French Journalists Said Seized In Beirut

By MONA ZIADE
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Four French television crewmen were kidnapped Saturday by gunmen in Moslem west Beirut, witnesses said. The attack came hours after an anonymous caller claiming to speak for the Islamic Jihad group threatened to kill one person in another group of French captives.

The journalists from France's Antenne-2 television station were identified by other French reporters as Phillipe Rochot, Georges Hensen, Ourel Cornea and Jean-Louis Normandin.

They were seized by gunmen near the Sultan Ibrahim restaurant in the seaside Jnah district Saturday afternoon, according to the witnesses. The Lebanese driver of their car was held with them for about seven hours, then released and warned not to talk about the abductions, other French newsmen reported.

They said they became concerned after the four victims failed to return to their hotel in west Beirut.

No group claimed responsibility for seizing the Frenchmen, who had flown to Beirut after Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, claimed Wednesday to have killed researcher Michel Seurat, one of four Frenchmen it claims to have held captive for months. Seurat's body, however, has not turned up.

In Paris, an emergency meeting was held early Sunday in Premier Laurent Fabius' office to study the latest attack against French citizens.

Fabius told reporters after the hour-long meeting that the information received from Beirut was "very worrying."

"It has taken a turn for the worse," he added.

Fabius said he called the French ambassador in Beirut and "gave instructions to try to do the maximum and to make contacts with Lebanese authorities" to try to find the kidnap victims.

"When one starts to accept blackmail, at that moment all French citizens all over the world are threatened," he said.

Several hours before the latest kidnappings, a man called a Western news agency in Beirut and said Islamic Jihad would kill one of Seurat's fellow captives if two Iraqis that France deported to Iraq are not sent back to France.

The caller, who said he represented Islamic Jihad, a fundamentalist Shiite Moslem group, gave no deadline.

A purported Islamic Jihad statement Wednesday said Seurat was "executed" in retaliation for the deportation from France of 13 Moslems, including the Iraqis, last month.

The Iraqis, Fawzi Hamzeh and Hassan Kheireldin, belonged to an Iranian-allied underground opposed to the Iraqi government, which is fighting a border war with Iran.

Reagan Talks Tough On Rebel Aid Issue

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan warned Congress on Saturday that rejecting his plan to help Nicaraguan rebels means caving in to "a powerful Soviet bloc challenge ... to spread communism throughout Central America."

The president, in his weekly radio address from Camp David, Md., delivered another broadside of tough talk designed to counter congressional resistance to his proposal to send $100 million in aid to the Contras battling Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

With his plans getting a cool reception on Capitol Hill, Reagan announced Friday that he was sending diplomatic troubleshooter Philip Habib to Central America to try to seek a negotiated settlement of the region's conflicts.

In his address, Reagan said the upcoming vote in Congress is of "supreme importance" to U.S. security. His policy, Reagan argued, will "keep Central America free without committing American troops."

The president said Habib's diplomatic mission must be bolstered by aid to the rebels, or "the communists will feel no need to negotiate. Without power, diplomacy will be without leverage."

"History will soon record whether the United States Congress, faced with a powerful Soviet block challenge to capture Nicaragua and spread communism throughout Central America, stood by and watched or had the courage to stand up for freedom and American security," Reagan said.

"How can Congress ignore this storm, gathering so close to our homeland?" Reagan asked. "Nicaragua today rivals Cuba as the prinicipal Communist warehouse and exporter of violence in our Western Hemisphere."

Source Claims Testimony Irks Shuttle Commission

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The presidential commission probing the Challenger explosion believes much of the testimony it is hearing from NASA and its contractors is self-serving, a source close to the inquiry said Saturday.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the commission is especially irritated with testimony from officials of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, the Huntsville, Ala., facility which manages the solid rocket booster program.

In their testimony last week, these officials seemed to be trying to shift the responsibility to the contractors who made and assembled the right rocket booster believed responsible for the accident that killed seven crew members, the source said, adding that some of those testifying appear to have a vested interest in where the commission ultimately places the blame.

Commission Chairman William P. Rogers, a former secretary of state, twice suggested that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the contractors enlist outside investigators to perform testing needed to determine the accident's cause, instead of doing it themselves.

Rogers displayed his annoyance during a public hearing here Friday after Marshall officials said that a leak in a joint in the right booster appeared to be the most probable cause but also kept alive the possibility that the explosion was triggered by a leak in the external fuel tank.

Rogers pressed the question of the external tank with Thomas Lee, deputy director at the Marshall center.

"Each time representatives of Marshall testify, they put the tank as their No. 1 suspect," Rogers said. "Ostensibly, it seems as if the joint seems to be the No. 1 villain. I just don't understand."

"I didn't mean to imply that," Lee replied. "We don't think the external tank is the No. 1 suspect. It's a potential as a contributor only. We know the SRB (solid rocket booster) failed. ... We know the SRB is the failure."

Lee said experts were still analyzing the possibility of a small hydrogen leak in the tank and the reason for a drop in tank pressures about 10 seconds before the explosion. "Until we complete all the analyses ... then we can't close that out."

If the tank could be established as the culprit, blame could be shifted away from Marshall, which manages the solid booster contract, to the tank manufacturer, Martin Marietta, and to the Kennedy Space Center here.

Officials Fear The President's Proposal Would Mean Cuts In Worker Rosters, Programs

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service was prepared for cuts in federal funding because of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, but local officials said President Reagan's budget proposal for fiscal 1987 will force the agency to terminate many employees and several programs.

"Gramm-Rudman wouldn't hurt us that much," said Leroy James, chairman of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service. "But the Reagan proposal will limit the types of programs we're able to offer and the amount of people we can send out."

Statewide staff reductions would result in a 25 percent staff cut at the Pitt County agency, according to James.

The budget submitted by Reagan to Congress reduces the federal funding of the Cooperative Extension Service by 59 percent, from $342.7 million in 1986 to $140 million in 1987. The N.C. Agricultural Extension Service expects to lose about $6.9 million, or 54 percent of its current budget, if funds are reduced.

James said Reagan's proposals are unfair because the extension service funding is being cut to an unreasonable amount.

"There will be cuts made across the state under the Reagan proposal," he said. "The amount of 54 percent is out of proportion with cuts in other programs."

In an effort to keep Congress from approving the proposal, extension service members met in February with the agency's advisory board in Raleigh to discuss a plan of action.

"The advisory board recommended that each county contact 50 key people in agriculture and have them send letters to their congressmen," James said. "We've already done it here. We asked people to express the importance of agriculture to North Carolina, and we've sent the letters on to Senator John East (R-N.C.), Senator (Jesse) Helms (R-N.C.), and Representative Walter Jones (D-N.C.)"

James said the impact on Pitt County could be far-reaching if Reagan's budget is approved.

"We'll be limited to just meeting the basic needs. When you cut staff, you cut programs," said James. "There are a lot of concerned people in Pitt County."

On the statewide level, the budget, as proposed, would require the termination of a special food and nutrition program for the disadvantaged. The program now has 39 specialists and agents and 146 nutrition aides, who provide nutritional education to about 7,310 disadvantaged families, according to figures released by the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service.

The budget would also curtail or terminate extension education programs in integrated pest management, farm safety, pesticide impact assessment, forestry and wildlife programs, rural development programs, and the small and part-time

Tass Accuses U.S. Of Spying

By ROXINNE ERVASTI
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Tass said Saturday that the U.S. order to reduce Soviet staff at U.N. headquarters in New York was a hostile move and accused the United States of spying on U.N. diplomats.

Washington ordered the Soviet U.N. diplomatic staff cut from 275 to 170 by April 1, 1988, saying staff levels are unreasonably high and Soviet personnel were engaged in espionage and other non-diplomatic acts.

The cuts are to begin Oct. 1, the U.S. mission to the United Nations said Friday in a note to reporters.

The U.S. note said its imposition of a ceiling on Soviet staff was "consistent with our obligations" under international law and under the Headquarters Agreement between the United Nations and the United States.

Tass, the official news agency, did not say Saturday what the Soviet response might be, but said the order violated the U.S. agreement for acting as host for U.N. headquarters and said U.N. lawyers were studying the issue.

It said numerous countries raised "quite justified doubts" about keeping U.N. headquarters in New York.

In a dispatch from New York, Tass accused the United States of spying on the United Nations:

"The United States intensively exploits the fact that the United Nations headquarters is located in New York for espionage purposes — even the American press has to admit that," Tass said.

It quoted a column published in Newsday newspaper, which has its main circulation in Long Island, N.Y., as saying the U.N. is a "target of opportunity" for U.S. intelligence agencies.

The Aug. 9, 1982, column was written by James Bamford, author of a book which focused on the National Security Agency. In the book, Bamford said the NSA had access to virtually all messages passing in and out of diplomats' New York offices.

The National Security Agency is America's most secret intelligence agency, reporting to the White House. It operates spy satellites to observe other nations and has monitoring stations to intercept electronic communications.

Two Area Seniors Receive 1986 Morehead Awards

Two Pitt County high school seniors have received 1986 Morehead Awards, an honor that includes a $30,000 scholarship to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Morehead Foundation has announced.

Peggy Marie Jenkins of North Pitt High School and Nancy Johnson of J.H. Rose received two of approximately 60 Morehead Scholarships awarded across the nation. The award provides an all-expense paid undergraduate education at UNC, which is valued at over $30,000. In addition to the stipend, Morehead scholars are offered eight-12 week summer internships during their college careers.

PEGGY MARIE JENKINS

Miss Jenkins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Jenkins of Washington, D.C. For the past 17 years she has lived with her grandmother, Mary Walls of Bethel. At North Pitt she is active in the Science Club, Math Team, Student Government Association, Students Against Drunk Driving, Advanced Placement Club, Monogram Club and National Honor Society and serves as editor of the guidance newspaper. She is also a member of the varsity basketball, softball and volleyball teams.

Miss Jenkins participated in the Rotary Youth Leadership Conference, Governor's School East, Summer Ventures and the Medicine as a Career Program at Wake Forest University. She is active in the St. Delight Church of God In Christ in Bethel.

Miss Johnson is the daughter of Tom Johnson of Greenville and the granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. Carlton N. Adams of Winston-Salem. At Rose she is a member of the National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, Interclub Council, Anchor Club, Drama Club and RECAST Club. She is an associate editor for the school newspaper and is a varsity track and gymnastics athlete.

Morehead Awards are presented on the basis of merit to stduents with superior potential and achievement. The awards recognize leadership, service, character, academic standing and motivation.

Gunmen

The caller Saturday said if "the French government does not move swiftly to return the Iraqis, then we will execute one of the (French) diplomats. ... We are thinking seriously of executing one of the diplomats."

The French hostages are Marcel Fontaine, 45, the French Embassy's vice consul; Marcel Carton, 62, embassy protocol officer; Jean-Paul Kauffmann, 42, a journalist, and Seurat, 37, a researcher for the French Center for Studies and Research of the Contemporary Middle East.

The caller did not mention the six Americans. For their release, Islamic Jihad has demanded Kuwait free 17 men imprisoned for bombing the U.S. and French embassies there in December 1983.

He said the French hostages will be released only after France halts "all support for the (Iraqi) regime of Saddam Hussein" and releases five Arabs convicted of trying to kill Shahpour Bakhtiar, a former Iranian premier. France has sold Iraq weapons for use in its 5½-year-old war with Iran.

Carton's wife, Denise, told The Associated Press in Beirut France should not have deported the activists to Iraq.

"They should have kept the Iraqi prisoners in France or handed them over to any country but Iraq," she said.

In its statement Wednesday, Islamic Jihad said one of the two Iraqis already had been executed for his underground activities. But the caller Saturday insisted on both men being returned.

There was no explanation for the contradiction.

The missing Americans are diplomat William Buckley; Peter Kilburn, a librarian at the American University of Beirut; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest; Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for the AP; David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital; and Thomas Sutherland, the university's dean of agriculture.

Islamic Jihad claimed Oct. 4 to have killed Buckley but failed to produce his body.

Cuts ...

farmer program, extension officials in Raleigh said.

Extension officials also said the budget cuts would reduce the staff of the North Carolina Extension Service by about 340 positions. A projection of possible terminations required by the reduction, including the expanded food and nutrition program, is 60 specialists, 110 extension agents, 146 paraprofessionals and 27 technicians and secretaries.

"We're all going to lose one agent per county," James said. "And I'm going to lose three paraprofessionals, so that means we'll actually lose four of our 16 people."

Extension officials also said the ability of the agency to transmit research generated technology would be reduced. At a time when agriculture producers are experiencing serious fiscal problems, the impairment or loss of any technology transfer has negative implications for rural communities.

Meanwhile, county extension positions are cost-shared by county government, and the loss of these positions could result in the loss of additional funding for the extension service, according to Dr. Chester Brown, associate dean and director of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

Brown said the ability of the Extension Service to recruit and train volunteer leaders for programs in community and rural Development, 4-H, and youth and extension home economics would be seriously reduced, resulting in a reduction of services to these programs.

Brown said the Extension Service was hit hard in the Reagan proposed budget because it receives state and county funding.

"The Extension Service is scheduled for a 59 percent cut because they have the state and county money," he said. "It has always been a three-way partnership with each party contributing about 30 percent, but it is rapidly becoming a two-way partnership."

While the news from Washington has been less than encouraging, James said he hasn't heard anything to make him believe the local governments will cut funding for the agency.

"The federal budget is being cut in so many places, but I've heard no indications that there's a problem with state and county funding," Brown said. "However, I think it will be difficult for the state and counties to pick up the federal share."

Meanwhile, Brown said Reagan's proposal meets the Gramm-Rudman requirements for cutting the national deficit, but he hopes the budget will go through other channels.

"Congress can pass a budget that is not balanced and then all the domestic agencies will be cut by the same percentage to meet the requirements of Gramm-Rudman," Brown said.

While the president's budget is subject to the rigors of a trip through the Legislature, local agents are still concerned.

"We're not real excited about it, as one might expect," said Mitch Smith, Pitt County extension agent. "Any effort to reduce areas is within itself very disadvantageous for the people of North Carolina."

Another agent isn't sure what the future holds.

"We don't know anything more about what's going to happen," said Evelyn Spangler, Pitt County extension agent. "All we can do is keep asking our superiors about it."

Aid ...

response to Reagan's radio talk, Sen. James Sasser of Tennessee said: "it's absurd to suggest that anyone who opposes the immediate allocation of $100 million in military aid to the Contras is an unwitting dupe of Fidel Castro or (Nicaraguan leader) Daniel Ortega.

"Accusations of that sort can only come from a simplistic, black-and-white view of Central America. and I fear they betray a fundamental misunderstanding of the region," Sasser said.

The president argued that "the days of pretending Nicaragua is ... an innocent lamb of peace wishing only to live in harmony with its people and neighbors have long passed."

"Nicaragua is a country held captive by a cruel clique of deeply committed communists at war with God and man," the president said. The nation is being used as a sluice through which a flood of weapons and manpower pour in from Soviet-bloc nations, Reagan argued.

The president said the question faced by the Congress is not whether America wants peace in Central America, but whether the United States "will meet a growing danger from the Soviets, East Germans, Bulgarians, North Koreans, Cubans and PLO camped on our doorstep."

The president is continuing his push for aid to the rebels despite a sour reception on Capitol Hill, where four of five congressional panels voted last week against recommending approval of his request for $70 million in military and $30 million in non-lethal assistance to the rebels.

The White House has set a heavy schedule for the president this week to chip away at congressional resistance. Reagan will make a televised address to the nation on the issue March 16 and meet often with lawmakers to discuss the issue next week.

The House, controlled by Democrats, is tentatively scheduled to vote March 19. Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kansas, predicted last week that Reagan would face an uphill fight in the Senate to win approval of his proposal.

In his speech, Sasser said "the administration's approach to Central American issues appears to be based on divisive rhetoric and knee-jerk military reaction."

Acknowledging that Nicaragua "is a serious destabilizing force in the region," Sasser said "recognizing the Nicaraguan threat cannot and should not reduce us solely to the Contra option.

"From all the evidence, the Contras are not an effective military force," said Sasser, who recently visited the region. "They have committed numerous acts of terrorism and are responsible for human rights violations."

Something To Think About

Roderick M. Phillips
DIRECTOR

AFRAID TO SAY WRONG THING

Many quite close and caring friends avoid a family which has suffered a loss, or keep silent about their feelings, for fear "of saying the wrong thing." To begin with, this is not an unusual reaction. Often it is because individuals have not come to terms with their own sentiments about death. Because they are unsure of their feelings, they are afraid their words will come out all mixed-up.

Try not to worry. There is no one "right" attitude toward death and grief. Besides, many people are as confused and ambivalent about it as you may be. In fact, it would not be amiss to share your concerns. It might even open the door for family members to express their own doubts and feelings.

The important thing is to be with them, and to show that you care. It is very rare that an honest display of humanity will be resented and misunderstood. Absence or silence, on the other hand, might be.

Pitt Students Took Part In Statewide Drill

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

School students across Pitt County took cover for about 38 minutes last Wednesday when a tornado warning — part of a statewide drill for Tornado Awareness Week — was issued.

"The drills consisted of an alert to the communications center, which in turn, sent it out to our office and the schools," Terry Payne, the county's assistant emergency services coordinator, said Friday.

"A tornado watch was put into effect at 9:15 a.m. When the tornado warning came in about 10:20, the children moved into areas they would get into in the event of a tornado ... mostly into interior hallways," Payne said.

"Generally everything went real well. There were no problems." But Payne said "some schools need to update their tornado plan and are presently working on revising their plans for faster relocation."

Tornado Awareness Week came near a time of special significance for many Pitt County and other eastern area residents.

It was the night of March 28, 1984, when a tornado cut across Pitt County, killing nine people and injuring at least 148. That tornado — one of a series of 15 tornadoes that killed 44, injured 801 and left damage estimated at $200 million across the state that day — also destroyed 180 homes and damaged 270 in the county.

Carolyn Rouse, a secretary at the Ayden Elementary School, which was hit hard by the March 1984 tornado, said the drill there "went great. We had the kids out of the classrooms and off the playground in about 60 seconds or less."

She explained, "The school was closed from March 28 until September of that year" because of the tornado damage. "We finished the (school) year out in Grifton, busing the children.

"I think our teachers have worked with the children ... stressed what it (a tornado) is and what to do," she said. Because of the efforts to inform the children "I don't think they were affected by the drill.

"The children that are left (who were students when the tornado damaged the school) are older now" and understand better, Ms. Rouse suggested. "The K (kindergarten), one and two grades are all new kids and don't remember the tornado happening."

Tornadoes — shortlived storms with wirling winds that form funnel-shaped clouds — are the most violent of all storms.

When a tornado watch is announced, this means tornadoes are expected in or near an area. Residents should keep radios or television sets tuned to a local station for more information.

If a tornado warning is issued, this means a tornado has actually been sighted or has been indicated by radar. Take shelter immediately.

If you are at home, take shelter in the center part of the house, on the lowest floor, in a small room such as a closet or bathroom, or under study furniture. Stay away from windows to avoid flying debris.

If you are at work, take cover in an interior hallway on the lowest floor, or to a designated shelter area.

If you are outside in open country, drive away, at a right angle, from the tornado's path. If there isn't time, or if you are walking, take cover by lying flat in the nearest ditch, culvert, excavation or ravine.

Rumors May Have Caused President, ECU Embarrassment, Chairman Says

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The chairman of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees has suggested that rumors surrounding the issue of whether or not to invite President Ronald Reagan to speak at the May 10 commencement may have created an embarrassment for both the president and the university.

Republican sources said last Thursday that there was a chance that Reagan would have accepted an invitation to speak at the commencement exercises if he were awarded an honorary degree. But the sources said a trustee-faculty committee last week refused to grant Reagan an honorary doctorate and suggested the move was politically motivated.

Trustee Chairman Ralph Kinsey Jr., in Greenville for a board meeting, declined to comment in detail on the issue Friday afternoon.

"I don't comment on rumors," Kinsey said. But he did say, "I regret very much that the person who started the rumors created a potential embarrassment for the university and the president."

Chancellor John Howell told trustees Friday afternoon that Robert L. "Roddy" Jones, an ECU graduate and Raleigh developer, would be the commencement speaker. He said Jones, a former chairman of the ECU board and presently a member of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, had been asked "some time ago" to be the speaker, and had accepted the invitation on Feb. 14.

Howell said sometime later, trustee W.E. "Bill" Dansey of Greenville, a Republican appointed to the board last summer by Gov. Jim Martin, suggested Reagan be invited to speak and be awarded an honorary doctorate. He said Dansey presented the idea to the degree review committee.

The committee, Howell said, which usually begins reviewing candidates for honorary degrees in the fall for the following spring commencement, did not reject Reagan as a candidate, rather it decided not to consider the proposal so late in the year.

Dansey declined to comment.

engineers from Morton Thiokol Inc., which makes the booster rockets, said they opposed the launch because freezing temperatures might have damaged synthetic rubber O-rings designed to prevent hot gases from escaping from joints between rocket segments.

Middle-level managers at Marshall questioned those concerns, and the engineers were overruled by Morton Thiokol managers.

Marshall's associate engineering director, Jerrol Littles, testified Friday that tests conducted at Marshall since the launch have shown that temperatures as low as minus 10 degrees had no effect on the ability of the O-rings to seal the joints.

Littles and other Marshall officials suggested several possible theories that could have caused the rupture in the rocket joint. All but one exonerate the cold weather.

The one cold weather theory is that rainwater collected in the joint and froze and pushed cold-hardened grease against the O-rings, opening a gap that allowed fiery gas to escape.

Other theories put forth include a defective O-ring, a flawed pressure test port on the joint, improper joint inspection and possible damage caused when the booster segments were joined. All would be contractor faults.

Twice on Friday, Rogers expressed concern that accident analysis tests being done at Marshall and at Morton Thiokol might be less than impartial.

"It might be wise to think of some other outside independent source," to help with the testing, he said.

Proposal To Raise Fees Is Approved By Trustees

East Carolina University trustees Friday gave approval to a measure that will result in an increase in fees paid by students for the coming school year.

Acting on a recommendation from the board's student life committee, the full board voted to recommend to the University of North Carolina Board of Governors that student services at ECU be maintained at their present level for the 1986-1987 school year.

However, a schedule of proposed fees circulated by Dr. Elmer E. Meyer, vice chancellor for student life, suggested that in order to maintain some services at their present level, some fees will have to increase.

The proposed fee increases include: a $10 increase in charges for intramural-recreational services (from the present $24 to $34); a $1 increase in fees for operations and debt service for university unions (from the present $53 to $54), and a $3 increase in charges for student union programs (from the present $17 to $20).

Added to other fees that would remain the same — athletics ($101), student activities ($37, including media board, Student Government Association and SGA transit), health services ($99), and other debt services ($21) — the total fees would increase a total of $14 (3.9 percent), from $354 to $368.

An increase of $60 (6.5 percent) was also proposed for room rent, which would up the present $920 rent to $980.

In all, the total fees and room rent charges would increase 5.8 percent, from $1,274 to $1,348. Together, tuition, fees and student housing would combine to produce an overall 4.4 percent increase for the coming year.

The board also approved several major expindatures to be recommended to the board of governors, including: $584,000 for neo natal care to share with Pitt County Memorial Hospital; $438,000 for improvements at the Brody Building which houses the school of medicine; $130,000 for renovations to the basement of Fletcher Dorm to provide a recreation area, and $59,000 for lighting of intramural fields.

SGA President David Brown, who sits as a member of the board, reported that the board's student life committee has been considering a 30,000 square feet addition to Mendenhall Student Center. He said the addition would expand dining and meeting room space at the center.

Chancellor John Howell reported that the board of governors is considering a policy that would limit out-of-state enrollment at each of the UNC-system schools to 18 percent of the freshman class by the fall of 1987.

Saying that out-of-state students accounted for about 26 percent of the freshman class at ECU last year, Howell said he estimated that by admitting 80 fewer out-of-state students a year, "we will be in compliance."

But Howell noted, "the end result could be, I suppose (an) even more modest" enrollment increase than projected.

Dr. Mary Bratton, a professor of history, presented members of the board with autographed copies of her recently-completed history of ECU.

Sunday Opinion

Holiday Option Might Be Best Answer For City

Greenville's City Council has made a boondoggle out of the issue of a Martin Luther King holiday for city workers.

The solution to the problem certainly isn't to eliminate the Veteran's Day holiday for city employees and substitute Martin Luther King's birthday instead. Neither is subsidizing another $30,000 paid holiday — the city just plain can't dance to that tune.

The idea of a floating holiday is a good one, but Veteran's Day should not be part of the option. That day honors veterans, both black and white, and should remain intact.

Since employees have two days for Thanksgiving and Christmas, why not give them the option of working one of those extra days (not Christmas Day or Thanksgiving Day) and taking that holiday on Martin Luther King's birthday? The decision of which day to take could be made individually. City employees can celebrate King's birthday and Greenville won't be spending another cent for their day off.

A $30,000 paid holiday could require at least a one-cent tax rate hike. In the face of declining federal subsidies for mass transit, shrinking low-income housing funding and slashed low-interest city revitalization loans, $30,000 for a paid holiday seems foolish.

The City Council, when it considers the issue Tuesday, should weigh the benefits of additional funding for critical city programs against the benefits of another subsidized holiday for employees. The choice is clear. The council can't afford to make the wrong decision.

Church Property Will Help School

The Extended Day Program will apparently have a new home soon.

The city school board approved the purchase of the Grace Free Will Baptist Church property on Wagauga Avenue at a cost of $600,000 for the program and for exceptional student classes. Included in the property is the church sanctuary and an education building.

The program has been housed in the Agnes Fullilove School for a number of years. However, the old elementary school, located on Chestnut Street, has been at the point of condemnation for a number of years.

Payment for the Grace property will be made over a period of five years from regular capital outlay funds which the school systems receive from county appropriations. Disposal of the Fullilove property, which has an appraised value of $84,000 with the classroom building or $100,000 with the building removed, has yet to be announced.

The plans for housing the Extended Day Program appear acceptable.

Neighborhood sentiment has been to keep the program operation in the general area and the purchase of the Grace FWB property satisfies that since it is located in close proximity to the Fullilove property. Albeit an expensive purchase, the church building appears to be adequate to house a city school program and this appears to be the best solution as to what to do in housing the Extended Day Program and exceptional student classes.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Mr. and Mrs. I. Jack Edwards started a game when their children were growing up. Whenever they went on a trip they identified all the car license plates they could from the various states.

Their children are 33 and 35 now but the Edwards' still continue the game.

On a trip to Seattle they identified license plates from all 50 states. Having completed that they started over and got up to 48.

Later Jack decided to identify as many license plates from out of state as he could find in Greenville. His rules were that it would have to be plates that he happened to see. In other words he wouldn't make a special trip to find a car which someone else told him about.

His deadline for finding all 50 states was Feb. 15 of this year. He didn't make it. By the deadline he had found plates from 49 states. And which one was missing? It was North Dakota.

"You would think that Alaska and Hawaii would be hard to find," Jack commented. "But I got them early on."

At any rate, when you make the rules you can change them and Jack is still looking for that North Dakota vehicle. Sooner or later it will show up.

Jack noted that it says something for the diversity of the people in our town that so many out-of-state license plates can be seen here.

Of course it is well known that the Greenville area is one which draws people from far off places. East Carolina University, the medical complex and industry are magnets for new people and it all combines to create an interesting community.

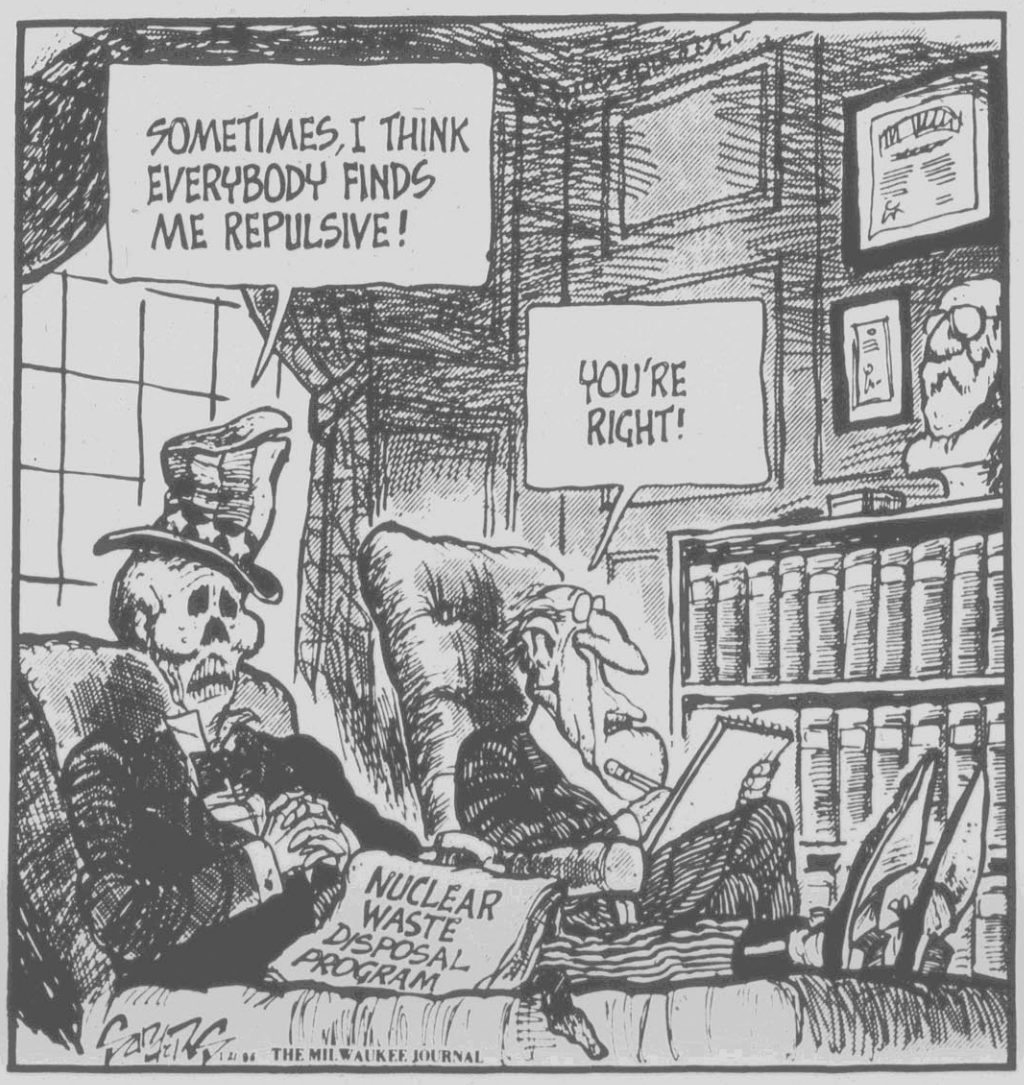
One passing of an era came when Greenville discontinued requiring the distinctive green and white municipal license plates. For years the plates only cost $1, but every auto kept in the city limits was required to have one.

The result was a plate that could be spotted on the front of a car a good ways down the highway. It was seldom that local people who went on an extended road trip couldn't report spotting one of the Greenville license plates along the way.

There are still a number of local cars which have them and it is still interesting to watch for them on auto trips.

Of course cars in the city don't have to have the city plates anymore and that leaves a blank space on the front bumper, perhaps for message type license plates.

It hasn't always been that way, however. Once auto owners received two license plates from the State Department of Motor Vehicles — one for the front bumper and one for the rear. The city tag was a small version which was attached above or below the front state tag. Eventually the front bumper state plate was eliminated.



Big 'If' Surrounds Kemp

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

STREAMWOOD, Ill. — Rep. Jack Kemp's visit here recently, while showing that George Bush has hardly sewed up the next presidential nomination, also exposed what's wrong with the incipient Kemp campaign.

Kemp came to this western suburb of Chicago to address a fund-raiser for the township organization of Don Totten, newly installed as Cook County Republican chairman but a longtime national conservative pillar. Totten's was one of the right-wing scalps brandished by Bush's operatives when they unveiled the vice president's political action committee steering group.

But Totten, like other supposedly Bush-co-opted conservatives, insists the connection is for the 1986 mid-term campaign only. Several foot soldiers in his township organization told us Totten prefers Kemp for president — if he runs.

It is the "if" that clouded Kemp's otherwise impressive performance at the Schamburg Township Lincoln Day dinner. Several potential supporters told us their eagerness to back him is inhibited by fear he will pull the rug out from under them — like a Nelson Rockefeller or Teddy Kennedy.

While Kemp's insiders are confident he is running and is merely waiting for his 1986 re-election to Congress before formalizing it, many outsiders envision him in agonized indecision. Totten sees no difference between the way Bush and Kemp dodge questions about 1988. Unlike Kemp, however, the vice president does not have a track record of dodging races in any constituency bigger than a Buffalo-area congressional district.

When asked in a pre-dinner press conference about conservatives worried whether he will run, Kemp replied: "They should wait." By this, he clearly meant he had made up his mind to run but could not say so. Yet, some present perceived indecision. After the speech when a businessman handed over $1,000 for Kemp's PAC and told him his candidacy is vital for the nation, the congressman's response sounded non-committal.

His inability to convey that he is running without actually saying so is essentially a failure of staff and organization. Indeed, Kemp did not look much like a presidential candidate when he arrived in Chicago all by himself. His usual traveling aide, press secretary John Buckley, had the night off. In his absence, nobody recorded offers of support — a deficiency duly noted by politicians present. This slipshod operation compares with Bush's organizational monolith two years before the first primary. Given that contrast, it is remarkable that the vice president came out second best in Schamburg.

That can be traced partly to Bush steering committee member Totten. Introducing Kemp as "one of my closest friends," Totten recalled one of the congressman's earlier visits to Illinois to raise money for Totten's doomed conservative campaign for lieutenant governor against the party establishment.

Such old conservative ties cannot be replicated in the vice president's current courtship of the right. But Kemp's biggest edge here was less ideological than oratorical. While diners at Totten's county organization fund-raiser a week earlier buzzed in conversation as Bush read vice-presidential boilerplate, the $50-a-ticket guests here listened attentively to Kemp's 25-minute stemwinder on patriotism, prosperity and an open-door Republican Party.

In sum, Kemp seems the only obstacle to Bush's nomination but badly needs to get organized. His answer may be Lewis Lehrman, a fellow supply-side conservative who was 1982 Republican candidate for governor of New York and now heads Citizens for American (CFA).

Their relationship always has been difficult, and was not helped when Kemp's desire to sign Lehrman as his national finance chairman prematurely appeared in print. They are now engaged in what one insider calls "a mating dance," but CFA staffers have been told not to expect any change soon in Lehrman's status. Yet, Kemp needs to signal, perhaps by June, that he is more than a lone eagle giving an unintended impersonation of Hamlet.

Emotional Issue for Shultz

Barry Schweid

WASHINGTON (AP) — When George Shultz visits Capitol Hill these days he takes along colorful maps to show democracy is on the rise in Latin America but also to warn that if Nicaraguan rebels are denied $100 million in U.S. aid portions of the hemisphere could turn Red.

The secretary of state gets emotional about the prospect. Last week, he thumped the witness table in anger when Sen. Daniel Evans, R-Wash., suggested after looking at one of Shultz's charts that the rebels seemed to grow stronger when military aid was suspended in 1984.

Twice last year Evans voted against aid to the Contras. He is inclined to oppose the administration again.

Perhaps, he suggested to Shultz, if Congress blocked the $100 million in military and economic assistance the White House has requested over 18 months the Contras would be bigger than the Nicaraguan army they have been fighting.

"It is not a flip subject," Shultz snapped. Evans, a bit embarrassed, backed down.

Shultz sees Nicaragua as "a cancer" in the hemisphere, trying to subvert weaker, democratic neighbors and trafficking in terrorism and narcotics.

The aid is supposed to force the Sandinistas to the bargaining table. "We should bring them to the table and then take the table over and have democracy there, not a communist dictatorship," Sen. Chic Hecht told the Washington Times on Monday.

But President Reagan apparently does not go along with the conservative Nevada Republican and member of the Senate Intelligence Committee. The president has denied on several occasions that he is trying to overthrow the Sandinistas. And Shultz assured the Foreign Relations Committee that American troops would not be sent to Nicaragua.

Still, Reagan and Shultz are warning of severe consequences if Congress rejects the aid request.

Shultz told the Veterans of Foreign Wars in a speech Monday that without the aid the rebels would be crushed and the United States would have to contend with a dangerous Soviet and Cuban base on the mainland of Latin America.

Reagan, meanwhile, assembled top rebel leaders in the Cabinet Room on Monday to show his support. He said if the Sandinistas achieved final victory the security of the Panama Canal would be threatened and hundreds of thousands of refugees would clamor for entry to the United States.

But the outcome in Congress is in doubt.

To the editor:

In recent news articles and in a speech to members of the North Carolina Association of Educators, Gov. Jim Martin has promoted the idea that funds should be shifted from the Basic Education Program to the Career Ladder Program because, he says, the BEP does not address the problems of teacher supply and instructional improvement. The BEP is not intended to attract teachers into the public schools, nor to improve the individual teacher's instructional skills — it deals with curriculum and other means of benefitting children. His proposal to emphasize the Career Ladder Program appears to be based on the assumption that it will prove to have been successful in the pilot systems — an assumption which is by no means valid. In practice, the program may not work as well as some would like to believe it will. Further, it may not attract teachers and improve instruction as has been predicted.

A better proposal would be to fund the Basic Education Program adequately so that it benefits all children in North Carolina public schools and to provide other funds with which to enhance the appeal of teaching as a profession.

Would you abandon a $2 million facility that your tax monies financed? That is about to happen. East Carolina Vocational Center has an Olympic-sized heated swimming pool, a gymnasium, an exercise and weight room and locker rooms in an area totaling 25,596 square feet. This outstanding facility is in imminent danger of being closed April 1 because ECVC cannot meet operating costs.

This recreation area, meant for public use, has not been widely publicized. Numerous persons from the private sector, industry and agencies use this facility, but not in enough numbers to support it financially. If the Vocational Center could get 300 members at $25 per month per member (committed for a year) and $25,000 in tax-free donations from business and industry, operating expenses can be met. At present, city and county governments are not amenable to subsidizing this facility. State funds support ECVC for about 22 percent of its budget with the remainder coming from the sale of products made by clients receiving training.

Many private citizens and representatives of industry have expressed interest in keeping this recreation center open but, to date, their support is insufficient. If you are interested in swimming year-round, learning to swim or using any part of this fine public facility, contact East Carolina Vocational Center, 758-4188. It needs you now!

To the editor:

In 1985, when the funding for the nation's Superfund Program expired, both the House and Senate passed reauthorization bills. In terms of specific provisions, the two bills are dramatically different. The size and effectiveness of the Superfund Program rests with the Congressional Conference Committee appointed to produce a compromise bill. First District Congressman Walter Jones serves on this committee.

Enacted in 1980, the Superfund Program was a five-year program created to help clean up the nation's worst abandoned hazardous waste dumps. During those years, the program confirmed that toxic waste disposal is a threat to thousands of communities and millions of Americans. However, inadequate resources, inadequate staffing, lack of commitment, and inadequate authority to respond have prevented the program from making substantial progress.

The House bill provides a larger more effective clean-up program than that required by the Senate. Congressman Jones voted for the House bill, which we greatly appreciated. Indeed, the Senate bill not only provides $2.5 billion less over the five years than the House version, but also contains fewer provisions to ensure that these funds increase the pace and effectiveness of waste site cleanup. Why? Because the Senate bill fails to establish deadlines for EPA to develop and implement clean-up plans. It also fails to assure that cleanups meet health standards and criteria established by the EPA.

The N.C. chapter of the Sierra Club, with more than 6,000 members, urges Rep. Jones to support the House provisions for the following issues: clean-up standards, clean-up schedules, citizen suits, liability, and funding. The Senate bill should be supported only for its better right-to-know reporting requirements.

To the editor:

After reading the letter addressed to the Public Forum from James Dawson of Route 2, Grifton, quoting or rather misquoting Nancy Colville's letters to the editor, I felt this person needed to get the story straight on all counts before "seceding from Pitt County" as he states in his letter.

Mrs. Colville wrote three letters concerning EAS to Grifton to the editor. I have copies of all three. The first letter called Greenville's CT&T subscribers' attention to vote on the issue. Her second letter dealt with the way this issue came about, and her third letter was objecting to the way the City Council voted on this issue.

Mr. Dawson goes on to say that "all the officials care about is getting the tax money out of the citizens of Grifton and to heck with anything else they want." I don't know where Mr. Dawson gets his information, but all county and city officials are supportive of EAS to Grifton. As a matter of fact, a delegation of them is going to Raleigh to address the N.C. Utilities Commission soon to lobby for EAS to Grifton.

Mr. Dawson closes his letter by stating that, "If a person can't afford $5.16 a year, he is in real trouble when they raise our property taxes for the school merger." Does Mr. Dawson realize that all telephone subscribers are not property owners?

Yes, my wife opposed EAS and so did 8,278 other Greenville subscribers, 382 Ayden subscribers and 101 Grifton subscribers. We all have a right to vote as we see fit. I admire my wife for standing up for what she believes. Too bad there are not more like her in this world.

A Country Of Loners?

WASHINGTON — Alexis de Tocqueville once wrote that Americans were a people "locked to the solitude of their own hearts." Little did the French philosopher know that a century later his assessment would accurately describe the common plight of a growing lot of young professionals in America.

Indeed, a study written for a forthcoming edition of the American Journal of Sociology predicts that if a college-educated woman has not wed by age 30, her chances of getting hitched are 20 percent or less. According to the study, only 78 percent of college-educated women between the ages of 25 and 29 will marry, compared to 90 percent of the general population.

Analysis of Census Bureau data by Yale University sociologist Neil Bennet and Harvard University economist David Bloom might alarm many of America's unattached female professionals. Some of them may, in fact, already be prepared for the inevitable: that a certain portion of their lives will remain unfulfilled.

"As they defer marriage, it becomes less and less likely, whether by choice or involuntarily, that they will ever marry," said Bennet. "The marriage market may, unfortunately, be falling out from beneath them."

In recent years professional women have delayed marriage for graduate school and a stable career. No longer needing men for economic security or social prestige, young women in their mid- to late 20s have been able to attain these goals on their own. When asked when they'll marry, many have said, "I'll think about that in a few years."

Yet as the biological clock has ticked away, marriage delay has translated into marriage foregone. Today many single, college-educated professionals have constructed a non-traditional social network for unmarrieds. For many women and men this has been a disconcerting — indeed, frightening — but nonetheless necessary task.

The most common mistake singles make is to blame themselves as failures. In reality, most are not losers. More often than not, single, educated professionals are dealing with a crossfire of expectations and ambitions.

Unfortunately, competing passions have often hampered their search for companionship. Despite all the changes of the last 20 years, many men still want to end up with a women who'll be at home at the end of the day, waiting anxiously to serve them dinner. At the same time, lots of women will search for men who can be counted on to support, protect and define their existence.

To assuage the pain of frustrations, some people have embraced a variety of distractions: prime-time soaps, radio talk shows, the telephone, drugs, food. Affluent singlehood has no doubt contributed greatly to the proliferation of gourmet specialty shops. Yet, as with aspirin and narcotics, the effect of these diversions ends with every morning, whereupon the lonely one must set out to right his or her predicament for the long term or face another bout of solitude.

One problem, according to Louise Bernikow, author of the forthcoming book, "Alone in America: The Search for Companionship," is that singles fail to recognize loneliness as a social disease of disconnection. Bernikow recommends that singles redefine companionship and relatedness to include larger networks of people: friends, acquaintances, working partners, relatives and strangers. Joining a community organization of some sort, she adds, may also help to alleviate feelings of isolation.

There may, in fact, be something for everyone in what Bernikow says. Technology and mobility, among other things, have helped to make this a country of loners. Affluence hs certainly dulled the more successful social animals among us to the alienation around them. They may not know it, but the content souls may only be exacerbating the feelings of isolation that plague American society.

'Thanks For Going Home'

RALEIGH — You want some people to go home so badly that you thank them when they leave. Gov. Jim Martin did that when his old buddies, the General Assembly, went home after only a one-day special session in February.

Martin worte to Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, House Speaker Liston Ramsey and 170 legislators and congratulated them on their performance during the one-day session on the insurance crisis.

"You pulled off a very workmanlike session, got the job done and adjourned," Martin said in the two-page letter.

Although this reporter is having fun reporting it as an instance of "Thanks for going home," the body of Martin's letter stressed the cooperation between the two branches of government. "Those who only look for examples of friction between us may not have noticed, but here was another example of smooth bipartisan cooperation," he wrote.

Russell Clay, special assistant to Ramsey, has received an amusing response to a letter he'd sent to nationally syndicated columnist James J. Kilpatrick.

Clay, a member of The Thomas Wolfe Society, wrote to Kilpatrick seeking his endorsement of a special U.S. postage stamp commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Asheville novelist's death in 1938. Clay asked that Kilpatrick write to the U.S. postmaster in support of such a stamp.

"You put me on the spot," Kilpatrick said in his return letter to Clay. "I'd like to oblige you, and I love Wolfe's books, but as a stamp collector I have to be dubious about issues that commemorate fiftieth anniversaries of anybody's death."

Kilpatrick went on to suggest that the society wait until the year 2000 and seek a stamp commemorating the 100th anniversary of Wolfe's birth.

Clay said. "We may have to look into that."

Given the trouble some legislators have had with the law in recent years, one might think that their colleagues would be careful about the quips they make in public. That's not the case.

At a recent meeting of the Governmental Operations Committee, a Department of Correction official noted that one in every 100 North Carolinians is on either probation or parole.

To which Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, asked, "Anyone in this room?"

The next day, a Buncombe County official was describing some of the offenders punished through a local community service program. Sen. Jim Speed, D-Franklin, asked, "Were any of them legislators?"

In both cases, the quips elicited laughter.

But that may have been nervous laughter. In recent years, two legislators have been convicted of crimes and at least one man was elected to the state House after being convicted on numerous charges. Three other legislators and ex-Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green were acquitted of charges while in office and at least one other was elected after having been acquitted of a homicide charge.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said that when he saw the cameras setting up, "I just sat down. I knew we were going to be there a while for a lot of posturing, a lot of showmanship."

Never Call Soviets 'Evil'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billionaire industrialist Armand Hammer says the secret behind his 65 years of successful dealings with the Soviets is to treat them as equals, respect their pride and never — but never — call their nation "evil," as President Reagan once did.

That approach, and his carefully nurtured contacts with almost every Soviet leader since Lenin, is paying off handsomely for Hammer, who is pouncing on a new cultural agreement between the United States and Soviet Union to arrange exchanges of priceless works of art.

Hammer convinced his Soviet friends to send what he calls the "greatest collection of Impressionists and post-Impressionists to ever leave the Soviet Union" to the United States this spring for a five-month tour.

And, as part of what Hammer calls a "two-for-one deal," 40 French Impressionist masterpieces, comprising the first collection from Washington's National Gallery ever to be shown in the Soviet Union, went on display at the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad in early February.

After that collection completes a two-month tour in Moscow, Hammer is sending 113 paintings from his personal collection to the Soviet Union until Dec. 1.

Nearly a million Soviet art lovers are expected to view the National Gallery collection, which opened at the Hermitage a scant two months after Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev signed the cultural agreement at their Geneva summit last November.

After a six-year chill in relations, punctuated by the Soviets' occupation of Afghanistan in 1979 and their downing of a South Korean airliner in September 1983, the floodgates have opened wide.

The U.S. Information Agency says pianist Vladimir Horowitz will go to Leninrad and Moscow in April, while the famed Kirov Ballet plans to make a two-week tour of Philadelphia, Washington and Los Angeles later this year.

The Moiseyev folklore ensemble is to tour the United States next fall, and the Bolshoi Ballet will visit sometime in 1987. There is talk of sending the Philadelphia Orchestra, a Broadway musical and American jazz performers to play before Soviet audiences.

Hammer, 87, art collector, philanthropist, financial patron of cancer research and chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., recalled in a recent interview how he had succeeded in nailing down the Soviet art exhibition, which director J. Carter Brown coveted for the National Gallery.

Both had seen most of the collection two years ago at the private museum of Baron Hans Heinrich Thyssen-Bornemisza in Lugano, Switzerland. Brown said his overture to the Soviets about an exchange was torpedoed by the South Korean airliner incident.

Hammer said the baron's show "was so spectacular that the first chance I had to get to Moscow, I saw Peter Demichev, the Soviet minister of culture, and asked if they'd let me have it.

"He said, 'We can't. We don't have a cultural agreement.' But I asked him for first refusal when they did get an agreement, so as soon as I heard that the summit had signed a cultural agreement, I got on the plane and went to Moscow and I got the collection."

The 40 canvasses by van Gogh, Gauguin, Matisse, Cezanne, Monet, Renoir and Picasso are coming from the Hermitage Museum and the Pushkin Museum in Moscow. Most have never been seen before in the United States.

The show will open at the National Gallery of Art here on May 1, and then will travel to the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and, to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, ending Oct. 5.

Hammer enjoys boasting of the lucrative business deals he has struck and the trust he has built in the Soviet Union since 1921, when he traveled there as a young Columbia University medical school graduate to help combat a typhus epidemic.

He quickly became a trade pioneer between the Soviets and Americans. He first won an asbestos mine concession in the Ural Mountains and then received Lenin's approval to build a capitalist enterprise — a pencil factory — in the heart of Moscow.

"They told me they'd give me any concession I wanted and I said, 'Give me the concession to make lead pencils.' They said, 'Why?' I said, 'Because Lenin says he's going to teach Russian peasants to read and write, and you haven't got any pencils.'

" ... I told them I didn't know anything about pencils, but I'd find people who do know. I went to Nuremberg, Germany, and I recruited a staff of experts and within six months I had one of the largest pencil factories in all of Europe.

"We took care of all the needs of Russia and we were exporting pencils to Persia, China, even the United Kingdom. We had our own building. Pencils made in Russia, with 'A. Hammer' on the sides."

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Public support for the death penalty is near the highest point recorded in a half-century of scientific polling, with seven in 10 adult Americans favoring the execution of persons convicted of murder.

At the same time, however, the latest Gallup Poll shows that public support for the death penalty would decline dramatically — from 70 percent to 55 percent — if life imprisonment, with no possibility of parole, were a certainty for convicted murderers.

The trend of public opinion on capital punishment is among the most volatile in Gallup annals. The highest level of support was recorded last November, when 75 percent said they favored the death penalty for murder. The lowest level was found in 1966, when those opposing capital punishment narrowly outnumbered those in favor, 47 percent to 42 percent. Since then, public backing for the death penalty has gradually increased to the present high level.

Since the end, in 1977, of a de facto 10-year moratorium on capital punishment, through 1983, only 11 Americans were put to death. Since 1983, the rate of execution has greatly increased; currently there are more than 1,400 inmates on death row.

Thirty-nine states now have death penalty statues on the books, but debate continues among penologists over whether the death penalty deters potential killers and whether it can be imposed fairly.

Heavy support for the death penalty is found in all major population groups — with the important exception of blacks, statistically equal proportions of whom favor and oppose it.

Men are slightly more inclined than women to favor the death penalty, but no clear-cut differences of opinion are apparent on the basis of age, education, income or geographic region.

There is evidence, however, of a strong political coloration in the survey findings: Self-described Democrats favor capital punishment by a 2-to-1 margin while among Republicans support reaches 7-to-1.

Another survey question found little equivocation in public opinion on this controversial issue. By better than a 3-to-1 ratio, those who favor the death penalty say they do so "very stongly" (54 percent) rather than "not too strongly" (16 percent). Feelings are almost as intense among those in opposition, with 13 percent very strongly and 9 percent not too strongly opposed.

Offered the alternative between execution and life imprisonment for persons convicted of murder, roughly one-third (35 percent) select the latter while 55 percent choose the death penalty.

The results are based on in-person interviews with 1,570 adults, 18 and older, conducted in over 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Jan. 10-13. For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 3 percentage points in either direction.

Thefts Reported

Greenville police are investigated several thefts reported to the department Friday.

