Aquino To Assume More Power, Will Abolish National Assembly

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The draft of a new, interim Philippine constitution would abolish the National Assembly and vest all law-making powers in President Corazon Aquino in a democratic revolutionary government, it was disclosed today.

A Cabinet official gave The Associated Press and other reporters copies of the draft constitution today. The official, who dealt with reporters on condition of anonymity, said Mrs. Aquino wants to "soften some provisions" of the draft so she does not have to call her government "revolutionary."

The official said Mrs. Aquino planned to announce the new constitution Monday. He did not say why he was releasing the draft today.

The draft says, "This government is revolutionary in origin and nature, democratic in essence and transitory in character."

It would give Mrs. Aquino the law-making powers of the National Assembly and would prohibit any court from questioning her authority or the validity of any law she decrees.

The draft constitution would provide for a commission that would write a new permanent constitution that would be put to a popular vote.

The Philippine News Agency quoted Solicitor General Sedfrey Ordonez as saying Mrs. Aquino had consulted with him on the draft constitution and that her final proclamation would not use the word "revolutionary," which is contained in the draft.

Mrs. Aquino's official spokesman had said earlier that the president would announce Monday or Tuesday

Vote On Nicaragua To Be Close

Capitol Hill Jockeys For Votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, just hours before a crucial House vote that rival camps claimed they would win, said today there was last-minute vote switching on both sides in the debate over whether to give $100 million to anti-government rebels in Nicaragua.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes predicted the vote count would be "close, close. I don't have numbers."

Speakes said "we did pick up some votes" as a result of a compromise offered by Reagan on Wednesday.

Speakes acknowledged, however, that Democratic opponents had picked up some votes the White House had considered safe by promising votes on other alternatives April 15 if Reagan's plan was defeated. "There are people that, knowing they will have another opportunity to vote, will vote negative today," Speakes said.

Arguing against an April vote, Speakes said Reagan "firmly believes that further delay ... will have the most serious consequence for our national security, for the hope of a democratic outcome in Nicaragua and for peace in Central America."

Asked to predict the outcome, House Republican leader Robert Michel said:

"I feel a lot better this morning. It's a marginal issue ..., but I think we're right there."

Appearing with Michel on the NBC-TV "Today" show, the Democratic chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Latin America said he still expects Reagan to lose.

"Our sense is on our side that this compromise will not swing enough votes," said Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md. "My guess is that the proposal will go down to defeat today."

In the Senate, meanwhile, Republican leader Bob Dole said that chamber may delay its vote on the aid until after the Easter recess, which begins at the close of business March 27. Originally, the Senate had been scheduled to vote next week.

Today's vote followed a day of bitter debate in which opponents said the aid could draw U.S. troops into Nicaragua's war and supporters argued that it was needed to stop the spread of communism in Central America.

Reagan is seeking $30 million for non-military logistical aid and $70 million for military purposes.

Reagan proposed a compromise that would limit aid to anti-aircraft weapons, military training and logistics for the first 90 days to allow time for negotiations. The aid could be stopped if the rebels engaged in

Oil Producers Rebuff OPEC

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC leaders, eager to reverse the collapse of world oil prices, entered a fifth day of tense deliberations today with no clear sign of movement toward agreement on a common strategy.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries failed to win more than vague gestures of goodwill in talks Wednesday with officials from non-OPEC members Mexico, Malaysia, Egypt, Oman and Angola.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, the oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, told reporters as he entered today's meeting that the cartel had been unable to present a single proposal to the non-OPEC officials. He said he hoped such a proposal could be worked out before Friday's scheduled meeting.

The 13 oil ministers, already having agreed they must cut their oil production to prop up prices, reportedly were at odds over how deep the cuts should be and how they could be shared by the member nations.

The cartel was aiming at a preliminary agreement that could be presented Friday to representatives of five non-OPEC oil producing countries, whose help OPEC is seeking in a broad price-support scheme, officials said.

After a two-hour morning session ended, Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aghazadeh told reporters more time was needed to reach agreement.

He said the aim was to "restore the previous level of prices," implying he wanted prices at nearly $30 per barrel — the level prevailing last December before prices crashed to about $15.

Representatives of other OPEC nations said earlier this week they would be satisfied with the price at $20 per barrel. The OPEC officials were to reconvene later today.

OPEC experts estimate the world oil glut at about 2 million barrels a day and say it could widen significantly in the next two months, when warm weather reduces oil consumption.

Sources have said that without joint action to reduce production, oil prices will remain at about $15 or fall even further.

One source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there also was broad agreement that any joint action between OPEC and non-OPEC countries should be aimed at pushing the price back to about $20 a barrel.

These sources were participants in Wednesday's talks.

Alhaji Rilwanu Lukman, the oil minister of Nigeria, said OPEC was considering cutting its output to between 13 million and 16 million barrels a day. He also said the ministers seemed to be narrowing their differences on production limits.

But Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, the oil minister of Venezuela and OPEC's president, was more downbeat.

"We still have a lot of work to do," he said after the session ended.

Lukman confirmed that OPEC was ready to abandon its short-lived strategy of trying to win a bigger share of the world oil market by dropping prices.

"I believe there is no secret about that," he said. "Nobody has benefited from it, nobody is enjoying it, so we will change what's happening."

The price collapse has thrown OPEC into turmoil and threatened the economic futures of many of its member countries.

No Kidding, It's Really Spring!

Get out your galoshes, umbrellas and sweaters. Spring is here.

Spring, the harbinger of hope, the season of rejuvenation, was to arrive today at 5:03 p.m. when the sun crossed the celestial equator and bring with it sunny skies, balmy temperatures and light breezes to carry the refreshing scent of blossoms.

Instead, on its first official day, spring had to peak out from under the blanket of winter and prepare to combat gale warnings, freezing temperatures and thunderstorms expected to move into the area tonight and continue through Friday, according to weather service reports.

Forecasts of unpleasant weather couldn't daunt ECU greenhouse manager Ann Bellis this morning, however. "As long as I can see things blooming, I know spring is coming and summer's on its way," she said.

Spring may be here and summer may be on its way, but the blossoms of the season that have thrived on recent rains and warm temperatures may not last long as a hard freeze and frost are likely over much of North Carolina Friday night.

From 7 a.m. Wednesday until 7 a.m. Thursday, Pitt County received .44 inches of rain. The high temperature for Wednesday was 74 degrees Fahrenheit and the low was 58 degrees. This morning at 8 a.m., Greenville Utilities Commission laboratory technicians said the temperature was 60 degrees. By 10:30 a.m., the temperature had dropped to 56.4 degrees Fahrenheit.

A freeze warning is in effect tonight, with the temperature expected to hit 30. Highs Friday will be only a few degrees higher.

Chirac Will Be France's Premier

PARIS (AP) — Socialist President Francois Mitterrand today named conservative leader Jacques Chirac to be France's new premier, the first time in 28 years the presidency and the premierships have been held by opposing parties.

Chirac, 53, knows the problems he will face. He is returning to the premiership 10 years after resigning the post because of conflicts over power and policy with an ally, centrist president Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Chirac's appointment was announced formally by Jean-Louis Bianco, the president's chief of staff, from the steps of the president's Elysee Palace office.

Bianco also announced the formal resignation of the Socialist Cabinet headed by Laurent Fabius. The members of Chirac's new government were expected to be announced by Bianco later today.

Chirac is mayor of Paris and leader of the neo-Gaullist Rally for the Republic, which led the conservative victory in Sunday's National Assembly elections. He accepted the premier's position after 48 hours of difficult negotiations.

He had to form a government acceptable to Mitterrand, who reportedly rejected Chirac's first choices for foreign, defense and interior ministers, and also evenly balanced between his party and the five-party Union for French Democracy coalition.

Court Fight Looms Over Church

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A spokesman for the Northeast Original Free Will Baptist Conference says the church group is prepared to go to court if necessary to settle differences with Greenville's Grace Free Will Baptist Church over the sale of Grace's property on Watagua Avenue.

Members of the Northeast Conference, which had sought the church property, suggested last week that it had been treated unfairly when Grace sold the church building and land to the Greenville Board of Education.

A statement released by Grace officials said an offer to purchase and a contract was executed on June 1 of last year, which required a $15,000 earnest payment by the conference. The contract also called for an additional $85,000 to be paid on or before Oct. 3, and a balance of $375,000 to be paid at closing, on or before Dec. 31, the conference said.

But the statement said the $85,000 was never paid and the "contract (with the Northeast Conference) was thereby violated and became void."

The Grace statement also said there were subsequent discussions and attempts to work out "a new arrangement or contract" with the conference. However, the statement said the original contract "is the only contract that was ever signed by both parties."

The Grace statement also said the $15,000 earnest payment was returned to the conference.

But a prepared statement released Wednesday by W.T. Edwards of Greenville, Northeast Conference treasurer, said a second contract was approved and says the conference paid Grace $50,000 under the second contract.

According to the statement, "The first contract was drawn up on June 1 (and) the deadline for this contract was Dec. 31. We paid Grace FWB Church $15,000."

The statement continues, "The second contract was drawn up on Dec. 31 ... in this we paid Grace FWB Church $50,000 in January 1986. A balance of $35,000 was to be paid by Northeast Original FWB Conference April 30. This would have made a total of $100,000 as a full down payment on Grace FWB Church."

According to the statement, "The total cost of the property to the Northeast Original FWB Conference is $475,000. After paying $100,000 as a down payment our balance was $375,000, to be paid through the bond program."

Grace was to assume $175,000 worth of bonds and $200,000 worth of bonds were to be sold by members of the conference on or before May 1, 1987, the Edwards statement said.

But, "The board of education purchased the Grace FWB Church for a total of $600,000," the statement said.

Pay Equity Plan Reaches Final Hurdle In Washington

By DAVID AMMONS
Associated Press Writer
OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Helen Castrilli, a secretary at Western State Hospital, is looking forward to finding $106 extra in her pay envelope next month.

Mrs. Castrilli and about 35,000 other Washington state government workers are expected to see the first signs on April 25 of the $482 million "comparable worth" settlement ratified by the Legislature.

Gov. Booth Gardner, employee unions and other supporters say that will be the beginning of a six-year program that will largely erase wage discrimination against those in positions mainly filled by women.

Mrs. Castrilli, one of nine original plaintiffs in a 1982 lawsuit against the state, says the program sends a signal to the nation that Washington state is committed to paying its employees equitably.

However, critics of the plan say the total price tag will balloon and inequities will cause more court challenges and morale problems.

Some of Washington's largest businesses, including the Boeing Co. and Safeco Insurance, opposed the measure, saying it could force the private sector to revamp their own pay systems.

U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner, who originally found the state guilty of practicing sex-based wage discrimination, is scheduled to hold a hearing on the settlement April 11.

He already has given preliminary approval, but is required to hear objections before formally declaring the plan fair, reasonable and adequate. He is expected to give the go-ahead.

The pay plan provides increases of at least 2.5 percent per year, with some classes getting 10 percent. The idea is to bring underpaid classes close to the "comparable worth line" by 1992.

A Clerk-Typist II, who is now paid 25 percent below what the job is worth, will receive an average increase of $110 a month to $1,230 a month. The salary of a Nurse-Practitioner II, now paid about $18,900, would increase to $21,900 next month.

In addition, the workers affected by the settlement also will receive regular pay increases. The Legislature last week approved an average 3 percent increase, effective Sept. 1, for all 130,000 state employees, which includes 50,000 civil service employees and 80,000 teachers and college professors.

The comparable worth settlement ended a debate that started in Washington state in 1973, when then-Gov. Dan Evans, a Republican, commissioned a study that showed civil service job classifications predominately filled by women were paid about 20 percent less than comparable classifications filled primarily by men.

Advocates of the comparable worth theory say workers should be paid the same if their jobs — which may be as different as driving a truck and working in a mental hospital — are of equal difficulty, responsibility and required skills and background.

Evans, now a U.S. senator, included $7 million in his proposed 1977 budget for implementation of a comparable worth plan. However, Dixie Lee Ray, his Democratic successor, deleted the money from the budget.

The suit brought by the Washington Federation of State Employees, AFL-CIO, backed by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, sought immediate implementation and back pay. The suit had a potential price tag of $1.7 billion.

In 1983, the Legislature adopted comparable worth as official state policy and began a slow, modest implementation.

Tanner held against the state in late 1983. Last September, however, the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals overturned Tanner. The union initially made noises about an appeal, but later decided to accept a settlement with the state.

Gardner and the majority Democrats last year pushed through a budget proviso authorizing the state and union to negotiate an out-of-court settlement. That pact was signed last New Year's Eve.

With a handful of Republicans joining them, the state Democrats pushed through legislative ratification within the first three weeks of convening.

Mark Brown, a spokesman for the federation, said the settlement is the largest in the nation's history.

"What it really means is that the state of Washington can recapture its leadership role in this field," he said in an interview.

A number of states, cities and counties are adopting the principle of comparable worth, Brown said. He said he has been contacted by government, business and union leaders and the media from a number of states, Canada and New Zealand.

Washington state will join 15 other states with comparable worth plans, according to George Masten, chief negotiator for the union.

Careful Landscaping Can Invite Birds Into Yard

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

A yard without birds singing, chattering and performing their flying antics is lacking in interest and excitement. Landscaping to invite birds into your yard requires careful planning. Select a variety of trees, shrubs, and flowers that will provide natural food sources, offer havens for nesting, and give shelter against predators, suggests Better Homes & Gardens Garden Ideas.

Give planting preferences to the seed-, nectar- and fruit-producing plants that are favored by wildlife. Blackberry, raspberry, honeysuckle, viburnum, flowering quince, highbush cranberry, dogwood, privet, mock orange, yew and rugosa roses are a few of the fruit-bearing shrubs that attract birds.

Plant trees such as horse chesnut, redbud, hawthorn, sweet gum, mulberry, hackberry, mountain ash and flowering crab. These trees produce an abundance of seeds, nuts and fruits for summer, fall and winter feeding.

Annual and perennial flowers also can provide a food supply throughout the summer and fall months. The seeds of sunflower, marigold, zinnia, poppy, aster, daisy and cosmos are some of the favorite bird attractors.

To supplement the diets of your winged diners, hang bird feeders filled with such fare as sunflower seeds, niger seed, peanuts and whole corn. Because birds depend on these feeding stations during the winter, keep them replenished. Birds can't survive on food alone. To attract thirsty birds to your yard, locate birdbaths or other water-holding containers in areas that are fairly open but still protected by nearby trees and shrubs.

Having a well built birdhouse is the best way to attract hole-nesting birds like wrens, flickers, bluebirds, purple martins, chickadees and woodpeckers.

Be sure your houses are built to fit the type of bird you want to attract and are located where the bird will feel most comfortable. Birds' tastes in locations are as varied as the sizes and types of structures. A wren, for example, likes its home to be suspended from a tree branch. Most other songbirds, however, prefer their houses to be firmly anchored to a post or tree.

Wrens are among the easiest to attract to your yard. These tiny, energetic birds bubble with song and nervous excitement and are a joy to watch. Wrens also are good for decreasing the insect population in your yard.

Wrens require a slightly smaller house and a much smaller entrance hole than most birds. You might even consider making a slot instead of a round hole. If you do use a slot, make it 1 to 1 1/4 inches high and 3 inches long to accommodate the long twigs wrens use for foundations for their nests. If you make a round entrance hole, it should be no bigger than 1 1/4 inches in diameter. A larger hole will admit larger, less desirable birds such as English sparrows and starlings.

Make the house 4 inches square and about 7 inches high from the floor to the inside bottom of the roof. Cut the entrance hole 4 to 6 inches above the floor. Consider drilling 1/4-inch holes in the front panel between the roof and the entrance hole. This provides sufficient air circulation for young birds without creating a draft.

A couple of 3/4-inch holes drilled in the floor of the house will allow drainage of any rainwater that may collect. To prevent an uninvited invasion from predators, hang the house 6 to 10 feet above the ground.

When building a house for your wrens, use only wood, never metal. Use dull colors when painting or staining, or leave it natural.

Place houses in an open area. Avoid dense foliage and deep shade. Clean out the houses either after the hatching season or before the birds start arriving in the spring.

Dear Abby

Wife Wonders If She Is Getting Her Due

DEAR ABBY: John and I are young grandparents. I go to my daughter's home quite often on weekends to baby-sit. We live in New York, my daughter lives in New Jersey. John encourages my visits, but he stays home, saying he has business meetings to attend or people he has to meet for business. I accepted that because he's very active in his union.

One weekend I stayed home with the flu. John was home, too. The phone rang and I answered it. A woman said, "This is Marion. Will you please tell John we are waiting for him?" Then she hung up. I could hear loud music in the background that sounded like she was calling from a party or a bar. When I gave John the message, he turned red and said, "It must have been a wrong number." It reminded me of the time he called me "June." My name is Terry.

Is this man a sinner or a saint?
GRANDMA TERRY

DEAR GRANDMA: If your suspicions are correct, he's a sinner.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Against Tipping" was good but misleading. The IRS does not force waitresses to pay tax on tips they did not get. The current rules are the same as they always were. The waitress is required to keep a daily record of tips and report them to the employer once a month, so that the employer can deduct the proper tax, just as he does on the other wages.

It has long been the practice of some waitresses, waiters and other service persons not to report the tips at all. Therefore, the IRS has ruled that the employer must include an amount equal to 8 percent of that employee's sales on the W-2 form as "allocated tips."

If the employee has done his (or her) duty and reported the actual tips, then this is already included in the taxable wages, and the "allocated tips" mean nothing. If the required reporting has not been done, the employee may still use his own record for figuring the tax on tips. However, if no reporting or record keeping has taken place, the allocated amount is the amount that person must pay tax on. This is only fair. The United States is the only country in the world where the government allows taxpayers to tell it what they owe. The least we can do is be honest.

Abby, please print this to set your readers straight.

OKLAHOMA C.P.A.

DEAR C.P.A.: I've printed it. I hope my readers are set straight. I am. And thank you for not billing me.

DEAR ABBY: On the subject of introducing people when you don't know their names: As a tennis official for the last 50 years, I've traveled all over the world and met a lot of people, and it's impossible to remember all their names. This is how I handle it:

If I'm with a person whose name I know, and someone whose name I don't know comes up to me, I say to the one I don't know, "You've met John Doe, haven't you?" One of them will either say, "Yes," or "No, my name is John Jones—pleased to meet you."

If you don't know either person's name (and it's happened to me), I say, "You two have met before, I'm sure." One of them will say, "No, my name is Joe Blow," then he extends his hand to the other.

It's never failed me. Just make your statement and shut up, and one of them is sure to say something. It works. Try it.

MIKE BLANCHARD,
REFEREE EMERITUS,
U.S. OPEN TENNIS

DEAR ABBY: I am truly frightened that someone might report my daughter and her husband to the authorities, but I cannot get them to listen to reason.

Somewhere they got the idea that if they exposed their daughter to nudity in the home, she would not have any sexual hang-ups when she got older. So my daughter and her husband have let their baby shower with them since she was tiny. "Amy" is now 2 1/2 and she's aware that her father's body is different

Candlelight Wedding Performed March 8

TARBORO — The wedding ceremony of Claudia Lynn Whitehurst and Horace Ambler Lanier Jr. was conducted March 8 in the First Baptist Church by Dr. E. Lavelle Waters Jr. at high noon.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Shelton D. Whitehurst of Tarboro, and Mr. and Mrs. Horace A. Lanier Sr. of Route 3, Tarboro.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. Charlotte L. Whitehurst of Tarboro was honor attendant for her twin sister.

Bridesmaids included Denise Boyd, Yvonne Lanier, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Shelley Morgan, all of Tarboro, and Linda Everett of Charlotte, cousin of the bride. Christy Walker of Tarboro was junior bridesmaid.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Ronnie Lanier of Enfield and Walter Lanier, brothers of the bridegroom, and Scott Goodwyn, both of Tarboro, and Joe Lanier of Sanford, cousin of the bridegroom.

Darrell Mitchell of Greenville was organist and Margaret Ann Creech of Tarboro was violinist. Jimmy Greene of Tarboro was soloist.

Carol Creech and Bettie Mae Bailey of Tarboro directed the ceremony.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of traditional bridal satin with silk Wedgewood and Venise lace. The fitted lace Victorian neckline had an illusion yoke outlined with silk Venise lace motifs, leg o'mutton sleeves and basque waist. Lace motifs, etched with seed pearls, appliqued the bodice. The floor length skirt extended into a chapel train. Scattered Venise lace motifs appliqued the skirt and train. A satin bow accented the back of the waist and a Wedgewood lace ruffle bordered the skirt and train. She wore a layered waltz length veil of illusion with a pearl border accented with scrolls of schiffli embroidery touched with clusters of seed pearls. It was attached to a pearled tiara edged with Venise lace motifs.

