Europe Moves To Curb Khadafy

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration today hailed European curbs on Libyan trade and diplomatic personnel and the arrest of 21 Libyans in Britain but said additional steps must be taken to combat international terrorism.

"These are the kind of steps, this is the kind of cooperation that is essential if we're going to combat terrorism on an international basis," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

Only a day earlier, President Reagan complained he "can't see any justification" for France's refusal to permit U.S. warplanes to fly over French territory en route to Libya. Reagan said he hopes to discuss the issue at the Tokyo summit next month "to see what we can work out together."

In London, police announced the arrest of 21 Libyans — including a pilot who threatened to form an anti-American suicide squad — in a series of raids early today in England, Wales and Scotland. The Home Office said they were suspected of involvement in "student revolutionary activities" and would be expelled from the country as a matter of national security.

In addition, 12 European nations imposed restrictions on the size and activities of Libyan diplomatic missions, known as "People's Bureaus," in protest of Libya's alleged involvement in terrorism.

"It is the sort of action the president is looking for," Speakes said. "The president is pleased that the steps have been taken by European governments to expel Libyans who are potential terrorists."

Speakes added, "Quite frankly, though, more needs to be done."

"There are additional steps that can and should be taken in concert with our allies, and we will be working with allies in the coming weeks, and we will take up these kind of issues at the economic summit in Tokyo," Speakes added.

Reagan's harsh criticism followed reports that French President Francois Mitterrand told a U.S. envoy he would support the U.S. attack only if it were strong enough to be aimed at overthrowing Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy.

Without naming Mitterrand, Reagan said some U.S. allies suggested a coordinated, "all-out" attack to force a change in Khadafy's policy of encouraging and aiding international terrorism.

In an interview with The Associated Press and other news agencies Monday, the president said the suggestions were "that we look seriously together at real major action" against Libya.

Published reports have said Ambassador Vernon Walters brought such a message from Mitterrand.

Walters was in Paris to inform the French president and Premier Jacques Chirac of U.S. intentions shortly before last week's air raid.

"We found that some of them were suggesting that — not that the answer be nothing of that kind — but that we look seriously at, together, real major action against Libya," Reagan said. "Some of them suggested that ... if we were going to resort to force, that then perhaps it should be a wider-based and a more all-out effort to change the Libyan policy."

Walters consulted with leaders in Great Britain, West Germany, France, Italy and Spain from April 11 to April 15. The bombing raid occurred early on the morning of April 15, Libyan time.

In Paris, there was no immediate official reaction to Reagan's remark, with a spokesman for the Foreign

Greece Refuses To Back Sanctions Against Libya

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece today backed away from a Common Market agreement to impose diplomatic sanctions against Libya, claiming no solid proof linking Libya to state-sponsored terrorism was presented.

A statement issued by government spokesman Miltiades Papaioannou said Greece had "very strong reservations" about the sanctions and had not yet decided whether to apply them.

"National factors and solid proof about the guilt of certain countries for terrorist activities, something which has not yet been provided, will be taken into consideration regarding our country's application, or non-application of the measures decided," Papaioannou's statement said.

Earlier today, aides to Papaioannou had provided assurances Greece would join its 11 Common Market partners in applying the measures against Libya.

In ordering U.S. air raids against Libya on April 15, President Reagan said Washington has proof Libya was involved in terrorist attacks against Americans.

The Common Market foreign ministers agreed Monday to cut Libyan embassy staff levels and restrict the movement of Libyan diplomats in their countries. They also agreed to trim their diplomatic missions in Tripoli, the capital of Libya, and introduce stricter visa controls on all Libyans.

Libya warned West Europeans not to reduce diplomatic ties. A commentary in the North African country's official JANA news agency that appeared before the Common Market decision said the European countries would "scrap all their previous stances which emphasized the U.S. incompetence in its attempt to accuse Jamahiriya (Libya) of terrorism" if they impose sanctions.

Greece hesitated at first about approving the sanctions, and did so after winning agreement from other members on "beginning a political dialogue between the (European Economic) Community and Libya," Papaioannou's statement said.

Premier Andreas Papandreu's ruling Panhellenic Socialist Movement and Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy's regime have a close relationship.

The two countries smoothed over a misunderstanding last week when Greek police broke up a late-night news conference given by Libya's visiting deputy foreign minister, Ahmad Shahati.

At the news conference, Shahati denied a Greek government statement that he had asked Papandreu for Common Market mediation in resolving the U.S.-Libyan conflict.

Meanwhile, security police sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said more than 30 Arabs, including a number of Libyans, have been deported from Greece since the U.S. air strike as part of routine checks.

Last January, Greek security authorities started running regular checks on Libyans, Palestinians, Syrians, Iraqis and Jordanians living in Greece.

The sources said there are about 200 legal Libyan residents in Greece.

Fire Damages Closet At South Greenville

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

A fire engulfed a closet in the fourth grade wing of the South Greenville Elementary School early today, charring walls and burning books, magazines and papers stored there, fire officials said.

Greenville Fire Chief Jenness Allen said the fire, which was confined to the closet, was extinguished by four responding units.

"We received a call at about 7:55 a.m., and we had the fire out about 20 minutes after arriving on the scene," Allen said. "The janitor was last in this part of the building at about 6:15 a.m., so we know the fire started after that time."

Principal J.B. Smith said the fire was spotted before the students entered the building for the start of the school day.

"A teacher driving up to park behind the school saw some flames," Smith said. "It was about five minutes to 8, and students are allowed in the building at 8. Teachers just held the students outside."

A cost estimated of the damage was not available, according to Allen.

"An excessive amount of books, papers and magazines burned up," he said. "It depends on how much books cost."

Allen said the Greenville Police Department is investigating the cause of the fire.

Detective C. E. Weatherington of the Greenville Police Department refused to call the fire suspicious but said he expected to be investigating the fire for much of the morning.

Smith said the police have found some clues which show the fire may have been set.

"They said they found the window in the closet had been broken with the head of a hammer," Smith said. "The police were in there taking fingerprints earlier."

Smith said students were allowed to enter the building shortly after the fire was extinguished, and classes were set up in temporary areas until the cleanup and investigation were completed.

Britain To Expel 21

LONDON (AP) — Police arrested 21 Libyans in a series of raids early today, including a pilot who threatened to form an anti-American suicide squad. The Home Office said they would be expelled from Britain as a matter of national security.

The Home Office said the Libyans were suspected of involvement in "student revolutionary activities," but did not elaborate. The government threatened more expulsions if needed.

The Libyans, almost all of them university students, were arrested in England, Wales and Scotland, said the Home Office, which is responsible for Britain's police. Five Libyans were arrested in London, it said.

Last month, after the confrontation between the United States and Libya in the Gulf of Sidra, Tripoli Radio broadcast a telephone call from Masaoud in which he said he and his Libyan classmates in Britain were offering themselves as "suicide squads against America and its arrogance."

Pitt Board OKs Road Schedule

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners Monday gave their approval to a state Department of Transportation secondary road improvement program which calls for spending some $646,780 on upgrading secondary roads in the county during the 1986-1987 fiscal year which begins July 1.

The board's endorsement came after O.L. Potter, highway district engineer, outlined the projects planned for the coming year. They include:

- Grade, drain, base and pave 1.3 miles of SR 1440 (Mayo's Crossroads Road) from N.C. 33 to SR 1417 at a cost of $41,800.
- Acquire right-of-way, move utilities, grade, drain, base and pave .3 mile of SR 1203 (the Allen Road north of the Stantonburg Road) from the end of pavement to SR 1202 at a cost of $34,900.

- Acquire right-of-way, move buildings and utilities, grade, drain, base, pave and replace bridge on 1.7 miles of SR 1414A near the Belvoir Elementary School from the end of pavement near N.C. 33 to SR 1415 at a cost of $214,400.

- Acquire right-of-way, move buildings and utilities, grade, drain, base and pave 1.6 miles of SR 1737 (the Edwards Farm Road) from N.C. 43 to SR 1725 at a cost of $83,500 in the coming fiscal year and about $109,700 in fiscal 1987-1988.

Firm Hired To Help Pitt Revaluation

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners approved awarding a contract to a Charlotte firm Monday to help with the revaluation of property for tax purposes. W.P. Ferris, the same firm that conducted the county's last revaluation, submitted the low bid of $174,000 for the work.

Commissioners in February agreed to revalue property in the county a year earlier than normal, with county employees doing the work. The move will place the new values on the tax books effective Jan. 1, 1988, rather than Jan. 1, 1989.

Under state law, property must be revalued for tax purposes at least every eight years. Pitt's last revaluation placed new property values (the fair market value of land and buildings) on the tax books Jan. 1, 1981.

Under the contract, the Ferris firm will establish property values, furnish an assessment manual as well as cost schedules and land value schedules and defend the values.

Commissioners approved the purchase of a hand-held radio and pager for the Bell Arthur Fire Department's first responder unit at a cost of $1,550, and instructed Emergency Services Coordinator Bobby Joyner to get estimates of the cost of converting Sheppard Memorial Library's old bookmobile into a mobile communications center.

Commissioners also told Joyner to include funds — estimated at $9,800 — to purchase a defibrillator for training purposes, and to be used as a spare unit, in his budget for the coming fiscal year. Joyner said if the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department and the Eastern Pines Rescue Squad begins an advanced life support program, an additional defibrillator will be needed for training and for use as a spare in case one of the front-line units is out of service.

The board told County Manager Regional Gray to set up meetings with representatives of East Carolina University's Center for Applied Technology and David M. Griffith & Associates to discuss their proposals to conduct a personnel study for the county.

Now You Have Touched The Women

By STEPHANNA CLEATON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — About 30 years ago, 10,000 women demonstrated in Pretoria, South Africa, against a law requiring black women to carry passes in order to travel in and out of the city.

"Now you have touched the women," the demonstrators sang in unison. "You have struck a rock. You have dislodged a boulder. You will be crushed."

Their words haunted artist Faith Ringgold, who came across the incident two years ago while doing research on apartheid. It took her a year to weave those words and the thought they conveyed into multicolored quilt of tie-dyed strips sewn on a canvas.

The canvas, etched with words and figures and called "Now You Have Touched the Woman," was one of 28 works shown earlier this year at the Clocktower gallery in lower Manhattan.

The exhibit, called "Progressions: A Cultural Legacy," featured paintings, sculpture and photographs by three generations of black American women artists.

Besides Ringgold, there was Emma Amos. Her vibrant and colorful "Banana Dancer," an acrylic and linen, was suggestive of the late Josephine Baker. Michele Godwin's lithograph, "Goat Scape," has a shadowy face emerging from a sea of goats.

For a long time, though, black artists — especially women — were not shown to a great extent in the mainstream galleries.

"They simply wouldn't pay any attention," said Vivian E. Browne, curator of "Progressions" and also one of the exhibitors. "Nobody thought there were black women artists who were capable."

The exhibit, which was proposed by Julia Hotton of the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture, has focused on women artists and sparked an interest in them.

Hotton wanted to show a link between black American women of the 18th and 19th centuries and the work of contemporary artists, Browne said.

"Not only of the 18th and 19th centuries, but the Harlem Renaissance, and the WPA (Works Projects Administration) period," she said. "She felt very strongly that there was a heritage handed down."

Mary Edmonia Lewis was one such link. She was born in 1845, studied at Oberlin College and became a serious classical sculptor. Her works were exhibited at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876, and she was commissioned by Harvard College to do busts of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, John Brown, Ralph Waldo Emerson and the colonel of the first Negro combat regiment formed during the Civil War, Robert Gould Shaw.

A photograph of her sculpture entitled "Forever Free" was featured at the exhibit.

Augusta Savage, an artist during the Harlem Renaissance in the 1920s and '30s, was born in Green Cove Springs, Fla., in 1900. She studied at Cooper Union in New York, and in Paris and Rome.

In the early 1930s she established the Savage Studio of Arts and Crafts in Harlem, sponsored by the Carnegie Corp. Her "Lift Every Voice and Sing," a large harp-shaped sculpture, was done for the 1939 New York World's Fair.

Browne said some black women artists in more recent years have been helped by the women's movement, which extensively launched exhibits of women's work.

Howardena Pindell, a 43-year-old artist whose work is currently on show at the Studio Museum in New York, said her work began to be noticed in the early 1970s when she was a member of a New York women's cooperative.

"I was able to show my work through that, but I was the only black woman in the cooperative," she said. "I would say that the women's cooperative gave me the opportunity to show my work when I wasn't able to show it anywhere else."

"I've been in New York for 20 years. It's taken about 20 years for me to really get my work seen and that is within a limited context."

The 55-year-old Ringgold likes to express the emotional tension of struggle and violence in her art.

Twenty years ago, she says her work was ignored and kept from the mainstream because it was too political.

"Political art," Ringgold said, "usually does get accepted about 20 years after its done. Now I can do it because of what I did in the '60s. But in the '60s I certainly did not gain any kind of recognition for anything."

Deceitful Hubbys Accuse Wives Of Snooping

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend and I became suspicious of our husbands' nights out. We thought they got too fancied up to go bowling and have a few beers with the guys, so we played "private eye" and followed them for three nights.

On Night No. 1, they took two young ladies to a movie. On Night No. 2, the same happy foursome went to a restaurant in Manhattan. On Night No. 3, they went to a St. Patrick's Day dinner dance in the Bronx. They always came home and said they had a lot of laughs with "the guys."

Finally, we presented them with our findings of where they had been each night.

They not only denied it, they got mad at us and called us liars and sneaks! Can you believe it? These two cheaters who had been sneaking around called us liars and sneaks!

They now say they will never be able to trust us again. We were made to feel like the guilty parties.

What is your answer to this? We read you daily in the New York Post, and so do they. Sign us, "Two Ex-Private Eyes," or

DEAR ABBY: Please don't apologize for recommending counseling so often. You may sound like a "broken record" and some people accuse you of using it as a cop-out, but believe me, I am on your side. I am a 20-year-old university student who wrote to you because I was having some heavy problems I couldn't handle. You told me that counseling was my only hope and suggested I go to the counseling center at the university. (I knew it was there, but never got up the nerve to go.) After I got your letter, I walked into the counseling center and was given an appointment with a very compassionate man who has helped me enormously. After only two visits I feel so much better about myself. All I needed was someone I could be totally honest with.

I'm sure other universities offer the same service—and it's free for students. So keep telling people to get counseling, Abby. It's not a cop-out. I used to think so, but not anymore.

I'm signing my name, but if you print this, sign me ...

Festival Opener Called 'Success'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The Super Sunday opening day of the week-long Eastern Carolina Arts Festival was "a super success," according to Brooke McCray, executive director of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

The annual festival is planned and conducted under the auspices of the council, in conjunction with city and county schools, East Carolina University, the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department and other agencies.

The annual festival in April, now in its sixth year, is held indoors at The Plaza.

"During the five-hour schedule on Sunday, we had an estimated 10,000 visitors, certainly a record number," Ms. McCray said. "Each year, the number of people attending gets larger and larger. We may need to consider in future festivals the possibility of moving some of the activities outdoors in order to relieve the packed conditions we had Sunday."

A warm, sunny Sunday was attributed as one of the factors that drew such a large attendance. Another factor was the number and variety of entertainments presented all afternoon on two stages — one at each end of the indoor area of the mall. Seven groups gave performances on Stage One, with six groups performing on Stage Two.

