a counselor in charge of budget and economic planning in Craxi's office, was attacked shortly after 9 a.m. outside his home near the Foreign Ministry in northern Rome. Doctors at Villa San Pietro Hospital said Da Empoli was wounded in the right elbow and in a leg, and would require a lengthy hospital stay.

Police said a leaflet found on the spot was signed "Fighting Communists Coalition" — a previously unknown group. The ANSA news agency quoted police as saying they believe the group is linked to the leftist Red Brigades terrorist organization.

Italian news agencies quoted police officials as saying two men and two women riding motor scooters drove up to Da Empoli's car as it approached a newsstand where he normally buys newspapers, and opened up with pistols and a sub-machine gun.

They then fled on the scooters, and police said one of the scooters was found several blocks away.

ANSA and the AGI news agency quoted police as saying they had retrieved a pistol and a submachine gun apparently used by the attackers. AGI also said police were questioning two young men who were picked up several miles away shortly after the shooting.

The attack came 11 days after terrorists shot and killed Lando Conti, a former mayor of Florence. The murder was later claimed by the Red Brigades, a group responsible for many terrorist attacks in the 1970s. On Thursday, Italy's interior minister, Oscar Luigi Scalfaro, warned of signs of an upsurge in terrorism, both in Italy and abroad. Scalfaro, after visiting Da Empoli at the hospital, immediately went to Craxi's office to report on the attack, the premier's office said.

Iran Says Iraq Downed Airliner

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A personal representative of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and six members of Iran's parliament were among at least 46 people killed when an Iraqi jet shot down an Iranian plane, Iran said.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said a civilian airliner was shot down Thursday while on a domestic flight from Tehran to the southern Iranian city of Ahvaz.

Iraq on Thursday denied the Iranian report that a civilian plane had been shot down, saying it confined its attacks to military targets.

Today, a Paris-based Iranian underground group, the Mujahedeen Khalq, said the downed aircraft was a military transport and that 46 people were killed.

The Mujahedeen statement, which was telexed to The Associated Press bureau in Nicosia, Cyprus, said the plane was a Fokker Friendship military transport, registration number 5-818, belonging to the light transport wing of the Iranian air force based at Tehran's Doshan Tabeh airbase.

The group said its information came from "Iranian armed forces personnel supporting the peoples Mujahedeen."

Rajaie Khorassani, Iran's ambassador to the United Nations, said in New York on Thursday there had been 46 people aboard the downed craft, in addition to the crew, and that all were killed.

IRNA said the victims included

Hojatoleslam Fadhlollah Mahallati, representative to the Revolutionary Guard Corps for Khomeini, Iran's spiritual leader.

In a statement released by IRNA, Iran's foreign ministry denounced the action as an "inhuman and criminal act."

The plane was carrying passengers to visit "the latest victories of the Islamic combatants," and came down 15 miles north of Ahvaz, IRNA reported.

Aviation sources in the Persian Gulf area, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the plane had picked up injured servicemen from Ahvaz before it was shot down.

IRNA said several members of the Majlis, Iran's parliament, were on the plane and that Iraqi rulers had "added a new page to the criminal file ... of violating international conventions" with the attack.

IRNA identified the parliament members killed on the plane as Mohammad Allamaie, Nouredin Rahimi, Musavi Damghani, Abolqassem Razzaqi, Mehdi Yaqoubi and Gholamreza Soltani.

Tehran radio, monitored in Nicosia, said today that five Iraqi warplanes had been shot down, raising to 50 the total number of Iraqi planes it claims to have shot down since the beginning of the Iranian offensive Feb. 9. The two countries have been at war since September 1980.

Israelis Resume Shelling Village

SRIFA, Lebanon (AP) — The Israeli tanks that pounded Srifa during a four-hour fight with Moslem guerrillas reportedly returned to action today around this southern Lebanese village that Israel says is a stronghold of radical Shiite Muslims.

Lebanon state radio said the Israelis, on the fifth day of a search for two soldiers captured Monday, hit Srifa for a second day today, and also attacked a cluster of surrounding Shiite hamlets.

The village became the focal point of the Israeli military sweep on Thursday, when Shiite guerrillas staged an ambush.

Israel's military command said one of the members of its raiding forces in southern Lebanon had been killed in the fighting Thursday, along with eight guerrillas. State-owned Beirut radio said 20 Israeli soldiers had been killed or wounded, but there was no confirmation.

The Israeli sweep into southern Lebanon, the biggest since the Jewish state withdrew most of its forces in June following three years of occupation, was mounted after the two Israeli soldiers were seized in the border "security zone" inside Lebanon.

An organization calling itself the Islamic Resistance Front claimed it had the soldiers, and an anonymous telephone caller told a Beirut newspaper that it killed one of them Wednesday because the Israelis ignored a demand to withdraw. He said a photograph of the victim would be released the next day, but none turned up.

The battle around Srifa was the first major clash between Shiite guerrillas and the Israelis since Monday. Three Israeli helicopter gunships circled over the town, 15 miles north of the border and 13 east of Tyre, apparently directing tank fire between strafing passes over olive groves.

Dozens of young Shiites wearing black neckscarves fired rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns at the strafing helicopters, but missed.

Most of the Israeli tank fire appeared aimed at 30 houses on the village's northeast flank, from which Shiite fighters had fired grenades and machine guns at Israeli units to the northeast.

Chinese Pilot Defects To South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Defense Ministry said a Chinese air force MiG-19 jetfighter landed at a South Korean air base today under the escort of South Korean warplanes, and government radio said the pilot had defected.

Detection of the aircraft, and of two North Korean fighters heading south at the same time, had led officials to sound an air raid warning in Seoul, the South Korean capital.

Authorities canceled the air raid warning about 13 minutes later when the state-run radio network KBS said that a Chinese plane had defected.

The alarm had said "an air raid by enemy aircraft was expected" in the capital area. All regular broadcast programs were suspended and the announcement was repeated over and over again, emphasizing it was not an exercise but a real warning.

It had advised department stores, theaters and other public places to let people know of the alarm and take steps outlined by civil defense regulations.

Defense Ministry spokesman Brig. Gen. Lee Hung-sik said the plane was detected violating South Korean air space at 2:26 p.m. and South Korean fighters were immediately scrambled to intercept it.

At about the same time, two North Korean fighters were detected flying south from their base in Haeju on the west coast, but turned back, he said.

The Chinese plane was escorted by the South Korean fighters to a nearby air base, and the incident was under investigation by authorities, the spokesman said, giving no other details.

The Defense Ministry's announcement came about two hours after the report by KBS.

China, in a statement issued in Peking, appealed to South Korea for the early return of the pilot and the plane which it said "lost contact" during training.

Since 1982, three Chinese pilots have defected to Taiwan after flying their planes to South Korea, the only Asian nation that maintains diplomatic relations with Taiwan.

In The Area

Thursday Thefts

Greenville police said three thefts were reported to the department Thursday.

Investigators said more than $9,000 worth of property — including a string-type weed cutter, a gas heater, a circular saw, 48 sheets of siding, as well as levels, hammers and other tools, and a truck to haul off the goods — were taken from a construction site at Quail Ridge, off 14th Street, in a break-in reported at 7:18 p.m.

Police said five bags containing 175 in cash were taken from a soft drink delivery truck parked on Garland Street in an incident reported at 4:45 p.m.

Officers said $220 in cash was taken from William Edward Bridges of Route 1, Fountain, in a flim-flam incident reported at 7:09 p.m. The incident occurred at the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard, police said.

Knifing Investigated

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of a knifing incident that occurred at 213 Paris Ave. about 5:29 p.m.

Officer P.W. Worthington, who said investigation of the case is continuing, said Charles Ray Grice of 213 Paris Ave. was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment after being stabbed with a knife.

Shoplifting Charge

Amy Denise Cline, 19, of 217 Unstead Dorm was arrested on a shoplifting charge by Greenville police Thursday.

Officer H.D. Hines said Ms. Cline was charged in connection with an incident that occurred at the Fresh Way Food Store at 810 E. 10th St. about 6:30 p.m.

Possession Count

Greenville police arrested David Lee Moore, 39, of 1017 Colonial Ave. on a charge of possession with intent to sell cocaine Thursday.

Officers assigned to the department's special investigations section said the charge resulted from a 10:10 p.m. incident at Moore's Colonial Avenue residence.

Men Are Arrested

Greenville police arrested two men on charges of engaging in an affray in connection with a 12:31 a.m. incident on Cotanche Street today.

Officers P.W. Worthington and R.S. Sawyer identified the two arrested as Andrew Chandler Edwards, 22, of Virginia Beach, Va., and Kevin Eugene Torres, 25, of 2900 Memorial Drive.

Rape Charge

Charlie James Jones, 37, of Route 1, Greenville, has been arrested by Pitt County deputies on three charges stemming from the investigation of a series of incidents involving a minor, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said.

Tyson said Jones was charged with rape, statutory sexual offense and with taking indecent liberties, all involving a child under the age of 13.

Tyson, who said Jones is being held without privilege of bond in the Pitt County Jail, said the alleged incidents occurred between 1983 and 1985.

Folk Dancing Set

East Carolina University Hillel will sponsor an evening of Israeli folk dancing Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Methodist Student Center, 501 E. Fifth St. Rabbi Bonnie Koppell will conduct the dance class, and participants should bring a snack to share. For more information contact Ms. Koppell at 830-1138.

WFU Dean's List

Eight Greenville students have qualified for the dean's list for the fall semester at Wake Forest University.

Included on the honor list are Pauline Larkins Bearden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Bearden; Mahlon Alan Dickens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon B. Dickens; Alayna Jane Keller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Keller; Elizabeth J. Kopelman, daughter of Drs. Arthur and Loretta Kopelman; Michelle Dawn Maxon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Maxon; John Deifell Ormond, son of Mr. and Mrs. H.L. Ormond Jr.; Mary Spivey Vick, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John B. Vick, and William Dale Waters, son of Mrs. Beryl Clayden Waters of Greenville and William D. Waters of Palmyra.

Community Club

The Hillsdale Community Club will meet at 4 p.m. Monday at the home of Retha Yarrell, Pinewood Estates.

COA Meeting Set

The executive committee, Pitt County Council on Aging, will hold its regular monthly meeting at noon Monday in the council's office, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Award Recipient

Amy M. Moore, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles W. Moore of Greenville, is the recipient of a Benjamin N. Duke Leadership Award for study at Duke University. She is a senior at J.H. Rose High School.

Winners were selected on the basis of academic achievement, leadership ability and personal interviews. The award pays 75 percent of Duke tuition.

Film Will Be Shown

The Bachelor Benedict Club will sponsor a showing of "Pitch A Boogie Woogie" at 7 p.m. Sunday at the club, 707 Wyatt St.

This film, made in Greenville in 1947 with an all-black cast, is being shown in observance of Black History Month. There is no admission.

School Represented

E.B. Aycock Junior High School was represented today at the "Microcomputer in Music Education" project meeting in Raleigh.

Principal Kay Whitehurst and Patricia Hiss, chairman of fine arts at the school, participated in the meeting.

Aycock is a model site for the project and local and staff development funds have been obtained with the help of Bernard Hasselrig, director of staff development, and Emmy Whitehead, arts coordinator, for Pitt County/Greenville schools.

UBE Scholarship

Clarence Mizelle of Windsor, a senior student in the East Carolina University School of Business, has received a $250 University Book Exchange Scholarship for the current semester. He is the son of Jo Ellen M. Evans of Windsor.

The award, founded by a local retailer, is presented to outstanding students in several academic fields each semester.

Mizelle, an accounting major, has maintained a perfect 4.0 (A) average in his major courses since transferring to ECU from Martin Community College in 1984. He is a member of Phi Kappa Phi honor society and a recipient of an NCNB scholarship.

Students Recognized

Milton Sawyer and Mark Smith, both of Greenville and students in the mathematics department at East Carolina University, have been given cash awards in recognition of outstanding work during recent terms of cooperative education assignments with the U.S. armed services.

Sawyer, selected to work with Col. James I. Warner, director of automation management for the U.S. Army Information System's Software Support Command at Fort Belvoir, Va., received a $500 award. His parents are Milton H. Sawyer Sr. and Doris Robinson.

Smith, son of Ellen L. Smith, is a graduate student in the mathematics department. He was selected to participate as a co-op student at the Naval Surface Weapons Center, Dahlgren, Va.

The Department of the Navy recently presented Smith with a $400 cash award in recognition of his work with the development of the Navy's Trident II re-entry and fusing effects studies.

Cooperative education is an arrangement whereby students can alternate their classroom studies with periods of work experience in their chosen fields. ECU work experiences are coordinated by the office of cooperative education.

Meeting Scheduled

The Youth Knights of Pythagoras of Winterville Masonic Lodge will meet Saturday at 3 p.m. An initiation will be held for boys between the ages of 8 and 17.

Annual Program

The Eastern North Carolina Regional Association of Black Social Workers will sponsor its annual Black History Month program Saturday at 2 p.m. at the American Legion building, Skinner and Chestnut streets.

