White House Veto Looms Over Budget Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said today that so much spending had been added to a $18.1 billion deficit-reduction package adopted by the House that President Reagan may veto the measure if it is passed by the Senate.

The three-year package of budget cuts left over from last year's budget deliberations passed the House on Thursday by a 314-86 vote, putting pressure on the Senate to go along with the long-stalled measure.

But presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, who earlier had stated the administration's opposition to the package, said today the bill contained $4.4 billion in program expansions, ranging from development of the Outer Continental Shelf to the Superfund for pollution cleanup and from aid to industries hurt by imports to Medicare and Medicaid increases.

"This will not significantly reduce the deficit," Speakes said. "It's become a Christmas tree bill rather than a bill to reduce spending."

The spokesman said Reagan's advisers would recommend that he veto the measure if it passes the Senate in its present form.

Among an array of provisions, the legislation would make permanent the 16-cent-a-pack federal tax on cigarettes, change the federal welfare law, grant an estimated $1 billion in federal loan writeoffs to tobacco farmers and funnel royalties from offshore oil and gas exploration to coastal states.

A much larger deficit-reduction package had been required by the budget Congress adopted last August, but as squabbles over the measure dragged on over the months its savings have dwindled.

In addition to legislators' desire this year to find all possible savings, the measure has been kept alive by a diverse group whose members all have something to gain.

After negotiations between the House and Senate on a compromise broke off last week, Democratic leaders decided to bring a version of the bill before the full House as part of an effort to resolve the impasse.

The House and Senate had reached an initial compromise on the measure last December, but continued problems between the two chambers as well as objections from the White House stalled a final agreement.

Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn., told the House that Reagan administration officials were "going to recommend to the president a veto."

Nonetheless, Quillen — whose state would benefit from tobacco provisions in the measure — voted in favor of the bill.

The House Budget Committee estimated the package would save about $6.9 billion in the remainder of the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 and save about $18.1 billion over three years.

However, the White House Office of Management and Budget has estimated that the savings would be less.

Helms Prepares Counter Plan For Leaf Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the Senate kills a House-passed budget bill containing legislation to overhaul the federal tobacco program, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has a plan to keep the tobacco provisions alive.

The House approved the budget bill 314-86 Thursday, despite a complaint that the tobacco measure was a "billion-dollar bailout of the tobacco-growing industry."

Pressure is mounting to pass the bill or jettison it because a major provision would make the federal excise tax on cigarettes permanent at 16 cents per pack. The tax will drop to 8 cents per pack March 15 unless Congress acts.

If the budget bill finally is declared dead, House leaders have prepared a bill to put off the March 15 deadline. Helms said he would try to add his tobacco provisions to the extender bill as a backup strategy.

The budget bill now goes up against Senate Republican leaders poised to join forces with President Reagan, who has threatened to veto it.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kansas, told reporters the Senate, which has three times adopted the bill in much the same form as the House passed it, probably would either amend the bill again and return it to the House or "just park it here."

Democratic House leaders said the bill passed Thursday was their last offer in the long battle.

Dole and Sen. Pete Domenici, R-

N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said a final decision would be made soon after another round of meetings with administration officials.

In House debate on the bill, Rep. Thomas Petri, R-Wis., charged that the tobacco forces had found a "nice safe place to hide" the tobacco program. The bill was brought to the House floor under rules that prevented amendments or separate votes on controversial sections.

Petri criticized the tobacco legislation as a breach of the promise tobacco-state lawmakers made in 1982 to operate the program at no net cost to taxpayers.

Booster Rocket May Have Struck Shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Investigators believe that the Challenger's huge external tank was hit during flight by its right booster rocket, part of a process that led to a "catastrophic in-flight breakup" of the shuttle, a presidential commission was told today.

Air Force Col. Edward O'Connor

Jr. told the commission that based on debris already recovered, "there are places on the external tank where we can detect impact from the right" booster rocket. The tank is filled with volatile liquid fuels.

O'Connor, in charge of the effort to locate and recover debris from the Challenger from the Atlantic Ocean floor, said it might take up to three more months to raise enough pieces "to complete our analysis."

His testimony came not long after a top NASA engineering official disclosed in an interview that cold-weather tests since the accident show that freezing temperatures do not cause critical safety seals on the boosters to fail from loss of resiliency. Fear of such a failure spawned opposition to the launch of the Challenger the night before launch from engineers of Morton Thiokol, Inc., which makes the booster rockets.

O'Connor was the lead-off witness at the commission's first public hearing in a week into the Jan. 28 loss of the Challenger and its seven crew members in the nation's worst space disaster. The investigation to date has focused on the rupture on or near a seam, or joint, between the bottom and second segments of Challenger's right booster rocket.

Reagan Degree Skipped

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Sources said Thursday there was a chance that President Ronald Reagan would have accepted an invitation to speak at the East Carolina University commencement exercises this spring if he were awarded an honorary degree.

One source, who asked not to be identified, said Thursday a committee that reviews nominations for honorary doctorates voted 4 to 2 earlier this week not to award a degree to the president.

The source, active in the Republican Party, said the president had an open date and "there was a 50-50 chance" that Reagan would have accepted an invitation to speak if an honorary degree were awarded.

The seven-member committee which reviews nominations is chaired by Dr. Joe Boyette, dean of the graduate school at ECU. Other members of the committee include Trustees Louis Singleton, Ralph Kinsey and W.E. Dansey and three other faculty members.

The source, not affiliated with the university, said Boyette did not vote.

Boyette declined to comment this morning when asked whether or not Reagan had been considered for an honorary degree.

"I'm not going to discuss the actions of that committee," he said, but acknowledged the question of awarding an honorary degree to the president "has been brought up several times."

Boyette said "I only vote in case of a tie, and in that case, I always vote 'no.'"

He emphasized that the question of a speaker for graduation "is entirely up to somebody else. It's not something the committee deals with at all."

COFFEEMAKERS RECALLED

The Sunbeam Appliance Co. of Oak Brook, Ill., has announced the voluntary recall of 8,200 under-cabinet Model 15306 Sunbeam Coffeemaker Flavor-Lock drip coffeemakers.

Sunbeam has learned that the heating element in some of these coffeemakers can loosen with use and shift position to cause a hot spot. Under certain conditions, the plastic shell of the coffeemaker can ignite to create a fire hazard.

From January 1985 to date, Sunbeam received 15 reports of this model coffeemaker having caught fire.

Recalled units can be identified by the model number 15306, the service number 15-30AC, and the date codes GJA, GJB and GJC, all stamped into the metal plates at the rears of the units.

Fed Sets Off Wave Of Rate Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board today cut a key interest rate from 7.5 percent to 7.0 percent. Within minutes of the announcement, banks began lowering their interest rates as well.

The nation's central bank reduced by 0.5 percentage point its discount rate, the interest charged in making loans to financial institutions.

It was the first change in the rate since a similar 0.5 percent cut in May.

A drop in the discount rate is the most dramatic signal the central bank can make to send a wide variety of interest rates, including mortgage rates, lower.

Almost immediately, two major New York banks — Chase Manhattan and Chemical — cut their prime rates from 9.5 percent to 9 percent.

The two banks had not cut their prime rates, the interest charged their most credit-worthy institutional borrowers, since mid-June.

Interest rates have already been falling sharply in recent weeks, with mortgage rates in many parts of the country dropping below 10 percent for the first time in more than seven years.

These big declines have come about primarily because of a belief in financial markets that plummeting oil prices will push inflation lower.

In announcing its action, the Fed took note of the good news on oil prices and said the reduction in the discount rate was taken "in the context of similar actions by other important industrial countries...."

The action followed by hours a similar 0.5 percentage point cut in the Bank of Japan's discount rate to 4 percent. On Thursday, the West German Bundesbank trimmed its discount rate 0.5 percentage point to 3.5 percent.

These actions were expected to accelerate a trend to lower interest rates elsewhere as other industrialized countries move to spur economic growth.

The dollar has been declining rapidly since September. Volcker, in congressional testimony last month, said this drop could raise fears of increasing inflation in the United States.

Whites Shun District Hearings

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

While Greenville black residents have been vocal about a proposed change in the city's method of election, area white input has been minimal, according to city personnel.

At four neighborhood meetings held this week to explain proposed changes in the municipal method of election, city personnel said black attendance outnumbered white attendance by 75 percent. Approximately 62 blacks attended neighborhood meetings and 22 whites attended, bringing total participation to 82.

Although Greenville's population is nearing 40,000, turnout of 82 citizens for the meetings was "not bad," according to Dr. Dorothy Clayton.

Dr. Clayton, an assistant professor with the East Carolina University Department of Political Science, said in an interview this morning that turnout for municipal meetings, public hearings and elections is traditionally low, is episodic at best, and that public participation in the recent neighborhood meetings "could have been worse."

"Attendance is usually low unless some particular issue has really antagonized one section of the community, then supporters may appear in sizeable numbers," she said.

The most heavily attended neighborhood meetings were in proposed minority Districts 2 and 3. According to city officials, the black population of the city, which is concentrated in those districts, has the most to gain in terms of representation from a change in method of election.

Attendance Thursday at the final neighborhood meeting in District 4 numbered only four — two white and two black. District 4 is one of two proposed majority white districts and includes residents of southeast Greenville.

District 1, which is composed of the Tar River Neighborhood area, had the heaviest turnout of white citizens — 15 whites and no blacks.

Pitt County Women Physicians Recognized At Special Program

Women physicians in Pitt County were honored Thursday night at the Women in Leadership 1986 program.

The program topic was "Women in Medicine." Drs. Malene C. Irons, Lesly T. Mega, Janice E. Daugherty and Janice A. Shipley, all of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, were panel speakers.

Dr. Irons, a clinical professor, discussed what she called her "amazing experiences." She was formerly director of the ECU Developmental Evaluation Clinic, which serves 27 counties.

Dr. Daugherty is an assistant professor of family medicine and discussed current technology. "Simple lifestyles, diets and exercising are very important," she said. "Doctors are trained for different purposes, but each is important."

Dr. Shipley is in her final year in residency training in the department of family medicine. She was a former teacher in the areas of languages, math, English and sciences. "A resident is a medical doctor, but is in training for a speciality — mine is in family practice," she said.

Dr. Mega is president of the American Medical Women's Association and is an associate professor of psychology. "We are living in a transitional period with the development of new values. It is a deciding area for women, they have more choices. There are more female physicians in society today," she said. Dr. Mega related how females can cope with contemporary life.

Carrie Lin Gurganus, an administrative assistant in the school of medicine, introduced panelists. Louise Downing, chairman of the Pitt County Women's Commission, recognized the women physicians, giving them certificates.

Those honored with certificates included: Jeanne S. Berretta, Andrea L. Brand, Diane J. Campbell, Kathleen Cline, Dr. Daugherty, Jozefa Deborski, Susan D. Foreman, Elizabeth S. Gamble, Marilyn Gowen, Roberta S. Gray, Dr. Irons, Sudish Kataria, Jean F. Kenny, Jeannine Meece.

Dr. Mega, Karla E. Nelson, Sue Nelson, Pamela Pappas, Hee Kim Park, Mary J. Raab, V. Gail Ray, Rita L. Saldanha, Juliet K. Song, Angela Stewart, Rosemary A. Thomas, Sumiko Ts'Kamura, Shirley Williamson, Harriet H. Wooten, Debra J. Wright and Judith S. Yongue.

Others receiving certificates of recognition from Mrs. Downing were Helen Simpson, Ms. Gurganus, Rosalie Trotman and Dr. Shipley.

Allergy-Prone Animal Lovers Keep Their Pets

By EDYTHE YASAI
The Phoenix Gazette

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Some humans continue to live with pets that make them sick, allergists say.

"If a child has a drippy nose because a cat's in the house, I tell the parents they should get rid of the animal. But if the child has severe asthma and can't breathe, they have no choice," Dr. Bruno Freigang of Calgary, Alberta, Canada, said. "If the parents refuse," he added, "I give them hell."

Bruno and other doctors attending the 42nd annual Congress of the American College of Allergists here recently said many of their patients were pet owners who would rather get medical care for their animal allergies than part with their dogs and cats.

"They get very attached to their animals," Freigang said, adding that he is often rebuffed when he tells patients to "kick the cat out of the house."

Dr. Lawrence Chiaromonte, a professor at Long Island College Hospital in Brooklyn, N.Y., said he had decided to become an allergist "because one of my best friends in school wanted to become a veterinarian and he was allergic to dogs."

"Today he's a vet and he's still wheezing," he said.

Chiaromonte said he knew many veterinarians and pet owners who were allergic to domestic animals.

If the humans cannot or will not avoid contact, he advises them to improve air filtration systems in their offices and homes, to vacuum and dust more often and to limit contact with allergy-causing pets.

He also injects many patients with liquefied, purified animal material and hair when they decide they would rather submit to periodic injections than part with their pets.

Cat allergies are the most common, and a large number of drug Area female residents were also recognized by Mrs. Downing.

Special guests present were state Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. and Dr. Fred Irons.