The bride is a graduate of Tarboro High School and is a senior education major at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is also a graduate of Tarboro High School and will graduate this spring from N.C. Wesleyan College. He is employed by Peoples Bank and Trust Co.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., the couple lives in Tarboro.

A reception followed in the Friendship Hall of the church and was given by the parents of the bride. Patricia Lanier of Raleigh, cousin of the bridegroom, presided at the guest register.

Assisting in serving were Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Kent, Charlotte Forrest, Claire Whitehurst, Joan Knox and Emily Lanier, all of Tarboro.

The couple was given a dinner party, miscellaneous shower, pig picking by the parents of the bridegroom, several parties, tea, dessert hour, and bridesmaids luncheon. An after-rehearsal dinner party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Ted Lanier, uncle and aunt of the bridegroom of Sanford, at Stack's Restaurant in Tarboro.

By Erma Bombeck

Writing is pure discipline. That's a fact. Those of us who do it for a living are able to retreat into our own silent world of words and play mental roulette with them. Nothing gets through to us. We are unaffected by doorbells, singing birds, blood-curdling screams, weather, laughter, children whining, "I'm telling!" pulsating washers, crashing glass, persistent telephones and slammed doors. Distractions are a luxury. Concentration is our life.

In more than 20 years of writing, there are only two things that will seduce me from my thoughts and compel me to lose my focus.

One of them is the first chip out of my nail polish. It's a small distraction at first. Nothing more than a small part of my nail showing. I type a little ... pick a little ... type a little ... pick a little.

Then I put another nail under the polish and begin to work off a big piece. When it happens, there is euphoria. The typewriter is turned off and I go at it with the vengeance of a shirt maker on piece work. I promise myself that when I get that entire nail clean, I will get back to work. This will not happen.

I'm on a roll and I know it. I also know I will not stop until the entire five nails are picked clean of old polish. Valuable minutes go by as I use every resource I have to get that polish off. I use my teeth to work on the stubborn spots; a letter opener to get near the cuticle. To walk into the bathroom and get polish remover is a sign of weakness. Unless you challenge yourself, how can you expect anyone to have respect for you?

When the polish is gone from an entire hand, the typewriter is switched on and once again you try to cloister yourself with your thoughts. But the well-manicured hand twists and displays itself like a seductive hypnotist. You will not be able to concentrate until every nail is undressed. You turn off the typewriter and begin to scrape and scratch. Are you ready for lunch? Of course, you're not ready for lunch. Do you want to talk to your agent? Agent who?

Two coats of polish, plus a base and an overcoat, plus a quick-dry solution will take anywhere from an hour to three hours to pick off, depending on motivation, skill and pressure.

I suppose there are a lot of people out there reading this who are saying why don't you just leave nail polish off in the first place? Then your creativity and discipline would not be on jeopardy. I've thought of that, but it wouldn't matter. You see, there's this other distraction. I've got this piece of hair, right there at the nape of neck, that is driving me crazy. From the moment I touch it, it seems to grow and grow. Sometimes, I have to turn off the typewriter and stand in front of the mirror and see if it matches the other side. Does it look uneven to you? I'm going to get the scissors and ...

Surprise

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization won a referendum in Spain last week, perhaps the most surprising single show of support that organization has enjoyed in many years.

The element of surprise was based on two factors: the historic isolation attitude among the Spanish people and the consensus among pollsters that the country would reject continuing its membership in the alliance.

As recently as a week before the voting, pollsters were predicting rejection by 4 to 7 percent. Actually, 52.2 percent of the voters supported the government's position and 39.8 percent voted against.

NATO had a difficult time bringing Spain into the fold. That country held off joining the other 15 members in a collective defense arrangement until 1982.

The United States maintains four military bases in Spain and thousands of young men and women as well as some members of their immediate families are stationed there. Too, there is a stream of traffic entering and leaving those bases.

Those conditions are not without risks.

Customarily, American military people are cautioned an overseas assignment entails certain individual responsibilities for maintaining good relations with the host countries and a favorable "image" is of importance. An incautious word, a thoughtless gesture or action by one individual can create ill-feeling; and when there are thousands of potential sources of friction the chances of private antipathies multiply ... worsening as word of mouth spreads tales of poor manners and overbearing behavior.

Somehow, the visitors have managed to avoid too many missteps, and relations between them and their hosts have maintained a reasonably good plateau of harmony.

Without taking any of the credit from our diplomats who work with their Spanish counterparts, part of the credit for a favorable referendum on NATO may be attributed to the multitude of people who came from the streets and farms of the U.S.A., donned uniforms and surprisingly awoke one day in sunny Spain. They dealt with the people on an individual basis.

They might have been a decisive factor.

Choice

Reginald Truscott-Jones wound up in the acting profession quite by accident, and it turned out to be a fortunate choice for him and for the entertainment industry. Movie and television audiences ... most of them in another era ... thought it a fortunate choice for them, too.

Given the right material he was not just a good actor, he was very good. So good, in fact, he won an Oscar in 1945 for a role far outside his usual assignments by the Hollywood establishment.

Most of the parts he was assigned put the spotlight on his pleasant appearance, his distinctive voice, personal mannerisms and suave personality that added class to often lightweight material. He served time in television, too, with competence. If he ever complained it was not in public.

In recent years his appearances have been more infrequent. A private person, memory of him faded and suddenly returned into sharp focus with announcement that actor Ray Milland (Truscott-Jones) had died.

His passing deserved something more than passing notice.

Pros And Cons Of Contra Aid

To the editor:
As a native Nicaraguan, I would like to express my opinion on the issue of $100 million aid to the "Contras."

I agree 100 percent with the Reagan administration that the Sandinistas betrayed the Revolution and the only way to put pressure on them is to help the Contras. The ideas that the Contras are members of Somoza's army is the old mermaid song that the Sandinistas put in their helpers' mouths. Mr. Robelo and Mr. Cruz, two of the Contra leaders, are former members of the Sandinistas' junta that governed Nicaragua until Ortega gave himself the title president.

The people of Nicaragua do not want the Sandinistas. But what can you do when, in the name of the revolution, your civil liberties are no longer valid? Your food is rationed, your neighbors spy on you, your properties are expropriated. Freedom of the press does not exist. Newspapers are censored.

The Contadora process is a delaying tactic used by the Sandinistas. If the Organization of American States settles the problems of Latin America, you do not need Contadora. The Sandinistas are buying time, hoping that in the 1988 election, the Republicans will be defeated and the Democrats will allow them to consolidate their oppression over the Nicaraguan people.

The Carter administration helped the Sandinistas take over by telling Somoza to leave. Marcos and Duvalier left when they were told to do so, but the Sandinistas will only leave by force. It is up to the U.S. Congress to help restore democracy in Nicaragua.

Let us hope that this time Congress backs Mr. Reagan and we do not witness another mea culpa from the Democrats like when the request for humanitarian aid was defeated and Speaker O'Neill was astonished that the next day Ortega went to Moscow to receive instructions.

WASHINGTON — Employing un-diplomatic language, Iran has secretly warned U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar that Kuwait's "act of hostility" may spread the Iran-Iraq war through the Persian Gulf — posing incalculable consequences for world peace.

Iran's Feb. 27 letter, marked "confidential" and signed by Foreign Minister Ali Velayati, charged that help for Iraq from "some of the countries of the Persian Gulf" amounts to "direct involvement" in the war. Velayati said Iran would not accept Iraqi warplanes overflying Kuwaiti territory, including "reconnaissance and information gathering flights" over Kuwait's "northern region." Help for Iraq by Persian Gulf countries also includes shipments of military equipment for Baghdad.

The warning to the secretary general is clear. The United Nations has been put on notice that Iran cannot be held accountable when it starts boarding Saudi and Kuwaiti tankers whose oil revenue is shared by Iraq. If Iran attacks Kuwait, the U.S. should blame not Iran but Kuwait.

Extension of the war by Iran, flushed with recent military successes, could yield results much worse than the higher OPEC oil prices desperately desired by Tehran. President Reagan has requested new arms for Saudi Arabia, to shore up the threatened Gulf states — but he faces possible defeat in Congress. Delivery would not come for many months even if he can overcome potent congressional opposition to the sale.

Top U.N. officials have sent word to Washington that Iran's tough talk, paralleling other threats to Kuwait, is more than bluff. Kuwait's border is some 30 miles from Iranian troops on Iraq's Fao Peninsula. Moreover, these officials remember well-grounded suspicions that Iranian agents were responsible for explosions at key Kuwaiti installations several years ago aimed at destabilizing the oil-rich city-state.

Since then, Iran's position has become much stronger thanks to military successes. Ayatollah Khomeini's fanatical teen-age Shiite shock troops bored through Iraq's Fao Peninsula defenses. They have controlled Iraqi territory for over a month, including the entrance to the Shatt-al-Arab River, which separated the two states. Iraq could never agree to end the war while Iran controls a single square kilometer of its land, yet Iran may well expand its small holdings.

That raises for the first time the credible possibility of Iran overthrowing Iraqi strongman Saddam Hussein. His secular, authoritarian state could be replaced by a Shiite Islamic Republic bordering three friends of the U.S. — Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Jordan. This spread of rabid anti-Western Islamic fundamentalism would mean political and cultural upheaval, transforming the Middle East.

Thanks to military successes, Iran also is putting new pressure on oil. At a Feb. 18 meeting in Algiers, Iranian oil and finance ministers discussed with their Algerian and Libyan counterparts a two-week suspension of OPEC oil shipments, to be followed by a guaranteed drop in production. Whether achievable or not, the intent was a dramatic increase in the present low price of oil.

On Feb. 26, Iranian President Khomeini accused Saudi Arabia and Kuwait "to our regret" of not cooperating with the Iranian plan. Two days later, Majlis Speaker Rafsanjani, second in power only to the Ayatollah Khomeini, got specific.

He warned Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and presumably lesser Gulf oil producers to take Iran's views seriously. "The latest military operations are a warning and an ultimatum" that Iran will meet such "treason." How? By "a change in methods of dealing with all those who do not seek to do right" — in short, military means.

Penetrating the seventh floor office of Secretary of State George Shultz with the implications of these new manifestations of Iran's strength has not been easy either for American diplomats or Arab emissaries. That was clear in a recent unannounced meeting in New York between Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz and a Shultz lieutenant.

According to U.N. insiders, Aziz pulled his punches in describing Iraq's troubles. He was afraid that unsympathetic State Department officials would blow up those troubles publicly and erroneously portray Iraq as on the point of collapse, embarrassing Saddam Hussein and damaging the war effort.

The Gulf states got some encouragement recently from Reagan's decision to seek military aid for the Saudis, but it was steeped in caution because of the coolness on Capitol Hill. Saudi requests were stripped down, excluding "new" weapons. No further sale to the Saudis would be made this year, and this one would not deliver arms until 1980, though the threat is now.

That is indeed a grudging response to the thunderbolt of Tehran. "To avoid any misunderstanding," said Foreign Minister Valayati, he was sending the secretary general his letter "in complete confidentiality and for your particular attention." In fact, Iran is privately dispatching just this word everywhere, to heighten the drama of its case and make its warning credible. After seven years, Washington ought to be taking the ayatollah's government seriously.

Strength For Today

The word "courage" comes from the Latin word which means "heart." Courage, therefore, is "that quality of mind which enables one to encounter danger and difficulties with firmness, valor and boldness."

We associate courage with the battlefield, but it is an even more necessary virtue in everyday life. The sufferer who endures pain over the years, the disappointed who hide their misery under a smile, the people who missed promotion, those who lost savings and perhaps fortunes — these require courage to get them through the day, the night and through the agonizing years.

So, when we think of courage, let us not visualize just battlefields, but let us think of the thousands of non-military folk in home, office, school and wherever people gather, who must manifest courage every day of their lives.

There was never a time when we needed courage more than in the midst of 20th century comforts.

Realignment Of Powers

RALEIGH — Early in his administration, President Reagan proposed a major realignment of government responsibilities. His idea of a "New Federalism" never became law, but a recent study by the National Conference of State Legislatures contends that it is "now business as usual for the states."

Denis Doyle and Terry Hartle, both fellows at the American Enterprise Institute, report in the February issue of "State Legislatures" magazine that a combination of federal inaction and state action has brought about the realignment. (The article caught the attention of the N.C. General Assembly's chief fiscal officer and he recently had copies of it distributed to budget committee chairmen.)

has eliminated Washington's flexibility and ability to improvise in domestic areas. The effect, the authors say, is that the states no longer look first to Washington to solve their problems. The authors quote a Columbia University official to make their point: "The states no longer believe that the cavalry is coming over the hill. They realize that the responsibility will continue to be theirs."

While the federal government has become bogged down, state governments have raised themselves to a new level, the authors say. The most obvious demonstration of this came in the last recession. "The states made hard decisions about spending cuts and tax increases while the federal government resorted to a deficit-financed spending binge," they say.

"In a word, states exercised leadership, not always a characteristic associated with them," the authors say. But leadership is a characteristic at which state legislatures and governors are becoming increasingly adept.

As recently as the 1960s, state governments were seen as "unwilling to meet the needs of their citizens." They appeared to be reactionary and were considered "the weak link in the federal system."

That has changed. Doyle and Hartle claim, because legislatures have been reapportioned, many state constitutions have been modernized and administrative reform has taken place. State legislatures are now comprised of a racial, ethnic and sexual mix that is far more reflective of the general population than is that of the Congress.

Legislators and governors, the two say, are now generally better educated than in the past. They have better staffs at their disposal and show a greater willingness to improvise.

The new relationship between the two levels of government can be seen in several key areas. While Reagan has talked about special enterprise zones to spur development in economically depressed areas, he hasn't gotten a plan through Congress yet. But half the states have enterprise zones and others, like North Carolina, are studying the possibility of creating them.

To the editor:

Thank God all our politicians aren't as thick-headed as Ronald Reagan and his cronies. I'm not talking rightists versus leftists. I'm talking (pig-headed) right versus wrong.

The Sandinistas currently ruling Nicaragua are far from perfect. They are infinitely more desirable than the Somoza butchers who ruled with an iron hand and killed those who openly opposed them. Where the Sandinistas went wrong was using Soviet-made materials and technology to upgrade the pathetically poor lot of the common people who would have rotted without help from someone. Where was the U.S. then? We could've helped.

No, now we have the Contras many know as the Samonistas (and for good reason) spawned by our own CIA for a good cause (to cut down the smuggling of arms via Nicaragua to the other "dirty little war" in El Salvador.)

As is often the case, contact was made with a few powerful zealots who just happened to have been big shots in the former Somoza regime. They talked big and assured the CIA that, not only could they stop the arms, but divert them to their own use and counterattack the Sandinista government, depose them and save Central America and the good old U.S.A. from the Red Tide (and they lived happily ever after, right?)

Of course, the CIA ate that up and said how much ($$) do you want? They dreamed of being heroes. Ronald Reagan dubbed the Contras as "the moral equivalent of our Founding Fathers."

What they are, in fact, are a bunch of murdering mobsters — outcasts from the mainstream of life where hard work is a certainty. They prefer to take what they want — food, shelter, sex, whatever. No, I don't believe you, Mr. Reagan or your cronies. Who is zooming who?

'Star Wars' Decision May Come Early

WUERZBURG, West Germany (AP) — The head of U.S. "Star Wars" research said today that rapid progress in research and development could enable the United States to decide whether to deploy the system before the early 1990s target date.

U.S. Air Force Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson also told a news conference that NATO defense ministers were discussing the possibility of creating a defense against Soviet missiles aimed at Western Europe that would be linked to Star Wars.

Abrahamson spoke on the first day of a two-day NATO planning session. The meeting in this Bavarian city is expected to focus on the Star Wars program, officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative or SDI.

He said a decision on the feasibility of deploying the space-based defense against Soviet missiles still was expected by the early 1990s.

"But if our great progress continues we could have a decision earlier than that," he said, adding that technological progress was being made more quickly than expected.

Abrahamson said he had brought along examples of Star Wars technology that he showed to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense ministers.

While declining to be specific, Abrahamson said he briefed the ministers on advances in fiber optics, lasers and infrared detectors.

"I'm startled that the technical side of SDI is proving much easier than the political side," he said.

So far, Britain is the only government to join the program. West Germany said Wednesday it had reached basic agreement for private German companies to take part.

Abrahamson also said the ministers discussed a link between Star Wars and a defense for Western Europe.

He said NATO "is committed to understanding how to apply technology to defense against both long- and short-range" Soviet missile threats.

Washington's allies have repeatedly said they are concerned the Star Wars defense would protect the United States while leaving Western Europe exposed to shorter-range Soviet missiles.

"We concentrated some attention on the matter of theater defense within SDI," Abrahamson said. The U.S. general used the expression "theater defense" to refer to protection against shorter-range, low-flying Soviet missiles aimed at Western Europe.

He declined to specify the ministers' reactions to the possibility of creating such a European defense linked to Star Wars.

NATO sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said another likely topic for discussion at the meeting was prospects for a superpower summit in the United States, following the U.S.-Soviet meeting in Geneva last November.

In a television interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. on Wednesday, Caspar Weinberger, U.S. secretary of defense, said the next summit could be held in June or July but that Moscow has so far made no response on a date.

On Wednesday, Weinberger met with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl to discuss possible participation by West German industry in Star Wars.

In Bonn, former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said Wednesday the project was impractical, a violation of the 1972 ABM treaty between the superpowers and a distortion of longstanding Western defense policies.

Weinberger is also expected to face questions from the European ministers on how anticipated cutbacks in U.S. defense spending, as a result of the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law, will affect SDI and other American defense programs.

The ministers are expected to discuss Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's Jan. 15 proposal for eliminating all nuclear weapons by the end of the century, as well as other arms-limitation issues.

President Reagan responded on Feb. 24 with a proposal to scrap all Soviet and U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe and Asia by the end of this decade.

The West Europeans have noted that Gorbachev's proposal would put no limits on shorter-range Soviet nuclear missiles stationed in East Germany and Czechoslovakia. Those missiles are capable of striking many European NATO nations.

The ministers are also slated to hear status reports on the deployment of U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 medium-range missiles in Western Europe and Soviet SS-20 rockets in Eastern Europe.

Weinberger is expected to report that the Soviets are testing a new, more accurate version of the SS-20. The triple-warhead SS-20 has been in service since 1977.

Iraqi Warplanes Strike Two Tankers Near Iran

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqi warplanes fired missiles into two supertankers today off Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal, setting one ship ablaze, the London-based Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Agency reported.

The agency said the 259,955-ton, Liberian-registered Atlantico was burning. Lloyd's said it had no other information, but the ship's agents said all 28 crew members were rescued.

C. Ventures of New York holds interests in the Atlantico, which is operated by London's Off Shore Oil Services Ltd., according to Persian Gulf-based shipping officials. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity.

In Piraeus, Greece, a spokesman for Kassos Maritime Enterprises, the shipping agency for the tanker Atlantico, said a French-made Exocet missile hit the vessel's empty fuel tank. The spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said all 28 Taiwanese crew members were rescued by nearby ships.

An Iraqi military spokesman announced over state-run Baghdad Radio that Iraqi warplanes raided a "large maritime target," Iraqi military parlance for an oil tanker, at 9:10 a.m.

The unidentified spokesman later announced a raid on another "large maritime target" off Iran at 11:35 a.m. The Baghdad Radio report was monitored in London.

Lloyd's confirmed that missiles from Iraqi warplanes hit the 273,454-ton Liberian-registered Superior, which is owned and managed by the Troodos Shipping Co. Ltd. of Piraeus, Greece. There was no word on the extent of damage to the ship.

Both supertankers are part of a fleet commissioned by Iran to ferry crude oil from Kharg to the makeshift Sirri Island oil terminal 350 miles to the south, out of range of Iraqi jet fighters.

Iraqi warplanes have attacked the Atlantico twice previously and the Superior once. Iraq imposed a blockade on Kharg shipping lanes in February 1984.

Iraq has been attacking ships sailing to and from Kharg in an attempt to undermine the Iranian economy and pressure the Tehran government to accept a negotiated settlement of the 5½-year-old war.

Meanwhile, the official Iraqi News Agency said the Iraqi navy attacked an Iranian bridge at Ras Abadan and three large Iranian naval targets before dawn.

