Congress OKs Leaf Support Bill

By STEVE SWIFT
Associated Press Writer

After months of haggling, Congress has revised the government's tobacco price-support program, and domestic growers hope it will give their leaf a better chance of competing against cheaper foreign tobacco.

The measure, which will let the government write off about $1 billion in loans to growers, cleared the House on Thursday night.

It was one of many items in a complicated bill whose key provision was an $18 billion deficit-reduction package.

In addition to trimming guaranteed federal price supports, the new tobacco program reduces the no-net-cost fee charged growers and requires tobacco companies to share future costs of the program.

It will let U.S. tobacco companies purchase the current surplus of domestic leaf, estimated to be about 750 million pounds, at reduced prices and it doubles the federal tax on cigarettes to 16 cents a pack.

"I think it means we've got a new chance with the tobacco program," said Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky. "I think it's the single best thing that's happened to the tobacco farmer in at least the last eight or 10 years."

Not all members of the congressional tobacco lobby were as enthusiastic as McConnell.

The measure gives cigarette makers too much control over domestic production quotas without putting any restrictions on their importation of foreign tobacco, said Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., whose state is the nation's leading tobacco producer.

Nevertheless, Rose hoped for the best.

"If the cigarette manufacturer will implement this law by following its provisions and cut back voluntarily on imports of foreign tobacco, there is no reason why we can't have peace within the tobacco family," said Rose, chairman of the House tobacco and peanuts subcommittee.

Price support levels will fall to an average of about $1.49 per pound for burley tobacco and $1.44 per pound for flue-cured tobacco.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., was glad Congress approved the program before next week's referendum in which burley growers are to decide if they want to continue the price-support program. The referendum is held every three years.

"When the cards go out for this month's referendum, this new program is what they'll be voting on, so our goal was met," Ford said. "The president's signature will give them what they've worked toward for nearly two years, and these farmers deserve a great deal of praise."

Flue-cured farmers, most of whom live in North Carolina, voted earlier to continue the support system, without knowing what type of program they would have.

As for the cigarette tax, the legislation makes it permanent at 16 cents a pack. The levy had dropped to 8 cents on Saturday because of the impasse, but a provision of the bill makes the tax hike retroactive so no revenues will be lost.

"This legislation will not solve all of the problems our tobacco economy faces in the years ahead, but it is an important means of keeping the tobacco program viable for thousands of smaller tobacco growers," said Rep. Harold "Hal" Rogers, R-Ky.

Farmers Can Now Move With Crops

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Although the tobacco program approved by Congress Thursday may not be ideal, it's better than no program at all, spokesmen at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service office said this morning.

"It will give them (farmers) some direction and I just hope the president will sign it," Leroy James, county extension service chairman, said. "I think we can get on" with the job of producing a crop now.

James said the passage of the program will let farmers "move on and make some sound decisions" about what they are going to do this year. "It's awfully important for this year's crop."

Growers last week, without knowing what the tobacco program would be, voted to continue the federal price support and production quota system.

The bill Congress approved Thursday cuts price supports from $1.72 per pound to $1.44, reduces the "no-net cost" assessment paid by growers for the program from 32 cents to a few pennies, makes permanent the 16-cents per pack federal cigarette tax, and requires tobacco companies to share future costs of the program.

Mitch Smith, tobacco specialist with the extension service, said there has been "a lot of frustration because of a lot of uncertainty." But he suggested this morning that "as far as the effect" of the program passed Thursday, there won't be "a lot of difference (in) the take home part of the warehouse check" this year as compared with last year. "The effective price will be about the same as in 1985," he suggested.

"The main question" still to be answered, Smith said is, what kind of effect the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-balancing bill is going to have on the program. "It's real unclear to me how Gramm-Rudman will affect the support level."

"Gramm-Rudman really complicates the situation," Smith said. "It might reduce the price support level, but we can't assume that."

Earlier this month, Smith suggested that from the farmers standpoint any program for tobacco would be better than no program at all.

"You might think of what would happen" if there were no support program, Smith said, suggesting that North Carolina, which produces two-thirds of the nation's flue cured tobacco, could lose its dominance to more "Southern areas of the country" such as Georgia, which has the capacity for two crops a year.

Another possibility, Smith said, might be contract growing. "Many other countries operate on a contractual basis. Without quota control and price support, there might be contracts."

Record Funding Tallied At ECU

ECU News Bureau

A record $2 million in outside funding was reported by East Carolina University during February — monies which will support 27 research, instruction and service projects at ECU.

The primary sources of funding were federal and state government agencies, with other funding granted by private sources. "Outside funding" is the term applied to monies given for special projects not supported by normal state appropriations.

"This is the first month ever that reported awards exceeded $2 million," said Robert Franke, director of ECU's Office of Sponsored Programs. "Also significantly higher is the number of professors seeking funds from the various sources."

Franke said a major portion of the $2 million in grants and contracts reported during February are "continuation" funds for ongoing projects, primarily in the health care and coastal science areas. Specifically, ECU's medical, allied health, home economics and nursing schools received $1,499,156 worth of contracts with the Eastern Area Health Education Center. A total of $122,347 in National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration-Sea Grant funding was reported for research by ECU scientists in coastal and marine related fields.

"Our Sea Grant funds would have been three times as large as those we actually received, but for last-minute cutbacks," Franke said. He explained that the cutbacks were the result of officials' uncertainties in the wake of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget act.

"We anticipate further cutbacks in federal funding later this year as the full effects of the act become known," he said.

"However, at this point, we are pleased to be receiving such a significant amount of support for our projects."

Franke noted that February also saw a high number of ECU faculty members submitting funding proposals — more than 50 were completed and mailed to potential funding agencies during the month.

Students' Scores Likely To Drop On New Testing

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

A new version of the California Achievement Test being administered in North Carolina this year is likely to drop overall scores, but Pitt County education officials say the decline is not reflective of a decline in the quality of instruction.

"Each time a new test is given it is normed," said Arlene Ferren, coordinator of pupil services for the Pitt County Schools. "We're going to see how our students compare to the sample group of 1985 that has taken the test. We anticipate some decline, but that doesn't mean our instruction is not improving."

Dr. Donald Ross Green, senior research psychologist and director of research for McGraw-Hill, publisher of the test, spoke about the new test, the CAT-E, at a special session of the North Carolina Association of Researchers in Education during a meeting of the North Carolina Testing Commission in the Brody Building Thursday.

The CAT-E test, which was administered to a national sample of 500,000 students to create the new norm, has replaced the CAT-C test, which has been used across the nation since 1977. A norm is the standard model or pattern regarded as typical.

"I don't want people going around saying CAT-E is a harder test than CAT-C. That gets misunderstood," Green said. "It has harder norms, but the tests aren't more difficult. The norms are more difficult."

Results on the test are expected to decline nationally in the newly normed standardized achievement test. It will be administered in North Carolina schools during April 1-15 in grades 1, 2, 3, 6 and 8.

Most recent data from McGraw-Hill indicates an estimated 11 percentile rank drop can be expected at most grades because of the difficulty of the new test.

State averages are expected to be at or just above the 50th percentile, according to the Department of Public Instruction research staff.

Meanwhile, education officials say recent gains in the education system will not be immediately evident on the new test.

"After seeing statewide averages for the last three years, it looks as though there has been very little change," Green said. "North Carolina schools, on the average, look as though they are slightly above the national average or at the national average over those three years. Hopefully, in the next few years those numbers will go up."

"Some people may say the students are doing worse," he said. "They're not doing worse. They're just being compared to a higher standard."

Deputy Superintendent of Pitt Schools John McKnight said the impact of the lower scores will have little impact on programs.

"Initially, any new test has the potential for lowering scores," McKnight said. "But it will have no effect on programs."

"Students who qualify for programs for gifted students usually score quite well on the test," he said.

RING RETURNED

I am overwhelmed by the integrity and consideration of the management of Riverside Oyster Bar and Restaurant. Recently I had a meal there and dropped some things as I was paying the cashier. It was the next Sunday morning before I discovered that a valuable ring of my late husband's that I carry in my purse was missing. I remembered dropping the things at Riverside, so I went there Sunday and told them what happened and described the ring. They handed it to me. They'd had it in a safe place waiting for the proper person to call for it. I cannot adequately express how grateful I am that there are people like this in the world. Mrs. V.P.

Ayden-Grifton Awaits Saturday

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Ayden-Grifton High School basketball squad is scheduled to play for the state 2-A championship on Saturday, and the mayors of both towns say they are proud but not surprised by the team's success.

"We're mighty proud of them," Ayden Mayor Marvin "Bear" Baldree said. "We have a history of championships in basketball, football and baseball. It's something we're used to."

"They are a wonderful team," Grifton Mayor Ralph Thaxton said. "I think it's just great."

The Chargers are scheduled to meet North Rowan at the Dean E. Smith Activities Center in Chapel Hill at 3:30 p.m. for the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's 2-A title.

Baldree said the team has many of the qualities needed for a team to go all the way to the state finals.

"It's been a real team effort," he said. "They've beaten higher-ranked teams due to desire and good coaching. That has brought them to the point they are at."

And Thaxton said the basketball team's success extends beyond the court.

"It speaks a lot for our community," Thaxton said. "I wish them all the luck, and I hope a lot of people support them and follow them."

Meanwhile, Ayden-Grifton Principal Bill Wiggins believes the success of the team instills a good feeling among the students and faculty.

"We're extremely proud of our basketball team and coaching staff," Wiggins said. "We're elated as a school to be represented by them."

The staff's and players' dedication has led them to their goals and levels of expectations,"

Wiggins said. "They give of themselves and don't hold back."

Wiggins said the Chargers' success on the basketball court has made one of his jobs easier. "It certainly underscores our goal to build pride in the school, the student body and the community," he said.

In an effort to bring more local supporters to the game, area fan Sam Best organized a bus trip to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill campus.

"People who hadn't planned to go will now go," Best said. "The bus trip allows them to go for a small fee. It's cheaper to take the bus."

The cost of the bus ride to the game and back is $8, and tickets to the game can be purchased for $4, according to Best.

"This way, anyone who wants to go now has a chance," Best said. "We just hope everyone will go and support the team."

Soviet Girl Hopes Visit To America Will Promote Peace

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — An 11-year-old Soviet girl whose U.S. tour recalls the international journey for peace of Samantha Smith began her visit by telling the adults and children who greeted her, "I hope we will be friends."

Katya Lycheva set foot on American soil for the first time Thursday night at O'Hare International Airport and was met by Star Rowe, 10, of San Francisco, who gave her 10 white roses and said in well-rehearsed Russian: "Welcome to our country. We will work together for peace."

The fifth-grader was accompanied by her mother, an interpreter, the general secretary of the Soviet Peace Committee, and Patricia Montandon, the executive director of the U.S.-based Children as the Peacemakers Foundation, the sponsor of Katya's trip.

"We're building a bridge instead of a wall," Ms. Montandon said as she introduced the entourage.

Katya, who had just completed the 18-hour journey from her home in Moscow, was beginning a two-week trip that will include visits to New York, Washington, Houston and Los Angeles.

In reply to Star's welcome, she said in English: "Thank you very much. I'm very glad to see you. I hope we will be friends."

She said she hoped to tell American children as much as she could about her homeland, which Samantha visited in 1983.

Her Chicago visit was to include breakfast today at a hotel, lunch with sixth-graders and a chat with Mayor Harold Washington.

Also planned were a trip to the Statue of Liberty; a day at Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif.; a Texas-style barbecue; and a meal at a McDonald's restaurant.

Katya attends Special English School No. 4 in Moscow, where children start studying English in the second grade.

Before her departure from Moscow, she said she hoped her "journey would contribute even just a little bit toward the cause of peace."

Her departure Thursday evening was carried on Soviet television, spliced with the footage from Samantha's visit to Moscow three years ago.

The Soviet news agency, Tass, said Katya was bringing with her to the United States paper "peace doves," with the name and address of a Soviet child written on one wing. Katya hopes to get American children's names and addresses on the other wings to arrange pen-pals for friends in Moscow.

Children at the Peacemakers Foundation asked the Moscow City Young Pioneers Palace to select a candidate for the journey, and Katya was chosen from among young peace activists of the international friendship club.

Tass said the group was asked to recommend a child involved in anti-war activities who was no older than Samantha, who was 11 when she visited the Soviet Union for two weeks in July 1983.

Samantha, who was invited to Moscow after she wrote a letter to then-Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov, died last August in a plane crash.

Dear Abby — By Abigail Van Buren

Humane Society Causes Kids To Yowl

DEAR ABBY: On Valentine's Day, my husband and I took our two daughters (5 and 2) for a follow-up appointment at the pediatrician's, and left the office feeling glum. Our 5-year-old had been pleading for a kitten for several months, so we decided to take the advice in your St. Valentine's Day column and adopt a pet. We went to our Humane Society to get a kitten. We learned that the kitten we selected would cost $45, which included initial shots and spaying/neutering at six months of age. We'd just written our last check at the doctor's office, so my husband and I counted our monies and came up with $43.78 cash.

Abby, they let us walk out with two crying girls. We could have given that kitten a perfect home, but being short $1.22 stood in our way. Is that crazy or am I crazy?
FEELING BAD IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR FEELING: You are not crazy, and I cannot imagine the people at the Humane Society being so insensitive and petty. You failed to indicate in which Birmingham you live. There's one in Alabama, Canada, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Michigan and New Jersey. Please write again and let me know. I'll send the $1.22, and if you don't get your kitten, fur will fly.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Nameless, Please," who was tempted to meet the girl whose voice he'd heard daily on the telephone, brought back some happy memories. In the spring of 1918, I was working on the switchboard at the local power company. Every day I took the morning report from a young engineer with a very pleasant voice. One day he appeared in person—wanting to find out if I was as sweet as my voice! After we visited a while, he invited me to go out dancing. I was a little hesitant to accept before knowing him better, so he told me I could bring my older sister and he would bring his friend along for her.

I knew at once that this was the man I had been waiting for. That first date led to our marriage four months later. We were happily married for 60 years—until his death.

I thank my lucky stars that he was curious enough to want to meet the girl behind the voice on the telephone.

P.S. Dear Abby: I typed this letter for my grandmother who just celebrated her 94th birthday. She reads your column every day.

MRS. J'S GRANDDAUGHTER
DEAR MRS. J. (and her granddaughter): Thanks for a lovely day-brightener.

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column signed "Honest" in reference to thigh-reduction surgery (suction lipectomy). I would like to know more about this type of surgery. I need to do something about my thighs. I have dieted and exercised. Both have helped some, but my thighs are disproportionately large. I am so self-conscious about them that I will not wear slacks or a bathing suit.

What kind of doctor does this kind of surgery?
THUNDER THIGHS

DEAR THUNDER THIGHS: A plastic surgeon. But you would be wise to get some recommendations from the county medical association or the American Medical Association to be sure the plastic surgeon is board-certified.

House Passes Deficit-Cutting Package

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has cleared the decks for its Easter recess by giving final congressional approval to a bill that makes permanent the 16-cent-a-pack federal cigarette tax and divides billions of dollars in offshore oil money between the U.S. Treasury and coastal states.

A bill left over from last year's budget struggle was adopted by the House, 230-154, Thursday night after Republicans blocked Democrats from offering another proposal to send back to the Senate, which passed its own version earlier in the week.

The vote ended a political volleyball game that had sent the bill traveling back and forth between the two chambers since last December. President Reagan, who earlier had threatened to veto the House version, was expected to sign the bill.

The package, designed to cut $18 billion from federal deficits over the next three years, would make permanent the 16-cent-a-pack tax on cigarettes, worth $1.7 billion a year to the Treasury. The tax dropped to eight cents last Saturday because of the stalemate, but the bill would boost it back retroactively.

One of the hardest-fought provisions was a formula for sharing receipts from offshore oil and gas leases between the federal government and seven coastal states. About $6 billion has built up in an escrow fund because of the dispute dating back to the late 1970s, and nearly $2 billion will be distributed to the states if Reagan signs the bill.

The bill also includes a new tobacco price support program, sought by tobacco state lawmakers, which would allow the federal government to write off $1 billion in loans for the crop and give tobacco companies control over production quotas.

The measure also would make permanent the federal incentives for states to adopt the 21-year-old drinking age. As in the current law, which expires Sept. 30, 1988, states would be penalized 10 percent of their federal highway money for failing to adopt the federal minimum drinking age.

House Democratic leaders, despite White House veto threats, refused to the end to endorse the Senate bill because it killed provisions to expand the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program. The Senate version also stripped House language to impose a buy-American provision on offshore oil and gas operations.

But the full House apparently grew weary of the struggle with the Senate.

"Enough is enough," said Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill.

Rep. John Breaux, D-La., said he would accept the Senate bill rather than lose to a presidential veto the more than $635 million his state expected to receive from the energy leases, more than any other state.

"I can feel the cold muzzle of that veto gun against my head," he said.

Just before the House passed the savings package, the House Appropriations Committee voted to send to the floor an emergency spending bill of about $1 billion.

The panel approved a fiscal 1986 supplemental appropriations bill to provide extra money for the Internal Revenue Service, air traffic control, embassy security and disaster relief.

The wide-ranging package would earmark about $350 million for various disaster aid programs because of the floods in California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Oregon, Washington and other states.

The IRS would get $340 million to help overcome its computer problems, while $30.8 million would go to the Customs Service to avoid layoffs and to increase drug law enforcement.

The Federal Aviation Administration would get about $80 million to bolster its operations.

The committee approved $454 million as a down payment on a program already approved by the House to improve security at U.S. embassies abroad, transferring that money from the Department of Defense and foreign aid accounts.

The panel also approved $50 million to start President Reagan's proposed multi-year aid package for Ireland.

The bill would let Congress spend an additional $42.2 million on postage for mailings to constituents this election year. The $95 million currently allocated would run out by summer, said Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., who offered the amendment.

While the House was dealing with fiscal 1986, which began last Oct. 1, President Reagan's spokesman was unleashing new volleys against the fiscal 1987 budget produced Wednesday by the Senate Budget Committee.

And Senate Majority Leader Bob

Dole said the spending plan may not be taken up by the full Senate until after the Easter recess. Dole has criticized the plan for raising taxes and cutting $25 billion from President Reagan's military spending request.

"The budget resolution voted out of the Senate Budget Committee yesterday calls for almost $75 billion in new taxes over the next three years, and that clearly runs contrary to the best interests of the American people," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

The House, although technically in session through next Tuesday, planned no legislative business until the recess ends April 8.

The House Budget Committee has not begun writing its version of the fiscal 1987 spending plan.

Congress, in the new Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law, set for itself an April 15 deadline for final passage of a budget that meets the $144 billion deficit target in the law.

Salvage Chief Says Shuttle Booster Part Still Missing

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The leader of the shuttle recovery team said today a quarter-ton piece of Challenger wreckage recovered this week is "most probably" part of the right solid rocket booster, but it does not contain the section suspected of causing the explosion.

Air Force Col. Edward O'Connor told a presidential investigating commission hearing in Washington that "we have 20 inferential characteristics saying it is the right SRB, but nothing saying it is the left."

However, he said the piece does not have an identification number that positively identifies which booster it came from.

If it is the right, he said, it came from an area of the aft section joint that is 180 degrees away from the point where a puff of smoke and then a tongue of flame were spotted in photographs on launch day.

He said recovery ships have located several other parts of the right SRB on the ocean floor off Cape Canaveral, but none of them appear to be the section suspected of being the source of the Jan. 28 explosion that killed seven astronauts.

O'Connor estimated it would take 2-3 weeks to retrieve "all the significant pieces you're interested in."

The broken and charred 4-by-3-foot part O'Connor discussed was taken into port along with two other larger booster parts Wednesday night by the salvage ship Stena Workhorse.

It was taken to a hangar for examination, and sources close to the investigation said Thursday that engineers were convinced it was from the aft section of the right booster.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers believe the disaster was touched off by a rupture in the joint between the bottom two segments of the booster.

Photographs show a plume of black smoke spewing from the joint on lift-off and a plume of flame shooting from the same area 58 seconds later.

Challenger's huge external fuel tank blew apart 73 seconds after launch, destroying the shuttle.

