Piedmont To Increase Available Flight Space

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt-Greenville Airport has experienced a substantial growth in airline passenger traffic over the past year and officials with the commuter airline serving Greenville — Piedmont Commuter — predict 30,000 more passengers a year could be boarded if more seats were available.
Jan Bennett, sales and traffic director for Piedmont Commuter, said Wednesday the airline will add more seats on June 1 by replacing 19-passenger airplanes used on two Pitt-Greenville flights with 30-passenger planes. But she suggested that in order to sustain growth in the passenger traffic, the airport must become certificated.

Commuter service at Pitt-Greenville was started by Wheeler Airlines which operated from 1973 until August 1980 when Sunbird Airlines began its service to the airport. Sunbird — which changed its name to CCAir on Jan. 1 of this year — became a "Piedmont Commuter" on May 1, 1985.

Citing the growth in passenger traffic, Ms. Bennett said that during the first three months of 1985, Sunbird boarded a total of 1,385 passengers at Pitt Greenville, and in April of last year, boarded 605 passengers.

During the first three months of operation as Piedmont Commuter — May, June and July of last year — the airline boarded a total of 2,877 passengers, and in August boarded 1,237.
Boardings for the last four months of 1985 included: 1,213 in September, 1,469 in October, 1,249 in November and 1,395 in December.
In the first three months of this year, 4,974 passengers took flights from Pitt-Greenville, including 1,439 in January, 1,476 in February and 2,059 in March.

Ms. Bennett said boarding figures for April are expected to total about 2,300.
Piedmont Commuter now has 10 flights a day from the airport, including eight using 19-passenger Jetstream 31s, one with a 15-passenger Beech 99, and one with a 30-passenger Shorts 330. Those flights provide 197 seats a day.

Beginning July 1, Ms. Bennett said, to increase the number of seats available, the airline will replace two of the Jetstream flights with Shorts 330 aircraft, giving a net increase of 22 seats a day.
But Ms. Bennett said the airline has plans to replace its Shorts 330s with Shorts 360s — a 36-passenger airplane — within the next several

Senate Endorses Education Funds

By HELEN DEWAR
(c) 1986, The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — The Republican-controlled Senate Wednesday overwhelmingly rejected President Reagan's plan to terminate more than 40 federal programs and endorsed an increase in spending for education as it began voting on a fiscal 1987 congressional budget.
In both votes, the Senate at least tacitly supported tax increases that Reagan opposes to finance the programs and demonstrated continuing congressional support for domestic spending programs that the president wants to curtail or kill.
The votes underscored the difficulty of achieving a compromise under the rigid deficit ceilings of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-control law, especially in an election year.

The proposal to terminate programs called the bluff of many conservative senators — who oppose defense cutbacks and tax increases — on the question of domestic spending cuts that would be needed to meet the deficit target. But higher domestic spending resulting from the education vote may make it harder to get the conservatives' agreement for a final budget compromise.
Together, the votes further divided Congress and the White House on budget priorities, despite the hope of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings' drafters that the law would contribute to compromises aimed at avoiding automatic spending cutbacks that are required when deficit targets are not reached.
"A good start in the wrong direction," said Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., in reaction to the Senate's 60-to-38 vote to raise taxes by $300 million to keep education programs from suffering losses from inflation and from earlier Gramm-Rudman-Hollings spending cuts.
There is "no surplus of votes" for a budget in any case, said Sen. Lawton Chiles, Fla., ranking Democrat on the budget panel, and more domestic spending of any kind could make passage of a budget even more difficult, he contended.
It was Domenici and Chiles, however, who engineered the 83-to-14 vote against Reagan's proposed termination of more than 40 programs, including such politically popular ones as Amtrak, agricultural extension services, postal subsidies and small business loans.
Domenici had been chafing for weeks under criticism from both the White House and GOP conservatives, who contended that a budget

PCC Presents First Award For Excellence In Teaching

By JANE WELBORN

The first Joseph E. Downing Award for Excellence in Teaching was presented to Jo Ann B. Leith in ceremonies at Pitt Community College Wednesday.
Mrs. Leith, division director for Business and Commercial Education at PCC, has headed the business department of the school for 22 years. She will retire after this school year.
"You all are a part of this award," Mrs. Leith said to the PCC staff and faculty when she accepted the plaque and monetary award. "It is very precious to me because it has Joseph Downing's name on it."
Downing, PCC's former associate dean for Curricular Programs, died in January of this year. Memorial contributions were used to set up the award in his memory to recognize instructors who have demonstrated excellence in teaching and service in the N.C. community college system.

The recipient of the Downing award will be PCC's nominee for the State Board of Community Colleges/First Union Awards for Excellence in Teaching.
"At the state level, they recognize the need for establishing an award for excellence in teaching," said Dr. Charles E. Russell, president of PCC. "I am pleased that we could work out a program for recognizing a teacher at this community college and do so in a way to honor a man who gave 22 years of his life to the school."
Mrs. Leith, a native of Toledo, Ohio, received bachelor's and master's degrees from East Carolina University. She is a member of the National Business Education Association and the N.C. Business Education Association. She is an officer in Delta Kappa Gamma, the national teacher's honor society, and has served as a Girl Scout leader and PTA officer.

She and her husband Robert have four children and four grandchildren. She is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, where she has taught Sunday school classes.
"Mrs. Leith is very deserving of this honor," Russell said. "She has continually demonstrated an ability to lead and motivate students through student organizations and as a teacher and advisor."
The selection of the recipient of the Joseph E. Downing Award for Excellence in Teaching was done by a secret panel from nominations by the faculty. Any full-time permanent faculty member is eligible for award consideration.

Terrorists Call For Revenge Slayings

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A terrorist group that claims it hanged a kidnapped British journalist urged other extremist groups holding British and American hostages to kill them in revenge for the U.S. air raids on Libya.

Seven French teachers left Moslem west Beirut today for the city's Christian sector, fearing violence by Moslem extremists. Eight Americans, who fled west Beirut on Tuesday, left Lebanon today by boat for the Mediterranean island of Cyprus.

A four-minute videotape showing a blindfolded man dangling from a scaffold was left Wednesday at the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar in the name of the Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems.

A typewritten statement left with the videotape identified the man as 64-year-old British journalist Alec Collett. A voice on the videotape said in Arabic that Collett was hanged at a mass rally, but it did not say where.

Collett had a finger removed in surgery several years ago, but it could not be seen from the videotape whether the corpse was missing any fingers.

"They can't see clearly enough in the videotape of the hands to determine whether it is him," Collett's son, David, said Wednesday in a radio interview in San Fernando, Calif. "However, from the report, it sounds very much like him."

Collett's body has not been found. In London, the British Foreign Office said it could not confirm he had been killed. "Until the facts have been established beyond doubt, speculation will only cause further pain and anguish to Mr. Collett's family, friends and colleagues who have already suffered so much distress," said a Foreign Office spokesman, who by custom spoke on condition of anonymity.

The statement purported to be from Collett's kidnappers said he was killed April 16 in retaliation for Britain's decision to allow the United States to use bombers based in Britain to attack Libya.

It urged other groups holding American or British hostages to "execute them because the blood of

Bomb Hits Airline Office In London Shopping Area

LONDON (AP) — A bomb exploded before dawn today outside the ground floor office of British Airways on Oxford Street, London's main shopping thoroughfare. The blast touched off a fire, but few people were in the area and only one passer-by was treated for shock.

Two groups claimed responsibility for the bombing, the latest in a series of terrorist acts aimed at British targets since Britain supported the U.S. bombing raid on Libya.
Press Association, the British news agency, said it was contacted by the Angry Brigade, an anarchist group, which claimed it planted the bomb in retaliation for British involvement in the bombing of Libya. Also claiming responsibility, Press Association said, was the Scottish National Liberation Army, a group seeking independence for Scotland.

The 4:50 a.m. blast and fire blew out one large window in the six-story building, and shattered and blackened others. Charred walls could be seen inside. The sidewalk was covered with glass shards, and there was some apparent structural damage.

The explosion also blew out windows in other buildings in the area, and police said it was heard several miles away.

Police cordoned off Oxford Street to search for other devices, snarling morning rush-hour traffic. The street reopened seven hours after the explosion, but the area around state-owned British Airways was sealed off as forensic experts went over the debris.

Police said they closed Victoria Station, the busiest in London, and evacuated the area for several minutes this morning because of a bomb scare which turned out to be a hoax.

No one was reported injured by the explosion on Oxford Street, but a woman was treated for shock, said Chief Superintendent Hugh Blenkin of Scotland Yard. Firefighters extinguished the fire that broke out after the explosion in about an hour, confining it mostly to the airline office, one of 10 in London.

"We have no suspects at the moment who might be responsible," Blenkin said.

News reports said the bomb, left on a sidewalk outside the airline office, was hidden among bags of garbage.

American Airlines and American Express have counters in the British Airways office, but Scotland Yard spokesman Philip Powell said the British airline appeared to be the target of the bomb. The U.S. Embassy is a few hundred yards from the building where the bomb went off.

Cmdr. George Churchill-Coleman, head of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad, refused to comment on news reports that the bombers may have intended the device to explode when Oxford Street was crowded

No Frost

Because temperatures did not drop to the freezing mark as had been predicted, crops and flowers in the eastern part of the state escaped serious damage early today.

The low temperature this morning reached 40 degrees, according to figures provided by the Greenville Utilities Water Plant. The high temperature recorded at the facility Wednesday was 58 degrees. Temperatures had been expected to drop to 32 degrees in eastern North Carolina overnight.

Leroy James, Pitt County Agricultural Extension chairman, said there was no frost.

"People called us to ask what to do about their fruit, and I told them to cover it just in case," James said. "The wind is doing more damage than the cold weather."

"Tobacco can't stand much wind. If there has been any damage, it is injury to the tobacco that has already been set out."

Organ and Tissue Donation Needed

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Three people in the 54-county area served by the Carolina Organ Procurement Agency have died in the last month waiting for transplant hearts, Jean Folston, a COPA organ procurement coordinator, said.

At least one liver transplant candidate has died.

Numerous people have died waiting for kidneys. And about 2,100 North Carolinians with failed kidneys must have dialysis treatment to continue to live. Most of these are transplant candidates.

Bone and skin and corneal transplant needs arise often.

The success of organ and tissue transplantation worldwide continues to improve as knowledge of tissue matching and immunology increases. People can have their lives extended and have the quality of their lives greatly enhanced through medical and surgical procedures involving transplantation of organs and tissues. Yet, the lack of well-matched, high-quality organs and tissues is huge.

Why does such a staggering shortage of usable tissue and organs exist when potential donors are dying every day?

According to a recent study a medical ethics group at the Hastings Center in Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y., the major reason for the shortage is medical professionals' unwillingness to ask relatives of brain-dead patients for organs.

The same study showed that most people are well aware of transplantation and its potential for extending and improving the quality of life for desperately ill people. Many even have directives on donor cards or driver's licenses in their wallets, yet fail when their wishes are not acted upon when they die.

Their relatives are upset during the time of death and either don't know or fail to think of the deceased person's wish or probable wish for donation. And if the medical professionals involved with the family don't ask, the organs and tissues go unharvested past the crucial time when they can be removed, Ms. Folston said.

Some states have sought to solve this problem by requiring doctors and hospitals to develop protocol to ask if the deceased was a donor or if the family is a donor family. Among these are Oregon, New York, Virginia and California. North Carolina legislators have not yet addressed this issue.

The Carolina Organ Procurement Agency, with offices in Greenville and Chapel Hill, is a non-profit service agency acting as a clearing-house for organs and tissues and organ and tissue-donation information. Formed in July 1985, it seeks to increase organ and tissue recovery in 54 eastern counties.

Stephen L. Joyner, COPA executive director, said his agency has made contacts in all the hospitals in this region about organ and tissue procurement and has the protocol in place for procurement of organs and tissues in the hospital in which the donor dies or is declared brain dead. In most instances, organs and tissue procured are used for recipients in this region. If no suitable match is found here, however, the next step is to look at all the potential recipients in North Carolina, then throughout the nation, then throughout the world. "We try to see that no precious tissue goes to waste," Joyner said, "and it's our first priority to benefit people close to home."

The Eastern office is located in Building N of the Physicians Quadrangle office complex off West Sixth Street in Greenville. On the staff are two procurement coordinators, Jean Folston and Don Easley, both registered nurses. Rick Hall, also a registered nurse, is their supervisor.

The procurement coordinators work, not only with medical personnel, but with individual families considering organ and tissue donation and one of them is on call at all times to assist individual families or hospitals.

Besides helping set up donation protocol at each hospital in the region, the agency provides professional education to administrative medical and nursing staff, when appropriate. All costs of organ and tissue procurement are paid through this agency.

Previously the work of COPA was done by hospital-based similar pro-

CONNIE ANSLEY

CATHY HEDGEPEETH

Connie Ansley Has New Cornea; Cathy Hedgepeth, A New Kidney

Ask Connie Buck Ansley the value of organ and tissue donation. Ask Cathy Hedgepeth.

Connie has vision in her right eye today because someone willed her corneas and other organs and tissues for transplantation. Cathy has a new kidney and no longer needs the peritoneal dialysis that was a part of her life from 1981 till January of this year.

A recipient rarely knows the identity of his or her donor, but Connie knows hers. In fact, she helped with the removal of donor organs, including a cornea which enables her once legally-blind right eye to see.

Connie is a certified surgical technologist employed in the operating room of Pitt County Memorial Hospital. One Friday late last year she helped with organ removal from a person who had willed "any needed organs and parts" of his body. Knowing she was high on the list for a corneal transplant, she thought, "I wonder if one of these corneas could be mine?"

Earlier, contact lens had corrected her keratoconus condition, but in the previous several months the peaking of the cornea which characterizes the hereditary condition had advanced to the point that her contact lens had worn a hole in the cornea and ended her lens-wearing, making her legally blind in that eye.

She can expect the same to happen with her left eye and hopes that donor corneas will be plentiful enough that she can have a second transplant at some time in the future. A Blount's Creek native, she has lived in Greenville for the past six years.

"Getting my cornea was a glorifying experience," Connie said. "I am so thankful to the person and his family who gave it to me."

Cathy is a 23-year-old Mount Olive native who moved to Greenville about six months ago to live with her sister, Pamela Dail, so she could more easily obtain the medical care that kept her alive. She has been a glomerulonephritis patient since she was 16 and a dialysis patient since she was 18.

She left a business administration education at Wayne Community College to come here, but says she may transfer to Pitt Community College in the same field and stay here now that her dialysis is over and it looks like her new kidney is working well.

Today is Day 88 of a 90-day trial period with her new kidney. She said, "They told me that if I were going to reject it, I probably would do so in the first three months. I'm almost over the hump. You can't know how good that feels!"

grams at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, North Carolina Memorial Hospital and Duke Medical Center. Joyner said it is being shown that the work can be done by combined non-hospital effort less expensively. The agency is expected to be self-sustaining by the time its start-up grant of $150,000 provided by the North Carolina Legislature is used up.

"Our major task," Joyner said, "is communicating with local hospital administrators, trustees, medical and nursing staffs the need to develop protocol that would make it routine for doctors or other designated health professionals to let people experiencing the death of a loved one know that organ donation is an option."

"We strongly recommend," he said, "that discretion and sensitivity to the family's feelings be taken into consideration. "What we cannot go along with is silence. People need to know about the option. Many may have more regret about having missed the opportunity for organ donation than they would ever have about having been quietly asked."

Fred Brown, Pitt County Memorial Hospital executive vice president, and Diane Poole, assistant vice president for nursing services, said they believe Pitt Memorial is doing an adequate job of securing donor organs and tissues.

Attending physicians are the decision-makers about whether families of brain-dead and dying patients should be approached and usually the charge nurse is the person who asks or offers reading material if the physician gives the go-ahead. Often COPA is called upon to send an organ procurement coordinator to answer families' questions.

Ms. Poole disagreed with the premise that most people are aware of the value of organ and tissue donation and just need to be asked. "I think more public awareness is needed," she said, "more communication among people."

"Our nurses often hear from families that they never heard the deceased express an opinion about donation, so they don't know whether it was the person's wish or not. Often people will choose not to allow donation if they're not sure."

Brown said there is a question on Pitt Memorial's patient admission questionnaire as to whether the patient is an organ donor or wishes to be one. "Some people don't think this should be there, but we think it's helpful to our staff to have this information," he said.

This week has been designated as National Organ/Tissue Donor Awareness Week. For information, call 1-800-252-COPA (2672).

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Reader Objects To 'Plane' Ceremony

DEAR ABBY: What next? People are actually writing to you, hoping to promote the idea of empowering airline captains to perform marriage ceremonies in midair. Personally, when I fly I want the pilot in the cockpit, flying the plane—not in the back of the plane performing a marriage service.

Maybe we've been seeing too many episodes of "Love Boat" with the ship's captain constantly away from the wheel. (Who's steering the ship?)