Ras Abadan is about 30 miles north of Faw, on the Shatt Al-Arab waterway that separates Iraq and Iran. Iranian troops seized the Iraqi territory in an offensive that began Feb. 9.

Salvage officials said the Iranian vessels probably were military supply boats carrying provisions to Iranian forces in the Faw peninsula.

Gulf-based salvage officials said today the Norwegian-owned chemical tanker Gogo Regent reported Iranian warplanes attacked it in the gulf.

The attack on the 32,737-ton Gogo Regent occurred Wednesday as the vessel carried gasoline from Bahrain to Sri Lanka, salvage officials said. They said a missile missed the vessel, and that machine-gun fire caused only minor damage.

Two Hurt In Wreck

Two people were reported injured and an estimated $5,650 property damage occurred in a 1:46 p.m. collision Tuesday at Third and Vance streets.

Drivers of the vehicles involved were identified by officers as Alton Devon Langley of 900 W. Third St., Laura Jean Varner of 102B S. Meade St., and Alston Haddock of 1304 Battle St.

Police, who estimated damages at $750 to the Langley car, $4,500 to the Varner car and $400 to the Haddock vehicle, said both Langley and Ms. Varner were injured.

Wednesday Thefts

Greenville police said six thefts were reported to the department Wednesday.

Officer J.G. Jenkins said about $8.45 worth of cleaning items were taken from the Wash House on 10th Street in a break-in reported at 4:34 a.m., while Officer J.W. Corbett said a quantity of silverware, three television sets, a telephone and about 100 wedding gifts were taken from 1205 Farmville Blvd. in a break-in reported at 7:01 a.m.

Officer G.W. Williams said six ladders and a quantity of building materials, with an estimated value of $1,240, were taken from 389 Clarendon Drive in an incident reported at 8:59 a.m., and a shift kit valued at $90 was taken from Williams Auto Parts, 1307 W. 14th St., in an incident reported at 11:13 a.m.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said a bicycle was taken from 1608 E. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 3:30 p.m., while Officer J.K. McCarthy said a ladder valued at $250 was taken from 102 Crown Point Road in an incident reported at 4:05 p.m.

Churches Entered

Two church break-ins were reported to Greenville police before dawn today.

Officer M.A. Jordan said $20 was taken from a collection plate at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church at 1800 S. Elm St. in a break-in reported at 1:02 a.m., while Officer R.A. Mills said a radio and telephone answering machine were taken from Holy Trinity United Methodist Church at 1400 Red Banks Road in a break-in reported at 2:54 a.m.

Five Arrested

Several gambling and drug arrests were made by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers assigned to the department's special investigations section said Roderick Glenn Joyner, 20, of 805 W. Fifth St., Jerry Lloyd Cooper, 25, of 1311 Chestnut St., and William Dudley, 33, of 507 Church St. were charged with gambling in connection with a predawn incident at 800 Pamlico Ave.

Police said Joyner was also charged with possession of cocaine with intent to sell and deliver.

Special investigations officers also charged Missy Melissa Corey, 19, and Charles Ray Person, 22, both of 600B Clark St., with possession of marijuana with intent to sell in connection with a 9:19 p.m. incident at the intersection of Clark Street and Bonner's Lane.

A spring concert will be given by Mary Streeter at Philippi Church of Christ Sunday at 5 p.m. Choirs and other singing groups will also participate.

Council On Aging

The executive committee of the Pitt County Council on Aging will meet at noon Monday in the Council's office at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Postal Thefts

The U.S. Postal Service says 18 North Carolina post offices have been burglarized within the last year.

The postal service said in a news release that in addition to postal inspectors preventing burglaries from occurring, the police or sheriff's department should be called if: strangers are loitering near the building; lights that are normally on are turned off; window blinds have been closed; strange vehicles are parked near the post office; doors are unlocked or windows have been broken, and there is unusual activity around the building.

Postal inspectors said the postal service will pay up to $5,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of post office burglaries.

Voting Rally

State Rep. Daniel Blue Jr. will be the guest speaker at a "Get Out To Vote Rally" at 5 p.m. Sunday at the American Legion Post 39 on St. Andrews Drive.

Also scheduled to attend are state Rep. Milton Fitch Jr. of Wilson, Orange County Commissioner Moses Carey Jr., Edgecombe County Commissioner Thomas Walker Jr., Lenoir County Commissioner George Graham, and Wake County Commissioner Vernon Malone.

The rally is sponsored by the "Ernest Brown for County Commissioner" campaign.

Rural Fire Report

During February, the rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 96 alarms and fought 84 fires, according to Bobby Joyner, county fire marshal.

Joyner said there were fires reported in 15 houses, eight mobile homes, six buildings, 17 grassy and wooded areas, seven refuse dumpsters, seven motor vehicles, and six classified as "others."

There were 16 wrecks attended, two false alarms, and 12 mutual aids, he said.

Joyner estimated that $2,365,350 in property was involved in fire, $2,599,150 exposed, $844,050 lost, and $4,120,450 saved by the rural fire departments.

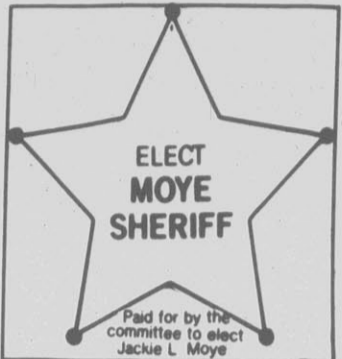

The Ayden and Eastern Pines fire departments each had 13 alarms, more than any of the other Pitt departments.

Friday through Sunday mornings are among the last opportunities for viewing Halley's Comet, Dr. Robert Dough, a professor of astronomy at East Carolina University, said this morning.

He suggested that those wishing to see the comet be at their viewing places by at least 4:15 a.m. "It's getting earlier each morning," he said. He suggested viewing from the

Six Persons Hurt In City Accidents

Greenville police said six persons were injured and more than $15,850 damage resulted from six traffic collisions investigated Wednesday.

Heaviest damage resulted when cars driven by Paul S. Noble of Garfield, N.J., and Jay C. Edwards of 305A Roundtree Drive collided at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Third Street about 8:52 p.m.

Officers, who said Noble and a passenger in the Edwards car were injured, estimated damage from the collision at $2,350 to the Noble car and $3,800 to the Edwards auto.

Cars driven by Sammy Travis Pierce of Ayden and Terry Mashburn Holloman of Farmville collided on Greenville Boulevard about 10:48 a.m., causing $1,500 damage to the Pierce car and $2,500 damage to the Holloman car, police said.

A 3:34 p.m. collision on 10th Street, 375 feet east of the Anderson Street intersection, involved cars driven by Charles Stuart Ward Jr. of 112 Lakewood Drive and Christopher Forgiore of 320 Slay Dorm.

Police, who said both drivers were injured, set damage to the Ward car at $1,500. No damage was listed for the Forgiore car.

Sonya Christina Dellano of Route 1, Winterville, was charged with following too closely following investigation of a 6:27 p.m. collision at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Evans Street.

Investigators said the Dellano car collided with a truck driven by Ronnie Ray Gardner of Route 2, Farmville, causing $500 damage to the truck and $1,000 damage to the car.

Cars driven by Willie Earl Rodgers of Auden and Brian Joseph Briley of Bethel collided about 4:24 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 285 feet north of the Trade Street intersection, causing $300 damage to the Rodgers car and $1,000 damage to the Briley auto.

About the same time, vehicles driven by Jessie Mewborn of Winterville, Christine Haddock Buck of Route 1, Grimesland, and Ruby Ann Ennis of 307C Tobacco Road, collided on Memorial Drive about 187 feet north of the Trade Street intersection.

Police, who said Ms. Buck and a passenger in her truck were injured, set damage at $500 to the Ennis car and $900 to the Mewborn truck. No damage was listed for the Buck truck.

Faubus To Run For Governor

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Orval E. Faubus, whose use of National Guard troops in a bid to preserve school segregation almost 30 years ago put him in the history books, announced today he will run for governor again.

Faubus, 76, who served six terms as governor, the most in Arkansas history, and left office in 1966, released a statement calling for more emphasis on the basics in education.

He said his platform also would stress jobs, control of escalating interest rates, better treatment for the mentally ill, closer control of the state prison system and a new approach to rising utility rates.

It was Sept. 2, 1957, when Faubus ordered the Arkansas National Guard to keep blacks out of Little Rock's Central High School after the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the school board's desegregation plan in a 1956 suit filed by blacks.

Nine black students, who came to be known as the Little Rock Nine, were refused admittance Sept. 3. President Dwight D. Eisenhower then sent the 101st Airborne Division to Little Rock, nationalized the state National Guard and on Sept. 26, the Little Rock Nine entered Central to start classes.

Faubus served as governor from 1954 until 1966, then ran unsuccessfully in 1970 and 1974. He said in February that he was considering a race for governor.

Gov. Bill Clinton, who has served three two-year terms, has announced his intention to seek another term this year, the state's first four-year term for governor this century, because of a constitutional change approved in 1984.

Clinton is a Democrat. Faubus was a Democrat through his 12 years in office. But he was named to head the Department of Veterans Affairs in Republican Gov. Frank White's administration in 1981.

Faubus lived in Houston in the late 1970s, telling a reporter in Houston in 1978 that he retired there because of the medical facilities. His second cardiac pacemaker was implanted in December 1980.

In his comeback bids, Faubus lost the governor's race in 1970 to Dale Bumpers, who is seeking a third term in the U.S. Senate this year, and again in 1974 to David Pryor, who is serving his second term in the U.S. Senate.

Democrat Calls For Tough Air Pollution Controls

By The Associated Press
Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Fountain Odom speaking atop Mount Mitchell on Wednesday, called for stricter air pollution controls and an end to clearcutting forested slopes and mountaintops.

Odom said forests could be destroyed by air pollution and acid rain without funding for intensive research and strict controls on air emissions.

"Every day we pump 170,000 tons of sulfur dioxide into our air — the equivalent of 4,000 railroad boxcar loads," he said. "What makes us think such behavior will have no consequences?"

Odom said clearcutting, in which timber companies remove all trees in a designated area, is always ugly and sometimes causes erosion.

On another issue, Odom said others states should not dump their nuclear waste on North Carolina, nor should North Carolina use dumps outside the state, unless there are fair tradeoffs.

"My solution to the problem of high-level radioactive waste is the same solution I offer on other hazardous waste products: If we don't know how to reuse it or safely dispose of it, don't make it," Odom said.

Meanwhile, Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Walt Atkins issued a statement saying he supports President Reagan's call for $100 million in military aid to the Contras in Nicaragua.

"This is not a case of supporting or deserting the president, but one of evaluating the evidence," he said. "Knowing the Soviets are building a deep-water port and that Cuban troops and Soviet armaments are present, it's not hard to see the communist motive here."

In Lumberton, Democratic U.S. Senate candidate John Ingram said primary foe Terry Sanford had direct connection with "special interests" in the siting of hazardous waste treatment facilities.

"Terry's law firm has represented GSX (Services Inc.), and members of that firm are supporting Terry's campaign," Ingram said at a news conference Tuesday.

He said one member of Sanford's firm is a registered lobbyist for GSX.

Ingram passed out a copy of a record from the Secretary of State's office showing Heman R. Clark, former crime control secretary under Gov. Jim Hunt, had registered as a lobbyist for GSX Services. The document showed he was acting for the law firm of Sanford, Adams, McCullough and Beard of Raleigh.

The document also shows three payments made by GSX Services to the law firm, totaling about $12,000.

"Is it any wonder that Terry flip-flopped on getting in and dropping out of this Senate race when you consider his direct connection with special interests such as GSX, which seeks to force its waste plant on the people of Southeast North Carolina?" Ingram asked.

GSX Services is seeking to build a waste treatment plant at the Laurinburg-Maxton Airport near Laurinburg.

Iacocca To Appear

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca, no stranger to television, is making a cameo appearance as a police officer on a "Miami Vice" episode to be broadcast in May.

Iacocca, in Miami today on a 10-city tour to promote Chrysler's 1987 subcompact cars, was invited to appear on the NBC show by Michael Talbot, who plays Detective Switek, said Chrysler spokesman John Guiniven.

"This wasn't arranged through the company. It grew out of a personal contact between the two men," Guiniven said.

Iacocca, 61, has appeared in dozens of commercials hawking Chrysler products.

Guiniven said he didn't know any details of the appearance or whether the millionaire businessman would be paid for it.

States' Officials Discuss Southern Primary

By SCOTT CHARTON
Associated Press Writer
HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — A regional presidential primary involving 14 Southern states could happen by 1988 if legislatures in two states move elections from Saturday to Tuesday and voters can be sold on the advantages of consolidating clout, Southern secretaries of state said Wednesday.

Secretary of State Jim Brown of Louisiana said his legislature and Texas will meet before 1988 and will probably consider moving the 1988 election from a Saturday to March 8.

"It can't be any worse than what's happened in the last several elections where we've been totally ignored. If this doesn't work, then we'll look at something else. But we can't be in any worse shape in 1984 than Louisiana and Arkansas, particularly, were the last time around, when there was virtually no discussion of issues by candidates that affected this part of the country," Brown said.

"We don't want to be left out this time. We're very enthusiastic. We think it's the greatest uprising since the Civil War," said Drexell Davis, the Kentucky secretary of state and one of eight from the South who attended Wednesday's meeting about a regional primary. The meeting was held in conjunction with the National Association of Secretaries of State winter meeting.

"Energy has a tie that links us because of oil production in the Gulf Coast states. The Mississippi River is a binding tie with Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee. We have such a great number of regional interests, not just political philosophies," Brown said in an interview.

Florida, Georgia and Alabama have already planned their presidential primaries for March 8, Brown said, and Oklahoma has scheduled a presidential caucus that day.

"We secretaries of state hope to speak with a unified voice and say the South has gotten together on this issue," he said.

The concept could misfire, Brown said.

"No. 1, other parts of the country could do the same thing, look at the whole regional primary proposal and get together and maybe serve as competition if they get together. No. 2, if anything, we may give the winner of the New Hampshire primary momentum just to blow into the South and take it all over and really not serve the purpose of having a Southerner or someone more of our views maybe gaining a foothold."

The regional primary could help a well-organized Southerner launch a successful race for president or vice president, Brown said. He said former Virginia Gov. Charles Robb is already making speeches in the South, and that he expected others.

including Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, to do likewise. Clinton is seeking re-election this year.

"I guess there's also the argument that we're forcing candidates for president just to make airport press conference stops all over the South," Brown said.

The Arkansas General Assembly probably will endorse a regional primary when it meets in January 1987, said Secretary of State W.J. "Bill" McCuen.

Missouri Secretary of State Roy Blunt, the only Republican of the eight who met Wednesday, said there would be significant regional benefits from a regional primary.

Democrat Gentry Crowell of Tennessee secretary of state, said former U.S. Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., gave the proposal a boost when he endorsed it. Baker is considering a race for the White House in 1988. "Tennessee wants to be a part of this," Crowell said.

Virginia Secretary of the Commonwealth Sandy Bowen, a Democrat, said some voters may be reluctant to break traditions and support a regional primary. "It's difficult to break that pattern of how you've done it for so many years," she said.

Martin Undecided On Tax Increases

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says he knows proposing a gasoline tax hike to fund road construction would expose him to accusations of hypocrisy, since he championed tax cuts in his 1984 campaign and the 1985 legislative session.

"Well, friends, I can say to you that it... would not be inconsistent at all to cut taxes that deserve to be cut, and increase taxes that need to be increased," Martin told his Transportation Task Force at its final meeting Wednesday. Both would be justified if they strengthened the North Carolina economy, he said.

Martin said he would unveil April 17 a program to raise money for roads.

He said he would support a variety of revenue-raising measures, not just one or two. He indicated his package would include proposals for lowering costs of acquiring rights-of-way and improving highway design standards, but it would not include a statewide lottery.

Martin insisted he was still undecided on "the $200 million question" — whether or not to seek an increase in the 12.25 cents-per-gallon motor fuel tax — and other major funding alternatives.

The governor said budgetary constraints might force the Legislature to delay consideration of some parts of his program until 1987. Even so, he will submit the entire package for the June short session so lawmakers won't fear he has a "hidden agenda."

Martin acknowledged that "a few" Republican legislators had urged him not to propose a tax increase in an election year, but he said he did not resent the pressure.

He also said he did not expect the highway funding issue to become mired in partisan squabbling, and that he interpreted recent statements by House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan as expressing a willingness to cooperate. Jordan and Ramsey have said they would not support a tax increase unless Martin proposed it.

"Public issues are so important that you're going to get some differences of opinion, and it's often the case that it develops along partisan lines," Martin said. "But I don't sense that being a problem here."

Task force members urged the governor to act boldly, saying there was widespread public support for doing whatever was necessary to solve the problems.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said he did not know which funding alternatives had the greatest support in the Legislature. He said it was "inconceivable" that Democrats would reject the Martin program for political reasons, but said the governor's plan could run into trouble if it appeared to benefit only certain areas of the state.

Inspections Fall Short

RALEIGH (AP) — An investigation of North Carolina's auto inspectors that sent Division of Motor Vehicles officials undercover has found that many mechanics aren't putting cars through all the required tests, state officials say.

In the first two weeks of the monitoring program, 35 percent of the 203 garages visited failed to inspect cars properly and will lose their inspection privileges for at least 60 days, state officials said Wednesday.

Another 14 percent did part of the inspection improperly but will be allowed to continue inspecting cars.

For years the state has had inspectors whose responsibilities included investigating car thefts and odometer rollbacks as well as occasionally going undercover to check the inspection work of a mechanic.

But DMV recently hired 10 people with law enforcement experience — two of them women — whose main responsibility is to monitor auto inspections, frequently going undercover to do so.

Prosecutor Advised Sheriff To Resign

GREENSBORO (AP) — Guilford County Prosecutor Lamar Dowda says he privately advised Sheriff James L. Profitt to resign to avoid facing felony bribery charges and being thrown out of office.

After learning that Profitt allegedly had sex with Carmen Jobe Douglas, Dowda met privately with the sheriff "as a friend," the district attorney testified Wednesday in Profitt's bribery trial in Guilford County Superior Court.

Dowda said he was concerned that Profitt faced political ruin and an indictment by privately admitting the affair but not acknowledging it publicly. He said Mrs. Douglas decided to talk to reporters and testify in court only after Profitt did not publicly admit the sexual relationship.

"She felt that she was being attacked personally and that her family name was being smeared and ruined," Dowda testified.

Profitt is accused of granting favors to inmate Ronnie Odell Douglas in exchange for having sex with Mrs. Douglas, then Douglas' fiancée.

Also Wednesday, Mrs. Douglas testified that she and her sister took part in a nude photo session with former Guilford County Assistant District Attorney Robert L. Johnston after he agreed to give Douglas special treatment.

Johnston also is charged with felony bribery in connection with Mrs. Douglas' allegations.

Mrs. Douglas testified that in early December 1983, Johnston and another man — identified as an attorney from Raleigh named Gaylen — showed up at the Greensboro trailer she shared with her sister Cindy Mitchell.

"Cindy looked out the window and said 'Good God, Carmen. He's got someone with him, and he's got a camera over his shoulder,'" Mrs. Douglas said.

Gaylen kept his clothes on, Mrs. Douglas said, but she, Johnston and Miss Mitchell stripped and climbed onto the bed in the back room.

Agents Say Cocaine Major N.C. Crime

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — Cocaine is becoming a major crime problem in North Carolina, addicting a growing number of "decent" people and frustrating law officers because it is so easy to smuggle, state and federal officials say.

"I think it's the largest illegal drug problem the state of North Carolina has ever faced," said Charles Overton, supervising agent for drug investigations with the State Bureau of Investigation. "It has been steadily increasing over the past two years."

Two or three years ago, officials feared the state was becoming a major entry point for illegal drugs, thanks to its secluded coastal coves and mountain airstrips. These continue to be a problem — primarily with marijuana, officials say.

But cocaine is much more potent and expensive than marijuana, so smaller quantities are involved — making the white powder much easier to hide and transport by car or luggage. Meanwhile, much of the less profitable marijuana has been grown inside North Carolina, officials say.

"Cocaine is literally everywhere," said Robert Pence, agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina. "We are working what I consider major drug cases that involve the smallest towns in North Carolina and involving significant networks. It's not just the big cities or the ports or the airstrips anymore."

Cocaine can be smuggled in a small suitcase on a commercial air flight or simply in the trunk of a car, he said.