An incident reported about noon involved the larceny of a T-top, valued at $900, from a 1982 vehicle, police said. Other damages to the car, which was parked at Riggs Gulf Station, Dickinson Avenue, were estimated at $75, police said.

A theft at 807-B Vanderbilt St., reported about 2:37 p.m., involved $157 in currency, three packages of pork chops valued at $4 each, a 12 gauge, a single-barrel shotgun valued at $75, and an 18-karat gold bracelet, valued at $33, police said.

An 18-inch, 14-karat gold chain, valued at $250, was taken from a car parked at Evans and Fifth streets in an incident reported at 7:39 p.m.. Police said a cassette tape storage box valued at $10 and 15 cassette tapes valued at $10 each were also taken from the car.

Saturday Accidents

Greenville police investigated two traffic accidents Saturday.

Officers said cars driven by Linwood McDowel Lewis of Vanceboro and Patricia Ann Cannon of White Road Estate, lot 3B, collided about 12:25 p.m. on Arlington Boulevard.

Damages were estimated at $1,200 to the Lewis car and $1,500 to the Cannon car. Officers said Ms. Cannon was charged with a safe movement violation.

At 1:37 p.m. Saturday, cars driven by John Ansley Guy of 205 Westwood Drive and Joan Laura Huggins of 312 E. 10th St., collided on Dickerson Avenue.

Damages were set at $600 to the Guy car, and $400 to the Huggins vechicle. Police said Guy was charged with a safe movement violation.

Driver Sought

Police were still searching Saturday for the driver of a vehicle who left the scene of an accident at J.H. Rose High School Friday at about 11:22 a.m., according to Officer D.R. Wyrick.

The officer said the driver was backing a car owned by Walter S. Pollard Jr. of 503 Club Pines Road, and hit a parked car owned by George A. Threewitts III of 103-14 David Drive. The collision caused the Threewitts car to strike the school's auto shop, causing about $500 to the building, Wyrick said. Damages to the Pollard car were set at $600 and $350 to the Threewitts vehicle.

Officers said the driver ran from the scene after the collision.

Simultaneous Event

A 1986 simultaneous revival for March and April will begin Sunday in area churches, coordinated by Good News America and the South Roanoke Baptist Association.

At 11 a.m., Oakmont, Arlington Street, Farmville First and Grifton First churches will begin services. A 7:30 p.m. service will also be held in each church.

Speakers include Dr. William Stillerman, Oakmont; the Rev. Jimmy Nickelston, Arlington; the Rev. Hal Norton, Farmville, and the Rev. Burke Holland, Grifton.

Other services will be held in Wilson, Edgecombe, Martin, Washington and Beaufort counties.

Algebra Workshops

Workshops to improve the competence of algebra teachers in the seventh and eighth grades have been scheduled in June by the East Carolina University Science and Mathematics Education Center.

Forty teachers from middle schools in northeastern North Carolina will be selected to attend one of two 10-day, 50-hour workshops June 16-27 in Greenville and Williamston. Applications are now being received.

Funding has been provided by the North Carolina Science and Mathematics Education network, according to Dr. Floyd E. Mattheis, director of the ECU center.

Instructors will be paid by a combination of funds from the Science/Math Education Center and the grant. Participants will be paid a stipend. They will also receive five renewal credits and have a teaching kit of manipulatives and printed materials.

Vaccination Clinics

Quarterly rabies vaccination clinics will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. until noon at all local veterinarians' offices in Pitt County.

In order for pet owners to comply with the North Carolia General Statues, all dogs and cats 4 months and older must be vaccinated against rabies.

SEANC Event

The East Carolina chapter of State Employees Association of North Carolina has tickets available for the St. Patrick's Day dance on March 15 at the Kinston Shrine Club sponsored by SEANC, District No. 46, a spokesman said.

For more information call 756-3527 after 6 p.m.

Opinion Forum

A public opinion forum will be held Tuesday in Greenville to measure public views on such issues as education and transportation.

The forum will be held at the Willis Building, First and Reade streets, from 3-7 p.m. Those wishing to speak should register at the door upon arrival.

The purpose of the forum is to seek public comment on how to address both capital and education priorities in the years ahead.

Public comment and recommendations are being sought on specific education issues such as the impact of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act on public education, teacher scholarship loan programs, entry level salary for teachers, instituting a salary incentive program for teachers, tuition grants, and establishing an office to promote teaching as a career.

The forum is one of six scheduled across North Carolina.

Gathering Planned

The Knights of Columbus's John Ivey Smith Council 6600 will have a St. Patrick's Day party Saturday from 9 p.m. to midnight at St. Gabriel's Church Hall.

Proceeds will help people in the community. For tickets, call Tim Baker, 752-6586 after 6 p.m.

New ECU Sorority

Zeta Tau Alpha international "fraternity for women" will become the newest member of the Panhellenic group of sororities at East Carolina University this spring.

Zeta Tau Alpha's national representative Martha Edens will conduct interviews with prospective members April 1-3. Pledging of the charter members will be held at the conclusion of her visit.

Zeta Tau Alpha, which has chapters at several North Carolina colleges and universities, has the third largest number of collegiate chapters of the 26 member groups of the National Panhellenic Conference. ECU's chapter will be the sorority's 208th chartered group.

The sorority was founded in 1898 at Longwood College, Farmville, Va. Its major service projects include work for the Association for Retarded Citizens, notably through support of the Bioenginneering Project.

ECU currently has collegiate chapters of 12 social sororities.

Issue Published

The initial issue of a nationally circulated quarterly newsletter on storyteling has been published by the department of library and information studies at East Carolina University.

The publication, "By Word of Mouth," is edited by Dr. Constance A. Mellon of the ECU library and information studies faculty and is a project of the National Clearinghouse for Information on Storytelling, based at ECU. Readers include teachers, librarians and others interested in verbal presentations of fiction and folk tales.

Current clearinghouse/newsletter projects include compilation of a storytelling index of written material on aspects of storytelling and organization of a storyteller's registry for persons who perform or conduct workshops.

Also in progress is the production of a national directory of formal courses on storytelling, taught at secondary, college or continuing education level.

Course Completed

Three Greenville Police Department officers, Garland W. Williams, Ralph G. Mendenhall and Thomas E. Evans, have completed the basic criminal investigation course at the North Carolina Justice Academy at Salemburg.

The 80-hour course, designed to introduce officers to all phases of investigative work, was completed by the three policemen Friday.

The academy is a division of the N.C. Department of Justice.

Farmers Market

A groundbreaking ceremony for the Pitt County Farmers Market will be held at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at the old county home property on rural road 1725.

The structure, when completed, will permanently house the market, which has sought a location for several years.

Proclamation Issued

Gov. Jim Martin has proclaimed the seven-day period through Saturday as "Employ the Older Worker Week."

In his proclamation, he said that by employing older workers, employers will have the opportunity to get experience and know-how to their work forces through their employment.

Mayor Les Garner also proclaimed the period as "Employ the Older Worker Week."

According to Tammy Moore, a local Employment Security Commission older worker specialist, more than two million North Carolinians are aged 45 and older. During 1985, the commission placed 22,273 older workers in jobs. At the Greenville office, 136 older workers were placed in employment.

Organization Of Bishops Snubs Subpoena

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic Party officials, setting aside their tradition of internal bickering, on Saturday heeded the call of their chairman and swiftly adopted rules governing the campaign for the party's 1988 presidential nomination.

Party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr. also appealed to them to discourage "any premature and false barometers of the 1988 nominating process, such as straw polls." He punctuated his appeal by noting that CBS News had distributed ballots to delegates and he urged them to "leave them blank."

Martin Plisner of CBS said he wouldn't know how many party officials participated in the survey until after all the ballots had been tabulated. The CBS survey asked the Democrats to name their personal choice for the nomination and identify the Democrat with the best chance of carrying their state.

Kirk had urged the party to avoid a wholesale revision of the rules and approve relatively minor modifications in the provisions that guided the 1984 nomination campaign.

At a news conference after the meeting, an obviously pleased Kirk said the Democrats had come through the rules process with the appearance of "a party that has its act together."

The revised rules increased the number of elected and party officials who will automatically be named delegates to the nominating convention; lowered the percentage of the vote candidates would need to be awarded delegates; and opened the way for Wisconsin to resume holding its open primary.

But while 1988 held the spotlight at the meeting of the Democratic National Committee, Kirk reminded the delegates that "we can't wait for 1988, the battle will take place in 1986."

Earlier in the three-day party meeting, Kirk announced a $1.2 million program to strengthen state parties as they gear up for the midterm elections in which the major goal of the Democrats is to regain control of the Senate.

The Democrats must pick up four Senate seats to regain the majority they lost in 1980.

The Democrats have undertaken massive and often divisive revisions of their rules after nearly every presidential election since 1968 — and they lost four of the five elections since that year.

Most of the debate on the rules focused on the question of the so-called threshold, the percentage of the vote in any district a presidential candidate had to receive in order to be awarded any delegates.

In 1984, candidates had to receive at least 20 percent of the vote to qualify for delegates. The Rev. Jesse Jackson argued that as a candidate for the 1984 nomination he lost 400 delegates because of that threshold.

The party commission that revised the rules — called the Fairness Commission — lowered the threshold to 15 percent, a figure that Jackson said was still too high.

Former Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson said that if the 15 percent figure had been in effect in 1984, Jesse Jackson would have gained only 21 more delegates.

Maynard Jackson moved to eliminate any threshold requirement, a motion that was defeated on a voice vote. When he tried to have it lowered to 10 percent, his motion was defeated 178 to 92.

Other rules changes increased the number of members of Congress who become unpledged delegates from three-fifths to four-fifths of the House and Senate delegations.

But the new rules also would require that the congressional delegates be chosen between April 19 and May 7, 1988. During the 1984 campaign the House and Senate caucuses acted before any states and became in effect, the first primary. A large majority of those delegates declared their support for Walter F. Mondale.

The first delegates chosen this year were the members of the Democratic National Committee who were added to the list of party officials who automatically become delegates.

Wisconsin gets to resume its open primary after being barred from holding it in 1984 following a battle settled by the U.S. Supreme Court which ruled the national party had the authority to enforce its procedures for choosing delegates.

National party officials had objected to the ease with which Republicans could vote in the Democratic presidential primary in Wisconsin. Kirk reversed the position of his predecessor, Charles T. Manatt, and sided with Wisconsin.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national organization of Roman Catholic bishops said Saturday it won't comply with a court subpoena for records of its anti-abortion activity because it raises "grave constitutional issues" of religious freedom.

The National Conference of Catholic Bishops said through spokesman William Ryan that it would risk a contempt of court citation for refusing to comply with the subpoena, which was issued in connection with a lawsuit challenging the Roman Catholic Church's tax-exempt status.

The bishops, meanwhile, said in a separate statement that because abortion is "a grave moral evil," there is no such thing as legitimate dissent by Roman Catholics against the church's position on the issue.

The statement by Bishop James Malone, the conference president, was issued Saturday in response to an advertisement placed in last Sunday's New York Times by a group of Catholics asserting the right to dissent from church teaching on abortion and other controversial issues.

In the court case, the bishops had been given until Friday to comply with the Feb. 26 subpoena issued by U.S. District Court Judge Robert L. Carter in New York. Ryan said the bishops informed the court they would accept a contempt citation in order to appeal the subpoena.

"They said they would not honor the subpoena, they would accept a contempt of court citation rather than abide by the subpoena," Ryan said. "It isn't an act of defiance, it is a perfectly legal, ordinary procedure, something lawyers do."

The bishops' conference has been embroiled in a five-year-old lawsuit by abortion rights groups that want the Internal Revenue Service to rescind the church's tax-exempt status.

The church contends the abortion rights groups are trying to curb its freedom of religion.

But Lawrence Lader, president of Abortion Rights Mobilization, a plaintiff in the case, said "the case is not about religious liberty or political activity of any religious group."

"It is only on one issue, and that is that the federal tax code says that a religious group with tax exemption cannot support a political candidate or attack a political candidate," he said.

Lader said the group has copies of Catholic diocese or parish newspapers supporting or attacking candidates because of their stands on abortion rights, many of them in the 1980 election.

The judge has not issued a contempt of court citation, but indicated that any of the more than 20 plaintiffs could ask him to issue one.

The bishops contend the subpoena raises "grave constitutional issues involving freedom of religion," Ryan said.

"One is whether a third party group, ARM organization, has standing to compel a religious organization, whether it's the Catholic Church or some other religious organization to turn over its records," Ryan said.

"Then there is the whole issue, can a court or an outside organization interfere with the internal workings of a religious organization," he said.

Lader said the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has twice rejected the bishops' requests for a rehearing of Carter's orders that it turn over the documents sought by the plaintiffs.

Malone's statement on dissent from church doctrine was issued in resonse to an advertisement signed by more than 1,000 Catholics protesting threatened sanctions against some two-dozen nuns who had protested the church's opposition to abortion.

"There is no room for dissent by a Catholic from the church's moral teaching that direct abortion is always gravely wrong in itself," said Malone, who is bishop of Youngstown, Ohio.

CLU Criticizes Surveillance Proposal

RALEIGH — A proposal by Gov. Jim Martin to use "voluntary humane house arrest" incorporating an electronic surveillance system for some non-violent criminals has drawn criticism from the Civil Liberties Union.

"This is right out of '1984,' the novel, or 'Brave New World,'" said George H. Gardner, executive director of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union. "It is a deplorable, fascist invasion of humanity. Even when someone has been convicted of the most heinous crime, he is entitled to a residuum of dignity."

Gardner said it didn't matter that only volunteers would be placed in the house arrest project.

"I can understand that a convicted and sentenced person might do almost anything to achieve his liberty," he said. "But I don't think the person will have gotten all that much if he's going to go around with a ring in his nose."

The state Administrative Office of the Courts has authorized an experiment with such a system in Forsyth County in 1986-87, officials said.

According to the plan, prepared by the state Department of Correction, the experiment would involve a small number of offenders who have not demonstrated assaultive behavior.

Ben G. Irons II, a lawyer and administrative assistant to Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson, said he did not know the details of the project. "We've done some research on it, and legally, we feel that it is a program we can try," he said.

A retired judge in Albuquerque, N.M., takes credit for introducing the idea to correction officials in his state. He conducted a test of an electronic ankle bracelet in 1983 on four offenders who came before his court.

Jack L. Love, now an attorney in private practice, said he got the idea while reading a Spiderman comic strip in 1979. A villain had placed a metal bracelet on Spiderman's wrist "to monitor the whereabouts of Spiderman so the villain could go about doing his skullduggery," Love said in a telephone interview.

In 1982, Love was looking for a way to put more people on a work-release program from prison. The judge conviced a sales representative for an electronics company to develop the device, to be strapped to the ankle. He tested it in his home, then tested it on four inmates he sentenced to a "home curfew" from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. each day.

"In my opinion, it was a successful field test," Love said. "There were bugs and gremlins and glitches in the system and the equipment. However, it was like the Wright brothers getting off the ground."

An official with a Minneapolis firm that markets ankle bracelets said the devices have been tested on a few offenders in Utah.

"The kind of people who would go onto a monitoring system have to motivated to make it work," said J. Griff Kennedy, communications program manager with Control Data Corp.

"You have to have someone who doesn't want to be in prison," Kennedy said. "It's got to be someone motivated to support their family or pay back for their offense, and they want to live at home."

The average cost of the system is $8 per day, Kennedy said. "Generally, around the country, it costs $30 to $150 a day to incarcerate someone."

Researchers Say Indian Village Remains May Help Solve Puzzle

An AP Member Exchange Feature
By Frances Silva
The News and Observer

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — The field near the great bend in the Eno River hardly merits a second glance. But under its weeds may lie a piece of the puzzle of society's evolution, researchers say.

Buried in the 200-year-old layer of dirt are the remains of an Occaneechi Indian village, which experts in anthropology have said is among the most significant Piedmont Indian finds in the state's recent history.

Archaeologists from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill have been uncovering the site for three summers, finding pottery, shell and glass beads, pieces of metal and even a musket and lead shot.

Each artifact offers a clue about how people of the time — roughly 1680 to 1710 — lived and adapted to life, said Roy S. Dickens Jr., director of the UNC Research Laboratories of Anthropology, which has supervised each dig.

"An archaeological excavation tells us how people lived and how they were changing," Dickens said. "It tells us how we develop. It adds a little bit to mankind."

Richard Jenrette, a New York investment banker, last month purchased the 20-acre site on which the village is located, saving the property from development that could have destroyed archaeological treasures.

Jenrette's purchase of the site was good news for Sherryl Paylor, a UNC graduate student, and P. Stephen Davis Jr., an archaeologist with the research labs. They are among the students and archaeologists who will begin another summer's work on the site May 19.

For Ms. Paylor, the memory of finding her first skeleton last summer is still vivid. The archaeologists had found 12 burial pits, and Ms. Paylor and two others were assigned to uncover one of them.

The excavation "was real slow, but real exciting. I knew I was going to get something," she said. "It was my first buried body. It was unique."

The Occaneechie site was discovered in 1983 by research lab members who were excavating another nearby village found in 1938 by Joffre Coe, a retired UNC anthropology professor.

Work at the site, which Davis said probably was home to as many as 75 Indians, showed the village at one time included a fence, several large houses and a central plaza dominated by an oval sweat house.

The sweat house, Dickens said, used rocks heated in a fire pit as a method of cleansing.

Wastes Processor Says Insurance Woes Plague Firm

JAMESTOWN, N.C. (AP) — A commercial processor of hazardous solvents and other wastes may be forced to shut down because the company cannot get liability insurance as required by state and federal regulations, company officials say.

Officials of Seaboard Chemical Corp. say they can get insurance from a New York company, but the carrier wants an exclusion on liability from groundwater contamination, a policy unacceptable to state environmental officials.

They say if they cannot work out an agreement with the state by Monday, they will be forced to stop accepting wastes by mid-April and close May 16.

The fate of Seaboard has led to a marriage of convenience between the company and environmentalists, who have written letters to state officials urging them to keep Seaboard open.

"If somebody told me a year ago that I'd be writing a letter on behalf of Seaboard, I'd have denied it," said Carolyn Allen, chairman of the Guilford County Taskforce on Hazardous Waste. "We urged them to work out something on the insurance and in the meantime give them an extension."

James Rayburn, chairman of the county's Advisory Board for Environmental Quality, said he wrote a letter because "I can't see Seaboard's shutdown as in the best interest of the citizens of the county or state."

Seaboard was notified last year by its former insurance carrier that coverage would end in June 1985. Since then the company has operated without liability insurance.

Bill Horn, an accountant and adviser to company president Melton Jewell, said the company has spent almost $3 million in the last three years on cleanup and a new plant and equipment.

But the company is now apparently paying for past indiscretions, said William Meyer, head of the solid and hazardous waste branch in the state Department of Human Resources. Meyer said groundwater contamination exists because of practices that the company has now corrected, and that contamination is complicating the insurance problem.

"The problem is that you can't tell what was past contamination and what's current activity," Meyer said.

Seaboard's insurance company, National Union Insurance Co. of New York City, used an independent risk assessment that underlined the groundwater contamination issue, Meyer said.

"They (the insurance company) wanted an exclusion on the groundwater liability," Meyer said. "We can't accept that. It would be an abuse of power for me to ignore this exclusion."

Despite two recent inspections resulting in no violations or fines, company lawyer Charles Tate said Seaboard has had no luck with insurance companies.

"Our agent has contacted 25 carriers," Tate said. "He said we've tried every known source.

"Seaboard wants to be a good corporate citizen," he said. "We do comply with the law, but we just don't have control over the insurance industry."

Meyer said he thinks a liability insurance pool, approved by the General Assembly in a special session last month, would be a good idea for companies like Seaboard, but forming a pool would take too much time to do Seaboard any good.

"We support alternatives to insurance and have told EPA so," Meyer said. "They ought to look at letters of credit, bonds or cold cash."

IN THE STATE

Something Different

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Winston-Salem women's group figured that classroom essays could use some fresh subjects, not just the old standards on George Washington and Abe Lincoln.

So the local chapter of the National Organzation for Women sponsored a writing contest that asked students in the fifth and ninth grades to write an essay about a significant woman in history and why they admired her.

The most frequently chosen women were Harriet Tubman, Helen Keller, Susan B. Anthony and Amelia Earhart, said Kate Mewhinney, the president of the NOW chapter. But a variety of other women in politics, the arts and sports also were chosen.

Of the 205 entries, 121 were from girls and 84 were from boys. The six winners, who were awarded $50 savings bonds, wrote about Joan Baez, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Rosa Parks, black educator Mary Bethune, Susan B. Anthony and Harriet Tubman.

"I think the students showed a compassion for the personal difficulties these women went through," Ms. Mewhinney said. "And we wanted the students to see that they can do things, too."

Carol E. Carmichael, who teaches two of the fifth-grade winners, said the women's rights movement has had an effect on children.

"I definitely think it has made a change at this age level," she said. "Children are much more accepting of equal chance and pay."

Fifth-grade boys still want to go into traditional male fields, she said, but girls want to move away from traditional female roles.

R. Dean Barlow, who teaches the three ninth-grade winners at West Forsyth High School, said that none of the boys in his class objected to writing an essay about important women. A few years ago when women's history month was celebrated on a bulletin board, "the guys wanted to know when we are going to have a men's history month," he said.

Professor Feels Rights Must Be Protected

DURHAM (AP) — People who want religion to play a greater role in public policy appear to be gaining ground in public opinion over those who believe in the rigid separation of church and state, says a Duke Divinity School expert on church-state relationships.

Dr. Waldo Beach, an ethics professor and author of "Church, State and Education." said he agrees with those who say religion should play a crucial role in policy decisions, but believes the rights of non-believers must also be protected.

"My position is that we should in public education and political life honor the expression of religiously based moral positions on issues like civil rights and foreign policy so that the church has an impact on public policy," Beach said.

"At the same time, we have to honor the rights of non-religious people or groups — honor the pluralism of American culture that is so different from the times during which the U.S. Constitution was first set up," he said.

Beach said he believes the First Amendment, which guarantees religious freedom, will always be a source of controversy because the two phrases in it "will always in tension with each other."

Beach said the first phrase, which forbids Congress from making laws to establish a religion, means the federal government should remain neutral. But the second phrase — "or prohibiting the free exercise thereof" — acknowledges a common morality among people, he said.

"You can see the potential for collision between the two clauses of the First Amendment," he said. "In the 18th and 19th centuries, it wasn't much of a problem because America was a sort of pan-Protestant culture. Most folks were religious.

"But in the 20th century, there was the immigration of all sorts of groups — Hindu, Muslim, Sikh — many of whom didn't believe in the more traditional religious values at all," he said. "So, the question for the courts to decide starting in the 1930s and '40s became: How do you do justice to the rights of non-religious individuals."

The U.S. Supreme Court, he said, has swung between strict separatists and those who want a greater voice for religion in public life.

"The stance of the Supreme Court has been benevolent toward religion in general but neutral toward particular expressions of religion," he said.

Beach said he does not believe prayer in public schools would have as much impact as curriculum efforts to "instill a sense of social conscience in students."

"I don't think that is going to be accomplished through the gesture of prayer, but perhaps by the example of teachers and their work with PTAs, parents, families and counseling programs, and by holding students accountable for their behavior," he said. He believes it is possible to teach "about religions without proselytizing" for one.

Because of the increasing pluralism of the American culture, Beach said he doesn't soon expect an end to church-state debates.

Humpback Whale In Trouble

NORTH MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — A young humpback whale that has beached itself twice in two days almost surely will die soon, scientists said Saturday.

The 35-foot-long, 18-ton whale was first spotted about 100 feet offshore at 10 a.m. Friday. High seas hampered rescue efforts Friday, but at 6:30 a.m. Saturday a commercial fishing vessel pulled the whale with a rope about three-fourths of a mile out to sea.

The whale at first swam in circles, the headed back toward shore. People in boats tried to herd the mammal toward the open sea, but the whale swam about a mile souh and headed for the beach.

"It was determined to comeback in," said John Evans, a spokesman for the State Wildlife Department. At about 10:30 a.m., the whale once again got stuck in the sand, about a mile south of the spot it had come to on Friday.

Scientists did not know what was wrong with the yearling, but they said whales usually beach themselves when they are sick.

Albert E. Sanders, curator of natural sciences at the Charleston Museum, said it's a natural process for a whale to beach itself when it is sick. He knows of only one or two whales that have washed up that have ever lived.

A veterinarian from Marineland in Florida, Joanne Lowenstein, examined the whale Saturday and said she will take blood samples and perform other tests on the animal at 1:30 a.m. Sunday, when the tide is low.

Scientists were unsure how long the whale will live.

"It's still spouting pretty good so there's some pretty good life in the whale now," Evans said Saturay afternoon.

Humpback whales are on th state and federal endangered species lists. Wildlife officials said it was only the fourth time a humpback whale had beached itself along the East Coast. It has happened once before in South Carolina, they said.

Examiner Comments On Prisoner's Death

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A prisoner from Charlotte who died in federal custody in Butner Tuesday after his mouth had been taped apparently was asphyxiated, Dr. William Oliver, state assistant chief medical examiner, said Saturday.

Vinson Harris, 31, collapsed after his mouth was taped en route from the Mecklenburg County Jail to the federal prison in Lewisburg, Pa., where he was to serve a 20-year sentence for robbing a Southern National Bank office in Charlotte Sept. 16.

Charles Brewer, U.S. attorney for the Western District, said Friday he had been told Harris's mouth was taped shortly before he died. But Brewer said he didn't know who put the tape on Harris's mouth.

"I assume it was someone in charge of his custody," Brewer said.

Sources told the Charlotte Observer that Vinson collapsed at the Federal Correctional Institution at Butner, about 25 miles north of Raleigh, after his mouth was taped following a disturbance on the bus. However, he was not pronounced dead until after Butner Rescue Squad personnel took him to Durham County General Hospital.

Oliver, who did an autopsy on Harris, said he concluded Harris died of asphyxiation because he found nothing else wrong and because tiny blood clots were discovered on the insides of the lower eyelids. The clots, called petechiae, indicate asphyxiation, he said.

"He was essentially a very healthy young man," Oliver said. "He didn't have a heart attack and he didn't have a stroke."

Oliver said he found marks on the wrists likely caused by manacles and four lacerations over the inside of the upper lip that might indicate a blow to the mouth. He said the small cuts appeared to have occurred around the time Harris died and could have been caused if Harris had fallen forward and struck the seat in front of him.

Oliver said Butner prison officials have custody of the bandage that was on Harris's mouth and that he expected to see it soon.

Money Dispute

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — While the U.S. Commerce Department says it soon will send the North Carolina School of the Arts a bill for $3.12 million to repay a grant, school officials say they're asking the state attorney general's office for advice.

"I have no alternative at this time but to demand return of all of the $3,120,500 in government funds," Orson G. Swindle III, the commerce Department's assistant secretary for economic development, told the school in a letter to Eldridge Hanes, chairman of the Endowment Fund board.

The federal money was used to renovate the arts school's downtown performance center. But commerce department officials say the school willfully breached a grant agreement.

The school received the grant in 1979 for the Roger L. Stevens Center for the Performing Arts. The grant officially was given by the federal Economic Development Administration to the board of trustees of the school's Endowment Fund.

Judge Drops Count Against Anne Burford

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — The former chief of the Environmental Protection Agency, Anne M. Burford, cleared on a charge of being drunk in public, says justice has been done.

An Arlington County, Va., judge dropped the intoxication charge Friday against Mrs. Burford, who resigned her government job in 1983 as Congress was investigating her agency.

"It is all very unfortunate, and I am extremely grateful that justice has been done," she said after the court proceeding.

Mrs. Burford's lawyers argued that police had no evidence that she was drunk during the early morning Sept. 21 incident.

"She was acting like an attorney ... and attorneys can sometimes be a pain," lawyer Lou Koutoulakos told General District Judge Eleanor Dobson. "She might have been obstreperous, but there is no evidence she was drunk in public."

Mrs. Burford was charged with drunkenness in public after she appeared at the Arlington County Jail demanding to see her husband, who had just been booked on a drunken driving charge. Robert Burford, director of the Bureau of Land Management in the Interior Department, is scheduled for trial April 2.

Four officers told the court Friday that Mrs. Burford was arrested on the misdemeanor charge because she bore a strong odor of alcohol and was repeatedly belligerent following Robert Burford's arrest. Mrs. Burford was in the car when her husband was arrested.

Her attorneys, Plato Cacheris and Koutoulakos, told the court that an odor of alcohol was insufficient to prove drunkenness, and that Mrs. Burford's argumentativeness was prompted by her concern for her husband, then recovering from heart surgery, and her instincts as an attorney.

Dobson apparently agreed. She granted, without comment, a defense motion in mid-trial to strike down the charge.

Virginia State Trooper James H. Hampton said he came across the Burfords' car as it was parked on the shoulder of Interstate 395 just outside Washington, and quickly determined that Robert Burford was drunk. "Anything I did, she interrupted. She kept butting in ... and argued over everything," Hampton said.

The trooper said he called a supervisor to the scene after Mrs. Burford accused him of stealing $500 belonging to the couple. That testimony was stricken, however, on ground it was not relevant to her behavior when she was arrested herself later at the jail.

Arlington County Police Cpl. Dave Green testified that Mrs. Burford, after arriving at the jail, complained that her husband was being "illegally detained." Green said she "continued to be very unreasonable ... she wouldn't calm down, no matter what I said to her." He also said Mrs. Burford's "eyes were bloodshot and her speech was slurred."

Officer Mary Nelson said Mrs. Burford was "very belligerent, abusive and very loud," and refused to extinguish her cigarette when ordered to do so.

Assistant Commonwealth Attorney John Wasowicz, the prosecutor, said, "I felt the evidence was sufficient to overcome the motion to strike" the charge. He is not entitled to appeal the ruling.

If convicted, Mrs. Burford would have faced only a $10 fine and $20 court costs.

Mrs. Burford resigned from the EPA in 1983 in the wake of six congressional investigations into allegations of mismanagement at the agency. President Reagan later appointed her to an environmental advisory post, but the nomination was withdrawn in the face of criticism in Congress and after she called the job a "nothingburger."

Case Closed

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Authorities have closed their books on the cyanide poisoning death of Timothy R. Green, saying the Nashville guitar repairman died as a result of suicide and not from a tainted Tylenol capsule.

"It is possible he had been reading about what had been happening around the United States in regards to Tylenol and put the cyanide in the capsule. He may have been trying to set the stage for a possible lawsuit," said Assistant Metro Nashville Police Chief Sherman Nickens.

Green's body was discovered Feb. 23, two weeks after the death of Diane Elsroth, 23, of Yonkers, N.Y., who died after taking a cyanide-laced Tylenol capsule.

"The source of the death was sodium cyanide and the method of death was suicide," said Metro Nashville Medical Examiner Charles W. Harlan, who added that no traces of acetaminophen, the active ingredient in Tylenol, were found in Green's body.

An open container of Extra-Strength Tylenol with one capsule in it was found on the floor of Green's bedroom near his body. An analysis showed the remaining capsule contained 91 percent cyanide.

Astronaut Memo Cites Safety Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Compromises on safety made in the shuttle program months before the Challenger's disastrous launch "proves to me that there are some very lucky people around here," chief astronaut John Young wrote in a post-accident memo.

Young, chief of the astronaut office at the Johnson Space Center, also wrote that problems treated as "accepted conditions" were "potentially as catastrophic" to the space program as the Jan. 28 Challenger explosion in which seven crew members died. Such problems began as early as October 1984, the memo said. Young said some of those conditions still exist.

Young's March 4 memo was released Saturday by NASA headquarters in Washington after The Houston Post published a copywright story on it Saturday.

In making the document public, NASA also released a brief statement from shuttle chief, Adm. Richard Truly. Truly said he concurred with the "thrust" of Young's memo.

He said NASA will continue its "detailed study of all systems to ensure flight safety."

"We will not launch again until safety releated issues have been properly addressed throughout the total NASA system," Truly wrote.

Copies of the memo went to all astronauts; Truly; W.S. Abbey, the head of the flight crew operations; and other NASA officials.

Young included a list compiled Feb. 27 of "systems safety-related items that ought to be fixed so we do not lose any more space shuttles and flight crews."

He called the list "awesome," and wrote, "The list proves to me that there are some very lucky people around here."

"We have already ... launched with less than certain full reliability and full redundancy of the systems, including the flight crews, that we operate. We are under continuing pressure to launch without full-up avionics from computers to other sensors," he said.

He said conditions accepted for previous launches "could have been or are now potentially as catastrophic to the Space Shuttle Program as the 51-L (Challenger) accident."

Young said NASA should make flight safety first on its priority list.

"The enclosure (listing earlier problems) shows that these goals have always been opposite ones. It also shows overall Flight Safety does not win in these cases. Flight Safety, to be safe, has to have real teeth in it. It will not be free.

"For starters, we should not allow any increase in the inherent risk of operating the space shuttle just to increase the launch rate, or reduce operating costs, or fly unsafe payloads," Young said in his memo.

The Challenger exploded 73 seconds after liftoff during record-cold temperatures at the Florida launch site.

He concluded by saying that neither the shuttle program nor its astronauts can survive if flight safety is not given top priority.

"If management system is not big enough to stop the Space Shuttle Program whenever necessary to make flight safety corrections, it will not survive and neither will our three space shuttles or their flight crews," Young said.

The memo listed previous problems on shuttle flights and the possible effects:

October-December 1984 — Flapper valves on fittings between the shuttle and its huge liquid fuel tank were "extremely sensitive." If any of the four flapper valves close, the memo said, "the result is loss of vehicle and crew."

August 1985 — The shuttle Discovery was launched at a time when there was moderate turbulence and rain on an emergency landing runway at the Kennedy Space Center. "If the tile damage assessment was realistic, winds in storms plus tile damage drag might lose the vehicle and crew in an abort," the memo said.

October 1985 — A regulator on one of Challenger's maneuvering jets locked up. "The cause of the lockup was not known," according to the memo. NASA decided to fly anyway, relying on another backup regulator, which also "indicated failed" as it reached orbit, the memo said.

January 1986 — A delay in launching Columbia revealed a critical failure of a liquid oxygen prevalve, the memo said.

Planes Collide

CHICAGO (AP) — Two single-engine planes apparently collided in the air west of Chicago on Saturday, and one of the private craft crashed, killing the two people aboard, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

A Cessna 206 and Cessna 172 collided shortly after 3 p.m., eight miles west of St. Charles, FAA spokesman Mort Edelstein said in Chicago.

The Cessna 172 crashed, while the Cessna 206 landed safely at the Du Page County Airport, and its two occupants walked away with no more apparent injuries than cuts and bruises, Edelstein said.

Both planes had taken off from the airport and were flying under visual flight rules.

Woman Claims Officials Practice Discrimination

PEKING (AP) — A women's leader charged Saturday that Communist Party and government officials discriminate against women in promotions and training.

"Some comrades do not recognize the benefits of promoting talented women, and favor men when selecting cadres," Zhang Guoying, vice president of the state-run All-China Women's Federation, wrote in the official Guangming Daily.

"There is a small number — proportionately few — of women participating in the government or in political affairs, and even fewer female leaders in policy-making bodies," she wrote in the article, which marked International Women's Day.

That women must have time off from work to have children and care for them and do housework is held against them, Zhang said. "Some people turn female physiology and household responsibilities to women's disadvantage, and reproach them for it."

Women in China traditionally had almost no legal rights and could even be sold by their parents and husbands. When the Communist Party came to power in 1949, it championed women's rights, but change has been slow.

The official English-language magazine China Reconstructs said in its March issue that job discrimination against women has "aroused official concern."

In 1984, a third of employer units asking for graduates of Shanghai's prestigious Fudan University stipulated men only, and 200 refused to take women recommended to them in 1985, the magazine said.

About a quarter of China's college graduates are women, it said. But partly because of the preference for male employees, some universities deliberately admit more men, even accepting lower grades on men's entrance exams, it said.

"The hoary old argument — not exclusive to China — is still heard that women should be the mainstay in housework and child-rearing, and that they are not career-oriented and as good as men in work ability and creativity," China Reconstructs said.

Car Bombing Kills 5 Lebanese Civilians

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb explosion Saturday killed five civilians near an office of President Amin Gemayel's Phalange Party, police said, and random shelling by Christian gunners killed two more in Beirut's Moslem sector.

Police said 42 people were injured by the car bomb, the eighth in Christian east Beirut since Jan. 15, when Gemayel loyalists crushed rival Christian forces. Most of the bombings have been aimed at Phalange offices.

Christian and Moslem militiamen meanwhile battled with artillery across the Green Line, which divides the catital into sectarian halves. Police said shelling killed two civilians and wounded at least three.

In another development Saturday, an anonymous caller told a Western news agency the Shiite Moslem extremist group Islamic Jihad will kill a French hostage unless two Iraqis deported to Iraq by France are sent back.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, is a fundamentalist group believed loyal to Iraq's enemy, Iran, and has claimed it is holding four Frenchmen and six Americans hostage.

Police said the car bomb exploded at 1:15 p.m. in a street crowded with weekend shoppers in the Ashrafiyeh district. It damaged the Phalange office, on the first floor of a six-story building, and set 35 cars and a gas station afire.

Chief Warrant Office Youssef Bitar, a top police explosives expert, estimated the car was packed with 175 pounds of TNT. He said the explosives were wired to four 81mm mortar shells which failed to detonate.

No group claimed responsibility.

The car was parked across the street from the Phalange office, in front of a candy store.

May Bishara, 20, who works in the store, was wounded in both legs by fragments. She told Associated Press newswoman Hala Jaber she was wrapping chocolate for customers when the blast occurred.

"It blew me off my chair into the store," she said, sobbing. "Then glass and debris fell on me .... There were four of us in the shop, but I don't know what happened to the others."

The bombing came as the Vatican's foreign minister, Monsignor Achille Silvestrini, left Rome for Beirut on a peace mission. He is scheduled to meet with Gemayel and President Hafez Assad of Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon who is now at odds with Gemayel.

Earlier in the week, an envoy of Pope John Paul II, Monsignor Luigi Giatti, began talks with Lebanon's religious and political leaders in hopes of reconciling factions that have been warring for 11 years.

Also Saturday, police said rival Palestinian groups clashed in Beirut's Chatilla refugee camp with rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns. Initial reports said casualties resulted.

Gemayel supporters have blamed the car bombings on followers of Elie Hobeika, 29, whose militiamen were defeated by the president's men in January. More than 100 Hobeika supporters were recently rounded up in the Christian heartland.

Hobeika challenged Gemayel for leadership of Lebanon's 1.6 million Christians. Gemayel moved against Hobeika after the militia commander signed a Dec. 28 peace accord in the Syrian capital of Damascus with Shiite leader Nabih Berri and Druse chieftain Walid Jumblatt, Gemayel's main foes.

Since Gemayel scuttled the accord, Syrian-backed Moslems, Druse, leftists and dissident Christians have been trying to oust Gemayel.

The army's 5th Brigade, loyal to Gemayel, battled Druse militiamen Saturday around Souk el-Gharb, 7 miles southeast of Beirut, police said. Casualties were not reported.

Souk el-Gharb, a mountain town held by the army, commands roads leading to Gemayel's palace at Baabda, 5 miles east of Beirut.

Police said Syrian-backed militia gunners in hills east of the capital shelled residential districts of east Beirut. Casualties were not known.

Symposium At ECU On Apartheid Issue

ECU News Bureau

South Africa's apartheid will be the focus of a symposium sponsored by East Carolina University on March 25.

The symposium, sponsored by the ECU African Studies Committee, will be held in the Regional Development Institute at the Willis Building, First and Reade streets, from 12:30-9:30 p.m.

Dr. Kenneth Wilburn, ECU history professor and project director, said the symposium was designed especially for the public. "The purpose of the symposium is to promote understanding of apartheid and its relationship to the United States. Many people criticise apartheid without understanding all of its implications," he said. "The symposium was designed to help the public form views of substance about apartheid."

He said that business relations with South Africa are important to both the economics of the United States and South Africa. "Since the United States relies on South Africa's stategic mineral resources and has more that $2.7 billion in multi-national investments in South Africa, Americans have a personal responsibility to examine the relationship between their country and South Africa," he said.

The symposium, entitled "Apartheid and the United States," will feature a keynote speaker and three sessions involving 10 participants who will consider such topics as segregation, the Biblical justification for apartheid, the United States' policy toward South Africa, and the Sullivan Principles.

In the first session, two historians, Dr. George Fredrickson of Stanford University and Dr. John Cell of Duke University, will discuss the similarities and differences between South African apartheid and American segregation.

The second session will feature John Chettle, a South African businessman and director of the South African Foundation. Chettle will explain the progress of reform underway in South Africa. Also included in this session will be William Robertson, Deputy-Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, who will provide the Reagan Administration's perspective. Political science professor Sandra Wurth-Hough of ECU, a specialist on African political systems, will moderate this session.

The third session will include two black South African religious leaders, Rev. Vernon Rose and Ms. Motlalepula Chabaku. "They will give us their perspectives on the relationship between the Bible and apartheid and the effect that this has had on black ethnic groups in South Africa," Wilburn said. Rev. Dan Earnhardt, Director of the ECU Student Methodist Center, will be the moderator.

The keynote speaker, Dan Purnell, is the assistant to Rev. Leon Sullivan, author of the "Sullivan Principles" and a director on the board of General Motors.

"A synthesis of the information shared at the symposium will provide North Carolinians with a valuable core of knowledge from which to create an in-depth understanding of apartheid and South Africa," Wilburn said.

The symposium is assisted by grants from the North Carolina Humanities Committee, the International Programs Division of the ECU College of Arts and Sciences, and the Wesley Foundation. For more information contact the ECU African Studies Committee at 757-6291.

Students End Fast

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Four students protesting Brown University's South Africa-related investments halted a nine-day fast Saturday following their temporary suspension from the Ivy League school.

Dean of Students Eric Widmer said he would immediately reinstate the students if they began eating, but another Brown official said the administrative process would take several days.

Sophomore Paul Zimmerman said he and the others decided to break the fast because the school's suspension order showed it was "no longer useful to appeal to the conscience of our university."

The school acted out of concern for the students' health and Brown's liability, said Robert Reichley, vice president for university relations.

"We could have had them removed from the first day," he said.

Students are demanding that Brown sell its $35.2 million in companies that do business with South Africa, where a white minority rules a black majority under a system of racial separation known as apartheid.

The school's governing arm, voted Feb. 15 for a limited divestment plan.

The fasters, who had held their protest in the choir loft of the campus chapel, announced their decision to end the fast and leave the chapel 2½ hours after being suspended.

Former Senator Died Friday

Politicians Praise Jacob Javits

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacob K. Javits, a liberal Republican whose 24 years in the U.S. Senate included successful fights for civil rights and a law to limit presidential war-making powers, was mourned Saturday as "one of America's all-time great senators."

Javits, 81, died Friday in a hospital in West Palm Beach, Fla. He had suffered for years from a progressive muscle and nerve disorder that had forced him into a wheelchair.

What was important in life was "a motivation which must prevail over the illness," Javits told doctors in 1.34 at New York Hospital, where he was being treated for amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease. "As long as your brain can function, you can contribute."

Political leaders heralded his contributions, praising his spirit, his intellect and his persistence in promoting the causes he cared about.

"Especially in foreign relations — his chief abiding interest — Senator Javits served our country with tremendous insight and skill, proving a staunch advocate of freedom around the world, and a particular friend of the brave state of Israel," President Reagan said Friday in a statement.

"Jacob Javits had one of the brightest minds of anyone I have ever known," said Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss. "He was an able and determined advocate of all that he believed in."

Stennis said one of Javits' "most solid and far-reaching" achievements was his role in the enactment of the War Powers Act, which limits the authority of the president to make war without congressional approval.

Javits, who in 1980 lost a bid for a fifth term in the Senate, said the War Powers Act was a measure for which he hoped to be remembered. He also cited the ERISA Act, which seeks to guarantee private pensions, and creation of the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities.

He made a career of beating prominent Democrats, winning four terms in the House, then one as state attorney general, followed by his four terms in the Senate from 1957 to 1980.

His Republican liberalism, brusque temperament and Jewish religion made him a unique figure in the Senate of the 1960s and '70s. But he won wide respect for initiatives on foreign affairs, urban redevelopment, labor and big business, and was a co-sponsor of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

"His career in the U.S. Senate helped set the direction of the nation," said Gov. Mario Cuomo. "But perhaps his greatest contribution to us was his demonstration of courage in refusing to surrender to his illness. He has taught us all a lesson in the value of life that will stay with us forever."

"There was not his like ever in the Senate. He loved life and lived it to the end. He will be missed," said Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y.

"He was a truly great American leader, courageous, committed, compassionate," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "To the very end, he taught us with his own inspiring example to care about those less fortunate than ourselves."

"Senator Javits was a real profile in courage. Without question, he was one of America's all-time great senators," Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Senate majority leader, said Saturday.

Javits, son of a janitor and a pushcart saleswoman, rose from poverty on Manhattan's Lower East Side, working his way through law school and eventually becoming New York's longest-serving U.S. senator.

His only defeat at the polls was his last. Alphonse D'Amato, making an issue of Javits' age and health, won the Republican nomination, then won the general election in which Javits ran on the Liberal Party line.

Javits called D'Amato's tactics "ghoulish." But after the election, D'Amato said Javits "never allowed our personal differences in the campaign to deter him from answering the call when our citizens had a need."

In the years after his Senate career, Javits' body was weakened by disease. But he continued to write, lecture and lobby.

Javits is survived by his wife, Marion, and three children.

John Trubin, a law partner, said the funeral will be held Monday in Manhattan, with speakers including Moynihan and Kennedy.

Marcos Said Making Plans To Lease Hawaii Property

HONOLULU (AP) — Ferdinand Marcos and his family plan to leave their sanctuary at a U.S. air base here for a quiet hillside property above the University of Hawaii, according to local news reports.

The deposed Philippine president has signed a two-month lease and could move there as soon as security arrangements are completed, KHON television reported Friday.

The property, at the top of a steep driveway in a forested area not easily seen from public roads, was inspected Thursday by Marcos' wife, Imelda, who was driven there by limousine from Hickam Air Force base, the Honolulu Star-Bulletin reported.

Honolulu real estate agent Allene Floyd said Saturday that she had been contacted about the rental by a man she knew only on a first-name basis. Floyd said the man looked at a number of homes and said price was not important.

She would not confirm the report that an agreement had been reached.

Zoltan Rudolics, a commercial real estate agent in Honolulu who owns the home, denied Friday that anyone was moving onto the estate.

A tenant of a neighboring property, John Gray, said he had spoken with the Secret Service about vacating his home so it could be used for a security outpost. Gray said he and his wife agreed to move.

"They can sit in my living room and look out the picture window," said Gray. "You can hear a car coming from two blocks away."

"It sits in a real nice spot," Gray said of the possible Marcos home. "It's got a beautiful view and is well kept but is not large or opulent."

Military officials said it had not been made clear when the Marcoses would move, but 21 people in the 90-member entourage, which arrived Feb. 26, had already moved from Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu.

"We understand that some of the Marcos children and their children have left," said Maj. Virginia Pribyla, U.S. Pacific Command spokeswoman.

She also said use of the Hickam base exchange for purchases by the Marcos' party had been cut off.

"It is my understanding that the privileges at the PX were extended twice to the party at Hickam and will not be extended," Maj. Pribyla said.

Meanwhile, the Washington Post reported Saturday that the White House would ask the Justice Department to investigate documents brought to the United States by Marcos and his entourage to determine whether any in the group had violated U.S. laws in financial dealings.

The newspaper quoted a senior administration official as saying the documents were being treated with unusual care and secrecy because "we don't want to poison the evidence" if it is needed for legal proceedings.

White House spokesman Edward Djerejian said he was "not aware" of any such White House directive. "It's just not accurate," he said of the report.

Properties believed to be secretly owned by Marcos are subject of court action in New York City by the new Philippines government.

Reagan Inks VA Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Friday signed a bill designed to prevent a threatened cutoff in home mortgage loans guaranteed by the Veterans Administration.

The measure raises the authorized level of VA-backed loans to $18.2 billion, up from $12 billion. Because of spending cuts required by the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law, the amount will be reduced by 4.3 percent.

Faced with Gramm-Rudman cuts, which would have reduced the $12 billion ceiling to $11.6 billion, the VA had said it would have to suspend the home loan guaranty program around April 1.

The problem was compounded by an unexpected increase in demand for loans resulting from falling interest rates.

Vision-Robbing Infections Tied To Contacts

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For Lisa Franke, it began with a sore eye.

Before long she was in the hospital, enduring round-the-clock eye drops and periodic injections in the eye. Eventually, a surgeon had to replace the cornea, the eye's clear outer layer.

Franke had suffered a vision-threatening infection called a corneal ulcer — an unexpected price, she believes, for a pair of extended-wear contact lenses.

She is not alone.

In Wisconsin, a 15-year-old boy and his parents are suing a lens manufacturer and seller for $5.3 million after a corneal ulcer robbed part of the boy's vision. Wisconsin state regulators have ordered optometrists to dispense written warnings about the lenses, and they're thinking about a ban on selling them.

In Minneapolis, the University of Minnesota Hospitals recently stopped prescribing extended-wear for people with healthy eyes after treating a spate of ulcers.

New concerns about use of extended-wear lenses, which can be worn continuously up to 30 days rather than removed nightly, are worrying some regulators, manufacturers and eye experts.

The main problem, experts say, is that lenses can promote corneal ulcers if they are dispensed or used improperly.

"Most of us feel there really is nothing inherently bad with the lenses, it's just the misuse of the lenses," said Dr. Oliver Dabezies Jr., executive vice president of the Contact Lens Association of Ophthalmologists.

The federal Food and Drug Administration, which began approving the lenses for use by the general population in 1981, is reviewing scientific data to find more about the problem. Manufacturers have prepared new lens-care material for patients.

Nobody knows just how common corneal ulcers are among the nation's estimated 3 million to 4 million extended-wear users.

Although treatment stops most infections before they affect vision, some experts believe hundreds to a thousand people may have lost some eyesight.

"I don't think we're talking about an epidemic," said Dr. James Aquavella, director of the cornea research laboratory at the University of Rochester in New York. But, he said, lens wearers should "recognize a legitimate risk."

A recent Associated Press survey of 42 eye specialists in 32 cities found they treated about 300 ulcer infections in the preceding year. But comprehensive figures are lacking.

"There's an awful lot of smoke here. How much of a fire there is underneath the smoke is almost impossible to determine," said Dr. Michael Lemp, chairman of Georgetown University's Center for Sight.

But with the recent rise in popularity of the lenses, he said, "those of us who see these problems have seen a hell of a lot more of them in the last two years."

Corneal ulcers occur when the protective outer layer of the cornea is breached and germs infect the cornea tissue within. The infection can scar the usually transparent cornea, blocking vision. One bacterium, called Pseudomonas, needs only a day or two to leave a devastating scar that can require a cornea transplant like Franke's.

The lenses make the cornea more susceptible to infection by reducing its oxygen supply for long periods. Dirty lenses can harbor bacteria. The lenses trap a stagnant pool of tears that makes "a wonderful place for bacteria to grow," said Georgetown's Lemp.

Unchecked infections can also enter the eyeball and cause loss of the eye.

Contact lenses aren't the only cause of corneal ulcers, and nobody has yet proved that lens wearers run more risk than the general population, says Orrin Stine, chairman of the Contact Lens Institute, which represents major lens manufacturers.

The infections are "very, very rare" with daily wear hard lenses, slightly more common with daily wear soft lenses, and more frequent, but still uncommon, with extended-wear soft lenses, said Dr. Perry Binder, chief of ophthalmic surgery and research at Sharp Cabrillo Hospital in San Diego.

Some extended-wear lenses are especially prescribed for use after cataract surgery. But most users are like Franke, 20, of Horicon, Wis., who bought them because "a lot of my friends were getting them and they looked really nice without their glasses."

"Our major concern really is with the young people who really do have other alternatives," such as daily-wear lenses or glasses, said Dr. Arthur Boruchoff, cornea specialist at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary. "We certainly have seen ... this type of infection in this younger patient group."

Infections associated with extended-wear contact lenses are showing up at major eye centers around the country.

