Soviets Extend Nuclear Test Ban

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union will continue its unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing until the United States conducts a test of its own, Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said in a statement released today.

The moratorium, imposed in August, was due to expire March 31.

In a message to the leaders of six nations, Gorbachev repeated his willingness to allow on-site inspections by U.S. observers if Washington suspects the Soviets have violated their promise not to conduct nuclear tests.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said the test ban extension and Gorbachev's comments on verification were contained in his reply to a joint message from the leaders of Argentina, India, Mexico, Tanzania, Sweden and Greece.

Tass previously reported that Gorbachev's reply was given Wednesday to Argentine Ambassador Federico Saturnino Bravo. The full text of the reply was not made public until today.

Gorbachev announced the Soviet test moratorium Aug. 6, 1985, to continue through December, and urged Washington to join it. On Jan. 15, he extended the moratorium to March 31.

The United States, however, has said Gorbachev's proposals for verifying any test ban agreement were inadequate.

The Tass text of Gorbachev's reply quoted the Soviet leader as saying, "The Soviet Union shall not conduct nuclear explosions after March 31 either — until the U.S.A. carries out its first nuclear explosion."

Gorbachev said the Soviets believe verification is an important part of any test ban agreement, according to Tass.

"As regards a nuclear test ban, verification can be ensured by national technical means and also with the help of international procedures — including on-site inspections if need be," the text said.

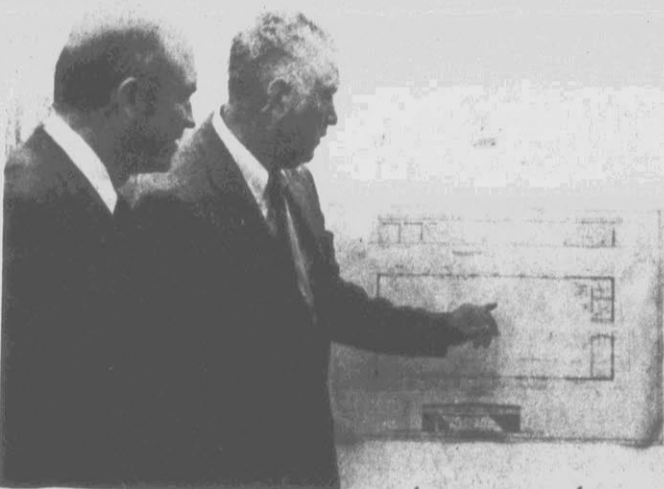

Tass quoted Gorbachev as offering to discuss "possibilities for observers from both sides to visit sites where unclear phenomena occur ... to remove possible doubts as to whether such phenomena are related to nuclear explosions."

He also was quoted as reiterating Soviet acceptance of the offer by the six leaders to help monitor compliance with any test ban agreement, including on-site inspection.

The Communist Party daily Pravda said last December that the Soviet Union was prepared to allow certain on-site inspections but did not elaborate.

The United States has rejected Soviet proposals on verification of a test ban agreement, insisting that checks should take place on a regular and reciprocal basis and not just after one side becomes suspicious that the other has violated the agreement.

U.S. officials also say they should have the opportunity to calibrate measuring instruments according to the geological conditions of Soviet nuclear test sites.

Cosmonauts En Route To Space Lab Linkup

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched two cosmonauts into space today in the first manned space shot since the space shuttle Challenger exploded Jan. 28, killing all seven astronauts aboard.

Breaking with a tradition of secrecy, Soviet television carried apparently live coverage of Soyuz T-15's 3:33 p.m. liftoff (7:33 a.m. EST).

The sleek red-and-white craft streaked into a slightly overcast sky above the Baikonur Space Base in Kazakhstan, Soviet central Asia, carrying commander Leonid Kizim and engineer Vladimir Solovov. The cosmonauts hold the endurance record for time spent in space — 237 days.

The official news agency Tass said they are to link up with the Soviet space laboratory, the Mir (Peace), in two days. The Mir was launched without a crew Feb. 20 and is designed as a permanent space platform with docking facilities for six spacecraft.

Soviet television viewers could hear Kizim and Solovov reporting back to Earth 50 seconds after their craft blasted into the sky trailing orange flame.

In footage shown on Soviet television, Kizim and Solovov could be seen strapped in their seats, with Kizim reading what appeared to be sheets of instructions. A television announcer said the pictures came live from inside the craft as it headed for orbit.

Before the launch, Soviet television showed the cosmonauts undergoing final medical check-ups and heading out to their craft.

Kizim, 44, an air force colonel, was shown saluting to an unidentified space official not seen on camera, and reporting that his crew was "ready to fulfill its tasks." The two men then boarded a bus and clambered into the rocket.

The Soviets announced Wednesday that Soviet television would carry the launch live on the nation's main evening news program. The launch also was televised in the United States.

Disclosure of the names of the cosmonauts and the planned launch time marked a break with the usual secrecy applied to Soviet space missions that do not include foreigners.

Only once in the history of the Soviet space program has there been live television coverage of a launch that involved a purely Soviet crew — the 1975 blastoff of a craft that later linked up with the U.S. Apollo spaceship.

Medical District Ads Bring Quick Responses

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

An ad campaign extolling the virtues of the business and living environment of Greenville-Pitt County with specific reference to the area's medical district has already brought in four inquiries from medical manufacturing companies, according to John Chaffee.

Chaffee, executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission, said in an interview today that, while it would be premature to say whether any of the four companies requesting information on the industrial/medical climate of Greenville-Pitt County are serious about locating in the area, the interest is there.

According to Chaffee, the ad campaign mounted in November was based on industrial opportunities available at that time and did not include information contained in a Medical District Study Committee report recommending creation of a 5,300-acre East Carolina Medical Park in West Greenville-Pitt County. Chaffee said, however, that the commission is considering expansion of its advertising campaign to include information on the proposed East Carolina Medical Park.

Submitted in December 1985, the Medical District Study Committee report calls for creation of a medical park encompassing the area's existing medical district and approxi-

Pitt Board OKs Record Changes

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Wednesday took a step closer to reevaluating property for tax purposes a year earlier than usual by authorizing the county data processing center to make improvements in tax-record programs that will make it easier for county employees to handle the revaluation.

Commissioners in mid-February voted to move revaluation up one year because of a decline in farmland values and new laws designed to make the valuation of farmland more uniform across the state.

The move will place the new values on the tax books Jan. 1, 1988, rather than Jan. 1, 1989.

Under state law, property must be revalued for tax purposes at least every eight years. However, the law allows counties to revalue property at shorter intervals. Pitt County's last re-valuation placed new property values (the fair market value of land and buildings) on the tax books Jan. 1, 1981.

At a workshop meeting Wednesday, Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee said the program changes, among other things, would allow the point value assigned to houses, farm use and market value of farms, information on soil type and income for farms and building dimensions to be printed on property record cards that will be used during the revaluation.

Hardee explained that under new

ECVC Explains Pool Proposal

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Another discussion on the possible role of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department in the future of the athletic complex at the East Carolina Vocational Center took place during the March meeting of the department's commission.

Dr. Ben Shappley, a member of the board of directors at ECVC, made an overview presentation to commissioners. Saying he was authorized by the board as their spokesman, Shappley outlined general suggestions formulated by the ECVC board as it seeks a solution to the inability of the center to continue funding operations of the athletic complex.

The complex, constructed several years ago at a cost of $1.7 million, consists of an auditorium with a stage, a fully equipped weight room, and a 6,250-square-foot heated indoor swimming pool.

Shappley opened his comments by saying "we are offering to you the use of what is now a $2 million facility for 10 cents a year, or to put it another way, we will give you a proposal to contract for a 10-year period the use of the facility for a fee of $1 on a renewable contract basis."

"We are assuming at this point that such an arrangement is legal. That angle will be checked into," Shappley said.

Fund covering expenses for the first three years of operating the center were provided by an annual grant of $90,000 in federal funds. Shappley said there are no more grant funds of that type available.

The average annual operating cost of the facility is approximately $100,000, of which $35,000 to $40,000 is for salaries. Shappley said ECVC should be able to provide $10,000 in funds for a first year of Recreation and Parks Department operation, "with pretty good assurance that private sources can provide $10,000 for another two years if we can be assured you will operate the facility for that period of time."

Currently, income received by ECVC for rentals amounts to about $3,000 monthly.

During the discussion, Parks and Recreation commissioners expressed viewpoints that the ECVC facility, if arrangements can be approved for operation by the department, would provide several benefits for recreational activities not currently available at other facilities.

Primarily, it would mean that swim programs for county schools could be initiated, and that the Rose swim team would have a more accessible facility for its program. The Rose High team now has to practice at 5:30 a.m. at East Carolina University.

Rose Junior Will Serve As '86 City Ambassador

By SUSAN ASKEW
Reflector Staff Writer

Ann-Marie Ambert, a 17-year-old junior at Rose High School, has been selected as the 1986 Greenville Community Ambassador.

Miss Ambert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary J. Ambert, will take part in a six-week visit in Spain this summer. She will live with a family during her stay, but won't know until just before she departs who the family is or which city they live in. During the six-week period, she will also visit travel and spend some time with community ambassadors from other areas.

Miss Ambert was chosen from a group of 15 applicants by a nine-member committee, which included City Manager Gail Meeks and Judd Owen, 1985 community ambassador.

Participants are selected on the basis of their ability to communicate comfortably with new people, among other criteria.

Miss Ambert is secretary of the Rose High School International Club and secretary of Students Against Drunk Drivers (SADD). Her other activities include the drama club, Quill and Scroll and the soccer team.

Before departure to their final destinations abroad, ambassadors will gather in New England for a three-day orientation.

Faceless Child Gets Eyes And Hope For More Normal Life

By STEVE BAKER
Associated Press Writer
MARYVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ten years after Alice Perkins was born without a face, doctors have fashioned a nose and forehead from one of her ribs and given her a pair of blue, acrylic eyes.

More important, she has hope for a more normal life. Alice has had a dozen operations to correct a rare birth defect and faces eight more years of painful surgery. But she's survived her first decade and is now catching up to children her own age at the Tennessee School for the Blind, a state-operated residential school in Nashville.

"A lot of people wonder, 'Could I take care of a child like that? Could I cope?' The truth is some can, some can't," said Thelma Perkins, a nurse who cared for and later adopted Alice when her natural mother found she could not cope emotionally with Alice's birth defects.

The mother, who lives in a neighboring county and still checks on her daughter's progress, cared for Alice for a year before she gave up and asked Raymond and Thelma Perkins for help.

Alice was born Sept. 6, 1975, at Knoxville's University of Tennessee Hospital with only a hole opening onto the soft mucous membranes where her eyes, nose and mouth should have been. She had eyelids but no eyes.

Mrs. Perkins, a licensed practical nurse, first saw Alice in the hospital's intensive care unit for newborns. "I remember crying at first, and then wondering who would take care of her. I knew it would take a lot of patience and understanding," said Mrs. Perkins, whose three children were grown and married.

Doctors say there are fewer than a dozen recorded cases of Alice's rare birth deformity, known as a bilateral cleft face. The Perkinses correspond with parents of several children who have similar defects.

Dr. John Lynch, a plastic surgeon at Vanderbilt University Medical Center, operated on Alice 11 times before she was 9. He's planning an operation this spring to close the roof of her mouth, which will improve Alice's speech and her ability to eat solid foods.

Last October John Carney, a Nashville oculist who had enlarged

Alice's sockets for her new eyes, completed Alice's face. "By the time she's 18 she'll have a near-normal face. But she'll never look like us," Mrs. Perkins said. Doctors say the only permanent handicap the girl will have is blindness.

The eye surgery was paid for by Classic Chevy, a car club in Blount County where the Perkins live. Alice's surgery has cost more than $300,000 and, except for $60,000 from the Tennessee Department of Human Services, has been paid for through private donations.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, of which Raymond Perkins is a longtime member, has paid for much of the surgery. The Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times helped create trusts to receive donations for Alice.

Other helping hands include Tennessee Airways, which weekly flies Alice and Mrs. Perkins from Maryville to school in Nashville and back.

"We looked at Alice in the beginning and thought, 'How valuable is life? Is this child going to be an asset to the community or dependent for all time?'" Mrs. Perkins said.

"The answer we came to is 'it's a life,' and life is to be respected. Alice has been helped by many, many people who asked nothing in return. They're the ones who are enriched," she said.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Michael Tong of New York City's well-known Shun Lee restaurants has a great way of developing Chinese recipes for home cooks.

For example, in his recipe for Peanut Chicken all the ingredients are available in supermarkets or health food stores.

Michael employs a special technique that helps home cooks make this dish successfully. He marinates the chicken called for in a mixture of egg white and cornstarch. Marinating chicken in this way usually gives the chicken a delightfully smooth texture.

Peanuts are the surprise ingredients in the dish. Balanced with the chicken and a light delicious sauce, they take on special texture and flavor and make a fine addition.

- MICHAEL TONG'S PEANUT CHICKEN
- 1½ pounds (scant) skinned and boned chicken breasts
 - 1 large egg white
 - 3 teaspoons cornstarch
 - 2 tablespoons water
 - 3 tablespoons soy sauce
 - 3 tablespoons medium sherry
 - 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
 - 1 teaspoon sesame oil
 - 1½ teaspoons sugar
 - 1-3rd cup peanut oil
 - ½ cup canned drained water chestnuts
 - ½ cup canned drained bamboo shoots
 - 6 medium scallions, cut in ½-inch lengths
 - 3 large cloves garlic, finely chopped
 - ½ teaspoon dried crushed red pepper
 - ½ cup unsalted roasted peanuts
- Cut chicken into 1-inch pieces. In a small bowl stir together egg white and 1½ teaspoons of the cornstarch until the cornstarch is moistened; add chicken and turn pieces to coat all sides. Cover and marinate at room temperature for 2 hours.

In a small bowl stir together remaining 1½ teaspoons of the cornstarch and water until blended; stir in soy sauce, sherry, vinegar, sesame oil and sugar. Reserve.

In a large deep skillet or wok, heat peanut oil over very high heat until it begins to smoke; reduce heat to medium. Add chicken mixture; cook, stirring constantly for 2 minutes; with a slotted spoon remove meat to platter. Stir in water chestnuts, bamboo shoots, scallions, garlic and pepper; cook, stirring constantly, another 2 minutes; stir in reserved sauce. Return chicken to skillet and continue to cook and stir until mixture thickens slightly — about 3 minutes. Stir in peanuts. Serve at once! Makes 4 servings.

IS THIS MEETING NECESSARY?

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the more frustrating parts of any businessperson's day is trying to reach an associate on the telephone and to be told "I'm sorry, he's in a meeting," notes MIS Week.

Reporting on a survey of 100 of the nation's top companies, the computer management information systems journal says that executives say they attend 16.5 hours of meetings a week.

At Wit's End — By Erma Bombeck

Every couple of years or so, a "Dearest" book appears on the best-seller list from a less-than-happy child who figures the world will be richer if they share their misery.

The volley of words take dead aim against a parent who has attained some stature in the entertainment industry: Joan Crawford (Fire one!) Bing Crosby (Fire two!) Bette Davis (Fire three!)

My mother did not raise a fool. I saw the handwriting on the wall 20 years ago and started to chronicle my own side of the story in this column. But there is another way parents can get in a word before their kids spit it all out on "Good Morning America."

Children have always been desperately hungry for feelings. How did you feel the first time you saw them? What did they sleep in? Where did you take them? Did you make mistakes? Did they say anything funny to make you laugh? Was there any drama in their lives when you worried about them? How little were they?

I know all about the "baby books." With the first one, there are three volumes showing the kid frothing bubbles at the mouth. With the second child, there is a picture every birthday for six years.

Cake Decorating Class Date Planned

A cake decorating class will begin March 19 at the Community Building, located on the corner of Fourth and Greene streets, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. For further information call Greenville Recreation and Parks Department at 752-4137, extension 250.

With the third one, there is one picture taken at the hospital with his eyes closed, a Rod McKuen poem and a recipe for baklava which you misfiled.

What I'm suggesting is you write your own book before they get a crack at it.

Write the pride you're feeling on a program while you're sitting there waiting for the curtain to go up on your child playing a bad tooth in a health pageant. How you made the costume and left the Velcro "cavity" at home on the kitchen table and how Daddy forgot to get flash bulbs for the camera and that's why the pictures look like a Steven Spielberg film.

Write the anger you're feeling as you sit there waiting for him to come home at 2 in the morning. Write why you feel the anger. How you've heard every siren in town since 11 p.m. and how you care and worry about him and always will.

Put down the terror you feel when one is sick and how Grandma used to thump you on the foot when you were sound asleep and say, "The baby's crying. I'll get her."

Have your co-author (husband) also contribute to the manuscript. His clumsiness at first. His apprehension. How his life changed and how he never thought he could feel this way over something with plumbing that couldn't be fixed by running water. Grandparents should be an important chapter in this volume. Encourage them to hand down their stories of their past and how grandchildren gave them a second chance at immortality.