"We don't know how big it (cocaine smuggling) is, but we're talking about millions of dollars," said Pence. "Local police make seizures every day, sometimes recovering drugs worth close to $50,000 just for one night's work. We are sometimes able to interdict a large shipment worth millions."

Pence blames cocaine for an increase in crime as users seek money to pay for what they did not realize would become an addiction. Many users are middle-or upper-class citizens who turn to shoplifting, embezzlement and other white-collar crimes to support their habit.

"That's what turns them into pushers and enlarges the distribution network," he said. "The only way they can get a supply is selling to someone else."

"Cocaine is an extremely dangerous drug. These people who thought it would be a nice form of recreation are finding it's very addictive. ... North Carolina is no different in the influx of cocaine and what it does to otherwise decent, nice, law-abiding people."

Pence said cocaine use among young people is not as high here as it is in other states. But Overton said officials expect a form of refined cocaine called "crack," which is smoked, to appear in high schools soon.

Last year the FBI focused on "historic conspiracies" — drug smuggling groups that had been operating in North Carolina for several years, Pence said. This year, agents plan to concentrate on the newer networks currently operating.

"We're going to identify the people, but just as important, we're going to take their profit ... seize their assets, monies and properties," he said. "We'll try to trace back through the assets to the money people — the well-established, reputable people financing the operations to the tune of thousands, even millions of dollars."

The networks generally operate in at least two other states and have sophisticated weapons and other equipment, he said.

"There's been no real change in technique. These people get with a style and they stay with it," he said. "They have an affinity for machine guns and automatic weapons, frequently to protect themselves from other (smugglers) who want to rip them off."

Smugglers frequently bribe public officials to look the other way, Pence said, and the FBI here is paying special attention to that this year. But Overton said corruption is much less of a problem in North Carolina than in other states.

Pence said FBI agents arrested about 50 people in federal drug cases in North Carolina last year and seized about $1 million worth of drugs, mostly cocaine. Federal drug cases require the involvement of an interstate ring, organized crime or foreign contacts, he said.

Overton said the SBI was involved in 2,028 felony drug arrests last year, seizing 115,898 grams of cocaine, 117,929 pounds of marijuana and 2,141 grams of heroin. The total street value of the drugs was $182 million, he said.

Overton said the figures are about the same as 1984. But he said there has been a noticeable increase in the use of LSD over the past six months.

Despite the emergence of cocaine, marijuana continues to be a problem in North Carolina. Last month, for example, 28 people were indicted in a $270 million marijuana smuggling conspiracy in the east and a truck loaded with $3 million worth of hashish was seized in Kernersville.

Pence said a 1984 law requiring federal agents to share seized money and property with state and local police assisting in a drug bust is proving to be a "tremendous incentive" to state and local law enforcement.

Child Dies

RALEIGH (AP) — A 2-year-old boy who suffered severe head injuries when a freight train ran over him near Zebulon has died, a hospital official said.

Craig Taylor of Zebulon died about 6:35 p.m. Wednesday at Wake County Medical Center in Raleigh, Liz McRoberts said. The child was taken to the hospital after he was hit by a Southern Railway train about 12:15 p.m. Tuesday, officials said.

Elsie A. Taylor, 48, the boy's grandmother, was charged with child abuse, a misdemeanor, according to a record in the Wake County magistrate's office. She was released on $1,000 bond.

No additional charges had been filed, Wake County sheriff's Sgt. H.R. Montague said Wednesday night.

Major D.F. Waller said the boy and his grandmother had been lying between the rails of a section of track just west of Zebulon. He said when the child heard the train coming, he stood up and was hit. Ms. Taylor wasn't hurt.

Pipeline

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — A lawyer for the Roanoke River Basin Association says both opponents and proponents of a Lake Gaston pipeline will file briefs in U.S. Eastern District Court in Raleigh in the next two months.

"Then in short order we will get to the merits of this case," attorney Pat McSweeney said. He said a hearing was held in federal court in Raleigh Monday to set ground rules for what type of evidence will be allowed in the case.

The association, which is composed of representatives of counties and towns along the Roanoke River — in Virginia as well as North Carolina — has been leading the fight to stop Virginia Beach from building the pipeline.

Chase Crash

DURHAM (AP) — A Duke University student was in the Durham County Jail under a $25,000 bond today on charges stemming from a chase in which two officers were slightly injured and six police cars were damaged, officials say.

Steven William Coffey, 27, of Durham was charged with felonious hit-and-run, assault with a deadly weapon on a law-enforcement officer and seven other traffic offenses following the chase, which ended around 1:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Police also charged Coffey with careless and reckless driving, a stop-light violation, driving while impaired, speeding 90 mph in a 50 mph zone, driving with a revoked license, failure to stop for a blue light and siren and eluding police officers.

Doctors

RALEIGH (AP) — Medical Mutual Insurance Co. of North Carolina executives have rejected a plea from a group of family doctors to halt a quadrupling of their malpractice insurance premiums.

"Our experience shows that, unfortunately, obstetrics is the major area impacted by these large claims" from medical malpractice lawsuits, said Douglass M. Phillips, executive vice president of Medical Mutual. "We have a fiscal responsibility to see that sufficient premiums are collected to pay those claims."

Medical Mutual's rate increase went into effect March 1, although premium renewals for most of the doctors come due in July or August. The increase will push premiums to $22,146 from $4,840 for family physicians who deliver babies, officials said.

Committees

RALEIGH (AP) — The campaign committees of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and former Gov. Jim Hunt appear to be winding down two years after their 1984 campaign battle.

In statements filed with the state Campaign Reporting Office, treasurers for both campaigns said they were preparing to shut down their organizations. Both said, however, they would not close their books until pending lawsuits are resolved.

Test By Taste-Test

SHALLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — State officials planned to taste clams from the Intracoastal Waterway in Brunswick County today to see whether they are contaminated with oil that leaked from a ruptured tanker this week.

When the tide receded Wednesday morning, oil had coated clam and oyster beds in shallow waters of the Shallotte River and waterway and had left a sheen on beds in deeper areas, said Robert Jamieson, manager of the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development's Wilmington office.

An unknown quantity of fuel oil was spilled Monday night near Shallotte Point and Holden Beach when a barge apparently hit submerged anchor while traveling to Morehead City.

Clamming in the river and in part of the Intracoastal Waterway immediately was banned.

Youngster Describes His Suicide In School Essay

CHESTER, Ill. (AP) — An 11-year-old boy who had "trouble in school with other kids" turned in an essay about a fictional character's suicide, then killed himself in the manner he'd described, officials say.

Scott P. Phillips "didn't speak in his assignment as if it was him," Randolph County Coroner Neil V. Birchler said. "He did it as someone else."

Scott's mother, Cynthia Phillips, found his body just before 9:30 p.m. Monday, with a plastic bag over his head, police said. Less than an hour later, his teacher read the essay at home and called the principal. Not knowing what had happened, they agreed to seek counseling for Scott the next morning.

"The young man had written an essay about the suicide of a youngster," said schools Superintendent Hal Diebolt. "It turned out he was writing about his own intentions."

"He had trouble in school with other kids, nit-picky stuff," Scott's father, Richard Phillips, said Wednesday. "But he had been seeing a counselor about the problem. We thought we were getting results, and teachers remarked that there was a change in his attitude."

Scott had been having trouble adjusting to his new school, Chester Community Grade School, Phillips said.

Investigators found several drafts of the essay in his room, apparently written two or three days before the final draft was turned in, Birchler said. Paramedics couldn't revive the boy, who was pronounced dead at a hospital.

Scott was the younger of two Phillips children. His father works as a guard at Menard Correctional Center in Chester, about 60 miles south of St. Louis.

Mrs. Phillips said she was concerned about Scott's classmates.

"There are too many kids who would take this personally," she said. "Tell them not to. We hope someone will learn from this."

Experts To Examine Shuttle Debris Thought To Be From Rocket Booster

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Rocket experts were ready today to begin examining a 4-by-5-foot chunk of Challenger booster debris that could be the "smoking gun" in the investigation of the shuttle explosion.

The 500-pound section was brought into port Wednesday night by a salvage ship that plucked it and two larger pieces of one of the shuttle's solid-fuel boosters from the ocean floor 650 feet down.

The experts first want to learn if the smaller piece is from the left or right booster. If it is from the right side, it could contain the seam believed to have triggered the accident that killed seven astronauts 73 seconds after liftoff Jan. 28.

Investigators believe the failure of a seam that joined the right booster's bottom two segments led to the explosion.

Congressional sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that at a public hearing set for Friday the presidential commission investigating the accident would release a computer-enhanced film linked to the shuttle launch timeline that seems to confirm a joint failure as the cause of the explosion.

Theories on the cause include that cold weather reduced the resiliency of rubber-like O-rings designed to seal the joint, that the rings were damaged during handling or that they were defective.

Launch photographs show smoke spurting from the joint area on liftoff and flame flashing from the same spot 58 seconds later, 15 seconds before the blowup.

If the 4-by-5-foot piece contains the suspect joint, that joint will be examined for signs that fire burned through and other damage.

Because of high winds, the Stena Workhorse, which retrieved the pieces, could not unload them Wednesday. That was expected to be done today.

Morton Thiokol, which makes the rockets, is testing the joints' design with small-scale models of booster parts, company spokesman Gil Moore said.

Members of an independent panel of rocket experts arrived at Morton Thiokol's Wasatch Division plant in Brigham City, Utah, on Wednesday to begin evaluating the tests on O-ring design.

The tests include firing sub-scale rocket motors in order to subject scaled-down cross-sections of booster segments to conditions similar to those the full-size rockets experienced the day Challenger exploded, said Moore.

Also Wednesday, another salvage ship, the USS Preserver, dropped divers overboard to continue retrieving debris and astronaut remains from the area where the crew cabin was located in 100 feet of water, 18 miles northeast of here.

A radio report from the ship late Wednesday said weather conditions were deteriorating and it might have to return to port today.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has refused to acknowledge that crew remains have been found, but sources close to the investigation said most of the remains are ashore and are being examined and identified by forensic experts.

The Navy on Wednesday widened the wreckage search area by 80 square miles to 460 square miles.

A Navy spokeswoman, Lt. Cmdr. Deborah Burnette, said the decision to expand was based on patterns of debris already recovered and additional radio-telemetry data from the shuttle supplied by NASA.

The area is about 15 to 50 miles northeast of Cape Canaveral, and is being worked by seven surface ships, two small manned submarines and three robot submarines.

One of the submarines, the Johnson Sea-Link 2, on Wednesday spotted a parachute from one of the boosters stretched out in the water.

"We've located a 'chute with an orange stripe," the Sea-Link's mother ship, Seward Johnson, radioed. "It's streaming with the current. At the highest point it's about 20 to 22 feet" above the ocean floor.

Spring Brings Agriculture Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's the first day of spring, and the rites include the annual observance of National Agriculture Day to pay tribute to the nation's farmers.

A lineup of speakers, including farm leaders from Capitol Hill and Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng, was scheduled to lead Agriculture Department festivities. Besides indoor exhibits at the agency's headquarters, two tractors flanked the building's outside entrance.

Orville L. Freeman, president of the privately supported Agriculture Council of America, co-sponsor of the event, called the observance "a positive statement about American agriculture, its achievements, its underlying strengths, its potential and its hopes."

Freeman, who was secretary of agriculture in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations of the 1960s, said the tribute "is not an attempt to ignore or in any way minimize the personal and financial suffering being experienced by many farmers, ranchers, and operators of farm businesses."

Norbert L. Sugg, a peanut farmer from Pinetops, N.C., said in prepared remarks that "as a producer myself, I have known some hard times. But I also know something about celebrating life, thinking positive, thinking ahead and working together as a team."

Sugg, who is the council's chairman, added, "That's the way you overcome adversity, at home and in the business of food and fiber, and that's what we want to stress on this Agriculture Day."

The Agriculture Department has come up with new figures showing that the American farmer is even more productive than statisticians have been saying.

In 1984, the most recent year tabulated, one American farmer produced enough food and fiber to supply 116.2 people, according to the statistics, unveiled for this year's program.

The 116.2 people include 86.1 consumers in the United States and 30.1 abroad. In 1983, one farmer provided for 117.3 people, including 85.4 at home and 31.9 overseas.

Exports have been down in recent years, so American farmers have provided food for fewer foreign consumers.

The revisions involve some complicated footwork by statisticians and USDA promoters who like to haul out the figures as examples of American farm productivity.

In the traditional method of such accounting, comparisons were made on the basis of the number of domestic and foreign consumers supplied by one "farm worker" in a particular year.

"Farm workers included farmers, the time that other farm family members spent on farm work, and hired farm help," the department's Office of Governmental and Public Affairs said in its report.

"That was often misinterpreted and misused — some thought that 'farm workers' included only hired farm help, whereas about three-fourths of the 'farm workers' were farmers and unpaid family labor."

In fact, according to other USDA records, the new system of accounting simply uses farm numbers to mean farmers. The 1984 number of "farmers" used in the productivity figures — 2,328,000 — is identical to USDA's estimate of the number of farmers in 1984.

Deadlocks
Do you have deadbolt locks on all exterior doors? A deadbolt is a solid metal bar that spans the gap between a door and its frame. When engaged, it cannot be pushed back by a flexible shim device such as a credit card. Deadbolts must be manually locked (projected) or unlocked (retracted). The National Crime Prevention Institute states, "...a deadbolt lock is a definite burglary deterrent. Often just the sight of such a lock will convince a burglar to look elsewhere for an easier target." Double cylinder deadbolts are used where doors contain glass panels that might be broken to reach inside and unlock the door. Deadbolt security is not expensive, especially when you consider what it could save.

Even with a 1" throw deadbolt, consider some method of strengthening the "weakest link" in your entrances. Some manufacturers now include some type of frame reinforcement with their deadbolts which makes the frame more resistant to "kick-in" attacks.

Pentagon Surplus Set In Billions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon received $44.3 billion more than Congress intended during the past four years because the Defense Department overestimated the inflation rate and fuel costs, a congressional study says.

The report by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, was issued as the Senate Budget Committee voted a 1987 defense budget of $295 billion, $25 billion less than President Reagan had requested. The measure awaits action by the full Senate and House.

The GAO study said the Pentagon overestimated the money it would spend on weapons systems and fuel, and then kept much of the excess.

Pentagon spokesman William Caldwell said the department had received the report but would have no comment until it had a chance to review the figures.

It was not clear exactly how much of the excess $44.3 billion the Pentagon kept because "tracking how funds are actually being used in the Defense Department has always been particularly difficult," the report said.

The excess funds were calculated as the difference between the amount of money Congress authorized the Pentagon to spend and the money actually obligated on contracts and other expenses.

Senate To Face Budget Proposal That Cuts Into Defense Spending

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The full Senate is being presented with a fiscal 1987 budget that the White House says is totally unacceptable because it trims $25 billion from President Reagan's military spending plan and boosts taxes by more than $18 billion.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said he hoped to move the Senate toward the president's position when the proposal reaches the floor next week.

But Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, predicted the final Senate package "will contain, for the most part, the ingredients that are in this budget resolution."

The Budget Committee, in a bipartisan 13-9 vote, on Wednesday passed a spending plan that would meet next year's deficit target of $144 billion without the deep cuts in domestic spending proposed by the president.

The plan, put forward by Domenici and Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, the ranking Democrat on the committee, provides $295 billion in military spending authority for next year. Although that is 2.8 percent more than this year's level, it would be $25 billion less than requested by the president.

For fiscal years 1988 and 1989, the resolution would allow defense spending to rise by 1 percent above inflation, also below the president's plans.

The committee voted to add $12.6 billion in taxes and other revenues to the $5.9 billion proposed by Reagan, suggesting the money come from "other than increased individual tax rates."

The military spending proposal and new taxes were denounced by White House spokesman Larry Speakes, who said the resolution "achieves a desirable goal by ... totally unacceptable methods."

The resolution would "cut the deficit to $144 billion by means of another slash in the defense budget, a sizable tax increase and domestic spending reductions that are for the most part timid and minimal," Speakes said.

"The budget resolution reported by the Senate Budget committee is the wrong way to achieve the deficit reductions required" by the new Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law, said James C. Miller III, the president's budget director.

After the committee vote, Domenici said he told the White House about his proposals but they had not offered suggestions. A budget resolution is a guideline for Congress and does not require the president's signature.

"They know their budget resolution was unacceptable" to either Democrats or Republicans, Domenici told reporters. "They've almost acted as if they didn't care."

Chiles said the White House should look carefully at the plan as the alternative to automatic spending cuts required under the new deficit-reduction law if Congress can't agree on how to meet the deficit target. The law would cut military spending equally with domestic programs.

"If they scuttle this, what to they get in return? They fall under the ax," he said.

The Budget Committee plan was bolstered by a General Accounting Office report Wednesday that said the Pentagon received $44.3 billion more than Congress intended during the past four years because the Defense Department overestimated the inflation rate and fuel costs, and then kept much of the excess.

The Senate proposal would freeze or cut back most domestic programs, with some exceptions. New spending would be allowed for replacing the space shuttle Challenger, drug law enforcement, farm credit, the Federal Aviation Administration, the Superfund toxic waste cleanup program and some other select areas.

ENROLLMENT ANNOUNCEMENT HEAD START

Martin County Community Action, Inc. Project Head Start is now accepting applications for the 1986 Fall enrollment. Eligibility is determined by HHS income guidelines, family needs and handicapping and/or special conditions of the child.

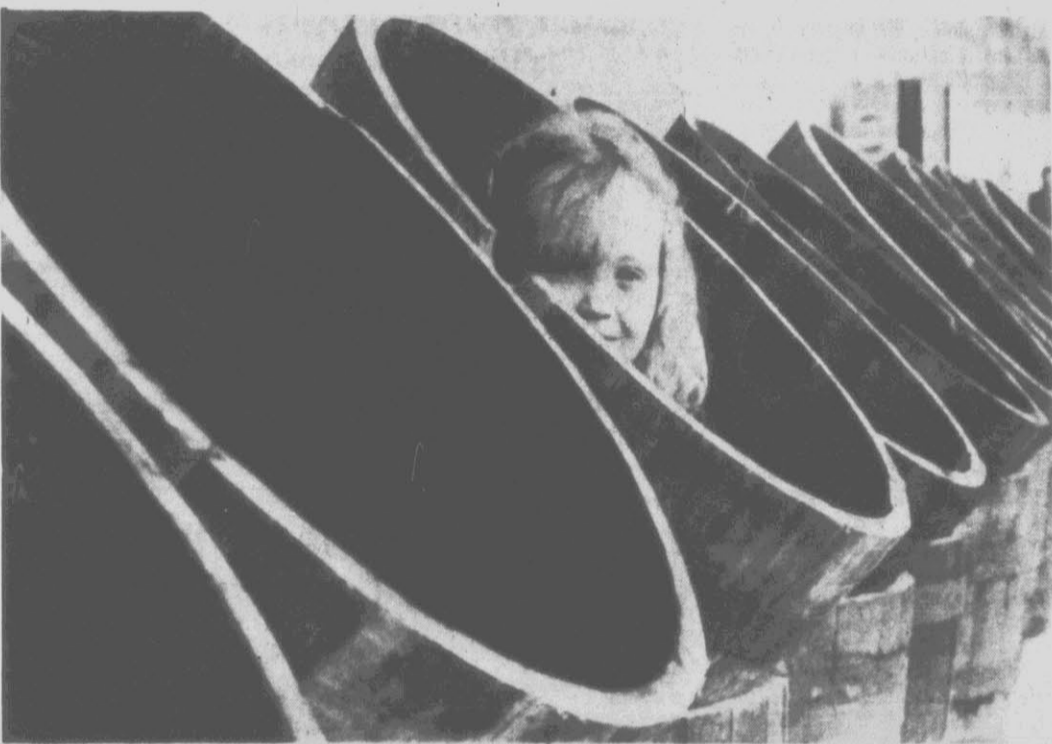

Head Start is a comprehensive developmental program for children ages 3-5. Head Start is based on the premise that all children share certain needs, and that children from low-income families, in particular, can benefit from a program designed to meet those needs.

The program operates in the context of the child's total environment—classroom, family, neighborhood—stressing not only education but also health, nutrition, mental health, social services and parent involvement.

The Head Start program has been operating in the Martin County area since 1965; in the Beaufort County area since 1977 and in the Pitt County area since 1985. Funding is received from the Office of Child Development, Department of Health and Human Services.

