The Bombing Changes Everything For America

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's campaign against terrorism has been profoundly changed by the bombing of Libya, an unmistakable warning to terrorists everywhere that the United States will fight back, risking whatever price has to be paid.

The immediate price was very high. A kidnapped American, Peter Kilburn, and two British were found dead two days later in Lebanon, all shot in the head and with a note nearby saying they were murdered in retaliation for the attack on Libya.

There were other costs. There were new strains on the NATO alliance — as all the allies but Britain disapproved; Moscow cancelled a high-level meeting to plan the next U.S.-Soviet summit; there were anti-American demonstrations throughout the Middle East and Europe; an American diplomat was shot in the Sudan and 200 Americans were evacuated, and terrorists attempted to blow up an El Al airliner on a flight to Israel.

An American aircraft and two crewmen were lost in the bombing strike.

A News Analysis

In addition, questions arose whether the administration tried to kill Libyan strongman Col. Moammar Khadafy in violation of President Reagan's executive order barring political assassinations. Khadafy's home was among the targets, and his 15-month-old adopted daughter was killed and two pre-teen sons seriously injured.

Former President Jimmy Carter said killing Khadafy's daughter could make matters much worse. Were his own daughter such a victim, Carter said, "I would have sworn as long as my life existed, I would retaliate." Carter said he thought the bombing was a mistake and recommended behind-the-scenes diplomacy.

But Carter, who was in office while 52 American hostages were held 444 days in Iran, came to represent a policy of inaction that frustrated many Americans. Reagan took office pledging a policy of "swift and effective retribution" for terrorist acts, but then took more than five years to implement it.

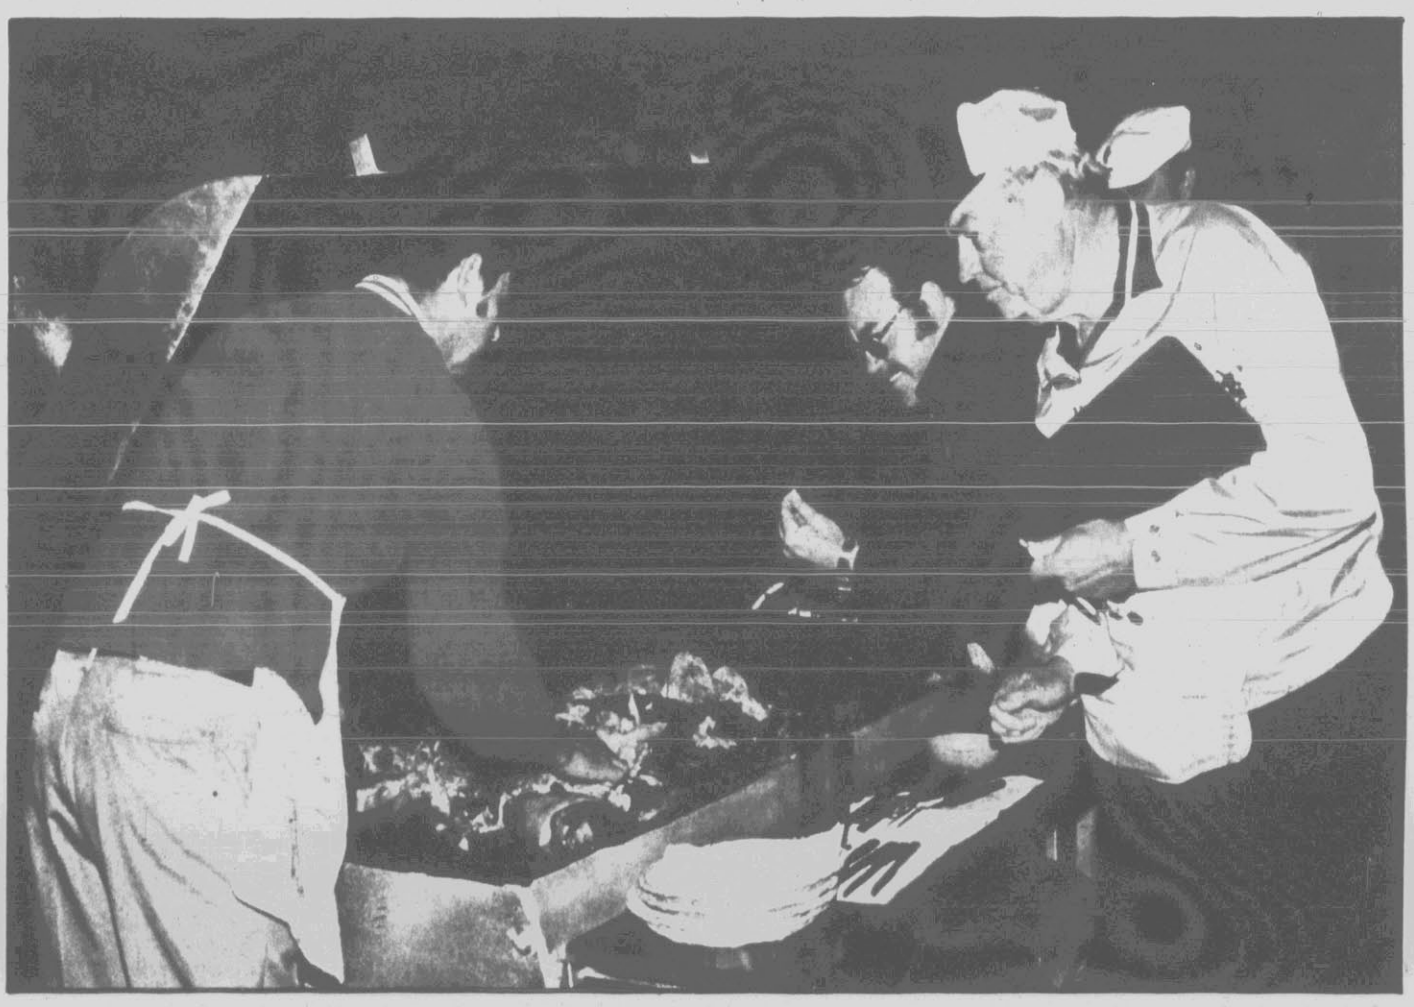

The new stand of striking back at terrorists represents a victory for Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who had been arguing for such a policy ever since Americans were driven from Lebanon by terrorist attacks against diplomats and Marines.

"We cannot allow ourselves to become the Hamlet of nations, worrying endlessly over whether and how to respond," Shultz said in a 1984 speech calling for action. "Fighting terrorism will not be a clean or pleasant contest, but we have no choice but to play it."

The administration's first major anti-terrorist strike came at 2 a.m. Tuesday (7 p.m. EST Monday) when warplanes bombed Libyan targets. Reagan told Americans he ordered the strikes after determining Libya was responsible for a deadly explosion in a West Berlin bar frequented by U.S. servicemen.

"Self-defense is not only our right; it is our duty," Reagan said. He prom-

Blast Threatens Spy In Sky Plan

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. military spy satellite program has been jeopardized by an explosion that destroyed a $65 million unmanned Titan rocket and its classified payload, experts said as an investigation began Saturday into the cause of the blast.

The big rocket was about 1,000 feet up when it exploded in a fireball that showered the seaside launch pad with flaming debris and spread a huge toxic cloud of rocket propellants over the Santa Barbara County coast.

It was the second failed Titan 34D launch in a row. A rocket carrying a KH-11 spy satellite exploded just after liftoff Aug. 28.

"This will create major problems in the photographic reconnaissance program, in our confidence in monitoring Soviet military activities at a critical time," said Paul Stares, a military expert at the Brookings Institution.

The Titan booster cost $65 million, not including the cost of the secret payload, Maj. Gen. Jack L. Watkins said at a news conference Saturday.

Watkins, commander of the 1st Strategic Aerospace Division, said 74 people were examined at the base hospital after being exposed to the toxic cloud.

The injured included 63 military personnel, nine civilians and two county sheriff's deputies, he said. Three people were admitted to the hospital, but two were released Friday night; the third person was released Saturday.

The Air Force had said Friday that 58 people were treated for skin and eye irritation.

"The explosion produced a large cloud of smoke and missile fuel products," Watkins said. "The cloud was tracked visually until it dissipated. ... It remained over the base proper as it dispersed, rose to approximately 8,000 feet and was blown out over the ocean."

The 173 people at the launch site were evacuated, along with workers aboard two offshore oil rigs in the Santa Barbara Channel. National Park Service rangers were taken off Anacapa and San Miguel islands southwest of the base as a precaution.

Col. Nathaniel Lindsey, commander of the Eastern Space and Missile Center, will head the missile mishap board that is investigating

Texas Town Struck

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — Twin tornadoes shredded part of this west Texas city Saturday before alarms could be sounded, killing at least one person, injuring more than 90 others, destroying hundreds of homes and causing millions of dollars in damage.

"There's debris everywhere. The windows are out, buildings are torn down, houses have some of the roofs off them, there's debris in the streets," said Nolan County Sheriff James Blackley.

Four people were missing after their mobile home was destroyed, Blackley said.

About 600 homes were destroyed and 200 others damaged, said Mayor Rick Rhodes, adding that more than 2,000 of the city's 12,000 residents had been affected.

Election Proposal Stirs Debate

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

While North Carolina voters have until May 6 to decide whether a proposed amendment on the ballot moving state and county elections to odd-numbered years should be ratified, officials on both sides of the fence are gearing up for the election.

"The cost to the taxpayers of North Carolina far outnumbers any supposed benefits from its (the amendment's) passage," said Eddie Knox, former Charlotte mayor-legislator and chairman of the Committee Against Perpetual Elections, a statewide steering committee that includes Democratic State Treasurer Harlan E. Boyles.

The committee was formed earlier this month to defeat the amendment proposed during the 1985 session of the General Assembly.

State legislators cited the far-reaching impact of presidential elections on state and county primary runoffs in calling for the change.

The suggested move would result in a trip to the polls every year for North Carolina voters. The governor and state legislators would run on tickets normally reserved for mayoral, school board and other local elections.

Greenville Mayor Les Garner said he "liked the way it is now. I'm not in favor of changing it." Local election officials said the cost of conducting elections would also go up if the law is changed.

Opponents of the amendment say municipal elections would be buried in statewide races, and business and industry would lose productivity from workers being off every year to participate in the election process.

Furthermore, the opponents say, if approved, the yearly cost for the election process will be passed on to the taxpayer and the process of transition could result in some elected officials serving longer terms.

Proponents of the odd-numbered election years say the proposed system would prevent party sweeps through tickets on the basis of a strong presidential showing similar to President Ronald Reagan's 1984 election.

They say it would keep voters from casting ballots according to party lines instead of focusing on local races and issues.

Howell Says ECU 'Coming Into Own'

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University "is now coming into its own" as a strong, multipurpose university, Chancellor John M. Howell told the annual Alumni Day luncheon audience Saturday.

"This is the time to flourish, to draw upon our rich resources, and to enhance our programs as we provide leadership for a region that is on the threshold of its most challenging era," Howell said.

Howell, making his fifth annual report to alumni, said two major goals of his administration have been achieved — the funding of prestigious merit scholarships and the establishing of named professorships and general faculty enrichment.

At every stage the University Scholars Awards program, which was established in 1985, "has exceeded our dreams," Howell said. By the time a four-year cycle is completed, he said, "there will be over 40 top quality students" holding the tuition and all-expenses scholarships for four years of undergraduate study, research and travel.

Howell said establishing of the Robert Dillard Teer Jr. Distinguished Professorship for Business, announced recently, was "a major

ECU May Get Activities Center

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University may have an activities center similar to a $16 million facility dedicated Saturday at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, according to state Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville.

Named the Liston B. Ramsey Regional Activities Center to honor the long-time speaker of the state House of Representatives, the new 250,000 square feet WCU facility includes an 8,700-seat multipurpose area — the largest in the state west of Charlotte — as well as handball courts, an auxiliary gymnasium, hospitality suite, dressing rooms, special rooms for celebrities, athletic department offices and an outdoor ice arena.

The center will be used for basketball, lectures, codcerts, drama, commencement and other activities. It was funded in 1981.

"It's our goal" to have a similar center at ECU, according to Warren, who said "we had start-up money this year ... $25,000 to get the planning together."

North Carolina State University in Raleigh already has the McKinnon Center, Warren said, and there is "a request in the budget for a conference center" at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"I hope we'll get additional planning dollars in the near future (and then) get funding for a center here at East Carolina University," Warren said. "That's what we are working on.

"My goal is to get one funded at ECU. Eastern North Carolina needs it," Warren said, and "with a major medical center here, it's the logical place for one."

Lowery Cautions Against Weapons

By HAROLD JOYNER
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, says he regrets the United States resorted to weapons in fighting Lybian terrorist attacks.

Lowery spoke to SCLC members Friday during their annual state convention, held at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

"We need to choose the high road in our negotiations," Dr. Lowery said. "When you go for an eye for eye and tooth for tooth, you'll end up blind and toothless. We should not be Rambo versus Bugs Bunny."

The theme of the conference, "Finishing the Unfinished Task: Voting Rights, Jobs, Peace and Justice," was hosted by the Pitt County chapter of the SCLC.

Society has not accelerated its actions to finish the tasks, Lowery said.

"Our government has put many things on the back burner. I think we need to put poverty on the nation's agenda," the SCLC leader said. "Our government can find money in every nook and cranny to finance undeclared wars, and yet we can't provide adequate health care or education for our country's poor people."

The effect of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget cuts, Lowery said, "is just another example of this administration putting their policy into legislative form. We strongly oppose Gramm-Rudman, and the SCLC wants to see Congress address this vital issue more seriously."

The SCLC was founded in 1957 by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., whose daughter, Bernice, spoke to SCLC members Thursday.

Bennie Rountree of Greenville, state SCLC president, described the group as a "loving organization of the world. We care about the people and we are willing to join picket lines or protests to throw out any discrepancies in the world."

Libyans Say 3 Hurt By Delayed Blast

(Related stories on A-17)

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libyan officials said a bomb that did not explode when dropped during the U.S. air strike blew up Saturday night in a residential district, injuring a man and two boys.

The boys, ages 11 and 13, were playing soccer when they found the bomb in a mound of rubble in the Bin-Ashour district, said the officials. It blew up at about 7 p.m. when the man tried to remove it, they said.

The officials, who insisted on anonymity in accordance with government regulations, said the man lost his right hand and suffered serious wounds in the chest and left arm. The boys were slightly hurt, the officials said.

There was no independent confirmation of the report. Libyan officials were restricting foreign reporters to their hotels except for escorted trips.

Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy's No. 2 man, Staff Maj. Abdel-Salam Jalloud, held a news conference Friday and accused the United States of bombing Libya because attempts to have Khadafy poisoned had failed.

Jalloud also said Libya may offer naval bases to the Soviet Union if the United States continues its "barbaric aggression" against his country.

Before the reported bomb explosion, the government said earlier Saturday that Libyan explosives experts were searching for scores of unexploded bombs dropped during the air raid Tuesday.

Libyan military officials said Saturday they found 17 unexploded fragmentation bombs near Tripoli's international airport. The airport's military wing was one of five U.S. targets in the raid.

The military officials claimed the U.S. attack failed because American pilots panicked when they ran into Libya's air defenses.

An official announcement on Libyan radio said army engineers planned Sunday to detonate "dud bombs" dropped by the Americans at Sidi al-Said on the coast west of Tripoli.

State-run television Saturday showed Khadafy visiting the graves of air raid victims at the Shahid al-Hani. Rainspecks on the camera lens proved the footage was taken Saturday because it was the first day since the bombing that Tripoli has had rain.

Khadafy wore a suit and was accompanied by a few aides and an official photographer. No members of the public were visible.

The footage also showed him receiving the defense minister of the African state of Burkina Faso, Jean-Baptiste Boukhary Lingani, and Sudan Defense Minister Osman Abdullah in a room with air vents and no windows — apparently Khadafy's underground bunker.

Khadafy has not met with foreign reporters since the air raid, and there were reports soon after the attack — mostly out of Washington — that he was injured or facing a rebellion within his military.

Army Maj. Ahmed Abdallah told reporters Saturday that 11 shells crashed inside the airport zone during the U.S. raid but claimed they did not cause substantial damage.

He said military experts expected to find more unexploded shells in the airport perimeter.

Reporters were taken by Libyan officials to orange groves about three miles southeast of the airport and shown two 5-foot-long shells Abdallah said were dug out of the groves. The shells were equipped with retarding parachutes and bore identification codes in English.

Officials also showed reporters eight shell craters near farmhouses in the orchard but said no one in the houses was killed in the air raid.

"Our men are still searching for unexploded shells to deactivate them and blow them up," said Abdallah.

"The American pilots panicked," he said, claiming that Libyan anti-aircraft fire deterred the incoming U.S. planes from fully accomplishing their mission. "The sky changed with our anti-aircraft defense."

In other developments:

Libya accused the United States of violating international flight regulations by using its carrier-based warplanes in the Mediterranian to turn back five commercial airline flights headed for Tripoli as of April 15.

Town ...

The damaged area included a mobile home park, a senior citizens' housing project and a subdivision. Lumber companies opened to help residents board up shattered windows, officials said.

Authorities began a house-to-house search for anyone who might have been trapped when the tornadoes spawned by a fast-moving thunderstorm hit about 7:30 a.m., said Wendell Rehm, spokesman for the state Department of Public Safety.

Two funnel clouds dipped down in succession, then joined and cut a swath of destruction a half-mile wide and two miles long through the town, Rhodes said. He imposed a 7:30 p.m. curfew Saturday in the damaged area.

Rhodes asked Gov. Mark White, who was scheduled to tour the damaged areas Sunday, to send in the National Guard to keep order.

Blackley said the tornado wrecked businesses and homes and "some of the apartment complexes that were built on the east side of town have been completely destroyed."

"It was a total surprise. I believe as it was going down, we received a call from the national weather bureau in Abilene, telling us that there was a tornado over Sweetwater," Blackley said. "But it was already in progress and tearing things up at that time."

"We had no warnings; the sirens didn't go off." said Frances Chapin, 59. Neither she nor her husband, Harlen, 64, were injured when the storm blew out the windows of their house.

"The first thing I heard was something that hit this window and knocked it out and we ran into the closet," she said. "Our house shook for so long."

An undetermined number of homes were without power in a 12-block area of the city and water service was cut, officials said.

"Our electricity is off and communications are locked down," said Marvin Cole, Nolan County deputy sheriff. "All our phone lines are tied up."

Blackley said people had been warned not to drink the water without boiling it because there was no electricity for the town filtration plant and "we do not know whether it is drinkable or not."

Adam Gutierrez, 12, said he watched the tornado as it cut across the city, picking up cars that "looked like they exploded" as they were lifted into the air.

"My father told us to come outside, and there was that tornado coming down," Gutierrez said. "We didn't know what to do; we were all nervous ... it just took off in the other direction.

"It hit this bridge and there were some accidents over there," he said, pointing to the southern edge of town near Interstate 20.

Rhodes identified the dead man as 87-year-old Henry Earl Tatum, a resident of the senior citizens' project.

The injured were taken to Rolling Plains Memorial Hospital in Sweetwater and some were transferred to Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene, 47 miles to the east, Rehm said.

At Rolling Plains, 11 people were admitted and 67 were treated and released, said Dr. Preston Nash.

"The most common injuries were lacerations, the next most common were fractures. We had a few head injuries," Nash said

Thirteen people of the injured were taken to Hendrick, said hospital spokeswoman Jo Thompson.

At Hendrick, a 6-year-old boy was in critical condition and a 10-month-old infant was in serious condition, said spokeswoman Jo Thompson. Five other people were in the critical care unit for head or internal injuries.

The National Weather Service said radar indicated another possible tornado in Throckmorton County, to the northeast, but a sighting was not confirmed, authorities said.

Blast ...

the explosion, Watkins said. Col. Lee Heinz had been named earlier to temporarily head the panel.

The last previous launch of a Titan 34D, in August, ended in failure two minutes into the flight.

Although the Air Force said the payload was classified, the Titan almost certainly carried either a highly classified KH-11 photo reconnaissance satellite or a new, previously unknown spy satellite, Stares and Jeffrey Richelson, a military reconnaissance expert at American University in Washington, said Friday.

In the past, KH-11s have been the only satellites launched from Vandenberg on Titan 34D rockets, Richelson said.

Friday's explosion, coupled with the grounding of the space shuttle fleet after January's Challenger disaster, imperils the U.S. military spy satellite program, Stares and Richelson said.

"Two failures in a row are pretty bad," Richelson said. "We had 50 successful launches in a row before this."

The KH-11 now in orbit has only 1½ years remaining in its useful lifespan, Richelson said. If it fails before the United States can launch another one, "we'll have no coverage whatsoever."

The Titan 34D, a derivative of the Titan III intercontinental ballistic missile, has liquid-fueled main engines and two solid fuel rockets attached to the side for additional thrust to carry very heavy payloads into orbit.

The Air Force tests ballistic missiles and puts military and civilian satellites into orbit at Vandenberg, which covers 154 square miles on the western coast of Santa Barbara County 130 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

FUNERAL COST PREPAYMENT

If you wish, you may choose not to do anything at all about prepaying your funeral expenses. Let the money come out of your estate's assets when you die. If it's obvious that there will be money in your estate -- in the form of savings, insurance, cashable stocks or bonds, or other liquid assets -- that's probably all the protection your survivor needs. The money you would otherwise tie up for funeral payments could be invested or put into savings instead.

The disadvantage of this course is that your estate may never be so large as to cover the funeral costs adequately. Another possibility is that even if you are well off now, your financial fortunes may change to such a degree that there won't be much money in the estate when you die. In such cases, your survivors would be under great financial strain to meet the cost of your funeral and burial. It may require going into insurance money or other resources more urgently needed to live on.

Mother Throws Six Children Into Bayou

HOUSTON (AP) — A mother who police say threw six of her seven children into a muddy bayou, killing her 5-year-old daughter, was charged Saturday with one count of murder and two counts of attempted murder, authorities said.

Bond for Juana Leija, 29, was set at $30,000, homicide detective M.G. Walicki said. She was being held in the Houston City Jail.

Her husband said Saturday his wife underwent psychiatric tests last year but that he couldn't believe she had tried to drown their children.

"I didn't believe it," Jose Leija, 34, said after learning his wife threw their children, ages 1 to 11, into a bayou Friday afternoon. "Why? I asked myself. I don't know why she did it."

"Which one died?" the 34-year-old unemployed maintenance worker from Monterrey, Mexico, tears in his eyes, asked a reporter as they sat on the cluttered front porch of his wood-frame house in the shadow of downtown Houston.

A 5-year-old girl died about three hours after being pulled from the muddy bayou, said St. Joseph Hospital spokeswoman Debbie Purrazzella. The couple's 7-year-old son was in critical condition at the hospital Saturday.

The two children had been under water for 30 to 40 minutes before being recovered by police divers, said police Lt. R.H. Bielstein.

"She wanted to throw us in because she didn't want my father to keep hitting us," the couple's 9-year-old daughter said Friday as she sat shivering near the bayou. "She wanted to kill all of us because she didn't want us to live anymore. She said my daddy didn't want us anymore."

Three girls were listed in fair condition at Ben Taub Hospital, and the 9-year-old and her 11-year-old sister were placed in custody of the Harris County Children's Protective Services, officials said.

"The doctors said there was nothing wrong with her," Leija said, discussing his wife's August hospitalization. "But I knew there was something wrong."

Mrs. Leija never abused the children, the man said, and neighbors and friends agreed. The couple has been married 13 years.

"She loved her children," said Arturo Leara, 34, a family friend. "She was always caring for them and she'd take them everywhere."

Police said Mrs. Leija was standing on the west bank of the bayou, about three blocks from the family home, when one of the children either fell or was pushed into the deep water.

"She then apparently went berserk and began throwing them in," Bielstein said. One of the children ran to the police station across the street.

"I saw one little boy screaming," said Chris Sweet, a city public works computer programmer who was walking by and jumped into the water to help the children.

"I saw the mom actually physically throw the kid into the water," he said. "They were just laying in the water. A few were face down. When I jumped into the water, the ones who were face down I tried to flip over."

Gilbert Garza, a security guard, said he helped pull four of the children to safety.

Police said Mrs. Leija, who doesn't speak English, told them she wanted to kill her children so they wouldn't live in such a bad world.

"Her plan was to push her children into the bayou and she was going to jump off somewhere," said an officer who did not want to be identified.

NASA Calls Off Search For Astronauts' Remains

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The ocean search for remains of the space shuttle Challenger's crew ended Saturday, almost three months after an explosion destroyed the craft and killed the five men and two women, including teacher Christa McAuliffe.

"Remains of each ... have been recovered," said a statement from Richard H. Truly, associate administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Final forensic work and future planning in accordance with family desires" are to be completed and an announcement made in a few days, Truly said.

The fragmented remains were examined and identified at the Kennedy Space Center by experts from the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology in Washington.

NASA officials have said privately that a memorial service will be held before the remains are shipped to their families for burial.

The official end of the underwater search for crew cabin contents had been expected for several days after Tuesday's recovery of the remains of payload specialist Gregory B. Jarvis. Bruce Jarvis said he had been notified at his home in Orlando that his son's remains were the last to be found.

Investigators blame a leak in a joint between the two bottom segments of the right solid-fuel booster rocket for releasing rocket exhaust and triggering the blast. A presidential commission is to submit a report on the blast to President Reagan by June 6.

Early last week, a recovery ship brought in a two-ton chunk of the segment above that joint. It had a burned-out hole at the joint area.

Eight search vessels remained at sea this weekend, deploying Navy divers, unmanned submarines and undersea robots to photograph and recover as much of the wreckage as possible, officials said. The operation was rapidly winding down, but officials would not say when it would be halted.

Truly said the "long and arduous" recovery efforts centering on the crew cabin began March 7 when divers first spotted the compartment on the Atlantic Ocean floor 18 miles northeast of the launch site.

Divers removed the majority of the cabin debris between March 8 and April 4, Truly said. A commercial scallop boat was sent to drag the area with its nets after stormy weather covered debris with silt and reduced visibility. And Coast Guard divers recovered more crew cabin contents April 8-10.

OPEC Ministers Near Accord On Limiting Oil Production

GENEVA (AP) — Most of OPEC's 13 member nations favor a proposal to reimpose oil production limits for the summer quarter, officials said Saturday after a fifth day of oil talks.

No official decision was made, and James Audu, the chief OPEC spokesman, told reporters the ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would meet again Sunday morning.

A senior Venezuelan delegate, who demanded anonymity, said 10 countries accepted a proposal to limit OPEC production to between 16 million and 16.5 million barrels a day for the June-September quarter. The output ceiling would rise to slightly more than 17 million in the fall quarter, he said.

Current OPEC production is estimated at 17 million barrels a day. In December, the cartel abandoned all production and price controls.

The Venezuelan stressed that production controls would not take effect unless all members accepted them. It was uncertain whether a full agreement would emerge from the Geneva talks. Some sources said a final decision might be put off until OPEC's next regular meeting, scheduled for June 25 in Yugoslavia.

Conference sources said Iran, Libya and Algeria opposed the proposal which was submitted to the oil ministers by a group of technical experts representing all member nations.

The Iranian-led group wants OPEC to slash its output to 14 million barrels a day or lower to trigger a quicker rise in prices, sources said.

Belkacem Nabi, the oil minister of Algeria, confirmed that he opposed the majority proposal and favored a lower production limit.

Qassim Taki al-Oraibi, the oil minister of Iraq, told reporters he agreed "in general" with the majority proposal, but stressed that no delegation has formally committed itself.

Al-Oraibi also said the ministers had not yet begun to discuss the more divisive issue of how to allocate an oil production ceiling among the 13 nations.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, the oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, said before the three-hour session that OPEC was unlikely to reach an agreement on production controls before the June meeting.

Without production controls, oil prices — which were at $28 a barrel in late November — are expected to remain in the current range of $12 to $15 a barrel, or slide even further, perhaps below $10, analysts say.

OPEC's talks, which began on Tuesday, were so bogged down that the oil ministers themselves met only briefly Thursday and Friday. A Saturday morning session was canceled to give the cartel's technical experts more time to work on proposals for the ministers.

The semi-official Abu Dhabi newspaper Al-Ittihad reported Saturday that Nabi had said in an interview that he saw no possibility of a compromise.

The newspaper quoted Nabi as saying, "The present conference will end in failure like the previous one and like any coming conference."

Nabi was reported to have blamed the oil price collapse on "political factors that basically serve industrialized countries at the expense of poor countries."

Need For Merger Should Override Issue Of Laws

The issue of consolidation for Greenville and Pitt County schools has one final squeeze play to execute.

At home plate is the July 1, 1986, deadline set by state legislation for merger of the two school systems. At third base is the U.S. Justice Department, hiding the required preclearance in its glove. School officials trying to orchestrate a successful merger face a question mark in one direction and a gun barrel in the other.

They have no choice but to go for home.

The path, however, is strewn with legal logs. Federal law requires that the Justice Department preclear, or approve, the merger plan. That decision is one month overdue. The consolidated board can't meet until the merger plan is precleared. The legislation requires the schools to be merged by July 1.

If the decision is delayed further, attorneys and officials have to decide which law to heed. When making that judgment, they must remember that consolidation is the top priority. It is a four-year, multimillion dollar project the community can't afford to delay.

Although the Justice Department review is proceeding at a turtle's pace, merger cannot. School officials should have been notified March 17 — the initial deadline — of the decision. Since they weren't, and since another law requires schools to consolidate July 1, progress must resume.

Pitt and Greenville schools should merge on schedule July 1 — that should be set in concrete. It is the responsibility of school officials and attorneys to take whatever steps are necessary to complete consolidation by that time, even if obeying one law conflicts with another.

Ayden Gets Best Of Two Worlds

Ayden is expanding its horizons.

What used to be exclusively the town of collards is now also the city of marigolds. The town fathers voted to adopt the plant as the official flower — Ayden's everlasting amaranth.

What's a marigold? It's a pretty summer flower that thrives in sunny, hot conditions and repels insects from gardens. Marigolds come in crimson, yellow, gold and varigated. They grow both small and large — a very versatile flower, perfectly suited to the town of Ayden.

The marigold's only drawback is its smell. The flower has an odious aroma that is better snuffed than sniffed. No wonder insects are offended by them.

It's appropriate that a community that values collards adopt a pest-rejecting town flower. Think of the practical value of the townsfolk planting hoards of marigolds. Collard patches will grow bigger and insect-free. Larger, more profitable collard farms will flourish. The economy will boom.

There will also be aesthetic benefits. Ayden can become a vision of green and crimson, a town of marigolds nestled amidst collard rows.

Finally, although the marigold can't touch the reknown of the infamous collard, think of the addition the flowers will make to Ayden's annual Collard Festival. Visualize collard cakes adorned with yellow; collard pies adorned with red.

Now that the town has the marigold as its official flower, Ayden has the best of both worlds. As the town folks say, collards is good eatin'. Marigolds is pretty.

Sunday Morning Notes

Larkin Little, president of Home Federal Savings and Loan, has a Hiney Winery T-shirt, but it wasn't easy.

Little was visiting Plymouth, where Home Federal has a branch, when he heard a commercial about the Hiney Winery. It was supposed to be located at Currituck and it had a gift shop nearby. Little went to Currituck in search of the winery and gift shop but it was nowhere to be found. Finally he hailed a deputy and asked for directions. The deputy had never heard of the Hiney Winery.

Little came home disappointed. Subsequent investigation determined that the Hiney Winery and gift shop was an advertising gimmick and is used as a reference point for real businesses in the area.

Anyway someone heard of Little's pining for a Hiney Winery T-shirt and presented one to him. This one is the real thing.

Now before all those cards and letters start coming in, I want to make it clear that I don't know where anyone can obtain a Hiney Winery T-shirt.

There are all kinds of lettered T-shirts available these days but I never did fancy becoming anyone's walking billboard.

Still many people collect them, wear them, express their intermost desires on them and with that I have no quarrel. As to where the Hiney Winery T-shirt outlet is located, however, I have no knowlege.

T-shirts sing the praises of various resort areas often in glorious colors. It would be a rare beach, indeed, where a T-shirt which carried the name of the place wasn't available. They can be found in many big cities, too. Thus the lettered T-shirt might be said to be one of the phenomenons of our time.

Messages can be expressed on them. I wouldn't be surprised to soon see one which reads, "A Year Ago I Couldn't Spell Khadafy. Now I Hate Him."

In the north central portion of the nation last week a blizzard struck even as spring was supposed to be here. The unhappy residents might turn to T-shirts which read, "Snow is for January. April is for flowers.

And in Washington sombody might want to come up with the T-shirt, "Budgets Are For Balancing."

Anyway, some future generation will dig up ours five centuries from now. As we find pottery and jewelry from past civilizations, they might find preserved T-shirts. If they can read our form of English they, too, might wonder where to find the Hiney Winery.

Battle Lines Are Missing

WASHINGTON — The story is told of the Indian chief who measured his patience with pebbles. He marked every grievance by putting a pebble in his pouch. When the pouch was full, he went to war. So, too, with Ronald Reagan.

The president's strike against Libyan targets Monday night was justified by every consideration of prudent national policy. It culminated years of provocation by Moammar Khadafy. It was immediately triggered by the terrorist bombing of a Berlin nightclub on April 5. Not to have responded with force would have left an intolerable image of the United States throughout the world. Reagan did what he had to do.

We now find ourselves engaged for the unforeseeable future in what Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger described as "a new kind of war." Many Americans still have vivid recollections of World War I, when battle lines could be neatly drawn across a map of France. Most Americans recall the years of World War II, when conventional forces were locked in conventional war on land and sea. Even in Vietnam, the war was confined to a small and well-defined area.

Terrorism is different. There can be no battle lines, no formal engagements of combat ships, no counterattacks against elusive guerrillas. Questions of military tactics and strategy become almost irrelevant.

Khadafy's next attack may fall anywhere. The Libyan leader is literally unconscionable; he is indifferent to the murder or maiming of civilians. He could attack a passenger lounge at O'Hare in Chicago or at Stapleton in Denver; he could leave his bloody footprints on a sports event at Yankee Stadium; he could attempt some spectacular piece of barbarism when the Statue of Liberty is rededicated next summer. How does one sanely defend against lunacy?

The answer, is seems to me, is to mount a truly devastating retaliation at the next provable and significant grievance.

Monday night's attack against Libya was measured. It was not an "all-out" response. The president, of course, was concerned with inflicting physical damage on Libyan installations, but he was at least equally concerned with symbolic and psycholigical effects. The object is to convince Khadafy that he must pay a heavy price for his gruesome fun and games. Next time that price must be unbearably large.

By that I mean to suggest the mining of Libyan harbors so effectively that nothing larger than a rowboat moves. Khadafy's oil fields become a feasible — but difficult — target. Airfields could be bombed to rubble. All of this is much more easily said than done; there would be casualties; there would be unpredictable reactions from our putative allies, from Arab states and from the Soviet Union. Massive retaliation to Khadafy's next atrocity will be expensive in every way.

Peaceful alternatives are worse. What alternatives? Well, it is said, we should give diplomacy one more try. That is essentially what the 12 members of the European Economic Community suggested in their resolution last week. Our sunshine friends cherish the naive notion that a paper denunciation of Libyan terrorism, coupled with a chessboard movement of ambassadors, may persuade Khadafy of the error of his ways. The man is immune to civilized persuasion. Bombs he understands.

How Do You Define Terrorism?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Are terrorists "wild beasts" who can be conquered with military force and Western unity?

Or has the Reagan administration, in its zeal to punish those who attack American diplomats, tourists and servicemen, begun to lump terrorists together with desperate people driven by a cause?

Benjamin Netanyahu, the Israeli ambassador to the United Nations, says terrorists are murderers, pure and simple, and they can be defeated or at least deterred.

The U.S.-educated envoy ridicules the notion that terrorism is rooted in social misery and frustration.

"It is rooted in the political ambitions and designs of expansionist states and the groups that serve them," he says in a new book, "Terrorism: How The West Can Win."

"Without the support of such states, international terrorism would be impossible," he says.

"There is," he said in an interview, "an Israeli-inspired definition of terrorism that tends to lump together genuine, legitimate resistance to occupation with terrorism."

The purpose, he said, is political and psychological — and designed to suppress Palestinians seeking to assert a right of self-determination.

Maksoud said the April 6 attack on a discotheque in West Berlin was an act of terrorism. It led to the U.S. bombardment of Libyan airfields, government command posts and suspected terrorist training camps.

But he said the capture of two Israeli soldiers recently in southern Lebanon, for instance, was not kidnapping, which conjures up an image of terrorism, but "a legitimate engagement with an occupying force."

Indiscriminate attacks on civilians is terrorism, Maksoud said. But, he said, "I am emphasizing the need to be very discerning and discriminating about the use of the term."

Gordon S. Brown, director of Arabian Peninsula Affairs at the State Department, took a similar view last month in a broadcast televised by the U.S. Information Agency.

Brown said some of the armed assaults against Israel by the Palestine Liberation Organization were "legitimate acts of resistance" and stemmed from 40 years of conflict in the Middle East.

However, the U.S. official also condemned terrorism and violence. After his remarks were circulated Brown said he had mishandled a question put to him in the interview.

The U.S. bombardment of Tripoli and Benghazi has stirred debate between the United States and some of its allies over a proper response to terrorism. But there is no apparent disagreement over the U.S. condemnation of Col. Moammar Khadafy and the nightclub bombing.

The Reagan administration takes the view that attacks on civilians are terrorist acts, although rebels trying to bring down Marxist regimes are often described as "freedom fighters."

The allies concur in the revulsion, but they generally would prefer retaliating with political and diplomatic weapons, not military might.

In 1979, the Jonathan Institute, named for Netanyahu's brother who died in the rescue of Israeli hostages in Uganda three years earlier, defined terrorism as "the deliberate and systematic murder, maiming and menacing of the innocent to inspire fear in order to gain political ends."

But five years later, when the institute held its second meeting here, the participants approached terrorism with varying definitions and proposed diverse responses.

Netanyahu says sloppy thinking in the West often has allowed terrorists to escape retaliation. Since Vietnam, he says, "the rules of engagement have become so rigid that governments often straitjacket themselves in the face of unambiguous aggression."

He says terrorists fear force and contrary to popular myth are usually not suicidal. West Germany, Holland and Britain all have used force to liberate hostages. "For some time afterward," he says, "these countries experienced no further hostage takings."

After the U.S. attack on Libya the Israeli ambassador said it would deter Khadafy. "The main point here," he said in an interview, "is that you don't defeat terrorism with a single blow but you orchestrate pressures on them — economic and military ones — to drive the message home that their activities will be punished."

Maksoud, however, is urging the Reagan administration to pause and to distinguish between terrorism, which he said starts with violence, and resistance.

"Our concept is that resistance starts with petitioning, with demonstrations," the Arab League envoy said. "It ends with violence when every other means has been exhausted."

O'Neill Offers 'Alternative' Government

WASHINGTON — The Buenos Aires shoot-out between the speaker and the ambassador was important, not in demonstrating ambassadorial indiscretion, but in revealing how far Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. has taken his alternative government.

While a member of Speaker O'Neill's delegation was telling the president of Argentina that Ronald Reagan is a warmonger, another House Democrat was in Panama putting his nose into the Contadora talks. These Easter Recess activities, again violating the convention that political criticism stops at the water's edge, also pursue a diplomatic course independent of the U.S. government.

That is the conspicuous valedictory of Tip O'Neill's six-year leadership of the only Demoratic-controlled branch of government. The speaker concedes that his views are shaped by the Vietnam syndrome and the advice of leftist Maryknoll nuns. Now he and his followers have put before the world a Central American policy that can be viewed as an alternative to President Reagan's. With the congressional tide shifting toward aid for the contras, O'Neill has devised a new parliamentary bobbytrap.

Although the bizarre meeting in Buenos Aires has received more attention thanks to a leaked cable, a more flagrant instance of alternative diplomacy was the visit to the Contadora meeting by three House Democrats. Rep. Michael Barnes of Maryland, an increasingly harsh foe of Reagan policy, had quietly been asked by the State Department not to go to Panama.

But Barnes turned up there anyway (with Reps. James Slattery of Kansas and Bill Richardson of New Mexico). Unable to penetrate closed-door negotiations, they hung around the coffee shop buttonholing diplomats and advising them what to do. Whereas diplomats from the Contadora group of 13 Latin states conceded Sandinista intransigeance, Barnes publicly blamed Ronald Reagan for the breakdown in talks.

The O'Neill delegation was less active diplomatically but produced more fireworks. The speaker and Rep. George Miller of California, who last year dismissed embassy officials when he conferred with Nicaraguan communist leaders, repeatedly complained about America's "gunboat diplomacy."

Other delegation members told us the most extreme anti-administration attacks came from Reps. Fortney H. Stark of California, one of the most ideological members of Congress, and Rep. Marty Russo of Illinois, no ideologue but fiercely partisan. They were particularly "strident" in Buenos Aires, a fellow delegation member told us, attacking the president and urging the Argentines to do the same.

An unpublished U.S. Embassy telegram reported that Stark informed President Raul Alfonsin that Reagan "wants a war in Central America." Russo, another congressman told us, said to Foreign Minister Dante Caputo that "Reagan's not going to be happy until he gets into a war in Central America." Russo stayed with Caputo after the others left, to press home his point.

These were the comments, rather than anything the speaker himself said, that led to Ambassador Frank V. Ortiz's bitter parting remarks to O'Neill that were included in his now-celebrated telegram to Washington. When that cable that published in the Washington Post, delegation members savaged Ortiz. O'Neill operatives whispered that Ortiz, worried he might be bounced because of insufficiently anti-communist credentials, was polishing the Reagan apple.

Actually, Ortiz is a senior career Foreign Service officer whose failure to put human rights above the interests of his country got him in trouble in the Carter administration. Now facing retirement, he neither needs nor seeks notoriety. His State Department cable had highest classification and a "no distribution" label, restricting it to cleared personnel.

Ortiz's outrage, while stemming mainly from Stark and Russo lobbying the Argentines to oppose U.S. policy, also was inspired by the absurdity of amateur congressional diplomacy. The peak was reached when O'Neill, saying Reagan insists that Latin leaders "privately" support the contras, demanded President Alfonsin's "private views" while Marty Russo ground away with a home video camera.

Such gaucherie revolted Ortiz. But it was business as usual for the delegation (including Republican members, who thought the ambassador "a little uptight"). Back in Washington, the speaker found the tide shifting against him and adopted a parliamentary maneuver to scuttle contra aide that he had earlier promised to forego.

But one prominent Democrat — Chairman Les Aspin of the Armed Services Committee — instead of lobbying the Argentines, took an unpublicized trip to Nicaragua where he found more popularity for contras than Sandinistas. He is expected, for the first time, to vote against restrictive amendments and for the contra aid — tacitly rejecting alternative diplomacy by Congress.

The Whole Truth

If you ever want to start an argument in the history-saturated town of Hillsborough, just venture to assert that a tombstone in the old Presbyterian Church cemetery does not speak the whole truth. You're certain to find yourself involved in an honest-to-goodness argumentation.

The barely legible inscription, apparently scratcbed into the stone by a knife and badly eroded by the rain, sleet and snow of nearly 200 years, proclaims:

"William M. Hooper, son of Roy William Hooper, rector of Trinity church in Bothon, England. Born June 28, 1742, educated at Gunbridge college and died October 14, 1790. Signer of the Declaration of Independence."

Up to a point, the tombstone speaks the literal truth. William M. Hooper, one of the three North Carolina signers of the Declaration of Independence, did live in Hillsborough, died there in 1790 and was buried beneath the stone in the Hooper family plot in the old cemetery. What the visitor to the cemetery does not learn is that Hooper's remains were removed from the Hillsborough graveyard in 1894 and reinterred in the Guilford Courthouse Battleground.

Moving Hooper's body and that of John Penn, another signer of the Declaration of Inpendence, to Guilford Courthouse was all part of a grandiose project by David Schenck to transfer the Guilford battleground into a sort of North Carolina Westminster Abbey — a place for burial of the state's honored dead, particularly its military heroes.

As a result, several monuments were erected on the battleground, some to heroes of the battle and some to heroes of other battles whose bodies were moved to the battleground. The most imposing monument is the one honoring Gen. Nathaniel Greene, commander of the American troops in the Guilford Courthouse Battle who so badly mauled by the British forces under Cornwallis that he retreated to Wilmington a few days after the battle and licked his wounds a few days before marching on to ignomy at Yorktown. Of course Gen. Greene was not buried at Guildford Courthouse and neither was President George Washington. However, a monument does commemorate Washington's visit to the battleground on June 2, 1791, during his Southern tour.

As part of his project, Schenck proposed to move the bodies of the state's three signers of the Declaration of Independence to the battlefield. The bodies of Hooper and Penn were placed there and a monument to them and Joseph Hewes, the third North Carolina signer, was dedicated on July 3, 1897. Schenck was disappointed that he was not able to move Hewes' body into his Valhalla. Hewes, who headed a committee which was responsible for fitting out the first American warship and is considered the first civilian head of the U.S. Navy, died in Philadelphia in 1779. He was buried in Christ Churchyard there, but by 1897 the exact loation of his body had been lost.

Tradition in Hillsborough has it that after Schenck had removed Hooper's remains from the Hillsborough graveyard he was en route to the railway station with them and the tombstone when he was halted by a group of irate citizens headed by Josiah Turner Jr. who forced him to relinquish the tombstone.

However, Hugh Conway Browning of the Hillsborough Historical Society who carefully researched the matter about 25 years ago, discovered that the traditional version of the incident was not quite true. Documents Browning found in the Southern Historical Collection in the UNC Library indicate that Schenck got to Greensboro with the Hooper remains and the tombstone. They also showed he had second thoughts and returned the tombstone to Hillsborough.

This is attested by a letter from Schenck to Turner In it, Schenck said facetiously that to avoid being charged with larceny "... I will ship you shortly to Hillsboro the Hooper slab — I will pay freight and for replacing it — Send me a bill for the latter — I can't pay for any elaborate brick but for replacing it where it was."

Although William Hooper's mortal remains were officially moved to Guilford Courthouse, folks at Hillsborough solace themselves that after the body had moldered in its grave there for a century there was precious little left for Schenck to move. This is shown by a letter Cecil L. Sanford, who owned the house at Hillsborough where Hooper and his family lived, wrote in 1974 to Mrs. Grace J. Rohrer, secretary of the State Department of Cultural Resources.

In his letter, Sanford wrote that folks in Hillsborough had "always been sensitive" about the removal of Hooper's remains. He noted that "The original large tombstone is still in its place in what was once the Hooper family graveyard." He added:

"It must be remembered that only the smallest, token remains of Hooper, two artifacts, one of which may have been a tooth and the other a button, were found in the grave. These were taken and reinterred at the Guilford Courthouse Battleground as the body of William Hooper. The truth is that the dust of Hooper had long since mingled with the red clay of his original resting place. And there it remains."

Donald Rothberg

Turnabout

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is trying to seize the political moment and convert anger over Libya into support for his plan to arm Nicaraguan rebels. But the initial reaction in the Democratic-controlled House is a reluctance to accept his linkage of Middle East terrorism and Latin American insurgency.

Even some of the president's harshest critics rallied to his side and gave their support for his decision to unleash a military response to Libya's terrorist activities.

But scant hours after the halls of Congress echoed with speeches backing the Libyan raids, the House on Tuesday dealt a procedural defeat to the president on the Nicaraguan aid question.

By a four-vote margin — 212-208 — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and other opponents of sending $100 million in aid to the Contra rebels, succeeded in tying the package to an appropriations bill Reagan is threatening to veto.

In advance of the vote the president had complained the legislative ploy by the Democrats could tie up the aid for months. The House debate was continuing but the first round had clearly gone to the opponents of Contra aid.

It was a sharp turnaround on a day that began with few prepared to argue with the assessment by Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., that "today is a day for unity, for Congress and the American people to stand together behind the president."

As Congress convened Tuesday the fires ignited by U.S. bombs still burned in Libya and a U.S. plane and its two-man crew were missing. Few politicians, whatever their private misgivings, were prepared to dissent from a presidential decision to retaliate against Col. Moammar Khadafy for his sponsorship of terrorist attacks on Americans.

With Congress opening debate on the plan to send $100 million in aid to the rebel forces fighting to overthrow the Sandinista government of Nicaragua, Reagan repeated his allegations of Libyan involvement in Central America.

"Let us not underestimate the reach of Khadafy's terror," Reagan told a business group.

Then he added, "I would remind the House, voting this week, that this arch-terrorist has sent $400 million and an arsenal of weapons and advisers into Nicaragua to bring his war home to the United States. He has bragged that he is helping the Nicaraguans because they fight America on its own ground."

The House rejected the aid package last month but Democratic leaders promised supporters a second chance. The Senate then voted 53-47 on March 24 to approve a modified version of the proposal.

The battle over whether the United States should help the so-called Contra forces is among the highest priority items on the president's agenda. He has lobbied intensively, buttonholed wavering members of Congress and tried to generate political pressure with appeals to the nation.

But with opinion polls indicating the public is wary of any deepening U.S. involvement in Central America, members of Congress were feeling little political pressure to stand behind the president on the Nicaraguan issue.

The Sandinista decision, after the House vote last month, to send troops to strike at rebel camps in Honduras helped the Reagan campaign, as did the Nicaraguan rejection of a peace initiative sponsored by other Latin American nations.

The tide appeared to be shifting in favor of aiding the rebels, and that movement appeared to get another boost from the general approval of his strike against terrorism.

While working to block the Contra aid proposal, O'Neill was one of the strongest backers of the Libyan raids.

"I think we did the proper thing, and I pray to God the American people say so too," he said.

"I think all Americans should stand with the commander in chief at this moment," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

While some members of Congress complained about a lack of consultation prior to the raids, O'Neill said, "I do not expect to be consulted. I do expect to be informed, and I was informed."

Others offered their backing, but added their concern about what might follow.

Some of their concerns that the raids might trigger a new cycle of terrorist attacks were heightened before the day ended when a U.S. embassy employee in Sudan was shot and wounded.

"We are under no illusion," Dole had said. "Khadafy may strike again."

What then? was a question being asked on Capitol Hill. It was a question that also was central to the debate on Contra aid. Where might it lead?

The answer was no more clear in Central America than it was in the terrorist hunting grounds bordering the Mediterranean.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — A majority of Americans currently perceive the United States and the Soviet Union to be about equal in nuclear strength, the largest proportion to do so in Gallup surveys spanning the last four years.

At the same time, a strong 47 percent plurality believes the United States is spending too much rather than too little (13 percent) for defense while 36 percent feel the military budget is "about the right amount."

These views may be influenced, at least in part, by the perception that about one-third of each tax dollar spent for defense (37 cents) is wasted.