I worry about how passive we have become. We don't really talk anymore. We observe. We listen. We take notes. We switch channels. We wait for responses from silent computers who don't know us and don't care to.

Think about it. How can you build a future on silence? Kids need a firm foundation of history, humor, happenings and feelings. You can give new meaning to Baby Dearest. I bet after reading it, not one of your kids will even think about topping it.

Professor Collects Old Apples

By CONNOISSEUR
A Hearst Magazine

Elwood Fisher collects old apples the way some people collect antiques.

The half-acre orchard in Fisher's Virginia backyard is one of the most remarkable spots in American horticulture, according to an article in the March issue of Connoisseur. It is a living museum of edible fruits preserved from possible extinction.

Fisher, a professor of biology at James Madison University, for the past 15 years has been searching out and preserving for posterity the heirloom varieties of fruits Americans raised in colonial times and in the early days of the Republic.

He has two kinds of medlar and three jujubes; four mulberries; nine currants and nine raspberries; 15 peaches; 16 grapes; 40 plums, most from Europe, some Asian, some native North American; 47 apricots; and 57 cherries, both sweet and sour.

Above all, he has apples — 862 varieties, with names such as Cannon Pearmain and Catshead, Albemarle and Newton Pippin, Ben Davis and Bentley's Sweet. George Washington's favorite apple may be growing in Fisher's backyard, and the Catshead may have been grown in Thomas Jefferson's orchard at Monticello.

Fisher traces his love of apples to his childhood on a farm outside Elkins, W.Va. One of his grandfathers grew more than 80 different kinds of apples. That's a far cry from the short list of apples that dominate in today's supermarkets — Red Delicious, Grimes Golden, McIntosh, Stayman, Winesap and a few others.

Fisher's home base is in Harrisonburg in the Virginia apple country, and from there for the past 15 years he has gone out into the countryside, visiting the smallest hamlets and ancestral farms in the hills and hollows.

Perfume Samples Cause Many Headaches

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see the letter in print from the lady whose husband had severe headaches caused by the heavily perfumed envelope their department store bill came in.

We mail carriers also get headaches from perfumed envelopes, only it's 100 times worse because we have to carry a whole bagful. Some stores enclose samples of a new perfume with every bill. Then there are seed companies who sell rose plants and mail out samples. The smell of those samples really does overpower me. Do the people who send them realize this? Or don't they care? Some people on my route say, "Please do not deliver them to the house; throw them in the trash!"

One solution would be to put a sample of the fragrance in a sealed foil packet. The recipients could then decide if they want to open it or not.

You would do the mail carriers a big favor if you printed this.

OKLAHOMA MAIL CARRIER

DEAR MAIL CARRIER: It's the least I can do for the mail carriers. They do so much for me.

tions and government agencies recognize the urgency of maintaining genetic diversity in our major food crops by preserving the varieties our great-grandparents grew, but it wasn't like that when Fisher began collecting.

He would ask around for old-timers who might know and be able to identify old apple trees of the kind commercial orchards don't grow any more.

"More than most people," Fisher said, "I'm fighting with time. Some of these old fruit trees may live on for many a year, but the number of people who can identify them from memory grows vanishingly smaller with every passing year."

When Fisher finds a variety of apple he wants, he gathers scions to graft onto the special dwarfing understock in his backyard orchard.

Even with dwarfing, 862 apple trees — not to mention all the others — would not fit on half an acre.

Technically, Fisher has what biologists call "germ plasm," the basic genetic stuff of living organisms. In 39 neat rows, he has 2,000 fruit trees, 700 of them apple. They carry the germ plasm of almost 900 apples, thanks to Fisher's multiple grafting.

With further grafting, Allen Lacy wrote in Connoisseur, the germ plasm can always be turned into a genuine tree.

Heirloom apples today are available commercially. Trees may be purchased from J. E. Miller Nurseries, Canandaigua, NY 14424 (catalog free) or from smaller, more specialized nurseries such as Southmeadow Fruit Gardens, Lakeside, MI, 49116 (catalog $8).

DEAR ABBY: I'm an attractive, mature, professional woman who would like to respond to "Pete in Daytona Beach." "Pete" admits he's one of those balding men who have let a few strands grow long to be wrapped around their head to camouflage their baldness. (He did this reluctantly at the insistence of a woman he was dating because she wanted him to present a more youthful appearance.)

The most desirable man I've ever met in my life wears the "wrap-around" hair style. Unfortunately, I am not at liberty to tell him that with or without hair, he would still be the man I desire and admire the most.

If he wrapped those few strands around his head 10 times, and put a bone through it to hold it up, he would still be the sexiest, most virile-looking man I've ever met. Should he decide to do away with the cover-up hairdo and appear completely bald, he would still be the sexiest, most handsome and virile-looking man alive, as far as I'm concerned.

"Pete," you don't need to please anyone except yourself. Find a woman who will accept you as you are.

DEAR SALLY: Where are you writing from? You sound like the kind of woman a lot of balding men would like to meet. I wonder how many men out there would like a "natural" woman with no makeup, no hairdo, no bra, no nothing?

Empty Ballot

It's not fair for farmers to make decisions and lawmakers not to.

Once more, farmers found themselves marking ballots this week without knowing what the ballot meant. In the triennial Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service tobacco referendum, most growers were expected to vote for a federal leaf program that has yet to materialize. The program is not an enigma — it just doesn't exist. The Senate has yet to act on it. While farm balloting is never delayed, decisions by lawmakers often are.

Voting on an unknown is dangerous to the farmer. If growers approve a program and lawmakers decide on an unprofitably high price support, the program will go under — along with the farmers. If they approve a program and lawmakers don't, the referendum will be meaningless. Either way, a blind vote amounts to asking farmers to point a gun at their own heads.

The solution is simple. Budgeting decisions should be made before votes are cast. Growers beleaguered by uncertainties about weather, loans and land values shouldn't be faced with another uncertainty when marking a ballot that affects their livelihood. The notion of being required to vote by one federal agency on something that another federal body can't agree on conjures the image of marionettes on strings. Jerked in one direction and pulled in another simultaneously, the tobacco farmer becomes a puppet.

Lawmakers must make concrete choices in time for a vote that counts. Farmers must know when they make that crucial "X" that their choice, like their fate, is not empty.

At Home

After nearly a decade of bouncing from place to place, the Pitt County Farmers Market has a home.

Officials broke ground for the facility today, and although the location is controversial, the occasion marks an auspicious start for the grower's organization. The market has been handicapped since its beginning by setting up in parking areas and empty lots not designed for selling vegetables.

When seeking a permanent spot, members wanted heavy customer traffic, trees, aesthetic appeal and — most importantly — room to grow. The permanent site on the old county home property admittedly doesn't have all these characteristics. It is rural and won't provide as many customers initially as the site in Greenville.

The site does, however, have three distinct advantages.

First, it is in an area of rapid growth. Its proximity to the new Pitt County Elementary School site will guarantee traffic. Each parent that ferries a child to school is a potential customer.

Second, the land has trees, space and a rural, agricultural atmosphere. It is a setting free from zoning restrictions and conducive to marketing farm products.

Third, the 3.26-acre piece of property allows the organization room to expand. Constructing a first-rate building to house the market — something the organization never had space for — will not be a problem. Neither will parking be a hindrance.

With the diminishing profitability of tobacco, the growth of Pitt County's fresh fruit and vegetable industry is vital to its farm economy. The industry could not expand without a permanent building. Now, with ground broken for that facility, it can.

Palme Had Become Super-Diplomat

WASHINGTON — It was testimony to the world's fickle sense of justice that, only days after Filipinos allowed a bully despot to flee into exile with much more than the shirt on his back, one of the world's foremost peacemakers would be shot in the back and killed on a sidewalk in, of all places, his hometown of Stockholm.

But Olaf Palme, the 59-year-old Swedish prime minister who succumbed March 1 to such a cowardly act of violence, would have been the first to contend that life, and death, were full of contradictions. Ever the crusading idealist, Palme was at the same time a sophisticated realist. Unfortunately, the world will become a slightly more dangerous place without him.

Over the last two decades, Sweden's relative domestic stability and neutralist position in world politics had enabled Palme to assume a much-needed role for which he was well suited: that of super-diplomat. Tireless and ubiquitous in that job, he was a deserving claimant to the tradition of another Swedish peacemaker, the late United Nations secretary general Dag Hammarskjöld.

Palme was, as effective diplomats tend to be, neither flamboyant nor excessively intellectual. He blended, instead, the right mix of analytical ability, judgment and, as anyone who knew him could attest, a gift for getting along with most people.

One could argue, of course, that the issues with which Palme was most closely identified in recent years — in particular, the Iran-Iraq war and nuclear disarmament — had proved beyond his mediating skills.

His broader objectives sometimes got him into trouble domestically. Officers in the Swedish navy complained, for example, that he'd responded too leniently to the repeated intrusions of Soviet submarines.

Despite the frustrations and occasional controversy, however, Palme's efforts had a positive effect in that they promoted dialogue where none might have occurred otherwise. He enjoyed such credibility among the world's disparate camps that both Soviet and American leaders conveyed a deep sense of loss at his passing. Indeed, it was fitting that Henry Kissinger, whose former boss and policies, Palme had decried dur-

WASHINGTON — An unexpected alliance between Sen. Barry Goldwater and the heirs of his nemesis of over 20 years ago, Robert S. McNamara, has brought to crisis the politically tinged debate over military reform.

Chairman Goldwater's coalition with Democrats on his Senate Armed Services Committee has unlocked schemes to transform management of the U.S. armed forces. The Pentagon, with growing unanimity, is fighting reform in hopes that nothing meaningful will pass.

Supporters are so expansive in claiming benefits and critics so poisonous in predicting calamities that objective analysis of the reforms is difficult. They clearly would move toward a unified general staff with the chairman of the Joint Chiefs elevated and individual service chiefs and secretaries downgraded. That would mark final victory for McNamara's Whiz Kids, the operational research super-bureaucrats, against the uniformed professional military.

The struggle also marks an attempt by serious Democratic politicians to regain military respectability through reform. Pentagon officials cite a six-month-old column by Mary McGrory, no favorite of the brass. It quotes Rep. Les Aspin, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, as promising Democrats "that if they concerned themselves with such questions as the reform of the Joint Chiefs of Staff system, the 'prize is the presidency.'"

Thus, the role of Barry Goldwater, the erstwhile Mr. Conservative, is steeped in irony. In August 1964, after winning the Republican presidential nomination, the Air Force reserve major general assailed then Secretary of Defense McNamara's Whiz Kids as "adding-machine warriors... guilty of ignoring professional military advice."

But when Goldwater finally became Armed Services chairman in January 1965, he was sickened by Pentagon waste and inefficiency. At age 76, with two years of public life left, he saw military reform as his epitaph. The committee's regular Republican staff was shunted aside and an ex-Pentagon whiz kid, James Locher, took over. Goldwater followed the lead of Sen. Sam Nunn, the committee's senior Democrat, and has been joined on key votes by only one other Republican, Sen. William Cohen of Maine.

As the Goldwater-Nunn alliance nurtured, the increasingly anxious Joint Chiefs early this year invited the two senators to their secure "tank" at the Pentagon. Other committee members were discouraged from attending, but Locher came (despite JCS irritation). The chiefs opposed every key provision.

Letters of opposition followed — the strongest from Gen. P.X. Kelley, the Marine commandant. Asserting that an enacted Senate bill would cause him "deep concerns for the future security of the United States," Kelley added, "I know of no document which has concerned me more in my 36 years of uniformed service to my country."

Such rhetoric from a professional soldier transcends bureaucratic acquisitiveness. To these fighting men, reform spells victory for non-combat numbers-crunchers and what one critic calls "the weenie generals." It means to them not only repeats of McNamara's TFX folly, where numbers-crunchers sought one warplane to replace many, but also downgrading of military virtues.

Their passion exploded in Senate hearings when Adm. James D. Watkins, chief of naval operations, said criticism of the military's leadership "comes from Ph.D.s with foreign accents who have never served their country." On the next day, military consultant Edward N. Luttwak, a naturalized American, testified that "I expect a military man to be forthright" and that Watkins should have named him by name.

Luttwak's book, "The Pentagon and the Art of War," is at the core of this passionate debate. Its scathing criticism of the Grenada operation enrages the military ("If we analyzed World War II the way we analyzed Grenada, we lost that one badly," says Watkins). But the book is the model for Democrats such as New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo seeking a handle on national defense.

Although the reform debate is ostensibly about how the defense establishment should be run, it actually is an inquest on how the military have run it. That record was defended late last year by an outspoken former JCS chairman during a retreat at Ford A.P. Hill for Armed Service members. When President Richard Nixon asked that Haiphong be mined, Adm. Thomas Moorer related, he had plans ready to do it quickly and without loss of life.

Calling Locher's Senate reform proposals "the worse report I have ever read" in Washington, Moorer said: "I think it is significant that none of the people who prepared that report have ever heard a gun fire." That description of what the reform struggle is about resonates with arguments of the 1960s. The only surprise is that Barry Goldwater has joined McNamara's old band.

Down The Drain

RALEIGH — North Carolina schools are losing millions of dollars each year because bail bondsmen are going out of business and renege on bonds they had signed.

Richard Schwartz, a private Raleigh lawyer who serves as counsel to school boards in Wake and a dozen other counties, made that assertion to a legislative committee studying the state's bail bond laws. Schwartz said some bondsmen do not have the financial assets to back up the bonds they post for criminal defendants. When they go bankrupt, they end up owing thousands of dollars worth of bonds that will never be paid.

Under the state Constitution, forfeited bonds go to the local schools. Schwartz, in his work for the Wake Board of Education, has documented about a half-million dollars worth of unpaid bonds in the past 15 months, he said. In addition, "I commonly get phone calls from other attorneys in the state asking what to do" when a bondsman reneges on a bond, Schwartz said.

"This is not an uncommon thing." A defendant who has assets of his own can be released on his own bond. He may put up his house or other real property to ensure he'll show up in court.

A defendant without assets can hire a bail bondsman. Usually, he pays that bondsman 15 percent of the bail. The bondsman then promises the court that he'll make sure the defendant shows up. If he doesn't, a process begins in which the court can claim the entire bond from the bondsman.

The N.C. Association of Bail Bondsmen wants the Legislature to increase the assets a bondsman needs to get into the business. Today a bondsman must make a $5,000 deposit with the Insurance Department. That bondsman can then legally write $40,000 worth of bonds, none of which is greater than $1,250.

The association wants the minimum deposit raised to $10,000, which would allow a total portfolio of $80,000 in bonds, none greater than $2,500. Mike Mangum of Charlotte, president of the association, said that with the higher deposit, the industry would attract more professional people. They would have a greater stake in staying in business and, therefore, would not renege on their commitments.

Schwartz said the typical problem bondsmen did not go under because of one or two large bonds. Instead, he writes a number of small bonds which go sour. To pay off those bonds, he accepts riskier defendants because he needs the 15 percent commission they pay him up front. He uses that money to pay off the bonds he owes to the state and then those risky defendants run, too. Eventually, he collapses under the weight of his debts.

David Blackwell, deputy insurance commissioner for investigations, said the department regularly audits bondsmen to assure that they are not writing more bonds than state law permits.

But Schwartz countered that the auditing procedures do not spot the bondsman who is getting in over his head, the bondsman who is on the brink of defaulting on the money he will owe the schools.

Blackwell then conceded that there are "many, many hundreds of thousands, maybe even millions, of dollars (of bonds) uncollectable on the books of the 100 counties."

In addition to raising the required deposit, the committee is also considering tougher bond-to-deposit ratios. That ratio is now 8-to-1, or, $40,000 in bonds on a $5,000 deposit. By lowering that ratio, the state would force bondsmen into being more financially cautious.

Strength For Today

Modern theology is making a great point of what it calls "crisis." Modern writers in this field emphasize the fact that God enters human life when crisis has precipitated a situation in the personality of a man or woman which makes him or her receptive to divine influence.

One can certainly say that in this matter considerable truth is expressed. People often do not seek God until they are forced by some overwhelming circumstances to search for a power higher than their own.

In such periods of crisis the soul turns naturally to God. Fortunate is the person who obeys this natural impulse and seeks help where it can be found. The world has a thousand nostrums to offer us on the day when trouble overwhelms us, but they are for the most part only quack remedies. Only God's grace suffices us in the appalling hour of crisis.

'Do Something, Claude'

Pepper Files Bill To Block Mandatory Retirements

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I myself am 88 years old and am still working two days at my trade as shoe salesman, which started 55 years ago and still like it. There should be no age limit in this matter," a California resident wrote Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., last year.

The writer added: "Do something about it, Claude!"

Pepper, 85, who has become something of a folk hero to elderly Americans, did something about the complaint from Gustav Hollander of Concord, Calif., about mandatory retirement.

Pepper introduced a bill that would abolish it.

"It is inconceivable to me that a nation which prides itself on equal opportunity for all could allow blatant discrimination to persist against its older workers," Pepper told a House hearing Wednesday. "Aging is as odious as sexism and racism."

