Britons Killed In Lebanon Terrorists Stepping Up World Attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The surge in terrorism anticipated by the Reagan administration after the U.S. bombing of Libya took shape today with the murders of three kidnap victims in Lebanon, an attempt to put explosives aboard an Israeli airliner in London and fire bombs thrown at a U.S. Marine post in Tunisia.

Officials said the administration was preparing to evacuate many Americans from Sudan, where a U.S. Embassy employee was shot in the head on Wednesday.

In neighboring Libya, Col. Moammar Khadafy was reported alive but possibly wounded in the bombing raid on his headquarters Monday night. Administration officials sifting through intelligence reports said there were indications he had left Tripoli, the capital, and had gone into the desert amid reports of fighting within the military.

Three bodies were found in the mountains east of Beirut with a note nearby that said one was a CIA agent and two were British intelligence officers killed in retaliation for the U.S. bombing of Libya, the Moslem Voice of the Nation radio reported from Beirut.

John Rowan, first secretary of the Irish Embassy in Beirut, later identified the three victims as being Britons.

"These are Padfield, Collett and Douglas," he told reporters. He referred to British writer Alec Collett, 64, and teachers Leigh Douglas, 34, and Philip Padfield, 40.

The British government supported the U.S. action punishing Libya for the April 5 bombing of a Berlin nightclub and permitted U.S. Air Force bombers based in Britain to participate in the raid.

In London, a woman trying to board an El Al jetliner was arrested after she was found to be carrying what police said were explosives. Authorities were hunting a male companion of Middle Eastern appearance.

And in Tunis, Tunisia, the headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Organization, two Molotov cocktails were tossed from a passing car at the residence of Marine guards stationed at the U.S. Embassy. No one was injured; a nearby auto was burned.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility in the Tunis attack.

As for the bodies found in Lebanon, the Moslem radio said an anonymous caller claiming to speak for a group calling itself the Arab Revolutionary Cells said, "The executions were in retaliation for the new Nazi policy spearheaded by the international terrorist Reagan and his decision to launch an aggression on our Arab people in Libya."

The statement warned that "the American and British terrorists will be a target of our attacks."

Meanwhile, a congressional source said intelligence reports indicated that foes of Khadafy had returned to Tripoli. Sources in both the administration and Congress, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there was no friction between the army and Khadafy's headquarters guard.

ABC News, quoting U.S. intelligence sources, said there were reports of mutiny at the Tarkunah army base, south of Tripoli. The network said there were reports that Libyan air strikes were used against Libyan army units.

However, the network said there was no indication any particular group had moved to seize power.

At the same time, government sources said the Reagan administration had received intelligence indicating Khadafy had fled his Tripoli headquarters and was probably "someplace in the middle of the desert."

"He has several times before gone into the desert when things got tight in Tripoli," the official, who declined use of his name, said. "He recharges his batteries in the desert."

Intelligence information reaching the government also reportedly indicated Khadafy may have been wounded in this week's raid. There was no information on the nature of the wound, if any, or on his location in the desert.

Khadafy appeared on Libyan television Wednesday night, condemning the United States for its attack and telling Americans, "We will not kill your children."

Khadafy Prompts Protests In Tripoli

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Protesters took to Tripoli's streets early today in a show of support for Col. Moammar Khadafy's demand that President Reagan be tried as a war criminal and murderer of children because of the U.S. bombing raid on Libya.

Khadafy spoke on state television late Wednesday in his first public appearance since U.S. planes bombed targets near Tripoli and Benghazi early Tuesday. The appearance quashed rumors he had been killed or overthrown.

Libyans have said Khadafy's 15-month-old daughter, Hana, was killed and two of his sons were seriously injured in the bombing of his home and office compound.

It could not be determined whether Khadafy's television appearance was live or taped, or where it took place. But his discussion of the raid proved he had survived it.

Khadafy, who was bare-headed and wore a white dress military uniform, said he would not be daunted by the air strike.

Soviets Reasserting Air, Surface Rights

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Foreign Ministry has summoned all foreign ambassadors in Moscow and asserted Soviet rights to passage in international waters and airspace around Libya, diplomatic sources said today.

There was no indication whether this was a prelude to major Soviet maneuvers or an increased Soviet naval presence in the Mediterranean, the sources said.

Ambassadors or ranking senior diplomats were called to the Foreign Ministry in groups late Wednesday and given oral statements about Moscow's reaction to Tuesday's U.S. bombing of the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi, the sources said.

Diplomats from three countries familiar with the Foreign Ministry meetings said the Soviet assertion of sea and air rights around Libya appeared to be a conventional measure aimed at reminding world governments the Soviet Union has previously carried out naval and air exercises in the Mediterranean and would continue to do so.

Nickle A Gallon Brings Crowd

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gasoline at 5.4 cents a gallon was an offer unemployed workers and hundreds of other motorists couldn't refuse, even if it meant waiting for hours in a mile-long line.

"When you're not working, a buck goes a long way," Ron Dreshman, 30, said as he relaxed in his car Wednesday. "For a dollar, I can ride around all week."

Dreshman took his place in line around 6:30 a.m. Wednesday, and five hours later was still a few blocks from his destination, a Texaco station participating in a promotion by Pittsburgh radio station WDVE.

"I saved $4 an hour today because I sat here," said Jeff

Weinberg, 26, before pulling out with a full tank of gas and balloons tied to his radio antenna.

The line of cars, vans and trucks began forming at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday, 7½ hours before the special sale was to begin. By noon Wednesday, the line stretched more than a mile.

"The customers are so great. They've been waiting so long, and they're still smiling," said Pierre Lucas, sales manager for Guttman Oil Co., which operates the gas station.

Some motorists listened to the radio or watched tiny portable televisions while they waited.

Bill Filed To Block Early Release Of Elderly Patients

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill to help prevent elderly patients from being prematurely discharged from hospitals was introduced today by lawmakers who say it would correct abuses of Medicare's prospective payment system.

Under the payment system being phased in since 1983, hospitals are reimbursed for treating Medicare patients according to their diagnosis.

The prospective payment system is intended to cut skyrocketing health care costs. But critics contend that because hospitals are paid a set fee per case, they have an incentive to send patients home before they are ready to be discharged.

The bill, which is co-sponsored by Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, and Rep. Fortney H. Stark, D-Calif., chairman of the House Ways and Means health subcommittee, would expand the rights of patients to appeal their discharges from hospitals.

The measure also would widen the responsibility of peer review organizations to monitor the care of Medicare patients in hospitals.

GNP Shows 4-Fold Rebound

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy showed a four-fold rebound in growth from January through March, helped out by the best news on inflation in almost two decades, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product, the broadest measure of the economy's health, grew at a 3.2 percent annual rate from January through March, the best growth rate in a year and more than four times the pace of activity during the last three months of 1985.

In a companion report, the Commerce Department said that corporations' after-tax profits rose 4 percent in the final quarter of 1985. The increase, the best performance since the third quarter of 1983, followed a 3.4 percent profits increase in the third quarter.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "All the recent signs of an economy gathering steam began to be realized this morning" with the news on the GNP. "Today's good news is made even better when you consider the fact that the rebound in GNP growth was accompanied by decreasing inflation," Speakes said.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the economy managed the 3.2 percent growth despite a wide number of cross-currents.

He said residential investment and consumer spending combined with the big drop in the trade deficit to push up growth while business capital spending fell sharply due to cutbacks in the purchase of computers, trucks and oil and gas drilling equipment.

The upturn in growth was aided by a steep decline in inflation. Prices, as measured by an inflation index tied to the GNP, were rising at an annual rate of just 2.5 percent in the first three months of the year. This was the slowest rate since no increase at all in the second quarter of 1987.

The 2.5 percent rise, as measured by the GNP deflator which covers a changing market basket of goods, was down from an annual rate of change of 3.3 percent in the final three months of 1985.

Ex-Player Now Sits On Sidelines

By CAROL TYER

During the past two softball seasons, Wesley (Rabbit) Barnett was a key player on the champion Tapscott team of the Greenville Coed Softball League.

He played right field, had a good batting average and ran so fast his teammates renamed him Rabbit, according to his coach, Linda Whitehurst.

During the league's tournament

Saturday at Evans Street Park No. 1, he will be cheering from the sidelines and his friends will be playing especially for him. Proceeds from team entry fees and concessions will be given to him to meet staggering medical and related expenses he's incurred during the past three months. Admission is free.

On Dec. 28, 1985, Rabbit broke his neck in a trampoline accident. Since then he's been a patient in the Regional Rehabilitation Center of Pitt County Memorial Hospital. He will get a special pass to attend the tournament and then expects to go home next week.

The accident occurred while Rabbit was checking out his cousin's children's new trampoline. An experienced trampolinist, he had already executed two perfect double flips when he attempted a third.

"I jumped high enough but not fast enough," he said. "Instead of coming down on my butt or feet as I usually did, I landed on my neck and it snapped. I didn't hit the side or anything — I landed right in the middle of the mat, but it was how I landed that made the difference."

He was rushed to Pitt Memorial, where he and his family were soon told he'd severed his spinal cord at C-7 — the lower part of the neck. He underwent surgery to fuse his spine at that point with a graft of a portion

Sister Help Shelter Irks Its Neighbors

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Some people who live in 70- and 80-year-old homes say they aren't against the mission of a shelter for battered women, but they don't want the facility in their neighborhood.

Officials with the Sister Help shelter, however, say the house they're using now is just what they need.

"We looked for this house for about a year," said David Bennett, a Winthrop College health professor who is a member of the Sister Help board.

"Physically, it meets our needs. It has an upstairs and a downstairs and two bathrooms. It is perfect. We couldn't have designed a better house."

wife beaters and traffic to the area. They also are concerned about the history of the neighborhood.

"It isn't that we were against the shelter," said resident Bonita Howey. "We were against the shelter being placed in a neighborhood like this."

"We felt like a more transitional neighborhood would be better; where more people are renting; where people who wanted to go could leave," she said.

Differences between the shelter and its neighbors came to light in December when shelter representatives asked city zoning officials to allow them on the street. Residents asked the board to deny the request.

But members of the zoning board agreed to allow the shelter to open for one year. They'll review their decision in December.

The shelter opened in February even though its new neighbors offered to pay part of its rent at another location.

"We did offer them alternatives that we hoped would show that we were not against the shelter," Ms. Howey said. "We have met several times as a neighborhood trying to decide what to do — what we could do to preserve the neighborhood."

Sister Help director Natalie Simpson said she didn't want others to dictate the center's location.

Clients won't disturb neighbors, Bennett said.

"Our location is secret, so they don't know where it is," he said.

At the shelter's previous location, which mistakenly was listed in the Rock Hill telephone directory, police were called three times in 18 months.

"None involved violence," Ms. Simpson said. "It was our policy that if a husband came to the door, we would call the police."

The shelter had to move because the former location wasn't big enough, Ms. Simpson. That shelter could accommodate 16 women and children, while the new house can hold up to 25.

Sister Help wants to get on with its work and will make changes requested by neighbors, Bennett said.

"We have done everything we can and if there's anything else, we will do it," he said. "We may be helping their daughters. We may be helping them. We're there for them. We don't want to be pitted against them. Unfortunately, it's taken on that appearance."

Homemaker's Haven

According to several polls taken over the past decade, many Americans do not know much about consumer protection laws or understand basic concepts about business and the economy.

To help you measure your understanding, the United States Office of Consumer Affairs has prepared a consumer quiz. If you get fewer than six answers right, perhaps you should brush up on your consumer skills.

1. This morning a salesman came to your door and sold you $50 worth of magazine subscriptions. Now you decide you don't want the magazines. What can you do?

2. You ordered a suit through the mail and it didn't arrive when the company said it would. What can you do?

3. When shopping for a loan to help finance your new car, you hear about annual percentage rates. What are they?

4. When foods are advertised or labeled as "100 percent natural," does that mean they may contain no additives or preservatives?

5. You receive two pairs of unsorted pantyhose in the mail along with a bill. Do you pay for the pantyhose?

6. There is a mistake on your monthly credit card bill. What should you do?

7. Your credit card was stolen without your knowledge. Before you had a chance to report the loss, the thief charged $1,000 worth of clothing. For how much of that amount you are liable?

8. What does the gross national product tell you?

9. Who or what is Dow Jones?

10. What is a debt collector allowed to do under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act?

Answers

1. You have three days to cancel your order. The salesman must give you a cancellation form at the time of sale.

2. Get a refund, unless you really want the suit and are willing to wait.

3. It is a unit price for credit expressed as a yearly percentage rate that takes into account all of the finance cost of the loan.

4. No. While many foods advertised or labeled as "natural" do not contain additives or preservatives, there is no prescribed definition of the term regulating its use. You can check a claim of "natural" by reading the ingredient list on the label.

5. No. If anything is mailed to you without your permission, you may keep it free, whether or not you are billed. But it's a good idea to let the company know you were billed for merchandise you didn't order. This rule does not apply if you agreed to purchase a certain number of books or records from a club.

6. While a phone call may resolve the problem quickly, sending a letter is the best way to trigger your rights under the Fair Credit Billing Act, a federal law that requires and uses the special billing error address provided by the company.

7. The maximum you owe is $50. After you report the card missing, you are not liable for any unauthorized purchases.

8. It tells the total market value of all goods and services produced by the United States during a specific period.

9. It's an index used to measure the increase or decrease in the price of a selected list of stocks traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

10. A debt collector may contact any person to try and locate you; however, in most cases he or she may not talk to any person more than once or refer to your debt in any way. The collector may not advertise your debt, tell you your wages may be garnished or your property seized, threaten you with a lawsuit or call at inconvenient times or places.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Hubby's Need for Order Is Blowing Wife's Cool

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a fanatic about neatness. When Harry (not his real name) comes home from work, he zooms through the house, snatching every toy he sees to put away. Our children, 2 and 4, may keep the toy they're holding—the rest Daddy sees as "clutter." It's hard to explain to a 3-year-old why she can't find the bear she was playing with only minutes before.

