State, Federal Agencies Check Contents Of Barrels

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — State officials are checking soil and water samples to identify the contents of more than 1,000 abandoned barrels found at a site on N.C. 102 near Venters Cross Roads earlier this week.

Steven Reed, a spokesman for the water resources branch of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said today the 50-gallon drums were found early this month by a prospective buyer of the property. Some of the drums were empty, Reed said, while others contained fiberglass resin and fiberglass cloth and others contained "still bottoms associated with the distillation of acetone."

An investigating team consisting of representatives of the water resources branch, the solid and hazardous waste management branch of the Department of Human Services, and the Environmental Protection Agency took samples from the barrels as well as well water, surface water and soil samples from the area on Wednesday. Those samples, Reed said, were taken to Raleigh for analysis, which he said will take from one to two weeks.

When the results of the tests are complete, "then we'll know whether we've got anything on our hands or not,"

Reed said.

But Rees said "we can say that it looks like, for the most part," the material contained in the drums is "fairly harmless."

Although acetone is classified as a hazardous material, Reed said, "the still bottoms are essentially harmless." But "it's not a permitted site" for disposal of such material, Reed said of the location where the barrels are located. "That's a fact."

"Once the proper authorities determine who's responsible" for dumping the barrels there, "then we can determine the legality of the situation. As it stands now, it looks like it is not legal."

Reed said "one drum" found at the site "was marked with identification linking it to Grady-White Boats" of Greenville.

"The president of the company didn't admit the company was responsible," Reed said, "but he said where the company might be responsible, it would cooperate" in the cleanup. "It was an open-minded offer to help," Reed said.

Attempts to reach Grady-White President Eddie Smith Jr. for comment this morning were unsuccessful.

'Accident Waiting To Happen'

Environmentalists Say Texasgulf 'Disturbing'

By TOM MINEHART
Associate Press Writer

Environmental groups say last month's spill of clay-laden wastewater into a Beaufort County creek is the latest of "a disturbing pattern of environmental accidents" at the massive Texasgulf Chemicals Co. phosphate mining operation.

But company officials compare the environmentalists to "Chicken Little," and state environmental officials say they are "making mountains out of molehills" in some cases.

"We are gravely worried because there appears to be a disturbing pattern of environmental accidents at Texasgulf," said Jonathan Phillips, executive director of the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation.

"Most of the incidents we list are not serious incidents. What concerns us is that a whole string of minor incidents and near-misses makes us afraid that there is another major accident waiting to happen."

An accident reported Feb. 16 dumped about 50,000 cubic yards of clay-filled slurry into South Creek, a tributary of the Pamlico River, state officials said. Company spokesman J. Randolph Carpenter said the material should be removed from the 26-acre area of creek bottom within two weeks.

Meanwhile, clay residue from the 2,000-acre operation continues to be stored behind dikes in another 2,000 acres of settling ponds.

"There are documented holes in the dikes around the ponds," said Lisa Finaldi of the Clean Water Fund of North Carolina. "If there was a hurricane, it could wipe out the entire dike. The last spill covered 26 acres of the creek. If the dikes go... it could get a good part of the (Pamlico) river."

Carpenter said that was a "complete fabrication." The 34-foot-tall dikes, he said, are 200 feet wide at the base and 25 feet wide at the top. "They're designed with an incredibly high level of structural integrity," he said. "They're designed to withstand the 100-year storm people talk about." The clay pond area, he added, has become a wildlife sanctuary, hosting several varieties of waterfowl, deer and foxes.

Phillips said other groups scrutinizing Texasgulf include the North Carolina Fisheries Association, the North Carolina Coastal Federation, the Sierra Club, the Con- (Please turn to page 14)

VIETNAM ERA PEER COUNSELORS ASKED

Vietnam veterans are asked to volunteer to assist their comrades with readjustment problems.

Participants in the North Carolina Vietnam Veterans' Leadership Program based in Winston-Salem say are inviting Vietnam veterans to volunteer their assistance for job counseling, referral and placement of unemployed and underemployed Vietnam veterans. Some former servicemen have experienced post-traumatic stress disorder and other readjustment problems, often with alcohol and drug abuse included. Leaders of the program believe that these problems are best understood and those having the problems best assisted by those who have gone through the same situations.

Any veteran wishing to participate may contact N.C. Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program Inc., P.O. Box 11706, Winston-Salem, N.C. 27106; phone 919-724-9288 or 919-723-2821.

Leaf Opponents Set To Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican leaders decided against mounting a partisan battle against a budget bill that contains legislation to overhaul the federal tobacco program, but a leading tobacco foe threatened the bill's passage.

Rep. Thomas E. Petri, R-Wis., told reporters Wednesday that he and other House members were prepared to try to defeat the budget bill today as a way to stop the tobacco measure.

Gov. Jim Martin announced today that he and state Commerce Secretary Howard Haworth has sent a representative to Washington to work with the North Carolina delegation on the tobacco legislation.

"Although the Tobacco Program Improvement Act may not be the total solution, it is a workable program and could lead to a more stable tobacco program in the future," Martin said in a written statement.

"With either the proposed assessment or the pending legislation, the net income of tobacco farmers will be reduced for 1986," Martin said. "When we considered the two alternatives, however, we determined the Tobacco Program Improvement Act will provide a better legislative base on which to build tobacco program on in the future."

Meanwhile, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official confirmed Wednesday that the new Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law requiring automatic budget cuts could effectively trim 6 cents to 7 cents per pound off the federal price support for flue-cured tobacco this year.

Exactly how the price supports will be affected by the budget cuts depends on whether the proposed tobacco program changes now before Congress are adopted, the USDA official said. The tobacco program changes, part of a controversial budget bill, have been stalled in Congress because of disagreements over non-tobacco provisions.

Republican Senate leaders continued to be non-committal about Senate action on the latest House version of the so-called budget reconciliation bill, which is expected to

Some Blacks Favor District Plan

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Black Greenville residents in a straw poll conducted Wednesday by The Daily Reflector said they favored a straight district system as the safest way to ensure proportional minority representation in municipal government.

The poll was conducted at the third in a series of neighborhood meetings being held this week to give information on a proposed change in the city's method of election.

Blacks polled were residents of northwest Greenville, an area designated as District 2 under a 4-2-1 election system proposal currently favored by the City Council.

Approximately 38 residents attended the Wednesday meeting; 16 of the total attending responded when asked what system they now favored — 13 said they favored a straight district system, two said they would reserve judgment until they could gather more information, and one said he supported the 4-2-1 plan, which calls for creation of four single-member districts, election of two council members at-large and at-large election of the mayor.

One of three possible methods of election systems being presented to Greenville citizens this week, the 6-0-1 or straight district system providing for single-member representation in six wards and at-large election of the mayor previously, has not received widespread support.

Part of the reason blacks did not previously come out in favor of the 6-0-1 plan is because minority residents felt a decision had already been made by the City Council to go with the 4-2-1 plan, according to the Rev. David Hammond, a black community leader.

"Some of the people I've talked with felt that they were having the 4-2-1 plan shoved down their throats because of the attention the media and city have given 4-2-1 and because some other black leaders came out in favor of the plan," Hammond said.

At a meeting of residents who live in proposed District 3 of the 4-2-1 plan Monday, black community leaders including Councilman Ed Carter, D.D. Garrett and Rufus Huggins spoke strongly in favor of the 4-2-1 proposal, saying it gave blacks the best opportunity to elect multiple city representatives. Under the 4-2-1 plan, residents would have the opportunity to vote for a representative from their district, two at-large council members and the mayor.

Hammond said he, and others he has talked with, favor adoption of a straight district system because it is "the safest plan for assuring that we have a third of the representation on the council."

"Under the 4-2-1 plan, we can be guaranteed only one seat, we possibly could get two or three providing we have a strong and viable candidate. But with the 6-0-1 system, minority representation is pretty much locked in," Hammond said, Districts 2 and 3 are two predominantly black districts proposed under the 4-2-1 plan. Districts 1 and 4 are majority white districts.

District 2 has been called the most controversial district of the proposal, because East Carolina University dormitory students are included in the total population count. Students are also included in proposed District 1 (a majority white district), but are not included in the other predominantly black district — District 3.

Hammond and other opponents of the 4-2-1 plan at the meeting Wednesday said they were concerned that students could adversely affect chances of District 2 residents being able to elect a minority representative, even though historically students and members of other institutional populations do not register and vote in great numbers.

Even A Little Tip Is Too Much For Doubling Diner

DEAR ABBY: Please lay off your one-woman crusade to make waiters and waitresses filthy rich. Now you come out with the ridiculous statement that if you don't leave at least 8 percent of the bill, you are cheating the waitress! You haven't convinced me that they are living on the verge of starvation. I've heard of a Philadelphia waitress who raked up $80 in tips in one night, and a waiter in the Washington, D.C., area who averages $45 to $50 an hour in tips!

Anyone who pays $14 for fish and fries for two and leaves a $2 or $3 tip yet needs to have his head examined.

This hoax you're perpetrating about the "poor" waitress has just about run its course.

I'd sign my name, but there are a lot of dingbats out there, so I'm taking no chances.

DEAR FED UP: You are misinformed and sadly mistaken. I've never known a "filthy rich" waiter or waitress, but I've known a few who were lucky to break even.

With your attitude, please do them all a favor and restrict your dining out to fast-food places where you serve yourself. Or have a pizza delivered to your door. On second thought, forget the pizza; you may have to tip the driver.

For instance, I can explain "up" and "down" using words alone: "up" is toward the sky, and "down" is toward the ground. However, "left" and "right" defy explanation using reference points, so how do we remember which is which after a parent or someone else shows us?

I would be eternally grateful if you can find an answer to this baffler.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Creeping privacy paranoia. Sounds like something out of the spring nursery catalogue, doesn't it? Actually, it's a name I made up for a trend that has already hit the cities and may eventually invade the countryside.

It's a concentrated effort to seek privacy from the rest of the world. I'm not sure when it started, but the front porch was one of its first victims. Remember front porches? They had a swing that squeaked and metal chairs that rusted and always needed painting. Everybody in the neighborhood used to sit out there after dinner and sometimes they talked back and forth to one another. Nothing important. The weather. How the grass would have to be cut before the weekend. How the next one up could get the lemonade.

And then the front yards got smaller and smaller and the front porch was phased out to a pot of dead flowers and a doorbell you couldn't hear in the back yard. The back yard became Disneyland with a barbecue, jungle gym, patio, lounges, sandbox and vegetable garden. It was only a matter of time before the clothesline marred the scene and had to go. And with it went a part of Americana that will never have such an impact on American families.

The clothesline was a meeting place of women. They caught up on the events of the day, shared, dumped on one another and clung together. The clothesline was the original newspaper of the community. By reading the clothes you could tell who was toilet trained, who was not, who came home on leave, who had guests, who got something new, who cleaned house, who did not, who had sick children, who was out of work, who was going on vacation, who was entertaining, who overslept.

To round out this extra "room," fences and walls were built so they could "leis" in privacy. There didn't seem to be anything from neighbors they needed anymore. Large freezers in the garage and pantries in the house held a storehouse of food supplies that you might have "borrowed" in earlier times.

Unlisted phone numbers protected you from bothersome calls, and when you went outside to cut the grass or take a walk, there were headphones to isolate you from "hellos."

Creeping privacy paranoia got a toehold in society when we no longer needed humans to run our elevators, get our groceries, take us to a fitting room, assist us with our withdrawals at the bank, sell us a newspaper or get change for a soft drink.

I'm as much a carrier of creeping privacy paranoia as anyone else. I've traded communication for bumper stickers, sociability for technology and accessibility for "Wheel of Fortune."

What brought all this on was the other Sunday I was walking through the neighborhood and realized behind every wall were lounge chairs with no one lounging in them, barbecue grills with nothing cooking on them and locks on gates where no one wanted in.

I used to talk to myself. I don't even do that anymore. Maybe we're becoming too private.

Chicken Long Known For Its Versatility

By TOM HOGE

AP Wine and Food Writer

Chicken, the world's favorite culinary fowl for some 5,000 years, has been enjoyed by rich and poor alike in nearly every country.

The Spanish explorers brought the birds to America back in the 1500s. So did the Pilgrims some years later.

By the 1700s, experiments were under way in the colonies for raising domestic fowl that paved the way for development of today's poultry industry.

Chicken has long been an economical dish, inspiring cooks to think up special dishes with regional variations.

Soon the bird was appearing on the table in many guises, including fried, barbecued, fricasseed, in croquettes or baked in pies.

Most fowl fanciers regard the breast as the choicest part of the chicken, but some believe that the meat from the wing is more flavorful and tender. Chicken wings are a feature of many cuisines including Southern, Chinese, Creole and Spanish.

Chicken is a Sunday favorite, roasted in cold weather and served chilled in the summer. The warm weather dishes should not be overcooked and should be given time to cool before serving.

Fried chicken has long been an American favorite, with many regional variations. It can be deep-fried in fat, sauteed in butter, dipped in batter or even simmered in champagne.

