Marcos Faces Military Rebellion

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Two top military leaders demanded Saturday that President Ferdinand E. Marcos resign and allow Corazon Aquino to lead the nation. But the embattled president accused them of plotting a coup and ordered them to end their rebellion.

In one of the most serious challenges Marcos has faced in his 20 years in power, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Lt. Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, the deputy armed forces chief, said Marcos should resign "while there is still time."

Hundreds of people chanting "Cory, Cory!" — Mrs. Aquino's nickname — gathered outside two adjacent military camps on the outskirts of Manila where Enrile and Ramos were holed up.

The two men told a news conference at the heavily guarded Defense Ministry headquarters inside Camp Aguinaldo that Marcos stole the Feb. 7 election from opposition leader Mrs. Aquino, and called on the military and the Cabinet to join them in opposing Marcos.

Enrile said generals loyal to Marcos had intended to arrest all opposition leaders and added, "I imagine orders like this would come from the highest authority."

An Aquino spokesman, Assemblyman Homobono Adaza, said her supporters had heard arrest orders were out for opposition leaders. He said Mrs. Aquino was "secure in a safe place."

Marcos said on national television that there was a military plot to assassinate him. He urged Ramos and Enrile to "stop this stupidity and surrender so that we may negotiate."

In Washington, the White House issued a statement saying it was concerned about the "credibility and legitimacy" of the election and called upon all parties to resolve their differences in a peaceful manner.

President Reagan and the U.S. Congress have been increasingly critical of the Marcos government and the conduct of the election.

Enrile told the news conference that the U.S. and Japanese embassies had been informed of the situation, but said no foreign government had a role in the rebellion.

Cardinal Jaime Sin, the Roman Catholic prelate in the Philippines, offered to mediate to avoid bloodshed. But he also broadcast a statement calling for people to back Enrile and Ramos, saying they should "be around at Camp Aguinaldo to show your solidarity and your support in this very cruial period."

More than 1,000 people gathered outside Camp Aguinaldo and as many as 400 people were seen in the streets at nearby Camp Crame, where the national Constabulary headed by Ramos has its offices.

Young men climbed on the fence around Camp Aguinaldo to lift bags of rice over to soldiers inside. Earlier, soldiers carried sacks of weapons into Camp Aguinaldo, the largest military base in the country.

Early Sunday, Ramos came out of Camp Crame in civilian clothing and greeted the crowd, which chanted his name and surged forward to shake his hand and hug him. He climbed atop a pickup truck and said he was not trying to engineer a coup but to protect the constitution.

"We thank the people for giving us your support," he said.

Reagan Proposes Missile Cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a letter to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, is calling for elimination of medium range missiles in Europe as a "constructive first step" toward a worldwide curb of the nuclear arms race, a U.S. official said Saturday night.

The letter was to be signed over the weekend and sent to Moscow at the beginning of the week. A presidential statement to the nation also is planned, said the official, who insisted on anonymity.

Reagan's decision was based on the advice of most of his senior arms control specialists, who see an agreement on U.S. and Soviet medium range missiles as the most likely way to break the deadlock at the negotiating table at Geneva.

"It holds out the hope of earliest progress," said the official, who told The Associated Press that Reagan's letter would also touch on long range nuclear weapons, space-based defense systems and other aspects of the complex arms race.

He said revised instructions would be sent to the U.S. negotiating team, headed by Max Kampelman, in Geneva.

Reflecting the concern of China and U.S. allies in Asia, the president also proposed that the more than 100 mobile SS-20 missiles the Soviets have deployed in their Asian territories be reduced to very low numbers.

These missiles are targeted on China and Japan and were not included in the disarmament proposal Gorbachev made in mid-January.

The United States has deployed 236 Pershing 2 and Cruise missiles in West Germany, Britain and Italy, all aimed at Soviet territory. Eventual installation of 572 missiles is planned. The Soviets, meanwhile, have about 300 SS-20s targeted at Western Europe.

HEART LESSON — Visiting lecturer Pam Burkhart of the Pitt County Heart Association spoke to members of Tanya Hankins' third grade class at Elmhurst Elementary School last week. Ms. Burkhart, who wore a costume depicting the body's heart and circulatory system, told the students how to keep the heart in good shape. Governors Blast Reagan Budget But Support Cuts

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors attacked President Reagan's budget Saturday as "a one-way street" that shifts responsibilities to the states without providing the money to pay for them.

A report called "Federalism and the States 1986," said the governors agreed that "reducing the federal deficit must be a very high priority," and they renewed their call on the administration to consider defense cuts and tax increases as steps toward that goal.

The report was made public by Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, chairman of the National Governors Association, the day before the formal opening of the group's annual winter meeting.

With Reagan calling for a comprehensive study of welfare programs, the governors repeated their opposition to what they called "attempts to shift the current federal costs back to states and localities under the guise of federalism."

The report repeated association positions on the need to "increase revenues if the balanced reductions in defense and domestic spending are not sufficient to reduce the structural defecit."

But most governors who responded this week to an Associated Press survey tended to side with the president's opposition to tax increases.

Alexander, a Republican, said he would support a tax increase "only as an absolute last resort. Washington should control its spending first."

Since Reagan took office in 1981, he has pushed for a widespread shift of programs from the federal government to the states, an effort he labeled "New Federalism."

Fuel Price Skid Surprises Dealers

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Local oil and gasoline distributors don't understand why prices for fuel are dropping so dramatically, but they agree that they have never seen prices decline so drastically in such a short period of time.

The falling fuel prices have been reflected in the price consumers pay at gasoline service stations. A survey of several local service stations where customers pump their own gasoline found that prices for regular gasoline ranged from 85.9 cents to 94.9 cents, while the price of unleaded gasoline ranged from 89.9 cents to 97 cents per gallon.

Managers said they have not noticed a particular increase in sales due to the lower prices.

Roger Brown, manager of Etna Service Station No. 2 on Fifth Street, said sales of gasoline at his station depend more on the weather than the price of the fuel. "People are going to need gasoline no matter what the price," he said. "There may have been a slight increase in sales, but not much. All the stations in town have lower prices."

"It takes a while, with a ripple effect, before the lowered prices on a barrel of oil reaches the consumer level," said Walker L. Allen Jr., president of W.L. Allen Oil Co. of Greenville.

"Now gasoline is under a dollar a gallon. The lowest I've seen locally is 87 cents for a gallon of regular leaded gasoline. That's a 13- to 15-cent a gallon drop in the last two or three months.

"I never thought I'd see it under a dollar a gallon," he added. "It is most unusual. I have never seen prices fall this rapidly."

"I am surprised the prices have dropped as far as they have," said Bill Wheless, plant supervisor of Quality Oil Co. of Greenville. "Gasoline seems to keep coming down. I have never seen it drop this much so frequently. It has probably dropped at the pump as much as 20-23 cents in the last two months.

"There has to be a stopping point. I just don't think it can drop much farther," Wheless said. "It seems to me it would bankrupt some countries like it is about to do to Mexico now."

At Farmville Petroleum Inc., President Bryant Oakley said he thinks the prices will continue to drop for another week or two. "Probably the bottom will be between 80-85 cents on gasoline, and on heating fuel probably about 90 cents.

"OPEC prices are dropping, is the only reason for it," Oakley said.

Troubled Farm Economy Hits Tractor Dealerships

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A decline in the number of tractor dealers in Pitt County seems to be going hand-in-hand with the decline in the farm economy over the past few years.

Two years ago, there were a half-dozen businesses where farmers could go to buy a new tractor, a disc harrow, a combine, or parts for their tractors and other equipment.

But today, only three dealers are in the tractor-selling business in the county — Farmville Implement Co. in Farmville, Herring International in Greenville and M.O. Blount & Sons in Bethel.

Hendrix Barnhill Co., though still selling irrigation systems and installing water and sewer lines, gave up its Allis-Chalmers dealership in June 1984, while Eastern Tractor, the only Ford tractor dealer in the county, closed in July 1985, followed in October by Ayden Tractors Inc., which sold Massey-Ferguson and Allis-Chalmers farm equipment. Waller Tractor, one of two John Deere dealers in Pitt, closed next.

"I think it will hurt by having dealers close," Leroy James, chairman of the Agricultural Extension Service office, said last week. "It will put our farmers to somewhat of a disadvantage."

But James suggested, "farmers just don't have the capital to buy (tractors) in this period we're in. They don't have the funds to buy tractors, not the average one, I'm talking about. With the depressed prices, they can't afford it ... and the uncertainty with the tobacco program."

James said tractors range from $30,000 to $80,000 each. "It depends on the size of the tractor ... some are up to $90,000. And combines ... $10,000 to ... even $50,000, depending on the size. One man said his cost $70,000."

But, according to James, "I guess Pitt County is really blessed. We have a lot of equipment to do farming with. Most any farm will average two tractors and there were 1,700 farmers this past year. I don't know what we've got now, but I think a lot of equipment probably won't be used this year."

One big problem, with dealers closing, James said, is the availability of parts. "Parts are awfully important."

But he said, "I haven't heard of problems in service and parts. A lot of farmers do their own work, they have the skills," and farmers can "go to surrounding counties to pick up parts."

Roland Faulkner, at Herring International, a Case-International dealer since February 1985, said Friday that "sales have not been good at all."

"People seem to be reducing the size (of the tractors

Pharmacy Managers Say Capsules Will be Around

BY DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

While Johnson & Johnson has decided to stop production of over-the-counter medicines in capsules in the wake of the latest Tylenol-capsule poisoning, local pharmacy managers said they don't expect other companies to follow suit or sales trends to be affected.

"There are some people who just can't swallow tablets, and I've read where the capsules are cheaper to make," said Bill Brown, manager at Hollowell's Drug Stores Inc. "And if all companies stopped making capsules, there would be a tremendous amount of products returned. The number would be astronomical."

The decision to stop production came after two bottles of Extra Strength Tylenol produced by Johnson & Johnson were found to be tainted with cyanide after a 23-year-old New York woman, who had taken some of the capsules, died Feb. 8. The death came 3½ years after seven people in Illinois suffered the same fate.

The pharmacy managers agreed that the other companies probably won't stop selling products in capsule form because of the expenses involved in switching equipment.

"My personal feeling is that the other companies haven't jumped on the bandwagon because it would cost so much to change over," Brown said.

"I can't see it happening," said Lisa Riggs, who is a pharmacist at Kerr Drug Stores. "It's too expensive to make that kind of a change in the industry because one company is having a problem."

One manager said it's impossible to make some products in anything other than a capsule form.

"There are some products that don't have a tablet substitute," said Ed Hemingway, pharmacy manager with Farm Fresh Inc.

"Tylenol has just been picked at random. This could have happened to any company," Brown said. "The Tylenol people did what was best for them. They're trying to let the people know they're trying to make a safe product."

"This is a positive move on their part to safeguard the consumer," said Charles Carter, pharmacy manager with Kroger Sav-On Food & Drug. "What they're saying is it's time to pick on somebody else if you want to tamper with capsules."

"This was their only alternative," Ms. Riggs said. "The pro-

Israel Gives Up Search For Missing Soldiers, Ends Sweep Of Lebanon

BIRANIT, Israel (AP) — Convoys of smiling, waving Israeli soldiers pulled back across the border Saturday as Israel wound down a six-day search of south Lebanese villages for two soldiers captured by Shiite Moslem extremists.

The Israeli columns streamed through several crossings in the 53-mile border after Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and senior military commanders concluded there was little hope of finding the two Israelis.

The two soldiers, Pvts. Yossi Fink and Rahamim Al-Sheikh, were seized Monday in an ambush at Bint Jbeil, a Shiite village three miles north of the Israeli border.

By nightfall, Israeli military sources said all forces had been withdrawn from north of the Israeli-established security zone. The zone runs six to 10 miles deep into Lebanon, north of the Lebanese-Israeli border.

At the peak of the operation, U.N. officials estimated Israel had three mechanized battalions inside Lebanon, comprising about 1,500 troops.

In late afternoon near this farming settlement, dozens of armored personnel carriers chugged up the hill to the border fence along with jeeps, supply trucks and troop carriers.

The vehicles kicked up clouds of dust, and the returning soldiers clapped and waved as they crossed the border and sped toward their bases. Several soldiers at the gate threw chocolate and cans of soft drinks at their homeward-bound comrades.

Some soldiers shouted that they were happy to leave Lebanon.

Maj. Gen. Ori Orr, Israel's northern commander, told reporters: "The main consideration for the withdrawal is that according to our estimates, the chances are almost non-existent that the missing soldiers are in the area of the search. That's why we decided to withdraw."

BURIAL BENEFITS

Many people are members of a lodge, fraternal group, or union that provides a lump-sum death benefit to pay funeral costs. These organizations have such "burial benefits" as one of their membership fringe benefits. The money can range from as low as $100 to amounts covering the total costs, as in the case of many unions.

If you are a member of such a group, or groups, you still may not know whether or not there are such benefits or what they amount to. Check now to find out. Then, let whomever may be taking the responsibility know how much you have, and with what organization(s).

If there is a discrepancy between benefits and costs, you must decide whether your survivors need any additional special funds. The advantage of taking care of the funeral and burial costs now is that you spare your survivors one more immediate burden during a difficult time.

Investigators Find Little To Go On In Tylenol Study

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Two weeks after a poisoned Tylenol capsule killed a woman, investigators are stymied by what they call a crime without a motive.

"Right now, it's like looking for a needle in a haystack," said FBI spokesman Antonius Genakos, whose agency is still working to solve the 1982 deaths of seven people in the Chicago area from cyanide-laced Tylenol capsules.

Diane Elsroth, 23, of Peekskill, about 45 miles north of New York City, took two Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules at her boyfriend's home in Yonkers on Feb. 8. Two days later, medical authorities determined she had died of cyanide contained in one of those capsules.

A second bottle containing poisoned capsules was found three days later in a Woolworth's store, just blocks from the Bronxville A&P where the fatal bottle of Tylenol was purchased.

The death and the discovery of the second bottle led to a nationwide warning against use of Tylenol capsules. The manufacturer, Johnson & Johnson, later decided to stop using capsules entirely and to make Tylenol only as solid tablets and caplets or in liquid form, a move that could cost the company $150 million.

An FBI official said Saturday it was unlikely that the capsules were doctored at the two factories where they were filled and packaged. "But we still haven't ruled anything out," said FBI spokesman Lane Bonner.

No one has been charged with the 1982 Chicago deaths, which led Johnson & Johnson to implement a $100 million program to safeguard Tylenol, using a triple-seal system to resist tampering.

Bob Fletcher, a spokesman for the Illinois State Police said the tampering may have been a motiveless crime.

"Someone may have done it simply from the desire to demonstrate his ability to be cleverer than the cops," Fletcher said. "The first time it was easy. The second time, it was more challenging. It's like a higher level of chess."

Illinois State Police Director James Zagel said his department had three active leads gleaned from computerized reviews of tips from 50 states and 12 countries.

Fletcher said the information from the total 6,000 leads amassed over the past four years has been turned over to Westchester County investigators, but that no one from Illinois is working with New York.

"We're drawing what conclusions we can but so far there's not a lot," said Yonkers Deputy Police Chief Owen McClain, who heads the Elsroth investigation.

Bruce Bendish, head of the Homicide Bureau for the Westchester district attorney's office, called the Illinois information helpful. But neither he or McClain plan to send people to Illinois.

The FBI, charged by federal law after the Chicago deaths with investigating consumer product tampering, is handling any possible interstate links.

"We're looking to see if any information from Chicago applies. It's a very intensive case," said Genakos. "As long as there are leads to follow and as long as there are logical systems of inquiry, we are making progress. Eventually, we'll get the break we're looking for."

The Westchester medical examiner undertook a review of all recent autopsies and medical examiner-attended deaths to determine if cyanide had been present but overlooked as a possible cause of death. No new cyanide-linked deaths were found.

"We have excluded no theories or suspects," Bendish said.

Fletcher said his department was working on the theory the killer here could be the same person as in Illinois or a copycat. In either case, he said, killers, "no matter how scrupulous, may make a mistake."

Arrested

Greenville police have arrested five men on drug charges. All arrests were made at Fourth and Reade streets.

At 11 p.m. Saturday, James Wayne Clemmons of 200 Courtney Square was arrested for simple possession. At 11:45 p.m. Saturday, officers also charged Steven Rudolph Alexander of 102 Alexander Circle for simple possesion.

The following men were also charged by Greenville police for simple possession: German Allen Moore of Windsor was charged at 12:45 a.m. Saturday; Michael Dowle Smith of Kinston was arrested Friday at about 11:55 p.m., and Homer Lewis Buckner of Smithfield, Va., was arrested at 12:50 a.m. Saturday.

Child Is Killed

A 5-year-old Greenville boy was killed Saturday at about 7:35 p.m. when he was struck by a car on West 14th Street.

Police said Oceanman Andre Braswell of 1507 W. 14th St. ran from behind a parked car and was hit by a car driven by Fred Teel Jr. of Washington. Greenville police were continuing their investigation. No charges had been filed Saturday night.

Swiss Drug Leads To More Transplants

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doctors have been transplanting human organs for two decades or so, but the mid-1980s has seen an "amazing proliferation" of the life-saving surgery, thanks largely to a Swiss drug.

There are, however, some footnotes to this important chapter in medical history, problems having nothing to do with medicine.

When the federal Food and Drug Administration in late 1983 approved the use of the potent drug cyclosporine, which helps prevent the body's rejection of transplanted organs, new transplant centers went into business across the country.

That led to stiff competition for available livers, kidneys, hearts, pancreases. It also gave rise to reports of questionable practices:

—Patients who could pay more being shoved ahead of others on the priority list.

—The export of American organs to other countries while the waiting lists in the United States remained long.

—Illegal traffic in kidneys gathered overseas from poor people willing to sacrifice one of their two kidneys for money.

The extent of those abuses is not known. But clearly in the eyes of some who have shepherded the transplant program from its pioneering days, there are dangers ahead.

"What's happening is we're having centers perform transplants in very few numbers with very little experience in the field," says Dr. Oscar Salvatierra Jr., president of the United Network for Organ Sharing, which links 180 transplant centers and laboratories.

Also, he says, "We may end up in a free-for-all, scrambling for a short supply of organs."

One of the pioneers in the field is Dr. Thomas E. Starzl, who came from the University of Colorado to start a transplant program at the University of Pittsburgh five years ago. Even he is surprised at its success.

"It's an amazing proliferation of a new field," Starzl said. "My feeling has been that the '80s will be remembered in medical history as the time when transplantation and all the dreams that people had about it will really come to fruition."

From 1981 through 1985, Starzl and other surgeons at the University of Pittsburgh transplanted 634 livers, 768 kidneys, 198 hearts, 32 heart-lungs, 16 pancreases and three single lungs. Thirty-two times they transplanted a heart and lungs simultaneously, three times a heart and liver.

"Look at what's happened," Starzl says. "My God, here in one place in 1985 we did 250 liver transplants. That's almost inconceivable. It took 10 years for the world to do that many liver transplants before. The numbers are staggering."

In 1985 Starzl and his group also performed 176 kidney, 82 heart, 13 heart-lungs, seven pancreas, two single lung and one heart-liver transplants.

Starzl became one of two U.S. surgeons authorized to use cyclosporine in 1979. He perfected the technique and brought it with him when he came to Pittsburgh from Denver.

"Pittsburgh became the only place that had carte blanche for cyclosporine for any organ," Starzl says. But with the general release of the Swiss drug, things have changed.

In 1985, 35 other medical centers transplanted livers, 70 centers were transplanting hearts, 180 transplanting kidneys and 20 using pancreases. Most of these began after the drug became generally available in 1983.

Some transplant centers are seeking an alternative to cyclosporine, which patients must take every day all their lives at a cost of about $6,000 a year. It also produces some ill side effects, including excessive hair growth, facial puffiness and trembling.

Brian Broznick, organ procurement coordinator for the Pittsburgh Transplant Foundation, says it seems new transplant centers are opening every day, "even in places you wouldn't believe."

As competition grows, "We may end up in a free-for-all, scrambling for a short supply of organs."

"The number of organs is the same as it was five or six years ago," says Dr. David Winter of Sandoz Pharmaceuticals Corp., the Swiss manufacturer of cyclosporine. "Perhaps the desire to collect these organs has changed. Yet if you look closely, the number of centers around the world has really increased."

Twenty to 30 heart transplant centers easily could fill this nation's needs, Salvatierra says. That's about one-third the existing number.

Salvatierra suggests a better controlled system and recognition of transplant centers with successful track records, feasible work loads and a commitment to research.

Patients should be able to tell where they're likely to get the best possible results, he says.

"With the proliferation of transplant centers, the patient doesn't know that now," he says. "It's just another hospital. It's like going in for an appendectomy or a gall bladder operation."

Salvatrierra says only designated transplant centers should receive insurance reimbursements for the operations, which sometimes cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. Such a move would shut out many potential transplant centers and shut down many newcomers to the field.

"Those kind of transplant centers take from the donor pool and put nothing back," Broznick says. "You can't keep up your skills if you're only doing two or three heart transplants a year."

The federal Task Force on Organ Transplantation, apparently sharing those views, approved a 13-point checklist for transplant centers in January.

Roger Evans, a research scientist at the Battelle Human Affairs Research Centers in Seattle and a task force member who drafted the checklist, expects commercial insurers and eventually Medicare and Medicaid to use the task force's criteria for making reimbursements.

"It's aimed at not only getting some of them out of it, but keeping others from getting in," Evans says. "It's very clear that given the number of donor organs available, we don't need a real large number of centers to perform the procedures."

The inadequate supply of donor organs is the major problem, according to Dr. Anthony Monaco, president of the American Society of Transplant Surgeons and president-elect of the international society.

About 600 people currently are awaiting livers, hearts and kidneys at the University of California at Los Angeles alone. Not all will survive the often lengthy wait.

"As long as those situations exist and as long as we know of a great number of deaths in the country in which organs do not get donated, there's a lot of work to do," says Barbara Schulman, senior transplant coordinator for the Regional Organ Procurement Agency of Southern California.

Starzl, director of transplant surgery at Presbyterian-University Hospital of Pittsburgh, has made transplants important news in the Pittsburgh area, and local newspapers have keyed into the subject.

The Pittsburgh Press last spring and summer criticized the program's distribution of organs to foreigners. Starzl considers some of the stories "inaccurate and inflammatory."

The articles told of cases at Presbyterian-University Hospital in which foreigners, offering higher surgical fees, were pushed ahead of Americans waiting for kidney transplants.

The hospital, while admitting no wrongdoing, quickly adopted a new policy setting quotas of 5 percent to 10 percent for transplanting suitable kidneys, livers and hearts into foreign patients.

A new governing board also was formed for the Pittsburgh Transplant Foundation, which distributes hundreds of organs donated annually in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio. Foundation Director Donald Denny resigned in January, however, saying the new panel left the hospital with too much control.

In November, the Pittsburgh Press reported on overseas trafficking in kidneys from living, unrelated donors, a practice illegal in the United States. The newspaper interviewed numerous foreigners who admitted to selling one of their two kidneys as a way out of poverty.

The newspaper also told of at least 300 cases in which kidneys gathered in the United States were sent abroad, even though more than 8,000 Americans are awaiting kidney transplants at any one time.

"What we're dealing with is complex therapy," he says. "There are definitely problems we have to address."

The American Society of Transplant Surgeons' 500 to 600 members are expected to ratify a code of conduct at their annual meeting in May, according to Monaco.

The code proposes that all patients receive transplants, regardless of financial status or belief, and that the operations be performed only at established centers. It also recommends that Americans be given preference for donor organs, "but that it is appropriate under certain circumstances to treat other human beings," Monaco says.

The proposed code sets a 5 percent limit for transplanting organs into foreigners.

Salvatierra says Starzl "contributed the most to the field of transplantation than any other individual."

Starzl, an Iowa-born surgeon who turns 60 in March, performed the world's first successful liver transplant in 1967 at the University of Colorado.

Rabies Outbreak

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The official Antara news agency reported that rabies is present in 21 of 27 Indonesian provinces, despite a campaign to slaughter stray dogs to slow the spread of the dangerous disease.

Health Ministry spokesman Dr. Sumaryati Aryoso, quoted by Antara, gave no figure on how many fatalities rabies had caused, but an official said earlier rabies killed 19 people in central and west Java alone in the past two months.

County Board Should Develop Plan For Change

The Pitt County Commissioners must be bold, but careful. When it comes to redistricting, they are in rough, uncharted territory.

Changes in the voting method, as suggested to the board by the NAACP, need to be made. No minorities have been elected to the board since its inception. The question of what changes to make has commissioners understandably stymied.

Any plan to redistrict or change election methods could be slow in gaining approval at the state and federal level, so prompt local measures to provide minority representation should be considered. Perhaps commissioners should prepare a proposal — in time for consideration by the N.C. General Assembly in June 1986 — appointing two minority board members.

The board could then fund a comprehensive population study to determine where the people are and where shifts will occur. The 1980 census is too dated to base election revisions on, and another census won't be conducted until 1990. Four years is too long to delay action but concrete evidence is needed to take action sooner.

After the study is complete, commissioners could consider a redistricting plan that includes a combination district/at-large election method for an eight-member board. Any plan they author should be ready for approval by the General Assembly in time to be implemented by the 1988 election.

The important factor is that the commissioners produce leadership and do this tough job themselves. All changes should originate at the local level. A federal agency or court has no business making decisions about Pitt County's future. The county, in the 1960s, saw the effects of federal mandates on the education system — effects that are still being felt. The more local officials orchestrate change, the better off the county is, financially and politically.

Appointing minorities to a board is only a short-term solution to the problem. Redistricting is more long-term, but the permanent solution is for the black community to develop and support highly qualified candidates for office. Appointing and redistricting provide the visibility needed to initiate the leadership process, but these measures are just a beginning.

Past Is Catching Up With Marcos

A consensus appears to be growing among observers of the Philippines political scene that Ferdinand Marcos will have to bow to domestic pressures and eventually step aside.

External pressures are growing, too. Members of the U.S. Senate provided a very strong signal of disapproval that was almost a unanimous vote against the strongman. Even before President Reagan's special envoy, Philip Habib, had completed his assessment of Filipino attitudes, the White House issued a harsh statement on Marcos' re-election process.

The secretary of state sounded off, observing that while U.S. military bases in the area are very important to us that they should not outweigh American national concern over supporting a corrupt and authoritative regime.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Shingles are something used on rooftops. Right?

Right, but they are also an infection which most often spreads around the chest and gives the recipient a real fit.

It is caused by the old fashioned chicken pox virus, which most of us have as children and soon forget. The virus, however, stays in the body and awaits a day many years later when it can reactivate itself. Then it finds a handy nerve and follows it, causing pain, itching, burning and eventually a breaking out above the nerve similar to the original chicken pox. If the case is uncomplicated the spots gradually dry up and fall away, perhaps leaving some scars in their place.

A few weeks back, your columnist hardly knew what shingles was. Unfortunately the disease developed, in my case, along the left arm. Fortunately it was uncomplicated and disappeared in a couple of weeks.

As I told friends about them, I heard some horror tales about the disease. It can get in the eyes and scalp, for instance, or in the mouth or even the lungs. And how did it ever get a name like shingles? The dictionary says shingles means to gird. Since frequently the rash wraps around one side of the chest, the meaning becomes clear.

Anyway it was a bad time to try to get any sympathy for shingles. I called one friend who promptly said she and her husband both had both been in bed with the flu. That seemed to be the case with most people with whom I talked during the time. Flu was around and there were some severe cases. After hearing from flu victims about their experiences, shingles didn't seem all that bad.

She noted that the per-gallon price for unleaded had fallen below $1 in Pitt County.

"Gas was over a dollar per gallon when I started driving at 16," Jane said with glee. "I have never paid less than a dollar until now."

It's sure like old times.

You don't have to be such an old timer to recall when gas sold for 35 cents to 42 cents per gallon. That is, in the days before OPEC.

Some of us can recall price wars when gas dropped below 20 cents per gallon and half of that was tax.

The real oldtimers can recall when 20 cents per gallon was a normal price for gas and they gave you pink glassware for buying it. Of course, the gas was also pumped for you and the attendant checked the oil, cleaned the windshield and swept out the car.

Are the good old days returning?

What To Do About Marcos?

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress returned to Capitol Hill last week, all charged up about Ferdinand Marcos. They were in a mood to do something about the Philippines' newly re-elected president. The questions were what to do, and how to go about doing it.

About 20 members of the House and Senate went to the Philippines to observe the election at first hand. No one challenges their conclusion that the election was fatally tainted. The National Assembly proclaimed Marcos the winner with 10,807,000 votes to 9,272,000 for Corazon Aquino, but the figures are thought to have little meaning. Given a free and peaceful election, followed by an honest count, Mrs. Aquino would have won.

So far, so good. But what precisely to do? Rep. Dante B. Fascell of Florida wants to suspend all economic and military aid to the Philippines. Congress presumably has the power to do this. If the move succeeded in causing Marcos to resign, well and good. If the move failed, the mismanaged Philippine army would be further weakened in its effort to contain the communist "New People's Army," and the country's faltering economy would be further impoverished.

Marcos holds powerful cards. His party controls the National Assembly. Marcos controls the army. It isn't much of an army, but it is all the army there is. Marcos has imposed martial law in the past, and as recently as three weeks ago he was "thinking seriously" about imposing it again.

There is the matter of the legitimacy of the election. Under Philippine law, Marcos lawfully has been certified as the winner. If he will not resign, he can be removed only by process of law. It is not enough that "everybody knows" that his purported victory was achieved by intimidation, fraud, vote buying, ballot theft and wholesale disfranchisement of Aquino's supporters. At some point these charges must be proved before an appropriate tribunal with authority to convict and remove him.

Other forces hold powerful cards. Eighty-five percent of the islands' 55 million people reportedly are Catholics. In its manifesto of Feb. 14, the nation's Catholic Bishops' Conference unanimously condemned the election: It was unparalleled in its fraudulence; it was characterized by harrassment, terrorism and murder; it amounted to "a criminal use of power to thwart the sovereign will of the people." The bishops called for the faithful to take non-violent appropriate actions "in a creative, imaginative way."

These creative, imaginative ways also will be pursued by Mrs. Aquino. Even the rigged, official count gave her more than 46 percent of the vote. She has become a force in Philippine politics that cannot be discounted. When she calls for a general strike, or for boycotts of products associated with Marcos, million of angered Filipinos will follow her leadership.

The truth is that none of the alternatives to Marcos is a happy alternative. Ronald Reagan cannot oust him by force; he can use only persuasion. Too brazen an interference by the United States in the internal concerns of the Philippines would be deeply resented. If somehow the United States could give the presidency to Mrs. Aquino — as if we had it to give — she would be tagged "the American puppet."

Perhaps no one who professes faith in a democratic system is now capable of effectively governing the islands. And the communists, whose guerrillas are active in 60 of the 73 provinces, are waiting at the gate.

Finding A Middle Ground

Terrence Hunt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has been exploring how far Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos will go in sharing political power with Corazon Aquino and whether she would be willing to settle for anything less than the presidency.

That is the gist of the mission to Manila by Philip C. Habib, the special envoy of President Reagan.

The administration is not sure how events eventually will play out, but it is known that Habib has urged Marcos to acknowledge his strong opposition in the hopes the two camps can work together.

The administration hopes Habib can find some flexibility and common ground among the opposing parties. White House officials are known to believe that the best outcome would be for a two-party system to take hold with regular elections.

With Marcos and Mrs. Aquino still feuding bitterly, the question is how to get that process started. Marcos has raised the threat of imposing martial law, as he did once before during his 20 years in power, and Mrs. Aquino is telling audiences, "Let us not rest until we have brought down Marcos."

The U.S. Senate, by an 85-9 vote, went on record Wednesday as saying the elections were "marked by such widespread fraud that they cannot be considered a fair reflection of the will of the people of the Philippines."

Pleading for time, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said the situation in the Philippines was difficult and delicate, and, "We don't want to jump at it with precipitous action."

While Reagan has questioned the legitimacy of Marcos' election victory, the White House is not about to call for new voting. In the administration's view, if the United States deals only with governments that are freely and fairly elected, it would be unable to do business with most member nations of the United Nations.

A cutoff in U.S. aid to the Philippines is the biggest club the administration can wield in dealing with Marcos. For his part, Marcos holds the key to the future of the two U.S. military installations in the Philippines: Clark Air Base and Subic Bay, the main forward port for the U.S. Navy's Pacific fleet.

With Habib still taking soundings in Manila, the United States is not about to play its ultimate card.

"We think that a number of qualified members of Congress discussing the cutting off of aid, the removal of military bases, are very premature," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said this week.

Replacement of the bases would cost $5 billion to $8 billion, and the United States would wind up with facilities that are less strategically located, according to a senior White House official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Since the Feb. 7 election, the Reagan administration has given confusing and conflicting signals about its interpretation of events.

Reagan, at his news conference last week, spoke of election violence and "the possibility of fraud ... occurring on both sides." That was seen in the Philippines as a statement of support for Marcos, since virtually all other observers had blamed only his forces for the abuses.

By week's end and at the urging of Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., a leader of the U.S. team of election observers, the president reversed himself and spoke only of "widespread fraud and violence perpetrated largely by the ruling party."

Reagan said the fraud "was so extreme that the election's credibility has been called into question both within the Philippines and in the United States."

That was a big blow to Marcos, who that very day was declared the election winner by the National Assembly, which is controlled by his supporters.

At his news conference last week, Reagan also was asked which was of greater importance in the Philippines: the future of the American bases there or the democratic process. In reply, he spoke only about the bases, saying, "I don't know of any (in the world) that's more important than the bases on the Philippines."

But, then along came Shultz, testifying before the Senate Budget Committee. "We have a stake in democracy," Shultz declared. "Let's put that first, over and above the bases."

Reagan Faces Decision On Afghanistan

WASHINGTON — A seemingly isolated decision whether to send modern weapons to anti-Soviet Afghan rebels may determine the future of the Reagan Doctrine far beyond bloody Afghanistan.

Debate is heated in the Pentagon, where the Joint Chiefs of Staff, worried about Soviet reaction, have delayed the new weapons. There is also high-level CIA opposition. Pakistan's President Zia, whose country is at the cutting edge of Soviet power, shares no such timidity. Zia believes the new weapons might drive Moscow into serious negotiations and end its occupation.

Opposition from the Central Intelligence Agency and the military is in truth a surface problem. The real cause of delay is President Reagan's own failure to compel the bureaucracy to carry out his doctrine of reversing the communist tide by helping freedom fighters across the world. In short, Reagan has been silent.

The strong recommendation by Pentagon civilians, middle-level State Department officers and White House national security staffers to arm Afghan rebels with more than bows and arrows is a test that will decide the future of the Reagan Doctrine. It is up to the president to go beyond the rhetoric. Weapons for Afghan rebels, aid to Nicaragua's contras and help for Angolan anti-Soviet guerilla Jonas Savimbi all hinge on Reagan's determination to save his doctrine from death by disuse.

That is the opinion of Rep. James Courter of New Jersey, just back from a high-level congressional study tour that included Pakistan. He and other members of the delegation (which included administration officials) refused to discuss any aspect of the Afghan weapons question. Courter, no bomb-thrower, but a prudent student of national security, did make one comment to us: "If they can't muster the will and the discipline to make this tough decision, then where can they?"

The need for modern weapons in the hands of Afghan freedom-fighters is not in doubt. The Soviets recently imported a new monster weapon, the 240-millimeter mortar, that has transformed their ability to rout out guerrillas hidden in the fastness of small valleys.

A new, slow-flying aircraft has given the Soviets a front-line reconnaisance they have never had before. Other new weapons being battle-tested against Afghan rebels are pouring in. Aid to the mujaheddin from friendly states that do not like the idea of Soviet conquest of Afghanistan will never by itself turn back that invasion.

Pakistan's Zia first proposed upgrading weapons for the rebels more than six months ago and was turned down in Washinggton. He repeated his suggestion when the congressional delegation dined with him in Islamabad on its recent visit.

The Joint Chiefs are wary for two basic reasons. First, shoulder-fired Stingers (anti-aircraft weapons) would sooner or later for the first time fall into hands of the Soviets, who could profit from Stinger technology.

The second reason is more profound. Given Soviet power in that region and its proximity to Pakistan, the military brass worries about a sudden military reaction by the Kremlin when Stingers knock out dread Soviet MI-25 helicopter gunships. The U.S. logistic and supply-line base is thousands of miles away.

But Reagan never pretended that carrying out his doctrine would be risk-free. Zia, whose vulnerable nation has the most to lose, is willing to take his share of that overall risk. Moreover, there is an upside trade-off: Zia's conviction that the Soviets, traditionally conservative in military policy, would move toward withdrawl, not bigger war.

That is why the strongest backers of the Reagan Doctrine, viewing the decision on Afghan revel aid as crucial, say privately the president must make clear to his own administration the depth of his commitment. White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan has been quietly advised by these supporters of the doctrine to set up an Oval Office command post to oversee all special aid programs in support of major anti-communist movements.

Presidential oversight could work magic in clearing away parochial worries of military leaders, whose instinctive attitude is to avoid risk-taking. In Zbigniew Brzezinski's phrase, it would end "managerial neglect." Helping the Afghans gets enthusiastic support at the Pentagon outside the JCS, and there is no monolithic opposition even within the Chiefs. CIA bureaucrats, still carrying the wounds of congressional probes a decade ago, are nervous about such enterprises but would quickly fall in line if nudged by the president.

Upping the ante in Afghanista would demonstrate that Reagan has the will to make his doctrine work. That is a message bearing important consequences not only on Capitol Hill, at the Pentagon and the CIA — but in the Kremlin as well.

To the editor:

I was on my way home from work approximately three weeks ago when I almost hit a train. It was 5:45 p.m. at the 10th Street crossing just off Dickinson Avenue. The train sign was not working.

There was a man with a flare, running, about to cross Dickinson. The engine had already crossed 10th; therefore, the light of the train had passed. The turn off from Dickinson onto 10th is a very short distance to the tracks. The traffic ahead of me on Dickinson caused me not to see the flare nor the train. The flare caught the corner of my eye. Thankfully, I realized what it was, only to look up to see I was almost at the train.

Every time I have read of someone hitting a train, I have thought, "how foolish. Anyone can see as big a thing as a train." I have definitely changed my mind. At night, unless there happens to be traffic on the other side, once the engine has passed, it is almost impossible to see a train.

There should be laws or some type of regulations that require all railroad cars to have reflectors on their sides. That, at least, would be a help.

To the editor:

I am responding to East Carolina University Student Government Association President David Brown's parking complaint appearing in The Daily Reflector on Feb. 14.

I disagree with his complaint against the Greenville Police Department concerning issuing parking citations and towing vehicles that are parked illegally in my neighborhood. On numerous occasions, my driveway has been blocked for hours at a time by illegally parked cars owned by students attending ECU. This poses a hazard to my car and other vehicles owned by other people who need to use my driveway.

Why shouldn't the students obey Greenville's parking laws, in order for the "real problem" to be eliminated?

In my opinion, when the City Council discusses this matter Feb. 24, it should commend the Greenville Police Department and instruct the department to continue enforcement of parking laws in Greenville for the benefit of all motorists.

Why should it be necessary to reactivate the ECU-City Parking Commission when the problem to be considered is primarily illegal parking?

To the editor:

Every parent is challenged by the question, "How much freedom should I give my children?" A proper balance between too much and too little is difficult to maintain and requires great wisdom. If too restricted, a youngster may become rebellious. On the other hand, if parents are too lenient, children may lack security.

A. Purnell Bailey visited an orange grove where an irrigation pump had broken down. The season was unusually dry and some of the trees were beginning to die for lack of water. The man giving the tour then took Bailey to his own orchard where irrigation was used sparingly. "These trees could go without rain for another two weeks," he said. "You see, when they were young, I frequently kept water from them. This hardship caused them to send their roots deeper into the soil in search of moisture. Now mine are the deepest rooted trees in this area. While others are being scorched by the sun, these are finding moisture at a greater depth."

Children actually want loving discipline. If they don't receive it, they can feel aimless and insecure. Perhaps they'll thrive for a time, but in life's droughts, they will wither and die. In Houston, Texas, a teen-ager hanged himself and left this pathetic note at the base of a tree: "This is the only thing around here that has any roots."

For lack of discipline, Eli's sons brought shame to their father and reproach to God's name. Lord, help us give our children deep spiritual roots.

If we take the time to pray and seek God's guidance every day, he'll give us strength and wisdom to help our children grow strong and true.

Native Giant

Back in the late 1930s and early 1940s North Carolina newspapers regularly carried headlines over feature articles reading something like this:

"Einstein's Theory Easy, Dr. Henderson Declares"

The headlines, of course, referred to Albert Einstein, whose theory of relativity revolutionized the science of physics and foreshadowed the harnessing of nuclear energy in atomic weapons and in atomic power plants. And the fellow who found relativity so simple was Dr. Archibald Henderson, a home-grown genius who headed the math department at the University of North Carolina and who also found time to write highly regarded biographies of playwright George Bernard Show and books on history and drama and on such abstruse mathematical problems as one that bore the fascinating title, "The 27 Lines Upon a Cubic Surface."

Henderson was so versatile and so erudite that he was regarded as an invaluable Tar Heel resource, so much so that heartfelt sighs of relilef were emitted from Manteo to Murphy in 1925 when he turned down an offer to become president of the University of Oklahoma at a salary about three times what he was being paid at UNC. The offer had prompted the Greensboro Daily News to assert in an editorial, "North Carolina cannot afford to lose Archibald Henderson."

"Forget this Oklahoma business, Archibald," it implored. "It's nice and all that, but it won't do. Your own state is here and you are here and here you ought to stay. We've got to have you. Because you are just about our one and only proof that the grand old commonwealth doesn't have to go running off after damn Yankees and damn radicals every time it wants a scholar to blaze a trail in any field where genuine learning is at a premium."

Henderson's decision to remain on his own sod was hailed by Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, the renowned editor of the Richmond (Va.) News Leader, who called him "a mathematician of parts and a teacher of standing" and concluded, "he is doing as much as any single man in the South today to lay the foundation of a sincere and stimulating culture."

When I was a student at UNC in the early 1930s, Henderson was second only to Frank Porter Graham as the biggest man on a campus of faculty giants. We would nod our heads in awe and wonderment and in solemn agreement when a campus know-it-all would aver sagely that "Dr. Henderson is the only man in the United States who understands Einstein's theory of relativity."

So you can imagine my surprise a few years later when I read a newspaper article in which Dr. Henderson was quoted as saying that "understanding Einstein's special theory of relativity is really a very simple matter." I was equally nonplussed when he asserted in an interview with Hoke Norris, my comrade on the staff of the Associated Press's Raleigh bureau, that, in effect, he was going to make relativity as easy as ABC and explain it to the masses.

Henderson went on to point out to Norris that the nub of Einstein's theory is that time is not the same for a person standing still as it is for a person moving rapidly. He asked Norris to imagine he was traveling on a huge horizontal belt at a rate of 100,000 miles a second and that an automobile was being driven on the belt also at a speed of 100,000 miles per second.

"You would think, wouldn't you, that the car would be traveling with respect to the floor at the rate of 200,000 miles per second?" asked Henderson. "Well, actually the car would be traveling with relation to the stationary floor, at the rate of only 155,153 miles per second." Henderson added that if Norris and the chauffeur of the theoretical car would compare notes in passing he would learn that the chauffeur's watch was running slower than his and that the yardstick the chauffeur was carrying would be shorter than his — all because the chauffeur was going so much faster. That's when Norris threw up his hands in total bewilderment.

In fact, Henderson's attempts to simplify relativity even bewildered Einstein himself one time. This was brought out by Dr. Vinton A. Hoyle in an article about Henderson in 1947 when Henderson retired from the UNC faculty after half a century.

Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — In all the years of its existence, NASA has been the coddled darling of Congress. What NASA wants, NASA gets — that's how it used to be.

But the Challenger tragedy, bursting the space agency's reputation for triumph-upon-triumph, has changed all that.

Senators used to come to NASA hearings wearing their best smile to be photographed with astronauts. On Tuesday, in the first congressional look into the space shuttle explosion, they snarled.

"At this juncture, it seems to have been an avoidable accident instead of an unavoidable one," said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., when the hearing of the Senate science subcommittee had barely gotten under way.

The senators questioned everything from the way the space agency makes launch-no-launch decisions to its priorities to its operations without a permanent chief. One senator even put officials on the spot on whether they were more loyal to the White House than to Congress.

NASA's acting administrator William Graham and shuttle director Jesse Moore were asked about the O-rings on the shuttle booster rockets, the cold at the launch pad and other suspected causes of the Jan. 28 explosion. Their replies fell on skeptical ears.

Hollings was dissatisfied after one exchange with Graham and pointed out that he sat on three Senate committees dealing with NASA — the budget, oversight and appropriations committees.

"I got you coming three ways," he said.

The senators were equally contentious with William Rogers, the chairman of the presidential commission investigating the accident, and Neil Armstrong, America's first moonwalker, who is the vice chairman.

When Hollings suggested the commission would not make much headway if it didn't hire investigators, Rogers replied: "I was a D.A. (District Attorney) for a long time and I know how to conduct criminal investigations."

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., asked if congressional staffers could sit in on the commission's executive meetings. No, said Rogers, citing the separation between executive and legislative branches. The commission was appointed by President Reagan and reports to him.

Rogers committed an act that is considered a sin by most Senate committees. When Gore pressed him for the most plausible explanations for the accident, Rogers replied: "At the moment, I'm not going to answer any of those questions."

Removing The Regulations

WASHINGTON — Only days before the Martin Luther King holiday last month, an embittered Rev. Jesse Jackson encountered CBS News correspondent Bob Schieffer by chance outside a Washington restaurant.

"How come you guys (in the press) keep letting Reagan wrap himself in Martin's legacy?" snapped Jackson. "He's manipulating history."

Schieffer shrugged helplessly at the charge, but he could have replied that the president has mastered the art of exploiting people's ignorance. And perhaps nowhere has Reagan's idiomatic recasting of history been more blatant and costly than in the life-threatening arena of federal regulation.

Reagan has spent a political lifetime campaigning against the evils of regulation, projecting an image that somehow government rules inhibit our freedom and deny us prosperity. On the stump, candidate Reagan often told tales like that of the worker who'd been fined by OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration) for standing too close to a ladder.

Such rhetorical jibes have played well over the years, leaving many Ameicans with the impression that federal regulations are more trouble than they're worth. Unfortunately, most Americans rarely hear stories of how these laws have saved thousands of lives and avoided millions of injuries. The truth is that federal regulations are the most underrated form of preventive medicine in America today.

"Economists have dominated the discussion of regulation for so long that many Americans have come to believe that regulation is an economic scrooge that inhibits our freedom," says Joan Claybrook, president of Ralph Nader's Public Citizen organization and author of a recent study on the benefits of federal regulation. "Quite the contrary: regulation is a public health enterprise that enhances our freedom — a civilizing process that confers innumerable tangible and intangible benefits on our society."

Look how times have changed. Thirty years ago, when the Salk anti-polio vaccine was introduced, the New York Times heralded it as "one of the greatest triumphs in the history of medicine." Yet, when the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) proposed to reduce the amount of lead in regular gasoline, thereby saving a minimuj of 50,000 children from the brain-damaging effects of airborne lead, there was no public acclaim.

Clean food, safe drugs and crashworthy cars are not coincidental. They are deliberate byproducts of carefully constructed federal regulations. And the record proves their worth.

•More than 100,000 lives have been saved since motor vehicle safety standards were first issued in 1969.

•Since 1973, the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) has supervised more than 3,500 voluntary or mandatory recalls involving an estimated 327 million consumer products with potential safety defects.

•Since 1965, more than 100 million motor vehicles with potential safety defects have been recalled by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA).

•The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has helped prevent untold numbers of deaths and adverse reaction to drugs through its investigative New Drug Application and Systems.

Indeed it's difficult, if not impossible, to calculate all the social benefits of an agency like the FDA, which regulates roughly 25 percent of all consumer goods, ranging from food additives to deodorant. But after a succession of cutbacks, the Reagan administration has proposed to reduce further the manpower of the FDA, as well as the Consumer Product Safety Commission and Environmental Protection Agency, among other government organs.

The major threat is another cutback in enforcement capability, a process that has led agencies to shift to consumers' shoulders more responsibility for the safe use of products. In a speech at a recent Consumer Federation convention, David Pittle, a former CPSC member, cited as an example of this trend the National Highway Safety Administration's refusal last July to reopen the investigation of "park-to-reverse" incidents involving Ford cars introduced from 1966 to 1980. A mechanical defect had led to 207 deaths and 4,000 injuries, said Pittle.

What's ironic is that the crowd that's pro-life in one arena appears indifferent to having lives threatened on throughways, around toxic waste dumps or by shoddy products. Will the anti-government crowd only begin to appreciate rules and regulations when the FDA, EPA and other agencies lose the resources to do their job?

Governors Agree On No Tax Hikes, No Social Security Cuts

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors appeared largely in agreement with President Reagan on taxes and Social Security as they arrived in the nation's capital Saturday for their annual winter meeting.

An Associated Press survey of the governors found a substantial majority opposing a tax increase to whittle away at federal budget deficits or saying that any such boost in taxes ought to be enacted only as a last resort.

The state officials also were overwhelmingly opposed to any retrenchment in Social Security as part of a deficit-reduction program.

"I think any tax increase would have to be a very last resort," said Gov. Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, a Republican.

Democratic Gov. Bob Graham of Florida said flatly that no tax increase is needed to deal with federal deficits.

There were some dissenters from that view, including Democrat James Blanchard of Michigan who said, "The federal government may be forced to raise taxes while cutting spending to balance the budget." He suggested an oil import fee and earmarking cigarette tax revenue for budget reduction as alternatives to an income tax hike.

At his most recent news conference, the president reiterated his opposition to any tax increase, saying if sent to him by Congress it would be "VOA — vetoed on arrival."

In the past, the governors often have arrived in Washington prepared to confront the president on the need for tax increases and to hold down the Pentagon budget.

But this year, they appeared to be in a less combative mood as they prepared for the formal opening of their meeting on Sunday. Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget committee, and Education Secretary William J. Bennett were scheduled to meet with the governors on Sunday.

The state executives will meet with Reagan at the White House on Monday.

There was no consensus among the governors about what actions they might have to take, if any, to make up for lost federal revenues.

Many governors, like James Thompson of Illinois, said it was too early to say. "It will partly depend on which programs might be cut and the extent to which they will be cut," said the Illinois Republican.

Republican Gov. Jim Martin of North Carolina said, "It's clear that it would be difficult for the state to pick up any substantial part of what the federal government would cut back on."

Democratic Gov. Richard Lamm of Colorado said, "We cannot make up for any of the reductions. The state of Colorado has its own substantial budget problems."

Lamm and neighboring Democratic Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona are among the few advocates of a means test for Social Security to weed out people who have sufficient retirement income without the federal system.

Another Democrat, Gov. George Sinner of North Dakota, said cost of living increases for Social Security recipients should be cut the same as COLAs for other federal programs.

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts said the federal government ought to "get serious" about collecting $100 billion in federal taxes that are owed but so far uncollected.

As for Social Security, the Democratic governor said, "I think at this stage, without having looked at going after money owed the federal government, it is not only irresponsible but shameful to be even considering further attacks against the elderly."

Florida's Graham, whose state has a large number of retirees, said Social Security "essentially is a contract between the individual American and the federal government. ... It should not be treated as a general part of the federal budget."

Gov. Ed Herschler of Wyoming, a Democrat, was another advocate of a tax increase, saying "I think it's going to be inevitable." But on Social Security, Herschler said the trust fund "should be left alone."

Democratic Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas said the tax reform bill pending in Congress might be the best vehicle for raising additional revenue to reduce deficits.

"What I'm suggesting is you might lower people's taxes somewhat less than they're expecting," Clinton said. Although the overall bill is "revenue neutral," he said, it shifts burdens, with most individuals likely to pay lower taxes.

An improved economy has put some states in a position to make up some of the lost federal revenue, but that is not an issue governors care to talk about.

For example, while Dukakis said it "would be difficult" to make up for federal revenue losses, Massachusetts officials are anticipating a budget surplus of about $300 million.

Martin Would Accept Social Security Cuts If Needed To Trim Budget Deficit

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says he opposes a tax increase and favors spending cuts in all government programs — including Social Security — to reduce the federal budget deficit.

Martin said in a recent interview Congress should stick to the five-year deficit reduction timetable spelled out in the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, even if a federal court ruling that the measure is unconstitutional is not overturned.

"This may be the only chance we'll get for a long time to have enough political pressure on Congress that it will reduce the growth of spending," Martin said. "Spending has grown faster than inflation. That's because Congress for the past three decades has had no discipline."

Martin, who served six terms in the U.S. House before he was elected governor in 1984, is scheduled to attend a National Governors Association conference in Washington on Monday and Tuesday. Among the topics to be discussed is the federal deficit and how reducing it could affect the states.

Martin said he hoped the governors' association would "take the position that although we would rather not see a reduction in federal spending for state and local governments, nevertheless it is far worse to have the destruction of our industrial base that results from massive deficits and the cost of financing them."

He sided with President Reagan against including a tax increase in the deficit-reduction formula.

"If you increase federal taxes, you're not going to solve the deficit, because that will take the pressure off and it just means the federal government will spend more money with the same level of deficit," Martin said.