The Head Start program operates nine (9) months of the year - September through May. The Head Start centers are opened Monday through Friday and the hours of operation are 8:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m.

For more information or to enroll a child, please call Mrs. Mary Lloyd at 792-1761 or come by the Martin County Community Action Head Start Social Services Office, located in the American Legion Head Start Center, on Watts Street in Williamston, North Carolina or contact the West Sixth Street Head Start Center located at 1610 West Sixth Street.

Rudy Vallee Has Throat Surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rudy Vallee, whose image as a Yale University graduate crooning "The Whiffenpoof Song" through a megaphone endured a 60-year radio, movie and stage career, is recovering from throat surgery, officials say.

Vallee, 85, was admitted to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center several days ago, according to hospital spokesman Ron Wise, who said Wednesday that Vallee was expected to be moved to a private room shortly.

Vallee's wife of 36 years, Eleanor, has requested that no other information be released about her husband's condition or ailment, Wise said.

Daily Variety columnist Army Archerd reported Wednesday that Vallee had undergone throat surgery and was expected to be removed from intensive care by the end of the week.

Vallee rose to fame during the Prohibition era, when he crooned such tunes as "Vagabond Lover," "My Time is Your Time"

LaRouche Slate Gets Democratic Win In Illinois

WASHINGTON (AP) — An upset primary victory by an Illinois lieutenant governor candidate who supports ultra-conservative Lyndon LaRouche stunned Democratic Party officials, who say LaRouche's followers are "the kook fringe of American politics."

"They've never posed any sort of serious threat to winning Democratic Party nominations in the past. They've been more of a nuisance than anything else," Terry Michael, spokesman for the Democratic National Committee, said Wednesday. "They've been so far out, so kook fringe, that voters have not taken them seriously."

In Tuesday's Illinois primary, LaRouche supporter Mark Fairchild narrowly defeated the party's hand-picked candidate for lieutenant governor while another LaRouche candidate, Janice Hart, was leading a mainstream Democrat in a toss-up race for the secretary of state nomination.

Fairchild's win apparently deals a severe blow to Democrat Adlai Stevenson's hopes to defeat Gov. James Thompson because Stevenson, to run as a Democrat, must run as a team with Fairchild.

Stevenson vowed he would never run on the same ticket as the LaRouche followers.

"We are exploring every legal remedy to purge these bizarre and dangerous extremists from the Democratic ticket," Stevenson told a news conference in Chicago Wednesday night. "But the one thing I want to make absolutely clear tonight: I will never run on a ticket with candidates who espouse the hate-filled folly of Lyndon LaRouche and the U.S. Labor Party."

His victory jolted Illinois party officials, who had ignored the LaRouche candidates and assumed the electorate would do the same. State Sen. Vince Demuzio, a member of the Illinois Democratic Central Committee, called the outcome "a disaster for the party."

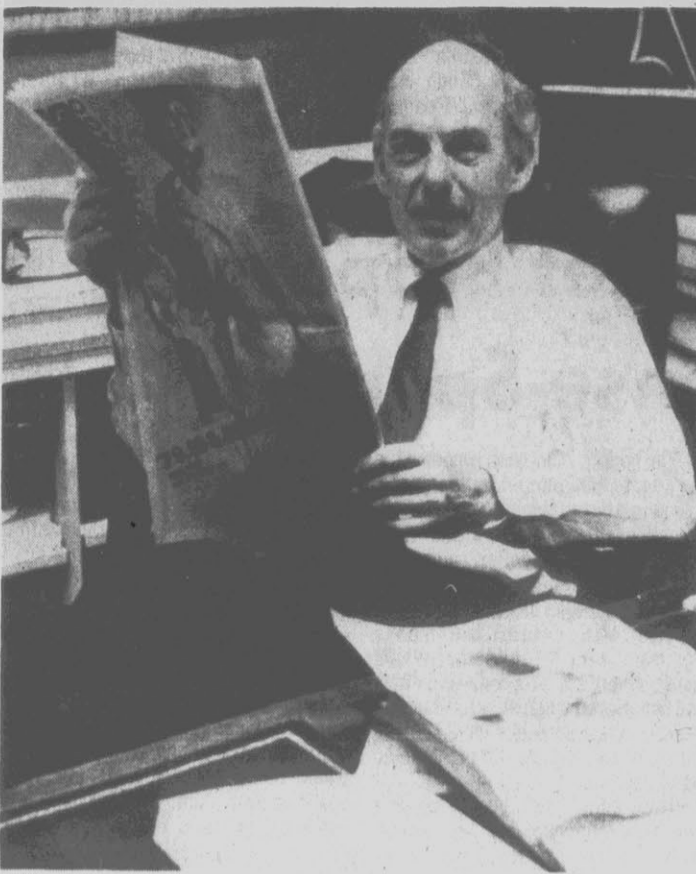

Fairchild and Hart ran on LaRouche platforms ranging from a hard line against the Soviet Union to AIDS testing of everyone to quarantine for those carrying the deadly virus.

In a statement, LaRouche congratulated the two successful candidates and said the Illinois vote "is largely a protest vote ... against the administration's policies, against the present Congress and against the present leadership of the Democratic Party."

LaRouche, though a perennial candidate for president, is hardly a household name. The 63-year-old Virginia economist, running as a Democrat in 1984, attracted just 150,000 votes in a dozen primaries. During the primary campaign, he vilified Walter Mondale as a "thug," Gary Hart as "evil."

LaRouche has said he believes economic ruin and war with the Soviets are imminent. He favors a return to the gold standard and a huge military buildup. He has alleged he is the target of assassination by opponents ranging from the Queen of England to the mayor of Keene, N.H. His followers at times carry guns.

To further confuse things, LaRouche's political action committee, formed in 1980, is called the Na-

UPSET — Adlai E. Stevenson, shown in his Chicago law office, won the Democratic nomination for governor handily this week. However, Stevenson says he may form a third party for the general election in protest of the Democratic nomination of two supporters of ultra-conservative Lyndon LaRouche as running mates. tional Democratic Policy Committee.

"(The Illinois results) probably means we'll have to do a better job of communicating to the public that these people are not Democrats, that the Democratic Party has completely disavowed the effort they've made to lend credibility to themselves by using the name 'Democrat' in the National Democratic Policy Committee, which has no relationship at all to the Democratic Party," the DNC's Michael said.

"The LaRouche people are the kook fringe of American politics," he said.

Christina Huth, LaRouche's campaign spokeswoman, said so far this year there are 149 LaRouche candidates running for Congress, 14 for the Senate, six for governor and 618 for other offices. Most are running as Democrats, a few as Republicans. They have filed for office in 26 states.

"The people who are running as LaRouche Democrats ... consider themselves in many cases to be lifelong loyal Democrats who have worked all of their public lives for the party," she said.

Sea Exercises Begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. warplanes, flying over the Mediterranean Sea near Libya, reported no close encounters with Libyan aircraft on the first day of operations involving three American aircraft carriers, Pentagon sources said.

The third carrier, the USS America, steamed into the Mediterranean Wednesday at the head of a 10-ship task force to take part in what the Pentagon describes as "routine exercises."

Pentagon officials said an undisclosed number of U.S. planes flew in the operations Wednesday, but "there were no unusual incidents," meaning no close encounters with Libyan or Soviet forces. The officials declined to say how many planes took part, or how near the U.S. ships and planes were to Libya.

Foreigners Getting More Patents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residents of Japan, West Germany and California topped the list of those receiving patents on new inventions last year, the Patent and Trademark Office reports.

Overall, the United States issued 77,251 patents on inventions, processes, plants and designs in 1985, with 43,370 won by Americans and 33,881 going to foreigners.

The overseas total of 43.8 percent of all American patents is a record high, up from 41.9 percent in 1984. The rate has been climbing steadily over the years.

As recently as the early 1960s, foreign inventors collected less than 20 percent of U.S. patents, but that climbed past the 30 percent mark in 1970 and topped 40 percent for the first time in 1983.

The object of granting a patent is to encourage invention and innovation by protecting the rights of a person who develops a new product while helping make that product available to the public.

If a product is truly new, a patent is issued, granting the developer exclusive rights to it for 17 years. During that time the patent holder can make and sell the invention, or license it to others to manufacture and sell. After a patent expires, the technology becomes available to the public.

More than 4 million patents have been issued by the United States since the first ones in 1790.

Japanese inventors collected 13,351 patents in 1985, up from 11,468 in 1984. They were well ahead of West Germany, whose citizens finished second with 6,851 patents, up from 6,403 a year earlier.

Other countries collecting 100 or more U.S. patents last year included the United Kingdom, 2,621; France, 2,516; Canada, 1,452; Switzerland, 1,274; Italy, 1,013; Sweden, 954; the Netherlands, 834; Australia, 413; Austria, 328; Belgium, 253; Denmark, 244; Finland, 223; Israel, 185; Taiwan, 199; the Soviet Union, 149; Hungary, 108 and Norway, 106.

Within the country, California, the most populous state, collected the most patents, 6,109, up from 5,707 a year earlier.

Reagan Chooses Woman To Head Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — After leaving the post unfilled for 2½ years, President Reagan has settled on Dorcas R. Hardy to be the new commissioner of Social Security.

Ms. Hardy, 39, was an assistant health commissioner under Reagan when he was governor of California and she has been an assistant secretary at the Department of Health and Human Services since 1981.

The White House announced the appointment Wednesday. If confirmed by the Senate, she will be the first female Social Security commissioner.

Social Security is under the HHS umbrella, but its budget and work force dwarf Hardy's Office of Human Development Services, which runs adoption programs, Meals on Wheels, Head Start and other programs.

Ms. Hardy is relinquishing a job with a $6 billion budget and 1,200 workers for a post with a $223 billion budget and 73,000 workers.

Another woman, Martha A. McSteen, has been acting commissioner for the past 30 months. Some lawmakers had urged Reagan to give the job permanently to Mrs. McSteen, a civil servant who started her Social Security career in 1947.

The job was one of several sub-cabinet level posts in HHS and other agencies that the Reagan administration had left unfilled for a long period.

Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif., chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, said last week that "Ms. Hardy is a capable person ... (but) it would be preferable that the agency's chief administrator have at least a few years of hands-on experience."

He added that Mrs. McSteen "has been working for the Social Security Administration for as long as Ms. Hardy has been alive."

HHS Secretary Otis Bowen announced Tuesday he is shifting two welfare programs now run by the Social Security Administration — Aid to Families with Dependent Children and Low-Income Energy Assistance — to a new Family Services Administration.

The Social Security commissioner will still have responsibility for another welfare program, Supplemental Security Income. Medicare is run by a separate component of HHS.

Ms. Hardy was not immediately available for comment.

A Social Security spokesman, James Brown, said Bowen has asked Mrs. McSteen "to continue her work at Social Security, and she looks forward to working with Dorcas Hardy."

N.C. Court Holds W.Va. Ex-Governor's Daughter In Murder

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Former West Virginia Gov. W.W. Barron says his daughter has assured him of her innocence in the beating death of her landlady and is "in an excellent frame of mind."

Barron said he and his wife arrived Tuesday in Charlotte, where his daughter, Jane Barron Anderson, 34, and his son-in-law, Jerry Artor Anderson, 38, are being held in the 1983 murder of Barbara Kay White.

"We'll all be here until the hearings are over," Barron said. "If they extradite, Opal and I will be right there in Charleston to support her."

At a first appearance hearing

Wednesday, Mecklenburg County District Court Judge William H. Scarborough ordered the couple held without bond in the county jail pending a Friday bond hearing.

A prosecutor charged that the Andersons had fled prosecution, but a defense attorney said the two were not fugitives because they moved to Charlotte six months after the slaying and because West Virginia authorities knew all along where they lived.

"Why did these folks come down to North Carolina?" said Assistant District Attorney Monroe Whitesides. "I don't think it was the scenery. There was a good reason to come down here — to escape the charge of murder in West Virginia."

Whitesides said West Virginia officers came to Charlotte two years ago to seek a hair sample from Jerry Anderson in the murder case but that the couple's attorney succeeded in getting a judge to block the pursuit.

Defense attorney Joe Dozier argued that North Carolina law permits authorities to hold fugitives only if it can be proven that they fled from justice.

"The statute applies to people in hiding or in hot pursuits," he said. "But my clients lived (in Charlotte) for two or three years after the judge threw out the case. They moved but they left a forwarding address. Why come and arrest them at 12 midnight ... leaving their three children at home?"

"The officers from West Virginia have talked to my people, harassing them for months," he said. "They admitted two years ago they didn't have a case against my clients."

Scarborough told Dozier that the denial of the request to seek a hair sample didn't mean the government doesn't have a case, and he told Whitesides that the Andersons' hiring of a lawyer in that dispute doesn't mean they are guilty of anything.

Anderson, a car salesman, and Mrs. Anderson, a clerk at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, were arrested Monday night at their home in Matthews, just outside Charlotte, police said.

Mrs. White, 26, of Dunbar, W.Va., had rented a house in Dunbar to the Andersons and was last seen Jan. 14, 1983, getting into a car, West Virginia police said. Her body was found eight days later in the Putnam County community of Scott Depot.

West Virginia State Police Capt. J.T. Gribben said the Andersons had been suspects for more than a year after officers came upon some new, unspecified information.

"We never closed the investigation," he said. "All along, it was something we felt could be solved."

Barron, governor from 1961 to 1965, spent more than three years in federal prison after being convicted in 1971 of bribing a juror.

He said he first heard of the arrests from one of his grandchildren. He said his daughter later called him from jail.

"She had one call coming to her, and that's how she used it — to call us," he said.

Royal Splendor Fascinates World

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Britain's monarchy captivated the world with a regal wedding five years ago and will likely do it again when Prince Andrew marries, demonstrating commoners' enduring fascination with royalty.

The 1,000-year-old monarchy dropped a tradition of relatively private weddings, usually at Windsor Castle, 40 miles west of London, when Queen Elizabeth II's parents, then Prince Albert and Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, married at London's Westminster Abbey in 1923.

Since then, the public ceremony and pageantry of royal weddings have grown in splendor.

None, however, was as magnificent as when nearly a billion people in 70 nations watched the July 29, 1981 wedding of Andrew's older brother, heir to the throne Prince Charles, and Lady Diana Spencer. What they saw was a 20-year-old woman transformed that day into a beautiful princess.

A nation celebrated, tourists poured in, and foreign royalty and cousins who had lost their thrones crowded into St. Paul's Cathedral with heads of governments, favored royal friends and servants. Diana became probably the most recognizable young woman in the world.

Author John Pearson in a recent book, "The Ultimate Family," analyzing the superstar status the British royal family has achieved while Britain has declined as a world power, commented on the wedding of Charles and Diana:

"Having ceased to wield the old symbolic power of Queen Victoria over the largest empire in history, the royal family had rediscovered a unique and indispensable new role as surrogate performing royalty for the world."

If the wedding of Charles, now 37, was the ultimate, the marriage of 26-year-old Andrew, the queen's second son, promises to be not far behind.

Sarah Ferguson, also 26, a redhead from an upper-class landowning family, appears just right for the role of the girl-next-door who captured the heart of a young prince.

Andrew said after the engagement announcement Wednesday that he wants the wedding sometime this summer at Westminster Abbey.

It was there in 1947 that the marriage of his mother, then Princess Elizabeth and heir to the throne, to Prince Philip, a member of the Greek royal family, lifted the spirits of a war-weary nation.

Television cameras were banned in 1947. But in a decision that has had lasting significance, Elizabeth overruled Cabinet disapproval and permitted television cameras in the abbey for her coronation in 1953.

Striking Workers Arrested At Plant

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Striking meatpackers and their supporters today blockaded entrances to Hormel's flagship plant, and authorities arrested protesters who ignored orders to clear a main gate.

Police gave three warnings to approximately 30 protesters who linked arms and refused to move from the plant's north gate. Those arrested linked arms and sang "we shall not be moved" while other demonstrators shouted "we want a contract" and hurled insults at police.

"We're just out here to show people we're still alive," said Brenda Diggins. Her husband, Roger, is among the meatpackers who struck the Geo. A. Hormel & Co. seven months ago.

The blockade violated a judge's December order preventing the union or its supporters from blocking entrances to the plant, said Police Chief Donald Hoffman.

Misdemeanor charges of unlawful assembly and obstructing an officer will probably be filed against anyone arrested, the chief said.

The arrests came after more than 100 people rallied outside the plant, abandoning cars in front of the gates.

Earlier this week, Hormel agreed to a union request to resume contract talks in another effort to end the strike. Hormel officials said Wednesday that the talks won't be held until at least next week because two company negotiators are out of town.

The company and striking meatpackers haven't met since Feb. 11, when talks broke off in a stalemate about job guarantees for all strikers and the length of a new agreement.

Hormel reopened the plant Jan. 13. About 500 of the 1,500 union members who went on strike Aug. 17 have returned to work, and Hormel has hired about 550 replacement workers.

The international UFCW last week cut off strike benefits of $40 per week and said that the strikers' best hope for future employment is to end the walkout and apply for work. Union members voted Sunday to continue the walkout.

The strike began after Hormel cut wages by 23 percent in October 1984, lowering the base wage from $10.69 to $8.25 an hour. An arbitrator's ruling increased the base rate to $9.25 an hour shortly before the strike began.

Workers at other Hormel plants have accepted a new contract with a base wage of $10 an hour, but members of Local P-9 have twice rejected a federal mediator's proposal for a base wage of $10 an hour.

With 86 years behind us, why are a lot of people just now noticing Planters?

People are talking about us. And we're not surprised.

After all, our reputation is growing. Growing, we might add, for some rather good reasons.

One is the fact that our last fiscal year was the best in the bank's history.

This certainly reflects the faith our customers have in us. As well as the trust many new customers are bringing us.

And why is this happening? We think it's because of the principles which guide our bank.

Principles we've had from the beginning. Like community involvement, where our reputation grows through deeds.

Such as coming to the aid of a volunteer rescue squad when its old ambulance finally broke down. Not only helping the squad get a

You see at Planters, being attentive to customer needs has always been important to us.

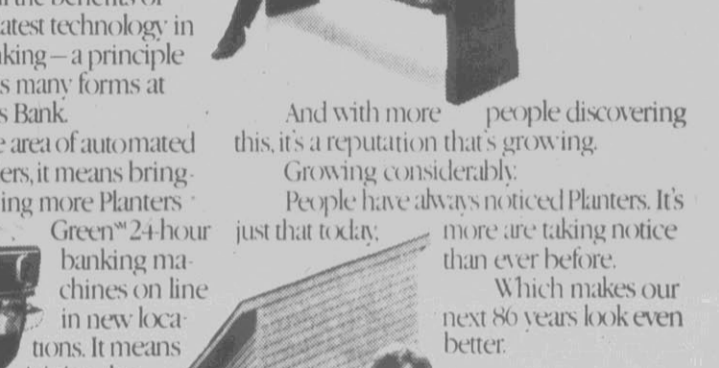

How important? Take the example of a young couple who came to Planters after several other banks showed no interest in their business idea.

We not only took the time to determine they were a good business risk, we spent over 50 hours helping them put together a proposal. And then we gave them a loan.

What do such examples say about Planters Bank? Simply this. No other bank anywhere does more or goes further to meet people's needs than we do.

This commitment includes providing people with all the benefits of the latest technology in banking—a principle that takes many forms at Planters Bank.

In the area of automated tellers, it means bringing more Planters Green™ 24-hour banking machines on line in new locations. It means joining the Planters Green system with the Relay™ interstate network so cardholders can bank throughout the Carolinas and Virginia. And it means being the first bank in North Carolina to begin installation of IBM's newest lobby automatic teller.

It also means new computer software which brings greater speed and efficiency to our customer service systems bank-wide.

Investing in this technology makes Planters Bank more responsive to customer needs.

What's more, a bank which invests in itself is a good place for people to invest their money. Which is why people with their lives ahead of them are finding it's good to have us behind them.

Together, all of these principles—community involvement, personal service and new technology, principles we've followed since 1899—foster a reputation for excellence in banking.

And just as strong as community involvement is another principle we adhere to. Something everyone wants from a bank. But not every bank provides.

And that's personal service.

And with more people discovering this, it's a reputation that's growing. Growing considerably.

People have always noticed Planters. It's just that today, more are taking notice than ever before.

Which makes our next 86 years look even better.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied with renewed force today, pushing the Dow Jones industrial average above the 1,800 level.