Pepper's bill, which has 50 co-sponsors in the House, would outlaw forced retirement at any age for most employees in private business. Similar laws already have been enacted in 13 states.

A federal law enacted in 1978 eliminated any mandatory retirement age for federal employees, but allowed private employers to require their workers to retire at age 70.

Pepper's bill would continue existing exemptions for foreign service officers, CIA employees, law enforcement officers, firefighters, air traffic controllers, high-level executives in private industry and tenured college faculty members.

Hollander's letter was one of nearly 1,000 that Pepper received last year with complaints about forced retirement.

"When a man retires, he expires," another letter said. "Our mind and body work together in miraculous ways," one woman wrote, "and if we cut off the activities of one, we curtail the other."

Pepper himself, who began his congressional career in the Senate nearly a half-century ago, said he might be dead today if he had been forced to retire at 65, just three years after he was first elected to the House in 1962.

As the vigorous, hard-working chairman of the House Rules Committee and the subcommittee on health and long-term care of the House Select Committee on Aging, Pepper says he thrives on the daily challenges facing a member of Congress.

Every American should have the right to "be as old as Methuselah and continue to work, if you can do the job," Pepper told a joint hearing of his subcommittee and the House Education and Labor subcommittee on employment opportunities.

Besides, he said, the bill "makes good economic sense" because it would prompt an estimated 195,000 elderly workers to remain on the job, generating about $3 billion annually for their own support and for tax payments and Social Security contributions.

"This legislation would not cost the government a penny," and might provide new revenue sources to help reduce federal budget deficits, Pepper said.

Pepper's staff said the bill would affect more than 20 million workers facing a mandatory retirement age, usually 70, but that only a small number actually would stay on the job if forced retirement were abolished.

The staff said 70 percent of all new Social Security beneficiaries leave the labor force and begin collecting their benefits before age 65.

Economist Joseph Quinn of Boston College told the hearing that a major reason for this are the "subtle but effective pay cuts" imposed by the Social Security system and private pension plans which discourage working beyond age 65.

Pepper declared that "abandoning mandatory retirement does not stigmatize older workers, demoralize younger employees, traumatize supervisors, clog the promotional channels with doddering incompetents, reduce productivity or jeopardize the financial security of retirees."

Congressman In Coma

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., one of Congress' leading Pentagon budget-cutters and the "powerhouse" of New York's delegation, remained hospitalized in a coma today and was not expected to survive.

Peter Esker, a spokesman at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, said Addabbo was transferred there Wednesday from Georgetown University Hospital and placed in intensive care. He declined to provide further details.

Addabbo's office issued a terse statement saying the congressman "has slipped into a coma and is not expected to survive."

Lois Simon, an Addabbo spokeswoman, said doctors had not given any specific prognosis on how long the congressman could be expected to live.

"Just that he is not expected to survive. It could be two days or a month," she said.

Addabbo, 60, a jovial man widely respected by his colleagues in both parties, quietly fought bladder cancer for six years, and most of his associates did not know of his illness.

"The suspicion among many members was that it might have been cancer, but Joe was doing his best to carry on," said Rep. Guy V. Molinari, R-N.Y. "He was trying to act as though nothing had happened."

"He didn't want anybody to feel sorry for him and didn't want it to impact on the important work he had to do in the Congress. He just worked every single day he could," said Rep. Gary Ackerman, D-N.Y.

Addabbo was hospitalized for four months last fall for what his office said at the time was a kidney ailment. He resumed his congressional duties in January.

Military Copters Grounded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says it will not predict when it will allow hundreds of its most crucial helicopters, grounded because of safety problems, to fly again.

The service Wednesday pulled its two newest helicopters out of service — the UH-60 Blackhawk and the AH-64 Apache, following incidents involving each of them this week.

The grounding affected about 700 Blackhawks and about 70 Apaches, said Army spokesman Maj. Phil Soucy. And it was the second time in less than a year that the Blackhawks had been grounded and the second time in a month that the Apache fleet was ordered out of the air.

Both directives are "temporary, precautionary measures," Soucy said.

The Blackhawk is a twin-engine, single-rotor helicopter that is replacing the aging UH-1 Huey copters of the Vietnam era as the Army's primary air assault and air cavalry craft. First introduced to the Army in April 1961, the Blackhawk is described by the Army as the most capable, most easily maintained troop-carrying helicopter in the world.

The AH-64 Apache is replacing the Cobra helicopter gunship as the Army's primary attack helicopter. Designed to defeat enemy tanks, the Apache is also a twin-engine copter and is loaded with Hellfire and Hydra 7 missiles and a 30mm cannon.

The Blackhawks were grounded after a crash of one of the helicopters Tuesday at Fort Rucker, Ala., during a routine training flight. Three soldiers died in the crash two miles southwest of Elba, Ala.

The grounding of the Apaches followed an incident Tuesday in which an Army test pilot experienced flight-control problems after takeoff. The pilot set the craft down without further problems.

Soucy declined to predict how long the Blackhawk grounding might last, saying the "air safety directive" ordering an end to flights would remain in place until Army investigators had time to determine the likely cause of the Fort Rucker accident.

Lt. Col David Burpee, another Army spokesman, said the Apache grounding would be lifted gradually as each of the choppers was inspected. He said the problem experienced by the test pilot appeared to be mechanical and involved the flight control assembly.

Burpee said the problem surfaced during a routine test flight of a new Apache at Fort Rucker.

Series Of Tornadoes Hits Deep South, Killing Two

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

A wave of violent thunderstorms swept through the Deep South today, and cleanup continued after three days of deadly storms that spawned more than 55 tornadoes from the Gulf Coast to the Great Lakes.

Tornadoes and gale-force winds raked the South on Wednesday, killing two people in Alabama, injuring dozens and flipping mobile homes, trucks and cars. Five twisters were sighted in Alabama and eight in Mississippi, Bill Barlow of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today.

Other storm-related injuries and damage Wednesday were reported in Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee.

At least eight people have died in tornadoes and high winds since the first wave of storms rolled across the Plains on Monday, injuring more than 100 people in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, and doing nearly $30 million damage.

Barlow estimated there had been 57 tornadoes through Wednesday night.

"It looks like the area today will be parts of the Southeast," he said in a telephone interview. "It's not really that early for the Gulf Coast. It's their peak season now, March and April."

Heavy and severe storms spun out today across parts of the Southeast from a storm system centered over Missouri, the National Weather Service said. The worst storms were in northwestern Georgia and in southern Alabama, where high winds blew down a barn and damaged a house near Pine Level, the agency said.

Two people died Wednesday when a twister struck near rural Carrollton, Ala., knocking a chimney onto them, Pickens County officials said.

"It hit several homes. We have houses blown down on people. We have a row of houses that was blown down, we have a row of mobile homes that was blown over," said Virginia Kennedy, a sheriff's spokeswoman.

Officials estimated that the twister damaged 30 houses, 10 extensively, but few people were injured, said sheriff's spokesman Tim Poole.

At least four people received minor injuries Wednesday night when their car was flipped "four or five times" by a tornado that ripped through Arab, Ala., 35 miles south of Huntsville, said police Lt. Rudy Wooten.

"We had a total of six trailers destroyed and 10 more damaged," Wooten said. "We've got three houses destroyed and two more damaged."

About five tornadoes hit around Meridian, Miss., on Wednesday afternoon, injuring at least five people, leaving more than 30 families homeless and knocking out power to 2,000 utility customers for several hours.

A tornado skipped through the small east Texas town of Pineland early Wednesday and destroyed three small businesses, took the roofs off two mobile homes and knocked out electricity, but no injuries were reported.

Baseball-sized hail smashed windows in Breckenridge, Texas, and hail piled up 2 inches deep on Interstate 55 north of Memphis, Tenn., the weather service said.

On Tuesday night, tornadoes or high wind damaged a school, derailed 28 cars of a freight train, overturned 13 tractor-trailer rigs and injured two people in Arkansas, authorities said.

The train had stopped near Fair Oaks, Ark., because of heavy hail. "Our crew says the first derailed car was lifted and set down about 18 inches from the track," said Cotton Belt Railroad spokesman Jim Johnson.

In Kentucky, the storms destroyed 43 houses and mobile homes, and 219 were damaged, 103 barns were destroyed and 145 were damaged, and four businesses were destroyed and 16 were damaged, said Gordon Nichols, a spokesman for the state Division of Disaster and Emergency Services.

"It just took the roofs off the horse barns and just left the horses standing there," said Bourbon County Sheriff John Ransdell.

Police at Jackson, Tenn., said high wind demolished five mobile homes and caused other damage. And much of Natchitoches, La., lost power from winds the Natchitoches Parish Sheriff's office clocked at 80 to 90 mph.

However, the storms brought the first major rain in weeks to parched areas of Louisiana, Tennessee and parts of northern Alabama, where thousands of acres of timberland have burned in recent weeks.

Hospital Death List Creating Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government list of U.S. hospitals that have reported unusually high or low death rates has become the focus of intense debate over whether the statistics provide valuable information to consumers or meaningless numbers that will mislead them.

The list, a computer analysis of death rates among Medicare patients at more than 250 hospitals nationwide, was released Wednesday. But even the agency that compiled the report cautioned that it was an unreliable guide for health care shoppers.

"The numbers have no intrinsic meaning," said Dr. Henry Desmarais, acting head of the Health Care Financing Administration, which runs Medicare. "We strongly caution the general public against drawing any conclusions from these statistics alone."

But a group connected with Ralph Nader's Public Citizen organization said the statistics, together with supplementary tables that accompany them, breach the shroud of secrecy with which the medical profession surrounds itself.

"What it does is allow people to make choices they were shut out from making in the past," said Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe of the Public Citizen Health Research Group. "There was no information that was more secret."

The list was compiled from routine reviews of Medicare cases. The hospitals were picked by a computer as "outliers" — hospitals whose death rates fell well outside the projected fatality rates.

Desmarais said the list was compiled as the first step of a quality control check. Many of the aberrant figures likely have legitimate explanations, he said, but the list gives state peer review organizations a starting point for more detailed inquiry.

Some explanations were quickly forthcoming.

For example, the list cites a Nevada institution for a death rate of 87.6 percent. The government's computer said its projected death rate based on diagnoses should have been 22.5 percent.

But the institution is the Adelson Hospice of Las Vegas, which treats only terminally ill patients. Agency officials said the computer was not programmed to take that into account, and treated the hospice as a hospital whose patients were expected to get well.

Allie Lakey, associate administrator of the hospice, said Nevada law lists her facility as a "specialty hospital" rather than a hospice. Its "specialty," she said, is caring for people who have a life expectancy of less than six months.

"That lends itself to a disproportionately high death rate," she said.

Vietnam Helping MIA Hunt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam is being increasingly helpful to U.S. efforts to find out what happened to the 2,436 Americans unaccounted for from the Vietnam War, the Reagan administration told Congress.

In the last eight months, the Vietnamese government has decided to "move from ad hoc gestures on this issue to a comprehensive program aimed at fully resolving the question in Vietnam within two years," said John Monjo, acting assistant secretary of state for Asian and Pacific Affairs.

Monjo made his assessment Wednesday in testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Pacific and Asian subcommittee.

President Reagan has pledged that a full accounting of the missing is of the highest national priority. A top-level team of administration officials recently visited Southeast Asia, and there were separate visits by two congressional observer groups.

The Pentagon is giving high priority to investigating so-called live sighting reports that indicate the possibility American prisoners are still being held, Monjo said, but none of those reports have been confirmed.

Officially, the U.S. position is that the possibility of prisoners cannot be ruled out.

Monjo opposed the creation of a separate presidential commission to oversee how the U.S. government is handling the MIA issue.

He said such a commission would send the wrong signal to Hanoi and "could provide the Vietnamese with an opportunity to stall under the mistaken belief that they may be able to obtain leverage through this issue."

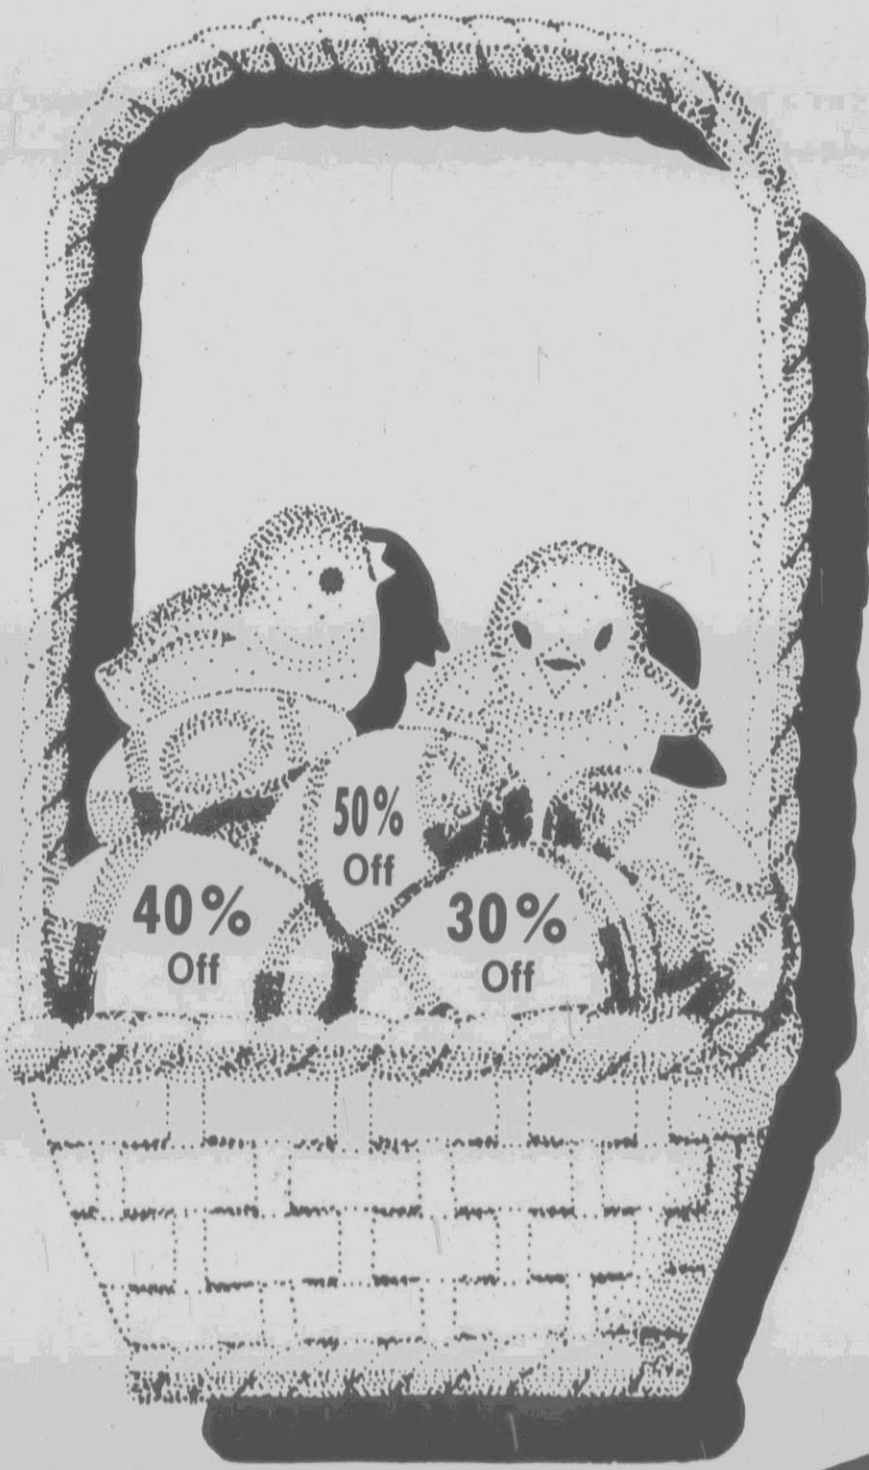

"The key to the problem is in Indochina," not Washington, he said. "We must continue our increasingly successful effort to obtain those governments' full cooperation, not vitiate our energy on internecine wrangling."

Spain Votes To Continue NATO Ties

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez said today that voters won a victory over isolationism and a success for the whole country by suprising pollsters and approving Spain's continued membership in NATO.

Final results of Wednesday's vote indicated that 52.5 percent of the voters supported Gonzalez' decision to keep Spain in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, while 39.8 percent voted against it. The remainder of the ballots were blank, or had been disqualified.

As recently as last week, public opinion polls indicated voters would reject NATO membership by a margin of 4 percent to 7 percent. Anti-NATO and anti-American demonstrations have drawn thousands of supporters in Spain, where there are four U.S. military bases.

"This is a victory of the Spanish people over historic isolationism," Gonzalez, a Socialist, told the private radio network SER.

Earlier, Gonzalez said on national television that the referendum's results were "a success for all Spaniards, not just one sector."

Spain became the 16th member of NATO in May 1982 and the 12th member of the Common Market on Jan. 1.

No other NATO member has ever held a referendum on staying in the alliance.