One of my favorite dishes is broiled chicken breasts with beurre blanc sauce, as prepared by Paul Majane, proprietor of New York's Night and Day restaurant. This recipe is for four people.

4 chicken breasts, boned, skinned and split
3 shallots
2 cups white wine
1 stick sweet butter
1/2 cup mustard, any good variety
3 ounces honey
1 tablespoon mustard seeds

Set oven at 375 degrees and place 8 chicken breast halves 6 inches from flame. Broil about 6 minutes on each side. To prepare beurre blanc sauce, mince shallots; in small pan, add the wine to shallots. Cook until sauce is reduced to half a cup, stirring frequently. Add butter, 2 ounces at a time. When melted, add 2 ounces mustard and mix well. In small bowl, combine honey with mustard mixture; add glaze to chicken breasts.

Cracks

One and one-half million dollars will fill a lot of cracks.

That's how much the state highway department may be forced to pay to renovate a privately owned railroad bridge in New Bern so that a privately owned boat yard can work on larger vessels.

State DOT officials are protesting, with due cause, the expenditure of precious highway funds for a railroad bridge. Why? For starters, consider crumbling pavement, rapid growth and desperately needed four-laning across the state. Count the highway needs in Pitt County alone and there will be hundreds more reasons.

Next, consider constitutionality. The state Constitution allows payment of public funds to private entities only if the expenditure is for a public purpose. Besides the boat owners who will be able to pass under the renovated bridge and the boat yard that can make more money, the potential for public benefit is foggy — perhaps as foggy as the reasoning of lawmakers who spearheaded this pork-barrel project.

In addition to questionable state funding, the project cost will be shared by the U.S. Coast Guard — against the organization's will — thanks to legislation stomped to approval by U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones. The Coast Guard says the bridge is not an obstruction to navigation. Jones admits that in the absence of his legislation, the Coast Guard wouldn't be funding the project at all because it is of dubious benefit to that organization.

DOT officials would be wise to get a legal opinion on the constitutionality of funding the bridge project before they release a penny of highway money. The expenditure is doubtful. A more responsible move would be to stuff the money into the cracks that line the state's highways and misalign its citizens' tires.

A North Carolina dog named Sam, who turned out to be more than an ordinary bystander, saved the life of a mail carrier last year and is a finalist in a national contest to find the bravest dog of 1985. The honor may have been undermined.

The title carries with it a year's supply of dog food from the sponsoring firm.

Aside from being a dog with a Tar Heel background and a natural constituency, Sam had the potential of support from mail carriers across the land. After all, one of their own had been saved.

It all happened a year ago January when a mail carrier drove off the road near Canton and down a 40-foot embankment. Sam saw the mishap and began barking. He ran home and barked there, too. The lady of the house said "George, you better go see ..." and George did. The mail carrier was saved. She said she could have bled to death.

Sam gathered some local fame and became a real contender for Bravest Dog of the Year. Then the Missus launched her torpedo in an interview. Of the sponsor's dog food product, she admitted: "He eats it, but it's not his favorite."

Of course, the title goes to the dog who garners the most votes; and the sponsor has "constituents," too, among dog owners who will be voting and comprise a bloc that can decide the losers.

Sam may never know how close he came to national fame. It shouldn't happen to a dog.

WASHINGTON — The Philippine army's refusal to fight for Ferdinand Marcos was the key factor in a bloodless transfer of power few believed possible, but it also raises concern among Pentagon experts whether its troops will prove any more intrepid in battling communist insurgents.

Credit for the peaceful transition should not be attributed to Marcos' humanitarian impulses, according to Pentagon sources. They say his orders to elite Ranger units to attack the military rebels at Camp Crame were refused, raising a question: Were the Rangers making a political statement against Marcos or were they revealing a lack of discipline?

That is one of many questions asked in Washington about Aquino's new regime. Did President Corazon Aquino mean it during her campaign when she repeatedly promised to "eventually" remove U.S. bases? In the words of one administration official, could "crony capitalism" be replaced by "crony socialism"? Who will emerge dominant in the new anti-Marcos coalition?

Even those Reagan officials who were most worried by the tilt against Marcos are overjoyed that he was forced out without civil war and with the army intact. But they also realize this: Though ridding his country of its authoritarian ruler was surely the beginning of solving Philippine problems, a solution requires much more.

There is no certainty Cory's army will be more effective than Marcos'. Analysts at the Pentagon see perhaps half of the New People's Army (NPA) guerrillas responding to Vice President-Prime Minister Salvador Laurel's amnesty offer. The remaining half are well-armed, hard-core Marxist-Leninists.

In trying to root them out, the new government must do far better than the Marcos army ever did. Visitors to the Philippines, including us, have been appalled at the indiscipline and disinclination of many units to fight the insurgents. What is suspected at the Pentagon is that the refusal of the Rangers to obey orders could have been more evidence of military disarray than rebellion against Marcos.

What's more, the problem of private armies in the interior persists. U.S. intelligence believes Evelio Javier, a former governor of Antique province and a strong Aquino backer, was murdered after the election by just such a gang, not on orders from Manila. During our travels on the island of Mindanao, we found not only the government losing the guerrilla war but also a total breakdown of law and order.

The political acrobatics of Juan Ponce Enrile in keeping the defense portfolio in the Marcos and Aquino Cabinets is no good omen for military reform. Until recently, Enrile was considered part of the problem: a Marcos crony who became a millionaire during long tenure at the Defense Ministry that saw declining military performance. While Enrile's defection probably prevented civil war, it is no harbinger of change.

More is hoped for from Enrile's co-defector, Gen. Fidel Ramos. A man of rare integrity at senior levels in the Philippines, his failure to accomplish much during a stint as acting chief of staff under Marcos is excused by lack of support from the presidential palace. Over a McDonald's hamburger lunch at Philippine Constabulary headquarters in Quezon City (which one month later would raise the flag of rebellion against Marcos), Ramos told us what no other senior official would: The people were sick and tired of corruption.

But corruption aside, the Philippine army desperately needs arms and equipment — which means more U.S. aid. During the campaign, candidate Aquino told us her country needed less military aid because NPA insurgents would embrace the new amnesty offer. Ramos and other officers will have to explain that reforming the military will be expensive.

Thus, hopes for a tougher military effort depend, like much else, on Aquino backing away from some campaign pledges — such as abandoning of U.S. bases when the present agreement ends in 1991. To this end, it is notable that her most anti-American supporters are not in her Cabinet.

The new finance minister, industrialist Jaime Ongpin, is viewed by senior American officials as the best hope for economic reform. Although conservative businessmen are suspicious of him, Ongpin personally is concerned that Aquino is to his left and wants to pull her into a free-market mold. He will have help here from the new trade minister, Jose Concepcion, another rich businessman who headed the citizens group (NAMFREL) that declared Aquino the winner.

The Aquino Cabinet is thankfully more conservative than seemed likely in a post-Marcos landscape happily free of the physical and emotional debris of civil war. But doubts must remain, especially whether Cory's army can fight as it will have to in the months and years ahead.

Progress On The School Front

WASHINGTON — Over the past 20 or 30 years, many of the nation's public school systems have received sharp criticism from parents, special commissions and the press. Many of them have richly deserved it. The time has arrived to say a few words of praise. Things are looking up on the school front.

William Bennett, U.S. secretary of education, released some encouraging figures two weeks ago. Over the past three years, senior high school students in 35 states have improved their scores on standard tests of scholastic aptitude and performance. Thirty-nine states have improved their records on dropouts.

Much of the credit for this remarkable turnaround probably is owed to the National Commission on Excellence in Education. This capital city is famed for the unread reports of study commissions. Most such reports are ponderous affairs, tediously written, filled with indigestible statistics. The national commission's report of April 1983, was different. It was short, superbly written and stunning in its impact.

"Our nation is at risk," the commission said. "The education foundations of our society are presently being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a nation and a people."

The commission spelled out the dimensions of this risk. American students perform miserably in international competitions. About 13 percent of all 17-year-olds in the United States are functionally illiterate.

Average test scores of scholastic achievement in 1982 were lower than scores in 1956. The number of exceptionally high scores was falling. The declines were especially disturbing in areas of science.

Having defined the problem, the commission made 32 recommendations toward solving it. Local school boards were urged to consider a longer school day and a longer school year. We should get back to basics and eliminate snap courses on the educational smorgasbord. Students should be assigned more homework. Beginning teachers should be required to meet high educational standards. Teacher salaries should be increased, in order to attract talented people, but salaries should be geared to "an effective evaluation system."

The commission's report had a galvanic effect. Governors and legislatures went to work. Some of the good results are now evident.

Bennett reported that 31 states now have requirements that new teachers take certification examinations. Thirty-one states "have developed or are initiating performance-based pay and other benefits for teachers." Between 1981 and 1985, average teacher salaries increased from $17,360 to $23,582. Per pupil expenditures have risen everywhere. In all but five states, (Colorado, Hawaii, Minnesota, New York and Tennessee) the pupil-teacher ratio has declined.

The figures are encouraging, but on close examination they provide little cause for jubilation. During the 1984-85 school year, 11 states reported average teacher salaries of less than $20,000. Nine states were spending less than $2,500 per pupil. In Louisiana, 43.3 percent of ninth-graders never make it to graduation. The dropout rate is 37.9 percent in Alabama, 37.8 percent in New York and Florida.

Bennett's data suggest that money alone will not cure our educational problems. The District of Columbia ranks second (behind Alaska) in teacher salaries; it ranks third in per pupil expenditures; it averages only 15.2 pupils per teacher. Yet the district's 44.8 percent dropout rate is the worst in the nation. Among the states administering the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the district's public school scores are poorest.

It is imperative, or so it seems to me, that we do not let the steam leak out of the movement toward educational reform. Few of the states have adopted the commission's recommendation for a longer school day and a longer school year. Academic requirements for high school graduation have been tightened, but few states still insist on serious study of a foreign language. Much remains to be done, but Bennett's data show that much is being done. For this modest good news, a round of applause.

Strength For Today

Some months ago a friend of mine was trying to teach a young puppy how to behave on a leash. First the dog was way out in front, tugging away for all he was worth; a moment later he was far behind, being dragged along. Part of the time he was biting furiously at the leash, and often it became tangled in his legs.

Recently I saw the same dog trotting along in perfect step beside his master, the leash hanging slack from hand to collar. He has learned one of dogdom's great secrets — that the leash doesn't pull against the dog when the dog doesn't pull against the leash.

Apparently some humans aren't as clever as that dog, for they never learn how to get along with their master. God's laws are like the leash. If we don't struggle against them, they are the lightest of burdens, but if we keep trying to go in ways that are against God's will, we have a terrible time indeed.

carceration not only save money, they're also more effective in the rehabilitation of criminals than prison has been.

Mary Murray, director of the Buncombe County alternatives program, told a study commission that in its four years the Asheville-based program has experienced a repeat-offender rate below the state average. The program has also helped a number of offenders gain the kind of work experience they need to get a job, or to handle other responsibilities.

The Buncombe program is responsible for administering alternative forms of community service punishment. Instead of going to prison, offenders are told they must work a number of hours in a non-paid position. They may clean up the road leading to the county landfill, help out at a non-profit nursing home or day-care center, or help with repairs at a county building.

The offenders are almost always expected to pay restitution to their victims and the program has experienced a 93 percent success rate in that regard, Ms. Murray said.

Ms. Murray reported that 11 percent of the program's participants have been found to commit another crime. That compared with a statewide average of 15 percent for people who are put on regular probation.

Maybe of more long term importance is the reduction of the number of 16- to 18-year-olds imprisoned in the Western Correctional Center in Morganton, she said. That population has been cut in half recently and she credits the work of western alternatives programs. When a teen is put into one of these programs, she said, it is much easier to break the pattern of repeat offenses and repeat sentences.

Ms. Murray told of a number of offenders who once they'd done their community service work were able to get jobs either at the same place or someplace similar. The program also provided two pregnant teen offenders who had never been around children with some child care experience they are now using as mothers, she said.

Raleigh attorney Heman Clark, former superior court judge and secretary of crime control and public safety, told the committee that when he was a judge he would have loved to have had programs like this. "So many times I sat on that bench and I wanted to give some kind of sentence between prison and the very helpless probation program."

Clark said that many of the offenders who are sent into alternatives programs now can be diverted from a life of crime. "We can do an awful lot of good with these programs. Many of these people are people who've never had half a chance ... 50 percent of their crimes were committed out of stupidity."

Reagan Says He's Not Very Proud Of Hollywood Productions Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says movies were wholesome family entertainment when he was an actor in the 1930s and 1940s, but "I am not very proud of some of the pictures Hollywood is putting out" these days.

In a written interview with the Smithsonian News Service, Reagan recalled his movie career, which began in 1937 at the Warner Bros. studios and covered 53 film appearances before he left the movies via television to enter politics.

Hollywood has changed completely since the days of strict censorship under the Production Code Seal of Approval enforced by Will Hays, the industry's moral guardian, Reagan said. The code was abolished in 1968 after repeated challenges by moviemakers.

