Rose High May Move In 1990s, West Says

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Depending on future action by the consolidated board of education, long range goals for school buildings in the county may include relocating Greenville's Rose High School to the present Greenville Middle School site on Arlington Boulevard sometime in the 1990s.

The city board of education has an option to purchase 17.8 acres of land adjoining the middle school property as a site for athletic facilities — including a football stadium for Rose High.

School Superintendent Eddie West said last week that the Greenville board, for more than three years, has been considering the purchase of property for athletic facilities, and for a longer period of time been considering the future relocation of the high school.

"It's important to point out that when the middle school was designed and built (in 1978), that it was planned at some future point in time it would be converted, (and) the (city school board) has had in its long range capital improvement plan this eventual conversion.

"Other sites were looked at within the Greenville city limits (by city school officials), but those sites did not meet regulatory requirements," for one reason or another, according to West.

With that as a background, West said the conversion of Greenville Middle to a high school — which would require the doubling in size of the building — is "one of a series of projects that are part of a long range capital outlay program," he will recommend to the consolidated board of education in the weeks ahead.

But he emphasized the conversion of the middle school to a high school is "a long ways down the road. We're talking about, certainly, into the 1990s."

"Obviously a conversion could not take place until such time as the existing Rose High School (on Elm Street and adjacent to the East

Gorbachev Seeks Test Ban Session With President

By ROXINNE ERVASTI
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Saturday called on President Reagan to meet him in Europe as soon as possible to negotiate a nuclear test ban agreement.

He made no mention of the superpower summit that is supposed to be held in the United States this year, which the two leaders announced at their first meeting in Geneva last November.

In a nationwide television address, Gorbachev said the Soviet Union's unilateral nuclear test moratorium — now in effect nearly eight months — will expire Monday, but that no Soviet tests will be held unless the United States continues its atomic weapons testing.

The United States conducted an underground nuclear explosion in Nevada on March 22.

Gorbachev said, "I am ready to meet President Reagan in the nearest future in London or Rome, or in any other European capital that will agree to receive us, in order to reach agreement on this question (of ending nuclear tests)." He said he did "not see any insurmountable obstacles to this — political, technical or any other."

"What is needed is the necessary political will and understanding of our mutual responsibility," Gorbachev said. "We propose to meet, exchange views on this crucial problem and issue instructions to draft an appropriate agreement."

In Santa Barbara, Calif., where Reagan is on vacation, White House spokesman Dale Petroskey did not issue an explicit rejection of Gorbachev's offer, but called on the Soviets to accept Reagan's "long-standing proposal that we have our experts meet" on limiting nuclear tests.

The statement also noted the agreement between Gorbachev and Reagan about meeting in the United States this year.

The Soviets announced in August a nuclear test moratorium to last through 1985. Gorbachev later extended the unilateral test ban to March 31, and then said the Kremlin would refrain from tests if the United States did.

Gorbachev said of the Soviet moratorium, "I can say that it is, as before, in effect until March 31, 1986. But even after that date, as it was

Court Acquits Six In 1981 Pope Plot

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — A court Saturday acquitted three Bulgarians and three Turks — "the Bulgarian connection" — of conspiring to murder Pope John Paul II in St. Peter's Square in 1981, saying not enough evidence was offered to justify a conviction.

The defense said the decision demolished prosecutors' claims that Bulgaria and the Soviet KGB conspired to assassinate the Polish-born pope because of his support for the Polish free trade federation Solidarity.

However, the jury of two judges and six civilians did not completely clear the defendants of suspicion. Italian courts have the option of making an outright declaration of innocence or ruling that evidence was inadequate to convict, as in this case.

The pope was badly wounded in the May 13, 1981 shooting, but recovered.

Prosecutor Antonio Marini had recommended the court acquit the Bulgarians, but said he would appeal the acquittal of the Turks.

The defense also said it was appealing in hopes of completely clearing the defendants.

"I am not prepared to say that these are definitive sentences," said Chief Judge Severino Santiapichi, who led the jury. "I think there will be a second trial."

Under Italian law, an appeals court would hold a full-fledged trial.

One of the Turks, Omer Bagci, was convicted Saturday on a lesser charge of smuggling a pistol into Italy and was sentenced to three years and two months in prison. Judicial sources said he will not have to serve

School Board Anxious To Get Overdue Preclearance Ruling

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt-Greenville Consolidated Board of Education is stuck in a holding pattern while it awaits an overdue preclearance decision from the U.S. Justice Department allowing it to proceed as a functioning body, according to school officials.

The decision, which was due March 17, still hasn't been made, and school officials say procedural and policy decisions have been delayed, hampering efforts to have the merger intact by the July 1 deadline.

After the N.C. Legislature approved changes to the consolidated board in June 1985, application for clearance was made in July 1985.

"We are in a sort of hurry up and wait situation," said Barry Gaskins, public information director for Pitt Schools. "We're feeling a bit of anxiety. We have been waiting for two weeks."

Gaskins said many issues have been covered by the board already, but a few others hinge on the preclearance.

"Maintenence, transportation, food service and administration is all set," he said. "The instruction and finance areas are not consolidated. We still have two sets of payrolls for the city and the county."

The delay has brought attention to certain little items that could have been already handled, according to Gaskins.

"A lot of little things have cropped up," he said. "They are routine things like whether to plan two budgets or one budget and whether to get one set or two sets of checks."

The Pitt-Greenville Consolidated Board last met in January when board members decided to stop meeting until the pre-clearance was granted.

"Policy decision have stopped by the board not meeting," Gaskins said. "By that happening, it will put a tremendous amount of pressure on the board to meet many times to decide on all these policies."

In effort to make up for lost time, the board has planned a series of workshop sessions in April to go through policies, according to Gaskins.

Despite the delay, Gaskins remains confident the Justice Department will award the preclearance.

"We're confident we're going to get it. But there are all the rumors out there that we won't," he said. "The amount of information the Justice Department deals with across the country is probably what is holding it up. It could be called 'bureaucratic lag-time.'"

"Our main concern is the uncertainty the community is feeling," Gaskins said.

Meanwhile, the school finance officials have been preparing for the school year under a consolidated board or as two separate units.

"In finance, we knew we had to operate in 1985-86 with two separate payrolls," said Dan Thomas, controller for Pitt schools. "We also planned for consolidation on July 1, but the delay has caused us to wait to decide whether to go with the new plan or operate as we are now."

While Thomas said his department is prepared to go with either plan, certain problems have arisen.

"Certain operational things, like recommending a bank, can't be done," Thomas said. "We need to know things that have an impact on

Pilot Allegations Probed

LONDON (AP) — Police said Sunday they were investigating allegations that Libyan pilots training in Britain may have volunteered to fly suicide missions against American targets after last week's confrontation between U.S. and Libyan forces.

Police said the offer to form kamikaze-type squads was apparently made by a Libyan trainee pilot in Britain in an anonymous telephone call to Tripoli radio that was broadcast Thursday by the state-run network.

The broadcast was monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., said Inspector David Horsburgh of Thames Valley police in Oxfordshire, west of London.

The caller, who did not identify himself in the broadcast, claimed that "we, the revolutionary force, are prepared to become suicide squads against America and its arrogance ... We will hit with an iron fist anyone like dirty (President) Reagan who contemplates aggression."

The Sunday Times of London reported that Adil Masood, 23, a Libyan pilot training at the Oxford Air Training School near Kidlington, north of Oxford, had confirmed making the call.

Masood was quoted by The Sunday Times as saying he was prepared to do "whatever we are instructed to do" even if it meant "going on a suicide mission to the U.S."

Recycling Project Gaining Interest

(Related photo on A-14)

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Recycling has to be economically attractive and not too much of a personal ordeal in order to work — yet it also takes a measure of idealism on the part of the consumer, its advocates in Greenville say.

Two idealists named Ruth Moskop and Ann Maxwell have enrolled their neighbors, the city, the county and two local agencies in a pilot project to prove Greenville residents would separate their household refuse if recycling became easily accessible.

The city and county are contributing expertise and collection services and the East Carolina Vocational Center and the Pitt County Mental Health Center are contributing expertise and their recycling services already in place.

Now the two women and their coworkers are seeking to induce more of the residents of the Tar River Neighborhood to take part.

A few months ago, the Greenville Recycling Committee was formed. It is composed of Mrs. Moskop; Mrs. Maxwell; Dee Brockman, another Tar River neighborhood resident; Mayo Allen, city public works director; Terry Anderson, city sanitation director; Phil Dickerson, county planner; Doug Bonds, ECVC recycling division director; Troy McLean from the Mental Health Center; and several others.

Two months ago the committee started curbside pickup of clear glass, newspaper and aluminum in the Tar River Neighborhood, which is bounded by the Tar River, Reade Street, 10th Street and Forest Hills Drive, with the East Carolina University excluded. The pickups were on separate days.

During April a new approach will be taken. All three pickups will take place at or shortly after 8 a.m. on the same day — the first Saturday of each month, with rain dates being the first subsequent Saturday it doesn't rain.

A Separate Pickup

Since so many non-residents of the Tar River Neighborhood have expressed interest in being part of the program and since there is a need to keep statistics on the Tar River Neighborhood pickup to prove the program's effectiveness, another separate service has been added. A drop-off place will be provided from 8 a.m. to noon in the parking lot of Overton's Supermarket, with a Recycling Committee volunteer manning the site to be sure that glass, aluminum and newspapers are not mixed.

Glass for recycling must be clear glass at the present time, though colored glass may be taken later. It's being kept at the Greenville Vocational Center until 10,000 pounds are collected. Then will be transported to a glass company in Wilson which buys it. Labels may be left on jars and bottles, but not metal caps.

Aluminum can be anything from beer and soft drink cans to pie plates to window frames. No other metals are allowed. It is being collected and processed by clients of the Pitt County Mental Health Center, whose work site is adjacent to the MHC greenhouse on State Road 1725.

announced, we will not conduct nuclear explosions, if the United States acts likewise. We are again giving the U.S. administration a chance to take a responsible decision — to end nuclear explosions, failing which, the Soviet Union will resume testing. This must be absolutely clear."

Gorbachev said the March 22 U.S. test was "by no means accidental" and was timed with the expiration of the Soviet moratorium. He said the Soviet people and the world were "incensed" over the test.

"I must tell you frankly that we regard the present actions of the American administration, which is continuing nuclear tests despite pressing demands of the peoples, as a pointed challenge to the Soviet Union, and not only to it but also to the whole world . .." Gorbachev said.

"Everything shows that the United States ruling grouping has placed the narrow selfish interests of the military-industrial circles above the interests of the whole of mankind and its own people," he said. "The manner in which this is done is also quite important: pointedly, arrogantly and with disregard for the opinion of the world community. There is neither a sense of realism nor of responsibility."

The United States has rejected a test moratorium, saying the "reliability and credibility" of the U.S. nuclear deterrent depended on its test program. Washington also has said the Soviets called their unilateral moritorium only after completing major testing of their own.

The Reagan administration also has said problems concerning verification need to be worked out. Underground testing also is a component to the U.S. program to develop a space-based missile defense system, popularly known as "Star Wars," which the Soviets seek to stop.

Gorbachev has made verification proposals, and this month Reagan sent the Soviet leader a detailed outline on a sophisticated new verification plan. Reagan also invited Soviet experts to view the next U.S. nuclear test blast.

"We set certain hopes on the Geneva meeting with the president of the United States of America and expected to reach agreement with him on this matter (ending nuclear tests) as well," Gorbachev said.

He said the Soviets proposed the European meeting after concluding "that the situation requires immediate action."

In November, Reagan and Gorbachev decided to hold a summit in the United States in 1986 and one in the Soviet Union in 1987. The United States has proposed a meeting in the United States in June, but officials say there has been no Soviet reply.

Soviet officials have said the Kremlin still wants a summit but that it has to be productive.

More Shuttle Debris Found

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A Navy salvage ship reported Saturday that it had retrieved several small pieces of the space shuttle Challenger, but that its divers were hampered by poor visibility and silt.

"It's very difficult," the USS Preserver radioed. "The divers have identified several pieces on the bottom, but they're heavily silted and have to be dug out."

Before bad weather forced the Preserver into port more than a week ago, it had picked up about 10 percent of the debris from the shattered cabin and most of the remains of the seven astronauts killed in the Jan. 28 explosion.

The 10-ship recovery fleet returned to the 480-square-mile search area northeast of Cape Canaveral on Thursday, but high wind and rough seas continued to plague them. Some since have returned to port.

The Preserver reported Friday tht it had picked up four large pieces from the cabin. The Edwin Link, the mother ship of a four-man submarine, came into port Friday with one of the rocket nozzles from Challenger's three main engines.

So far, searchers have not located the aft segment of the right solid-fuel booster rocket which contains the joint suspected of leaking and causing the explosion.

Drinking

ATLANTIC BEACH (AP) — Atlantic Beach officials have approved plans to ban drinking of alcoholic beverages on streets and sidewalks but to allow it on a section of the beach strand.

Drinking would be allowed on a blocklong section of the beach in front of the Atlantic Beach boardwalk.

Carolina University campus) property is purchased, either by the university (which has, from time to time expressed an interest in the property) or by a private developer," West said. "Funds from the sale of Rose (opened in 1957) would then be used to convert the middle school to a high school. That would require no commitment of local tax dollars from the capital reserve fund or other tax dollars for the construction," he emphasized.

Aside from the fact that the board of education already owns the middle school property (with enough land for expansion), other advantages in converting the school to a high school include the fact that it is centrally located within the city limits, is located on a four-lane artery (Arlington Boulevard) that would facilitate bus transportation, and by the time the conversion would take place, will have athletic facilities suitable for a high school on the site, West suggested.

West said that the acquisition of the property for athletic facilities with money the city school board "had set aside for land acquisition," is "part of the commitment of the Greenville city board of education to having the educational and athletic facilities for a high school in one complex." (The athletic complex, he said — including fields for football, baseball, soccer, facilities for track — will be built with funds "raised by private subscription.")

Going hand-in-hand with the high school conversion project, West said, would be the addition of space at Aycock Junior High School — with funds for the addition also coming from the sale of Rose High.

Aycock, he suggested, would be expanded to house grades six through eight, while grades nine through 12 would be housed at the converted middle school, "so we would have consistant organizational pattern throughout the consolidated school system."

At present, the middle school has only seventh graders, while students in grades eight and nine attend Aycock Junior High. Rose houses grades 10, 11 and 12.

"All I can do is recommend," West said. "Our intent is to recommend (the future changes) to the consolidated board ... as one of several projects. The board sets the policy. I administer it."

ECU Chancellor John Howell acknowledged Friday that the university has had an interest in the Rose High property for some time and has "had some very tentative discussions" with public school officials about the site.

"We have it in our long range plans," but they are "very tentative," with "no timetable," Howell said.

Loving Memories of Charity Johnson Wooten

In sad and loving memory of our dearly beloved mother, grandmother and great grandmother.

Dear Mom,

You went away so suddenly, you never said goodbye. God seems to know best but we will always wonder why. Little did we know that morning the sorrow the day would bring. The blow was hard, the shock severe. We never thought your death was so near. Though your smile is gone forever, your hand we cannot touch, we should never lose the memory of the one we love so much.

Love and miss you,
Your Children

Something To Think About

Donovan Phillips
DIRECTOR

EXPRESSIONS OF SYMPATHY

Many people desire to express their sympathy by sending flowers or some other memorial in addition to extending their condolences in person. Others do this because they cannot attend either the visitation or the service.

For the most part, those who wish to demonstrate their feelings should be able to do so, in the way they prefer and which is most natural for them. Flowers, for example, have a message all their own—one which is universal. They also add beauty to the casket setting and to the funeral service.

While it is considered proper for the family to suggest a certain memorial (such as a donation to a particular charity), this should not be done in such a manner as to exclude alternate expressions of sympathy. It should also be presented in such a way so as not to be construed as a tangible solicitation of sympathy. The funeral director can advise on these and similar matters.

Drivers Charged

Two drivers were charged following vehicle mishaps investigated by Greenville police over the weekend.

Officers said William Kent Worthington of 110 Crown Point Road was charged with a safe movement violation following a Saturday collision on Martinsborough Road.

Police said the Worthington car and a vehicle driven by Thomas Ray Cooper of Route 1, Grimesland, collided at about 2:30 p.m. Damages were set at $1,100 to the Cooper car and $400 to the Worthington car.

Cars driven by Marcus Conrad Howell of 215-A Scott Hall, East Carolina University, and Leroy Alan Mercer of Route 2, Greenville, collided at about 2:43 p.m. Friday on Charles Boulevard near Brook Road.

Police charged Howell with failure to reduce speed to avoid a collision. Damages were set at $700 to the Howell car and $200 to the Mercer vehicle.

Thefts Probed

Greenville police are investigating three thefts reported Friday and Saturday.

Police said a garbage can valued at $15 was taken from a residence at 310 Dupont Circle at about 5:38 p.m. Friday.

At 3:03 p.m. Friday, police said an employee at Sunshine Video, 214 Arlington Blvd., reported the theft of four marquis letters from a sign in front of the store. Police set the value of the letters was set at $10 each.

About $300 in cash was taken from Freshway on Dickinson Avenue Saturday at 12:31 a.m., officers reported.

VFW Fighting For Rights Of Veterans, Chief Says

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Budget cuts dictated by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law jeopardize veterans benefits, but the Veterans of Foreign Wars is fighting to protect the rights of servicemen, the commander-in-chief of the VFW of the United States says.

John Staum made his comments at a breakfast meeting at Greenville VFW Post 7032 Saturday.

"According to the original Gramm-Rudman-Hollings bill, every benefit would have been cut drastically, and the Veterans Administration Medical System probably would have been eliminated," Staum, of Minneapolis, said.

"We are putting 50 percent of our lobbying effort into taking care of the vets who need these programs."

Staum, who was named commander-in-chief at the 86th annual convention in Dallas, said politicians in Washington are picking on the wrong people.

"There are no millionaires in these hospitals. They are the last safety net and hope for quality military care," he said. "Congress should look at the escalating medical prices in the private sector, not the Veterans Administration Medical System."

In an effort to dodge the cutting blade of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, Staum said the VFW is battling in Washington for the nationms 28 million veterans.

"We've had a tough time holding the line on the Veterans Administration budget. We have to lobby very hard just to keep what we have," Staum said. "Our major concern right now is the veteran who needs medical help. It should be there for him if he needs it."

While efforts for a balanced budget by 1991 continue in the nation's capital, Staum said an attempt to cut benefits to veterans is undermining one of the best policies ever incorporated by the government.

"The investment in the veteran is probably the best investment this nation makes," he said. "We train them with skills so they can get a better job and make more money, and when they make more money, they pay more income tax."

As the organization deals with the budget situation, the ranks of the VFW swelled for the 31st consecutive year, according to Staum.

"We're entering our 31st year of a membership that increased from the year before," he said. "And we're 10,000 ahead of last year at this time."

Although Staum and fellow members of the VFW are fighting against some budget cuts domestically, he said the organization supports the recent actions of the Reagan administration in Libya and Nicaragua.

"We back the president and the commander of the fleet in the Mediterranean," Staum said. "We're tired of seeing Americans pushed around. We've been pushed around, and it's time we pushed back."

"We also back the president in Central America," he said. "We feel he's just sending money down. It's better that we send money now to keep us from getting physically involved later on."

Poster Child Named

For the second year, Charlie Beddard, 10, of Williamston is serving as poster child for the Coastal Plains chapter, March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation.

Charlie was born with a birth defect known as spina bifida ("open spine"). Some 1,500 babies or one in 2,000 are born with this condition each year in the United States, according to the foundation.

Committee Post

Dr. Harold Kallman of Greenville was recently appointed to the Committee on Aging of the American Academy of Family Physicians, a national organization for family doctors.

No Service Planned

There will be no Sunday morning service at Mt. Calvary Free Will Baptist Church due to the district union meeting.

There will be an evening service at the church at 7 with the Rev. T.L. Davis. Music will be provided by the combined choirs and the No. 1 usher board will serve.

'Superior' Ratings

Two Greenville bands received "superior" ratings at the recent North Carolina Music Educators contest/festival in Wilson.

The Greenville Elementary Band, composed of sixth grade students from South Greenville and Wahl-Coates schools and directed by Dottie Jo Knight, received a "superior" rating in grade two band. This is the third consecutive year the band has received a "superior" rating at the state contest.

The E.B. Aycock Junior High School Symphonic Band received the only "superior" rating given to a grade four unit in the junior high competition. Directed by Chuck Allen, the band has received this honor for three consecutive years.

The E.B. Aycock Concert Band also attended the competition, receiving "excellent" in the grade three division. This was the first state competition entered by the concert band.

Alumni Activity

The Pitt County Alumni Chapter of East Carolina University will hold a silent auction Saturday at the home of Dr. John Howell, Fifth Street with proceeds going to the Gladys D. Howell Scholarship and the Pitt County Alumni Scholarship.

Tickets are available from any member of the Pitt County alumni board of directors or by calling 757-6072.

Enemy Was Not From Without

WASHINGTON (AP) — Terrel H. Bell has faded into the relative obscurity of academic life in Ogden, Utah, but his experience as a member of President Reagan's Cabinet deserves to be remembered.

Bell recently described his four years as secretary of education and the account sounded like he might have had some inspiration from Lewis Carroll, who chronicled Alice's Adventures in Wonderland.

To begin with, Bell came to Washington to take command of a department the president wanted abolished.

"I'm not certain why I was selected by the president," he wrote in an article in the education magazine, Phi Delta Kappan. After all, he noted, he had once testified in support of creation of the Education Department.

Bell's account offers insights into Reagan's laid-back management style as well as into the tactics of movement conservatives who flooded into the capital with the new administration, though not always as part of it.

The former education secretary described battles with "proponents of the doctrines of the extreme right." He called their ideas "radical and off-the-wall."

Bell's targets retorted that his comments were "a rather pathetic exercise" and "sour grapes."

Beyond the squabble between the secretary of the movement conservatives, there emerges a fascinating account of how the president operates, particularly how he balanced the requirements of governing with the demands of the ideologues who laid claim to the heart of his presidency.

From the earliest days of the Reagan presidency, there was discontent on the right over the new president's willingness to turn to people from the moderate wing of the party to take key administration posts. The principal target was James A. Baker III, who was named White House chief of staff.

Bell was another of the appointees with a moderate taint and he soon found himself involved in bureaucratic guerrilla warfare. He discovered that the enemy were not entrenched holdovers from the previous Democratic administration.

"Acts of insubordination and disloyalty to me forced me, on several occasions to insist that some presidentially appointed senior staff members with impeccable conservative credentials be removed from positions of power in the department," wrote Bell. The reaction from some senior White House aides was to make "it known to me that they felt I should be removed and the able conservatives retained."

But it turned out Bell had a powerful ally in the White House. His name was Ronald Reagan.

"The president supported his Cabinet tenaciously, whether they were under attack from the right or the left," wrote Bell. When the education secretary tried to get rid of subordinates he felt were undercutting him, the president backed Bell.

Reagan entered office with a reputation as the most ideological president in modern times, a man with rigid ideas and determined to implement a conservative agenda.

In certain areas that view was proven correct.

On defense spending and taxes and cutting the domestic side of the budget, Reagan was unyielding.

But when presented with specific choices, the president often opted for the pragmatic route or simply showed little interest in the details.

Such seemed to be the case with education.

Bell could never get the president to approve an overall education policy, a fact the secretary blamed in part on the influence of conservatives who were determined that the only policy should be abolition of the Department of Education and an end to any federal role in the area.

As with so many issues, Reagan seemed willing to give the New Right hope they might eventually prevail, while at the same time refusing to meet their largest demands.

It's Time To Act On Tuition Proposal

WASHINGTON — Big Bill Bennett, secretary of education, made a strong pitch a few weeks ago for the administration's bill to provide tuition vouchers for poor children. "Parental choice in education," he told a House committee, "is an idea whose time has come."

The proposed legislation is aimed solely at the parents of "educationally disadvantaged children," the poorest of the poor.

"More affluent families can already give their children greater opportunities. They can choose their schools by buying a home in the neighborhood of their choice, or by sending their children to a private school. The poor don't have that kind of choice. Yet it is their children for whom education may represent the best opportunity for success in later life."

Bennett would redress some of this imbalance by making available to such parents a voucher of roughly $600 for each child of school age. The vouchers could be applied toward tuition at a private school, or they could be used for specialized instruction at a public school. The choice would lie entirely with the parents.

Three objections are voiced against the proposal. Critics charge that the plan would offer very little choice to poor families, that it would "destroy the public schools," and that to the extent it benefits religious schools it violates the Constitution.

Bennett argues to the contrary. A $600 voucher might not go far toward the $8,000 tuition of an elite boarding schools, but the median tuition for a private elementary school is $773. That puts the possibility of private education within reach of many families near the poverty level.

Not all of the eligible families would opt for private education. Bennett believes many parents would apply their vouchers to top-flight schools outside their normal school districts, and he denies that a voucher system would harm a public school system.

What of the constitutional issue? It is generally anticipated that thousands of eligible poor families would choose to send their children to a Catholic parochial school. Bennett did not address the constitutional question in his testimony, but there is good reason to believe that at least five members of the U.S. Supreme Court would find no problem in the plan.

In June 1983, the high court handed down its opinion in Mueller v. Allen. Here it voted 5-4 to approve a Minnesota law that permits taxpayers, in computing their state income tax, to deduct expenses incurred in providing "tuition, textbooks and transporation" for their children. The deduction is neutrally available to every family with children of school age, but it especially benefits the parents of about 91,000 in private schools. An estimated 86,000 of these pupils attend sectarian schools.

Speaking through Justice William Rehnquist, five members of the court found no violation of the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. The primary aim of Minnesota's tax law was not to benefit religious instruction, but to benefit parents. Justice Thurgood Marshall, speaking for the four dissenters, contended that the system served "to advance religion" and hence could not pass constitutional muster.

Babe Gets His Name

Shortly after he signed a contract to play with the Baltimore Orioles in 1914, George Herman Ruth and his teammates came to Fayetteville for spring training. It was during that visit that the 19-year-old youth acquired the nickname "Babe" and slammed out his first home run as a professional baseball player.

That first homer came during an intrasquad game in which Ruth played short stop for the "Buzzards" against the "Sparrows." That first homer came late in the game, and the ball sailed over the right field fence into a cornfield.

"The ball carried so far that I measured the distance after the game," wrote Rodger H. Pippen, who played with Ruth on the Buzzard team and who later served as sports editor for the Baltimore American. "It was close to 350 feet. With today's lively ball that wouldn't be considered a long clout. In those days with the dead apple, it was so unusual the people in Baltimore thought I was having a drunken dream when I flashed the news back home."

In 1948, Ruth himself recalled those early days in Fayetteville in "The Babe Ruth Story" as told to Bob Considine. Ruth recalled how Jack Dunn, the Oriole boass, had "signed me without ever seeing me play" and had come "to the barred gate of St. Mary's to claim me." Ruth had been admitted to the St. Mary's Industrial School, a Baltimore reformatory, by his father, who ran a saloon. He was learning to be a cigar maker when his big chance came.

"I was the proudest and the greenest kid in the country," Ruth told Considine. "... I got to some bigger places than Fayetteville after that, but darn few as exciting ... I got the name Babe during those first few days in Fayetteville. It came out of a couple of incidents. Even in those days Dunn already had a reputation for picking up very young players and developing them. Some of his older plauers used to kid him a lot about the baby-faced kids he concentrated on, and the first time they saw me with him — on the field — was no exception.

"On that day, Dunn practically led me by the hand from the dressing room to the pitcher's box. I was as proud of my Orioles' uniform as I had been of my first long pants. Maybe I showed that pride in my face and the way I walked.

"'Look at Dunnie and his new babe,' one of the older players yelled.

"That started it, I guess."

Ruth also recalled how as a green kid elevators were something new to him and he got a kick out of playing with the one in the Fayetteville hotel. He liked to lean into the shaft to watch the elevator come down. He nearly got his skull crushed one time while doing this.

"You're just a babe in the woods," one of his teammates commented.

"After that they called me Babe," Ruth said.

Pippen recalled that in the first game between the Buzzards and Sparrows, Ruth started out at short-stop and wound up pitching. He said Ruth had two assists and one out with no errors playing short stop. Meanwhile Pippen, playing center field, came through with a triple and a double at bat.

On April 4, 1952, the City of Fayetteville staged a big whoop-te-do for the dedication of a historical marker commemorating Babe Ruth's first home run. Ruth's widow Mrs. George Herman Ruth unveiled the marker in a ceremony at the site of the old Cape Fear Fairgrounds ball park. The ceremony came at the end of a parade through the city and was the highlight of Babe Ruth Day observance. Notables on hand for the observance included Gov. W. Kerr Scott in addition to such sports notables as Connie Mack, also known as Mr. Baseball; Forsyth County Sheriff Ernie Shore, a teammate of Ruth's; Bill Dickey, New York Yankee cather and also a Ruth teammate, and a host of others.

Waste Sites, Schools, Council

To the editor:

Of the 12 locations selected by the U.S. Department of Energy as potential sites for a repository for high-level nuclear waste, one is 12 miles from the center of Asheville and one is 17 miles from the center of Raleigh.

If either is selected, the economic and environmental balance of our state would be irrevocably altered. A high-level nuclear waste dump in the mountains would threaten the water supply for the Southeastern United States. A dump near Raleigh would severely damage tourist trade and value of real estate.

Transportation of this material through our state will jeopardize the health of us all, especially our children, born and unborn. Hundreds of trucks and trains carrying the deadly cargo would descend upon North Carolina each year from all over the United States, endangering all who live near their paths. A spill caused by a wreck could render huge areas uninhabitable for many years.

What can we do?

Register to vote in the May 6 primary, when the referendum on nuclear waste will be on the ballot. April 7 is the last day to register. Unaffiliated voters will be able to vote in the referendum, even though this is a primary.

Vote against the dump and encourage everyone you know to register and vote against the dump.

We must send the DOE the message loud and clear that we will not accept a nuclear waste repository. The referendum is the most powerful tool we have.

The DOE will hold public hearings — in Raleigh April 2 and in Asheville April 4. Please attend to show the depth of our resolve.

For information on ways to help, write to Citizens for Choice on Nuclear Waste, P.O. Box 653, Dillsboro, N.C. 28725.

To the editor:

The collective will of the people is expressed by the legislative branch of the government. But for years this will to legislate has been impeded by a subjective-minded Supreme Court's abuse of its power. All that is needed in this country to bring about a revolution in the educational field is for a majority in either house of Congress to only fund public education on the condition that both sectors of our society (private and public) share equally in those funds. If the Supreme Court won't approve of such a measure, then public education would be brought to a halt until they comply or the state would have to refund taxpayers their money to educate their children on their own.

If you taxpayers are tired of paying premium prices for horrendous education for your children, do something about it. It's easier than you might think. All that is needed to shut down public education in a particular state is for a majority in either house of the legislature to vote against funding of public education. Since public education is so dependent on federal funds, the same would apply on the national level for the whole country. So you can see why it is necessary to elect good people who are interested in justice for all, both on the national and local levels. I believe that all we need to do is to get one state to act and eventually the others would follow.

The time for considering public education a sacred cow is past.

To the editor:

I am among the hordes seeking to refinance my home.

With 30-year fixed rates in the 9- to 10-percent range and a 13.5 percent current loan, this makes great economic sense.

However, it has come to my attention that this process is a massive ripoff by the banks and lawyers. Having been gouged once for points, origination fees, title searches, credit reports, surveys and appraisals, the lenders require the whole process to be repeated: even when you go to the same mortgage company that now holds your loan. Worse yet, we happily go along with their fraud.

A mortgage for a house is a contract between the lender and the homeowner setting the terms for repayment of the loan. Any contract can be simply amended. All that is needed is a paragraph to be attached to the existing contract stating the new interest rate, the start of the new payment schedule and the signatures of both parties. Presumably, during the last four years, I have met my payment obligations and the lowered interest rate should make it easier still. So why all the fuss over reducing interest rates on home loans?

Greed!

To amend a contract requires both parties to be in agreement. So long as we homeowners line up and eagerly fork over thousands of dollars unnecessarily, the bankers and lawyers will continue to line their vaults. Many of my acquaintances seeking refinancing are unaware of how badly we are being gouged. If the mortgage companies demand this expensive ritual, the homeowners have no real choice. But we will remember this expensive experience and have little sympathy to complaints about poor profits and regulatory burdens on this industry.

Some very hard questions need to be asked of these money lenders by those whose savings accounts are being pilfered.

To the editor:

It is strange that President Reagan wants to label the Sandinistas as terrorists when all of my six months' experience in Nicaragua in 1985 showed that the Contras were killing, kidnapping and raping Nicaraguan civilians with the help of our tax dollars.

I am not saying that the Sandinista government is a perfect one. I met many people who were openly critical of the Sandinistas; the mandatory draft is not popular in Nicaragua and the economy is suffering as a result of heavy spending for defense. The Sandinista Army, according to the Washington Office on Latin America, has been guilty of war-related violence against civilians in 1985. The report says, "These appeared to be breaches of military discipline and relatively isolated cases of violations of authority not condoned by superiors."

On the other hand, the Washington Office on Latin America reported a pattern of gross violations against civilians by Contra forces during 1985. The report says, "The presence of Contra troops in a given locale seemed to give rise to a pattern of indiscriminate attacks against civilian targets, kidnappings, rapes, assassinations, mutiliations and other forms of violence against the lives and persons of the civilian population."

This pattern of Contra violence is the reason why almost no one I talked with wanted the Contras to win the war, not even the editors of La Prensa, the opposition newspaper in Managua. Time and time again, Nicaraguan men, women and children would ask me why my great country was oppressing them. President Reagan's opposition to a country that has ties with Cuba is understandable, but our continued funding of the Contras' murderous ways is grossly immoral. I urge readers to contact our senators, East and Helms, and push for what is morally correct and not what is politically correct.

To the editor:

Republican Howard Moye said at a news conference that Congressman Walter B. Jones Sr. failed to represent the best interests of this district because he voted not to send $100 million of our tax money to the rebels in Nicaragua.

Well, Mr. Moye, Congressman Jones represented my interests 100 percent. I say no money for the Nicaraguan rebels and send none of my tax dollars to Honduras.

If we have so much free money, let's use it in North Carolina. It was made in the U.S.A. — spend it in the U.S.A.

If President Reagan wants to help these rebels, let him and his rich friends send some of their money. Leave our tax dollars alone.

To the editor:

"You're wrong!" can be heard off Libya, from Honduras, in Greenville. I like the way such arguments are handled in the Greenville case and will wade into one.

The argument stems from your last "Sunday Opinion," headlined "5-1-1 Plan May Send City Back Three Decades." You made two claims.

First, that the at-large council member would be politically more powerful than the usually voteless mayor. Not necessarily. Each member still has one vote. Re-electability (thus, seniority) is more likely from the more homogenous ward than from the whole city. Either ward or at-large members can wield moral power when their election comes from breadth of personality and strength of character.

"I represent all Greenville" deserves weight; so does "I speak especially for one-fifth of Greenville; we five, with five votes, speak for all."

Only the mayor has the mayor's official powers. Recognition from other council members doesn't parallel the most all-city votes, we recently observed. Finally, if a single at-large post turns out strong, let leaders run for it; assuming mature officials, this could helpfully simplify the mayor's dealings with the council.

Your second claim is stronger. Ward representatives may have some difficulty "keeping the interest of the entire city in mind" — had our council 435 special-interest representatives like the U.S. House. But a group of six or seven is ideal for talking, adjusting, compromising; members learn to internalize the leading concerns of other members. However, you wrote, "A study of the city's past politics ... could convince the council of the plan's pitfalls."

Tell us more of this history, please, before the April 7 public meeting.

Off Libya, in Honduras, we need a Public Forum, read by all. Off Libya, in Honduras, beside the monstrous new graveyards near the Shatt-el-Arab, we need "town councils" to settle our arguments.

Sunday Opinion

Social Events Have No Place In Accreditation

Cookies and punch have no place in an objective accreditation process for a school system.

Madeline Tripp, chief of North Carolina's accreditation program for elementary and middle schools, described the receptions and banquets held by Pitt County schools for members of the visiting Southern Association of Colleges and Schools team as "ice-breakers." Both she and Pitt school officials termed them innoculous. They are, say those involved, harmless occasions for accreditation officials and school personnel to chat informally.

No one — not school board members, school officials or accreditation personnel — was worried about conflict of interest. They all should be.

The practice of elbow-rubbing between schools and accreditors is popular across the state. That doesn't make it acceptable. Pitt officials said because the events are commonplace, they don't feel there's a chance for prejudice. That logic is faulty. Here's why:

If the receptions are held everywhere, some affairs will be more elaborate than others. Cookies and punch in one county can't vie with lobster bisque in another. Here, the element of competiton — and bias — enters into the accreditation process.

The concept of socializing is highly questionable. Schools are required to pay a visiting team's food expenses, and meals prepared by school personnel is an inexpensive way to do it. But giving a banquet for individuals who are judging your worth is also asking for accusations of conflict of interest.

Accreditation officials are not being charged with automatic bias simply because they accept hospitality. Neither are schools under fire for attempted bribery because they offer it. Socializing does, however, open the door for public question and cries of misconduct.

Dues paid by school systems to the Southern Association should cover visiting personnel expenses. That would eliminate the need for school systems, forced by economics to find the least expensive solution, to entertain accreditors.

Unfortunately, socializing and accreditation now go hand-in-hand. For that to change, one school system must take a leadership position and declare that it won't risk conflict of interest.

A precedent — one that would move Southern Association accreditation closer to the role of an objective evaluation — would then be set. It's a shame Pitt County was not that school system.

All Should Use Right To Vote

Those who are eligible to vote but have not registered should consider that there is a deadline coming up.

Registration for the upcoming primary will close on April 7 at 5 p.m., according to Margaret Hardee, the Pitt County Board of Elections director.

Prospective voters can register at the Board of Elections office, 201 E. Second St., or with registrars-at-large or at several designated places around the county.

As of Oct. 24, 1985, there were 41,560 registered voters in the county. Some 32,540 are Democrats, 7,686 are Republicans and 1,334 unaffiliated or members of other political parties.

Over 41,000 registered voters is an impressive number but not enough in a county approaching 100,000 population. There are millions of people around the world who would give their lives for the privilege to choose and criticize their leaders. Our goal should be to have every eligible citizen registered to vote. The first step must be made by the individual, however, and we urge everyone eligible to register.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Retirement doesn't have to mean sitting on park benches feeding the pigeons.

In the Greenville area many people who retire from high pressure jobs continue to work after they draw their last pay check, often as volunteers.

So it is with Charles Horne, who retired as director of Greenville Utilities.

Horne is an engineer and most of his life had been involved overseeing construction. He promptly became a volunteer to coordinate the construction of a camping conference center for the Episcopal Diocese. The center is nearing completion on land given to the Diocese at Pine Knoll Shores near Saulter Path. The land stretches from the sound to the ocean and is connected by a tunnel.

"The bishop didn't have time to do it, so he let me do it," Horne said. "I deal with the architect and the builders. I have thoroughly enjoyed it."

He said he travels to the area on Tuesday and Thursdays and he reports to the bishop.

"I resolve the little problems and leave the big ones to him," Horne said with a laugh. "I enjoy the work, enjoy the area and enjoy working for the church.

"Retirement life has been good for me."

The center will be completed in May, and what next?

Horne says he will return to a life-long love — politics. He gave up active political work when he became director of Greenville Utilities. Now, however, he plans to work for Terry Sanford, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate.

That will take some time and energy, but then busy people never really retire.

Gov. Jim Martin briefly gained fame as Gov. Jim Hunt at the Distinguished Women of North Carolina Awards dinner. Lifestyle Editor Rosalie Trotman reported that the introducer made the slip but quickly recovered and said, "I can't possibly foul up any worse and the remainder of the evening will be great."

Gov. Martin did what governors do so well in such situations. He laughed heartily.

A caller last week was distraught that the trees along Charles Boulevard were falling to the bulldozers.

She noted that the pine trees on the east side were slated to come down.

She lamented the changes which are taking place in the Greenville area.

"They've hardly left anything that we remember," the Greenville native commented.

It is difficult to mount an argument. Progress and growth seem to cut into trees and stately old homes and unique buildings.

Progress makes a community exciting and viable. It furnishes services, such as better retail stores and restuarants, that a smaller Greenville didn't have.

In some cases, however, the trees go along with older structures. Surely we can do all that's possible to protect the once small-town charm of Greenville.

TV Time

RALEIGH — Television is intruding into yet another American tradition: the dull legislative committee meeting.

In the past several weeks, several legislative study committees have livened their proceedings with televised presentations.

One study committee saw a nationally distributed documentary on the crisis in medical malpractice insurance. Another committee saw a stun gun being used on a Burlington cablevision employee. A third saw a 23-minute program on the housing shortage in North Carolina.

In all three cases, the committees used video cassette recorders. The committee's aren't tuning into daytime television. Not yet, at least.

Don Saunders, executive director of N.C. Legal Services, used his own television sets and VCR to air the presentation on housing.

Before the meeting, Saunders said the film would give him an opportunity to bring a different breed of witness to the Legislature. Many of the people who spoke on camera were living in temporary housing, or did not have a home at all. One woman told of how she, her mother and infant daughter had lived in their automobile for several months before a church found them a place to live.

The film, which was prepared with the help of a grant from The Mary Babcock Reynolds Foundation, showed the squalid conditions in which some North Carolinians live. In all, the film presented a far more powerful picture of the crisis, Saunders said, than he would have ever been able to depict by standing at the podium and talking.

The film held the attention of the committee members for 23 minutes, which points to another advantage of film. A well-prepared film is likely to hold a committee's attention far longer than the average speaker.

The committee was able to see the power of stun guns without actually zapping someone. The manager of a Burlington cable station had agreed to be shocked with a stun gun as part of a local TV program. Two city policemen had administered the jolt and it had knocked the legs right out from underneath the man.

A Highway Patrolman had demonstrated one of the guns, at the meeting, by touching it to the palm of his hand, a relatively safe place to have the stun gun touch. But the guns are far more effective in destabilizing someone when that person is hit in the legs. There really wasn't a safe way to administer such a charge in the Legislative Building so the tape provided an insight which the committee members otherwise would have missed.

Although videotaped presentations are becoming more popular, the Legislature itself does not own a single television or any video equipment.

The slow processing of state employee health claims continues to be the fodder for many jokes in the Legislature.

Ralph Kimel, executive director of the N.C. Association of Principals and Assistant Principals, was telling a committee how much trouble he'd had trying to get reimbursed for his wife's cataract surgery.

'Let Reagan Be Reagan'

WASHINGTON — Heartened by what they view as President Reagan's belated firmness on the Contra issue, Republican conservatives have played a potent card in the coming battle over the continued adherence to SALT II, hoping to deepen and extend the restoration of "let Reagan be Reagan" White House policy-making.

The problem is the familiar one of whether the United States will destroy two older Poseidon missile-firing submarines to make way for the eighth Trident submarine. The unratified, expired SALT II agreement, which Reagan accuses the Soviets of systematically violating, imposed a missile ceiling that the new Trident will crack when it is launched next month.

Just as he did with his unsure grasp of the Nicaraguan Contra issue, a queasiness now reversed, Reagan has sounded an uncertain trumpet on SALT II compliance. His allies in the Senate are worried that a future liberal president may cite "the Reagan precedent" as justificiation for complying with some future unratified treaty. They want a clean break from the assumed obligations of the 1979 agreement.

Last year, when the issue first came up, Reagan's conservative flank lost a bitter struggle to Secretary of State George Shultz when the president ordered compliance continued. But Reagan carefully left the door ajar for a change this year.

The card quietly laid face up in the Oval Office March 13 is a strong letter to the president opposing continued compliance with SALT II. It was signed by, among 24 others, the Senate majority leader, Bob Dole. Its ideological spectrum stretches from the moderate Dole to conservative Malcolm Wallop to Jesse Helms, the acknowledged right-wing leader of the Senate's most hawkish Republican wing, and includes Sen. Paul Laxalt, the president's close friend.

The letter, also signed by three Democrats, raised an interesting political question: Is "peace issue" politics as symbolized by SALT II losing its punch? The answer may be yes in view of the fact that 10 of the senators who signed the letter are running for re-election this November (and another three are retiring).

With the White House scheduling a final National Security Council meeting to decide policy on the SALT II issue recently, Reagan faced the usual State Department warnings that backing away from compliance could jeopardize the next Reagan-Gorbachev summit. That meeting is to be held sometime between July and December. A foretaste of the power of that argument, we were told by one State Department official, was Shultz's success in delaying the forced reduction of Soviet U.N. personnel, a cut finally imposed this month on grounds that spying has its limits.

Shultz lost that one, but the rationale of delaying any moves that might upset the new summit was clear. White House officials, however, say privately that Reagan will not let summitry dictate his Poseidon decision.

Moreover, a new case for not cutting up the two subs to make room for the new Trident is now being made at high levels. It nicely disposes of what is called the "Navy problem" — the fact that the Navy, in the joyless reality of Gramm-Rudman, feels the two Poseidons are less important than other, newer weapons. Therefore, they wouldn't mind seeing the two boats cut up. The manning and operational costs could be used to better advantage.

The new case for saving the aging Poseidons comes from the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), the "Star Wars" missile defense program that is Reagan's own special legacy. These submarines, the Pentagon has discovered, could make ideal "reconstituted satellite launchers" to loft interceptor satellites — and possibly communications satellites — needed for SDI. Given such a requirement, the shallow argument disappears that since the Poseidons have outlived their usefulness and are not needeed, why not cut them up?

Other Pentagon arguments that tilt in favor of continued adherence to SALT II are not so easily disposed. For example, some military leaders (but not civilian leaders) argue that SALT II has cost the Soviets more aging missilry than it has the United States.

Public Favors Continuation Of Shuttle

PRINCETON, N.J. — The American people by the overwhelming margin of 80 percent to 17 percent think the U.S. should continue the manned space shuttle program, despite the disaster that killed all seven Challenger crew members Jan. 28.

This high level of public support is found even though many Americans have less than full confidence that the National Aeronautics and Space Adminstration (NASA) will be able to prevent accidents such as the recent tragedy from happening in the future. Four in 10 (38 percent) say they have a "great deal" of confidence in NASA in this respect, but 41 percent say only a "fair amount" and another 19 percent say "not very much" or "none at all."

At the same time, however, 7 in 10 survey respondents (69 percent) think civilian astronauts such as journalists, politicians and school teachers should participate in future space shuttle flights. Four in 10 (38 percent), in fact, say they, themselves, would like to be a passenger on a flight in the future, with this figure rising to 47 percent among adults under 30.