But unlike the president and congressional leadership, Martin said Social Security should not be sacrosanct. As a member of Congress in the early 1980s, he said, he co-sponsored an unsuccessful amendment calling for restraints on spending for defense, Social Security, welfare, foreign aid, and every other federal program.

"If you're going to ask for sacrifices in order to get the federal budget balanced, that sacrifice ought to be evenly shared all across the economy," he said. "If you single out one group and say 'we're going to excuse you', it leaves other groups feeling that they're being unfairly targeted, and that creates a spirit of resentment."

Social Security reductions should take the form of slower growth in the program, not cuts in current benefits, Martin said. He said he did not believe his proposal was politically untenable, but acknowledged that anyone attempting to get it enacted likely would be "savaged" by political opponents.

Governors and state legislatures soon will face difficult decisions on whether to continue the funding of programs that the federal government halts or cuts back. In North Carolina, the Office of State Budget and Management estimates that federal outlays would fall by $214.1 million in fiscal 1985-87 if the automatic cuts under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings take effect.

Martin said he could not say which, if any, of the programs he would recommend that the Legislature bring under the state budget until Congress decides what will be cut.

"I do not propose that we automatically pick up everything," he said. "Neither do I propose that we automatically drop everything. We're going to pick and choose."

Taxpayers Foot $9.28 Million Bill For Congressional Travels

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traveling members of Congress, who like visiting warmer climates in winter months, cost taxpayers at least $9.28 million in 1984-85, a watchdog group reported Saturday.

In a report titled "Flights of Fancy," Congress Watch said senators, representatives and their aides spent $4.96 million on overseas trips in 1984, an increase of 36 percent from amount calculated by the group's previous report covering 1982.

Congress Watch, part of the Public Citizen organization founded by Ralph Nader, said travel costs totaled $4.32 million for the first nine months of 1985 — or at an annual rate of $5.76 million.

The report was compiled from official travel expense records published periodically in the Congressional Record. Complete records covering the final three months of 1985 have not yet been published.

Europe was the favorite destination while countries in warmer climates were popular destinations for House members during winter months, the report said.

Nancy Drabble, Congress Watch director, said the actual cost of foreign travel is higher because the published records are sometimes incomplete and at best disclose only the price of transportation and per diem but not related expenses incurred by the State and Defense departments.

"It probably is double when you include all costs," said Ms. Drabble, who urged Congress to take up legislation introduced by a handful of members to require a more detailed disclosure of travel costs.

"The 36 percent jump in the tab ... is hard to explain to taxpayers when the rest of the government faces the massive Gramm-Rudman budget cuts," she said in a statement accompanying the report.

Travel by House members accounted for $8.23 million of the $9.28 million reported in the 21-monthperiod Congress Watch studied. This included $118,331 for an 11-member entourage headed by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., to spend five days in Ireland last March "to celebrate St. Patrick's Day."

"Unfortunately, such junkets are not unusual," the report said. "While senators and representatives are often called upon to perform diplomatic and ceremonial duties abroad, the sheer number of legislators taking part in these activities appears excessive."

Chris Matthews, O'Neill's press secretary, said the study took a "cookie cutter" approach to a legitimate diplomatic mission.

The trip to Ireland led by O'Neill "was certainly to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. That is when you celebrate Irish-American relations," Matthews said. "There is certainly no one in this country that better personifies the Irish-American relationship than Speaker O'Neill."

The speaker was "the guest of the president of Ireland and the trip involved a series of meetings" between the bipartisan delegation and top Irish officials, Matthews said.

The report said that 63 of the 100 senators and 261 of the 435 representatives made at least one overseas trip during the 21 months. Thirty-three senators and 165 House members made more than one, it said.

Congress Watch said the most frequent flyer was Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., with nine trips to a total of 45 countries. Solarz is the only person among the five most active House travelers serving on the Foreign Affairs Committee.

The report said four other representatives logged eight trips apiece: Robert Badham, R-Calif., 17 countries; Joseph McDade, R-Pa., 11 countries; Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., 12 countries; and Bob Stump, R-Ariz., 21 countries.

McDade, who often goes along on trips headed by O'Neill, serves on the Appropriations Committee. The other three are members of Armed Services.

Twenty-two other House members went on five or more foreign trips during the 21 months, according to the report.

Congress Watch said the most traveled senators were Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz. and Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., who each took five trips during the period studied.

Mathias, who visited 10 countries, serves on the Foreign Relations Committee. DeConcini, who visited 12, is a member of the Appropriations foreign operations subcommittee.

Nearly two-thirds of the House trips were to five European nations: Italy, 99 visitors; France, 96; West Germany, 90; England, 70; and Switzerland 70. The Soviet Union — 41 visitors — was in a three-way tie for eighth place with Argentina and Portugal.

Among senators, England, with 33 visitors, was the most frequent destination, followed by Switzerland, 19, France, 16, the Soviet Union, 14, and Hong Kong, 13, the report said.

Budget ...

For two years, the governors engaged in intensive negotiations with the White House over how to implement federalism. Welfare was a major sticking point and the negotiations finally broke down without agreement.

The new report indicated many governors feel that the president is moving unilaterally through the budget process to implement his ideas.

"Federalism, in the president's budget. appears to be a one-way street — where the federal government unilaterally assigns additional federal costs to state and local governments without acknowledging its obligation to increase spending in areas that are properly a federal responsibility," said the report.

A separate staff study of the impact of the president's proposed budget on the states said it would reduce grants for current services by 25 percent.

The study said the budget included a Medicaid cap and cuts in many other poverty programs while "at the same time, federal spending would be dramatically increased for national defense and other foreign affairs activities."

The governors' document also predicted that the $144 billion deficit forecast in the Reagan budget would prove about $40 billion under the actual figure.

The federalism study said the relationship between the states and the federal government "is undergoing substantial change because of social and financial pressures at the federal level.

"As a result, states and localities will play a larger role in achieving important national objectives."

It went on to say that "while governors welcome this opportunity to play a more central role in the development and implementation of domestic policy, they believe strongly that it must not serve as an excuse to abandon federal responsibilities or to shift their costs to the states."

Leader Of Effort To Oust Marcos Was One Of His Trusted Advisers

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The attempt Saturday to unseat President Ferdinand E. Marcos was led by one of his most trusted advisers, Defense Minster Juan Ponce Enrile, and the military's No. 2 commander, Lt. Gen. Fidel V. Ramos.

Enrile, 62, had served in various Cabinet posts since Marcos came to power 20 years ago, and became defense minister in 1970.

He was one of the nation's most powerful men. In his home province, the Cagayan Valley, Enrile delivered Marcos' most one-sided victory of the disputed Feb. 7 special presidential election which pitted Marcos against Corazon Aquino.

But a Defense Ministry spokesman, Jose Florez, said Enrile and all other Cabinet members merely planned to submit "courtesy resignations" on the eve of Marcos' inauguration, scheduled for Tuesday.

Enrile's wife, Cristina Ponce Enrile, told The Associated Press her husband left home Saturday with bodyguards saying, "I think I'm going to be arrested."

Hours later, he and Ramos held a news conference at the Defense Ministry headquarters in a heavily guarded suburban army camp, and called on Marcos to step down.

Enrile earned a master's degree from Harvard Law School in 1955 after finishing at the top of his class at the University of the Philippines Law School.

Ramos, 57, also studied in the United States. He was graduated from West Point in 1950 and underwent special training at Fort Benning, Ga., and at Fort Bragg, N.C. He also earned a master of science degree in civil engineering at the University of Illinois.

He enjoys wide respect among younger Philippine officers and among U.S. officials who frequently called for reform in what they viewed as a corruption-ridden and inept Philippine military, beginning with the resignation of armed forces chief Gen. Fabian C. Ver.

Marcos announced Feb. 16 that he had accepted Ver's resignation and that Ramos would be appointed interim armed forces chief. But Ramos said later that no effective date had been set for his ascendancy.

On Saturday, speaking with Enrile at the news conference, Ramos charged that Marcos was "fooling us" by announcing Ver's resignation.

Ramos also heads the Philippine Constabulary, the national police force that is fighting the growing domestic communist insurgency. He was acting armed forces head while Ver was on trial last year on charges of conspiracy in the 1983 assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino, husband of Mrs. Aquino.

Ver and 25 other defendants were acquitted in December and he resumed his post, but opposition forces said the trial was biased.

Later in December, Marcos told the AP a rivalry existed between followers of Ver and Ramos in the armed forces, but he insisted the two men were not involved and were concerned about the problem.

Ramos is Marcos' cousin. His late father, Narciso Ramos, was foreign secretary under Marcos in 1966-68.

Ramos has not been untouched by charges that the government violated human rights. Three members of a 17-member fact-finding panel recommended in December that Ramos be charged with negligence in the Sept. 20 shooting deaths of 20 human rights demonstrators in Escalante, on Negros island.

Witnesses said soldiers fired on more than 5,000 people, mostly farmers.

Ramos fought on the U.S. side during the Korean War as part of a Philippine expeditionary force and in Vietnam as an operations officer of a Filipino civic action force.

He was promoted to general in 1970. In 1981, when Ramos reached retirement age, Marcos extended his service indefinitely.

the camps, Manila remained calm overnight.

Inside the camp, soldiers lay on the lawn casually chatting. "We don't have anything to be afraid of," said one soldier. Enrile said the armed forces chief, Gen. Fabian C. Ver, had promised in a telephone conversation the camps would not be attacked.

The Philippine military has about 200,000 men. It was not clear how many backed the insurgents.

Marcos said he estimated 1,000 soldiers supported the rebellion but that field commanders "are all united in expressing their loyalty to the constitution and the presiden." He said he had the power to "liquidate" the force at Camp Aguinaldo but preferred to negotiate its surrender.

Asked after his broadcast if he would consider resigning, Marcos replied: "That's ridiculous. With this attempted assassination and coup d'etat don't you think I am entitled to keep my position?"

Ramos, 57, and Enrile, 62, who had been a Marcos loyalist for 20 years, claimed they had support in all branches of the military, but that they would not start any bloodshed. However, Enrile said, "We will engage them if they hit us."

"We are here to take a stand," said Enrile. "If any one of us will be killed, they should kill all of us."

There was no indication if Mrs. Aquino had advance word of the plan by Enrile and Ramos. She had been in the central Philippines city of Cebu and a spokesman said she would await developments before making any statement.

In Washington, Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., a persistent critic of Marcos, said the action by the two military leaders "obviously could be the beginning of the end of the Marcos regime." He said in a telephone interview that he hoped they would try to install Mrs. Aquino as president.

"It would be a tragedy if a civilian dictatorship was replaced by a military dictatorship," he said.

In Boston, Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., who was on the U.S. delegation that observed the election, said, "Hopefully, Marcos will come to see the writing on the wall and there will be a peaceful transition of power."

Marcos' problems have mounted since the August 1983 assassination of his top political rival, Benigno Aquino. Mrs. Aquino has accused the Marcos government of being behind her husband's killing, which touched off widespread protests.

Marcos called the Feb. 7 election to demonstrate his popularity, but Mrs. Aquino made a surprisingly strong showing. On Feb. 15, however, Marcos was declared the winner by the National Assembly, which is dominated by his party.

Mrs. Aquino said she would not accept the result and called for a nationwide boycott. Marcos was scheduled to be inaugurated Tuesday.

At the news conference, Enrile said Marcos "did not win the election. He should respect the people."

Asked if he and Ramos would support Mrs. Aquino, Enrile said, "We are morally committed. I believe in my whole heart and mind that she was duly elected president of the republic."

Enrile claimed that in his home region, "I know we cheated to the extent of 300,000 votes."

Ramos had been named by Marcos to become interim armed forces chief to succeed the resigning Ver, who was acquitted last December on charges of conspiring in the Aquino assassination.

Ramos said he was "resigning from the armed forces of Mr. Marcos and all his minions. I am making myself available to serve the armed forces of the people."

Marcos, speaking from the Malacanang Palace, said an assassination "plot and conspiracy was aborted after our men captured some of the officers within the presidential security unit who revealed the conspiracy."

He presented a man identified as a personal guard of first lady Imelda Marcos, and the man read on television a confession that he participated in a plot. Later, after midnight, Marcos came on television again and introduced a second man who also read a statement implicating himself.

Investigation

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany's former counter-espionage chief said a high-ranking Interior Ministry official asked him in 1984 to investigate whether the opposition Greens party had been infiltrated by communists.

Herbert Hellenbroich testified before a parliamentary committee probing last summer's spy scandal, which led to his resignation. Hellenbroich said the August 1984 request from Carl-Dieter Spranger, a state secretary in the Interior Ministry, did not follow normal bureacratic channels.

Hellenbroich said Spranger also wanted an evaluation of Communist influence on world peace movements and church organizations.

Communist Party Congress Will Put Finishing Touches To Shakeup

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The 27th Communist Party Congress that opens Tuesday will be the finale to act one of Mikhail S. Gorbachev's cleansing of party ranks and will ratify what is expected to be the biggest shakeup ever of the Central Committee.

Since becoming party secretary-general in March, Gorbachev has rejuvenated the ruling Politburo, shuffled more than two dozen ministers, and cut deeply into the legions of high party functionaries.

His shakeup, which the official newspaper Pravda says "is not a purge, but a purification," also has spawned an unprecedented debate about party privilege, tenure, elections and patronage.

"There has never been such a critical atmosphere before a congress ... (it's) very critical by Soviet standards," said Soviet historian Roy Medvedev, an observer of party politics for 30 years.

The congress plays at least two important political functions:

—It provides an ideological foundation for foreign and domestic policy that will be cited in future speeches, newspaper articles and decrees.

—It officially ratifies the makeup of the party Central Committee. Most of the current members were appointed under the late leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

A congress also can ratify changes in the Central Committee's secretariat, where promotions and retirements have left vacancies, and even within the Politburo itself, the top governing body. Such changes often are rumored but never announced in advance.

Brezhnev was the leader at the last congress, in 1981, and named a Central Committee with 319 voting members, only 13 percent of them newcomers. Western embassies estimate that about 30 members have since died and 110 to 130 were retired or demoted, leaving vacancies to be filled at the coming congress.

There were no congresses during the brief tenures of Yuri V. Andropov and Konstantin U. Chernenko.

By now, Gorbachev's leadership has decided who will be on the new Central Committee. Unless membership is cut, a turnover of 50 percent or more seems certain.

Although the Politburo has ultimate power, the Central Committee played a role in ousting Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev in 1964, a lesson no Kremlin leader can forget. A loyal Central Committee also is important because it includes the heads of lower party bodies that carry out directives from the top.

After the congress, Gorbachev could start a second round of changes in regional and local party bodies, an enormous task since many of those jobs became semi-autonomous sinecures under Brezhnev.

So far, Gorbachev has added four new full members to the Politburo, removed three and shunted Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko to the largely ceremonial post of president.

Forty-three of the more than 80 ministers and State Committee chairmen have been shuffled, with 25 of them retiring. Gorbachev also combined five agencies into an agriculture "superministry," eliminating 3,200 jobs in Moscow.

Medvedev said 5,000 to 6,000 jobs have been eliminated in the staffs of the Central Committee and Council of Ministers.

Gorbachev must do more than shuffle names and portfolios to make real changes. These organizational moves have been accompanied by a thundering verbal campaign against incompetence, corruption and privilege.

Newspaper articles and readers' letters even have criticized the "nomenklatura," officials who use special stores, hospitals and restaurants, travel in chauffered cars and get the choicest apartments.

This upper crust has been derided in private but untouchable in public for decades.

"Let the boss go to ordinary stores and stand in line with everyone else," said a recent letter to the party daily Pravda. "Maybe then, those lines which everyone is sick of will be liquidated sooner."

Medvedev, an admirer of the Gorbachev approach, said he believes the campaign is serious.

"First, the special position of the nomenklatura arouses the anger of the population," he said. "Second, this campaign creates the conditions for a wide renewal of the party apparatus. Before, privilege was the main stimulus for entering party work and (officials) became very bad in terms of human values."

State OKs Phosphate Cleanup

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — State environmental officials say the leak of phosphate-rich clay waste from a Texasgulf pipeline into 26 acres of South Creek violated environmental regulations. The state also has approved the company's plans to clean up the spill.

A company survey released Friday said about 113,700 cubic yards of slush-like clay waste — more than twice the amount of initial estimates — had spilled into the creek near Aurora from a pipeline rupture reported last Sunday.

The company plans to hire a private dredging firm to pump the waste from the creek into a diked disposal area on company property. The cleanup will take about three weeks, company and state officials said.

"We want people to understand that this was an accident," said Texasgulf spokesman J. Randolph Carpenter. "We're sorry it happened and we're moving aggressively to clean it up."

Lorraine Shinn, supervisor of the state Department of Natural Resources in Washington, N.C., said the Division of Coastal Management had determined that the spill violated the state's dredge-and-fill law and the Coastal Management Act. The leak resulted in placement of material in coastal water that was not authorized by state permit, she said.

Trustees Increase Tuition

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Wake Forest University board of trustees voted Friday to raise the school's tuition by 10 percent next year, even though students had petitioned against the increase and staged a protest rally Thursday.

The board raised tuition from $6,000 to $6,600 a year. A 9 percent increase in room rent also will go into effect.

Linda Colwell, the student representative, was the only trustee to vote against the increase. She presented the board with a petition signed by 1,294 students opposing the tuition increase, said Russell Brantley, the school's director of communications.

Brantley said the trustees were told the money from the increase may be used to raise faculty salaries and for financial aid.

Also, there is concern that the school could loose support from Baptist churches across the state, Brantley said. The university and the N.C. Baptist State Convention are disputing who has the authority to choose Wake Forest trustees.

Ms. Colwell said she voted against the increase to show her concern that the students had not been told of the reasons for the increase. But she said she thinks the trustees and administrators will work on better communication in the future.

Coastal Fires To Clear View

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — The National Park Service says it will use a series of controlled fires to open up dense thickets along N.C. 12 in the Cape Hatteras National Seashore to improve waterfowl habitat and give tourists a view of the beach.

Superintendent Thomas Hartman said the seashore vegetation has changed over the years, with dense shrubs replacing open grasslands and marsh.

Hartman also said a new policy for fighting fires in undeveloped areas of the seashore calls for containing the flames and allowing them to burn themselves out. He said studies had shown that heavy equipment used to put out fires in sensitive marshlands often did more damage than the fire itself.

Rangers will use conventional techniques to fight fires that threaten developed areas, he said.

Ford Recall

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. is recalling 9,400 1986-model Lincoln Continentals and Mark VIIs to rewire an electrical connection that could cause the brake fluid warning light to fail.

The automaker said it also will delay sale of 6,500 new vehicles in dealer inventories until the connection is repaired. The connectors were wired incorrectly during manufacturing, said John P. King, service engineering manager for Ford Parts and Service Division.

The incorrect wiring could cause failure of a red panel light designed to warn motorists when brake fluid levels are too low, King said, adding that no accidents or injuries were reported because of the wiring problem.

Shuttle Investigation Spurs Sharp Look At NASA's Launch Procedure

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The search for causes behind the explosion of space shuttle Challenger has raised new questions about both rocket hardware and the decision-making by NASA management. And this past week, perhaps inevitably, the probe burst into the political arena.

Members of a presidential investigating commission plan to resume public hearings Tuesday and Wednesday to report on material they learned after members fanned out to various space agency and industry locations last week.

Attention focused on both the potentially damaging effects of cold weather on the crucial rubber-like seals joining segments of the shuttle's rocket boosters and the unheeded concerns of engineers.

Investigators want to know the sequence of events that led to a launch recommendation by Morton Thiokol, makers of the rocket boosters, and the "go" decision by NASA. And they're asking how high within NASA was it known that there was an engineering dispute over the wisdom of a launch under the unusually cold conditions present Jan. 28 at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Here's a look at some of the big questions that remain:

— If a veteran engineer at Morton Thiokol warned it was too cold to launch, why did NASA go ahead?

Morton Thiokol ultimately recommended launch of the shuttle despite opposition from Allan McDonald, who was the company's ranking engineer on launch day at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

A team of NASA managers considers all the information up to the minute of launch, and NASA officials say engineers at all levels are heard through the agency's chain of command. Jesse Moore, departing head of the space shuttle program, said all members of the top management team have to be unanimous to go ahead with a launch.

The presidential commission said Moore and two other top launch officials were not told of the debate about whether cold weather posed a threat.

Investigators have since learned that 15 Morton Thiokol engineers unanimously recommended against launch, but that the approval of company Vice President Joe C. Kilminster was forwarded despite those objections.

— How much pressure did NASA managers put on Morton Thiokol to put aside those engineering reservations and recommend a launch?

A memo recommending launch was transmitted from Kilminster in Utah near midnight before launch day. It listed some of the problems that could result from the cold but didn't reflect the opposition of Morton Thiokol engineers.

Members of the commission have been in Huntsville, Ala., trying to determine whether officials at the Marshall Space Flight Center there pressured Morton Thiokol engineers to recommend launch, according to reports.

According to a National Public Radio report, the head of the rocket booster program at Marshall argued with Thiokol engineers who thought the launch should be postponed until temperatures — 38 degrees at launch time — climbed into the 50s.

The network said Lawrence Mulloy asked Morton Thiokol officials in a conference telephone call: "My God, Thiokol, when do you want me to launch, next April?" Another official was quoted as saying, "I am appalled" by a noon-time Jan 27 no-launch recommendation, later reversed.

There is concern the cold may have caused failure of seals that join segments of the twin solid rocket boosters, leading to the explosion.

— How far up NASA's layers of management was it known that there were serious engineering reservations about a launch and concern that cold weather could harm the crucial seals?

After acting NASA administrator William Graham appeared before a Senate committee last week, Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said he had asked Graham whether there was evidence Morton Thiokol opposed launch, and Graham replied, "No sir, the evidence is the other way."

Graham had cited the launch-eve memo recommending launch. But Hollings cited McDonald's opposition and called for Graham to resign and for the Senate to conduct its own investigation into the accident. Senate republicans refused to go along.

— What is the future of NASA leadership? Who will run the agency?

NASA Administrator James Beggs is on leave because of a criminal indictment stemming from his previous post at General Dynamics. Graham, a newcomer to NASA, became acting director and now faces an uncertain future.

There has been speculation that the White House is looking for a "white knight," someone different and perhaps an old hand, just as former EPA director William Ruckelshaus returned to the Environmental Protection Agency when it was under siege.

Some possible candidates are former directors James C. Fletcher and Thomas O. Paine. Others are Gen. James A. Abrahamson, former NASA associate administrator in charge of shuttle flights; John William Townsend Jr., of Fairchild Industries, a former deputy director of Goddard Space Flight Center; and Lew Allen, former chief of the National Security Agency, who heads NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in California.

The new head of the shuttle program, replacing Moore, is veteran shuttle pilot Richard H. Truly, a Navy rear admiral. Moore takes over as head of Johnson Space Center in Houston, earlier than previously announced.

— What else is the commission looking at?

The commission has received all "documents, memoranda or personal notes" of NASA and industry officials regarding the weather debate. Some panel members say they are alarmed at NASA's handling of flight safety issues, with one calling the launch-decision process "horrifying."

Some panel members say it appears certain NASA officials didn't know that temperatures were as low as 7 degrees Fahrenheit on the surface of the rocket booster.

Aviation Week and Space Technology, a respected industry magazine, said old NASA wind tunnel tests showed that wind blowing across the shuttle fuel tank, containing superchilled hydrogen and oxygen, against the lower section of the right solid rocket booster could cause a stiffening of the rubber-like seals, making them ineffective.

NASA also is looking into the possibility a small leak of hydrogen, cooled to 423 degrees Fahrenheit below zero, from the shuttle's external tank might have chilled the booster seals.

Engineers believe the cold, from whatever source, set up a deadly sequence of events, that eventually caused the Challenger's right solid rocket booster to break loose, hit the shuttle wing and set off the explosion.

Booster Filmed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The four-man research sub that made the first seabottom sightings of the space shuttle Challenger's right booster rocket now has filmed wreckage of what may be the left booster, officials said Saturday.

The space agency was trying to match part numbers to verify whether some of the latest debris filmed by the crew of the Sea Link II was that of the left booster.

The right solid fuel rocket booster is considered the chief suspect as the cause of the Jan. 28 explosion that destroyed the spaceship shortly after launch and killed its seven crewmembers.

No efforts had been made to recover pieces of the left booster, spotted Friday about 30 to 35 miles northeast of Cape Canaveral, said Navy Lt. Cmdr. Deborah A. Burnette. The site was in the north-central section of a 250-square-mile search area just west of where the Sea Link found parts of the right booster a week earlier.

Damage Mounts As Californians Continue To Flee Flood Waters

ROBBINS, Calif. (AP) — Four hundred people were evacuated Saturday in flood-ravaged northern California after a levee bulged and began leaking, but a few miles to the north a breach in another levee was sealed and thousands of refugees waited for permission to return home.

Preliminary estimates set damage from floods and landslides all across northern California after nine days of torrential rain at at least $225 million, according to the state Office of Emergency Services, not including the latest levee breaks that had chased more than 26,000 people out of their homes.

In all, about 38,000 people had to evacuate across northern California during the series of storms.

Saturday's evacuees were forced out of this town along the Feather River about 30 miles north of Sacramento by a weak spot in a levee along a separate channel, the Sutter Bypass.

Tom Mullins, a spokesman for the Emergency Services office, said the bulge originally was about 100 feet long, then grew to 400 feet and began leaking a four-foot-wide spout of water.

The water poured into a canal adjacent to the bypass, about three miles east of town, and crews set to work to plug the gap.

He said helicopters and private vehicles carried refugees to evacuation centers, while trucks rumbled through the downtown area with dirt and boulders to shore up the weakened area.

Robbins Postmaster Ron Verstraeten, 33, said he cleaned out the post office but "I'm going to stick around to help the community all I can. It's real tight-knit. Everyone is running around helping everyone. It's fantastic."

An explosion in a natural gas pipeline along the Bear River just to the north Saturday morning blew three people into the water. Two were quickly rescued and hospitalized with burns, and a search was mounted for the third man, officials said.

Several miles to the north, about 26,000 people had been driven from their homes Thursday night when the Yuba River breached a levee and flooded 28 square miles around the towns of Linda and Olivehurst, but about 10,000 prepared to return home Saturday, the emergency services office said.

The 150-foot gap in the levee was sealed by repair crews hauling rocks from a quarry 30 miles away.

"We're stemming the break quite well," said Yuba County Undersheriff Dennis Moore. "For all intents and purposes the break is closed, completed. The rock is in place, but there is still some seepage."

Mullins said the Army Corps of Engineers would check other levees in the area and in the San Joaquin River and Sacramento River delta area to evaluate their strength.

Amtrak rail service along the coast, halted during the storm, resumed Saturday with a run of the Coast Starlight from the San Francisco Bay area to Los Angeles. All five lines stalled by the weather will be phased in gradually, but the timing was not certain.

Near the coast north of San Francisco, officials said residents of the Sonoma County town of Guerneville, one of the worst-hit areas, would be allowed past California Highway Patrol roadblocks only with proof they belong in the area. County spokeswoman Brenda Bellinger said roads remain "very hazardous" due to debris and downed power lines in the wake of record flooding along the Russian River.

The long-term weather forecast called for fair skies through the middle of the week, with no rain predicted, and river levels were dropping dramatically.

President Reagan declared nine counties disaster areas Friday, making them eligible for federal assistance. They were Lake, Marin, Napa, Sacramento, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Solano, Sonoma and Yuba counties.

Gov. George Deukmejian has declared a state of emergency in 29 counties. He had initially estimated damage at more than $300 million.

State Assemblyman Dominic Cortese and state Sen. William Campbell introduced a bill Friday calling for $100 million in state aid to help cities and counties undo some of the damage caused by the floods.

OES spokeswoman Debra Sonniksen said at least 6,499 homes were damaged and 478 were destroyed during the series of storms, and at least 494 businesses were damaged and 45 were destroyed, not including damage to Linda and Olivehurst.

It's called the Survival Game and it's become America's favorite new outdoor pastime. The Game is capture the flag with a difference: each player carries a marking pistol that shoots dye-filled "SplatBalls". To win you must avoid your opponent's paint, while stealing their flag and returning it to your base. It's a game of strategy, daring and great fun.

Millions have seen the publicity in Life, Time, Sports Illustrated, Games, Sports Afield, The Today Show, and PM Magazine, to name just a little of the attention. And there'll be more fun and coverage at the National Championships this year!

America's Hottest Outdoor Adventure Game

The Survival Game has arrived in Greenville!

Faith and Victory Church

A Family Church, Charismatic Teaching Center and a World- Outreach Center

"For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world, and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." -1 John 5:4

Watch the "Faith and Victory Hour" Every Sunday at 10:30 a.m. on Channel 12 WCTI-TV Faith and Victory Broadcast... Listen to the uncompromised word of God with Pastor John Zabawski every Monday- Friday 9:00-9:15 a.m. on WBZQ radio station - 1550 AM

Pastors: John and Deborah Zabawski

I would like to personally invite you to attend one of our church services. I would also like to invite those that haven't visited with us in a long time to come and see all the changes that have been made as a result of the tremendous church growth we have been experiencing. There's a new anointing in our worship and praise services, and a greater commitment to the evangelism of our City, County, State, Nation, & the World. We have been experiencing a revival of prayer that is beginning to bring in a great harvest for the Lord. Within the last six weeks we have seen over 50 people give their lives to Jesus and over 60 filled with the Holy Spirit baptism. This revival of prayer has also been changing us as individuals, bringing more of Christ's love and humility into our lives that we might reach out to others as we should. Come and see what God is doing at Faith and Victory Church where he is training and preparing us for the last, great, and final harvest. We Love You.

Church History—How Faith and Victory Church Was Started— John and Deborah Zabawski, originally from Cleveland, Ohio, travelled as evangelists, ministering the Word of God in seminars, Full-Gospel Businessmen's Fellowships, Women Aglow meetings, and churches. They began a radio broadcast, "Voice of Faith," in Greenville, North Carolina, on November 23, 1979. While conducting a faith seminar in Greenville's Rotary Building, the Lord spoke to Brother John and asked him if he would feed His sheep in Greenville. The following month, John and Debbie moved their belongings from Ohio and opened FAITH AND VICTORY CHURCH on Sunday, June 1, 1980.

Since the opening date, the Lord has filled the church with wonderful people, those who are desirous of the Word of God and the moving of the Holy Spirit.

What Faith and Victory Church is—FAITH AND VICTORY CHURCH is...a Family Church, a Full-Gospel teaching Center, and a World-Outreach Center with a vision to reach our city, our community, our country, and the world with the Gospel, "good news," of the Lord Jesus Christ.

A family church...ministering the Word of God to couples, singles and providing specialized ministry for the children in the Nursery, Toddlers, Children's Church, and Youth Services.

A Full-Gospel Teaching Center...receiving excellent Bible teaching through ministries in the local body in addition to receiving live satellite seminars from Word of Faith World Outreach Center in Dallas, Texas.

A World Outreach Center...preparing many for effective ministry, sending them forth through support and prayers, a launching pad for those who will evangelize the world.

Church Goverment—FVC operates under a constitution and by-laws and is not affiliated with any denominations. The governing factor is the Holy Spirit Who leads the Pastor and Staff, and the Pastor seeks counsel from an advisory board made up from members of the church.

Church Membership—Those who may wish to know more about FAITH AND VICTORY CHURCH or wish to become members are invited to attend a New Membership Class conducted each Sunday morning at 9:00. This class would inform those interested in membership as to the basic doctrines and beliefs of the church, stewardship, church ministries, and essentially the "whys" and "hows" of the contents of our ministries.

Statement of Faith

We believe....
....in one God, Maker of all things and being in Trinity of Father, Son and Holy Ghost.
....the Son of God, Jesus Christ, became incarnate, was begotten by the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, and is true God and true man.
....The Bible, in its entirety, to be the inspired Word of God and the only infallible rule of faith and conduct.
....in the resurrection of the dead, the eternal happiness of the saved, and the eternal punishment of the lost.
....in personal salvation of believers through the shed blood of Christ.
....in sanctification by the blood of Christ, in personal holiness of heart and life, and in separation from the world.
....in Divine healing through faith, and that healing is included in the Atonement.
....in the baptism of the Holy Ghose accompanied by the initial physical sign of speaking with other tongues as the Spirit of God gives utterance, as distinct from the new birth, and the nine gifts of the spirit, listed in 1 Corinthians 12, as now available to believers.
....in the Christian's hope - the imminent return of the Lord Jesus Christ.
....in intensive world-evangelism and missionary work in accordance with the Great Commission, with signs following.

Church Vision

God has given His vision for Faith and Victory Church. It is written here to remind us of its coming (Hab. 2:2,3). That we may all be one (Gen. 11:6), and agree together (Matt. 18:19). We encourage you to seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit as to your becoming a co-laborer in this God-ordained vision. We invite you to come and worship together with us.

Ariane Launches Satellites

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — The European Space Agency reported Saturday that two satellites launched into space by the Ariane rocket were in perfect north-south orbit and funtioning normally.

French President Francois Mitterrand sent a telegram to the agency hailing the launch as "a new step in the conquest of space."

Ariane, a three-stage unmanned rocket, lifted off flawlessly Friday night from its South American jungle base in Kourou. It was Ariane's 13th success in 16 attempts and came after 18 months of delays.

With the U.S. space program temporarily suspended following the Jan. 28 explosion of the Challenger space shuttle, Ariane's success should increase its share of the multi-billion-dollar satellite launch market.

The 10-nation consortium that makes up the European Space Agency has maintained that conventional launchers, while less spectacular than the reusable shuttle, remained the most efficient means of placing satellites in orbit.

Arianespace, the agency's commercial arm, has carried out 10 commercial missions and says it has 26 more firm launch contracts worth about $1.1 billion.

Ariane's 15th scheduled launch on Sept. 18 ended in explosive failure when the final stage malfunctioned and sent the rocket veering off course. Engineers destroyed the booster by remote control, and two satellites worth a total of $145 million were lost.

A second successive failure would have damaged Ariane's credibility and probably pushed satellite insurance rates even higher.

In Friday's launch Ariane sent into orbit a Swedish scientific probe and a French observation satellite, the agency said. The Swedish probe is designed to study the Earth's magnetic field and the aurora borealis, or Northern Lights.

But more important is the French satellite, Spot 1, which will compete directly with the American Landsat series of satellites.

Landsat satellites have been used by the United States since 1972 to provide information on earth resources. But the system lost money and the U.S. government sold it to a private company.

Released

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) — Three senior cabinet ministers in the government deposed by a military coup a month ago have been released from jail, the government has announced.

It said former Foreign Minister Vincent Makhele, former Information Minister Desmond Sixishe and former Rural Development Minister Francis Matholone were freed last week.

Also released was Paul Matete, former personal secretary to deposed Prime Minister Leabua Jonathan, the announcement said.

Jonathan's government was toppled without bloodshed by officers concerned about his confrontation with South Africa over its racial segregation policy.

Investment Banker To Buy Indian Site

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A New York investment banker has agreed to buy a 20-acre historic site on the Eno River in Hillsborough that contains remanants of pre-Colonial Indian villages.

The Preservation Fund of Hillsborough Inc. announced Friday that Richard Jenrette, a member of the board of trustees at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, had agreed to purchase the site for $120,000.

The preservation fund had obtained a six-month option on the property last August that was due to expire Feb. 28.

"He really has saved us," said John Kennedy Jr., chairman of the fund.

The purchase will allow archaeologists to continue studying the land, which had been targetted for development, Kennedy said. The site, in a horseshoe bend of the Eno River 15 miles from Chapel Hill, contains six Occaneechi village sites.

"It is an ideal laboratory for the university and for the National Geographic Society, which has been sponsoring excavation of the area," Kennedy said in a prepared statement.

Archaeologists from UNC believe the site may be the Occaneechi Town visited in 1701 by English surveyor and historian John Lawson, who wrote about the Indian village.

Roy S. Dickens Jr., director of the Research Laboratories of UNC-CH, described the site as "very significant." He said the remains of the villages "represent a good record of about the last 1,000 years."

Developer James Rae Freeland, who planned to build a home and polo facility on the land, had announced he did not intend to extend the six-month option if the fund could not raise the purchase price by the deadline.

Freeland, who had already acquired a building permit for the house, had delayed his plans to give the fund time to raise money to purchase the land.

In The Area

Public Hearing

The village of Simpson will conduct a public hearing at 7 p.m. Tuesday on the submission of an application to the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development for a Small Cities Community Development Block Grant. Recommendations regarding proposed activities and the project area will be discussed, Morris Autry, Community Development project planner said.

Guest Speakers

Colin Stamp, a London writer, broadcaster and filmmaker, and Professor David Kemp of Queen's Univeristy, Ontario, will address the Greenville English-Speaking Union at luncheon meetings scheduled March 15 and April 12.

Dr. R. Hardee Rives, president of the Greenville E-SU Branch, said both meetings will be at the Colonial Inn in Farmville.

Stamp's address will be titled "An Englishman Looks Back," and will focus on his life between the two world wars and his life in Africa for 13 years when he witnessed the last days of colonial rule.

Kemp's' expertise is directed at drama and theater for young people. His lecture, titled "A Child Growing Up," will be sort of a journey through childhood memories, using the works of such writers as Charles Dickens, Dylan Thomas, Ben Johnson and Oscar Wilde.

Workshop

Storyteller Augusta Baker will direct the final workshop of the Library Science Saturday series March 15. The program, sponsored by the East Carolina University Department of Library and Information Studies, will be held in the Willis Building auditorium from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Mrs. Baker is storyteller-in-residence at the University of South Carolina's College of Librarianship. She is a children's librarian, author, educator and folklorist. She will discuss her experiences from nearly 50 years of storytelling.

Ann Sullivan, librarian at Greenville's Sadie Saulter School, will tell stories.

The workshop may be used for Continuing Education Unit credits.For more information on the workshop, contact the ECU Division of Continuing Education or the ECU Department of Library and Information Studies.

Chiropodist

Christa K. Wright has joined the practice of Drs. Duane E. Kratzer Jr. and A. Timothy Seavers as a medical chiropodist.

The Kratzer-Seavers practice of podiatric medicine and surgery has an office at 202 Arlington Blvd., Suite D, Greenville.

Mrs. Wright, a native of Berlin, Germany, has been a Greenville-area resident for the past 12 years. She completed training in Germany in the summer of 1985 and received a degree in medical chiropody. She has been a certified podiatric radiology technician, a qualified laboratory technician and a podiatric assistant, as well as a certified emergency medical technician.

Business Meeting

Chapter IV of the North Carolina Rehabilitation Association will meet Wednesday at 5:30 p.m. at the Western Sizzlin' Steak House, 10th Street. A hospitality hour will be held, followed by dinner and a business meeting.

Opinion Forum

A public opinion forum to measure public views on such issues as education and transportation will be held March 11 from 3-7 p.m. at the Willis Building.

Gov. Jim Martin has directed the State Goals and Policy Board and the North Carolina Education Council to sponsor the forums to determine public opinion on statewide issues. Five other forums will be held throughout the state.

Mathcounts

Teams of seventh and eighth grade students from eastern North Carolina junior high schools will compete in the local contest of the national Mathcounts program Saturday at J.H. Rose High School.

The contest is being organized by the Eastern Carolina chapter of the Professional Engineers of North Carolina.

State Sen. Thomas F. Taft will make the awards presentation at the conclusion of the competition. Winners will receive trophies and will advance to the state finals to be held in Raleigh.

Local schools among the 44 schools participating in the local contest are E.B. Aycock Junior High School, Farmville Middle School, Greene Central Junior High School, Greenville Middle School, J.P. Jones Junior High and Williamston Junior High School.

Honor Students

Four local students have been named to honor lists for the fall semester at Elizabeth City State University.

Tammy Ann Fleming of Greenville has been named to the chancellor's list for her achievement of a 3.75 or above grade point average. Named to the vice chancellor's list for a grade point average of 3.50-3.74 was Adrienne Denise Allen of Grifton. Christopher Valdez Starkey of Farmville and Douglas Ray Howard of Greenville were on the honor roll, which requires a grade point average of at least 3.0.

Recruitment Tea

The Pitt County chapter of Winston-Salem State University will hold a recruitment tea at 4 p.m. Sunday in the Doctors Park clubhouse, Beasley Drive. Faculty representatives and area alumni will attend to discuss the university.

For more information, contact Patti Sanders Smith at 830-1031.

Anniversary

The J.A. Nimmo Choir will celebrate its 29th anniversary at 4 p.m. Sunday at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church. The Young Adult Choir of Holy Trinity United Holy Church will be in concert.

More Superfarms Developing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of superfarms, each selling more than $1 million worth of products a year, has grown rapidly and visibly over the past decade, says an Agriculture Department report.

"If matched against the giants of most other industries, they would barely be noticed," the report said. "In agriculture, however, they stand out ... because U.S. agriculture is populated by much smaller farms."

The million-dollar-plus farms account for only about one out of every 250 farms in the United States. Yet, they take in more than $1 out of every $5 worth of commodities sold.

"Unless farm conditions during the last few years have altered the trend, the million-dollar-and-up farms represent one of the fastest growing sales classes in American agriculture," says economist Paul Velde of the department's Economic Research Service.

The report, in a new issue of the agency's Farmline magazine, was based on Velde's study of 1982 farm census information.

Velde found that superfarms increased by nearly 50 percent from 6,290 in 1978 to 9,190 in 1982. Despite the growth, superfarms accounted for less than one-half of 1 percent of the 2.24 million U.S. farms in 1982.

Fuel ...

"From what I can gather, the reason for the falling prices is that the stock market is manipulating the prices now instead of the oil companies deciding the prices in the past," said Howard Bullock, owner of Belvoir Oil Co. "As long as the stock market keeps dealing with it, it will affect the price, because they are dumping a bunch of oil futures on the market.

"Until prices on the stock market level off, it will result in consumers having lower prices," he stated.

"There seems to be an oversupply (of fuel)," Allen said. "We seem to be in a situation where there is a surplus of oil. and that plus the fact that we have conserved for many years and it is all catching up, has caused prices to fall.

"Because there is an excess of product, we are still seeing prices fall," he said. "Hopefully they will continue to fall and then stabilize."

Allen said the reduced oil prices are "good for everybody. What it is going to mean is that inflation won't be a problem, for awhile anyway. You can just about be assured that inflation will be low when oil prices fall because everything we buy or use has an oil cost in it. Everything we buy either contains oil or is transported by something that uses oil."

Economy ...

they do buy) a little," Faulkner said, or they are "finding used equipment at farm sales."

A spokesman at Farmville Implement, a John Deere dealer, said sales there have been "fair ... not as bad as everybody has said," and said there has been an increase in used tractor sales.

James Dupree at M.O. Blount & Sons, a Massey-Ferguson dealer, suggested that sales are "real weak right now." But he said, "the outlook is much better than it has been. We're having more prospects than we've been having."

Dealer sales of used tractors have been weak because of the number of used tractors on the market due to farmers' "retirements, bankruptcies ... selling out," Dupree said. And with new tractor sales, "the middle-size farmer is going back to lower horsepower tractors ... they cost less and are more economical to operate."

But, according to Dupree, "I think most farmers are doing the same as last year, repairing what they've got. The shops are staying busy.

"We've gone through four years of slowdown in new equipment sales ... 1984 and 1985 were years of almost no sales," according to Dupree. "I'm sort of excited about '86. If the tobacco program goes though, the producer will be better off than he has been in several years."

And at least one group of men in Ayden is optimistic about the future.

Earl Smith, A.T. Venters and Sammy Hodges are opening Tar Heel Ford Tractors Inc. in the old Ayden Tractors building. Smith, who said Hodges will be manager of the new dealership, said the new busines is expected to be in operation sometime in early March.

Capsules ...

The managers said they don't expect sales of capsules to slip because of the recent incident.

"So far, we haven't seen a decrease in capsule sales," Hemingway said. "I don't foresee a lot of change. I think capsules will be on the shelf for a long time."

"The choice of taking a capsule or a tablet is a matter of personal preference," Carter said. "Some people say the capsules go down easier."

While they didn't call for manufacturers to cease production of capsules, several of the managers had recommendations on how to safeguard the capsules.

"There are capsules that come with a band around the middle that makes it impossible to open without breaking the capsule," Carter said. "It proves it hasn't been tampered with, but I'm not sure if the industry will follow that example or not."

"I've come across the capsules with an actual seal around the middle," Hemingway said. "It's just a ring sealed into the capsule."

Executives at Burroughs Wellcome Co. in Research Triangle Park have announced plans to continue manufacturing capsules, but a company spokesman said they are considering methods of ensuring their safety.

"We're looking at new technologies in an effort to ensure the integrity of our product," said W. Thackara Brown Jr., director of public affairs for Burroughs Wellcome. "But in this instance we're looking at relative degrees of impact. We're essentially a tablet business."

Brown also said he believes that the Johnson & Johnson decision will not lead to similar moves in the industry.

"The Propriety Association (the trade association for non-prescription drug makers) has issued a statement saying the industry has no intention of backing away from the manufacturing of capsules," he said. "On the basis of that statement, I don't foresee any changes."

Spring Soccer

Registration for indoor spring soccer will be held Monday through Wednesday at the Elm Street Gym. The program is open to all youth who are 5- to 18-years old as of April 1, 1986. Five-year-old participants must be in an organized kindergarten program.

Practice will begin March 17-18 and the regular season will begin the week of April 7. All practices and games will be held at Elm Street Gym. Practices will be held on different times and days for different age groups.

There is a registration fee and T-shirts will be provided. For more information contact Margaret McGlohon, Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, 752-4137, ext. 259.

Diabetes Meeting

The Pitt County chapter of the American Diabetes Association will meet March 3. Dr. Gay Israel will speak on "Exercise and Diabetes."

The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m. and will be held at the Willis Building, located on the corner of First and Reade streets. For further information call 1-800-682-9692.

Piano Recitals

The Greenville Piano Teachers Association will sponsor recitals Sunday at 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. in room 105, Fletcher Music Building, East Carolina University campus.

Students will play selections by composers of different periods featuring beginning to advanced students. The recitals are open to the public at no cost.

Sierra Meeting

"Wildlife in Your Back Yard" will be the program for the March 10 meeting of the Sierra Club. Steve Thomas, district biologist for the North Carolina Wildlife Commission, will present the program at 8 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church, 14th and Elm streets.

Nurses' Registry

Registrars taking calls for the Pitt County Professional Private Duty Nurses' Registry for home or hospital patients are: Grace Turner, R.N., 756-0375, Feb. 24-28; and Helen McArthur, R.N., 756-1854, March 3-7.

Council Agenda

The Greenville City Council will meet Monday at 5:30 p.m. in the first floor conference room of City Hall to conduct a public hearing on a request by W.E. Dansey Jr. for issuance of a commercial rehabilitation loan.

Council members will also consider an ordinance amending the 1985-86 city budget to appropriate funds for purchase of defibrillator monitors and for construction of an entrance-way to Elm Street Gym with use of funds generated from a Recreation and Parks Department donation.

Following action session, the council will conduct a workshop to discuss lobbying of council members, changing of agenda items without full council approval, appointments to boards and commissions and sale of the city's swimming pool parking lot.

Other matters to be discussed include activation of the City-ECU parking committee, city holidays for 1987 (including discussion of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, budget philosophy and construction of a science nature center at River Park North.

Fraud Hotline

William von Raab, U.S. Customs Service commissioner, has announced the initiation of a new Textile Fraud Hotline in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

The 24-hour toll-free number, 1-800-232-5378, will be used to accept reports, including anonymous ones, of textile fraud. Depending upon circumstances and results of the cases, the Customs Service will pay cash rewards ranging from $250 to $2,500 for anonymous information and up to $250,000 to people who come forward.

Some common types of textile fraud, von Raab said, include false country of origin labeling; removal of origin labels and substitution of "made in the U.S.A." labels; false weight, quantity and fiber descriptions to circumvent quotas, and altering of appearance of merchandise to avoid duties.

Patriots Hold On, Nip Pirates

FAIRFAX, Va. — East Carolina, battling to stay in the upper division of the Colonial Athletic Association, lost a heart-breaking basketball contest to George Mason Saturday night as two final shots fell away, 70-69.

The Pirates, trailing by 13 points with 4:35 left in the game, held the Patriots scoreless the rest of the way and battled back to have a shot at winning it and clinching fourth place in the league standings.

But Lady Luck just teased the Pirates and put the pressure on them to win or take to the road Monday night at James Madison.

UNC-Wilmington, now a half-game behind the Pirates, defeated Mason in overtime Saturday night, and holds the advantage over ECU should the two finished tied.

A victory by the Pirates Monday night would clinch fourth, while a loss would tie ECU and UNCW, sending ECU on the road against the Seahawks in the opening round of the CAA tournament Saturday night. If ECU wins, the two play in Greenville.

Trailing 70-57 with 4:35 to go, the Pirates got their last drive going. Marchell Henry started it with a jumper and Manuel Jones made the next two baskets, the second on a steal and layup that trimmed it to 70-63.

Curt Vanderhorst and Keith Sledge both hit long jumpers to trim the lead to three and then William Grady stole the ball and slammed it through to make it 70-69 with 22 seconds remaining.

Mason, which missed the front end of four one-and-ones during the final two minutes plus, missed again after being fouled, and the Pirates scrambled for the rebound, racing down court.

Grady took a shot from the baseline that bounced off and Vanderhorst got the ball back deep, putting up a 25-footer just before the horn that found the back of the rim and bounced away, killing the hopes of the Pirates.

"We were in foul trouble and they hit some awfully tough shots," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said of Mason's pullaway to the 13-point lead late in the game. "They were taking perimeter shots and when those shots go, anyone is tough to beat, especially at home.

"I'm a Ricky Wilson and Rob Rose fan and they played well, as I knew they would in their last home game. Even (Earl) Moore hit from deep.

"I thought we executed extremely well. We had to move to our scramble due to fouls and the lack of times out. We played hard and we played to win. We faced adversity and had the chance to win."

Harrison said Mason deserved the lead when they got it, hitting big time shots from the outside. "But we had a chance to win and that's all you can ask for. We just keep playing to win.

"This was a hell of a good college basketball game and I hope people realize that."

Mason moved out first and built up a four-point lead at 28-24 with 5:37 left in the half. East Carolina came back to tie it at 28-28 on a jumper by Leon Bass.

Mason regained the lead and stretched it to 34-31 on a Rose jumper, but ECU came back to take the lead 35-34 on two Bass free throws with 1:20 left.

But over the next four plus minutes, the Patriots scored ten straight points to push the lead out to 58-46.

That was finally stretched to 70-57, the largest lead by the Patriots before the Pirates put on their final rally that nearly pulled it off.

Wilson led the Patriot scoring with a game-high 23 points. Kenny Sanders added 15, Moore had 12 and Rose made 10.

Henry paced the ECU effort with 20 while Vanderhorst had 16 and Bass had 11.

Monday's game at Madison will wind up the regular season. The result will tell whether the Pirates are home or away for the CAA's first round.

Lady Pirates Crush Mason

BY DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina's full-court defensive pressure forced 35 turnovers and three players reached double figures as the Lady Pirates trounced George Mason, 78-46, in a Colonial Athletic Association basketball game at Menges Coliseum Saturday night.

The win raised ECU's record to 10-1 in the CAA and 20-6 on the season.

The Lady Pirates will try to avenge their only CAA loss when they host James Madison on Monday night at 7:30 p.m. for the conference title in the final game of the regular season. The Lady Dukes routed the Lady Pirates, 82-55, when they met on Jan. 27 in Harrisonburg, Va.

James Madison, which is 23-2 overall and leads the CAA with a 10-0 mark, played at UNC-Wilmington last night.

All of the Lady Pirates saw action in Saturday night's game as the Lady Bucs dominated the contest from start to finish.

"We played a really aggressive man-to-man defense," said ECU Coach Emily Manwaring. "We played intense defense the whole game."

After disposing of the Lady Patriots, Manwaring pointed her attentions to Monday's game which will decide the CAA title.

"I hope we have a carryover from this game to Monday," she said. "Madison will be in a lot of trouble if we play the same way."

Manwaring said she believes Monday's game should have a different outcome than the contest earlier in the season because of the location.

"Monday's game will be a real test," she said. "But the pressure is on Madison because they're on top, and they'll be coming to our area to play."

Loraine Foster, who played only 19 minutes, and Alma Bethea scored 14 points apiece to lead ECU. Sylvia Bragg added 13 for the Lady Pirates.

Dayna Scott poured in 13 points, while Veronica Gilliard and Jackie Funk tallied 10 each for the Lady Pirates.

The Lady Pirates took command of the game from the opening tip-off and never trailed, leading by as many as 37 points late in the second half.

Foster scored six points in the first 4:18 of the game as the Pirates jumped out to a 12-4 lead.

The teams exchanged buckets, but Sylvia Bragg scored ECU's next seven points to give the Lady Pirates a 21-8 lead with 11:24 to go in the first half.

Bethea hit an eight-foot jumper to stretch ECU's lead to 29-13 with 6:40 left in the half.

With the score 33-17, the Lady Pirates ran off six points, including four by Foster, to increase their lead to 39-17 with 2:33 remaining until intermission.

After Scott sank one of two free throws to make it 39-18, Bethea sank a 10-footer to make it 41-18.

With the score 57-31, ECU scored nine unanswered points to make it 66-31 with 7:52 left. Jody Rodriguez scored all six of her points in the string.