A 54 percent majority currently believes the United States and the U.S.S.R. are about equal in nuclear strength, while 23 percent thing the Soviets are stronger and 17 percent feel the United States holds an edge.

These figures represent a dramatic shift in public opinion since Gallup's first assessment of nuclear might, in the spring of 1982. At that time, only 32 percent felt there was nuclear parity between the superpowers, while a 42 percent plurality believed the Soviet Union held an advantage and 17 percent thought the U.S. was ahead.

Since 1982 the weight of public opinion has swung gradually toward the parity consensus found today. As recently as last October, only 40 percent believed neither nation enjoyed a nuclear advantage.

No significant change has occurred in the past year in Americans' attitudes on defense spending. Then, as now, the heavy weight of public opinion was that it was adequate or excessive. Current attitudes, however, are radically different from those recorded in 1981, when a majority felt we should spend more for national defense.

To a considerable extent, attitudes toward defense spending are conditioned by perceptions of the relative strength of the superpowers. However, as many as one-third (33 percent) of those who believe the Soviet Union has a nuclear advantage over the U.S. think we are spending too much of defense, while 44 percent feel the military budget is about right and 21 percent, too small.

Surveys consistently have shown Americans believe government spending to be wasteful. Defense spending is no exception, with those in the current survey citing a median figure of 37 cents of every defense dollar being wasted.

Perceptions of waste are linked to judgments about the adequacy of the defence budget. Those who feel that too much money is now earmarked for defense, for example, cite a median waste figure of 48 cents. Although substantially lower, the average amount of waste cited by those who believe the defense appropriation is too little or about right (29 cents) reveals a considerable amount of cynicism about defense spending in general, as does the lack of differentiation by political party affiliations.

The latest findings are based on telephone interviews with 1,004 adults, 18 and older, conducted in scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period March 7-10.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 4 percentage points in either direction. In addition to sampling error, the reader should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.

Mail Can Go Astray

RALEIGH — Everybody needs a little excitement in their daily ritual. For this reporter, my daily surprise usually comes when I visit my post office box in downtown Raleigh.

The N.C. Association of Afternoon Newspapers, my employer, has long rented P.O. Box 1309 in Raleigh's Century Station. The zip there is 27602. Everyday, I pick up a crateful of mail that usually includes one copy of each of the papers my column appears in (48), a dozen or so press releases, and sometimes my paychecks.

The surprise comes when I find something else in the box. Consider the following.

I've received mail for Rep. Danny Devane, D-Hoke, whose office is Room 1309 in the Legislative Building. I've received mail for the Associated Press, whose box is 1311, and for WPTF radio. I also get a lot of mail for the gas company. Their box number is something in the 1400s, but I still get it.

In fact, one day I got enough gas company mail to be rich if I could have just changed my name to Public Service of North Carolina. I received what must have been 200 bill payments from gas company customers. All in my box.

The post office must think I deserve some utility money. One day I got a telephone payment from a customer of the Albemarle telephone company. In the process of crossing town, the check made it to Raleigh and my post office box.

I've also received a good number of tax checks. I've received one for the Wake County Tax Collector but I get far more for the Durham tax man. Again, they're checks mailed for crosstown delivery in Durham but they end up being sent to me in Raleigh.

My favorite check story concerns the Statue of Liberty. Someone on Long Island, N.Y., mailed a check to an Annapolis, Md., foundation that is trying to save the proud lady. I got the envelope. When I handed it back to Nate, my favorite postal worker, he just shook his head in wonderment.

For two years, I got something for the Raleigh Civitan Club almost every day. But that was the club's fault. They had my address printed as their own on a brochure.

For a short while, there must have been a postal clerk who thought I should get the entire press run of The Raleigh News and Observer. I'd regularly get a bundle of 12 or more papers, none of which were supposed to come to me.

You must know that if I'm getting so much of other people's mail, someone else is getting mine.

I recently received my monthly check from the Shelby Star in the envelope of a Raleigh business machine company. I was befuddled. Had the Star been bought out? No, the post office had delivered the check to the wrong address. They'd opened the envelope and almost processed the check before discovering it wasn't their's.

The gas company and I apparently have a reciprocal arrangement. I'm always getting press releases stamped, "Not for N.C. Public Service." They must be having a regular problem if they have a special stamp just for misboxed mail.

One day I got a call from the N.C. Association of County Commissioners. I'd already been to the post office and had been surprised to find that I hadn't gotten a single piece of mail. Of course not. It had all been put in the bottom of the commissioners' bag. Their secretary said she thought the mailbag was awfully heavy that day.

planning committee, said the group's activities over the past four months have included visits to other civic centers in communities of similar size — Lafayette and Huntsville, Ala., and Monroe, Augusta and Savannah, Ga. — and updating demographic and economic date contained in a report prepared several years ago which "affirmed the need" for a civic center or arena.

The next step, Mrs. Faulkner said, will be to "conduct a survey to identify potential users," which should be completed by the end of the summer or early fall. The committee's final report, she said, should be completed shortly thereafter, probably in September.

The next step? "Go back again (to the General Assembly, in 1987) for a planning grant" to hire an architect to develop a plan for construction.

Mrs. Faulkner said at some point "we'll have to find a proprietor or owner" — the university, the city or the county, or a combination. "Not a single one (of the centers visited by the committee) operated without a subsidy," she said.

A-Bomb Victim Describes Blast

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Sakue Shimohira was 10 years old on Aug. 9, 1945, but that is a day she said would be clear in her mind for the rest of her life. On that date, a blast from an atomic bomb changed Mrs. Shimohira's life and the world as she knew it.

Speaking at Pitt County Memorial Hospital on Friday, Mrs. Shimohira, a native of Nagasaki, Japan, told her audience, "My suffering cannot be described in words, and I wish that nobody would have to go through it again."

Her visit to Greenville was arranged through the Asia Resource Center in Washington and the N.C. Center for Peace Education as part of a two-week national tour. Mrs. Shimohira, 51, and three other survivors of the blast are touring the United States in support of a proposed complete ban on nuclear tests.

Commenting on the recent bombing of Libya by the United States, Mrs. Shirmohira said, "Once the bombing starts, there's no guarantee that it won't develop into a war. The survivors (of the bombing of Nagasaki and Hiroshima) are really frightened about it."

She said she thinks the political heads of the world should "try to negotiate patiently" rather than fight with nuclear weapons.

Although showing no outward signs of the bomb's impact on her life, Mrs. Shimohira said she has suffered physical problems as a result of the atomic blast. She described her emotional scars and the events of the bombing as she remembers it through an interpreter.

"The air raid warning was issued early in the morning on Aug. 9, 1945," Mrs. Shimohira said. "I went to the shelter with my younger sister ... When the all-clear siren was issued, most of the people in the shelter went out." She said she and her sister remained in the shelter, and at 11:10 a.m., "I was thrown by a big blast and hit the wall of the shelter, knocking me unconscious. When I came to, there were burned bodies all around me, bodies filled with broken glass."

Mrs. Shimohira said that when she went out of the shelter, "all around were people burned black and covered with blood ... Many people were craving water, but after a sip or two, they were dead."

She said she spent the night in the shelter "filled with dead bodies, because we didn't have anywhere to go."

"The next day we looked for our home and our mother, but all the landmarks we were familiar with were destroyed, so it was hard to find our way ... We found our sister burned black, except her face was covered with her hand, so I could recognize her." She said she found the body of two women further down the street in the rubble of a neighbor's home. She said one was her mother.

Mrs. Shimohira said the survivors of the blast, known as Hibakusha, suffered from bleeding gums, high fever and diarrhea.

"Even after 41 years, the survivors are still suffering," she said. "I don't believe the bombing should ever be repeated. Today there are nuclear weapons that could affect the entire world with one blast."

According to a press release from the Asia Resource Center, the survivors of the atomic blast are in this country "to appeal to President Reagan and the American public on behalf of their 350,000 fellow survivors" to accept a proposal by Soviet Premier Mikkail Gorbachev for a mutual nuclear testing moratorium.

"An endowed professorship, like a prestigious scholarship for a student, has an impact far beyond the individual who receives the money," Howell said. "Scholarships induce other excellent students to enroll, and endowed chairs held by persons of eminence and leadership attract younger faculty who, led by or joined by the master scholar, will carry out projects to enhance the teaching, research and public service of the whole school."

To move ahead, Howell said ECU has a sound heritage and the willingness and ability to advance.

As documented in the recently published official history of ECU, he said "there has been a steady and orderly development to our present condition. It is a good, solid foundation for the future.

Election ...

Local officials say they are pleased North Carolina residents will be able to decide when they want to elect candidates.

"Knowing the people will decide to leave it as is or make a change is the way it should be," said state Rep. Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt. "I think there are pros and cons to this just like every issue, and I hope the voters look at both sides very carefully and make the best decision for the people."

State Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, agreed with Jones, saying he doesn't feel strongly about either side of the issue.

"It's no big issue. The way it's carried out will be lived with either way," Warren said. "We'll get along with whatever the voter decide."

Meanwhile, state Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt, who supported the amendment, now fears the odd-numbered elections could lead to even poorer voter turn-out.

"It will cost more, and it could add to voter apathy since they have to go every year," Martin said. "It may need some rethinking."

Martin said the idea of altering the election process was initiated to create more of an interest in local elections.

"It would target state races, and we would spend more time electing officials in this state," he said. "It would not be interfered with by the federal government."

Meanwhile, local election officials say there would be an additional burden if the amendment is approved.

"There are going to be several ramifications if this is approved," said Margaret Hardy, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections. "It would mean a tremendous escalation in expense with the addition of primaries and elections every year."

Each election costs about $15,000 in payroll expenses, according to Ms. Hardy, who added that the total doesn't include precinct expenses, ballot printing or primary costs.

"That amount is just a portion of how much more it will cost," she said. "I can't even estimate what the total cost would be."

But the Board of Elections will continue to go along with what the voters decide, according to Alfred Brinson, a board member.

"We just run them. We don't get involved in the good or the bad of it," he said. "Whatever way they decide is the way we'll administer the elections."

Kenneth K. Dews
For County Commissioner

WINTERVILLE—Kenneth K. Dews Sr., a candidate for Pitt County Commissioner in the May 6 Democratic Primary, has been a dedicated contributor to the health, educational, agricultural and business development of Pitt County for the past 35 years.

Dews, a native of the small town of Blakely, Ga., moved to Pitt County in 1949 after a stint in the U.S. Navy. He married the former Mamie Barnhill McLawhorn of Winterville. The couple reared four children, educated them in the public schools here and supported their pursuit of higher education at the college and graduate school level. Three of them are now gainfully employed in their home county. Kenneth Jr. teaches at A.G. Cox School; Alexine is a medical technologist at Pitt Memorial Hospital; and Catherine is a dental hygienist with Family Dentistry in Greenville. The Dews' fourth child, Madge Gay, is a registered nurse in a military hospital in Augusta, Ga.

Dews has farmed in southern Pitt County since moving here — managing the production of tobacco, corn, soybeans and peanuts on the family's farm. His experience has made him uniquely sensitive to the recent financial plight of farmers and of the agribusiness community.

Dews' involvement in local affairs extends far beyond his family's farm, however. He has served as a director of the First State Bank, now First Citizens Bank. For the past several years, he has also chaired the board of Home Federal Savings and Loan.

For six years, Dews was a member of the Pitt County Board of Education. He has also served as a member of the board of advisors of Chowan College.

A former member and chairman of the board of Pitt Memorial Hospital, Dews now serves on two major fund-raising boards in support of the hospital. He has also been a member of the board of the East Carolina Vocational Center, The Eastern Area Health Education Center and the N.C. Institute of Medicine.

He has been involved in government at the state level, having been a member of the Governor's State Goals and Policies Board, the N.C. 2000 Commission and other policy-setting committees.

He is active in the First Baptist Church of Winterville, where he has served as a deacon. His civic involvement includes the Winterville Kiwanis Club, in which he was president, and the Pitt County United Fund.

ised "to insure that terrorists have no sanctuary anywhere." He later denied there was an attempt to kill Khadafy, saying "We weren't out to kill anybody.".

But Shultz and the Pentagon's No. 2 official, Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft, did acknowledge the United States had hoped the strike might foster a revolt.

Not everyone agrees with Shultz that anti-terrorist strikes will curb terrorism, but there is a consensus that the administration has committed itself to a policy of retaliation.

Vice President George Bush said Friday, "I am absolutely convinced that if we have the smoking gun again, they will pay the price again." Reagan had said after the Tuesday attack that he would do it again if necessary.

While polls showed Americans approving by an overwhelming margin, some experts and lawmakers wondered where it would lead. "Are we going to do this again, and again, and again?" asked Senate Minority Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

And while the administration gave assurances it would not engage in tit-for-tat responses, events seemed to acquire a life of their own from the moment U.S. aircraft and warships, moved into the disputed Gulf of Sidra on March 24 to challenge Khadafy's "line of death."

The Gulf of Sidra clash in which 40 Libyans died was followed by the terrorist attack on West Berlin bar on April 5, in which an American soldier and a Turkish woman were killed and 230 persons were injured, including 63 Americans.

That was followed by last week' air strike, with as many as 100 Libyans reported dead, which in turn was followed by the murder of hostages in Lebanon — all in the space of 20 days.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said Reagan had ordered the strike reluctantly and as "a last resort" because European allies would not join in an economic boycott.

One of the most worrisome aspects of the new policy is its impact on relations with the European allies. Britain cooperated with the administration by letting its bases be used, but France denied permission for American bombers to fly over its territory, and virtually every other European nation voiced disapproval.

A weakening of U.S.-European ties, especially the NATO alliance, has long been a goal of Soviet policy.

Henry Kissinger, the former secretary of state, lamented in a television interview that "there must be some willingness to run risks on the part of our allies." He said "the allies have to understand it will not be possible to keep the present arrangement indefinitely, if on every issue ... they separate from us."

But Robert Hunter, a Middle East and European analyst at the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies here, said he doubted the disagreement over anti-terrorist actions would cause the United States to consider easing its commitment to defend Europe.

He said keeping American defense forces in Europe is as much in American interests as it is in Europe's.

Missionaries

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Chinese university professor predicts that China will be sending Christian missionaries to Europe and the United States by the end of the century.

C. K. Chang, 77, currently a visiting professor at Baylor University in Texas from An Hui Normal University in China, says rapidly advancing evangelization indicates Chinese by the year 2000 will "be sending missionaries not only to our own people but all around the world."

"Our Man For The Future"

PITT COUNTY
COMMISSIONER
MAY 6, 1986 PRIMARY

County Commissioners are custodians of the County treasury. The six Pitt County Commissioners are entrusted with a tremendous public responsibility. The public expects its County Commissioners to raise revenue fairly and to expend funds with a great deal of wisdom and discretion. Personal and property tax, your money and mine, are the primary sources of revenue for Pitt County. A great percentage of these funds are used to support public services agencies such as the local health department, the local social services department, the local mental health center, the sheriff department, construction of school facilities etc. These services impact on the total Pitt County citizenry. Another responsibility of commissioners is to plan and implement the orderly economic growth and development of Pitt County. Because the total Pitt County Community is affected by decisions made by the county commissioners, the total Pitt County Community should have representation on the Board of Commissioners. This representation includes the medical community, agricultural community, the educational community, the working class, and so forth. I am offering myself as a candidate because I know I can be an asset to Pitt County. I have training and experience in education, industry, planning/development, and allied health. I can represent a cross section of disciplines and people. With your support, we will assure that Pitt County will continue to be our home and the place we are proud to work in.

I am committed to:
1. The planned growth of Pitt County as a regional medical center
2. The balanced growth and development of industry and small businesses.
3. An alternative to tobacco as a cash crop.
4. Creating jobs for our youth.
5. An alternative to the at large system of election.
6. The fair consolidation of the Pitt County/Greenville School Systems.

During my tenure on the Greenville City Board of Education, my record shows that I was committed to educating the children as well as supporting an environment conducive to learning for both the students and the faculty/staff. I firmly believe in government "of the people, by the people and for the people."
As a licensed Real Estate Broker and experienced administrator, I can be a major asset to the Board of Commissioners.

Courts Panel To Study Challenge To Elections

RALEIGH (AP) — The state should revise its system of electing Superior Court judges to comply with anti-discrimination law and keep to a minimum the delay in this year's judicial primary election, the chairman of the North Carolina Courts Commission says.

It is "essential that we maintain a workable system while at the same time making sure that our election process conforms to the Voting Rights Act of 1965," H. Parks Helms said Friday.

Helms, a Charlotte attorney and former state legislator, said the commission would meet next Wednesday to consider which changes in the law it should recommend to the General Assembly when it convenes in June.

The U.S. Department of Justice rejected April 11 the state's system for nominating Superior Court judges in six of its 33 judicial districts. Judges are nominated in district-wide elections, but the general election is statewide.

The department said the use of numbered seats and staggered terms in the districts was potentially discriminatory under the 1965 law.

The problem, the department said, is that having judges run for numbered seats in a district instead of at-large and having different judgeships in a district up for election in different years bars minority voters from using the election technique known as single-shot voting.

Single-shot voting means casting a ballot for only one candidate in a race in which more than one person can win. For example, if five candidates — four whites and one black — were running for three seats and people could vote for three candidates, blacks would vote only for the black candidate.

"The interest of minorities in having the ability to elect persons of their choice to the judiciary is essential to the administration of justice in North Carolina, and it must be protected and maintained in every way possible," Helms said.

But he said the changes sought by the Justice Department could mean that "politics will begin to play a more important role" in the election of judges. "That is a dangerous thing," Helms said.

He said the courts commission, established by the Legislature in 1963 to study the judicial system, would consider recommending:

Helms said he anticipated no strong resistance to the changes, saying there was a "general agreement" in state government that they were needed.

He said there was no use to continue fighting for a numbered-seat system, because courts had struck it down numerous times.

Helms said the state's court system historically has worked well, but that state policymakers should take a serious look at such fundamental changes as abolishing the election of judges in favor of an appointive system based on merit.

"I'm ready to do away with the partisan election of judges," he said.

Gov. Jim Martin has endorsed merit selection, but there is strong opposition in the Legislature.

NAACP Challenges Election System

GREENSBORO (AP) — A lawsuit filed by the NAACP against the city of Lexington and the Davidson County Board of Elections charges that the election system there deliberately discriminates against blacks.

The lawsuit, filed Friday in U.S. Middle District Court in Greensboro by the NAACP, its Lexington affiliate and two black Lexington men, and challenges the procedures for electing city council members, who are elected by an at-large ward system, which the plaintiffs charge dilutes black voting strength.

The suit by the National Association for the Advance of Colored People and Alonzo Gill and Clarence Roberts also charges that through the use of unequal population districts and annexations, Lexington officials deliberately have discriminated against black residents.

The plaintiffs seek a court-ordered plan for electing city council members that provides for single-member wards citywide, with districts that are equal in population and do not dilute black voting strength.

Lexington elects five council members by ward, one at-large and a mayor. All of the council members and the mayor are elected by all of the voters, including those who represent wards.

Also named as defendants were the members of the Lexington City Council.

Furniture Mart Attendance Up

HIGH POINT (AP) — Attendance at the spring Southern Furniture Market hit a new record high, market officials said.

Attendance was up by 4.2 percent over April 1985 and 12.1 percent over April 1984, said Robert P. Gruenberg, general manager of the Southern Furniture Market Center.

This year's market was marked "by the broadest mix of retailers that we've seen in seven to 10 years, but not all of those retailers are buying," said Jerry Epperson, vice president of Wheat First Securities in Richmond, Va. "The difference between who wrote good business and who did not was a matter of who and where they sold rather than the number of people here."

Epperson said "manufacturers with a customer based focused largely on department stores; chains and mass merchants did exceptionally well. Those selling primarily medium-sized independents or small independents had a difficult market, and one that appeared weaker overall than it really was."

JIM YOUNG
DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR PITT COUNTY COMMISSIONER
DISCUSSES ECONOMIC GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT IN PITT COUNTY
Pitt County is one of the fastest growing communities in North Carolina. The current population of nearly 96,000 citizens is projected to approach 110,000 by 1990 and to exceed 125,000 by the year 2000. Retail sales, building permits, and total employment in Pitt County continue to increase at rates which far exceed both State and National averages.
The most visible effect of this situation is a growing and prosperous economy. From 1984 - 1985, the total tax base of Pitt County (the amount of property valuation which is taxed) grew by over $ 130 MILLION—without a re-valuation. The question, then, is not WHETHER we will continue to grow; but HOW we will grow.
Such rapid growth demands visionary and informed local leadership. For with the positive aspects of growth also come difficult issues and potential problems. Greater population concentrations bring increases in crime, and our law enforcement capabilities must be expanded proportionately with these increases.
Commercial and residential expansion, without proper planning, endangers environmental and natural resources. It can also threaten the rights of landowners if it is uncontrolled.
Population increases expand the need for basic public services such as primary health care, adequate water and sewer systems, and sufficient solid and hazardous waste disposal facilities.
We are fortunate in Pitt County to have positive growth projections. The natural economic benefits from this growth will permit local government to keep pace in providing necessary services. Our county (based on current data) should be able to deal with the coming losses of Federal revenues as the provisions of the Federal Budget Deficit Reduction Act are implemented—and we have the capacity to do so without curtailing primary services or raising the tax rate.
However, the issues to be confronted in the next decade are complex. They will require leadership which understands economic systems, which is committed to balanced and planned growth, and which is capable of weighing the costs as well as the benefits of development.
The citizens of Pitt County have an obligation, RIGHT NOW, to give careful consideration to the types of people they will entrust with the responsibility for dealing with these complicated issues. We must insist upon electing local leaders whose training and experience have prepared them to comprehend and deal effectively with these challenges.
If you are concerned about planned and balanced growth in our county, I ask you to give me your consideration for Pitt County Commissioner from the Greenville Township. My background in strategic planning, development, budgeting, and governmental affairs has given me familiarity with many of the areas cited above. My experience in education, management, farming, and community services has provided me with opportunities to apply my capabilities in these areas.
I believe that these attributes merit your careful consideration. But, above all, I pledge to you an unyielding commitment and dedication to systematically building a better Pitt County for all of us. Thank you.

Reynolds Gives $4.5 Million To Med Center

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. has given $4.5 million to the expansion program at Bowman Gray-Baptist Hospital Medical Center, officials say.

The grant, the largest single corporate gift ever received by the medical center, will support the addition being built atop the center's research building, J. Tylee Wilson, chairman and chief executive officer of Reynolds Industries, said.

The money will support biomedical research and medical education, Wilson said.

"By enabling the medical school to expand its medical research programs, the grant will result in far-reaching health benefits for people over the state, the region and the nation," said J. Paul Sticht, general chairman of the center's fund-raising drive.

The six-floor research addition to the Hanes Research Building is scheduled to be finished in 1987. The addition will provide 130,000 square feet of space, effectively doubling the center's research facilities. It will cost about $15.5 million.

National Democrats To Step Up Funds For N.C. Campaigns

RALEIGH (AP) — The national Democratic Party will spend more money in North Carolina than any other state in the November congressional elections, hoping to prove that the 1984 elections — in which Democrats lost three seats — were an aberration rather than a trend, officials say.

"North Carolina in 1986 will be our No. 1 targeted state," Rep. Tony L. Coelho, D-Calif., told reporters Friday at a meeting at state Democratic headquarters in Raleigh.

Coelho, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said the committee would spend at least $250,000 on North Carolina congressional races, providing funding in at least five targeted congressional elections, he said.

Beneficiaries will include two former Democratic representatives trying to regain their seats, C. Robin Britt and James McClure Clarke. They are trying to oust GOP incumbents J. Howard Coble of the 6th District and William M. Hendon of the 11th, respectively.

Other seats targeted are in the 4th District, where Democrats are trying to oust Republican William W. Cobey Jr.; the 9th District, where D.G. Martin is attempting to defeat GOP freshman J. Alex McMillan in a rematch; and the 5th District, where Democratic Rep. Stephen L. Neal is seeking re-election.

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee had not decided whether to focus on the 10th congressional district seat being vacated by GOP Rep. James T. Broyhill, who is running for the Senate, he said.

The committee probably will not become involved in the heavily Democratic 3rd District where Democratic Rep. Charles O. Whitley is retiring. "Whoever wins the Democratic nomination we think will win the seat," he said.

Democrats held nine of the 11 North Carolina congressional seats prior to the 1984 elections when Britt, Clarke and 4th district Democrat Ike F. Andrews were defeated. Democrats are now clinging to a 6-5 edge in the Tar Heel House delegation.

Citizens Of Pitt County

I would like to say a few things about the up-coming election for sheriff of Pitt County. I have been supporting Sheriff Ralph Tyson for years, but now I think we need a change.

I have met and talked with Mr. Jackie Moye and I feel he is the best man for the job of sheriff. I have put up posters and had them torn down. My wife and I were told by Deputy Billy Vandiford that he tore down several posters that I put up. They were not on his property but on someone else's and on telephone poles beside the road.

How can the people of Pitt County have a choice if they don't know anything about the experience and training of the other candidate. I think it is a shame that Mr. Moye does not have the same opportunity as our current sheriff does to display his posters. Do we, as the people of Pitt County, call this fair play?

NCAE To Oppose Shift Of Funding

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The North Carolina Association of Educators has called upon its board of directors and staff to "oppose vigorously" efforts to reduce the General Fund by siphoning off money that could go to education.

The 1,800 delegates opposed Friday Gov. Jim Martin's proposal to move the N.C. Highway Patrol and Driver Education programs into the state's General Fund. Teachers said they were worried that the extra money for the highway patrol and driver education will reduce the amount of money that goes for schools.

The state Highway Patrol and Driver Education programs are expected to cost $92.5 million in 1987-88, the year of the proposed shift.

"Schools, jobs, roads — they all go together," Martin told the group Friday. "This is not anti-education. It is getting our house in order."

But NCAE leaders called upon the teachers' group to "oppose vigorously, during the next legislative session, all efforts to reduce the North Carolina General Fund by siphoning off monies to finance programs that are currently financed from other sources."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan told the convention Saturday that he will "provide leadership to protect the General Fund, which provides the base for our education system."

Both Martin and Jordan called for increased teacher salaries to attract and retain teachers in the classroom.

Jordan called for a beginning teacher salary of $20,000 within four years.

"If next year it still takes, as it does today, six years for a teacher in a school without a local salary supplement to reach a salary of $20,000, money spent recruiting better quality teachers will be wasted," Jordan said. "We must begin to invest in our new talent."

But Jordan also asked teachers if improved working conditions may offer some trade-offs to pay hikes.

"Would the equivalent of one or two percent of salary be worth the trade-off if it led to real free lunch periods and an end to bus duty and hall duty?" Jordan asked.

Federal Judge Strikes N.C. Law Preventing 'Crossover' Voting

By The Associated Press

A federal district court judge in Asheville has declared unconstitutional the state statute preventing crossover voting in general elections, the latest development in a four-year squabble.

Robert Hunter, chairman of the state Board of Elections and an appointee of Republican Gov. Jim Martin, hailed the decision.

"Specific voter intent will govern over the general voter intent," Hunter said. "It will make voting go faster. Rather than punching 200 holes, the voter can vote a straight-party line with a few exceptions."

The ruling by Judge David Sentelle on Wednesday paves the way for state voters to cast a straight-party ballot and at the same time vote for individual candidates of another party. North Carolina has been the only state in the nation not to allow such voting.

If Sentelle's ruling stands, it will go into effect for the general election in November.

Hunter said that previously, when a voter cast a straight-party ballot and at the same time deviated from the party line to vote for candidates of another party, exceptions to the straight-party vote were ignored.

The issue arose when Republican Bill Hendon lost a close 11th District congressional re-election race in 1982 to Democrat James McClure Clarke. Hendon maintained that he may have gotten enough crossover votes to have won, but these votes were not counted.

While the case was thrown out because Hendon did not challenge the law before the election, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., agreed that portions of the statute were unconstitutional.

U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and the N.C. Republican Party joined the Hendon suit in 1984. That year, Hendon won his seat back from Clarke.

Raleigh attorney Thomas A. Farr, who represented Helms and the state GOP in challenging the law, praised the decision.

"Every other state counts crossover votes," Farr said. "It's absurd that the voters of this state had to put up with this for 30 years. The constitution requires that individual votes be counted. It (the state law) is an outrageous example of the abuse the Democratic Party has made of the voting process."

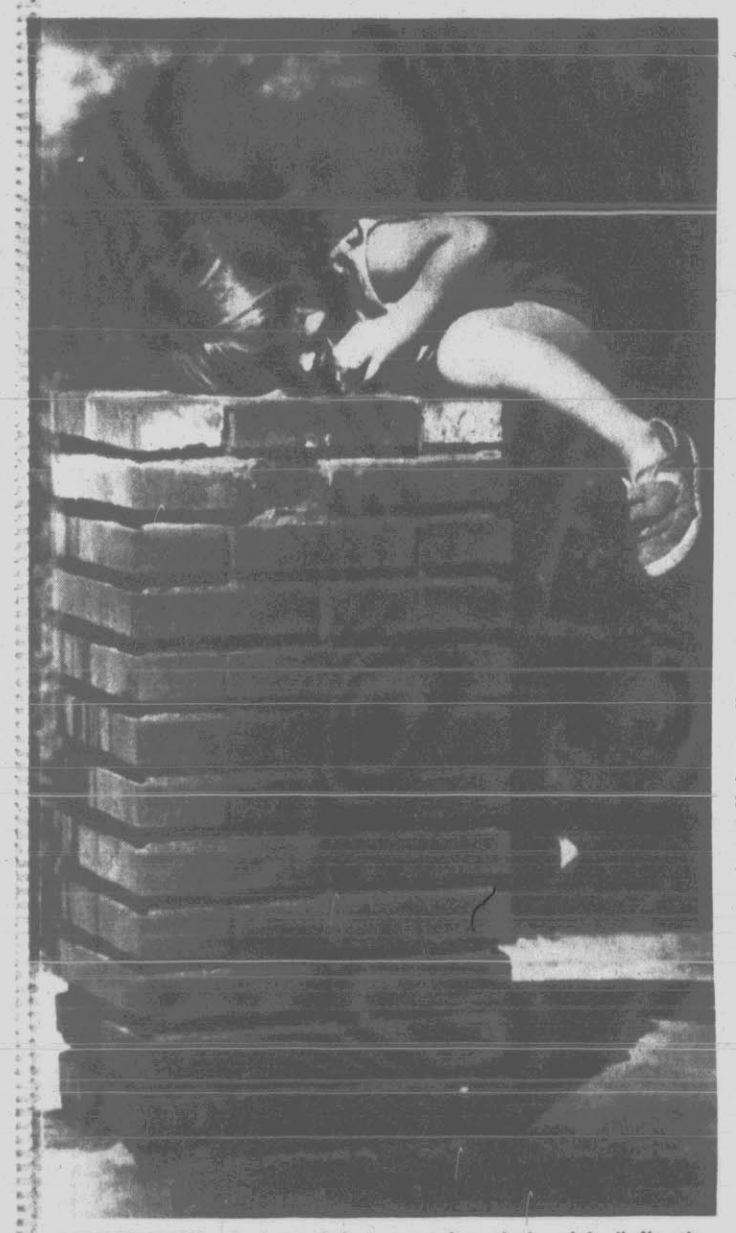

Assistant Attorney General James Wallace Jr. denied Farr's allegations that the law was put into effect to make it easier for the Democrat-controlled Legislature to stay in power.

"We thought the ballot instructions were clear and that the state had the right to decide how the ballot was counted," Wallace said. "Voting a straight-party ticket with a crossover conflicts with the straight-party vote."

Wallace said he had not decided whether to appeal the decision. The state Board of Elections has endorsed the court decision and has asked Wallace not to pursue an appeal.

The decision upheld a 1984 disttict court decision that declared unconstitutional the state practice of not counting crossover votes cast on a straight-party ballot. The General Assembly passed legislation the following year declaring that the court decision only affected that year's election.

In July 1985, the 4th U.S. District Court of Appeals upheld the 1984 decision and referred the case back to federal district court.

Army Takes Starch Out Of Its Fatigues

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Unstarched battle fatigues are cool, say Fort Bragg officials, who have taken some of the starch out of the 82nd Airborne Division.

Maj. Gen. John W. Foss, 82nd commander, in March decided that soldiers no longer were required to starch either their camouflaged battle dress uniforms or their lightweight olive green jungle fatigues.

Soldiers who liked their starch can enjoy it during March, but as of April, wearing a starched uniform in the division became a violation of policy, according to division spokesman Maj. Doug Sams.

Unstarched uniforms are cooler in the summer, Sams said. They also are less expensive to maintain since starching or pressing adds to cleaning costs. Fluff drying the uniforms will allow troopers living in the barracks to do their own laundry.

Some soldiers don't like the idea. They say fluff drying makes the uniforms look wrinkled.

Jury Convicts Two Brothers In Riot

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Mecklenburg County Superior Court jury has convicted brothers Belton and Alphonzo Platt on felony riot and five assault charges stemming from the Nov. 30 shoot-out at a Charlotte public housing project.

The jury also found Gerald Bernard Davis, 24, guilty of felony riot Friday, but acquitted him on five assault charges.

Attack Victim Comes Out Of Coma After 2 Weeks

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 15-year-old Boiling Springs 10th grader has regained consciousness two weeks after being attacked while going to a local college track, and police hope she will be able to help them solve the case.

Sherry Washburn, whose battered body was found April 6 near a high school football field in Cleveland County, regained consciousness this weekend at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, officials said.

Investigators are eagerly awaiting permission from doctors to interview the teen-ager in hopes of being able to piece together what happened to the youngster.

"She may be able to put the puzzle together for us," Cleveland County Sheriff Buddy McKinney said. "We don't have one top suspect. We have three or four people we are uncomfortable with. But they may not be the guy we're after."

Officials said it will probably be several days before police get to talk to the teen-ager.

"We'll talk to her just as soon as the doctors say we can," said Grady Goode, assistant chief deputy with the Cleveland County Sheriff's Department. "We're very anxious to do that but we don't want to push it.

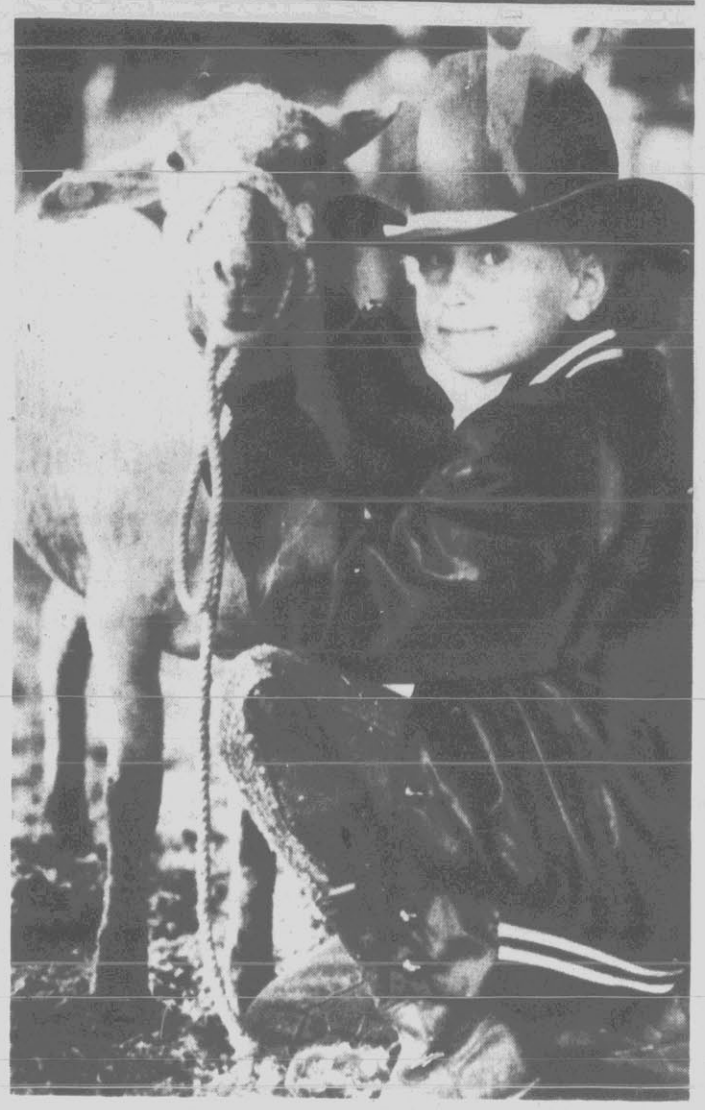

"They have not given us the green light to talk to her. We don't want to do anything that would make her fall back into a coma. Her welfare is our No. 1 priority. She's very fortunate to be alive."

The teen-ager had been in a coma since she was discovered by a jogger next to a Crest High School football field. She had vanished from Boiling Springs two days earlier.

The first thing Sherry did after regaining consciousness about 9 p.m. Friday was hug her mother, hospital spokeswoman Cecily Newton said. She later responded to commands and questions and talked.

But Ms. Newton said Saturday the teen-ager remains in critical condition in the hospital's neurosurgical intensive care unit.

"It looks like it'll be several days before the police come in and talk to her," Ms. Newton said. "She's still very fuzzy and actually has not spoken to her family yet. She has spoken with nurses."

SHOW TIME — Amy Newton, 7, of Roxboro has launched a career early working with animals. She showed off her ability while exhibiting her lamb, 'Butter Ball," at the 41st annual Junior Livestock Show and Sale in Durham along with other members of 4-H and Future Farmers of America chapters. The show was held last week at the Durham County Fairgrounds. (AP Laserphoto)

Iacocca, Kinston Native Wed

By The Associated Press

Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca married Peggy Johnson, a native of Kinston, in ceremony so private that the bride's sister didn't attend.

"They just decided not to have anyone there," said Betty J. Clark-Pritchett of Raleigh, the bride's sister and an art teacher at Enloe Senior High School. "They thought if they invited a lot of people, it would get out of hand."

Ms. Johnson, 35, an advertising executive in New York, met Iacocca about 2½ years ago through a mutual friend. They became engaged in January 1985.

The wedding was held Thursday at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York. Ms. Clark-Pritchett said Friday she couldn't divulge the honeymoon destination, but said they would stay in the United States.

The couple plans to live at Iacocca's home in Detroit and also spend a lot of time at their New York apartment, Ms. Clark-Pritchett said.

Iacocca, 61, also has homes in Boca Raton, Fla., and in Italy. His first wife, Mary, died in 1983 of complications from diabetes.

Ms. Clark-Pritchett said she hasn't met Iacocca but has talked to him on the phone many times.

"He's very charming, very dynamic," she said. "My sister is also. They're very well matched."

PROTEST SPEAKER — Cleveland Amory, president of the Fund for Animals, speaks at a rally in downtown Raleigh Saturday. The rally was called by the North Carolina Network for Animals to protest the use of animals at a wound laboratory at Fort Bragg. Protests were held in Raleigh and Fayetteville. The Fort Bragg lab is one of two such facilities operated in the United States.

PTL Hit By Suits Charging It Broke Land Contracts

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The PTL television ministry has been accused in court documents of breaking contracts to buy hundreds of acres near its South Carolina headquarters and failing to pay the general contractor for the planned PTL water park more than $1.8 million dollars.

The PTL ministry, troubled in recent months by a financial crunch, signed 13 contracts last summer to buy property near Heritage USA, worth more than $10.8 million, the Charlotte Observer reported in Saturday editions.

But within weeks, the ministry began backing out of the contracts and telling sellers it couldn't afford the land.

The ministry failed to close on 11 of the 13 contracts, according to court records and property owners.

One of the land deals was closed, but PTL has since missed a mortgage payment, according to the seller of the property.

Three sellers have sued and another, Rock Hill Realtor John Cauthen, said he's considering legal action.

"The whole history of this thing has been failure to perform, failure to communicate, failure to be businesslike, failure to reply to proper inquiry," said Cauthen.

PTL had agreed to buy his client's 33 acres on Oct. 10. But after almost 20 phone calls and meetings, Cauthen says he's still trying to collect PTL's $1,000 deposit and an $8,250 commission he says PTL should pay.

PTL, which draws 58 percent of the money it spends from tax-deductible gifts, has told viewers that high operating costs contributed to financial troubles in 1985.

But efforts to back out of the land deals have been costly, according to documents.

PTL has lost or at least jeopardized $89,500 in deposits on the land deals, according to court records and property owners.

To settle one lawsuit, PTL agreed again to buy the property, but for $120,000 more than it was to pay last fall, according to a court record.

Some landowners claimed that PTL has cost them money.

A textile worker expecting money from PTL for his land said he lost a $1,000 deposit on a new homesite he no longer has the money to buy. Owners of a horse farm said they began selling breeding stock and shutting down their business for a sale that never happened.

The owners of a York County campground say they lost seasonal and year-round customers who moved, thinking the site was changing hands.

"We honestly felt that we had a great deal," says Wally Gebhardt, 42, co-owner of Pine Tree Safari campground. "We figured it was safer with someone like PTL than with a private individual ... then the A-bomb hit us right between the eyeballs."

The PTL told the Charlotte Observer that it expects to resolve any problems amicably. The ministry said issues can evolve on both sides that void contracts.

"This church has historically come to proper agreements with people it has done business with in land matters. Sellers have benefitted greatly by this association. We feel we have an excellent relationship with our neighbors in this area," PTL said in a statement released Thursday.

PTL (an acronym that has stood for Praise the Lord and People That Love) is headquartered at Heritage USA, which spans 2,300 acres between Charlotte and Fort Mill first opened in 1978.

The Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter opened on July 1 and is located one mile south of Bells Fork of the County Home Road.

Spangler Supports 'Freedom'

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Academic freedom is vital to the survival of the University of North Carolina System, and scholars should be free to pursue knowledge without feeling inhibited, the head of the 16-campus system said Friday.

UNC System President C.D. Spangler Jr. told faculty members at UNC at Chapel Hill that great institutions of higher learning cannot exist without academic freedom.

"We want our scholars and teachers to be uninhibited," Spangler said at a meeting of the UNC-Chapel Hill Faculty Council.

Spangler was asked by a faculty council member about Accuracy in Academia, a national conservative organization that monitors lectures by college professors. He called such monitoring an unjustified act and urged faculty members to continue to operate as usual.

"When you are threatened, you will find that you have a great number of allies," Spangler said. "I will not stand by and have my rights violated or your rights violated."

Spangler was also asked whether he thought abuses in college athletics were a threat to the states universities.

"The only real priority for the university is academics for our students. ... Athletics cannot be allowed to become more important that academics," Spangler said.

"We're still subject to those dangers that have sunk some other boats," he said, referring to recent abuses involving athletes at the University of Georgia.

Larcenies

About $650 in larcenies occurred early this weekend, according to police reports.

The thefts include one of a pocket book containing about $120 from a car parked at Greenville Square about 1:57 p.m. Police said two rear dock speakers, valued at about $230, were taken from a car parked at Eurasian Service Center, 105 W. Greenville Blvd. at 11:45 a.m. Saturday. Police reports listed the car's owner as Foster Hill of Kinston.

A battery, valued at about $50, was stolen from a car owned by Beulah Mae Hardy of 1102 Van Dyke St. Saturday at about 11 a.m.

Police reports also said a car radio, valued at $225, was stolen from a car parked at Evans Street Auto.

Vandalism

Greenville police reported two incidents of vandalism to cars this weekend.

One incident, reported about 2:20 p.m. Friday, resulted in about $75 in damages after the hood of a car parked at Ringgold Towers was scratched. The car was owned by Verna Carole Wall of 108 Ringgold Towers, police said.

At 12:09 p.m. Saturday, police said a cement block was thrown through a window of a car parked at Glendale Court apartments. Officers set damages to the car, which was owned by David R. Davis of 97 Quail Ridge, at $200.

Album Labels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Two of every three North Carolinians think record companies should label rock music albums that contain potentially offensive lyrics, according to a 1986 Carolina Poll, conducted by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Journalism.

Forty-two percent of the 585 people surveyed by telephone said the record industry should be required to label records to alert buyers about potentially offensive lyrics. Twenty-five percent of the respondents strongly agreed, 25 percent disagreed and 8 percent strongly disagreed.

The poll was conducted four months after 22 record companies agreed to label records for explicit lyrics after pressure from a parents' group founded by wives of federal legislators and senior Reagan administration officials. The Parents Music Resource Center has drawn media attention to what it calls porn rock and to violence in rock lyrics.

The poll found that 53 percent of North Carolinians listen to rock mustic, with 30 percent listening five or more days a week.

Ban Lifted

RALEIGH (AP) — The ban on outdoor burning has been lifted in 11 northern and eastern North Carolina counties, bringing the total number of counties no longer under the ban to 29.

The ban was lifted effective at noon Friday in Craven, Lenoir, Jones, Onslow, Carteret, Pamlico, Nash, Edgecombe, Granville, Franklin and Vance counties.

The N.C. Division of Forest Resources said the ban was lifted because of light rain.

On Thursday, the ban on outdoor burning was lifted in the following counties: Hertford, Bertie, Halifax, Warren, Dare, Hyde, Northampton, Tyrrell, Washington, Beaufort, Pitt, Martin, Chowan, Currituck, Gates, Pasquotank, Camden and Perquimans.

A ban on outdoor burning continues in all other areas of North Carolina.

Relief Airport

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — The Vance-Granville Airport Authority is improving its airport to become a relief airport for the Raleigh-Durham Airport.

John King Nelms, chairman of the airport authority and executive director of the Granville economic development commission, said the growth at RDU will make it "difficult to get in and out on a small plane because of the number of commercial planes landing all the time."

Improvements planned this year include a runway end identification light system and a visual aid slope indicator system at a total cost of about $28,000. After July 1, the airport authority plans to put in an instrument landing system, which is expected to cost about $220,000.

Strawberries

RALEIGH (AP) — Strawberry season is fast approaching, and experts are predicting a bountiful crop for North Carolina farmers in 1986.

Berries should be plentiful from the coast to the mountains, with harvest beginning shortly in the coastal plan and slightly later in the western regions.

Surry County is the top strawberry-producing county, followed by Rockingham County. In all, about 95 of the state's 100 counties have some commerical strawberry production, said Ross Williams, horticultural marketing specialist with the N.C. Department of Agriculture.

Land Project

RALEIGH (AP) — A Raleigh developer has bought the biggest piece of undeveloped land in Nags Head for a $200 million project that will take about 10 years to build.

Justus M. Ammons bought 386 acres this month for $10.5 million from a subsidiary of Rocky Mount-based Home Savings and Loan Association, recently named Pioneer Savings Bank.

"We've got about a mile-and-a-quarter along Roanoke Sound and all the land in between," Ammons said.

He said the project — Village at Nags Head — will include an 18-acre golf course, about 1,300 homes, a beach and tennis club, up to three hotel and some shops and offices.

Police Shooting

KNIGHTDALE, N.C. (AP) — A Wake County sheriff's deputy and an FBI agent escaped injury after exchanging gunfire with a man they were seeking to arrest on federal charges, authorities said Saturday.

No one was injured in the brief shootout that occurred about 8:45 p.m. about two miles south of Knightdale, Capt. D.D. Perrry of the Wake County Sheriff's Department.

After the shooting, the man eluded the officers by running into nearby woods. The shooting suspect was identified as Cephus Dixon McNeal, he said. Perry said McNeal was about 42 years old.

"A deputy ... tried to arrest McNeal ...," Perry said. "Some shots were fired and the man fled into the woods. We had a manhunt and we ... weren't able to find him."

Queen Elizabeth, At 60, Holds Steady Atop Popularity Polls

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Gone is the empire upon which the sun never set and Britain has dwindled in power during her reign, but Queen Elizabeth II has propelled the British monarchy to the pinnacle of international superstardom.

As the queen celebrates her 60th birthday Monday, she remains at the top of the royal popularity polls, a symbol of continuity who has adroitly adapted Britain's 920-year-old monarchy to the nuclear and television age of the 1980s.

During her 34-year reign, the monarchy has been transformed from a mystery-shrouded national institution into a family of celebrities whose weddings, travels and antics are followed by millions around the globe.

A grandmother — with two of her four children married and a third, Prince Andrew, due to become so in the next royal wedding extravaganza July 23 — the queen shows no signs of slowing down. So far this year, she's been to Nepal, Australia and New Zealand and this fall she goes to China.

While the royal family is a popular institution, some quarters in Britain see no need for a monarchy in this day and age. These critics, who are in a minority, contend that it is too much of a burden on taxpayers. In 1983, the last year for which figures are available, the government spent $34 million just on two palaces and royal travels.

Buckingham Palace has dismissed press speculation, which surfaces from time to time, that Elizabeth may abdicate so her 37-year-old son, Prince Charles, can become king. Abdication has not become a serious issue, although an opinion poll for The Mail on Sunday newspaper in late March indicated that 45 percent of the 981 Britons surveyed favored the queen's abdication before she turns 65.

This may reflect the growing popularity of Charles, who in recent years has been outspoken on a range of issues including the plight of the poor in Britain's decaying inner cities and his distaste for much modern architecture.

Their wedding July 29, 1981, was among the monarchy's most elaborate events and one of the biggest television spectacles in history — watched by an estimated 1 billion people in 70 countries.

"The state occasions are part of the living theater of the monarchy," said the queen's husband, Prince Philip, in a 1983 interview. "The royal family ... are producing live theater in which ... all those who stand and watch or participate — they're part of the living theater, too."

The director and lead actress in that theater is a trim, brown-haired, 5-foot-2 woman who has regiments of horse cavalry to escort her carriage on state occasions, an immense collection of jewels and priceless art, and an attractive family of four children and four grandchildren.

Her three sons, Charles, Andrew and Edward, all seem to know how to fly airplanes, scuba-dive, parachute or command ships, and daughter Princess Anne, 35, is a onetime Olympic equestrian competitor and president of the Save the Children charity.

Social analyst Anthony Sampson wrote in "The Changing Anatomy of Britain" that the royal family saga — divorced-sister Princess Margaret, longtime bachelor-heir Prince Charles, outspoken-husband Prince Philip — "could rival 'Dallas' in its range of situations."

The queen was born in London on April 21, 1926, named Elizabeth Alexandra Mary. She was not expected to become queen, but that changed when she was 10 years old and her uncle, King Edward VIII, abdicated to marry American divorcee Wallis Simpson.

Elizabeth's father, the Duke of York, became King George VI, and since he had no sons, she as the elder daughter became first in line to the throne. When Elizabeth was 25, her father died of lung cancer and she immediately became queen on Feb. 6, 1952.

The decision to televise her coronation June 2, 1953, thrust the royal family into the international spotlight on a scale never known before. The spectacular ceremony in Westminster Abbey was seen on black and white TV sets by an estimated 300 million people around the globe.