I am not a poor housekeeper, but I have to fight to keep the Sunday paper an extra day if I didn't finish reading it. Christmas morning Harry sat with a garbage bag while presents were being opened so the boxes and wrapping paper could be discarded immediately. ("Hand the trash to Daddy, then you may open another present.") Christmas card envelopes with addresses I needed were thrown out while the mail was being opened.

When Harry and I were dating, I teased him because he did his laundry every day. He explained that if anything happened to him, he didn't want anyone to find a pair of dirty socks in his apartment! I thought he was kidding; now I know he was serious.

My self-esteem as a housekeeper is shot because I can't keep everything perfect for Harry. Does Harry have a problem? Or do I have one?

END OF ROPE

DEAR END: Psychiatrists have a name for people like Harry. He's "compulsive obsessive"; everything must be in "perfect" order at all times or he's inappropriately upset. Your problem is dealing with your husband's compulsive behavior unless (or until) you can persuade him to see a therapist and put an end to it.

DEAR ABBY: While waiting for a smog check at a gasoline station, I met a man and we got to talking. I'm a widow, 68 years young. He told me he was a widower, age 70. As it turned out, we both belong to the same health club and we seem to have a lot in common. I liked his looks and thought he'd make a nice friend.

My car was ready first, so as I was paying my bill, I thought to myself, "Why not give him my phone number so he can call me?"

I tore a deposit slip with my name and address on it out of my checkbook and handed it to him, saying, "Here's my phone number. Call me, and maybe we can have coffee sometime." He smiled and seemed pleased.

Well, it's been two weeks, and I haven't heard a peep from him. Do you think I was too forward?

WAITING

DEAR WAITING: Too forward? Absolutely not. I say, "Shoot the ducks while they're flying!"

DEAR ABBY: I am 39, and last month my husband of three years died. We were very much in love, and the loss is almost unbearable.

In the past few weeks I've received dozens of cards and notes, for which I'm grateful, but many were addressed "Mrs. Jane Doe" or just "Jane Doe."

Abby, I'm widowed, not divorced! The omission of my husband's first name hurts me. Maybe I'm too sensitive, but my husband's name is dear to me. I've lost him; I don't want to lose his name as well.

Please remind your readers that a widow is entitled to, and wants to, use her husband's full name. It's one small way she can keep him close to her.

HEARTBROKEN IN OHIO

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Please accept my heartfelt condolences. I shall print your letter, hoping it will spare other widows the pain you have experienced.

Please consider that those who "hurt" you when they omitted your husband's first name in addressing their cards and notes of sympathy did so unwittingly. So give them an "A" for thoughtfulness and a "D" for lack of awareness.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

About five years ago I wrote a column about attending a party where I actually met a person who was not writing a book. I was drawn to him because he was surrounded by people who couldn't believe there was a person who was so out of it he thought an "agent" worked for the FBI and McGraw-Hill were sex therapists. He even thought writer's block was a local anesthetic. Because he was such an enigma, he got invited to a lot of parties as the "token non-literate."

Someone told me recently that he had passed on. I will miss just knowing he existed. He was the last non-author roaming the planet.

Everyone is writing a book, even when they are not writing a book. Someone figured out that six authors riding the best-seller list this year had someone write the book for them. So that means for every celebrity who is "writing a book," there is another person who is also writing the same book and the figure doubles.

Writing a book is close to baseball as the No. 1 sport in this country. It all started with politicians who didn't get elected. Someone would say, "What are you doing now?" and they'd say, "Writing my memoirs." So from former Presidents to local sheriffs you had people who roamed around in their pajamas all day at home drinking coffee with their status intact. It now embraces everyone who is between jobs, is recovering from a relationship or doesn't have a date of Saturday night.

Most people find that professing to writing a book is the easiest thing in the world. All you have to have is a title that is provocative and generic. That could run the gamut from "Fur Tongues in the Morning" (which will be a cookbook) to "Erotic Leftovers" (destined to be a Civil War epic). Some verbal authors steal from the classics. They figure if it worked once, it will work again. So you have everything from the guy who is writing "Everything You've Wanted to Know About Air Ducts But Were Afraid to Ask" to "Play Gone With the Wind Again, Sam."

There is another advantage to keeping a book in the talking stage. There is no limit on the amount of time it takes to complete it. Some people have killed as many as 10 or 15 years talking about their approach. Also, a book that never gets to paper is flexible. It can be put on hold until the children are grown, you paper the living room, Little League is over, you go on Daylight Savings Time, or you can find a parking place at the library for your research.

During the last six months or so, I've met a cabbie who hears voices and is planning to put it all down in manuscript form, a secretary who knows there's a hilarious book in an elevator that is always full when it gets to her floor, a housewife who has questionnaires out to 600 celebrities on their favorite cookie and a 6-year-old who is writing her memoirs.

I suppose if I can write 450 words on a man who never talked about writing a book ... anything is possible.

Clinton Girl Has Soviet Pen Pal

AP Member Exchange Feature
By JULIE HEDGEPEETH
Sampson Independent

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — Samantha Smith and Katerina Lycheva may have grabbed the headlines, but North Carolina has its own youthful hope for peace.

Soviet authorities invited Samantha, a Maine resident, to tour the U.S.S.R. several years ago after she wrote to the Soviet government and asked for peace.

During parts of March and April, Katerina, an 11-year-old Soviet girl, toured the United States on a peach mission.

Now Sampson Middle School seventh-grader Betsy Smoot is continuing the mission.

Betsy is operating a youthful peace mission of another sort. She's doing her part to break the barriers between the United States and the Soviet Union by striking up an unusual Soviet friendship.

Betsy and her sixth-grade classmates last year sent letters to schoolchildren in the Soviet Union as part of a language arts class letter-writing exercise.

This year, 12-year-old Betsy finally got a letter back. She was the only one of Becky Spell's 55 social studies students to get a reply.

The Clinton letters didn't carry a specific address, but Betsy's obviously got to Moscow. "We just wrote and they gave the letters to whoever," Betsy said.

Since she wrote her letter well over a year ago, Betsy can't remember exactly what she wrote to the Soviet schoolchildren. "I just told them that I was here in school and that I did the regular courses."

Betsy got the reply in the early part of this year. "My dad went to the mailbox and he came back saying, 'You got a letter from Russia!' It was really weird. I didn't know what to think."

The letter was from Yura Larichev, a 14-year-old boy who answered her in English. His English was impressive, she said. He only misspelled a few words.

Betsy said she couldn't have hoped to have written him in Russian. She wrote him in English. "I'm not sure how to pronounce his name," she admitted.

From the boy's letter, Betsy learned that he lives in Moscow, in the center of the city. Yura also enclosed his picture.

Yura greeted his pen pal with a cheery "Hello, Betsy!" and told her he is in the 8th form of a mathematics school. He studies and even reads books in English, and wants to become an economist.

Aside from his school work, Yura says he enjoys painting and skiing. Noting that Clinton this year had one snowfall that didn't even cover the grass, Betsy said Yura couldn't do much snow skiing if he came to visit her.

The Soviet boy also told Betsy that he collects model cars.

Yura wanted to know about North Carolina, and he asked if Betsy studied any foreign languages.

"He said he sent me some postcards, but they took them out when they checked the mail," Betsy said. Her letter came only with Yura's picture, not with any postcards.

Betsy wondered why she was the only one who heard from a Soviet child in response to the class's letters.

"I feel like maybe everybody else had something in their letter that they weren't supposed to, so maybe mine was the only one that got through," she said.

Betsy knows her letter-writing effort won't end threats of war and a nuclear arms race by itself. She wishes the whole nation could join in to help relax the superpowers' tensions.

"I feel like if we can write back and forth and help get countries together — if people all over the United States could write to Russia — maybe it would help," Betsy said. "I hope to hear from him again."

Yura finished his letter with "P.S. I am waiting for your letter."

Betsy has kept her end of the pen pal relationship going.

"He was asking me about things in my state, so I wrote back and said we grow a lot of tobacco here," she said.

Teflon Has Glided A Quarter Century

By PETER COY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Teflon is in jogging suits, artificial aortas and the Statue of Liberty, but when it was first applied to cookware 25 years ago, it was a flash in the pan.

True, eggs didn't stick to the pan's metal surface. But neither did the Teflon. The coating peeled badly.

"The result was a disaster," Du Pont admits in its history of the product. "By the end of 1961 the future of Teflon was in jeopardy."

On the advice of consultants, Du Pont changed its advertising and gave cookware makers explicit rules on how to make pots that wouldn't peel.

Sales shot up 500 percent in six months in 1962 and Teflon cookware went on to become a hit of the decade, as much a part of the culture as transistor radios and wood-paneled station wagons.

Television commercials of 1966 showed a woman racing the clock to clean six Teflon-coated pots and pans in 60 seconds. At the end the disappointed announcer would say, "Would you believe five?"

Teflon — Du Pont's brand name for the plastic resin polytetrafluoroethylene — was discovered by accident in 1938 by Roy J. Plunkett, a Du Pont scientist who was trying to find a new kind of refrigerant gas. He was inducted into the Inventors Hall of Fame last year.

The most slippery solid known to humanity has gone into Gore-Tex jogging suits, chainsaw blades and the metal underpinnings of the Statue of Liberty. It protects carpets and couches from dirt and scrubs particles from the smoke of coal-burning plants.

Artificial veins and arteries are made from a Teflon derivative. So are the coatings of bullets that can pierce bulletproof vests.

To Du Pont's dismay, the word has even entered the language as a tag, in certain political circles, for Ronald Reagan's presidency. Criticism doesn't stick, some say.

Still, Teflon remains best known as the substance that has saved millions of cooks from standing over their kitchen sinks with the hot water gushing, digging at their frying pans with sharp metal implements.

Du Pont brags that Teflon cookware produces better food — omelets are less likely to shrivel up — and promotes health because cooks don't need to use gobs of oil.

Teflon II succeeded the original Teflon in 1968. In 1976, Du Pont introduced the more durable Teflon product called SilverStone. SilverStone Supra, the latest incarnation, was announced in December.

Teflon's path to success has been greased by changes in the American lifestyle. Life has sped up and people have less time for scrubbing. More people, especially women, raise families on their own and insist on convenient cleanup.

No-fat frying has proved to be a big selling point, too — but not at first. Du Pont's flop in 1961 was blamed in part on targeting the then-narrow market of health-conscious consumers.

Cholesterol was less important than convenience to women questioned by the advertising agency of N.W. Ayer & Son Inc. in 1962. So Teflon's theme became, "No-stick cooking with no-scur cleanup."

Appealing to homemakers was something new for Du Pont, which until then had sold Teflon strictly for military and industrial purposes.

The first Teflon-coated cookware went on sale at Macy's department store in New York shortly before Christmas 1960 and was quickly sold out in spite of 17 inches of snow. The ill-fated national rollout began the next year.

Today, roughly half the pots and pans sold in the United States have non-stick surfaces, and 85 percent or more of the non-sticks use SilverStone, various sources say.

Heavier promotion and better sales to young women who prize quick cleanup have contributed to a rise in the non-stick business in the last five years, says Rogers Vaughn, the business manager for SilverStone at Du Pont headquarters in Wilmington, Del.

"If you look at women who are under 40, compared to women who are over 40, they have a value of convenience," Vaughn said. "The older people are more into the spring-cleaning, fall-cleaning ethic."

Teflon's biggest drawback has always been its susceptibility to scratching, a problem Du Pont has lessened over the years but never entirely conquered. The company still recommends that cooks use plastic or wooden utensils and clean up with plastic scouring pads.

Along with toughening Teflon, Du Pont has had to dissuade consumers from the false notion that a scratched pan is unhealthy. "Teflon's used in the medical profession," Vaughn said. "There's no harm at all."

Teflon still faces incursions from several corners of the kitchen. Most Teflon goes onto lightweight aluminum pots and pans, and the growth of gourmet cooking has caused some people to switch to heavier-gauge, uncoated stainless steel or cast iron.

Du Pont also has some non-stick competitors scratching for market share, the biggest being T-Fal Corp. of Fairfield, N.J.

T-Fal, which unlike Du Pont makes its own cookware, has roughly 10 percent of the U.S. non-stick market, says Henry Read, T-Fal's vice president for marketing and sales.

Nearly 82 percent of homeowners will plant summer flowering bulbs this year, according to Better Homes and Gardens. The most popular bulbs are iris, lily, gladioli and begonia.

Optimism

While it may turn out to be true that North Carolina's challenge to selection of two N.C. sites as potential locations for high-level nuclear waste dumps is a winner, a lot of optimism is involved.

Lynn Muchmore, assistant secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development says the response to the Department of Energy is so strong that it rules out both possible locations for dump sites in North Carolina.

The one-inch thick document is expected to be enough to disqualify a site east of Raleigh and another west of Asheville. (In all, 12 sites were listed by the Department of Energy as potential locations for repositories nobody wants.)

Optimism over anticipated reaction to the Tar Heel response appears largely based on evidence that information DOE used came from a geologic map that is inconsistent and inaccurate ... with 17 geologically "young" faults in and near the Rolesville area omitted from the map and that the DOE ignored core samples that showed passage of fluids through rocks in those samples.

This, we're told, shows groundwater in the Rolesville area comes partly from cracks in the bedrock and that groundwater is extensively used at present and its use is certain to increase in the future.

It is also argued that Wendell and Zebulon (in Wake County) have population densities well over 1,000 per square mile and the areas are entitled (under the 1982 Nuclear Waste Policy Act) to immediate disqualification from further consideration for possible repository siting.