The USS Preserver on Thursday continued its search for more cabin debris and crew remains. The shattered cabin was located two weeks ago 18 miles northeast of here and 100 feet below the Atlantic Ocean's surface.

Out of deference to the families, NASA officials have refused to acknowledge that astronaut remains have been recovered. But sources close to the investigation said most of the remains are ashore and that forensic experts have identified those of some crew members.

Five other surface ships and two small manned submarines continued hunting for and retrieving wreckage in the search area, which extends from about 15 miles to 50 miles northeast of here.

A third manned submarine was to arrive Monday to help investigate sonar contacts with objects on the sea floor, said Lt. Cmdr. Deborah Burnette, the Navy spokeswoman for the salvage effort.

Of more than 500 contacts that could be shuttle debris, only about 200 have been checked out, she said.

Each contact is checked by submarine or robot submersible to determine if it is a piece of the shuttle and whether it is worth retrieving.

Who's In Charge?

A brief wire service story on restoration needs of the state Capitol called attention to a leaking roof, faulty wiring, broken and "filthy" fountains, a surrounding fence that requires replacement, missing lamp posts, a "pigeon problem" and a sidewalk in such disrepair it poses a crippling threat to the unwary.

S.P. Townsend, administrator of the Capitol Building and state visitors' center, described conditions that suggest a small scandal lurks amid the havoc.

Remedial steps may cost in the neighborhood of $400,000, we're told. That is just a guesstimate. Experience tells us it will probably cost more. The scenario is not explainable; only infuriating.

Take the roof. A copper roof should be about as permanent an installation as money can buy. It was installed in 1971, a mere 15 years ago. Homeowners know about roofs, and most rely on composition shingles which often last for 15 to 20 years. The Capitol's copper roof conceivably might be left suspended in mid-air after the building it was supposed to protect had long gone.

The people who installed that copper roof must have some wonderful explanations for the shortcomings of their work. Was there no guarantee? Doesn't pride in workmanship require more than a sitting-on-of hands?

And let us not forget each week(?), month(?) or year(?) that porous roof was leaking there was in all probability some damage being wreaked on floors, walls and ceilings of the structure.

Faulty wiring?

If the building was rewired at the time the copper roof was installed, it set no record in terms of durability or quality, either. If a wholesale replacement job is called for, one might conclude the Capitol was probably a firetrap for years. The state is due some first-class explanations by the electricians involved if it cannot get first-class workmanship and equipment.

Surely the complex had caretakers and/or a maintenance staff. What were those people doing over the years ... picking up gum-wrappers and cigarette butts?

Those "filthy, broken fountains" must have been somebody's responsibility; as were the sidewalks, the fence, the lamps. The pigeon plague was probably outside their field but repeated complaints and warnings were in order.

Administrator Townsend has reported the problems, but 10 years of reports alone will not remedy one of the problems he described.

Who's in charge over there?

Priorities

It's upsetting when a crime may call for the penalty of imprisonment and the state is unwilling to imprison the guilty because it would cost money.

Loosely speaking, that's the view aired by voices in the state Legislature. In a very real sense it links punishment of the guilty to the ability of the state to finance the sentence ... as though it was the state being the real target of punishment for the crime of the guilty.

Legislation to toughen penalties for violence against the elderly cleared two N.C. House committees last year and was then "rerouted" when concern was raised it would cost money by adding to the prison population.

"We can't keep filling up our prisons like we do today," said one lawmaker. "If we do, we'll have to build new prisons."

For much of a lifetime we thought punishment was to fit the crime; now it seems punishment has to fit the pocketbook, first.

Something's wrong, here.

Principal's Work Load Increases

RALEIGH — R.L. Dalton, principal of Reynolds High School in Asheville, says there are two ways a principal can get fired these days.

The principal can do all the paper work that is required of him, ignore his responsibilities for running the school and get fired after parents become outraged. Or, the principal can forget the paper work, run the school and get fired by his superiors.

Dalton was one of a dozen principals who attended a legislative hearing this month on school finance. The principals wanted legislators to know that the many improvements being made to public education are carrying a heavy load of paper work for principals.

"I am responsible for 1,000 more sheets of handwritten evaluations this year over last," Dalton said in an interview after the meeting. "We're having to take time that we don't really have ... so I'm essentially working an 80-hour week."

Tom Salter, principal of South Lenoir (County) High School, said that any principal who spent all the time doing evaluations that is required of him "would come out of the classroom to find your school is falling down."

The principals' primary gripe involves the massive amount of work surrounding the state's experimental career ladder program. Dalton and Salter both head schools involved in the testing of the program. They said the program forces them to choose between their regular duties and the responsibilities associated with the career ladder.

(The career ladder program seeks to reward with extra pay teachers who take on extra responsibilities and who perform well in the classroom.)

"Observation and evaluation (of teachers) should not be a job for principals," Dalton said. "That's a

WASHINGTON — The "unanimous" vote March 6 by which the Federal Reserve Board lowered the discount rate was preceded a week earlier by an unannounced 4-to-3 split verdict with an anguished Chairman Paul Volcker on the short end and acting as though he might resign.

Volcker prevailed on his colleagues not to announce the verdict at least until the West Germans dropped their bank rate. He then drove to the Treasury to confer with his closest administration ally, Secretary James A. Baker III. When the German Bundesbank acted, the board reconvened and voted 6-to-0.

This backstage revolt at the Fed's marble palace on Constitution Avenue shows how President Reagan's two newly appointed governors have changed the central bank. Volcker, the Fed's most masterful leader ever, is now a lame duck whose rigid anti-inflation strictures can be outvoted by his own board. The Volcker era is ending.

Dropping the discount rate (interest charged to financial institutions by the Federal Reserve) a half-point in today's deflationary economy was considered long overdue by the White House and Fed Vice Chairman Preston Martin. Volcker, trying to wring out the last drop of inflation despite unused capacity and sluggish economic growth, had refused for months.

When two new Reagan-appointed governors were sworn in Feb. 7, it was only a matter of time before the 7.5 percent discount rate dropped to 7. So, it was no surprise during the week of March 3 that the board took its secret vote. What was surprising, master bureaucrat Volcker did not turn around and lead the new majority but instead opposed the four Reagan appointees.

Even more out of character for the usually unflappable central banker was his reaction. Insiders say they never have seen Volcker so personally upset. At this point, he conferred at the Treasury with Baker, who as White House chief of staff engineered Volcker's reappointment as chairman in 1983.

Volcker's solution was to ask his fellow governors to keep the decision quiet at least until the inflation-conscious Germans acted, so that the Fed would be seen as following rather than leading the world money easing. "There was no substance to this," one financial insider told us. "Paul was just trying his best to save face."

He succeeded. The discount rate decision was covered up until the Bundesbank acted March 6, with word from Tokyo that the Bank of Japan would follow suit. The board reconvened that day, discount cut rumors leaked all over town and the next morning it was announced that the vote was 6-to-0 (with Martha Seger, one of the Reaganite four, absent).

White House and Treasury officials have zipped their lips for fear of offending Volcker, and Federal Reserve spokesmen are customarily unrevealing. But among the very few who heard about the discount rate affair, there was speculation between the first and second votes that Volcker was so exercised he might quit.

His resignation would have solved a thorny problem for the White House. California Reaganite Martin's term as vice chairman expires March 31. He is not eager to serve four more years as second banana unless he is likely to become chairman when Volcker's second four-year term expires in August 1987. Although Martin is a strong possibility, the White House will promise nothing so far in advance. But he might well become chairman should an immediate vacancy occur.

Fed staffers whisper that Volcker is amenable to a third term. Actually, he will not be reappointed so long as Donald T. Regan remains White House chief of staff. He deeply resents being cut out of the action as secretary of the Treasury by Baker when Volcker was renamed in 1983. When his own board ran away from him, the chairman cried on Jim Baker's shoulder — certainly not Don Regan's.

Volcker may still resign, but that is much less likely after his face-saving. He probably will sign on as a lame duck who still controls the central bank's bureaucracy and the 12-member Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC). But control of events may be slipping, as witness the drop in the critically important Federal Funds rate (interbank lending) after the discount cut.

Volcker's feat in driving down inflation since 1979 cannot be gainsaid, though critics argue that costs in terms of human suffering were avoidable. But with sustainable growth now the top priority, his time may have passed — the real message of the backstage revolt at the Fed.

Strength For Today

Modern religious thinking has not given sufficient consideration to the matter of creation. The religious significance of creation is indicated by the fact that it is the first thing with which the Bible deals.

Men have fallen into dissenting groups over the question of how God created the world. The important thing is that, "In the beginning, God created the heavens and earth." That is, there was force exerted in the beginning which resulted in the emergence of life and its environment.

Men pass that fact by lightly today. They look to science to explain creation, when the very best science can be expected to do is to describe it.

After science has said its last word, it will still be plain that creation was primarily a religious — rather than scientific — matter.

"The sun, the moon, the stars, the seas, the plains — Are not these, O Soul, the vision of Him who reigns?"

Little Guys Come Out On Top

WASHINGTON — In the world of big unionism, it's not often that the little guys come out on top, but the little guys just won a big one. On March 4 the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously upheld the rights of non-union school teachers in Chicago to be protected against misuse of the "agency fees" they are compelled to pay.

This marked the fourth major case in which the high court has addressed the plight of the worker in a union shop who is compelled to pay a fee to the union he has refused to join. The court consistently has upheld the "agency fee" as such. A non-union worker is not entitled to unfettered status as a free-rider. But neither is a union entitled to unfettered use of the non-member's money.

In 1960 the court addressed the issue in a case involving railway workers in Georgia, but that case went off on construction of the Railway Labor Act and did not reach constitutional dimensions. In 1977 the court held that a teachers union in Detroit could not collect fees from non-members for the support of ideological causes. In 1984, in a case involving non-union employees of Western Airlines, the court undertook a detailed analysis of permissible and impermissible use of the dissenters' fees.

With its decision of March 4 in Chicago Teachers Union v. Lee Hudson, the court made it emphatically clear that non-union workers have First Amendment rights that a union is bound to respect. Moreover, the court laid down clear guidelines for enforcing those rights.

In Chicago, the teachers union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Teachers, had cooked up a neat little system for ostensibly complying with the law. Without ever explaining exactly how it arrived at the figure, the union in 1982 announced that 95 percent of its expenditures were properly related to collective bargaining; the other 5 percent were not. Therefore the union unilaterally fixed dues for the coming year: $17.35 for member teachers, $16.48 (or 95 percent) for non-member teachers.

The union had a nifty arrangement for taking care of such troublemakers as Lee Hudson. After the $16.48 was deducted from his paycheck, an objecting worker could complain in writing to the president that the amount was too high. If the worker was dissatisfied with the president's ruling, the worker could take the issue to arbitration — before an arbitrator to be selected by the union president. How's that for democracy in action?

Speaking through Justice John Paul Stevens, the Supreme Court told the union to knock it off. The amount at stake for each individual dissenter is immaterial. Whatever the amount, non-union teachers cannot be compelled to subsidize the propagation of political or ideological views that they oppose. The union must disclose all of its expenditures — non-union employees cannot be left "in the dark" — and these outlays must be subject to verification by an independent auditor. Then a careful division must be made between outlays for collective bargaining and other outlays. That division must be subject to review "by an impartial decisionmaker." In the future an arbitrator will not be chosen by the union president alone.

Because the Chicago teachers were public employees, the Hudson decision is not necessarily applicable to workers in the private sector, but it is hard to see how the same principles could fail to apply. The First Amendment makes no distinction between public and private workers. Taken together, the four cases since 1960 give reassurance to non-union workers everywhere. They may legally be compelled to pay millions for representation in a union shop, but they cannot be compelled to pay one cent in tribute to ideas they abhor.

Reagan Turns To Senate For Nicaraguan Package

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, vowing "to come back again and again" to reverse a major foreign policy setback in Congress, set out today to win Senate approval of a House-defeated plan for military aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

Reagan invited about 200 supporters to the White House to hear a new call to battle to win $100 million for the insurgents trying to overthrow the leftist government of Nicaragua. After today's speech, he also will devote his Saturday radio address to the subject of aid to the rebels, the White House said.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We feel good about our prospects in the Senate." He said that there was "a fairly large pool of undecideds" in the Senate, and that Reagan would concentrate his efforts on them, probably beginning with telephone calls over the weekend.

Indeed, Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd said he hoped for a "middle ground" compromise and said he expects the Senate, "since it is Republican controlled, to give the president something."

Such a "middle ground" approach, Byrd said, would "exhaust whatever diplomatic channels there may be" before resorting to military aid for the rebels.

Reagan called Thursday's vote "a dark day for freedom," and said "this vote must be reversed" after the House defeated, 222-210, his hotly contested request for aid to the rebels.

The Senate will begin debate on the package next week, and the House will vote April 15 on alternative proposals. Reagan is expected to eventually win some aid for the rebels.

The president, in a written statement, told Congress: "You have my solemn determination to come back again and again, until this battle is won, until freedom is given the chance it deserves in Nicaragua."

He said that as of today, "I will begin to press in the Senate — and then back again in the House — for the real and effective assistance for Nicaragua's freedom fighters which was denied them today, and which those brave men and women deserve."

Arguing that Americans "have begun to awaken to the danger emerging on their doorstep," Reagan said, "And one day, in the not too distant future, that awareness will come home to the House of Representatives."

"We are gaining ground; we are winning converts," Reagan said. "The next battle will bring us the victory this just and good cause rightly deserves."

Over the past three weeks, Reagan delivered numerous speeches and talked with more than 130 House and Senate members in a search of votes, according to a White House count.

Critics of his plan said White House strategy backfired when Reagan and White House communications director Patrick Buchanan questioned the patriotism of their opponents.

House Majority Whip Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said Reagan's defeat "shows Congress resented at-tempts by the administration to question the patriotism (of aid opponents). That was scandalous. That was unfortunate and classically ineffective."

The president had suggested that a vote against aid for the Contras was tantamount to support for the Nicaraguan government. Buchanan said that with the vote, "The Democratic Party will reveal whether it stands with Ronald Reagan and the resistance — or Daniel Ortega and the communists."

Defending the tough talk, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "Our rhetoric, our statements are the president's words."

"It's the way the president feels," Speakes said. "We feel it's an important issue. We feel that this simply presents the issue the way it is. I don't consider this inflammatory rhetoric."

"I consider it an opportunity to present the message just as it is. We were telling the truth. We think the American people, once they know the truth, will then make their views known."

Reagan Rejects Bonner Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yelena Bonner, wife of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, was refused a meeting with President Reagan and met instead with the president's national security adviser, a White House spokesman said today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said national security adviser John N. Poindexter met Tuesday at the White House with Mrs. Bonner after conversations between White House staff people and members of her family.

"It was decided it was most appropriate" for Poindexter, rather than the president, to meet Mrs. Bonner, who came to the United States several weeks ago for medical treatment and to see relatives, Speakes said.

The Washington Post, quoting unidentified sources, said today Mrs. Bonner "was not happy" about the meeting with Poindexter, which was described as "cool and correct."

A senior White House official, speaking on condition he not be named, said Reagan was never consulted about the meeting but that his staff was acting on his "attitude" and "normal guidance," which was described as seeking "a better Soviet attitude toward immigration and toward release of persons for humanitarian reasons."

"His idea on that is that quiet diplomacy is most successful in this area," the official said. The source said Reagan told Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev at their summit last November that the United States continues to protest human rights abuses in the Soviet Union and press for the release of Soviet citizens who want to leave their country.

But the official added that Reagan told Gorbachev he "did not intend to make it a public issue if we were successful."

Earlier, a Speakes deputy, Albert R. Brashear, had said the president would not have refused to meet Mrs. Bonner, the wife of a Nobel-prize winning physicist who has been in internal exile in the provincial city of Gorky since 1979.

"The president personally would not have rejected such a meeting request for fear of upsetting future prospects," Brashear said Thursday night. "His record is clear, and he certainly stands firmly on the side of those whose rights have been suppressed."

The Post, however, quoted a White House source as saying, "Reagan's attitude was that these are people I respect. But he doesn't want to do anything to lessen the chances of others being released. He's told a lot of people that he doesn't want to rock the boat."

Mrs. Bonner has been in the United States since December for treatment of eye and heart ailments.

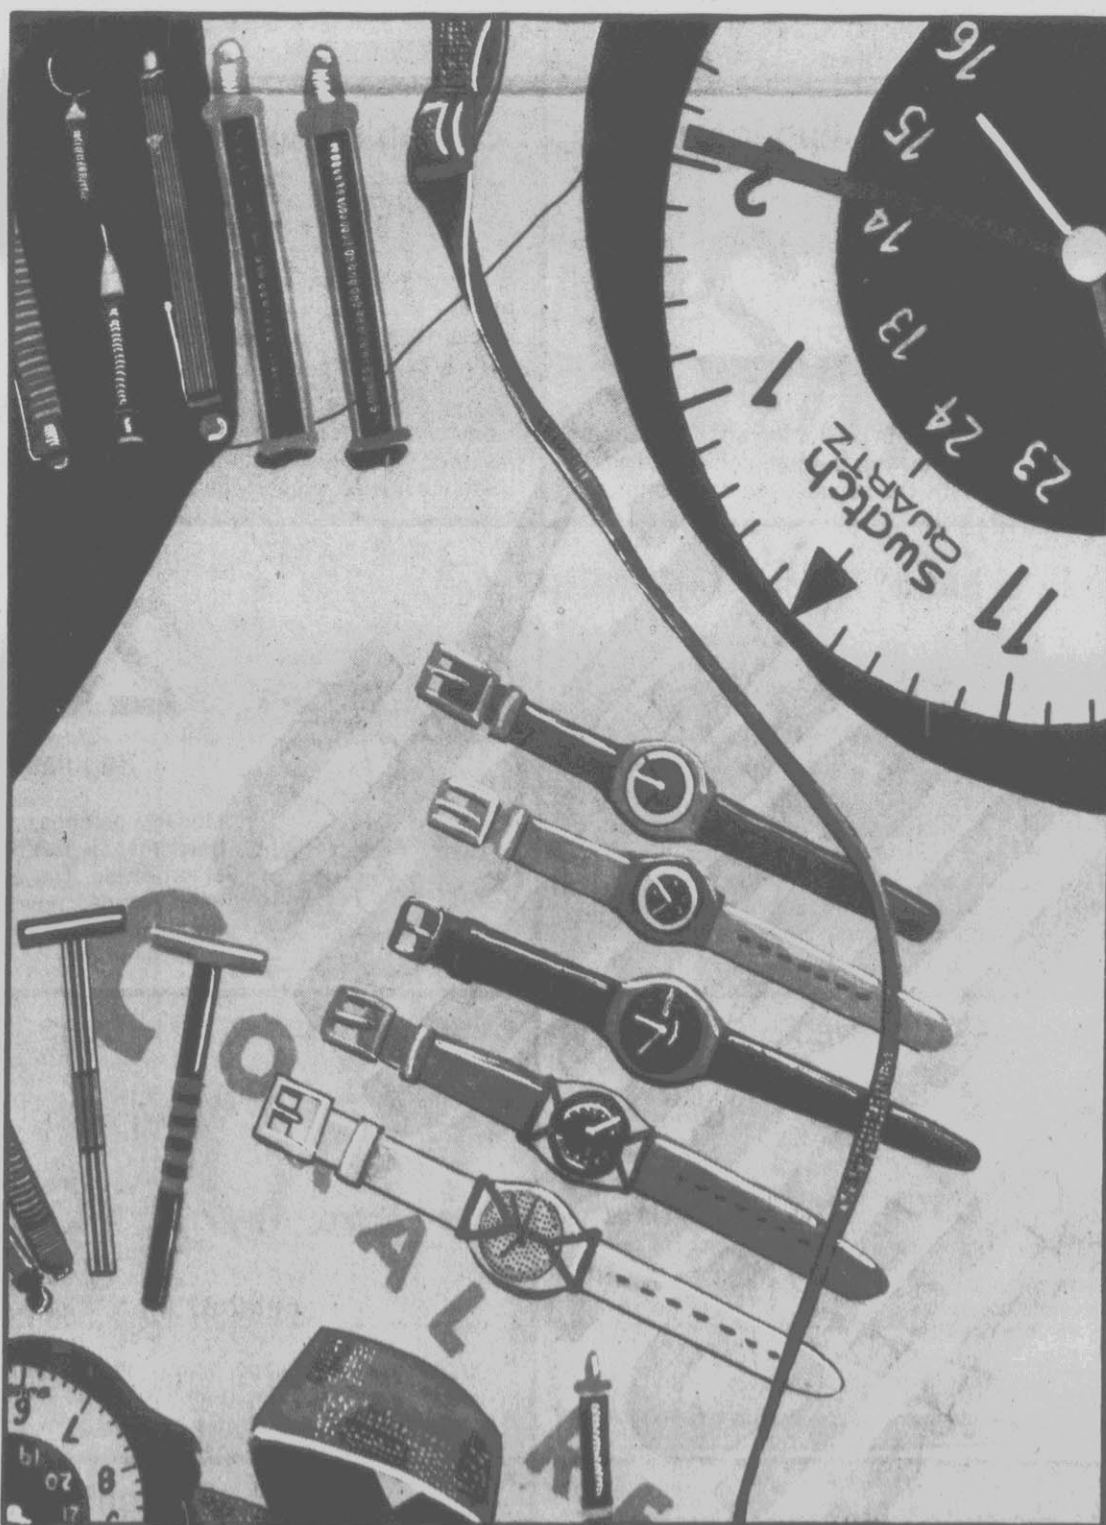

In May 1976, Reagan sharply criticized then President Gerald R. Ford for refusing to meet with writer Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn, another prominent dissident.