A guest will be James McGhee, Kinston amateur artist, and local talent and displays of African-American history will be featured.

Girl Scout Event

Greenville area Girl Scouts will participate in a Mexican fiesta on "Thinking Day" Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the student union of Lenoir Community College.

Nine Girl Scouts and two adult leaders from the Coastal Council visited Our Cabana, a Girl Scout-Girl Guide World Center in Cuernavaca, Mexico, in December. They will share their experiences with other members of the council through songs, dances, stories, crafts displays, food, and slide showing.

Guest Lecturer

Dr. John Stone, a community health dean and professor at Emory University who is also a poet, will be the Perspectives lecturer at 12:30 p.m. Monday in the second floor conference room of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital cafeteria.

Stone will present "Medicine and Poetry: A Personal Journey" in an encore to a visit here two years ago. Since that visit, he has published his third volume of poems, "Renaming the Streets."

Perspectives is a lecture series sponsored by the medical humanities department of the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

30th Birthday

Elmhurst School is celebrating its 30th birthday during the 1985-86 school year with special visitors and activities.

Presentations on history and traditions of the school were given by Bettie Sue Forrest, former principal, and Margaret Hadden, former librarian. Students compared pine seedlings planted in February 1956 to the pine trees which now stand on the campus. Each class shared a birthday cake provided by Elmhurst parents.

Top Teacher

Jane Reel, fifth grade teacher at Falkland School, was named the school's teacher of the year for 1986. She is a native of Alexandria, Va., but has made her home in Greenville for the past 15 years. She is a graduate of East Carolina University.

Winning Design

A design submitted by "News and Observer" cartoonist Dave Saholsky of Raleigh is the winning entry in the annual Shad Festival souvenir brochure cover design contest, festival officials announced.

The winning design shows a shad fisherman gawking at Halley's Comet, which is trailing an "Eat Mo Shad" sign.

Chapter Meeting

The Greenville chapter of Professional Secretaries International will meet Monday at 6:15 p.m. at Western Sizzlin' Steak House, 10th Street. Terry Shank, director of cooperative education at Pitt Community College, will speak on Women's Responsibility to Government.

For more information or to attend call Mary Kittrell at 830-2427.

Guest Speaker

Rebecca Buck, executive director of the Association for Retarded Citizens in Pitt County, will be the speaker at the Pitt County Inter-Agency meeting Tuesday at noon. The meeting will be held at Western Sizzlin' Steak House, 10th Street.

Mrs. Buck will give an update of the activities of the Association for Retarded Citizens in Pitt County, a United Way agency.

Mountain Runner Wins Stair Race

NEW YORK (AP) — New Mexico's Al Waquie usually does his running up the side of mountains. His victorious sprint up the stairs of the Empire State Building wasn't much different, he said, except for the lack of fresh air.

"The air's a lot cleaner out there," he said.

Waquie won the Empire State Run-Up, racing from the lobby to the 86th floor in 11 minutes, 26.13 seconds, defeating 51 other runners for his fourth victory in the nine years of Empire State Run-Ups.

"Once I start uphill, I can't stop," said Waquie, 33.

"The roughest part was the start; I had to struggle my way through the crowd, but I did it," he said, breathing heavily from the 1,575-step race.

Although the race is only one-quarter mile in distance, it's comparable to running 2½ miles uphill, and officials for the New York Road Runners Club, which co-sponsored the event.

The all-time record of 10 minutes 59 seconds was set in 1981 by New Yorker Pete Squires.

Waquie was joined in Thursday's race by a 65-year-old lawyer, a New York City firefighter, a marathoner with one leg, a new mother whose child was born just 18 weeks ago, and runners from across the United States, Europe and Japan.

Some saw it as just another challenge in a series of competitive events, others did it for fun or just to see the view.

"We had never seen the Empire State Building before, so we figured we'd do it the tough way," said Mary Fanelli Lund of Peekskill, who came in about two minutes behind her husband, Bob, while their 18-week-old son, Neal, watched.

Unfortunately, the weather didn't cooperate, as heavy fog completely obscured the view from the 86th floor observatory.

The women's winner, Janine Aiello, 26, of San Francisco, missed the record she set last year by five seconds, finishing at 13 minutes, 19 seconds. Although she was disappointed, "I still feel great," she said.

Experiment Ends

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Roman Catholic Bishop Frank J. Harrison has halted experimental diocesan uses of the old-style Tridentine Mass, saying it was used to attack the now commonly used new Mass introduced after the Second Vatican Council of 1962-65.

Pope John Paul II last year authorized occasional use of the old Mass at the discretion of local bishops.

Destitute Haitians Eye Uncertain Future

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The fall of the Duvalier regime has left many Haitians wondering if they now will see a smooth transition to stable democracy or more years of political turmoil. The only constant is a desperate outlook for its destitute millions.
Right now Haiti is enjoying the euphoria of release from a 28-year political strait jacket.
Newspapers and radio stations report the news as they see it, the provisional government is promising representative democracy and presidential elections and the police and army are remarkably restrained in keeping the peace.

A curfew remains, but students demonstrate almost every day to demand changes in the six-man, civilian-military national government council and its Cabinet appointments.
Justice Minister Gerard Gourgue has released some political prisoners from jail.

The dreaded Tonton Macoutes militia, the mainstay of the Duvalier dynasty which ended when President Jean-Claude Duvalier fled the country Feb. 7, has been disbanded, its commander jailed and its members ordered to turn in their weapons.
Other than the initial witchhunt by angry mobs seeking revenge for years of abuse by the Tonton Macoutes, little blood has been shed since Duvalier left.
The president of the governing council is Gen. Henri Namphy, a 54-year-old career soldier who was head of the army when Duvalier fled, but was not associated with the repression attributed to Duvalier.
Namphy has a reputation for being a non-political officer and a good administrator.
The campaign for national elections has barely begun. Le Matin, one of the capital's four daily newspapers, says 10 men have announced their intention to run for president.

They range from declared opposition leaders like Gregoire Eugene of the Social Christian Party to Celmart Charles who lives in exile in New York and two of Duvalier's former ministers who broke with him.
Although the election date has not been set, Namphy has insisted the military has no political ambitions.
Two men on his council are most criticized by those who want all traces of the Duvalier government removed.
They are Alix Cineas, a longtime associate of the Duvaliers who was minister of public works when the government fell, and Col. Prosper Avril, often called Jean-Claude's personal tutor.
Before Duvalier's departure, Eugene, leader of the only legal opposition party under the regime, maintained that Avril was much too close to the Duvalier family and that "the people would never tolerate" his membership in a provisional government.
Now Eugene shares in a generally tolerant post-Duvalier mood in Haiti. He says, "Cineas and Avril are the only two people (on the council) who know how the old government functioned. They're needed around for a while to organize things. They know the nuts and bolts."
"It's hard to find ministers who did not work with Duvalier," said Arielle Sergile, 23, who works for a construction company.
Waving her hand at the 10,000 people who gathered in the northern city of Gonaives recently to celebrate their new freedom, she said, "We will wait to see what the council does."
There is general agreement now that the United States was a major factor in Duvalier's downfall, especially through its policy of tying economic aid to certification of human rights in Haiti.
Jeffrey Lite, a U.S. Embassy spokesman here, said the $52 million in aid targeted for 1986 had been withheld because Haiti had failed to meet human rights standards.
Duvalier fell just as the 1985 U.S. aid package of $55 million was running out.
By some interpretations of the law requiring certification, the United States could have given almost all of the aid for 1986 as humanitarian aid, withholding only about $7 million earmarked directly for the Haitian government.
Lite would not say why the United States withheld the entire package, saying only that "there are varying interpretations of that law."

The Duvalier government was under fire from the Roman Catholic Church, which had become disillusioned by the treatment of its priests and the closing of its popular Radio Soleil.
Another factor that may have led to the popular discontent that toppled the government was its exaggerated rhetoric about "democratization" that raised false expectations.
One widespread concern is that the initial enthusiasm over Duvalier's departure could turn sour when the people realize the misery still exists.
Haiti's problems are so acute that no one has tried to suggest short-term solutions.
Terror and corruption might be eliminated, but Haitians who demonstrated in the streets are going to be demanding an end to the most severe conditions of poverty and squalor in the Western Hemisphere.
The World Bank estimates that less than half of 1 percent of the country's 6 million people control 40 percent of the wealth. The Duvalier family's wealth, believed to be deposited in Swiss bank accounts, has been estimated at $400 million, while the country's annual per capita income in 1985 was $380.
World Health Organization statistics show that 25,000 Haitian children under the age of 5 die annually of diarrhea. The infant mortality rate is recorded at 125 per 1,000 and the average lifespan is 55 years in contrast to 73 in the United States.
Haitian history is characterized by military interventions in government and by failures to find political solutions to the nation's economic and social problems. The country has had nine "presidents-for-life," including Jean-Claude and his father Francois, who was known as "Papa Doc."
Within a nine-month period in 1956, political chaos resulted in five provisional governments and a one-day civil war. The turmoil did not end until elections were held Sept. 22, 1957, and Francois Duvalier, the founder of the dynasty, became president. He died in 1971 and his son succeeded him.
"Duvalier structured government to serve himself and nothing else. The provisional government will need two to three years" to construct a foundation for democracy, said Aubelin Jolicoeur, a newspaper columnist who has been appointed director of tourism.

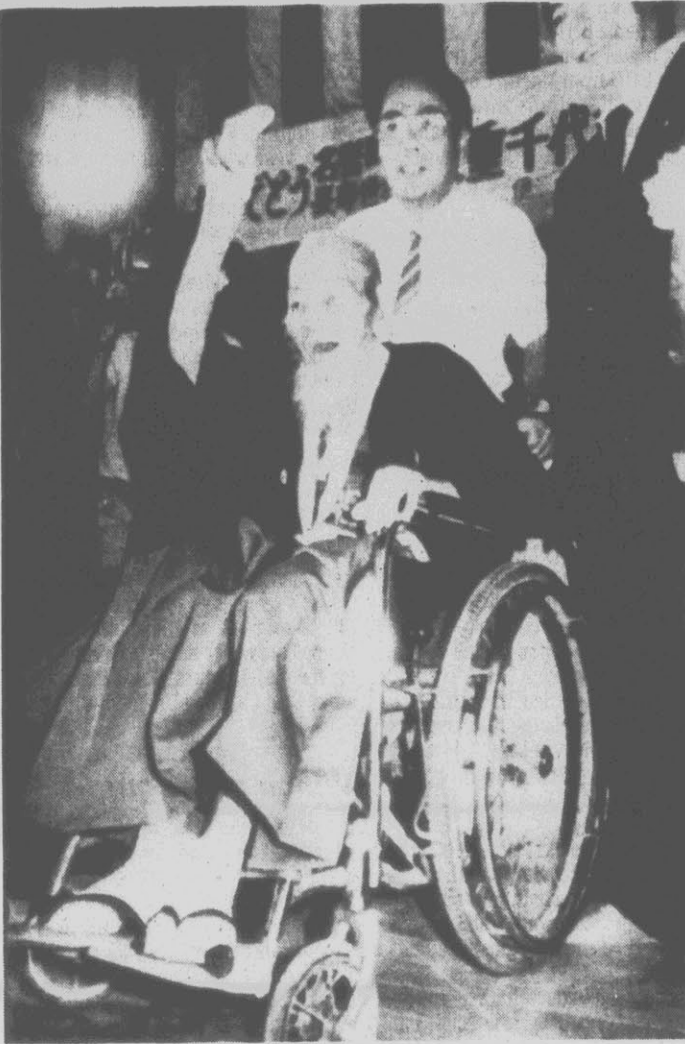

Senate To Vote On Death Penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate will have another chance to consider use of the death penalty for the most serious federal crimes.
The measure was sent to the full Senate Thursday by a 12-6 vote of the Judiciary Committee. Similar legislation has passed the Senate previously by 2-to-1 margins, but has not received House approval.
The panel's vote came the same day that President Reagan signed a directive making death a possible penalty for members of the military convicted of espionage during peacetime.
Capital punishment is included in federal criminal statutes, but courtroom procedures for imposition of the penalty have not been updated to follow Supreme Court guidelines.
Among the federal crimes that carry the death penalty are treason, espionage, attempts to kill the president, and offenses resulting in the death of another person. An airline hijacking law already includes constitutional capital punishment procedures.
Thirty-nine states have approved constitutional procedures by establishing the specific criteria set by the high court.
The legislation, sponsored by Judiciary Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., would establish a two-stage trial.
The jury would first determine guilt or innocence, and then decide whether the death penalty is justified. In the latter stage, a jury would consider aggravating or mitigating circumstances in the crime. The bill also would allow a federal judge, for the first time, to impose a life sentence without parole as an alternative sentence.
Thurmond said in a statement, "The death penalty sends an unmistakable message to criminals that certain particularly serious federal crimes will carry the ultimate penalty."