Performers on Stage One were: the ECU Jazz Band, the Suzuki Players of Eastern North Carolina; the Greenville Choral Society; the Rose High School Jazz Band; the Greenville All-City Elementary Band; the A.G. Cox Band; The Greenville Middle School Band; and the Washington Community Band.

On Stage Two entertainers were: a Middle Eastern Dance performance; a quartet from the Sweet Adelines; the ECU Chamber Singers; the Ayden-Grifton Mime Troupe; the Aycock Junior High "Show Biz;" Men's Octet, and the Pamlico Sound Barbershop Chorus.

In addition, there were arts and craft booths, face painting and other activities for children, roaming clowns, cheerleaders, ballet, karate, gymnastics and storytelling.

Consumer Prices Keep Up Decline, Show Best Performance Since '54

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record plunge in gasoline costs last month pushed consumer prices down 0.4 percent, matching the February fall and the steepest back-to-back declines in more than 36 years, the government said today.

For the first three months of the year, consumer prices fell at an annual rate of 1.9 percent, the best quarterly performance since 1954.

Prices have not fallen for two months running since 1965 and have not fallen at such a steep pace since matching 0.4 percent declines in December 1949 and January 1950.

Most of the March decline was attributed to a record 12 percent fall in gasoline prices, more than double the 5.9 percent February drop.

Gasoline prices are tumbling because of the worldwide slump in oil prices. Oil on the spot market is now selling for $12-$13 per barrel, less than half the cost just six months ago.

Gasoline prices at the pump already fallen well below $1 per gallon for all grades in much of the country. These prices, last seen in 1979, represent a 27 percent drop from the peak prices of March 1981.

Economists say they expect that gasoline costs will probably post further declines in April and May before leveling off.

"We expect the consumer price decline for April to be similar to March, a big drop with energy prices by far the biggest factor," said Donald Ratajczak, head of the economic forecasting unit at Georgia State University. "We think consumer energy prices will bottom out by the end of June. We don't see them continuing to collapse."

Reflecting the sharp drop in crude oil prices, the average cost of all energy commodities declined at a remarkable annual rate of 52.3 percent in the first three months of the year.

Home heating oil costs were down 6.5 percent last month after a record 11.5 percent February decline and were also 27 percent below their peak, set in April 1981.

Natural gas prices fell 0.7 percent; electricity costs were off 0.5.

Justices Allow Seizure Of Film

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police seizing allegedly obscene materials from dealers do not have to provide special proof before getting court authority, the Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices said the same standards apply when police seek court warrants to seize allegedly obscene materials as in cases where police seek to seize illegal drugs or weapons.

The ruling means videocassettes seized from a store in Depew, N.Y., in 1983 may be used as evidence in an obscenity prosecution.

A sheriff's deputy took the films, with such titles as "Debbie Does Dallas," "Deep Throat" and "Little Girls Blue," from Network Video, a store owned by P.J. Video Inc.

The store owners were charged with violating the state's obscenity law but the New York Court of Appeals threw out the prosecution. It ruled that the affidavits used to obtain a court warrant authorizing the seizure described numerous sex acts in the films but did not establish "probable cause" to believe the films were obscene.

Let by Justice William H. Rehnquist, the Supreme Court today said the state court was wrong.

Rehnquist said the state court, without saying so specifically, required police officers to meet some higher standard of proof than the usual "probable cause" test before obtaining court warrants in cases of alleged obscenity.

"We have never held or said that such a higher standard is required by the First Amendment," Rehnquist said.

In other action, the court: — Upheld an important provision of a 1981 budget-cutting law aimed at assuring absent parents will pay child support.

The court, in an 8-1 ruling in a Washington state case, said low-income parents are not exempt from having their federal tax refunds funneled to help support children from a prior marriage.

— Made it more difficult for professional groups to avoid paying federal taxes on profits they earn by selling advertisements in their journals.

The court unanimously ruled that the American College of Physicians, which generally is tax-exempt, must pay taxes on profits earned from ads in its Annals of Internal Medicine, a highly regarded monthly medical journal.

— Threw out a $5 million damage award against an insurance company because an Alabama Supreme Court justice who ruled in the case had a personal stake in penalizing the company.

The justices, by an 8-0 vote, sent the case back to the state court for further study and said the justice with a stake in the outcome is disqualified from taking part.

The Constitution's First Amendment guarantees freedom of speech and expression, but obscene materials are not given constitutional protection.

Obscenity is a legal term and cannot be applied to all sexually explicit material. Unless something is found to be obscene, it is protected by free-speech guarantees.

The Supreme Court since 1973 has defined obscenity as a work that appeals to a morbid interest in sex with patently offensive depictions or descriptions of sexual conduct, and one that on the whole has no serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value.

Today's decision did not alter previous decisions that require police to take special steps before seizing materials that arguably are protected by the First Amendment.

For example, in a 1965 decision, the court said police officers seeking a court warrant to seize allegedly obscene materials must specifically explain why they believe the materials are obscene and cannot rely solely on "conclusory allegations."

Joining Rehnquist were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Justices Thurgood Marshall, William J. Brennan and John Paul Stevens dissented.

Vietnam Vet Wins Stay Of Execution

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — A Purple Heart recipient facing execution for fatally stabbing two people, allegedly due to the trauma of the Vietnam War, today won a brief reprieve from the U.S. Supreme Court.

The court, without elaborating, stayed the execution of David Livingston Funchess at least until 5 p.m. today.

It was the second five-hour stay granted the Vietnam veteran, who had been scheduled to die at 7 a.m. today. Earlier today, a three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta granted a stay for Funchess until noon, citing the lateness of the hour at which his appeal was made.

Officials of the Florida State Prison near Starke rescheduled the execution for 5:01 p.m.

The execution of Funchess, 39, had been protested by a group of veterans who sought to block what they said was the nation's first execution of a Vietnam veteran.

If put to death, he would be the second person executed in Florida this year and the sixth in the nation. He also would be 15th person to be put to death in Florida and the 56th in the nation since capital punishment resumed in 1977.

Vietnam veterans and Funchess' attorneys claim he suffered from post-traumatic stress disorder, an affliction said to affect thousands of veterans who were transported from combat to their homes with little time to adjust.

Defense attorney Mark Olive argued that Funchess was incompetent as a result of his war-related condition.

"At the time of his trial, he was a very ill man. It is an illness that still exists," Olive told U.S. District Judge Howell Melton in Jacksonville, who rejected the appeal.

Funchess, a Marine, was severely wounded in Vietnam when he stepped on a mine. Medication for his injuries led to heroin addiction. He received the Purple Heart, the Vietnam Service Medal and the Vietnam Campaign medal, and had no criminal record before serving in Vietnam.

Funchess began suffering the stress disorder after a brother died and after he saw another Marine's head blown off by a rocket in Vietnam, attorneys said.

Veterans staged a vigil on the steps of Florida's Capitol in Tallahassee asking that Funchess' life be spared.

"All his life he had never been violent except in Vietnam, in the service of his country," said Jeff Thompson, an attorney and Vietnam veteran. "If not for that service... he would not have committed these crimes."

Funchess was sentenced for the Dec. 16, 1974, stabbing deaths of 53-year-old bartender Anna Waldrop and Clayton Ragan, 56, a customer, during a robbery in the Avondale Lounge. Before the killings, Funchess had been fired from the lounge for allegedly stealing money.

A third person died more than two years after being stabbed in the holdup, but Funchess wasn't charged.

Betti Shupe, Mrs. Waldrop's daughter, said last week she wanted the execution carried out.

"I feel like I need to be there to let it rest... I know that when it's all over, I don't have to wait and read the paper and see if he's going to live or die," she said.

Florida's last execution was April 15, when Daniel Morris Thomas, 37, was electrocuted for murdering a man and raping his wife.

John Earl Bush, who had been scheduled to die with Funchess, was given an indefinite stay of execution Monday afternoon by the state Supreme Court.

Some Friends

Politics makes strange bedfellows but terrorism creates even odder ones.

Take, for example, the reaction of the United States' traditional European allies to the raid on Libya. France, Spain and Italy — everyone but Britain — turned its back on the United States.

They should have supported the United States in its move. Regardless of military readiness, they should have been prepared to back America's decision and its consequences.

The very least they could do was let us use their air space and they didn't even do that.

Some friends. Some allies. The appearance is that they've aligned themselves with a so-called outlaw. They chose a "mad dog" over America.

Only the governments of Britain and Israel backed the United States, and that wasn't unequivocally. It would be a sound guess to say that the rest of the world is sitting back and waiting to see if the United States is successful in its foray against Khadafy. If it appears to work, they'll applaud, no doubt, and pat America on the back. They'll become allies again. If it appears to fail, they'll say they knew better than to get involved in a mistake.

That attitude is fickle. Perhaps these nations have forgotten the footprints Hitler and Mussolini and other extremists left on their governments 40-odd years ago.

Khadafy could do the same.

Frustrations

Olga Peters is only 14 years old but knows more about some of the strange frustrations of life than many young people her age. Olga is a victim of being the granddaughter of Josef Stalin.

She is half-American. Her father is a senior architect with the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation; her mother, Svetlana, is Stalin's daughter.

Olga was born in the United States and in 1984 her mother returned to the Soviet Union, taking the child with her. Fourteen months later both apparently had enough of life in the USSR though her past suggests the mother is inclined to change her mind.

Olga is returning to a school she had previously attended in Britain. Her memories of that period in her life apparently were the magnet that drew her to that refuge.

With luck she may fade into the anonymity of being just part of a crowd rather than continuing to be a target for those who seek to benefit from her family relationships. She is entitled to something more than that.

No Perfect Solution For Gun Control

WASHINGTON — Now, look. The gun control bill that passed the House earlier this month is being denounced everywhere as a perilous and reckless "weakening" of the 1968 law. Let me voice a dissenting view. The bill, in my judgment, is not that bad a peice of work.

In most of its provisions, the House bill parallels the McClure-Volkmer bill that sailed through the Senate last summer on a vote of 79-15. The measure passed the House on April 10 by a vote of 292-130. When you have a combined vote in the two chambers of 371-145, you have an impressively lopsided display. It is difficult to believe that such majorities were achieved because members were scared to death of the National Rifle Association.

This is constructive legislation. The 1968 act, you may recall, was passed on a wave of emotionalism set in motion by the assassinations of Robert F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. It contained some useful provisions, but the act was predicated upon some implicit assumptions — for example, that gun dealers are a menace to society and that gun owners generally are a bunch of potential felons.

The federal government set out to enforce the 1968 act in that spirit. Gun dealers were subjected to bureaucratic harassment. Gun collectors in some instances saw their collections effectively confiscated. Tons of paperwork were generated. And while law-abiding gun owners chafed under needless restrictions, criminals continued along their criminal way.

Last week's bill will put matters in better balance. It no longer will be unlawful for hunters to transport rifles and shotguns across state lines. That makes sense. Gun dealers will be subject to only one unannounced inspection a year — and that provision will not prevent a local prosecutor from getting a warrant on a showing of probable cause. The interstate sale of handguns would be prohibited. The bill bans all future sales and possession of machine guns. The measure contains tough provisions covering use of a firearm in commission of a crime: a mandatory five years for a first offense, 10 years for a second. Significantly, the bill adds drug offenses to the list of violent crimes.

Under this bill, it still will be possible for persons to buy silencers and automatic weapons, but only after careful checking, fingerprinting, and a delay of two to four months. This procedure effectively limits such purchasers to bona fide collectors and hobbyists. An entirely separate piece of legislation, intended to prohibit the sale or possession of "cop-killer" armor-piercing bullets, has passed both houses by overwhelming votes. It will go to the White House after a conference committee resolves minor differences.

All in all, it is hard to see how gun laws have been greatly "weakened" by these legislative efforts. For my own part, I wish the final bill had provided a mandatory two-week waiting period on the sale of concealable handguns. At one time the NRA itself supported a waiting period. Such a delay, said the NRA, "could help in reducing crimes of passion and in preventing people with criminal records or dangerous mental illnesses from acquiring guns." The NRA was right then, and it is wrong now in opposing so modest a provision.

The bill also could have been much improved by imposing tighter regulations on the sale of ammunition. Sen. Pat Moynihan of New York is exactly right in saying that "the key to handgun control is ammunition control," but if dealers had to preserve records of every sale of bullets, and to check on the eligibility of every purchaser, the bureaucratic hand would be too heavy.

It seems to me that we come down to a few intractable realities. The United States of America is the most gun-happy nation in the world. No one has any good idea of how many handguns are kicking around; there are millions of them, and no laws yet have been devised that would prevent criminals from acquiring them. Proposals for gun registration are pure folly. It is unbelievably naive to suppose that criminals would obey them.

This is one of those areas in which we must do the best we can. There is no perfect solution. The object of legislation should be to contain the terrible misfortunes that go with widespread ownership of guns, and to punish criminal misuse of weapons. Nothing in the House bill will detract from these purposes. If the Senate will concur promptly in the House bill, we can put this fight behind us and go on to more important things.

—Elisha Douglas—

Strength For Today

The New Testament frequently contains references to the Holy Spirit. What is the Holy Spirit?

The Holy Spirit is the living presence of God in the world. It has been from the beginning. At Pentecost, 50 days after the crucifixion of Jesus, the Spirit of the Living God came down upon a waiting group of Christians in an unprecedented fashion. The phenomenon of speaking with tongues characterized that occasion.

Of course, most branches of the church eventually gave up the practice of speaking with tongues. Yet every branch of the church today believes that God is in the world, unseen, but influential to such a degree that life may be placed in His hands for guidance and support.

The Holy Spirit comes to us in different ways — different perhaps for every individual. Yet this Spirit keeps producing century after century the spiritual benefits it produced in the beginning.

Service Stations: A Vanishing Breed

WASHINGTON — Like most Americans, we've been relieved to find lower oil prices at the gas pump. But that's where our gratitude stops. The problem is that we can no longer find any service stations in our neighborhood. And we're not alone with our gripe.

Sure enough, a call to Vic Rasheed, executive director of the Service Station Dealers of America, confirms our suspicion. The neighborhood service station is going the way of the local grocery store. This condition is not simply the result of supply and demand forces. The major oil companies have plotted to control the retail gasoline industry from wellhead to gas pump, leaving the American consumer with less competition and higher prices at the pump.

For the past decade, a cancer has ravaged the service station population. It devoured another 7,000 stations nationwide last year. Today there are only 124,000 service stations left in America, down from 226,500 in 1972.

"Today the major oil companies are getting the control they've always wanted," according to Rasheed. "They're trying to reduce the number of service stations so they'll be in a position to move more products, at higher prices, at fewer locations."

The low prices Americans are paying at the pump today won't last long, in Rasheed's opinion. "It's a temporary mirage," he says.

Service stations began disappearing in 1973, when oil increased to $3.25 per barrel. By 1979, with oil at $32 a barrel, more service station owners couldn't make a go of it, given their shrinking margins. Price controls and product allocations spelled further doom in the mid-1970s as self-service islands were introduced.

What really did the industry in, however, was when the then-Federal Energy Administration permitted the major oil companies to pass on whatever rent they wanted to charge service station dealers. Soon after this decision was announced in 1975, many service station dealers began diversifying their service to include convenience stores. In 1976, for example, only 1 percent of gasoline was sold in this country from convenience operations. Last year, 20 percent of all gas was sold from convenience stations.

Worse yet, the neighborhood service station has the government and major oil companies working against it. In the first case, new Environmental Protection Agency regulations, though designed to protect residents from gasoline seeping from underground storage tanks, are going to be particularly costly for dealers with old equipment. Meanwhile, many major oil companies are undercutting their affiliates by selling products at cheaper prices to independent distributors. In a number of states, service station dealers have filed lawsuits to stop this practice.