Since the summit meeting in Geneva, the Soviets released Anatoly Shcharansky, a Jewish activist who was permitted to emigrate to Israel after nine years in prison on charges of spying for the United States.

Senate Approves Stopgap 'Superfund' Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed and sent to the White House today stopgap legislation to salvage a "Superfund" toxic waste cleanup program fast running out of money.

"The money is necessary" to prevent an almost total shutdown of the program after April 1, said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., shortly before the House-passed measure was approved on a voice vote. "The trust fund is virtually depleted."

The legislation to give Superfund $150 million to spend through May 31 is not expected to run into any trouble at the White House, according to Russ Dawson, an aide to Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Lee Thomas.

The temporary funding is intended to keep the cleanup effort, which lost its taxing authority last Sept. 30, running at its currently reduced level while House and Senate negotiators work on a bill to renew and expand it for five years.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., the chief Senate negotiator, said Superfund was only getting money through May 31 in order to "keep the pressure on" the negotiators to produce a compromise bill restructuring it.

Thomas has warned repeatedly that unless EPA gets a cash transfusion by April 1, cleanup activities around the nation will begin grinding to a halt.

He told the negotiators Thursday afternoon that while he preferred a year's temporary funding for Superfund, the stopgap plan "will allow me to move the program forward, even if it's only for two months."

The House approved the legislation Thursday night only minutes before many members started leaving town for an early start on the Easter recess, which doesn't begin officially until next Wednesday.

Some House members had voiced concern earlier that had the measure not been approved Thursday night, it would have been dead because the House planned to conduct no major business before April 7.

The House scheduled "pro forma" sessions for today, Monday and Tuesday, but in such situations many members are not even in Washington.

The House quickly approved the legislation after a plea by Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee that handles EPA spending.

"We've reached the point of a crisis, and we have passed that point," Boland said.

There has been general agreement on Capitol Hill that if Superfund doesn't get stopgap funding authorization by April 1, the program would suffer a severe setback.

Thomas has said that without a cash transfusion, he would have to begin canceling contracts with private sector companies now working on various toxic waste dumps around the country.

Once a contract is canceled, it will take up to a year to rebid it under federal procurement procedures and get cleanup workers back to the waste sites, according to Thomas.

Congress found itself in a crisis because it failed to renew Superfund by last Sept. 30, when the program's main money source — a tax on petroleum and basic petrochemicals — expired.

Although the law setting up the program did not expire, dwindling cash reserves forced Thomas to make continuing cutbacks in Superfund activities.

Negotiators have been meeting since Feb. 26 in an effort to resolve differences between the $7.5 billion five-year Superfund bill passed by the Senate in late September and the $10 billion House version, passed in December.

Progress has been slow as lawmakers and their staffs attempt to expand a Superfund program that spent some $1.6 billion in its first five years and managed to clean up only about a dozen waste dumps.

Still to be decided in the negotiations are such major questions as the size of the new Superfund; who will pay the taxes for it; how much flexibility EPA will have on cleanup schedules and health standards; and whether the nation will launch an attack on the growing environmental problem of leaking underground fuel storage tanks.

Arab Group Says It Planted Bomb

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An underground group today claimed responsibility for the bombing that killed two people and wounded 28 others in a Paris shopping arcade. It demanded the release of five Arab prisoners held in France and Italy.

The group, the Committee of Solidarity with Arab Political Prisoners and the Middle East, threatened to stage more bombings unless the prisoners are freed. The same leftist group claimed responsibility for four other bombings in France in which 30 people were injured.

The claim of responsibility for Thursday's bombing in Paris came in an Arabic language statement that was passed to a Western news agency in Beirut.

The statement demanded the release of three Arab prisoners jailed in Paris and two others in Rome as the "sole condition to stop our blows."

The group's statement named the three Arab prisoners in Paris as Georges Ibrahim Abdallah, Waroujan Garbidjian and Anis Naccache and said: "It is either their freedom or more attacks and victims in the streets of Paris."

Naccache led a five-man assassination squad that tried to kill former Iranian Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar in Paris in 1980. Naccache is serving a life term in prison.

Abdallah, the suspected leader of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions, was arrested in Lyon in October 1984. He was convicted of minor charges related to forged identity papers and is being held for investigation.

Garbidjian, a member of the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia, convicted in the July 7, 1983, bombing of the Turkish Airlines ticket counter at Orly airport in Paris. Seven people were killed and 55 others were injured in the attack. Garbidjian is serving a life sentence.

The statement identified the two prisoners in Rome as Josephine Abdo Sarkis and Abdallah Mansouri and said they "have been held without justification for more than a year."

Thursday's bomb went off in the Point Show shopping arcade at 6:10 p.m. Eight of the wounded were reported in very serious condition.

Six People Hurt In Area Wrecks

Greenville police said six persons were injured and an estimated $34,450 property damage caused in eight traffic collisions investigated Thursday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard involving vehicles driven by Timmy Ray Arnold of Route 5, Greenville, Burney Victor Hardee of Route 7, Greenville, and Jesse Lee Mills of Route 3, Greenville.

Officers, who said Arnold and Hardee were injured, estimated damage at $5,200 to the Arnold truck, $6,800 to the Hardee car and $750 to the Mills auto.

Robert Ray St. Clair of 317 E. 10th St. was charged with driving while impaired following investigation of a 7:37 a.m. collision in the parking lot at Little University Preschool at 313 E. 10th St.

Police said the St. Clair car collided with a parked vehicle owned by Little University, causing $4,000 damage to the parked van, $2,000 to the St. Clair car and $500 to a fence.

Cars driven by Jamie Auther Kite of 132 Oakmont Square and Brenda Dixon Adams of Route 2, Ayden, collided about 6:50 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 100 feet east of the Landmark Street intersection, causing $2,800 damage to the Kite car and $500 damage to the Adams vehicle.

Kite was charged with exceeding a safe speed, police said.

Suzanne L. Gray of Kill Devil Hills was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following a 2:05 p.m. collision on 10th Street just west of the Rock Springs Road intersection.

Investigators said the Gray car collided with a car driven by Freida Elaine Spencer of Ocracoke, causing $2,000 damage to the Gray vehicle and $850 damage to the Spencer car.

Cars driven by Susette Fleming Sheppard of 207 E. Gum Road and Raymond McCumber Trevino Jr. of Ayden collided about 3:45 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, west of the Granville Drive intersection, injuring Ms. Sheppard and two passengers in her car.

Police, who charged Trevino with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, estimated damage at $2,500 to the Sheppard car and $100 to the Trevino vehicle.

James Walter Rishel III of Route 3, Hillsborough, was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 4:11 p.m. collision at the intersection of First and Cotanche streets.

Officers said the Rishel car collided with a car driven by Linda Thomas Hulon of Route 4, Greenville, causing $1,500 damage to the Hulon car, $1,000 damage to the Rishel car and injuring Ms. Hulon.

Cars driven by Susan Adams Laughinghouse of Route 5, Greenville, and James Cecil Clark II of 201 N. Elm St. collided about 4:30 p.m. at the intersection of First and Reade streets, resulting in an estimated $1,200 damage to the Laughinghouse car and $1,000 damage to the Clark auto.

Glenn Morris Gainey of 114 Green Mill Run was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of an 11:30 p.m. collision on Charles Street, 275 feet north of the 11th Street intersection.

Investigators said the Gainey car collided with an auto driven by Sharen Anita Barnes of 107 Martha Lane, resulting in $1,000 damage to the Barnes car and $750 damage to the Gainey vehicle.

WARNING ISSUED — Philadelphia-based SmithKline Beckman Corp. said Thursday that tampering threats have been made against three of its major consumer drug products — Contac, Dietac and Teldrin. The company warning consumers nationwide not to use the products. (AP Laserphoto)

Drug Firm Says Products Tainted

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — SmithKline Beckman Corp. asked that three of its products be removed from shelves nationwide after drugs that had been tampered with were found in two cities.

Officials said they knew of no motive for the latest incident involving popular, over-the-counter drugs.

Health officials in several states issued warnings Thursday and stores began pulling Contac, Dietac and Teldrin capsules from shelves after SmithKline and the Food and Drug Administration announced the contamination.

Cyanide and rat poison were mentioned in telephone threats against stores in Orlando, Fla.; Houston; St. Louis and Chicago, said Bruce Brown, an FDA spokesman in Washington. SmithKline President Henry Wendt said tests so far have revealed only flour and cornstarch in products from Texas and Florida.

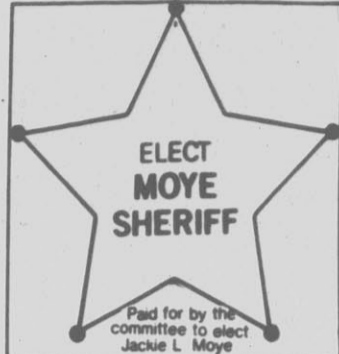

Tests on samples from St. Louis and Chicago were under way, Brown said.

"We've found no poisonous substances, and we have no reports of injury and no consumer complaints," Wendt said in an interview today on the "CBS Morning News." "But we do know that our products have been tampered with in at least two cities, Orlando and Houston, and we have very specific threats from an anonymous telephone caller that poisonous substances have been added, that there's a threat to the public ... There's no explanation of motive."

FDA Commissioner Frank Young, during the same interview, said there was not enough evidence to support a recall. "We'll continue to look at it day by day," he said.

The incident comes within two months of the death of a woman in Yonkers, N.Y., after she consumed Tylenol capsules tainted with cyanide. No arrests have been made in the case, the second involving Johnson & Johnson since 1982.

Coed Reports Kidnap, Rape

Greenville police are investigating the alleged kidnapping and rape of an East Carolina University student early Thursday morning.

Detective K.P. Fuller said the kidnapping occurred at the Trade Service Station at 210 W. 10th St. between midnight and 2 a.m., "probably closer to midnight," and was reported to police about 8 a.m. after the student went to the ECU infirmary for treatment.

Fuller said the 20-year-old coed drove to the service station for a pack of cigarettes but "never got out of her car." According to the officer, when the woman stopped at the closed station, a man got into the car and forced her to drive to a spot where she was sexually assaulted.

Saying investigators this morning are still not sure whether the assault occurred inside or outside the city limits, Fuller said the woman was released by her attacker about daylight.

The attacker "made her get down in the car and he left on foot," then the student drove back to the ECU campus, Fuller said.

Train Hits Beer Truck

RALEIGH (AP) — An Amtrak train carrying over 400 passengers sliced into a beer truck at a railroad crossing near Raleigh today, but police said there were no injuries.

State Highway Patrol Sgt. C.E. Pearce said Hal Bowles of Durham, a driver for the Durham Distributing Co., saw the train coming and ran from the truck just before the collision.

"The truck started across the crossing and the crossing arm came down on it," said Lt. Larry Overby of the Highway Patrol. "The driver was unable to move the truck, so he left it — he got away from it."

Conductor Colon Hobby said the train, the Silver Star from Miami to New York, was traveling at about 65 mph when engineers put on the brakes.

"You just noticed it went into emergency, that's all," said Hobby. "It just came to a quick stop."

Hobby said passengers were not jostled by the stop, which was similar to stopping at a station.

Railroad officials estimated damages to the train at $3,500, but Overby said there was "right much damage to the truck."

"The van part of the truck is still at the crossing, but the cab section is scattered down the track in several large pieces," Overby said. "An axle from the truck is caught under the front of the train, but there are crews on the way to get it going again."

David Long, the truck's owner, said it was carrying about $10,000 worth of beer.

Overby said another truck was on the way to pick up the truck's cargo, some of which was "salvageable, but probably pretty well shook up."

Trash Slaying

BALTIMORE (AP) — A man who complained about a neighbor's trash blowing from one yard to another faces charges he stabbed the neighbor to death, police say.

William Lawrence Burwell, 46, was arrested as he fled his house after the death of Derek E. Torain, 21, police spokesman Dennis Hill said. Burwell was being held without bail.

Two women who were in Torain's house told police a man knocked on the door and said, "I want to talk to you about the trash blowing into my backyard." He then pulled a large knife, stabbed Torain repeatedly and left.

Ehinger Retiring

Dr. Robert F. Ehinger, Pitt County health director, plans to retire March 31. His successor has not been named.

Ehinger, who has been responsible for the medical direction of the Pitt County Health Department since February 1979, said he let the county health board know of his planned retirement date last October.

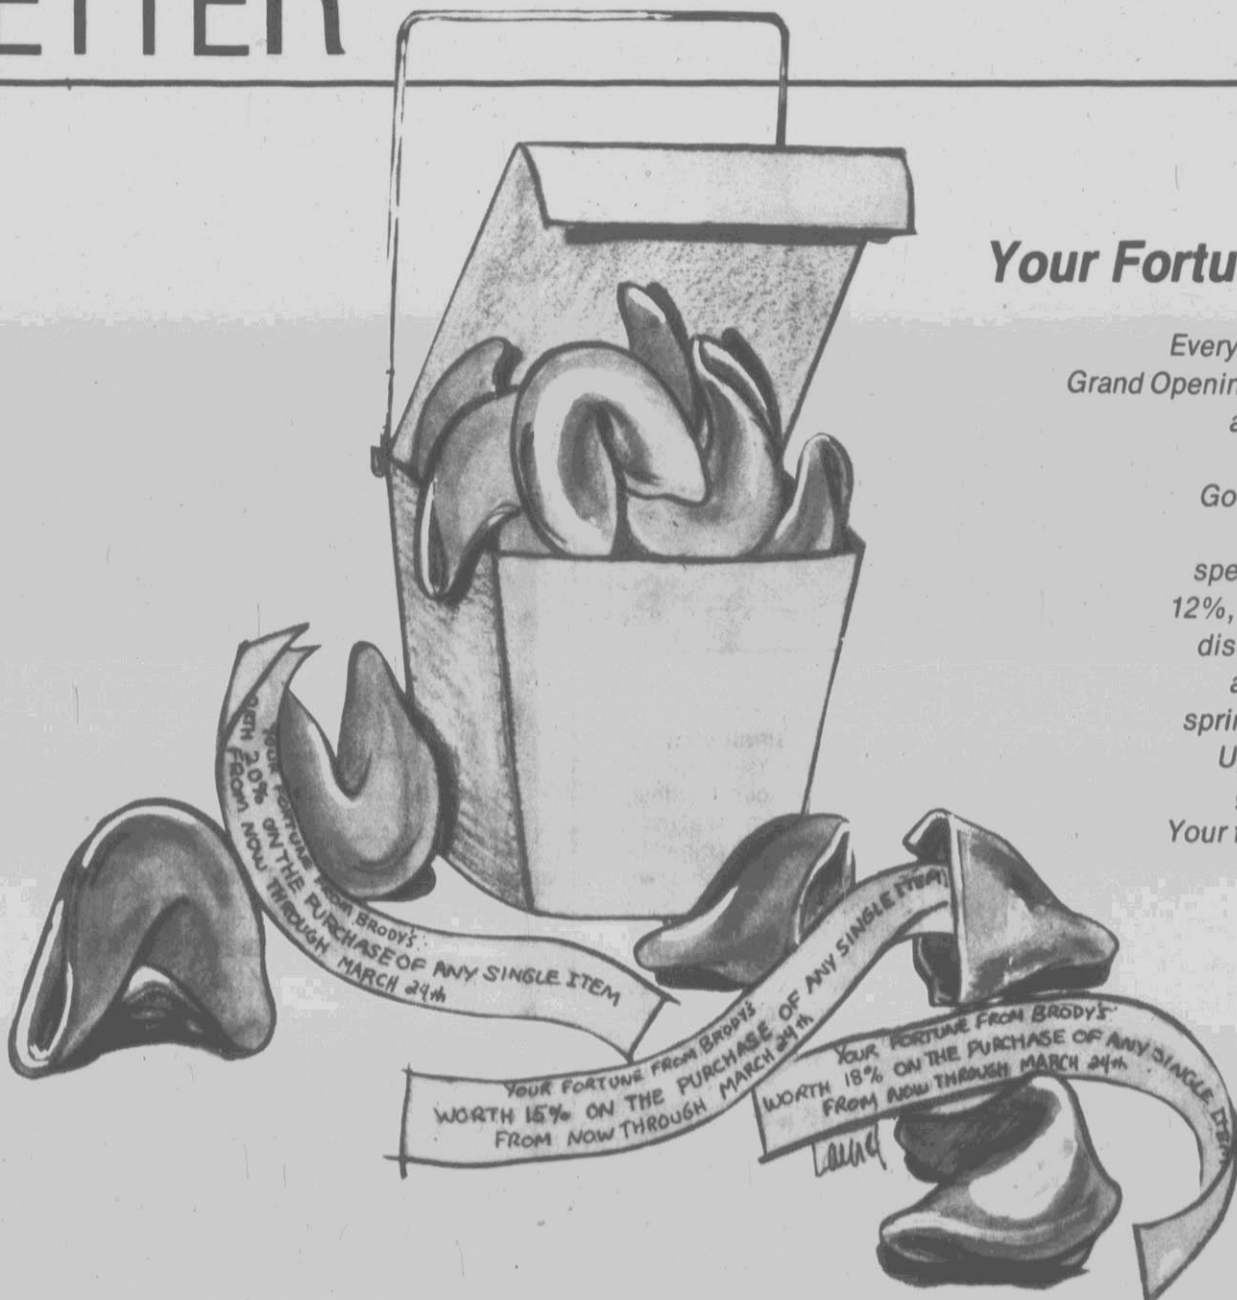

According to Joe Butterworth, chairman of the Board of Health, the board has been interviewing to fill the position. A meeting with a prospect was held Thursday. Butterworth said Ehinger has agreed to continue minimal service until a new health director is chosen.

Ehinger came here from Buffalo, N.Y., where he had been assistant regional health director. Here he has also served as an associate clinical professor in the department of pediatrics of the East Carolina University School of Medicine. He says he will retain this position.

Thefts Reported

Greenville police said six thefts were reported to the department Thursday.

Officer S.R. Ward said a calculator valued at $60 was taken from Immanuel Baptist Church at 1101 S. Elm St. in a break-in reported at 7:01 a.m., while Officer J.K. McCarthy said a wallet containing $5 in cash was taken from South Greenville School in an incident reported at 6 p.m.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said a wallet containing $40 in cash and $80 in travelers checks was taken from Pantana Bobs on Cotanche Street in an incident reported at 4:54 p.m., while Officer B.M. Highland said a wallet containing $20 in cash was taken from Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 5:50 p.m.

Officer S.D. Furr said a purse containing $24 in cash was taken from a car parked at 508 W. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 10:40 p.m., while Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said 12 cans of beer were taken from the Fresh Way Food Store on Airport Road in an incident reported at 11:23 p.m.

Easter Egg Hunt

The annual Easter egg hunt sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The hunt will be at three different locations this year — Elm Street Park, Thomas Foreman Park, and South Greenville Center.