With public opinion an important element in determining the fate of the nation's space program, it is intresting to note that much of the support and enthusiasm for the program is centered among younger Americans, those who grew up during the space age.

Persons under 50, for example, are more likely than older persons to favor the continuation of the manned space shuttle program, show more confidence in NASA, are more likely to believe that civilian astronauts should participate in future flights and show far more interest in being a passenger. At the same time, however, it should be noted that an intrepid 17 percent of persons 65 and older would like to venture into outer space in some future flight.

Reynolds Award

Christine Easley Eckerman of Greenville has been awarded a Katharine Smith Reynolds Scholarship to attend the University of North Carolina at Greensboro this fall.

CHRISTINE E. ECKERMAN

Miss Eckerman, a senior at J.H. Rose High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Hugh Eckerman of Greenville. She is a member of the National Honor Society and served as a marshal. She is listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students" and was a National Merit Scholarship semifinalist. She attended the Science Symposium at North Carolina State University in 1985.

Scholarship recipients were selected on the basis of academic achievement and potential and leadership qualities. The amount of the Reynolds Scholarship is $1,500 per year, renewable for three additional years of undergraduate study beyond the freshman year.

The Reynolds Scholarships were established by the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation of Winston-Salem in memory of Mrs. Katharine Smith Reynolds, a Woman's College (now UNCG) alumna, wife of the founder of Reynolds Tobacco Co., and mother of the late R.J. Reynolds Jr.

Educators To Gather For Meeting

ECU News Bureau

Educators from community colleges and universities across the state are scheduled to speak at the eastern regional conference of the N.C. Association for Developmental Studies April 11.

The meeting, hosted by East Carolina University, will be held in Mendenhall Student Center. Its theme is "Connections Across the Curriculum."

Featured speaker Ben Ward, director of the Western Carolina University Center, will discuss the use of writing to connect all curriculum areas, a concept he has developed through a summer institute, "Project All Write."

Panel discussions and lectures will focus on individual learning styles, the use of special studies labs, developing students' basic skills in writing, reading and math and the learning disabled student.

Other local presenters include William Polk, Beaufort County Community College; Cathy Marsh, Cathy Pacha, and Connie Rhem, Pitt Community College, and Dr. Pat Bizzaro, Evelyn Boyette, Dr. William Cobb, Stella Daugherty, Dr. Betty Levey and Dr. Dorothy Muller, all of ECU.

Dr. Thelma Barnes of Southeastern Community College is the association's regional chairwoman.

Martin Sees Another Stint As Fed Head

WASHINGTON (AP) Preston Martin, who resigned earlier this month as vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said in an interview broadcast Saturday it's not impossible" that he could still be named Fed chairman next year.

Martin, who has advocated a looser monetary strategy than the current chairman, Paul A. Volcker, said his resignation at the end of April when his four-year term expires does not preclude him from being nominated as chairman by President Reagan when Volcker's second four-year term expires in August 1987.

"Whether or not a person is a member of that board ... I don't think is material," said Martin in a Cable News Network interview.

White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan, told The Washington Post last week that the administration wants Volcker to remain in his job through the end of his term, but as to another Volcker term he said, "I would never commit to anything."

Martin and three other Reagan appointees, in a move widely viewed as an attempt to force Volcker's resignation, voted on Feb. 24 to lower the discount rate over the objections of Volcker and two other members. Volcker eventually prevailed when member Wayne Angell subsequently reversed his vote.

Applications OK'd

Two of seven certificate of need applications presented to the governing body of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency recently in Greenville were recommended for approval to the state certificate of need office.

On recommendation by the Project Review Committee, the governing body approved applications from Wilson County and the Craven/Jones/Pamlico counties service area.

The governing body approved, by a 12 to 11 vote, an application by Wilson Convalescent Center to replace its current 46-bed nursing facility with a new 100-bed facility. The existing facility will be converted to a home for the aged. Estimated cost is $2 million.

An application for Trent Village Nursing Home in Jones County to construct a 90-bed long-term care facility at an estimated cost of $1.2 million was approved.

The next regular meeting of the ECHSA group will be April 23 in Greenville. For more information, contact Roy Selby, executive director, at 758-1372.

The ECHSA is a private, non-profit corporation funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The agency works through a volunteer governing body and committees comprised of citizens from a 29-county area of eastern North Carolina.

Band Rated Highly

The J.H. Rose High School Symphonic Band, directed by Chuck Allen, received the highest rating of "superior" in grade six music at the North Carolina State contest/festival held in Rocky Mount recently.

Grade six is the highest degree of difficulty in which a high school band can compete in the state.

The Rose band was also awarded a "superior" rating in the sightreading portion of the contest for the third consecutive year.

N.C. Works To Secure Museum For Monitor

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina will win a museum for artifacts from the Civil War ironclad USS Monitor only by uniting against richer, more established museums to the north, officials say.

"We should look upon this as an opportunity to secure a valuable and prestigious distinction for the state; pool our academic, historic and financial resources and avoid eliminating each other from the competiton," said Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C.

While most of the wreck still lies underwater off Cape Hatteras, some 120 artifacts have been recovered, said Jones staffer Dan Ashe.

He said the major North Carolina contenders for a Monitor museum are the Hatteras Village Civic Association, which wants to build a new museum on the Outer Banks only 16 miles from the undersea wreck of the Monitor; and the North Carolina Marine Resources Center in Manteo.

Also interested are the South Street Seaport Museum in New York, the American Swedish Maritime Museum in Philadelphia, the Mariners Museum on Newport News, Va., the Hampton Roads Naval Museum in Norfolk, Va., the Portsmouth (Va.) Marine Museum and the Smithsonian Institution.

"We've got some serious competition from other places in the country that have legitimate claims on this thing," said Mark Joyner, education specialist with the North Carolina Office of Marine Affairs. The ship was built in New York and it fought the Confederate ironclad Merrimac in Hampton Roads on March 9, 1862.

Joyner said the Manteo center was considering exhibiting the Monitor's still-submerged gun turret in a 85,000-gallon aquarium with fish and plants native to the area's waters.

"In effect it would be the same as transporting visitors to the bottom of the seafloor," he said. "It would be an innovative mix of cultural and natural history."

But Dale Burrus, president of the Hatteras Village Civic Association, said it makes more sense to put the museum near the wreck site.

"Our proposal is the closest land site to the shipwreck itself," he said. "You would be able to stand on the porch and see the site where it sank."

Burrus said the Hatteras site would be close to a ferry dock that handles more than 600,000 visitors a year and near the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, which handles about 1.2 million tourists a year.

"They're all looking for history," he said. "They've read a lot about the Outer Banks' history up in Virginia or Pennsylvania. Up there there's a museum on every corner, and they can't believe North Carolina wouldn't capitalize on that history."

Burning Permits Canceled

By The Associated Press

The N.C. Division of Forest Resources canceled all burning permits across North Carolina on Saturday, saying dry conditions have increased the threat of forest fires statewide.

The burning ban is effective at 7 p.m. and will continue until "further notice," said Harry F. Layman, state forester with the division. He said the ban "does not apply to fires started with 100 feet of an occupied dwelling."

The division said all burning in or near wooded areas should be postponed until after the next rain and urged the state's residents to avoid disgarding cigarettes and other smoking materials in wooded or grassy areas.

Below normal rainfall for the past several months combined with relative humidity in the teens and 20s percent range each day, and the abundance of dry leaves and debris in and near wooded areas of the state, has increased the threat of forest fires to critical levels this weekend, the division said.

The National Weather Service said rainfall is 46 percent below normal in Asheville, 60 percent below normal in Greensboro and 59 percent below normal in Charlotte.

Primary Law Change Endorsed, Van Hecke Says

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Candidates for public office should be able to win their party's nomination without a runoff despite getting less than 50 percent of the primary election vote, state Democratic leaders said Friday.

Jim Van Hecke, chairman of the North Carolina Democratic Party, said a consensus had developed among the party's ranking officials that change is needed in the second-primary law, long a sore spot among blacks who view it as racially discriminatory.

He said Democratic leaders would ask the General Assembly in June to reduce the threshold for victory in a first primary, now 50 percent plus one vote, to 40 percent.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, the state's highest-ranking Democrat, said he supported the change. Van Hecke said all eight Democrats on the Council of State had endorsed it.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said he favored the lower threshold for statewide and congressional races, but that it would not work in local races — especially in multi-seat districts where people can vote for several candidates.

If five candidates run in a four-seat district, all five could wind up with more than 40 percent of the vote, he said.

Van Hecke, who disclosed during a luncheon meeting with reporters the party leadership's decision to push for the change, did not say whether he favored it for state and local races. Jordan said he wanted it for all races.

The state and national black leadership have become increasingly insistent that the runoff primary system, which only 10 Southern states still use, be abolished or significantly altered.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson and his "Rainbow Coalition" made runoffs a "litmus test" issue in determining which candidates to support in the 1984 election.

In North Carolina, some blacks have threatened to bolt the Democratic Party or at least boycott key elections unless the system is overhauled.

But Van Hecke, who quietly has been seeking a compromise on the runoff issue since becoming state party chairman in January, insisted that keeping blacks in the Democratic camp was not his biggest reason for supporting a lower threshold.

"The main thing is it hopefully would alleviate some of the problems that would result in primaries where there would be great divisiveness and it's hard to get people back together again," he said.

He said bitterly contested runoffs such as occurred in 1984 between gubernatorial aspirants Rufus Edmisten and Eddie Knox fragmented the party and contributed to Republican victories in the general election.

"I just think it's fair, and it's ... more democratic," Van Hecke said.

Jordan said he hoped the change would reduce the number of runoffs and thus the cost of primaries.

The runoff system, which North Carolina has used since 1915, was helpful when statewide elections essentially were decided in the Democratic primary because Republicans offered only token opposition, Jordan said. "We recognize the major election is now in the fall of the year," he said.

Black legislators have tried unsuccessfully to change the primary law since H.M. "Mickey" Michaux lost a 1982 congressional race in what some blacks called a graphic example of the system's inequities.

Michaux, a black Durham lawyer, finished first in the three-candidate 2nd District Democratic primary with 44 percent of the vote. Tim Valentine, a white, finished second with 33 percent, but defeated Michaux by 54 percent to 46 percent in the runoff.

Michaux, elected to the state House in 1984, sponsored last year a bill to abolish runoff primaries. It never emerged from the Election Laws Committee.

In 1982, former Rep. Ken Spaulding, also a black from Durham, offered legislation to reduce the threshold to 40 percent. It was defeated in committee.

Michaux and Spaulding praised the Democratic leadership for endorsing the 40 percent threshold.

"It's a symbolic approach of openness, fairness and opportunity," Spaulding said.

Van Hecke said he hoped for bipartisan support of the change, but state GOP chairman Bob Bradshaw said Friday he opposed it.

With a 40 percent threshold, "you stand a good chance of nominating someone who is not the choice of 60 percent of your population," he said. "The majority of voters in a primary ought to have the right to select their nominee."

Republican Gov. Jim Martin could not be reached for comment. In a Jan. 30 news conference, he called for lowering the threshold but requiring that to avoid a runoff, the top finisher lead his nearest rival by a percentage of votes as large as or greater than the percentage he needed to reach 50 percent plus one vote.

For example, under Martin's plan, a candidate who finishes first with 40 percent of the vote would be the winner if the second-place finisher gets only 28 percent, since the spread between the two candidates is 12 percent while the front-runner falls 10 percent short of an outright majority.

But if the number-two candidate gets 38 percent, he could call for a runoff since the spread between the rivals is smaller than the percentage by which the front-runner falls short of outright victory.

Eye Injuries Noted In Spring Sports

DURHAM (AP) — With the arrival of spring comes outdoor sports and a growing number of eye injuries that could be prevented, a Duke University specialist says.

"An estimated 130,000 eye injuries per year are sports-related," said Dr. David Robinson, a resident with the Duke University Eye Center. "In almost all cases, protective eyewear was not worn."

Baseball, he said, is the leading cause of eye injuries, followed by basketball, racquet sports and football. Blunt instruments, like a ball or fingers, can cause as much damage to the eye as sharp ones.

"The eye sticks out of the bony orbit on the face and is not protected, as many believe," Robinson said. "Therefore, any size or type of ball — basketball, soccer, football, tennis ball — is associated with blunt trauma to the eye."

Because the balls used in sports can travel at speeds over 90 mph, an athlete cannot always move out of its path quickly.

"An athlete's experience offers no protection, either," Robinson said. "Injuries can happen at all levels of play."

Protection is especially important for children, he said.

"Children, unlike adults, are more apt to freeze when a ball is coming at them," Robinson said. But with protection, children become less hesitant and perform better.

He said a shatterproof or tempered lens offers inadequate protection because it breaks into small pieces that can penetrate the eye. A lens using polycarbonate, an impact-resistant plastic, is best.

Easter Egg Time

RALEIGH (AP) — What Valentine's Day is to the flower business, Easter is to North Carolina's egg producers, state officials say.

More eggs are sold at Easter than any other time of the year, and for North Carolina — the nation's eighth largest egg-producing state — that means extra work to keep the supermarket shelves stocked from New York to Atlanta.

The egg has been a staple of man's diet for centuries, said Larry Tetterton of the state Department of Agriculture, "but we are a long way from the day when you'd shoo the hen out of a nest in a tree and hope to find an egg."

In fact, Tetterton said, the odds are that when a shopper opens a box of eggs, it is the first time those eggs have been touched by human hands.

Data Skimpy On 1984 Tornadoes

GREENSBORO (AP) — Twisters that wrought destruction described as worse than the ravages of the Civil War tore throughout the Southeastern United States in 1984, killing an estimated 800 people, but experts say they have been all but forgotten — even in official histories.

"They're a favorite of mine," weather historian David M. Ludlum of Princeton, N.J., said of the storms on Feb. 19, 1884. "The National Weather Service has named them the 'Enigma Tornadoes' because so little is known about them."

It was not until the deadly tornadoes of March 28, 1984, that most North Carolinians first heard of the 1884 storms. State officials announced that those twisters, which killed 42 people in eastern North Carolina, were the worst in the state in 100 years.

Beyond that, information on the 1884 North Carolina tornadoes is hard to come by.

The National Climatic Data Center in Asheville, a repository of the nation's weather archives, has only one paragraph on the storms' impact in North Carolina.

"That ticks me off," said Grant Goodge, a geographer at the center. "The monthly weather report doesn't have as much on North Carolina as it does on other states."

"I've never seen it mentioned in a textbook," said retired climatologist Arthur Dodd of Raleigh. "The first time I found out about the 1884 outbreak, I was going through some old files. It had a listing of all the big storms. That one seemed to be the biggest one in the Southeast."

The best information on the storms — although not always reliable — comes from old newspapers and books.

The 1884 tornadoes reportedly swept into North Carolina from the southwest in two swirling waves of death and destruction.

Dozens died, including one woman near Rockingham who reportedly was impaled by a flying fence post. Countless others were hurt or lost their homes and businesses. A civil war veteran said he'd never seen such terrible scenes on the battlefield.

Livestock died by the hundreds. The wind blew an anvil through a hog and ripped feathers off chickens, according to newspaper accounts.

The death toll and damage figures, however, remain sketchy,

"On Feb. 19, 1884, the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky were visited by the most terrible devastation of wind ever experienced in this country," John Park Finley wrote in 1887 in his book, "Tornadoes, What They Are."

SOLEMN MOMENT — Vietnam veteran Ron Garrison and his daughter, Robin, 8, of Elmer, N.J., salute as a POW/MIA flag is raised Friday in front of Joyner Library at East Carolina University during a ceremony sponsored by the ECU Veterans Club. ECU is said to be the first educational institution in the nation to fly the flag in honor of those missing in action and prisoners of war in recent world conflicts involving U.S. servicemen. A group of supporters marched through Greenville to the Town Commons where a vigil was held to increase public awareness. The black and white flags are sponsored by the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Officials Doubt Capsules Tainted

CINCINNATI (AP) — There is no evidence that any Encaprin capsules have been tainted with cyanide, despite a claim by an anonymous caller that led two store chains to pull the pain reliever from their shelves nationwide, government and company officials said Saturday.

"There is no evidence that any tampering has occurred," said Patrick Hayes, a spokesman for Cincinnati-based Procter & Gamble Co., manufacturer of the aspirin substitute that Kroger supermarkets and Walgreen drugstores have stopped selling.

U.S. Food and Drug Administration spokesman Jack Martin said he had nothing to add to an agency statement saying officials "would initially agree that this may be another hoax."

"Because of the hoaxes and tampering that have occurred in recent weeks, our advice to consumers remains that they should examine non-prescription products for breaks in the package or unusual appearance or color," he said.

The FBI in Cincinnati declined to comment Saturday on its investigation of the threats telephoned to Procter & Gamble.

The caller Thursday told the company's consumer-information telephone service that he had placed cyanide-filled capsules of the pain reliever in Walgreen drugstores in Chicago and Detroit.

However, the caller gave a nonexistent lot number for the medication he claimed to have tainted. Also, Walgreen does not have stores in Detroit.

The nationwide drugstore chain decided to remove Encaprin from the shelves of its 1,170 stores, said spokesman Tom Mammoser. He said it would be kept off the shelves until it is proved safe.

NASA Tour For Soviet Schoolgirl

By LAURA TOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Soviet schoolgirl Katerina Lycheva climbed aboard a lunar rover during a private NASA tour Saturday as much of her weekend schedule was scrapped to let the 11-year-old peace emissary get some rest.

"It's as impressive as the (space) exhibition in Moscow," Katerina said of her visit to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Johnson Space Center.

Katerina arrived in Houston on Friday on the fourth stop of a U.S. tour commemorating the 1983 visit to the Soviet Union by Samantha Smith, the Maine schoolgirl who died last year in a plane crash.

Her planned appearance at a department store Saturday morning was canceled, as was attendance at an Easter Sunday church service and dinner Sunday with a family near Houston.

"Her family has asked that she be given some time to rest," said tour spokeswoman Marian Slavin.

Katerina's visit began March 20 in Chicago. She also visited New York and Washington, where she met briefly Thursday with President Reagan, and was scheduled to leave Sunday for Los Angeles.

At NASA, she skipped across the lawn to the visitors' center holding hands with her official host and constant companion, Star Rowe of San Francisco, who won an essay contest held by the trip's sponsoring group, Children as Peacemakers.

On Saturday night, Katerina planned to eat a dinner of tacos and sundaes with a group of Girl Scouts. The girls also planned to hunt for Easter eggs.

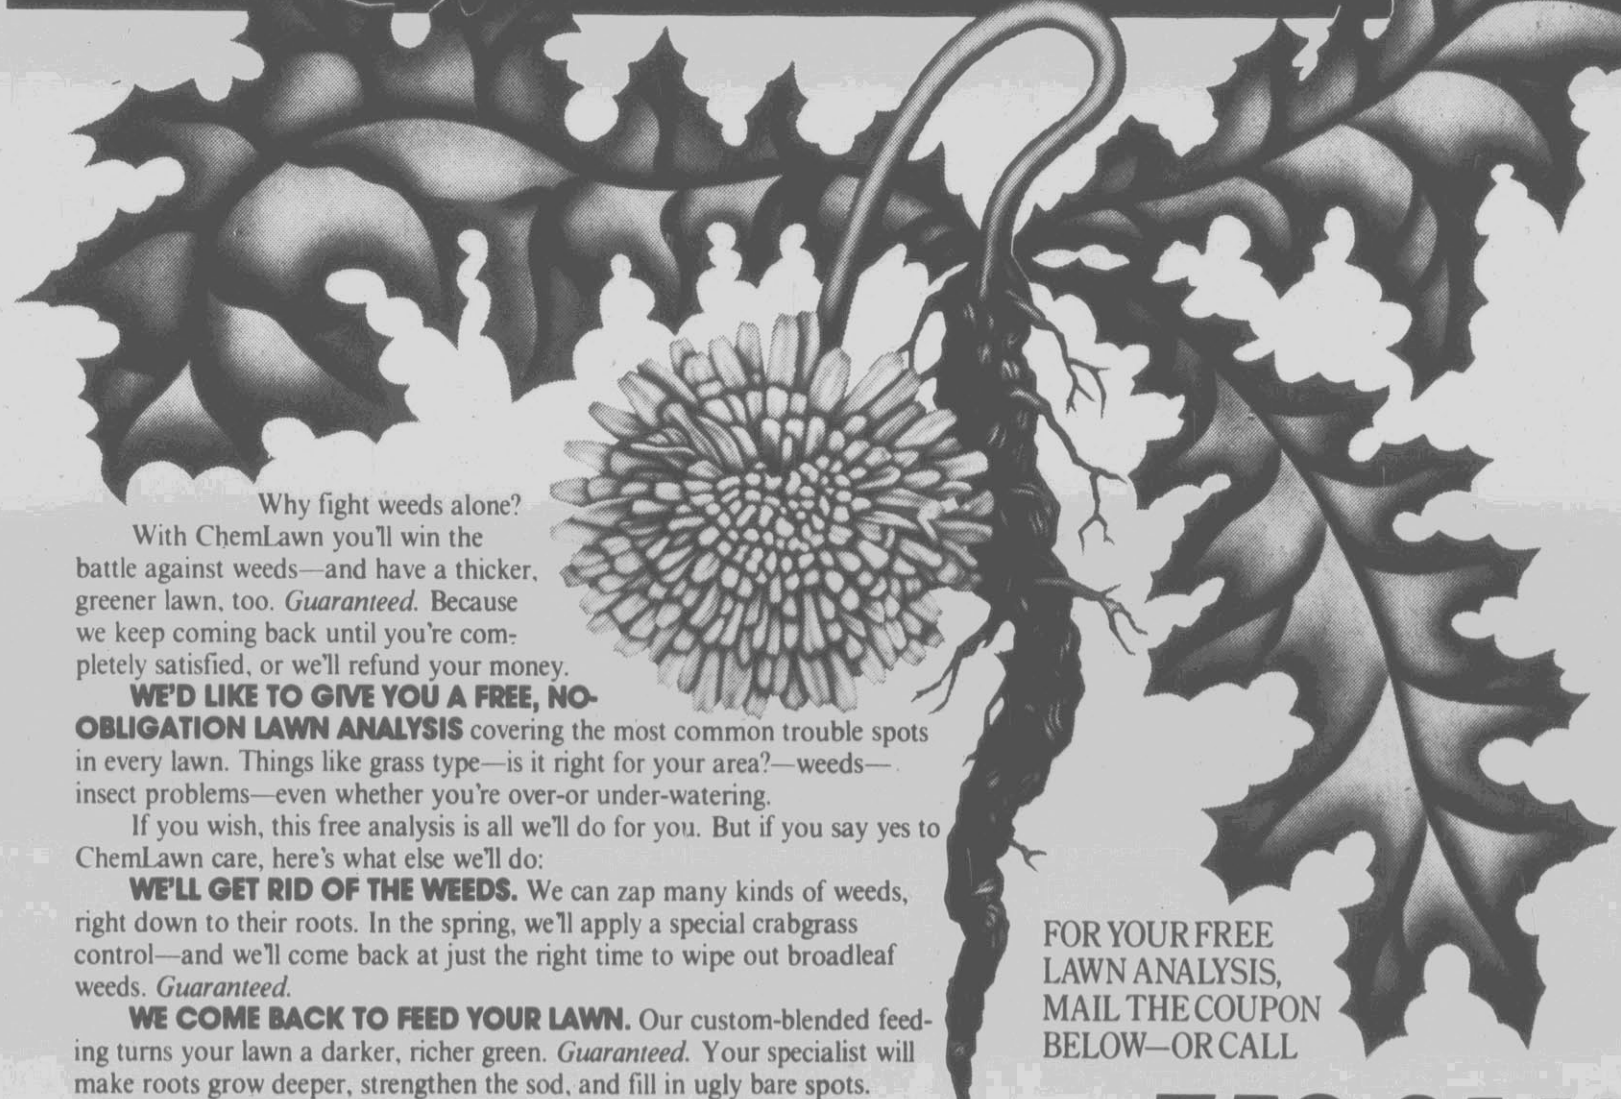
At a news conference Friday, Katerina said she has enjoyed meeting other children the most on her trip.

"Today at the airport, I saw Girl Scouts and they were so pretty and I liked them all," she said.

Asked what she would tell American children about the Soviet Union, Katerina said: "I could talk a long time about my country. First, I would start talking about children, then parents and grown-ups."

Houston City Councilwoman Eleanor Tinsley made the Soviet girl an honorary citizen of Houston and gave her a coloring book on Texas and paper dolls.

YOUR WEEDS WILL CURL UP, SHRIVEL, AND DISAPPEAR. CHEMLAWN GUARANTEES IT.



Why fight weeds alone?

With ChemLawn you'll win the battle against weeds—and have a thicker, greener lawn, too. Guaranteed. Because we keep coming back until you're completely satisfied, or we'll refund your money.

WE'D LIKE TO GIVE YOU A FREE, NO-OBLIGATION LAWN ANALYSIS covering the most common trouble spots in every lawn. Things like grass type—is it right for your area?—weeds—insect problems—even whether you're over-or under-watering.

If you wish, this free analysis is all we'll do for you. But if you say yes to ChemLawn care, here's what else we'll do:

WE'LL GET RID OF THE WEEDS. We can zap many kinds of weeds, right down to their roots. In the spring, we'll apply a special crabgrass control—and we'll come back at just the right time to wipe out broadleaf weeds. Guaranteed.

WE COME BACK TO FEED YOUR LAWN. Our custom-blended feeding turns your lawn a darker, richer green. Guaranteed. Your specialist will make roots grow deeper, strengthen the sod, and fill in ugly bare spots.

THEN, WE'LL DE-BUG IT. Since lawn bugs can do a lot of damage before they're even noticed, your specialist will get them before they can seriously harm your lawn. Guaranteed.

And your ChemLawn Specialist will keep coming back—with free service calls and free consultations on the best ways to mow, water, dethatch, and overseed.

WHY DO IT YOURSELF? When ChemLawn's year-round lawn care program costs about the same as if you did the same things yourself. And we guarantee you a more weed-free lawn—without the back-breaking work.

Forest Fires Raging In Three States

By The Associated Press

Two firefighters were injured Saturday as hundreds of exhausted volunteers and foresters battled more than 250 forest fires in West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, authorities said.

"The days are starting to run together," said Coy Mullins, an assistant forester in West Virginia. "We'll keep on having problems until we get some measurable rain."

More than 50 new fires were reported in West Virginia on Saturday, and the National Weather Service did not predict rain to douse the Mountain State's seared forests until Tuesday at the earliest.

Across the western border, Kentucky officials reported more than 80 new fires Saturday. Two National Guard helicopters helped more than 350 firefighters battle the blazes.

In Tennessee, where a firefighter died Friday, aircraft carrying water bombs were used to battle an estimated 125 fires that burned more than 2,000 acres on Saturday, officials said.

In West Virginia, a state forester accidently burned his arm while fighting one blaze, while a volunteer firefighter suffered serious injury when a live ember fell into his eye.

"The men are getting tired," Mullins said. "You fight so many fires your trained crews just wear down physically."

The fiery onslaught prompted state officials Saturday to stop issuing permits allowing residents to burn trash during the day.

As of Thursday, more than 300 forest fires in seven days had charred 18,000 acres of timber in West Virginia, officials said.

In Tennessee, Robert K. Bell, 44, was found slumped over the wheel of a tractor plow he was using to clear strips of land to try to halt the spread of a 30-acre fire. There were no burns on the man's body and the cause of death has not been determined, but officials said it could be related to exhaustion.

S. Africa Protest At Vandy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — About 25 Vanderbilt University students protesting the school's holdings in companies that do business in South Africa cheered Saturday as the first nail was driven in a shanty built on university property.

"It's eye-catching and represents the shantytowns where blacks are forced to live in South Africa," said Eleanor Des Prez, 19, co-chairwoman of Vanderbilt Against Apartheid.

Ms. Des Prez helped with the construction on the rolling, tree-shaded lawn in front of the school's Saratt student center as a cassette recorder blasted reggae music in the background.

University officials approved the 12-by-10-foot shanty, built to protest Vanderbilt's approximately $50 million in investments in U.S. companies doing business in South Africa, organizers said.

But they said they were concerned that other students might try to pull down the structure of rusty corrugated metal, cardboard and 2-by-4s. A similar shantytown at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., was damaged with students attached it with sledgehammers.

Lionel Lavenue, chairman of Vanderbilt's conservative Students for America, said the group had not planned any particular protest against the shanty.

The students will use the shanty as an information booth during the day and at least two students will remain in the two-room shack each night, said student Richard Jung, 21.

The university agreed in September to divest its holdings in South African businesses that do not adhere to the Sullivan Principles of racial equality in the workplace.

The school sold off $698,000 in holdings, but Vanderbilt kept from $45 million to $50 million in South African-related holdings, said William Spitz, treasurer of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust.

Rapist Captured

NESQUEHONING, Pa. (AP) — A convicted rapist who was mistakenly set free from a Philadelphia jail while awaiting sentencing was captured Saturday outside an abandoned mine shaft, police said.

John Schleigh, 24, of Philadelphia was captured after a brief foot chase, said Police Officer Bruce Thear.

Schleigh was freed Thursday from Holmesburg Prison after he returned from a hearing on an unrelated theft charge, along with papers showing the theft charge was dropped.

He had been convicted last month of raping a 31-year-old woman in 1982, and was scheduled to be sentenced April 10.

Paper for recycling must be newspaper only at present. The recycling division of the East Carolina Vocational Center is processing it.

According to Terry Anderson, the man in charge of the curbside collections, the collections for the first two months of the pilot project have been "really good for just starting." He said over 1,000 pounds of glass and nearly a ton of newspaper were collected last month and he expects this figure to climb each month the program is in operation.

Potential Is Here

"We have in the Greenville area now," Mrs. Moskop said, "more and more people who are interested in conserving resources and who have participated in recycling efforts elsewhere. For instance, a former resident of Davis, Calif., called to say he was glad we'd begun this work, that everything from tires to motor oil to many other components of household refuse are recycled there, and he's glad to have a constructive outlet for some throwaway items here now."

Dickerson said he sees the program as having the potential of conserving landfill space, a costly commodity, if it becomes widely used. He said he is constantly learning of recycling efforts other places through his job-related continuing education and is pleased to see a start being made here. He said, for instance, in the Washington, D.C., area, it's required by law that metal put in the trash be separated by householders. Then metal is kept separate at landfills and sold to help allay the costs of trash pickup.

Mrs. Moskop and Mrs. Maxwell feel that the committee's work can be tied in with Spring Clean-up Week being held in Greenville and various other communities in this area April 12-19 and they invite those taking part in that program to also use the curbside or Overton's parking pickups as ways to clean up and not waste.

The program is backed by the Cypress Group of the Sierra Club of Greenville and the American Association of University Women.

Amy Hannon, a Sierra Club member, said, "We feel it is important for people to know that their individual efforts can make a difference in saving the finite resources of our planet. Changing the collective habits of a culture has to begin in individual kitchens, boardrooms and council chambers. We can't do everything, but we can do something."

"This project has saved a goodly amount of resources already," Mrs. Maxwell said, "We are told it takes only a four-foot-high stack of newspapers to save a tree. So our contribution, coupled with what the towns in this area are already doing recycling cardboard containers, makes a big difference.

"We understand the glass we turn in melts at lower temperatures than the raw materials and, thus, energy is saved when it's recycled.

"Aluminum recycling not only saves the amount of the ore that must be mined, but also we're told it takes about 95 less energy to recycle than to manufacture."

printing and planning. With the delay, some of these things will be very difficult to physically carried out."

As school officials continue to wait for the word from Washington, Thomas said he's ready to jump into action.

"We've got the plans laid to go either way. We just can't order on one or the other until we get the decision," he said. "We're ready to move. But we can't expect to order checks on June 30 and have them ready for July 1."

In other areas, school officials continue to work with the belief that the consolidated board will officially begin operation on July 1, according to Eddie West, superintendent of Pitt County and Greenville Schools.

"We have continued to proceed as if consolidation had taken effect," West said. "The planning has progressed ahead in respect of the major milestones."

Once the preclearance comes through, West said the pace of the transition will increase.

"We have been thwarted by having to wait until the board can meet again before proceeding with some recommendations," he said. "Hopefully, the consolidated board will be able to meet in the near future.

the term because he already has been jailed for a longer period since being extradited from Switzerland on Oct. 15, 1982.

In addition, Mehmet Ali Agca, already serving a life sentence for shooting the pope, was found guilty on a new charge of illegally importing the pistol he used.

Sergei Ivanov Antonov, the only Bulgarian defendant in custody for the trial, returned to the building where he had been under house arrest and told the doorman, "I am a free citizen again."

However, authorities blocked his departure for Bulgaria later Saturday. The Italian news agency ANSA quoted judicial sources as saying the defendants will need approval from an appeals court before leaving Italy.

Antonov, 37, was Rome station chief of Bulgaria's national airline.

The other two Bulgarian defendants were in their home country under diplomatic immunity. One Turkish defendant also was tried in absentia, his whereabouts unknown.

Plane Crash Kills 3

SEAGOVILLE, Texas (AP) — A single-engine plane being used by parachutists crashed and exploded shortly after takeoff Saturday, killing three men and seriously injuring two others, authorities said.

The plane had taken off from Seagoville Airport about 4:30 p.m. with four parachutists aboard when the pilot apparently noticed a malfunction and turned the plane around and tried to land, said Sgt. Don Wood of the Dallas County Sheriff's office.

Witnesses told police that some of the passengers were thrown from the plane when it crashed on airport property. Bystanders tried to drag the other men out of the plane before it burst into flames, police said.

The two injured men were listed in critical condition late Saturday at Methodist Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Linda Schoonover.

The victims' names have not been released, she said.

Seagoville is a small community southeast of Dallas.

Trade Show Begins Thursday

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Expo '86, Greenville's second annual trade fair, will showcase the area's business, industry, educational programs and governmental agencies Thursday through Saturday.

Managed by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, the trade show is expected to attract over 20,000 people from eastern North Carolina to the New Greenville Warehouse on N.C. 33 (Pactolus Highway), a chamber spokesman said.

The doors will be open from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday, and from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Saturday.

The first event in 1985 was attended by 17,300 people.

Co-chairman Don Brinkley of Branch Banking & Trust in Greenville said all available booths have been reserved for the show. "We had 227 available booths at the beginning, and we are sold out," he said. "The show is going to be bigger and better this year. It is going to be a big success thanks to all the exhibitors that are participating."

Kyle Dilday of University Nursing Center, co-chairman of the event, said, "People will be excited to see the show this year. The booth space has been increased this year; there were only about 180 booths last year.

"We have excellent exhibitors this year," Dilday said. "There will be some of everything from florists to tires to pictures to cars to boats."

Exhibitors will include representatives of business, industry, agriculture, education, government and home and garden products available in eastern North Carolina, as well as food booths. Exhibitors will be able to sell their wares during the show.

Entertainment will include The Band of Oz Thursday at 7 p.m., Group Sax Friday at 7 p.m., and the Bill Lyerly Band Saturday at 3 p.m.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony to mark the beginning of the show will be held Thursday at 10 a.m.

Bad Oil Kills Six

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Contaminated cooking oil sold at government shops killed six children and injured 85 people Saturday in the western state of Gujurat, the United News of India reported.

Three people were hospitalized in serious condition after food poisoning in five villages, the news agency said.

It said the contaminated oil was sold during last week's celebrations of Holi, the Hindu festival of colors.

The Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter opened on July 1 and is located one mile south of Bells Fork of the County Home Road.

TWA Offer Is Rejected By Flight Attendants

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The union representing 5,800 striking TWA flight attendants rejected the company's latest contract offer Saturday and refused a demand that the offer be submitted to the union membership.

Trans World Airlines issued a statement saying the company was disappointed in the union decision, and said it held out little hope for an early settlement of the 3-week-old strike.

Meanwhile, TWA Chairman Carl C. Icahn sent a letter to newly hired replacements promising they would not be furloughed to make way for returning strikers.

"This is a personal commitment from me that you can absolutely count on," Icahn said.

The company had given the leadership of the International Federation of Flight Attendants a deadline of 4 p.m. Saturday to decide whether the offer would be put to a vote of the membership.

The flight attendants have been on strike since March 7, when the company proposed a 22 percent pay cut and work rules that add at least a dozen hours of work a month without additional pay.

The company's latest offer stuck to the original pay and schedule demands, but reinstated an earlier profit-sharing proposal that was withdrawn when the strike began.

It also included a buyout proposal for those flight attendants who either choose not to come back or are not allowed back.

Karen Lantz, a spokeswoman for the IFFA, said the offer was virtually the same as the proposal that triggered the strike. Union leaders were offended by a company demand that the offer be passed on to the membership without the union's comments, she said.

As for the profit-sharing offer, she said, "Profit sharing is only good if you're making a profit."

"Either all our members come back or none of our members come back," Ms. Lantz said about the buyouts. However, she said the union would be willing to discuss a buyout offer with the company.

The two sides met for about a half hour Saturday afternoon and adjourned with no further discussions scheduled.

"We hope that the company will be willing to come back to the table and negotiate a contract in good faith and settle this strike," Ms. Lantz said.

However, TWA's statement said the company "reiterated its disappointment in IFFA's intrasigence, thus offering little hope for its membership to foresee an early settlement."

The company said TWA would resume a full flight schedule Sunday and was continuing to recruit and train permanent replacements for the striking flight attendants.

In the latest offer, the company stipulated that the "annual average flight attendant work schedule on a system basis" would not exceed 264 hours a month away from home. The previous contract allowed 240 hours away from home per month.

The company also proposed to increase the maximum number of in-flight work hours each month from 80 to 85. Flight attendants are paid only for their hours of work in the air.

TWA said 89 percent of its flights were scheduled to fly Saturday, or 537 out of 603 flights. It was flying 97 percent of its normal seating capacity, said company spokeswoman Sally McElwreath. The airline flies to 60 cities in the United States and 21 cities overseas.

Anne Knew Of Scheme

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne knew she was the target of a kidnap plot by drug traffickers during a four-day visit to Brazil this past week, but insisted upon attending all scheduled public events, British officials said Saturday.

The 35-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, who escaped unharmed from a 1974 kidnap attempt in which her bodyguard and two other people were injured, returned to London Friday.

Federal police in Brazil were quoted in Rio's Jornal do Brasil as saying drug dealers threatened to kidnap the princess to exchange for their jailed leader, Jose Carlos dos Reis Encina, captured by police this month.

Buckingham Palace and the Foreign Office confirmed Saturday that the princess was aware of "the kidnap threat" and praised Brazilian security arrangements during her private visit.

John Ure, the British ambassador to Brazil, said in an Independent Television interview the princess "was kept fully informed. She seemed to have every confidence in the way the Brazilian police were handling things and that confidence was clearly justified."

Youths Lose Cool During Spring Break Activities

By KEN PETERS
Associated Press Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Police patrolled streets in this desert resort Saturday to head off any repeat of rowdiness that erupted among spring break crowds Friday and resulted in 104 arrests.

"It's very calm," police Lt. George Neesan said the morning after groups of youths ran amok, hurling rocks and bottles at officers, harassing motorists and tearing clothes off women.

Police used tear gas to disperse crowds Friday, and some youths sprayed officers with chemical Mace, authorities said.

"We've been able to limit the vandalism to a small area, and I don't think we've reached riotous proportions. We had civil disobedience," Neesan said, explaining that a riot would have been characterized by "lack of regard for life and property."

Much of the trouble seemed to start when hijinks, such as dumping cups of water into passing cars, got out of hand, witnesses said.

"I think that we've seen a lot younger people this year than in the past," Neesan said. "I would guess somewhere between (age) 17 and 22."

"It's a younger crowd," Sgt. David Goodwin said Friday night. "They don't seem to respect authority. You try to arrest one, and you have 500 all over you for it."

Police used a portable booking station to handle the arrests, he said.

Reinforcements from the California Highway Patrol, Riverside County sheriff's department and neighboring towns swelled police ranks to more than 200 during the disturbance.

All the officers were kept in town Saturday, with a large contingent assigned to downtown foot patrol, Goodwin said.

Friday's disturbance began at 3:30 p.m. at a park where several thousand young people had gathered, Goodwin said. The crowd grew increasingly unruly, and Goodwin said thousands remained after police ordered them to disperse, although no precise estimate of the crowd's size was available.

He said groups continued to gather into the early hours Saturday.

Tear gas was used on one small group of people who quickly dispersed, Neesan said.

Those arrested were booked for investigation of public drunkenness, assault and failure to disperse.

Some officers suffered minor injuries such as wrist and ankle sprains.

After the disturbances erupted, police declared an illegal assembly and began arresting people. Police also imposed a 10 p.m. curfew for anyone 18 and under.

Fifty-three people sought treatment at Desert Hospital for mostly minor problems such as bruises, cuts or too much heat, said nursing supervisor Liz Isbell. A handful of people were admitted, but none had serious injuries.

Palm Springs, a chic resort 110 miles east of Los Angeles, has long been a popular spot for students to gather during the spring break in their studies.

"This is the worst since 1969" when a huge crowd of young people ran amok through the city, said police secretary Juleen Gerhardt.

Associated Press photographer Douglas Pizac, in town to cover the California Angels baseball team, said he saw at least four incidents in which youths groped or tore clothing from young women driving in cars.

"One had her top torn off and the other had part of her bottom torn off," said Pizac. "I asked them if they were all right after they started driving away, and one of them said 'I'll never be the same again.' She was driving with one hand, keeping her clothes over her chest with the other."

Catering truck driver Stan Mozer said a crowd of youths overtook his truck and tore open the doors, stealing food. He was hit in the face with a bottle.

Bay Area Jarred

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A moderate earthquake rocked the San Francisco Bay area Saturday with a jolt that felt like "an incredible crash," but there were no reports of damage or injury.

The University of California at Berkeley Seismic Station recorded the 8:24 a.m. temblor at 4.0 on the Richter scale of ground motion, and staff research associate Richard McKenzie said it was centered four miles east of Berkeley, in the Berkeley hills.

"It felt like an incredible crash, like a 500-pound bomb had landed," said William Brand of Berkeley.

In the city of El Cerrito, about five miles north of Berkeley, police Lt. Lee Blevins said the shaking shattered a large plate glass window at a local auto parts store.

But the state Office of Emergency Services in Sacramento said it received no reports of damage or injury.

Reagan Doesn't Dwell On Hinkley Act

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will spend Sunday, the fifth anniversary of an attempt on his life, at the isolated California ranch where he regularly clears brush and rides horseback.

For the 75-year-old Reagan, the March 30, 1981 assassination attempt outside the Washington Hilton Hotel seems to have been a temporary setback. Hit in the chest by a ricocheting bullet, Reagan underwent surgery and recovered quickly.

Since that traumatic episode, Reagan has had another health scare: last July, a cancerous portion of his colon was removed during abdominal surgery. He recovered fully.

Reagan, whose doctors say he is as healthy as a much younger man, rarely mentions the assassination attempt. He has said he holds no grudge against his assailant, John W. Hinckley Jr.

First Lady Nancy Reagan, shaken for months after the shooting, said recently she was more frightened by it than by the news that the president had cancer.

In an interview with ABC-TV's Barbara Walters, broadcast last Monday, Mrs. Reagan was asked whether she had contemplated life alone on learning Reagan had cancer.

"I think I went through that on the 30th — March 30th, 1981 — more than this time because they seemed so sure that the cancer was just localized and they could get everything," she said.

Three other people — Press Secretary James Brady, Secret Service agenct Timothy McCarthy and District of Columbia Police Officer Thomas Delahanty — were also wounded in the 1981 shooting.

McCarthy and Delahanty recovered quickly, though Delahanty suffered lasting nerve damage in his neck. Brady, the most seriously injured with a bullet in his head, is still recuperating.

Brady, 45, lives in nearby Arlington, Va., with his wife, Sarah, and 7-year-old son, Scott. Although he retains the title of press secretary and draws a $72,000-a-year salary, Brady spends only one day a week in his office.

The rest of the time he is at home or in physical therapy. He walks with a cane, has impaired use of an arm and is frequently in pain.

But he has maintained his sense of humor and served as a beacon of hope to disabled people around the country. He frequently lends his name to groups that help the handicapped.

His wife, Sarah, 44, has become an outspoken lobbyist for gun control, raising money, giving interviews and testifying before congressional committees.

"Our happy lives were changed forever," she says of the shooting, adding that tightening up on gun registration laws could have barred Hinckley from purchasing his weapon in Dallas.

Brady maintains that he's not bitter because "I don't have time to get bitter." A lawsuit the Bradys filed against Hinckley is still pending.

McCarthy, 36, briefly resumed duties in the Secret Service's presidential protective detail after he recovered from a bullet wound in the abdomen. He then transferred to the agency's Chicago bureau, where he spent 2 12 years in the counterfeit division. Now back in Washington, he is a supervisor of the elite presidential unit. Delahanty, 50, retired on full disability shortly after the shooting with 17 years of service.

Hinckley, 30, was found innocent by reason of insanity in June 1982. Since then he has been confined to a maximum security ward at St. Elizabeth's mental hospital.

"He is still undergoing an active treatment program," said Dr. Harold Thomas, a spokesman for St. Elizabeth's. Generally treatment for the 1,600 St. Elizabeth's patients includes individual and group therapy, he said.

Last week, a federal judge rejected Hinckley's request that he be permitted to leave the hospital grounds unattended to visit downtown Washington once a month, and that he be transferred to a less restrictive ward.

"I don't claim to be a perfect person, but I do know that my mental illness is in remission," Hinckley said in a brief courtroom appearance.

Dr. June A. Turkus, Hinckley's psychiatrist since 1982, disagreed. While Hinckley's condition has improved, his mental illness "is not totally in remission," she said, adding he lacks insight and judgment about his illness and "still thinks of himself in a grandiose way."

Hinckley, who is now allowed to walk the hospital grounds accompanied by personnel, tried to commit suicide in 1983. Last year, there were reports he was engaged to a female patient who had killed her 7-year-old daughter. Thomas said "no wedding has occurred."

Hinckley's parents, Jack and JoAnn Hinckley, a wealthy couple from Evergreen, Colo., moved to suburban McLean, Va., so they could be near their youngest son, according to Scott Hinckley, another son.

"They see John frequently," Scott said in a telephone interview. The senior Hinckleys sold their Colorado oil exploration business in January 1984 and established the American Mental Health Fund, a group which raises money for research and education about mental illness.