Abby, when airline captains start performing marriages, please let us know, so I can book a reservation on Amtrak.

CAROL IN DALLAS

DEAR CAROL: Relax, I doubt that it will ever happen. Read on for an update on marriages performed on the high seas:

DEAR ABBY: You were quite right in stating that sea captains were permitted to perform marriage ceremonies years ago when voyages were very long. However, times have changed, and ships' captains can no longer tie the nuptial knot at sea.

Shortly after World War II, when I was captain of an American freighter docked in Istanbul, Turkey, I was asked by a young couple from New York to marry them at sea. I went ashore and asked the American vice consul if I was empowered to marry the couple. He consulted a large volume of federal regulations, then declared that I could not marry them. He read the section that was applicable, and I still recall the significant part:

It seems that Bud Fisher, the creator of the famous comic strip Mutt and Jeff, had been married by a captain on a trans-Atlantic liner. Some time later, the Fishers split up, and one of the parties claimed that the marriage was not valid as the ship's captain was not authorized to marry couples. The courts decreed that sea captains no longer had the authority to perform marriages, so since the Fisher marriage was not legal, it was annulled. Fisher vs. Fisher was apparently a test case.

TOYS FROM NUREMBERG ON DISPLAY AT MUSEUM

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition, "Toys From the Nuremberg Spielzeug Museum," at Cooper-Hewitt Museum here includes dolls, dollhouses, miniature shop interiors, blocks, mechanical and optical toys, a model railroad and other objects created over several centuries in Germany's "Toy City."

Nuremberg has been an international center for toy making since the 14th century. From the Middle Ages on, the great variety of playthings manufactured there were known as "Nurnberger Tand" — Nuremberg trinkets. The display will remain at Cooper-Hewitt, the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Design, until May 11.

DEAR MR. MACLEAN: Thanks for a nice Fish(er) story.

DEAR ABBY: A man who works where I work keeps asking me to go out with him. He said for either a Sunday brunch or maybe dinner. I always make up some excuse because in the first place he's not my type, and in the second place he's too old for me. (He's somewhere in the neighborhood of 45, and I am 22.)

Well, he sent me an Easter card and wrote on it, "When can we go out?" And there was a $20 bill in the envelope.

Now I don't know what to do. A girl can always use an extra $20, but something tells me I should give it back to him. What should I do?

OUT OF EXCUSES

DEAR OUT: The "something" that tells you to return the $20 is common sense. You don't need an "excuse" to decline his invitations. Give him a reason—the real one; but don't tell him he's too old for you—tell him you're too young for him.

DEAR ABBY: If a friend has had a stillborn baby, is it proper to write a note of condolence to tell her you are sorry she lost her baby? Or would it be kinder not to remind her of it? (She didn't really "lose" a child as she never had it to hold even for a minute.)

I hear she is so broken up about it she is in a deep depression and isn't seeing anyone.

What should I do?

A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Send flowers or a note of condolence. And please don't say she didn't really "lose" a child. She certainly did. A stillborn baby is a child to the mother who bore it. The pain of such a tragic loss is intensified by shock and disappointment. Let her know that your thoughts and prayers are with her. Silence signals abandonment.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Florida's Woman Jockey Is Modest About Achievements

By JOHN PLATERO
Fort Lauderdale News
Sun-Sentinel

OPA-LOCKA, Fla. (AP) — Florida's winningest woman jockey has put her thoroughbred racing career "in the barn" for a while as she awaits a visit from the stork this summer.

"I'll be back," guarantees Mary Russ, described by experts as one of the best women riders in the country.

Tall for a jockey at 5 foot 4, she exercises diligently to keep her weight around 110 pounds. For most of her five-year professional career, she's ridden 700-800 mounts a year, mostly at South Florida's three tracks: Calder, Hialeah and Gulfstream. However, she's also left her mark at major tracks around the country, such as Aqueduct, Belmont and Saratoga.

"I have no idea how many races I've won, but I imagine it's over 500," she says matter-of-factly.

She's reticent about her achievements, but records show that last year she was the first woman ever to ride in a stakes race at Keeneland and Omaha. She won both aboard Harry N. Bill.

In 1982, with one year's experience, she won the Grade I Widener Handicap at Hialeah aboard Lord Barnley. Prior to that, she was the leading rider at Calder's Tropical meet. Russ has also been in the winner's circle for the Gulfstream Handicap.

"If she isn't already, she's pretty close to being one of the leading women jockeys in the country," said Frank Alexander, a Miami Lakes trainer.

Unlike most jockeys who begin their careers at an early age, Russ didn't get her first ride until she was 26.

"I never had a pet as a kid, not even a dog," she recalls of her childhood in Tampa. At 15, she became "horse crazy" when she took care of a girlfriend's horse and learned to ride.

At 19, she went to work for Hobeau Farm in Ocala doing stable work and "breaking babies," the term used for the initial training of a thoroughbred. After two years there, she switched to the Red Oak Farms, also in Ocala.

Admittedly, Russ gave no thought to being a jockey in those years. "I was a chunky kid and weighed about 125," she said, "too big to be a jockey."

At 23, she went to Calder looking for work. As a free-lancer, she galloped horses and performed odd jobs around the track's "back side." A year later, she decided to be a jockey, but kept her goal a secret.

"I dieted, which wasn't easy because I also worked in a deli and I'm a good eater," she added with a smile. She also started riding bulls at Davie at night.

A broken collarbone and a collapsed lung ended her bull-riding. Medical bills left her broke, but her weight was down to 100 pounds. Frustrated, Russ prepared to leave Calder, but trainer Manny Tortora gave her a riding contract.

Her first race was in November 1980. She was up on a mare in a six-furlong dash.

"I just hung on," she said with a laugh. "I probably beat only one horse."

In March 1981, she became an apprentice jockey — the classification comes after five wins. She was qualified as a full-fledged jockey without any weight allowance after one year.

"She's probably the No. 1 woman rider in the United States," said Tortora. "She has natural ability and works hard at it. And she'll ride anything, good or bad."

Over the years, Russ has had her share of falls and broken bones, but remains undaunted.

"The most traumatic experience was when a horse flipped on top of me in the starting gates," she says. Miraculously, she was unhurt in that incident.

Russ, who is currently one of about 20 women jockeys in Florida, says she has encountered no problems riding against men.

She married Tortora's son, Rick, two years ago and the couple live here a short distance from Calder.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Sometimes, the older parents get, the harder it is to raise them. They are so headstrong and independent. They won't let their kids run their lives, make decisions for them or carry out the plans their children make for them.

A woman from Newport Beach, Calif., wrote that her mother wanted to see the musical "Cats" so bad her teeth hurt. When her birthday rolled around her daughter said she was going to get her tickets for it. Her mother was furious. "That's too much money to see a play. If you buy the tickets, I won't go."

The daughter retaliated with a threat. She said, "Okay, when you cork off, I'll turn all that money you've saved into dollar bills and throw them in with you." Her mother shot back, "Fat chance! I'm going to be put into a drawer and your father is going to be buried at sea!"

I empathize. I want to give my parents everything and they won't have it. A few years ago, I wanted to give them a Jacuzzi. It would have been a wonderful gift for their aching muscles. You'd have thought I was buying them their own ocean. They did not need a Jacuzzi. They did not want a Jacuzzi. My father said five years ago, he couldn't even pronounce it.

This wasn't the way I had envisioned things would be. I had always figured the day would come when I would take my place as all wise, knowing and omnipotent and my parents would look to me for lead-

Biden Makes A Point For '88

WASHINGTON — Not everyone knows that Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware is running for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination. But Robert Fomon surely does. He probably wishes the election were tomorrow.

Fomon, the chairman of the E.F. Hutton Group, was asked to testify recently at the inaugural meeting of a long series of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on white-collar crime. Biden, the top Democrat on the judiciary panel, pushed a reluctant committee chairman Strom Thurmond to hold the hearings.

Biden's initial objective: showcase the Reagan Justice Department's settlement with Hutton over a check-kiting scheme as an example of administration (i.e. Republican) softness on white-collar criminals. Through this and other meetings the youthful White House aspirant hopes to develop a legislative "Biden Plan" for the issue, which he and other Democrats believe presents political opportunities for their party.

It was unusual but not surprising, in fact, for the Senate committee to call as its first witness Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., who, as chairman of the House crime subcommittee, has sought to make the Hutton case his Watergate. The Hughes panel is expected to come out soon with a report on the Justice Department's handling of that case. Although not anticipated to say much that is new, the document will probably pummel anyone who had a hand in the matter. There is still, of course, a troublesome question about the handling of the Hutton case, despite the subsequent internal investigation by a team of attorneys headed by former Carter attorney general Griffin Bell. Did a luncheon meeting between Fomon and then-attorney general William French Smith produce a secret deal that kept Hutton executives out of jail? Although even some of Hughes' fellow Democrats have their doubts, conspiracy theories die hard.

But what may be more troubling is the expense to which the crime subcommittee has subjected not only Hutton (the company's photocopying expenses alone have run well in excess of $100,000), but also American taxpayers, in the last year. Hughes pounced on the Hutton case after announcing plans for a major investigation of white-collar crime.

General Dynamics and the First National Bank of Boston were among the other named targets. Yet to illustrate the extent to which Hughes has cast the investigation to the wind, executives from those companies have yet to testify before his subcommittee. "The was supposed to be a general oversight process, but so far he's never asked a single question on the general issue of white-collar crime," said one congressional source.

Indeed, while Hughes has been doggedly exploiting the front-page nature of the Hutton case, the crime subcommittee has yet to hold oversight hearings on the Drug Enforcement Agency or complete consideration of legislation to curb money laundering. Last year, the panel marked up only one bill — to restrict the sale of armour-piercing bullets.

Had Attorney General Edwin Meese III not decided to launch his career atop the Justice Department with a press conference announcing the consent decree, some insiders speculate that Hughes would have proceeded more judiciously. A wholesale look at what author-lawyer August Bequaie calls a $41 billion-plus plague might not have become a witch hunt in which the only victim thus far has virtually no rights and the prosecutor is also its judge.

Therein lies one of the problems with the fine line between congressional oversight and congressional investigations. Powerful House Energy and Commerce chairman John Dingell, who has the toughness (and press image) that Democrats like Hughes envy, has never let the distinction get in his way.

Forecasting

N.C. Utilities Commission hearings to determine long-range electric power needs of the state were told last week by a spokesman for one group that new power plants were not necessary because efficiency in the use of energy has improved so much that growth in the demand can be offset.

That reaction seems short-sighted. Construction of power plants often takes years and growth in power demand can soar relatively fast.

The commission is receiving forecasts of long-range needs by its Public Staff, which represents ratepayers, and by the state's power companies. The Public Staff says Carolina Power & Light and the Duke Power Co. should each build two new coal-fired plants in the 1990s. The two companies have expansion in mind but are undecided as to the size or type of expansion they favor in the next decade.

Most Tar Heels look for a growth of population, with accompanying (and necessary) growth in business and presumably household and manufacturing consumption. That also indicates larger electrical production. Increased efficiency is helpful but not the final solution.

If for any reason growth falls short of expectations at least with addition of power plants there is capacity for growth on a standby basis. In our view the potential for meeting needs is the better choice.

The commission hearing is largely one of testing the waters. Any forecast they decide upon is not binding. A "devil's advocacy" role, in this instance, is played by a group primarily opposing nuclear power and represented by Wells Edleman of Durham. He makes it seem his Kudzu Alliance is not only against nuclear power but against meeting contingency power needs, too.

"Increased efficiency makes forecasting unnecessary", he says. "If it looks like your load is growing too fast, you promote more efficiency." But even efficiency has its limitations.

In our estimation, projected population growth carries with it the need for larger power-generating capability. Some room for error in judging future needs is permissible; but we cannot afford to be wrong ... and fall short in meeting future needs.

Happy Hour Talk

It was Happy Hour at the OK Coral Saloon on Capitol Hill. The place was jammed with its usual 5 o'clock crowd when the tall lobbyist with the white hat strode to the bar and said, "Drinks on the house for everybody."

We filled up and then turned to the stranger. "And what victory might we be toasting?" someone asked.

"Congress just said goodbye to the 1986 Gun Control Act. I'm with the National Hair-Trigger Association, and this is a great day for my people."

"I didn't know the hair-trigger manufacturers had their own lobby."

"Ah yes. We've always had a strong interest in a weak gun law. The easier it is to buy guns the more hair-triggers we're going to sell. I was given a million dollars to make sure the people's representatives would vote the American way. Fill up, everybody. This is the last of my money."

He started to sing, "A gun for me and a gun for you. And a gun to shoot your neighbor, too."

All of us have seen lobbyists celebrate when they get a bill through, but it was nothing compared to this.

"How come the police departments were against you people weakening the gun bill?" Tom the bartender asked.

The stranger said, "Cops don't know anything about guns. All they run up against are the criminal elements who use weapons to commit crimes. They never see the law-abiding people who buy their handguns to hunt and fish."

"Fish?"

"Don't tell me you never shot a fish with a .38? The important thing to remember is that under the old law you couldn't even bring a gun from one state to another. Dealers were responsible for keeping records of who bought handguns and ammunition. Do you know what this meant for thousands of gun shop owners?"

"What?"

"It meant paperwork. These good merchants used to have to stay up all night long trying to remember who bought a gun and who bought ammunition. We got all that red tape eliminated and from here on out you're going to see a boom in the sale of every type of firearm. Drink up, friends, the Constitution is alive and well in the hair-trigger lobby."

"How did you get Congress to knuckle under to a weak gun control law?"

The stranger winked. "Let's say we just sent the legislators a message. If they didn't vote to reform the 1968 act we would send our people into their districts and riddle them with innuendos. On the other hand, if they promised to be good boys and support us we would make a donation to their favorite political charity. One more for the road, men. Then I must make the rounds of the halls of Congress to drop some goodies on those who backed our bill, and mark a red X on the doors of those who lost their nerve."

The man plunked $1,000 on the bar. I raised my glass. "To good sport," I said.

We drank. Someone shouted, "Death to all gun laws."

The stranger wasn't drinking. He said, "We can't have that. The threat of stronger gun control bills keeps the National Hair-Trigger Association alive. Our members would refuse to provide us with money if they thought the battle was all over."

"And how do you keep the threat going?" I asked.

"By putting out the word to our members that the law enforcement people are mad as hell at us and aren't going to take it anymore."

The man exited through the swinging doors.

"Who was that stranger who was just here?" someone asked.

"That was no stranger," the bartender replied. "That was the leader of the PAC."

Strength For Today

What are we going to do about our conscience? This is a matter which confronts us all and needs to be heeded.

Sometimes conscience manifests itself only in a little wave of unpleasantness fleeting across our minds. Again, conscience can give us sleepless nights. Sometimes we have to face an issue and decide in behalf of right even though this may seem to be sweeping all happiness out of our lives.

Conscientious people are not always happy. But they really should be, for they have in their hands a rudder by which life is unerringly guided. A troubled conscience is not always convenient, but it is the only element in life which guarantees rescue from despair. Sometimes conscience speaks in a whisper — at other times in tones which grow in volume the more we try to disregard it. So let us remember that a troubled conscience is a friend, not an enemy.

Records

Come September, thousands of small business operations who have never had to be concerned about the red-tape of handling hazardous waste records, are going to move to that responsibility.

The N.C. Department of Human Resources has announced federal requirements that, have heretofore applied to large handlers of toxic, corrosive, ignitable and other hazardous wastes will be going into effect. Small operators will be required to maintain strict records.

Thousands of gas stations, dry cleaners, car dealers and other small businesses will be involved.

On several occasions The Daily Reflector has aired its concern over endangering of water supplies by long-forgotten underground tanks that were occasionally left behind with a quantity of potentially harmful substances waiting to leak into the surrounding soil.

The new requirements do not guarantee miracle cures but they do point the way for curtailing many more of those risks in the future.

Panel Wants Tax Changes

RALEIGH — Here's a nagging little fact of political life for all who work in the real world of private enterprise.

When you retire, you'll pay state taxes on the full amount of your pension. But when state and local government employees retire, they pay no state income tax on their pensions. When federal government employees retire, the first $3,000 of their pensions are exempt from state income tax.

Doesn't seem fair, does it?

No, says the Legislative Study Committee on Aging. In a report approved this month for submittal to the full assembly in June, the committee is recommending that all retirees get a $3,000 tax exemption on pensions.

"The committee believes as a matter of state policy there should be tax equity for recipients of private pensions," the committee's final report says. Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, committee co-chairman, and sponsor of a bill that would institute the tax break, said, "It just seems fair to do it for both, the public sector and the private sector."

Locks was one of 17 representatives who sponsored House Bill 289 last year. The bill was approved by the Committee on Aging but arrived in the House Finance Committee just in time to be brushed aside in favor of the Democratic leadership's comprehensive tax cut bill. It remains in the Finance Committee and could be resurrected in June.

According to Locks, the exemption for government retirees is based on the belief that government doesn't pay as well as private enterprise. Therefore, the state can help reward a long time public employee with a small tax cut at retirement.