To the unsuspecting consumer, current oil market conditions look inviting. It appears that consumers have OPEC on the run. But is OPEC the real antagonist? Some industry experts like Rasheed suggest the real obstacles to competition in this country are the major oil companies.

Sure, lower oil prices at the pump are gratifying for the moment. But have consumers really bargained for less? There was a time in this country when motorists enjoyed an era of unprecedented service and convenience for their patronage. The Big Oil companies courted them with free glassware, contests and trading stamps, in addition to full service for their vehicles. You could get your oil changed, tires inflated, back windows cleaned, as well as the use of a clean restroom — all without spending an extra dime.

But what can consumers usually expect from service stations today? Not much, if you can find one.

In the current climate of relief, the temptation is to pat Big Oil on the back. After all, Dan Lundberg, the gasoline industry analyst, tells us that the United States will spend $28 billion less on gasoline this year than last. But the question remains: Are we toasting Big Oil too soon? Some of us think so.

Reader Says Bombing Ill-Advised

To the editor:

I would like to publicly support Rep. Walter Jones' stand on the bombing of Libya. I agree with him that the bombing was ill-advised and I feel it is highly unlikely that we can expect to reduce terrorist attacks on Americans and American Embassies by the use of selective bombing.

The issue of terrorism isn't limited to Libya and Kadafy. Many experts speculate that Iran and Syria may be even more to blame and that we bombed Libya because they were the "safest" country to take such action against.

I don't feel these bombing are a good idea — for several reasons. One, it didn't solve anything. We didn't stop terrorism with this action. Anyone with half a brain knows of our military superiority. Why go out and prove a point already well known? I highly doubt any country believes the U.S. to be a paper tiger, as Senator Helms remarked. How can any country with as active a military force as we have shown in the last five years be a paper tiger? We allocate over half our yearly budget to the defense of our country and we're not even at war.

This brings me to my other point. I feel that, by becoming such an aggressor nation, we are jeopardizing the safety of our people and, more than that, the people of Europe.

Please, people, stop and look at what we as a country are doing. Children died in our bombing and two friendly embassies were damaged. Gandhi said, "An eye for an eye makes the whole world blind." In these times of heightened tension, with our country acting so aggressively, we need to be especially wise in our actions. I feel the frustration of limited retaliation against terrorism, but bombing another country and placing our allies in danger isn't the answer.

To the editor:

It has been a grim week. And spring has been so beautiful. How can all this be happening when it's prom week for the dogwoods? It's spring. Where are the leaves of hope?

Larry Frommer, currently an intern with the Children's Creative Response to Conflict Program of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, lived and worked in Neve Shalom/Wahet Al Salem in the winter and spring of 1985. The Hebrew and Arabic name of this community translates as "Oasis of Peace" and is an example of the peace process working. It is a remarkable cooperative village on a hilltop midway between Jerusalem and Tel Aviv. There are 13 families and several singles. Most are Jews and Palestinians of Israeli citizenship. An international group of up to 12 live-in volunteers provides assistance in labor on various economic and agricultural projects, bringing the number to about 60 people.

In September 1984, a bicultural primary school opened. Both Hebrew and Arabic are spoken. In addition to the basics, the children learn about various aspects of Arab and Jewish society and culture. A high school is planned. Parents in Jewish and Palestinian communities in the area have already asked about enrolling their children.

A very important project is the School for Peace. Students from Jewish and Palestinian high school from all over Israel come together for workshops to reevaluate how they think of each other and the conflict that has set them apart. There are plans to develop a national youth movement for coexistence. A grant has been awarded recently to develop an international outreach to train workshop leaders from Northern Ireland and South Africa.

There are many tireless people working for peace. We need to share their efforts with each other and the public. War isn't the only news.

— Widen the present 16 feet pavement to 20 feet, move utilities, regrade roadway section and resurface 1.8 miles of SR 1760 (Galloway's Road) from SR 1768 to SR 1755 at a cost of $143,600.

The improvement program for the coming year also includes $100,000 for stabilizing soil roads 1202, 1254, 1255, 1509, 1511, 1534, 1724, 1728, 1762, 1764, 1766, 1767 and $28,580 for over-run and contingencies.

Potter said the improvement program follows the DOT's priority rating system and said that if, for some reason, one of the primary projects could not be done because of right-of-way problems, alternate projects will be substituted.

The district engineer said priority projects one, two and three, all scheduled for improvement since the 1970s, cannot be done because the right-of-way cannot be acquired.

Randy Doub of Greenville, a member of the state Board of Transportation, told commissioners that the allocation of secondary road improvement money to counties is based on the county percentage of unpaved miles of secondary road in the state.

Doub said 65 percent of the allocation is used for paving unpaved roads, while 20 percent is used to improve paved roads and 15 percent to improve unpaved roads.

Reporting on the progress of the U.S. 264 project, Doub said that over the past year, the transportation board has awarded contracts totaling about $12 million for final construction and paving U.S. 264 between Greenville and Washington, the N.C. 58 connector at Wilson and the new roadway up to the Pitt-Greene County line.

He said final construction and paving contracts are scheduled to be let on May 20 on the section of new U.S. 264 from the Farmville East Throughfare to the Stantonburg Road and on July 15 for the portion of the project west of Farmville to the Greene County line. He said the two projects will cost from $8 million to $12 million.

This will leave only two sections of the project left, Doub said, the Farmville Bypass and the Northwest Greenville Bypass, both of which are scheduled for construction after July 1, 1987.

Doub also urged commissioners to support Gov. Jim Martin's "Roads to the Future" program. The plan, announced last week, would provide new revenue for the state's highway construction program.

Doub said a transportation task force reported last week that the DOT needs "$100 million to maintain the present (highway) system and about $100 million to use for highway construction."

With "cars getting better (gas) mileage" and salaries and construction costs increasing, the present tax on gasoline is not providing enough revenue to meet the increasing needs, Doub suggested. He said the "Roads to the Future" program is "a package ... a long-term program" designed to meet the needs.

According to Doub, the proposed 2.75-cent per gallon gas tax increase (an additional penny on the gasoline tax generates about $36 million in revenue) and the transfer of the Highway Patrol and Drivers Education program away from the Highway Fund would provide additional revenue to help meet maintenance and construction needs.

"The average cost per driver" for the tax increase would be "$13 to $18 a year," Doub said.

The proposed "one-time transfer of $85 million in General Fund revenues to the Highway Fund," Doub said, would provide $7.5 million for the state's secondary road program, $7.5 million to Powell Bill funds (which are distributed to municipalities to help build and maintain city streets), and $70 million to establish a Transportation Trust Fund.

DRIVER INJURED — A Grimesland man was seriously injured Monday night when the car he was driving collided with a tree on the Old Tar Road, near Winterville. According to Trooper Lee Batts, Andy Majette was headed south when he attempted to pass another vehicle. Majette was trapped in the twisted wreckage for about 30 minutes while members of the Winterville Rescue Squad, using heavy extrication equipment, removed the top of the car. The trooper said witnesses told him Majette apparently was forced off the road. Majette's auto skidded a short distance before striking a tree in the yard of Rayford Kennedy's home. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Tobacco Support Checks Will Be Reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying they could find no way to protect the federal tobacco program from the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit-reduction law, U.S. agriculture officials will cut growers' price-support checks by 4.3 percent.

U.S. Department of Agriculture officials said Monday they could find no exemption for the tobacco program from Gramm-Rudman that would shield the program from the across-the-board reductions ordered earlier this year for all programs that receive cash payments or loans from the Commodity Credit Corp.

The CCC loans money to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., which buys tobacco that does not sell at auction for at least 1 cent above the federal price support.

Tobacco officials and tobacco-state lawmakers had sought an interpretation that would have avoided the cuts because of the recent passage of a new tobacco program that reduces the program's cost to the government.

The new tobacco legislation reduced price supports to $1.44 per pound for flue-cured leaf from the $1.72 set under the old law.

According to the USDA announcement, the 4.3 percent reductions, or about 6 cents a pound, would be made on all CCC payments under the 1986 support program because the new tobacco law did not exempt the new leaf program from the previously ordered reductions under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings.

USDA officials will implement the cut by leaving the average price support level at $1.44 per pound but reducing the actual check a farmer receives when he places tobacco in the loan program. The USDA said it hoped to implement the cuts in a way to "minimize disruption of the orderly marketing of tobacco."

Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, predicted Monday that the USDA decision could upset the tobacco warehouse auction system.

Blalock said he envisioned a situation in which a buyer might go to a farmer outside of the warehouse and offer him a price for his leaf that would be more than the reduced price under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings but less than the support price.

"This offers the potential that, if the trade wanted to, it could manipulate the market by refusing to bid, knowing (the tobacco) might be available at a lower price," he said.

But because of the lower price support and the expectation that little tobacco will go under loan this year, industry officials have said they don't expect a major problem with such outside sales, Blalock said.

Tobacco Associates Leader Says Excise Tax Plan Harmful

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina tobacco growers could lose $100 million a year under a plan that would allow cigarette excise taxes to rise along with cigarette prices but would no longer allow deduction of the taxes as a business expense, a tobacco official says.

native would be some form of public assistance," he said.

J. Tylee Wilson, chairman and chief executive officer of R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. of Winston-Salem, who also addressed the committee, called the excise tax provisions "insidious and discriminatory."

"I am unequivocally opposed to the non-deductibility of excise taxes and the indexing of those taxes to prices or indexing them in any other manner," Wilson said during testimony.

"With the elasticity of demand for cigarettes being what it is, that could translate into an 8.5 percent drop in sales," Blalock said in a telephone interview after he returned from Washington.

"We could be looking at quota cuts over two years of perhaps as much as 25 percent," he said. "That would mean a reduction of income to farmers of over $200 million."

Reynolds Industries is a parent company of two businesses which would be affected by the proposed excise tax provisions, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and Heublein Inc., a spirits and wines producer.

"Excise taxes are costs of doing business," Wilson said. "The non-deductibility and indexing provisions will result in increased costs to the company. Thus, we would have no alternative but to attempt to pass those increased costs on to our customers."

Blalock said he went to Washington to voice objections to the tax reform proposal of Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore. He testified before the Senate Finance Committee, which Packwood chairs.

Blalock said several committee members appeared to oppose the proposals.

Wilson said there is already a "staggering" tax burden on tobacco and spirits.

"For example, under the present law, more than 75 percent of the net income of our tobacco company is paid to the federal government in the form of income, excise and FICA tax," Wilson said. He said a proposed reduction in the corporate tax rate from 46 percent to 35 percent would not offset the impact of the excise tax provision.

Packwood has suggested disallowing federal income tax deductions for excise taxes on tobacco products, fuel, tires, wine, liquor, beer and telephone services. He also has proposed indexing future excise taxes on alcohol and tobacco products, which means they would rise with product prices.

North Carolina State University economists have predicted that denying cigarette manufacturers a tax deduction for excise taxes would lead to a price increase. Under the indexing proposal, the federal excise tax on a pack of cigarettes would immediately jump from 16 cents to 25 cents, Blalock said.

Under such circumstances, substantial price increases would have to be initiated, with the inevitable result of such action being a significant decline in consumption followed by a reduction of tax revenue, and a devastating impact on our consumers, shareholders, suppliers, employees and the American farmer," he said.

"Most people believe that the big losers when the cigarette excise taxes are increased and sales decline are the manufacturers," he said.

"The truth of the matter is — and we have data from prior experience to support this conclusion — it's the grower who winds up being the biggest loser."

Blalock predicted that the tax measure would increase the number of tobacco farmers forced to leave the farm.

Democrats still outnumber Republicans by a ratio of nearly 2.6-to-1, but that is a significantly slimmer margin than Democrats had four years ago, when they outnumbered Republicans by a ratio of 3-to-1, the figures show.

Thad Beyle, a political scientist at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said several trends were reflected in the increase in GOP registration. Voters moving to North Carolina from other states are tending to register as Republicans, he said, and more young adults voting for the first time are choosing the GOP.

"There is definitely something in those figures," Beyle said. "If you keep pushing that out in the future, the potential for two-party politics in this state is going to continue to increase."

Some analysts say the trend indicates that Republican-backed registration drives have been more successful than earlier thought.

The trend was particularly dramatic in some urban counties.

GOP Cuts Registration Gap

RALEIGH (AP) — If Republicans continue to make inroads in voter registration like they have in the past two years, two-party politics may develop in North Carolina, a political scientist says.

Figures released Monday by the State Board of Elections show that from April 1984 to April 1986, the number of registered Republicans grew 14.7 percent, from 704,301 to 807,563. During the same period, Democratic registration decreased 2.3 percent, from 2,137,005 to 2,087,820.

Study Challenges Job Lists

RALEIGH (AP) — The number of jobs created in North Carolina by new and expanding businesses is being exaggerated by the state Commerce Department, with about half the announced jobs never materializing, an independent research center says.

In an article titled "Phantom Jobs: New Studies Find Department of Commerce Data to be Misleading," the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research Inc. reported Monday that two studies showed only 47 percent to 61 percent of the jobs announced in a given year by the department ever became actual jobs.

department reports as existing actually do exist," the researchers said.

"It is important to point out that these criticisms are not directed at the Martin administration because all governors since Luther Hodges have produced the same kind of job announcement reports," Finger said.

"However, we do recommend that Governor Martin ask the Department of Commerce and the Employment Security Commission reports more accurately reflect actual growth in jobs and investment," he said.

Marine Indicted In Car Bombing

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — A Carteret County grand jury has indicted a Cherry Point Marine on charges of assault and use of illegal explosives in connection with the bombing of a state Highway Patrol trooper's unmarked cruiser in Newport.

Sgt. Kristen Douglas Welter, 28, was charged Monday with putting homemade pipe bombs in Trooper C.S. Raines' cruiser on Feb. 3, a day before Welter was scheduled to appear in Carteret County Superior Court on a speeding charge, said District Attorney Dave McFadyen.

Welter was charged with injury to occupied personal property by use of an explosive device, assault on a law enforcement officer with a deadly weapon, assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and possession of a weapon of mass destruction, McFadyen said.

The bombs were put in Raines' car at his home near Newport and caused extensive damages to the cruiser, but the trooper was not hurt, McFadyen said.

"The bombs were in the car, but not all of them detonated," McFadyen said. "The bombs were placed around the gas tank. If they went off as intended, it probably would have killed the trooper and destroyed the car completely."

IN THE STATE

Court To Hear Race Bias Lawsuit

Klan Image On Trial

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Iredell County has been singled out in recent months as a model for how communities can fight hate groups, but some residents say there's a lingering sense of racial paranoia that this week's trial of nine Ku Klux Klansmen won't resolve.

"Statesville and Iredell County was always a paradox," said the Rev. Charles Roman, a black activist in Statesville until he left for Spartanburg, S.C. in 1984. "I'm still trying to understand it. You can find some good things in Iredell County that you won't find in the adjacent counties."

"If it's just a racist town, you can fight it," Roman said. "But if you keep seeing the good and the bad, it makes it tough. You can't get a hold on it."

During four winter months of 1982 and 1983, officials say the White Knights of Liberty burned crosses at the homes of 10 Iredell County residents.

Last December and January, nine members of the Klan group pleaded guilty to federal civil rights violations, and eight defendants will be tried this week. Jury selection was scheduled to begin today.