"Quite frankly, he is working harder at that (the fund) than he did in the oil business," Scott Hinckley, 35, said of his father.

The Hinckleys described their lives since the shooting and urged more understanding of mental health problems in a 1985 book entitled "Breaking Point."

Several other people were touched by the shooting and thrust for a short time into the spotlight.

Jerry Parr, 55, the Secret Service agent who shoved the wounded Reagan into a limousine, retired in February 1985 after more than 22 years with the elite unit of presidential bodyguards.

Easter Signals Official Beginning Of Spring

By The Associated Press

Easter egg hunts, fashion parades, horse races, boogeying at the beaches and appeals for help for the needy marked the Easter weekend, as many people looked forward to sunrise services.

The Rev. G. Richard Lobs III of St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Geneva, Ill., said his Easter message would be: "Easter is night turned to day. ... The earth is bathed in the light of dawn. Light is cleanliness, order, hope and life."

President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, were at their California ranch and had nothing scheduled for Easter Sunday, said spokesman Larry Speakes.

"Easter time for Christians and Passover for Jews are meant to be times of spiritual awareness and of deepening encounter with the Lord and with the Lord's injunction that all nations and people of the world live in peace and harmony with each other," Reagan said in his weekly radio address Saturday.

In Honolulu, former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife, Imelda, invited 500 people to a "bring-your-own" party at the rented house they moved into less than a week ago, far from the lavish Malacanang Palace in Manila.

The rite of spring started Saturday in South Carolina with the Carolina Cup, the state's most popular horse racing day. More than 40,000 people toting picnic lunches and wearing their spring fashions were expected for the huge outdoor event, said assistant course director Patty Cooper.

South Carolina also had a parade, egg hunts, entertainment and a carnival at the 20th Annual Governor's Frog Jump in Springfield, held to pick a champion for the national jumping contest this summer in Calaveras County, Calif.

In Seattle, live rabbits became artists' models Saturday for the "Draw and Paint Bunnies" art class at the Pacific Arts Center.

For many, a weekend at the beach was in order to shed memories of winter's cold and gloom, and 300,000 to 325,000 people were expected at South Carolina's 65-mile Grand Strand ocean beaches.

Not everyone favored crowded places. Sharon Boyko, 33, an emergency room nurse at the Albany (N.Y.) Medical Center planned to set out alone "as soon as the sun rises" Easter morning to hike the 2,154-mile Appalachian Trail from Spencer Mountain, Ga., to Mount Katahdin, Maine, arriving about June 20. She hopes to raise $20,000 for charity.

In Southern California, where police arrested more than 100 rowdy youths Friday and early Saturday in Palm Springs, festivities included everything from a gala comedy benefit to an egg hunt at the Queen Mary and Spruce Goose in Long Beach to a host of sunrise services.

"Comic Relief," a three-hour benefit performance, featuring hosts Robin Williams, Whoopi Goldberg and Billy Crystal, for America's poor and homeless was on the calendar Saturday night at the Universal Amphitheater.

Quakers readied an Easter Sunday peace demonstration at Vandenberg Air Force Base, a site of missile tests, in Santa Barbara County, 140 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Some 20 celebrities, including actor Lorenzo Lamas and actress Lois Nettleton, attended an Easter celebration Friday at the Motion Picture & Television Country House, said spokeswoman Carol Sanders. Singer Rosemary Clooney and actor Robert Guillaume planned to join Roman Catholic Archbishop Roger Mahony at the 66th annual Hollywood Bowl Easter Sunrise Service. Singer Pat Boone, actress Carrie Fisher and actor Ricardo Montalban were to help the Union Rescue Mission in Los Angeles kick off its festivities for the homeless.

New York City churches also will have sunrise services.

EASTER WEEKEND — The beaches began to fill up Friday as college students on spring break and other beach goers converged on Myrtle Beach, S.C. Thousands of people were expected for the annual event that makes the beach come alive and start the season for beach lovers around the country. (AP Laserphoto)

Pope To Lead Vigil

ROME (AP) — Thousands of pilgrims — many with their children in their holiday best — milled about in St. Peter's Square in balmy weather Saturday, awaiting Pope John Paul II's Easter vigil.

Tour operators reported Rome hotels and pensions were booked to capacity. They estimated that more than 500,000 pilgrims and tourists are visiting Rome for Easter Sunday, the holiest day in the Christian year.

Many of the visitors attended the pontiff's torch-lit way-of-the-cross procession in the pagan ruins outside the Colosseum, recalling Jesus' agonizing walk to his death by crucifixtion on Mount Calvary.

The pope fasted on Good Friday and arranged to lead the vigil in St. Peter's Basilica starting at 9 p.m., leading to the midnight Mass celebrating Jesus' resurrection.

On Easter Sunday, John Paul will deliver his traditional Urbi et Orbi (to the city of Romeand the world) greetings to tens of thousands of pilgrims. The service will be telecast live to millions of people around the world.

In central Piazza Venezia, crowds of young West Germans, who traveled over the Alps on motorbikes, ate ices and tanned themselves in 60-degree weather.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON THE QUESTION OF THE ADOPTION OF AN ORDINANCE REZONING TERRITORY LOCATED WITHIN THE PLANNING AND ZONING JURISDICTION OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, NC

Pursuant to Article 19, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers of the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, NC, on Thursday, April 10, 1986, at 7:30 p.m. on the question of the adoption of an ordinance rezoning the following described territory within the planning and zoning jurisdiction of the City of Greenville as follows:

DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY TO BE REZONED FROM RA-20 (RESIDENTIAL/AGRICULTURAL) TO R-6 (HIGH-DENSITY RESIDENTIAL):

TO WIT: STP Properties

LOCATION: Greenville Township, Pitt County, NC. Bound on the north by Jessie V. Umphlett and Rubelle V. Goin; on the east by Goin; on the south by Lee Harrell Bradley, Norma S. Harrell, Bullock Properties and Mrs. Thomas Allen; and on the west by SR 1203 (Allen Road)

During this public hearing, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by City Council. All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing, and they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file at the City Clerk's office located at 201 W. 5th Street, and is available for public inspection during normal working hours Monday through Friday.

BY ORDER OF THE CITY COUNCIL.

Gimme That

Ferry's Basket Keys Blue Devils, 71-67

DALLAS (AP) — No. 1 vs. No. 2 lived up to its billing but it was the wrong Danny who made the difference at the end.

Thus top-ranked Duke, survivor of a 71-67 semifinal battle with Kansas, is in the NCAA Tournament championship game and the college basketball record book.

With Danny Manning, Kansas' second-team All-American, held to a career-low four points, it was Duke freshman Danny Ferry who wore the hero's mantle. Ferry rebounded a missed shot by Mark Alarie and scored with 22 seconds left to break a 67-all tie.

Ferry then drew a charging foul that thwarted Kansas' chance to tie.

"I was at the dotted line, I came up with it and went up with it," Ferry said of his winning basket. "I was just in the right place at the right time."

The victory was Duke's 37th in 39 games this season, one more than the 1948 Kentucky team that finished 36-3. Kansas, which finished, 35-4, could also have broken the record had it gone all the way.

Now the Blue Devils still need one more victory, against Louisville Monday night, to win the national championship. The Cardinals solved Louisiana State's "freak defense" and ran away in the second half with an 88-77 victory in Saturday's first game.

The second game was tight throughout. Neither team led by more than seven points and Kansas, despite losing Manning and 7-foot-1 center Greg Dreiling on fouls, led 67-65 with 2:04 to go.

Then All-American guard Johnny Dawkins, who scored 24 points, rebounded a missed shot by David Henderson to tie it at 67 and set up Ferry's heroics.

"It was a terrific game," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "You know, sitting on the courtside you can just feel the emotion, hear the bodies banging. Rightfully so, we won it with a loose ball, taking the ball off the floor and scoring."

Asked why he brought in Ferry at the end, the Duke coach joked, "To pick up a loose ball."

"We had our chance, we got 'em to miss," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said of the decisive basket. "We had everybody blocked out. Ferry made a great play.

Manning, who brought a 17.1-point scoring average into the game, played just 23 minutes and shot just two for nine — the first basket of the game and one with 4:23 to play that put the Jayhawks up 65-61. He played just seven minutes of the first half.

"That's the way I coach," Brown said. "If we had gotten down by six or eight, Danny would have been back in the game. But I wanted to save him, if possible."

"I get tired of saying 'wait until next year,'" Manning said. "Personally, everybody has expectations of himself. It's kind of hard to take this year, to end it this way."

Ron Kellogg, a 6-5 forward, paced the Jayhawks with 22 points, and Calvin Thompson, a senior guard, and Archie Marshall each added 13.

Marshall, a reserve, left the game with an injured knee after his layup put Kansas ahead 59-55 with 8:10 remaining.

Henderson, one of four seniors who make up the nucleus of the Duke team, hit five of six free throws and Amaker one to put Duke ahead 61-59 with 6:25 left. Dreiling's two free throws and consecutive baskets by Kellogg and Manning, his first since the first basket of the game, put the Jayhawks up 65-61.

But Dawkins hit a jumper and Alarie scored inside to pull Duke even at 65-all. Manning picked up his fifth foul on the play, but Alarie failed to convert the free throw.

Card Rally Overcomes Tigers

DALLAS (AP) — For 25 minutes Saturday, Louisiana State's dream of becoming the third unranked team in four years to win the NCAA basketball title flourished. But Billy Thompson and a smothering Louisville defense brought the Tigers back to reality.

With Thompson shooting almost perfectly, the Cardinals overcame an 8-point halftime deficit, put together a 13-point run that gave them control of the game and finished with an 88-77 victory over LSU that put them in Monday night's NCAA championship game.

Louisville will play top-ranked Duke, which beat No. 2-ranked Kansas 71-67 in the other semifinal.

Louisville Coach Denny Crum credited a defense that shut down LSU star John Williams, who had 12 points in the first half but just two in the second.

Crum had some strong words for his players at halftime. He said he told them: "This is our last shot. Let's give it our best effort."

"We weren't patient," Crum said of the first half. "We weren't taking high-percentage shots. I've got to give LSU credit for that. Our defense got tougher and kept them off balanced a little bit."

"I think we were more relaxed in the second half," said Thompson, who hit all five of his second half shots and 10 of 11 for the game to finish with 22 points. "I think we looked for our shots more."

Louisville guard Wagner, who had 22 points and 11 assists, thought the most important factor was a defense that often put two men on Williams and kept him from getting the ball. So did LSU Coach Dale Brown.

"We knew we had to come out and play good defense in the first five minutes of the half, go for the steals and rebounds," Wagner said. "Our guys did a great job.

"It's really just a box-and-one with some different guys doing some things It can take a team out of their offense. But I think we handled it pretty well."

Brown, whose team had hoped to emulate the NCAA victories of unranked North Carolina State in 1983 and Villanova last year, agreed that defense was the key.

"We felt the thing that lost the game for us was the fact that we could not get into a rhythm after we beat their press and got the ball up the floor," Brown said. "We had to be in our offensive rhythm to win the game and so many times we were not doing that.

"Even after we lost the lead, we still had a chance but after we lost our rhythm it was tough for us to get anything accomplished on offense."

But Brown added: "I think these guys still know that they can dream. I thought we played as hard as we possibly could. We can't expect any more."

In that final 20 minutes, Louisville controlled the boards 26-18 and outshot LSU 63.9 percent to 35 percent. Thompson had eight of his 10 rebounds in the second half while Williams did little.

"I don't know what happened," Williams said, fleeing the LSU locker room minutes after the game had ended. "Sometimes I was inside and sometimes I was double-teamed."

Tigers forward Ricky Blanton said the Cardinals "were doubling up on John and kept him from putting the ball on the floor. That's what he likes to do, but they took him out of that with double- and sometimes triple-teams. That makes it tough."

Pervis Ellison had 13 rebounds and all five starters scored in double figures for Louisville, which is seeking a second national championship to go with the one it won in 1980 under Crum.

It was the 16th consecutive victory for Louisville, 31-7 and champion of the Metro Conference and the West Regional. LSU, 11th seed in the Southeast Region, closed at 26-12.

Thompson's jumper 5:15 into the second half began the 13-point run by the Cardinals, with Wagner and Jeff Hall feeding each other on fast-break layups — the second one tying it 54-54 at 6:05 of the half. Hall scored again 62 seconds later with a five-foot jumper to give Louisville its first lead of the game.

The streak continued with a 20-footer from the left side by Wagner and ended when junior forward Mark McSwain tipped in a follow shot, was fouled and sank the free throw.

It was now 61-54. Don Redden, who led LSU with 22 points, hit a foul shot, then Wagner canned two more 20-footers from the same left-side location to give the Cardinals a 65-55 lead. In that 17-1 spurt by the Cardinals, LSU was held without a field goal for 5:07, missing 13 consecutive shots.

Redden later scored nine of 11 LSU points as the Tigers closed to within four points, but Louisville pulled away again.

LSU built an 11-4 lead two minutes into the game with Redden's three-point play to open the scoring and baskets by Williams and Taylor off steals.

With Thompson suddenly asserting himself, getting Louisville's next three field goals, the Cardinals began establishing inside control.

They pulled into the first of seven first-half ties at 19-19 after 5½ minutes.

But with LSU going inside to Williams on almost every trip downcourt and the 6-foot-8 sopho-

Madison Sweeps East Carolina

HARRISONBURG, Va. — East Carolina University's baseball team has spent a lot of time in Greenville this spring.

And Saturday afternoon, after playing their first road games of the season, the Pirates were probably wishing they were back in the comfortable surrounding of Harrington Field.

Instead, they were twice handed their heads by James Madison, which took 9-0 and a 5-3 decisions over the Pirates, snapping a five-game winning streak.

Also snapped was a 61-game scoring string by the Pirates that went back to last March 8 when N.C. State shut out ECU, 6-0.

The win boosted Madison to 2-0 in Colonial Athletic Association play while the Pirates tumbled down to 3-3 and to at least fourth place in the league standings.

Winfred Johnson, aiming for a place in the NCAA record books as the first collegiate player ever to hurl 30 victories and collect 60 home runs had both of those hunts stymied. Johnson, who took the loss in the opener — his first defeat of the season — lasted only three and a third innings against the Dukes as he went after his 30th career win. Now, that will probably have to wait until at least next Saturday when the Bucs entertain George Mason.

The Dukes also cooled off the hot bat of first baseman-designated hitter Mike Sullivan, who had been nine of 18 for the week going into the games. He was held to just one hit in six trips to the plate on the day.

The hero of the day for Madison was Scott Mackie, who hit a solo homer in the first game and added a three-run shot that meant the difference in the second.

Madison got all it neeed in the second inning of the first game, pushing over five runs, all scoring with two away. Glen Deren led off with a single and was sacrificed up. After a second out, Mackie walked and Robert Trumbo doubled in Deren.

Jeff Garber singled, driving in both Macklin and Trumbo. He advanced to second on the relay home, then took third when the ball was bobbled there. Mike Mathews walked, stole second, and both scored on Rod Boddie's single for a 5-0 lead.

Madison added two in the fourth and got one in the fifth on Macklin's solo homer. One final run crossed in the sixth.

East Carolina was held to only four hits by Madison's Stoudt, two of them by Steve Sides.

Madison's hitting was led by Mathews, Boddie and Mackie, each with two.

Madison broke the ice first in the fourth inning of the second game, scoring twice. With two away, Steve Schwartz reached on an error and Bobby Ivanicki doubled him to third. Both scored on a single by Mackie for a 2-0 lead.

East Carolina finally got on the scoreboard in the top of the fifth, scoring three times to take a 3-2 lead in the game.

Mark Cockrell led off with a single and Jim Riley got a hit. David Ritchie laid down a bunt, but the Madison pitcher elected to go to third, throwing it away and letting Cockrell score. Greg Hardison followed by reaching on still another Madison misplay, letting Riley score.

The two runners were sacrificed up and Ritchie scored on Johnson's ground out.

But the lead was shortlived as Madison came back to score three times in the bottom of the sixth to pull it out.

With one away, Schwartz walked and Ivanicki singled. Mackie then cracked the ball out of the park in left center, providing Madison with a 5-3 edge.

East Carolina went down without a whimper in the seventh to end the game.

Jim Peterson took the loss, his second in seventh decisions.

Mackie led the Madison hitting with three while Ivanicki added two.

East Carolina had no one with more than one hit for the game.

The defeat drops the Pirates to 20-3 on the season while Madison climbs to 16-4.

The two teams meet again today in a single game. ECU then travels on to Virginia Commonwealth for a single game on Monday. They have a game at Atlantic Christian on Wednesday and at N.C. State on Thursday before returning home to open a three-game set with George Mason on Saturday.

Brown's Antics Don't Help LSU

DALLAS (AP) — Outside Reunion Arena, they were getting $1,000 apiece for courtside seats to Saturday's Final Four doubleheader. Dale Brown's chair wasn't for sale, but it might as well have been for all the time he spent in it.

Before the game, the Louisiana State basketball coach visited press row, kidding with writers, seemingly relaxed. "I know how they assign these seats," he said, "one old guy, then a good looking guy, then a young guy ..."

He began the game on the bench, but he didn't stay there long. Don Redden's three-point play brought Brown to his feet and got the Tigers off to a running start against Louisville. From then on, Brown and his chair were strangers.

Brown danced back and forth over every inch of the 28-foot coach's restraining box in front of the bench, exhorting his team every time down the court as the Tigers opened an eight-point halftime lead.

He waved his fists with thumbs extended after every basket and looked almost like a third base coach in baseball as he windmilled his arms to relay defensive signals.

Once the defensive plan was imparted, he would return to leading cheers — waving his arms, jumping this way and that.

On one charging call in front of the LSU bench against Louisville's Milt Wagner, Brown emulated the official's call, hand behind neck, as he raced the length of the bench to fetch a substitute.

Brown spent much of his time on one knee, although he sometimes used two, looking prayerful while biting a thumbnail as LSU battled the Cardinals.

He cheerfully helped the officials with their calls, signaling walks, charges, anything he thought they might buy against Louisville. Once he sent John Williams the length of the court during a timeout to discuss a call with official Joe Forte.

"Refereeing is not a good job," he said later. "I thought these guys were superb. We tried to get some calls, as you do as a coach, but they did a great job."

When LSU opened an six-point lead, he exchanged double handslaps with LSU center Jose Vargas, and when Anthony Wilson's 30-footer extended the margin to eight at halftime, Brown leaped off the bench pumping his fist.

"In the dressing room at halftime, I told them the first four minutes were very important. I said, 'Don't let the dream die. We've got an excellent chance to win.'"

When Lousiville scored the first four points of the second half, Brown called a quick timeout. But he couldn't stem Louisville's tide. The Cardinals staged a 17-1 surge to build a 10-point lead. Brown was subdued during the stretch, but still not sitting.

With 2½ minutes left, Louisville's Billy Thompson got away with an obvious walk. Brown was livid, stamping his feet and windmilling his hands, demanding a call. When the Cardinals scored on the possession, it hardly helped the coach's composure. He called a timeout, and spent the first several seconds screaming at officials Forte, Dick Paparo and Leonard Wirtz. They calmly turned their backs on him.

Surrender did not come until the final four seconds when, with Louisville assured of an 88-77 victory, Brown cleared his bench and hugged each of his players as they came off the court.

He was matter-of-fact afterwards, although he couldn't resist having a little fun with his friends in the media.

"No comment," he deadpanned as he entered the interview area. Then he grinned. "Y'all would have heart failure if I said that."

Sure enough, he commented.

"We played as hard as we could possibly play, with everything we had. I'm heartbroken we didn't win it. It's over. We couldn't do any more. We tried everything. I'm proud, happy, and disappointed. But there will be another time."

When Cardinals Stopped Williams, That Was It

DALLAS (AP) — As John Williams went, so went Louisiana State — out of the NCAA tournament.

The 6-foot-8 forward, LSU's best player, scored 12 points in the first half Saturday as the Tigers took a 44-36 lead over favored Louisville. But double-teamed in the second half and barely able to get off a shot, he scored just two more points as Louisville rallied for an 88-77 victory.

That ended the run of four straight tournament upsets for the Final Four's only unranked team.

"I don't know what happened," a sullen Williams told reporters before slipping out of the dressing room. "Sometimes I was inside and they double-teamed me."

Coach Dale Brown said the keys to the defeat were the inability of the defense to stop Louisville's offense and Williams' problems. The other LSU players concurred.

"They knew he was the heart of us," center Ricky Blanton said of Williams. "They wanted to split our heart and that's what happened."

Guard Derrick Taylor said the pressure on Williams caused the other players to attempt some questionable shots.

"It kind of threw us out of our game plan," Taylor said. "That put them into the position to get their rebounds and start their fast break."

"I thought we played as hard as we possibly could — you can't expect any more," he said. "We played with everything we had. I'm heartbroken we didn't win it, but there will be another time, hopefully."

The magic that Brown had talked so much about during the week before the game fell apart in the final period.

The mood inside the dressing room was somber but the spirit was not broken.

"I'm hurting now because I thought we had a chance to win, but at least we showed that we contenders," said junior guard Anthony Wilson.

"I thought we did some things a lot of people didn't expect us to do," said Taylor. "We played well. I couldn't be happier."

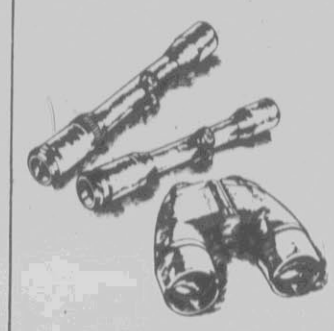
"The chemistry on this team is the best that I've ever been around," added Wilson.

The Final Four appearance was made all the sweeter by the Tigers' celebrated adversity during the season, including the loss of key players to injury, ineligibility and even an outbreak of chicken pox.

"It's really been a great achievement for a group of guys that have gone through so much adversity," said Don Redden, a senior who led the Tigers with 22 points Saturday.

"This has by far been the funnest year since I've been here," Redden added. "It's a great way to go out."

LSU's performance disproved those who said the Tigers had no business in Dallas, Brown said. "They outhustled a lot of people," he said.



Conley, Rose In Tourney Wins

HOLLYWOOD — Hosting D.H. Conley routed Farmville Central, 11-3, to advance in the winners bracket along with Rose High School, Kinston and North Lenoir Saturday in the first round of the Pitt County Easter Baseball Tournament.

The Rampants tripped New Bern, 7-4, while Kinston downed Ayden-Grifton, 12-4, and North Lenoir downed Havelock 12-3.

The results send Kinston and North Lenoir into a 5 p.m. game on Monday in the winners' bracket, while Rose and Conley clash in the 8 p.m. winners' game.

In the losers' bracket, Ayden-Grifton meets Havelock at 11 a.m. while Farmville Central meets New Bern at 2 p.m.

The final games of the tournament will be played on Tuesday to a full eight places.

In the second game of the afternoon, Kinston jumped into the lead by scoring four times in the third inning.

But Ayden-Grifton rallied in the fifth to come up with four and tie it up. Frank Mills walked and Ty Little singled. Curt Tucker singled in Mills and Andy Swanson walked, loading the bases. Aaron Harper doubled to drive in Little and Tucker and a passed ball allowed Swanson to score the tying run.

But the tie didn't last long. Kinston came back to score seven times in the bottom of the fifth to put the game out of reach.

Neal Outlaw led off with a walk and stole up. Whit Whitley singled and also stole up. Bo Hawkins was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Mattacks walked, forcing in Outlaw, and Riggs singled in Whitley and Hawkins. Davis doubled, bringing in Mattacks and Riggs. Drake singled to score Davis. After advancing on an out, Drake scored on Felton Mason's single.

Kinston added one more run in the sixth.

Whitley led the Kinston hitting with two while no one else had more than one for either team.

The loss drops Ayden-Grifton to 2-7 on the year.

Rose and New Bern played three scoreless innings before the Bears broke the ice in the top of the fourth. White struck out, but reached on a passed ball. Pace then singled and Justice hit a home run for a 3-0 lead.

But the lead didn't last long as Rose rallied to score five in the bottom of the inning. Eric Jarman and Robbie Ehrmann both walked. Scott Davis then singled to load them up. Walks to David Daniels and Axel Smith forced over Jarman and Ehrmann. Davis scored on Robbie MacDonald's ground out. Tyrone Jones then singled to drive in the other two runners.

The Bears cut it to 5-4 with one in the top of the fifth. Johnson doubled, moved up on a passed ball. After White walked, a double steal plated Johnson.

But Rose closed out the scoring with two in the bottom of the fifth. Davis and Daniels accounted for both, hitting back-to-back solo home runs.

Davis led the Rose hitting with three. No one else had more than one for either team.

Rose is now 6-2 on the year.

Conley wasted little time in jumping into the lead in the first inning of the final game of the day.

Shane Adams provided the first inning fireworks with a solo homer that staked the Vikings to a 1-0 lead.

Conley came back with three in the second inning, two of those scoring on a home run by Sherwood Wilder to make it 4-0.

Farmville broke the ice with a run in the top of the third, but then Conley got what was to be the difference in the bottom of the inning.

Adams singled and stole second. He also stole third, coming on in to score when the throw down to the base sailed into left field.

Conley added two in the fourth and four in the sixth. Farmville picked up two in the fifth for its three-run total.

Adams led the Conley hitting with four while Wilder and Fred Bryant each added two. Mark Joyner paced Farmville's hitting with two.

Greenwell's Slam Powers Bosox

By The Associated Press

Boston rookie outfielder Mike Greenwell took a big step toward securing a spot on the roster when he hit a bases-loaded homer with two out in the bottom of the 11th inning Saturday to give the Red Sox a 9-5 exhibition baseball victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Greenwell, who replaced Jim Rice at the start of the 11th, lined Randy O'Neal's first pitch 400 feet over the right field wall to end the game at Winter Haven, Fla.

With one out in the 11th, Steve Lyons, who doubled home the tying run off Willie Hernandez in the eighth, beat out a bunt and stole second. O'Neal walked John Christensen, and, after Wade Boggs grounded out to the first baseman, Dave Stapleton walked to load the bases.

Greenwell then drilled his first spring homer in 30 times at bat.

Minor leaguer Jeff Hermann, debuting in a Detroit uniform as the Tigers split their squad to play both the Chicago White Sox and Boston, hit a two-run homer to cap a five-run third inning against Boston rookie Jeff Sellers.

The Red Sox got three runs back in their half of the third on a walk, the first of three hits by Lyons, and Dwight Evans' homer.

In late afternoon games it was, Milwaukee 6, Cleveland 5; the Cubs 4, San Francisco 1; San Diego 5, Oakland 3, and California 8, Seattle 2.

Mets 6, Pirates 3

At St. Petersburg, Fla., Rick Aguilera scattered eight hits over six innings, drove in a run and scored another in New York's five-run second inning.

Gary Carter ignited the Mets' rally with a leadoff double in the second and George Foster drew a one-out walk. Rookie Kevin Mitchell's run-scoring single made it 1-0. Augilera and Len Dykstra followed with RBI singles and Tim Teufel capped the surge with a two-run single.

Twins 5, Astros 3

At Kissimmee, Fla., Minnesota left-hander Frank Viola scattered five hits over six innings to help Minnesota beat Houston. The victory snapped a five-game losing streak for the Twins and halted a five-game winning streak for the Astros. Minnesota scored all five runs with five hits, but only two were earned.

Expos 3, Orioles 2

At Miami, Montreal took advantage of loose defensive play by Baltimore for the victory.

Tim Raines led Montreal with three hits, opening the game with a double and reaching third on an infield out. Andre Dawson followed with a soft bouncer to the mound and Raines appeared to be trapped off third base. But pitcher Storm Davis threw to first, allowing the run to score. An inning later, Vance Law singled with one out, stole second, went to third on a ground out and scored on a wild pitch. The Expos got their final run in the fourth when Hubie Brooks scored on a squeeze bunt by Law.

Braves 9, Dodgers 2

At West Palm Beach, Fla., Rick Mahler and Bruce Sutter scattered eight hits, and Billy Sample knocked in four runs as Atlanta beat Los Angeles.

Mahler, who is slated to be Atlanta's starting pitcher in the Braves' regular-season opener, worked seven innings, allowing two runs and six hits.

Reds 5, Cardinals 1

At Tampa, Fla., Eric Davis and Ron Oester each had two hits and an RBI to lead Cincinnati over St. Louis. Reds starter Mario Soto, 2-2, overcame wildness in his six innings, allowing six hits and the Cardinals' only run. Soto walked five and fanned four, permitting a Cardinal runner to reach second base in five of his six innings.

Yankees 4, Braves 3

At Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Henry Cotto's two-run double in the bottom of the ninth inning off Craig McMurtry lifted the New York over Atlanta. Cotto's game-winning drive, his third hit of the game, came with none out after the Yankees had loaded the bases on a walk to Dan Pasqua, McMurtry's wild throw on a bunt by Mike Pagliarulo and a bunt single by Bobby Meacham.

Blue Jays 6, Phillies 4

At Dunedin, Fla., non-roster outfielder Rick Leach hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to break a 4-4 tie and give Toronto the victory. Leach, who is trying to make the Blue Jays after being the final cut last year, had his third game-winning RBI this spring. Jays starter Dave Stieb went seven innings, the longest outing this spring for a Toronto pitcher, and scattered 11 hits while yielding three runs.

Royals 5, Rangers 2

At Pompano Beach, Fla., Jamie Quirk's two-out, three-run ninth-inning homer snapped a 2-2 tie and carried Kansas City over Texas. Don Slaught and George Wright hit bases-empty homers for the Rangers.

White Sox 12, Tigers 8

At Sarasota, Fla., Ron Kittle collected three hits, including his second home run of the spring, and drove in four runs to carry Chicago past a split Detroit squad.

Brewers 6, Indians 5

At Chandler, Ariz., Jim Gantner and Rob Deer each hit two-run singles in a five-run Milwaukee fifth inning as the Brewers defeated Cleveland.

The Brewers entered the inning trailing Cleveland starter Tom Candiotti 3-1. Rick Cerone reached base when hit by a Candiotti pitch. He went to third on Mike Felder's single to left. Cerone scored on Manning's grounder to short and Felder was forced at second for the inning's first out. Manning stole second, then went to third on a wild pitch. Paul Molitor was walked, and stole second base. It was one of three for Molitor in the game, in which Milwaukee logged seven steals.

Candiotto, whose preseason record fell to 1-2, walked Jim Adduci to load the bases, and was relieved by Dickie Noles. Noles struck out David Green, but Gantner singled to right, scoring Manning and Molitor and giving the Brewers their first lead, 4-3. Deer's single drove in Adduci and Gantner, making it 6-3.

Cubs 4, Giants 1

At Mesa, Ariz., Rick Sutcliffe struck out eight and held San Francisco to one run and six hits over six innings as the Chicago beat San Francisco. Matt Keough pitched two scoreless innings in relief and Lee Smith picked up his third spring save by striking out the side in the ninth.

Angels 8, Mariners 2

At Palm Springs, Calif., rookie first baseman Wally Joyner had three hits, including a home run, and Reggie Jackson, Rob Wilfong and Ruppert Jones drove in two runs each as California pounded Seattle.

Joyner's 3-for-5 performance raised his spring average to .465. The lone California player to have played all 22 exhibition games, Joyner has 31 hits, 13 more than any teammate has. Joyner had a pair of four-hit games earlier in the week and has 12 hits in his last 18 at-bats.

Coaching Great Murray Is Dead

DURHAM (AP) — William D. "Bill" Murray, who was head football coach at Duke for 15 years and later served in the American Football Coaches Association, died Saturday. He was 77.

Murray, who died at the Hillcrest Convalescent Center in his hometown of Durham, resigned as head coach at Duke in 1965 with a record of 93-51-9 to become executive secretary of the 4,000-plus member AFCA.

Murray was chairman of the AFCA's ethics committee for 15 years, served as president in 1962 and was the executive director from 1966 until he retired in 1982.

"Duke has lost a great coach and a great man," Duke Athletic Director Tom Butters said.

During Murray's 15 years at Duke, the Blue Devils won five conference titles, shared three other titles and compiled the Atlantic Coast Conference's winningest record — 54-15-2.

Duke won the ACC title three years in a row, 1960, 1961 and 1962. The Blue Devils shared the ACC title with Maryland in 1953 and 1955 and with South Carolina in 1965. Duke also won the Southern Conference championship in 1952 and the ACC title in 1954.

Murray's Duke teams ranked in the Top 20 eight times between 1953 and 1965 and he was selected conference coach of the year in 1952, 1954, 1960, 1961 and 1962.

Duke also appeared in three postseason bowl games under Murray. Duke beat Nebraska 34-7 in the 1955 Orange Bowl, edged Arkansas 7-6 in the 1961 Cotton Bowl and lost to Oklahoma 48-21 in the 1958 Orange Bowl.

Murray was named to the Duke Sports Hall of Fame in 1976.

Murray was a native of Rocky Mount and an outstanding athlete at Rocky Mount High School. He was a freshman football player at Duke in 1927 and was one of Duke's first All-Southern players in 1930. At Duke, Murray was voted the best all-around freshman in his class and was elected senior class president.

After he graduated, Murray became head football coach at Children's Home in Winston-Salem, where he also served as principal, dean of boys and assistant superintendent.

Rams Bow To Spartans

WILSON — Raleigh Sanderson romped to a 12-1 baseball victory over Greene Central in the first round of the Wilson Breakfast Optimist Club Invitational Tournament Saturday.

Greene Central was the lone 2-A team in a field of seven other teams, all 4-A.

The Rams got only one hit off the pitching of Mike Klas, who struck out 13 and walked four in going the distance.

That one hit did stake the Rams to a brief 1-0 lead in the game in the first inning. Ervin Collins had walked and been sacrificed up before Michael Griffin singled to drive him in.

But Sanderson came back to score four times in the second inning to take the lead for good. The Spartans added one in the third, four in the fourth and three in the seventh to complete the rout.

Chris Coats led Sanderson with three hits while Mike Siopes, Danny Holland and Perry Currin each had two. Siopes and Currin both had doubles while the latter also had a triple.

Greene Central was to face the loser of the New Hanover-Fike game, the final game Saturday night, in a 2 p.m. contest on Monday.

Freshman Ferry Keys Duke Win

By TOM FOREMAN JR.
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Seniors like Johnny Dawkins have led Duke through the NCAA basketball tournament, but it was freshman Danny Ferry who put the Blue Devils into the championship game against Louisville.

Ferry picked up a loose ball in the lane and scored on a layup with 23 seconds left Saturday, giving Duke the lead for good and sending the Blue Devils to a 71-67 victory over Kansas in a semifinal game.

Needless to say, the 6-foot-11 Ferry was a little dazed by his heroics.

"I don't remember much about it. I'm still in a daze," Ferry said.

Ferry, the object of an intense recruiting battle within the Atlantic Coast Conference, was also involved in another key play. After his basket, Ferry drew a charging foul from Jayhawk Ron Kellogg. Ferry said that was the only option he had to prevent a Kansas basket.

"Next time down, Kellogg drove the lane. There wasn't much I could do," Ferry said. "I'm not a shot blocker."

For a moment, it appeared Ferry would be charged with a blocking foul, but the officials saw it the way Ferry saw it.

"I knew I was there. I really didn't have to worry about it at all," Ferry said.

While Ferry was the key in the stretch, it was Dawkins who kept Duke alive. The All-America guard scored 24 points and his follow shot with 1:49 remaining tied the score at 67-67, setting the stage for Ferry.

"Senior leadership was evident. We didn't panic, we settled down and took the good shots and got back in it," Dawkins said.

It was Dawkins who, literally, had a hand in setting up Ferry's basket. He was chasing an errant Mark Alarie jumper but couldn't get control of the ball.

"I just remember me and Cedric (Kansas guard Cedric Hunter) went up for it," Dawkins said. "I was mad because I didn't grab it. I wasn't trying to hit the ball to a specific spot."

Throughout the NCAA Tournament, Dawkins has been the catalyst for the Duke offense, averaging more than 25 points per game in the postseason. He says while teammates can do the job, he wants to handle the close situations himself.

"You have to really want the ball. A lot of times on transition I've been able to create some things," Dawkins said.

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski got a slight scare in the second half when Dawkins appeared to have suffered a hand injury. His fears were later eased when it was discovered that Dawkins' only problem was hitting the funny bone in his elbow.

"With 4:18 to go, Johnny was talking about his hand," Krzyzewski said, "and I said, 'Forget your hand, forget everything. Take your shot.'"

Dawkins scored two baskets after that advice and it was the start of Duke's first trip to a championship game in eight years.

Ferry was thankful to have played his part.

"All year, the seniors have been doing it," Ferry said. "I was just happy to get my chance."

Ferry In Right Place For Win

DALLAS (AP) — Duke freshman Danny Ferry was in the right place at the right time twice in the last 20 seconds Saturday night but Kansas senior Ron Kellogg's luck ran out in the same time span.

Duke's 71-67 NCAA Tournament semifinal victory over the Jayhawks was spiced with scrambles for loose balls and a critical call by official Paul Galvan with the outcome still in doubt.

Ferry rebounded a Mark Alarie miss that proved to be the winning basket and gave Duke a 69-67 lead.

Then he drew a charge from Kellogg that the Kansas fans heartily booed.

"I called a charge after the shot," Galvan said.

Ferry missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw but the luckless Kellogg missed a 25-footer on Kansas' last shot. Tommy Amaker put the game away with two free throws with a second left.

"I was in the right place at the right time," said Ferry, who admitted he was in a daze.

Ferry said on his big offensive rebound, "I just had perfect position and put in back up."

On the opposite end of the court, Ferry saw Kellogg barreling along toward the baseline.

"Taking a charge was the only thing I could do because I'm not a shot blocker," Ferry said. "There's one good thing I can do and that's take a charge.

"There was some confusion because the referee made the call softly but we knew what it was. Then I missed the free throw. I was just too nervous."

Kellogg said he thought the call should have gone Kansas' way.

"I was just trying to make something happened and Ferry moved in front of me," said Kellogg. "I tell you the call could have gone either way. At first I didn't know the referee had called a charge. I figured the call for our side."

Kellogg blamed himself for taking a hasty shot in the final 10 seconds.

"It was a bad shot," said Kellog, who had 22 points. "I should have driven inside more."

"Don't blame Ron. He played a great game," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said. "We were trying to get the ball up quick. We just got killed by a loose ball. Danny just picked it up and scored."

But Thompson's basket was followed by Dawkins' rebound to tie it again at 67-67 with 1:49 remaining.

Duke, eliminated in the second round of the NCAA playoffs the past two seasons, led 36-33 at halftime, and a jumper by Henderson and two free throws by Jay Bilas gave the Blue Devils their biggest lead at 40-33.

After Alarie's jump shot gave Duke a 45-40 advantage, the Jayhawks got back into the game with an 8-0 run with Kellogg contributing two baskets and Marshall hitting a layup for a 48-45 Kansas advantage.

Dawkins, who scored 15 points in the first half, didn't get his first field goal of the second half until 11:06 remained. He then hit another jumper to pull the Blue Devils within 54-53.

Kansas, the Big Eight champions who lost to Duke by six points in the Big Apple NIT title match at the beginning of the season, went up by four points before the Blue Devils got back into the game with their free-throw shooting.

Kansas, which last reached the Final Four in 1974, when it finished fourth, jumped to an 8-2 lead. But Duke ran off the next 11 points.

The Jayhawks never led again in the first half as Manning and point guard Cedric Hunter went to the bench with foul difficulty.

Marshall tied it at 17 and again at 31, but a three-point play by Bilas and two foul shots by Henderson put Duke ahead 36-33 at intermission. The Blue Devils got the first four points of the second half to take their biggest lead of the game at 40-33.

This is the fifth time Duke has made it to the Final Four, the last time in 1978 when the Blue Devils lost to Kentucky in the title game.

But the Blue Devils have never won a title.

Coaching

Big Men Sat, Watched Defeat

DALLAS (AP) — Danny Manning and Greg Dreiling, the two big men Kansas looks up to for scoring and rebounding, spent much of their time Saturday night sitting down. And down with them went the Jayhawks' hopes for an NCAA basketball title.

With the 6-foot-11 Manning and the 7-0 Dreiling troubled by fouls most of the night, Kansas was beaten by the Duke Blue Devils 71-67 in the semifinals.

"I'm emotionless right now," said Dreiling, a senior who scored only six points in his final game for the Jayhawks. "This has been quite an ordeal. I just don't know what to feel at this point."

"I felt frustrated to be on the bench," said Dreiling, who has had foul problems all season. "That's not where you want to be. You want to be out there helping somebody. It's just something you have to live with."

Dreiling fouled out with 5:41 to play, and the game still on the line.

Manning, who was voted the Player of the Year in the Big Eight Conference and was the Most Valuable Player in the league's postseason tournament, hit only two of nine field goal attempts for four points. He drew two quick fouls, played only seven minutes in the first half and fouled out with 4:23 to play.

"It really hurts to lose this one," said Manning, a sophomore who led Kansas in scoring this year with a 17.1 average. "We wanted to go all the way.

"I get tired of saying 'wait until next year.' Personally, everybody has expectations of himself. It's kind of hard to take this year, to end it this way."

Kansas Coach Larry Brown said he was pleased his team was in contention although two of his principal players hit a combined three of 16 from the field and 11 rebounds between them.

"When you have two kids that struggled like that, you wouldn't think we'd be in the game," Brown said. "I think it's a credit to our team that we were able to be in the game at the end."

more forward bulling his way under the basket, the Tigers managed to stay even with or ahead of Louisville.

The Cardinals managed their last tie of the opening half at 33-33, then LSU outscored them 11-3 in the remaining 7:02, getting a fistful of second shots in scrambles under the rim.

When Anthony Wilson canned a corner shot with 47 seconds to go, the Tigers owned their biggest bulge of the game.

Mize Responds, Leads By Four

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Larry Mize responded to John Mahaffey's challenge with birdies on two of his last three holes and pulled away to a four-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the Tournament Players Championship.

"Don't anybody wake me up," Mize said after his 6-under-par 66 in gusty winds had given him sole control and set a couple of tournament records.

His leading margin was the largest in the 13-year history of the annual championship of golf's touring pros, and his 54-hole total of 200 was a three-round record.

And it put him within range of still another mark. The 72-hole record for the Players Club at Sawgrass is 274, set last year by Calvin Peete. That's 14 under par. And Mize is 16 under after only three rounds.

"It was nice to be tied for the lead in the first round. It was nicer to be tied for the lead in the second round. And it's still better to be leading alone after three rounds.

"It's getting closer to the nitty-gritty," said Mize, 27, winner of one title in five years of PGA Tour activity.

And Mize, who has had a habit of letting leads get away from him, has a plan for the final round.

"I can't let my mind get ahead of myself," he said. "I can't let myself worry about winning the golf touranment. I want to win, but I can't let myself think about it. "When you start thinking about it, then you're not thinking about the shot you're playing, the things you're supposed to be doing," he said.

But it appeared he had only one man to worry about. Only John Mahaffey could keep him in sight. And it took another record performace for Mahaffey to do it.

Mahaffey, a former PGA titleholder, coaxed a 7-under-par 65 from the gusty, shifting winds and completed three rounds at 204.

"This is about as good a round as I've ever played," said Mahaffey, 37, now in his 16th season on the tour.

It also was the best third-round score in the tournament's history and only one off the 18-hole record.

Even with that superlative effort, however, Mahaffey made up only one shot on Mize, who presented the threat of making this a runaway.

Mahaffey, however, was vastly unconcerned about the magnitude of Mize's lead.

"It's much too early in the game to be scoreboard-watching," he said. "You don't start looking at the scoreboard until about the 16th hole tomorrow."

No one else was within eight strokes of the runaway leader going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $162,000 first prize.

Tim Simpson, who played well before the winds reached peak strength, had a 66 that put him in third at 208.

He was tied with veteran Bob Murphy, who shared the lead with Mize after two rounds then slipped to a 74.

Tom Kite and Brett Upper were next at 209. Kite had a 71 and Upper shot 73. Dick Mast and Doug Tewell followed at at 210. Mast shot 68, also before the winds reached full strength, and Tewell shot 74.

Lee Trevino, a former winner of this title, had a 70 and was well back at 211. Tom Watson could do no better than 74 and was at 218.

Mize, who has led or shared the lead all the way, both opened and closed with a rush. He birdied two of his first three and, with Mahaffey closing up, birdied two of his last three.

He scored from 8 feet on the second hole and came within 2 feet of making an ace on the third. He matched his lone bogey of the day against another birdie going out and turned in 34.

He hit an 8-iron to within 3 feet on the 12th, saved par with a tough little chip on the next hole and dropped a 10-footer on the 14th for birdie.

He hit his second shot in a greenside bunker on the 16th, came out to 8 feet and made birdie-4, then stroked a 7-iron to within 5 feet on the island green of the 17th and went to six under par for the day.

Third-round scores Saturday in the $900,000 Tournament Players Championship on the 6,857-yard, par-72 Players Club at Sawgrass:

Becker Tops Connors

CHICAGO (AP) — Third-seeded Boris Becker of West Germany broke second-seeded Jimmy Connors in the second game of the third set Saturday and went on to grab a 7-6, 4-6, 6-4 semifinal triumph in the $315,000 Volvo-Chicago Tennis tournament.

With the 18-year-old "wild card" entrant collecting 11 aces and 14 service winners in the nationally televised two-hour, 43-minute marathon, Becker advanced to Sunday's final in the race for the $50,000 first prize.

Becker will meet the winner of Saturday night's semifinal between top-seeded Ivan Lendl and unseeded Scott Davis.

With the partisan crowd at the University of Illinois Chicago Pavilion chanting, "Come on Jimmy, let's go Jimmy," Connors rallied from a first-set tiebreaker loss to win the second set.

But in the third set, Connors became unraveled, making three unforced errors to fall behind 2-0. Connors came back to break Becker in the ninth game and trail 5-4, but the 33-year-old left-hander then lost his own service in the 10th game when he netted a shot.

Texas, USC In Women's Finale

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Undefeated Texas, hoping a third chance will produce an elusive NCAA Division women's basketball title, needs to overcome one more major obstacle.

The Lady Longhorns, No. 1 in the final poll for three straight years, have to get by four-time All-American Cheryl Miller and her Southern Cal teammates in Sunday's title game at Rupp Arena to capture their first NCAA crown.

Both advanced to the title showdown with lopsided victories in Friday's semifinals before a record crowd.

Third-ranked Southern Cal moved to 31-4 by defeating Tennessee 83-59 as Miller became the all-time tournament scoring leader. Texas, 33-0, got the chance to face Southern Cal by pounding Western Kentucky 90-65. The Lady Longhorns' total was just one point short of the tournament record for a semifinal, set last year when Georgia topped Western Kentucky 91-78.