ECU continued to take it to the Lady Patriots and grabbed its biggest lead, 76-39, when Cathy Ellis sank a 20-footer with 2:09 to go.

Hot-Shooting Tech Holds Off Maryland By 77-70

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Seven-foot John Salley took care of the inside game, but Georgia Tech could hardly miss from any distance.

The fifth-ranked Yellow Jackets sank 18 of 21 second-half field goal attempts, mostly from long range, and held off Maryland to record a 77-70 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over the Terps Saturday.

"That's ridiculous. . .unbelievable," Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said of Tech's shooting.

"We did what we had to do," Cremins said, "and what we had to do was play a great game. We couldn't stop them. Sometimes, we don't make those shots."

Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell also called Tech's shooting unbelievable, adding: "And remember, they just didn't come from the inside, either."

Indeed, Tech hit 10 baskets from 15 feet or more after intermission, and another from 10 feet out.

Salley's five field goals included three dunks, a four-foot bank shot, and on a goal-tending goal that launched a decisive seven-point midway through the second half. Salley scored five of his 22 points in that stretch.

"It was a team win," Salley said. "I may have scored the most points, but it was not a case of one particular individual."

Maryland, which had upset No. 1 North Carolina on Thursday night, pulled to within 41-39 on four free throws by Len Bias, and then the teams exchanged 12 field goals before Salley launched the decisive rally.

After Salley converted a three-point play following a goaltending call against Bias, Duane Ferrell scored for Georgia Tech, and Salley added another field goal to make it 60-51.

The Yellow Jackets, 21-4, improved their ACC record to 9-3, pulling to within one game of first-place Duke. Maryland, 15-12 overall, is 4-8 in league competition.

The Terps, bidding for a second major upset within 43 hours, led 22-17 with 8:03 remaining in the first half. But Georgia Tech outscored Maryland 16-6, including six by Bruce Dalrymple and four by Mark Price, to take a 33-28 lead at halftime.

Price finished with 16 points, Dalrymple had 13, and Ferrell 12 for the Yellow Jackets, who led throughout the second half and beat Maryland for the fifth consecutive time.

Bias, the leading scorer in the ACC, followed up his 35-point effort against North Carolina with 30 points. He converted eight consecutive foul shots, running his streak to 30 in a row, tying a school record held by Albert King.

Henderson Sparks Duke To Win Over Oklahoma

DURHAM (AP) — Duke's David Henderson packed 28 points into 31 minutes of playing time and if he lacked anything, it wasn't confidence.

"I felt like I could take my man any time I wanted to," Henderson said after the second-ranked Blue Devils' 93-84 basketball victory over No. 10 Oklahoma Saturday. Henderson, who hit 11 of 17 shots from the field and 18 points in the second half, tried everything from 20-foot jumpers to drives through the lane, and most of the time, it worked.

"I felt it," said Henderson, whose performance was backed by 20 points from Johnny Dawkins.

The Blue Devils, 27-2, cruised to a 23-point lead in the first half, but had to fight off an Oklahoma charge that began midway through the first half. The Sooners closed the gap to eight points by outscoring Duke 24-9 in the final eight minutes of the half.

"That seems like it's a characteristic of this team," Henderson said. "We've done it several times, going up 17 or 18 points and then it's a ballgame."

"I felt like we played well after not playing too well early," said Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs. "A lot of people would have belly upped if put in our position."

But Duke regained its composure in the second half after Oklahoma pulled to within one and they did it with one rule — five passes per possession.

"If we could just slow it down we knew we could get better shots," said Mark Alarie. "We enjoy a frantic pace, especially when it's in our favor, but this one wasn't and we wanted to slow it down to play the basketball we were capable of playing."

Duke grabbed a 23-8 lead by outscoring the Sooners 15-2 and added a 16-4 run to take a 39-16 lead with nine minutes left in the first half.

Then Henderson and Dawkins began to find openings in the Sooner defense, scoring on inside baskets and holding the Sooners scoreless for over a two-minute span late in the contest to take an 89-78 lead on Mark Alarie's inside jumper.

Mark Alarie added 16 points for the Blue Devils. Dawkins' No. 24 jersey was retired before the game, making him the third player in Duke history to be so honored. Mike Gminski and Dick Groat were the others.

Johnson led Oklahoma, which fell to 23-5, with 31 points, while Tim McCalister added 19 and Darryl Kennedy 14.

Sectional Tourneys This Week

Eight area high school basketball teams will be in competition this week for five trips to the regionals as sectional tournament action opens across the state.

The eight include the girls teams from Rose, Washington, North Pitt, Roanoke and Greene Central, and boys teams from Washington, Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central.

The Section II 1-A Tournament will be held at Washington High School, while the Section I 2-A event is scheduled for North Pitt. The Section II 3-A tournament will be played at D.H. Conley.

The Section I 4-A contests will be played at the site of the highest seeded team involved in each game.

Section I 4-A

The only area team involved in the Section I 4-A Tournament is the Rose High School girls, who were co-champions of the Big East Conference.

The Rampettes lost a coin toss Saturday with Wilson Fike, with which it tied for the title, for the top seeding position in the tournament.

Rose will play host to Jacksonville, a team it twice lost to during the regular season in the first round. That game will be played Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Rose.

Rose is third-seeded in the section while Jacksonville is seeded sixth. The Lady Cardinals finished in third place in the Mideastern Conference.

Other first round girls' games have #1 seeded Fike hosting #8 Southern Wayne; #2 seeded Goldsboro, the Mideastern champ, hosting #7 Hunt; and #4 seeded Wilmington Laney hosting #5 Wilson Beddingfield.

Should the Rampettes win, they would face the winner of the Goldsboro-Hunt game. If Goldsboro, it would be played there at 7:30 p.m. Thursday; if Hunt, it would be played in Greenville.

The other semifinal game is also scheduled at the highest seeded team's home court on Thursday. The finals will be held on March 4 at 7:30 p.m., again at the site of the highest remaining seed.

Boys' play sends #1 Beddingfield, the Big East champ, against #8 Laney; #4 Wilmington Hoggard against #5 Northeastern; #2 Goldsboro against #7 Hunt, which won a coin-toss with Northern Nash for the fourth Big East spot; and #3 Fike against #6 New Bern. All four games will be played Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., with the semifinals on Friday and the championship game on March 5.

The winners in the boys' and girls' advance to the regionals, to be played in Wilson March 13-15.

Section II 3-A

The 3-A Section II tournament will be held at D.H. Conley High School starting Tuesday. Three games will be played on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday, with the final two games on March 4.

Washington High School's two teams are the only area teams involved. The boys, third place finishers in the Coastal Conference, will play on Wednesday at 5 p.m. against Southern Durham, the Triangle Conference's #2 team.

Washington's girls, the regular season champs in the Coastal, will face Triangle fourth place team Southern Durham at 8 p.m. on Tuesday.

Other games on Tuesday send Triangle winner Apex against Coastal #4 North Lenoir in a girls' game at 5 p.m., followed by Apex's boys, also the Triangle champs, against Havelock, the Coastal #4, at 6:30 p.m.

Wednesday's schedule also includes Coastal #2 East Carteret against Triangle #3 South Johnston in a 6:30 p.m. girls game and Coastal #1 West Carteret against either Harnett Central or East Wake in an 8 p.m. boys game. East Wake and Harnett were to hold a playoff game Saturday night to decide fourth place in the Triangle.

Friday's opening game, at 5 p.m., sends Central Harnett, the Triangle #2 against Coastal #3 West Carteret in a girls' game. The first round then concludes at 6:30 p.m. when Coastal #2 boys West Craven takes on Triangle #3 West Harnett.

The semifinals then begin with a girls' game at 8 p.m. that night.

The remaining three semifinals will be played Saturday night, with the two championship games on March 4.

Section I 2-A

Ayden-Grifton's Eastern Plains champion boys and third place Farmville Central will be joined by North Pitt's girls' champs, along with #4 Greene Central, and Northeastern Conference fourth place finisher Roanoke in the Section I 2-A tournament at North Pitt.

That event will get underway on Monday with two games played each night through Friday, two more on March 3 and the championships on March 4.

In the boys' field, the tournament gets underway on Monday with Northeastern champ Plymouth taking on South Lenoir, the EPC #4 team at 8 p.m.

Tuesday, Ayden-Grifton meets Northeastern #4 Ahoskie, while on Wednesday, C.B. Aycock, the EPC's #2, faces Northampton East, the NEAC's #3. The first round ends Thursday with Farmville Central, EPC #3, facing Ahoskie, NEAC #2. All boys' games are at 8 p.m. throughout the tournament.

The semifinals will be Friday and March 3.

Plymouth's girls, the NEAC's #1 take on Greene Central, EPC #4 on Monday at 6:30 p.m., the time of all the girls' games throughout the tournament. Tuesday, North Pitt, EPC #1, meets NEAC #4 Roanoke.

Wednesday, Aycock, the EPC runner-up, takes on NEAC #3 Ahoskie, while on Thursday, Northampton East, NEAC #2, takes on South Lenoir, the ECP's #3 team.

Semifinals are Friday and March 3.

Section II 1-A

The Tobacco Belt Conference is a section unto itself in the 1-A ranks, but will advance only the top four teams to the tournament. All three of the area teams in the TBC, Chocowinity, Jamesville and Bear Grass, failed to make the field.

Semifinal games will be held on Thursday and Friday with the championship on March 4.

Thursday, #1 North Edgecombe faces #4 Columbia in an 8:30 p.m. boys' game while #1 Belhaven meets #4 Bath in a 7 p.m. girls' contest. Friday's girls' game has #2 Creswell meeting #3 Columbia. The boys game sends #2 Creswell against #3 Belhaven.

Winners at the four regionals will move on to the state finals, to be played March 21-22 at Chapel Hill (boys) and Elon College (girls).

Knights Take League Title

WILSON — Paul Hollingsworth hit two free throws to send the game into overtime, then made two more at the end of the extra period to allow Greenville Christian to overcome Friendship, 76-75, and win the Eastern Carolina Christian Conference basketball tournament title Saturday night.

Greenville Christian girls, who won the regular season title, also came away winners, beating Wilson Christian 46-43. Details of that game were not available, however.

Friendship leaped out to an 18-6 lead in the opening period of the boys' game, but Greenville rallied in the second period with a 27-16 margin. That cut the Friendship lead to 34-33 at intermission.

In the third period, Greenville continued to come back, outhitting Friendship, 20-14 to roll up a 53-48 lead. But Friendship then rallied to take the lead in the final period before Hollingsworth made two free throws with just seconds left. Friendship had time for one last shot, but missed, leaving it at 70-70 at the end of regulation play.

In the overtime, Greenville got the ball with a one-point lead and wound the clock down to about five seconds when Hollingsworth was fouled. He made both for a 76-73 lead and Friendship dashed down the court for the final basket just before the horn.

"It was a well-played game by both teams. I thought we had an outstanding game, and they played well too," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "Our defense brought us back after we got behind and we had balanced scoring.

Hollingsworth led the way with 27 points while Derek Leupen had 15, Robin House had 14 and Marc Holloman had 11.

Friendship was led by Mike Coooper with 22, Doug Creech with 16, Mike Knight with 12, Rick Godwin with 11 and Jon Eshelman with 10.

"This team has as much heart as any I've coached," Thatcher said. "They just don't know when to quit.

Greenville's boys are now 13-8 overall.

Further play in the North Carolina Christian Activities Association will be determined early this week.

Farris, Anderson Second; Levine Third In Mat Meet

WINSTON-SALEM — D.H. Conley High School captured two second place finishes and finished in fifth place in the North Carolina State High School wrestling tournament which concluded Saturday night at Winston-Salem's Parkland High School.

Meanwhile, Martin Anderson, at 148-pounds, lost to Greensboro Page's Henry Byrd, 11-8, in the championship match.

The only other area wrestler to place was Rose High School's Adam Levine, who finished in third place in the 135-pound class. Levine lost in the semifinals and battled his way back through the consolation bracket to take third.

Conley Coach Milt Sherman said that Winford proved to be a little too strong for Farris in his match. "Then, at 148, three of the four regional Outstanding Wrestlers were at that weight," Sherman added. "They finished one, two and three."

South Irdell finished first in the team standings with 65½ points while Fayetteville Westover was second with 50. Pine Forest was third with 40½ with Hoke County finishing fourth with 38½. Conley was fifth with 37½.

For Conley it marked the 11th straight year that the Vikings have had a wrestler to place among the top four in the state and gain all-state honors. Farris and Anderson were the 19th and 20th all-staters for Sherman. Both wrestlers won 30 or more matches this year.

Following is a summary of the activities of the six area wrestlers who attended the state meet:

101: David Farris (Conley) pinned Jody Cheek (W. Mecklenburg) 5:30; decisioned Shane Long (W. Guilford) 3-0; decisioned Durwood Bynum (Salisbury) 5-4; lost to Avery Winford (S. Iredell), 7-0 to place second.

122: Brian Stokes (Washington) decisioned Greg Taylor (N. Surry) 8-5; lost to Phil Gray (Cary) 16-7; lost to Eric Hogan (E. Gaston) 5-0.

135: Adam Levine (Rose) technical pin over Sean Roberts (Wilkes Central) 16-0, 5:56; lost to Jeff Redfern (E. Mecklenburg) 4-4, 4-0 OT; won by forfeit over Eric Austin (WS Glenn); decisioned Louis Zeisman (Westover) 9-2; decisioned David Culbreth (71st) to finish third.

158: Larry Harris (Washington) decisioned Roderick Boyce (Kings Mountain) 8-1; lost to Tim Correll (W. Caldwell) 8-2; was pinned by Jerome Pickard (Reidsville) 0:21.

UNC-Wilmington Halts Madison In Overtime

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Brian Rowsom scored 31 points and North Carolina-Wilmington dominated the overtime to gain a 79-68 victory over James Madison Saturday night in Colonial Athletic Association basketball.

A hook shot by the Dukes' Eric Esch with two seconds left in regulation knotted the score at 59-59 after a close second half in which neither team led by more than three points.

The Seahawks scored the first seven points in overtime on a layup by Greg Bender, a Rowsom tip-in and a three-point play by Charles Cherry. James Madison cut the difference to three with 1:22 remaining on a Robert Griffin jump shot, but North Carolina-Wilmington scored two straight baskets, including a Bobby Jo Springer steal and layup that made it 70-63 with 47 seconds left.

The Seahawks were eight-of-eight on the free throw line in the final seconds to put the game out of reach.

The win capped a 15-12 season for North Carolina-Wilmington, which was 6-8 in CAA play. The Dukes, with one game remaining, are 4-22 and 2-11.

James Madison was down 20-12 with 10:58 left in the first half but went on a 17-2 tear to take a 29-22 lead with 6:09 remaining, and led 36-33 at intermission.

Eric Brent had 22 points for the Dukes. John Newman had 14 and Esch chipped in with 11 points.

Esch also dominated the boards with a career-high 13 rebounds.

Top Seeds In Tourney Titles

WASHINGTON — Top-seeded North Edgecombe and Belhaven captured the Tobacco Belt Conference Tournament championships to go along with their regular season titles Saturday night.

In the finals, played at Washington High School, North Edgecombe downed Creswell, the number #2 seed, 68-62.

The girls game saw Belhaven roll up a 50-37 win, that too over Creswell, which finished second.

All four teams move into this week's Section II 1-A Tournament at Washington, which starts Thursday.

Wahoos Glide By Tigers, 82-69

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia, which used the inside play of center Olden Polynice to defeat Clemson earlier this season, employed that same script Saturday to post an 82-69 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over the Tigers.

Polynice scored 21 points and grabbed eight rebounds as the Cavaliers pulled away in the last 11 minutes to improve their record to 18-7 and 7-5 in the ACC.

Virginia Coach Terry Holland said Clemson did a good job of keeping the Cavaliers from going inside in the first half.

But that changed after intermission when Polynice hit seven of eight shots from the floor. Aiding Polynice was forward Tom Sheehey who scored 16 points and pulled in eight rebounds.

"The same as last time. Their inside play was too much for us," said Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis. "The difference in this game was their power play inside. If you don't play physical with Virginia, they're going to knock you on your can."

Polynice, who had 18 points and 13 rebounds in Virginia's 83-81 victory at Clemson last month, "had another great game," said Ellis.

Holland said the Cavaliers' man-to-man defense was effective in the first half, "but we had a lot of trouble stopping them in the second half until we went to the diamond and one. That allowed us to play tough on the perimeter without giving up a lot inside."

Clemson freshman guard Michael Best shared scoring honors with Polynice with 21 points. The Tigers, 17-11, 3-9, also got 16 points from Horace Grant and 12 from Glenn Corbit.

Virginia, which led 38-32 at the half and never trailed after intermission, clung to a 54-52 lead with 11:40 to play.

The Cavaliers then scored six unanswered points to open an 8-point lead, a short bank shot by Mel Kennedy and a pair of Johnson jumpers putting Virginia on top 60-52 with 10:39 remaining.

Clemson, which has lost 12 of its last 13 games with Virginia, managed to get as close as five points twice in the final 10 minutes, the last time at 62-57 on a pair of Corbit free throws with 7:14 to play.

A score inside by Polynice, two free throws by Sheehey and a fast break layup by Sheehey made it an 11-point game, 68-57, with six minutes to play.

Virginia connected on 17 of 23 field goal attempts in the second half for 73.9 percent and shot a season-best 64.6 percent, 31 of 48, for the game.

Lloyd Scrambles Back, Defeats Graf In Three

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd fought back from a 3-1 deficit and beat fast-starting Steffi Graf of West Germany 6-4, 6-2 Saturday to win the women's title at the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships.

The tournament, the 144th that Lloyd has won as a professional, paid her $112,500. The 16-year-old Graf has yet to win an event in her short pro career. She picked up $56,250 as the runner-up in this two-week, Grand Slam-like event.

The men's final between top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and second-seeded Mats Wilander was scheduled for Sunday.

Both gained the final on defaults, Lendl when Jimmy Connors refused to continue their semifinal match because of what he considered a bad line call, and Wilander when Stefan Edberg of Sweden bowed out of their match with a stomach muscle pull.

Lloyd beat Graf by the same score in the semifinals of this event last year, but she had to fight a lot harder this time

The West German refused to fold when Lloyd broke her service in the first game. She broke right back, held her serve and then broke again for a 3-1 lead.

"I think I started out a little bit slowly," Lloyd said. "But Steffi came out roaring. She wasn't missing any forehands in those first few games."

Graf showed the impatience of youth in the next game, however, pressing too hard to finish off her serve. She ended a long rally at deuce by hitting an easy forehand into the net, then blew an overhead to give Lloyd the game.

They stayed on serve until the pivotal ninth game, when Graf hit another forehand long at break point, giving Lloyd a 5-4 lead.

"I was really happy with the way I pulled out the first set. At 4-all, I felt I played two great games. Then I started playing a lot better in the second set. I started hitting it out and matching her ground strokes."

After losing the first game of the second set, Lloyd demoralized her young opponent by rolling through five straight games.

Graf said she was satisfied with the way she played during the tournament as a whole, but she was disappointed with the outcome of the final.

"In the beginning, she was doing errors," Graf said. "I had chances in the first set. But she obviously knows what to do when it gets close.

"She didn't make any errors in the second set."

Lloyd had at least half of her 16 unforced errors in the first four games. Graf finished with 34 unforced errors.

Lloyd, ranked No.2 in the world to Graf's No.6, also whipped the young West German convincingly three weeks ago in the Virginia Slims of Florida championship match. The two battled on an even level through six games before Lloyd won nine of the next 10 games to win 6-3, 6-1.

With the victory Saturday, Lloyd pulled ahead of top-ranked Martina Navratilova in the season-long Virginia Slims Championship Series. She has 3,050 points, compared to 3,000 for Navratilova with four events left in the season, which ends in March.

But the highlight of Graf's career is her gold-medal winning performance at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles where tennis was a demonstration sport.

Brad Gilbert and Vince Van Patten won the men's doubles final in a walkover Saturday afternoon because Edberg couldn't play because of his muscle pull. Edberg had reached the final with fellow Swede Anders Jarryd.

Kansas Defeats Kansas State

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Ron Kellogg scored 30 points and triggered a second-half surge that vaulted No. 3 Kansas to an 84-69 victory over Kansas State Saturday and gave the Jayhawks the Big Eight basketball championship.

In winning their first regular-season title since 1978, the Jayhawks were forced to overcome an inspired effort by the Wildcats, whose veteran coach, the retiring Jack Hartman, was honored in pregame ceremonies.

The heavily favored Jayhawks, 26-3 overall and 11-1 in the Big Eight, quickly mounted a 19-5 lead and a rout seemed to be ordained.

But then Joe Wright, K-State's 6-foot-4 senior guard, staged a remarkable shooting display and scored 17 points in a 23-6 run that saw the Wildcats seize a 30-27 lead.

Two free throws by Kellogg sliced K-State's lead at halftime to 34-33. It stayed close between the two longtime state rivals until Kellogg sparked the winning drive for the Jayhawks.

K-State held a 49-48 lead when Danny Manning of Kansas blocked a shot by Norris Coleman, the Wildcats' 24-year-old freshman star. Kellogg drilled a 17-footer a few seconds later to put Kansas in gear for a 20-4 run. Kellogg, a 6-5 senior and first team All-Big Eight selection, scored 10 of his team's 20 points in the run.

Calvin Thompson added 18 for the Jayhawks and Manning had 15. K-State, 16-11 and 4-8, got 21 points from Coleman and 27 from Wright.

Florida State Upsets Memphis

TALLAHASEE, Fla. (AP) — Freshman center Tat Hunter tipped in Pee Wee Barber's missed layup with two seconds left to give last place Florida State an 82-80 Metro Conference upset over fourth-ranked Memphis State Saturday.

The winner came after Memphis State, down by five points with a little over a minute left, had tied the game on two quick baskets and a free throw.

FSU is now 10-15 for the season and in last place with a 2-8 record in the Metro conference. Memphis State is 23-3 for the season and 8-2 in the conference.

"FSU played a great game," Kirk said. "They were extremely good on the boards, that's where they beat us, both offensively and defensively. They very much deserved to win."

Barber, FSU's point guard who leads the Seminoles in scoring with an average of 16.4 points per game, netted 27 points to lead all scorers Saturday. Junior guard LaRae David dropped in 21.

DePaul.....81
St. John's (6).....72

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Dallas Comegys scored 21 points to lead a balanced DePaul attack Saturday as the Blue Demons upset sixth-ranked St. John's 81-72 to keep alive their hopes for an NCAA tournament bid.

The victory hiked DePaul's record to 15-10, while St. John's slipped to 25-4.

Comegys' three-point play to start the second half gave the Blue Demons a 41-31 lead. The Redmen, rallying behind Walter Berry, twice closed within two points but couldn't get over the top.

With St. John's closing to 49-47, DePaul ran off a string of 10 straight points for a 59-47 advantage as Kevin Holmes scored the last five points in the charge.

Berry finished with 21 points, 16 of them coming in the second half, but Mark Jackson topped the Redmen with 23. Rod Stickland scored 17 points for DePaul and Holmes finished with 15.

No more than two points separated the teams in the early going. DePaul managed a 10-9 lead before St. John's spurted for eight points in a little more than a minute, for a 17-10 lead.

Then it was DePaul's turn to spurt as the Blue Demons outscored the Redmen 18-2 to shoot ahead 28-19 in a 10-minute span.

DePaul retained a nine-point lead with 3:24 to play, but St. John's, on a basket by Ron Rowan and a series of free throws, closed to 34-31.

UA-Birmingham.....54

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Antoine Joubert scored 20 points and Gary Grant added 14 as No. 7 Michigan came from behind to defeat Alabama-Birmingham 62-54 in nonconference college basketball action Saturday.

The victory raised Michigan's record to 23-4, while the Blazers fell to 22-9.

Michigan trailed 45-38 with 10:24 remaining in the contest before the Wolverines went on a 10-2 run to take a 48-47 advantage with 6:33 left. Michigan never trailed afterward.

Center Roy Tarpley was held without a point in the first half as Michigan's inside game was stifled by the defense of Blazer forwards Archie Johnson and Jerome Mincy.

The Blazers took a 28-26 lead at intermission and outscored the Wolverines 13-8 to open the second half before Michigan began a slow comeback.

Kentucky (8).....80
Georgia.....75

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Kenny Walker scored 22 points and Winston Bennett 20, including three free throws in the final 32 seconds, as eighth-ranked Kentucky clinched the Southeastern Conference basketball title outright with an 80-75 victory over Georgia Saturday.

Kentucky had assured itself of at least a tie for its 36th SEC title with a victory over Florida last Wednesday night.

Bennett gave the Wildcats a 76-71 lead with 32 seconds remaining when he hit one of two free throws, but Georgia's Donald Hartry sank a 20-footer with 21 seconds left to cut the lead to three.

Bennett came right back and drilled a pair of free throws with 19 seconds remaining for a 78-73 advantage, that Hartry again cut into by hitting a 20-footer with 11 seconds to play.

Walker closed the scoring when he made two free throws with six seconds remaining.

It was the 14th conference victory in a row for the Wildcats, who had been picked to finish third in this season's title chase. Kentucky lifted its record to 24-3 for the year and 15-1 in the conference.

The Wildcats trailed much of the first half before taking the lead for good 3:41 before intermission when Walker hit a 10-footer that broke a 30-30 tie. Kentucky had a 38-35 halftime lead and led by an many as 10 points several times in the second half.

Hartry and Horace McMillan each had 14 points for the Bulldogs, 14-11 and 7-9.

Fresno State.....56

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Senior Anthony Jones scored 17 points and Freddie Banks and Armon Gilliam chipped in 14 apiece Saturday as No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas rolled to a 72-56 Pacific Coast Athletic Association win over Fresno State.

Jones, playing in his final home game, scored five of his points in a nine-point first half run by UNLV that wiped out a 15-12 Fresno State lead and put the Runnin' Rebels ahead for good.

Jones hit three of six from beyond the 3-point goal range as UNLV hit half of its 14 shots from 3-pointers. The Rebels shot 56 percent for the game to offset a 37-22 Fresno State rebounding margin.

A second nine-point spurt early in the second half put the game away for UNLV after Fresno State had trimmed a 29-21 halftime lead to get within six points.

The victory raised UNLV's record to 27-3 and 15-1 in the PCAA. The Rebels, with two regular season games left, have already clinched the conference crown.

UNLV had problems early getting inside against a stifling Fresno State zone defense and trailed by three points midway through the first half.

But the Rebels outscored Fresno State 17-6 the remainder of the half despite getting only four points on a 1-for-8 performance from the floor by Banks, the team's leading scorer.

Fresno State, playing a deliberate game, pulled to within 31-26 early in the second half before a run by UNLV gave the Rebels a 40-25 lead that held the rest of the game.

Marvin Carter led Fresno State with 18 points, scoring 16 of them in the second half, while Brian Salone added 13 points, only two in the second half.

UNLV made 12 steals to four for Fresno State.

Fresno State fell to 15-13 on the year and 8-9 in the PCAA with the loss before 16,798 at the UNLV campus arena.

Bradley (12).....74
Wichita State.....64

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Sophomore Hersey Hawkins scored 22 points as 12th-ranked Bradley extended its winning streak — the nation's longest — to 19 games with a 74-64 victory over Missouri Valley Conference rival Wichita State.

The Braves, undefeated in conference play after 15 games, also boosted the country's best season-record for Division I schools to 28-1, and remained undefeated at home this season after 14 games. Saturday also marked the team's fifth sellout game with a crowd of 10,450 at the downtown Peoria civic center.

Hawkins, a 6-foot-3 guard averaging 19 points per game this season, finished the game as high-scorer — getting 14 of his 22 in the second half. He has 997 college career points.

With one regular-season game to go, next Thursday at home against Indiana State, Hawkins would become only the second Bradley sophomore in the school's long history of basketball to top 1,000 points.

Wichita State, 13-13 and 6-9 in the Missouri Valley, climbed to within two points of Bradley three times during the second half, all on field goals by 6-9 sophomore forward Curtis Bailey, who managed only six points for the entire game.

But it was Wichita State's foul trouble and lack of depth on the bench, coupled with Bradley's 58-percent shooting from the field, that allowed Bradley to shake off the second-half scare and pull further ahead in the game's final six minutes.

Gus Santos had 18 points to lead Wichita State and Sasha Radunovish contributed 13, but he fouled out with 3:55 to go. Santos and junior guard Lew Hill also fouled out in the final minutes.

Bradley led 38-29 at halftime and had led by as many as 11 points before the intermission.

Louisville (16).....76
Houston.....59

HOUSTON (AP) — Louisville freshman Pervis Ellison scored 25 points, including nine in a second-half surge to rally the 16th-ranked Cardinals to a 76-59 victory over short-handed Houston Saturday.

Louisville, which has won 10 of its last 11 games, trailed 38-32 early in the second half when the Cardinals outscored the Cougars 20-8 over the next eight minutes, surging to a 52-46 lead.

The Cougars, which fell to 13-11, never contended after that. Louisville improved its record to 21-7.

Houston was led by Alvin Franklin with 18 points and Greg Anderson with 14.

Houston played without starters Rickie Winslow and Renaldo Thomas, who received suspensions for unsportsmanlike conduct following a one-point loss to Texas Tech.

Louisville was in control early, taking a 22-16 lead with 8:30 to go in the first half. But the Cougars outscored the Cardinals 14-6 over the remainder of the half for a 30-28 lead at intermission.

Then the Cougars moved to their 38-32 lead before Louisville went on its spurt.

Navy (17).....55
Army.....52

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — David Robinson, who had a chance to win the game for Navy in regulation with a free throw with two seconds remaining, scored seven points in overtime to lead the 17th-ranked Midshipmen to a 55-52 victory over Army Saturday.

Navy, winning its ninth in a row, boosted its season standing to 23-4. Army slipped to 9-16.

The Cadets, who led by seven points at the intermission, held their advantage through most of the second half but fell behind when Robinson scored inside to give Navy a 43-42 cushion with only 56 seconds to go.

Mark Michaelsen countered with a layup for Army with 11 seconds remaining to put the Cadets back in front, but Robinson was fouled inside with two seconds left. He made the front end of the 1-and-1 but missed with his second attempt, forcing the overtime.

Four free throws by Kevin Houston and two more by Ron Steptoe carried Army to a 50-47 lead less than two minutes into the extra period, but Navy rallied with a 7-0 run to go up by four at 54-50 with just 21 seconds left. Robinson, only 7-of-16 from the foul line, scored five of the seven points, with reserve guard Cliff Rees accounting for the other two.

Navy, which hit on only 31 percent of its shots from the floor in the first half, made good on 54 percent in the second. Army shot 46 percent in the opening half and only 39 per cent in the second.

Robinson led all scorers with 23 points and had a game high 11 rebounds, while Vernon Butler added 16 for the Midshipmen. Houston topped four Army scorers in double figures with 20.

S. Mississippi.....69
Virginia Tech (18).....66

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Forward Randolph Keys scored 23 points and pulled down seven rebounds to lead Southern Mississippi to a 69-66 upset of 18th-ranked Virginia Tech in a Metro Conference basketball game Saturday.

The Golden Eagles improved to 15-10 overall and 5-6 in the conference, while Virgninia Tech fell to 20-7 and 5-5.

Keys hit two free throws with 11 seconds left in the game to seal the victory for the Golden Eagles. Virginia Tech had taken a 59-51 lead with just 5:36 to go but the Eagles, behind Keys and guard Kenny Siler, outscored the Hokies 12-1 over the next two minutes to move on top 63-60.

Tewell Holds One Shot Lead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Doug Tewell isn't exactly going hungry, but he figures it's been long enough since he last won a golf tournament.

"It's about time," said Tewell, who held a one-stroke lead after Saturday's third round of the Los Angeles Open.

"I've just about spent all that money I won six years ago."

Tewell, on the PGA circuit for 11 years, has won just twice, and both of those victories came in 1980.

He reeled off a blazing string of six birdies to open the third round and wound up with a 5-under-par 66 that gave him a 6-under total of 207 through 54 holes.

Lurking just a stroke behind were defending champion Lanny Wadkins, Dennis Trixler and Willie Wood.

Tewell, who's averaged more than $100,000 in earnings on the tour for the past three years despite not having won a tournament, said of his sizzling third-round start:

"Those six holes were a lot of fun. I'm elated.

"It was a special day for me. I thought about going for a record. Maybe they'll accept six since it's Riviera."

Wadkins, who'd had some trouble with the Riviera Country Club course after mastering it last year, said he asked himself, "What am I doing? This is supposed to be one of my favorite courses."

Tewell got the lead by himself when Trixler, playing in a group behind him, missed an 8-foot putt for par on the 18th hole.

Beginning the day five strokes back of O'Grady, Tewell quickly moved into contention for the lead with birdies on the first six holes — two short of the PGA record.

He made the turn with a 5-under-par 30, then matched par 36 on the back nine.

Wadkins, who won the LA Open last year with an impressive 20-under-par total, fired a third-round 67 to move within striking distance of the lead.

Wood, looking for the first victory in his three years on the tour, also carded a third-round 67.

Trixler, struggling just to stay eligible to play on the tour for the past six years, shot an even-par 71 to continue his surprising performance in the event.

Tewell had opened with a 69 over Riviera layout, then had a 72 on the second day.

Heading into Sunday's final round of the $450,000 tournament, which carries a $81,000 winner's prize, Clarence Rose was two strokes off the lead with a third-round 66.

A group of golfers that included Jim Colbert, Fred Couples, Tom Kite and Antonio Cerda was another stroke back at 210.

Corey Pavin, who won the Hawaiian Open last week, shot himself into contention with a third-round 69 that put him in a group at 211 that also included Johnny Miller.

Another of the favorites in the tournament, Calvin Peete, also moved toward the lead with a 68 that left him five strokes off the pace. In that group at 212 was Ben Crenshaw, who also had a third-round 68.

Scores after Saturday's third round of the $450,000 Los Angeles Open, played on the par-71, 7,029-yard Riviera Country Club Course:

Bodine Awarded Pole For Miller

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Rain forced cancellation Saturday of qualifying for Sunday's $324,040 Miller High Life NASCAR Grand National stock car race, and Daytona 500 champion Geoff Bodine was declared the pole-sitter because he leads the Winston Cup point standings.

The time trials over the .542-mile Richard Fairgrounds oval had been postponed from Friday because of rain and a wreck during practice for Late Model Sportsman entrants.

According to NASCAR rules, the No. 1 through No. 18 spots were determined by Winston Cup points; the No. 19 and No. 20 positions were based on 1985 race victories and the No. 21 through No. 30 spots were determined by when NASCAR officials received entries for the race.

Terry Labonte will start on the outside pole followed by Darrell Waltrip, Bobby Hillin Jr., Ron Bouchard, Rusty Wallace, Lake Speed, Ricky Rudd, Bill Elliott and Dale Earnhardt.

The starting lineup for Sunday's $324,040 Miller High Life 400 NASCAR Grand National stock car race at the Richmond Fairgrounds .542-mile raceway, with type of car:

1. Geoff Bodine, Chevrolet
2. Terry Labonte, Oldsmobile
3. Darrell Waltrip, Chevrolet
4. Bobby Hillin Jr., Buick
5. Ron Bouchard, Pontiac
6. Rusty Wallace, Pontiac
7. Lake Speed, Pontiac

Zimmerman Maintains Two Shot Turquoise Lead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Mary Beth Zimmerman fired a 2-under-par 70 Saturday to maintain a two-shot lead after the third round of the $250,000 LPGA Standard Register-Samaritan Turquoise Classic.

The 25-year-old Zimmerman, a third-year pro seeking her first LPGA title, carded five birdies and three bogeys for a 207 total — two strokes ahead of Cathy Kratzert and three in front of Jane Geddes and veteran Donna Caponi.

Geddes and Caponi both shot 69 to finish at 210 on the par-72, 6,210-yard course.

Amy Alcott shot 72 and Jane Crafter 71 Saturday and both were four shots back at 211.

Defending champion Betsy King posted a 70 and is at 212 while Patty Sheehan, this season's leading money winner, started her round with a double-bogey and bogey en route to a 4-over 76 and 216 total.

Zimmerman bogeyed the second hole, but birdied the third with a 10-foot putt. She then moved out to a four-shot lead with birdies on the sixth and seventh holes and also birdied No. 11.

Kratzert, also seeking her first tour victory, had her round bolstered by an eagle-3 on the 470-yard 11th hole. The second-year pro carded birdies on the sixth and seventh holes and dropped a 35-foot putt for another birdie on No. 9.

The tournament winds up Sunday with the winner getting $37,500 and the runner-up $23,125.

Pitt Girls, CBA Boys Champs

BY DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Three North Pitt players scored in double-figures as the Pant-HERS defeated C.B. Aycock, 62-45, and Tim Fuller sparked C.B. Aycock's boys to a 59-54 win over Greene Central in the Eastern Plains Conference high school basketball tournament finals Friday night.

In the girls' game, Regina Cox scored 19 points while Gwen Pilgreen chipped in 14 and Keisha Pilgreen netted 13 for North Pitt. Regina Moore added eight for the first-seeded Pant-HERS. Kelly Malpass, a member of the all-tournament team, led the Lady Falcons with 15 points. The Lady Falcons were seeded second.

North Pitt Coach Randy Avery, who was named Eastern Plains Conference coach of the year, said the balanced scoring attack was forced by a pesky C.B. Aycock defense.

"Aycock did a real good defensive job against us," Avery said. "They were denying the ball from our people who usually do the scoring."

Avery said the key to the win was the Pant-HERS ability to sink free throws down the stretch. North Pitt hit 20 of 35 from the charity stripe, including 11 of 15 in the fourth quarter.

"We finally decided to hit some free throws," he said. "We had been shooting in the neighborhood of 45 percent. It was important that we started cashing in."

Then the Pant-HERS took control of the game. Cox, who was named to the all-tournament team, combined with Clemmie Jenkins, who tallied eight points, for 11 points as North Pitt took an 11-4 lead with 3:24 to go in the first period.

The teams matched a pair of baskets, and the Pant-HERS led 15-7 as they entered the second frame.

Toni Coley, an all-tournament team selection, scored the first three points of the quarter to make it 15-10, but Cox and Keisha Pilgreen both sank shots to give North Pitt a 19-10 lead with 4:59 left in the halft.

Both team's scored eight points in the remaining time to make it 27-18 at intermission.

When they returned from the locker room, the Pant-HERS outscored the Lady Falcons, 16-11, to make it 43-29 after three periods of play.

In the third quarter, Connie Lancaster scored the first basket, but Keisha Pilgreen and Cox scored eight unanswered points for North Pitt to make it 35-20 with 4:32 left.

Malpass scored five points in the final three minutes of the period, but Cox scored four points, and Keisha Pilgreen and Gwen Pilgreen each scored as the Lady Falcons were only able to pull within 14 points with one quarter to play.

Malpass scored the first two points of the fourth quarter to make it 43-31, but Gwen Pilgreen scored four unanswered points to make it 57-31.

The Lady Falcons gave it one final run, scoring six consecutive points to cut the lead to 49-39 on a 15-foot shot by Crystal Kennedy with 4:35 left in the game.

Moore then sank four of six free throws in a span of a little more than a minute to make it 53-41 with 2:24 to go.

Malpass drove inside for another basket to make it a 10-point margin, 53-43, with 2:08 left.

The Pant-HERS ran off the next nine points, including five by Keisha Pilgreen, to make it 63-43 with 31 seconds remaining.

In the boys' game, Tim Fuller's 25-point performance was enough to overcome Greene Central's fast start and lift the second-seeded Falcons to a 59-54 come-from-behind victory over the fifth-seeded Rams.

The Rams, who led by as much as 14 points midway through the second quarter, scored 25 points in the first quarter, but added only 29 in the final three.

Greene Central Coach Greg Ashorn said trying to hold onto the lead had disrupted their offense and they were unable to get back into gear in the game's final minutes.

"A big lead is always hard to hold. You'd always want to be in the lead, but it is still hard to hold," he said.

"The slowing down of the tempo definitely hurt us. We had been out of our offense so long, we just couldn't get it going again."

C.B. Aycock scored the first four points of the game, but Anthony Jones and O.J. Sheppard combined for nine points as the Rams outscored the Falcons, 15-4, in the next 3:07 to make it 15-8 with four minutes left in the half. Each team scored 10 points in the remaining time to make it 25-18 after the first period.

Fuller, who was named the tournament's MVP, scored eight of Falcons' 18 points in the period.

In a slower-paced second frame, James Hill and Sheppard scored the first five points of the period to make it 32-18 with 5:39 remaining in the first half.

The Falcons outscored the Rams 11-2, and cut the lead to 34-29 on a bucket by Tony Tillman with 10 seconds remaining before intermission. During the stretch, Tillman, a reserve center, scored eight points, and Fuller added three.

Hill raced down the court and sank a 10-foot jumper as the buzzer sounded to give Greene Central a 36-29 halftime lead.

The teams exchanged baskets at the start of the third period, but Aycock then scored seven unanswered points and tied the score at 38-38 on a three-point play by Trey Aycock with 4:09 left in the half.

Lang, Fuller Pace All-Stars

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's Lisa Lang and C.B. Aycock's Tim Fuller have been selected as the Eastern Plains Conference regular season Most Valuable Players.

Joining Lang on the All-Conference team selected by the coaches are: Toni Coley and Kelley Malpass, both of C.B. Aycock; Karen Edmond of Ayden-Grifton; Dalen Herring and Joy Albritton, both of Greene Central, and Regina Cox and Gwen Pilgreen, both of North Pitt..

Joining Fuller on the boys' All-Conference team are: Marvin Smith, Danny West and Doug Anderson, all of Ayden-Grifton; Greg Speight and Travis Spell of C.B. Aycock; Kennedy Williams and Bernard Taylor, both of Farmville Central; Derrick Mullins of North Pitt, and Michael Isler of South Lenoir.

Lang and Fuller were also named as MVP's of the Eastern Plains Conference tournament which concluded Friday night.

C.B. Aycock's Kelley Malpass and Toni Conley, Greene Central's Dalen Herring, and Regina Cox and Gwen Pilgreen, both of North Pitt were selected to the All-Tournament team along with Lang.

Dennis Tripp and Kennedy Williams, both of Farmville Central, O.J. Sheppard and James Hill, both of Greene Central, and C.B. Aycock's Travis Spells were selected to the All-Tournament boys' team along with Fuller.

North Pitt Coach Randy Avery, who led the Pant-HERS to a first place finish in the regulars season and the tournament title, was named girls' Coach of the Year. Coach Bob Murphrey of Ayden-Grifton won the award for boys' coach.

East Carteret Halts Lady Pack

VANCEBORO — East Carteret, which had challenged Washington on two occasions, finally did the job Friday night, downing the previously unbeaten Lady Pam Pack, 53-43, to capture the Coastal Conference tournament championship.

West Craven, which tied West Carteret for the regular season title, downed the Patriots in the tournament finale, 48-47, on a final second shot.

All four teams will move into this week's Section 2 3-A Tournament which starts Tuesday at D.H. Conley. (See story elsewhere on sectional tournaments.)

Washington, which had won 19 straight games, just couldn't seem to find the range in the contest.

East Carteret pushed out into a 14-10 lead in the opening frame. Washington chopped one off that in the second quarter, with a 10-9 edge. That left the Lady Mariners up, 23-20, at intermission.

East Carteret again pulled away in the third quarter with q 14-12 advantage, taking a 37-32 lead into the final eight minutes. During that, the Lady Mariners outhit Washington, 16-11, to capture the victory.

Kim Oden led East Carteret with 24 points while Shelley Lewis had 15 and Wendy Fulcher had 12. Gloria Sherrod paced Washington with 16 while Sarah Gray had 13.

Rose Girls Share Big East Title

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's girls' basketball team won its first-ever Big East Conference championship Friday night, downing Northeastern of Elizabeth City, 57-38.

Northeastern's boys sewed up third place in the league's final standings with a 73-69 win over the Rampants, who closed out their season with the loss.

The Rampettes, who finished the regular season with an 11-3 conference record, 17-6 overall, must share the championship with Wilson Fike, which also was 11-3 in the league. The two teams split during the regular season.

Both will advance into this week's Section I 4-A tournament, hosting teams from the Mideastern Conference. A coin flip was slated for Saturday morning to determine the final seeding for the event.

Nevertheless, Rose will be the host team for the game, playing on its own home court at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday night. Should they win, they would also host the semifinal game later in the week. (See story on sectional tournaments elsewhere in today's paper.)

The Rampettes got off to somewhat of a slow start, not shooting well through out much of the first half. Nevertheless, they quickly established with their defense and board power just who was in the driver's seat.

Northeastern got the first basket then watched Rose outscore it, 12-2, the remainder of the first period. Pam Smith tied it up and Vicki Parrott hit a jumper to put Rose ahead for good, 4-2. Smith scored five of the remaing eight points the rest of the period to give Rose a 12-4 edge at the end of the quarter.

In the second quarter, Rose continued to pull away, reaching a 20-10 lead on a jumper from the lane by Kim Dupree at 4:20. The margin reached 12 on another shot by Dupree and Rose carried a 28-16 lead into intermission.

Rose scored the first six points of the third period, and after a Northeastern basket, added ten more unanswered points to run the lead out to 44-18 with 1:10 left.

At that point, Coach Bill Kuykendall emptied his bench and Rose took a 46-21 lead into the last period.

Northeastern was able to cut away at the lead in the final quarter. Kuykendall returned his three seniors, Smith, Parrott and Chris Holec to the lineup to play the final two-plus minutes as they bowed out for the Rampettes.

Smith led the Rose scoring with 17 points while Dupree had 12. Nelgryn White paced the Lady Eagles with 19 while Denise Dasielle had 11.

"I'm really proud of these girls," Kuykendall said. "Elizabeth City had lost to Hunt by three points and Beddingfield by four in their last three games. I thought our girls did an excellent job in controlling them.

"All three of my seniors played well. We have really dominated the boards in the last few games with the play of Smith, Holec and Dupree. And the team has jelled since we moved Dupree to the point. She runs the club very well. We've quit trying to run with people and just followed our offense.

"Now we've got a chance to do something in the sectionals. I just hope the fans will come out and support us."

For the Rose boys, who finished 6-8 in the league and 12-10 overall, it was the season-ender. Rose, by finishing in sixth place in the league, did not qualify for the sectionals, which took only the top four teams from the league.

But they did give it a try.

Northeastern, meanwhile, seemed to play only as well as it needed to. Rose led for periods through the game, but each time, Northeastern rallied and took the lead with seemingly little effort.

Rose did not faint from taking it to their strength, however, going inside and fouling out sophomore star Kenneth Williams for the first time this season.

By then, however, it was too late.

Rose scored the first four points of the game and held as much as an 8-6 lead before Williams and Anthony Carver sparked the Eagles back to score 13 stright points. Carver hit six of those while Williams added four on the way from an 8-2 deficit to a 15-8 lead.

Rose came back, however, scoring the final ten points of the quarter, all of them by Ricky Outlaw, to take a 20-17 lead at the horn.

Northeastern was hit by two technical fouls in the period. One for slapping the backboard while the ball was in the cylinder and the other for not coming out to play when Rose was holding the ball outside.

Rose led throughout most of the second period, up by as much as eight points at 29-21. Leading by just three, Rose got an Alley Opp basket from Earrol Wooten and three points from Lennie Langley to up the lead to eight.

The margin finally reached nine at 34-25 on a jumper by Langley with 3:28 left.

From there, however, Northeastern outscored Rose, 13-4, to knot it at 38-38 with 28 seconds left. Williams scored five of those, including the three-pointer off a slam dunk that tied it up.

Langley hit two free throws seven seconds later, however, and Wooten added a dunk of his own off a steal to put Rose back up, 42-38, but a pair of Eagle free throws cut it to 42-40 at halftime.

Gerald Spence scored off a fast break to up the lead to four, and the Eagles slowly upped it to nine, 58-49 before Melvin Jenkins scored the final basket of the quarter with nine seconds left. Rose then trailed, 58-51.

The Rampants could make but four of 16 field goal tries in the final period while Northeastern hit six of seven. Rose did can 10 of 17 at the line as play got a little sloppy, but the closest they could come was three, 67-63.

The Eagles scored the first seven points of the final quarter to up their lead to 65-51. Rose outscored them 12-2 over the next four-plus minutes to cut it to 67-63.

But William Price pushed back a missed free throw and after two free throws by Rose, a pair of free throws by McDowell and a steal and slammer by Steve Price upped it to 73-65 with 1:12 left.

Williams finished with 19 points for Northeastern while McDowell and Carver each added 14. Rose was led by Outlaw with 21, Wooten with 20 and Langley with 15.

"The kids played hard, they just ran out of steam," Coach Jim Brewington said. "Williams is just too good for what we have in the middle," he added.

Four seniors played in their final game, including three starters, Outlaw, Langley and Martin Norville. The fourth senior is reserve Glenn Duffie.

"They scrapped hard and I appreciate that. We've got some good kids coming back next year, but no height for the inside again."

Rose's junior varsity team closed out the year with a 69-58 win over the Baby Eagles. The Cubs finish the year with an 8-6 league record, 11-9 overall. They finished in third place in the Big East JV standings.

Greenville Christian Gets Berth In Tourney Finals

WILSON — Greenville Christian, led by 23 points from Paul Hollingsworth and 20 from Robin House, upset regular season champion Wilson Christian in the semifinals of the Eastern Carolina Christian Conference tournament Friday night, 61-55.

GCA's girls, winners of the regular season title, took a 34-29 win over Falls Road to also advance to the championship game.

The titles were to be decided on Saturday afternoon at Wilson Christian.

"The game was close all the way" GCA Coach Dale Thatcher said. "But we thought we could play with them if we could stay close."

That was exactly what the Knights did. Wilson held a 15-12 lead after one period and was able to increase that to 30-25 in the second period.

But in the third quarter, Greenville came out hot, got a lead and spread it out to force Wilson out of its zone defense. That enabled the Knights to outscore Wilson, 22-10, and take a 47-40 lead into the final period. In that, Wilson outhit GCA, 15-14, but it wasn't enough.

"They did cut the lead to as little as one point," Thatcher said, "but they missed some crucial free throws and we were able to build it back up again.

"It was a good team effort for us. We've been playing well, we just haven't been winning before. A key to the win was holding Jeff Attoe to only 12 points. He had scored 29 and 26 in our two previous games."

Derek Leupen added 10 points for GCA. Linwood Scott led Wilson with 14.

In the girls' game, Falls Road pushed out into an 8-4 lead in the opening period. They continued to hold the lead in the second quarter, taking a 14-8 margin into intermission.

But in the third period, Greenville began to rally, outhitting Falls Road, 14-10. That cut the lead to 24-22. Then, in the final quarter, Greenville outscored Falls Road, 12-5, to forge into the lead and take the win.

The teams exchanged buckets, and Greene Central entered the fourth period leading 44-40.

James Hill scored 16 points and Sheppard added 15 to lead Greene Central, which fell to 13-12. Trey Aycock added 10 for Aycock, which improved to 17-6.

While he was disappointed with the defeat, Ashorn said he was pleased with his team's performance.

"I'm really proud of them," he said. "They won two games they weren't supposed to, and they showed a lot of character."

The loss was costly to the #5 Rams, who, after upsetting South Lenoir and top-seeded Ayden-Grifton, must now remain home from the sectionals. A victory over Aycock was needed for them to advance.

Plymouth Splits In Finals

WILLIAMSTON — There was good news and bad news for Plymouth basketball fans in the finals of the Northeastern Conference basketball tournament Friday night.

Plymouth sent both of its teams into the tournament as the number one seeds.

The good news was that the girls' team came away with a 53-38 win over #3 seeded Ahoskie for the championship.

The bad news was that Northampton East, seeded third, downed Plymouth for the boys' championship, 64-60.

Sampson Likes The Low Post

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Ralph Sampson appears to be getting the hang of playing center again.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson, playing the low post because of a knee injury to Akeem Olajuwon, scored a season-high 38 points and played all 48 minutes Friday night as he led the Houston Rockets to a 111-104 NBA victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

"The main thing has been getting used to the post position again," said Sampson, who also had 15 rebounds. "Down low I can really control the offense."

Sampson had the Mavericks all but wishing Olajuwon hadn't injured his right knee a week ago.

"I was worried about Ralph coming into this game," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said. "He's not like the way he played tonight when he is at the forward spot."

"Nobody ever said he forgot how to play down low," Dallas center James Donaldson said of Sampson. "The key was that they made a big effort to go to him. Put him at the low post, and he's going to cause trouble."

In other National Basketball Association games, it was New Jersey 121, Los Angeles Lakers 106; New York 117, Seattle 104; Philadelphia 97, Washington 87; Atlanta 106, Indiana 98; Chicago 108, Portland 96; Sacramento 118, Phoenix 110; and Golden State 125, Los Angeles Clippers 123.

Sampson's 22 points staked the Rockets to a 57-51 halftime advantage. Lewis Lloyd scored 12 of his 18 points in the third quarter as Houston extended the margin to 91-80.

After Dallas got within 95-88 with 5:27 left, Sampson had two baskets to help the Rockets rebuild their advantage to 101-89, and the Mavericks never drew closer than eight points again.

76ers 97, Bullets 87

Despite scoring 56 points fewer than Wednesday night, Philadelphia defeated Washington with 26 points and 21 rebounds from Charles Barkley and 22 points and 21 rebounds from Moses Malone.