"I sincerely hope that the Senate and House can act expeditiously in approving this legislation so that the American people can continue to have confidence that their federal government is getting tough with dangerous criminals."
The death penalty for members of the military involved in peacetime espionage was authorized by Congress last summer when it approved the Defense Department's fiscal 1986 budget authorization. It takes effect March 1.
The congressional action followed last summer's arrests of four men in the Walker family spy case. The four were accused of passing Navy secrets about radio communication systems and submarine operations to the Soviets for almost 20 years.
Three of the four have since either been convicted or pleaded guilty to the charges. The fourth is still awaiting trial.
The men involved in that affair were charged by the Department of Justice under civilian laws that limit the maximum penalty for spying to life in prison.

Insulin Shipped

PEKING (AP) — An American sent six bottles of insulin to China after reading that an insulin shortage endangered the lives of about 2.5 million Chinese diabetics, the official English-language China Daily reported.
Alyne Martelle of Wethersfield, Conn., mailed the package to the paper with the request that it be distributed to needy children.

LAST YEAR — Shigechiyo Izumi, the world's oldest man, waves to cheering onlookers at his 120th birthday party on June 29 last year in Tokunoshima, in southern Japan. He died today, reportedly of pneumonia. (AP Laserphoto)

World's Oldest Man Dies At Age Of 120

TOKYO (AP) — Shigechiyo Izumi, the world's oldest man with a verifiable record, died today at the age of 120, the Japan Broadcasting Corp. reported.
The cause of death was not given, but earlier reports said he had been suffering from a cold since late last year.
Izumi lived on the remote island of Tokunoshima, south of the major Japanese island of Kyushu.
The Guinness Book of World Records said Izumi, born in 1865, was the oldest authenticated centenarian. It did not say who was the second oldest person.
Izumi celebrated his birthday last June 29 by getting up at his customary time of about 6 a.m. and eating a breakfast of rice gruel and bean paste soup.
His usual routine was to go for a five-minute walk, watch baseball and wrestling on television, and go to bed at 8 p.m.

Asked the secret of his long life, he replied, "The daily cup of shochu (sugar cane liquor) and keeping a simple diet."
His great-grandson Akihiko Izumi, 48, said at Izumi's last birthday, "He's always in smiles when he's with kindergarten children."

Dairy Fees Increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee, shying away from cutting dairy price-supports to meet requirements of Congress' new balanced-budget law, voted instead to make the necessary savings through higher fees on dairy farmers.
The voice vote Thursday by the Agriculture dairy subcommittee was the first time lawmakers have taken specific action to undo the effects of the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law passed late last year. The law sets a strict timetable aimed at balancing the budget by 1991.
One subcommittee member warned that Thursday's vote, if it encourages other interest groups to seek ways around Gramm-Rudman cuts, could unravel the new law before it gets off the ground.
The full Agriculture Committee was scheduled to consider the bill next week, along with other changes being sought in the long-term farm bill passed in December.
The administration announced Feb. 12 that it planned to cut the amount it pays to buy up surplus milk products, beginning March 1, as part of a plan to achieve $1.3 billion in savings at the Agriculture Department in fiscal 1986.
Other USDA programs, including subsidies for cotton and grain farmers, are due for similar cuts as part of a 4.3 percent across-the-board reduction under Gramm-Rudman.
In effect, the cut would translate into a reduction of about 50 cents per hundred pounds in the current $11.60 price-support level, hitting hardest in areas where surplus production is greatest: the upper Midwest, the Northeast and California.
The large dairy cooperatives that control the industry rushed in with an alternative, proposing instead to make the necessary savings by boosting the fees assessed on all milk producers. The fees pay for a new subsidy aimed at encouraging dairy farmers to get out of business, thus reducing surplus production.

Special Envoy

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Reagan's special envoy on Central America met with President Miguel de la Madrid to discuss efforts to find a peace agreement for the region.
The private meeting was the first of Harry Shlaudeman's tour of the region in preparation for next week's meeting of the Contadora group of nations, which is trying to achieve a Central American peace pact.

Fleming Furniture Co.
Commemorates
Millard Fillmore With 399 Dollar Bill

"Get To Know Us" is Fleming Furniture Company's motto. It should have been Millard Fillmore's, the 13th and least known president. Fleming Furniture Co., 1012 Dickinson Avenue, is celebrating President's Day a little differently than most furniture retailers. Instead of celebrating either Washington's or Lincoln's birthday, they have Abe and George commemorating Millard Fillmore with a dollar bill made in his honor. The Fillmore Bill constitutes a real honest sale here, according to George. The Fillmore Bill is a $399 dollar bill. Fleming's is offering specials at $399 and discounts of $399 in several different areas. One dining room retails for $799 this week only $399; Hide-a-bed Sofas can be found for $399; their premier line of sofas by Park Place are discounted $399. There are savings all over the store. Owner, Tom Fleming says he hopes people will pick up the message "It's hard for the small business to make competitive ads today. The idea and the promotion were locally produced."
"Ya'll get to know us" says Tom. "Where else can you save a Millard?"

Chief Indicted

ALEXANDRIA, VA. (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted Police Chief Charles T. Strobel on charges of obstructing justice and making false statements.

The 12-count indictment caps a year-long investigation into allegations of misconduct by Alexandria's police department.

The indictment against Strobel alleges that he lied to the grand jury last year. Strobel claimed he could not remember certain events when questioned about his handling of allegations of sexual wrongdoing by other department officers.

Strobel has been police chief since 1977. If convicted, Strobel could be sentenced to up to 60 years in prison and fined $90,000.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

ONE SON REMAINING!

WHEN KING SAUL ORDERED THE SLAUGHTER OF THE CHIEF PRIEST AT NOB AND ALL HIS HOUSEHOLD, BECAUSE HE THOUGHT THEY WERE IN LEAGUE WITH DAVID AGAINST HIM, 85 PRIESTS WERE KILLED THAT DAY—BUT ONE SON ESCAPED! THIS WAS ABIATHAR, THE LAST REMAINING PRIEST OF THE LINE DESCENDED FROM THE HIGH PRIEST ELI! ABIATHAR ESCAPED AND AS WAS NATURAL, FLED TO DAVID IN THE WILDERNESS. (I SAM. 22:20-23). FROM THEN ON, ABIATHAR REMAINED AS A PRIEST WITH DAVID AND WHEN DAVID AT LAST ASCENDED THE THRONE, IT WAS ABIATHAR AND ANOTHER PRIEST, ZADOK, WHO APPARENTLY SHARED THE DUTIES OF THE HIGH PRIESTHOOD BETWEEN THEM (II SAM. 15:24-29). ABIATHAR REMAINED LOYAL TO DAVID THROUGHOUT HIS REIGN, BUT AFTER KING DAVID'S DEATH HE FAVORED ADONIJAH OVER SOLOMON—FOR THIS HE WAS DEPOSED FROM THE HIGH PRIESTHOOD AND ZADOK, A MUCH LOYAL PRIEST WAS PUT IN HIS PLACE. (I KINGS 2:13-27) THUS, WITH ABIATHAR'S DOWNFALL, THE END OF THE HOUSE OF ELI, AS HIGH PRIESTS, CAME TO BE, AS FORETOLD IN THE OLD PROPHECY WITH WHICH ELI WAS THREATENED! (I SAM. 2:31-35).

Actor Pays Bill For Activist Film

PITTSBURGH (AP) — David Soul, the actor who starred in TV's now-defunct "Starsky and Hutch" series, has plunged into battle on behalf of a social-action church ministry and has endured problems because of it. Soul recently was sentenced to two years' probation and a $1,000 fine for disorderly conduct in refusing police orders to disperse from a protest meeting in a church yard. His brother, the Rev. Daniel Solberg, had earlier been ousted as pastor of the Nativity Lutheran Church in Allison Park, Pa., for participating in a clergy-union coalition protesting regional unemployment and corporate policies. A documentary film called "The Fighting Ministers," narrated by Soul, is being shown around the country in churches and meeting halls, chronicling the prolonged struggle over the ministry. The 57-minute film, produced over 18 months at a cost of about $200,000, with Soul paying most of the bill, was edited by Richard Chandler, editor of the movie, "Amadeus." A Lutheran Church in America disciplinary panel has recommended removal of Solberg from the ordained ministry, following earlier defrocking of another Lutheran pastor, D. Douglas Roth, in the same conflict.

The Pitt-Greenville Airport is managed, operated and maintained by the Airport Authority. Airport facilities are located on North Memorial Drive.

Q. What is the Bible and who wrote it?
A. The Bible is God's word to the world about His plan of redeeming the world back to Himself through His son Jesus Christ. The Bible was written by prophets of God who were inspired by God, which means that God, the Holy Spirit, moved the holy men to write, and breathed into their minds the very thoughts they expressed and the very words which they wrote.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Trend is steady to 25 cents lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 41.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadburn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 41.50; Wilson 41.75; Rowland 41.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 36.00; Whiteville 36.00; Wallace 37.00; Spivey's Corner 37.50; Rowland 37.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 45.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 37 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 45.70 cents fob dock or equivalent. The market is about steady to firm and the live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,352,000, compared to 1,708,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply fully adequate for a moderate demand. The undertone for next week's trading is steady. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was 14 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly unchanged to 1 cent lower at mostly 2.63-2.73 in East and mostly 2.76-2.85 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 2 to 3 cents lower at mostly 5.14-5.29 in East and mostly 4.98-5.09 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.12-3.22; (new crop wheat 2.15-2.46).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly today, following through on Thursday's late rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 9.18 to 1,682.00 in the first hour of trading.

Gainers opened up a 3-1 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said stock traders took their cue from declining interest rates in the bond market.

Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, chalked up gains of $5 to $10 for every $1,000 in face value in early trading today.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines gained 1 1/2 to 160 1/2; Dow Chemical 1 1/2 to 50, and Ford Motor 1 1/2 to 73.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .65 to 128.65. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.03 at 248.83.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 14.56 to 1,672.82, recouping most of Wednesday's 20.52-point loss.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 5 to 3 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 139.74 million shares, against 152.03 million in the previous session.

Half Of School's Students Stay Home As AIDS Victim Returns

KOKOMO, Ind. (AP) — A 14-year-old boy barred from school after contracting AIDS returned to classes today for the first time in more than a year, but officials said nearly half the school's 360 students stayed home.

School employees using walkie-talkies kept reporters and spectators at a distance as Ryan White was rushed into Western Middle School through a side entrance during a snowstorm.

Before leaving for school, Ryan said in a telephone interview that it was great to be going back. "It's finally come," he said. "I'm excited."

Members of a group calling itself Concerned Parents of Western Middle School had met this week to discuss what to do when Ryan returned to seventh-grade classes. An informal poll taken at a meeting of about 350 parents, students and local residents indicated about 100 parents would keep their children home.

Principal Ronald Colby reported that 151 pupils stayed home today, or about 42 percent compared with an average over the past two weeks of 10 percent to 15 percent. He said absenteeism had been running high because of flu, and noted the bad weather.

"I'm not disappointed with the student turnout," he said. "I was frankly surprised that we had over 50 percent of our students."

Asked when he believed parents and pupils would become accustomed to having Ryan in the classroom, Colby said, "I think it's going to take a long time. I feel that the more that is learned on AIDS ... I think that's what will temper these emotions."

He said seven families had told him they would take their seven children from the middle school.

Colby said Ryan will use a faculty restroom, at his suggestion, and will use disposable plates and utensils at lunch.

The only demonstrator as Ryan returned to school was a 17-year-old high school student carrying a sign saying "Students Against AIDS."

The student, Don Hochstetler, a junior at Western High School, said, "I got friends and they got little brothers and sisters in that school. I don't have anything against Ryan White. I just got something against his disease."

Tricia Shelton, 12, a classmate of Ryan's who supported his return, said that if a poll of her classmates were taken today, "I think they'd want him to stay home because some of them are afraid of his disease."

She said Ryan was led into the school by the principal and that Ryan did not say anything but he was smiling. She said he went right to his first class, social studies.

Ryan's battle to return to class 14 months after being diagnosed with having AIDS came to an end last week when Alan J. Adler, the Howard County health officer, ruled he was physically fit and posed no threat to students or teachers. School officials had barred him last July from returning to classes, fearing the disease could spread.

Adler thought it best for Ryan not to return until today because of a flu outbreak in the school.

Ryan, a hemophiliac who contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome from blood products, said Thursday that he looked forward to seeing his friends.

He added, "I'll have a few extra classes," referring to the change in his workload.

Ryan had been doing classwork through a telephone hookup.

Attorney David E. Rosselot, who represents the parents' group and has a child in the school, called any withdrawal of students from classes "a cosmetic approach to a real problem."

He sought a court order Wednesday to bar Ryan from school, but Howard Circuit Judge Alan Brubaker said he did not have enough evidence to make a decision. He scheduled a hearing today and said he would reconsider the motion this afternoon.

"We're going to pursue it through every legal channel we can," said Larry Gabbard, father of one of the children named as plaintiffs in the request. "If the judge follows the law, he should rule in our favor. The law says any child with a communicable disease shall not attend school."

Gabbard said his 12-year-old son is in two classes with Ryan.

Drug Investigation Leads To Arrests

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Catawba County law enforcement officers began making arrests today after a year-long drug investigation that has returned more than 150 indictments against 49 people.