Muchmore says he's hoping federal energy officials will begin to wonder if surveying, drilling holes, stirring up the local economies and disrupting the general fabric of communities is anything more than a waste of time and money.

It worries us, too. Often, officialdom has time to spare and a feeling that if money is unspent it betrays a lack of zeal for getting things done.

We haven't heard the end of it.

Near Habit

We'd have to count the U.S. air strike against Khadafy's nest as a success. It's becoming a habit.

The Grenada Affair betrayed a rather ragged edge, but the mission was accomplished.

The capture of those cruise ship hijackers was the product of blending hi-tech with superb planning and execution. The mission was accomplished.

The Naval presence to affirm right of passage into the Gulf of Sidra was another blue-ribbon example of planning, execution and self-discipline. The point was made.

And finally, the retaliation against Moammar Khadafy's regime for unleashing a terrorist attack against a German nightclub catering to American servicemen. The dark-of-night raid involved not only on-site Navy warplanes but a flight of Air Force planes from far-away Britain ... finding their targets with amazing accuracy in the same time-frame Navy pilots were carrying out their assignment.

It was grandstanding that worked.

In its wake, the disorganized Khadafy forces were shooting down aircraft that were "not there" amid reports of street skirmishes in Tripoli near Khadafy's headquarters.

The impression persists Libyans were shooting at Libyans; and the leader initially was not around to meet reporters ... an opportunity he rarely misses.

There's a lot to be said for spreading frustration among the ranks of barefaced outlaws.

We can do things right.

REA Subsidies Thing Of Past

WASHINGTON — In his budget message a few weeks ago, President Reagan renewed a recommendation he made last year and the year before. He called for a phasing-out of subsidies for the Rural Electrification Administration. Now the REA itself has released some data that strongly support the president's request.

The REA, you will recall, was created in 1935 to bring electric power to the boondocks. At that time, fewer than 5 percent of the nation's farms had electric service. Farm families lived under conditions that seem almost unimaginable to most Americans today — no electric lights, no radios, no telephones, no water pumps, no flush toilets. Children studied in the evenings by the dim light of kerosene lanterns.

Fifty years have made a tremendous difference in rural America, and the REA cooperatives can take much credit for the change. Today almost 99 percent of all farms have electric power available to them. Except for a few isolated areas in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Nevada, Wyoming, Montana and the Dakotas, the job is effectively done.

The job is done, but the subsidies go on — and the subsidies have become patently indefensible. Over the past 10 years, more than 80 percent of the $8.3 billion in subsidized REA loans have not gone to "rural" areas at all. These loans have not helped farm families. They have benefited suburbanites. What sense does that make?

The REA cites chapter and verse. In the wealthy ski resort areas of Aspen and Vail, Colo., the Holy Cross Electric Association of Glenwood Springs recently obtained a 5 percent loan of $13.7 million. The proceeds will hook up 8,000 urban customers whose connections, on average, are only 250 feet apart.

Down in Florida, the Lee County Electric Cooperative of North Fort Myers obtained five loans between 1980 and 1984 totaling $42.4 million. Were these for "rural" electrifications? Not at all. They were to serve 33,000 city folks at the rate of 22 connections per mile of line.

In the Atlanta area, seven REA cooperatives obtained 24 loans between 1983 and 1985. The loans total-

WASHINGTON (AP) — If a foreign power bombed the White House while President Reagan or his family were sleeping inside, could the conclusion be any other than that it was trying to kill him?

Did the Reagan administration try to kill Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy in Monday's bombing? His home was heavily damaged and an infant daughter was killed and two small sons injured, according to Libya.

The administration acknowledged Khadafy's home may have been hit because it was near some military barracks that were a target. But it said if Khadafy's family was among the casualties that was unfortunate happenstance.

"We're not trying to assassinate Colonel Khadafy," said Richard Murphy, the assistant secretary of state for Middle East affairs, when the question was raised before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee Wednesday.

"We want to change his behavior," explained Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman.

Nor was an overthrow of the Khadafy government the aim, the officials said.

"We're not trying to pick for the Libyan people the leadership that they ought to have," Murphy said. "That's not going to be our choice."

By presidential executive order, assassinations are off-limits. Attempting to topple a foreign government without first declaring war is a violation of international law under the United Nations charter.

Retaliatory strikes also are a violation of international law, even if they are against a country that is linked to terrorism, as was Libya. But self-defense against another country is not a violation, and Reagan justified the attack on Libya as self-defense, an explanation that has been widely accepted in Congress.

The administration's contempt for Khadafy is well known. Reagan last week called him "this evil man" and the "mad dog of the Middle East." Secretary of State George Shultz, who long had urged a military strike against Libya, has said the aim of American policy is to "put Khadafy back in his box where he belongs."

Although it is officially denied, the belief is widespread that the administration had sought to lure the Libyans into the fight over international waterway rights in the Gulf of Sidra three weeks ago. In a quick escalation, the Gulf of Sidra clash was followed by the April 5 terrorist strike on a West Berlin nightclub — which the administration says was carried out by Libya — and then to Reagan's order for Monday's air strike.

One of the targets when American warplanes bombed Tripoli was the Bab al-Azziziya Barracks in Tripoli, where Khadafy's home is located. Khadafy doesn't always stay there.

Khadafy's family pediatrician, Dr. Mohammed Muafa, told reporters a blast that hit near the house caused Khadafy's 15-month-old adopted daughter, Hana, to suffer a skull fracture and internal injuries which proved fatal. Two sons, 4-year-old Sef and 3-year-old Camis, were hospitalized in serious condition with internal injuries, the doctor said. Khadafy's wife and the rest of his eight children also were at home, and all reportedly suffered from shock.

The military installation that was the target of the attack was a 10- to 15-acre complex with a reception hall, barracks, individual houses and an open field where there is a sand-bagged tent in which Khadafy often works.

Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the subcommittee before which Murphy testified, told The Associated Press afterward that he didn't think the administration had attempted to kill Khadafy "but it might change things considerably if it was a byproduct of our attack."

"I don't like to see any human being killed, but would there be any love lost, are you kidding?" Obey said. As for the attack itself, he said, "I would feel more comfortable if we had an overall policy aim that didn't have to depend on getting lucky to have some good come out of it."

Although Speakes and Murphy denied the United States was trying to overthrow Khadafy, Speakes didn't specifically deny an Egyptian newspaper report late last month which said the administration had on three occasions sought Egypt's help in a joint military action against Libya.

Speakes neither confirmed nor denied the report, but said, "We and the Egyptians have a common perception of regional security issues. Our relations in this area have been closely and mutually profitable."

New Awards Available

RALEIGH — Mother Theresa, are you hiding somewhere in North Carolina? If you are, the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation wants to give you $25,000.

The foundation is looking for people who, like the sainted nun of Calcutta, are giving greatly of themselves at the community level in North Carolina. As many as three North Carolinians will be honored each year with outright grants of $5,000 and the opportunity to direct another $20,000 to the charities of their choice.

"Society should pay tribute not only to those well-known and well-recognized leaders, but also to lesser known leadership among men and women whose courage and hard work probably are more important and more deserving," Smith Bagley, president of the foundation, said in announcing the awards.

The foundation says the awards — called the Nancy Susan Reynolds Awards in memory of Bagley's late mother — are unique in the United States. There are many awards which recognize excellence in an individual's field, or which heap more glory upon the already prominent, Bagley said. But these awards are designed to note the achievements of the unnoted in the wide open field of "grassroots leadership."

"The greatness of North Carolina is founded not on a few prominent leaders who have come forth from time to time," Bagley said, "but on the common man, whose contributions to the common good are woven into the lasting fabric of this state."

The awards to individuals demonstrates a fundamental shift in direction for the foundation, Bagley said. In its first 25 years, the foundation contributed almost exclusively to capital projects of established organizations. In the past 25 years, it has begun serving a more populist cause, funneling increasing amounts of money into service programs run by non-profit organizations. (In 50 years, the foundation has contributed $127 million to non-profit programs in North Carolina.)

With these awards, the foundation is moving away from the institutional element of service programs and recognizing that there are North Carolinians doing good work in our communities who have not registered themselves as charities with the Internal Revenue Service.

Pressed to give an example of the kind of person the foundation is seeking, Bagley named Mother Theresa. "I don't think many of us had heard of Mother Theresa before she got all those big awards," he said. "There are major things happening in our communities that have not been recognized." The foundation hopes that when it finds the people who are doing these big things, it can bring them the kind of publicity Mother Theresa's work in Calcutta has received.

"It should be a person who has made a major contribution within the small area in which they're working. Maybe it is only helping 10 or 15 people but maybe it is something which can be emulated in other communities," he said.

While the foundation is not ruling out anyone, it's pretty obvious that they're not looking to reward the top candy bar salesman for the local civic club, even though the club has done good work in the community. A great deal of originality in the good works will also be needed.

Bagley conceded that, by rewarding those who advocate change, the foundation may upset those who oppose change. "To some extent, there may be some need for stirring things up," he said.

But the main goal of the awards is to find the community leaders who are working for the common good and to highlight their achievements so we can all try to copy, and improve upon, their work.

Strength For Today

The word "commencement" constitutes a precious discovery. It really means that when one is finished with his education or any part of it he has finished nothing. In fact, he stands at the beginning — the commencement of greater things yet to come.

A certain wise old professor used to advise young people: "Spend most of the first 30 years of your life getting an education — as much as you can get. Then the years from 30 to 60 should be career years. After 60, use what's left to straighten things up and do some of the things you always wanted to do and couldn't find the time."

Does life begin at 40? No. Physically it begins at the outset of the year 1. But remember that educationally life begins when we finish our formal schooling. And then what a future opens before those of us who are living in a free country in the 20th century!

The Falkland Elementary School Parent-Teacher Organization held its final meeting of the year Tuesday to present a silver bowl to school secretary Patricia Dail for her service to the school.

Science fair winners were honored and the school chorus presented a spring concert.

Officers announced by the nominating committee for 1986-87 included: Carol Register, president; Linda Gray, vice president; Patricia Barnes, treasurer; Brenda Bunn, program chairman; Lillian Cobb, membership chairman; Debra Ross, project chairman, and Martha Flowers, vice chairman.

Current president Martha Flowers received a silver tray for her year of service.

Foreign Students

There are 128 students from various European, African, Asian and Latin American nations enrolled at East Carolina University this spring, according to an ECU Division of Student Life spokesman.

Of the 41 countries represented on campus, Malaysia has the largest group with 39 students, followed by British Hong Kong with nine, Norway with seven and Jordan with six. No other foreign country has more than four students at ECU.

Also attending ECU are students who have become citizens or permanent residents of the United States and do not list their nations of origin in their home addresses.

500th Flight Logged

EastCare, Pitt County Memorial Hospital's air ambulance, logged its 500th flight April 1, seven days before the service's first anniversary.

The number of flights made by the service is well ahead of projections, said Dr. Nicholas Benson, EastCare medical director. The center had projected the service would make 400 flights during its first year of operation which ended April 8.

The 500th flight brought a 10-week-old infant from Roanoke-Chowan Hospital in Ahoskie to Pitt Memorial's Children's Hospital.

The Police Department has initiated a "Citizen Ride Along" Program for Greenville residents who are interested in seeing how police operate while on patrol. If interested, call 752-3342 for details.

Student Presidents To Meet

The presidents of North Carolina public universities will assemble Friday for a press conference on the grounds of the state Capitol building to announce a lobbying effort directed at "the state government officials responsible for the initiation and implementation of policies affecting students within the UNC system," according to a statement from the East Carolina University student body president.

A press release issued from the of-ice of David Brown, ECU student body president, said the student body presidents of the universities combine to form the University of North Carolina Association of Student Governments, "a group dedicated to insuring and advocating the rights and welfare of all UNC students."

Topics to be discussed will include the effects of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction law on UNC schools, the proposed nuclear waste repository sites in North Carolina, General Assembly funding for handicapped barrier removal on campuses and violation of student's rights to register as a voter in local elections.

Retail Sales Rise In '85

RALEIGH (AP) — Retailers in North Carolina took in about $4 billion more last year than they did in 1984, ringing up sales of $53.9 billion in 1985, according to the state Department of Revenue.

But state revenue officials said the actual gain for 1985 might be less than the figures indicate because the state changed the method by which it collects retail sales taxes.

Beginning in August 1985, the state required some merchants to submit their sales tax collections twice a month instead of monthly. The rule, which applies only to large merchants that remit at least $20,000 monthly, means figures for the 1985 calendar year also includes data from the first 15 days of January 1986.

The state said gross retail sales for 1985 totaled $53,906,672,177 over a 12½-month period, compared with $50,015,461,342 for 1984 over a 12-month period, officials said.

Attacks ...

daughter was reported killed in the raid. There had been speculation, because Khadafy had not appeared publicly since the attack that he might have been killed or left the country.

It was unclear where the broadcast originated.

In Sudan, the administration prepared to evacuate Americans because of the shooting of the embassy employee, an influx of Libyans into the country and massive anti-American demonstrations in the capital city of Khartoum.

The victim, identified by a colleague at the Khartoum embassy as William J. Calkins, 33, was evacuated to a hospital in Jidda, Saudi Arabia. He was in serious condition with a single bullet wound in the head, State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said.

The department, citing the Privacy Act, would not release the victim's name.

A department official, declining to be named publicly, said Americans and their dependents would take regular flights out of the country.

Officials, citing security reasons, declined to say when the evacuation would take place. There are about 200 American officials, with an equal number of dependents, and about 700 other Americans in Sudan.

Administration officials from President Reagan down, bridling at Soviet condemnation of the U.S. attack, say the Soviet Union refused to help fight the terrorism that forced the United States to take to "the field of battle" as a last resort.