The 76ers outscored the Bullets 23-8 in the last 10:18 of the third quarter to take a 69-61 lead going into the fourth period. Washington got no closer than seven points in the last 12 minutes.

Maurice Cheeks added 23 points for Philadelphia, while Jeff Ruland had 16 points and 15 rebounds for the Bullets.

Nets 121, Lakers 106

The Nets led 29-14 after one quarter behind Johnson's 10 points, and the Lakers trailed by as many as 20 points in the second period before rallying to tie it 88-88 with 10½ minutes left in the game. But New Jersey scored the next seven points to regain the lead for good.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who tied Elvin Hayes for the all-time lead in NBA games played, paced the Lakers with 28 points. Buck Williams had 19 points and 15 rebounds for the Nets.

Bulls 108, Blazers 96

Gene Banks scored 26 points as Chicago won two straight games for the first time since Jan. 2 and handed Portland its eighth consecutive loss.

The Trail Blazers trailed 54-43 at halftime, but they got within five points early in the fourth period. But a 7-0 streak by the Bulls rebuilt the lead to 94-82.

Kiki Vandeweghe paced Portland with 24 points, while rookie Charles Oakley had 18 points and 15 rebounds for the Bulls.

Hawks 106, Pacers 98

Dominique Wilkins, who missed the three previous games with a leg injury, led Atlanta over Indiana with 38 points.

The Pacers never caught up after Wilkins and Randy Wittman, who scored 20 points, had six points each during a 16-4 streak that gave the Hawks an 18-8 advantage.

Herb Williams led Indiana with 33 points and 14 rebounds, while Kevin Willis had 18 points and 17 rebounds for Atlanta.

Kings 118, Suns 110

Rod Foster's three-point goal gave the Suns an 82-79 edge going into the final period. Johnson, who scored 20 consecutive Kings points during one span of the second half, gave Sacramento the lead to stay, 85-84, on a layup with 9:59 left.

Walter Davis was the leading scorer for the Suns with 31 points. Reggie Theus had 22 points and 11 assists for the Kings.

Knicks 117, SuperSonics 104

New York, with seven players on the injured list, got 20 points or more from Louis Orr, Gerald Wilkins and Ken Bannister to beat Seattle.

Orr scored a season-high 26, Wilkins 23 and Bannister 20, including six straight points after the SuperSonics had cut a 95-73 deficit to 105-98 with 2:01 left. Bannister was listed as doubtful with a sore knee before the game.

Xavier McDaniel led Seattle's fourth-quarter rally with 20 of his 28 points. Tim McCormick had 21 points for the Sonics after starting in place of injured center Jack Sikma.

Warriors 125, Clippers 123

Angry Connors Leaves In Dispute

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Jimmy Connors entered the Lipton International Players Championships late, saying he decided to change his schedule because he wanted to play a lot of tennis to get his game in shape.

He left the tournament a tad early, saying he didn't want to play any more.

In between, he played some spectacular tennis. But he will be remembered more for how it ended for him, in default Friday after he refused to take the court following a screaming dispute with chair umpire Jeremy Shales over a line call.

"I'm not going to play under these conditions," Connors shouted.

The conditions didn't change, and the third-seeded Connors walked off a semifinal loser to top-seeded Ivan Lendl by the official score of 1-6, 6-1, 6-2, 2-6, 5-2, default.

The other semifinal also didn't go the prescribed best-of-five-set distance as fifth-seeded Stefan Edberg had to quit early in the second set of his semifinal against fellow Swede Mats Wilander because of a pulled stomach muscle.

Wilander, the No. 2 seed, won the first set 6-4 and the second set was tied 1-1 when Edberg decided the injury he had suffered several days ago was too painful for him to keep playing.

Wilander and Lendl play for the title — and the $112,500 first-place purse — Sunday afternoon.

Lloyd, 31, has won 143 professional tournaments. Graf, 16, never has won a regular tour event.

Connors was fined $5,000 by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council for not finishing his match Friday, and he faces additional fines of up to $20,000 and a suspension of up to one year for his actions.

"I had had enough," he said. "After 16 years out there, I'm not going to put up with that ... any more. You can only take so much. The guy's in the chair and he's got the job to do and he doesn't do it."

Connors and Lendl had been complaining about calls throughout their tight five-set match. Lendl was cited for a code violation when he kicked a ball into the stands early in the second set, and Connors got one for yelling at Shales later in that set.

But Connors really lost his cool early in the final set, when Lendl broke his serve in the first game on a shot that Connors thought was long. As if warming up for his match-ending encounter, Connors bounded up to Shales and pleaded with him to overrule the call. Shales refused.

Four games later, with Lendl leading 3-2, 30-0, the Czechoslovakian hit another shot in the same area. Once again, it was ruled in, and once again Connors went into a rage.

"That was not a judgment call," he screamed. "I didn't even play the ball, it was so far out."

Then he sat down and refused to play. Connors was penalized a point, as required by the Code of Conduct rules, for not returning to the court after a 15-seconds warning. That gave Lendl the game and a 4-2 lead.

Another 30 seconds later, Connors was penalized a game, putting Lendl up 5-2 and giving Connors 90 more seconds to rage because the players officially were on a changeover.

That's when Ken Farrar, the MIPTC supervisor, and tournament referee Alan Mills came on the court to try to calm down Connors.

But when he saw that Farrar and Mills weren't sympathetic to him, Connors began to pack his gear. Before he got off the court, Lendl was awarded the match because of a fourth code violation — a match default — against the veteran left-hander.

"I'm working hard out there for three hours and 43 minutes and I'm the one getting the short end out there," Connors said. "You could only put up with so much.

"I'm not going to leave tennis because of this. But every time this happens, I'm going to do what I did today. I was sticking up for my rights."

"I don't think a professional should default on a bad call," said Lendl. "I've had a thousand bad calls and he's had a thousand bad calls. There's just not much you can do when you get bad calls."

Wilander agreed that Connors may have had a gripe but he didn't take the right approach to solving it. "Obviously, he shouldn't have gone off the court," Wilander said. "It's just too bad.

"I think the ref made a mistake in giving an overrule on (Lendl's) ace early in the match. He wasn't doing a good job, but Ivan and Jimmy didn't make it easy on him."

Shales' job might have been less difficult if Connors and Lendl weren't playing such an emotion-charged match.

Connors had come out smoking, taking the first set easily. Lendl woke up about the same time he kicked the ball in the stands, and when he started hitting winners, he appeared to be in charge.

But early in the fourth set, Lendl lost his concentration again for no apparent reason. Even he was at a loss as to why he let Connors get back in the match. But Connors didn't ask why. He just took advantage of the lapse to force a final set.

After getting the early break in the last set, Lendl fought off three break points on his serve in the next two games. He never got to finish his third service game of the set.

"I'm not happy with the way it ended," said Lendl, who evened his lifetime record against Connors after 26 meetings. "I'd rather win it 6-2.

"It's not something that going to sit in my memory as the best moment of the tournament."

Lendl, currently ranked No. 1 in the world, hopes his finest moment will come in the Sunday's final against Wilander, ranked No. 4 on the Hewlett-Packard-ATP computer. He has won eight of 14 lifetime matches against the Swede, but his one loss to him last year was in the French Open final.

Wilander said he doens't think Lendl, who has won 46 of his last 47 matches and is the reigning U.S. Open champion, is playing as well as he did late last year and in January at the Nabisco Masters.

"He's missing a little bit on his shots," Wilander said. "I think he's just winning on confidence. But he's still very tough to beat. I will have to serve well and not give up any cheap points."

Creswell In Finals

WASHINGTON — Creswell's boys and girls basketball teams vaulted into the finals of the Tobacco Belt Conference tournament Friday night.

Creswell's boys, seeded second, downed #3 Belhaven, 77-71, to advance to Saturday night's championship game against #1 North Edgecombe.

New Charges Against Gophers

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Prosecutors, accused of heaping charges on three University of Minnesota basketball players, have doubled the counts against the defendants charged with sexually assaulting a young woman in a hotel room.

The three players, who were removed from Minnesota team after their arrests last month, stood mute Friday during a Circuit Court hearing. Judge George Northrup entered innocent pleas for each player and scheduled trial May 5.

Kevin Smith, 21, of Lansing, Mich., Mitchell Lee, 20, of Carol City, Fla., and George Williams Jr., 19, of Oakland, Calif, remain free on bond.

They were accused by an 18-year-old Madison Area Technical College student of attacking her in the hotel where the team was staying after a game Jan. 23 against the University of Wisconsin.

The three originally were charged with a total of six counts of sexual assault. But at Friday's arraignment, Lee was charged with six counts of first-degree sexual assault, Smith with four and Williams with two.

Judith Hawley, assistant Dane County district attorney, said the additional counts reflect new information obtained since initial charges were filed Jan. 27.

At that time, she said, "the defendants had been in jail over the weekend. There was a rush on to get a complaint filed. The facts were not as thoroughly developed."

Stephen Hurley, Williams' Madison attorney, said the increase in counts "sort of muddies the water." The attitude of the district attorney's office is to "heap" charges on the visiting players, he said.

Hawley asked that bail be increased from $5,500 to $30,000 for Lee, who was acquitted several weeks ago in Minneapolis of sexually assaulting a young woman in a dormitory.

She also asked for bail increase from $4,000 to $16,000 for Smith, and from $1,000 to $5,000 for Williams. Northrup denied the request.

Hawley argued the players were no longer with the university and might not appear for trial because of the severity of penalties. She said Lee faces up to 120 years in prison, Smith 80 years and Williams 40.

Under Wisconsin law, the maximum penalty for first-degree sexual assault is 20 years on each count.

Northrup scheduled a pre-trial hearing for April 11 to consider motions. Hurley said he might ask for a change of venue.

Hurley also proposed delaying the trial because of publicity.

"I think it's going to be terribly difficult in picking a jury in this case," Hurley said.

The party reportedly lasted until 3 a.m.

Aycock In Two Losses

In the boys' game, A. Spellman and C. Staley scored 17 points each, and D. Chamblee scored 16 to lead the Elizabeth City school to a 66-65 win over E.B. Aycock. Willie Woolard scored 20 points while Billy Carr contributed 16 and James Teele added 14 in a lsing effort for E.B. Aycock.

In the girls' game, J. Brown scored 20 points to lead Northeastern to a 55-39 win. Jenny Stoneham scored 18 points, while Tina Smith and Toronda Gilbert chipped in 10 points apiece for E.B. Aycock in a losing effort.

Waterfowl Banding at Mattamuskeet

Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County has had an "exceptionally good year" for waterfowl banding, according to the refuge's biological technician, Kelly Davis.

"This is an exceptionally good year for mallards, above average for geese, and about par for black ducks," she said.

Each refuge in North Carolina is given a specific quota of birds to band, which helps biologists determine birds' migration routes. This year Mattamuskeet had the following quotas: 200 Canada geese, 300 mallards, 300 black ducks, 150 canvasbacks and 50 ring-necked. To date, refuge personnel have banded 224 Canada geese, over 800 mallards, 70 black ducks and one ring-necked.

"We rarely meet our diving duck quota because it is very difficult to trap birds on the Pamlico Sound. Thus, we concentrate on banding geese, mallards and black ducks on Lake Mattamuskeet," Mrs. Davis said.

Banding seasons, she explained, vary with species and studies. For example, Pungo National Wildlife Refuge, also in Hyde County, has a quota of 400 locally nesting wood ducks so it bands during the spring and summer. In North Carolina, mallards and black ducks are banded after the hunting season and before they migrate north.

Mrs. Davis said the current Canada goose banding is conducted throughout the fall and winter in several states as part of a three-year Atlantic flyway project. By banding as many geese as possible, study coordinators at Cornell University hope to better understand the Canada goose's recent shift in wintering grounds from the Carolinas to the Delmarva Peninsula and northeastern states.

The origin of banding birds, Mrs. Davis said, can be traced to the days of the Roman Empire when birds were banded to identify the falcons of the emperor. But modern bird banding really had its beginnings with Hans Christian Mortensen, a school teacher in Viborg, Denmark. In 1890, he began putting metal bands on the legs of teal, pintails, storks, starlings and hawks. These bands had his name and address inscribed on them.

As Mortensen's banded birds began to appear in many places in Europe, other bird students became interested in bird "ringing," as it is called in Europe. In a short time, bird banding caught on in the United States. Deciding more could be accomplished as a group, the American Bird Banding Association was formed in 1909.

Mrs. Davis explained that biologists in the Bureau of Biological Survey (now the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service) were convinced that banding had much to tell us about birds, especially about their migration patterns and life span. So, to continue the banding of birds in America, the U.S.F.W.S. and its counterpart north of the border, the Canadian Wildlife Service, offered to take over the work of the American Bird Banding Association.

Since 1920, banding of migratory birds in the United States and Canada has been under the joint direction of the federal governments of the two countries.

Mrs. Davis said banding birds has shown us many things about the individual bird, as well as about the species or group to which it belongs. If banded birds are captured, released alive, and recaptured, their migration routes can be restructured. For example, a red-winged blackbird that was banded in New York was shot 14 years later in North Carolina, and a black duck banded on Cape Cod was taken by a hunter 17 years later in Newfoundland.

According to Mrs. Davis, many ducklings and goslings are banded each summer on their nesting grounds. Hunters who return the bands they find on these birds during the hunting season are helping to ensure their own hunting in the future. Even though some hunters do not send in their bands, wildlife biologists can still determine how many waterfowl there will be along the various migration routes during the following autumn.

Knowing how many wood ducks, pintails or mallards could possibly be in an area during the hunting season is a good basis for saying how large a bag limit should be established.

Birds are banded at Mattamuskeet using specially designed traps and nets to catch them. Banders at the refuge visit the traps or nets daily so the birds don't suffer from exposure or get killed by predators.

Trapped birds, Mrs. Davis said, are removed from the traps or nets, identified, examined for age, sex and physical condition, carefully fitted with aluminum bands and released. Some birds are color marked in various ways so they can be recognized individually from a distance. Examples of color markers are plastic neck bands, wing tags, colored leg bands, paints and dyes.

When a band is put on a bird's leg, the bander records the number, the kind of bird, its age and sex and the place and date of banding. Later, the bander returns the completed form to the Banding Laboratory, where this information is stored in a computer where it is readily available in case the band is later recovered.

Mrs. Davis said over a million birds are banded each year. Of those, the Banding Laboratory hears back from over 100,000.

Mrs. Davis said that when someone finds a band, he should straighten it out and tape it securely to a piece of heavy writing paper. With the band, send the following information:

- ☐ Your name and address (plainly printed).
- ☐ All numbers and letters on the band.
- ☐ The date the band was found.
- ☐ The place the band was found (mileage and direction from the nearest town, with county and state).
- ☐ How the band was found (on a bird found dead, shot or caught in some other way).
- ☐ Place the information in an envelope, mark the envelope "Hand Cancel," and send it to the following address: Bird Banding Laboratory, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Laurel, Md., 20810.

Mrs. Davis said that if a live banded bird is found, do not remove the band, but carefully read the number on the band, write it down and release the bird. Send in all the information you can about finding the banded bird to the Banding Laboratory. If it is a tiny bird, you will not see the name and address of the laboratory on the band because it will be on the inside of the band. There isn't room on the outside.

Later, she said, you will receive a Certificate of Appreciation from the Bird Banding Laboratory telling you where the bird was banded, what kind it was and who banded it. The person who banded it will also learn where and when you found the band.

Crowe To Tigers

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Jack Crowe, Auburn's offensive coordinator for four years before being forced out after last season, is moving to Clemson as a quarterback coach.

Crowe said Friday that he has talked with Clemson Coach Danny Ford for two months about a job.

Crowe told The Birmingham News that Ford will not have an offensive coordinator.

"I've got all the responsibility I want," said Crowe.

"Clemson's got a chance to win big, same as Auburn," he said. "It's just a place I've got a good gut feeling about."

Crowe followed Coach Pat Dye to Auburn in April 1982 from Wyoming.

"I've enjoyed my association with Coach Dye and the other coaches," he said. "I've enjoyed Auburn, even though we've had some tough times."

Auburn, picked No. 1 to start the 1984 season and No. 2 to start the 1985 season, lost four games each year. Crowe received heat for the team's low offensive production in some key games, but he said he was leaving with no bitterness.

Nehemiah, Gault Are Cleared

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Renaldo Nehemiah and Willie Gault, who lost their amateur track status when they signed professional football contracts, are now free to resume their careers as world-class hurdlers.

The International Amateur Athletics Federation's ruling body on Friday lifted its ban on both National Football League players.

The 22-member council, concluding its meeting, voted unanimously to amend IAAF rules so the two Americans could be reinstated and be allowed to compete in all track events, including the Olympics.

"Nehemiah and Gault will be eligible for the 1987 World Championships — indoors at Indianapolis in March and outdoors in Rome in August," a highly placed IAAF source said.

Gault, a member of the Chicago Bears, will be 27 by the time the ban would be lifted, and Nehemiah, of the San Francisco 49ers, will be 28. Neither has competed in track since 1983.

Nehemiah holds the world record in the men's 110-meter hurdles at 12.93 seconds — the only man in the world to have broken 13 seconds at the distance.

Gault is ninth on the all-time list for the event with 13.26. He was a gold medalist at the 1983 World Championships in Helsinki, Finland, with the American 400-meter relay team.

Attempts to reach both Gault and Nehemiah for comment Friday night were unsuccessful.

At the same time, the federation's executive council banned four track and field athletes, including Americans Augie Wolf, a shot putter, and Duncan Attwood, a javelin thrower, for violating IAAF doping regulations.

"Nehemiah and Gault will not be back this year, but this is a good change," said Ollan Cassell, executive director of The Athletics Congress, which controls track and field competition in the United States. "They will obviously have to qualify for the American team in 1987, and this will depend on their football season. If Gault goes to the Super Bowl, as he has done this year, he could be in trouble. But it is up to them now."

Only Gault and Nehemiah were actually banned, but the action also took away the track and field hopes of sprinter Ron Brown and shot putter Michael Carter. Brown is a wide receiver with the Los Angeles Rams and Carter a nose guard with the 49ers.

IAAF rules say that any athlete who is a professional in another sport is no longer eligible to compete in track and field meets. The council recommended that the IAAF Congress during its August meeting in Stuttgart, West Germany, modify the rules to drop the restriction.

"This is a formality after today's unanimous vote," the IAAF source said. "The congress will approve and the two Americans will be reinstated in time for next winter's indoor season. Nobody will confirm this officially today, for fear of offending congress members, but there is no doubt of it."

Brown told the Associated Press by telephone:

"I'd definitely give it (the 1988 Olympics) a shot. I'm looking forward to getting back on the track and training and competing at that level again. I don't anticipate any problems with the Rams. They're a good organization and I'm sure they'd work with me to the best of their ability."

The bans for violating the drug regulations were imposed on Wolf and Attwood, who were banned for life, and shot putters Nicolaos Yendekos of Greece and Ahmed Kamiel Shata of Egypt.

An official IAAF announcement said Attwood was disqualified after failing to pass an anti-stimulant control test at a track meet in Koblenz, West Germany, on Aug. 28. Wolf, a shotputter, was banned after refusing to undergo a test in Byrkjelo, Norway, on July 7, the IAAF said.

McKinley Recalls Greatest Victory

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — The greatest victory for one of the six new inductees into the International Tennis Hall of Fame surely isn't remembered quite so fondly by two of his fellow inductees.

Upon the announcement Friday here of his induction into the hallowed group, Chuck McKinley recalled one of his greatest tennis accomplishments. In 1963, McKinley led the U.S. team to a 3-2 victory over Australia in the Davis Cup finals in Adelaide.

The loss was the only one for the powerful Australian team in a nine-year period from 1959-67. Two members of that team — John Newcombe and Tony Roche — also will be in the 1986 class at the Hall of Fame.

Also elected were Nicola Pietrangeli of Italy, the late Dorothy Round Little of Great Britain and Ted Tinling, selected for his outstanding contributions to the game.

Induction ceremonies will be held at the Newport Casino in Newport, R.I., on July 12 during the Volvo Tennis Hall of Fame Championship tournament. That will bring to 141 the number of Hall of Fame inductees since its founding in 1955.

"This has been a great thrill. So many times tennis players pooh-pooh what it means to be inducted into the Hall of Fame," said McKinley.

"My induction is probably ill-deserved, but I'll take it anyway. I'm especially proud to be inducted because so many of the guys I played with have been inducted."

McKinley, ranked among the top five players in the world from 1962-64, won the Wimbledon title in 1963. In a highly successful doubles partnership with Dennis Ralston, McKinley won four consecutive U.S. doubles titles, from 1961-64.

He also won the U.S. Indoor singles in 1962 and 1964; the U.S. Clay Court singles in 1962-63; the U.S. Indoor doubles with Ralston in 1963 and 1965; and the U.S. Indoor doubles with Laver in 1962. McKinley was a member of the U.S. Davis Cup squad from 1960-65.

McKinley said that, other than the Wimbledon victory, the match he remembered the most was the pivotal fifth match of the Davis Cup tie in 1963.

"I played Newcombe down in Australia and I remember I was scared to death, like any kid would be," he said. "But I won."

Newcombe is credited with possessing one of the best games in modern power tennis. He captured the men's title at Wimbledon in 1967, 1970 and 1971; the U.S. singles in 1967 and 1973; and the Australian Open singles in 1973 and 1975.

A founder of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP), the players union, Newcombe teamed with Roche to capture the Wimbledon title five times, the Australian doubles four times; the French doubles in 1967 and 1969; and the U.S. doubles in 1967.

Roche described his selection as "a great honor."

"When you start out you have dreams, I was lucky enough to live those dreams." he said. "In Australia, you first dream of representing your country. And I was lucky enough to be part of the greatest Davis Cup team in history. And I was lucky enough to play at Wimbledon and win some big matches."

In 1966, Roche won both the French and Italian singles titles, and he was runner-up to Rod Laver in the first open Wimbledon in 1968.

Pietrangeli was at his best on the slow clay surfaces, winning the Italian singles championship in 1957 and 1961, and the French crown in 1959 and 1960.

He also holds the record for the most wins in Davis Cup play: 78 in singles and 42 in doubles.

Little, who died in 1982, won in 1934 and 1937 at Wimbledon. She was a member of Britain's Wightman Cup team in 1931 and 1936.

Tinling, who has served as chief of protocol and master of ceremonies at most of the world's major tennis tournaments, has been involved in the sport for six decades, beginning at 13 when he served as a referee for the legendary French player Suzanne Lenglen.

NCSU Study Seeks Clues To Fading Polyesters

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Outside Dr. Harold Freeman's office, it's a cold and gray winter morning, but inside his laboratory it's a sweltering, muggy August afternoon.

Swatches of polyester fabric slowly rotate around a powerful light in two laboratory machines, simulating summer sunshine that turns dark blue dyes to washed-out purple and vibrant reds to an amber-orange.

Everyone knows that sunlight fades fabric, but Freeman is hoping his research at North Carolina State University will show why it happens.

"About 18 months ago, a GM (General Motors) representative visited us and told us they were interested in putting polyester fabric in automobiles," Freeman said. "They're developing what they call a 10-year car and wanted to coat the dashboard with polyester.

"There's no worse material they could have picked," Freeman said, "because the dyes that are suitable for polyester are the worst actors in fading."

But polyester has other qualities, like its long life, that make it attractive. So GM and several suppliers of fabric and carpet formed a consortium to sponsor research that would develop fade-resistant polyester dyes.

The consortium this year is giving $44,000 to help finance Freeman's work, while the National Science Foundation has approved a three-year, $204,000 grant because Freeman's research could answer fundamental questions about how to design dyes with long lives for other fabrics.

"If we can get an understanding of the chemical reaction that takes place when fabric fades, then theoretically we can design dyes that won't participate in those reactions," said Freeman, 34, an organic chemist who said he "stumbled into" textile dye research after nearly 10 years as a pharmaceutical chemist for Burroughs Wellcome.

"We're going to look at the very best dyes for polyester that are now available and try to improve on the state of the art," he said.

If successful, the research could lead to polyester curtains, patio furniture, awnings and other polyester goods that resist the effects of the sun, Freeman said.

"The most important criterion for people buying something is the color," Freeman said. "Any goods that stay outdoors are subject to fading, so we want to improve the quality of textile products that are available."

Freeman said his work has already indicated what researchers suspected — that ultraviolet light from the sun is a major factor in fading.

The suspicions about ultraviolet light have led some companies to put metal compounds in fibers to soak up ultraviolet rays and shield the dye from the sun.

While researchers know those compounds work in dyes, they don't know exactly why, he said.

"A lot of work has been done on the overall subject," Freeman said. "But the lion's share of the work has been done on dyes in solution (liquid), and very little in solids. We've already discovered that some reactions that take place in solution are different from the reactions on solids.

"It's not easy to study fading effects in swatches," Freeman said. "For one thing, there's not much dye in a 6-inch by 12-inch swatch of fabric. But you have to use (materials) that are in the real world to get results that are applicable to the real world."

Retirees' Part-Time Jobs Give Life New Meaning

By JOHN DINGMAN
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — At 78, Clara Ferguson has been around the world twice by freighter, and still travels, but looks to her part-time job in a Mississippi bank to bring new meaning to her life.

"You need something to do when you get up in the morning, to have some purpose in life," she said.

Ms. Ferguson and about 25 others have found that purpose in part-time work for the Trustmark Bank here.

And Mary Osborne, vice president for personnel for the bank, said the retired workers have proved a valuable asset because of their willingness to work when needed, and their great productivity.

"Their attitude is just unbelievable," she said. "They do not come in and sit around and drink coffee all day long. They produce."

The bank began the program in the late 1970s when it had some jobs to be handled, but didn't want to hire full-time employees.

Someone came up with the idea of calling back retirees, Ms. Osborne said, but when the response was slow, they turned to senior citizen groups for recruits, and found them.

The jobs are basic clerical jobs, most at the entry level, but jobs that are necessary to keep the bank going.

"The retirees don't mind routine jobs, and don't want jobs with pressure," she said.

They range in age from the mid 60s to a few in the 80s. Before retirement, they held jobs such as school teachers, file clerks, secretaries, and one was an air traffic controller.

"Several years ago, if the people did not have this kind of contact, the probably would sit at home the whole week without seeing anybody," Ms. Osborne said.

Although the salary levels are not high, the money undoubtedly is important to some of the workers to supplement their incomes, she said. Most start at the minimum wage.

And, she said, the regular workers get annual salary reviews just like the full-time workers.

Ms. Osborne said they offer far more flexibility than the average part-time worker, since they often are available on a short notice to fill in for a sick worker, and the like.

"We know the people, they know the assignments and they fit right in," Ms. Osborne said.

If one of the retirees doesn't want to work on a particular day, the bank has no objection, and does not take their name off the call list.

The amount of work varies, but most average only a few days a month, depending on the needs.

"I am just really sold on the program and the people themselves," Ms. Osborne said.

She said regular employees welcome the help, and feel no threat to their own positions because the retirees are not interested in regular jobs.

Ms. Ferguson echoes that.

"I had saved money for years, and just traveled for a while" until six years ago when she joined the bank program, she said.

"I don't want a full-time job, just part time to do the other things I never had time to do," she said.

A trip to Alaska last fall fits into that category, although the Delta native makes it clear that Mississippi is her home.

"I suppose I could be happy somewhere else, but Mississippi is home."

Computers May Help

CHICAGO (AP) — Students around the country are signing up for independent music study, remedial exercises and practice time with teaching assistants that blink and beep, reports the American Music Conference.

This is what is happening in elementary, middle and secondary schools as more and more school music teachers are using computers and educational software to teach fundamentals of music, the AMC says.

Depending on the types of software programs being used, computers can help students drill and practice on exercises that teach rhythm, harmony, melodic dictation and the meaning of general music terms.

In addition to learning music fundamentals on computers, instrumental music students at Timpview High school in Provo, Utah, can increase their knowledge of instrumental fingerings.

Business Notes

Earnings Reported

First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County has reported net income for the quarter ending Dec. 31 of $325,426 before taxes and $227,798 after taxes, an increase of 133 percent from the after tax $97,691 earned during the year-earlier period.

For the six months ending Dec. 31, net income was $689,835 before taxes and $482,891 after taxes, an increase of 131 percent from the after tax $208,979 earned a year earlier.

Appointment Made

Hofor Tobacco Corp. of Va. has announced the appointment of William Zadeits of Greenville as executive in charge of sales and marketing.

The Richmond, Va., firm said Zadeits will join Hofor on March 1.

Zadeits has 25 years experience in the leaf tobacco trade, including factory operations and buying. For the past 12 years, he has been involved in the areas of sales and customer service.

New Staffers

McKim & Creed Engineers of Wilmington has announced that the firm's new branch office in Rocky Mount will be staffed by Robert Pittman and John Weaver, professional engineers.

Pittman, a Greenville resident, is a civil engineering graduate of North Carolina State University and is also a North Carolia water color artist.

McKim & Creed deals in structural, civil, sanitary, transportation, mechanical, and electrical engineering and land surveying. The firm said the new office will initially concentrate on site development and building mechanical systems.

Planning Session

Nick A. Camardo, manager of the BarclaysAmerican/Financial office on Arlington Boulevard in Greenville, attended the company's 1986 planning session and training seminar held recently in Charlotte.

Over 75 managers from North Carolina and Tennessee attended the meeting, which followed the theme, "Sell, Sell, Sell."

PE Requirements

Roger Jones, Greenville Utilities' director of electric systems, has fulfilled all North Carolina requirements for registration as a professional engineer, GUC has announced.

Requirements included successful completion of a two-day examinaton, five years of related work experience, and letters of recommendation.

ECAF Awards

CT&T Recognition

E.J. Eatman, installer repairer with Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. in Greenville, was honored recently by the company with a dinner upon his retirement after 45 years of service.

Eatman, a Goldsboro native, joined CT&T in 1940 as a station lineman and also held positions of line and station repairer in Weldon and Greenville and PBX installer repairer and installer repairer in Greenville.

He is married to the former Florence Bland of Williamston and they have two sons, Edgar and James. The family attends St. James United Methodist Church in Greenville.

CT&T said J.W. Cooke, construction foreman, and Barbara C. Ross, business office supervisor in the commercial department in Greenville, were recognized for having completed 30 and 15 years of service, respectively. Cooke and his wife, Ann, live in Robersonville, while Ms. Ross and her husband, James, reside in Ayden.

Net Income Noted

Investors Title Co. and its subsidiaries, Investors Title Insurance Co. and Northeast Investors Title Insurance Co., achieved net income of $1,188,201 for the year ended Dec. 31 compared to $886,809 for the comparable year-earlier period, a 34 percent increase, said J. Allen Fine, president.

Investors Title has an office in Greenville.

Merger Announced

Fred Alcock, president and owner of East Carolina Insurance Agency on 10th Street, has announced the merger of his agency with The Insurance Center of Southern Pines.

Alcock said the merger brings together two brothers who, along with their families, have been long time residents of Greenville and Pitt County.

The co-owners of East Carolina Insurance are Frank B. Nelson, a lifelong resident of Greenville and Pitt County and a licensed agent, and his brother, Melvin G. Nelson, a former Greenville and Pitt County resident who is now president and owner of The Insurance Center of Southern Pines.

Melvin Nelson, an East Carolina University graduate, will continue to live in Southern Pines.

East Carolina Insurance Agency will operate as a wholly-owned subsidiary of The Insurance Center of Southern Pines.

Alcock will remain with ECIA as a consultant, while Carolyn Bowen will serve as office manager. Angela Alcock, a student at ECU, will remain with the agency on a part-time basis, while Linda Davenport will be a new staff member.

FRANK B. NELSON

MELVIN G. NELSON

General Agent

Edward Walker Jr. has been named a general agent for Transamerica Life Companies in Greenville.

Prior to joining the company, Walker was a sales representative for another insurance firm in Greenville.

Born in Goldsboro, Walker studied business administration at East Carolina University. He and his wife, Lisa, reside in Greenville.

Pension Increases

The Du Pont Co. in Kinston has announced that its more than 50,000 pensioners will receive an increase in their pensions beginning with their April 30 checks.

Plant spokesman Nich Ferrante said pensioners who retired before Jan. 1, 1982, will have their pensions adjusted 8 percent, and those who retired after that date will receive a proportionately smaller adjustment.

Ferrante said the action is a result of Du Pont's practice of considering on a regular basis its pensioners' total retirement income related to Du Pont employment, including Social Security, and making adjustments when appropriate. He said the new increase is the seventh pension adjustment since 1966.

Headquarters Office

American Truck and Auto Leasing, a new automobile and truck leasing company with franchises in five eastern North Carolina cities, has announced that it will open its headquarters in Greenville this month.

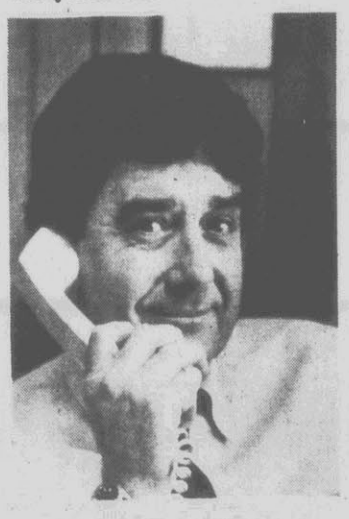
The new headquarters office will be located on N.C. 11 South in the facility formerly occupied by Waller Tractor Co. The building is currently undergoing renovation.

General manager of American Auto and Truck Leasing is Clifton P. Wright of Tarboro, a former officer of Branch Banking and Trust Co.

Wright said the company will lease cars and trucks of all manufacturers, both domestic and foreign.

He said the company has acquired Carolina Truck Inc., a truck servicing company whose facility has been located on Dickinson Avenue for the past five years. Wright said plans call for a complete merger of the two companies.

In addition to Greenville, the firm has franchises in Manteo, Warsaw, Rocky Mount and Tarboro.



CLIFTON P. WRIGHT

Regional Meeting

Maxine Anderson of Quixote Travels Inc. and her husband, Dale, recently attended the American Society of Travel Agents' 15th southern regional meeting in New Orleans.

In addition to the society meetings, they toured the Superdome and the city, and took a luncheon cruise aboard the new riverboat, "The Colonel."

Corporate Attorney

Darrell J. Davis, a Greenville native, has accepted a position as corporate attorney in the office of the general counsel of Honeywell Inc. in Minneapolis.

The firm said Davis will work in the area of company litigation and act as general counsel for certain operations of the company.

Prior to accepting the post, he served as special assistant attorney general in the office of the Minnesota attorney general in St. Paul for five years.

Davis received his law degree from the University of Minnesota Law School in May 1981. He completed his undergraduate studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1977.

Davis, a 1973 honor graduate of J.H. Rose High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Z. Davis of Greenville. Davis has resided in Minneapolis for eight years.

Center Links Academic Resources To Eastern North Carolina Industry

By J. DAVID MATTHEWS
ECU News Bureau

Describing the Center for Applied Technology at East Carolina University, the center's handbook says it "organizes and promulgates the technological strengths within East Carolina University and the region which can be made available to assist industry, government and individuals in the resolution of technical problems."

But CAT Director Jerry V. Tester has his own definition of the center. "CAT is a bridge between the academic and industrial communities," said Tester. "It is a linking of resources in the academic community to the needs of the industrial community."

The center, which began operations in January 1985, was established, according to Tester, "because this entire region looks to East Carolina University for leadership. CAT establishes an outgrowth of the university's commitment to serve."

Many projects have been undertaken so far in the center's brief period of existence. One that the center tackled was an on-the-job training program. A multifaceted training program was designed, implemented and administered by CAT to provide a major manufacturing facility with a comprehensive solution to its training requirements, Tester said.

Another activity that CAT handled was designing a marketing brochure for an industrial repair company. The brochure was to be used in a nationwide advertising campaign explaining to potential customers the benefits and range of services that the company offered.

Tester said he believes that the benefits of the center are balanced among several groups. "We benefit industry," said Tester. "Some of their problems would not be solved without CAT. We want all of the area industries to do well. The economy benefits also. New industries will be attracted to the area because of having CAT as a resource."

"On the other hand," he added, "the university benefits also. When our professors work with industries, it broadens the area of experience for them. When these professors come back to the classroom, they bring this experience with them. They are more valuable to the students and the classroom environment quality is increased."

For the upcoming year, Tester has set some lofty goals for the center. "We hope to double the amount of research that we did in 1985," he said. "We hope to expand the geographic locations of our projects. If we can do this, I think we will be successful."

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, FEB. 23, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You get a sudden inspiration on how to put yourself in a more expanded consciousness and to gain the aspirations that mean the most to you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) In the morning, get busy contacting those who are far away, but later some anxiety crops up and requires your time and attention.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Your intuition tells you how to have a good time today, but soon a new acquaintance can bring some annoyance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Morning can be pleasant in the company of a partner, but later some outside situation can cause you anxiety and takes time.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You now know how to gain more money for whatever work you perform. Avoid someone who wants to change you.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Set up appointments for amusements during the week, but later do not start any arguments with your mate.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be happy with your mate early, but later some situation may arise at your home that needs quick handling.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be with a good friend at a place where high-minded ideas are expounded in the morning. Later conditions may not be so good.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A prominent person could open doors of opportunity for you, but take care later you do not overspend for pleasure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) In the morning, you get excellent ideas for advancement, but later the situation at home could be tense.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) During breakfast, you get fine on ideas how to enjoy greater well being in the days ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good morning to discuss the future with home ties and associates so that it can be more harmonious and profitable.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You work quite hard trying to make your environment more charming, but later do not feel satisfied because you are tired.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be appreciative of own environment and will do very well at school. Upon reaching adulthood, there can suddenly be a need for hard work and could easily develop a martyr complex if you do not teach that life is full of changes. Don't neglect physical education.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, FEB. 24, 1986

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of today's Full Moon brings considerable activity in finding the right ways and means by which you can decide the policies under which you wish to operate in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is the best time to gain a favor from an associate since later you have many projects to handle.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Begin the new week wisely and arrive on time for business appointments and later handle home affairs well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try to please associates in the morning, but later, one of them may be difficult to handle. Take everything in stride.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Money matters can work out well in the morning, whether they concern your own or those of others.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Begin the day in a dramatic way and later sit back and watch the results. Bring forth your finest talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get that plan working that you have arranged with the aid of an expert in the morning. Later, study the results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be with congenials in the morning. A good deal of care is needed while driving later in the day. Make your home life more charming.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Early focus your attention on family and important business matters. Don't handle financial affairs in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Advance your priorities in the morning, but later do not try to force your ideas on others. Tend to correspondence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get your property improved in some modern way and be less concerned with personal worries. Avoid losing your temper.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Begin the week properly by supporting bigwigs and later steer clear of someone you know who likes to be sarcastic.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to gain the favor of up-to-date and conservative acquaintances during the day, but stay at home tonight and feel secure.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be most extroverted early in life. School work will come easily and there is love of family and playmates. Upon reaching high school age, however, your progeny will become more serious and ambitious.

Word Battle

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — It took six months, but the editors of the 1985 University of Colorado yearbook kept their four-letter word.

The expletive, directed at President Reagan, was on a T-shirt worn by a woman photographed during a demonstration against the Central Intelligence Agency's on-campus recruiting.

Attorneys for the Topeka, Kan., company that printed the yearbook felt it should not appear in the Coloradan. The word was air-brushed out.

Coloradan editors protested. After a six-month exchange of letters and telephone calls, Jostens printing company relented last week.

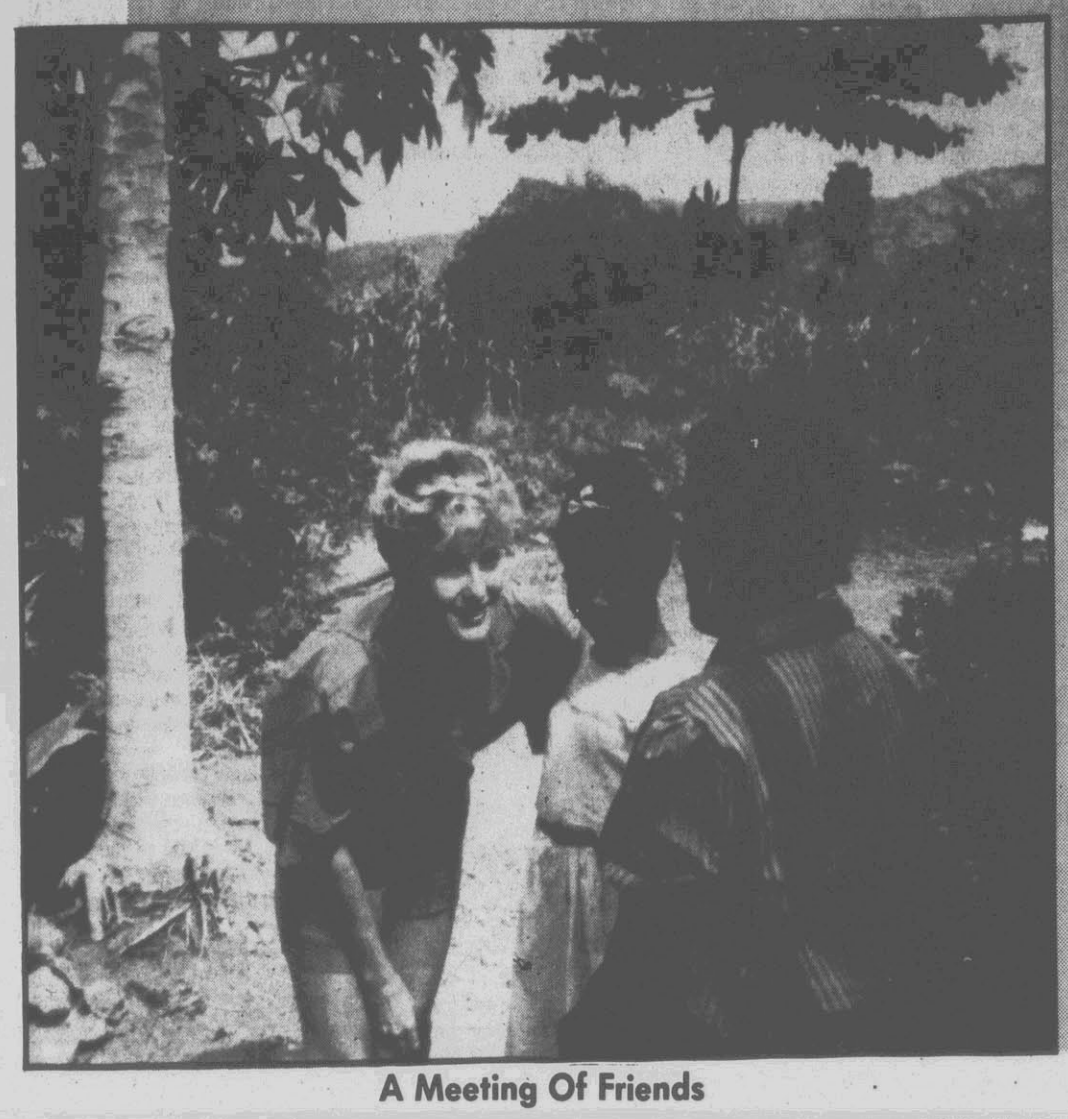
Ms. Wooten Visits Haitian Foster Child



A Meeting Of Friends

Family Portrait

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Twelve-year-old Emmonie Pierre speaks a Haitian dialect of French and has learned only a little English at the community school she attends near Jacmel, Haiti. She used her English recently to tell Greenville resident Harvey Wooten, "I love you."

Ms. Wooten, a member of the Clio Book Club of Greenville, promised her fellow club members that, during her vacation in Haiti just after Christmas, she would try to visit the child they have sponsored for several years through Foster Parents Plan, headquartered in Warwick, R.I.

"I was nervous about it," Ms. Wooten said, "but it was something I wanted very much to do for the other club members and for myself."

Before leaving Greenville, she called the Foster Parents Plan's toll-free phone number and asked the name of the plan coordinator in Haiti. Fritz Foster, she was told.

Then when she got to Jacmel, with help from a woman at her hotel, she got in touch with Foster and asked him if he knew Emmonie Pierre and if it would be possible for her to see the child and her family.

Foster told her he did not know Emmonie personally, that he oversees the care of about 4,000 children. He said he felt sure he could arrange the visit, however, and soon contacted Ms. Wooten to say that he had. He sent a social worker and an interpreter to accompany her in a hired Landrover.

"We rode to the outskirts of Jacmel, then up a mountain a good distance. The countryside was lush and green and beautiful. Its beauty and the lovely weather offer such contrast to the terrible living conditions you see everywhere," Ms. Wooten said.

"When the Jeep stopped seemingly out in the middle of nowhere, the driver asked if we wanted him to wait. Boy, did I want him to wait! We walked up — straight up it seemed — a narrow dirt path about a quarter of a mile 'til we came to a small thatched-roof house little different from several others we'd seen along the way. There I saw Emmonie.

"She's a robust, pretty child and her face was radiant. She seemed overjoyed that I was there. She and her family were expecting us and knew that I represented the Clio Book Club.

"She hugged me and hugged me and said she loved me. I talked with the whole family and some of their neighbors through the interpreter."

"I had learned after arriving that, had I known, I could have brought clothes and toys and other personal gifts for her and her family. I so wished I'd known. These people were so poor. I'd never seen poverty like that. I wanted very much to give Emmonie the cash I had in my pocket. The social worker said, 'not more than $10,' so I gave that much to her and she immediately handed it to her mother. I was able to leave a little more at the office in Jacmel to be used as a special gift for the family.

"Emmonie's mother and father were cordial and asked me to thank all the club members for the assistance they've given their family."

Emmonie has two younger sisters, a younger brother and two about her age or a little older. The whole family lives in one room. They sleep on mats and cook over an open fire behind the house with one skillet and several paint cans for utensils, Ms. Wooten said she observed.

Ms. Wooten asked about taking pictures and the Pierres agreed, sending for the two older sons who'd been working in nearby fields to be included. They insisted that the sons put on shirts before posing for pictures.

"I saw," she said, "that as poor as these people are, they have dignity. They grow maize — that's corn — millet, oranges, bananas, potatoes and eat some and sell some in the market place. Mrs. Pierre squats in the market place all day at a time to sell their produce.

"Though they must carry all the water they use some distance, they are clean. The social worker said they, like most people in the area, are so honest you would never have to worry about being stolen from. It's just taboo in their culture.

"Emmonie is going to a community school and hopefully her little brothers and sisters will, too."

There are now about 14,500 children in all of Haiti being cared for by Foster Parents Plan.

Having seen the program first-hand, Ms. Wooten said she feels strongly that participating in the plan is, in a very real way, ensuring the betterment of not only the foster child, but his or her entire family. Aid goes for the child's schooling, but it also goes into seed and livestock starts and other means of improving the family's overall situation through self-help.

The Clio Club sends $22 a month, plus $10 at Christmas and $5 for Emmonie's birthday.

The plan in Haiti is administered by some 250 employees, only three of whom are non-Haitian. So employment of local people is another contribution of the program to the community. The plan sub-offices are simple thatched huts, not too different from the homes of many of the families they serve.

The Clio Book Club of Greenville, organized in 1937 — coincidentally the same year the Foster Parents Plan was established — has sponsored, since 1963, five different children through the plan — children in Hong Kong, South Korea, El Salvador, and Bolivia prior to Emmonie. Their Salvadoran child's family disappeared during bombing of the hillside on which they lived and the club members have never known whether they were killed or moved to a safer place.

According to information obtained in Haiti, many people sponsor children yet never answer the letters the children send them. Personal involvement is encouraged, however, and keeping the foster children's families and the sponsors in touch is a large part of the social workers' jobs.

According to Mrs. Agnes Barrett, long-time Clio Club member, the club has always enjoyed as much personal contact with their foster children as was possible. "We really feel closer now," she said, "since we've visited Emmonie through Harvey."

'Kicking The Bomb' Is The Family Message

By DAVE DISHNEAU
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Helen Woodson knew what she was risking when she took a jackhammer to the concrete cover of a nuclear missile silo 15 months ago. She knew when she helped destroy the silo's radar warning, exhaust pipes and wiring, she faced arrest and a prison term.

But she never expected to have to spend 12 years away from her seven adopted children, six of them mentally retarded.

Ms. Woodson, 42, is in the women's federal prison at Alderson, W.Va., serving a 12-year sentence, reduced from 18 years, for the attack on the missile silo. It is her ninth conviction for anti-nuclear offenses in three years.

She maintains contact with her children by telephone, letters and artwork, and her constant message is "kick the bomb."

The Woodson children live in a weathered six-bedroom house, cared for by two live-in helpers and Ms. Woodson's friend and fellow activist, Mary Beth Schlagheck, 47.

It has fallen to Mrs. Schlagheck, who is married and childless, to pass on her friend's message to Ethan, 15, who is not retarded; Debby, 26; Suzy, 18; Danny, 11; Michael and Sarah, both 8, all of whom have Down's syndrome, and Jeremy, 5, who was born with brain damage.

Ms. Woodson, who was divorced before she began adopting the children, also has a natural son, David, 21, who lives away from home.

"Mom's in jail," said Danny, explaining what happened to his mother. "Mom kicked the bomb under the ground."

Ms. Woodson is one of 60 pacifists arrested in the past five years for symbolically disarming first-strike missiles. The activists call themselves Plowshares activists, from the Old Testament quotation in Isaiah, "They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks."

IMPRISONED MOTHER...Helen Woodson is serving a 12-year sentence in women's federal prison in Alderson, W.Va. (AP Laserphoto)

In her absence, Social Security benefits and charitable donations sustain the family and pay for heat and home upkeep.

The house needs a new coat of green paint, but it's warm inside and the children are cheerful. The kitchen walls are plastered with letters and drawings from their mother. A rectangle of purple construction paper tacked to a door frame reads: "Helen's release date: May 15, 1996."

One crayon drawing shows the children gathered outside the fence of missile silo N-5, the one Ms. Woodson damaged in Johnson County, Mo., about 35 miles east of Kansas City, on Nov. 12, 1984. The stick figures all wear big smiles and each has one foot extended toward the fence.

The picture also depicts a costume-clad Peace Woman flying in from the upper right corner.

"Who is that?" a visitor asked, pointing to Peace Woman.

"Mommy," said Sarah.

In the living room, a large piece of corrugated cardboard is dented and creased by frequent bootings — it bears Mrs. Schlagheck's crayon drawing of a big, black bomb.

Mrs. Schlagheck said that before Ms. Woodson left Madison for the Missouri missile silo, the two agreed that Mrs. Schlagheck would mind the children if Ms. Woodson were imprisoned. The agreement was for five years, the longest sentence Ms. Woodson thought she might draw.

No one anticipated the 18-year sentence U.S. District Judge D. Brook Bartlett handed down March 27, 1985, after Ms. Woodson's conviction on charges of conspiracy, destruction of government property, obstruction of the national defense and trespassing. Before this, her longest sentences had been three and six months for pouring human blood on flags in the White House and on a Minuteman III missile in the Air and Space Museum in Washington.

In November, Bartlett reduced the sentence to 12 years.

Ms. Woodson would normally be eligible for parole after serving four years, one-third of her sentence, but so far she has refused to accept conditions demanded by the court for a subsequent five-year probation. Among the conditions are making restitution of $2,932.81 for damages and promising not to commit civil disobedience again or return to military sites.

At the original sentencing, Bartlett said he considered the crimes charged to Ms. Woodson and three other Roman Catholic peace activists, including two brothers who are priests, as extremely serious offenses.

"The method of attack was a destructive rampage," he said. "The defendants destroyed everything they could and did not care about the consequences of their actions."

For Mrs. Schlagheck, shock at the severe sentence gave way to anger that her friend hadn't planned for the long term.

"I'm healing," Mrs. Schlagheck said. "I don't deny that I have (angry) feelings — I can't deny them. I think of the sacrifice she made, leaving the family that she loves so much ... yet I need to remain true to my own feelings."

Mrs. Schlagheck was appointed temporary legal guardian of the four youngest children at court hearing Jan. 29. Guardians will also likely be appointed for the three older children at a hearing later this month.

"I really believe that she did what she had to do and that we all have to do something personal and concrete to break down that whole (nuclear weapons) system," Mrs. Schlagheck said.

"But what are the consequences of those personal decisions? That's a hard, hard one."

Ms. Woodson, interviewed recently in the visiting room at the West Virginia prison, said her first personal decision to demonstrate for peace came shortly after David was born in 1964.

"Every single generation of parents had said to their children we will bring peace into the world," she said. "And every single generation — we sent them out to die on the battlefields. Now I had a son. Was he going to die 18 years from then? And what about his son?"

She recalled traveling by train to Pittsburgh for Christmas when her son was 5 months old and the United States was getting more involved in Vietnam.

"We stopped in Pittsburgh station. And they began taking the caskets off and there were live soldiers on the train going home for Christmas leave," she said. "And I looked at it and realized that here I had the next generation of bodies."

Back in Madison, Ms. Woodson took David with her when she protested the war. "My son had been tear-gassed three times by the time he was 18 months old," she said.

To suggestions by some that she is a fanatic, Ms. Woodson said, "I AM a fanatic. I'm fanatically in love with life. I don't want to see it end with this generation."

Her prison job is tutoring illiterate inmates. When asked what she missed most besides her family, she said she would like some Juicy Fruit gum, a sausage pizza and a dinner that would include a Black Russian cocktail, lobster, salad and a baked potato with sour cream.