Officers from three Catawba County law enforcement agencies and the State Bureau of Investigation arrested about 40 suspects during a pre-dawn operation across the county.

The investigation was targeted toward drug dealers and cocaine, marijuana and valium was seized during the operation, according to Major Richard Cannon of the Catawba County Sheriff's Department.

LSD and several weapons were also seized in what was called "a massive drug raid," authorities said.

A grand jury returned 75 true bills of indictment against 24 people in Catawba County, and another 82 indictments were returned against 25 people from the Hickory area, officials said.

At a 4:45 a.m. briefing, officers were given packets of information on all the suspects. The packets included information on charges the suspects face and where the suspects might be located as well as whether they might be carrying a weapon.

The first of the suspects was arrested within an hour after the briefing given to the two- and three-man teams of officers that fanned out across the county to arrest the suspects, authorities said.

Hickory Police Chief Floyd Lucas Jr. said today that the raid resulted in the "largest number of narcotic arrests made in the city of Hickory at one time."

Catawba County Sheriff L.D. Huffman said two shotguns were seized during one arrest in which he took part — including a saw-off shotgun that was found underneath a couch on which the suspect sat while putting on his boots.

Much On Line In Final Games

It's all on the line Saturday and Monday in the Colonial Athletic Association for both the East Carolina men's and women's basketball teams.

Saturday, the Pirates travel to George Mason, and then on to James Madison on Monday for the close of the regular season. Both games are set to start at 7:30 p.m.

East Carolina's Lady Pirates will play host to George Mason at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum, while league-leading James Madison visits Minges on Monday, also at 7:30 p.m.

For the men, at stake is fourth place and a home berth in the first round of the CAA's post-season tournament, which begins March 1. The top four teams in the regular season standings will each host one of the lower bracketed teams.

It's for sure that East Carolina and UNC-Wilmington will meet, but this weekend's games will determine where that game is played.

UNC-W lost to George Mason last night, 68-62, to fall to 5-8 in the league. East Carolina is 6-7 going into the weekend. While ECU is at Mason, UNCW will be at Madison and is in a must-win situation. A loss by the Seahawks would insure the Pirates of fourth no matter what they do in their two games.

However, a Seahawk victory would force the Pirates to win at least one of the two games to hold to fourth. A pair of losses would knot the two for fourth place and UNCW would take the top seeded because it beat the Pirates in both of its regular season meetings.

As for the women, it's a do-or-die situation for first place. James Madison hasn't lost in league competition, bringing a 10-0 record into the game at UNCW on Saturday. ECU is 9-1 going into the GMU game.

The Lady Pirates must win against Mason to have a chance to tie the Lady Dukes. Should UNCW upset Madison, then ECU would have a chance to win the title outright with a sweep of the weekend's games.

Should the two tie, a coin flip would decide which would be top seeded for the tournament, to be held at UNCW starting Feb. 28, earning a first round bye.

East Carolina is the only champ the league has had, winning the two previous tournaments when the CAA was the ECAC-South.

Sophomore guard Kenny Sanders, a 6-5 transfer who became eligible at Christmas, leads the Patriots in scoring with an 18.1 average. He's followed by 6-5 senior forward Rob Rose, hitting 16.1 and 6-3 senior guard Ricky Wilson, with a 14.5 average.

The other starters are 6-7 junior forward Tracy Battle of Rocky Mount, and 6-8 junior center Mike Dufreen. Battle is hitting 6.6 points a game and Dufreen, 3.5.

Madison, meanwhile, is paced by 6-3 junior guard Eric Brent, scoring 13.4 points a game and 6-5 junior forward John Newman, hitting 10.6.

The third leading scorer on the team, 6-6 senior forward Todd Banks, with a 10.2 average, is injured and will not play again this year.

Other starters for the Dukes will be 6-6 junior forward David Monroe, 9.7; 6-2 sophomore Robert Griffin, 8.0; and 6-7 freshman center Chad Keller, 2.2.

East Carolina beat both teams in their earlier meetings in Greenville, taking Mason, 75-67, and Madison, 51-48.

Knowing what the Pirates have to do by UNCW's playing early doesn't faze ECU Coach Charlie Harrison. "I don't think it will help us, but who knows? I still believe that you have to play for yourself. You're still better off with your fate in your own hands."

The Patriots seem on a roll right now, coming off a big win over Richmond last week. "They shot the lights out and played awfully well," Harrison said. "(John) Newman didn't shoot well (for Richmond) and (John) Davis is out with an injury. That hurts them."

"Nobody is stopping Mason; they can hurt you in so many ways. You can't let them get easy baskets off the press, off transition and off the backboard. That's where they're so powerful.

"Madison is playing pretty good now, too, even though they've been losing. They lost to Virginia Commonwealth by two points on a last-second shot the other night. The injury to Banks has given them a quicker lineup. They've gotten more aggressive defensively, too."

George Mason's women are led by Wanda Williams, a guard with a 10.2 average. She's the only Lady Patriot in double figures.

Other starters include guard Susie Walton, 2.0; center Beverly McLaughlin, 8.3; and forwards Jeannine Jeminez, 7.1; and Daphne Miles, 7.8.

Madison, meanwhile, brings in the 18th ranked team in the country, led by Betsy Whitman and Julie Franken. Both have a 12.8 average. Alisa Harris is next at 11.0.

Floretta Jackson at 9.8 and Sandy Broughton at 9.6 round out the top five in scoring.

Madison handed ECU an 82-55 defeat in their earlier meeting in Harrisonburg, Va.

Fuller Leads CBA Win; Lady Falcons Advance

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

FARMVILLE — Tim Fuller connected on ten points in the final quarter to help pull #2 seeded Charles B. Aycock past #3 Farmville Central, 53-48, Thursday night in the Eastern Plains Conference semifinals.

The Aycock girls made a sweep of it over Farmville, winning the girls' game, 47-43. Aycock is seeded second and Farmville was sixth.

The two results set up tonight's championship round. In the girls' game, it will be Aycock facing top-seeded North Pitt at 7 p.m. and Aycock's boys taking on upstart Greene Central, seeded fifth, in the 9 p.m. game.

For Greene Central, it's an all-or-nothing situation. The Rams must win the championship or their season is all over. The top four teams in the final regular season standings will advance to the Sectionals next week at North Pitt unless the Rams take the title. In that case, they would replace South Lenoir as the fourth seed from the league.

Farmville had every opportunity to win both games, but couldn't pull them out. In the girls' game, it was a case of not being able to hit from the free throw line, and in the boys, not being able to hit from the floor when it counted.

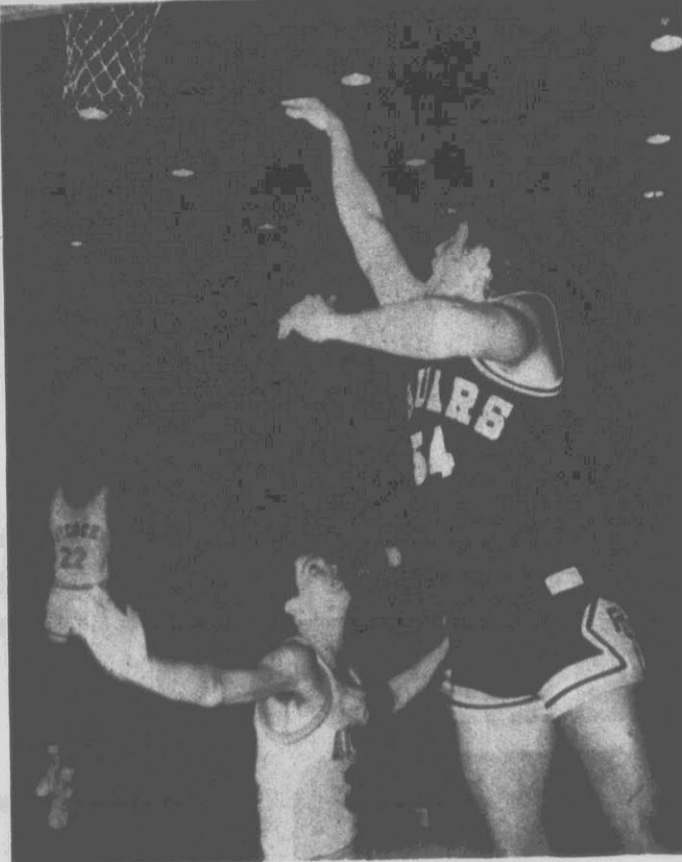

In the fateful fourth period of the boys' game, when the game was on the line, Aycock made five of ten field goals and cashed in on eight of 11 free throws. Farmville made but three of 11 field goal attempts while hitting all four tries at the stripe.

"We shot ourselves out of it," Coach Mike Terrell said. "We played hard, but we didn't play smart when the game was on the line."

"Maybe it was the excitement and the pressure of the game. We did a lot of good things on defense, except on Fuller. He's a money player and we don't have one."

Farmville held a three-point lead as the final quarter got underway, 38-35. But after the two matched points, Fuller cut the lead to 40-39 with a jumper. He then stole the ball and was fouled by Reggie Mitchell, making the first to tie it up, 40-40 with 6:09 left.

Greg Speight followed with a three-point play that pushed Aycock into a 43-40 lead. Fuller again stole the ball for a layup that opened up a 45-40 edge for the Falcons with 4:59 showing.

Farmville cut it back to three on two occasions, and then to two at 48-46 with 1:00 to play. But Travis Spells made a three-pointer with 38 seconds to go that put the seal on it.

"We came down the court with the chance to tie it up several times but either missed or threw it away," Terrell said.

The game was tight throughout the first period, being tied at every level until Farmville held a 12-10 lead at the end.

After two more ties in the second quarter, Aycock broke on top for the first time, 16-14, on a jumper from the lane by Eric Sauls. Fuller added a three-point play and Speight hit from the lane to open up a 21-14 margin before Farmville broke it.

The period ended with Aycock up, 25-18.

Farmville outscored Aycock, 20-2 in the first two and a half minutes of the second half, moving into a 28-27 lead. Aycock took it back at 29-28, but Farmville finally regained it at 36-33 on a three-point play by Dennis Tripp with 2:01 left. Each team scored another basket in the time remaining to set up the final quarter's turnaround.

Fuller finished the contest with 25 points while Spells added 13 for Aycock. Farmville was led by Kennedy Williams with 22 and Tripp with 11.

Aycock's girls scored the first ten points of their game to put Farmville in a hole and the Lady Jaguars were never able to overcome it.

They did fight back, however, and have the opportunity to pull it out. The Lady Jags were able to put some pressure on Aycock from time to time and cut away at the lead. Unfortunately, they were unable to keep the pressure up consistently.

"I thought their experience was the difference," Coach Hilda Worthington said. "They have much more than we do. They're a good shooting team too and we just got too far behind."

Worthington admitted that if the Jags could have kept up the pressure, it might have made the difference. "But we don't play it like we should. They just don't understand it enough to keep it up."

"But it's been a good year for us with so many inexperienced girls," she said.

Farmville also didn't hit well from the line, making just seven of 18. Aycock, meanwhile, hit 15 of 21, after scoring two less field goals than the Lady Jags.

After the initial flurry by Aycock, Farmville got on the board and trail, 14-6, at the end of the first period. They cut the lead back to as little as five in the second quarter, but still trailed by ten, 28-18, at the half.

Aycock opened up as much as a 13-point lead, 35-22, in the third period, but Farmville scored the final five points of the quarter to cut it back to 35-27 at the horn.

In the final period, Farmville pulled with in six at 41-35, but could come no closer until they scored the final uncontested basket with six seconds left.

New Aide, Staff Changes At ECU

East Carolina head football Coach Art Baker announced Friday the elevation of Don Powers to assistant head coach, Les Herrin to defensive coordinator and the hiring of Mark McHale from Appalachian State.

McHale fills the spot on Baker's staff left vacant when assistant head coach Mike O'Cain resigned last month to accept a position with N.C. State.

Powers, defensive coordinator in 1985, will assure O'Cain's administrative duties while also coaching the defensive secondary. Herrin, who coached linebackers in 1985, after joining staff following four years at Clemson, assumes Powers' duties as defensive coordinator. Herrin will also retain his duties of coaching linebackers.

"I feel like those two moves will strengthen our staff," Baker said. "I feel both will do outstanding jobs in their new positions."

Herrin served as defensive coordinator at Appalachian State prior to joining the Clemson staff.

McHale comes to ECU after six seasons at ASU, the last two as offensive coordinator and offensive line coach. McHale's responsibilities will be coaching the offensive tackles and tight ends while also working with the passing game.

Prior to his stop at ASU, McHale was offensive coordinator and offensive line coach at Shepherd College in West Virginia where the teams were ranked in the NAIA top 15 four times during his stay. Shepherd also captured four conference titles and compiled a 39-16 record during his five years there.

McHale also coached tight ends and was head freshman coach at West Virginia under Bobby Bowden.

"I felt like I wanted to have someone who could coach the tight ends and who also had experience with the offensive line and working with the passing game," Baker said. "I feel Mark gives us all we need."