The hunt will be conducted for children in three age groups — 2 to 5; 6 to 9, and 10 to 12, with each group hunting in separate areas. Each area will contain two golden eggs entitling the finder to a special Easter basket. The event is open to all children ages 2 to 12.

Hillel Brunch Set

University Scholars

Three Pitt County students are participating in the North Carolina State University Residential Scholars programs, which provide special educational experiences for academically talented students.

Bryan D. King of Farmville is participating in the engineering scholars program, and scholars of the college are John L. Edwards of Ayden and Alicia E. Speight of Greenville.

The programs include weekly honors forums within the schools and cultural and academic field trips.

Requests Approved

Several solicitation requests have been approved by the Greenville Police Department.

Requests were submitted by: the American Heart Association for a solicitation Saturday to raise funds for the AHA; the South Greenville PTA to solicit funds through May 22 for a student field trip; Eta Delta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi to raise money through April 25 for St. Gabriel's soup kitchen;

The March of Dimes and K-Mart to hold a solicitation during March for March of Dimes programs, and the Greenville Jaycees to hold a walk-a-thon on April 26 to raise money for the March of Dimes.

Record Figure

The U.S. Postal Service says a record 140.1 billion pieces of mail were handled in 1985, amounting to about 589 pieces for every American.

Greenville Postmaster Charles H. Caulk said in a news release that the figure represented an increase of 6.5 percent over the 1984 amount.

Caulk said the postal service operated a fleet of 145,811 vehicles, and owned 4,388 buildings.

State Fruit Growers Nervous About Freeze

By The Associated Press
Saying there's little they can do about a frost-freeze warning for tonight, North Carolina peach growers are hoping "winter's last shot" at the Tar Heel state won't ruin their fourth crop in the last five years.

"It's like playing poker," said Watts Auman, president of the National Peach Council. "If you throw in you're going to lose. But if you keep on playing, there's a possibility you'll win."

The National Weather Service said temperatures will dip mostly into the teens and 20s tonight and scattered frost is possible in areas where winds diminish.

"It's winter's last shot at us — hopefully the last shot," said Wayne Jones, weather service specialist at Raleigh-Durham Airport.

Jones said a cold front over the mountains on Thursday, the first official day of spring, had moved east across the state, pushing temperatures down slowly.

Greg Johnson, an agricultural meteorologist with the North Carolina

State University Agricultural Extension Service, said at least the peaches and other fruits are not in full bloom in most areas.

"Basically temperatures of 20 or 22 degrees would kill the blossoms, but since only about 20 to 30 percent are blooming, it would only mean a thinning of the crop."

Still, growers worried and kept their fingers crossed.

"I'm just hoping it won't go down as low as they say it will," said Clyde T. Auman, a Moore County peach grower.

"We are about 40 to 60 percent in bloom right now," said Richard Swann, whose Linden orchard boasts more than a dozen varieties of peaches, as well as nectarines, plums and almonds. "The way it looks to me, we will survive (Thursday) night. We can take it probably down to 24 without losing everything. We're right in the midst of bloom, so there's no fruit in the flower. But if it gets down to the teens we will lose 60 to 70 percent of them ..."

"If we have to have cold weather, the best time is now," Raz Autry of Hoke County said. "They are in full bloom and will have protection they won't have in another few days when the petals fall away."

North Carolina normally ranks fifth nationally in peach production, but three of the state's last four crops have been lost to springtime cold snaps, that sap the life from new peach buds.

The 1985 crop was so devastated that statistics on the harvest are not available, said Jeff Morton, marketing specialist with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service.

The farmers said they were grateful for a cloud cover that promised hope Thursday night. And they said a steady rain was a blessing for growers unequipped to spray the plants for protection.

Ken Chappell, president of the North Carolina Peach Growers Association, said Thursday he expected the orchards to receive some damage.

"But I don't think it will be devastating," said Chappell, whose family owns an 80-acre peach farm near Candor in Montgomery County. "I think we'll still have a good crop of peaches."

Growers have abandoned attempts made in previous years at warding off the cold, said Bill Reece, Montgomery County chairman for the Agricultural Extension Service. Bonfires have proved ineffective and irrigation systems, which could provide an ice coating for the trees and halt some of the damage, are too expensive, he said.

Peach growers weren't the only ones watching the weather closely.

Buck Carter was worried about his 20 acres of strawberries and eight acres of blueberries in Vander. A hard freeze could cost him $40,000 to $50,000, he said.

"Looks like our blueberries are very vulnerable," he said. "They're almost full bloom. They will fare worse than the strawberries."

Juvenile Remains In Jail

DURHAM (AP) — The state could be sued if a 15-year-old rapist was released without treatment and committed another sexual offense, says a judge who once ruled state officials violated the law for not having a program to treat juvenile sex offenders.

"They would have the biggest civil judgment against them that they have ever witnessed," District Court Judge Orlando F. Hudson Jr. told the youth's lawyer this week in ordering that the boy be held in jail.

The youth was convicted of raping and committing another sexual offense against a 6-year-old girl.

"Until he receives some type of treatment, I will never give my authority to release him," Hudson said. "Never. Ever ... I live in Durham. Until he gets treatment, I don't want him on the streets of Durham."

Attorney Bill Graham, in seeking the youth's release, had said his client was being unfairly singled out for detention as the result of an order issued by Hudson last September.

Graham said "no one would disagree" with the need for a sexual treatment program. "But I think we are dealing with equal protection arguments for this young man."

In his order, Hudson said the youth should be detained until his 18th birthday or until the North Carolina Division of Youth Services, which operates the state's training schools, provided a treatment program for him. The judge also found the division in violation of state law because it had no treatment program for youthful sex offenders.

North Carolina law calls for "such programs ... as will implement the right of any committed child to appropriate treatment according to his needs."

The division has since drafted such a program, but is waiting for the money to implement it. Alfred Boyles, director of the division, said he received a commitment Tuesday for special funds to train workers in the proposed sexual treatment program.

The youth, who would have faced two mandatory life sentences if convicted as an adult, was set to be released from Dillon Training School after less than a year before Hudson's intervention.

Veronica Sulkowski, the youth's social worker at Dillon, testified that the boy had met normal standards for release and said she knew of nothing that would make him a poor candidate for conditional release.

The boy, who said he had been at Dillon for a year, five months and 19 days, said he did not know why he was still being held.

"Are you going to hurt anybody when you get out?" Graham asked.

"No," the youth replied.

In declining to release the boy, Hudson said he had to weigh fairness to the defendant with the need for community safety.

"I think he's dangerous," Hudson said.

DENTAL HEALTH AWARDS — Area schools were honored Thursday afternoon during presentation ceremonies for their accomplishments in the North Carolina Children's Dental Health Month contest. Greenville School; Althea Weasthington, W.H. Robinson, and Cindy Vainwright of Falkland Elementary. South Greenville received a state award from the N.C. Dental Society for earning more than 1,200 points. Falkland Elementary and W.H. Robinson scored between 1,000 and 1,199 points. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Man Charged In Robbery Day After Leaving Jail

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 39-year-old convicted bank robber who says authorities insisted he leave jail nine days before his sentence was up allegedly robbed a Charlotte bank Thursday, one day after being released, police said.

Harvey Culp Jr. said he told jailers Wednesday he still had time to serve, but Mecklenburg County Jail officials told him Wednesday to "pack up and leave," said James Conrad, Culp's court-appointed attorney.

One day later, Culp was charged with common-law robbery after he allegedly robbed the First Union Bank in Charlotte, police said.

On March 4, Culp was in Mecklenburg County's satellite jail on a 1973 bank robbery conviction when he checked out, apparently to search for a job, police said.

Within hours, police were searching for him — with a warrant. Culp was charged with holding up an NCNB branch bank in Charlotte. Mecklenburg Superior Court Judge Chase Saunders sentenced Culp to 389 days in jail Wednesday for the March 1985 bank robbery.

But Culp had already spent the last 380 days in jail awaiting trial. Saunders imposed the nine extra days to make sure authorities had time to process paperwork to return Culp to federal custody.

Instead, Culp was released from jail Wednesday night.

Jail Administrator Julius Lloyd said jailers followed Department of Correction policy in releasing Culp.

They gave him four days credit for good time and six days' credit for working around the jail.

Saunders called it an "unfortunate mix-up."

Changing An Image

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Medical students should work to change the idea physicians are more concerned with practicing medicine for profit than service, University of North Carolina Chancellor Christopher Fordham said Thursday.

"In the guise of reducing health care costs through competitive approaches, which emphasizes profit, we may be in the process of denigrating and undermining the nature and the purpose of the profession," Fordham said.

"Since I tend to be an optimist," Fordham said, "let me observe that a period of disenchantment with applying the marketplace practice is sure to come, as is the opportunity to return the profession to its rightful place of primary commitment to service."

Fordham's remarks came at the Southeastern regional convention of Alpha Epsilon Delta, a premedical and predoctoral honor society. About 300 people from North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi are in Chapel Hill for the three-day convention.

Fordham, who holds a medical degree from Harvard University, emphasized in his speech that service should be dominant in the medical profession. He said the medical profession should serve "those who are threatened by illness and injury, those who are in distress, fear and pain."

Shellfish Tainted By Waterway Spill

SHALLOTTE POINT, N.C. (AP) — Waters closed to shellfishing because of an oil spill in the Intracoastal Waterway won't reopen before Monday, a state health official says.

George Gilbert, assistant supervisor of shellfish sanitation for the state Division of Health Services, said inspectors who tasted clams taken from a two-mile stretch of the waterway west of the Ocean Isle Bridge found the shellfish had been affected by the spill.

"One of the fellows who ate (the clams) said he could taste some kind of aftertaste like kerosene," Gilbert said. No oil was visible on any of the clams, which were taken from a site about three miles west of the spill.

A barge carrying about 360,000 gallons of No. 6 fuel oil started leaking Monday night after its starboard forward tank hit an unknown object near the Charlotte Inlet.

As the cleanup continued Thursday, the rain that slowed workers was a blessing for shellfish.

Shellfish beds between the high- and low-tide lines "look a lot better than they did yesterday," said Rich Carpenter, district manager for the state Division of Marine Fisheries. "The rain last night and the tide helped get rid of the oil that was on the beds. I'd really like to see a cloudburst right now."

Carpenter said most of the shellfish are in those intertidal areas, but there is still some concern about shellfish in the marsh areas near the Charlotte River.

Clamming has been prohibited in the area around the spill. Oyster season had already closed in the waters.

The barge and the tugboat "Fred E. Adams" have been moved from where the barge was beached along the inlet after the accident.

Lt. Cmdr. Keith Moll of the Coast Guard Marine Safety Office in Wilmington said the cleanup is going slowly. Moll said little can be done once oil is scooped off the surface of the water.

Flue-Cured Voted Announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preliminary results of a mail referendum held March 10-13 show that flue-cured tobacco growers have overwhelmingly approved federal controls for the next three years, says Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng.

The tally announced Thursday showed that 83,449 producers voted in the referendum and that 78,164 voted to continue acreage-poundage quotas and price supports. A two-thirds majority was needed for approval.

Results included:

Alabama, 44 votes cast and 93.2 percent were in favor; Florida, 1,356 and 90.2; Georgia, 8,196 and 90.4; North Carolina, 55,845 and 94.4; South Carolina, 6,953 and 94.3; and Virginia, 11,055 and 92.6.

Restaurants Offer Reward

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The North Carolina Restaurant Association plans to start a permanent reward fund to help discourage robbers from staking out its 4,000-member restaurants.

T. Jerry Williams, the association's executive secretary, said the slaying of Robert A. Page at a steak house in High Point March 2 has generated $20,000 in pledges.

"Our people are getting tired of it, and we want would-be robbers to know that if they plan on holding up one of our restaurants, there's going to be a price on their head," Williams said.

Traffic Accident Kills Four

DANBURY, N.C. (AP) — Four Rockingham County people were killed when the car in which they were riding ran under a lumber truck in Stokes County and the car's roof was torn off, the state Highway Patrol reported today.

Trooper J.O. Johnson said the crash occurred at 9:17 p.m. Thursday as the truck, loaded with logs, was backing into a lumber yard and its trailer was across the eastbound lane of Route 704.

The dead were identified as James Holman Stewart, 20, of Madison, who was driving the car; Stewart's sister, Tammy, 21; Andrea Lynn Langley, 17, of Stoneville and Gena Leigh Joyce, 18, of Stoneville.

"The impact sheared the top off the car," Johnson said. "The car continued out the other side of the trailer and off the left shoulder of the roadway where it came to rest. All four occupants of the vehicle were dead at the scene."

Robber Kills Store Owner

RED SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — A grocery store owner-operator, who nearly died after being shot during a robbery attempt seven years ago, was killed outside his store near Red Springs earlier this week, Robeson County Sheriff's Department authorities say.

Albert Gibbs, 59, was shot once in the chest Tuesday, and his pistol and five empty shells were found by his side, indicating that Gibbs had fired five times, according to Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone.

Gibbs had been severely wounded during another robbery attempt seven years ago and was hospitalized for a long time, Stone said.

There have been no arrests in the case. "We're going on the theory that it was an attempted robbery," said Al Parnell, chief of detectives for the sheriff's department. "The store was locked, his car was there and he apparently was on his way home. He still had his billfold and we haven't determined whether anything was taken."

Contracts Save $1 Million

RALEIGH (AP) — The state has saved about $1 million by contracting with private firms to mow grass along state highways and perform other services, Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington said Thursday.

Harrington told the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations that "privatization" was part of a department plan to save as much as $13.8 million in fiscal 1986-87.

The department has implemented privatization on a pilot basis in 32 counties, he said. In addition to mowing, the state also has contracted with the private sector for custodial services at rest stops and bridge tending.

If the program is put into effect statewide, it could permit the elimination of 500 to 600 positions, Harrington said. But he said the department would try to do so by attrition without laying off anyone.

Speaker Urges Buy American Law

RALEIGH (AP) — State House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan are looking into the possibility of legislation to encourage the state purchasing agency to buy American goods.

"Unless there's some reason why we shouldn't — a legal reason or something of that type — I would be in favor of it, yes," Ramsey said Thursday after a meeting of the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations. "Unless there's some reason that I don't know anything about."

North Carolina's Purchase and Contract Division bought about $125 million worth of goods produced in foreign countries — primarily petroleum products — in slightly more than two years, according to a report presented to the commission. The report said at least $1.224 billion worth of commodities were bought during fiscal 1984, 1985 and the first quarter of 1986.

During the meeting, Jordan, co-chairman of the panel, directed the Fiscal Research Division to determine whether the Legislature would encounter legal problems if it decided to restrict foreign purchases.

Child's Abduction, Release Baffles Police

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Longview police and the Haywood County Sheriff's Department aren't ruling out a black market connection in the abduction of a 4-year-old boy.

Eugene Michael McCallister was abducted Tuesday while playing outside his home with another child and was found unharmed outside the home of a Haywood County woman about eight hours later.

No ransom was demanded and there was no evidence of sexual assault, according to Capt. D.L. Turner of the Longview Police Department. The boy has been examined and was not harmed in any way.

His 4-year-old playmate told police that two men, one white and one black, took McCallister away in a blue or black car. But when the boy was found in Haywood County he said he had been in a yellow car driven by a white man with dark hair, said Kyle Grasty, chief deputy of the Haywood County Sheriff's Department.

"We feel sure there's two people involved," Turner said.

The boy told police he was taken to lunch at a Hardee's restaurant, where they ate in the car.

Grasty said the boy told him he had "stopped at a house with a lot of leaves and the man went inside for a while and came back out." McCallister said the man later put him out of the car on the roadside.

Grasty said he believed the child could have been targeted as a "black market baby" because the boy is so attractive and outgoing.

The blond-headed boy didn't appear fearful and was "just as calm as a cucumber," Grasty said.

Although Turner did not rule out a black market abduction, he said it didn't seem likely because the child had been released.

Agnes Fox found McCallister shoeless and in light clothing at 8 p.m. Tuesday outside her home, about 2½ miles from U.S. 19-23 Bypass.

State Rests Case Against Sheriff

GREENSBORO (AP) — Special privileges weren't uncommon if an inmate was helping officials, but giving an inmate a nude photograph was highly unusual, several jailers testified in the bribery trial of Guilford County Sheriff James L. Proffitt.

Prosecutors on Thursday rested their case against Proffitt, who is accused of giving special treatment to inmate Ronnie Odell Douglas in exchange for sex with Douglas' future wife, Carmen Jobe Douglas.

Testimony this week in Guilford County Superior Court has shown that Douglas received extra visits with his girlfriend Cindy Mitchell, Mrs. Douglas' sister, and was provided a nude photograph of her — an act prohibited under 1983 jail policy.

Mrs. Douglas has testified this week she had sex with Proffitt to make sure Douglas continued to receive special treatment in jail.

Before the state rested its case, Guilford County detectives testified that they never asked Proffitt to give Douglas preferential treatment and were never notified by Proffitt about the favors.

Detectives James Grady Bryant and Frank Wilkins also said they investigated Douglas for numerous crimes and that Douglas never helped them solve crimes, nor was he used to testify against other criminal suspects.

Special Deputy Attorney General William Farrell called the detectives in to show that Douglas was not an important enough witness to merit special attention while jailed for eight months in 1983. Farrell contends Proffitt's interest in Douglas resulted from a brief sexual relationship with Mrs. Douglas.

Opinion Asked On Exxon Funds

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin and the N.C. Legislature have asked state Attorney General Lacy H. Thornburg to provide opinions on how $47 million in overcharge funds from the Exxon Corp. should be disbursed.

Both Martin and the General Assembly are both claiming the authority to disburse the money and have asked Thornburg on how the money should be given out and by whom.

The funds are North Carolina's share of the $2.1 billion that Exxon is refunding to the states as a result of a federal court ruling the company had overpriced petroleum products in the late 1970s.

Martin received the $47 million March 6 and turned it over to the state treasurer to be held in an interest-bearing account.

C.C. Cameron, state budget officer, told the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations Thursday that Martin, "as chief executive, would be solely responsible" for distributing the funds.

Originally named for Jean Vuarnet, the 1960 Olympic Gold Medal winner of the men's downhill, Squaw Valley, California, VUARNET sunglasses were first created for skiers so they could protect their eyes, and see better in the snow, regardless of weather conditions. VUARNET sunglasses help prevent squinting by reducing glare from the sun and from the sun's reflection off the snow or clouds. In flat light conditions, VUARNET sunglasses aid seeing by means of a cadmium oxides treatment applied to the yellow base glass for depth-of-field perception.

VUARNET sunglasses are distortion-free, impact-and scratch-resistant, and 100% protective against ultra-violet rays. Today, "Vuarnets" are no longer the privileged domain of the skiing community: surfers, tri-athletes, back-packers, and other sportspeople claim "Vuarnets" as their only choice in glasses.

Brody's for men carries a large selection of Vuarnet sunglasses in all color frames and styles. We believe they are the only choice in sunglasses.

ENROLLMENT ANNOUNCEMENT HEAD START

Martin County Community Action, Inc. Project Head Start is now accepting applications for the 1986 Fall enrollment. Eligibility is determined by HHS income guidelines, family needs and handicapping and/or special conditions of the child.

Head Start is a comprehensive developmental program for children ages 3-5. Head Start is based on the premise that all children share certain needs, and that children from low-income families, in particular, can benefit from a program designed to meet those needs.

The program operates in the context of the child's total environment—classroom, family, neighborhood—stressing not only education but also health, nutrition, mental health, social services and parent involvement.

The Head Start program has been operating in the Martin County area since 1965; in the Beaufort County area since 1977 and in the Pitt County area since 1985. Funding is received from the Office of Child Development, Department of Health and Human Services.

The Head Start program operates nine (9) months of the year - September through May. The Head Start centers are opened Monday through Friday and the hours of operation are 8:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m.

For more information or to enroll a child, please call Mrs. Mary Lloyd at 792-1761 or come by the Martin County Community Action Head Start Social Services Office, located in the American Legion Head Start Center, on Watts Street in Williamston, North Carolina or contact the West Sixth Street Head Start Center located at 1610 West Sixth Street.