But Locks said that thinking is flawed. "There are a lot of people who retire from private enterprise who are not making a killing," he said. They, too, can use a tax break.

The pension tax break was the subject of a vehement debate in the House Finance Committee in 1983. At that time, bills were before both chambers that would have raised the exemption for federal employees to $5,000.

Two arguments — almost contradictory — were made for the increased tax exemption. First, federal employees aren't much better paid than state employees. Second, federal retirees have a lot of money and they'd like to retire in North Carolina. This would be an economic development tax cut because it would lure federal retirees, and their money, to North Carolina.

Some legislators were incensed. They couldn't believe the gall of the people who testified in favor of the tax increase. Several legislators said they thought private sector retirees deserved a break before any existing exemptions for government retirees was expanded.

But the federal retirees had enough clout to derail any attempts to expand the tax cut to all retirees. Their argument was that the state couldn't afford a tax cut for everyone. They even had enough clout to keep the bills alive until the very end of the 1984 session when the Senate Finance Committee finally the Senate version.

Passage of House Bill 289 would mean a revenue loss for the state of $15.1 million in fiscal 1987, and that price tag might very well doom the bill. The June session is expected to raise, not lower, taxes. But, if legislators are looking for a tax cut to offset some of the increases, this is a good possibility given the excellent voting record of senior citizens compared to those of other age groups.

Public Forum

To the editor:
Be proud to be a humanist. A humanist tries to love and help humans. He tries to live by the Golden Rule and obey some of the commandments.

We should use words with extreme care, especially when praising or condemning fellow humans. If I call myself a "humanist" and you call me a "humanist" — or, worse, a "secular humanist" — are we intending the same meaning?

What does this phrase, "secular humanist," really mean? "Secular" is frequently used to mean the opposite of "sacred" and "human" to mean the opposite of "divine." Therefore, "sacred" means "divine" and "secular" means "human," which suggests that the phrase in question means a "human humanist," as opposed to a "divine humanist."

However, we vain mortals also use "humanist" to suggest the opposite of "animal." In this context, those who condemn "secular humanist" perhaps should be attacking something much worse — "secular animalism!"

To me, Thomas Paine's comment, "My religion is to do good," is both admirable and humanistic, as is John Kennedy's remark that "God's work must surely be our own." If all humans were to do good as frequently as possible, instead of arguing about God, they would make God so manifest that none could doubt.

In your issue of April 16, 1986, you stated that I was the ECU School of Business Outstanding Senior in Production. While I am grateful for the reduction in age and promotion in academic stature, I should inform you that, while I was a participant in the program for the American Production and Inventory Control Society, Ms. Lee Halliburton was the recipient of the outstanding senior award.

Since she is one of my own students, I can attest to the fact that she is truly outstanding and due our congratulations.

Fall '86 seems so far away, yet designers have had their lines completed for quite awhile. Clothing buyers are finishing up placing their orders for fall fashions. There are several leading trends to look forward to this fall.

Have you seen the movie "Out of Africa"? The Kenya background and Meryl Streep in romantic safari clothes are wonderful. We are seeing the fashion trend for "Safari Neoclassics" blossoming in all corners of the market. Safari Neoclassics are classic safari wear given a new feminine twist. Skirts and romantic touches dominate this new look. For instance, the classic safari fabric, cotton twill, will be done in a new longer skirt, and might very well be teamed with a lace trimmed shirt and a wonderful hat. There could even be pearls! This is safari softened and romanticized. Look for variations of this theme in dresses, jumpsuits—everywhere!

There are other important trends influencing fashion this fall. Shapelier shapes are the major overall message, giving clothes a more feminine, body-defining look. Natural waistlines are defined; tops are darted, seamed, or simply tucked in; skirts and pants feature waistbands; dresses are belted or otherwise shaped; deep armholes and circle or godet skirts direct attention to the waist; shoulders are still wide, but now rounder, more feminine, closer to body shape. Shoulder pads are not squared off, but are rounded caps. Dresses are cut with rounder shoulders and have reglan or dolman sleeves.

Accessories can help to create shape by adding control to clothing. In other instances, with shaped silhouettes being rather minimalist, bold accessories add the punch line and ornamentation. Key items to focus on are: belts (especially wide ones), necklaces on the throat, single strand pearls, scarves, shapely heeled pumps (spectators), cuff bracelets, big rings, shaped handbags, pins, and even gloves.

There are so many sophisticated, dressed up fashions to look forward to wearing. Keep these major trends in mind while shopping to make your Fall '86 wardrobe up to date.

When fashion matters...look to Scott's.

ART COMPLEX FIRE — Greenville Fire-Rescue personnel were called to the Leo W. Jenkins Humanities Center on the main East Carolina University campus this morning when a fire was discovered in one of the rooms. Assistant Fire Chief Don Mills helps Art Haney, assistant dean of the school of art, dress in protective clothing to enter the building. According to Haney, the fire started around a hot plate used to melt wax and damaged the cabinet near the hot plate and a light fixture. Haney said some faculty members were in the building and smelled smoke. Students were to be allowed back into the facility when firemen cleared the smoke. No one was reported injured. Airport ...

months. In order to serve Pitt-Greenville with the larger 36-passenger aircraft, the airport, which is now operated under a limited operator certificate, must become fully certified.

Airport Manager Jim Turcotte explained that under a limited certificate planes with more than 30 seats cannot regularly use the airport. "If we have a larger plane come in, we have to call the city fire department to stand-by," he said.

In order to be come certificated, Turcotte said, "the only physical thing we need is a fire truck and shelter ... a 'rapid intervention' vehicle to create an escape route if a mishap occurs. The city fire department would still be called in," he said.

Turcotte told county commissioners of the need for certification last week and said the fire truck and shelter to house it will cost about $200,000. Reporting that funds for the rapid intervention vehicle would be included in the airport's budget requests for the coming fiscal year, Turcotte said the Federal Aviation Administration will pay 90 percent of the cost, with the state paying 5 percent, thus leaving only $10,000 as the local share.

The other major thing needed for certification, Turcotte said in an interview, is a rewrite of the airport's operations and emergency plan. "It's a whole new ball game of rules and regulations," he said.

"We're shooting for July 1. The FAA says they can certify us by that time," Turcotte said. But he suggested that the airport might have to lease a fire truck until a vehicle can be purchased.

Ms. Bennett said Piedmont Commuter is forecasting "we can increase 30,000 passengers a year by adding more seats in Greenville ... (increase) 6,000 (passengers) on the 6 a.m. flight alone." The change to the 30-passenger Shorts on two of the flights is a first step toward increasing traffic.

According to Ms. Bennett, the Eastern Regional Jetport in Kinston now has fewer flights than Pitt-Greenville. But she said the number of boardings is greater in Kinston because there are more seats available.

She said that Kinston is now served by three Piedmont Airlines flights and three Piedmont Commuter flights a day. The Piedmont flights are Boeing 737s (118-passenger planes), while Piedmont Commuter flights include two Shorts and one Jetstream.

About 4,000 passengers were boarded in Kinston in March, Ms. Bennett said.

There is still a possibility that Pitt-Greenville Airport may be served by a second commuter airline after American Airlines opens a new regional hub at Raleigh-Durham Airport in mid-1987.

An American spokesman said last month that the airline would have a substantial commuter feeder network serving the hub through the American Eagle commuter operated by AVAir headquartered in Lynchburg, Va.

"We are looking at a large number of passengers" being generated through commuter service at smaller airports, American spokesman Al Becker said, but "we are not prepared to say whether Greenville is one of those being considered."

Becker said American will announce schedules and service for the hub "after the first of the year (and) American Eagle will play a large role in it."

Efforts to contact American Eagle for comment have been unsuccessful. Repeated calls by The Daily Reflector to AVAir in Lynchburg over the past several weeks have gone unreturned.

Senate ...

prepared by his committee relied too heavily on tax increases and cut-backs in the president's defense request and dealt too gently with domestic programs.

As recently as Monday, Office of Management and Budget Director James C. Miller III fired off a letter to Domenici and other Senate leaders noting that the committee approved only three of 44 program terminations recommended by Reagan, 10 less than the Senate approved last year.

Earlier, 24 Republican senators, mostly conservatives, signed a letter that attacked both the defense and tax provisions of the committee budget, contributing to a month-long stall on the measure as Senate leaders groped for a way to get their support.

In an attempt to prod the Senate into action, Domenici tossed out on the floor an amendment to terminate the programs at a savings of $4 billion, which would be deducted from the committee's proposal for an $18.7 billion tax increase.

He read through the list of targeted programs, pausing at times to note the small savings that would result from individual terminations, along with some of the political costs, such as loss of postal subsidies for charities, assistance to 4H clubs and relief for the hungry and homeless.

Ingram Says No. 1 Issue Is 'Insurance'

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer
Former Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram says former Gov. Terry Sanford has ignored insurance issues during the Democratic primary campaign because he is "out of step with the people of North Carolina."

Ingram spoke Wednesday at a news conference at the Holiday Inn in a stop on his eastern campaign swing through the 1st, 2nd and 3rd congressional districts.

"They haven't said that insurance is a pressing issue, and that clearly says Terry (Sanford) is out of step with the people of North Carolina," Ingram said. "America's number one consumer issue for business and personal consumers is insurance."

Ingram said he has urged officials to crack down on insurance companies.

"I call for lawmakers to listen to the number one insurance consumer advocate, Robert Hunter, who is president of the National Insurance Consumer Organization," he said.

Hunter believes that insurance companies should be subject to federal antitrust laws just like other businesses in the United States, according to Ingram.

"That change needs to be made, and I pledge to stop price fixing and to make the present commissioner do a better job for the people," Ingram said. "Hunter said if you paid any income tax last year, then you paid more taxes than the insurance companies have paid in the last ten years."

Meanwhile, Ingram said Sanford has ties to a parent corporation of an insurance company that have created a conflict of interest.

"I think the reason they have not spoken out on insurance is because of his connections with the Hartford Insurance Company," Ingram said.

"Sanford sits on the board of the company that owns Hartford. He has been in a policymaking position to try to direct that company to become consumer and people oriented, but he has not lifted his hand to help in those situations."

Ingram says his experience as insurance commissioner makes him the likely candidate.

"I have the experience, background and lack of ties, such as special interest in the Hartford Insurance Company, that will give me the voice in the United States Senate to protect the people of America and to stop these unfair cancellations and price fixing," he said.

Furthermore, Ingram said insurance companies are trying to restore age and sex discrimination when charging for policies.

"There is a movement underfoot to take away age and sex discrimination abolition," he said. "It would go back to something they don't call age but 'driving experience.'"

Ingram said the problems of availability and cost in the insurance industry is the top consumer issue, but a number of other topics also must be addressed.

"Hazardous waste, textiles, social security, farm problems and our trade policy are all important issues," he said.

Meanwhile, Ingram said a recent poll has placed him as the front runner in the race for the Democratic nomination.

"We had an independent poll which indicated I would win the primary and the general election, and I think we're right on course," said Ingram, who refused to divulge the source of the poll.

Dance Program Set

WINSTON-SALEM — A special program on dance, "Peak Performance: Choreography of a Modern Dance," will be aired over the UNC-Center for Public Television beginning at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The program will feature dance teacher and choreographer Dianne Markham of the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem. The presentation focuses on the choreographic development of a modern dance from its first concept through creation on to the performance on stage.

As its subject, "Peak Performance" uses one of the four pieces in the Fall Dance Concert of 1985 which was presented at NCSA. The work being featured is "Silent Places/The Looking Glass." The dance is set to music by Billy Oskay and Michael Odomhnaill and sounds by Walter Carlos.

Interviews on the program will include ones with Ms. Markham, several of the dancers, set designer Dan Backlund and lighting designer Scott W. Templin.

Pier Licenses

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Court of Appeals has upheld a 1983 state law that requires owners of ocean fishing piers to obtain a pier license.

In a ruling issued earlier this month, the court rejected arguments by the operator of a Carteret County fishing pier who contended the license fee amounted to an unfair tax.

Governors Agree: No Nuclear Dump In My State

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Regional tensions simmered below the surface at a hearing on a potential disposal site for high-level nuclear waste, but the five governors who testified did agree on one thing: don't put a nuclear dump in my state.

Maine, Minnesota, Virginia and Wisconsin, testifying Wednesday before a House subcommittee on energy conservation and power, said their states had been traumatized by the Department of Energy selection process.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin charged that the Energy Department had "heard but not heeded" protests of experts that two North Carolina rock formations being studied for the dump site were geologically unsuited and too close to heavily populated areas.

Two sites east of Raleigh, N.C., and west of Asheville, N.C., are among 12 areas designated as potential sites for the waste repository.

"DOE stacked the deck in the screening process," Martin, a Republican, testified.

"Common sense should dictate that it is not sound public policy to even consider the location of a high-level radioactive waste disposal site near large or medium-sized cities, or anywhere near rapidly growing metropolitan areas," he said.

"It's absolutely inhuman to select 12 areas and study them for five years before deciding what to do next," said Maine Gov. Joseph Brennan, a Democrat. "It's like telling 12 patients that one has cancer, and you'll tell them which one in five years."

Congress has authorized DOE to select and build a high-level nuclear waste repository to be operational in 1998, and to review locations for a second site for which it has not yet authorized construction.

The first site probably will be built in Nevada, Texas or Washington. Twelve potential locations for the second site are in Georgia, New Hampshire and the five states represented at the hearing. Many critics, including the governors, have urged DOE and Congress to re-examine the need for a second site, citing projections of decreased nuclear waste.

The governors also cited myriad reasons why their states were unsuitable for nuclear waste repositories, including earthquake faults, groundwater contamination, tourism, property values and heavy population concentrations.

But Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., accused the governors of "hunting and pecking for a rationale to put a second site off limits." He said the East produces "a tremendous amount of nuclear waste" and it would be safer to truck it to a secure site in the East rather than across the country.

Rep. Howard Nielson, R-Utah, good-naturedly complained that "we can't put everything in the West. There's a tendency to want to dump everything in Nevada or Utah — there's lots of desert out there, not too many people, maybe a national park or two, but so what?"

Rep. Jim Broyhill, R-N.C., who helped write the 1982 law ordering the Energy Department to find the waste sites, introduced a bill in the House Wednesday to suspend the second site study. His was the fifth piece of legislation introduced in the House against the eastern dump.

Broyhill, a U.S. Senate candidate, joined governors in the hearing to argue that a second site was not needed because the nuclear power industry was not producing as much waste as had been expected a few years ago.

DOE took it on the chin from all quarters. Wisconsin Gov. Anthony Earl accused the department of ignoring its legal obligations to Canada, Indian tribes and the environment. Virginia Gov. Gerald Baliles charged that DOE was following a "no data is good data" approach to its site reviews.

Edward Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House Energy Conservation and Power subcommittee Wednesday in Washington. Geologist Excited By Study

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Studies to determine whether Western North Carolina is suitable for a nuclear waste dump will be a geologist's dream, says the head of the earth sciences department at Western Carolina University.

Extensive geologic mapping may offer clues to how the Appalachian Mountains were formed 400 million years ago, and deep drilling could show whether there are oil and gas deposits under the Blue Ridge, Steve Yurkovich said Wednesday.

"Speaking from a basically scientific view, it will be exciting," he said. "On the other hand, I'm sure the people of Sandy Mush don't want that excitement."

The U.S. Department of Energy is sorting through comments on its selection of the Elk River Complex, straddling Buncombe, Haywood and Madison counties, as one of 12 possible sites for a nuclear waste repository. Yurkovich prepared comments for the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, whose reservation lies about 25 miles south of the proposed site.

Sometime this summer, DOE will release a list of final candidates for further study, but "I'm reluctant to say we'll get off the list in June or July," Yurkovich said.

"Scientifically, there is a professional difference of opinion between the DOE geologists and North Carolina's geologists that needs to be resolved by further study," he said.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll-call votes during the week ending April 18.

House

CONTRA AID — By a vote of 212 for and 208 against, the House approved a parliamentary strategy to delay or kill President Reagan's urgent request for $100 million in additional aid to the rebels fighting to destabilize Nicaragua's Marxist Sandinista government.

This put in place a Democratic plan to attach the contra aid to a $1.7 billion appropriations bill (HR 4515) that was headed for a likely presidential veto. But Republicans later sidetracked the plan, leaving the issue of aid to the insurgents, known as contras, unresolved at week's end.

Reagan and GOP leaders had opposed linking the aid to the appropriations bill and wanted separate consideration of the issue, in hopes that the House in an uncluttered up-or-down vote would accept a contra-aid measure already approved by the Senate.

The last time the House took up the matter, in March, it narrowly rejected the president's request for $70 million in military aid and $30 million in non-lethal aid. The issue is unlikely to return to the House floor before mid-May.

Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., who supported the Democratic strategy, said, "The contras, even with this aid, have no chance of victory, and a stalemate will not pressure the Sandinistas to make fundamental reforms... Present policy sets us on a course of no win and high risk."