Terps Nip Heels In Overtime

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Lefty Driesell hasn't had too many chances to celebrate basketball victories over North Carolina, and even after Maryland pulled off a 77-72 upset of the top-ranked Tar Heels, he still recalled the ones that might have been.

"Thirty-five points more and we'd be 20-19 against North Carolina," Driesell said in the Maryland locker room after the victory Thursday. "That's since I've been coaching."

As Maryland head coach, Driesell was 7-26 against Tar Heel coach Dean Smith, while the remaining losses came while Driesell was at Davidson. It took a 35-point performance from Len Bias and four points from Keith Gatlin in the final seven seconds to secure the victory.

But before he could savor the eighth triumph, Driesell's team had to rally from near-blowout conditions.

Leading 19-17 after Len Bias scored on a running jumper, North Carolina went off on a 20-7 run that gave the Tar Heels a 37-26 lead with 2:30 left before halftime. The spurt died there, however, and Maryland cut the deficit to 37-32 thanks to six straight points by Bias.

Two Tom Jones free throws at the 10:20 mark pulled Maryland to a 52-52 tie, but a 10-3 run by the Tar Heels appeared to put them in control. Kenny Smith scored the first two baskets in the streak and freshman Jeff Lebo had the last two.

At 2:58, Brad Daugherty scored on a dunk, and the Tar Heels held their biggest lead of the second half at 68-59.

"We got behind ... and came back and went up," Driesell said. "The whole ball club played with poise."

Bias went to work. He canned a perimeter jumper, then stole the inbounds pass and jammed it in to get Maryland within 68-63 with 2:45 left.

Jeff Baxter added a layup and the deficit was three.

Lebo hit the first of a one-and-one opportunity, but Bias came back with another jumper with 50 seconds left. Smith missed the front end of a one-and-one and Baxter hit a 22-footer from the right side to force overtime with the score tied at 69.

Joe Wolf scored all of North Carolina's points in overtime, and his layup on a pass from Steve Hale gave the Tar Heels their last lead at 72-71 with 2:14 left.

Bias made a jump hook at 1:51 and Smith missed a jumper 20 seconds later. After a timeout, Daugherty intercepted a Gatlin inbounds pass with 58 seconds left. North Carolina couldn't convert it as Bias blocked Smith's driving layup.

"It was a good block," Smith said when asked about the play. "There were no excuses."

Driesell said there were no problems with Bias' performance, either.

"If Lenny Bias isn't the player of the world, I don't know who is," Driesell said. "I just thought he was unbelievable. He had 35, but I thought he had 95."

Gatlin added 10 points, as did Baxter and Gatlin. Maryland raised its record to 15-11, 4-7 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

North Carolina saw its slim lead in the ACC regular-season race evaporate. The Tar Heels, 25-2 overall, fell to 9-2 in the ACC and dropped one-half game behind second-ranked Duke. Daugherty led the way with 23 points, while Wolf had 15 and Smith 12.

"I told them all this year that this year's team is better than last year's team or just as good as last year's team that won 25," Driesell said. "We've played the toughest schedule in the country, and I think it's paid off for us."

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Rob Rose scored 23 points and Ricky Wilson added 21 to lead George Mason to a 68-62 Colonial Athletic Association victory over North Carolina-Wilmington Thursday night.

Mason made 18 straight fouls shots in the final 6:06 to win its sixth game in its last seven and improve its record to 15-10 overall and 9-4 in the league.

Brian Rowsom scored 26 points for the Seahawks, who fell to 14-12 and 5-8.

Mason erased an 11-point deficit in the second half as Rose scored 10 points in a 19-6 Patriot scoring streak. Mason trailed 44-33 with 12:35 remaining prior to the run, but got back into the game as Rose hit all five of his field goal attempts during the rally.

Rose's dunk with 6:46 left knotted the score at 50-50, and the Patriots steadily added to the margin at the foul line despite not converting a field goal attempt the rest of the way.

Mason made 30 of 34 free throw attempts, including 22 of 24 after intermission.

Coastal Tourney

VANCEBORO — All was at it was supposed to be in the Coastal Conference as the top two teams have advanced to the championship round, to be played tonight.

Thursday night, #2 West Craven downed #6 North Lenoir, 86-42, in the boys' semifinals. The Eagles will now meet West Carteret, seeded #1 in the championship game.

The Eagles and Patriots tied for the regular season championship, but the Pats got top seed in a coin-flip.

In the girls' semifinals, #2 East Carteret took a 61-51 win over #6 Havelock. That will send the Lady Mariners against top-seeded and unbeaten Washington in the championship.

Wellcome Tops Cox

Wellcome Middle School nipped A.G. Cox, 62-61, in double overtime to capture the northern division title of the Pitt-Greene-Lenoir Junior High School Conference basketball championship.

Adrian Wooten sank two free throws with four seconds remaining in the second overtime to give Wellcome the win.

Wooten and Calvin Grimes each hit 16 points to lead Wellcome, with Reginald Daniels adding 13.

Cox was led by Terry Williams with 27 and E. Farrow with 16.

Wellcome will now play Snow Hill for the overall league title.

Virginia Housing Case Could Affect Millions

By DOROTHY GAST
Associated Press Writer
ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Brenda E. Wright's battle over electricity charges at the low-income project where she lived has reached the U.S. Supreme Court and could affect millions of public housing tenants, attorneys say.

Ms. Wright, a single mother of two, earned $128 a week as a dietary aide in a hospital. Each month, she paid $169 in rent to the Roanoke Redevelopment and Housing Authority.

Every three months, the authority assessed her a surcharge for what it called excess utility consumption. In October 1982, the additional charge was $33.53.

"We were a low-income family," said Ms. Wright, who has moved out of the project. "My wages weren't very much. It was difficult for me to pay it."

Ms. Wright, who had lived in the Lansdowne Park housing project for 11 years, Geraldine H. Broughman and Sylvia P. Carter decided to do something about the extra charges. They filed a lawsuit in federal court challenging the local authority's right to impose the surcharge.

A federal trial judge dismissed their 1982 suit. The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the judge's ruling that tenants of low-income housing projects must rely on the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development to enforce housing law against local public housing authorities.

Last month, however, the U.S. Supreme Court agreed to review the case and to decide whether public housing tenants have a right to sue in federal court over alleged violations of federal housing law. Some lower courts have ruled that public housing residents must settle their grievances directly with HUD or in state courts.

The tenants' lawyers say the Roanoke Redevelopment and Housing Authority overcharged residents at 1,103 units about $50,000 a year for four years.

Henry Woodward, a Legal Aid Society attorney representing Ms. Wright, said the tenants should be allowed to sue in federal court because their complaints involve HUD, a federal agency.

Bayard Harris, attorney for the Roanoke housing authority, said Congress gave HUD the job of administering public housing. Congress did not intend local agencies to be subjected to federal lawsuits, he said.

A Supreme Court ruling in favor of Ms. Wright could affect disputes between tenants and local housing authorities over rent, evictions, admissions and maybe even maintenance, said David Bryson, staff attorney for the National Housing Law Project in Berkeley, Calif. The non-profit corporation assists Legal Aid attorneys on housing questions.

There are more than 1.2 million public housing units in the United States as well as other HUD-operated apartments that would fall under a ruling in the class-action suit, Bryson said. Three million public housing tenants could be affected by the outcome of the case, attorneys for the three women say. A 1980 HUD regulation, Woodward said, stipulated that rent charges were to include an electricity allowance high enough to meet the needs of 90 percent of a project's tenants. Rent, without added charges, was to be no more than one-fourth of a resident's income.

The Roanoke housing authority, which operates seven projects, ignored the 1980 regulation and charged nearly every family for utilities, Woodward said. The problem lasted from 1981 to 1985, when the HUD formula for electricity allowance was changed, he said.

Harris said the Roanoke authority followed the law in calculating utility charges.

After they filed their federal lawsuit, Ms. Wright and her neighbors wrote HUD to complain about their electricity bills, Woodward said. HUD never responded, he said.

"It's a potential problem with any housing authority in the country," Woodward said. "Some complied, but there was widespread non-compliance."

Bryson said tenants' problems usually had the lowest priority at HUD.

Thomas Sherman, director of HUD's Office of Public Housing in Washington, D.C., said he did not know whether the agency responded to the Roanoke tenants' letter. But he maintained that HUD is concerned about tenants' problems.

"To my general knowledge we've had no problem with complaints not being responded to," he said. "I think it is our job to listen to anybody who has a complaint, and if we do nothing else, search it out and make a determination one way or another."

Truants Can Have Creative Excuses

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Most workers explain their tardiness or absence with prosaic tales of dead batteries, missed trains or common colds.

But from a creative minority come explanations such as, "I thought Halloween was a holiday" or "someone stole one of my shoes on the bus."

One hundred executives at the nation's 1,000 largest companies were asked in a survey to describe some of the more unusual alibis they have heard.

"We're not talking about standard reasons," said Robert Half, whose employment company commissioned the survey.

Some examples:

- "Suddenly, the doors of the armored car in front of me opened up, and $10 bills started flying out," causing a traffic jam.
- "I ate so much during my vacation that none of my clothes would fit me. So I had to spend the morning having them altered."
- "I was having breakfast at a coffee shop when I fell asleep at the table. The waitress didn't wake me up until 9:30 a.m."
- Employees seemed partial to blaming other people for their absence or tardiness, as in "My husband forgot where he parked our car after he came home from his office party last night" and "My 6-year-old son set all the clocks back an hour."
- Some stooped to blaming dumb animals ("My parakeet spoke for the first time, so I waited for him to do it again so I could tape record it"), including man's best friend: "The dog got hold of my toupee and hid it somewhere in the basement."
- Other forms of life also were accused of causing delays.
- "I spotted what looked like a flying saucer, and I followed it on the highway for about 50 miles," reported one tardy employee. "I still don't know what it was."

A similar spirit of scientific inquiry was cited by another worker, who told the boss that "I didn't get any sleep the last couple of nights, because I stayed up looking for Halley's Comet."

As might be expected, the supernatural is not unusual in these tales. "My astrologer warned me not to come to work before noon on Wednesday," explained one.

And the brazen is never far away, either, as in the case of the unfortunate employee who explained, "I had to take my grandfather to a baseball game."

James Thomas of Burke Marketing Research Inc. of Cincinnati, which did the survey, could not answer the most obvious question raised by the excuses — Did anyone believe them?

His excuse: "It wasn't on the questionnaire."

But Half said most bosses aren't stupid, and he offered some advice to the tardy and truant: "Sometimes, if a weird thing really did happen, you're better off not saying anything."

Study Supports Theory That Man First Emerged On African Continent

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers don't know where modern man first emerged from his ancestors, but a new piece of the puzzle points to Africa.

A new study of chromosomes joins a body of evidence that makes Africa "as good a bet as anywhere," said Harvard anthropology professor David Pilbeam. "But it's not by any means certain."

Researchers lack a fossil record from Asia as good as the one from Africa, so they can't tell yet whether Asia holds older traces of anatomically modern man, he said.

Dr. James Wainscoat of John Radcliffe Hospital in Oxford, England, co-author of the new study, said his research supports an African origin for modern man, but that the idea is not yet proven.

Wainscoat, with colleagues at the University of Oxford and University College Hospital in Nigeria, studied variations in chromosomes from hundreds of people in eight population groups. They reported their work in a recent issue of the British science journal Nature.

Chromosomes are microscopic strands in every bodily cell that carry genes, the blueprints for the cells. Genes are basically sequences of chemicals arranged in sort of a Morse code. Between genes lie other chemical sequences, called introns, whose functions are not fully understood.

Humans carry 23 pairs of chromosomes. The researchers focused on introns along the chromosome scientists have numbered 11, Wainscoat said. They used special enzymes to find whether specific chemical sequences were present at five places along the chromosome.

Then, noting where the sequences were present and absent for each chromosome tested, they looked for how that pattern differed among the population groups.

The idea, simply put, is that the greater the differences between two population groups, the farther back in time their lineages split from a common ancestor.

Researchers found in general that the patterns in African people, from Gambia, Kenya and Nigeria, differed greatly from those found in British, Cypriot, Italian, Asian Indian, Thai, Melanesian or Polynesian people.

That suggests that the human population split long ago into African and Eurasian groups, consistent with the idea of an African "founder" population that migrated and then gave rise to all non-African populations, the researchers wrote.

They also said fossil finds in Ethiopia and South Africa support the hypothesis.

Pilbeam, of Harvard, said he had not seen the new study, but noted that the Africans sampled were from either West Africa or areas with fairly recent migration from that area. Other African populations must be sampled too to rule out the possibility that a West African population independently evolved the pattern that stands out from the non-African groups, he said.

Wainscoat said unpublished data shows the same results for other African populations.

Feeding Time

NEW YORK (AP) — Feeding time at the New York Aquarium has become fighting time, with gulls who lost their favorite landfill dropping in on resident penguins and seals and leaving with their dinner.

The problem dates to the recent closing of a dump where the gulls ate near the aquarium in the Coney Island section of Brooklyn.