"I've discovered in jail when all of my possessions can be contained in one small paper bag that there was nothing that I really needed that I did not have," she said. "All the rest is luxury."

Ms. Woodson and Mrs. Schlagheck were arrested together in 1983 after they chained themselves to the doors of a Madison Catholic church to protest the church's views on U.S. nuclear arms policies.

Mrs. Schlagheck said she's happy to have merely a supporting role this time.

Carolyn Mills, Frank Davis Speak Vows

Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Carolyn Lea Mills and Frank Davis Saturday at 3 p.m. The double ring ceremony was conducted by J. Malloy Owen.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Lloyd Mills of Greenville. She was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Avery Davis and Joyce Davis, both of Goldsboro. His father served as best man.

Betty Mauldin of Goldsboro was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Debbie Mills of Wilson, and Cheryl Mills of Louisburg, sisters-in-law of the bride.

MRS. DAVIS

The bride received B.S. and M.A. degrees in special education from East Carolina University. She attended J.H. Rose High School. She is a program coordinator at O'Berry Center in Goldsboro. The bridegroom attended Goldsboro High School and is employed by Livewire Electrical Contractors in Goldsboro as a foreman.

The bride wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace and silk organza over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a sculptured neckline of chantilly lace and a yoke of schiffli embroidered English net with pearl accents. The bishop sleeves were of chantilly lace and extended to a cuff of matching lace at the wrist. The full skirt of organza was enhanced by insets of chantilly lace and flowed into a cathedral train bordered by matching lace. A bow of silk organza covered in lace accented the gown back. She wore a Juliet cap of chantilly lace with pearl accents attached to a tiered veil of imported silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of orchids and miniature carnations.

The honor attendant wore a formal dress of royal blue styled with a velvet bodice with a scoop neckline and long sleeves. The taffeta skirt was flared. She carried a nosegay of mixed flowers tied with pink ribbon. Bridesmaids were dressed identically.

The couple will live near Goldsboro after a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla.

A reception was held in the church parlor and greeting guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hartsell. Sandra McLawhorn, Dot Taylor, Pattie Padley and Faye Adams assisted in serving. Edna Mills served wedding cake. Susan Haddock presided at the guest register and Melanie Kearney passed out rice bags.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Sheraton-Greenville.

Patent Dates Make Some Lithograph Toys Treasures

From COUNTRY HOME

Lithograph toys, rich in color and detail, were the answer to many a young child's dreams some 90 years ago. Today, lithograph toys continue to entrance us.

Litho toys range from dollhouses to acrobat figures to nests of blocks to an array of boats, horse-drawn carriages and trains. They're valued for their often substantial size, handsome graphics and careful attention to precise details.

Of the three types of litho toys — tin, wood and cardboard — the latter two share a surrealistic quality that results from printing vibrant, two-dimensional details on paper and combining them with a three-dimensional shape. The designs, hand-drawn but mechanically printed, are appreciated for their intricacy and their colorful tones.

Before the development of chromolithography (the process of printing a color picture from a series of lithographic plates) by German printers in the 1840s, toys had to be handmade. Thus, most toys were too expensive for all but the upper class. Less affluent families had to make do with homemade toys.

By the 1870s, French, English and American firms had patented chromolithography production methods, which offset designs from inked sheets or rollers onto toy surfaces. By the 1890s, the process was standardized, and both the American and European toy industries were able to mass-produce colorful toys inexpensively. In time, American toymakers, such as Rufus Bliss, John McLoughlin and Parker Brothers, refined the technique and became world-leading toy manufacturers.

All three types of litho toys (meaning toys made using the chromolithography process) were produced from the late 1800s and into the 1900s. But just as horse and steam power gave way to the internal combustion engine, production of wood and cardboard litho toys waned as technolgy developed. By the 1920s, after ore became available for cast-iron toys, manufacturers found metal was more suited for mass production and that lightweight tin could more easily house clockworks and springs than wood.

Lithographed toys reflected not only technological but also social change. They became popular at a time when parents were beginning to view their offspring less as miniature adults to be instructed and more as children to be entertained as well as taught.

This trend was evidenced by the new popularity of fanciful toys without direct educational value. Circus sets, for example, complete with jugglers, clowns, wagons and menageries of exotic animals. Litho toys ranged from simple animal figures for the very young to big trains with elaborate accessories.

A strong interest in the rapidly changing modes of transportation was paralleled by numerous wood litho replicas of horse-drawn fire engines, prairie schooners, steamboats and luxury side-wheeler river steamers.

Wood litho toys are available through collectors and at auctions, estate sales and flea markets. Because of their fragility, however, it is difficult to find examples in excellent condition. Those that have survived the years are worth from $50 to $4,000, depending on size, condition and rarity.

Before starting your own collection, it's a good idea to view examples. Museums with collections of lithographed toys include the Margaret Woodbury Strong Museum in Rochester, N.Y., the Perleman Museum in Philadelphia, and the Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson Collection of Toys at the Detroit Historical Museum.

In their heyday, wood and cardboard litho toys were more popular in the East than elsewhere because manufacturers and distributors were located there. Most lithographed toys were marked by the maker, but John Mcloughlin's company was the only one to put its patent date on the toy. Thus, the best way to date the toys is to seek expert advice or to gain access to old catalogs of early toy companies.

Engraver McLoughlin used his printing expertise when he established a toy company in New York in 1855. His firm's blocks, toy theaters, folding dollhouses and other toys are prized today for the patent dates on them and for their lush lithography.

Family Message...

"There have to be support people," she said. "We need to have more people filling the jails and we need to have more support people back home."

Such support, as in keeping the Woodson children fed, dressed and healthy, is a full-time job for Mrs. Schlagheck and for Mary Rasmussen and Laurie Hasbrook, two University of Wisconsin-Madison students employed as live-in sitters.

Getting the children ready for church one recent Sunday morning was an exercise in patience amid commotion. Danny couldn't get his coat zipped. Sarah's shoes needed tying. Michael put his galoshes on the wrong feet. Debby had outgrown her boots and sulked at having to wear Danny's.

All the while the house was filled with noise. Suzy thrashed an untuned guitar and led an off-key sing-along, while Danny and Jeremy took turns counting to 10 and galloping across the living room's hardwood floor in a howling game of Kick the Bomb.

The weekly schedule gives each woman 40 hours with the children, but Mrs. Schlagheck said they all work longer for little pay. She works the day shift while the others attend classes.

All the children except 26-year-old Debby attend Madison public schools. Twice a week, a group of Suzy's disabled classmates spend the morning at the Woodson house, learning how to prepare simple meals and care for themselves.

Mrs. Schlagheck said people who ask what sort of mother would adopt children with special needs, then leave them to risk being thrown in prison, are asking the wrong question.

"If people really cared, they'd say, 'Never mind that, she did what she did in good conscience,'" she said. "They'd say, 'What can I do to help you?"

Vitality is the word for wool. If we wanted them to, and with proper care, wool garments could literally go on forever as prized hand-me-downs to generations yet to be born. The following instructions will keep your woolens looking their best.

— Wear a scarf if you wear make-up, to protect necklines.

— Keep lines trim by unbuttoning coats and jackets if you are sitting on them for a long period of time.

— Refresh wool garments quickly after wearing or unpacking. Hang them on the shower rod over a tub of hot water and let steam remove wrinkles and refresh clothes for wear.

— Hang clothes carefully — woven wools on padded hangers, zipped or button, skirts and pants on special hangers. Store knits gently folded in drawer.

— Restore woolen's freshness with light sponging. Treat stains while they're fresh. When liquids are blotted immediately there is rarely any spot to worry about. If wool gets wet, let it dry at room temperature away from heat, then brush with the nap.

At season's end, make sure woolens are clean before storing them. Store clothes unfolded in garment bag. Fold knits and blankets and place them in drawers or chests. For additional protection against moths, you may want to use moth crystals or a spray.

Follow these commonsense rules and your fine woolens will keep their good looks season after season, year after year, for as long as you want to use and wear them.

Program On Personal Tax Tips Given

A program on personal tax tips was given at the Greenville Pirate Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association meeting Tuesday.

James O'Connor, CPA, spoke on standard deductions, types of deductible taxes, miscellaneous deductions, IRA's and other tax shelters, business expenses, moving expenses and real estate as an investment.

Plans were discussed for the chapter's spring enrollment event scheduled for March 19 in the board room of the Greenville Utilities Commission. Laura Smith is chairman and will be assisted by Susan Thornton, membership chairman. Barbara Cleary will speak on "Presenting and Persuading" at the enrollment. Mrs. Cleary is a past president of the chapter. Names of prospective members should be submitted to Ms. Smith or Ms. Thornton by Feb. 28.

A selection committee for the naming of the chapter Woman of the Year was appointed by Carrole Bullard, vice president. Named were Mrs. Cleary, chairman, Sharon Pope and Janet Worley.

NON-RED ROSES

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — "Roses are red, violets are blue" doesn't hold true these days, when roses can be anything from mauve to poppy to salmon to white, says John W. White, professor of horticulture at Penn State.

New breeds are appearing every year, he says. Now available are miniature roses, longer lasting than the average one week for a cut rose and especially suited for table bouquet arrangements. And geneticists are very close to a thornless rose, he adds.

Clean Up Bad Habits Before Mid-Life Crisis

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Admit it. You dread it. You know that after you hit 40 it's going to be all down-hill. Mid-life is just one big crisis, right?

Wrong. Your body and brain power don't have to deteriorate between 40 and 60. You'll have to come to terms with your limitations, of course, but concentrate on cleaning up your bad habits. Smoking and not exercising, for example, will cause you far more problems than hitting middle age.

Here are some common mid-life myths — and the medical facts reported in the March issue of Better Homes and Gardens.

Myth: A heart attack will probably get you.

Fact: By age 45, heart disease replaces accidents as the No. 1 killer of Americans. No matter what your age, however, you can take steps to keep your heart healthy.

A low level of cholesterol in the blood is a good indicator of a low risk of heart attack. Suggestion: Follow a diet low in saturated fats — such as the prudent diet long advocated by the American Heart Association. Quit smoking to reduce your risk of heart disease.

Myth: You lose the infamous battle of the bulge.

Fact: Adulthood aptly has been described as the period when growth stops — except in the middle. People generally need fewer calories to maintain their weight as they get older. If you eat the same amount at 40 or 50 as you did at 20, you'll probably find yourself gaining weight.

Fat gets redistributed, often to the "wrong" places. Curiously, where you carry the added fat seems to have a health impact: A potbelly brings a higher risk of heart disease, for example, than excess fat on the hips, buttocks and thighs.

All of us have notions about our own best weight. Even the experts disagree on what constitutes an "ideal" mid-life weight. Thin may be in, but the idea that it's healthier to maintain a relatively consistent weight rather than to repeatedly lose and gain unwanted pounds is finding favor. There is no question, however, that severe obesity shortens life.

Myth: Exercising isn't worth the effort.

Fact: Don't believe it. You may not be able to do anything about your gene-dictated rate of aging, but you can control your life-style. Think of all the benefits. Men who exercise regularly and vigorously, for example, have half as many heart attacks as those who sit around.

Regular exercise (a minimum of 30 pulse-boosting minutes three times a week) helps your heart and lungs work better, reduces high blood pressure, and improves sleep.

Myth: Your memory goes.

Fact: Between and 40 and 60, your ability to learn new information, solve problems and remember things remains pretty much the same as in younger years. Declines tend to occur much later, typically after age 70.

Myth: It's harder to roll out of bed in the morning.

Fact: As you get older, it may seem as if you need more and more coffee to take the edge off your mornings. Look to your sleeping habits. You may simply not be getting enough rest.

If you keep regular hours during the work week, then stay up late on the weekends, you may be experiencing "jet lag" — without leaving home. With age, people seem to have more trouble adjusting to irregular hours.

Fact: For most of us, mid-life is a period of transition, not crisis. You may be starting a family or seeing your children leave home. You may begin a new career or take time off to "retool."

There's no denying that mid-life does have its challenges. Life takes on a certain sense of urgency as you begin to focus more on the time you have left than on what already has passed by.

JAMESVILLE – Barbara Angela Hagen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hagen of Route 1, Jamesville, and Willie James Rogers Jr., son of Mrs. Willie James Rogers Sr. of Greenville, and the late Mr. Rogers, took place Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The bride was escorted by her brother, Craig Hagen, and given in marriage by her parents. Her honor attendant was her cousin, Janet Whitehurst of Williamston. Bridesmaids were Gwen Rogers Casey, sister of the bridegroom, and Donna Jo Hardison, both of Greenville, and Suzanne Spence Sasser of Jamesville.

The flower girl was Leigh Ann Coltrain of Jamesville, cousin of the bride. Ring bearer was Alan Hagen of Jamesville, brother of the bride.

The best man was Winston D. Wooten of Ayden, uncle of the bridegroom. Ushers were Kenneth H. Smith of Ayden, cousin of the bridegroom, John Hagen of Jamesville, brother of the bride, and Roger Goodwin of Apex.

A program of wedding music was presented by Suzanne Modlin, organist, Lynne Marks, flutist, and Ruth Moskip, harpist. Heber J. Coltrain Jr. and Ernie Williams were soloists.

The bride chose an ivory floor length gown with a cathedral train of bridal satin with re-embroidered alencon lace and imported schiffli embroidery. The fitted satin bodice featured a Victorian neckline with a sheer illusion yoke outlined with scalloped alencon lace motifs and long tapered sleeves. Alencon lace motifs embellished with seed pearls trimmed the bodice, sleeves and encircled the standing collar. Re-embroidered alencon lace motifs etched with clusters of seed pearls appliqued the skirt and train. Scalloped schiffli embroidery bordered the gown hemline. Her headpiece was a mantilla of illusion edged with seed pearls and accented with scattered alencon lace motifs attached to an alencon lace caplet encrusted with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of rubrum lilies, miniature carnations, daisies and baby's breath with ivy.

The mother of the bride wore an aubergine floor length gown of georgette styled with a cowl draped neckline. The mother of the bridegroom selected a rose floor length gown of georgette over taffeta. Each wore a wristlet of roses.

The attendants wore woodrose morie faille gowns styled with fitted bodices, V-necklines, elbow length sleeves and torso waistlines. The gathered shoulders were accented with bows. Each carried a hurricane lamp encircled with flowers in burgundy and pink.

The flower girl selected an ivory matte taffeta gown with a bouffant skirt and drop shoulder basque bodice. The ruffled neckline ended with a V-back. She wore baby's breath in her hair and carried a basket of silk flowers in burgundy and pink.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride in the church fellowship hall. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Coltrain.

The couple will be living in Greenville after a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla.

The bride is a registered nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is an employee of Yale Materials Handling Corp. She is a graduate of Beaufort Community College and he attended Pitt Community College.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Another common color mistake is using colored silk lamp shades because they throw off a bad light. If one is using a black lamp shade in a room, for example, there should be something to correspond with it such as dark wanescoating. Don't just throw in a black lamp shade. Colored lamp shades are also bad for reading and putting on makeup.

Bring in color other ways such as wallpaper. Even solid colored moire' wallpaper can add interest and some design to a room. Also keep in mind to mix your wallcoverings. Don't have every room a floral, but use a solid in one room, a floral in another and perhaps a flame or stripe in another. This mixing adds interest and variety.

Wallpaper can be one of the most effective decorating mediums. We have scheduled a seminar on wallpaper on Tuesday, February 25 at 7:30 pm in our store to explore and answer every conceivable question about the subject. Experts will be on hand to discuss different kinds of paper, serviceability, styling and use, problems in estimating quantities, what you should know before wallpapering, anticipating problems, etc. Make plans now to attend by calling 756-9111 to reserve a place. We must limit this session to the first 15 callers.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

High School Dropout Encouraged To Seek Higher Education

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school dropout who has been married to a very prominent businessman for four years. I'll never know how I got so lucky.

I want to finish high school and take some kind of job-training courses. I enrolled in some night classes once, but I never went because I'm too embarrassed to let our friends know that I never finished high school. It might even be damaging to my husband's career if it became known. My verbal skills are fine, but I am not really educated.

When friends ask me why I don't have some kind of job, I don't know what to say. Without a high school diploma, I can't get the kind of job that would be expected of me in our circle of friends. There must be other people who are in the same position. What should I do?

CLOSET DROPOUT

DEAR DROPOUT: First, get over the idea that it's a disgrace to be a dropout. It's not. Circumstances have prevented many from graduating from high school with their peers. Fortunately, you can pick up where you dropped out without embarrassment. There are adult education classes (nights or days) at your local college. You could even hire a tutor to teach you at home. You're smart enough to know you need more education. Now be brave enough to get it. And good luck.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I realize that women don't like being looked at solely as sex objects, but do women know that men don't like being looked at solely in terms of how much money they have?

I am unemployed and have very little money, and I am tired of being turned down by greedy women. I am 34 years old, fairly good-looking and I am still valuable, even if I am broke.

WILLIAM IN BUTLER, PA.

DEAR WILLIAM: Obviously your self-esteem is intact. My hat is off to you. However, all men do not look at women solely as sex objects; neither do all women evaluate men on the basis of their pocketbooks. Please don't tar all women with the same brush.

DEAR ABBY: Can a person who is 5 feet 10 weighing 370 pounds fit into an airplane seat going overseas? Thank you.

BIG IN FLAGSTAFF

DEAR BIG: In some airplanes, a coach seat may not accommodate you, but if you go first class, you should have no problem. It's not your height and weight, it's your girth that could ground you.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I want a divorce and see no reason why we should hire a lawyer. There are no children involved, and we have no property or money to fight over. So what do we need a lawyer for? Or can't we get a divorce without one?

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH IN MARYLAND

DEAR ENOUGH: You can obtain a divorce without a lawyer. This is called a court appearance "pro se" (or "for self"). You will need a copy of a divorce complaint form. Most stationery stores carry them. If you cannot find one, you may be able to get one from the court files by paying for photostating it.

My sources cite an old legal maxim: "A lawyer who represents himself has a fool for a client." This may apply equally to non-lawyers.

I am not recommending a do-it-yourself divorce; I'm simply letting you know that you have the option. Me? I would hire a lawyer and pay him—or her—for what he or she knows. Would I lie to you on George Washington's birthday?

* * *

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

COME FOR DESSERT
Chocolate Cake & Coffee

HELEN'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE CAKE

¼-pound stick butter
2-3rds cup sugar
3 large eggs
¾ cup semisweet chocolate pieces, melted
1 cup almonds, finely ground
¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs
Grated rind of 1 large orange
Glaze, see recipe

With a wide spatula thoroughly fold in chocolate, almonds, bread crumbs and orange rind. Turn into an 8-inch round layer-cake pan that has been lined with wax paper and the paper greased. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 25 minutes — center will not seem completely baked. Cool on a wire rack for 10 minutes. Looses edges; turn out; turn right side up; cool completely. Pour glaze over top and sides of cake.

GLAZE: In a small saucepan over very low heat stir together 2 ounces unsweetened chocolate, ¼ cup semisweet chocolate pieces, 4 tablespoons butter and 2 teaspoons honey until blended. Off heat stir until cold and thickened.

Troubled Past Helps Doctor's Present Image With Patients

By LISA CARLSON
Sharon Herald

YOUNGSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — As the result of a television movie about her triumph over unbelievable odds, a Youngstown doctor is enjoying new-found freedom and closeness to her patients.

Dr. Mary Groda-Lewis says she gets a chuckle out of having her patients open up to her since they viewed her life story. She says they got to see a more personal side of her and she loves their reactions.

The film, "Love, Mary," aired last October and featured Kristy McNichol in the starring role. Groda-Lewis and her husband, David, met Miss McNichol at the film's Hollywood premiere.

The 36-year-old doctor likes the film version of her life and approves of Miss McNichol's portrayal. "She even looked a little like me," she says.

"I was impressed. It was very accurate, but still was emotional and a bit scary to see my life on TV."

However, all the attention has not really changed her, she says. She is still down-to-earth and approaches the second year of her three-year residency at Northside Medical Center with the same energy and enthusiasm as she did from the start.

Before the movie aired, her coworkers knew nothing of her troubled past — a past riddled with educational problems, juvenile arrests, two children born out of wedlock by age 20 and health problems resulting from her second child's birth.

Her colleagues' initial reaction was surprise and then they were "very delighted with the realization that it could have been them too" if they had faced similar odds, she explains.

Interest in her life story began the day she graduated in 1984 from Albany (N.Y.) Medical School. An article outlining her struggle to become a doctor had appeared that day in the New York Times' Lifestyle section. Producers came to her graduation wanting to make a film of her life.

Born the second of seven children to a retired military man and a nurse, she says she can't remember when her family wasn't struggling to make ends meet. When her father lost his restaurant business in 1953, her mother continued working but couldn't support the family. When Groda-Lewis was 6, her family joined migrant workers in Texas.

Her problems started when she began attending school regularly. Although she wanted to learn, she couldn't. Her teachers labeled her worthless and were unaware that she had dyslexia, a brain disorder that makes reading and writing difficult at best.

When she was 13, Groda-Lewis quit going to school and became an "outcast." She drank, smoked and committed petty crimes. Because of truancy and possession of alcohol, she spent two years in reform school. When she was 16 years old, she was placed in an Oregon juvenile correctional facility for car theft.

Her experiences with teachers and law enforcement officials only served to make her feel more worthless, so she adopted a bitter, tough attitude to compensate.

That began to change, though, when a counselor got her into the federally funded Upward Bound educational program that helps troubled teen-agers from low-income families.

Teachers in the program discovered her dyslexia. After four months of 16-hour one-on-one tutoring sessions, she was reading at an eighth-grade level and could write.

After passing her high school equivalency exam at 17, she was on her own, but felt insecure and wanted to "love and be loved." Three months later she was pregnant.

Although her parents were upset, they stood by her. Nine months after Iris, now 17, was born, she became pregnant again. Groda-Lewis says she had no money for prenatal care during the second pregnancy. If she had gotten better care, she believes, the cardiac arrests, seizures and stroke that came two days after her son, Christopher, was born might have been avoided.

She was hospitalized eight months. When she was discharged she weighed 82 pounds and could barely walk. All her reading and writing ability, even her speech, had been erased by the stroke.

But her family wouldn't let her wallow in self-pity. For three years they worked with her until she was re-educated and fully recovered.

After that she wanted to make a life for herself and her children, a move that resulted in her attending college and later medical school.

While at Mount Hood Community College in Oregon, she met her future husband. After they married in 1978, David, a journalist, accepted a job in Westchester, N.Y. Groda-Lewis finished her degree at Herbert H. Lehman College there in the top 10 percent of her class. Then she applied to 15 medical schools. She was accepted at Albany.

At medical school graduation she received four awards, including one for exhibiting "outstanding sensitivity to humanistic values."

Groda-Lewis decided on family practice because her image of a doctor had always been someone who cares for the whole person. Her ultimate goal is to practice in a small community and keep doing what she is doing today.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

FOCUS On...
J.H. Rose High School

By GITA GULATI

Once again, the Rose High Drama Department is preparing for its annual spring musical. This year's production is Irving Berlin's "Annie Get Your Gun."

The plot of this play revolves around the career of famed sharpshooter Annie Oakley. She is in love with Frank Butler, the star of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show but she is also in competition with him. Eventually she proves that she is better-skilled than he is, which causes Frank to leave the troup and join his rival Pawnee Bill.

To win Frank back, Annie challenges him to a shooting match, which she purposely loses. With his pride restored, Frank declares his love for Annie and they decide to work together. Annie is thrilled to have learned how to get her man with her gun.

The cast for the play was selected entirely from Rose High students; many are mebers of the Rose High Thespians, an honor drama club. The school orchestra and chorus are also contributing their talents to the production. Friends of the Theater, the Drama Club's booster blub consisting of parents and friends, has also donated a lot of time and support to the cast and crew.

Students are also responsible for many behind the scenes committees. Betty Topper, who teaches drama and chorus and sponsors the Drama Club at Rose, is directing the play. She is being assisted by two students directors, Rene Adams and Robin Bolande.

So, folks who are tired of watching the same formula movies and television shows every weekend and are desperate for some entertainment, "Annie Get Your Gun" will provide a welcome relief. The play is scheduled for 8 p.m. April 11-13 in the Rose High gym. Tickets will be available soon.

YOUTH WINS HONORS IN READING PROGRAM

NEW YORK (AP) — Jason Isroff of Akron, Ohio, has been named winner of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society's 1985 READaTHON contest in which 250,000 elementary schoool students participated.

In the program, youngsters of first through eighth grades ask family and friends to pledge a token amount for each book they read on their own time.

To win the award the 9-year-old youngster, a fourth-grader at Akron's Bath Elementary School, read 30 books and collected $2,143 in donations and pledges for the society's campaign against multiple sclerosis.

C.A.R. Debutante Presentation Held

The N.C. Society of Children of the American Revolution held its annual debutante presentation Saturday evening at the Sheraton-Greenville.

Allison Gray Baker of Route 2, Farmville, and Rachel Leigh Bailey, of Route 1, Farmville, were presented at the event.

Miss Baker is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor Baker Sr. Her father was her chief marshal and Ron Cooper Jr. of Farmville was her assistant marshal.

She is a senior at Farmville Central High School and plans to attend the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Miss Baker is interested in pursuing a major in education or speech pathology.

Special interests listed by the young lady are swimming, dancing, singing, playing the piano and flute, both snow and water skiing and reading.

At Farmville Central, she has been active in Keywanettes, National Honor Society, Spanish Club and Future Business Leaders of America. She has also been active as girls basketball statistician, volleyball and softball.

Miss Baker has received several awards including: DAR Good Citizenship; Doris Long Jones Cultural Arts Award; FBLA service award, and Pitt County Cultural Arts Award.

For her debut, she wore a white formal gown of peau de soie styled with a square neckline and ruffled sleeves. The skirt was gathered and was accented with a hemline border of lace.

Leigh Bailey

She is a member of the high school marching band color guard rifle line and winter guard. Miss Bailey is a member of the school's show choir, which is a group of 12 girls and 14 boys that dance and sing. In addition, she is a member of the school's women's ensemble.

She has been dancing for 10 years, doing both tap and jazz. She has been a girl scout for eight years and received the second highest award, silver wings.

Miss Bailey's father was her chief marshal and Kurt Thompson of Emerald Isle was her assistant marshal. Thompson is president of the state C.A.R. For the ball, she wore a formal gown of white organza styled with spaghetti straps and empire waistline. The bodice was appliqued with embroidered lace and the flared skirt was accented with self-fabric scalloped tiers.

The state conference opened Friday afternoon. The Dr. Robert Williams and Brigadier General Francis Nash societies hosted the 46th conference.

A sock hop and various meetings were held Friday afternoon and evening.

Allison Baker

Wedding Ceremony Performed Saturday Evening

BLACK CREEK — Jo Ann Minshew and Jeffrey Michael Peterson were united in marriage Saturday evening at 7 o'clock in the Black Creek United Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roderick E. Minshew of Black Creek. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Peterson Sr. of Virginia Beach, Va.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore an ivory floor length gown with a chapel train of satin organza over taffeta with a beaded re-embroidered alencon lace fitted bodice featuring a Queen Anne neckline outlined with scalloped alencon lace motifs. The gown had a torso waistline and long tapered lace sleeves. Alencon lace with seed pearls adorned the bodice. Scalloped embroidery lace bordered the hemline of the gown. She carried a cascade of Jack Frost roses, freesia and champagne French lilies tied with candlelight satin streamers. She wore a mantilla of bridal illusion edged with seed pearls appliqued with beaded alencon lace motifs flowing from an alencon lace cap etched with seed pearls.

MRS. PETERSON

Tonya Peterson of Cary, niece of the bridegroom, Amber and Lori Deans of Wendell, cousins of the bride, were rice maids. Jeffrey Michael Peterson Jr. of Jacksonville was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Steve Smith of Greenville, Randall Hight of Cary, Gerorge D. Peterson Jr. of Ayden, cousin of the bridegroom, and Johnny Vann Minshew of Black Creek, brother of the bride.

The bridal attendants wore formal red satin floor length gowns styled with asymmetrical bodices accented with a full satin bow with sprays of seed pearls. The natural waistlines were encircled with satin belts accented with seed pearls. Each carried red anthuriums with greenery and matching bows.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the bride's parents. Assisting in serving were Sandy Lindley and Aimee Simoneaux, sisters of the bridegroom, Ruby Deans, aunt of the bride, and Joyce Mercer.

The couple will live in Cary after a wedding trip to Winter Green, Va.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and is a disability specialist with Disability Determination of N.C. The bridegroom attended ECU and Coastal Carolina Community College. He is president and owner of Peterson Upholstery and Design Ltd.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom. A bridal luncheon was given by Candy Minshew.

Other pre-nuptial parties included a lingerie shower, salad luncheon and a party.

University Has Problems With Movietone News Collection

By TOM GOYNE
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — When 20th Century-Fox donated its Movietone News collection to the University of South Carolina in early 1980, it was heralded by school officials as a major accomplishment.

The university would have some of the most dramatic history of the four decades between 1919 and 1963 captured on celluloid — an invaluable asset for research and history buffs. There is footage from World War II, the era of Dillinger, the great sports stars, Amelia Earhart.

But much of that film has never been delivered to the university and some of it is stored in bunkers at the Army's Fort Jackson, facing the deteriorating effects of age on nitrate film.

The Air and Space Museum of the Smithsonian Institute became aware of the threat to the filmed history and announced a campaign with the university in January to save film focusing on aviation history.

Smithsonian officials announced Jan. 29 that they will start a campaign to help save 800,000 feet of aviation footage by trying to raise $550,000. Both the university and the institute will receive a copy of the film once it's been transferred to safe film.

In 1980, university President James Holderman said that, over the next several years, the university would receive more than 60 million feet of film, enough to run halfway around the world at the equator.

The university would receive 10 million feet initially, and eventually the entire collection would be housed in a $40 million fine arts center along the Columbia Riverfront, which was to be completed by 1984.

Much of the footage is on nitrate film, which has an oxidizing agent that causes the film to deteriorate even in a sealed canister. About half of the initial 10 million feet of film was on safety film, the other five million was on nitrate.

Six years later, some of the dreams for the Movietone collection have not been realized: the university has still received only 10 million feet of film; only 100,000 feet of the nitrate film has been converted to safety stock; the fine arts center plan was abandoned in early 1981 and no building is planned for the collection; and the nitrate film is being stored in ammunition bunkers at Fort Jackson.

Holderman said no special building is needed for Movietone News; the film will be kept in the university's library and is on display at the university's museum.

"Hopefully, someday we'll have a building for it, but right now it's fine where it is," Holderman said.

The remaining 50 million feet will still be delivered, but exactly when is not known, said Jim Jackson, university director of news film libraries. He said the film company has undergone three ownership changes since the donation and no film has been sent since the initial donation of 10 million feet.

During those six years, some of the film has been destroyed by age, although exactly how much is not known, Jackson said.

"The only way to find out is to open the cans and see what is in them," he said. "We've opened some and they've been full of dust."

The deterioration process is inevitable, so little time should be wasted in transferring the film to videotape, Jackson said.

"It might deteriorate in a period of days, it might do so in a period of weeks or it might do it over a period of years," he said. "But it's going to be destroyed unless we can get it on safety film."

The film collection brought some notoriety to the university, but not everyone thinks it's worth the cost of saving, Jackson said.

"I don't have any hesitation in saying that people at the university and elsewhere have asked me why should money be used for this. They don't see have valuable this is. It's irreplaceable.

"It's been frustrating not getting the rest of the collection and not having the new building," Jackson said. "We expected a mountain and got a foothill."

But Holderman said projects such as these always take time and progress is usually slower than expected.

"Everything is done slower than I expect; I'm an impatient person," Holderman said. "I wish we had this done years ago, but these things take time."

If the salvation project by the university and the Smithsonian is successful, both will be free to make it available to the public, scholars and for commercial use, said Brian Duff, associate director for external affairs at the Smithsonian.

Duff said once museum officials learned about the film, they decided "this has got to be saved. It would be a tragic thing if this were lost forever."

By putting the clips into manageable segments, such as the aviation footage, maybe more people would get interested in the project, Duff said. He said it is hard to conceive of trying to manage the entire collection.

Holderman and Jackson agreed. "I think this is the opening wedge," Holderman said. "I think the Smithsonian getting behind the project will give us more credibility and will lead to other groups falling in line."

"We hope others will see how valuable this film is and come forward," Jackson said. "I know we can rescue the film. You can find someone somewhere with money to preserve the film. There are 1,500 historic preservation societies who should be interested in some part of the collection."

Meanwhile, small segments of the film can be seen at the university's Movietone News display in the north wing of the first floor of McKissick Museum.

The current display is called "The Tumultuous 30s," and the walls are covered with large photographs from the day.

Among the scenes depicted are people reading newspapers on the death of John Dillinger, fashions of the 30s and sporting events.

The museum has an area for watching short film clips, which seats three and allows the viewer to select a clip by pressing a number on the control box. The clips include 21 choices, including a clip on movie stars, Amelia Earhart, baseball, Joseph P. Kennedy and Clarence Darrow.

It also has a larger area with a movie screen that seats 19. With the press of a button, a viewer can see a 20-minute reel on the news events of 1934.

"From about 1910 to the 1950s this is how the American people saw their leaders, their heroes and their villains," Duff said. "Something must be done to ensure that this film doesn't turn to dust."

Portuguese Villages Anchored To Both The Past And Present

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer

BARCELOS, Portugal (AP) — The towns and villages of the northern provinces of Portugal seem fixed in the distant past, yet move to the rhythm of the late 20th century.

Men thresh wheat with implements the ancient Romans would have recognized while the Portuguese state television broadcasts another episode of "Hill Street Blues."

Women old and young walk the curving mountain roads, carrying their bundles on their heads, African-style, as workers from the sawmills and furniture factories buzz home on their incredibly noisy two-stroke motorbikes.

In the towns and villages throughout the region, solid new houses are going up. But in front of most of them are cars with French license plates, belonging not to tourists but to Portuguese workers who spend 11 months of the year in France and the month of August in the towns of their birth.

The money brought home by the estimated 860,000 Portuguese who left for France because of lack of work in Portugal nourishes the economies of cities like Viana do Castelo, Guimaraes and Braga and livens up the weekly markets in smaller towns like Amarante and Barcelos.

The Thursday market in Barcelos, a town of about 6,000 inhabitants 29 miles south of Viana do Castelo, covers several blocks. Here you can buy everything from elaborately carved wooden yokes and leather harnesses for the oxen teams that still pull plows through the region's hilly fields and vineyards to hand-painted tin oil lamps and watering cans.

Barcelos is known throughout the country as the home of the black-and-red pottery rooster and other brillantly colored figurines whose origins go back to a time when witches and other spirits inhabited the mountain hollows.

The rooster, sort of the unofficial symbol of Portugal, is said to represent the miraculous fowl that saved the life of a pilgrim on his way to the shrine of Santiago de Compostela, miles to the north in Spain.

As the legend goes, the pilgrim was accused of robbery just as he was leaving Barcelos. He was taken before a judge who ordered him hanged. Calling on his patron, St. James, the pilgrim swore his innocence, claiming as proof that the roasted rooster the judge was preparing to eat for lunch would arise and crow.

Of course, it did, and artisans working in small workshops around Barcelos have ever since been turning out thousands of the roosters, from tiny figures that fit in the palm of your hand to some that are taller than a man, with elaborately painted tails.

In neighboring Goncalo, baskets are the big item. In a long, low building, men and women sit on opposite sides of the floor weaving baskets made of slipped willow that grows nearby.

They are some of the 150 members of an artisans' cooperative, the only basket-making co-op in Portugal, situated in the place where it all began.

Anthropologists and historians believe the Romans, who ruled Portugal as Lusitania in the third and second centuries before Christ, introduced the art of basketry at or near Goncalo, a town of 2,000 residents located in a lush valley of the Serra da Estrela, a mountain range 120 miles northeast of Coimbra toward the Spanish border.

From there, the art spread to Madeira, an Atlantic island settled by the Portuguese in the 15th century, and on to Brazil with the Portuguese conquerors.

On this day the volunteer firemen of Goncalo were building a platform in the village square and stringing colored lights for their annual "festa," or festival.

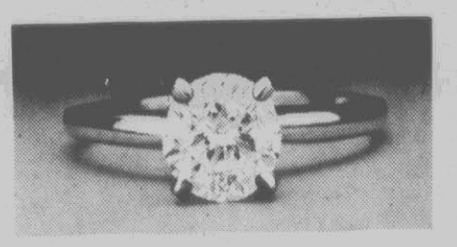
FINE QUALITY DIAMONDS.
A CUT ABOVE THE REST.



Diamonds of fine quality have a sparkle all their own. The more perfectly and precisely the facets are cut on a diamond, the greater the amount of light that passes through it. And the more brilliant the results. But cut is just one of the things to look for when selecting a diamond.
The quality of a diamond also depends on its Color, Clarity and Carat-weight. Together, they're known as the 4C's, the important characteristics that give a diamond its value and rare beauty. And to understand each of the 4C's is to understand the difference between diamonds.
Color refers to the different gradations from exceptional white to yellowish. Clarity is the degree to which a diamond is free of interior and exterior flaws. Finally, there is Carat-weight, the size of the diamond.
Fine quality diamonds simply look better. Let us show you our wide selection of fine quality diamond jewelry in settings designed to enhance the diamond. You'll discover the difference quality makes.

Indian Man Says Government Wants His Daughter's Soul

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

BELLEFONTE, Pa. (AP) — As government officials see it, all they want from 5-year-old Little Bird of the Snow is her Social Security number. But to the child's father, Uncle Sam is after her very soul.

In a struggle that reaches the U.S. Supreme Court this week, Stephen Roy has refused to give the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare his daughter's Social Security number. The number is required if help from the federal-state program of Aid to Families with Dependent Children is to continue.

But Roy, the 29-year-old great-grandson of a chief of the Abnaki Indian tribe, fears that allowing Little Bird's number to be plugged into a computer would harm the girl.

"We figure in giving them this number we'd be cooperating with what we would call a great evil, in that they use this number in their computers," said Roy,. "In using these numbers, they dehumanize people. They rob them of their uniqueness.

"It would take a part of her spirit away, what people normally refer to as a soul. That's what we call their spirit. To stay in good health, to be a strong person, you've got to have a lot of spirit."

For the same reason, the family does not allow photographs to be taken.

The government insists that Social Security numbers are necessary to determine whether welfare applicants are eligible for aid and to prevent fraud and waste.

Government officials say the Roys are a good illustration of how difficult it could be to check on recipients; in 1983, the Social Security computer system listed more than 55,000 people in the United States with the last name Roy and 32 with the name Stephen Roy.

In September 1982, Roy's cash assistance for Little Bird, up to $66 a month, and her medical benefits were halted because he refused to use her Social Security number.

In a lawsuit, Roy and Karen Miller, 26, his common-law wife of 10 years and the girl's mother, said the government, in cutting off assistance for Little Bird, violated their right to freely exercise their religion under the First Amendment.

U.S. District Judge Malcolm Muir ordered the payments reinstated in June 1984, ruling the Social Security requirement was unconstitutional in the case of Little Bird. He said the Roys had made a rare but authentic request for an exemption in the sincere belief their child's spirit could be endangered if the number were used.

The Abnaki, one of several tribes in northern New England linked by the Algonquian languages, believe that all efforts must be made to develop the spirit, which sometimes can lead to powers of healing.

"There's only a few people that are born to that," said Roy. "We don't know if Little Bird is born to that or not. We won't know until she discovers on her own. Until then, we feel that's something we have to protect."

Muir's exemption extends until Little Bird's 16th birthday, when, Roy said, she can decide for herself whether she wants to provide the number.

The government appealed Muir's ruling to the Supreme Court, and oral arguments are scheduled for Jan. 14.

Roy, Ms. Miller and their older daughter, Renee, 7, use Social Security numbers. Roy said he gave his to the government before he realized how numbers can be used. He said his spirit has already been stolen and it would be pointless for him to object now.

Roy said his decision not to provide Little Bird's number to state and federal agencies was influenced by a traditional Abnaki chief he heard speak in 1980 on how technology was stealing the spirit of man.

Roy, who was born in Concord, N.H., had turned back to his roots after a troubled youth.

As a teen-ager in Norfolk, Va., he was part of a gang called "The Family," and was using drugs and drinking alcohol. He was placed in a foster home, didn't like it and took off for Williamsport, Pa., a city he admired for its rustic beauty.

He worked at temporary jobs including shoveling snow, carpentry, plumbing and as a laborer but often has been unemployed since 1980. His benefits for Little Bird went up and down depending on how much money he made.

Roy, searching for a purpose in life, has entered college and is a junior at Pennsylvania State University, just south of this central Pennsylvania town, majoring in public service with a minor in sociology.

"I see it as a means of getting out of the welfare system," he said. "I definitely want to go on and do something better than just sitting back all my life. I'd like to be able to help our people."

Work By Trio Of Artists On View At Gray Gallery

A PARTIAL VIEW . . . of the colored aluminum sculpture by Dennis Cobb is shown here. In another area, smaller black-painted sculpture by Cobb is displayed. A 1962 graduate of East Carolina University, his work is being shown along with that of artist-in-residence Michele Amateau and visiting artist Nade Haley. The exhibition will be on view at Gray Gallery thorugh March 7.

An exhibition of the work of three artists currently on view at Gray Gallery, Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the East Carolina University campus, offers some revealing insights into contemporary art.

Michele Amateau is showing one large painting, "Scaling the Abyss," and a number of smaller works. She has a fine grasp for creating movement, a formal controlled liveliness in the most econominal means. A group of single forms created in simple black charcoal lines shows a tremendous confidence in letting a little say a lot.

Other works are carried out to logical fulfilment of an idea through succinct expressions of a basic idea, image or concept realized in an arrangement of three works on the same theme. These include Maccabian man, Mountain Smoke, Happy Days among other titles. In these, the handling of color effectively supports the compact quality of the designs — grays accented with touches of color. In a few pieces, she has heightened interest through the choice of rice paper with its lovely texture.

The large painting, "Scaling the Abyss." is impressive. Assembled in four panels, the design incorporates seven figures, one a corpse, the other six robustly symbolic, stylized alive figures, all outlined in heavy black lines. Here again, her choice of color adds drama.

Ms. Amateau is currently artist-in-residence in the School of Art, East Carolina University.

Sculptor Dennis Cobb, a 1962 graduate of ECU, is definitely a prolific creative force, an artist who obviously has allowed his imagination to lead him into fashioning a substantial number of provocative works dealing in fantasy.

These are pieces that are sure to stimulate a viewer's imagination too, in an attempt to decipher the artist's intentions — with beginning clues given in his titles. Does mythology of the lesser known sort enter the picture?

Cobb's sculptures are exhibited (most logically) in two separate spaces. In a small, partially walled-off area are the smallest of his work, elaborately worked out pieces in black-painted bronze. Details in these are finely crafted, in some instances amounting almost to metal filigree work. Most combine clusters of detailed figures and curved fingers of metal atop a self-supporting stand.

In the larger presentation of painted aluminum sculptures, some displayed on the wall, others on stands, and one or two self-standing, Cobb has incorporated a mixture of recognizable motifs and not so easily identifiable organic designs.

This group borders on the flamboyant. Though interesting, for me they do not convey the satisfaction nor reveal the artistry of the smaller black bronze pieces.

The third artist, Nade Haley, a visiting artist at ECU for the spring session, is represented by a single work, an installation piece. A carefully crafted architectural piece, it is comprised of four unpainted square columns of plywood enclosing three different examples of gates. Two are in wood, one in metal. The two outer gates are geometrically precise.

The final of the slide-talks to be given in conjunction with this exhibition will be that by Dennis Cobb. His talk will take place at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Jenkins Auditorium. It is free and open to the public.

The exhibition of work by Amateau, Cobb and Haley will end March 7. Viewing hours at Gray Gallery are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday.

Glass Prints Being Shown

CULLOWHEE — "Prints from Glass '86," an exhibit of works by 17 artists from the United States and Europe, will be on display in the Belk Building Gallery at Western Carolina University through March 20.

A free, public reception will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the gallery. It will feature audio-visual presentations by two of the exhibiting artists, Walter Darby Bannard of Rocky Hill, N.J., and Herb Jackson, head of the art department at Davidson College.

All prints have been made with quarter-inch glass plates instead of from the traditional copper or zinc intaglio plates, said William Lidh, WCU art professor and exhibitor.

The exhibition will feature 40 prints, most of them in color. Besides Littleton, Bannard, Jackson and Lidh, the artists exhibiting in "Prints from Glass '86" are William Bernstein; Ronald Bolt of Austria; Thomas Buechner; Lenny Dowhie; Erwin Eisch of West Germany; Albinus Elskus, WCU art department head; Robert Godfrey; David Lewis; Paul MaGuire; Hollis Sigler; Ann Warff of Sweden; Russ Warren; and Sandy Willcox. They have all worked with Harvey Littleton at his Spruce Pine studio.

The exhibition will be on view weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and by appointment. There is no admission charge.

Austria, a nation committed both to strict neutrality and humanitarian principles, has accepted more than 1 million refugees since 1956, mainly from Eastern Europe, and sent most of them to new homes in the West, says National Geographic.

Cards, Signatures In ACC Show

WILSON — A collection of visiting cards, notes and signatures of a number of famous authors is on display in Hackney Library on the Atlantic Christian College campus.

During the 18th and 19th centuries as well as the early part of the 20th century, visiting cards were a flourishing phenomenon. Often called by their French name, "cartes de visite," they were an integral part of the formal etiquette which governed polite society.

At the present time such cards are used mostly by graduating seniors, business acquaintances and as gift enclosu s. Mrs. Longstreet, in her 19th century etiquette book, decreed that a lady must leave one of her cards for each female member of any family visited whether or not they were at home. In addition, she must leave one of her husband's cards for each male in the family. The telephone and changing social customs have made such practices obsolete, but the cards themselves are a nostalgic reminder of that forgotten world.

Represented in the collection are H.L. Mencken, George Bernard Shaw, Thornton Wilder, Marianne Moore, Richard Burton and others. The card of Charles Baudelaire is one of special interest. Although now world famous, the French poet was too poor to have his cards engraved, thus he purchased blank cards and signed each personally. Herman Hesse's card is of special note since it is actually a small reproduction of a watercolor painting by the novelist himself.

In a caustic note concerning the evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson, George Bernard Shaw is in rare form expressing his views of what he called her one woman show. Another note in the collection is from H.L. Mencken in response to a request for a character reference. In the note Mencken mentions his work as editor of the American Mercury, a prestigious journal of the period. Rounding out the collection are signed editions of the works of Marianne Moore and Richard Burton.

These works are a portion of a larger collection of manuscripts, autographs, cards and rare books that has been designated to be given to Atlantic Christian College by Clifford Poole of Chapel Hill, a 1967 alumnus of ACC.

This group from the collection will remain on loan in Hackney Library through April. The public is invited to view the works during the visiting hours which are Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m.-11 p.m.; Friday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., and Sunday, 2-11 p.m.

The festival is designed to provide the opportunity for students to perform in front of an audience and for each other.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black expressed his view of the First Amendment by saying: "I am for it from the first word to the last. I believe it means what it says — and it says: Government shall not abridge freedom of the press or speech; it shall let anybody talk in this country."

To honor the 100th anniversary of Black's birth, the U.S. Postal Service is releasing a new 5-cent regular stamp in the Great Americans Series. This series commemorates nationally renowned educators, politicians, authors, humanitarians and other luminaries.

Hugo LaFayette Black was born in Harlan, Ala., Feb. 27, 1886. He graduated in 1906 from the University of Alabama Law School and was then admitted to the Alabama bar. In his 1926 bid for the U.S. Senate, Black defeated his political opponents by campaigning tirelessly. On Capitol Hill he became the voice of Senate liberals and championed much of President Franklin Roosevelt's "New Deal" legislation.

In 1937, Roosevelt named Black to the Supreme Court. As associate justice, Black became a zealous crusader for First Amendment protection. His illustrious career spanned more than three decades. He died on Sept. 25, 1971, one week after retiring from the Court.

First-day cancellations are available in the usual two methods.

If you prefer to have the USPS affix the stamp, enclose a money order for 22 cents. The envelope will have the new 5-cent Black stamp plus one 17-cent Electric Auto stamp. Send to: Hugo L. Black Stamp, Postmaster, Washington, DC. 20066-99992. The deadline is March 29.

Belize, formerly British Honduras, has issued a set of eight new stamps and a souvenir sheet illustrating women in ethnic attire. The little Central American nation is one of the least populated countries of the world. It has approximately 140,000 people over 8,800 square miles.

The 5-cent stamp depicts an East Indian woman in traditional costume. The 10-cent shows a Mayan woman. The 15-cent pictures a Carifuna woman, of Carib Indians. The 25-cent features a Creole woman, descended from the original English loggers and their African slaves. The 50-cent bears a sketch of a Chinese woman in Oriental dress. They are descendents of indentured laborers brought to Honduras by the British.

The 75-cent illustrates a Lebanese woman in Arab dress. The $1 depicts a European woman in a fancy 19th century costume. The $2 pictures a Latin woman in colorful Mexican-style attire. The $5 souvenir sheets shows all eight of the designs plus an inscription "Greetings From The People of Belize."

This Week's CARPET ONE Special 'Til March 1st

Good taste and subtle distinction are the hallmarks of the true sophisticate. The sophisticate series, with its handsome "nubby" textured, plush appearance has these qualities in abundance.

100% antron extra body, continuous filament yarns, offers a pearl like luster, enhancing the vibrant colors of this series.

The textured plush look has been renounced for its newness retention, and for its ability to shrug off the effects from heavy traffic. Here's a value packed series that will get the job done!

Features:
* 100% Antron Advanced generation Nylon
This nylon fiber has been specially engineered to reduce visible soiling and to enhance texture retention. Carpets of advanced generation nylon look better longer.
* Continuous Filament Nylon
Continuous filament nylon imparts extra bulk and resists pilling and fuzzing for exceptional long wear.
* Continuous Heat Set
Continuous heat setting locks in twist, produces fine pin point end definition and enhances the lustrous finish of the yarn. It also improves wear characteristics by increasing appearance retention and prolonging the durability of the carpet.
* Soil And Stain Resistant
Protected by Scotchgard* Carpet protector. Soil resistant, easily cleaned. Protection that lasts. Integral application during manufacture provides prolonged protection and enhanced carpet performance.
* No More Annoying Shocks
This carpet is manufactured with anti-static treatment designed to retard static electricity thus reducing surface shock and soil attraction.
* 5 Year Wear Warranty

SETTING FOR NEW BOOK — Ken Follett, who first made the best-seller list with 1978's "Eye of the Needle," chose Afghanistan as the setting for his latest spy thriller, "Lie Down with Lions." He disucssed his career during an interview early in February in New York. (AP Laserphoto by Joel Landau)

Book Lover Searches For Rare Books

By PAMELA MORSE
Birmingham Post-Herald

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Jim Reed is looking for a book. Not just any book.

He's looking for a book titled "Die Rich." He has three by that name, but none is the right one.

He's looking for any old copy of "Bid Time Return" by Richard Matheson, and he'd like to find a few first-edition copies of "Girl of the Limberlost" by Gene Stratton-Porter.

Don't wave The New York Times best-seller list in his face. Don't tell him to try B. Dalton or the local library. He's not interested in those books. He wants to find books nobody else can find. Old books, rare books, out-of-print books, paperbacks stashed in an old sailor's foot locker, dusty diaries in dilapidated attics.

As owner, manager and janitor of Reed Books, he provides a service. "We locate hard-to-find and out-of-print books," his business card says. The "we" means him, his answering machine, a home computer and the U.S. Postal Service.

He works out of a small room in his Birmingham home, where books block the fireplace, obscure the double doors and line the walls, from floor to 11-foot ceiling. Only the windows and one entrance are left open.

On the shelves he has a first edition, signed copy of his favorite author's first book, Ray Bradbury's "Dark Carnival." He has a child's Golden Book, "It's Howdy Doody Time," marked 25 cents. He will sell it for about $25. He has old Western pulp magazines that once sold in tobacco shops for a dime, and a huge, leather-bound 1802 book published by Britain's House of Commons that includes a master plan for the London Bridge. He got it for a buck at a library sale.

He has a stack of Mad paperbacks and a shelf filled with textbooks on Southern history in which blacks were depicted as happy-go-lucky slaves. He has sex manuals that are almost as old as the wives tales that fill them, and he owns a rare copy of Abbie Hoffman's "Steal This Book." It's hard to find, Reed says, because so many people did what the title suggests.

Wedged between the shelves in this tiny room, Jim Reed runs his business. It works something like this:

"I let people know that I find books. I take out ads in The New York Times Book Review, Saturday Review, Writer's Digest. ..." The ad gives folks an address where they can write to him.

And folks do. Long boxes holding hundreds of letters threaten to take over the jampacked shelves of his home library.

"The customer comes to me, and I put the word out among collectors and antiquarian book dealers, using the trade publications."

If a collector has the sought-after book, he sends Reed a note, listing the book, the edition, its condition and price.

Reed decides on his price (this is business, after all) and calls the customer. If the customer agrees, he buys the book from the collector and sells it to the customer.

Repeat that process several hundred times a month, and Reed can make a living.

Which is exactly what he intends to do.

For the past four months, Reed has been a full-time book searcher. Before that, he worked as a fund-raiser for Children's Hospital.

"I went into this because I didn't have to know a lot — just love books."

One of the things he likes best about his new occupation is the customers.