— The Jules Stein Eye Institute at the University of California in Los Angeles has treated about 50 ulcers associated with the lenses in the past four years, said optometrist Dr. Barry Weissman.

— Massachusetts Eye and Ear has admitted 30 to 50 cases of ulcers a year related to lenses, mostly extended-wear, from 1982 to 1984, said Dr. George Garcia, associate chief of ophthalmology.

— Wills Eye Hospital in Philadelphia admitted 45 cases in extended-wear users, 26 of them non-cataract patients, from July 1983 through 1984, Dr. Peter Laibson and colleagues will report in a professional journal.

In the AP survey, three-quarters of the 42 specialists said they had seen at least one such case in 1985. Some who handle referrals had far more.

Dr. Michael Shapiro, cornea specialist at the University of Wisconsin, reported at least 50 such cases. The Estelle Doheny Eye Foundation in Los Angeles has been seeing one or two ulcers a month in extended-wear users, said Dr. David Schanzlin, cornea specialist.

Doctors in the survey said few ulcer patients suffered permanent vision damage. "They were caught in time," explained Dr. Robert Weir of Dickinson, N.D., of the two to four cases he treated in the past year. But Dr. Frederick Brightbill, a University of Wisconsin ophthalmology professor, has transplanted corneas in at least half the 20 to 25 ulcer patients he's treated in the past two years.

Nationally, perhaps 1,000 people have lost some vision to the ulcers in the past two years, estimated noted Australian researcher Dr. Brien Holden.

Aquavella suspects a few thousand lens-related ulcers have probably occurred since 1981, with a few hundred resulting in some vision loss. Maybe a hundred suffered legal blindness in the infected eye, he said.

Nobody knows how big the risk of corneal ulcers is, Aquavella said.

Holden's work in Sweden found some vision loss in three of every 10,000 extended-wear users studied, but some experts question whether that figure is valid for American conditions. Infection rates of 4 percent or more have been found for patients fitted after cataract surgery, but they are at higher risk than most wearers.

In non-cataract wearers, lens manufacturer Barnes-Hind Inc. found no ulcer infections in a study of one of its lenses. Manufacturers must submit such research when they ask the FDA to approve their products for marketing, and a recent FDA review of 14 such studies, mostly for non-cataract wear, found ulcers in two-tenths of 1 percent of a total of 12,000 patients.

Georgetown's Lemp, who has advised the FDA on lens approvals, said such studies justified approving the lenses. But now, in the "real world," lenses often are not dispensed with the careful selection, monitoring and instructing of patients that characterized the studies, he said. His "very rough guesstimate" of the real world rate is about 1 percent.

The FDA's other trouble-spotting program, based on voluntary reporting by physicians, uncovered only 32 ulcers in extended-wear patients through November since the lenses were approved. FDA's Lippman acknowledges that number is unrealistically small, but "we don't know by how much."

The FDA is reviewing those reports, manufacturer studies and scientific journals, and monitoring efforts to teach patients about proper care to see "what if anything FDA needs to do in addition," said Ralph Bunge, an FDA official who heads a task force researching the problem.

Apart from that, available data "does not currently lead us to the conclusion that drastic, immediate action is required," Bunge said.

"It may appear that we're not going anywhere, that we don't know what to do, but that may be the inevitable result of something that doesn't have an easy fix or a quick solution."

To people like Lisa Franke, of course, such considerations are academic.

She said a specialist wants to fit her right eye with another contact lens, but she's wary, recalling what happened with the last lens on that eye.

"I don't want to go through it again," she said.

Heavy Breather

When a dispatcher heard only breathing from a caller, he believed someone was in distress, so he pinpointed where the call came from and sent an officer.

Policeman George Hawn arrived at the house minutes later. When he got no response, he tried to get a key from a neighbor. He was unsuccessful, so he kicked in the door, said Assistant City Attorney R. Scott Ritter

Finally inside, he spotted the caller lying on the floor next to the phone.

It was a dog.

While the owner, Betty A. Hood, was away, the dog knocked the phone off the hook and accidentally pressed a button programmed to dial the police department, said Ritter.

Farmers Face Another Credit Dilemma

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture officials are saying this year's spring credit crunch will be somewhat worse than the one farmers lived through a year ago, when it took a frenzied last-minute scramble to get loans in time for crop planting.

Even then, about 5 percent of producers who wanted to plant crops were unable to get the financing they needed, and money for the most risky borrowers will be much tighter this year than in 1985, financing spokesmen say.

To meet the demand a year ago, farmers borrowed from relatives, states put money into emergency lending programs and many commercial banks gritted their teeth and threw good money after bad.

Whether the same sources can be tapped again is in doubt.

"As a crisis situation continues, you get backed further into a corner," said Bob Jolly, an Iowa State University agricultural economist who recently surveyed farmers in that hard-hit state about their credit needs.

"You borrowed all that Aunt Tessie was able to give you last year, so what are you gonna do this year?"

Added Weldon Barton, a lobbyist for the Independent Bankers Association of America: "Conditions have really deteriorated further in terms of the prices of commodities and the ability of farmers to repay debt."

Many banks likely will decide to go along with their borrowers for another year, deciding that loaning more money to a farmer protected by federal subsidies and crop insurance is less risky than forcing the borrower into liquidation and taking over land and equipment whose values still are dropping.

"There just aren't a lot of options," Jolly said.

But some borrowers are in such shaky shape they won't be able to meet even minimal security requirements, like adequate collateral or the ability to project a break-even cash flow that will cover scheduled loan payments. By all accounts, those farmers will be unable to find a credit home.

The Farm Credit System, the nation's largest farm lender, says 20,000 or so of its 309,000 customers for operating credit are severely delinquent and at risk of not being able to get the money they need for this spring's crop.

There is no similar estimate for the likely failure rate among commercial banks, which hold about $37 billion in operating debt, but analysts have said they expect 6 percent to 8 percent of farmers to come up empty in their search for planting loans.

Those farmers traditionally turn to the government for help. The Farmers Home Administration, the lending arm of the Agriculture Department, is known as the farm lender of last resort.

"There is no way" the agency can absorb all of the farmers rejected by other lenders, says FmHA administrator Vance Clark.

Demand for loans has been heavy, and the agency has only about $3.2 billion available — half for direct loans, half for guarantees of loans made by other lenders. That compares with $4.7 billion that flowed out last year, three-fourths of it in direct lending.

"We have a loan program, not a grant program," Clark told a recent congressional hearing, adding that the agency will enforce a strict cash-flow requirement.

FmHA, because of the very nature of its mission, already has an overload of bad debt. Of $28 billion in farm loans, about one-fourth are delinquent, many with no payments having been made in years.

Asked how many of those delinquent loans will wind up in default, Vance said: "I don't know. It's going to be a big number. It's going to shock you and it's going to shock me. The ones I've looked at in that category are disasters. It makes a banker ill."

Vance said the agency will make a strong effort to keep its current borrowers alive through restructuring loans, including deferring some payments to give those farmers with a chance of survival the breathing room they need to recover.

To meet this year's demand from farmers rejected by commercial or Farm Credit lenders, the agency is counting on $115 million in new interest-rate subsidies authorized in the new farm law and just being put into effect.

That could generate $5.5 billion in guaranteed commercial loans by bringing interest rates low enough to allow farmers to show sufficient cash flow, the agency believes.

It remains to be seen how the program is accepted by lenders, who are pursuing their own federal aid requests. One leading proposal is a plan to let commereial banks write down loan losses over a period of time, perhaps 10 years, spreading out the pain of the current crisis and making it more manageable.

Last week Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, indicated support for some version of the idea.

Report Details Foreign Gifts

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos presented Nancy Reagan with two gowns valued at $10,000 and joined her husband in giving New York Rep. Jack Kemp jewelry worth $10,420 last fall, a report showed Friday.

President Reagan received valuables from foreign heads of state ranging from an ivory elephant studded with diamonds and other gems from Thai Queen Sirkit to two bottles of vodka from Soviet party chief Mikhail Gorbachev.

Now in government storage in compliance with federal law, the gifts were detailed in an annual report on thousands of dollars worth of items lavished on U.S. officials by foreign governments in 1985.

Saudi King Fahd presented a $12,500, gold-plated, diamond-studded clock to the Reagans as well as apparel and art work costing even more. Gorbachev sent 12 jars of caviar along with the vodka and other items.

Central Intelligence Director William J. Casey, not required to reveal the sources of gifts, reported a French, d'Armes St. Etienne revolver, a bone-handled, silver-sheathed sword and assorted African and Chinese art objects. Gifts to other CIA officials — some not obliged to give even their own names — included a Lugar pistol and a "Mideastern sultan's dagger."

The vast bulk of the gifts is destined for display in museums or to gather dust in government warehouses. Under federal ethics law, officials may not accept gifts worth more than $165 from foreign governments, except on behalf of the U.S. government.

Eye-catching items are sometimes cleared for display in the recipient's office but must remain behind when he or she leaves the job.

Under the law, those receiving the gifts must state the justification for accepting them. The standard entry is: "Non-acceptance would have caused embarrassment to the donor" or similar wording.

Such exchange of gifts is an ancient custom that greases diplomatic wheels.

The White House report said that on Oct. 21, Mrs. Reagan received from Mrs. Marcos: "Two gowns: One is black velvet and floor length with a silver sequined and rhinestone Phoenix bird design; the other is a red silk strapless gown with a rhinestone butterfly design at top and a matching jacket with same designed repeated at top. Both unsized and sewn by J. Moreno, Manila."

The gowns, with a total value of $10,000, have been sent to the National Archives, the report said.

Elaine Crispen, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said they were given to the first lady by Mrs. Marcos in New York at a conference held in conjunction with the 40th anniversary of the United Nations.

Kemp reported that in September he received from then-President Ferdinand Marcos and Mrs. Marcos: "Earrings, rings, cufflinks, studs, broach and necklaces." The jewelry, valued at $10,420, has been sent to the House clerk's office, the report said.

John Buckley, Kemp's press secretary, said the gifts were presented to the congressman and his wife, Joanne, in Manila while they were on a privately financed fact-finding tour of Asia. He said it was customary for Marcos to bestow expensive gifts on foreign dignitaries and that Kemp "was accorded the treatment of someone who could be a presidential candidate in some future year."

The president and Mrs. Reagan, unsurprisingly, received most of the treasure. Their report of 120 gifts and parcels of gifts covered more than seven pages of fine print in the Federal Register.

Among top donors:

—Colombian President Belisrio Betancur and his wife: 2,000 long-stemmed, red roses, $9,000; a sculptured metal figure of a nude woman with a bow in her hair, $20,000; at atlas containing reproductions of early Spanish maps, $20,700.

—King Fahd: An amethyst-studded gold pitcher and tumblers created by Wolfres of Brussels, $5,000; a photograph of the monarch, himself, in sterling silver frame with gold border by Asprey of London, $6,000; photographs of Arabian horses, $13,190; a gold evening back with the initials "NR" lettered in diamonds, $20,000; a green silk outfit with gold-thread embroidery, $25,000.

—Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres: Set of 10 color serigraphs (silk-screen pictures) of the late Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, $10,000; an antique glass necklace made during the Roman occupation of Israel, $5,000.

—General M. Zia-Ul-Haq, president of Pakistan: Leather bound books describing Pakistan's history and culture and an atlas of Islam, $8,300. His wife gave the Reagans a length of black, gold-embroidered chiffon valued at $9,500.

Satellite Sees Comet

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese probe sent to Halley's Comet made its closest approach Saturday, passing within 89,500 miles and taking pictures of hydrogen atoms surrounding the comet's core, officials said.

The Japanese satellite, one of five international probes scheduled to pass the comet over a nine-day period, is sending back data on the corona of hydrogen atoms which surrounds the comet's core of ice and dust, said Kunihiro Uesugi, chief engineer at Japan's Institute of Space and Astronautical Science.

He said a camera on board the satellite sensitive to ultraviolet light is measuring the brightness of the corona at different distances from the comet. The data will be used to construct pictures and graphs of the corona's shape and size, Uesugi said.

The tiny probe, 4 feet, 7 inches in diameter, made its closest approach soon after 10 p.m. (8 a.m. EST), about 81 million miles from Earth, he said.

The satellite, named Suisei (Comet), was launched from Japan's Kagoshima Space Center last Aug. 19.

A second Japanese satellite, called Sakigake (Harbinger), is to fly within 4.3 million miles of the comet Tuesday and will measure solar winds.

Of the five probes, two are by Japan, two by the Soviet Union and one is from the European Space Agency.

Last Thursday, the Soviet satellite Vega 1 passed within 5,270 miles of Halley's comet, sending back pictures which scientists believed show that the comet has a solid nucleus. Those pictures were the closest look yet at the visitor that swings around the sun every 76 years.

Due to the earth's rotation, monitoring facilities in Japan on Saturday were facing away from Sisei as it made its closest approach, Uesugi said. Data from the satellite was received by U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration stations in California and Spain and will be flown to Japan, he said.

East Sees Record Lows As West Is Drenched

By The Associated Press

Renewed rain over flood-stricken northern California contributed to flooding that forced some residents of one town from their homes Saturday, while bitter cold in the East toppled two dozen low temperature records, some a century old.

Up to 2 feet of snow fell in the Sierra Nevada, while Wyoming posted a record high for the date.

Flood warnings and watches were issued for parts of northern California and many streams in Idaho, and winter storm warnings were posted from California's Sierra Nevada through Nevada's Tahoe Valley, the mountains of Idaho and into Colorado.

At least 150 residents of Anderson, Calif., south of Redding, fled their homes overnight after flooding caused by heavy rain and a ruptured irrigation channel, and another 350 people left their homes voluntarily, estimated Police. Lt. Gary Stainbrook.

Torrential rain started falling at 5 p.m. Friday "and within minutes water was lying in the streets. The storm drains couldn't handle it," Stainbrook said.

About five hours later, a 25-foot break opened in an irrigation channel in the town of about 7,300 people, and water was up to 2½ feet deep in parts of the town.

Many of the evacuees went to stay with friends, but others were housed at schools in Anderson and Redding.

"It was a heavy storm, but nothing like back in February," said National Weather Service forecaster Leon Heller.

A series of storms that hit northern California in February forced an estimated 50,000 people from their homes and caused widespread destruction.

"The ground is already wet, and there are several areas that haven't dried up yet," said Ed Clark of the weather service. "The rain we're getting now won't soak in and will just run off. So it's more dangerous."

Anderson got 2.5 inches of rain in two hours late Friday. Four inches of rain fell during the night at Blue Canyon, Calif., and an additional 1.25 inches fell in six hours up to 1 p.m. EST, the National Weather Service said.

About 24 inches of snow had fallen in the mountains north of Lake Tahoe, Nev., with up to 10 inches in the mountains of southern Idaho.

But a mass of icy air poured over the northeastern quarter of the nation, and the official low for the day in the 48 contiguous states was 18 below zero at Houghton Lake, Mich., although the peak of Mount Washington in New Hampshire hit 27 below.

Records that were set in 1883 fell at Boston, where it was 7, and Baltimore, which fell to 14, while Washington, D.C., tied its 1883 record of 14.

The record temperatures extended all the way into southern Virginia, where Norfolk had a record low of 20, and Roanoke tied its record of 10.

Records also fell or were matched in parts of Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York state, Connecticut, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Delaware, for a total of 25 major reporting cities posting record cold, the weather service said.

Wind blowing at 20 to 30 mph combined with the cold to create wind chill temperatures of 20 to 50 below zero from the eastern Great Lakes to New England.

7 Die In Election Eve Bombing

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Guerrilla violence, including a bomb tossed into a Caribbean port restaurant, killed seven Colombians, police said Saturday on the eve of national elections.

The government placed the army on a state of alert Saturday and called reservists up for duty.

President Belisario Betancur has vowed to have problem-free elections Sunday for 311 federal legislature seats in the National Assembly and for city councils in about 1,000 towns.

A group of pro-Soviet leftist guerrillas is running candidates for the first time on Sunday, and Betancur said last week that the election would be clean.

The Ministry of Government said in a news release Friday, without elaborating, that 200 government employees had been fired for trying to engineer election fraud.

On Friday, in Turbo, northwest Colombia, near the border with Panama, leftist insurgents threw a bomb inside a local diner, killing a policeman and a civilian and injuring nine people, police said in a communique.

In Bogota, the capital, two guerrillas were killed and another was wounded Friday after taking a mother and her two daughters hostage. The mother, used as a shield by the guerrillas, was wounded during the shootout, police said.

In Arauca, near the Venezuelan border, rebels with hand grenades and submachine guns ambushed a police patrol. Two guerrillas and a policeman were killed, police said.

The Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces, known here by its Spanish initials FARC, signed a truce with government security forces 18 months ago and was allowed as part of the deal to set up a political party to run candidates in Sunday's election and the May 25 presidential election.

The guerrilla group hopes to become the first rebel group in Colombian history to come to power through elections.

FARC has fielded candidates for about half the 10,000 public offices up for election. Under its Patriotic Union party, FARC also is running its candidate, Jaime Pardo, president of a federal court employees' union, in the presidential election.

Other guerrilla groups such as the leftist April 19 Movement, responsible for the seizure last Nov. 6 of the Federal Court building in Bogota that left 95 people dead, including 11 Supreme Court justices, either did not sign the truce or signed it and have since withdrawn from the cease-fire.

The April 19 Movement takes its name from the 1970 presidential election that the group's leaders claim was fraudulent. The Movement is considered the most violent of Colombia's guerrilla groups.

Three candidates for president will be watching the results to give them an idea of how they may fare in the presidential election. All candidates in the elections run on a ticket associated with one of the presidential candidates.

The three main presidential candidates are Alvaro Gomez of the governing Conservative Party, the son of former President Laureano Gomez; and two candidates of the divided Liberal Party, Virgilio Barco, a former ambassador in Washington, and Luis Carlos Galan, a federal senator.

Barco is the official Liberal Party candidate.

During the last presidential election in 1982, Galan siphoned enough votes from the official Liberal Party candidate, former President Alfonso Lopez, to assure Betancur's election.

None of the presidential candidates has said if he will continue Betancur's pacification program with leftist guerrillas.

When elected in 1982, Betancur started a program that pardoned hundreds of insurgents who faced trials, granted amnesty to dozens in jail, and got Congress to approve grants and loans for guerrillas to try to get them into farming, into school or into the civilian mainstream.

There has, however, been little continuity of federal programs in Colombia, a nation of about 28 million people, because a president is in office for only four years and cannot succeed himself.

Duke, Tech Outlast Cavs, Terps

AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO (AP) — Duke and Georgia Tech split their regular-season Atlantic Coast Conference basketball meetings, but on Sunday, they'll settle the score with the conference championship on the line.

The sixth-ranked Yellow Jackets, 25-5, secured their spot in the finals when Duane Ferrell stole an inbounds pass and scored on a dunk with two seconds left for a 64-62 victory over Maryland.

Duke, 31-2, which lost the championship to Maryland in 1984 and is looking for its first title in six years, rallied to beat Virginia 75-70 as David Henderson scored eight points in the final 3:32.

"I'm really elated, but I really feel for Maryland because they are a really great basketball team," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "I can't say how fortunate I feel. We played gutty down the stretch."

Ferrell says the interception was a matter of listening to what Cremins told him during a timeout.

"I wasn't exactly a mindreader," Ferrell said. "He showed us a play they ran twice this year. I just anticipated and I saw the pass coming and it was unbelievable."

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said he was disappointed with the way his team lost, but he thinks the outcome showed something.

"I think we have proved that we can play with the best in the country," Driesell said. "I don't think Tech is that much better than us."

Duke had to rally from a second half deficit and needed Henderson's late production not only to get into the finals, but to maintain its ranking as No. 1.

"If we got beat, and we could have, I would not have been disappointed in our basketball team," Krzyzewski said. "In the last four minutes of the game, it seemed like we played terrific basketball."

Following timeouts called by both teams, Keith Gatlin's inbounds pass for Len Bias was picked off by Ferrell, who raced upcourt for the dunk.

Ferrell was fouled by Gatlin, and although Ferrell missed the free throw after the foul, Georgia Tech's spot in the finals was secure for the second straight season.

Long completed a three-point play with 15:37 left to give Maryland its biggest lead at 45-37. A 12-4 Georgia Tech run started by Tom Hammonds and completed by John Salley at the 10:04 mark tied the score at 49.

The score was tied at 51 before Ferrell hit two free throws with 6:41 left to give Georgia Tech the lead for good. The Yellow Jackets lead got no bigger than four the rest of the way.

Maryland went almost 10 minutes without a field goal, allowing Georgia Tech to get back into the contest.

Hammonds finished with 16 points, Ferrell and Salley had 15 apiece and Mark Price added 10 for the Yellow Jackets.

Bias led all scorers with 20 points. Gatlin and Price had 10 apiece.

Trailing 66-64 after a three-point play by Mel Kennedy at the 3:57 mark, Duke took the lead for good on Henderson's first three-point effort at 3:32.

Olden Polynice missed a jumper in the lane at 2:55 and Danny Ferry grabbed the rebound. After John Johnson missed at 2:33, Henderson canned a short shot inside the lane and his free throw stretched Duke's lead to 70-66 with 1:58 left.

Virginia got within 70-68 on a Tom Sheehey jumper from the right baseline with 1:29 left, but Johnny Dawkins came back for Duke with a 10-footer from the left and a 72-68 lead with 47 seconds remaining.

Henderson finished his streak with two more free throws at the 29-second mark and Mark Alarie completed Duke's scoring with the back end of a two-shot foul with 11 seconds left.

The Blue Devils had trailed by as much as eight points twice in the first half, the latest being a 37-29 deficit on two free throws by Sheehey with 1:44 left before halftime. Duke got two free throws each from Billy King and Tommy Amaker and cut the deficit to 38-33 at halftime.

Johnson sparked a Virginia run that gave them a 54-47 lead with 11:25 left, but a 7-0 run in which Alarie scored five points tied the score with 9:18 left. The score was tied once more and Virginia led by no more than three the rest of the way.

Dawkins led Duke with 24 points, Henderson had 16 and Alarie 14. The Blue Devils shot 58.5 percent from the field, including 62.5 percent in the second half.

Sheehey finished with 21 points for the Cavaliers, 19-10, while Johnson added 16. Mel Kennedy scored 13 and Polynice 10.

St. John's Nips Syracuse, 70-69

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Rowan hit a jumper with eight seconds remaining and Walter Berry blocked Dwayne "Pearl" Washington's shot at the buzzer to give No. 5 St. John's a 70-69 victory over No. 8 Syracuse Saturday night for the Big East Conference championship and an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament.

Until Rowan's 12-foot jumper from the baseline, the Redmen had never led. They trailed by as many as 13 points in the first half and by 41-28 early in the second half.

A 15-4 run, with Mark Jackson hitting three baskets and Willie Glass five points, put St. John's, 30-4, back in the game, trailing only 45-43.

Syracuse, 25-5, pulled ahead again by as many as seven points twice before Marco Baldi, a 6-foot-11 freshman reserve, hit six straight points to pull the Redmen within 63-61 with 4:09 left. At that point, Rony Seikaly, the Orangemen's 6-10 center, fouled out.

Washington, who led all scorers with 20 points and 14 assists, then hit a jumper, but Walter Berry got a three-point play to make it 65-64 with 3:22 remaining. Washington came back with another basket, but Rowan did the same for a 67-66 Syracuse edge.

Once again, Washington came through for the Orangemen, hitting two free throws with 1:17 remaining for a 69-66 score.

Glass' two free throws with 32 seconds left for St. John's cut the lead to one again, and Washington missed the front end of a 1-and-1 with 28 seconds remaining, setting up Rowan's game-winner.

Glass led St. John's with 19 points, followed by Berry with 16, Rowan with 13 and Jackson 10 points and nine assists, giving him an NCAA record with 311 assists for the season. That broke the NCAA mark of 309 by Houston's Reid Gettys in 1983-84.

Syracuse made 19 of 26 shots in the first half and St. John's was unable to handle the Orangemen's zone defense.

Seikaly added 16 points, Howard Triche 13 and Rafael Addison 12 for Syracuse, which shared the regular-season Big East crowd with St. John's.

Jordan May See Return

Team physician, Dr. John Hefferon, said an examination of Jordan's foot Friday showed further healing to the broken bone.

"The decision will be made strictly on the opinion of Michael Jordan, with advice from (Bulls owner) Jerry Reinsdorf, (General Manager) Jerry Krause and Dr. Hefferon," said Jordan.

Johnson, Peterson Hurl ECU To Pair Of Victories

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The Pirates, now 6-0 overall and 2-0 in the CAA, rolled up a 10-1 victory in the opening game behind Johnson and came back with a 2-0 victory on Peterson's effort in the second.

Johnson, in getting his second win of the young season, extended his career win mark to 26. He also cracked a grand-slam homer to boost his round-trip total to 53 as he moves toward NCAA history. Johnson, a senior, could become the first ever NCAA player to pitch 30 victories and hit 60 home runs.

The burley righthander gave up only three hits, one of them a first inning homer. He struck out five and walked two.

Peterson, who also won his second of the year, gave up just two hits and those came in the fourth and fifth innings. He fanned ten on the day and walked none.

"My curve ball was really working well," Peterson said afterward. "It worked through the whole game."

Peterson said he's more confident in this, his junior year. "My level of confidence is higher this season. I just know what I have to do and I get it done. And when my curve is working like it did today, I can stay on top of things."

The first game was highlighted by a grandslam from Johnson which posted East Carolina to a 5-1 lead.

And Chris Bradberry, who had gone hitless in his first two games, and had picked up only one in the second two, broke out of that with a 3-for-4 performance in the opener Saturday.

Bradberry had a double in the first, reached on an error and scored in the second, slapped a two-run homer in the fourth and doubled in two more in the fifth.

In the second game, he was only 1-for-2, scoring the insurance run for the Pirates.

"It was just a question of getting my confidence back," Bradberry said. "I wasn't seeing the ball. But I came out early yesterday and got in some extra batting and got my concentration back and also got in the right frame of mind."

While the Pirates had things fairly easy in the opener, they struggled against John Volpe, William & Mary's ace, in the second. "He's a good, smart pitcher," Coach Gary Overton said. "He takes his time and does a lot of little things with his mannerisms that bother the batters."

Overton said he was very pleased with the play of the Pirates on the day. "We played with a lot of intensity and enthusiasm. Our pitching was very strong. And it's nice to get off to a good start in the conference."

The Indians offered a few threats after that, but the Pirates held them in check each time.

Their best threat of the afternoon came in the fourth inning of the second game. With one away, a single and an error put men on. After a second out, another misplay loaded the bases, but Peterson fanned the final batter to close the door on the Indians.

East Carolina tied the opening game up in the bottom of the first. With one down, Greg Hardison singled and moved to third on Bradberry's first double. Johnson was intentionally walked and with two away, Jay McGraw drew a walk to force in Hardison.

Then, in the second, the Pirates broke it open.

Three more crossed in the fourth. Carter walked and Bradberry socked it out in left center. Johnson was hit but a pitch and Mike Sullivan singled courtesy runner Robert Langston to third. The two pulled a double steal, Langston scoring.

Two more came over in the fifth. David Ritchie walked as did Carter. Bradberry brought both of them in with a double.

East Carolina missed scoring opportunities in the first and second innings of the second game.

But in the third, they took advantage of an Indian error to push over a run. Hardison opened, reaching on the error. He moved up on an out and scored on Sullivan's single to right.

The insurance run came in the fifth. Bradberry singled to deep short and moved up when the throw to first was high. He then scored on Johnson's single.

The Pirates play host to Fairfield today at 1 p.m., are off Monday, then open a series of six straight games at Harrington, Tuesday through Sunday.

"We'll find out a lot about our pitching staff," Overton said.

Manning's Shots Lift Kansas

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Danny Manning, the Big Eight player of the year, sank two free throws with six seconds left Saturday to lift second-ranked Kansas to a 72-70 victory over No. 15 Oklahoma in the semifinals of the conference's postseason basketball tournament.

The Jayhawks, 30-3, meet the winner of the Nebraska-Iowa State semifinal in Sunday's title game.

Manning was fouled in the lane by Oklahoma's Linwood Davis after the Sooners had tied the score at 70-70 with 45 seconds to play.

Kansas, the regular-season Big Eight champion, called a timeout after the two free throws by Manning, a 6-foot-11 sophomore. Oklahoma's Anthony Bowie launched a 20-footer at the buzzer that bounced away.

Oklahoma, with no starter over 6-foot-7, stayed with the taller Jayhawks, who had 7-foot-1 Greg Dreiling to complement Manning inside. Kansas appeared to be pulling away from the Sooners on several occasions, but Oklahoma rallied each time.

Ron Kellogg's shot at the buzzer gave Kansas a 37-35 lead at halftime. The biggest Kansas lead was 60-53 when Archie Marshall hit from inside at the 6:46 mark.

Both teams were in foul trouble down the stretch and Dreiling fouled out with nine points at the 4:03 mark.

Kansas led 70-64 when Marshall scored with 2:43 left. The Sooners' Tim McCalister followed with a long jumper and David Johnson hit from short range to make it 70-68 with 1:26 to play.

The Sooners then deliberately fouled Cedric Hunter, Kansas' poorest foul shooter, and the strategy paid off when Hunter missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw.

Seconds later, Johnson tied it at 70-70 to set up the final dramatic seconds.

Manning and Kellogg each had 18 points for the Jayhawks, and Marshall had 12 off the bench.

Johnson led the Sooners with 20 points, McCalister had 13, Bowie 11 and Davis 10. Kansas finished 25-8.

Kentucky (3).....83
Alabama 72

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Reserve Cedric Jenkins scored 11 points during a nine-minute stretch when third-ranked Kentucky took command in a 83-72 victory over Alabama to capture the Southeastern Conference basketball tournament championship Saturday.

The victory earned Kentucky the SEC's automatic spot in the NCAA Championships and ended a season of almost total domination of its conference foes.

Kenny Walker had 20 points and Roger Harden 18 to lead the scoring as the Wildcats lifted their record to 29-3.

Alabama, which once led by nine points during the first half, held a 38-32 advantage with just under three minutes left in the first half when Jenkins ignited a 24-9 streak that put the Wildcats ahead 53-46 with 13:19 remaining on a layup by Jenkins.

It was Kentucky's 11th victory in a row, 19th straight on its Rupp Arena home floor and 19th consecutive over a conference rival.

Kentucky captured the league's regular season title for the 36th time with a 17-1 mark and made this its 15th tournament championship out of the 27 conducted by the SEC.

After Jenkins and another substitute, Richard Madison, who had eight points, helped the Wildcats take charge, Kentucky drilled 18 of 19 free throws in the final three minutes, including 12 in a row during one stretch.

Walker, in danger at one point of missing double figures for the first time in 63 games, hit 12 free throws in a row in the final three minutes.

Jenkins finished with 13 points and Madison had eight, most in the Wildcat comeback.

Derrick McKey led Alabama with 20 points as the Crimson Tide fell to 22-8.

Before Jenkins went to work, the Wildcats appeared to be in trouble after Alabama took advantage of a technical foul on the Kentucky bench to launch an 8-0 spurt that created an 18-9 Tide lead with 13:12 left in the first half.

Buck Johnson hit the two free throws on the technical and had two more free throws at the end of the run with McKey and Mark Gottfried each contributing a field goal.

Two free throws by Michael Ansley gave the Tide a 37-29 lead before Harden sank a 22-footer and Walker a free throw. McKey's free throw made it 38-32 with 3:01 left in the half and it was then that Jenkins started the Wildcat comeback with 2:46 remaining.

The Tide led 43-40 at halftime, but Davender and Walker each scored to give the Cats a 44-43 lead and Jenkins followed with a basket and free throw and Alabama never got closer than three points the rest of the way.

Johnson finished with 12 for the Tide before fouling out with 5:36 to play and Ansley added 11.

Davender added 12 points for Kentucky, which converted 27 of 32 free throws in the game. Alabama hit 24 of 34 free throws.

Michigan (7).....80
Indiana (16).....52

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Roy Tarpley's 21 points paced a powerful Michigan attack as the No. 7 Wolverines clinched their second consecutive Big Ten Championship Saturday with an 80-52 college basketball victory over No. 16 Indiana.

Michigan became the first team to capture consecutive Big Ten titles since Indiana did it in 1980 and 1981. No Wolverines team had repeated since Michigan won three straight titles from 1964-66.

The Wolverines, 27-4 overall and 14-4 in the league, dominated the game from the outset. Michigan held an 18-12 edge with 10:37 left in the first half when Tarpley put in a layup that started a 12-2 run.

When it was over, the Wolverines held a 30-14 lead, and the advantage grew to 44-25 at the intermission.

Michigan's size up front was too much for the Hoosiers, who finished the regular season at 21-7 and 13-5. The Wolverines had 10 offensive rebounds in the first half.

Tarpley and Richard Rellford, who finished with 13 points, did the inside scoring while Antoine Joubert hit for 16 from the perimeter.

Indiana never cut the lead below the halftime margin. Hoosier center Daryl Thomas committed his fourth foul in the first minute of the second half and Indiana was unable to put together any rally. Leading scorer Steve Alford was limited to just three second-half points and finished with 15.

Thomas and Ricky Calloway, who combined for an average of nearly 30 points per game, were held to 2 and 4 points, respectively.

Saturday's game marked the final home appearance of Michigan's Tarpley, Rellford, Butch Wade and Robert Henderson. Michigan Coach Bill Frieder removed all four late in the game to ovations from a record Crisler Arena crowd of 14,198. The old attendance record was 14,063 set Jan. 10, 1976, in a game against Indiana.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Anthony Jones scored 22 points and Armon Gilliam added 18 Saturday as 13th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas wore down New Mexico State in the second half of a 75-55 victory in the finals of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association basketball tournament.

With the victory, the Runnin' Rebels improved their record to 31-4 and earned an automatic berth into the NCAA postseason tournament that begins this week.

New Mexico State got within 39-38 early in the second half only to see the Rebels outscore them 22-8 over the next 10 minutes and UNLV led 61-46 with 5:50 to play. Jones scored nine points to lead the Rebels' second-half assault, from which the Aggies never recovered.

Gilbert Wilburn scored 23 points to lead New Mexico State, which finished the season with an 18-12 record. Guard Freddie Banks added 12 points for the Rebels.

Nevada-Las Vegas, after trailing 8-7, held the Aggies scoreless for a 4½-minute span and eventually ran off a 17-6 streak to take a 24-14 lead with 5:17 left in the half.

Knights Second In State Tourney

WALKERTOWN — Falls Road rallied in the second half and pulled out a 70-59 victory over Greenville Christian Academy in the championship game of the North Carolina Christian Activities Association basketball tournament Saturday.

Greenville Christian's girls, playing in the consolation game, took third place with a 59-48 win over Faith Christian.

Greenville had jumped out into the lead in the opening period of the championship game, but Falls Road came back in the second quarter to close the gap, then take the win in the second half.

"I can't complain too much," Coach Dale Thatcher said of the second place finish. "We'd been hitting everything and shooting well, but we missed some today. We had a good first half and they had a better second half.

"The key was the boards; they were very tough on the boards and we got few second shots.

"But we weren't expected to get out of the first round and as much as I hated to lose once we got (to the championship game), it was an outstanding end of the season for us."

Greenville led, 22-14, after the first eight minutes of play, but Falls Road started its rally in the second quarter. They outhit GCA, 14-11, and trimmed the lead to 33-28 at intermission.

Falls Road erased most of the rest of the lead in the third quarter, 12-8, and trailed by only one, 41-40, as the final quarter got underway. In that, Falls Road outhit the Knights, 30-18, to take the win.

John Denson led Falls Road with 24 points while Michael Melvin had 23. Robin House paced GCA with 18, with Derek Leupen and Paul Hollingsworth each adding 12. Mark Holloman added 11.

The Greenville girls jumped out into a 15-6 lead in the first period of the game and were never headed. Faith rallied, however, and trimmed the lead to just 29-25 by halftime.

The Lady Knights pulled away in the second half, taking a 47-34 lead into the final quarter. Faith outhit Greenville in that period, but only by 14-12, not nearly enough.

"We used our fast break to get a lead on them, and they got into foul trouble late in the game," Thatcher said.

Paige Brown and Paige Bragg each hit 13 points to lead GCA. Rhonda Rowe had 23 for Faith.

Memphis State Nips Seminoles

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Senior guard Andre Turner hit a short jumper with six seconds left to give 10th-ranked Memphis State a 73-71 victory over Florida State in the semifinals of the Metro Conference basketball tournament Saturday.

Memphis State, 27-4, will meet the winner of the Cincinnati-Louisville semifinal in Sunday's championship game. Florida State ended the season at 12-17.

With Florida State holding a 71-67 lead in the final minutes, the 6-foot-1 Turner, who scored 12 of his 17 points in the second half, went to work on both ends of the court to bring Memphis State back.

Turner then stole the ball from Barber again on Florida State's next possession. Dwight Boyd put in a missed Turner layup to tie the score at 71 with 1:07 left.

Another turnover by Florida State against the Memphis full-court press gave the ball back to the Tigers. Turner waited until the shot clock ticked down before driving the middle of the lane and putting up a 7-footer.

A 17-foot shot from the corner by Florida State's LaRae Davis as time expired rolled out of the basket.

Baskerville Holmes led a powerful inside attack that kept Memphis State abreast of Florida State with 19 points. Memphis scored all but about 10 points from inside the 10-foot area and outrebounded its opponents 44 to 28, with 25 of those off the offensive boards.

Center William Bedford added 14 and Vincent Askew 12 points. Turner also had 10 assists.

Barber and Davis provided most of Florida State's offense from long-range. Barber finished with 26 points and Davis had 10. David Shaffer added 19 points.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Sophomore forward Herbert Crook scored 19 points as No. 11 Louisville shot 70 percent from the field in the first half enroute to an 86-65 victory Saturday over Cincinnati in the semifinals of the Metro Conference basketball tournament

Louisville, 25-7, will meet 10th-ranked Memphis State in Sunday's championship game. The Cardinals defeated Memphis State 70-69 in Freedom Hall in the final game of the regular season that decided the league championship.

Cincinnati, 12-16, shot only 29.6 percent from the field in the first half and managed only 10 points midway through the initial period.

Louisville led by as many as 38-17 before Cincinnati closed with three quick baskets to make it 40-22 at intermission.

The Cardinals also made 16 of 25 free throws in the first half, to just six of 11 for Cincinnati.

For the game, 62 fouls were called on both teams. Louisville was 38-53 from the line, while Cincinnati was 17 of 28.

Cincinnati could come no closer than 13 points in the second half, and Louisville led by as many as 28 points.

The Bearcats shot nearly 15 percent better than Louisville from the field in the second half, but Cincinnati's aggressive style of play was hampered by foul trouble on key players.

Guard Jeff Hall provided the outside offense for Louisville, scoring 16 points. Forward Billy Thompson added 13.

Guard Roger McClendon led Cincinnati with 13 points. Myron Hughes, who fouled out with 12:43 to play, had 12 points.

Notre Dame (12).....69
Dayton.....55

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — David Rivers scored a game-high 27 points Saturday as No. 12 Notre Dame defeated Dayton 69-55 in the final regular season college basketball game for both teams.

The Irish, 23-5, overcame a 24-point effort by Dayton's Dave Colbert, who scored 17 in the second half, to finish with a perfect 15-0 record at home for the 1985-86 season. Dayon finished 17-12.

Senior Ken Barlow collected 15 points for Notre Dame to finish his college career as the school's 11th-highest scorer with 1,332 points, two behind John Shumate.

Notre Dame outscored the Flyers 10-2 in the opening minutes of the second half to build a 15-point lead in the nonconference game. Dayton never came closer than 10 points after that.

Notre Dame finished 23 of 27 from the free throw line, including 9 for 10 by Rivers. The Irish led 27-20 at the close of an anemic first half marked by poor field goal shooting and weak offensive rebounding of both teams.

The Flyers missed their first six attempts from the field and went 1-for-11 in the opening eight minutes, while Notre Dame scored only eight points.

The Irish managed to outscore Dayton 10-1 in a two-minute stretch, powered by nine points from Tim Kempton, to build a 12-point lead.

Illinois (19).....73
Minnesota.....64

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Glynn Blackwell scored a season-high 20 points and Efrem Winters added 16 as No. 19-ranked Illinois defeated Minnesota 73-64 Saturday in the final Big Ten conference game for both teams.

Illinois, 11-7 in Big Ten play, raised its overall record to 21-9 and is expected to receive an NCAA tournament invitation Sunday.

Minnesota, devastated by the loss of three key players charged in an alleged sexual assault earlier in the year, dropped its eighth straight game. The Gophers finished 5-13 in conference play and 15-16 overall.

Minnesota held the lead for much of the first half, thanks to the inside shooting of senior center John Shasky. But Illinois battled back to tie the game at 26-26 with five minutes remaining in the half, and then scored eight of the last 12 points for a 34-30 lead.

Blackwell, a sophomore guard, kept the Illini ahead with his long-range shooting in the second half. Illinois' biggest lead of the game was 11 points at 68-57 with just over a minute to play.

Bruce Douglas contributed nine points for Illinois, which shot 65 percent from the field in the first half. Anthony Welch and Tom Wysinger each added eight for the Illini.

Rose Overhauls Rams By 11-2

Eric Jarman banged out three hits and drove in two runs to help Rose High School to an 11-2 baseball victory over Greene Central Saturday afternoon at Guy Smith Stadium.

The win was the second in as many days for the Rampants, who had bowed in their season opener against Havelock.

Rose collected eight hits on the day, with Jason Galloway picking up two of the remaining five.

Greene Central, which lost for the first time in three outings, picked up six hits on the afternoon, two of them by Ervin Collins.

The Rams scored first, getting a run in the top of the first. With two away, Adrian Smith singled and moved up on Barry Ginn's single. Shay Beaman reached on an error, allowing Smith to score.

Rose tied it up with one in the bottom of the frame. Again, with two away, the rally began. Jarman singled and scored on David Daniels' triple.

The Rampants broke the game open with four runs in the second, taking a 5-1 edge in the game. Robbie Ehrmann opened with a walk and moved all the way to third on an error. He scored on Jason Galloway's single. Mike Maxon reached on an error and Tyrone Jones walked to load teh bases. Travis King reached on an error, scoring Galloway and Jarman singled in Maxon and an error let Jones cross.

Another four came over in the third, running the lead to 9-1. Ehrmann again led off, walking. Axel Smith also walked and woth two away, Jones singled to drive in both runners. King singled in Jones and a triple by Jarman plated King.

The final two for Rose came in the sixth. Jim Gillihan walked and Hunter Clark was hit by a pitch.

Curtis Perkins then hit the ball out of the park, driving in both runners. However, Perkins was called out when he passed Clark before the latter had scored.

Bozarth, Inkster Tied In Kemper

PRINCEVILLE, Hawaii (AP) — Marci Bozarth and Juli Inkster used a string of birdies to gain a share of the lead Saturday at 10-under-par 206 after the third round of the LPGA Women's Kemper Open.

Two strokes back, at 8-under-par 208, were Chris Johnson and Amy Alcott.

Bozarth, who was the first-round leader, went into Saturday's round at 7-under-par 137. She birdied the 559-yard par-5 second hole, but then ran into trouble on the 5th and 7th holes, shooting a bogey on each.

On the back nine, she shot four birdies in a row, on the 10th through 13th holes.

Bozarth had a temporay setback on the 337-yard par-4 15th hole, taking a bogey, but on the 18th hole she birdied again, giving her a 3-under-par 206 for the day.

Inkster, who started Saturday's round at 8-under-par 136, fired off three birdies and one bogey to give her a 2-under-par 70 for the day.

Johnson, who was the leader going into the third round with a 9-under-par 135, shot a 1-over-par 73 Saturday for a three-round total of 8-under-par 208.

Alcott began with a 5-under-par 139 and also finished at 208. Four birdies on the 9th, 11th, 12th and 18th holes and a bogey on the 10th hole gave her a 3-under-par for the day.

The final round of the Women's Kemper Open was to be held Sunday. The first prize was $45,000.

Third round scores Saturday in the $300,000 LPGA Kemper Open on the par-72, 6,210-yard Princeville Makai golf course:

Lefty's High Kick

Unexpected Keys Jackets

By RICK SCOPPE

GREENSBORO (AP) — Georgia Tech forward Duane Ferrell was looking for overtime, but what he found was a most unlikely victory.

Duke, the tournament's top seed, will play Georgia Tech, the defending champ, Sunday in the title game.

"It was one of the most unexpected things. It was a weird, strange play," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said.

After a time out, Maryland guard Keith Gatlin tried to pass inbounds to Len Bias. But Ferrell picked off the pass — Gatlin's first turnover of the game — and raced downcourt for the winning bucket. "As the play developed, I was standing next to Lenny. I was anticipating overtime," Ferrell said. "I really didn't think they were going to run that play.

"But I saw the ball and tapped it. It was a high dribble and I was thinking I was going to kick it out of bounds I was so excited and surprised. I said, please let me get a hold of it," Ferrell said.

Ferrell said he never thought he'd get to the bucket after the steal.

"It seemed like it took days for me to get down there. It was like slow motion," he said.

Gatlin, meanwhile, said he just wanted to forget the play.

"The play was designed to get the ball to Len. When I threw the ball, Ferrell jumped the pick and stole it," Gatlin said.

Gatlin said he was almost numb when he saw Ferrell pickoff the pass.

"I couldn't think anything," he said. "I wanted to crawl under the table."

Ferrell said Georgia Tech assistant coach Perry Clark outlined nearly the exact play the Terrapins ran. The play was designed to have Bias get the ball after running Ferrell into a pick at the foul line.

"I anticipated the pick," Ferrell said. "But I was surprised the pass came. I thought he saw me."

Ferrell, a 6-foot-6 sophomore, almost didn't get a chance for his last-second heroics. During a time out prior to the play, Cremins wanted to put center John Salley on Bias, but his assistants said Ferrell was the man for the job.

"I'm really elated...," Cremins said. "I was just hoping for overtime."

Georgia Tech looked like it had a good chance to win with 10 seconds left, but Mark Price lost the ball out of bounds at midcourt, setting up the Terrapins' last shot.

"When (Price) lost it, I figured, well, it's just Maryland's turn. We've had some many close games with Maryland. I can go back and back and back. I just felt like it was Maryland's turn," Cremins said.

"Then all of a sudden out of the blue, we put great pressure defense on the out-of-bounds play and ... (Ferrell) made a great, great steal," he said. "I can't say how fortunate I feel. We played gutty down the stretch."

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said he could not remember losing a game like this.

"I've coached for a long time, and I don't think I have ever lost one like this. But I know if I keep coaching, I'll probably lose them like this again," he said.

"The final play is a play we have run 1,000 times in practice," Driesell said. "I guess the Lord just wanted it to end like this. Give Ferrell credit for anticipating the pass and making a great play."

Despite the loss, Driesell said his team had "proved that we can play with the best in the country. I don't think Tech is that much better than us."

"Our kids played well enough and hard enough to be in the finals," he said. "But we're not going to lose any sleep over this one."

Henderson Has Winning Touch

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO (AP) — Duke forward David Henderson proved once again Saturday that when the game's on the line it's his time to shine.

Henderson scored eight points in the last 3:32 to lift the top-ranked Blue Devils past unranked Virginia 75-70 in the semifinals of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Afterwards, Henderson, who scored 16 points, downplayed his efforts in the final minutes.

"It just happens. It's instinct. I don't come down court and say, 'Okay, David, the game's on the line and it's time to do something," Henderson said. "But I feel comfortable.

"It's just something I've capitalized on all year, being an opportunistic player," he said.

Henderson hit just two of six shots in the first half and was only five for 13 for the game. But he said his statistics were not an indication he was out of sync.

"I felt I was always in rhythm but my shots just weren't falling," he said. "In the last few minutes..., it was just a matter of concentration."

Henderson maneuvered inside for two straight three-point plays in the final 3½ minutes as the Blue Devils changed their offensive scheme.

"I feel once I get inside I can create something," Henderson said. "I just set up down low and my teammates got me the ball."

Coach Mike Krzyzewski said Henderson's two three-point plays came in what the Blue Devils call a "post exchange" in which Duke's big men exchange positions with their smaller counterparts. The change was designed to bring Virginia center Olden Polynice away from the basket.

"We practice those type of end-of-the-game situations and we have confidence in each other. We're a good team under pressure," he said.

Polynice, who was held to 10 points, said he felt he was in "no man's land" when the Blue Devils changed their offensive scheme.

"I had been blocking shots or getting up on them and they wanted to take me outside and it worked to their advantage," Polynice said. "It was just one of those things that I had to make a decision whether I wanted to give up a jump shot ... or a layup.

Polynice said the Cavaliers were "pumped up" for the Blue Devils and may have lost some steam in the second half.

The Cavaliers led 38-33 at the half and upped it to seven twice before Duke rallied to go ahead for good on Henderson's first three-point play with 3:32 left.

"I thought it was a terrific ballgame. Both teams played at a very high level," Krzyzewski said. "All that stuff you've (reporters) said about teams not playing at a high level in this tournament is full of beans.

"I think we took Virginia's best shot and we were giving them our best shot. The whole second half we played at a higher level than we played at the last couple of weeks," Krzyzewski said.

Virginia coach Terry Holland agreed.

"We threw our best punch at them today, they absorbed it and came right back at us," Holland said.

Guard John Johnson, who scored 16 points for the Cavaliers, said he was disappointed with the loss, but not in his team's effort in the tournament.

"I feel a lot better leaving the tournament than I did coming in," he said.

Martina Reaches A New Plateau

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Martina Navratilova on Saturday became the first tennis player earn more than $10 million by winning the $150,000 Computerland U.S. Women's Indoor tennis championship on a controversial match point.

Navratilova served her only ace in the 100-minute contest on a match point to defeat Helena Sukova 3-6, 6-0, 7-6 (7-5) and win the event for the fourth time.

Navratilova's angled serve seemed out to many in the crowd. Sukova made a half-hearted attempt to return it and then looked in disbelief when she realized it was not called out.

"Helena pointed to a spot but I didn't see one," said Navratilova. "I thought it caught half the (side) line or else I couldn't have taken it, even though it was worth a lot of money and a fur coat I didn't even know about."

Navratilova said she would have played the point over if she thought it was out.

"I couldn't live with myself if I had taken a point that I thought was out," she said. "I was surprised she didn't go after it. She should have known I was going to her backhand."

Sukova did not agree with the linesman.

"I'm 100 percent the serve was wide," said Sukova. "Obviously, I thought it was wide enough to be called out."

The hard-fought victory was worth $32,000 to the six-time Wimbledon champion and boosted her career earning to $10,006,424.

Sukova, who lost to Navratilova for the eighth straight time, pushed the world's No. 1 rated women's player to the limit. The tournament's No. 4 seed broke Navratilova in the fourth and eighth games of the opening set and survived two break points in the ninth game before winning the set with an ace down the middle of the court.

"Sukova played well in the first set and she was definitely the better player," said Navratilova. "It took a while to get my blood going."

Sukova had a chance to get back in the set in the third game, but blew two break points. Navratilova, who won 25 of 33 points in the set, eventually held the game with a forehand smash and she later closed out the 19-minute set with a forehand smash that went three rows into the gallery at the Rutgers Athletic Center.

"I'm right on track," said Navratilova. "I'm not tired. I'm emotionally up and I feel very good now."

Green Birdies Way To Lead

MIAMI (AP) - PGA champion Hubert Green birdied five holes in a row and one-putted his way to a 64 that lifted him into a two-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $500,000 Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament.

The veteran Green, who started the day's play seven shots off the pace, made up that deficit with a 29 — the best nine-hole total of the year — over the front side.

"That's something you don't do all that often on the PGA Tour," said Green, 39, who has won 19 tournaments in a 17-year career but has shot 29 on only two other occasions.

He did it this time on the strength of his putter.

"I didn't play bad, but it wasn't exactly the result of shots Ben Hogan would have been proud of. But the ball went in the hole and that's nice," Green said.

He chipped in once and one-putted seven other times going out, giving him only nine strokes on the green over the first nine holes.

He birdied twice and one-putted for par on three other holes — including a remarkable save on the 18th — over the back nine and finished the day's play with 22 putts.