Britain then ruled more than 100 million people in colonies stretching through Africa, Asia and Latin America, and her ascension was seen by many as the dawn of a new Elizabethan era, a chance to take Britain back to its 16th-century glory.

The new Elizabethan age never arrived and Britain's status in the world has fallen, with far less economic power than its wartime opponents, the Japanese and the Germans.

Today, Elizabeth's domain has dwindled to 13 colonies with fewer than 6 million people, including 5 million Hong Kong Chinese.

But she has rarely looked back on the lost empire; instead she lavishes attention on the Commonwealth, the association of Britain and 48 of its former colonies.

Though the queen has virtually no political power she meets the prime minister once a week when she's in London and must sign acts of Parliament to give them the force of law. She summons each prime minister-elect and formally directs him or her to form the next government. Among her titles is Defender of the Faith, which makes her the temporal head of the state church, the Church of England.

In public, the queen is reserved and self-controlled, rarely displaying anger or emotion, quick to pick up facts, remember faces and smile. Biographer Elizabeth Longford calls her "a formidable observer of the political, administrative and social scene."

In private, she is devoted to her family and enjoys the game of charades, picnics at Balmoral Castle in Scotland, morning walks with her corgi dogs and anything to do with horses and horse-racing.

Buckingham Palace says one of the highlights of her reign has been a democratization of the monarchy — initiating what the British call "walkabouts" so she could mingle with the public, allowing a film on how the royal family lives off-duty, banning the presentation of debutantes, and inviting to palace lunches the kind of people previous monarchs seldom met, such as sportsmen and labor union leaders.

While the queen sometimes is criticized by those who find her clothes dull and her speeches starchy, she more often wins expressions of admiration from those who know her.

Sir John Colville, secretary to Prime Minister Winston Churchill, said, "There is no doubt that at a respectful distance he fell in love with the queen."

In 1961, Prime Minister Harold Macmillan wrote in his diary: "She loves her duty and means to be a queen and not a puppet. She has indeed 'the heart and stomach of a man.'"

Poll Shows French Back Raid

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly two-thirds of French respondents in a Newsweek magazine poll said they approved of the U.S. air strike on Libya, but the majority of those surveyed in Great Britain and West Germany said they disapproved.

In the United States, 71 percent of those surveyed approved of the strike, which President Reagan said he ordered because Libya was involved in the April 5 bombing of a West Berlin nightclub that killed an American serviceman.

Sixty-six percent of those questioned in Great Britain and 75 percent of those surveyed in West Germany disapproved of the April 14 bombing.

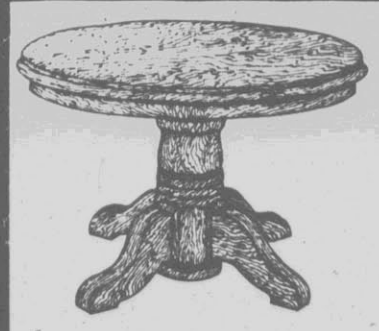

A majority of the British and West Germans, 71 percent and 58 percent respectively, and a plurality of Americans and Frenchmen.

Air Strike Has Sharpened Libyans' Anger

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The U.S. air raid on Libyan targets, far from inspiring widespread opposition to Col. Moammar Khadafy, has sharpened public anger against the United States.

"People are very angry at the Americans," said one East Asian student who spoke on condition he not be identified. "The people are afraid the Americans will come back."

Since the predawn raid Tuesday on targets around Tripoli and Benghazi, Libyan officials have restricted movements of foreign reporters, largely confining them to a downtown hotel unless they leave with an official escort.

The restrictions make it impossible to broadly sample the public mood in this Mediterranean capital. Still, the signs of unease are clear.

Libyan officials remain deeply sensitive to reports, most of them circulated from Washington, of dissension within the military after the U.S. attack.

Some West European embassies report an increase in the number of Libyans inquiring about visas.

The secret police carefully watch the balconies of reporters' hotel rooms facing Tripoli harbor to prevent them from photographing naval gunboats and an aging World War II submarine anchored there.

Western reporters who manage to elude security guards in the hotel lobby sometimes are stopped on the streets by ordinary Libyans, fearful their capital is swarming with American spies.

Two young men stopped one Western reporter as he walked to the offices of British Caledonian Airways. "Who are you?" one of them barked. When they heard that he was an American journalist bound for the airline office, the young man snapped, "Good, go home!"

Another foreign reporter slipped away from the hotel in a taxi for an appointment at a Western embassy, only to have the driver take him to a police station. Police brought him back to the hotel.

The mystery surrounding Khadafy's whereabouts right after the raid heightened apprehension, as did anti-aircraft barrages that shook the skies for the next three nights. Reporters saw soldiers firing small arms in the street near Khadafy's headquarters Wednesday afternoon, and distant white flashes that could have been explosions were seen Wednesday night.

Libyan officials said this was in response to new U.S. air attacks, but Washington said no attacks were launched.

Khadafy, officially styled as "guide of the revolution," made no public appearance until Wednesday night, when he denounced the U.S. attack over national television.

The next night, television showed him touring a Tripoli hospital to comfort raid victims — the first concrete evidence that Khadafy was alive, well and in the capital.

"Thank goodness," one government official said. "I was beginning to wonder whether the leader was all right."

Khadafy has not met with foreign reporters since the attack. Journalists thought they might meet him at a news conference Friday, but his deputy, Staff Maj. Abdel-Salam Jalloud, appeared instead.

Jalloud denied any rift in Libyan leadership and branded reports of unrest in the military as "a dream of the American administration."

The line appears to be having some success among a people who gained their independence in 1951 after centuries of domination by the Romans, Vandals, Byzantines, Arab emperors, Ottoman sultans and most recently, the Italians, British and French.

Tripoli radio carries daily harangues against the United States. State television and radio gave live coverage of Friday's funerals in Tripoli of 19 raid victims. Mourners shouted for a jihad, or holy war, against the United States.

During the nightly television newscast, the announcer sits in front of a picture of American warplanes flying above a map of Libya with streams of gunfire striking the planes.

After Khadafy's television speech Wednesday, crowds drove through the city shouting "Down, down U.S.A.!" Most demonstrators wore uniforms of the government's revolutionary guards and they had a police escort, indicating that protest was government-sanctioned.

The few ordinary Libyans who have spoken with foreign reporters have expressed views similar to the official line.

One middle-aged metals craftsman in Tripoli's old walled city told reporters he feared the crisis would continue "because the United States and Britain cannot accept the idea of a truly independent Libya."

No one has spoken of American charges that Khadafy is the sponsor of international terrorism.

LONDON PROTEST — Police remove a demonstator on London's Oxford Street Saturday during a mass protest of the U.S. bombing of Libya. Police said 67 demonstrators were arrested and three officers were injured during the protest, one of several held through Europe on Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

Thousands March As Europe Sees Protest Spread

By The Associated Press

Tens of thousands of demonstrators marched and burned American flags Saturday in Britain, West Germany, Italy and Sweden to protest the U.S. air raid on Libya.

In London, police said they arrested 67 protesters after clashes in which three officers were hurt and the city's busiest shopping street was paralyzed.

In Turkey, authorities said a bomb was defused outside an Istanbul bank partly owned by American Express and that four Libyans were being questioned in connection with an attempted attack on a U.S. military officers' club in Ankara. Police said two of the Libyans were seized Friday while carrying a bag of grenades and explosives near the club.

In Dublin, Ireland, Danny Morrison, national director of Sinn Fein, the legal political wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, extended sympathy to Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy and pledged Irish nationalism's solidarity with Libya.

Khadafy reportedly has contributed funds to the IRA in its fight to oust Britain from Northern Ireland.

The more than 10,000 people who marched in Rome denounced both President Reagan and Khadafy. Italian feminists who organized the march called for an end to "military action, the logic of terror and of death."

The demonstration in Milan, Italy, was more anti-American in tone, with more than 15,000 students denouncing "American imperialism." Some students set fire to a U.S. flag and an effigy of a donkey they said symbolized the United States, but police quickly doused the flames.

Scotland Yard estimated that 10,000 people took part in a sit-down demonstration outside the U.S. Embassy in London.

The protesters burned an American flag and chanted, "Thatcher, Reagan, CIA, how many kids have you killed today!"

They collected hundreds of letters condemning last Tuesday's U.S. air strikes against Libya and demanding that U.S. bases in Britain be closed. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gave permission for U.S. planes from two bases in Britain to take part in the raids.

Khadafy has vowed revenge against both the United States and Britain for the raids, which Reagan said he ordered because of proof of Libyan involvement in terrorist attacks on Americans.

Scotland Yard said about 10 people were held when demonstrators tried to break through barriers in front of the embassy and tore up their signs, throwing the pieces at police.

The protesters then headed for a second sit-down along Oxford Street, a busy shopping area. Police tried to clear the street, at one point driving a bus straight at the crowd when demonstrators refused to budge.

Protesters threw paint and placards at police, and one officer was knocked unconscious, Scotland Yard said. Police said additional arrests were made for a total of 67 arrests in the two sit-downs. They did not say how two other officers were hurt.

Demonstrations also were held outside the U.S. Air Force bases at Lakenheath in eastern England and Upper Heyford northwest of London. U.S. planes flew from the two bases to attack Libya.

Some demonstrators burned American flags and scuffled with police, and one policeman was kicked in the stomach, police said. They said four people were detained for questioning and released without charge.

Turks Say Attacks Thwarted

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Authorities said Saturday they thwarted two attempts to attack American targets and were questioning four Libyans in connection with one attempt. The U.S. Embassy advised Americans not to go out unnecessarily.

Interior Minister Yildirim Akbulut said a bomb was found Saturday at the entrance to the Koc-American Bank building in Istanbul. The bank is owned by American Express and Turkey's Koc Holding Co.

The bomb was rendered harmless, Akbulut said.

Saffet Arikan Beduk, chief of Turkey's police forces, said four Libyans were being questioned in Ankara in connection with a purported attempt to attack a U.S. military officers' club there.

Beduk said two of the Libyans were carrying a bag containing hand grenades and other explosives near the club Friday night in the capital's wealthy residential district of Gaziosmanpasa.

He said when police ordered the two to halt, they ran and hurled the bag at a van parked nearby.

Akbulut said police detained the two and picked up the other two Libyans — a teacher and a student — on the basis of information they provided.

U.S. Seeks Details On Troop Plan

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States urged the Soviet Union on Saturday to provide specific details of what Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is calling a new offer on East-West troop withdrawals in Europe.

In a speech in East Berlin on Friday, Gorbachev said he was making "a serious offer of negotiations" for a substantial reduction of troops and aircraft from the Atlantic Ocean to the Ural mountains.

He said troop units would be disbanded and that mines and artillery with nuclear charges were included in the offer. The purpose of the proposal, he said, was to break the stalemate at 13-year-old Mutual and Balanced Force Reduction (MBFR) talks in Vienna.

The Reagan administration, which often dismisses the Soviets' public pronouncements on arms control as propaganda, this time responded in a State Department announcement by saying, "we will study the statement and would welcome clarification of the details of his proposal in appropriate diplomatic fora.

"From media reports, the proposal seems to cut across negotiations already in progress, such as the MBFR talks in Vienna," the department said in its statement. "It is not clear whether Mr. Gorbachev is proposing a new set of negotiations or an expansion of talks already under way."

The Vienna talks involving East and West bloc countries focus only on forces in Central Europe. On the other hand, a 35-nation conference meeting in Stockholm on disarmament in Europe covers wider territory, but does not deal with specific arms and troop reductions.

Gorbachev's statement, mentioning troops, weapons and a broad territory between the Urals and the Atlantic, appeared to be relevant to issues in both sets of talks, said a U.S. arms control expert speaking on condition he not be identified.

"It appears to be a grandiose gesture, leaping over the current debates," the official said. "It could be his way of saying MBFR has stalled, here's another card."

MBFR talks resume May 15 and the Stockholm Conference on Disarmament in Europe is currently in session and aiming toward a Sept. 19 conclusion.

Soviet leaders have traditionally made arms control proposals from platforms in East and West Europe, where citizens are concerned about the presence of massive superpower arsenals in their countries.

The State Department statement, aimed at the same audience, repeated U.S. assertions that the Soviet Union has been responsible for the deadlock on European disarmament.

At the Vienna talks, NATO is proposing a small, first-step, troop withdrawal and limitations on the remaining air and ground troops on both sides. The proposal also calls for on-site inspections as a precaution against cheating.

"So far, however, Soviet responses to the NATO proposal have only rehashed old, unacceptable positions" and Gorbachev is failing to live up to a pledge to accept reasonable monitoring, the department said.

"The Soviets accept the principle of on-site inspection, but maintain the right to veto any inspection request — a condition which would make verification efforts meaningless," the department said.

Gold's Quick Strikes Win, 21-14

Berke Holtzclaw (5) is pulled down by Purple's Willie Powell (84) and Lewis Wilson.

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Berke Holtzclaw and Ron Jones passed the Gold to three quick touchdowns as their squad took a 21-14 victory Saturday afternoon in the annual windup to spring football at East Carolina.

But the show was stolen — as the game nearly was — by a couple of freshman, redshirt Travis Hunter at quarterback and true rookie Walter Wilson at wide receiver.

The Gold team, made up mainly of the first unit players, scored three touchdowns in a period of 2:30 during the second period to roll up a 21-0 lead.

Wilson carried a kickoff back 95 yards, however, to get the Purple back into the game, and Hunter led the Purple to one touchdown and had the team within the shadow of the goal a couple of other times without success.

Except for Wilson's return, all of the game's scores came on passes. Jones hit tight end Mike Gainey for a 21-yard score and then Holtzclaw went to Amos Adams for 21 yards just under a minute later.

Holtzclaw again scored, this time hooking up with Jones for 33 yards for the final Gold touchdown. Jake Fike kicked the PAT after each score.

The other TD, that by the Purple, was a 12-yarder from Hunter to Jarrod Moody. Hunter then hit Matt McLaughlin for the two-point conversion.

Hunter and Wilson put on a show in the second half of the game, scoring once and threatening twice more. Hunter hit on eight of 12 for 151 yards in the period, while Wilson — who entered ECU only in January — caught three for 82 yards in the second half.

But the result left second-year Coach Art Baker somewhat mystified. "Either we have better depth than I thought we did, or we have less," he said in post-game comments. "We saw two offensive and two defensive teams play a fairly even game."

But Baker also said he thought the Gold, after looking good and taking advantage of Purple mistakes in the second period, seemed to "get satisfied with itself and sit on its laurels.

"But for Hunter and Wilson, there wasn't much exciting about the second half. But those two young men are exciting players and are going to help us," Baker added.

Tailback Jarrod Moody also caught the eye of Baker. Moody — also in a Purple jersey — carried the ball 10 times for 35 yards.

"I thought we had some great linebacker play out there today," Baker said. "We've moved Vinson Smith to linebacker and that was one of the best moves we've made. We're going to be awfully strong at that position."

Baker said that one of the big aims of the spring was the improvement of the passing game. "We worked hard on it, and at times, it looked like we had. But at other times, it looked like we hadn't worked on it at all."

Baker said that Wilson has definitely established himself as the man to beat at wide receiver. "Somebody's going to have to beat him out after today. We recruited him last year, but we didn't have a grant for him. He asked if he could come (next) year and we brought him in in January. He's only a few months out of high school and it's been a tough adjustment. He still has things to learn, but he has a great future ahead of him."

At the same time, Baker said that Hunter had only worked his way up to number two, passing Ron Jones. "Jones worked a lot of the spring at wide receiver and even some at tailback. I think he's going to be good out there, if that's where we play him."

Holtzclaw "at times looked like he could be the man we've been looking for, but Hunter was impressive today," Baker said. "We still haven't established a number one quarterback, but they are executing better than they did a year ago. Hunter will certainly be in the thick of it this fall if he continues to progress."

And while Wilson drew plaudits for his play, Baker noted that one junior college transfer, Jackie Armstrong, who missed the game with an injured hamstring, is a good receiver too.

On the other side of the field, Baker said that the progess showed by corners Roswell Streeter and Flint McCallum was very pleasing. Safeties Ellis Dillahunt and Gary London has

Birdies Give Zoeller Lead

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller, babying a bad back, reeled off a string of four birdies that lifted him into a two-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $450,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

"I felt like Tom Watson in his prime," Zoeller said of the birdie-burst that ran from the 11th through 14th holes at the Harbour Town Golf Links.

"You'll notice I wasn't bending down much to read the greens, going to the plumb-bob method (with the putter held vertically in front of him)," he said.

"But on those four in a row, I really didn't have to read them.

"I saw the line just like it was a trough leading to the cup. I just slam-dunked them," Zoeller said after completing a wildly erratic round of 69 that included seven birdies, three bogeys and a double bogey.

He completed 54-holes with a 205 total, 8 under par and two strokes in front of Australian Greg Norman, who Zoeller beat in a playoff for the 1984 U.S. Open title, Chip Beck and Jay Haas.

Haas closed up with a no-bogey 66 on the sunny, windy afternoon, Beck shot 70 and Norman had a 69 despite a double bogey.

"I'm playing as good as I did last week," said Norman, whose last-hole bogey at Augusta, Ga., let Jack Nicklaus take the Masters crown.

"I have a lot of confidence in my golf game right now," Norman said, "and I'm looking forward to playing Fuzzy tomorrow."

"Bring on that blond bomber," Fuzzy replied. "Tell him I'll be there. I enjoy playing with Greg. We're a lot alike, very competitive. We'll go out and have fun and may the best man win."

Norman, however, was not the only challenger for the $81,000 first prize. Roger Maltbie was only two strokes behind at 208 after a 70.

He one-putted 13 times and scored nine birdies in a round of 64 that propelled him past 49 players, moving from a tie for 55th to a tie for sixth at 210.

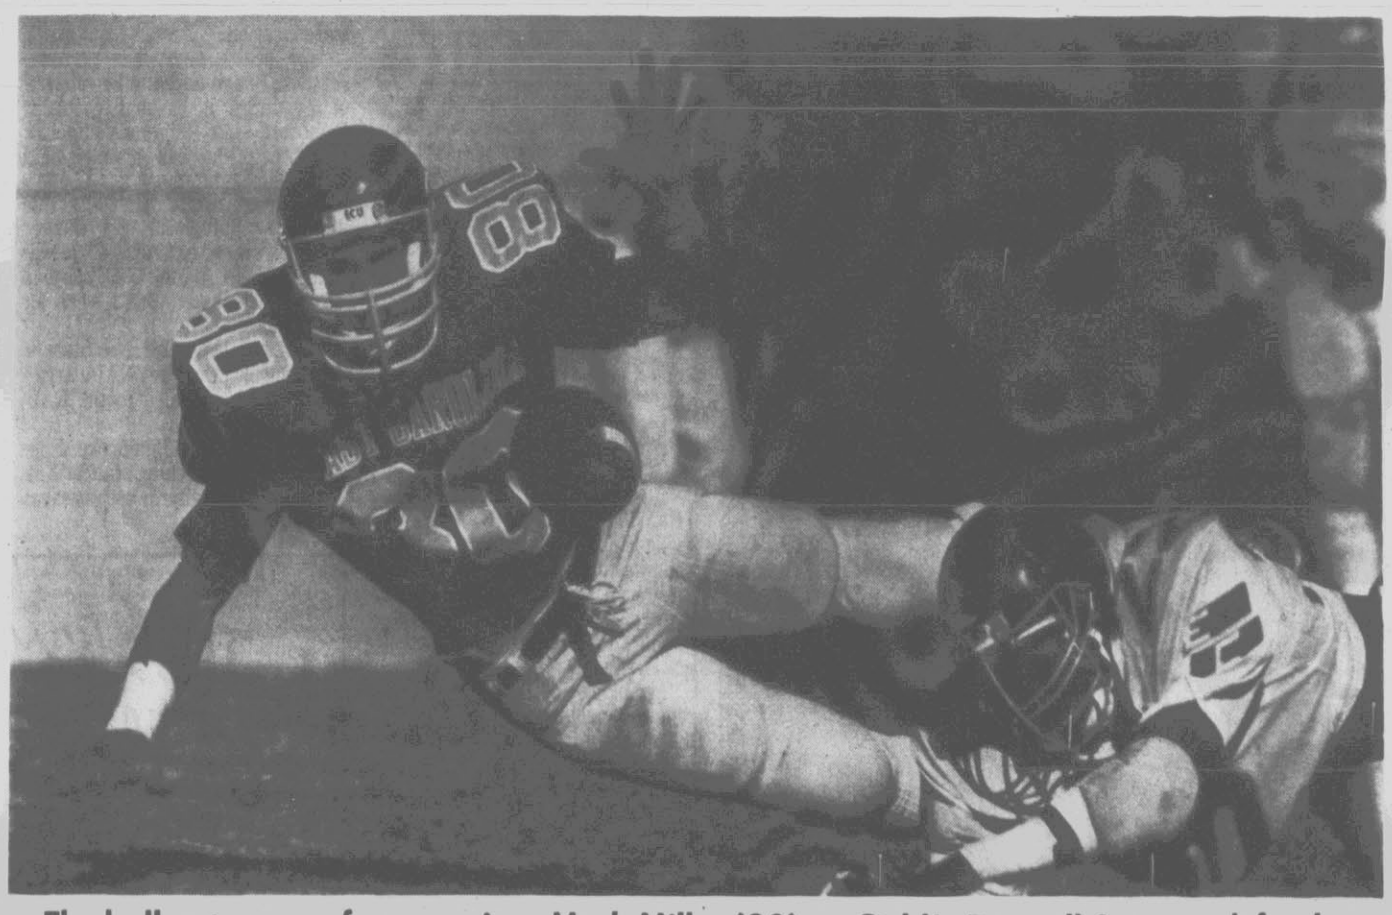

"I was a different man today. I don't know why. That's probably the best round I've had this year," said Langer, who birdied four of his last five holes and played the back in 30.

He was tied with Mike Sullivan, Don Pooley and Dan Halldorson. Sullivan matched par 71, while Pooley slipped to a 75. Halldorson, the Canadian who led through the first two rounds, took a fat 76, 5-over par.

At one time or another during the day's play, seven players led or shared the lead: Halldorson, Pooley,

Pirates Take Two From Eagles

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Winfred Johnson hurled and hit East Carolina to a 9-2 baseball victory over Colonial Athletic Conference foe American University in the first game of a doubleheader sweep by the Pirates Saturday.

East Carolina outslugged the Eagles, 13-6, in the second game to complete the twin-killing.

The victories moved the Pirates to 32-5 on the season and to 11-3 in CAA play. They continue to hold to first place in the league standings, and, depending on the outcome of a couple of other CAA games involving George Mason, could have clinched a berth in the league's tournament. That will be played at ECU on May 15-18, with the winner advancing to the NCAA playoffs.

Johnson hurled the victory in the opener, allowing one earned run, walking none and striking out five. He scattered four hits.

Johnson also had two hits, one of them his 11th homer of the year, and drove in two runs. But his performance was somewhat overshadowed by that of right fielder Jay McGraw, who banged two homers in the first game. Chris Bradberry and Mike Sullivan also added two hits each for the Pirates.

The second game turned into a slugfest as ECU outhit American, 14-10, making more of what they got than did the Eagles.

Greg Hardison led the Pirate hitting in game two with four while Bradberry and Jim Riley — who hit his first homer of the year — each had two.

American, held without anyone getting more than one in the opener, saw Nick Garofalo get three in the second game by Paul Grzyb and Tony Pinto each had two.

Garofalo entered the week as the league's top hitter, batting .449. He was four-for-seven on the day against the Pirates.

"We swung the bats very well today," an obviously pleased ECU Coach Gary Overton said. "Johnson did a good job on the mound, and I was pleased with the offensive performance of Hardison, Johnson and McGraw.

"I thought we performed admirably in getting early leads today and then hanging onto them," the coach added.

East Carolina struck for the lead in the first inning of the opener, scoring four times. With one away, Hardison walked and Bradberry singled. After a second out, Sullivan doubled, driving in both runners. McGraw then came up with a homer to left, driving in two.

American came back with one in the bottom of the second. Garofalo singled and Pinto reached on an error. With two away, Joseph Cillio was safe on another Pirate misplay, allowing Garofalo to score.

East Carolina came back with three more in the third. Johnson led off the frame with a homer to center. Sullivan then singled and McGraw cracked his second straight homer to run the ECU lead to 7-1.

American's second run came in the sixth as Johnson was touched by Grzyb for a solo homer.

The final run for the Pirates came in the seventh. Steve Sides singled and Riley walked. After an out, David Ritchie singled in Sides.

East Carolina got off to a quick start in the second game, too, matching the four runs in the first inning. Ritchie walked and Hardison singled. Bradberry got a hit, scoring Ritchie. Johnson walked but was thrown out on Sullivan's grounder, which scored Hardison. Bradberry came in on a hit by McGraw. Sides then hit into a fielder's choice, scoring Sullivan.

American rallied for two in the bottom of the first. David Barnes doubled and scored on a hit by Grzyb. He stole up and Garofalo singled. Kevin Conaway then singled in Grzyb to cut it to 4-2.

East Carolina added two in the second, however. Robert Langston reached on an error and moved up on an out. He scored on a double by Hardison. Hardison then came over on a double by Johnson.

The Pirates picked up two more in the third to run it to 8-2. With two away, Riley singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Langston walked and Ritchie singled in Riley. An error on the play allowed Langston to score, but Ritchie was thrown out, trying to come all the way around on the play.

American cut it to 8-3 with a run in the bottom of the third. Ed Walowac singled, stole second and scored on a double by Garofalo.

Two more ECU runs came in the fourth. Hardison singled, moved up on a wild pitch and scored on Bradberry's hit. Bradberry stole second, took third on another wild pitch and scored on Sullivan's grounder.

The Pirates made it 12-3 with two in the fifth. Sides doubled and scored on a hit by Langston. Langston advanced on a wild pitch and an out, scoring on Hardison's hit.

Two more Eagles crossed in the sixth to cut it to 12-6. With one away, Gary Garofolo walked and Walowac reached when his grounder was errored at second. Grzyb walked and Garafalo singled in both Garofolo and Walowac.

The scoring ended in the top of the seventh as Riley hit a solo homer for the final 13-6 margin.

The two teams were to meet again today. ECU then travels to Old Dominion on Tuesday and returns home on Thursday to host N.C. State.

Bodine Comes Back To Take First Union Pole

NORTH WILKESBORO (AP) — Geoff Bodine roared back on Saturday in the final day of qualifying and edged Richard Petty to grab the pole position for the First Union 400 NASCAR grand national stock car race.

Bodine and Petty, NASCAR's winningest driver with 200 victories, will be on the front row in the 30-car field for Sunday's race at the five-eighths of a mile banked asphalt track.

Petty led qualifying Friday, while Bodine was second. But Saturday Bodine, driving a Chevrolet, outdueled Petty and won the pole with a two-day average of 112.419 mph. Petty, driving a Pontiac, averaged 112.273 in the two-day time trials.

The top eight drivers from Friday's qualifying were quaranteed one of the top eight spots, but the exact positions were determined by averaging their speeds from the two days of qualifying.

Tim Richmond, driving a Chevrolet, and Terry Labonte, in an Oldsmobile, will start in the second row. Richmond averaged 112.191 mph, while Labonte averaged 111.895. mph.

Behind them will be Dale Earnhart's Chevrolet and Bobby Allison's Buick, followed by Joe Ruttman in a Buick and Neil Bonnett in a Chevrolet.

Petty, Richmond, Allison and Bonnett have all won at North Wilkesboro — as have Darrell Waltrip and Harry Gant, who won the race last year. Waltrip will start 10th and Gant 16th.

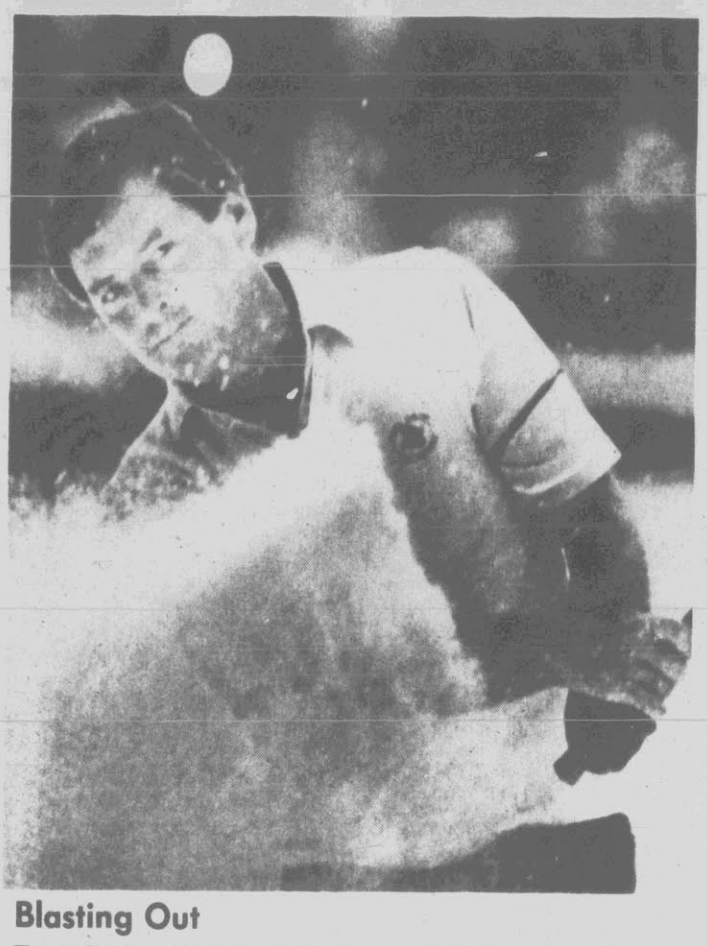

Bodine and Richmond, who are teammates, were the only drivers whose speeds Saturday were better than Friday.

"The track was a little slippery today," Bodine said, "but we managed to get in a real good lap. The hard part is qualifying after the Modified race. We just lucked into it with our set-up."

Earlier, Jan Leaty of Williamson, N.Y., won the Lowe's 150 race for NASCAR modified cars before a crowd of 8,000. Paul Radford of Ferrum, Va., was second, whiloe Don Miller of Winston-Salem was third.

Frank Fleming of Mount Airy, who started on the pole and led the first 65 laps, finished fourth.

Seymour Looks Spiffy, But The Antlers Give Him Away

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — In cutaway coat, striped trousers and top hat, Seymour looks like any other fancy dancer out for a night on the town.

The antlers, however, give him away.

The mascot is here, meeting vistors, tap-dancing with the aid of a spangled red cane and taking its place in a tableau that is part of an exhibition promoting the Anchorage bid.

"It's been facinating, very interesting," said Bonnie Rindo, a music teacher at Mountainview Elementary School in Anchorage and the person inside the Seymour costume.

The exhibition, along with those from the 11 other cities in the running for the Winter and Summer Games of 1992, is to open to the public Sunday as part of the fifth meeting of the Association of National Olympic Committees.

Rindo, as Seymour, is the most noticeable participant in the Anchorage tableau, in which the moose and five more traditional Olympic characters are presented before a wall of posters showing mountains, skyscrapers and cultural lures of Anchorage.

Then, as the pace quickens, Seymour does the tap dance.

"This is what Anchorage is all about — innovation," said Linda Chase, a vice president of the Anchorage Organizing Committee for the 1992 Olympics, who dreamed up the tableau.

Rick Nerland, the committee's executive vice president, said there was method in dressing a moose in top hat and tails.

"We are trying to demonstrate that Anchorage is a city," Nerland said. "Yes, there is wilderness, but there is culture, too."

With the 1988 Winter Games in Calgary, Alberta, only about 1,500 miles away, Anchorage would be at best a longshot to get them in 1992. Nerland, however, thinks his city has another factor in its favor.

"Signs point to the 1992 Summer Games going to Western Europe, and the Summer and Winter Olympics haven't been on the same continent since 1952," he said. "Consecutive Games on the same continent, however, is nothing new."

Birdies...

But Pooley hit into the water and double bogeyed the 14th.

Simpson bogeyed the 12th and 13th.

Beck and Haas couldn't improve after getting to 6 under par.

But Zoeller did — several times in a round that included seven birdies, seven pars, three bogeys and a double bogey.

He was tied for the lead at 7 under after a birdie on the second, then bogeyed the fourth, missing the green.

He was tied for the lead after a 10-foot birdie putt on the sixth, then hooked a 5-iron shot and dropped back with a bogey on the seventh.

On the eighth, another pull-hook "awful looking shot" with the 5-iron "had W-A-T-E-R written all over it," he said, and he made double bogey.

But he took the lead to stay with the string of four consecutive birdies that began with a 20-footer on the 11th and another from the same distance on the 12th.

"It was the same putt on both holes, a little left to right break. I didn't even have to line it up. I just saw the line like it was a trough," said Zoeller, a former winner of this title.

He scored from about 15 feet on the next two holes, went two in front and then matched another birdie with a bogey from the waste bunker on the 16th.

Third round scores Saturday in the $450,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic on the 6,657 yard, par-71 Harbour Town Golf Links:

Indians Club Way To 8-6 Win

DETROIT (AP) — Brook Jacoby's two-run double keyed a three-run Cleveland fifth inning and Tony Bernazard and Julio Franco hit sixth-inning homers to lead the Indians to an 8-6 victory over the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

Scott Bailes, 2-1, took over from Cleveland starter eal Heaton with one out in the fifth and picked up the victory. Ernie Camacho pitched 1 1-3 hitless innings for his third save.

Cleveland took a 3-0 lead on Andre Thornton's sacrifice fly in the first and a two-run double by Mel Hall in the second.

Chet Lemon hit a two run homer, his first of two in the game, to cut it to 3-2 in the Tigers' half of the second and Lemon scored on Dave Engle's double in the fourth to tie it 3-3.

Brett Butler doubled and went to third when Trammell's throw on Julio Franco's ground ball hit him in the back. Joe Carter's single scored Butler and Jacoby's two-out double scored Franco and Carter, chasing Dan Petry, 1-2.

Trammell doubled and scored on Kirk Gibson's single in the Tigers' fifth to make it 6-4, but the homers by Bernazard and Franco opened it up again in the Indians' sixth.

Trammell and Lemon homered in the seventh and eighth for Detroit's final runs.

George Brett walked with one out in the Kansas City eighth and came home on rightfielder Jesse Barfield's throwing error on White's double. Mark Eichhorn then relieved Alexander, 2-1, who struck out eight and walked two.

Willie Wilson's infield hit and Brett's infield out scored two runs in the ninth. But Tom Henke, who pitched the ninth, got White on a fly to center with Wilson on second to pick up his second save.

Scurry replaced Yankee relief ace Dave Righetti at the start of the 11th inning, retired Ernest Riles on a fly ball to left, then walked Gantner before Moore tripled over the head of center fielder Rickey Henderson.

The Brewers, trailing 3-1, tied it in the eighth on Rob Deer's third homer of the year and second in two days off off Righetti, who relieved Ron Guidry to start the inning. It followed a single by Billy Joe Robidoux.

The Brewers had taken a 1-0 lead in the first when Yankees shortstop Bobby Meacham booted Deer's grounder with two outs and the bases loaded.

The Yankees added their third run in the seventh when Meacham reached second on third baseman Paul Molitor's throwing error, went to third on Henderson's single and scored on Don Mattingly's grounder.

TORONTO (AP) — Lloyd Moseby had a two-run homer and four RBI and Doyle Alexander allowed just three hits in 7 1-3 innings Saturday to propel the Toronto Blue Jays to a 6-5 victory over Kansas City.

Moseby's second homer of the season, which followed a two-out single by Jeff Hearron, gave the Blue Jays a 2-0 lead in the second. Rudy Law walked, went to second on an infield out and scored on Frank White's single to make it 2-1 in the third.

Toronto made it 4-1 in the sixth against Mark Huismann, who relieved Bud Black, 1-2. Garth Iorg and Rick Leach singled, Hearron walked and Moseby singled home two runs.

Darryl Motley's solo homer in the seventh cut it to 4-2, but rookie Kelly Gruber responded with a two-run shot of his own in the bottom of the inning against Al Hargesheimer. The homer was Gruber's first of the season and second in the majors.

BOSTON (AP) — Don Baylor's forceout drove in the tying run, and the go-ahead run scored on the play when Chicago shortstop Ozzie Guillen threw wildly, allowing the Boston Red Sox to rally in the eighth inning Saturday for a 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Held to one run and five hits for seven innings by Rich Dotson, the Red Sox spoiled the veteran's right-hander's bid for his first victory since last June 2 with their comeback.

Bob James replaced Agosto, and Jim Rice, attempting to sacrifice, popped a bunt to the right of the mound and beat it out for a single, filling the bases.

Baylor hit a grounder past the mound that Guillen fielded and stepped on second, forcing pinch-runner Steve Lyons as Boggs scored the tying run. Guillen, hit by Lyons's slide, threw wildly to first trying for a double play and Buckner came all the way around from second on the error.

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 1-1, became the fourth consecutive Boston pitcher to go pitch a complete game. He allowed six hits, struck out four and walked two. Agosto, 0-2, was the loser.

Chicago rookie John Cangelosi opened the game by walking on a 3-2 pitch. He stole second for his eighth steal of the season, took third on Wayne Tolleson's bunt and scored as Harold Baines grounded out.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Dick Schofield's three-run fourth-inning homer snapped a 2-2 tie and Jim Slaton won his first game at Anaheim Stadium since last May as the California Angels beat the Minnesota Twins 5-4 Saturday.

Slaton, 2-0, allowed five hits in 7 1-3 innings, walking one and striking out four. Donnie Moore went the final 1 2-3 innings for his second save.

Minnesota took a 1-0 lead in the first when Kirby Puckett doubled and scored on Roy Smalley's single. Kent Hrbek's third-inning homer, his first, made it 2-0.

With one out in the fourth, the Angels loaded the bases against John Butcher, 0-2, on singles by Brian Downing, Doug DeCinces and Reggie Jackson. One run scored as Ruppert Jones grounded into a force play and Rob Wilfong singled to score DeCinces before Schofield smashed his first homer of the season.

Minnesota scored an unearned run in the fifth when right fielder Ruppert Jones misplayed Puckett's fly for a three-base error. Mickey Hatcher scored Puckett with a sacrifice fly.

Hatcher's one-out single in the eighth chased Slaton and Terry Forster came in to walk Hrbek. Moore relieved and, after the runners advanced on catcher Jerry Narron's passed ball, Hatcher scored on a sacrifice fly to Tom Brunansky.

Runners Spark White

RALEIGH (AP) — Tailbacks Frank Harris and Bobby Crumpler rushed for more than 100 yards each to spark the White squad to a 30-3 victory over the Red team in North Carolina State's spring football game Saturday.

Harris, a senior from Hampton, Va. gained 136 yards and scored once on 12 carries, while Crumpler, a junior from Newton Grover, gained 113 yards and two touchdowns on 15 carries.

"Today we were really concentrating on becoming tougher up front," N.C. State first-year coach Dick Sheridan said. "Last year we were last in the conference in rushing offense and rushing defense. Those are two categories where we have to improve."

N.C. State ran the ball 84 times out of the I formation while throwing 32 times.

Mike Cofer opened the scoring with a 32-yard field goal on the White's second posession. Kramer then hit Haywood Jeffries with a 40-yard touchdown pass, but Cofer missed the extra point.

Harris then scored on a 3-yard run to make it 16-0. Crumpler closed out the White's scoring with runs of three and one yards.

Smith, Harper Spark Atlanta Win

ATLANTA (AP) — Zane Smith pitched a two-hitter and Terry Harper singled in a pair of first-inning runs as the Atlanta Braves defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-0 Saturday.

It was the Dodgers' fifth consecutive loss and left them with a 3-9 record, equalling their worst start since 1976.

The only hits off Smith were singles by Bill Russell in the fifth inning and Enos Cabell in the ninth. Smith, 1-0, walked four and struck out five.

The Braves got to Orel Hershiser, 1-2, when he experienced early control problems. With two away, he walked Dale Murphy, Bob Horner singled and Ted Simmons walked to load the bases. Harper then followed with a ground single to left.

Atlanta added a run in the seventh on Horner's sacrifice fly off reliever Ken Howell. The fly ball to center field scored Rafael Ramirez who had singled and gone to third on Murphy's single that chased Hershiser.

St. Louis.....9
Montreal.....6

MONTREAL (AP) — St. Louis pitcher Tim Conroy, batting for his first time in the major leagues, drew a bases-loaded walk with two outs in the 17th inning and Willie McGee followed with a two-run single Saturday, lifting the Cardinals over the Montreal Expos 9-6.

The longest game in the majors this season took 5 hours and 22 minutes, and twice saw St. Louis take a lead in the extra innings only to watch Montreal rally to tie.

But the Cardinals took the lead for good in the 17th against Floyd Youmans, the fifth Montreal pitcher. With one out, Terry Pendleton singled and stole second. After Mike Heath flied out, Ozzie Smith was walked intentionally. Youmans then walked Jose Oquendo, loading the bases.

Conroy, acquired in the off-season from Oakland, then walked on a full-count pitch, forcing home the go-ahead run. McGee followed with his two-run single.

Conroy, the sixth St. Louis pitcher, threw three hitless innings and won his first decision of the season. Youmans, 0-2, took the loss.

St. Louis went ahead 6-5 in the 14th when Jack Clark led off with his second homer of the season, a blow off Dan Schatzeder. But in the bottom of the inning, Andre Dawson singled off Ken Dayley, stole second, continued to third on catcher Heath's wild throw and scored on pinch-hitter Tom Nieto's single to right.

The Cardinals tied it 4-4 in the ninth when Smith singled, stole second and scored on Coleman's single to right.

Dawson hit his third home run of the season and third in three days, over the left field fence, off Bob Forsch in the first inning. In the second, Winningham singled and Dann Bilardello homered to give the Expos a 3-0 lead.

The Cardinals scored three unearned runs off Bryn Smith to tie it in the sixth. Forsch doubled and scored when Expos first baseman Jason Thompson threw away Coleman's grounder. McGee followed with an RBI single, took second on the throw home and, two outs later, scored on Andy Van Slyke's double.

In the bottom of the sixth, with one out, Scot Thompson and Hubie Brooks walked, Andres Galarraga ran for Thompson and Winningham singled to shortstop. Smith fielded the ball off a high hop but his throw home hit the dirt and bounced off Heath, allowing Galarraga to score.

CHICAGO (AP) — R. J. Reynolds' bases-loaded homer highlighted a seven-run fourth inning Saturday and the Pittsburgh Pirates rolled to their fifth straight victory, defeating the struggling Chicago Cubs 14-8.

Joe Orsulak, Bill Almon and Sid Bream also homered for the Pirates while Leon Durham, Shawon Dunston and Ryne Sandberg connected for the Cubs, losers of seven of their first nine games. Dunston went 5-for-5 with two runs batted in.

Durham hit his third homer and Dunston his second in the second inning to give the Cubs a 2-0 lead.

Loser Scott Sanderson, making his first start of the season, retired the first two men in the fourth before the Pirates struck. Mike Brown doubled, Tony Pena beat out an infield hit and Almon walked to fill the bases. Rafael Belliard singled in two runs.

Winner Rick Reuschel, 2-1, beat out a topper to refill the bases and Reynolds followed with his second homer of the season and first career grand slam. Orsulak then hit his first major league homer.

The Pirates added four runs in the seventh. Almon singled in one run, Belliard doubled in one, another scored on a passed ball and Reynolds singled in the fourth. Bream homered in the top of the eighth while Sandberg hit a two-run homer in a three-run bottom of the eighth.

Houston.....4
Cincinnati.....3

CINCINNATI (AP) — Hot-hitting Phil Garner's two-run double triggered a four-run first inning and the Houston Astros held on for a 4-3 victory Saturday over the Cincinnati Reds.

Bob Knepper, 3-0, earned his 100th career win. He allowed four hits in 5 1-3 innings, Charlie Kerfeld bailed him out in the sixth, then Dave Smith took over in the ninth and picked up his fifth save.

Garner had a single and a double in four at-bats. He has driven in 11 runs with 11 hits in 18 at-bats over the past five games.

The Astros ran their winning streak to four games by shelling Tom Browning, 0-1, who didn't survive the first inning. Bill Doran and Billy Hatcher singled to open the game and Garner sent them home with a double into the left-field corner.

Garner took third on the throw home and scored on Glenn Davis' sacrifice fly. Kevin Bass hit his second homer to complete the Astros' scoring and Dickie Thon chased Browning with a single. Ron Robinson, Scott Terry, Joe Price and John Franco shut out Houston on five hits the rest of the way.

In the eighth, Eric Davis walked, stole second, took third on Kerfeld's wild pitch with two outs and scored when Thon threw away Nick Esasky's grounder to shortstop. Esasky reached second the play and scored on Tony Perez's single to center. Smith allowed Bo Diaz's second homer of the year in the ninth.

San Francisco.....6
Padres.....5

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chris Brown's two-run homer in the seventh inning Saturday rallied the San Franciso Giants past the San Diego Padres 6-5.

The Giants, who trailed 5-0 after two innings, took the lead when Brown connected on the first pitch from reliever Lance McCullers, 1-1.

San Diego starter Eric Show took a 5-4 lead into the seventh, but Will Clark reached base with one out on shortstop Garry Templeton's error. Brown then followed with his first home run of the season.

Mark Davis, 1-0, was the winner in relief, but needed Greg Minton's help to escape a two-on jam in the eighth. Minton got his second save.

The Padres staked Show to a 5-0 lead after two innings before the Giants began their comeback with the help of a three-run double by rookie Rob Thompson in the fourth inning. The runs batted in were the first of Thompson's major league career.

San Diego's Tim Flannery, who entered the game in an 0-for-12 slump, got the first four-hit game of his major-league career. His double and Terry Kenedy's two-out single gave the Padres a 1-0 lead in the first.

The Padres chased starter Jim Gott with four runs in the second. Dane Iorg and John Kruk opened the inning with singles. Show followed with a bunt single that loaded the bases, and Flannery delivered an RBI single. Tony Gwynn hit a two-run double that made it 5-0.

Brown led off the fourth with a single, and a walk to Chili Davis and a single by Bob Brenly loaded the bases. Thompson's double cleared the bases and Jose Uribe's RBI single pulled the Giants within 5-4.

Magic Sparks Laker Win Over Spurs By 122-94

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson, taking command of what had been a close game, scored 10 points in the closing 4½ minutes of the first half and the Los Angeles Lakers went on to a 122-94 playoff victory over the San Antonio Spurs Saturday.

Johnson finished with 30 points in the win that gave the defending NBA champion Lakers a 2-0 edge in the best-of-five opening series. They can end it with a victory Wednesday night in San Antonio.

The Spurs were never really in the opening game, a 135-88 Los Angeles' victory Thursday. But they played the Lakers tough during most of the first half this time and held a 43-37 lead six minutes before the intermission.

But Johnson scored 10 of 16 Lakers points as they stormed back to take a 53-49 halftime lead. That 6½-minute blitz included a 12-0 spurt.

Los Angeles then took complete control in the third quarter, as Byron Scott scored 14 points and the Lakers rolled up an 86-67 pad by the end of the period.

Wes Matthews led San Antonio with 30 points, and David Greenwood had 14.

Atlanta.....137
Detroit.....125

ATLANTA (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored 50 points and Randy Wittman a career-high 35 as the Atlanta Hawks pulled away in the final quarter and downed the Detroit Pistons 137-125 Saturday in an NBA first-round playoff game.

The victory gave the Hawks a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series that resumes in Detroit Tuesday night.

The Hawks were trailing 94-93 with just under two minutes remaining in the third period when they went on a 12-2 run that created a 105-96 lead with 10:42 remaining in the game.

The Pistons never got closer than seven points the rest of the way — the last time at 118-111 with 6:01 to go on a free throw by Vinnie Johnson.

Atlanta had its biggest lead in the final minute, 137-121, before the Pistons scored twice in the closing seconds.

Wilkins' 50 points tied the club's single-game playoff record set in 1958 by Bob Pettit, when the franchise was located in St. Louis.

Wilkins, who had 41 points after three quarters, became only the 15th player to score 50 or more in playoff competition, with his total being 11 points less than Elgin Baylor's all-time playoff mark of 61, set in 1962.

The Pistons had one stretch in the third and fourth quarters where they got 28 consecutive points from their guards.

Gold's Quick Strikes...

"outstanding springs," Baker said.

The Purple team threatened the first time it got the ball, moving from its own 23 to the Gold five before Dillahunt burst through to drop Moody for a six-yard loss on fourth and one. Hunter twice completed 16-yard passes, to McLaughlin and Wilson, along the way.

Late in the first period, the Gold recovered a Purple fumble at the Gold 43. The Gold pushed down to the 21 on seven running plays, then Jones rolled out against the flow all alone and hit Gainey from there for the score with 10:53 showing in the second quarter. Fine's kick made it 7-0.

Two plays after the kickoff, McCallum intercepted Todd Abrams, bringing it back 14 yards to the Purple 21. On the first play, Holtzclaw hit Adams for the score, running it to 14-0 with 9:56 left.

The Purple fumbled again on the kickoff with the Gold recovering on the Purple 30, setting up the third touchdown. The first two plays lost three yards, but Holtzclaw hit Jones on the sidelines and the speedy junior ripped into the end zone with 8:23 showing.

That ran it to 21-0 — all the scoring coming between 10:53 and 8:23.

And it took only 16 more seconds for a fourth score to go on the board — except this time it was, at last, the Purple.

Wilson gathered in the kickoff on his own five, seemed stopped around the 35, but suddenly broke through the pack and outraced the final two defenders to the end zone, a 95-yard scamper that got his team back into it.

The PAT try, however, failed, when a bad hold forced a run for it and a pass that failed, leaving it at 21-6.

The Purple had one last chance to score when Barriet Easterling intercepted Holtzclaw and returned the ball eight yards to the Gold 34.

But after reaching the 19, Dillahunt picked off Hunter in the end zone on the final play of the half.

The Purple took the second half kickoff and marched from the 30 to the Gold two before Hunter was sacked on fourth down to turn it over. Hunter hit McLaughlin for 27 yards and went to Wilson for 21 on passes in the drive.

Late in the quarter, the Purple took over on its own 26 and drove down the field for its first offensive score. The Gold was twice penalized for pass interference along the way, but the Purple also had to overcome a holding penalty and another for illegal motion. Hunter hit Wilson for 13 yards and went to Harry Howard for 12.

But it was only fourth and four from the 12 when his pass to Moody connected in the back of the end zone for the score with 10 minutes left in the game.

Hunter passed to McLaughlin for the two-pointer to close it to 21-14.

Two series later, Hunter was back, taking over on his own 19. On the first play, he hit Wilson at the Gold 33, a 48-yard gain.