ONE BETTER

Catch the sun with bold colors to match the excitement of spring: Caribbean Blue, Mandarin Orange and Sand give our new Russ separates as much eye appeal as their easy shapes and cotton-cool blend fabrics make for comfort. The cotton/poly fine line gabardine pairs up great with the yard-dyed plaid shirts and the cool ramie cotton sweaters. So let the color capture the energy of Russ in sun-drenched sporty separates that put the sizzle in summer!

Register to win $3,000 worth of free prizes to be given away. You do not have to be present to win! No purchase necessary.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THIS IS A DRAMATIZED VERSION OF FACTS TAKEN FROM THE BOOK OF AMOS, CHRONOLOGICALLY AND AUTHENTICALLY CONSOLIDATED!

AMOS THE SHEPHERD TURNED PROPHET

AMOS, THE SHEPHERD, HAS BEEN SELECTED BY THE LORD TO GO TO THE PEOPLE OF ISRAEL, WARNING THEM THAT THEIR SINFUL WAYS HAVE ANGERED GOD.....

...FOR THEY HAVE PUT ASIDE RIGHTEOUSNESS AND DONNED THE GLITTERING GARMENTS OF SIN...

...HE LISTENS IN AWE AS THE VOICE OF THE LORD TELLS HIM JUST WHAT HE MUST DO....

GO PROPHESY UNTO MY PEOPLE ISRAEL...FOR THEY HAVE FORSAKEN THE LORD AND DO WORSHIP THE GOLDEN CALF!

BUT NOW AMOS HAS HEARD THE CALL FROM THE LORD!

AND NOW HE RAISES UP TO GO....

...IT IS A SOLEMN AND DEDICATED AMOS THAT CAREFULLY MAKES HIS WAY DOWN THE RUGGED HILLSIDE! THE LORD HAS COMMANDED AND HE WILL OBEY! THE PEOPLE MUST BE TOLD ABOUT THEIR SINS—THEY MUST BE AWAKENED TO THE AWFUL FATE THAT AWAITS THEM IF THEY DO NOT RETURN TO GOD'S WAYS!

Q. How did sin enter the world, what was this sin, and how was it transmitted to the human race?
A. Sin entered the world through Lucifer, Satan, and his sin was the sin of rebellion against the almighty God. His pride convinced him that he could overthrow God. Sin then came into the human race through the fall of Adam in the Garden of Eden when Satan presented Adam the same opportunity to rebel against God in eating the fruit from the tree after God clearly gave him instructions not to. (Eze. 28:14-17; Isaiah 4:12-15; Rom 5:12-14)

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Trend is 50 cents lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 40.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 40.00; Wilson 40.25; Rowland 40.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 35.00; Whiteville 36.00; Wallace 37.00; Spivey's Corner 37.50; Rowland 37.00.

Broilers: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 46.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 42 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 45.65 cents fob dock or equivalent. The market is weak and the live supply is fully adequate for a seasonally light demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 1,490,000, compared to 1,748,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply heavy for moderate demand. The undertone for next week's trading is weak. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was 13 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to one cent lower at mostly 2.58-2.70 in East and mostly 2.78-2.80 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 4 cents lower at mostly 5.30-5.43 in East and mostly 5.23-5.31 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.20-3.55; (new crop wheat 2.17-2.67, new crop corn 1.98-2.22, new crop soybeans 4.76-5.02).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward today, extending the advance that has carried the Dow Jones industrial average past 1,800 for the first time ever.

The widely recognized average of 30 blue chips rose .48 to 1,804.72 in the first hour of trading.

Gainers took a 4-3 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Gainers on the active list included Ford Motor, up 1 1/4 at 81 1/4; Merrill Lynch, up 1/2 at 42 1/4, and R.J. Reynolds Industries, up 1 3/4 at 44 1/4.

Smithkline Beckman dropped 1 1/2 to 88 1/4. The company warned against using Contac cold capsules and two of its other nonprescription capsule products after authorities found evidence of tampering with the capsules.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .18 to 136.31. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .50 at 267.82.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 16.29 points to 1,804.24, surpassing the previous closing high of 1,792.74 it reached last Friday.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 147.95 million shares, against 149.99 million in the previous session.

Haiti Official Leaving Post

Minister PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Justice Minister Gerard Gourgue, one of the two civilian members of Haiti's six-man governing council, has submitted his resignation, according to the government owned television network.

No reason was given in the brief announcement broadcast late Thursday over National Television.

The announcement came as hundreds of students picketed the National Palace, in the first formal anti-government protest since deposed President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to France Feb. 7. A massive public transportation strike Thursday also virtually paralyzed this city of 1 million.

Broadie

Mr. Nathaniel Broadie died Wednesday in Duke University Medical Center in Durham.

His funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday at Willow Chapel Baptist Church in Gold Point by Dr. David H. Bell. Burial will be in the Everetts Cemetery.

Mr. Broadie was a native of Martin County who had made his home in Durham since 1956. He was a member of Mount Gilead Baptist Church in Orange County.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Briley Broadie of the home; a daughter, Ms. Margaret Hopkins of Richmond, Va.; a son, Milton Broadie of Richmond; two stepdaughters, Mrs. Geraldine Brown and Mrs. Beverly Brittain, both of Durham; three stepsons, James Callier, William Briley and Kenneth Briley, all of Baltimore; two sisters, Mrs. Gladys Goddard and Ms. Pattie Broadie, both of Robersonville; three brothers, Will Broadie and Levie Broadie, both of Robersonville, and Leroy Broadie of Hillsborough, and 19 grandchildren.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8 tonight at Willow Chapel Baptist Church, and at other times will be at the home of Miss Cleeverna Davis in Robersonville. Arrangements are by Flanagan Funeral Home of Greenville.

Moore

AURORA — The Rev. C.E. Moore, a resident of the Bonerton community of Beaufort County, died Thursday in Beaufort County Hospital. Arrangements will be announced by Whitfield and Whitley Funeral Home of Washington, N.C.

Moore

Mrs. Elizabeth Hardy Moore, 83, died Saturday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Her funeral was to be held at White Oak Missionary Baptist Church at 3:30 p.m. today by the Rev. J.J. Styron. Burial was to follow in the White Oak Church Cemetery.

Mrs. Moore was a member of White Oak Missionary Baptist Church and a member of the Women's Auxiliary.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. William Etta Barrett of the home, Mrs. Bernice Jamieson of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Mrs. Christine Hill of New Haven, Conn.; 16 grandchildren, and 26 great-grandchildren.

Payne

Mrs. Mae Belle Elks Payne, 87, died Thursday at her home in Greenville.

Her funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Revs. C.B. Owens and James Lupton. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mrs. Payne had been a resident of Pitt County most of her life and was a member of Salem United Methodist Church in Simpson. A graduate of East Carolina University, she had been a teacher in the Pitt County schools.

Surviving are a son, John J. Payne III of the home; a granddaughter; two great-grandchildren, and a sister, Mrs. Rosa Tucker of Myrtle Beach, S.C.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 9 tonight at the funeral home.

Roberson

Nicholas Scott Roberson, infant son of Gene and Martha P. Roberson, died Wednesday.

His funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Saturday at the graveside in Pinewood Memorial Park by the Rev. Rod Pinder.

Surviving, besides his parents, are two brothers, Tony Eugene and Wesley Gene Roberson, both of the home; his paternal grandfather, Philip R. The family will receive friends from 7 to 8 p.m. Saturday at Flanagan Funeral home in Greenville, and at other times will be at the home on Route 3, Vanceboro.

U.S. Increasing Combat Fleet In Maneuvers Off Libyan Coast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American fleet prowling Mediterranean waters off Libya is about to be strengthened by more combat ships; a third aircraft carrier and a pair of warships that last week sailed near the Soviet coast.

The added naval firepower, disclosed by Pentagon sources

Thursday, came as a Reagan administration official denied that the United States is trying to provoke a confrontation with Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi.

The aircraft carrier Coral Sea conducted a second day of uneventful maneuvers off the Libyan coast Thursday, as a second carrier, the Saratoga, arrived in the area and a third, the America, moved within one day's steaming time, Pentagon sources said.

The sources, all of whom agreed to discuss the matter only if not identified, said the Coral Sea and Saratoga were well north of Libya to the west of Sicily.

Jet fighters from the Coral Sea conducted a second day of flights into the so-called Tripoli Flight Information Region on Thursday, but there were no confrontations with Libyan planes, the sources added.

The Saratoga had made liberty calls in two Spanish ports.

The carrier America, meantime, was described by the sources as steaming eastward to join the other two. The America left Norfolk, Va., on March 10 and the sources said the carrier was located due north of Algiers Thursday and would not join the Coral Sea and Saratoga in the central Mediterranean until tonight.

The sources also disclosed that two American combat ships that sailed through the Black Sea near the coast of Russia last week — sparking a diplomatic protest by the Soviet Union — would rejoin the carrier battle groups in the central Mediterranean within the next 24 to 36 hours.

The sources said the arrivals of the Yorktown and Caron would bring to roughly 30 the number of combat and support ships operating together north of Libya. The Soviet Union now has 29 ships in the Mediterranean, of which eight are combat vessels, the sources added.

Loose Ball Grab

HOUSTON (AP) — Louisville Coach Denny Crum says it's "crunch time" for his Cardinals. And, that's something the Auburn Tigers know a little about.

The NCAA West Regional finals will feature eighth-seeded Auburn, a team that's never been this far, and second-seeded Louisville, national champions in 1980.

Auburn, 22-10, wore down Nevada-Las Vegas 70-63 on Thursday night while the Cardinals, 29-7, defeated North Carolina for the first time in 57 years, 94-79.

The Tigers, second place finishers in the Southeast Conference, will play the Metro Conference champion Cardinals for the first time on Saturday at 12:58 p.m. CST.

The survivor goes on to NCAA basketball's Final Four in Dallas March 29-31 against the Southeast Region champion.

Crum says his Cardinals, winners of 14 straight, keep getting better.

"Early in the season we made a lot of mistakes in games like this and missed free throws," Crum said. "But as the season progressed and it came to crunch time we made fewer mistakes."

Although the Tigers haven't had much national attention they impressed Crum.

"They are a strong team and rebound as well as any team we've

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 21, 1986

played," said Crum.

Auburn erased a 14-point deficit and muscled aside the quick-silver Runnin' Rebels as senior Chuck Person scored 25 points.

"Rebounding was the key," said Auburn Coach Sonny Smith. "I have a Final Four feeling about this team. Much more than I had last year."

Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian said the Tigers killed his club on the boards.

"They outbounded us down the stretch and when a team does that it's tough," said Tarkanian. "They got too many second and third shots. I think they just kind of wore us down."

Armon Gilliam scored 21 points and Freddie Banks added 20 for the Rebels, who finished the season at 33-5.

"Auburn is just too strong on the inside," said Gilliam. "I definitely think we are a better team but they played better down the stretch."

Louisville followed Billy Thompson's 24 points and some deadeye free throw shooting to a victory over the Tar Heels, who overcame a 12-point deficit then self-destructed with turnovers and missed foul shots. Louisville hit 13 of its last 14 free throws and 28 of 33 for the game.

Ayden-Grifton Goes For State Title Saturday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton got a giant-killer reputation in the Eastern 2-A Regionals last weekend, but its task this Saturday afternoon may be the biggest of all.

The Chargers take on North Rowan in the 2-A State Championship basketball game in the Dean Smith Student Center on the campus of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Tipoff is set for 3:30 p.m.

The game is one of four that will decide the state's titles on Saturday.

North Rowan comes into the game with a 28-2 record, having only lost to 4-A South Mecklenburg by a point in the Raleigh Times Classic in December, and to Central Carolina Conference foe Thomasville — also by a point.

The Cavaliers, coached by veteran Bob Hundley, will have a distinct height advantage over the Chargers.

But Ayden-Grifton Coach Bob Murphrey isn't worried that much about the height.

"We've done very well against bigger teams this year. Our quickness has offset our lack of size all year," Murphrey said. "We haven't backed off of anyone all year, and I'll be mighty surprised if we're not ready to play."

However, Hundley, who has been head coach at North Rowan for the past six years, says that his team is quite quick, too, despite its size.

"Our strong points are that we are fairly big, and for our size, fairly quick. But we may not be as quick as our opposition. We do try to get up and down the court, play man to man and zone press defenses. We try to play the full length of the court."

This will be Hundley's first trip to the finals as the Cavalier coach. "We made it to the regional finals the year before last," he said.

Ayden-Grifton's Murphrey has a state 3-A title to his credit, back in 1974. But for his players, it will be a new experience.

The Chargers will see the tallest player they've met all year in Cavalier center Ralph Kitley, a 6-10 senior. He averages over 13 points a game and pulled down just over 11 rebounds.

But most agree that the two to watch are 6-4 senior guard Antione Sifford, who hits 21.3 points a game and 6-3 senior forward Jimmy Kesler, hitting 17.6 points and 9.0 rebounds.

"I've heard some awfully good things about Kesler," Murphrey said. "Sifford is supposed to be very good too, and we'll really have to concentrate on them on defense. But we can't leave a 6-10 guy alone, either."

The other starters are 6-3 senior forward Eric Hill, called by Hundley a defensive specialist, and 5-5 senior point guard Derrick Fitzgerald, who is not a consistent scorer.

"We've been taller than everyone we played," Hundley said.

Top reserves include 6-1 junior forward Tim Mitchell and 5-10 senior guard Barry Glass.

"We're a very experienced team," the Cav coach said. "Nine of our 13 players are seniors."

Murphrey will try to counter North Rowan's skills with a few of his own. Those include 6-3 senior center Marvin Smith, averaging 18.7 points a game; 6-1 senior forward Doug Anderson, 11.8, and 5-10 senior guard Danny West, also hitting 11.8.

Joining them in the starting lineup will be 5-8 senior guard Maurice Berry and 6-1 junior forward Hilton Ellison.

"We're going to play our game," Murphrey said. "In fact, it may be an advantage to us to have their big people moving up and down the court. I considered slowing it down, but I'm afraid that it would take away our intensity. We've got to be aggressive and go in and play our game."

"So that's what we're going to do. We're going to go at 'em, try to score against their press, push it up the court and try and beat them up and down the court."

"I hope that we will play hard and play with poise and intelligence. Then, what ever happens will happen," Murphrey said.

What he and his team hopes will happen is that the state championship trophy will be headed back to Ayden-Grifton Saturday evening.

Tigers Claw Past Georgia Tech

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

ATLANTA (AP) — Forget the 0-3 performance against Kentucky during the regular season, says Louisiana State's Don Redden. At this time of year, it's the effort in the NCAA basketball tournament that matters most.

"I think you can just throw out the prior three games because this is for the Final Four and I think this is going to be a great basketball game," Redden said after his 27 points guided LSU to a 70-64 victory over Georgia Tech in the NCAA Southeast Regional semifinal.

In the other semifinal match, Kentucky made it 4-0 over Alabama this year with a 69-63 triumph. It was the 14th straight victory for the Wildcats and 21st consecutive victory over a Southeastern Conference team. "If the pressure's on anybody, it's Kentucky," Redden said. "They're the No. 1 seed and all their fans will be disappointed. They're supposed to get to the Final Four. We're kinda like the Cinderella team."

The Tigers, 25-11, got an extra day at the dance behind Redden and Derrick Taylor, who scored 23 points. Between them, they produced 12 points in a decisive spurt which led LSU from a 56-52 deficit to a 60-56 advantage they never surrendered.

Two jumpers by Taylor tied the score at 56 with 5:08 left. Defensive pressure, what Coach Dale Brown refers to as "freak defenses," forced Georgia Tech's Tom Hammonds into a turnover. Redden converted it into a basket which helped lead to victory.

"The defense is always the key in a basketball game," Taylor said. "You play good 'D,' it complements your offense and gets things going."

What made LSU's victory more remarkable was that the Tigers shot 41.2 percent from the field on 28 of 68 shots. Georgia Tech was 28 of 48 for 58.3 percent, but the Redden-Taylor duo connected in the stretch and despite a Yellow Jackets defense which held John Williams to five points, 13 below his average.

"Redden was the guy I think that hurt us," Georgia Tech guard Mark Price said. "He hit three or four big-time shots. That's tough to beat."

Price led Georgia Tech with 20 points and Hammonds added 16. John Salley chipped in 11 as Georgia Tech ended the year at 27-7.

Terry Coner helped bring the Crimson Tide within 38-36 with 14:43 left, but the Wildcats came back with a follow shot by Winston Bennett.

Jim Farmer hit the back end of a two-shot foul before Cedrick Jenkins canned a baseline jumper from the left side and James Blackmon added a jumper from deep in the left corner. Buck Johnson hit a follow jumper for Alabama, but Blackmon duplicated his previous jumper and Kenny Walker added two free throws. When it was over, Kentucky was in command 48-39 and on its way to the Southeast finals.

Alabama, which got 20 points from Coner and 16 from Johnson, dropped to 24-9.

"Every time we closed the gap, they hurt us with offensive stickbacks," Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson said. "They are a big, strong, physical team and really hit the offensive boards well."

Kentucky Coach Eddie Sutton said it was defense that saved the Wildcats one more time.

"Our team was solid defensively, but we made it hard on ourselves when we weren't able to convert free throws," Sutton said in reference to a Wildcats streak in which they watched their 67-57 edge cut in half by missing four of five free throws in the last 1:02.

Walker scored 22 points to lead Kentucky, 32-3. The Wildcats were back in their hotel before seeing the results of the second game, but Walker said it didn't matter who he faced in The Omni Saturday afternoon.

"Kenny Walker is ready when all the marbles are on the line," he said. Redden said he'd be there, too.

"We're the 11th seed. We don't have any pressure," Redden said. "We're just going out, playing hard and having fun."

Valvano Doesn't Want To Compare Team To '83

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jim Valvano does not welcome attempts to compare this year's North Carolina State basketball team to his 1983 championship squad.

The cast of characters is different except for a lone holdover (Ernie Myers), the styles are contrasting, and Valvano knows you can only go to the ball once as Cinderella.

Still, there's something very reminiscent about the way the Wolfpack is winning the close ones this year.

In 1983, the Wolfpack won three tournament games by one point and claimed the title 54-52 over Houston on a last-second basket.

In 1986 they're at it again. After four narrow losses near the end of the regular season, Valvano's team has edged Iowa 66-64 and was forced to two overtimes by Arkansas-Little Rock before emerging with an 80-66 decision.

"When you have a good team — and I think we're a good team, not a great one — and you play good competition, you should play close games," he says. "And if you're in a position to win enough times, you'll eventually win."

That's about the only similarity Valvano finds between this year's squad and that championship season.

Valvano's 20-12 team meets 22-10 Iowa State here tonight in the NCAA Midwest Regional. Kansas, 33-3, faces Michigan State, 23-7, in the other matchup. The winners battle on Sunday for the right to advance to the Final Four in Dallas.

"They're two different teams, really," says Valvano. "We went into the NCAA in 1983 a much hotter team, on much more of a roll. This is an inside-oriented team and more of a half-court team. In '83 we did it with perimeter shooting."

"I think this team is more talented than '83. On size alone and overall athletic ability, I think this is a better team."

Asked to rate his team's chances, Valvano shrugs, "I've always believed that once you get in the tournament, everybody's record is the same. You're in a one-game season and you win any way you can. Then you try to do it again. I don't care how we're playing as long as we're still playing."

Valvano is convinced his team doesn't match up well against Iowa State, which he calls "probably the quickest team we've faced all year. We tend to match up better with a bigger team, but that's the way it goes."

Conversely, Iowa State Coach Johnny Orr contends his Cyclones "have a tremendous size disadvantage. But we've had that every game, so we're used to it."

N.C. State will start 6-foot-11 center Chris Washburn and 6-10 freshman forward Charles Shackelford, along with a 6-7 forward and a pair of 6-5 guards. Iowa State center Sam Hill stands 6-9, but forwards Jeff Grayer and Ron Virgil are only 6-5 and 6-4, respectively, and both guards are 6-3.

Valvano calls Grayer, a sophomore who averaged 20.7 points and 6.3 rebounds per game this season, "one of the best-kept secrets in college basketball. He's not a good player, he's a great player."

Bodine On Race Poll

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Defending Miller 500 champion Brett Bodine earned the pole position for Sunday's NASCAR Busch Grand National race.