"I happened to get some very good breaks," he said. "Over a year, over a number of years, they tend to even out, so you take the breaks in stride. You don't commit suicide when they go against you, and you don't get too elated when they go for you."

Tom Kite, a three-stroke leader after 36 holes, had to scramble for a 73 and dropped back to second at 206.

Andy Bean, a two-time winner here, Jim Thorpe and D.A. Weibring were another stroke back at 207. Bean had a 68, Thorpe 70 and Weibring 71 in the warm, sunny, windy weather.

It was another two strokes back to a group of five at 209, five shots off the pace going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $90,000 first prize.

They included Mike Sullivan, Howard Twitty and Mac O'Grady, all with third-round 69s, Mark Calcavecchia and Ken Brown of Scotland. Calcavecchia had a 72, Brown 73.

Tom Watson, trying to fight his way out of long nonwinning string, had a place among the leaders until he pumped a couple into the water on the eighth hole and made a fat 8. Even with the triple bogey, he finished with a 71 and a 210 total, 6-under par and six strokes off the pace.

Jack Nicklaus took a 73 and was at 213.

Green, who played more than an hour in front of the other contenders, opened up with a 12-foot birdie putt after visiting a fairway trap on the first hole.

He birdied the second by chipping in from an extremely awkward stance, the shot covering about 25 feet. "A real break," he said. "I'm looking at 5 or 6 and make 3."

He missed a six-foot putt for birdie on the third, then missed the green and dropped an eight-footer for par on the fourth.

The five-birdie string started on the fifth, where he got his approach within two feet.

He needed only a five-footer on the sixth, scored from 15 feet on the next and then made a pair of six-footers on thme eighth and ninth.

He got the stroke back with a pitch to four feet on the 12th, then came within a foot of making an ace on the 174-yard 15th.

Green preserved his advantage with scrambling pars on the last two holes. He got up and down from a bunker on the 17th. On the 18th, he drove right, hit his second far to the right, then played a great pitch from 68 yards to within a foot of the cup.

"A lucky par," he said.

Third-round scores Saturday in the $500,000 Doral-Eastern Open Golf Tournament on the 6,939-yard, par-72 Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club:

Hagler, Hearns Face Challenges

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler and Thomas Hearns can finalize arrangements for a rematch by beating unbeaten opponents Monday night.

Hagler will defend the undisputed world middleweight championship in a scheduled 12-round bout against John "The Beast" Mugabi, who has won all 26 of his pro fights by knockouts.

"I know I'll knock him out," said the challenger from Uganda. "If it goes the distance, I'll still win."

"If he can find him and hit him, we've got a puncher's chance," said George Francis, who trains Mugabi.

"This fight is exciting," said Hagler, who has a 60-2-2 record with 51 knockouts and a 36-fight unbeaten streak dating back to 1976. "Hurt is on my mind."

Hagler is a solid betting favorite.

Hearns, the World Boxing Council super welterweight champion, will challenge for the North American Boxing Federation middleweight title against James Shuler of Philadelphia, who has a 22-0 record with 16 knockouts.

"It's something for me to plan for ... to spoil their plan," Shuler said of the rematch between Hagler and Hearns, which reportedly has been made for June 23.

"I think Shuler will try to take it to me," said Hearns, the "Hit Man" from Detroit, who has a 40-2 record with 34 knockouts. "I think it'll be a mistake."

Hearns is favored to gain a chance to revenge his third-round knockout loss to Hagler in a spectacular fight here last April 15. Hearns' other defeat also occurred here when he was stopped in the 14th round by Sugar Ray Leonard in a battle for the undisputed welterweight championship Sept. 16, 1981.

Monday night's card will be presented at a 15,000-seat outdoor arena at Caesars Palace and will be shown on closed-circuit and pay-per-view television.

The Hearns-Shuler fight is scheduled to begin at 10:15 p.m. EST, while the Hagler-Mugabi bout is set for 11:10 p.m. EST.

Preceding those two fights will be a scheduled 15-round World Boxing Association bantamweight title match between champion Richard Sandoval of Pomona, Calif., 29-0 with 17 knockouts, and Gaby Canizales of Laredo, Texas, 32-2 with 25 knockouts.

The Hagler and Hearns fights originally were scheduled for Caesars Palace last Nov. 14, but the card was postponed when Hagler suffered a broken nose while sparring Oct. 30.

The champion from Brockton, Mass. says he is in top physical condition and that he isn't worried about an emotional letdown in the wake of his sensational win over Hearns.

"That is one reason I took the toughest opponent out there," Hagler said. "I can't take him lightly."

"I know I can box," said Mugabi, a silver medalist in the welterweight class at the 1980 Olympics in Moscow. "I can fight whichever way I want. I'm a good fighter. I'm not just a brawler. If it goes the distance, I'll still win."

But power is Mugabi's game. Only one of his 26 pro fights has gone past the sixth round. That was against James "Hard Rock" Green, whom he stopped in the 10th round on Feb. 19, 1984 at Tampa, Fla.

However, it should be noted that most of Mugabi's fights have been against junior middleweights, and it's doubtful he hits harder than Hearns.

Hearns rocked Hagler with several smashing right hands, but still was overwhelmed by the fury of Hagler's attack.

"I don't think he's going to come out like that against me," Mugabi said. "All the guys who have done that have been knocked down."

Duke, Cavs, Tech, Terps Win

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

GREENSBORO (AP) — Duke received an unexpected wake-up call from Wake Forest, and Virginia hoped to make the top-ranked Blue Devils late for the ACC tournament championship.

The Blue Devils had their problems with the Demon Deacons before coming away with a 68-60 victory Friday in the first round of the 33rd Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Virginia withstood a last-second shot by North Carolina State to beat the 20th-ranked Wolfpack 64-62.

In the night games, No. 6 Georgia Tech downed Clemson 79-61 and unranked Maryland upset No. 4 North Carolina 85-75.

In Saturday's semifinals, Duke took on Virginia in the opener and the Terrapins met Georgia Tech, the defending tournament champion, in the second game.

"Wake Forest opened our eyes," said forward Mark Alarie, who scored 22 points to lead Duke to its 14th straight victory. "We're going to have to play a lot better if we're going to win" in the semifinal.

Guard John Johnson said Virginia will be ready for the Blue Devils.

"I think we're confident," Johnson said. "Going into the game, I don't think there's any doubt about our chance to beat Duke.

"We have a good chance of going to the championship game, and a good chance of winning it," he said.

The Blue Devils, 30-2, led by as many as six in the first half against Wake Forest before the Demon Deacons sliced the lead to 37-36 at intermission.

Duke never trailed in the second half, but was unable to stop Wake Forest, 8-21, until the final minutes.

"Hopefully, we've got this game behind us ... and we're going to play a little better" Saturday, Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

Wake Forest was led by Rod Watson with 20 points, while Charlie Thomas added 17 and Mark Cline 10.

The Cavaliers, 19-9, were not assured of advancing into the second round until Bennie Bolton's corner jumper from the right missed everything with three seconds left.

N.C. State led by three early, but the Cavaliers rallied to grab a 28-27 lead at the half. Virginia upped its lead to 38-29 with 15:43 left on Mel Kennedy's 17-foot jumper. The Wolfpack rallied to cut the lead to two several times but could not get closer in falling to 18-12.

Johnson said the Cavaliers will have to concentrate on offense to have a chance to beat Duke.

"I think what we're going to have get good perimeter ball movement," Johnson said.

Olden Polynice, who scored 16 points, agreed.

"I think it's going to be a very physical game. Duke is the kind of team that puts pressure on all five guys and you've got to concentrate on running your offense against them," Polynice said.

Jeff Baxter scored 21 points as Maryland rallied from a 34-28 halftime lead to beat North Carolina for the second straight time.

The Terrapins, 18-12, outscored the Tar Heels 18-3 in the first 6:18 of the second half to go up 46-37. The Tar Heels cut it two but could get no closer in losing for the fourth time in five games to fall to 26-5.

Knights Gain Berth In Finals

WALKERTOWN — Greenville Christian Acacdemy's boys' basketball team topped hosting Gospel Light Academy, 43-38, Friday to advance into the championship finals of the N.C. Christian Activities Association tournament here.

GCA's girls, however, bowed to Vandalia Christian, 62-48, and fell into the consolation championship contest.

GCA was to meet Eastern Carolina Christian Conference co-member Falls Road for the championship Saturday. The Lady Knights took on Faith Christian, also an ECCC member, in the consolation bracket.

The Knights jumped out to a 16-10 lead in the opening period of the boys' game and were never headed. They completely dominated the second quarter with a 14-4 advantage, running out to a 30-14 lead.

Gospel Light rallied in the second half, outscoring GCA 14-6 and 10-7, in the two periods, but it wasn't enough to overcome the lead.

"Our early transition game got us the lead," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "We felt we had to get an early lead since we were playing on their home court. We controlled the boards and did well at the free throw line. Toward the end of the game, we had some turnovers and that helped them to make it a little closer, but we hung on to win it."

Paul Hollingsworth led GCA with 15 points while Derek Leupen and Robin House each hit 10. Gospel Light was led by Greg Willard with 22 points.

Vandalia eased out into a 14-9 lead after one period of the girls's contest, then outraced the Lady Knights to the half, 17-14. That gave Vandalia a 31-23 edge at intermission.

Vandalia continued to hold sway in the third period, 12-10, and outhit Greenville, 19-15, in the final quarter to wrap it up.

"We still haven't gotten on track up here," Thatcher said. "Of course, Vandalia had something to do with it, but we could have been more intense. We had the opportunity to do some things, but the ball just wouldn't go into the basket."

Red And Orange In Big East Final

By The Associated Press

The War had just begun in the Atlantic Coast Conference, and already there were casualties. North Carolina and North Carolina State were out, top-ranked Duke had to scramble and even Georgia Tech got a few scratches.

The fourth-ranked Tar Heels lost 85-75 to Maryland, eliminated in the first round of the ACC tournament Friday night for the first time since 1973. North Carolina now has lost four of its last five.

"We certainly would have liked to have gone farther in the ACC tournament," Tar Heels Coach Dean Smith said. "We will try to regroup for the nationals, and we will show up."

In the other ACC games, Virginia upset No. 20 N.C. State 64-62, Duke was sorely tested in beating underdog Wake Forest 68-60 and No. 6 Georgia Tech won a temper-testing battle with Clemson, 79-61.

In other tournament games involving ranked teams, No. 2 Kansas beat Kansas State 74-51 and No. 15 Oklahoma defeated Missouri 78-75 in the first round of the Big Eight tournament, and No. 3 Kentucky beat Louisiana State 61-58 in the semifinals of the Southeastern Conference playoffs.

Also, No. 5 St. John's defeated Villanova 75-64 and No. 8 Syracuse edged No. 14 Georgetown 75-63 in overtime in the semifinals of the Big East tournament; No. 10 Memphis State demolished South Carolina 100-59 in the opening of the Metro tournament, and No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas beat Fullerton State 75-65 in the semifinals of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association playoffs.

Big East

At Madison Square Garden, Walter Berry had 29 points and 14 rebounds to lead St. John's over Villanova and put the Redmen in the Big East final tonight against Syracuse. St. John's, 29-4, held its biggest lead, 72-56, with 2:32 to play on five quick points by Mark Jackson.

Georgetown forced overtime when David Wingate hit a jumper with nine seconds left to tie it 65-65. Rafael Addison then made 7-of-8 free throws, sending the 25-4 Orangemen into the final. Dwayne "Pearl" Washington led Syracuse with 21 points, while Reggie Williams and Wingate had 18 apiece for the Hoyas, 23-7.

Big Eight

A semifinal matchup of Kansas and Oklahoma was made in the afternoon games of the Big Eight tourney in Kansas City. Greg Dreiling scored 19 points as Kansas had an easy time with Kansas State in what probably was State Coach Jack Hartman's final game. The 60-year-old Hartman has said he would retire after his 16th season. He has 295 victories.

David Johnson converted a Tim McCalister steal into two points that boosted Oklahoma over Missouri. Darryl Kennedy had 23 points for the Sooners, 25-7.

In the evening set, Jeff Grayer's 18 points led Iowa State over Colorado 78-60, and Nebraska defeated Oklahoma State 82-75 as Harvey Marshall and Bernard Day got the Cornhuskers going early. The winners meet in the other semifinal.

Southeastern

In Rupp Arena at Lexington, Ky., James Blackmon scored four points and had a steal that set up the go-ahead basket, all in the final four

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said his club must do itself one better to beat the Yellow Jackets.

"Georgia Tech will be another tough assignment for us tomorrow," he said. "We will have to play even better against Tech than we did (Friday)."

Len Bias had 20 points for Maryland, while Keith Gatlin added 18.

Brad Daugherty scored 22 points, while Kenny Smith and Steve Hale had 14 each as the Tar Heels lost in the first round of the tournament for the first time since 1973.

The Yellow Jackets led 35-28 at the half and pushed their lead to 14 to up their record to 24-5.

The game was physical, with players on both sides squaring off twice in the first 10 minutes, although no punches were thrown.

In one incident, Price fell to the floor after getting tangled up with Clemson guard Grayson Marshall. Price thrw the ball at Marshall, who threw the ball back at Price.

"I usually don't get that excited, but it was heated out there," Price said. "It was no big thing.

"It was not so much I was angry but we wanted to let them know we wouldn't be intimidated," he said. "We wanted to let them know if they wanted to play a physical game, we can play a physical game. I think they got the message."

DHC Golfers Take Opener

ZEBULON — D.H. Conley opened the 1986 golf season with a ten-shot victory over Zebulon Friday, 351 to 361.

The match was played at the Zebulon Country Club.

Hall Dunn led Conley with an 85, low for the day, while Greg Siegel added an 87. John Pinner shot an 88, while John Parker and Russ Edwards both came in with 91.

Lennie Boyette was low for Zebulon with an 86, while Trey Gay had 87, Phillip Massey had 92 and Patrick Williams had 96.

Conley, now 1-0, travels to Havelock on Monday for a match with other Coastal Conference teams.

Rampants Capture First Victory

GOLDSBORO — Rose High School got onto the winning side of the ledger Friday afternoon, taking a 8-5 baseball victory over hosting Eastern Wayne.

"This was a very good win for us," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "They had beaten Rocky Mount (Big East co-favorite) in their first game, so for us to come back and beat them was a big thing for us."

The Rampants lost their opening game of the year to Havelock, 6-3, on Wednesday, but bounced back behind the strong pitching of Tim Clark, to gain their first victory.

"They were a better team than Havelock," Vincent said. "I was awfully pleased with the job Clark did against them." Clark, who went the first five innings, gave up only three hits, while walking and striking out an equal number. He allowed two earned runs.

"He kept the ball in the strike zone and low," the coach added.

Vincent was also pleased with the offensive job of Scott Davis, who had two hits and drove in two runs. "He got some big hits for us."

The coach was cited the defense for playing heads-up ball and committing only one error.

"Eastern Wayne has a good team and we played well against them. We were aggressive with the bats."

Rose started the scoring in the top of the second. David Daniels singled and stole second. He moved up with Davis reached on an error and scored on Robbie Ehrmann's double.

The Rampants picked up two more runs in the third. Mike Maxon led off with a walk and Tyrone Jones singled. They were sacrificed up and Maxon scored when Eric Jarman reached. Davis was safe on an error, allowing Jones to score and make it 3-0.

Eastern got onto the scoreboard with one in its half of the third. Carl Marshbanks tripled and scored on Anthony Sauls' ground out.

A second Warrior run came over in the fourth. Joe Roberts led off with a walk and Roger Smith singled. Mike Couture walked to load them up and a walk to Marshbanks forced in Roberts.

Rose padded its lead with two in the fifth for a 5-2 edge. Travis King doubled with one away and scored on Jarman's single. Daniels singled and a double by Davis scored Jarman.

Eastern closed it to 5-4 with a pair in the sixth. Couture walked and Greg Patterson did too. Kim Barrett singled in Couture and after both runners advanced on a sacrifice, Sauls' ground out scored Patterson.

Rose picked up what proved to be the difference in the top of the seventh. King reached on an error and Jarman doubled. Daniels walked to load them up and Davis singled in King. Ehrmann walked to score Jarman and Axel Smith's single plated Daniels for a 8-4 lead.

Eastern tried to rally in its half of the seventh, but could get only one. Roberts singled with one away and Smith walked. Couture singled to load them up and with two away, Barrett walked to bring Roberts home.

But reliever Eric Jarman fanned the next batter to preserve the win.

Davis and Jarman each had two hits for Rose while Roberts had a pair for Eastern.

Rose, 1-1 after the Friday game, was to face Greene Central on Saturday, then play host to Havelock on Tuesday.

Conley 10
Farmville C..... 2

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's baseball team romped to a 10-2 victory over Farmville Central Friday in a non-conference contest.

The Vikings had little trouble, banging out ten hits while holding the Jaguars to just four on the afternoon.

Farmville did strike first, however, pushing over a run in the top of the second inning. Mickey Vandiford singled, but was thrown out at second when Conley relayed Eddie Little's attempted sacrifice bunt to second. The throw on to first for the double play, however, went astray, and Little raced on to second base. He scored from there when Chris Ross reached on an error.

Conley quickly came back, scoring five times in the bottom of the second. Bronswell Patrick opened, reaching on an error and Benji Beacham followed with a two-run homer.

Butch Mills kept it alive with a walk and Amzi Hoffner singled. Jody Vines also got a hit, loading the bases. Mills was cut down at home on Shane Adams bouncer back to the mound which left the bases loaded. Fred Bryant then walked, scoring Hoffner, and Lee Hardee was safe on an error, scoring both Vines and Adams.

Conley went on to add four more runs in the third and one in the fourth. Farmville's other run crossed in the seventh inning.

Vines and Patrick each had two hits to pace the Conley attack while Hugh Moore had a pair to lead Farmville.

The Vikings are now 2-0 on the season and play at Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday. Farmville falls to 0-2 and will play host to Roanoke on Tuesday.

North Lenoir.....7

SNOW HILL — Greene Central High School gained a 12-7 victory over neighborhing North Lenoir in baseball Friday.

The Rams pushed over a run in the first, only to see North Lenoir come back with four in the top of the second.

But then in the bottom of the second, Greene Central broke it open with seven big runs to go up 8-4.

Michael Griffin led off the inning with a walk, and successive walks to Ken Grey and Scott Jones loaded the bases. Ervin Collins all but cleared them with a three-run triple and he scored on Gary Ginn's sacrifice fly.

Adrian Smith started another rally with a solo homer for the fifth run. Darin Radford reached on an error and Barry Ginn walked. Both advanced on a wild pitch and scored when Griffin, back up again, singled.

The Rams added one in the fourth and three in the sixth. North Lenoir got its other three in the top of the seventh.

Griffin and Collins each had three hits for Greene Central, Griffin adding a double and accounting for three rbi's. Collins collected five rbi's. Smith had two hits and two rbi's.

Gene Tyndall had three hits for North Lenoir and Ben Wiggins and Steve Quinn each had two. All three collected doubles.

Greene Central, 2-0, has a game Saturday at Rose, then travels to Goldsboro on Tuesday.

WILMINGTON — East Carolina University's softball team rolled up a pair of victories over UNC-Wilmington Friday afternoon in Wilmington.

The Lady Pirates took the opener, 6-1, and then came back with a 4-0 win in the second.

Stacey Boyette hurled the opener, allowing but two hits, while Robin Graves picked up the second win with a one-hit shutout. Graves, now 3-0 on the year, struck out six in her tour of duty on the mound. Boyette is now 2-0 on the year.

Jeannie Murray tripled for East Carolina in the opening game while adding a double in the second. Graves also banged out two hits in the second game.

East Carolina is now 5-0 on the season and travels to Francis Marion for a doubleheader today.

Rose, Conley Post Victories

GOLDSBORO — Rose High School jumped out to an early lead and then held on to take a 4-3 softball victory over Eastern Wayne Friday.

The victory was the second straight for the Rampettes, who downed Havelock in their season opener on Wednesday.

Rose scored all four of its runs in the first inning. Gina Parrott singled but went down at second on Vicki Parrott's grounder. Lisa Harkley singled and Kim Bridges got a hit to score Parrott. Lori Powell singled to lod them up and Melissa Pruden walked, scoring Harkley. Melissa Stanley singled to drive in both Bridges and Powell.

Rose later loaded the bases in the fourth and fifth innings, but failed to score either time.

Eastern Wayne rallied with two in the fourth and one in the seventh, but couldn't quite catch up.

Gina Parrott, Harkley, Powell and Casey Drewery each picked up two hits to lead Rose's attack. No one had more than one for Eastern.

"We hit the ball well, but each time we seemed to get something going, something would take us out of it," Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "Still, we hit the ball much better today than we did in the first game."

Conley, with the win, boosted its record to 2-0 on the season.

Conley got all it needed in the first inning, scoring four times. Cindy Eagle walked and Michelle Waters singled. Karla McLawhorn reached on an error, loading the bases. Trellaney Boyd brought all three home with a triple, scoring on Miriam Fulford's double.

Conley added one in the second, seven in the third, five in the fourth and two in the fifth.

Farmville scored both of its runs in the top of the fourth.

Erica Credle, Waters, Jackson, Fulford, Jenelle Gaylord, Rhonda Mills and Gale Cash each collected two hits for Conley.

No one had more than one for Farmville.

O'Grady Threatens To Sue The PGA

MIAMI (AP) — Mac O'Grady has threatened legal action against PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman and what the touring pro called "the tour hierarchy."

O'Grady, responding to a "notice of proposed disciplinary action" handed him by a tour representative, said he has "spent more than $20,000 in legal fees already. And I'll spend $100,000 if I have to."

The 34-year-old player did not specify the precise nature of the legal action he said he was considering, the exact charges that he would bring or when such action may be taken.

He noted that he has "30 days to respond (to the notice of proposed disciplinary action). We'll just wait until the 28th or 30th day — drag it out as long as we can, until we get them in the federal courts," O'Grady said Friday.

The proposed disciplinary action and O'Grady's response are the latest moves in a long-standing dispute between the player and the Commissioner.

It stems from a 1984 incident in which O'Grady was fined $500 by the Commissioner for remarks the players was alleged to have made to a female courtesy-car driver at a tournament in New Orleans.

In later statements, published while he was playing in tournaments in Honolulu and Los Angeles, O'Grady charged Beman with mismanagement of the tour and referred to him as "a thief with a capital T."

The latest disciplinary action against O'Grady arises from those press statements, the tour said in an unsigned memo dated March 7.

"Since the ... articles in question consisted mostly of personal attacks on Commissioner Deane Beman, the Commissioner referred the matter to Jack Tuthill for initial review and determination of whether a violation of the Tournament Regulations had occurred," the tour memo said.

Tuthill, the tour's Tournament Director, declined to discuss the situation. The nature and extent of the proposed disciplinary action was not disclosed. O'Grady said it was another fine.

O'Grady, in Miami while competing in the Doral-Eastern Open, said he would present his side of the case at some future date.

Public Hearings Scheduled

Sportsmen who want to have input into hunting, fishing and trapping regulations for the upcoming season should plan to attend a public hearing March 27 in New Bern. Public hearings on proposed changes in the 1986-87 regulations will be held across the state during March by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

"We encourage all interested sportsmen and citizens to attend these public hearings and give these proposals careful consideration," said Jerry Wright of Jarvisburg, chairman of the commission. "The public plays a vital role in the development of our regulations."

Proposed changes in regulations include establishing a Hoffman Game and Research Demonstration Area on the Sandhills Game Land, a mandatory check system for three games lands, eliminating the season limit for quail while reducing the daily limit from 10 to eight birds, and minor calendar adjustments.

President Elected

Dr. Charles S. Manooch was elected president of the North Carolina Wildlife Federation at the organization's 41st annual meeting Feb. 7-8 in Greensboro. The federation is the state's largest private conservation group.

"I am committed to building a stronger North Carolina Wildlife Federation. We have come a long way in the past few years and I intend to see us continue to grow and represent sportsmen's interests across the state," the new president said.

Dr. Manooch, 42, received his undergraduate degree from Campbell University and his M.S. and Ph.D. in zoology from North Carolina State University. He has been employed as a research fisheries scientist in Beaufort since 1972, and has been a federation member for more than 10 years. He has served on the federation's board of directors since 1981.

Other officers elected at the meeting are Terry Pratt of Merry Hill, eastern vice president; V.W. Cobb of Gibsonville, central vice president; Nolan Yount of Hickory, western vice president; and Nell Copeland of Lexington, secretary.

Fishing Tournament Begins

The 13th annual North Carolina Salt Water Fishing Tournament, sponsored by the North Carolina Travel and Tourism Division, begins March 15 and runs through Dec. 31.

Engraved trophies will be awarded to applicants who have caught and released alive the most qualifying fish of five eligible species: blue and white marlin, sailfish, tarpon and red drum (channel bass). These trophies are in addition to those traditionally awarded for those caught in 27 additional categories.

The tournament is open to anyone and there is no entry fee. Anglers who catch fish weighing over minimum weights must register them at one of over 50 official weight stations scattered along the coast.

Brochures listing tournament rules will be available after March 15 from Travel and Tourism Division, 430 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611, or call toll-free 1-800-VISIT-NC.

Shellfish Relaying

In an effort to assist shellfish leaseholders who would like to conduct relaying activities during the 1986 season, a representative from the North Carolina Division of Fisheries will be at the following locations:

- March 10, 4-5 p.m., Salter Path Food Mart, Salter Path.
- March 11, 4-5 p.m., Eugene Willis' Texaco Station, Atlantic.
- March 12, 2-4 p.m., J.R. Yopps' Tackle Snop, Sneads Ferry.
- March 12, 5-6 p.m., Durwood Bradshaw Hampstead Hardware, Hampstead.

Gun Storage Tips

If you're putting your shotgun or rifle up for the year, the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission offers some tips on storage.

All firearms should be unloaded and cleaned before being stored. Leather or synthetic cases are poor options for long-term storage because of problems with moisture and condensation. It's best to store firearms in racks horizontally or with the muzzle down so that oil will not seep into the stock and weaken it.

Firearms should also be protected from theft. A glass-doored gun cabinet is an open invitation to thieves, and it's much wiser to hide guns under lock and key. In fact, storing components in separate locations, such as the stock and receiver of a shotgun in one spot and the barrel in another, will foil casual theft.

Firearms should also be marked with your name and identifying number (such as a Social Security number) in a hidden location (under the butt plate or trigger guard). Also, keep a complete description of each firearm (year, make, model, serial number, identifying marks and scratches) and a color snapshot in your personal records.

Refinancing Volume Up As Rates Fall

By TOM MINEHART
AP Business Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Lower interest rates are spurring a frenzy of home mortgage refinancing in North Carolina, causing backlogs for some lenders and leading some analysts to wonder whether the activity is all good for financial institutions.

"The phone is ringing off the hook," said Jim Richardson, vice president for lending for Mutual Savings and Loan of Charlotte. "I'd say 60 percent of what we are doing now is refinancing."

"The volume has picked up tremendously," said Leb Dixon, Southeast District vice president for Cameron-Brown Co., a subsidiary of First Union Corp. of Charlotte. "We're already covered up with a backlog from the last rate change. Now we are trying to move our staff around ... finding a way a accommodate customers."

The rate for VA and FHA loans was lowered Monday to 9.5 percent, the lowest since April 1979 and down from a high of 17.5 percent in September 1981. People holding mortgages of about 12 percent and higher are flocking into financial institutions to refinance their homes and possibly save hundreds of dollars a month.

But the institutions may be in trouble if they convert loans that had been bringing in high interest rates into lower interest rate loans, said Mike Miles, professor of Urban Development at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"If you are taking the business away from some other lender, that's new business for your books," he said. "But they are in trouble if they are keeping the loans themselves, refinancing a 13 percent loan at 10 percent and keeping it on their books for the long term."

Some 60 percent of the home mortgages that lending institutions make are not kept, but are sold to investors on the secondary mortgage market, he said. "If they do that the question is, do they get a point or two points, or how much of what the borrower is paying do they (the lenders) keep?"

A point is a percentage point of the amount financed that the borrower must pay up front before he gets the loan.

Most of the fixed rate mortgages that North Carolina savings and loans make are sold on a secondary mortgage market, said Harry M. Davis, economist for the North Carolina League of Savings Institutions and a professor at Appalachian State University. Those kept by the savings and loans usually come with extra points, he said.

"A savings and loan would certainly serve 13 percent as opposed to 9.5," he said. "But every time it does a refinance, it gets fees, closing costs and points, so they do get instant income."

In addition, as interest rates fall the cost of funds to the institutions drops as well. "The cost of funds has dropped precipitously in the last three months," he said.

Richardson said most loans are paid out long before the term is up, so the savings and loans wouldn't be getting those high rates for very long anyway. In addition, people coming in to refinance are good for the company because "we get a shot at getting some deposit business."

It's probably not a good idea to refinance unless the new rate is at least 2 percentage points below the rate you are paying now, Richardson said. Dixon and Davis said they recommended a difference of 2.5 percentage points.

"Most people coming in are around 12, 12.5 percent, a few 13," said Richardson. "People that have 11 and lower — they are still sitting on the fence waiting for it to come on down as it is doing."

People who have adjustable rate mortgages are "sitting pretty" and may not have to consider refinancing because their interest rates are coming down automatically, he said. Others, he said, are refinancing because they are concerned rates will go up in the future.

To refinance, you first go to an institution offering good rates to take out a new application. Although you will have to pay for closing costs and other fees again "you usually come out a little cheaper than you did the first go around," he said.

If you use the same attorney, he may offer you a lower rate for repeat business, and reissued title insurance may cost less too, he said.

Refinancing requires a new appraisal, which means you will probably be paying for a more expensive house. But a higher appraisal also means you may be able to take some cash equity out.

For example, a $35,000 house at 12.375 percent would cost $333.14 a month in principal and interest. An owner owing $31,800, might find the house reappraised at $44,000. If the financial institutions would refinance at 80 percent, the loan amount would be $35,200.

Subtract the $31,800 you owe, along with one point origination fee, one point discount, attorney fees, title insurance, survey and termite letter fees, you would probably end with about $2,100 in cash. At 10.125 percent on $35,200, you would be paying principal and interest of $311.28 a month — about $22 a month less then before.

You also have to qualify once again for a loan based on your income and other expenses, especially if you are borrowing more money this time.

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT: Stain applicator test pads.

Manufacturer's claim — That these pads will eliminate the problem of determining how certain color stains will look on the furniture you wish to refinish ... That the pads are spongelike devices saturated with the 12 colors of the available penetrating stains ... that each pad is wrapped in protective foil, sealed and labeled with the color of the stain ... that a pad is opened and dabbed on the object to be stained ... that, after the stain dries rapidly, you will know exactly how it will look when fully applied ... that the stain is semi-transparent and penetrates deeply and uniformly ... and that this is one way to beat the trouble that occurs when stain "takes" differently on different kinds of wood.

THE PRODUCT: A disposable butane torch.

Manufacturer's claim — That this small torch lasts for thousands of lights, after which it can be disposed of without worrying about messy refilling ... that it has a unique pushbutton electric ignition ... that it has an adjustable flame control ... that it can be used to light barbecues, regular or gas grills, fireplaces, camp equipment, stoves, lanterns, campfires, pilot lights, furnaces, water heaters, cooking ranges, candles, hurricane lamps and non-electric portable space heaters ... that it should always be lit and adjusted away from the object to be lit ... and that it should not be used for cigarettes, cigars or pipes.

THE PRODUCT: A lightweight, portable sprayer.

Manufacturer's claim — That this all-plastic sprayer is ideal indoors or outdoors for any casual or professional pest control, weed control or sanitation job ... that a single pump-up is sufficient to spray the entire contents when filled to a recommended operating capacity of 1.5 gallons ... that it weighs only 4 pounds and is equipped with an adjustable carrying strap and pressure and release valve ... that there is an optional inflation valve, enabling the pump to be pressured in seconds by an air compressor ... that the injection molded plastic tank on the sprayer carries a 5-year warranty.

THE PRODUCT: An air conditioner specifically for casement windows.

Manufacturer's claim — That this rotary-compressor-designed model has a cooling capacity of 5,900 BTUS and an energy efficiency of 7.50 ... that its features include multi-directional air flow, a two-speed fan and an adjustable automatic thermostat ... that it has dual slide-out filters and is easily washable and reusable ... that it can be installed with the removal of a single pane of glass ... and that a pressure gasket built into the mounting flange seals all cracks and openings.

Q. Does North Carolina have a state insect?

A. Yes, the honeybee. It was adopted as the state insect on March 5, 1973.

Q. Please give some information about the Japanese zelkova tree.

A. The Japanese zelkova (Zelkova serrata) is a large, elm-like shade tree. It will reach a height of 50 to 60 feet and have a spread of 40 to 50 feet. Generally it has a short trunk with ascending branches. Japanese zelkova is considered a fast-growing tree and is resistant to most pests. It makes an excellent street tree or lawn tree. Japanese zelkova can be grown throughout North Carolina. Plant it in full sun or partial shade.

Q. When should pampas grass be cut back?

A. Pampas grass should be cut back before new growth begins in the spring.

Q. What houseplants do well in a window that receives direct sunlight for a large part of the day?

A. Many flowering plants do well in sunny windows. Some suggestions are geranium, Christmas cactus, wax begonia, kalonchoe and crown-of-thorns. Other plants that do well in direct sunlight are wandering Jew, snake plant, sedum, Moses-in-the-bullrushes, cactus and artillery plant. One caution, however, is that even some of these plants can be scorched by direct sunlight through glass, especially during the summer. Move the plants away from the window sill or draw a curtain or blind to protect the plant if the sun becomes too hot.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We will soon need a new roof. A friend says we can replace our asphalt shingles with wood shingles and have a roof that will last longer. Is this true?

A. — It's not that simple. While most wood shingles may last longer than most asphalt shingles, that is by no means true in all cases. Some premium asphalt shingles last longer than wood. However, that's not the main consideration. Wood shingles, because of their flammability, cannot be used in some places. In others, they are permitted if treated with a fire retardant. Don't make any decision ahead of time. Check into all angles, especially your local building codes, then decide what to do.

Q. — We are purchasing a passive solar house. It has a storage wall in the rear greenhouse that will catch the rays of the sun in the daytime and release them at night. The contractor says it is called a Trombe wall, but I can't find it in any of the dictionaries. What is a Trombe wall?

A. — A Trombe wall is usually made of masonry and will hold and release the heat as you explained. How effective it is depends a lot on where it is placed in relation to the sun and how thick it is. It is named after a French designer, Felix Trombe, who discovered the concept and created the wall.

Q. — I plan to build a patio. Can you tell me the advantages of different placements for the patio, since my house has places on all four sides for it? I would prefer it at the rear of the house, but I want the area to be free of sun at some period of the day.

A. — Your best bet in selecting the site is to observe the path of the sun around your house every day for a couple of weeks and write down what you see. You will soon know exactly which side of the house gets the most sun, which the least, which in the morning and which in the afternoon. Generally, a patio facing south will get the most sun, but may also require a roof.

Striking Workers Say Respect Is Goal

By BART ZIEGLER
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The 7,400 General Electric Co. workers on strike at three Massachusetts plants aren't seeking the usual — more money or greater benefits. They're looking for a change in management attitudes, leaders say.

"The issue of the strike is really respect, being treated like people, not like machines," said Ronald Malloy, business agent for Local 201 of the International Union of Electronic, Electrical, Technical, Salaried and Machine Workers.

One expert says the problems faced by the union stewards are part of the changing relationship between unions and management.

Malloy claims company foremen treat the union's shop stewards with disrespect. In addition, he says, the union wants answers to what it says are simple questions about company policy.

The strike, which began Feb. 21, has halted work on more than $1 billion of GE's contracts to build engines for F-18 jets, Army helicopters and other military aircraft. And a state labor official predicted it would begin to hurt the area's economy this week as the strikers curtail their spending.

The workers at the Lynn, Everett and Medford plants walked out after the company suspended a union steward who allegedly cursed at a foreman as the two argued over which workers were entitled to overtime.

Union officials say that was just the grievance that broke the union's back.

"The underlying cause of this action is that the grievance procedure, our problem-solving system, has completely broken down," said Kevin Mahar, president of Local 201.

Mahar said the company has refused to allow its foremen to solve simple grievances with stewards on the shop floor and instead has said they must go through the formal grievance procedure. The union says there are about 300 cases pending.

General Electric officials have contended the backlog of grievances has been addressed in talks.

GE spokesman William Kennedy could not be reached for comment Thursday, Friday or Saturday and did not return calls when messages were left at his office.

Union spokeswoman Alexandra Brown said negotiations resumed Saturday.

Malloy said the issue of whether stewards can handle simple grievances over contract matters is crucial because "they are the spokesperson for people on the shop floor."

Local 201 has about 220 stewards at the three plants, he said. Each is elected for two years by the workers they represent, typically about 50 employees of a floor or section of a factory.

"The stewards historically have been considered the backbone of the union," he said.

But that role is changing as the rigid lines between union and management are softening, said Robert McKersie, a professor of industrial relations at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"I think it (the strike) illustrates that the role of the steward today is under a lot of pressure," he said.

McKersie said companies increasingly are communicating directly with workers instead of going through the union. He said this is fostered by pressure on government contractors to increase productivity and keep strict account of costs.

He also said the issues that prompted the strike are unusual today.

"We're in a period where issues that have to do with settling grievances — how problems are settled under a contract — are pretty well worked out," he said.

Malloy agreed the reasons for the strike might be unusual, but said nevertheless the workers are solidly behind it. Members voted by a 4-1 margin last week in support of continuing the walkout.

Cities Face Money Woes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The loss of federal revenue sharing money this year will force cities to raise property tax rates by an average 25 percent if they are to maintain services, a survey of city leaders said Saturday.

Officials in 58 percent of the 655 cities surveyed said they anticipate a combination of tax increase and spending cutbacks because of the scheduled end of general revenue sharing.

The National League of Cities released its survey as some 3,500 mayors and council members from across the country were opening their three-day congressional conference in Washington on Sunday.

The officials have protested strongly the reductions in federal aid to local governments proposed by President Reagan in his fiscal 1987 budget. Their highest priority has been on reviving the $4.6 billion revenue sharing prorgram, the program of no-strings aid to cities that is scheduled to expire this fall.

"For half of the cities from 10,000 to 50,000 (population), general revenue sharing is their only source of federal funds," the league said in a report on its survey.

"Thus for a majority of American cities an elimination of general revenue sharing will mark an end to their financial relationship with the federal government."

The survey of cities and their finances showed a 25 percent tax increase was the average needed to replace revenue sharing money.

The impact was seen as greatest among small cities, with those under 10,000 people needing a 32 percent tax boost. Property taxes make up the bulk of the tax base for cities.

For cities over 500,000 in size, a 16 percent tax increase would be required, the surey said.

In addition to the 58 percent of cities planning to combine tax increases with spending cutbacks to cope with the lost federal aid, another 10 percent said they would seek new taxes to cover the full amount. Reduced spending alone was seen as the answer by 29 percent of the cities.

Streets and roads were listed most often, by 29 percent of the cities, as areas where cutbacks of 10 percent or more would be required.

Slightly smaller numbers of cities targeted either parks, recreation and libraries, or public health, welfare and aged programs for major cuts.

Eighteen percent of the cities reported that police, fire and jails would be cut back 10 percent or more.

Guild Membership

The Pontiac Master Sales Guild, A Pontiac Division sales recognition program honoring its top salespeople, has announced that five local people have achieved Pontiac Master Sales Guild status for 1985.

Bob Brown, Dick Greene, Robin Little, Sterling Manning and Wade Trask of Brown & Wood Inc., 329 Greenville Blvd, attained guild membership by placing in the top 20 percent among all Pontiac salespeople nationwide in 1985.

Pontiac Division's Charlotte zone manager will honor this year's guild members at its annual recognition banquet later this year. Sales goals for membership are set by Pontiac Division and General Motors Corp.

Earnings Rose

Heilig-Meyers Co. has reported that net earnings for the quarter ended Dec. 31 increased to $3,907,000 from $3,638,000 a year earlier.

The Richmond-based furniture company said total revenues increased to $57.3 million, up from $49.7 million reported last year.

For the nine-month period ended Dec. 31, net earnings increased by 9.6 percent to $10,489,000 compared to $9,569,000 last year.

Hampton Results

Hampton Industries Inc. reported that net sales for the fourth quarter of 1985 were $49,234,000 compared to $51,903,000 in 1984, a decrease of approximately 5 percent.

Net earnings during the period were $3,249,000 compared with $2,129,000 in the prior year, an increase of approximately 6 percent.

For the current fiscal year, sales were $157,013,000 compared to $162,855,000. Net earnings for the year were $3,223,000 compared to $4,404,000 in 1984.

Manager Relocates

Wayne Trull of Wayne Trull Inc., Goodyear Tire Centers, has announced the relocation of David Harris to the company's Dickinson Avenue location as service manager.

Harris, who was formerly service manager at Trull's West End store, has been associated with Goodyear for 13 years. He has attended several Goodyear training schools.

A Pitt County native and a 1970 graduate of Rose High School, Harris attends People's Baptist Temple.

Ferrell L. Blount III was elected chairman of the board of Blount Fertilizer and president and chairman of the board of Blount Petroleum.

Charles T. Hudson was elected president of Blount Fertilizer and re-elected executive vice president of Blount Petroleum. Hudson, who has been executive vice president and general manager of Blount Fertilizer for many years, has been associated with the Blount Corp. for 41 years.

John McNairy was elected first vice president of both Blount corporations and James H. Dupree was re-elected secretary-treasurer of both firms.

Cruise Seminar

Myra Garrett and Mary Wesley Harvey of Greenville Travel Center recently attended a cruise seminar in Raleigh, hosted by Cruise Lines International Association.

New Store Opens

Casual Corner has opened a new store at The Plaza, the Charlotte based corporation's 12 North Carolina unit, according to Ed Poole, president.

Poole said that nationally, Casual Corner has over 700 stores emphasizing career clothing for working women. He said the store also carries separate lines of clothing for casual as well as special occasions.

Rally Participant

Kathy Webster of Century 21 Janet Bowser & Associates in Greenville joined more than 1,200 participants from North Carolina and South Carolina at the biannual Century 21 sales rally in Charlotte to celebrate the 10-year anniversary of Century 21 Real Estate in the Carolinas.

The rally was designed to recognize the achievements of Century 21 agents and offices, provide additional educational opportunities, workshops and motivational seminars, and update the affiliates on new programs and services.

Account Executive

Gene Gray, president, and John Moore, general manager of WRQR-FM in Farmville, have announced that Barbara Ramey has joined the radio station's staff as an account executive.

Completing their service tenures were Marvin Curtis, shipping and receiving, 30 years; Dorothy Gardner, production, 14; Anneliese Smith, production, 19; Evelyn Williams, production, 24; Donald Dixon, maintenance, 25; Louise Reel, production, 31; Janet Smith, production, 32, and Peggy McClanahan, quality control, 32.

Additions Noted

WDLX-FM 93 in Washington, N.C., has announced that Pam Sheffield and Mac Cox have joined the firm's Greenville marketing staff.

Miss Sheffield is a 1985 graduate of East Carolina University and resides in Greenville. She has worked in the banking and retail sales industry.

Cox, a Washington native, attended Frederick Military Academy and ECU. He has previously worked in retail sales and broadcast marketing.

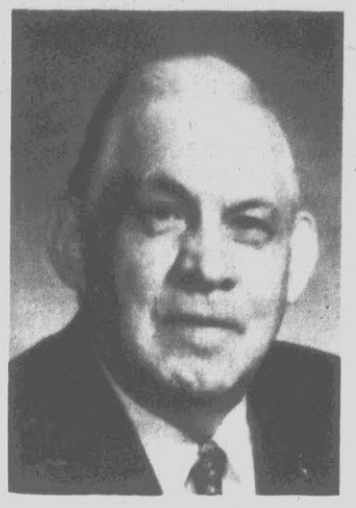
Regional VP Named

C. Donald Langston has been elected regional vice president for First Citizens Bank in Winterville.

Langston was formerly president and chairman of the board of First State Bank, which merged with First Citizens in 1985.

A Winterville native, Langston is a director for the East Carolina University Foundation. He is a former Winterville mayor and a former member of the Greenville-Pitt County Planning and Zoning Commission. He has served on several state committees and boards.

He was the recipient of the Winterville Jaycees' Distinguished Service Award in 1984 and was named boss of the year by Greenville Credit Women International in 1983 and 1984.



C. DONALD LANGSTON

Staff Member

University Realty has announced that R.E. Deans Jr. has joined the agency's sales staff.

The firm said Deans has over six years experience in sales, appraisals and development in real estate. He attended the University of North Carolina and graduated from Atlantic Christian College in business and economics.

Deans, a former chairman of the Farmville Planning Board, serves on the board of the Farmville Economic Council. He is a member of the Pitt, state and national realtor associations. Deans is a member of First Baptist Church and resides with his family in the Farmville area.

Quarterly Dividend

Directors of Eden headquartered Fieldcrest Mills Inc. voted last week to pay a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share on March 31 to holders of record March 17.

CLA Treasurer

William C. (Bill) Bowen, owner of The Clothes Hanger, a dry cleaners located at Carolina East Center, and the Wash House coin laundries, was elected treasurer of the national Coin Laundry Association at its annual meeting recently in Atlantic City, N.J. He was elected to the CLA board in 1983.

CLA is the Chicago headquartered trade association representing coin laundries throughout the United States and Canada.

Bowen is the founding president of the state Coin Laundry Association and serves on the board of directors of the N.C. Dry Cleaners Association.

Farm Cooperative

Southern States, Greenville, a new farm cooperative, has opened at the corner of Line Avenue and Chestnut Street.

The business occupies the former FCX Inc. retail facility and is a part of the distribution system of Southern States Cooperative Inc.

Wayne Williams, manager, said Southern States will carry lawn and garden items, as well as production supplies farmers need to operate their business.

Williams said Southern States Cooperative, a farm supply and marketing cooperative in Maryland, Virginia, Delaware, West Virginia and Kentucky, has bought most of FCX's assets in North Carolina and began operating in the state on Feb. 17.

Southern States was organized in 1923 as the Virginia Seed Service by 150 farmers who pooled their seed orders. It has grown to be one of the largest farmer-owned cooperatives in the nation, the spokesman said.

Staff Addition

Connally Branch of Clark-Branch Realtors has announced that Don Edmonson is now associated with the Greenville firm's sales staff as a residential specialist.

Edmonson, who has been in the Greenville area since 1976, received his broker's license in 1979. A graduate of Atlantic Christian College in 1972, he is a member of the International Entrepreneurs Association.

Edmonson and his wife, Nancy, have a 5-month-old daughter, Lauren, and are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

Training Workshop

Kathy Sprau, management supervision and personal development trainer/consultant in Greenville, recently conducted the third workshop on "Assertiveness Training for Women in Management" for career women of Kinston.

The seminar, co-sponsored by the Small Business Center of Lenoir Community College, will be repeated again in October due to interest and capacity classes, she said.

LCC officials said the session marks the first time in the history of the college that the same workshop will be presented for the same group four times.

Service Honor

Jimmy L. Packard, service foreman in the installation and repair department of Carolina Telephone, and Erma Gibbs, service representative in the commercial department, both in Greenville, were recognized recently for having completed 30 and 10 years of continuous service with the company, respectively.

A native of Cumberland County, Packard and his wife, Peggy, reside in Greenville. They have two sons and attend Oakmont Baptist Church.

A Belhaven native, Mrs. Gibbs and her husband, Samuel, reside on Route 2, Greenville, with their two children. They attend Woodstock Free Will Baptist Church in Belhaven.

Handicap Arrest

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A wheelchair-bound woman was arrested for blocking a bus after the driver wouldn't let her board because she didn't have a state permit for her wheelchair, police said.

Edith Harris, 62, was charged Friday with disorderly conduct and released on her own recognizance. She faces a maximum fine of $1,000.

She positioned her wheelchair in front of the Connecticut Transit bus for 40 minutes and more than 60 passengers were moved to another vehicle.

Harris detained a bus Thursday for 30 minutes, but was not arrested.

A spokesman for the Bureau of Public Transportation said Friday the permit ensures the safety of the handicapped rider because certain types of electric wheelchairs could fall off the buses' hydraulic lifts.

A Farmville native, Little is a graduate of Farmville High School and attended the University of Southern Mississippi and East Carolina University. He is a member of Farmville Presbyterian Church where he serves as treasurer.

Little is married to the former Jane Hobgood of Farmville and they have one daughter, Fran.

CT&T Director

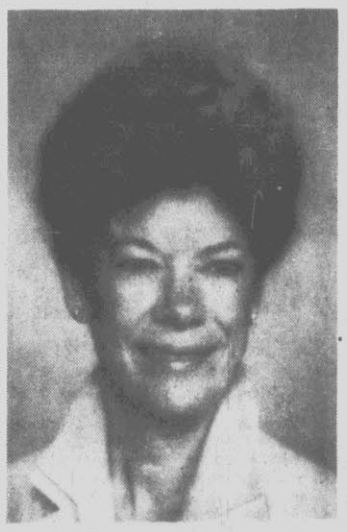
Janice Buck, a Greenville businesswoman who serves on the City Council and is a former mayor, has been elected to the board of directors of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co., according to Wayne Peterson, CT&T president.

Mrs. Buck is owner and manager of Buck Supply Co., a plumbing supplies and industrial air conditioning business. More recently, the company has established a computer management systems division, selling and servicing computers and designing and providing software programs.

Mrs. Buck, who was named "Citizen of the Year" by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce in 1974, was elected to the City Council in 1981 and served for two years as mayor pro tem. She was then elected to a two-year term as mayor and after choosing not to seek re-election in 1985, was successful in running for a two-year council term.

A native of Winterville, Mrs. Buck has three grown sons.

Peterson also announced the election of Robert (Bob) J. Currey, vice president of operations with CT&T in Tarboro, to the board.



JANICE BUCK

Designation Earned

Brian K. Jones, sales associate with Century 21 Bass Realty in Greenville, has earned the professional designation of Century 21 residential specialist.

Jones achieved the designation by participating in a series of training courses and production exercises taught through the Century 21 professional development and office accreditation program, CareerTrak.

Century 21 said the designation is granted only to brokers and sales associates who meet training and production standards in one of four career specialty areas — residential sales, investments, referral/relocation, and management.

Activity Level Up

The level of business activity in North Carolina moved up in January, according to the First Wachovia Business Index, registering 133.7, up 0.9 percent from the revised level for December.

Wachovia said the rise in the index was due to improvements in all four components. Nonagricultural employment, the average workweek in manufacturing and residential building permits increased, and new claims for unemployment insurance decreased 12 percent.

Nonagricultural employment in the state was up 0.4 percent. Manufacturing employment increased 0.1 percent in January, rising for the second time in 18 months. Gains were also posted in the textile, apparel, and machinery sectors.

Nonmanufacturing employment grew 0.6 percent. Higher employment was reported in construction, trade, and government, with the number of persons working in the service sector down slightly.

Kidney Stones Are 'Zapped' In Fayetteville

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Eastern North Carolina has become known in medical circles as the "kidney stone belt of the east," and not without some reason.

Approximately four people in every 1,000 along the coastal plain suffer from the problem. That's twice the national average.

Some of them may never be aware that they have kidney stones. Others are aware of it, painfully aware.

Kidney stones may cause a number of problems. Perhaps the most common is kidney colic, which can cause nausea, fever, and severe pain.

Kidney stones may cause the passage of blood in the urine. This can be in amounts that barely show or in bright flows.

In time, stones can grow to great size; they can damage the kidney, cause infection and could even result in the eventual loss of the affected organ, and thus become a life-threatening problem.

Over the years, there has been little that physicians could do for the kidney stone patient short of surgery. And like any surgery, it could be dangerous.

I know, for 20 years ago this year, I had my first attack of kidney colic and underwent surgery in Durham. (At that time, kidney surgery was not done in Greenville. Now kidney transplants are done here.)

Only my right kidney was involved, but because of an infection associated with the stones, I was in the hospital for a week prior to the surgery and then stayed another week following it.