Gulls began arriving at feeding time in the seal and penguin tank, and stealing fish meant for their less mobile rivals. "They were more aggressive than the penguins," said Kathi Schaeffer, an aquarium spokeswoman. "The penguins got intimidated."

She said aquarium officials planned to keep the gulls out by stringing a net above the tank.

'Today' Show Sets Record With Trip To South Africa

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's "Today" show attracted the largest audience ever for a morning news-and-information program last week when it was broadcast from South America, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

When "Today" spent Feb. 10-14 in Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires, it recorded a 6.9 rating, meaning an average of 5.9 million households watched a given minute of the show's 10 hours. ABC's "Good Morning America," which spent last Friday in Quebec City, Canada, was second with a 5.3 rating. The "CBS Morning News" averaged a 3.3.

A single ratings point equals 859,000 homes with television. The previous record was achieved by "Good Morning America" in January 1982 — 5.6 million homes. The "Today" rating fell just short of its own record rating of 7.1 in 1972, the week President Richard Nixon went to China. NBC had more viewers last week, despite a slightly lower rating, because the number of homes with TV has increased since 1972.

The surging "Today" scored its 10th consecutive victory over "Good Morning America," which had dominated for three years. Compared to the same period one year ago, "Today" was up 38 percent in rating, while "Good Morning America" was down 2 percent and the "CBS Morning News" was down 18 percent.

"It's not so much that 'GMA' is losing people, it's that we're picking up people who are turning on morning TV for the first time," said Steve Friedman, "Today's" executive producer.

Friedman on Thursday attributed the overall increases to the show's anchor team of Bryant Gumbel and Jane Pauley and the advantage of NBC's top-rated prime-time network. The big gain over the 5.8 rating from the week before was spurred by the trip and some extra on-air promotion in prime time, he said.

The show's next trip will be a May boat cruise stopping off in Wilmington, N.C., Charleston, S.C., Savannah, Ga., Jacksonville, Fla. and Miami. Friedman said NBC's travel budget is 6 percent higher than last year.

time," said Friedman. "But you can't get people to watch you five days unless you deliver the goods."

Friedman and his staff celebrated with champagne Thursday afternoon. But champagne wasn't the only thing flowing at "Today." Friedman said the show's advertising rates, now at $13,000 per 30 seconds, have almost doubled in the past two years.

Home Satellite TV Industry Hurt By Scrambling Of Major Channels

By TIM DAHLBERG
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The once-booming home satellite TV industry, whose sales skidded with the advent of scrambling by Home Box Office and similar plans by other cable networks, is regrouping to fight off the threat.

About 1.5 million Americans own dish antennas to receive satellite signals, with 600,000 of those sales made last year before the boom went bust.

Sales reportedly have plummeted more than 50 percent since Home Box Office began scrambling its signals last month, although industry officials refuse to be specific. HBO's move was followed by announcements from nearly two dozen other cable TV services that they also plan to scramble their signals.

The scrambling, begun under pressure by local cable companies disturbed at the growth in the number of people buying satellite dishes to receive cable TV programming free over the air, has thrown the market into chaos, industry spokesman Taylor Howard said Thursday.

"We've been beaten very hard," said Howard, chairman of SPACE, the industry's trade group, who likened the campaign to "crisis control."

"The marketplace is very confused," he said. "People who might have bought before are now waiting."

More than 10,000 delegates attending the SPACE-Satellite Television Technology Inc. convention here decided Thursday to hire a public relations firm to brush up the industry's image, Howard said.

"We've never been against paying for these channels," he said. "We just want it done right, with free competition in the marketplace so the rates will not be out of line with what people now pay for cable."

Howard said SPACE plans to air a "very positive campaign to educate the public" to the advantages of satellite television.

"The market has been turned sour by essentially bad press," he said. "We want to show the public that there are still many advantages to satellite television."

Dish marketers like to point out that up to 100 unscrambled channels are still available, despite the planned scrambling of so-called premium channels and such advertiser-supported channels as the sports-oriented ESPN and Cable News Network.

Decoders to unscramble the signals are becoming available to allow dish owners access to the stations for a fee, which Howard said eventually would be similar to that paid by cable subscribers.

HBO is offering its service for $13.95 a month.

Network Anchors Taking To Road For News Reports

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — News anchors, no longer chained to desks in New York, seem more like globe-trotting tour guides these days, and "Have Satellite, Will Travel" is becoming a larger part of the job description.

Starting Monday on ABC, Peter Jennings and the "World News Tonight" shift to the Soviet Union for a week to cover the 27th Communist Party Congress and other stories about Russian life, culture and politics.

Dan Rather and the "CBS Evening News" go to America's midsection for a week of reports on farmers and the farm crisis. "This is a very important story to all Americans," said executive producer Lane Venardos. "We're seeing the demise of a way of life, and, besides, everybody eats."

Alone of the three main network anchor-men, Tom Brokaw and "NBC Nightly News," will stay put in New York next week. But Brokaw also packed his bags and anchored recent NBC reports from Mexico City, Geneva and Manila.

News executives say the basic reason these programs go on the road is because a story is important and the anchor wants to do more than read it; he wants to report it. All three anchors went to Mexico City to see first-hand the aftermath of last year's earthquake. They all anchored their broadcasts from Geneva in November for the superpower summit.

Moving the broadcast outside its New York studio — the farm trip will cost the "Evening News" nearly $100,000 — increases the story's significance and, consequently, its coverage. CBS sent camera crews and regular correspondents to the Philippines for the recent election, but devoted far less time to the story than did ABC and NBC, which sent their anchors to Manila.

Venardos sees an inherent danger in what he calls "the anchorman justification syndrome." He says stories can be blown out of proportion and "distort the broadcast just because the company has spent money on a trip."

ABC's Jennings said anchor-generated, comprehensive coverage, when appropriate, can provide fuller context and background to stories. Jennings and several ABC correspondents are going to the Soviet Union not only to cover the Communist Party's convention, but also to acquaint viewers with conditions, attitudes and policies inside America's chief rival.

"Local TV does so much regional and national news, so we should do more foreign news than we do," Jennings said.

Rather said CBS' trip West is not a response to ABC's journey. "We were told by the Soviets that accessibility and information would be severely limited," he said. "And we couldn't find enough justifiable editorial reasons to take the anchor and travel the whole broadcast to Russia, on the Russians' terms." CBS is sending a team of correspondents to the Party Congress.

ABC said it was guaranteed enough access to warrant the trip, but ABC News officials declined to discuss in detail the negotiations or the nature of any Soviet restrictions.

Venardos said Rather, along with Charles Kuralt and other CBS reporters, was going to the nation's breadbasket to give the farm story broader analysis.

"Taking the broadcast to the farm country is better than sitting in New York and saying, 'There's a problem out there,'" Venardos said.

Other benefits from anchor travel, both foreign and domestic, include greater promotional opportunities and the possibility of higher national ratings. Viewers often are drawn to places they've never seen.

"You shoot pictures at the Denver airport versus pictures at the airport in Rawalpindi, Pakistan, and the pictures are likely to be more interesting in Rawalpindi, in part, because they are different," said Jennings.

But a national program's appearance in a U.S. city can have another bonus. It can bolster the show's local ratings and attract attention for the network affiliate. When the "CBS Morning News" spent a week in Miami last month, its audience was 2 1/2 times its normal rating on Miami's CBS station.

Not to be overlooked by the network travel agents is the fact that February is a sweeps month when ratings for local stations are measured and determine future advertising rates. The networks often run special programs and series during the sweeps to bolster audiences for their affiliates.

Next week's "Evening News" farm reports will use its affiliates in San Antonio, Texas, and Sioux Falls, S.D. as base camps. "We'll be in the field and broadcasting from the field as much as possible, but we need headquarters for operating," Rather said.

In recent years, these road shows have become relatively routine because of satellite technology. Five years ago, Rather said, the programs needed ample lead time to leave New York. Now, with the ease of portable uplink systems, the broadcasts can quickly chase news and be beamed from almost anywhere.

"If we're in a crummy trailer with fly specks on the wall, we're no less in touch with the world than from our New York studio with its fly specks on the wall," said Venardos.

Opponents Jam Hearing On Nuclear Waste Site

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
ASHEVILLE (AP) — Protesters painted their faces like skeletons and wore red ribbons of opposition to a proposed highly radioactive waste dump, and one resident said she would die, if necessary, to prevent testing on her property.

"I am a property owner in Haywood County," Jean Flauto told officials with the U.S. Department of Energy at a public hearing Thursday night. "I will never let anyone on my property to do any testing and if necessary, I will die for it."

About 2,000 people packed an Asheville auditorium for the meeting on a potential waste dump site about 10 miles west of the city.

"If they put this dump here, are you prepared for widespread civil disobedience?" said Dave Gallagher, 35, of Asheville.

"I'm a middle-aged man ... but there a lot of young people here who could learn guerrilla warfare very easily."

The U.S. Department of Energy is considering the Elk River Formation in Haywood, Buncombe and Madison counties among 12 Eastern U.S. areas with crystalline rock formations for the nuclear waste repository, which would not be built until the year 2001.

The site is scheduled to be in operation in the year 2006.

The meetings are being held near each proposed site to allow residents to gather information for public hearings to be held this spring.

Based on the hearings, the 12 site proposals will be in final form by the summer, and field testing will pare the 12 to five sites by 1991. The final selection of the site will be made in 1996, said DOE official Ralph Stein.

The site would be the second federal high-level nuclear waste repository in the country. Three sites, all in the west, are under consideration for the first.

Protesters carried signs while others handed out leaflets to the audience as Stein and DOE geologist Robert Levich struggled to explain the details of the site selection process.

People yelled out "Put it under the White House" and "Hell no, we won't blow."

Leni Sitnick of Asheville questioned whether a second repository is needed since no new nuclear power plants are going on line to generate more waste.

Tom Graham of Asheville grilled the officials on the possibility that radioactive gas could escape from the canisters of solid nuclear waste, which would be placed at least 2,000 feet under the ground.

Under questioning from Michael Shannon of Marshall, the officials acknowledged that there are no containers that can hold radioactive waste for 1,000 years.

"What do you do if it leaks," Shannon said.

Stein said if the canisters did leak, they would be retrieved and taken somewhere else, but he said "it won't leak because the waste is in solid form."

But when Levich said tunnels could be bored through the rock without cracking it, someone called out "like the one on I-40."

A tunnel on Interstate 40 near the Tennessee line collapsed last year.

Wynn Williamson of Buncombe County told the officials that her son works for the Department of Energy. "Don't you let him build it down here in Buncombe County on his mother," she said.

In a news conference before the meeting, Stein was asked whether public opinion would have any effect at all on the selection site.

"We'll be very receptive to information we get from all persons," he said.

Stein said the law doesn't limit the amount of nuclear waste that can be put in the second repository, but he said the waste in the first repository can't exceed 70,000 metric tons until the second is in operation. He said civilian nuclear facilities are expected to produce 40,000 metric tons by the year 2000 and that more than 10,000 tons of military nuclear waste is already in existence.

Stein and Levich both stressed that the site selection process is in a very early stage and that the 12 were chosen based on existing data. Much more detailed field work, which will start in 1987, must be done before a site is chosen.

Fayetteville Black Enters Senate Race

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The campaign of the only black seeking the Democratic bid for U.S. Senate isn't directly linked with efforts by the Rev. Jesse Jackson's "Rainbow Coalition" to get more blacks in office, a campaign official says.

"This is a local campaign ... it's not a racial campaign," said Marion Rex Harris, who was state coordinator of Jackson's presidential campaign in 1984 and is Theodore "Ted" Kinney's campaign manager.

But Harris said Jackson and other nationally known blacks would stump for Kinney.

Kinney, 54, a real estate agent and eastern vice chairman of the North Carolina Black Leadership Caucus, officially announced his candidacy at a news conference Thursday, although he had filed for the race Jan. 27.

He said he is a serious candidate running to win, not just to make a point with the state party leadership.

Kinney said his bid to succeed retiring Republican Sen. John East is "an endeavor whose time has come," and a "people's campaign" for policies that would promote "jobs, justice, peace and fairness."

"If I didn't believe I could win, I wouldn't have filed," Kinney added.

Harris predicted Kinney would finish first or second in the May 6 primary and get at least 25 percent of the vote.

Former Gov. Terry Sanford, who championed civil rights while in office between 1961 and 1965, also hopes to win significant black support. Ten Democrats are running for the Democratic nomination.

Kinney and Harris are among the black leaders who have accused the Democratic Party of taking blacks for granted despite enjoying their overwhelming support for decades.

Blacks have been especially unhappy with the party's refusal to support an end to the runoff primary system, which critics say hampers minority candidates. Jackson made ending runoffs a major issue in his campaign.

Last month, several blacks — including Kinney — discussed the matter with state Democratic Chairman Jim Van Hecke. Within days of the meeting, word surfaced that a black might run for the Senate, the state's top political race this year, as a gesture of protest.

However, most of the state's black leadership has reacted cautiously to the Kinney candidacy. Harris acknowledged blacks were "caught by surprise" and that he himself was "shocked" by Kinney's entry into the race, which came entirely without fanfare. He had not held a news conference or made a formal campaign statement until Thursday — nearly a month after he filed.