The Soviets protested Monday's attack on Libya by calling off a May meeting between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze designed to pave the way for a superpower summit this year.

German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, at a White House meeting Wednesday, asked Reagan about the Soviet decision.

"The president said ... the Soviet decision seemed to him out of line with their protestations about combating terrorism," said a senior administration official who attended the meeting and discussed it on condition he not be named.

Reagan, speaking at a ceremony in which he proclaimed May 1 as Law Day, said, "Sometimes, as we saw recently, the fight to preserve freedom and the rule of law must be carried to the field of battle."

In a letter to congressional leaders, he said the bombing raid was within the right of self-defense under the United Nations charter. He said the letter met the requirements of the War Powers Act, which says the president must notify Congress when troops are sent into combat.

"Should Libyan-sponsored terrorist attacks against United States citizens not cease, we will take appropriate measures necessary to protect United States citizens in the exercise of our right of self-defense," Reagan added.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Tribune reported in today's editions that the choice of targets in the Libya bombing was made partly with an eye to sparking a possible coup against Khadafy.

Citing unidentified intelligence sources in Washington, the newspaper said the targets, including Khadafy's personal headquarters, were carefully selected in order to strengthen the hand of disaffected elements in the Libyan military.

The Tribune also said its sources described the air strike as being only one of a year-long series of U.S.-supported attempts to topple Khadafy.

The report said U.S. intelligence has been in touch with Libyan dissident groups through Egyptian contacts, and has attempted to determine the relative loyalty to Khadafy of various elements of the Libyan military.

Tripoli ...

ment of popular revolution, whatever raids they carry out," he said.

Scores of European businessmen went to Tripoli Airport this morning, hoping for flights out of the country. The airport was closed to commercial flights Tuesday and reopened Wednesday, but in Malta, a spokesman for Air Malta said it was closed again today. Among targets of the U.S. raids was the military section of the airport.

Khadafy was seated during his speech late Wednesday, and his gestures were limited to occasional nodding and turning of his head. His voice seemed strong and there were no signs of facial injuries.

In Washington, U.S. government sources said intelligence information indicated Khadafy, possibly wounded, may have left his headquarters compound and gone into the desert. The report was not confirmed in Tripoli.

Libya has not issued casualty figures from the U.S. attack, but Western diplomats say at least 100 people were killed.

During Khadafy's speech, a government official watching with foreign reporters in Tripoli's Al-Kabir Hotel wept with relief, saying, "He's all right. Everything is all right now."

Study Panel Fails To Agree On School Changes

RALEIGH (AP) — Opposition from Gov. Jim Martin and State Superintendent Craig Phillips led to an erosion of support for legislation that would revamp the governance system of North Carolina's public schools, a state senator says.

Sen. Robert Warren, D-Johnston, said since a legislative study commission failed to agree on how to reorganize the system during its final meeting Wednesday, the issue may be held up until the 1987 Legislature.

Warren, the commission's chairman, had hoped to get the panel to endorse a Senate-passed bill he introduced to make the state superintendent an appointed rather than an elected official. The bill calls for a constitutional amendment and public referendum.

He said the commission could not agree on any other measure and voted to make no recommendation during the General Assembly's short session in June.

"There was a lot of sentiment expressed for Senate Bill 46, but there was also feeling that with the erosion of some of the support of the bill, it would be difficult to get it passed in the House, and if it did pass, it would be difficult to get it passed on a referendum," Warren said.

"I'm not sure that we didn't slip back a step today, but we'll look at it in the fall and maybe take two steps ahead," he said. "I'd like to see this problem solved in my lifetime."

Officials generally agree the governance of the public schools needs major reorganization to create clearer lines of authority and accountability.

The commission will continue to study the question if the Legislature takes no action this summer, he said.

Without the commission's backing, Warren said, the bill isn't likely to be taken up on the House floor in June. The bill is pending in the House Constitutional Amendments Committee, where it was sent after it ran into opposition on the floor.

Phillips had supported the Senate bill last summer, but after he decided to seek a sixth term in 1988, he shifted his support to a new proposal before the commission that would make the superintendent an elected chairman of the board. He said he could live with the Senate bill but doubted it would pass a public vote. Warren said the proposal Phillips favored had no support on the commission.

Martin had privately endorsed the bill last summer. He changed his mind this spring when he decided that he could not accept a provision that would create some legislative appointments to the State Board of Education. The governor now appoints 11 of the board's 13 members; the other two members are the lieutenant governor and state treasurer.

N.C. Journalist Makes Space List

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

In the company of CBS correspondent Walter Cronkite and free-lance journalist Geraldo Rivera, Frank Tursi says he's honored to be named North Carolina's only representative among 100 semifinalists for the first journalist in space.

"As a journalist, it would be the ultimate," Tursi, the Winston-Salem Journal's science and medical reporter, said Wednesday. "It would be the biggest story I'll ever have to cover. I'd like the professional challenge to cover something of that magnitude."

"Personally, I think it'd be a hell of a trip — wearing a space suit, floating around, pushing buttons and electronic gadgets," he added. "I've always had an interest in space, being brought up on B movies and Star Trek. That's the first thing I'll say: 'Beam me up, Scotty.'"

Tursi said it's time journalists follow astronauts into space.

"I think there's a legitimate place, more so than a teacher or a politician for a journalist (in space) because it's a legitimate news event and needs to be covered as such," he said.

"I also look at it from a historical viewpoint. There's always been a guy with a notebook following all pioneers ... there's always been someone to record what's going on. It's time to send someone out with this latest wave of pioneers."

Tursi, 34, learned March 24 that he had been selected as a finalist when he received a letter from the University of South Carolina. He said he knew from the moment he read about the program that he wanted to be an applicant.

"Many people have fantasized about traveling in space, and when the program was announced, I said 'Sure, why not,'" Tursi said.

The semifinalists will be interviewed at five regional spots, including the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where Tursi will be up against national names such as James Wooten and Barry Serafin of ABC News and James Reston of Newsweek.

But Tursi isn't hindered by the competition.

"If they're looking for just a show, then they should pick a big name," he said. "But if they're looking for a serious journalist who will cover the job seriously, then I've got as legitimate a chance as anybody."

Joe Goodman, managing editor of the Journal, said he did not know what the selection committee's criteria are for choosing the first journalist in space.

"I think if they're looking for a reporter who can sort of speak for the heart of America ... Tursi's the man," Goodman said. "He hasn't been poisoned by the view from the Potomac."

Tursi began as a copy editor at the Journal in 1978 and moved to reporting last October. "His great gift as an editor was his ability to design pages and to have some appreciation for arts and graphics," Goodman said.

He said he believed that ability made Tursi "a full-dimensional journalist who sees things as a photographer and an artist. His ability as a writer allows him to translate things colorfully."

Tursi admitted to a momentary feeling of doubt when the space shuttle Challenger exploded, killing all seven aboard.

"My wife called — I was at work — and said 'You're not going,'" Tursi said.

Although he was shocked and saddened by the explosion, Tursi said he had the feeling of many other applicants: "Let's keep going. Tragedies happen and, of course, you hope it's not you. But I don't believe it's a good enough reason to back out or scrap the program."

"I have confidence that this next shuttle will be the safest in history," he said. "What's happened unfortunately is that NASA has become a space freight industry, launching commercial satellites and competing with European space agencies."

The 100 journalists were selected from a group of 1,703 applicants, which included reporters, editors, columnists, news directors, anchors and a photographer.

The nominees include 37 people who work for newspapers, 36 from radio and television, 12 from magazines, four from wire services and 11 free-lance journalists.

Albert T. Scroggins, chief program officer for the project, said applicants were selected on the basis of demonstrated professionalism and ability to communicate.

In the next phase of the selection process, semifinalists from each region will be interviewed by panels at five journalism schools.

Study Chief Critical Of State's Response

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has responded inadequately to the chance that a high-level nuclear waste dump will be placed in the state and lacks a coordinated, comprehensive plan to fight the dump, says the chairman of a study panel on radioactive wastes.

"I just don't think the state of North Carolina's response has been adequate, under this governor and under previous administrations," said Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood. "We should have been on this two years ago."

Hipps also said Wednesday he had been "shocked" by Gov. Jim Martin's statements in a recent public hearing that appeared to disparage the Joint Study Committee on High-Level Radioactive Wastes' involvement in the matter.

He said Martin, in testimony during a U.S. Department of Energy public hearing earlier this month in Waynesville, had spoken of a "rival political front" that was duplicating the efforts of his administration.

"That bothers me ... I was shocked," Hipps said. "I didn't realize we were setting up rival political fronts. I thought we were all working together."

Raleigh Couple Has Quads After In-Vitro Fertilization

DURHAM (AP) — Bruce Rosenberg says he and his wife, Gail, don't plan to have any more children in this lifetime.

The Raleigh couple announced Wednesday that they are the parents of artificially conceived quadruplets — three boys and a girl — born nine weeks premature April 9 at Duke University Medical Center.

The Rosenbergs said they were told in October to expect four babies, which gave them time to prepare.

"After the initial shock, it gets easier and easier," said Mrs. Rosenberg, 32, a public relations account manager who delivered the first quadruplets under Duke's artificial in-vitro fertilization program.

"Everyone should have four, but ask us in six months."

Duke University doctors said at a news conference that three of the four babies delivered by Caesarean section have been taken off oxygen and the fourth is expected to be removed soon.

Dr. Jane Brazy, one of the infants' doctors, said although the quadruplets all had respiratory distress syndrome, a lung disorder common to premature babies, they were recovering well and had suffered no major complications.

Jessica Lauren, the first to be delivered, weighed 2 pounds, 14 ounces; Jonathan Harris, 3 pounds; Matthew David, 2 pounds, 9 ounces; and Michael Jay, 3 pounds, 2 ounces, doctors said.

"If they were four boys, we were going to immediately sign a letter of intent to the University of North Carolina," said Rosenberg, 33, a UNC graduate employed by an accounting firm. "Maybe they could run the four corners in 20 years."

The pregnancy was the Rosenberg's first attempt under Duke's infertility program, Rosenberg said.

"We had been on adoption lists and at adoption clinics, so this is so much more than we ever expected to have, not only in terms of numbers," Rosenberg said. "We feel very fortunate."

Dr. Daniel Whitesides said the Rosenbergs are the first to deliver quadruplets under the three-year-old in-vitro, or "test-tube," fertilization program at Duke. Whitesides said it is the second set of in-vitro quadruplets delivered in the United States and the third in the world.

About 10 to 12 couples have delivered children under the program since 1983, Whitesides said.

Shellfish Damage Expected To Be Minimal From Spill

By The Associated Press
 There are no signs that 13,000 gallons of fuel oil spilled from a barge in the Intracoastal Waterway killed oysters and clams, but officials are still investigating to see what caused the spill and assess damage to shellfish.

Meanwhile, parts of the waterway and the Shallotte River remain closed to clamming.

"In all likelihood, we could open up those areas, but we're going to let them stay closed a little longer," George Gilbert, assistant supervisor of the state Division of Shellfish Sanitation in Morehead City, said Wednesday.

He said the areas near the March 17 spill were kept closed mainly as a precaution because a film of oil remained. Gilbert said there was no oyster harvesting in the area at this time of year and relatively little clamming in the two sections that remain closed.

The U.S. Coast Guard and state environmental agencies are investigating the spill. An estimate of damages and a decision on whether the incident will result in a fine hasn't been determined, officials said.

Oyster season had already ended at the time of the spill. Clamming in the river and in nearby sections of the Intracoastal Waterway was banned for 10 days after the spill while state agencies tested clams for the presence of oil. Most of the closed area reopened March 28 after laboratory and taste tests of shellfish indicated no contamination.

Lt. Cmdr. Keith Moll, chief of operations for the Coast Guard's marine safety office in Wilmington, said a cleanup operation and inspections indicated 311 barrels of oil, or 13,062 gallons, had spilled. The ruptured tank held 60,000 gallons, he said, but part of the oil was pumped to another barge.

"There is still some sheening in the area due to the (petroleum) product coating on the marsh grass," Moll said. "In general, the area looks good."

Moll said Coast Guard investigators have not pinpointed the cause of the spill. He said their findings would be included in a report, expected to be completed in a couple of weeks.

"The indication we have is that the barge struck something, but what we don't know....," he said.

The barge, owned by Chatham Towing Co. of Savannah, Ga., was en route to Morehead City with a load of No. 6 fuel oil when it began leaking near Shallotte Point and Holden Beach.

Gilbert said depending on the outcome of further tests and sampling next week, the closed sites may be reopened within several days.

Insurance Suggestions

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative study commission will likely recommend to the Legislature's short session most of the proposals it has reviewed that would tighten state regulation of insurance companies and reduce their liability, a lawmaker says.

"I think it can all go," Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, said Wednesday in an interview.

The General Assembly's Liability and Property Insurance Markets Study Commission on Wednesday took no action on the proposals but will consider them again at a meeting May 9.

Some proposals called for changes in the civil court system, including limits to some court awards. Others called for changes in state regulation of commercial liability insurers, such as restricting the cancellation of coverage.

The commission is studying the rising cost and shrinking availability of liability insurance, a national problem that triggered a special session of the General Assembly in June.

Death Sentence

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — Saying that he was sorry for the family of Karin Gibson Monroe but that he didn't kill her, Casey Jack Monroe was sentenced to death for the shotgun slaying of the Laurinburg social worker.

The jury that deliberated four hours on the sentence Wednesday convicted Monroe, 23, of Laurinburg, of first-degree murder Tuesday in the February 1985 slaying.

Monroe's execution date was set for June 20, but was stayed. Capital cases are automatically appealed.