Opponent Henry Hyde, R-Ill., told Democrats their strategy was "trivializing an issue of life or death (and) is a form of blackmail. You are saying, 'Mr. Reagan, if you want your $100 million, it's going to cost you $1.7 billion.'"

Members voting no supported the president's request of $100 million in contra aid.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7, and W.G. Hefner, D-8.

Those voting no were William Cobey, R-4; Howard Coble, R-6; Alex McMillan, R-9; James Brodyhill, R-10, and Bill Hendon, R-11.

LABOR LAW — The House passed, 229 for and 173 against, a bill designed to strengthen the position of organized labor in the construction industry.

The measure (HR 281), which was supported by the AFL-CIO and opposed by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, was sent to the Senate. It makes it tougher for employers at construction sites to use non-union subsidiaries and affiliates to circumvent obligations imposed on them by collective bargaining agreements.

For example, it outlaws the practice of "double-breasting," which entails an employer with a collective bargaining agreement parceling out work to an affiliate whose employees are not unionized. To counter this, the bill defines multiple companies as a single employer for collective bargaining purposes, if they are tied together by ownership or certain other links within a given area.

Also, the legislation puts additional time-consuming legal requirements in the way of construction workers seeking to vote to renounce a collective bargaining agreement. Given the comparatively short duration of construction jobs, the work is likely to be completed before the decertification election is held.

Supporters said the bill is needed to counter employers who attempt to evade collective bargaining agreements.

Opponents said existing law already is strong enough to deal with the problems in the construction industry cited by organized labor.

Members voting yes sided with organized labor and supported the bill.

North Carolina Rep. Jones voted yes.

Those voting no were Valentine, Whitley, Cobey, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Brodyhill and Hendon.

Senate

HYDROELECTRIC DAMS — By a vote of 83 for and 14 against, the Senate passed and sent to the House a bill (S 426) giving investor-owned utilities an edge over public power companies in their competition for federal licenses to operate hydroelectric dams.

Upwards of 800 of these licenses now are in force nationwide, most of them held by investor-owned utilities. More than 200 licenses are to expire over the next seven years, many of which are being eyed by municipal and other public utilities as a cheap means of generating electricity.

Under the bill, public-power applicants for expiring licenses must prove to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission they would provide better service than existing license-holders. Legislation pending in the House contains no such preference and puts the challenger and license-holder on equal footing at the start of their competition.

Supporter Robert Dole, R-Kans., said the bill is pro-consumer because it allows "those who presently receive the benefits of low-cost hydroelectric power to continue to receive those benefits unless a competing application is proven to be better."

Opponent Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., said public power companies deserve the competitive edge because "the rivers and streams which drive these hydroelectric projects are public resources which belong to the nation as a whole, not to individual companies."

Senators voting yes favored the bill.

North Carolina Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, both voted yes.

Mavretic Suggests Voluntary Foreclosure To Protest Taxes

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Allowing homeowners disgruntled with the appraised tax value of their houses to request foreclosure would force them to "put up or shut up," says a legislator trying to abolish property taxes in North Carolina.

It also would "encourage counties and the firms they hire (to assess property value) to be more attentive to the task of appraisal," Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, added.

Mavretic, who unveiled his proposal Wednesday during a meeting of the Property Tax Study Committee, said the need for the "voluntary foreclosure" legislation was another example of the inequity and shortcomings of the property tax.

Mavretic is sponsor of a pending bill that would replace property taxes with a higher sales tax and divide corporate income tax revenues between state and local government.

"I intend to demonstrate in the next few months some of the foolishness that surrounds the property tax system," he said. "Out of great tragedy comes comedy."

Mavretic also said he planned to seek legislation under which renters, instead of landlords, would be permitted to deduct property tax payments from their state and federal income taxes.

Currently, a property owner who disagrees with his property's assessed valuation can appeal to the county Board of Equalization and Review. In most counties, the Board of County Commissioners doubles as the equalization and review board.

Under Mavretic's voluntary foreclosure plan, a property owner still dissatisfied after the equalization board upholds a valuation could request foreclosure on his property.

The county tax supervisor would be required to put the house up for sale at a price equalling or exceeding the value that the county had placed upon it.

If the house is not sold within 60 days, the county would be required to reduce the assessed valuation by one-third and pay the costs of putting the home on the market. If the house is sold, the former owner would pay those costs.

During his travels around the state promoting his property tax bill, Mavretic said, homeowners repeatedly have complained that the assessed valuation of their property is too high.

"They'll say, 'If I could sell my house for what they've valued it at, I'd do it tomorrow,'" he said.

The study committee discussed Mavretic's proposal but took no action on it.

Mavretic said he would present at the committee's meeting next month a proposed bill giving renters the privilege of deducting property tax payments on state and federal taxes.

He said the existing system was unjust because it allowed landlords to collect the deductions but pass the property tax costs to renters.

Mavretic said he might offer both the voluntary foreclosure and renters' deduction proposals as amendments to his bill to abolish property taxes, which stalled in the House last year after winning approval of the Finance Committee.

He said he hoped to return the measure to the floor during the June legislative session, but would wait until 1987 if he lacks the votes to pass it.

If the bill ultimately fails, Mavretic said he will take a "piecemeal" approach to eliminating property taxes, proposing that every future increase in sales or income taxes be coupled with property tax relief.

Former Governors Join In Campaign

RALEIGH (AP) — Keep North Carolina Beautiful, which is celebrating its 20th anniversary, has helped to keep the state "a place of joy and a place of attractiveness," says Gov. Jim Martin.

Martin joined three former North Carolina governors Wednesday to announce a 12-minute video produced by Keep North Carolina Beautiful Inc.

"This is to show you that we've got a lot more in common than the office that we've held," Martin said at a news conference.

Former Govs. Terry Sanford, Dan Moore and Bob Scott joined Martin, but former Govs. Jim Hunt and Jim Holshouser were unable to attend because of last-minute business.

Carl Lowendick Jr., executive director of Keep North Carolina Beautiful, said Martin and all five living former governors appear in the promotional video, explaining how the organization grew as each served as honorary chairman.

Lowendick said the group sponsors 14 statewide programs and looks forward to further expansion. And he praised the government leaders who participate in the programs.

"The people gathered today for this luncheon are not here solely as visible leaders in government and business throughout North Carolina, but as Tar Heel citizens concerned about maintaining, and improving where necessary, the natural beauty of our state from the mountains to the coast."

Panel Delays Action On Court Elections

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Courts Commission has decided not to act on possible responses to a federal challenge of the system used to elect some Superior Court judges.

The commission, which is trying to develop proposals for the June session of the General Assembly, agreed Wednesday to meet within two weeks in anticipation of a decision by Attorney General Lacy Thornburg on whether to appeal the latest U.S. Department of Justice ruling.

H. Parks Helms, commission chairman, said the panel also wanted to see whether the State Board of Elections would reschedule judicial elections in some of the disputed districts before recommending that the Legislature do so. The election board is expected to consider the matter Thursday.

On April 11, the department said the state law under which Superior Court judges run for numbered seats instead of at-large in a district violated the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Tax Supported
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Legislature should give local governments the power to levy an additional one-half-cent sales tax but should not repeal the property tax, officials of the North Carolina League of Municipalities say.

At a meeting of local league members Wednesday, Executive Director S. Leigh Wilson outlined the group's position on several issues expected to be considered when the Legislature convenes in June.

Wilson said the state should add a half-cent local-option sales tax to offset federal cuts and avoid an increase in property taxes. The state now levies a 3-cent sales tax and allows counties to levy an additional 1.5 cents.

Car Money
FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Authorities are investigating the discovery of nearly a quarter of a million dollars in cash in the car of a motorist stopped for speeding by a State Highway Patrol trooper, an SBI official says.

About $225,000 was found late Saturday night in Fayetteville in a rented car driven by a photographer who said he was headed from New York City to his home in Florida, said Ray Davis of the State Bureau of Investigation.

The motorist, Bartolo Baez, 35, of Miami Beach, told Trooper T.L. Isaacs that he had no knowledge of the money, Davis said.

The cash, much of it in twenty-dollar bills, was confiscated pending the outcome of the investigation, and Baez was allowed to go on his way after paying a fine for speeding, Davis said.

Name Change
WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. shareholders on Wednesday approved changing the company's corporate name to R.J. Nabisco Co.

"The new name, we believe, is a more accurate reflection of the corporation we have become," said J. Tylee Wilson, chairman and chief executive officer of R.J. Reynolds. "The addition of Nabisco Brands gave our company a degree of balance we did not previously enjoy."

The company's new name will be effective at the close of business on April 25. R.J. Reynolds Industries, based in Winston-Salem, was formed in 1970 as the parent company for R.J. businesses.

Anti-Terrorism Policy Applies To All

By ELEANOR CLIFT
(c) 1986, Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Wednesday that if he had solid information linking Syria and Iran to terrorist incidents, he would not hesitate to attack their capitals the same way he ordered air raids on Tripoli last week after learning that Libya was behind the bombing of a West Berlin discotheque that killed an American serviceman.

"We must have the same policy," Reagan said at a news briefing. "State-supported terrorism is a form of warfare, and we just can't sit by and let somebody else declare war." Reagan's critics have charged that he singled out Libya for retaliation because it is a relatively weak country while allowing the more strategically important states of Syria and Iran to go unchallenged in similar sponsorship of terrorism. The president did not address that charge but said it was "much more difficult to trace to the source terrorism sponsored by others than it is with Libya" because the regime of Col. Moammar Khadafy has openly supported terrorist groups. However, the roles of Syria and Iran in such incidents have proven elusive. But if he had "the same irrefutable evidence we had with him," Reagan said, he would endorse military action.

"Everybody that's out to take a crack at us, he's willing to support," Reagan said of Khadafy.

When asked what he thought of reports that Khadafy planned to invite the Soviet Union to establish a naval base in Libya, Reagan said he "questioned very much" that the Soviets would be interested in such a venture. Asked why the Soviets would back away from such an invitation, Reagan responded mischievously: "I think maybe they have a case of the smarts."

Several top administration officials appeared with Reagan to brief the press but refused to be identified further.

One said he believed that the Soviets were "hesitant to re-engage with Ronald Reagan" because of his "powerful performance" at the Geneva summit last November. The same official also said that the Soviets had offered "a lousy reason" in canceling a summit preparatory meeting next month between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

The Soviets cited the administration's attack on Libya as their reason for withdrawing from the meeting. "They ought to be joining us in fighting terrorism," the official said.

Despite his harsh words, Reagan and his top aides said that a summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev was still likely later this year, probably in November, after the congressional elections.

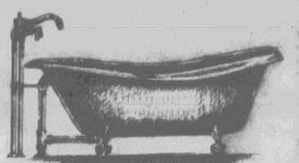

In a series of briefings for reporters on the eve of Reagan's departure Friday for a summit meeting with the allies in Tokyo, top administration officials defended the president's terrorism policy and said Libya is "not the only culprit, but a clear culprit" in fomenting terrorism around the world.

They said they are encouraged that the allies recognize Libya's overriding role and, despite their differences with Reagan over the use of military force, are prepared to join with the United States in some fashion in combating terrorism. "We see a clear recognition everywhere that terrorism is a major problem of international dimensions that needs to be fought on an international, collaborative basis," said one official, speaking on the condition that he not be identified.

The same official said that, if Europe stopped trading with Libya, it would be "very effective" in crippling Khadafy's government. He said that the Libyan economy was fragile, largely as a result of the global decline in oil prices, and that the Libyans have no credit standing around the world. "They are in a vulnerable position, and if they were hit with general economic sanctions, it would be very effective," he said.

Reagan and his top officials said they had no independent confirmation of reports that Khadafy had been forced to share power with the military in his country as a result of the U.S. attack. When asked if that would be a positive sign, one official said there were "elements in the Libyan military who are quite dissatisfied with Khadafy." If a power-sharing situation has emerged, the official added, "that's a statement there are at least some people who question" Khadafy's actions.

Reagan Dresses Up Far East Trip By Increasing Aid To Philippines

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is stepping up aid to the Philippines on the eve of a 12-day journey to the Far East during which he will talk with top officials of the islands' new government and the exiled leader they defeated.

"In our judgment, it's a very good bet," M. Peter McPherson, administrator of the Agency for International Development, said as he announced plans to increase funds for the Manila government this year.

McPherson said the president is asking Congress for $100 million in economic aid, in addition to $181 million already appropriated; and $50 million in military aid on top of $53 million provided earlier.

He said the money would be carved out of Pentagon spending without requiring an overall budget increase.

The administration also is asking for $95 million in economic aid and $100 in military aid for the Philippines in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

McPherson said the administration is taking steps, some of which require congressional action, to speed up an extra $405 million in economic aid that has been appropriated in past years, so that it can be spent in the Philippines in the next 12 months instead of being spread over several years.

"To have the maximum impact on the situation, the Philippines needs, in our judgment, to have a rapid dispersal of a substantial amount of money," he said.

Reagan leaves Friday to attend the economic summit with leaders of Great Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany, which will be held May 4-6 in Tokyo.

The formal talks during the session will focus on international finance and economics. Reagan is expected to meet separately with leaders of each nation, as well as attend the three days of meetings.

Reagan has said he will also discuss terrorism with the foreign leaders in an effort to forge a tougher response to the problem.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said that before leaving the mainland, probably during a stop-over in California, Reagan will telephone Philippines President Corazon Aquino.

In addition, the president plans to meet with Philippines Vice President Salvador Laurel on May 1 while in Bali, Indonesia, for a regional meeting of foreign ministers on his way to Tokyo.

Congress Expected To Deny Arms Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate are moving toward a confrontation with President Reagan, who is sure to veto their expected rejection of his proposal to sell Saudi Arabia $354 million in missiles.

The stage was set for that fight Wednesday as the foreign affairs committees of both houses recommended Congress scrap the sale.

Supporters of a resolution to disapprove the arms sale and halt 30 years of U.S. weapons transfers to the Arab kingdom say they are within reach of the two-thirds majorities needed to override a presidential veto.

The White House is lobbying hard to prove them wrong.

Sixty-three of 100 senators have co-sponsored the disapproval resolution, four less than would be needed for an override if all senators voted.

In the House, 221 of the 434 current members have signed the disapproval resolution. That is three more than a majority but substantially fewer than the 289 needed to override a veto if all members voted.

But Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., the principal author of the House version of the disapproval resolution, told reporters not all House members opposed to the sale have attached their names to the legislation.

"I think we've got a very good chance on an override, and that's the name of the game now," Levine said. "It will be close, but I'm optimistic."

Levine said the resolution could reach the House floor by the end of next week.

NO SPRING IN HER STEP — A pedestrian in Oradell, N.J., is bundled up against the chill and wet snow Wednesday as she walks past a garden shop displaying its wares — spring flowers in full bloom. A blast of Arctic air

Winter Gives New Chill To East With 2-Foot Snow

By POLLY ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
A cold snap lingered today from the Great Lakes to the Carolinas after temperatures plunged to record lows in 14 states, causing millions of dollars of damage to fruit crops and dropping up to 2 feet of snow as winter weather gave the East one last shiver.

The surprise snowfall reached as far south as Virginia, snarling traffic and closing schools in New York and New Jersey.

"I couldn't believe it," said Christine Wilsey, a New York state police dispatcher in Oneonta, where 6 inches of snow fell Wednesday. "On Saturday, I was out in my backyard in a bathing suit."

The highest reported snowfall was 24 inches in Eldred, N.Y., in the Catskill Mountains near the Pennsylvania border.

"It is wicked traveling," said Gene Hathaway of the National Weather Service at Newark (N.J.) International Airport, where two-thirds of an inch of snow fell, breaking the old record of just a trace set in 1963 and 1984.

Record low temperatures Wednesday extended as far south as Miami, where the 57-degree reading was 2 degrees colder than the 1970 record, and as far west as Lake Charles, La., where the 48 degrees was 2 degrees lower than a 1954 record.

Meanwhile, the 84-degree reading at Aberdeen, S.D., tied an 86-year-old record for the date and was 9 degrees warmer than the high at Key West, Fla.

Tender fruit crops suffered widespread damage in Kentucky, Michigan, Indiana, West Virginia and Ohio. Most agriculture officials said damage could not be determined immediately, but Richard Funt of Ohio's Cooperative Extension Service estimated Wednesday that the loss to his state's apple and grape crops would total $20 million to $25 million.

"There are several growers in southern Ohio that are completely wiped out," said Blake Gerber, executive director of the Ohio Fruit Growers Association.

The temperature in Columbus, Ohio, early Wednesday hit 23, breaking a 30-year-old record low for the day by 6 degrees.

"I anticipate upwards of 90 percent grape damage," said grower Dwight Brown of Lawton in southwestern Michigan, where the state's fruit industry is centered. "We had some tart cherries in blossom and I assume it destroyed them. Sweet cherries also were in bloom and it appears they are gone, too."

The temperature in Grand Rapids, Mich., dipped to 20 early Wednesday; the previous record for the date, 27, was set in 1956.