Dow Jones' average of 30 blue chips climbed 15.45 to 1,803.40 in the first hour of trading. Gainers held a 6-5 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. The government reported today that Americans' personal income rose a healthy 0.6 percent in February while consumer spending was up 0.3 percent. The Commerce Department said the gain in incomes followed a weak 0.1 percent January rise while the increase in personal consumption spending followed a 0.4 percent decline in January. While both categories showed improvement, they were still well below the pace set in December.

Eli Lilly slipped 3/8 to 66 1/2 in active trading. The stock jumped 7/8 points Wednesday on reports that a new Lilly antidepressant drug might have potential uses in weight reduction.

Gainers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, up 1/2 at 152 1/2; Merck, up 2 1/4 at 163 1/2; International Paper, up 3/8 at 61 1/4, and Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, up 1 at 105.

human rights violations or drug smuggling.

Seeking the handful of votes that could mean victory, the White House promised that if Congress approves the package, Reagan would sign an executive order containing the 90-day restriction.

Under that order, all types of military aid would be permitted after 90 days if the leftist Nicaraguan Sandinista government does not negotiate seriously with the rebels — a step the Nicaraguan government has repeatedly refused to take, charging that the Contras are a creation of the United States.

Congress could block the aid at that point, but that would require majority votes in both the House and Senate. Reagan could then veto such a move, and it would require a two-thirds majority in each house to override him.

Barnes said Wednesday that the proposed compromise "doesn't really change anything. ... It's an obvious indication that the administration doesn't have the votes on the merits and they're grasping for ways to get some votes."

While the House debated, the eight-member Contadora group of Latin American countries made a fresh appeal to avoid the use of force in Central America.

Speaking at a meeting of the Political Council of the Organization of American States in Washington, Venezuelan Ambassador Edilberto Moreno said it was necessary to reiterate the obligation of all member states of the OAS "to solve their controversies exclusively by peaceful means and to abstain from the use of force directly or indirectly."

Moreno said he was speaking for Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Mexico, Panama, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Chile's new ambassador to the OAS, Javier Illanes, declared his country's "decided support for the Contadora peace efforts."

During the House debate, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., described the upcoming House decision as a "Tonkin Gulf vote," a reference to the 1964 resolution that enabled then-President Johnson to introduce U.S. troops into Vietnam.

"I see this leading to war," said O'Neill. "I see a quagmire down there."

"The United States is embarked on a lonely crusade of support for the Contras," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., House Intelligence Committee chairman. "Nicaragua is not an issue of supreme national importance. It is a small, dirt-poor country with scarce human and material resources."

Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., said: "President Reagan is dividing the citizens of our nation once again into hawks and doves. And for what purpose? To finance a band of cut-throat mercenaries in the jungles of Central America."

Michel denied that U.S. troops would be sent to Nicaragua. "Let's put that notion to rest," he said.

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., urged passage of the aid as necessary to stop the spread of communism in Central America. "Those Sandinistas, those communists (in Nicaragua), are closer to me in Louisiana than I am to New York City," he said.

The Contras were supported by the CIA from 1981 to 1984 and now receive $27 million in non-lethal U.S. support. However, that aid expires March 31.

whether she would proclaim a revolutionary government.

Mrs. Aquino took office Feb. 25, the day President Ferdinand E. Marcos fled the presidential palace under pressure from a civilian-military rebellion. Since then, she has been considering declaration of a "revolutionary government" to enable her government to remove some of the bureaucracy and government institutions set up by Marcos during his 20-year rule.

The current National Assembly is controlled by the former president's political party.

The draft constitution says civilian authority "shall at all times be supreme over the military" and includes a "bill of rights" from the 1973 constitution currently in effect.

It says all civil, political and social rights under the old constitution will remain "inviolable" and that the new government will be bound by all treaties and obligations entered into by the previous government.

"The president shall have control and exercise general supervision and control over all local governments," the draft says.

The draft left blank a space for indicating the number of days Mrs. Aquino would have to form the commission that would write a new, permanent constitution. It said the commission would include up to 100 members and once formed would have up to six months to write the new constitution.

Church ...

"After paying to Grace... $50,000 in January... there was no conversation between the Grace FWB Church and Northeast Original FWB Conference concerning voiding any contracts," according to Edwards.

A Grace spokesman, who asked not to be identified, acknowledged that a second contract, accompanied by a $50,000 check, had been executed by Northeast Conference officials. But he said Grace officials never agreed to or signed the second contract and said the check was never cashed and was returned.

Edwards' statement also said conference representatives met Tuesday night with Greenville's Human Relations Council "to see if this matter could be resolved outside of the court. If not, we have no other choice but to take legal action."

Edwards, commenting on the meeting with the Human Relations Council, said the council agreed to try to arrange a meeting between Grace and Northeastern Conference officials in an effort to resolve the matter.

"It's a shame two churches can't work out their differences without having to go to court," Edwards said. But, he said, "we'll go if we have to."

Tar Heels Test Cardinal Streak

HOUSTON (AP) — Louisville Coach Denny Crum wants it understood that regular season winning streaks do not win national championships.

"When we won the championship (in 1980), we weren't better than the other teams, we just played better on that night," said Crum, whose No. 7 Cardinals will take a 13-game winning streak into tonight's NCAA West Regional basketball semifinal game against North Carolina.

"Anything can happen at this level," Crum said.

Eighth-ranked North Carolina won its first 21 games this season but lost five of their last 10 regular season games.

The Louisville-North Carolina game starts at 8:10 p.m. CST at The Summit.

Nevada-Las Vegas, the only survivor from the western states, will face Auburn in the other semifinal game starting at 5:37 p.m. The winners will meet Saturday for a berth in the NCAA Final Four in Dallas March 29-31.

Louisville, 28-7, struggled early in the season before surging into the playoffs. It was a planned move, Crum said.

"I think we have an obligation to our fans and to the team to be our best at the end of the year," Crum said. "You don't learn anything unless you play against the very best."

The Tar Heels were ranked No. 1 in the nation with a 21-0 record when injuries slowed the team. But leading scorer Brad Daugherty said North Carolina, 28-5, aren't worried about unbeaten records.

"A run like that doesn't matter when it gets to the nitty-gritty," Daugherty said. "Now it's who rebounds the best and who is the most intense. It's who does the little things right."

The 6-foot-11 Daugherty leads the Tar Heels with a 20.2 scoring average and 8.8 rebounds per game.

The Cardinals will try to counteract Daugherty with outstanding freshmen Purvis Ellison who is averaging 12.9 points and 7.9 rebounds.

"I've never had a freshmen that was more consistent," Crum said. "He's given us a new dimension."

Auburn, 21-10, upset St. John's, the West's No. 1 seeded team, to reach tonight's matchup against No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas, 33-4.

"Last year we were the Cinderella team playing on emotion," Auburn senior forward Chuck Person said. "This year we are playing on all five cylinders. We're not sneaking up on anybody and we're not letting anybody sneak up on us."

Auburn Coach Sonny Smith promised a running game.

"We don't take into consideration what they do best," Smith said. "We play better at the quick tempo. We get in the wrong lanes and make some bad passes but we play better running, so we'll run."

Nevada-Las Vegas is known as the Runnin' Rebels and Coach Jerry Tarkanian hopes his team lives up to its name but he's concerned.

"The teams that have beaten us have beaten us running," Tarkanian said.

Containing Person will be a big part of the Rebels' game plan, he said.

"We won't have any gimmick defenses for him," Tarkanian said. "But we will be aware when he has the ball."

Tigers, Cowboys In NIT Clash

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The basketball teams of Clemson and Wyoming took different roads to get to the quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

But their paths converge tonight as they attempt to get to Madison Square Garden and the final four.

Clemson started the season off strong, winning 13 of their first 14 games and breaking a school record by winning its first 11 games. But once inside the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Tigers won only three of 14 games.

Wyoming, which starts four sophomores and a senior, got off to a slow 6-7 start but won 11 of its last 14 games and a share of the Western Athletic Conference regular-season title with Texas El-Paso and Utah. The Cowboys lost in the WAC tournament finals to UTEP, but were passed over for the more prestigious NCAA tournament while UTEP and Utah were invited.

Both coaches say their team are playing strong now.

Clemson, 19-14, beat Middle Tennessee State, 99-81, in the first round of the tournament and Georgia, 77-65, in the second.

"We've played very well overall," said Tiger coach Cliff Ellis. "Except for the rebounding in the first half against Georgia, I can't ask for much more. We've gotten good outside shooting, played excellent defense and in general played well-rounded defense."

The Cowboys, 22-11, first beat Texas A&M, 79-70, and then ran past Loyola Marymount, 99-90. Both games were at home, and the Cowboys have now won 17 of 20 games played at the Arena-Auditorium.

But Cowboy coach Jim Brandenburg said he doesn't think Wyoming's raucous crowd, which is expected to be a sellout, should bother Clemson.

"Coming from the Atlantic Coast Conference, you know that Clemson can play in adverse situations," Brandenburg said.

Clemson also will have to adjust to the 7,200-foot altitude in Laramie, Wyo., which is why Ellis brought his team to Wyoming early.

"It will be different for us," he said. "Leaving Tuesday will give us a chance to try and get used to the conditions."

Ellis said even with such strong teams as Florida, Providence and Ohio State left in the tournament, Wyoming is the chief stumbling block between the Tigers and the title.

"If we can win this game, I think we have a great shot at the entire tournament."

A key for Wyoming will be breaking down the Tigers' defenses, Brandenburg said.

"They are very capable of throwing a lot of different defenses at us. Their offense is predicated on their defense," he said. "They get baskets off of steals. They would just as soon not play a half-court game."

Omni Has Not Been That Friendly To Georgia Tech

AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech has won 27 of its 33 games this season, but just four of the six it has played at The Omni. So while the Yellow Jackets are being given the edge in the NCAA Southeast Regional because it's being played in Atlanta, Coach Bobby Cremins doesn't see any big advantage.

"I think you're going to see a lot of fans who are solid college basketball fans," Cremins said of the crowd he expects for tonight's Southeast Regional semifinals win which his Yellow Jackets taking on Louisiana State in the second game of the double-header.

"The issue is going to be decided out there on the floor," Cremins added in reference to any influence a pro-Georgia Tech crowd might have on the outcome.

In the first semifinal game, Kentucky and Alabama square off for the fourth time after two regular-season Southeastern Conference meetings and one in the SEC tournament. Kentucky, 31-3, won all three.

"It's been sold out for two months. When you have a regional like this, people from all over the country get tickets and come into the city," Cremins said. "We will be lucky to have 100 students here."

Playing on or near a home court has been of little aid to some teams in the NCAA tournament so far. Utah lost to North Carolina in a first-round game at Ogden, Utah, while Syracuse was beaten by Navy in the Carrier Dome last Sunday.

But LSU, 24-11, reached the Southeast Regional by winning on its court in Baton Rouge, the same place where Georgia Tech defeated Marist and Villanova.

"I hope it doesn't have an adverse effect on us," Cremins said on the prospect of playing before relatively few Georgia Tech fans tonight. "It's not as great an advantage as everyone thinks it is."

Cremins said LSU has survived the loss of players through academic problems and illness, making the Tigers a stronger club.

"They're together. They play hard," Cremins said. "I like their chemistry, the way they do things."

LSU beat Memphis State to reach the round of 16. Coach Dale Brown says tonight's game will be like facing Memphis State for a second time, although he adds that the Yellow Jackets might have the upper hand because they are playing just blocks away from their campus.

"To say that we would not like to play in Death Dome (LSU's arena) is a lie," Brown said. "However, we have the distinction of having a winning record on the road."

To keep the road streak going, Brown said the Tigers must concentrate on Mark Price, Georgia Tech's explosive guard, and his backcourt mate, Bruce Dalrymple. Brown said he is concerned about Dalrymple's ability to crash the boards.

The Tech Plan

"We hope he gets confused. We're now going into what we call freak defenses," Brown said. "Maybe instead of having the freedom of crashing the boards, he won't know."

Coach Wimp Sanderson of 24-8 Alabama says the Crimson Tide can forget their three losses to the Wildcats.

"I don't really think there's anything we can learn from those three games," Sanderson said. "Each game's a separate game in a separate week."

Duke Set To Take On DePaul

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Long before Cleveland State and Cinderella became acquainted, there was a person who thought the Vikings were for real — Kelvin Ransey of the New Jersey Nets.

Ransey, however, could be biased. His brother Clint will be in the Vikings starting lineup Friday night when Cleveland State faces Navy in the NCAA East Regional at the Brendan Byrne Arena. Top-ranked Duke takes on DePaul in the other semifinal matchup.

"They are very excited, which they should be," said Kelvin Ransey. "They are playing real well now. They are playing the same every game, hard. When you do that good things happen on the court."

Not many bad things have happened to Coach Kevin Mackey and his Vikings this season.

They have posted a 29-3 mark and last week became the Cinderella team of the NCAA tournament with stunning victories over Indiana and St. Joseph's in the opening two rounds.

They did it in impressive fashion, using pressing defense and fastbreak offense that wore down opponents. It was nothing new though, the Vikings have done that all season.

And Clint Ransey has been a key to that success. The 6-foot-5 forward from Toledo, Ohio, is the club's second leading scorer with a 14.2 average.

"The great thing he had was me," said Kelvin Ransey. "Since I was ahead of him and accomplishing pretty good things in the city, I kind of gave him an incentive to want to go out and play and do better than me."

That was a tall order. After an outstanding scholastic career, Kelvin Ransey spent four years at Ohio State where he graduated as the second all-time leading scorer in the school's history.

The knowledge Kelvin picked up with the Buckeyes, he always passed on to his brother.

"As he grew I would spend more time with him, trying to show him certain things that would help him," Kelvin Ransey said. "I was always physically stronger than he was so I was able to show him techniques on how to make power moves and be stronger. I think he learned it better than I did."

Well almost.

"We play every once in a while and go at it," said Kelvin Ransey. "I usually beat him, but it's getting tougher."

One thing Clint Ransey did not share was his brother's desire to attend Ohio State. Part of that was because the Buckeyes showed little interest in a player who seemed to small to be a forward and too big to be a guard.

"I told him to make sure to go somewhere where he could play and be comfortable," said Kelvin Ransey. "Mackey showed a great interest in him and Clint felt comfortable so I was happy with his decision to go to Cleveland State."

The five-year NBA veteran says he intends to offer no trade secrets to his brother on how to play in the Byrne Arena.

"I think a player just has to come in and play his own game, no matter where it's at," he said. "I'm confident he'll play well because he has the heart to play well."

Playing well against Navy means finding a way to slow down 6-11 center David Robinson, who devastated Syracuse last Sunday in the Carrier Dome.

And, Cleveland State is going to have to stop Robinson without a player taller than 6-9.

"They just don't have the big man," said Kelvin Ransey. "That's what makes them unique. Eric Mudd (6-9) is a great player, but he's more of a forward who's doing a great job in the middle. In that aspect they are a Cinderella team."

Can Cinderella make the Final Four though?

"I'm not saying it's impossible," the elder Ransey said. "I think they can get there."

Stiff Penalties Called For

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gene Upshaw, the executive director of the National Football League Players Association, agrees with Commissioner Pete Rozelle that says the best way to halt the league's drug problem is with severe punishment.

But the union's new program doesn't seem to have solved the impasse on drugs with Pete Rozelle and the league's owners.

"The players in this league are all being accused of using drugs because of a few bad apples," Upshaw said Wednesday as the NFLPA unveiled a new program calling for progressive sanctions, with permanent suspension for three-time violators. The union program will be presented to the players for consideration next month.

"The penalties need to be tough," Upshaw said. "That's the way to control the drug problem in the NFL."

However, Jim Miller, a spokesman for the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, said there was nothing new in Upshaw's plan. "It's disappointing to us that we've been talking to them regularly trying to reach some sort of mutual agreement and they're going off unilaterally."

And Rozelle, who has threatened to impose random testing if the union doesn't agree, said in a statement released by his office:

"I do not feel that the proposals which were announced today will solve the problem."

Currently, players must submit to a drug test during the preseason and in cases where the team physician has reasonable cause to believe a player has a drug problem.

Under the union program, players who test positive during the preseason physical or "reasonable cause" test must undergo treatment by an independent facility. In addition, that player must submit to random testing for the remainder of the season and offseason.

"This is the first time the players have voted on a get-tough policy for repeated drug users in the NFL," Upshaw said. "We have a responsibility to the game of football and the society we live in."

Under the union plan, approved unanimously by the executive directors of the NFLPA on Saturday, second-time drug offenders must forfeit a paycheck for one game. If a player is tested positive for drug use a third time, he would be suspended from the league, but could appeal for reinstatement after one year before a joint committee made up of union, management and medical representatives.

"We're very serious about this," Upshaw said. "The players feel they have a responsibility to the public."

But Miller, director of administration of the Management Council, said: "We don't think this is a foundation to work with. We think we (the owners) have a foundation. We have some ideas. We would care to keep those secret, but I will say that random testing is the most important thing. We have random testing for probable cause. We want random testing for anybody, period."

The union's proposal comes a little more than a week after Rozelle declared that drugs are eroding the financial health of the league as well as the physical health of its affected players.

Upshaw said the proposal was not presented to appease Rozelle.

"We're responding to the players, who said it's time for us to take a leadership role," Upshaw said. "This is a response to the players, not Rozelle."

The program also takes steps at defining the loosely worded "reasonable cause" phrase in the current contract.

Reasonable cause would be defined as: a positive test in a pre-season physical; substantial medical or physical evidence of illegal drugs according to medical criteria; objective evidence of illegal drug use or sale by any federal, state or local law enforcement agency; or, witness by another player of the use or sale of illegal drugs, supported by a signed affidavit.

Saying "confidentiality is the cornerstone of any drug plan," Upshaw said the program would call for a private drug facility in each of the league's cities to administer the preseason urinalysis. The teams would not be advised of the results.

"It's between a player and his doctor," Upshaw said. "The medical facility will decide what's best for the player."

A player's team would, however, be notified if the player tests positive for drug use a second time.

Upshaw said the program will be presented to the league's 28 player representatives at an April 22 meeting in Hawaii and afterward will be proposed to the NFL Management Council.

SPORT LINE

To The Sports Editor:

Congratulations to the Lady Pirate basketball team on another winning year.

It tied James Madison University for first place in the regular season and came in second in the CAA after playing a very controversial final game. During and after the last game our ladies showed that they were just that — true "ladies" — in the face of the taunts, jeers and dirty play of James Madison.

I think it was a great injustice on the part of Ken Karr and ECU that our ladies were not allowed to go to the NIT in Texas after receiving an invitation. This was an honor for our team — one of the two major sports teams with winning records at ECU in the last few years.

I wonder if the answer would have been the same if it had been Charlie Harrison's men's team that was invited — no matter what size crowd they were playing in front of. How about it, Mr. Karr?

Also is it a well known fact that the ILadies are used to playing to small crowds, since the Sports Information Department and the university won't do anything on its own to promote them or let the fans do anything to promote them.

I would also like to thank the people that came to the last two home games of the Lady Pirates. Please remember the excitement of the games when basketball season rolls around again next year.

And, since this is "Pirate Club" roundup time, I might add that members can ear-mark part or all of their contributions to the Lady Pirates. There are many extras for the team that are not covered in the sports budget. If they had some extra money, they might not have to "go begging!"

Thanks again, Ladies, for another super year.

Lloyd Wins In Slims

NEW YORK (AP) — Second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd and No. 6 Pam Shriver took different routes but both moved easily into the quarterfinals of the $500,000 Virginia Slims Championships tennis tournament.

Lloyd confidently defeated Barbara Potter 6-2, 6-4, while Shriver, after dropping her first two service games and falling behind 3-0, swept through the next 12 games to oust Carling Bassett of Canada 6-3, 6-0.

Earlier, Czechoslovakia's Helena Sukova outlasted Kathy Rinaldi 6-7, 6-3, 7-6 in another first-round match.

Valvano: ISU Has Advantage

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Will Iowa State and Kansas gain an unfair advantage playing in Kemper Arena during this weekend's NCAA Midwest Regional?

Whether or not it's unfair depends on one's point of view, says Jim Valvano. But the North Carolina State coach believes it very definitely creates an advantage.

"Let's face it, we're not exactly going into friendly territory," Valvano said.

In the first NCAA semifinal at 7:37 p.m. CST on Friday, Valvano's Wolfpack goes against the Iowa State Cyclones, who played three games in Kemper earlier this month.

Top-seeded Kansas, 5-0 in Kemper this year, meets Michigan State in the other semifinal at 10:10 p.m.