The referendum results appeared to signal strong rejection of the conservative opposition, and indicated Gonzalez could defeat conservative and communist opponents to win another four-year term if general elections are held as expected in October.

Election officials said 59.7 percent of Spain's 28.8 million registered voters participated in the election.

The pro-NATO conservative Popular Coalition, which had called for voters to abstain, claimed the turnout was at least a moral victory for its position. Popular Coalition leader Manuel Fraga said voters should not participate because a referendum was unnecessary with elections so near.

The Popular Coalition supports full integration of Spain's armed forces into the NATO military command structure — a condition specifically ruled out in the government's referendum proposal.

Anti-NATO groups, pointing to the 6.8 million Spaniards who voted no, also were claiming a moral victory.

Antonio Gala, head of one of the anti-NATO groups, and Communist Party secretary-general Gerardo Iglesias said the negative votes showed there were "millions of Spaniards who want Spain out of the alliance and the dismantling of U.S. bases in Spain."

Vice Prime Minister Alfonso Guerra told referendum supporters that he was glad to know all sides were satisfied to have done so well "because in that way we all are winners."

Shortly after official results were announced late Wednesday, the U.S. Embassy in Madrid issued a statement saying the U.S. government was "pleased the Spanish people have chosen to continue the association with the 15 other (NATO) members in the collective defense of our common heritage."

Philippines Finds Swiss Bank Account For Marcos

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A government commission created to recover wealth allegedly plundered from the Philippines by Ferdinand E. Marcos has discovered a $800 million Swiss bank account held by the ousted ruler, a commission official said today.

The holding is just a fraction of the estimated $5 billion to $10 billion Marcos is believed to have sent abroad before he quit Malacanang Palace for exile in Hawaii two weeks ago, according to Ramon Diaz, an official with the Commission on Good Government.

Diaz declined to provide further details on the Swiss bank account or how the commission learned of its existence.

However, the Manila Times quoted an unidentified source on the commission as saying that among documents found in the palace abandoned by Marcos was correspondence between Marcos and unidentified Swiss banks, including code names and account numbers of deposits totaling between $2.5 billion and $3 billion.

The newspaper quoted the sources as saying Marcos opened his first account in 1967 with a deposit of more than $1 million.

On Wednesday, President Corason Aquino ordered Philippine banks to freeze the assets of members of the ousted government on the recommendation of the commission's chairman, Jovito Salonga.

Under the directive, Executive Order No. 2, Mrs. Aquino's government outlawed any attempts to conceal or transfer the funds of Marcos, his wife, Imelda, and 31 relatives and associates.

The order, handed down after the first Cabinet meeting of the 16-day-old government, made handling the assets illegal until the commission determines whether the members of the ousted government acquired the funds legitimately.

The directive did not say how much the assets amounted to, and Diaz declined to estimate the size of Marcos' bank holdings.

Marcos' Cost To U.S. Mounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deposed Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos, who is househunting in Hawaii, has cost the United States nearly $450,000 in transportation costs from Manila and lodging expenses at a U.S. Air Force base, according to a Pentagon official.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman says Marcos is trying to arrange the rental of a home in Honolulu but that there have been complications involving the lease.

In the meantime, it has cost $150,000 for the services of guards and military personnel attending Marcos at Hickam Air Force Base, where Marcos has been living since late February when he fled his palace after 20 years of rule.

James A. Kelly, a deputy assistant defense secretary who supplied the figures at a House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on Wednesday, said $87,000 was also spent for " upkeep" of the Marcos party.

He said it cost about $200,000 when United States military planes flew Marcos, his 89 associates and 300 boxes of possessions and money from Manila to Hawaii.

Kelly said it has not been resolved who would pay the bills, which include overseas phone calls and thousands of dollars in purchases at military post exchanges at Hickam and in Guam, where Marcos' party made an intermediate stop.

Redman said earlier this week that Marcos was a guest of the United States.

Among the possessions brought out by Marcos were boxes of documents that could shed light on the bitterly contested issue of the Marcos family bank accounts, real estate and other assets.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asia, said the U.S. Customs Service has agreed to give his panel copies of 1,500 documents.

The panel has been seeking the records as evidence in its effort to help the new Philippines government of President Corason Aquino regain control of any wealth that Marcos might have sent abroad illegally during his rule.

"I am pleased we have been able to work out an agreement with the administration for them to turn over to us these documents in a timely fashion," Solarz said.

The documents will be turned over to the panel this weekend or early next weekend, Solarz's office said.

According to published reports, the documents could include details of Marcos' bank accounts and real estate holdings in New York, which the Philippines government has been claiming in legal proceedings in several states.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Times reported in today's editions that Pentagon investigators have subpoenaed Gen. Fabian C. Ver, former chief of the Philippine armed forces, in a federal grand jury investigation of possible kickbacks involving U.S. military aid.

The subpoena was served Tuesday on Ver at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii by agents of the Defense Criminal Investigative Service, the newspaper said.

Additionally, it would give drama groups in city and county schools, as well as community groups, a stage and auditorium space — something at a premium in Pitt County.

Should the Recreation and Parks Department, through the City Council, come to an agreement to contract for operation of the ECVC facility, it will necessitate arrangements with Martin County. The neighboring county contributed substantially to the campaign to raise funds for the facility, and has a number of citizens engaged in swim programs there.

The Recreation and Parks committee working with ECVC is made up of Dr. Carl Wille, Mrs. Sydney Womack and Dr. Alfred King. Lorraine Shinn represents the City Council.

In other areas, department Executive Director Boyd Lee gave reports on two developments which he says "need to be carried forward without further delay."

The first involves the construction of an outdoor theater proposed at the Town Common. "We have a $25,000 grant from the Land and Water Conservation Department of the state of North Carolina," Lee said. "If we are not to lose this grant, we must raise matching funds and get on with the work on the theater by the end of this year. Time here is a critical factor. Hopefully, we will be able to get the campaign in full swing at a very early date. We'd sure hate to lose the state grant."

The second project that Lee gave a status report on is that of plan to construct a raised nature trail in the swampy area of River Park North. In concept it will be similar to the raised walkway at Goose Creek State Park near Bath. Such a walkway, constructed above the normal water level of the area, with guard rails on each side, would provide access to a typical section of swamp for observation of plant life for school children involved in nature studies and for visitors wishing to explore swamp life at all seasons of the year.

"The Greenville Board of Realtors donated $1,600 and also obtained $3,000 worth of lumber from four area building supply houses to be used to construct a raised walkway," Lee said. "We hope soon to get this project under way. It offers new and exciting possibilities for River Park North."

A bid of $15,000 for the installation of a new heating system at Epps

Recreation Center in the Thomas Foreman Park has been awarded to Eastern Heating Inc. of Greenville, Lee said. "The City Council approved $12,000 for the project," Lee said, "but bids ranged from Eastern's initial low of $18,000 to a high bid of $32,000. After negotiations, we got Eastern's bid down to $15,000. Work will begin next week on installing the heating plant."

mately 3,500 additional acres west of Greenville's planning district. The report also recommends that building and land use standards for property located within the proposed park be tightened to promote quality development. Use of trees, other vegetation and open space to create an aesthetically appealing atmosphere are addressed in the report as well.

Now under review by county appointees and city planning commission members, MDSC recommendations are expected to be brought before the Greenville City Council for final consideration in June. The next meeting of the review committee will be held Tuesday following a 7:30 p.m. meeting of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission at City Hall.

While the final ruling on the future of the Pitt-Greenville medical district has yet to be handed down, Chaffee said it is important that the development commission begins to get the word out that Greenville-Pitt County wants industrial and medical product manufacturers to locate in the area and that provision is being made to accommodate medically-related industries.

"Whether or not the park comes into being this year or the next, we want to be ready," Chaffee said. "We want to be actively recruiting medical product industries, even research organizations ... and let them know about what we have to offer."

"It's important that we advertise because there is always extensive lead time in terms of working with any company on a new location," Chaffee said. "Companies planning to construct facilities in 1988 are starting right now to identify potential sites. Therefore, it's important that we get information into their hands about where we are right now and what is proposed so we can be included in their site selection process."

Chaffee said it's also important that the development commission identify potential sites for industries in and around the proposed medical park and develop related information that companies would want to know about the Pitt-Greenville medical community.

"For instance, we would tell them that right now we have 1,790 acres designated as a medical district and that we are pursuing expansion of the area to create an amenable environment," he said.

According to Chaffee, the proposed 5,300-acre medical park could support approximately 13 medically related production manufacturing companies if land available for that type of use is not developed for other purposes.

"Under the proposal, if it is accepted as recommended, we will have somewhere in the neighborhood of 400 undeveloped acres that would allow medical manufacturing as a special use," Chaffee said. He added, however, that growth already occurring in the medical district will restrict chances that the total 400 acres will be available for light industrial use.

Chaffee said that the types of manufacturers considered ideal for the medical district need approximately 30 acres on the average. Industries like Procter & Gamble and Burroughs Wellcome Co. use anywhere from 350 to 600 acres, he said.

"We're certainly not restricting ourselves to the medical park," Chaffee said. "There are possible sites outside the proposed park which still offer medical manufacturer proximity to research and hospital facilities (Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the East Carolina University School of Medicine)."

Medically related industries the development commission has targeted for possible inclusion in the medical park include rapid growth companies that manufacture biological products, medicinal, chemical and botanical products, X-ray apparatus, and orthopedic, prosthetic and surgical appliances.

The City has published a number of revised informational brochures on City services and boards and commissions. For a free copy, contact the City Manager's Office at 752-4137.

Choir Finds A Home

ECU News Bureau
One hundred and twenty members of the Sinstorf Youth Choir from Hamburg, West Germany, arrived in Greenville late Wednesday for a three-day visit to the city, including a Friday evening concert. But nearly half of the touring choir singers and musicians had no place to stay.

Some 40 to 50 of the choir members used sleeping bags and bedrolls and slept in the fellowship hall of Our Redeemer Lutheran Church on Elm Street. Most of the others were guests in private homes, but because of the spring break at East Carolina University, many families were out of town.

The Rev. Graham Nahouse, pastor of Our Redeemer, offered use of the church's fellowship hall.

The remaining logistical problem was solved by Gene Templeton, associate director of athletics for internal relations at ECU. Each morning, the choir members will have use of locker rooms at Minges Coliseum, showers, soap and towels, courtesy of the university's athletic department.

"Our facilities are quite adaptable to mixed groups," Templeton said. "We can probably do this easier than any agency in town."

The choir's public concert will be at 8 p.m. Friday at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

University Of Georgia President Leaving Post

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — University of Georgia President Fred Davison, whose administration was rocked by a federal lawsuit over academic favoritism for student athletes, resigned today from the post he has held for 19 years.

Six vice presidents and 13 deans who met with Davison before he announced his decision issued a statement urging the Board of Regents not to accept the resignation and urging Davison to reconsider.

University spokesman Perk Robins said the resignation is effective July 1.

The Board of Regents had decided Wednesday to delay renewing Davison's contract pending the outcome of an investigation of the university's remedial developmental studies program.

Jan Kemp, a former English instructor in the program, was awarded $2.57 million by a federal court jury last month in Atlanta. She had sued two university officials, contending she was fired because she complained of preferential treatment for athletes and certain other students enrolled in developmental studies.

The Atlanta Constitution said Davison told friends he felt he could no longer function effectively because of the regents' decision.

Davison said Wednesday night he would not comment on the regents' action.

The action came shortly after the regents and Attorney General Michael Bowers announced separate investigations of the developmental studies program.

The University of Georgia Athletic Association last week made public its finances in an effort to avoid further adverse publicity concerning its intercollegiate sports program. The University of Georgia Student Education Fund Inc., a principal source of funding for the athletic association, was to make public its financial statement later today.

The Kemp case was not the first headache of Davison's presidency. In 1976, an arts and sciences faculty poll gave Davison poor marks in many categories. The next year, more than 80 percent of those responding to an arts and sciences faculty poll said they had no confidence in Davison.

Report Urges Extended Payments For Medicare

BOSTON (AP) — The Medicare system should pay for elderly people's long-term care and nursing home expenses even though it would cost the old-age insurance program $50 billion a year, according to a Harvard report released today.

The report also suggests raising income taxes for old people who pay them and shifting more of the health-care burden to "the healthy and the wealthy."

The report was prepared by the Harvard Medicare Project, based at the university's Kennedy School of Government. It was prepared by doctors, lawyers, economists, sociologists and former government officials, and was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

At the Health Care Finance Administration, which runs Medicare, spokesman Dennis Sieberg said officials had not seen the report and would not comment.

"We decided two years ago that the Medicare program was coming to an important anniversary, its 20th, and we thought that was a time when people would pay attention to creative ideas for reform," said Dr. David Blumenthal, who headed the project.

A longer version of the report, containing 40 recommendations for change, will be published later.

"Our goals are to promote cost control, fairness and simplicity in the Medicare program," the team wrote.

Its most expensive suggestion is extending Medicare to pay for long-term and nursing home care.

"It's a very dramatic change, but everyone recognizes that a dramatic change is necessary," said Blumenthal.

Currently the elderly must finance their own nursing home care until they reach the poverty level, when the Medicaid program takes over payments.

"People often go into the nursing home when their spouse is still living, and in many cases we're asking them to impoverish their spouses to support them in the nursing home," Blumenthal said. "We're trying to protect the elderly's family structure from that kind of stress."

To help offset the cost of the program, nursing home residents would be required to turn over 80 percent of their Social Security benefits to pay for their care.

The group also recommended reducing the share of medical bills that Medicare patients must pay through deductibles and co-insurance. It said these payments make the system too expensive and complicated.

To help make up for the lost money, it suggested raising annual premiums by $150 to $200.

It also proposed eliminating the extra personal income tax exemption of $1,040 for all taxpayers over age 65, and suggested adding a 5 percent surcharge onto Medicare recipients' federal income tax payments.

This would lower health costs for the poor, who pay no federal taxes, and raise costs for those with higher incomes.

The elderly now pay a larger portion of their income for health care than they did before Medicare started, the group said. For the elderly poor, this amounts to 25 percent of their annual income.

"The elderly should receive affordable health care that is comparable in quality and amount to that enjoyed by the average American," the group wrote. "When cost considerations dictate limits on access to services or higher patient payments, the burden should fall more heavily on the healthy and the wealthy."

The group's other recommendations included:

—Extending coverage to pay the entire cost of an annual checkup.

—Combining Medicare's Parts A and B, which cover hospital and non-hospital services, into a single program.

—Encouraging enrollment of the elderly in health maintenance organizations.

—Finding a new method to calculate physicians' fees and reducing the difference between the charges of specialists and primary-care doctors.

—Requiring doctors to accept Medicare's fees as payment in full for all services to beneficiaries.

Burning Tree

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The Maryland Senate has voted to deny a tax break to Burning Tree Club, an exclusive golf club in suburban Washington, D.C., because it does not admit women as members or guests.

Since Burning Tree was founded in 1922, its membership rolls have been studded with high-ranking federal officials, including Supreme Court justices and members of Congress.

The club saves about $186,000 a year on its property taxes because of a reduced rate available to country clubs under a state program offering lower rates to encourage the preservation of open spaces.

Phillips Rekindles School Merger Debate

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A report submitted recently to the State Board of Education has rekindled one of North Carolina's longest running and fiercest debates on public school policy.

At issue is whether the General Assembly should demand that there be no more than 100 local school systems — one per county. If it did, all 41 of the state's city school districts would have to merge with county systems.

The debate pits the state Department of Public Instruction and its superintendent, A. Craig Phillips, who want a 100-county system as quickly as possible, against the North Carolina School Boards Association, which insists that merger is a local issue.

When the department last week released its report concluding that there would be "substantial logic" in limiting each county to a single school system, the school boards group — which represents local boards of education — reacted sharply.

"I believe that it (the report) is undeserved, unfair and short-sighted," said Gene Causby, the group's executive director. He complained that local officials had not been consulted as the report was put together.

The State Board of Education and the General Assembly, holder of the school system's purse strings, are caught in the crossfire.

Last week, the state board stayed in the middle by neither endorsing nor repudiating the Phillips report. Instead, it agreed to seek additional information and may request a study by an independent consultant.

"We really are at the beginning stage," board chairman Mebane Pritchett said. "It is such an important issue ... something the board wants to face directly."

He would not predict what the board would decide or when a decision would be made. A public instruction official, speaking on condition that he not be identified, said he would be surprised if the board did not take some action before the Legislature convenes in June.

Merger has been a politically explosive topic since the Charlotte and Mecklenburg County systems were joined in 1960. Three years earlier, the state's last special school district had been chartered, bringing the total to 74.

There were additional mergers over the next 25 years. When the Greenville and Pitt County systems unite in July, 40 special districts will remain.

Merger raises a red flag whenever and wherever it is proposed. Reasons for resisting it vary from one area to another, says Darrell Spencer, director of the public instruction department's Division of School Planning.

In some areas, he says, there are longstanding rivalries between city and county systems or between urban and rural sections of a county. In others there are fears of increased busing to achieve racial integration, loss of local autonomy, or disruption of relations between a community and its schools.

