Shultz: Private Diplomacy Needed For Progress

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today said that only private diplomacy — not public proposals for summit meetings — will break the stalemate in U.S.-Soviet arms control talks.

"If we're going to get into genuinely serious discussions of the many difficult and important issues involved, we're going to have to sit down opposite Soviet leaders and talk carefully, thoughtfully and quietly about them so that you have a real interchange," Shultz said on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Shultz cited a speech this weekend by Mikhail S. Gorbachev in which the Soviet leader proposed a meeting with President Reagan in Europe to negotiate a ban on all nuclear weapons test.

"To make a proposal for a major meeting between the president of the United States and the general secretary of the Soviet Union, to make it on television with no previous warning or anything, is to simply put it into the public domain and not have it explored carefully."

Shultz, who returned Sunday from a 10-day trip to France, Turkey, Greece and Italy, declined today to answer a question about whether U.S.-Soviet relations had worsened in recent months, although he said, "The atmosphere is not what it ought to be."

Meanwhile, two leading congressional Democrats took a critical view of U.S. policy on nuclear weapons, while Pravda, the Soviet Communist Party daily newspaper, accused the Reagan administration of "dispelling the spirit of Geneva" with regional disputes.

Shultz told reporters Sunday that private diplomacy produced the "fireside summit" Reagan and Gorbachev held in the Swiss city last November. There, they agreed to a "new start" in trying to curb the nuclear weapons race and in dealing with U.S.-Soviet disputes.

But, Shultz said, "It's probably a measure of the lack of progress recently that all the actions are through press statements, publicly rather than privately."

To illustrate his point, Shultz cited what happened when he met Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov in Stockholm after the funeral of the Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme in early March.

Revenge Attacks On U.S. Interests In Italy Reported

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The Libyan capital's sole daily newspaper claimed that "revenge operations" against American targets had begun in Italy, but an American diplomat in Rome denied knowledge of any attacks.

Under its Sunday headline, Tripoli's Arabic-language newspaper al-Fajer al-Jadid quoted from what it described as an Italian news agency dispatch reporting assaults on American interests in Italy.

The dispatch was quoted as reporting an attack on an American military officer in northern Italy and the burning of two cars belonging to U.S. personnel stationed in the NATO-member nation.

The Tripoli newspaper did not identify the Italian news organization said to have written the dispatch, and the article did not elaborate on the alleged attacks or specify whether they were committed by Libyan agents.

(A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Rome, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press on Sunday he knew of no such "revenge operations" against U.S. targets.)

"We haven't heard anything about that down here," the spokesman said.

(In Rome, the Italian news agency ANSA said a car was set afire Saturday night in Florence in northern Italy, but that it was believed linked to a

Motorists Urged To Take Alternate Routes To Miss Road Construction

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Road construction at the intersection of Charles Boulevard and Red Banks Road has slowed traffic in the area during peak hours, but highway officials say while they try to improve conditions, drivers can help, too.

"People realize that we're working now. If they can take an alternate route during peak traffic time, they should," said Wayne Nottingham, resident engineer for the N.C.

Department of Transportation. "If they can't find an alternate route then we ask that they just be patient with us."

While Nottingham says the delays may be an inconvenience, the work, which was initiated in February and should be completed by fall, is designed to widen Charles Boulevard to ease the traffic flow.

"There was a lot of traffic out there to begin with," he said. "That's why we started the project."

In an effort to alleviate the problems created at about 5 p.m. when people return home from work, officials say they have made a deal with the contractors.

"The problem is that they have to put in pipes and when they do that they have to narrow things down to a single-lane road," said Tom Tysinger, director of engineering and inspection for the city of Greenville. "It only really poses a problem during increased traffic volume, so we've asked the contractors not to do that when it poses a problem."

Meanwhile, police say the construction has caused delays, but no other traffic problems.

"The delays are expected. People getting out of work add to the situation," said Patrol Sgt. Matthew Cleary of the Greenville Police Department. "There haven't been any major problems."

Cleary said the police and flagmen are working together to keep cars moving.

Oil Prices Dip

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices dropped below $11 a barrel today, the lowest level in eight years, intensifying a plunge caused by oversupply and the failure of producers to cooperate in restraining output.

"The bottom line is, traders don't see anything to hold back prices from falling. There's just too much oil out there," said Peter Beutel, an analyst with Rudolf Wolf Futures Inc., a New York commodities futures firm.

Contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, were selling for $10.70 a 42-gallon barrel in late morning trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The same contract closed Friday at $11.44 a barrel.

It was the lowest level since 1978, when refiners were paying an average $10.61 a barrel for domestic crude oil. Only last November, oil was selling for $30 a barrel.

Exchange spokeswoman Mary Ann Matlock said it was the first time that crude oil prices have traded below $11 in the three years that contracts have been sold on the exchange.

Because London markets remain closed for the Easter holiday, Beutel said, traders had nothing to counter negative feelings that had been building up over last week.

He said there was some restraint in selling when the confrontation erupted between United States and Libya last week, until it became evident that the incident was not going to escalate significantly.

Veterans Prepare Petition

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, who heard Easter prayers on his behalf from fellow worshippers, was to receive a petition from a group of veterans who say his policies to fight communism in Central America are leading the United States toward war.

The president and first lady Nancy Reagan attended church Sunday at the Santa Ynez Valley Presbyterian Church near the presidential ranch. At the service, the Rev. Jeffrey L. Cotter led a prayer for divine guidance for the chief executive "in the decisions he has to make."

Shortly after the service ended, members of a veterans' group organized by the Santa Barbara Peace Resource Center began gathering at Refugio State Park, a few miles from the Reagan ranch, in preparation for a march to the gate today.

Eduardo Cohen, a leader of the group, said about 100 veterans were expected to march up a steep, winding paved road to present a petition at the gate.

The group did the same thing last August, but Cohen said they did not receive a response to their petition. He said they were sending a telegram to Reagan this time requesting a meeting with him.

"These veterans feel that the president is ignoring efforts of Latin American allies to seek peaceful solutions to the conflict in Central America, and that he is pursuing military options that will create the conditions in which a combat role for U.S. troops and pilots is predictable and inevitable," a statement issued by the veterans said.

Reagan is seeking $100 million from Congress to assist rebels fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua. The Senate approved the package last week, but the president needs reversal of an earlier vote against it in the House.

On Saturday, Reagan said through spokesman that he had taken note of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's speech in Moscow in which Gorbachev proposed the two superpower leaders meet in Europe to discuss bringing nuclear weapons tests to an end.

But the White House statement countered that the Soviets should accept Reagan's "longstanding proposal that we have our experts meet" on the issue.

On another matter, Reagan has backed recommendations by an administration task force on liability insurance, and plans to announce this week that he will submit the legislation to Congress, according to a published report.

Among the recommendations Reagan endorsed were a $100,000 cap on non-economic jury awards for pain and suffering and reductions in attorneys' fees of 50 percent or more, today's editions of The Washington Post quoted White House officials as saying.

FIRE DAMAGES CHURCH — Volunteers repack hose onto a fire truck after firemen put out a fire that caused heavy damage Sunday to an educational wing at Red Oak Christian Church. Although the fire was confined to one

Red Oak Church Damaged By Fire

A Sunday morning fire caused heavy damage to one wing of the Red Oak Christian Church, located on the U.S. 264 By-pass near the intersection of U.S. 264 Business, west of Greenville.

Pitt County Emergency Services Coordinator Bobby Joyner said although the fire, reported about 9 a.m., was confined to one room of an educational wing, heavy smoke, heat and water damage resulted to the entire wing. He estimated the damage at $50,000.

Joyner, who said this morning that the cause of the fire has not been determined, said the fire started in a classroom at the rear of the building that was equipped with a kitchenette.

"They had a sunrise service in the church. People were still there and someone saw the smoke and reported the fire," Joyner said.

Firefighting units from Red Oak, Bell Arthur and Eastern Pines departments responded to the scene, according to Joyner, who said the

Woman Worked Her Way Off The Welfare Rolls

By GEORGE ESPER

AP Special Correspondent
ANDOVER, Mass. (AP) — Nearly two years ago, life was bleak for Lisa Lisio. She was 19 and a pregnant high school dropout on welfare. She broke up with her boyfriend before their child was born.

"I really didn't feel good about myself," she recalled. "I didn't think I could do anything. Sometimes things really got bad and ... I'd just lock myself in the bedroom."

Today, instead of sitting around the house watching television and waiting for monthly welfare benefits of $328, Ms. Lisio earns more than $1,000 a month as a sheet metal worker.

"For the first time in my life, I'm actually proud of myself," she said. In the past year, Ms. Lisio earned her high school graduate equivalency diploma and went through a four-month, state-financed training program.

A week after she finished training Jan. 16, and two weeks after her 21st birthday, she began work at the Kenrick & Hall Corp. here as a welder and sheet metal assembler.

"I'm hoping to give my daughter the life that I would like her to have and not to have to grow up being on welfare," Ms. Lisio said as she munched on a deviled ham sandwich during her lunch break. She recalled that her family had been on welfare when she was 13.

Ms. Lisio is one of more than 23,000 welfare recipients who Massachusetts officials say have obtained full- or part-time jobs under the state's 2½-year-old Employment and Training program.

Tom Connors, president of the Lare Training Center, where Ms. Lisio was trained, said the center taught welding, electronics and clerical work to about 85 welfare recipients a year. About 10 percent drop out, he said, and about 80 percent of its graduates are placed in jobs.

After dropping out of high school in September 1983, Ms. Lisio worked as a nurse's aide in a nursing home, as a clerk in a dry cleaning shop and, in her last job, as a cook in a restaurant.

"I left there because I was pregnant," said Ms. Lisio, whose daughter, Jessica Ann, was born Sept. 20, 1984. "I had to go on welfare."

She joined the training program on her own initiative, alerted by welfare department posters and mailed notices. She chose welding, she said, because it was non-traditional and because she wasn't good at the other subjects offered, especially office tasks.

But doubts still nagged.

"There was one point where I didn't think I could do it," she said. A friend encouraged her.

"He told me how well I was doing and gave me a lot of approval that I needed," she said. "I pushed myself through it. I finally decided I was really doing something and it was really working out. ... I was actually going into it with a negative attitude, and he turned it to a positive attitude."