On Monday, Michael Treadway of Hiddenite pleaded guilty to taking part in a Dec. 5, 1982, cross burning in Alexander County. He will be sentenced at the end of this week's trial but will not testify against the eight defendants.

Iredell County officials and civic leaders last summer firmly denounced the Klan, which is still active there.

RALEIGH (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has decided to hear arguments in a 15-year-old lawsuit that claims North Carolina 4-H clubs are racially segregated and the state's Agricultural Extension Service denied promotion to 53 black employees.

Attorney Cressie H. Thigpen Jr. represents the blacks, who say they were denied promotion because of their race and paid less than their white counterparts who did comparable work.

Thigpen said the court was scheduled to hear the arguments today.

The suit charges that North Carolina 4-H clubs, which are sponsored by the extension service to teach children about farming and agribusiness, are racially segregated.

The extension service, which is affiliated with the School of Agriculture at North Carolina State University, has denied the allegations.

Chester D. Black, director of the Agricultural Extension Service, acknowledged that some 4-H clubs had been and still were mostly or entirely black or white, but said that was because the clubs are community-oriented and "not all communities in the state lend themselves to being multi-racial."

The suit was filed in 1971, but the trial was delayed until 1979. Some of the plaintiffs testified before U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree that discrimination had continued in the extension service years after the suit was filed. The plaintiffs requested back pay and other unspecified compensation.

Dupree dismissed the suit in August 1982, finding that the U.S. Justice Department, which intervened on behalf of the plaintiffs, had failed to prove discrimination and had used flawed statistics in trying to document systematic discrepancy between blacks' and whites' salaries.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals later upheld Dupree's ruling 2-1.

One plaintiff in the 1971 suit was Phillip E. Bazemore, a Monroe City Council member who has retired from the extension service. He testified before Dupree that despite his 25 years' experience, he was passed over for the chairmanship of the Union County extension service in favor of a white man who had 12 to 13 years' experience.

Another black, Fred Belfield, testified that his application for chairmanships in Nash, Vance and Northampton counties were rejected, each time in favor of less qualified whites.

James E. Wright, an agent from Hertford County, testified that black agents encountered unequal treatment long after the state's black and white extension services were merged in 1965.

Thigpen said in a telephone interview he did not know whether the situation had improved since Dupree's ruling, and that the suit would deal only with the period prior to 1979.

"We had information on (the situation) up until we rested our case," Thigpen said. "What has occurred in the system since that time, I just don't know."

New Appeal

BLADENBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Bladenboro man serving 44 years in prison for forging $555 of his father's checks says Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey bullied him into pleading guilty in June 1982 in Robeson County Court.

Andy Pait has asked the North Carolina Court of Appeals for help. In a brief filed by Geoffrey Magnum, an assistant state appellate defender, Pait argues that Bailey coerced him into switching his plea to guilty.

But James Smith, an assistant attorney general, contends Pait simply doesn't like his sentence. Unfortunately for Pait, Smith says in a court brief, that "is not a sufficient basis on which to upset his guilty plea."

A three-judge panel is reviewing the case.

ESC Workers

RALEIGH (AP) — The chairman of the state Employment Security Commission says he's planning to submit a non-binding referendum to ESC workers asking them to vote on whether the agency should lay off workers or give the workforce some unpaid holidays.

David Flaherty, commission chairman, said in a memorandum circulated to top ESC officials that the agency was facing a $700,000 budget deficit because of federal funding cuts.

The memo says five options will be submitted: laying off 170 workers in May; laying off 255 workers in July; asking all state ESC employees to take one day's unpaid leave in May, June, July, August and September; asking ESC workers to take one week's unpaid vacation, or asking ESC workers to take two unpaid days' vacation in July and in August.

ESC workers will not know who is in line to be laid off when they vote, an official said.

Parkway Sprayed

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Blue Ridge Parkway officials are searching for the vandals who spray painted anti-nuclear graffiti on a 30-mile stretch of the scenic parkway.

Ranger Tony Bonanno said the damage was done to tunnels, pavement, rocks, even trees, from U.S. 191 to the Craggy Gardens overlook. Bonanno said the cleanup may require crews with sandblasting equipment and some parts of the pavement may have to be resurfaced.

Rangers are asking anyone with information about the vandalism to call the nearest Blue Ridge Parkway office.

Organ Donors

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians willing and medically eligible to donate organs outnumber actual donors by more than three to one, according to the Carolina Poll.

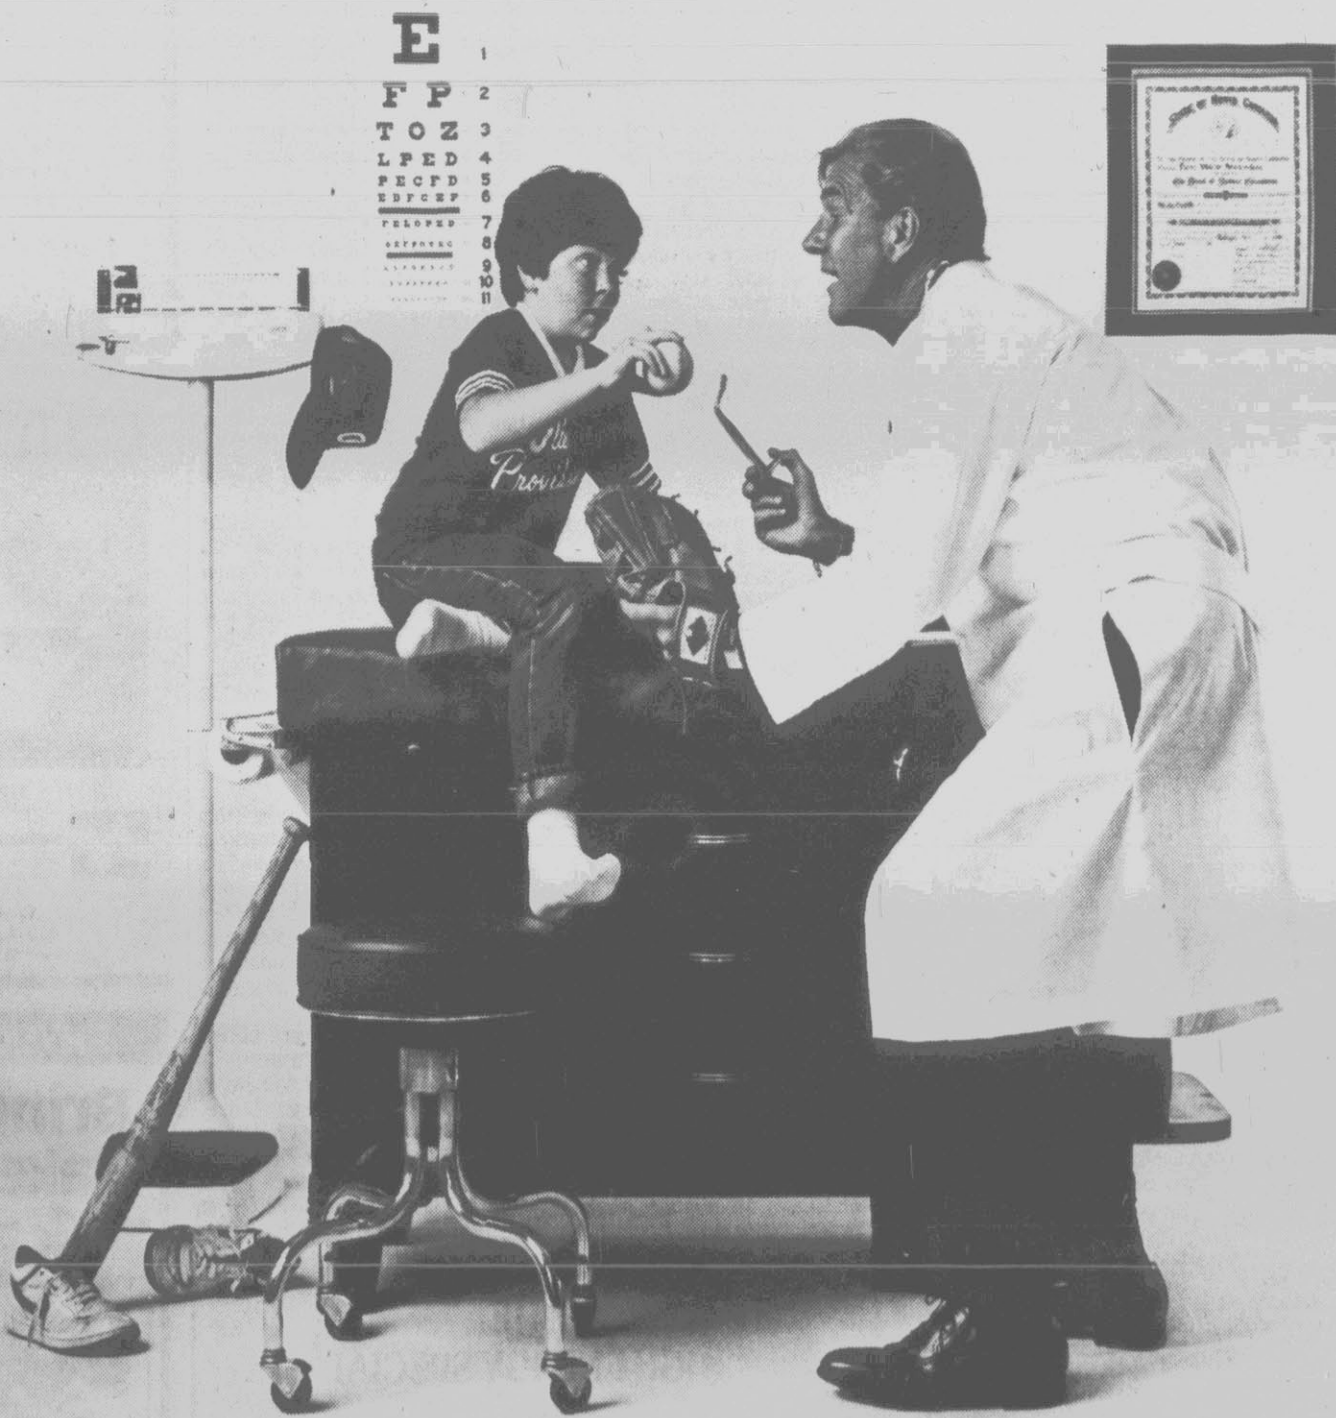

Fifty-four percent of state residents polled in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill poll said they would be willing to donate their organs. Thirty-two percent of the 585 people surveyed said they would not donate organs and 14 percent were undecided.

Since 529 people died in North Carolina last year under conditions suitable to donate, poll results suggest about 280 people would have been willing donors. Only 80 state residents donated major organs for transplantation in 1985.

The Carolina Poll is sponsored by the UNC School of Journalism and the Institute for Research in the Social Sciences.

IT'S NICE TO HAVE SOMEONE TO REALLY CARE FOR YOU.

When you, or someone you love, needs medical attention, it's important to know that someone special is there. Someone who'll make certain all the finest care and attention are given.

Well, for one monthly payment through your employer, you can have that someone. Your own Personal Care Physician.

It's all part of the Personal Care Plan. A concept that brings back the idea of the "family doctor," while making a complete range of all the most modern medical services available to you and your family.

Under the plan, you select your Personal Care Physician from a list of participating doctors. He or she will then be personally responsible for managing your health care. From seeing you on routine examinations, to deciding on tests and treatments, to prescribing medications. And if you need a specialist, hospitalization or surgery, your Personal Care Physician will be there, making recommendations and helping you with advice.

The Personal Care Plan is an HMO from Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina. So naturally, it reflects a firm commitment to stem the rising cost of health care. But the beauty of the Personal Care Plan is not just in its cost cutting effectiveness. It's in the plan's ability to hold back costs while actually improving your chances for better health. That's because, with just one fixed monthly payment, you'll probably see your doctor earlier if you have a problem. And in general, the sooner you receive treatment, the easier and less expensive it will be.

The Personal Care Plan is available to most size companies. To learn more about this plan and your Personal Care Physician, call us. We'll be happy to help you.

Air Ambulance

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina Baptist Hospital's new medical helicopter has been placed in service, giving the state three air ambulance services.

Three more services should be in operation by the end of the year as part of a program that could cost nearly $7 million annually, officials say.

Besides Baptist Hospital, those offering the services now are Life Flight, based at Duke Medical Center in Durham, and EastCare, based at East Carolina University in Greenville.

The state certificate of need office within the division of facility services has approved aircraft for N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville, and Charlotte Memorial Hospital, all of which should be running by the end of the year, said Richard Fitzgerald, the division's assistant director.

Ministry saying only, "We have noted the comments."

In Bangkok, Thailand, a bomb exploded inside the compound of the U.S. Consulate in the southern Thai city of Songkhla early today, Thai Interior Minister Sitthi Chiraroachana said. No injuries were reported.

Mayor Prachoti Ekuru of Songkhla said he suspected that a group of Moslem supporters of Libya whom police had been tracking in recent days was behind the attack. There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

In Brussels, Dutch Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek outlined the steps endorsed by the foreign ministers of the 12 Common Market countries, and said they were aimed not only at Libya, but intended also as "a signal to other countries that might contemplate involving themselves in terrorism."

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said the department had no comment on the arrest of a Palestinian in connection with the bombing of a night club in West Berlin on April 5, which killed an American serviceman and a Turkish woman.

In Berlin today, officials said a Palestinian arrested in the discotheque bombing is the brother of a man held in Britain in connection with the attempted bombing of an Israeli airliner.

In the interview with four reporters, Reagan was sharply critical of France for forcing U.S. warplanes based in Britain to skirt Europe to get to Libya.

"I think it is difficult to understand, if we're all in this together and supposed to be sharing the protection of all of our countries, to deny the right of our planes to fly over," Reagan said. "I can't see any justification for it."

But he added, "I think it's something to be considered now and talked rationally between us as to what the effect might be."

Referring to the seven-nation economic summit May 4-7 in Tokyo, Reagan said, "We're going to the summit to see what we can work out together."

He said he isn't going to Tokyo "to get some great big declaration about the evils of terrorism and then think we'd done our duty. We want to get down to the nitty-gritty and get some agreement as to how we're going to deal with it."

Reagan said the allies already share intelligence but he would like "to see if there is more that we could do about pooling our intelligence so that we can learn of intended targets and intervene — abort them."

Before leaving for Tokyo, the president will deliver a major speech to the Chamber of Commerce here, spokesman Larry Speakes said. Speakes said the address, to be delivered Wednesday, would discuss inflation-fighting and healthy economic relations among the industrialized nations, but aides said Reagan would also discuss efforts against terrorism and compliment "freedom fighters" in Afghanistan, Angola, Nicaragua and elsewhere.

In his interview, Reagan also said he worries whenever his wife Nancy "goes around the block" but that neither he nor the first lady has considered canceling her plan to travel separately to Malaysia and Thailand while he is in Asia.

Reagan said he is sorry if the U.S. attack against Libya killed children and innocent civilians, although he said he thinks it equally likely that civilian targets were hit by Libyan, rather than American, fire.

Asked if he regretted that Khadafy's children were among the casualties, the president said, "You regret any time children or innocent people are wounded or killed. ... On the other hand, I was equally sorry about a little baby that was blown out the side of an airplane and fell 15,000 feet to its death, along with his mother and grandmother."

"I also feel badly about an 11-year-old girl that was shot down in cold blood for simply standing in the airport in Rome" when terrorists hit the airport in December.