"I am not very proud of some of the pictures Hollywood is putting out," he said in personally written answers to questions submitted by Smithsonian News Service reporter Ink Mendelsohn in late January. "I don't even think the letter rating system is very effective."

"Back in those days, movies became family entertainment," Reagan said. "It was one form of entertainment that was inexpensive both in cities and rural areas. Parents could take their children to the movies every week and, with the production code, be assured they would never be embarrassed."

He added: "All agreed they would accept the rules laid down by the czar, including how long a kiss could be and so forth. In fact, some of the business fretted that the code was too strict."

"The classic story is 'Gone With the Wind' when permission had to be gotten for the Clark Gable line, 'Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn.' You see, in those days, according to the code, profanity could not be used at all."

"But David Selznick in making the picture threatened to use the line anyway and the fear was that if one studio violated the code, that would be the breakdown of the code. The Motion Picture Association agreed on a waiver for this one exception."

"Also, in those movies, crime could never be shown as successful; before the picture ended, the 'bad guys' had to get their comeuppance. Even divorce could not be shown as having a happy ending."

To illustrate the attitudes of that era, Reagan told a story about director Ernst Lubitsch's filming of a wedding night scene.

"Some wanted to 'fudge' on the code and do something a little racy.

Ernst sent the leading man and lady home saying he would not need them. Then he set the camera up aimed at the hotel room door," the president said.

"On action, the door gently opened a few inches and the bare arm of the leading lady's stand-in reached out and gently hung the 'Do Not Disturb' sign on the knob and the door gently closed."

"Everyone in the audience had their own picture then of the wedding night in contrast to the way such a scene would be filmed today," Reagan said. "The oldest rule of theater is that nothing done on stage or screen can match the audience's imagination."

Mrs. Mendelsohn interviewed Reagan by mail for the Smithsonian Institution's monthly feature service for daily and weekly newspapers. Her article marks the opening of a Smithsonian exhibition about the movie industry April 11 at the National Museum of American History.

The exhibition, entitled "Hollywood: Legend and Reality,"

Ousted Farm Family Gets Offers Of Help

HOLLANDALE, Wis. (AP) — Ken and Sue Massey say they have been deluged by offers of help since they lost the family farm to foreclosure and they may use donations from caring strangers to establish a trust fund for their children's education.

"We felt that the ones who lost the most from the foreclosure were our five children because we had hoped the land would pay for their college educations," Mrs. Massey said Wednesday evening. "We haven't decided about the trust fund, but we're seriously thinking about it."

She said the family had been overwhelmed with offers of help, including calls from people offering to buy the 310-acre egg farm from its new owner and give it back to the Masseys.

The family has remained on the farm, which was sold in an auction Tuesday to Raphael Peterson, a feed grain dealer, for $45,000.

The Masseys drew national attention last September when a letter Mrs. Massey wrote to the popular band Alabama about her family's plight was read by the band's lead singer during the nationally telecast FarmAid benefit concert.

She said one of the band members called her Tuesday to express sorrow and concern about the loss of the farm.

Mrs. Massey said she and her husband had not yet spoken with Peterson about his plans for the property, which had been in the Massey family for more than 80 years.

Peterson, who had said the Masseys owed him about $65,000, could not be reached Wednesday for comment. Telephone calls to his home went unanswered.

Massey, 34, and his wife, who is 29, have five children ranging in age from 18 months to 10 years.

Mrs. Massey said the family began receiving calls Tuesday afternoon — only hours after the farm was sold — from concerned people across the nation.

"We've just been overwhelmed," she said. "The telephone began ringing as soon as we got back from the auction yesterday and it hasn't stopped."

She said a caller from Denver offered to buy back the farm from its new owner and give it to the Masseys. Other callers, including one from Oklahoma, said they had land the family could live on or farm.

"Kenny and I haven't had time to figure out what to do," Mrs. Massey said. "People mean so well that we hate to discourage them, but we're kind of mind-boggled. We need time to figure out what to do and what is best for our family."

In addition to offers of help, Mrs. Massey said the family had received many calls from people who were upset that the Masseys were forced off their land.

"The public is just furious," she said. "They can't believe the U.S. government is letting this happen to its farmers."

"I tell them to call your congresspersons and let them know this is an injustice and that something needs to be done," she said.

Greenville police said five thefts were reported to the department Wednesday.

Officer E.M. Haddock said a trolling motor was taken from a boat at 100 Churchside Drive in an incident reported at 9:32 a.m., while Officer T.A. Lee said a bank card was taken from 1543 Bridle Circle in an incident reported at 10:12 a.m.

Officer D.R. ## Grifton Citizen Selected

GRIFTON — Businesswoman Jean Harvey Williams has been named Grifton's Citizen of the Year by the Grifton Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The award was presented this week by Dr. William Rasberry.

To qualify for Citizen of the Year, "the person must have contributed to the community over a period of years," said Dr. Ed Bright, 1986 chairman of the Grifton board. Mrs. Williams has donated land for the town's public library, as well as supported various community projects, Bright said.

Mrs. Williams manages farms, rental properties and investments, Bright said. She is president of Grifton Enterprises and a director of the First Citizens Bank of Grifton.

She has been a lifelong member of the Grifton Christian Church, and served as first female chairman of the board.

"I can't imagine anyone else to be more qualified," Bright said. "She has showed her love for the town of Grifton over a number of years."

Ray Wooten presided over the presentation, and Jerry Cox, 1985 chairman of the board, presented certificates to task force committees.

Street Improvement Proposed In Bethel

BETHEL — Town board members heard a request this week to have a street leading to the area of a proposed post office in Bethel paved, curbed and guttered.

Dave Speir told the board that he has talked with a company that has a contract to build the post office and that he has offered to sell the firm a tract of land behind the new Southern Bank for the facility.

Speir said there is a proposed corridor leading to the new post office site that has never been developed.

The board took no action on his request to improve the street.

In other business, Mayor Frank Hemingway told Hattie Cotten, a spokeswoman for a group of senior citizens, that he will appoint a committee to help the group secure a place for a senior citizens club. Ms. Cotten told the board that the group has been trying to locate a building for the club and asked for help in finding a place to hold its meetings.

Hemingway reported that a state grant for a new water well on Smith

Street has been approved but the Pitt County Board of Commissioners has not made final approval for the allocation of $17,500 in county funds for the project.

The board renamed a portion of Church Street, running north and south from Flat Swamp Road to East Church Street, as Morton Street.

The board voted to authorize two change orders under the fiscal 1983 Community Development block grant program. They involve the replacement of the roof on Mary Garrett's house at a cost of $1,200, and the installation of an additional piece of 24-inch tile, at a cost of $250, in a section where storm drainage is located under East Street.

Martha Mewborn, town clerk, said an application for an economic development grant will be submitted for Package Craft in Bethel to enable the plant to expand its present operations. The Mid-East Commission was awarded the proposal for the preparation of the grant application in an amount not to exceed $3,500.

Book Looks At OPEC

ECU News Bureau
OPEC, the international oil cartel that had consumers over the barrel with high prices in the 1970s, is finding itself being crushed by that barrel today, according to an East Carolina University political scientist.

Dr. Mohammed E. Ahrari, in a new book "OPEC The Failing Giant" published by the University Press of Kentucky, said in a recent interview that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries failed to recognize market conditions. He said the cartel now must accept lower prices or else absorb production cutbacks which could have harmful side effects among the OPEC nations.

Ahrari is also the author of "The Dynamics of Oil Diplomacy: Conflict and Consensus" published in 1980 and is a specialist in American policy process, international resource management and the Middle East.

He received a doctoral degree from Southern Illinois University in 1976 and joined the ECU political science faculty in 1980.

Barn Burned

Harvey Perry Jr., 19, of Route 1, Stokes, was arrested Tuesday night on charges of unlawful burning of a building.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said deputies and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation took Perry into custody about 10 p.m. after he allegedly set fire to a pack house on a farm about 2 miles south of Stokes. The building was owned by Don Langston of Winterville, Tyson said.

Pitt County Emergency Services Coordinator Bobby Joyner said Perry joined the Carolina Township Fire Department as a volunteer on Jan. 6.

Joyner said officers have been investigating a series of suspicious fires in the Stokes area. He said the fires, which include nine buildings — tobacco barns, a club house, one home — have occurred since Jan. 20.

leaders present at the meeting Wednesday, inclusion of students in District 2 is too much of a gamble.

"At this point what we need are guarantees that we'll get representation, for so many years we've been shut out ... and if the students vote in any number, that guarantee is gone," the Rev. Tommy Davis said.

In light of differing opinions in the black community as to what constitutes the best form of election to ensure proportional minority presentation, city staff members said they will conduct additional meetings.

"We are planning to get together with 20 to 25 black community leaders next week to see if in fact a consensus can be reached ... so we'll know which way to proceed," City Manager Gail Meeks said in an interview today. Community leaders invited to the meeting will include ministers, representatives of the NAACP and Southern Christian Leadership Conference, professionals and businessmen — "people who are well-known in the black community," Mrs. Meeks said.

If a consensus is not reached, Mrs. Meeks said it appears that a 5-1-1 plan, which to this point has not received much attention, would have a better chance of being accepted by the U.S. Justice Department.

The last scheduled neighborhood meeting for this week will be held tonight at 7:30 at E.B. Aycock School, a central location for District 4.

Senate OKs Farm Money Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a three-week snarl heavy with political overtones, the Senate has agreed on an emergency $5 billion infusion for farm programs together with a list of changes in the recently passed 1985 farm law.

The two bills — which promised to be just the first shots in a pitched election-year battle over agriculture — won passage on voice votes late Wednesday.

The farm money bill now goes to a House-Senate negotiating committee to work out differences between the two chambers' versions. The farm law modifications go to the House, where similar legislation ran into partisan bickering last week.

law changes was a non-binding statement urging the Reagan administration to make advance crop loans to farmers in time for spring planting season. The amendment was adopted on a 65-18 vote.

Such loans would cost farmers only about 8 percent interest, rather than the 13 or 14 percent they otherwise would have to pay, said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, the amendment's sponsor.

But it was unlikely the administration would heed the congressional call. Reagan vetoed a similar effort a year ago, and Agriculture Secretary-designate Richard Lyng on Tuesday said the idea was "a violation of my common sense."

The action came only a few hours after the Commodity Credit Corporation, the arm of the Agriculture Department that makes crop loans and subsidy payments, ran out of money to operate its programs.

The agency was expecting a surge in demand for money beginning today, as farmers began signing up for price- and income-support programs for their 1986 crops. Under the law, they are eligible for immediate subsidy checks when they sign up, as advances against payments that normally would come after harvest.

Money also is needed for a range of other routine programs, including purchases of surplus dairy products to support milk prices at levels set by

The House last week passed an emergency $5 billion money bill for the CCC that would keep the agency running at least through the summer. But when the measure reached the Senate, it became snarled in a politically charged debate over the proposed changes in farm policy.

As finally passed by the Senate, the money bill was stripped of House language that conservationists said would have endangered a new and ambitious program designed to take millions of acres of highly erodible land out of cultivation in the next five years. It was unclear whether the House would accept the Senate revision.

Mercenaries Held In Alleged Plot To Free Prisoner

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Authorities have stepped up security in the manslaughter trial of an Indiana State Reformatory inmate who is suspected of recruiting mercenaries for a bid to storm a courtroom and free him.

The trial of Roger A. Jaske, 33, on a charge of involuntary manslaughter of a fellow prisoner began Wednesday as Madison County Prosecutor Bill Lawler said he is preparing charges against the eight alleged mercenaries.

The eight were arrested Tuesday in a motel and a cache of weapons and ammunition was seized. They are being held in the Madison County Jail on preliminary charges of conspiracy.

Lawler said authorities believe Jaske recruited the eight through a classified advertisement in Soldier of Fortune magazine.

Jaske refused in an interview Wednesday to discuss details of the alleged mercenary plot but maintained he was innocent of the manslaughter charge.

"Put yourself in my place," he said. "I feel if you're guilty of something, go on and take your lumps. But if you didn't do it, then you shouldn't be there."

A state police spokesman said a ninth man allegedly involved in the escape plot was held in a Minnesota jail awaiting extradition to Indiana.

Officials announced Tuesday that they foiled an escape attempt concocted by Jaske, who is charged in the December 1983 prison hazing death of Clinton Page, 20. Jaske also is charged with battery and with being an habitual offender.

Panel To Propose More College Aid

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Physical conditions are deteriorating so much at the nation's colleges and universities that "buildings ... are literally falling down around our ears," says the leader of a White House panel studying higher education.

D. Allan Bromley, vice chairman of the White House Science Council's Panel on the Health of U.S. Universities and Colleges, said the panel will recommend increased federal aid to universities in a report to be released this month.

"We find ourselves ... with aging facilities, buildings that are literally falling down around our ears, with equipment that is literally older than the students," he said.

Bromley, a professor of physics at Yale University, said the report will also urge universities to take a more realistic look at future funding sources.

The panel of 14 leaders in education and industry was formed in May 1984.

George A. Keyworth, at the time presidential science advisor, requested that it determine whether relations between the federal government and the universities should be changed, paying particular attention to scientific and technical concerns "needed to sustain America's leadership in industry and defense."