The program and reception were sponsored by the Pitt County Women's Commission, American Business Women's Association, Women's Network, Pitt Community College Women's Studies Advisory Council, and American Association of University Women.

Victim Not Bitter About Accident

By DEBORAH PATZ

Greenville Tribune-Review
INDIANA, Pa. (AP) — There was a moment when Evelyn Dermitt realized the accident was inevitable.

She was driving along old Route 119 just outside Indiana one day in mid-October 1982 when she saw a car coming at her almost head-on. At the wheel, a drunk driver.

The collision left Dermitt seriously injured. Every bone in her left foot was smashed. Her pelvis was broken in seven places, her legs were injured, and her forehead was gashed.

"I had no internal injuries, no brain injury ... I was lucky," she says.

Luck, thankfulness, lessons — these are words that creep into Dermitt's conversation frequently when she talks about the accident that later prompted a close friend to organize an Indiana County Chapter of MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving).

It was 15 months before Dermitt was able to return to work at the styling salon she had opened shortly before the accident. She was hospitalized for six weeks and had seven major operations in four weeks. Because of her pelvic injuries, she had to lie flat on her back for six weeks and was forbidden to get out of bed. She had to learn to walk again. She still has a metal plate in her right leg, two metal plates in her pelvis, a deep scar on her right leg and a limp.

Dermitt doesn't really want to talk about her injuries. She'd much rather talk about the things she feels she learned during her recovery and about the hopes and goals she has for the new MADD chapter.

Dermitt, a single parent, had two sons in high school, a daughter living in New York and another daughter attending school in Philadelphia at the time of the accident. She is thankful for their support and for the way the tragedy drew the family together.

"It brought us closer together," she says. "It had a tremendous impact on us. We were close anyway, but it drew us into a much tighter knit group. They were super supportive."

Her children cared for her when she wasn't allowed out of bed, they cooked her meals, changed the sheets, scrubbed bedpans, and seldom left their mother alone.

During the long recovery period, Dermitt says she had a lot of time to think. And, as she plumbed her feelings, she found that she wasn't resentful toward the driver who had caused her injuries.

"I never carry resentment. My friends did — and still do, I think. My total focus was on getting better and the fact that God had spared me for some reason. That reason was, in my eyes, to do something with my life."

Although Dermitt says she is not a particularly religious person, she believes that "without God as my primary source, I wouldn't have made it."

Likewise, she believes her involvement with MADD is another means of recovery.

"I think MADD — getting involved in MADD — is something I need to do, a place to put my energies."

Dermitt will head the chapter's support group. She hopes to comfort other victims. "I just want to say, 'It's OK, I know your grief, I know what you're going through, and you aren't going through it alone.'"

She also hopes that the support group might help to ease the bitterness some victims of drunk driving accidents feel, a bitterness she believes is counterproductive.

"I have learned so many lessons from this accident that I thank God it happened to me. I'm glad that I was the one injured because those were lessons I had to learn."

Dermitt says her friends still feel angry about the time that was "lost" from her life because of the accident. She doesn't see it that way.

"No, not 'lost' really. Granted, I cannot run, but I never liked to run in the first place, so it doesn't make any difference.

"I am enjoying life, having a very good time. I do what I want to do. I do not feel any section of my life has been 'lost.' In that 15 months of recuperation, I had time to think, to become gut-determined again, to know where my strength is coming from.

"From that, there's nothing you can't do."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

'Good King Henry' Lacked More Than Good Social Graces

DEAR ABBY: I must set you straight about your ignorant impression of King Henry VIII of England. You perpetuate that erroneous American stereotype of King Henry VIII as the ultimate slob. This gross misconception comes from the Hollywood movies, made in the United States with notorious disregard for historical facts.

I am honor-bound to say that Henry VIII was a great ruler in a difficult period of religious and political change for the western world. He was greatly loved by his people, who called him "the good King Henry."

Please browse through your history books and elevate yourself above the trashy movie stereotypes.

ALL-AMERICAN HISTORY BUFF

DEAR BUFF: I just finished browsing through the World Book Encyclopedia. A few facts: Henry VIII came to the throne when he was 18. His father had arranged a marriage between Henry and the widow of Henry's brother Arthur, Catherine of Aragon, daughter of King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain, who just happened to have a handsome dowry.

It seems King Henry lost his head over a beautiful maiden named Anne Boleyn who was later to lose hers. Literally.

The good King Henry tried to get the pope to annul his marriage so he could marry Anne. The pope refused. So Henry separated England from the Roman Catholic Church, established the Church of England and made the king (himself) its head. (Convenient?) With the Roman Catholic Church out of the way, he had his marriage to Catherine declared null and void. Then Anne (whom he had already secretly married) was crowned queen. Was Henry happy? Nooooo!

Three years later, their marriage was such a mess that good King Henry had Anne separated from her head, charging her with infidelity.

So much for King Henry VIII, whom I disparaged for his bad table manners.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 16 years to a man who used to drink, chase other women and bet the horses, but he's a changed man now. He hasn't had a drink for eight months and he hasn't been to the track in over a year. No, he didn't find "God"; he found another woman, and he says he owes it all to "Mary Ann." He was honest enough to tell me the truth, so how can I tell him he can't see Mary Ann any more when she did more to straighten out my husband than I did?

MIXED UP IN DEL MAR

DEAR MIXED UP: It was nice of Mary Ann to straighten out your husband, and I can understand your gratitude. But you are not obligated to gift-wrap your man and hand him over. His "honesty" in telling you about the other woman is commendable, but it doesn't cancel out the hurt he's causing you by fooling around.

You need more help than I can give you in a letter. See a marriage counselor about this new problem you're facing. And take the "changed man" with you. He needs some more straightening out.

DEAR ABBY: Your two-day series, "Winning Against the Odds," was beautiful, but in naming all those who had overcome some kind of handicap—deafness, blindness, poverty, prejudice—you included Michelangelo because he was a homosexual!

Since when is homosexuality considered a handicap?

I.M. ONE

DEAR I.M.: Up until recently, if a homosexual came out of the closet in some quarters he would lose his job. Even today in the Mormon church, he would be excommunicated. There are still many gay and lesbian people who do not have the courage to come out to their parents.

We have come a long way, but until society regards one's sexual orientation as blameless as the color of one's eyes, it's still a handicap.

Loophole

Pitt County's medical district could take a giant step Tuesday.

Kudos to Greenville's Board of Adjustment for not wanting to grant more special use permits for properties covered by the Medical District Study Report until the report is considered by the City Council. If the council passes a resolution next Tuesday directing the Board of Adjustment not to issue permits in the areas in question, a critical victory will be won.

What happens to prime medical district property in the six-month review period for the report is crucial to the quality and profitability of the district. Until now, the special use permit loophole allowed non-medical development in the proposed district, with Board of Adjustment approval, despite the fact that the study report does not recommend it.

The loophole allowed two serious mistakes — a motel directly across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital and an executive office complex nearby. Closing the loophole is essential to preventing other questionable structures from popping up. Action by the council Tuesday could effectively barricade that loophole.

The Board of Adjustment acted properly in requesting a moratorium on special use permits. The City Council should act equally as responsibly Tuesday and give the board the direction it seeks. By doing so, the council can help seal the future of a first-rate medical district — one that is well-planned, profitable and without commercial clutter.

Historic Sites

Proposals to make ex-President Richard Nixon's birthplace a national historic site probably is not everybody's cup of tea but there are valid arguments supporting the idea.

For one, the practice represents no judgment of individuals but is a means of preserving history for future generations.

For another, the National Park Service involvement has a precedent for looking upon former presidents as being of sufficient historical importance to operate historic sites associated with about a dozen modern presidents. They are acquired and maintained by the Park Service to provide a kind of hands-on lesson in America's past for future citizens.

The Nixon birthplace is a modest bungalow in Yorba Linda, Calif. The cost of the project is unknown, partly because it involves looking into the remote future. Still, it has to be more reasonable than dreams sketched in Plains, Ga., where historic site status has been proposed for Jimmy Carter's boyhood home, the high school, the town train station and the facade of the hospital where he was born.

Perhaps most people could go along with the Nixon birthplace proposal, but Georgia has a problem on its hands.

Goldwater Puts Finger On Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — To make clear just how deep the Pentagon is in military brass, Sen. Barry Goldwater took advantage of one of the prerogatives of congressional office last week and ordered the Congressional Record to reprint the Department of Defense Telephone Directory.

There are a lot of people tucked away inside the concentric rings of the Pentagon and filed away in its phone book, and Goldwater intended his printing project to make that clear.

The Arizona Republican, who is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, thinks there are just too many Pentagon people. And he says they complain too much, especially about his much-cherished campaign to reorganize the command and control structure of the nation's armed forces.

The veteran senator said there would be fewer complaints if there were fewer Pentagon officials with less time on their hands to think up things to complain about.

So, to dramatize all of this, Goldwater, on Feb. 25, launched his Pentagon phone book reprinting project.

As a beginning, he ordered inserted in the Congressional Record all the names and titles and office and telephone numbers of all the people who staff the headquarters of the U.S. Marine Corps.

The Marine Corps phone book section, estimated by Goldwater at about 2,000 names, begins with Gen. Paul X. Kelly, the corps commandant, and continues through every headquarters office, ending up more than six pages later with a Staff Sgt. Klinger of the Professional Development Education Branch.

Goldwater, thumbing through the entire Pentagon directory, said he was "utterly amazed ... to see the thousands of people employed in that building to oversee the operation of the military."

He vowed to print all their names "so my friends in the Senate and House can have a thorough understanding of the size of the body we are attempting to deal with."

It costs about $500 to print one page of the Congressional Record. The six-pages-plus that it took to print the phone numbers of the Marine Corps headquarters staff cost taxpayers more than $3,000.

There are 138 pages in the classified section of the Pentagon telephone directory.

They list, according to Goldwater, about 27,000 names of staff officers of the Army, Air Force and Navy — not counting the Marine Corps or 21 pages of officials assigned to the Defense Department itself.

To the editor:

I would like to commend LaRona Murray for her superb feature article on Greenwreath Plantation. The article was thoroughly researched, well-written and utterly fascinating. I pass by the house often and was curious as to who had bought the house. The transformation since renovations began is remarkable.

Even though I lived in the Bruce-Falkland area for the first 18 years of my life, I had no idea that the house had such a long and colorful history. It brings the slave era and Civil War a lot "closer to home."

Please keep up the good work and run more articles of this caliber soon!

It's The Era To Kick Machines

In Concord, Calif., a customer became enraged at an automated teller and kept punching it because the machine refused to dispense $80 from the man's account.

The customer was arrested and charged with "malicious mischief." This is not an isolated incident. According to police reports, so many people are beating up on automated machines that it has become this nation's most serious crime problems.

Johnny Hawke, who runs a home for battered machines, told me more than 50 percent of all aggravated assaults are committed against coin machines.

"Upright law-abiding citizens now think nothing of kicking a Coke machine in the groin, or shoving an index finger down the throat of a coin return slot. Priests have been known to punch out the glass panel of a cigarette machine over a two-bit misunderstanding. Vending machine hospitals are filled with broken candy bar racks and fractured Kleenex dispensers, while the perpetrators of these dastardly crimes are walking around scot-free."

I tried to defend the man in the street. "It's true that people shouldn't assault coin-operated machines. But you have to blame some of the violence on the public's frustrations when they don't get the product they paid for."

"What kind of country would this be if everyone kicked a vending machine that didn't work?" he cried.

"What do you suggest people do?" "If you can't get your money back write a letter to the company," he replied.

"I tried that once," I protested. "I couldn't spring a Sprite out of the machine and it wouldn't give me my money back. So I wrote a letter on the spot to the soft drink people. Then I went to buy a stamp and that machine didn't work either. So I drove a stake right through the heart of the word 'Sprite.'"

"Why did you stab the Sprite sign?"

"So there wouldn't be any witnesses to what I did to the stamp machine."

Hawke said the assaults are getting so serious that many machines are refusing to work unless they have guards. This defeats the whole idea of mechanical devices replacing people.

"Why so many attack on automated tellers?"

He told me, "The automated teller muggings are acts of pure spite. People used to rob banks, now they would prefer to beat up their teller machines. Things have gotten so bad that people kick an ATM whether it makes a mistake or not."

"How do you stop the violence?"

"We want tougher criminal penalties for any premeditated attack on an automated teller and we are insisting that anyone who hits the bulletproof glass with an umbrella be charged with assault with a deadly weapon."

"Will you get them?"

"People are starting to wake up to the vending machine crime wave in this country. They are furious at the bleeding heart judges who will not hand out tough sentences to abusers. Just the other day a man was accused of putting a bullet through through a Laundromat machine because it missed the rinse cycle. He was sentenced to 20 years for involuntary manslaughter. The man will be out in 14 years to shoot another washer. When he does we will all ask, 'Why did it happen again?'" "Do you find people beat up machines more in the daytime or at night?" I asked Hawke.

"It doesn't seem to matter. They beat the machines up in the daytime to get their money back. And they beat them up at night to hear them scream."