Ms. Lisio is the only woman among a dozen employees at Kenrick & Hall.

"She's very cooperative and learns very easily," said Tom Cargill, the shop foreman. "She's conscientious, steady and enjoys her work."

Ms. Lisio is up at 5 a.m. to get her daughter ready for the day-care center. Then she's off to her 7:30-4 shift.

"It feels much better," she said. "I don't have anybody else supporting me. I have time away from my daughter. She's with other kids. She's not growing up by herself with me alone."

She and Jessica Ann have been living with Ms. Lisio's parents in Lawrence, paying them $200 a month for room and board. But she hopes to buy a car and rent an apartment as soon as she saves enough money.

"Eventually, I hope to own a home," she said. "My daughter can have her own yard to play in."

But for the moment, it's enough just to be working.

"I mean, you have these people who always complain that they're taxpayers and they're paying for people on welfare. I don't like it as much as they don't like it."

CAPPING FRONT TEETH

If you'd like to improve the appearance of your front teeth because they are chipped, stained or have old-looking fillings, ask your dentist if he would recommend capping. Your front teeth are the first thing people see when you open your mouth to talk or smile. You want them to look as attractive as possible. If the teeth are in good alignment and your gums are healthy, your dentist may suggest two alternatives for capping the teeth in which porcelain will be used. One is veneer bonding; the other is porcelain-fused-to-metal crowns.

Both have advantages, but your dentist's recommendation will depend on the condition of your teeth. Capping your front teeth with porcelain-fused-to-metal has the advantage of strength as well as pleasing appearance. Veneer bonding will give your teeth a natural look, will cover old stained fillings, but will not be as long lasting. They will consume less chair time and therefore be more affordable.

Call my office today for an appointment. Let me show you how to feel good about smiling.

Alaska's Dogsleds Come With Four-Wheel Drive

DEAR ABBY: I was astonished by your reply to "Annoyed Canadian." It is apparent that many people have misconceptions about Alaska.

As congressman for all Alaska, I can assure you that we, too, have "beautiful summers, dress like most Americans (we are Americans), and live in houses just like you do." While some in the "bush" or outlying areas may use dogsleds for travel, most people in Alaska use cars, planes and boats as do those in the "lower 48."

I've enclosed a travel guide to give you a better idea of what our state is like. Better yet, do come to the Great Land and see for yourself. Best regards,

DON YOUNG, CONGRESSMAN FOR ALL ALASKA

DEAR REP. YOUNG: Thank you for your gracious letter. I don't know where my head was when I told a reader that he must have been thinking of Alaska when he mistakenly assumed that all Canadians lived in igloos, traveled by dogsled and dressed like lumberjacks.

I know that you have beautiful warm summers, and I was also aware that your annual dogsled races had been recently canceled, due to "no snow."

Please forgive my colossal goof. I really knew better.

However, my Alaskan gaffe brought me an unexpected bonus. Robert Atwood, editor and publisher of The Anchorage Times, invited me to Anchorage to see the truth firsthand.

I also received the following editorial from the Juneau Empire:

DEAR ABBY: I would have written you sooner, but I didn't get my newspaper until just today. Three different kids tried to deliver papers this week, but they all got ate up by polar bears. The fourth kid finally made it through to my igloo by riding on a moose, and then the moose yelled "Timber!" and chopped up those polar bears with a chain saw.

Abby, you're probably surprised that us up here can even read a newspaper. Well, a handful of us can. We sit around and read your column to the others while they scratch their heads with old eagle claws they dug out of the snow.

And our sled dogs listen, too. Those dogs have long been our best friends, and they're the only way we can get from igloo to igloo. Really great dogs like Blazer and Celica and Bronco and Subaru and 1966-Chevy-Needs-Work-Runs-Good.

There are some folks who say people up here sometimes even wear Nike shoes instead of lumberjack boots. Well, let me tell you, we wear those funny little sneakers to stay ahead of the wolves when we run down the trail to the outhouse.

People say we have real summers, too. That's a lie told by some of our good neighbors to the south. We get all our sled dogs to haul away the snow whenever those tourists from California show up in July and ask us about the exchange rate on Alaska money.

I'm writing you in desperation, Abby, to make sure schools Down There teach your children about us right.

You're probably surprised any of us can even write a letter. Well, one or two of us can. I tried to write you in bear blood on a musk ox chip, but I figured you might think that's something they do in Ontario.

So I gave up and just yelled "Mush!" at my faithful IBM-PC with enhanced color display.

Arrests Follow Rally For Reforms In Seoul

By K.C. HWANG
Associated Press Writer
SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police arrested 69 people and went on a one-month alert today following a giant opposition rally attended by thousands of South Koreans pressing their demands for direct presidential elections and other democratic reforms.

The opposition New Korea Democratic Party hailed the Sunday gathering in the southwestern city of Kwangju, scene of a 1980 uprising, as a success, and said the people's yearning for democracy had proven "greater than expected."

But both National Police and the ruling Democratic Justice Party accused opposition forces of inciting people through radical slogans. Police warned that such "illegal agitative actions" will not be tolerated at future rallies.

Up to 100,000 people turned out in Kwangju to launch a regional petition campaign for constitutional changes allowing direct presidential elections, a hot political issue that has provoked sharp confrontation between the government of President Chun Doo-hwan and the opposition.

Chun came to power in 1980 after an uprising in Kwangju in which the government says 191 people were killed. Opposition groups put the toll much higher.

Police said about 4,000 people who attended the Sunday rally marched for five hours until midnight through Kwangju's main streets in a noisy anti-government demonstration, and that 500 of them defied police orders to disperse.

Witnesses said police fired tear gas to scatter them. Police said some demonstrators started a bonfire and burned down an advertising tower set up by the city government, and also threw rocks at police. Police said 69 people were arrested.

Kim Dae-jung, a dissident leader, was unable to attend the rally because police in Seoul prevented him from boarding a plane bound for Kwangju.

Another major dissident leader, Kim Young-sam, and New Korea Democratic Party head Lee Min-woo had called on the crowds to help maintain order after some marchers appeared to get out of control.

Lee today expressed regret over the violent actions of some demonstrators, and vowed that that the party will do its best at future rallies to maintain order.

Police officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the month-long special police alert was called to deal with possible terrorism and student activism, but it was apparently motivated in part by fears of possible disturbances at future rallies.

In April, Seoul is to host several international events, including the general meeting of the Association of National Olympic Committees. The police officials said the alert calls for stepped-up checks and vigilance at airports, hotels and other public places.

The rally in Kwangju was the third held by the major opposition political party in its effort to collect as many as 10 million signatures supporting the constitutional revisions. Rallies have also been held in the capital city of Seoul and the southern port city of Pusan.

As in Pusan last week, government authorities in Kwangju tried to discourage the city's 900,000 inhabitants from attending the rally by staging picnics and shows with pop singers.

City Hall told its 3,000 employees to engage in "environmental purification" campaigns Sunday, a move apparently designed to prevent them from taking part in the opposition gathering.

Leaflets purportedly signed by the New Korea Democratic Party were also scattered that wrongly gave the rally's date as today. The opposition accused pro-government people of trying to trick the public.

The opposition is seeking direct, popular election of South Korea's president, rather than the present electoral college method that they say favors those already in power. Chun is firmly opposed to any constitutional changes until after 1988, when his terms expires and Seoul is to host the Summer Olympic Games.

Opposition forces demand that the constitution be amended before 1988 so that a new government can be inaugurated under a new constitution.

The anti-government rallies have been the largest since Chun came to power. The size of the crowds in Pusan and Kwangju was considered significant in view of the political climate in South Korea.

Although small groups of radical students occasionally stage demonstrations, the opposition party had been unable to hold outdoor rallies under a tough law against illegal assemblies.

Last month, however, the government eased its stand a bit to allow "peaceful" marches as part of the petition campaign.

Another Quake Rocks San Francisco Area

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — A strong earthquake early today rocked skyscrapers in the San Francisco Bay area, knocked down power lines and roused tens of thousands of people from their sleep. Three minor injuries were reported.

The earthquake, the third in the region in three days, struck at 3:56 a.m. and had a magnitude of 5.3 on the Richter scale, said Willis Jacobs of the U.S. Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo. The state Office of Emergency Services estimated it at 5.6, meaning it was capable of considerable damage.

It was centered 10 miles east of Fremont, or about 45 miles southeast of San Francisco, Jacobs said.

Three aftershocks, with estimated magnitudes of 3.6, 3.7 and 3.8, followed within minutes of the initial jolt, said Tom Mullins, spokesman for the state emergency office.

The quake was felt as far north as Santa Rosa and as far south as San Luis Obispo, a range of about 350 miles, and to the east as far as Stockton, about 60 miles east of San Francisco.

Alexian Brothers Hospital in San Jose reported three minor injuries. The victims, who suffered cuts or were hit by objects falling in their homes, were released after treatment.

There was no report of serious damage. Police switchboards were jammed with calls from people awakened by the temblor.

"I've lived here all my life, and this one scared me," said Gary Edwards, a resident of Walnut Creek, about 20 miles north of the epicenter. He said dishes rolled off the shelf.

"It woke me up and sloshed the water in my swimming pool," said Jim Hushaw, managing editor of the Stockton Record.

Several power outages were reported in the southern San Francisco Bay area, where the quake knocked out transformers and downed a 21,000-volt power line, police and Pacific Gas and Electric Co. officials reported. Police said the temblor also set off burglar alarms throughout the Bay area.

Utility Chuck Peterson said the downed power line, in Fremont, cut service to 18,000 customers until 4:47 a.m. He said there were several other local outages caused by falling lines and transformer problems.

Peterson said there were no reports of problems at either the Rancho Seco nuclear power plant near Sacramento or at Diablo Canyon, a nuclear plant near San Luis Obispo.

The Richter scale gauges the energy released by quakes as measured by ground motion. Each full-number increase indicates a ten-fold increase in ground motion; thus a quake of 5.6 has 10 times the ground motion of a temblor with a magnitude of 4.6. An earthquake with a 5.6 magnitude is capable of causing extensive damage.

Today's earthquake followed a moderate one on Saturday morning that measured 4.0 on the Richter scale, according to the seismographic station at the University of California, and a slight temblor of 2.2 on Sunday night.

The epicenter of the weekend earthquakes was in the Berkeley hills, about four miles from the university. No damage or injuries were reported in those earthquakes.