Bromley outlined the panel's report in an interview Tuesday, saying he had decided to talk about the report before its official release because parts have recently become public.

No overall figure would be recommended for government aid to education, he said, but among recommendations is one to set up a $5 billion federal catch-up fund for updating college buildings and equipment.

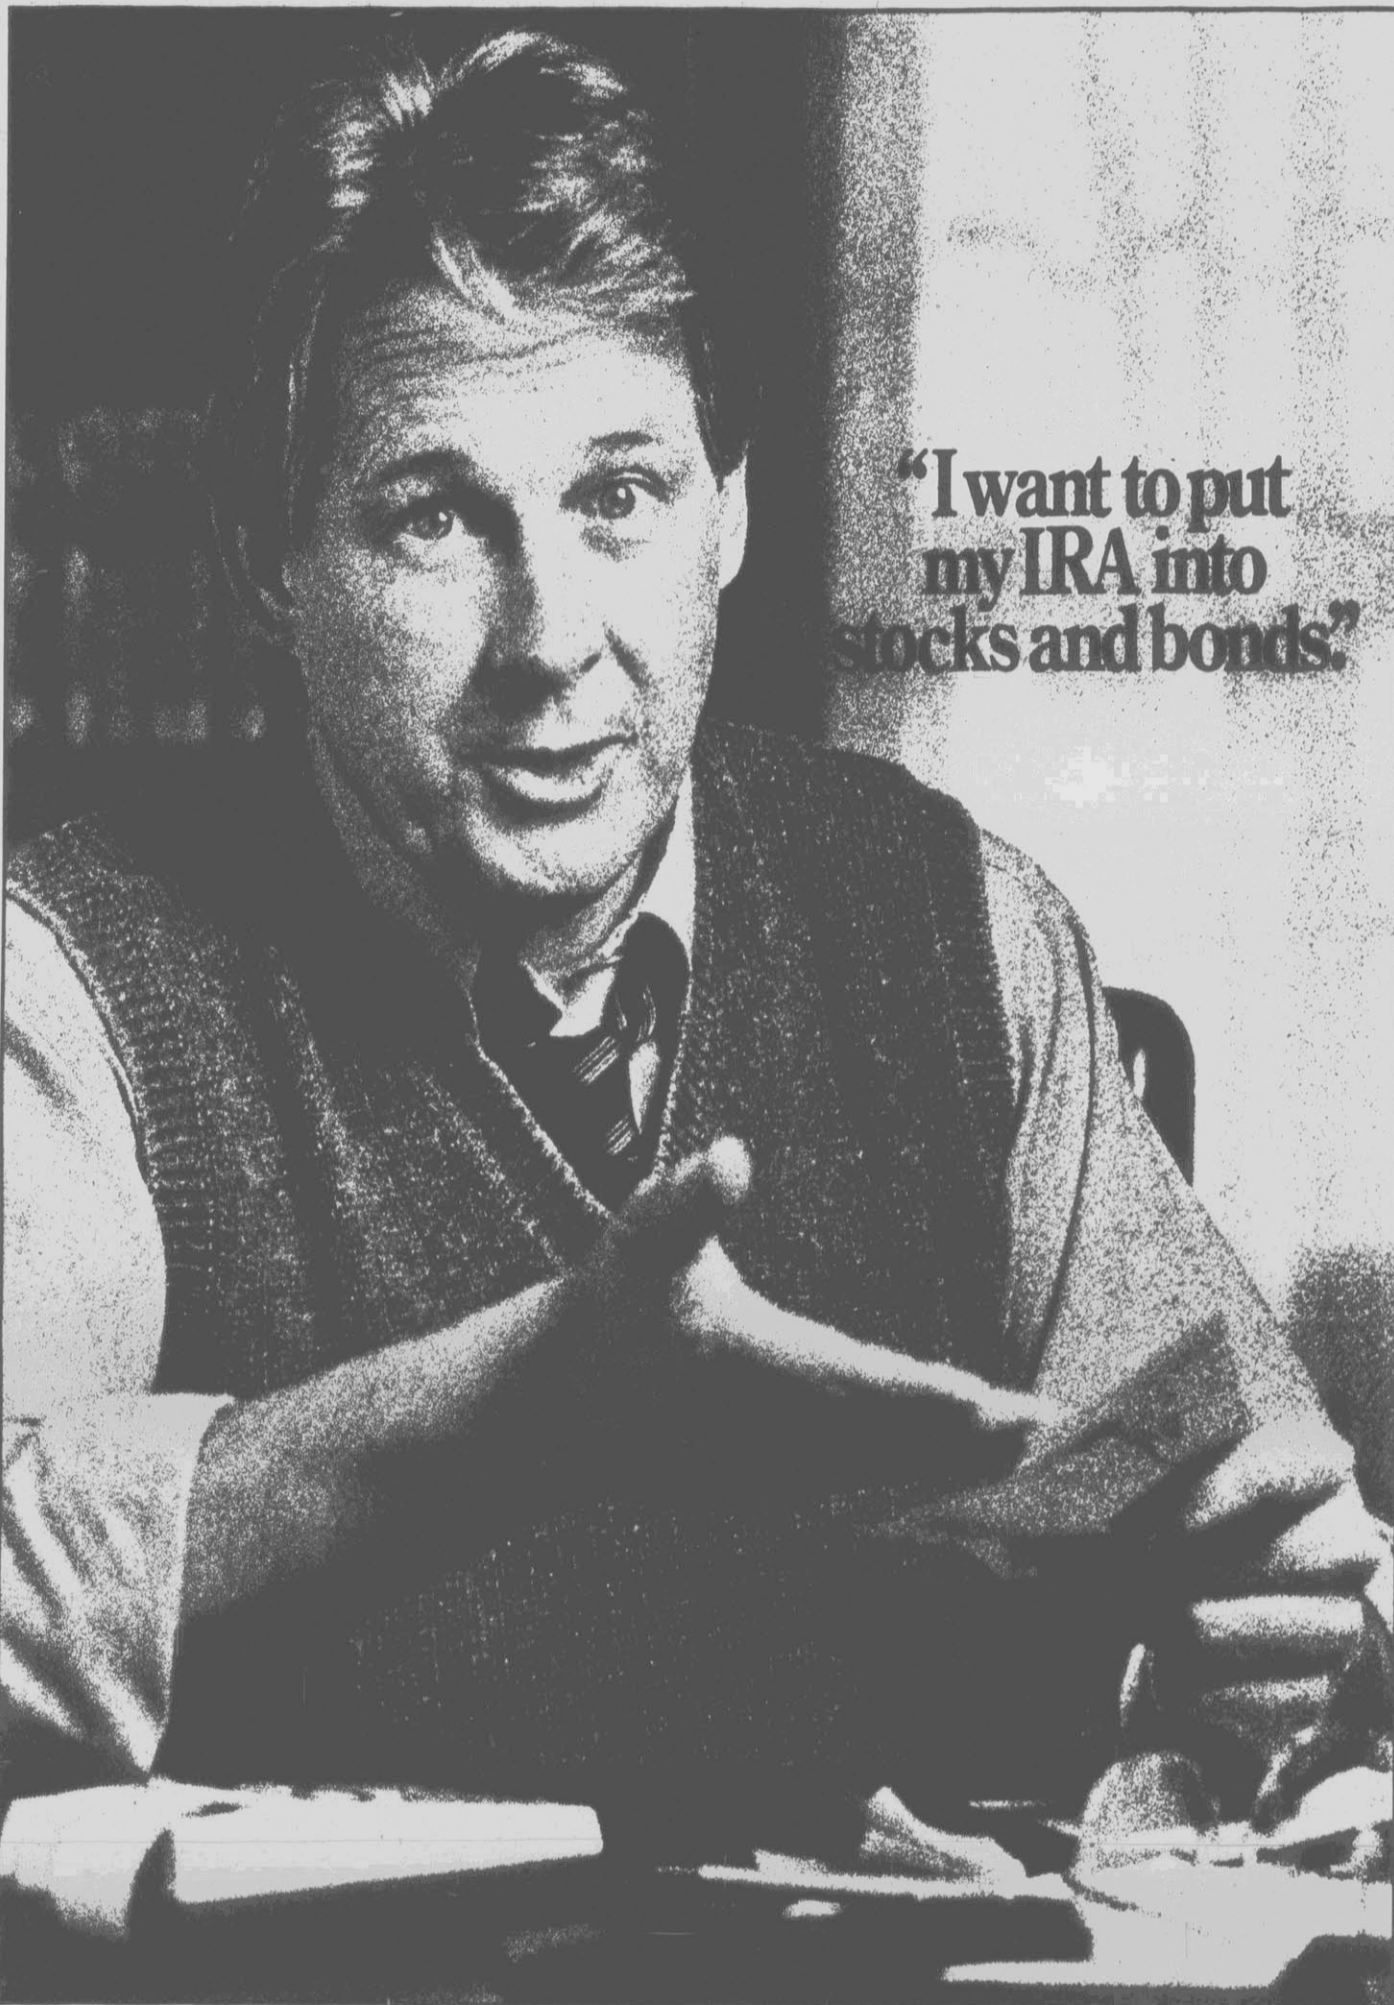

Under the proposal, federal funds could be used to cover 50 percent of the costs of any remodeling project, with the rest of the money coming from state or private sources.

The panel is also calling for a new scholarship fund, which Bromley estimated at $120 million a year, to be awarded to the top 1 percent of undergraduate students in mathematics, engineering and the natural sciences.

"We think this is the best investment the country can specifically make for its future," he said.

Other recommendations would give university researchers more discretion in spending government grant money and eliminate or modify accounting and paperwork requirements.

The panel also wants universities and government to encourage the establishment of interdisciplinary, problem-oriented research and technology centers, Bromley said.

'Tired Of Fighting The System'

Couple Drugs, Kills Three Children, Then Themselves

By TOM MOONEY
Associated Press Writer
LEBANON, N.H. (AP) — A couple who drugged and shot her children, torched their house, and killed themselves were "tired of fighting the system" over veterans benefits, according to letters they apparently wrote, citing the state motto: "Live Free or Die."

The letters purportedly written by Michael Dean and Caroline Hull, delivered Wednesday to WMUR-TV in Manchester and the Valley News here, say that the couple were "totally sane" Tuesday when they carried out the murder-suicide pact that ended their lives and those of her three children.

The letters said the action arose out of frustration over veterans benefits, "out of deep love for each other," and out of "continuous fears and threats we must live under from the world and our government."

"We are tired of fighting the system our leaders want to forget," said a six-page letter received by WMUR after bodies believed to be those of Hull, 32, Dean, 43, and the children were found in the charred rubble of their home.

A similar, but not identical letter was mailed to the Valley News. Both letters, whose authenticity has not been verified, contained numerous spelling and grammatical errors, and bore the signatures Caroline Hull and Michael Dean.

The letters, both written from Mrs. Hull's point of view, described the preparations, killings and fire as if they had happened. The handwriting in the WMUR version appeared to match Mrs. Hull's signature; the handwriting in the newspaper's version appeared to be that of Dean.

The badly burned bodies were found close together in the cellar of the home and were tentatively identified as Dean, Mrs. Hull and her children Kenneth, 11; Jeremy, 6, and Theresa, 4. The remains were sent to Maine for positive identification and autopsy by Dr. Henry Ryan, the state medical examiner.

"Before the children went to bed we dissolved sleeping pills in a glass of water that they always have before bedtime," said the letter to the newspaper. "30 pills each so they would be totally asleep. Then I helped Mike prepare the house for the fire. Spreading clothes everywhere, making holes in the wall. We poured Kerosene (this sentence was crossed out) I then took sleeping pills. We all laid on a mattress in the cellar."

"After Mike knew we were all asleep, and would feel no pain or suffer, he then shot us in the heart once," the WMUR letter said. "He then poured Kerosene all over up stairs in closets, holes in the wall and etc. making a stream to the cellar. And then spread Kerosene all over the basement. With a sheet wet with fuel oil sticking out of the fuel tank and a 55 gal drum, He then lit the fire upstairs. Once he was sure the fire was going good, He laid on the mattress beside me and our children. Then lit the cellar on fire from laying down. He then shot himself."

Firefighters found the couple's car and truck parked in a "V" blocking the driveway when they arrived at the pre-dawn fire Tuesday.

A letter about the deaths also went to John and Kitty Hull of Wilder, Vt., parents of Caroline Hull's late husband. A letter also went to her own family in Hartland, Vt. "Again I stress the point that Mike and myself are now, and at the time of this action, totally sane."

Study Finds Link To Suicide, Vets

BOSTON (AP) — A study suggesting that Vietnam-era veterans are more likely to commit suicide than those who didn't serve means authorities should weigh all the costs involved in military conscription, the author says.

"The casualties of forced military service may not be limited to those that are counted on the battlefield," researchers wrote in a study published today in the New England Journal of Medicine.

It concludes that Vietnam-era veterans were 86 percent more likely than non-veterans to die of suicide in the years after the war, and were 53 percent more likely to die in traffic accidents.