Insisting that dismantling the runoff system was not his primary motive, Kinney said he would speak out on the matter, but not in terms that would divide the party.

"If there is one thing that must happen in 1986, it is that the Democratic Party take over the Senate, and this may be the key (race)," Harris added. Republicans hold a 53-47 majority in the Senate.

U.S. Rep. Jim Broyhill and David Funderburk, former U.S. ambassador to Romania, are the major candidates for the GOP nomination for East's seat. Also running as a Republican is Glenn Miller, leader of the White Patriot Party.

Harris said the Democrats' failure in 1984 to unite after the bitter gubernatorial primary had been "very detrimental to the ... party" and to blacks.

A graduate of Shaw University in Raleigh and a 20-year Army veteran who retired as a sergeant 1st class, Kinney said he wanted to reassemble the coalitions that had been the Democratic Party's backbone since the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"The Kinney campaign is about jobs, employment opportunities with decent wages, raising the per capita income of many more of our people," he said.

"This campaign is about peace, human rights at home and abroad, a policy of reducing world hunger rather than storing grain while people are dying from malnutrition ... and disease," Kinney said.

Solons Say They Forced Way Into Viet Compound

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Rep. Bill Hendon, R-N.C., says the U.S. Defense Intelligence Agency repeatedly denied him access to information on a Hanoi compound, where he and two other congressional task force members forced their entry.

"So we went there ourselves, and a film crew and reporter from (ABC's) '20-20' were there with us filming it," Hendon said.

"The DIA analysts did not indicate that what we saw was there, but we saw it so we know it's there," he said. "It affirms totally the credibility of a witness who twice passed a polygraph test, not to mention further substantiating comments by (former Marine Pvt. Robert) Garwood about this specific compound."

Hendon and Reps. Bob Smith, R-N.H., and Frank McCloskey, D-Ind., told the Asheville Citizen in telephone interviews that they obtained proof during their trip last week that Americans were held in captivity in Hanoi at least until August 1982.

"We saw some structures and information that corroborates information the government has in its possession that shows very clearly that our POWs were there in August of 1982," Hendon said in a story published Thursday in the Citizen.

Nine congressmen from the U.S. House task force on missing Americans in Southeast Asia returned Tuesday night. They had traveled to Hanoi, Bangkok and a Cambodian refugee camp on the Thai border to seek evidence of American servicemen 13 years after the end of the Vietnam War.

Garwood, who was convicted of collaborating with the enemy while a prisoner in Vietnam, said Thursday he gave Hendon a map of a compound in Hanoi so the congressional task force could see where other prisoners of war had been held. Garwood said he was held there from 1975 to 1978 and had last seen other Americans in the compound in 1977.

Black & Decker Cutting Benefits

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Black & Decker, a power tool and household appliance maker, will add about 200 employees to plants in Fayetteville, Asheboro and Tarboro as a result of plant closings in New York and Maryland, officials said Thursday.

But the corporation's 2,700 North Carolina employees will face pay cuts and will pay part of their medical insurance, which now is 100 percent company paid, according to the announcement.

Tom Baker, who manages the Fayetteville plant that employs about 1,100 people and has a weekly payroll of about $250,000, said reductions in the wage and benefit program will enable the company to transfer production from facilities in Brockport, N.Y., and Hamstead, Md., to the North Carolina plants. Officials said those plants are scheduled to be closed in the next 10 months and their product lines transferred to other facilities.

The Hampstead power tool plant will close this summer, putting 1,300 out of work, and the Brockport housewares plant will leave 650 jobless when it closes at the end of the year, officials said.

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has upheld a judge's decision to let a Burlington woman convicted of drunken driving serve her sentence at home. The court gave no reason for its decision Tuesday.

Wake County Judge George R. Greene had said in a Jan. 9 decision it was discriminatory to send to jail a woman convicted of driving while impaired when some male offenders are allowed to serve DWI sentences at an alternative jail without bars near Garner.

Greene said in his order that the safety and welfare of Tryon Janice Stone, 23, "would be in jeopardy in the Wake County Jail," and therefore she should serve her sentence on three weekends at her parents' home. Miss Stone lived in Raleigh at the time of her conviction, but has since returned to her parents' home in Burlington.

Miss Stone had pleaded guilty before Greene to DWI, her second such conviction. A second conviction carries a mandatory seven-day prison term.

Coliseum

RALEIGH (AP) — The Raleigh City Council was told Thursday a $55 million, 22,000-seat coliseum should be built in downtown Raleigh and it should be a "high priority."

E. Stephen Stroud, chairman of a committee that has studied the feasibility of a coliseum for two years, made the recommendation to the council, which would have to approve such a project.

The committee suggested money for the coliseum might be raised through a bond issue. But it said other sources of revenue could include funds from a hotel room tax, from Wake County and from involvement from major users of the facility.

Drug Study

RALEIGH (AP) — The use of marijuana is sharply declining in Wake County high schools, but cocaine usage is rising and younger students account for much of the increase, a study by Drug Action of Wake County shows.

"These kids are being exposed at a younger age and that's pretty scary," said Jeff W. Cheek, community relations director for Drug Action. "A lot of these kids are getting $100-a-month allowances and they're not spending that on popcorn."

The study, done last spring and released Thursday, found that last year, 15.9 percent of Wake County students used cocaine, up 1 percentage point from the previous year and up 4.1 percentage points from 1983.

A smaller percentage of students — 4.9 percent — said they had tried the drug the month before the survey.

Perjury

GREENSBORO (AP) — Two former Taylorsville residents have pleaded guilty in federal court to perjury charges.

J.C. Teague and Snookie Childress, who now live in Florida, were indicted Nov. 7 for perjury relating to grand jury testimony on Ms. Childress' brother, Pennell, who was charged with filing false income tax returns in 1979, 1980 and 1981.

Judge Woodrow Jones of the western North Carolina district sentenced Teague and Ms. Childress to five years' suspended sentence and three years' probation. He also fined Teague $10,000 and Ms. Childress $5,000.

Hiring

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Officials at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill conceded Thursday that the university would not be able to hire the 30 black faculty members it needs by Dec. 31 to meet affirmative action goals.

In a report to be presented to the UNC Faculty Council on Friday, George Kennedy, chairman of the Committee on Black Faculty, said faculty members who sat on the panels that recommended candidates to fill faculty vacancies must increase their commitment to recruiting blacks.

The report says the affirmative action hiring goals established under an agreement between the university and the U.S. Department of Education call for hiring 82 black faculty members by the end of the year. UNC now has 52 black tenure track faculty members.

Auditor Says More Probations Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislature could keep 990 misdemeanor offenders out of North Carolina's crowded prisons by pouring more money and employees into the intensive probation program, a state audit has concluded.

"We found that a significant cost savings could be achieved through the expansion of the intensive probation program in lieu of active prison sentences," State Auditor Ed Renfrow said in a statement accompanying the audit of the adult probation and parole system.

The Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations unanimously voted Thursday to recommend that the General Assembly appropriate $2.7 million a year to hire an additional 78 intensive probation officers.

The Governmental Operations Commission, a watchdog panel that monitors the state bureaucracy when the Legislature is in recess, voted to seek expansion of the probation program during the short legislative session, which starts in June.

Currently, there are eight intensive probation teams located in urban areas that have sent the highest number of felons to prison, the auditor's report said.

Each team consists of an intensive probation officer with at least four years of experience in probation and parole work and a surveillance officer with experience in law enforcement. Each team supervises no more than 25 criminals at a time.

The offenders, convicted of non-violent crimes and judged not to pose a threat to the community in which they live, receive "counseling, training in coping skills, and are subjected to intensive surveillance to make sure that any violations of the law are quickly detected," the report said.

The Martin administration and a legislative study committee are studying ways to reduce prison crowding. There are 17,674 inmates in the state's prison system, which has a capacity for 16,663 prisoners.

Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson is considering recommending that the state hire a private firm to build and operate a minimum-security prison.

Ben Irons, executive administrative assistant for the correction department, said Johnson had "said over and over that this is such an overwhelming problem, we all are going to have to cooperate to solve it — meaning the executive, legislative and judicial areas of government."

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said one way to reduce the workload for probation officers would be ordering judges not to order supervised probation for convicted drunken drivers.

"I doubt there's a person in this room (who) if caught DUI would need supervised probation," Ramsey said.

George W. Barnes, assistant director of the Division of Adult Probation and Parole, said 8,000 of the 58,000 people under supervised probation had been convicted of drunken driving.

Barnes said judges gradually were ordering less supervised probation for drunken drivers, but were more than offsetting the reduction by prescribing the probation for other convicts.

Name Change

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Because of the impact of the acquisition of Nabisco Brands last fall, R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. has decided to change the company's name to R.J.R. Nabisco Inc., company officials say.

Reynolds' board of directors voted Thursday to ask shareholders to approve an amendment to change the name during the company's annual meeting on April 23 in Wilmington.

State May Broaden Use Of Welfare Work Program

RALEIGH (AP) — State Human Resources Secretary Phil Kirk says he may ask the Legislature during its short session this summer for $1 million to help spread workfare to more North Carolina counties.

Thirteen counties have Community Work Experience Programs, in which welfare recipients are required to work to receive their welfare checks. A 14th county will add the program by March 1.

Counties with workfare programs are Ashe, Beaufort, Buncombe, Caldwell, Carteret, Davidson, Halifax, Moore, Nash, Pitt, Rowan, Rutherford and Scotland. The program will be in Wilson County by March 1.

Counties can choose whether to adopt the workfare program, which the General Assembly approved in 1983. Kirk's goal had been to expand the program to 50 counties by January 1989.

However, Gov. Jim Martin has shown a strong interest in pushing the date up to July 1987, Kirk said Wednesday. Martin has asked Kirk to prepare a report on how the new goal can be met, the secretary said.

State Sen. William Martin, D-Guilford, who has worked on welfare legislation, said changes were needed in the programs.

"I would be opposed to expanding it at this stage, the way it has been operating," Martin said Thursday.

He said the programs needed to provide better job training, more counseling and better services, such as day care.

"We need to re-examine our whole approach to attacking the cycle of poverty," Martin said.

Kirk agreed that job training needed to be bolstered, although he said he had no specific proposals yet.

A survey conducted recently by his department showed that a large majority of welfare recipients liked the workfare programs, but not as many recipients were certain that their working would provide them with a decent-paying job later.

The department randomly interviewed 21 of the 160 workfare participants in seven counties. Kirk said the sample was small and results were not definitive, but he was pleased with the survey.

"The fact they have a positive view of their jobs and they enjoy being active proves what I've been saying: that most people on welfare would rather have a job than receive a government check" without working for it," Kirk said.

South Africa Reaches Accord With Creditors

LONDON (AP) — South Africa's central bankers reluctantly agreed to begin repaying the $14 billion in foreign debts they froze last year when a wave of racial unrest damaged the country's credit rating.

Fritz Leutwiler, the retired Swiss central banker acting as mediator, announced the "broad consensus" agreement Thursday after 30 American and European creditor that hold 70 percent of the frozen debt met with the South African bankers.

Another 230 smaller banks around the world also were affected by the South African freeze.

South Africa got into serious economic trouble last summer when foreign banks stopped renewing short-term loans automatically. The resulting sharp drop in the value of its currency prompted the government to freeze repayment of principal on the short-term debt, which was $14 billion of the $24 billion South Africa owed to foreign creditors.

Leutwiler told a news conference that the South African authorities had agreed to his proposals reluctantly because of the burden of repayment it imposed.

"This is not a rescheduling agreement," Leutwiler told a news conference. "It is of a short-term nature ... a step toward restoration of normality in South Africa's external fi-ancial relations."

Chris Stals, director-general of the South African Reserve Bank, confirmed Leutwiler's statement at a separate news conference, saying the proposals were "very advantageous" to the creditor banks.

Leutwiler said the racial and political turmoil in South Africa was not discussed during the day-long meeting, but he told the news conference: "Social stability is part of the perception of the creditors."

Leutwiler said South Africa reluctantly agreed to repay $500 million in the fiscal year beginning April 1, to pay premium interest of 1 percent on the frozen loans, and to a review beginning by next February of how the rest of the debt will be met.

Stals said he had initially proposed a four-year repayment period in contrast to Leutwiler's year-to-year reassessment, but that "on the whole, it was acceptable to us."

He also said that adding 1 percent to the interest was advantageous to the banks and that the $500 million payment in the coming year would be "an additional burden to the balance of payments."

Leutwiler said there would be a review of South Africa's balance of payments later in the year but added: "My personal view is that the $500 million down-payment is a maximum. Going beyond that is irresponsible."

The plan is due to take effect by the end of next month, when the present debt repayment standstill expires.

The Financial Times, Britain's leading business daily, said that following the agreement the 30 banks were forming "a technical committee to flesh out details of the plan."

South Africa's economic stability depends on maintaining good standing with foreign creditors, who insist on evidence of change in the official apartheid race policy through which 5 million whites preserve supremacy and deny rights to the country's 24 million blacks.