The doubleheader drew a record 9,894 for a women's national semifinal, topping the mark of 8,866 set in 1983 at Norfolk, Va.

"Southern Cal was a very impressive basketball team tonight," said Tennessee Coach Pat Summitt, who saw the Women of Troy shoot 57 percent from the field to pull away in the first half and 51 percent for the night.

"The concern we had all along was how we would handle their full-court pressure," she added, "I thought once we tried to get into our half-court offense they pushed us out just a little step."

Tennessee was never in the game after trailing 42-23 and shooting 33 percent in the first half.

"I think our shot selection in the first half could have been better. I think that was an extension of their pressure defense," Summitt said. "I thought the full-court pressure really allowed Southern Cal to dictate the tempo and force us out of any type of offensive rhythm whatsoever."

Miller, playing with a heavily taped left hand to protect a finger she broke during practice before her team's opening NCAA game this month, topped her team in scoring, rebounding and assists.

But, Summitt said Texas could make a mistake by concentrating on Miller.

"The one thing that I think that many people sometimes forget is that Southern Cal is a balanced team," Summitt said. "I thought tonight (Rhonda) Windham and (Cynthia) Cooper did a great job of working the two-player game and also taking the ball inside.

" I thought Southern Cal utilized their personnel in their offensive system extremely well. It's not like you can take a Cheryl Miller out of the game, if that's possible," Summitt said. "They have offensive players at every position."

Summitt said that the title game is "a classic matchup."

"There's a little bit of similarities between the two teams. I think that they like to extend the court defensively. I think both like to capitalize on the transitional game," she said.

"Both teams hit the offensive boards extremely well and I think it will be a very physical basketball game and I think rebounding could be significant."

Southern Cal used a balanced scoring attack, featuring five players in double figures as it moved one victory away from its third Division I women's championship in four years.

Miller finished with 17 points, giving her a career-total of 3,002. She also had 10 rebounds and five assists. Her tournament point total climbed to 317, erasing the mark of 312 set by Janice Lawrence of Louisiana Tech from 1982-1984.

"Our defense, our transition, our steals (10), our balance in our scoring made a big difference," said Southern Cal Coach Linda Sharp. "We took good shots, for the most part. I thought we played aggressive defense."

"We were forced to play more of a half-court offense than we usually like to."

"I was looking forward to playing Tennessee," Miller said. "I wanted to prove I could play against a physical team. It was just a matter of maintaining self-control."

Miller said she was unaware of her latest record and that she would like to "savor tonight's victory and worry about Texas tomorrow."

Southern Cal forced 11 first-half turnovers and Tennessee had 24 for the night. Southern Cal jumped to a 10-2 lead and was never caught.

A layup by Kathy Spinks left Tennessee trailing 18-17 with 7:53 to go in the first half. Southern Cal responded with six straight points on a layup by Cherie Nelson, a 13-footer by Windham and a jumper by Cooper. That started a 10-1 and 16-3 streak which produced a 34-20 lead.

The young Tennessee squad, which had only one senior, was never able to recover.

Tennessee, which finished 24-10, managed to get to within 11 in the second half at 54-43. But, Southern Cal could draw no closer.

Nelson contributed 16 points to the victory, while Cooper and Karon Howell had 14. Bridgette Gordon was high for Tennessee with 17.

In the opener, Texas broke a 39-39 tie to take the lead for good on a layup by freshman Clarissa Davis, who scored a season-high 32 points and matched her season-high total of 18 rebounds in just 27 minutes of action.

Fran Harris, who twice scored eight of her team's 10 points in two Texas spurts, finished with 20.

Clemette Haskins led the Lady Hilltoppers with 21 points.

Trip Costs Bo His Eligibility

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson, a top pro prospect in both football and baseball, said he never would have taken a ride on the airplane of Tampa Bay Buccaneers owner Hugh Culverhouse had he known it would mean the end of his sports career at Auburn.

"I regret very much that this has happened," Jackson said Friday. "It was an honest mistake. Had I known it would jeopardize my eligibility, I never would have gone. I was under the impression that it was within the rules."

Jackson, whose speed and strength have made him a possible No. 1 pick as a power-hitting baseball player as well as a pro football tailback, flew to Tampa on a plane provided by the National Football League club last Tuesday, the Auburn athletic department announced Friday.

"I know now I should have contacted someone in authority at Auburn before I went to Tampa, but at that time, I didn't realize I was doing anything against the rules," said Jackson.

Phil Krueger, assistant to Culverhouse, said the Buccaneers had arranged for the flight for Jackson to undergo a physical examination sought by the 18 NFL clubs that are members of the National Scouting Combine.

Krueger said the flight was made on Culverhouse's plane because Jackson wanted to return to Alabama in time for baseball practice the same day.

Jackson, whose plane ride was an apparent violation of Southeastern Conference and NCAA rules against amateurs receiving free transporation from a professional franchise, was held out of Auburn's Thursday baseball game against Alabama-Birmingham because of the uncertainty over his eligibility.

The Tigers will meet Vanderbilt in Nashville, Tenn., today without his services.

Jackson, a 6-foot-1, 222-pounder who has competed with world class sprinters, led Auburn's baseball team in home runs with seven after 20 games. He struck out 29 times in 69 at-bats and finished with a batting average of only .246.

Krueger said Jackson's flight on Culverhouse's plane "had been cleared with the NCAA."

Under NCAA rules, a college athlete can be a professional in one sport and still participate at the college level as an amateur in another sport. But under SEC rules, an athlete who is a professional in one sport is ineligible for all college competition.

"There is one little thing in the Southeastern Conference rules that says accepting this money, although he didn't accept any money but rather a trip over here, would make him a professional and ineligible for all sports," Krueger said. "I'm certain Bo was not aware of this."

Tampa has No. 1 pick in the NFL draft April 29, and Jackson, a senior tailback last fall, is regarded as the top prospect. The United States Football League territorial draft is April 22, with rights to Jackson belonging to the Birmingham Stallions.

The major league baseball draft is in early June.

The Tampa Bay representative said the rules violation was not the fault of Jackson.

"Somehow it slipped through the cracks," Krueger said. "I regret it and I'm certain Auburn and the Southeastern Conference regret it. But Bo is completely blameless."

Krueger said the Bucs, 2-14 a year ago and in need of help on defense, have not decided whether they will draft Jackson.

ECU, Ohio Split Pair Of Games

East Carolina's women's softball team split a pair of games with Ohio University Friday afternoon.

Ohio shut out the Pirates in the opening game 3-0 but East Carolina came back to gain a 3-2 decision in the second game.

Tricia Shaar held ECU to just three hits in the shutout. They were claimed by Stacey Boyette, Wendy Ozment and Jeanne Murray, the latter getting a double.

Ohio scored all it needed in the fifth inning with a run. Tammy Green tripled and scored on a hit by Robin Stanley.

Ohio added the other two runs in the sixth.

In the second game, Robin Graves tossed a one-hitter at Ohio to help the Lady Pirates to the split.

East Carolina scored once in the first and saw Ohio tie it up in the fifth. ECU then got a run in the bottom of the sixth only to see the Lady Bobcats score in the top of the seventh for a 2-2 tie.

But in the bottom of the seventh, ECU got the winning run. Sandy Kee reached on an error and Julie Farrow was hit by a pitch. Mona Jackson walked, loading the bases. Ozment then reached on an error, allowing Kee to score the game-winner.

Mickey Ford and Graves each hit triples for ECU in the game.

The split raised the ECU record to 17-5 on the season. The Lady Pirates return to action on Monday, host Caninius in a doubleheader.

Yankees To Release Phil Niekro

By The Associated Press

Phil Niekro, who turns 47 years old on April Fool's Day, had worried that his age would scare away some people. It finally did.

The New York Yankees, with whom Niekro won his 300th major-league game last season, requested waivers on the knuckleball pitcher Friday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

Niekro did not have a guaranteed contract for 1986 and came to training camp trying to earn a job. But Niekro, who had won 16 games in each of the past two seasons, felt confident he could win a spot.

In four spring outings, Niekro was 1-1 with a 5.40 earned run average. If he had still been on the team's roster today, the Yankees would have had to pay him a $350,000 salary for this season.

The Yankees said they needed more time to evaluate Niekro, and asked him for permission to delay their decision for 10 days. Niekro decined, and the team waived him.

"I think they knew pretty much when I came down here I was not going to make the ballclub," said Niekro, who was 16-12 with a 4.09 ERA last season. "That's why there was no guarantee in there (his contract)."

Niekro signed with the Yankees as a free agent before the 1984 season and went 16-8 in his first year with the team.

In 1985, Niekro pitched a shutout on the final day of the season for his 300th career victory. He also became the oldest pitcher ever to throw a shutout in the major leagues at that time.

Niekro has pitched 22 seasons in the majors, the first 20 with the Atlanta Braves' organization. He has a career record of 300-250, a 3.23 ERA and 3,197 strikeouts, ranking him seventh on the all-time list.

Niekro was waived hours after the Yankees traded veteran designated hitter Don Baylor to Boston for DH Mike Easler.

The Yankees had tried to trade Baylor to the Chicago White Sox during the off-season, but Baylor had invoked his no-trade clause. Easler was traded shortly after he hit a two-run homer off Dwight Gooden as the Red Sox beat the New York Mets 10-9 in 10 innings.

The Baylor-Easler trade marked the first deal between the American League East rivals since 1972 when the Yankees got relief pitcher Sparky Lyle for first baseman Danny Cater.

Baylor, 36, hit .231 in 142 games last season, but hit 23 homers and drove in 91 runs. The right-handed slugger gets to shoot regularly at the friendly left field wall in Fenway Park, where he has hit 17 home runs, more than any active player except Reggie Jackson.

The 35-year-old Easler, a left-handed batter, hit .262 last season with 16 homers and 74 RBI, and had three of the Red Sox' 10 homers this spring, including the one Friday. He gets to aim at Yankee Stadium's right field fence, which favors left-handed hitters.

The Red Sox won their game with the Mets on Marty Barrett's RBI single off Jesse Orosco with two out in the 10th inning. Barrett had singled and scored the tying run in the ninth on Wade Boggs' two-out single.

Gooden, the 1985 National League Cy Young Award winner, had his third consecutive so-so outing. In six innings, he allowed nine hits and three runs while striking out three.

Orioles 1, Yankees 0

Baltimore's Al Pardo led off the 15th inning with a double and scored on a single by Juan Bonilla.

The Orioles scored off minor-leaguer Logan Easley. The game would have been called after 15 innings by mutual agreement because both teams were out of pitchers.

Mike Flanagan pitched the first eight innings for Baltimore and gave up five hits. Ron Guidry threw six innings of four-hit ball for New York.

Blue Jays 10, Tigers 9

Buck Martinez singled home Willie Upshaw with two outs in the ninth inning as Toronto held off Detroit. Upshaw had led off the ninth with a single, his third hit of the game.

The Blue Jays took a 9-2 lead, helped by six Detroit errors, before the Tigers rallied.

John Grubb hit a two-run homer for the Tigers.

Astros 6, Reds 3

Jose Cruz and Denny Walling knocked in two runs each as Houston won its fifth straight game. Cruz hit a sacrifice fly off John Denny in the fifth inning, snapping a 3-3 tie.

Braves 6, Expos 1

Pascual Perez gave up two hits over five innings and drove in the tie-breaking run in second inning with a sacrifice fly. After Montreal's Tim Raines led off with a triple and scored on a wild pitch, Perez set down the next 12 batters.

Dodgers 9, Rangers 6

Mariano Duncan's two-run triple capped a six-run rally in the ninth inning and sparked Los Angeles over Texas. Duncan has nine triples this spring.

The Dodgers rallied against Mickey Mahler, who had thrown away a potential game-ending double-play grounder.

Texas starter Mike Mason pitched five hitless innings. Pete O'Brien and Darrell Porter homered for the Rangers.

Phillies 8, Cardinals 3

Gary Redus homered twice and drove in five runs. Redus, who had four hits, led off the game with a home run and added a two-run shot in the third. He later delivered a two-run single.

Kevin Gross pitched seven strong innings for the Phillies, allowing one run and four hits.

In a 'B' game between the same teams, Philadelphia's Steve Carlton pitched six shutout innings and gave up three hits in a 9-1 loss to St. Louis. John Tudor started for the Cardinals and yielded one run and three hits in six innings.

Pirates 9, Royals 6

Johnny Ray drove in six runs with three hits, including a three-run homer that capped a five-run rally in the seventh to put Pittsburgh ahead 9-5. Ray hit a two-run double in the first and had an RBI single in the fourth.

Lonnie Smith, Darryl Motley and Steve Balboni homered for Kansas City.

Brewers 12, Indians 10

Rob Deer homered and Billy Joe Robidoux hit a bases-loaded, two-run single in the eighth inning, highlighting Milwaukee's 20-hit attack.

Cleveland had 14 hits, including home runs by Joe Carter, Brook Jacoby and Joe Carter off Bob Gibson in the seventh inning.

Giants 4, Cubs 2

Pitcher Vida Blue and Dan Gladden hit consecutive home runs in the third inning off Scott Sanderson, who gave up all the Giants' runs. Chicago's Ron Cey, batting .097 entering the game, hit his first home run of the spring, a two-run blow off Blue.

A's 5, Angels 4

Dave Kingman's RBI single in the 10th inning gave Oakland its fifth straight victory. Donnie Hill hit a one-out drive in the 10th that went for a triple when California right fielder Devon White lost the ball in the sun.

Mariners 9, Padres 2

Dave Henderson hit a two-run triple during a four-run fourth inning that broke a scoreless tie. Seattle added four runs in the ninth against San Diego reliever Lance McCullers, including a two-run double by Domingo Ramos.

White Sox 6, Twins 1

Chicago's Tom Seaver pitched seven innings and gave up three hits, including a home run by Chris Pittaro. Minnesota starter Bert Blyleven, who turns 35 next month, gave up one single through four innings before the White Sox scored two runs in each of the fifth and sixth innings.

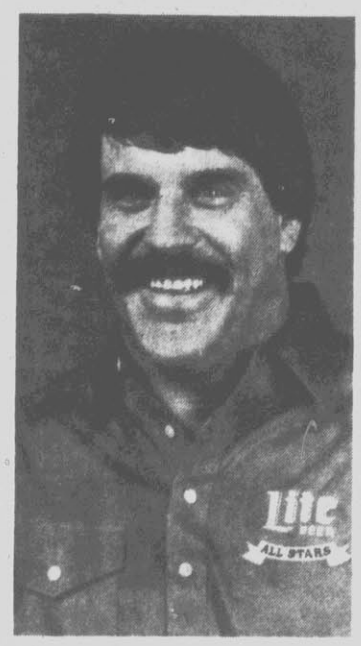
Bob Lanier



Hacksaw Reynolds

Lanier, Reynolds Pig-Out Guests

Former NBA all-star Bob Lanier and former NFL all-pro Jack "Hacksaw" Reynolds will be the two Miller Lite All-Star guests attending the annual East Carolina University Great Pirate/Gold Pigskin Pig-Out Party.

The third annual affair, set for April 18 and 19, will culminate with ECU's annual spring game, scheduled for Saturday at 3:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

This will mark the second consecutive year that two of the All-Stars have attended the festivities. Last year, former baseball great Boog Powell and NFL all-pro Ben Davidson visited Greenville. More than 10,000 people attended the gatherings last year.

Lanier was a seven-time NBA all-star during his career with the Detroit Pistons and Milwaukee Bucks and is still recognized as Detroit's all-time leading scorer and rebounder. He finished his career 12th on the NBA's career scoring list with more than 19,000 points, but is best remembered for his size 19 feet which Dave Cowens pokes fun at during their current All-Star commercial.

Reynolds was a two-time Pro Bowl participant who played on the San Francisco 49ers 1982 Super Bowl championship team. Reynolds played with both the Los Angeles Rams and the 49ers, retiring from pro football following the 1984 season having played in two Super Bowls.

Reynolds earned the nickname "Hacksaw" in 1969, when, out of frustration following Tennessee's 38-0 loss to Ole Miss, he used 13 blades and a hacksaw to cut a 1953 Chevy in half.

Lanier will be at the golf social and auction Thursday night as well as Friday's Pig-Out Golf Tournament. Both Lanier and Reynolds will be at Friday night's activities surrounding Ficklen Stadium, with Reynolds staying on until the end of Saturday's activities.

Harvard In Net Victory

The Harvard "B" tennis team romped to a 9-0 victory over East Carolina University Friday.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 4-6 on the spring season. They are 8-12 overall.

ECU did manage to extend the Crimson to three sets in four of the six singles matches, but could not pull out any victories.

East Carolina returns to action on Wednesday, traveling to Elon College.

Roanoke, GCA Drop Contests

ROBERSONVILLE — Ahoskie High School handed Roanoke's girls' softball team its fourth straight setback Friday, taking a 10-3 decision in the Northeastern Conference game.

The loss dropped Roanoke to 0-2 in league play. Ahoskie is now 1-2 overall.

Ahoskie grabbed the lead with three runs in the first, but Roanoke came back to push over two in the bottom of the inning.

Melissa Manning, Michelle White and Mashanda Knight all hit singles to open the inning for the Lady Redskins. Amy Streeter then reached on an error, which allowed both Manning and White to score.

But Ahoskie closed it out with two runs in the top of the second. Lori Britton singled and Vonda Trotter reached on an error. Kim Brittanham walked and Theresa Bracey reached on an error, scoring both Britton and Trotter for a 5-2 lead.

Roanoke came up with one in the third, but Ahoskie scored three more in t;he fourth and two in the fifth to wrap it up.

Vickie Bracey and Sheila Roberson each had two hits to lead Ahoskie, while White had a pair for Roanoke.

The Lady Redskins return to action on April 8, hosting Edenton.

Wilmington.....44
Gr. Christian.....3

Wilmington Christian ripped the Greenville Christian girls' softball team, 44-3, in the Lady Knights' opening game of the season Friday.

Wilmington scored five times each in the first and second, then added 15 in the third. After five more in the fourth, Wilmington scored 14 times in the fifth to wrap it up.

Greenville Christian avoided a shutout with a run in the fourth — that off a homer by Paula Dail — the only hit GCA got on the day. They did manage two more runs in the fifth.

Ironically, no one had more than one hit for either team.

GCA, now 0-1, returns to action on April 7, traveling to Friendship Christian in Raleigh.

Peay May Coach Team In The Fall

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Defensive coordinator Francis Peay — named interim head football coach at Northwestern three days before spring football practice opens — has an outside chance of coaching the team during the 1986 season.

The job was left open when Dennis Green resigned earlier in the week to become an assistant coach under Bill Walsh with the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League.

Peay's appointment was announced by Athletic Director Doug Single, who said that if a head football coach was not named by mid-June, Peay could remain as interim coach through the 1986 season.

"My first priority is to conclude the search for a men's basketball coach which I expect to do in the very near future," said Single, who earlier this month fired Rich Falk.

"As soon as that search is completed, I will appoint a small committee to assist me in the search and selection of a head football coach," said Single. "That search will move ahead deliberately, but it is possible that Francis Peay will serve as head interim coach through the 1986 season if a new head coach is not named by mid-June."

Peay, 41, has expressed a desire to be a candidate for the head coaching position as has Scott Schuhmann, the offensive coordinator under Green.

"Situations create opportunities," Peay said. "This particular one comes as a surprise, but I'm no less prepared to accept its challenge. We will begin immediate preparations for spring football practice with the goal in mind of being a much more physical team and one capable of much better execution."

Green, 37, was an assistant coach under Walsh at San Francisco when he came to Northwestern five years ago.

In his five seasons at Northwestern, he had an overall record of 10-45. He was 7-37 in the Big Ten. In 1982, although Northwestern had a 3-8 record, he was named Big Ten Coach of the Year. The first victory over Northern Illinois broke an NCAA record 34-game losing streak and the other two, against Minnesota and Michigan State, were totally unexpected.

Peay came to Northwestern with Green. Peay played nine years in the pro ranks with the New York Giants, Green Bay and Kansas City. He had been an outstanding offensive tackle during his college days at Missouri.

Peay began his coaching career with a three-year stint as an assistant at California, followed by two years at Notre Dame on Coach Dan Devine's staff.

Berry Made Honorary Colonel By Kentucky

DALLAS (AP) — For a day, the state of Kentucky had both Eddie Sutton and Walter Berry.

The two were honored Friday as The Associated Press' college basketball coach and player of the year, respectively. At the ceremonies, letters of congratulation from Kentucky Governor Martha Layne Collins were read and Berry, a junior forward from St. John's, was made an honorary Kentucky Colonel.

"I know Springfield is the birthplace of basketball but there's no doubt in my mind that Dr. Naismith conceived the idea someplace in Kentucky," Sutton said of his new home state.

Kentucky was a major topic because Berry received the Adolph F. Rupp Trophy for his selection as player of the year, the fifth such award the New York native has garnered this season.

"It is quite an honor to receive an award such as the Rupp Trophy," said Berry, the fifth underclassman to receive the award named for the former Kentucky coach.

Berry, who averaged 23 points and 11 rebounds a game, received 66 of the 192 votes from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

Kentucky's Kenny Walker was second with 50, followed by Johnny Dawkins of Duke with 18 and Maryland's Len Bias with 12.

"I knew I was this good but that didn't mean I'd win the awards," Berry, the Big East player of the year and the only unamimous All-American selection, said. "I didn't think about the awards (during the season), that just happened."

Berry said he will return for his senior season unless one thing happens.

"If I know I will be the No. 1 choice in the (National Basketball Association) draft, then I'm going," Berry said. "That is a once-in-a-lifetime chance. That is the only thing that could change my mind. I would have to be No. 1. I've got one more big decision in my life."

Sutton, who came to Kentucky after 11 years at Arkansas, led the Wildcats to a 32-4 record and the final No. 3 ranking. Sutton edged Bradley's Dick Versace in the voting, followed by Duke's Mike Krzyzewski, Lou Carnesecca of St. John's and Dean Smith of North Carolina.

"I am deeply honored to receive this award with so many great coaching feats this year," Sutton said. "It is a wonderful honor for my family, my wonderful basketball team that understood their roles and my wonderful coaching staff. Too often the head coach gets too much credit and the assistants not enough."

Sutton became the first coach to win the award at two different schools. He received the honor in 1978, a year he led Arkansas to the Final Four, where the Razorbacks lost to Kentucky.

"I enjoyed my year at Kentucky more than any other in my 28 years of coaching," he said.

Conradt Named Top Woman Coach

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Jody Conradt, coach of the top-ranked and undefeated Texas team, was named Coach of the Year for Division I women's basketball Friday.

"It caught me completely off guard," said Conradt, who received the award from her peers in the Women's Basketball Coaches Association for the third time since 1980. "I thought that others might have thought anybody could coach this team."

Conradt, the winningest female coach in women's basketball with a 437-112 record, received the annual award at the annual Converse Coach of the Year luncheon hours before she was to send the Lady Longhorns against Western Kentucky in the NCAA semifinals.

Others honored as coach of the year were Brenda Reilly of Central Connecticut State, NCAA Division II; Tim Shea of Salem State, NCAA Division III; Sylvia Hatchell, Francis Marion College of Florence, S.C., NAIA; and Jerry McCarty, Barton County Community College in Great Bend, Kan.

Jaguars Down North Pitt

BETHEL — Farmville Central's baseball team won its first game of the season Friday, downing North Pitt, 9-4.

The Panthers struck first, scoring three times in the first inning. Jarvis Massenburg reached on an error and stole second. He scored on Scott Rawls' single. Steve Strickland and Chuck Doak both got hits, the latter scoring Rawls and Strickland.

Farmville came back with two in the second, but North Pitt scored one more in its half of the frame for a 4-2 lead.

Then, in the fourth, Farmville scored five times to push out into a 7-4 lead that North Pitt never overcame. Eddie Little and Howard Collins opened the frame with singles. They were sacrificed up and Mark Wooten doubled both of them in. Greg May walked and both runners advanced on a wild pitch. Dennis Tripp reached on an error that allowed both Wooten and May to score. Shae Terrell walked and Kelvin Huber reached on an error, loading the bases. Little, back up, was hit by a pitch, forcing in Tripp.

Farmville added two more runs in the seventh.

Moore, Wooten, May and Mike Vandiford each had two hits for Farmville while Scott Rawls had two for North Pitt.

The win boosts the Farmville Central record to 1-5 overall and 1-1 in Eastern Plains Conference play. North Pitt falls to 2-3, 1-2.

The Jaguars were to play Saturday night in the Pitt County Easter Tournament at Conley, while North Pitt returs to action on Monday in the SouthWest Edgecombe Tournament.

Gr. Christian 4

Wilmington Christian Academy downed Greenville Christian, 8-4, in the opening baseball game of the season for the Knights.

Wilmington jumped into the lead with three runs in the top of the first inning, but GCA countered that with three of their own in their half of the frame.

Tim Bland and Marc Holloman both singled and Davis Rouse walked to load the bases. Tim O'Shea singled, driving in both Bland and Holloman. Rouse was then picked off and Franklin Higgins singled to score O'Shea.

However, Wilmington came back with four runs in the top of the third to put the game on ice. Casola and McDowell both singled and a hit by Knotts brought in Casola. Memby singled to score McDowell and a sacrifice fly by Carroll scored Knotts. A pickoff error then allowed Memby to score.

GCA scored once in the bottom of the third to trail 7-4, but got no more. Wilmington added one more in the seventh.

Holloman had three hits and Bland, two, to lead the GCA effort. Casola and Knotts each had three hits for Wilmington.

Now 0-1, GCA travels to Friendship on April 7.

Pressure Grows On Cage Coaches

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Billy Tubbs says it has been a circus.

Lou Henson says he hasn't seen anything like it in 31 years of coaching.

C.M. Newton says it's crazy.

John Thompson says it all comes with the territory.

Eddie Sutton says it's the worst he's seen.

Pressure, the thick, suffocating kind that feeds on wins and losses and leads to the firing of collegiate basketball coaches, is the hot topic for hard analysis and gallows humor at the NCAA Final Four.

There have been 19 coaching vacancies since the end of the season. The hotel lobbies are abuzz with war stories and rumors at the National Association of Basketball Coaches convention.

"It's the wildest thing I've ever seen," said Tubbs, coach at Oklahoma. "You have to have a scorecard to keep up with the coaches."

"I've never seen a year as bad as this one and I've been around 31 years," said Henson, coach at Illinois.

Newton, coach at Vanderbilt, said, "It's been crazy, but I guess that's the nature of the beast. Sometimes I wonder what my old coach, Adolph Rupp, would think about it."

The changes that came about as the season ended were both expected and unexpected. Moves by young coaches like St. Bonaventure's Jim O'Brien, who went to his alma mater Boston College, and Ohio University's Danny Nee, who took the head job at Nebraska, are expected in the coaching profession.

But older and more successful coaches also are on the move. George Raveling, who led Iowa into the NCAA tournament, moved to Southern California, while Navy's Paul Evans, who led the Middies into the East Regional final against Duke, left the service academy for Pittsburgh.

The increased popularity of the NCAA basketball playoffs has been great for the game, but hard on the coaches.

"There is enormous pressure now on coaches to get a team into the 64-team NCAA playoff field," Henson said. "The fans and the administration aren't happy if you don't make it. It just keeps getting tougher."

Henson said the outside pressure can become so tough on coaches "they will move to another school to get away from it, although they are otherwise happy at the school where they are employed."

He added, "Times have changed."

"You could make a good living being a broker for coaches looking for jobs," Tubbs joked. "There is extreme pressure to get into the NCAA tournament."

He said his telephone has been ringing with offers.

"It's flattering, but I'm not pursuing any jobs," Tubbs said. "It's been bizarre."

Tubbs said coaches can be their own worst enemies because "they put so much pressure on themselves. This game is still fun, but it's getting pretty serious. I guess it beats working. Who knows, I may quit someday and take 10 years to get a law degree."

Thompson, Georgetown's coach, said, "There's probably more good than bad being a coach. But educators have got to start understanding the tremendous pressure that coaches are feeling. Administrators have to start being sensible about it."

Sutton, The Associated Press Coach of the Year from Kentucky, said his profession never has been under such a loaded gun. Part of the reason is television, he said.

"Fans watch so many games now that they all become experts, and that puts more pressure on coaches," Sutton said. "Television commentators have a great responsibility. They do a great job, but they can say a lot of things that puts pressure on a coach.

"There has always been pressure on coaches, but I hope we haven't reached the point where a school wants to fire somebody just because the school doesn't make the 64-team NCAA tournament," he said.

Coaches are paid hefty salaries in successful seasons.

"I think the most Coach Rupp ever made was $40,000 at Kentucky," Newton said. "He'd be amazed how the NCAA tournament has gone from a regional concept to superstar, national status.

Walton Sparks Boston Victory

By The Associated Press

Maybe the Boston Celtics should start Bill Walton more often.

Walton, starting his first game of the season, scored a season-high 20 points Friday night and sparked Boston past the Washington Bullets 116-97 in the NBA.

"I started a few games in my life," Walton said with a smile. "I know how to do that."

The victory was the 10th straight for the Celtics, who extended their team-record homecourt winning streak to 26 games. Boston can tie the NBA single-season mark of 27, set by the Minneapolis Lakers in 1949-50, on Sunday against New Jersey.

In other NBA games, Milwaukee downed Philadelphia 116-94, Detroit stopped Houston 116-107, Atlanta defeated Indiana 100-92, Denver beat Utah 128-120, New Jersey tripped Chicago 118-107 and the Los Angeles Clippers topped Phoenix 107-96.

The 6-foot-11 Walton, starting because center Robert Parish was sidelined with a stiff back, got Boston off to a fast start when he won the opening tap against Washington's Manute Bol.

"I like jump balls," Walton said, "especially against guys 7-foot-7. I haven't had too many opportunities like that."

Boston scored the first seven points, and Walton got 13 of the Celtics' first 28. Boston led 35-20 after the first quarter and made it 61-48 at halftime.

"We came out of the blocks really well," said Walton, who finished with 12 rebounds for Boston, now 60-13 this season. Larry Bird added 27 poins for the winners.

"Walton got them started offensively and defensively," Bullets Coach Kevin Loughery said. "He got them rolling."

Boston's K.C. Jones became the first coach in NBA history to compile four 60-victory seasons. He had one with Washington in 1974-75 before moving to Boston in 1983.

Jeff Malone scored 18 for Washington, which had won three straight games.

Bucks 116, 76ers 94

Reserve Ricky Pierce hit 14 of 18 shots from the field and scored 31 points as Milwaukee won a game in which two Philadelphia players were injured.

The 76ers lost center Moses Malone when he was hit in the right eye early in the first quarter. Malone was diagnosed as having a swollen retina and will be out of action indefinitely.

Philadelphia's Bob McAdoo hurt his left knee midway through the fourth quarter. His condition is day-to-day, the team said.

Pierce scored nine points during a 19-3 streak late in the fourth quarter that helped the Bucks pull away from a 97-91 lead.

Paul Pressey scored 18 points for Milwaukee. Julius Erving and Charles Barkley scored 19 points apiece for the host 76ers.

Philadelphia guard Andrew Toney made his first appearance since Feb. 17 and scored three points in limited action. Toney had been sidelined for all but five games this season with painful stress fractures in his feet.

Pistons 116, Rockets 107

Bill Laimbeer scored 27 points and led Detroit past Houston, which again played without Ralph Sampson.

The Pistons were in charge for the first three quarters and led 105-87 midway through the fourth. Houston then pulled within 109-104 with 1:45 remaining, but got no closer.

Sampson, who injured his back Monday night in Boston, did not dress for the game.

Kelly Tripucka scored 19 points and Joe Dumars 18 for Detroit.

Akeem Olajuwon led the visiting Rockets with 26 points.

Nets 118, Bulls 107

Mike Gminski scored 26 points and Otis Birdsong had 23 as New Jersey further damaged Chicago's playoff hopes.

The Nets used a 14-4 burst in the hird quarter for an 80-65 lead, and went on to end their four-game losing streak. Chicago lost its seventh straight game on the road, and is now three games behind Cleveland in the race for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference.

Orlando Woolridge scored 32 for the Bulls and Michael Jordan had 22, the most he has scored since recently returning from a foot injury.

Nuggets 128, Jazz 120

Alex English and Calvin Natt scored 35 points each, leading Denver past Utah.

Natt, in scoring his season-high for the Nuggets, got 23 points in the first half, when he was 8 for 10 from the floor and made all seven of his foul shots.

Adrian Dantley scored 35 points for the host Jazz. Utah's magic number for clinching a playoff spot in the Western Conference was reduced to one when Phoenix lost to the Los Angeles Clippers.

Clippers 107, Suns 96

Norm Nixon scored 19 points and Marques Johnson got half of his 18 points during a third-quarter burst that lifted Los Angeles over Phoenix.

Benoit Benjamin's three-point play with 6:08 left in the third quarter gave Los Angeles the lead for good at 73-72. Benjamin scored five points and Johnson three as the Clippers went on a 17-4 run that sealed the victory.

Benjamin finished with 18 points. Walter Davis had 26 for the host Suns, who scored only 34 points in the second half.

Hawks 100, Pacers 92

Dominique Wilkins scored 32 points and Atlanta made seven of eight foul shots in the final 1:19 to beat host Indiana.

The Hawks took the lead for good at 6-4 when Wilkins made a jump shot. Wilkins later made four of Atlanta's seven free throws in the final 79 seconds.

Randy Wittman added 24 for Atlanta. Vern Fleming scored 22 for the Pacers, who have lost five straight games.

Hooper, King Top Tournament

Joan Hooper shot a 44 in the nine-hole Ladies' Playday Golf Tournament at the Greenville Country Club to take the low gross title Friday.

Vertie King shot a 32 after the handicap to win the low net title on the 2,404-yard course.

Jordan Wonders If Return Hurt

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan says he has no pain, no problems and no regrets. He has even stopped second-guessing his decision to return to the Chicago Bulls with less than a month left in the regular season.

"I am completely recovered," said last year's NBA Rookie of the Year. "All I want is more minutes. If I continue to show I can play, the minutes will go up."

Jordan, a former North Carolina star, was grounded Oct. 29 — the Bulls' third game of the season — after suffering a broken bone in his left foot. Twice the cast came off, twice it went back on.

Jordan missed 64 games, and the Bulls were willing to let him call it a season rather than risk permanent injury.

He had other ideas.

After the cast finally came off and his rehabilitation ended, Jordan insisted on playing. Immediately. Against doctors' orders, he was even working out four times a week in Carolina.

Jerry Krause, Bulls' general manager, and Jerry Reinsdorf, the team's owner, reluctantly agreed to allow their star to play seven minutes during each half. They said they would gradually increase those minutes in subsequent games.

When Jordan came off the disabled list March 14, the Bulls had won three straight and were within reach of the final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference.

His return the next day was spectacular; the end result less so.

Jordan scored 13 points in 12 minutes against Milwaukee, but the Bulls lost the game. Two days later, Jordan played 14 minutes against Atlanta, scored 17 points, had seven steals — one short of the team record — and again, the Bulls lost.

There were three more games and three more losses, including a humiliating 123-97 defeat by Cleveland, one of the teams the Bulls were chasing for the final playoff spot.

Jordan wondered if he was the reason.

"What else can I think?" he asked after the Cavs game. "They won three in a row and since I've been back, we haven't won a game. I'm hurting the team with my spurts of minutes. I'm disrupting the chemistry."

Four of those five losses were on the road, where the Bulls had a 6-29 record in their first 72 games. The other loss was at home against the Bucks, whom the Bulls have yet to defeat this season.

Apparently confused by what was happening, Jordan asked to play full time or not at all. Later he recanted.

"I can admit to forcing some things," he said. "I'm used to playing 48 minutes. Now I'm trying to put it all into 20 minutes. It's an awkward feeling."

It also was awkward for the Bulls, who had slowed down their attack when Jordan was sidelined.

"Have you noticed we're caught between slowing down things like we had been doing and speeding them up for Michael?" guard Kyle Macy asked. "To utilize his talents, you want to get him in the open court where he can explode to the basket.

"We had been successful slowing things down. Now the guys coming into the game look around to see who's in there." Macy said. "You can sense the confusion."

Krause had the answer.

"One win, that's all it will take," he said. "He was trying to take all the responsibility and the responsibility wasn't his to take. I told him he was trying too hard. You can't make 30-point baskets."

The win finally came when Jordan and the Bulls broke the losing streak with an 111-98 victory over the New York Knicks in Chicago Tuesday night. Jordan played 19 minutes and scored 19 points.

"I'm not depressed anymore," he said. "I let the game come to me. I made sure I didn't try too hard. I'm just going to go out the rest of the season and contribute any way I can. If we win, we win. If we lose, we lose."

Different Approaches For Vets

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Steve Garvey buys youth with training.

Graig Nettles doesn't buy that idea.

The two oldest players on the San Diego Padres' roster have different philosophies when it comes to off-season workouts: One wonders if he works hard enough; the other hardly works.

Their performance in 1986, however, could determine whether the team returns to its National League championship form of 1984.

"They are key ingredients and we've got to have good years from them," Padres Manager Steve Boros said. "I don't see why we shouldn't."

Neither does Garvey.

"I'm probably in better overall shape now than I've been in 10 years," says the 37-year-old first baseman.

For a decade, he has followed a strict diet and an exercise program that includes distnce running, sprinting, weightlifting, and racquetball and tennis in the offseason.

Above his spring training locker hangs a sign that asks, "Have You Worked Hard Enough Today?"

"I want to play 162 games, bat .300, with 200 hits, 100 RBI and a world championship," Garvey says of his goals for the season. "In order to achieve those, you've got to prepare yourself. The one fear I have is not being ready.

"That's why I push myself," he said.

Nettles, on the other hand, credits his longevity to offseason relaxation.

"I do just the opposite of a lot of guys who work year-round," he said. "I don't pick up a baseball in the off-season. I just stay loose by playing golf and tennis. But other than that I don't do much."

Boros plans to platoon Nettles at third base with Jerry Royster. The left-handed hitting Nettles will start against right-handers.

No objections from the 41-year-old.

"Nothing seems to bother him," Boros said.

As for Garvey, Boros already has decided he won't be playing every game. Instead, he'll start about 150, resting once or so every two weeks.

"He'll be more productive for getting that day off occasionally," Boros said.

Says Garvey: "I made a commitment again to play in 162 games, but the manager has the final say."

While their individual performances are crucial, Boros said Nettles and Garvey also play an important, more subtle role in steadying younger players.

"They operate on an even keel," he said. "When you have young players, they have highs and lows, and it's something they have to learn to eliminate because you can't play this game when you're way down. ... You also can't play when you're way up. You peak too soon or too much.

"By the way they do things, the way they handle themselves, they send a message to other players that this is the way they've had success," Boros said.

In 15 years in the majors, Garvey has established himself as one of the game's most consistent players. A lifetime .298 hitter, he holds the NL record for consecutive games played at 1,207, a seven-year streak that ended in 1983 when he suffered a dislocated thumb, the first disabling injury of his career.

Nettles, in his 17th year, collected his 2,000th career hit early last season. He is perhaps best known for his brilliant fielding in the 1978 World Series when the New York Yankees beat Garvey and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Garvey joined the Padres as a free agent in 1983 after starring with the Dodgers for 12 years. Nettles was traded to the Padres before the 1984 season.

Neither Garvey, who is signed through 1987, nor Nettles, who was signed to a one-year pact before the 1986 season, said he is considering retirement.

"When you start doing that, it means you're ready to quit," Nettles said.

And baseball's economics make it worthwhile to stay.

"It used to be where a guy in his middle 30s might be making $40,000 in the big leagues," Nettles said. "Well, he could step out into the business world and maybe make that much or more. Nowadays, if a guy is making, say, $500,000, there's no way he can quit the game, get into business and make that. The money, more than anything, is the incentive for the players to stay around."

AA-1 Champions

Cancer Golf Tourney Held

A three-division golf tournament for the benefit of the American Cancer Society's Pitt County Chapter was held this past week at Brook Valley Country Club.

The three divisions included a superball, a best-ball and a women's combined event.

The team of Tommie Little, Lee Ball, Robert Dean and Buzz Sawyer took first place in the four-man superball division. Second place went to Dick Decker, Terry Doyle, Buddy Evans and Dave Myles.

Julius Budacz, Gene Briley, Richard Moldin and David Nichols won the four-man best ball division. Second place went to Rich Rados, Tim Kermon, Mac Worley and Gary Hess.

The women's division was won by the team of Missy Decker, Wanda Bonds, Pam Kachmer and Janis Vincent. Second place went to Mary Bruton, Pat Joyner, Maxine Hawley and Doris Jenkins.

Saltwater Fishing Seminars

Saltwater fishermen interested in learning about topics ranging from "How to Rig Trolling Baits" to "Downeast Seafood Cooking" won't want to miss the Saltwater Fishing Pavilion today at the N.C. State Fairgrounds.

The pavilion, an addition to the third annual Southern Sports and Outdoor Show, covers about 25,000 square feet of space in the Jim Graham Building, where seminars on saltwater fishing will be given throughout the day today. The pavilion has been coordinated by the Crystal Coast Charter Boat Association and the Carteret County Sport Fishing Association.

The pavilion not only includes the latest in saltwater fishing gear and charter boat opportunities, but it also features a series of how-to seminars, many given from the stern of a 23-foot boat.

Seminar topics, times and instructors follow:

☐ 12 noon — Fishing the Sounds of North Carolina, George Summerlin, Captain "Do It To It," Atlantic Beach.

☐ 3 p.m. Proper Care of the Catch and Downeast Seafood Cooking, Carol Stigelman, Marine Fisheries Seafood Development Specialist, Morehead City.

☐ 4 p.m. Tips on Chartering a Boat, Jeff Drake, owner and operator of Carolina Headboats, Morehead City.

☐ 5 p.m. Greater Utilization of Southeastern Fish: Using What You Used to Throw Back, Jim Murray, UNC Sea Grant College Program, Raleigh.

There will also be a number of exhibits and features for freshwater fishermen. Fishing pros will be demonstrating everything from jig and pig fishing to striper fishing.

Other exhibits include wildlife art, RVs and sports cars, boats, hunting equipment, and fitness and bodybuilding equipment.

Show hours today, the final day of the show, are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for youth and seniors. For more information call 1-800-532-0189.

Wildlife Commission Promotions

Two employees of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission were recently promoted. Richard B. Hamilton, chief of the agency's division of boating and inland fisheries, was appointed assistant director. Fred Harris of Apex, assistant chief of the division, replaced Hamilton as chief.

Hamilton began his career with the commission in 1970 as a wildlife biologist in the division of game. He has served as chief of the division of game, assistant director of the agency, and chief of the division of boating and inland fisheries.

Harris began working for the commission in 1972 as a fisheries biologist in Siler City. In 1976, he was appointed fisheries research coordinator for the Piedmont region. In 1981, he was promoted to assistant chief of the division of inland fisheries.

"We're pleased to announce these promotions," said Charles Fullwood, executive director of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. "Richard Hamilton and Fred Harris have excellent work experience, and we have confidence that they'll do a fine job."

Bass Tournament

The San Souci Bass Masters are sponsoring the Cashie River Bass Tournament Saturday from 7 a.m. until 4 p.m. For more information or to obtain entry forms, contact Lynn Henry, Route 1, Box 305E, Windsor, N.C. 27983 (phone: 794-3316).

Outstanding Wildlife Club

The Roanoke-Chowan Wildlife Club was one of 26 wildlife clubs throughout the United States to receive a 1985 National Wildlife Federation President's Award to Outstanding Member Clubs.

The clubs were selected for national recognition because their conservation action programs demonstrate wise use of natural resources.

According to Carl N. Crouse, NWF president, the 200 members of the Roanoke-Chowan Wildlife Club demonstrate a continuing commitment to the ideals of citizen participation in state and national conservation issues.

Located on the Chowan River, the club has first-hand experience of water pollution problems, and has been active in getting government regulations enacted that will enforce the river's clean-up.

The club has also been effective in combatting wetland destruction in eastern North Carolina caused by massive land clearing by large farm and peat mining operations. They offer the club facilities to the North Carolina Wildlife Federation to use for hunter safety courses and sponsor young people from the area at the federation's Fur' Fish and Game Rendezvous.

ACC All-Stars To Make Williamston, A-G Shows

The Atlantic Coast Conference All-Stars will be making two appearances in the area, at Ayden-Grifton High School and at Williamston High School.

The All-Stars will appear at Williamston on Friday at 8 p.m. while making a stop at Ayden-Grifton on April 8, also at 8 p.m.

The ACC team will be made up of senior members of the league, although definite lineups have not been announced.

In each of the games, the ACC players will face a team of local all-stars. Following the game a slam-dunk contest will be held, along with an autograph session.

Tickets for the games are available at the two schools. Tickets for the Ayden-Grifton game area also available at Bond's Sporting Goods and Overton's Sports Center.

Servicemen Dodge Strikers On Air Base

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — Dozens of U.S. servicemen trying to get in or out of this American base climbed over fences Saturday to evade striking Filipino workers who have barricaded all the gates for a week.

Air Force spokesman Maj. Thomas Boyd said some of the troops wanted to join their families living off-base. He said "scattered incidents of scuffles" occurred when strikers chased airmen, but no injuries were reported.

Leaders of the striking union federation on Saturday again rejected a U.S. demand that barricades outside Clark and nearby Subic Naval Base be lifted, the federation said.

About 22,000 Filipino workers have been striking since March 21 over the issue of severance pay upon quitting. Along with Clark and Subic, the United States' two largest military posts overseas, the strike affects six smaller facilities, which have not been barricaded.

Remigio Simbillo, head of the workers' group at Clark, said U.S. negotiators promised to submit counterproposals to striker demands and "enter into meaningful direct negotiations" within 24 hours after barricades are lifted. Simbillo said the Americans proposed that both sides sign a memorandum of agreement stating this.

But he said Roberto Flores, president of the striking federation, demanded the Americans first submit the counterproposals.

Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. James Van Sickle confirmed the military had prepared such a memorandum, but said he did not know if it was submitted to the strikers Saturday.

Subic commander Rear Adm. Edwin Kohn has said he will discuss the workers' economic demands only after barricades are removed.

The workers said Friday they proposed alternatives to their severance pay demand, including retirement pay for workers who reach age 45 or complete 15 years of employment; pay for the period of the strike; a monthly grant of 110 pounds of rice for each employee, and a one-year moratorium on layoffs.