Trails Of Terrorism Also Lead To Syria

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Libya was the target last week, but the leads point back toward Syria in some of the bloodiest recent terror attacks.

The Abu Nidal group, blamed for December's Rome-Vienna airport massacres, does business out of a building in central Damascus. A few blocks away, at the West German Embassy, guards have pinned up a wanted poster of German terrorists believed to be in the Syrian capital.

And just over the border, in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley of east Lebanon, a multistriped collection of guerrilla groups is in training under the Syrian army's eyes.

One Damascus-based Palestinian leader warned anew Monday that Americans face further attacks.

"I think we have the right to do everything — politically, mass activities, even armed activities against American interests," George Habash, of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, told CBS News.

Habash and other guerrilla chiefs met in the Syrian capital last week and decided to escalate their anti-U.S. campaign, a Palestinian source said.

President Reagan was asked about the Syrian connection at a White House news conference April 9.

"So far the leads have not gone in that direction on some of the more recent events," he replied.

But some European and Israeli diplomats and political leaders, in recent Associated Press interviews, said Syria merits at least as much attention as Libya in the anti-terror campaign.

"For their own reasons, they (the Reagan administration) are now focusing on Libya," Israel's foreign minister, Yitzhak Shamir, said in a Jerusalem interview. "I hope there will also be a way to handle the Syrian support of terrorism."

American diplomatic sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, cited several reasons for relative inaction on Syria:

—President Hafez Assad's government helped resolve the Beirut TWA hijacking last year and might still help win freedom for American hostages in Lebanon.

—Syria's Soviet ties are stronger than Libya's. Military action against Syria could touch off a wider conflict and involve Israel.

—Syria is key to any Arab-Israeli peace agreement, wants improved relations with Washington, and is expected to gradually clamp down on terrorists.

But one Abu Nidal follower, speaking privately with an AP reporter in Damascus, said the Syrian government thus far has put no new pressure on his group.

Of 13 Palestinian organizations identified as "terrorist" by the Israeli military, eight are said to have Syrian backing. They maintain training camps in Syria or the Bekaa, have Damascus offices, buy arms through the Syrians, use Damascus banks, and cooperate with Syrian intelligence, said a knowledgeable U.S. diplomat.

The most notorious is Abu Nidal's renegade Fatah-Revolutionary Council, which maintains a two-story headquarters on a quiet Damascus side street.

Israeli, Palestinian and U.S. sources all agree that since 1984 Abu Nidal himself — his real name is Sabry al-Banna — has spent more time in Libya than in Syria. But they say his group's "infrastructure" of camps and offices remains in Syria and the Bekaa.

"I think Libya has been the 'financier' behind Abu Nidal, and Syria has been the 'operator,'" said Tamar Prat, a researcher on Palestinian terrorism at Israel's Tel Aviv University.

An Israeli military planner said Abu Nidal's guerrillas, believed to number several hundred, share training camps with other Syrian-backed groups in the Bekaa and have their own camp in Syria.

The lone surviving terrorist from the Dec. 27 Rome airport attack, in which 16 people died, said he and his comrades came from training camps in Lebanon and flew to Europe from Damascus, Italian investigators say. Another suspected Abu Nidal terrorist captured in Rome told a similar story.

The "Arab Revolutionary Cells," which Damascus-backed Palestinian sources say is the latest name used by Abu Nidal's terrorists, claimed responsibility for the April 2 bombing of a TWA jetliner over Greece, in which four Americans were killed, and for last week's slaying of an American and two British hostages in Lebanon.

In the TWA bombing, the broken trail pointed toward Syria in another way as well. Greek authorities said their prime suspect was a Lebanese woman member of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party, a militant leftist group in Lebanon led by a Syrian. The woman, May Elias Mansur, denied involvement.

Possible Syrian links have surfaced in other cases, including a string of deadly car bombings aimed at the

Cooney Trying To Make Return

NEW YORK (AP) — He would have liked another shot at Larry Holmes. He'd like a shot at Michael Spinks. Or Tim Witherspoon. Or Trevor Berbick. Anyone holding a heavyweight championship.

"But I'm 29," Gerry Cooney said. "I haven't got the luxury of picking and choosing. I go where I have to go."

On Saturday, May 31, he'll be in San Francisco's Cow Palace, fighting Eddie Gregg in a scheduled 10-rounder to be televised by ABC.

Not that Gregg is a nobody. He's ranked fifth by the WBA, 10th by the WBC. He's the only fighter to put Tex Cobb on his back. And in the past 46 months, he's won 14 of 15 fights, losing only to another contender, James Broad.

Cooney, meanwhile, has fought only twice in that nearly three-year span since he was stopped by Holmes in the 13th round of their title fight June 11, 1982 in Las Vegas, Nev.

He knocked out a pair of relative nobodies about 10 weeks apart late in 1984 — Phillip Brown in Anchorage, Alaska, and George Chaplin in Phoenix, Ariz.

He didn't fight in 1983. "I became a recluse," he said, reflecting back on the aftermath of the loss to Holmes, the only defeat of his 28-fight career.

He didn't fight in 1985. "Personal problems," he said. "I'd rather not talk about them."

Yet the enigmatic, soft-spoken Cooney remains an attraction, so much so that he is getting about $300,000 plus a percentage of the gate, about six times what Gregg will receive, according to Gregg's manager, Mike Rakosi.

Rakosi said Gregg, who turns 32 the day before the bout, "has earned this fight not with glamorous media attention, or with the backing of Don King or by being the right color." Gregg is black, Cooney white.

"If I win this fight..." Gregg started to say. Then he started over. "When I win this fight, everything will be right. I'll get the respect I want and deserve. Everybody knows who Gerry Cooney is. After I beat him, everybody will know who Eddie Gregg is."

Cooney has been the target of plenty of hermit jokes, of "Gerry Who?" jokes. Being a fighter who doesn't fight tends to diminish one's luster. "If they think he's nobody," Gregg said, "why do they keep giving him a chance? He makes all the money. A guy like me, who punches his way up, has a hard time making the dollars."

Added Gregg, owner of a 24-1-1 record: "I fight who's put in front of me, I win, and I'm still not recognized as a top heavyweight until now. The e's no way I'm going to let this opportunity slip through my fingers."

Given the safe haven of a pitching mound on the road, Ed Whitson found what he was looking for.

Whitson, 1-1, scattered five hits over 6-2-3 innings for his first victory of the season, and Don Mattingly hit three doubles and drove in five runs as the New York Yankees defeated the Kansas City Royals 8-4 Monday night.

"Hopefully, I've showed them something, that I can still pitch," Whitson said. "For myself, it was a big plus. I wanted to prove I could still win."

It was Whitson's first start since Yankee Manager Lou Piniella announced the 30-year-old right-hander would only start road games because of the hostile reaction of fans at Yankee Stadium.

"I'm going to sit back for a couple of days and absorb this one," Whitson said. "It's been a long time since I've been able to go back to my hotel room and not think about all what's happened."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Detroit 5, Boston 4; Cleveland 7, Baltimore 0; Toronto 7, Texas 6; Minnesota 5, Seattle 2; and Oakland 6, California 2.

After a 1-6 start in 1985, Whitson received letters threatening his life and those of his wife Kathleen Ann, and four-year-old daughter Jennifer. People waited for him outside Yankee Stadium after games — not necessarily games that he had pitched — to scream obscenities at him. Once, Whitson had to run a red light to elude someone who tried to follow him home from the ballpark.

After a bad outing in his first start this season, Whitson asked to be traded. In an effort to insulate Whitson, Piniella decided to put him in the bullpen at home and in the starting rotation on the road.

"I've requested a trade, and they're working on it," Whitson said. "Right now I can't think about that."

Mattingly, who came into the game with 12 singles in 45 at-bats, doubled down the right-field line in the third inning to score Ken Griffey and Rickey Henderson, tying the game, 2-2.

The Yankees snapped the tie in the fifth when Griffey took second on a fielder's choice and scored on Mattingly's double to left.

Following Mattingly's second double, Dave Winfield singled to make it 4-2 and knock out Royals starter Bret Saberhagen, 1-1. Saberhagen, the 1985 American League Cy Young Award winner, last lost on Sept. 8, 1985.

Winfield stole second and scored when Mike Easler's soft line drive got past Royals second baseman

Frank White for an error. In the sixth, Griffey drove in Willie Randolph to make it 6-1.

In eighth, Mattingly doubled off reliever Danny Jackson to score Randolph and Henderson increasing New York's lead to 8-2.

"I wasn't really concerned about the extra-base hits," Mattingly said. "The only thing I was concerned about was hitting the ball square. All I'm concerned about is hitting the ball hard consistently."

Indians 7, Orioles 0
At Cleveland, Tom Candiotti pitched a three-hitter, striking out a career-high 10 batters, and Andy Allanson went 4-for-4 and knocked in three runs as the Indians defeated Baltimore.

Candiotti, 1-1, a 28-year-old who developed a knuckleball in the minor leagues last season, walked four. "I didn't take it seriously until last year, and it's turned me around," Candiotti said of the fluttering pitch.

Baltimore's Floyd Rayford, who was playing in his first game of the season after being sidelined by a bone chip in his left thumb, committed four errors to tie an AL record for third basemen shared by 19 others and last done by Detroit's Tom Brookens in 1980.

Blue Jays 7, Rangers 6
At Toronto, Cliff Johnson hit an opposite field three-run double to right in the eighth inning to give the Blue Jays a come-from-behind victory over Texas.

Lloyd Moseby started the winning rally with a single and, one out later, Rance Mulliniks singled to center.

Pirates Ice Berth

East Carolina University's three game sweep of American University in Colonial Athletic Association baseball this past weekend clinched a post-season playoff berth for the Pirates.

East Carolina is now 12-3 in the league with three games remaining, all against the University of North Carolina-Wilmington. The Pirates will host the Seahawks in a doubleheader on Saturday at 6 p.m. at Harrington Field to take care of two of those games.

East Carolina will be the host for the CAA's post-season tournament, May 15-18, at Harrington Field, with the winner of the double elimination tournament getting the league's automatic berth into the NCAA regionals.

Richmond, now 11-6, closes out its season today against American, and can clinch the second of the four CAA berths with a victory.

James Madison, UNC-Wilmington and George Mason are still in the running for the third and fourth slots.

Earnhardt Moves Up

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt, the first two-time winner on the NASCAR circuit this year, moved within 23 points of Winston Cup points leader Darrell Waltrip with his victory in Sunday's First Union 400.

Earnhardt, who captured the Winston Cup title in 1980, has 1,137 points compared to Waltrip's 1,160. Waltrip, who hasn't won a race this year, finished fourth in the First Union 400 race for his seventh top-five finish in as many races.

Rusty Wallace is third in the points standings with 1,019 points, followed by Bill Elliott with 970, Terry Labonte with 948, Kyle Petty with 927, Tim Richmond with 900, Harry Gant with 891, Geoff Bodine with 883, and Bobby Allison with 876.

Earnhardt also leads the circuit in money-winnings with $328,225, followed by Bodine with $274,455 and Labonte with $212,465.

Mike Waltrip of Owensboro, Ky., and Alan Kulwicki of Greenfield, Wis., are tied in the Rookie of the Year competition with 55 points apiece.

Earnhardt's victory snapped a string of 11 consecutive NASCAR races without a repeat winner, a modern-day record. He also won the Trans-South 500 the previous week.

ECU Inks VB Player

East Carolina women's volleyball coach Imogene Turner announced the signing of Cindy Gale to a letter-of-intent Tuesday.

Gale, a 5-7 hitter/setter, is a native of Annapolis, Md., and starred for Annapolis High under Coach Joyce McKay. Gale was named all-county last fall in addition to being selected to being team most valuable player and serving as the squad captain.

She played USVBA under former Olympian Harry Bryant, now coaching the U.S. Naval Academy team.

"Cindy is as talented a hitter as she is a setter. We were very happy to get her. She is very competitive and a leader. Cindy is extremely intelligent and plans to major in physics."

moving Moseby to third. With two outs, George Bell delivered a run-scoring single that chased rookie starter Ed Correa and brought on reliever Greg Harris. Harris got Jessie Barfield to hit a routine grounder to shortstop, but Curtis Wilkerson bobbled the ball for an error, loading the bases. Johnson then scored Mulliniks, pinch-runner Kelly Gruber and Barfield.

"I decided I'd start off by going to right field," Johnson said. "As the weather warms up, I'll start bringing it around to left for the homers."

Tigers 5, Red Sox 1
At Boston, Darnell Coles hit his first homer of the season for the decisive run and set up two other scores with a single and a sacrifice as Detroit snapped the Red Sox' four-game winning streak.

"We had plenty of chances, but we kept coming up empty," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "We just couldn't cash in. We hit some balls hard, but too many went for long outs."

Coles, who had one homer in a brief stint with the Tigers last season, homered with two out in the seventh off starter Al Nipper, 1-2, for a 5-3 lead. Jim Rice led off the Boston seventh with his third homer. The shot chased starter Walt Terrell, 2-1, but Randy O'Neal and Willie Hernandez protected the one-run lead with Hernandez picking up his fourth save.

A's 6, Angels 2
At Anaheim, rookie Jose Canseco hit two homers and drove in four runs, and Joaquin Andujar pitched three-hit ball over six innings for his first AL victory as Oakland defeated California.

Andujar, 1-1, departed with a stiff shoulder after the sixth. He walked three and struck out two in his third start this season. Steve Ontiveros pitched the final three innings for Oakland to get his first save.

"It doesn't matter if you're a veteran or a rookie. Getting that first win out of the way gives you more confidence," said Andujar, 1-1, who was making his third Oakland start.

Twins 5, Mariners 2
At Seattle, Frank Viola pitched a four-hitter for his 50th career victory, and Tom Brunansky had a pair of run-scoring singles to lead Minnesota over the Mariners, snapping a three-game losing streak.

Viola, 3-1, walked five and struck out nine as he pitched his second complete game of the year. He was helped by four Minnesota double plays.

"When in you're in the groove that's when you want to pitch. I just want the ball right now," Viola said.

EC Cagers Honored

Marcell Henry came away with a pair of honors at a banquet held Monday night at Mendenhall Student Center for the 1985-86 East Carolina's men's basketball team.

Henry was named as the team's most valuable player and also won the award as the outstanding free throw shooter on the team.

Other awards presented during the evening included: Scott Hardy, most improved player; Curt Vanderhorst, outstanding rebounder; Manuel Jones, outstanding newcomer; and Keith Sledge, defensive player of the year.

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

De Castella Sets New Boston Mark

BOSTON (AP) — It wasn't much of a race, but what a race it was. Rob de Castella had to fight off little more than a heavy-set young spectator who got in his way. Ingrid Kristiansen's biggest challenge came from a queasy stomach.

If competition was absent from Monday's Boston Marathon, big names and big money made up for it. "The tradition of Boston is still there," said four-time winner Bill Rodgers, who, at age 38, finished a stunning fourth in his 14th Boston Marathon. "It's good to see it come back. The race has been raised to a new level. It's a spectacular event."

And de Castella and Kristiansen, the favorites and two of the greatest marathoners of the decade, ran spectacular races.

De Castella, an Australian with a drooping mustache, conquered the hills and valleys along the testing 26-mile, 385-yard route in a course record of 2 hours, 7 minutes and 51 seconds, the third-fastest marathon of all time.

Kristiansen, a Norwegian, persevered despite a painful abdomen to post a time of 2:24:55, second-fastest Boston Marathon by a woman and the ninth-best ever by a woman.