On fourth and five from the 28, he hit Galen Braddy for nine and a first down, but a final try on fourth and 14 from the 23 was knocked away, preserving the Gold's victory with just over a minute to play.

"I'm pleased with the progress we've made," Baker said. "But we're not where I wanted us to be. We haven't established a number one quarterback and we haven't gotten to the point I wanted out passing game to. And I was also disappointed in the intensity of our Gold team today," Baker said.

The sweep kept the Knights winless on the season, having dropped six in a row so far this spring.

In the opener, Wake got all it needed in the first innning, scoring three times. Mark Mitchell singled and Randy Johnson reached on an error. David Brown brought both of them home with a double. Al Williams and Chris McLamb both walked, loading the bases and a sacrifice fly by Paul Kelly plated Brown.

Wake went on to add one in the third and three in the fifth.

Brown held Greenville to only one hit, striking out eight and walking three. The lone hit came off the bat of Marc Holloman in the third inning.

In the second game, Wake got one in the first, but Greenville matched it in the second.

Wake then scored twice in the third to put it away. Jeff Bryan singled and Johnson got a hit. Brown singled to drive in Bryan. Williams walked to load them up and a sacrifice fly by Chris Bryan brought in Johnson for a 3-1 lead.

Wake added three in the fourth with Kelly homering and one in the fifth. Greenville got its other run in the fourth.

Rose, Conley, A-G Post Wins

Rose High School made the most of four hits and came up with a 3-0 baseball victory over Big East rival Wilson Hunt Friday night.

The Rampants pushed over one run in the first to take the lead. Tyrone Jones doubled and Curtis Perkins singled him to third. He scored on a long sacrifice fly by David Daniels.

The Rampants didn't get another hit until the sixth inning when they scored twice more. Jones reached on a walk and stole second. Eric Jarman bounced back to the mound and the throw to third was wide, allowing Jones to score while Jarman raced all the way to third. Perkins then came up with a hit to score Jarman with the third run.

Hunt didn't go down without a whimper, however. The Warriors threatened in the first when a walk, a single and two stolen bases put men on second and third. Then, on a seemingly wild pitch, Rose catcher Axel Smith collected the ball in time to throw to Tom Moye, covering the plate, to get the sliding runner.

In the seventh, Hunt put two on with a walk and a hit after one out, but the next two popped up to the infield to end it.

Moye hurled the win, giving up but three hits. He struck out six and walked three.

Perkins had two hits to lead Rose. No one had more than one for Hunt.

The win boosted the Rose record to 3-3 in Big East play, 9-5 overall. Hunt falls to 3-3 in the conference, 3-11 overall.

The Rampants travel to Elizabeth City Northeastern on Tuesday.

BEAUFORT — It was supposed to be the battle of the titans in the Coastal Conference baseball race Friday when East Carteret hosted unbeaten D.H. Conley.

Instead, it turned into just another Viking romp as Conley came away with an 8-3 victory over the Mariners.

The win boosted Conley to 6-0 at the midpoint of the Coastal season. The Vikes are 15-0 overall. For East Carteret, it was their first loss in league competition.

Conley jumped into the lead in the third inning, putting the game away with six big runs. Brian Joyner led off, reaching on an error and Jody Vines also was safe on a misplay. Shane Adams singled and Lee Hardee doubled to drive in both pinchrunner Sherman Anderson and Vines. Randy Mills walked, loading the bases again and Butch Mills reached on an error, scoring Adams. Bronswell Patrick followed with a double, driving in all three baserunners.

Conley added single run in the fourth and fifth, the former coming on a solo homer by Vines.

All three East Carteret runs came in the sixth inning off a homer by Gary Mills.

Vines, Adams and Butch Mills each had two hits to lead the Conley attack, while Richard Bailey had two for East Carteret.

Patrick hurled the victory for the Vikings. He is now 8-0 on the year.

The Panthers spotted the Rams a 1-0 lead in the second inning, then matched that in the top of the third.

Greene Central got its run in the second when Michael Briffin doubled and scored on an error on Barry Ginn's grounder.

Scott Rawls then reached in the top of the third on an error, scoring on Thomas Wright's triple.

In the fourth, North Pitt struck for three to take a 4-1 lead. Lee Eakes reached on an error and Steve Strickland was hit by a pitch. Stanton Allyne then singled, driving in Eakes. An error on the relay allowed Strickland to score also and brought Allyne all the way to third. He scored from there on Scott Rawls' sacrifice fly.

The Rams tried to rally, loading the bases in the fourth with one out, only to score just only run. A third run came over in the fifth.

The loss dropped the Rams to 4-1 in the EPC, 10-6 overall. North Pitt is now 2-4 in the league and 5-6 overall.

BAYBORO — Farmville Central pushed over two runs in the ninth inning to squeeze past Pamlico, 6-4, in Eastern Plains Conference baseball action Friday night.

Pamlico had scored first in the game, getting a run in the first inning. Farmville came back with four in the second to push into a 4-1 lead. Pamlico, however, rallied for one in the third and then scored two in the fifth to tie it at 4-4.

It stayed that way until the ninth inning when the Jaguars finally broke the deadlock. Hugh Moore and Greg May both reached with base hits. Dennis Tripp followed with a triple, driving in both for the 6-4 lead that held up the rest of the way.

Moore led the Farmville hitting with four while May, Tripp and Shea Terrell each had two. J. Mason and Kenny Campton each picked up a pair for Pamlico.

Farmville is now 3-10 overall and 3-3 in the Eastern Plains. The Jaguars return to action on Tuesday traveling to South Lenoir.

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton outlasted South Lenoir, 7-6, in ten innings to take over first place in the Eastern Plains Conference baseball race.

Thanks to a 4-3 upset by North Pitt over previously unbeaten Greene Central, the Chargers moved into first with a 5-1 league record, a half-game ahead of the Rams.

But it wasn't easy. South Lenoir powered out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning and added a fourth run in the fourth. Ayden-Grifton came back with three in its half of the fourth, thanks to a three-run homer by Stacy Cole.

Both teams scored twice in the fifth and Ayden-Grifton pushed over a run in the sixth to tie it at 6-6.

It stayed that way until the 10th, when the Chargers got the winning run. Leslie Moore was hit by a pitch and Ty Little singled him to third. Then, after two were out, Curt Tucker singled to drive in Moore with the winning talley.

Little and Tucker led the Ayden-Grifton hitting with two each. Curtis Patterson, Mike Bryant and T. Dawson each had two for the Blue Devils.

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville's Bullets continued to roll through the Tobacco Belt Conference baseball ranks with a 3-0 win over Chocowinity Friday.

Maurice Tripp of Chocowinity and Pee Wee Groover of Jamesville hooked up in the pitchers' duel. Tripp scattered four hits and Groover five, but it was Groover who got the shutout.

Jamesville pushed over one run in the first to take the lead. Eric Spruill singled and Greg Bell reached on an error, moving Spruill to third. He scored on Groover's sacrifice fly.

In the third, Jamesville scored the other two runs. Groover walked and Tony Hale singled. Ernie Gardner then doubled to drive in both runners.

Jamesville climbs to 10-0 in the TBC and 10-4 overall. Chocowinity slips to 4-6 both overall and in conference play.

Petty Surprises At Pole Placing

NORTH WILKESBORO (AP) — Although he's the winningest driver in NASCAR history with 200 victories, Richard Petty has never been a strong qualifier. So he was pleasantly surprised when he took the inside track toward claiming the pole position for Sunday's First Union 400.

"Well, how about that," Petty said after driving his Pontiac to an average two-lap speed of 112.568 mph Friday. "We've got a real shot at the pole. You'd better believe we'll be going all for it. This should make the crew work even harder."

Petty, who won his last pole in 1979 at Bristol, Tenn., last captured the pole at North Wilkesboro in 1977.

The top eight qualifiers Friday are quaranteed one of the top eight spots in Sunday's race at the North Wilkesboro Speedway, but their exact positions will be determined by averaging qualifying speeds from qualifying Friday and today.

The 400-lap First Union 400 has a purse of $304,920.

Petty, who last won at North Wilkesboro in 1981 and has been winless on the NASCAR tour since July 1984, said his team needs to win a pole and a race.

"Not necessarily in that order, but I'd just as soon we take first things first and win the pole," Petty said. "Usually we don't consider the pole all that important, but it sure has been a long time since we won one."

Darrell Waltrip's absence from the top eight was as surprising as Petty's strong run. Waltrip, who has won nine pole positions and eight races on the five-eighths of a mile banked asphalt track, toured the track at 111.254 mph, 10th best behind Petty's son, Kyle.

Frank Fleming won the pole for Saturday's Lowe's 150, a 150-lap race for NASCAR Modified Division's lightweight cars, with an average speed of 124.820 mph.

To The Sports Editor:

Many times during the fall I read letters to the editor discussing the problem with Rose High's dependence on ECU for a football field. Some suggested it is time for Rose to build a field of its own. I'm sure the athletic department does not have enough money to do this or even produce many other conveniences for its sports teams.

My father is the Rose/Aycock Booster Club president and has been for two years. This club raises money through its membership to support Rose and Aycock athletics. They help buy uniforms, water coolers, and other important equipment. They sell drinks at the sporting events to raise money.

This club, which is vital in helping Rose, is dying away. There are currently three active members. They are realistic to know the club will not survive as long as they are the only true members. There is no one willing to take over as president of this club.

As a student-athlete, I can't understand how, out of all the kids playing sports at Rose and Aycock, a club as valuable as this can only have three active members.

I think it is a shame that all the rising student-athletes at Rose will not benefit from a Booster Club because so few of their parents are willing to get involved. I am hopeful that this club can be revived.

That seems impossible, however, because, not only is there apathy, but also many members of the administration at Rose fail to cooperate with this club. That is absurd, because this club is there to help them.

Maybe this club will finally be appreciated when it no longer exists.

Dennis Leonard, Reggie Jackson Catching Past

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Dennis Leonard and Reggie Jackson are chasing the past — and apparently succeeding.

Leonard won his second straight game in his comeback from a severe knee injury which cost him more than two years of his career. He allowed four runs — three unearned — on seven hits in seven innings and struck out five Friday night in Kansas City's 6-4 win at Toronto. Last Saturday, the 34-year-old veteran tossed a three-hit shutout against the Blue Jays in his first major-league start since May 28, 1983, when he tore a tendon below his right knee.

Jackson slammed his 534th career home run, tying him with Hall of Famer Jimmie Foxx for seventh place on the all-time list, and knocked in three runs to pass Goose Goslin for 17th spot on the RBI list in a 6-5 decision over Minnesota.

Elsewhere, it was Boston 2, Chicago 1; Milwaukee 6, New York 5; Oakland 4, Seattle 1; Detroit 6, Cleveland 1, and Texas 12, Baltimore 3.

Royals 6, Blue Jays 4

Leonard thinks he's caught up with who he was — one of the American League's best pitchers.

"I think my stuff is as good as it ever was and I feel real relaxed out there," said Leonard, who underwent four operations and was rehabiliating his knee the rest of the time as he struggled to return to the majors. "I'm smarter and more mature than I was three years ago and I guess in that regard I am a different pitcher.

But Leonard also is the same competitive player who was one of the best right-handers in baseball and won 20 games three times.

"I think I'm as close as I'm ever going to be to where I was three years ago," said Leonard. "I think the first win against Toronto was more satisfying because it was my first start. Once I got that first win under my belt, I told myself it was just a matter now of getting back to the things I used to be able to do."

He needed help from Dan Quisenberry in a wild eighth inning and Quisenberry picked up his second save. Rudy Law sparked the offense by driving in a pair of runs with a double.

Leonard left in the eighth after Tony Fernandez singled and he walked Rance Mulliniks. Quisenberry relieved and Cecil Upshaw singled to center, scoring Fernandez. George Bell grounded into a double play and Royals first baseman Steve Balboni flipped the ball to the umpire, thinking the side was retired. As he did, Mulliniks scored.

Angels 6, Twins 5

Jackson, used strictly as a DH against right-handed pitching this season, homered in the first off Mike Smithson and had RBI singles in the sixth and eighth.

"I only have one or two years left," said Jackson. "And I want to get out of them the most I can. I knew I'd only DH since long before the season, and that just made me work harder."

Jackson, 39, is off to one of his best starts in a 20-year career. He's batting .455 (10-for-22), with four homers and 10 RBI.

"I feel like I'm swinging very well now. I hope I can stay hot, because we need to go on a winning streak," said Jackson.

Red Sox 2, White Sox 1

Bruce Hurst outpitched Tom Seaver by holding Chicago to three hits and striking out 11, tying his career high. Hurst avenged a 3-1 loss to Seaver in Chicago earlier this month.

"Tom Seaver is a great pitcher and I knew it was going to be a dogfight, so I just dug down and said to myself, 'away we go,' " Hurst said.

Boston's runs came in the sixth, when Bill Buckner tripled and Jim Rice broke an 0-for-12 slump with a ground single, and in the seventh on doubled by Tony Armas and Rich Gedman.

Brewers 6, Yankess 5

Ernie Riles capped a rally from a 5-2 hole with an RBI single in the eighth. Rookie left-hander Dan Plesac threw four hitless innings of relief.

Robin Yount and Billy Jo Robidoux opened the winning rally with singles off Brian Fisher, 0-1. One out later, Riles greeted reliever Bob Shirley with a single to center, scoring Yount with the go-ahead run.

Plesac, who pitched in El Paso of the Class AA Texas League a year ago, said his first major-league win was "like a dream come true. We got the lead going into the ninth and I just didn't want to make any mistakes, because one fastball up and it's a tie game."

A's 4, Mariners 1

Dwayne Murphy drew a bases-loaded walk from Mike Moore and Alfredo Griffin also came around on the play in a four-run third inning. Jose Canseco led off the third by striking out, but he reached first on a wild pitch by Moore. Griffin followed with a double and, with two out, Bruce Bochte walked to load the bases.

BETHEL — Greene Central romped to a 26-3 softball victory over North Pitt in Eastern Plains Conference action Friday.

Greene Central pushed over two runs in each of the first two innings to take a 4-0 lead, then exploded for 16 runs on 11 hits in the third inning to power out to a 20-0 lead.

North Pitt got all three of its runs in the fifth on a homer by Keisha Pilgreen.

North Pitt returns to action on Tuesday at Pamlico, while Greene Central is idle until Friday when it visits Ayden-Grifton.

HAVELOCK — Home-standing Havelock came up with a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to squeeze out a 3-2 softball victory over Washington High School Friday.

Havelock grabbed the lead with two runs in the third inning, but Washington came back with single runs in the fifth and sixth to tie it up.

In the sixth, Valerie Reddick singled and Stephanie Litzsey got a hit. Amy Youmans then singled, and an error on the play allowed Reddick to score.

However, Havelock came back with a run in the bottom of the seventh to pull out the victory. Marina Simcox singled and Grett Diederich doubled to drive her in to end the game.

Diederich led the Havelock hitting with three. Washington was led by Gloria Sherrod and Reddick, each with two.

Washington is now 2-4 in Coastal Conference play, 2-6 overall. The Lady Pam Pack returns to action on Tuesday at West Craven.

Jamesville got all it needed in the first inning, scoring three times. Dana Byrum led off with a single, moving to second on an error on the play. She advanced to third on an out and scored on Renee Brown's sacrifice fly.

Senita Rodgers kept it going when she reached as her grounder was unplayed. Kim Phelps and Gina Reason both walked, loading the bases. Val Clark then singled to drive in both Rodgers and Phelps.

Jamesville added four each in the second and third and five in the fourth.

When Moore walked Murphy to force in Canseco, Griffin — who took off from second on Murphy's walk — never hesitated and sprinted home while Moore was bouncing the ball on the turf after catcher Steve Yeager had thrown back it back to mound.

Moore fired wildly to home in a vain attempt to catch Griffin, allowing Murphy to advance to third and Bochte to second. Dave Kingman followed with a two-run single.

"I wanted to give Canseco a chance to hit the plate," said Griffin. "When he did, I took off."

Tigers 6, Indians 1

Frank Tanana surrendered only six hits in his first complete game of the season, and Lance Parrish drove in four runs with a homer and a single. In his previous start, in Cleveland in 38-degree temperatures, Tanana lasted only one-third of an inning and was tagged for five runs on six hits.

It was 60 degrees at gametime Friday — and that was to Tanana's liking.

Rangers 12, Orioles 3

Pete O'Brien, Steve Buechele and Pete Incaviglia hit home runs for Texas Rangers. O'Brien had a three-run shot in the Rangers' six-run fifth to chase Orioles starter Scott McGregor. Buechele opened the sixth with his third homer in as many games. Later that inning, Incaviglia hit his second of the season with two men on.

New Site For GGO?

GREENSBORO (AP) — Nationally known golf course architect Rees Jones will be paid $542,000 to design an 18-hold golf course at Bryan Park that will meet PGA standards and could one day be the new home of the Greater Greensboro Open, officials say.

Bill Brady, president of the Greensboro Jaycees, which sponsors the tournament, said there is "nothing in the works to move the tournament."

But Brady added that the Jaycees would like to "have alternatives" and that if the city would build a course that meets the needs of the GGO, then "that (a move to Bryan Park) is a possibility for us."

Charles Forrester, a Greensboro city council member, said Thursday during a briefing on the construction of the new course that "it could be one of only two municipal courses used on the PGA tour."

The GGO has been held at the privately-owned Forest Oaks Country Club the past 10 years, but the contract between the country club and the Greensboro Jaycees, which sponsors the tournament, will run out next year and could leave the GGO looking for a new home, Forrester said.

The Professional Golf Association would have to approve any proposed move, along with the Jaycees.

The only PGA tour event held on a municipal course is the Shearson Lehman Bros.-Andy Williams Open, played on the Torrey Pines facility overlooking the Pacific Ocean in a San Diego suburb. The AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am is played on a public course that is privately owned. All other PGA tour events are played on country club courses.

"The PGA does not like to hold tournaments on public courses," Forest Oaks owner John Hughes said. "Municipal courses are often worn down by heavy play and dealing with the municipality is more difficult than dealing with a club."

The Bryan Park course will cost about $2.5 million, according to city General Services head Sanford H. Smith. Jones' fee will come from proceeds of a $2 million bond issue voters approved last year for construction of a second course at the park, officials said.

Horner Breaks String, Hits Homer

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

After Bob Horner started off the season hitless in 21 at-bats, Atlanta Braves Manager Chuck Tanner had a prediction for his slumping cleanup hitter.

"All he needs to do is get a bloop, then he'll get a blast," Tanner said.

How right he was.

In his first at-bat Friday night against Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela, Horner got a broken-bat single. The next time up, Horner hit a two-run homer that sent the Braves to a 6-3 victory.

"You just tell yourself to be patient and hang in there," Horner said. "We'd only played seven games. I wasn't worried because I knew it would come around eventually."

In other NL games, St. Louis beat Montreal 4-2, Pittsburgh blanked Chicago 4-0, Houston downed Cincinnati 6-4, New York stopped Philadelphia 5-2 and San Francisco defeated San Diego 6-1.

Horner has a history of slow starts, and entered the game with a .201 career average in April. But he also has a history of hitting Valenzuela, and Horner's 2-for-3 performance raised his lifetime average against the Dodgers' left-hander to .465 with five home runs.

"I've thrown him everything — curveball, fastball, screwball," Valenzuela said.

Horner said he could tell that he was not the only one happy he finally got untracked.

"Everybody else kind of breathed a sigh of relief," he said. "But, if I play 10 more years, I'll probably have 10 more streaks like that."

Dale Murphy's third home run of the season, a two-run shot, put Atlanta ahead in the first inning. Ken Oberkfell added a sacrifice fly later in the inning.

"The two (home run) pitches was the difference in the game," said Valenzuela, whose wife Linda gave birth to a baby girl Friday morning, the couple's third child. Valenzuela was to return to Los Angeles today and rejoin the team in San Francisco next week.

Valenzuela, 1-1, gave up seven hits over six innings. Winner David Palmer, 1-1, gave up a fourth-inning home run to Mike Marshall, his third of the season. Palmer went 6 2-3 innings and Bruce Sutter worked the ninth for his first save.

Cardinals 4, Expos 2

John Tudor, who won 20 of his last 21 regular-season decisions last season, became baseball's first three-game winner this year as St. Louis beat Montreal.

Tudor, 3-0, gave up seven hits over 8 2-3 innings before Todd Worrell got the final out for his third save.

After the Expos took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Andre Dawson's home run, the visiting Cardinals tied the game in the fourth on Mike Heath's RBI double.

Heath, who entered the game batting .050, put St. Louis ahead in the sixth with a two-run homer off Joe Hesketh, 0-2.

Pirates 4, Cubs 0

Mike Brown hit a two-run double in the third inning and scored on a single by Jim Morrison, leading Pittsburgh past Rick Sutcliffe and Chicago.

Sutcliffe, 0-3, pitched seven innings and gave three runs on seven hits. He struck out seven and walked seven.

Rick Rhoden, the Pirate starter who has asked to be traded, raised his record to 2-0 as Pittsburgh spoiled the Cubs' home opener. Rhoden yielded six hits in 6 1-3 innings and combined with Cecilio Guante, Pat Clements and Jim Winn on the shutout.

Mets 5, Phillies 2

Carlton, 0-2, trying to win his first game since last May 20, gave up five hits and struck out 10 in 6 2-3 innings. But Carlton hurt himself with eight walks, including four in the first inning when host New York scored three times.

Ray Knight's opposite-field, bloop single drove in two runs in the first inning and George Foster's opposite-field, groundball single off Kent Tekulve drove in two more Mets runs in the seventh.

Astros 6, Reds 4

Phil Garner, Alan Ashby and Denny Walling hit home runs that led Houston past host Cincinnati.

Garner hit a solo homer, his third of the season, in the first inning and Ashby connected for a two-run shot in the fourth off Reds starter Mario Soto, 1-1. Soto gave up an NL-leading 30 home runs last season.

Mike Scott, 1-2, pitched a six-hitter for his first victory in three starts. He struck out a career-high nine, but needed last-out relief help from Dave Smith, who picked up his fourth save.

Giants 6, Padres 1

Reliever-turned-starter Scott Garrelts pitched a three-hitter and Jeff Leonard hit a three-run homer in the first inning in San Francisco.

San Diego starter Mark Thurmond, 0-2, put himself in immediate trouble by walking Dan Gladden and Will Clark to start the first inning. One out later, Leonard hit a 400-foot drive over the left-center field fence for his fourth home run of the season.

Blue-Backed Herring Caught

A blue-backed herring tagged by East Carolina University researchers in Canada last year has been caught in Jamesville, according to Roger Rulifson, a scientist at the Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources at ECU.

The herring, caught by Bill Perry with a gill net in the Roanoke River on April 4, is only the second tagged fish involved in the study to be caught.

"Another one was captured by a troller at Cape Anne, Massachusetts, last year on Nov. 29. It's very interesting that this one was caught so close to ECU. This catch shows for the first time the extensive migration of blue-backed herring," Rulifson said.

The herring caught by Perry was a female measuring 12 inches in length. It was tagged last summer in the the Bay of Fundy in Nova Scotia, and was one of 60,000 tagged in Canada last year.

Rulfison said this catch was very important because "blue-backs are related to shad and we have suspected for some time that they might be in the same migration pattern. This is the first indication that they are following the same migration pattern."

The herring studies, conducted by ECU and Canadian researchers, are being made to determine the proportion of fish in Canadian waters that are of U.S. origin, and to determine the potential effects of tidal power development by the Canadian government on U.S. fish stocks.

Rulifson said anyone who catches a tagged fish should turn it in to the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries. The yellow or orange tags are located on the fish's back under the dorsal fin.

Wildlife Club Scholarships

The Pitt County Wildlife Club will award two scholarships, one for $500 and one for $250, to two seniors attending a Pitt County high school.

To be eligible, a student must write a report explaining some act of conservation he or she has completed. It should be mailed by May 31 to the Pitt County Wildlife Club, P.O. Box 101, Greenville. The scholarship committee, consisting of club officers and the scholarship committee chairman, will choose the winners.

"It is our hope that these scholarships will help some Pitt County student further his or her education and at the same time further his or her awareness of good conservation of all our natural resources," said Howard Pyle, chairman of the scholarship committee.

The Pitt County Wildlife Club is dedicated to the conservation of fish, game and the natural resources of North Carolina.

Hunter Safety Shooting Tournament

The eighth annual North Carolina Hunter Safety Shooting Tournament, sponsored by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, will be held Saturday at the Kinston Police Range, located south of Kinston on N.C. 11.

According to the commission, only registered schools may compete in the tournament, but spectators are welcome. Participants must be members of school teams and have successfully completed a commission-sponsored hunter safety course.

Teams will compete in small-bore rifle shooting, trap shooting and archery. In addition, three optional events will be offered: black-powder shooting, outdoors skills and wildlife knowledge, and a hunter-activity trail testing the students' knowledge of gun and hunting safety under field conditions.

Marine Fisheries Public Hearings

Fishermen will have the opportunity to comment on proposed Marine Fisheries regulation changes at three April public hearing meetings: April 28 at 8:15 p.m. at the New Hanover County Courthouse in Wilmington; April 29 at 8:15 p.m. at the Duke University Marine Lab in Beaufort, and April 30 at 8:15 p.m. at the Marine Resources Center in Manteo.

Proposed changes to be discussed pertain to gill net buoys, crab, fish and eel pot buoys, long haul and swipe nets, bay scallop season, the tolerance of undersized clams, flounder catches, scrap or trash fish landings, trawl nets in secondary nursery areas and designated pot areas in the Bond and Muddy creeks in Pamlico County.

Marine Fisheries commissioners will make final decisions on the proposed changes May 29 at a business meeting in Beaufort. Written comments will be received until May 12 at P.O. Box 769, Morehead City, 28557. Public meetings at 7:30 p.m. will precede each public hearing.

Executive Director Named

The North Carolina Fisheries Association has named Joseph D. McClees of Oriental its new executive director.

M.N. Tom Caroon, president of the Trade Association, announced the appointment after the board of directors unanimously adopted a three-year plan to expand the N.C. Fisheries association in coastal North Carolina.

McClees, a Pamlico County native, said "It is time for fishermen to stand together to protect our livelihood, our heritage and the future of the seafood industry. We will work to protect a man's right to earn his living harvesting seafood."

He added that "the multi-million dollar seafood industry is the least respected of North Carolina's major industries. We employ thousands of people, and turn over a billion dollars per year in the North Carolina economy."

McClees replaces Ned E. Delamar Jr., who will continue to serve as the consultant for legislative and governmental affairs for the association.

Bullets' Amazing Rally Wins

Instead, he got a three-point bank shot at the buzzer from Dudley Bradley, at 34.9 percent the worst field-goal shooter in the NBA this season. The long shot climaxed an 18-0 rally by the Bullets that gave them a 95-94 victory in the opener of their first-round playoff series with the 76ers on Friday night.

"To be honest, we didn't need a three-pointer, but I don't mind it," Loughery said. "I would have been happy getting the ball to Jeff Malone or Cliff Robinson to tie it, but I'll take it."

The 76ers got 11 fourth-quarter points from Sedale Threatt to turn a 70-68 edge into a seemingly safe 94-77 margin with 3:49 left. With Charles Barkley scoring 26 points and leading a 67-41 Philadelphia rebounding advantage with 22, there appeared to be no way the Bullets could win.

Dan Roundfield scored the first seven points of the 18-0 rally and later added another basket to make it 94-92 with 35 seconds left. Bradley, who had another three-point goal in addition to the game-winner, got a chance to be the hero when Julius Erving missed three straight free throws, the last after a Washington lane violation, with three seconds left.

The Bullets were the only one of eight road teams to win their playoff opener. Milwaukee beat New Jersey 119-107, Dallas defeated Utah 101-93 and Denver tripped Portland 133-126 on Friday night.

On Thursday, it was Boston 123, Chicago 104; Atlanta 140, Detroit 122; Los Angeles Lakers 135, San Antonio 88; and Houston 107, Sacramento 87.

Saturdday's schedule had San Antonio at Los Angeles and Detroit at Atlanta, and Sacramento at Houston. Sunday's games have Chicago at Boston, Washington at Philadelphia, Portland at Denver, Utah at Dallas and New Jersey at Milwaukee.

Erving played little in the fourth quarter as his backup at guard, Threatt, hit five consecutive field goals, helping the 76ers take their big lead. So when Erving was fouled with three seconds left, his lack of playing time took its toll.

"They just didn't fall," Erving said of the three free throws. "I just didn't have good rhythm from the third period on. I'm a little down, but I'm not angry or bitter. I wish I could have made the free throw, but tomorrow is another day and Sunday is another day."

After a timeout, Erving nearly made up for his three misses with tough defense on Bradley, who averaged 2.8 points per game for the Bullets.

"Doc was hounding me pretty good," Bradley said. "I just let the shot go."

Malone led the Bullets with 21 points, while Roundfield had 20 and Robinson 18. Bradley finished with nine, but had only three points before hitting the two three-pointers down the stretch.

"I practice three-pointers a lot and it sure paid off," Bradley said. "I just spun around and shot it. When it left my hand, I thought it was going in. I was really happy because I knew that was it."

In addition to the 67-41 rebound total, Philadelphia also had a 24-6 advantage in offensive rebounding, led by Barkley's 11.

Although 7-foot-6 Bullets center Manute Bol blocked nine shots, one short of the NBA playoff record, Philadelphia continually took the ball inside. When a 76er missed a shot, one or two teammates usually was there to get the rebound despite the absence of Philadelphia center Moses Malone, still out with a broken bone under his eye.

But with a 17-point lead, the 76ers turned the ball over five times and missed their last five free throws.

"The bottom fell out," 76ers Coach Matt Guokas said. "We got tentative and lost our momentum. We started to use up the clock, which got us out of our offense. The momentum shifted and we paid the price for it."

Mavericks 101, Jazz 93

Rolando Blackman scored 25 points and led a Dallas rally in the second quarter against Utah.

Blackman was scoreless until he got hot in the last 5:55 of the first half, scoring 12 of the Mavericks' last 16 points for a 60-55 halftime lead.

The Jazz, playing without leading scorer Adrian Dantley, who has back spasms, outscored Dallas 82-73 from the field but lost the game at the free-throw line, where the Mavericks had a 28-11 advantage.

Dallas led throughout the second half until a basket by Bob Hansen made it 93-93 with 4:32 left. But the Mavericks scored the last eight points of the game to win it.

Karl Malone led Utah with 23 points.

Bucks 119, Nets 107

The Bucks led just 86-84 after three periods, but after taking a 96-86 advantage with 8:05 left, the Nets got no closer than five points.

Nuggets 133, Trail Blazers 126

Forward Calvin Natt scored a career-high 40 points, including four straight free throws to highlight a 10-0 Denver streak in the third quarter, and the Nuggets hung on to defeat Portland.

The Nuggets led 102-95 after scoring the last 10 points of the third period. With Portland ahead 95-94, Natt drew a foul from Kenny Carr and Carr was ejected from the game with a double technical.

Natt hit all four free throws to put Denver ahead 98-95 and the Nuggets went on to lead by as many as 15 points in the fourth period.

Center Danny Schayes, starting in place of the injured Wayne Cooper, added 22 points and 11 rebounds for the Nuggets. Alex English, despite a poor shooting night, scored 30.

Kiki Vandeweghe paced Portland with 28 points and Mychal Thompson, who sat out much of the second half with five fouls, added 24. Clyde Drexler, also in foul trouble, had 20 points.

Hunt Rolls Past Rampettes

Wilson Hunt gained a 3-0 victory over Rose High School in a Big East soccer match Friday.

Details of the match were not made available.

Rose is now 1-1 both in league play and overll. The Rampettes return to action on Tuesday at Eastern N.C. School for the Deaf.

Figures Improved

First Union Corp. has reported first quarter net income of $53.8 million, an increase of 35 percent over the $39.8 million earned during the same period last year.

Edward E. Crutchfield Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, said the main reason for the earnings increase was a rise in net interest income, which resulted from a larger investment portfolio and loan growth.

At the end of the first quarter, Charlotte-headquartered First Union reported assets of $17.3 billion, equity of $1.1 billion, and 961 offices in 33 states and four foreign countries. First Union National Bank has an office in Farmville.

Public Offering

Heilig-Meyers Co., Richmond-based home furnishings chain, said that it has filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission relating to a proposed public offering of 850,000 shares of its common stock.

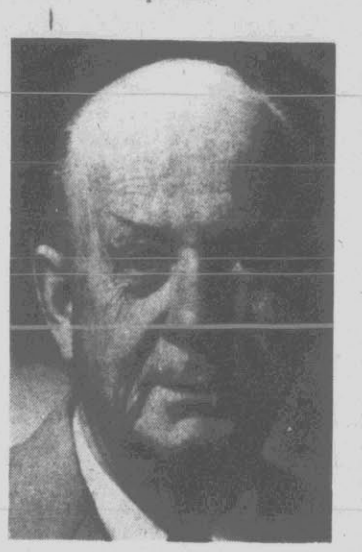

The company said the net proceeds to Heilig-Meyers from the sale of the shares will be used to reduce short-term debt that was incurred to finance the acquisition of Sterchi Bros. Stores Inc. The purchase brought the number of stores operated by the company to 214 in 10 states.

New Plaza Tenents

Three new tenants have been announced for The Plaza, a 300,000-square-foot shopping mall developed in Greenville by J.M. Kane & Co. of Raleigh, according to John M. Kane, president.

Kane said that new to the center, which was enclosed and enlarged during a renovation project completed in late 1984, are Annabelle's Restaurant, Caitlyn's Cafeteria and Casual Corner.

Annabell's, a subsidiary of Campbell Soup Co., is one of 16 such locations in the United States, said Frank Powell, president. Garnette Tuten is manager of the restaurant and Pete Daniel is director of menu development and training.

Casual Corner, part of a national chain of over 700 women's clothing stores, is managed by Delores Rorrer. This is the 12th North Carolina location for the Charlotte-based franchise, according to Ed Poole, president.

Finishing Seminar

William C. Bowen, owner of The Clothes Hanger, a dry cleaning facility at Carolina East Center, has announced that Brenda Freeman and Hanifer Simpson of the firm's finishing department recently completed a finishing seminar sponsored by the New York School of Dry Cleaning.

Bowen said the focus of the seminar was on the pressing and finishing of finer garments, with an emphasis on linens and silks.

Mrs. Simpson resides in Greenville with her husband, Trent, and their two children, Bobby and T.J.

Increased Earnings

The Planters Corp. said that its first quarter net income increased 16.4 percent to $1.549 million from the 1985 first quarter figure of $1.331 million.

The corporation had $640 million in assets on March 31, according to James B. Powers, chairman and chief executive officer. Deposits increased 13.2 percent to $572 million, and loans rose 12.7 percent to $459 million.

The Planters' board of directors declared a quarterly cash dividend of 17.5 cents per share, payable June 16 to shareholders of record on May 30.

The Rocky Mount-based bank has 52 offices in 19 North Carolina communities, including Greenville.

S&L Acquisition

Atlantic Savings and Loan Association Inc. and Peoples Bank & Trust Co. announced that they have entered into an agreement in principle under which Peoples will purchase Atlantic and operate its two offices in Wilson and Elm City.

Officials said the acquisition must be approved by state and federal regulatory agencies prior to consummation.

Wilson-based Peoples Bank, with $721 million in assets, is North Carolina's ninth largest bank. Atlantic has $47.19 million in assets.

Peoples said it will open its new office Monday on Salter Path Road in the Coral Bay Shopping Center at Atlantic Beach. The bank also has offices in Morehead City and Beaufort.

Institute Graduates

Ann D. Bass of Century-21 Bass Realty and Shirley E. Tacker of Duffus Realty were among 56 real estate professionals who graduated from the February session of the 39th annual North Carolina Realtors Institute in Chapel Hill.

Those completing the course who are realtors are now entitled to use the designation, GRI, denoting Graduate, Realtors Insitute. On a national level, 11 percent of the realtors and realtor associates hold the designation.

Co-sponsored by the North Carolina Real Estate Educational Foundation and the UNC-Chapel Hill School of Business, the institute is a series of real estate courses which have been offered several times annually since 1948.

Net Earnings Fell

First Citizens Corp. has reported earnings of $5,453,744 for the quarter ending March 31, compared to $6,066,414 earned during the same quarter of 1985, a decrease of 10.10 percent.

Lewis R. Holding, chairman, attributed the decline in quarterly earnings to lower interest margins and increased operating expenses.

Income Saw Gains

NCNB Corp. reported net income of $53.2 million for the first quarter of 1986, an increase of 44 percent from the $36.9 million earned in the first quarter a year earlier.

Hugh McColl, chairman, attributed the increase in earnings primarily to higher net interest income due to higher levels of earning assets, and to $7.7 million of after-tax securities gains.

McColl said NCNB's nonperforming assets totaled $170 million, or 1.23 percent of net loans and leases on March 31, compared to $168 million or 1.59 percent of net loans and leases a year earlier.

Hunt Says State Could Use Pension Monies To Seed Economic Growth

RALEIGH (AP) — By investing $50 million of the $9 billion state employees' pension fund in venture capital, the state could double its rate of return and fuel economic development in North Carolina, former Gov. Jim Hunt says.

"There is one piece missing that's keeping (an) explosion of economic growth from happening," Hunt said Friday.

The state has the people with the ability to think of new products and new services and the facilities to develop them, Hunt told a meeting of the Enterprise Zone-Venture Capital Study Committee. But he added that the state lacks seed capital and venture capital.

That lack has prevented "the explosion of growth, prosperity and new jobs in this state," Hunt said.

Hunt proposed that the state invest about $50 million of pension funds into "very reputable, established venture capital funds" on a one-time basis. If invested wisely, "the $50 million will be the best investment ever made with pension funds in North Carolina," he said.

The committee took no action on Hunt's proposals and will not make any recommendations to the short session in June, said Martha Harris, committee counsel. The committee will not meet again until late August or early September, after the short session is over, she said.

Most investments from the state employees' pension fund get a 10 percent rate of return, he said. Hunt predicted a 20 percent rate of return on investments made in venture capital.

The $50 million investment would equal about one-half of 1 percent of the state employees' $9 billion pension fund, he said.

Although the state's economy looks good now, Hunt predicted a downswing in years to come and said venture capital investments could help.

"We're losing our edge," he said. "America's been losing its competitive edge worldwide and North Carolina is losing its edge in the nation."

In the past, the state has depended upon new industry to keep the economy growing, he said. But that may no longer be possible because U.S. companies are investing in other countries where labor is cheap and because other states have become more aggressive in their recruiting, Hunt said.

The state needs to invent products "that will have a high value and be in demand around the world," he said.

Hunt recommended that $25 million be invested in North Carolina venture capital funds and $25 million in venture capital funds outside the state.

Hunt also recommended that the state increase its seed capital money by $5 million.

The Legislature should take action on his proposal in 1987 and begin investing in 1988, Hunt said. He recommended that the state evaluate the investments at the end of five years.

At the end of five years, "you will find this has been very successful for two groups," Hunt said. "State employees and people in North Carolina who need jobs."

Alice Garland Swink, research and policy specialist for the State Employees Association of North Carolina, said after Hunt's presentation that the association has taken no formal position on Hunt's proposal. During the group's board of governors meeting Thursday, "we intensively debated the whole issue," she said. "The board of governors will be pleased to know that Hunt isn't asking for action until the 1987 session."

The association will take a position after it has studied the issue more, she said.

Supreme Court to Hear Gramm-Rudman Debate

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fight over the Gramm-Rudman law to force a balanced federal budget by 1991 moves this week to the Supreme Court, where justices will hear arguments that it is unconstitutional.

A capacity audience is expected Wednesday when the court is scheduled to hear two hours of arguments in the confrontation over governmental powers and federal spending.

The case has been placed on a fast track, with the court expected to announce its decision by early July.

At the urging of the Reagan administration and others, a special three-judge federal court struck down a key provision of the law Feb. 7. The law remains in effect, however, pending the high court's review.

The issue, involving separation of government powers, is an arcane one with lawyers on all sides quoting theorists and scholars ranging from Montesquieu to Madison.

But the consequences are immediate and far-reaching.

The first $11.7 billion in spending cuts required by the law took effect March 1, unaffected by the decision of the three-judge panel that suspended its own ruling.

The law calls for deeper cuts until all red ink in the federal budget is eliminated by 1991.

Barring new taxes or congressional approval of specific reductions to reach that deficit target, automatic across-the-board cuts are mandated by the new law. Half the money would be slashed from the military and half from domestic programs.

The Gramm-Rudman law also has deprived federal employees of a 3.1 percent cost-of-living increase this year.

The key provision that was declared unconstitutional by the lower court empowers the comptroller general to order automatic deficit reductions.

Until now, the position has been a rather obscure one. The comptroller general heads Congress' General Accounting Office, a watchdog agency that audits federal programs, is appointed by the president to a 15-year term and can be removed only by Congress.

The three-judge court said the Gramm-Rudman law breaches the separation of powers between the White House and Congress by empowering a legislative officer, the comptroller general, to perform a job reserved for the executive branch.

If the Supreme Court upholds the lower court ruling, the comptroller general's role in ordering automatic spending cuts would be eliminated.

But Gramm-Rudman has a fallback provision that would retain part of the mechanism designed to reduce the deficit. The Congressinal Budget Office and the Office of Management and Budget in the White House would submit figures on how much spending must be trimmed.

Then it would be up to Congress itself to vote on a package to reach that figure.

Many feel that without automatic enforcement Congress will revert to the paralysis that characterized much of its recent effort to cope with the spiraling deficit.

Former Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, in a friend-of-the-court legal brief, told the justices that Gramm-Rudman's automatic mechanism "represents the only realistic hope of a required balance between revenues and expenditures."

Without it, he said, Congress won't deal with "the federal debt crisis which has been escalating without correction for the last two decades."

The national debt recently passed the $2 trillion mark, more than twice what it was when President Reagan took office. The interest alone that American taxpayers owe this year on the debt is $196.1 billion — the third largest spending category in the federal budget.

The lawsuit over Gramm-Rudman also has spurred a controversy over the independence of numerous regulatory agencies, such as the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Trade Commission.

Some commentators say the three-judge panel's ruling, if upheld by the Supreme Court, could undermine the authority of those agencies because they function to some extent like the comptroller general's office.

The president appoints the agency members to specified terms and may not fire the regulators at will.

Besides the administration, Gramm-Rudman was challenged by 12 members of Congress led by Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., and by the National Treasury Employees Union representing retired federal workers.

Lawyers for the Senate, the House and the comptroller general are defending the constitutionality of the law.

This week's Supreme Court argument session has attracted extraordinary attention, and few seats among the 300 or so in the stately courtroom will be available to the general public.

Even aides to members of Congress are being told not to expect any special favors. They will not be allowed to occupy seats reserved for their bosses.

Congress May Be Ready To Restore Ginnie Mae Funds

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government agency that is a major source of home-mortgage money is about to be rescued with legislation reviving its authority to guarantee mortgage-backed securities, congressional aides say.

The Government National Mortgage Association's $65.3 billion guarantee authority was exhausted on April 4 by the rush to refinance home mortgages at lower interest rates.

The unprecedented depletion of this authority forced the agency, known by the nickname Ginnie Mae, to stop issuing new commitments to guarantee the prompt repayment of securities backed by government-insured mortgages. The securities are issued by lenders with Ginnie Mae's repayment guarantee to raise new mortgage capital.

Industry analysts have warned that unless Congress enacts legislation by May 1, there could be a shortage of mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration and slightly higher interest rates for home buyers. The government-insured mortgages account for about 15 percent of all home mortgages.

Legislative aides said Friday that Congress is poised to enact a bill this week to raise Ginnie Mae's commitment authority to $100 billion.

If some procedural problems involving the jurisdiction of the House Banking and Appropriation committees can be worked out, aides say the bill is expected to receive quick approval on the House floor.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Chalmers P. Wylie, R-Ohio, is scheduled to be brought up Monday under emergency procedures that would require a two-thirds majority of those voting.

The congressional aides, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that if passed in the House, the bill would go to the Senate where the Republican leadership has agreed to put it up for a quick vote later this week.

Burton C. Wood, a lobbyist for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, expressed optimism that the bill would be approved by Congress this week.

"We are extremely hopeful that it will be worked out as speedily as possible to restore calm and order to the market and put the Ginnie Mae program back in business," Wood said.

The measure would also raise FHA's authority to insure mortgages from $57.4 billion to $95 billion. The surge in mortgage refinancing that began last month when interest rates fell below 10 percent also threatens to deplete FHA's current insurance authority by next month.

Ginnie Mae President Glenn Wilson said mortgage bankers still have enough guarantee commitments that were made before April 4 to float securities for at least another 30 days.

Wilson declined to say whether President Reagan would sign Wylie's bill, noting that "it does not include some of the things we would have liked to have at least considered."

The White House Office of Management and Budget is drafting a bill that would only raise Ginnie Mae's commitment authority to $87 billion and FHA's insurance authority to $82 billion.

The administration proposal, outlined by Housing Secretary Samuel R. Pierce during a recent appearance on Capitol Hill, would restrict FHA mortages to people whose annual income is below $40,000.

It would also prohibit the use of FHA-guaranteed mortages to finance vacation homes or properties purchased as investments. Pierce said the lower authorization levels for Ginnie Mae and FHA would be sufficient if Congress adopted the administration's proposed restrictions on FHA mortgages.

In the meantime, the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) and the Federal National Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac) have offered to package mortgage-backed securities normally guaranteed by Ginnie Mae. But Wilson and other industry officials say it is too early to tell what impact these offers have had on the mortgage securities market.

Firestone Closes Georgia Plant

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Workers at the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.'s sprawling plant here picked up their last paychecks as the 18-year-old tire factory officially shut down, leaving many with little hope of finding comparable jobs.

"It's a sad day," Christine Cason, who had worked at the plant for 12 years, said Friday.

Because of the plant's $55 million annual payroll, the shutdown is viewed as a major economic blow for Albany, a city of about 75,000 that already is plagued by high unemployment. Firestone's union workers averaged $13 per hour, considerably higher than their counterparts at most other factories in largely rural southwest Georgia.

Early last year, employment reached a peak of 2,050 at the 1.7-million-square-foot plant, which produced about 23,000 passenger car tires daily. The number of jobs has been declining since Firestone announced the shutdown in September, citing import competition and other economic factors.

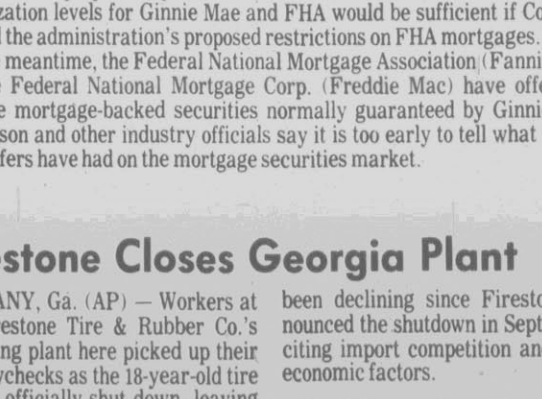

Plant Manager Jerry Wolf said only about 300 workers remained Tuesday when the plant produced its last tire, but about 150 will continue working for a few more months to assist in shipping equipment to other Firestone plants.

Workers returning for the final day Friday picked up their paychecks at tables set up near the front gate.

Many said they went to work for Firestone right after high school and expected to remain until retirement.

Raccoon Dogs Are Unlike Most Other Dogs

By BARBARA S. MOFFET
National Geographic News Service

HANOVER, N.H. — From the side, it looks like a short, pudgy dog with pointy ears and nose and salt-and-pepper coat. Face to face, it's pure raccoon.

Its black face mask is one reason the animal is known to Western scientists — the few who study it — as the racoon dog. And although it's a member of the Canidae, or dog, family, some of its habits are uncannily racoonlike.

In Japan, one of its native lands, it's more folk hero than canine. The Japanese believe raccoon dogs, which they call tanukis, to be crafty and magical, able to vanish and reappear in different forms. Grotesque carvings of the tanuki depict the animal as a fertility symbol, standing on hind legs, bearing a scroll in one pay and a jug of sake in the other, with enlarged sex organs and an enormous belly.

Prowl By Night

The Japanese say tanukis revel by the light of the new moon, and they may be right. Raccoon dogs are mostly nocturnal, and until recently no one knew much about their activities at night — or during the day. Two American scientists, Dr. Doris Wurster-Hill of Dartmouth College and Dr. Oscar Ward of the University of Arizona, have spent months trailing the racoon dog, but a host of curiosities remain:

•Although the racoon dog is definitely considered a dog, it doesn't act much like one. It is most active at night; is partial to river valleys and lakes (as are raccoons); devours nuts, berries, and fish but will raid garbage cans; climbs fences rather than jumps them, and doesn't bark. When retreating, however, it often steals a backward glance at its pursuer, in the manner of a coyote. And in winter, it dens up for semihibernation, somewhat like a bear.

•Raccoon dogs can live almost anywhere, from tropical rain forests to Siberia. Yet no one knows their actual range today. Native to Southeast Asia, China, and the Soviet Union, they were introduced by the thousands in the 1920s to Eastern Europe and Finland as fur bearers. (Raccoon dog coats are still sold, sometimes as "Asiatic raccoon.") In recent years, individual raccoon dogs have been sighted as far south as Vietnam and as far west as Switzerland and England.

•While some scientists consider it a primitive dog — raccoon dog fossils from China date to the Pliocene — others believe it's most closely related to foxes. And although classified as one species, the raccoon dog is actually five separate races, two of which are genetically distinct. The number of chromosomes — the blueprint for heredity found in the cells of living creatures — is only about 38 to 42 in the Japanese dogs, compared with 56 chromosomes per cell in those from Finland.

Chromosome Puzzle

The average number of chromosomes also varies from dog to dog and from cell to cell within individual raccoon dogs from Japan, an abnormal situation for mammals. The Japanese dogs also possess from two to five extra chromosomes, whose function is a puzzle, and some of the dogs bear an oddly shaped X chromosome.

•Some reference books have listed the raccoon dog as nearly extinct, yet Ward and Wuster-Hill encountered numerous tales of Japanese farmers shooting the animals as pests. In one of the two research sites, a different raccoon dog was trapped every night.

•The scant scientific literature on the dogs reports "fainting when frightened," and that's almost accurate. Ward reports that though the dogs were feisty and hissing like a cat during capture, "they grew passive and quiet in our arms, apparently with a lowered heart rate. It was as if they were afraid to offend."

Hoping to unravel some of the raccoon dog's secrets, Wurster-Hill and Ward chose two Japanese islands — Honshu and Kyushu — for their study, which was supported by the National Geographic Society and Earthwatch. Scientists presume the animals traveled to the islands over an ancient land bridge from mainland Asia.