Ms. Monroe, 40, disappeared after visiting low-income clients in a mobile home park about 15 months ago. The two weren't related.

Her body was found in a wooded area of northeastern Scotland County near a textile plant where Monroe worked. He was charged with the murder shortly after her body was found March 6, 1985.

School Principals

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Principals must take the lead in pushing for change to improve school systems and individual schools, the new president of the University of North Carolina system told a conference of principals.

"You people, the principals, are at the position where change can be made," C.D. Spangler Jr., who became president of the UNC system March 1, said Wednesday. "The strength and skill of the principal is the key feature in the successful school."

Spangler addressed about 65 principals from across the state who were attending the Principals' Executive Program Update Conference at the Institute of Government on the Chapel Hill campus.

Moravian Synod Meets

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Moravians are known for their warm fellowship and sense of community, traits that can actually discourage the denomination's evangelistic efforts, the president of the Provincial Elders' Conference told a triennial church synod.

"Our congregations continue to struggle to find a comfortable and effective style of evangelism, although in some instances we may be just plain apathetic as regards those outside the fellowship of Christ's people," the Rev. Graham H. Rights said.

He spoke to 228 voting delegates at the synod of the Southern Province, which continues at Home Moravian Church through Friday.

Since 1983, the province's rolls show a net increase of only 106 members in a total enrollment of about 21,500. "This should give us cause for concern, reflection and commitment to outreach," said Rights, who was re-elected to a second term as president.

Insurance Blocked

GREENSBORO (AP) — Seaboard Chemical Corp., which has been unable to acquire liability insurance because of existing groundwater contamination, has stopped receiving hazardous waste.

The company will ask state environmental officials for a variance on the insurance requirement later this week. But it now faces a May 15 deadline when the plant must close as required in a March consent agreement signed by the company and the state. The company stopped receiving the waste this week.

Honorary Doctorate

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Pulitzer-winning novelist William Styron will be awarded an honorary doctorate at the annual spring awards convocation Friday in Love Auditorium at Davidson College.

The author of "Lie Down in Darkness," "The Confessions of Nat Turner," and, most recently, "Sophie's Choice," also will present two student writing awards at the convocation.

Styron was born in Newport News, Va., in 1925. He attended Davidson College a year before transferring to Duke University, where he received his B.A. degree in 1947.

Police, Town Sued

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Two Oxford residents have filed lawsuits against the city of Oxford and police officer W.J. Pendleton, asking for personal injury and property damages incurred after a March 24, 1985, automobile accident.

H.F. Bernard is seeking $50,000 in personal injury damages and $4,000 for damage to his car. Deborah Dupree is seeking $2,000 personal injury damages and $10,000 for damage to her car.

The accident was part of the evidence in the October 1985 trial of Police Chief James Griffin, who was charged with maladministration of office because he ordered a report of the accident changed to favor Pendleton. An SBI probe resulted in several other charges against Griffin.

Griffin was found innocent but later was asked to resign by the city council.

Indictment Returned

RALEIGH (AP) — A Scotland Neck man accused of shooting at a park ranger has been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of assaulting a federal officer with a deadly weapon and attempting to kill a federal officer.

The two-count indictment against Gary Lee Petersen, 47, was returned on Tuesday, U.S. Attorney Samuel T. Currin said Wednesday. Petersen turned himself into authorities Sunday after a four-day manhunt on Hatteras Island.

Henry McLain Anderson, a Cape Hatteras National Seashore park ranger, had been watching a single-engine airplane at Billy Mitchell Airport near Frisco when he exchanged gunfire April 9 with a man trying to enter the plane. Anderson wasn't injured.

Currin said Petersen also faces charges of assault with intent to kill, larceny of an airplane and breaking and entering a building at Rocky Mount-Wilson Airport, where the plane had been reported stolen from.

Petersen was being held Wednesday in Dare County Jail on $100,000 bond, authorities said.

Arson Arrest Reported

RALEIGH (AP) — A Lenoir man has been arrested and charged with setting a 125-acre fire in Caldwell County, authorities said.

John Odell Story, 27, was arrested April 11 in connection with a fire set April 7, according to a news release from the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Story was charged with intentionally setting the fire, which is a felony. If convicted, Story could be sentenced to five years in prison, a fine determined by the judge, or both.

When your contract appears easy, look for the worst possible scenario. Then take a look to see if you can develop countermeasures.

Once West made a black-suit takeout double, North decided there was no point in showing his spade suit; instead, he settled for a heart raise. South's spade bid was an attempt to steer the contract into three no trump if North held a club guard. When North now raised spades, South bid the heart game in case his partner held four-card heart support. We are impressed with East's decision not to double. He could not be sure four spades wasn't a better contract, and he felt no need to alert South to the fact that trumps were not breaking.

West led the king of clubs and shifted to a trump. Declarer won in dummy and, if trumps were no worse than 4-2, the play would be simple. Declarer can win with dummy's king, cross to hand with the jack of diamonds, ruff a club and draw two more rounds of trumps, leaving a master trump outstanding. Then he could run diamonds, and the most the defenders could get would be two club tricks and a trump.

The threat to the contract, however, lay in the possibility of a 5-1 trump break. Could that be handled?

Declarer found the way. He won the trump on the table, came to hand with the jack of diamonds and ruffed a club. The ace of spades provided the entry for another club ruff. Now declarer started to run diamonds. As the cards lay, the defenders were helpless. East did the best he could by ruffing the third diamond and exiting with a spade. Declarer won in dummy and led a good diamond, discarding his last spade. Whatever the defenders did, East's good trump was the only other trick they could collect.

Belk Says Family Stance Helps Senate Campaign

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — The tall man in the black silk suit from Belk's stands outside the Ti-Caro thread plant and hands leaflets to the T-shirt-clad workers streaming in and out of the factory.

"Hello, I'm Bill Belk and I'm running for the U.S. Senate," he says. "We buy a lot of U.S. textiles — Belk does. I want to stop our export of jobs."

Most workers take the leaflets without stopping as Belk cajoles, "Y'all get to go home — I've got to stay out here and politick. ... We're trying to stop textile imports." But one woman looks up at the 6-foot-5 Belk Stores vice president and says, "Alright. You seem like a nice man."

"I still have that freshness, that innocence, that willingness to look into the future," Belk said later.

He said his family's department stores took a stand on textile imports more than 10 years ago when store officials decided that 95 percent of the apparel in its private labels would be U.S.-made. Although the silk in his suit is imported, Belk says the suit was tailored in this country.

Belk, 36, said his youth gives him an edge over leading Democratic candidate Terry Sanford, 68. He predicts Republican Senate candidate Jim Broyhill will be the candidate Democrats have to beat in November.

"It's the new breed against the old-line politicians," he said. "Individuals are like flowers — some are freshly in bloom, while some are wilting."

Belk said his own policies aren't that different from Broyhill's, but he prefers to remain a Democrat.

"I'm a Jeffersonian Democrat in a young man's body," he said.

Belk said his decision not to vote for Jim Hunt, Helms' Democratic Senate opponent in 1984, won't hurt him politically.

"As a senator, many times I won't be able to vote with the majority Democratic contingent in the Senate," Belk said. "I'm not a politispending and reduce the deficit, and he supports tariffs and quotas to counter an "economic invasion" against North Carolina textiles and agriculture.

"Why should we be penalized for having a strong dollar?" Belk said. "Why shouldn't we have parity so we don't suffer just because other countries use slave labor or don't have free enterprise?"

Belk said he is a hawk on defense and that U.S. military superiority must rest on technological superiority. He supports President Reagan's "Star Wars" plan and aid to the contras in Nicaragua.

He said the best way to stop military budget waste is to jail officials of military supply companies that defraud the government. And he said if other countries in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization lived up to their commitments, the United States would save $93 million a year. Belk says he is the only candidate with a firm program to aid North Carolina farmers.

Odom Pushes Environment In Making Bid For Senate

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Birds warble and tennis players swat balls at Kernersville's Fourth of July Park, oblivious to the knot of necktie reporters gathered around T.L. "Fountain" Odom, who is recalling a nightmare.

"We are playing with a chemical fire of deadly proportions," says the Democratic U.S. Senate candidate. "If we don't take action, we are going to be burned."

Just eight miles from this idyllic spot, he says, vandals in 1977 uncorked six tankers filled with hazardous waste, contaminating the town's water supply and forcing the evacuation of 1,000 people.

Odom said protecting the nation's air, soil and water would be his top priority in the Senate. The Mecklenburg County commissioner has made the environment his major issue in this campaign, addressing acid rain atop Mt. Mitchell and national parks in the Uwharrie National Forest.

"We don't want industries that are not going to be good corporate citizens; if they are afraid of protecting our air, water and soil," he said. "Jobs are not important enough if the industry is going to kill us."

Odom opposes locating any plant in North Carolina to handle hazardous waste from other states, especially a underground dump for high-level nuclear wastes. The U.S. Department of Energy is considering sites near Asheville and Raleigh.

Odom — T.L. stands for Thomas LaFontaine — is a Presbyterian, is married with four children and will be 48 on Friday.

He said his parents named him LaFontaine after a name they saw on a gambling house, but an eighth-grade teacher called him Fountain because he liked to talk so much.

Odom said North Carolina needs a senator who has "demonstrated he can work with a lot of people, Democrats and Republicans, and who has the ability to make tough decisions."

"We also need somebody who has demonstrated leadership, not somebody who has set on their rear end and let the world go by and grabs the tail of it and gets dragged along."

T.L. 'FOUNTAIN' ODOM

Odom said North Carolina must protect traditional jobs in textiles, farming and furniture while pursuing high-tech employment.

"Unfortunately we have not had any U.S. senators in the last number of years who were really fighting for us in Washington to keep thousands of jobs from being exported to other regions of support for legislation that would revamp the governance system of North Carolina's public schools, a state senator says.

Sen. Robert Warren, D-Johnston, said since a legislative study commission failed to agree on how to reorganize the system during its final meeting Wednesday, the issue may be held up until the 1987 Legislature.

Warren, the commission's chairman, had hoped to get the panel to endorse a Senate-passed bill he introduced to make the state superintendent an appointed rather than an elected official. The bill calls for a constitutional amendment and public referendum.

He said the commission could not agree on any other measure and voted to make no recommendation during the General Assembly's short session in June.

"There was a lot of sentiment expressed for Senate Bill 46, but there was also feeling that with the erosion of some of the support of the bill, it would be difficult to get it passed in the House, and if it did pass, it would be difficult to get it passed on a referendum," Warren said.

"I'm not sure that we didn't slip back a step today, but we'll look at it in the fall and maybe take two steps ahead," he said. "I'd like to see this problem solved in my lifetime."

Officials generally agree the governance of the public schools needs major reorganization to create clearer lines of authority and accountability.

The commission will continue to study the question if the Legislature takes no action this summer, he said.

Without the commission's backing, Warren said, the bill isn't likely to be taken up on the House floor in June. The bill is pending in the House Constitutional Amendments Committee, where it was sent after it ran into opposition on the floor.

Phillips had supported the Senate bill last summer, but after he decided to seek a sixth term in 1988, he shifted his support to a new proposal before the commission that would make the superintendent an elected chairman of the board. He said he could live with the Senate bill but doubted it would pass a public vote. Warren said the proposal Phillips favored had no support on the commission.

Martin had privately endorsed the bill last summer. He changed his mind this spring when he decided that he could not accept a provision that would create some legislative appointments to the State Board of Education. The governor now appoints 11 of the board's 13 members; the other two members are the lieutenant governor and state treasurer.

Editorial Raps Smokeless Tobacco

BOSTON (AP) — People who dislike smoking should work equally hard to discourage the use of snuff and chewing tobacco so Americans don't replace "the ashtray with the spittoon," the U.S. surgeon general says.

"At a time when we are making substantial progress in reducing cigarette smoking, it is critical to prevent the use of smokeless tobacco from contributing to the country's leading avoidable health risk," Dr. C. Everett Koop wrote in an editorial in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

In the same issue, a report by Dr. Gregory N. Connolly, Massachusetts' top dental officer, urged a ban on all advertising for smokeless tobacco as well as new taxes on the products to make them more expensive.

"This industry, intentionally or unintentionally, has triggered a fairly significant level of use among our nation's children," Connolly said in an interview.

The use of chewing tobacco and snuff has risen dramatically over the past decade, especially among teen-agers.

Greenville has employed the Council-Manager form of government since January 12, 1963.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a modest gain today in a carryover of buying from Wednesday's upsurge to record highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.34 to 1,851.31 in the first hour of trading.

Gainers outpaced losers by about 6 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said enthusiasm persisted over the performance Wednesday of the stock, bond and oil markets as investors concluded that hostilities between the United States and Libya apparently wouldn't lead to any major financial or economic disruptions.

Stock prices rose sharply as both oil prices and interest rates tumbled.

Today, however, the markets encountered something of an obstacle in the government's report that the gross national product expanded at an annual rate of 3.2 percent, after adjustment for inflation and seasonal factors, in the first quarter.

That growth, which exceeded most advance estimates on Wall Street, raised some doubts that the Federal Reserve would cut its discount rate in the near future. Interest rates rose a bit in the bond market on the news.

American Telephone & Telegraph led the active list, up 1/8 at 24 1/2. The stock rose 2 1/2 points Wednesday as the company reported a strong earnings gain for the first quarter.

Merrill Lynch, which also reported improved profits Wednesday, rose 3/4 to 40 1/4 in active trading.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added .20 to 139.78. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.11 at 275.04.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 38.32 to 1,847.97, for its fifth largest gain ever in points. The average easily topped the previous record closing high of 1,821.72, set on March 27.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 3 to 1 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 173.83 million shares, up from 123.65 million in the previous session.