They were rewarded handsomely for their Boston debuts. Attracted by the prize money awarded here for the first time since the initial Boston Marathon in 1897, de Castella hit a $60,000 jackpot and Kristiansen had a $35,000 payday.

Each earned $30,000 and a new luxury car for finishing first, de Castella picked up another $25,000 for breaking the course record of 2:08:52 set by Alberto Salazar in 1982, and each winner pocketed $5,000 for beating certain times.

De Castella said this year's addition of John Hancock Financial Services as the major corporate sponsor of the race organized by the Boston Athletic Association influenced him to compete.

"The prize money and John Hancock's supporting the BAA are the main reasons I decided to run here in Boston in preference to somewhere else," he said.

That attracted others to the 4,903-runner field, which had declined in quality in recent years as marathoners sought more lucrative prospects in other races. But this spring, Boston came back.

It had Orlando Pizzolato, two-time winner of the New York City Marathon; Pete Pfitzinger, winner of the 1984 U.S. Olympic Trials; 1983 Boston champion Greg Meyer, Japanese star Kunimitsu Ito and highly regarded newcomer Arturo Barrios. The women's field featured Kristiansen, Lisa Martin of Australia, Carla Beurskens of The Netherlands and 1984 Boston winner Lorraine Moller.

On a good day for runners, with a temperature of 61 degrees shortly before the noon start and slightly overcast skies, the race had all the makings of a highly competitive event.

Then the starter fired his gun. "With all the big names, I thought more of them would be up there," said little-known Art Boileau of Canada, whose second-place time of 2:11:15 was 3:24 behind de Castella.

Pizzolato, who made his name on the flatter New York course, was third in 2:11:43. Rodgers' fourth-place time of 2:13:36 was the fastest by an American.

Beurskens was runnerup to Kristiansen in 2:27:35, 2:40 slower than the winning time. Lizanne Bussieres of Canada was a distant third among the women in 2:32:16.

"I know Ingrid's too fast for me,"

Beurskens said. "I knew I couldn't catch her."

Near the 20-mile mark, an unidentified man wasn't fast enough for de Castella. The overzealous intruder ran onto the course and was shoved aside by the male champion.

"Sometimes I get short-tempered," de Castella explained.

Kristiansen's problems were internal. Her stomach began aching about halfway into the race.

"I hoped to run around 2:19," she said, which would have beaten her own world-best of 2:21:06 set a year earlier in London. "The course was fine if my body had been with me."

Kristiansen still won for the ninth time in her 17 marathons. De Castella's victory was his seventh in 13 marathons.

He led after all but two of the miles, trailing Ito at the four-mile mark and Pfitzinger two miles later. He was reluctant to hold the early lead and thus have to break the headwind for others in the lead pack.

"I tried to slide to the back of the group, but most of them were trying to slow down," said de Castella, the world's top-ranked marathoner in 1983.

So he stayed in front and ran an exceptionally steady race. Only twice after he retook the lead from Pfitzinger did he run a mile in more than five minutes.

Joseph Kipsang of Kenya was in second place for much of the first 15 miles, then began to fade.

"On one of the hills, he seemed to be struggling," de Castella said. "That was a good sign to me. I felt I had him under control. After that I was out there by myself."

He posted only the third sub-2:08 marathon. Carlos Lopes of Portugal ran a 2:07:12 last April in Rotterdam and Steve Jones of Wales won at Chicago in 2:07:13 last October.

Kristiansen had a shot at the women's course-record 2:22:43 set in 1983 by Joan Benoit, who wasn't ready to run this year after having foot surgery last fall. Kristiansen's five-mile time of 26:00 was better than Benoit's time of 26:11 at that interval.

"I tried to run to get the world record," Kristiansen said. "At the top of Heartbreak Hill (nearly 21 miles into the race), the time was slow and I have in my mind to get the course record. Then I just had it in my mind to win."

Kristiansen, who never has finished lower than sixth in a marathon, has won at least one each year since 1980. Her last victory was April 21, 1985, in London.

De Castella hadn't won since the World Track and Field Championships at Helsinki, Finland, in 1983. His previous personal best was 2:08:18 in the 1981 Fukuoka International Marathon in Japan.

Pirates Sue Dave Parker

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dave Parker, whose weight ballooned and batting average dropped after he signed a record contract in 1979, is being sued by the Pittsburgh Pirates in a possibly precedent-setting court case resulting from his former use of cocaine.

The Pirates, who adopted the slogan "The New Bucs: We Play Hardball" when new owners took control this season, apparently believe the motto should fit the team off the field as well as on it.

Pirates President Malcolm "Mac" Prine, announcing the suit Monday in a brief news conference, charged the All-Star outfielder breached the five-year contract by failing to reveal his cocaine use.

The lawsuit attempts to block $5.3 million in deferred payments owed Parker, who is scheduled to receive a $944,445 payment in January 1988 and regular monthly payments of nearly $20,000 for the subsequent 20 years.

The first action of its kind filed by a major league baseball team against a player, the suit, if successful, could set a precedent in the future negotiating of contracts. Many players now have deferred payment clauses in their contracts.

The Pirates apparently are basing the suit on a clause in the 15-page contract in which Parker certified he had "no physical or mental defects known to him ... which would prevent or impair performance of his services."

Parker, reached at his Cincinnati home shortly after the suit was announced, said, "I don't know anything about it. None of those people have called me, so I can't really comment until I know about it."

After a team workout Monday afternoon at Riverfront Stadium, Parker told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette: "Oh man, this is just another hurdle, another hurdle I've got to leap. Why don't they just leave me alone?"

Chuck Berry, a member of the Pittsburgh law firm that represents

Parker, said: "Obviously, our position is the money is still due."

"He has already played during the years in question and for each one of those years he played, a certain amount of dollars were credited to a deferred compensation fund. Yes, he played; yes, he earned that," said Berry.

The lawsuit contends the Pirates were unaware of Parker's cocaine use until the trial of convicted cocaine dealer Curtis Strong last September. Parker, who admitted buying cocaine from Strong, testified he often used cocaine with other players because it once was "the 'in' thing to do."

After signing the contract, Parker "stole fewer bases, his fielding ability significantly deteriorated and he generally failed to perform up to the level achieved by him prior to 1979," according to the suit.

"Also of significance, he failed to keep himself in good physical condition, with his weight ballooning at times to in excess of 280 pounds, a result of which he became injury-prone. Parker's mediocre playing performance and lack of physical conditioning not only hurt the Pirates on the playing field but also led to the development of a very poor relationship between him and the Pittsburgh baseball fans and sports press."

The Pirates will make no effort to recover the estimated $2,125,000 already paid Parker. His base salary for each of the five seasons was $300,000 and he also was to receive a $625,000 signing bonus in a total package worth more than $7.4 million.

The contract, then the richest ever given a major leaguer, "would not have executed ... if (we) had known of the facts concerning Parker's use of cocaine," the Pirates said. The team is seeking a jury trial in Allegheny County Common Pleas Court.

Parker was coming off a National League Most Valuable Player season and a second consecutive batting title when he signed the contract, fulfilling a dream to become the major leagues' first $1 million a year player.

But as Parker's cocaine use accelerated, according to his Pittsburgh court testimony, his on-the-field production declined. As the Pirates slumped from world champions in 1979 to last place in the strike-shortened 1981 season, Parker plummeted from the game's premier player to mediocrity, the Pirates charge.

Parker hit a league-high 334 with 30 homers and 117 RBI in 1978 but had slumped to a .270 average with six homers and 29 RBI by 1982, his final season in Pittsburgh.

During his court testimony, Parker admitted to having shared cocaine with or arranging to have the drug supplied to major leaguers Manny Sarmiento, John Milner, Eddie Solomon, Al Holland, Lee Lacy, Dale Berra, Rod Scurry, Enos Cabell, J.R. Richard, Dusty Baker, Derrel Thomas and Steve Howe.

"I had friends who were out of control (because of cocaine)," said Parker, who added that he quit the drug without medical help "because my game was slipping and cocaine had played some part in it."

Parker was among 21 players disciplined this spring by Commissioner Peter Ueberoth for his drug involvement. He must donate 10 percent of his salary, about $100,000, to a drug rehabilitation facility this year and participate in random drug testing. He must also perform 100 hours of voluntary drug-related community service work.

Barry Rona, executive director of the club owners' Player Relations Committee, said the Pirates filed the suit "on their own ... the PRC is not a party to the action. Whether there will be more such suits, I really don't know."

Rose, Chargers Post Golf Wins

Rose High School's golf team continued to roll along in the Big East Conference Monday with a lopsided victory over Wilson Hunt.

The Rampants finished the tour of Brook Valley Country Club with a 307 total while Hunt was well back at 362.

David Lee led Rose with a one-under-par 71. Simon Moye had a 75 while Mike Herrin came in at 77 and Greg Hallow had an 84.

Marc Holcomb led Hunt with an 82 while Tim Kersey had 91, Robbie Galloway had 94 and Kim Hale had 95.

Rose is now 19-2 on the year. The Rampants resume play on Thursday, hosting Eastern Wayne in a non-conference match.

West Carteret at 1,025 and Washington with a 1,053.

Conley plays host to Wilson Fike and Farmville Central in a match Thursday at the Ayden Country Club.

Pamlico ..... 385

FARMVILLE — Ayden-Grifton came away with first place in a three-way Eastern Plains Conference golf match at Farmville Country Club on Monday.

The Chargers finished the round with a 316 team score, four shots ahead of hosting Farmville Central at 320. Pamlico finished in third, well back at 385.

Farmville's Mark Williams led the way finishing with a 74 for medalist honors on the afternoon. Other Farmville scores included Darryl Baker, 76, and Lance Parker and Allen Lewis, both carding 85.

Jeremy Shadle led Ayden-Grifton with a 77, while Todd Buck came in with a 78. Trae Wilson had an 80 and Brian Heath, an 81.

Andy Silverthorne led Pamlico with an 81, while Kelly Williams carded a 97, Henry Rice, a 103, and Blake Harrell, a 104.

Farmville is now 13-5-1 on the year and travels to Conley on Thursday. Ayden-Grifton returns to action on Monday in another league match-up at Pamlico.

Hot Chili Cools Dodgers With Two Giant Homers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
 AP Sports Writer
 Good chili is supposed to be hot ... like Chili Davis.

After batting just .151 with nary an extra-base hit through San Francisco's first 11 games, Davis has hit three home runs in the last two contests, including a pair in Monday night's 5-1 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The surprising Giants, 9-4, thus moved into first place in the National League West, one-half game ahead of Houston, and the team that won only seven games last April and finished last with a 62-100 record is five games over .500 for the first time since June 4, 1983.

"I'm hitting the ball hard again and it feels good," Davis said. "We're starting to believe we can win and that we're supposed to win."

In the only other NL games, New York came from behind three times to nip Pittsburgh 6-5 and Atlanta bombed Houston 8-2. The St. Louis-Chicago game was postponed because of a forecast of snow.

Davis homered to lead off the Giants' second against Rick Honeycutt. In the fourth, Jeffrey Leonard got a leadoff single and Davis hit his second home run. The Giants added a run in the fourth on Rob Thompson's single and Jose Uribe's double and Thompson had an RBI single in the sixth.

That was more than enough support for Roger Mason, who pitched a three-hitter as the Dodgers suffered their 10th defeat in 14 games. Ken Landreaux's fourth-inning homer produced their only run.

"To know about the spirit on this club you'd have to be in our clubhouse day in, day out," Leonard said. "The spirit has been here since we came out of spring training. We're in first place? That's nice, but I'd rather be first in October."

Let's not get carried away yet even though Manager Roger Craig says, "We're getting good defense, good pitching and good hitting. That's the name of the game."

Mets 6, Pirates 5

The Mets' game was coming from behind in extending their winning streak to four games. They did it three times, capped by a two-run rally against Pat Clements and Jim Winn in the ninth inning on Len Dykstra's single, a sacrifice, Tim Teufel's game-tying double and Gary Carter's RBI single.

Jim Morrison and Mike Brown homered for the Pirates, who blew leads of 2-0, 4-2 and 5-4 and had their five-game winning streak snapped. Carter hit a two-run homer off Larry McWilliams in the third inning to wipe out Pittsburgh's first lead and Rye Knight hit a two-run shot off Cecilio Guante in the eighth to make it 4-4.

"I was looking for a pitch over the plate and got it right there," Carter said of his game-winning single. "This shows the kind of team we have. We can come from behind."

Braves 8, Astros 2

Glenn Hubbard hit a three-run homer in the second inning and Bob Horner added a two-run blast in the third as Joe Johnson scattered eight hits in outpitching strikeout king Nolan Ryan. Six of the nine hits Ryan yielded before leaving in the fourth inning went for extra bases. Rafael Ramirez drove in Atlanta's final three runs with a pair of doubles.

"I've seen him (Ryan) have better nights," said Horner. "He's a great pitcher with a great career. That wasn't typical Nolan Ryan out there."

Ryan wasn't happy about anything. "If I had to rate all the ballparks in the National League, this one (Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium) would be among my least favorite," he said. "I can't recall any outstanding game I've pitched here."

more of them would be up there," said little-known Art Boileau of Canada, whose second-place time of 2:11:15 was 3:24 behind de Castella.

Pizzolato, who made his name on the flatter New York course, was third in 2:11:43. Rodgers' fourth-place time of 2:13:36 was the fastest by an American.

Beurskens was runnerup to Kristiansen in 2:27:35, 2:40 slower than the winning time. Lizanne Bussieres of Canada was a distant third among the women in 2:32:16.

"I know Ingrid's too fast for me,"

Nets Look For Way To Win

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP)

The New Jersey Nets, faced with NBA playoff elimination, need to find a solution to the Milwaukee Bucks' tenacious defense to stay alive against the Central Division champions.

"We have to win or that's it," New Jersey's Albert King said. "If we lose we're going to have a long vacation and I don't think anyone wants a long vacation."

The Nets trail 2-0 in the best-of-5 series, with games at home tonight and, if necessary, on Friday.

Three other series could be closed out tonight. Atlanta, which outscored Detroit 137-125 on Saturday, visits the Piston lair tonight. The Boston Celtics, 135-131 overtime winners over Chicago on Sunday, can close out the Bulls tonight at Chicago. And Sacramento returns home facing a 2-0 deficit after dropping a 111-103 decision at Houston on Saturday.

In other playoff games tonight, the Philadelphia 76ers and Washington Bullets, tied 1-1, meet at Washington, and Portland, a 108-106 winner at Denver on Saturday, hosts the Nuggets.

"We have to play more aggressive," Nets forward Buck Williams said in looking ahead to Game 3 against Milwaukee. "We have to put body on body and force them out of the things they want."

Williams was 12 of 17 from the field and scored 27 points in Milwaukee's 119-107 victory over the Nets in Game 1 of the series on Friday.

So the Bucks concentrated on stopping Williams in Game 2 Sunday, holding him to four shots from the field and 10 points. Milwaukee's 111-97 triumph gave the Bucks a 27-1 record in games in which the opposition was held below 100 points. The Nets are 0-14 in such games.

"We keyed on Buck and tried to make him work hard for every shot," Bucks guard Sidney Moncrief said of Sunday's game. "Our defense was as good as it's been all year."

The strength of the Bucks' defense especially showed itself in a 41-12 minute span of the fourth quarter

U.S. To Ax Subs To Keep SALT Treaty

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in a complex decision, will order the destruction of two U.S. nuclear submarines to keep the United States within the limits of the controversial 1979 SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union, two U.S. officials said.