My recovery was surprisingly rapid. I was able to return to work in just another week — two after the operation that removed five stones from my right kidney. The stones varied in size from about a half-inch to an inch in length.

Most who undergo surgery don't recover that quickly — many take up to six weeks before they are ready to return to work. It is costly, time wasting and painful.

At the time, there was no choice.

Now, however, there is a choice.

This past October, Highsmith-Rainey Hospital in Fayetteville saw the installation of a lithotripsy unit. It is a modern miracle for the kidney stone sufferer.

What this machine does is to "zap" the stones, crushing them into fine particles through repeated shock waves. The Highsmith-Rainey machine is one of four in the state. Duke University and Bowman-Gray both have them, as does a private clinic in Winston-Salem.

Highsmith-Rainey, however, is the only hospital in the state using the machine on a regular patient basis.

And despite the strides made by the East Carolina University's School of Medicine and Pitt County Memorial Hospital, it is considered unlikely that the lithotripsy machine will ever come here.

First off, it's expensive, costing about $2 million. The West German-made instrument is being doled out in this country sparingly. The state also must license new machines under a certificate of need.

According to Bob Hollingsworth, a physician's assistant, who is in charge of the lithotripsy ward at Highsmith-Rainey, it is unlikely that another machine would be awarded in the east.

Because of this, a group of 38 doctors from throughout the east, including Dr. Emmett Walsh of Greenville, have gone together to form Carolina Lithotripsy to run the machine in Fayetteville. Twelve of those doctors alternate coming to Fayetteville for four days every six weeks to handle the cases reporting.

After some problems in December of last year, it was decided that I needed to have the treatment. I had formed a new stone about 10 years ago and it was beginning to cause some problems. So Dr. Walsh booked me into Highsmith-Rainey for the treatment in early January. I chose a time when he would be there as the doctor in charge.

And while I didn't know what to expect, the staff of Highsmith-Rainey did all it could to let me know what's going on.

After going through admissions, the first stop is X-ray, where a simple KUB (kidney-ureter-bladder) shot is made. That helps to show the position of the stone(s) to be zapped.

Once I was settled in my room, Hollingsworth stopped by to fill me in on the procedure. He told me the history of the machine in Fayetteville, noting that (at that time) just under 400 patients had been "zapped."

He also tried to make me at ease, saying that he really was more of a "cruise director," who tried to make the visit one that would be enjoyed.

Later that afternoon, one of the nurses invited me and the other patients (I was one of six to be done the next morning) to view a film on lithotripsy. While somewhat on the technical side, it did tell us exactly what to expect.

(Hollingsworth told me that the hospital is now developing its own film which will be more patient-oriented.)

Later, Hollingsworth took me down to the lithotripsy room for a tour.

The machine is much like a very large bathtub, but deep at one end and shallow at the other. In the center is the electode "zapper" which sits down in a bowl-shaped depression. The shock waves come from that.

The bowl shape causes the waves to rebound and come together above the bowl. The patient is situated so that the greatest concentration comes exactly where the stone is.

Because the human body is composed mostly of water, the shock waves pass through without damage. But the stone, much harder, receives the maximum shock and slowly crumbles into dust and fine particles.

On each side of the bowl are two inflatable bags or balloons on which the patient rests during the treatment. They, too, help in proper positioning.

The patient sits in a "chair" which consists of a back and head-rest and leg rests. He is lowered into the tub and two fluoroscopes help position him so that the stone is just in the proper location for maximum shock effect.

The fluoroscopes also let the doctors keep track of how the crushing of the stone is going.

It all seems rather simple, but when it's you, it's never quite as simple.

The next morning, they began to take us down, one at a time.

When my turn came, I was given an IV (to prevent dehydration) and wheeled down to the waiting area, just next door to the lithotriper.

I waited, I could hear the "BANG, BANG, BANG" of the machine "zapping" the patient before me. The noise is like that of someone banging on the side of a metal desk or bucket.

A rubber glove was placed over my hand and wrist where the IV was, to keep water from it.

Then, heart monitors were attached. Experience has shown that the machine, if operated at random, can cause some heart irregularities.

So now, the machine is hooked up to the heart monitor and the patient's heartbeat actually keys the "zaps." Each time the heart rhythm peaks on the monitor, it fires — as long as the doctor holds down a switch.

About 20 to 30 zaps are given at a time, then there is a pause to check on progress. The whole thing takes about an hour and generally around 1,500 to 1,800 zaps are given a patient, depending on the size and consistency of the stone. I took 1,600.

Some people will have a bruise in the kidney area. If I had one, I never noticed it.

Then, it was time. I was taken into the lithotripsy room and helped into the "chair." While looking very uncomfortable, it is not.

What is uncomfortable, however, is the icy cold straps that are used to keep you stable in the chair. For some reason, no one has been able to tell me why they are so cold.

My arms were then wrapped in the packaging material that is commonly seen these days: plastic with a number of air-bubbles. These are also strapped on, and hooked together. Your arms thus float once you are in the tub.

Once I was comfortable, a drug was given me through the IV to knock me out. It was only seconds before I felt myself slipping away.

There are two reasons for putting the patient to sleep. First — Dr. Walsh said — it hurts. Secondly, and probably more important, when the diaphram moves up and down as a patient breathes, the abdominal organs also move somewhat. Use of the lithotriper has shown that the kidneys will move during breathing and maybe as few as one in three zaps will actually hit the kidney stone.

However, when the patient is put on a ventilator, his diaphram moves only slightly and the movement is much less, with nearly 100 percent contact on the stone.

Once I was asleep, a catheter was inserted into my bladder to assist drainage, and I was placed in the tub and the treatment was begun.

About an hour and a half later, I began to awaken in the recovery room and a half-hour later, I was back in my room, feeling fine.

Most patients at this point recover rapidly. Unfortunately, I had a reaction to a pain killer given me which made me quite sick, causing me to have to stay an extra day.

The other five patients in my "class" however, went home the following day, as did the nine zapped the following day.

For some, there was some discomfort in passing the particles of the crushed stone. For me, so far, there has been no discomfort.

The stone, of course, does not magically disappear. No, instead it must be passed over the period of several months. Patients are encouraged to drink plenty of liquids to help this process.

In some cases — about 30 percent — there are some colic problems during the months that follow. A very small percent need some type of additional surgery to completely remove the particles.

But the vast majority have no problems or very minor ones, if any.

When the patient leaves Highsmith-Rainey, he gets his personal "zapper" and a T-shirt, proclaiming he's been zapped.

A follow-up check is done of the patient in about two weeks, and others may follow if the physician feels they are needed.

Twenty years ago, it took two weeks before I returned to work. Today, 20 years older, it might have taken six weeks or more.

Instead, I was back at my desk on Monday, following the procedure on Thursday. But for the reaction to the medicine, I might have made it back on Saturday.

For those with kidney stones, this is by far the recommended treatment. In some cases, lithotripsy is not possible — your doctor can advise you. But for the large number, it sure beats the alternatives — the pain of suffering with the stones and the pain and time lost from surgery.

I know. I've seen both ends of the spectrum and know the difference.

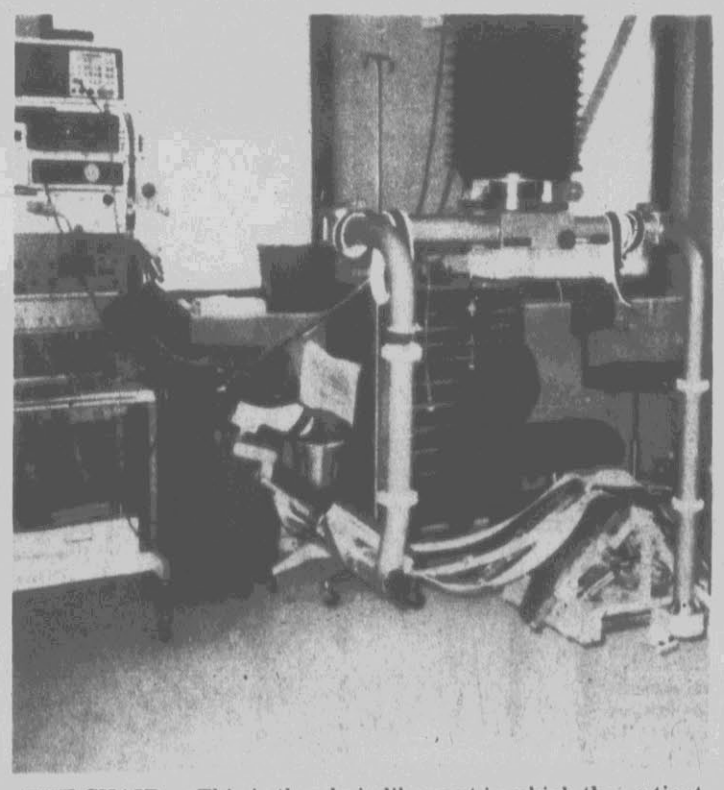
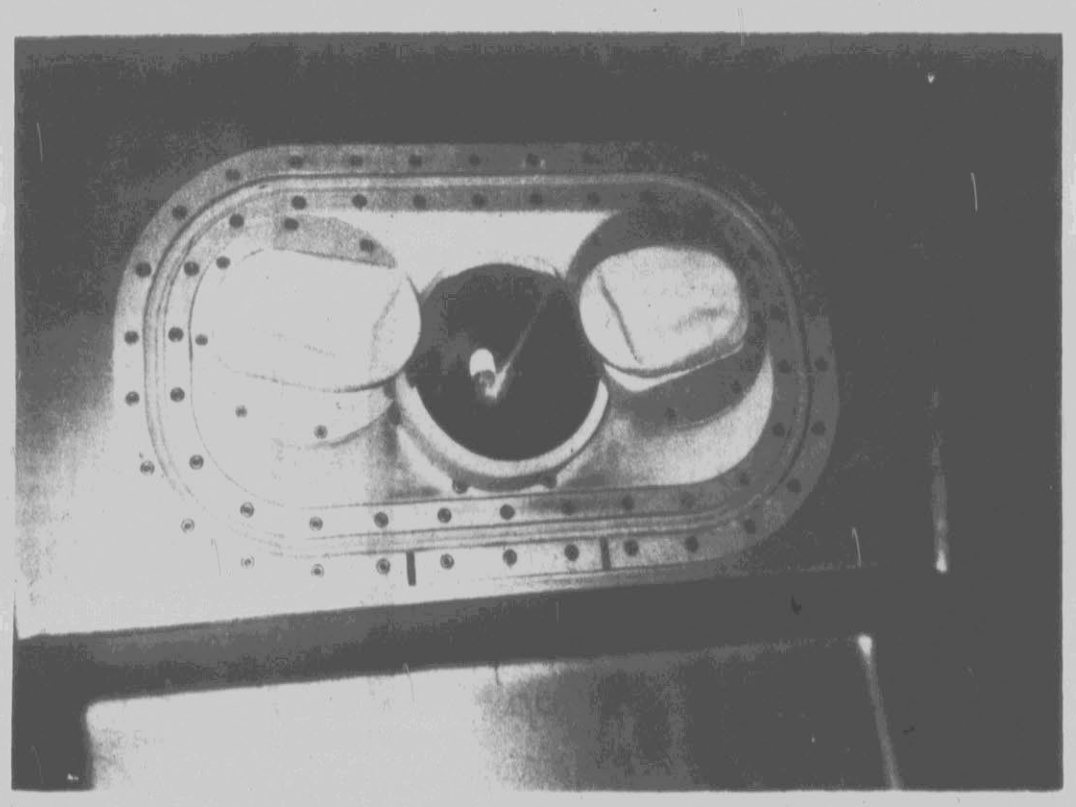
LITHOTROPSY — This is the tub, into which, when filled with water, a lithotripsy patient is placed for sonic wave treatment. The two objects at each side are fluoroscopes which help pinpoint the stone for crushing. The chair in which the patient sits is shown at left.



THE CHAIR — This is the chair-like seat in which the patient sits during lithotripsy treatment. It includes a head and back rest and leg rests. The straps hold the patient in place. Once in the chair and asleep, the chair and patient are raised and lowered into the lithotripsy tub.



SONIC WAVES — The sonic waves that break up the kidney stones arch out of the bowl shaped depression into which the electode protrudes. The two bag-like devises are balloons on which the patient rests during treatment when the tub is filled with water.

ABWA To Have Spring Event

The Greenville Pirate Charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association will hold a spring enrollment event March 19 at 7 p.m. in the board room of the Greenville Utilities Building.

According to club president Deborah Daniel, the event will revolve around the theme "Believe in ABWA," and will focus on personal and professional growth opportunities for women.

Founded in 1949, ABWA is a national organization with a membership exceeding 112,000 women who are employed in all aspects and on all levels of business throughout the United States and Puerto Rico. Enrollment events will be held by each of ABWA's more than 2,100 chapters during 1986.

The national association is dedicated to the professional, educational, cutural and social advancement of women. Last year, the ABWA national scholarship fund awarded more than $2,750,000 in scholarships to women students.

Feature of the local event will be the presentation by Barbara K. Cleary, marketing director for Home Federal Savings & Loan on "Presenting & Persuading." Mrs. Cleary is immediate past president of the Pirate Charter chapter and one of ABWA's Top 10 Business Women of the Year for 1985.

Women who are employed are eligible for membership in ABWA. For further information on the event, contact Laura Smith, enrollment event chairman, at 756-9378, or Susan Thornton, membership chairman, at 752-2222.

Fostering Child's Independence Should Start Early

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

As a small child, Linda learned that by acting helpless she could get her parents to do everything for her. Her crying brought whatever she wanted. Her parents, by catering to her demands, were encouraging Linda to be dependent.

In her teen years, Linda went blindly along with anything her crowd did — including using drugs. Now, at 21, Linda continues to pay for her years of dependence. An unplanned pregnancy is forcing Linda to leave college less than a year shy of graduating.

Linda never learned to make smart choices because Mom and Dad always made them for her. What's more, Linda's parents failed to understand that independence takes many forms throughout a person's life.

Children who have been taught a healthy sense of independence can stand up to whatever the world throws at them. You can begin teaching your kids to stand on their own feet earlier than you think, according to the March issue of Better Homes and Gardens.

For a 2-year-old, independence literally means standing up on your own two feet. For the grade school student, independence also means making your own decisions. During adolescence, youngsters begin to find that independence means taking responsibility for those decisions.

Independence rests on a foundation of skills that you must help your child practice every day. For example:

— Making decisions. Exercising good judgment is what independence is really all about.

— Working within limits. Healthy independence means being able to stay within boundaries when necessary.

— Doing a job. Acting responsibly turns independence into a positive force.

— Influencing others. This is independent thinking put to work.

Mastering tasks — and overcoming failure — leads to self-confidence, the key to independence. Even children as young as 2 or 3 benefit from learning to accomplish. They'll let you know (or "no, no, no") when they're ready to try things without your help. Older children, too, need to feel mastery.

What you can do:

— Look for learning opportunities every day. Stacking blocks or riding a bike — the activity is less important than your willingness to teach it.

— Praise accomplishment with a hug, a cheer and a smile. Good tries that fail deserve the same.

— Once a skill is mastered, don't accept backsliding.

Life for parents certainly is simpler when they make all the decisions. But unless kids get to practice simple decisions, they will never learn to make the big ones — like whether to take that first snort of coke.

What can you do:

— Remember even toddlers can make decisions. Two-year-old Jeffrey gets to choose between "meal" and "jooze" (milk and juice to the rest of us) for his midafternoon snack.

— Guide older children through complex decision. Juanita, 10, is working on a decision about which summer camp to attend. With her parents' help, she has written for information about several camps. She's leaning toward a computer camp, but likes the idea of learning archaeology at a camp run by a local college.

— Dont' wait until your child leaves home to trust him or her with big decisions. Amy must decide whether to attend college. Her parents insisted she apply to several schools, but the decision on whether to go is hers.

A world without the security of known boundaries is a scary place. Your child may howl when restrictions are first set, but limits relieve him or her of one more thing to worry about. Also, your child gains self-control by learning to act within your limits.

What can you do:

— Decide whether your child needs physical or spoken limits.

— Let your child participate in the setting of some limits.

— Reward staying within limits; don't just punish transgressions.

Having a job — especially one that is paid in gratitude — is a well-worn road to independence. Every child should be given some chore to do. Regular chores develop responsibility, an inseparable partner to successful independence.

What you can do:

— Young children should enjoy their jobs. Try to find a good match between child and chore.

— Older kids should be committed to regular tasks.

— Good jobs teach responsibility toward others. Caring for younger siblings fits into this category.

We all carry around in our heads an image of ourselves. In large part, this image is a reflection of how others treat us. You can help your children develop a positive self-image by treating them as people worthy of your respect.

Dear Abby — By Abigail Van Buren

'Reasonable Question' Is Still Rude

DEAR ABBY: I was born some 60-odd years ago, right in Los Angeles, Calif., in the United States of America. I am an American!

My parents were born in the Orient. Thus, I am of Oriental extraction, and I look it.

When I am introduced to a Caucasian, I would not think of asking the person his or her race or ancestry. So why do they always ask me "what am I" within five minutes of being introduced to them?

Thank you for letting me get this off my chest. Sign me ...

ONE HUNDRED PERCENT AMERICAN

DEAR AMERICAN: It's rude to ask personal questions at any time, but because the average Caucasian doesn't know a Chinese from a Japanese, Cambodian, Vietnamese, Korean or a Thai, the question "what are you" seems reasonable. But it's still rude.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of people who would send a scantily clad stripper to a family man's party where his wife, family and friends are celebrating his birthday?

As a wife who has had this experience, I can tell you it is unpleasant and embarrassing to watch another woman do a striptease dance for your husband.

Please help me send a signal to those insensitive, boorish people: Save the strippers for bachelor parties!

TEED OFF IN TEXAS

DEAR TEED: Help you? I'll send it for you.

DEAR ABBY: I am terrified of reports that heterosexual women who have had many lovers may have contracted AIDS as far back as 10 years ago. Following my divorce five years ago, I was very promiscuous. I caught herpes, which I have accepted as due punishment, but now the possibility of having caught AIDS during that time is making me crazy.

I've given blood regularly for the last six years and have never received an AIDS notice from the blood center. I am no longer promiscuous.

What are the facts regarding promiscuous and formerly promiscuous women and AIDS? How many years must I fear retribution for that phase of my life? And how would you define promiscuous?

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: A person who has a sexual relationship going with more than one person at a time is promiscuous. The more partners, the greater the chance for exposure to AIDS—particularly if you have had sex with promiscuous men, a bisexual or a person who has had sex with a bisexual, intravenous drug users or their partners.

Both herpes and AIDS are caused by viruses. AIDS is the result of a breakdown of the immune system, making one vulnerable to any number of diseases. While the incubation period of the virus is not known at this time, it is estimated to be as long as five years.

Herpes and AIDS are no more "divine retribution" than polio, multiple sclerosis, leukemia or chicken pox.

Nothing can be done to undo your past, but the best way to minimize the risk of getting AIDS is to use a condom religiously. If you're still concerned, see your doctor for a blood test.

FOCUS On...

D.H. Conley High School

By MICHELLE DEAL

"Conclusions reached as a result of the self evaluation reflect an honest effort to recogize the strengths and needs of D.H. Conley's total educational program," explains Ms. Barabara Rouse who headed the steering committee for Conley's recent reaccreditation.

An accreditation team consisting of consultants representing the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) visited D. H. Conley High School March 5-6.

The purpose of the accreditaiton is to encourage or to stimulate improvement in secondary school programs. It is a systematic approach in which "the school" may receive a candid look at its existing strengths and areas of concern.

A school is reaccreditated every ten years. The first phase is called a self-study in which the entire school program is assessed. Teachers, administrators, students and parents participate in the assessment.

Conley's administration and staff prepared for reaccreditation by conducting a two year self-study of every aspect of school life at Conley. Areas of study include administration, staff, quidance, student activities, each course in the educational program, custodial staff, and school facilities. Strengths, areas of concern and goals have been identified in all of these self-studies.

Preparation for accreditation was a united effort; many of the students at Conley helped by serving on the various self-study committees. Members of the JROTC directed tours of the building on the night of March 5 and offered directions to the visiting team as they moved about the building.

Members of the Future Homemakers of America served as hosts and hostesses at the SACS banquet March 5; the D. H. Conley Band and students in Conely's dance classes performed that night. In addition, the art classes designed and put up bulletin boards and banners throughout the building.

The second phase involved an evaluation by a visiting committee of professional educators who provide an unbiased opinion of the school. The third and most important phase involves an analysis by the staff of the first two phases. Consequently, teachers and administrators may then set priorities in order to work toward improving the total program.

During the fifth year, an interim evaluation is conducted after the self-study to determine how well the school is working on the priorities. A revision of these priorities is given for the next five years.

Schools are accreditated on the basis of their ability to meet predetermined standards. A school may request its consideration for accreditation once it has completed the ten year process. If it successfully meets the set standards created by SACS, it receives its accrediation of membership.

A school's accreditation is very important to the students. For instance, a senior attending a non-accreditated high school might not be accepted into the college of his choice merely because his school was not accreditated. Also, a school's educational program meets national educational standards.

The Commission on Secondary Schools was first organized in 1912. Thirty-nine members representing thirteen states presented the first list of schools to be accreditated by SACS in 1913. Each state committee consisted of three members, two of whom were college employees and the third a preparatory school administrator.

Today the size of state committees has increased. There are now one hundred and thirty-one commission members representing over four thousand schools in eleven states and the coutries of Latin America.

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools accredits schools in Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. It also accredits schools in Mexico, Central and South America, and the islands of the Caribbean.

The visiting team consists of principals and teachers from other high schools in the state, professors from universities and community colleges, and representatives from the State Department of Public Instruction. Some of the schools represented by the team members at Conley were East Carolina University, St. Augustine College, Tarboro City Schools, Southwest Edgecombe, Broughton, and Washington high schools.

Women Seeking To Increase Showing In Senate

By SANDY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It has the look of a classic political matchup:

On the Democratic side, a five-term U.S. representative whose liberal roots run deep in state and local politics.

On the Republican side, a top White House aide whose conservative credentials include a combative stint on the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

Both are candidates for the U.S. Senate in Maryland.

And both are women.

If Barbara Mikulski, Democrat, and Linda Chavez, Republican, win their respective primaries on Sept. 9 — and both are considered front-runners — it would mark the first U.S. Senate race in which voters choose between women.

The prospect is exciting to the women's groups that have fought long and hard to put women in the nation's top elective offices. Although 15 women have served as senators since 1922, it was not until 1978 that a woman — Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas — was elected in her own right without following a spouse into office.

Today, Mrs. Kassebaum and Sen. Paula Hawkins of Florida are the only two women U.S. senators.

This year, 10 women are running for the 34 Senate seats at stake — still not a large number, but a better show than in years past.

"It's going to take a while before we all wise up to the fact that there's not just men on this little globe," said David Narsavage, communications director of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, which recruits and helps candidates. "We've got some years to go before we're up to parity in terms of representation, male-female."

Political observers believe that several of the 10 women seeking Senate seats can win in November. "None of these are sacrificial lambs," said Rosalie Whelan, executive director of the National Women's Education Fund.

Added Celinda Lake of the Women's Campaign Fund, an independent bipartisan committee devoted to electing women:

"This is the most exclusive, most expensive club in the world. Senate seats in this country cost more than prime minister seats in a lot of Western European countries. It is a tough club to break into. Women have a very good shot this time."

Of the 10, two are consistently mentioned as having excellent chances of victory: Ms. Mikulski and Democratic Lt. Gov. Harriett Woods of Missouri.

Ms. Mikulski and Miss Chavez are seeking the Senate seat being vacated by Republican incumbent Charles McC. Mathias.

Ms. Mikulski served as a city councilwoman in Baltimore for five years before challenging Mathias in an ill-fated 1974 race. She then served 10 years in the House.

"For women there are no shortcuts," she said in a recent interview.

"It's far different than when I started out in 1977. When I knocked on my first couple thousand doors, being a woman was definitely a liability. I no longer find that," she said.

The GOP's Narsavage said women have been reluctant to take on Senate races because they don't want "to put up with that kind of psychological harassment that a woman is subjected to when running for office. Anyone who runs for office is going to be subjected to intense public scrutiny, but the spotlight shines harshest on a woman when they run."

Geraldine Ferraro chose not to run against New York Sen. Alfonse D'Amato this year, citing a Justice Department probe into financing of her first congressional bid in 1978. In 1984, as the first female vice presidential candidate from a major political party, Ms. Ferraro underwent a gantlet of negative publicity about her family finances.

In Maryland, if Ms. Mikulski wins the Democratic primary — and polls give her a 2-to-1 edge over Gov. Harry Hughes, who has not announced his candidacy, and Rep. Michael Barnes, who has — chances are her general election opposition will be Miss Chavez, a former Democrat who resigned as the highest-ranking woman in the White House to take on the Senate race with President Reagan's blessings.

The two-woman showdown, if it comes about, would be a first. Ms. Lake said it would offer voters "two women with distinct contrasts in ideological positions."

Mrs. Woods is expected to make a second bid for the Senate, after losing in 1982 to incumbent Sen. John Danforth after her campaign ran out of money in the crucial closing weeks before the election. In 1984 she rebounded to win the lieutenant governor's office, the only Democrat to win statewide office in a Republican sweep.

This year her competition for the seat being vacated by Democrat Thomas Eagleton probably will be former Gov. Christopher Bond. She said she will need $4 million to win.

"It's a very sad commentary on our system but it's the truth," she said of the money. "I feel I'm able to raise money but one reason is I've been through it before. I'll look anyone in the eye and say I want $1,000. I'm not timid."

The Missouri and Maryland races are pivotal to the Democrats' efforts to recapture control of the Senate, Ms. Lake said. The Democrats must pick up four seats to turn around the Republicans' existing 53-47 advantage.

Mrs. Hawkins, up for re-election, is said to be the Republicans' best chance of the 10 women. She has raised a formidable amount of money — $2.8 million so far — but she faces a strong challenge from Florida's popular Democratic governor, Bob Graham.

Rep. Bobbi Fiedler was considered a front-runner in the crowded GOP primary in California to challenge Democrat Alan Cranston in November. But then Fiedler and a long-time aide were indicted on charges they offered to pay off a rival's $100,000 campaign debt if he would withdraw. Despite an upcoming trial, she has vowed to continue her bid.

State Sen. Martha Ezzard of Colorado is in a three-way GOP primary, the winner to face Democratic Rep. Tim Wirth for the seat given up by Sen. Gary Hart. She is given even odds against millionnaire Terry Considine, who is son-in-law of the state's GOP chairman, and ultra-conservative Rep. Ken Kramer.

In Indiana, Jill Long, a university professor, won the Democratic Party's endorsement for the Senate, usually tantamount to the nomination, but faces an uphill battle against Sen. Dan Quayle.

In Illinois, state Rep. Judy Koehler recently got a lift when House Republican Leader Robert Michel endorsed her candidacy against steel executive George Ranney Jr. The winner of that contest will try to end Democrat Alan Dixon's Senate career at one term.

Two women are running in a field of seven Democrats for the Senate nomination in North Carolina. However, wealthy Charlotte businesswoman Kathryn Harper and state education official Betty Wallace are given little chance; former Gov. Terry Sanford is leading the field.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Using too many different colored oriental rugs in one room is a mistake. It is best to use three basic colors in a room in varying proportions. For example, if one had an 8x10 foot rug in dominant rose with a blue and ivory border tying a conversation grouping together and the room was large enough to use a 3x5 rug in front of the fireplace, it would be best if the small rug had a dominant background color of ivory with a rose and blue border.

Always go with a different design. If your area of concentration is small and you want it to look larger, still use different design rugs with the same background color. For example, one could have a center medallion and another could have an allover design.

Remember, the correct size for a dining room rug is 2 feet from the edge of the table to prevent one's chairs from rocking.

Keep in mind that handmade oriental rugs appreciate in value while machine made rugs depreciate.

We have just received a large shipment of new oriental rugs and dhurries in a wide variety of sizes, colorings and designs. These rugs are exquisite and represent the most beautiful available. We invite you to come in and browse. You will be pleased at our quality and affordable prices.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Okay, all of you mothers out there, (and you all know who you are), line up and pay attention.

How many of you have received gifts from your children that you have stored away and never used?

I see the mother who received a frog playing the banjo has her hand up. And the mother whose twins bought her hoop earrings lit by batteries. And what about the mother whose son bought her a religious picture made out of bottle caps at a garage sale? C'mon dear, up, up, up!

We've all been there. We like to think our image would be one that would be rewarded with taste and style. This is not usually the case. Recently, I suffered an acute guilt attack and brought out all the treasures of Mother's Day/Christmas/Birthday past and spread them out before me.

There was the "Irma" doll. It's about 10 inches high and was purchased by one of my children for me on a trip to Mexico. The story is it's a replica of the dolls used by prostitutes to put in a window so that a prospective "partner" can simply point to the doll of his choice. This one has black hair, pink cheeks and "IRMA" printed across the chest of her lavender underwear. He thought the coincidence was amusing.

There's a piece of tapa cloth that measures 20 by 16 feet. Because of its religious significance, it cannot be used to walk on. The only wall it would fit is possibly the Great Wall of China. It has been stored for six years.

The bright purple sweater with two poodles dancing with one another is a cardigan. The poodles have sequined eyes and tails. One of my kids thought it would bring back memories of the '50s.

A large chunk of wax that weighs about 20 pounds came with a candle-mixing kit. Every time during the last 10 years when we open a cupboard door and the chunk of wax falls out, my husband asks the same question, "What is this and why are we keeping it?"

Every year since I received it, the box of bikini underwear has been taken out of the box, thought about, then returned to the box. I keep thinking there is something I could use them for. Folded once, they would make great coasters for drinks, but they're too slippery. A slim possibility looms that perhaps one day they might fit a grandchild ... who is toilet-trained at three months.

There's a needlepoint kit showing a scene of two Persians fighting in Baghdad. It's a wonderful gift for someone who joins a religious order dedicated only to prayer and needlepoint. I finished one saber and my vision was blurred for months.

Why do I keep this Pandora's box of memorabilia? Why don't I just pitch it and get on with my life? If you have to ask, don't call yourself a mother. We're the orginal keepers of baby teeth, hands that have been traced and framed, cards made out of construction papers and little baskets holding 15-year-old jelly beans.

Besides, maybe I'll put the "IRMA" doll in the window and see what happens. You never know.

Cuba Today: Stevie Wonder Si, Reagan No

Castro's Land Has More Prosperity

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

HAVANA (AP) — Cuban officials have instituted a number of changes over the past decade, backing away from doctrinaire Marxism in favor of a more pragmatic approach and injecting far more variety into what was once a lean cultural menu.

Today's Cuba seems more prosperous and relaxed, particularly in contrast to the early 1970s, when the country existed in angry isolation.

While essentially still socialist, Cuba has introduced a number of innovations aimed at raising production and public morale.

Private farming has been reintroduced on a modest scale as part of an accelerating emphasis on providing material rewards for hard work. And, after operating for a quarter century as the nation's landlord, the government last summer began granting home ownership to residents.

At a recent Communist Party Congress, President Fidel Castro said the country's economic growth averaged 7.3 percent over the past five years — "perhaps one of our most prolific and successful periods."

He said caloric intake is 2,900 per capita daily. For each 100 homes with electricity, 91 have television sets.

Nowadays, tourism is back in vogue, with visitors from South America and Europe swarming the city's hotels. At the resort city of Varadero, a two-hour drive from the capital, nine hotels are said to be on the drawing board.

However, only a small number of Americans are permitted to visit the island because of U.S. restrictions.

By welcoming tourists once again, the government is getting sorely needed foreign exchange and also is able to show off what it considers its accomplishments. Cuba's tourism earnings last year reached $87.3 million, more than double the figure five years ago.

And in a sign of the changing times, tipping, once discouraged, is now a widely accepted practice.

Last month, Cubans for the first time were allowed to patronize stores previously reserved for foreigners with dollars. The only condition is that the Cuban have a friend or relative abroad willing to open a "dollar account" for him at a local bank. The stores frequently are stocked with consumer items not always available to the average Cuban.

The U.S. government has few fans here, but American singers such as Stevie Wonder, Lionel Richie and Kenny Rogers have large and enthusiastic followings. Tapes from MTV, the all-music U.S. cable television channel, can be seen locally. American artists frequently dominate Cuba's "supertope" or top 10 charts.

Another indicator of the emphasis on culture is the existence of 50 theater groups and 59 art schools. Average yearly output of books is 40 million, with an increasing percentage devoid of political content.

The television fare has been upgraded with morning programming instituted for the first time a few years ago and with a far more lenient government attitude towards the number and variety of American movies shown allowed to be shown on television and at theaters.

Several Cubans said they believe Radio Marti, the Voice of America station tailored for Cuban listeners, induced authorities to adopt more varied programming. Radio Marti went on the air last May; there are no reliable estimates on the size of its audience.

Although Cuba has eased up in many ways, it remains a highly paternalistic society in which basic freedoms are sharply proscribed. Individualism is discouraged and there is an absence of independent inquiry.

One Cuban woman, resentful of the curbs on foreign travel said, "This is a totalitarian state."

Cubans have little choice but to accept the government's world view, the basic tenet of which is that the United States is an aggressive, expansionist power.

Citizens can question the way in which government policies are implemented but never the policies themselves. Cuba has sent tens of thousands of its forces to Angola, starting more than a decade ago, but there has never been a public debate over whether that commitment, now estimated at 35,000, serves the national interest.

Proportionately, there are more Cubans serving in Angola than there were Americans serving in Vietnam at the height of the U.S. commitment to that country. Thousands of other Cubans are deployed elsewhere in the Third World as part of the government's "internationalist" policy, which also includes the stationing of Cuban doctors in two dozen countries.

Castro said recently that capitalist countries live off wars "like vampires and buzzards," but the number of Americans who have died in international conflicts over the past 10 years is infinitesimally small compared with the number of Cubans.

Not surprisingly, the Soviet Union is portrayed in heroic terms. Reflecting its immense political value to the Kremlin, the Cuban government receives more than $4 billion a year in Soviet subsidies, enabling it to push ahead with medical and educational programs on a scale well beyond the reach of other developing countries. Cuba has been one of Moscow's most reliable supporters for almost two decades.

In 27 years of revolution, Cubans have learned that the way to get ahead is to go along with the government's agenda.

Castro said recently that 83.9 percent of all Cubans above the age of 14 belong to the Committees for the Defense of the Revolution. These are neighborhood watchdog groups whose main task is "revolutionary vigilance."

In a speech last month, Interior Minister Jose Abrantes exhorted policemen "to watch and control potential counter-revolutionaries."

Indoctrination is part of the student curriculum in Cuba. Over the past five years, Castro said more than 400,000 students graduated from schools for political and ideological training.

Virtually all elementary and secondary schoolchildren belong to the Young Pioneers, who engage in patriotic activities aimed at giving them "the purest socialist feelings and ideals," as Castro described it.

Last year, students 14 and 15 years old began receiving pre-military training. Castro has estimated that 80 percent of all Cubans capable of fighting are organized in defense units.

By his public statements, Castro has suggested he looks to the future with heady optimism, but Western analysts believe the situation here is less favorable than he portrays it.

They say the indoctrination in schools has not taken hold and that many youths are afflicted with cynicism and lack of purpose. Some youths are said to look on military duty more as punishment than as service to the nation, these observers say.

In one remote area of western Cuba, the high school dropout rate is reported at 45 to 50 percent.

But there is widespread agreement that today's Cuba is far more open-minded than it was in the 1960s when hundreds of priests were expelled or fled and university students who were practicing Catholics ran the risk of expulsion.

Castro, who once looked on Christians as a potential counter-revolutionary force, had several meetings with church leaders last year as part of what appears to be a process of detente after a generation of hostility.

The more tolerant attitude reflects the government's increasing self-confidence and the church's greater willingness to tend to the poor.

Most surprising to Cubans was the series of interviews Castro had last year with Frei Betto, a leftist Brazilian churchman, in which he said he sees "no contradiction between the ideas that sustain me and the ideas of that symbol, that extraordinary figure (Jesus)."

Two months ago, the interviews were published as a book, which has since been Cuba's best seller.

Archbishop Carlos Manuel de Cespedes of Havana said he believed the book would affect Marxists more than Christians because of Castro's generally favorable comments on Christianity.

Another sign of conciliation was a recommendation in the new draft program for the Communist Party that the beliefs of churchgoers be respected. The recommendation is expected to become official dogma in December when a party congress will convene to discuss the program and approve a final version.

Change has come slowly to Cuba over the past decade but appeared to accelerate after the Mariel boatlift in 1980, when more than 120,000 Cubans fled to the United States.

The government, apparently surprised by the depth of the discontent exposed by the boatlift, made some fundamental changes. One was the decision to allow farmers to sell a portion of their output privately for whatever price they could get.

Scores of private markets now operate in Havana alone, competing with state-run "parallel markets" which generally offer lower prices but less variety and poorer quality.

The major innovation of the system was that Cubans, long accustomed to limitations imposed by rationing, could buy as much as they wanted at both types of markets.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's largest radio telescope will be modified with a battery of new receivers to help the Voyager 2 spacecraft, which just passed Uranus, return more pictures from the planet Neptune in 1989.

The National Science Foundation announced Sunday that the Very Large Array (VLA) telescope in New Mexico will get new receivers to allow it to help pluck from the sky the very weak signals of the robot spacecraft.

Voyager 2, an 1,819-pound probe that has visited three planets since leaving Earth in 1977, is sprinting through the solar system toward the first spacecraft visit to Neptune, eighth planet from the sun, on Aug. 24, 1989.

Signals sent from the vicinity of Neptune, about 2.6 billion miles from the Earth, will be the weakest ever received from a spacecraft. They will be much weaker than the barely perceptible ones Voyager sent from Uranus, 1.7 billion miles away, during its flyby Jan. 24.

Because signal strength from the spacecraft decreases with distance, scientists must boost the power of receivers on Earth to retrieve data and as many pictures as possible.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to upgrade the existing three 230-foot-diameter antennas of its Deep Space Network in California, Spain and Australia. But adding the power to the VLA to this receiver bank should allow scientists to get an additional 1,000 pictures during the Neptune encounter, the foundation said.

The VLA is a Y-shaped network of 27 movable radio antennas, each measuring 82 feet in diameter. When operated together, the antennas, located 50 miles west of Socorro, form the largest radio telescope in the world.

The new receivers will allow the VLA to pick up signals at Voyager's frequencies, and this information will be combined with what is picked up by the Goldstone, Calif., deep space station to effectively double the collecting area, engineers say.

The new equipment, which will cost $5.5 million, is expected to be installed and ready for testing early in 1989.

The spacecraft, which previously visited Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus, is to pass as close as 2,200 miles above the cloud tops of Neptune, much closer than its 49,000-mile passage of Uranus.

With this closeness and the added receiving power of the VLA, scientists expect to get the same quality pictures as those returned from Uranus and its satellites, despite coming from a billion miles further in space.

Neptune, slightly smaller than Uranus, has a diameter of 31,000 miles, nearly four times that of Earth. The planet, which has two known moons, cannot be seen with the naked eye and appears as a pale green smudge through telescopes.

Formaldehyde And Cancer

Four-Year Study Turns Up 'Little' Evidence Of Link

WASHINGTON (AP) — An exhaustive study by the National Cancer Institute has found "little evidence" of a link between formaldehyde and cancer among factory workers, an institute researcher says.

The four-year study by NCI found that in 10 factories where formaldehyde was produced or used, the "deaths from all causes and from all cancers among the exposed workers were about as expected," according to the study scheduled for release today.

"The final overall one-sentence conclusion is that there is little evidence" linking formaldehyde to cancer in humans, said Aaron Blair, the NCI epidemiologist who directed the study. "I don't say there is no evidence — there is little evidence," he added in a telephone interview.

But another epidemiologist, Dr. Philip Landrigan, former director of the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, challenged that conclusion, saying he thought "the NCI study needs to be studied and gone through with a fine-tooth comb."

The study, co-authored by scientists from Monsanto and Dupont chemical companies, surveyed records of 26,000 workers dating to when they began work at the factories, some as far back as the late 1930s, Blair said.

The study did find a 32 percent higher level of lung cancer deaths among people who were exposed to formaldehyde for a 20-year period. But Blair said those "excesses do not appear to be related to level of exposure."

He said the excesses had to be explained by factors other than formaldehyde since the intensity of exposure to formaldehyde seemed to make no difference in the cancer rate. In other words, Blair said, those who were exposed to higher levels for long periods did not have more cancers than those with lesser exposures.

"The risk did not continue to increase as the level of exposure went up," he said. "And the 32 percent excess for lung cancer ... occurred among the very lowest exposed workers and the highest exposed workers."

Formaldehyde is used to make such products as plastics, textiles and plywood.

Vaccine Controls Rabies In Raccoons

By ERICH SMITH
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Scientists at the Wistar Institute have a vaccine to control a rapidly spreading outbreak of rabies in raccoons. Now they are trying to figure out how to make the raccoons take it.

So far it seems feta cheese, shellfish oil, turkey gravy, wild grapes and bananas are the tastes that raccoons really go for. Wistar hopes to use the smelly stuff some day to help spread its oral rabies vaccine to raccoons in the wild.

Rabies, a deadly disease to humans, has been spreading among raccoons from West Virginia toward the Northeast for about six years.

"It's our No. 1 problem," said Bruce Reimer, a spokesman for the Pennsylvania Health Department, which saw its number of animal rabies cases jump from 19 in 1980 to 168 in 1983 and 450 last year.

Skunks are the main carriers of rabies in the Midwest, and Canada is fighting the disease in foxes; the raccoons are a new and different problem.

People like to feed them. Many think of them as half-tame pets.

"It's probably one of the worst animals to come up with rabies," said Dr. Bobby Jones, an epidemiologist with the state health department. "They co-habitate very nicely with man. They find it's very easy to eat out of a dog's dish or a garbage can."

Raccoon rabies broke out in West Virginia about 1980. By 1982, that state had 43 reports of infected raccoons. A year later, the number had doubled before rabies cases dropped off in West Virginia and in Virginia, which had 545 cases in 1983. Meanwhile, officials reported 964 cases of rabies in raccoons in Maryland in 1984, up from 732 the year before.

Of the 450 animal rabies cases in Pennsylvania in 1985, 286 were raccoons.

"There's no way of knowing, but we certainly think the raccoons are giving it to other animals," Reimer said.

So far, no people have died from rabies contracted from raccoons, but many victims have needed vaccination after coming in contact with a rabid raccoon.Without vaccination, the disease in humans gradually spreads to the nervous system, causing convulsions, delirium and usually death.

Some natural barriers like rivers are in the way of the infected raccoons, Jones said, but they are likely to reach New York and Philadelphia some day.

"I hope we can stop it before then," he said.

Wistar, an independent research center, developed an improved rabies vaccine in the 1960s. Late last year, Wistar and Transgene SA, a biotechnology firm from Strasbourg, France, developed the first experimental oral vaccine for immunizing raccoons against rabies.

But how to get enough raccoons to swallow it?

In Europe and Canada, scientists have immunized wild foxes for rabies by putting vaccine inside chicken heads and scattering them over the countryside. For raccoons, the Wistar scientists knew they needed something else, but what?

After narrowing down the attractants, including cheese and shellfish oil, Wistar tested them in the wild.

Researcher Chuck Rupprecht flew over state game lands in five counties, dropping bait cubes with a different flavor over each one. Every 100 feet, he threw out a cube in a perforated plastic bag.

"It wasn't too bad, except for the shellfish," said Rupprecht, who was sick from the smell after the plane made a few circles.

The 2-inch polyurethane sponge cubes were also coated with beef tallow for extra taste and with tetracycline, not for its medicinal value but to help the researchers trace the effectiveness of the bait program.

The tetracycline, concentrated in the animal's teeth and bones, shows up as a distinct bright line under ultraviolet light. With the help of the state Game Commission, Wistar expects to have a large number of raccoon remains to examine.

More than 700,000 raccoons are trapped or shot in Pennsylvania each year for their fur, according to Tadeusz J. Wiktor, one of the scientists who developed the vaccines.

Few carcasses have been returned so far, Rupprecht said, but those samples indicate that about half of the raccoons are being reached. "If we can reach 70 percent of the population, we feel we can control the disease," he said.

It may be years before the vaccine itself is dropped. The vaccine, which is produced through gene splicing, would have to be approved for use in the open, and Wiktor and Rupprecht both say they would want to be sure that it would be safe for other wildlife

"We'll see it, but it's going to be awhile," Jones said. "You really don't want mutants sitting out there in the field, you might get something worse."

Jones hopes that Wistar can target other vaccines against rabies in other animals, too.

"If this works, and we get a good effective vaccine for skunks, we will go a long way toward knocking down animal rabies," he said.

Base Arrests

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Two airmen were booked for investigation of possessing a quarter-ounce of cocaine for sale to other enlisted men, military officials said.

The men were non-technical administrative workers not connected with the base's military space shuttle project.

The arrests culminated a three-month inquiry by the Air Force Office of Special Investigations, which is responsible for looking into felony crimes, fraud and counterintelligence matters

U.S. Denies Man Access To Magazine For Soviets

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

Denouncing too much "secrecy in government," a Wake Forest University student of Russian says the constitutional right of freedom of the press gives him the right to read a U.S. government magazine for Soviet citizens.

But Joe Felmet is prohibited from reading the Russian-language magazine "Amerika" because of a law designed to prevent the U.S. government from propagandizing Americans.

"How could that possibly propagandize the American public when a Soviet citizen is going to read it?" said Felmet, who wanted to improve his Russian. "I don't think that's valid."

The retired journalist said he first tried in 1982 to get a copy of "Amerika" from the U.S. Information Agency, which publishes it, but he was "stonewalled." Felmet sought the help of U.S. Sens. Jesse Helms and John East, both R-N.C., but was told the law prohibited distribution of the magazine inside the United States.

"A Soviet citizen can go to a newsstand in the Soviet Union and buy the magazine, and I cannot," he said.

Felmet or any other researcher could go to the agency's Washington headquarters to look at the magazine, but the 1948 law that created the overseas information service is firm against distribution elsewhere in this country, USIA spokesman Joseph O'Connell said.

"It's not secret — we just have to abide by the law," he said. "The magazine tells about the United States. That's the mission of USIA — telling America's story to the world."

The law is aimed at making sure the agency doesn't spread propaganda among American citizens, he said.

"There was also some concern among American news organizations that the overseas information program, if allowed to operate in this country, might present unfair competition," he said.

The agency produces 15 magazines in 18 languages, and only one — "Problems of Communism" — is available inside the United States, said O'Connell.

Felmet has asked the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union to take his case, but so far the organization has not rallied to his cause.

Winston-Salem lawyer Jim Cooley, who reviewed the case for the organization, wrote: "I do think that it will be extremely difficult to carve out a constitutional right to receive (the) magazine in the face of the expressed congressional purpose that such propaganda not be turned by the government upon the American people."

Cooley recommended that the NCCLU not take the case, but Felmet hopes the organization will agree to help him anyway. He said he has written more than 100 letters to potential supporters, including folk singer Pete Seeger, asking them to lobby the organization in his favor.

"It will be for the sake of freedom of the press," Felmet wrote.

FCC Says Phone Use Constant

By BILL McCLOSKEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seeking to blunt charges that higher local phone charges force people to cancel home telephone service, the Federal Communications Commission released figures showing more American households have a phone than ever before.

Statistics released recently show 91.9 percent of American households have telephones, up fractionally from previous quarterly reports. Another 1.9 percent of the households have access to a phone in a hallway or elsewhere nearby for receiving calls.

"In the face of substantial changes which have occurred in the telephone industry in the past two years, including the breakup of AT&T and changes in the structure of telephone rates, subscribership has been relatively stable," the FCC said in a prepared statement.

"Thus, the dire predictions by some people that there would be a substantial decline in telephone subscribership have not materialized," the commission concluded.

Last May, the Consumer Federation of America and the U.S. Public Interest Research Group said rate increases "may force over 6 million people to go without phone service by the end of 1986, unless state and federal policymakers intervene to preserve affordable phone service.

The topic of poor people losing phone service due to high costs will be raised Feb. 20 when FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler appears before the House Energy and Commerce telecommunications subcommittee to review the status of telephone service.

The percentage of homes in a state with phones closely tracks per capita income figures for each state, an FCC official said.

Some states, with the backing of the FCC, have moved to lessen the impact of increased local rates by authorizing subsidized "lifeline" services which give poor people a scaled-down service at a reduced price.

The FCC figures were based on Census Bureau data collected from 58,000 households nationwide last November.

Colony Grant

MANTEO — "The Lost Colony has received a $30,00 grant from the Theater Arts Section of the North Carolina Arts Council, officials said. A new lighting system will be installed and lighting will be increased from 48 to 72 dimmers. The larger system will allow more flexibility and more light changes for the drama.

The Theater Arts Section of the North Carolina Arts Council, recognizes "The Lost Colony" as a professional theater and provides grant assistance to this theater from funds appropriated by the North Carolina General Assembly and the National Endownment for the Arts.

U.S. Terrorism Awards Remain To Be Claimed

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Sam is offering big cash rewards to anyone who helps track down terrorists responsible for killing Americans abroad, but none of the money has been handed out yet.

Since last summer, Secretary of State George Shultz has authorized spending $850,000 in the bounty program to bring the killers to justice.

Congress agreed to put a price on the heads of terrorists in October 1984, and provided $5 million for the program, with the promise of more to come should the need arise.

Rewards are not to exceed $500,000. They are for information leading to the arrest or conviction of a terrorist, or for information that prevents an act of terrorism.

And the State Department says money will only be paid out once U.S. officials are satisfied that the information has produced results.

The standing offers are:

—$250,000 for Mohammed Abbas, a Palestinian alleged to be the mastermind of the hijacking of the Achille Lauro, the Italian cruise ship was seized in the Mediterranean on Oct. 7. Leon Klinghoffer, 69, an American tourist from New York, was shot and killed aboard the ship.

—$250,000 for two Lebanese Shiite Moslems who seized a TWA Boeing 727 in Athens on June 14 and forced it to fly to Beirut. Thirty-nine people were held hostage on the plane, and a Navy frogman, Robert Dean Stethem, was shot to death.

—$250,000 for the killers of Charles Hegna and William Stanford, two officials of the Agency for International Development who were slain on a Kuwaiti airliner at the Tehran airport in December 1984.

—$100,000 for the killers of four Marines and two civilians gunned down at a sidewalk cafe in San Salvador, the capital of El Salvador, last June 19.

The reward program received strong support from the administration and from Congress. State Department officials view the bounty as one tool in the war against terrorism.

"I wouldn't pretend that it's the only way to get terrorists," said an official who spoke only on condition he not be identified. "It's one possible method, it's not a panacea," he said, adding the program is too new to evaluate its effectiveness.

The official acknowledged there was a "tremendous complexity" in getting the program off the ground and advertising it. For instance, the government must get the word out about the program in the tight-knit, clannish Shiite neighborhoods of Beirut.

Officials at the State and Justice departments refused to discuss how many leads they've pursued, but they said the investigations involve all branches of the intelligence communities.

The names of informants are confidential, and people who work for governments are ineligible for rewards.

Security officers at the embassies are in charge of following up on the tips and the overall probes and prosecutions are handled by the Justice Department, which also is authorized to give rewards for information about terrorism in the United States.

The FBI for years has paid informants in domestic criminal cases.

Before putting a price on a terrorist's head, Shultz consults with the attorney general as well as the defense secretary.

Despite the government's hopes, two independent experts on terrorism doubted whether the program would do much good, even though they said they are not opposed to the bounties.

"I don't think capitalistic ventures of this nature are very profitable," said Robert Kupperman of Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies.

Terrorists may be immune to cash rewards because, unlike ordinary criminals, they are frequently motivated by ideology, he said.

"I don't object to the program, but I don't hold out high promise for it," he said.

Eric Willenz, a former State Department official now associated with the Carnegie Endowment for Peace, agreed that the "cash offer may not be an attractive one" to terrorists, who, like the Mafia, frequently have a strict code of conduct.

"This may not be the right bait," he said, and the promise of anonymity may not be enough. Informants, he said, might fear retribution should they squeal.