The Philippine News Agency said nightclub and barroom business around the bases has fallen off during the strike, the longest to affect all U.S. facilities in the Philippines.

Spokesmen at Clark and Subic said the strike has not impaired military operations.

Debt Nears $2 Trillion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's total indebtedness, usually called the national debt and representing an accumulation of decades of deficit spending, had reached $1,950,293,000,000 by the end of 1985, according to Treasury Department calculations.

This debt of nearly $2 trillion included $1.4 trillion, or 73 percent, owed to the public. The remaining 27 percent was owned by the federal government itself, invested in various government trust funds such as Social Security.

The debt held by the public includes $154.7 billion (8 percent of the total) held by individuals. Of this, $79.8 billion (4 percent) is invested in savings bonds.

The rest of the national debt is held by commercial banks, insurance companies, money market funds, corporations, state and local governments and foreign investors.

The amount held by foreigners totaled $209.8 billion in September (12 percent of the total). This represented an increase of $50.1 billion since September 1984.

Volcano Ash Carried To Sea By Wind

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Augustine Volcano awoke Saturday after a quiet night and resumed its pulsating eruptions, but shifting winds carried most of the abrasive ash away from cities and out to sea.

Some gritty debris from the earlier blasts by the 4,025-foot volcanic island 175 miles southwest of Anchorage still hung in the air over Anchorage and nearby Kenai, making breathing a chore and stranding hundreds of Easter weekend air travelers.

Health officials said the count of microscopic particles was high and health alerts for respiratory problems remained in effect. Despite the warnings, hardy skiers donned masks to take advantage of the week's record snowfall.

After exploding at approximately two-hour intervals most of Friday, the volcano quieted down about midnight, said Tom Miller of the U.S. Geological Survey. But the activity resumed with a blast at 6:45 a.m., and eruption after eruption followed, said USGS geologist Betsy Yount.

Because the prevailing winds Saturday came from the west, instead of the south, the ash over the cities began to dissipate.

Business Notes

Agent Joins Firm

Blanche Forbes Realty of Greenville has announced the association of Rocky Soranno with the firm as a real estate agent.

Prior to moving to Greenville, Soranno worked for Marotta Scientific Controls Inc., Montville, N.J., for 32 years.

Soranno and his wife, Jean, are from New Jersey and have two children.

Credit Manager

Greenville native James Staton Martin has been appointed retail credit manager at Planters National Bank's Nashville office.

Martin, who received a degree in social studies from Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, is a member of the First Presbyterian Church board of deacons. He is first vice president of the American Insititute of Banking.

Martin and his wife, Marguerite, have two children.

Corporate Founder

Branch Banking and Trust Co. has become the first North Carolina corporate founder of the National Museum of Women in the Arts during a meeting of the eastern North Carolina Committee for Women.

The museum is scheduled to open in spring 1987.

Area members serving on the committee include Barbara Sauls of Farmville, Barbara Owens of Fountain, Carolyn Powell, Mary Hannah Taft and Penny Laing, all of Greenville, Woodard Heath and Martha Sherman of Kinston; Kity Bailey and Elsie Williams of New Bern, and Betty Gray and Judy Meier of Washington.

Industrial Council

Jim Martin will speak at the Eastern North Carolina Industrial Council's spring rally scheduled for April 15.

The governor will address the meeting at a 7:30 p.m. dinner at the Greenville Country Club. The "Industrialist of the Year" award will be presented by Seymour Alper of Wilmington, selection committee chairman and an official with Queensboro Steel.

Charles W. Howard Jr., president of Greenville Tobacco Co., and Graham Flanagan, president of North American Fiberglass Corp., are among the executive committee members.

Associate Broker

Sherri G. Powell has joined C.J. Harris and Co. Inc., a financial and marketing consulting firm in Greenville, as an associate business broker.

She will represent clients in the sale and purchase of businesses and market other financial and marketing consultant services, Harris said.

Ms. Powell received a bachelor's degree in business administration from East Carolina University.

Scholarships Funded

Three, one-year scholarships of $1,000 each have been established in memory of Kelly M. Alexander Sr., former president of the North Carolina chapter of the NAACP and NAACP national board of directors, by Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. of Tarboro.

The scholarships will be given to a student from the eastern, Piedmont and western regions of the state. For more information, contact NAACP State Office, 1512 E. Market St., Greensboro, 27401.

Homestad Trip

Home Security Life sales manager Effie Corbett has announced that employees John Simpson, Mattie Johnson and Adam Corbett recently won a three-day trip to Hot Springs, Va.

Ms. Corbett said the trip was part of a Homestead fall campaign competition.

Firm Pledges Funds

More than $60,000 in contributions have been pledged to the 1986 Easter Seal fund-raising campaign by Century 21 Real Estate of the Carolinas Inc.

The contribution was part of the $2.2 million pledged by the nationwide system of Century 21 offices — the largest Easter Seals contribution ever made by a corporate sponsor, according to a news release by the firm.

Record Figures

Shoney's Inc. has announced record revenues and net income for the first quarter of fiscal 1986.

Net income increased 19 percent to $9,905,528. Revenues increased 14 percent to $171,711,561.

Shoney's Inc. is a food service operator and franchisor which has a restaurant in Greenville.

Office Opens

Realtors Evelyn Bullock and Ray Everett have announced the opening of their new office, Carolina East Realty Inc., at 2192 S. Evans St.

The office will be open from 9 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

Account Position

Mary B. Parsons has joined Fickling Insurance Associates Inc. as a commercial account executive, according to Kurt Fickling, president of the firm.

Mrs. Parsons is a graduate of Wake Forest University and is married to David Parsons. She was previously associated with a Tulsa, Okla., firm.

Firm Relocates

Triangle Electrical Association for Manufacturers, Lighting and Control Specialists, has announced the relocation of the firm's office to the Williamsburg Commons facility, 323 Clifton St. just off Arlington Boulevard.

The new telephone number for the office is 756-9932.

Excellence Award

Julia Claire Allen has been awarded the "Teller Excellence Award" for 1985, according to E. Rhone Sasser, president of United Carolina Bank.

Sasser said the award is presented annually to an employee who exhibits superior job performance in efficiency and cutomer relations.

Miss Allen works in the customer relations office of the bank in Raleigh. She is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and Meredith College, where she is pursuing a graduate business degree.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Allen Jr. of Greenville.

Du Pont Income

The Du Pont Co. has reported net income for fiscal year ended 1985 of $1,118,000,000.

Sales for the company, excluding crude oil and refined product exchanges, were $29,483,000,000, Du Pont reported.

Du Pont operates a synthetic fiber-producing plant in Kinston.

CP&L Figures

Carolina Power and Light Co. said net income for fiscal year ended 1985 was $331,446,000.

During the period, 853,000 customers were served by the company, an increase of 3.8 percent from 1984.

Income Down

Duke Power Co. has announced that net income for 1985 was $437,593,000, down from $461,331,000 reported in 1984.

Banks Targeted For Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators took coordinated action Friday to help banks that have been hard hit because of problems with agriculture and energy loans.

Regulators said the proposals are intended to help "basically sound, well-managed banks during a difficult but transitional period."

New guidelines to help financially pressed energy and farm banks over the hump were issued by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Board, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The action came as Congress adjourned for a week-long Easter break without passing legislation farm groups had sought to achieve the same regulatory changes in time for the spring farm lending season.

The changes, endorsed earlier in the week by the Senate Banking Committee, became bogged down as senators sought to load the legislation up with unrelated riders on other banking issues.

Worried about the delay that would result if action awaited Congress' April 8 return, 30 senators, led by William Armstrong, R-Colo., wrote the three banking agencies Thursday asking them to use their administrative authority to accomplish the same policy changes.

Comptroller Robert L. Clarke said the new guidelines include information on how the OCC "intends to implement capital forbearance for banks experiencing serious problems because of loans to agricultural and energy borrowers." Energy loans are concentrated in the Southwest, where approximately 370 of 1,490 national banks regulated by the OCC require special federal supervision.

FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney said letters were being sent to 8,500 banks spelling out details of relief measures and how banks can qualify to take advantage of them. While there are some 4,000 banks with heavy agricultural lending and 500 with large energy loan portfolios, only a small proportion will need to apply for the relief measures, Whitney said.

"Lending decisions are now being made for the 1986 growing season and agricultural lenders need the flexibility that the new regulatory climate would afford if they are to be able to avoid unnecessary foreclosures," the senators wrote in their letter encouraging the regulatory relief.

The American Farm Bureau Federation endorsed the action, saying credit relief for farmers struggling to arrange money for spring planting had become bogged down in election-year politics.

The nation's 4,000 agricultural banks, many of which are feeling the same financial pinch as their farm borrowers, have said they need regulatory allowances if they are to continue making farm loans and to work out restructuring plans with problem borrowers.

Hughes Left Company Operations To Others

By ROGER GILLOTT
AP Business Writer

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Spawned from an eccentric's fascination with flying, the Hughes Aircraft Co. went on to become the nation's largest defense electronics company.

But Howard Hughes had difficulty running the company, which today is vastly different and larger than anything the industrialist ever conceived of. It is the world's premier satellite builder, makes missiles and laser systems and was developer of the Surveyor lunar lander.

"Howard Hughes really didn't understand what was going on in defense electronics," said onetime Hughes scientist Simon Ramo. "He was like an 18-year-old kid, always off playing with that silly flying boat (the Spruce Goose)."

Hughes founded Hughes Aircraft in 1932, at age 27, as a division of Hughes Tool Co., his late father's oil-drilling equipment company and the source of Hughes' wealth.

The company, created to pursue his love of flying, produced such exotic craft as the wooden Spruce Goose transport designed to overcome wartime metal shortages, the experimental H-1 Racer and the XF-11 experimental photographic plane in which he had the most serious crash of his life, suffering critical chest injuries.

But after World War II, the company moved into defense electronics as the world's most powerful nations competed for supremacy in high-technology weaponry a d mastery of space.

For years it enjoyed a near-monopoly in the rich new field.

The company's dominance was a sore point with the Air Force, which was concerned that such a key industry had only one major supplier and that it was owned by an eccentric who was having trouble holding on to his best talent.

In 1953, leading scientists Ramo and Dean Woolridge resigned from their executive jobs at Hughes. They were the R and W in a new company, TRW.

The same year, Tex Thornton quit Hughes to form Litton Industries. He had been one of the Pentagon's whiz kids in the war.

"Hughes didn't talk to people," said one source close to the company, who agreed to speak only if not identified by name. "They couldn't get decisions out of him, so they left."

Hughes Aircraft's current management was kinder in response to an inquiry about the industrialist's legacy.

"Howard Hughes created a unique research and development activity after World War II, which attracted outstanding engineers and scientists to his fledgling electronics company," said Hughes Aircraft President Donald White.

"The creative outpour of those early years led to the formation of ... California's biggest industrial firm and the nation's largest defense electronics company."

The company today has about 80,000 workers, up from about 39,000 when Hughes died in 1976.

White said the industrialist's greatest legacy was formation of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute. Hughes transferred ownership of Hughes Aircraft to the institute in 1953 in a dispute with the Air Force.

Although Hughes remained sole director of the institute until his death, running of the company was left to professional managers. That is what the Air Force wanted.

As sole owner of Hughes Aircraft, the institute was rich. With last year's sale of the company to General Motors for $5 billion, the institute became one of the richest in the world.

It has said it expects to finance at least $1 billion in medical research over the next five years.

The institute, which last year moved to Bethesda, Md., from its traditional headquarters in Miami, Fla., focuses its research on three areas of bio-medicine: genetics, immunology and endocrinology. Besides the staff at its headquarters, it has employees at 11 teaching hospitals around the country.

Marcos Plans Bash

HONOLULU (AP) — Exiled Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife, Imelda, invited 500 or more people to an Easter party at their new home, their first social gathering since fleeing the lavish Malacanang Palace in Manila.

"It's too late to get ready," organizer Francisco Ugale said Friday. "So we are telling them (guests), 'If you are coming, you have to bring your own lunch.'"

The Marcoses moved into a rented $1.5 million house in the Niu Valley on Monday, after living in a guest cottage at Hickam Air Force Base since they arrived in Hawaii on Feb. 26. Opponents of Marcos staged protests outside the house.

Ugale, who heads the United Filipino Council of Hawaii, said the gathering would include many Marcos relatives and numerous officials of pro-Marcos Filipino groups in Hawaii.

"Some of the club members will bring Easter baskets for the first family, so it will be nice," said Ugale. "I don't know if we will be hiding eggs. There is a a lot of sand and bushes so it could be hard to find them."

Ugale said party organizers will be assisted by aides to the former president, who are living at the house with Marcos.

"They have a lot of experience in this stuff because of their experience in Malacanang Palace," said Ugale.

Hubert Bell, special agent-in-charge of the Secret Service Honolulu office, said security will be provided for the event as part of federal protection for Marcos.

"We'll have to do what we have to do to accommodate the people coming and going," said Bell. "There are going to be some problems, at the least traffic."

Protesters had not decided whether to stage a demonstration at the house Sunday, said attorney Eric Seitz.

"The thing tomorrow is very disturbing to many people, the fact that he is bringing in a bunch of people and holding what amounts to a political event," Seitz said.

Doll Thieves Nabbed

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — A 6-year-old girl whose dolls were snatched from her by two adults got them back unharmed, thanks to fast action by police and onlookers.

Angela Willingham, of Newark, was standing on Main Street clutching her Cabbage Patch Preemie dolls Friday when a car stopped and two people stepped out and grabbed the dolls. They then fled in another car.

With the help of bystanders, police arrested two people 20 minutes later and recovered the dolls, which retail for $30 each.

Geraldine Graves, 47, of Ogletown, and Charley Hubbard, 43, of Newark, were arrested and charged with theft of mislaid property, a misdemeanor. Following arraignment, they were released on their own recognizance.

Hope Plantation, One Of The Loveliest

HOPE PLANTATION . . . combines elements of an earlier Georgian period with Federal lines becoming fashionable at the time the house was built. The two porticos have Chippendale balustrades, and two sturdy chimneys each flank the east and west sides of the house. A spacious basement includes a kitchen well-stocked with typical early 19th century utensils.

INFORMALITY . . . makes the family dining room a favorite with visitors, as it must have been for the family. Sewing baskets, fireside food warmers; needlepoint stands, fine framed engravings and a mirror with eagle add to the sense of family living the room affords.

Admittance and Travel Information

- Hours at Hope Plantation are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays and from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays. It is closed on Mondays except for holidays that fall on Mondays, during January and February, and for Thanksgiving and Christmas, Dec. 24-26.
- Admission is $3 for adults and 75 cents for children. Admission to the King-Bazemore house after its April 11 opening will be $2. A combination ticket for both houses will be $4.
- To reach Hope Plantation from Greenville, take N.C. 11 north through Bethel and Oak City. Eleven miles north of Oak City, just before Lewiston-Woodville, turn right at the Episcopal Church onto N.C. 308 east. Travel past Drew crossroads and watch for the roadside sign for Hope. The return trip can be made by traveling to Windsor, taking U.S. 17 to Williamston, and U.S. 64 to Bethel. The distance by either route is about 50 miles.

For more information, write to: Historic Hope Foundation, Inc., P. O. Box 601, Windsor, N.C., 27983 or call 794-3140.

Acquired By Historic Hope Foundation in 1966, it has since been completely renovated and refurbished

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

It is the kind of place a romantically inclined person hopes to find, but seldom discovers in rural eastern North Carolina. Standing at the end of a half-mile lane from the highway, Hope Plantation House is imposing from the very first view. The tall two-story structure, painted yellow with white trim set off by dark green shutters, has a new lease on life after reaching a state of near deterioration until rescued by concerned preservationists in the mid-1960s.

Today it stands as a stately symbol of the past. Its history began during the 1720s through a land grant to the Hobson family from the Lord Proprietors of the Carolina Colony. In 1793 a 1,051 acre tract of land was given to David Stone by his father as a wedding present.

By 1803 the Georgian-Federal style house was completed. In 1799, Hope's resident, David Stone, was elected to the U.S. Senate. From 1808 to 1812 he served as North Carolina governor for two two-year terms and was returned to the U.S. Senate in 1812. Stone died at the age of 48 in 1818.

The house and its furnishings exemplify gracious living at a time when most landowners in eastern North Carolina lived in small, simply furnished homes. Today, only two original pieces of furniture from the Stone inventory of household items remain in the house — a drop leaf table and Governor Stone's library desk.

That circumstance, however, does not detract from the ambience of a plantation home in the early 19th century. Great care has been taken to insure that furnishings chosen are typical of pieces of the time. The house is rich in fine pieces and accessories, including china, silver, art work, and textiles. The library contains replacement volumes listed in detailed records kept by Stone.

A notable exception of something new is an oil painting of Hope by Greenville artist Francis Speight, whose home place is a short distance from the plantation house.

Not surprisingly, the kitchen with its outstanding array of rugged cooking utensils is a favorite with visitors. And the spacious grounds encircled by old trees and sprinklings of flower beds invites strolling. Two picnic tables allows visitors to bring along a picnic lunch.

Hostesses on duty display an obvious affection for their duty, and lovingly explain the history of Hope's beautiful antiques and reproductions.

A visit to Hope Plantation is one that will undoubtedly delight any visitor, young or old. Fortunately, it is no more than an hour's journey from Greenville.

Hope Plantation is Bertie County's star attraction. However, there are many rewarding sights in this rural county bordering Roanoke River — the little villages of Quitsna, Cahaba, Grabtown; fine period homes on Windsor's Main Street; unrestored old homes; Sans Souci ferry, and the hanging tree in the Indian Woods Community are typical.

Public Invitation

The board of Hope Foundation invites the public to the free official opening and dedication ceremony of the King-Bazemore House at the Hope Plantation site.

The event will be at 3 p.m. April 11. Mrs. Jim Martin, wife of the governor, will be guest of honor and will cut the ribbon at the dedication.

VIEWS . . . from one room to another within the Hope Plantation house offer charming vistas. The view here is from the formal dining room into the cozy family dining room.

History Of Restoration

Planning for the preservation and restoration of Hope Plantation goes back to 1965. "That's the year we launched a drive to establish Historic Hope Foundation, Inc.," said John E. Tyler of Roxobel, active in the project its beginning. Tyler is chairman of the board of trustees.

"We acquired the house and 18 acres of land in 1966. For the next six years our efforts were devoted to the renovation and refurnishing of Hope, and in October of 1972 it was opened to the public."

Tyler revealed that in addition to the 25-member foundation board, "we also have a 50-member Friends of Hope Committee. The governor's wife is the honorary chairman of this committee."

Through the years, plans have been formulated for an extended showplace at Hope Plantation. A small early 19th century Bertie County home, the Samuel Cox House, was moved to Hope from near Roxobel, was restored and now serves as the caretaker's house.

A second home, the 1793 King-Bazemore House, built by William King, has been moved five miles to its present Hope site, with restoration near completion.

Future plans call for selecting a suitable historic barn to move to the site. "It's difficult to locate a surviving barn from the early 19th century," Tyler said. "Many more old houses than outbuildings have survived. But we hope soon to find something suitable."

Tyler said assistance provided by many people has been instrumental in what has been achieved. Among these are Windsor residents John B. Gilliam, III, president of the foundation and Harry Lewis Thompson of Windsor, foundation vice president in charge of restoration. "Lewis has really put time and effort into acquiring and restoring the King-Bazemore House," Tyler said.

Hope Foundation, through admission fees and special fund-raising events, provides money for administration of Hope Plantation. Grants from North Carolina agencies have helped to restore and refurbish the buildings.

SEASONAL FLOWERS . . . add color to the sweep of Hope's big lawn. At this time of year, beds of daffodils are in flower. Trees old and young are part of the landscape of the sizeable yard, which also includes a convenient parking lot and a couple of public picnic tables.

Antique Roses Have A Special Charm

From COUNTRY HOME

Old garden roses have a special charm all their own. Nurtured by nature instead of commercial breeders, these surviving flowers of the past have delighted countless generations of gardenrs with robust fragrances, subtle colors and delicate flower forms.

According to Country Home magazine, many of the antique roses that bloom in present-day country gardens have roots in the ancient gardens of Rome and Greece, the grandiose castle gardens of medieval Europe, the renowned French gardens of the Empress Josephine, and the modest dooryard gardens of early American settlers.

These garden ancestors are living proof that the enduring qualities of the past still flourish today. No other flower in history has enjoyed such timeless admiration as the rose.

Gertrude Jekyll, a highly acclaimed 19th-century English writer and garden philosopher, lauded these old-fashioned blossoms in the gardens of her time when she wrote: "How seldom one sees these Roses except in cottage gardens; but what good taste it shows on the cottager's part, for what Rose is so perfect at home upon the modest wayside porch."

Roses have symbolized love and beauty since the ancient Greeks ordained them "Queen of Flowers." In Greek mythology, the first rose bloomed when the goddess Aphrodite appeared from the sea. The Romans linked the rose with the goddess Venus. Grown throughout the empire, roses represented wealth and status.

Roman settlers took their valued roses with them to leave their mark as they expanded their reign into Europe. Often called the Adam of the rose family, the gallica (or French rose) is believed to be the rose from which the old European roses descended.

From Rosa gallica came R. damascena (damask rose), valued by the ancient Romans for its strong fragrance; R. damascena semperflorens (autumn damask), the rose first known to bloom twice a year; and R. alba (the White Rose of York), famous for the part it played later in England's War of the Roses.

A renewed interest in rose development during the Renaissance produced many new rose classes, including the cabbage rose (R. centifolia), and its sport, the moss rose (R. centifolia muscosa).

Like the ancient Greeks and Romans, early Christians revered the rose and used it as a symbol of their beliefs. The white rose, set apart from other roses for its purity of color and form, stood for the Virgin Mary. Roman Catholics call the string of beads they use to count prayers the "Rosary" because the original beads were carved in the shape of roses.

For two 15th-century English families, the rose became symbol of thorny hatred. Called the War of the Roses, this 30-year feud involved the House of Lancaster and the House of York, each having a rose as its emblem. Battles were fought between the troops under the Red Rose of Lancaster (R. gallica officinalis) and the armies of the White Rose of York (R. alba). A bouquet of roses, given as a peace offering, ended the war.

From time immemorial roses have been the flower of romance. English folklore says that when a young girl wears a rose near her heart, the first man to pluck it will be her true love.

In the late 1700s, the China rose (R. chinensis) and tea rose (R. odorata) were imported to Europe from the Orient. European strains were crossed with these everblooming types to produce the hybrid chinas, bourbons and hybrid perpetuals.

In 1867, the first of the modern roses, the hybrid tea, was produced. Unlike the hardy old garden roses, these new hybrids were sensitive to cold climates.

During this same era, the French Empress Josephine, the wife of Napoleon, started her own rose renaissance. Between 1804 and 1814, this arden rose lover grew every known rose variety (an estimated 250 at that time) in her gardens at Malmaison. Souvenir de la Malmaison, a bourbon rose introduced in 1843, is a living tribute to Josephine's garden.

Old garden roses, brought from Europe to the first American settlements, helped remind early colonists of the cultivated gardens and civilized world they had left behind. Serving double duty, these lovely roses also produced extracts for medicinal purposes and petals for fragrant potpourris.

Candlelight Wedding Vows Performed Saturday Afternoon

Nealie Denise Harrell and Lawrence Carnell Burney were united in marriage Saturday at 4 p.m. in the Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist Church. The Rev. Kenneth R. Hammond officiated at the candlelight, double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Harrell and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peterson, all of Greenville, and the late Wilbert Burney.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Roger Ingram. Soloists were Angelene E. Peoples and Lindward Dudley.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and was escorted by her father. She wore a formal white gown fashioned with a fitted bodice of chantilly and Venise lace, sequins and pearls with a sweetheart neckline. Pearl trimmed chantilly lace formed the sleeves which were puffed at the shoulders. The full skirt was trimmed with ruffles and lace that extended into a chapel train. Lace and ruffles formed a back panel. She wore a fingertip veil trimmed with chantilly lace, pearls, Venise and chantilly lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of silk flowers accented with baby's breath and streamers.

Lena Cox-Walker, aunt of the bridegroom of Greenville, was matron of honor and wore a formal gown of light pastel blue taffeta designed with an open neckline featuring a double ruffle of taffeta outling the off-shoulder bodice and scooped back. The modified waistline was encircled with a contrasting cummerbund of white taffeta accented with a bow. A gathered peplum complemented the gown and the sheath skirt. She carried three silk flowers with baby's breath and matching streamers.

Valerie Burney, sister of the bridegroom of Greenville, was maid of honor and wore a formal gown styled like that of the matron of honor in a shade of petal pink with a contrasting cummberbund of white. She carried similar flowers.

Bridesmaids included Brenda H. Cannon of Ayden, Joyce M. Daniels and Lisa Staton, Elsie Edwards, cousin of the bride, all of Greenville, Carletta Williams, cousin of the bridegroom of Winterville. Their gowns were identical to that of the maid of honor. They carried a single silk flower with baby's breath and matching streamers.

Honorary attendants were Valley M. Cox, Camilla King and Deloris Williams, all aunts of the bridegroom of Winterville. They wore formal gown in coordinating colors of blue and pink and carried flowers identical to those of the bridesmaids. Each of the attendants wore baby's breath in their hair.

Flower girls included Devonna King and Leonda Nicole High, cousins of the bridegroom of Winterville. They wore eyelet street length dresses which were accented with pink ribbow and carried white wicker baskets with matching streamers.

Chetoca King, cousin of the bridegroom of Winterville, carried the bride's train. She wore a white eyelet sleeveless dress accented with a pink ribbon and bow.

James A. Burney, brother of the bridegroom of Greensboro, was best man. Ushers were Micheal Cox, uncle of the bridegroom of Maryland, Reggie Barrett of California, Ronnie Cox, cousin of the bridegroom of Winteville, Bernard Dixon, brother of the bridegroom of Greenville, Leon Cox and Sammy Tucker, both of Raleigh. Radrecra Williams, cousin of the bridegroom of Winterville, was ring bearer. Dontae King and Jermell Williams, cousins of the bridegroom of Winterville, were aisle attendants.

The mother of the bride, wore a formal gown of daphene rose and the bridegroom's mother selected a formal gown of light blue. Each was presented a long-stemmed red rose.

The wedding was directed by Helen Bridges and Barbara B. Williams.

A reception was held after the ceremony in the church dining area. Guests were greeted by Juanita Carmon, cousin of the bride, and Peggy Cox, aunt of the bridegroom both of Winterville. Patricia J. Worsley of Bethel presided at the guest register.

Gifts were received by Gladys Joyner. Mary H. Brown, Shirley Adams, Ellen Moore, Mary S. Wright and Lillie White were hostesses. Goodbyes were said by Catherine Barnhill and Shonita Harris.

A party followed the reception and was held at Mr. C's Lounge.

The couple will live in Sacramento, Calif., after a wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and Pitt Community College. The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and Hartnell College of Salines, California. He is employed by USAA Insurance Co.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom. Several showers and a breakfast were given for the couple.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Remember the kids who, 20 years ago, spoke only three words a year ... none of them to you? Well, they're singing like canaries now in a poll that asks, "What should your parents have done for you that they didn't?"

Parents, you are going to love some of their comments.

"My mother was too easy. She spoiled me and let me get away with things."

"They gave me too much. Everything I asked for was on a silver platter."

"They put up with too much of my bull. They were too patient."

"My Mother should have pursued a career."

"My Mom was too fussy about keeping the house clean."

"They both should have pushed me harder and taken more of an interest in my education."

Given the 20-20 vision of hindsight, indulge me while I give the parental point of view.

Why do we say yes when we should say no? I'll be honest with you, "no" is not our first language. It's the hardest line in the world to deliver. Usually after we say it, we grow fur over 90 percent of our body and for a week or so everyone acts like we have something communicable, so we say yes so we can hang out with the family.

As for being too patient, never confuse it with terminal stress. Sometimes after a kid has kicked the back of the driver's seat for 400 miles whining, "I'm hungry," you lose your will to live.

Basically, there are only two choices open to you: (a) do something that will entail incarceration and legal counsel for your actions; (b) cave in to the demand.

Pushing kids harder to make them achieve more is one I've heard from my own kids. These are the same kids who invented the term "Parent Brutality" for enrolling them in summer school. I gave up pressuring them the day one child said I was pushing him hard on his science fair project on the eveolution of the frog because I was living vicariously through his successes.

The "career" line I particularly liked as the day the first Mommy went to work outside the home marked the last day the toilet tissue spindle was ever used and the butter was refrigerated.

We should be tougher. No doubt about it, but tough love is hard to deliver. Do we give or hold back, say yes or no, indulge or deprive, stand firm or relent, be strict or easy? There are no manuals that come with kids ... no 911 number to call ... no computers programmed to spit out the answers. One day we get this preassembled package to care for for the next 20 years or so, and we stumble around and make a lot of mistakes.

So, Children Dearest, the burden is on you. Let's see what your kids will say 20 years from now.

Harris-Conner Vows Said In High Noon Ceremony Saturday

The wedding ceremony of Rhonda Kay Conner and Floydie Ray Harris took place Saturday at high noon. The double ring ceremony was performed by Ray Williamson in Gum Swamp Free Will Baptist Church.

Parents of the couple are Woodrow Wilson Conner Jr. and Sandra Kay Conner of Goldsboro, and Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Ray Harris of Route 6, Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her brother, Joe Conner. Her maid of honor was Tammy Kay Harris of Route 6, Greenville, sister of the bridegroom. Bridesmaids included Joy Evans of Bellwood, Pa., Carla Taylor and Rhonda Hall, both of Goldsboro.

Kim Jones of Sumpter, S.C., was flower girl. She is cousin of the bridegroom. Tri Myers of Dudley was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Bobby Ray Harris Jr. and James Roy Harris of Raleigh, brothers of the bridegroom, and Dan Andrews of Greenville.

Jasa Allen was pianist for the ceremony. Gene Lewis of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Tony Gray of Raleigh were vocalists.

The bride wore a formal gown of white silk chantilly lace, satin and Venise lace. The chantilly lace over satin bodice featured a high collar and sheer yoke outlined with Venise lace encrusted with pearls which continued over the bodice. A band of Venise lace closed the long fitted sleeves with a lace over satin puff top. The satin skirt and full train were highlighted with lace motifs. It was encircled with a flounce of silk chantilly lace and accented at the back waist with a satin bow and streamers. She wore a tiered scalloped and appliqued veil attached to a lace cap etched with pearls. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and miniature pink carnations.

The mother of the bride wore a rose satin gown styled with a scooped neckline. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of royal blue satagance styled with a sweetheart neckline. Each wore a wrist corsage of cymbidium orchids. Grandmothers of the couple were remembered with corsages of carnations and baby's breath. A red long-stemmed rose was given to each mother after the ceremony.

The attendants were dressed in candy satin gowns fashioned with dropped basque bodices, sweetheart necklines, puffed sleeves and satin bows with rosettes. The skirts were A-line. Each carried a silk bouquet of mixed flowers.

The flower girl wore a gown identical to the other attendants' and carried a basket of mixed silk flowers.

The wedding was directed by Ann French of Greenville, aunt of the bridegroomn.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall and was given by the parents of the bridegroom. Frances Sutton of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, served cake and Nita Burroughs of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, poured punch. Assisting were family and friends of the bridegroom. Greeting guests were Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Harrison, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. James Brown of Greenville, cousins of the bridegroom. Mary Harris of Raleigh, sister-in-law of the bridegroom registered guests.

The couple was entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner given by parents of the bridal couple assisted by family and friends. The couple was given several miscellaneous showers and a bridesmaids breakfast.

The couple will live in Goldsboro after a wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of Eastern Wayne High School and the bridegroom is a graduate of Greenville Christian Academy. Both are employed by Captain Bob's Seafood Restaurant in Goldsboro, owned and operated by parents of the bridegroom.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

Major appliances show significant energy-use reductions, compared to 1972 when appliance energy data was first collected by the industry. Energy use is down for:

- Clothes washers by 33.8 percent
- Dishwashers by 36 percent
- Freezers by 45.3 percent
- Refrigerators by 34 percent
- Room air conditioners by 18.5 percent.

Reduced energy consumption is an important factor to consumers who realize that purchase price is not the only cost associated with appliances, but that the gas or electricity used to operate the appliance is another major cost. Energy-efficient appliances use less energy, so the savings can be seen in utility bills — if energy prices and appliance use remain relatively steady. Higher utility bills may result from increases in the price of energy or more frequent use of the appliance.

Appliance energy-use data is determined according to the U.S. Department of Energy test procedures, which factor in "typical use." Consumer appliance use habits are much less precise; they vary widely from household to household and are the main reason why homes with identical appliances have different utility bills.

If your utility bills are higher than your neighbor's, here are some possible reasons why:

- The refrigerator and freezer doors are opened frequently and left open while deciding what to get.
- Laundry is allowed to continue tumbling in the dryer after it's dry.
- Warm water rinses are used in the clothes washer instead of cold rinses, and hot wash water is used when warm water will work just as well.
- The room's air conditioner's thermostat setting is adjusted a few degrees cooler.
- The oven door is opened frequently during baking and food is basted with the oven door open.
- The oven rack's position is changed after preheating.
- Both the clothes washer and dishwasher are operated with imcomplete loads.

A careless consumer with energy wasting habits can actually negate energy savings provided by a high efficiency appliance. Energy-saving measures, therefore, should begin at home — with each of us playing our part.

The Greenville Housing Authority, whose members are appointed by the Mayor, is established to plan, develop, and manage housing to benefit low and moderate-income families.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Another common color mistake is using stiff, formal colors in a child's room. Don't use, for example, celery green, in a child's room. Your children's rooms should reflect his or her personality. Most children like bright colors and respond better to bright colors. On the other hand you don't want to get a bedroom so active a child has difficulty sleeping, or if a child is hyperactive a bright red carpet or color scheme is just going to add to the problem.

Colorful borders at the ceiling, around windows, at the chair rail height and at the floor board can really brighten up any child's room inexpensively. Blue, rose and yellow are all easy to work with and believe it or not, we are seeing a big trend toward the yellows and greens once again.

Whether you need help with a single room or your entire home or business, Betsy Drake Interiors has the expertise, experience and resources to bring your ideas to life.

During the month of April we are celebrating our first anniversary and thank you for making our first year a huge success. Stop in frequently to take advantage of our anniversary specials and, as always, we will continue to offer the best quality merchandise available at the lowest prices in Eastern North Carolina.

FOCUS On... J.H. Rose High School

By GITA GULATI

Few scholarships are more prestigious than the John Motley Morehead Scholarship to the University of North Carolina, won this year by J.H. Rose student Nancy E.Johnson.

Miss Johnson, the daughter of Tom Johnson of Greenville and the late Nancy Adams Johnson, went through a series of interviews on the local, county, and district levels before being named as a finalist.

Her final interview for the scholarship was March 1-4 at the UNC campus. She, along with 124 other finalists from the United States and Canada, spent these four days attending luncheons and banquets with Morehead Foundation Trustees and UNC faculty, touring the campus, and watching a play presented by UNC students, several who were previous Morehead winners.

Miss Johnson also sat in on a political science class. The purpose of the week-end was to let the students, especially the ones from out of state, become more familiar with the campus and to interest them in attending the university, even if they did not win the Morehead. All the finalists received a Merit Tuition Scholarship.

During her interview with a committee which included UNC Chancellor Christopher Fordham III, Miss Johnson was asked a variety of questions ranging from politics and the world situation to her personal interest in poetry and literature.

Miss Johnson received word of her award March 6; 60 of the finalists were actually chosen for the scholarship. In addition to tuition, room and board, food, and spending money, the scholarship also provides Johnson the opportunity to paticipate in special summer programs every year. This summer she plans to attend Outward Bound in Maine where she will take part in sailing, rowing and rock climbing activities. This program is designed to build character and give the students confidence before they enter their freshman year.

At the university, Miss Johnson plans to major in political science and maybe eventually attend law school. She would like to become involved in politics, either as a candidate or as another politician's aide.

"I'm excited about going to UNC in the fall," Miss Johnson said, "and I know that being a Morehead scholar will open up many new opportunities for me in the future."

Greenville is beautiful in the Spring! But, the City needs your help in keeping it clean and beautiful. Please don't litter our roadways, streets, and parks!

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You have never had a letter like this one in your column. I hope you will print it.

My husband retired five years ago, and I still can't get him to slow down. When we ride in a car, he hollers at the person ahead of us because he didn't pull away from the stop sign fast enough. In the grocery check-out line, he grumbles because the lady ahead of him has to write a check.

He wolfs his food down. He's halfway through his meal before I even sit down. When we're walking together, he is always three steps ahead of me. He says I "poke" along. No, he doesn't have high blood pressure. It's way down. But mine is creeping up. We are both senior citizens, and I think it's time we both slowed down—especially him. What do you suggest?

THE MRS. IN ORLANDO

DEAR MRS.: I have the perfect piece for you. It was written by the Rev. Wilferd A. Peterson. I pray your man slows down long enough to read it. It may change (and possibly lengthen) his life:

Slow me down, Lord!
Ease the pounding of my heart
By the quieting of my mind.
Steady my harried pace
With a vision of the eternal reach of time.
Give me,
Amidst the confusions of my day,
The calmness of the everlasting hills.
Break the tensions of my nerves
With the soothing music of the singing streams
That live in my memory.
Help me know
The magical restoring power of sleep.
Teach me the art
Of taking minute vacations of slowing down to look at a flower;
to chat with an old friend or make a new one;
to pat a stray dog;
to watch a spider build a web,
to smile at a child;
or to read a few lines from a good book.
Remind me each day
That the race is not always to the swift;
That there is more to life than increasing its speed.
Let me look upward
Into the branches of the towering oak
And know that it grew slowly and well.
Slow me down, Lord,
And inspire me to send my roots deep
Into the soil of life's enduring values
That I may grow toward the stars
Of my greater destiny.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 21 and recently fell in love with a 30-year-old man. He has never been married. He asked me to move in with him, but he didn't have to ask me twice because I am very much in love with him. He tells everyone he will never fall in love, get married or have kids. But I want all three.

When I pressure him (in a joking way) about my wanting marriage and kids, he tells me I'm scaring him. In a way, I think he really loves me, but I don't know for sure how much.

Should I stay with him and hope he changes his mind about love, marriage and kids? Or should I look for another mate?

WANTS IT ALL IN PA.

DEAR WANTS: Keep looking. But move out first. While you're wanting it all, he's getting it all. Your problem is that you each want different things.

North Carolina Faces Competition For Monitor Museum Site

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina will win a museum for artifacts from the Civil War ironclad USS Monitor only by uniting against richer, more established museums to the north, officials say.

"We should look upon this as an opportunity to secure a valuable and prestigious distinction for the state; pool our academic, historic and financial resources and avoid eliminating each other from the competiton," said Rep. Walter B. Jones, Sr., D-N.C.

While most of the wreck still lies underwater off Cape Hatteras, some 120 artifacts have been recovered, said Jones staffer Dan Ashe.

He said the major North Carolina contenders for a Monitor museum are the Hatteras Village Civic Association, which wants to build a new museum on the Outer Banks only 16 miles from the undersea wreck of the Monitor; and the North Carolina Marine Resources Center in Manteo.

Also interested are the South Street Seaport Museum in New York, the American Swedish Maritime Museum in Philadelphia, the Mariners Museum on Newport News, Va., the Hampton Roads Naval Museum in Norfolk, Va., the Portsmouth (Va.) Marine Museum and the Smithsonian Institution.

"We've got some serious competition from other places in the country that have legitimate claims on this thing," said Mark Joyner, education specialist with the North Carolina Office of Marine Affairs. The ship was built in New York and it fought the Confederate ironclad Merrimac in Hampton Roads on March 9, 1862.

Joyner said the Manteo center was considering exhibiting the Monitor's still-submerged gun turret in a 85,000-gallon aquarium with fish and plants native to the area's waters.

"In effect it would be the same as transporting visitors to the bottom of the seafloor," he said. "It would be an innovative mix of cultural and natural history."

But Dale Burrus, president of the Hatteras Village Civic Association, said it makes more sense to put the museum near the wreck site.

"Our proposal is the closest land site to the shipwreck itself," he said. "You would be able to stand on the porch and see the site where it sank."

Burrus said the Hatteras site would be close to a ferry dock that handles more than 600,000 visitors a year and near the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, which handles about 1.2 million tourists a year.

"They're all looking for history," he said. "They've read a lot about the Outer Banks' history up in Virginia or Pennsylvania. Up there there's a museum on every corner, and they can't believe North Carolina wouldn't capitalize on that history."

The Hatteras site would also be right next to a deep-water port that could accommodate a research vessel for divers exploring the wreck, Burrus said. The Hatteras museum would also pay for itself through small admission fees, while a state-funded center would require tax money, he said.

The next step in the selection process is an April 24 meeting in Beaufort at which the Council of American Maritime Museums will present criteria for a Monitor museum. Then the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration will accept proposals, and a decision is expected next March.

Joyner said the Office of Marine Affairs would try to bring together the various North Carolina proposals and come up with a single unified proposal.

"We'd like to get all interested parties together and get a good, sound proposal Gov. (Jim) Martin can stand behind," he said.

MARCH LACERY — A covering of leaf buds in late March before the buds unfurl into leaves gives this old tree in Beaufort County a look of pastel green lace. Although many of the tree's huge branches have died and fallen to the ground and others will soon fall, life is renewed for another season in the good woold remaining in the tree. New Stamp Issues Revealed

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Walt Disney's animated characters are favorites even behind the Iron Curtain. And now the animated antics appear on new stamp issuances by the Socialist Republic of Romania.

Romania has released their first Disney character stamps in two special sets. One is a series of four plus a souvenir sheet honoring the 150th anniversary of Mark Twain's birth. The other is a series of five stamps dedicated to the 200th anniversary of the birth of the famous Grimm brothers, authors of "Grimm's Fairy Tales." The stamps were designed for the Romanian government by Walt Disney Productions in the United States.

The stamps honoring Twain feature scenes from the Disney film of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court." Such favorites as Goofy and his friends are shown in scenes from the production. All the stamps have the same denomination, 50-bani. The souvenir sheet is a 5-lei highlighting Goofy with Merlin the Magician, King Arthur and Lady Guinevere.

The second set commemorating the Grimm Brothers' anniversary depicts Donald Duck and his nephews in various scenes from "The Three Brothers." The values are each 1-leu, while the 5-lei souvenir sheet illustrates the three brothers of the story playing music.

The stamps are available at your local stamp dealer.

Ethiopia has made headlines recently with the plight of its starving families and the determined efforts of people all over the world to help alleviate this condition.

Ethiopia's latest set of stamps, however, focuses attention on its fight against polio, which also is a problem of epidemic proportions in that country. In 1962 a home for polio victims was first set up in the capital city of Addis Ababa and has since been relocated to a new site west of the city.

The four stamps in this series publicize the struggle against polio depicting treatments provided for the youngsters in this institution.

The 5-cent stamp shows a young boy with an artificial leg. The 10-cent has a picture of a boy walking with crutches. The 20-cent depicts a health care worker assisting a boy with a new leg. The 55-cent is an illustration of a young polio victim working on a sewing machine. The souvenir sheet features a nurse helping a mother take care of her newborn baby — an important preventive measure in the campaign against polio in Ethiopia.

The Netherlands has issued three new stamps honoring the city of Amsterdam. One of the adhesives pays tribute to the 100th anniversary of its Rijksmuseum (National Gallery) which houses a display of works by the great masters of art. The other two stamps in the set honor nautical education and sailing.

The British Crown Colony of Gibraltar has issued its 1986 "Europa" set dedicated to Nature and the Environment — the importance of keeping a balance between nature and the environment.

North Carolina Museum Of Art To Celebrate Anniversary

MADE ENDOWMENT . . . Robert F. Phifer, a Cabarrus County native, bequeathed his art collection and a sizeable monetary endowment to the North Carolina Art Society in 1926. The request remains an important means for enriching the collections of the North Carolina Museum of Art. (Photo N.C. Division of Archives and History)

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Museum of Art is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year with a series of special events, a major exhibition of Dutch 17th-century painting and the publication of a free brochure on the history of the institution.

The museum opened on April 6, 1956 in a renovated state Highway Division office building on Morgan Street in Raleigh, which remained its home until the opening of the new building in April 1983. The museum's founding was the result of historic legislative action in 1947, when the General Assembly appropriated $1 million for the purchase of works of art — thus becoming the first state legislature to inaugurate an art collection with public funds.

The North Carolina Art Society, which was instrumental in founding the museum and serves as its membership organization, will launch the museum's 30th anniversary festivities and celebrate its own 60th anniversary at the Beaux-Arts Ball on April 19. Tickets are $125 per person for members of the Art Society and $150 for non-members.

The public will be invited to celebrate the museum's 30th year at a free family festival on June 21. Organized around a French theme, in conjunction with the summer exhibition "French Paintings from the Chrysler Museum," the festival will include music, films, workshops for children and tours of the collections.

A free brochure, "North Carolina Museum of Art: A Brief History," will be available at the Information Desk beginning April 1; copies also will be mailed on request. A copy of the brochure may be obtained by writing to: The Communications Office, North Carolina Museum of Art, 2110 Blue Ridge Boulevard, Raleigh, N.C. 27607; or by phone, 833-1935, ext. 121.

The brochure traces the history of the museum from the formation in the mid-1920s of the North Carolina Art Society, a group of citizens dedicated to "securing for the State a Museum of Art" as well as promoting appreciation of art and encouraging artistic talent. In its early years, the Art Society sponsored loan exhibitions in a series of location. It also received a bequest of works of art from the collection of Robert F. Phifer, a Cabarrus County native living in New York, along with a sizable monetary endowment.

The culmination of the Art Society's efforts came in the 1940s under the leadership of the late Robert Lee Humber, a native of Greenville and international lawyer who returned to North Carolina after living in Paris for 17 years. Humber joined the Art Society's efforts to establish an art museum.

His search for financial support led him to Samuel H. Kress, millionaire owner of the S.H. Kress and Company variety stores, who agreed to contribute $1 million to help North Carolina found an art museum. Because he did not want to be approached by other states, however, Kress stipulated that his promise must remain verbal and his name anonymous. He also specified that the $1 million must be matched by a state appropriation.

Armed with Kress' promise, Humber approached the 1947 legislature with the appropriation bill. He lobbied intensively for its passage, explaining that the $1 million was requried to match the promised gift of an anonymous donor. The House of Representatives approved the bill 45-43 in the final hours of the 1947 session.