Fruit growers took various steps to keep the chill off crops that can be affected by just a few degrees' difference. Agriculture officials say 28-degree cold can damage 10 percent of the fruit on a tree, while 25 degrees can result in 90 percent damage.

"They'll be using wind machines, helicopters, orchard heaters and a lot of prayers," said John Holtz, agriculture meteorologist at West Virginia University. "Some might even use brush fires or burn old tires — anything to bring temperatures up a few degrees."

In Ohio's Licking County, Mitch Lynd said he hired four helicopters at $350 an hour each to push warm air down on his 50,000 apple trees on 530 acres.

The unusual cold rode a jet stream from Canada dipping farther south than usual into a set of high-pressure systems centered early today over Ohio and the northern Gulf of Mexico, said Paul Fike of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Paper Says Deaver Gets Reagan List

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael K. Deaver, the former aide to President Reagan who has been accused of using his White House contacts now that he is a lobbyist, receives a copy of the president's confidential schedule each day, a published report said.

The documents list details of Reagan's activities such as who he is to meet with, the subject matter, where he will be, the time he spends in his residence and other matters, The Washington Times said in today's editions.

The article, citing White House sources, said Deaver receives the schedule from Frederick J. Ryan Jr., director of presidential appointments and scheduling.

Deaver, who was deputy chief of staff in the White House, was Ryan's boss until he left to set up his own consulting firm last May.

"Only a handful of people in the White House itself have this schedule," the Times quoted one official as saying. "It's supposed to be very confidential and very closely held."

One source told the Times, "The daily schedules are precise as to the hour and minute. The weekly schedules are tentative and updated for him (Deaver) every day."

In another matter, The Washington Post reported today that Deaver met with a top aide of Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney in February 1985 to discuss appointing envoys on acid rain at an upcoming summit between Mulroney and Reagan.

Among the clients of Deaver's firm is the government of Canada, which signed a $105,000 annual contract for the company's representation on issues including acid rain.

Under law, former federal officials cannot lobby on issues in which they were personally involved while in government.

According to the Post, which cited informed sources, Deaver met with Mulroney aide Fred Doucet on Feb. 28, 1985. Reagan met with Mulroney in Quebec City on March 17 and 18 that year, a session that ended with the two countries saying they would appoint special envoys to discuss acid rain.

Deaver was also at an Oct. 25 meeting in New York with the two envoys, former transportation secretary Drew Lewis and former Ontario premier William G. Davis, the Post said.

Club Loses Charter Over Sex Dispute

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A Lions Club chapter thought nothing special about electing L. O'Dea president, but the international body voted to revoke its charter when it discovered "L" stood for Lola.

"It's really not news that women are challenging charters of men's service organizations. I think the twist here is that I'm president of one," Mrs. O'Dea said Wednesday. "And I love it."

Mrs. O'Dea, an executive of a non-profit organization, has been a member of the South Side Lions Club for six years and became its president last year.

"I wasn't a woman who knocked on the door saying I wanted to challenge this charter. I was asked to join," she said.

"I had some reservations, because I knew it was an all-male, basically conservative group. I knew it would put me in a very awkward position, but it took six years for that to happen."

Two other women — a magistrate and a banker — joined during the past year.

Because the club's constitution states that only men may join the Lions, the chapter submitted the women's first-name initials on membership applications.

The three served in the club without complaint until a district governor saw them at a chapter meeting he attended last year and ordered them to leave or join a Lioness club.

The district governor, Bernard Machesky, said most of the 2,100 Lions in his district supported his decision to report the chapter.

"It's the bylaws of the constitution of Lions International," he said. "If it's good for one club, it's good for every club. Why should one club get away with it?"

But Mrs. O'Dea, a 47-year-old wife and mother of one son, said she bristled at the suggestion.

"I don't want to put on an apron and serve the Lions' luncheons," she said. "The Lioness clubs are women who are spouses of Lions Club members. They serve the Lions Club. It is no option for a professional woman."

Earlier this month, the chapter was notified by Lions Club International that the 28 directors had voted unanimously to revoke the charter.

Mrs. O'Dea said most of the 22 active male members in the South Side club backed the women's decision to remain.

"Our three women do more work for the club than half our members. We won't give them up," said the club's secretary, Robert Young.

Duchess Of Windsor Dies Of Pneumonia

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of Windsor, the American divorcee for whom King Edward VIII gave up the British throne, died today at her home near Paris, Buckingham Palace announced.

She was 89 years old. She had been in frail health and confined to her home for eight years. Sources in Paris, speaking on condition of anonymity, said she died of bronchial pneumonia.

Buckingham Palace said the duchess will be buried at Windsor Castle's Frogmore Garden next to her husband, who died in 1972. Queen Victoria and Prince Albert also are buried there.

The announcement did not say when the funeral would be.

Members of the royal family announced no changes in their schedules because of the death. Queen Elizabeth II did not change her plans to attend an evening banquet hosted by the visiting Spanish King Juan Carlos.

For a few short months in 1936, Edward had hoped to make the twice-divorced Wallis Warfield Spencer Simpson the Queen of England. But their romance was an embarrassment to traditionalists and the Church of England hierarchy, and he was forced to give up his throne.

"I have found it impossible," Edward said in a moving radio broadcast to his subjects throughout the world on Dec. 11, 1936, "to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as king as I would wish to do without the help and support of the woman I love."

After Edward abdicated, he became the Duke of Windsor and the couple went to live in France.

In October 1937, they embarrassed the royal family by visiting Germany and dining with Adolf Hitler amid a blaze of publicity. Their visits to Britain were rare, brief and strictly private.

In 1965, Elizabeth ended the ostracism of her uncle by inviting him and the duchess to attend a memorial service in London for his sister, Princess Mary.

Two years later, Elizabeth invited the couple to attend the unveiling of a memorial plaque for Queen Mary, the duke's mother, outside Marlborough House, London.

In 1972, 10 days before Edward died of throat cancer at age 77, Elizabeth visited the Windsors' home in the Bois de Boulogne. When Edward was buried in England, the duchess stayed at Buckingham Palace but returned to Paris immediately after the funeral.

She was not invited to the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer in 1981.

Many historians, and certainly the duchess in her autobiography, "The Heart Has Its Reasons," portrayed the Windsors as hapless victims of Cupid and a stuffy old establishment.

But for many, theirs was one of the most enduring love stories of the century, although the duchess insisted she never understood why she had captured the heart of a monarch.

"I was certainly no beauty," she once wrote. "Perhaps I was one of the first to penetrate his inner loneliness."

Unknown to the British public, the Pennsylvania-born Mrs. Simpson was Edward's constant companion for the last two years before he took the throne on the death of his father, King George V, in January 1936. He was 41 and unmarried. She was 39.

Less than a year later both were in exile. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin of Britain had given the king an ultimatum: give up Mrs. Simpson or abdicate. The king chose abdication, relinquishing sovereignty over a quarter of the world's population.

Mrs. Simpson slipped out of England a week before Edward announced his abdication. She listened to his broadcast in a friend's house in Cannes on the French Riviera, weeping bitterly.

"I found myself whispering as to another self that nothing so incredible, so monstrous, could possibly have happened," she wrote 20 years later in her autobiography.

That night Edward left England for Austria. Mrs. Simpson remained in Cannes, awaiting her divorce from American-born shipping magnate Ernest Simpson.

They lived in France for the rest of their lives, interrupted only by a five-year term for the duke as governor of the Bahamas in World War II. They found "a great measure of contentment and happiness" in France, the duchess wrote later.

To Combat Terrorism

Common Market Agrees To Exchange Information

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Common Market ministers agreed today to exchange information with non-member nations, including the United States, on terrorism, terrorist suspects and their methods of operation.

The interior and justice ministers of the 12-member trading bloc said in a communique that in view of recent events "both inside and outside Europe, combating terrorism calls for increased vigilance and determination within the framework of European cooperation."

As part of that cooperation, the Common Market would contact "those third countries with which it is deemed useful and necessary to establish contact," the communique said.

Dutch Justice Minister Frits Kortals Altes, who chaired the meeting, said the document did not specify the United States as an exchange nation and would leave the choice of such contacts to Common Market leaders.

However, British Home Secretary Douglas Hurd told a news conference: "Obviously pre-eminent among those (exchange countries) is the United States. I think we've met the American (expectations) and I welcome that."

The ministers' communique did not say how information would be exchanged. West German Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann said the Common Market nations would swap with other countries names of suspicious individuals, data about suspicious and stolen passports and incidents relating to airport security.

He said the exchange was not restricted to terrorism. "We're talking about the illegal arms trade, drug smuggling, kidnapping and even soccer hooliganism."

According to the communique, other violent crimes, slavery and international fraud are also on the list.

The ministers, known as the Trevi Conference, met for about four hours today to map a joint strategy against terrorism. The meeting is part of a decade-old series and planning began months ago.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese and FBI Director William Webster, who arrived in the Netherlands on Tuesday, met with some of the ministers outside the session to present the U.S. position.

Zimmermann said he met before the session with Meese, Webster and Robert Oakley, director of the State Department's Office of Counterterrorism Policy, and that the participants had "hardly any big differences" of opinion.

"They were satisfied with the decision to establish a formal information framework between the Common Market and the United States," said Zimmermann.

French Deputy Minister Robert Pandraud also met with Meese.

Pandraud said Meese "didn't ask for anything specific. He only expressed the wish of the Americans for improved cooperation with the European countries in the fight against terrorism."

Asked by reporters whether he and Meese talked about Libya, Pandraud said: "It would be wrong to say it was never mentioned, but it was not the main subject."

Britain is the sole Common Market member to have publicly backed the April 15 U.S. bombing raids on Libya in retaliation for Libya's alleged support of terrorism.

Leaders of other European nations publicly voiced fears that the air strikes would provoke Col. Moammar Khadafy's government, with which many Common Market members have lucrative trade ties, to seek vengeance.

But on Monday in Luxembourg, Common Market foreign ministers agreed on a package of diplomatic sanctions. They agreed to reduce Libyan diplomatic staff in their countries, curtail the remaining diplomats' freedom of movement, and examine whether the number of Libyan airline and trade officials can be reduced.

The ministers also agreed that any Libyan expelled from a Common Market country on suspicion of involvement in terrorism would not be admitted to another Common Market member.

The Common Market members are Belgium, France, West Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Denmark, Ireland, Britain, Greece, Spain and Portugal.

Five Persons Killed In Kentucky City

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Five people were found dead or fatally wounded within a few miles of each other in Lexington's east end, and authorities were investigating whether the deaths were related.

Capt. John Potts said the bodies were found Wednesday night and early today, and all were being investigated as homicides.

"There's potential that they might be linked," said Potts. "But I don't know that we've established any (link) at this time ... it's unusual for here at any time."

"I don't recall anything like this in the last 18 1/2 years," he added.

Police Chief John McFadden said two suspects were being held, but declined to provide further details pending an afternoon news conference.

Four of the victims had either been shot or stabbed and run over by a car, Fayette County Coroner Chester Hager said. The fifth victim's body was too mutilated for a preliminary cause of death to be determined, he said.

"It's the wierdest thing," Hager said. "We haven't had anything like this in Lexington."

"It's really sort of a gangster style tactic they're using," he said. Hager said it was possible there was one killer.

Police said the first body, that of a woman, was found about 9 p.m. Wednesday in a shopping center parking lot. While police were investigating that death, a second female body was found at 10:30 p.m. about 1 1/2 miles away in the loading dock area of an office building.

Both women had been stabbed, shot and run down by a car, Hager said.

"We definitely feel there are a whole lot of similarities," between the deaths of the two women, said Sgt. Fran Root. He refused to elaborate.

Police were called about 12:10 a.m. to investigate a burning car and found two bodies and an injured person who later died at Humana Hospital-Lexington.

Hager said two of the three men had either been shot or stabbed, adding that the car, found in a ditch, had apparently been set on fire.

Kugel Predicts FBI Study Will Find No Wrongdoing In Projects

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Pennsylvania developer Owen Kugel predicts the FBI will find no wrongdoing in its investigation into the finances of his proposed downtown development projects in 21 North Carolina cities.

"We are absolutely confident they will find no wrongdoing because none has been done," he said Wednesday. "We have performed according to our contract in every case. There's clearly no basis for any hint of wrongdoing on our part."

Kugel said he has been told by the FBI that the probe is a "preliminary, relatively routine matter."

"The investigation was started in response to a question as to the propriety of our business operation in North Carolina," Kugel said, adding that he did not know who raised the question.

Kugel said he has no intention of keeping money he has received from cities and towns in the state in exchange for his pledge to build downtown redevelopment projects. He said his firm has spent more money on the projects already than it was paid in fees.

Robert Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said Tuesday Kugel's operations in the state have been under investigation for about a month. Pence said agents were scrutinizing Kugel for possible fraud.

In March, Kugel said he had taken on too many projects and would delay his plans in North Carolina. He said some lenders thought starting 21 projects in one year was more than he could handle, and a lack of confidence from the lenders hindered his ability to obtain financing.

Kugel said he intends to fulfill the downtown development contracts, even though six towns have demanded their money back.

"We're pursuing every project," he said late Tuesday. "It's immaterial whether or not they pay us. The ones that are due refunds are going to get them. We have never yet failed to make a refund, and we

Pitt County athletic officials have until the end of May to submit a proposal to the North Carolina High School Athletic Association showing how they could conduct next year's Eastern Regional basketball tournament, an NCHSAA official said Wednesday.

"First, you have to tell us that you're interested, and secondly, you have to submit a package on how you would conduct the tournament," Dick Knox of the NCHSAA told Pitt County education and athletic officials and members of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce at a meeting in the Pitt County Office Building.

The purpose of the meeting was to talk about NCHSAA expectations of the host area.

Knox said the area would be responsible for supplying adequate playing facilities, community involvement and corporate sponsorship to underwrite the cost of the tournament.

"Pitt County has the facilities to supply all the needed gymnasiums along with the possible use of East Carolina University," Knox said. "It is important to get the corporate sponsorship and establish a financial commitment."

Wake County and Cumberland County have also expressed an interest in hosting the tournament, which has been held in Wilson for the past six years, according to Bob Dailey, coordinator of health, physical education, athletics and driver education for Pitt County Schools.

"Fayetteville, Raleigh and Pitt County are all interested in the tournament," Dailey said.

But Knox said certain aspects of the Pitt County area make it an ideal location for the tournament, which is to be held March 12-14, 1986.

"There's most definitely a chance that the tournament could be located here," he said. "The area is very centrally located. It's halfway between Virginia and South Carolina and between High Point and Manteo.

It's more centrally located than Fayetteville."

Knox said Wilson will no longer host the tournament, which features games from 1-A, 2-A, 3-A and 4-A divisions, for a variety of reasons.

"There are several factors why Wilson has asked not to host the tournament," he said. "The tournament has really outgrown the Wilson facilities, and many of the people are tired of the work."

While hosting the event does entail a great deal of work, Superintendent of Pitt County School Eddie West said the 10,000 to 15,000 spectators attending the games will benefit the community.

"The additional people will use restaurants, hotels, service stations and a variety of local businesses," he said. "We'll benefit from the number of people who come."

The Los Angeles Lakers, overshadowed by Boston in the regular season, are finding some thunder of their own in the NBA playoffs.

"I told our guys you just have to give the Lakers credit," Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said after the Lakers completed an easy three-game sweep of the Spurs with a 114-94 decision on Wednesday night. "They are the champions. I thought our guys did the best they could. L.A. just has a great team."

The 20-point triumph was the closest of the three victories for Los Angeles, which won the first two games 135-88 and 122-94.

"We are a better team than the Spurs. I think the series speaks for itself," said Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 25 points.

"We did have the attitude that we could sweep San Antonio," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "I was a little surprised by the margin of victory in all three games."

Los Angeles joined Boston, Milwaukee and Houston in the second round of the NBA playoffs. In Wednesday night's other game, Utah edged Dallas 100-98, but the Mavericks hold a 2-1 edge in the best-of-five series that will determine the Lakers' second-round opponent.

In tonight's games, Philadelphia is at Washington and Denver at Portland, with the visiting team in both cases holding a 2-1 lead.

Washington is expected to test the surgically repaired knee of center-forward Jeff Ruland before the game, and he could see action if it feels strong. Denver, with center Wayne Cooper hobbled by injury, again is expected to rely on rookie Blair Rasmussen, who scored a career-high 26 points in the Nuggets' victory at Portland on Tuesday.

Friday's action pairs Atlanta, leading 2-1, at Detroit and Dallas at Utah.

Abdul-Jabbar had 10 points as Los Angeles outscored San Antonio 28-15 in the third quarter to extend a six-point halftime lead to 84-63.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who finished the game with 14 points, 17 assists and 10 rebounds, set an NBA playoff record for assists in a three-game series. His 48 assists broke his own mark of 42 established last year against Phoenix.

"We'll take a 3-0 sweep any time we can get it," Johnson said. "The Spurs just couldn't get it going in the three games and we really played well."