There also is disagreement over how merger affects costs and quality of instruction.

One reason for the resurgence of the merger controversy is the Legislature's enactment last year of the Basic Education Program, a $691 million plan to guarantee a minimum level of instruction for every North Carolina pupil.

The eight-year plan calls for funneling money across the state to hire new teachers, aides and other personnel, to purchase equipment and books, and to make other improvements.

As help from Washington dwindles and state government becomes increasingly strapped for money, pressure will mount in the Legislature to avoid any inefficient spending, merger supporters say.

"Will the state fund the cost of teaching the same subjects to children in schools three miles apart if it duplicates the cost of teaching personnel?" Phillips asks in his 102-page report.

The report contends that having two or more school systems is not cost-effective — especially when a system has fewer than 5,000 students. In 1984-85, 35 of the 41 city school systems fell below that total.

Additionally, while enrollment is declining in many public school systems, the rate of decrease is higher in 30 of the city systems than in their host counties, Spencer says.

White flight from inner city to suburb is one reason for this, the Phillips report says. "... It is a fact that many city school systems are becoming increasingly black which, if left alone, could result in schools which are segregated beyond an acceptable point."

Opponents of mandatory merger deny trying to undo desegregation. "I think it would be foolish not to realize that (race) is a factor," Causby said. "But it certainly isn't everywhere."

Phillips, while declining to make a specific recommendation, told the state board last week there were several alternatives, ranging from maintaining the status quo to asking that the Legislature abolish all special districts with withholding state funds from any systems that resist merger.

Ingram Supports Quotas

RALEIGH (AP) — Import quotas should be imposed to bolster the U.S. textile industry, and federal support of the tobacco program should be expanded, says Democratic Senate hopeful John Ingram.

If elected, Ingram said he would create a committee of textile industry officials and workers to get their input. "Certainly, quotas have to be considered," he said.

Additionally, he said, "some teeth will have to be put into existing laws" to ensure that the executive branch enforces restrictions already in effect. Ingram did not elaborate.

In a news conference Wednesday, the former three-term state insurance commissioner and one of 10 Democratic Senate candidates also said he would support federal loans to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., the grower-owned cooperative that buys leaf not sold at auction.

Asked whether he thought such legislation would receive approval in Congress in light of the hostility tobacco has encountered there in recent years, Ingram said, "I think it will when John Ingram gets there."

He said he was "concerned" about such issues as tax policy, care for the elderly and hazardous waste disposal, but he provided few details and refused to take stands on specific proposals before Congress.

Ingram said he favors a balanced federal budget but refused to say whether he would have voted for the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings bill that calls for wiping out the deficit by 1991 by either raising taxes, cutting spending or both.

"You're asking me a hypothetical question," he said. "I'll deal with that when I get there, insofar as achieving a balanced budget for the people of America."

A spending freeze might be preferable to cuts, and higher taxes are not needed, Ingram added.

Warsaw Cancels Kugel

WARSAW, N.C. (AP) — Businessmen in Warsaw agreed Wednesday to terminate their contract with developer Owen Kugel and his O.K. Associates, saying no progress had been made on a promise to bring the Duplin County town $2 million worth of development.

Kugel's original one-year contract on March 1985 with a group of local businessmen called for the $2 million figure to be reached by Wednesday. In January, however, the businessmen, who'd agreed to pay Kugel $5,000 per month for a year,

Delay Urged On Prison Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson admits a plan for privately built and operated minimum-security prisons "does raise a lot of questions," but he says lawmakers shouldn't reject the idea just yet.

Johnson urged legislators Wednesday to wait until the correction department enters into negotiations with a firm and brings a contract offer to the Legislature.

Meanwhile, a 1983 consultant's report presented Wednesday to the Jail Standards Commission concluded that state standards governing local jails are inadequate, "outdated and of little or no value."

The Martin administration's plan to let private companies construct and run three prisons drew skepticism from state lawmakers during a joint meeting of committees studying the prison system and alternatives to incarceration.

"I don't believe the leadership of the General Assembly will endorse it," Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, said in an interview. "It could get the state into a real mess."

Other lawmakers said they had not been convinced of the merits of "privatization" as the administration intensified its campaign to sell a $157 million plan aimed at reducing prison overcrowding.

Judge Tells State To Decide On Peat Case

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County Superior Court Judge on Wednesday ordered the state Division of Environmental Management to make a final decision by May 5 on whether a Chicago developer may begin mining the peat bogs of Hyde County.

White Tail Farms near Fairfield would become the state's first major peat mine if Sam J. Esposito, who owns mining rights to the 7,700-acre farm, gets permission to start. Esposito plans to barge the organic peat to a 79,000-kilowatt power plant he would build near New Bern to fire the plant's turbines. The electricity would be sold to Carolina Power & Light Co.

"I'm not pleased," Esposito said in a telephone interview from Chicago. "We have been unjustly delayed by the state of North Carolina for a number of years. This decision is just a reflection of another delay."

In January, Esposito sued the division and the N.C. Environmental Management Commission, a quasi-judicial board that oversees environmental matters. He said he had been delayed unlawfully in getting permission to begin mining under a state water discharge permit he obtained in 1982. He asked the court to rule that he had met the terms of the permit and could begin mining.

Had the court ruled in his favor, Esposito said he would have begun mining by this summer.

The decision on whether to permit Esposito to begin mining now rests with R. Paul Wilms, director of the Division of Environmental Management. Judge Robert L. Farmer ruled Wilms must decide soon enough so that if he rules against Esposito, Esposito can appeal to a commission panel and get its final answer by May 5.

Double Death

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — A dental hygienist was shotgunned to death outside her office today by her estranged husband, who then killed himself, police said.

Bill Wyatt, public relations officer for the Kinston Police Department, said witnesses told officers that Edna Griffin Hinson of Seven Springs was accosted by William Whitfield Hinson, also of Seven Springs in the parking lot of an office plaza.

Wyatt said the woman was shot several times with a 12-gauge shotgun as she fled and that Hinson then turned the gun on himself.

Flags Wrong

RALEIGH (AP) — The 1985 General Assembly spent $40,000 on new state flags for 2,000 schools, but the flags may be returned unflown because they were ordered in a size slightly larger than the American flags the schools fly.

A law passed by Congress in 1942 says no flag may be displayed to the right or above the American flag and any flag displayed with the American flag will be the same size or smaller.

A spokeswoman for Capital Flag and Flagpole Co. of Raleigh said the company provided flags measuring 4 by 6 feet as ordered. Most schools fly American flags measuring 3 by 5 feet.

Samuel P. Townsend, administrator of the Capitol Building and state visitors' center, said, "It's not unusual to put buckets in front of (a statue of) George Washington" to catch drips from the copper roof installed in 1971.

"There are lamp posts that are missing, and we have a pigeon problem," Townsend said. "We have wiring problems, and the fountains in front frequently don't work and frequently are filthy."

In addition, the 1846 fence that surrounded the square needs to be replaced along with 300 broken squares in the sidewalk.

"Some are deep enough to break an ankle in," he said. "Others are deep enough to support fish life when it rains."

NCSU Bequest

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A St. Petersburg, Fla., real-estate developer and North Carolina State University alumnus has bequeathed most of his $1.1 million estate to N.C. State to provide scholarships for residents of his native Cherokee County, N.C.

Henry Mercer Harshaw, who died in St. Petersburg Jan. 29 at the age of 93, indicated in his will that the Harshaw Scholarship Fund was to provide up to $2,500 for each scholarship awarded. Harshaw was born in Murphy on a homestead that had been in his family since 1836.

John T. Kanipe Jr., N.C. State's vice chancellor for development, said it was one of the largest endowments ever received by the university, where Harshaw graduated in 1915 with a degree in electrical engineering.

Harshaw built more than 1,000 homes and condominiums in his career after moving to St. Petersburg in 1924.

Dance Award

DURHAM (AP) — A woman who started her dance career with the first black ballet company in the United States will receive the 1986 Samuel H. Scripps American Dance Festival Award.

Katherine Dunham will receive the award and its $25,000 prize on June 11 at the American Dance Festival, which will be held June 12 through July 19, said Charles Reinhart, president of the festival.

The award, the largest offered in the performing arts, honors American modern choreographers for their contributions to their art form. The award was established in 1981.

Ms. Dunham began her career as a dancer of Les Ballets Negres. She later graduated from the University of Chicago with a Ph.D. in anthropology and has written several articles and books.

She is now director and founder of the Katherine Dunham Museum and the Childrens Workshop in St. Louis.

Concert Arrests

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Three Durham music promoters were charged with selling more than $9,000 worth of tickets for a Miles Davis concert that had not been booked, a State Bureau of Investigation agent said Wednesday.

David L. Murphy, 35, Yolanda Robinson Coles, 34, and Sachendra Sharma, 23, were each charged with one count of false pretense, a felony, SBI special agent Wayne C. Truax said. The three are partners in Most Serious Productions, a concert promotion firm.

Car Taxes

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A group of Rockingham County car dealers will have to pay back sales taxes on cars sold to out-of-state residents because the necessary paperwork wasn't filed, state officials say.

The state Department of Revenue is seeking back taxes because none of the dealers complied with a law that requires an affidavit from out-of-state buyers who do not pay North Carolina sales tax.

But nine dealers who met Wednesday with a representative of the Department of Revenue said the state only notified them of the law two weeks ago, and so they shouldn't have to pay the taxes.

Several dealers were recently audited and then billed for taxes on cars sold outside the state. The tax bills ranged from $330, owed by Hassel Priddy of Madison, to $20,000 owed by Gary Harris of Eden.

Offshore Minerals

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin and U.S. Interior Secretary Don Hodel announced Wednesday an agreement to form a state-federal task force to study deposits of phosphorite and other minerals off the North Carolina coast.

The task force will evaluate the economic potential and environmental impacts of ocean mining for the recovery of phosphorite and other nonfuel minerals placed under U.S. jurisdiction by President Reagan's Proclamation in March 1983 establishing the U.S. exclusive economic zone. The EEZ is defined as a zone extending seaward 200 miles from all U.S. coasts.

Hodel said similar task forces have been established in cooperation with Oregon and California to study Pacific coastal occurrences of polymetallic sulfides and with Hawaii to examine cobalt-rich manganese crusts.

Capitol Repairs

RALEIGH (AP) — Restoration needed for the state Capitol, including its leaky roof, faulty wiring and broken fountains, will cost an estimated $400,000, a state official says.

How Perdue Helps Tobacco Farmers Take Success in Their Own Hands.

Is tobacco farming a way of life that's on its way out? A lot of people, including many tobacco growers, believe it is. As the Tobacco Program goes, so goes the tobacco farmer.

Or so they say. At Perdue, we see the situation differently. We believe tobacco farmers don't have to give up their cropland and their way of life, and we can show you hundreds of small farmers in North Carolina to prove it.

They're tobacco farmers who have built Perdue chicken houses.

The steady year-round income of a Perdue broiler operations helps smooth out the ups and downs of tobacco farming. A broiler house works right in with your tobacco farming because it doesn't demand a lot of your time or tie up valuable field acreage.

Dry weather won't affect your yield. And how you run your business is just between you and Perdue, not between you and some committee in Washington.

Best of all, as a Perdue producer you're cashing in on one of the most promising trends in agriculture. In 1985, poultry was North Carolina's biggest cash crop. Poultry consumption has grown over 50% in just ten years. It has already exceeded pork consumption, and many industry executives predict that within ten more years Americans will consume more chicken than beef.

That gives you some idea of the bright outlook for the poultry industry as a whole. But Perdue is growing faster than the industry as a whole.

It's an ideal time to join the more than 1,000 independent agri-businessmen and businesswomen in North Carolina who have chosen to work with Perdue. For more information, return the coupon today, or call Perdue at 1-800-372-6543.

regulations, all farms will have two values — one value based on its use as a farm and another value based on its highest and best use (market value), such as for commercial or residential development.

He said, too, that a point system is used to value houses, with "points" representing "an average house."

"We work from an average ... up or down," Hardee explained. If a house has "a carport, garage, screened porch, that adds on points." If a house lacks some things that an average house would have, "we take away points."

"If we enhance the program we can do it (revaluation) faster," Hardee explained.

By using county employees to do the revaluation and hiring a consultant to establish and defend a schedule of values, commissioners hope to complete the in-house revaluation for less than $300,000. The last evaluation, done under contract by an outside firm, cost about $600,000.

Counties are required by law to set aside money each year for revaluation. By June 30, Pitt is expected to have $288,210 in reserve to fund the project.

Commissioners also gave tentative approval to a plan to revise tax values on tobacco bulk barns.

The board instructed Hardee earlier this month to develop a plan to set new values for bulk barns after Hardee reported that their value averages $4,200 on the county's tax books, but bulk barns "are selling for $1,000 to $3,000."

Wednesday, Hardee told commissioners that after "looking through the schedule," he would propose to "cut the present value (of barns) 50 percent, then use depreciation based on the year made" to arrive at a more accurate value for bulk barns.

Hardee said such a move would place the range of value for barns from about $1,250 to $4,200.

Hardee, reporting on the progress of the county mapping program, said Landmark Engineering has completed photography for the 2000 scale (1 inch equals 400 feet) maps, and is 80 percent complete on aerial photography for the 1000 scale (1 inch equals 200 feet) maps. He noted that photography for the 500 scale maps (1 inch equals 100 feet) of municipalities in the county will be done next year.

In other business, commissioners approved a proposal by County Manager Reginald Gray to hire a full-time personnel officer during the next fiscal year, which begins July 1, to have the county's pay scale and job classification plan reviewed and to hire an additional building inspector.

In recommending a full-time personnel officer, Gray reported that there was a 20 percent turnover in county employees (88 of the 448 employees) between July 1, 1984, and June 30, 1985. Suggesting that a personnel officer might be able to help reduce the rate, Gray said publications suggest that "if you're getting over 15 percent turnover, something is wrong."

Approval for a review of the pay scale and classification plan came after Assistant County Manager John Bulow said many employees cite low pay as their reason for leaving.

The board approved hiring an additional building inspector July 1, after County Engineer Phil Dickerson reported that John Payne, the chief building inspector, will retire Dec. 31.

A regular meeting of the board is scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Suspect Arrested

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Police have arrested a man on suspicion of complicity in the murder of Prime Minister Olof Palme, a Stockholm police official said today.

After Sweden's new agency reported a man was being held, Stockholm police spokesman Leif Hallberg said, "I can confirm that after following up various tips, we had reason to arrest a man on suspicion of complicity in the murder."

"He was brought in last night at 8:25 p.m. and booked for interrogation," Hallberg said. "The arrest was made for further investigation of the man's possible part in the murder."

Hallberg refused to give any further details about the case.

A man wielding a .357-caliber Magnum revolver killed Palme on Feb. 28 as the prime minister walked along a Stockholm sidewalk with his wife, Lisbet.

The Swedish news agency, TT, quoted Henning Sjostrom, a leading Swedish defense lawyer, as saying the new suspect was Swedish and of "unblemished record."

The agency quoted Sjostrom as saying the man was arrested because he had been near the scene of the murder. "I am convinced there are no grounds for indictment," the lawyer was quoted as saying.

Under Swedish law, a person can be held without being formally charged during an investigation.

Police Commissioner Hans Holmer has said police have not ruled out the possibility of a lone assassin, although they believe the killer had at least one accomplice.

ambassadors are also given an opportunity during their stay to travel and sight-see for two weeks in the country they are living in.

The Greenville Community Ambassador serves in a variety of goodwill capacities in representing Greenville. They traditionally present a gift to their host family, often take a gift from the city of Greenville to the major of the town where they stay, and represent the area from which they. Upon their return home they speak about their overseas experiences to various local organizations and present a slide presentation of their travels.

Miss Ambert has taken Spanish courses in school and her parents are Spanish professors at East Carolina University. She said she is excited about the opportunity to "use the language. Also, I've never really been away from home, so I want to travel."

"I don't know what to expect, but I'm sure it's going to be fun," she said.

the community ambassadors program began in 1963 by students in the United Christian Youth Movement. Since that time, 24 students have visited more than 17 countries. The purpose of the program is to foster friendship with people of other countries through understanding and living together.

Three-Run Eighth Lifts Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Perhaps Tony Guzzo, an ex-ECU assistant, now head coach at Virginia Commonwealth summed it up best Tuesday evening.

With his Rams leading the Pirates, 8-5, he turned to a couple of his players and remarked, "They've got us right where they want us now."

The players were dumbfounded by the remark, but Guzzo then told them at East Carolina holds the patent on late-inning rallies.

And sure enough, ECU rallied for a 9-8 win.

Wednesday afternoon, they did it again, to Fairfield University, rallying for three eighth inning runs to pull out a 4-3 victory over the Stags for their ninth straight win.

The string is believed to be the best start ever for a Division I East Carolina baseball team.

It came down to a bases-loaded suicide squeeze that did the job for the Pirates, as Jim Riley laid down the perfect bunt to score Dean Ehehalt from third base with what was to be the winning run.

Ehehalt had already been thrust into the hero's role minutes earlier, banging out a two-run single that scored the tying run.