NASCAR Modifieds, which also will run a 200-lap race Sunday, and Late Models, which will run a 100-lap race, will qualify today.

Bodine turned in a 91.779 mph lap Thursday. Kyle Petty took the second position with a 91.571 turn of the 516-mile track, while Eddie Falk grabbed third with a 91.558 mph lap.

Bodine said the qualifying times were held down by cold and windy conditions.

"I was really surprised to run that fast. It was so cold that tires didn't heat up as much as they should, and I couldn't believe it when they told me how fast it had run," Bodine said.

Here are the top 10 qualifiers for Sunday's Miller 500 NASCAR Grand National series stock car race at the Martinsville Speedway's .536-mile track, with type of car and qualifying speed:

1. Brett Bodine, Oldsmobile, 91.779 mph
2. Kyle Petty, Buick, 91.571
3. Eddie Falk, Pontiac, 91.558
4. Larry Pearson, Pontiac, 91.359
5. Morgan Shepherd, Buick, 91.315
6. Dale Jarrett, Pontiac, 91.214
7. Rick Mast, Pontiac, 91.038
8. Butch Miller, Pontiac, 90.920
9. L. D. Ottinger, Pontiac, 90.777
10. Brad Teague, Pontiac, 90.512

Herbert Crook hit all 10 of his foul shots and finished with 20 points for the Cardinals.

"Louisville played a great game," North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said. "They made their foul shots. I thought we had them beat when we came from 12 points down."

The Cardinals outscored North Carolina 16-4 to start the second half but the Tar Heels rallied behind Joe Wolf to tie it at 71-71.

Then Louisville's free throw shooting won the game.

"Thompson was just great," said Wolf, who led the Tar Heels with 20 points. "He was tough to contain."

North Carolina, third place finishers in the Atlantic Coast Conference, bowed out with a 28-6 mark.

North Carolina had 18 turnovers to only 12 for the Cardinals.

"It was a national championship caliber game," said Dean Smith. "Louisville is just tremendous."

"I GUARANTEE CAR REPAIRS FOR LIFE."

Herbert Powell

"That's a pretty strong statement, and I couldn't say it if I couldn't back it up. But my Lifetime Service Guarantee means what it says; you'll never pay twice for the same repair for as long as you own your vehicle. Here's how it works. If you ever need to have your Ford Car or Light Truck fixed, you pay once, and I'll guarantee that if the covered part ever has to be fixed again, I'll fix it free. Free labor. For as long as you own your own vehicle. No matter when or where you bought it. The Lifetime Service Guarantee. It's a service commitment from me to you, because I stand behind my work, and I put it in writing. Come in and find out more about my Lifetime Service Guarantee."

This limited warranty covers vehicles in normal use, and excludes routine maintenance parts, belts, hoses, sheet metal and upholstery.

Wyoming Guns Down Clemson

Victory Perch

Wyoming Cowboy Fennis Dembo sits on top of the basket celebrating his team's 62-57 victory over Clemson Thursday night in Laramie. The victory advanced Wyoming to the NIT's final four in New York next week. (AP Laserphoto)

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Add Clemson to the list of strangers who came to town to drive Wyoming out of the National Invitation Tournament only to find themselves outgunned.

Wyoming didn't shoot often in Thursday night's quarterfinal game, but the Cowboys were on target more often than the Atlantic Coast Conference Tigers, who ended their season with a 62-57 loss.

The win, which sends 23-11 Wyoming to New York City for the NIT's final four, was a dream come true for Cowboy forward Fennis Dembo.

After triggering the victory with 19 points and 16 rebounds the 6-foot-4 sophomore planted himself atop one of the two baskets in celebration.

"I dreamed about sitting on the basket last night and I had to do it,"

Dembo said.

The game, played before a record crowd of 15,028 at the University of Wyoming's Arena-Auditorium, was more of a nightmare for Clemson, which finished the campaign at 19-15.

Not only did Clemson have to block out the roaring fans, but the Tigers had to cope with the 7,200-foot altitude.

"We had a hard time adjusting to the altitude, but once we got our first win out of the way we went in at halftime and got our second wind," said Tiger coach Cliff Ellis, who not only brought his team out West early to acclimate but also stationed oxygen tanks along the bench.

"I thought the difference was the homecourt advantage," he added. "I really question the outcome of the game if it was played anywhere else.

But I don't want to take anything away from Wyoming."

Wyoming, which shared the Western Athletic Conference's regular-season title with UTEP and Utah, used a 12-2 scoring spurt to open up a 19-13 lead midway through the first half and led 31-20 at the intermission. But Clemson came out of the half rested and made a run on the Western Athletic Conference's Cowboys to pull with four, 37-33, with 14:55 to play.

"I thought we had them on the ropes at one time, but they hung in there and didn't give up," said Ellis.

Wyoming coach Jim Brandenburg acknowledged that the pressure got to his team, which starts four sophomores and just one senior.

"We missed free throws down the line that really hurt us," he said. "Clemson had a fine defensive package. They frustrated Fennis early. Things did go better when we got him calmed down. They got in several different defenses and tried to confuse us."

Clemson also tried to force Wyoming to turn over the ball in the game's waning seconds.

The Tigers had cut Wyoming's lead to just three, 58-55, with 25 seconds to play on Grayson Marshall's layup following a steal.

After calling a timeout to set up its game-ending strategies Clemson's Glen McCants fouled Dembo with 17 seconds to play. After the forward made the first shot Clemson again called time, but it didn't bother Dembo as he sank the followup shot to give Wyoming a 60-55 lead.

Wyoming's Sean Dent helped add to the lead by stealing the ball from Clemson as the Tigers brought it down court and flipping it to Turk Boyd, who went in for an uncontested reverse dunk.

Dembo's Glenn Corbit ended the scoring with six seconds remaining on a dunk of his own and then Wyoming ran out the clock.

Vikings' Mackey Dreams Of Place In The Finals

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Somewhere in the mists of a St. Patrick's Day dream, Kevin Mackey had a vision about tonight's Cinderella game in the NCAA East Regional, Cleveland State-Navy.

The sources were unimpeachable, St. Patrick, patron saint of the Irish, and John Paul Jones, father of the U.S. Navy.

"This game is the Navy's Department of Defense against the run and stun gang, the United States Department of Streetfighters, Inc.," said Mackey, the Bostonian who has guided the streetwise Vikings to a 29-3 mark this season.

The 7:10 p.m. game is one few people expected to see in the third round of the NCAA tournament at the Brendan Byrne Arena on Friday night. Almost as unlikely is second game, pitting No. 1 ranked Duke against 18-12 DePaul, a team few expected to receive an NCAA bid.

But Cleveland State shocked Indiana in the first round and Navy, 29-4, stunned Syracuse in the second round, setting up what the unlikely matchup.

"My father was a chief petty officer in the Navy and I had a dream the other night," said Mackey. "It was misty, I think around 11:30 or 12 Monday night, when most Irishmen were a little misty. I'm not sure if it had to do with the green beer.

"St. Patrick had on a run and stun Cleveland State Vikings t-shirt and John Paul Jones had a picture of (Navy stars) David Robinson and Vernon Butler," Mackey said.

Both Mackey said he awoke just as they were about to give the result.

"I can't finish what happened in the game until after the game," he said. "Hopefully, I'll be here with you and we'll finish the dream together. I hope it ends in Dallas."

If Cleveland State wants to get near Dallas for the Final Four it will have to stop Robinson, the 6-foot-11 junior center who is the nation's leading rebounder and shot-blocker while scoring 22.8 points per game.

"If he was coming out right now, he would be the No. 1 pick," said Mackey, who tallest player stands 6-8. "He reminds me of Bill Russell on the court with the grace of a Ralph Sampson."

Cleveland State, which has won 14 straight and 21 of 22, tends to remind people of controlled chaos with its run-and-gun style that utilizes a pressing defense, a fastbreak offense and 10 players to make things happen.

"It's going to be real tough," said Robinson. "I know they are not real tall in the middle, but they are aggressive. To beat them, we are going to have to be alert and relax when they are pressing us."

Navy, seeded seventh in the region, has shown a lot of composure this season, posting a 29-4 mark with 15 straight victories and 22 of 23.

"They have very good athletes and are very deep," said Navy Coach Paul Evans. "They have never-give-up type of guys. They are capable of scoring and capable of putting together groups of baskets. We have to control the tempo and not let them put too many baskets together."

The game between 34-2 Duke and DePaul will be the first ever between the schools and pits the Blue Devils' quickness and tough defense against an unranked and inconsistent Blue Demons.

"There are a lot of people who didn't expect us to show up," said DePaul Coach Joey Meyer. "But we're here because we have a chance to win."

It's a slim chance at best. Duke is riding an 18-game winning streak that has placed it atop the nation.

"We are looking forward to a very difficult game," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski. "We're playing a team which is probably as athletic as any we faced this season. The fact that they are a very confident team right now will cause us to have a difficult time."

DePaul's size might cause the Blue Devils their biggest problem. The senior-dominated Duke team lacks a dominating big man and relies on the backcourt of All-American Johnny Dawkins and Tommy Amaker to apply defensive pressure, while forwards Mark Alarie and David Henderson supply the shooting.

Gators Carry On SEC Domination

By The Associated Press
With the Southeastern Conference dominating play in the NCAA tournament, the Florida Gators are doing their best to represent the conference's interests in the National Invitation Tournament.

Winning their third straight game at home with a 54-53 decision over Southwest Missouri State Thursday night, the Gators earned a ticket to New York City for the NIT's Final Four.

The Gators join Wyoming and Louisiana Tech, along with the winner of tonight's game between Brigham Young and Ohio State, in the championship round at Madison Square Garden March 24 and 26.

Wyoming defeated Clemson 62-57 and Louisiana Tech stopped Providence 64-63 in other quarterfinal action on Thursday night.

Florida's Vernon Maxwell scored 22 points and hit three free throws in the final 19 seconds as the Gators held off a furious Southwest Missouri State rally.

Florida, the fourth-place team in the SEC in the regular season, improved to 19-12 for the season and 16-1 on their home court at the O'Connell Center. Southwest Missouri State, in its fourth season in NCAA Division I, finished at 24-8.

"We hit on a defense that matched up well and we took their shooters out of the game for a long time," Florida Coach Norm Sloan said. "Then they went to a defense that took our shooters out of it and closed it up and made it exciting at the end. They never gave up."

Bears Coach Charlie Spoonhour said he wasn't surprised that his team was able to come back and make it close after falling behind 50-36 with less than eight minutes to play.

"When you get ahead 15 or 16 points, you have a tendency to try to protect the lead and the other team gets some initiative," Spoonhour said. "That's only human nature. I thought we got a little of the initiative back from Florida. I was proud of our guys, but Florida just came through."

Boxer James Shuler Dies In Cycle Wreck

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — James Shuler, who started boxing at Joe Frazier's north Philadelphia gym and dreamed of bringing a middleweight boxing title to his hometown, died on its streets when his new motorcycle crashed into a tractor-trailer.

Shuler, 26, who suffered his first professional loss 10 days earlier in a first-round knockout by Thomas Hearns, was riding a Kawasaki motorcycle on Thursday north on a city street when it skidded into the cab of the truck at an intersection, police said.

The cause of the 5 p.m. accident is under investigation, according to Police Cpl. Lawrence DeJarnette.

"Champ! Yo, champ!" said some of the crowd of 100 onlookers who gathered as rescue personnel tried to free him from the wreckage, according to The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Shuler was pronounced dead at the scene, DeJarnette said. Police said he had just bought the motorcycle, and an employee of the Medical Examiner's Office who would not give his name said the temporary registration slip was found in his pocket. An autopsy was scheduled for this morning.

Police said Shuler was wearing a helmet at the time of the accident.

The uninjured driver of the east-bound truck, Paul D. Wilson, 51, was questioned, but no charges were filed, police said.

"Oh, my god. That's really tragic," said Bob Arum, who promoted the Hearns-Shuler fight. "Obviously, I'm stunned. He was a decent, decent young man."

Shuler, an outstanding amateur who was deprived of an Olympic appearance because of the boycott of the 1980 Moscow Games, had won 22 professional fights, 16 by knockout, before losing his North American Boxing Federation middleweight title March 10 to Hearns.

Duke Women Win Opener

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Duke's Connie Goins made two free throws with three seconds left to preserve a 68-67 victory over West Texas State Thursday night in the opening round of the Women's National Invitational Basketball Tournament.

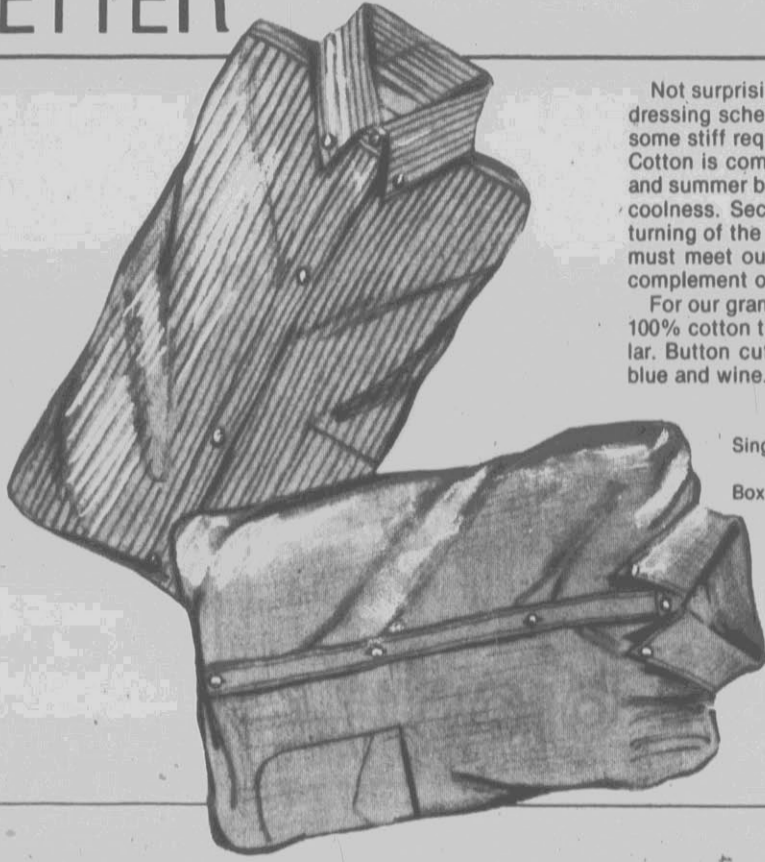

The second-seeded Blue Devils, 21-7, will play No. 6 seed Northwestern Louisiana in the second round of the tournament at 9 p.m. Friday. Northwestern downed Tennessee Tech 77-71 earlier Thursday.

The seventh seeded Lady Buffs, 24-5, will play No. 3 seed Tennessee Tech at 2 p.m. Friday.

Duke jumped out to a 37-32 halftime lead and led by as many as 10 in the second half before West Texas State tied the game with 11 minutes left.

The Blue Devils led by five in the final two minutes, but the Lady Buffs cut the margin again and missed a chance to take the lead with 10 seconds left.

Ultra-Conservative LaRouche Basks In Illinois Victory

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon LaRouche, denounced as part of the "kook fringe" of politics, is basking in the success of two of his followers and responding to his detractors by saying, "the voters of Illinois have spoken."

In a telephone interview, LaRouche said his followers won Democratic nominations for lieutenant governor and secretary of state because voters were "disgusted with the establishment."

Adlai E. Stevenson III, the Democratic nominee for Illinois governor, vowed Thursday he would not run on a ticket with LaRouche supporter Mark Fairchild, who defeated Stevenson's hand-picked choice.

"I will never run on a ticket with candidates who espouse the hate-filled policy of the U.S. Labor Party," Stevenson said.

"I think Adlai is responding to very great pressures," said LaRouche, "but the fact is the voters of Illinois have spoken in a significant way and as a realistic politician he cannot ignore what the voters have said."

Asked about Stevenson's description of his positions as "hate-filled," LaRouche replied, "That's crazy. The U.S. Labor Party doesn't exist and hasn't existed for years."

"He's reflecting not what he believes, he's reflecting what he feels it is incumbent upon him to say," LaRouche said.

LaRouche, who got his start in politics as a leftist and member of the Socialist Worker's Party, shifted rapidly to the right in the 1970s. He ran for president on the U.S. Labor Party ticket in 1976. In 1980 and 1984, he entered Democratic presidential primaries, never getting more than 3 percent of the vote.

He said he already has registered with the Federal Election Commission as a candidate for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination.

LaRouche said he and Stevenson "were in communication" regularly when Stevenson was a member of the U.S. Senate. Stevenson left the Senate after declining to seek reelection in 1980.

"We would send messages back and forth whether we agreed or not," said LaRouche, adding that the two men never had met face to face.

LaRouche said that while Democratic primary voters in Illinois supported Stevenson for governor, they wanted to "send a signal by dumping the two guys that are running with him."

In the Democratic primary for governor, Stevenson defeated LaRouche backer Peter Bowen and maintenance worker Larry Burgess.

LaRouche said people now view President Reagan as "an ineffective lame duck, a sort of Herbert Hoover."

LaRouche, who advocates massive increases in defense spending, said people also view Reagan as "vacillating, wishy-washy on the question of national defense."

He added, "The man is a lame duck, the Democratic leadership is off-base; therefore, there is a vacuum."

LaRouche said 784 of his followers are candidates for office in Democratic primaries across the country and as many as 1,500 may be running by the time all the primaries are held.

Democratic Party Chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr. issued a statement saying he was notifying party officials "in each state as we begin this important election year urging them to closely monitor the names and views of those who file for Democratic nominations at all levels of government."

"The Illinois results indicate we must take additional steps to educate voters about extremist candidates whose views, once known, would be rejected by legitimate Democrats."

Democratic National Committee spokesman Terry Michael said LaRouche's followers were "so far out, so kook fringe, that voters have not taken them seriously." That changed in Tuesday's Illinois primary.

Campaigning for the party's presidential nomination in 1984, LaRouche said Walter Mondale was a "thug" and a "bum," Jesse Jackson was a "hustler" and Gary Hart "an evil apostle of the New Dark Ages."

Asked about his rhetoric, LaRouche said, "I call things the way they are. I'm not a very nasty person on a personal level. I can be rather nasty on policy."

Reagan Signs Crop Price Support Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has signed legislation amending last year's farm bill that includes a provision he opposes: an authorization for advance crop price support payments to farmers signing up in 1986 acreage programs.

Reagan said Thursday he will not implement the advances, thanks to a decision by Congress, which had been tied up for days on the specific wording, to finally adopt language making those loan advances "completely discretionary."

Farmers are signing up in 1986 crop programs now. Normally, price support loans are available at harvest, but Congress authorized advances of part of the money at sign-up to help farmers through spring planting.

Reagan said he was pleased that Congress had revised the language in the Food Security Act, which is known as the farm bill, to make it clear that the loan advances are discretionary.

"The program is ill-advised and unnecessary, and my administration will not use its discretion to implement it," he said in a statement.

The bill, approved by Congress earlier this month, contained several other amendments to the three-month-old farm bill. It will increase fees on dairy farmers to meet deficit-reduction targets; restrict the items farmers can grow on land they have stopped using for other crops; and limit to 3 percent the amount farmers' crop yields, used to figure out subsidies, can be cut in 1986.

The president said he was pleased that the legislation changing the farm bill reduces the payment-in-kind export promotion program from $2 billion over the next three years to $1 billion.

"This reduction will allow the United States to encourage export promotion without threatening our trade policy or our national security," he said.

Reagan noted that in signing the Food Security Act last Dec. 23, he had objected to the export subsidies and had warned that the program threatened to precipitate an agricultural commodity trade war with the allies. He had also said it would be impossible to fulfill the $2 billion goal without subsidizing exports in a manner "contrary to the national security interests of the United States."

"Although this legislation does not correct all of the deficiencies contained in the Food Security Act of 1985, it nonetheless represents some improvement and for that reason I have signed it into law," he said.