Spurs point guard Wes Matthews led all scorers with 30 points.

The Spurs, 5-21 in the last third of the regular season, cut a 27-20 deficit after one period to 48-42 in the second quarter. But they never got any closer.

Maurye Lucas scored 17 points for the Lakers, who outrebounded San Antonio 64-45 and hit 55.4 percent from the field to 41.6 percent to the Spurs.

Jazz 100, Mavericks 98
Rookie Karl Malone scored on a jumper with 50 seconds left and grabbed a defensive rebound a few seconds later as Utah stayed alive in its series with Dallas.

Malone, who finished with 16 points, tied the game at 96-all after he stole the ball and scored with 2:30 left.

Rickey Green, who scored a playoff career-high 32 points for Utah, scored on a 20-footer a minute later to put the Jazz ahead 98-96. But Rolando Blackman converted two free throws for the Mavericks with 1:10 left to tie the score.

Malone hit the game-winner 20 seconds later. On Dallas' next possession, Blackman's shot rolled over the rim and Malone tipped the Knox agreed, saying the tournament gives a community the opportunity to sell itself.

"This is one of the most visible ways to promote a community. It creates community awareness and showcases local schools," Knox said. "But there has to be community involvement, community support and sponsorship."

West said education officials hoped to meet with members of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce to arrange corporate sponsorship.

"If we can find a sponsor who will underwrite the operation, the schools will benefit financially," he said. "The entire project will help our programs."

Knox said the revenue generated could be put back into the schools who participate, and the sponsor would benefit.

"The sponsor gets involved in promotion, publicity, billboards, public service announcements and would receive recognition for something that can be used as a tax write-off," he said. "In order for this all to work, there must be cooperation between the chamber of commerce, sponsors and the schools."

Knox said that the NCHSAA's Board of Directors will make the final decision once the three prospective site groups make their official proposals.

JIM YOUNG

Democratic Candidate For Pitt County Commissioner
Position On

Citizen Involvement In Local Government

JIM YOUNG

Currently, the Pitt County Commissioners hold their meetings during the working day (at 10:00 A.M.). There are justifiable reasons why some of the board's meetings need to be conducted at this time, especially when access to county employees or information is essential. However, this is not the case for every meeting.

The practice of meeting only during the workday has some negative consequences. First, it discourages many qualified individuals from seeking office as a commissioner because employment obligations will not allow them to be available for meetings.

Second, and most important, this practice makes it virtually impossible for a large majority of Pitt County Citizens to attend commission meetings to observe or participate in their local government.

I believe that the Board of County Commissioners should consider holding at least some of its meetings in the evening to encourage increased citizen involvement.

Angels Find Themselves In 1st

BY JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

California Manager Gene Mauch, who has been looking for a world championship formula for 25 years, may be on to something.

After defeating Oakland 5-0 on Wednesday night the Angels found themselves atop the American League West standings with a 10-6 mark, one game ahead of Texas.

So far in 1986 the Angels have won with a blend of youth and experience.

Reggie Jackson, 39, is hitting .447 with four home runs; 35-year-old Brian Downing has five homers and leads the American League with 16 runs batted in, and 36-year-old George Hendrick is batting .409.

Rookie Wally Joyner, 23, has stepped in at first base with a .333 average, four homers and 10 RBI.

On Wednesday, 25-year-old Mike Witt pitched a five-hitter, struck out eight and walked one. The Angels' right-hander recorded his first complete game since August 22 and his first shutout since April 25.

"I don't expect him to pitch a shutout everytime, but I've gotten to the point where I expect him to pitch well," Mauch said of Witt, 2-1. "He threw the curve where he wanted and threw strikes when he had to."

Mauch started managing in 1960 with the Philadelphia Phillies and the closest he came to an October dream was in 1982 when the Angels won the AL West pennant, but lost in five games to Milwaukee in the playoffs.

Jackson, a man who knows something about Octobers, is off to one of his best starts ever.

"I feel good at the plate. I knew if I was going to play, I'd have to be a DH and a good one, because Mauch won't settle for anything less," Jackson said. "I'm ready now and I know I have to be the best one I can be. I wasn't ready to be a DH in the past."

"That's a talented man working hard," Mauch said of Jackson. "When a guy with that much talent works that hard, good things happen."

hander Chris Codiroli's first pitch of the game just inside the left-field line for a double and Joyner hit the next pitch up the left-center field gap.

A's rookie left fielder Jose Canseco caught up to the drive and attempted a one-handed catch, but the ball fell out of his glove as he reached the warning track and Pettis scored on the error.

Downing then grounded into a double play, but Doug DeCinces walked and Ruppert Jones, who brought a 1-for-16 slump into the game, doubled to left-center to score Joyner and DeCinces for a 3-0 lead.

Downing hit his fifth homer in the sixth.

Elsewhere in the AL it was, Texas 9, Toronto 8; Seattle 4, Minnesota 3 in 10 innings; Chicago 2, Milwaukee 1; Cleveland 5, Baltimore 1; Detroit 3, Boston 1; and New York 2, Kansas City 1.

Rangers 9, Blue Jays 8
At Toronto, Larry Parrish homered and drove in five runs leading Texas over struggling Toronto.

The Rangers broke open a 5-5 tie with four runs in the seventh against reliever Dennis Lamp, 0-2.

"It's not just one or two guys, it's everybody in the lineup who's swinging the bat real well," Parrish said. "The other pitchers can't pitch around one guy because the next guy is just as capable."

George Bell hit a three-run homer in the ninth for the Jays. But Toronto's ace Dave Stieb still has not won in four outings.

The victory gave Texas a record of 8-6 and dropped the defending AL East champion Blue Jays to 6-9.

Mariners 4, Twins 3
At Seattle, Dave Henderson's two-run homer in the bottom of the 10th inning lifted Seattle over Minnesota to snap the Mariners' six-game losing streak.

Reliever Mark Portugal, 0-1, walked Danny Tartabull to lead off the Mariners' 10th. After Jim Presley bunted to move Tartabull to second, Henderson fell behind 0-2, but then lined his second homer of the year over the right field wall.

"I was getting ready mentally to face Ron Davis (the Twins' ace reliever), and I'd never seen this Portugal guy," Henderson said. "I was trying to go up the middle to drive the run home. The ball just jumped off the bat."

Karl Best got the final two outs in the Twins' 10th to pick up his first victory. The Twins had taken a 3-2 lead on Kent Hrbek's RBI single in the top of the 10th.

White Sox 2, Brewers 1
At Milwaukee, pinch-hitter Reid Nichols hit a double down the right-field line in the ninth inning to score Bobby Bonilla with the winning run as Chicago downed Milwaukee.

With one out, Milwaukee reliever Dan Plesac, 1-1, walked Bonilla then yielded a single to Tim Lulett to set up Nichols' double.

Tom Seaver, 2-2, pitched six-hit ball over 8 2/3 innings while striking out seven and walking three. Bob James got the final out to save Seaver's 30th career victory.

Seaver "continues to be the most amazing pitcher I've ever seen," White Sox Manager Tony La Russa said.

Indians 5, Orioles 1
At Cleveland, Brook Jacoby, Julio Franco and Carmen Castillo homered and Ken Schrom combined with Scott Bailes on a six-hitter as the Indians beat Baltimore. Schrom, 3-1, allowed three hits, struck out one and walked two in six innings.

"We've been in every ballgame Schrom has pitched," Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales said. "He's giving me more than I expected."

"I don't know how to explain it. I just feel good at the plate and things are falling in," Jacoby said after extending his hitting streak to 10 games and raising his average to .396.

Tigers 3, Red Sox 1
At Boston, Dave Collins and Darnell Coles keyed a decisive two-run fifth with RBI singles and Frank Tanana pitched a three-hitter over eight innings as Detroit defeated Boston.

Tanana, 2-1, walked six and struck out one in the numbing 40-degree weather, but was tough in the clutch as the Tigers took the rubber of a three-game series. Willie Hernandez pitched the ninth for his fifth save.

"It was a long night with people all over the bases in the early innings, but I felt pretty darn good retiring the side in order in the seventh and again in the eighth," Tanana said. "However, I had thrown a lot of pitches (137), it's early in the season and when you have Willie out there you have to give him the ball."

Yankees 2, Royals 1
At Kansas City, Dennis Rasmussen pitched a three-hitter over seven innings sparking New York over Kansas City and the Yankees' first three-game sweep in Royals Stadium since 1974.

"We would have settled for two out of three here, but winning all three is an extra boost," New York Manager Lou Piniella said. "Dennis threw the heck out of the ball. We got three excellent-pitched games in this series."

The loser was Dennis Leonard, 2-1, who had won his first two starts since coming back from a 1983 knee injury.

The first-place Yankees won their fourth consecutive game in improving their record to 10-4 in the AL East.

Carlton Finally Gets A Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It was a long time between victories for Steve Carlton and a longer time between shutouts for Scott Sanderson.

But the two convalescing pitchers achieved those goals Wednesday — Carlton's first triumph since last May 20 and Sanderson's first shutout since Sept. 18, 1981.

"I feel tremendous. I feel healthy. I plan to be healthy all season long," said Sanderson, who allowed just five singles, walked one and struck out seven in hurling the Chicago Cubs past the St. Louis Cardinals 6-0. Ironically, his last shutout was pitched against the Cubs when he was with Montreal.

Carlton, as usual, wasn't heard from after he went 5 1-3 innings and allowed three runs on five hits while walking six and fanning the same number in the Philadelphia Phillies' 5-4 victory over the Montreal Expos, the veteran left-hander's 315th career triumph.

"His stuff has been getting better each time out, and this win will mean a lot for him," pitching coach Claude Osteen said. "It will make him believe in himself again."

In other National League games, Los Angeles snapped San Francisco's six-game winning streak 6-4, San Diego downed Cincinnati 7-4 and Houston nipped Atlanta 3-2. New York and St. Louis were not scheduled.

Like all the Cubs' starting pitchers, Sanderson spent time on the disabled list in 1985 when he caught his spikes on the mound and went down with a torn knee ligament. Chicago supported the 29-year-old right-hander with a 12-hit attack, led by Ryne Sandberg with a pair of doubles and a run-scoring single.

Sandberg doubled off Rick Ownbey in the first inning and scored the only run Sanderson needed on Keith Moreland's single. Sandberg doubled again in the fourth and scored on Leon Durham's single, and the Cubs scored twice in the fifth on Shawn Dunston's third homer and Sandberg's RBI single.

"I'll tell you this much — it was a tougher day to hit than to pitch," Sanderson said. "The wind was coming in (at Wrigley Field) and even the ones they did get a hold of just got held up in the wind."

"I'm very pleased," Manager Jim Frey said of the Cubs' first two-game winning streak. "We had the guys advancing runners, hitting the ball to the right side of the infield when we tried to move people, and I thought Scott's pitching and control were about as good as you'll see."

The Cardinals have dropped three in a row, including two shutouts. "I don't think anyone's ever won without a run," philosophized Manager Whitey Herzog, whose team's anemic .226 batting average dipped even further. "I don't know why we're swinging the bat so bad."

Phillies 5, Expos 4
Steve Jeltz backed Carlton with a three-run triple as Philadelphia ended a five-game losing streak. The 41-year-old Carlton, who spent most of last year on the disabled list with a strained rotator cuff, got solid relief help from Don Carman and Steve Bedrosian.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead off Joe Hesketh in the first inning on Von Hayes' double and a single by Mike Schmidt. Jeltz's triple came in the fourth after Glenn Wilson and John Russell singled and Luis Aguayo was hit by a pitch. "I was trying not to be overanxious when I went up because there was nobody out," Jeltz said. "In that situation, the pressure is on the pitcher and he made a mistake by putting a fastball over the plate."

The Phillies led 5-0, but Montreal scored twice in the fifth and Carlton was chased in the sixth when Andres Galarraga homered and Vance Law singled. Pinch hitter Wayne Krenchicki homered off Bedrosian in the ninth.

Dodgers 6, Giants 4
Mike Marshall and Bill Madlock homered and Fernando Valenzuela contributed with his arm and bat. Marshall and Madlock each had three hits and Marshall drove in four runs, including a three-run homer in the first inning off Scott Garrelts. Valenzuela scattered eight hits, struck out 10 and singled home a run. "It makes a big difference with Bill Madlock and Steve Sax back in the lineup and with Marshall hitting," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said.

"Look out is all I can say. Look out!"

Padres 7, Reds 4
Andy Hawkins pitched 6 1-3 strong innings and singled twice as San Diego overcame a grand-slam by Cincinnati's Dave Parker. Hawkins allowed just four hits, one of them Parker's third-inning slam, as the Padres broke a four-game losing streak and handed the Reds their fourth straight loss.

The Padres took a 2-0 lead off John Denny in the first inning on Steve Garvey's RBI double and Terry Kennedy's single. Parker's sixth career grand slam gave the Reds a 4-2 lead and drew a prolonged ovation from the crowd of 11,937 in support of the slugger. Parker was playing his first game since being sued by Pittsburgh Pirates, who are trying to stop deferred salary payments to their former star, alleging his performance in Pittsburgh was diminished by his admitted cocaine use.

The Padres regained the lead with three runs in the fourth, including RBI hits by Carmelo Martinez, Hawkins and Kevin McReynolds. Dane Iorg added a two-run triple in the eighth.

Astros 3, Braves 2
Craig Reynolds' two-run pinch single capped a three-run rally with two out in the ninth inning. Atlanta's Zane Smith was within one strike of his second consecutive shutout when Glenn Davis singled for Houston's fifth hit, Kevin Bass walked and Jose Cruz ended the shutout bid with a single.

Bruce Sutter replaced Smith and, after pinch runner Tony Walker stole second, Alan Ashby walked to load the bases and Reynolds bounced his two-run single up the middle on the first pitch.

"I didn't hit it that well; I just hit it in the right spot," said Reynolds, who has eight of his nine RBI against Atlanta. "I felt like after the bases were loaded, Bruce would try to get ahead of me. If he gets ahead of me, I'm in trouble. If he gets ahead, he's really, really tough."

Rose, Conley Capture Wins

Rose High School's girls' softball team scored early and went on to gain an 8-3 victory over Wilson Hunt Wednesday in Big East action.

The Rampettes took the lead with a pair of runs in the first inning. Hunt came back with one in the second, but Rose put the game away with two more in the bottom of the third.

Vicki Parrott led off the third with a walk and Lisa Harkley singled. Suzanne Tadlock moved them up with a long fly ball and Kim Bridges' sacrifice fly scored Parrott. Lori Powell then singled in Harkley for a 4-1 lead.

Rose added four more in the fourth, two of them scoring on a home run by Casey Drewery.

Hunt scored two in the sixth for its three-run total.

Drewery led the Rose hitting with three while Gina Parrott, Vicki Parrott, Harkley and Bridges each had two.

Rose is now 10-1 on the year and 6-1 in Big East play. The Rampettes travel to Northern Nash today, looking for revenge for their only loss of the season.

The Valkyries got all they needed to win in the second inning, scoring three times. Michelle Waters reached on an error and Janelle Gaylord also was safe on a misplay. Melody Becton walked, loading the bases. Rhonda Mills reached on an error, scoring Waters and Gale Cash singled to drive in both Gaylord and Becton.

Conley went on to add four in the third and one in the seventh.

Cash, who also hurled the shutout win, led the Conley hitting with three while Rhonda Jackson had two. Hope Moore and Allison Manning each had two hits for Farmville.

The Valkyries climb to 9-3 on the year with the win. They play host to West Carteret on Friday. Farmville is now 4-7 and plays a doubleheader at North Pitt Friday.

The visiting team went on to record two each in the sixth and seventh. North Pitt tried to rally, coming up with three in the fourth and four in the seventh, but fell well short.

R. Smith led Rosewood's hitting with four while Whaley added three. Regina Cox led North Pitt with three while Keisha Pilgreen, Esther Witherspoon and Donna Leggett each had two.

Still Are Far From Accord

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — North Korea has extensively scaled down its proposal to "co-host" the 1988 Olympic Games with South Korea, but the two parts of the divided nation remain far from an agreement to avert a threatened North Korean boycott of the Seoul Olympics, senior Olympic officials said today.

The officials, insisting on anonymity, said South Korea has informally offered to let North Korea organize the table tennis and four other events of the 1988 Games.

But they stressed that even if agreement is reached between the Olympic Committees of the two Koreas — due to meet for the third time in Lausanne, Switzerland, in mid-June — there can be no certainty the 92-member IOC will ratify their accord in time for the Seoul Games.

The sources said some IOC members believe the whole idea of sharing even a part of the Games would violate the Olympic charter. The last word on the issue will be with the full IOC due to meet in Lausanne in October.

North Korea last year belatedly challenged the IOC's 1981 decision to award the Games to Seoul and demanded that at least half the Olympic events be staged in the North Korean capital, Pyongyang.