The study sites, separated by more than 1,000 miles of mountains and water, were contrasting raccoon dog habitats. Though low in elevation, the site on northern Honshu was steeply mountainous, covered with hardwood forests, while the Kyushu site was a 3,000-foot-high platform studded with steaming volcanoes and thick with bamboo undergrowth.

The research teams battled typhoon rains, dense fog, snow, and always the inky night. "In the northern site, the innkeepers didn't understand what we were doing," recalls Wuster-Hill, who is a specialist in chromosomal studies. "Instead of going to bed at night, we put on coats and went out."

Pursuit Through Bamboo

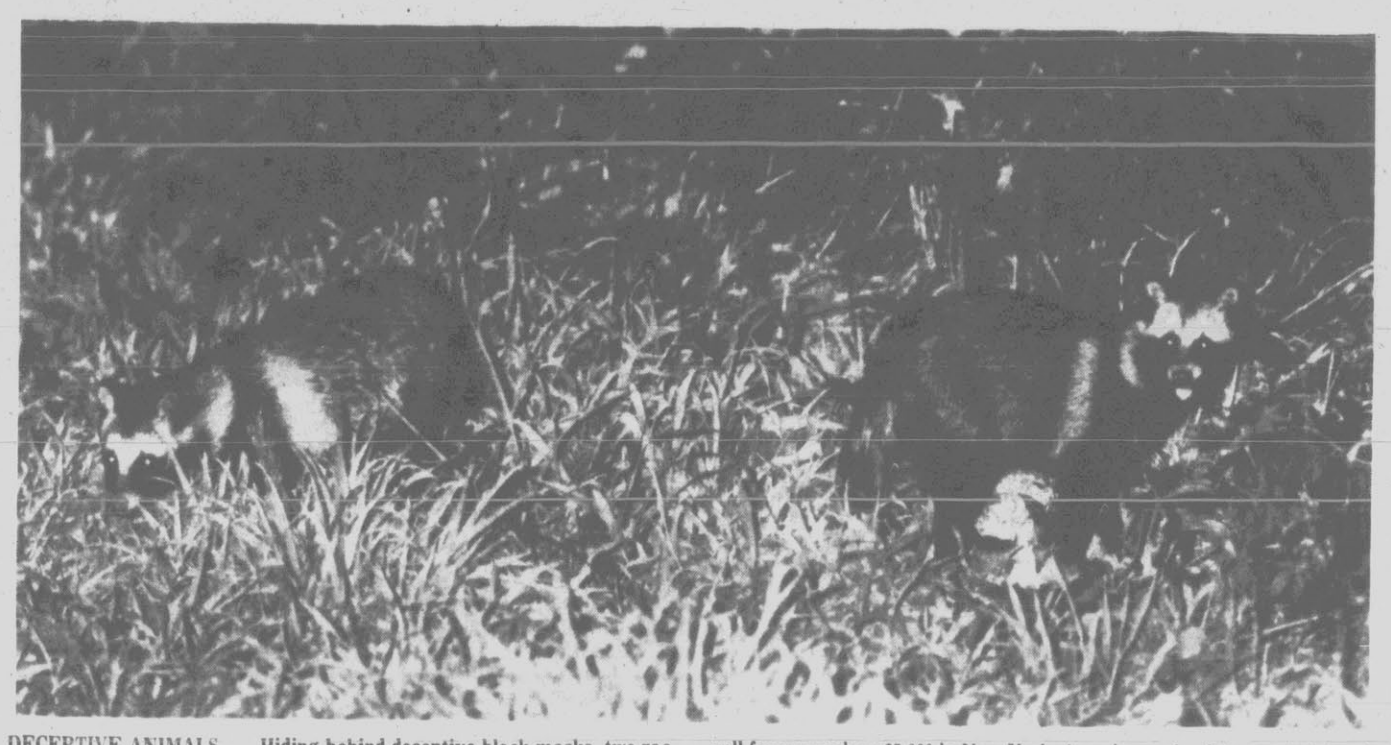

The scientists spent nearly sleepless nights hiking vertical terrain or crawling through dense bamboo in pursuit of a dog, regularly checking traps that had been baited with cooked chicken heads (a raccoon dog favorite). If a dog was snared in one of the traps, the scientists would retrieve it, transport it on foot to a cabin, where under car headlights it was examined, measured and biopsied. Skin samples had to be rushed to an airport by 7:30 the next morning to go to a laboratory for analysis.

Meanwhile, the dog was fitted with a radio collar so it could be tracked electronically through the woods. And its belly and legs were dusted with fluorescent powder so that as it traveled the undergrowth, it left a trail.

In all, 13 dogs were captured, fitted with collars, and released. Analysis of data from this preliminary study is not complete, but it appears that Japan's raccoon dogs are more active during the day then previously believed, and less solitary. The scientists would pick up simultaneous signals of a male and female dog, indicating they were together outside of mating season.

The animals seem to have a loose system of territories for resting; on Kyushu especially, each animal remained in a fixed area, with little overlap. And though they're generally sedentary, one monitored dog wandered at least 10 miles in 24 hours.

Wuster-Hill and Ward hope results of the chromosomal analysis and future field work will explain exactly where in the dog family the raccoon dog fits. And, they would like to discover other raccoon dog races that bridge the chromosomal gap, from 38 to 56. Or, they wonder, has the missing link magically vanished, in the style of the tanuki?

DECEPTIVE ANIMALS . . . Hiding behind deceptive black masks, two raccoon dogs prowl in Japan. Although they look and act much like raccoons, they are actually members of the canine family. Wild raccoon dogs range from the tropics to Siberia. Others are raised on farms in Finland; their coats sell for as much as $5,000 in New York. American scientists are studying the Japanese raccoon dog's habits and a genetic makeup that sets it apart from the rest. (Photo By Shin Yoshino, Orion Press)

A Rarely Seen Loner, Pikas Live In High Places

By JOY ASCHENBASCH
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Unless you travel in high places, you probably won't come across the pika, a small grayish-brown mammal related to the rabbit, but with short, rounded ears, no visible tail, and no hop.

The best-known species, Ochotona princeps, popularly called rock rabbit or little chief hare, lives in boulder chinks on mountain slopes in western North America, and is usually seen scurrying about gathering grasses into bushel-size haypiles for winter food. This solitary creature gives the pika its reputation as a loner.

First to Study

Wildlife ecologist Andrew T. Smith of Arizona State University and psycholigist Harriet J. Smith, his wife, in 1984 became the first Western scientists to study the black-lipped pika.

They discovered a more sociable animal. "At least 50 times more social," Andrew Smith says. "The North American pika is almost as asocial as any mammal every studied. This Asian species may be one of the most social of mammals."

In a lush meadow on the shore of Qinghai Lake in western China, Smith watched pikas rub noses, crawl all over each other and roll across the grass, sit side by side for long periods of time, playfully wrestle and box, groom each other, and frequently communicate vocally with a large repertoire of six or seven calls, whines and trills.

In the nine summers he spent observing the other pikas in the Sierra Nevada and Rocky Mountains, Smith witnessed almost no social contact among the animals, except during breeding season, and a limited repertoire of calls, primarily to signal territoriality or warn of predators. Vulnerable to predators, the pikas rarely ventured far from their niches in the rocks.

"There was nearly always something happening out on the meadow in China. A young juvenile pika would make a call, and three or four others would run up to it, almost mob it. Each pika would crawl on the back of the other and roll across the meadow," Smith reports.

Most of the calls were made by the young, and seemed purely social. Harriet Smith kept track of them and recorded about 1,800 sounds. "They captured her heart," her husband says.

Pikas live much closer together in China. The population density averages 100 (up to 380) animals per hectare (2.5 acres), compared with only 8 to 10 animals per hectare in the North American mountains.

Pests on Plateau

Pikas are so numerous that on the Tibetan Plateau they are considered a primary pest species, eating grass needed for yaks, sheep, and horses, Smith says. His study site, several miles from the village of Black Horse River, is one of the last accessible areas in which poison has not been heavily used for pest control.

The two scientists were allowed to work undisturbed. Tibetans were often grazing sheep and yaks on the same meadows. Sometimes, when the Smiths were sitting on the edge of a ravine observing the ear-tagged pikas through binoculars, three or four Tibetan boys would sit down next to them, watch, and never say a word.

For Smith, the biggest scientific surprise was the pikas' apparent monogamy, rare among mammals. "With the high density and flat meadow, why shouldn't the males mate with as many females as they can?" he wonders.

Instea, the pikas break into family groups of one male and one female. "This is a tremendous exception to the conventional mating-system theory. Similar mammals in similar habitats would be polygynous," Smith says.

He says he cannot yet explain the phenomenon, and plans further field study. His research, supported in part by the National Geographic Society, is conducted in cooperation with the Northwest Plateau Institute of Biology in China.

Young Live Apart

One reason black-lipped pikas may stay in social family groups, Smith says, is their burrow habitat, similar to a ground squirrels'. The North American pikas are individually territorial; male and female have separate turf. The young live on the territory, but far apart.

The pikas in China also have more litters per year — and larger ones, double the size of their North American relatives. Because of more favorable climate, they can obtain food year-round and do not have to store it in haypiles.

Pikas probably originated in Asia and came across the vast Bering land bridge, which linked Siberia and North America millions of years ago. The name "pika" is an Eastern Siberian tribal work that mimics a sound the animal makes. Fifteen or 16 species of pika are found today in Asia: the only other two are in North America.

Of his China research, says Smith, "I was amazed to see pikas that look almost identical to the ones I knew in the Rockies behave so differently."

Mont Tremblant, Beacon For Skiers

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

STE.-JOVITE, Quebec — From the air, Canada's Laurentian Mountains spread toward the horizon like a vast, crumpled blanket.

Bare knobs of granite push through the green canopy of trees. Lakes polished silver by the sun glitter in every direction. During the snowy winters, the forests stand out as though etched in charcoal.

Standing above it all is Mont Tremblant, which dominates the surrounding landscape, and each winter serves as a kind of beacon for thousands of skiers. Just an hour or two north of Montreal, the Laurentians offer a choice of 30 major ski centers with vertical drops of as much as 2,300 feet.

Continent's First Tow

Special attractions for skiers are a tradition in the Laurentians, where the first rope tow in North America began hauling the hardy as early as 1932. Set up in the small town of Shawbridge, the tow operated through a system of pulleys put in motion by one of the wheels of a four-cylinder Chrysler perched on blocks.

It cost 25 cents a tow, but a public clamor eventually forced the entrepreneur to offer unlimited rides for two dollars a day. When the spring thaw set in, the car was taken off the blocks to double as the town's taxi.

"Nowadays, it's mainly the variety of the terrain that attracts people to the region," says Real Charette, who directed the Snow Eagle Ski School near Ste.-Jovite for 35 years. "The intermediate slopes are ideal for family skiing and for teaching advanced downhillers."

Like Charette, many of the instructors impart a certain Gallic elan with their lessons. French is heard as often as English on the slopes, and it's easy to imagine that one is skiing in the French Alps or Switzerland rather than North America. This illusion is heightened on a snowy evening in the region's small skiing communities, with their log cabins, chalets, and brightly painted wood-frame houses.

The thousands of skiers attracted to the Laurentians each year may not realize it, but they're schussing over some of the oldest rocks in the world.

"Some of the rocks may be 2.5 billion years old, but they were reworked in a new mountain-building process about 1.1 billion years ago, which makes them appear younger," says Dr. Jacques G. Martignole, a University of Montreal geologist. "Two subcontinents may have collided around that time. The result may have been a towering mountain range just north of the St. Lawrence River. The mountains have eroded through the eons."

Lava Worked Upward

Probably as a result of this collision, molten rock from as deep as 100 miles below the earth's surface rose and worked itself into the crust, where it solidified to form large bodies of rock called plutons.

"Plutons of anorthosite rock are commonly referred to as black granite," says Martignole. "Banks up here use it a lot in their interiors and exteriors. It gives them a dignified look."

About 70 percent of the anorthosite plutons in the world are found in Canada, and roughly 30 percent are clustered in eastern Quebec, he estimates.

The largest anorthosite pluton in Laurentine ski country is around Ste.-Agathe-des-Monts. Roughly circular, it covers about 1,600 square miles. Another pluton in the Lac Ste.-Jean region covers about 8,000 square miles, says Martignole.

Concentrations of plutons and much older rocks appear north of the Laurentians, which form the southeastern edge of the immense Canadian Shield.

Sometimes called the Laurentian Highlands, the shield covers 2 million square miles of Canada and the Upper Midwest of the United States. Its ancient core of Precambrian rock—called a shield because of its shape and long stability—forms the heart and foundation of the North American continent.

The shield is so complex that a century of careful study has revealed only a broad outline of its structure. In the heart of other mountain ranges, pioneering geologists saw rocks like those exposed on the shield. These rocks suggested to them that shields may be the worn-down cores of old mountains.

Reduced By Weather

Rain and snow, freezes and thaws, torrents and glaciers reduced the mountaintops. As a result, rocks that had been subjected to heat and high pressure deep within mountain ranges became exposed. These are dismembered parts of the shield.

"Rocks more than 3.5 billion years old have been found in the northeastern part of the shield on the Labrador coast," says Anthony Davidson, a research scientist with the Geological Survey of Canada.

The shield has a lot more to offer than old rocks. Besides being the source of valuable minerals, its surface supports vast areas of commercial timber. And most Canadians can escape into this region of forests, lakes, and ski slopes by traveling less than 100 miles.

A LITTLE ONE . . . Small enough to rest in the palm of one hand, this young black-lipped pika lives on a meadow nearly 11,000 feet high on the Tibetan Plateau in China. Wildlife ecologist Andrew T. Smith, the first Western scientist to study the mammal, discovered a much more social creature than its beter-known North American relatives. His reserach, supported in part by National Georgrahic Society, found that pikas rub noses and roll across the meadow together. (Photo by Harriet Smith)

Book Looks At Southern Marriages In Civil War Times

By MIKE HEMBREE
The Greenville News

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — The Civil War had dramatic and sometimes catastrophic effects on life in the South. Families were torn apart, huge plantation homes were burned to the ground, much of the economy was left in shambles.

But what of that most personal of situations, the marriage? How did it survive the trauma of the times?

Dr. Carol Bleser, a Clemson University professor and a highly respected historian specializing in the South, is researching that topic for a book on Southern marriages in the 19th century.

Ms. Bleser is focusing on the marriages of 10 prominent Southerners, including Confederate Army Gen. Robert E. Lee; Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy; South Carolina Gov. and U.S. Sen. James Henry Hammond; and South Carolina state legislator and provisional governor Benjamin Perry of Greenville.

Using family letters and personal diaries preserved at various universities, Ms. Bleser is gauging the war's effect on family life.

Her research, which is about 40 percent complete, shows that the war generally strengthened the status of the woman in the marriages, Mrs. Bleser said.

"I see women emerging because the South lost the war," she said. "If the South had won the right to be independent, I don't think the same thing would have happened. But the psychological humiliation of seeing your whole world crumble just absolutely destroys the men.

"That didn't happen to the women, and I think that's because the women didn't have as big a stake in it. They were not plantation owners, and they were much more flexible, so they made the adjustment that the men just couldn't make."

In the aftermath of the war, Ms. Bleser said, many women in the upper and middle classes in the South took charge of family businesses and other matters traditionally controlled by the husbands.

Ms. Bleser cited as an example the marriage of Clement and Virginia Clay of Alabama. Clay, a United States senator, was among those whose lives were savaged by the war.

"Virginia Clay was really the Southern belle," Ms. Bleser said. "She didn't have any children, and she was really into the social things. After the war, Clement Clay went to jail with Jefferson Davis, and he was in prison over a year. When he gets out, he takes to drink and falls apart. Mrs. Clay becomes the stronger partner. She ran things.

"Most of these marriages do not fit the Victorian stereotype of the very strong father and the domestic, submissive woman who stayed in their separate spheres," she said. "What I see is people acting together in many ways like couples do today."

Ms. Bleser said her research involves historical devices that historians looking back on the second half of the 20th century will find lacking: letters.

Ms. Bleser said the 18th-century letters generally "show a lot of sentiment. The greatest sentiment is in the courtship letters when they're trying to woo each other. There's a lot of emotional sense in most of the letters. They're not explicit, but it's implicit that they have active sex lives. There's generally a lot of caring and concern shown."

Ms. Bleser and other researchers benefit from the fact that these letters — most of a very personal nature — were saved and preserved. Material from the Clay marriage, housed at Duke University, includes 8,000 letters, but that group is small compared to the vast James Henry Hammond collection stored at the University of South Carolina. It contains 22,000 letters and family diaries.

Ms. Bleser, formerly a professor at Colgate University, used the Hammond letters and diaries in 1981 to produce "The Hammonds of Redcliff," a book widely praised for giving an intimate look into a prominent Southern family.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Using too much painted furniture is another common color mistake. There is a trend toward a washed or pickled pine finish, but even that is more interesting if used in small amounts. These finishes are being applied, for example, to ornate occasional chairs such as Louis 15th or Chinese Chippendale with Ball and Claw feet. Throwing in a chair of this nature in a room with dark cherry can be quiet charming.

A room should have a dominate color in a stain or paint. For example, a girl's bedroom could have the bed, dresser and mirror in white with an armoire in a painted blue color for interest and variety.

Our inventory at Betsy Drake Interiors is now larger than ever with a wide assortment of bedrooms, living rooms, dining rooms and accents. We have also just received a large assortment of original oil paintings in a very reasonable price range of New York and New Orleans artist.

We invite you to come in and browse or if you prefer we will be happy to schedule an appointment in your home or office.

FOCUS On...

D.H. Conley High School

By MICHELLE DEAL

"Our department is excited that we are getting a permanent fixture to house the math classes...the home economics department will be receiving larger facilities; an institutional kitchen will take care of our catoring and our faculty restaurant...The new addition will include three biology I laboratory classrooms which Conley biology teachers planned and designed. The science department looks forward to having all science classes taught in a laboratory situation..."

These are some of the comments from ecstatic teachers concerning the new wing now being added on to D.H. Conley and expected to be in service for the 1987-1988 school year.

Presently, 16 mobile units serve as classrooms outside the main building; the purpose of the new wing is to replace these mobile units. The proposed square footage totals 34,849 which will include 18 classrooms and two bathroom areas.

Previously a study was conducted of the needs of county and city schools. These needs were prioritized and eliminating the mobile units was second on the list. Approximately $1.5 million will cover the total expense of the new wing which is almost equivalent to the cost of the Conley building when originally built. County commissioners have appropriated the money to finance the project.

The addition will provide permanent and improved classrooms for the math, cultural arts, home economics, science and foreign language departments. All math classes will be located in the new area and equipped with eight math rooms, one being a computer room. For the first time since the opening of Conley in January of 1971, the math department will be situated in the building rather than outside in the mobile units.

The cultural arts department will be furnished with a new band room, a choral-dance studio, and an art room. Furthermore, the home economics department will include three rooms, one of which will serve as a sewing lab, one a general classroom and one a foods classroom. Three new science labs and a foreign language classroom will also be provided in the new area.

Construction of the new addition will provide for a better and safer teaching situation. Moreover, additional locker space and restrooms will be furnished. The lunch room facilities will expand into what is now the band room to enlarge cafeteria space. Also, the auditorium will be more serviceable since the cultural arts department will have separate facilities.

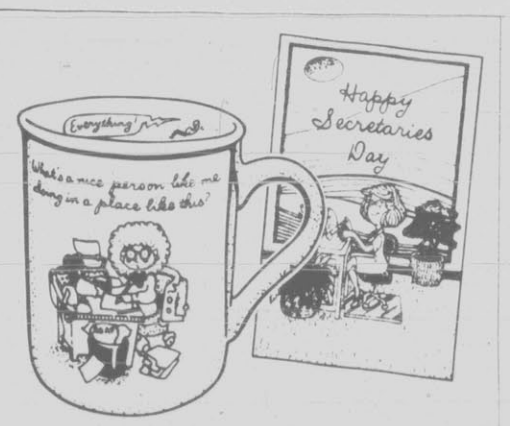

Conley's assistant principal, Mrs. Barbara McLawhorn comments, "The new construction is a much needed replacement for the current mobile units. The administration, teachers and students are thrilled that a new addition will be finally erected. The wing should certainly make for more conducive teaching. Several of the teachers worked hard in helping with the priliminary plans; I appreciate their efforts."

A whole sirloin tip, weighing nine to 12 pounds, is a good buy. Have it cut into roasts, cubes for kabobs and steaks.

SUGGESTIONS ANYONE?

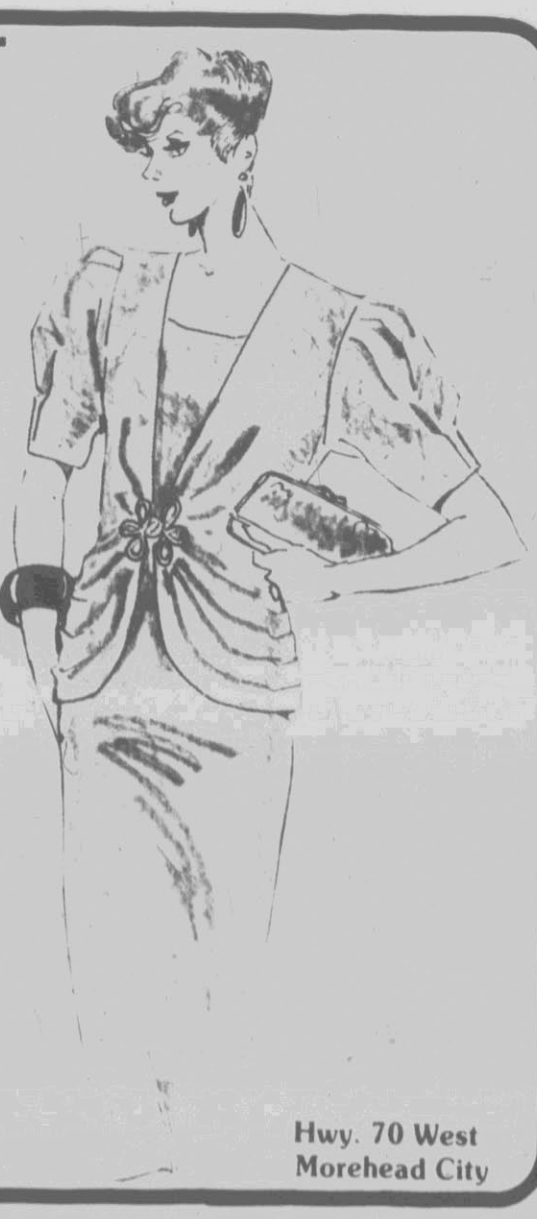

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — More and more companies are turning to their employees for innovative ideas to improve efficiency. And the employees often can earn bonuses by suggesting ways to save money for their companies.

Workers at Phillips Petroleum can earn up to $50,000 in cash and company stock for finding better ways to get the work done while reducing costs. The program is good for morale and "encourages employees to be more involved in the company," says Phil Blackburn, administrator of the suggestion program.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

With all the technology around us, you'd think we'd know more about how children are assembled, but we don't.

We don't know how children can laugh and cry in the same breathless second it takes parents to turn a "yes" into a "no."

We don't know how a child who is three feet tall, in a room with no chairs or ladders, can leave a chocolate handprint on an eight-foot ceiling.

And we have never been able to figure out what triggers those harmless, minor, convenient illnesses that seem to pop up and go away at whim. Many of them have no names, no treatment and no prognosis.

There's the "Test Mystery Virus." This is a temporary condition that occurs quite suddenly on the morning of a test for which a child has not studied. There is general sluggishness accompanied by vagueness. The condition worsens when someone suggests getting dressed. It leaves as mysteriously as it came. Recurrence is likely only if the test has been postponed until the next day.

For sheer quickness of a malady, you can't beat the "Sunday-Buffet-Family-Picnic-Birthday-Party Intestinal Upset." One moment the child will be running around with a plate, stacking it with every food in sight. The next minute he will complain the food does not taste good and he suffers from an acute loss of appetite. If it is suggested he eat what he took, he threatens to throw up. The condition is temporary and usually goes away before the next meal is served.

There is possibly nothing more predictable among children than the occurrence of "Bladder Frequency." It occurs without fail every time you are in the middle of nowhere and there is no bathroom within a 300-mile radius. There is dancing, jumping up and down and general whining that accompanies this condition.

Few parents can explain the "Holiday Syndrome." For some reason, every holiday a child becomes contagious. There are roughly 10 holidays throughout the year (including the child's birthday). There are barely enough rashes to sustain that many holidays. In spite of not only those odds, but the other 355 days they could break out in a rash, it always ends up on a holiday.

Buying cheese in chunks is usually cheaper than buying it already sliced or shreaded.

NEW YORK (AP) — What's in a name?

Enough, it's said, for some fish dealers here to be misnaming species to make them more alluring to buyers. An example would be pollack being sold as blue snapper and mullet sold under the name of fresh bass.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Have Relative Or Friend Move In — Problem Solved

DEAR ABBY: Here's our problem: My 92-year-old aunt is living with my husband and me, and we'd like to get away for a weekend. One of my nieces is willing to take her, but Auntie raises a fuss, saying she will have trouble sleeping. Abby, she has gone on trips with them and other relatives, staying at different motels, and she's never had a problem sleeping then.

My husband is mad. He says my aunt is being selfish and stubborn. Have you a solution?

HERE'S HOPING

DEAR HOPING: Ask a relative, neighbor or friend to move into your home in your absence and stay with Auntie. She will have no trouble sleeping. And neither will you.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have some friends who are champion braggers. They brag about their children and their grandchildren, and as if that's not enough, they carry pictures of their cars, their homes and their boats!

There are other ways of bragging. Some folks "complain" about how much income tax they have to pay. Then there are mothers who "complain" that their telephones ring constantly because their kids are so popular!

Some social types "complain" about being "exhausted" from all the parties they have to go to. (Can't they say no?)

I think there's a lot to be said for modesty. If something worth bragging about happens to me or my family, I just keep quiet about it and let somebody else advertise it.

Oops, I'm sorry. Am I bragging because I don't brag?

MINNESOTA BRAGGER

DEAR BRAGGER: Go ahead and brag about not bragging. You'll not offend anyone—except maybe a few braggers.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Please keep telling young girls to "hold out" for marriage. Once a girl gives in to a guy, he thinks he owns her. Among the high school crowd, boys still talk about easy girls.

I still remember these lines from a song that was popular back in 1930:

"You're the kind of girl men forget.
"When they play,
"'Here comes the bride,'
"You'll stand outside."

I saved this letter from your column; please run it again. I want my granddaughters to see it.

MILLIE

DEAR ABBY: Every once in a while I see letters in your column concerning the pros and cons of remaining a virgin until marriage.

I'm 27 years old, attractive (or so people say) and I'm saving myself for the man I marry. Outside of the fact that premarital sex is morally wrong, here are a few other reasons:

1. I do not have to worry about getting a disease.
2. I do not have to worry about getting pregnant.
3. I do not have to wonder if a guy really cares for me or if he's just using me for sex.

I have been out with many guys who have tried to get me into bed, and after I tell them I am saving myself for the man I marry, I never hear from them again. This is fine with me. Why waste time on a guy who looks at me only as something to be used?

When I get married, I want to give my husband a very special gift, something I've given to no one else I've ever known. What can be more special than myself?

HOLDING OUT AND PROUD OF IT

DEAR HOLDING: Your reasons for "holding out" are valid, sensible and marvelously refreshing!

* * *

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

The percentage of women receiving doctorates has rised from 14 percent in 1970 to 37 percent in 1985.

SHARON ELAINE PHELPS...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Larry Phelps of Route 1, Chocowinity, who announce her engagement to Stuart Dameron Flanagan, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Leland Flanagan of Route 1, Bath. A June 21 wedding is being planned.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

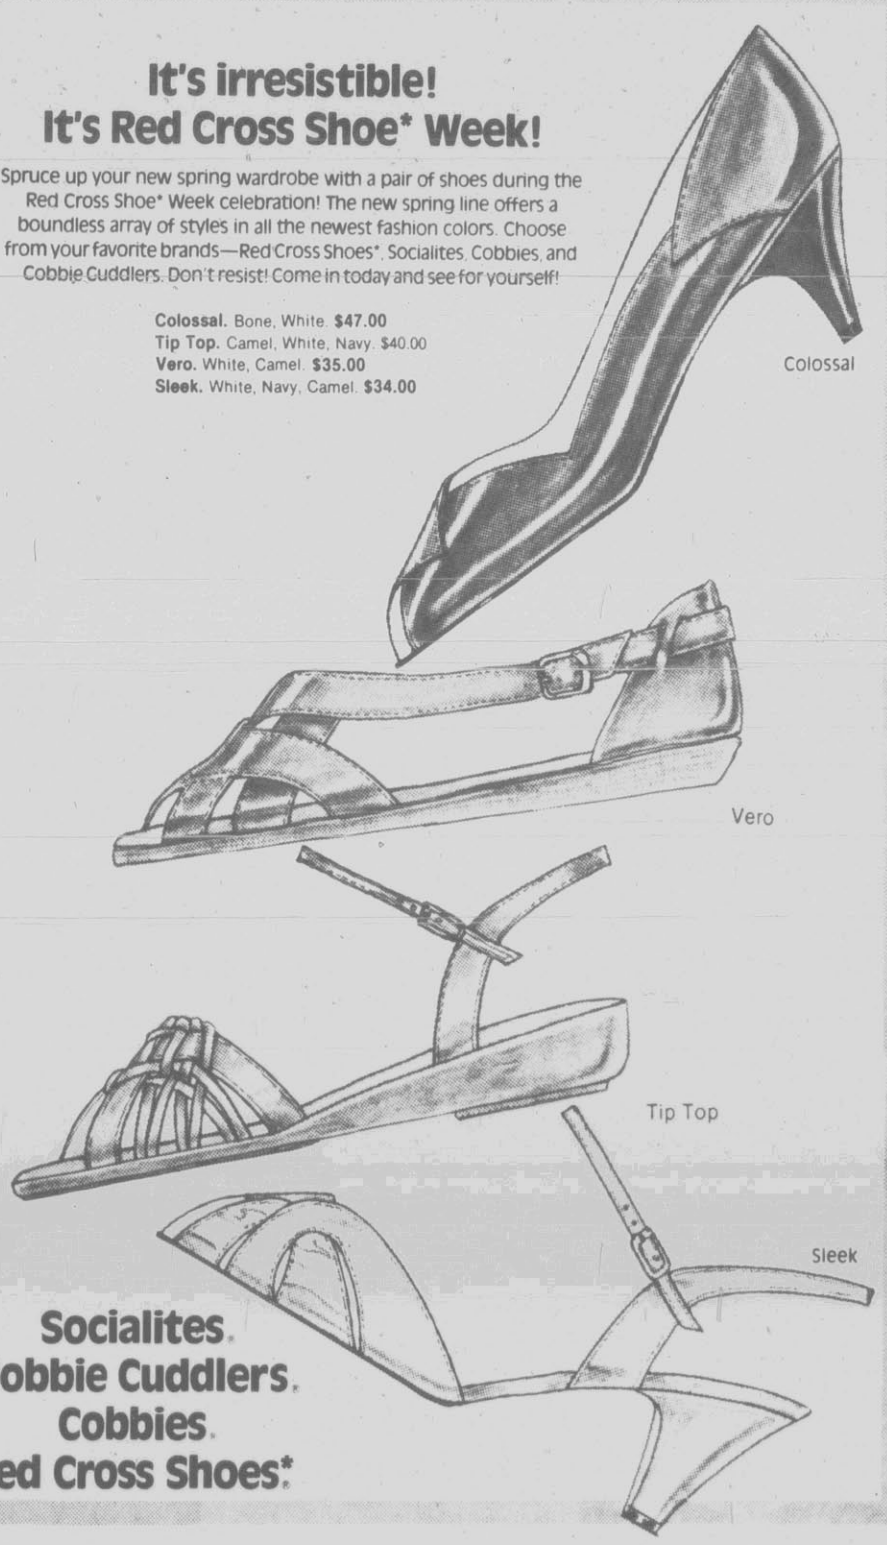

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

A HEALTHY STATE

NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) — If New Jersey's size were equivalent to its importance in the health products industry, the state would cover the entire United States east of the Mississippi.

A study by Hoffmann-La Roche says New Jersey ships almost a quarter of all health products produced in this country and employs a quarter of the nation's health product workers. More than a quarter of the drug research conducted in the U.S. is done in New Jersey.

SECRETARIES GROUP CHOOSES THEME FOR NATIONAL WEEK

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Professional Secretaries International has chosen the theme "Expanding Our World" for Professional Secretaries week April 20-26. Officials note it will emphasize global recognition of secretaries and their changing duties and responsibilities in today's automated office.

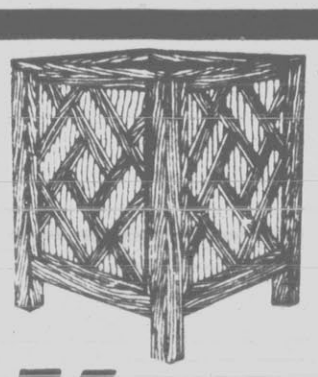

"Flowers, candy and lunch are not the focal point of Professional Secretaries Week; educational development and professionalism are," says PSI president Carolyn S. Hayes, pointing out that "the commercialism has been inspired from outside the ranks of secretaries.

"This year's theme re-emphasizes the twofold purpose of Professional Secretaries Week: to increase public awareness of the vital role played by secretaries in business, industry, education, government and the professions; and to reaffirm the dedication of secretaries to professional performance of their responsibilities," she adds.

The City has published a number of revised informational brochures on City services and boards and commissions. For a free copy, contact the City Manager's Office at 752-4137.

San Francisco Artist To Install Work In Old ECU Cafeteria

David Ireland of San Francisco, an environmental artist, will construct an environmental installation in a room of the Old Cafeteria Building on the campus of East Carolina University.

The construction begins on April 28 and is expected to conclude May 2. Ireland will be assisted by undergraduate and graduate students.

Ireland will present a public lecture on April 28 in Room 1220 of the Leo W. Jenkins Fine Arts Center, and will be honored with a reception on May 2 in the Old Cafeteria Building when the installation will open for viewing.

Ireland's visit is funded by the National Endowment for the Arts through Gray Gallery, located in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center.

"David Ireland is considered to be an environmental artist because he changes the environment," said Perry Nesbitt, Gray Gallery director. "ECU is allowing him to add and subtract to the structural elements of the room, which has some very interesting architectural features."

The room contains a fireplace, granite floors and arched windows. "The room is decaying, but it contains some good raw material," Nesbitt said. "I have seen other pieces he has done, and I thought the elements in this room might jog him in some way."

Ireland's structure will be temporary, Nesbitt said, since the university plans to restore the room.

Ireland earned a bachelor's degree in 1953 from the California College of Arts and Crafts, where he studied industrial and stage design. In 1974 he received his master of fine arts degree in printmaking from the San Francisco Art Institute.

Public and institutional works of the artist include "Jade Garden" in Washington, "Candlestick Park" in San Francisco, "Gallery" in Boston, "Reformatory" in Monroe, Wash., and "Barracks" in Fort Barry, Calif.

His works have been exhibited at the New Museum of Contemporary Art, White Columns Gallery and the Mo David Gallery in New York City; Emily Carr College of Arts in Vancouver, Canada; Leah Levy Gallery, 80 Langton Street Gallery, 65 Capp Street, Mr. Gordons Birthday Party and the Museum of Conceptual Arts in San Francisco.

He received the National Endowment for the Arts Artists Fellowship Grant in 1978 and 1983. In 1982 he received the Artist of the Year Award from the Contemporary Arts Council of Oakland Museum.

He has served as a visiting artist at the San Francisco Art Institute, Emily Carr College of Art, the University of California at Berkeley, the Massachusetts College of Art in Boston, Harvard School of Landscape Architecture in Cambridge, MIT, and the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art.

Italian artist Michelangelo was born in 1475.

New Stamps In The News

BY SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Halley's Comet has landed on the stamp world.

Many nations are issuing stamp sets honoring the return of Halley's Comet with the designs depicting Sir Edmund Halley, ancient astronomers, modern space explorations and even famous people in history whose stories have been connected with the much publicized comet.

One of the nations issuing a stamp set for this auspicious occasion is Antigua and Barbuda. There are four stamps and a souvenir sheet in the set.

The 5-cent stamp shows a portrait of Halley, the English astronomer who computed the cycle of the comet that now bears his name. Also seen is a view of the old Greenwich Observatory in Greenwich, England.

The 10-cent illustrates the first rocket plane experiment by the Germans during World War II. The 60-cent pictures Montezuma, the Aztec emperor who lost his realm to the Spanish conquistadors. Montezuma, according to Aztec history, was disheartened after seeing the comet in 1517.

The $4 stamp features the Indian Princess Pocohontas who saved the life of Capt. John Smith in 1607 when the comet appeared. The Indians called it the "Red Knife" comet. The souvenir sheet features this year's comet as it appears over English Harbour in this Caribbean island.

The U.S. Postal Service announced the issuance of the 22-cent commemorative stamp honoring composer and band leader Duke Ellington. As previously reported in this column, the Ellington stamp is in the Performing Arts series.

Ellington has been credited with creating the single most durable body of original jazz music. He brought listening and dancing pleasure to millions worldwide with his style of sophisticated swing.

First-day cancellations are available in the usual two methods.

Collectors who wish to affix their own stamps may purchase them at the local post office and apply to their own envelopes. No remittance is required. Send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Duke Ellington Stamp, Postmaster, New York, NY 10001-9991.

Playground Design By ECU Design Students

ECU News Bureau

The Wahl-Coates designs were part of a "real world" design project undertaken by the ECU students as part of their studio work. It presented several major "challenges," according to ECU assistant professor Mindy Machanic, studio instructor.

The children for whom the project is intended range in chronological age from six to 12 years, but developmentally, their age is much younger, she said. "The students had to design for normal-sized children who probably would not have the understanding or attention span of other children," Ms. Machanic noted. "Another challenge was that the playground under consideration would be used by children with physical handicaps. Play safety was a prime design consideration."

Besides use factors, the students were told to devise equipment with financial constraints in mind; most of the play equipment was to be constructed with donated materials.

The project was coordinated with Denise Horner, Wahl-Coates special education teacher. Ms. Horner and Ms. Machanic said they hope that local businesses and charitable organizations will provide the materials to build and furnish the proposed play facility.

Earlier this spring, the environmental design studio produced design modifications for hallways at the Regional Rehabilitation Center. "This is part of a new direction some of our students may follow, in design for special-needs populations," said Ms. Machanic.

MET HAS NEW WING

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch and Museum Director Philippe de Montebello recently unveiled the Metropolitan Museum of Art's new, 110,000-square-foot southwest wing that will house the museum's extensive collection of 20th-century art.

The wing is to be known as the Lila Acheson Wallace Wing in honor of the $11 million gift of the late Mrs. Wallace to the $26 million project and the endowment she created to ensure the wing's operation.

The new wing was designed by the architectural firm of Kevin Roche John Dinkeloo and Associates. The basic construction has been completed, and the wing will open to the public in February 1987. It has large, day-lit galleries on the top level; storerooms, study room and offices on the mezzanine, and small galleries on the first floor. A roof sculpture garden will open in spring 1987.

The museum's 20th-century collection includes about 1,180 paintings, 3,104 works on paper, 373 sculptures and a design and architecture collection comprising 3,564 objects.

The ATW's 'Unsinkable Molly Brown' Is Opening Thursday

"The Unsinkable Molly Brown" is the next musical being presented by The Ayden Theater Workshop, in a production to be given three performances — at 8 p.m. on Thursday and Saturday, and at 3 p.m. on Sunday. All three performances are in the auditorium of Ayden-Grifton High School.

REHEARSAL SCENE . . . Heidi Anderson Lane and John Williams are pictured in a rehearsal scene from the forthcoming Ayden Theater Workshop production of the musical, "The Unsinkable Molly Brown." Performances will be at 8 p.m. Thursday and Saturday and at 3 p.m. Sunday, all in the auditorium of Ayden-Grifton High School. Tickets are $3. (Photo by Glenda Wilkins)

Tickets are priced at $3 per person and are available at the door prior to performance.

Others in the cast are Peggy Russell as society matron Mrs. McGlone; Jess Adkins as the Prince; Sally Bramley as Princess DeLong; Allen Trader as Molly's father, and Ralph Devore, the saloon keeper Christmas.

The story of Molly Brown is one of a young Missouran girl at the turn of the century who dreams of fame and glory. Through good fortune in a silver mine, Molly and her Johnny, at first her love, then her husband, are in a position to turn their attention to the acquisition of a little culture.

This pursuit, however, is strewn with obstacles, especially that of Denver society. Other obstacles arise, particularly when Johnny leaves Molly, but all ends well with the unsinkable Molly fighting to win back her man — in which she succeeds.

Building Schooners

By JOHN DINGMAN
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The days of wooden ships are on the way back to the Mississippi Gulf Coast, as two veteran Biloxi boat builders prepare to build and race a pair of schooners.

The ships, to be built with public contributions, will become part of the Seafood Industry Museum in Biloxi, which opened recently.

They will be constructed by a pair of Biloxi men, Neil Covacevich and Bill Holland, who are aiding in the drive to raise money for the schooners, which will cost about $100,000 each.

"It will be a great thing for the coast to have the old schooners back," said Covacevich, whose family has been in boat building since the 1800s.

He will design one boat and Holland will prepare his own version of the boat with the first race scheduled for Labor Day, 1987.

"We accept this challenge because we want to prserve these special boat building skills on the Mississippi Coast," Holland said.

Covacevich saihe's especially glad to see a revival of wooden boats, harkening back to the days when his father and grandfather were in the business.

In recent years, he said, most boats have been aluminum or fiber glass, but with rising costs, more and more people are turning to wooden boats, even for such things as cabin cruisers.

"A good wooden boat will last," he said. "I'm doing some repairs on one built in 1933, and it's in fine shape."

The schooners the two men will build will be more than toys for the races.

They will be used for shrimping in the season, and other times they will be used to carry passengers around the harbor or on charter trips.

Covacevich says it's too soon to know how many passengers they will be able to carry on such trips.

"We will submit our plans to the Coast Guard and they will determine the capacity allowed," he said. The Coast Guard also will keep close watch on the construction, to make sure the proper materials are used, and that all specifications are met.

The schooners will be a maximum of 50 feet long and 17 feet wide, wth diesel engines as auxiliary power.

"Gasoline engines are banned on passenger carrying vessels because of the fire risk," he said.

The Coast Guard also will determine the size of the crew needed.

He said in the old days with center boards, a large crew was needed. But with the modern weighted keels, he estimates racing crews will number about ten people.

The two highest contributors will have the privilege of naming the schooners, and the next ten highest will be among the crew members.

Covacevich says the $100,000 price is only an estimate for the schooners. He said the exact cost will determined when they are complete.

He said the builders will use construction crews of about five men each, with completion taking about six months from the day they start.

Although Mayor Gerald Blessey is enthusiastic about the project, he emphasizes that no city money will be involved.

"This is strictly a volunteer community project," he said.

Although a lot of money is involved, Covacevich has no doubt the community will meet the goal.

Then, he and Holland will do their part in bringing back wooden ships and billowing sails to the Gulf Coast.

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

Central America Topic Of Debate

Col. Samuel T. Dickens, an advocate of American intervention in Central America, and opponent David MacMichael, will debate at 8 p.m. today in Hendrix Theatre. "Central America and the United States: the Debate of the Eighties," will be presented by the East Carolina University Student Union Forum Committee.

The debate is free and open to the public.

Dickens retired as a U.S. Air Force colonel after 28 years of service. MacMichael is a former CIA contract employee and Estimates Officer with the Analytic Group of the National Intelligence Council (NIC/AG) in the CIA.

Dickens is the director of Inter-American Affairs and editor of Radio Free Americas for the American Security Council Foundation. The radio program, broadcast in Spanish, airs in Central America, South America and 10 major U.S. cities.

Dickens is dedicated to educating the U.S. public about the challenges facing the U.S. in the Caribbean and Central America. His most recent trip was to El Salvador for last year's presidential elections where he met with candidates Jose Napoleon Duarte and Robert D'Aubuisson.

MacMichael questions the information relayed to the American public. As an officer in the Analytical Group, MacMichael regularly reviewed raw intelligence information from Central America. He charges that no significant arms flow from Nicaragua existed after the spring of 1981, following strong pressure by the U.S. He also charges that although the decision to provide $19 million for an arms inter-diction operation to support the cause for such operation.

After visiting Nicaragua, MacMichael's convictions remained unchanged. He went public with his beliefs because he fears the U.S. will eventually be forced into military intervention. In the July 17, 1984 edition of "The New York Times," MacMichael writes, "In my experience, analysis (of intelligence information) was strained and even distorted in the effort to convince those in Congress, the public and the press who might have doubted the foundation of the policy."

Another argument in the December 23, 1985 issue of "Business Week" suggests that the U.S. is wasting money with the contras. Also, in the February 3, 1986 issue of "Time," it was mentioned that because of the Gramm-Rudman cutbacks in foreign aid appropriations, giving more to the contras would be at the expense of other nations.

A Review

First Novel Has Promise

SANDMAN'S DUST. By Melvin Jules Bukiet. Arbor House. 234 Pages. $15.95.

Really fine first novels are extremely rare and probably can be counted on the fingers of one hand. A lot of these initial efforts are pretty dreadful stuff, but there are some that are passable.

"Sandman's Dust" by Melvin Jules Bukiet is passable. Although the author's technique is a bit clumsy at times, Bukiet does do a nice job of spinning his themes of youth, innocence and the universal presence of evil into a pleasant reading experience.

Set in the small, rural town of Norma, N.J., a place where the major local concern is raising chickens and selling eggs, the book's plot concerns Lillian Bloom, a pretty 16-year-old, with a passion to escape her surroundings.

Why? "Because I do the same things every day and see the same people and now that summer's here nothing's going to change because nothing ever changes here. Because I'm bored and I want magic."

She gets her desire June 7, 1941, when the circus comes to town. She also gets magic, because this is no ordinary circus. It is a circus of evil, and in her pursuit of wider horizons Lillian nearly gets herself killed.

The story also concerns the girl's parents and her near-comatose aunt who does little but sleep and has been doing so for many years. This is the lesser part of the plot and while it has its moments it makes for rather dreary reading at times.

Parallels On the Fate Of Birds, Men

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The quetzal, the Mayans' fabulous bird of life, faces extinction. The vulture, the universal bird of death, thrives.

In Jonathan Maslow's venture in "political ornithography," the fate of the quetzal and the vulture are a starting point for understanding Guatemala, until recently governed by one of the hemisphere's most repressive military regimes.

"If you want to know Central America, someone ought to peek beyond the dictators and the dominoes, to the ways living things relate to their environment," Maslow writes in "Bird of Life, Bird of Death" (Simon and Schuster, $17.95).

"What befalls birds as different as the Quetzal and the zopilote (vulture) reflect and foretell what happens to humans: In the short run, ecology is natural history; in the long run, it's more like prophecy."

Happily, the book is somewhat out of date. Vinicio Cerezo, a 43-year-old Christian Democrat, took office in January as Guatemala's first civilian president in 15 years. He abolished police units notorious for violence and theft, named a new defense minister and has begun investigations of corruption within the government.

"Generally speaking, the soldiers seem to be back in the barracks, so you can't help but be encouraged," said Maslow, who recently revisited Guatemala. "In Central America, you look at things day by day. If people can have one crop, or a few days without being harassed, that's an improvement," he said in a telephone interview from his home in Dennisville, N.J.

The tragedies of repression, poverty and abuse of the land in Guatemala are centuries old, and not solved simply by changing government. For the bird of life, the outlook is no brighter than it was in 1983 when Maslow ventured into the highlands.

It happened to be the rainy season, and the Guatemalan government, then headed by Gen. Efrain Rios Montt, a Bible-thumping evangelical, would only give Maslow a 30-day visa.

"The season was wrong, the timing was wrong, the political situation was wrong," Maslow said, "But when you see that bird it's almost like being in a dream."

The male bird, with its flowing tail feathers, is especially splendid.

"His colors ignited in the sun, emerald green changing to gold green, then to an iridescent green that defies any name but quetzal green," Maslow wrote of his first sighting. "I was practically unaware of time, frozen in ecstasy: I had never seen a more deliciously feathered creature."

He and a photographer friend found the brilliant green quetzals holding on in dwindling areas of cloud forest. The bird's range, however, has shrunk from 11,600 square miles to less than 1,000 square miles, and Indian farmers hack away at what's left to plant their corn.

"There won't be any irmpovement in the bird situation until there is a real land reform in Central American, and they have a real management plan for their resources," Maslow said.

In 1983, Maslow found few reasons for optimism in Guatemala and endless ground for despair. Some of his most compelling bird-watching was done at a garbage dump in Guatemala City, where poor people fought it out with the vultures.

"Directly below, an indelible scene spread out like a ghastly mural of hell's mess hall: hundreds of men, women, children, vultures, dogs and rats, all gathered round the open ends of the yellow garbage trucks, waiting for the raw slop the crews were shoveling off. The competition for anything edible was intense. Vultures dive-bombed, carrying their prizes off a safe distance before digging in. The humans didn't bother with such niceties. They ate directly from the mounting piles under the truck gates, or climbed right into the truck beds and rummaged through the debris. Fights broke out, and people wrestled in mounds of wet, smoldering garbage."

Another time, lost in what seems to be an endless shantytown, where naked kids played on dirt streets eroded by rivulets of sewage, Maslow exclaims: "How do poor people take it? Why don't they burn the whole thing down and start over again? What have they got to lose?"

At other times, however, Maslow is an amused observer of the oddities of Guatemalan life: lazy bureaucrats who summon secretaries to dial their telephones; an excruciatingly well-run Exxon station where 14 able-bodied men — not counting the owner and the girl at the car wash — attended to filling and primping his car; guerrillas who come out of the mountains in search of medicine but settle for chicken to go, and an inept Peace Corps volunteer suffering from homesickness and diarrhea.

There are many miles between the squalor of the Guatemala City and the tranquility of the remaining cloud forest, however, Maslow illustrates that it is all one ecological system, a system which unites highlands and lowlands, and Central America with the United States.

"I think people are becoming more aware that the birds they see around their houses in the summer are in another part of the continent during the migration season," he said. "Many of our favorite species spend the winter in Central America and South America. And it is interesting and important to know what happens in those places."