The program has the backing of a key congressman, Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee, according to his spokeswoman, Barbara Burris.

Fascell realizes, however, "the problem is identifying terrorists," she said.

Yesterday's Crytoquip: THE LOCAL GOVERNOR'S RE-ELECTION MOTTO IS: "ONE GOOD TERM DESERVES ANOTHER."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Most States Require Only A Little From Poet Laureates, And Get It

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

Poets are the unacknowledged legislators of the world, Shelley thought, but nowadays a few are acknowledged by state legislators.

The laurels usually rest easy. Few of the states which appoint a poet laureate require any work from the honoree, and the pay is commensurate with the duties.

When Pulitzer Prize-winning poet James Merrill was named Connecticut's first poet laureate last month, he more or less insisted on a do-nothing post.

"I didn't want to be writing a birthday ode to the governor every year," the 59-year-old author explained. Assured that he would not have to do that, or anything else, he accepted the honor.

"You're free to do what you think is best when you're not paid," says Gwendolyn Brooks, who has been poet laureate of Illinois since 1968.

Doing nothing can be the safest course.

Louisiana's poet laureate, Jean McGivney Boese, was savaged by scholars last year after writing a proposed state poem, which began:

"I love Louisiana with its cotton fields and trees

"And the Spanish moss that flutters with the slightest bit of breeze.

"I love the fields of sugar cane, the grazing cattle herds,

"The sweet scented magnolias filled with brightly colored birds. ..."

Pinky Gordon Lane, head of Southern University's English department, told a legislative committee that the laureate's work was "doggerel in the worst sense of the word."

David Madden, writer in residence at Louisiana State University, said most committee members were graduates of Louisiana schools and "if you think this is good poetry, we have failed and don't deserve any more appropriations."

Ms. Boese, 61, laughed off the attacks — "Did you ever hear of someone going to war over a poem?" — but her rhymes were rejected.

Ms. Brooks, who won the Pulitzer Prize for poetry in 1950, agreed to write a dedicatory poem for the State of Illinois Building in Chicago last year. She isn't paid by the state, but as this year's Consultant in Poetry to the Library of Congress, she is paid $35,000 plus a $5,000 travel allowance.

Every May she holds a competition for high school and elementary school student poets. She pays for the prizes, and winners are invited to the University of Chicago to read their work.

Other official poets are active in promoting the art.

Florida's poet laureate, Edmund Skellings, wrote a computer program for young people called "The Electric Poet," in which words can be illustrated with pictures and sounds.

"I promised the governor I would help young poets and I have," said Skellings, 55, who is director of the International Institute for Creative Communications at Florida International University in Miami.

"I recall at the press conference when Gov. Jim Hunt announced my appointment and someone asked what a poet laureate does and his reply was that 'He does what Sam Ragan has always been doing,'" says Sam Ragan, the bard of North Carolina.

What Ragan has always been doing is promoting the arts in North Carolina, editing and publishing The Pilot newspaper in Southern Pines, and publishing collections of poetry. His fourth book is expected out later this year.

Appointed poet laureate in 1982, he also helps organize the North Carolina Poetry Festival, held in Southern Pines each June.

"The development of poetry in North Carolina has been remarkable," said Ragan, 70, a former managing editor and executive news editor of The News and Observer of Raleigh. "I can remember 30 years ago, you could count the practicing poets in the state on the fingers of your hand. Now, if I were getting together an anthology of North Carolina poets, people in the first ranks of poets, I would have to include 120 to 125."

Georgia's poet laureate is a plastic surgeon, Dr. John Ransom Lewis Jr. of Atlanta, who says he gives about 100 talks a year on poetry.

"I think my two main duties are to publicize Georgia writers in general — not just poets — and to get young people interested in poetry," Lewis said. "I don't think we're trying to make poets out of everybody, but what we're trying to do is get them to appreciate the English language, because that leads to better communication."

Many laureates serve for life, but South Carolina appoints one every year. The job pays $100 a month.

"I think the caliber of poet we're dealing with now is really pretty high. Each appointee brings something different. It calls attention to poetry and writing as an art form," said Steve Lewis, director of literary arts for the S.C. Arts Commission.

The current poet laureate, Grace Freeman, has given several readings at the governor's mansion. "She is in many ways as good an ambassador as you can hope for," Lewis said.

Oklahoma, South Dakota, California, Arkansas, Nevada, Indiana and Colorado also appoint poets laureate, but Vermont has never replaced Robert Frost, who died in 1963.

Tennessee keeps a full stable of official artists, including a state historian and an "ambassador of letters." When the state chose the raccoon as its state animal in 1955, Richard M. "Pek" Gunn of Nashville supplied the verse, concluding:

"Oh, the price that you have paid,
"Oh, the contributions made
"To this land, and as your due,
"Tennessee now honors you."

Private Agency Tries To Save Wild Mustangs Of Western U.S.

BAILEY, Colo. (AP) — Descended from mounts let loose by Spanish explorers and the settlers who followed them, the wild horses of today's West are moving pieces of American history.

Despite the proud lineage, 15 years of federal protection and 13 years of an adoption program, however, the 50,000 mustangs scattered over 10 states remain largely renegade orphans.

They have found a friend in Dr. Ron Zaidlicz, the veterinarian who started the National Organization of Wild American Horses eight years ago.

With no paid staff and little regular income, NOWAH — like the wild horses it helps — has simply persevered, surviving on a shoestring. Since 1978, NOWAH has helped place a few thousand of the 51,000 wild horses the Bureau of Land Management has rounded up for its "Adopt-a-Horse" program.

Working with the Fund for Animals since 1980, NOWAH has also helped find homes for 14,000 burros.

"The whole adoption thing is kind of sad," Zaidlicz said one recent day, pushing back his gray Stetson. "I have really mixed feelings.

"After seeing how a few of them did, I was convinced that burros would rather be in a backyard. But the horses — it's sad to see them in a pen. When they're out there on the range, they're so sleek, so muscular. You have never seen anything so beautiful."

NOWAH takes the horses considered "least adoptable" and finds them homes, said Zaidlicz.

"A lot of those 11- and 12-year-old studs, once you get them calmed down, there's no problem," he said, "but those are the horses that the BLM thinks will be harder to find homes for."

How many wild horses has NOWAH helped? Zaidlicz shrugged, looked thoughtful for a moment, then shrugged again. "We've just lost track," he said.

Here at North Fork Ranch, a dude ranch beyond a winding road off the highway, about 15 animals brought in from the wild last summer are spending the winter. A few belong to NOWAH volunteers. The rest await new homes. Ranch owner Jim Gordon gave NOWAH space to build a barn that holds up to 120 horses. In return, his guests get to see NOWAH's work up close.

Zaidlicz, 38, with his full beard, turtleneck, plaid shirt and down vest, epitomizes the Rocky Mountain gentleman rancher. But working with wild horses pays off in feelings, not cash, so he juggles veterinary work for private clients, free-lance grooming for zoo animals and teaching a vets' assistants class to make ends meet for his family of four.

The cost of helping horses adds up quickly. A 20-ton load of hay that feeds 50-60 horses for one winter month costs $2,000. Trucking the horses in from the range or out to new owners costs $2 a mile.

The barn was built last year with a $10,000 corporate grant, and the organization counts 3,000 members. But, said Zaidlicz, "We don't have any affluent members."

"We have a man in Connecticut who sends us a $10 check every month and, in Indianapolis, there's a woman who sends us $30 almost every month."

When NOWAH started its work in the 1970s, volunteers came out of the woodwork. Then the plight of the Grand Canyon burros and those overrunning the China Lakes region of Southern California kept the story alive.

Today, about a dozen people, including Zaidlicz, still work nearly full-time, year-round for NOWAH. All are unpaid.

Last season yielded a bumper crop of wild horses for the BLM. About 8,000 of the 17,000 horses federal workers captured in 1985 remain unadopted at four BLM sites in three Western states, according to Hans Hess of the regional office in Denver.

Until the 1920s, millions of wild horses roamed the West. As the mustangs thrived and multiplied, and competed with cattle for range grasses, ranchers grew alarmed. It became common to round up wild horses for rodeos or slaughterhouses.

By the late 1960s, just 17,000 wild horses were left. A 1971 law brought them under federal protection. "Any unbranded horse belongs to the people" is the thought guiding the Wild and Free Roaming Horse and Burro Protection and Management Act.

In just a few years, the number of mustangs more than tripled.

While the BLM believes there are now twice as many wild horses as public lands can support, the animals are protected. Hence Adopt-a-Horse. The BLM allows anyone to adopt up to four animals a year. The charge is $125 per horse, $75 per burro

NOWAH charges up to $200 per horse, depending on how much gentleness an owner wants. The horses can be had just as they come from the range, halter-broken or "green-broke" — barely ready to accept an experienced rider.

After working with thousands of wild animals, NOWAH workers pride themselves on being able to work quickly through the fear wild animals bring to captivity.

Hollywood Has Long History Of Snubbing Major Directors

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steven Spielberg is in pretty good company when it comes to being ignored by Hollywood. His movie, "The Color Purple," has 11 Academy Award nominations but none for him as director.

George Cukor may well be the most-overlooked director in Oscar history. In 1931-32, his "Grand Hotel" won as best picture but Cukor wasn't among the directorial nominees.

Cecil B. DeMille also seemed unloved by the Academy even though he was the industry's best-known director. His last and biggest spectacle, "The Ten Commandments," was nominated as best picture in 1956, but he was snubbed as director.Many sniffed at his corny dramatics and his penchant for bathtub scenes. Others were put off by his extreme right-wing politics.

With Spielberg, though, observers have speculated that the 230 members of the directors branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences — those who nominate the best directors — may be mostly older filmmakers who resent an upstart whose movies have earned billions.

The pro-Spielberg faction argues that the director was the creative force behind "The Color Purple," and made thousands of decisions that contributed to the movie's nomination as best picture.

Others, though, disagree.

"I wasn't impressed with what Spielberg did with what I considered a gritty, outspoken book (by Alice Walker)," observed a veteran director who spoke only on the condition that he would not be identified. "He 'prettied up' the impoverished South with those fancy shots of blooming fields, and he failed to deal with the novel's lesbian theme."

Said another director, who also asked that his name not be used: "The picture lacked a consistency of tone. Spielberg seemed to be afraid to let the drama speak for itself, so he threw in some cutesy bits to warm the audience's heart. His staging of the 'hallelujah scene' was an embarrassment."

The movie details the life of Celie, a child bride who suffers the abuse of a brutal husband and her evolution into a strong, centered woman.

Spielberg, who was nominated for "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" in 1977, "Raiders of the Lost Ark" in 1981 and "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial" in 1982, has remained silent.

He was nominated for a Directors Guild award for "The Color Purple." However, the DGA consists of 7,500 members, many from television and other fields. And many are assistant directors, production managers and other non-directors. Some have worked on Spielberg projects, including his "Amazing Stories" TV series.

The Academy's statistician, Bob Werden, said directors of best-picture nominees have gone unnominated 146 times.

In 1942, "The Pride of the Yankees," the Lou Gehrig biography, was nominated 11 times but not for director Sam Wood.

In 1937, Cukor went unmentioned for "Camille," which received 10 nominations, including one for its star, Greta Garbo.

Despite a series of distinguished films, Cukor wasn't nominated until "Philadelphia Story" in 1940, and he had to wait until "My Fair Lady" in 1964 before he finally took home an Oscar.

He made polite, even cerebral films that contrasted with those of his more flamboyant colleagues and it is generally believed this was the reason for his lack of Academy recognition.

And how could the Academy fail to reward master filmmaker Alfred Hitchcock? It happened each of the five times he was nominated: "Rebecca," 1940; "Lifeboat," 1944; "Spellbound," 1945; "Rear Window," 1954; "Psycho," 1960.

The Academy's Board of Governors made some amends by giving the thrill maker the Thalberg Award for consistently high quality of production, but his particular genius was in his role as director.

Academy snubs have not been limited to directors. Many of the industry's leading actors also have been ignored, including Greta Garbo, Cary Grant and Charlie Chaplin.

Though Garbo, Grant and Chaplin were ignored for individual performances, the Academy gave each honorary awards after their careers had ended.

As Stanley Kowalski in "A Streetcar Named Desire," Marlon Brando created a classic role that influenced a whole generation of actors. But while Vivien Leigh, Karl Malden and Kim Hunter won Oscars for their roles in the film, Brando did not. He lost to Humphrey Bogart and "The African Queen." Brando finally won the prize with "On the Waterfront" in 1954.

For more than a quarter-century, Paul Newman has been considered one of the screen's premiere actors. He's been nominated six times, but he never took home an Oscar. He will on March 24 when the Academy presents him with an honorary award for "his many and compelling screen performances and for his personal integrity and dedication to his craft."

Duane Eddy Can Live Off Royalties

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The question triggers silence from Duane Eddy, whose reverberating electric guitar has rumbled through music history for 28 years.

"How would you like to be remembered?" he is asked.

The man whose thundering guitar licks have roused audiences throughout the world quietly reflects for a moment. Then he answers: "I'd like to be the biggest selling instrumentalist of all time."

Although record sales are unofficial, Eddy says he's sold more than 100 million records since his most famous song, "Rebel Rouser," came out in 1958, and he still sells 100,000 to 150,000 albums a year.

He had 25 original albums, and now that reissued albums have been added, he figures he has 55 to 60 albums to his credit.

Eddy has been so successful that, at age 47, he doesn't need a salary and can live off his royalties.

During the past few years, he hasn't worked much until last November, when he moved to Nashville from Lake Tahoe, Nev. On his first day here, Emmylou Harris called and gave him a job playing on her new album, "Thirteen." He's also recording in England with a trio called Art of Noise.

Last fall, he joined Chuck Berry, Jerry Lee Lewis and Junior Walker for a special concert of rock 'n' roll legends at the Meadowlands Arena in New Jersey.

"It was good fun," the soft-spoken, bearded instrumentalist said. "The reviewers were kinder to me than the others. I think they hadn't seen me in a while, and I caught them off guard."

Eddy's famous "Rebel Rouser" sold 3 million copies when he arrived on the music scene at age 20 with help from Dick Clark. Clark, of "American Bandstand" fame, found that teen-agers liked "Rebel Rouser" better than "Stalkin'," the song on the flip side that was considered the "A" cut of the record.

"It was a good title and it was the rockest rock 'n' roll sound," Eddy recalled. "It was different for the time."

He followed "Rebel Rouser" with "Because They're Young," "Peter Gunn," "40 Miles of Bad Road" and "The Ballad of Palladin." He also scored theme music for such movies as "Pepe" and "Gidget Goes Hawaiian."

He appeared in the movies "Thunder of Drums" and "The Wild Westerner" and on the television Western "Have Gun Will Travel."

"I realized acting was a whole other profession, and it wasn't my talent," Eddy said in an interview.

In the 1970s, he worked behind-the-scenes in music production work, mainly in Los Angeles.

Eddy, who has 12 guitars including his two original ones, usually plays a little every day if he's not being paid to perform. "Sometimes it's just to work out an idea in my brain or just to get the feel of it."

He taught himself how to play the guitar when he was 5 years old. He was 15 when he got his first job performing in Phoenix, Ariz., where he grew up.

Miami's 'Coconut Grove' Struggles To Retain Identity Amid Opulent Life

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Coconut Grove, the offbeat section denizens like to call their tropical Greenwich Village, is struggling to maintain its identity while surrounded by the modern Miami of high finance, crime and fast-paced lifestyles.

The history-rich, character-filled, 4-square-mile area of 20,000 people is watching more high rises go up and old-time shopkeepers move out. Property values and rents have skyrocketed as it has been discovered by prosperous Miami's young urban professionals.

"We're getting Guccized. We're getting more regular, suburbanite straight-thinking people," complained Glenn Terry, who would never want any of those adjectives applied to him. The young attorney is the innovator of the King Mango Strut, Coconut Grove's annual counter-culture answer to the Orange Bowl Parade.

"A lot of the starving young artists can't afford it any more," added Angus Harrison Jr., president of the Coconut Grove Bank. "It's a little more high-tone, professional. Not every little mom-and-pop store can make it anymore.

"I'm disappointed. I enjoyed it as a sleepy little town. A lot of the Bohemian, Greenwich Village atmosphere has gone away," said the Grove-born Harrison, 59.

Coconut Grove's character emerges from contradictions. It's both trendy and tacky. There are plenty of cafes, knapsacks, bicycles, and Perrier. No one mows lawns, preferring the miniature jungle look. A fad is putting plywood palm trees in lawns.

A rickshaw service offers human beasts of burden who wear antlers. Outlandish "punk" fashions are displayed during the weekly stroll from Biscayne Babies, a 1950s-style disco. The Grove Cinema serves Dom Perignon, apple juice and Japanese-spiced "suji-mama" popcorn as it shows cult classics such as "The Gods Must Be Crazy" (shown daily for 72 weeks) and "Rocky Horror Picture Show" (every weekend midnight the past nine years).

Its first settlements date back to the 1820s, long before the city of Miami, and in the late 19th century estates carved out by retired admirals and English and French nobles became "millionaires' row." Thousands flocked here from the then-impoverished Bahamian islands to serve them.

They established what's still called "the black grove," where virtually all of the 5,000 blacks in Coconut Grove live today. Old-South racial segregation was followed by economic segregation, and an imaginary "wall" still defines black Grove, commented city of Miami planner Jack Luft, a Grove resident.

Besides rich yachtsmen, blacks, Yuppies, gays, artists, and what Terry calls "real strange" people, the Grove also has a dedicated handful of lifelong residents who love the village atmosphere.

"We were so close. Everybody knew everybody," said Harrison, who recently moved to another suburb and can remember when Ryder Systems Inc., later to become a nationwide truck rental company, was housed in a small office in his 60-year-old bank.

People like Luft, who came here from Iowa 16 years ago, picked out the Grove "because it looks like people who have never been to South Florida before think South Florida looks like.

"It's a very subtropical setting, vegetative. Most other places in South Florida look like any other big city," Luft said.

"It's on the water (Biscayne Bay) and it's in the country but just happens to be in the city," said Terry.

Richard Fendelman, who moved 13 years ago from St. Louis to the Grove because of its quaintness and "eccentric characters," will soon be caught in the wave of change. He manages the Grove Cinema, whose landlord plans to tear it down and build a five-story building.

The escalating development began in the mid-1970s with the first condominiums and the Mayfair shopping area, a collection of elegant shops which drew the monied class to Coconut Grove; the Grand Bay Hotel and office plaza, and last year's opening of the posh Mayfair Hotel. More office complexes and condominiums are under way.

"The moderate-price units are disappearing quite rapidly," said Luft, adding that the two-bedroom, two-bath house he bought in the Grove for $27,000 in 1970 is now worth more than $100,000.

"With the high-rises, they're starting to damage the picturesque look of the Grove. I wish it was still the way it was when I came here," said Ruben Rojas, a tour guide at Peacock Park who first visited the Grove as a newly arrived Cuban refugee in 1963.

Blackbird Control Becomes Major Task

By TOM GILLEM
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When millions of blackbirds pick their winter roosts each year, humans have fired guns, blasted sirens and even clanged pots and pans trying to rid their neighborhoods of the feathery invasion.

Federal wildlife biologist Ken Garner has spent much of his time during the past 24 years trying to manage the onslaught of blackbirds each fall and winter by killing tens of millions of birds.

But Garner says the overall blackbird population in the United States remains fairly stable at about 550 million birds. The problem, he says, is not the birds.

"The problem is our population is increasing, and more people are coming into contact with them and other types of wildlife — people who are not comfortable with it," said Garner, Tennessee supervisor for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife's division of wildlife assistance.

"People are just not used to some of the problems that wildlife can cause, not just blackbirds but the whole spectrum of wildlife," he said.

Each year, millions of migrating blackbirds gather in winter roosts from roughly the Ohio River to the Gulf of Mexico, from the Atlantic Ocean to East Texas and Missouri and in some western states, Garner said.

Blackbird flocks that darken the sky when they descend on a given area can impair airport safety, endanger human health, cause crop and livestock damage, compete with other wildlife and generally make life miserable for humans, Garner said.

"Probably the worse problem is the nuisance from the odor, droppings and noise," he said. "If you have two or three million birds in your backyard, I promise you won't like it. And you won't do any barbecuing in the spring."

Droppings from the birds can fertilize a soil fungus that causes a respiratory condition in humans known as histoplamosis, but Garner said most people who contract the illness do not get very sick.

Blackbirds are native to North America, and Garner said some Indian writings tell of the birds eating the Indians' corn, the biologist said.

Tens of millions of birds have been killed since the government started experimenting with ways to get rid of them back in 1966 at Fort Knox, Ky., Garner said.

"We're limited very much by technology. We don't have really good methods of reducing the population," he said. "Most of our methods are very limited to the conditions we can use them in. When the conditions are right, they work good, but it's hard to get the proper conditions."

Lack of personnel is also a problem, said Garner, whose agency will move from the Department of the Interior to the Department of Agriculture later this year. In the Southeast region, where blackbirds pose the greatest problems, there are only 24 federal employees, including biologists and clerks, to deal with them and other wildlife problems, Garner said.

"I've worked on over 1,000 roosts since 1962 when I first started working on the blackbird problem," Garner said.

Citizens over the years have tried various ways of chasing off the pesky blackbirds, including blasting noises from loudspeakers on trucks, beating pots and pans and firing guns and explosive rockets. In some cases, the bird roosts have been eliminated by clearing away trees and brush.

But Garner said biologists use one of two methods when they want to kill birds — baiting livestock feedlots with poison that kills only the birds or using a wetting agent that strips the natural oils from the birds' feathers so they die from exposure.

The wetting agent can be applied by a helicopter flying about 75 feet above the ground or by irrigation systems, which Garner said he is using for the first time this year.

Feedlot baiting just affects part of the bird population, and the success of wetting agents depends on specific temperatures and rainfall within a short time period after the application, he said. Irrigation systems are further restricted by the type of terrain, the size of the roost habitat and the availability of pressurized water.

"Because there are so few of us, we take it roost by roost and try to resolve or make progress on each roost," he said.

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

STROUD, Okla. (AP) — The ancient rhythm of the drum reverberates across the dusty Oklahoma plain as the warrior adjusts his feathered headdress and spreads blue warpaint across his broad cheeks and down his nose.

The singers chant their call in the gathering dusk as he tucks his knife, topped by a bird claw, into his belt. He picks up his pipe and nestles it close to his bone breastplate as he awaits the call to advance.

But Billy B. Walkabout isn't going into battle. For him the war is over, a war that made him a highly decorated veteran and left him 100 percent disabled from enemy weapons and psychological problems.

For Walkabout, the memories of the 23 months he spent in Vietnam are slow to fade, memories that led to domestic disappointment and to an 11-year period of self-isolation, when he would spend six months at a time alone in a room, seeing no one.

"When I came back I went through two bad marriages," says Walkabout, 36, as he sits on the front steps of the Oklahoma City home he shares with his wife Joy, mother- and father-in-law and other relatives. "I went to school, and it didn't work out there. I went underground. ...

"Everyone I went to high school with thought I was dead for years. They're amazed when they see me and they say, 'You're not dead.'" Walkabout pauses and adds quietly, "No, I'm not dead."

The announcer asks the audience to rise for the lowering of the American flag. When the drums are stilled, he says the annual Stroud Sac and Fox Powwow is honored by the presence of Billy Walkabout, who will help lead the dance of Vietnam veterans. The sacred staff is carried slowly around the arena as Walkabout and other dancers follow in time to the pounding drum and the chants of the singers.

Walkabout, a Cherokee of the Blue Holley Clan, was an 18-year-old Army Ranger sergeant sent on an assassination mission behind enemy lines on Nov. 20, 1968. He is the only survivor of his 13-man team, but was seriously wounded himself.

In the normally turgid prose of the military, his citation for the Distinguished Service Cross, the decoration second only to the Medal of Honor, notes that when evacuation helicopters finally arrived, "he worked single-handedly under fire to board his disabled comrades. Only when the casualties had been evacuated and friendly reinforcements had arrived, did he allow himself to be evacuated."

"We ambushed the man," Walkabout says of the North Vietnamese Army colonel held responsible for a civilian massacre. "But we ambushed the man in his battalion area. We were under fire for the next 12 hours."

After being dropped into the area and lying quietly without eating all day, Walkabout and his team spent the night preparing for a dawn strike. "We could see the lights of their fires and their flashlights as they moved about," he said.

Shortly after sunrise the colonel and his aides moved out. "One man was ahead and he tripped the wire and set off the claymores," powerful anti-personnel mines. "The claymores basically took out most of them."

But that first man escaped and sounded the alarm.

Bells on ankles and knees jingle and seeds in gourds add their rattle as women in colorful shawls join the men for an intertribal dance. Youngsters, a single feather fastened to their beaded headbands, stomp and twirl.

Walkabout and his team tried to call in evacuation helicopters, but the enemy guns kept the choppers from coming near.

"Then we pulled back to another knoll that was higher terrain, but it had that tanglefoot," a thickly growing, thorny vine, says Walkabout. "No man could get through that."

"We were shooting men as close as that tree," he said, pointing to an elm 15 feet away. "They were all over the hill, coming up."

Then the North Vietnamese set off a command-detonated mine, which they got into position during four full-scale assaults up the hill.

"They hit everyone," Walkabout said. Four men were killed instantly and the others were wounded. Walkabout, although wounded and deafened by the concussion, went from man to man giving what first aid he could while firing his M-16 automatic weapon at the North Vietnamese.

"I could see their heads bobbing up. They threw grenades up. It was overkill on their part. But that's how it works."

Walkabout called in artillery, directing it by sight and vibration. "That kept them off me for awhile," he said.

"The hardest thing is to lie there and watch men die."

The Ponca Tribe's princess goes around the arena edge, selling tickets for a drawing on a shawl. The smell of fry bread and Indian tacos wafts on the breeze. A 6-year-old girl excitedly asks her mother if she can invite someone to dance with her in the two-step, ladies' choice.

Other Ranger teams that had been dropped into nearby areas fought their way to Walkabout's aid. "Friendly fire" enabled evacuation helicopters to hover and drop "jungle penetrators," with which the wounded were winched aboard.

Although that time is long over, the effects aren't. Walkabout recalls the times he couldn't sleep with his wife "because I was afraid I would strangle her in my sleep. I killed people with my bare hands. You kill somebody with a rifle, and it's sort of antiseptic. But when you take a human life with your own hands, whether it be stabbing or choking them to death, that brings it down to the real, basic, pure, human animal survival of the fittest."

"War is not hell," Walkabout says. "It's worse."

The men's fancy dancing contest begins, and Walkabout enters the arena. He and the other contestants weave and bob in the dance that was older than memory when the first white men set foot on this continent.

Walkabout's mother-in-law, Rozella Knight, said he has stopped trying to push Joy under the bed at night, "thinking there were bombs falling."

And, Walkabout added, even though he was once so low "the only thing I was contemplating was ... murdering myself," his attitude has changed.

"I'm at peace with myself," Walkabout said. "I go to powwows."

He added, "I've got my dignity and I've got my pride. ... I never lost the war in Vietnam, I never lost a day of it. Even when I was wounded, I didn't lose. When I fought, I won. I won my wars."

Farewells are said as spectators leave the powwow grounds. The drums have stilled, the last song has been chanted, the rattles are at peace in the stillness of the dark.

Shamrock

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — With St. Patrick's Day less than two weeks away, the Irish are having trouble finding three-leafed clover — the shamrock, national emblem of the Emerald Isle.

The coldest February in nearly 40 years has endangered this year's shamrock growth, and suppliers worry there will be few available St. Patrick's Day, March 17.

"There is no sign of shamrock anywhere," said Jim Maher, leader of the County Tipperary Young Farmers' organization.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

SUSANNE H. LONG

Patricia MacLachlan's 1986 Newbery Medal winner "Sarah, Plain and Tall" is a surprisingly thin and short book — a student's dream at only 58 pages. Although the book is recommended for readers aged 8 to 10, the beautiful descriptions will appeal to many older readers.

MacLaclan tells the story of young Anna and Caleb, whose mother died the day after her son was born. Since infancy, Caleb has strained to remember his mother, and both children long for the happiness of a bygone time when Papa sang every day.

The newspaper ad Papa places is answered by a woman named Sarah. She's from Maine, plain and tall, she draws, braids hair, makes stew and sings. The children are delighted with Sarah, who arrived at the house wearing a yellow bonnet and carrying a gray cat, Seal.

In the Spring with Sarah, everyone has a good time. After their haircuts, the family throws the locks of hair around the yard for the birds to use in their nests. They slide down a "dune" of hay and swim in the cow pond. Memories are made, but Sarah misses the blue and green sea, her flower garden, the tall house in Maine, and her three aunts, who "squawk together like crows at dawn." When she takes the wagon into town alone, Anna and Caleb worry.

MacLachlan's book paints a beautiful picture in detail, with plentiful, carefully illustrated incidents and generous adjectives.

"Sarah, Plain and Tall" is filled with the images that memories are made of, and is short enough to enjoy again and again.

Maritime Painting Exhibit Shown

BEAUFORT — The N.C. Maritime Museum is showing acrylic paintings by Larry Burge of Newport, entitled "Coastal Nostalgia." The art depicts coastal scenes of abandoned, rusting beach chairs and old life saving stations.

Burge's medium is acrylic and pencil, and his style blends realism and detail. A native of western North Carolina, Burge has been painting professionally for nearly seven years. He has participated in many exhibitions and his work is represented in corporate and private collections throughout North and South Carolina.

This exhibit can be viewed in the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company Auditorium during museum hours, which are weekdays 9 to 5, Saturday 10 to 5 and Sunday, 2 to 5.

Applications Sought For Challenge Funds

RALEIGH — The N.C. Arts Council is accepting applications for its 1986 Local Government Challenge Grant Program through April 1. The grants are available to local governments in amounts up to $5,000 and must be matched with "new money" appropriated for community arts councils.

Funds from the state Arts Council may be used to finance programs, personnel and general operating expenses for local arts organizations. Challenge grants must be matched dollar for dollar by city or county budget appropriations for the arts. These matching funds must be in addition to previous governmental allocations in a single year, and may come from locally raised tax or non-tax revenue.

For more information, contact the Local Government Challenge Grant Program, N.C. Arts Council, N.C. Department of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N.C. 27611; or telephone Jack LeSueur, director of community development, at 733-7897.

N.C. Arts Council Awards Record $870,576 In Local Program Funds

RALEIGH — The N.C. Arts Council, has awarded $870,576 in arts program grants to arts organizations across the state.

The council was able to award more grants than ever this fall due to increased funding by the General Assembly. During their last session, legislators agreed to appropriate $1 million in new funds to the council increasing state support to $4 million. The new funds provided additional grant money specifically for projects slated for fiscal year 1985-86.

A total of 190 grants were awarded in community development, dance, folklife, inter-disciplinary, literature, music, theater, visual arts and touring/presenting programs.

Among these awards were $5,000 to the Washington paper, "New Art Examiner" for regular coverage of the visual arts in North Carolina and $4,800 to PEN Syndicated Fiction project in New York City for the North Carolina production of 13 half-hour programs of PEN short stories for "National Public Radio Playhouse." The remaining $860,776 in grant awards is being administered by arts groups in North Carolina.

The following are grants awarded to eastern North Carolina counties:

Storyteller Will Direct Workshop

ECU News Bureau

Noted black storyteller Augusta Baker will direct a day-long workshop, "Storytelling: The Oral Tradition Continues," at East Carolina University Saturday.

The workshop is sponsored by the ECU Department of Library and Information Studies and is open to all interested persons, particularly professional librarians. Advance registration is requested and a fee will be charged.

Augusta Baker, an emeritus professor of library science at the University of South Carolina, studied at the State University of New York-Albany and worked as a teacher in the New York area before joining the New York Public Library staff as a children's librarian/storyteller, an association which continued for 37 years.

Her publications include an anthology of children's stories, "The Talking Tree," and a manual, "Storytelling: Art and Technique." She has been a consultant for the producers of the children's television program "Sesame Street."

Her work in the field of children's literature has been recognized by notable honors, including the "Parents Magazine" Medal and the American Library Association's Grolier Award.

She joined the University of South Carolina's College of Librarianship in 1980, and continues to hold seminars on storytelling and children's literature across the nation.

The Baker workshop is the final program in a series sponsored at ECU this year. Further information is available from the ECU Department of Library and Information Studies, Joyner Library, ECU, 757-6621.

Gallery Talk Set At Art Museum

An art appreciation gallery talk on Henri Matisse's paper cut-outs will be presented at the Greenville Museum of Art Wednesday at 10:30 a.m.

During the last 20 years of his life, Matisse developed the paper cut-out technique. These late works were made as independent compositions and as studies for works in other media.

The slide program includes Matisse's methods, the evolution of his work and will provide insight into the artist's thought and philosophy of art.

Hours Changing

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Archives and the State Library of Genealogy sections will rearrange their Saturday hours to more nearly conform to those of other agencies in the building.

Effective April 5, the two sections will be open to the public on Saturdays from 9 a.m.-5 p.m., closed Sunday and Monday. The new hours will be a permanent change.

PERFORMANCE IN WILSON — A one-man presentation of "Oh, Mr. Faulkner, Do You Write?" will be presented Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Hunt High School Auditorium. John Maxwell is the actor portraying author Faulkner. Tickets, available at the door, are $7 for adults and $3 for students. The event is sponsored by the Arts Council of Wilson. For more details, call 291-4329.

Gershwin Music To Be Featured

KINSTON — Gershwin's music will be featured Friday when the Community Council for the Arts presents virtuoso pianist Thomas Wright in "An Evening With Gershwin" at Kinston's Airport Theatre at 8:15 p.m.

This is the fourth of five productions in the Arts Council's New Performance Series for 1985-86.

Thomas Wright, a professor of music at Florida State University in Tallahassee, earned the B.M. degree from Butler University and the M.M. degree from Indiana University. While pursuing post-graduate studies at Columbia University, Wright was the staff pianist for NBC Television and the featured artist on several weekly network shows.

Wright has also worked in Hollywood as a musical consultant in the motion picture industry.

Tickets are available from the Arts Council at 111 East Caswell St. in downtown Kinston. Reservations may be made by calling the Arts Council at 527-2517.

ECU Theater Schedules Auditions

Actors and technicians are being sought for the 21st season of plays to be produced by the East Carolina Summer Theatre based in Greenville. Auditions are scheduled for Saturday, March 22 from 2-5 p.m., in room 206 of the Messick Theater Arts Center, corner of Fifth and Eastern Streets, on the East Carolina University campus.

Slated for production this summer are four American comedies featuring stars from Broadway, television and film. Performers will be hired by the show or for the entire season, with rehearsals set to begin mid-June in Greenville.

Performers may write or phone to schedule an appointment. When auditioning, actors should be prepared to read a scene selected by the director from one of the shows. Equity as well as non-Equity actors are encouraged to audition.

Technicians should bring a resume with letters of reference for an interview. There are also a number of apprentice positions available.

All performers in the Summer Theatre are paid except for apprentices. Salaries are commensurate with size of role and performing experience, talent and training. The minimum salary is sufficient to cover temporary living cost in Greenville for non-Equity performers and complies with Equity salary scales for performers who belong to the union.

All performances will take place in McGinnis Theater.

For further information, call 757-6390.

Auditions Set For ATW Production

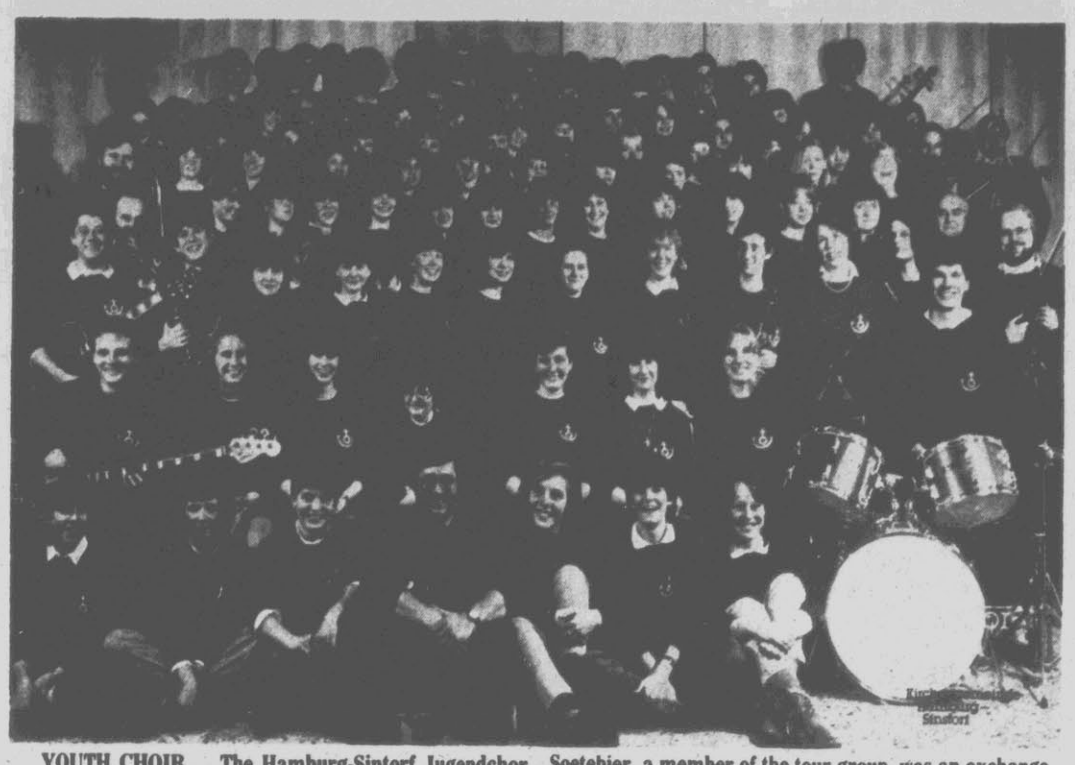
Auditions for the final ATW production of the year, "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," will be held in the Ayden-Grifton High School Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday.

The cast will have 15 male and 15 female roles in all ages from teenage to the 80s. Singers and dancers are especially needed, along with set builders, lighting and property handlers, etc. Those auditioning can bring their own matrial or plan to use material available at the audition site.

Fossil Trip Set

BEAUFORT — Another in the continuing series of fossil hunting field trips has been announced by the North Carolina Maritime Museum, Beaufort.

The next trip will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, with those taking part to meet at 9 a.m. at Texasgulf, Inc., Aurora. Fee for the trip is $5. For reservations call the museum at 728-7317.



YOUTH CHOIR ... The Hamburg-Sintorf Jugendchor (German youth choir) of Hamburg, West Germany, will be in concert at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church at 8 p.m. Friday. The program is open to the public. An offering will be received. The choir, whose members range in ages from 13 to 72 years old, is making its first tour of the United States under the sponorship of the Sinstorf congregtion of the Lutheran Church in Hamburg. Kirsten Soetebier, a member of the tour group, was an exchange student who lived with the family of the Rev. Graham Nahouse, pastor of Our Redeemer Lutheran Church. The group is scheduled to arrive in Raleigh Wednesday, and anyone who wishes to house the members (most speak English) may call Our Redeemer Church at 756-2058 or Nahouse at 756-1166.

Peanut Festival Planned

WILMINGTON — In celebration of National Peanut Week, Poplar Grove Historic Plantation will have its "Plantation Days Peanut Festival" Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the plantation on N.C. 17 north.

As one of the oldest peanut plantations in the South, Poplar Grove will host a fundraising festival to raise money for its restoration and preservation.

Activities include: "Under the Shade Tree" concert with John Golden, featuring an open-mike session for amateur musicians and comedians; hayrides and pony rides for children; open house tours of the manor house, out buildings and grounds, and a peanut recipe contest.

The Foy Memorial will also be dedicated and the events will conclude with a square dance from 8 to 11 p.m. in the barn by the Cripple Creek Band.

A Reflector Review

Book Retells Fascinations Of State's Old Grist Mills

Exploring The Old Mills of North Carolina. By Grimsley T. Hobbs. Illustrated by Kate Russel Forbes and Gary Williams. Chapel Hill, N.C., Provincial Press. Paper, 80 pages, $8.95.

This book recaptures for the reader the fascinations of picturesque, rural North Carolina grist mills. These are places that appeal to our romantic image of a bygone way of life.

In his description of these old structures, with their slow, trickling water wheels, author Hobbs instills in us a desire to sleuth and explore in search of these now mostly silent reminders of their past.

Hobbs reveals where these old landmarks may be found in locations from the mountains to the coastline. They are to be discovered primarily along winding back roads beside rushing streams or dammed up ponds.

President of Guilford College from 1965 to 1980, Hobbs writes with the confidence that can be related only to one who has had a long association with North Carolina mills. He offers considerable detail and authority on the subject.

He provides separate histories on the 29 rural landmarks covered in the book, mills with architectural and operational diversity to be found in a range from the rugged pioneer millhouse at Brevard in the mountains with it's 30-foot water wheel to the structure at Nags Head, with its huge arms and sails.

In addition to informing readers with details of these mills, Dr. Hobbs encourages steps to preserve these buildings, which are disappearing at an alarming rate. He expresses the hope of seeing them restored.

Typical of the mills that possess the possbility of restoration is that of Bennett's Mill, north of Edenton. It is nestled beside a large pond, amid trees draped in Spanish moss. It is now in an advanced state of deterioration, but could, he says, be restored in spite of its poor condition.

Emphasis on the historical aspect of the mills can be seen in his description of the Old Mill of Guilford in Oak Ridge.

. . . "Back in 1745 when our nation was only a handful of colonies, Nathan Dillion dammed up Beaver Creek, built a mill and began grinding meal for the settlers. He had received a grant of 552 acres directly from the Earl of Granville, the land agent of the crown at that time.

Interesting full-page sketches by Kate Russel Forbes give a clear idea of the appearance of some of the mills at this time and enhance the beauty of the book. A former Asheville resident, she now lives in Salem, V., where she is a free lance artist. Chapel Hill artist Gary Williams has added understanding of the operation of the mills through sketches that illustrate millstones, conveyer apparatus, water wheels, turbines, transmissions and gears that comprise typical internal mechanisms for the mills.

If you have a passion, as I do, for locating rustic grist mills, prowling winding paths and wooded hills and exploring hidden ponds, this book is highly recommended.

Area Events Calendar

The program office at Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University, compiles a listing of campus and community events each week. Unless otherwise noted, all events are open to the public without charge. For more information, call 757-6331 for more information. Also, because ECU will be on spring break, no campus events have been scheduled. Activities will resume March 17. Community events are:

•Greenville Museum of Art: Exhibitions include "Art in Miniature" — South Gallery I; "Sculpture & Assemblages" by Nancy McGuire — South Gallery II; "National Association of Women Artists Traveling Printmaking Exhibition" — North Gallery; "Portraits and Places" by Arch E. Manning — Upstairs Gallery.

•Docent Training Class: Wednesday from 10:30 to 11:50 a.m. in the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St., phone 758-1946.

•Art Appreciation Talk: Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in Greenville Museum of Art.

Dr. Roger Rulifson Concentrating On The Bay of Fundy, Novia Scotia

ECU Specialist Studies Fish Populations

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Features And Classified

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. Sunday, March 9, 1986 D-1

Roger Rulifson's quest to determine why populations of striped bass, shad and other fish are dwindling in the rivers and coastal areas of the Eastern Seaboard has led him to exotic locations. But none are as spectacular as the Bay of Fundy in Nova Scotia.

At ebb tide, the bay is an expansive mud flat, featureless and seemingly devoid of life. Twice a day, however, gently but rapidly rising sea water inundates the bay with a 50-foot tidal surge. During the summer months it brings in an abundance of fish. Among the many species are hundreds of thousands of the type that Dr. Rulifson, a marine scientist at the East Carolina University Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources (ICMR), has studied in the rivers and sounds of coastal North Carolina.

In addition to determining the larval mortality rates due to polluted water, acid rain and other problems encountered in the rivers where striped bass spawn, Rulifson is trying to determine — for management studies — if the striped bass and the river herring, like the shad, is an ocean migrator.

Most Fished-For

"The striped bass, still the most fished-for species on the Eastern Seaboard, has great commercial and social value," Rulifson said. The supply of this popular fish, however, has been diminishing, so much so that the federal government set aside money to study the problem.

"Stocks were declining at such a rapid rate that in 1979 the U.S. Congress passed the Striped Bass Emergency Research Study program. Since that time we've done numerous studies but no one has really looked at the ocean migration of these fish.

"One problem is that of management of the fish stocks. There is a program for states from Maine to North Carolina, but if our fish are entering Canadian waters and are being fished in unmanaged water, it doesn't do us much good to manage our stocks," Rulifson said. "We're trying to find out what proportion of striped bass in the Bay of Fundy might be from our waters."

The extent to which marine life feed in the Bay of Fundy went unnoticed, except by local fishermen, until the Tidal Power Corporation, an organization sponsored by Nova Scotia, announced its intentions to build a Tidal Surge Dam in the bay across the entrance to Cobequid Bay, a basin in the Bay of Fundy. That announcement spurred a study which revealed a surprisingly large number of fish feeding and living in the bay. During that study Dr. Michael J. Dadswell, a Canadian fishery biologist, also established that shad migrate from as far south as the St. Johns River in Florida to the Bay of Fundy.

Tagging Project

While attending a meeting in Oregon, Rulifson, then a professor of fisheries at Unity College in Maine, learned of the work being done by Dadswell. At a later meeting of the Fundy Environmental Studies Committee, he met Dadswell and was invited to join Dadswell's tagging project in the Bay of Fundy. After Dadswell's project, Rulifson received materials and some funding from the North Carolina Division of Marine Fisheries to tag river herring in the bay. Fish tagging is accomplished by attaching a "dart" tag with a mailing address on it, to the fish. A $2 reward is offered for each returned tag.

In the fall of 1983 Rulifson accepted his present position at the East Caroling University ICMR.

In 1985 a project was funded by the National Marine Fisheries through the state of North Carolina. Rulifson and Sean McKenna, a technician at ICMR at ECU, tagged 14,000 river herring and 1,400 striped bass in the Bay of Fundy. In a similar study sponsored by Hudson River Foundation, Rulifson and his assistants tagged 8,000 shad. "We'll look for them all over the Eastern Seaboard this spring," Rulifson said.

Text and Photographs By Tony Rumple
East Carolina University News Bureau

According to Rulifson, five percent of those tags have been received at the ICMR. "That number should increase greatly when the fish begin their spring migrations. So far, Rhode Island is the southernmost area from which a striped bass tag has been received," he said.

"Even if a large number of striped bass were to be received from southern waters, it would take several years of similar findings to conclude that striped bass are migrating along the Eastern Seaboard to the Bay of Fundy," Rulifson said.

Devastating Effect

If migratory patterns are established for the striped bass and river herring, the proposed tidal surge dam across the entrance of Cobequid Bay would have a devastating effect on their population, said Rulifson.

The proposed dam would be the largest of its type in the world, with up to 140 power-generating turbines. With the rising tide, water would be allowed — along with the fish — to go through the sluice gates into Cobequid Bay. After the tide ebbed low enough, the sluice gates would be closed. The only exit for the fish would them be through the dam's spinning turbine blades, swept along by the rushing water.

A conservative estimate by Rulifson, based on studies by Dadswell, is that 10 percent — about 100,000 — of the fish in each tidal surge would be killed while passing through the whirling blades. Dadswell's estimate of between a 10 and 50 percent kill is based on data gathered during a study, sponored by the Tidal Power Corporation, of a single-turbine dam that has been constructed across the Annapolis River in Nova Scotia.

"Tidal Power Corporation has been very cooperative in research directed toward finding out how these fish are migrating, what species are there, what potential impacts there would be and what they might do to solve those problems," Rulifson said.

Prime Feeding Grounds

But fish aren't the only wildlife that would be affected by the dam. The mud flats of Cobequid Bay have long been prime feeding grounds for migratory birds on the North American flyway. Because of the length of time it would take to refill the bay if it were allowed to drain completely between tidal cycles, water would be held at a level that would keep the flats submerged. The flats would also be lost to the large clam fishery, according to Rulifson.

The Atlantic Provinces Council on the Sciences and the Fundy Environmental Studies Committee meet each year to analyze results of studies already completed. "It is ar example of cooperation of many different scientists from many different disciplines," said Rulifson, who has been participating in those meetings since 1982 and is one of the few U.S. citizens involved with the studies for that length of time.

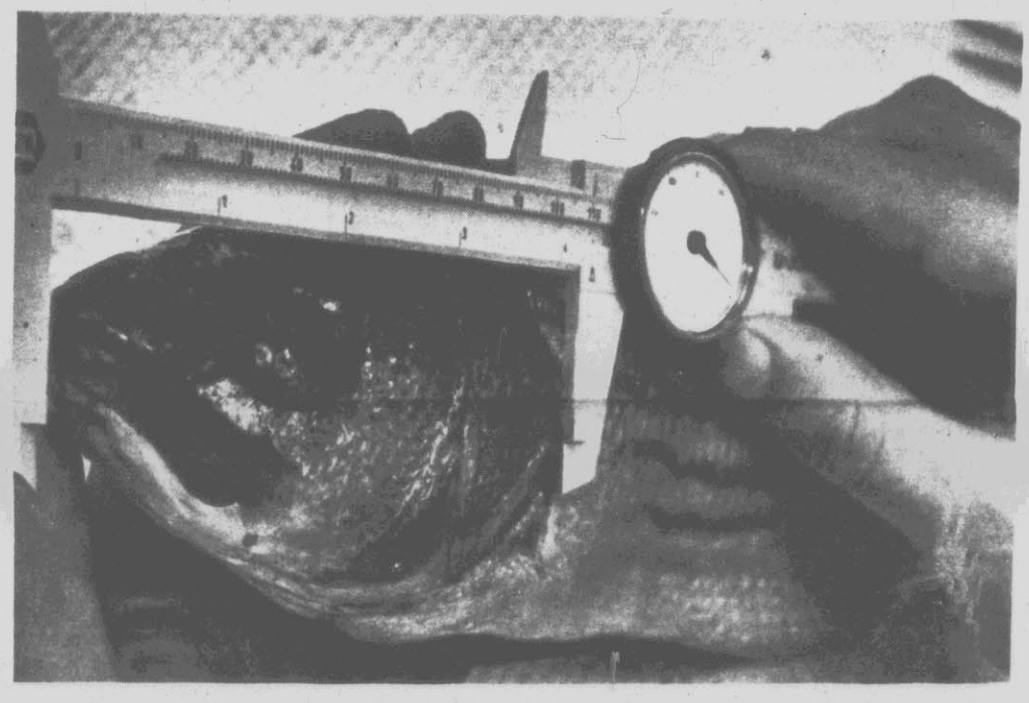
Although conservation of natural resources may seem to be a relatively new activity, it is a centuries-old, continuing effort with these and other species of fish found along the Eastern Seaboard.

History Of Importance

Striped bass were caught and dried in great numbers by Indians long before the first colonists arrived in the New World. Striped bass and codfish were the first natural resources subjected to conservation measures. Statutes enacted by the General Court of Massachusetts in 1639 prohibited striped bass from being sold as fertilizer.

An act of the Plymouth Colony in 1670 stipulated that money from the Cape Cod fisheries derived through the sale of striped bass, mackerel or herring was to be used to support a free school in the colonies, thus establishing the first such school. Later, in 1776, New York and Massachusetts prohibited their sale during the winter months.

This year Rulifson is again faced with the problem of no available money to finance further studies. "We need several years of continuous studies, depending on how the data develops. If the dam were built today, (without knowing its effects on wildlife) no one knows what the outcome would be. And at an estimated cost of $17 billion dollars over the life of the loan, it would be one of the world's biggest experiments," Rulifson said.



STRIPED BASS EXAMINED ... A striped bass taken in the Bay of Fundy, Nova Scotia, is examined in a laboratory at the East Carolina University Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources. While most fish are tagged and released, some are taken for study. Dr. Roger A. Rulifson is trying to determined if the striped bass, like the shad, is an ocean migrator.