Libya May Provide Spur

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's push for $100 million to aid the Nicaraguan rebels both militarily and economically may be helped by none other than Libya.

The North African regime of Moammar Khadafy has relatively warm relations with the Sandinista government in Managua, which the contras and the U.S. would like to overthrow. Over the last four years, Khadafy has provided the Sandinistas with weaponry, as much as $400 million in economic aid and roughly $15 million in oil.

Meanwhile, the Nicaraguan Interior Ministry includes about 40 Libyans among its advisers, according to the Roman Catholic Church. Interior Minister Tomas Borge is a major supporter of the Libyan-Nicaraguan nexus. "Our relationship with Libya is eternal," Borge said in 1984.

"The Libyans have cooperated, and continue to cooperate, with us," a Nicaraguan official recently conceded to the Times of London.

That being said, of course, it is no secret that some of America's "best" friends — Italy is the most blatant case — have maintained close economic and diplomatic relations with Libya. Morocco, the first country to recognize the U.S., even struck up something of a joint operating agreement with Khadafy a few summers ago. Yet Moroccan King Hassan acted, in large part, to curb Libyan support for Polisario guerrillas wearing him down on his southern flank.

Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega has different sorts of problems, one of which involves the Sandinistas' bad boy image of the international community. Qaddafi's shipments of guns and money run the big risk, if nothing else, of giving the Reagan administration rhetorical ammunition.

Even Cuban President Fidel Castro, whose support of the Sandinistas has brought them mixed results, has condemned Qaddafi as a "reckless adventurer who could endanger the Sandinista revolution," according to the London Times.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Gen. Thomas Gorman (Ret.), former commander of the U.S. Army Southern Command in Panama, squared off at a recent military conference in Washington's Virginia suburbs.

"One out of every four countries around the globe is at war," Weinberger declared. "In virtually every case, behind the mask is the Soviet Union and those who do its bidding." To which Gorman, a Vietnam veteran, responded, "I believe that the attempts to link the Soviets to all low-intensity conflict are founded in misapprehension."

The Reagan administration wants to give $16.3 billion to foreign countries in the next fiscal year (1987). Israel and Egypt would receive 40 percent of the total package, which consists of $6.8 billion in military aid and $9.5 billion in economic assistance. The big losers in military aid — namely, those countries targeted for sharp reductions — are Somalia (down 42 percent), South Korea (down 10 percent) and Morocco (down 26 percent).

Gender Gap Update: Women in the Defense Department's civilian work force tend to have the lowest-paying jobs, according to the Pentagon's Equal Opportunity Office. The majority of the department's women employees can be found in pay classifications of GS-8 or lower (there are 15 grades). At the end of 1985, women accounted for only six percent of the GA-14s and only four percent of the GS-15s. The Pentagon says it's trying to train more women for executive positions.

The U.S. strategic petroleum reserve, which rose in national importance with the oil shocks of the 1970s, isn't worth as much as it was. With the recent collapse in oil prices, the value of the reserve has dropped between $21 billion and $23 billion, according to Reagan administration energy experts.

Since 1963, when New Hampshire became the first state in 70 years to run a lottery, roughly 1,200 people have won $1 million or more in such contests. In the last fiscal year, Pennsylvania enjoyed the highest lottery sales among the 18 states (and the District of Columbia) which held the contests. Most players are in their 40s and earn $18,000 to $36,000 a year the hard way.

Strength For Today

Do you indulge your moods? Some people are more moody than others, but everyone experiences the ebb and flow of emotional tides. Those whose emotions one hour are at flood tide and at the next ebb tide have a real problem in the matter of mood.

Whether we like it or not, self-control is a must in the lives of all of us. We think we get great satisfaction in "blowing our tops," in brooding over fancied injuries, in thinking about our failures and pitying ourselves for them. But all of this is the result of diseased emotions.

Our moods, when they are normal, reflect either a satisfactory or unsatisfactory state of mind. When moods become too pronounced, when they stand out on a person like an oversized nose or the absence of an ear, then they are abnormal.

Moods are all right as long as we keep them in hand. They are very bad when they get out of hand.

ECU Students To Help Design Manteo Project

ECU News Bureau
MANTEO — Ways to improve the appearance and usefulness of the Elizabeth II boatshop will be explained by a group of seven East Carolina University design students later this month.

The students visited Manteo in mid-February, measuring and studying the interior, exterior and waterfront surroundings of the 40-by-60-foot frame structure, which dates back to the turn of the century.

Most recently used as the construction site for the representative 16th century vessel Elizabeth II, the shop will be operated as part of the Elizabeth II state historic site. It is leased and maintained by the Friends of the Elizabeth II for educational purposes.

"The shop will be used for boat-building history exhibits and for actual building projects," said Horace Whitfield, director of the Elizabeth II site. "A boat-building course will be conducted at the shop this spring, through the College of the Albemarle," he said.

The seven ECU design students are assigned to seven separate aspects of the renovation planning project — four working on the inside space and three on the exterior and the surrounding park area, which must be congruent with overall waterfront Manteo revitalization.

The student designers are Julie McGill of York, Pa., Sharon Teague and Robin Hess, both of Raleigh, Robin Tabayoyon of Sanford, Suzanne Gardner of Goldsboro, Kay Alston of Greenville and Julmate Hanchaikul of Thailand.

The students' project is part of a spring semester environmental design studio, directed by Sergio Ortiz, instructor in the ECU School of Art.

Their design suggestions will be presented in the form of layouts, floor plans, renderings and perspective drawings, Ortiz said.

The Manteo boatshop project is one of a series of actual design proposals undertaken by ECU environmental design students to supplement the theoretical design problems they work with as part of their classroom studies.

Student design teams can work with municipal, charitable or governmental agencies, or with small businesses needing design assistance. No fee is charged the client in these public service design projects; only reimbursement of actual expenses, such as the cost of the students' transportation to and from Manteo is asked of the sponsoring client.

Top Hat

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County youth has been charged with stealing a sequined top hat of a Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus ringmaster, authorities say.

Jeffrey Scott Johnson, 16, of Wake Forest, was charged with one count of breaking and entering and larceny in the incident last week and was released into the custody of his father, Douglas Johnson.

Kristopher Antekier, the ringmaster, discovered that three top hats, valued at a total of $1,200 had been stolen Sunday. Two sequined hats, a pair of white gloves and a bow tie were recovered, the arrest warrant said.

Work-Study Conference Set

ECU News Bureau
 Dozens of educators and representatives of businesses, industries and government agencies which give temporary employment to cooperative education students will appear on the program at a March 19 East Carolina University conference.

The event, the second Employer-Educator Conference of ECU's Office of Cooperative Education, is a joint project of ECU and the University of Cincinnati.

The purpose of the conference is to bring together employers and educators "to discover potential for mutually beneficial joint ventures" and to discuss ways to strengthen "the vital link between work and study," according to the ECU Cooperative Education office.

Cooperative education is an arrangement in which students alternate semesters of classroom study with periods of actual work in their chosen fields.

Speakers and discussion leaders at the program include educators and

A $7,500 grant to conduct a feasibility study that could lead to a statewide motorcycle and all-terrain vehicle educational program has been awarded to Dr. Alfred S. King, director of driver and safety education at East Carolina University.

During the seven-month study, which will conclude in September, King will be assisted by other faculty members and one graduate student.

"North Carolina does not have any kind of safety education program for motorcycle and ATV vehicle operators," said King, who for the past 12 years has taught the state's only motorcycle training class. "Numbers and accident statistics appear to indicate that a program may be needed."

The data King compiles on the sales, accident and injury reports concerning these vehicles will be reported to the Governor's Highway Safety Program.

Department Head

Dr. Leo E. Zonn, whose research has focused on problems of central business districts, urban blacks and the elderly, will become professor and chairman of the department of geography and planning at East Carolina University next fall.

Zonn, 45, is associate professor of geography and chairman of the graduate program at Arizona State University, Tempe, Ariz., where he has been a member of the faculty for the past 11 years.

He succeeds Dr. Ennis L. Chestang, now associate dean of the college of arts and sciences and coordinator of ECU's international programs. Zonn's appointment will be effective Aug. 20 when the 1986-87 academic year begins.

A native of California, Zonn has degrees in history from California State University at Northridge and a master's degree in geography from California State. He received his doctorate in geography from the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee in 1975 and became a member of the ASU faculty the same year.

MP Unit In Training

The 514th Military Police Company of Greenville, a unit of the North Carolina National Guard, is training in the Philippines.

Sgt. William Creech, unit administrator, said the group left Wednesday. He would give no specifics about the exercise, which he said was planned months ago before it was known what the current political situation in the Philippines would be.

Board Appointment

Greenville resident Trenton G. Davis has been appointed to the State Board of Sanitarian Examiners by Gov. Jim Martin. His term will last until Dec. 15, 1989.

Sanitarians are public health professionals qualified by education in the arts and sciences, training and environmental health field experience to plan and execute one or more of the elements comprising the field of environmental health.

Davis is a professor of environmental health at East Carolina University.

Student Winners

Area students were recent winners in a national "Mathcounts" program held at J.H. Rose High School and organized locally by the Eastern Carolina chapter of the Professional Engineers of North Carolina.

Winning first and third place in individual competition were Lydia Coulter of E.B. Aycock School and Barry Kang of Greenville Middle School.

E.B. Aycock won second place in the overall competition. In special topics, oral, Miss Culter and Kang won first and second place, respectively.

The contest was comprised of written tests and fast-paced oral matches with algebra problems. The nationwide program is designed to answer the problem of declining math skills among students at the precollege level.

Farmville Middle, Greene Central Junior High and Williamston High schools also participated in the competition.

Division of districts used to determine where neighborhood meetings were held this week was based on a 4-2-1 plan providing for election of city representatives from four single-seat districts and at-large election of two council members and the mayor. The 4-2-1 plan is one of three being considered for Greenville. Other proposed systems include a plan for five single-seat districts, one at-large council member and an at-large mayor (5-1-1) plan and a straight six-district, at-large mayor (6-0-1) plan.

According to City Attorney Mac McCarley, minimal white citizen turnout for the meetings seemed to indicate white acceptance of the city's proposal to change its method of election. "We believe that citizens will communicate their concerns if they're upset, and since we have not heard any major complaints from white citizens, we perceive that they are giving us the go-ahead to proceed with developing a district system for elections," McCarley said today.

However, McCarley noted that there appears to be a "lack of consensus in the black community concerning which of the three plans would best serve their interests ... so over the next several weeks we will be contacting black citizens to discuss ways to reach a consensus." While city staff said they are interested in obtaining a consensus from the entirety of Greenville's citizenry, a consensus of the black population is necessary for a system to receive approval of the U.S. Justice Department. The Justice Department has the right to disallow or approve changes in method of election under the authority of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. When reviewing proposals for change, Justice Department officials routinely contact leaders of black communities to see if proposed changes are supported and provide for proportional minority representation.

Once a consensus is reached, McCarley said city staff will report to council members who will conduct a public hearing on the issue, take action, and then send the city's choice of method of election to the U.S. Justice Department for final consideration.

If the change process goes as expected, McCarley said the city should have a new system of election in place by mid summer.

SBI Report Critical Of Lab's Operation

RALEIGH (AP) — A State Bureau of Investigation inspection team's report on the SBI's crime laboratory criticizes the Raleigh lab's unclean condition, poor evidence accountability procedures and a lack of security.

"It is the consensus opinion of the inspection team that the lab has operated 15 years with inadequate management supervision and leadership," the report said.

Of the 57 lab areas inspected, 33 rated either unsatisfactory or as needing improvement. None received an above-standards rating.

"The team found no reasonable way to determine accurately what evidence a chemist should have on hand, and there are no known routine checks or inventory of evidence being held by chemists," the report said.

The state Justice Department declined to release the report, but a department official read portions of it to the Greensboro News & Record.

The team, headed by Agent Bill Dowdy and consisting of agents at a supervisory level, conducted the inspection in January, the month that Deputy SBI Director Ray Garland resigned from the bureau after 15 years of directing the crime lab's operations.

The inspection team said it found "nasty and unprofessional" lab conditions, and in work areas, the team found "several TVs, softball bats, antlers, stuffed fish and running shorts...."

Approximately two grams of loose marijuana were found near weight scales. The lab should be cleaned up, the report recommends, adding that "cleanliness relates to the (lab) conditions the same as rust might relate to the condition and maintenance of a gun barrel."

SBI Director Robert Morgan said the lab's appearance could be blamed on cramped quarters and lack of storage space, problems that were recognized by the inspection team.

Shortly after the inspection, Chief Chemist Ralph Keaton issued a memo directing that work areas be cleaned twice a week and ordering the removal of unnecessary personal items.

The team also recommended a complete inventory and said all evidence should be listed in the laboratory computer.

The team found that evidence was left out overnight and was handled by numerous people other than chemists, including clerical personnel. The report states that evidence was left unattended for long periods in the lab's reception and mail rooms.

Morgan said the evidence left out overnight or handled by non-laboratory personnel was sealed and in no danger of contamination.

Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said plans are under way to improve the lab's evidence accountability procedure. He said he was in the process of establishing a system that would "allow you to punch a button and learn where a piece of evidence was at any time."

The inspection team also found security at the lab to be "non-existent" and urged the immediate installation of fire and burglar alarms. A Justice Department official said Thursday that work has begun on the installation of a burglar alarm.

The inspectors in January staged their own nighttime break-in at the lab. They said they easily entered the building by using a credit card to unlock a door. The report states they found file and evidence storage cabinets unlocked and evidence lying around.

When the team broke in, they faced little risk of being noticed by guards, the report said.

Last year, Thornburg received money for additional security personnel at the lab, but the state Personnel Department ruled that he must pay them entry level salaries, he said.

Thornburg said the Justice Department could have only paid salaries of $11,000 or $12,000. He said the department felt that reliable security personnel could not be hired at that salary.

Instead, Morgan directed that SBI agents be used as security personnel. They are being paid overtime for their guard work.

"Obscurity is our best security," Morgan said.

Morgan downplayed some of the report's criticisms and defended the lab's performance.

"It's been 10 years, I guess, since an inspection," said Morgan, who ordered the latest one. "(In that time), questions were raised about three cases and all of them were resolved in favor of the lab."

Morgan called the lab one of the best in the country. There were no "fatal flaws" uncovered by his inspection team, he said.

Meanwhile, Thornburg said he will ask the General Assembly this summer for $6.8 million to finance the construction of a new crime lab and storage building.

The lab is housed in classrooms of the old Morehead School for the Deaf in Raleigh. Its chemists analyze thousands of pieces of evidence a year, ranging from alcohol blood samples and illegal drugs to hair fibers and debris from suspicious fires.

State Justice Department officials say the facility is 15 years out of date. "They do a remarkably good job considering the buildings we have to work out of," Morgan said. "Surely we can have a new crime lab so we can have some safeguards for security."

Licenses Lost

RALEIGH (AP) — The Wilson County sheriff's certificate as an instructor of basic recruit training for law enforcement officers has been revoked after officials discovered that he hadn't completed the required training.

Wayne V. Gay's 1982 certificate was revoked Feb. 28 after it was determined that he had not completed the 90 hours of classroom work required for certification, according to David D. Cashwell, director of the Criminal Justice Standards Division in the N.C. Justice Department.

Gay has taught several police science courses at Wilson Technical College since receiving his certification, Cashwell said.

The Coastal Plain Law Enforcement Academy, in cooperation with Wilson Technical College, issued a certificate to Gay on Oct. 15, 1982, saying he had completed a 90-hour instructor training course, according to records in Cashwell's office.

School Mergers

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Board of Education delayed taking a stand Thursday on whether to ask the General Assembly to reduce the state's school systems from 141 to 100, or one per county.

Saying they needed more information, board members called for an independent study of the issue.

The action came in response to a report by Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips, who said it was an "inescapable conclusion" that the 41 city school systems should be merged into their surrounding county systems. Phillips said research proved school systems operate best with at least 5,000 students, while 77 state systems have fewer than 5,000 students, including 35 city schools.

Child Saved

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Two men rescued a 3-year-old boy from a burning trailer home using a technique they had seen on television, authorities say.

Michael Brent Ranson was pulled from the burning structure about 1 p.m. Tuesday by Mozelle Ball Jr., 33, and George Smith, 35. Smith ran across the street with the child clutched to his chest before laying Brent on the ground and giving mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

"I never had any formal training," Smith said. "I just knew from movies, television and instincts, I guess. You don't want a baby to die."

The child's mother, Debbie Taylor, lived in the trailer with her two other children, Dusty, 8, and Kevin, 5, and roommate Sheila Campbell. Mrs. Taylor was at work in the Brookwood Trailer Park office when she heard about the fire and rushed home to where her niece, Carol Reese, had been babysitting with the two younger children. Dusty was in school.

Baby Food

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Investigators say that they suspect tampering in at least some cases in which glass was found in Gerber baby food across North Carolina.

Robert Gordon, director of the state's food and drug protection division, said his office has completed a statewide survey of more than 1,300 jars of Gerber baby food that were bought from 70 stores in the state. None contained glass, he said.

"I think before this is over we'll find that some of this has been — I hate to say it — tampered with," Gordon said. "It seems like every time we have a rash of this, that's the way it ends up."

A spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration in Washington said the agency has received complaints about Gerber products from 30 states. He agreed with Gordon that some of those cases may involve tampering.

Martin Releases Long-Range Plan To Relieve Prisons' Overcrowding

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Warning that the federal government would step in if North Carolina did not, Gov. Jim Martin has unveiled a plan to curb the growth of the state's prison population, which is 4,500 above capacity by federal standards.

Unless action is taken, the inmate population of 17,700 will likely rise to 23,000 by 1996, Martin said in a news conference Thursday.

"The issue ... is whether we will develop our own plan of relief, and set our own corrections policy, or have that policy mandated by federal authorities," he said.

If implemented, the plan is expected to spare the state $116.9 million in prison construction, plus $27.8 million a year in operational costs, the governor said.

Prodded by a federal lawsuit, the Legislature last year appropriated $12.5 million to reduce crowding and improve conditions at prisons in the South Piedmont region. But a dozen similar suits are pending that demand improvements in other parts of the state.

"The overpopulation of prisons creates a threat to safety of inmates and staff and a less obvious but real threat to public safety," Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson said.

Belk Believes His Honesty May Help

RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic Senate hopeful Bill Belk says he has received calls from Democrats praising him for being honest after he defended his decision not to vote in the 1984 race between former Gov. Jim Hunt and GOP Sen. Jesse Helms.

"In fact, I think that this could be the major issue that is going to propel me to win the nomination ... in the first primary," Belk said in a news conference at state Democratic headquarters Thursday. "If you don't believe this, look what happened in the Philippines when people stand up for the truth."

Belk, a former national Young Democrats president, charged that a key supporter of Hunt warned that Belk would have no "political future" if he did not give financial support to Hunt's Democratic Senate campaign.

"I always vote my conscience," the Charlotte businessman said. "I've always stood up for what I thought was right."

"There's going to be times that I will vote against other members in our party, because ... as a U.S. senator, you represent not only your Democratic family, but you represent Republicans and independents, too."

Last Saturday, The Charlotte Observer reported that Belk had acknowledged in an interview he had not voted in the 1984 Senate race, in which Helms defeated Hunt.

In a statement Thursday, Belk refused to say why he had not voted for Hunt. But he said Bert Bennett, a Winston-Salem oil dealer, former state Democratic chairman and longtime party fund-raiser, had unsuccessfully sought a donation to Hunt from Belk.

"I had a message from Bert Bennett in 1984 through Robert Joyce," Belk said. Joyce assisted Belk in his campaign for national YD president and now is manager of Belk's Senate campaign. "That message was that if Bill Belk didn't give X dollars to Jim Hunt's campaign, I did not have a political future."

Belk said he visited Bennett and asked about the statement Joyce had attributed to Bennett, and that he "just smiled."

"I told him exactly the reasons why I would not give money to Jim Hunt and why I would not associate too much with his campaign," Belk said. He declined to say what those reasons were.

— Increased reliance on community-based punishment and rehabilitation programs including use of private "halfway houses" and other facilities.

— A voluntary "house arrest" program in which inmates would live at home and wear special devices to permit electronic surveillance. The devices, likely to be bands worn around the neck or a leg, would be tied into a telephone system and set off an alarm if the wearer ventured off limits or tried to remove it.

Officials said if the alternatives to incarceration in the program were implemented, they would reduce the prison population by 1,380 in 1986-87.

Martin said the most controversial aspects of his program likely would be the electronic surveillance proposal and the "privatization."

He said only about 700 inmates would be housed in private facilities, and stressed that the electronic surveillance program would be voluntary. Contracts would be signed with private firms only if it is clear they can meet state standards, and they would be monitored closely, he said.

"Some argue that licensed private prisons might cut corners to hold down costs, yet that's what the state has done," Martin said. "I believe that private construction and operation should be tried, on a limited basis, with safeguards so we will know how it can work in North Carolina."

Retirees Support Lower Premiums

RALEIGH (AP) — Reduced car insurance rates for older drivers would not only make their premiums affordable, but it would give them incentive to take a safe driving course, the N.C. chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons says.

The association Thursday called on the Joint Legislative Commission on Insurance Regulation to endorse lower premiums for drivers age 55 and older who complete a state-approved driver education course.

In a position paper submitted to the panel, the group noted that many elderly people learned to drive before formal driver education programs were available.

The commission's chairman, Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, said he might support the lower premiums for good drivers with 40 years or more of driving experience.

"One thing we need to do is get the politics out of the rating system," Johnson said in an interview. "We don't want anybody getting a free ride or being penalized unfairly."

The AARP acknowledged that drivers older than 55 have a poorer accident record than drivers in their middle years.

"Older drivers have problems when involved in driving situations, requiring quick response, full vision, and interaction with other drivers," the paper said.

Johnson said he would support the lower premiums based on years of driving experience "if the statistics indicate it would be justified." But he said he would not favor basing rates on age, saying that would be discriminatory. The Legislature in 1975 outlawed basing rates on a driver's age or sex.

The study commission is examining the Safe Driver Insurance Plan, the standard by which insurance companies classify drivers they cover.

Ruffin Bailey, a Raleigh attorney and lobbyist for the American Insurance Association, told the commission that experienced drivers should "reap the benefit of what they have rightfully earned."

But he said drivers age 24 and younger had more and worse accidents than any other age group.

In 1973, according to a Duke University study, male drivers under 24 accounted for 24.8 percent of the male driving population that year but were involved in 51.4 percent of the accidents that year, Bailey said.

The same study concluded that a person in the 15-24 age group was more than twice as likely to have an accident as someone in the 25-34 age group and more than four times as likely as someone in the 35-44 age group.

That relationship held true in Division of Motor Vehicles reports from 1981 to 1985, Bailey said.

FDA Orders Reye Warnings Put On Aspirin Bottles

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration today ordered drug companies to put labels on aspirin bottles warning of a possible link between the pain reliever and the sometimes fatal childhood illness called Reye syndrome.

The FDA issued a final regulation, to take effect in 90 days, requiring the following warning label on aspirin and products containing aspirin:

"WARNING: Children and teenagers should not use this medicine for chicken pox or flu symptoms before a doctor is consulted about Reye syndrome, a rare but serious illness."

The regulation was announced by Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen, who urged parents and teen-agers to follow the warning, to be alert to the symptoms of Reye and to "get immediate hospital care, which can mean the difference between life and death when the symptoms are present."

Reye syndrome is an extremely rare but very serious illness that sometimes develops in children and teen-agers recovering from the flu or chicken pox.

Its early symptoms include severe tiredness, belligerence and excessive vomiting. It can progress rapidly to convulsions and coma. It is fatal in about 20 to 30 percent of cases, and some survivors suffer permanent brain damage.

A pilot study by the Centers for Disease Control last winter established what some scientists called "overwhelming" evidence of a link between aspirin and Reye. The study indicated that children who are given aspirin for flu or chicken pox symptoms face up to a 25 times greater risk of developing Reye.

Under heavy pressure, the aspirin industry began a voluntary labeling campaign, while arguing at the same time that the evidence was inconclusive.

The voluntary campaign came under fire as being ineffective. Critics, including the American Academy of Pediatrics, said the voluntary label was so bland, seldom even mentioning Reye, that it would not cause anyone to actually call a physician.

Congress moved late last year to enact legislation demanding a mandatory warning label, and the industry negotiated the mandatory label with lawmakers to avoid putting a statute on the books. The FDA, which also initially disputed the scientific link, adopted the regulation "to bring uniformity and consistency to the market place."

"The use of one clear warning will ensure better public understanding of the message," Bowen said in announcing the rule.

The warning label requirement will miss this winter's flu season and at least part of the annual chicken pox season, which usually begins in early spring.

However, public opinion surveys have indicated that the dispute over the warning label already has raised awareness of the problem to the point that few parents are giving their children aspirin.

Flight Attendants Strike Ailing TWA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of Trans World Airlines flight attendants struck the financially troubled carrier today after negotiations over wage cuts and concessions broke down, and officials said some flights were canceled.

Sally McElwreath, a spokeswoman for TWA, said the airline would provide service on other flights or book passengers on other airlines when TWA flights were canceled.

She said some flights were canceled, but she did not know how many. "We're covering most people," she said.

TWA issued a statement in New York saying, "While there may initially be some cancellations of services, we will be operating at least some flights to every city we serve, and in cases where we are unable to provide service to our passengers, we will make every effort to book them on flights of other airlines."

Members of the Independent Federation of Flight Attendants walked picket lines at 32 of the 62 U.S. locations TWA serves, with the numbers of picketers varying at each location, said Karen Lantz, vice president of the union.

Members of the pilots' union, who signed a no-strike contract in January, were not honoring the picket lines, she said.

Jim Coneley, a spokesman for the International Association of Machinists, said that while the union considers crossing a line an individual decision, the organizations' general policy is against it. Local leaders, he said, will be reminding members that "trade unionists don't cross picket lines."