Cheese Recall

RALEIGH (AP) — A New York cheese company is recalling its Fromage De Meaux, imported Brie cheese from stores in five states, including North Carolina, because samples have been found to contain a potentially deadly bacteria, officials say.

Long Island Cheese and Specialties Inc. of Hauppauge, N.Y., distributed the soft-ripened cheese in 5-pound, 12-ounce wheels to 54 retail stores in those states, Washington, D.C., and one wholesaler in Colorado, the North Carolina Department of Agriculture said in a prepared release Tuesday.

OPEC Talks Rabbit ... Fail Again

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC oil ministers today failed to agree on a strategy for stabilizing oil prices during a third day of talks, the cartel's spokesman said. Nigeria's oil minister indicated the cartel was far from agreement.

However, cartel spokesman James Audu said progress had been made in a three-hour morning session and that ministers from the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would resume their deliberations Friday.

Audu said OPEC technical advisers would meet later today to come up with recommendations on a pricing and production policy.

Balkacem Nabi, Algeria's oil minister, told reporters some cartel members are not ready to cut production as a means of ending the oil price slump.

Asked to identify the central point of contention in the closed-door talks, he replied, "Price war or no price war."

He was referring to the assertion by several OPEC nations, including his own, that Saudi Arabia was striving to drive oil prices even lower in a bid to force non-OPEC oil producers to cut their production.

of his hipbone. He was told he could expect to be paralyzed from mid-chest down, but that he would regain use of his arms and hands.

Except for a little numbness in each arm and in his right hand, his arms and hands have recovered. "I'm right-handed," he said, "but now my left hand is a lot stronger and I'm using it more and more. I'm just so thankful I can use my arms and hands. It would be a lot harder if I couldn't."

His employers, Eastern Insulation of Greenville Inc., have indicated a willingness to rehire him when he's able to return to work. "I'm not sure," he said. "It's nice of them to offer, but I know I can't do insulation and ceiling tile installation like I did before. So, until I get more training, I don't know how much good I'd do them."

He said he plans to go to Pitt Community College or somewhere appropriate to train himself for a thinking-sitting job — "maybe something in computers," he said.

He was already living on his own before his accident and is pleased with plans he and a friend have made to share a mobile home. He said his stepfather and other family members are getting it adapted for him now. "They're building my ramp today," he said.

And plans are being made to sell his old small car and buy him a bigger one — easier to get in and out — and adapt it with hand controls.

He said family, fellow softball players and other friends have been supportive of him and he's not going to let them down. "My life now's sure different from what I planned and from anything I ever imagined," he said, "but it's going to be all right. I'm going to watch a lot of coed softball this summer. They treat me like a team member, even though now I'm just their biggest fan."

Report Says Children Tortured

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An American lawyers' group said today that thousands of black children have been detained, tortured and killed by authorities in a campaign to crush opposition to the government.

A report by the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights, titled "The War Against Children, South Africa's Youngest Victims," gave dozens of detailed examples of alleged police and army brutality against children.

"Far from being spared the brunt of repression, these children have often been singled out as special targets of state-sanctioned violence," the report said.

It said that in one case, "11-year-old Fanie Goduka, arrested on a charge of public violence and later acquitted, was refused bail twice and held for 57 days in a cell with adult criminals."

The report said soldiers questioning one 14-year-old gave him repeated electric shocks.

Police spokesman Col. Vic Haynes said the government would issue a response to the report later today. The government has said in the past that youths often are in the forefront of anti-government violence, but that they are treated with restraint.

Pirates Slip Past Tribe, 2-0

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina pushed across a pair of unearned runs in the fifth inning and came away with a 2-0 Colonial Athletic Association baseball victory over William & Mary Wednesday.

The victory kept the Pirates in first place in the CAA, now 9-3 in the league. It also marked their 30th win of the 1986 campaign, making this year's Pirate team only the fifth in school history to win as many games. This year's team is the third in a row to reach that level, and is only four wins short of the school record of 34 set in 1982 and tied in 1984.

The contest turned into a pitching duel between East Carolina's Jim Peterson and William & Mary's Bill Prezioso, with Peterson coming out on top. Peterson, who upped his record to 8-2 with the win, scattered five hits and struck out five batters while only walking one.

Prezioso, who fell to 3-4, gave up but four hits, walked three and fanned seven.

Peterson's complete game was the 21st for a pitching staff that was expected to be among the weaker put forth by the Pirates. And it left that surprising staff only five short of another school mark — that for complete games. The mark of 26 was set by the 1982 squad.

"It was a fine pitched game on both sides," ECU Coach Gary Overton said. "Both Peterson and Prezioso threw extremely well. With that kind of pitching, there aren't going to be many hits, but we were able to manufacture a couple of runs in the fifth and that, in a nutshell, was the game."

The only batter in the game with more than one hit was William & Mary's Pat Ansaldi with two.

The victory also celebrated the Pirates being ranked on both of the major polls for collegiate baseball. Earlier this week, it was announced that the Pirates were ranked 30th in "Collegiate Baseball." Now, the Pirates have also been ranked 24th by "Baseball America."

The Pirates are currently on an eight-game winning streak, and they will put that on the line against North Carolina tonight at 6 p.m. in Chapel Hill.

East Carolina will then travel to Washington, D.C., for a doubleheader with American University on Saturday and a single game with the Eagles on Sunday. A sweep of that series would bring the Pirates to 12-3 in the CAA and insure them of a spot in the league's post-season tournament, to be held at East Carolina starting May 15. The winner of the double-elimination event will receive the league's automatic berth in the NCAA regionals.

East Carolina is now 30-4 on the year while William & Mary has dropped to 7-34 overall and 4-11 in league play.

Coach's Box In, Jump Ball Is Out For Women

There's going to be a little bit of a new look to women's basketball this coming year because of some rules changes approved by the NCAA.

While men's basketball earlier approved the three-point basket, women's basketball will experiment with the rule on a conference option basis. The Colonial Athletic Association has not yet decided on what course it will take with this rule.

However, in rules changes that will show up, women's coaches will be confined to a coaching box — just like that of the men; only the coach will be allowed to stand at all times in the box; the jump ball will only be used to start the game and any overtime periods; and any technical that starts a period will skip over the alternating possession rule.

The new coaching box rule will be same as it is for men's basketball. Coaches will not be allowed to go outside of a box running from the end line to the hash mark on the court except to go to the scoring table for information from the scorer or timer during a time out or intermission, or to request a timeout for a correctable error by the officials.

No other members of the team may be standing up, except to go to the scoring table to enter the game, or to spontaneously react to play on the court. In the past, most members of the East Carolina women's team have stood for most or all of the game.

"I have a hard time staying in a certain area of the floor," ECU's Emily Manwaring said. "I never felt that getting up to instruct players interrupted the flow of the game. I don't think we've ever had a problem with it."

The jump ball rule will be the same as it has been in men's ball for the last few years. After the jump to start the game, alternating possession will be used for tie-ups, and to start the second half.

"I'm really disappointed in (jump ball rule). That was the strategy we worked on, and we have good jumpers. On any jump, we think we have opportunity to get possession. (Doing away with the jump ball) takes away from the basic original concept of the game."

The technical foul rule calls for the team offended to get one shot at the start of a period, and possession, regardless of the alternating ball situation, or the jump ball. This is usually administered for a violation during warm-ups or between halves.

Should the CAA decide to go with the three-point shot, it would be the same distance as the men's line, 19-feet, 9-inches from the center of the basket.

Manwaring said that the CAA coaches have a meeting on April 23, and the three-point shot will probably be discussed there, with any recommendation going to the athletic directors for a final decision to go to the NCAA if the CAA wishes to try the experiment.

"I'm not for it," Manwaring said. "Although we've always got people who can fire it up from out there, the 30-second clock gives us enough offense. I don't need anything else to have to worry about in coaching."

"And I also don't think that a last second prayer should be worth three points — at the end of the half, at the end of the game or when shot clock goes off."

Purple-Gold Weekend Set To Kickoff Tonight

The Third annual Great Pirate Purple/Gold Pigskin Pig-Out Party will be underway with a golf social tonight and continue through the spring football game Saturday afternoon in Ficklen Stadium at East Carolina University.

The activities, built around the annual Purple-Gold scrimmage, the climax of spring drills, have become a rallying point for East Carolina fans during the past two years, attracting over 10,000 last year.

Special guests for the weekend include Jack "Hacksaw" Reynolds, former Los Angeles Rams and San Francisco 49er pro bowler in the defensive line; and Bob Lanier, former all-pro center with the Detroit Pistons. The two are members of the Miller Lite All-Star lineup, promoting their product on many television commercials.

The activities will begin tonight with a 7 p.m. social at the Sheraton for those taking part in the golf tournament on Friday.

The tournament gets underway at 8:30 a.m. on Friday morning at Brook Valley Country Club. Lanier will be in attendance at both the social and the golf tournament.

Friday night's activities will be centered around Ficklen Stadium, as the annual pigcooking gets underway. The activities at the stadium are open to the public at no charge.

Included on the evening are a band concert, and a fireworks display, the latter set for 9:30 p.m. Both Reynolds and Lanier will be available for autographs beginning at 7 p.m.

Saturday morning, starting at 7 p.m. the judging of the pigs will be held.

A two-mile prediction run will be held at 9:30 a.m., sponsored by the ECU Department of Intramural-Recreational Services. Registration for the run gets underway at 9 a.m. It is open to anyone wishing to participate.

The carnival opens at 10 a.m., complete with rides, music and concessions. Tickets will also go on sale for the Purple/Gold game and the barbecue dinner at this time.

Barbecue dinners go on sale at 1 a.m., continuing until 3 p.m. A radio tailgate show will also be held in the parking areas during this time.

Activities during the morning and afternoon include a band, clowns, a dunking booth (both ECU Coach Art Baker and Athletic Director Ken Karr are on the list of dunkees); a "hacksaw" contest open to the public; a wrestling bear; various kids games and competitions; the Suntan bikini contest; the best dressed Purple/Gold contest; autograph sessions with the football team.

Kickoff for the game is set for 3:30 p.m., with other activities at halftime.

Jack Still Talk Of Pros

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Most of the pros still were talking about Jack Nicklaus going into today's first round of the $450,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

"An inspiration to me," Hal Sutton said of Nicklaus' dramatic comeback victory last week in the Masters.

"The Nicklaus mystique got 'em," Bill Rogers said.

"Fantastic," said Nick Faldo of England.

"The best thing that could have happened to golf," Gary Koch added.

"He proved again he's the greatest player who ever lived," said PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman. "A great boost for golf, for all sports."

Beman made the comment during a brief visit to this resort island, where he met for about an hour with Mac O'Grady, the controversial player who faces possibly severe disciplinary actions — up to $12,000 in fines and up to 12 weeks of suspension.

"Beman will make a decision (on the penalty to be assessed) next week," said O'Grady, who is among the 120-man field chasing an $81,000 first prize on the beautifully conditioned Harbour Town Golf Links.

Johnson Still Has Some Goals Left With Pirates

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Winfred Johnson says he wants a shot at playing major league baseball, but only after his career at East Carolina is capped with post-season success.

"Whether or not I get to play pro ball, I want to make sure I end my career at East Carolina on a positive note," says Johnson. "To do that, we have to be concentrating on playing well."

Johnson has held up his end of the concentration well. He recently became the first player in NCAA history to hit 60 home runs and pitch 30 victories in a career. But modesty overwhelms his achievements.

"I'm very excited and real proud of it," Johnson says of the record to which he is still adding. "But there are a lot of variables involved. I've played on some real good ballclubs. Without them, it wouldn't have taken place."

Johnson insists that he doesn't want the attention heaped solely on his shoulders, but statistics won't allow it.

Through 33 games, Johnson is hitting a brisk .355 with 10 home runs and 47 runs batted in. When he isn't manning first base, Johnson is 8-2 as a pitcher with six complete games and 12 appearances.

In four years, Johnson has appeared in all 164 Pirate games and done a personal rewrite of the school record book. He has 61 home runs, more than twice the previous record;

196 RBI; 431 total bases; 32 pitching victories. And since the Pirates aren't finished with the season, Johnson will only heap more numbers upon his records.

"Sometimes, there was a little too much talk about the record and not that we were winning a lot of games," says Johnson, who has helped lead the Pirates to a 29-4 record. "I think it was really a shame in a way. I was flattered, but we've got a bunch of ball players who are having a real good year. I was concerned that I was getting too much of the publicity."

Nonetheless, Johnson started the week with 207 hits, six hits shy of becoming East Carolina's all-time hit leader. Todd Evans set the mark of 212 between 1981 and 1984.

"He's set some records here that no one may ever touch," East Carolina sports information director Bob Gennarelli says of Johnson.

While the figures are impressive enough to rate attention from big league scouts, Johnson has not drawn any offers. His name has not appeared in any of the recent drafts. Some are speculating that his 5-foot-10, 210-pound physique might not measure up to major league standards, but Johnson says that doesn't bother him.

"Probably the only time I ever think about it is when somebody asks me about it," Johnson says. "It's gonna be someone's opinion as to whether I can play. There's no pressure involved at all."

One record Johnson wants more than anything is a shot at winning it all. A chance at the majors is nice, but the title is more important.

"The way we look at it, we really don't think we've reached a peak. We still see room for so much improvement," Johnson said. "We haven't had a game where we've been completely satisfied. We have played well and we have played consistently, but we can still play better."