The study "indicates that before sending young men to war, especially one in which they may have experiences similar to those of Vietnam veterans, those who make the decision should weigh all the costs," the researchers wrote.

The researchers said their work shows a cause-and-effect relationship between military service in Vietnam and the elevated suicide risk.

"I think it demonstrates the experience of being drafted during the Vietnam era had profound, long-term psychological effects on people," said Dr. Norman Hearst of the University of California, San Francisco.

Several reports have noted a variety of problems — including marital difficulties, legal problems and depression — among Vietnam-era veterans.

But some experts argue that those who went to Vietnam were poorer and less educated than young men who avoided the war, and they would have had more problems later in life, regardless of their military service.

In an editorial accompanying the study, Dr. Lawrence C. Kolb of Glenmont, N.Y., called the analysis "ingenious" and said it "demonstrates the long-term excessive mortality of men who served in the military during the Vietnam War."

He said many veterans suffer from a condition called post-traumatic stress disorder, and that physicians should work harder to spot the symptoms.

The new study was based on a review of death records of men in Pennsylvania and California who were born between 1950 and 1952. In the three-year period from 1970 through 1972, the military lottery randomly assigned these men on the basis of their birth dates into two groups — those with low lottery numbers who were eligible for the draft and those with high numbers who were exempt.

The researchers noted that the two groups were identical except for their draft status. So any differences between them in later years must be caused by the draft, they said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied today, bolstered by new signs of downward pressure on interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 11.14 to 1,697.80 in the first hour of trading. Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 5 to 2 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

West Germany's central bank today announced a reduction of its discount rate from 4 percent to 3.5 percent. There were reports that the Bank of Japan might also lower its key interest rate before the week is out.

Analysts said those developments prompted expectations of further declines in U.S. interest rates as well.

Band Cancels Appearance

An appearance by The Band scheduled Friday in Greenville has been canceled due to the death of one of the group's members.

Richard Manuel, keyboardist and singer with the group, committed suicide in Orlando, Fla., Tuesday, according to Orlando police reports. Police said Manuel hanged himself in a Winter Park, Fla., hotel hours after the band gave a performance.

The five-member group, the former backup band of Bob Dylan, had such hits as "Up On Cripple Creek," "The Night They Drove Old Dixie Down" and "The Shape I'm In." A concert film, "The Last Waltz," featured the group, which had recorded 13 albums.

The group's next five dates have been canceled, according to the group's management, including several concerts in North Carolina.

servation Council of North Carolina and the North Carolina Wildlife Federation.

He said state Division of Environmental Management records on Texasgulf indicate there have been 69 "incidents with a potential for environmental damage" since 1979. He said environmentalists consider the recent clay spill and eight other incidents to be major.

From 1979 to the present, he said, emissions of sulfur dioxide have exceeded national standards for ambient air quality — the quality of the surrounding air.

In June 1983, he said, Texasgulf was "taken to task" by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for building erosion-control dikes with rocks and dirt that leached into the water.

In July 1982, he said, Texasgulf applied for a state permit to alter a creek and wetlands it had already destroyed.

In August 1981, he said, there was a major spill of acid into the Pamlico River.

From September 1980 to November 1981, he said, there were more than 30 violations of sulfur dioxide standards for surrounding air for which Texasgulf was fined $37,000.

In January 1981, he said, state officials told Texasgulf its operations had resulted in the loss of 400 acres of river and creek bottom and 200 acres of wetland.

In 1980, he said, a dredging accident spilled dirt over 10 acres of Pamlico River bottom.

Also in 1980, he said, Texasgulf was told its operations had caused major sediment damage to surrounding wetlands and creeks.

Jim Sheppard, spokesman for the Division of Environmental Management, said the 69 incidents did come out of DEM records.

"But some of these things are just not really anything major," he said. "In some cases, they're making mountains out of molehills. In other cases Texasgulf is taking steps to remedy them."

What the state considers major, he said, is the $37,000 fine for 31 violations of the sulfur dioxide standard, a $3,000 fine for another air-quality violation and five water quality violations in 1980 for which no fines were assessed because the problems were cleared up.

In addition, he said, the division is aware of complaints about "what at best can be described as an obnoxious chemical odor, causing burning eyes and skin." The division has placed monitors around the area and inspected vegetation to test for excess sulfur dioxide, but so far has not found the source of the problem, he said.

"Texasgulf is a huge operation," said Sheppard. "They are not the devil himself. We are not looking the other way. We recognize there are problems down there and obviously we're going to stay on their back. We feel like we're doing a good job."

"Considering the scope of their operation, it's not a terrible situation down there. The company is trying very hard to follow regulations."

reduce the nation's deficit by an estimated $18 billion over the next three years.

In an interview Wednesday, Dallas R. Smith, director of the tobacco division of USDA's Agriculture Stabilization Conservation Service, said the $1.72 support level effectively could be cut by more than 7 cents per pound under the new Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget cuts.

Under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, the first round of automatic cuts would be to reduce federal spending in most domestic programs by 4.3 percent. The effect has been for President Reagan to order the Commodity Credit Corp., which provides loans to buy tobacco that does not sell above the price support, to cut its spending this year by $823 million.

The cuts were to start taking effect this month, although the Supreme Court has agreed to review Gramm-Rudman-Hollings' constitutionality.

As of now, Smith said, the tobacco program would share in the 4.3 percent cut by reducing by the cash amount farmers would receive for tobacco bought under the price support program.

Although the price support would officially remain at $1.717 per pound, Smith said the farmer would receive only $1.643 per pound.

Hale, Martin Back For Tourney

By The Associated Press
 Steve Hale and Warren Martin will be back in uniform when North Carolina faces Maryland in the first round of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament, but Coach Dean Smith says the seniors won't play a vital role. Hale, a guard, is recovering from a collapsed lung, while Martin, a reserve center, suffered a foot injury.

"... Doctors have told me to use him about 20 minutes, 30 minutes at most, working him in gradually," Smith said during a news conference Wednesday in Chapel Hill.

Martin's foot was in a cast, which Smith and doctors hoped would speed the healing process.

"We think he can play, but not for any long periods of time," Smith added. The 26-4 Tar Heels, which have lost three of their last four games, will face Maryland, 17-12, in the final game of the first round on Friday.

Meanwhile, the seven other ACC teams were preparing for the league's annual tournament.

North Carolina State, 18-11, has lost five of its last six basketball games, but forward Bennie Bolton says there aren't a lot of complaints, especially from Coach Jim Valvano.

"He's been telling us what most of us know anyway — that, basically, we're playing good ball," Bolton said. "And, really, we have been. I know we haven't looked so hot in the last few minutes in some of those games, but you have to consider the competition, too."

Bolton said that while N.C. State would like to win 20 games this season, the primary challenge is to win the ACC championship.

"The players still look at the tournament as determining the true champ," he said. "It's always been that way in the ACC. And all the players know that our teams always seem to do best after they win the league championship."

The Wolfpack meets Virginia in the second game of the afternoon session at the Greensboro Coliseum, and Cavalier coach Terry Holland is trying to rally his players from a defeat at Maryland last Saturday.

"Unless we improve over our performance Saturday, our post-season will not last very long," Holland said. "Defensively and offensively, we showed very little poise."

The Cavaliers are 18-9 and split their regular-season meetings. Wake Forest, the third team in ACC history to go winless in the regular season, is trying to regroup for the tournament after a season which saw injuries to two key performers early in the season, followed by the defection of 6-foot-11 freshman center Mike Scott to his native Kentucky.

"I don't think there was one game all season where we could say we were at 100 percent. The problems just went on, ad infinitum," Coach Bob Staak said.

The Demon Deacons, 8-20, open the tournament by facing top-ranked Duke at noon.

"We'll need to be very good offensively because they're so good defensively," Staak added. "And we've got to control tempo because we can't play an 80-point game with Duke and expect to be in it."

For Georgia Tech, it's Clemson for the second time in a week. Those teams meet in the 7 p.m. game Friday. The Yellow Jackets downed the Tigers 74-63.

"It's always tough to play a team twice in a row. I am sure that Clemson will shoot much better this time around," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said.

Clemson shot 35.5 percent from the field in losing at Atlanta, but coach Cliff Ellis doesn't expect the Yellow Jackets to take that game as an example of what to expect from the Tigers.

"The game will be won between the lines. But as far as Georgia Tech is concerned, when you're sixth in the country and you haven't lost too many games, you don't get too complacent," Ellis said.

NCHSAA To Honor Scholar-Athletes

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — In an attempt to put the student back in student-athlete, the North Carolina High School Athletic Association has begun a program that will honor athletes for their work in the classroom.

"I think we will shock some people with the number of scholar athletes we have in this state," said Charlie Adams, the association's executive director. "I think this is one of the most exciting things we've done. It ties in with our trying to make athletes true student-athletes in North Carolina."

The Scholar-Athlete Awards Program, which will begin in the 1986-87 school year, will honor both individual athletes and teams, Adams said in a recent telephone interview from his office in Chapel Hill.

Teams with a 3.1 grade point average will receive a certificate, with the team in each sport with the highest GPA receiving a plaque. Individual athletes with a 3.5 GPA will also receive certificates, with a plaque awarded to the athlete with the highest GPA in each sport.

The GPAs will be figured for the fall and winter sports at the end of the first semester, while the GPAs for the spring sports will be computed at the end of the second semester, Adams said.

"This is an extremely positive step," he said, "which ties in closely with our position on academics and protecting the instructional time of the student athletes."

The plaques for the fall and winter sports will be presented at the finals of the state high school boys' basketball tournament at the Dean E. Smith Student Activities Center on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, he said.

The plaques for the spring sports will be presented in the fall during halftime of a North Carolina football game that is designated as NCHSAA Day, Adams said.

Adams said he came up with the idea of the scholar-athlete program about a year ago.

"Two things brought this up," he said. "We wanted the association to be visible but we don't want every time you hear about the association it's about realignment or a court case."

"And you always hear about the athlete's accomplishments (on the playing field)," he said. "We said, 'Let's carry this thing into the classroom and show athletes are students, too.'"

Havelock Downs Rampants, 6-3

HAVELOCK — Havelock High School pushed over five runs in the bottom of the second inning and went on to record a 6-3 baseball victory over Rose High School Wednesday.

It was the opening game of the year for the Rampants, while Havelock was recording its second victory in as many days over a Pitt County team. The Rams topped Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday.

"We didn't play badly," Coach Ronald Vincent said following the game. "We hit the ball pretty well, but we didn't get hits from them. We hit the ball solid and long on a couple of occasions, but the wind held it up and gave them a chance to go get it."

"We didn't do anything wrong in the game, we just got beat."

Both teams left men standing in the first two frames, but in the bottom of the second, the Rams broke the ice and pushed over five big runs.

Franks led off with a single and Steve Gainey followed, reaching when his sacrifice bunt was errored, both runners advancing an extra base. Daub, who hurled the win for the Rams, then grounded out, scoring Franks. Kelly Davis followed with a single, driving in Gainey, and Danny Webster got a hit.

David McDonald kept it alive with a walk that loaded the bases, and Pete Johnson singled, driving in both Davis and Webster. Kensey's sacrifice fly scored McDonald with the fifth run of the inning.

Rose finally got on the scoreboard in the fifth inning, scoring three times. Travis King reached on a two-out error and Eric Jarman singled. Curtis Perkins singled, scoring King and moving courtesy runner George Saad to third. Perkins moved up on the throw home and both runners scored when Scott Davis singled.

However, the rally ended there.

Havelock added an insurance run in the bottom of the frame. Laraway singled and moved up on a hit by Franks and a sacrifice by Gainey. He then scored on a passed ball.

Franks led the Havelock hitting with two and was the only one in the game with more than one.

The Rampants return to action on Friday, traveling to Eastern Wayne. They then open their home season on Saturday, hosting Greene Central at 2 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

Edenton.....15
Jamesville.....3

JAMESVILLE — Edenton High School scored single runs in each of the first three innings and went on to record a 15-3 baseball victory over Jamesville Wednesday.

It was the opening game of the season for both teams.

The Aces pushed across one each in the first three innings to take a 3-0 lead. But it was three in the top of the fifth that really did the trick.

Vernon Mizelle led off the fifth with a walk and Brian Bunch singled. Roy Ford drove both in with a triple and he scored on Willie Williams' sacrifice fly for a 6-0 lead.

Jamesville came back with three in the bottom of the inning. Jeff Phelps singled and Eric Spruill doubled. Both scored on a two-bagger by Craig Bell and Chris Jones reached on an error, scoring Bell.

Edenton then added five more in the sixth and four in the seventh before the game mercifully ended.

Bunch, Ford and Maurice Taylor each had two hits to lead Edenton, Bunch and Ford both having doubles. Bell was the only Bullet with two hits.

Jamesville pays a return visit to Edenton on Friday.

Krzyzewski Is Coach Of Year

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski, whose team had a brief decline mid-season but rallied to replace North Carolina as the nation's No. 1 team, has been named Atlantic Coast Conference coach of the year by The Associated Press.