The attendants planned 24-hour picketing at some locations, including airports in New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco, Lantz said. Picketing at other locations would last only a few hours per day, she said.

Ms. McElwreath said approximately 3,000 recently trained employees were working on the flights today. She would not say how many flight attendants normally work in a single day.

"That's more than enough to operate the airline 100 percent," said Ms. McElwreath. The reason the airline wasn't operating at full capacity was because it was the first day of the strike, she said.

Scattered reports from around the country showed:

TWA canceled all its flights out of Newark Airport in New Jersey today, all but two of its flights out of LaGuardia in New York and nine of 42 from Kennedy in New York.

TWA service from Lambert Airport in St. Louis was reduced by about 50 percent, said Dann Oldani, manager of the airline's corporate communications there.

Forty percent of TWA flights were canceled at Metro airport at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, said Bob Boucher, a TWA customer service agent.

Hot Shot

MISHAWAKA, Ind. (AP) — The frozen meatloaf TV dinner was just warming up in the oven at Edwin Strycker's mobile home when the shooting started. The first one went off, it sounded like a firecracker to me," Strycker said Thursday, echoing the description given by countless witnesses to gunplay. The racket proved finally to be a bizarre assault by the gas stove against itself, the refrigerator and finally Strycker himself. Twenty minutes before the first popping sound, the 26-year-old metalworker had slipped the aluminum dinner tray into the oven and turned the gas to 350 degrees. But the night before, he had slipped his .357 Magnum revolver into a hiding place on the broiler pan below. And then he forgot about it. "I still can't believe I did it," Strycker said. The Smith & Wesson handgun waited only 20 minutes, though, before making him very much a believer. The force of the second exploding bullet blew the six-shot revolver from its hiding place just as Strycker stepped back into the kitchen to check on the combustion. "Two rounds went off in the broiler. It just went bam, flew out the door and was just sitting there in front of me on the floor," he said. Two more 158-grain slugs exploded in the smoking cylinder and struck the refrigerator before he could react. "My girlfriend was here with me, so I reached down to pick up the gun and toss it out the window to get it away from us, and it went off, and that's when I got hurt," he said. The gun shattered, sending the fragments flying into Strycker's face. One hit him just below the right eye, and another remains buried in the back of his jaw. Strycker called police and paramedics.

Philippines Cancels Passport For Marcos

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government today canceled the passports of deceased President Ferdinand E. Marcos, his family and 79 associates who fled with him to the United States, in what appeared to be a move to block their return to the Philippines. Vice President and Foreign Minister Salvador H. Laurel, announcing the action in a talk with reporters, said the cancellation was made "on instructions" of President Corason Aquino. A Foreign Ministry spokesman, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the action means that Marcos, who is in Hawaii, and his entourage will not be able to travel to any other country because they no longer have valid travel documents. "Their mobility will be restricted," Laurel said. Elsewhere, dozens of students heckled Rep. Stephen Solarz and a party of U.S. officials with cries of "bootlicker" and "meddlers, go home," as they visited a university in Quezon City known as a hotbed of activism. But Solarz drew applause when he called for U.S. action to help recover wealth allegedly hidden by the Marcoses in the United States. The Brooklyn Democrat said Marcos' assets in New York City alone, which he has estimated at about $350 million, was double the amount of annual U.S. economic aid to the Philippines. Besides Marcos, his wife Imelda and their children, those affected by the passport revocations include Marcos' former armed forces chief, Gen. Fabian C. Ver, Ver's family, and industrialist Eduardo Cojuangco, a once-powerful Marcos ally. "If the Marcoses or any of the others want a passport they can apply for one with the Philippine consulate in the United States, but the issuance of the passports will be handled on a case-to-case basis and on approval of President Aquino," Laurel said. He did not elaborate. Laurel aides said the notice of passport cancellations has been communicated to Philippine embassies in the United States and other countries. Marcos fled the Philippines Feb. 26 and sought refuge in Hawaii, where he is reported to be scouting for a new residence. He reportedly had wanted to stay in his home province of Ilocos Norte, north of Manila, but Mr. Aquino opposed it, saying his departure from the Philippines would bring peace to the country. Marcos himself denied Mrs. Aquino's husband, Benigno, a passport when Aquino wanted to return to the Philippines in 1983 after three years of voluntary exile in the United States. Aquino returned anyway using a false travel document, and was shot to death at the Manila airport. Mrs. Aquino has accused Marcos of masterminding the assassination. The military claimed the assassin was Rolando Galman, and accused him of being a communist agent.

Duvalier Moves To French Riviera

GRASSE, France (AP) — Ousted Haitian ruler Jean-Claude Duvalier and his family arrived today at their new residence in exile, an isolated luxury villa in hills inland from the French Riviera. A four-car convoy left the Hotel de l'Abbaye at Talloires, near Annecy in the French Alps, at 3 a.m. for the six-hour drive to Grasse, the perfume capital of France about 10 miles north of the French Mediterranean resort of Cannes. Local officials said about a dozen people arrived in Grasse with Duvalier. About 20 people were with the 34-year-old Haitian leader when he fled to France Feb. 7 aboard a U.S. plane. Some of his entourage left Talloires in the first few days, and his mother was allowed to go to Paris for medical treatment. It was understood she will later go to Belgium. The French originally said Duvalier would only be allowed to stay for a week as he sought another country as a permanent haven. But no other nation, including the United States, has agreed to take him. The Grasse government this morning said Duvalier had been served an order limiting his movements to the Alpes Maritimes department, which stretches along the French Riviera from Cannes to the Italian frontier. "But he doesn't wish to leave the villa at the moment and apparently for some days to come," an official said. In Paris, the Interior Ministry said there could be a risk of an attack on Duvalier by Haitian exiles if Duvalier went touring in the area. Duvalier told a radio reporter that he was "still negotiating with the French state." He said he had "no guarantee about my situation, but I do not regret coming to France. Now I want to live in peace in France and devote myself to the education of my children." The villa, named "La Tourilliere," is being rented from Hubertus Nijssen of the Netherlands. It has 10 rooms, as well as a smaller cottage and a caretaker's house, five acres of grounds planted with pine and olive trees, a tennis court and swimming pool. It is situated on a small road, now sealed off by police, below the town, near a small industrial complex. Also living in the Grasse region is another ex-president, Amadou Ahidjo of Cameroon, who resigned as head of state of the West African nation in November 1982.

Jobless Rate Shows Surge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment jumped 0.6 percentage point to 7.3 percent in February, the largest one-month gain in nearly six years, the Labor Department said today. Analysts said they were frankly puzzled over the unexpected surge and pointed to unusually severe weather after an abnormally mild January as their best guess. Two-thirds of last month's 700,000 surge in the jobless ranks came in just three states — California, Texas and Illinois. One-fourth of the increase came among Hispanic workers. The big increase returned unemployment to levels that had been in effect during the first half of 1985, when the jobless rate was stuck at 7.3 percent for six months. The jobless rate began a gradual decline in August, dropping to 6.7 percent in January, the lowest level since March 1980, when Jimmy Carter was president. Labor Department analyst Howard Hayge speculated that flooding in California had kept agricultural workers out of the fields and thus pushed up unemployment there from 5.8 percent to 7.2 percent. Unemployment in Texas rose a full 2 percentage points, to 8.4 percent, while joblessness in Illinois stood at 9.5 percent, up from 7.7 percent. Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, cautioned against reading too much into the February rise, because it was so concentrated in the three states. In addition to the California flooding, she pointed to layoffs in the Texas petroleum industry as drillers scaled back exploration efforts in the face of the prolonged slide in crude oil prices. Employment in the electronics industry there also fell. In Illinois, she told the congressional Joint Economic Committee, manufacturing jobs fell significantly. Other analysts cautioned that the February gain did not change their

THIS IS A DRAMATIZED VERSION OF FACTS TAKEN FROM THE BOOK OF AMOS, CHRONOLOGICALLY AND AUTHENTICALLY CONSOLIDATED!

AMOS • THE SHEPHERD TURNED PROPHET

IN THE DAYS OF KING UZZIAH OF JUDAH, AND KING JEROBOAM OF ISRAEL, THE ENEMIES OF BOTH THESE KINGDOMS HAVE BEEN DEFEATED AND SCATTERED...

...FOR KING UZZIAH, IN THE SOUTH, HAS WAGED VICTORIOUS WARS AGAINST THE EDOMITES, AND THE PHILISTINES, LEVELING THEIR CITIES AND BUILDING HIS OWN FORTIFICATIONS IN THEIR LANDS...

...AND JEROBOAM HAS BROUGHT THE KINGDOM OF ISRAEL TO ITS MOST POWERFUL POSITION BY DEFEATING THE SYRIANS, CAPTURING THE CAPITAL, DAMASCUS...

...SO THAT HE SITS SAFE AND SERENE ON HIS THRONE...

...AND THE PEOPLE, WITH ALL THIS AFFLUENCE, HAVE FORGOTTEN GOD'S WAYS AND SPEND THEIR DAYS IN FEASTING AND RIOTOUS LIVING...

...IN THE HILLS OF TEKOA, A HERDSMAN NAMED AMOS, WILL SOON BE SENT FROM HIS ROUGH AND HUMBLE DOMAIN BY GOD, HIMSELF, TO INFORM THE ISRAELITES THAT THEIR SINFUL WAYS MUST CEASE!

HELP FOR EX-FUNDAMENTALISTS - The Rev. Charles Newton of St. Paul's, a Southern Baptist minister, has announced plans to establish a 'Fundamentalists Anonymous' chapter in the Robeson County community. Newton says his congregation supports his idea. (AP Laserphoto)

Pastor Wants To Provide Aid To Ex-Fundamentalists

ST. PAULS, N.C. (AP) - A Robeson County Southern Baptist minister is trying to establish a chapter of Fundamentalists Anonymous to help others, like himself, who have left the fundamentalist fold.

"I feel like there are millions of people out there who have been hurt by fundamentalism," the Rev. Charles Newton, 30, said in a recent interview. He hopes the support group will again make Christianity attractive to those who feel alienated from the church.

Begun last year in New York, Fundamentalists Anonymous provides a setting for ex-fundamentalists to share experiences and support. The organization has 30 chapters across the nation.

Newton, pastor of the Tolarsville Baptist Church in St. Paul's, first learned of the group on the "Donahue" television show and decided to find out more.

He said the organization isn't anti-fundamentalist. For those content in fundamentalism, "more power to them," he said.

His application is still being considered, but chances for approval are good, said co-founder James Luce. The chapter would be the first organized by an ordained minister.

Although Newton's church - located in a mostly blue-collar community of tobacco farmers and mill workers - supports his moderate views, he considers the area fertile ground for fundamentalism.

Newton learned the faith from the cradle, but the teaching was shrouded in an atmosphere of distrust. He grew up in Henderson in strict household.

"I wasn't allowed to date until I was 17 - a senior in high school," he said. When he finally did, it was the daughter of his parents' best friend.

For many years, Newton didn't mind the restrictions.

"I desperately tried to win my parents' approval," he said. At 15, he became a preacher to please his father.

"In the fundamentalist mindset, the man is the boss. He has the last word. He controls the family," Newton said.

And children often bear the brunt of the domination. Parents think they must "mold our children into our image," he said.

It took Newton two years of counseling to unravel the damage. He credits a liberal arts education with opening the door for his escape. With the help of a professor at Cumberland College in Kentucky, Newton began sawing the bars of fundamentalism.

But the relationship didn't begin on a cordial note.

At first, Newton found himself attacking the teacher who threatened his long-held beliefs. He remembered the professor saying: "If you have a house of cards theology, you have these 25 or 30 fundamentals. If you ever pull out one of those cards, the whole house crumbles."

The words prompted intense self-scrutiny that eventually disintegrated Newton's fundamentalist attitude. "I had to begin building all over again," he said.

Today, only one fundamental support exists for his faith. "Jesus Christ is Lord is the only fundamental I'll fight for," he said.

He earned a master's degree at Southeastern Theological Seminary in Wake Forest to better prepare for the ministry.

Newton, his wife, Patricia, and their two girls came to St. Pauls in March 1984.

He hasn't been able to mend the relationship with his parents.

Three years ago, he visited them to vent frustrations that had been brewing for years. "I had a lot of pent-up feelings that I needed to explain to them," he said. The result was disastrous, and Newton has not seen his parents since.

But he still hopes for reconciliation.

"I don't see this as a permanent thing," he said.

Q. What is God's purpose for giving us the Bible and what use should we make of the Bible?
A. God gave us the Bible to make us "Wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus," and to train us in holy living. We should search the scriptures diligently and reverently. We should listen while they are being read. We should believe them and make them our guide to daily living. We must know them, for in the scriptures God is speaking to man. (II Tim. 3:15-17)

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices pushed ahead in active trading today, responding to falling interest rates at home and abroad.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.99 to 1,702.59 in the first hour of trading.