"We had decided that if we got the bases loaded with one out, we were going to squeeze," Coach Gary Overton said. "We've been having trouble getting runners in from third swinging away, so we tried this and it worked."

Oddly enough, it was another squeeze in the second inning that accounted for the first Pirate run of the afternoon.

"Riley laid down the perfect bunt," Overton said. The ball went about ten feet in front of the plate and died, sending the catcher scrambling for it, and leaving no one covering home as Ehehalt easily crossed.

As to bringing in Ehehalt for the key pinch-hit, Overton said that the junior transfer who sat out last year with an injury has been hitting the ball well in practice. "He seems to be a good hitter and it seemed to be the time to use him."

Danny Culpepper hurled the first seven and two-thirds innings of the game, but didn't get the decision. He gave up all three runs, all earned, scattering seven hits. Two of the blows were homers off him.

"He pitched a good game," Overton said. "I was very pleased with what he did today. And their pitcher, (Greg) Bozzi did a heck of a job too. He really held us in check."

Bozzi kept the Pirates baffled most of the way. They got only four hits off him in the first seven innings and two of them never got out of the infield.

But the Pirates finally got to him for three hits and a pair of walks in the eighth that spelled the difference.

Craig Van Deventer came on in relief of Culpepper and earned the win, his third of the season. He gave up one hit and one walk in an inning and a third.

Fairfield struck first, getting a run in the top of the first. John Martin led off with a double down the left field line. He then tagged up and went to third on a deep fly to center by Ken McGovern. A sacrifice fly by Joe Mancini brought him home.

East Carolina tied it up with a run in the second. With one away, Mike Sullivan walked and Jay McGraw singled to center. An error on a pickoff attempt let both move up a base, and Steve Sides laid down a bunt to score Sullivan for a 1-1 tie.

The Pirates, however, had already lost a chance for more damage when McGraw, racing on after the overthrow of first, pulled into third to find Sullivan waiting there. McGraw was then caught in a rundown heading back to second.

Fairfield broke that in the fourth, as Mancini led off with a solo homer to center field. At that point, Mancini had driven in all five runs the Stags had gotten in this and the previous game on Sunday.

The Stags picked up their third run, holding a 3-1 lead as Martin homered to lead off the eighth inning.

Aside from that, Fairfield got only one baserunner as far as second base on the afternoon.

The Pirates, however, left men in scoring position in the third, fourth and sixth innings. In the sixth, they lost a fine opportunity with some more untimely baserunning. Mark Cockrell had singled to center with two away and Mont Carter's fly to right was dropped. Cockrell, who had been off at the start, was thrown out trying to come all the way from first on the play.

But in the eighth, the Pirates got their patented comeback in order.

Greg Hardison led off by beating out a grounder to deep short. Then, with one away, Winfred Johnson doubled to left. Ehehalt's single to center scored both baserunners, tying it at 3-3.

Walks to McGraw and Sides loaded the bases and brought up Riley, who's bunt scored Ehehalt with the go-ahead run.

While a pop-up and a strikeout ended the rally there, it was enough.

"Winning nine in a row is a great start," Overton said. "But what's more important is that we've had to battle back several times to win and we've done it. They just seem to find a way to come back and that's a credit to our young men."

Johnson led the Pirate hitting with two in three trips. Martin went four for five for Fairfield, while Mancini picked up two in three trips.

The Stags, still looking for their first win after four losses, will test the Pirates again this afternoon at Harrington Field.

ECU opens a two-game stand with the University of Connecticut Friday. Friday's game will begin at noon, while the Saturday contest starts at 3 p.m. The current string of daily games winds up Sunday at 1 p.m. as Virginia visits Harrington Field.

Friars Upend BU In NIT Opener

By The Associated Press
There was no way Providence Coach Rick Pitino could lose.

Pitino took credit for "two victories" on Wednesday night — a 72-69 decision by his Friar team in the National Invitation Tournament and the fine showing by his former team, Boston University, in taking the tough loss.

"I'm taking credit for two victories," said Pitino, who left the head coaching job at Boston University after the 1982-83 season. "I'm taking credit for recruiting (Boston's Paul) Hendricks and (Dwayne) Vinson. They were terrific."

Hendricks, with 16 points, and Vinson, with 14, were the leading Terrier scorers. They combined for half of Boston University's 44 second-half points to help keep the game close. Hendricks also had 14 rebounds in the game at Providence, R.I., which was one of three first-round NIT games played Wednesday night.

In the other games, Providence's Big East colleague Pittsburgh was beaten by Southwest Missouri State 59-52 and McNeese State topped Dayton 86-75.

Tonight's schedule features 11 more first-round games, as Southern Mississippi plays at Florida; Georgia at Tennessee-Chattanooga; Middle Tennessee State at Clemson; Drake at Marquette; George Mason at Lamar; Texas at New Mexico; Louisiana Tech at Northern Arizona; Texas A&M at Wyoming; Southern Methodist at Brigham Young; Loyola, Calif., at California; and California-Irvine at UCLA.

First-round action concludes Friday night with Ohio State playing at Ohio University.

In a single opening-round game Tuesday night, Texas Christian defeated Montana 76-69.

Ernie Lewis scored a career-high 18 points and Billy Donovan 14 to lead Providence. But Pitino singled out Matt Palazzi, who came off the bench to score 10 points.

"I thought Matt Palazzi was the key to the victory," he said. "Usually, if he hits a few shots, he'll start firing them up. But tonight, he didn't do that. He'd pass off. But he made all the key baskets totally under control."

Palazzi's and the Friars' last field goal gave them a 62-59 lead, but it was brilliant foul shooting that gave the Friars their first post-season victory in 10 years and improved their record to 16-13.

The Friars made 85.7 per cent of their foul shots against Boston University, including 12 of 13 foul shots in the last 3:30, as they won their first post-season game since 1978. The Friars have a history of NIT success, having won the tournament in 1961 and 1963.

"For us, a team from a league (ECAC North Atlantic) that most people don't know about, to play anybody in the Big East and play them the way we did is a great accomplishment, not only for us but for the league," said Boston University Coach Mike Jarvis.

Southwest Missouri 59, Pittsburgh 52
Winston Garland scored 15 points and had eight steals to lead Southwest Missouri State over Pittsburgh.

SW Missouri went ahead for good, 38-37, on a basket by Garland with 14:40 remaining. The Bears assumed their biggest lead, 52-44, with 4:25 left and iced the victory by connecting on seven consecutive free throws in the final 28 seconds.

Also scoring in double figures for the Mid-Continent Conference team were Phil Schlegel with 12 points, Chris Ward with 11 and Greg Bell with 10.

Charles Smith scored 15 points and pulled down seven rebounds for the Panthers, 15-14.

"I didn't think we could force them to turn over the ball as much as we did," Southwest Missouri Coach Charlie Spoonhour said. "It's been our best defensive effort of the year, because they are so skilled."

McNeese St. 86, Dayton 75

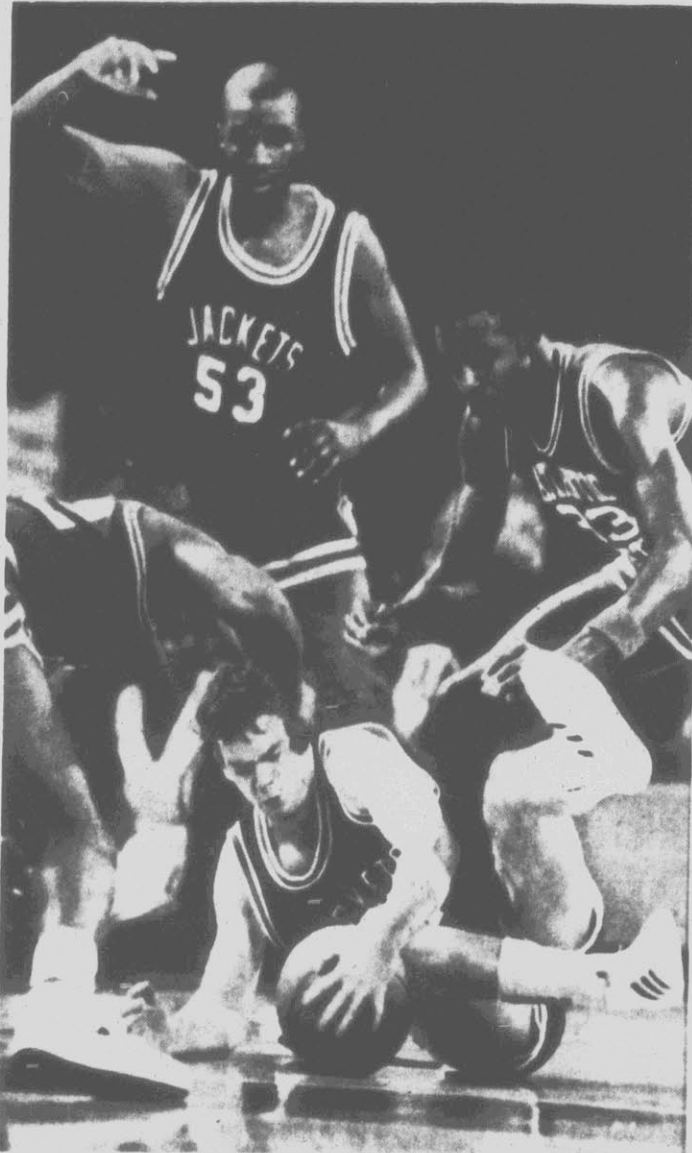

Jerome Batiste scored 24 points and pulled down 12 rebounds and Kenny Jimerson contributed 21 as McNeese State claimed its 21st consecutive homecourt victory with a triumph over Dayton. Their combined efforts overshadowed a fine night by Dayton's Damon Goodwin, who scored 31 points.

McNeese, 15-0 at home this season, built a 39-28 halftime lead and extended that to 81-60 with 1:50 left in the game. Dayton, a Midwest independent, then managed a 15-5 spurt, but it fell far short.

A big factor was McNeese's 33-for-53 field goal shooting for 62.5 per cent.

McNeese Coach Glenn Duhon of McNeese called it "the most consistent 40 minutes we've played all season."

Dayton Coach Don Donohoe: "McNeese is a fine, fine basketball team. They were just too much for us."

Polynice Breaks Dyslin's Nose

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — John Dyslin, the backup center for Virginia's basketball team, had his nose broken by a punch from teammate Olden Polynice, and will not be in uniform when the team opens NCAA Tournament play Thursday night.

Dyslin, a 6-foot-11 sophomore, said the incident occurred during a practice session Tuesday as the Cavaliers were going through three-on-three drills.

"It wouldn't have been so bad if I had any idea it was going to happen," Dyslin said. "I've thought about retaliating, but that would bring me down to his level."

The 6-11 Polynice, whose averages of 16.2 points and 8.0 rebounds lead the Cavaliers, said he threw the punch "in the heat of battle. Emotions get carried away. It's not that I purposely went out to break his nose."

Dyslin, who has appeared in all 29 games, averaging 0.7 points, had his nose reset at University of Virginia Hospital, but said he was told more surgery might be necessary. Dyslin said that since Virginia is on spring break, his family wants him to return home to Knoxville, Tenn., and see surgeons there.

"I'm weighing my options," he said.

"Yes, I'm sorry for it," said Polynice, a junior. "I can relate to the way he's feeling. I wish it didn't happen but I can't change anything now."

Virginia begins NCAA East Regional play in Greensboro, N.C., against the Blue Demons of DePaul.

LSU, Syracuse Open At Home

By The Associated Press
 Half of the 64-team field will be going home after the first round of the NCAA Basketball Tournament. Syracuse and LSU are already there.

Ninth-ranked Syracuse and unranked LSU will be playing on their home courts in the sub-regionals, which start today. Syracuse, the No. 2 seed in the East, meets Ivy League champion Brown on Friday night while LSU faces Purdue in the Southeast sub-regional tonight.

It's a case of deja vu for Purdue and Coach Gene Keady isn't thrilled about it.

"Two years ago we had to go to Memphis State," he said. "That's fine to do it once, but I think once every 10 years is enough to go and play on somebody's home court."

LSU's Dale Brown agrees, but his suggestion is out of the question — at least for the time being.

Says Brown: "Play it on a neutral court — Saturn."

Heavily favored Syracuse probably doesn't need any extra advantage against Brown but the Orangemen have it in their cavernous 32,000-seat Carrier Dome, where they were 16-1 this season, 85-17 over-all.

Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim says that any coach would rather play at home, but added that not all home-court advantages are equal.

"The smaller places are tougher (for visitors) to play in," he said. "I think our home court is good, but it's such a big place that it kind of diffuses the noise. I'd move back to Manley (Field House, Syracuse's old home court) in a minute."

The Orangemen had a 57-game winning streak at 9,000-seat Manley, which ended the year before they moved to the Carrier Dome.

Syracuse ran into the road blues last year when it beat DePaul 70-65 in the subregional before running into Georgia Tech, a 70-53 winner of their meeting in Atlanta.

Boeheim said he didn't think it was fair for teams to play on their home courts, but said nothing could be done.

"That's just the way it is," he said. "There's no way you can play a first- or second-round game without being on or close to somebody's court. It's a fact of life which last year worked to our disadvantage (Syracuse lost to Georgia Tech in Atlanta); this year it works to our advantage."

"Look at the Big East tournament. St. John's plays 10 games a year in (Madison Square Garden). Duke just played three times in Greensboro and now they're going to play there again. That's a pretty fair advantage."

Carrier Dome spokesman Mike Holdridge said about 16,000, three-session tickets had been sold at $42 apiece by Wednesday afternoon. Single-session $17 tickets went on sale today and Holdridge said a heavier sale was expected for the Friday evening bracket involving Syracuse. If 10,000 extra tickets were sold, it would increase the gate $170,000 for the session.

NCAA spokesman Dave Cawood said the association has studied the success of home teams in the tournament and concluded that "it doesn't make a heck of a lot of difference."

Home teams are 27-17 in NCAA play but Dayton and Notre Dame both lost at home last year in early regional games.

The tournament begins today with four quadruple-headers, followed by four more on Friday. Thursday's schedule:

East, at Greensboro, N.C., No. 1 Duke vs. Mississippi Valley State, Old Dominion vs. West Virginia, No. 15 Oklahoma vs. Northeastern and Virginia vs. DePaul.

Southeast, at Baton Rouge, La., No. 6 Georgia Tech vs. Marist, Virginia Tech vs. Villanova, No. 12 Memphis State vs. Ball State and Purdue vs. LSU.

Midwest, at Dayton, Ohio, Jacksonville vs. Temple, No. 2 Kansas vs. North Carolina A&T, No. 13 Georgetown vs. Texas Tech and No. 18 Michigan State vs. Washington.

West, at Ogden, Utah, No. 7 Louisville vs. Drexel, No. 14 Bradley vs. No. 20 Texas-El Paso, Alabama-Birmingham vs. Missouri and No. 8 North Carolina vs. Utah.

Friday's schedule:
 East, at Syracuse, St. Joseph's vs. Richmond, No. 16 Indiana vs. Cleveland State, No. 17 Navy vs. Tulsa and No. 9 Syracuse vs. Brown.

Southeast, at Charlotte, N.C., No. 19 Illinois vs. Fairfield, Alabama vs. Xavier of Ohio, Western Kentucky vs. Nebraska and No. 3 Kentucky vs. Davidson.

Midwest, at Minneapolis, No. 5 Michigan vs. Akron, Iowa State vs. Miami of Ohio, North Carolina State vs. Iowa and No. 10 Notre Dame vs. Arkansas-Little Rock.

West, at Long Beach, Calif., Northeast Louisiana vs. No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas, Maryland vs. Pepperdine, No. 4 St. John's vs. Montana State and Auburn vs. Arizona.

The Duke-Mississippi Valley game not only matches two schools but two different environments.

All but two of the MVSU players are natives of Mississippi and most grew up in the Delta. Several Duke players come from the nation's urban centers.

The Delta Devils represent a school battling extinction and dwindling expenditures while Duke cringes because a two-year drive to raise $250 million is not going as quickly as anticipated.

A majority of Mississippi Valley students receive financial aid to attend school in one of the nation's 75 poorest counties. The average yearly income for families who sent their children to Duke in 1985 was $75,000 and the school is in an area where unemployment dipped below 2 percent this winter. A New York Times story last year described Duke as a training ground for America's corporate offices and a way station to top law and business schools.

"It would be human nature for us not to be at our best," said Duke's Mark Alarie. We know there could be a letdown."

Jordan To Join Bulls Saturday

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Chicago Bulls guard Michael Jordan will return to NBA action Saturday night after a 4½-month layoff with a broken foot bone, overruling the club's owner and general manager, the team's physician and two orthopedic specialists.

"We urged him not to try to play, and told him the risk of re-injuring his foot and spending at least four to six months recuperating is not worth it," Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf said after emerging from a two-hour meeting with Jordan late Wednesday night.

"But Michael insisted, saying this was the most important thing in his life. He said he felt confident after practicing hard the last four days that he is willing to take the chance," Reinsdorf added.