Krzyzewski, 39, who was honored Wednesday for the second time in five years, received nominations for the honor on five of the seven ballots cast by a panel of sportswriters from the five states in the ACC region. Virginia coach Terry Holland received the other two votes.

At the start of the season, Duke was picked to be among the nation's top five teams. And after a short setback, the Blue Devils dethroned the Tar Heels as the nation's top team. The highlight of the takeover came last Sunday when Duke defeated North Carolina 82-74 in Cameron Indoor Stadium.

Krzyzewski gives credit for his success, which has developed into a 29-2 record this year, to the class of 1986. That class is led by Johnny Dawkins and Mark Alarie, two members of the AP all-ACC team announced earlier this week.

"We certainly have been blessed to have a group of young men to do so well for us on the court," Krzyzewski said. "They've been a group that's easy to teach."

David Henderson and Jay Bilas are the other senior starters, while reserve Weldon Williams is the fifth member of the senior class.

"There are times when each class draws criticism for not achieving or not being perfect," Krzyzewski said. "This class has achieved a high level of excellence. They demand that type of excellence."

In bringing players into the Duke program, Krzyzewski tries to take emphasis off a high level of intensity.

"We have a system where they have can have fun," he said. "That's why we don't put the burden of 'we have to win this game' on them."

Krzyzewski also credits his seniors and the rest of his team for helping his coaching technique.

"These guys have helped me become much more creative," he said. "That way, it's been more invigorating."

In turn, the players foresee more success for Krzyzewski.

"Coach K is a great coach," Alarie said. "I don't see why the underclassmen can't do as well as we have."

Maryland senior forward Len Bias was named ACC player of the year by the AP. He is about to become the all-time scoring leader in Terrapin history.

Bias, Dawkins and Alarie joined North Carolina's Brad Daugherty and Georgia Tech's Mark Price on the AP's all-ACC team announced on Monday.

Havelock took the lead with a run in the first, but Rose came back in the fourth. Vicki Parrott singled and Harkley hit her homer for a 2-1 lead.

Rose got its other two in the fifth. Tammy Newton and Casey Drewery both singled and Gina Parrott reached on an error to load the bases. Vicki Parrott then singled in both Newton and Drewery.

Parrott and Harkley each had two hits to lead Rose, while Simcox and Ebron each collected a pair for the Lady Rams.

Wilson Will Miss Year Start

By The Associated Press

The injury jinx has struck Mookie Wilson of the New York Mets for the second year in a row. The 30-year-old center fielder, who was limited to 93 games by shoulder problems a year ago, will miss the start of the 1986 season after suffering an eye injury Wednesday. Wilson needed 17 stitches around his right eye and four near the bridge of his nose after he was struck by a ball thrown by shortstop Rafael Santana during a baserunning drill. Wilson's glasses were shattered and he suffered lacerations above the right eye and an accumulation of blood behind the eyeball. Dr. John Olichney of the Mets' medical staff said there didn't appear to be any glass in the eye but because of the blood he was unable to determine the extent of the damage or how badly and how long Wilson's vision would be impaired. He said it would take three or four weeks for the blood to clear out. Dr. Gale Guivert, an ophthalmologist at the hospital where Wilson was treated, said he would need five days of bed rest to prevent further bleeding before the retina could be examined and that, if healing proceeds on schedule, Wilson could resume spring training drills in three weeks. "If they said it will take three weeks, it will take three more for him to physically come around. We're looking at six weeks," said Mets Manager Davey Johnson. The Mets open the season April 8 in Pittsburgh. Meanwhile, 15-game winner Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd of the Boston Red Sox also joined the sick list. The skinny pitcher, who carried less than 150 pounds on his 6-foot-1 frame last year, was ordered to fly back to Massachusetts for tests after experiencing an unexplained weight loss. But the pitcher missed the plane, remaining at his home in Winter Haven, Fla., with his new bride. Boyd said he had car problems and was unable to get to the airport in time for his flight to Boston. He said he would leave today. Mrs. Boyd, however, pooch-pooched the affair. "Anything to do with Dennis gets blown out of proportion," she said. "He has a little infection and he's going back to have things checked out." But General Manager Lou Gorman said earlier that Boyd had lost 10-12 pounds, although he declined to disclose the pitcher's exact weight. Gorman said the Red Sox became concerned over Boyd's loss of weight during annual physicals conducted after the opening of training camp last week. He said Boyd underwent a second test which showed "a little change in the liver" from last year. "This came as a big surprise to all of us," said catcher Rich Gedman. "He threw batting practice to me and Wade Boggs and looked better than he has at any time out." Braves Atlanta traded catcher Rick Cerone and two minor leaguers to the Milwaukee Brewers for catcher-first baseman Ted Simmons. The minor leaguers are pitcher David Clay, who was 4-5 with a 3.57 earned run average at Class AAA Richmond last year, and Flavio Alfaro, a shortstop who batted .193 at Class A Durham. The 36-year-old Simmons, an eight-time All-Star, has been a catcher for most of his 15-year career, although Milwaukee used him mostly as a designated hitter last year when he batted .273 with 12 homers and 76 RBIs. Simmons has a career average of .287 with 238 home runs. "We'll use him mostly as bench strength and occasionally at first base," said a Braves spokesperson. Simmons had to consent to the trade. After doing so, he left for his home in St. Louis. "It was a good move for Teddy," said Brewers General Manager Harry Dalton. "He's going back to the league he started in and with a club that has plans to use him in several roles. Plus, he'll get to visit his home twice a year. He understood why the deal was made." Brewers Cerone, meanwhile, said he welcomes his new role as a backup player in Milwaukee's youth movement.

earned the major-league minimum $60,000 last year. "I don't like it," the outfielder said. "I thought they would treat me better than they did. It doesn't matter what the numbers are. It's not what I wanted." Coleman had been seeking about $400,000. He was not eligible for arbitration. The Cards also signed third baseman Terry Pendleton to a one-year contract leaving them with just one remaining unsigned player, pitcher Kurt Kepshire. Phillies Veteran left-hander Steve Carlton, who has won 314 games, begins his comeback today from a serious shoulder injury. He is scheduled to work two innings of an intrasquad game. "I'm very satisfied with him so far," said Manager John Felske. "I talked with him Tuesday and he really felt great. He tried to throw harder and threw some breaking balls."

The 41-year-old Carlton has told Felske he feels no pain from the strained rotator cuff that sidelined him most of last season. Royals
Pitcher Bret Saberhagen has filed suit against the sporting goods company that owns exclusive rights to the use of the pitcher's name in connection with baseball equipment and merchandise. The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, contends Saberhagen did not read the agreement prior to signing it. Saberhagen was 18 years old and in the minors when he agreed to the proposal. The exhibition season gets underway today when Detroit and Chicago meet in Lakeland, Fla.

Bradley Falls To Tulsa In Missouri Valley Finals

By The Associated Press

As the longest winning streak in the nation came to an end, Bradley Coach Dick Versace found reason to be proud. "I am proud to be associated with a team that has tasted defeat only twice this season," he said. The ninth-ranked Braves lost 74-58 to Tulsa on Wednesday night in the championship game of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament, giving the MVC's automatic NCAA berth to the Hurricane. Forwards Brian Rahilly and David Moss had 22 points apiece for the Hurricane. With the best record in the nation at 31-2 and, until Wednesday night, the country's longest Division I winning streak of 22 games, Bradley also was expected to be picked for the 64-team tournament field. In the only other game involving ranked teams, No. 16 Indiana defeated 17th-rated Michigan State 97-79. Bradley's loss, its first since Dec. 28 against Clemson, came at Tulsa, and Versace said the crowd of 6,300, primarily Hurricane fans, played a role. "We had three games in three days, and we needed the adrenalin boost from the crowd," Versace said, "and of course we didn't have that today." Bradley trailed by 10 or more points most of the second half until pulling within 50-42 with 13:25 left. At that point, Tulsa outscored Bradley 14-3 to take a 64-45 lead with 4:15 to play. Tulsa Coach J.D. Barnett agreed that the crowd helped. "It doesn't mean much at times, but it helped tonight," he said. "I hope it doesn't take away from the glitter of the win. This team played a great basketball game." Hersey Hawkins led the Braves with 16 points and seven rebounds. Indiana 97, Michigan St. 79. Indiana took a half-game lead over idle Michigan and eliminated Michigan State from the Big Ten race. Steve Alford had 31 points and freshman Ricky Calloway added 19 for the Hoosiers, 13-4 in the Big Ten and 21-6 overall. Scott Skiles scored 33 points and became Michigan State's all-time leading scorer, needing 31 points going into the game to break the old mark of 2,014 by Greg Kelsner. The Spartans dropped to 11-6 in the conference.

"The game was kind of the way I thought it would be," Indiana Coach Bob Knight said. "It was an offensive game more than anything else. I knew they would score, so I just told our kids they would have to score also and not get knocked out of the box." In some other conference tournaments: Big East
In New York, Sophomore center Mark Bryant scored 18 points, and Seton Hall won its first Big East post-season game, 76-66 over Connecticut, to earn a berth in the tournament quarterfinals Thursday night against eighth-ranked St. John's. The Pirates, who had lost three in a row, led 45-38 when they outscored Connecticut 20-7 to boost their lead to 20 points. Bryant scored nine of his points in the run, and Connecticut lost its eighth straight game. Both teams were 3-13 in the Big East.

Southeastern
At Lexington, Ky., Mississippi State and Mississippi both advanced to Thursday's quarterfinals of the SEC tournament. Chauncey Robinson scored eight of his 14 points down the stretch as Mississippi State rallied to beat Vanderbilt 62-54 in one first-round game. Raymond Brown had 20 points for the Bulldogs, who will meet Auburn in the next round. Joe Ayers and Eric Smith had eight points apiece in separate scoring surges that allowed Mississippi to beat Tennessee 73-56, advancing the Rebels against SEC regular-season champion Kentucky. Ayers and Curtis Ritchwood finished with 18 points each.

Southwestern Athletic
At Jackson, Miss., Prairie View A&M and Alcorn State won first-round games in the SWAC tournament. Reginald Jones scored 23 points to lead Prairie View over Southern University 75-67, and David Whitney Jr.'s 21 points paced Alcorn State over Grambling 71-53. Both teams advanced to Friday night's semifinals with an automatic NCAA tournament bid at stake. Prairie View will play the winner of tonight's Jackson State-Texas Southern game, while Alcorn plays the winner of the Mississippi Valley-Alabama State contest.

Cardinals
St. Louis formally renewed the contract of National League Rookie of the Year Vance Coleman, who called the move "almost like a slap in the face." Although contract figures were not disclosed, Coleman, who stole 110 bases in 1985, is expected to earn about $165,000 this season. He

Pierce Rests Moncrief But Carries His Load

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Basketball Writer

Ricky Pierce wanted to prove that Sidney Moncrief wasn't the only reason the Milwaukee Bucks have the third-best record in the NBA this season. Pierce, making only his third start of 1985-86, gave Moncrief's sore ribs a rest Wednesday night and scored a career-high 32 points as the Bucks won for the 12th time in the last 13 games, 119-106 over the New Jersey Nets. "The big guys were setting picks for me and I was in my rhythm," said Pierce, whose previous high of 30 points came when he was with the San Diego Clippers in 1983-84. "With Sidney out, I knew we all had to pull together, work a little harder and execute well to make up for those 20 points we were missing." Pierce came out firing from the start, scoring 11 points in the first quarter and 12 more in the third period. The 6-foot-5 guard was 13-of-18 from the field for the game. "Ricky's got no conscience," said Bucks forward Terry Cummings, who scored 24 points. "He's a great offensive player, who came into this game with his mind prepared. We got him the ball and he knew what to do with it." Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Boston 108, Chicago 97; Los Angeles Lakers 130, Utah 84; Atlanta 122, Philadelphia 114 in overtime; Cleveland 115, Phoenix 100; and Indiana 120, Seattle 112. Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said Pierce also was a standout on defense against the Nets. He helped limit Otis Birdsong to 12 points. "Ricky rose to the occasion," Nelson said. "You can talk all you want about the 32 points he scored, but what I want to talk about is the defensive job he did. He's developed a dedication to defense since he's come here." Pierce came to Milwaukee from the Clippers before the 1984-85 season, along with Cummings and Craig Hodges in a trade for Junior Bridgeman, Harvey Catchings and Markes Johnson. Pierce and Cummings had six points each during a 16-2 second-half spurt that turned a five-point deficit into an 88-79 Milwaukee lead with 10:44 left. Pierce put Milwaukee ahead to stay at 78-77 with a free throw with 3:06 to go in the third period. New Jersey's Albert King scored 12 of his 27 points in a four-minute span to help close the gap to 97-93, but Pierce, Cummings and Paul Pressey, who had 21 points and 13 assists, led a Milwaukee run that carried the Bucks to a comfortable 109-98 advantage with 2:47 remaining. Mike Gminski added 20 points for New Jersey. Hawks 122, 76ers 114

Atlanta won its fourth straight against Philadelphia this season and second in two nights as Dominique Wilkins scored 37 points, including seven in overtime. After the 76ers took a 110-108 lead to start the extra period, the Hawks took control with a 14-2 streak that made it 122-112 with 53 seconds remaining. In the third period, Atlanta had scored 14 consecutive points for a 74-68 lead, but Philadelphia had a 14-2 run later in the quarter to lead 82-80. Moses Malone paced the 76ers with 29 points and 20 rebounds, while Kevin Willis had 20 points and 12 rebounds for the Hawks. Celtics 108, Bulls 97
Boston won its seventh straight and 18th in a row at home as Larry Bird scored 15 of his 26 points against Chicago during a 29-6 streak that started with 7:29 left in the second period and ended 11 minutes later. Bird had 11 consecutive points at one stretch for the Celtics as they turned a 43-41 deficit into a 70-51 advantage with 8:24 to go in the third quarter. The Bulls closed the gap to 97-91 with 4:10 left in the game, but could come no closer. Sidney Green scored 25 points and Kyle Macy 22 for Chicago. Danny Ainge had 21 points for Boston. Cavaliers 115, Suns 100

Cleveland broke an 0-10 streak in Phoenix by outscoring the Suns 22-7 in last 6:12 of the game. Roy Hinson, who scored 22 points, scored nine points and World B. Free and John Bagley had eight each in the decisive final quarter for the Cavaliers. The game was tied seven times in the fourth quarter before Free, who finished with 23 points, put Cleveland ahead to stay at 95-93 with 6:12 left. The Suns, who hadn't lost to the Cavaliers in Phoenix since November of 1976, got a game-high 30 points from Walter Davis. Lakers 130, Jazz 84
Los Angeles completed a sweep of its five-game season series against Utah with a rout that was decided by halftime. After taking a 32-21 first-quarter lead, the Lakers connected on 15-of-18 shots from the field in the second quarter to expand the margin to 65-41, then scored the first eight points of the second half to lead by 32.