Gainers took a 2-1 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

This morning the Federal Reserve cut its discount rate from 7.5 percent to 7 percent, after the Western German and Japanese central banks had posted reductions in their comparable rates. The discount rate is the charge set by the Fed on loans to private financial institutions.

Shortly after the Fed's move, several large banks lowered their prime lending rates from 9 1/2 percent to 9 percent.

The markets were confronted with one piece of unexpected news — the Labor Department's report that the unemployment rate jumped from 6.7 percent to 7.3 percent in February. However, the department said a significant part of the increase stemmed from special factors.

Gainers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, up 1/4 at 147; General Motors, up 1/2 at 81 1/8; Merck, up 1/2 at 149, and General Electric, up 1/4 at 75 1/8.

In the banking group, Citicorp rose 1 3/4 to 54 3/4; J.P. Morgan 1 1/4 to 73 1/2, and Manufacturers Hanover 3/8 to 49 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .57 to 130.72. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .69 at 259.55.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 9.94 to 1,696.60.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 5 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 158.99 million shares, against 154.56 million in the previous session.

of the committee this morning were unsuccessful.

A source at ECU, who asked not to be identified, said Thursday that the honorary doctorate degree committee makes recommendations to the chancellor, who in turn forwards the recommendations to the executive committee of the board. The executive committee, in turn, forwards the recommendations to the full board for action.

The source said "it is customary" to invite those people receiving honorary degrees to speak at the graduation ceremony. "If a candidate (for an honorary degree) doesn't work out, then someone else is invited as commencement speaker."

In this case, the source said, "a commencement speaker had already invited and it was felt that it was not appropriate to uninvite the speaker, nor issue an honorary doctorate (to Reagan) and not have him speak."

Chancellor John Howell said this morning that he would announce to the board of trustees this afternoon that Robert L. "Roddy" Jones of Raleigh will speak at the graduation in May.

Jones, a 1958 ECU graduate is president of Davidson and Jones Corp., a general contracting and development firm. He was chairman of the ECU board in the 1970s and is now a member of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

Howell, who said the committee met last fall, said no one was recommended for an honorary degree this year. "I don't believe they did" consider Reagan at that time, he added.

Howell said he asked Jones to speak "some time ago. They didn't have a candidate for an honorary doctorate this year, so I picked a commencement speaker quite a part from that process.

"A lot of people get suggested" as possible speakers, he said. But as far as the president is concerned, it was "not a move that was finished."

Howell noted that in the past he has asked recipients of honorary degrees to speak, but he said such action is not necessarily a custom.

South Africa Lifts Emergency, Releases Over 330 Detainees

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government today lifted a 7-month-old state of emergency imposed in parts of South Africa torn by anti-apartheid violence, and a police spokesman said about 330 detainees were set free.

The government gazette carried a proclamation signed by President

P.W. Botha and Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange ending the state of emergency. However, security forces retain broad powers to use force and detain activists without charge.

Maj. Steve van Rooyen, a spokesman at national police headquarters in Pretoria, said all detainees held under the state of emergency — about 330 — were released from prisons around the country early today.

The lifting of the state of emergency became a major demand of anti-apartheid groups in South Africa, and of foreign governments and lending institutions seeking changes in South Africa's racial policies.

Also today, the government ordered the expulsion of three members of the CBS News bureau. A government official said the network had broadcast footage of a black funeral Wednesday "in flagrant disregard" of a court decision upholding a ban of audio-visual equipment from the site.

Three Sure, Three Maybe For NCAA

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO (AP) — When coaches like Bobby Cremins of Georgia Tech or Mike Krzyzewski of Duke start work at this weekend's Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament, they're virtually assured that they'll be coaching in the NCAA tournament. It hasn't always been that way.

Before the NCAA expanded its championship field, only the tournament champion received a bid. This season, there's speculation that as many as six teams from the ACC could get into the 64-team field. Along with Duke and Georgia Tech, North Carolina is expected to get a bid. North Carolina State, Virginia and Maryland are borderline. Terrapin Coach Lefty Driesell says maybe people like Krzyzewski and Cremins would approach this tournament a little differently if the old format was in effect.

"I'd like to see those Duke and Georgia Tech coaches if only one team could get into the NCAA," said Driesell, whose team completes the opening round with a battle against fourth-ranked North Carolina tonight.

"They'd be as tight as a drum. These guys have it easy," Driesell added.

Tar Heel coach Dean Smith, whose team is trying to snap a spell of three losses in four games, agrees.

"By tradition, there certainly is not the pressure that there once was," Smith said. "That's probably why it was much more gratifying to have won in those days, but we're trying very hard to win it, and our thoughts are directed toward a very good Maryland team."

Top-ranked Duke, winners of the top seed for the first time in 20 years, collided with last-place Wake Forest in today's opening game at the Greensboro Coliseum.

Duke guard Tommy Amaker sat out most of the practice at the coliseum Thursday after suffering a strained Achilles tendon in a practice session on Wednesday. Krzyzewski expected Amaker to be available for the tournament.

"I anticipate him playing," he said. "I don't want that to happen to our team right now, that we start getting injuries. That's what happened to us last year."

Wake Forest was plagued by injuries in December, then was devastated by the departure of 6-foot-11 freshman center Mike Scott in January. The Demon Deacons went winless, but Coach Bob Staak said he had hoped for that one special game.

"I was waiting for that one game when (Mark) Cline would go 12-for-15 from the floor and Rod Watson would be 10-of-12 and Tyrone Bogues would have a great night," Staak said.

N.C. State and Virginia were in the second game of the afternoon session. Being on the edge of acceptance and rejection for the NCAA puts greater emphasis on the matchup, Virginia Coach Terry Holland says.

"I think both teams should be in the tournament," Holland said of the Cavaliers and the Wolfpack. "Maryland should be in the NCAA tournament. But if you have upsets in conference tournaments and that sort of thing, all of a sudden, you're sitting on the fence again."

Georgia Tech and Clemson finish the afternoon session. They're meeting for the second time within a week and the Tigers have their eyes on the NCAA with a 17-13 record.

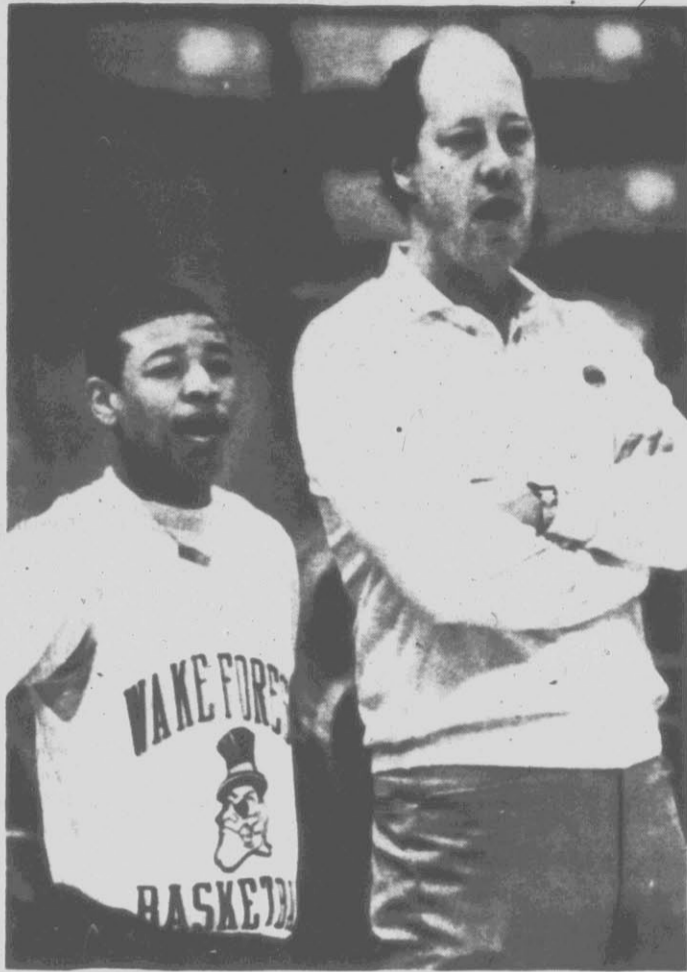

"I am extremely impressed with all of their players, especially Glen McCants and Horace Grant inside," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "And they keep coming off the bench with great athletes. We just have to be ready to play."

Clemson wants to be ready, too, but not just to beat the Yellow Jackets.

"A lot is going to depend on what happens in the other tournaments," Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis says. "For us to enhance our position in the NCAA tournament, I would feel much more comfortable if we win one. If we win two games, being runner-up in the Atlantic Coast Conference would do it."

Saturday's semifinals are scheduled for 1:30 and 3:30 with the championship game set for 1 p.m. Sunday.

GCA Teams Gain Semis

WALKERTOWN — Greenville Christian Academy's boys and girls both advanced to the semifinals of the North Carolina Christian Activities Association State Tournament with victories Thursday.

In the boys' game, Robin House scorched the net with 32 points while Paul Hollingsworth chipped in 24 to lead the Knights to a 86-72 win over Vandalia Christian Academy. The boys' were scheduled to meet Gospel Light Christian School in a semifinal game today at 6 p.m.

In the girls' game, Pattie Carr and Paige Brown combined for 33 points as the Lady Knights downed Southview Christian, 59-51. The girls were to have played Vandalia in semifinal action today at 3 p.m.

The Knights jumped out to a 19-15 lead after one period of play, but Vandalia outscored GCA, 12-10, in the second quarter to close to within two points at 29-27 at the half.

GCA scored 27 third quarter points to Vandalia's 24 to take a 53-48 lead into the final frame.

The Knights put the game out of reach in the fourth quarter, outscoring Vandalia 30-21, to make the final score 86-72.

Derrick Leupin chipped in 18 points for the Knights, who improved to 15-8.

Keith Roberts paced Vandalia with 21 points. Jerome Burcham scored 15 points, while Danny Shoffner added 14, and Lonnie Martin tallied 12 in a losing effort.

"We were sporadic in the first half," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "But in the second half, our shooting and free throws helped us open it up. We were also able to get our running game going."

The Lady Knights also moved out to an early lead, taking a 11-6 lead in the first period, and they outscored Southview, 16-12, in the second quarter to move ahead 27-18 at intermission.

Southview battled back in the third frame, outscoring the Lady Knights 18-13, to pull within 40-36 with one quarter left to play.

But GCA held off the late rally in the fourth quarter, outscoring Southview 19-15, to make the final score 59-51.

"We pretty much controlled the game. They were scrappy and stayed with us, but got into foul trouble and that helped us get the win," Thatcher said.

Carr scored 17 points, and Brown added 16 for the Lady Knights, who improved to 17-2.

Michelle Knick led Southview with 21 points, while Susan Tucker chipped in 16.

Vikings Nip Chargers

KINSTON — Kinston High School rallied, then held off Ayden-Grifton to take a 5-4 baseball victory over the Chargers Thursday.

The loss was the second of the young season for the Chargers.

Kinston pushed ahead with a pair of runs in the second, adding a third in the third.

Ayden-Grifton then came back to tie it up with three in the top of the fourth. Curt Tucker, Steven Tucker and Jesse Hooker all singled, loading the bases. Mike Burnham then got a two-out hit to drive in both Tuckers. Hooker scored on a single by Frank Mills for a 3-3 deadlock.

But Kinston came back in the fifth with two runs to take a 5-3 lead. Ayden-Grifton helped the rally along with an error.

The Chargers tried to rally in the seventh, scoring once, but they failed to draw even again.

The Tuckers and Hooker each picked up two hits for Ayden-Grifton.

The Ayden-Grifton Junior Varsity team — the first fielded by the school — topped Kinston, 12-10, in their meeting.

The Chargers play host to Conley on Tuesday.

BEAR GRASS — Jesse Ward set the tone with Williamston's first at-bat Thursday, hitting a home run as the Tigers clawed past Bear Grass, 10-5, in baseball action.

The Tigers got all the runs they would need in the opening inning when they scored seven times.

Ward led off the frame with a homer for a 1-0 lead. Robert Jones and Mike Leggett both followed with singles and Glenn Hardison reached on an error, loading the bases. Ward Cowan singled in Jones and both Leggett and Hardison scored on Jay Horton's hit. Terry Gardner reached on an error, scoring Cowin, and Horton scored when Rob Revels was safe on another misplay. Ward, back up, grounded out, scoring Gardner.

Williamston went on to add two in the second on a homer by Hardison, and picked up one in the fifth.

Bear Grass scored three times in the fifth and added single runs in the sixth and seventh.

Les Thomas led the Tiger hitting with three, including two doubles. No one had more than one for the Bears.

Williamston is now 2-0 while the Bears slip to 0-2. Williamston returns to action next Friday, hosting Farmville Central.

The Redskins pushed over a run in the bottom of the first, but Bertie came back with two in the second. The Falcons took the lead with two in the fourth for a 4-2 margin.

Roanoke then scored five times in the fifth inning to take the lead for good. Gene Taylor walked and Marvin Morning was safe on an error. Ricky Taylor singled to load the bases and James Walters doubled in two runs. Lamar Mason tripled to drive in two more and Alex Mobley's sacrifice fly scored the final run.