Turtles, Survivors From An Age Preceding The Dinosaurs

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Their ancestors roamed the earth some 275 million years ago, even before the Appalachian Mountains were formed. The first recognizable member of the species appears in the fossil record about 185 million years ago, many eons before the peak of the dinosaurs. And today, long after the dinosaurs' demise, the turtle remains, its dome still perched on its back.

A SUWANNEE COOTER . . . one of the world's 180 species of freshwater turtles, cruises the waters of Florida's Rainbow Run. Webbing between toes speeds turtles through water, and a gill-like mouth cavity allows them to breathe. Contemporaries of dinosaurs, turtles are the world's oldest surviving reptiles. (National Geographic Society photograph by Bill Curtsinger)

"Turtles seem to have hit on a good, conservative thing," says Dr. Archie Carr, a world authority on them. "Turtles clung to their basic structural design, while many other animals experimented their way into extinction."

Very Flexible Neck

The turtle's protective shell actually consists of two parts—the top half, called the carapace, and the lower half, the plastron. Eight vertebrae in this reptile's neck, compared with the seven of most mammals, allow most turtles to fold their necks and retract into their shells. Most turtles also can retract all four limbs as well as their head between the two shells.

In addition to breathing through a set of lungs, freshwater turtles can use their mouth cavity in gill-like fashion. Water is drawn through the nostrils, oxygen absorbed in the mouth, and the water expelled. A few turtles can even absorb small amounts of oxygen through their skin while submerged in mud.

Aquatic turtles have little in common with the poky tortoise that almost lost the race to the hare. They're extemely fast. The smooth softshell turtle, for example, can outswim the speedy brook trout. Webbing between toes increases swimming speed while allowing some species to walk underwater to browse.

The world's 180 kinds of freshwater turtles include animals patterned with dots, splashes, and hieroglyphs. The spotted turtle, for instance, is sprinkled with dozens of yellow polka dots. The markings on the juvenile map turtle resemble contours on an ancient chart.

Freshwater turtles vary in size from the stinkpot, a three-inch-long variety that exudes a musky fluid when disturbed, to the alligator snapper, a giant native of the south-central United States that can weigh up to 250 pounds.

Snaps Off Fingers

The bite of the alligator snapper is legendary. "Late one night 16 years ago," related a veteran Florida turtle hunter, "my son and I pulled an old 75-pound alligator snapper out of a swamp. Like a fool I put the snapper right behind me in the boat. After a time we got stuck in some reeds, so I reached back for a paddle and slam!—something hit my hand so fast I didn't know what had happened. Then all of a sudden there was blood everywhere, and my son was shouting, 'Dad, two of your fingers just dropped into the bottom of the boat!'"

Those who dare to peer into an alligator snapper's mouth would see a rose-colored wormlike appendage projecting from its tongue, used to lure minnows. Dissected stomachs of alligator snappers have turned up baby alligators, raccoons, snakes, acorns, shoes, and other turtles.

The increasingly rare alligator snapper is still legally hunted in many states. A few other turtle species, such as New England's Plymouth red-bellied turtle, are in more serious trouble. Considered endangered since 1980, a few hundred red-bellies survive in glacial ponds with the help of conservationists.

One threat to some freshwater turtles' survival is a slow rate of reproduction. Mating can be elaborate. Each species has a courtship ritual of its own. Common snapping turtles, for example, face each other and sweep their heads from side to side in opposite directions. After several minutes, the two turtles return their heads to dead center and stare at each other for a while before mating.

The male red-eared slider tickles the female's neck as he swims backward and she forward. The two eventually sink to the pond bottom, where they mate.

Cooters Court

Author White, diving in a Florida river, is the first to fully describe the courtship dance of the peninsula cooter:

"The female is as large as my diving flipper, the male less than half her size. He rides like a hitchhiker atop her carapace, while green strands of algae resembling gossamer threads trail from their shells....

"With forefeet pressed to each side of her yellow-and-black neck, the male gently tickles her with his needle-sharp claws. Like kites reeled in on a string, the pair drifts slowly downward, shells immobile but legs and tails parading....

"Suddenly the male cooter slides backward on his mate's shell, his tail curving beneath her own. At this moment mating takes place. The pair passes by, oblivious of me in the trance of their embrace...."

Egg laying can be nearly as ritualistic. Many females dig a chamber near water's edge, lay their eggs, and cover the nest. At least three varieties, however, practice triple clutching. They lay most of their eggs in a main nest and then add two smaller pockets for one or two eggs each. Some scientists believe the pockets are decoys, designed to distract predators from the main clutch, but Archie Carr has doubts.

"Two or three eggs in little side pockets aren't going to fool a hungry raccoon—they probably act more like a beacon," he says. "It's still a mystery, and I've been losing sleep over it for 30 years."

Crop Dusters Are Special Breed Of Professionals

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

QUITMAN, Ga. (AP) — They like to be called aerial applicators, a title designed to imbue a professional image.

But it still takes a special breed of pilot to dive into a field and fly six to eight feet above the ground while dodging pine trees and power lines, says the president of the Georgia Agricultural Aviation Association.

"We've always had a reputation for being barnstormers," observed Buddy Reaves, 37, who is in his third one-year term as head of the 125-member group. "We want to let the average person know we're professionals."

Reaves has been flying since 1964 and logs about 740 hours a year -more than seven times the flight time of a typical amateur pilot -while spreading insecticides, herbicides and defoliants on 75,000 acres of farmland within 25 miles of Quitman.

"I think we're a special breed of people," said Reaves, who grew up on a farm and used his spending money for flying lessons. "We've got to love to fly. We've got to love agriculture."

Besides excellent reflexes and good health, crop dusters must possess a commercial pilot's license issued by the Federal Aviation Administration and a state chemical applicator's license.

But because of the nationwide agricultural slump that has left many crop dusters with stacks of delinquent accounts, they also must employ sound business practices to avoid a financial tailspin, he said.

Up to 20 Georgia applicators have gone out of business since 1983, largely because "farmers would go bankrupt on them and they couldn't survive," said Reaves, who estimates there are currently about 325 active crop dusters in the state.

Four crop dusting firms, including the Reaves Flying Service, are clustered around the Brooks County Airport. Reaves can taxi from a cement pad where employees load chemicals into his two planes onto the airport's 4,000-foot runway, or land on a dirt strip behind his property.

The resurgence of cotton, particularly in Brooks County, has given crop dusters about their only cause for optimism in an otherwise gloomy farm outlook, said Reaves, the son of state Rep. Henry Reaves, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

Cotton acreage climbed to about 30,000 acres in the county last year, and some fields require 12 to 15 sprays per season to protect them from the dreaded boll weevil and other insects, according to Reaves, who helped to pioneer the use of vegetable oil in Georgia as a chemical carrier.

Currently about 70 percent of his work is with oil, instead of water. With a slower evaporation rate, vegetable oil can provide better dispersal of chemicals in hot weather, he said.

From May to November, during the growing season in south Georgia, Reaves flies a hectic seven-day-a-week schedule, often working 16 hours a day to keep up with his customers' demands.

Most of his time is spent in a Cessna Ag Husky, which holds 240 gallons of chemical mix, but he can switch to a larger plane, an Air Tractor with a 325-gallon capacity, for bigger jobs.

Crop dusting planes usually have only one seat and are made sturdier than planes of similar sizes that carry people. Ag planes are not as fast as people planes, but are more maneuverable and have stronger engines. Cockpits are reinforced to give the crop dusters more protections in case of a crash.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 9, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to wind up matters which had been already put in motion, but there are also some temporary delays in planning new outlets. Persevere and you find you have a pleasant time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Avoid an older person who could put a crimp in your style. Stick close to the one who loves you and understands you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) It is best to be with good friends today and avoid anything connected with business right now. Casual recreation is recommended.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) It is better you get into the activities you like today and not permit an older partner to force ideas on you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Avoid the dull and be off to public places where you can show your finest abilities and gain prestige.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Steer clear of that outside partner who wants to take too much of your time and be happy with the one you love.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be with persons whose mode of living you admire and try to emulate it.Take advantage of propitious situations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make your abode more attractive and comfortable, so don't waste time on frivolous pleasure. Take care of your health.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You want to have a delightful time and this is possible with congenials today, but don't spend too much money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Know what it is that kin desire of you and do what you can for them and relegate your own wishes to the background.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Forget a long-time problem and get out and meet interesting persons who can make your life more worthwhile.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are capable of gaining a greater abundance and should study literature that can be helpful to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have fine ideas for gaining your purposes, but don't let a know-it-all get you off the beam. Show affection for kin.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be very sensitive and should early be taught to be more objective and not feel hurt at every small slight, otherwise a martyr complex will develop. Your progeny could do well in art or business.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MARCH 10, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is one of those days when most everyone feels put upon by adverse circumstances and is apt to lash out at others in order to get rid of frustrations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to remain poised today so that you do not permit outside circumstances to disturb your equanimity.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Try not to do anything that could damage your reputation in the community in which you live. Use tact.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Your friends could be very busy with own affairs and they can have little time for you today, so be patient.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Not a good day to get into new ventures or go to new places, for you could get into some kind of trouble.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't trust your hunches today; they could get you in trouble. If your mate gets into an disagreement with someone, show your loyalty.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use tact in dealing with a partner today otherwise some critical remark could cause a severance of valuable connections.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't permit a co-worker to get under your skin, just smile and walk away. Get your work done efficiently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't be so dead-set on having a good time that you spend money foolishly, so take it easy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) An argument could arise at your home, so blame it on the planets now. Smile and be in control of yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) It is important that you drive most carefully and avoid a possible accident. Try to control your temper with others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care you do not overspend for anything or make some foolish investment that could lose you a bundle.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may feel discontented and could take your ire out on those who are close to you, which would be wrong.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be full of energy but quite likely to place it in the wrong direction, so be sure to teach that vitality should be used constructively, and then this becomes a very successful life. Discipline is important here. The education should be slanted along the lines of trouble-shooting.

GOREN BRIDGE

By CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

1983 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—My partner and I had considerable disagreement over this sequence:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	2 ♡	Pass	Pass
Dble

I intended the double for takeout; partner insisted it was for penalties, since I had opened the bidding with one no trump. In his opinion, he could have bid a suit competitively, or doubled himself, had he had any length or values. — G.R.J., San Francisco, Calif.

A.—There are two sequences to consider. The one you give and this:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	Pass	2 ♡
Dble

In the first case the no trump bidder is under the overcaller. Unless the latter has taken leave of his senses, you are not going to get rich doubling for penalties, since your trump holding will be partly neutralized by your position in front of the overcaller. Therefore, it is logical to play that the double in this position is for takeout, asking partner to bid his best suit. The argument that partner took no action and, therefore, does not have anything of value does not hold water. What is he supposed to do with a balanced hand with four spades and some 4-5 points? If he bids, he can have his head handed to him!

The sequence I give is different. Here, the overcall is in the balancing position, and is made with the expectation of finding some values in partner's hand. If the no trump bidder has a good holding in the overcaller's suit and sound defensive values, he must be able to double for penalties. He does not need to double for takeout since his partner still has another turn and, if opener passes, he can compete if he has the right hand. And if he has the wrong hand to defend two hearts doubled, he is free to remove it.

Q.—What do you think of using two clubs to show a hand of 19-21 points? It is quite popular in this area. — E.B., Tucson, Ariz.

A.—Not my idea of a winning method. If partner has little or nothing, why force the bidding to the two-level or higher, when you might not have the values to fulfill a contract at that level and you don't even know whether you have a fit?

To make game with a hand of 19-21 points, you probably need to find partner with the values for a response to a one-level opening bid. Therefore, there is no need to open a hand in this range with a two-bid. Besides, why warn the opponents that it is dangerous for them to enter the auction?

SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION
NORTH CAROLINA
COUNTY OF PITT

NOTICE OF SERVICE OF PROCESS BY PUBLICATION

CITY OF GREENVILLE, Plaintiff versus
ELMER L. LEARY, and Wife, PATTIE LEARY, Defendant

TO: LAURA MAY AND HER CHILDREN Now or formerly residents of Greenville, North Carolina

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

A pleading seeking relief against Elmer L. Leary and wife, Pattie Leary, has been filed in the above-entitled action and notice of service of process by publication began on 9th day of March, 1986. You may have an interest in the property as a prior owner of the property described below.

The nature of the relief being sought is as follows: The CITY OF GREENVILLE, pursuant to its power of eminent domain, has sought to acquire property of the Defendants, for the purpose of Urban Redevelopment. The property is described as follows:

BEGINNING at an iron pipe set in the northern right of way of 12th Street (with a 49.5 foot right of way) this point located S. 78 degrees 53 minutes E. 90 feet from an iron pipe set in the northern right of way of 12th Street and the eastern right of way of Clark Street (with a 49.5 foot right of way) from this point of beginning runs then N. 11 degrees 04 minutes 45 seconds E. 112.56 feet to an iron pipe set, a corner; runs then S. 78 degrees 55 minutes 15 seconds E. 43.84 feet to an iron pipe set, a corner; runs then S. 11 degrees 04 minutes 45 seconds W. 112.59 feet to an iron pipe set in the northern right of way of 12th Street, a corner; runs then along the northern right of way of 12th Street N. 78 degrees 53 minutes W 43.85 feet to the point of beginning.

This being the same property shown on survey described as "Survey for City of Greenville, Community Development Department, Lot 6, Block B, Tax Map 42," a portion also known as a vacant lot on North side of West 12th Street, Greenville, North Carolina.

You are required to answer the pleading not later than one hundred thirty (130) days after the date of the first publication of notice stated above, exclusive of that date, being on or before July 17, 1986, to assert any rights you may have. Upon your failure to do so, the Plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief sought.

This the 6th day of March, 1986.

Subject: "Dress Gray"

By Lynn Hoogenboom

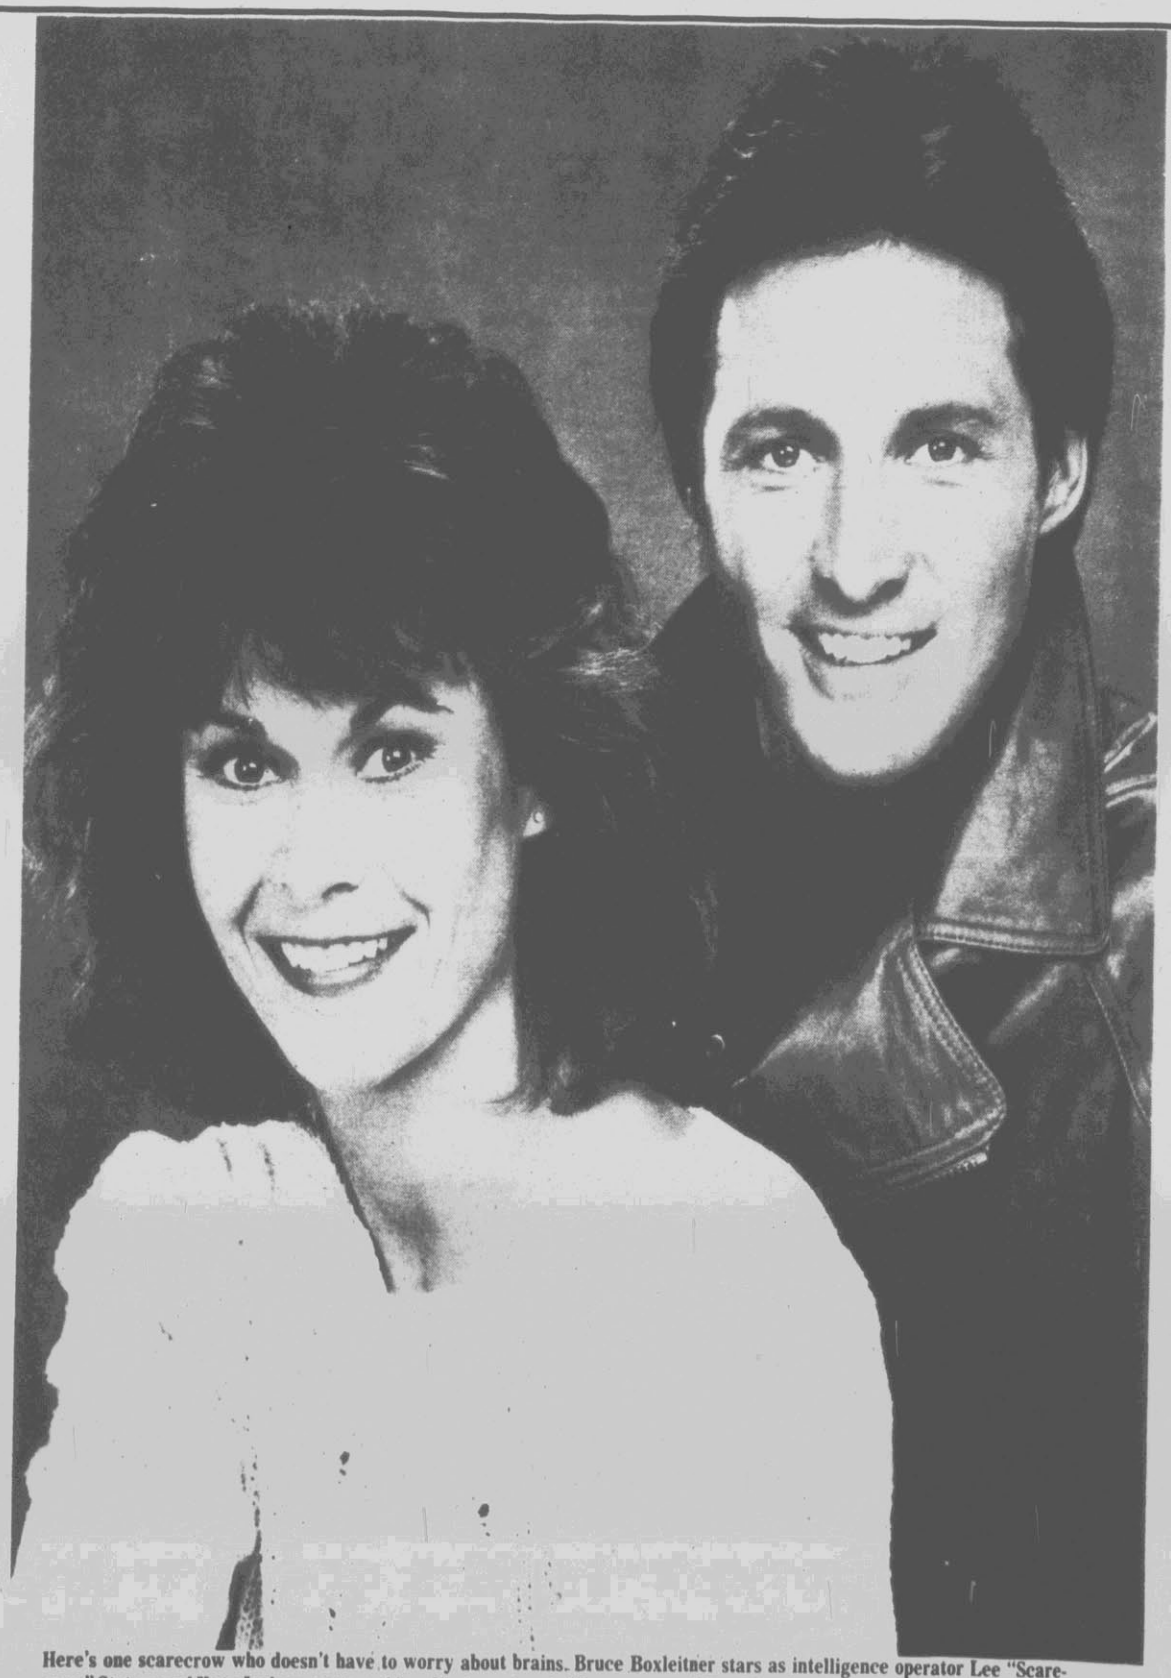
Take a venerable institution (a military academy, for instance) that has been put on the defensive by forces outside its control (the Vietnam War). Add a murder that could blow up into a major scandal (the victim was almost certainly murdered by his sexual partner, a fellow cadet). Top it off with a powerful authority figure who is determined to whitewash the incident — and a lowly cadet who is equally determined to get to the bottom of the matter. What do you have?

You have "Dress Gray," the highly praised 1978 novel by Lucian K. Truscott IV and a new NBC miniseries with a script by Gore Vidal. It will air Sunday and Monday, March 9 and 10, on NBC.

Of course, the road from novel to miniseries is fraught with changes. The book takes place in that most venerable of institutions, West Point. The miniseries takes place in the fictional U.S. Grant Military Academy. The sister of the murdered cadet undergoes a name change (from Samantha to Elizabeth) and becomes the current, rather than just the former, girlfriend of Ry Slaight (Alec Baldwin), the curious cadet. Even the reason for the cover-up undergoes a distinct change.

But one thing that hasn't changed is the devious and conniving character of Gen. Hedges, the orchestrator of the cover-up.

"It's the best part I've had, I think, in six years or so," says Hal Holbrook, who plays the ruthless general. "This man enjoys punishing people. That's where he gets his kicks. And I know that kind of person very well. When I was young, I was subjected to some pretty vicious treatment by somebody." That happened at a boarding school to which he was sent when he was 7 years old. Holbrook's youthful experiences also left him with considerable firsthand knowledge about the military and a military education. "I was sent away to boarding school when I was young," he says. "Then I went to military school for four years, and I was in the Army three years during World War II."



Here's one scarecrow who doesn't have to worry about brains. Bruce Boxleitner stars as intelligence operator Lee "Scarecrow" Stetson and Kate Jackson portrays his unlikely partner in "Scarecrow and Mrs. King," airing Monday, March 10 on CBS.

Mystery Mavens

"Charters and Caldicott" are two retired British gents who forego their passion for cricket in order to sleuth on the "Mystery!" episode of the same name, to air on PBS on Thursday, March 20. The modern comedy-thriller co-stars British imports Robin Bailey and Michael Aldridge as the bumbling duo.

Hep Hepburn

Katharine Hepburn graces our TV screens later this month in "Mrs. Delafield Wants to Marry" on CBS. The comedy is about the December-December romance between Miss Hepburn, as Margaret Delafield, an aristocratic old-moneyed WASP, and Dr. Marvin Elias, a Jewish physician portrayed by Harold Gould. The respective offspring, relatives and communities erupt in an interfaith uproar.

What happens when a man is falsely accused of rape and robbery? Tim Matheson stars in "Blind Justise," a made-for-TV movie about such an ordeal. Lisa Eichhorn co-stars in the film airing Sunday, March 9 on CBS.

Showtime Captures 'Lennon Legacy'

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Five years after his death, the preservation of John Lennon's life has become a cottage industry. We've all read the slew of "inside" books, watched the recent TV movie about Lennon and Yoko Ono, and now we can watch this month's contribution: "The Lennon Legacy: John and Julian," airing March 14 on Showtime. The three-part special includes the TV debut of a 1972 John Lennon concert as well as concert-documentary footage featuring Lennon's son, Julian.

"John Lennon Live in New York City," filmed on Aug. 30, 1972 at New York's Madison Square Garden, was a benefit concert for "One to One," an organization that aided mentally handicapped children. It would prove to be Lennon's only public concert during the decade between the Beatles' breakup in 1970 and his death in 1980.

The film captures Lennon at the height of his highly politicized period. But his "radical" songs, like "Power to the People," offer little more than a childlike view of revolutionary politics, which, for the most part, were passe by 1972. It was also a time when Miss Ono's influence was becoming readily apparent, as seen by Lennon singing the proto-women's liberation (and anti-male) anthem "Woman Is the Nigger of the World"; and a time of Lennon's enchantment with Arthur Janov's primal therapy, expressed in the wrenching ballad "Mother."

Lennon's animosity toward the Beatles, and especially Paul McCartney, had only recently been made public. This concert is full of Lennon's verbal swipes at his former mates. Before playing "Come Together," he offers it as a song from "a long time ago," when, in reality, he's only talking about less than three years earlier. Elsewhere in the show, he introduces another Beatles song by noting that he's going to play "another song by the Rolling Stones."

Lennon and Miss Ono (on keyboards) are backed up by Elephant's Memory, a journeyman New York City bar band. Miss Ono sings several solo numbers; in retrospect one is struck that her warblings, so grating then, have become more soothing in the context of such New Wave rockers as Lene Lovich or the B-52s' Cindy Wilson.

The concert is ragged, but energetic, more a document of a particular (not-so-memorable) moment in rock history than as a testament to John Lennon's art.

Showtime's "Lennon Legacy" also includes clips from Lennon and Miss Ono's "bed-in for peace" (at which they are viewed by the media as little more than a long-haired freak show) and three videos from the couple's "Imagine: The Film."

Also airing on Showtime is "Stand by Me," a slick documentary about Julian Lennon, the 22-year-old musician son of John Lennon and his first wife, Cynthia Powell. He looks a lot like his daddy, sounds a lot like him, but certainly has none of his charisma or passion — despite the attempts of eager fans (who sing "Bye Bye Birdie"-like: "We love you Julian, oh yes we do") to re-create the fervor that gripped their moms 20 years earlier.

Ace of a Show

The cast of "Second Serve," the made-for-TV movie starring Vanessa Redgrave as tennis pro Renee Richards, has been joined by Martin Balsam and Alice Krige. Balsam portrays Dr. Stone, Richard's psychiatrist, and Miss Krige portrays Gwen, Richard's fiancee.

SHOW AND TELL

Mascolo's 'Days' are filled by TV hosting

By Gregory Garver

HOLLYWOOD — The world knows Joseph Mascolo as Count Stefano DiMera on the long-running NBC soap, "Days of Our Lives." But now, perhaps there'll be a new image for the actor: Mascolo, the host.

Joseph Mascolo

He is currently hosting the new syndicated show "Inside Soaps," a weekly half-hour series in which Mascolo talks about soap stars and situations and interviews soap performers. For a man who has been on the other side of the interview so many times, Mascolo finds the change exciting.

"It's sort of a lark," he says. "Interviewing is all very new to me. I've been interviewed hundreds of times and I don't mind that, because I have no responsibility except to have a good time.

"When they asked me to do this show," he adds, "I thought, 'Well, why can't I have a good time asking the questions instead of answering them? Let's just have a conversation and hopefully the person will come out somewhere.' Of course, I now know what reporters have to face when you have a dodo to talk to."

The actor/host, assuming the new show would be more enticing if conversations were held in places other than a routine studio, has also made suggestions as to where interviews should take place.

"I like to ride horses," Mascolo says, "so it was my idea to interview Dack Rambo on horseback, because I knew he liked to ride, too. Another one was done in a hansom cab, riding around the Plaza in New York. I think those backgrounds are good."

He's enjoying his new job so far, but he doesn't want anybody to get the wrong idea. He's still an actor, and claims he'll always be an actor. Hosting, the actor says, is just a new job, not a new career.

Mascolo's stints on "Days" are periodic, but he's not afraid of losing them. "Like a phoenix, I've risen from the ashes three times," he says with a laugh.

TV Chatter

He's not as sexy as Don Johnson or as good-looking as Philip Michael Thomas, but Elvis, the cold-blooded gator of "Miami Vice," has just as much snap — and as many fans — as his human counterparts. Lately, however, the slithery star hasn't been chewing the scenery as much as he used to — and NBC has been receiving biting fan mail about the reptile's "retirement." "Elvis only appears on every fourth or fifth show," explains network spokesman Brian Robinette, "but contrary to popular belief, it has nothing to do with Don's ego. He likes Elvis, but the creature is difficult to work with. His jaws are clamped shut, yet he still manages to nip crew members. Elvis causes lots of aggravation, so we sent him to a game farm. The last we heard, Elvis has a girlfriend. If Don is jealous, it could be because of that."

Marsha Mason's upcoming TV movie may be called "Trapped in Silence," but the actress's career is hardly silent. The 43-year-old actress has teamed with former agent Helene Shaw to form Come Lately Productions, and Miss Mason is currently producing and starring in three projects: the CBS film "The Rita Jensen Story," in which she'll play the investigative reporter who was the roommate of Brink's robber Cathy Boudin; an HBO comedy that reunites Marsha with her "Goodbye Girl" co-star Richard Dreyfuss; and "Potomac Fever," a theatrical film which co-stars pal Jane Alexander. (The script was originally written by "Entertainment Tonight" correspondent Barbara Howard, but is now being rewritten, according to Marsha, because "Barbara's original script was bad.") "Most directors hate producers," explains Marsha, "and I don't know many actors who like them. I'm hoping to change that by bringing creativity and balance to Hollywood."

On-screen, he was rough ("The Great Escape"), tough ("Papillon") and relentless ("Bullitt"). Off-screen, Steve McQueen was an ex-Marine who loved motorcycles, booze and women. But in her new biography, "McQueen" (Doubleday), Penina Spiegel claims that the actor (who died at the age of 50 in 1980) may also have been gay. "Steve was so obsessed with homosexuality that he probably had homosexual experiences," says Penina. "I was shocked and staggered when I first learned about it," adds the author, who spent two years penning her literary saga. And while Penina refuses to divulge any of Steve's possible amours, Neile McQueen Toffel, who recently published her tale of life with the actor, "My Husband, My Friend" (Atheneum), denies the accusations. "It's not even worth a comment," Neile told TV Update. Neile was married to McQueen for nearly 16 years.

The royalties from Dionne Warwick's latest tune, "That's What Friends Are For," have netted more than $500,000 for the National AIDS Research Foundation, but the singer should be researching exactly what her friends are writing about her. During a recent Big Apple concert, TV Update spotted a copy of Miss Warwick's official bio, and discovered two major faux pas. The bio claimed "That's What Friends Are For" is from her "Finder of Lost Lovers" album, but the hit single is from Miss Warwick's latest LP, called (what else?) "That's What Friends Are For." And for the record, the actual title of the other album is "Finder of Lost Loves." Quips one friend: "The other title makes Dionne sound X-rated!" ...

We want our mummy! Tom Harrison doesn't exactly keep things under wraps when he stars in "Mummy, Daddy," the episode of "Amazing Stories" airing Sunday, March 9 on NBC.

Former "Knots Landing" star Alec Baldwin stars as Ry Slaight, a first classman who tries to save his military career after he is accused of murder in "Dress Gray," airing Sunday, March 9 and Monday, March 10 on NBC. Susan Hess co-stars.

CONGRATULATIONS!

'Soap Encyclopedia' Is Invaluable Aid

By Connie Passalacqua

Just when you thought you had encountered the best reference book ever written on soap operas, Robert LaGuardia's "Soap World" (Arbor House, 1983), a new one comes along that's far superior. It's Christopher Schemering's "Soap Opera Encyclopedia" (Ballantine, $8.95). Not only is it more complete (it also covers nighttime soaps) and more detailed, it's also a good read. Schemering is an opinionated viewer who lets his feelings be clearly known alongside all his collected facts.

Schemering, a Washington, D.C.-based free-lance writer, has been a soap opera fan and memorabilia collector since he became addicted to "Dark Shadows" as a teen in the late 1960s. For his own pleasure, now reproduced in his book, he has kept one-of-a-kind, accurate, dated cast lists.

Do you want to know when Larry Hagman was on "Edge of Night"? It was 1961-63. How about when Tom Selleck was on "The Young and the Restless"? It was 1974-75). When Genie Francis came back to "General Hospital" for guest appearances? The answer: 1983 and 1984.

For the serious soap addict, these cast lists alone are worth the price of the book. Schemering is such a fanatic for detail that he's even collected some minutiae that the writers, producers and actors involved probably don't even remember. For example, on "Search for Tomorrow," Adam Storke's character was always referred to by his last name, Ryder. Schemering comes up with his never-used first name — Andrew. He further demonstrates his attention to detail by collecting and reproducing funny or sharp lines of dialogue from shows. One of the best: a remark from one character on "Paper Dolls" about Morgan Fairchild's bitchy character Racine: "She's done pretty well for a girl named off the map of Wisconsin."

Other invaluable information includes complete lists of all the nominees and winners of the Daytime Emmys, (something the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences) doesn't even have in itsfiles), celebritv guest appearances and more.

T.J.'s Terror Tactics

William Shatner, Heather Locklear, James Darren and Don Murray star in "Blood Sport," a new "T.J. Hooker" made-for-TV flick. Currently in production in L.A., the police drama will document the special-assignment antics of Hooker and colleagues as they protect the lives of a terrorist-targeted U.S. senator and his wife.

CAR COMPACT DISC PLAYERS

Hi Tech Electronics
In October, 1982, Sony introduced the world's first digital audio Compact Disc (CD) player. The player incorporated a laser beam designed to "read" microscopic pits embedded beneath the surface of a relatively small (4¾") disc. Those present were startled by the clean, crisp and rich quality of the performance from this new way of storing and playing music. Come by and hear this quality for yourself.

Dyer's Best Offense Is A Good 'Defence'

By Jay Carman

How do you follow an Oscar-winning act such as Gwynne Dyer's 1983 "War" series, which was one of the most sweeping, comprehensive and visionary broadcasting projects in TV history?

The Newfoundland-born journalist, author, broadcaster and war historian has a surprising answer. "It's easy," he says. "You just go from the macro to the micro, as economists would say." Translation: Having dealt with the world at large, Dyer now turns his attention to his own country.

Which is why the CBC is currently airing Dyer's three-part series "The Defence of Canada." Part two airs Sunday, March 9 and it concludes on Sunday, March 16.

"The Defence of Canada" is a series about Canada's painful struggle — past and present — to make itself safe in an unsafe world.

The 42-year-old ex-Navy officer says he has broken his subject down into three parts. The first installment, "A Long Way from Home," looked at how Canadian armies have been used in the past and how its military history has shaped the peculiar character of today's Canadian Armed Forces.

The second installment, "Alliance Junkies," focuses on what Dyer calls the "strategic psychology" of Canada. Why, for instance, did Canada, a North American country with no vital interests in Europe, spend fully 10 years of this century at war to defend various European borders? Says Dyer, "It's as though we had come to imagine that we actually had a border on Europe, that vast stretches of ocean did not exist."

In part three, "The Space Between," Dyer covers Canada's strategic position as "the Belgium of the nuclear age, sandwiched between two rival superpowers." It makes clear Canada's increased strategic importance to the United States, the updating of the two countries' defence relationship and the constraints it places on Canadians' sense of freedom and independence.

Dyer says he is aware that many viewers react to his productions by becoming depressed and frightened. But, after finding himself unable to answer a question put to him a few years ago by his twin teenage sons, he felt he had no choice but to put a reasoned case for nuclear disarmament before viewers.

His sons' question was: "Will we survive a nuclear war?" Dyer's answer today? "I'm not a total pessimist," he says. "But then there are no guarantees, so I'm not a total optimist, either."

Christophers' Kudos

The producers, director and writers of the CBS productions "Do You Remember Love?" and "Out of the Darkness" have been announced as recipients of the Christophers' annual awards for distinguished television achievement. The Christophers, whose ecumenical credo is "Better to light one candle than to curse the darkness," have been presenting awards lauding artistic accomplishment in TV, film and literature since 1949.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: Is Henry Morgan, who was a panelist on "What's My Line?" the brother of Harry Morgan, of "Dragnet" and "M*A*S*H" fame? — B. GOINS, MOBILE, ALA.

The two Morgans are not related. But Henry "Harry" Morgan, currently starring in the new NBC sitcom "Blacke's Magic," was once known as Henry Morgan. He was billed as such in some of his early films, including "Happy Land" (1943) and "From This Day Forward" (1946), although he was born Harry Bratsburg on April 10, 1915 in Detroit. Henry "Harry" Morgan has since dropped the name Henry, and is not to be confused with cynical TV comic Henry Morgan.

Dear Michele: Yul Brynner once made a Spanish-produced movie that seemed to be cashing in on Clint Eastwood's "Hang 'Em High" movie success. What was the name of this film? — PATRICIA BRYARLY, FAIRMONT CITY, ILL.

Although Brynner is best known for his role in "The King and I," he did appear in many other films. Among them was "Adios Sabata" (1971). This Italian/Spanish production was the second in a trilogy of spaghetti westerns and starred Brynner, subbing for actor Lee Van Cleef, as Sabata. Van Cleef appeared in "Sabata" (1970) and "The Return of Sabata" (1972).

Dear Michele: Aidan Quinn was superb in "An Early Frost." What can you tell me about him? — CALVIN E. STANSBURY, ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

Prior to the release of his first feature film, "Reckless" (1984), Quinn's name was bandied about as Hollywood's next James Dean. The film, however, was a colossal flop, and Quinn was soon a rebel without applause. The 27-year-old son of Irish immigrant parents, Quinn returned briefly to his native Chicago as a cocktail waiter. "When 'Reckless' came out, I found I didn't want to be a movie star," recalls Quinn. Nevertheless, seven months after his movie debut, he was back on stage in an off-Broadway production of Sam Shepard's "Fool For Love." Quinn has also appeared as Rosanna Arquette's love interest in "Desperately Seeking Susan"(1985) and as the AIDS-stricken young lawyer, Michael Pierson, in NBC's "An Early Frost." He will soon be seen in "The Mission," in which he portrays Robert De Niro's younger brother.

Matheson's Serious In 'Blind Justice'

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — Tim Matheson has been working regularly on TV since he was a precocious fifth-grader, and although he's hardly ever out of a job, that special brand of superstardom that the tube can bring has somehow eluded him.

But, he says, it doesn't bother him a bit. He's had major roles in feature films, and although they've kept the nation's box-office ticket machines busy, he's not widely recognized as a movie actor.

That doesn't worry him either. "For years, I've had strangers coming up to me and treating me like an old friend — they know me from somewhere, but they can't think where, and the last thing that crosses their minds is that they've seen me on TV or in a movie theater.

"It may be true that every actor wants to be famous, but I'm happy to settle for what I've got — regular work and a good name in the industry." Matheson has lately been typecast as a light romantic lead rather than a dramatic actor, and while he hasn't been unhappy in that niche either, he jumped at this week's CBS movie, "Blind Justice" when it came along.

"I'm a producer and a director as well as an actor, and I'd almost started to think of myself only in terms of comedy," he says. "There's nothing funny about 'Blind Justice,' and I have to admit that if I had been casting it, I probably wouldn't have thought of myself for the lead role."

Nugent Teams With Conti On Soundtrack

By E.A. Vare

Motor City Madman Ted Nugent teaming up with "Rocky" tunesmith Bill Conti? It's an unlikely partnership, but that's the pairing for the soundtrack of "Nomads," an upcoming thriller starring Pierce Brosnan and Lesley Anne Down. (Adam Ant has a cameo role, too.) Nugent is doing some of the incidental music for the film, as well as laying down the track "Strangers," which also appears on his current album, "Little Miss Dangerous." Nugent says he plans to promote the new LP with a lot of appearances in record stores and regional contests.

"Can you imagine how much fun I will have," asks Nugent, "holding 'Little Miss Dangerous' contest with the retailers? I can be judge, jury and executioner!"

BEHIND THE SCENES

By Frank Lovece

Weinger, you see, is the man in charge of Color Systems Technology, the firm responsible for the colorized version of the classic 1947 black-and-white film "Miracle on 34th Street"; for the color in "The Honeymooners 25th Anniversary Special"; and for the color in Alfred Hitchcock's cheeks in those freshly painted vintage openings that have been revived for NBC's "Alfred Hitchcock Presents."

Ralph Weinger

"There is a countless number of fine movies and other programs that don't get shown on TV as often as they should," says Weinger, "simply because they're in black-and-white. Colorization gives them new life."

Not everyone sees it the same way. Legendary director Frank Capra recently complained that computer-colorization of his old movies was akin to "painting over a statue," and he's investigating copyright protection.

Weinger, 57, is a longtime inventor and electronics entrepreneur who developed his own method of computer colorization in 1978. A couple of other companies currently have their own methods and equipment, but Weinger's company, BJA (named after his children's initials), was the trailblazer.

"We colorized 26 minutes of the (1979) miniseries 'Ike,'" Weinger recalls. "Then we did eight minutes of 'King,'" a miniseries about the assassinated civil-rights leader. Color systems has lately colorized two "pilot" episodes of the old Steve McQueen series "Wanted: Dead or Alive" ("If the syndicator likes it we may do all 91 episodes"), plus the Disney movie "The Absent-Minded Professor."

In basic terms, Weinger's method involves a human color technician using an electronic graphics pen and tablet, plus a computer screen playing a black-and-white videotape. The colorist divides an on-screen image into "zones," Weinger explains, and, using a color-wheel display on a computer screen, devises "color formulations" that he or she applies by touching the pen to the tablet.

Since devices with names like the Quantel Paint Box and the Dubner Color Graphics Generator are proliferating, we'll be seeing more and more examples of colorization. "But the machines are just a small part of it," Weinger emphasizes. "It's the people — the artists — who make colorization work."

CABLE LOG

Lennon legacy lives on in two specials

By Debra Morgenstern Katz

Circle Friday, March 14 on your calendar. It'll be an evening for remembrance and reflection as Showtime airs an hour of music and talk by Julian Lennon, followed by an hour of concert footage of John Lennon and Yoko Ono. There will also be two shorts capping the evening: "The Toronto Bed-In Documentary" and videos from "Imagine — The Film."

John Lennon

Taken all together, this is a two-hour stretch of powerful images and memories: the elder Lennon — his hair down to his back — in bed with Miss Ono as the press snap photos all around them; Lennon's son, Julian, relating how he learned about his father's death as the press swarmed around his mother's house; and Miss Ono, her fist raised in defiance, exhorting all the "sisters" to unite for world change.

"John Lennon Live in New York City" is a sixty-minute film of an August, 1972 New York City concert the singer and Miss Ono gave to aid mentally-handicapped children. Today, nearly 14 years later, the film becomes a historical and sociological curiosity more than a musical experience. Almost every word reeks of revolution, oppression, protest and politics. They sing "Born in a Prison" and Miss Ono screams "Let me out! Let me out! Let me out!" Their voices are shrill and harsh. They screech and wail. Their songs are full of political messages, protesting and complaining. These are angry songs.

That was 1972. It's startling to remember Lennon's single-mindedness: The ex-Beatle practically apologizes ("Let's go back to the past just once," he says almost reluctantly) when he sings an old Beatles song, "Come Together." When someone calls out from the audience, Lennon turns to him and says, "Is that somebody shouting Ringo? That was last year ... or four years ago ...."

Then there's the new generation. Giggly girls delightfully screeching "We love you, Julian!" One girl jumps onto the stage, hugging the singer until she's pried away. Julian Lennon, at 22, is boyish and innocent, and he says exactly what he feels as he shows his nervousness and vulnerability. Because of this, he's very likable.

Most startling, however, is how the two concerts differ: John's is heavy; his son's is light. It's like watching a history lesson.

ACC Expected To Dominate '86 NCAAs

By Adam Beckerman

It's tournament time. A little more than two weeks of college hoops, culminating in the NCAA finals in Dallas on Monday, March 31. CBS calls the ordeal "The Road to..." What's often crucial to a school's travel hopes is to get placed in a region with a favorable climate. For instance, even if you're from the Georgetown section of Washington, D.C., you might rather play in the West regional if it means you can easily beat up on all the wimpy teams out there. See?

The selection committee's job is to make sure most of the cream rises to the top and then hope like heck that an intriguing dark horse pulls off a miracle. Obviously, last year's Georgetown-Villanova match was planned perfection. Brent Musburger will unveil this year's tournament format Sunday, March 9 on CBS.

Also on March 9, NBC airs the conclusion of the tourey that decides this year's top conference, the Atlantic Coast Conference. Last year it was the Big East that dominated both the regular season and the NCAAs, placing an unprecedented three out of four teams in the tournament semifinals. This year, with the graduation of Pat Ewing, Chris Mullin and Ed Pinkney, the Beast from the East didn't exactly fall flat, but it couldn't approach the ACC in terms of talent or balance.

"Without a doubt, the ACC's the class conference of the basketball world," says NBC sportscaster Al McGuire. "Georgia Tech, North Carolina, Duke. It'll be a shock if any of these three don't win the national championship. The Big East has done a good job replacing its prime-time stars. It should be fed pastry every day. But this year in the ACC, besides Wake Forest, any team could beat any other team on its home court.

"You can't say that about the Big East," continues McGuire. "Some of their facilities are antiquated. That's one of the reasons why a Seton Hall can't attract the blue chippers. That's rare in the ACC — except for Duke, where they play in that old gym, so they're like the Ivy League, so they show they don't put sports out of perspective. Still, for these kids, four years of ACC ball is a baptism. There's no influx of pro ball, like in the big cities. These kids are the main attraction for the duration.

"Also, it's a coaches' conference," he says. "A job pays $250,000 minimum. You can always gauge a coaches' success if he's known by one name, and look at the ACC: Lefty, Jimmy, Bobby, Coach K and Dean. All the others eventually leave 'cause they can't catch Dean," referring to Dean Smith, venerable skipper of North Carolina.

Who does McGuire like?

"I like North Carolina," he says. "But I'm picking Georgia Tech."

There are some mergers in the making with career compatible separates by Personal Petites. All giving you new fashion flexibility!

B. Can petites wear plaid? Yes! The smaller scale of today's perfectly proportioned plaids makes it a flattering choice. Polyester/linen skirt with stitched pleats, 6-16, blue/red, 45.00. Front cable knit sweater with bateau neck, acrylic, P-S-M, red, 36.00.

Moving up? A polished look is part of it . . . and who better to turn to for a magnificent mix than Liz and her Liz Claiborne Petites collection for spring?

C. Double breasted rayon jacket, 2-12, pearl, 125.00. Straight rayon skirt with back pocket, 2-12, pearl, 60.00. Soft pleated polyester jacquard blouse with shoulder pads, long sleeves, 2-12, pink, 55.00.

D. Richly textured multi-stitch sweater in cotton/ramie/acrylic, P-S-M, pearl, 50.00.

An interplay of elements to delight the eye, inspire the imagination. With separates by Chaus Petites you have the kind of dressing that's an asset for the office and after.
A. Short sleeve silk/polyester blouse, 2-12, lavender, 40.00. Crystal pleated skirt of fluid, flowing polyester georgette, 2-12, white polka dots on lavender, 40.00.
B. Clean lined, single breasted jacket with padded shoulders, viscose/linen, 2-12, pink, 84.00. Pleated front, short sleeve blouse of silk/polyester with a lace collar, padded shoulders. 2-12, cameo, 48.00. Pleated front skirt with back vent, viscose/linen, 2-12, pink, 52.00.

A great alliance of go anywhere good looks. Stripes and brights to strike up a casual mood from Koret® Petites!
C. Bold graphic shirt with a French Riviera flavor, in coolest cotton, 4-14, yellow, 35.00. Short sleeve textured sweater in ramie/cotton, P-S-M, blue, white or rose, 35.00. Elastic waist pants with inside drawstring, polyester/cotton, 4-14, white, 36.00.
D. Multi-striped sweater—and remember, vertical stripes like these add inches to your height—in cotton/nylon, P-S-M, 37.00. Belted skirt in crisp polyester/cotton, 4-14, jungle rose, 38.00.

E. Pure cotton with crocheted edges, in colors to collect: royal, fuchsia, jade or natural, S-M-L, 26.00.

Your color cue for spring: a sunshine sweater from Herald House Petites with the added plus of texture!
F. In cotton/rayon, P-S-M, banana, white, cerise or soft green, 27.00.

A. Chemise styling with a white collar on the short sleeve dress, matching belt. Topped with a cardigan jacket in a herringbone print. Polyester/rayon linen-look, 6-14, navy/white, 92.00.

Take on a lively outlook for spring with a windowpane plaid by J.E. Petite. Just the sort of breezy sophistication you want when the weather turns warm.
B. Dolman sleeve dress that's exclusively ours! In cool cotton, black/white pattern with a red border stripe, 4-14, 78.00.

Sheer femininity from shoulder to hem, making a soft social statement for day . . . and especially for evening! A dinner suit by Argenti Petite in a fluid silk jacquard.
C. Double breasted jacket with pleating detail, fully pleated skirt, 4-12, emerald, 110.00.

Shirtdress simplicity! You won't find an easier dress to wear this spring . . . or one that moves into summer (or around the clock) with more fashion finesse.
D. From Alyssa Scott, a tailored silhouette with double breasted bodice and mock wrap skirt, polyester/rayon linen-look, 4-14, royal, 64.00.

Can anything that looks so great feel so cool? Cotton can. This short sleeve shirtdress by Liz Claiborne Petites is just what the season calls for!
E. With notch collar, pleated back and full skirt. 4-12, hot pink with contrasting buttons and belt, 88.00.

Charlton Heston talks about acting, politics and himself

'If I Ran & Won, I'd Never

EARLY MORNING, on a warm winter day in Beverly Hills, Charlton Heston sat with me on the roof of his screening room overlooking the tennis courts behind his house. We watched his friends play in an informal tournament as we talked for several hours. Heston recently had served as master of ceremonies at the 30th anniversary banquet for National Review magazine. I asked about the event.

"Some of the best speakers in the country were there," he began, "but I'd have to put the President at the top of the list. You were genuinely entertained by his speech, rather than looking at your watch and wondering when he was going to finish. I've known Ronnie for a long time, but it's not like seeing your old buddy up there. The aura of the office is unavoidable, especially when you have someone who can inhabit that aura as he can. He's a man of extraordinary energy who's always been underrated by his opponents, whether as an actor or union leader or politician. Much like Eisenhower in a way. No one liked him but the people.

"I remember when Reagan was president of the Screen Actors Guild," Heston continued, his deep baritone voice as modulated as a fine instrument being played by a brilliant musician, "and we took a strike vote involving very complex and difficult issues. The negotiations were long and hard. I was on one of the negotiating committees, and we were up most of the night. When I got home early the next morning, I told my wife [Lydia Clarke Heston] that Reagan was a real leader. I had never seen anyone negotiate as well, lead a union as well as he. He was untiring.

"During the '84 campaign, I'd been doing some stuff for the President—campaigning 14, 15 days, appearing in states where Republican Senators were vulnerable. I did what I was asked. On the last day of the race, he asked me to go down to San Diego. There was a huge rally, and I did my bit.

"Nancy saw me. I've known Nancy longer than he has. She said, 'Why don't you ride back [to Los Angeles] with us on Air Force One?' The campaign was over, everybody on the plane was in a euphoric mood because we knew the polls said that Reagan would take everything except the District and maybe Minnesota. Polls are so accurate now, it's scary. Everybody was exhausted. Nancy was absolutely white-faced with fatigue. But the President?" Heston laughed. "Hell, he was standing there, cheeks glowing, eyes shining, smiling, not tired at all. And I thought of the line, 'Upon what meat does this Caesar feed?' The meat upon which this Caesar feeds is politics."

Charlton Heston, star: in real life (left), on Capitol steps; on television, in The Colbys; and in films, as Moses in The Ten Commandments, with Yvonne de Carlo and John Derek, in 1956.

Heston was dressed in a red polo shirt, white shorts, white tennis sneakers. Later he would play in the tournament his friends had held every Saturday for 25 years. It's his favorite game, despite an injury to his legs that causes him to hobble slightly when he walks. At 62, his is an imposing physical presence: tall (6 feet 3), with massive shoulders, large torso and muscular legs that seem too short for his height. Remarkably preserved is the body and the face that were etched into popular consciousness almost 30 years ago in the movie Ben Hur: the large head, chiseled features, the face dominated by a broken Roman nose that gives the appearance of strength and solidity, both patrician and commanding; the very ruggedness of features he seems to employ to cloak from view his deepest feelings. And the eyes that give nothing away.

"I think politics is an Irish talent," Heston said. "Look at Jack Kennedy, whom I worked for some, and knew. He had the same gift as Reagan. Look at Tip O'Neill. Ted and Bobby Kennedy. Mayor Daley. That fire burned in each of them. But with us Scots, it's a different thing. We do things out of a dour Calvinistic sense of duty. We take no pleasure in it."

Heston paused a moment, reflecting. He is a thoughtful man, well-educated and well-read; respectful of words, he is careful in what he says. Those qualities, plus his immense fame and popularity, make him an obvious candidate for public office. I knew the Republican Party was urging him to run in 1986 for Alan Cranston's Senate seat in California, where polls had shown that Heston could win. I asked him if he had finally decided to run for the Senate.

Heston explained that he'd been an independent, not a Republican, "most of my life." He added, "You have to understand that. I supported Jack Kennedy, and I'd do it again. I might even support Ted Kennedy, if he ever once more decided to go for it, since he's begun to move toward the center."