Although the matching state appropriation required by Kress had been approved, the Kress gift did not come to the museum until 1960. Difficulties in the negotiations arose when Kress died without having formalized his arrangements with Humber. The Kress estate agreed to honor the promise, but stipulated that the gift, rather than being monetary, would consist of works of art valued at $1 million or more. This decision ultimately resulted in North Carolina's receiving 71 works of art, primarily of the Italian Renaissance and baroque periods — the second largest collection given by the Samuel H. Kress Foundation to an American museum.

A State Art Commission was appointed by Gov. W. Kerr in 1950 to spend the $1 million appropriation on European and American works of art. The commission used the appropriation, along with $300,000 from the Phifer bequest to the Art Society, to purchase a total of 220 European and American paintings.

A 1953 appropriation by the General Assembly provided funds for the renovation of a state Highway Division office building on Morgan Street to serve as a temporary home for the new museum. The North Carolina Museum of Art opened on April 6, 1956 with Dr. W.R. Valentiner, an art historian, as its first director.

For more information about activities relating to the 30th anniversary, contact the museum at 833-1935.

Three Coastal Events

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has announced three events related to coastal waters to be held during the coming week. These are:

• Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday — Public hearings on proposed rules for managing the N. C. Estuarine Sanctuary. Hearings will be held respectively on the three days in Wilmington at the New Hanover County Administration Building; at the Marine Fisheries Building in Morehead City, and at the the Marine Resources Center/ Roanoke Island, Manteo. All hearings begin at 7 a.m.

• On Wednesday, the subject of developing public beach access areas is the topic of a workshop to be held in Pine Knoll Shores. The workshop will be from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the N.C. Marine Resources Center/ Bogue Banks.

• Wednesday and Thursdays are the dates for a coastal resources committee meeting to consider revised rules for marinas. The public meeting will begin at 9 a.m. in the Sheraton Hotel at Wrightsville Beach. Also, two committees will meet concurrently at 1:30 p.m.

A number of state and coastal officials will be at the three events. For full details, call 733-2293.

To Chair Fund Raising Drive For The N.C. Zoo

ASHEBORO — F. Ross Johnson, president and chief operating officer, R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., will chair the upcoming fund raising campaign for the North Carolina Zoological Park.

The zoo's society seeks to raise private funds for the $26.8 million North American region at the zoo near Asheboro. It will become the second 'continent' represented at the zoo. The park's first area, 'Africa,' was completed in 1984.

The 'North America' area will add eight new habitat clusters, an animal medical complex and an education center. Ground will be broken in 1986, with phased completions projected through Ocgober, 1991.

ART AND SPORTS

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — A total of 388 different postcards are scheduled to be issued for the Seoul Asian Games, Sept. 20-Oct. 5, 1986, and the 1988 Seoul Olympics.

The official postcards, produced by the Seoul International Fine Arts Center, under contract with the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee, will feature original art on the themes of the games by Korean as well as foreign artists.

GLASS SHOW

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Some of the 19th century's finest glass creations, originally displayed at 11 major world's fairs, will be on view at the Corning Museum of Glass April 19-Oct. 19.

Nearly 170 of the works will be brought together for the first time by the Corning Museum of Glass for its exhibition, "Glass From World's Fairs, 1851-1904."

The fairs, which began in London in 1851, attracted millions of visitors.

Little-Known Florida Caves

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

MARIANNA, Fla. (AP) — One of Florida's historic, although among its least known, natural attractions is Florida Caverns State Park.

Caves are common in the limestone that is beneath more than 90 percent of the Sunshine State. But few people have seen them because most are filled with water due to Florida's high water table. The many sinkholes around the state actually are water-filled caverns with caved-in roofs.

Florida Caverns, in the state's Panhandle region about 60 miles west of Tallahassee, is unusual because its caves are high and dry most of the time. Heavy rainfall sometimes causes flooding.

It is the only park in the state with caverns. Also unique are nine much-smaller man-made holes that make up the only golf course at a Florida state park.

"The Marianna caves are very pretty," said veteran caver Ed Nicholas of West Palm Beach. "They have formations akin to Carlsbad and Mammoth Cave."

Florida Caverns attracted 123,928 visitors last year, the most of any state park in the Panhandle but small compared to other attractions around the state.

"We have a lot of people who come in our front door and say: 'Are these caverns underground? Are there really caverns here?' " said Albert W. Smith Jr., the park manager.

Attendance fell several years ago when Interstate 10 bypassed Marianna but it increased last year when an informational sign was put up on the highway, said Pat Harrell of the Bureau of Park Operations in Tallahassee.

Forty-five-minute tours of the largest cave, known as the "tour cave," are given throughout the day.

The cave is a half-mile long and relatively shallow, as are all Florida caves, going only 65 feet down at its lowest point. It is lighted and contains a variety of colorful stalactites suspended from the ceiling, stalagmites thrusting up from the floor and curtain-like rocks covering the walls.

With one exception, touching is prohibited because oils from human skin would alter the natural process of dripping water that creates the formations, said guide Frank Strickland. To satisfy curiosity, however, tourists are allowed to touch the cool wet surface of one floor-to-ceiling pillar designated for that purpose.

The tour cave is one of 26 caverns discovered so far on park property. Some of the other caves are open to exploration by visitors and a couple times each month spelunking tours are given in less accessible eaves.

Cavers have given some of the caverns colorful names, including Walt's Misery for a large spelunker who got wedged in one of its narrow passages and Dragon's Tooth Cave. Frye's Bughole is infested with mosquitos and All-in Cave is barely big enough for one person to get all into it.

Some caves are off-limits to prevent people from disturbing bats and other unique animals. The denizens of these always-dark caverns include white, eyeless salamanders and crayfish.

Pottery shards, arrow heads and other artifacts have been found in Indian Cave. It is too dark and dank to live in. Smith said Indians probably used it for temporary shelter and to hide from enemies long before Spanish explorers discovered the caverns in 1693.

It is believed many Indians escaped the wrath of General Andrew Jackson in 1818 by hiding in the caves. Jackson used a natural bridge on park property to cross the Chipola River. During the Civil War, women, children and slaves took refuge in the caverns while a Confederate home guard unit battled Union soldiers near Marianna.

New Exhibit At The GMA

An exhibition, "Leggett & Brake — Recent Works," will be on view during April at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street. The exhibition will be housed in South Gallery II and North Gallery, and will remain up until April 25.

Two other shows currently on view are "Portraits and Places," the work of Arch Manning, in the Upstairs Gallery, which will close April 25, and "Art In Miniature" work from the permanent collection being shown in South Gallery I, which will close April 30.

The opening reception for the Leggett & Brake exhibition will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. April 6. It is free and open to the public.

For more details on any of the shows, call the museum at 758-1946.

Poetry Forum Meets Tuesday

The first of two meetings of the East Carolina University Poetry Forum for the month of April will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Room 248, Mendenhall Student Center on the ECU campus.

The forum, a long standing poetry event, is held twice monthly, on the first and third Tuesdays of each month during the school year. It is free and open to the public.

The forum is directed by Dr. Peter Makuck and is under the auspices of the ECU English department.

Those bringing poems to be read and critiqued are to bring 10 to 12 copies for distribuiton.

Three Exhibitions At Gray Gallery

A DRAWING ON PAPER BY ARTIST AL LOVING (Photograph by Dawoud Bey)

Three exhibitions — two in stationary art and one a video, are now gracing the gallery space at Gray Gallery in Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the East Carolina University.

Paul Oberst's drawings and sculptures, in black and white, black and cream — the largest drawing with soft tints of color, have the understated beauty of gray tree trunks and limbs in a forest. The sculptures, in particular, reflect a slightly squared interpretation of gently twisted segments of small trees or large vines.

These works are touched both with a mood of pastoral poetry and a controlled handling of color and form. They are ideal pieces on which to center an indoor garden of greenery, or as a focal point for furniture and accessories in bright colors to play against the pleasing black and white.

Al Loving's paper pieces and monoprints constitute an exciting barrage of color. Some pieces are of handmade paper. Others are made of mono-collage paper, corrugated cardboard, and the oversize "Self Portrait No. 9" is a ceiling to wall inverted-V drapery of snipped, sewn and colored cloth material.

In a majority of his pieces, Loving employs a pattern of semi-circles. Within some of the circles, shapes similar to leaves or shards of broken glass intersect the circles — a device that creates the impression these are map-like landscapes viewed from the air. In some of his work Loving has juxtoposed areas of many fragments of color against a rectangle of more basic color. As a group, these nearly two dozen paintings offer a spread of joyous color.

The third exhibition, Peter D'Agostino's energetic video installation, incorporates titles that give clues to his intention — Double, Double You, X, Y and Z, among others. The imagery in this work ranges from last stage pregnancy and birth to air views over San Francisco to children riding on a carousel.

His technique of stop and go action, insertion of indexes and sub-titles, gives the viewer time to pause, to attempt to fathom the messages he is attempting to convey.

Visually, the faces of young children, the close up shot of wooden horses ceaselessly and slowly making their circular rounds are impressive and totally captivating.

And D'Agostino strengthens the visual images with an enchanting background of carousel and other music that form a just right background note.

The three shows will be on view until April 12. Gallery hours are Mondays-Saturdays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., until 8 p.m. on Wednesdays. Admission is free.

JERRY RAYNOR

— Book News —

By DIANE TAYLOR

A growing concern facing families today is what to do with elderly relatives. "Caregiving: Helping an Aging Loved One," published by the American Association of Retired Persons, is a helpful guide for people tying to choose the best caregiving arrangement. Caring for the elderly will continue to grow in imnportance as the number of people over 65 continues to climb. Today, over 70 percent of the population will live to old age as compared to only 39 percent in 1900. The author explains that to further complicate the problem tjere are fewer people who can provide the necessary caregiving help. More women are working and are unable to stay home. Consequently, there are more people needing help and fewer people able to give it.

The author helps readers make their own decision concerning caregiving by breaking the decision down into several concerns, including: who should be the primary caregiven, what are the physical or mental disabilities of the person, where will the person live, who will pay the expenses, and importantly, what are the feelings of the elderly person involved.

If someone decides to be the primary caregive, there are several considerations to bear in mind including one's relationship to the person, one's present responsibilities and one's physical strength. The many different living arrangement alternatives are explored as are getting additional help and deciding legal and financial issues.

The second part of the book describes how to take care of an elderly person, including basis hygiene, exercise, emergencies, special diets and medications, dealing with physical and mental disabilities and recreation.

Finally, there is advice on how to cope with the responsibility and emotional demands for caring for an elderly loved one.

BB&T Pledges Funds For Manteo Arts Center

MANTEO — Branch Banking & Trust Company of Wilson has pledged $25,000 toward the construction of the Roanoke Island Center for the Arts. "This commitment clearly underscores the statewide and national significance of this project," said John P. Kennedy, Jr., chairman of the Roanoke Island Historical Association.

"We are pleased to assist the association and the arts center project," said L. Vincent Lowe, Jr., president and chief executive officer for the bank.

Once operational, the center will employ about 300 people, many on a year-round basis. The economic impact of the center is projected at $272,600,000 by 1993. Dare County, the home of 'The Lost Colony' and the site of the proposed center, is one of the fastest growing areas of the state.

"The Lost Colony" and productions at the new center will be performed in tandem once the center is opened.

The $4.7 million Roanoke Island Center for the Arts will be constructed on a site adjacent to the Waterside Theater. It will seat 640 in its main theater and 170 in its chamber theater. The center will present plays, concerts, dance performances and lectures and will be open to the public nine months of the year. It will serve as a resource for eastern North Carolina and southern Virginia school children.

The major purpose of the center will be to study and celebrate the Roanoke Voyages in terms of theater, dance, music and the visual arts.

Dare County residents have contributed more than $200,000 to date toward the project. Another $500,000 in matching funds has been allocated by the North Carolina General Assembly. A state and national steering committed has been assembled to lead the fund raising for the project.

A Review

An Armchair Travel Book

SEA TO SHINING SEA. By Berton Roueche. Dutton. 278 Pages. $18.95.

In "Sea to Shining Sea," Berton Roueche proves that one doesn't have to travel physically in order to travel, provided, of course, that the distant places written about are described by a superb writer.

Roueche is just such a writer.

In the 18 essays which appear in this book — most, by the way, first appeared in The New Yorker — Roueche takes his chairbound travelers on a fascinating train trip across the continent, on a barge trip down the Mississippi, and on a leisurely journey to Rome.

He also writes about a lot of other trips, since 13 of the pieces included here are about the American scene and five about European visits.

In "On the Terrace," Roueche tells in absorbing detail about a train trip he took from New York to Seattle. Aboard, he meets a woman who likens train travel to having a "house with a terrace and a view that keeps changing all the time."

Roueche embraces that conceit and rather than reading, as he intended, he spends much of his waking time at the window, watching the changing view. And change it does, as the train whips across America and its ever different face which Roueche describes with consummate skill.

"The River World" concerns another form of travel — barging down the Missouri and Mississipi from Kansas City to New Orleans. The only passenger on a huge tug pulling a long chain of barges, Roueche mingles with the crew, one of whom describes river life as being "like one of those drugs. There ain't no future and there ain't no past. There's nothing but the river."

Roueche agrees, and after reading his amiable piece, so does the reader.

Stonecutters Proud Of Work

By ADAM GELLER
AP Newsfeatures

ELLETTSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A few years back, workmen cut a huge slab of limestone from the earth and sawed, shaped and carved it into a sign welcoming motorists to town.

The sign, carved by workmen at the local Bybee Stone Co., can be seen by motorists driving along Indiana 46: "Welcome to Ellettsville, Builders of American History."

Bybee workers are striving to live up to the words of the motto. During the last year they have succeeded admirably because it is their workmanship that is rejuvenating the face of the U.S. Capitol in Washington.

A blueprint of the Capitol's west face stretches across the wall in general manager Dan Bybee's office. He points to parts of the drawing, explaining the different types of stonework involved in the project.

"It felt good, especially when we got the contract — we were elated," Bybee said. "Now the novelty has kind of worn off. It's not just another job, but it is another job that has to get done."

That same no-nonsense attitude is evident in the shed, where the stone is cut, ground and hammered. The shed, an aluminum building the length of two football fields and 200 feet wide, is filled with workers and lots of Indiana limestone in all sizes and shapes. The place buzzes with the sounds of huge circular saws and electronic hammers and stone lathes.

Some of the workers look ghostly, their faces and clothes coated with the grayish-white limestone dust. Everyone is moving, busy with the work on one of the various projects currently on the drawing boards.

The company's quarry in Ellettsville, Bybee said, lies in the middle of the "limestone belt," which extends 30 miles across southern Indiana. The quarries made famous in the movie "Breaking Away" yield some of the finest limestone anywhere, he says.

Although the Bybee family has a quarry on the company premises, the stone for the Capitol is being brought in by railroad from the Independence Quarry just south of Bloomington.

Once the uncut stone is in Ellettsville, Bybee employees go to work. Large blocks are cut according to written specifications, while detail work is done by eye, Bybee said.

On a walking tour through the company's drafting shop, he points out pieces of the Capitol that were removed and shipped to Ellettsville so workers could accurately reproduce them.

"They give us a good size detail and we'll copy what they want us to copy out of stone — no matter what it is," Bybee said.

When the Capitol was built, it was constructed of sandstone, but through the years this has not proven durable. Some of the detail pieces resting on the floor in the Bybee shop are chipped and crumbling.

On a recent afternoon, stone carver Lester Boruff eyed a plaster cast of a detail block from the Capitol. In one of his hands he gripped a caliper, a tonglike device used to measure the width of stone, his fingers and forearm covered with limestone dust.

"I never thought I'd see the day when I'd work on the national Capitol," Boruff shouted over the din of machinery. "That's something to be proud of."

Boruff, 60, started stoneworking in 1948, first as a cutter, a workman who cuts stones into blocks, and now as a carver who does the detail work so important on the Capitol. He is one of six carvers working on the Capitol and one of the 60 to 80 Bybee employees involved in the project.

"I know it's going on the national Capitol and I can tell my kids about it and they can tell their kids," said Henry Morris, another carving veteran who works alongside Boruff.

Morris doesn't have to go very far though. His son Henry Jr., 30, has been an apprentice carver at Bybee the past year.

The work that Boruff and Morris, the company's head carver, do is time-consuming and difficult. They start with a block of limestone and measure the original detail with calipers. Boruff marks pencil lines on the stone block and then begins carefully chipping away at the rock with a hydraulic air hammer.

"You got to be real careful," Morris said. "You can't make any mistakes because you can't replace the thing."

While Morris and Boruff work on the Capitol, other workers are cutting and carving stone for the Iowa State Capitol Building, one of the Smithsonian Museums, the Washington (D.C.) Cathedral and a pavilion in New York's Central Park.

And the way Dan Bybee tells it, there's enough limestone in southern Indiana to fuel workmanship for years to come.

"My kids will never seen the end of it," he said. "Nobody will ever see the end of it."

'Name Of The Rose' Film Site Constructed On Italian Hill

By GODFREY DEENY
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Filmmakers spent three years wandering through more than 300 European abbeys, searching for just the right look to evoke the sinister, mysterious atmosphere of the monastery in Umberto Eco's medieval whodunit, "The Name of the Rose."

When they didn't find what they wanted, they constructed a set on a hill north of Rome. It is the biggest movie set Europe has seen since 1963's epic "Cleopatra," starring Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton.

Eco's best-selling tale is a complicated story of multiple murder and intrigue in a 14th century Benedictine abbey.

The movie stars Sean Connery and F. Murray Abraham, who won an Academy Award for his portrayal of Antonio Salieiri in "Amadeus."

"Here the location and the time period are like a main character. That's why we built everything from scratch, and why it is so expensive," said West German producer Bernd Eichinger ("The Neverending Story"), as technicians prepared to set fire to the abbey so they could film the movie's climactic scene.

"You really can't find a place that has stayed the same for a thousand years," said Eichinger, who estimates the film's final cost at around $16 million. However, he refused to specify just how much the set had cost.

Built on a steep hill, the set is about 1½ times as large as a football field. The tower is about 38 yards high and looks even taller. "The slant helps exalt the buildings," said Dante Ferrari, the set's designer.

The film company rented the land where the set is built for several years. When filming ends, the set must be dismantled and the land returned to its original state.

During one recent day of filming, French director Jean-Jacques Annaud positioned a pack of tonsured monks (those belonging to an order that requires then to shave a portion of the head), supervised the laying of fake snow and quietly instructed Murray Abraham before beginning a complicated five-camera take.

It was the scene in which an enormous fire breaks out and completely destroys the abbey. The fire starts in the stables and then in the library. Monks run from their rooms and throw water on the fire in attempts to put it out.

However, the stable went on fire too late and some of the actors arrived at their marks too soon. Annaud, who dealt with flames in "Quest for Fire," merely smiled. Despite the mistakes, some of the footage would still be used.

He called a dinner break just as rain began to fall on the set.

Annaud said he organized auditions in every major Italian city to find the right "angular and medieval" faces for the extras in the film.

"Did you see that scene we shot this afternoon? It was enormous, five cameras. How do you expect to get it done on time? But they are doing it," said an impressed Abraham, who plays the part of Bernard Gui, the Inquisitor.

"This is the last villain I play. It's time to do a comedy."

The Inquisitor clashes with his old rival, William of Baskerville, the savvy Franciscan played by Connery who is certain that the key to solving a string of murders lies within the scriptorium, a huge library of rare books.

Clearly modeled on the fictional sleuth Sherlock Holmes, one of whose best known escapades is "The Hound of the Baskervilles," William patiently pieces together the evidence until he unravels the mystery in the final scene.

Sixteen-year-old Christian Slater ("The Legend of Billie Jean") plays Adso, William's novice. However, the New York actor doesn't see his character as a Dr. Watson.

"I do say a couple of bumbling lines and hang out in the background while master does all the talking, but actually I'm a lot different than Watson. I'm skinny and young," Slater said.

The role of the Venerable Jorge de Burgos, the austere Spaniard who regards laughter as unholy, is played by 80-year-old Russian-born Feodor Chaliapin.

PIANIST ANNA WHITE HAUN

Anna White Haun Recital Saturday

Dr. Anna White Haun will present a guest piano recital at 8:15 p.m. Saturday in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. The recital is free and open to the public.

Mrs. Haun is giving the recital in memory of her mother, Mrs. Nancy Lay White. Mrs. White and her husband, Charles White, were enthusiastic supporters of the arts in Greenville.

Anna Haun is currently an assistant professor of piano and head of the graduate piano pedagogy program at Georgia State University. She received degrees from the University of Illinois and the University of North Colorado, where she completed the doctor of arts degree in piano performance.

She has been guest clinician and guest artist at piano pedagogy workshops throughout the United States. In 1982 she was a member of the faculty of the University of Illinois Summer Youth Music program. She has performed in solo, chamber, concerto and duo-piano concerts in both the U.S. and in Micronesia, and has given concert tours sponsored by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and Inspiration Point Fine Arts Colony in Arkansas.

Additionally, she performed at the 1983 Festival of the American Liszt Society and in 1984 at the Breckenridge Colorado Music Festival. During the summer of 1985, Mrs. Haun was sponsored by the Queensland Music Teachers' Association giving concerts and workshops throughout Australia.

Her guest program at ECU is scheduled to include a composition each by Mozart and Debussy and four pieces by Chopin.

'Der Rosenkavalier' To Air On Saturday

NEW BERN — Richard Strauss' opera, 'Der Rosenkavalier" will be broadcast live from the Metropolitan Opera beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday. Locally, it will be heard over WTEB radio New Bern, and WRRF radio, Washington, N. C.

Cast members are Tatiana Troyanos in the title role of Octavian, bearer of the rose, with Gwyneth Jones as the Marschallin. Kathleen Battle will sing the role of Sophie, Dano Rafanti is the Italian Singer, and Gkuenther Reich will make his Met broadcast as Faninal. Aage Haulgland will sing the role of Baron Ochs. James Levine will conduct.

Second Showing

WINSTON—SALEM — Because of the sell out of "Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope" production presented by the North Carolina Black Repertory Company recently, the musical has been scheduled for additional performances.

These will be presented April 11-13 at the Arts Council Theater, 610 Coliseum Drive at 8 p.m. with a 3 p.m. matinee April 13.

For ticket prices and other details, call 723-7907.

Renaissance Music Workshop Set At ECU

A one-day workshop in instrumental music of the Renaissance period will be held on the campus of East Carolina University on Saturday.

Classes for viola da gamba and recorder at all levels will be offered.

For more information, call 756-1018 or 757-2701.

Trio To Present Concert April 6

A guest artist, a faculty member and a graduate student of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will be heard in a concert to be presented at 3:15 p.m. April 6. The concert, free and open to the public, will be presented in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

The performers are: guest artist Aral Dev K. Khalsa, flute; Kerry Carlin, ECU faculty member, piano, and Gretchen Gettes, student, cello.

For their program, the trio has chosen Haydn's "Trio No. 3 in G Major for Flute, Cello and Piano" in three movements; C. M. von Weber's "Trio in G minor for Flute, Cello and Piano" in four movements, and following an intermission, George Crumb's "Vox Balaenae (Voice of the Whale.)"

The program offers a rare opportunity to hear a performance of "Vox Balaenae," written in 1972 by Crumb. This piece includes theatrics, amplified instruments and unusual performing techniques. It was inspired by the singing of the humpback whale and is meant to represent the powerful impersonal forces of nature.

Guest performer Khalsa is currently the visiting artist at Martin Community College, Williamston. She received a B.M. degree with highest honors from the New England Conservatory of Music, and the M.M. degree with honors and the artist's diploma. She has studied in Paris as the recipient of several grants and was a solo performer with the Boston Pops. She has taught at the University of Rhode Island and Williams College.

Faculty pianist Carlin is studying for a doctorate. She earned the M.M. degree from Indiana University, the B.M. degree from the Cleveland Institute of Music, and a certificate in piano pedagogy from the New School of Music Study. She is a member of the executive board of the N.C. Music Educators Association and has given recitals in Europe and the U.S.

Graduate student Gettes received the A.B. degree from Duke University in 1985 where she was winner of the Duke Symphony Orchestra Concerto Compeitition. In 1978 she was a member of the Suzuki International Children's Concert Tour Group.

Alumni Benefit Concert Scheduled

Three outstanding graduates of the East Carolina University School of Music have been selected to perform in the First Annual Alumni Benefit Concert to be presented here April 19.

The performers are all former students who became well known to Greenville residents for their participation in the musical life of the community and the university during their years at ECU. The three are Donna Stephenson, mezzo-soprano; Mary Jo White, flute, and Kathleen Rountree, piano.

The event has been planned by the School of Music's Alumni Professional Society as a benefit concert with proceeds to be used for scholarships for talented ECU music students.

According to the society's president, Mrs. Candace Dixon, "this benefit concert represents the first time in the history of the ECU School of Music that such an event has been undertaken. It is my sincere hope that the event will become an annual festivity."

The concert will be held in the A. J. Fletcher Recital on campus. It will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be followed by a reception.

Tickets, priced at $5 for the public, may be purchased at the school of music office.

Gokcen, Tardif Recital

East Carolina University School of Music faculty members Selma Gokcen, cello and Paul Tardif, piano, will be in recital at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

The recital is free and open to the public.

For their program they have chosen works by Hindemith, Bach, Schumann and Brahms.

The program will open with Hindemith's "Two Pieces, opus 8," — Phantasiestuck and Capriccio; to be followed by J.S. Bach's "Suite in C minor for Violoncello Solo" in six movements, and Schumann's "Adagio and Allegro, opus 70."

After an intermission, they will perform the major work of the evening, Brahms' "Sonata in F Major, opus 99" in four movements.

Cellist Gokcen has won several national competitions, including the Bryan Awards of the North Carolina Symphony, the Ima Hogg Young Artist Auditions of the Houston Symphony, the Chicago Civic Orchestra Competition and others. She holds a first prize from the Geneva Conservatory of Music in Switzerland, and is presently a candiate for the doctor of musical arts degree from the Juillard School of Music.

Additinally, she toured South America under the auspices of the U.S. State Department and has taken part in festivals in San Francisco, in Oregon and in Siena, Italy.

Pianist Tardif, for several years on the ECU School of Music faculty, earned his doctorate at Peabody Conservatory, the artist's diploma at the Mozarteum, Salzburg, Austria, and holds other degrees from the Eastman School of Music.

Among prizes he has received are those at the Alfredo Casella Competition in Naples, Italy and the National Piano Guild. He was a recipient of a Fulbright Grant to Munich and Salzburg and has played in chamber music and solo recitals in Washington, D.C., at the Spoleto Festival and with several orchestras.

Tracy Cain Senior Recital

Tracy Cain of Greenville, a senior in the School of Music, East Carolina University and a student of George Broussard, will give his senior recital in bass trombone at 7 p.m. Friday in the Recital Hall of the A.J. Fletcher Building on campus.

The recital is free and open to the public.

Cain will be accompanied by Frances Cain.

For his program, he has chosen two Gordon Jacob cameos, "V.I.P." and "Nostalgic Dancer;" Richard Lieb's "Concertino Basso," and Patrick McCarty's "Sonata for Bass Trombone and Piano."

INSTEAD Concert Wednesday

Faculty members and music students of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will join talents in presenting an INSTEAD concert at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Alban Berg, Anton Weber, Arnold Schoenberg, Benjamin Britten and Richard Lavenda are the composers represented on this program by INSTEAD, a contemporary ensemble at ECU.

Donna Coleman is the coordinator of the concert.

Mezzo-soprano Donna Dease and mezzo-pianist Donna Coleman are the performers for one of the Berg pieces, "Vier Gesange, opus 2."

The second Berg composition, "Vier Stucke fur Klarinette und Klavier, opus 5" will be performed by two students, Louis Bean, clarinet and Dennis Daniel, piano.

Webern's "Drei Kleine Stucke, opus 11" will be performed by student musicians Lewis Davis, cello and Beth Congleton, piano.

Student pianist Beth Congleton will play one movement from Schonberg's "Drei Klavierstucke, opus 11."

Benjamin Britten's "Six Metamorphoses after Ovid, opus 40," consists of four musical characters — Pan, Niobe, Bacchus and Arethusa. Student Jeff Johnson, oboe, is the performer.

The final composition listed for the concert is Richard Lavenda's 1981 piece, "Maribumulations" in three sections. Performers are Gordon Nunn and Kim Summers, both marimba players.

Berg, Webern, Schoenberg and Britten are all well-known compoers of the 20th century. Richard Lavenda, an assistant professor in composition/theory at Texas Wesleyan College, Fort Worth, is a young composer, born in 1955.

Adult Parole/Probation: Court's 'Invisible Bars'

Probation and parole serve as the court's "invisible bars," according to Robert Guy, adult parole/probation assistant branch manager.

Persons on parole or probation are placed under the care of a parole/probation officer who monitors their activities and ensures that they comply with the conditions set down for them by the court.

An officer must help his client to find a job (it is mandatory for parolees and probationers to either work or attend school) and see that the client's attendance and performance is satisfactory.

"Our main objectives are to protect society and to assist the probationer and parolee in resuming a place in our free society as law-abiding citizens," said Guy.

According to officer Donna LaMotte, this is not an easy task to perform. She said an officer must be a jack-of-all-trades. "We are employment agents, psychologists, alcohol and drug counselors, financial advisers, social workers, taxi service, professional witnesses in court — all this rolled into one."

Several of the officers said that the mountain of paperwork in their job is a problem. "I'd like to get out in the field more than I do — spend more time helping my clients find employment and even teach them things like how to write a resume," said officer Rick Streeter.

One of Streeter's probationers, McKinley Perkins, has been employed for more than a year as a bicycle repairman. Bobby Sutton, Perkins' employer, is pleased with his job performance, saying that Perkins is "the best bike repairman I've had in years."

Another problem faced by parole/probation officers is the shortage of officers in Pitt County. Eleven officers handle 1,150 clients, with each officer having an average caseload of more than 100 at any given time. This figure is attributable to the rapid population growth of the county.

"In North Carolina there are 58,000 persons on parole or probation," said Guy. "Some say that's too many, but on the other side of the coin are overcrowded prisons. You've got to have alternatives. Sending every offender to prison is not the answer."

It costs $32 per day to house a person in a prison unit and $1.25 per day to keep him or her on supervised probation, according to Guy. "I'm not saying this is a reason to keep criminals out of prison," he said. "But on probation, they repay the community by paying taxes rather than being a taxpayer's burden.

"Few people realize how valuable parole/probation officers are to this county's fiscal operation," Guy said. "In 1985 alone, the Pitt County office collected $50,104 in restitution for victims of crimes, $58,889 in fines, which goes to the county board of education, and $26,698 in costs of court."

"If we can get jobs for clients and keep them working, they usually stay out of trouble and do better," said Bonnie Evans, a parole/probation officer for eight years. "It's like having a bunch of kids sometimes, and believe me — there's never a dull moment — always a crisis."

Probation officers have a stressful job, she said. "We are the last-ditch attempt at improving these people's lives, and their families'. If we can't help them, chances are nobody can," Ms. Evans said.

Guy said the officers have morale problems because they only get recognition when one of their clients commits another offense. "The public never hears about the many success stories," he said, "and there are many."

He said the Pitt County office is proud of its 80 percent success rate, and that the problem is "the 15-20 percent of our clients who return to prison are the most visible. People say, 'Probation must not be working,' but that's not true..Our high success rate is proof."

McKINLEY PERKINS is on probation and has been employed for more than a year as a bicycle repairman.

N.C.'s General Bragg: A Failure In All Endeavors

Text by Roy Morris Jr.
Chattanooga Convention and Visitors Bureau

CHATTANOOGA, TENN. — He won perhaps the most complete victory of the Civil War. But today Confederate General Braxton Bragg is remembered, not for victory, but for defeat — a defeat which in many ways sealed the fate of the Confederacy.

Few Civil War generals were more disliked by their own men than Braxton Bragg. A rigid disciplinarian, Bragg had little time or inclination for personal pleasantries, either with his foot soldiers or his staff officers. They, in turn, despised Bragg, even as they were fighting like demons to win battles for him.

Conversely, few generals were better prepared — on paper — to lead armies than Bragg. A career soldier in the U.S. Army, the dour North Carolinian had graduated fifth in a class of fifty at the Military Academy at West Point. After seven years of service in the Seminole War in Florida, Bragg was promoted three times for bravery in the Mexican War, where he caught the eye of future Confederate President Jefferson Davis.

But even then, Bragg's battlefield bravery was being overshadowed by his punctilious devotion to regulations. Once, while serving as post quartermaster, Bragg was temporarily named acting commander. In his new role, he submitted a requisition for supplies which he felt constrained as quartermaster from obeying. When the permanent post commander returned, Bragg dutifully showed copies of his requisition and refusal. "My God, Mr. Bragg," the commander laughed, "you have quarrelled with every officer in the army, and now you are quarrelling with yourself."

In a more serious incident, an unknown enemy attempted to assassinate Bragg by exploding a large artillery shell outside his tent. Bragg escaped serious injury, remarking only that "I was not aware that I had an enemy in the world."

Resigning from the peacetime army in 1856, Bragg became a sugar planter and engineer in Louisiana. With the coming of the Civil War, however, he hastened to offer his services to the Southern cause.

With his friend Jefferson Davis in charge of the government, Bragg quickly advanced to high military rank. When General Albert Sidney Johnston was killed at the Battle of Shiloh in April 1862, Bragg replaced him as commander of the Army of Tennessee, the largest Confederate army on the western front.

As army commander, Bragg exhibited all his characteristic strengths and weaknesses. A skilled strategist, his invasion of Kentucky in the summer of 1862 showed every possibility of success. But Bragg's lack of confidence in his fighting men caused him to break off the decisive Battle of Perryville just when it seemed likely he would win a great triumph.

At the Battle of Stones River, Tennessee, late in the same year, Bragg again developed an excellent strategy and seemed on the verge of victory when, abruptly, he withdrew from the field. His subordinate generals openly called on him to resign, but Bragg, supported by Davis, declined their advice.

In the wake of the Confederate defeat at Stones River, Union Major General William Rosecrans began a masterful campaign to drive Bragg's army from Middle Tennessee and seize control of Chattanooga, the South's most important railroad center.

Outmaneuvered by Rosecrans, Bragg continually fell back, ultimately abandoning Chattanooga without a fight. But now, with an overconfident Rosecrans pressing forward, Bragg devised an audacious plan to divide and conquer the Union army in the deep woods and thickets of northwest Georgia.

When Rosecrans obligingly divided his army into three widely separated corps, it appeared that Bragg's ambitious strategy might succeed. But delays by his subordinates frustrated Bragg's intentions. When at the last two armies came together near Chickamauga Creek, ten miles south of Chattanooga, Rosecrans had been given just enough time to reunite his army.

The subsequent two-day Battle of Chickamauga proved to be the bloodiest two days of the Civil War. Thirty-four thousand Union and Confederate soldiers were killed or wounded in the savage fighting, with victory ultimately turning on Rosecrans' mistaken shifting of troops along his front, creating a gap where none had existed and allowing Lieutenant General James Longstreet's onrushing Confederates to drive half the Union army from the field.

But even in victory, Bragg was frustrated. Union Major General George Thomas' stand at Snodgrass Hill had allowed Rosecrans and the remainder of the army to retire unmolested into Chattanooga. Bragg, ignoring the advice of virtually every high-ranking officer to continue the battle in Chattanooga, decided instead to invest the city from the surrounding heights. For two months the Union and Confederate armies faced each other at Chattanooga. Bragg, from his headquarters on Missionary Ridge, confidently waited for the Union army to starve.

Instead, with Major General Ulysses S. Grant as its new commander, the Federal army managed to resupply and reinforce itself, while Bragg foolishly sent 15,000 of his own troops north to Knoxville to attempt to recapture the East Tennessee city.

Frustrated by the loss of initiative after Chickamauga, Bragg's generals renewed their call for his resignation. A letter was even sent to Jefferson Davis demanding Bragg's removal from command. A battlefield visit to the front by Davis did little to help the sorry state of affairs. Confirming Bragg's leadership, Davis left his longtime friend in command. Bragg, in turn, got rid of several Confederate generals who had openly opposed him. Morale, already low in the weeks since Chickamauga, sank even lower.

Finally, in November 1863, Union forces resumed the offensive. With the enemy attacking from three sides, Confederate troops on Missionary Ridge broke and ran. Bragg, riding among the panicked soldiers, shouted, "Here is your commander." He was met by the old army catchphrase, "Here's your mule."

The loss of Chattanooga so soon after the great Confederate victory at Chickamauga was a blow the South could not withstand. The way was now open for the Union advance on Atlanta and Major General William T. Sherman's "March to the Sea."

Thoroughly discredited, Bragg surrendered command of the army and rejoined Davis in Richmond for the remainder of the war. Afterwards, he moved from job to job and town to town, never managing to make a successful living. In 1876, in Galveston, Texas, Bragg suddenly collapsed and died on the street.

Today, Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park, the nation's oldest and largest military park, preserves the battle sites where Braxton Bragg first won, and then lost, two of the most important battles of the Civil War.

Yesterday's Crytoquip: SAID HEAD CASHIER TO CONCERNED TRAINEE: "AVOID A VOID."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: N equals F

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—We missed a grand slam on a hand where I held: ♠QJ109652 ♡AK ◇AKQ6

Partner did not hold much besides the ace-king of spades, but I didn't need any more. How should I have gone about finding out if he had what I needed?—J.N., Portland, Ore.

A.—In the good old days, you would have no problem. You would have opened the bidding with five spades. That would have asked partner to raise your suit one level for each of the following cards that he held: the ace or king of your suit. Thus, partner would pass if he held neither of the missing honors; bid six spades if he held one; and seven spades if he held both.

No one seems to play that any more. Today, you would have to open the bidding with a demand bid (either two clubs or two spades, depending on the methods you employ), and then try to force partner to take a spade preference. Once he has done that, you can bid five spades. Partner should realize that you are looking for high cards in the trump suit and nothing else.

Q.—I don't see why you should score exactly the same for, say, four spades making five as for five spades making five. In the latter case, you have ventured further and should be rewarded for your pinpoint bidding accuracy. What's your opinion?—E.K., New Rochelle, N.Y.

A.—There is no end to that argument. You could claim that you should score more for three hearts making three than for bidding only two hearts and scoring an overtrick.

The scoring of contract bridge is still pretty much the same as was devised by Harold S. Vanderbilt in 1925 when he originated the game. Over the years, there have been many attempts to alter either the game or the scoring. Among the most significant of these was to make the first odd-trick at no trump worth only 30 points, instead of 40; to change the value of the minor suits; to play with six suits instead of four.

None of these changes lasted very long, and the game has prospered as devised by Vanderbilt. And when you come to think of it, that is perhaps the finest tribute that can be paid to both the game and its inventor.

Congressman's Aid Opposition Rooted In Vietnam Experiences

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When he was a 23-year-old staff sergeant in Vietnam with the Army's Americal Division, Tom Ridge says, "My company commander gave me two or three Americans and a company of Vietnamese and gave me my little outpost and I was pretty much on my own."

Now Ridge is 40, the only member of Congress to have seen combat in Vietnam as an enlisted man, and pretty much on his own as a Republican who opposes President Reagan's policy in Central America.

He thinks the president is wrong on Nicaragua and he acknowledges his experiences in Vietnam probably have shaped his views.

"I can't help but think that that has affected how I look at the issue. It has to," Ridge said.

Reagan, Vice President George Bush, Secretary of State George Shultz and Phillip Habib, the president's special envoy to Central America, each tried to change his mind.

In turn, he lobbied them.

"I obviously didn't convince any of them," Ridge said. "I didn't think I could."

Ridge was one of only 16 House Republicans on March 20 who voted against the president's request for $100 million to aid rebels fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua.

When Republican strategists dream of the GOP becoming a majority party, they conjur visions of someone very much like Tom Ridge.

On paper, Pennsylvania's northwest corner tha Ridge represents should be in Democratic hands. It is a district with ethnic, blue-collar neighborhoods and heavy manufacturing in Erie and steel mills around Sharon. In between are rural and suburban areas, a mixture of dairy farmers, white-collar workers moving away from the urban areas and retirees.

He is Harvard-educated, but has working-class roots. He is of Slovak and Irish background and Catholic. In 1982, when Democrats were making inroads on Republicans, Ridge defeated his Democratic opponents and was elected to his first term by 729 votes out of more than 159,000 cast.

He supported Bush against Reagan in the 1980 presidential primary, but now he calls Reagan "the most effective spokesman America's had in a long time."

His prime concern with Reagan's policy on Nicaragua is that while the administration talks of seeking a diplomatic solution to the problems in Central America, it puts too much emphasis on military action and not enough on convincing the Sandinista government in Nicaragua that the United States is serious about bargaining.

"Can you imagine Lee Iacocca calling United Auto Workers in and saying, 'Listen. Wages are going to be be $15.25 an hour, you're going to have three weeks vacation and 15 days sick leave. When you agree to those three things, we'll negotiate the rest of the package,' Ridge said.

"It may be a crude analogy, but I think if you're interested in negotiating you get the people to the table first," Ridge said. "We all know what the agenda is. We all know what needs to be discussed."

Ridge says Shultz, in lobbying him, reiterated his personal efforts to get the Sandinistas to the table, saying, "You know, Tom, we've tried. I've tried."

"My concerns were, frankly, the preconditions to negotiation" the administration has insisted on, Ridge said.

"My concern had been the absence of any real bold initiatives undertaken by the administration since Shultz's last visit to Managua," which was June 1, 1984.

He told Reagan, "Why don't you let it be known that there are no preconditions to our negotiating? See what the response is. We've got nothing to lose. We seek to be the peacemaker. We harbor no illusions about the Sandinistas."

He also told the president he was concerned about the discipline and the leadership of the U.S.-backed Contras and about the need for a consenus in the region, in this country and internationally for American action.

He says he stresses diplomacy because he has seen the alternative.

In congressional debate, Ridge hears his colleagues say, "Look. Let's use Nicaraguans now and avoid using Americans later."

"The parents of the deceased Contra, they both feel the pain and the grief as much as we would," Ridge said.

"There's nothing humane about war," he says. There must be a recognition "that somebody's going to suffer, somebody's going to die.

"For my conscience to be clear, at least we had to give the Nicaraguans, the Sandinistas, a chance to talk without preconditions."

Doctor's Guide Readied

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland will become the first state with a publication to help consumers choose doctors when a guide is published this summer listing physicians' fees.

The guide is being prepared by the Consumer Protection Division of the state attorney general's office and the Johns Hopkins University School of Public Health.

"We're expecting a far greater demand for this guide than for any publication we've ever had," Steven J. Cole, chief of the Consumer Protection Division, said Wednesday. "The message that could come out is, surprise of surprises, the consumer really can save money on health care."

The guide will list the names of doctors and their charges for office visits, tests and surgical procedures. The information was obtained from federal Medicare records for about 13,000 Maryland doctors and health professionals.

The information in the guide is from 1983, the most recent year for which complete data is available.

The guide will consist of a pamphlet containing general advice on how to shop for health care, and a series of fee charts organized by city or county and by medical specialties, said Belita H. Cowan, a health policy specialist in the attorney general's office.

Sample figures provided by the attorney general's office show that in 1983, fees charged by general surgeons in Carroll County for appendectomies ranged from $150 to $400, while fees in Baltimore City for the same operation ranged from $812 to $1,000.

Amputee Hopes Run Will Be An Inspiration

By CARLA CALDWELL
The Birmingham News

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Jeff Keith, who lost a leg to cancer when he was 12 years old, hopes the example of his 3,500-mile cross-country run can inspire a little determination in other cancer patients.

Keith, a 25-year-old UCLA graduate student who ran last year from Boston to Marina Del Rey, Calif., remembers the effect he had on a young cancer patient during a stopover in New York.

"I went in to see a little boy, a cancer patient, who was going through a lot of what I had," said Keith, who will be in Birmingham Thursday to speak at a cancer program at the University of Alabama at Birmingham.

"After visiting with him for a little while, I went on to see other cancer patients," he said. "On my way out of the hospital, the little boy was standing by the door with his IV stand next to him. He wanted to shake my hand and wish me good luck.

"The nurses told me it was the first time he had been out of bed in two weeks."

Said Keith: "It was things like that that kept me going. I was finding that when you have a goal or objective you are trying to reach, you can have a big effect on people."

In 1974, Keith was 12 years old and an all-around athlete. He was playing Little League football, baseball and hockey. That year he also found out he had osteogenic sarcoma, a bone marrow cancer which eventually forced doctors to amputate his right leg.

He went through treatment after treatment, some that caused him to lose his hair temporarily.

"I was scared and I was doubtful. There were times when I wanted to feel sorry for myself, it's only human," he said. "My parents never allowed me to, though; they never gave me time. They got me interested in skiing, and that was the key."

Keith went on to be captain of his Connecticut high school ski team and during his senior year at Boston College played goalie on the varsity lacrosse team.

"The lacrosse team was a new challenge for me. Having skied competitively in high school, I knew I could do it. I am an athlete."

"The problem was that no one who had been through what I had, had ever done it before. I felt the only reason it had never been done, was because of the barriers put up by other people. I just went out and did it," he said. Keith still wasn't satisfied. He had to accomplish more.

On June 4, 1984, Keith set out from Boston with the goal of running to Marina Del Rey, stopping at as many hospitals and cancer rehabilitation centers as possible.

"I wanted to show people who were going through some of the same things I had not to give up. I wanted to motivate them into accomplishing as much as they could," he said.

"When I was in the hospital, nothing was better for me than seeing someone who had beaten cancer. It inspired me. Now I was in the position to do the same thing for others," he said.

"The run took me through 17 states. I faced rain, sleet, snow and extreme heat. As I was crossing the desert, winds sometimes reached 40 miles an hour, he said. "It seemed that the wind was always in my face. I ran about 300 miles through those conditions.

"One of the toughest parts of the trip, though, was running across New Mexico. At some points I was at 8,000 feet (above sea level), and snow was sometimes 12 inches deep. Temperatures dropped into the teens and close to zegro," he said.

"If I had just been running to run, it wouldn't have been easy. But helping people made me feel important, it gave me a purpose," he said.

On Feb. 19, 1985, he reached Marina Del Rey, making the trip in eight and a half months.

He also had raised $125,000, which was donated to the American Cancer Society and the National Handicapped Sports and Recreation Association.

Keith will be the guest speaker Thursday at "Celebrate Life," a program sponsored by the American Cancer Society and the Jefferson County Medical Society. Its aim is to inform the public of progress being made in cancer research as well as the role early detection and treatment have played in increasing the cancer survival rate to 50 percent.

A Royal Pain

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles, grimacing at his bandaged hand he injured recently while planting a tree, said "I am hoping it doesn't go black and drop off."