Roanoke scored what proved the difference in the sixth, then held off a Bertie rally in the seventh to take the win.

Ricky Taylor led Roanoke with two hits, while Walt Perry and John Hoggard each had two for Bertie.

Roanoke returns to action on Tuesday, traveling to Farmville Central.

GEORGIA O'KEEFFE

Painter O'Keeffe Dies At 98

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Georgia O'Keeffe, "a national treasure" who helped shape the course of modern art, was "the most important woman artist" America has ever produced, experts said after the death of the 98-year-old painter.

"Certainly it is a very sad event that Georgia O'Keeffe has died," Jack Cowart, the National Gallery of Art's curator of 20th century art, said in a telephone interview Thursday from Washington.

"She was a modern artist," Cowart said. "She continued to look at things from a different point of view, and to challenge our own kind of vision. But she is, I think, a national treasure."

Miss O'Keeffe, who in 1977 received the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor, died Thursday at St. Vincent Hospital. Hospital spokesman Charles Cullen said he had no other details.

Miss O'Keeffe had lived in Abiquiu, north of Santa Fe, since 1949, but moved to Santa Fe last summer.

"She has spent a good deal of her 98 years enlivening the early 20th century and the mid-20th century development of American art," Cowart said.

"We feel certainly she's the most important woman artist that America has ever produced," said Warren Weitman, senior vice president of Sotheby's auction house in New York, which sold an O'Keeffe oil on canvas, "White Rose New Mexico," for $1,265,000 in December. "I think her great feeling for color and for form, her ability to represent in a vibrant and sensual way a feeling for nature, is incredible."

Miss O'Keeffe's best-known paintings were of flowers or landscapes. She used natural objects as her subjects — rocks — bleached, white animal skulls and bones.

Rubella Cases Fall Sharply

ATLANTA (AP) — Sixteen years after the advent of rubella vaccine, the United States reported a record low of just 604 cases of the once-common childhood disease last year, the national Centers for Disease Control said.

The ailment — sometimes called German measles, although it is a different disease from measles — was down from 752 cases in 1984, the CDC said Thursday.

In 1969, the year a record 57,686 cases were reported, rubella vaccine was licensed for use in this country.

The progress, as young children get less and less rubella, keeps the nation on target to wipe out congenital rubella syndrome, the devastating incidence of rubella in children at birth, the CDC said in its weekly report.

"As the highly immune ... young children enter childbearing age, CRS can be expected to disappear from this country," the Atlanta-based health agency said.

Only two babies were reported born in the United States in 1985 with CRS, a disease that can cause birth defects and even death. But the CDC said that is believed to be "an underestimation of the actual total," since some cases almost certainly go unreported.

Beginning in the 1970s, rubella vaccination efforts were aimed at young children. Although rates for them declined, rubella continued to be a problem for teen-agers and young adults, and new efforts were then launched to vaccinate people over 15.

"The success of these initiatives is now apparent," the CDC said, noting that rubella among Americans 15 and over dropped 49 percent between 1982 and 1984. (Age breakdowns of the 1985 cases are not yet available.)

But the health agency said the current situation still is cause for concern, because it will take 10 to 30 more years before today's children reach childbearing age and CRS and rubella are eliminated.

Congress OKs Changes In Farm Law

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is expected to sign a grab bag of changes in the 1985 farm act, including restorations of small cuts in farmers' income subsidies and a hike in the fees paid by dairy farmers.

The House approved the bill containing the changes Thursday on a 283-97 vote, a day after the Senate approved it in a charged partisan atmosphere.

The measure includes:
—A limit of 3 percent on the amount a farmer's crop yield — used to figure the amount of subsidy checks for wheat, corn, cotton and rice growers — can be cut in 1986.
—Restrictions on allowable uses for land idled by producers to meet requirements of price-support programs. The provision would protect growers of beans, potatoes, vegetables and other non-subsidized crops from a surge of new competition that threatened to depress their prices.

—A shift in the way the Gramm-Rudman deficit savings will be made in the dairy program. Rather than the price-support cuts that had been planned, the savings will be made through increasing fees paid by all dairy farmers.

Farmers were promised last year that the farm law, signed by Reagan in December, would protect their incomes at least at current levels. But several changes made in the law have in fact resulted in cuts, particularly for farmers who are new to growing subsidized crops or who have increased their yields in recent years.

The farmers have registered loud objections to portions of the 1985 legislation. The matter is a politically sensitive one in rural areas this election year, and Republicans and Democrats have been competing to see who can be the first to be seen as coming to farmers' aid.

To pay for the roughly $1 billion cost of the crop program changes, the bill approved Thursday sharply cuts back two export-subsidy programs that had been included in the farm law to help restore sagging U.S. farm export sales.

Opponents of the dairy measure argued that the change would lead to higher prices for consumers and amounted to an end-run around the new Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

But they could muster little enthusiasm in the chamber, which historically has supported the position of the dairy industry's dominant co-operators on legislation. An effort to strip out the dairy change lost, 267-120.

Republicans in the House and Senate who supported the legislation said they had received assurances that while the administration opposed dairy changes in the bill, the White House would not object to them as part of a package that included items the administration wants.

The main provision sought by the president is a sharp cutback in a mandatory export bonus program, which the administration feared would lead to subsidies for the Soviet Union and other unfriendly nations which are major customers for U.S. grain.

Another agriculture bill — an emergency measure to put $5 billion into the Commodity Credit Corp.'s empty coffers — was in limbo while the House decided whether to accept minor changes made by the Senate when it passed the money bill on Wednesday.

It appeared no money would be available at least until Tuesday, when the House comes back after the weekend.

Michigan Lake Residents Prepare For Flood

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — People who live along Michigan's shoreline are moving their homes, building breakwalls and buying sand bags as they brace for what may be this century's worst outbreak of Great Lakes flooding.

Water levels in Lakes Michigan and Huron are expected to break monthly records through April, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has predicted.

"It's going to be a bad year," said Christopher Shafer of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources' Great Lakes Shoreland Section.

"There's no plug that can be pulled to let the water out of the system. It's going to be that way through 1986 and probably into 1987. There's no relief in sight," he said.

Consistently heavy precipitation in recent years and the resulting runoff throughout the Great Lakes basin have created the high levels, which in turn cause flood and erosion damage. The storms that sweep across the lakes compound the trouble.

Water levels on the five Great Lakes are six to 10 inches higher this year than at the same time last year, according to official estimates. Lake levels last spring equaled records set in 1973.

On Feb. 21, Gov. James Blanchard declared as disaster areas 17 shoreline counties where damage is expected to be the worst.

State officials are expecting more rapid erosion on the western shore of the Lower Peninsula, flooding on the eastern shore and a combination of both problems in the Upper Peninsula.

On the west side of the state, the corps plans to haul $2 million worth of sand to depleted beaches around Grand Haven and Holland.

Michigan has 3,288 miles of Great Lakes shoreline, according to Mark Feldhauser, a state water quality specialist.

Companies that build seawalls and bulkheads and sell beach fill and other kinds of shoreline protection say they're swamped with inquiries, and expect more once the weather warms.

"This year we're predicting an even more hectic year than last year," said Barbara Gilbert of Shoreline Erosion Control in Arcadia. "(Business) is definitely up, but it never fails, come spring there is just this bombardment of calls once the ice melts."

The potential for damage is greater this spring, Shafer said.

Last year, for example, storm-fueled erosion sent 16 homes crashing into the surf along the southern shore of Lake Michigan, he said. This year, the DNR has identified 120 homes in the same area within 10 feet of the water line, a distance routinely erased during single storms last year.

"If they don't move this winter, they're going to be gone this spring," Shafer said.

The state survey didn't include the Upper Peninsula shore of Lake Michigan, where Ruth Tangerstrom of Manistee says she has lost 40 feet of shore since December and may have to move her house for the second time in 13 years. But the retired schoolteacher says she's running out of property.

"It's as far back to the road as it can go now," she said of her house.

Shafer said about 40 homeowners have applied for low-interest state loans to assist them in moving their houses.

In southeastern Michigan, the high lake levels are expected to continue to spark flooding along Lakes St. Clair, Huron and Erie, as well as the connecting St. Clair and Detroit rivers and their tributaries.

More than 4,000 shoreline homes in a 45-mile stretch along the Detroit River and Lake St. Clair could be damaged.

Gorbachev Realigns Upper-Level Leadership, Adds Woman To List

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev's realignment of top Communist Party organs has bolstered the Kremlin leadership with more technocrats to run his drive for economic expansion and an expert in the twists and turns of U.S.-Soviet relations.

It will take time to sort out the precise new assignments of the six men and one woman — the first in a quarter-century — promoted to the upper ranks of Soviet leadership on Thursday at the close of the 27th Communist Party Congress.

The Kremlin's chief spokesman, Leonid M. Zamyatin, acknowledged at a news conference that the party is still working through a "reorganization" of its key organizations.

The biggest changes came not at the pinnacle of Kremlin power, the Politburo, but in the second echelon, the Central Committee Secretariat.

Five new members joined the Secretariat, which was depleted by retirement and reorganization during Gorbachev's first year.

Gorbachev marks on Tuesday the first anniversary of his rise to power as Communist Party general secretary.

Among the new members of the Secretariat are Anatoly F. Dobrynin, ambassador to Washington since 1961, and Alexandra P. Biryukova, an official in the trade union organization.

Only one new full member, Lev N. Zaikov, 62, was named to the Politburo, which is now made up of 12 men.

Zaikov is also one of only three men holding the powerful combination of seats on both the Politburo and the Secretariat. The other two are Gorbachev and ideology chief Yegor K. Ligachev, considered to be the No. 2 man in the Kremlin.

As expected, the party congress revealed the largest shakeup to date in the Central Committee. But it fell short of what some Western diplomats had expected.

On Thursday, 307 party and government officials, KGB and military officers and workers were named full committee members, compared with 319 at the last congress in 1981.

Of those, preliminary counts indicated about half were re-elected. "We had expected more of the 1981 group to lose their seats," said one diplomat, who spoke on condition he not be identified. "In fact, I guess the most striking thing about the changes is the gesture to the older generation."

Three members of the "old guard" who rose to positions of power under late President Leonid I. Brezhnev were kept on the committee, although they have been retired from the Politburo.

Two Politburo members who retired under a cloud — former Moscow party chief Viktor V. Grishin and former Leningrad boss Grigori V. Romanov — were dropped.

Although the Politburo holds supreme power, the 11-member Secretariat and the Central Committee's various departments run the party, and therefore the country, on a day-to-day basis.

Dobrynin returns from Washington to a foreign policy apparatus that has undergone major changes since Gorbachev took power.

Longtime Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko has been moved to the largely ceremonial post of president and replaced by Eduard A. Shevardnadze, who was a newcomer to foreign affairs. Gorbachev himself had little foreign policy background before becoming party leader.

Dobrynin is one of the Soviet Union's foremost experts on super-power ties and his promotion signals the Kremlin's continued emphasis on those relations. But it was not immediately clear how responsibility over foreign relations will be divided up among Gorbachev, Shevardnadze and Dobrynin.

Ms. Biryukova, 57, is the first woman in a top post since Politburo member and Culture Minister Yekaterina Furtseva was removed in 1961. She has a background in the textile industry, and could be tapped to take over the vacant Secretariat portfolios for light industry and consumer production.

Zaikov, the new Politburo member, is said to have supervised defense-related industry and may keep that portfolio. There is also speculation that he might take on more general economic duties.

New secretary Vadim A. Medvedev, 56, is an expert on science, computers and technology and may supervise Gorbachev's drive for technological modernization.

Another new secretary is 50-year-old Georgy P. Razumovsky, widely regarded as an important aide to Gorbachev and Ligachev and head of party personnel.

Alexander N. Yakovlev, the fifth new secretary, has been running the party's Propaganda Department.

Reagan Will Take Aid Plan To Public

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he will make a nationally televised speech to try to rally public support and reverse growing congressional opposition to his plan to provide $100 million to the U.S.-backed guerrillas fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua.

Reagan announced the speech Thursday just before meeting with two dozen House Republicans to seek their support.

Two more Democratic-controlled House committees voted against the plan Thursday while one committee voted for it. That brought to three the number of full committees rejecting his plan in two days and only one committee favoring it.

Reagan said no date has yet been set for the speech, quipping, "I'm the last to know."

But it is expected to be delivered within the next two weeks, before the full House vote now tentatively scheduled March 19.

The Republican-run Senate is also expected to vote on the plan before its March 26 recess for Easter. Under special congressional rules, the issue will reach the floor of each chamber despite the committee action.

In Thursday's votes, the House Appropriations Committee rejected the package by a voice vote, minutes before the Armed Services Committee approved it on a voice vote. Later in the day, the Foreign Affairs Committee rejected it, 23-18.

While Reagan was defeated in the House committees, his administration also came under attack for its tactics in trying to drum up support for the plan to give the Contra guerrillas $30 million in non-lethal aid and $70 million that can be spent for military help.