"I was first approached to run for the Senate by the Democrats," Heston revealed, "about 15 years ago, when there was a highly vulnerable Republican seat here. I decided to wait, knowing I could run later. What I've had to face with this Senate thing is if I ran and won—and I think I would—I'd never be able to act again. And that's impossible for me to accept. It means too much to me. Acting may be a trivial way to make a living, but it's what I do. I pretend to be other people. I'd rather play a Senator than be one." He smiled.

I was surprised by this decision because Heston is a man of strong political instincts and beliefs; deeply patriotic, a war veteran who has been active in political causes most of his life. Like Reagan, he's a former president of the Screen Actors Guild and, similarly, has a network of powerful men who have offered to help him—as they helped Reagan—secure power should he run.

"I think I decided not to go for it that day on Air Force One," he said. "I looked at the President and thought: I don't have it in my belly, the fire there. I thought: He's been campaigning for three months solid, this man much older than I, and he just glows from it. Like Antaeus, who wrestled with Hercules, every time Hercules threw him to the ground, Antaeus took strength from touching the earth. The more that men like Reagan campaign, the stronger they get. I get tired. I do publicity tours and get pretty damn exhausted. If I had to do that in politics, I'd think: God, I'd rather be playing Shakespeare somewhere. Hell, I'd rather be playing in The Colbys!" (Heston's ABC-TV drama series, a spin-off from Dynasty, the network's hit show.)

Charlton Heston has been acting since the age of 5, when he played Santa in the one-room school he attended in the northern woods of St. Helen, Mich., a tiny village where his father, Russell Whitford Carter, ran a lumber mill. A lonely boy, he spent his time acting out stories he read, living in a world without radio or films and with few friends his own age.

"I lived a very isolated boyhood," Heston told me, "geographically remote, deep in the woods, and it was an early conditioning factor in my life. I loved my father very much, but when I was 10, my parents divorced. It was bitter, and I hardly saw him until just before I went overseas in the Army to fight. He's been dead now over 20 years, and I think warmly of him."

> 'I think politics is an Irish talent. Look at Jack Kennedy ...He had the same gift as Reagan. Look at Tip O'Neill. Ted and Bobby Kennedy...'

His mother, Lilla Charlton Carter, married Chester L. Heston, and the family moved to Wilmette, Ill. In high school there, Charlton Heston joined the drama program. He then attended Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. (his birthplace), on an acting scholarship, determined to make the theater his life.

"I didn't go after fame," he said. "I wanted to be an actor. I think being brought up in a remote place with no other amusement inclined me to books. More than most kids, I suppose, I played games—imaginary, pretend games—living in a made-up world. When my parents divorced, it was the most traumatic event of my life, including getting shot at in World War II. And when we moved to Wilmette, I felt socially unable to handle life on the North Shore. I was lonely as an adolescent, with a sense of not belonging. I was not equipped to play any ball sports because I didn't know how to play any of them. I tried out for football and got a broken nose, which turned out to be an enormous asset." He laughed. "It's gotten me a lot of parts. Also, I couldn't dance, and I didn't have dates with girls because I had no car, and you had to have that."

Heston spoke quietly now, looking away from me, thinking back on the shy young man who would become world-famous.

"I think many actors are shy," he said. "People think of actors as extroverts. They're not. Supposedly there's a fourth wall between you and the audience. The audience is overhearing what you are saying on the stage. That's the ideal. What acting offered me was the chance to be many other people. In those days, I wasn't satisfied being me. You see, I always thought of myself as inadequate. Kids of divorced parents always feel that way—that, on some subconscious level, they're responsible. It comes from self-loathing. I suppose a lot of that has to do with my Scottish, Calvinistic background, instilled in me by my grandparents, that somehow you're responsible for what happens to you. At Northwestern, I met my wife. We were both freshmen, and I began to change. And then I went to war, and that changed me too. When I got back, my wife and I launched our odyssey—one that all actors undertake—and we went to New York to find work."

In New York, they lived in a cold-water tenement flat in Hell's Kitchen, tried to get work, and couldn't. Finally, they were hired as co-directors and players at the Asheville Community Theatre in Asheville, N.C. That was in 1947.

"We went there to do one play, earn a little money and then get back to New York," Heston recalled. "It was a pleasant change—after having been thrown out of countless offices, having doors slammed in my face—to go where I could work."

In 1948, they returned to New York, and Heston made his Broadway debut in Antony and Cleopatra. He went on to do early live TV dramas, such as Jane Eyre, Macbeth, Of Human Bondage, The Taming of the Shrew and Wuthering Heights. In 1950, producer Hal Wallis brought him to Hollywood to play the lead in Dark City. Immediately after, director Cecil B. deMille cast him in The Greatest Show on Earth, which won the Oscar as Best Picture of 1952 and made Charlton Heston a major star. He later starred in more than 50 films, among them Ruby Gentry, The Ten Commandments (in which Heston and his son, Fraser, both play Moses—as a man and as an infant), Ben Hur (for which he won the Oscar as Best Actor of 1959), The Big Country, El Cid, The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Agony and the Ecstasy, Julius Caesar, The Hawaiians, Soylent Green, Airport '75, Planet of the Apes and Earthquake.

There has never been a scandal that has touched him, and Heston's marriage is one of the strongest and longest-lived in Hollywood. I reminded him of others—stars who have been undone by celebrity—including Marilyn Monroe, John Belushi and Judy Garland. How, I asked, has he been able to handle his fame?

"Celebrity scars you," he answered. "No question about it. You live in a different world from other people. For example, I know that Sinatra goes to the Dodger games, but he sits in [a private] box. I go to tennis matches because the crowds are controlled, but I wasn't able to take my kids [his son, Fraser, and daughter, Holly Ann] to Disneyland. The downside of celebrity is the damage to your character—you start believing your press clippings. You have to think of the Roman emperors, who lived in such splendor: Girls walked in parades, showering them with rose petals, whispering, 'You too shall die!' You survive it by saying to yourself, 'You too shall die.' Still, celebrity is a corrosive condition, and I think I was lucky that it came to me slowly, so I could adapt.

"Anyway, stardom was not what I was seeking. I don't think stardom is what any serious actor has in mind. What they have in mind is acting, getting good parts. Stardom is not something you seek; it's something you accept. The material rewards are considerable—certainly out of all proportion to merit—and [stardom] gives you what the artist wants above all else: control. One reason I agreed to do The Colbys is that I was given unusual artistic control over my own character and the show itself. That makes it very satisfying, to be able to act a part as you think it should be done. I enjoy doing the show very much, and I hope it runs a long time."

He smiled. "You know, I've been a very lucky man. I have no regrets. There are still a lot of roles I want to play, much I want to do. And, inside, I still feel like a young man full of optimism and wonder."

SURGEON GENERAL'S WARNING: Cigarette Smoke Contains Carbon Monoxide.

An unusual program that seems to prove even delinquents can change their lives

Must Kids Be Bad?

AT 12, MARCUS WAS a pickpocket. At 15, this boy from Philadelphia staged armed robberies with a sawed-off Winchester. Four times he was remanded to juvenile-justice programs—places where the rites of passage often included drugs, sex and more crime. Then he came to VisionQuest.

Today, at 18, Marcus' unorthodox but ultimately successful rite of passage is that he tamed Wind Walker, a wild mustang. In doing so, he learned to trust people—and himself.

"I treated Wind Walker as I hoped I'd be treated if I were an animal," says Marcus. "I'd see he'd be fed and brushed down and clean. I'd talk to him, and he'd nod or stomp a foot and talk to me." He paused. "I learned that the same thing goes for people."

Marcus is just one of the successes of VisionQuest, a Tucson-based private program that aims to rehabilitate hard-core juvenile delinquents through positive experiences and physical challenges in the wilderness. Before coming to VisionQuest, Marcus and youngsters like him ordinarily would have been pacing a 10-by-7-foot cell or walking a prison yard or watching TV in an institution dayroom. Instead, these kids travel thousands of miles on rattling Conestoga-style wagons, endure bone-grinding cold in the mountains and throat-parching dryness in the deserts, or sail a tall ship from Maine to Florida.

Among the 565 boys and girls now in VisionQuest, there is a 13-year-old drug dealer from Maine, a 14-year-old rapist from Florida and many child versions of the criminals who populate the adult world. They are white, black, Hispanic, Native American, Asian, and many have been just one step away from being certified, which means they could be sent to a penitentiary with adult criminals.

"We don't rehabilitate them—we habilitate them," says Bob Burton, the former head of a Nevada juvenile-detention program who founded VisionQuest in 1973. "We are teaching them for the first time in their lives about the rules of living in a society. They learn the fundamentals of being responsible for their actions and accepting the responsibility of commitment."

Charles had been roaming since he was 12. "It got me nowhere," he says. Now 18, Charles says VisionQuest taught him, "I can't keep running the rest of my life."

The VisionQuest experience—which begins at one of six wilderness camps in Arizona, Pennsylvania and Florida—also includes daily schoolwork, a weekly allowance of $7, counseling sessions and regular telephone calls home.

At the core and soul of the program is the "quest," a concept that evolved from Bob Burton's experience working with the Plains Indians as a volunteer with VISTA, the federal agency. Burton decided to apply the tribal rite of passage, a practice in which the Crow and Cheyenne Indians sent boys into the wilderness as a part of achieving manhood.

"We intend to revolutionize the treatment of children," says Burton. "We can break the pattern of treating delinquents with inhumane punishment and medication. We can stop manufacturing adult criminals."

Three quests in particular bring the boys and girls into intimate contact with wild horses and stubborn mules: a six-month wagon train expedition; an eight-week program to train wild mustangs; and the Buffalo Soldiers Cavalry, which gets its name from the all-black troops in the Indian wars a century ago. Neither beast nor boy nor girl is ever the same again.

Consider, for example, Charles, 18, a Klamath Indian who, from the age of 12, ran wild on the streets of Oakland, Calif. One time when Charles was jailed and put into a secure lockup, he shoved his fist through a window. Now he has ugly scars, a lifelong reminder of his fury. Charles calls his horse Las Vegas, and he is the first human to put his hands on Las Vegas' neck without the animal going wild. "You don't break the horse like a bronco. You gentle him—slow, easy," Charles says confidently.

"I first felt like setting him free, letting him roam," he adds. "Like I wanted to roam. But I been doing that since I was 12, and it's got me nowhere. I can't keep roaming and running wild and fighting the rest of my life."

Something as revolutionary as VisionQuest may be in order: In 1984, the most recent year for which there are complete statistics, there were 1,537,688 juvenile arrests in the U.S. VisionQuest kids are part of that statistic. They enter the program through the courts, but the route varies depending on the locality.

The boys and girls are screened by the VisionQuest staff, then sign a contract agreeing to four conditions: They must complete two quests; no sex, drugs or alcohol; no running away; and they must remain with VisionQuest for at least one year. Right now, 15 states send juvenile offenders to VisionQuest. It costs them about $30,000 for each child—about half the cost of traditional security institutionalization.

"These people are not playing cowboys and Indians in their wagon trains and wilderness camps," says Peter Greenwood of the Rand Corporation, whose study of juvenile justice for the California State Assembly included a close look at VisionQuest. "They are struggling to cope with real and difficult circumstances without the protection or cocoon of traditional institutional programs."

Discipline is applied immediately when something goes wrong. "What we do is hold them accountable," explains Bill Smith, who heads the program at Fort Mifflin, outside Philadelphia. "I am the stern father figure, a person who could love them and still set limits. That is what a good parent does. Few of these kids ever had that."

At one point, critics of VisionQuest maintained that a boy who had been transferred from another facility did not receive proper medical treatment at VisionQuest, which led to his death. (VisionQuest countered that its medical staff had seen no evidence of a serious condition during his examination.) That, and a sea tragedy in which seven boys and two staffers drowned, seemed to threaten the reputation and growth of the program. An inquiry confirmed, however, that the boy had been injured at the other facility. Another inquiry absolved VisionQuest of any failure in the drownings, which occurred in a heavy storm.

More than 3000 boys and girls have gone through VisionQuest, and Bob Burton says only about a third return to institutions. With more traditional youth programs, at least two out of three are back in detention a year after release.

"The bottom line is that VisionQuest's kids have fewer arrests, violent crimes and convictions," says Peter Greenwood. "What is remarkable is that boys and girls are involved in the same quests. That's the ultimate evidence that the program is under control."

Rose, 18, a Mexican-Pequeno Indian, is testament to that. She was a knife-fighter on the streets of Los Angeles, ready to strike at the slightest provocation. She learned to ride her horse, Wind, and in the process "learned you can't make a 1200-pound horse do anything he doesn't want to do." She adds, "You have to be patient, and he shows you what to do." She smiles broadly when talking about the horse because, just the day before, through patience and determination, she brought in more cattle in a roundup than any other boy or girl.

"These kids have been manipulating people and each other all their lives," says staffer Karen Christofferson. "A mustang can't be manipulated; a mule doesn't give in. You have to work it out with an animal. Learning how to do that and dealing with the frustration is what makes all of this so important."

Last December, 40 teenagers in blue uniforms, yellow kerchiefs and suspenders, and broad-brimmed brown hats treated the spectators at San Diego's Holiday Bowl Parade to a dazzling display of syncopated close-order drill.

"We are the Buffalo Soldiers!" the former hard-core delinquents shouted. "We are the best!"

They were a clear hit with the crowd, particularly with Lillian Jefferson, a mother from Oakland. She had marched behind the Buffalo Soldiers to be close to her son, Russell, 18, whom she once wrote off as "hopeless."

Beyond the reviewing stand, when the other parading groups turned listless and were anxious to disperse, the Buffalo Soldiers kept up their smart, sharp-paced march right into the hotel parking lot.

"Circle up!" Bill Smith ordered the cavalry. "Your quest is over, and I know how hard it is to let go. That's why you paraded right into this lot. But you must learn to accept that there is an end. You had a commitment that you completed with honor. And now it's time to say goodbye and go on to new challenges."

"Buffalo Soldiers! We are the best!" the youths cheered. And Lillian Jefferson cried, but not with despair.

For her and her son and all the boys and girls in such terrible trouble, at last there was hope.

Workplace smoking restrictions: A trend that never was.

Reports in the news media may have given you the impression that restrictive corporate smoking policies are the wave of the future.

But, when the facts are analyzed, the wave shrinks to just a ripple.

Today, most of corporate America continues to rely on the common sense and common courtesy of employees—not on formal policy—to resolve differences arising out of smoking in the workplace.

This is the key finding of a major new survey of America's leading companies. The survey, commissioned by the Tobacco Institute and completed early in 1985, was conducted by the Human Resources Policy Corporation of Los Angeles among the top 1000 service and industrial companies ranked by Fortune magazine and Inc. magazine's 100 fastest-growing companies.

Only about one-third of the responding companies said they had any official smoking guidelines in effect. Furthermore, the reasons most frequently given centered around common-sense situations where workers dealt with hazardous substances, sensitive equipment or food. And almost half of these policies had been in effect for over five years.

Two-thirds of the companies reported they prefer to encourage individual workers to settle smoking issues with mutual respect for each other's legitimate rights and feelings.

We at R.J. Reynolds think this is not just common sense, but good business. Because it also gives managers the flexibility they need to make decisions in the best interest of the company as a whole.

That's the way it's worked in the past. And we think it's the best blueprint for the future.

SAVED FROM A SILENT WORLD

BY EARL UBELL

COMEDIANS have made fun of the deaf and the hard of hearing for years, but the desperate tragedy and suffering of such conditions are not funny. Without hearing, you cannot easily learn language, the essence of humanity. And without language, you lack the ability fully to express thoughts, needs and feelings.

Approximately 2 million Americans with profound hearing loss remain bottled up in silence, often needlessly. In addition, 13 million are afflicted by hearing impairments of all kinds. Today, new electronic hearing aids and other devices, new medical treatments and new training concepts help thousands of the hard of hearing to stay in the world of sound.

Although Stephen Weitz, 33, of Queens, N.Y., has had severe hearing loss in both ears since birth, he has learned to read, write and speak fluently enough to become an acoustical engineer, working on the manufacture of hearing aids.

"I have deaf friends," says Stephen, "who communicate only in sign language. They have shut themselves out of the hearing world."

Stephen's wife, Fanny, is profoundly deaf. A hearing person finds it difficult to understand her hollow, nasal-sounding voice but has no problem understanding her husband's. For Stephen, early training made the difference. Until a psychiatrist discovered that 3-year-old Stephen had suffered such a severe hearing impairment that he could not speak, many viewed him as mentally retarded. When properly diagnosed, Stephen entered the training program at the New York League for the Hard of Hearing. Fanny did not get to the league until age 6.

To have success, league experts maintain, it is vital to learn as early as possible if a child has severe hearing loss. Even infants can be diagnosed by analyzing their responses to sounds projected in an acoustically controlled room.

"We can teach 90 percent of the children here with severe hearing loss to speak so clearly that you think only that they have a foreign accent," asserts Jane Madell, the league's chief audiologist, or hearing specialist, "and they understand everything you say."

However, many experts doubt that the league's success is as great as this. Still, its program is impressive.

Here are some of the weapons against silence being used nationally:

- Hearing aids that can compensate even for extremely distorted hearing.
- Cued speech, a method for improving lip-reading.
- Equipment that allows the deaf to "talk" on the phone via teletype or computer.
- Various pagers, wake-up alarms, burglar alarms and smoke detectors that set off flashing lights and activate vibrators under a pillow; a microphone that flashes when a child cries; flashing-light telephone ringers.
- TV subtitles that appear on the screen through a special hookup.
- An electronic device—a cochlear implant—placed under the skin behind the ear, with wires to stimulate the auditory nerves and help the totally deaf person "hear." The wires lead into the cochlea in the ear, which turns sound waves into electrical nerve impulses. About 1000 persons who are beyond a hearing aid's help have benefited.

Dr. William House, president of The House Ear Institute in Los Angeles, pioneered the device. The first implant provided one channel, enabling most patients to hear some sound but not enough to recognize speech. Still, it

The Better To Hear You

ELECTRONICS HAS CREATED a new world for the hard of hearing, including:

- Infrared broadcasting systems for theaters that transmit sound from the stage to the deaf person's ear; broadcasting to deaf persons wearing radio receivers; hearing aids that can pick up special electrical signals.
- Coming: Pagers with radio receivers that emit vibrations to alert a deaf person.

enhanced lip-reading ability. Initially, this implant was priced at $7000. Its modern counterpart costs $11,000.

Now doctors have developed a 22-channel implant, priced at $25,000. With it, one-third of its users recognize speech. They also learn to modulate their voices and can hear environmental sounds—dogs, cars, trains, etc. The rest report the same results as those implanted with the single-channel device.

Adults, primarily, have had the implants, but more and more children are getting them. Matthew Fiedor, 4, got an implant in his right ear almost two years ago at The House Ear Institute. His mother, Paulette, says he went from a child silenced by meningitis to one who talks intelligibly, who hears and can discriminate between voices. "He is now a loving and outgoing child," she says.

Some hearing specialists say implants should be used in children only after it is proved that other methods, such as hearing aids and training, cannot help.

Improved hearing aids, developed in the last decade, powerfully amplify sound. They can be made to fit snugly, as one piece, in the ear and are scarcely noticeable. (President Reagan's use of one triggered a huge demand for them.) These devices lead all other developments in keeping the hearing-impaired individual hearing as much as possible. They have grown in importance as scientists have become increasingly aware performance in Children of a Lesser God, a play about deaf persons in a hearing world. She talks only in sign language or through a signing interpreter.

"You should teach children to speak, if possible," she says, but urges, "If it becomes clear that a child cannot learn to converse through speech, admit it and teach the child sign language so that communication is possible."

Discovering that deaf children who used only sign language often read poorly disturbed Dr. R. Orin Cornett. He is professor emeritus in audiology at Gallaudet College, the world's only college for the deaf, in Washington, D.C. So he invented "cued speech," to enhance a deaf person's lip-reading ability (PARADE, Feb. 19, 1978).

In cued speech, the speaking person makes a hand movement to indicate the sound being spoken. This differs from sign language, in which the signs represent general concepts rather than specific words. For example, the consonants "m," "b" and "p" look very much alike on the lips. Dr. Cornett invented a sign for the hearing-impaired that enables the lip-reader to combine the information of the lips and hand and figure out in a split second that the sound uttered is, let's say, "m."

Cornett says that the children who master cued speech improve their lip-reading enormously and become able even to repeat foreign words they have

SAVED FROM A SILENT WORLD

BY EARL UBELL

COMEDIANS have made fun of the deaf and the hard of hearing for years, but the desperate tragedy and suffering of such conditions are not funny. Without hearing, you cannot easily learn language, the essence of humanity. And without language, you lack the ability fully to express thoughts, needs and feelings.

Approximately 2 million Americans with profound hearing loss remain bottled up in silence, often needlessly. In addition, 13 million are afflicted by hearing impairments of all kinds. Today, new electronic hearing aids and other devices, new medical treatments and new training concepts help thousands of the hard of hearing to stay in the

Madell, the league's chief audiologist, or hearing specialist, "and they understand everything you say."

However, many experts doubt that the league's success is as great as this. Still, its program is impressive.

Here are some of the weapons against silence being used nationally:

- Hearing aids that can compensate even for extremely distorted hearing.
- Cued speech, a method for improving lip-reading.
- Equipment that allows the deaf to "talk" on the phone via teletype or computer.
- Various pagers, wake-up alarms, burglar alarms and smoke detectors that set off flashing lights and activate vibrators under a pillow; a microphone that flashes enhanced lip-reading ability. Initially, this implant was priced at $7000. Its modern counterpart costs $11,000.

Now doctors have developed a 22-channel implant, priced at $25,000. With it, one-third of its users recognize speech. They also learn to modulate their voices and can hear environmental sounds—dogs, cars, trains, etc. The rest report the same results as those implanted with the single-channel device.

Adults, primarily, have had the implants, but more and more children are getting them. Matthew Fiedor, 4, got an implant in his right ear almost two years ago at The House Ear Institute. His mother, Paulette, says he went from a child silenced by meningitis to one who talks intelligibly, who hears and can discriminate between voices. "He is now a loving and outgoing child," she says.

Some hearing specialists say implants should be used in children only after it is proved that other methods, such as hearing aids and training, cannot help.

Improved hearing aids, developed in the last decade, powerfully amplify sound. They can be made to fit snugly, as one piece, in the ear and are scarcely noticeable. (President Reagan's use of one triggered a huge demand for them.) These devices lead all other developments in keeping the hearing-impaired individual hearing as much as possible. They have grown in importance as scientists have become increasingly aware that not every "deaf" person is totally devoid of hearing.

The New York League for the Hard of Hearing's training program for the profoundly deaf requires that every child—even infants—be fitted with strong hearing aids to insure that whatever hearing they do have is enhanced. The children are taught to recognize the distorted sounds without any clues, such as lip-reading. In fact, the teachers cover their mouths to prevent guesswork.

The league places such children in regular classrooms with hearing children. The only difference is that the teachers wear microphones that broadcast their voices directly to the children's hearing aids. Result: Most league students can attend regular schools instead of schools for the deaf. The students can read on a par with their hearing age group, the league reports.

Much progress has been made in helping the hearing-impaired and much more is expected in the coming decade.

Most educators of the deaf support teaching children both sign language and lip-reading. Such training helps a few achieve speech at a high level of intelligibility, but not most. On average, such children seldom exceed fourth- or fifth-grade reading levels.

Among those favoring sign language as the primary means of communication is Phyllis Frelich, 42, the actress who won a Tony Award in 1980 for her performance in Children of a Lesser God, a play about deaf persons in a hearing world. She talks only in sign language or through a signing interpreter.

"You should teach children to speak, if possible," she says, but urges, "If it becomes clear that a child cannot learn to converse through speech, admit it and teach the child sign language so that communication is possible."

Discovering that deaf children who used only sign language often read poorly disturbed Dr. R. Orin Cornett. He is professor emeritus in audiology at Gallaudet College, the world's only college for the deaf, in Washington, D.C. So he invented "cued speech," to enhance a deaf person's lip-reading ability (PARADE, Feb. 19, 1978).

In cued speech, the speaking person makes a hand movement to indicate the sound being spoken. This differs from sign language, in which the signs represent general concepts rather than specific words. For example, the consonants "m," "b" and "p" look very much alike on the lips. Dr. Cornett invented a sign for the hearing-impaired that enables the lip-reader to combine the information of the lips and hand and figure out in a split second that the sound uttered is, let's say, "m."

Cornett says that the children who master cued speech improve their lip-reading enormously and become able even to repeat foreign words they have never seen. They learn to speak more clearly, he adds, noting that—unlike users of sign-language only—they learn to understand spoken English.

Says Cornett, "In general, deaf children don't know English, so they cannot read." He cites cases of deaf children who became avid readers after they mastered cued speech.

Cornett and Robert Beadles, of the Research Triangle Institute in Research Triangle Park, N.C., are developing a computerized device that employs a microphone and produces the cue signs in digital-display form. It's called an Autocuer.

Cornett and Beadles are working to so miniaturize the computer that it will fit in a pair of special eyeglasses (see photo, page 12), showing the digital cue at the mouth of the person speaking. Cornett says he hopes this device can be marketed in three to six years.

In the absence of cued speech or sign language on most telecasts, there is closed captioning. A special device attached to the TV produces subtitles on the screen for approximately 100 hours of captioned programming each week.

"People can't believe I smoke a pack a day. They say I have a beautiful smile."
Vic Kurzawski

"Now I look people right in the eye and smile."
Julia Borst

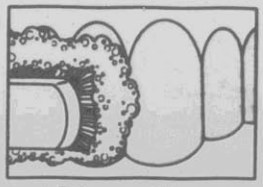
"My husband noticed the difference. That made me smile even more."
Virginia Johansen

Smile if you're a smoker. Because Topol Smoker's Toothpolish has a special double action formula that helps remove unsightly yellow tobacco stains from your teeth.

Action One. First, Topol's foaming system removes smoke residue particles that cause tobacco stains before they have a chance to harden into stains on your teeth. The more you brush with Topol as directed, the more it can help you prevent tobacco stain buildup.

Newly deposited smoke particles.

Action Two. Second, if you already have tobacco stain buildup, brushing with Topol attacks those stains by loosening some of the tobacco residue formed on your teeth. This is how Topol's effective polishing agents help give you whiter, brighter teeth.



Tobacco residue buildup.

So, if your teeth are suffering from tobacco stains, try the double action formula of Topol Regular, Fluoride, or Fluoride Gel. You'll be smiling in double time.

"Ever since Topol, I'm flashing a winning smile."
Brent Shriver

"I feel much better about my smile. I'm not self-conscious anymore."
Jan Anstrand

Richard Striano

We give smokers winning smiles.

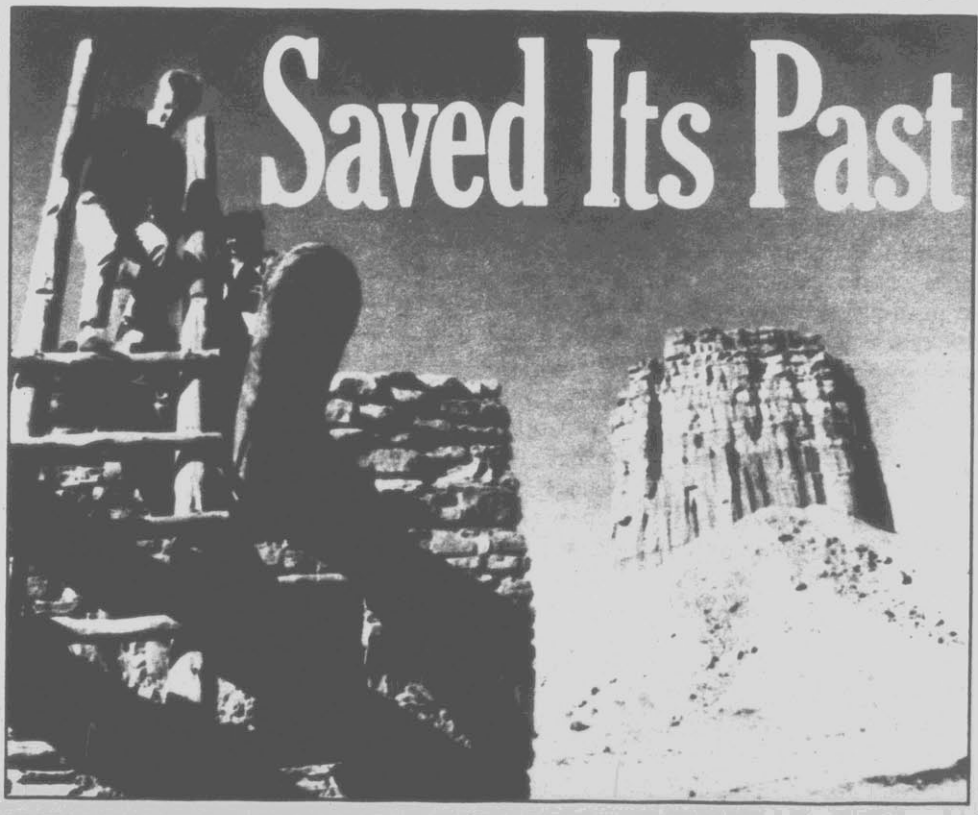
Ute Park is a little-known jewel of the West

The Tribe That Saved Its Past



Kevin Horan Picture Group

Teenage tourists explore replica of Indian dwelling at entrance to Colorado's Ute Mountain Tribal Park.

BEFORE THE WHITE MAN came, western Colorado was the domain of the Utes, a tribe of fierce warriors. But the white man was overpowering, and when the Utes killed an irksome government agent and his staff in 1879, the entire tribe was banished to a 1.3 million-acre reservation in southwestern Colorado.

On the reservation were remarkable cliff dwellings that once housed hundreds of tribesmen whom the Utes call the Anasazi, or "ancient ones." They inhabited the dwellings, condominiums of an earlier age, for about 70 years before leaving in the late 13th century.

Many mysteries surround the dwellings. Who were the Anasazi, why did they dig the dwellings and why did they leave? Their remarkable homes were found by a rancher named Richard Wetherill in 1888. In 1906, the U.S. government induced the Utes to trade 52,000 acres, containing more than 600 cliff dwellings, for half of the nearby Ute Mountain. Later that year, those 52,000 acres became Mesa Verde National Park, whose visitors now bring the federal government more than $3.3 million annually.

In 1980, the Utes finally responded by establishing their own Ute Mountain Tribal Park on 125,000 acres just up the road from Mesa Verde. Since then, the U.S. government has put up more than $1 million for roads, and the Utes have invested more than $350,000 in their park, which contains about 2000 cliff dwellings—some of the best in the American Southwest.

The park began as the dream of Jack House, a Ute Mountain chief, who enlisted the support of another Ute, Arthur Cuthair, a former guide at Mesa Verde. Some members of the tribe opposed turning such sacred sites into a tourist attraction, however, and there were problems along the way: Chief House's hogan was burned down, shots were fired at Cuthair's home in Towaoc, and ladders and scaffolding disappeared when stabilization work began. "They even ran off with one of our cement mixers," recalls Cuthair.

Arthur Cuthair says he and Chief House, who died in 1971, had a threefold reason for developing the park: To preserve and protect the ruins; to present the story from a truly Indian perspective; and to provide badly needed jobs for the tribe, half of whose men are unemployed. There are 1500 Utes on the reservation. The park presently employs four, who lead tours.

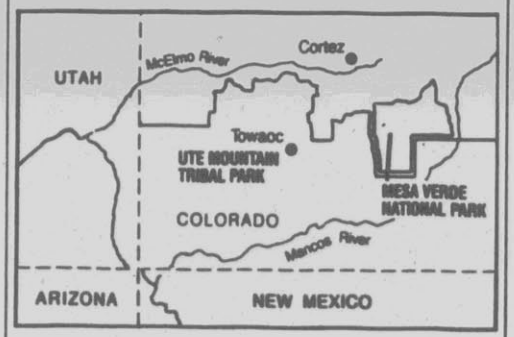
"We want more people to see these ruins," says Cuthair, "because it's good for our people. Building a museum, improving the roads and stabilizing additional ruins creates more jobs for our tribe. I think we can increase our tours in the years ahead. But we also want to keep the park as primitive as possible." Because it still is under development and has not officially opened, the Ute park now draws only 1500 visitors a year, compared to Mesa Verde's 600,000.

"I think the tribe has done a very nice job developing their ruins," says Robert Heyder, the superintendent of Mesa Verde National Park. "Clearly, they have learned from some of the mistakes we made."

"Tribal members opposed to the park won't discuss their feelings with outsiders," Arthur Cuthair points out as he guides a group of high school students from Carbondale, Colo. "But they see this as the last land belonging to the Ute people, a tribe that once controlled half the state. They fear that once it is opened to the public, they will be overrun and ultimately forced off their land."

Although a warm wind blows through Mancos Canyon this afternoon, Cuthair does not try to spin an Indian fairy tale. "The average lifespan of the Anasazi was about 30," he tells the visitors. "They worked constantly from a young age, merely to have enough to eat. Theirs was an extremely difficult life, threatened by hostile tribes, droughts and long winters." As they walk along the path to other ruins, the students are encouraged to pick up and handle the pottery shards spread on the rocks. Later, Cuthair sweeps away a mound of dirt to reveal a rare corrugated jug. "This is how we found it," he says. "We leave it in place as part of our living-museum approach to archeology."

WHEN YOU VISIT



Ute Mountain Tribal Park and Mesa Verde National Park are best visited between May 1 and mid-October. Accommodations are available at Mesa Verde park, Cortez and Durango, Colo. Tours at Ute Mountain Tribal Park must be arranged by writing to the park at Towaoc, Colo. 81334, or calling (303) 565-3751. Visitors must be accompanied by a guide. There is a $6 fee. To visit Mesa Verde, write to Mesa Verde National Park, Colo. 81330, or call (303) 529-4461. Its fee of $2 per vehicle includes a guided tour.

Steve McQueen—A Wife Remembers

Steve McQueen with first wife, Neile (l), whose new book tells all about the late actor—including his stinginess toward wife No. 2, actress Ali MacGraw (r)

Most books about or by Hollywood stars are vapid, inaccurate and insipid. They often consist of rewritten newspaper clippings and studio publicity handouts. Occasionally, however, one is published that the knowledgeable reader finds to be honest, candid and accurate.

Neile McQueen Toffel, 51, a dancer-actress from the Philippines who was married to Steve McQueen for 15½ years (1956-72), has written a surprisingly veracious memoir titled "My Husband, My Friend," in which she exposes what it was really like to live with the legendary screen star, who died of cancer in 1980 at age 50.

Offscreen, Steve McQueen was not the valiant, resolute, intrepid, tight-lipped hero he played in films. He was insecure, bedeviled, suspicious, unfair, paranoid, and heavily into drugs and drinking. According to his first wife, the former Neile Adams, McQueen also was an indiscriminate womanizer who engaged in affairs with the actresses Lee Remick and Sharon Tate, as well as countless extras and groupies. Men who worked with the actor and knew how he regarded members of the opposite sex said: "If it walks, he'll [seduce] it."

Having labored as a towel boy in a brothel, McQueen developed into a satyr of sorts who regarded females as basically sexual creatures. He constantly asserted his machismo by carrying a loaded gun, which he made sure to slip beneath his pillow each night.

Despite his constant infidelity, McQueen showed not the least bit of tolerance or understanding when he forced his wife to sniff cocaine and to confess to one extramarital affair she had engaged in with an actor. He put a gun to her head and threatened to blow out her brains unless she revealed the identity of her admirer. From the night she did confess, he beat her chronically. When later she became pregnant with their third child, McQueen refused to believe he was the father and shipped her off to London for an abortion. Nevertheless, McQueen was, at times, a devoted husband and a father who cared deeply about his daughter, Terry, now 26, and his son, Chad, 25.

McQueen, from all accounts, was a Jekyll-and-Hyde personality, a disturbed character who could slap his wife around in a tantrum, then apologize profusely and insist that he truly loved her. In fact, while the actor was married to Ali MacGraw, he met his ex-wife in the Beverly Wilshire Hotel and promptly took her to bed.

Two Grown Men Can't Pull It Apart! Zoysia Saves Time, Work & Money

By Jack T. Johnson, Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow ... until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn"...is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in...Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

LAWN WATERED ONLY ONCE

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn —nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious, established Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long.

FOR SLOPES, PLAY AREAS, BARE SPOTS

FREE! UP TO 900 AMAZOY PLUGS JUST FOR ORDERING NOW

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS—PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds—from part shade to full sun. Goes off its green color after killing frosts. Begins regaining its green color at the time when the temperature in the spring is consistently warm. This, of course, varies with climate. Easy planting instructions with order.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed: like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills. Save time, work, money. Plug in Amazoy.

FREE
PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

WEAR RESISTANT

When America's largest University tested 13 leading grasses for wear resistance, such as foot scuffling, the Zoysia (matrella and japonica Meyer Z-52) led all others.

Your Amazoy lawn takes such wear as cookouts, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it — or themselves.

Amazoy thrives in porous, sandy soil, "builder's soil" — even salty beach areas! Beauty is but one advantage of Zoysia Grass. It's also so vigorous and rich it thrives in soils where lesser grasses have failed you repeatedly. Start your Amazoy lawn this Spring, and never re-seed your lawn again!

CUTS YOUR WORK, SAVES YOU MONEY

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement...ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by ⅓.

YOUR OWN SUPPLY OF PLUG TRANSPLANTS

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by U.S. Govt., released in cooperation with U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

BELT BUCKLE

PROUDLY MADE IN THE USA

"BADGE OF COURAGE"

This Belt Buckle is a dignified emblem of the men who served America during the Viet Nam War. It's a heavy cast jeweler's pewter-type buckle engraved with the shields of 11 major divisions that fought during the War. A superb work of craftsmanship, each shield is precisely etched and inlaid with colorful hand enameled highlights. For any man who served, any relative of a Veteran, or any proud American, this buckle is a powerful symbol of the Viet Nam Veteran's patriotism and valor. The inscription underneath reads: "WE SERVED OUR TIME IN HELL"—a reminder that this was no ordinary war, and truly extraordinary soldiers experienced it. You'll be proud to wear this Belt Buckle for it's historical value, and as an emblem of American courage.

Intelligence Report

Unable to handle success, McQueen was selfish, high-handed and niggardly with people. After four years of marriage to MacGraw (1973-77), an actress who temporarily abandoned her career to look after him, he saw to it that she got not one cent of alimony. "He even reduced her to negotiating for the tribal rugs she had loved and bought for her home with Steve," writes Neile Toffel. When his career was running at full throttle, she adds, instead of spawning a modicum of modesty, "Steve instructed his agents to alert producers that for him even to read a script, a million dollars had to be put in escrow."

There are reasons enough to rationalize McQueen's misanthropic behavior: His father abandoned his mother a week after Steve was born in Beech Grove, Ind., on March 24, 1930. His mother promptly turned over her baby to a granduncle to rear. Twelve years later, when she remarried and took Steve to live with her in Los Angeles, the boy developed a hatred of his stepfather and became a thief. His mother then signed a court order sending Steve to the California Junior Boys' Republic, a home for wayward boys in Chino.

With his background of deprivation, Steve McQueen may well have spent the balance of his life majoring in crime. What saved him was a three-year stint in the Marines; the GI Bill of Rights, which allowed him to attend the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York, where he studied acting; and the love of three good wives—Neile Adams, Ali MacGraw and Barbara Minty, whom he married 11 months before his death.

Where the Jobs Will Be

Reports from the Bureau of Labor Statistics confirm that the American economy is rapidly changing from one based on manufacturing to one based on services. In the next 10 years, the bureau predicts, the fastest-growing occupations will involve: paralegal workers who help lawyers; computer programmers and analysts; technicians and engineers specializing in computers and electronics; and travel agents.

Although the aforementioned occupations will be the "fastest-growing" in the next decade, those offering the largest number of new jobs by 1995 will be cashiers, nurses, janitors, cleaners, truck drivers, waiters and waitresses, wholesale and retail salespersons, nurses' aides and accountants. Blacks and women are expected to make up an increased proportion of the new labor force.

If you love crochet or want to learn about it, here is the whole world of crochet—literally at your fingertips. This bonanza offers you 500 exciting designs from the great classic patterns to originals that appear here for the first time.

You will find designs that are soft and lacy, as exquisitely appropriate for romantic shawls as for a baby's bassinet—other designs that mimic knitting, weaving or patchwork—simple styles and complex ones. Here are designs suitable for every imaginable use from large openwork patterns that are perfect for tablecloths to popcorn stitches for that designer sweater. For every design the author provides:

- a photo of the stitch
- complete written instructions
- a diagram, showing each stitch and its placement, so that you can understand the entire design at a glance

All the diagrams are drawn in the international crochet symbols that look a good deal like the actual crochet stitches. They are so clear that you can follow them visually and get perfect results without even reading one word of the instructions.

And there is more:

- a pictorial index, showing the complete pattern
- instructions in the basic stitches, so that beginners (as well as experts) can use this book

A workbook, a reference book, a design manual to keep in the workbasket or on your shelf for a lifetime, this handsome treasury will soon become recognized as the definitive work in the field.

BY JAMES BRADY

Liza Minnelli

BORN: March 12, 1946, in Hollywood.
PERSONAL: Married to Peter Allen 1967-72; married to Jack Haley Jr. 1974-77; married Mark Gero in 1979.
FIRST ROLE: At age 2½, a walk-on in Judy Garland movie In the Good Old Summertime.
STAGE: Off-Broadway revival of Best Foot Forward, 1963; Flora, The Red Menace, 1965; The Act, 1977; The Rink, 1984.
FILMS: Include Charlie Bubbles, 1968; The Sterile Cuckoo, 1969; Tell Me That You Love Me, Junie Moon, 1970; Cabaret, 1972; New York, New York, 1977; Arthur, 1981.
AWARDS: Tony for Flora, The Red Menace (at 19, she was youngest person to win that award) and for The Act. Oscar for Cabaret.

Kirkland/Sygma

Villard/Sipa

Liza never worked with Frank Sinatra before. Now they are co-starring in a casino in Atlantic City. The only question: Which of them gets to sing "New York, New York"?

BRADY'S BITS

When Liza Minnelli's film New York, New York was released, they all showed up at Haishan's apartment: Robert De Niro, Treat Williams, Al Pacino, Liza, and Judy and John Belushi. Belushi and I had a long talk. He was slim, straight, he looked wonderful. Six months later, he was dead.

THIS WAS A COUPLE OF YEARS ago, and Liza Minnelli and her husband, whose name nobody ever remembers but it is Mark Gero, were hosting a little cocktail party at their apartment in Manhattan—a nice, big, tasteful place with deep rugs and large, airy rooms—and Liza was taking us around on a little tour.

Gero knows something about art, and there were wonderful pictures and sculptures, and Liza pointed them out, proudly, the way women do when you are in their homes. And then we came to a smallish room in the back, and she flicked on the light. "This was going to be the nursery," she said.

She had just lost a baby, not her first miss, and she still was feeling the loss. I think that with all she has and all she has done, Liza Minnelli would give it all for a kid. You saw it in her face, you heard it in her voice as she showed us that empty room.

Her mother was Judy Garland. I do not need to tell you about Judy. Once, when we lived in Paris, she did a concert at the Palais de Chaillot, and for the last number she sat down, legs dangling, on the lip of the stage—a small woman in black—and sang "Over the Rainbow." If you have ever heard "Over the Rainbow," you know about Judy Garland.

But there was another Judy who drank and did drugs and married the wrong men. And during the bad years, there was this teenage daughter Liza, who kept it all together and paid the bills and brought up Lorna and Joey, who were Judy's kids by another man. When Judy died, Liza kept it going for all of them, not only raising the other children but also paying off Judy's debts. I mean 100 cents on the dollar. She does not brag about this or talk about it. But it is true.

She is a big star herself now. Movies like Cabaret and television specials with Baryshnikov and Broadway musicals like The Rink. This month, she is playing Atlantic City with Sinatra. She can act, she can dance, and when she sings she is not Judy, but her voice, the intelligent phrasing of the lyrics, can still break your heart.

And there have been the bleak times. You wonder why Judy Garland's daughter, remembering her mother, would ever take a drink. The fact is, she did and checked herself into a clinic. Now she is whole again. You hope she stays that way, that her rainbow leads not to bad places but to a real-life Emerald City.

WORKMAN'S COMP.

One nice thing about a big Chevy Pickup: the same powerful engine, the same girder-beam front suspension and tough double-wall steel construction in critical areas that get you through a tough day's work can also get you away after a tough day's work. Cap the back of a Chevy and have fun. You've earned it.

• VOWEL TIPS! Not many English words form plurals by a change of inside vowel or vowels. Example: Man, men. See if you can name four more.

EYE-BOGGLER HEAD COUNT!

Perhaps the folks above are playing a game called "Sardine" in which as many people as possible cram into a small space, such as a closet. How many people are there in this picture? Of course, there are as many as meet the eye, but for obvious reasons they are difficult to count.

Without filling them in any way or holding a hand over parts of the drawing, see how many faces you can find.

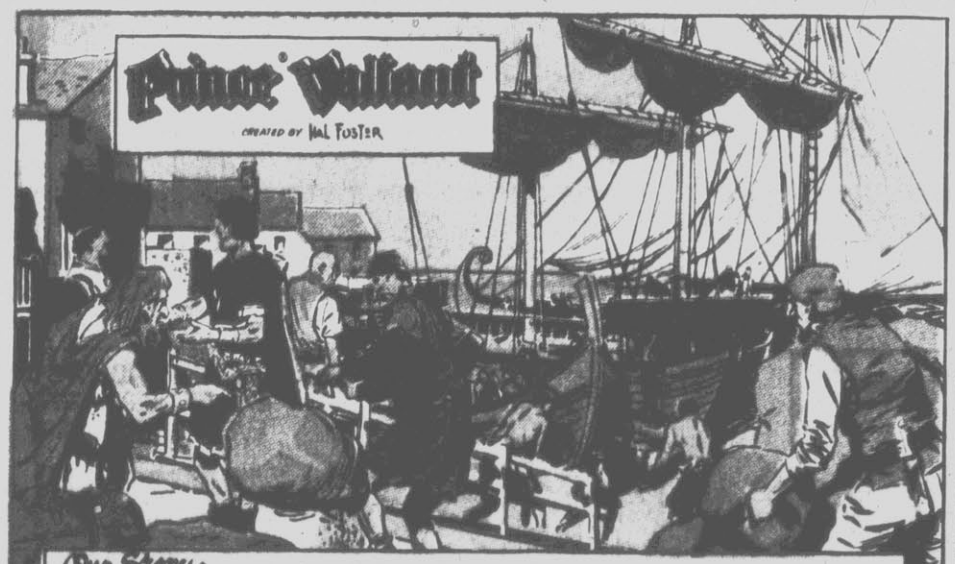
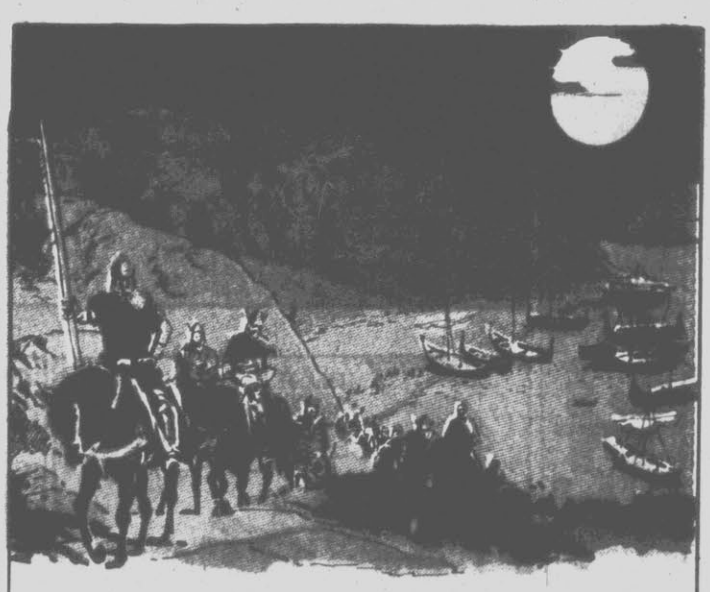
CREATED BY HAL FOSTER



Our Story:
AT THE TRADING CITY OF HEDDEBY NOOR PRINCE VALIANT GREETS ROLLO AND ORLOG, HIS COMMANDERS. IT IS MANY HOURS BEFORE THE THRONG OF SAXON WARRIORS IS SAFELY STOWED ON SHIP. VAL GIVES THE ORDER TO CAST OFF AND THE GREAT FLEET SAILS TOWARD DESTINY. THE PASSAGE IS NOT A SMOOTH ONE.

THE NORTHERN SEA IN SPRINGTIME IS A FICKLE MISTRESS. FEW OF THE SAXONS HAVE EVER BEFORE BEEN ON A SHIP.



UNDER COVER OF NIGHT NEAR THE ISLE OF WIGHT THE FLEET PULLS ASHORE. OF THE THREE INVADING ARMIES, VAL'S COMMAND HAS LANDED CLOSEST TO CAMELOT. HE RESOLVES TO MARCH ONLY IN DARKNESS. UNDER THE MOON HIS MEN MAKE FOR THE CHALK DOWNS.

PRINCE VALIANT IS THE FIRST TO LEARN WHAT MORDRED HAS IN STORE FOR THOSE WHO DARE ATTACK HIM. "BY THE TIME THE ENEMY REACHES CAMELOT," MORDRED HAD BOASTED TO HIS MINIONS, "HE WILL BE TOO WEAK EVEN TO BEG FOR MERCY."

MORDRED HAS PULLED BACK MOST OF HIS TROOPS TO WITHIN FIFTY ROMAN MILES OF CAMELOT. ALL AROUND TRAPS HAVE BEEN LAID WITH CUNNING, AND PRINCE VALIANT LEADS HIS MEN DIRECTLY INTO ONE OF THEM. HIS SCOUTS HAD REPORTED THAT THE FORTRESS AHEAD WAS ABANDONED, AS THE SAXONS PASS.....

...THEY DISCOVER THAT IT IS NOT. A DEADLY RAIN FALLS UPON VAL'S ARMY AND THE SAXONS SCATTER IN TERROR.

UNCONSCIONABLE! I'LL BET IT TOOK OVER TWENTY ANIMALS TO MAKE THAT COAT!
REALLY ??!
I DIDN'T EVEN THINK ANIMALS COULD LEARN TO MAKE COATS!!
EXCUSE ME, YOUNG MAN, BUT IS YOUR FATHER AT HOME?
YES, HE IS!
BZZ Z Z BZZZ BZZZ
MAYBE HE'S DOWN IN THE BASEMENT?
NO, HE'S IN THE LIVING ROOM, READING THE SUNDAY PAPER!!
DO YOU WANT ME TO TELL MY FATHER YOU WANT TO SEE HIM?
I'D APPRECIATE THAT VERY MUCH!
THAT MAN OVER BY OUR NEIGHBOR'S HOUSE WANTS TO SEE YOU, DAD!

Hi and Lois

by MORT WALKER and DIK BROWNE

WHAT'S THE WEATHER LIKE THIS MORNING?
WOW!
AH! WHAT A GREAT-LOOKING MORNING!
HOW DO YOU FEEL TODAY, HONEY?
VERY SORT OF HOUSEWIFEY... SORT OF "GET-THINGS-DONESEY!"
YOU KNOW WHAT I MEAN? VACUUMY AND PAINTY--
MAYBE SORT OF GARDENY...
HOW DO YOU FEEL?
SORT OF GOLFY!
WHEN DID YOU START TALKING LIKE THAT?

LOCO! WHERE ARE YOU?!
HERE COMES THAT FAT GUY TO RIDE ME INTO BATTLE
GOTTA DO A DISGUISE
I'VE TRIED THIS EAGLE ROUTINE BEFORE BUT BLEW IT THE OTHER TIME
WOW! LOOK AT THAT?!
IS THAT AN EAGLE? IT SURE LOOKS LIKE ONE!
BUT IT DOESN'T EXACTLY ACT LIKE AN EAGLE