America Morris Pins School Board, Opponents

SAN DIEGO (AP) — She's probably the only high school wrestler to display her moves on the Johnny Carson show. Sports Illustrated reported her success, and reporters and television crews cramped the wrestling room at Clairemont High School several times a week all season.

America Morris, 107-pound wrestler and modeling student, brought a publicity bonanza to a sport where gymnasiums are regularly filled in only a few states.

The 16-year-old sophomore, named for her mother's adopted country, is changing that.

"We have now for our general wrestling program more publicity than any other year in my coaching experience," said Gerry Knuppel, wrestling coach for the last five years at Clairemont. "The reporters" came out. They saw what other people were doing, the exceptional records that some of these people had, and they started writing them up."

America's celebrity started just before New Year's at a wrestling invitation where she pinned her male opponent. The result was front-page coverage in San Diego's daily newspapers.

Two months earlier, another San Diego high school girl, Kerry Hanley, made possible America's feat when she took the school board to the mat and won by default.

Fearful of discrimination lawsuits, the school board decided to allow girls to try out for boys' wrestling teams. Several did and a handful stuck with it. America Morris was successful.

"She certainly proved that conditioning-wise, she was qualified to be here," Knuppel said. "Skill-wise, she's a beginner like all the other ninth-and-10th-graders that we get at this school. She's picked up the moves as quickly as any of my beginning wrestlers."

Perhaps some of Morris' success in the rough and tumble sport has to do with being raised around older, stronger brothers.

It was in Knuppel's weight conditioning class that America first thought about trying out for wrestling. She had seen Hanley make her stand before the school board and coaxed a friend, Kary Clemet, into trying out with her.

"I had no intention of sticking with it," Morris said. "If she wouldn't have done it with me, there's no way

I would have even tried it. I didn't want to start off wrestling a guy."

"I wasn't sure she was going to be able to tolerate the cross-faces, the slams, the throws," Knuppel said. "So I thought subconsciously, we'll just find out if she wants to remain here. She's still here and she's got some bruises to show for it."

"She's gone through the gamut. She's had success, failure, frustrations."

It was never lost on her teammates, opponents or the fans that this was a girl taking on tradition each time she stepped on the mat.

"She had to deal with the pressure of everyone who came to a match. If she lost, it was because she was a girl. If she won, the guy she wrestled was a wimp. It was a no-win situation, basically," Knuppel said.

Cerone Welcomes New Role As Brewer Backup

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) — Veteran catcher Rick Cerone says he welcomes his new role as a backup player in the Milwaukee Brewers' youth movement.

"At this stage of my career, I can adapt to anything," the 31-year-old Cerone said Wednesday after the Atlanta Braves traded him and two minor league players to the Brewers for another longtime major league veteran, catcher and first baseman Ted Simmons.

"It'll be a better opportunity than I had (at Atlanta)," Cerone said. "I'm willing to be the backup catcher."

Cerone, hampered by injuries, batted .216 with three home runs and 25 RBI in 96 games last year, his only season with the Braves. His career average is .226.

The 36-year-old Simmons, a switch-hitter, has been a catcher for most of his 15-year career, although Milwaukee used him mostly as a designated hitter last year when he batted .273 with 12 homers and 76 RBI. Simmons, an eight-time All-Star, has a career average of .287 with 238 home runs.

"We'll use him mostly as bench strength, and occasionally at first base," said Braves spokeswoman Robin Monsky. With Ozzie Virgil expected to be the No. 1 catcher, and Bruce Benedict and Larry Owen as backups, Simmons will be used behind the plate only in emergency situations, she said.

The Braves acquired Cerone in December 1984 from the New York Yankees, where his playing time was limited over five years because of injuries, including two broken thumbs, and disagreements with owner George Steinbrenner.

Cerone's best year with the Yankees was 1980, when he hit .277 with 14 homers and 85 RBI in 147 games as New York won the American League East. After 1980, Cerone played in no more than 89 games.

"He's a little better hitter and has more knowledge about the American League pitchers and hitters," Brewers General Manager Harry Dalton said in assessing Cerone.

He added that the trade opened up the designated hitter position on the Brewer roster, especially for Cecil Cooper, the first baseman coming back from elbow surgery.

"This is a big part of it, the fact it does open up the DH spot for Cecil, particularly in the early part of the season," Dalton said.

Traded with Cerone to Milwaukee are David Clay, 26, a right-handed pitcher who had a 4-5 record and 3.57 ERA at Richmond during his fifth season in the minors last year, and Flavio Alfaro, 24, a shortstop who batted .193 at Durham during his first season in the minors in 1985.

Simmons helped the Brewers to their only American League pennant in 1982, his second season after being traded to Milwaukee from the St. Louis Cardinals with pitchers Rollie Fingers and Pete Vuckovich. His best year as a Brewer was in 1983 when he batted .308 with 13 homers and 108 RBI.

He told an interviewer this week that he expected this season to be his last with Milwaukee.

Under a three-year, $1.1 million-a-year contract, the Brewer... in 1987 had the option of signing Simmons for another $1 million or buying out his contract for $50,000.

Cerone, by contrast, is in the final year of a four-year contract reported to pay him $625,000 a year.

Because Simmons has been in the major leagues 10 years, including the past five with the same team, he had to give his consent to the trade.

After doing so, he left for his home in St. Louis.

Malpractice Rate Hike Goes Into Effect

RALEIGH (AP) — Medical Mutual Insurance Co., which provides malpractice coverage for about half the state's doctors, has implemented a 357 percent rate increase for family doctors who deliver babies in all but 29 of North Carolina's 100 counties.

Douglas M. Phillips, executive vice president of the Raleigh-based company owned by the 3,900 doctors it insures, said the rates took effect March 1.

He said the increases for other specialties range from 30.9 percent to 36.1 percent, depending on the physician's practice. The increase is the largest across-the-board increase since the group was formed during an insurance crisis in October 1975, he said.

Phillips said the company's risk assessment shows that family doctors performing obstetrics are facing an increased risk of being sued. "Unless the child comes out perfect, we're receiving allegations that the doctor is responsible for that," he said.

"Obstetricians have already been paying the higher rate, and all we are doing is moving family practitioners doing obstetrics to the same rate as ob-gyn specialists," Phillips said.

He said the increase affecting family doctors who deliver babies will be withheld in 29 counties, which have limited obstetrical care.

State Insurance Commissioner Jim Long said he fears an increase in those rural counties would force family physicians who deliver babies to abandon that part of their practice. The increase would represent a jump in premiums from about $4,800 to about $22,000, he said.

Long said a Beaufort County doctor told him he would be forced to raise his rates for delivering babies, which includes prenatal care, from $300 to $400 to about $1,100 to cover the increase.

"What it means," Long said, "is that the expectant mother in the rural part of the state will have that much farther to go to receive prenatal care."

He said the possibility of rural family doctors dropping obstetrical services is of particular concern because of the high infant mortality rate in North Carolina.

Phillips said he wants lawmakers to limit the amounts of claims patients may recover. But he said Medical Mutual eventually will assess the higher premiums to family doctors performing obstetrics in those counties if the Legislature fails to adopt reforms.

Long said the insurance company had been pressured to withdraw the rate increase in the 29 counties for family doctors doing obstetrics. Long had asked the company to supply actuarial data to justify the increase, he said.

"We still can't stop it but we can order them to justify it," Long said. "I was particularly appalled with the 357 percent increase for family practitioners doing obstetrics."

Phillips said he wants lawmakers to limit the amounts of claims patients may recover. But he said Medical Mutual eventually will assess the higher premiums to family doctors performing obstetrics in those counties if the Legislature fails to adopt reforms.

Veterans Seek Support For POWs

RALEIGH (AP) — The truth about American POWs in Southeast Asia will never be told as long as the U.S. Defense Department handles the investigation into those missing in action, says an official with the National Vietnam Veterans Coalition.

"As long as NASA was investigating the shuttle explosion, nothing happened," Ted L. Sampley, deputy national coordinator of the coalition, said in a news conference Wednesday. "When they appointed the independent commission, the truth began to come out."

The coalition announced Wednesday that it was launching a publicity campaign to spark support for an independent probe of reports that Americans are still being held in Southeast Asia.

U.S. Rep. Bill Hendon, R-N.C., has introduced a bill that would establish the independent commission. Nine members of the North Carolina congressional delegation have signed on as co-sponsors, Sampley said.

"It is ... time for those with credible evidence of the existence of live prisoners to make it public," he said. "It is time for government agencies to open their files and let the American people judge this issue."

Two former U.S. Army Green Berets and family members of missing Americans have filed a suit accusing the federal government of not doing all it can to secure the release of Americans allegedly being held.

Sampley, who said he had been involved in "minor acts of civil disobedience" such as disrupting congress-sional hearings and chaining himself to the White House fence, said Vietnam had changed its position of many years that no American prisoners were being held there.

Recently, he said, the Vietnamese told Hendon that Americans might be living in remote areas of the country loosely supervised by the communist government.

Even so, U.S. government spokesmen continue to insist there is insufficient evidence to prove the accuracy of the reported sightings of Americans in Indochina, Sampley said. He said the government had "viciously attacked" witnesses who had testified about the sightings before congressional panels.

Robin Bell, 24, of Carrboro, whose father was captured in Laos in 1968, said she has little hope of seeing him alive again, but still deserves to know his fate.

"When you live in vagueness, it's so hard," Ms. Bell said. "It's almost embarrassing when people ask you about your father. You have to take 10 minutes explaining what happened."

Tourism Profits Show Sharp Rise

By The Associated Press

Travelers and tourists spent a record $4.5 billion in North Carolina last year, up an estimated 7 percent from $4.2 billion spent in 1984, according to the N.C. Travel and Tourism Division.

The division estimates 47 million out-of-staters — nearly one in five Americans — took trips of 100 miles or more in the state in 1984, and the number for 1985 is likely to be higher.

The division said more of these tourists and travelers came from Florida than any other state, followed by Ohio, with in-state travelers made up the next-largest group.

Tourism is the state's third-largest industry after tobacco and textiles, the division said. But the 7 percent growth rate in 1985 was less than the 22 percent growth in 1984.

Nationally, travel and tourism expenditures also increased about 7 percent in 1985, according to the U.S. Travel Data Center, an industry research group in Washington. The center estimated Americans and foreigners spent $259 billion in 1985, up from $242 billion in 1984.

New Trial Ordered

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has ordered a new trial for a former Durham County magistrate, convicted of two counts of first-degree sexual offense, who was forced to represent himself at his trial.

Ex-magistrate Michael Bullock Sr. dismissed his two attorneys the week before the trial, which already had been delayed twice, and the judge refused to put it off again even though Bullock was unable to hire a new lawyer in time.

The judge did not take the steps required by law to ensure that defendants who represent themselves do so because they want to and are aware of their right to counsel, the Supreme Court said in a ruling Wednesday.

Prosecutors argued that since Bullock was a magistrate, he should have been aware of the law. But the high court opinion, written by Associate Justice Rhoda Billings, said, "Nothing in the statute makes it inapplicable to defendants who are magistrates, or even attorneys or judges."

Bomb Found

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Two Marines are in custody in the Camp Lejeune brig following the discovery of a homemade bomb in a wall locker at the base, a Marine spokesman said Tuesday.