Excerpts From The Book

By The Associated Press

From "Bird of Life, Bird of Death," by Jonathan Evan Maslow:

"Now Don Alfredo sat gloomily on his bed in Mateo's lodge, considering once again how to salvage Chelem-ha from the conflict, hunger, overpopulation, ignorance, deforestation, demoralization, persecution, and every other human, historic, and natural tragedy you could name, all of which surrounded the single mountain ridge, closing in fast. He began reasonably enough: 'It's prohibited to burn the forest for milpa (corn) without a license from the department government. To get a license, you need the owner's permission in writing. But nobody from the government ever comes up here to check. The people burn without a license. If each family has 10 or 15 children, half may die, but still they're left with a lot of mouths to feed. This is the real problem here, but nothing's ever done about it. I can't protect Chelem-ha by myself. ...'

"Mateo's son brought us the family's cheap red radio, which picked up Voice of America on medium wave. The announcer droned on incongruously, 'The United States State Department announced today. ...' Something followed about the Communist threat. Nicaraguan expansionism. Cuban terrorism. Soviet intervention. ...

"In a few days' time I'll be back in the United States, I thought, where the gringo gods speak the private langauge of Cold War abstractions. If only Central America were really so simple."

A 14-cent U.S. postal card commemorating the 350th anniversary of the settlement of Connecticut will be released April 18, with first-day cancellation deadline of May 18.

First-day cancellations are available in the two methods.

Among the new nonfiction books at Sheppard Memorial Library is "Raiders And Rebels: The Golden Age Of Piracy," by Frank Sherry. Piracy's "golden age" was 1692-1725. Through his vivid portraits of Blackbeard, Calico Jack Rackam and others, the author advances his idea that men turned to piracy to claim a measure of the freedom otherwise reserved to the wealthy and powerful. In Sherry's view, the pirate "nation" based in Madagascar represented the world's only real democracy of the period.

"Symbols Of America" is Hal Morgan's entertaining survey of familiar American trademarks. The "Visions of America" section features trademarks which have incorporated things distinctly American such as patriotic symbols, indigenous animals, state outlines, famous citizens and legends. "Symbols of Commerce" reproduces the pictures and words which American entrepreneurs have created and evolved to hawk products ranging from hamburgers to computers.

Sylvia Porter's "Love And Money" is a guide to money management for couples who are dating, engaged, married or divorced. Porter and other contributers advise readers about prenuptial agreements, wedding expenditures, insurance, taxes, child-related expenses, major purchases, credit, banking, investing, divorce settlements and the financial aspects of death. Whatever the stage of the romance, couples are encouraged to recognize both the obvious and subtle factors operating in the interaction between their love and their money.

"The Audubon Society Guide To Attracting Birds" presents Stephen Kress' suggestions for making your back yard a more desirable habitat for birds. The author recommends improvements in vegetation, water supplies and houses to provide safe, appealing nesting sites and adequate food. Bird watchers and gardeners will especially appreciate the abundant information about plants with which to landscape for birds.

"Outdoor Drama," by Mary Nordstrom, is a cross-country guide to American symphonic dramas, historical epic dramas, Shakespearean theatres, passion plays, outdoor operas and music theatres which are presented in the open air. For each of 50 outdoor productions, Nordstrom gives a brief description of the play and its staging, often including a photograph of a scene or of the theatre. North Carolina boasts 14 outdoor theatrical productions, 11 of which are featuared in this book.

A Good Rainy Day Book

STONE 588. By Gerald A. Browne. Arbor House. 465 Pages. $17.95.

A novel about a precious stone that heals everything from mental illness to cancer?

It sounds too silly to be read by adults, but, surprisingly, Gerald A. Browne's latest, "Stone 588," manages to be good enough escapist fare, thanks to the author's intelligent and sophisticated prose.

The novel's main ingredients — just like his 1972 bestseller "11 Harrowhouse" — are diamonds, money, lovers, burglaries and psychic powers.

Philip Springer, a New York diamond dealer, owns a stone with lot number 588. The stone, left behind by his late father (who was also a diamond dealer) has been thought to be a flawed and unsellable diamond and has lain around ignored for many years.

Springer, however, becomes aware of the stone's unusual powers when his sister holds it in her hand and is abruptly cured of her manic-depressive disorder. The stone also cures the arthritis of his girlfriend's super rich aunt, proving its healing powers are very real.

One day Springer's offices are robbed, and the remarkable stone is taken as part of the loot. But Springer needs it more than ever now: His young son from a previous marriage has been diagnosed as having a fatal disease.

Will he get the stone back in time to save his son?

But before the pendulum's prophecy comes true, the couple must go through their share of adventures, fending off some very greedy people.

The author seems to have an insider's knowledge of the secretive diamond trade, and it gives the novel glittering originality. Perfect for rainy Sunday afternoon reading.

'Mosquito Coast' Film Shot In Belize

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

BELIZE CITY, Belize (AP) — This tiny nation on Central America's Caribbean coast is broiling as usual under a tropic sun, and is once again a perfect hot property for Hollywood moviemakers.

A few years ago Belize passed for a poor West African country in the movie version of Frederick Forsyth's best seller, "The Dogs of War," about a mercenary band that ousts a greedy dictator.

Now it is the setting for director Peter Weir's "The Mosquito Coast." Based on the Paul Theroux novel, it depicts an eccentric Massachusetts man who moves his family to the Caribbean jungles of Honduras to escape modern life, only to go slowly mad in the tropical heat.

Weir, an Australian who won acclaim in 1983 with "The Year of Living Dangerously," is again working with star Harrison Ford. Both won Oscar nominations this year for "Witness."

The Saul Zaentz Production Co. has budgeted $18 million for the project. About $3 million to $4 million is expected to stay in Belize for its performance as a stifling jungle.

Not a bad piece of a change for the former British Honduras, a nation of 162,000 that gained independence just five years ago and whose government is now trying to raise money by selling citizenship bonds at $25,000 each.

Weir has brought in a crew of about 90, most of them Australians whom he recruited.

"The Australians are used to it," production manager Stewart Krohn said of the debilitating heat. "If the stars have any complaints, I haven't heard them."

Nor will reporters have a chance to ask them. The movie's principals aren't giving interviews, and the main shooting location, at a place about 20 miles outside of town called Gracy Rock, has been put off limits to the curious. The restriction is enforced by armed guards.

For the three-month stay in Belize, which is expected to end in late April or early May, Ford is ensconced aboard a luxurious, white yacht anchored in Belize Bay.

Weir is staying in an apartment in what is probably Belize's best hotel. Ford's co-star, British actress Helen Mirren, is in a leased, private residence.

Crew members, meanwhile, are housed in what generally are conceded to be Belize's second- and third-best hotels. Mice have been seen gamboling in the dining rooms of one or two of those hotels, and the gap between the third-best hotel in town and the fourth best is a yawning chasm.

"The movie has had a disproportionate effect on the local economy because everything is so bad here," said Krohn, a Detroit native who came to Belize 11 years ago and established a small film and television production company.

The lead in "Mosquito Coast" was first offered to Jack Nicholson, who had ably portrayed insanity in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "The Shining." Nicholson was unable to accept because of a filming conflict.

"But that's something that's never mentioned on the set," said Emory King, a production associate on the project. "I haven't heard any backbiting or any knocks against Ford."

Big Piano Demand

By NEAL ULEVICH
Associated Press Writer

PEKING (AP) — The demand for pianos has surpassed supply in China.

"People have more money in their pockets," explains engineer He Renhuang of the Hsinghai Piano Factory in Peking. "After they've bought a color TV, washing machine and refrigerator, they invest in a piano."

As the deputy chief of the factory's "Technical Transformation Office," He is involved in plans to drastically increase production to 6,500 pianos this year.

"We want to build 30,000 a year by 1990," He told a visitor. The plan calls for major purchases of foreign technology.

An upright piano costs 2,000 yuan ($625), which is about two years' pay for the average Chinese urban worker. But many Chinese families have at least two wage earners and sometimes have substantial savings.

The factory, founded in 1949 and one of just four piano factories in China, sold only to state or collective organizations and schools until 1983, when economic reforms put more cash in the pockets of many Chinese.

"In late 1983, individual families began to buy pianos," said He. "We had expected that."

But demand rose quickly after that.

Families, often doting on the single child allowed under China's population control policy, bought the "gang qin" — literally steel-stringed instrument — and squeezed it into often cramped living space.

"At the present there is a wait of at least two years to buy our pianos," He said.

Some members of the group are hearing people who have just learned sign language; some have been signing for a long time; some are staff interpreters, and some are hearing impaired students.

The purpose of the Fantasy group is to make a "fantasy" come true — to make music accessile to those who cannot hear the words that are sung. This is achieved by making music visual through sign language.

3 Ways To Say Charge It
"REACH FOR THE GOOD LIFE"

Thoughts From The Alarm Rock Group

By WALTER BERRY
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Their ringing guitar chords are strikingly similar to U2, their folk songs sound like vintage Bob Dylan and they play with a punkish fury reminiscent of The Clash.

But when it comes to comparisons, The Alarm is quick to sound off.

"I feel a lot of people seem to be comparing us for the wrong reasons. They're comparing us very superficially for what we have to say and what we sound like," lead singer Mike Peters said in an interview.

"There are comparisons definitely with U2 and Big Country and REM and Echo and the Bunnymen and a lot of other groups. We were all sort of subjected to the same onslaught of 1977 when a whole generation was trying to find itself and express itself," he said.

"If you've got something you want to do, you got the power as an individual to go out and do it — and we are. That's where we're all similar. But we sing about our own different lives and our own situations."

The four-member group from northern Wales surfaced in 1981 and now is one of the hottest acts around with their second album, "Strength," climbing the charts. After a two-month tour opening for Pat Benatar, The Alarm started a four-month headlining stint through the United States and Europe on April 12. Peters, 27, and bassist Eddie Macdonald, 26, grew up in the small Welsh coastal town of Rhyl, population 18,000. Guitarist Dave Sharp, 27, and drummer Nigel Twist, 27, are both from Manchester, England.

"Declaration," their debut album on I.R.S. Records in 1984, had the hit "Sixty Eight Guns," which Sharp said is about "young people coming to terms with unemployment in 1968. Society didn't like to see them hanging out in the streets and tried to push them into a corner. They didn't have anybody to turn to so they stuck together because that's all they had."

The title cut, "Strength," off their top-selling album released last year, deals with the same kind of desperation and contains the refrain: "Give me love. Give me hope. Give me strength. Give me someone to live for."

"We've had our own problems to deal with and 'Strength' is inspired by those kind of things," Sharp said. "Everybody's got their own different situations to meet and they've got to find an equal amount of strength within themselves to meet it."

The Alarm's current hit is "Spirit of '76," which Peters said is autobiographical.

"I just tried to go home and write about me and my friends and take a look at what happened in our lives over the last 10 years," he said. "The Spirit of '76 means the Declaration of Independence in America. But in Britain, the young people of our generation struggle for their own independence and they use music as the catalyst for that. It inspires for us all different ambitions.

"For me, it was to go on and become a singer in a band. But in the song, for John and Susie, their dreams never came true. And when things like that happen, you can become very downheartened and embittered and just feel disillusioned with life."

"We're finding out more and more each day as we play our concerts and reach our audiences that there's a common bond there," Peters added. "There might be cultural barriers, political barriers and language barriers, but people still feel the same emotions and react in the same kind of way to whatever's going on around them."

Despite their growing success, The Alarm remembers its humble beginnings. They opened for U2 in 1981 with "no hype and no fanfare of media," Sharp said, and they opened for The Pretenders in 1984.

"We're fortunate to be where we are today," Peters said. "The more we travel around the world, we see a lot of the small clubs closing down — the places where we grew up and learned how to be a band and made all our mistakes. They're fast going out of this world and it's a shame because we get so many young bands giving us demo tapes and they're not going to be given a chance.

"The only way to get a deal these days is to get a polished group and have it all the haircuts looking right. The record company just pushes a button and you're famous overnight. We've come up the hard way and, unfortunately, the hard way is being worked out these days," Peters added. "That's why we're trying to keep things alive by having good support groups wherever we go."

Big Outdoor Beach Music Concert Set For May 4

EMBERS TO PERFORM ... The beach music group the Embers will be one of five bands performing at the second annual Budweiser Beach Blast May 4. The concert will be located at Oakland Grove between Grimesland and Chocowinity. Promoters expect 10,000 people to attend.

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

On a 17-acre farm located near Chocowinity, beneath the shade of peacan trees planted in 1910, eastern North Carolinians will be shagging at on outdoor beach music concert on May 4.

The second annual Budweiser Beach Blast will be held May 4 on Oakland Farm, Oakland Grove. The concert site is located on N.C. 33 between Chocowinity and Grimesland, approximately 10 miles east of Greenville.

The concert, which will be held from noon to 6 p.m., will feature beach music performed by the Embers, the Atlanta Tams, Maurice Williams and the Zodiacs and North Tower.

In case of rain, the concert will be moved to the New Greenville Warehouse on N.C. 33 near Pactolus.

Promoter Clifton Dixon said designated driver tickets are available. "We will have a designated driver ticket that allows six people in for the price of five if the driver pledges not to drink."

Bus transporation also will be available, Dixon said. Bus service will be provided by the East Carolina University student transit.

Seashore Trailways of New Bern will provide round-trip chartered bus service from Wilmington, Durham and Elizabeth City. For ticket information call Seashore Trailways at 1-800-682-4312.

Acccording to Dixon, 50 acres of parking will be available, and a water fountain allow concertgoers to cool off in a pond filled with water from the nearby Tar River.

"I feel like with all the services we are offering the Budweiser Beach Blast can only grow and become one of the largest outdoor events eastern North Carolina has ever seen," Dixon said. His co-promoter is William McCotter.

Dixon said tickets sales are going well, and that he and McCotter expect over 10,000 beach music fans to attend the day-long event.

"We expect heavy response from the Raleigh area with the chartered bus service," Dixon said. "ECU students will have the student transit bringing them, and since it is near the end of school, we think a lot of students will attend."

The concert is sponsored by a local firm.

Compositions By ECU Students To Premiere On Wednesday

Compositions by nine student composers in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will be given premier performances at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in a concert at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

The program is free and open to the public.

• Gordon Nunn — "Three Pieces for Mallets," comprised of "Puesta del sol," "Mysticlal Moments" and "Metal et du bois," to be performed by the composer on marimba and vibraphone.

• Deborah L. Davis — "Corinthians I, 13," to be performed by Charles Edward Maxwell, tenor and Cynthia Bullock, piano.

• Val Parker — "Point of Departure," with ECU faculty member Mark Alan Taggart on the soprano saxophone and a community resident, Lee Ann Peabody-Taggart, piano.

• Anthony de Angelo, "Three Settings for Mezzo-Sorpano and Piano, Opus 1," to be performed by Dove Styers, Jennifer Grum, mezzo-soprano and Warren Bass, piano. The three settings are from poets — "Bad Dreams," Robert Browning, "Rays," Charles Baudelaire, and "Little Air," Stephane Mallarme.

Following an intermission, the five student composers with compositions to be performed are:

• Susan Baird, "The River," an electronically produced sounds piece.

• Micheal Bell, "Requiem, excerpts," electronically produced sounds.

• Jacqueline Fornari — "Traveling," with the composer on flute and Richard Blakemore, trumpet, Carol Craft, Darla Richards and Kim Summers, percussison.

• Angela Hinton — "Spring Qualudes," comprised of three songs, with Charles Edward Maxwell, tenor, Darla Richards, vibraphone, Denise D'Addio, soprano saxophone, Martin Glasco, viola, Jody Patterson, bassoon, with the composer conducting. The three songs are titled "It's the Sun" "The Green Tree," and "It's Spring."

The composers are all students of Mark Alan Taggart. Michael Bell prepared his composition with the assistance of Otto Henry. Drs. Taggart and Henry are both faculty members of The ECU School of Music.

DANCE PROGRAM TO AIR — "Peak Performance: Choreography of a Modern Dance," will air over the UNC Center for Public Television at 3 p.m. April 27. The program is the work of Dianne Markham, dance teacher and choreographer at the North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem. The piece that will be focused on in the program is "Silent Places/The Looking Glass." The program follows the development of the dance from conception to the performance stage.

Young Argentine Dancer Julio Bocca Becoming Ballet Idol

By JUDY CANTOR
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — He was a suave and confident Casanova whose perfect leaps and lifts astounded even the most blase ballet lover as he performed a tango-inspired dance in a Buenos Aires park. Julio Bocca bowed to a carpet of roses as little girls, their mothers and grandmothers pushed up to the stage for a kiss, screaming "Julio! Julio!"

Cries for Bocca have echoed not only in his native Argentina but throughout the international dance world ever since the 18-year-old dancer beat out 112 competitors for the gold medal in the International Ballet Competition in Moscow last spring.

Bocca and his partner, Raquel Rossetti, received a rare invitation from the Bolshoi Ballet to perform as guest solists this May. And Bocca is trying to sort through the avalanche of offers that has come his way from dance companies all over the world.

"My career has developed pretty fast," he said, smiling shyly as he sipped a cup of coffee in a friend's apartment one recent day.

The secure and sexy man of the stage had vanished. Instead, there was a plain boy in jeans and sneakers, his cheeks covered with peach fuzz and traces of adolescent acne.

"For me, dance is life," said Bocca. "You have to give everything you feel and everything you know to the public. ... I don't need anything else; for me it's enough."

Bocca began taking dance classes from his mother when he was 4 years old. They had a studio behind their house in Munro, a suburban community just north of Buenos Aires. His father teaches Argentine folk dance there.

When he was about 10 years old, Bocca began to think of dance as a career and studied more intensely. "I set my mind to the fact that I wanted to do it well and I wanted to be a great dancer," he said.

He trained at Buenos Aires' Colon Theater but found too many structural and administrative problems.

"The main problem we have here is that there are good teachers, ... there are good students, many talents, but there is no discipline. Each of the teachers has their own style. There's no regimen within the school," he said.

So when he was 14, he went to Caracas, Venezuela, to study with a Soviet teacher. "That was when I realized I could do something, at least be in a company."

When he was 16, Bocca was invited to be principal dancer for a season with a Brazilian company. The next year, in 1984, he competed in the international competition in Japan, but was dropped in the second round.

Last year he competed in Moscow, where he and Miss Rossetti won with pas de deux from "Dom Quixote," "The Nutcracker" and a tango. Bocca has since become the youngest principal dancer in the history of the Colon.

The dancer has mixed feelings about his celebrity, which has become so great in Argentina that he must be escorted from the stage by a squad of police officers to protect him from his fans.

"I like it in the sense that there's been recognition, that ballet has been popularized," he said. "It's not only a little group of balletomanes that are following it. It bothers me a bit when people ask me for autographs.

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Hulce remembers last year when he sat in the audience at the Academy Awards as a best-actor nominee for his title role in "Amadeus."

He was relieved and happy when his co-star, F. Murray Abraham, was announced as the winner because the win was for "our team."

"We felt like a team because of where we had worked," Hulce said about filming in Czechoslovakia. "We had drawn close together in a cooperative spirit that made it seem like a small independent company rather than a big production. Everyone was putting out."

Though he knew he wasn't going to win, a few friends told him he should prepare a speech, just in case. "I tried to write something but couldn't. Just before the announcement, I had a split second of terror when I realized I wouldn't know what to say if I did win."

Instead of the $18 million budget of "Amadeus," "Echo Park" cost $800,000, or so the actor heard.

Instead of the turbulent last years of Mozart, the new film concerns "a stripper, a body-builder and a pizza-delivery guy, all with dreams of making it in Hollywood."

Echo Park is a district near downtown Los Angeles that long ago was bypassed in the city's outward growth. Its ramshackle houses and cluttered alleyways are the setting for Austrian director Robert Dornhelm's movie about the friendship of three young people.

The script is by Los Angeles film reviewer Michael Ventura, the producer is Walter Shenson, a specialist in small, memorable films ("The Mouse That Roared," "A Hard Day's Night," "Reuben, Reuben"). The financing came from Austria.

Hulce made "Echo Park" right after "Amadeus," he said. "I wanted to work soon so I could see what I had learned on 'Amadeus,' and I wanted to have the luxury of picking a film without having to wait to see what happened to 'Amadeus.'

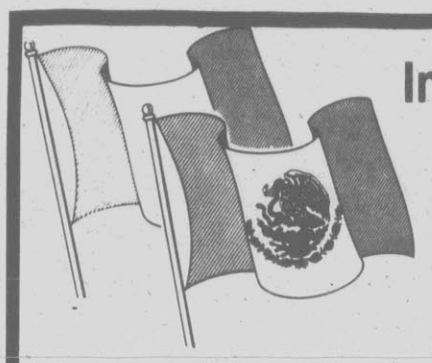

"I liked the sweetness of the story and the fact that it takes place today. And I knew that Robert Dornhelm would bring a different quality by seeing it through foreign eyes."

Hulce hasn't made a feature film since the international acclaim for "Amadeus." For one thing, he spent six months traveling in the United States and abroad to help publicize the movie. "It seems like a nice way to see the world, but you're too busy to see anything."

He also played "The Glass Menagerie" in Waterford, Conn., with Teresa Wright and Melissa Gilbert, filmed an American Playhouse for PBS, appeared in "The Normal Heart" in New Haven, Conn.

"The movie offers covered a wide range, from buddy-cop picture to young romantic comedies that I thought would be better played by young actors," said Hulce, who could pass for a teen-ager at 32 but doesn't want to.

"I've always considered the stage my home base, and going without a film is not as scary as it used to be. I remember the advice Milos (Forman) gave me after we finished 'Amadeus': 'You should be patient in deciding on your next film. This movie should have enough strength to last four or five years in people's minds. You needn't take jobs just to be working.'" Hulce expects to break the long drought in July, when he plans to film "The Long Weekend," a real-life story about two doctors who are subjected to imprisonment and torture by the South African regime.

Scenes From The Annual ECU Inter-Fraternity Spring Outdoor Concert

Due to the age 21 drinking law to come into effect, host Dave Mosier has announced the 1986 outdoor concert, the 20th, will be the final of these events

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
Features And Classified
The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. Sunday, April 20, 1986 D-1

For two decades, Dave and Mary Taylor Mosier's large lawn at their farm home a short distance north of Greenville has been the gathering site each spring for thousands of East Carolina University students.

The occasion is an opportunity to get away from campus, out into open countryside, without having to travel a considerable distance to a beach or park. Officially, the event is known as the Annual Inter-Fraternity Council Annual Outdoor Concert. The students refer to it as "their day at Mosier's Farm."

After the passage of 20 years, the springtime informal gala has become perhaps the most noted rite of spring in Pitt County or the surrounding area, a Saturday spring date for students to celebrate joy of being out in the warmth of Carolina sunshine in a rural setting. It's a time to be with friends, meet new people, all in the atmosphere of an abundance of azaleas in flower and trees putting forth new buds. It's a time too for acquiring a little more sun tan, to play frisbee, to listen and dance to the music of a rock band. For some, one the principal attractions is the dozen plus goats described by Dave Mosier as "our four-legged lawn mowers."

Mosier said "The idea of having the kids use our place began when one of our sons, Bill, then a student at East Carolina University and president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, was looking for a place to hold an outdoor affair. We told him it would be fine to use our place. Jim Mallory, then dean of students at East Carolina University, appreciated the idea and after the success of the first year, suggested we consider having it on our farm as an annual event.

"So it has grown from there. The students provide their own refreshments, hire a band, arrange for portable toilet facilities. Everything. All we do is to furnish the landscape and the welcome."

A number of students each year return the day after the concert to clean up the area. "They do a good job of it," Mosier said. "In addition, there are two families who come in and make a clean sweep of harvesting the aluminum cans. So it works out beautifully."

This year, planners hired the Skip Castro Band from Charlottesville, Va. to come to Greenville to provide music for the outdoor concert attended by about 3,200 students.

"We regret we have had to decide to make this the last concert," Mosier said, "but our decision is courtesy of the government, which has decided it will raise to 21 the minimum drinking age.

"Mary Taylor and I will miss having them here," Mosier said. "They have always had a grand time and have never been a problem to us."

Interior Designers Are Available In All Types, Costs To Fit Tastes

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

Some people have the flair, knowledge, time and energy to design their home decor. For those who don't, hiring an interior designer can be a smart move, particularly since decorating a home is among the biggest lifetime expenses.

Here's how to go about finding a designer whose work you can live with.

You can hire an interior designer in private practice, or you can work with one employed by a retailer, such as a department or furniture store. Some architects, remodelers and kitchen dealers also offer interior design services.

Designers in private practice can normally order furnishings and accessories from any manufacturer. Those employed by retail stores and studios may not be able to get you things their store doesn't sell, but they should help you coordinate your selections so you can buy them yourself.

Before talking to candidates, draw up a tentative budget. Designers say people usually underestimate costs and need their help in realistic budgeting.

You can find designers who will take on projects no matter how small your total budget; others set minimums, ranging from $1,500 up to $50,000. You might want to ask a designer for a long-range plan for all of the areas you eventually want to decorate and then carry it out as money is available.

Department and furniture store studios often charge a retainer, around $100 to $500, applied against the price of goods as long as you have spent a minimum amount, perhaps $2,500 or $5,000. Retail stores usually offer more favorable credit terms than designers in private practice.

Private interior designers charge for their services in several ways, frequently in combination. The following are common residential charges:

— The initial consultation fee.

— The design fee covers planning the design concept and the furnishings for your project and may include practically all services provided by the designer. It's usually not applied against the price of goods purchased.

— Hourly fees often cover time spent on technical services, such as drawing floor plans, plus time spent consulting with other professionals or tradespeople and perhaps with you. You'll probably be charged this way if you hire a designer just to give you some ideas about redoing a room.

Avoid paying hourly rates for all of a designer's services, including shopping trips. This can be costly, especially with an inefficient designer.

The range in hourly rates in many major cities varies from $25 or $35 to $100 per hour, sometimes more. You will probably be billed monthly for time and out-of-pocket expenses.

— Cost of purchases. Many designers expect to be compensated for all their services by the profit they make on the goods you buy through them.

Some charge you their wholesale cost plus a markup, normally 25-40 percent. This method is generally better for you than paying regular retail prices or a small percentage off retail (such as 10-15 percent), the two other common methods of charging for goods purchased.

Normally, under any of these methods, you have to pay the designer a deposit of 50 percent or less when each item is ordered.

— The cost of outside labor includes paying for the work of painters, paperhangers, upholsterers and other workers. If you're billed through the designer, you'll pay an additional fee, typically 15-30 percent.

To find a designer, ask for recommendations from people whose home interiors you admire. Go to local decorator showhouses and home-furnishings expositions. Look at model rooms in department and furniture stores.

Chapters of the American Society of Interior Designers (ASID), the only nationwide interior designers' professional organization, offer a free referral service through which you can get the names of three local designers who work on projects like yours. Look in your phone directory or write to ASID (1430 Broadway, New York, NY 10018) for the nearest chapter.

At your first meeting, ask about the designer's educational background and work experience. Ask whether an ASID member has passed the examination required to attain the society's highest level of accomplishment.

Ask to see many photographs of the designer's work. If you see a lot of similarity, you can be pretty sure your room will look like that, too.

Discuss your attitudes, life-style and preferences. The designer should work with your furniture, collections and mementos, if you so choose. Collect pictures of rooms that appeal to you and show them to the designer.

Ask yourself: Are the designer's philosophy and personality compatible with mine? Am I comfortable enough to say I don't like a particular recommendation, or to reject a suggested item as too expensive for my budget.

Discuss fees and feel free to negotiate.

Garden Clinic

Q. Will the periwinkle sold as a bedding plant come back every year like regular periwinkle (Vinca minor)?

A. No. Madagascar periwinkle is an increasingly popular bedding plant in North Carolina. It has glossy, dark green leaves. Madagascar periwinkle blooms profusely and withstands drought. It likes full sun but will tolerate some shade. Periwinkle (Vinca minor) is a common groundcover in the state. Unlike Madagascar periwinkle, Vinca minor is a permanent landscape plant that prefers full sun to half-shade.

Q. Please give some pointers on buying vegetable transplants.

A. The best transplant are not necessarily the largest and tallest ones. Generally, good transplants should be stocky, have a good green color, have good roots and be free from insects and diseases. More than likely you will find the best transplants at quality garden centers. Look at the transplants carefully before buying. Transplants selling for half the regular price at the beginning of the planting season may be a signal that the plants have some problems. Most of the time you get what you pay for.

Q. Can I use leaves and seeds of my anise bush in place of store-bought anise?

A. I don't recommend it. Although members of the genus Illicium are commonly called "anise" or "anise-tree," only one species, Illicium vernum, is the source of the spice "anise." One species commonly grown in North Carolina, Illicium anisatum, contains the toxic alkaloid skimmianine. Misidentification of the plant could be fatal. Species of Illicium are difficult to identify vegetatively. To further complicate the issue, two other species, Illicium floridanum and Illicium paravivflorum, are sometimes sold as Illicium anisatum. Little information is available on the chemical content of these species, however.

ON THE HOUSE

Planning to paint a room in your house? Give some thought now to the kind of paint you want to use and the color of it.

The kind of paint will determine whether the finished appearance will be glossy, semi-glossy, flat or whatever. It will also play a part in the ease of application and the durability of the product. The color of the paint will determine the mood of the room and serve as the decorating base.

These things are important, but not the only factors affecting the result. Surface preparation is vital, as is the quality of the paint. If you pick up a roller or brush and start the job without preparing the surface properly, you will regret it either immediately or within a few months. And, since you are putting in your own labor, it is false economy to buy cheap paint merely to save a few dollars.

Latex paints are the big sellers among do-it-yourselfers. They make it easier to clean up and they have very little odor. Latexes now come in high glosses, semi-glosses and flats. A high gloss paint is extra washable, resists moisture and wears very well, which is why it is used so much in kitchen and bathrooms. Flat paints are easier on the eyes and thus preferred for living rooms and bedrooms, while a semi-gloss is somewhere between the high gloss and flat. Unless you have been living in a cave, you probably have a good idea of which kind of paint you like and where. But many other kinds of paints are available, among them alkyds, oils, textures and many others for special surfaces. If you have a special problem, a few minutes' conversation with your hardware or paint dealer will be of help in making a selection.

It is usually impractical to remove everything from a room before it is painted. But you can at least remove the light pieces. The heavy objects can be moved to the center of the room; then cover them and the floors with paper or plastic dropcloths or whatever else you have on hand that will do the job. You will get a neater ceiling result if you lower the base of the ceiling fixture a little and take off all switch plates, doorknobs, etc.

Preparing the surface means removing dust and grime, scraping off any loose paint, patching cracks and holes and sealing the patches, and dulling all glossy areas. In short, don't just go ahead and paint, which is a common fault because the do-it-yourselfer too often is impatient to begin the project.

Just as latex paint has become the darling of home owners, so has the paint roller. It covers large surfaces a lot more easily than does a brush, although a brush is usually necessary for detail work and is especially important when working in corners and for edging.

Whether you are using a brush or a roller, always remember to paint from a dry area into a wet one. An extension handle on a roller makes it possible to do most ceilings while standing on the floor, although some people are set against such a handle on the grounds it gives them a stiff neck. You can avoid this possibility if you remember to paint the part of the ceiling ahead of you rather than painting directly overhead. When painting the ceiling or the walls, do not overload a roller and do not apply heavy pressure when using it.

Colors do things to a room. Yellow, reds and oranges are the so-called "warm" colors, green and blues the "cool" colors. Too much red can overwhelm a room and make it appear smaller. Blue has a calming effect, green is restful, yellow is cheerful. Generally, light colors make a small room seem larger. Obstructions in a room, including radiators, can be made to look less conspicuous by painting them the same color as the rest of the room.

Using special rollers can give you special effects in an informal room. Another way to do this is by dragging or swirling such things as brushes, sponges, whisk brooms, trowels or even rags across the newly applied wet paint. If you have a scrap piece of wallboard, use it to practice these special patterns ahead of the actual painting of the room.

(The use of rollers, brushes, kinds of paint, surface preparation and other techniques are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have to hang some shelves soon. In the past, I always did this with metal or plastic anchors, but this time I would like to hang the brackets with an adhesive. Will this be OK, since the shelves will be supporting only light objects?

A. — Yes. And if you use a strong adhesive, the shelves will hold a heavy weight. The possible drawback is that, if you ever desire to change the position of the shelves or take them down altogether, you may damage the wall in doing so.

Q. — I plan to do some varnishing. The varnish I have was used a couple of months ago, and I have kept it in an airtight container. I assume it will be all right. In the meantime, I have heard the drying time of varnish can be cut down if you first warm the furniture with a portable heater. Is this so?

A. — Yes, but I don't generally recommend it. However, you can do it if you are extra careful about keeping the varnish away from the portable heater.

Q. — Recently you wrote about how to loosen stuck windows. You said the most common cause of this is hardened paint in the window channels. I soon will be painting all the double-hung windows in our house and I want to avoid the hardened paint. Is there some special way of doing the windows to avoid this?

A. — The most important thing is to be careful. You can avoid trouble if you place each sash 2 inches from the top and bottom. Wait until you finish painting, then move each sash up and down a couple of times. This will prevent a seal from forming. It is the seal that causes the trouble at some later time.

Q. — I expect to apply wood filler to an oak table I will be refinishing. Is there anything special I should know?

A. — It is assumed you know something about the application of wood filler or you probably would not be doing it. But there is one aspect of wood filling you might not know about — the necessity of doing it on a day and in an area where there is no high humidity.

New England Forests Untouched By Saws

By JOHN DONNELLY
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, Vt. (AP) — New England's woods have been clear-cut by man many times over. Even in the remote northern forests near Canada, the stands of trees are almost all second and third generation timber.

Oak has been sought for shipbuilding, hemlock for tanning, hardwoods for furniture, and spruce and fir for paper-making. Wind, insects, fire and lightning have been less discriminating, toppling all species.

But roughly two dozen New England forest stands such as Williams Woods, a 65-acre parcel in this Champlain Valley town, have survived untouched over the centuries.

These are virgin forests, and conservancy groups in the region are beginning to take notice. Studies on the original forests have been recently completed in Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine, and state officials and environmentalists are contacting landowners or are buying the land to ensure that the forests continue to serve as a link with the distant past.

"These trees are history books, and we are just starting to learn how to read them," said Marc Desmeules, an ecologist with the Vermont chapter of the Nature Conservancy, a nationwide land trust group. "If we really want to understand how forests work, we need to have completely undisturbed forests."

While efforts to locate and preserve virgin forests in the West have been going on for generations, environmentalists in the Northeast are just beginning to study them.

"We're 50 years behind the times to go out and identify them," said Charles Cogbill, who has done an extensive inventory of old-growth forests in Maine.

Virgin, or old-growth, forests in the West may include trees older than 5,000 years, but the oldest trees in the more densely peopled Northeast are believed to be slightly over 500 years. That is largely a reflection of the life cycles of each region's species of trees, although New England's harsh wind storms also are a factor.

Cogbill, who now lives in Plainfield, Vt., and teaches ecology at the Center for Northern Studies in Wolcott, said virgin forests are a living laboratory for scientists.

"Old growth forests are the best examples of what a place would have been like if man had never settled here," he said. "They are invaluable research sites. We have no way of recreating such a place. They help you answer questions like, 'How fast do trees grow?' or Why does a tree slow down when it gets older?'"

Virgin forests have been found to harbor several endangered species, including the red-cockaded woodpecker in the South, the spotted owl in the Pacific Northwest.

A species that is not endangered, the Polizonia millipede, turned up in New York forests. The millipede uses a scent to ward off insects, and the aroma works so well that scientists are trying to recreate it in laboratories to sell as insect repellent.

Maine has the most known virgin forests in the Northeast — about a dozen sites, with the largest 5,000 acres — while the rest of the region combined has about a dozen others.

Virgin forests may mean tall trees to most people, but they also include scraggly, weathered spruce trees on ridgetops. Many of the old-growth forests in the Northeast are intact because the woods were inaccessible or too wet for loggers.

"All the old big timber was sought after in the East. The best stuff is gone. What we have left now are the oddballs, the ones that the loggers didn't want," Cogbill said.

The trees at Williams Woods are tall oddballs, some oak crowns spreading out in symmetrical circles 100 feet above the ground. Some trunks are 15 feet in circumference.

"You got to be a tough old tree to be here," Desmeules said in the middle of the Charlotte forest, which is leased by the Nature Conservancy.

Inside the woods, there were no man-made disturbances. The forest floor was full of pits and mounds, created by aged trees that had fallen over.

Desmeules and Liz Thompson, a Nature Conservancy botanist, moved slowly through the woods, their heads arched upward. They stopped before a particularly large oak, which they estimated was between 250 and 300 years old. "Now that is a virgin tree," Thompson said.

"A developer was in line to buy this land," Desmeules said. "There's a lot of timber value here. There are thousands of board feet in this tree."

Thompson added, "I wonder how many coffee tables it would have made."

The two walked on, and Desmeules said one of things he likes best about virgin forests is how it makes him feel.

"To me, it's a thrill to be standing next to a tree that has been there possibly before man was here. I have a lot of reverence for trees that have weathered hundreds and hundreds of years. We have a lot to learn.

"Now," he said. "if only trees could talk."

Lawyer Tries To Prove Speed Trap

KIMBALL, W.Va. (AP) — Kimball is a quiet town with lots of trees gracing both sides of U.S. 52, and Mayor Jack Premo wants to keep it quiet. The highway's 55 mph speed limit drops to 35 mph as you come into town, then at the town limit drops to 25 mph, strictly enforced.

But lawyer Roger Perry suspects town officials have created a speed trap, a way to pay for municipal services at the expense of unwary out-of-town drivers. He's taken his case from traffic court to the state Supreme Court to try to prove it.

Kimball has quite a reputation. Newspapers in Welch and Williamson have published repeated letters from outraged motorists who claim to have been caught in Kimball's radar snare.

Mayor Premo says there's a reason: "That highway runs right through the middle of town, and it's hard to keep these people slowed down. They come off that interstate down in Princeton and a lot of them forget where they are."

Basil Perry, Roger Perry's brother who lives in Ohio, was driving through Kimball on his way to Virginia several years ago when he got pulled over for speeding. He was released on $50 bond pending a trial in municipal court.

"He showed up in court with an out-of-town lawyer — my wife — and a newspaper reporter and photographer from Welch, and they decided it wasn't worth messing with," said Roger Perry, who practices law with his wife, Susan. "They gave him his money back and dropped the charge."

The resulting newspaper story caught the eye of Jackson Richardson of Millersville, Md., a former Kimball resident. In July 1982, Richardson received a ticket for driving 32 mph in a 25-mph zone.

Richardson, an employee of the Defense Department in Washington, D.C., is an expert on radar devices, according to Perry. Richardson maintained that he was not speeding and that Kimball's radar device was not accurate because it was built before 1984.

He hired Roger Perry to prove it in court.

One of the lawyer's first moves was an attempt to look through town records to see how many non-residents had received speeding tickets.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—In "Goren's New Bridge Complete" you recommended five-card majors together with a forcing no trump response. I can understand why you switched to five-card majors; what I don't understand is why you suggest the forcing no trump response. Please explain why. — R.E., Houston, Texas

A.—Most of the time, when you respond one no trump to a five-card major opening, you don't have a balanced hand. Why? Because on most balanced hands you will have either three- or four-card support for partner's major, and you would choose to raise the major suit rather than to respond one no trump.

Since partner has opened a five-card major, he too probably has an unbalanced hand — he is more likely to be 5-4-3-1 or 5-4-2-2 than 5-3-3-2. With two unbalanced hands, it is better to play in a suit contract if an eight-card fit can be found. The forcing no trump response is designed to uncover such a fit, particularly in a minor suit. If partner doesn't have a second suit, he bids his cheaper three-card minor. That still leaves responder the right to correct back to the major on hands where he has a doubleton in the opener's major and no particular fit for second suit, secure in the knowledge that they have seven trumps in the combined holding. It also gives responder the chance to bid a five-card or longer suit of his own in an attempt to locate a suitable spot.

There are other advantages to using the forcing no trump response. You can employ a two-over-one response as forcing to game, and so make your constructive auctions easier—no one has to jump lest his partner drop him short of game. Invitational auctions all start with a forcing no trump response. Also, the convention allows users to differentiate between three- and four-card support for opener's major suit.

On those hands where one no trump is the correct contract, you can't be sure the opponents will let you play there. Modern bridge has become very aggressive, and it is very likely the opponents will be in the auction so that it won't die at one no trump.

The foregoing does not mean you must use a forcing no trump response if you want to play a five-card major system. You can play one quite competently without adopting that convention. Use whatever suits your style best: it is better to play something with which you are comfortable than to be unhappy using even the world's best system—if there is such an animal.

London Loses Its City Government

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — London has become the only major Western capital without a city government.

The Greater London Council, lately a left-wing crusader for gay rights, black groups, nuclear disarmament and socialist causes, ceased to exist at midnight March 31.

It was defeated in a bruising, three-year battle for survival with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative national government.

The Conservatives regarded the Labor Party-controlled council as superfluous, spendthrift and a waste. The Labor Party's steady control of it also was a factor.

The Greater London Council, or GLC, has been the overall authority for the capital, responsible for schools, libraries, firefighting, garbage collection, public housing and parks. All those functions now will be taken over by other entities. The GLC once controlled public transportation, but in 1984 the national government took over the subways and buses.

The council was formed 11 years ago, replacing the London County Council, founded in 1889.

London's history dates at least from A.D. 43, when Roman invaders established a base on the Thames River for the subjugation of the British Isles.

The 620-square-mile city today is composed of 32 boroughs, headed by councils that have always guarded their independent powers, reflecting the history of a metropolis that grew out of a series of villages — many of which retain an individual character to this day.

Starting April 1, it was as if New York Mayor Edward I. Koch's government were abolished and each of the city's five boroughs — Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx and Staten Island — were left to govern themselves.

London's boroughs have local maintenance responsibilities and the power to set and collect property taxes, most of which have gone into the GLC's budget.

Property taxes yield 54 percent of local government revenue and the rest comes from the national government.

Most of the GLC's responsibilities will devolve now on the borough councils, with the exception of education and firefighting, which will be handled by new, separate bodies.

"We've lost the vote but we've won the hearts and minds of Londoners," says Ken Livingstone, who became GLC leader in 1981 when the Labor Party won control from Conservatives.

"We've touched on issues which most politicians have chosen to avoid because they are seen as vote-losers and you just offended people ... but the things we started will never be reversed."

With the GLC go six other authorities in the big provincial cities — all Labor-controlled, and abolished under an Act of Parliament last summer.

The Conservatives are fulfilling a 1983 election pledge to remove what they called "an expensive and unnecessary tier of bureaucracy." Critics see it as a cynical removal of elected political foes.

London, a city of 6.75 million people, is for the first time in a century without an overall strategic planning authority or an official representative, such as a mayor.

"I suppose someone will emerge somehow," saids Sir Godfrey Taylor, 60, a Conservative Party local politician. He heads the government-appointed London Residuary Body, created to wind up the loose ends after the demise of the GLC, and is supposed to last five years.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: THE CHRONIC WORRIER ADMITTED, "I'M WEARING WOES-COLORED GLASSES."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Professional Theater For Charleston

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — When Jim Kearney stepped down after five seasons as general manager of the Spoleto Festival U.S.A., he thought he'd be leaving Charleston for good.

But now, three years on, he's still very much a part of the Charleston arts scene.

And he's building an organization that one day may mean professional performing arts nine months of the year instead of the brief 17 days of Spoleto for which the city has become famous.

After resigning as general manager of Spoleto in 1983, Kearney took a vacation on Cape Cod at which time he was contacted by the National Endowment for the Arts to become a consultant to eight opera companies throughout the nation.

Traveling widely in his consulting role, Kearney decided to keep his base in Charleston and the idea for EVENTS Inc. began to take shape.

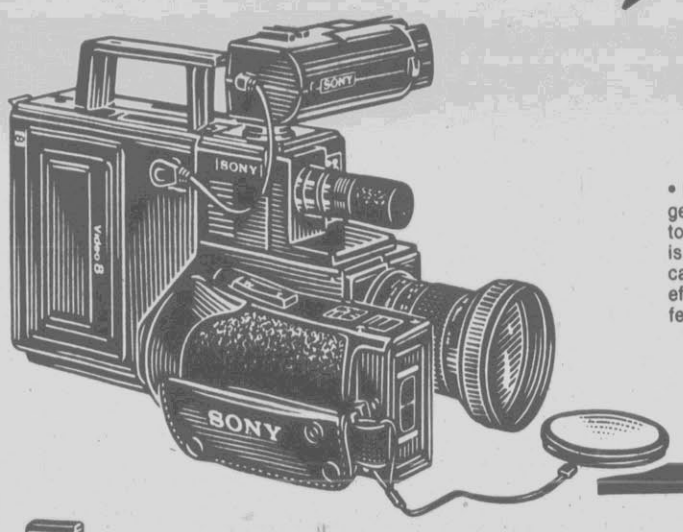

"The whole time I was in Charleston it occurred to me that what professional (arts) activities did take place were of an inconsistent nature," said Kearney, sitting with his sneakered-feet propped on the desk of his office which overlooks the boutiques and eateries along King Street.

The 35-year-old producer, dressed in jeans and a knit shirt, explained that "other than Spoleto, there wasn't an ongoing organization that consistently brought in a variety or range of professional performing arts to Charleston on a regular basis."

So this spring, Kearney mounted the first season produced by EVENTS, Inc., — a two-month run of four professional theater offerings including productions of Larry Shue's comedy "The Foreigner," Athold Fugard's "Master Harold ... and the Boys," Mabou Mines production of "Cold Harbor" based on the life of Ulysses S. Grant and Roadside Theater's production of "South of the Mountain," a musical set in the Appalachian Mountains.

"Alex: The Life Of A Child"

By Andy Noble

It's time to get out your handkerchiefs again. There's a real weeper airing this week: "Alex: The Life of a Child," airing Wednesday, April 23 on ABC.

The "General Foods Golden Showcase" is a dramatization of sportswriter Frank Deford's book about the legacy of love created by his daughter, Alex, whose spirit remained unbroken in spite of cystic fibrosis.

The cast includes Craig T. Nelson ("Call to Glory") as Deford, Bonnie Bedelia ("Heart Like a Wheel") as his wife Carol and Gennie James as Alexandra Miller Deford, their daughter.

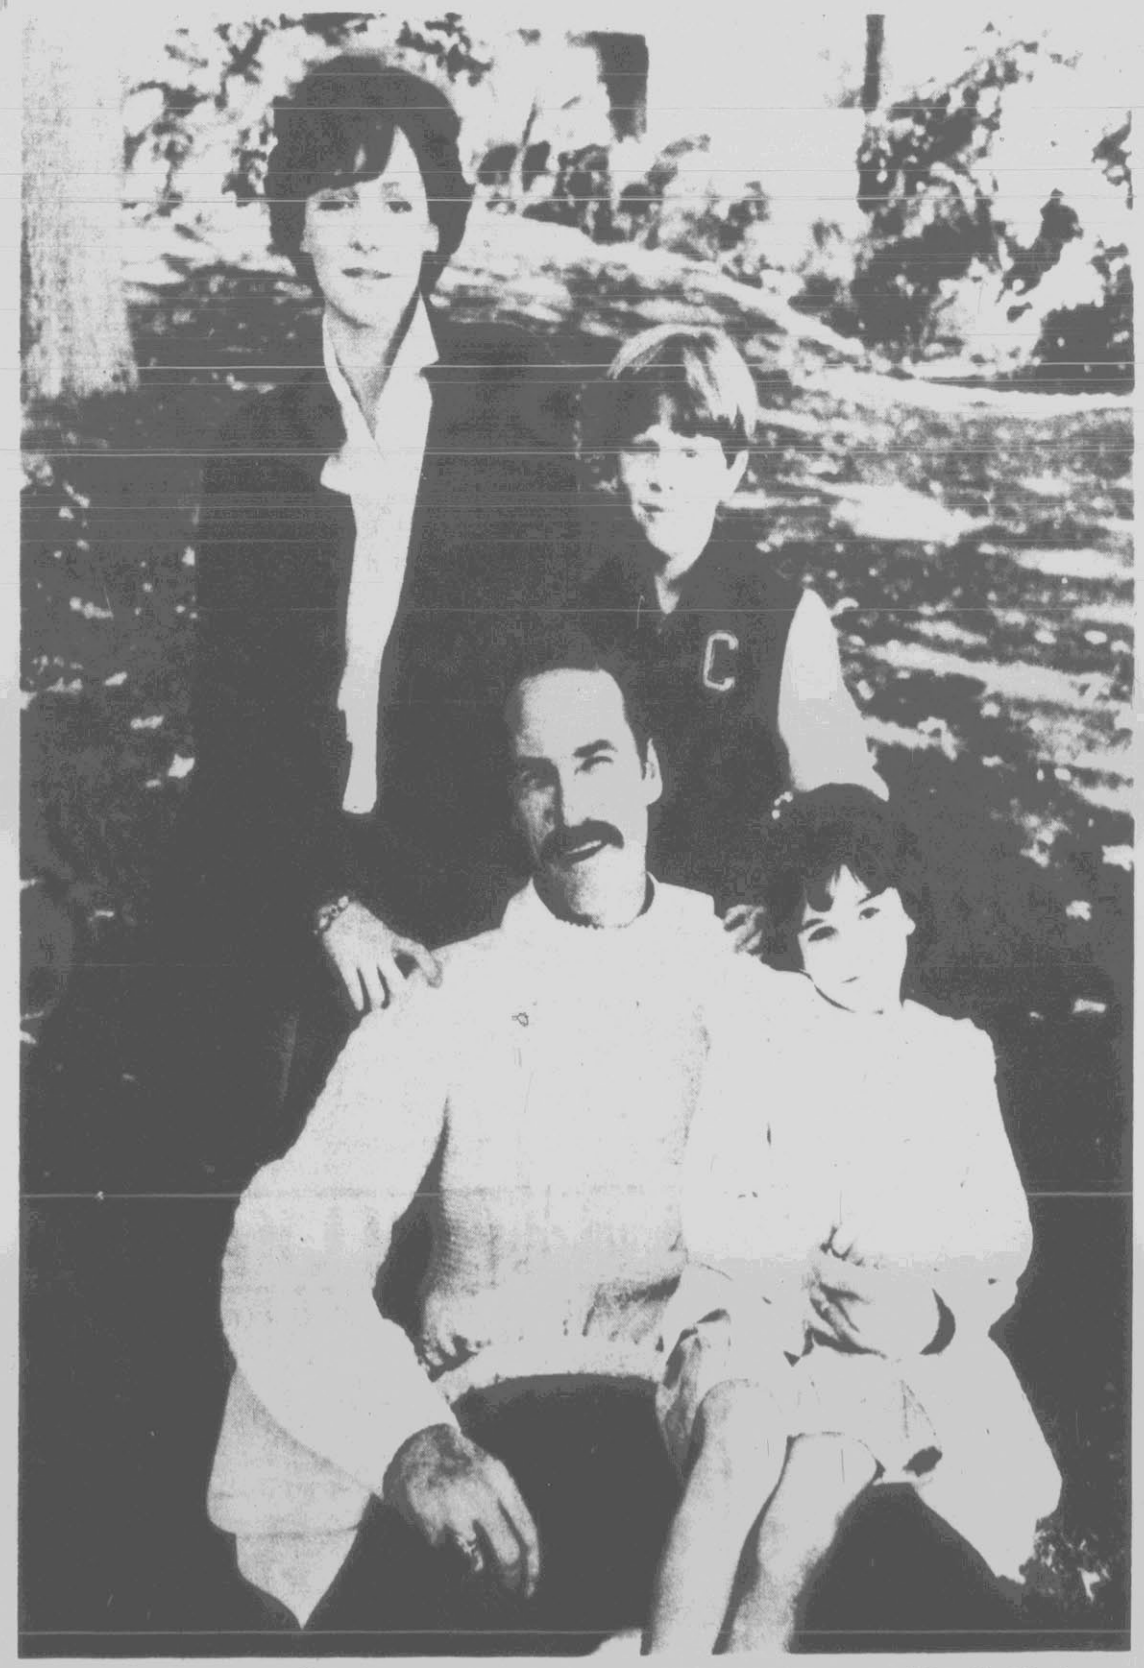

"Viewers should come away from this movie with a sense of 'isn't life just terrific, let's share it from moment to moment, just do a day at a time and make this the best 24 hours that we can for each other and extend that love to each other,'" says Nelson. "That's really what 'Alex' is about and what she did. She lived from second to second and that's joyous."