The San Francisco earthquake on April 18, 1906, took place before the Richter scale was developed, but has since been estimated at 8.3. At least 2,010 people were killed in the 1906 earthquake, according to San Francisco archivist Gladys Hansen.

TWA Resumes Schedule As Strikers Ponder Moves

NEW YORK (AP) — Striking flight attendants will meet this week to consider their next move after rejecting an offer from TWA, which resumed its normal flight schedule over the weekend for the first time since the walkout started March 7.

TWA spokesman Larry Hilliard said all of TWA's 630 scheduled Easter Sunday flights got off the ground without any major problems.

"There are some minor delays, some problems, but all of our flights are on," Hilliard said Sunday, a day after the union representing the 5,800 strikers rejected the company's latest contract offer.

Trans World Airlines said Saturday it was disappointed in the union decision, and said it held out little hope for an early end to the strike.

TWA Chairman Carl C. Icahn promised in a letter to newly hired replacements that they would not be furloughed to make way for returning strikers.

The members of the Independent Federation of Flight Attendants struck after the company proposed a 22 percent pay cut and work rules that add at least a dozen hours of work a month without additional pay.

The company's latest offer stuck to the original pay and schedule demands, but reinstated an earlier profit-sharing proposal withdrawn when the strike began. It also included a buyout proposal for flight attendants who either choose not to come back or are not allowed back.

Union spokeswoman Karen Lantz said the offer was virtually the same as the proposal that triggered the strike and scoffed at the profit-sharing plan.

"Profit sharing is only good if you're making a profit," she said. The union has scheduled membership meetings for Tuesday to discuss the state of negotiations, said union president Victoria Frankovich. The two sides met for about a half hour Saturday and adjourned with no further discussions scheduled.

Resort Areas Quiet Again After Rowdy Kids Leave

By KEN PETERS
Associated Press Writer
PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) —

Students streamed out of this resort city after a week of sometimes debauched and violent spring revelry, clogging roads and leaving behind relieved police.

The town was quiet late Sunday, although some youths "were still trying their best to be jerks," said a police spokeswoman who declined to be identified.

In another hot spot for vacationing college students, Florida, officials and hotel owners expressed concern over the deaths of several students this year, including four who fell from hotel balconies.

Most of the estimated 10,000 high school and college students who jammed Palm Springs began to leave as their hotel check-out times expired, and highway traffic built Sunday night as many headed toward Los Angeles.

"The big problem now is getting out of town," said the police spokeswoman, adding she was glad to see calm return.

Traffic on Highway 60 out of Palm Springs near Riverside, 60 miles west of the desert resort, was bumper-to-bumper at 9 p.m., said a California Highway Patrol dispatcher.

Earlier Sunday, crowds of students were still active but subdued compared to Friday's rampage by beer-guzzling youths who threw rocks and bottles and tore the clothes off women.

"It appears today that everyone is recuperating, laying around the parks and hotel pools," said police Sgt. David Goodwin.

Palm Springs, a chic desert resort 110 miles east of Los Angeles, has long been a popular spot for students during spring break.

Goodwin said police made 104 arrests from 7 a.m. Saturday to midnight Sunday, mostly for public drunkenness. Since March 21, officers have made 537 arrests, including 207 for public drunkenness, 18 for battery and 14 for resisting arrest.

Last year, Goodwin said, police reported a total of 347 arrests during the week-long Easter break, and almost half of those were curfew violations.

There were no major outbreaks of chaos since Friday's near-riot. Officers called for reinforcements from nearby jurisdictions and used a high-visibility strategy of foot and car patrols to put a damper on student exuberance.

All the estimated 200 officers were kept in town Saturday, with a large contingent assigned to downtown foot patrol, Goodwin said.

"We've been able to limit the vandalism to a small area, and I don't think we've reached riotous proportions. We had civil disobedience," police Lt. George Neesan said of Friday's incidents, explaining that a riot would have been characterized by "lack of regard for life and property."

Fifty-three people sought treatment Saturday at Desert Hospital for mostly minor problems such as bruises, cuts or too much heat, said nursing supervisor Liz Isbell.

Test-Tube Quints

LONDON (AP) — Five tiny boys believed to be the world's first test-tube quintuplets were in stable condition today, linked to respirators to help their immature lungs work, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The quintuplets, delivered on Wednesday by Caesarian section, were in intensive care at University College Hospital after being born 10 weeks premature.

"They're continuing to be stable," said spokeswoman Annie Pearce.

Their mother, Linda Jacobsen, a 33-year-old teacher, was in satisfactory condition.

She and her husband, Bruce Jacobsen, were reported as having tried to have children for five years before they went to a fertility clinic and used the "in vitro" technique in which human eggs are fertilized in a laboratory dish and implanted in the mother's womb.

Easter week marks the unofficial end of Spring Break season in Florida. Despite a publicized crackdown on rowdiness and other measures, safety remained a problem.

Four students died after falling from balconies — two in Daytona Beach, one in Sanibel and one in Fort Lauderdale. A fifth died after falling from a drawbridge under construction in Miami, and another drowned off Daytona Beach. A seventh student died in a motorcycle accident in Fort Lauderdale.

But Fort Lauderdale Police Chief Ron Cochran said, "There's a much greater sense of order" this year. "There is less rowdiness, less litter and less stench."

The weather, rain and clouds, may be partly responsible, officials said.

In addition, there have been lower occupancy rates at beachfront hotels in Fort Lauderdale this year. Officials estimate 300,000 students will visit the area during the 1986 Spring Break period, compared with about 350,000 in 1985.

Crash Said Fatal To 44

MAPUTO, Mozambique (AP) — A Mozambican air force plane crashed and burst into flames on takeoff, killing 44 people, Mozambique's official news agency reported today. The dead included a founder of the rebel movement that successfully fought Portuguese colonial rule.

The crash, the worst such disaster in Mozambique's history, occurred Sunday at the northern Indian Ocean town of Pemba, the Mozambican News Agency said. Five people survived, but all were seriously injured, the agency said.

The news agency, quoting a government statement, said the dead included Maria Chipande, wife of Defense Minister Gen. Alberto Chipande and a founder and member of the Mozambique Liberation Front.

The guerrilla movement fought Portuguese rule for a decade, and became FRELIMO, the ruling party of this Marxist nation in southern Africa, after Mozambique became independent in 1975.

Nicaragua

The more we read the news coming out of Central America (and Washington) the more our doubts grow about U.S. intervention in Nicaragua.

We just can't see a problem requiring all the attention the White House devotes to Managua. Nicaragua's area is but 2,000 square miles larger than that of North Carolina. The country's population is less than half that of North Carolina.

If anybody should be nervous about Nicaragua one would expect that country's neighbors to be on pins and needles. We hear nothing to indicate that. Instead, we get a message they appear almost resentful of the United States' role down there.

El Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras, Panama and Guatemala have made it pretty clear they just don't care what Nicaragua and Daniel Ortega are thinking, doing or saying. (Any one of those countries has more experience in revolutions than do we.) Their Big Brother to the north, Mexico, has been in the forefront of those criticizing U.S. policies. In our book, they might know more about Central American ways of doing things than do we.

President Reagan has enough problems at home to require his fullest attention; yet he has thrown all the influence of his office and personal theatrical talents into contributing another $100 million to the "Contra" movement ... a frail reed for our country to depend upon. That sum would be just one more installment on a dubious program. The way these things usually work out, more money will be required.

Meanwhile, an inept little man who might have gone down the drain because he cannot govern wisely nor well is almost cemented in the saddle by incurring White House wrath.

It's a strange thought, but Ortega's best friend may live on Pennsylvania Avenue.

When and if Nicaragua's neighbors want U.S. help they will ask for it, and get it. We would then be welcomed.

Meanwhile, foreign trade, taxes, national debt, world peace, agricultural problems, housing, education, health needs and a host of other topics have long been demanding attention. We do not need Nicaragua on that list.

One of the lessons that emerged from the Korean War was that America could not play policeman for the rest of the world. Our attention-span just didn't last then, either.

Gulf Fight

The United States Navy has completed its voyage into the Gulf of Sidra and, while it is hailed by the administration as a great American victory, the final question of what has been accomplished has to be answered.

The U.S. military superiority was clear from the start. While Moammar Khadafy ordered some missiles launched and Lybian boats were caught in the fire, there was little gained from this sojourn into an obscure bay on the coast of a third-rate nation.

On the other hand, the confrontation helped gain some popularity among other Arab nations for an otherwise ignored Khadafy. Among his own people Khadafy appears to have gained the image of a leader who has stood off one of the world's mightiest powers.

The United States flaunted its power in the Gulf of Sidra. In the Middle East, however, the show of power is not appreciated, even if it is aimed at a dictator who might threaten his Arab neighbors. Beyond that, any confrontation, no matter how insignificant, has the possibility of enlarging and involving a protracted military operation.

The Reagan administration should consider carefully the military involvements which might affect us all.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is it possible many Illinois voters knew what they were doing when they rejected Democratic Party regulars and backed followers of Lyndon LaRouche for two statewide offices?

That's the question confronting the Democrats as they try to untangle themselves from LaRouche, whose beliefs were denounced by gubernatorial nominee Adlai Stevenson as "neo-Nazi."

Democrats in Illinois and elsewhere nationally have tried to write off the state's primary results as a bizarre accident, a case of voters unaware they were backing extremists.

"A fluke," was how Democratic National Committee spokesman Terry Michael described the results. "A fluke we don't want to happen again," he was quick to add.

No doubt many Illinois Democrats voted for Mark Fairchild for lieutenant governor and Janice Hart for secretary of state without being aware of their ties to LaRouche, whose extremist philosophy was not all that well known to voters in Illinois or anywhere else in America. Fairchild defeated George Sangmeister and Ms. Hart beat Aurelia Pucinski, the party organization candidates.

Maybe the outcome was something of a fluke, but that doesn't mean the party can write off the results as meaningless.

Few people outside of LaRouche's National Democratic Policy Committee are suggesting the Illinois vote was an endorsement of his extremist views. Of greater concern to the Democrats is whether many voters were trying to send the party a message.

J. Michael McKeon, a pollster who operates out of Joliet, Ill., argues that voters, particularly blue collar people, were trying to send a message by rejecting the organization slate and backing LaRouche candidates for lieutenant governor and secretary of state.