The bomb did not explode and there were no injuries, said Lt. Col. David F. Tomsky, commanding officer of Lejeune's Joint Public Affairs Office. He said specific charges had not yet been filed against the two Marines, whom he declined to name.

Military police, with the aid of an explosives-detection dog, located the bomb, which was made from an empty parachute flare canister, black powder, wax and a fuse, he said.

Military authorities were told about the bomb by other Marines, Tomsky said.

Sex Charges

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A former Jacksonville High School student says he and a band instructor charged with crimes against nature had an ongoing sexual relationship from 1982 until 1984, according to police.

Gene Edward Lloyd, 38, of Jacksonville, was released on $75,000 bond from Onslow County Jail after a first appearance hearing Wednesday in Onslow County District Court. He is charged with two counts of crimes against nature and one count of taking indecent liberties with a minor, Jacksonville police say.

Detective Sammy J. Martin said the former student, who is now in college, said he and Lloyd had an ongoing sexual relationship when he was a student at the Jacksonville High School. The student said he became acquainted with Lloyd when he was 15 and a student of Lloyd's, Martin said in the statement.

The statement said the student, now 19, reported the matter to the police "because he said he wants to get his life and sexuality resolved."

Gypsy Moths

RALEIGH (AP) — A statewide survey for the presence of adult male gypsy moths has revealed four limited infestations of the pests and two larger-scale infestations in residential areas, the North Carolina Department of Agriculture reported Wednesday.

More than 15,000 traps captured 1,459 male gypsy moths in the survey. Limited infestations were found in Halifax, Northampton, Washington and Currituck counties, involving only one or two landowners in each county, officials said.

Larger outbreaks were reported in Guilford and Dare counties.

Officials are concerned with keeping outbreaks in check because gypsy moths have defoliated millions of acres in the Northeast and appear to be spreading south.

Lithotripter

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A proposal to locate in Western North Carolina a machine to pulverize kidney stones without surgery is under "formal consideration" by the Veterans Administration in Washington, D.C., officials say.

U.S. Rep. Bill Hendon said Tuesday the proposal is among 12 being considered as part of the VA's advanced technology medical equipment acquisition program.

Under the proposal, the lithotripter would be located at St. Joseph's Hospital in Asheville. The VA would provide 55 percent of the funds for the device.

Prison Directory

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials searching for answers to North Carolina's overcrowded prisons have a new tool to use — the first comprehensive directory of community punishment and treatment programs.

The Directory of Sentencing Options, a 211-page notebook that describes 161 programs, is being mailed this week to all the state's Superior Court and District Court judges.

The directory was compiled by the N.C. Center on Crime and Punishment, a private, non-profit organization, as a service to the state, said Stephanie Bass, executive director of the center.

She said the programs include the eight intensive probation teams and five community penalties programs that deal with adult felons, the 64 community service offices and

Martin Endorses Anti-Crime Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has unveiled a two-year program to crack down on violent criminals who prey on the elderly, even though violent crimes are committed most often against people ages 12 to 25 in North Carolina.

Martin said the statistics don't reflect the impact that vulnerability to crime has on the state's elderly.

"The fear of becoming a victim of crime is devastating to so many older adults in personal as well as economic terms," he said Wednesday. "A purse snatching is a loss of property; it also is an invasion very close to one's personal psychic well-being."

Martin called on the Legislature to pass a bill that would add time to a violent criminal's prison sentence if his victim was 65 or older.

The bill, introduced last year by Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, was endorsed by two committees. It reached the House floor, but was re-routed to the Joint Appropriations Committee in what Sizemore alleged was a partisan move.

Democratic legislative leaders said the measure needed further consideration because it could cost money by adding to the prison population.

Martin, in a news conference at the Executive Mansion, said the state should not be deterred from cracking down on violent crime against the elderly, "even though it could add to the prison burden."

The governor was scheduled to release today a comprehensive 10-year prison program that will include construction of new facilities and more emphasis on intensive probation instead of incarceration for non-violent offenders.

Martin's "Project to Prevent Victimization of Elderly North Carolinians" also consists of a public-relations campaign to heighten awareness of what the elderly can do to protect themselves without surrendering their freedom.

The state departments of Crime Control and Public Safety, Human Resources and Insurance will work with private groups such as the American Association of Retired Persons and the N.C. Federation of Women's Clubs, sponsoring workshops and passing information to law enforcement agencies on how to help elderly crime victims.

"Our older citizens will be taught that self-defense is an attitude, and that locks and other security devices are to keep the criminals out and not them, the law-abiding citizens, in," said Joseph Dean, secretary of crime control and public safety.

Human Resources Secretary Phil Kirk said the 60-and-older age group was the fastest growing in North Carolina. Abuse and neglect of the elderly is a serious problem, he said, but gets less attention than similar crimes against children.

In 1985, he said, about 80 percent of the reports investigated by the Department of Social Services Division of Adult Protective Services were cases of abuse or neglect of people 65 and older.

Analysts Say Piedmont, Delta May Seek Merger

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Piedmont and Delta officials deny the airlines are considering a merger, but analysts say rapid changes in the industry are forcing independent carriers to seek ways to compete with expanding low-cost carriers.

"Anybody that operates in the Southeast is going to be hit hardest, but particularly the remaining majors — Piedmont and Delta," said Lee Howard, senior vice president for the airline research firm of Airline Economics Inc. in Washington.

Analysts say the increasing competition may force Winston-Salem-based Piedmont and Atlanta-based Delta to merge.

Last week's proposed acquisition of Eastern Airlines by Texas Air Corp., which owns Continental Airlines and New York Air, is the latest example of consolidation in an industry in which nationwide route systems and low costs are becoming crucial.

"If the Eastern thing goes through and Eastern becomes a discount carrier, it will put a lot of price pressure on the Southeast, particularly on Delta and Piedmont," said Tom Canning, airline analyst with Standard & Poor's Corp. investment advisers.

For passengers, the pressure will mean lower fares — at least temporarily — as airlines jockey for an edge in an industry in which price often seems to be the lone differential among carriers.

Some analysts said they have heard Piedmont's name matched with Delta and Ozark Air Lines. Although Trans World Airlines announced last week that it was acquiring Ozark, Piedmont has been named as a possible third partner, which would add a strong Southeastern presence to the combination.

Louis Marckesano, an airline analyst with Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia, said, "The only likelihood is that Piedmont will not be an independent carrier in the 1990s."

Piedmont, he added, may have temporarily forestalled a merger by joining forces with TWA on its international routes. Last week, Piedmont and TWA announced an agreement in which Piedmont will feed flights to TWA's terminal in New York for connection to TWA international flights and vice versa.

At a news conference last week, Piedmont president William Howard said, "We have not ruled out a merger with anyone."

ABC Gives Late-Night Show 10-Day Experiment

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC has given John Barbour exactly 10 nights to get his act together or get off the air.
Part of the network's promotion for "The Barbour Report" says he is auditioning for a spot following "Nightline" at midnight. One ad says, "John Barbour has 10 days to make history or he is history."
Barbour, a former producer-reporter for "Real People," has put together a nightly half-hour show of humorous essays, comedy in the news, and light features. ABC will broadcast "The Barbour Report" five nights a week for two weeks beginning Monday.
Barbour said he's not worried. "People in this business aren't looking for jobs but for opportunities," he said. "This is an opportunity. Truthfully, I wouldn't take the stance of auditioning if I wasn't confident we were going to do a great show. I call it Phil Donahue meets Johnny Carson on 'Real People' with $1.50 to spend."

He said there's not enough staccato-taking on TV. "I miss expressing my opinion. I miss anyone on television expressing an opinion. You see it done so seldom, even humorously. One of the few people you see expressing an opinion nationally is Andy Rooney on '60 Minutes.'" He notes that he's been doing reality programming most of his career. He was the first host of "AM Los Angeles," a morning talk show on KABC-TV, and went on to do similar shows on three other local stations. He spent three years on "Real People."
Barbour is also taking another unusual approach. The show will be taped as coming "almost live from Van Nuys, Calif.," a part of Los Angeles in the San Fernando Valley. In the past it's been famous mostly for Van Nuys Boulevard, a mecca for teen-agers who "cruised" on Wednesday nights until police stopped them.
Each show will be taped at a small studio in Van Nuys for broadcast later that night.
Barbour recently rode in Van Nuys' 75th anniversary parade and was made honorary mayor.
Barbour's first field piece for the show is called "The Wine Challenge."

"I keep reading articles by wine connoisseurs about which is better, French or California wine. The people who drink the most wine are either very rich or very poor, so that's where I went for my survey."
"I got a bottle of $65 French wine and a bottle of $1.70 California wine and set up in Beverly Hills and Skid Row. I just said one bottle was French and one Californian. I didn't say one was expensive and one was cheap. It resulted in great human comedy. The people in Beverly Hills couldn't tell the difference but the people on Skid Row knew a good wine when they tasted one. One derelict started speaking French when he tasted the French wine."
Barbour also got a government film called "Blondes Prefer Gentlemen," which was made to teach sailors how to behave. He intercut the film with comments from people on the street.
A regular on the show will be the "Truth Fairy," who will appear in a corner of the screen during inter-

FOCUS

Tired of Driving

Lately, gasoline prices have been dropping rapidly. As a result, gas sales and joy riding may be able to make a comeback. Americans have had to limit gas consumption several times in the past. During World War II, rationing was imposed not because of an oil shortage, but to conserve on tires. Japanese armies had cut off the U.S. rubber supply. Citizens applying for rationing stamps had to swear they owned no more than five tires—extras would be confiscated.

DO YOU KNOW — Which nation is the world's top oil producer?

Johnson Sues Over Disclosure

MIAMI (AP) — Don Johnson has filed a $2 million lawsuit against a real estate broker who allegedly disclosed that the "Miami Vice" television star was planning to build a home on posh Star Island.
The suit charges that Gerald Llorens, a broker with Wimbish Realty Inc., broke an oral agreement not to publicly reveal any information about Johnson's property on the island between Miami and Miami Beach, the price of the property or any specific terms of the transaction.
Johnson hired Llorens last August to find property where he could build a single-family home. The deal was completed Feb. 10 and shortly afterward The Miami Herald published a front-page article on it.
As a result, Johnson said he will be forced to obtain additional security for his home and charges the disclosure injured and interfered with his "lifestyle, security, privacy and individual personal rights."
Llorens did not return telephone calls Wednesday from The Associated Press seeking comment.
The suit seeks $500,000 in compensatory damages and $1.5 million in punitive damages.

Shiites Say French Researcher Killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police patrols searched throughout Beirut today but found no trace of the French researcher a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem faction claimed it had killed, the police chief said.

"So we cannot confirm that he was killed," said chief Maj. Gen. Osman Osman.

Osman said police searched "all areas we suspect that the body might be dumped at. We are continuing the search today."

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, which has said it held six American and four French hostages, claimed Wednesday evening it had killed Seurat in revenge for France's extradition of two Iranian-allied Iraqi activists to Baghdad.

The claim came in a statement delivered to a Western news agency and newspapers in Beirut along with a color photograph of Seurat in captivity. There was no way to determine whether the statement was true.

Seurat, 37, a researcher with the French Center for Studies and Research of the Contemporary Middle East, was kidnapped on Beirut's airport highway May 22.

Killer Wolves

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Wolves killed at least 18 children and injured 14 last year in central India, the United News of India reported.

The killer wolves attacked children in Ashta and Inchawar areas of Madhya Pradesh state, the news agency Friday quoted Chief Minister Moti Lal Vora as telling the state assembly.

The bidding:

 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 2 NT Pass 3 NT Pass
 Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Nine of ♣

Just because a play looks natural doesn't mean that it is right. Before you play to the first trick, make sure you have drawn up a winning strategy.

The auction was straightforward. South described a balanced hand of 19-20 points, and North had enough to raise to game but no more.

West struck it lucky when he elected to lead a top-of-nothing spade rather than from his shabby four-card suit. The hand looked easy, so declarer wasted no time in covering with the ten of spades. He captured East's queen with the ace and took a losing club finesse. Back came a heart. Declarer still had only eight tricks, so he won the heart, cashed his club tricks ending in the dummy and tried the diamond finesse.

That, too, lost. West reverted to spades, and the defenders netted three spade tricks and the two minor-suit kings for a one-trick set. "Unlucky," muttered South.

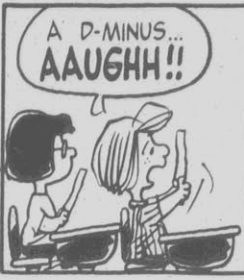

Only partly true. While it was unfortunate to have both kings off-side, declarer had only himself to blame for failing to make the contract. See what would happen if declarer plays low from dummy to the first trick and wins the ace.

When the diamond finesse loses, East cannot tackle spades without giving declarer his ninth trick. Assume he returns a heart. Declarer wins, crosses to dummy with a club and loses the diamond finesse. Now when West returns a spade, declarer covers with one of dummy's honors. The defenders can take only two spade tricks and the contract is safe.