Jordan, who played just three games before cracking the navicular bone in his left foot, will return to National Basketball Association action Saturday night at Chicago Stadium when the Bulls play host to the Milwaukee Bucks.

But Jerry Krause, Chicago's general manager, said he has instructed Coach Stan Albeck to give Jordan no more than 14 minutes of playing time in that game and to use him sparingly for the remainder of the season.

Krause, Albeck and team physician Dr. John Hefferon also attended the Wednesday night meeting in the office of Reinsdorf's real-estate concern, American Express/Balcor Co.

Orthopedic specialists Drs. Stanley James of Eugene, Ore., and John Bergfeld, of Cleveland, participated in the discussion via a telephone hookup.

All those opinions to the contrary, Jordan, the NBA's Rookie of the Year in 1984-85, said he was ready to play.

Jordan, known for his acrobatic moves and soaring slam dunks, said he has been ready to return ever since a workout three weeks earlier at the gym at North Carolina, where he played collegiate ball and spent much of his recuperation.

"While I was playing (in a pickup game), I took off from the free-throw line (for a dunk shot) and my foot felt fine. At that moment I knew I could play in the NBA again," Jordan told reporters.

Reinsdorf said the club was told "that should Jordan not sit out the rest of the season, the risk of re-injuring the foot is between 10 and 20 percent. If he waits until next September, the risk is only 1 or 2 percent."

"I am not impressed with Michael's decision," continued Reinsdorf. "What I am impressed with is the fact that he truly believes it is in his best interest to begin playing right away."

"The risk factor involved is completely out of whack," Reinsdorf concluded.

Little League Date Change

A change has been made in the tryout schedule for the Greenville Little Leagues.

Due to the large number of 9 and 10 year olds registered and the small number of 11's and 12's, the following schedule will be used.

Tryouts for 9 year olds will be held on March 15 and 22, from 9 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. Youths in this age group should report to Elm Street Park no later than 8:45 a.m.

Those who did not present a birth certificate when they registered should bring one to the first tryout session. A parent must accompany those bringing a birth certificate.

Tryouts for 10, 11 and 12 year olds will be held from 2 to 5:30 p.m. each Saturday. Youths should report no later than 1:45 p.m. Again, those who have not presented a birth certificate should do so at this time.

All candidates must furnish their own equipment — shoes, glove, etc. Baseballs and bats will be provided by the league.

To be eligible for the draft, a youth must attend one of the two tryout sessions. However, it is to the candidate's advantage to attend both.

The player draft will be held on March 22 at 6 p.m., and those selected will be notified between 7:30 and 9 p.m. that night.

Should weather present a problem, the tryouts will be moved back one week, until March 29.

Davis Leads Suns To Win In OT

By The Associated Press
Walter Davis was a perfect 10.
The veteran NBA guard scored Phoenix's first 10 points in overtime and the Suns held on to nip the Milwaukee Bucks 127-126 Wednesday night.

"I came alive. I finally played well," said Davis, who scored 12 of his 32 points in overtime, including a game-winning jump shot from the key with seven seconds left.

"Walter is like a scoring machine," said teammate Mike Sanders. "When we get down, we want to get the ball to him. You need that type of leader who you can go to during crunch time."

In another overtime contest, Sacramento defeated Dallas 127-120. Elsewhere, it was Atlanta 113, New Jersey 97; Detroit 111, Indiana 101; Philadelphia 105, New York 95; Washington 128, Cleveland 114; Golden State 118, Utah 111; and the Los Angeles Clippers beat Seattle 100-96.

After Davis scored the Suns' first 10 overtime points for a 122-115 lead with 1:53 remaining, the Bucks went on a 11-3 streak to pull ahead 126-125. Davis followed with his game-winning jumper. Davis scored 26 points after the intermission.

Paul Pressey and Terry Cummings each had 22 points for Milwaukee. Sidney Moncrief, Milwaukee's all-star guard, return after missing three games with a rib injury and scored 24 points to lead the Bucks.

"The Walter Davis of old is what you saw tonight," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "And you know who wanted to shoot it at the end of the game."

Kings 127, Mavericks 120, OT
Sacramento caught Dallas still celebrating its first victory over the Boston Celtics and slapped the Mavericks back to reality, ending a string of eight consecutive losses to them despite a career-high 46 points by Rolando Blackman.

Blackman's two free throws tied the game 109-109 with 41 seconds left in regulation but Sacramento's Reggie Theus hit six free throws and a basket in overtime. Theus' eight points in the extra period gave him 32 for the game. Eddie Johnson added 31 for the Kings.

Dallas Coach Dick Motta could see it coming.

"The Kings traveled all night and we were still euphoric over our victory over the Celtics Monday night," Motta said. "We had just killed the Kings on their court. It was the most dangerous psychological situation you can face."

Hawks 113, Nets 97
Dominique Wilkins scored 12 of his 35 points in the second period as Atlanta posted its seventh consecutive triumph. Trailing 31-26 after the first period, the Hawks outscored the Nets 38-16 to take a 64-47 halftime lead. Wilkins scored eight of his 12 points in the decisive period on spectacular slam-dunks. Kelvin Ransey led the Nets with 21 points.

"We got off to a slow start this year, but now we're really playing great," said Wilkins. "The thing that has turned it around for us is the way our big guys, especially Jon Koncak and Kevin Willis, run and get out on the fast break. When you have big guys who can get out on the break you can't go wrong. It gets you a lot of easy baskets."

Pistons 111, Pacers 101
Bill Laimbeer and Isiah Thomas scored 26 points each and Detroit held off Indiana's fourth-quarter rally. Indiana, which lost its fourth straight, trailed 70-54 in the third quarter but outscored Detroit 11-3 to pull within 93-90 with 4:48 left.

Laimbeer, the NBA's leading rebounder, pulled down 22 as Detroit won for the 12th time in its last 14 games. He had 14 points and 10 rebounds in the first quarter. Herb Williams scored 19 points to lead Indiana.

76ers 105, Knicks 95
Moses Malone had 28 points and 15 rebounds as Philadelphia handed the Knicks their fifth straight setback. Charles Barkley added 17 points and Maurice Cheeks had 15 plus a season-high 14 assists for Philadelphia. New York's James Bailey tied his season high with 25 points. The Knicks have lost nine of their last 10 games and nine in a row on the road.

George: Nobody Wants Griffey

FT. LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — New York Yankees principal owner George Steinbrenner, reacting Wednesday night to Ken Griffey's latest demand to be traded, said "nobody wants" the career .300 hitter and that he "should shut up because I'm tired of him whining."

"Who's going to take a 36-year-old outfielder with two gimpy knees making $960,000 a year besides me?" Steinbrenner said. "Who else is that stupid?"

The Yankees planned to use Griffey this season as their left-handed designated hitter and as a fill-in at first base. On Tuesday, Griffey told Manager Lou Piniella that he did not like that situation and then renewed his demand to be traded.

Griffey, who turns 36 in April, last season batted .274 with 10 home runs and 69 runs batted in during 127 games, most of them in left field. But Griffey, traded by Cincinnati to the Yankees after the 1981 season, has been unhappy with his role at various times during the last two years.

Steinbrenner learned of Griffey's remarks Tuesday night and made his comments to reporters while standing on the roof of Ft. Lauderdale Stadium. The Yankees were playing Texas in an exhibition game in the stadium at the time. Steinbrenner spoke shortly after Griffey, playing in left field, dropped a fly ball for a two-base error leading off the game.

"I'm tired of getting hit like this," Steinbrenner said. "Everything is going good and he's in there whining."

"He's got to get over this business of wanting to be traded every five minutes. The fact is no one wants Mr. Griffey. Maybe if he agreed to give back about $600,000 of his salary, maybe I can get him traded. But I wouldn't even guarantee that."

Steinbrenner brought along General Manager Clyde King, who said he had contacted "every club" in the major leagues last year after Griffey asked to be traded. King said no teams expressed more than a passing interest in Griffey.

"I'll start calling Triple-A teams if he wants," Steinbrenner said.

"I like him better than anybody else in baseball," Steinbrenner said. "But our doctor's report says he cannot play everyday."

"He'll play plenty. But let's put an end to this and concentrate on hitting and running the bases," Steinbrenner said. "He should shut up because I'm tired of him whining."

Actor's Daughter Sought As Part Of Cocaine Ring

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A federal arrest warrant has been issued for the 23-year-old daughter of the late actor Peter Sellers, one of six people accused of participating in an international cocaine ring that used violence to obtain cocaine and collect drug debts.

Victoria Sellers, an actress and model featured in a nude photo layout in the April issue of Playboy magazine, remained at large Wednesday after she, her roommate and four other California residents were indicted here by a federal grand jury.

According to the indictment, the leader of the drug ring was Miss Sellers' roommate, 30-year-old talent promoter Reed Wallace, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Judy Russell.

Miss Sellers, whose mother is actress Britt Ekland and whose father died in 1980, is accused of involvement with Wallace in a drug-related assault and other offenses.

Wallace is charged with engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise, which carries a minimum sentence of 10 years in prison.

Charges against Miss Sellers and the others include conspiracy to distribute cocaine and to possess with intent to distribute cocaine, offenses that together carry a maximum prison term of 20 years in prison.

Ms. Russell said the ring operated in New Jersey, California and other states and foreign countries she would not name. "The bulk of the drugs were clearly distributed in California," she said.

The ring distributed more than three kilograms, or 6.6 pounds, of Colombian cocaine in New Jersey on at least two occasions in 1985 and 1986, and claimed to be able to move quantities on a larger scale, Ms. Russell said.

VICTORIA SELLERS

One of the ring's major suppliers, 35-year-old Andres Pulido Zorrilla of Beverly Hills, Calif., was indicted by a federal grand jury in Newark last week on the same continuing criminal enterprise charge as Wallace, Ms. Russell said. She said Pulido is an illegal alien from Colombia.

Between January 1985 and early March, Wallace, Miss Sellers, co-defendants Curtis Hunt, Stephen Nave, Candice Raggio and Philip Sena and others conspired to distribute multi-kilogram quantities of cocaine in New Jersey and elsewhere, the indictment alleges.

It also contends the defendants and others "agreed to and did use violence and threats of violence to obtain cocaine and to obtain payment for cocaine."

Sena, Nave and Hunt physically assaulted one customer in January for failing to pay for cocaine, according to the indictment. Wallace and Miss Sellers were responsible for another drug-related assault whose victim was hospitalized more than a week, the indictment said.

Ms. Russell said searches of the defendants' Los Angeles-area homes and vehicles uncovered numerous weapons, including an Uzi sub-machine gun at Pulido's home, a machine pistol at one of the residences used by Sena and a shotgun at Wallace's house.

The investigation that led to the indictment was initiated by undercover New Jersey state police investigators, whose negotiations with an unidentified ring member led to the seizure of three kilos of cocaine in Hasbrouck Heights in January, Ms. Russell said.

Further investigation, with the cooperation of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration and Los Angeles County sheriff's office, led authorities to charge the others, she added.

Wallace, who flew to the East Coast 10 days after the Hasbrouck Heights seizure, was arrested Jan. 31 in New York City and is being held at the Metropolitan Corrections Center there, said Ms. Russell.

Pulido was in federal custody and en route to New Jersey, she said.

Hunt, 25, of Venice, Calif., and Ms. Raggio, 23, of West Hollywood, Calif., were arrested in California earlier this month and are in federal custody pending transfer to New Jersey, Ms. Russell said.

WELL CLOSED — A bulldozer crumbles a building housing one of the contaminated drinking water wells in Woburn, Mass., on Wednesday. The wells have been closed since 1979 due to chemical contamination. Woburn residents have filed suit against two industrial firms, contending they caused the contamination. (AP Laser-photo)

Poison-Well Death Case Goes To Trial In Boston

BOSTON (AP) — As lawyers debated whether two poisoned water wells killed five children, bulldozers demolished what was left of what one official called a "monument to man's stupidity in contaminating the environment."

The bulldozers were called into action in Woburn on Wednesday, the third day of a U.S. District Court trial here of a lawsuit by eight Woburn families against two giant corporations. The trial is expected to take seven months.

Attorneys for the families contend there's a link between chemicals used by the companies, the poisoned drinking water and the cancer deaths. Attorneys for W.R. Grace & Co. of New York and Beatrice Foods Co. of Chicago deny it.

There was no symbolism in having the area cleared as the 4-year-old lawsuit finally came to trial, Woburn Mayor John Rabitt said.

However, he added, "the wells stood there as monument to man's stupidity in contaminating the environment."

The case has attracted national attention, including stories on CBS' "60 Minutes" and PBS' "Nova," due to its potential as one of the most detailed legal examinations ever of the health effects of environmental pollution.

Attorneys said they have spent more than $1 million on geological testing, health screening of the families and a detailed reconstruction of the period between 1964 and 1979, when the wells supplied the East Woburn neighborhood.

The families must show the companies negligently allowed solvents like trichloroethylene — a cleaning agent suspected of causing cancer — to be dumped and that the chemicals contaminated the wells. They also must show the victims drank enough of the water to cause their medical problems.

Attorneys for the companies say it is impossible to prove that the tainted water led to the outbreak of cancer in the neighborhood.

"You don't get leukemia from drinking well water," said attorney Jerome Facher, representing Beatrice, now called Beatrice Companies Inc. He told the jury there was no credible evidence linking the chemicals to leukemia.

But Jan Richard Schlichtmann, an attorney for two of the families, said he was ready to trace the chain of events.

"These chemicals are toxic. These chemicals can destroy cells ... and affect the body's ability to fight disease," Schlichtmann told the jury in his opening argument Monday. He urged the panel to "make a statement to ensure the tragedy in Woburn will never be allowed to happen again."

Schlichtmann said an Environmental Protection Agency study found three "plumes" of contamination affected the wells and that two came from the Grace and Beatrice properties. He said the other came from the Unifirst Corp., which operated a dry cleaning plant and settled out of court with the families.

Among the first to notice the medical problems was Anne Anderson, whose 12-year-old son, Jimmy, died of leukemia in 1981. Anderson brought her son to Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston for cancer treatment throughout the 1970s and met several neighbors who also had children with cancer.

Despite neighborhood protests about the water, the wells stayed open until 1979, when new scientific equipment measuring contamination to the parts per billion instead of per million, showed the wells exceeded EPA standards.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control studied Anderson's neighborhood and found the childhood leukemia rate was seven times higher than expected. State health officials found the cancer mortality rate in the entire city was 13 percent higher than the statewide average from 1969 through 1978.

Oscar Officials Seeking Ways To Improve Show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Academy Awards as a television attraction has withered in the ratings in the past two years.

Viewers seem to be growing disenchanted with Hollywood's most cherished spectacle, and Oscar officials grapple with how to jazz it up.

Last year the Oscar show was too lean. In 1984 it was too long. This year the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will attempt to lure back the lost audience with big production numbers and bigger names.

Last year four producers tried to solve the ratings problem by committee, including the use of warning lights to keep acceptance speeches short. This year, the warning lights are being reconsidered and there's only one producer.

"There is a concern that it could stifle some great moments, like Sally Field's 'You like me!' acceptance speech last year," said Academy spokesman Bob Werden. He said producer Stanley Donen hasn't yet made a final decision.

In a 42-year career, Donen has produced or directed such song-and-dance movies as "Singing in the Rain," "The Pajama Game" and "Damn Yankees." Marty Pasetta returns for his 15th year as director.

The 58th annual Oscar presentations on March 24 will be broadcast live from the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center beginning at 9 p.m. EST on ABC-TV.

In the past two years, the program has been criticized for having far too much, such as the three-hour, 47-minute show in 1984, or far too little, such as the spare 1985 show. The latter was only a few minutes over its scheduled three hours, but sparse in entertainment.

"You're dealing with an established format, and there's really nothing you can do to change it," said Jack Haley, who produced the 1984 show. "I think the only answer is if everyone just walks out and says who the (winners) are."

But that would destroy the entertainment value of the show, he said: "You're virtually in a no-win situation."

For all its miscues and overtime, the 1984 show still did better than last year's, with 25.4 million households viewing, for a Nielsen rating of 30.3 and an audience share of 50. The 1985 show fell to 23.5 million households, with a rating of 27.7 and an audience share of 45. Compare those shows with 1983's 31.6 million households watching with a rating of 38.0 and a share of 59, and there seems to be a problem.

A rating measures the percentage of the nation's TV homes watching a show.

Polka Fans Headed For Big Time

By FRED SHUSTER
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a-one and a-two, the polka has beer-barreled its way out of the ethnic enclaves in which it spent the last 50 years and is heading for the big time. Not all the beautiful people are bouncing to the beat that put Poland on the map. But singer David Byrne of the rock group Talking Heads was spotted in the audience at a packed polka show in Hollywood last month and a San Francisco band that was started as a joke is all the rage in the city by the bay.

The energetic ethnic two-step is even drawing the interest of those in the know. On Feb. 25, the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences presented a Grammy award for the first time to the best polka album of the year.