Reagan says the money is needed to help the guerrillas fighting the Sandinista government of Nicaragua, which Reagan says is a threat to democracy in Latin America. The Sandinistas have received Soviet military equipment.

Reagan, entering the meeting with House Republicans, was asked if those who voted against his plan are supporting communism and answered, "if so, inadvertently."

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., said the administration is "using red-baiting tactics like we haven't seen in this city since Spiro Agnew was vice president" under Richard Nixon.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., complained it is "highly offensive" to question the patriotism of anti-contra legislators and announced she plans to oppose it.

In a Senate floor speech, Mrs. Kassebaum said the administration statements are preventing "a reasoned and rational debate ... There is the suggestion that this is a purely partisan issue — a disagreement between Republicans in white hats and Democrats wrapped in red banners ..."

Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., an administration supporter in last year's fight over providing non-lethal aid to the Contras, also criticized the administration.

"The tactics by the administration are backfiring," said McCurdy. "The level of rhetoric, the shrillness of the attack, has lost them votes."

But Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said there had been "harsh rhetoric" on both sides and said he and other Reagan supporters weren't questioning "the unyielding patriotism" of Contra opponents.

Shuttle Panel Holds Public Hearing At Cape

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The presidential commission investigating the Challenger explosion is hearing its first public testimony on possible causes of the accident, most of which implicate a seam in the right booster rocket.

The panel scheduled testimony from seven witnesses today in a Kennedy Space Center theater just a few miles from where the shuttle accident occurred Jan. 28, killing all seven aboard.

The hearing, the commission's first public session outside Washington, was to consider half a dozen possible causes, review pre-launch processing of the solid-fuel rocket boosters and examine status of the operation to salvage wreckage of the shattered spaceship from the floor of the Atlantic Ocean.

The commission chairman, former Secretary of State William P. Rogers, told reporters as he left a closed meeting Thursday that the probe was "going very well," but he did not elaborate.

The investigation to date has focused on the rupture on or near a seam, or joint, between the bottom and second segments of Challenger's right rocket booster. Photographs show a puff of smoke emerging from that area at ignition and a flame spewing from the same spot 59 seconds later, 14 seconds before the explosion.

A source close to the inquiry said it may be a long while before an exact cause can be pinpointed, if ever. The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it would be helpful if segments of the right rocket could be recovered, but he said that may be difficult because that debris has been located in 1,200 feet of water.

The source said the possible theories include: freezing launch-day weather that might have made synthetic rubber O-rings in the seam less resilient and unable to hold in hot propellant gases; rainwater that could have collected in the seam, frozen and damaged it; possible damage to the booster when segments were assembled; a defective rocket casing; a structural defect in a strut that connected the right booster to the external fuel tank; a bad batch of propellant that could have created a hot spot on the casing, and defective O-rings or sealing putty in the joint.

Questions were expected to be asked about reports that workers had trouble assembling Challenger's booster segments — there are four in each rocket — because two of them had lost their perfect roundness during shipment. The commissioners want to learn if damage was done to joints or O-rings during this process.

The frozen rainwater theory received attention Thursday when another source, who also asked not to be identified, told The Associated Press that a puff of steam emerged from the seam area at ignition, just before the appearance of the black smoke.

The source said the steam would indicate that ice formed from water in the motor joint and boiled immediately when the booster was igning and the fuel temperature was rising to more than 5,000 degrees. The ice, he said, could have forced open one or both of the O-rings in the joint.

The cold weather theory was challenged Thursday by a leading engineer at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration who said tests showed the O-rings would not have been harmed by temperatures that dropped as low as 24 degrees on launch day.

Several engineers at Morton Thiokol, which makes the boosters, testified earlier before the commission that they had expressed concern before launch that the cold might damage the rings.

But J.E. Kingsbury, chief of the science and engineering directorate at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., told reporters that since the explosion, O-rings had been tested to temperatures down to 10 degrees with no adverse effect.

Kingsbury said that proved the cold weather itself did not harm the rings, and that testing did not disclose any design flaw. There may have been a defect in the seam, he said.

Experts at Marshall were asked in an interview Feb. 28 whether anyone had considered that water might have seeped into the joints and turned to ice. Lawrence B. Mulloy, the space agency's manager for booster rockets, dismissed the notion.

Water was found in the trough-like joints on the only booster rocket ever disassembled after standing in the open weather on the launch pad, and Mulloy said since then a bead of grease had been used to prevent recurrence. But his superior, George Hardy, declined to dismiss that possibility.

Three Marshall engineers were scheduled to testify today, and officials said they would exhibit before the commission photographs "showing some things with the O-rings we can't explain."

Kingsbury said the center's scenarios for the explosion are focused on the failure of a seam on the right booster.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll-call votes during the week ending Feb. 28.

House

CONTEMPT OF CONGRESS — By a vote of 352 for and 34 against, the House approved a contempt-of-Congress citation against New York real estate broker Ralph Bernstein for failing to cooperate with a House subcommittee probe of the U.S. property holdings of Philippine ex-President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife Imelda.

Separately, the House also voted contempt charges against lawyer Joseph Bernstein, who joined his brother Ralph in declining to provide information to the Asian and Pacific Affairs Subcommittee, which is trying to determine whether the Marcoses used U.S. foreign aid to buy real estate in Manhattan, Long Island and other locations.

The subcommittee has received testimony that the Bernsteins acted as agents for the Marcoses, who allegedly has spent hundreds of millions of dollars to acquire U.S. property.

Although only Joseph is a lawyer, both Bernstein brothers invoked the attorney-client privilege in defying Congress. The federal courts now will decide whether to uphold the contempt citations, which are criminal charges.

Supporter Toby Roth, D-Wisc., said he voted against the citations in the subcommittee but changed his mind. "I was opposed because of the timing of the investigation, right in the midst of the Philippine elections," he said. "Now, the elections are over and it's time to proceed with questions on the misuse of foreign aid money."

Opponent Gerald B. Solomon, R-N.Y., said in a written statement introduced into the debate. "This whole episode — from start to finish — has been much more reminiscent of the old Star Chamber procedures than of our own American system of justice."

Members voting yes wanted to hold Ralph Bernstein in contempt of Congress. North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3; William Cobey, R-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Howard Coble, R-6; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; Alex McMillan, R-9; James Broyhill, R-10, and Bill Hendon, R-11.

TEST-BAN TREATY — The House adopted, 268 for and 148 against, a non-binding resolution urging President Reagan to resume talks with the Soviets in behalf of a comprehensive nuclear test-ban treaty between the two nations.

A similar measure was adopted by the Senate two years ago. Its rationale is that the arms race would screech to a halt on both sides if new technologies could not be tested, assuming the ban was mutually verifiable.

In addition to seeking summit negotiations toward an end to all testing, the measure (HJ Res 3) called for Senate ratification of two treaties banning underground explosions of 150 kilotons or more. Presidents Nixon and Ford signed those treaties with the Soviets, but the Senate has never ratified them.

The resolution goes counter to the Administration strategy of negotiating deep cuts in Soviet and American nuclear weapons as a preconditioning of banning tests of new ones. Also, the Administration terms it impossible to adequately verify Soviet compliance with a comprehensive test-ban treaty.

Supporter Lawrence Couthlin, R-Pa., said, "I believe that, if talks resume, the United States and Mr. Gorbachev can iron out differences on the verification issue."

Opponent Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said: "Simply to put our nuclear stockpile and the strategic defense initiative (SDI) on hold while we trust the Soviet Union is a roll of the dice that I am unwilling to make."

Members voting yes favored the resolution.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Neal, Rose and Hefner.

Those voting no were Cobey, Coble, McMillan, Broyhill and Hendon.

Senate

"GERMANENESS" — The Senate voted, 60 for and 37 against, to kill a proposal that Senate rules be tightened so that non-germane riders no longer can be attached to pending legislation.

Historically, during floor debate Senate rules have permitted extraneous provisions to be added to the legislation at hand, largely to provide a court-of-last-resort for minority views that cannot get a hearing elsewhere in the legislative process.

But critics call the policy on germaneness an anachronism that leads to procedural delays and cripples the Senate's ability to meet legislative deadlines as the year progresses.

The vote occurred during debate on a measure (S Res 28) to permit the televising of proceedings on the Senate floor that later was passed (below).

Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who voted to kill the proposed rules change, said, "No matter how unpopular the view of one (senator), he or she should be heard because, indeed, they might be right, and if not now, maybe in the future."

Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who favored the change, said the germaneness rule dates from a time when "a session was six months long and we were citizen legislators," and that today it invariably leads to legislative chaos at the end of each session.

Senators voting yes wanted to continue to permit non-germane riders to be offered to bills under debate.

North Carolina Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, both voted yes.

TELEVISIONING THE SENATE — By a vote of 67 for and 21 against, the Senate adopted a resolution (S Res 28) clearing the way for gavel-to-gavel television coverage of its floor proceedings on a trial basis between June 1 and July 15. A vote on whether to begin permanent coverage is set for July 29.

In order to attract viewers and protect the Senate's image, the legislation makes rules changes designed to streamline some of the tradition-bound chamber's most tedious procedures. For example, the maximum time senators can ensnarl a bill through extended debate has been cut back significantly.

Also, the resolution immediately begins radio coverage of the Senate floor on a permanent basis. The House has permitted gavel-to-gavel radio and television coverage since 1979.

Supporters argued television and radio coverage should be permitted in the interests of open government and in order to bring the Senate further into the age of electronics.

Foes generally argued that television, with its history of changing all that it covers, would infringe upon Senate traditions and rules that safeguard minority rights and protect against rash legislative action.

Senators voting yes favored television and radio coverage of the Senate floor.

North Carolina Sens. East and Helms both voted no.

ADOLPH CAESAR

Actor Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Adolph Caesar, a stage actor introduced to a wider audience through two critically acclaimed films dealing with black life, "A Soldier's Story," and "The Color Purple," is dead at 52. Caesar apparently suffered a heart attack Thursday after he showed up for the second day of filming of "Tough Guys," a Walt Disney Co. project, said his manager, Marvin Starkman. He died at about 1:30 p.m. at Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center, said spokeswoman Adelaida de la Cerda. "After 'A Soldier's Story,' his career took on a new life and Adolph often told me that this was just the beginning," said Steven Spielberg, who directed "The Color Purple." "He was a gentle soul with a crusty surface and I am very saddened by this loss," Spielberg said.

TV Scrambling Defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broadcast and cable TV programmers, eager to prevent backyard satellite dish owners from receiving shows unless they pay for them, have gone to Capitol Hill to defend their practice of signal-scrambling. Earth station enthusiasts, however, argued before the same House subcommittee Thursday that the public deserves to use space-age technology without interference. Many of the 2 million people who bought dishes fear their investment of roughly $3,000 each will be lost as more services scramble, allowing only authorized customers to receive the signal clearly. Rural residents, beyond the reach of cable and broadcast signals, are afraid they will lose their new-found access to the programming available to those in more populated areas. Michael Fuchs, chairman and chief executive officer of Home Box Office, the largest pay television company, said scrambling did not deny programming to anyone willing to buy a $400 descrambler and pay a subscription fee. He blamed the earth station industry for consumer confusion on the issue. HBO, he told the House telecommunications subcommittee, tried to make information available. "The earth station industry ... responded with misrepresentations, inaccurate and confusing innuendo and petty refusals to provide consumers with information on scrambling," he said. But Mary Lou Heinz, owner of H&H Electrical Systems Inc., a New Albany, Ind., company that sells and installs earth stations, said the blame for confusion should rest with cable operators who tried to scare people away from buying dishes by saying they might need more than one descrambler. "HBO wants its services to be available to earth station owners," HBO's Fuchs said. But he added, "We simply cannot tolerate a business environment where the product we are selling may be obtained easily and without payment." The network started scrambling on Jan. 15. HBO said about 3,500 customers have purchased decoders and called to sign up to receive HBO's signal, Fuchs said.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: W equals V

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:

Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♣ Seeing all your side's assets is a tremendous advantage. You can sometimes play your cards so as to create a smokescreen and hide your true holding from your opponents. Watch South in action in his shaky four-spade contract.

Even though his partner had jump raised, we are not thrilled with South's decision to go on to game. North was a passed hand, and South's only quick tricks were in the enemy suit.

Against four spades West led the ten of hearts. It was obvious that East held a singleton and either the ace of clubs or king of diamonds, since West could not open the bidding. Therefore, declarer was in grave danger of losing a heart ruff, the ace of trumps and two tricks in the minor suits.

To create the impression that East held J-3-2 in hearts, declarer won the first trick with the king. Next, he innocently led the jack of spades, as if he intended taking a finesse. West saw no reason to go up with the ace, and declarer was on firm ground. He continued with another trump, drawing both outstanding trumps in the process. It was beginning to dawn on West that he might have been had. In a valiant effort to recoup, he shifted to a low club. But South could not afford to let east gain the lead, so he flew up with dummy's king. Declarer returned to hand with a trump for the diamond finesse. That lost and the defenders could cash a club for their third and last trick. Declarer made the balance because he could dispose of the J-3 of hearts on the good diamonds on the table.