Panel Says Pupils Unfit

NEW YORK (AP) — An alarming number of public school pupils in the United States are physically unfit, and a lack of mandatory, daily gym classes is the chief reason, says the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

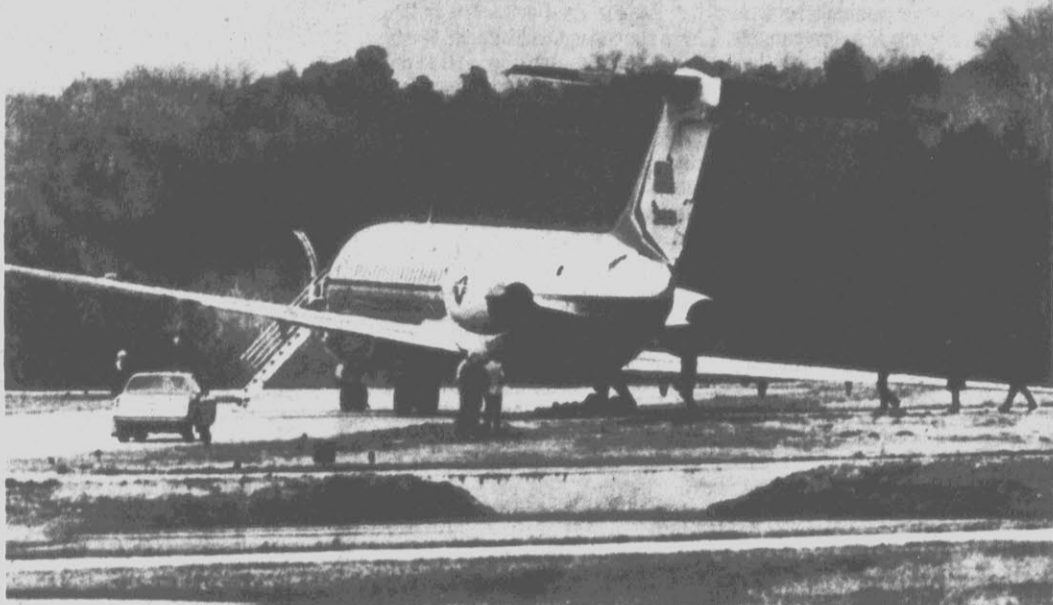

The council said Thursday that a survey of 18,857 schoolchildren last year found no improvement in physical progress in the past decade and significant declines in some cases, such as the 50-yard dash for girls.

"There are some major problems in physical fitness among the youth of this country," said George Allen, the council chairman and former head coach of the Washington Redskins. "Many children simply aren't getting the vigorous exercise they need to develop strong and healthy bodies."

He said many children performed poorly in activities such as running, jumping, flexibility and strength. "The conclusion to me is that America is in last place in physical fitness," he said at a news conference.

The survey, the largest of its kind conducted in the United States, tested 6- to 17-year-olds at 187 public schools. Allen called the poorer test results "alarming," "appalling" and "almost unbelievable."

In one test, he said, 40 percent of the boys aged 6 to 12 and 70 percent of all the girls could not do more than one pull up, and 55 percent of the girls could not do any. In others:

STUCK IN MUD — An Air Force plane carrying first lady Nancy Reagan sits at the end of a runway at Charlie Brown-Fulton County Airport in Atlanta Thursday after its right wheels slipped off the runway and became stuck in the mud. Mrs. Reagan, who was in her seat, was not injured. (AP Laserphoto)

Nancy's Plane Slips Into Mud, Gets Stuck

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan, described as "visibly shaken" when her plane slipped off the runway at an Atlanta airport, has returned safe and sound to the White House.

President Reagan told the first lady in a telephone call after the incident. "I'll be waiting for you."

Mrs. Reagan arrived at Andrews Air Force Base early Thursday evening aboard a small jet from the presidential fleet.

"We're fine," reported Elaine Crispin, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, who was seated near the first lady on the plane. No one was injured, Mrs. Crispin said.

Mrs. Reagan flew to Atlanta Thursday morning to attend a parents' anti-drug abuse conference. She had delivered a speech and was leaving town when the incident occurred.

Her plane, one of the larger planes in the presidential fleet, was taxiing on the runway and making a sharp turn when the right set of wheels slipped off the runway and became mired in the mud.

Mrs. Crispin said Mrs. Reagan was "visibly shaken and immediately asked, 'Is everyone OK?'"

The press secretary said the crew inspected the aircraft. She and the first lady got off and "sat in a hangar drinking tea and watching TV" until they departed for Washington on the smaller plane.

Mrs. Crispin said the first lady did not express any fear about flying. "She got right on the other plane," Mrs. Crispin said.

Wendy Weber, Mrs. Reagan's deputy press secretary, said the plane "was not going very fast" at the time of the incident.

Mrs. Reagan was accompanied by about 20 members of her staff and Secret Service agents, said Ms. Weber, who was not aboard the plane but spoke with Mrs. Crispin about the mishap.

The blue and white C-9 plane is a modified version of the DC-9. Ms. Weber said. Whenever the first lady flies in a government aircraft, the plane is identified by the Air Force as "Foxtrot One."

Asked if the incident was caused by pilot error, Ms. Weber declined comment.

Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Inez Almond said she did not know how fast the plane was traveling when it left the runway or how many people were aboard.

Ms. Weber said Mrs. Reagan told the president about the incident by telephone.

She said Mrs. Reagan reported that the president asked her, "Are you all right?" and that he added, "I'll be waiting for you."

Terrorists

STUTT GART, West Germany (AP) — A Stuttgart court convicted three women on charges of belonging to a terrorist group and sentenced them to prison terms ranging from eight to 15 years.

The Stuttgart High Court found Manuela Happe, 30, Ingrid Jacobsmeier, 33, and Christa Eckes, 35, guilty of belonging to the leftist Red Army Faction group. The group is blamed for a series of attacks on NATO and West German targets since the early 70s.

House Panel Told Nominating System Must Be Reformed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The creation of a Southern "Super Tuesday" primary is an indication that the system used to choose presidential nominees must be reformed, lawmakers and state officials say.

With the jockeying for position among 1988 presidential hopefuls already beginning, the House Administration subcommittee on elections heard testimony Thursday on four bills that would change the nominating process.

Those testifying doubted the rules could be changed before the presidential election two years distant.

"There is no order, rhyme nor reason to the current timetable of primaries and caucuses," said Georgia Secretary of State Max Cleland, whose state is one of the seven thus far to schedule a Southern regional primary on March 8, 1988. "I would support a system of national regional primaries, but I am convinced that ... a national system cannot be put in place by 1988."

"The jockeying by Southern states for an early regional primary should not surprise anyone," said Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich., whose state begins a lengthy process this year to pick Republican delegates for 1988. "Why should states in the South continue to see early events shape the presidential nomination battle as they sit on the sidelines?"

In recent years, Iowa, with its caucuses in January, and New Hampshire, with its first-in-the-nation primary in February, influenced the early going of the presidential races, although those states offer a tiny fraction of the delegates needed to win nomination.

Officials in the southern states believe a "super" primary held early in March would give the South more clout in the nominating process.

Rep. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., defended his state's early primary, saying congressional interference would be "another ill-conceived effort ... to wrest control of the election process from the individual states."

He said the existing system allows dark-horse candidates — "the George Bushes, the Jimmy Carters, the Gary Harts of this land, all of whom entered campaigns under-financed and without household names" — a fair shot in a small state. He also said New Hampshire voters have proven "their ability to select individuals who are palatable to the nation as a whole."

That prompted subcommittee chairman Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., to wonder if there was "something in the water" that made New Hampshire voters wiser than other Americans.

"Why change things that work?" Gregg replied.

However, Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona, who ran second to Carter in New Hampshire's 1976 Democratic primary, said too much emphasis is put on New Hampshire and Iowa. "The folks in New Hampshire and Iowa are good people, but I don't think they should have the sole responsibility of choosing our presidents," Udall said. "Many candidates have been knocked out of the race simply by not having won those states."

Panama Rejects Former President

Congressman Says Marcos Papers Are 'Encyclopedia Of Corruption'

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ferdinand Marcos' personal papers, described as "an encyclopedia of corruption," disclose $30 million in bank accounts in Switzerland, France and the Caribbean and his hand-written promise to his wife, Imelda, that she would inherit the Philippines government upon his death.

Meanwhile, it was proving an extremely difficult task for the U.S. government to find Marcos and his wife a permanent home-in-exile, as no country appeared to want them.

Panama, which appeared to be Washington's best hope, informed the State Department on Thursday that the deposed Philippines president and his wife wouldn't be welcome, it was learned. A government official in Panama confirmed that Panama had said it did not want Marcos.

U.S. officials said talks were going on with several other countries, while the Marcoses remained at their temporary haven in Hawaii.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., who Thursday released copies of 2,000 pages of documents taken from Marcos in Hawaii, said they did not contain any overall measure of Marcos' extensive wealth, which has been estimated as high as $10 billion. But he said they catalogue an "encyclopedia of corruption" during Marcos' 20-year reign.

"They provide further evidence that the Marcoses did not distinguish between the public treasury and their private property," Solarz told a news conference. He contended the Marcos government "existed for the sole purpose of plundering the wealth of the country" and brought it to the verge of bankruptcy.

There was mention of complicated real estate transactions, possible kickbacks in business dealings and bank accounts around the world containing millions of dollars. One document, hand-written on presidential stationery but unsigned, referred to $30 million in interest proceeds alone in 1974 and 1975 in several foreign banks.

It said there was $15 million from the Banque de Paris; $10 million from the Swiss Credit Bank; $2 million from Swiss Banking; and $2 million from Grand Cayman, an island in the Caribbean.

There also was mention of certificates of deposit and bankers' acceptances worth about $4 million, two-thirds of which was purchased during the period from Jan. 23 of this year to less than a week before the Marcoses fled the Philippines on Feb. 25.

While it had been widely rumored for years that Marcos planned to turn the government over to his wife in the event of his death, one of the documents, which was hand-written on presidential stationery — apparently by Marcos himself — provided the first confirmation.

Dated Jan. 17, 1975, and bearing Marcos' signature, the document said "the commission succeeding me in the exercise of powers and duties as President in the event of my death or permanent capacity shall be composed of the following: Chairman, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos..."

Titled "Presidential Decree No. 731," it also listed by title six Cabinet officers who would serve as members of the commission under his wife, but only Mrs. Marcos was listed by name. Marcos had been in ill health for some years, and Imelda Marcos already held several high government positions.

Marcos may still consider his chosen line of succession valid, as members of a group of observers to the Philippines election said here this week they believe Marcos considered himself "president-in-exile."

One of the documents refers to receipt of $11.2 million in commissions from the Westinghouse Corp. from 1976-1983, of which $8.5 million was deposited in Switzerland. Another document said $9.9 million from Westinghouse commissions was used to help finance foreign investments in the United States, Switzerland, West Germany and Hong Kong.

There was nothing to indicate that any particular transaction violated either Philippines law or the laws of other countries, although the new Philippines government of Corazon Aquino has alleged gross theft of Philippines wealth by the Marcoses and hopes the documents released Thursday will aid in recovering stolen wealth.

FDIC Checks Southwest Banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banks in the Southwest are coming under more intense federal scrutiny because of two strong economic trends: falling oil prices and a softening real estate market in the region.

An official of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. revealed Thursday that Southwestern banks are being surveyed to measure the effect of falling oil prices on their financial condition.

In a related development, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Dallas said the number of examiners are being doubled in the Southwest to audit more than 200 savings and loan associations.

Alan Whitney, a spokesman for the FDIC, said his agency's survey has been underway for several weeks at FDIC-insured banks.

"It is an effort not only by the FDIC but other regulatory agencies to do a survey in the Southwest to determine the effects of the decline of oil and gas banks that lend in the oil and gas area," Whitney told The Associated Press in an interview.

And Rebecca Speece, a bank board spokeswoman in Dallas, said in a telephone interview that 200 additional examiners are being brought in from around the country to help audit the portfolios of "more than 200 thrift" institutions in the area.

"There was a softening of the real estate market in our district, and overall there has been a change in the economic conditions here," she said. She said the 200 examiners would remain in the Southwest until about mid-year.

The FDIC insures deposits of up to $100,000 for about 15,000 member commercial and savings banks.

Whitney said the surveys went out to banks in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana as well as other banks in oil- and gas-producing states.

Whitney said it is routine for regulatory agencies to take this action if there is a change in the economy. "We would be remiss if we did not act that way," he said.

The survey was disclosed at a hearing by the House Banking Committee.

Committee Chairman Fernand J. St Germain, D-R.I., said he believes the FDIC is "now very concerned" about banks in the Southwest region because of the steep fall in oil prices.

George D. Gould, undersecretary of the treasury for finance, the sole witness at the hearing, replied he was aware the FDIC has sent out a survey to banks in the Southwest.

"We got big problems," said St Germain, referring to the health of the FDIC-insured banks.

Whitney said later that the FDIC has identified about 500 banks nationwide that are generally described as "energy banks." That means those financial institutions have lent heavily to businesses in the energy fields.

Whitney said some of the banks have returned the surveys, but he declined to reveal the early findings.

About 1,000 institutions are on the FDIC's list of problem banks.

N.Y. Approves Anti-Bias Law

NEW YORK (AP) — The city where the nation's homosexual rights movement started 17 years ago in riots sparked by a police raid on a gay bar has passed anti-discrimination legislation after the failure of seven previous attempts.

The City Council voted 21-14 Thursday to approve the measure banning discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in housing, employment or public accommodations. A violation can result in a $500 fine and a year in jail.

"It's OK to be gay and lesbian in New York!" Joyce Hunter, a leader of the Coalition of Gay and Lesbian Rights, told about 1,000 cheering people who turned out in Greenwich Village later Thursday to celebrate in the neighborhood where the 1969 raid on the Stonewall Inn sparked gay militancy.

New York's first gay rights bill was introduced 15 years ago, the nation's first such measure. It failed in committee five times and was defeated on the council floor a sixth, in 1974. Since 1971, gay rights ordinances have been enacted by Wisconsin, a dozen counties and more than 50 communities.

Mayor Edward I. Koch, who must under the City Charter hold a public hearing before signing the bill into law, said he expected to sign it next week.

"Ultimately, democracy prevailed," Koch said. "That is what is so wonderful about democracy."

The measure was opposed by Roman Catholic Cardinal John J. O'Connor and leaders of the city's large Orthodox Jewish community.

Councilman Noah Dear, whose district is largely Jewish and who led council opposition, vowed to challenge the bill in court and, if necessary, try to take the issue to voters in a referendum.

Maryland Schools Offers Teachers Benefits Package

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press Writer
UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — Wanted: 400 teachers. Fringe benefits: cheap car loans, restaurant discounts, a summer job and one month's free rent.

Prince George's County, Md., schools, which have the lowest starting teacher's salary in the Washington, D.C., area, are trying to get an edge on the competition for teachers in a seller's market by offering some unusual extras to those who are hired before August 1.

The idea came from businesspeople who have been working with the 103,000-pupil school system the last two years with the belief that strong schools are good for business.

"The school system is the heart of the community," said Winfield Kelly, president of the Advisory Council for Business and Industry, which organized the program. "If it is strong and healthy than everyone else in the community will benefit."

The business leaders, who raised more than $200,000 for a recent television advertising campaign promoting the schools, also are instructing the system's personnel staff in corporate recruiting techniques to get the best teachers.

The council will host a "hospitality suite" in April at the Boston Consortium, where 130 school systems will vie for prospective teachers. It will do the same at a similar program at the University of Maryland in May.

Kelly says that if the incentives the schools are offering applicants work "some of the brightest and most gifted teachers in the Northeast will be coming here."

"Just like everyone, we are competing for a small number of applicants," said Jacquelyn Lendsey, spokeswoman for the Prince George's County school system, which, at full force, has 5,000 teachers.

The system has the lowest starting salary in the metropolitan area — $15,738 — though an increase to $19,000 next year will make the schools competitive, Mrs. Lendsey said.

"But we are also going to have an extra edge by offering these discounts," she said.

The new teachers will receive:
— A month's free rent at their choice of 12 apartment complexes, which also will waive security deposits.

— Discounts on all consumer and auto loans and bank credit cards without an annual fee at two local banks.

— A 20 percent discount at three restaurant chains in the area.

— Summer employment in professional positions with local businesses.

The National Center for Education Statistics predicts that the current national teacher drought will accelerate and, by 1992, the schools could be 232,000 teachers short of the number needed.

Howard Carroll, spokesman for the National Education Association, said a big push is on nationally to involve business and industry in the schools.

He said he had not heard of another program exactly like the one in Prince George's County.

"Any time business and industry wants to help schools and attract young people to teaching, that's fine," Carroll said. "As a young person looking for a job, this would be appealing."

"We're not going to knock anything that is going to help, but this is not a panacea for all the problems," he said, listing other teacher grievances including class size, materials, administrative support and school conditions.

Mrs. Lendsey said teachers in the county are voting on a new contract to increase salaries and provide other benefits, though the discounts being offered to applicants are not included.

"We believe the teachers with us understand the need to attract good teachers to the system. This is a beginning. It does not mean that at some point the business community will not do something for teachers already in the system," she said.

Alabama Carries Out Execution

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — Inmates shouted and clanged on prison bars today as double murderer Arthur Lee Jones Jr. was led to the electric chair and executed for shooting a 71-year-old cab driver to death during a robbery.

Jones, 47, who was first arrested 30 years ago and came within 16 hours of execution in 1984, was pronounced dead at 12:15 a.m., seven minutes after a 30-second surge of 1,900 volts passed through his stocky, 5-foot-3 frame.

His face was covered with a black veil that hung from the front of a metal skullcap containing electrodes, and his feet didn't reach the floor as he sat in the electric chair known as "Yellow Mama" for its garish color.

Jones "seemed to be thinking and getting control of himself" as he was led into the death chamber to the sound of inmates shouting and clanging on the bars in Holman Prison, said state Prison Commissioner Freddie Smith.

"He was calm and collected," Smith said. "There was, as we predicted, no last remarks whatsoever."

Jones, a Muslim who argued that those of his faith don't steal or kill and that police had framed him for the 1981 slaying of cabbie William Hosea Waymon, was the 53rd person executed since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976. He also was under a death sentence for the murder of Vaughn Thompson, 21, during another robbery in 1981.

The first execution of a black man in Alabama in 24 years came after the U.S. Supreme Court refused late Thursday on a 5-4 vote to delay it and Gov. George C. Wallace declined to commute the sentence to life in prison.

Warden Willie Johnson, 43, a 20-year veteran of the prison system, threw the switch that killed Jones. It was Johnson's first execution.

Jones spent about eight hours Thursday with two sisters and a female cousin. He ate a last meal of pink salmon, cole slaw, candied yams, chilled peaches and a grape drink, officials said.

Foxes Will Be Poisoned

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Poisoning of up to 750 foxes whose ancestors were taken to a remote Aleutian island will go ahead next week because they threaten the survival of the rare Aleutian Canada goose, officials said.

Dennis Money, head of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's endangered species program in Alaska, said the agency plans to kill an estimated 700 to 750 foxes by dropping 50,000 thimble-sized baits laced with a poison called Compound 1080, which has been used throughout the Western United States on sheep predators, he said.

Some environmentalists, initially skeptical of the Alaska poisoning, now support it.

The Audubon Society still opposes the indiscriminate use of Compound 1080 in the West, where the poison can kill animals that are not the target of control efforts, Cline said. Compound 1080 is most effective on dog-like mammals. On Kiska Island, foxes are the only mammals.

Money said a boatload of wildlife biologists should arrive Monday at Kiska, a mountainous, windswept island near the tip of the 1,100-mile Aleutian chain. Workers in a helicopter will fly over the 70,000-acre island to count foxes and disperse baits.

The United States appointed its first ambassador to Canada in 1927.

A Reflector Review

'Brazil' Confounds Viewers Of Any Age

About half a century ago writer Dorothy Parker was called on to extemporaneously come up with one of her notable bits of wacky verse. Without hesitation, it is reported, she reeled off "Higgledy, piggledy, my red hen only lays eggs for gentlemen."

A couple of years ago Terry Gilliam, best known for his Monty Python connections, reportedly conceived an idea on the spur of the moment for a movie of a different kind. It's highly probable that he said to himself that he'd indulge in something original in cinematic extemporaneity — maybe he had a sudden inspiration like "I'll have great fun, making a film to confound everyone."