This will clear the way for a new Trident submarine with 24 missiles to begin sea trials next month without undercutting the unratified accord. "He's going that extra mile," an official, who demanded anonymity, said Monday.

He said the two Poseidon submarines, with 16 multiple-warhead missiles each, would be taken out of the U.S. nuclear fleet promptly and then destroyed over the next six months.

However, Reagan also has concluded it would be "militarily beneficial" to allow the treaty limits to be exceeded as new nuclear weapons become available toward the end of the year, another official said. But, the official said, if the Soviets comply with the treaty, the limits will be maintained.

In two reports to Congress, the president has accused the Soviets of violating the agreement and other arms control accords. The accusations have been denied repeatedly by Moscow, which suggests changes in Soviet practices or in Reagan's interpretation of them are unlikely.

Also, the official said, the president intends to accelerate weapons programs not covered by the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

The decision, contained in a National Security Council memorandum, was described as "tentative" in the sense that Reagan was sending two envoys to consult with allies in Asia and Western Europe, and will also solicit the views of Congress before making a formal announcement.

The U.S. total of multiple-warhead missiles now stands at 1,198, just two below the limit set in the treaty signed by then-President Carter and the late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in Vienna.

It was the last major arms control agreement by the two superpowers, setting limits on various categories of long-range nuclear weapons. Reagan denounced the pact in his campaign for the presidency in 1980 as "fatally flawed."

In office, however, he promised the United States would not "undercut" its provisions provided the Soviets also observed the treaty.

The White House press office, evidently reacting to the Associated Press report, issued a written statement that said the president had begun consultations with the allies and Congress "on his tentative thinking."

The statement by spokesman Larry Speakes said "the substance of those consultations are confidential" and that no final decision had been taken, or would be taken, until they were completed.

"We will not comment on the substance of the consultations at this time," Speakes said.

He said the United States would consider its "security needs" and a threat posed by the Soviet Union in making a judgment.

Edward L. Rowny, a senior adviser, left Sunday for Tokyo to meet with Japanese leaders. He will go on to South Korea, China and Canada.

Paul H. Nitze, meanwhile, is flying today to London. After seeing British officials he planned to make stops in West Germany, Italy, France, Belgium and The Netherlands. Nitze also will brief the NATO council while in Brussels.

The Trident is due to begin sea trials May 20. Its 24 missiles would put the United States above the ceiling of 1,200 missiles with multiple warheads set by the 1979 treaty unless older missiles were destroyed.

Most of the president's advisers, including Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, urged him to permit the U.S. total to surpass the ceiling as a response to alleged Soviet violations. Rowny, CIA director William Casey and U.S. arms control director Kenneth Adelman all lined up with Weinberger.

Only two senior advisers, Secretary of State George Shultz and Nitze, recommended the United States maintain its policy of not undercutting the treaty.

Reagan came down on their side, taking the same position he did last year when he ordered a Poseidon dismantled before another Trident went to sea. But this time he also set in motion changes in the U.S. stance pending what the Soviets do.

At a hearing Monday of the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee, Weinberger and Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, both criticized continued U.S. adherence to the SALT II treaty. "I don't think it's been formally determined that continued adherence is in our best interests," said Weinberger in answer to Rep. Joseph McDade, D-Pa., who said it was in the best interests of the United States to adhere to the pact.

Crowe refused to say what the Joint Chiefs have recommended, but when asked his "personal opinion," he said, "it's pretty clear that the Soviets have consistently violated it."

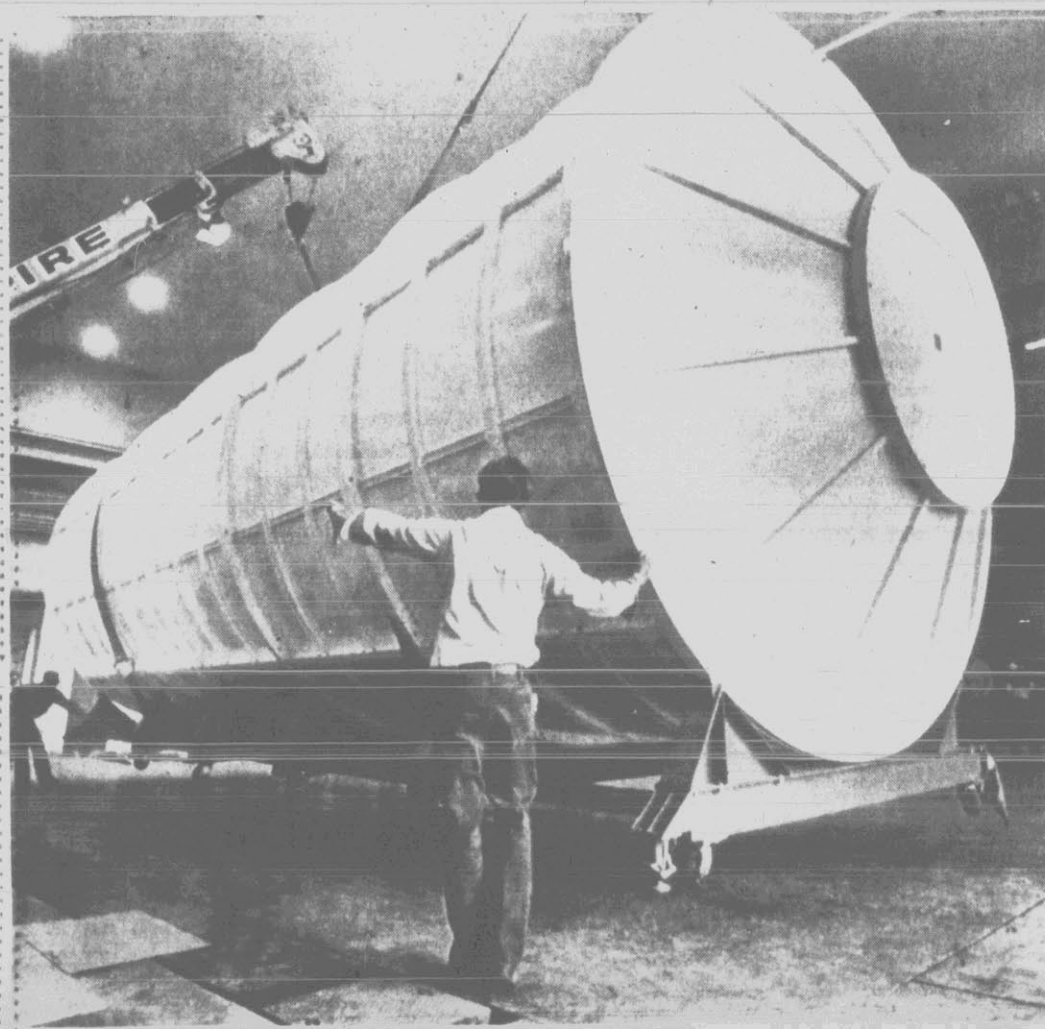

Weinberger, asked whether the decision had been made by Reagan, said, "not to my knowledge."

Crowe and Weinberger also criticized the proposal by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., that instead of dry-docking the Poseidons, the United States should adhere to the treaty's limits by mothballing 22 Minuteman missiles.

"That's a bum trade," said Crowe.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., Rep. Les Apin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, and Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., head of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and a number of other leading members of Congress, had urged the president to maintain the treaty.

Also, more than half the members of the House sent a letter to the White House warning the Soviets had "hot production lines" ready to add to their nuclear arsenals if the United States trimmed its observance of SALT II.

Pentagon Says Air Strike Proved High-Tech Benefits

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When U.S. Air Force and Navy bombers raided Libyan targets last week, they were flying a mission that probably wouldn't have been attempted five years ago.

And by pulling it off with the loss of just one aircraft, Pentagon officials believe they struck a different kind of blow at home — demonstrating to congressional critics the United States' military punch is more potent because of the embrace of high technology.

They believe this because for all the complaints about skyrocketing arms costs, last week's bombing raids depended upon sophisticated, expensive weaponry. And there is evidence to suggest that weaponry helped limit U.S. casualties.

"Operation El Dorado Canyon" was not without its problems. Five of the 18 F-111 bombers and two of the 14 A-6 attack jets sent on the mission never dropped a bomb because of mechanical or other unexplained problems.

The strike also was clearly less than "surgical," given some extensive damage that occurred in civilian areas. Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims has acknowledged that damage to at least one of the five targets was not what had been hoped. And Defense Department sources said the one F-111 that failed to return may well have been struck by Libyan anti-aircraft fire.

Nonetheless, five different targets were struck by surprise, simultaneously, at 2 a.m. (Libya time), and damage was inflicted at all five sites, Sims noted last week.

Five years ago, Air Force officials said Monday, the F-111s could not have mounted the same type of attack. Known by the rather inglorious nickname of Aardvark, the F-111 was last built in 1976. But in 1981, the service began retrofitting the plane with a new infrared targeting and laser-guidance bombing system.

Known as Pave Tack, the system is built by the Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. for $1.3 million per copy. The Navy deployed a similar system, known as TRAM (Target Recognition Attack Multisensor) and built by Hughes Aircraft, on carrier-based A-6 planes for the first time in 1980.

The significance of the computerized TRAM and Pave Tack systems, officials explained, is that it allows jet aircraft to maintain high speeds while bombing close to the ground — at night.

"You can dispense laser-guided munitions with great precision during the day," one source said. "Pave Tack lets us do it at night. And since the Libyans aren't trained to fly their fighters at night, that's when we wanted to go in."

Americans Join In Flight From Moslem Beirut Area

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ten Americans who stayed in west Beirut despite the threat of kidnapping by Islamic extremists fled the city's Moslem sector today under heavy guard. But many other Americans chose not to leave.

The Americans who were evacuated today joined dozens of Britons and other Westerners who left west Beirut during the weekend for fear of being abducted by terrorists seeking to avenge the U.S. air strike on Libya a week ago.

Police said Christian and Moslem militia snipers held their fire as two buses carrying the Americans and six jeepsloads of police rolled past the dividing Green Line and into Christian east Beirut.

The policemen escorted the Americans through east Beirut to the U.S. Embassy in the Christian suburb of Aukar, 12 miles north.

Druse militiamen escorted the convoy on the 15-minute drive through west Beirut. They kept the doors of their cars open during the trip, and kept their fingers ready on the triggers of the Kalashnikov rifles they thrust through the door opening. Drivers blared their horns.

A U.S. Embassy official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the evacuees would stay with friends in east Beirut and there were no plans to fly them out of the country.

But shortly after he spoke, a U.S. Navy helicopter was seen landing at the embassy courtyard and taking off 10 minutes later. It could not be determined whether any evacuees were aboard.

The embassy official said many Americans remained in west Beirut, "a lot of those who were born in Lebanon and with dual nationalities."

"There are also those who refused to leave for various reasons. I cannot give you an exact number. We did our job. We advised them to leave, but we cannot force them to leave."

The evacuation began at first light today when the Americans, some of them in tears, began assembling at the former U.S. consulate in west Beirut's Ein Mreisseh seaside boulevard.

Sharpshooters from Walid Jumblatt's Druse militia manned rooftops overlooking approaches to the area, and Druse militia checkpoints were set up all around the former consulate and the American University of Beirut campus.

Reporters saw six men and four women arrive separately at the assembly spot, each carrying a medium-size suitcase.

At least three evacuees were professors at the American University. Others worked at the College Protestant Francais, the American International College, and the Rashideen International Language Center, a privately owned institute. The rest refused to talk to reporters.

Public TV Schedules 2-Hour Examination Of Defense Plan

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan asked for television time March 23, 1983, for a speech about national security, there was no indication he was about to announce one of the biggest changes in defense policy in almost 40 years.

The furor Reagan touched off that night is still raging and public broadcasting makes a valuable, although limited, contribution to that national debate tonight with "Visions of Star Wars," a two-hour special jointly produced by two respected documentary units, "Nova" and "Frontline."

What Reagan announced that night was a grandiose and enormously expensive research project aimed at developing a high-tech shield against nuclear attack.

Ever since the atomic age dawned over Hiroshima 41 years ago, U.S. nuclear policy has been based on the simple theory of deterrence: any nuclear attack on the United States will be met with a devastating counter-attack.

No other defense exists against nuclear weapons. But Reagan, and some others, dispute the idea that no defense is possible. They believe America's technological genius may find the way.

The chief supporter of "Star Wars," or the Strategic Defense Initiative as the program is formally known, is Edward Teller, the physicist best known for developing the hydrogen bomb.

Teller has long sought to persuade U.S. national security officials that a defense against atomic attack is possible, but had made few converts until he talked to Reagan.

Now, the nation is launched on an expensive hunt — $2.7 billion this fiscal year and $4.8 billion requested next year — for something that has eluded mankind throughout the ages: the perfect defense.

The PBS show does a good job of detailing the early history of Star Wars, particularly how Reagan was sold the program by Teller and retired Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham, chief supporter of the "High Frontier" idea of putting hundreds of laser-equipped battle stations in orbit to shoot down attacking nuclear weapons.

The show also has a long historical segment about the development of American and Soviet nuclear arsenals and the general failure of arms control efforts, leading to the current situation — almost 50,000 atomic weapons pointed at each other. It includes information about the Soviets' own Star Wars research, an effort that helped spur the U.S. program.

The show then goes into great detail about the various types of exotic technologies being studied by the Star Warriors who are working at national laboratories, research factories and think tanks around the nation.

Among those efforts are research into particle beams, electro-magnetic rail guns and a bewildering variety of the concentrated beams of light known as lasers, including X-ray lasers and lasers that draw the enormous power they need from atomic explosions.

The show, as far as it goes, is well-done and the narration by former "CBS Morning News" anchor Bill Kurtis goes far in explaining the complicated subject.

But it gives short shrift to several

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

EMPTY VAULT — Excavators did out the sand fill after walls of a vault at Chicago's old Lexington Hotel, linked to mobster Al Capone, were blasted away during a live television program Monday night. Only some empty bottles were found in the vault, which had been rumored to contain stored loot. (AP Laserphoto)

Capone's Secrets Stay Secret

CHICAGO (AP) — No bones, no bombs, no booze, no bullion. A mysterious vault linked to gangland czar "Scarface" Al Capone kept faith with a long line of mobsters brought in for questioning by telling nobody nothin'.

Thus ended a months-long, million-dollar adventure climaxed by the opening on live television Monday night of the vault at the Lexington Hotel.

Capone, who liked his spats pearl gray, his pajamas silk, his machine guns in working order and his associates silent, probably would have approved.

"It's always a disappointment when you don't find what you've been looking for for four months. ... I always thought there would be bones," said John Joslyn, coproducer of the two-hour "The Mystery Of Al Capone's Vaults."

Excavators instead found what appeared to be several empty bottles of Prohibition-era "bathtub gin" and an old porcelain sign reading "Adams Express Co."

"I wonder if I can get a deposit on a 60-year-old bottle," said breathless TV host Geraldo Rivera.

The discovery came before a worldwide TV audience and special agent Dennis Sansone of the Internal Revenue Service, which didn't want to miss a shot at collecting its due from one of the nation's most notorious tax evaders.

Rediscovery of the chamber prompted the IRS to file a lien last year, seeking more than $800,000 in taxes, including penalties and interest.

A crew of about 30 workers, explosives experts and a small bulldozer taken apart and then reassembled in the hotel basement worked for nearly two hours to get at the secrets some believed Capone had sealed in a vault 125 feet long, 8 feet high and 8 feet deep.