McKeon, who does polling for unions and the Democratic Congressional Campaign committee, sent a report to the Ironworkers International Union in January in which he said there was a trend among blue collar workers to "move away from both parties."

"An example of this is the growth of the LaRouche party in areas plagued by crime and unemployment such as the Joliet, Ill., area," McKeon wrote. "In the last primary election the LaRouche party elected a significant number of Democratic precinct committeemen and its candidate for county auditor won the primary over the regular Democratic candidate.

"In interviews with union households who expressed a willingness to vote for LaRouche party candidates, most had absolutely no idea what the party stood for, but were fed up with the way the two major parties were handling the crime and unemployment issue."

What McKeon's research suggested was that blue collar voters were expressing the same sort of discontent with the establishment that they voiced in the mid-1960s when they gave strong support to the insurgent presidential candidacy of Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

A large portion of Wallace's vote came from people who wanted, in his words, to "send a message," a signal they believed establishment leaders were ignoring them and their fears and interests.

While Fairchild and Miss Hunt were not well known, they campaigned as tough anti-crime, anti-drug candidates. They also may have benefited from widespread fear of AIDs by proposing universal testing for those found to be suffering from it.

LaRouche campaign workers were active in blue-collar neighborhoods and passed out literature advocating their candidates' positions on crime and AIDs. The material identified them with the National Democratic Policy Committee, a title Democratic Party officials fear implies a link to them.

It was a tactic that might have allowed Fairchild and Miss Hunt to play both sides of the street — capitalize on discontent by taking much tougher stands on crime and AIDs, while gaining some credibility by implying a link to the national party.

The Sole Of The Matter

Sherlock Holmes was studying the newspaper. "No matter where one goes to track down the secret of the Marcos fortune, the trail always leads back to the shoes."

"Why is that?" I asked him.

"I'm not sure, Watson. Let's see what we know already. Imelda had 3,200 pairs of size 8 shoes in her closet, most of which had never been worn. Why, Watson, why?"

"Suppose Ferdinand Marcos had a foot fetish. Many men with power do."

"It's too easy, Watson. Even someone with an extreme foot fixation could never go through 3,200 pairs."

"I've known people with fetishes who went through a pair of new shoes every day. Perhaps Ferdinand was one of them."

"I checked around at the palace. No one ever saw Marcos playing with Imelda's shoes."

"Well then, Sherlock, maybe Imelda was the one who had a foot fetish."

Sherlock smiled as he usually does when he's caught me. "Wrong, Watson. Not a foot fetish. If anything, Imelda had a shoe fetish."

"What is a shoe fetish?"

"It's a compulsion to hold and caress a piece of footwear to assuage your guilt."

"And what causes one to have the fetish?"

"We're not sure. All we know is that many people who have a shoe fetish also have a numbered bank account in Switzerland."

"It's all starting to come together, Sherlock. Mrs. Marcos bought shoes on her trips abroad to disguise the fact she was opening numbered banks accounts."

"Just the opposite, my dear Watson. Imelda opened numbered bank accounts abroad to disguise the fact she was buying shoes."

"Of course," I said. "But why?"

"Imelda had a very deprived childhood. The money she sent out of the country was to assure her that no matter what happened to the Philippine government, she would always have something to wear to the ball."

"But Sherlock, we're talking about $3 billion. Are you trying to tell me that all this money was set aside for footwear?"

"Have you priced women's shoes lately, Watson?"

"That's all well and good. But suppose Imelda had stocked up on the shoes so that when she was booted out of Manila she could open her own store in Honolulu."

"Take a look at this photo. Does Imelda look like somebody who would work in a shoe store?"

"Probably not. But she could own it and not work there."

"Except for one thing, Watson. All the shoes are size 8. You can't open a store where all the footwear is the same size."

"Hmmm. Well, tell me, Sherlock, does solving the shoe enigma help you solve the problem of where the Philippine treasury is?"

"Not necessarily. A lot of it is hidden in real estate, gold, jewelry, banks and legitimate companies that Marcos bought when he was riding high. But all that has surfaced are the shoes."

"Quite. Say what you will, Sherlock, the Marcoses always covered their tracks."

"Watson, I would like to go back and take one more look at Imelda's closet."

"Why, Sherlock?"

"The Marcoses had a dog guarding their clothes. On the night they sneaked out of the palace the dog did not bark. Why not, Watson?"

"Why, Sherlock?"

"Elementary. The dog had a shoe in his mouth."

Official Writes Off Poland

WASHINGTON — Unreported statements by a Treasury official that Poland is beyond American help and that Lech Walesa's Solidarity movement "does not exist" is infuriating Polish-American leaders even though it mirrors the non-dynamic, status-quo policy some critics believe is quietly favored by Secretary of State George Shultz.

Harvey Shapiro, the respected deputy director of the Office of East-West Economic Policy, pulled no punches in describing Poland, in the eyes of non-political green-eyed purists at Treasury, as a basket case virtually beyond economic redemption. He shocked the International Human Rights Committee of the American Bar Association (ABA) that sponsored his March 17 talk by saying that although martial law "has been lifted in form, it has been essentially retained in substance."

When he followed that up by saying that "Solidarity does not exist," Jan Nowak, the knowledgeable former Radio Free Europe official, jumped to his feet. "It does!" he proclaimed.

That rebuke exposes the chasm between a dynamic policy aimed at encouraging change in the client state Moscow knows is its most vulnerable point and a quiescent policy expected of Treasury's number-crunchers, but not of the secretary of state.

Disclaiming that his views were necessarily those of the Treasury or the administration, Shapiro seemed to rule out any U.S. aid or sanctions easing for Poland's ravished economy. He did not mention President Reagan's pledge, made on three separate occasions, that if the military-communist regime of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski eased up on human rights the U.S. would reciprocate, starting by easing sanctions.

But Shapiro told his audience of lawyers that "it would be very difficult to justify" aid with commodity credit loans, with Export-Import Bank loans, with farm surplus loans, or with the Treasury's Economic Stabilization Fund. With those methods out, only a congressional aid package, unlikely in the era of Gramm-Rudman, would be left.

Shapiro insisted that U.S. aid would "simply aggravate" Poland's economic mess unless "underlying structural changes" were made. Yet with Shultz's strong backing, the U.S. is trying to arrange a multibillion-dollar loan package to Mexico with no real prospect of "structural changes" in Mexico's crippled economy.

Poland is not Mexico. But to leaders of the Polish-American community, Mexico makes the case that political considerations can outweigh economic factors in terms of America's own interest. Moreover, what happens in Poland, the fulcrum of Moscow's Eastern European empire, could be as important in terms of East-West relations as the future of Mexico is to the U.S.

That was the original case made by President Eisenhower in 1956. After the first major anti-Soviet upheaval swept Poland, Eisenhower launched the carrot-and-stick policy to edge Poland into closer relationship with the West. Every president since then has pushed the same strategy, but probably none so motivated by anti-communist convictions as Ronald Reagan.

Polish-American leaders say privately that Shultz may lack strategic motivation, steering him away from tactical moves aimed at encouraging and then rewarding human rights advances in Poland. Subtle carrot-and-stick policies, contradicting Shapiro's menu, are what they believe are needed.

There has been no public response from the State Department or the White House to Shapiro's recent talk. He ignored post-martial law changes such as record numbers of churches being built, the visit to Poland by Pope John Paul II, the fact that Solidarity founder Lech Walesa holds regular press conferences and has never been brought to trial, as the regime has often threatened.

None of these is conclusive. Together they suggest subtle American responses are needed, but not of the type suggested without rebuttal by Shapiro.

As for Solidarity's "death," one underground Solidarity newspaper has a circulation of 20,000, is financed by thousands of small contributions from Solidarity underground members and gives its readers bi-weekly summary of world news. Another, with a circulation between 28,000 and 40,000, reports details of political and economic life inside Poland.

If Solidarity is dead, Polish-American leaders ask, how is it able to publish whatever it wants underground? And despite several amnesties, they privately ask Shultz whether Poland should get some credit arrangements of the kind granted Moscow, where sanctions for the Afghanistan invasion and Poland's martial law have ended.

Strength For Today

Centuries ago, an adviser to the king of France recommended to his royal patron that he create an iron cage in which the captive could neither lie down nor stand up, and that he use this for punishment of political prisoners. The cage was made.

Some years later, this courtier fell into disfavor with the king, and for 14 years he was imprisoned in the instrument of torture he had devised for others.

"With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again," Jesus said. We get for ourselves what we give to others. But there is another side of the picture. While it is true that evil brings retribution, it is also true that virtue brings reward. As the courtier had to live in the instrument of torture he had devised, so we have to live in the kind of world we have made for ourselves. Let us be careful, therefore, as we fashion this world day by day.

Seminars

RALEIGH — In 13 regional seminars scheduled around the state during April and May, North Carolina employers will learn how to save money that could be used to fund new jobs for the state's workers.

Co-sponsored by the North Carolina Department of Commerce and the Employment Security Commission, the seminars are titled, "Technology, Service and Cost Containment: Essentials for Business in the '80's."

"The purpose of the seminars is to assist employers in reducing workers' compensation, unemployment insurance and other cost," said White G. Watkins, seminar coordinator and DOC assistant secretary for traditional industries.

"The resulting savings can be used to expand business and to create new jobs for North Carolina workers."

The three-hour seminars, presented as a public service at no charge to employers, will conclude with a question-and-answer session and summary led by Watkins.

Beginning Tuesday and running through May 29, the seminars will be held in Concord, Sylva, Gastonia, New Bern, Goldsboro, Wilmington, Wilkesboro, Winton-Salem, High Point, Pembroke, Raleigh, Elizabeth City and Kitty Hawk.

Employers interested in attending a seminar may call any of ESC's 78 Job Service Centers around the state for more information.

Rescue Units Will Get Defibrillators

Portable LifePack defibrillators — a device used to help synchronize a heart attack victim's heartbeat — will soon be available in Greenville.

Emergency medical technicians have become certified to use LifePack, but will not receive additional compensation for their advanced intermediate knowledge. However, the reward will come from being able to offer this service to the community, according to Dr. Roy Graves, assistant professor at East Carolina University Medical School and assistant medical director in the division of Emergency Medical Services.