Yu Sun Kim, president of the North Korean Olympic Committee, repeatedly threatened to organize a Soviet bloc boycott of the Seoul Games unless his demand was met.

At the current General Assembly of the 161-nation Association of National Olympic Committees, Soviet bloc delegates for the first time gave public backing to the North Korean "co-hosting" demand.

The Olympic officials said North Korea cut down its initial demand and now insists on staging only five or six of the 234 Seoul events.

"South Korea is understandably anxious to avert a new boycott and has made some concrete suggestions which they will discuss at their meeting in June," one official said.

He and other sources said the South Korean proposal involved primarily allowing Pyongyang to organize the Olympic table tennis tournament. "This would be particularly appropriate," a senior official commented, because table tennis initiated the "ping-pong diplomacy" that ultimately led to widespread western recognition of Communist China in the 1960s.

The South Korean offer also includes allowing Pyongyang to take over the archery event, some preliminary soccer matches and one of the long-distance road cycling events, he said.

Earlier suggestions for sharing some volleyball and basketball events were dropped, he said, as was a suggestion to run the marathon across the tense demilitarized zone that divides the two Koreas.

Hurler Goes For 4th Straight Gem

BOSTON (AP) — The unwritten rule in baseball is don't talk about a teammate's no-hitter when it is in progress. There has been little chatter in the Tufts dugout when Jeff Bloom starts a game.

Bloom, a 6-foot-3 left-hander from Dix Hills, N.Y., goes after his fourth consecutive no-hitter as a starter Friday when Tufts faces Bates in a Division III college baseball game.

"There's a little pressure," Bloom said of his attempt for No. 4. "I'm going to be upset when I give up a hit. It's been so long."

March 29 was the exact date for the last hit Bloom surrendered as a starter. He allowed six runs and 10 hits in four innings in his first start of the year against Wesleyan, which won the game 12-7.

Tufts Coach John Casey decided it was time for a talk of sorts with Bloom.

"I was trying to be too fine," Bloom said of his first start. "I wasn't throwing hard. (Casey) was yelling at me in the lockerroom afterward trying to drive the point in. I was a little shocked but I guess it had to be done."

"I really went after him and he's gotten better," Casey understated. "He's got to learn to throw every pitch as hard as he can. He's got to learn he's got enough stuff to challenge people. He's in charge."

In his second start of the season, Bloom pitched a no-hitter against MIT. In his third start, he did the same thing to Boston University. Trinity was the victim last Saturday.

"It's an amazing thing," Casey said. "I'd have to say the odds they'd give you on that would have to be one million to one."

Bloom's fastball has been clocked at 85 mph and he can move it in or out on batters. He also throws a changeup and he considers his curve his best pitch. "He's got three pitches that he throws consistently for strikes," Casey said.

"A kid gets a piece of his fastball and fouls it off," he added. "Then he'll throw a curveball that drops off. The kid has no idea what's coming next. At that point, he doesn't want to be up there."

Bloom felt some pressure last Saturday with several professional baseball scouts watching and he responded with a perfect game for 6 2-3 innings of the seven-inning contest against Trinity.

Bloom and Casey both thought a 3-2 pitch was a strike, but the umpire disagreed. After the walk, the next batter popped up and Bloom settled for the no-hitter, 12 strikeouts and a 13-0 victory.

Bloom struck out 17 in a 7-0, nine-inning masterpiece against Boston University on April 15 and MIT did manage to score an unearned run on April 6 but still lost 9-1 in seven innings on a cold, rainy day. Ten of the 21 outs were strikeouts.

"It became evident that we were overmatched," MIT Coach Fran O'Brien said. "He has excellent control. He's not afraid to throw the breaking pitch. He has great determination."

Bloom did slip up once during the streak, however.

With just two days rest after his victory over MIT, Bloom pitched three innings of relief against Brandeis, giving up four runs and four hits in taking the loss.

"He has the talent to go out and win every game he pitches," Casey said. "He has perfect form. You don't have to teach him anything. He's a born pitcher."

Gooden's Nephew Seen As Future 1st Round Pick

NEW YORK (AP) — If you believe in bloodlines, then it will come as no great surprise that many baseball scouting reports project third baseman Gary Sheffield of Tampa, Fla., as a first-round draft choice.

The bloodline traces to Dwight Gooden.

Sheffield is the Cy Young Award winner's nephew, son of the New York Met pitcher's sister and star at Hillsborough High School, where scouts discovered Gooden five years ago.

"He can hit," Gooden said, delivering his own scouting report. "He's had 14 home runs."

Gooden always has been a connoisseur of the long ball, and he can give you every detail of the first one he hit in the majors, last Sept. 21 against Pittsburgh's Rick Rhoden.

"A hanging slider, belt high," he said. "You couldn't put it on a tee any better."

"I only hit four at Hillsborough, but we didn't have a fence. You'd just hit them and run."

As a senior in high school, Gooden was a very mortal 7-4 and never an-tipicating being the fifth player chosen in the 1982 draft.

"You knew scouts were there, watching, but you never knew if they were watching you," he said. "I thought I'd be picked in the fourth or fifth round. I was surprised to go in the first round."

Gooden made rapid progress to the majors and became the youngest Cy Young winner when he received the award three days before his 21st birthday last November. On Wednesday, he added another trophy, selected as Gordon's Gin black athlete of the year. Past winners have been Olympic champion Carl Lewis and Chicago Bears' running back Walter Payton.

Gooden's personal hero is pro basketball star Michael Jordan.

"Sixty-three points in a playoff game," Gooden said shaking his head as he referred to Jordan's record-setting performance against the Boston Celtics last week. "Jumping as high as you can, slamming the ball anytime. I'd love that."

Failing that, Gooden will settle for pitching excellence and the occasional long ball.

1985 Panasonic Car Audio Welcome to a Whole New Sound Experience.

If you think car audio is just another form of the simple car radios of the past, you'd better take a close look at Panasonic Car Audio's 1985 line. Today's electronic tuning car audio units are highly sophisticated stereo systems, specifically designed for dynamic in-car music reproduction.

The first thing you'll notice about many Panasonic Car Audio units is their digital displays. We found that a soft orange-colored LCD is great for both daytime and nighttime readability. In addition to time and frequency, the LCD shows all essential operational information at a glance. And some Panasonic electronic tuning units even have moving tape direction indicators right to left, graphically demonstrating which way the tape is traveling.

But electronic tuning is much more than just a digital display. Electronic tuning units have tiny computer "brains" that make accurate location of your favorite radio broadcasts amazingly easy. Just press seek, and the tuner will automatically find the next station on the band. An even faster way to tune-in a station is by entering it into the unit's memory. Up to 10 (5 FM and 5 AM) stations can be instantly recalled by pushing one of the convenient preset buttons.

Combined with Panasonic electronic tuners, are state-of-the-art cassette players with a choice of features that rival home decks. Auto-reverse or auto-replay. Tape Program Sensor (automatically moves forward to the next selection or backwards to the previous one). Noise reduction systems like Dolby* NR and dbx Metal/CrO₂ tape capability. And every Panasonic tape deck is built tough, to stand up to road wear.

At Panasonic, we know that in the past car audio sound has been disappointing. So we build a variety of sound enhancing, hi-fi features into Panasonic units. Features like high power. Separate bass/treble controls. Balance control for left/right balancing. And faders for front/back balancing of 4-speaker systems.

Technologically advanced electronic tuners. State-of-the-art cassette players. Hi-fi sound control features. Three great reasons to choose a Panasonic Car Audio unit. But there's another even more important reason—Panasonic experience. Our background in all areas of audio engineering has made the name Panasonic synonymous with innovation, quality and reliability.

Presenting the 1985 line of car audio units from Panasonic. Take one out on a test drive.

Stevenson Gives Up Nomination To Protest LaRouche Candidates

CHICAGO (AP) — Supporters of extremist Lyndon LaRouche have urged Democratic Party leaders to appoint a candidate for governor to run with their nominee for lieutenant governor in place of Adlai E. Stevenson, who quit the ticket in protest.

"Someone named Stevenson resigning from the Democratic Party (ticket) is not an easy thing to do," Larry Hansen, Stevenson's campaign manager, said at a news conference Wednesday.

But he said the victory by LaRouche follower Mark J. Fairchild in the lieutenant governor's primary race March 18 left the former U.S. senator and son of a two-time presidential nominee little choice.

Fairchild defeated Stevenson's handpicked running mate, state Sen. George Sangmeister.

Press secretary Bob Benjamin said Stevenson views the LaRouche supporters as "abhorrent, racist, anti-Semitic, anti-democratic and irrational."

LaRouche is a frequent presidential candidate who espouses political views based on worldwide conspiracies that he contends involve drug traffickers, the Soviet KGB, British royalty and Henry Kissinger.

After Stevenson quit the ticket, in a letter to the Illinois Board of Elections, Sheila Jones, the LaRouche candidate for Chicago mayor, said the Democratic party should appoint another candidate to run with Fairchild.

Board officials confirmed they had received Stevenson's resignation letter and said it could not be rescinded.

LaRouche Defies Normal Political Labels, Policies

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — History is nothing but conspiracy, says Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr., the perennial fringe candidate for president who sees plots that escape others.

He thinks the Queen of England is involved in the drug trade, the United States is headed for economic collapse, the Holocaust is a fiction.

What LaRouche thinks has taken on new importance — or at least gained new attention — in light of last month's two startling Democratic primary victories by LaRouche candidates in Illinois and the abundance of LaRouche candidates across the nation.

In the Illinois races, LaRouche's candidates declared Americans were responding to the views held by their leader: opposition to the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law, calls for widespread testing and quarantining to combat the disease AIDS and condemnation of white-collar drug traffickers.

Those seem tame, though, next to the bizarre theories LaRouche has promoted — views that seem incoherent on their face and defy normal political labels, just as LaRouche himself does.

A sampling:

— Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is a "Soviet agent-of-influence," as is Walter Mondale and other prominent Americans.

— Zionism is "crazy ... cult nonsense." The Holocaust was "mythical." Israel "is ruled from London as a zombie-state."

— The Queen of England is involved in drug trade.

— Former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos "was opposed to me and he fell as a result."

— Poland's trade union Solidarity is "British-infiltrated" and threatens Poland with "economic ruin, starvation and social chaos."

— The FBI and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith share "complicity in the assassination of (India's) Prime Minister Gandhi and the killing of the 329 passengers on the June 23, 1985 flight of Air India flight 182."

— The United States faces economic collapse this year, President Reagan's economic policies are unchanged from the Carter administration's and U.S. defense capability "is being destroyed right now" by budget cutting.

LaRouche, 63, a four-time fringe candidate for president, expounds these views in prolific writings and in a calm voice with a New England accent that grows excited when challenged.

His attacks can be vicious, and his critics often are dismissed as part of the "drug lobby," crazy, communist or homosexual. At a news conference last week, LaRouche snapped at a questioning reporter, "How can I talk with a drug pusher like you?"

An issue of his New Solidarity newspaper last month said Secretary of State George Shultz should be tried for treason for selling out allies. "Let's give Shultz a fair trial first — and then hang him," it said.

Dismissed by Democratic Party regulars as a kook, LaRouche gained just 150,000 votes in a dozen 1984 primaries despite airing nine rambling — and expensive — half-hour broadcasts on national television.

The name of LaRouche's political organization, National Democratic Policy Committee, has caused discomfort for national Democrats. Party officials have responded to the Illinois primary by trying to inform voters about his candidates and his views in hopes exposure will evaporate support.

"It's the rantings and ravings of a mad man," said Democratic National Committee spokesman Terry Michael. "You can't put them on the political map. It's not ultra-left or ultra-right to say Queen Elizabeth is a drug pusher. It's ultra-crazy."

Underlying LaRouche's views is a vast, complicated web of global conspiracies, some centuries old.

He sees shadowy links between the Soviet KGB, British intelligence, the conservative think-tank the Heritage Foundation, the FBI, the ADL, and international terrorists.

LaRouche frequently cites obscure 19th century German writers and secret European societies. He can present his theories with a dizzying circumlocution.

In a recent telephone interview, LaRouche said this:

"History is nothing but conspiracies. There are lawful processes which determine what kind of conspiracies work and what kinds don't, but history is nothing but the history of conspiracies intersecting what the laws of history will allow to happen."

Asked to explain his claim that the British royal family is involved in drug trade, LaRouche responded: "The Westminster Act of 1787, which put the British government in the drug business, and they've never gone out of it. They don't happen to be the dominant force in the drug business today, but they're still in it. And they shouldn't be, should they?"

A spokesman for British Information Services at the British consulate in New York, Stewart Grainger, said he had never heard of "the Westminster Act of 1787" and could find no such reference in the index of acts of British Parliament.

Westminster is a section of London where Parliament is located, and some Parliament actions dealing with that area are known by the name. But there were none in 1787 and none that deal with drugs, he said.

"If they say the Westminster Act of 1787, there's no such thing," Grainger said.

Calls to LaRouche's headquarters seeking elaboration were referred to spokesman Mel Klenetsky. He did not return the calls.

LaRouche doesn't hesitate to declare his own importance.

"I'm probably the best economist living today," LaRouche, who has no college degree, said in the interview. "But that's largely because there are no economists living today. People that call themselves economists aren't economists. They're monetarists. They wouldn't be able to understand ... famous economists of the past."

LaRouche grew up in Lynn, Mass., and in the late 1940s and early 1950s was a member of the Socialist Workers Party, a Trotskyite group. He took the name "Lyn Marcus," and later was involved in or formed a series of other radical organizations.

He ran for president in 1976 on the U.S. Labor Party ticket, but by 1980 was running in Democratic primaries and had made an apparent shift to the right. LaRouche describes himself now as in the tradition of the American Whig party, forerunner of the Republican Party in the first half of the 19th century.

He operates out of a heavily guarded $1.3 million estate in Leesburg, Va., and the source of financing for his various organizations and corporations is unclear. A federal investigation in Boston is reported to be looking into allegations LaRouche groups raised money through credit-card fraud.

LaRouche said during a 1984 libel trial that he has no income and has filed no tax returns for 12 years. He says he doesn't know who pays his bills.

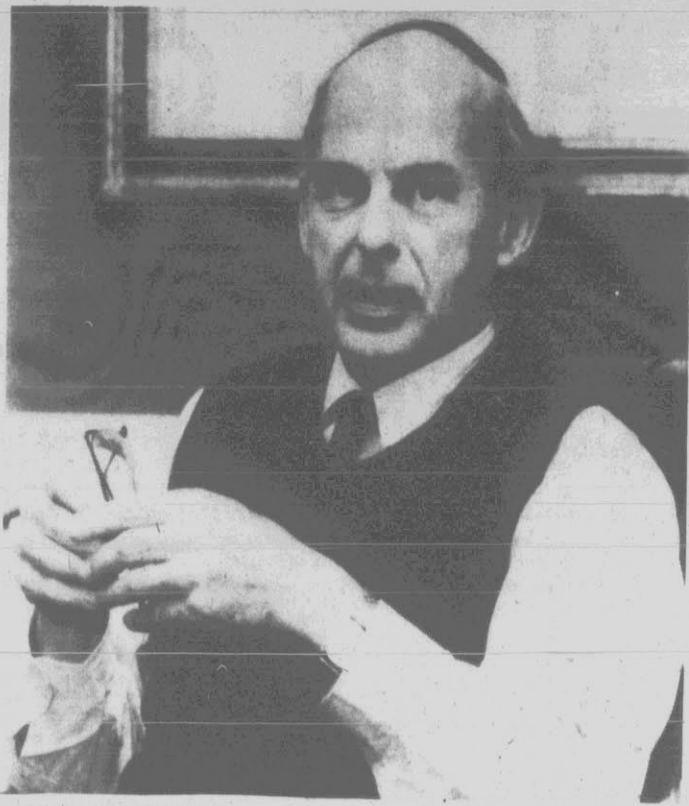

The federal court rejected LaRouche's libel suit against NBC and ordered him to pay the network a $200,000 judgment in a countersuit charging LaRouche followers made repeated threats and posed as NBC and Senate aides to falsely cancel an NBC interview with a senator.

LaRouche's followers sell his publications and seek support in airports and in shopping centers. LaRouche remains in seclusion because, he says, drug pushers and the Soviets have plotted his assassination.

Estimates of the membership of his organization number in the hundreds, and some say it has the appearance of a cult. Some reporters who have written about LaRouche's organization report receiving threats and harassment.

"It's an anti-Semitic political cult combining elements of the left and right," said Mira B. Lansky, Washington fact-finding director of the Anti-Defamation League.

"The wild-eyed fanaticism you see in the eyes of his followers certainly to me seems cult-like," said Milton R. Copulos, a senior policy analyst at the Heritage Foundation who has written about LaRouche.