Capone moved into the hotel in 1928 and for the next seven years maintained his South Side headquarters at the Lexington, which is honeycombed with secret passages and tunnels. He left Chicago in 1932 to begin an eight-year stretch in federal prison for income-tax evasion. He died in Miami in 1947.

Speculation on what Capone left behind ranged from the bones of rivals to bags of money.

"Any bodies in there would have been my jurisdiction," said Dr. Robert Stein, the Cook County medical examiner. "All I've got now are some tales to relate at the next medical society meeting."

The work crew pulled down a 7,000-pound concrete wall covering the vault's opening, used explosives to blast through a second wall, and moved enough dirt to fill two hours of television time.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals E

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Lawmaker Says Rates On Credit Cards High

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bank credit cards carry an average interest rate of 19.37 percent, but consumers can find rates below 18 percent in at least 51 financial institutions, according to a congressman who says banks are charging too much.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said Monday banks pay an average 9.24 percent for their funds, making the markup for credit cards greater than 100 percent.

Credit card interest rates could have been more than 4 points lower if banks made the same profit on the cards that they earned on other types of loans, Schumer told a news conference.

The nation's 71.6 million card holders could have saved an average of $41.26 in 1985 at the lower rates, he said, adding that credit card interest should be dropping like other interest rates.

Kirk Willison, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association, said credit cards are "much more than a loan" to consumers, and the interest should be considered a service charge.

Customers get cash advances, monthly statements that can be used for tax purposes and a way of producing identification, he said.

Willison said credit card rates have remained stable between 17 percent and 19 percent since the early 1970s. When the prime rate was 20 percent some five years ago, credit card rates were 18 percent, he said.

But Schumer commented, "Everywhere you look, interest rates are falling except for credit cards. Banks have been overcharging customers for their cards — a markup of more than 100 percent. Competition is not working."

The lawmaker said banks made a $3.6 billion net profit before taxes on their credit card business in 1985, and profits on bank cards were 5.37 percent — more than five times the average profit made by the banking industry on overall lending.

Schumer said he compiled the information from research conducted by the Federal Reserve Board and the Nilson Report, a credit card industry newsletter.

Schumer said he is introducing a bill that would force financial institutions to disclose their credit card interest rates, annual fees and grace periods in any applications and mail

NEW YORK (AP) — Broad sectors of the economy — from large borrowers to consumers — should benefit from the reduction of the prime lending rate by the nation's top 10 banks to its lowest level in nearly eight years, analysts say.

Monday's half-point reduction pushed the prime rate, a benchmark used in figuring interest rates on loans to banks' biggest customers, to 8.5 percent.

Economists said the prime rate cut reduces business costs, which combined with low inflation and the falling value of the dollar in foreign exchange could help nurture a long-awaited economic rebound soon.

"The first impact of that will be higher profits, but then it could show up in lower (consumer) prices," said James E. Annable, chief economist for First Chicago Corp.

The prime rate cuts were made three days after the Federal Reserve

Board lowered its discount rate — the interest it charges on loans to commercial banks — from 7 percent to 6.5 percent.

Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, the nation's third largest bank, opened the latest round of reductions. That was followed by the rest of the top 10. The last time the major banks set their prime at 8.5 percent was in June 1978.

Interest rates in the credit markets already have fallen to levels not seen since the late 1970s, largely because of the sharp drop in world oil prices, which is expected to keep inflation subdued.

The continuing drop in open market interest rates has reduced the banks' cost of borrowing money, enabling them to cut their prime rate and other lending rates without sacrificing their profit margins.

"If there's any further drop in their cost of funds, we could see the prime drop as low as 8 percent, even without another cut in the discount rate," said Ben Laden, chief economist for the T. Rowe Price investment firm in Baltimore.

The biggest impact of a cut in the prime rate is for corporations and other big borrowers — such as developing nations — which get bank credit at interest rates pegged to the benchmark rate.

For businesses, the lower borrowing costs can help bolster profits and cash flow, which later can lead to greater capital spending and production, which in turn means higher employment and greater consumer spending, economists said.

Earthquake Hits N.Y.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A minor earthquake rocked southern Westchester County early today, prompting dozens of telephone calls to police and radio stations but no damage or injuries were reported, authorities said.

The quake, which struck at 2:28 a.m., was the fourth tremor or aftershock to hit the suburban New York City area in six months.

About 30 people living in a dozen communities called radio station WZFM in Pleasantville after the quake, said station spokesman James Burkett.

"We got a lot of calls from people who thought it was an explosion that had to do with the Libyans," he said.

Derrick Gorey, a Westchester County police spokesman, said he had received calls from about a dozen police departments around the county reporting tremors and that there were no immediate reports of injury or damage.

"I didn't know if it was an earthquake or a bomb, but it shook the keys on the wall and the filing cabinets," said Harrison Police Lt. Harold Hall. "I was sent rolling across the floor in my chair."

The quake had a preliminary reading of 2.7 on the Richter scale and was centered in the Ardsley-Dobbs Ferry area, said Waverly Persons, geophysicist at the U.S. Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo.

Station Fire

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The threat of exploding fuel tanks forced the evacuation of four homes Monday as firefighters battled a blaze at a service station and convenience mart in Onslow County.

No one was injured in the fire in the Piney Green community, fire officials said. At one point smoke from the blaze was so thick it could be seen from downtown Jacksonville, 12 miles northeast, witnesses said.

The Golden Age of bridge has lost another of its superstars. Lew Mathe of Canoga Park, California died quietly in his sleep on March 10.

No one played bridge as hard as did Lew Mathe. He enjoyed winning, but there were few more graceful losers at any game. He was fiercely jealous of the integrity of the pastime he loved, and would not mince words if he believed someone violated it.

He was a member of the victorious 1954 World Championship team, and also represented the U.S. on five other occasions. His national titles would take more space to detail than we have here.

His technique was impressive. Watch him at work on this hand from a national championship.

Four spades was a normal contract, and the opening lead of the queen of hearts was made at both tables. In one room, declarer lost a trump, two hearts and a diamond. Mathe showed that there was no reason to give up four tricks.

He won the first trick in hand with the ace, cashed the king of clubs and returned to hand with the king of trumps. He crossed to the ace of clubs and ruffed a club with the ten of trumps. Had West overruffed, the rest would have been simple, but the defender made a fine play when he elected to sluff a diamond.

The diamond finesse was tempting, but Mathe had already seen that it was unnecessary. He continued by leading a low trump, and the defenders had no counter.

West took his queen of trumps, led a heart of his partner's king and won the heart continuation. He did the best he could by shifting to a diamond. Mathe flew up with dummy's ace, ruffed a club high to set up a long card in the suit, then got back to the table with a trump to the nine, in the process drawing the last trump. His losing diamond went on the 13th club and the contract was home.

Keep two seats for us in your new game, Lew.

Court Plans AIDS Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid growing fears over the spread of AIDS, the Supreme Court is planning to decide whether public schools and other federal aid recipients may discriminate against those with contagious diseases.

The justices on Monday set the stage for a ruling next year to determine whether a carrier of a contagious disease — including the AIDS virus — may be considered a "handicapped" person protected by federal law against discrimination.

In a case involving a Florida school teacher, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in 1985 that the federal law banning discrimination against the handicapped applies to contagious diseases.

In appealing to the Supreme Court, Nassau County, Fla., school officials said the appeals court decision could have "disastrous consequences."

The officials said, "The decision... has far-reaching implications insofar as it constitutes a precedent that all individuals with any form of contagious disease including AIDS and other fatal diseases are protected" by federal law.

AIDS — or acquired immune deficiency syndrome — is a viral disease that can kill its victims by destroying their immune system and leaving them vulnerable to other diseases.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said this month that 18,070 cases of AIDS have been reported nationwide and that 9,591 of those people had died. No one has recovered from the disease.

The AIDS virus can be transmitted by sexual contact, transfusion of blood or blood products or infections from mother to child around the time of birth.

The Florida case involves a woman, Gene H. Arline, who was diagnosed as having tuberculosis, an infectious respiratory disease.

FOCUS

Bang, Bang
Gun legislation was recently passed in the House of Representatives. In 1980, the total U.S. firearm body-count was 31,001. This includes all homicides, suicides, and fatal accidents involving the use of guns. Homicide was the eleventh leading cause of death in the United States in 1980, and firearms were involved in more than 60 percent of these murders. The odds of a United States citizen becoming a murder victim during a lifetime are one in 153.

Paper Company's Discharges Upheld

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee can't stop a North Carolina paper mill from pouring chemicals into the Pigeon River, the Tennessee Supreme Court says.

The court ruled 4-1 Monday that Tennessee is not entitled to an injunction or fines against Champion International Corp. because the company's Champion Papers plant in Canton, N.C., holds a valid waste discharge permit there.

The Pigeon River flows 26 miles from North Carolina into East Tennessee through the Smoky Mountains into Douglas Lake about 35 miles east of Knoxville. The state has been fighting to get the river cleaned up for about 40 years, though the current case was filed July 8, 1983.

"If you drive through East Tennessee the river is dead. It's brown and it smells," said Frank Scanlon, a deputy attorney general. "It could be one of the best whitewater rafting rivers east of the Mississippi."

"That place has been polluted for I don't know how long, and I thought we were about to get it cleaned up," said Gary Myers, director of the Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency.

Company attorney Charles Warfield said Champion Papers uses waste treatment techniques approved by North Carolina. "We are quite pleased, of course Tennessee has been fussing about this for a long time," Warfield said.

The Supreme Court, in reversing lower court rulings and dismissing the state's case, held that Tennessee cannot impose its laws upon the holder of a valid permit issued by another state.

Cubans Finish 8-Day Trip In Open Inner-Tube Raft In Good Condition

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two Cubans rescued after an eight-day, 250-mile voyage through the treacherous Gulf Stream on a makeshift raft of inner tubes suffered only from sunburn and dehydration, officials said.

Jose Luis Ramon-Guerra, 26, and Jose Rafael Aleman-Valido, 21, were in good condition today at Jackson Memorial Hospital, said night administrator Bruce Fresko.

The two were picked up by a fishing boat Monday morning 25 miles off the coast and then turned over to a Coast Guard patrol boat.

On Saturday, the Coast Guard rescued three Cubans near the Florida Keys under nearly identical circumstances.

"I'm repeatedly amazed that these Cubans are so willing to risk their lives to come here," said Perry Rivkind, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. "You have to be awful desperate to try something like this."

Ramon-Guerra and Aleman-Valido

said they left Havana on April 14, surviving on water and tomato juice as they drifted and bobbed in 8- to 10-foot waves.

The raft — mesh netting draped over two rubber tubes — contained a pair of binoculars, rubber gloves and a four-gallon drinking container.

"A trip like that under the conditions they've described to us could be considered a miracle," Coast Guard Lt. Tom Tabrah said.

The men made no mention of any food they carried with them or were able to obtain during their trip, Tabrah said.

Both were suffering from sunburn and dehydration, said hospital spokeswoman Betty Baderman. Ramon-Guerra was expected to be released soon and his companion would remain under observation for an undetermined amount of time, said Fresko.

On Saturday, the Coast Guard rescued three Cubans from inner tubes near Marathon Key.

Senate Gives Up Hunt For Budget Compromise, Starts New Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders abandoned their month-long search for compromise with the White House and action from House Democrats on the 1987 budget, and launched into floor debate alone.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., brought a Senate Budget Committee package to the floor Monday after House leaders refused his request to act concurrently on their version of what next year's spending should be.

"We were just flat out told (by Democratic leaders) that the House would not consider the budget until about 72 hours after it passes the Senate," Dole said. "So now the choice is either do nothing or to proceed and hope that we can work out some bipartisan resolution on this side before sending it to the House."

Dole also held several meetings with administration officials, including President Reagan, but failed to find a compromise.

Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., predicted the measure — passed by the committee a month ago — would be opposed by the White House, but he added, "Something like it will ultimately have to pass the Senate."

Under Senate rules, the budget is allotted 50 hours of debate, and a final vote is expected next week. The timing may preclude much personal lobbying by Reagan, who leaves Friday for a seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo and will be gone for nearly two weeks.

The administration has attacked the proposed Senate budget because it contains $12 billion more in taxes and $25 billion less in military spending than Reagan proposed in his spending plan.

But the president's budget proposal was strongly rejected by the full House and the Senate committee.

Domenici, in opening the debate Monday, defended the committee plan as a politically realistic approach.

"The $295 billion (for military spending) will turn out in the end to be the best we could get," he said. As for the taxes, "There's no way to get where we ought to be, committed ourselves to be ... without some additional revenues."

Under the deficit reduction law Congress passed in December, the red ink for fiscal 1987 must be no more than $144 billion. By Congressional estimates, the president's budget missed the mark by about $16 billion.

Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, the ranking Democrat on the Budget Committee, said the panel's blueprint was designed to meet the deficit law's goal of a balanced budget by fiscal 1991. "It puts us on the glide path," he said.

Domenici said despite opposition to the plan from many senators, including 24 Republicans who signed a critical letter, no one had come forward with a thorough alternative. None of the 16 amendments already planned would make major changes, he said.

The deficit law, which imposes across-the-board spending cuts if predictions show the $144 billion target will be missed, has forced constraint on the lawmakers, he said.

"We don't have the luxury of holding fast to our individual preferences as we have had in past years," he said.

Dole and House minority leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., after Monday's leadership meeting, criticized the House leadership for holding up budget action.

Prisoner Forgotten By Guard

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A 25-year-old Maryland woman, who was supposed to spend just a few hours in a holding cell here, ended up spending the weekend in the 8-by-11 room with no food or bed because a sheriff's deputy forgot about her, officials say.

Cassandra Jones, who pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor Friday afternoon in Alexandria's General District Court, was found Monday morning by a deputy conducting a routine check of the courthouse, sheriff's department officials said.

"My whole family didn't know if I was alive or dead," Ms. Jones said. "I broke the heel of my shoe banging on the window. ... I was banging from Friday until Sunday, when I passed out."

Officials said the room contained a wooden bench, a light, a water fountain and a toilet. But Ms. Jones said the water fountain was broken and she had to drink from the toilet.

Ms. Jones was taken to Alexandria Hospital after she was found, fed intravenously and released.

Sheriff James H. Dunning said he felt "very badly that it happened. I'm embarrassed," and added that the courthouse is closed on weekends.

One deputy usually is assigned to each prisoner and is responsible for checking that prisoner in and out of a cell. Dunning said he has ordered an investigation into the matter and has suspended a deputy.

Ms. Jones pleaded guilty to a charge of impeding a police officer, who was investigating a domestic dispute.

Klan Probe

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Navy investigators have launched an inquiry into whether Marine Corps equipment has been supplied to Ku Klux Klan supporters in the North Carolina-based White Patriot Party, a Camp Lejeune spokesman says.

Lt. Col. David F. Tomsy said in a telephone interview Monday that the Naval Investigative Service began an investigation Monday into the allegations of the Southern Poverty Law Center, a Montgomery, Ala.-based group that monitors Klan activity, contending that Marines from Lejeune had participated in paramilitary activity with Klansmen and supplied them with military items such as canteens, pistol belts and uniforms.

Sworn statements given to the law center by two former White Patriot Party members said Marines had helped direct paramilitary training for Klansmen at the Johnston County farm of Glenn Miller, leader of the White Patriot Party and a candidate for the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate.

Greenville has employed the Council-Manager form of government since January 12, 1953.