Kemper may offer more than mere familiar surroundings. Being a 45-minute drive from the Jayhawks' home in Lawrence, Kan., and just a few hours from Ames, Iowa, it also provides their fans with relatively easy access.

"I don't think we should be playing Iowa State and Kansas right there," said Valvano.

The Midwest is not the only regional saddled with this particular controversy. Georgia Tech in the Southeast Regional semifinals is playing in the Omni in Atlanta, which is to the Yellow Jackets what Kemper is to the third-ranked Jayhawks.

"I don't think Georgia Tech should be playing a regional game for the Final Four in Atlanta. It really isn't fair," Valvano said. "But that's the way it falls. It will make it difficult. They will have an edge, having played there before."

Orr's Cyclones would love nothing better than a Kemper rematch against the Jayhawks on Sunday.

After splitting their home-and-home regular season series, the two Big Eight rivals met on March 9 in the title game of the conference tournament. Kansas won by two points with the help of a hotly disputed official's call at the buzzer.

"I feel good about going back to Kemper," Orr said. "We've played very well the times we've been in there. Our players like the place. It will be crowded and we'll have as many fans as can get tickets there. It will be noisier in Kemper than it was (in the first two rounds) in Minneapolis."

The Cyclones, who finished second to Kansas in the Big Eight race, seem to be taking a more sophisticated attitude toward this year's NCAA Tournament.

"A year ago was our first time, a new beginning, something that was completely different for us," Orr said. "This time, we expected to get here and we're much more ready to play."

No matter where the games were played, says Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote, Kansas would be favored.

"They're a great running team with the size to work inside and great perimeter shooters to work from the outside," Heathcote said.

"We're always trying to figure out what the other club cannot do, and adjust our game plan accordingly," Heathcote said. "Kansas is a great running team, but they also have great size. They can beat you so many different ways."

Kansas Coach Larry Brown says Michigan State, led by guard Scott Skiles, reminds him of Iowa State.

"They have the same style of play, the same quickness and athletic ability," he said. "And everybody knows how much difficulty we had with Iowa State. Skiles is a great player. He does things to help his teammates and plays with great enthusiasm. I really have a lot of respect for him."

Brown would prefer not to be the team that everybody in the Midwest Regional considers the favorite. But he knows there is nothing he can do about it.

"Everybody in the tournament is now so close to reaching the goal they've set from the first day of practice, everybody is going to be under the same kind of pressure," the Kansas coach said. "We're just going to take it one game at a time."

Celtics Set New Victory Record

By The Associated Press
There isn't much the Boston Celtics haven't done over the years in dominating the NBA.

But they never won 22 consecutive home games — at least not until Wednesday night when they defeated the Indiana Pacers 127-108 to set a franchise record for success at home.

Larry Bird scored 21 points, to go with nine rebounds and six assists, but was only the Celtics' fourth highest scorer for a change. Robert Parish scored a season-high 28 points — and grabbed 17 rebounds — while Kevin McHale had 24 points and Danny Ainge 22. Bird did, however, get the first two baskets of the game and Boston never trailed in boosting its home record to 31-1.

"We're a better team when it (the scoring) is distributed around," said Ainge. "I think sometimes we get in trouble looking for Larry too much."

The Celtics' victory was their sixth in a row — Bird averaged 36.5 points, 10.2 rebounds and 5.8 assists during the last six games — and reduced to one their magic number for clinching the Atlantic Division title. Leading 56-49, Bird had two three-point plays in a 10-4 surge that made the score 66-53. Boston led by at least nine the rest of the way.

Spurs 115, Hawks 112
Alvin Robertson soared over two Atlanta defenders for a slam-dunk with three seconds left after Dominique Wilkins put the Hawks ahead 112-111 with 12 seconds left when he hit a turnaround jump shot over three Spurs. The basket gave Wilkins 38 points. Robertson's dunk gave San Antonio a 113-112 lead and Wes Matthews added two free throws at the buzzer.

"We had a defensive breakdown which we normally wouldn't have," said Wilkins. "We certainly didn't expect Alvin to get a dunk at the end of the game."

The Spurs had lost 13 of their previous 14 games while Atlanta lost only for the second time in 11 outings. A 27-point performance by Robertson was matched by teammate David Greenwood, who scored 21 in the first half. Mike Mitchell added 23 for the Spurs.

Clippers 115, Lakers 114
Benoit Benjamin scored 28 points and reserves Franklin Edwards and Rory White combined for 21 points in the fourth quarter. With the Clippers trailing 94-80 after three periods, Edwards scored eight straight points during a 12-2 run at the start of the fourth quarter. He later finished a 6-0 run with a 20-footer to cut the lead to 108-107 with 3:43 remaining.

Benjamin tied the game 110-110 with a free throw with 1:40 to play. The game was tied twice more in the next minute before Benjamin was fouled by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and hit the winning free throw with 30 seconds left. Edwards and Marques Johnson scored 20 points each for the Clippers. Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 34.

76ers 118, Bulls 112
Julius Erving scored a season-high 29 points and made a key steal and slam-dunk in the final minute. Moses Malone also scored 29 points and Maurice Cheeks added 20 points and 13 assists.

The Bulls led 98-95 with 7:12 minutes to play but Malone scored seven straight points and Erving made a three-point play, giving Philadelphia a 105-98 lead with 5:53 left. George Gervin led Chicago with 20 points.

Nuggets 114, Pistons 98
NBA scoring leader Alex English had 35 points and sparked a Denver surge that turned back Detroit's final rally. Detroit, which lost its third straight game, trailed by 15 points after three quarters but outscored the Nuggets 11-4 to close within 92-84. English then scored six points in 34 seconds to help Denver open a safe 102-84 bulge with 6:02 to play.

Danny Schayes scored 16 points for the Nuggets in relief of Calvin Natt who aggravated a knee injury in the first period and played only five minutes. Kelly Tripucka led the Pistons with 23 points but Isiah Thomas, averaging 21.7, had only six points while shooting just 2-for-10 from the field.

Suns 108, Kings 104
Walter Davis scored 18 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter. Down 80-73 entering the final period, the Suns used eight points from Davis to take a 95-91 lead with 4:54 remaining. Sacramento tied the score 95-95 before rookie Ed Pinckney's free throw with 3:36 to go put Phoenix ahead to stay 96-95 and Mike Sanders added a layup 28 seconds later. When the Kings cut the deficit to 106-104, Davis sank two free throws at the buzzer for the final margin of victory. Sanders finished with 21 points as Phoenix moved to within three games of Sacramento in the race for the eighth and final Western Conference playoff berth. Theus paced the Kings with 25.

Friars Expect Tougher Road In NIT Quarterfinals

By The Associated Press

After a no-sweat 90-61 victory over George Mason, Providence Coach Rick Pitino figures things will get tougher in tonight's quarterfinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

"This team's much more talented than George Mason," Pitino said as he prepared his Big East basketball team for Louisiana Tech. "They're more disciplined with running their offense."

Iona Assistant Coach Rich Petriccione, whose team lost to Louisiana Tech in January, thinks the Friars will have their hands full.

"They have some exceptional athletes and they pass the ball very well. They come from one of those leagues that's stronger than people realize (Southland Conference). I think they'll match up very well with Providence."

Pitino thinks the Bulldogs might be able to handle the press better than George Mason.

"I don't think they're going to succumb right away and take their first shot," Pitino said.

In tonight's other quarterfinal games, it's Southwest Missouri State, 24-7, at Florida, 18-12, and Clemson, 19-14, at Wyoming, 22-11. On Friday night, Brigham Young, 18-13, plays at Ohio State, 16-14, in the fourth quarterfinal contest.

The winners of the semifinals get a trip to New York for the championship semifinals and finals March 24 and March 26.

Providence, 11-20 last season, has improved to 17-13 this year under Pitino, whose four key guards are 6-foot-2 or shorter. Louisiana Tech, 29-3 last season, has dipped to 18-13 under Coach Tommy Joe Eagles, whose shortest starter is 6-5.

The Bulldogs are a mediocre outside-shooting team and try to get the ball inside. They'll have to do it against a tenacious defensive press in which frequent substitutions keep the Friars fresh.

"Coach Pitino tries to offset an opponent's strengths with different defenses," guard Don Brown said, "but our strength is the matchup (zone) with man-to-man principles."

Two of Louisiana Tech's strengths last season when the Bulldogs reached the Final 16 of the NCAA Tournament were 6-9 Karl "The Mailman" Malone, now an outstanding rookie with Utah of the NBA, and 6-10 shot-blocker Willie Simmons, Sacramento's fourth-round draft choice last year.

Providence is coming off an outstanding rebounding game in Monday night's whipping of George Mason in the NIT's second round. Center Steve Wright equalled his career high of 15 rebounds and forward Dave Kipfer had a career high of 13 rebounds.

"I can't remember a game this season where so many players have had so many rebounds," said Kipfer, who led Providence with 19 points.

Southwest Missouri State is the last team to have defeated Cleveland State, which in turn shocked Indiana in the first round of the NCAA tournament and then beat St. Joseph's in the second round.

"You never have much time to scout the opposing team," Florida Coach Norm Sloan said. "But from what I've heard, they (the Bears) take the ball away a lot more than they give it away. They beat some good teams, so they're no fluke. We'll have to be on our toes."

Clemson faces an uphill climb — literally. The Tigers have to deal with the 7,200-foot altitude in Wyoming and ignore the Cowboys' raucous fans.

"Coming from the Atlantic Coast Conference, you know that Clemson can play in adverse situations," said Wyoming Coach Jim Brandenburg.

Riggins Is Not Ready To Quit

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Riggins, who once said he would walk away from football while he was healthy enough to do so, contends he's still fit enough to put off that stroll into retirement.

But Coach Joe Gibbs said Wednesday the oldest running back in the NFL will have to do his running with a team other than the Washington Redskins.

Gibbs announced Wednesday that Riggins had been placed on waivers, ending a 10-year era during which Riggins set 14 team records and led the Redskins to victory in Super Bowl XVII, when he rushed for 166 yards in a 27-17 victory over Miami.

In addition to his team records, Riggins, 36, holds the NFL record for touchdowns in a season (24) and most consecutive games rushing for a touchdown (13). He has rushed for 104 touchdowns, second only to Jim Brown, and he's fourth on the all-time rushing list with 11,352 yards.

Recently injuries began to take their toll on the 14-year veteran. After gaining more than 1,000 yards in 1983 and 1984, Riggins was plagued by back and hip problems last season, gaining just 667 yards.

He sat out the last two games as George Rogers became the one back in Washington's one-back offense.

"I viewed the films of last year and then thought for a long time before making a decision," Gibbs said. "Whether I'm right or wrong, I was convinced that it was time for John to retire."

Gibbs and Riggins met at Redskins Park Tuesday to discuss the situation. "My main concern was that the Redskins treat John the best way possible," Gibbs said.

Gibbs said he gave Riggins two options: have the team immediately announce his release, or let Riggins pursue a career with another team.

"If he couldn't latch on to another team, then he could announce his retirement," Gibbs said.

Riggins, who rarely did things by the book, chose a third option. Tuesday night at a charity event, he told the press that the Redskins "fired" him.

"It was my understanding that we'd take our time and talk through this," Gibbs said. "But John saw fit to do it his way, and that's his option."

Gibbs said he told Riggins the Redskins would not seek compensation from any team that showed an interest in him.

While Gibbs says Riggins' time is up, he pointed out that another coach might think differently.

"I really hope John can find someone else to play for," Gibbs said. "I hope he proves me wrong and goes on to play great, because he's certainly been that for us."

Alzado Is Retiring

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles Raiders defensive end Lyle Alzado has announced his retirement, admitting that time had caught up with him.

"I'm not the player I once was and I'd as soon go out now, before I try to do things that I can't do anymore," Alzado, who turns 37 on April 3, said during a news conference at a Beverly Hills hotel.

"I see players like Howie (Long) dominate the game ... I don't want to be second best and I am now."

Although he was sidelined late last season with a severed Achilles tendon, Alzado said that wasn't the reason he's retiring. He said that, because of his age, he just thought the time was right to quit football and concentrate on his acting career.

The 6-foot-3, 260-pound Alzado played 15 years in the National Football League, the last four with the Raiders. He was a key defender in the team's drive to the Super Bowl Championship in 1983.

An All-Pro selection with the Denver Broncos in 1977 and 1978, Alzado also had outstanding seasons with the Raiders. In 1984, he logged 63 tackles and was in on eight sacks.

"Although he was with us for a short time, Lyle Alzado has to go down as one of the greatest players in our organization," said Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner. "We'll miss his toughness; you can't replace that."

Alzado said he doesn't feel his tradition of "toughness" will leave the Raiders with him, commenting, "Howie's already picked it up and took off with it."

Alzado, who has appeared in numerous television shows and commercials, is scheduled to appear in an upcoming television movie and is signed for more commercials.

"I am not a good actor yet, I have a lot of things to learn," he said. "But I have a lot of people on my side."

Philippines Orders All-Out Hunt For Rebels

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A town mayor and 15 other people were killed in an upsurge of Communist guerrilla violence and the defense minister today ordered government troops to hunt down the mayor's ambushers "without letup."

Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, angered by Wednesday's ambush killing of Gonzaga Mayor Francisco Baclig in Enrile's home province of Cagayan, said he will not allow soldiers and civilians "to be butchered" by dissidents despite President Corazon Aquino's call for national reconciliation.

He ordered government troops to hunt down the ambushers "without letup until they are accounted for."

At least 130 people have been killed in rebel-related incidents since Mrs. Aquino took office Feb. 25, according to an unofficial count by The Associated Press.

Mrs. Aquino's spokesman, Rene Saguisag, told a news conference today there has actually been a "considerable" reduction in Communist rebel violence.

"Overall, the rate of casualties in the last few weeks is much lower" than in a comparable period of time

Baclig is the first official killed by guerrillas under the Aquino government which took power after a military- and church-backed popular rebellion toppled President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

A military report said Baclig, two soldier escorts, and his driver were killed when a rebel band sprayed them with automatic rifle fire in Gonzaga municipality, 250 miles north of Manila.

In a separate incident, eight people were killed Wednesday when about 300 guerrillas attacked a military detachment in Sindangan, Zamboanga del Norte, 460 miles south of Manila, the government-owned Philippine News Agency reported today, quoting military reports from the area. Three soldiers were wounded in the attack which triggered a four-hour gunbattle, PNA said.

In adjacent Zamboanga del Sur, two Army troopers and two guerrillas were killed and seven others wounded when rebels attacked another military outpost on Tuesday, PNA said.

Mrs. Aquino had promised to work out a ceasefire with insurgents and, in a gesture of goodwill, freed suspected top Communist rebel leaders and all other political prisoners immediately after assuming office.

Armed Forces Chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, in a visit to Negros island on Wednesday, urged residents to persuade guerrillas to enter into peace talks.

Mrs. Aquino has made no formal ceasefire offer and the outlawed Philippine Communist Party has not indicated what its position would be if one was made. But at least two regional rebel groups have rejected suggestions that the insurgents should lay down their arms.

Enrile, in his statement ordering military operations against the mayor's killers, said that "anyone who violates our laws must receive the challenge of the government."

"While we respect the call of our president for unity and reconciliation and we will support it to the fullest extent...We cannot allow innocent civilians and our soldiers to be butchered by dissident elements without having to account for it," Enrile said.

U.S. May Find Home For Marcos In Central America

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is negotiating with the government of Panama about the possibility that deposed Philippines president Ferdinand Marcos will move to the Central American nation, according to government sources.

The sources, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Wednesday that the U.S. effort to find a new home for Marcos had centered on Panama after he was rejected by several other nations, including Singapore, Spain, and Indonesia. Marcos is now in Hawaii.

Panama told the State Department Wednesday that Marcos would be allowed to enter the country, one source said.

Another source said "the negotiations (with Panama) are at a very sensitive stage" and had been going on for several days.

A third source said the effort to find a new home for Marcos had been initiated at Marcos' request. That source said Panama is currently the chief possibility.

But they cautioned that the move to Panama could only be temporary and said it was unclear whether Panama was willing to take Marcos permanently or for only several weeks.

Marcos has been staying at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii since shortly after he left Manila on Feb. 25, ending his 20-year rule.

Marcos and his wife, Imelda, have been staying in the officers' quarters at Hickam, but are reportedly unhappy with their lodgings. The quarters are small compared to the lavish lifestyle the pair had in Manila. The sources said Marcos is also apparently afraid that he could be subpoenaed, either by federal grand juries or by a House subcommittee investigating his huge financial empire.

When the Reagan administration offered Marcos safe haven if he left the Philippines, the offer apparently left open the possibility that Marcos would be subject to legal actions involving his finances, the sources explained. Those actions could involve subpoenas although none has yet been issued, they said.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes, asked Wednesday night if Marcos might go to Panama, "I can't confirm that."

Sandra Montenegro, spokeswoman for the Panamanian Foreign Ministry in Panama City, said in a phone interview she knew nothing about the reports on Marcos but would check.

In Hawaii, Lt. Col. Terry McCann, spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command, said, "President Marcos is still at Hickam Air Force Base and I have no information concerning any future plans regarding his departure from Hickam."

Gov. George R. Ariyoshi, who greeted Marcos as a friend when he arrived Feb. 26, told reporters Wednesday he had no information about a move to Panama but said any decision would be up to Marcos.

Earlier Wednesday, Singapore said it had offered Marcos temporary asylum but had later canceled the offer because of opposition by the government of his successor, Corazon Aquino. Singapore's ambassador to the Philippines, Abdul Aziz bin Mahmood, said in Manila that Marcos was offered temporary asylum Feb. 24, but that he had rejected that offer.

Mahmood said Marcos telephoned last Friday from Hawaii to ask if Marcos and his family could stay in Singapore for two to three weeks.

Mahmood said he asked for the position of the Aquino government on such a request and "I was informed on the same day that it was President Aquino's view that Mr. Marcos' visit to Singapore would not be helpful to her government."

Last Sunday, Europa Press quoted Inocencio Arias, the spokesman for the Spanish Foreign Ministry, as saying that the possibility of asylum there for Marcos had been dismissed several weeks ago.

"The conditions have not changed," Arias told the news agency.

Marcos Papers Show Financial Empire In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Papers brought to the United States last month by deposed Philippines president Ferdinand Marcos detail a widespread U.S. financial empire worth hundreds of millions of dollars that is so intricate it may take months to unravel, congressional sources say.

"He owns or has holdings in a number of things beyond the New York properties," one source said Wednesday, speaking on condition of anonymity and referring to five New York area real estate holdings worth an estimated $350 million.

The House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs tentatively planned today to make public most of the 2,089 documents taken by Marcos to Hawaii when he fled Manila last month after his 20-year reign collapsed.

"I want to make as much of this public as soon as possible," said Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the panel. Solarz and subcommittee investigators met Wednesday with officials from the Justice Department's criminal division, which has copies of the documents.

The documents also were provided to the Commission on Good Government, a Philippines investigating panel appointed by Marcos' successor, Corazon Aquino, to probe a Marcos financial empire that commission president Jovito Salonga has estimated could be worth $5 billion to $10 billion.

One of the documents detailed contributions purportedly made to U.S. politicians, including $50,000 each to the 1980 presidential campaigns of Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter, along with $10,000 to the 1980 re-election campaign of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Spokesmen for Reagan and Carter denied Wednesday that the campaigns had received the money, and Cranston, a long-standing critic of Marcos, also said he hadn't received any money.

It is illegal for foreign nationals to contribute to U.S. political campaigns, and it also is against the law for American campaigns to accept such foreign contributions.

The subcommittee has been investigating Marcos' New York real estate dealings, but it will expand its probe because of information in the documents, Solarz said.

The panel has asked the General Accounting Office, the congressional watchdog agency, to investigate the Redwood National Bank of San Francisco because of information linking Marcos to the bank. The institution is owned by two Filipino businessmen.

Salonga met with the House panel Wednesday and said the papers detail what he said are "kickbacks paid by foreign corporations in public works equipment."

Although several Japanese companies were named, the only American company listed was the Westinghouse Corp., the sources said.

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

Reagan Vows Acid Rain Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney has gotten President Reagan to do something that years of effort by U.S. environmental groups could not achieve: a promise to act against acid rain.

It's only a promise, but it's a big one: $5 billion over five years from U.S. government and industry to install "clean coal" technology into the nation's power plants.

"I fully endorse" the report of two special envoys that recommended the program in January, Reagan said in a meeting with Mulroney on Wednesday.