Each city rescue vehicle will be equipped with a LifePack — costing about $9,000 to 10,000 each, Graves said. Money was raised from contributions of the Pitt County Medical Society and Auxiliary, the City of Greenville and the Council of Governments.

Valuable minutes will be saved as the result of LifePack, Graves said. The device will be used to assess patient breathing and pulse rate and apply a shock if the patient's heart beat is not in rhythm. The patient can then be transported to the emergency department.

"It is important to remember that when a person has a heart attack caused by ventricular fibrillation, cardio pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) must be administered no later than four minutes after the heart attack," Graves said. If LifePack is administered within eight minutes, the chances of the patient living increases, he said.

Information on what one should do, Graves said, in the event of a heart attack is:

- Know fire and rescue telephone numbers and keep by the phone;
- State name, telephone number, address and simple instructions to the address;
- Be prepared to briefly describe what is happening;
- Be sure to hang up phone. The emergency center may have to call back.

not see the Reagans well, but somebody with a better seat said the president pulled what looked like a check from his pocket, only to have the ushers continue past him.

"We know this is a special day in this church when ushers go right past someone who wants to put something in the collection plate," Cotter said.

FSU Expansion

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Fayetteville State University is planning a $33 million expansion that would include a $19 million, 10,000-seat physical education center by 1991, officials said Thursday.

The expansion plans would add a $6.4 million business administration center, a $6 million athletic stadium and a new university entrance.

Officials also unveiled a long-range master plan for the school, which calls for adding a fine arts building, a continuing education building and a visitor information-security center, expanding the student center and dormitories, converting the present library building into a graduate-student services center and adding 70,000 square feet for academics.

Reagan's trip to church was his first since January 1985 when he attended a special service at Washington Cathedral on the occasion of his second inauguration.

"Like many other Americans today, it was something they (the Reagans) wanted to do and felt was appropriate," said Peter Roussel, deputy White House press secretary.

Another White House aide, speaking on condition he not be identified, said one factor in the decision was that Sunday was the fifth anniversary of the attempt on Reagan's life on March 30, 1981.

The Reagans also attended Easter services at the Santa Ynez church in 1983.

The doors of the small, wooden A-frame church were left open during Sunday's service, and bright sunlight streamed in. It has been foggy and cloudy most of the time since the Reagans arrived on Thursday for a 10-day vacation, but the sun came out for Easter.

The president and his wife sat in front row seats, joining in the singing of hymns, such as "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today."

Cotter preached on the resurrection of Christ, taking his text from Corinthians, Chapter 15, verses 20 through 26. The passage ends, "The last enemy to be conquered is death itself."

Like the rest of the congregation of about 250, the Reagans sat on metal chairs.

They apparently were passed up during collection of the offering. Reporters seated in a back row could series of car burnings in the Tuscan city last summer and fall. Police blamed those burnings on vandals, but made no arrests.

(Italian news reports said the car belonged to German tourists. Florence police refused to comment.)

(No front page of any major Italian newspaper on Friday, Saturday or Sunday carried news of any retaliatory attacks on Americans since U.S. and Libyan forces clashed in the disputed waters of the Gulf of Sidra early last week.)

In that conflict, the United States said Libya fired on U.S. warplanes conducting exercises in the gulf, and that U.S. forces returned fire.

Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy claims the gulf as Libyan territory, but the United States and most other nations regard it as international waters beyond the conventional 12-mile limit.

On Friday, the Libyan ambassador to Italy, Abdul Rahman Shalgam, told a news conference his North African country would not take retaliatory action against U.S. military bases in Europe or against American citizens in Libya or other Arab countries.

Other page 1 stories in al-Fajer al-Jadid on Sunday included reports of stepped-up security measures at the U.S. naval base in San Diego, Calif.

N.C. Last In Federal Spending, Census Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina, which ranks last in the number of dollars the federal government spends per resident, isn't getting too little money; other states are getting too much, says U.S. Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C.

"In the aggregate, I think we fare pretty well," Coble said. "Too many dollars are going out of North Carolina to Washington. These other states are getting too much money back. There are as many boondoggles out there as good projects."

The Census Bureau reported Sunday that North Carolina was tied for last with Wisconsin at $2,399. The ranking was down one spot from 49th in 1984.

When the federal government dished out $788 billion last year, North Carolina received $15 billion. That's more money than 32 other states received, but North Carolina has the 10th largest population in the nation.

The state drawing the most money per person was Alaska with $4,858. The two states surrounding

Washington, D.C., Maryland and Virginia, came up second and third. Maryland received $4,737, and Virginia $4,728.

"You can't say straight off that being 50th this year is bad for North Carolina," said Bern Bonifant, a Census Bureau social service analyst. "Last year Iowa was last, and this year it is 43rd. But the reason it went up was mostly due to federal payments to distressed farmers."

A state like North Carolina with a diversified economy may not suffer severe economic setbacks that would cause a sudden flow of federal money, he said.

And many things that reflect the flow of federal money into the state come from conscious decisions the state might make, he said. For example, North Carolina ranks 46th in the per-capita amounts of grants to state and local governments.

"People in North Carolina may have an aversion to taking federal grants," Bonifant said. "They may want to do more things on their own without federal strings attached."

The state ranks 42nd in the per capita amount going toward direct payments to individuals such as Social Security, welfare, aid to dependent children, and student loans.

Student loans is one area that reflects a marked difference between North Carolina and the two states that are closest to it in population, New Jersey (ranked 9th) and Massachusetts (11th).

North Carolina received $25.3 million in student loans, and New Jersey got $129.6 million and Massachusetts $134.2 million.

But where the state ranks particularly low is in federal procurements. The federal government buys far less in North Carolina than it does in states with similar populations.

The federal government spent $1.43 billion buying North Carolina products, the study showed, compared with $8.3 billion in Massachusetts and $4.55 billion in New Jersey.

In fact, the federal government spent $18.1 billion to buy products in Los Angeles County, Calif., alone, more than it spent for everything in North Carolina.

But North Carolina ranked high — 18th — in federal salaries and wages paid to its citizens, reflecting an expenditure of $3.1 billion. Most of that money, nearly $2.3 billion, went to paying salaries for military personnel and civilians working at the state's military bases.

Teacher Education Subject Of Spirited Debate In State

RALEIGH (AP) — A movement is growing in the education community to require North Carolina teachers to attend graduate school before entering the classroom.

Several education groups want to extend the state's teacher education programs, which now last four years, to five or six years and to require a master's degree for full certification as a teacher.

Advocates say the public's demand for higher educational standards make the time right for a different approach to training teachers, but some educators say lengthening the preparation period would discourage students from entering teaching with a major teacher shortage imminent.

"There will never be a good time to make the profession more rigorous, and if we delay (adopting a six-year plan), it will be 10 more years before anyone seriously looks at it," said John Dornan, executive director of the Education Forum, a group of business leaders and educators.

The debate over a five- or six-year plan is being waged in written and spoken testimony submitted to the University of North Carolina's Task Force on Teacher Preparation, which is studying teacher training in the state.

State Superintendent Craig Phillips, the N.C. Association of Educators and the N.C. School Principals and Assistant Principals Association have spoken out in favor of a five- or six-year plan.

The Council of Education Associations, a league of five education groups (including the NCAE and the N.C. Association of School Administrators), has informally endorsed it.

Phillips has recommended a five-year plan ending in a bachelor's degree, with the fifth year involving professional training. The other groups favor a six-year plan — four years of liberal arts education followed by two years of professional training ending in a master's degree.

"An awful lot of people are saying that what we have now (in teacher preparation) should be stronger, and they're making essentially the same recommendations to strengthen it," Dornan said.

But he added that the task force would have to consider the political problems linked with the proposals.

"The task force has to grapple with political reality and other questions, and whether they will respond to the messages they're getting from the education community remains to be seen," Dornan said. "We're looking at dollars and politics and a lot of other issues."

Created last fall by the UNC Board of Governors under a legislative mandate, the task force is supposed to review the 44 teacher education programs at North Carolina colleges and make recommendations for any statutory changes to the 1987 legislative session.

Task force Chairman Irvin Boyle of Charlotte said the six-year plan was one of many issues that would be discussed in coming months, but he said it was too early to tell whether the panel would recommend any change.

Advocates of five- or six-year plans said their proposals would give students a more solid grounding in liberal arts before students began their professional training.

They also say a six-year program would lead to a better balance of theory and experience in the classroom, concentrated in the last two years of classroom-based graduate work.

The result would be increased public respect and support, for a weary, underpaid profession, they say.

"We require seven years of education for our veterinarians to treat our dogs and only four years for teachers to treat our children," said Kenneth Jenkins, a professor of education at Appalachian State University who has drafted a six-year plan for the Council of Education Associations.

But a committee of the N.C. Association of Colleges of Teacher Education has said the programs will cut off the supply of teachers and have not been subjected to "much rigorous analysis."

The committee says the way to improve teaching is to set more rigorous state standards for entry into teaching — including higher minimum scores on teacher tests.

How Perdue Helps Tobacco Farmers Take Success in Their Own Hands.

Is tobacco farming a way of life that's on its way out? A lot of people, including many tobacco growers, believe it is. As the Tobacco Program goes, so goes the tobacco farmer.

Or so they say. At Perdue, we see the situation differently. We believe tobacco farmers don't have to give up their cropland and their way of life, and we can show you hundreds of small farmers in North Carolina to prove it.

They're tobacco farmers who have built Perdue chicken houses.

The steady year-round income of a Perdue broiler operations helps smooth out the ups and downs of tobacco farming. A broiler house works right in with your tobacco farming because it doesn't demand a lot of your time or tie up valuable field acreage.

Dry weather won't affect your yield. And how you run your business is just between you and Perdue, not between you and some committee in Washington.

Best of all, as a Perdue producer you're cashing in on one of the most promising trends in agriculture. In 1985, poultry was North Carolina's biggest cash crop. Poultry consumption has grown over 50% in just ten years. It has already exceeded pork consumption, and many industry executives predict that within ten more years Americans will consume more chicken than beef.

That gives you some idea of the bright outlook for the poultry industry as a whole. But Perdue is growing faster than the industry as a whole.

It's an ideal time to join the more than 1,000 independent agri-businessmen and businesswomen in North Carolina who have chosen to work with Perdue. For more information, return the coupon today, or call Perdue at 1-800-372-6543.