Saberhagen Does Job

By The Associated Press
 "You can't pitch much better than that," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said.
 He was talking about his own Bret Saberhagen, but he could easily have been referring to Ron Romanick of the California Angels.
 Both Saberhagen and Romanick pitched two-hitters Wednesday night to lead their teams to victories — Kansas City beating Boston's Al Nipper 1-0 and Romanick stopping the Seattle Mariners 4-0.
 In other American League games on Wednesday, Minnesota defeated Oakland 7-5 in 10 innings and Chicago downed Detroit 10-4. Three other games — Baltimore at Toronto, Texas at Milwaukee and New York at Cleveland — were postponed by inclement weather.
 Saberhagen, who last year became the youngest pitcher to win the Cy Young Award in the AL, faced just 29 batters, striking out six and walking just one.
 The only Boston hits were singles by Tony Armas with two out in the second and Don Baylor leading off the fifth. Neither advanced beyond first.
 "This was good, especially coming off a horrible spring," Saberhagen said. "I was concerned whether I could go a strong seven (innings)."
 During the spring he struggled with a sore shoulder and a virus.
 "Saberhagen is OK," Howser said. "Now I don't have to answer that question any more."
 Nipper was almost as good as Saberhagen, allowing just five hits. But one was Steve Balboni's second homer of the season to lead off the second, the only run Saberhagen needed. Last season Balboni had only two hits at Fenway Park.

 In the California-Seattle game, Romanick lost his perfect game by walking the very first batter, the first of five in the game. And, with two down in the sixth, Ivan Calderon's single broke up the no-hit bid.
 But the California right-hander didn't mind.
 "It's my best game ever, as far as keeping my stuff through nine innings goes," Romanick said. "I was a real pitcher out there."
 "I could tell I had real good stuff warming up. I couldn't have asked for a better groove. All of my pitches were working."
 Gorman Thomas got Seattle's second hit, a one-out single in the ninth.
 Romanick is now 2-0 as he tries to erase the memory of the second half of 1985. After going 13-4 before the All-Star break, he won only one game after July.
 "I wanted to take away some of the bitterness of those last two months. I think I'm doing that. It's a real good feeling," he said.
 Wally Joyner's solo homer, his second of the season, supported Romanick's pitching and gave the Angels a 1-0 lead in the first. California added two more runs in the fourth and their final score in the seventh.
 White Sox 10, Tigers 4
 Ron Kittle had a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly, while Carlton Fisk also homered as Chicago overpowered Detroit at Comiskey Park.
 "I don't care if I was 1-for-13," said Kittle. "I didn't consider myself in a slump. I hadn't swung at a bad pitch all season. I felt good at the plate, I was comfortable. Guys go through things like that; it just happens."

 The triumph was only the second in eight games for the Sox as Floyd Bannister, Bill Dawley and Bob James combined for a four-hitter.
 Detroit's Dave Collins was ejected from the game in the seventh inning when he charged the mound after a Bannister pitch sailed behind him. Two innings earlier, Detroit's Randy O'Neal had hit rookie John Cangelosi with a pitch.
 Twins 7, A's 5
 A two-run homer by Gary Gaetti in the 10th inning, his third of the season, powered Minnesota over Oakland at the Metrodome.

Farmville Wins Match

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central and Rosewood split the singles matches, but the Jaguars took two of the three doubles events to pull out a 5-4 tennis victory Wednesday.
 The victory raised the Jaguars to 7-3 on the season while Rosewood drops to 2-5 on the year. Farmville returns to action today at Greene Central.
Summary:
 Eric Shine (FC) d. Brian Daniels, 6-4, 6-3.
 Todd Entriiken (R) d. Al Hedgepeth, 6-1, 6-3.
 Troy Barnes (FC) d. David Lewis, 6-1, 6-4.
 Jay Morris (FC) d. Tom Pearman, 6-2, 6-2.

Jaguar Golfers Trim Zebulon

ZEBULON — Farmville Central's golf team rolled up an easy victory over Zebulon Wednesday.
 The Jaguars finished the day with a 319 score while hosting Zebulon was over 30 strokes back with a 353.
 Mark Williams led the way for Farmville with a 71, low for the day. Darryl Brown and Tyson Warren each added 78 while Allen Lewis had 92.
 Lenny Boyette paced Zebulon with a 73. Tray Gay had an 84, Matt Ellington, 97; and Phillip Massey, 99.
 Farmville is now 12-4-1 and returns to action on Monday, hosting Ayden-Grifton and Pamlico.

JIM YOUNG

Democratic Candidate For Pitt County Commissioner

Speaks Out On

"The Farm Problem"

As a farm owner, I have felt the impact of our current agricultural recession where it hurts the most — in the pocketbook. Like so many others, I have seen my farmland values nosedive. I have watched farm income drop to the point where breaking even after taxes and expenses has become virtually impossible.

Last year alone, the agricultural economy in Pitt County declined by over $10 million. Yes, this money came out of the farmers' pockets. However, it was also money removed from our entire economy. It is money which no longer flows through the stores and businesses of our county, or back into our community as tax revenues.

We must all realize that the current "Farm Problem" is not just the problem of the farmer. It drastically affects every business, industry, and merchant in our county. It affects the county's ability to provide education, health, and other fundamental services our citizens deserve.

Thus, we just join together as a community, as both private citizens and public officials, to vigorously seek solutions to this cancerous condition. We must explore alternatives for agricultural diversification where such diversity could be profitable. We must examine the feasibility of farmer Co-Ops, wherein small farmers could unify their resources to lower overhead costs.

We must be aggressive in economic and industrial development in order to expand off-farm employment opportunities for those whose farm incomes fail to provide a decent standard of living.

Pitt County has been fortunate to experience dramatic growth in business, industry, and commerce. Yet, we must remember that a substantial proportion of our economy is still driven by agriculture. We cannot sit back and let our most valuable economic resource — our fertile and expansive farmlands — wither away and lie dormant.

I applaud the current County Commissioners for moving up the re-valuation of farmlands in order to reduce farmers' tax burdens to a fairer level. This is one step in the right direction; but it is not a total solution. We must continue to seek other means to attack the problem. This situation commands priority on our agenda for economic stability in Pitt County.

If you share my concern about our agricultural situation, help give me the opportunity to contribute to its improvement. Give me your vote and your support as the next County Commissioner from the Greenville Township in the May 6th Primary. Thank You!

Another 1-Run Loss For L.A.

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Tom Lasorda is rarely at a loss for words on the subject of baseball, but he readily admits he has no explanation for the Los Angeles Dodgers' record-setting run of futility.

"I've never seen anything like it," the Dodger manager said Wednesday night after his team played its 10th straight one-run game in a 2-1 loss to San Diego. "If somebody had told me something like this would happen, I'd have told them they're crazy."

Simply put, what has happened is that the Dodgers — favored by most to repeat as National League West champions — have lost seven of those games, including the last three in San Diego's final at-bat.

Padres Manager Steve Boros, whose team has won seven of 10 — and shares with the Dodgers the major-league record for consecutive one-run games at the start of a season, also is devoid of a meaningful answer. "I'd like to be able to explain it, but I can't," Boros said after Graig Nettles' pinch-hit single off reliever Tom Niedenfuer produced the winning run with two out in the ninth inning. "This whole 10-day stretch has been simply remarkable."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Houston 4, San Francisco 1, and Cincinnati 5, Atlanta 3, St. Louis at New York and Pittsburgh at Philadelphia were postponed by rain.

Nettles, whose glove work at third base for the New York Yankees made him a Dodger World Series nemesis long before he joined the Padres, certainly came through with his biggest hit of the season. He went to the plate mired in a 1-for-16 slump. "I know relief pitchers don't like to get beat with their second best pitch, so after it got to 3-2 I was looking fastball all the way," Nettles said.

The hit scored Kevin McReynolds from second base. Dennis Powell, 0-2, making his first start of the year, allowed the Padres just four hits in 8 1-3 innings. Niedenfuer replaced Powell after the latter had walked McReynolds.

Steve Garvey grounded out to first, moving McReynolds to second, and Garry Templeton was intentionally walked to bring up Nettles. His hit made a winner of reliever Rich Gossage, 2-0, who worked the ninth in relief of starter Dave Dravecky.

The 10th consecutive one-run game for both teams is one shy of the National League record for consecutive one-run games in a season. While Lasorda wouldn't mind setting the record in a victory, he would rather have a laugh.

"We're just in a rut and we've got to get out of it, said Lasorda, whose team has scored just 27 runs in 10 games — eight of them well pitched. "We need the day off, I'll tell you that."

The Dodgers, who have lost four games in extra innings, get their first day off today. They open a three-game series in Atlanta on Friday night.

Dravecky accounted for a 1-0 Padre lead with his first major-league homer, a drive to left-center field in the third.

Cesar Cedeno's run-scoring double in the fourth broke Dravecky's scoreless inning streak at 19-2-3.

Reds 5, Braves 3
In his 17th major-league season, Dave Concepcion could be forgiven for relaxing every now and then. But the 37-year-old Cincinnati shortstop didn't stay on top because he'd made a habit of such things.

"I was getting lazy, losing my stroke," Concepcion said when explaining why he showed up 5½ hours early.

The extra batting practice "really worked," said Concepcion, who hit two homers and drove in three runs.

Concepcion started the seventh inning by lining loser Rick Mahler's first pitch over the center-field fence for his first homer of the year to tie the game at 3-3. He also hit a first-pitch homer to left off reliever Bruce Sutter in the eighth. It was the fourth two-homer game of his career, the last time coming June 5, 1981 against Montreal.

Pinch-hitter Tracy Jones had put the Reds ahead — and made a winner of John Denny — with a single later in the seventh.

Astros 4, Giants 1
Strikeouts may have become commonplace to Nolan Ryan. That's understandable after 4,101 of them. But a game-winning RBI from a lifetime .122 hitter is another matter.

"I didn't realize that was it," Ryan said jokingly in discussing a two-run, second-inning single. "A big RBI man like me ... that is pretty surprising."

Ryan, 2-1, struck out nine San Francisco batters in 7 2-3 innings. He allowed six hits and walked three before Dave Smith came on in relief to collect to his third save.

The game-winning RBI statistic has been used only since 1980, but Ryan said he couldn't recall ever having one in his 19-year major-league career.

"It was a mistake pitch on his part," said Ryan of loser Roger Mason, who offered no argument. Mason described the pitch as a "way too fat" fastball over the middle of the plate.

The Pitt-Greenville Airport is managed, operated and maintained by the Airport Authority. Airport facilities are located on North Memorial Drive.

Rampettes Take Win Over Hunt

Pam Smith, Bella Kang and Kim Dupree each won two events in leading Rose High School's girls' track team to victory over Wilson Hunt Wednesday.

Rose finished the meet with 82 points while Hunt pulled in 45 on the afternoon.

Smith won both the shot put and discus, while Dupree won the triple and long jumps. Kang won both of the distance events, the 1,600- and 3,200-meter runs.

The victory boosts Rose to 10-0 on the season. They close out the regular season next Wednesday, hosting Tarboro, Bertie and Northeastern. They then travel to the Colonial Relays on April 26 and wind up with the Big East Conference meet on May 1.

Cuba Mocks Yanks During Bay Of Pigs Anniversary

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
HAVANA (AP) — Cuba observes the 25th anniversary of the Bay of Pigs invasion today, but the government media is giving that historical turning point equal billing with criticism of the U.S. air raid on Libya.
The Communist Party newspaper Granma carried more than 40 stories from dozens of countries Wednesday highlighting the adverse international reaction to the attack on Libya.
The media concentration on Libya fits nicely with Cuba's long-held view of the United States as a ruthless, expansionist power.

But while the limelight this week turned toward Libya, the Bay of Pigs anniversary of April 17, 1961 is not being ignored.
Wednesday night, a photo exhibit portraying the events surrounding the 65-hour battle at the Bay of Pigs, or Bahia de Cochinos, was inaugurated by Education Minister Jorge Fernandez, who as chief of operations at the time has emerged as one of the heroes in the defeat of the CIA-sponsored attack.
The exhibit hails the event as the "first great military defeat of Yankee imperialism in the Americas."
The defeat of a ragtag band of about 1,400 Cuban exiles assembled, trained, supplied and directed by the United States is considered one of Cuba's brightest moments.

What President John F. Kennedy had thought would be a quick invasion of Cuba by Cuban exiles, helped surreptitiously by Americans, to overthrow Fidel Castro instead became one of the embarrassments of his administration.
The invasion failed miserably, primarily because the Americans failed to back up the languishing exiles when their supplies ran short and the Cubans began advancing on the small band of invaders in the Zapata Swamp of southwestern Cuba.
A flotilla of U.S. warships, including the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Essex and seven destroyers, was steaming toward Cuba. But unknown to the Cuban invaders, the Navy had orders not to get closer than 25 miles off Cuba.

The doomed Brigade 2506, aided by a small cast of American pilots, had no way of knowing when they landed at Playa Larga and Playa Giron that within three days their takeover attempt would be easily quashed.
Castro's air force sank two of the brigade's ships carrying badly needed ammunition and communications equipment and shot down five B-26 bombers. His troops, backed by about 50 Soviet-built tanks, killed 114 men of the brigade and captured 1,189 others.

Four American pilots also died, while the Cubans say they lost 161 men.
The invaders languished in Cuban prisons for 22 months until the Kennedy administration ransomed them for $53 million worth of food and medicine.
Memories of the invasion were reueled by the events this week in Libya.
On Tuesday, thousands of demonstrators gathered at the University of Havana to condemn what the newspaper called "the brutal military aggression against the people of Libya."

The protesters carried signs saying "Reagan Terrorist," "Long Live The Libyan Revolution" and "We Condemn Yankee Aggression Against Libya."
A front-page editorial accused President Reagan of engaging in the "grossest form of state-sponsored terrorism."
About 1,400 Cuban exiles were involved in the invasion force the morning of April 17. Nearly 1,200 were captured when they ran out of ammunition on the invasion's third day and couldn't make it back out to U.S. ships.