Desmond Tutu, the black Anglican bishop of Johannesburg, and other South African clergymen who oppose apartheid had urged the bankers to reject any new agreement and freeze South African bank accounts to increase the pressure against apartheid.

Leutwiler proposed the terms after months of meetings with South African leaders and the creditor banks. He said he had continued as mediator because he felt South Africa was committed to reform.

"Whoever is against apartheid cannot advocate pulling the rug from under South Africa's feet, economically and financially," he said.

Volcker Backs Aid To Mexico

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker is urging commercial banks and international lending institutions such as the World Bank to come forward with a package of emergency aid for Mexico.

However, Volcker told the Senate Banking Committee on Thursday he hoped the amount would be somewhat less than the nearly $9 billion Mexico recently said it needed to pay interest and make other foreign payments.

Mexico, battered by the oil decline and still recovering from last September's earthquake, has said that, without the aid, it would be unable to meet interest payments this year on about $100 billion in foreign debts because of the recent worldwide plunge in oil prices.

Reagan administration officials have said recently that they are considering various forms of emergency aid for Mexico but hadn't decided on a specific plan.

Volcker did not outline any new plan, but indicated generally that the aid should be in the form of combined loans both from commercial banks already involved in Mexico and from organizations such as the World Bank.

"The World Bank has ample reserves," Volcker said, adding that commercial banks also "would have to provide a very significant part" of the aid. He estimated that about 40 percent of it likely would have to come from U.S. banks.

The chairman of the nation's central bank indicated the aid to Mexico should be in the form of a combination package along the lines of a plan unveiled last October by Treasury Secretary James Baker.

That plan, announced prior to the recent collapse in world oil prices, called for commercial banks to lend $20 billion and multilateral organizations $9 billion over the next three years to 15 developing nations, most of them in Latin America.

The recent plunge in oil prices, which hit especially hard at oil-producing nations such as Mexico and Venezuela, makes it even more imperative that the additional loans envisioned under the so-called "Baker plan" be made, Volcker said.

However, this plan calls for the borrowing nations themselves to make internal changes to make their economies more market-oriented to qualify for the money.

"Nobody said it was going to be easy," Volcker said. "It's not just a question of tightening down on their domestic economies. It's a question of restructuring the economy so they can grow better. There is a lot that can be done to make their economies more efficient. The potential for change is enormous."

He said that, as bad as Mexico's current situation is, the nation is still in better shape than it was in 1982 when an earlier package of emergency loans were made.

Flight Aborted

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — A British Airways flight was aborted before take-off from Harare airport after an engine caught fire as the plane gathered speed on the runway, the airline said.

Several tires burned out as the crew braked the London-bound Boeing 747 near the end of the runway after the fire was spotted in a starboard engine, airport officials said. Passengers were shaken but unhurt, airport officials said.

British Airways Harare manager Martin Wyatt said passengers were accommodated in Harare hotels while engineers worked on the engine.

Marcos Says Critics Of His Government Modern Imperialists

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos lashed out today at foreign critics of his government's conduct during the special election, calling them bad losers and "modern-day imperialists" meddling in Philippine affairs.

In a statement, Marcos said that "if there are outside parties who think they can casually, and with impunity, intervene in our internal affairs, I would like to remind them that Filipinos have many times before paid with their blood, their lives, and their honor to preserve their freedom and national integrity. And so will they again."

The victory by Marcos over Corazon Aquino in the Feb. 7 election has been widely criticized as tainted by fraud and violence. On Thursday, the U.S. House of Representatives subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs voted 9-0 to cut direct aid to the Philippines until a "legitimate government" assumes power.

On Thursday, a Common Market diplomat told reporters it seemed "more and more clear" none of the European trade bloc's 12 member nations would send an ambassador-level envoy to Marcos inauguration on Tuesday. In Washington, The Associated Press learned the United States would be represented — at the most — by a third-level embassy official, a diplomatic slap in the face for Marcos.

Today's statement from Marcos, which an aide at the presidential palace said the Filipino ruler dictated over the telephone, also came a day after both the U.S. Senate and the European Parliament, the Common Market's legislative branch, charged his government had cheated in the election.

Although not specifically mentioning any nation, Marcos said he deplores any action that "usurps the powers of our parliament." It was the National Assembly, where Marcos' New Society Movement party holds a two-thirds majority, that proclaimed the 68-year-old president the winner last Saturday.

Marcos said foreign media had not paid attention to polling safeguards in what he called "the rush of many to comment and judge the recent elections." He noted complaints could be taken to a presidential tribunal, the courts, or the government-appointed Commission on Elections.

"Sadly, there are those in foreign lands who for their own reasons have willingly picked up the theme, impugned the integrity of our recent presidential elections and have even called for foreign intervention in our national affairs," Marcos said.

"We deplore these actions as the acts of ungracious electoral losers and of modern-day imperialists who evidently think that a nation like the Philippines would willingly submit to their dictates and wishes," he said.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Aquino, who accuses Marcos of depriving her of victory through fraud and terrorism, met for the second time with special U.S. envoy Philip Habib, dispatched by President Reagan to the Philippines on a "fact-finding mission."

Habib, who also met with Marcos, has refused to talk about the sessions. But Mrs. Aquino's spokesman, Rene Saguisag, said Habib asked the opposition leader during their 35-minute meeting today what direction she thought events would take, particularly the protest campaign she has called against Marcos and his supporters.

Mrs. Aquino smiled, said Saguisag, and said, "Wait and see. Let events speak for themselves."

Elderly Warriors Brave Mountains To See Queen

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A 70-year-old Gurkha who fought for the British crown nearly four decades ago walked with a cane across mountain ridges to talk to Queen Elizabeth II. A one-legged veteran seven years his senior was carried for three days.

They were among 173 retired Gurkha soldiers who met Britain's monarch Thursday. Most of them had trekked for days from their remote mountain villages with their fabled Gurkha tenacity.

"I have served the queen for most of my life, and when I received the invitation to meet her the call was too strong," said Dalbahadur Rai, a winner of the British Military Cross who hiked 10 days from his village near Mount Everest before finding a bus.

Rai, who walks with a cane because of sore knees, said he trekked across mountain ridges and rivers, stopping to sleep each night at the homes of villagers who invited him in.

Also among the former warriors was 64-year-old Bhanbhagta Gurung, who won Britain's highest medal for gallantry, the Victoria Cross, in Burma in 1945 for single-handedly clearing out five Japanese bunkers with grenades, bayonets and his knife.

"It is a privilege and honor to finally meet the Maharani (queen)," he told reporters.

Bhakabhadur Rai, a 77-year-old Military Cross winner with a wooden leg, was carried for three days from the Everest region in order to meet the queen. He lost his left leg in Malaya, present-day Malaysia, in 1953.

The queen and her husband Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, were on a four-day state visit to this Himalayan kingdom, the world's only Hindu monarchy. They left today for New Zealand.

On Thursday, the queen chatted and posed for photographs with the ex-soldiers on the lawn of the British military attaché's residence.

"By their legendary exploits, the Gurkhas have won for themselves a place in military history," she said in a banquet speech Monday.

Prince Philip on Thursday flew by helicopter to Dharan in southeastern Nepal, where he visited the Gurkha recruitment camp and a 70-bed British military hospital.

The ex-soldiers who met the queen had a combined total of 4,701 years service in the British army, mostly during World War II.

Five of the former fighters hold the Victoria Cross, and 117 others also have won British medals.

Don't ask partner to do what you can do for yourself. Defense is a co-operative venture, and it doesn't help to blame partner for failing to do the right thing when you could have prevented him from going wrong.

South saw no hope of slam once East opened the bidding. Although it was possible that diamonds might have proved to be a superior contract, South's bid of four spades cannot be criticized.

West led the jack of clubs and declarer played low from dummy. East signalled that he did not want a club continuation by furnishing his lowest card, the six. West thought that East wanted a heart led through dummy's tenace, so he shifted to that suit. The defense had shot their bolt.

Since he would set up dummy's hearts if he rose with the ace, East was forced to play low. Declarer won, cashed two high diamonds and ruffed a diamond on the table. Although East overruffed, he was doing so with a natural trump winner. The ace of hearts was the third and last trick that declarer surrendered.

East mentioned that a trump shift by West at trick two would have stranded declarer with a diamond loser. He was right about that, but wrong to blame his partner. He himself was at fault for permitting declarer to make his contract.

East should have won the first trick with the king of clubs and shifted to the jack of trumps. Now as long as West signalled his heart length so that East could win the right heart—in this case, the second round of the suit—there was no way that declarer would avoid losing a trick in each suit for down one.

IRS Speeds Up Returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven percent fewer couples and individuals have filed federal tax returns so far this year, raising the possibility of a processing crunch as the April 15 deadline draws closer.

For the moment, however, the Internal Revenue Service is processing returns at a far faster pace than at this time a year ago. The inventory of unprocessed returns totals 14.7 million, compared with 18.1 million at this time in 1985, figures showed Thursday.

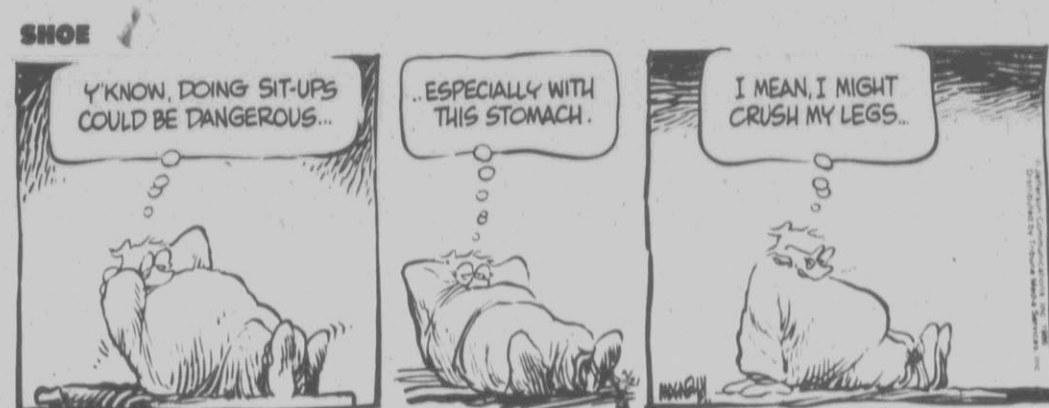

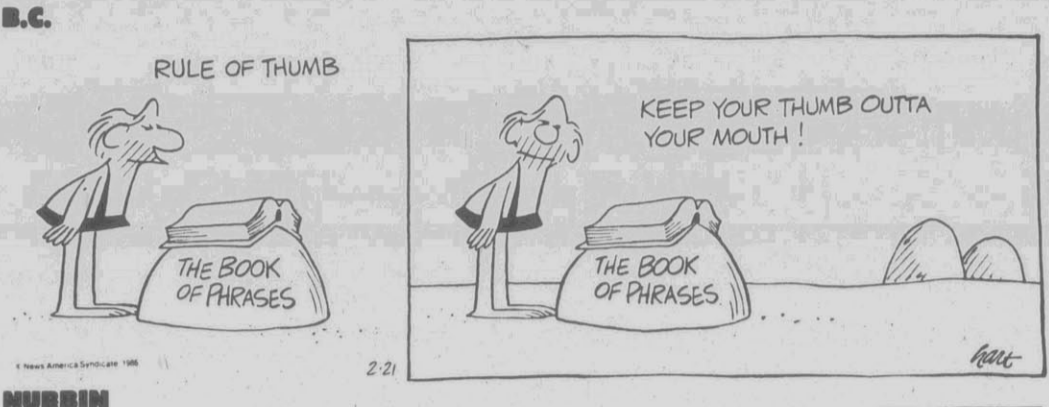

Through Feb. 14, the IRS had received 20.1 million returns, compared with 21.6 million for the same period last year. This year's total is 24 percent below the comparable period in 1984.

The agency has processed 26.9 percent of returns received this year; at this time last year, when computer problems played havoc with processing, 16.2 percent of the returns had made their way through the IRS.

For the moment, IRS officials are not expressing alarm about the slow filing pace. However, cautioned spokesman Wilson Fadely, "in any year you get a tremendous crush of returns at one time, it becomes difficult to process all those in the timely fashion we normally would."

IRS Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr., pleading with a House subcommittee earlier this week not to cut the agency's budget, noted fewer returns are being filed early and said that if too many people wait until near the deadline, there could be problems.

"Meeting processing schedules under these conditions places additional stress on resources," Egger said. "This and other problems will be made worse without necessary funding."

Released
 LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Two former military governors have been cleared of involvement in an alleged coup plot last December against the military government, a pro-government newspaper said.

The Daily Times said Group Capt. Salaudeen Latinwo and Group Capt. David Ikpeme were freed from custody, and that some other suspects detained in connection with the same affair had also been released. It gave no other details, and there was no comment from government authorities.

Latinwo and Ikpeme were among 14 military officers detained on suspicion of involvement in the alleged coup plot against President Ibrahim Babangida.