"People are so grateful. They have to really want the book by the time they come to me. ... People write long letters, and they tell me why they want the book and how much it means to them — as if it matters."

In just four months of business, his work is paying for itself.

Book News
From Sheppard Memorial Library

By HANSY JONES

Mystery lovers who like their murders with a British accent will enjoy two English mysteries recently added to Sheppard's library collection.

"Oxford Blood" is Antonia Fraser's fifth Jemima Shore more-than-murder mystery. Fans of Jemima will remember her as the beautiful, witty and trendy reporter for London's Megalith TV, and whose program assignments invariably lead her into situations that call for her highly developed sleuthing skills.

In this latest adventure, she is assigned to film a documentary at Oxford University. The program, "Golden Lads and Girls," is to chronicle the exotic lifestyles of a group of over-privileged Oxford undergraduates. Most prominent among the golden kids is Lord Staffron, a wealthy, 22-year-old heir to the former foreign secretary.

Jemima's less than enthusiastic interest in the program comes alive when she discovers there is a mystery about Lord Saffron's birth and bloodline, based on a confession by a dying midwife. The plot continues when an undergraduate is murdered and a series of attempts are made to kill Lord Saffron, including a night-time attack while punting on the Thames. The plot is intriguing, yet easy to follow. The characters are delightful and a little romance enhances the story without getting in the way. Antonia Fraser is the acclaimed author of several historical biographies — she deserves accolades for her mysteries as well.

In a more traditional English countyside setting, Eric Wright tells the story of "Death In the Old County." Toronto Police Inspector Charlie Salter and his wife Annie are vacationing in England and trying to repair their marriage. When a motorcycle crashes into their rented car, they are forced to take shelter in Tokesbury Mallett, a picturesque town where even the police station is centuries old.

Charlie and Annie check into the small Boomewood Hotel where much to their relief they find a good ' d, hot water, a strong reading light and a good Italian dinner. Of course they decide to stay for a few days and enjoy the comforts of the Boomewood. Annie takes in the stately homes while Charlie discovers steeplechasing and the local pub. Nothing could be more idyllic — until someone at the local hotel is murdered.

Though he is particularly eager to keep his police connections secret, Charlie knows that with this act of violence, his tranquil holiday must end. The ensuing tale is well-told, and Charlie Salter is one of the most appealing characters in contemporary crime fiction. He is wise, vulnerable, quietly witty and loving. He is also featured in two previous novels, which are available at the library, "The Night the Gods Smiled" and "Smoke Detector."

Writers To Meet On Tuesday

The second meeting in the month of Feburary of members of the Greenville Writers Club will take place at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Ida Wooten Tripp, 4.5 miles east of Greenville on the Pactolus highway.

Persons wishing to share rides are to meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Krispy Kreme Donut Shop, East 10th Street.

Chapbook 86 Award

LAURINBURG — Skip Anderson of Laurinburg has been given the coveted St. Andrews Memorial Chapbook Award for 1986. The award is sponsored by the Associated Students and the Writer's Program at St. Andrews Presbyterian College in Laurinburg and will be published by the St. Andrews Press.

The prize was created just over a decade ago to honor Alan Bunn and Jeannette McClelland, two undergraduate writers who died recently.

The winning entry is accorded a first printing of a volume of 300 — the author receiving 50 copies in lieu of royalty. Forty copies are sent for review to newspapers and magazines across the nation and the balance are placed on sale to the public.

Anderson's book is titled "The Pointed To." Sir George Bruce, Scotland's Poet Laureate, who taught at St. Andrews in 1985 and under whom Anderson had a chance to study influenced him greatly, Anderson said.

Poet Chuck Sullivan of Charlotte, who has been published in Esquire, Rolling Stone, and many other literary magazines including St. Andrews Review, was judge for this year's contest.

Hawaiians Proud Of Palace

By HELEN ALTONN
Honolulu Star-Bulletin

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaii's people "can be proud" of the Iolani Palace complex after 20 years of work and more than $7 million spent to restore its royal appearance, says James Pavelle, the restoration project director.

"The popularity and awareness of Iolani Palace has broadened considerably," he said in an interview. However, he added, "People have to realize ... that we are still in a developmental stage ... Our services are still limited."

He said "significant growth" is anticipated in the next five years during the 12th phase of work.

Landscaping is being completed now to create a park-like setting for the nation's only royal palace. Plantings have been reintroduced to the 10-acre site that were there during the 1892 monarchy era.

The main problem is locating enough native Hawaiian loulu palms to complete the landscaping theme, Pavelle said. Landscape architects need 24 loulu palms for the historic setting and they're still short eight or 10.

"They've been out on weekends driving around various areas," Pavelle said. "If they see one, they ring the doorbell and ask folks if they would like to sell it."

Aside from the missing palms and a continuous search for original palace furnishings, Pavelle said, "I think we're doing well. I think we can all be proud."

He said visitors to the palace increased from 65,000 in 1983-1984 to 70,700 during the past fiscal year. Admission fees totaled $214,000 last year, compared with $199,000 the previous year.

The historic complex includes Iolani Palace, built in 1882; Iolani Barracks, moved to the palace grounds in 1965 from the state Capitol site, and the bandstand, built as a Coronation Pavilion.

The restoration project is funded by the state and administered by the Friends of Iolani Palace, a non-profit organization. Construction is targeted for completion by 1990, Pavelle said.

The King Street entrance is the last of the four entrances to the grounds to be restored. It was the official entrance for royalty and dignitaries during the monarchy period, Pavelle said.

Four pillars at the entrance are being relocated to their original positions. They were 26 feet apart but the opening has been "choked down to 13 feet and 7 inches," Pavelle said.

Two more pillars will be built at the entrance and it will have restored iron gates used during the monarchy.

It's hoped that the smaller entrances "will begin to restrict some of the traffic in the palace ground," Pavelle said. Only one-way traffic will be allowed when the King Street entrance is reopened. Vehicles will enter there and exit through the side gates.

The entrance project will complete the landscaping program until parking is removed, "which we hope will be in three or four years," Pavelle said.

Some landscaping also will be necessary when the Kanaina Building, between the palace and the state library, is converted to a visitor orientation center. The renovation is scheduled in the next phase of work.

Pavelle said public services will be expanded when the center is developed with an auditorium. Pretour programs and evening adult classses are envisioned, he said.

The palace basement will have gallery spaces when offices are moved to the new center. Long-range plans also include a museum in part of Iolani Barracks for the Royal Guard and the Royal Hawaiian Band.

"Significant growth has to take place," Pavelle said. "We're just in our adolescence."

WCU Europe Tour Slated

CULLOWHEE — Western Carolina University's 1986 International Study Tour Program will focus on Europe this summer, with the resort village of Leysin, Switzerland, as base for the 21-day tour designed to prepare students for the travel, hopitality and outdoor recreation industries.

The program, scheduled for May 12-31, is a component of the annual International Travel Careers Institute, sponsored by the WCU parks and recreation management progam. The institute is a two-summer program that requries 21 semester hours of academic credit and an internship. The institute has taken students to Florida and the Caribbean the last three years.

The study is open to anyone with related interests.

The $1,700 cost includes air fare, transportation in Europe, lodging in hostels and hotels, three meals a day and admission to attractions. It does not include the WCU course costs.

For more information or to register for the 1986 study tour, contact Russel E. Bachert Jr. or Currin Cooley, parks and recreation managment program, Western Carolina University, Cullowhee, 28723, or telephone 704-227-7435.

Kimono Exhibit

RALEIGH — "Kimono: The Outer Garment," an exhibit of the traditional dress of Japan, is on display at the N.C. State University Craft Center Gallery through February 27 and again March 10-28.

Professor John Kelly, NCSU foreign language department, is loaning garments he began collecting in 1982 as a Japan Fellow through the North Carolina Japan Center. A specialist in Spanish and Portuguese, Kelly has long been interested in textiles. Among his collections are American Indian, South American Indian and pan-Asian textiles.

The garments illustrate such design techniques as stenciling, tie-dying, hand-painting, and gold couching embroidery in depicting the elements of the four seasons. Nature abounds on cloth in the form of maple leaves, bamboo, a thousand cranes, flowers, water, butterflies and clouds.

The show is sponsored by the N.C. Japan Center and the Meredith College Fulbright Seminar on Japanese Culture 1985 and is among the activities at NCSU for the Surface Design Association's Southeast Regional Conference in mid-March.

The center is open from 2-10 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays; 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays; and 12:30 to 5:30 p.m. weekends. The center is in the lower level of Thompson, at Baise and Dunn streets, on the NCSU campus. For more details, call 737-2457.

Cigarette Ads

BOSTON (AP) — MBTA officials say cigarette advertisements will no longer be posted in subway cars or stations starting Oct. 1, a loss of $650,000 in annual revenue.

"It's a matter of safety and public health," said Timothy Gens, a spokesman for the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority. "It's against the regulations of the MBTA to be smoking inside the system, and (advertisements) would be promoting smoking when people weren't allowed to."

ECU Summer Tour In Brazil

ECU News Bureau

A 21-day "grand tour" of the South American nation Brazil will be offered by East Carolina University June 25-July 18 for graduate or undergraduate college credit in geography education.

The 10,000-mile air and land excursion features nine stops, including visits to the famed cities, Rio de Janeiro and Brasilia and to other points of interest. Highlights of the tour include large cities in the Amazon jungle region; Salvador, Brazil's colonial capital, founded in 1549; Recife, the "Brazilian Venice," Olinda, settled by the Dutch in the 16th century and recently declared a cultural monument by UNCESCO; Brasilia, a contemporary, planned city, first built in 1955; Sao Paulo, Brazil's economic center, population seven million, and Rio de Janeiro, known as one of the most beautiful cities in the world.

In and around the major cities, the tour will include stops at native markets, museums, ports and rivers, historic restorations, old churches and other attractions.

Brazil, a country of nearly five million square miles and the world's fifth largest nation, encompasses a wide variety of geographical features and cultural traits, said Palmyra Leahy of the East Carolina University geography faculty who will direct the tour. She is a native of Brazil and a specilaist in Latin American geography.

The tour will be open to a limited number of persons, so early registration is advised. Further information is available from "Grand Brazilian Tour," Division of Continuing Education, Erwin Hall, ECU, Greenville.

PCC Writing Classes

In response to a continuing demand, Pitt Community College will offer two creative writing classes, each at a different level, in the upcoming spring session.

Students entering Creative Writing I will register March 3. This class is designed for, but not limited to, beginning writers who want basic writing instruction. The class will offer discussions on techniques such as the fundamentals of characterization, description and narration, with personalized attention given to each individual.

Creative Writing II, with registration to open Thursday, is designed for more experienced writers who wish to study in a seminar situation at a more professional level. This class is open to all who have previously completed the basic creative writing course at PCC, as well as writers who have had similar instruction or a comparable basic background in writing. Critiques offered in this course will be on a more professional level than that of Creative Writing I.

Registration is limited to a maximum of 15 in each class, with registration to be begin at 7 p.m. on each of the two dates. Students will be accepted on a first come, first served basis. Both classes will be taught by Patsy Baker Burkett.

Manuscript

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Public Library paid $75,000 for a manuscript, long thought to have been lost, of Gustav Mahler's Fifth Symphony, the library announced.

Susan T. Sommer, head of the library's music collection, said the manuscript was brought to the United States from Europe after World War II by an employee of C.F. Peters, the company that published the symphony. But it could not be found until recently, she said.

The mansuscript, an early revision of the symphony, was copied by Mahler's wife, Alma, with extensive corrections and notations by the composer himself.

U.N. Review

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Ford Foundation is paying $390,000 for a private committee of U.S. and foreign leaders to review the priorities and problems of the United Nations, a spokesman said.

The committee, which has the support of Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, will hold its first meeting in April and is expected to produce a final report in 1987.

Singapore Farms

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer

SINGAPORE (AP) — Money losing farms on government land are to be eliminated in the tiny island-state of Singapore by 1988 and replaced by high-technology plots of at least five acres in "agro-technology parks."

"Intensive high-tech farming has been proven to maximize output from limited land and manpower," said Lee Yiok Seng, senior parliamentary secretary for national development.

"In some cases production can be increased tenfold. We intend to attain higher productivity through the introduction and application of appropriate technology within our farmlands to produce high value-added and quality products."

High-tech farming includes the use of special soils, chemicals and fertilizers for growing of vegetables and fruits. The breeding of fish, birds and poultry also is to be undertaken with the application of new scientific methods.

Lee told a recent international symposium of veterinary epidemiology and economics that farmland in Singapore, a nation of only 229 square miles, or 146,560 acres overall, will continue to be reduced and used more intensively.

Farmers occupied 24,710 acres 10 years ago compared with 11,614 acres today because of the competing needs of industry, housing and water catchment. Lee said that by 1995 only 3,707 acres would be devoted to agriculture.

Singapore has about 5,000 farmers among its 2.5 million people and 90 percent of its farmland is owned by the government. Farmers whose land is taken will be compensated and many of them likely will opt to join the government's new venture, officials of the Ministry of National Development say.

To get the program started, nonviable small farms on an estimated 1,977 acres of state land are scheduled for redevelopment in the next three years.

"The land will be leased at economic rental in lot sizes of two to five hectares (five to 12 acres) to local farmers and investors as well as multi-national agro-based companies for high-tech farming," Lee said. "The lease on the land will range from 10 to 15 years."

The government will allocate this land for horticulture, including vegetables, orchids and other flowers, as well as for fish and poultry farming. Also included will be feedlot and dairly farming and frog growing.

"We intend to develop the farming areas as agro-technology parks where a mix of high-tech farms will give the necessary ecological balance to achieve a non-pollutive and esthetically pleasing environment," Lee added.

"The farms will serve as production as well as demonstration centers for high-tech farming. In addition, we would like to encourage research and development on tropical agriculture and livestock and fish production within the same farms so that our agro-technology parks will also serve as R and D (research and development) centers for agro-technology development."

Ministry officials said the financial details on the changeover were not yet complete.

Most of the farms will be operated by agro-based companies that likely will be responsible for production, processing and marketing, Lee said. "These companies will also be engaged in R and D and will be in a position to provide agro-technology services to other areas of the tropics."

Lee said Singapore produces more than 85 percent of the pork, ducks, and hen eggs consumed domestically. It also grows 50 percent of its locally needed poultry, 31 percent of its fish and 16 percent of its vegetables.

The government announced in March 1984 that pig farmers had been ordered to phase out their operations because they use too much water, cause too much pollution and occupy too much land.

Singapore plans then to import frozen pork or pigs for slaughter.

New Fish Bait Book Available

RALEIGH — Small bait fish are always hungry for a meal. Often they find their dinner attached to reefs, piles and sunken wrecks. But now there's a new restaurant in town — the fish aggregating device.

As these underwater cones of nylon mesh become fouled with barnacles, they attract small fish and, in turn, may attract larger fish favored by anglers.

Researchers recently tested this new idea in artificial reefs. Sea Grant Marine Advisory Service Director Jim Murray and UNC-Wilmington biologist David Lindquist placed the floating reefs off of piers at Wrightsville Beach. The researchers gathered data for each pier before and after the devices were installed.

Now, they have published their findings in a report, "The Use of Midwater Fish Aggregating Devices to Attract Marine Fish at Two North Carolina Fishing Piers."

For a copy of the report, write UNC Sea Grant. Ask for UNC-SG-WP-85-1. The cost is $2.

Fifth Annual Spectrum

WINSTON-SALEM — The Associated Artists of Winston-Salem and Henley Paper Company announce the Fifth Annual Henley Southeastern Spectrum exhibition at Winston Square in the Milton Rhodes and Associated Artists Galleries beginning May 3.

In 1985,the Henley Southeastern Spectrum brought in 711 entries from 390 artists of which 134 works were selected for exhibition. Over $7,750 in cash and purchase awards were given. The 25 awards to be given this year total $9,425.

Horseshoe crabs, which have remained largely unchanged for 360 million years and now live in along the eastern coasts of Asia and North America, aren't really crabs, says National Geographic World. Their closest relatives are scorpions, spiders and ticks.

8 p.m. At Rose High School

N.C. Symphony Concert Monday

The North Carolina Symphony will perform the second in a series of two subscription concerts Monday at 8 p.m. in the Rose High gymnasium.

Gerhardt Zimmermann will conduct the orchestra. Zimmermann has been conductor of the N.C. Symphony since 1982.

The evening's program will feature the Holst ballet music, "The Perfect Fool;" Richard Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration," and Dvorak's "Symphony No. 9 (The New World Symphony.)"

A limited number of tickets, priced at $7, will be available at the door prior to the performance hour.

Last Thursday, representatives of the Pitt-Greenville chapter of the North Carolina Symphony Society were invited to be panelists at a statewide workshop held in Raleigh. Bonnie Galloway and Peggy Shuping led discussions regarding symphony subscription concerts. Penny Laing led discussions on local concert publicity.

The board of directors of the symphony presented awards to outstanding chapters across the state. The Pitt-Greenville chapter received two awards; certificates of appreciation for "Full House by Subscription" and "Revival of a North Carolina Symphony Chapter." The current Pitt-Greenville chapter was revived in 1984.

Two Million Americans Are Coin Collectors

By CONNOISSEUR
A Hearst Magazine

Some 2 million people in the United States collect coins for fun and-or profit and the number is rising.

American coin-collecting got a big boost from 1975 to 1980, according to an article in the September issue of Connoisseur, when U.S. coins rose in value by 140 percent, further boosted in 1980 by the soaring silver and gold bullion markets.

Prices dropped for the next few years, but recovery began in 1984 and the market is nearly back to its 1980 value.

American interest in coin collecting took off in the 1850s when dealers began holding coin auctions. By 1866, when the American Journal of Numismatics was launched, there were 3,000 collectors.

Even then, it was a jungle. The first issue of the Journal reported:

"Prices have risen a hundredfold and in some cases almost incalculably and unreasonably. Speculation has been rife. In many instances, we regret to say, dishonesty has exhibited itself in its most glaring and disgusting form."

Some dealers had secret ties with the Philadelphia Mint — that continued well into the 20th century — to get restrikes, proofs and issues with hitherto unknown dates. Other dealers, by mistake or deliberately, catalogued counterfeit coins as genuine.

High prices were not paid for an uncirculated piece unless it was of a very early issue.

Coins of certain dates were known to be rare, as were coins in the finest condition. With the publication of Augustus G. Heaton's "Treatise on the Coinage of the United Staes Branch Mints" in the 1890s, the small numbers of coins struck in certain mints became known and premiums were paid for rare mintmarks.

Today, the 1891 Double Eagle with the mintmark "S" for San Francisco is worth $700 in Mint State. One with a "CC" mintmark for Carson City is worth $5,500 because only 5,000 were struck.

It took an immigrant dealer named B. Max Mehl at the turn of the century to bring coin collecting to the millions.

He published the "Star Rare Coin Encyclopedia" and at the peak of his business was handling a million pieces of mail a year. He offered such high prices for the 1913 Indian Head Nickel that people complained streetcars were delayed while conductors searched through their change.

The $20 Double Eagle — first struck in 1850 — has been a favorite with investors. It contains just under an ounce of pure gold and its price ranges from meltdown value to as much as a hundred times more, depending on the coin's rarity and condition.

No collector would touch a badly worn or damaged Double Eagle worth only its meltdown value. A Double Eagle in what the American Numismatic Association calls "Fine" condition is worth 10 to 20 percent over melt value. These coins often are treated as bullion, and one New York dealer sells 200 a week to Chinese restaurant owners who want a safe haven for their profits.

Amateurs should be warned that unscrupulous dealers still exist and, Robin Duthy warned in Connoisseur, the difference between "MS" (mint state) ratings are barely perceptible to the naked eye. If you plan to buy high grade coins, ask the dealer to have them graded by the American Numismatic Association.

Dennis Cobb To Lecture Monday

ECU News Bureau

The East Carolina University School of Art will host a public lecture by sculptor Dennis Cobb of Kinston, Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Jenkins Fine Arts Center.

Cobb's works are currently on view in ECU's Gray Gallery, where they will remain through March 7.

"His work derives from plant and animal forms often with references to the chicken," said Perry Nesbitt, director of Gray Gallery. "Cobb uses devices to disguise the finished piece from its original material, styrofoam."

Cobb is a 1982 graduate of ECU and received a masters in fine arts degree from Louisiana State University.

For more information contact Nesbitt at 757-6336. Gray Gallery is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and until 8 p.m. on Wednesdays.

18th Century Ceramics Show

NEW BERN — The Tryon Palace Restoration and Gardens Complex, in honor of George Washington, will present a special exhibit of 18th century ceramics in the palace reception center. The show, free to the public, opened Feb. 19 and will continue through April 11.

The exhibition will feature fine examples of ceramics from the extensive collection ot the palace complex, and will serve as a brief survey of 18th century English ceramics.

The palace and gardens complex is open Mondays-Saturdays 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays 1:30 to 4 p.m. A two-hour tour of Tryon Palace and Gardens is $6 for adults; $2 for students grades 1-12. The three-hour combination tour including other houses is $9 for adults and $4 for students. The last tours of the day are at 4 p.m.

Dance Theater Of Harlem To Stage Williams' 'Streetcar Named Desire'

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Television dance takes on a new, dramatic dimension in a Dance Theater of Harlem performance of "A Streetcar Named Desire."

The choreography by Valerie Bettis, who first staged the Tennessee Williams' play in 1952 and remounted it for the Dance Theater of Harlem three decades later, wasn't changed or cut for the television film. The work will be broadcast Friday on public television's "Great Performances — Dance in America" series.

"This is something I've been talking about for a long time," said Arthur Mitchell, the company's artistic director. "I always felt 'Streetcar' would adapt itself to TV much more readily than most ballets. It's a narrative work and the way Valerie constructed it, the steps are not the most important thing. It's most important for the dramatic relationships to come out."

The company, with prima ballerina Virginia Johnson performing the role of Blanche DuBois, dances to the score Alex North created for the 1951 movie starring Marlon Brando.

"I think the dancers turn in stunning performances as actors," Mitchell said. "The camera picked it up so beautifully. Everybody who watched an early screening said it was like watching a film."

Filming was done last fall outside Copenhagen, as a co-production of WNET, New York, and Danmarks Radio.

Unlike the stage production, which utilizes only one set, the television performance has a more realistic approach, with sets for a living room, kitchen, Blanche's bedroom, a ballroom and the street.

The one-hour program also includes a pas de deux from "Sylvia," which allows the company to show its classical side, and an ethnic dance called "Bele," Haitian for celebration, which was choreographed by Geoffrey Holder.

Before starting the Dance Theater of Harlem and its ballet school with Karel Shook in 1970, Mitchell had danced with the New York City Ballet since 1956.

When the New York City Ballet held a benefit this year for its School of American Ballet, they asked Mitchell, now 51, to dance his lead role in George Balanchine's "Slaughter on 10th Avenue."

However, Mitchell was out of shape and didn't have time to fine tune his body for the performance.

"You cannot teach about quality and standards and come out and do it badly yourself," he said. "I haven't danced in about 15 years. Most of the 52 people in my company have never seen me dance.

"Mr. Balanchine asked me to come out of retirement 10 years ago to do 'Agon,' when German TV photographed 10 or 12 of his works. I did it. The pain was so excruciating."

The Dance Theater of Harlem has maintained high standards of dance with its diverse classical and contemporary repetoire and has won critical acclaim throughout the world. At its inception, the company was all black "to disprove the theory that blacks couldn't dance classical ballet," Mitchell said. It is now integrated. The school always has been integrated.

The company completed a 10-week European tour and returned last Nov. 19. They immediately went into rehearsal for a U.S. tour early this year, including a stint at Aaron Davis Hall in New York — their first-ever season in Harlem.

"We've had a season at the Metropolitan Opera," said the Harlem-born Mitchell, "but never yet in Harlem.

"Artistically, we're very high now," Mitchell said. "This European tour was really exceptional and we finally did a season in Paris. We've now performed in all the major European capitals. We had Paris at our feet."

All About Skunk Oil

By ROGERS WHITENER

For many years Appalachian folk remedies, like recipes, were passed along from mother to daughter, from neighbor to neighbor, seldom written down, sometimes remembered, sometimes forgotten.

Sometime back Richard McGuire, who lives west of Boone, was generous enough to share a family home remedy with me.

I've been trying to forget it ever since.

You see, it's a rememdy for croup and colds, and it involves the use of skunk oil. Fortunately he was shy of this ingredient at the time, but he was planning to make amends.

"If I live to fall I'm going to have me some more polecat oil," he declared. "My mother always said a family ought never to try to raise a bunch of younguns wihtout some in the house."

Polecat or skunk oil — for the uninitiated — is the rendered fat of this foul-smelling little animal, and in the mountains it has long been used in the treatment of croup and colds.

"When I was a youngun," says Richard, "anytime one of us would come down with croup, my mother would mix up a batch of skunk oil and kerosene and maybe add a little brown sugar for taste. Then she would down whichever one was sick and spoon some of the mixture in him."

But did it actually cure the ailing?

"It mighty well did. They was eight kids in the family and my mother swore by the remedy in treating us. It was 30 years before I even went to a doctor and I ain't been many times since."

Richard is quick to add that it was not skunk oil alone that kept the family well. "There was boneset tea for breaking the measles, mare's milk for the whooping cough, groundhog oil for muscle ailments and chills, pine twigs, poke root, and whiskey for pneumonia fever, and a lot of other home remedies for whatever was ailing us. "Mostly though, we prized polecat oil, for croup was a mighty dangerous thing for a youngun to come down with."

He recalls the time his mother saved the life of a neighbor's child suffering from the ailment.

"That youngun was just plain out a-dying, but my mother built up a hot fire, give him a dose of skunk oil, and rubbed him down with groundhog oil. Then she wrapped him up good in a blanket and baked his feet by the fire. It wasn't long till he was up and around. He sure thought the world of mother after that."

But back to the replenishment of the supply of skunk oil — how was it to be handled?

"Well, generally the time to get a skunk is in the fall when he's good and fat. Then you get more oil. He's as pore as a whip-poor-will in August. I use my dogs and when they get him bayed, I usually hit him over the head with a stick."

But what about the smell?

"Never did bother me when I hunted them regular. I used to smell like a polecat myself from season to season. I expect it would get to me now, but this fall when I've killed two or three it won't bother me."

Is there any way to kill them before they can release their scent?

"Well, you might get one in a fall-trap now and them if you bait it with a rat or some other meat, but knocking them in the head with a stick is easier. Now I used to watch my dad sneak up and grab 'em by the tail. He'd give a quick jerk and get the tail to the ground before the animal could skunk. I never was able to get on to the trick of it, though."

Readers are invited to send folk materials to "Folkways and Folk-Speech," Department of English, Appalachian State University, Boone, N.C. 28602.

Bizarre Puzzles

THE BEETLE OF APHRODITE. By Michael Howell & Peter Ford. Random House. 347 Pages. $17.95.

This book chronicles some of the most bizarre puzzles in medical history.

Almost invariably they defeated many of the world's greatest scientific minds — only to be solved by some tiny, seemingly meaningless clue which obliquely popped into the head of a single man or woman.

This makes fascinating reading. Recounted in a way understandable to anyone, the stories are even more gripping than much fiction. Among them:

— Who or what caused the near-fatal poisoning of Clare Boothe Luce while she was ambassador to Italy?

— What was really the killing "ghost disease" of New Guinea?

— Why did members of a failed balloon expedition to the North Pole perish when they had adequate shelter and food to await rescue? — How could a case of unrequited love cost the lives of secretaries in a British office?

— How could two things of ordinary, everyday life kill scores of people in England, defying massive efforts to trace the simple causes?

Anyone with a yen for true-life mysteries should find this book most rewarding.

To Be Presented Four Days

Life In A Dance Studio Theme Of ECU Dance Show

"A day in the life of a New York City dance studio" — that's the concept behind a varied program of modern, tap, ballet and jazz dance to be presented by the East Carolina Dance Theatre, Friday and Saturday, and continuing March 3 and 4, at 8:15 p.m., in McGinnis Theatre on the East Carolina University campus.

"I came upon the idea of a NYC studio set long before the film 'White Nights,' but that will be the look," said Mavis Ray, a Broadway veteran who serves as one of the Dance Theatre choreographers.

More than 50 dancers are involved in the production which opens with a morning dance class and continues into an audition for a new dance company. The dancers are put through a "grab-bag" of styles featuring contemporary jazz, ballet, African, East Indian and a punk rock number performed by a trio of tap dancers.

"We've tried to create a realistic picture of what actually happens in the New York dance world and to that end, decided to put the choreographers on stage, too, actually playing themselves," Miss Ray said.

As the day progresses in the studio, the dancers begin rehearsing several numbers from the popular Broadway musical, "42nd Street," which includes precision tap, a soft shoe trio and a strut complete with hats and canes to "Lullaby of Broadway."

Rehearsals continue with the cast performing a variety of dance styles featuring ballet, modern and an ensemble jazz piece with 12 dancers working in front of mirrors to a montage of Marvin Hamlish compositions.

Act III in the studio finds the dancers in full costume performing: an elaborate ballet to Prokofiev's score of "Romeo and Juliet;" a humorous modern piece where seven dancers frolic with huge silver mylar pillows; and an energetic up-beat celebration of "Fourties swing," the era of the jitterbug, jive, "hep cats", and zoot suits.

The Dance Theatre production has been in rehearsal for four months. "The idea came about to involve students with a story line to tie the production all together," Miss Ray said. "We hope to involve the audience with all the dancers who actually appear as themselves throughout the evening; called by their own names."

Dialogue, an unusual element in most dance concerts, was written by Miss Ray, and gives insight into the private thoughts of a professional dancer in the big city.

Most of the students in the East Carolina Dance Theatre are dance majors in the deparment of theatre arts. Some dancers have professional careers in mind after graduation — to follow the footsteps of ECU graduates who are now appearing on Broadway in "Cats" and "La Cage Aux Folles," "42nd Street," and with the famed Rockettes who perform daily in New York's Radio Music Hall.

Reserved seat tickets are on sale at McGinnis Theatre box office, at Fifth and Eastern streets. The Box Office is open daily fom 10 a.m to 4 p.m. and reservations may also be made by calling 757-6390.

Awarded Grant For Additional Programs

RALEIGH — The Black Folk Heritage Tour — the North Carolina Arts Council's concert showcasing traditions of the state's African-American culture — is returning for a second series of performances beginning this month. The show was so highly acclaimed that the National Endowment for the Arts awarded a $22,000 grant for nine additional performances.

The tour brings together several of the state's outstanding black folk artists to present traditional art forms such as spirituals, gospel songs, blues, Br'er Rabbit tales, buckdancing and breakdancing.

The group has already made appearances in Maxton and Tarboro and is scheduled to appear in Yanceyville, Oxford, Greenville, Asheville, Lenoir, Greensboro and Goldsboro.

George Holt, director of the N.C. Arts Council's Folklife Section, which coordinates the tour, said the traditional art forms incorporated in the tour "have interpreted and celebrated the black experience over the generations and continue to inspire the black community today."

The program is narrated by Chuck Davis, a Raleigh a native who leads the African-American Dance Ensemble, a fixture of the American Dance Festival in Durham. Davis is a student of traditional West African dance styles and his troupe opens the show with a display of African ceremonial dances.

Following this performance, Davis proceeds to explore the history of the black experience in North Carolina through music, dance and song.

The Badgett Sisters of Yanceyville sing old-time spirituals without musical accompaniment. A lively segment of blues and buckdancing follows, featuring John Holeman and Quentin Holloway of Durham and Algia Mae Hinton of Zebulon.

Holeman and Holloway have played the blues throughout the world under the sponsorship of the U.S. Information Agency. Ms. Hinton has been featured recently in an American folk music concert at Carnegie Hall. One of the Badgett Sisters, Sister Celestar Sellers, then takes the stage to spin one of her favorite Br'er Rabbit tales. The host community also gets a chance to spotlight local breakdancing talent.

'Samson' Next Opera On Broadcast Saturday

NEW BERN — George Frideric Handel's "Samson" will have its Metropolitan Opera broadcast premiere Saturday at 2 p.m. over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Radio Network. It will be heard locally over radio stations WTEB-FM, New Bern and WRRF-AM, Washington.

Jon Vickers will sing the title role, with Leona Mitchell as Dalila, Kiri Te Kanawa as the Philistine Woman and the Israelite Woman, Sandra Walker, in her Met broadcast debut as Micah, John Macurdy as Manoah and Paul Plishka as Harapha. Julius Rudel will conduct.

Handel's muscial setting of the Samson and Dalila story is based on the dramatic poem "Samson Agonistes" by John Milton. It is only the second Handel work to be performed by the Metropolitan, the first having been "Rinaldo" during the company's centennial season, 1983-84. Its presence in the repertory is a reflection of the world-wide rediscovery and popularity of Handel's stage works and it contains two of Handel's most famous solos, "Total Eclipse," sung by Vickers and "Let the Bright Seraphim," sung by Ms. Te Kanawa.

Talent Search Underway For Young Performers

WINSTON-SALEM — The Winston-Salem Symphony is holding a talent search for young performers to appear with the symphony in the final concert of its Concerts for Kids series.

Entitled "By Kids for Kids," the concert is designed to showcase some of North Carolina's outstanding young musicians by giving them the opportunity to perform with a full-scale, professional symphony orchestra.

The concert will take place in the Stevens Center in downtown Winston-Salem Sunday, April 13 at 3 p.m., but arrangements for preliminary auditions are already in progress.

The first round of auditions is scheduled for Saturday, March 8 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Crawford Auditorium at the North Carolina School of the Arts. The competition is open to young instrumentalists and vocalists aged 6 to 16 who will be asked to present a piece suitable for performance with an orchestra. There will be two performance categories: one for children aged 6 to 10, and one for children aged 11 to 16.

Winners will be chosen by Peter Perret, conductor and music director of the Winston-Salem Symphony, and winners will be required to attend all orchestral rehearsals in preparation for the April 13 concert.

Anyone wishing to enter the competition should contact Aija Tobin, talent search chairman, at the Winston-Salem Symphony, 752-1035. Entrants will need to obtain an application form and ensure that the piece they have selected has orchestral accompaniment available.

Donna Dease Faculty Recital Thursday

DONNA DEASE . . . a new member of the East Carolina School of Music faculty, will be in recital at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The recital is free and open to the public.

East Carolina University School of Music faculty members Donna Dease, mezzo-contralto, and John B. O'Brien, piano accompanist, will appear in recital at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

Works selected for the recital include Robert Schumann's "Frauenliebe und Leben," songs by Samuel Barber and by Duparc, and "Zwei Gesaenge" by Johannes Brahms for voice, cello and piano, featuring faculty cellist Selma Gokcen.

Ms. Dease's performance credits are outstanding. Since joining the ECU School of Music faculty in the fall of 1984, she has performed as soloist with orchestras and choral societies throughout the country.

Most recently, she performed the role of Elizabeth in a production of "The Crucible" by Robert Ward, presented in the Reynolds Industries Theatre.

She received degrees from Campbell University and the University of Illinois. She has performed with the North Carolina Symphony, Charlotte Symphony Orchestra, Raleigh Oratorio Society, Philadelphia Orchestra and Rundfunk-Sinfonie-Orchester, Trier, Germany. She was the 1974 Metropolitan Opera Auditions District Winner and award winner in 1981 in state and regional levels of the young artist competition of the National Association of Teachers and Singing.

O'Brien received his bachelor's and master's degree from the University of Southern California, and is currently an official accompanist of Music Teachers National Association.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Composers Symposium

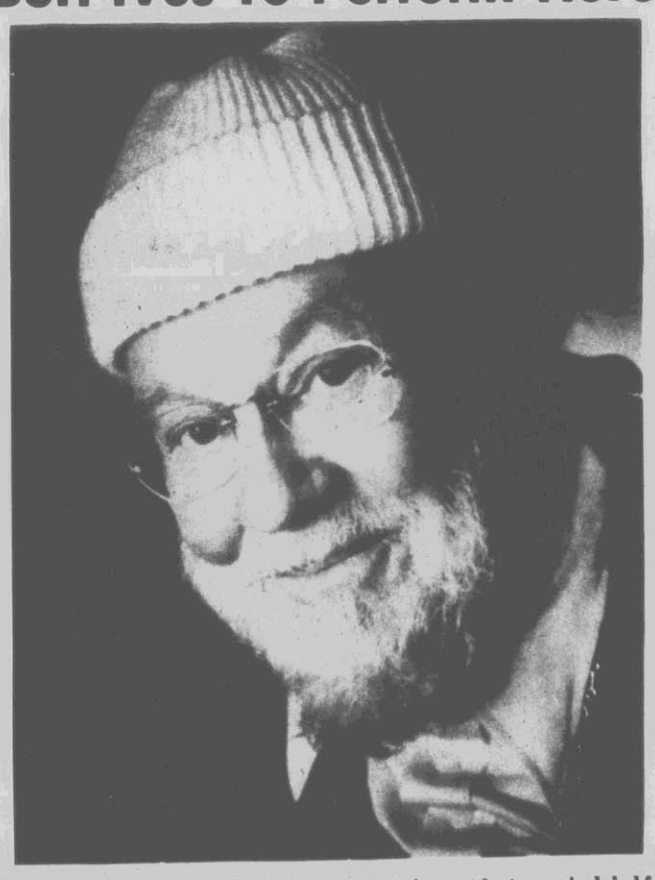
Composers from various colleges and universities throughout North Carolina will gather at Salem College Friday and Saturday for the 10th annual North Carolina Composers' Symposium.

New music by 10 composers and their students will be presented as well as a concert by professional composers each evening at 8:15. A symposium of student compositions will be held Saturday at 1 p.m. All events will take place in Shirley Recital Hall in the Salem Fine Arts Center.

Composers taking part in the symposium are Douglas Borwick, Ann Listokin and Margaret Sandresky, all of Salem College; Roger Hannay of UNC-Chapel Hill; David Kechley of UNC-Wilmington; Dan Locklair of Wake Forest University; Seth Dworkin of N.C. A&T University; Michael Daugherty of Coastal Carolina Community College; and Frank McCarty of UNC-Greensboro. Student composers from these schools and the N.C. School of the Arts will participate.

The concerts are open and free to the public.

Burl Ives To Perform Here



FOLK SINGER — Burl Ives is the second entertainment feature scheduled for the 1986-87 Artists Series coming to East Carolina University during 1986-87. He will be performing at the renovated Wright Auditorium on Nov. 6. The entire series will include, in additon to Ives, pianist Alicia DeLarocha, The Czech Philharmonic, the Suzuki Talent Education Tour, and a program with both the North Carolina and the ECU Symphonies in performance. Tickets for the series are now available at the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, telephone 757-6611.

Celebrating Third Anniversary

ECU News Bureau

The East Carolina University Gospel Choir will celebrate its third anniversary with a public concert set for 3 p.m. today in Hendrix Theatre.

Other local and college choirs will perform also during the concert.

The ECU Gospel Choir has toured the east coast and frequently travels to other parts of North Carolina. The group placed second out of 150 choirs competing in the recent McDonald's Gospelfest.

Gospel choir members from this area include:

Savannah Barrett, Barry Dixon, Ruben Hyman, Kevin Michael and Shenandoah Turnage, Greenville; Evon Keys and Regina Keys, Jamesville; Michael Purvis, Robersonville, and Kip Clemmons and Sabrina Williams, Williamston.

All Are Winners

WINSTON-SALEM — All five students for the North Carolina School of the Arts who competed in the 1986 National Arts Recognition and Talent Search (ARTS) in Miami have been named semifinalists.

The students, all high school seniors, their talent area and home towns are: Robert B. Conn, dance, Little Rock, Ark.; John L. Root, music, Winston-Salem; Jon Matthew Lovette, visual arts, Clemson, S.C.; Jennifer K. Echols, music, Pembroke Pines, Fla., and Juli A. Hansen, music, Wilmington.

Each will receive an award certificate and a check for $1,500 from the National Foundation for Advancement in the Arts which conducts the National Arts Recognition and Talent Search.

In addition, any who become finalists at a later date will each receive $3,000.

Arden Trio Concert On Tuesday

With the cancellation of the Rogeri Trio and the Quartetto Beethoven di Roma, the East Carolina University Chamber Festival, cosponsored by the Department of University Unions and the ECU School of Music, has scheduled a performance of the Arden Trio. The concert will be presented at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Hendrix Theater.

The members of the Arden Trio — pianist Thomas Schmidt, violinist Suzanne Ornstein and cellist Clay Ruede — met as graduate students at Yale School of Music in 1975, and they will perform a varied program at the concert.

Individually, they have participated in nearly every facet of America's musical life — from solo recitals and concerto appearances to jazz recordings and performances with major orchestras. They have also been involved in recording projects featuring music by composers ranging from Stephen Soundheim to Philip Glass.

The trio made its debut in New York in 1981, and since that time, has toured coast to coast.

Tickets for the performance are available from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Season ticket holders may use their ticket from the Rogeri Trio or the Quartetto Beethoven di Roma concerts for admission to the Arden Trio.

Looking ahead to next year, the Island of Jersey in the English Channel is planning to issue a special stamp commemorting the 60th birthday of Queen Elizabeth II. Of course, we can expect a vast issuance of stamps honoring that occasion by Commonwealth nations in various parts of the world.

The Jersey stamp will be a one-pound value featuring the recent portrait of the monarch by Karsh. It is scheduled for issuance April 21.

PERFORMING TUESDAY . . . The Arden Trio will perform at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Hendrix Theater on the East Carolina University campus. Their appearance is part of the ECU Chamber Festival cosponsored by the Department of University Unions and the ECU School of Music. Tickets are $4 for adults. Advance tickets for youths high school age and younger are available at $2 from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Union, telephone 7575-6611. Tickets at the door are $4 for all ages. Marie Smith Wallace Dance Scholarship Established

ECU News Bureau

A $500 per year scholarship for outstanding dance students has been established by Marie Smith Wallace of Greenville, for many years head of a local dance studio and longtime supporter of the dance program in ECU's Department of Theater Arts.

The Marie Wallace Scholarship in Dance will be awarded to a student selected by the dance faculty. Recipients will be dance majors of superior talent who exhibit professional potential as a teacher or performer, said Edgar Loessin, chairperson of the ECU theater arts department.

In addition to teaching and operating her dance school in Greenville, Mrs. Wallace's career included study in Virginia and New York, organizing and operating cotillion club dances for adults and young people in the area, hosting a TV dance progam during the 1950's and founding "Dansorama-by-the-Sea," a Wrightsville Beach-based intensive dance convention. The annual event has drawn students from as far away as Texas and New York to study wih 20 professional teachers during its week of sessions.

Now retired, Mrs. Wallace continues to make her home in Greenville.

The first award of the Wallace dance scholarship will be made this fall.

Free Performance By German Group

RALEIGH — The Little German Band and Dancers will present a free performance Friday at 8 pm. at the North Carolina Museum of Art, 2110 Blue Ridge Blvd., Raleigh.

Based in the Raleigh area, the group of about 72 members is the largest costumed German band folk dance group in the United States and the only authentic Bavarian folk group in the southeast.

About 15 members will take part in the Friday celebration. The band performs polkas, waltzes and marches. The dancers specialize in Bavarian foot-slapping and other folk dances. Also included is cowbell ringing, alphorn playing and folksongs.

For more details, call 833-1935.

Polish Director's Aim — Autonomous Theater Language

By MATTHEW C. VITA
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Despite his 70 years Tadeusz Kantor, Poland's best-known theater director, is a man of constant motion.

"My idea of theater has been from the beginning an idea that was striving to create an autonomous language of theater," he says, punctuating his words with sharp thrusts of his large, expressive hands. "Autonomous means universal, which would be — like painting and music — understandable for everyone."

Long considered the country's most innovative director, Kantor, who is a painter as well, returned to Poland earlier this month following a limited engagement of his work, "Let the Artist's Die," at La Mama, a home for experimental theater in New York.

The play, a collage of Kantor's vision of art, life and death, stresses images over dialogue and "events" over narrative.

It is painting as theater, and Kantor wields the brush. Kantor is on stage throughout each performance, a director-as-character or, as he puts it, a "nearly devine element" overseeing the events of a world he alone has inspired.

Kantor sat hunched over and brooding on a chair at one side of the stage, his face grimaced as if in agony as he watched the action unfold with his avant-garde Cricot 2 theater troupe.

Suddenly, he was out of his seat, barking instructions to an actor. Then he marched in step with a group of tin soldiers.

He is the puppeteer and the characters his marionettes. No two performances are said to be the same. His technique and pioneering use of props and mannequins as characters in a play are studied in drama schools throughout the West, especially in the United States, France and Italy.

"The source of my art is surrealism," Kantor said in an interview. "Surrealists discovered that the main motivating power of acting in art is accident."

One of the characters in "Let the Artists Die" is Marshal Jozef Pilsudski, the leader of free Poland after World War I, who is revered today by Poles who oppose the communist government as a symbol of their own fight for freedom. Kantor vehemently rejects attaching this role to him in the play.

"If there are people who want to misunderstand it, it can be misunderstood politically," he said, raising his voice to a near shout and raking his hands through his unkempt black hair. "I'm against pieces of art which have a political aspect. I'm absolutely against it because politics is a temporary thing, extremely unstable, and art is not political propaganda."

In "Let the Artists Die," Pilsudski is "anti-political, anti-historical," Kantor said, a figure taken from his childhood memory who appears on stage as a 6-year-old boy in a pram and a woman sitting on the skeleton of a horse.

Kantor has an explosive temper and has been known to walk out of interviews, especially when pressed on the relationship between politics and his art.

"Political problems destroy art," Kantor said. "An artist in my opinion is on the margin of society and can judge society only by being beyond it."

He says one of the greatest faults of critics in the West is stereotyping all East European art as political.

"If you read the American critics, they are divided into two groups," Kantor said. "It's either done from the point of view of art, and these are the best ones, or it's an attempt at political interpretation, of adding contexts which are not there."

Kantor's taste for the avant-garde began during World War II when, as a young painter in Krakow, he joined an underground theater group that worked in the traditions of the German Bauhaus and Russian constructivism.

After the war, he refused to work in the social realist style required during the Stalinist period. He instead took advantage of the political thaw that swept Eastern Europe after Stalin's death and opened the Cricot 2 theater in Krakow in 1955 as a continuation of the pre-war Cricot 1 in which he participated as a young artist.

"Let the Artists Die" completes a trilogy with his two earlier, critically-acclaimed plays: "The Dead Class" (1975) and "Wielpole Wielpole" (1980).

Juarez Saloon

By DORALISA PILARTE
Associated Press Writer

JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The Kentucky Club, a longtime favorite border saloon, is nowhere near the Lexington stables, and the only horsy set to hang out here was one led by Pancho Villa.

Or so the story goes.

"Pancho Villa liked the ladies and he drank a lot of coffee, but he never went to saloons," said Ignacio Esparza, who is writing a history of this border city. "He didn't smoke or drink, not even beer."

But the story, fed to tourists who have been making the obligatory stop at this famous border cantina for decades, is a plausible one.

The dimly lit saloon on Avenida Juarez, a few blocks from one of the bridges over the Rio Grande leading into El Paso, Texas, lends itself to romantic flights of fancy.

It's easy to picture a mustachioed Villa riding into town in a cloud of dust, strolling past the frosted glass double doors of The Kentucky Club and ordering a shot of tequila before his next ambush of the federales.

But although Villa, who was himself ambushed and killed in 1923, never graced The Kentucky Club, other famous people have, said bar owner Francisco "Pancho" Montes, 72. Among them were movie stars John Wayne, who would drop in whenever he was passing through, and Gilbert Roland, a Juarez native whose lengthy film career started with silent movies.

Another notable regular was Clark Gable, said Montes. Gable, a captain during World War II stationed at Fort Bliss on the outskirts of El Paso, would come to the bar and sip Scotch with Hollywood friends.

Montes bought the saloon from an Armenian in 1933 and named it Sloppy Joe's, after a bar by the same name in Havana, Cuba, which he had visited.

"But after the war, Sloppy Joe's sounded too rough, so I changed it to The Kentucky Club," Montes said.

Never in the horse racing business, Montes owned a baseball team and promoted boxing in Juarez for many years. He thought of the new name after a trip to Kentucky to take part in a baseball owners' meeting.

"There was also a hotel upstairs by the same name," Montes said. "It burned down but the sign remained. So we took advantage of that and renamed it."

Throughout the years, The Kentucky Club has maintained a reputation for a good-time bar, but Montes also has strived to keep it respectable.

Customers have arrived throughout the years to see familiar sights, such as the massive hand-carved, solid-oak backbar imported from New Orleans so long ago nobody can remember when.

The backbar frames two 5-foot-wide mirrors, whose silver coating is flaking, showing the mirrors' age and the cool adobe wall behind.