Insurance Proposals

RALEIGH (AP) — Required for 90 percent of North Carolinians, auto insurance is like a tax and must be made to be fairer, says the co-chairman of a legislative panel that will consider changes in car insurance Wednesday.

"The biggest complaint I hear is that the driver who has one or two points is paying such a very high rate compared to what they did wrong," said state Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake.

In 11 Innings

Pirates Defeat Madison, 9-6

HARRISBURG, Va. — East Carolina came from behind twice and Jay McGraw's two-run double in the top of the 11th inning propelled the Pirates past James Madison, 9-6, in Colonial Athletic Association action Sunday.

Winfred Johnson, who came on in relief of starter Crag Van Deventer with one out in the 10th inning, was credited with the win. It marked the 30th win of his college career. Johnson needs to hit one more homerun to become the first player in NCAA history to win 30 games and hit 60 homers.

The Pirates upped their record to 21-3 overall and 4-3 in the CAA, while JMU fell to 16-5 and 2-1 in the conference.

The Pirates, who salvaged the final contest in the three-game series, trailed 6-4 entering the ninth, but Greg Hardison's homerun and a sacrifice fly by Dean Ehahalt sent the game into extra innings.

After being swept by the Dukes in a doubleheader Saturday, Pirate Coach Gary Overton was pleased by his team's combativeness in Sunday's game.

"Our guys battled back all day. You've got to give them a lot of credit for the way they did not give up," Overton said. "We proved today we are a group of fighters. This was a much needed victory."

ECU jumped out to an early 2-0 lead in the top of the third when David Ritchie led off with a single, advanced to second on a sacrifice by Hardison and scored on Chris Bradberry's two-run homer to left centerfield. The blast was Bradberry's sixth of the season.

The Pirates held the lead until James Madison took the lead with a three-run sixth inning. JMU's Bobby Iavicki led off the inning with a single, advanced to second on a passed ball, and scored on Robert Trumbo's two-run homer.

Following Trumbo's shot, Jeff

Garber reached first on error by Hardison. Mike Mathews followed with a double, moving Garber to third, where he scored on a sacrifice fly by Rod Boddie.

The Dukes upped their lead to 4-2 in the bottom of the seventh on Scott Mackie's run-scoring double.

But the Pirates bounced back in the top of the eighth to knot the game at 4-4.

Mike Sullivan doubled, leading off the inning, and, with two outs, Mark Cockrell was hit with a pitch. Both men advanced on a passed ball and came around to score on a single by catcher Jim Riley.

But Mark Brockell drilled a ball over the centerfield fence, scoring Garber, who had walked, to give James Madison a 6-4 lead in the bottom of the eighth.

Hardison led off the inning with his third homer of the season to make it 6-5.

Bradberry followed with a double and moved to third on a single by Johnson. He scored on a sacrifice fly by Dean Ehahalt.

Neither team scored until the Pirates came to bat in the top of the eleventh.

David Ritchie led off with a walk for the Pirates and advanced to second on a Hardison sacrifice. Bradberry followed with a bunt out the middle, but Ritchie was cut down at the plate on a throw by the Duke centerfielder.

Bradberry moved up to second on the throw to the plate, and James Madison intentionally walked Johnson to put runners on first and second. Ehahalt singled to load the bases, and McGraw followed with a double, scoring Bradberry and Johnson. Ehahalt scored the game's final run on a passed ball.

The Pirates were scheduled to play at Virginia Commonwealth today at 3 p.m.

Texas Takes Women's Title

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Jody Conradt believes her Texas Longhorns have set the standard by which future women's basketball teams will be measured.

Texas put the perfect ending on a perfect season Sunday, running past Southern California 97-81 in the NCAA women's basketball championship game. The Longhorns finished with a 34-0 record, the first team in the five-year history of the tourney to go through a season with a perfect mark.

"I don't think it can be topped," Conradt said of this year's accomplishment. "It's perfection. It is something we will strive for next season when we play our first game."

Texas already has a head start on a lot of teams next season because of brilliant freshman Clarissa Davis. The 6-foot-1 forward came off the bench to score 24 points and pull down 14 rebounds in leading the Longhorns over two-time champion Southern Cal.

"Our team has so many good people," said Davis, voted the tourney's outstanding player. "I just wanted to get into the game."

It proved to be an all-out team effort for the talent-rich Longhorns, whose bench outscored Southern Cal 58-4.

"Texas continued to bring in players, and bringing in fresh players helps," said Southern Cal Coach Linda Sharp, whose team finished 31-5. "We didn't get from our bench what Texas did from theirs."

Another Texas reserve, senior center Cara Priddy, ignited the Longhorns to the biggest point margin in a championship game.

After Southern Cal went ahead 30-29 on Cheryl Miller's two free throws with 5:29 left in the half, Priddy completed a three-point play 17 seconds later to give Texas a 32-30 advantage, a lead it never relinquished.

The Longhorns scored seven more points, with Priddy tallying four, to go up 39-30 at 2:06. Miller broke Southern Cal's scoring drought with a 20-footer at 1:50.

"When you get to the national championships, you have to be ready to play," said Priddy, who also had five rebounds in 18 minutes of playing time. "I was happy she put me in. It's not degrading to sit the bench at Texas."

Texas, leading 45-35 at the half, hiked its lead to 51-37 on Davis' 10-footer in the lane with 17:56 left in the game. Southern Cal came back to within 70-61 on Cynthia Cooper's layup at 9:30, but after a Texas timeout, the Longhorns scored seven straight points and pulled away over the final minutes.

"We kept wanting to celebrate and celebrate too soon," Conradt said in explaining the timeout. "The only problem was that USC wasn't willing to join our victory celebration. I just wanted to bring us back to reality."

Miller, a four-time All-America, never got untracked in the game, eventually fouling out with 7:30 to go. She scored 16 points, hitting only two of 11 shots from the field and 12 of 13 free throws, grabbed six rebounds and handed out four assists.

"I was a little frustrated," Miller said, "but we were playing a great team. It wasn't one of my better games."

Texas made 40 of 68 shots for 58.8 percent and held a 42-32 edge in rebounding. Southern Cal hit 23 of 65 shots for 44.6 percent.

"We didn't shoot well and couldn't get into the rhythm of the game," Sharp said. "I knew the score would be fairly high."

Duke, Louisville Prepare For Defensive Battle

DALLAS (AP) — Big D won't stand for Dallas tonight.

Big D will be for the stubborn, unrelenting mano y mano defenses used by the Louisville Cardinals and the Duke Blue Devils, the last survivors among 64 teams who hit the NCAA road to Dallas two and a half weeks ago.

Both offenses are set in motion by pressing, man-for-man defenses that are designed to tire out opponents as well as steal the basketball from them.

"We like the full-court game," Louisville Coach Denny Crum said. "Duke plays the same way. They score off transition and the transition game is dictated by your defense."

The styles are somewhat different. Duke presses full-court for the full 40 minutes unless foul trouble dictates a zone.

Louisville presses full-court at times but is most deadly in the mid-court man-for-man in which it traps after the first pass into the Cardinals' half-court area.

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said both teams are excellent at switching defensive assignments when another team screens.

"We don't have individual matchups," he said. "We have team matchups and talk is the glue that keeps everything together."

"When you press the whole game it forces you to be alert. It's not easy to play good defense well. You have to really work at it."

The game will match Louisville's inside quickness against the physical Blue Devils, and Duke's outside quickness against Louisville's taller guards.

"We hope our guards (Johnny Dawkins and Tommy Amaker) can make it more difficult for Louisville's guards (Milt Wagner and Jeff Hall) to run their offense," Krzyzewski said.

Crum said Duke is a "lot stronger inside. We have a size advantage in (6-foot-11) Pervis Ellison, but he's not that experienced.

"We just hope our bigger guards can cause them some problems."

Crum said the individual matchups weren't important because of the switching defense the Cardinals use.

"Billy Thompson will guard Mark Alarie, Herbert Crook will be on Dave Henderson, Hall will be on Amaker, Pervis will be on Bilas and Wagner will be on Dawkins when the game starts, but there will be different matchups as we switch," Crum said. "Jeff will be on Bilas or maybe Alarie or Dawkins..."

Only four teams in the last 29 games have shot better than 50 percent against the tenacious Cardinal defense. The Cardinals average almost six blocked shots per game.

Duke has forced 90 turnovers in five tourney games.

"Duke has a good defense, but we're not going to sit around and worry," Hall said. "We'll just try to get the ball inside and get their people in foul trouble."

Duke Seniors Put It All On The Line

DALLAS (AP) — Four years ago, they were considered the best-recruited freshman basketball class, the kind on which national championships are built.

Tonight, all that stands in the way of Duke's destiny is Louisville.

The Blue Devils, ranked No. 1 in the nation and at 37-2 the winningest single-season college team ever, can fulfill the dream that Jay Bilas, Mark Alarie, Johnny Dawkins and David Henderson envisioned when they first set foot on the campus at Durham, N.C.

"We didn't make a sealed-in-blood pact to win a national championship. We felt that was something that didn't need to be said," Bilas, Duke's 6-foot-8 center, said.

There is, of course, the matter of Milt Wagner, of Jeff Hall, of Billy Thompson — of the Cardinals who, although ranked only seventh, are considered just about the equal of the Blue Devils.

"I think the public and the media believes Louisville is playing the best basketball in the country right now," Alarie said. "Their record (31-7) doesn't indicate that they've played the best basketball all year. Obviously ours is better, but they're on a roll as a team."

If the Blue Devils don't win it all, they'll be remembered as good but not great, "but even if we do win, people will still knock Duke. That's just the way it is," Alarie said. "We're not an intimidating team on paper. We don't have a 7-foot center. We don't block a lot of shots. We don't dunk a lot. People translate that into us being just a very lucky team."

"I think that lack of respect makes us play harder. Nobody likes to be bad-mouthed."

Because Duke doesn't have that one fearsome, in-your-face superstar (Dawkins is more finesse than power), the Blue Devils, for all their accomplishments, still are looked upon with less than awe.

"Everybody says they're not that good," Louisville Coach Denny Crum said. "I don't buy that. When we played the preseason (Big Apple) NIT in New York, I told everybody that these probably wouldn't be any better teams in the country than those four. Kansas beat us and Duke beat St. John's. Three of us were in the Final Four of the NCAA and the other one (St. John's) was a No. 1 regional selection."