Alex was born on Oct. 30, 1971 and died on Jan. 19, 1980. Despite doctors' prognostications that she would not live past her second birthday, she survived for eight and a half years.

Alex's story was brought to the attention of millions of Americans when People magazine ran excerpts from Deford's book in the fall of 1982. The book has gone through three hardcover printings and three paperback printings and will be reissued to coincide with the TV movie.

Deford, a senior writer for Sports Illustrated and a CNN and National Public Radio correspondent, says he wrote the book to "celebrate Alex and let people know what she went through." He says he also wrote it to focus attention on cystic fibrosis. Fortunately, since Alex's death in 1980, medical researchers have made a significant genetic discovery, which has moved them closer to understanding the nature of cystic fibrosis.

"'Alex' had the elements of an adult drama," says director Robert Markowitz. "Even though the film is the story of a child dying, the impact that it had on the parents as adults and the psychological ramifications are quite profound."

By George

Barry Bostwick and Patty Duke will reprise their roles of George and Martha Washington in "Washington II: The Forging of a Nation" on CBS. The sequel to "George Washington," the four-hour miniseries will pick up Washington's life in June 1788, right after the Constitution's radification and long after Georgie's cherry-tree-chopping days. Barry Bostwick's founding-father status is still in gestation, however, as "Washington II" has just begun production on March 31 in such historic spots as Philadelphia and Mount Vernon, Virginia.

Linn-Baker Is No Snob About TV

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — Mark Linn-Baker jokes that he needs his new ABC sitcom "Perfect Strangers" to wind up a ratings hit to help him pay for an expensive habit.

He doesn't have anything illegal, embarrassing or fattening in mind: Linn-Baker is cheerfully hooked on stage acting. He discovered long ago that compared to their counterparts on TV, Broadway actors take home slave wages.

Linn-Baker first caught Hollywood's eye when he was cast as Peter O'Toole's chaperone in the feature film, "My Favorite Year," and when movie studios didn't swamp him with offers, he was very happy to take a shot at TV.

"I've been lucky enough to get guest roles in critical hits — shows like 'Miami Vice,' 'Moonlighting' and 'The Equalizer' — but I'm no snob about TV. There's a lot of good work being done for the tube, and ABC has given us six chances to show that 'Strangers' is better than average.

"I certainly don't think of myself as being poised on the brink of stardom," he says. "If we're a hit and the network brings us back in the fall, I'll be pleased because after spending most of my career so far in the theater, I'm excited at the prospect of a regular paycheck.

"But actors learn pretty fast not to get their hopes up too high," he says. "'My Favorite Year' gave me a wonderful role and I'm very proud of it. But although it's become almost a cult classic, it wasn't a huge box-office hit, and in this business, that's all that matters."

"Perfect Strangers" teams Linn-Baker with Bronson Pinchot. The show has been greeted by some critics as a thinly-disguised amalgam of "The Odd Couple," "Bosom Buddies" and "Moscow on the Hudson."

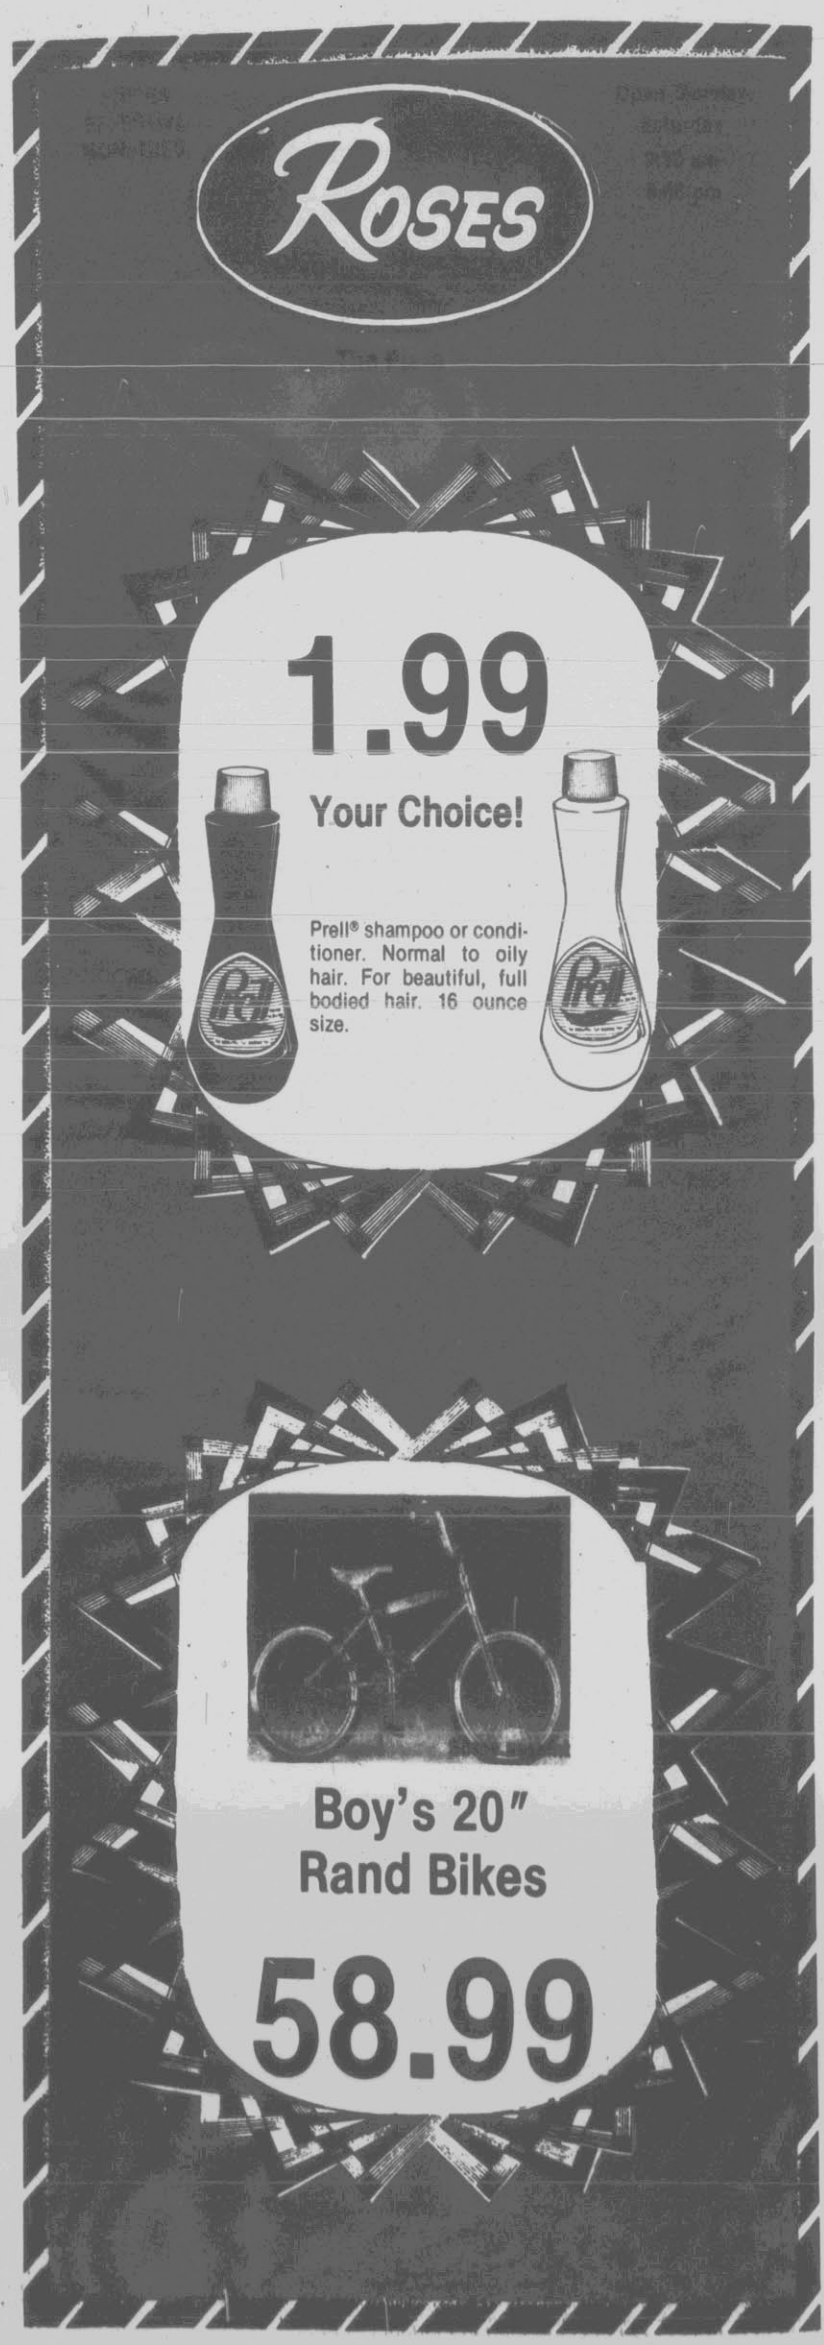

Pinchot and Linn-Baker are, in fact, the perfect team: They are both Yale graduates, and both are looking to the new sitcom to consolidate the impact they made in feature films. Pinchot managed to upstage Eddie Murphy in "Beverly Hills Cop," but, like Linn-Baker, he wasn't deluged with scripts as a result.

"One good movie role can, in fact, be almost a handicap," he says. "People get the idea that whatever you did to make an impression is all you can do.

"That's why TV appeals to me," he says. "It gives you more exposure in one week than a hit film would in a year, it pays well, and it gives you time off to try new things without having to worry about how you're going to cover the rent!"

Rousing Replay

On Monday, April 28th on PBS, Terence Knapp recreates the heroic leper priest of Molokai in "Damien," an "American Playhouse" recreation of the Aldyth Morris play. PBS originally broadcast the 90-minute drama in January 1978 to great critical acclaim. Knapp portrays Father Damien, a Roman Catholic priest who spent 16 years working with lepers confined to the Hawaiian island of Molokai before he himself contracted the disease and died a martyr in 1889. The Sacred Heart priest holds a special place in Hawaiian history and is presently bring considered for saint-hood by the Roman Catholic Church.

CABLE LOG

Cable offers kids several quality shows

By Debra Morgenstern Katz

Critics bemoan network television's lack of commitment to children's programs — and rightfully so: "Sesame Street," "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" and "Romper Room" (none of which are on the three major networks) are the only shows available to preschoolers each day. And two of them overlap when they're aired. What's a parent to do?

Dumbo (l.) and friend

Turn to cable. If network TV forsakes children, cable embraces them with programs that are rich in imagination, creativity and positive values. Your child will still adore Big Bird and Cookie Monster, but within a few days, he or she will be talking so much about Sam and Muffy and Winnie and Barnaby that you'll wonder how you ever lived without them.

Nickelodeon, the channel specifically geared to kids, airs "Pinwheel," a show that devotes five consecutive hours to preschoolers each day. It's hard to sustain interest throughout many hours of the same program, but the series' relaxed, low-key blend of puppets, real people, animation and graphics do just that. You may not want your toddler glued to the set for five hours, but any time you need televised entertainment and education, it's nice to know it's there. My toddler's favorite character on "Pinwheel" is Coco, a mime who performs her brief acts between the longer segments.

Another Nickelodeon gem is "Today's Special," a 30-minute Canadian-produced series that airs twice daily. It uses the toy section of a department store as its set, with a salesclerk, mannequin (who comes alive after the store closes), store guard and mouse (the latter two characters are puppets) as its characters. A different theme moves the plot along each day.

On the Disney Channel, which is geared more to family programming, "Welcome to Pooh Corner" and "Dumbo's Circus" are the best bets for preschoolers. Both shows air twice daily and are peopled by life-sized puppets. "Pooh" uses a warm, gentle approach to handling children's concerns — such as not wanting to go to bed — that is fun and attractive.

The characters on these four shows are well developed. Their negative — and positive — emotions are explored each day, and they're as real as the kids on the block.

Readers' Racket

Its broadcast of the Tournament Players Championship, which took place last month in Sawgrass, Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida, has prompted CBS to include professional golf in the CBS Library of Congress "Read More About It" book project. Among the tomes teeing off young readers' curiousity will be Arnold Palmer's "My Game and Yours" and Mark Oman's "Portrait of a Golfaholic."

TV Chatter

Craig T. Nelson may not know it yet, but nice guys really do finish last. This week, Nelson stars as real-life sportswriter Frank Deford in "Alex: The Life of a Child," the ABC movie that recounts the life of Deford's daughter Alexandra Miller, who died, at age 8, of cystic fibrosis. The former "Call to Glory" star wasn't the first actor called for the role. "It was offered to Treat Williams, Peter Strauss and Jon Voight first," says Deford, "because they are more popular TV personalities." When these actors turned the role down, Nelson accepted. And though Deford says Nelson "does a great job" in the film, he would have liked to have seen Rock Hudson in the role. "I've always thought I looked like Rock," he says. "Tall, dark and handsome."

Mariette Hartley may be best known for the 300 Polaroid commercials she made with James Garner, but it seems like her television career is finally clicking. Last year, MGM/UA developed a series for the actress, but she rejected it because she didn't want to play a deputy district attorney. With that case closed, Miss Hartley, 45, agreed to "Curtain at 8," a one-hour Paramount series which will tentatively air on ABC next season. "I play an actress whose ex-husband gets her involved in the C.I.A.," explains Miss Hartley. "She gets in and out of escapades, but always makes it back on stage every night at 8 o'clock." If critics give "Curtain" the final curtain, then Mariette can really take to the stage: She's putting the final touches on "Mariette Hartley ... At Last," a one-woman theatrical production based on her life.

Alice Faye was the quintessential musical queen of the '30s and '40s: bright, blond, blue-eyed and breezy. During her 11-year Hollywood reign, she pampered Shirley Temple in "Poor Little Rich Girl" (1936), made love to Tyrone Power in "In Old Chicago" (1938) and flirted with Don Ameche in "Lillian Russell" (1940). Then there are her other films — more than 30 — and all of them reassured Miss Faye's legendary status. But during a recent chat with TV UPDATE, the 74-year-old actress confessed that not everyone thinks that way. "I wanted to do a 'What Becomes a Legend Most?' ad for Blackglama furs," Miss Faye told us, "but I was never asked. So I asked Rex Reed to find out why, and he came back and told me Blackgama didn't think I was a legend. If Diana Ross and Beth Midler are legends, what does that make me?"

You might say traveling incognito is getting to be a habit with Phyllis Diller. The 68-year-old comedian dresses in nun's garb and calls herself "Sister Louise" whenever she wants to travel unnoticed. Her heavenly habit may fool some people, but after a recent performance of the hit off-Broadway musical "Nunsense," Phyllis was spotted chatting with the show's cast, who were unaware of the true identity of the "sister." When cornered, Phyllis quipped: "This proves I have mass appeal." ... "Capitol" star Constance Towers has just formed "Project Connie" in order to raise $100,000 for medical care and to find adoptive American families for children orphaned or hurt by last September's devastating Mexican earthquakes. Connie is getting a helping hand from her husband, actor-turned-Ambassador to Mexico John Gavin.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Director remembers Monterey Pop, 1967

By Frank Lovece

For filmmaker Don Pennebaker, bringing his classic rock documentary "Monterey Pop" to video was almost as much work as making the movie in the first place. Then, after he'd gone back and cleaned up the 1969 film's original negative and soundtrack to 1980s standards, he found the videocassette's jacket art had more mistakes than The Who had guitars.

Don Pennebaker

People have chided Pennebaker about the fluorescence-and-paisley jacket of the Sony Video release, says Pennebaker's son and collaborator, Frazer. "For one thing," he points out, "the picture of Hendrix makes him look bald."

And among other miscues, the 83-minute film is listed as just 72 minutes long, and the legendary Eric Burdon has his name misspelled "Burden." Fortunately, says Pennebaker the senior, the packaging is being revamped in preparation for a lower-priced re-release later this year.

The elder Pennebaker, whose many documentaries include the 1967 Bob Dylan documentary "Don't Look Back," still remembers that halcyon summer of 1967, when a crowd of 50,000 flocked to Monterey, Calif., for the largest pop-music festival held up to that time.

"It was physically so big," Pennebaker recalls, "that it took six documentary filmmakers rather than just cameramen to shoot it. We'd meet each day to talk over things, but once they were in the field, they used their own judgments and sensibilities. That's why the credits read 'a film by' rather than 'directed by.'"

Preserving the precious sounds of Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin and all the rest of the Monterey menagerie was just as much a challenge as the filming. "We knew it had to be in stereo, so we borrowed one of the Beach Boys' multitrack tape recorders," Pennebaker reveals.

As relatively primitive as his tools were back then, Pennebaker and associates forged the exuberant model for all rock documentaries that followed. And with video, things have come full circle. "Don't Look Back" is an upcoming release from Paramount Home Video, and for Sony, Pennebaker is readying "Jimi," a new half-hour film based on the largely unseen Hendrix footage left over from "Monterey Pop."

New York Salute

WNET/New York has received six 1984-85 local Emmy Awards from New York state's Chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. Two of the awards went to series: "Currents," a program that explores society and technology's impact on the individual and family, and "Hizzoner!" a one-man show about New York City's Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, who was more than just an epithet for one of the city's airports. Four individual-craft winners of the award were also announced: three for "Hizzoner!" and one to the writers of "Dreams of Distant Shores," an examination of European immigration from 1890 to 1915 told through rare film footage and photos.

Soup's On!

James Lipton has joined the crew of the CBS daytime soap "Capitol" as new head writer. Lipton has been a part the entertainment industry, including television, theater and film, in the capacity of actor, director, choreographer, playwright and lyricist. "Capitol" hopes to be flying high now that Lipton, a licensed pilot and horse-show competitor, has taken the script reins.

'Superman III' Can't Compete With First Two

By Robert DiMatteo

Considering that the first sequel struck some of us as better than the original, Superman III (ABC, April 20) was disappointing. The ingredients were choice, too: Richard Lester, director of "Superman II" was again at the helm, plus the film featured Richard Pryor as a comic foil for Man of Steel Christopher Reeve. Alas, this 1983 film wavers between slapstick and comic-book grandeur. Pryor gives one of his borderline-embarrassing, wimpy and bug-eyed performances. The plot involves Superman's suffering from a kind of split personality, and it has promise. But the movie fails at its own best ideas.

CBS's offering the same night is a repeat of the problem-play made-for-TV movie Passions, centering on the complex of feelings that beset the wife (Joanne Woodward) and mistress (Lindsay Wagner) of a well-heeled businessman (Richard Crenna) when he suffers a stroke and suddenly dies. Wife discovers mistress when the latter turns up at the hospital to visit her ailing lover. Following his death, both women must confront quite different bitter truths. There's a ceiling on this material – a protective lyricism, a cushion of sensitivity. But "Passions" is well-acted, and it touches a nerve.

Another problem-of-the-week movie, 1984's Something About Amelia (ABC, April 21), almost transcends its genre. This study of father-daughter incest, skillfully scripted by William Hanley, and starring the gifted trio of Ted Danson (the offending father), Glenn Close (his wife) and Roxana Zal (the daughter), was one of the most widely seen TV movies ever. Viewed now, it may not warrant that original enthusiasm and notoriety, but it remains a moving and disturbing drama.

ABC's April 24 repeat, Invitation to Hell, is the kind of full-blown trash that can be transfixing – briefly. Horror director Wes Craven manned this garish thriller in which Susan Lucci of "All My Children" stars as the devil – a role she seems to have been slowly working up to in her daytime stint as Erica Kane. This one is to giggle at.

New to the small screen is Alex: The Life of a Child (ABC, April 21), an adaptation of Frank Deford's tribute of a book to the abbreviated life of his daughter Alex, a casualty of cystic fibrosis. Craig T. Nelson, that good, unpretentious actor, plays Deford; Bonnie Bedelia appears as his wife; and Gennie James (she was Sally Field's daughter in "Places in the Heart") tackles the pivotal role of Alex. A tear or two is guaranteed.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: This question will surely date me, but I used to enjoy a TV show that starred Gale Storm and Charles Farrell as her father. Is Miss Storm still on TV? I haven't seen her in years. – SARA MICKLE, COLUMBIA, S.C.

Miss Storm and Farrell starred in "My Little Margie." The show ran from 1952-55 on CBS and is still popular in syndication. Gale was born Josephine Owaissa Cottle on April 5, 1921, in Bloomington, Tex. She has been married since 1941 to insurance agent Lee Bonnell, a former actor sometimes billed as Terry Belmont. She does not appear on TV often (although she did do a segment of "The Love Boat"), but she does stay busy on the dinner theater circuit. After receiving treatment for alcoholism at the Raleigh Hills Hospital, she now appears in promos for the hospital's rehabiliatation program. To learn more about Miss Storm, don't miss her autobiography "I Ain't Down Yet" (Bobbs-Merrill).

Dear Michele: I thoroughly enjoyed the ABC miniseries "Crossings," especially the music. What was the name of the song played when Nick and Liane danced at the USO just before he left for the front? – JEAN M. ALEXANDER, JOHNSON CITY, TENN.

The tune you are referring to is "All the Things You Are" (1939), performed on the miniseries by Ray Brown.

Dear Michele: I am a big fan of Kurt Russell. Is he married? Does he have any children? – SUSAN DAVIS, FOLEY, ALA.

Russell, 34, is the father of a 5-year-old son, Boston, from his marriage to actress Season Hubley. The couple split when the lad was 2, but Boston spends at least six months each year with his dad. Russell has been romantically involved with actress Goldie Hawn for several years. "Goldie has changed my life," he admits. The happy couple are expecting their first child in July, and are presently nested in Aspen. They are building a home for their expanding family in nearby Snowmass. Goldie, 40, says it was Kurt who attracted her to Aspen, and she has already enrolled her two children (from ex-husband Bill Hudson), Oliver, 7, and Kate, 4, in the Aspen Community School. The couple have expressed no current interest in marriage, although Kurt is quick to add that the kids are putting the pressure on for them to tie the knot.

Lifestyle Roundup

Giving us a glimpse of the high-styled lives of the rich and famous is what Robert Leach does best. Next week, look for "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous" to start May off with a bang with John Fosythe at his own star-studded tennis tournament; Chef Tell, cook for such pampered palates as the Queen of England and presidents Kennedy, Ford and Nixon; and a two-day authentic Indian wedding in exotic Jaipur, India.

TV Academy Names 7; AFI Cites Wilder

By Andrew J. Edelstein

This week's TV schedule is highlighted by a couple of tributes – "The Television Academy Hall of Fame" (April 21) and "The American Film Institute Tribute to Billy Wilder" (April 26). Both events air on NBC.

Seven new members will be inducted into the Television Academy Hall of Fame: Steve Allen, producer-director Fred Coe, Walt Disney, Jackie Gleason, Mary Tyler Moore, former CBS President Frank Stanton and puppeteer Burr Tillstrom.

The ceremony was taped at a black-tie event March 23 at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium. The Hall of Fame has been formed under the auspices of The Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, the same group that votes on the Emmys.

Jack Lemmon will host the AFI tribute to Wilder, the legendary director, which was taped last month in Beverly Hills.

Wilder, 80, an Austro-Hungarian immigrant, began his motion-picture career in the 1930s, achieving success with "Ninotchka" in 1939, starring Greta Garbo and "Hold Back the Dawn" in 1941 with Charles Boyer and Olivia de Havilland. He went on to direct and write such film classics as "Double Indemnity" with Barbara Stanwyck and Fred MacMurray, and "Sunset Boulevard" with Gloria Swanson and William Holden.

Other memorable films directed by Wilder include the sex-reversal farce "Some Like It Hot" with Tony Curtis, Marilyn Monroe and Jack Lemmon (1959), and the film version of "Witness for the Prosecution" (1958).

SHOW AND TELL

Jackee stays busy with two TV roles

By Gregory Garver

HOLLYWOOD — Who says you can't go home? You can — just ask Jackee Harry. The actress (whose first name is pronounced "Jack-ay") starred as Lily Mason on "Another World." Then, when she was approached to star as Sandra Clark on "227," Miss Harry agreed, and she was written out of the NBC soap.

Jackee Harry

"Lily won a radio contest and a vacation in Switzerland," the actress says. "While she was there, she met this man who signed her to do some concerts in Kuala Lumpur."

But now that "227" is on hiatus (the show returns next month), Lily Mason's gig in Kuala Lumpur is finished, and she will be winging her way back to "Another World."

Miss Harry likes both characters, but she says there are differences between them.

"Sandra's got more freedom than Lily," the actress explains, "because a soap opera is really not a comedic platform. You can't stretch out and look for laughs. It's all geared toward the story line. Actually, the only thing Sandra and Lily have in common is me."

Miss Harry, who hails from Winston-Salem, N.C., moved to Harlem with her family when she was nine. The move was, she recalls, an example of culture shock. She always wanted to act, but there were some bleak periods before her present two-job fortune.

"Back in 1976," she remembers, "I was really doing badly. I didn't work for about six months. I had no money. I'd wait for my unemployment check every Wednesday and then go out for Chinese food. A friend and I were living in a place that was very cold," she adds, "because the landlord wouldn't provide proper heat. Then the landlord dropped dead from the cold."

Today, Miss Harry is not satisfied with her two jobs. "If I get up off my rusty-dusty," she says, "and give it some time, I think I could sing. I'm going to try."

And she has. This week, Miss Harry opens a two-week singing engagement at New York City's jazz club Sweetwaters.

'Wide World' Marks Its 25th Anniversary

By Adam Beckerman

"Live Via Satellite" means what to you?

When "ABC's Wide World of Sports" first aired, the Statue of Liberty was only 75 years old. The year the Berlin Wall was built, 1961, was the same year "Wide World" first started spanning the globe, bringing us the constant variety of sport and sort-of sport. In fact, a U.S.-Soviet track meet sent "Wide World" over the wall that first year, and we saw it, not live, but at least via satellite.

"The satellite made the world smaller," says Doug Wilson, a "Wide World" producer for the past quarter-century. "And we like to think we helped shrink the world along with it. We helped make familiar places people had never been to, or had never heard of. We tried to give people a sense of the humanity that transcends global politics, that reaches across continents and the abyss of human understanding."

On Saturday, April 26, at 8 p.m. (ET), ABC celebrates 25 years of a show that radically changed our take on the world.

Do you remember the afternoon Cale Yarborough went sailing over the wall in Darlington, S.C.? The afternoon Cassius Clay floored Sonny Liston in the first round in Lewiston, Maine? The night Olga Korbut did a back flip on the uneven bars in Munich? Do you remember the wrist-wrestling in Petaluma and the barrel-jumping from Oslo?

"The thrill of victory was always the same," says Wilson. "Whether it was in Petaluma or Indianapolis."

Some say the anthology show is a dinosaur, that we are too sophisticated for the glorious game of hurling and for the demolition derby. Bunk to that argument. But in any event, it's apparent that "Wide World" and its imitators are trying to change, especially in their concentration of coverage of the "everyman" endurance events: the marathons, the triathlons, the ultramarathons.

"The guy in his living room has a mystical curiosity about those athletes," says Wilson. "He wonders if his limits are the same. Doesn't every New Yorker fantasize about running those 26 miles through the city?"

Maybe not. But these two hours will be a time capsule of the mosaic that is "Wide World." And if it's produced with a trust in the material, we may be brought back to where we were, when a wrist-wrestling bout could grip your attention on a Saturday afternoon.

ESPN Airs 90th Boston Marathon

By Andrew J. Edelstein

The Boston Marathon, which marks its 90th anniversary this year, airs Monday, April 21 on ESPN. Once the bastion of amateur purity, this year's race will offer prize money for the first time – $250,000 plus bonuses, including $30,000 to both the top male and female racers – as Boston struggles to compete with the more prestigious and higher-paying marathons, New York and Chicago.

The 26-mile, 385-yard race begins in the suburban village of Hopkinton and ends near Copley Square in downtown Boston, with runners encountering the devastating Heartbreak Hill near Boston College at the 20-mile mark.

Among those to watch will be Johnny Kelley, 78, a true road racing phenomenon. Kelley, the Marathon winner in 1935 and 1945, will be entering the race for a record 55th time. It has been a Boston Marathon tradition for the spectators to wait patiently for the arrival of the retired postal worker from East Dennis, Mass., to pass before they abandon their viewing locations.

"I'll do it as fast as I can," Kelley told a Manhattan press conference last month. "If I can't make it I'll stop. I hope to make it under four hours. I'm just trying very hard to stay alive," he says, his blue eyes twinkling.

Last year's race was won by Briton Geoff Smith with a time of 2:14:05. ESPN commentators will include George Grande, John Sanders, Larry Rawson and George Hirsch. The broadcast begins at 11:30 a.m. (ET).

Charles Bronson, who tends to play fictional heroes in his movies, plays a real-life hero in "Act of Vengeance," an HBO "Premiere Film" that debuts Sunday, April 20. He plays Jock Yablonski, who was murdered in 1969 under mysterious circumstances because he challenged the corrupt power structure of the United Mine Workers.

The cast of the docudrama also includes Wilford Brimley as Tony Boyle, the union leader who ordered Yablonski's murder; Ellen Burstyn as Yablonski's wife, Margaret; Ellen Barkin as a key figure in the murder conspiracy, and Hoyt Axton as a corrupt union official.

Creativity Is About Discovery

By EDWARD LEVINE

The root of creativity lies in wonder, in a sense of the specialness and mystery of existence itself. From wonder follows exploration, the questioning, the desire to perceive and understand that launches us into the "not known."

Creativity is about discovery. It begins with the willingness to enter into the shadows that surround us with the hope that something may be illuminated.

Creativity does not exist as a disembodied phenomenon, but grows out of an individual's response to the perplexities and questions that arise from a particular situation.

The creative response also rises out of the feelings and emotions that reverberate deep within a person's sensibilities, pushing him to explore beyond the boundaries of the known. This does not mean we conceive art to be merely the practice of self-expression, which reduces it to be a self-indulgent activity. But it is a different way of probing the world, a different mode of awareness; it is an act of finding which results from the journey into the "not known."

Art's methodologies and the way it engages the world seem to contradict the basic tenents of education. Two main assumptions underlie traditional educational practice: the belief that intelligence is centered in our analytic abilities and localized in the brain, not in the body; and the belief that making and knowing are separate functions.

This tradition distrusts subjectivity, or confuses it with subjectivism, just as it confuses emotion with emotionalism and feeling with sentimentality. These attitudes leave little room for a discipline which deals with the unmeasureable.

It becomes understandable why, in the context of the university, art educators often follow a more analytic approach and focus on the transmission of skills. As a result, we emphasize the grammar of the discipline while neglecting the language of discovery.

Inherent in the creative act is the willingness to put things into question, to move against and beyond the learned attitudes, values and beliefs which shape our view of the world.

Most schools do a good job of teaching the history, theories and methods of discipline and where the boundaries lie. But more intangible and difficult to convey is a frame of mind, a set of values and beliefs that underlie the currents which push any discipline along and promote creative thinking.

In order to nurture creativity, we must ask teachers to encourage students to take risks. Only then can the student propel their thinking beyond the boundaries which teachers have established.

The first concern of an institution involved with creativity, then, must be to re-establish the importance of wonder and the desire to seek the world beyond its perceived boundaries. Schools must learn to reward this type of behavior and the attitudes central to such an endeavor.

The role of art as an academic discipline is to provide a context for students to experience the need to push through the protective shell that school maps the territory within the discipline. It highlights the questions that have been raised, the methodologies employed and the character of the aesthetic vision. But it must be careful to show that, using a metaphor by Michael Polanyl, Hungarian-British philosopher (1891-1976), "the map is not the territory," but rather a picture. The school must encourage students to chart their own journey through the territory, to construct their own frames.

Edward Levine is Dean of the School of Art at East Carolina University and has served on panels for the National Endowment for the Arts and the North Carolina Arts Council.

North Carolina Black Folk Artists To Present A Program At McGinnis

A presentation of spirituals, gospel songs, blues, storytelling and dances will be performed by several North Carolina black folk artists in McGinnis Theater, April 25 at 8:15 p.m.

The concert, narrated by master dance instructor, Chuck Davis, opens with a demonstration of traditional West African dance styles performed by the African-American Dance Ensemble. Davis will then review black history in North Carolina through dance, song and story.

Following the "Chants and Dances of Welcome" by the dance ensemble, the Badgett Sisters of Caswell county will sing traditional spirituals and jubilee gospel songs.

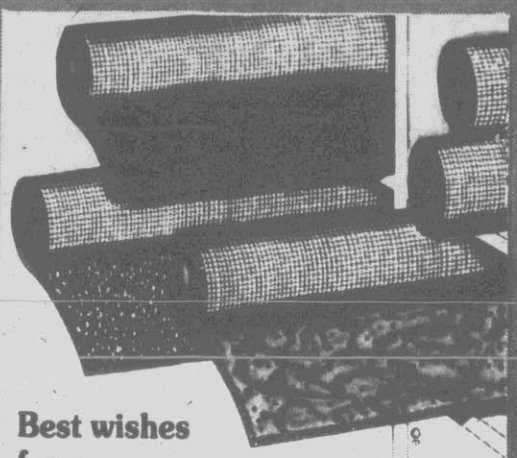

The show will then highlight "turn of the century" blues music and buckdancing. John Dee Holeman and Quentin "Fris" Holloway will perform these black musical expressions. They will be joined by Algia Mae Hinton, folk guitarist and female buckdancer.

The Br'er Rabbit stories of southern blacks will be told by Celestar Sellers in traditional black dialect. Concluding the program will be "The Mighty Wonders of Winston-Salem" gospel group.

The Black Folk Heritage Tour is hosted by the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, and is co-sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts and the North Carolina Arts Council, a state agency.

Suzuki Students To Play Thursday

A concert of music for violin and cello will be presented April 24 at the 20th annual Suzuki Festival in Greenville. The festival will begin at 7 p.m. in the Rose High School gymnasium.

Suzuki violinists and cellists from throughout eastern North Carolina have been invited to participate in the festival, headed by Suzuki violin teacher Joanne Bath. Her husband, Charles, will be piano accompanist.

The Suzuki method, which was devised by Dr. Shinichi Suzuki of Japan after World War II, follows the "mother tongue" approach of learning music the same way one would learn how to speak. Therefore, the musical ear and performing technique are developed before reading actual music notation. Because of this, young children can begin playing tuneful pieces, acquiring note reading skills about the same time he or she becomes proficient readers of written language.

Also, as part of Suzuki's emphasis upon training of the ear, children listen to recordings of the pieces they are learning, and thus the works are easily memorized and his own playing is modeled.

Group performance is stressed in the Suzuki method, and competition among students is minimized. Regardless of where students live or with whom they study, Suzuki students learn the same pieces of music.

Greenville is the site of the state's only Suzuki institute. A summer program lasting one week, it offers intensive instruction and ensemble playing for Suzuki strings and piano students. The North Carolina institute will meet July 13-18 at East Carolina Univeristy.

Boys Club Members To Show Photographs

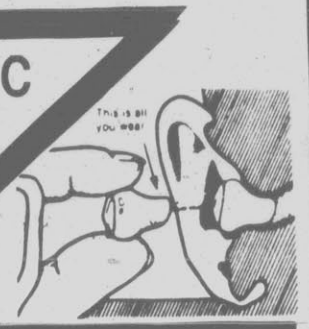

Members of the Boys Club of Pitt County will exhibit their award-winning photography and art from the 1985-86 National Photography Contest and the Epstein Fine Arts Fund at The Plaza from 1-6 p.m, Super Sunday.

The Boys Clubs of America Young Artists Program has been sponsoring the National Photography Contest for more than 30 years.

This program provides youngsters with an opportunity to learn new skills, an incentive for creativity and a showcase for their work. The 1985 Greenville Boys Club members had four regional winners and one national winner.

Works chosen as regional winners will become eligible for the national exhibition to be held later this year in Phoenix, Ariz.

Computer Graphics Program Set

For the last two years, local television viewers may have seen a swaggering, swashbuckling cartoon character during public service announcements aired on behalf of East Carolina University.

The University mascot — a blustery pirate created by an ECU student — is the official logo created by computer graphics at ECU. In the half-minute TV commercials, the pirate makes his appearance in the last few seconds, high-stepping across a purple screen in a shower of sparkles to reveal, "ECU ... A Part of Your Life."

The character came to life as a result of computer graphics artists at the ECU School of Medicine. Charles Kelser, David Balch, Alan Branigan and Jacob Postma are the medical school's resident experts in what has become a new and exciting art form.

Kesler will discuss the art of computer graphics April 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the ECU campus. A reception, sponsored by Computer Displays, will follow in the Gray Gallery.

The technology of computer graphics is not very old. It was pioneered in the 1960s by the military for use in targeting screens, and took off shortly after that with the rise of the video game industry, which is still responsible for much of the progress in the field.

The computer Kesler works on has attachments similar to a brush and canvas. He can draw any figure he wishes on the computer screen, and later give the impression that the figure is moving. This process is faster and simpler than the old conventional method of animation because repetitive illustration is eliminated. A lot less money is also spent on the computer process, as well as time.

A graphic system may cost as little as $10,000, and up to $250,000 for a machine that gives sharper images.

Aside from producing ECU's Pirate, the computer artists have produced a number of award winning instructional videotapes which use animated graphics and titles. A new patient orientation film illustrates the complexities of cataract surgery with the new graphics.

"Captain Discovery" is another of the group's creations. The "Captain" and his mates are used to teach public school children about the skeletal system.

Kesler's master's of fine arts thesis at ECU was done in computer graphics — the first "electronic thesis" ever accepted by the University. Kesler is also teaching the first formal course in computer graphics at ECU.

Though the commercial market for computer-generated art seems unlimited, it remains for the most part confined to the major urban centers. For Kesler and artists like him, the urge to create, regardless of what medium is used, still remains.

Quilters Guild

When the Greenville Quilters Guild was started seven years ago by a group who wanted to share their quilting experiences with others, their goals were to improve their skills, increase their knowledge and strive for excellence in their work.

The Quilters Guild sponsors an annual quilt show in Greenville and it is open to the public. A national quilt symposium has also been sponsored in Greenville.

Waterfowl Artist Is Self-Taught

While on vacation in Williamsburg, Ken bought a decoy for display and put it on his mantle. After the purchase, he thought to himself, "For the money I paid for this, I bet I could do just as good." Using some scrap wood and few basic hand tools, the first decoy emerged.

Not being a duck hunter, Ken went through a series of trial and error carvings, experimenting with various woods — such as cypress, buckeye, sugar pine, tupelo (swamp gum) — using different reference carving books and attending several decoy shows to improve his skill.

The carvings have evolved from flat bottom to his current detailed birds in full-sized, full-bodied standing birds with fully covered legs, feet, feather detail and head and bill detail.

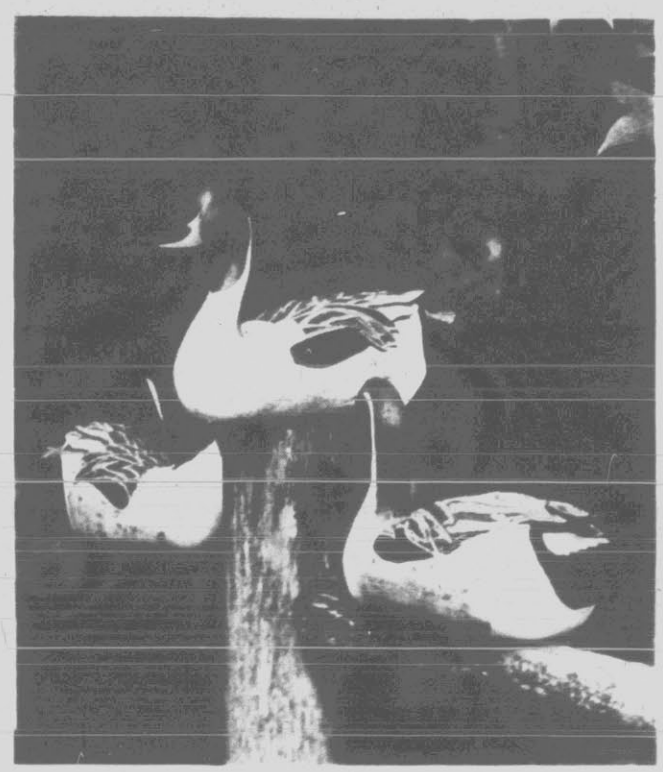

Ken has won awards from Pitt County Fair, Ayden Collard Festival, N.C. State Fair and at the 17th annual N.C. Wildlife Art Exhibition.

Entering more carving shows, and ultimately retire on the Outer Banks with a small carving shop are two goals Ken said he hopes to attain.

Most of Ken's decoys are given away to friends or displayed in his home. His enthusiasm for ducks has spread throughout his neighborhood as friends give duck towels, duck magnets, stuffed ducks, duck mugs to Ken.

Occasionally, he exhibits and teaches his talent to Boy Scout troops and to Sadie Saulter Elementary School students.

For more information about duck carvings, contact Ken at the Pitt-Greenville Arts Concil exhibit. Also, interested persons may be interested in forming a waterfowl carving club in the Greenville area.

— Robert Pittman To To Be Featured On Super Sunday

The Greenville resident has hunted, fished, explored the woods and beaches and sailed the open waters across the state all of his life. Even as a child, he has always loved the sea and boats.

He received a degree in civil engineering from N.C. State University, and is currently employed with McKim and Creed Engineers of Rocky Mount.

Outside of working, he spends most of his time and energy painting. After studying in the School of Art at East Carolina University, he has participated in workshops led by artists John Pike, Ed Whitney, Ed Betts, Zoltan Zebo, Frank Webb and Sarah Speight.

His love of the natural beauty of North Carolina is evident in Pittman's sensitive watercolors and vigorous acrylics. He is a member of the North Carolina Watercolor Society, the Southern Watercolor Society, and the American Society of Marine Artists.

He was recently commissioned to paint two seascapes for the Beaufort County Hospital, and is currently working on a series of watercolors of local interest for the Inlet Inn in Beaufort.

Pittman and his wife, Claire, a poet and short story writer, have three children.

Beekeeper To Present A Talk

Fifty years ago, a young teenage boy climbed up a tree, reached into a honey bee hive and captured his first Queen bee, drones and worker bees. This started the young Bill Weatherford on the life long hobby and occupation of bee keeping.

Now 64 and an expert at beekeeping, Weatherford will dispell myths and give general information about bee keeping to the public at Super Sunday, April 20, from 1-6 p.m. at The Plaza.

He also said, "During the summer, the typical honey bee colony contains between 30,000 to 60,000 bees."

This very interesting man will demonstrate a sliced bee hive — with glass restraining the bees — so people can see the bees at work in a regular hive.

China Painting

The early European art of painting china will be demonstrated by Greenville native Marie Spain at The Plaza, Super Sunday, from 1-6 p.m.

Spain began her study of this art many years ago when she living in Washington, D.C. Her creativity is shown by her original designs used on pieces of china that she has produced.

A specially-designed dry paint is used by Spain, and then she fires the china in a kiln in her own studio.

Spain said he may have to fire a piece two or more times to get the shading on the art work to be just right.

All Grades Youth Art Competition

Students and teachers in the Pitt County school art programs will participate in the Youth Art Competition sponsored by First Union Bank. This exhibit will be on display at The Plaza from April 13 through April 25 and is being coordinated in conjunction with The Eastern Carolina Arts Festival.

This exhibit will feature selected pieces of student art work from grades K-12. Cash awards and prizes will be awarded to the top winning three entries in five separate categories.

INDIAN TRIBE

The Haliwa-Saponi Indian tribe in the Hollister area north of Rocky Mount is the Indian tribe nearest to Greenville. Each year in April they stage a big tribal festival.

Reception Slated For Gail Ritzer

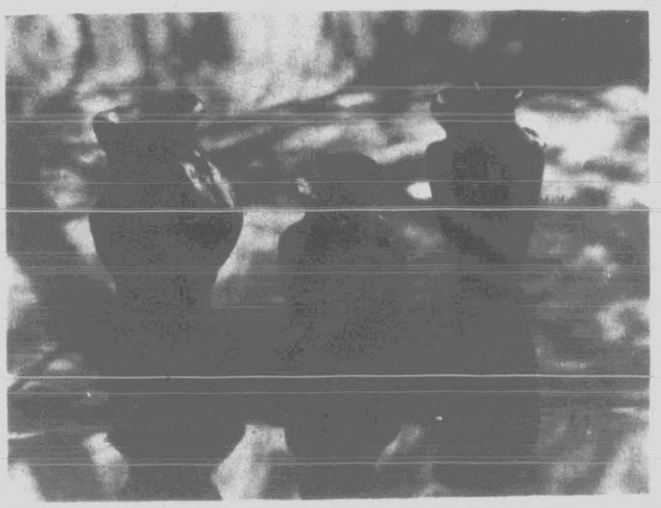

Gail Ritzer has lived in Greenville since 1978. Her beautiful works of pottery are now selling at Macy's and Bloomingdale's department stores.

Gail works with all three types of clay bodies. The red body of clay occurs naturally throughout most of the world. This is called terra-cotta, or earthenware. It is a clay body that is low-firing and fragile, and contains a substantial amount of grog in it.

The second body of clay is called stoneware. It is mixed with other clay bodies to make it more durable. Porcelain, which Gail usually works with now, has an intense color.

Gail does not use a wheel. She hand-makes all of her pottery — masks, bowls and platters by press-mold techniques which making a mold out of plaster and then lining the clay into the mold.

There will be an artists' reception to honor Gail April 24 from 6-8 p.m. at Jefferson's. The reception is open and free to the public.

THREE STONEWARE VASES . . . designed and created by Gail Ritzer is one of several facets of her creative ceramics. She will be honored at a free, open to the public reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday.

Woman Teaches Tole

Mary Ann Odom began tole painting by teaching herself through books. She then began teaching the art at Lenoir Community College, and now she teaches it in her shop, Country Collectibles.

Tole painting is the folk art of decorative painting, which began when the colonists developed it to enhance and brighten their homes. Tole painting is colorful and definite method of painting. Special sized and shaped brushes are used.

Usually she paints house plaques, cheese boxes, bread boxes, recipe boxes and furniture.

The most popular colors are the Williamsburg blues, rust and the earth tones. Mary Ann designs most of the patterns that she uses. She teaches classes in cut-lampshapes in addition to beginning and intermediate tole painting.

RIVER PARK FACILITY

Greenville's River Park North, located north of the Tar River, offers visitors a wide variety of activities. There are ponds for fishing, picnic areas, nature trails, walking paths, two areas of swamp, as well as open space in which children can play. Admission is free.

Rubenstein To Show Origami

Origami begani in China and later developed in Japan. For example, the frog shape symbolizes love and the crane symbolizes peace.

Children in China and Japan learn the art for aiding in hand-eye coordination. The art is also becoming more popular in South America and the United States.

Rubenstein, who learned the art in Japan 18 years ago, uses medium-weight, polished paper that comes in 18 different colors — again meaning different symbols. For example, a red crane means happiness and the blue crane means distance.

To make one crane, Rubenstein spends about four minutes. Other animals may take 10-15 minutes to make. A dragon may take longer because it requires two pieces of paper.

A mobile may be comprised of 20-30 cranes and a sculpture may have up to 1,000 cranes. It is an Oriental custom to give newly wed couples 1,000 gold cranes on their wedding day. Gold symbolizes love and the number "1,000" means any wish will come true.

Rubenstein has been in Greenville for seven months and is an astrologer by profession. He also teaches a class in dream interpretation. He has a doctorate in Molecular Biology from the University of California, and is active in the Peace Movement.

Judy Clark's Specialty Is Chair Caning

Chair caning is very time consuming – an average of 14 hours is usually spent on one lace cane chair.

Judy can chair cane by four different methods. Lace cane involves a weaving process to fill in and complete the entire seat. There are vertical, horizontal and diagonal patterns. It is the most time consuming process of all.

Press-cane is the insertion of an already woven piece of cane. An average chair would take about 45 minutes.

Split-oak are pieces of wood split with a tool. This is an in-and-out type weave. It is usally seen on porch rockers or more primitive chairs. It will usually take her about six hours to complete a split oak chair.

The fourth type of weaving is the fiber rush method that is seen on kitchen ladder-back chairs. It is a very durable paper that is twisted and shaped to look like natural rush. This method also takes her about six hours to complete.

A Bounty Of Entertainment All Year Long

In Greenville and the surrounding area, there are many entertainments, festival and recreational events to provide a wide range of pleasure for eastern North Carolinians.

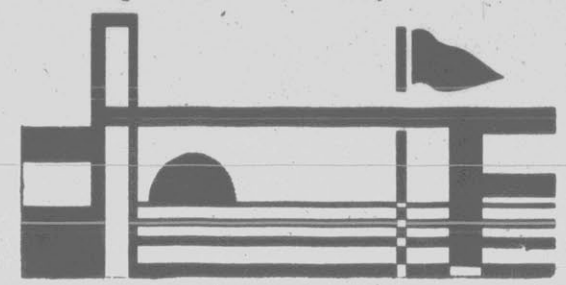

All through the year, stage plays are presented at East Carolina University, including summer theater productions. Plays are presented too by drama groups in the county high schools.