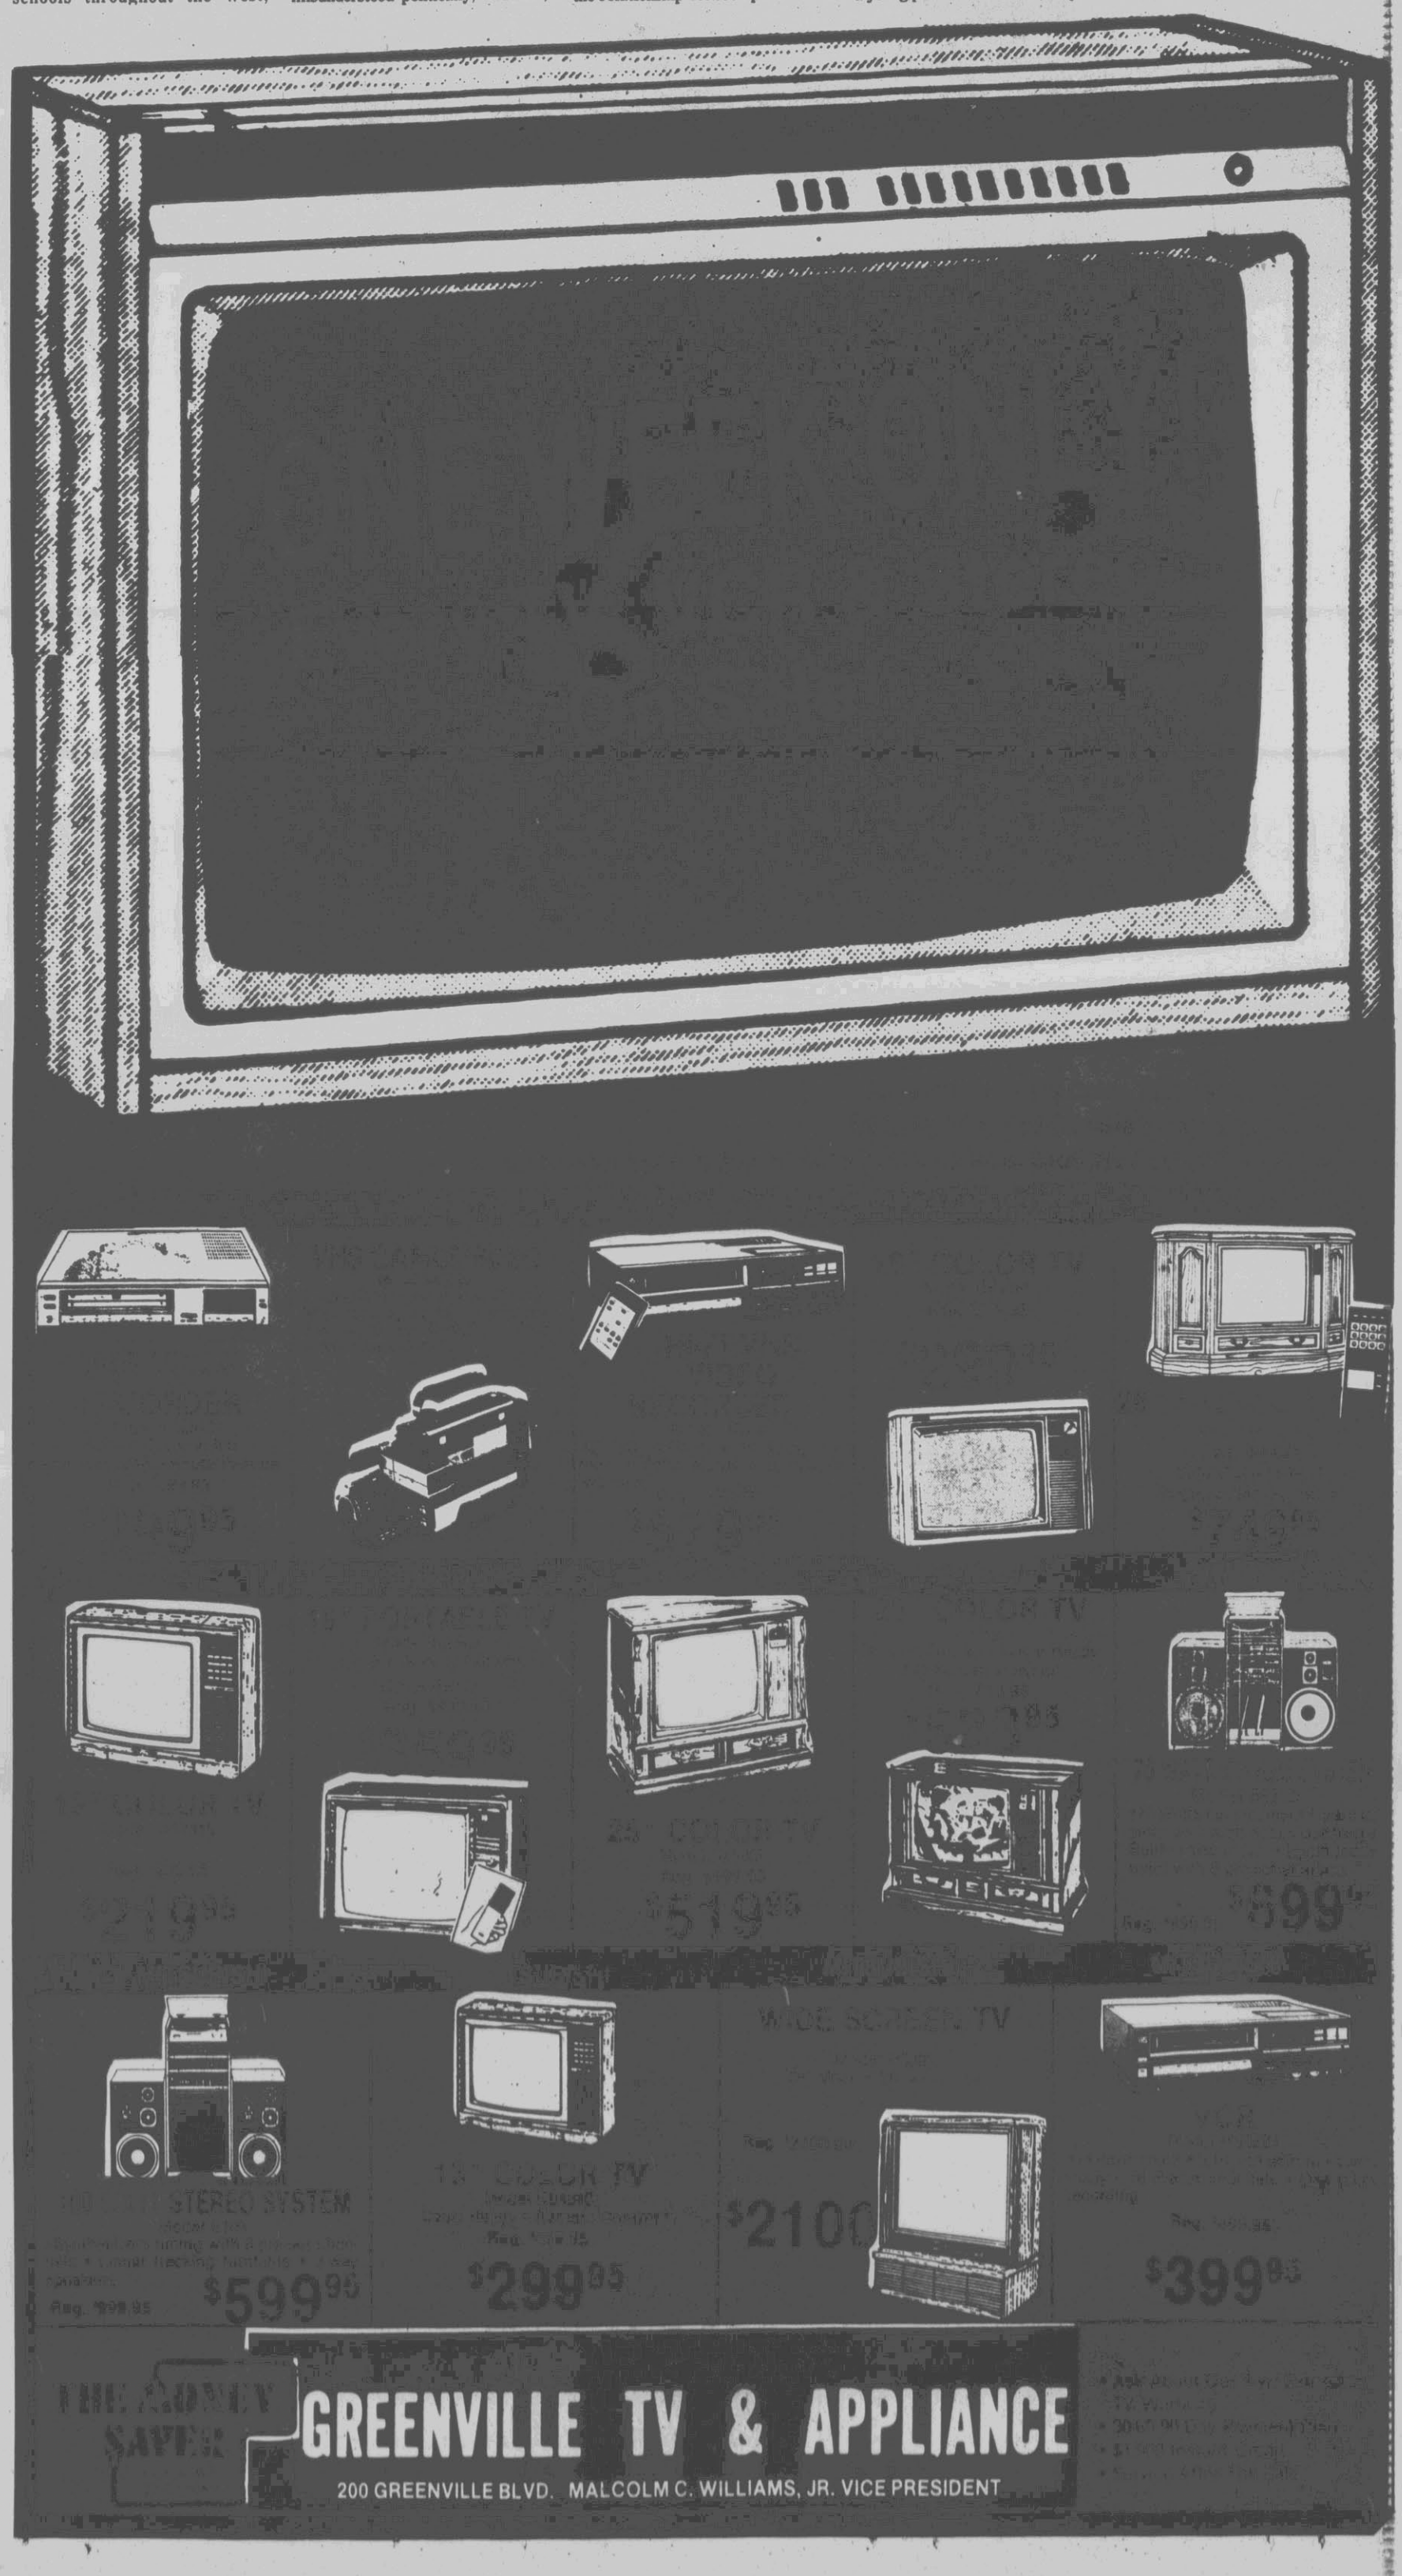
The photos cover the bald spots on the mirrors and serve to remind Hernandez that his hair used to cover all of his head — not just the sides and back — and that many years ago it was all black before the white strands started creeping in.

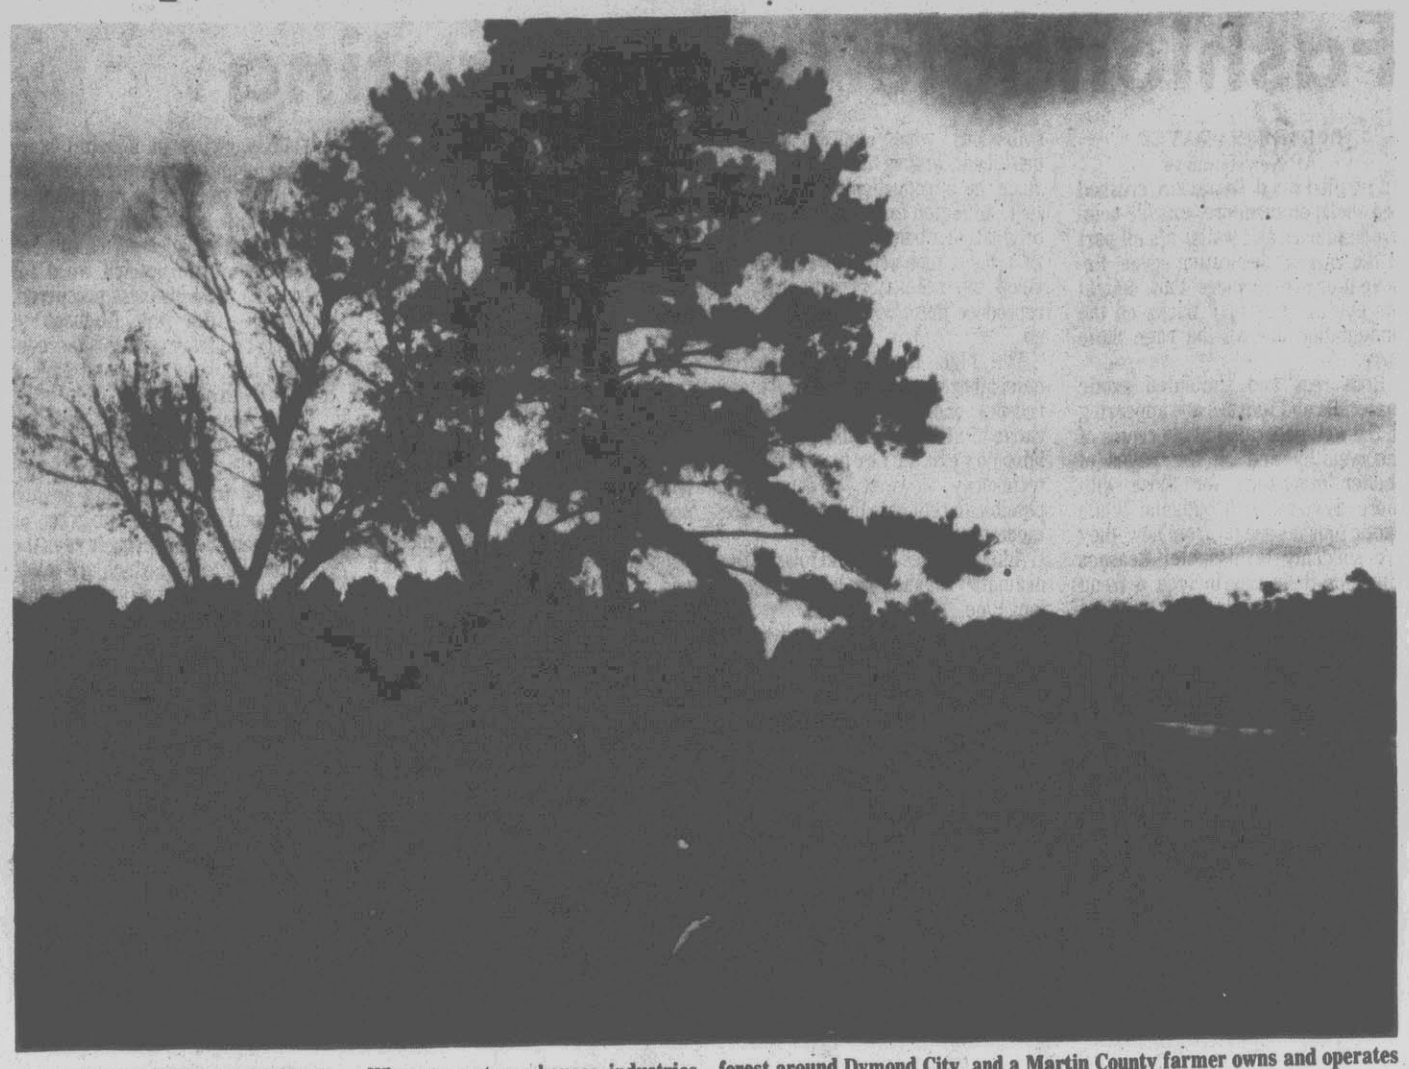
Hernandez has worked at The Kentucky Club for 39 years, hired as a young boy off the street, where he was selling bubble gum and cigars to tourists.

"He started washing dishes and he's worked himself up to being one of the best bartenders around," Montes said. "People just like the way he is, the way he treats them."

Hernandez oversees the operation of the bar, where the walls are lined with black and white photos of boxers Montes has promoted



Dymond City, Martin County's Ghost Town



THE DYMOND CITY SITE TODAY . . . Where once stores, houses, industries and a train car shed once stood, today there is only a clearing with a few young trees along a dirt road. The Weyerhauser Company controls the extensive forest around Dymond City, and a Martin County farmer owns and operates scattered areas of farmland.

A FEW SIGNS . . . indicating the site of the J&W trams that once ran from Jamesville to Washington through Dymond City are still in place. The J&W railroad was the lifeline of the "raw gem of Martin County" that flourished for a while, then died.

A century ago, Dymond City was a bustling new frontier-type town. Today, nothing remains of the place that once drew visitors from far away

WILLIAMSTON — How can a town, seemingly destined to become the largest and most impressive in a county, become established, prosper and then die, all within a period of 50 years? Martin County residents have asked that question many times.

In the 1870s and 1880s, Dymond City was a thriving and industrious little frontier-type town. It held a special fascination for visitors from places as far distant as Sweden and Ireland.

The town was accessible to visitors and new residents principally by way of the J&W Railroad, which was itself the central attraction of the town and the main force behind the town's creation.

But, despite its rapid growth, within 50 years after the town was founded, Dymond City was a name only, a place inhabited by rattlesnakes, deer and bear, with only the remains of a few buildings left for awhile before being finally obliterated altogether.

Dymond City, Martin County's "gem in the raw," has became no more than a ghost town name.

(The site is within a large tract of forest about eight miles south of Jamesville east of N.C. 171. Road entrances to the site are not marked and access is only by permission of officials of Weyerhaeuser Company.)

A Look At Its History

To better understand the town and the remarkable breed of people who once lived in this deep-in-the-woods town in eastern North Carolina, it is necessary to look at the history of the town as it once was instead of attempting to observe what few traces are left behind today.

In fact, nothing tangible remains — except the indication of a tramway having been in the area, evidenced by a few signs bearing the name J&W Spur. Even the sidewalks are buried beneath inches of sand.

Dymond City, sometimes spelled "Dimond," began to materialize just after the Civil War. Vast timberlands located between the Roanoke River and the Tar River attracted a group of English investors who decided to build a town halfway between the two rivers. Those were the days when rivers were still the major method of tranport for goods.

The town planned by the investors was to be connected to Jamesville in Martin County on the Roanoke River, and to Washington in Beaufort County at the conjunction of the Tar and Pamlico rivers. This was to be achieved by building a railroad connecting Dymond City with both river port outlets.

At that time, a newspaper account of the plan set forth the premise that such a town as this, strategically placed in each Southern state, would do far more for the reconstruction of the South than any amount of legislation could possibly create.

It appeared that the "blueprints" for Dymond City seemed to be a promising forerunner idea of an entirely new South, rising from the aftermath of the bitter and destructive Civil War.

A patent from John Gray Blount conveyed the land to the J&W Co., whose president was Richard Waring. The town's first name was "Waring," after the company president's name, but was later changed to Dymond City in honor of an Englishman who was one of the bondholders.

Established In 1870.

After its establishment in 1870, the town quickly prospered and grew. In only three years, it had acquired the prestige of being the most cosmopolitan and exciting of all of Martin County's small towns. Built specifically by the J&W Co. as the focal place for the railroad and the logging business, Dymond City soon established a name for itself and easily attracted new residents.

Construction of the railroad itself was no easy feat, for it ran from Dymond City to Jamesville through six miles of dense swamp and forest, with a second link to Washington.

It was said that Francis Lightfoot, one of the investors and also the company surveyor, "sighted a torch held by a man high" in what is known as the "six-mile pines" several miles away. "When the 21-mile railway line was finally completed in 1877, a large celebration and an excursion on the rails was held. Passengers were charged 50 cents for a round-trip ticket."

The railroad prospered, and as a result, so did the new settlement at Dymond City.

Two Sections Of Town

The town was divided into two areas: a black section called Jacktown and the white section, Dymond City. Jacktown was located on the east side of the railroad tracks. Blacks made up the majority of the population, and most of these were locals who settled in the area after the Civil War.

A 32-room hotel became a stopping place for visitors from as far away as England, Ireland and the northern "Yankee" states. It was also a favorite spot for hunters to stop for a rest. Those who remember the old hotel describe it as looking "just like Kitty's Saloon on 'Gunsmoke.'" The hotel was destroyed by fire in 1930.

Legend has it that though Dymond City was a small new town, it boasted the most active bordello to be found between Charleston and Norfolk.

Diverse Businesses

Dymond City was comprised of residences and businesses. There was a hotel, a general store, blacksmith shop, saw mill, flour and grist mills, wheelwright, carpenters, cattle dealers, painters and farmers. The town also had a railroad shop that could house two or three cars at one time.

One of the more famous homes in the area was "Megessa," the homeplace of Abram Fisher, a manager of J&W Railroad. Megessa was a large, rambling two-story house with several wings and a large porch. It soon became popular as a hospitable place to be visited by those coming to Dymond City from as far away as Europe.

Financed By Englishmen

The railroad and the lumber company were financed by English capital and directed by Englishmen.

When etablished in 1870, the company operated one lumber mill with a 40-horsepower steam engine and one machine. The mill, which was in operation 10 months out of the year, employed 30 men and paid them annual wages collectively totaling $5,000.

The next move was the investment of $250,000 capital in a second mill where shingles were made by hand. This plant also began operation in 1870 and provided work for a force of 25 men. Another business was a flour and grist mill which opened with an investment of $1,000.

The shingle industry in Dymond City is particularly interesting because it has been said that George Washington's home, Mount Vernon, was reroofed from shingles made in Dymond City.

It is widely rumored that Dymond City was the home of the formula for Octogon Soap, which was eventually sold to the Colgate-Palmolive Co. However, there is no evidence that a soap factory existed here or that an individual concocted the formula for the well-known soap.

Some Schooling

Public schools did not exist at Dymond City. But Abram Fisher's daughter taught some local students. Records she kept show that in 1889 she was paid $6 for her efforts. There was also a school for children in the black area which operated from 1885 until 1893.

By 1890, Dymond City had reached its peak, and very soon after, its decline set in.

Ten years later, at the turn of the century, the town was all but deserted. No one knows why. There is no substantial documentation about the settlement's decline. Nobody today can say for sure what happened, and those who say they can, are only making an educated guess.

Most people agree that the reckless cutting of trees probably played the primary role in the demise of Dymond City. The booming timber industry died out, and with the timber gone, the town could not survive. Some people left because of health reasons and fire destroyed many of the homes and businesses.

Most of the Quakers who had come to live in Dymond City went north to Pennsylvania, where their faith was more strongly established. As the town began to die, so did the railroad.

Determined Man

He purchased a farm in the Dymond City area and proceeded to establish himself in the community with his knack for good business. Soon he became the general manager of the railroad, and was responsible for the completion of tracks, despite many seemingly unsurmountable obstacles.

It has been reported that on one occasion, he walked 14-plus miles to Williamston to deliver a legal paper to an attorney. When he reached his destination, he found that he had left the paper at home. Nearly everyone who lives in the area today can recall Fisher's purported response — "I'll just step right back home and fetch it."

One lone grave near the farm, now located somewhere in the forest, is all the remaining evidence that the Fisher family had lived in Dymond City.

Again A Wilderness

Today, the site where Dymond City once stood is a place of rambling dirt roads connecting large tracts of timberland controlled by Weyerhaeuser Corp. Even the latter-day hunting lodge that was built on the site of the old hotel has fallen victim to fire.

A deep drainage canal now makes it almost impossible to reach the site of the long-gone big general store.

There are no sounds here any more of the voices of people working in a rough frontier town, nor the whistle of trains coming to Dymond City on tracks taking passengers and products to the world outside the dense forest.

In this year of 1986, periodically there are sounds of logging equipment and the roar of big log trucks carrying loads of freshly cut trees to the Weyerhauser plant on the Roanoke River a few miles distant.

And in the farm cultivation season, one hears occasionally the motors of heavy farm machinery belonging to Seth Bridgeman Perry. Perry owns and farms the scattered places of cleared land in the area.

All traces of buildings in Dymond City have disappeared, and even the railroad tracks have been taken up.

During the hunting season, the area becomes active again as hunters with their pickup trucks, C.B. radios and firearms turn out to seek the area's rich game.

On a quiet day, one may catch an unexpected glimpse of bear feeding near the fields or crossing one of the logging roads, see deer leaping through the undergrowth, or feel inclined to give wide berth to a large rattler traveling across a dirt path.

Standing alone in the quietness, it is hard to believe that such a prosperous, active place as Dymond City actuallv ever existed here.

(SOURCES: Historical information in this article is taken from two primary sources: Linda M. Taylor's paper about Dymond City, "The Making Of A Community," and "A History of Martin County," collected and published by the Martin County Historical Society.)

A NETWORK . . . of dirt paths and lanes, some broad, some narrow, criss-cross the forest land in the Dymond City area. Along these lanes, hunters in season bring alive again the sounds of humans, and at times logging equipment noises fill the air. At other times, the only sign of life is an occasional bear, deer or large rattler crossing the paths.

Exotic Finishes Have Become Fashionable In Decorating

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Petrified wood, sharkskin, crushed pen shells on furniture, marble veining on fabrics and walls: it's all part of the current decorating scene. Believe-it-or-not surfaces that delight the eye as they play tricks on the imagination are all the rage these days.

Both real and simulated exotic materials and finishes are appearing in the well-decorated living rooms of the wealthy and on the pages of shelter magazines for those with more down-to-earth budgets. While exotic finishes are far from new, they are suddenly fashionable. Reasons cited for their rise include a trend toward more ornamented surfaces and the growing popularity of formal and traditional styles.

Painted finishes are also being used on walls and furniture by do-it-yourselfers. As a result, paint manufacturers are beginning to produce finishing kits, and retailers have begun offering the necessary glazes and oil-based paints in greater profusion.

Christopher Adlington, design director for Lee Jofa Fabrics, noted that the firm's two "Marbles" fabric collections which imitate marble have been among its most popular since the introduction of the first in 1981. Adlington found the hand-made originals at a trade fair in England in 1979, but it took several years to develop the necessary technology to reproduce them acceptably, he added.

The high degree of expensive hand-labor needed to produce these finishes once priced them out of range of almost everybody. Today's improved screen printing technology, however, has made it possible to replicate the look at more modest prices.

Adlington sees the trend toward the dramatic finishes as lasting for a long time.

"There has always been a terrific interest in trompe l'oeil and faux effects," he said. "After all, they are the ultimate illusion and are totally intriguing and fascinating."

Do-it-yourself is an important aspect of the new interest in illusionary effects. Leslie Anne Sacks, a textile designer for Lee Jofa, recently took up the art of faux finishing herself. She learned how to imitate marble, bricks and the sky with clouds in it in paint and special glazes at the Finishing School, Great Neck, N.Y.

Each faux finish has a different set of requirements, she said. She plans to use one formula to create a console in the foyer of her home. Eventually, she hopes to translate the techniques she has learned to textiles and artwork.

Although new kits are coming onto the market to help amateurs, she says everything you need is already available. She uses oil-based alkyd paint and a variety of glazes straight from well-equipped paint stores to provide the necessary color. She applies it with brushes, Q tips, a piece of plastic, newspaper or even a corn pad, in one instance.

Those who don't want to do it themselves will find a growing number of specialists who can create an illusionary finish to order in the home.

Or they may decide to purchase furniture in a painted special finish. Those who seek the real thing will find it exists, but it is pricey. Karl Springer, the man who made sharkskin-covered accent furniture famous, says business has never been better. Springer began turning out the pieces as a byproduct from his hobby of bookbinding.

While working in a retail store decorating department, he saw the opportunity to launch a new business making and selling small jewelry boxes and other accessories covered in shagreen (the uptown word for sharkskin). The business prospered, especially after the Duchess of Windsor bought a small shagreen-covered telephone table and gave it in quantity to her friends.

Today, his chic clientele is found all over the world and they (or their decorators) willingly part with $13,000 for four chairs and a card table in petrified wood, shagreen or crushed pen shells. Springer says the price for the tables, which are made in the Far East, is really reasonable. "If you tried to buy the labor in the United States, a table would cost $50,000."

Making them involves slicing the material, then fitting the pieces together like a jigsaw puzzle, gluing them down and then sanding and polishing the top.

Springer says it's his trade secret as to where he finds the exotic materials and the workers.

"It's taken me 20 years to get everything right and I'm not about to share my secrets," he says.

On The House

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT: A protective hand cream for do-it-yourselfers.

Manufacturer's claim — That this product is designed to protect the hands and nails from dirt, grease, grime and paint by putting it on before beginning a project ... that it forms an invisible protective shield that not only keeps grease and stains from getting into the skin and under the nails but enables users to get a firm grip on the objects they are handling ... that, after completing a project, the cream is washed off with soap and water ... and that it is non-toxic and non-flammable.

Manufacturer's claim — That this sander is like that used by professionals, but weighs only three pounds ... that it has a one-handed palm grip and delivers 13,000 orbits per minute ... that its compact design makes it easy to get into tight spaces while offering flush sanding on three sides ... that it has a 1.8 amp direct-drive motor with no gearing to lose power ... that spring-type clamps provide for quick paper changes and firm retention of quarter-sheet sandpaper ... and that its 8-foot cord prevents the plug from catching on the edges of large panels.

Manufacturer's claim — That this pull is made of wood and attached directly to the bottom of any standard window shade ... that it will prevent the shade from flapping out of control and uncoiling the spring inside the roller ... that, because of their weight and the fact they are turned on lathes into carefully balanced shapes, they insure the shades will hang straight and fully extended ... that they come in a wide variety of shapes, sizes and colors ... and that they are made of ash or rock maple, the hardest native American woods.

Manufacturer's claim — That this new color is a perfect match for the popular double-glazed terratone windows used in the contemporary house construction market and for use with window replacements in home remodeling projects ... that the caulk can be used outside and inside ... that it works well in caulking guns, can be cleaned with water and remains flexible in temperatures from zero to 180 degrees Fahrenheit ... and it dries in minutes and cures completely overnight.

Manufacturer's claim — That this tank can be mounted on existing toilet bowls and uses between 7 and 10 quarts of water compared with conventional North American gravity-flow tanks that use between 14 to 24 quarts ... that it replaces the conventional china tank of the conventional tank-and-bowl combination ... that installation can be made by a handyman with a wrench and screwdriver, with no necessity for compressors or electrical hookups.

(The hand cream is manufactured by Borden Inc., 180 East Broad St., Columbus, OH 43215; the sander by Skil Corp., 4801 W. Peterson Ave., Chicago, IL 60646; the shade pull by Collector's Workshop, P.O. Box 27, Dobbs Ferry, NY 10522; the bronze caulk by United Gilsonite Laboratories, P.O. Box 70, Scranton, PA 18501; and the toilet tank by Water Control International, 2820-224 West Maple Road, Troy MI 48084.)

Q. — We have an old house with plumbing that generally is in good condition. Recently, however, there has been a leak from just under the handle of the cold water faucet. It does not leak all the time, only when the water is turned on. Is there a simple way the leak can be halted?

A. — Your description of the kind of leak makes it almost certain the nut under the handle, called a packing nut, needs attention. Usually you can see the packing nut: in which case turn it clockwise gently until it appears to be tight, but do not overdo the amount of pressure exerted. If the nut is not visible, it is under some kind of decorative metal. Remove the decoration and go ahead with the tightening. Most of the time this is all that is necessary to halt that kind of leak. But if the leak persists, it means the packing under the nut is no longer doing its job. Loosen the nut so you can dig out the packing with an awl or something similar. The packing looks like the string used to tie small packages. It can be purchased in a hardware store or home supply center. Replace the old packing, tighten the nut, and the job will be done. One word of caution. In any work of this kind, you can avoid marring the fixture by placing some kind of tape over the jaws of the wrench or the nut which is to be turned.

Q. — We have some reason to suspect termites may be at work on one part of our house. One member of our family thinks they are only flying ants. Is there any way to tell the difference?

A. — The principle difference between the two is that termites have stubby bodies just as wide at the top as the bottom. Flying ants have kind of hourglass figures, with very tiny waists. Take an awl or similar tool and stick it into the wood where you think the termites have been at work. Wood eaten on the inside by termites will permit the awl to go in easily. But you shouldn't take any chances of making a wrong diagnosis. Have an exterminator make an analysis.

Q. — I plan on building two bedrooms in our attic. I also want to add a lavatory. Will it be less expensive if the lavatory is placed over the main bathroom downstairs?

A. — The answer to your question is yes, since less piping will be required. But your use of the word lavatory is interesting. At one time, a lavatory meant merely a sink in a bathroom. Soon it began to be used for the room in which the bathroom sink was located. These days, it is used almost interchangeably to mean either of those or the bathroom itself — if the bathroom is small.

How To Read Tires

By BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Can you read your tires? Do your eyes glaze over when a sales rep suggests new 60 series tires, perhaps a P22560R14 instead of your old F78-14?

Is your tire pressure really important, or just another nit in a world already loaded with too many things to think about?

If you answered "No," "Yes," "I don't know," you're a typical driver. And you're putting yourself at unnecessary risk every time you drive your car, according to the March issue of Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

Your tires are one of the most important — and least understood — parts of your car. Yet, a few minutes devoted to tire basics now and another few minutes each month spent checking your tires will save you hundreds of dollars, improve your car's ride and handling, and perhaps prevent a nasty accident.

There are three kinds of tires — bias, bias belted and radial. The terms refer to how various layers, or plies, of material are stacked inside the tire. A bias tire (the cheapest) has two or four layers of material such as polyester, with cords running diagonally across the tire. A belted bias tire has an extra belt of fabric running completely around the tire under the tread layer. Belted bias tires are often mid-priced and have better wear and traction qualities than bias — and are usually a better buy in the long run.

Radial tires are quite different. The body plies of a radial run at a 90-degree angle across the tire. Then from one to three belts, usually made of a steel cord, wrap the tire. A steel belt doesn't make the tire flat-proof, but does make the tread more rigid, which reduces wiggle and increases mileage. Radials also improve your car's handling. They are usually more costly, but last longer.

Although it's best to have all four tires the same, you can have radials on the rear wheels and bias or bias belted on the front. Never mix types on the same axle (except for a temporary spare) or put radials on the front only; that causes odd handling and can lead to an accident.

Snow and all-weather tires come in all three types. They have the words "mud and snow" or "ms" on the sidewall and have a special tread. All-weather tires will generally get you through all but the heaviest snow and muck and can be used year-round.

Here are some tips on tire care:

— Make sure valve caps are in place. If one is missing, replace it now.

Q. What are some plants that will attract butterflies?

A. Plants with flowers that attract butterflies include butterfly-weed (Asclepias tuberosa), butterfly bush (Buddleia davidii), abelia, sedums, annual and perennial phloxes, thrift (Phlox subulata), lantana, stock, marigolds, chives, purple coneflower, coreopsis, dianthus and pinks, verbena, goldenrod, joe-pye weed and native asters. The following plants provide food for the caterpillars of one or more species of butterflies: wild indigo or baptisia, clovers, Queen Anne's lace, parsley, tulip poplar, milkweeds, sweet bay, sassafras, pawpaw, alfalfa, spicebush (Lindera benzoin), native asters, thistles, passionflower, violets, elms, willows, wild cherry, mistletoe, plantain and burdock.

Q. When will "Almanac Gardener" return?

A. "Almanac Gardener" returns to public television on Tuesday, March 25 at 7:30 p.m. Each show is reaired on Saturdays at 4:30 p.m. The show will run through June 21.

Q. What kind of tree paint is best?

A. The use of tree paint and wound dressing is no longer recommended. Research has proven that wound dressings and tree paint do not prevent decay, discourage insects from entering the wound, or in any way help the tree

Public Notices

NORTH CAROLINA ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT COMMISSION

NOTICE OF HEARING TO CONSIDER REGULATIONS FOR PEAT MINING AND AMENDMENTS TO THE NPDES PERMIT REGULATIONS

Notice is herby given of a public hearing to be held by the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development on behalf of the Environmental Management Commission concerning adoption of regulations for peat mining. The proposed regulations would be effective on July 1, 1986.

PURPOSE: To consider amending Section 15 NCAC 2H .0100 by adopting (A) a provision that states the federal requirement that an applicant for any NPDES permit has the burden of assuring compliance with the regulations; and (B) a rule specifying criteria, requirements, and policies for water pollution control for peat mines. In order to evaluate all water related impacts of peat mining, comments will also be accepted on the environmental assessment reports prepared by the two companies now proposing to mine peat.

DATE: Thursday, March 20, 1986, at 7:00 P.M.

LOCATION: Mattamuskeet School Gymnasium, on Highway 262 seven miles east of Swanquarter, North Carolina.

COMMENT PROCEDURE: All persons interested in this matter are invited to attend. Comments, statements, data, and other information may be submitted in writing prior to, during or within 30 days after the hearing or may be presented orally at the hearing. Statements may be limited to 3 minutes at the discretion of the hearing officer. Submission of written copies of oral presentations is encouraged.

AUTHORITY: N.C.G.S. 143-214.1, 143-215.3 (a) (1)

INFORMATION: Further explanations and details of the proposed regulations may be obtained by writing or calling: Boyd DeVane, Division of Environmental Management, P.O. Box 27687, Raleigh, North Carolina, 27611, (919) 733-5083.

Copies of the environmental assessments and proposed regulations are available for study at the libraries for Hyde, Dare, Washington, Tyrrell, Pamlico, Craven, Carteret, Beaufort and Pitt Counties; at the Washington Regional Office of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, 1424

ED ROSE stands for the past. The Pitt County courthouse is a three-story building of the most representative phase of the Neo-Classical Revival style. Designed by the architectural firm of Milburn and Heister, designers of eleven North Carolina county courthouses. Ed said, "if we forget our past there is no future". The American flag represents a can do spirit of our past. Our public officials should be giving us leadership and solutions, instead of problems. The Clerk of Court is our county judge of probate, with jurisdiction over probate of wills and estate administration. The clerk is our public protector of those who can no longer speak. The estate case load in Pitt County before the clerk has been increasing year after year, this needs to be turned around as a trend. Ed will focus new attention on the administration of estates for the benefit of heirs. Let us be proud of our courthouse. Dear friends, I will see you all next Sunday in the Personals. Send a small tax deductible contribution. Sponsored by Ed Rose, Democrat for Clerk of Superior Court, P.O. Box 8384, Greenville, NC.

No Laughing Matter

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — When one of its hyenas developed a toothache, the Memphis Zoo called Dr. G.A. McCarty, whose usual patients don't have jaws capable of snapping a Cape buffalo's thigh bone.

"To be honest with you, I thought of a hyena as a smaller creature," said the dentist as he examined the drugged, 250-pound female Thursday. "Don't give her my address."

Zoo Director Charles Wilson said the hyena developed an infection when a penny tossed by a visitor became wedged between two teeth.

"Just like a human, the hyena developed peridontal disease" after the coin was pried from her teeth, said McCarty.

In the zoo's clinic, McCarty went to work with hammer and chisel on the sedated beast, whose jaws were propped open with instruments in case the drug wore off and the hyena objected to the treatment.

Pulling the infected tooth took more than an hour and McCarty broke a chisel in the process. The dentist said his patient was doing fine but he might have to make a second zoo call because another tooth looks bad.

"And that one is about three times the size of the other," McCarty said.

GOREN BRIDGE

By CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

1983 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—My partner and I have frequent discussions about how best to get into the auction after the opponents have opened the bidding with one no trump. What do you recommend and why? — A.R., Buffalo, N.Y.

A.—We are old fashioned enough to believe there is nothing wrong with a tried and true method: an overcall of two spades shows spades; two hearts shows hearts; two diamonds shows that suit; and the same goes for two clubs. It is easy to remember and can cause problems for those who are geared to defend against all sorts of conventional overcalls.

At the same time, we appreciate the arguments in favor of some two-suited method of overcalling. When your opponent opens one no trump, he holds close to half the deck himself, so chances are that any overcall you make is more likely to be based on distributional values than high-card strength. Under those circumstances, an overcall that shows two suits at once has much to recommend it.

The simplest method of two-suited overcalls is Landy: an overcall of two clubs shows at least nine cards, and probably ten, in the major suits. It's major drawback is that that particular combination does not come up all that often.

More effective and not too difficult to remember or play is Astro, named after its inventors Paul Allinger, Roger Stern and Larry Rosler. An overcall of two clubs promises and anchor suit of hearts and a minor suit; two diamonds indicates spades and another suit.

If the overcaller's partner wants to know which is his partner's second suit, he bids two no trump to ask his partner to name it. Usually, the anchor suit will be at least five cards long, so the overcaller's partner can sign off in that suit with a three-card holding.

With only a doubleton in the anchor suit and a weakish hand, responder bids the in-between suit, i.e., one no trump-two clubs (showing hearts and a minor) -pass-two diamonds. Now the Astro bidder can offer two hearts if he has a five-card suit.

No matter which of these methods you use, an overcall of two no trump is always unusual, showing the minor suits. If you had the values to bid two no trump naturally, you would have doubled on no trump!

Q.—What is best: to lead the ace from ace-king, or the king? — J.C., St. Petersburg, Fla.

A.—Experts have spent hundreds of pages arguing the merits of one over the other. Personally, we think there is little to choose between the two methods. Play whichever you feel most comfortable with.

'Blood & Orchids' Battles 'Crossings'

By Robert DiMatteo

CBS, who took on NBC in one recent Battle of the Miniseries ("Sins" vs. "Peter the Great"), now offers "Blood & Orchids" (Feb. 23, 24) in competition against ABC's adaptation of Danielle Steel's "Crossings" (Feb. 23, 24, 25). One is tempted to say: May the best trash win.

Actually, Blood & Orchids is a cut above the usual fare. Set in Hawaii in the 1930s, the drama manages to be steamy and atmospheric while probing the issue of prejudice against native Hawaiians by the island's white establishment. Jane Alexander stars as a powerful socialite who encourages her daughter, a rape victim, to claim that she was assaulted by four Hawaiian youths. In fact, the girl was attacked by the Navy lieutenant with whom she was having an affair.

Kris Kristofferson co-stars as the "loner" Honolulu police detective investigating the case. The strong cast includes Jose Ferrer as a crusty old criminal lawyer, Susan Blakely as the Kristofferson character's former girlfriend, and, in a bit of casting that should interest literature fans, the reclusive author J.D. Salinger's son Matt as the offending Naval officer.

Crossings comes to us with the "Dynasty" imprimatur, its executive producers being Aaron Spelling and Douglas S. Cramer. Not surprisingly, this tale of the passionate love affair between a "dashing steel magnate" (Lee Horsley) and the wife of a French ambassador (Cheryl Ladd), set against the backdrop of the turbulent World War II period, ladles on the glamour and the soupy emotions. It's the perfect movie to watch with a box of chocolates at your side — a high-calorie wallow.

Our anxiety about the nuclear age is tapped one more time in NBC's The Fifth Missile (Feb. 23), a briskly paced suspense drama that pivots on a top-secret drill, aboard an American nuclear Trident submarine, that goes dangerously out of control. David Soul and Robert Conrad star as the two commanders who discover the potentially catastrophic situation.

Streisand Waits 20 Years To Hit No. 1

By E.A. Vare

Barbra Streisand set a longevity record when her "Broadway Album" reached No. 1 on the charts. It was 21 years and three months after her first No. 1 LP: "People," back in 1964. Miss Streisand broke the record set previously by Frank Sinatra, whose "Strangers in the Night" (1966) went No. 1 precisely 20 years and four months after "The Voice of Frank Sinatra" (1946). Third place is held by Paul McCartney — if you start counting with his work in the Beatles. "Meet the Beatles" topped the chart 18 years and four months before "Tug of War."

The semilegendary Faces will (almost absolutely, maybe positively) reunite for a benefit concert this spring, with proceeds going to research toward cures for multiple sclerosis and AIDS. The one-time concert event — expected to be simulcast over MTV — would feature original Faces Rod Stewart, Ron Wood and Kenney Jones. Duran Duran's John Taylor has been named as bass-playing substitute for band founder Ronnie Lane, who suffers from MS.

That Time Again

Prime-time yawns come our way next month when ABC airs the 58th Annual Academy Awards on Monday, March 24. Robin Williams is the first celebrity to be named a co-host, and Gene Kelly and Michael J. Fox will be award presenters. The Oscar presentation, an event whose tediousness can only be eclipsed by a State of the Union address, will be broadcast live from the Los Angeles Music Center.

Carl Weathers has never had a rocky career. The successful film actor (the "Rocky" quartet) tackles his first TV series when he stars as a tough detective in "Fortune Dane," airing Saturday, March 1 on ABC.

'Wonderful World' Returns To Video

By Martin Levine

ABC's new "Disney Sunday Movie" has brought the world of Walt Disney back to the premier night of family TV viewing, but what of the original program, "The Wonderful World of Disney"? Well, Disney Home Video, perhaps in an attempt to capitalize on the publicity of its new series, is releasing the first 10 volumes in what's expected to become a rather lengthy series of "Wonderful World of Disney" programs.

Each tape ($49.95, suggested retail) contains two full-length features and includes on-camera introductions by Disney himself. Among the highlights: "Adventure in Colorland/Mathmagic Land," "The Yellowstone Cubs" and "Flash, the Teenage Otter," "Call It Courage" and "The Legend of the Boy and the Eagle." For most of us, the tapes will bring back some fond memories of a different era.

OUR GANG — One of the best juvenile series of all time was "The Little Rascals." Spanky, Buckwheat and the gang have become mainstays of American folklore (and helped boost the career of comedian Eddie Murphy). Four compilations of "Little Rascals" episodes are now available at a special winter promotion price of $29.95 each from Republic Pictures Home Video.

The promotion is scheduled to run through March 31. The four tapes, "Little Rascals on Parade," "Best of the Little Rascals" and "Little Rascals Comedy Classics, Volumes I and II," contain six episodes each, including some of the all-time classics that are not frequently aired on TV. One added bonus: All the episodes on tape are presented uncut, unlike the edited versions we see on TV.

ALL FOR ONE — Back in 1974, Michael York, Oliver Reed and Richard Chamberlain teamed up in a whimsical adaptation of Alexander Dumas' "The Three Musketeers." The movie was such a hit (deservedly so), that the following year York and Reed were back, this time with Raquel Welch as a love interest, in "The Four Musketeers."

Both are now available on home video (USA Home Video, $29.95 each, suggested retail). Reed is superb as the epitome of French worldliness, while York is hot-blooded youth personified. Miss Welch puts in a surprisingly good tragicomic performance. You may want to buy both.

Nuclear Reactions

Melt-down mania returns with the made-for-TV movie "Acceptable Risks," which will air on ABC this season. The film, a dramatic tale of the effects of a deadly chemical-plant leak in an American community, stars Cicely Tyson and Brian Dennehy.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Brolin is reserved about acting on TV

By Frank Lovece

Pigeons. James Brolin wanted a burst of them to open an outdoor cafe scene. And though he'd already directed enough episodes of "Hotel" to know what he wanted, the show's crew wouldn't budge.

James Brolin

"TV crews fight you all the way," maintains the soft-spoken Brolin. "Movies are different; you're expected to comb for new ideas and subtleties. But TV people don't put out that extra little bit. In this case," he recalls, "they said, 'It's a pain to find pigeons. They'll make noises and ruin the shots.' Finally, I had to say, 'Damn it! I want some pigeons and I want them by two o'clock!'" Brolin sighs. "So then," he adds, "you're one of those irate actor-directors."

Brolin's frustration stems partly from the fact that despite starring in "Hotel" and several B-movies and having won a 1970 Emmy for "Marcus Welby, M.D.," he has always preferred the other side of the camera. "The only reason I became an actor," he claims, "was to get into the studio." First he wanted to be a cameraperson, but after signing as a contract player at 20th Century Fox in 1960, Brolin found himself more interested in directing and editing.

Almost as soon as he landed "Welby" in 1969, Brolin tried to crack the circle. But, "they kept putting me off and putting me off, telling me I needed a couple hundred hours in editing before they'd let me direct. I got my two hundred hours in," he remembers, "and they put me off again.

"I was full of a lot of anger at that point. I wanted to progress; I wanted to get out of 'Welby' that last year. It turned out the show ended about the same time we got a court date."

The 45-year-old Brolin finally got to direct an episode of "Hotel" last season. So far this year, he has directed four episodes, including the upcoming episodes "Hidden Talents" and "Triangles." He also started his own production company last summer with partner Gary Messenger, and has already sold HBO on a movie.

"I never considered myself a natural actor," Brolin reflects. "Every time I was in a shot, I would imagine what it looked like through the camera. This probably interrupted my performance somewhat, but it developed my ability to work in front of and behind the camera at the same time. I just hope it helps the show. I'll tell you, it feels like we're driving a Rolls Royce with no insurance and putting in cheap gas!"

Threefold Thrills

In "Pleasures," an ABC movie for television that recently began production for airing in 1986, three women live out their fantasies with their dream men during the course of one summer. The lucky three are Joanna Cassidy, Linda Purl and Tracy Nelson, and they'll be reveling in the likes of Barry Boswick, Rick Moses and Calvin Klein model Sasha Mitchell, in his film debut.

TV Chatter

It happened to Mary Crosby, Charlene Tilton and Patrick Duffy. And now the 'Dallas Dilemma' is happening to Morgan Brittany. "Since I left the show, I've haven't been able to find a decent job," says Morgan, who shuffled out of Southfork after shooting Bobby Ewing last year. "Casting directors and producers won't even see me because they think I'm a hard, tough bitch," the 33-year-old actress explains. "All I'm offered are ax murderess roles, and 'Friday the 13th' films are not my idea of fun." So Morgan recently joined "Star Games," the syndicated tug-of-war series in which she replaced that other off-series star, Pamela Sue Martin, as co-host. "I want this business to see the real me," the actress adds. "I want people to know that behind all the makeup and hair is a cute girl who doesn't have to go around killing people to get a job."

They made their first film together, "Broken Lance," in 1954. Two years later, they played brothers in "The Mountain." From then on, Spencer Tracy and Robert Wagner saw heart-to-heart. "Spencer was like a second father to me," recalls Wagner, 56. "He inspired me as an actor and gave me my most important career breaks." Tracy died in 1967. On Monday, March 3, Wagner will host "A Tribute to Spencer Tracy," a star-studded bash to benefit Tracy's alma mater, Manhattan's American Academy of Dramatic Arts. The benefit will be held at New York's Majestic Theatre. Joining R.J. will be other Tracy cronies and co-stars, including Frank Sinatra, Sidney Poitier and Katharine Hepburn, who will present Tracy's daughter, Susie, with the AADA's Lifetime Achievement Award. The event will be telecast Monday, March 10 on PBS.

Victoria Tennant may have Lord Laurence Olivier as a godfather — but that doesn't mean the actress is about to play "King Lear." Miss Tennant, best-known for her role as Pamela Tudsbury in the 1983 ABC miniseries "The Winds of War," has decided to tackle what she calls the more difficult side of acting — comedy. And she has a head start: Her boyfriend is Steve Martin, whom she met while making the 1984 film "All of Me." "Uncle Larry is a great inspiration when it comes to the classics," says Victoria, "but Steve teaches me the discipline I need to make people laugh. Comedy is not all wild and crazy; it's tragedy that's been slowed down."

Beau Bridges may be in danger of being upstaged, and not by members of his famous family. No, the 44-year-old actor is co-starring with no less than six babies in "Creative Parenting: The First 12 Months," his debut video for A&M. In the 60-minute tape, Bridges visits nurseries, pediatric offices and hospitals, dispensing the dos-and-don'ts of diapering, burping and child-rearing. But Bridges may be the biggest cry baby of all: He has three children, and refuses to divulge their names or ages. ... After 17 years of marriage, "Hotel" star James Brolin has filed for divorced from his wife Jane (the actor is currently dating former "WKRP in Cincinnati" star Jan Smithers), but he can't divorce himself from his feelings about his former "Hotel" co-star Anne Baxter, who died in December. "It really makes you face the snake," he says.

Who will win? Will it be Phil Collins? Mark Knopfler? Huey Lewis and the News? It'll be a night of black ties and bravos when Kenny Rogers hosts "The 28th Annual Grammy Awards," airing Tuesday, Feb. 25 on CBS.

Leapin' lizards! Little Orphan Annie promises to steal your heart in "Annie," the 1982 film version of the Broadway smash, airing Monday, Feb. 24 on NBC. Sandy keeps the carrot-topped waif company.

'Passage To India' Debuts On HBO

By Andrew J. Edelstein

The grandeur of colonial India provided the backdrop for two of last year's most memorable productions: "The Jewel in the Crown," the 14-part PBS miniseries, and "A Passage to India," the epic film based on E.M. Forster's novel.

On Sunday, Feb. 23, "A Passage to India" makes its pay-cable debut on HBO. The film received 11 Oscar nominations, including Best Picture and Best Director (David Lean). The story focuses on a Muslim doctor (Victor Banerjee) accused of the rape of an English woman (Judy Davis). Peggy Ashcroft won an Academy Award for Best Supporting Actress for her role of an elderly woman with mystical perceptions. Alec Guinness and James Fox co-star.

In 1978, Brian Doyle became a New York Yankee hero. As a 24-year-old second baseman thrust into the World Series lineup because of an injury to the regular player, all he did was hit .438 in six games, tied a Series record with five straight hits and helped the Yankees defeat the Dodgers.

But three years later Doyle was out of baseball and forgotten. On Sunday, Feb. 23 the "Coors Sports Page" on WTBS takes a look at Doyle today in a segment called "When the Cheering Stops." It turns out that Doyle has not strayed far from the game. With his brothers Denny (also a former major-leaguer) and Blake, he operates the Doyle Baseball Camp in Winter Haven, Fla.

"I still slap on the uniform," says Doyle. "I still get in the cage and take a few hacks. But better yet, I can give these young guys the knowledge I wish I had at their age — and that's why I want to stay."

"The World's Greatest Timed-Event Cowboy," a show for sports fans of a more esoteric bent, airs Sunday, Feb. 23 on The Nashville Network. This is the first annual rodeo to select the most versatile athlete in five major timed events — calf roping, bulldogging, steer roping and both the head and heel positions in team roping.

Mark Knopfler Leads Grammy Nominees

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Two-time Grammy winner Kenny Rogers hosts "The 28th Annual Grammy Awards," airing Tuesday, Feb. 25 on CBS. The three-hour special will air live from the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles.

In voting by members of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, the highest number of nominations this year went to Mark Knopfler of Dire Straits, who garnered eight. Nominees in the major categories include:

Record of the Year: "Born in the USA" (Bruce Springsteen); "The Boys of Summer" (Don Henley); "Money for Nothing" (Dire Straits); "The Power of Love" (Huey Lewis and the News); and "We Are the World" (USA for Africa).

Album of the Year: "Brothers in Arms" (Dire Straits); "The Dream of the Blue Turtles" (Sting); "No Jacket Required" (Phil Collins); "We Are the World: USA for Africa/The Album" (Various Artists); and "Whitney Houston" (Whitney Houston).

Best New Artist: Sade, A-Ha, Freddie Jackson, Julian Lennon and Katrina and the Waves.

Best Pop Vocal Performance, female: "Crazy for You" (Madonna), "Lush Life" (Linda Ronstadt), "Saving All My Love for You" (Whitney Houston); "We Belong" (Pat Benatar); and "We Don't Need Another Hero" (Tina Turner).

Best Pop Vocal Performance, male: "The Dream of the Blue Turtles" (Sting); "Everytime You Go Away" (Paul Young), "The Heat Is On" (Glenn Frey); "No Jacket Required" (Phil Collins); and "Part-time Lover" (Stevie Wonder).

Best Pop Performance by a Duo or Group (with vocal): "Broken Wings" (Mr. Mister); "Easy Lover" (Philip Bailey and Phil Collins);"I Want to Know What Love Is" (Foreigner); "The Power of Love" (Huey Lewis and the News); and "We Are the World" (USA for Africa).

Denver in Colorado

Country music's John Denver stars with Gennie James and Jane Kaczmarek in "The Christmas Present," a new CBS movie in production in Colorado. Denver is a big-city architect who visits a small town in that state in order to survey new housing development; blueprints forgotten, he finds himself charmed by a town that has remained untouched by modernity and infatuated with a new lady love.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: What is Michele Lee's real name? Please tell me more about the "Knots Landing" star. — JACK KEEVER, HIGH POINT, N.C.

Michele Lee was born Michele Dusiak on June 24, 1942, in Los Angeles. She is the daughter of Hollywood makeup artist Jack Dusiak. Miss Lee landed her first professional job at age 17 in local musical production called "Vintage '60." Eight months later, Miss Lee and the production were on their way to Broadway with producer David Merrick at the helm. She starred with Robert Morse for two years on Broadway in "How to Succeed in Business without Really Trying." In 1967 she reprised her stage role in the film version of the Broadway hit. For the past seven seasons, Miss Lee has starred as Karen Fairgate MacKenzie on "Knots Landing, and received an Emmy nomination for her role in 1982. On the personal front, she was divorced from actor James Farentino in 1981 after 15 years of marriage. The couple have a 16-year-old son, David, who lives with his mother. Miss Lee has been dating CBS executive Fred Rappaport for more than four years. She is the director of the Entertainment Industries Council for a Drug Free Society; she has testified before the Senate on the problem, and has received numerous honors and awards for her contribution toward greater awareness of alcoholism among women.