"Duke's won 21 games in a row (to Louisville's streak of 17), they're ranked No. 1 in the nation and rightfully so. They do everything you'd want a basketball team to do, and they do it very well. ... People say they're not very big, but you go stand next to Alarie or Bilas and tell me they're not very big. They're MEN.

"Physically they're a lot bigger and stronger on their front line than we are," Crum went on. "Our guards are taller, but we don't have the strength and size inside that they have. And they have the great combination of great outside players, ballhandlers with quickness, as well as the strength on the inside."

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski admits to team weaknesses, "the things that don't come naturally to us, that we have to concentrate on. Shooting, running up and down the court, playing the transition game, they come naturally."

"Rebounding is something we really have to concentrate on. And defense, although we play it well, doesn't come easy. ... If you don't see our guys talking to each other on defense, that's a real weakness. Our defense is not set up for individual matchups; it's set up for team matchups. If we don't play as a team — and the talk is the glue that keeps the team together — we have problems," Krzyzewski said.

"Their team defense is their real strength," Crum said. "They play so well together. They're always in the

Eight Is Enough For Sixers Against Mavs

By The Associated Press
The Philadelphia 76ers were badly outmanned, suiting up only eight players for their game with the Dallas Mavericks.

Eight was enough. Charles Barkley and rookie Terry Catledge made up for the absence of Philadelphia's three biggest players — centers Moses Malone and Clemon Johnson and forward Bob McAdoo — and the shorthanded Sixers edged the Dallas Mavericks 114-113 on Sunday in NBA action.

The 76ers also were missing guard Andrew Toney (out for most of the season with a foot injury) and forward Bobby Jones (groin injury).

Barkley, who quickly is becoming one of the most awesome forces in the game, played all but one minute and had 32 points and a career-high 25 rebounds. Catledge scored a season-high 29 points.

"You've got to believe, otherwise it's a waste of time," Barkley said. "You can't worry about what you don't have, you've got to do the best with what you do have."

"I feel great now because we won," he said. "But I'm exhausted. In another two hours, I don't know how I'll feel."

Probably better than Malone, who has an eye injury, and the rest of the Philadelphia wounded.

Elsewhere Sunday, it was Boston 122, New Jersey 117; Seattle 103, Phoenix 89, and the Los Angeles Lakers 124, Golden State 117.

The 76ers led 112-103 with 57 seconds remaining, but Dallas scored seven straight points. Detlef Schrempf and Dale Ellis connected on jump shots, and Ellis stole the ball and scored a three-point basket with 28 seconds left, making it 112-110.

Philly's Perry Moss scored on a layup with five seconds to go, and a three-pointer by Dallas' Derek Harper with two seconds left closed the scoring.

Host Philadelphia led by as many as 24 points in the third quarter. Julius Erving contributed 24 points for the Sixers. Rolando Blackman and Harper each had 22 points for Dallas.

"When I got to the locker room, I could sense from everyone that they really believed they were going to win," Sixers Coach Matt Guokas said.

"This is the problem teams have when you play a club that is missing key people," noted Dick Motta, coach of the Mavs. "You seem to lack the concentration you need to win."

Philadelphia is so deep." Lakers 124, Warriors 117

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer, had 16 points to pass 35,000 for his career. Abdul-Jabbar reached the 35,000 milestone on an awkward left-handed hook shot from about eight feet away with 4:09 remaining in the third quarter. He now has 35,004 points and is playing in his 11th season with the Lakers and in his 17th season in the NBA.

James Worthy led the Lakers with 34 points. Byron Scott added 22 points for Los Angeles and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 15 points and a game-high 19 assists.

Guard Eric "Sleepy" Floyd paced Golden State with 28 points and 12 assists. Center Joe Barry Carroll added 22 points for the Warriors, who played without Chris Mullin and Purvis Short. Mullin, who has a sore left heel, has now missed 14 consecutive games while Short, who has a bruised right foot, has been sidelined for four games. Celtics 122, Nets 117

New Jersey climbed back into the game after falling behind by 22 points in the first half. But Larry Bird's 40 points, Kevin McHale's 24 and 21 by Robert Parish were too much for the Nets.

Boston, which has won 11 consecutive games, improved its league-leading record to 61-13 with its 27th straight home victory, equalling the record set by the Minneapolis Lakers in 1949-50. With a 36-1 mark at home, the Celtics can establish a new record on Wednesday night against Detroit.

Otis Birdsong led the Nets with 26 points and Mike Gminski added 24.

Gminski was asked if anyone could stop Boston this year.

"Yeah, maybe the Russian Army," he said. "And only if they didn't give up nuclear weapons."

SuperSonics 103, Suns 89
Gerald Henderson hit eight straight field goals, scoring 20 points for host Seattle. It was a costly defeat for Phoenix, which fell two games behind San Antonio in the race for the final playoff spot in the Western Conference. The Suns have nine games left.

Henderson scored nine points in the second period to help Seattle open a 58-47 halftime lead, then scored nine more in the third period as Seattle pulled away.

Larry Nance scored 20 points for the Suns.

Mahaffey Passes Mize On Final 18

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — The Tournament Players Championship was in Larry Mize's hands. It was his to win or lose. He lost it.

He lost it to veteran John Mahaffey, who needed only a final round of 71, one under par, to come from four strokes back and beat Mize by a shot Sunday in the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

Mize lost it on a final round of 76, including bogeys on four of the last five holes. The last of those was on the 18th, where a three-foot par putt missed and Mahaffey nailed a slightly shorter one for the winning par.

"Choke is a word a lot of us don't like. But, yeah, I guess I did," said Mize, who has an unhappy history of letting last-round leads slip away.

"They say that every time you get in this position, you gain something, you learn something. I don't know right now. I'm too disappointed to think about it," he said, his head down, his shoulders slumped, his wife beside him with tear-streaked face.

"I know just how Larry feels," Mahaffey said. "I've been in those shoes. And I can tell you it's no fun."

He knows very well. Mahaffey let the U.S. Open titles in 1975 and 1976 slip through his grasp. Those bitter disappointments sent his career — and his personal life — into a tailspin.

"I had started to lose everything I had. I was taking this game for granted. I realized that if I wanted to be competitive, I had to turn my life around. I did."

"I looked at the guys I admire, Tom Watson and Tom Kite, and how hard they work, and I knew I had to start doing some hard work, too."

The work paid off in the ninth victory of Mahaffey's 16-year career. He won with a 275 total, 13 under par on the Players Club at Sawgrass.

Mize Chips Out

Johnny Mize chips onto the green of the second hole of the Tournament Players Championship Sunday in Ponte Vedra, Fla. Mize, who led by four strokes after three rounds of play, faltered on the final 18 and lost by one stroke to John Mahaffey. (AP Laserphoto)

He collected $162,000 from the total purse of $900,000 and moved into the No. 1 money-winning spot with $244,736, and became the 13th player to go beyond $2 million in career earnings.

Mize won $97,200. Tim Simpson, never really in the title chase, matched par 72 and was third alone at 280, four behind Mize.

Kite, who hit into the water and made double bogey on the fearful little 17th hole, joined Jim Thorpe and Brett Upper at 281. Kite and Upper had 72s, Thorpe a closing 70.

It was strictly a two-man race — and for most of the day it was Mize alone. He led by margins of three to five shots through the 13th hole.

But he bogeyed the 14th after a poor approach shot and the 15th after again missing the green. He bogeyed the par-5 16th, driving into trouble, missing the green with his third and then stubbing a chip. Mahaffey two-putted for birdie on that one and they were tied.

Mize missed a short birdie putt on the 17th that would have given him the lead again, then bogeyed the last, Mahaffey winning with a testing little three-foot par-putt.

Brewers Unload Two To Go With Youth

By The Associated Press
The Milwaukee Brewers, a team that has gone downhill since reaching the World Series four years ago, are now minus two more players from their past.

Pete Vuckovich, who won the Cy Young Award in 1982 when he helped Milwaukee to the American League pennant, retired on Sunday. A few hours later, the Brewers traded away another starting pitcher, Moose Haas, to Oakland.

"We're dedicated to change and dedicated to giving the younger ballplayers a chance to play for us if they're ready," Milwaukee General Manager Harry Dalton said. "We've had a number of pitchers that have made us feel they're ready."

The Brewers' pitchers made Dalton look good — at least for Sunday — when Tim Leary, Chuck Porter and Ray Searage combined on a five-hitter to lead Milwaukee past the Chicago Cubs 4-0. Leary, 3-1 this spring, yielded three hits over six innings while Paul Molitor, Robin Yount and Paul Householder had RBI singles.

Vuckovich, 33, had been in the Brewers' camp as a non-roster player, trying to make a comeback after shoulder surgery last September. After he informed Dalton of his decision during a meeting Sunday morning, Vuckovich was offered and accepted a job in the Brewers' organization as an instructor with some scouting duties.

"I thought he was pitching well enough to pitch in the big leagues," Manager George Bamberger said. "I thought if he didn't make it here, he could've made it somewhere else."

Vuckovich was 0-1 with a 5.73 earned run average this spring. Last season, he was 6-10 with a 5.51 ERA.

Bamberger, who said he thought Vuckovich's arm was hurting him, said he had planned to start the right-hander in an exhibition game today.

"I told him this morning he'd be pitching tomorrow and he said no he wouldn't," said Milwaukee pitching coach Herm Starrette. "I knew something was up."

Vuckovich's injury problems started in 1983, when he began the season on the disabled list with a torn rotator cuff. He pitched in only three games in 1983 and sat out the 1984 season.

Vuckovich was 38-22 in five seasons with the Brewers, including 18-6 in 1982 when he won the Cy Young.

In 10 seasons with the Chicago White Sox, Toronto, St. Louis and Milwaukee, Vuckovich was 91-65 with a 3.68 ERA.

Haas, who turns 30 in three weeks, was 8-8 last season. In nine years with Milwaukee, he was 91-79 with a 4.03 ERA.

In return for Haas, a right-hander, Milwaukee got three minor leaguers and a player to be named later. Haas is expected to join the Athletics' starting rotation.

The Brewers plan to have 10 pitchers on their 24-man roster this season.