Concerts, recitals and other musical events abound, whether in the fields of classical, rock, spiritual, or popular music. Dance programs, both modern and ballet, are presented frequently.

Several times each year, major national and international performers visit Greenville to perform at the university.

Pactolus Craftsman Teaches Basketry

For 28 years, Blackie Smith has been a member of the Agricultural Extension Club. And at a district workshop meeting eight years ago, the Pactolus native learned the craft of basketry and now teaches it for the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department and Pitt Community College.

Old scissors, knives, tape measures and an awl are all that's needed for basketry, she said.

Cable and Craft and Scotch Bonnet both carry cane in Greenville, and it is sold in hank or one-pound bundles. The round reed, which is used for the staves in the basket, is also sold the same way.

One hank of round reed and one hank of flat one-quarter-inch cane makes eight, 8-inch baskets. Carnival hoops or rings are also needed.

Hazel Bright Calls Her Art Thread Painting

Painting with threads is what Hazel Bright says about her rug hooking craft, which will be displayed Super Sunday from 1-6 p.m. at The Plaza.

The historical craft of rug hooking started when settlers, being thrifty, utilized their worn pieces of clothing by cutting them into strips and dyeing them with berries. Then with a bent nail, they hooked these bits of materials through burlap to make rugs and wall hangings to cover cracks and insulate their homes.

Bright said she tries to include in each piece she produces a few threads of her own ancester's clothes. She also said she would like to teach young people about her craft so it will be preserved in the future.

Bright is the only accredited Pearl McGown teacher in eastern North Carolina. She is also a member of the National Rug Hooking Guild.

Student Work Is Shown At PCMH

During the month of April, art work by students in grades K-12 will be on display in several corridors at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. This is the second year that this exhibit has taken place.

Weaver Annie Cable Learned The Art From Her Warren County Grandmother

Later, she received her bachelors degree in art education from East Carolina University and opened a craft store, Cable and Craft, in Greenville.

She considers her work to be a limited production of "luxury fabrics. I strive for texture and color combinations that are unique and cannot be reproduced," she said. Although Annie sells her works from her shop, she also weaves for personal enjoyment.

To dress the loom, it may take Annie two or three days. She also produces many different patterns by the way she operates the treadle. Annie will measure how many yards she needs, and then put the material in the reed string by string. It usually takes about 20 yards of fabric for 10 scarves, she said.

In addition to seeing Annie's works at Super Sunday, they may also be seen at Cable and Craft, located on Dickinson Avenue.

Annie also teaches weaving on an individual basis.

Reagans comfort child and father-in-law of astronaut Ronald McNair at memorial for Challenger crew

Q Is it true that the White House pressured the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to launch the ill-fated Challenger space shuttle on Jan. 28 so that President Reagan could talk to its crew during his State of the Union address? —Philip J. Murphy, Waltham, Mass.

A The White House has persistently denied that it exerted any pressure on NASA to launch Challenger on Jan. 28 to coincide with Reagan's speech. Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman, describes the allegation as "the most vicious and distorted rumor I have ever heard... It is a rumor perpetrated by the press." He has explained, however, that the President's speech, as written for delivery on Jan. 28, did contain a reference to the Challenger and that when the space shuttle exploded, killing all seven crew members, Reagan postponed his address for a week.

Q I've just finished reading a memoir by Steve McQueen's first wife, Neile, in which she tells about their 15 years of marriage and how McQueen used to slug her around, and I'm moved to inquire: How large an alimony or financial settlement did she get for taking all that punishment?—Marilyn D., Fairfield, Conn.

A Approximately $1 million.

Q Having watched George C. Scott on TV playing Benito Mussolini, the Italian dictator, I've become interested in Mussolini, the Don Juan. Can you tell us how many wives, mistresses and children he had?—Lilianne D., La Mirada, Calif.

A Benito Mussolini (1883-1945) had only one wife, the former Rachele Guidi, by whom he had five children: Edda, Vittorio, Bruno, Romano and Anna Marie. He also had countless mistresses, among them Margherita Sarfatti, Angela Curti and Claretta Petacci. One of Mussolini's first mistresses was Ida Dalser, by whom he had an illegitimate son, Benito, born physically and mentally retarded. Dalser died in 1935 in a mental hospital—as did her son, seven years later. As a Don Juan, Mussolini was notoriously indiscriminate, taking up with women of all classes, shapes and temperaments. One of his most scandalous affairs involved Magda Coraboeuf, a French actress who adopted the stage name Fontanges. She journeyed to Rome in 1937 to interview the dictator, then announced to the press that she would never return to Paris until Mussolini made love to her. "I stayed in Rome two months," she later wrote, "and the Duce [chief] had me twenty times." When Mussolini tried to get rid of Coraboeuf, she took poison, wounded the French ambassador to Italy in an assassination attempt, was sentenced to a year in jail and subsequently became an Axis spy.

Benito and breed: He still found time for mistresses

Q What is the real name of the actress who calls herself Whoopi Goldberg? She played the leading role in the movie "The Color Purple."—Norelle Adams, Laurel, Miss.

Comic Billy Crystal clowns with the real Whoopi

Q Isn't it true that, unbeknownst to the actors and actresses she worked with, Joan Crawford was a closet bisexual?—P.H., Hot Springs, Ark.

Q What goes on between Imelda Marcos, once the most powerful woman in the Philippines, and Cristina Ford, once the most powerful woman in the household of auto executive Henry Ford II? —L.K., Birmingham, Mich.

A Imelda Marcos and Cristina Ford, ex-wife of Henry Ford II, are dear-dear friends.

Q Coming from Great Britain, I am amazed to observe how much renown Joan Collins, the British actress, has earned in America. What exactly is her talent? —P.L., Washington, D.C.

A Joan Collins has a talent for publicity and self-promotion. She also is adequate for the acting roles she attempts.

"A lot of people assumed, because I was pretty, that I was dumb"

How Cybill Shepherd

FROM THE TIME CYBILL Shepherd was 5, she had fantasies of growing up to be an actress, a dancer and a singer. In 1975, her fantasies came true. She made a film called At Long Last Love. Though she'd already appeared in The Last Picture Show, The Heartbreak Kid and Daisy Miller, she had never before danced and sung onscreen. When she did, the critics were merciless. A national TV reviewer said bluntly: "Cybill Shepherd cannot sing, dance or act."

Eleven years later, Shepherd still carries the scars. "I'm still getting slammed because of that movie," she said. "And it's really hurtful. I used to have moments of real despair, where I felt like I'd never do anything ever again. But just when I absolutely felt like giving up, someone would give me the littlest bit of encouragement. I knew I could sing and act. Deep down, I knew my career wasn't over. But I needed to prove it to myself. So it really set out a task in front of me. Though it was painful, I'm a survivor, and I like the challenge."

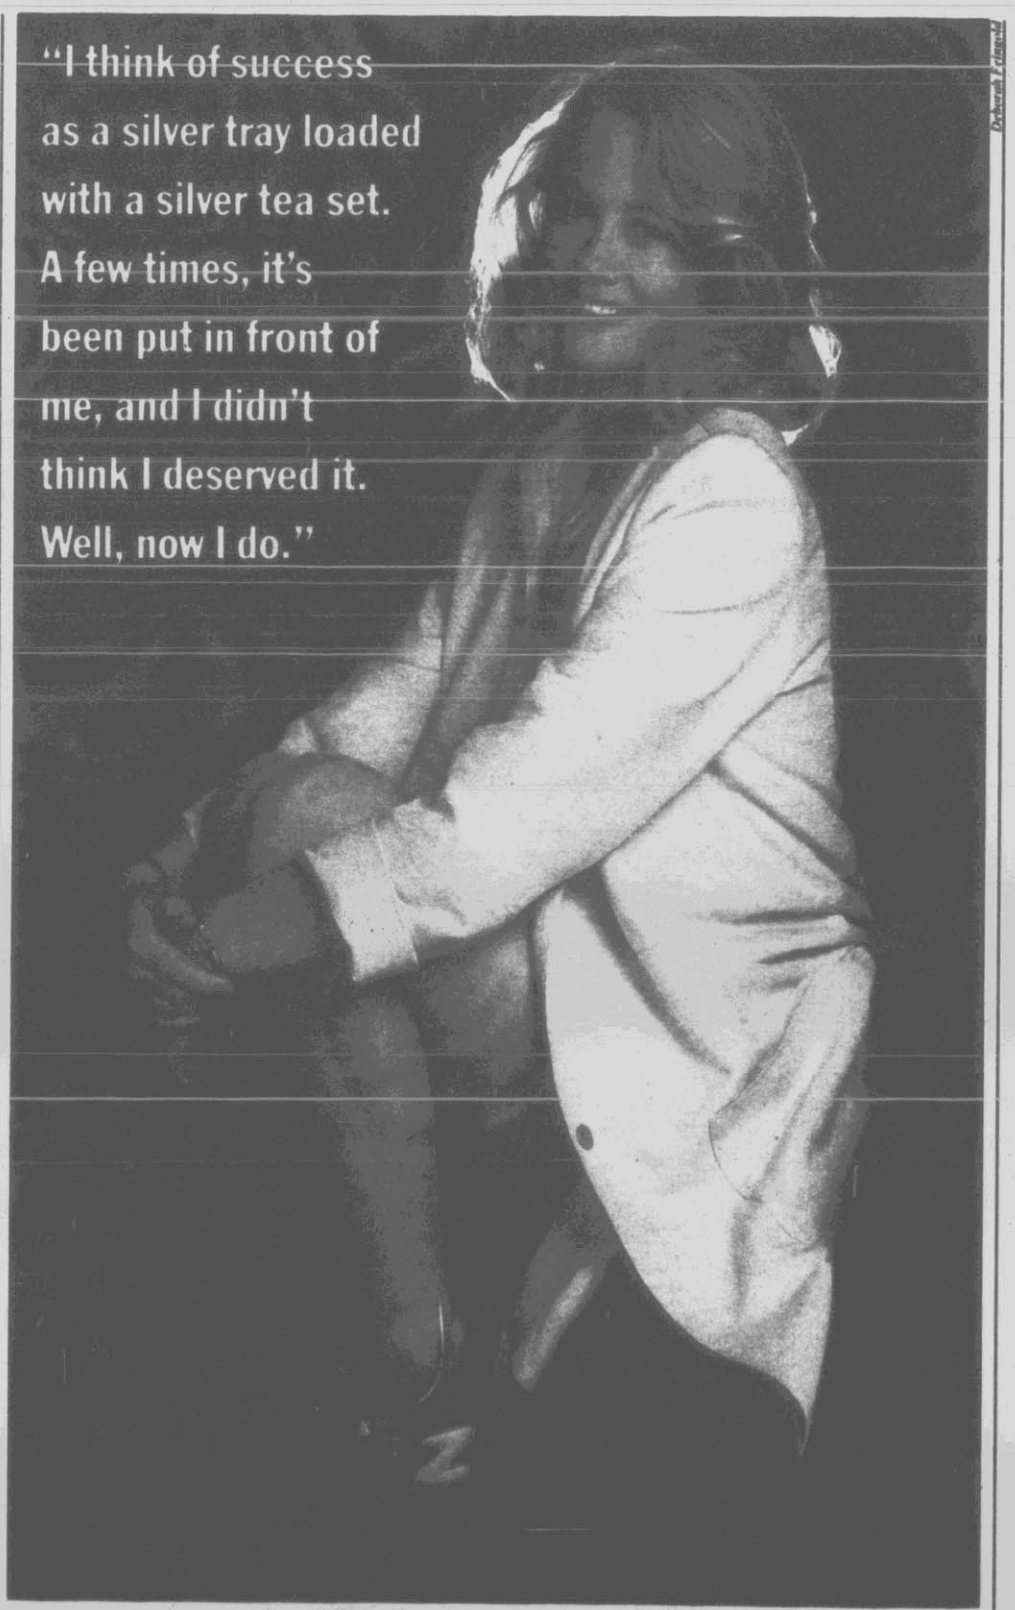

Cybill Shepherd, now 36, has spent the last 10 years meeting that challenge head-on. After making one more major movie—Taxi Driver—she returned home to Memphis, where she married and had a child. For four years, while raising her daughter, she quietly rebuilt her career, performing in nightclubs and regional theater. It wasn't until 1983 that she returned to the public eye, appearing in the short-lived TV series Yellow Rose. But it's in her hit series, Moonlighting, that Shepherd finally proved both to herself and her former critics that she was not to be written off. She and the show have drawn unqualified raves.

Anyone who thinks shooting a TV series is glamorous should consider Shepherd's schedule. When I met her at 9 a.m. on the studio lot, Shepherd already had been at work for two hours, having been picked up at her home a little after 6. She would continue working until 7 p.m., spending her off-camera moments in her custom-made trailer, which is where we talked.

Shepherd is as pretty in person as on the screen. Unlike the cold-hearted temptresses she played in her early films, she is warm and unpretentious, down to the running shoes she wears beneath her high-fashion wardrobe. And for someone who could easily gloat, she is philosophical about her current success.

"I don't know if I'm surprised," she said when I asked her about it. "I sort of had the feeling I'd be back. It's a cliché, but I've always thought of success as a silver tray loaded with a silver tea set. A few times, it's been put in front of me, and I didn't think I deserved it. Well, now I do. I think I'm worthy of it. And I can handle it. This is the best time of my life."

Shepherd was named for both her grandfather, Cy, and her father, Bill. The family own an appliance distributorship, which is still run by her grandmother. She has an older sister who's a nurse, and a younger brother who produces commercials in Memphis. Shepherd said she was a tomboy as a child. "I could outrun every boy in the neighborhood, except for one," she recalled. "One of my earliest fantasies was to swim the English Channel. But the problem was, I failed gym in high school. I was kind of a rebel, and I talked back to the teacher."

When she was 16, Shepherd's cousin entered her in the Miss Teenage Memphis contest. "I wouldn't have entered myself," she explained. "I didn't have much confidence. I didn't come from a society that gives women that. Even if you were pretty, it was hard to believe in yourself." She won the title and went on to the Miss Teenage America competition, where she earned the congeniality award. "I was embarrassed for years to admit that," she said, laughing.

A Memphis photographer, sensing Shepherd's potential, recommended her to an agent, and in 1968, when she was 18, Shepherd found herself modeling in New York, gracing the covers of Vogue and Glamour and representing Cover Girl makeup. "I hated modeling," she said, lying down on the floor to stretch. "You were never treated like you had a brain, and what I really wanted to do was to go to Florence to study art."

However, the money was appealing, so she remained in New York and spent her time off-camera studying English literature at New York University. "I think the experience was good for me," she added from the floor. "When you're a model, you're faced with enormous rejection every day. I think that's where I developed the rhinoceros skin that's helped me to get through."

It was Shepherd's picture on the cover of Glamour that inspired director Peter Bogdanovich to cast her as Jacy in The Last Picture Show, Shepherd's first film. "I was afraid of the role," she recalled. "It represented all I had been striving not to be. I was never the Southern bitch goddess that went around destroying men like pulling petals off a flower. I was always more the girl next door. I had maybe three boyfriends the entire time I was growing up."

While the film was being made, Shepherd acquired a new boyfriend: Bogdanovich himself. Their relationship has often been described as a sophisticated man molding an unformed girl in his own image. Shepherd strongly resents the implication. "It's as if, when Peter came along, I'd never even heard of opera or anything," she said. "I think I molded Peter as much as he molded me. But I'm certainly not diminishing his huge influence on me. He was a great teacher, and he believed in me, not only as an actress but as an intelligent person. You know, a lot of people assumed, because I was pretty, that I was dumb. I had an agent who even talked slowly when she spoke to me. She thought otherwise I wouldn't understand."

Shepherd's walkie-talkie crackled. She was needed on the set. She hurried off. By the time she returned, it was lunch hour, which Shepherd spent, as she does every day, race-walking in a nearby park.

Back in the trailer, now dressed in a red velour robe, Shepherd explained that her relationship with Bogdanovich went on for three more years following the disastrous At Long Last Love, which they had made together. "Though we were still happy with each other, we were growing in different ways," she said. "It was time for that part of the relationship to be over. Peter and I are really close, and we'll always love each other. Like I said, Peter helped give me confidence."

Shepherd's confidence was at its lowest ebb when, following their breakup, she went to New York to sing. "I went to sing at The Cookery," she recalled, "and it was absolutely the most horrifying experience of my life. I was so deeply insecure after At Long Last Love, and I was trying to prove to myself that I did have talent. I had two devastating weeks of performances, and though I was supposed to sing indefinitely, I went to the owner and said I just couldn't do it. I called up my mother, who suggested I come home to Memphis."

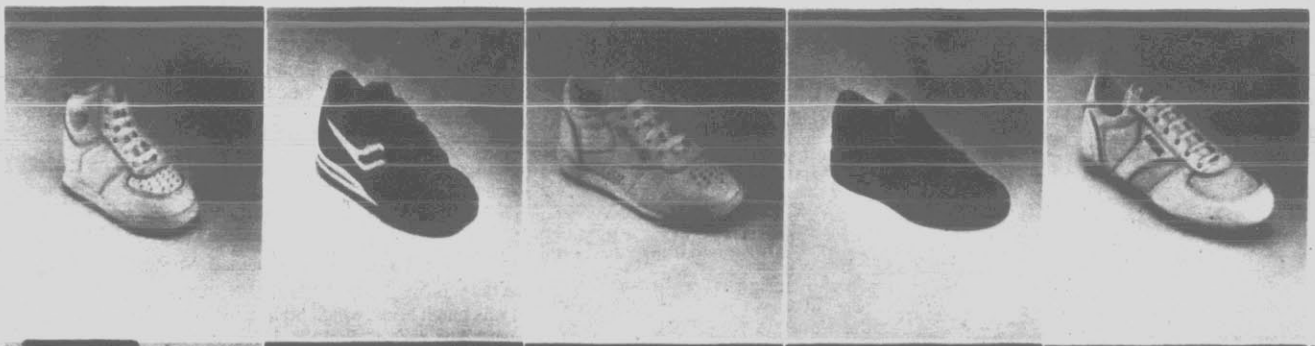

Though Shepherd had planned just a visit, she soon changed her mind. "Two weeks after I got there, I saw this guy standing at a bar," she said, smiling. "He was wonderful-looking, and I got my brother to invite him to come to our table and have a drink."

His name was David Ford, an automobile-parts salesman who, unlike the previous men in her life, was neither ambitious nor driven. The two shared a love of music and a desire for a family. They got married and had a daughter, Clementine. "I enjoyed being married," said Shepherd. "It was really a very, very happy time while it worked."

But her own ambition never left her. From the time her daughter was only 6 weeks old, Shepherd already was eager to return to work. "I hadn't given up," she said. "I needed to get my chops together and perform." Remembering the advice of Orson Welles, a friend from the Bogdanovich days, that she do regional theater, Shepherd took her family on the road. Ford quit his job to be her manager. By singing in jazz clubs and performing in dinner theaters, she polished her craft while also rebuilding her pride. "For the first time, I did comedy," she explained. "I found that I could make people laugh. It was so fulfilling. It made me realize that even though I was working on the lowest echelons of this profession, I could still be satisfied as an artist. I just had to adjust."

In 1982, Shepherd's marriage broke up, but by then she felt confident enough to try Hollywood again. Though her former agent was hardly encouraging, telling her that she'd "been away for four years and might as well be dead," a determined Shepherd found herself a new agent and did a guest appearance on Fantasy Island. "Suddenly the word was out in town that I was back," she said. "People were curious to see me. They wanted to see how I'd aged."

"How had you aged?" I asked.

"Oh, in a million ways," she said with a grin. "Thank God for that."

Her walkie-talkie sounded again, calling her back to work. As she explained later, her hectic schedule leaves her little free time, which she spends mostly with her daughter. Though she sees a number of different men and doesn't rule out marrying again, she's currently not interested. "I'm at a place where it's not right for me," she explained. And she's long outgrown the need to have men tell her what to do. "I dated a guy who wanted to take me away from all this. I said, 'Are you kidding me? I've been fighting like a hellion to get in the middle of it!'"

Which is where Shepherd intends to stay. "I'm aware that I'm not going to be a star of a series forever," she said. "But I do know that I'm in this business for good. I hope to play character roles when I'm 60. I may be back at Granny's Dinner Theater in Dallas, but I'll still be performing. I've been in this business 18 years now. It's been an absolute roller coaster. But I've seen that it is possible to come home again."

And as for what Cybill Shepherd has learned from this odyssey, she said she now knows the difference between fame and personal satisfaction: "I think the first time around, though I was successful, I didn't get a chance to feel truly confident on the inside. And fame is nothing without that. What's important in life is finding out what you really like doing, to be challenged by it and to achieve something for yourself. That's the only way you ever really grow."

SMART CHOICES YOU CAN MAKE

WHAT'S UP THIS WEEK

BY LYNN MINTON

Peter C. Borsari

BOOKS

AS TIME GOES BY (HARPER & ROW, $18.95), Laurence Learner's new biography of Ingrid Bergman, depicts a thoroughly selfish woman who sacrificed the needs of husbands, children, lovers and friends to her own ambition. When Bergman was in New York briefly in 1957, for example, she decided not to see her 18-year-old daughter, Pia, although they had been separated for several years. She was afraid that the emotional reunion would interfere with her plans. Learner neglects to mention that the actress, in her autobiography published in 1980, called this "one of the greatest mistakes of my life," deeply regretting how terribly she had wounded Pia.

From the evidence of Learner's own very readable book, Bergman was more than a self-involved, ambitious user. She was a woman of talent and perseverance who survived Hollywood's ruthless moguls and three husbands (with their own not-so-altruistic agenda) And she made her peace with her four children while coping finally, with dignity and courage, with the ravaging disease that took her life in 1982.

ALEX, THE LIFE OF A CHILD IS achingly difficult to watch because it's the true story of a little girl who died at the age of 8 of cystic fibrosis. As played with heartbreaking authenticity by Bonnie Bedelia, Craig T. Nelson and young Gennie James, we are touched by the love and strength—as well as the pain—of this family. THE AMERICAN FILM INSTITUTE'S tribute to longtime writer-director Billy Wilder is one of those star-studded affairs that many viewers love. On stage for the festivities—taped March 6 for airing next Saturday—are Jack Lemmon, Audrey Hepburn, Fred MacMurray, Tony Curtis, Carol Burnett and Walter Matthau. Clips from their films with Wilder—such as The Apartment, Some Like It Hot, The Front Page, Sabrina—show why Wilder won the Oscar six times. NBC 9:30-11 pm ET.

WHY DID THE late billionaire Howard Hughes—a brilliant inventor, daring test pilot and notorious womanizer (including relationships with Ginger Rogers, Katharine Hepburn and Ava Gardner)—become pathologically afraid of germs and suffer three major emotional breakdowns? The Hughes estate appointed psychologist Raymond D. Fowler to do a "psychological autopsy." His findings: emotional trauma from the loss of both of Hughes' parents while he was in his teens, brain damage from a series of car and plane accidents in young adulthood and subsequent lifelong codeine addiction In the May Psychology Today.

A Weekend Business

More than 75% of the people who patronize movie theaters in this country do so on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. So reports Art Murphy, an entertainment analyst for "Variety," the show-business trade paper. In view of the fact that today's moviegoing audience consists largely of children, teenagers and young adults, Murphy's disclosure comes as no big surprise.

An AIDS Update

Aside from abstinence, is there any way of preventing the sexual transmission of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, which destroys a body's immune system and brings on death?

According to Drs. Marcus Conant and Jay Levy of the University of California at San Francisco, condoms—properly used—block the transmission of the virus that causes AIDS. They warn of carelessness, however, and stress hygiene.

In their study, financed in part by the State of California and the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, the researchers tested five popular brands of condoms. Each was filled with a liquid containing a concentration of the AIDS virus 5000 times greater than that found in human semen. After three weeks of tests, in which the sheaths were subjected to various amounts of pressure, all five brands proved impermeable, leak-proof and successful in blocking the virus.

Fame's Reward

Mr. T, in wax, on way to museum

Make it big in Hollywood, and a star bearing your name is implanted in the sidewalk on Hollywood Boulevard. In London, fame is acknowledged differently—with a statue in Madame Tussaud's wax museum.

Marie Tussaud (1761-1850) was a Swiss sculptor who worked in wax. Imprisoned during the French Reign of Terror, she shaped heads of famous persons, using those freshly guillotined as her models. She emigrated to London in 1802 and opened her renowned wax museum, which contains statues of notables both dead and alive.

The latest living celebrity so honored was the 33-year-old star of The A-Team—Mr. T, born Lawrence Tureaud.

How to make the most of summer skin, hair, body

Beauty On The Beach

BY ELIZABETH GAYNOR

Summer hair forecast:

Stylist Andre Tavernese of New York's Bumble & Bumble salon stresses the importance of getting a good haircut, preferably with contouring near the face for a natural, free look at the beach. Summer cuts are closer to the head, more fringed at the ends; short and loose or try long—with movement—and weighty but not messy. To go from beach to an evening look, crimp rinsed, wet hair into place with fingers; no electric dryer, brush or comb. Fluff out with fingers for fuller look when dry, or leave close to head and wavy.

Get a cut that lets your hair do naturally what it does best. Close trim at nape gives neat look; crown is full, front is fringed.

For men, run gel through wet hair. Allow to dry in wet look, or finger-comb to loosen. Bonus: Keeps hair back for running.

To "sun set" long hair, wet and apply gel, fasten at nape, twist in tight coil, tie end and dry. Comb out into waves at shoulders.

LIKE PLANTS, PEOPLE NEED SUN TO GROW and flourish. Our bodies create vitamin D from contact with natural light, sunny days lift our spirits, the warmth loosens our muscles for exercise, and sitting outside in the sunlight just plain feels good on the skin. Summer is prime time to enjoy outdoor pleasures that make us look and feel better, like swimming, basking on the beach or moving almost any winter exercise routine outdoors to a sandy surface—less jarring to the joints. But beaching it on those long sunny days carries its own set of concerns: Our bodies must adjust to the stepped-up heat produced by vigorous outdoor activity; regular swimming and increased showering can dry the hair and skin; and sun both endangers healthy skin and ages it tremendously.

"Unfortunately, people think a bronze look is healthy and appealing, but a tan is really a reflection of skin damage," says Dr. Deborah Sarnoff, dermatologist and clinical instructor at New York University School of Medicine. Further, the ultraviolet rays in sunlight promote skin cancer. The Skin Cancer Foundation cautions that this is the most common cancer today, affecting half a million Americans yearly. Be more beautiful and healthy on the beach this summer by heeding the sun-wise tips on these pages.

Solutions: Sun Protection

- Always use sun lotion; use heavier sunscreen (for more protection) on nose, forehead and hands to avoid sunburn.
- Check SPF (Sun Protection Factor) in lotions. Most range from 2 to 15, which means they can slow down your hourly rate of tanning as much as 15 times.
- Wear a hat and sunglasses. Note: Choose glasses made specifically to block ultraviolet A rays, which cause skin aging and contribute to skin cancer. All sunglasses block ultraviolet B rays.
- Buy makeup with sunscreen; lipstick, foundation, moisturizer, even hair sprays now have it.
- Avoid lotions with PABA if you are prone to allergic reactions; best to test first on inner arm for two days.
- Use non-oily sunscreen on face to avoid breaking out, clogging pores.
- Don't shave before sunning; shaving sensitizes skin.
- For sunburn, take aspirin and bathe in a tub of cool baking soda.

Pomarosa scarf; Calvin Klein Sport suit

To tie a turban, fold a large scarf in thirds, center the scarf and then wrap it around your head; twist the ends of the scarf a full turn (don't tie them), now tuck the ends into the scarf's folds.

BEAUTY REPORT

HAIR CARE

WHY YOUR FAVORITE SHAMPOO WILL WORK BETTER IF YOU STOP USING IT FOR 14 DAYS.

It's exasperating. The very shampoo that has left your hair so silky and clean, the shampoo you depend on—subtly, then noticeably stops working. That fresh softness you prize so much in clean hair is gone. Your hair looks limp . . . dull . . . blah.

Why why why? "Shampoo build-up" is the reason. Each washing, even by fine shampoos, leaves a shampoo "residue." Sadly, certain cleansing mixtures, and conditioning agents, if they are effective, leave a telltale residue that has been measured precisely in laboratory studies.

Recent tests on 15 quality shampoos show that residues keep accumulating each time you shampoo. It's a fact of hair life!

Getting rid of the build-up. Make no mistake. You must, temporarily, switch to a shampoo with super rinsability. One that has gently proven its power to revitalize the hair. And don't put it off. Shampoo build-up is more than unattractive: it can impair the soft feel of your hair . . . its manageability . . . and it can eventually harm your hair.

A single wash reduces residue by 70% to 90%. "Test results indicate a single wash with Neutrogena® Shampoo was adequate to remove in excess of 90% of the residue. Even with conditioners, which are far more substantive to the hair, a single wash with Neutrogena removes 70% of the residue."*

*Excerpt from Neutrogena Skin Care Institute Report

Which shampoo rinses the best? According to laboratory tests of 15 quality shampoos, Neutrogena Shampoo ranked No. 1, and "demonstrated consistently superior rinsability with almost no build-up itself."

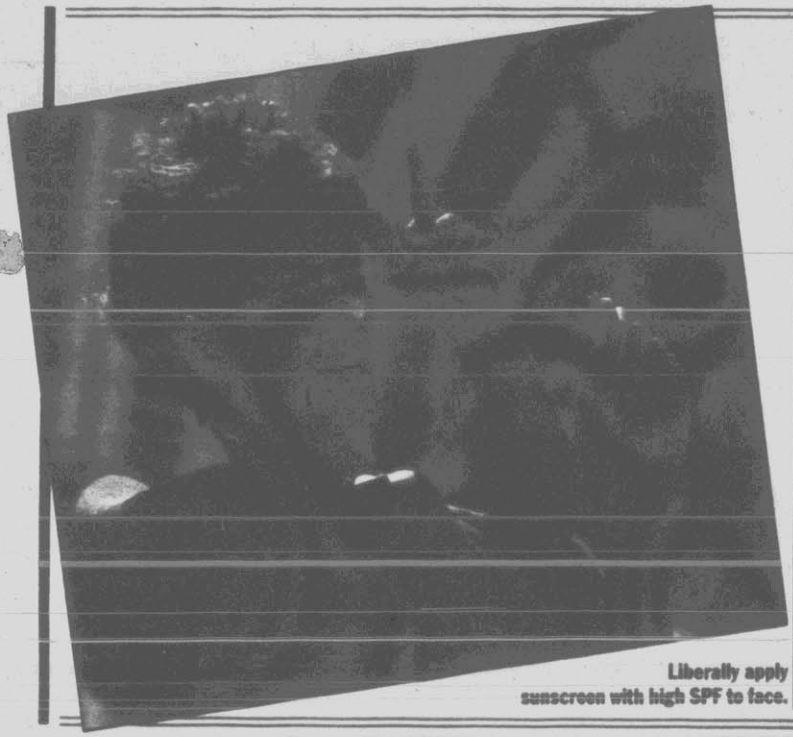

The clincher: in addition to instantly freeing your hair from most build-up in a single washing, Neutrogena leaves a scant residue, a negligible trace compared to all the other shampoos tested.

If you feel you want to revitalize your hair, try Neutrogena Shampoo for 14 days. Think of it as a freshening "vacation" . . . and afterwards, your hair will respond again happily to your favorite shampoo. If you use your Neutrogena as often as needed, your favorite shampoo will keep on being your favorite!

Neutrogena Shampoo is sold with a satisfaction-or-your-money-back guarantee. It is available at better drug stores and cosmetic counters. Look for it—in the white box with the brown band.

ATTENTION: MOUSSE/GEL USERS: Daily use of mousses and gels gradually builds up residue. Hair resists styling, loses shine. Most shampoos just can't cope. But just completed tests show high-rinsability Neutrogena Shampoo is able to remove an average 90% of mousse or gel residue in 1 washing. (Residue Removal Study, April, 1985. Neutrogena Laboratories.)*

Gordon M. Buehrig, designer of the legendary Cord 810, Duesenberg J, Auburn Speedster and, now, Director of Franklin Mint Precision Models.

The 1935 Mercedes 500K Special Roadster.

A masterpiece in miniature, it is the first in Franklin Mint's extraordinary new series, The Great Classic Sports Roadsters.

Director Gordon Buehrig's determination to create a 1:24 scale model of unparalleled authenticity, detail and craftsmanship required dedication to excellence every step of the way.

An exhaustive search located from the fewer than 20 originally made, the best of the 500K's still extant today.

The best had recently been voted Best in Show at Concours d'Elegance. From hundreds of photographs and precise measurements of this splendid example, a prototype was built.

The precise Mercedes 500K color.

Each piece then hand-waxed to a high gloss and reinspected. Imagine hand-waxing a model car. The 111 finished pieces finally hand-assembled to form a single car.

There is remarkable duplication of the original's extraordinary amount of gleaming chrome trimwork, precisely placed, right down to the tiny tips on either of the fender-tred rublines.

Full dashboard instrumentation.

The magnificent Mercedes is available only through The Franklin Mint

Crafted and imported exclusively by Franklin Mint Precision Models, the 500K is being offered at the remarkably low price of $90. Upon receiving the order form below, payment will be billed to you in 3 monthly installments of $30 each.

"We were determined to make the ultimate in die-cast models," said Mr. Buehrig. "We succeeded."

Juvenile-justice experts give their views

How Should We Handle Young Offenders?

BY AL SANTOLI

Ron H. is a tall, soft-spoken 16-year-old from a notoriously rough neighborhood in a Massachusetts industrial town. Raised by his grandparents, he has never spent any length of time with his father or mother. The streets are his school.

Ron has been arrested four times, committed to the state juvenile corrections system three times. The seriousness of his offenses has escalated: for shoplifting, the state gave him probation; for stealing cars, he had to do time in juvenile facilities. At this writing, he is being held for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, waiting to be sent to a secure (locked) facility.

In a "shelter care" group facility, a converted farmhouse in Middleton, Mass., Ron says: "My grandparents tried to encourage me to go to school, but I never wanted to go. Who cares? I don't need that. I'm smart enough to live by myself. I got in trouble because of the people I hang around with. Right now I'm trying to quit drugs—heroin, you name it, I did it."

"In the past," he adds, "I was arrested and committed to DYS [the state-run Department of Youth Services] three times before this. I never took any of what they said into my head. So when I was released, I'd just go back out and do more crime. Who cares? If I was released today and went back to the street, I'd still be doing drugs. My friends like to do crime. So I'm stuck in a box with no way out."

There are thousands of Rons throughout the United States—juvenile criminals, who constitute one of this country's gravest problems. More than a million juveniles were arrested in 1984—yet police estimate that for every arrest, five crimes are committed. Even so, the number of juveniles in correctional facilities is on the rise. The FBI reports that the rate of violent crime by juveniles is double what it was 20 years ago. In 1983 and 1984, offenders less than 18 years old were arrested in connection with nearly 2000 murders, 7000 rapes and 50,000 aggravated assaults.

In an effort to find an answer to the problem of dealing with juvenile criminals firmly yet humanely, and at the same time protecting the rights of ordinary citizens, PARADE asked juvenile-justice experts around the U.S. for suggestions on how to improve the present system.

Here is a consensus of their recommendations:

• Violent and chronic juvenile offenders should be the first priority of federal, state and local officials. When released, they must have effective and efficient caseworker attention with involvement in community-based programs influenced by positive role models and peer-group activities.

- For the 7 percent to 10 percent who are chronic and violent offenders—and who commit 60 percent to 70 percent of all serious crimes—if initial treatment does not succeed, long-term lockup may be the only solution.
- Chronic juvenile offenders begin their activities at an early age, so intervention must come early. The family and school must work with juvenile-corrections authorities.
- For relatively nonserious offenders, diversified community-based programs and intensive counseling may prove more successful and cost-effective than jails.
- Courts must be consistent with sentencing and treatment prescribed for specific categories of offenses. Youths must be made to realize that they cannot manipulate the system.
- If a young offender's home life is crime-producing or inadequate for rehabilitation, foster or group care may be necessary. Local and state corrections officials should interact with these programs to maintain quality and effectiveness.
- Programs for young offenders (ages 16-19), both institutional and community-based, should offer basic educational opportunities, job training and subsidized employment. The California Youth Authority system, the largest in the U.S., offers a wide variety of services. Programs include locked detention facilities, wilderness camps and private-sector partnerships, such as the TWA computer-training project in Ventura.

A revolution in juvenile justice was sparked in Massachusetts in 1972. The Department of Youth Services, then under the direction of Jerome Miller, closed most of its state-run correctional institutions. They were replaced by a network of small, community-based programs, most of them privately run.

Some corrections officials criticized the chaos of the radical transition and lack of discipline in many of the alternative programs. But the humanistic concept and international attention given to the reforms led to the U.S. Congress creating the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974. This act prohibits the incarceration of youths for "status offenses," which include such things as truancy and running away from home.

Some states adopted an extensive deinstitutional approach, but sometimes the results were not what the reformers intended. In Massachusetts, the DYS has had to revise the reforms. Elizabeth Pattullo, an assistant commissioner of the agency, explains: "We've tried to become more consistent by creating a classification policy to deal more effectively with chronic and violent offenders. Once a kid leaves the system, caseworkers try to make sure he doesn't backslide."

A large part of the problem in rehabilitating offenders is their home environment.

Richie Mahoney, 38, an ex-offender, is a counselor at the Northeastern Family Institute's 23-bed "shelter care" center in Middleton, Mass. Beginning at the age of 10, he spent 20 years in and out of state correctional facilities. "There's no way I'd want to be a teenager today," says Mahoney. "The availability of drugs is very scary. Lack of education has a lot to do with a kid's actions. We get a lot of kids who are in the 10th or 11th grade who can't read and write. Most of these kids don't have any discipline at home. They have poor role models. The time that we have them, we try to encourage positive motivation and teach them right from wrong. As much as a kid sometimes gives us a hard time, he knows that he needs discipline if he wants to survive in life. Discipline means taking their privileges away. Being beaten or thrown into isolation has no effect."

Young offenders often remain on the street because police don't believe the courts will deal effectively with them. Many states prohibit juvenile records from being passed on to police or adult courts. This makes it difficult for the courts to monitor a chronic criminal's progression from an early age, give an adequate sentence or prescribe effective treatment.

Alfred Regnery, administrator of the U.S. Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, says: "We are trying to perfect the system. We've got model programs in various cities that deal with chronic offenders—to determine who they are, make good arrests that stick and get a successful prosecution through the juvenile-court system."

Regnery and other juvenile-justice experts advocate the increased role of private agencies in treatment programs for offenders. Richie Mahoney recalls: "When I look back at my whole life, I see I had a chip on my shoulder. I came from a broken home. My brothers were in jail, my father was in jail. I ended up in the system at a young age. But I was exposed to a couple of guys who had been in the same type situation I was. They had turned their lives around. They became my positive role models, my inspiration. I felt, 'Maybe there's a chance for me.' That was the difference. There's hope for a kid if he's given some tools to work with." P

Can You Start Over?

WALLY BREGMAN REMEMBERS THE morning of Feb. 28, 1985, well. He had been president of International Playtex for six years, his $1.4 billion company, with 16,000 employees and 45 plants, had just enjoyed a substantial profit rise, and he planned to congratulate his top managers.

But first, Bregman was to meet at 7:45 in his Stamford, Conn., office with an official from Beatrice Companies, the Chicago-based conglomerate which had bought Playtex six months earlier.

"I was told there was going to be a new president installed and that I had 45 minutes to clean out my office and leave," Bregman recalls. "All he would say was that we had different management styles and that Beatrice wanted to take the company in a new direction.

"I was shocked, angry. The attitude you have is that this is all a dream and when you wake up, it'll be over."

Bregman's wife was surprised to see him home—it wasn't even 9 a.m. yet.

Nothing Runs Like a Deere®

For some, the necessity of beginning again is viewed as a challenge: One study shows that 80 percent of fired employees were dissatisfied with their jobs anyway and welcomed an opportunity to finally try something else. Others, though, cannot seem to cope. Officials of executive job-search companies talk of fired businessmen who become so depressed that they attempt suicide.

"Companies typically don't do a good job of firing people," says Charles Albrecht of Drake Beam Morin (DBM), employment consultants.

"People are often surprised," says Dr. Stephen Morris, a psychologist with DBM. "You'll see some who are quiet and accepting, but you'll also see some angry people. We try to let them talk and get all the anger out. But when they stop with that and ask, 'What am I going to do when I go home tonight?' and, 'What am I going to do next?' that's when they've turned the corner."

Initial optimism over finding a new slot quickly fades to depression when the first few interviews fail to pan out. And the difficulties can be exacerbated at home. Job search must be a family affair, specialists say, noting that the attitude of a fired executive's spouse helps make the process either rewarding or repugnant.

"A good rule of thumb," says DBM chief William Morin, "is: For every $10,000 you've been earning, figure one month until a new job is found."

"I had 45 minutes to clean out my office and leave... the attitude is that you'll wake up and it'll all be over."

—WALLY BREGMAN

"People shouldn't move quickly just to move quickly," says Thomas McLane, managing director of a leading headhunter firm. "Sometimes that's a mistake, if they haven't got their acts together."

Even for those at the highest levels, consultants advise visiting the library to examine lists of concerns doing the sort of work they'd like to perform. Checking with one's circle of associates and acquaintances also may have merit.

Another critical decision involves asking oneself: Did I deserve the money I was getting paid? Was I in over my head? Will I accept a position with a less impressive title or salary?

"There are some people who walk in here with the notion that their next job has to be a 15 percent to 20 percent rise in salary," says Dr. Morris. "Though money is initially what people look at, it turns out to be a third or fourth priority—self-fulfillment is higher."

In December, Wally Bregman opened the Cormorant Beach Club in St. Croix, his new 14-acre Caribbean resort catering, he says, to "people who are like what I was like before that Feb. 28—those with more money than time." He adds, "The best thing about it is there won't be anyone in Chicago telling me what I can or can't do."

Q. Should a woman exercise during her menstrual period?

A. There is no evidence to suggest any reason for stopping exercise during menstruation. If a woman experiences specific problems, however, she should see a physician. Female athletes have set world records and won Olympic medals while menstruating. A woman should feel free to exercise whenever she chooses.

Q. How do you know when you have hypertension?

A. There is no exact blood-pressure reading that defines hypertension, but arbitrary cut-off points have been set by the American Heart Association at 140/90 millimeters of mercury for both men and women in all age groups. The first number, or systolic pressure, represents the pressure when the heart is contracting; the second number, or diastolic pressure, is the pressure when the heart is relaxing between contractions.

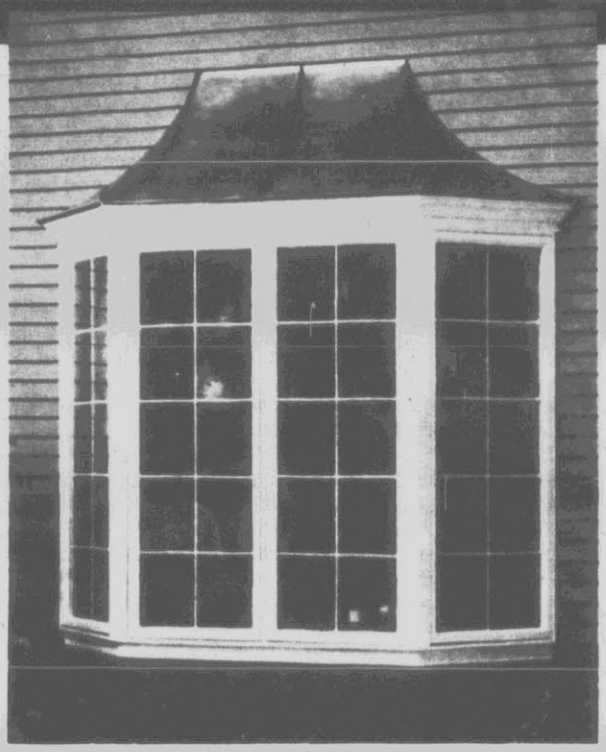

Q. Lately, my memory has been failing me. Is there something that can help with this embarrassing problem?

A. Your physician must determine if there is anything organically wrong in your body. If there are no medical problems involved, your condition could be the result of a vitamin deficiency. If so, choline—considered one of the B-complex vitamins—can be helpful with memory loss. Lecithin, a natural food derived from soybeans, contains choline and inositol. Choline is also found in fish, green leafy vegetables and wheat germ. Manganese and zinc also help with memory loss.

BRIGHT IDEAS TO MAKE LIFE BETTER

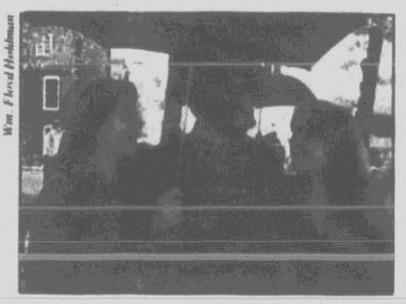

BY JANE CIABATTARI

Choosing A Long Distance Phone Company

IF YOU'RE HAVING TROUBLE DECIDING on a long-distance phone company, here are some questions to ask those available in your area:

- Is there a one-time start-up fee?
- Is there a flat monthly fee?
- Is there a monthly minimum usage requirement?
- Is there a discount for a large number of calls?
- Do I pay a higher rate for a call's first minute than for later minutes?
- Do rates vary with distance?
- Are there any time-of-day restrictions?
- Are incomplete calls, wrong numbers and poor connections credited to my account?
- Is there a discount when paying my bill by credit card?
- Can I have access to the long-distance service when I'm away from home? How?
- Is operator assistance available 24 hours a day?
- How would I cancel service?
- Are facilities adequate—will my call go through every time?
- What is the quality of the sound? Any distortion or echoing? (To find this out, also ask friends or neighbors about the sound quality of the long-distance companies they use.)

This Year's SPRING-INTO-SUMMER Look

Steve Smith

INSTEAD OF investing in a new suit this spring, look for a pullover and cardigan set to wear with a favorite skirt. It's a new look that's softer than a suit, and it travels well. Silk, cotton or linen blends are all cool enough to take you into summer. Tie your look together with a new necklace (look for oversize beads in solid colors or white), a long skinny scarf (make it polka dot) and a Chanel-type cotton or linen quilted handbag with a chain strap.

We'd like to hear from you. Send your Bright Ideas to make life better to: BRIGHT IDEAS, PARADE, 750 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017

Eddie Adams

JOE PAPP IS A SKINNY, INTENSE guy with all his hair who is the biggest thing on Broadway since Flo Ziegfeld. And, in between staging hit plays and feuding with critics and other enemies, he is plowing back his own time and his own money into teaching our kids the beauty of the English language.

He's introducing them to Shakespeare.

Starting this month and continuing until the money runs out, Papp will be herding 1000 New York schoolchildren a week through a legitimate Broadway theater called the Belasco to see full-blown professional performances of Romeo and Juliet and As You Like It. He's hired Oscar-winning actress Estelle Parsons to direct a company of 16 young actors and actresses—white, black, Hispanic and Asian-American—and he has put up more than a million bucks to get the thing launched.

I don't know of anyone on Broadway or in Hollywood or in television who has ever tried anything this big without expecting to earn a dollar. Even the stagehands' union is going along—which, if you know the Broadway labor scene, is itself an act of God.

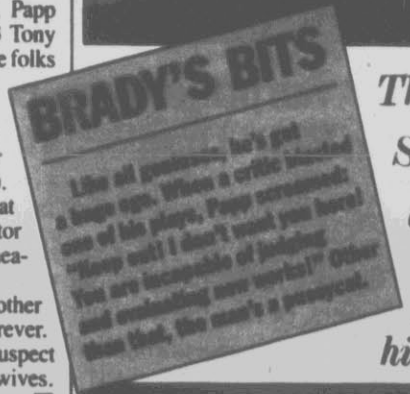

It is a startling, innovative idea and, if it works, could be the blueprint for other great American cities with their own regional theaters to try the same thing.

But we are accustomed to being surprised by Joe Papp. Thirty-one years ago, he began producing plays for the people, beginning with Much Ado About Nothing at the Emmanuel Presbyterian Church in Manhattan. He founded the New York Shakespeare Festival, conned major stars to do plays at night in Central Park, staged the original Hair in 1967, got Linda Ronstadt to do Gilbert & Sullivan and La Bohème. And his production of A Chorus Line, now also a film, is the longest-running hit in Broadway history. All in all, Papp works have won three Pulitzer Prizes and 23 Tony Awards. Not bad for a kid from Brooklyn whose folks spoke only Yiddish at home.

He did his first theatrical work in the Navy during World War II, studied acting and directing on the GI Bill and worked as a stage manager for CBS ("television wasn't my thing," he admits). He put on his early Shakespeare plays in that New York church after sweet-talking the pastor into believing it resembled the historic Globe Theatre in 17th-century London.

If the city's board of education puts up another million, Joe says, the student project can run forever. He's been sweet-talking the mayor too. You suspect Papp can sweet-talk anyone. Except maybe his wives.

He's had four of them.

Marty Sorge

This Wednesday will be Shakespeare's 442nd birthday. And a generation raised on "Miami Vice" will be seeing performances of his work. Joe Papp is buying the tickets.

• SKY LIGHT! It may pay to advertise, but letters of the name of the planet at right are jumbled and need to be rearranged. How quickly can you put them in order?

RING-STRING CHALLENGE

Trick: Two ends of a piece of string are tied. A ring is placed on the loop, the ends of which are held over the forefingers. Object: To remove the ring from the string.

Secret: Grasp the string at point A, fig. 1. Loop this part of string around finger in direction indicated by arrow.

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: WITH THE ARRIVAL OF PRINCE VALIANT AND HIS SAXONS, KING ARTHUR'S ARMY IS COMPLETE. MORDRED HAD COUNTED ON WEARING DOWN THE INVADERS BUT THE THREE FORCES HAVE SURVIVED INTACT. AND THE DEFENSES AROUND CAMELOT HAVE BEEN BADLY BATTERED.

"NO MATTER," MUTTERS MORDRED AS HE CONTEMPLATES HIS PLANS.

FOR HE HAS ASSEMBLED A GREAT ARMY, SWELLED BY MERCENARIES FROM THE CONTINENT. THEY HAD HEARD THAT THE PAY WAS GOOD AND THE PLUNDER BETTER-- THAT IN RETURN FOR LOYALTY MORDRED WOULD GIVE THEM ALL OF BRITAIN TO DESPOIL. MORDRED KEPT HIS WORD.

AS THE GREAT CONTEST LOOMS MORDRED SETS HIS MEN TO WORK IN THE FIELDS AND FORESTS OF THE ROYAL DOMAIN. WHAT ARE THEY UP TO? MORDRED'S SMILE IS THAT OF A CAT-- MUTE, MALICIOUS, AND ALL-KNOWING.