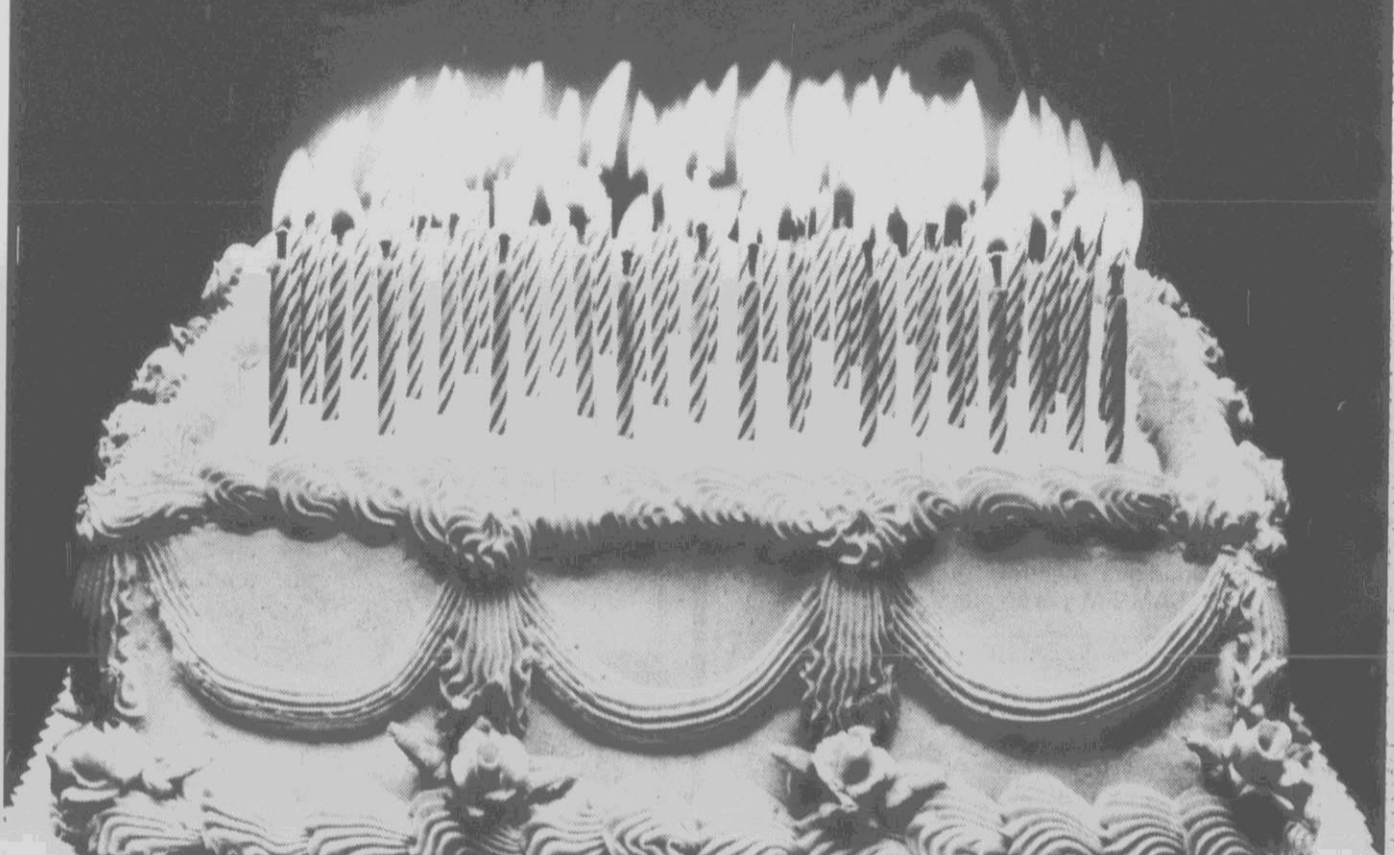

RESIGNS — Adlai E. Stevenson sits in his Chicago office Wednesday after resigning his Democratic nomination for Illinois governor. Stevenson, who protested the inclusion of followers of Lyndon LaRouche on the party's ticket, said he will attempt to run as an independent. (AP Laserphoto)

A Full House

A recent study predicts that, by the year 2100, India will be the world's most populous nation. At that time, an estimated 1.6 billion people will live in India. That is assuming no major disasters significantly decrease that nation's population. In 1848, a potato famine decimated Ireland's population. Three years before the famine, Ireland had 8.25 million people. Six years later, only 6.5 million lived there. Today Ireland's population is under four million.

DO YOU KNOW — What is currently the world's most populous nation?

Child-Care Walk

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Danny DeVito and his wife, actress Rhea Perlman, led more than 1,000 people, many pushing toddlers in strollers, in a march in support of public funding for child care.

The one-mile walk Sunday through the Westwood area near UCLA was sponsored by the California Children's Council, a nonprofit group whose aim is to educate the public in child-care services.

Justices Question Deficit-Cutting Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future of a law requiring a balanced federal budget by 1991 is in the hands of the Supreme Court, with at least some justices expressing doubts about its constitutionality.

During two hours of arguments Wednesday pitting the White House against Congress, some members of the court voiced skepticism about a key provision of the law, the Gramm-Rudman Act.

The confrontation focuses on the role of the comptroller general, until now an obscure official who heads the General Accounting Office, a congressional watchdog and auditing agency.

Under Gramm-Rudman, Comptroller General Charles Bowsher is assigned the task of determining deficit-reduction figures that must be implemented automatically.

Steven R. Ross, representing the bipartisan leadership of the House, said the comptroller general was picked for the job because of his independence, "to insure these calculations were walled off from political considerations."

But the justices seemed skeptical. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger suggested defenders of the law were conceding the role of the comptroller general "is slightly unconstitutional."

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor asked Ross, "Wouldn't you concede the historic role of the comptroller general is an employee of the legislative branch?"

And Justice William H. Rehnquist, recalling his days as a Justice Department lawyer in the Nixon administration, added: "If the president wanted a favorable opinion, he went to the attorney general. If Congress wanted a favorable opinion, it went to the comptroller general."

The remark elicited laughter from the packed courtroom that included some two dozen members of Congress. In the audience were Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Warren Rudman, R-N.H., sponsors of the balanced-budget law.

They told reporters afterward they were optimistic the court will uphold the law.

"It is unlikely the court might overturn a major piece of legislation" on a relative technicality, Rudman said.

"We feel confident of the outcome," added Gramm.

But White House budget director James Miller said he expected the justices to strike down the comptroller general's role in the deficit-reduction law.

Nonetheless, he said, "Gramm-Rudman will still live. I think the process will work. It will go forward." The Reagan administration is helping lead the attack on the constitutionality of the comptroller general's role.

The court is expected to decide the case by July.

House Reimposes Former Limits On Outside Income

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, wary of the election-year political consequences of a move to boost members' outside earnings capacity, has reversed itself and overwhelmingly reimposed the old limits.

Members said that while the issue of congressional salaries and earnings may arise again later this year as the subject of hearings, it is unlikely any meaningful effort will be made to change Congress' pay before the November elections.

On Wednesday, the lawmakers voted 333-68 to undo the quickie maneuver pulled just a day earlier that would have lifted a ceiling on members' outside incomes, boosting their annual earnings potential by at least $7,510. Wednesday's vote was far more than the two-thirds majority needed to pass.

Many House members voiced fears that lifting the outside income cap — even though it would cost taxpayers nothing — would still invite political catastrophe from voters who make far less than the $75,100 paid lawmakers.

Others said it would unravel 1977 reforms aimed at minimizing the chance of undue influence on lawmakers by special interests.

"Why don't we each just pick our own corporation and get them to pay us, and we won't have to bother the taxpayer for a dime," Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., asked sarcastically.

Obey, an author of the rule limiting House members' outside incomes to 30 percent of their annual salaries, said lifting the limit amounted to "privatizing" Congress, a term normally used for the selling off of government assets to the private sector.

That limit was reinstated just one day after Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., with the acquiescence of leaders in both parties, had slipped a resolution killing the 30 percent limit through a nearly empty House chamber without debate or a formal vote.

That meant the only constraint on members' incomes was a law limiting speaking and writing fees to 40 percent of their salaries. The law places no limit on other forms of outside income, such as compensation from a law firm, corporate directorships or commissions.

In practice, the change would really have benefited only the 18 percent of House members who are in such demand as speakers because of their leadership or committee positions that they bump up against the current income limits.

"It only benefits the high rollers," Obey said. "It gives the rest of the members a black eye."

While the House overwhelmingly reinstated the old limits, many members argued that something eventually will have to be done to help salaries keep pace with living costs.

"There's no question $75,000 is a lot of money," said Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C. "But there are also a lot of expenses connected with this job."

Opening lead: Ten of ♠

Just because you have no legitimate line to make your contract does not mean that you have to give up. You might be able to throw some dust in the eyes of the defenders and blind them to the true situation.

Four hearts is a perfectly reasonable contract for North-South to reach. Unfortunately, all North's strength was in South's short suit, and, therefore, of little help. Obviously, the defenders could take four tricks if they realized they had to attack spades early. The normal way to go for the hand would be for declarer to win the trump lead in hand and immediately lead a low diamond. To defeat the contract, the defender who held the ace of diamonds would have to win it right away and find the spade shift—there was always a chance he would shift to a club.

South decided he would rather try a bit of deception. He won the opening lead in hand, crossed to the queen of hearts and returned a heart to his king. On the last two tricks East played the deuces of diamonds and clubs. Then came the seven of diamonds.

It was hard for West to believe that South would have taken the only entry off the table if he held a singleton diamond. He decided to try to shut out dummy's diamonds by ducking the first diamond trick. South conceded three tricks gratefully as he claimed his contract.

East might have made life a bit easier for his partner. Instead of discarding the minor-suit twos, he would have done better to echo in diamonds, discarding first the nine and then the two. Since he obviously couldn't want a diamond lead, he could only have been showing count (a high-low echo shows an even number of cards in the suit). Therefore, West would have been able to win the first diamond and, no matter what he returned, the defenders would eventually get their three spade tricks.

Britons Turning To Baked Beans

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers who grow edible beans — navy, pinto and the others — have seen prices hold up fairly well despite last year's bumper harvest, Agriculture Department economists say.

One reason may be that Britons are devouring American beans with a gusto usually reserved for the classic English breakfast of eggs, toast, kippers and broiled tomato.

"But there's another item on the breakfast menu in Britain — baked beans on toast," says a report by the USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service. "And it is the United States that supplies the United Kingdom with a majority of those beans."

The bean report was written by W. Lynn Abbott, U.S. agricultural trade officer in London. It appears in the May issue of Foreign Agriculture magazine.

Last year, the report said, the United Kingdom imported about 115,000 metric tons of dried beans, about 65 percent of which were from the United States. Canada was the next largest supplier.

"The United Kingdom is one of the few countries in the world where bean consumption is increasing," the report said. "U.K. bean consumption per person is roughly 15 pounds per year, triple that of the United States."

The greatest single use in the U.K. is for canned navy beans in tomato sauce, otherwise known as baked beans.

Last year's total U.S. harvest of dry edible beans — as distinguished from green beans or castor beans — was almost 22.3 million hundredweight, up 6 percent from 21.1 million in 1984.

Michigan is the largest producer, with 5.4 million hundredweight last year, but beans are commercial crops in at least a dozen other states.

According to USDA's Economic Research Service, the all-bean price at the farm may average $19 to $20 per hundredweight over the entire 1985-86 season, up from around $18.60 last season, mostly because of larger exports.

Brazil and Mexico are large markets for U.S. beans, which have been included in the list of commodities eligible for export credit financing during the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1.

As of March 31, according to the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, Brazil had not used any of its $30 million line of credit to buy U.S. beans this fiscal year. Mexico had used $3.7 million for beans but had $54.3 million left as of March 31.

On Wednesday, however, the agency said that at the request of the government of Mexico, $42 million of its guarantees had been switched from beans to tallow.

As a result, only $12.3 million remains for Mexico to buy beans during the rest of the fiscal year.

Soviets Resume Grain Purchases

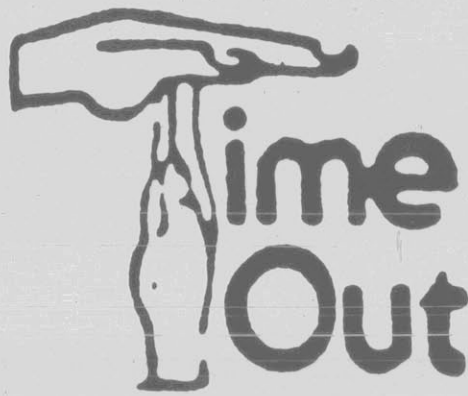

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a three-month layoff, the Soviet Union has resumed buying U.S. grain with the purchase of 200,000 metric tons of corn — about 7.9 million bushels — for delivery through Sept. 30, the Agriculture Department said.

It was the first major sale of grain reported by the department since

Jan. 22, although small quantities have been sold since then, along with large sales of U.S. soybeans.

Officials said the sales were reported to USDA by private exporters as required by law. No prices or other details were disclosed.

The department says the latest estimated price of corn is about $2.28 per bushel at the farm.

Composer Harold Arlen Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Songwriter Harold Arlen, whose show-stopping hits "Over The Rainbow" and "Stormy Weather" highlighted an Oscar-winning career during which he composed more than 500 tunes, has died at 81.

Arlen died Wednesday of natural causes at his Manhattan apartment. His funeral is scheduled for Friday.

Arlen and lyricist E.Y. "Yip" Harburg won the 1939 Academy Award for Best Song for "Over The Rainbow," which became the signature song of Judy Garland after she sang it in the film classic "The Wizard of Oz."

Five other songs by Arlen were nominated for Oscars: "Blues In The Night," "That Old Black Magic," "My Shining Hour," "Ac-cent-tchu-ate The Positive," and "The Man That Got Away."

Arlen's songs "cover such a range of style and content — from the soaring openness of 'Over The Rainbow' to the bluesy phrases of 'Blues in the Night,' from the sassy jauntiness of 'Down With Love' to the tender charm of 'Last Night When We Were Young' — that almost any singer can find a number of songs that suit his or her style." The New York Times critic John S. Wilson wrote in 1979.

Thirty-five of his songs came to be regarded as part of the standard repertoire, including "I Love A Parade," "It's Only A Paper Moon," "One For My Baby (And One More For The Road)," and "Come Rain or Come Shine."

Named Chaim Arluk when he was born in Buffalo in 1905, Arlen's musical career began at age 7 in the choir of the synagogue where his father was cantor.

Arlen had designs on being a performer, but said he came to realize around 1929 it was "something my temperament couldn't take." A promoter heard him improvising at a piano and put him in touch with lyricist Ted Koehler.

Author Sentenced

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Athanassios Nasioutzik, one of Greece's most prominent writers, was sentenced Tuesday to life in prison for bludgeoning another author to death with a hammer.

The 64-year-old former president of Greece's Writers' Union was found guilty of murdering Athanassios Diamantopoulos, 73, who had served as the organization's treasurer.

When the verdict was announced, Nasioutzik stood up and said, "I insist I am innocent." His attorneys said they would appeal.

The seven-judge court, in a 6-1 decision, pronounced Nasioutzik

"guilty of premeditated murder in a particularly odious fashion."

Diamantopoulos' body was found in the bathroom of his Athens apartment on Sept. 24, 1984, and an autopsy report said his skull had been crushed by 97 hammer blows.

The eight-day trial was followed closely by Greek intellectuals familiar with Nasioutzik's 13 books on humanism and the philosophy of science.

Before his arrest in March 1985, Nasioutzik, a chemist by training, served on a committee that advised Culture Minister Melina Mercouri on literary topics.

Police initially listed Nasioutzik as a prime suspect after a resident in the apartment building said she heard Diamantopoulos pleading with his killer, "Thanassi, Thanassi, please don't!" Thanassi is a diminutive of Athanassios.

Nasioutzik subsequently was arrested on tax evasion charges and also questioned about the slaying.

He was released after making a down payment on unpaid taxes and investigating magistrates ruled there was insufficient evidence to link him to the murder.

The case was reopened when Diamantopoulos' son Panagiotti brought a private suit against Nasioutzik.

Wedding Security Tight

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — Security will be so tight that airplanes won't be allowed to fly within two miles of the church where Maria Shriver and Arnold Schwarzenegger will be married Saturday before a congregation of Kennedy family members, television personalities and movie stars, officials say.

"As recently as this morning, I was involved in a two-hour, high-level security meeting," the Rev. Edward Duffy, who will help celebrate the wedding Mass, said Wednesday.

Duffy declined to elaborate on what measures will be taken at St. Francis Xavier Church, where the 30-year-old "CBS Morning News" co-anchor and the 38-year-old body-builder and actor will walk down the aisle.

But he said he has been working with police to make sure the ceremony is not disturbed either by autograph seekers or "somebody who's hostile."

"There will be a high, high level of security," he said.

Planes will be banned from flying within a two-mile radius of the Kennedy compound or below 2,000 feet from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at the Shriver's request, said Barnstable Municipal Airport traffic manager Frederick Banks.

The Federal Aviation Administration permits a flight ban, Banks said.

"If you get too many people flying in a small area, you can end up with safety problems."