The 37-year-old heir to the British throne toured a renovated public housing development Wednesday in London, and cheerfully answered questions about the finger, which he hit with a hammer and apparently nearly severed at the tip.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 30, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You want to make some changes and get off to new ideas and places, but the time is not ripe and you have some conditions already put into motion that require your attention.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) New conditions are intriguing, but this is not the right day to act upon them as yet. One from a distance could give you good ideas.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use only tried and proven systems in dealing with others today and get good results. Stick to proven pleasures with your mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A blunt partner will expect you to keep some promise, so do so before going off on a pleasure jaunt.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be thoughtful of those who have done you favors in the past and don't waste your time and money on newcomers.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get into pleasures that have been enjoyable in the past with friends. Don't feel you have to do anything unusual to gain affection.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Continue with your policy at home and don't spoil the harmony that has existed for some time there. Follow your pursuits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Keep rooted to oldtime principles that work for you and don't chuck them away for new ones that could prove damaging.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Think out how you can make better use of your home so that you can have a greater abundance in the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get into the amusements and pleasures with your mate that have been found satisfactory in the past.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Look to that loyal friend who has been of assistance in the past during some emergency and rely on this person now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to get your life working more as you want it to be, and follow your personal desires with a vengeance.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do something today that can be helpful in the community in which you reside. Make sure you drive with care.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be most interested in modern inventions and the like but will do best in whatever is of a conventional nature, and elders will appreciate this ability. Be sure to give a good education and to add foreign languages to the curriculum, since much travel is denoted here.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MARCH 31, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day when you want to act with swiftness and alacrity in expressing your views and ideas, especially if they are new and require some changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have fine ideas which can be made to work now, particularly since you are dynamic at this time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Try to do what the one you love desires of you, and please this person. A clever person comes into your life now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Sit down with outside partners and plan future dealings wisely, and you can become more successful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get an early start on whatever work you have to do and gain fine benefits from it.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Take your finest talents to bigwigs and commercialize well on them. Be especially happy tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get all arranged at home in a constructive way and begin the new week wisely. Raise your level of consciousness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get your desk work handled wisely in the morning, and you can insure a better existence for yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure to clear up last vestige of all old matters before you tackle that new outlet that will mean a new beginning.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Listen to what long-time associates have to suggest now for greater benefits in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have the right idea how best to gain your fondest desires, so follow it. Feel contented this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have set up a new course for yourself and should not permit a gossip to keep you away from it.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Trust associates now since your judgment is not so good today. Avoid social nonsense that merely wastes your valuable time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will maneuver older persons in order to gain more knowledge and benefit from tradition and will thereby possess real wisdom early in life. The interest does not lie in the ultra modern and short-lived, and the education should be classical for best results. Much travel is indicated.

Smooth Operation

By DAVID SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

CHAMBLEE, Ga. (AP) — The same computers that threw a wrench into last year's processing of Southerners' income tax returns are credited with making this year's operation a well-oiled machine.

At this time last year, when new Director Sylvia Wren arrived from Jackson, Miss., the 3,600 workers in the 7½-acre main building of the Internal Revenue Service's Atlanta Service Center were beginning to be overwhelmed.

Programming in new computers failed. Mail stacked up.

"A disastrous filing season," Ms. Wren recalled.

After the smoke cleared, the IRS mounted a "hurry-up effort" to improve computer programming and human training to cope with the machines.

This year, "it's just wonderful," she said.

The center, northeast of Atlanta, had processed 2.56 million returns three weeks into March 1985. This year, the figure was 3.46 million, a 31 percent improvement.

In each of the last three weeks, the center has broken its old record by mailing more than 800,000 refunds or notices to taxpayers.

Meanwhile, taxpayers are filing returns at a rate 1.3 percent behind last year — 5.55 million this year compared to 5.63 million at the same point in 1985.

The result, Ms. Wren said, is that the average refund request is being processed in seven weeks.

The center expects more than 11 million returns this year from its region — Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi. Two million returns and 500,000 requests for extensions are expected in the week surrounded the filing deadline of April 15.

No one needs a Turbo Wagon like this...

...or a Rolex or a Dior or a Baccarat!

Some say the 1986 Peugeot Turbo 505 Wagon is a little excessive. A new turbo with an intercooler gives you 150 horsepower, more power than you'll probably use, style and comfort some consider too opulent for a mere station wagon and a 4 speed automatic that makes this wagon a joy to drive.

Peugeot's extensive 3 year/36,000 mile limited warranty on the automobile and a 5 year/50,000 mile limited warranty on the drivetrain add security to your enjoyment.

We invite you to experience the new 1986 505 Turbo Wagon, probably more than you need, certainly more than you'd expect.

5 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BE AT THE OPEN HOUSE AT Summerfield

(and we're giving away a weekend for two at Sea Dunes in Kitty Hawk, N.C. and dinner at Restaurant By George.)

1 Summerfield is a neighborhood of single family homes with a variety of distinct designs that combine effective utilization of space and quality construction to enhance your investment now and in the future.

2 Summerfield is designed to enhance a community atmosphere. Careful planning and beautifully landscaped grounds makes the Summerfield neighborhood a nice place to call home.

3 Summerfield is located adjacent to the Greenville Country Club convenient to shopping, medical facilities, and all major routes in Greenville.

4 Summerfield ensures that each home meets high expectations of quality as each home must be first approved by an architect review committee.

5 With the varied options in financing available and with today's low mortgage rates, the opportunity for buying a home has never been better. And a home at Summerfield is an ideal choice for home ownership.

And By The Way... you can register to win a weekend for two at Sea Dunes in beautiful Kitty Hawk. N.C. and dinner at Restaurant By George.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

At least one aspect of the changing world is clearly indicated by the types of questions received by those who handle do-it-yourself subjects.

In the past five years, for instance, queries about garbage disposers have made an appearance in large numbers, whereas they were almost non-existent before then, even though the disposers themselves were around many years ago. If you wonder whether the subject is of general interest, be advised that such disposers now are in more 40 million households in the United States.

We took a handful of the most frequently asked questions concerning disposers to Brian Miller, considered an authority on that product. His first comment was consumers could avoid any major problems if they read and followed the manufacturers' instructions (a recurring complaint of the makers of most products).

What if the drain is blocked, presumably because of a buildup in the house pipes, especially in older homes? Miller's advice: "Remove the buildup with a special pipe-cleaning tool with an auger-type cutting blade used by plumbers. Never add chemical drain cleaners to the disposer."

Disposing of too much fibrous waste at one time can block the drain. This waste could be things such as corn husks or artichoke leaves. The fibrous material should be cut into smaller pieces, mixed with other waste and then added to the disposer slowly, making sure there is a full flow of water.

If the disposer ejects water or waste into the sink — usually because the food waste is being ground without a serviceable sink stopper and splash cover — simply replace the worn stopper or cover.

What if the disposer does not run or even hum? "The problem," says Miller, "may be caused by a blown fuse or circuit breaker. If, however, the disposer is not operating because of a tripped motor-overload protector, reset it by pushing the red button usually located at the bottom of the disposer motor."

Miller, the national service manager for the In-sink-erator Division of Emerson Electric Co., then was asked what to do if the unit hums, but does not run. Whatever happens, he said, never put your hand in the disposer. Instead, he said, turn the power off and read the manufacturer's instructions for freeing jams. When an item must be removed, always use tongs. If the unit is jammed because of waste remaining from prior use, turn the unit on and off to break the jam. Jams can be prevented by running the unit for 30 seconds after the food-grinding noise stops.

Stuck swivel impellers also may cause improper grinding. First, turn off the power, then turn the swivel impellers with a long lever or tongs. Remove the dislodged object with the tongs, but if the swivel impellers do not move, it's time to call for professional help.

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I will soon be finishing our attic. Is it better to construct the walls in place or assemble them on the floor and then raise them into the proper position? At one time or another, I have seen each of these methods recommended.

A. — When working on the inside, it is usually better to build the wall as you go along. First, because the assembling of a wall on the floor and the subsequent raising of it require a certain amount of knowledge and skill not necessarily required by the other system. Secondly, you must be certain there is sufficient clearance to tilt the wall into place. And you need assistance for the procedure, whereas a single person can construct the wall in place without too much trouble.

Q. — In putting up a gypsum board ceiling in my attic, I expect to be doing it alone. Is there some special way of lifting the boards into place?

A. — Use T-braces consisting of 2-foot lengths of 1-by-4s, nailed to 2-by-4s that are half an inch longer than the floor-to-ceiling height. Wedge the T-braces between the floor and the panel to support the panel while nailing. While this will enable you do the job alone, a certain amount of strength and care is necessary.

Q. — I am using prefinished hardboard for a room that is being refinished. In measuring the ceiling height of the room, I find there is a one-inch variation between the height of the ceiling at one end of the room and the height at the other. Will this make much of a difference and, if so, how can I handle it?

A. — You may have to cut each panel separately, but remember that the ceiling and floor moldings will cover small panel variations. If the difference between one end of the room and the other is only an inch, tne chances are you will have no trouble, but save yourself a headache by cutting a panel and fitting it into place, then cutting the next one and so on. Don't try to save time and trouble by cutting each panel to the same height ahead of time. Also, the hardboard panels should not be forced into place to make a tight fit. Allow at least 1-32nd of an inch between the panels and 1/8th of an inch at the top and bottom.

(Detailed instructions on insulating an attic are contained in Andy Lang's booklet, "Save Money by Insulating," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Garden Clinic

Q. What are some green flowers for the garden?

A. Bells of Ireland, "Envy" zinnia and "Green Expectations" delphinium. The color range of bearded irises now extends into green. The blossoms of snowball bush are green before they turn to white. Although they are not flowers, the seed heads of dock may be used green or dried in flower arrangements.

Q. Would wood ashes be beneficial to use around azaleas?

A. No. Wood ashes are strongly alkaline and should never be used around acid-loving plants such as azaleas, blueberries, camellias or rhododendrons.

Q. How can I prevent tomato seedlings and other seedlings from damping-off?

A. Once damping-off has started in a plant bed or seedling flat, it is difficult to control. Methods to prevent damping-off include preparing and managing the soil so that it provides good drainage, structure, aeration, water-holding capacity and adequate plant nutrients. The easiest way for a home gardener to achieve these is by buying a sterilized soil mix. Sowing seeds too thickly can lead to poor air movement and low light intensity for some of the seedlings. Employ strict sanitation to avoid infesting treated soil with disease-causing organisms. Once damping-off has started in a bed or flat, it may be controlled by providing drier conditions for the seedlings. This can be done by increasing the air temperature, increasing air circulation, reducing the frequency of watering and increasing the amount of light the seedlings receive. If preventative measures fail, several fungicides are available that may be effective. Check with your county agricultural agent for the best fungicide to apply to what you are growing. Follow all pesticide labels carefully for the correct method and rate of application.

Hepburn's Still Spunky In 'Mrs. Delafield'

By Robert DiMatteo

Katharine Hepburn returns to the small screen this week in Mrs. Delafield Wants to Marry (CBS, March 30). The legendary actress appears as Margaret Delafield, a WASP matron and widow who falls in love with an elderly Jewish physician (Harold Gould), much to the consternation of both of their families. Sentimentality aside, Miss Hepburn's recent screen performances have not been causes for celebration; partly due to a debilitating physical condition, the actress tends to alternate between rigid, clenched mannerisms and shaking.

One hates to adopt the bad habit of New York theater critic John Simon — taking actors to task for the way that they look. And yet, an actor's physical condition is at least partially relevant to his or her performance; otherwise, we wouldn't look at a performance, we would only listen to it. The irony is that Katharine Hepburn in repose remains extraordinarily lovely, even ageless. And her spunk is undiminished.

"Mrs. Delafield" is one of those paeans to old age that Miss Hepburn seemed to decry in a recent New York Times interview, where she asserted that aging is merely something you put up with. The CBS press release captures the film's tone: "Reawakened oldsters feeling like lovesick teen-agers." But the film has a liberal message to take away: Love is what matters, not whether you're young or old, Jewish or gentile. For many viewers, this will be enough.

The same evening, NBC and ABC will offer repeats of two theatrical films. ABC's choice is Cecil B. DeMille's epic The Ten Commandments, appropriate for Easter. No one has ever surpassed DeMille in the realm of kitschy Biblical spectaculars. Admittedly, few filmmakers have attempted anything comparable. "The Ten Commandments" remains entertaining, even in its campy excesses.

NBC's Bronco Billy (1980) is decidedly more low-key. This genial picture starring and directed by Clint Eastwood concerns a traveling Wild West show and the snobbish and demanding heiress (Sondra Locke) who joins up. Critics were more impressed than were audiences by this departure for Eastwood.

The indomitable, Oscar-winning Katharine Hepburn makes a rare TV appearance when she stars as a wealthy widow in "Mrs. Delafield Wants to Marry," a made-for-TV movie airing Sunday, March 30, on CBS.

Apse-olutely Fascinating

France is a nation known for its architectural as well as its gastronomic accomplishments. On April 30, David Macaulay, author of the best-selling book "Cathedral," hosts a one-hour PBS special of the same name. Flying-buttress buffs can join Macaulay for a half animated, half location-shot journey through Gothic churches and medieval lore.

Big Awards

CBS's "The Secret World of the Very Young," "Donald Duck's 50th Birthday" and "Contract for Life: The S.A.D.D. Story," a "CBS Schoolbreak Special," have been named winners of the 1986 Ohio State Awards by the Institute of Education by Radio-Television of Ohio State University. The awards, founded in 1936 to annually recognize excellence in educational, informational and public-affairs broadcasting, will be conferred in Washington, D.C., on April 9.

It sounds like it could be the perfect sitcom: An aspiring photojournalist (Mark Linn-Baker, r.) is thrown into chaos when his cousin (Bronson Pinchot) arrives from Europe. "Perfect Strangers" airs Tuesday, April 1 on ABC.

Many Documentaries Available On Video

By Frank Lovece

Author Ray Bradbury is a member of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Every year, he says, "I see about 100 documentaries that are under Academy Award scrutiny — all these wonderful, wonderful little films that almost nobody sees. Now they're all starting to come out on videocassette, where anybody can see them. That's almost miraculous, isn't it?" he asks rhetorically. "All these thoughts and ideas, there for the taking."

And taking them, people are. While hit movies will stay the most popular genre on video for at least the immediate future, documentaries on tape and disc are becoming "library" items — the kinds of items you buy rather than rent. Thankfully, some of the most important and interesting documentaries of recent years are readily available.

For instance, there's "Atomic Cafe" ($59.95, Thorn EMI/HBO) — a kitschy, though terrifying collage of 1950s Cold War films, newsreels and other artifacts. This 1982 documentary/satire helps put our current Cold War into perspective.

For those more concerned with flicks than with politics, you can illuminate yourself with literally dozens of movie documentaries, from such biographies as "Hepburn and Tracy" ($29.95) and "Henry Fonda: The Man and His Movies"($29.95, both from RKO Home Video) to the star-studded American Film Institute compilation, "America at the Movies" ($59.95, RCA/Columbia).

"World War II with Walter Cronkite" ($49.95, CBS Video Library) and "Vietnam: The Ten Thousand Day War" ($29.95, Embassy) are multicassette collections that give visual breadth to books on these subjects. Avant-garde documentarist Emile de Antonio's 1968 "Vietnam: In the Year of Pig" ($29.95, MPI) likewise supplies an emotional element beyond words.

Oscar winners are well-represented on video works such as 1974's "Hearts and Minds" ($39.95, Embassy tape; $29.95, Paramount disc), 1971's insect-odyssey "The Hellstrom Chronicle" ($59.95, RCA/Columbia), and 1976's "Harlan County, USA" ($59.95, RCA/Columbia). So are such test-of-time classics as propagandist Leni Riefenstahl's 1936 "Olympia" and "Triumph of the Will" (various labelsand prices). And what Woody Allen fan would want to be without "The Sorrow and the Pity" ($89.95, RCA/Columbia), the epic film about the Nazi occupation of France?

TV-viewers can have their "docudramas." Video viewers get the real thing.

Healthy relationships keep Miss Smith fit

By Renee Ross

Martha Smith admits it's tough to find exercise time when you're a busy actress.

Martha Smith

"My schedule is so hectic that I don't get nearly as much exercise as I'd like," says Miss Smith, who stars as Francine Desmond on the CBS series "Scarecrow & Mrs. King."

"So whenever possible, I do things like climb stairs instead of taking an elevator, or stretch in my dressing room. All those little things add up."

"I've never been obsessive about exercise, and I don't like to take part in competitive sports. I'm certainly not one of those people who get up at 5 a.m. to go to the gym for two hours before work," adds Miss Smith, who manages to squeeze an occasional jazz dance class or tennis match into her non-stop days.

Still, the actress, who also starred as vamp cheerleader Babs Jansen in the hit 1978 film "National Lampoon's Animal House," acknowledges the importance of working out.

"When I do go to the gym and have a regular regimen," she says, "I find I'm more capable of living with life's stresses. Without exercise, they build up and find other less desirable outlets."

Miss Smith thanks her genes for the gift of slimness. "I'm one of those people everybody hates to go to dinner with because I love to eat, yet I rarely gain weight. That's because I have high metabolism; it runs in the family."

Despite her love of food, the 5-foot-7, 113-pound actress tries to eat sensibly. "It's important to be nutritionally aware," she explains, "yet, I believe in a bit of fun. That way, if, now and then, you eat something harmful, you'll know how to counteract it next time."

Miss Smith also believes that strong relationships are a major key to a fulfilling life. "I couldn't do without a close network of family and good friends," says the actress, who describes her age as "over 25."

"Everybody has 'down' times when you realize that the people who stick by you during these periods are the ones who will always be your friends," she says. "Relationships like that are incredibly valuable."

Next up on her list of things to learn: meditation.

"I've been told a lot about it lately," Miss Smith says, "and think it would be very helpful for me. It quiets the mind and centers your energy."

Movie Channel Changes

The Movie Channel is targeting a slate of changes for this June intended to decrease repetitious duplication in scheduling and provide programming enhancements to distinguish it from its broad-based entertainment pay-cable competitors. Some of The Movie Channel's June goals: a switch from monthly to weekly programming; a shift in prime-time movie start times; more movie titles each month; movie marathons; double features; special-theme weeks; and "midnight madness" features.

TV Chatter

Anthony Newley may be starring in a revival of his hit 1962 Broadway musical "Stop the World — I Want to Get Off," but that's about as far into his past as the entertainer wants to go. Newley has been approached by Simon & Schuster to write his autobiography, now that his former wife, Joan Collins, has already told her side of their steamy marriage in her 1984 autobiography, "Past Imperfect." The couple was married from 1963-70. But Newley has turned down the opportunity to tell all. "I was born and raised an Englishman," he says, "and there's no reason for me to sink to that woman's level. To the great unwashed public, that woman is a star. But to those who know her, she's a commodity who would sell her own bowel movement."

Art Carney has played a sewer worker ("The Honeymooners"), a grouchy gumshoe ("The Late Show") and a hitchhiking widower (his Oscar-winning performance in "Harry and Tonto"), but one role he's prayed for has always eluded him. Until now. In the "Miracle of the Heart: A Boys Town Story," a syndicated TV movie airing this week, the 68-year-old actor plays Father O'Halleran, a veteran priest who is being edged out of his job to make way for a younger priest. "I don't want to get branded as the second banana or a stooge," says Carney, "so I thought I'd take a stab at Father O'Halleran. I found him a regular fellow who's simply been through the mill." But it was real-life Boys Town priest Father Nicholas Hupp who was really put through the mill after he volunteered to be Carney's stand-in. "I lasted two days," he confesses. "I'd rather work with 500 kids than be on a movie set."

It happened to the Cleavers and the Clampetts. Next week, it happens to the Taylors. But don't expect a small-screen reunion to happen to the Lawrences, everyone's favorite middle-class "Family." The series, now being rerun on Lifetime, aired on ABC from 1976-80. "It can't happen," explains Sada Thompson, who played mother Kate, "because James (Broderick, who played husband Doug), is dead. Gary (Frank, who played son Willie) just had a baby. Kristy (McNichol, who played daughter Buddy) is grown up. Meredith (Baxter-Birney, who played daughter Nancy) is tied up with 'Family Ties.' And I can't go it alone." So Sada has found a new family, playing the mother of Mariette Hartley's bisexual character in next week's ABC movie "Torn Loves." "I know what a homosexual is because I know many of them," says Sada. "But bisexual? I didn't even know the word existed until I did this movie. Kate didn't have to think of such things."

Kareem Abdul Jabbar is leaving the court for the charts: The Los Angeles Laker has just signed a long-term recording contract with MCA Records. Does this mean we'll hear the gentle giant croon such tunes as the "Slam Dunk Rag?" Hardly. Jabbar, a long-time jazz buff who has an extensive record collection, will act, according to an MCA spokesman, as "an ambassador of talent. Kareem will be signing new talent as well as stealing established talent from other labels." ... Paramount obviously has blind faith in "Mr. Sunshine," the new ABC series which premiered last week. The press kit for the sitcom, which concerns a blind college professor, comes complete with translation — in Braille.

Love — even the second time around — can be fun. And tiring. That's what Joanna Cassidy learns when she stars opposite Barry Bostwick in "Pleasures," a romantic tale of midsummer's madness, airing Monday, March 31 on ABC.

Emmanuel Lewis Continues To Learn

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — A syndication deal has established ABC's "Webster" as one of the most expensive sitcoms in TV history — but headliner Emmanuel Lewis isn't much interested in matters as mundane as money.

When we met to talk about his three-year career in prime time, he was much more interested in discussing his first encounter with mid-terms, a necessary evil that even a TV star can't avoid.

And he has no complaints about a lifestyle that now requires him to get down to some serious studying as well as learning his lines for a show that may not be setting the ratings on fire, but does well enough to keep the network happy.

"I thought it would be tough in the ninth grade, but it turns out it's real neat," he says. "I like learning about new things, and school is much more interesting than it used to be.

"I think the show's getting better, too," Emmanuel continues. "For a while, the scripts got kind of serious, but lately they've been getting funnier and funnier.

"They keep saying sitcoms have to tell a serious story once in a while, and that's OK. But making people laugh is more fun. I don't mind making the audience think so long as they're smiling at the same time."

Emmanuel was picked for prime time when an ABC executive spotted him in a series of fast-food commercials, and now the Hollywood bug has bitten him in a big way.

"When I started doing commercials, I didn't know they were going to lead to acting, but now I'm in it, I want to learn everything there is to know about this business.

"I want to write and produce and direct and I love singing and dancing — I'm really hooked! I guess you could say it's hard work, but I don't really notice because I enjoy it all so much.

"There are a lot of things I want to do, but I'm not in a hurry," he says. "I'll stay with 'Webster' for as long as they want me to because it means I'm being paid to learn — it's a neat deal."

Gould Stars As The Mighty Casey

By Andrew J. Edelstein

With the baseball season getting underway next week, Showtime airs an appropriate episode of the new series "Shelley Duvall's Tall Tales & Legends" on Sunday, March 30. It's "Casey at the Bat," adapted from Ernest L. Thayer's poem about the mighty Casey who let the Mudville nine down in the clutch.

Comedian David Steinberg directed the episode, which stars Elliott Gould as Casey, Bill Macy ("Maude") as the team's manager, and — yes — Howard Cosell as Ernest L. Thayer.

Speaking of real-life sports, Showtime is taking the plunge into big-time boxing. The pay-cable channel recently signed an agreement with Top Rank, the promotional group headed by Bob Arum, to broadcast a series of live boxing events.

The first fight airs June 4 from the Byrne Arena in New Jersey, will feature a triple-header: an IBF junior middleweight championship fight between Davey Moore and Buster Drayton; light-heavyweight title fight between Slobodan Kacar and Bobby Czyz; and a lightweight bout between champion Jimmy Paul and Sammy Fuentes.

Showtime's rival, HBO, has been intensifying its boxing coverage and at press time, was about to finalize a deal with Mike Tyson, the undefeated heavyweight contender. A Showtime spokesperson said that adding boxing was not meant as a direct challenge to HBO.

Robert Louis Stevenson never wrote a sequel to "Treasure Island," his classic story about cabin boy Jim Hawkins, the nefarious pirate Long John Silver, and the quest for buried treasure on an exotic Caribbean island. The tale ended with young Jim sailing home from Treasure Island. Readers used their imaginations to determine the fates of the characters.

Until Saturday, April 5, anyway. On that date, the Disney Channel updates the story when it airs the first episode of its 10-part miniseries, "Disney's Return to Treasure Island," a sequel to the 1950 movie based on Stevenson's novel.

The new story begins 10 years later. Jim (Christopher Guard) is now an Oxford University graduate about to set sail for the Caribbean as the agent to a Jamaican plantation, when Long John Silver (Brian Blessed) crosses his path again.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: Did Sylvester Stallone actually serve in Vietnam? — DOROTHY MARTIN, NIANTIC, CONN.

Forty-year-old Sylvester Stallone never served in the armed forces, but then neither did that other famous actor known for his war flicks, John Wayne.

Dear Michele: Are Jean and Maureen Stapleton sisters? — IRENE LEBERS, BEACHWOOD, N.J.

No. Jean was born Jeanne Murray on January 19, 1923 in New York City. Maureen Stapleton (her real name) was born June 21, 1925 in Troy, New York.

Dear Michele: Has Jacqueline Bisset ever been married? Does she have any children? — LEE CRANE, LOUISVILLE, OHIO

Jacqueline Bisset, 41, has no childen, and she has never been married. Her father is an English physician and her mother is a lawyer. They divorced after 28 years of marriage. "I haven't seen a great number of happy marriages," says Miss Bisset. She has, however, had her share of long-term relationships. She spent four years with actor Michael Sarrazin and seven years with real-estate tycoon Victor Drai. The stunning British import has been the house mate of Russian emigre ballet star Alexander Godunov ("Witness") for the last four years.

Dear Michele: How many real-life children does Meredith Baxter-Birney have? — ELLEN HERRING, SEBASTOPOL, CALIF.

Miss Baxter-Birney, 37, refuses to discuss her first husband and will not mention his name. We do know he was her high school sweetheart and that the couple married at age 19. Their union produced two children, Ted, 18, and Eva, 16. They were divorced in 1972. In 1974, Meredith married actor David Birney, who was then co-starring with Miss Baxter in "Bridget Loves Bernie." The CBS series was canceled after one short season, but the Birney's have a hit in their off-screen marriage. They are the parents of a daughter, Kate, 11, and baby twins Mollie and Peter.

'Fox' Battles 'Foxx' On Saturday Nights

By Andrew J. Edelstein

"Crazy Like a Fox" returns this week to the CBS lineup after a brief hiatus. It airs Saturdays at 8 p.m. (ET) replacing "Airwolf," which itself goes on hiatus. The comedy-drama starring Jack Warden and John Rubinstein, has been one of the nomads of the network TV schedule this season -- to its detriment.

It aired originally on Sundays at 9, following the powerful "Murder, She Wrote." The Angela Lansbury series provided a compatible lead-in and "Fox" rode the coattails of that show to modest ratings success. In February, it was moved to Wednesdays to pinch-hit for CBS's ailing sitcoms "Mary" and "Foley Square." But it couldn't hold its own against a revitalized "Dynasty." Now it's up against four sitcoms: "The Redd Foxx Show" and "Benson" on ABC, and the popular "Facts of Life" and "Gimme a Break" on NBC.

The second edition of "Deja View," the syndicated show that creates contemporary videos for 1960s songs airs this week (check local listings).

Among the videos are Don McLean's 1972 anthem "American Pie," which the show's producers are claiming is the longest song to ever be turned into a video; The Boxtops' "The Letter," featuring Michael Pare ("Eddie and the Cruisers," "Streets of Fire"); The Temptations' "I Can't Get Next to You," featuring Bronson Pinchot ("Beverly Hills Cop") and two original Tempts, David Ruffin and Eddie Kendrick; and Lesley Gore's "It's My Party" featuring Miss Gore herself.

Rock Stars Unite Against Drug Abuse

By E.A. Vare

Madonna, George Michael, Mr. Mister, the Pointer Sisters, the Beach Boys and Sheena Easton are among those scheduled to appear in "The Concert That Counts," an all-star extravaganza at Pasadena's Rose Bowl on April 26. The intent of the concert — which should be televised via satellite to 150 countries and later released as an album — is to raise money to fight drug abuse. Organizers hope to enlist the aid of First Lady Nancy Reagan. She has already appeared on TV and in a rock video to show her opposition to substance abuse among young people.

Country superstars Alabama are about to be turned into a cartoon. Hanna-Barbera, creators of "The Flintstones" and "The Jetsons," are making a pilot episode of an animated Alabama series. If that one is successful, they also have a cartoon series in mind for Conway Twitty.

Kool and the Gang became the 500th recipient of the Ampex Golden Reel Award, a plaque given to any album mixed or recorded on Ampex tape which goes on to receive gold certification from the RIAA. The Golden Reel comes with a $1,000 cash grant for the charity of the artists' choice. Kool and the Gang gave theirs to Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America.

Toto's new lead singer, Fergie Ferguson, has parted company with the band after only a year. His replacement will be Joseph Williams, son of composer John Williams, who both sings and plays keyboards. Reported guest stars on the upcoming Toto album — due this summer — include jazz great Miles Davis.

Strange bedfellows: New York rap masters Run-DMC are recording a hip-hop version of Aerosmith's "Walk This Way." Apparently, the stars of "Krush Groove" also listen to AC/DC, Queen and Billy Squier when no one's looking.

Marvin Gaye would have turned 47 on April 2... Ronnie Lane, former Faces member and inspiration for the ARMS concerts, turns 38 on April 1... Herb Albert, pop trumpeter and founder of A&M Records, turns 51 on March 31.

Benson hopes to have a long, 'Tough' run

By Gillian George

"The Breakfast Club" was one of last year's most interesting movies, but few people who enjoyed it had any idea who was singing the soundtrack song "We Are Not Alone."

Robby Benson

Robby Benson is now ready to announce that the singer was none other than his wife, Karla DeVito, and that he was the song's composer. The couple also co-composed "Nobody Makes Me Crazy," which Diana Ross recorded. Both songs went gold and both were created in the eight-track recording studio in the San Fernando Valley home that the Bensons share with their 2-year-old daughter, Lyric.

These facts will no doubt surprise fans of the soft-voiced actor who, despite his boyish looks, recently turned 30. What comes as no surprise, however, is how appealing the intense actor is in his new situation comedy, "Tough Cookies." He plays a Chicago plainclothes detective named Cliff Brady. Orphaned at a young age, Cliff was raised by the characters in his neighborhood, so he naturally remains loyal to them — even though some make their living on the shady side of the law.

Adam Arkin (Alan's son) plays his best buddy, Danny, who just happens to be a bookie. And Cliff just can't resist spending most of his off-duty time at the Windbreaker, a seedy bar whose chief attraction is the warmhearted proprietor, Rita (played by Lainie Kazan).

The rest of the cast, including Art Metrano as Lt. Iverson, Alan North as Father McCaskey and Elizabeth Pena as Det. Connie Riviera, have been equally well chosen.

Benson says he would be pleased if "Tough Cookies" has a substantial run. "At First," he recalls, "I wasn't too thrilled about the idea of doing a TV series. But I had worked with (executive producers) Paul Witt and Tony Thomas about 15 years earlier and remembered them as good guys with a commitment to the best work possible.

"It also seemed like a good way to be able to work steadily near my home so I could spend the maximum time with Karla and Lyric. Mind you, it's turning out to be that I'm usually pretty exhausted by the time I get home."

But judging by his ability to juggle three separate careers — in music, screenwriting and acting — Benson will probably manage his heavy load in splendid style.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Michael Leon's world works up a lather

By Frank Lovece

Call him irresponsible. Michael Leon — soap-opera star, streetwise hustler and co-creator of the new syndicated interview show "Inside Soaps" — is impossible to dislike. Ask him a question, and he carries on like an excited kid telling his grandparents about his birthday presents. Everything's in detail, from the name of the moving company for which his step-father drove trucks, to how the "Days of Our Lives" star used to con Canadian customs agents back in the days when he'd fix up sports cars and export them tax-free.

Michael Leon

A typical Michael Leon story: "I was 14 years old and went for a busboy job. I asked the guy at the restaurant, 'Do you have a head busboy?' He said, 'Head busboy. What's that?' So I made up all the details of a head busboy position right on the spot, and told him I'd do it for 15 cents more an hour than the busboy position paid." He barely pauses for a breath. "I worked my butt off since I had to fill in when a busboy was sick, et cetera, but I was in charge!" he adds, smiling broadly. "And I made a lot of money for a 14-year-old!"

Now, at 25, Leon is still making — and risking — lots of money. To raise the cash for "Inside Soaps," which he co-created and co-produces with his friend Michael Catalano and the magazine Soap Opera Digest, he had to divert just a bit. "I sold all my apartment houses and all my shopping malls. And everybody was saying to me, 'The show will never work' and 'It's already been done.' Fine, just give me a chance."

Six years ago, after all, he was "discovered" while parked for two minutes in a closed gas station, putting air in his motorcycle's tires. A producer with car troubles inadvertently pulled in, he and Leon began talking, and Leon got himself an acting job. Roles in various TV shows and B-movies followed.

Nowadays, Leon is busy co-scripting a movie about four waitresses in a rock club. He's also cutting a record album, and he still writes an advice column for Soap Opera Digest. He worked 33 weekends last year, he estimates, doing personal appearances all around the country. If "Inside Soaps" doesn't become a huge success, it won't be because Leon was lazy. "The harder I work," he says, "the luckier I get."

Three Rings, One Screen

The all-new 116th edition of the Greatest Show on Earth will be broadcast Wednesday, April 16th on CBS. Actor Jim Dale, who won a Tony award for his Broadway performance in "Barnum," will host the "Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus" special, and Ben Vereen contributes a musical tour of backstage life. Diehard circus addicts who may be alarmed at this show-biz encroachment of the Big Top will be comforted by the Shanghai Acrobatic Troupe and aerialist Miguel Vazquez, who will attempt a quadruple somersault.

NCAA Men's Basketball Championships

By Adam Beckerman

Billy Packer, color commentator extraordinaire for CBS's NCAA basketball broadcasts, is gung-ho about the sport he covers. A short guy nurtured on the fundamentals of ACC roundball — star guard and then assistant coach at Wake Forest and the first TV voice of the conference — Packer and his nuts-and-bolts analysis now represents the class act in a land where schtick sells and PT boats are penetrating guards.

"The first final I did, in '75 (Marquette-N.C. State), I thought it was the end of the earth just to do that. I've done it now, so I guess I'm a lot luckier than I thought I'd be. I don't worry about my run on television being up one day I spend time trying to figure out ways so it doesn't happen."

That's probably why Packer is always talking. Talking a game. Talking on his pal Al McGuire's radio show. Talking in his newspaper column or his recently published bio "Hoops!" (Contemporary).

Packer isn't trying to mold the game to fit his image. In truth, Packer is trying to teach. And on Monday, March 31, when he calls yet another NCAA title game, Packer will watch and make sure fans see the court like a guard on full scholarship running the offense.

"I'm not so naive as to think that everyone believes it's the most important event on earth," he says. "But for me, for that one night, it is the culmination of a good portion of my life's work."

It's no secret that big-time college sports is under the microscope. But the networks don't often mention scholastic smut; last year's Tulane betting scandal broke the day before the Villanova-Georgetown miracle, yet CBS played deaf and dumb. Mention revolutionary angles, however, like officially paying college players for their services or creating a union that would watch over their best interests — ideas spawned from the brain of maverick thinker Dick DeVenzio — and Billy Packer will hold true to his beliefs: libertarian in nature, ruled by faith in the individual and the spirit of the game.

"I don't like to respond to all these quick fixes," he says. "First of all, I happen to think that college athletics are an awful lot healthier than they're perceived by the general public or the press. What I would like to see as a major policy, though, is the implementation on every campus of a self-study program comprised of the president, athletic director, coaches, teachers, alumni and various students, who will evaluate where the school presently is in regard to athletics, where they think they'd like to be and what is going to be the method of operation on that campus, regardless of what anyone is doing."

It all sounds slightly sobering, albeit somewhat like unilateral disarmament. Short of that, surely what wouldn't hurt is to start keeping the mega-revenue-generating students (see Sport Stars) separated from the evil, exploitive boosters.

"To me," Packer says, "It's one of the most beneficial things for an athlete in the college environment. Here he gets a chance to rub shoulders with people he can look up to: bankers, businessmen. For an athlete to be denied that chance because they've been boosters who've taken advantage of their position, that's bad news."

Well, then maybe making freshmen ineligible will better enable them to adjust from high school to college life?

"Lots of kids do better when their time is occupied athletically as well as academically. Besides, the power schools would like to see that rule implemented, because if you bar freshmen, then the mid-level schools can only try to catch up with three classes."

And, as the state lottery advertises, "You've got to be in it to win it."

College Hoops Ends; Checking Out Veeck

By Adam Beckerman

Baseball is back. Almost. Which means college hoops is almost over. Alas. For those who realize how well the ladies are playing these days, they'll want to catch the NCAA Women's Basketball Championship game on CBS, Sunday, March 30 at 1 p.m. (ET) from Lexington, Kentucky. Then on Monday, March 31, CBS airs what we've all been waiting for: the NCAA men's championship, beginning at 9 p.m. (ET) from Dallas, Texas.

Slated to run against the title game on Monday, March 31 on PBS at 10:30 p.m. (ET) is "Veeck: A Man of Any Season," a half-hour look at the man-child who revitalized modern-day baseball. A spry 71 when his ticker gave out this past January, Bill Veeck owned more baseball teams (four, including the White Sox twice) than proper decorum or luck might dictate, but he imprinted more of his personality onto the game than any sports impresario this side of George Halas.

Here is the man who built the bleachers in Wrigley Field that house the bums, who planted the ivy that makes the confines so cozy; who sent Eddie Gaedel, all 3 feet, 7 inches of him, up to bat in search of a base on balls. A writer, radio host and shrewd businessman, Veeck was most of all a spirited fan of good times at the park.

He's lucky enough to be quoted as saying: "The most beautiful place in the world is to be seated in a ball park filled with people." The documentary, narrated by his wife, Mary Frances, ran on WTTW-TV Chicago last September. It served as his obituary, yet is the perfect harbinger of spring.

Second-round coverage of the $430,000 Dinah Shore Invitational, the first of the women's four major tournaments, airs Saturday, April 5 on NBC from 4:30-6 p.m. (ET). You want to hear about indomitable spirit? Listen to Judy Clark-Dickinson, winless for seven years on the tour until notching her first last summer. "My record was improving," she says. "I was playing better. Making more money. But I just had to finally stop thinking about winning and just concentrate on getting into a position to win." Which she was, after her LPGA record 64/65 at the S&H Classic.

Margaret Truman Daniel's Story Of Her Mother

This is the most difficult work I have ever written. It is about a woman I thought I knew better than any other person in my life. But I have discovered, as I wrote it, that it is about a woman who kept her deepest feelings, her most profound sorrows, sealed from my view—from almost everyone's view.

If there is one thing I know about my mother, it is the intensity of her love for me, of mine for her. That is one reason why this is difficult to write. I am trying to step out of that circle of love, that private spotlight in which I have lived.

That is why I am calling her by a name I never used once while she was alive:

WALTER SCOTT'S
Personality Parade

Want the facts? Opinion? Truth? Write Walter Scott, 140 N. Hamilton Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90210, or phone (213) 651-3375. Full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Q Is it a joke or is there any truth to the rumor that Imelda Marcos of the Philippines and Michèle Duvalier of Haiti plan to open a boutique to be called FMO (For Millionaires Only) on Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills and to stock it with some of their loot?—Calley K., Las Vegas, Nev.

A That's a gag.

Mrs. Duvalier (l) and Marcos: Gone but not forgotten

Q After the tragic deaths of the space shuttle Challenger crew on Jan. 28, President Reagan made a splendid, poetic speech to the nation on radio and TV. The last line of that beautiful speech is: "We will never forget them nor the last time we saw them this morning, as they prepared for their journey and waved goodbye and 'slipped the surly bonds of earth' to 'touch the face of God.'" I'm told that the quotation in the last line comes from a famous Russian poem. Is that so?—R.J., La Jolla, Calif.

A No. The words are from the poem "High Flight," written by John Gillespie Magee Jr., an American who was killed in December 1941 at age 19 while serving with the Royal Canadian Air Force. The poem appeared in an anthology titled "More Poems From the Forces," published in 1943 by George Routledge & Sons Ltd. and bearing the sentence "This volume is dedicated to the USSR." In an abbreviated version, "High Flight" reads:

"Oh! I have slipped the surly bonds of earth
And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings...
And, while with silent, lifting mind I've trod
The high untrespassed sanctity of space,
Put out my hand and touched the face of God."

Q Would you know the value of the estate that Rock Hudson left after he succumbed to AIDS? I have read figures ranging from $1 million to $100 million.—N.R., Reading, Pa.

A A ballpark estimate would have it somewhere between $10 million and $20 million.

The late Rock Hudson

Q This is my third request for information about the prime ministers of Great Britain. I would like to know if, since the start of World War II, every prime minister has been enrolled and educated at Oxford University.—L.J., Fort Wayne, Ind.

A Great Britain has had 10 prime ministers since the outbreak of World War II: Neville Chamberlain, Winston Churchill, Clement Attlee, Anthony Eden, Harold Macmillan, Alec Douglas-Home, Harold Wilson, Edward Heath, James Callaghan and Margaret Thatcher. Three were not educated at Oxford. Chamberlain (prime minister 1937-40) studied accountancy at Mason College. Churchill (prime minister 1940-45 and 1951-55) was considered so inept and unpromising by his father that he was sent to Harrow and then Sandhurst to become an army officer. Callaghan (prime minister 1976-79) left school at 17 to work as a clerk, then enlisted in the navy as an ordinary seaman.

Isabella Rossellini

Q Is Isabella Rossellini, the model and actress, the granddaughter of the late Italian dictator Benito Mussolini?—L.S., Bogota, N.J.

A No, she is a twin daughter of the late screen star Ingrid Bergman and her second husband, the late Italian film director Roberto Rossellini.

Q Is it a fact that the Vatican refuses to engage in normal diplomatic relations with Israel on the grounds that Israel is a non-Christian state?—C.E., Sherman Oaks, Calif.

A The Vatican refuses to engage in normal diplomatic relations with Israel on the grounds that Israel's geographical borders are not clearly defined. It does, however, send an apostolic delegate to the mayor of Jerusalem—which constitutes, according to some diplomats, a quasi-recognition of Israel.

Q Why do Arlene Dahl, Liz Taylor and Lana Turner marry and divorce, marry and divorce? Is it sex or money?—Barbara Monahan, Portland, Me.

A Mostly it is for companionship.

Arlene Dahl and hubby No. 6, Marc Rosen: Companionship

Q Why is it that Gorbachev and the Soviets are in favor of a moratorium on nuclear-bomb testing, and we are not?—L. Baldwin, Santa Fe, N.M.

A One possible reason: Our nuclear bombs, old and new, must be constantly tested to see if they work. A second possible reason: We don't trust the Soviets. A third: We may need a nuclear reaction to power our laser capability in the "Star Wars" project. And lastly, there may exist some insurmountable technological obstacles to a temporary or comprehensive test ban known only to the top personnel who run the federal weapons laboratories at Los Alamos, N.M., and Livermore, Calif.

BESS

At home at last: Bess and Harry Truman on doorstep of 219 North Delaware St. in 1953.

Smiles of victory, 1940: Reading Senate race returns.

A decade ago, Margaret Truman Daniel published Harry S. Truman, a revealing book about her father. Now she has written Bess W. Truman, a candid memoir about her mother. PARADE is proud to present exclusively excerpts from this major new book, just published by Macmillan, in this week's and next week's issues.

AT 4 P.M. ON JUNE 28, 1919, SEVEN weeks after 35-year-old Capt. Harry Truman was discharged at Camp Funston in Kansas, almost nine years since he began his courtship of Bess Wallace and six years since she accepted him, he waited at the altar in tiny Trinity Episcopal Church, a few blocks from her home at 219 North Delaware St. in Independence, Mo.

Bess wore a gown of white georgette and a wide-brimmed picture hat of white faille, and she carried an armful of Aaron Ward roses. Her bridesmaids were her two favorite cousins, Helen

"She was there beside him, but no one, except the candidate, was aware of the reluctance and doubt in her troubled heart"

BY MARGARET TRUMAN DANIEL

COVER PHOTOGRAPH, FROM UPI/BETTMANN NEWSPHOTOS, SHOWS THE TRUMANS EN ROUTE TO THE "LITTLE WHITE HOUSE" IN KEY WEST, FLA., IN 1949

Wallace and Louise Wells. Her tall, handsome brother, Frank, escorted Bess up the aisle and gave her away.

In a hurry to make some real money, ex-Captain Truman sold his equity in the family farm to his mother and sister Mary and went into the haberdashery business. His partner was Eddie Jacobson, the man with whom he had run a canteen at Camp Doniphan in Oklahoma before they sailed to France. They opened a very spiffy store opposite the Muehlebach Hotel on 12th Street in Kansas City. Both men worked very hard. The store was open 12 hours a day, six days a week. Business was fantastic.

Although the first year of Bess' marriage was brightened by Harry's success as a businessman, there was sharp disappointment at the end of it. She had a miscarriage. It upset her a great deal. She and Harry were both anxious to have a child, and this unhappy accident at the age of 35 made her fear she had waited too long. Other events in 1920 were also inauspicious. The Republicans kicked the Democrats out of the White House and elected Warren G. Harding in a landslide. Almost immediately, a sharp deflation in the economy began.

Throughout 1921, Truman and Jacobson slid slowly, inevitably toward collapse. It was a bitter disappointment for Harry Truman. But he was not the sort of man who sat still in the face of disaster—or took to drink. He had an alternative plan ready—one that stirred considerable anxiety in Bess. Reviving an idea he had mentioned in a letter from France, he was planning to run for Eastern Judge of Jackson County.

The campaign reached its climax in the blazing heat of the summer of 1922. Between June 1 and Aug. 5, the date of the primary, Harry Truman visited every township and precinct in the county.

Bess did not go with him. She stayed home for a supremely important reason: She was pregnant again. In late June or early July, she had another miscarriage.

In 1922, candidate Truman won his first election, becoming the Eastern Judge of Jackson County by 500 votes. Bess' nerves took a turn for the better.