Jordan Pushes Bulls GM Into Letting Him Play

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Michael Jordan is playing again with the Chicago Bulls. He reasoned that if his left foot was to break again, it was better for it to happen in March than in September.

Jordan played only 14-15 minutes in his first six NBA appearances, and his rustiness showed as he hit just 35.9 percent of his shots. But in his last two games, playing a total of 45 minutes, he scored 22 and 24 points and was 19-for-32 from the field.

Jordan's five-month absence after the injury was an ordeal that he had no desire to prolong.

"If I came back and got hurt again, I knew I'd have all summer to recover," Jordan said. "If I waited until September, I'd have been tormented by doubts all summer, and then if I did get hurt again, I might miss the whole next season. I don't want to go through that again."

In a 106-96 victory over the New York Knicks on Saturday, he scored 14 points in the fourth quarter, 10 in a span of 5 1/2 minutes, in leading a 15-6 spurt that gave the Bulls the lead for good.

"Nothing in my life comes close to being as depressing as the last few months," Jordan said. "If I had been married, I'd be divorced by now. I was suffering."

"In the first six games, I knew I was only playing 14 minutes and I tried to force things because I had such a short time to make an impression," Jordan said. "Now that I'm playing 22-24 minutes, that's half the game and enough time to make a contribution offensively and defensively. I'm feeling no pain in my foot, even when I jump off it."

"Basketball took a lot of my life and I had nothing to spend my time on. Basketball was a year-round, daily habit with me and all I could do was play a little golf."

"Michael's a hard person to say no to," Bulls Coach Stan Albeck said. "He persuaded everyone he could be pain-free. But none of us wanted to be associated with a career-ending injury."

"The last two games were by far the best," he said. "My shooting is coming around and I'm much more comfortable. I'd say I'm 95-97 percent."

When Jordan and owner Jerry Reinsdorf were at a stalemate, Reinsdorf told his star guard that only a coin flip could settle the issue.

"Heads and you sit, tails and you play," Reinsdorf told Jordan.

"Let me see the coin first," Jordan said, and Reinsdorf smiled and handed over a two-headed coin. Finally, Reinsdorf relented and Jordan was reactivated March 14.

Lilley's One-Hitter Leads Jamesville To 6-0 Victory

JAMESVILLE — Floyd Lilley tossed a one-hit shutout at hosting Jamesville in the final game Saturday night in the Jamesville Invitational Baseball Tournament as Washington topped the Bullets, 6-0.

Earlier in the day, Roanoke downed Bath, 10-4, Williamston tripped Columbia, 9-3, and St. Francis of New York beat Plymouth, 9-8.

Today's schedule sent Bath against Columbia at noon, followed by Plymouth and Jamesville at 2:30 p.m. The winners' bracket had Roanoke meeting Williamston at 5 p.m. and St. Francis facing Washington at 7:30 p.m.

The consolation bracket and championship finals will be held Tuesday.

Lilley held Jamesville without a hit until the seventh inning when Chris Jones spoiled the effort with a single. He struck out 11 and walked one.

Washington got the lead with a run in the second. Walt Finch singled and Franz Holscher reached on an error. Lilley also was safe on an error, allowing Finch to score.

The Pam Pack added three more in the fourth for a 4-0 lead. Holscher singled and Lilley reached on an error. Mike Whitford hit into a fielder's choice that got Holscher at third. Frank Deaner doubled in Lilley and Whitford and Steve Oden was safe on an error, scoring Deaner.

Washington got two more runs in the fifth.

Holscher led the Washington hitting with two.

Details of the other games were not available.

James Cagney Dies

By PETER ALAN HARPER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — James Cagney, who rose from one of New York City's toughest neighborhoods to become one of Hollywood's most famous toughguys during his 50-year acting career, was "the classic American success story," President Reagan said following his friend's death.

Cagney, who won an Oscar for his 1942 portrayal of song-and-dance man George M. Cohan in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," died Sunday at age 86. He suffered from diabetes and had been in declining health.

His wife of 64 years, Billie, and his manager, Marge Zimmerman, were at his side when he died at his Dutchess County farm north of New York City, where he had been taken only last week after being released from a hospital.

"We were getting him ready for breakfast and he just closed his eyes and went to sleep," Mrs. Zimmerman said. "It's Easter and it's a good time if he had to go."

"Thank God I learned of James Cagney's death in church during Easter Mass because that is where I could help him the most," Frank Sinatra said from his Palm Springs home. "Death isn't even the right word to use, especially on Easter. Jim merely changed addresses from this life into the next."

Cagney retired in 1961 after appearing in 64 films, including "The Public Enemy," in 1931 and "The Roaring Twenties," in 1939. He returned to the screen in 1981 as the police commissioner in "Ragtime."

In addition to the Academy Award, Cagney won a citation from the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts in 1980 for career achievement and the Medal of Freedom, the government's highest civilian award, in 1984.

Despite his fame, Cagney despised the word frequently applied to him: Superstar.

"You don't hear them speak of Shakespeare as a superpoet. You don't hear them call Michelangelo a superpainter. They only apply the word in this mundane market," he once said.

John McCabe, who assisted the actor with his autobiography, "Cagney by Cagney," recalled that Cagney never gave fame a thought.

"It was something that he never talked about. To him it was just like a fly on the wall," McCabe said.

"Jimmy Cagney was the classic American success story, lifting himself by determination and hard work out of poverty to national acclaim," Reagan said in a statement from his California ranch. "I believe the entire nation loved Jimmy Cagney and I think he must have loved us, too, because he always gave us his very best. ... Goodbye, dear friend."

In 1938, Cagney shared billing with Reagan in "Boy Meets Girl," and the men became friends.

Both were presidents of the Screen Actors Guild and both described themselves as Roosevelt Democrats who turned conservative about the same time.

Cagney drew praise for a wide series of roles — mobsters in such films as "The Public Enemy," "Angels with Dirty Faces" and "White Heat," the neurotic ship captain in "Mister Roberts," Lon Chaney in "Man of a Thousand Faces," Cohan in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," and Bottom in "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

"He was tremendously versatile as far as acting was concerned, and he was an enormous asset to the motion picture industry," actor Jimmy Stewart said.

Cagney was born on the Lower

East Side of New York City, the second of five children, moving to Manhattan's Yorkville section upon the death of his alcoholic father.

The area had been among the city's toughest, and Cagney drew upon his experiences there while portraying gangsters.

His trademark — the squirming shrug that started at the feet and writhed up through the shoulders as one hand pounded the other — for instance, came from "a pimp who worked the block between 77th and 78th streets on First Avenue," Cagney said. "All day, he'd stand around and do that."

By age 14, Cagney was known as one of the neighborhood's best fighters. Money was scarce, and he considered boxing as a career; his mother, Carolyn, said no.

Instead, he became a copy boy for a newspaper, wrapped packages in a department store and took other odd jobs, until he heard he could make $35 a week in vaudeville.

He auditioned for the chorus line of a show called "Every Sailor." By his own admission, "I didn't know highland fling from a sailor's hornpipe and I couldn't even sing 'Sweet Adeline.'" But he mimicked his competitors and won the role of a female impersonator, wearing a tutu and a red wig for eight weeks.

What made him a star was "The Public Enemy" in 1931, his first tough-guy role, which included the scene where he mashed a grapefruit into the face of Mae Clark.

But the only movie he would watch again was "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

"The film had all the music and the good nostalgic scenes," he said.

He and his wife, the former Frances "Billie" Vernon, met in 1920 as cast members of "Pitter Patter" and married two years later. They adopted two children, a boy and a girl.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♥AJ6 ♦J876532 ♠K93
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—An ugly hand—your points are outside your long suit. Nevertheless, we would opt for two diamonds. If you are among those who have adopted a forcing one no trump response, we accept that as an answer only if you intend rebidding two diamonds if partner shows clubs next.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠52 ♥AQ643 ♦AQ10 ♣K109
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 1♠ 2♦
? What action do you take?
A.—You are virtually in a no-lose situation—double. If partner has the values for your side to make game, the penalty should be substantial. If he has only moderate values, the penalty should still be worth while because your cards are well placed. And if partner has a weak, distributional hand he can remove the double since it is partly cooperative in this sequence.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ10752 ♦AQ85 ♣Q94
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♠ Pass 1NT Pass
? What do you bid now?
A.—Since neither opponent could bid hearts, it looks as if partner has some values in that suit. They will be wasted opposite your void. Therefore, you should consider your hand to be a minimum opening, and you should rebid your six-card major suit before trying to show your four-card minor. The latter would be the right course if your hand were a bit stronger.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K6 ♥A10762 ♦AK103 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♥ 2♣ 2♠ 3♠
? What action do you take?
A.—Because of your prime controls and the honor in partner's suit, you hand is better than its point-count suggests. Therefore, we would go ahead and make the normal rebid of three diamonds to see what partner wants to do next.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♥AKJ9 ♦109652 ♣KJ6
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1♥ Pass 1NT Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—The perfect hand for a double. Since you did not double at your first turn, this action is for penalties, not takeout. You rate to defeat two hearts in your own hand, and anything partner can contribute to the defense will be gravy.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ105 ♥83 ♦85 ♣QJ765
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1♥ 2♦ ?
What action do you take?
A.—A perfect hand for a negative double, if you play that. If you don't, you are stuck. A bid of either black suit would be forcing to game and you are not good enough for that. If you play five-card majors, you might venture two hearts; if you don't, you can only pass and hope that partner is strong enough to reopen.

Fire Damages Historic London Palace

LONDON (AP) — Fire raced today through a wing of Hampton Court Palace, a sprawling residence of kings and queens dating from the reign of Henry VIII, and officials said some priceless art treasures sustained "considerable damage."
Authorities were looking for an 86-year-old woman who was reported missing.
Seven or eight elderly widows in their dressing gowns were led from apartments on the top floor of the south wing before the roof collapsed into two lower floors filled with art works, said Toby Jessel, a Conservative Party lawmaker who represents the district.
Flames poured through the roof of the 16th century palace, one of Britain's most popular tourist attractions, and smoke was visible miles away. The palace is located on the banks of the River Thames 12 miles from the heart London.

More than 120 firemen finally brought the blaze in the south wing under control at 9:40 a.m., four hours after it was first spotted, Fire Brigade spokesman Brian Clark said.
But smoke was still billowing from the palace. Firemen wearing masks