U.S. Veterans Gather For 15th Anniversary Of Foiled Invasion

MIAMI (AP) — Cuban exiles who fought 25 years ago today in an unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Fidel Castro are gathering for ceremonies marking the anniversary of the Bay of Pigs invasion.
Miguel Alvarez, president of the Brigade 2506 veterans organization, expects more than 1,000 survivors of the invasion to attend a memorial service at a monument to the 114 invaders killed. It will be followed by the dedication of a Brigade museum and library in a modest house in Miami's Little Havana neighborhood.

Jeane Kirkpatrick, the former United Nations ambassador popular among Latin exiles because of her strong support of U.S. aid to Nicaragua's Contra guerrillas, will speak at the dedication, Alvarez said.

"We have people coming from Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic, New York, Chicago, California," he said. "This anniversary means 25 years of frustration. But always, there is hope."

Special Roman Catholic Masses are planned in Little Havana tonight for the slain invaders and Friday night for members of an anti-Castro college student group who were detained in Cuba before the invasion and executed April 18, 1961, a day after it began. Tens of thousands of Cubans whose loyalties were suspected were detained during the invasion, and an unknown number of political activists were executed.

There are 10 million Cubans on the island Castro has governed 27 years.

Actor Crawford Enters Hospital

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Broderick Crawford, who won an Oscar for "All the King's Men" and played the beefy, fast-talking chief on television's "Highway Patrol," was hospitalized Wednesday after suffering a series of strokes.

"He's very, very ill," said Al Melnick, Crawford's longtime agent. "He's had a series of strokes, and a big one about a year ago. He just hasn't been coming along."

Melnick said Crawford, 72, has been at about half a dozen hospitals over the past year, and was admitted to Eisenhower Medical Center recently.

A spokeswoman for the center said Crawford had been admitted. She said there was no other information on his illness or condition.

Crawford won the 1949 best actor Academy Award for his portrayal of doomed populist politician Willie Stark in "All the King's Men," adapted from Robert Penn Warren's novel based on the life of Louisiana's Huey Long.

He followed that movie with an impressive comic performance as the tycoon who loses his girlfriend to her tutor in "Born Yesterday" but was subsequently cast in a series of unrewarding movie roles.

Crawford's largest exposure came as the jowly, take-charge Chief Dan Matthews of the syndicated "Highway Patrol" series. The image of Crawford's character leaning against a patrol car and barking "10-4" into a radio microphone is an enduring one for generations of television viewers.

Between 1955 and 1959, 156 episodes of "Highway Patrol" were cranked out, and have been in perpetual rerun since. Rancho Mirage is about 100 miles east of Los Angeles.

NBC Puts 'Halo' On Wednesdays

EDITOR'S NOTE — ABC has a dynasty on Wednesday, but NBC made inroads with its homespun hit, "Highway to Heaven," and a demographic success, "St. Elsewhere." This third story in a five-part series, "NBC in the '80s: From Worst to First," looks at NBC's strong second-place finish on Wednesday that became a key element in the network's prime-time ratings victory this season.

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There was plenty of weeping during NBC's decade as the third-place network, but it was Michael Landon, playing an angel on "Highway to Heaven," who taught NBC how to milk big ratings from tears.

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, recalled Landon's pitch on "Highway to Heaven." "Michael told us that producers come in with shows that make people laugh. There's a need for comedy, but I don't profess to be able to do that," he said. "But ... I can make people cry, and if people cry they're going to come back the following week."

Landon, who had created "Little House on the Prairie," told NBC that this time he wanted to play an angel who helps people help themselves. Tartikoff remembers thinking that NBC owed Landon something for his previous good work, so the network would let him get this angel show out of his system.

But when "Highway to Heaven" became the highest testing dramatic pilot NBC's ever had, network executives recognized Landon knew his constituency better than they did. The previous highest testing drama pilot was "Little House on the Prairie."

When "Highway to Heaven" was introduced in September 1984, it filled a void. At the time television offered no homespun, family dramas like "The Waltons," "Eight is Enough" or "Little House."

Landon was right. Viewers came back every week, and "Highway to Heaven" was an immediate success. It is invariably in or near the Top 10. Not only was it a hit, but it also gave NBC a toehold against ABC's powerful lineup, led by "Dynasty," and drew additional viewers to "St. Elsewhere," a show with a smaller, but demographically valuable, audience.

"Our posture on Wednesday night has always been to do a very competitive second-place rating to ABC during the season and win the night during the 22 weeks when 'Dynasty' is not on," Tartikoff said.

"St. Elsewhere" has never been a Top 10 series but, because part of its loyal audience is in the same tax bracket as many doctors, it got a higher advertising rate than another medical show, CBS' "Trapper John, M.D.," which had more total viewers.

Unlike "Trapper John," "St. Elsewhere" doesn't provide 60-minute cures each week. Its doctors aren't gods, either. They commit a wide range of sins — from ordering needless operations to raping nurses, in the case of one crazy who was later shot by a nurse. They're not always warm and lovable, but they are very human and never dull.

"St. Elsewhere" and its fellow MTM production, "Hill Street Blues," share a common origin.

"Bruce Paltrow and Steven Bochco came to us with a pilot called 'Operating Room,'" Tartikoff said. It was a funny look at doctors and hospitals, but NBC turned it down.

"That pilot contained the seeds for both 'St. Elsewhere' and 'Hill Street Blues,'" Tartikoff said. "After we tested it, we said we didn't think the American public was ready to make their doctors mortal. They still wanted them godlike. That's how we got to 'Hill Street Blues,' because Bochco joined up with Michael Kozoll after our suggestion that the formula was right but the profession should be cops instead of doctors.

"After the ground was broken we went back to Bruce Paltrow and asked him if he was still interested."

"St. Elsewhere" joined the schedule on Tuesday in 1982. The following year it moved to Wednesday. The show went nowhere in the ratings, but NBC kept the faith.

"We didn't have any pilots that we thought were better," Tartikoff said. "Secondly, we thought the program had made enormous creative progress. It was better at the end of the season than it was at the start."

Actually, "St. Elsewhere's" cancellation was a virtual certainty in the spring of 1983, as NBC was preparing to announce its 1983-84 schedule. "It was gone," Tartikoff recalled, noting that Paltrow had been told not to order new scripts.

But the night before NBC's programmers were to set the new fall schedule, the last episode of "St. Elsewhere," competing against a rerun of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" on CBS, had its highest rating ever.

Old Oil

The current oil glut has drastically cut prices for a resource that humans have known about for thousands of years. Sumerians and Assyrians used a form of oil for mortar. Persians and Arabs used it for lighting and cleaning silk. Marco Polo described a fire-worshipping cult that praised the "eternal fires" of oil seepages burning day and night near the Caspian Sea. Modern oil exploration began in the effort to find a cheap alternative to whale oil in lamps.

DO YOU KNOW — Which oil pipeline extends from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez?

Tot Starts 'Cosby Show' Rolling For NBC

EDITOR'S NOTE — The biggest single contributor to NBC's prime-time turnaround was "The Cosby Show," the network's biggest hit in years. This fourth story in a five-part series, "NBC in the '80s: From Worst to First," details the construction of NBC's immensely popular Thursday lineup.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — She's never been to a pitch meeting or brainstorming session, never had a power lunch. But Brandon Tartikoff's infant daughter was instrumental in the development of "The Cosby Show," NBC's biggest hit since "Bonanza" rode the range in the 1960s.

Three years ago, Calla Tartikoff was a year old and her daddy was the entertainment president of a sputtering third-place network. NBC's headaches often kept Tartikoff awake; this night, however, his daughter was the culprit.

While his wife, Lilly, was attending to the bawling baby, Tartikoff did what any sleepless American would do; he checked out Johnny Carson on the "Tonight Show." Bill Cosby was the guest, relating the wacky but wonderful world of parenting.

Within days, Tartikoff was offering Cosby, who had failed in his last three network programs, another shot at prime time.

Like father, like daughter, "The Cosby Show" is now Calla's favorite program.

"She usually goes to bed by 8," Tartikoff said, "but on Thursday she wants to watch 'Bill Cosby.' Since she was part of the show's inspiration, we let her stay up the extra half hour."

Millions of viewers are now staying with NBC past Calla's bedtime on Thursdays. This season, with "Cosby" the top-ranked show, "Family Ties" No. 2 and "Cheers" No. 5, NBC's Thursday lineup is the most popular on TV. And "The Cosby Show" is No. 1 with every age group of men, women and children.

But before the Huxtable family began luring viewers to NBC in 1984-85, "Family Ties" and "Cheers" were well back in the ratings pack, losing badly to CBS' "Magnum, P.I." and "Simon & Simon."

"The guys were on base, but they needed somebody like Bill Cosby to drive them in," said Robert Niles, NBC's vice president for marketing.

Actually, the Thursday baserunners had been left stranded since NBC introduced its self-proclaimed "best night of television on television" in 1982-83. That lineup included "Fame," "Cheers," "Taxi" and "Hill Street Blues" — all Emmy award winners, all fledglings, except for "Taxi," and all initially low-rated.

TV history is littered with quality shows that take time to find audiences, such as "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "Lou Grant." But few started as low as "Cheers." Critics loved its cutting repartee. But some analysts felt few female viewers would watch a barroom comedy since they considered saloons the enemy in the competition for their husbands' attentions.

When the opening episode of "Cheers" got a miniscule 16 share of the viewing audience, Niles was asked by colleagues if any show had succeeded after such humble beginnings. He couldn't think of any. Two weeks later, when the demographic breakdowns were available, there was some faint hope: "Cheers" had a proportionately high tune-in among the Yuppies that advertisers favored.

"I wrote a letter to Grant Tinker and said, 'We'll stick with 'Cheers' if you will,'" said Paul Schulman, who heads the Paul Schulman Co., an agency that ran Ralston Purina commercials on the show.

Tinker, the NBC chairman who arrived in July 1981, was preaching patience to his programmers. He also assured producers that their good work would be rewarded with renewals, despite low ratings. "Cheers" was saved.

NBC's longest-running Thursday fixture is "Hill Street Blues," the most-honored dramatic series ever. With its gritty camera work, literate scripts and ensemble cast, the program revolutionized the cops-and-robbers genre.

But in early 1981, when Tinker was still president of MTM Enterprises, the production company that made "Hill Street Blues," and Fred Silverman was the head of NBC, the low-rated "Hill Street" was shifted among four time slots.

"Fred would move it, then he would say, 'let's do two hours,'" Tinker said. "His heart was in the right place. He was trying to make it succeed. But that was antithetical to our idea of putting a show in one place and watering it until everybody could find out that it was a good show."

With a slew of Emmys and a fixed time slot at 10 p.m. EST Thursday, "Hill Street" prospered in 1982-83. But a successful show in the last hour of prime time doesn't ensure a night's success. Only popular programs earlier in the evening can produce ratings residuals for the entire lineup.

"Family Ties," with teen idol Michael J. Fox, had been an also-ran series against ABC's "Dynasty" on Wednesday. NBC moved it to Thursday in January 1984. Not much happened until that fall, when a new program joined the lineup. Some industry experts said NBC was jeopardizing the schedule by letting that new series, "The Cosby Show," lead off the night.

But Cosby's humorous examination of family life instantly hit home with audiences. It turned out that NBC was good, and lucky, too. NBC almost had lost "The Cosby Show" over an earlier license-fee snag.

"It was an expensive show," Tartikoff said. "It was in New York and it had Bill's salary built into it. It was more expensive than we ever paid for any first-year, half-hour show. With the breakdown in negotiations, William Morris (Cosby's agent) ran over to ABC to see if they could get their price. "Fortunately, they said no." NEXT: Weekend Boost With 'Miami Vice' and 'Miami Nice'

MIAMI (AP) — "Miami Vice" star Edward James Olmos' television role came in handy when the actor and a friend heard a woman scream and chased a pair of would-be purse snatchers.

Olmos, who plays the dour Lt. Martin Castillo on the NBC-TV series, was on his way to a banquet Wednesday when he heard the scream and saw two men running, he said.

"I caught up with them," said Olmos. "They jumped down two stories into a parking lot area and one of them got hurt. They kept on running, but we confiscated the purse off the first guy."

Asked if he yelled anything at the suspects as he gave chase, Olmos said he called out, "Stop! Police!"

Svetlana Returns To United States

CHICAGO (AP) — Josef Stalin's daughter has arrived in the United States, a Customs official said today, after leaving her native land for a second time in a restless odyssey to find happiness. Svetlana Alliluyeva, the only daughter of the dictator who ruled the Soviet Union with an iron hand for 29 years, arrived in Chicago on Wednesday afternoon, said Cherise Mayberry, a public affairs officer for the U.S. Customs Service at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

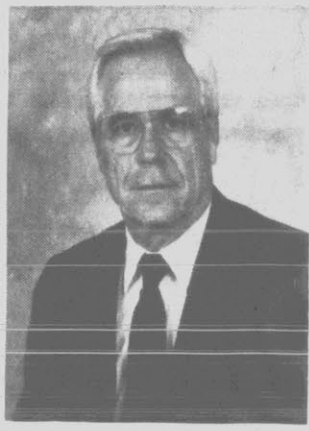

Miss Alliluyeva may have taken or on her whereabouts today. A former husband who lives in Arizona said earlier this week that Miss Alliluyeva would visit Wisconsin, but he did not know exactly where she would go. Miss Alliluyeva, 60, defected in India in 1967 and spent most of the next 17 years in the United States. But in October 1984, she returned to the Soviet Union with her American-born daughter Olga Peters, complaining that she had never been happy in the West. Miss Alliluyeva's departure came just one day after 14-year-old Olga left the Soviet Union.

Ms. Mayberry said she had no information on any connecting flights