Whatever, his too-long two-hour film, "Brazil," which opens today at the Pitt Theaters, is guaranteed to confound, perplex and confuse audiences of any age. There may be some with the rare caliber of perceptive mind who can grasp buried significancies — if so, bravo to them.

Tom Stoppard and Charles McKeown joined Gilliam in concocting the far-out script. The basic premise is that of a wimpy little fellow, Sam Lowry, played to delightful perfection by Jonathan Price, who dreams and bumbles his way through life, inadvertently creating chaos in a gloomy technological world of over-computerization.

"Brazil" opens with a dream sequence of Lowry, as a glittering knight in heavenly armor, soaring in a sunlit clouded sky to the strains of the 1943 hit song, "Brazil." The movie ends on the same scene. The first is a happy dream, the second is a happy ending of insanity.

The message I get from the assortment of relentless ideas and happenings that jump out at the audience in tireless succession is one of a nightmare world in which technology cancels human wisdom and caring. Even in scenes where scores of people are energetically shuffling computer reports, there is an air of terrifying isolation.

Aside from Price, the major star status has to go to the plumbing. It's everywhere, sometimes functioning, sometimes taking on a terrifying life of its own. An apartment central heating unit, for example, becomes a rebellious, living organism that defies repair efforts.

Comedy of a darker mood pops up unexpectedly. Lowry's wealthy mother and her "dear lady friend," both addicted to face lifts, suffer contrasting results. The mother becomes younger and younger. Her friend dies of complications resulting from a fatal complication of accumulated complications. At her funeral, Lowry finds his mother drinking cocktails with other admirers. In a moment of madness, Lowry upsets the coffin of the friend — out pours a colorful array of salad vegetables.

There's no logic, no apparent motivation in a series of terrorist attacks. They just occur. And there's no obvious reason either for the periodic appearance of a congregation of squat figures who resemble Cabbage Patch dolls in a state of terminal mold.

One real plus. Michael Kamen's score based on the song "Brazil" is woven throughout the madness in conventional arrangements and in marvelous brief variations.

Robert De Niro is splendid in a cameo role as the mysterious Tuttle and Katherine Helmons is lovely and believable as the love of Sam Lowry's life.

For a different, if perplexing movie, "Brazil" is the one to see — and to try to unravel.

Reagan Debut

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Reagan is the latest presidential offspring to take up acting. "I played the part of a state party chairman," Reagan, 41, the president's elder son, said of his acting debut Thursday on CBS' "Capitol," the daytime soap opera set in the Washington world of politics and power.

'Purple' Sweeps Awards

WADESBORO, N.C. (AP) — The suspense was bearable at the first annual Anson County Academy Awards.

In fact, the film version of Alice Walker's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel "The Color Purple" took all the Felix Awards at a ceremony Thursday night.

"We are making history tonight," Anson County commissioner's Chairman Freddie Black said, welcoming the crowd. "The Color Purple" turned green for the movie company.

None of the major stars were in the standing-room-only crowd of more than 250 at Twin Valley Country Club, but that didn't dim the audience's enthusiasm.

Anson County was in the spotlight. Of course, the lights were from TV cameras, not klieg.

Purple dresses, bows, ties and suits accentuated the crowd, along with a few tuxedos and even one white dinner jacket. Purple flowers decorated the ballroom and guests were served purple punch and cake squares.

"The Felix Award presentation is a once in a lifetime event for Anson County," said Henry Morton, president of the Anson County Arts Council. "It is a perfect example of how a community can work together."

Morton announced that the Huntley farm south of Lilesville, where much of the movie was filmed, will be open for tours later in the spring.

The event honoring Spielberg's film, made in Anson and Union counties last summer, came after the film received 11 Academy Award nominations, but Spielberg did not get a nomination for best director.

The awards ceremony was sponsored by the Anson County Chamber of Commerce, Historical Society and Arts Council as part of the chamber's monthly social.

"The Color Purple" pumped about

$5 million into the economy last year," Chamber of Commerce President Bob Garris said. "We will reap residual benefits from the film for years to come."

Other Felix awards were:

Best Actor, Danny Glover, "The Color Purple."

Best Actress, Whoopi Goldberg, "The Color Purple."

Best Supporting Actor, Willard Pugh and Adolph Caesar, "The Color Purple."

Best Supporting Actress, Oprah Winfrey and Margaret Avery, "The Color Purple."

Crothers Hospitalized

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scatman Crothers was hospitalized three days this week with flu-like symptoms, but has resumed work on the set of his new CBS-TV series "Morningstar, Eveningstar," his publicist said.

"Doctors say he's A-OK," publicist Jerry Zelenka said Thursday. "He wasn't feeling well Sunday night so he was taken to Beverly Hills Medical Center with flu-like symptoms. He was released yesterday."

Crothers, 75, was hospitalized for three weeks last July after doctors found an inoperable malignant tumor behind his left lung. Doctors determined that removing the tumor was too dangerous and he has been undergoing radiation treatments since, Zelenka said.

The actor, whose real name is Sherman Crothers, began a 60-year entertainment career with a band, later moving to films and television.

He played Louie the garbageman in the NBC-TV series "Chico and the Man," and was in Stanley Kubrick's 1980 film "The Shining," and Steven Spielberg's "The Twilight Zone" in 1983. He also was in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," "The Shootist," "Hello, Dolly!" and "Bronco Billy."

Doctor Says Study Supports Account Of Jesus' Death

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Jesus Christ's execution on the cross was "gruesome and disgraceful" with extreme suffering and not the romantic death of legend, says a pathologist who wrote a new medical analysis based on historical records.

Jesus' death was probably hastened by earlier floggings, said Dr. William D. Edwards, a pathologist at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

"There has been a tendency, probably on the part of artists and denominations and even lay individuals, ... to almost romanticize the crucifixion and to not fully comprehend what a gruesome and disgraceful means of execution it was," Edwards said in a telephone interview Thursday.

"From that standpoint, there is perhaps not enough appreciation of what Christ suffered."

His analysis, co-written by a Methodist pastor and a medical illustrator, appears in today's Journal of the American Medical Association. It concludes that Jesus died from shock due to blood loss, and because the weight of his body pulling down on the outstretched arms and shoulders made breathing difficult.

The study also addresses the question of whether Jesus really did die on the cross. Christians believe that he died and rose from the dead three days later.

Most people say his death is "self-evident. It really isn't," Edwards said.

"There are a couple of arguments against the resurrection based on the case that Jesus did not die on the cross," but merely swooned and was later resuscitated. "This will put that to rest," he said.

All three co-authors are Christians, and Edwards said they knew that would cause them to be regarded as biased. So, "we tried to go to extreme lengths" to get reliable data "and let the cards fall where they might," he said.

"What we found ... does not come into conflict with Scripture," he said.

His study included a close look at the scourgings, or floggings, that were a legal prelude to execution at the time.

"The extent and importance of the scourging is often overlooked or not apparent," he said, adding that the length victims had to endure it before being crucified "was pretty much up to the ... Romans performing it."

It probably always was meant to weaken the condemned person, he said.

"Those crucified tended to survive between three to four hours and three to four days, so Jesus' death was on the short end," suggesting his lashing was severe and his blood loss significant, Edwards said.

One explanation given for accounts that Jesus cried out in a loud voice before dying may be an indication his heart ruptured, but that is unlikely, the study said. It did conclude that he might have had a heart attack.

"Jesus' death may have been hastened simply by his state of exhaustion and by the severity of the scourging," which led to blood loss and shock, the study added. Shock occurs when the body's blood flow becomes inadequate.

According to Scripture, Jesus was too weak to carry his crossbar to the site of execution and that supports this interpretation, the study said.

Though the study is not the first to conclude that Jesus probably died from asphyxiation, Edwards said most previous research has been incomplete, inaccurate or published in obscure journals.

The findings also address the nature of a spear wound inflicted on Jesus by a Roman soldier during the crucifixion.

The flow of blood and water from the wound described in the New Testament indicates the spear probably punctured Jesus' right lung and his heart, ensuring his death, the study said. Such spearings were customary so soldiers could be certain crucifixions were complete, it said.

Stop That!

Jamie Marine Pierce, right, 9 months old, of Boston has already learned to take matters in hand. She demonstrated that this week while competing with 14 other tots to be picked as the Christ Child of 1986 for the title role in the upcoming passing play, "The Christus," to be presented at a Boston church. Jamie couldn't take the crying any longer, so she put her hand across the mouth of Meghan O'Neill, also 9 months, of Arlington, Mass., in an effort to get silence. (AP Laserphoto)

Sears Issues Bed Warning

CHICAGO (AP) — Because of a second fatal accident, Sears, Roebuck & Co. is urging owners of "Brawny" bunk beds manufactured by the company before the autumn of 1984 to make sure supports for each of the two beds are securely fastened.

The company said Thursday that the most recent death occurred last September when a mattress assembly apparently dislodged and fell on a 21-month-old Pennsylvania child who reportedly was playing beneath the bed.

The company said the earlier fatal accident, in December 1983, involved a 2-year-old Denver boy.

Sears spokeswoman Susan Duchak said a settlement was made with the Denver child's family but declined to disclose the amount.

After the first accident, the company advertised the availability of free modification kits in newspapers nationwide, and through signs in retail and catalog stores.

Ms. Duchak said support wires on "Brawny" beds sold before 1984 were attached to guides on the side rails rather than screwed directly into them.

The cross-wire supports are screwed directly into the side rails of all of Sears "Brawny" bunk beds sold since the autumn of 1984, she said.

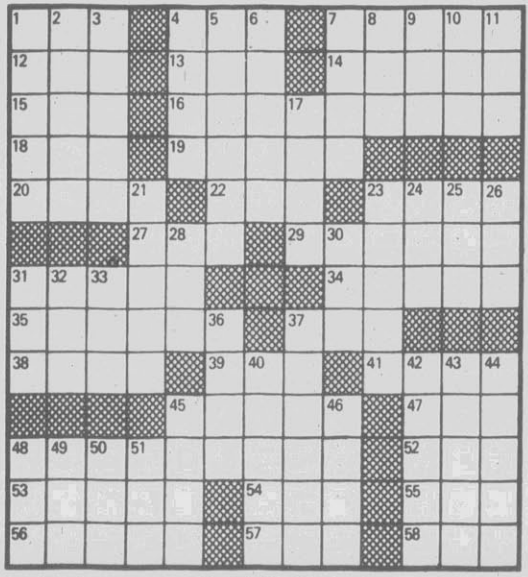

She said the company would again use a nationwide advertising campaign to urge owners of "Brawny" beds manufactured before 1984 to obtain modification kits if they had not already done so.

Sears estimated about 100,000 "Brawny" beds had been sold, but could not say how many of those were sold before autumn of 1984.

The 1985-86 tax rate for the City of Greenville is 63 cents per $100 property valuation. Call the City Tax Office at 752-4137 for more information.

When deciding which way to take a two-way finesse, there are many factors to take into account. You might be able to obtain a count of the high-card points or distribution as a clue to which defender is most likely to hold the missing key card. You might have to take it one way because of entry problems, or to keep the danger hand off lead. Today's hand shows yet another reason to take it one way rather than the other.

The auction was short and sweet. With 11 high-card points, a balanced hand and no four-card major, North had an easy raise to the no trump game.

West led his fourth-best heart, and declarer made the technically correct play of the king from dummy. (We will see in a moment why that is the correct play.) With six fast tricks available outside of the diamond suit, declarer needed only three tricks from that suit for his contract. Which way should he take the finesse?

Obviously, there is no safe way to take the finesse. No matter which defender would gain the lead, there were four heart tricks available for the taking. However, if East were to get on lead, a heart return would be automatic. If West were to win the queen, he would not know that the defenders could cash four heart tricks.

At trick two declarer led a diamond to his nine and West's queen. That worthy had an immediate decision to make. Assume that South had the guarded queen of hearts and the king rather than the ace of clubs. In that case, to defeat the contract West would have to shift to a club so his partner could gain the lead to play a heart through declarer's presumed guarded queen.

After some thought, West decided that it was better to play East for the ace of clubs than for five hearts. The contract rolled home with an overtrick.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — An Orange County district judge ruled Wednesday three former University of North Carolina wrestlers should stand trial on first-degree burglary charges stemming from a Dec. 13 dormitory break-in.

But Judge Patricia S. Hunt said there was insufficient evidence against two of three students to try them on additional burglary charges in connection with a separate dormitory break-in on Dec. 8 and dismissed those charges.

District Attorney Carl R. Fox said after the probable cause hearing that he would seek grand jury indictments against the two — freshman Derek Taaca of Oklahoma City and sophomore Rodney Daniel Mangrum of Upper Marlboro, Md. — on burglary charges in the Dec. 8 incident.

Taaca, Mangrum and senior Gene Richard Stalters of Ballston Spa, N.Y., were charged with first-degree burglary in the Dec. 13 break-in at Morrison Dormitory on the UNC campus.

Farm Dangers

On National Agriculture Day we will probably hear a great deal about economic problems facing American farmers. But complex machinery also has made farming one of the nation's most dangerous jobs, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. In 1980, farmers suffered 2,000 deaths and 200,000 injuries on the job, mostly from equipment accidents. Grain dust explosions have also taken a toll. Since 1900, more than 550 people have died in these lethal explosions.

Jesse Jackson Pleads For Help For Farmers

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CONWAY, S.C. (AP) — During an armory rally punctuated by folk music, cheering and speeches, the Rev. Jesse Jackson made an impassioned plea to save America's family farms.

"The farmer is the foundation of America," Jackson told about 500 farmers and others attending the rally called by the United Farmers Organization Thursday.

"When the farmers go down, bankers go down. And when farmers pull their children out of school, teachers go down. And when teachers go down, principals go down. And then lawyers go down," Jackson warned the gathering.

The farm group called the rally at the South Carolina National Guard Armory to focus public attention on the plight of the family farm.

Behind Jackson was a sign reading "It's 1995! Do you know where your family farms are?" And along the front of platform was a line of plastic cups, each containing a willing tobacco plant.

The United Farmers Organization, which has 15 chapters in the two Carolinas, was formed two years ago to work to save family farms.

The group is seeking, among other things, a moratorium on foreclosures to give financially troubled farmers time to refinance debts. The group also seeks farm prices that allow farmers to recover production costs and production limits based on the need for specific commodities.

"We're average, ordinary farmers who have decided this thing has gone far enough," said Linda Clapp of Pittsboro, N.C., the president of the group. "The farmer is in a card game where the dealer has marked the deck and holds all the aces up his sleeve."

The group's vice president, George Ammons of Duplin County, N.C., estimated that South Carolina could lose 6,000 family farms this year and North Carolina could lose 10,000.

"We need to look at our elected officials and say we need solutions, not promises," he said.

The rally was punctuated by cheering and song, including one by Charlie Thompson, a bearded farmer wearing a UFO hat and strumming a guitar as he sang:

Shultz Off On Journey To Europe

PARIS (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, opening a 10-day trip to Europe today, said he will press the Greek government to decide, "the sooner the better," if it intends to shut four key U.S. bases in 1988.

"We need to know where we're going here and if the bases are to be abandoned, then we'll need to make other arrangements," Shultz told reporters before landing in Paris on a flight from Washington.

"We obviously don't want to put a lot of money into them," without knowing their fate, Shultz added.

Asked to evaluate the probability of getting an answer in discussions with Greek leaders next week, Shultz said, "I'm not going to try to pin it down precisely on this trip but I'd like to. I think the sooner we can clarify this atmosphere the better."

Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu has expressed a desire to eject American forces from his country when the current pact governing the installations expires in December 1988.

In recent months, however, there has been a warming trend in U.S.-Greek ties, which Shultz attributed to Papandreu's desire to "construct a better relationship with the United States and we basically picked up on that."

Shultz, who was spending one day in Paris en route to Turkey and Greece, said he expected to "work out a good pattern" of relations with the newly installed French government.

Antibiotics

PEKING (AP) — Hundreds of Chinese children have become deaf and mute after receiving excessive doses of antibiotics, the English-language China Daily reported.

The paper quoted a health journal as saying the victims, mostly under the age of 3, were treated for bronchitis or flu by rural medical workers ignorant of proper dosages. One child became deaf and suffered nerve damage after receiving injections of the antibiotic streptomycin for 28 days, the paper said.

It said 948 out of 1,168 students in Shanghai's School for the Deaf and Mute had received improper medical treatment as children, including excessive doses of antibiotics.

"I called up my senator to ask his advice."

"I'm a farmer, what can I do?" "They said he's in a meeting and can't call you back."

"Until at least 1992." Jackson said some say there's not enough money to help, but added "that's not true."

"If we can have a $17 billion cost overrun on the B-1 bomber. ... If we can have a trillion dollars for misadventures in space they call Star Wars, we have enough money — if we have the will — to save the American farmer," he said to warm applause.

Jackson promised to organize a state-by-state lobbying effort through his Rainbow Coalition to lobby for the concerns of farmers.

"We together can determine who will be governor, who will be congressperson and who will fight for the family farm," he said.

Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Frank Epps also addressed the rally, outlining the highlights of a farm policy program he unveiled Wednesday.

NOMINATED — President Reagan has nominated Vice Adm. Paul Alexander Yost Jr., above, to be the 18th commandant of the U.S. Coast Guard. He will succeed Adm. James Cracy, who is retiring in May. (AP Laserphoto)

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 22, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You do wonderfully well now by forgetting the past and its mistakes and concentrate upon the new and inspirational aspects of your life. Think big today.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Pay that bill and forget about it, and then you can make the progress you want to in the outside world.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Steer clear of a person who makes demands on you. Get into your rightful niche so that you can operate more efficiently.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are thinking cleverly and you know how to make the right contacts so that you can improve your mode of operating.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Think how to add to your income and become a more important person and forget pleasure that is only temporary.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You are charming and can gain personal desires easily, provided you don't just sit in that easy chair and let the world go by.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Sit down quietly and think about widening your vision. Be concerned more with the big issues and not so much on details.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good day to interest your friends in some new project you have been working on. Much sociability gets right results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get outside duties handled that need attention though they are hardly enjoyable, and they are soon out of the way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go to new sites and make worthwhile contacts that can be very helpful to you in the near future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can handle many small but important matters today if you don't keep harping on one issue.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show an outside partner that you appreciate his or her ideas and outlets. Avoid a bigwig who is troubled.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get your home in better condition and add to the harmony now existing there. Build up your energies and stamina with exercise.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be able to readily understand every phase of any project that is fascinating and can make a big success of it. Give sufficient praise for good work done in order to further raise the incentive. One who will have great vision and tremendous talents.

Stock Market Hits New High

By The Associated Press
The stock market has maintained its record-setting momentum, with Wall Street's best-known indicator now at an unprecedented peak.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks jumped 16.29 on Thursday to 1,804.24, the first close ever above 1,800, topping the previous closing high of 1,792.74 reached last Friday.

Optimism about the outlook for corporate profits and the American economy has been sparked by declining interest rates and lower oil prices.

Meanwhile, a Commerce Department report Thursday shed some favorable light on consumers' financial standing.

The government said the personal income of Americans rose a healthy

0.6 percent in February, following January's 0.1 percent gain. The income growth included sizable increases in wages and salaries, which rose by $10.3 billion at an annual rate in February. This was 0.5 percent above January.

Because wages are the segment of income growth that affects consumer spending the most, this increase was taken as a good sign that the sluggishness in sales so far this year will not continue.

One weaker detail in the report, however, was that consumer spending in February rose just 0.3 percent.

Many analysts believe the United States and other countries will reap economic benefits from the weakness in oil prices because cheap oil will free up money for other pursuits.

But the drop in petroleum prices could cost OPEC and other oil producing countries dearly.

Petroleum prices have fallen to around $15 a barrel from $30 a barrel over the past five months.

In other economic news Thursday:

—The Federal Reserve Board reported the nation's basic money supply jumped $5.7 billion in the week ended March 10. Even though the increase in M1 was larger than expected, interest rates showed little reaction in the credit markets. M1 represents cash and other funds readily available for spending.

—The Investment Company Institute said assets of the nation's 361 money-market mutual funds rose $1.96 billion in the latest week to reach the highest level in nearly nine months.