Throughout the fall of 1923, Bess, who was pregnant again, struggled with a tangle of hope and fear. After two disappointments, she had become so superstitious about presuming a happy ending to her pregnancy that she presumed the opposite. She refused to buy a single item of baby clothes or even a bassinet. Christmas that year was, nevertheless, a time of hope. By then, Bess was almost in her eighth month and was feeling fine. Bess decided to have her baby at home.

It turned out to be a good decision. On Feb. 17, when Bess went into labor, one of the worst blizzards in memory was burying Independence and most of the Midwest. It would have been a nightmare to get to a hospital. The doctor had enough trouble getting to the house.

After 12 hours of labor, the writer of this book was born four days after Bess' 39th birthday.

On Aug. 3, 1926, 42-year-old Harry Truman won the Democratic nomination for Presiding Judge and swept to victory in November, leading a tremendous Democratic comeback in Jackson County. Bess Truman had become a professional politician's wife.

That election victory caused a rather unpleasant quarrel between Harry and Bess, who complained that Sunday was "poky" without her husband. She had wanted to go to a reception for Queen Marie of Romania, who visited Kansas City during a world tour. Harry was away on an official trip, and Bess declared herself unable to go without him.

She had succeeded in making him feel guilty. Although I think I have made it clear that I love both my parents, I must confess to a certain prejudice in favor of my father. The man was only trying to make a living for himself and his family!

On May 14, 1934, alone, Harry Truman paced the floor in the Pickwick Hotel in Kansas City, on the eve of announcing his candidacy for the United States Senate.

Perfect union suggests that there has to be a surrender of one self to the other self—usually the woman to the man. Bess Truman never did that. But she also never forgot the promise that she had made to Captain Truman in Trinity Episcopal Church back in 1919. When he announced his candidacy for the United States Senate, she was there, beside him. No one, except the candidate, was aware of the reluctance and doubt in her troubled heart.

The full import of the election only dawned in my 10-year-old brain when Bess explained that we would spend six months of every year in Washington, starting on Jan. 1, 1935. I burst into tears. I realize, now, that Mother was probably tempted to join me. But she concealed her feelings, as usual, and briskly told me there was no point in crying about it.

Only now, after entering the hidden part of her life, do I realize that leaving North Delaware St. was more painful and threatening to her than it was to me.

With daughter clutching her battered Raggedy Ann doll, for which Aunt May Wallace had sewed a new dress and some hair, we drove to St. Louis and took a train to Washington, D.C. On Jan. 3, 1935, Mother and I sat in the Senate gallery and watched Harry S. Truman walk down the center aisle and take his oath of office before Vice President John Garner.

As 1942 began, Washington became the capital of a global war. The 58-year-old Senator and his committee on defense contracts zoomed around the country, making headline after headline. Bess stayed in Washington, running the office, signing letters, dealing with job-seekers and visiting Missourians.

For their 23rd wedding anniversary, Dad sent Mother 23 roses and one of his most heartfelt letters. "Twenty-three years have been extremely short and for me altogether most happy ones. Thanks to the right kind of a life pardner for me we've come out reasonably well. A failure as a farmer, a miner, an oil promoter and a merchant but finally hit the groove as a public servant—and that due mostly to you and lady luck. The lady's best roll of the dice was June 28, 1919." She was still his sweetheart, "as good looking and loveable as when she was sixteen."

Bess replied that "it always amazes me that you can write a so called love letter when you have had so little practice."

In the spring of 1943, Senator Truman wrote his wife one of his most important letters, from an historical point of view. It began with a report on his brother Vivian's visit to the capital, and Dad's efforts to show him a good time.

With no warning, Dad switched to a meeting he and Vivian had had with Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania.

"The Senator from Pennsylvania took me out into his beautiful back yard (garden in the capital) and very confidentially wanted to know what I thought of [Vice President] Henry Wallace. I told him that Henry is the best Secretary of Agriculture we ever did have. He laughed and said that is what he thinks. Then he wanted to know if I would help out the ticket if it became necessary by accepting the nomination for Vice President. I told him in words of one syllable that I would not—that I had only recently become a Senator and that I wanted to work at it for about 10 years."

This letter marked the first appearance of an idea that was going to wreak havoc in Bess' life. Her old foe, history, was stalking her again.

At the 1944 Democratic National Convention in Chicago, Bess still could have forced Harry Truman to issue an absolute, unshakable no, a refusal on the order of General Sherman's historic turndown of the Presidential nomination in 1884. She could have told him that the whole idea of him one day becoming President and her becoming First Lady was intolerable to her.

But there was an invisible line in their partnership that Bess never crossed —a line that divided a wife's power over her husband between influence and control. Bess never hesitated to try to influence Harry Truman's decisions. But she never attempted to control him—especially in those lonely moments when he confronted his deepest self, the instinct that drove him to risk the pain and sacrifice of meeting history head-on. This was the most awesome of those moments. Bess allowed him to accept its inevitability, even though she dreaded the pain it might cause her.

There is a picture showing Mother and me as the final count was announced. I am cheering my head off. Mother is barely able to muster a smile. At 20, of course, I reveled in the pandemonium and was relatively unbothered by the suffocating heat. I had also been having a good time in Chicago while Mother suffered through anguished days and sleepless nights.

She was losing the serene, comfortable life of a Senator's wife, which she had worked so hard to master. She was 59 years old, and all her life she had been making sacrifices for people, putting herself and her concerns second to her mother's peace of mind, her brothers' welfare, her daughter's health, her husband's career.

April 12, 1945, was a rainy day. Dad was flying to Providence the following morning to give a speech to the Rhode Island Democrats, and Bess eyed the lowering clouds, worried as always whenever her husband took to the air.

About 6 o'clock, the telephone rang and I answered it. In an odd, tight voice, Dad asked to speak to Mother. When I tried to kid with him in our usual style, he cut me off and ordered me to put Mother on the line.

"Bess," Harry Truman said. "I'm at the White House. President Roosevelt died about two hours ago in Warm Springs. I'm sending a car for you and Margaret. I want you here when I'm sworn in."

At the White House, Bess asked if she could see Mrs. Roosevelt. This thoughtful gesture showed how thoroughly that strong will had regained control of her turbulent Wallace emotions. It would have been understandable if a woman who had just received such stunning news had simply reeled to her husband's side and awaited orders. But Bess demonstrated in what might be called her first official act as the new President's wife her ability to find her own distinct role.

I think that Mrs. Roosevelt appreciated our visit. She was with her daughter, Anna. Both were grave but composed. Bess expressed our deep sympathy and sorrow. She meant every word of it. Although Mother had been critical of President Roosevelt's political tactics, she had been charmed by him when they met face to face. Mrs. Roosevelt thanked her and said: "I just told Harry I am ready to do anything I can to help. That of course applies to you too." Bess thanked her and we hurried to the Cabinet Room, where Cabinet members and Congressional leaders had assembled to see the new President sworn in.

Husband and wife work together at his office during Senate years. At right, mother and daughter at Union Station in Washington, D.C., in 1947.

I remember glancing at Mother as Dad raised his hand to take the oath of office. Her eyes were red from weeping. But her face was calm, her lips firm. I find that amazing, now. If the scene was dreamlike to me, who had more or less grown up in Washington, D.C., it must have seemed incredible to Bess, remembering the night in 1910 when she had invited that shy but strangely self-confident young farmer into her living room on North Delaware St.

In those chauvinistic days, women reporters usually covered the First Lady's side of the White House. They had a separate organization, for which Mrs. Roosevelt had held weekly press conferences. Mother had already received a message from Mrs. Roosevelt, suggesting she continue this custom. It goes without saying that the newspaperwomen were extremely anxious for her to do so.

Mother said no. The squawks from the frustrated reporters were tremendous. But Mother stood her ground. She had no desire to compete in the public mind with Eleanor Roosevelt. This did not mean she had changed her mind about Eleanor Roosevelt. She remained an admirer of her energy and idealism. But Mother felt, quite rightly I think, that admiration did not necessarily require imitation. Bess Wallace Truman was determined to chart her own course as First Lady.

There was one subject that Harry Truman did not mention in his letters to Bess while attending the Potsdam Conference. Throughout the last weeks of July, he got a stream of reports from the test of the first atomic bomb in New Mexico. In the opening paragraphs of his letter summing up the conference, he made an oblique reference to it. He remarked that he had "an ace in the hole" if Stalin refused to reach an agreement. Obviously, Bess knew about the existence of the bomb. But it is also clear that Dad did not discuss with her the decision to drop it.

John Snyder, one of Dad's longtime associates, recalls that Bess was deeply disturbed by this new weapon. "What do you think of it?" she asked him. "Should we have dropped it?" John told her it was necessary to end the war and save American—and Japanese—lives. Bess accepted the explanation without comment. But she found herself wishing that Harry Truman had consulted her on this momentous decision. She was forced to face a very unpleasant fact. She had become a spectator rather than a partner in Harry Truman's Presidency.

That made her very angry. She felt more and more superfluous. This feeling combined with her original opposition to Harry Truman becoming President to build a smoldering anger that was tantamount to an emotional separation.

Around this time, Bess found herself embroiled in one of the nastiest political crossfires of the Truman Presidency. It started with her acceptance of an invitation from the Daughters of the American Revolution to a tea in her honor at Washington's Constitution Hall. The announcement of this forthcoming event raised the hackles of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of New York, a thoroughly unpleasant demagogue on race and anything else that could get him a little publicity. Powell announced that his wife, pianist Hazel Scott, had been refused permission to perform in Constitution Hall because of her color.

This stirred memories of an ugly incident in 1939, when the singer Marian Anderson had been barred from Constitution Hall by the DAR because of her race. Mrs. Roosevelt had resigned in protest from the DAR.

Representative Powell sent a telegram to Bess the day before the tea, urging her not to attend. He went out of his way to compare what she was doing to Eleanor Roosevelt's protest. "I can assure you," he wrote, "that no good will be accomplished by attending and much harm will be done. If you believe in 100 percent Americanism, you will publicly denounce the DAR's action."

Bess stood her ground. She was not a segregationist, but she was also not a crusader. She wired back that "the invitation . . . was extended prior to the unfortunate controversy which had arisen . . . In my opinion the acceptance of the hospitality is not related to the merits of the issue . . . I deplore any action which denies artistic talent an opportunity to express itself because of prejudice against race origin."

President Truman backed Bess up with a telegram of his own which reminded Mr. Powell that we had just won a war against totalitarian countries that made racial discrimination their state policy. He said that he despised such a philosophy, but in a free society neither he nor Mrs. Truman had the power to force a private organization to change its policy.

In his heart, Dad knew this telegram was a mistake. He was far more inclined to condemn the DAR. He was already formulating plans for one of the great breakthroughs against discrimination, the integration of the armed forces. But Bess had decided she was not going to let a Congressman tell her where she could have a cup of tea. She was still not quite able to accept the idea that she too was a public figure, as much as the President.

Acute homesickness makes no sense for a woman who had spent most of the previous 11 years in Washington. But Bess was suffering from the White House blues.

All these negative feelings came to a boil at the end of December 1945, when we went home for Christmas. Dad stayed in Washington waiting to hear from Secretary of State Byrnes, who was involved in heavy negotiations with the Russians in Moscow. He also decided, he told his mother, that he wanted to let the family have at least part of their holiday without a Presidential invasion. So he waited until Christmas Day to fly home. The weather was awful; every commercial plane in the nation was grounded. After waiting four hours, Dad ordered the Sacred Cow aloft. It was one of the wildest flights of his life.

The New York Times, The Washington Post and other guardians of the republic castigated the President for "taking chances with his personal safety." Bess' comments when he got to 219 North Delaware St. were not much more cordial. In the privacy of their bedroom, the conversation went something like this: "So you've finally arrived," Bess said. "I guess you couldn't think of any more reasons to stay away. As far as I'm concerned, you might as well have stayed in Washington."

On Dec. 28, 1945, Harry Truman sat down at his desk in the Oval Office and wrote Bess, who was still in Independence, one of his most important letters.

"Well I'm here in the White House, the great white sepulcher of ambitions and reputations. I feel like a last year's bird's nest which is on its second year. Not very often I admit I am not in shape. I think maybe that exasperates you, too, as a lot of other things I do and pretend to do exasperate you.

"You can never appreciate what it means to come home as I did the other evening after doing at least one hundred things I didn't want to do and have the only person in the world whose approval and good opinion I value look at me like I'm something the cat dragged in . . . I wonder why we are made so that what we really think and feel we cover up?"

With those latter words, Harry Truman was telling Bess that he had known since the day he became President eight months ago that this explosion was coming. Now at least her anger was out in the open and they could begin to deal with it, and the Presidency.

Twenty-seven years later, when Harry Truman died, this letter was found in his desk at the Truman Library. It is the only one of the 1600 surviving letters he wrote to Bess that he kept there.

HOW WHAT YOU EAT CAN...

Add Years To Your Life

WHILE WE doctors possess an ever-more-complex arsenal of high-tech procedures and wonder drugs, the real keys to health lie in the way you live your life from day to day. And No. 1 on the list is what you eat.

Indeed, physicians and researchers in many branches of medicine are now confirming what grandmothers have been telling us for generations: Eating right improves health, boosts energy and should extend life. Sophisticated scientific techniques are being employed to study how we can eat ourselves out of disease and into radiant, robust health.

You could call it a medical miracle.

The link between health and diet is clear. The choice is yours.

In my own practice, I have seen people—driven to disease and despair by a diet that is wrong for them—who have turned their lives around simply by controlling how, when and what they eat. Having seen the lesson repeated in more than 7000 patients, I know the same basic principles can work for anyone.

Research shows that adverse dietary factors are implicated in an ever-increasing list of diseases. The U.S. government recognized this officially in 1977, when the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition published its Dietary Goals for the United States. It proposed a diet with less cholesterol, less refined and processed sugars, less salt, less alcohol, fewer calories and more complex carbohydrates and roughage. Experts estimated that such a diet, if adopted nationwide, would result in an 80% reduction in obesity, a 25% decline in heart disease, a 50% drop or improvement in cases of diabetes and a 1% annual increase in longevity. Now, almost weekly, some new data is reported on the connection between diet and health. A sampling of this research reads like a Who's Who of medical science:

• Studies sponsored by the American Heart Association have long shown a clear link between the fats we eat and our likelihood of ending up on the operating table or suffering from heart attack, stroke and other cardiovascular problems—diseases that afflict more than 63 million Americans and kill more than any other single cause of death. In 1984, results of a 10-year National Institutes of Health study demonstrated a clear reduction in heart attack and heart disease rates in individuals who reduced their cholesterol levels. Yet more than 50% of middle-aged (45-65) Americans have cholesterol levels in the danger zone associated with heart disease.

• In February 1985, the National Institutes of Health held a conference on the health implications of obesity. Among the presentations was a report on a large group of patients who have been followed for more than 30 years (the Framingham study). The degree of obesity was clearly correlated with increased risk of coronary artery disease and a shorter life span—independent of other risk factors.

• At the same conference, data were presented from an American Cancer Society study of more than a million men and women. Obese men had a higher death rate from cancer of the colon, rectum and prostate. Obese women had higher death rates from cancer of the gallbladder, biliary passages, breast, uterus and ovaries.

• A study in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute looked at avoidable risks of cancer. Dietary factors were found to comprise the largest single category of modifiable risks—35% of all cancer deaths, the investigators suggested, might be related to diet. Changes in diet might allow a 90% reduction in deaths due to stomach and large bowel cancers, and a 50% reduction in deaths due to uterine and breast cancers.

• In 1985, the British medical journal Lancet reported on research showing that the risk of colon and rectal cancer decreased in proportion to dietary vitamin D and calcium. In the same year, investigators from Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, reporting in The New England Journal of Medicine, found that abnormal cell proliferation in the bowel could be inhibited by supplementary calcium.

• Diabetes has long been known to be affected by diet, and for years diabetics have been put on strict high-protein regimens. But studies in the United States and at England's Oxford University have shown that a diet high in complex carbohydrates (starchy fruits and vegetables, pasta, bread and potatoes) may actually be far more beneficial, stabilizing the need for insulin and, in some cases, making insulin unnecessary.

• A group of researchers from MIT, Harvard Medical School and Massachusetts General Hospital has been studying how the amino acids we consume as proteins can directly affect the brain chemicals that control mood and emotions. For example, tryptophan, used by the brain to make the important chemical serotonin, was found to facilitate sleep, causing drowsiness without affecting mood or impairing performance on simple tests. Tyrosine, an amino acid involved in synthesis of adrenalinelike substances, may be effective as a stimulant, may help in coping with acute stress and has been proposed as a treatment for depression. New evidence continues to appear that what we eat can affect our psychological health—and the chemical bases of these effects are becoming clearer. Dietary factors may be implicated in depression, anxiety, poor sleep and lack of concentration.

• Other studies (reported in Dr. Berger's Immune Power Diet) show how many elements in our food, including vitamins C, E, A and B_{12} and the minerals zinc and selenium, actually help strengthen the body's immune system.

Many of these findings, novel just a few years ago, are slowly becoming accepted wisdom. Almost every American knows that too much salt in the diet increases blood pressure and kidney problems, and that dietary fiber is important to help prevent bowel cancer. Other findings are less well known, such as that foods high in vitamin A play a role in protecting us against lung cancer.

If you are like most Americans, you eat an average of 5.3 times a day, counting snacks and meals. That means that nearly 2000 times a year you give your body the raw materials it needs to rebuild itself and keep you going. Whether your idea of a perfect lunch is a char-broiled burger and fries or a tofu salad with bean sprouts, each mouthful you take gives your body a little nudge—toward fitness or fat, health or disease. Because you are "dosing" yourself with food day after day, year after year, what you eat adds up to the largest single influence on your body's well-being.

Ideally, we can use food to bring ourselves into truly optimum health—as opposed to the mere absence of disease. Sometimes dramatically better health is simply a question of removing foods to which the body is highly sensitive. That's what happened to one of my patients.

Although only 21, Jill had the health of a frail 80-year-old. "I'm constantly sick," she told me. "I'm always getting colds, and they last for weeks." Her constant infections and inability to shake them off weren't her only problems. She suffered from diarrhea, nausea, stomachaches, severe headaches and constant fatigue. This pattern had lasted for two years. She was so debilitated that it

How a Stop in a German Shoe Store Ended a Lifetime of Foot Pain...

"We were in Germany on the very first day of our vacation but my feet were killing me already. I thought a pair of more comfortable shoes might help and I fell in love with a pair in a shoe store in Wiesbaden, Germany.

But when I tried them on, they hurt too. I explained my problem of sore aching feet to a friendly clerk and she pointed to a counter display and said, maybe I needed a pair of special Leather Insoles.

I took her advice and was I glad I did . . . the instant I slipped them into my shoes, my foot pain vanished! I've worn them ever since and my painful foot problems are a thing of the past."

Over the last 15 years more than 8,000,000 pairs of these Leather Insoles have been sold in German shoe stores. They've relieved all types of foot problems for folks of all ages and if your feet are killing you, we urge you to try them.

We brought them to America and call them Luxis Leather Insoles. Wear them for 30 days. If at the end of that time you're not completely delighted, just return them for a prompt, no-questions-asked refund. What could be fairer?

was questionable whether she could finish her studies at junior college.

When I talked with her, it was clear that her diet was a low priority. She ate whatever was around, whether it was nutritious or not. Her symptoms were some of the classic manifestations of severe, hidden food allergy.

Blood tests showed strong reactions to several of the most common allergy-producing foods, including wheat and dairy products. Together, we designed a program to help her eliminate these troublesome foods and build in an adequate range of essential nutrients.

Two months later, it was hard to believe that the same young woman was sitting in my office. She looked wonderful; her troubling symptoms had clearly begun to resolve. Over the next two months, we slowly reintroduced into her diet some of the common foods that had made her sick, such as wheat—but now in a rotating, diversified diet that forestalled hypersensitivity reactions. By summer, she felt well enough to work as a counselor at a children's camp. Today, a year later, she has finished school and works as a teacher's aide. "You know," she says, "this is the first time since I was a child that I've felt this strong. And although I'm around children all the time and am constantly exposed to colds, I rarely get them."

You can increase the odds that you will lead a long, healthy and energetic life. You make the choices every day: Instead of dining on char-broiled steak, which may have the cancer-causing potential of several cigarettes, you can eat a salad high in vitamins and minerals that actually helps your body fight off tumors. Instead of subsisting on processed and artificialized foods, you can eat fresh vegetables and fruits that provide fiber to keep your digestive system working efficiently. Rather than loading your diet with fats and salt that clog your arteries and raise your blood pressure, you can choose to eat sanely and take yourself off the cardiac risk list.

That's why the food-health connection is a "medical miracle." Is there any other term for something that we ourselves can do and control, that costs little and is guaranteed to pay off in a better, healthier life? As hundreds of my patients have told me, once you have experienced the buoyancy, energy and strength that comes with good nutrition, you will feel as though you had been living under a cloud all the years before.

And the better you eat, the longer you can expect to be around to do so. People who take a nutritive approach to disease prevention, the evidence strongly suggests, can actually add years to their lives. Now—doesn't that sound like a medical miracle?

"Dr. Berger's Immune Power Diet" has just been released in paperback (Signet).

What would happen if mothers quit work and stayed home, as some experts say they should? Working Mother asked Harvard political economist Robert B. Reich. He imagines himself in 1996—10 years after a mass return to full-time motherhood—and looks back at the decade: Fast-food restaurants and child-care centers have virtually disappeared; psychologists are blaming women for smothering their children and envisioning dire consequences to the economy and society if mothers continue to stay home full-time.

Forgoing science fiction, financial expert Jane Bryant Quinn observes in the same April issue that if all moms working as nurses and teachers quit, 75% of hospital patients would die and a generation of children would grow up ignorant.

MOVIES

Take a young man desperate for his father's affection and hot for easy money. Take a father into burglary and smuggling and capable of turning viciously on his own sons to save his skin. You've set the stage for At Close Range, based on a true story. Less a crime drama than a character study, it stars Sean and Christopher Penn (real-life brothers) and Christopher Walken. Coming April 11 from Orion.

TELEVISION

Hepburn gets her man.

When an aristocratic widow in her 70s falls in love with her doctor—who's not only considerably younger but also of another faith—their grown children have a fit. But would you want to bet that a character played by Katharine Hepburn won't get her way? Sentimental? Sure. But the life-affirming, we-are-all-one-people message that the story ultimately delivers is lovely. Harold Gould (remember him as Rhoda's father?) plays the doctor in Mrs. Delafield Wants to Marry, on CBS tonight, 9-11 p.m. EST.

MUSIC

One of the year's most talked-about classical records is certain to be CBS Masterworks' release of Chopin's Preludes as played by a young Soviet pianist named Vladimir Feltsman. What makes it so unusual is the site where it was recorded—the U.S. ambassador's residence in Moscow.

That is one of the few places in the world where this gifted musician has been able to appear in recent years. An international competition winner at 15, Feltsman was leading an outstandingly successful career in the USSR until 1979, when he and his wife, Anna, a biologist, applied for exit visas to emigrate to Israel.

Almost instantly, the authorities canceled his concert dates and removed his recordings from all stores. Subsequently he was permitted to play in a few small towns in Siberia and other remote areas, but never in major cities. However, U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman invited Feltsman to his residence in 1984 for a private recital. Microphones were discreetly placed around, and this new record gives Westerners their first chance to hear the artistry of a brilliant and sensitive pianist who is a virtual non-person in his own land.

HOKY!

The Little Sweeper that does a Big Job!

EASY TO CLEAN: Pull litter cassette straight back. Empty and replace. Hands never touch the dirt. HOKY can be wiped clean with damp cloth or washed in soap-and-water.

EASY TO MAINTAIN: Press white tabs (midway between front and back wheels) to release patented pop-up brush. Brush may be combed or washed. Rinse, air dry, and replace in sweeper.

Here's the amazing little sweeper virtually every household needs. Perfect for taking care of those little clean-up chores that occur all day long—it's the "mini-sweeper with muscle" that is ideal as a second sweeper. Now there's no need to drag out that heavy, unwieldy electric vacuum for a few crumbs, hairs or ashes. The light weight, portable Hoky is always ready to "eat-up" debris and litter quickly, designed to perform on hard floors as well as carpets with surprising efficiency.

GREAT FEATURES FOR A GREAT PRICE!

HOKY's rugged construction will give you many years of service. Just look at some of the outstanding features . . . a generous litter compartment that pops out for emptying—hands never touch the dirt; impact bumper guard to protect furniture; rubber wheels for greater cleaning traction; a snap-up removable boars head brush that can be combed, cleaned or washed, with a hang up handle. And, believe it or not, HOKY weighs less than a pound! There's virtually no maintenance needed, just wipe with a damp cloth to clean.

Save time and wear and tear on your back—order one today, you'll wonder how you got along without it! Makes a sensational gift. They'll really thank you for this one!

GENUINE PORCELAIN Collectible Dolls

Collectible dolls is one of the fastest growing hobbies in the United States. Fine, imported examples of the dollcrafter's art, created early in the 1900's, have been sold at auction for thousands of dollars. Imagine the excitement of finding one of these "heirloom children" packed away in your grandmother's hopechest trunk!

HANDCRAFTED PORCELAIN

Our Hopechest Heirloom™ Dolls are crafted in the tradition of fashionable European dollmakers. These examples of their art are handcrafted by skilled artisans and brought to you at a fraction of what you would expect to pay for them. Each of our 10½" twins is painstakingly hand painted with meticulous attention to detail. Their fine costumes are complete down to the smallest pearl button on the boy's vest and likelife applique on his sister's garment. Capturing the look of an heirloom collectible, the head, hands and feet of each twin are molded of porcelain and hand painted to compliment the color of their hand styled hair.

BOTH ONLY $28.50!

You might expect to pay up to one hundred dollars for a pair of dolls of this quality. However, to introduce us to the new collector, Hopechest Heirloom™ is making available this set of twins for only $28.50. We will accept a maximum of two orders from each household—one for your own family heirloom and one to start a friend on their collection. But please hurry as we will fill orders on an as received basis and don't want to disappoint anyone. Order today!

AMERICAN FAMILY GUARANTEE

If you are dissatisfied with your purchase in any way, you may return it for a prompt and full refund. All orders are processed promptly and notification will be sent in case of delay. Shipment is guaranteed within 60 days. Credit card orders are subject to credit approval.

TO ORDER: Send your name, address, zip code and check or money order for $28.50 plus $4.00 postage and handling to AMERICAN FAMILY, Dept. JJ00-PB, Box 4165, Huntington Station, NY 11746. (U.S. currency only). NY and NJ residents add appropriate sales tax.

BRIGHT IDEAS TO MAKE LIFE BETTER

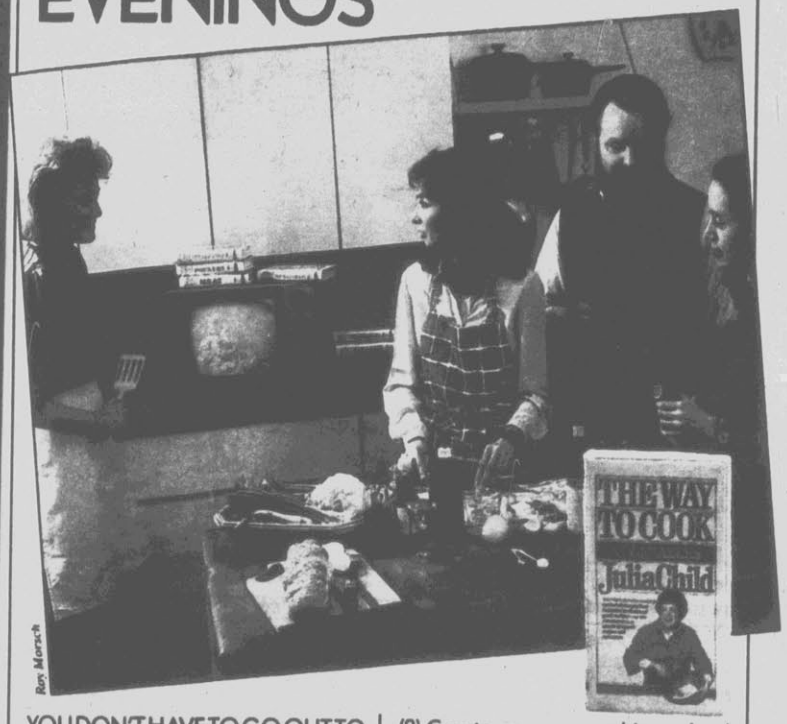
BY JANE CIABATTARI

POPPING HEALTHY

NEXT TIME YOU MAKE popcorn, instead of salt, substitute chili powder, cinnamon or another favorite spice, or a sprinkle of Parmesan. For a fat-free version of this high-fiber, low-calorie treat, use a forced-air popper and skip the butter or oil. (One cup of popcorn made this way is only 25 calories.)

THREE ENTERTAINING EVENINGS

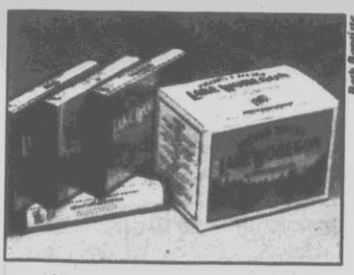
Turn your own kitchen into a cooking school with the new videocassettes from chefs like Julia Child.



Ron Morsch

YOU DON'T HAVE TO GO OUT TO have a good time. Gather family and friends for activities like these:

(1) Read aloud. Try Marc Gallant's More Fun with Dick and Jane (Penguin, $5.95), a parody of the primer used since the 1930s, or James Thurber's classic The Night the Bed Fell, or a one-act play with parts for everyone.



Beth Bagshaw

(2) Listen to small-town storyteller Garrison Keillor, the host of American Public Radio's A Prairie Home Companion on Saturday evenings. If you can't wait for his weekly shows, look for his audiocassettes, News From Lake Wobegon (four cassettes, $30) and Gospel Birds (two cassettes, $16) at B. Dalton or Waldenbooks. Or order from the Wireless Catalog, Minnesota Public Radio, 333 Sibley St., Suite 626, St. Paul, Minn. 55101 (add $2.25 for postage and handling).

(3) Create your own cooking school at home. Begin with Julia Child's six-cassette set, which includes hour-long videos on these basics: Poultry, Meats, First Courses & Desserts, Fish & Eggs, Vegetables and Soups, Salads & Bread (Alfred A. Knopf, $29.95 per tape).

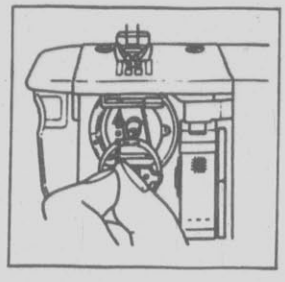
DO YOU OWN A SEWING MACHINE?

This handy, practical guide picks up where your sewing machine manual leaves off and shows you how to get the best performance possible from your sewing machine . . . whether it's one of the newest electronic models or a dependable old machine from your grandmother.

THE SEWING MACHINE HANDBOOK helps your sewing start off on the right foot and stay trouble-free. You'll learn how all types of machines (from straight-stitch and basic zigzag to semi-automatic and even computerized) operate—in plain, non-technical language. Then, clear, step-by-step instructions guide you through what to check before sewing . . . selecting the right needle (size and type) for the particular job . . . matching thread to fabric . . . properly setting stitch and pressure regulators . . . ensuring that your bobbin is threaded and wound correctly—procedures that apply to any sewing machine. Plus, a chapter on special-purpose feet and attachments helps you get even more from your machine . . . sewing zippers, gathering, embroidery, making buttonholes, darning.

SEW HANDY, SEW EASY!

The author, a sewing machine technician with more than 30 years of experience, shows you how to take care of your machine and how you yourself may easily solve many of the minor, but frustrating, problems that can crop up, instead of having an expensive service call. A handy, quick reference guide to common sewing faults tells you at a glance the steps necessary to correct each . . . from missed or uneven stitches to needles or threads breaking, or fabric puckering . . . as well as a section on special problems you might encounter while shirring (or gathering) or with free-hand embroidery.



This is a book that anyone who has a sewing machine will want to keep next to it always. So get all you can from your sewing machine. Order THE SEWING MACHINE HANDBOOK today!

Grow Your Own ALOE

MANY SKIN CREAMS, suntan lotions and moisturizers contain soothing aloe vera juice. You can grow this hardy plant in a pot in a sunny window indoors or outdoors in mild climates. "Use a fast-draining potting soil so it won't rot, and don't overwater," cautions Rosalind Creasy, author of Earthly Delights (Sierra Club Books). "Keep it in full sun and fertilize lightly if it's not thriving." Use aloe as first aid for scrapes, burns, skin irritations and cuts by breaking open a leaf so the juice drips out.

U.S. Diplomat—A Dangerous Job

UPI/Bettmann

Donna Giglietti

Pictorial Parade

UPI/Bettmann

AP/Wide World

Prompted by murders of U.S. ambassadors Mein (top, l), Noel (l), Meloy (top, r) and Dubs (r), our Foreign Service now sends employees—like the woman shown here—to seminars on self-defense

There was a time not too long ago when a job as a U.S. Foreign Service officer signified a position of diplomacy, genteelness, respect and security. Today, in a world of ever-mounting terrorism, the position of U.S. diplomat spells danger with a capital "D," especially in the Middle East and Latin America.

Since 1960, more than 65 American diplomats have been killed or wounded abroad. And since 1968, five U.S. ambassadors have been murdered: John G. Mein in Guatemala, Cleo Noel Jr. in Sudan, Rodger Davies in Cyprus, Francis Meloy Jr. in Lebanon and Adolph Dubs in Afghanistan.

The risks and hazards facing our 6000 Foreign Service employees are multiplying so rapidly that Secretary of State George Shultz recently asked Congress to OK a $4.4 billion anti-terrorist improvement program at our embassies.

Where once we relied upon host governments to provide our Foreign Service officers and their families with basic protection, we no longer do; we've seen what's happened to them in Iran, Pakistan, Peru and elsewhere.

Where once our diplomats were taught the social graces and the protocol proper for their positions, they now are taught before leaving this country how to avoid kidnappings, how to fire guns, how to search cars for explosives, how to use their fists, how to survive when taken hostage, how to avoid surveillance and how to vary daily routines. When they arrive at their overseas posts, they undergo a "post specific seminar" in which the local terrorist tactics are pinpointed and explained.

Although U.S Foreign Service positions in several sites have come to be regarded as some of the world's most dangerous jobs, that does not seem to discourage recruitment. Frank Mathews of the State Department's Bureau for Diplomatic Security says, "We had about 28,000 applicants last year—the most we've ever had—for 250 openings."

Foreign Service officers assigned to what are known as "danger-pay posts" receive a 25% bonus plus their regular monthly salary. That bonus is paid to personnel at our embassies in Bogota, Colombia; Kampala, Uganda; Beirut, Lebanon; San Salvador, El Salvador; and Kabul, Afghanistan.

College Costs

As we go to press, five of the nation's most prestigious private universities have just announced their undergraduate tuition, room and board fees for the 1986-87 school year, and another five are preparing to do so.

The fees for the 1985-86 school year at the 10 institutions represented an average increase of nearly 7.5% over the previous year. The announced increases for 1986-87 are a little less—an average of 7%. If you plan this fall to enter any of these 10 schools, the figures here will give you a good idea of what your freshman year will cost without books, clothes and extras.

School	1986-87 tuition, room, board
MIT	$16,296*
Harvard	16,168*
Yale	16,040
Dartmouth	16,040
Princeton	15,940
Brown	15,911
Columbia	15,909*
Stanford	15,908
U. of Pennsylvania	15,873*
Northwestern	15,103*

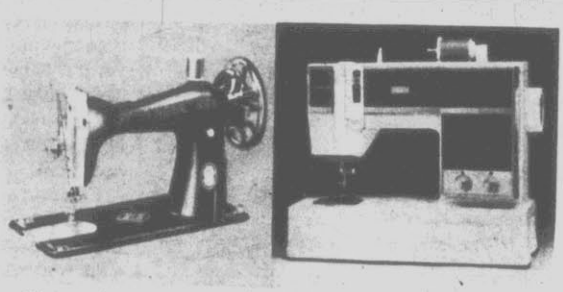
Queen Hitting 60

Elizabeth II: Still loved by Brits

Queen Elizabeth II, wealthiest royal in Great Britain (her fortune is estimated at $3.5 billion), will turn 60 on April 21. Between now and then, a spate of books and articles on her 34-year reign and 38-year marriage to Prince Philip will be offered to the public. The truth about the Queen is that she is no big brain, but her people love and respect her. Riding is her favorite relaxation, and horses are her pet subject.

SINGER SEWING. THAT'S THE WAY IT WAS. THAT'S THE WAY IT IS. THAT'S THE WAY IT WILL BE.



Singer has never been content to rest on its laurels. Which is why our 135-year history is so filled with innovations. Such as the first electric sewing machine. And, more recently, the first electronic sewing machine. In the past year, we have introduced an entire line of state-of-the-art sewing machines that we proudly call the Singer Miracle Machines. And that includes a model for every skill level and sewing need.

What makes them so miraculous? The fact that many feature even more Singer firsts. Such as six-second threading, sideways sewing, unlimited stitch capability. As well as the ability to monogram intricate designs automatically.

Besides state-of-the-art sewing machines for the home, we also make robotic sewing systems for industry. Which shouldn't be at all surprising given Singer's technologically-advanced electronic capabilities.

All things considered, you might say Singer sewing is entering a new and exciting era.

Like to see our Singer Miracle Machines? Visit your Singer retailer today. Once you do, you'll see why Singer is also the number one name for value, quality and service.

Which all adds up to a commitment to provide the finest sewing machines in the world.

SINGER

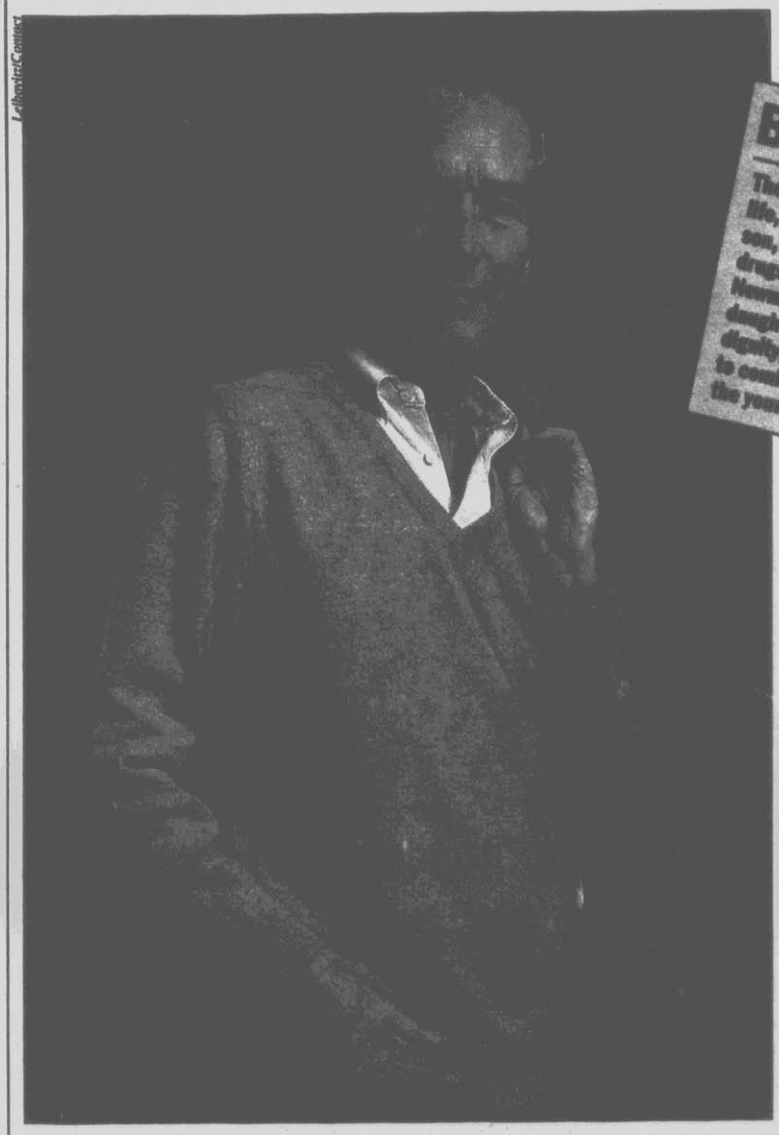
IN STEP WITH: Paul Newman



Lebrecht/Contact

BRADY'S BITS

There's a dark side to everyone's life, even Paul Newman's. His son, Scott, died of booze and drugs in 1978. Ever since, the Newmans—husband, wife and daughter Susan—with a quiet dignity, have been raising money to combat addiction among the young.

In The Hustler, he played a young pool shark out to fleece Jackie Gleason as "Minnesota Fats." Newman is finishing a sequel. This time he's the old-timer. I expect the older generation to win again.

YES, PAUL NEWMAN'S EYES REALLY are as blue as they look on a movie screen.

He is 61 years old, he drinks a little beer, but when we got together a few months ago to talk about his latest projects, only the graying, short-cropped hair suggested that, like all of us, Newman is getting older.

He exploded into our consciousness just 30 years ago, playing Rocky Graziano in a film about the prizefighter called Somebody Up There Likes Me. You have the sense that Newman never apprenticed; that one day he was unknown, the next he was a movie star.

The Hustler, Cool Hand Luke, The Sting, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, Absence of Malice, Hud, a dozen others. If he has made a stinker, it doesn't come nimbly to mind.

He lives in Manhattan and weekends up in Westport, Conn., with his wife, the actress Joanne Woodward. One of his neighbors and closest friends is A.E. Hotchner, the old drinking pal and biographer of Ernest Hemingway, and you suspect Papa would have liked Newman too, the way he liked Gary Cooper, another outdoorsy sportsman, in the cliché, "a man's man."

Hotchner and Newman have a little business: They make salad dressing and spaghetti sauce and popcorn. This is not precisely what movie stars are supposed to do in their spare time. Newman doesn't seem to care. He and Hotch whip up the stuff in the kitchen, professionals reproduce and market it, and the profits go to an assortment of charities. Newman has another hobby. He drives automobiles very fast.

You are not supposed to be driving in car races in your 60s, but he does. Last fall, at age 60, Paul won a national sports car race in Georgia. Another driver said of Newman's early races, "He crashed a lot." Now he has 50 first-place finishes.

I've interviewed him a couple of times, up in Connecticut and in Manhattan. He is courteous but distant. Getting him to yawn is a minor triumph. He knows he has to give interviews, but they bore him. I mentioned this to Hotchner. "Hell," he said, "we should have given him a beer first."

I'd heard all about Newman's love of beer. There are jocks in light beer commercials on television who spend less time with six-packs. I wondered if it were just talk, but then one evening at a private film screening, he and his wife slipped in late and took seats in the back row. Newman was carrying a six-pack. By the time the movie was over, all six cans were empty. I am sure Papa Hemingway would have enjoyed this guy.

BORN: Jan. 26, 1925, in Cleveland.
PERSONAL: Married Jacqueline Witte in 1949; one son (deceased), two daughters. Married Joanne Woodward in 1958; three daughters.
BROADWAY: Picnic (1953), Desperate Hours (1955), Sweet Bird of Youth (1959), Baby Want a Kiss (1964).
OSCAR NOMINATIONS: Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, 1958; The Hustler, 1961; Hud, 1963; Cool Hand Luke, 1967; Absence of Malice, 1981; The Verdict, 1982.

SPRING FLOWER IS A PUZZLER

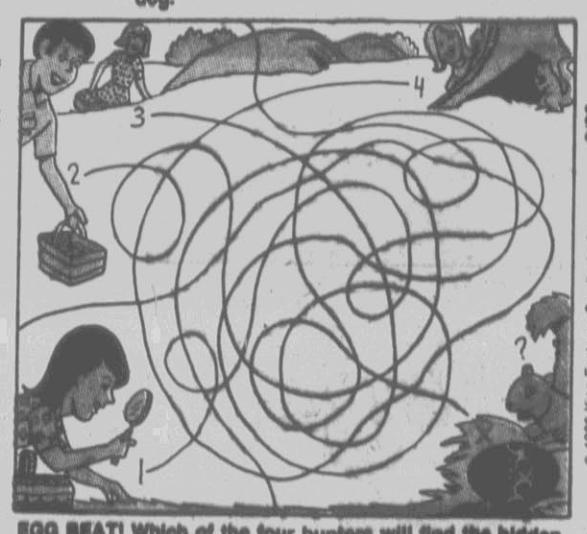
Spring reminds us of flowers, of course. Thinking of the right spring flower will solve this adaptation of a classic enigma:

My first is in cook, but not in bake.
My second's in real, but not in fake.
My third's in oak, but not in tree.
My fourth's in coffee, not in tea.
My fifth's in utensil, not in knife.
My sixth's in spouse, but not in wife.

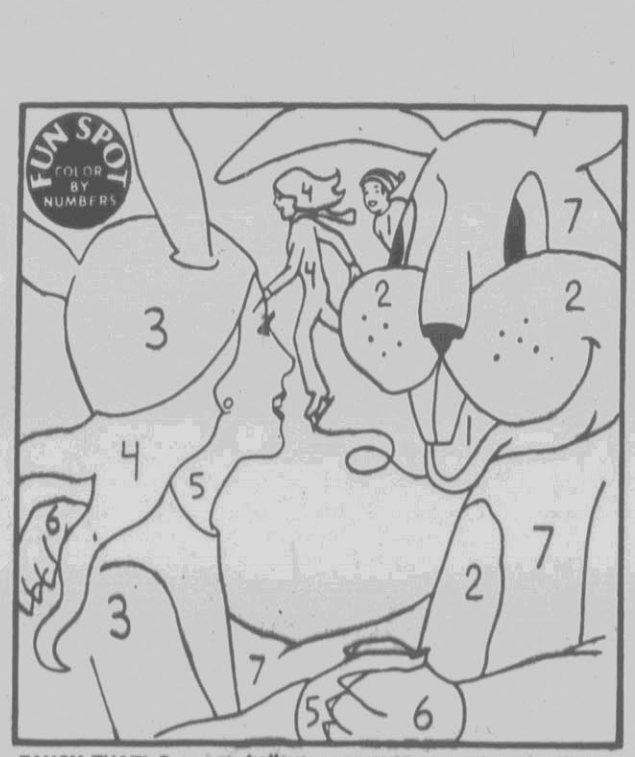
What flower am I?

Clue: I begin with the letter C.

I am a crocus.



EGG BEAT! Which of the four hunters will find the hidden egg? Trace through tangled paths to find out.



FANCY THAT! Can you believe your eyes — seeing the Easter bunny on skates! Add these colors: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh tones. 6—Grey. 7—Pink.