The meeting was to sign a five-year renewal of the long-standing U.S.-Canadian NORAD air-defense agreement.

Reagan did not go into details on acid rain, and a White House statement said "the administration will seek to provide in the future the funding recommended in the joint report."

Just how that will be done in a time of tight budgets has not been decided yet, spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters. He noted that the administration has $400 million available for clean coal demonstration projects over three years and was planning on $700 million for coal research of all kinds over five years.

"I view the president's statement today as new and very significant on the long and difficult road toward protecting our two environments," Mulroney told reporters.

There are no estimates of how much clean air can be bought by $5 billion in clean coal "technology demonstration" projects. Mulroney responded sharply to suggestions from environmentalists, relayed through reporters' questions, that the program might mean no reductions.

"That's silly," he said.

Energy Department spokesman Jack Porter said it was not even clear that all the money in the $400 million pot could be used for emission reduction projects because of congressional requirements that a broad spectrum of projects be solicited.

"I expect we will be getting some directives from the White House in a few days," he said.

It was a clear turnaround for Reagan, who until now has maintained that more research into the effects of acid rain was needed before any control program could be designed.

Environmentalists were not impressed, though, by the president's conversion.

"It's a pleasure that the president has joined the mainstream of American thought on acid rain," said Bob Rose, spokesman for the Clean Air Coalition. "We certainly hope his next step will be joining the mainstream on controlling the pollution that causes it."

Adele Hurley of the Canadian Coalition on Acid Rain said Reagan's announcement was "a great public relations event but it won't save lakes or fish... once this two-day puff of smoke blows over, we're back to what really counts in this town, Congress."

Mulroney said congressional leaders had assured him of prompt and favorable action on any legislative initiative from the president.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., a chief House player in the acid rain issue because he is chairman of the health and environment subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said he welcomed the president's "change of view," but the course chosen "will accomplish nothing now and shouldn't be seen as an accomplishment."

Industry was delighted. Edison Electric Institute vice president John Kearney said the program was "a sensible way to build on the U.S. record of pollution control."

Mulroney and his predecessors for years have been seeking large reductions in U.S. emissions of the pollutants that form acid rain: sulfur dioxide from coal-burning factories and utilities and nitrogen oxides from factories and motor vehicles.

Drug May Bring On Weight Loss Without Diet

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — If an anti-depression drug called Prozac lives up to the promise of early test results, it could be every chubby person's dream — a pill that melts away pounds without dieting.

The pharmaceutical firm Eli Lilly & Co. Inc. disclosed sketchy but enticing details of the medicine in its annual report, released Feb. 26. And the news drove up the company's stock on Wednesday.

The medicine is not yet available for routine use. Lilly has asked the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to approve it as a treatment for depression. The company says Prozac's potential use in obesity is also being studied, but it hasn't requested permission to sell it for this problem.

However, one stock analyst noted that even if Prozac proves effective against fat, it may still be hampered by troubling side effects, including nausea and nervousness.

Prozac, known generically as fluoxetine, is a "serotonin uptake inhibitor." Serotonin is a neurotransmitter, a chemical that the brain uses to send signals between nerve cells. The drug seems to work by blocking the brain's reabsorption of this chemical.

The company did not specify how this effect might promote weight loss.

In the annual report, Lilly said, "Because of its extraordinary selectivity in its effects on the brain neurochemical system, fluoxetine looks promising as therapy for several other disorders that appear to involve serotonin neurotransmission."

The report said that when the drug was tested for depression, many patients lost weight, and the same thing happened during animal studies.

"Initial results of carefully controlled clinical trials, which involved more than 900 people, have shown that loss of weight for obese individuals occurred without imposing dietary restrictions," it said.

At Lilly headquarters in Indianapolis, spokeswoman Patricia Cowell-Hanover declined to disclose further information about the obesity study or say who was directing the research.

Technology Opens New World To Handicapped

Voice-Activated Computer Helps Retarded

By KIT FRIEDEN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Shirley Jennings, profoundly retarded, her body shrunken and jerked by spastic motion, gazed up in wonder at the simple scenes of home being played on the television monitor.

On a home movie, she watched her sister showing off a new car, heard her brother-in-law making jokes about "Mama's housekeeping" and saw her mother getting ready to give the dogs a bath.

She recognized the people, and with sounds that were barely intelligible, she called them by name and laughed with delight.

But the greatest joy for Miss Jennings was not simply watching scenes of her family. It was being able to select the videotape and turn it on and off at will.

For the first time in her 42 years, Shirley Jennings had control over a tiny portion of her difficult, dependent life.

Miss Jennings, who lives at the Fort Worth State School, has an estimated IQ of 19, is afflicted with cerebral palsy and is bedridden with several handicaps.

Now, researchers have created a voice-activated computer system that enables her — and ultimately other retarded people with minimal verbal skills — to turn on such simple appliances as a radio, a TV monitor, an electric fan and a massage pad.

"Hopefully, in six months or so we will have a really sophisticated, Cadillac version" of Shirley's computer system, said Carrie Brown, a special education teacher turned researcher.

Brown is assistant director of the bio-engineering project at the Association for Retarded Citizens of the United States, based in nearby Arlington, which adapted the computer system for Miss Jennings.

Over the past two years, the ARC hired Brown and another expert to develop affordable devices to aid the retarded.

"I've learned there are people like Shirley who are locked inside a body that will not function," said Brown, who has become a friend of Miss Jennings while developing the voice-activated system.

With her expressive face, her eyes and body movement, Miss Jennings is able to "talk" to Brown, who seems to comprehend a great deal.

Still, difficulties abound.

"There were times with Shirley when I was just ready to throw in the towel and say this will not work. It was grueling. I never thought it was any defect on her part. It was the primitive system we were using," Brown said.

"We actually did not think it would work because she's so limited. When it did work, it was beyond our expectations."

There are many ways to express joy. The day Miss Jennings was successful with the voice computer, she shrieked with delight. Carrie Brown and her assistants wept.

By uttering the word "four," Miss Jennings had turned on a videotape of cartoons.

"We felt if we could get the system to work for someone like Shirley, it would really open doors for other people not as handicapped," said Brown.

In the beginning, the challenge was to find specific sounds that Miss Jennings could make consistently.

Using a head-fitted microphone connected to a computer via a voice activation system developed by Denton-based Scott Instruments, Miss Jennings ran through her repertoire of sounds, coached by Brown and her associates.

They conducted two or three sessions a day for six weeks. "She would be so exhausted, as would we," Brown said.

Through trial and error, the researchers determined there were five sounds Miss Jennings could repeat. Each sound was then programmed to operate one of the appliances.

A word sounding like "four" was used to turn on a cartoon film; "move" was used to turn on a vibrating massage pad; "ray" was used for the radio; "bee" was used to activate the home movie, and "off" was used in all cases to turn off the appliances.

Again through trial and error, Miss Jennings determined which sounds were linked to which devices and began making decisions about which to operate.

She prefers the videotape of her family, choosing it most often.

The next step in refining the computer system will be to make it portable, with a lap computer, and more advanced in translating sounds.

For example, the system could translate non-speech into a whole sentence. If a person's sound for water is "guh," the system would respond by repeating the sentence, "I would like a glass of water, please," an ARC report explains.

The components of Miss Jennings' system cost about $2,300, Brown said, excluding the costly development of software.

ARC bio-engineering director Al Cavalier said the association has other new products in the works that are designed to aid the retarded and many who are physically handicapped.

All the devices are designed to be affordable to school districts, institutions and even families, Cavalier said.

Items in the works include: — A system through which a user would make selections by gazing at a terminal screen equipped with a camera that reads a reflection off the cornea.

— A "bladder sensor" being constructed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration that uses sensors attached to the skin in the bladder area, connected to a device that would use beeps or vibrations to help individuals with bladder control problems.

— A special feeding device for people unable to use their hands that consists of an elevated plate divided into three sections, with attached spoons at mouth-level. That device allows the user to eat at a chosen pace and select which food to eat next, rather than being spoon-fed by a hurried institutional worker.

Brown said such devices are an effort to aid the handicapped, who are "often denied basic human rights and freedoms or (are) simply ignored. We're striving to open some doors for them."

Heart Problems ... Eat Italian

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — People who want to ward off heart disease but can't stand the tasteless tedium of very low-fat diets might consider a researcher's suggestion: Eat Italian.

Dr. Scott M. Grundy said he has evidence that fats called mono-unsaturates — among them olive oil — reduce cholesterol levels in the blood.

Olive oil is a key ingredient of meals prepared in Mediterranean regions such as southern Italy and Greece, where heart disease is relatively rare.

"This paper supports the concept that a Mediterranean-type diet, high in mono-unsaturates, represents a reasonable alternative to a very low-fat diet for Americans," Grundy said of his research, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

"We may have been a little too rigid in our dietary recommendations, saying that everybody has to eat the same diet to get the benefit of cholesterol lowering."

Like olive oil, peanut oil is naturally high in mono-unsaturates. Sunflower oil and safflower oil could also be processed to be rich in mono-unsaturates, Grundy said.

But even a diet high in mono-unsaturates would still have to be low in saturated fat, and people would have to be careful that they didn't put on weight by eating calorie-laden fat.

The American Heart Association recommends that people with elevated cholesterol levels limit fat intake to 20 percent of their daily calories. Americans typically get 40 percent of their calories from fat, nearly half of it saturated fat.

Saturated fat raises levels of blood cholesterol, which clogs arteries that feed the heart, causing heart disease.

The heart association isn't likely to change its dietary guidelines because of the latest findings, said Dr. W. Virgil Brown of New York's Mount Sinai Medical Center, chairman of the association's nutrition committee.

However, Brown said a diet high in mono-unsaturates and low in saturated fat may be useful because people may be more likely to stick to it. Among foods that are high in saturated fat are coconut and palm oil, butter, whole milk and meat fat.

"Over the long term, you may be able to sustain a lower (cholesterol) level purely on the practical grounds that people will eat it," he said. "That's probably the major reason that this is an important paper."

Grundy conducted his study at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Dallas on 11 middle-aged men and women who consumed three liquid formulas, each for one month.

A high-saturated fat formula and high-mono-unsaturated fat formula were each 40 percent fat, 43 percent carbohydrate and 17 percent protein. In the saturated fat diet, the fat was 25 percent saturated, 8 percent monosaturated and 7 percent polyunsaturated. In the mono-unsaturated diet, it was 28 percent mono-unsaturated, 8 percent polyunsaturated and 4 percent saturated.

The low-fat diet was 63 percent carbohydrate, 17 percent protein and 20 percent fat. The fat was divided equally between saturated, mono-unsaturated and polyunsaturated.

Studies show that people's risk of heart disease begins to rise sharply when their cholesterol levels exceed 200 milligrams per deciliter of blood. The cholesterol levels of the people studied averaged 251 before the experiment began.

When compared with the saturated fat diet, the mono-unsaturated fat regimen lowered cholesterol levels by 13 percent, and the low-fat diet lowered them by 8 percent.

Cholesterol is carried through the bloodstream by substances called lipoproteins. Low-density lipoprotein, or LDL, tends to increase the risk of heart disease, while high-density lipoprotein, or HDL, protects people from heart trouble.

Both the mono-unsaturated and the low-fat diets lowered LDL. However, the low-fat diet also lowered HDL levels, while the mono-unsaturated diet did not.

PBS Six-Part 'Mystery!' Series Premieres Tonight

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The two English gentlemen made their first brief appearance in Alfred Hitchcock's 1938 movie "The Lady Vanishes." Later, they had an encore appearance in "Night Train to Munich." For a time they had a radio series in Britain.

More than a generation later, they've been plucked from obscurity by writer Keith Waterhouse and given a television series, not unlike Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, two peripheral characters from "Hamlet" who got their own play. The gentlemen are "Charters and Caldicott," two puttering, retired Englishmen who make their debut tonight in "Mystery!" on public television.

Robin Bailey plays Charters, and Michael Aldridge is Caldicott in this modern comedy-thriller of six one-hour episodes. It was Waterhouse, the author of "Billy Liar," who had the idea of bringing back these two characters and make them older.

"They were originally in their middle to late 30s. Now they're in their 60s," Aldridge said. "In the movie they were just passengers on the train. They were on the edge of the mystery. It was a distraction from the main event, about getting back to England for a cricket test match. And they kept asking the most unlikely people on the train what was the latest score."

One of their charms is that they are so thoroughly English gentlemen "and they have civilized interests such as cricket," Aldridge said. "They get involved in the mysteries by chance because they are not detectives. For instance, a lady is found dead in Caldicott's flat."

"We find it an unnecessary and impolite interruption to our activities," Bailey added. In the series the two gentlemen once worked for "HMG," or Her Majesty's Government. They were in the Foreign Office, in relatively safe capacities where they couldn't make trouble. Caldicott has a flat in London and Charters has a cottage in the country.

"They meet the first Tuesday of every month," Bailey said. "They have lunch at a club where they both have memberships. And they go to the cinema in the afternoons. Caldicott is a permanent bachelor, but Charters is a widower."

Charters and Caldicott are equals in the show and what inspiration they get strikes them equally.

"The way we get involved is we believe the dead girl found in my flat was the daughter of a friend of ours," Aldridge said. "We were executors of his estate. Each time we think we've got it solved we find another body."

"The two characters do not find the modern world easy," Bailey said. "They still wish it was 1935. The place where they go to eat is a serve-yourself place with paper cups for tea and milk cartons you can't open. The seats slope to get you out as quickly as possible."

Field Wide Open For Best Actor

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sipping champagne and looking uncomfortable, Jack Nicholson leaned against the bar at the Academy Award nominees luncheon and surveyed the media clamor that greeted the famous arrivals.

"This isn't my sort of thing," he muttered. "I'm doing it for Anjelica."

Anjelica is Anjelica Huston, the love of his life. John Huston is her father. The Hustons and Nicholson were all nominated for their work in "Prizzi's Honor," a film for which Nicholson has made himself uncommonly visible.

"I'm really devoted to that film," he said.

Nicholson is no stranger to the Oscar, having been nominated eight times and winning twice — as best actor in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" (1975) and best supporting actor in "Terms of Endearment" (1983).

"Murphy's Romance"; William Hurt, the gay movie fanatic of "Kiss of the Spider Woman"; Harrison Ford, the hardbitten Philadelphia cop in "Witness"; Jon Voight, the demonic escapee in "Runaway Train."

Voight won as best actor in 1978 for "Coming Home." Hurt, Ford and Garner are first-time nominees.

"I guess I made it look too easy all along," mused Garner at the nominees luncheon in the Beverly Hilton ballroom.

Customarily a modest man, the Oklahoma-born actor obviously enjoyed being recognized by his peers after three decades in films. "All these years folks have been saying, 'Good ole Jim, he'll come through, but we can't really take him seriously as an actor because he's just playing himself.' Well, now maybe they believe there could be a little skill involved," he said.

Proceeds raised during the performances will be donated to the New York Coalition for the Homeless. (AP Laserphoto)

"This year is different," he said. "This is the first time I've known all the other guys personally. And they all were great. I couldn't begin to predict which one is going to win."

Neither can veteran Oscar seers. The field: Nicholson as the oddball hit man of "Prizzi's Honor"; James Garner, the mellow druggist of

NEW YORK (AP) — Like a hit television program that has lots of life left when it voluntarily leaves the air, Chairman Grant Tinker plans to leave NBC soon — while the network is still on top.

Tinker expects General Electric Co.'s acquisition of NBC's parent, RCA Corp., to be finalized in August, and he added in a Wednesday interview, "Very soon thereafter I will tell what part of the world that cares that I'm ready to go."

"I'm not hiding it," he said. "For those people who have a little difficulty dealing with it, I'm trying not only to get them into the idea but I'm trying to persuade everybody that they'll never miss me when I'm gone."

Tinker said in a later telephone call to The Associated Press that he did not mean to suggest he would leave NBC as soon as the merger is completed. He stressed that he does not want to leave without an orderly transfer of power, but after the merger is final, he said, "Then it will be time for Tinker to think about Tinker."

Tinker, 60, intends to return to the production part of the business. He was president of the highly regarded MTM Enterprises before joining NBC as chairman in July 1981. His five-year contract ends this summer.

Under Tinker's patient guidance, NBC created a group of Emmy Award-winning programs, including "The Cosby Show," "Cheers" and "St. Elsewhere," that appealed to the young, urban viewers that advertisers coveted.

Then, after 10 seasons in third place, NBC moved into second in prime-time ratings last season. This season, which ends April 20, NBC will claim its first outright victory in prime time ever, ending CBS' six-season reign.

Profits also soared during Tinker's administration. In 1981, the last year that Tinker's predecessor, Fred Silverman, was in charge, NBC's profits had fallen to $48.1 million from a 1977 high of $152 million. Last year, NBC's profits climbed to a record $333 million.

Defense is the most difficult facet of bridge. Let's take you through a hand to show you how an expert defender considers the possibilities.

Note South's jump response to his partner's takeout double. It is invitational, not forcing. It doesn't even promise a five-card suit, since South is, in effect, supporting the heart suit that North announced with his takeout double of one spade. Its range is about 10-12 points.

There is no reason for West to make any lead other than the normal king of spades. When that holds the trick, it is time to assess the defense's chances.

The obvious three tricks are the spade already won, the ace of diamonds and a club. Where is the setting trick to come from?

Clearly, there is no chance of a trump trick. Even if East does have an honor, it will be picked up with a finesse. Also, West can see that his side has no second trick in either spades or diamonds, and that dummy's diamond suit will provide declarer with several discards.

Therefore, the only possible chance for another trick is in clubs. And for that to happen, East must hold the ten of clubs and declare the nine, and the suit must be attacked at once. At trick two, West must shift to his low club!

Now, let's look at declarer's problem. West is twice as likely to hold either the K-10 or Q-10 of clubs rather than specifically the K-Q. The percentage play to prevent the loss of two club tricks, therefore, is to play low from dummy, in the hope that you will fetch an honor from East.

As the cards lie, East's ten will win the trick. He need only return a club to insure that the defenders get the four tricks that are their due.

FOCUS

Nativism

Today, about 40 percent of all Americans have ancestors who entered the nation through Ellis Island. In a nation of immigrants, immigration laws have always stirred controversy. Immigration was severely restricted in the 1920s. But these limits were eased in 1965. When Congress was considering further revisions in the late 1960s, one Indian warned Vice-President Hubert Humphrey: "Be careful in revising those immigration laws of yours. We got careless with ours."

DO YOU KNOW — What nation sends the largest share of illegal immigrants to the U.S.?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Daniel Ortega is the President of Nicaragua.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, MARCH 21, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Spring is here! A day to get into all the various aspects of the new plans and events you want to put into motion and to be a part of this new season.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study into new interests and investments that appeal to you, but you do not have sufficient funds for such as yet.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can have more harmony and happiness at home if you do not permit an associate to interfere.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A problematical affair at your job has to be solved early, but later you can accomplish a great deal.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Plan to save more money and avoid heavy expenditures for pleasure, and be wise about it.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't let a home situation keep you from accomplishing a good deal in the outside business world.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't waste time with some unimportant person in your life and plan how to become more successful by making the right contacts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Avoid that financial problem today and be more concerned with the personal side of life. Be more generous.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Listen to one who has been very successful and put away any prejudice you may have that could deter your progress.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do not permit some secret worry to delay your advancement in the outside world. Make new contacts of worth.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Avoid a demanding person, but be sure to listen to the advice of one in business who is interested in your welfare.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Avoid that bigwig who is full of anger, or you could get the brunt of it. Be with partners whom you can trust.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study your environment and see how best to improve it instead of going off on some tangent.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she has the ability to get to the top of the ladder in the chosen career so long as you teach to put away prejudices that could become stumbling blocks in the path of progress. Give as fine an academic education as you can and teach to have a generosity of spirit with others.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Pilots Are Told To Pay For Sodas

DENVER (AP) — Frontier Airlines' plan to charge its pilots for soft drinks has bubbled up into a labor dispute, a newspaper reported.

Members of the Air Line Pilots Association are preparing to file a grievance against the Denver-based carrier, charging that Frontier is illegally charging its pilots 50 cents for each soft drink consumed on board, The Denver Post said today.

Frontier last week joined the no-frills approach of its parent company, People Express, and is charging passengers for sodas, meals and checked baggage.

Now, industry sources told The Post, the carrier is using a loophole in the union agreement that provides for free meals, hot water and coffee for 800 pilots, but doesn't specifically mention soda pop.

Marilyn Mishkin, a Frontier spokeswoman, said the protest left the company feeling flat.