It went to polka veteran Frankie Yankovic for his "70 Years of Hits." Polka had its origins as a village folk dance in Bohemia, now an area of Czechoslovakia. In the 1800s it suddenly became internationally fashionable.

The dance waltzed its way to America with waves of immigrants from Central Europe and as they melted in the pot, polka evaporated, except for weddings and parties in areas with strong ties to the old country.

But these days, a band called Polkacide is one of the hottest night club acts in northern California, even though it was started as a joke by a group of San Francisco Art Institute students.

"It's happy, gutsy music. Even in the traditional bands, people dress crazy and really let loose," said Ward Abronski, saxophonist and leader of the year-old Polkacide.

On stage, the lively 15-member group wears lederhosen, Naugahosen, mismatched plaid suits and hospital gowns.

"We do Czech and Polish rather than German polkas. Standards such as 'Beer Barrel Polka,' 'Who Stole the Keeshka?' and 'In Heaven There Is No Beer,'" said Abronski, the only Pole in the bunch.

Drummer Hayok Kay is Korean. So far, Polkacide has proved popular wherever it played, said Miss Kay, except for the gig at the Miss Nude America Pageant in August.

"The crowd was in no mood for polka. The fleet was in, there were several intermissions and the audience was getting mad. Finally they put us onstage and we got through the first tune before the promoter dropped the curtain on us."

Band member Carl Finch said he started playing polka in 1979 as a reaction to the direction pop music had taken.

Burger Rejects Radio Coverage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger has rejected a proposal for live radio coverage next month when the Supreme Court hears arguments over the constitutionality of the nation's new balanced budget law.

Burger, a steadfast opponent of television cameras or any other electronic devices in the courtroom, has blocked a network's proposal to air the April 23 proceedings.

In a terse note to the Mutual Broadcasting System, Burger said, "It is not possible to arrange for any broadcasting of any Supreme Court proceeding."

The March 6 letter, addressed to Mutual correspondent Steve Nevas, added this postscript: "When you get (presidential) Cabinet meetings on the air, call me."

Nevas, on behalf of the network, asked for permission to use the court's existing sound system to broadcast the argument, promising to carry the entire two-hour session without editing or interruption and free of charge as a public service.

Copies of the correspondence were made available Wednesday by Mutual.

Supreme Court arguments are open to the public and important cases generally fill the courtroom's 300 seats. Members of the public wait in line in such instances for seats to become available.

Burger is a long-standing opponent of any broadcast coverage of the sessions, although he mainly has focused on television. One of his objections has been that the media will pick out no more than a minute or two of arguments for broadcast.

Halley's Comet Prompts Elaborate Plans By 'Down Under' Viewers

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer
RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Halley's famous comet, streaking past on its celestial rounds, will put on its brightest show below the Equator. And people Down Under are readying a welcome of "comet chaser" airplane flights, "Halley's baby" contests and cruises by comet light.

Some, however, wish the heavenly body would just go away.

In Chile, the more superstitious are blaming the comet for a recent train collision that killed 58 people and a munitions factory explosion that killed 28.

A local astronomer sought to reassure comet-phobes.

"Halley's comet cannot provoke any behavioral alterations on Earth," said Chilean scientist Rodrigo de la Vega. "The belief that it can is a myth."

Astronomers say the best viewing of the comet, racing toward its closest encounter with Earth on its current journey back to outer space, will be from mid-March to early April, between 20 and 30 degrees south latitude.

This passage of Halley's comet probably will be less brilliant than those of past generations, experts say, but that has not dampened enthusiasm in the Southern Hemisphere as it prepares for legions of comet-watchers.

Brazil, whose two largest cities, Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, lie practically on the Tropic of Capricorn, has spent millions of dollars on promotion and expects 150,000 foreign enthusiasts, most from the United States.

Australia is also cashing in on the comet, with astronomical gimmicks aimed at tens of thousands of Japanese and other anticipated visitors.

Scientists say the clearest view on Earth will be from Alice Springs, in Australia's parched center, and the town's hotel rooms and camping sites have been booked solid for a year.

Chile, South Africa and Argentina also are gearing up. International astronomers are heading south to study Halley's Comet at such prestigious installations as La Silla Observatory in Chile, Sutherland Observatory in South Africa, and Argentina's San Juan Province National University Observatory, run jointly with Yale University.

But organizers are trying to make the astronomical event memorable for ordinary people as well.

"Don't wait another 76 years," proclaim tourist posters here depicting the comet over Rio's famous Sugar Loaf Mountain. Halley's comet was last seen in 1910, and the next scheduled sighting is 2061.

Comet fans arriving in Brazil will find a Halley Carnival, a comet Rock Show, a Halley volleyball tournament. Halley-brand yogurt, a contest for the cutest "Halley's baby," and a Halley's cocktail — vodka, strawberry syrup, orange juice and curacao.

Officials in Rio have built a huge outdoor comet-observation platform and are even considering turning off street lights to aid skygazers, although they worry this might raise Rio's already-high rate of muggings.

Despite the hoopla, Ronaldo Mourao, chief astronomer of Brazil's National Observatory in Rio, cautions southbound comet enthusiasts against expecting too much.

"Viewing will without a doubt be better in the Southern Hemisphere than in the Northern Hemisphere," Mourao said in an interview. "But regrettably, this could be Halley's poorest 'show' since sightings of it first were recorded 2,000 years ago."

At best, the astronomer said, Halley's Comet at these latitudes will achieve a magnitude, or perceived brightness, equal to that of the North Star. Its tail, he said, could cover 20 degrees of arc, one-ninth of the sky.

But in 1910, Halley's magnitude exceeded that of the brightest stars in the Big Dipper, and it stretched across more than half the night sky.

Nonetheless, Mourao said, Southern Hemisphere skywatchers will be able to see the comet for several hours a night, three-fifths of the way above the horizon.

To get above the clouds, Australian airlines are offering "comet chaser" flights over the interior, at $265 a seat. They expect to sell 30,000 tickets.

Entrepreneurs in Australia are hawking Halley medallions, Halley books, binoculars and telescopes.

Spacecraft Set For Comet Scan

DARMSTADT, West Germany (AP) — Europe's Giotto spacecraft closed to within 2.5 million miles of Halley's comet early today, heading on course for a rendezvous that officials hope will produce spectacular close-up pictures.

In a statement released by the European Space Agency in Darmstadt, officials said that as of 9 a.m. (3 a.m. EST) Giotto was 2.48 million miles from the comet and approaching it at a speed of 152,520 mph.

The statement said that early today ground controllers carried out a "small attitude maneuver" to keep Giotto on course for the rendezvous late today and early Friday.

All systems on board, including a flight camera, continued to function well, ESA officials said.

Scientists gathered at the European Space Agency's headquarters to make final preparations for the closest encounter ever of a man-made spacecraft with the comet.

Scientists also made a course correction Wednesday that will bring the probe, at closest, to within 334.8 miles of the comet's nucleus.

Giotto is scheduled to begin taking the comet's picture at about 3 p.m. EST.

The closest encounter, however, is expected to take place at about 7:15 p.m. EST. At that distance, Giotto's flyby could result in scientific breakthroughs, or mean the spacecraft's destruction.

ESA officials say cometary dust particles that move at 50 times the speed of a bullet may destroy Giotto before its equipment can send pictures via radio signals back to earth.

Giotto has been equipped with a double shield to protect it from particles of dust that encircle the comet. But scientists say it is not certain the shield will be effective enough.

Giotto was launched July 2, 1985 by an ESA Ariane 1 rocket from Kourou, French Guiana, and weighs a little more than a ton. The cylindrical probe, which is 9½ feet long and 6 feet in diameter, is carrying sophisticated equipment for 10 on-board experiments.

Among its main missions photography of the nucleus of the comet and the chemical analyses of ions and dust in the cometary atmosphere. Scientists hope data sent back by Giotto will tell them more about comets than all past centuries of study.

Giotto was named after the Italian master who spotted the comet nearly 600 years ago, then painted it in one of his works. But the comet, which returns to the solar system approximately once every 76 years, was first reported sighted some 2,000 years ago.

As of early Wednesday, Giotto was 88.99 million miles from Earth.

Four other probes — two Soviet and two Japanese — have also been launched to explore the mysteries of Halley's comet, but none has come as close as the rendezvous called for in Giotto's flight plan.

New Job

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Darrow "Duke" Tully, who stepped down as Phoenix Newspapers Inc. publisher after admitting he lied about an illustrious military career, will return to the business as publisher of a small daily.

Tully will be publisher of the Williston (N.D.) Daily Herald, a 9,000 circulation newspaper owned by Wick Communication Co., and will be chief operating officer for two of its weekly publications, Walter M. Wick, president, said.

Tully, 53, resigned Dec. 26 as publisher of The Arizona Republic and The Phoenix Gazette after admitting he pretended for more than 30 years to be a retired decorated Air Force pilot who participated in missions in Korea and Vietnam.

Let's take a look at your skill as a declarer. Cover the East and West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play three clubs after West starts by drawing three rounds of trumps and then shifts to a heart.

First, consider yourself lucky the opponents did not enter the auction. As the cards lie, they would have little trouble making at least nine tricks at a heart contract. The vulnerability, and perhaps an excess amount of caution on the part of East, can be held responsible.

The defenders start by drawing three rounds of trumps, on the last of which East signals with a high heart. West dutifully shifts to that suit, and all you have to do is make the rest of the tricks bar one. Obviously, you will still have to lose a trick to the ace of spades.

If diamonds break 3-2, you can claim your contract. But what if the suit splits 4-1? If you find out early enough, you can fall back on another chance.

Win the ace of hearts and cash the king and ace of diamonds. If both defenders follow, it is all over. As the cards lie, however, East shows out on the second diamond. Now your best chance is to finesse for the jack of spades.

When a spade to the ten forces the ace, you are almost home. Ruff the heart return and cash the king-queen of spades. When both defenders follow, school is out. Ruff a spade in dummy, return to hand with the carefully preserved queen of diamonds and cash your high spade. That brings your total to nine tricks — three spades, one heart, three diamonds and a ruff in each hand.

French Missile

PARIS (AP) — France has successfully carried out the first long-range test firing of its submarine M-4 missile with a new multiple nuclear warhead, the Defense Ministry said.
 The missile traveled 3,730 miles from a submarine submerged off the Brittany coast of western France, the ministry said. The target area was not revealed.
 The ministry said that all of France's six nuclear submarines would be re-equipped with the new warheads as they are modified to receive the M-4 missile itself.

A hazardous chemicals team has been organized within the Fire-Rescue Department in order that officers may be better prepared to respond to chemical fires and disasters. For information, call 752-4137.

 Government support for down-and-out citizens is not new, nor is it only the province of wealthy industrialized societies. The Sumerians had a welfare program that provided food to families of farmers during drought and crop failure. Unemployed workers in Sumer also received welfare. As far back as 2100 B.C., Egyptians gave mandatory allotments of seed to farmers who had suffered a bad season. Egyptian rulers also took pity on palace beggars.

Radon May Be Major Home Health Problem

By DON BEMAN
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Stanley Watras kept setting off radiation alarms at a nuclear power plant where he worked. He was puzzled because the Limerick facility near Pottstown was inactive at the time.

"I was blowing off alarms right and left. Something had to be wrong," he said. Finally, he walked over to a radiation detector, and "bingo. There it was."

The plant managers sent a team of health specialists to his seven-year-old Boyertown house, where they found levels of radon gas equal to those found inside uranium mines.

Radon gas is the colorless and odorless byproduct of the natural breakdown of uranium ore. Studies on miners have determined that dust contaminated with radon could cause lung cancer if levels were high enough.

The technicians notified state officials immediately, interrupting the 1984 Christmas party for state workers. Their telephone call that day met disbelief, recalled Thomas M. Gerusky, director of the bureau of radiation protection, state Department of Environmental Resources.

That was the first inkling Pennsylvania officials had that radioactive radon gas was about to become a household worry for thousands of people in three Northeastern states — and potentially millions across the country.

On Jan. 6, 1985, Pennsylvania officials announced their finding about the radon level in Watras' house.

The DER investigated and found the source: a geological formation known as the Reading Prong, which begins at Reading, Pa., in southeastern Pennsylvania and stretches into northwestern New Jersey and sections of Orange, Rockland, Putnam and Dutchess counties in New York.

An estimated 250,000 homes are located above the Reading Prong.

However, state and federal officials, meeting three weeks ago in Philadelphia and last week in Albany, N.Y., concluded that the potential for radon gas problems could extend across the country.

The national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta suggested that known ore formations in parts of Florida, Maine and the Rocky Mountains are immediately suspect.

Between 5 million and 20 million Americans could be affected, federal officials said.

"The problem of indoor radon may be the most significant public health radiation problem that we in state programs will ever face," Gerusky warned those attending the Albany conference.

The immediate purpose of the two conferences was to improve working arrangements among Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York. The long-range purpose was to inform other states and to secure federal assistance.

"We needed professional recognition of this problem and we now have it," said Bruce Dallas, Pennsylvania DER spokesman.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency is expected to release next month a five-point program, according to a letter from EPA administrator Lee M. Thomas last November to Gov. Dick Thornburgh.

Dallas said the program outlined includes immediate expansion of Pennsylvania's 18-home cleanup experiment to 110 homes in the region.

Other points include safety standards, building code specifications and construction techniques as well as an educational program. In Pennsylvania, residents who want their homes tested can pick up the phone and dial 800-23-RADON.

Also anticipated is a new national study into the health hazards of radon as well as a drive to find out exactly where radon gas is found.

The current information about radon comes mainly from studies on uranium miners, Dallas said.

"But is living in a home 12, 16, 24 hours a day the same as working eight hours in a mine? We don't really know," Dallas said.

The National Cancer Institute considers radon the second-leading cause of lung cancer; the first is smoking. Federal officials believe radon causes from 5,000 to 20,000 of the 100,000 lung cancer deaths each year in the United States.

The Watras home was found to have more than a thousand times the level considered safe, and, according to health officials, two to three times the level at which the chance of developing lung cancer over a lifetime reaches 50 percent.

"We're really still learning about what to do, but we do know that the answer is relatively simple: the gas has to be cut off at the source," Dallas said.

This week, the Watras house was finally found safe to live in, but only after the state and a contractor spent $32,000, exhausting all four phases of the state's cleanup program.

In the first phase, Watras said, the state found that the bedrock the builder used as a base for the basement and foundation was a vein of uranium ore. The dirt was removed from the outside of the foundation walls and drains were installed to carry away groundwater. The outside of the walls was also coated with plastic sheeting.

When that didn't work, special sealants were used on the walls and the floor in phase two.

In phase three, all walls and floors were coated with epoxy and a ventilation system was installed in the walls.

That didn't work either, so the fourth phase was ordered. The basement walls and floor were torn out and replaced after the installation of a ventilation system that enclosed the below-ground portion of the house.

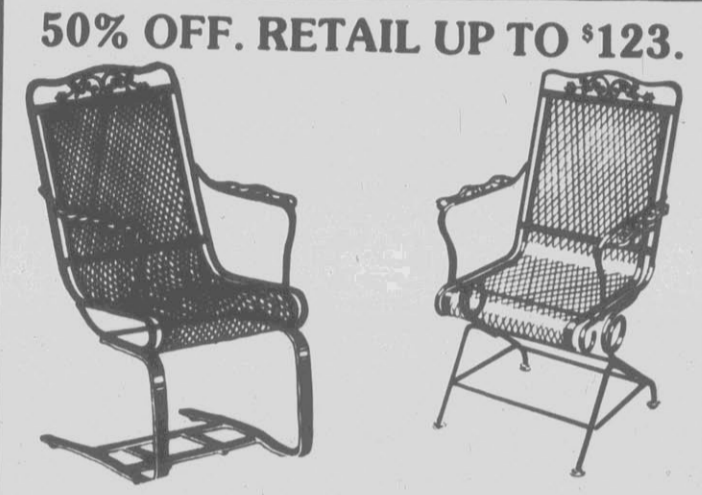

"But what happens if that had not worked?" Dallas asked. "That's one of the questions that still needs to be addressed and why we need the federal help."

New Rules Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is recommending that workers who encounter a widely used solvent that causes cancer in laboratory animals wear protective clothing and use respirators, and that companies consider using less of the toxic substance.

The new guidelines, issued Wednesday by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, were designed to decrease exposure to methylene chloride.

The chemical has been shown to cause liver, lung and blood cancers in laboratory mice and is listed by the government as a probable human carcinogen.

OSHA and the Environmental Protection Agency estimate that nearly a million workers are exposed to methylene chloride on the job at "generally high" levels.

The chemical is most widely used in aerosol sprays and as a paint remover and degreasing agent. It also is used extensively in urethane foam blowing and in manufacturing electronic circuit boards. About 584 million pounds of the chemical were produced in the United States in 1984.

While acknowledging the animal data, manufacturers and industrial users of the chemical on Wednesday cited a pair of epidemiological studies showing no significant increase of cancer among workers exposed to it for 20 years or longer.

One of those studies, however, did indicate a higher incidence of heart disease among the exposed workers.