Dear Michele: Who starred in the TV series "The Fugitive"? Was it David Janssen or Ben Gazzara? — C. HAHN & E. DAVIS, LOCKPORT, N.Y.

The late David Janssen starred as Dr. Richard Kimble in ABC's hit series "The Fugitive" from 1963-67. At the same time, Gazzara was running for his life on another network. He portrayed Paul Kimble (no relation to Richard), a lawyer with an incurable disease, on NBC's "Run For Your Life" from 1965-68.

Dear Michele: I'm looking for the title of the film in which Alex Cord, who plays Archangel on "Airwolf," played an Indian who captures and falls in love with a white woman. Can you help? — JEANNIE PEARSON, BALDWIN PARK, CALIF.

The film was "Grayeagle" (1978). The woman he fell in love with was actress Lana Wood.

Valene And Joan Have Noses For News

By Jay Carman

"Ah, bigamy. It's a great way to live, especially when both of your husbands are broadcast journalists."

So said Joan Van Ark recently after her Valene Ewing character on "Knots Landing" was propelled down the matrimonial aisle by yet another plot twist. At her side was "Pacific World Cable" newsman Ben Gibson (played by Doug Sheehan).

The stunning, slim blonde, who certainly doesn't appear to be on the cusp of her 40s, says that after she doffed her wedding finery, she went straight home to her other husband — Emmy Award-winner John Marshall of Los Angeles TV station KNBC.

After 19 happy years already to its credit, however, it's Miss Van Ark's off-duty marriage that promises to be the most durable. What's more, she says it's given her the ideal background to help her screen husband seem more credible.

Valene may be a bit of a wimp, especially since the psychological trauma she endured when her newborn twins were stolen. But Miss Van Ark pulls few conversational punches. She seems to positively enjoy taking a few jabs at her dual husbands profession.

"Let's face it," she says, "they're a scruffy lot. Appearance is the last thing on their minds when they're rushing around gathering their 'just the facts, ma'am' stories. So I'm adding realism by having Val literally dress Ben, laying out his clothes and knotting his tie before he dashes off on assignment.

Child's Life

The ABC made-for-TV movie "Alex: The Life of a Child" stars Craig T. Nelson, Bonnie Bedelia, Gennie James and Daniel Corkill and will air this spring. The film adaptation of Frank Deford's book deals with a young girl's brave battle with cystic fibrosis and her family's attempts to cope with her death.

Prince Michael's Reign On 'Dynasty' Is Over

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — Actor Michael Praed, soon to be bounced from the lineup of ABC's "Dynasty," says he knew going in that playing in a prime-time supersoap could be a deadly game.

But he had no idea that at the first sign of a slump in the show's ratings, his character Prince Michael, exiled heir to the throne of Moldavia — would be summarily executed. Praed's fall came by telephone as he was getting ready to return to the set after a restful couple of weeks off. But the young British actor says he doesn't take the ax personally.

"Frankly, I always thought Prince Michael was a bit wet, and once I got over the shock of being fired without warning, I had to agree with the producers that getting rid of him was probably a good move," he says. "I was surprised that he lasted so long, but I wasn't about to argue. I was being paid a silly amount of money for working three days a week, and I don't regret a minute of it."

Praed's most important exposure before "Dynasty" came in "Robin Hood," a British series now running on Showtime. That series features Sean Connery's son, Jason, in the title role that Praed relinquished in order to gamble on a new career on this side of the Atlantic. His ace in the hole was the lead in a Broadway musical based on the Dumas classic, "The Three Musketeers," but theater audiences didn't think it rated much of a hand, and the show folded in less than a week.

"I remember being taught in school that an occasional setback is good for one's moral fiber, so I'm a very positive thinker," says Praed. "Prince Michael came along at just the right time and gave me a break from the heroic types I've been playing for most of my career.

"Something drastic had to be done about 'Dynasty' — or 'Dysentery,' as it's affectionately known back where I come from! — and heads were bound to roll. No one likes getting fired, but I was very well treated during the year I was with the show, and I hope the changes that cost me my job help the ratings to recover!"

Praed says he thinks of himself as a musician as much as an actor. Before "Dynasty," he was working on putting an album together. "Now, I can get back to it without having to worry about learning lines," he says. "That's what I mean about always looking on the bright side: It's essential for an actor, I think. And I'm certainly not going back to Britain with my tail between my legs. I like living in America, and I intend to stay."

Intelligence Operations

Howard E. Rollins Jr., Lynn Whitfield, Richard Lawson and Marta Dubois star in "The Johnnie Gibson Story," a CBS film now in production for future broadcast. The real-life story centers on the dangerous exploits of one of the first black woman undercover agents for the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Miss Whitfield portrays Miss Gibson.

SHOW AND TELL

Pankin sees satire as a way to move people

By Gregory Garver

Satire, traditionally, is the least commercial form of comedy. So it may come as a surprise that the satirical cable monthly series "Not Necessarily the News" is doing well on HBO.

Stuart Pankin

"Satire and Ibsen close Friday night," says Stuart Pankin, one of the stalwarts of the "NNTN" company. Pankin is the round-faced actor/comedian who has lent support in such movies as "Irreconcilable Differences" and "Hollywood Knights," as well as in dozens of episodic TV shows and movies.

How, then, does Pankin account for the fact that "Not Necessarily the News" has not closed Friday night, but does, in fact, keep getting more and more popular?

"Ours is a little lighter satire," he says. "We're halfway between 'That Was the Week That Was' and 'Laugh-In.'" Pankin thinks his show is not only funny, but that it says important things. "If you want to move people," the actor explains, "the best way to do it is with comedy."

So "NNTN" tackles serious subjects on the show, but they deal with them with wit and humor. Any subject is within the scope of their humor, but not everyone.

"I have objected to a few things producers John Moffitt and Pat Tourk Lee had planned," Pankin recalls. "I remember when they were going to do something about Farrakhan (Louis Farrakhan, the anti-Semitic black activist), and I was frightened that there might be retribution. John and Pat said, 'OK, you're right. We won't do it.'"

Pankin is a Philadelphian with a background in the theater, including a master's degree from Columbia and years of experience with several repertory companies. "I played serious roles on stage," he remembers, "characters such as young lawyers. But I found I loved doing comedy. I think that the first job of entertainment is to entertain, and then to enlighten. When you start to proselytize, it becomes bad theater."

Even though he now seems to be specializing in comic acting, Pankin doesn't consider himself a comedian. And he no desire to be a stand-up comic.

"That's too hard a life," he says.

STAR STYLE

Catherine Mary stays fit by dancing, dieting

By Renee Ross

Catherine Mary Stewart

"When I'm given too much time to lay back, that's when things go wrong. I'm much more efficient with lots and lots to do. It's not that tension and stress don't build up — they certainly do. I especially carry tension in my neck and shoulders."

To get rid of the knotty annoyance, Miss Stewart relies on exercise. "I'll work out, or practice meditation involving total body relaxation," she explains.

"I started my career as a dancer and know it's important to stay in shape. If a dancer lets her body become less than flexible and solid, you just don't feel right," adds the 5-foot-6 actress.

"When I'm not working I'll take one or two dance classes a day. I'm not saying that much exercise is good for everyone, but it works for me," she cautions.

"I'm originally from Canada," says Miss Stewart, "and one thing I love about California is that you can be outside whenever you want. Some people here insist they miss the changing seasons, but I have no desire to go through a Canadian winter!" she says with a laugh.

The actress says being active also serves as a diet aid in keeping her at a trim 115 pounds. "Exercise is a wonderful appetite suppressant," the actress explains. "Contrary to popular belief, I find I eat more when I don't exercise. If I work out at 11 a.m., I won't get hungry till 2 that afternoon."

Eating wisely is also important, claims Miss Stewart. "My husband and I aren't vegetarian, but we eat a balanced diet," she says. "My theory is that too much of anything can be bad.

"Food is fun for me because I really love to cook. To me it's a good challenge to make a meal both as delicious and nutritious as possible."

Billy Olson Will Vault To New Heights

By Adam Beckerman

Have you been following the pole vaulters this winter? Two of the principals have yet to vault in the same continent, let alone arena. Hence, Madison Square Garden will be jumping on Friday, Feb. 28 with the climax of the 14-meet indoor season, the USA Mobil Indoor Grand Prix Championships (ESPN, 9 p.m. ET, live). World record holder Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union makes his only American appearance to challenge Texan Billy Olson, owner of 10 past indoor records, three of which were set on three consecutive January weekends.

"I'm jumping against that bar," says Olson, who maintains a friendly trans-global competition with Bubka. "But when Sergei is here competing, I'll be thinking about him. 'Course, I'll have to conquer the bar in order to conquer him."

Or, for that matter, Joe Dial, who as of Feb. 2 owns American indoor (19 feet, 4 3/4 inches) and outdoor (19 feet, 2 1/4 inches) records, the latter being 6 inches lower than Bubka's best.

Peaks and valleys have characterized Olson's career. In 1982 and '83 he was the Indoor Athlete of the Year. But torn ligaments in his takeoff foot caused him to miss making the '84 Olympic team.

"That was more than a big draft," he says. "It was to be everything I worked for in '82 and '83. The road back has been some experience."

He's had to reevaluate his technique, though never his desire to fly. He has always been fast — he runs a 10.64 100 meters. And he has always been strong. "My father owned the only health club in Abilene," he says. "I've been lifting weights since I was five." Nonetheless, Olson had to start gripping his fiberglass pole further up its length in order to attain heights comparable to Bubka's. The Soviet holds his pole at 16 feet, 8 inches. Olson holds it at 16 feet, 5 inches, up from 15 feet, 8 inches.

Since the change, Olson, the first man to clear 19 feet indoors, has been inching closer to the existing standard. Though he suggests that the 20-foot barrier is breakable, Olson believes that "with the current vaulters we have now," the bar is about as high as it can go.

The next generation is already on the runway.

The no-longer-unbeaten North Carolina Tar Heels have nothing to fear except the fear of not copping the whole enchilada. Still, the Sunday, Feb. 23 ACC contest on NBC in the den of the Wolfpack of North Carolina State should be anything but a piece of cake.

'Search For Tomorrow' Saved From Drowning

By Connie Passalacqua

This week, get ready for a once-in-a-lifetime soap phenomenon, when the entire town of Henderson, home for the last 34 years for "Search for Tomorrow," gets wiped out totally in a devastating flood. But the flood itself will be less an act of God, than an act of a desperate producer.

"We're beginning anew," says John P. Whitesell, who became executive producer of the show only four months ago. "The only difference between starting a new show and doing what we're doing is this: We have the advantage of having established people that the audience cares about." Whitesell says that there will only be a few deaths caused by the flood itself.

Never substitute for the very best

The Ralph Lauren shirt is an expression of quality and integrity, from the selection of the patterns to the execution of every detail. Some of the details to look for in a Ralph Lauren shirt are: The finest single-needle tailoring; All seams have a very narrow single-stitch closing and are closed with eighteen stitches per inch; Real ocean pearl buttons; A collar and neckband that are distinctively tailored to mold comfortably around the neck; The fabric is the finest quality all-cotton made from long-staple yarns that will mellow with age and actually improve with subsequent launderings. We now have an excellent selection of solids and patterns in all our fine stores. $42.50

The Actress Who Plays
TV's Detective Cagney Remembers:

"I Didn't Think I Was Pretty"

An Interview With Sharon Gless
By Barbara Grizzuti Harrison

INSIDE: A Savory Beef Dinner From Julia Child's Kitchen

TV Cop Sharon Gless:

"I Like Cagney 'Cause She's Complex And Flawed And So Am I"

Steve Smith

Actress Sharon Gless, a.k.a. Christine Cagney, dedicated police officer on TV's hit show Cagney and Lacey. She's also a gifted comedienne.

SHARON GLESS ONCE HAD A "BEAU" (her word) who did an imitation of her that went like this: "I'm Sharon and I'm sorry." Since Gless lived with this fellow, Jack Colvin, for six years, presumably he knew his woman. But even a stranger notices that Gless apologizes a lot. She even apologizes for apologizing: "Did I say I'm sorry again? I'm sorry about that." This ought to be tiresome, but with Gless it's ingratiating, even endearing: The beautiful woman who plays Christine Cagney—the tough blond cop on CBS' hit dramatic series Cagney and Lacey—seems so uncalculating about it all, and so demonstrably kind.

Gless, in fact, has a remarkable facility for turning her foibles to her advantage. For example, there is nothing coy or particularly ladylike about her language. But she gets away with it, perhaps because there is no malice in her, her humor being of the self-deprecatory variety.

Cagney and Lacey addicts know that the pink-and-pretty TV cop is almost terminally self-deprecatory. But Christine Cagney is also cocky, sometimes unbearably self-righteous, defensive, ambitious, manipulative and essentially humorless. Like Gless, she comes across as many-sided. She's pastel and iron, as tender as she is tough—a broad who can take very good care of herself and a girl very much in need of protection.

The temptation to see Gless and Cagney as one and the same is enormous. There are surface similarities, and not just of mannerism. Gless is unmarried.

By Barbara Grizzuti Harrison

for example; so is Cagney. Gless resists such comparisons. "Cagney's skinnier than I am," she says, her blue eyes wrinkling with laughter. Pressed, she adds, "Oh, damn, can't we just say I like Cagney? I like her 'cause she's complex and flawed—and so am I. I'd be bored silly playing an entirely admirable character. To assume we're alike at all is to assume I can only act myself. I am acting."

She is. Remember that every time you see her with a gun: "Packing a rod is not my idea of heaven," she says. Sharon Gless so much dislikes guns that when, in the interest of verisimilitude, she and her partner are obliged to hide guns on their persons, Gless carries not a revolver but a can of tomato juice. The only time she carries a real gun is when the script calls for it to be in view.

Sharon Gless has received Emmy nominations three times for best actress in a dramatic series (and has lost three times—to Tyne Daly, who plays her partner, Mary Beth Lacey). She is by temperament and inclination a light comedienne; her real gift is that she—like her idols, Carole Lombard, Irene Dunne and Rosalind Russell—allows us to peer behind her street-smart, tough-guy facade and see the vulnerability that lurks there. And she can play an essentially humorless person with great good humor.

The Gless-Daly partnership produces smashing onscreen chemistry. Their off-camera relationship appears not to be intimate but one of professional buddies and colleagues who like and respect each other. If she has to lose the coveted Emmy, says Gless, she'd mind least losing it to Tyne Daly. In her dressing room is a sign: ANGELS FLY BECAUSE THEY TAKE THEMSELVES LIGHTLY. Gless likes to think that her virtue as an actress—what she calls her "light touch"—may, ironically, be what keeps her from winning the Emmy as best actress in a dramatic series.

Gless, who spent her early years in Southern California, describes herself as a child of the films. She also was a child of money and privilege. Her grandfather, Neil McCarthy, was the attorney to Cecil B. deMille and Howard Hughes, among others. Her father was a sales executive in the garment trade. Of her mother, she says: "I was blessed with a wonderful love. All she ever wanted to be was a mother, and she was damned good at it." But Sharon was "just perfectly awful" to her mother, she recalls, when her parents divorced after 20 years of marriage. She was 14. "I was going through my hero-worship stage—my father was my prince in shining armor. But he wasn't home much."

She didn't date in high school. "I didn't think I was pretty," she says. "I could play rough with the guys—like I did with my older brother—but I was afraid of them on a sexual level. I was fat [5 feet 6 and 175 pounds]. I was a closet eater. Hell, I still am. I used to like going to the movies—it was dark in there. I was gonna do that one day, I thought. I'd show 'em."

When Gless debuted socially, her grandmother said she'd "be damned if she'd present me looking like Moby Dick." Adds Gless, "She regulated my life for three months—I had to account for every cent I spent. I lost 45 pounds."

Gless still sometimes looks in the mirror and thinks she sees a fat person. In her dressing room, she keeps an index-card-sized box, which, when battery-activated, sends out the roar of applause and cheering voices. She drinks the sound in, looking like a cat eating cream. She plays it a lot when she's all alone.

Between her grandmother and Catholic boarding schools, Sharon's life was subjected to a fair amount of discipline. She is not resentful: "We didn't go around with a shamrock, but everybody went to church on Sundays. I was gonna 'save myself' for my wedding night... A lot of the rules just don't fit into my way of life, know what I mean? But I'll tell ya, if I were dying, I think I'd ask for a priest, just to cover my tail."

At 18, she announced that she wanted to be an actress. Her grandfather told her to forget it. His memorable words: "It's a filthy business."

"So I thought I'd be a producer," she says. "I worked for an independent film company. At 26, I'd lost my dough and my job." At this time, acting in a local production, Gless was seen by a publicist from Universal, who arranged for her to meet the head of the talent department.

At Universal, miniskirted and perky, she made a number of films, some of them, like Revenge of the Stepford Wives, good late-night movie trash. Robert Wagner picked her to be his secretary on a TV series called Switch. She also starred in a short-lived series called Turnabout and went on to replace Lynn Redgrave in the TV series House Calls.

When she read her first Cagney and Lacey script, Gless overcame a reluctance to replace other actresses—in the pilot, Cagney had been acted by Loretta Swit, later by Meg Foster. "It's the best thing I've ever done," she says, "and the most fun." And the most money. In her dressing room, a prominent sign reads: HAVING MONEY IS NO LONGER SINFUL—IT'S A MIRACLE. "I know how much they pay me is the exact equivalent of how much they value me as an actress," she says. "And they value me a lot."

Gless is doing a seduction scene with Jim Stacy, an actor who lost an arm and a leg in a motorcycle accident. In between takes, he sits in his wheelchair, sweating, muttering to himself, ill at ease. "He doesn't know how good he is—how whole he is in spite of his amputation," Gless says, and she hugs and kisses him, joshes him, teases him. "See, in this episode I'm nuts for him, but I'm scared to date a cripple," she explains. She puts Stacy at ease with sweetness and raunchy laughter, without pity, and without making him feel like an emotional cripple. She even credits him with giving her a hickey—which she wears like a badge of honor.

During a break, Gless races to her trailer to escape a persistent fan who is thought to be lying in wait. Sharon does not like this—pathological fans give her the willies. And there's a special problem: She has a large lesbian following, and some gay women feel betrayed when they read about Gless' relationship with a man. Sharon is only moderately speculative about her gay following. "Cagney gives herself permission to be a whole lot of things," she says. "Maybe that's it. And sometimes she wears those jazzy guys' clothes." But she doesn't want anybody to think she lacks regard for her gay fans: "People have their preferences, and God bless 'em," she says. "But I'm not gay—I'm festive."

And, of course, there's Hector Figueroa, the cinematographer who established the "look" of Cagney and Lacey ("grainy, sepia, moody") and who is now Sharon's beau. "It helps that he's in the business," she says, "'cause lots of nights I just say 'hello' and go to sleep."

To the inevitable question—why aren't you married?—she replies, "I guess I'm afraid. I think I want to. I've come close. But I'm scared. I'm changing all the time, and what if I change so much I'm unrecognizable? Kids? I used to want them. I guess my time's up." She's 42. "I'll eat petunias if everybody in this business who says she's 40 is 40," she says.

Her being single is not a "feminist statement." She resists attempts to categorize Cagney and Lacey as a feminist vehicle. "In the '30s, that wonderful era," she says, "actresses didn't go out and tell people what to do and who to vote for, did they? Who am I to tell people what to do?"

She does support fund-raisers for diabetes—a member of her family is a diabetic—and for AIDS, to which she has given "a lot of money."

About AIDS and the controversy over onscreen open-mouth kissing, she says cheerily: "In my reality, metaphysically speaking, AIDS ain't gonna happen to me." Two or three times a month, Gless attends seminars at something called Concepts Synergy in Mill Valley, near San Francisco. There she has learned, she says, that "you create your own reality. Things don't just happen to you."

At one seminar, during a meditation or trance, she "met" herself as a young child: "I liked her a lot. She made me cry. I just wanted to put my arms around her. I took her hand. She came in at 175 pounds."

"With harm to none," she adds. "That's what I meditate on: You can have anything you want, be anything you want, do anything you want, if you don't do harm to anyone—starting with yourself. I'm a good person. I never hurt anybody intentionally... Am I talking too much? I'm sorry."

Daly and Gless as cops—beneath their tough-guy facades, they reveal an appealing vulnerability

BY NORMAN M. LOBSENZ

WHEN MY SON and his wife were ready to start a family, they got a lot of unsolicited advice on how many children they should plan to have. "Two are perfect," one friend counseled. "They'll be companions for each other." A voluntarily childless couple urged them to follow their example. "Kids drain your energy and cost a fortune to raise," they said. Another friend recommended the noisy joys of having a large family—three or more.

No one suggested that my son and his wife have just one child. In fact, they were cautioned against making that "mistake."

Surprising? Not really. Most people still think of an only child in terms of the traditional stereotype: as a youngster who is bound to grow up spoiled, selfish, overly dependent, inept at dealing with his or her peers and fated to be a lifelong social misfit.,

In recent years, however, virtually every study of only children has contradicted that dismal portrait. For example, experts at the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development found no significant differences between the personalities of "onlies" and other children. Many studies go beyond that. They report that only children—in addition to being ambitious and conscientious high achievers—tend to have greater self-esteem and to be more popular, cooperative and self-reliant than children who grow up with one or more siblings. Moreover, researchers found that adult onlies were able to deal with job and family problems as well as or better than people who grew up in larger families.

Still, like all myths, the myth of the maladjusted only child is dying hard. "Society still emphasizes the image of the 'perfect' two-child family," says Prof. David Knox of East Carolina University in his book Choices in Relationships. The most frequently offered reason for having a second child is "to prevent the first from being an only," says Dr. Toni Falbo, a psychologist at the University of Texas at Austin who has been studying onlies for more than a decade. "But this attitude usually characterizes the thinking of men and women before they actually become parents," adds Dr. Falbo. "When the realities of child-rearing—demands on time and energy, financial costs, interference with women's careers—get to them, couples increasingly decide to stop with one child."

Statistics bear her out. The number of married women between 25 and 34 who say they expect to have an only child has risen from about 10 percent in 1975 to nearly 15 percent today. And the number of couples who actually have only one child also has increased.

"It is a particularly sensible choice," says Marcia Lasswell, a Los Angeles family therapist, "for women who want to combine motherhood and a career efficiently, for women who have postponed childbearing into their mid-30s and for couples who want the experience of parenthood without being overwhelmed by the responsibilities of a larger family."

The crucial factor in a child's emotional growth is not how many children there are in a family, but how the child and parents relate, says Isabelle Fox, a child psychologist in Encino, Calif.: "Parents need to be aware of the special consequences of having an only and to know how they can make the most of the advantages while minimizing the disadvantages." Here is a consensus of what experts advise:

While growing up alone is often lonely, it also may foster self-reliance, creativity, confidence

• Guard against having too many—or too high—expectations for an only son or daughter. There is a good reason why parental expectations for an only are often unduly high: Virtually every study of IQ scores, school and college grades, and professional achievement show onlies in the topmost rank.

"But the upshot is that parents come to expect this kind of sustained superior accomplishment, and onlies often feel compelled to try to live up to that goal," says Dr. Sharryl Hawke, co-author of One Child by Choice. "Such pressures can easily backfire. Parents need to ask themselves, 'Are we asking too much of our child simply because he is our only one?'"

• In a one-child family, the emotional link between parents and child can become too intense. A reasonable amount of parental love and attention strengthens an only child's self-esteem. Beyond certain limits, however, it can be smothering. As one teenage girl puts it: "The problem is that my parents have no one else to think about. I have almost no privacy, because they want to share in almost everything I do. I may

A Problem Or A Privilege?

The stereotype of the only child is one with a personality problem—spoiled, selfish, overly dependent and socially inept. The reality, according to recent studies, may be just the opposite. Indeed, as these successful "onlies" from all areas of life show, such individuals often are ambitious high achievers who tend to be more popular, cooperative and self-reliant than those who grow up with one or more siblings.

Intensity need not be damaging if parents take steps to avoid some of its pitfalls. "For one thing," says Dr. Hawke, "establish your right to a private adult life. Don't let the marital twosome turn into a child-oriented threesome." Onlies sometimes expect to be included in all grown-up activities. Parents need to find a proper balance between family togetherness and separateness.

• Parents usually are uptight about raising a first child. And since an only child always remains their first child, he or she runs the risk of being the focus of parental anxiety and overprotectiveness. A successful New York attorney recalls that, when he was 14, he was invited by relatives to spend part of his summer vacation in New Mexico. "I was thrilled. I'd never been that far from home before," he says. "But my folks were reluctant to let me go. They were worried I'd get lost or sick. I remember my mother saying, 'How will you get along without me to look after you?' I knew I could manage just fine, but she filled me with so much self-doubt that I finally figured she was probably right. I didn't go—and I've resented it ever since."

"It's essential for parents to keep a sense of proportion about an only child's right to a measure of independence," says Dr. Judith Davenport of the Center for Counseling and Psychotherapy in Santa Monica, Calif. "If you keep hovering over a child, it is bound to undermine his or her self-confidence." (One mother handles this problem by asking herself from time to time, "Would I be making such a big deal out of this matter if I had three other kids to think about?")

• Onlies are often lonely. "As a child, I felt like the odd person out," recalls Carol Schwalberg, a writer in Los Angeles. "Everyone else in the neighborhood and in school had brothers and sisters. Even if they didn't always get along with them, they had someone to talk to, someone to feel close to."

As a result, onlies often fantasize about the pleasures of having brothers and sisters, even into adulthood. "I always thought my childhood was normal—until I met my fiancé's family one Christmas," says Hariann Avalos, a law professor in Los Angeles. "There must have been 25 people at dinner. Then I realized what I'd been missing. I hate it when people complain about their brothers or sisters; I'll never know what it feels like to have a sibling. And once my parents die, there will be no other part of me anywhere in the world."

"Of course, brothers and sisters have a special relationship that can provide companionship and security, both in childhood and adult years," says Isabelle Fox. "But onlies forget that not all sibling relationships are always warm and supportive, or that many are marred in time by rivalry and hostility."

In the long run, the loneliness of the only child has its compensations. Without flesh-and-blood playmates, onlies invent imaginary ones and, in the process, develop a creative imagination. This may be one reason why so many of them succeed in artistic endeavors.

"Onlies also develop the quality of being comfortable with themselves," says Carol Schwalberg. "I'm used to my own company. I can enjoy solitary pleasures—reading, listening to music, traveling on my own—without feeling lonesome."

An only child does not have to grow up alone, of course. Parents should make sure an only has as much chance as possible to meet other children by enrolling him or her in a day camp, nursery school and play group.

When Sharryl Hawke had her first child, she assumed she would eventually have a second. But after interviewing hundreds of only children and parents of onlies for her book, she decided to stop with one.

"Only children are, after all, children like any other," she says, "better off in some ways, not so well off in others. There are problems in raising an only, but there are problems in raising two or more. The problems aren't worse, they're just different. Parents don't 'need' to have any set number of children; they need to have as many as they feel they can nurture well."

MANUFACTURER'S COUPON EXPIRES 3/31/86

Here's a jolly dinner for a cold winter evening, starting with a surprise nestled in a mushroom cap—a snail, bathed in fragrant garlic butter. (What better way to serve a snail?) Then snail, mushroom, garlic and butter all commune together on top of a toasted crouton that imbibes the luscious juices. For those faint hearts that quiver at the thought of a snail, diced mushroom stems are a tasty substitute indeed, and sautéed chicken livers would be even better.

The main course is a fresh brisket of beef, slow-roasted under a cloak of chopped tomatoes and onions after a short preliminary seasoning of spices and garlic. The slow roasting itself couldn't be easier: The beef and vegetables, leisurely steaming together, produce their own lovely juices, which want sopping up with boiled potatoes and a garnish of steamed carrots. This is a healthy, savory, fat-free main course—and a fine idea, also, when you want a cold beefy dish for a buffet.

Ice cream for dessert, molded in ladyfingers—crisply tender beauties, as only the homemade variety can be. Because they freeze beautifully, they're an asset to have on hand to serve with tea, fruit desserts and ice cream, or with all kinds of molded desserts, such as the vanilla ice cream and raspberry sauce described here.

For exciting flavor—and those wonderful kitchen aromas...

Enjoy A Savory Beef Dinner

Mushrooms à l'Escargot

For each serving:

A crustless round of white bread 3 inches across
About 2 Tbs clear melted butter, or as called for below
A large, fresh mushroom cap (3 inches across if possible)
The mushroom stem, finely chopped and sautéed in a little butter
1 or more canned escargots (snails), depending on size
1 Tbs snail butter (1/2 Tbs butter mashed with 1/2 tsp each of finely minced parsley and shallots, a speck of pureed garlic, salt and pepper)
1 Tbs heavy cream

Preparing the mushrooms. Sauté bread round in hot butter just enough to brown very lightly; place on a baking sheet. Shave a piece off curved side of mushroom cap so it will lie steady; set cap on the bread round. Spoon sautéed stem into cap and press snail(s) in place; cover with snail butter, top with cream.

Baking and serving. When all mushrooms are prepared, cover closely with foil or an upside-down bowl or pan and bake 20 to 25 minutes in a preheated 400F oven, just until mushrooms have softened and are hot through but still hold their shape. Serve at once.

Slow-Roasted Brisket Of Beef

For 8 to 10 people:

A 4-pound fresh brisket of beef ("single" brisket, center cut)

THE MARINADE

1/2 tsp each, salt and thyme
2 large cloves garlic, pureed
1/4 cup olive oil or salad oil
1/8 tsp freshly ground pepper

VEGETABLES TO ROAST WITH MEAT

2 cups chopped tomatoes (half fresh, cored but unpeeled; half canned Italian plum, drained)
1½ cups sliced onions
A little salt

FOR THE SAUCE

1½ Tbs cornstarch blended with:
3 Tbs red wine or beef stock
Salt and pepper to taste

SPECIAL EQUIPMENT

A wide roasting pan large enough to hold the brisket comfortably; a cover for the pan, such as heavy foil or a pastry sheet; a smaller pan for final roasting

Marinating the beef—30 minutes to overnight. Trim off all excess fat. Mash salt and thyme into the garlic to make a paste, then beat in the oil and pepper. Spread this over both sides of brisket; arrange meat in the roasting pan. Cover and refrigerate.

Slow roasting—3 to 4 hours. Preheat your oven to 300F. Spread the chopped tomatoes and sliced onions over the meat, salt lightly, cover tightly and set on a rack in the middle level of oven. Check on progress about every 30 minutes and baste meat with the juices that accumulate in the pan. Meat is done when a fork pierces it quite easily; to be sure, cut off and eat a sample, which should be pleasantly chewable (though it will never be tender like steak).

Optional rest before carving—1 hour or overnight. Transfer the brisket with its vegetable topping to a smaller pan. Degrease the roasting juices and pour into a saucepan; whisk in the cornstarch mixture and bring to the simmer, whisking, for 2 to 3 minutes. Correct seasoning and pour over the brisket. (Although you can serve it now, a rest for at least an hour will make for easier carving later.)

Serving. A half hour before serving, cover and reheat brisket in a 350F oven, basting several times with the juices, which are now, officially, a sauce. Remove meat with vegetables to a carving board; pour the sauce into a warm bowl. Carve meat across the grain into thin slices. Moisten each with a spoonful of the sauce.

Ladyfingers

For 2 to 2½ dozen:

PRELIMINARIES
2 baking sheets about 11 by 17 inches
Butter and flour to film baking sheets
A pastry bag with 1/2-inch tube opening
1½ cups confectioners sugar in a sieve

THE BATTER—PART 1
3 egg yolks; 1/3 cup sugar; pinch of salt; 1½ tsp pure vanilla extract; 1/2 cup cake flour (scoop dry-measure cup into flour; sweep off excess; sift twice onto wax paper; return flour to sifter)

THE BATTER—PART 2
3 egg whites; 1 Tbs sugar

Preliminaries. Preheat oven to 350F and place racks in upper and lower middle levels. Lightly smear soft butter over baking sheets, dust with flour and knock off excess. Draw horizontal lines on them to make spaces 4 inches deep and 1 inch apart. Prepare pastry bag and confectioners sugar. Measure out all ingredients listed in recipe, and plan to work fast so that batter will stay puffed.

The batter—part 1. Start beating egg yolks with a portable mixer, gradually but not too slowly beating in the sugar. Continue 3 to 4 minutes, until yolks are thick, lemon-colored and form a slowly dissolving ribbon on the surface—it's important that they be thick but not stiff. Beat in the salt and vanilla. Sift in the flour by thirds, beating it in with mixer after each addition. Proceed immediately to the next step.

The batter—part 2. Beat the egg whites to soft peaks; sprinkle in the sugar and beat to stiff, shining peaks. With a large rubber spatula, stir 1/4 of the egg whites into the yolk mixture to make it smooth and light, then scoop the yolk mixture rapidly over and around the egg whites. Quickly but delicately fold them together—batter will remain puffed and hold its shape if you've worked quickly. At once, scoop the batter into the pastry bag and proceed to the next step.

Forming and baking. In the 4-inch spaces marked on the baking sheet, rapidly squeeze out finger shapes, slanting them at right angles and spacing them 1 inch apart. Sieve on a generous (1/16-inch) layer of confectioners sugar and place immediately in the preheated oven.

Bake 12 minutes; rapidly switch pans on racks for even browning. Bake 5 to 6 minutes more, until lightly browned and crisp under their coating of sugar. (Homemade ladyfingers puff very little because, unlike commercial ones, they contain no baking powder. But they are tenderly crisp.) Scoop them off the baking sheets with a spatula and let cool on racks. Store airtight, or wrap and freeze.

Vanilla Ice Cream Mold

1½ quarts best-quality vanilla ice cream
TO MOLD LADYFINGERS
1/4 cup confectioners sugar; droplets of water
RASPBERRY SAUCE
1 quart fresh or 2 packages frozen raspberries; 3 Tbs lemon juice; sugar as needed

Molding the ice cream. Remove ice cream from freezer and let it soften 15 to 20 minutes. Meanwhile, line length and width of loaf pan with double thicknesses of plastic wrap, leaving 2½-inch overhangs (for easy unmolding). Blend droplets of water into the confectioners sugar to make a paste; paint a dab on the outside bottom of a ladyfinger and arrange it upright, its curved side against a side of the pan. Continue, making an even border all around.

Beat ice cream briefly with an electric mixer (to remove any air), then pack it into the pan, pressing it gently against the ladyfingers. Cover and freeze at least 6 hours. (Trim off protruding ladyfinger ends when ice cream has firmed.)

Raspberry sauce. Puree raspberries and lemon juice in a processor or blender, adding sugar to taste and letting it dissolve completely. Sieve to remove seeds; refrigerate in a covered bowl.

Serving. Remove ice cream mold from freezer to refrigerator 20 minutes before serving. Unmold onto a chilled platter. Cut into 1/2-inch crosswise slices, and serve with the red raspberry sauce.

Can Prejudice Be Overcome?

Before you are six or seven or eight,
To hate all the people your relatives hate—
You've got to be carefully taught!

*—"CAREFULLY TAUGHT," FROM THE BROADWAY MUSICAL "SOUTH PACIFIC"

Elie Wiesel (circled) in Buchenwald concentration camp, 1945. Today, he writes and lectures about his experience.

NOT ONE OF US IS born with prejudice. Children, as the song suggests, are naturally free of dislike of another's race, color, religion, looks or lifestyle. Prejudice is learned from the adults with whom they live.

An excellent way has been found to help our children unlearn the prejudice that surrounds them. Recently, I observed a most unusual encounter between a group of 200 schoolchildren—some black, some Hispanic, some white—and a man who is the most eloquent witness to the supreme example of prejudice in this century: the Holocaust.

The witness was the eminent writer Elie Wiesel. The children were fifth- to ninth-graders gathered at New York's Booker T. Washington Junior High School. The occasion was the taping of a television program, part of a series of discussions about memorable events intended for the use of history and literature classes in New York City public schools. Wiesel answers kids' questions about Holocaust. The aim: to help them unlearn prejudice.

"If we don't learn from what happened," Wiesel told the children, "if we remain indifferent, we are lost."

Enterprises, evolved this oral-history project because he believes that prejudices, however obtained, can be unlearned when schoolchildren are exposed to a personalized recollection of an event by someone who witnessed or experienced it.

Certainly Elie Wiesel is a perfect choice to describe the Holocaust to children, because he himself was one of the few children who survived it. He told the youngsters that he was about their age when the Nazis came to his home in Transylvania and shipped him—along with thousands of other Jewish men, women and children—to the Auschwitz concentration camp in cattle cars without food or water.

Wiesel recalled the extremities of those days of horror for these modern city children unacquainted with the dimensions of the tragedy. In an emotion-laden voice, he described impressions of his remembered experience: convoys of victims crawling out of boxcars, barbed wire, barking police dogs, shouts of guards, screams of brutalized victims, belching smokestacks and the odor of burning human flesh. He thought he was living a nightmare. "The child in me, where was he?" Wiesel asked his young audience.

"I live in fear," he said. "When I was in the camps, when I was your age, evil had attained such dimensions that they made it invincible. The fallout of that hate is still here, all around us. If we don't learn from what happened, if we remain indifferent, we are lost. I must—we must—bear witness. I must justify my survival."

Among the children was a group who had prepared for the meeting by reading and talking about Wiesel's bone-chilling book Night, a memoir of his life in the Auschwitz and Buchenwald concentration camps—one of his many books that recall the effect of the Nazi terror on the Jews.

Anne Hercules, an 11-year-old, stood and asked permission to read a poem

He was like no other star. In the beginning he was just Dave's little brother on the Ozzie and Harriet Show. And then, at the age of sixteen, he made a record—his first—it was called "I'm Walkin'" and it turned out to be a smash hit, selling over a million copies in just two weeks. And almost overnight, Ricky Nelson became one of the most popular teen idols in music history.

But his success was no fluke. One hit followed another, from "Poor Little Fool", "It's Late", "Hello, Mary Lou" and "Travelin' Man" to "Garden Party", Ricky's Top-10 comeback hit in 1972.

"The killer has a choice. Every human being has the same choice."

PREJUDICE/continued

she had written after having read and discussed Night:

Help them...
The dead are gone.
Could they have lived as we do?
Could they?

An eighth-grade girl asked her friends: "We read about these things. But did these things really happen? I don't know how he [Wiesel] can talk about it like that... calm... without getting upset. If someone killed my parents, I would want to get them back. I would want revenge. I don't know how he could take it."

A boy of 13 asked Wiesel: "How did you feel when you saw children killed—all those innocent people?"

Wiesel winced and replied: "Stunned. The pain comes later. And then that pain is unbearable."

De Wayne Flagler, 11, said that he had read about 20 pages of Night and had this reaction: "Some people say that it was the way they [the Nazis] were brought up, so they're not responsible for their actions. Other people say they were ordered to do it. That doesn't make it for me!"

Wiesel remarked: "I hope there is a choice. The killer has a choice. Every human being has the same choice. Some of the Nazis were highly educated persons. Some of them went home at night and read poetry. Yes, a killer chooses to be a killer."

A 12-year-old girl asked: "How do you deal with people who say the Holocaust never happened?"

Wiesel replied: "I don't know how to fight ugliness. I never dignify them with a debate or a response. They say we invent the death of our parents! Where are our parents? We must teach more, and study more in every school."

Throughout, the children displayed deep compassion for the victims of the Nazis. Minority children, especially, responded to Wiesel's remarks with sensitivity and were moved to express their distress at Wiesel's account of Jewish martyrdom.

Wiesel responded: "Forty years have gone by. I now know the taste of joy, but the shadow is always there, always with me. A wound can be helpful. If a person is wounded, he can understand the pain of other people."

One child asked: "How did you feel on the way to the concentration camp? If you'd been born a German, would you have been able to do it?"

Wiesel smiled mournfully and replied: "You think I know?" To the question of his three-day journey in a cattle car to Auschwitz, he answered: "I wasn't afraid. It was an adventure."

Michael Gordon asked: "Can you describe the look in people's eyes when they did what they did to you?"

Wiesel answered sadly: "No, they behaved, they acted as gods. We victims could not look into the faces of gods, the faces of the killers. I only remember the eyes of the victims."

A girl had a question: "If faith didn't sustain you, what did?"

Wiesel responded: "I don't know what it was. I didn't want to live. Nobody wanted anything. You know what people wanted? A piece of bread, a bowl of soup. I don't know..."

A boy put up his hand: "What if you met a Nazi today?"

Wiesel shook his head sadly: "During the war, we were all convinced that if we remained alive, we would make them pay. Instead, a miracle occurred. The survivors were able to rechannel their emotions from vengeance to the opposite—literature, education, philanthropy—a new society! We were very old and strong, living through the war. Children had to fight the German army to stay alive. It's a miracle that they channeled their revenge creatively."

Wiesel admonished the children to learn to treat all people—Christian, Jewish, Moslem or Buddhist—as "sovereign human beings." He added, "Every people, every human being is different. You have the same right, pride and authority as anyone else. The worst enemy to humankind is indifference."

His final message: "You and you alone can justify my work. I write for children because I think adults may not understand. My writings are addressed to you. We are always the children of the same family."

The Bible: How it came to be.

It's interesting how many persons read the Bible and quote the Bible without knowing anything of the story of how the Bible came to be written. Not that the Bible's story is more important than the Bible itself. But some knowledge of the background helps to avoid many false notions.

One such false notion is that which sees the Bible as the adversary of the Church and vice versa. Another is the notion that the Bible can be read in a vacuum as though it had no history at all or no dependence for meaning upon the history and culture of its human authors and their communities.

Quite apart from avoiding error, a knowledge of the history of the Bible helps to enrich one's reading of the Bible and thereby deepens one's faith. For a simple introduction to the great subject of the Bible's beginning and development, write for our free pamphlet, "God's News to Man." No one will call on you.

Nevada vs. Rocky's Mama

Jacqueline Stallone (l) celebrates son's 39th birthday with him and girlfriend, Brigitte Nielsen: Brigitte has since become Sylvester's wife—just one of the recent events now upsetting Mama Stallone's life

The state of Nevada is suing Jacqueline Stallone—mother of the fabulously wealthy Rambo-Rocky movie star, Sylvester Stallone—and her facelift salon in Las Vegas for more than $1 million.

The lawsuit charges the feisty Mama Stallone, in her early 60s, and two other defendants with having engaged in false and misleading advertising, deceptive trade practices and a conspiracy to deceive the public. It alleges that Jacqueline Stallone fibbed outrageously in her advertisements, which say that she has treated such celebrities as former First Lady Rosalynn Carter, actresses Sophia Loren, Debbie Reynolds, Merle Oberon and Rosalind Russell, Princess Grace of Monaco, King Hussein of Jordan, Canada's ex-Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and "the royal family of Kenya."

"We are claiming," explains Anne Perry, the deputy attorney general of Nevada, "that Jacqueline Stallone never treated any of those people and that she never earned, as was advertised, a master's degree in chemistry from New York University. We also question whether her skin peelings were—as she described them—painless. We have complaints from consumers that various cosmetic treatments dispensed at her establishment were both painful and injurious."

What does Mama Stallone, who is also an astrologer, have to say about Nevada's lawsuit? We tried to track her down in Las Vegas, but she has closed her salon, departed the state and left her defense to Marilyn Romanelli, an attorney.

Romanelli denies the charges against her client and, in a counterclaim, is seeking monetary damages in excess of $10,000 from Attorney General Brian McKay and Shari Compton, the Nevada commissioner of consumer affairs. "You can quote me," she told this reporter, "that my client is absolutely innocent. The only reason Nevada is suing Jacqueline Stallone is because she's the mother of a celebrity. I give you my word that if her son was John Jones, no one would have filed any lawsuit. But Sylvester Stallone's mother—that's something else. The name is guaranteed to make headlines. Somebody stands to earn a reputation. The suit against Jacqueline Stallone is a prime example of overzealousness."

When the Nevada-Stallone legal hassle will be settled is anyone's guess. Meanwhile, Mrs. Stallone reportedly is miserable about her 39-year-old son's recent marriage to Danish beauty Brigitte Nielsen, 22. "I didn't raise my son," she was quoted as saying, "to go off and marry someone like her."

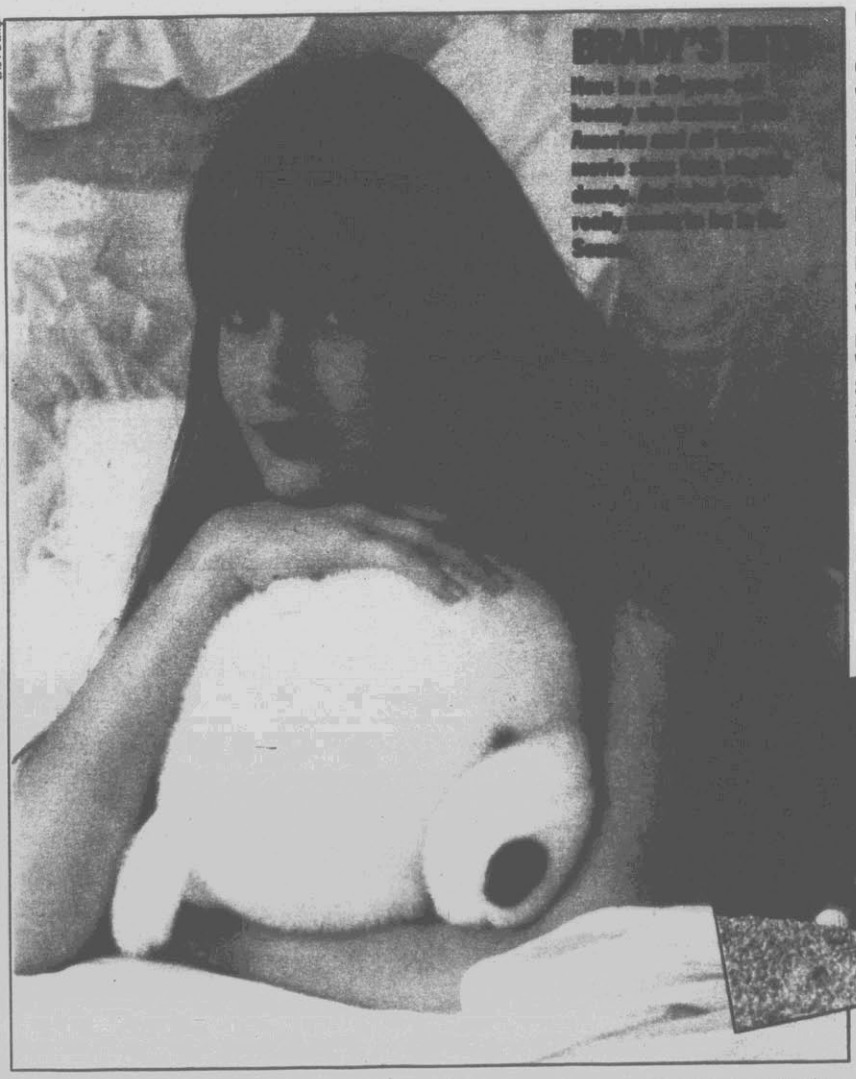
IN STEP WITH:

BY JAMES BRADY

Paulina Porizkova



E.J. Camp

BORN: April 9, 1965, in Czechoslovakia.
PERSONAL: Single.
HAIR: Light brown.
EYES: Gray-blue.
HEIGHT: 5 feet 9½.
WEIGHT: 120 pounds.
VITAL STATISTICS: 35-23½-35½.

EVERY FEBRUARY, A MAGAZINE CALLED SPORTS Illustrated brightens our wintry gloom (and stirs up frenzied protest) by publishing its annual swimsuit issue. The magazine sells out, college boys hang its pages on dormitory walls, and outraged parents write letters to the editor complaining that their Little Leaguers are being debauched.

For the last few years, much of the excitement has been stirred up by a young woman named Paulina Porizkova, who spends more time in swimsuits than Mark Spitz. I do not know whether she can even tread water, but let's not quibble. With the arguable exceptions of Brooke Shields and Christie Brinkley, Paulina is now the most celebrated cover girl in the world.

She was born in Czechoslovakia, moved to Sweden, and at the age of 15 was a leading model in Paris. Whatever they feed children in Czechoslovakia and Sweden must be exceedingly nutritious. When Paulina was 17, she was discovered, flew to America and became a "star." She did not invent the swimsuit, but she certainly has done nothing to discourage its development.

Paulina is 5 feet 9½, has light brown hair and is rescued from perfection by a slightly chipped tooth. She lives in New York now, a city she at first disliked, and has a cat called Mephisto. Her English is slangy but pretty good, her French is fluent, she rides horseback in Central Park and has been known to attend the occasional disco.

I know, I know—so what? Just another beautiful, airhead model. Well, not quite. Paulina claims that she fled from behind the Iron Curtain for "political reasons." She tried for a time to be a serious painter but dropped the palette and the brushes when she realized "I would never be Picasso Junior." She doesn't enjoy modeling all that much, but it is a quick way to make money, lots of money, so that she can do what she really wants to do—which is, get this, to write children's books.

In the meantime, she has been on the cover of just about every magazine we have but the National Geographic, does commercials for soft drinks and (surprise!) swimsuits, and adorns the covers of calendars on the walls of half the gas-station garages in America. She probably makes a million dollars a year just by looking good, and she is as friendly as a puppy.

Paulina thinks America is wonderful. America apparently thinks she's OK too. This is the difference between Iron Curtain countries and the free-enterprise system. They put people in jail, and we put them on magazine covers. Paulina will be 21 years old in April. I'm shopping around for a Hallmark card already. I think it's important that we encourage young people in their careers.

She didn't invent the bikini, but this month she proved all over again that she knows what to do with one. Check out "Sports Illustrated" yourself if you don't believe me.

How to give yourself and your family

It's no secret that your children's success in life depends largely on the grades they get in school. That's why you should give them as many tools for success as you can. Especially a fine encyclopaedia.

The New Encyclopaedia Britannica is today, more than ever, the world's most valuable home library—the only encyclopaedia arranged into four distinct parts for easy use:

1. 2-volume Index makes Britannica easier than ever to use!

2. 12-volume Ready Reference puts the facts at your fingertips. Ideal for homework.

3. 17 volumes of Knowledge in Depth tell you more about entire fields of knowledge.

4. One-volume Outline of Knowledge surveys major fields of study and guides you to learning on your own.

Plus, for Britannica subscribers, the invaluable Britannica World Data Annual gives you instant access to the latest statistical information on 206 countries of the world. And your first copy of this year's exciting volume is yours as a free gift from Britannica Home Library Service, Inc., when you acquire Britannica.

Britannica contains 30,000 pages...44,000,000 (that's 44 million) words...24,000 photographs, drawings, maps and art works.

Yet, amazingly enough, Britannica is not out of your reach. The complete set is available direct from the publisher on convenient budget terms. Which means that Britannica not only offers you more encyclopaedia, but is a terrific value as well.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

Differences: 1. Pictures are missing. 2. Addition is different. 3. Arm is moved. 4. Crossed arms are switched. 5. Pointer is shorter. 6. Chair is lower.

Junior Whirl

by Hal Kaufman

SUM FUN! When the digits 1-9 were inserted in the diagram at right it was intended that each horizontal, vertical and diagonal row would total 15. However, two of the numbers are in the wrong squares.

Which two numbers need to be switched to achieve the desired result — that is, 15 in all directions?

1	6	9
5	7	2

Switching the numbers five and six will do it.

• ON A TEAR! Take a sheet of paper, fold it in two, then fold it in two again at right angles to the first fold. Now, tear it in half. How many pieces have you?

KNOTTICAL PROBLEM!

So near and yet so far, the saying goes. She was on a ship bound from California to Hawaii. Her sailor friend was on a ship bound from Hawaii to California.

Both left their respective starting points at approximately the same time.

When the two vessels met, which was nearer Hawaii?

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

STURGEON

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: FROM MORDRED'S AGENTS WORD OF THE INVASION PASSES QUICKLY TO THE TYRANT OF CAMELOT. WHERE WILL THE ENEMY STRIKE? MORDRED CANNOT DEFEND EVERY BEACH. HE GATHERS TOGETHER ALL HIS FORCES AND RESOLVES TO WAIT.

IT IS A FORMIDABLE ARMY, AS IF THE GODS HAD LIFTED THE FOUR CORNERS OF THE EARTH, LIKE A KERCHIEF, AND CAUSED THE RIFFRAFF OF HUMANITY TO TUMBLE TOWARD THE CENTER-- AT CAMELOT. MORDRED CHUCKLES IN ANTICIPATION.

THE THIRD OF BOLTAR'S FLEET IN PRINCE VALIANT'S COMMAND HAULS ABOUT JUTLAND AND SPEEDS TO THE LAGOON AT HEDDEBY NOOR. THE SMALL TOWN HERE IS ONE OF THE GREAT TRADING CENTERS OF EUROPE, A CROSSROADS BETWEEN THE ARCTIC AND THE TROPICS, BETWEEN ASIA AND ICELAND.

BUT NOW IT IS OVERWHELMED. A TOWN OF A FEW HUNDRED HOUSEHOLDS HAS BECOME A TENT CITY OF MANY THOUSANDS. FROM THE FIELDS AND FORESTS OF SAXONY HAVE COME THE MOST ADVENTUROUS OF KING CYRNIC'S SUBJECTS. UNDER ORLOG AND ROLLO, THEY WILL FIGHT FOR KING ARTHUR UNTIL FINAL VICTORY. AND THEN THEY MUST BE GIVEN LAND. THE SAXONS MAY SAVE BRITAIN, VAL THINKS, BUT THEY WILL CHANGE IT FOREVER.
