Hospitals Short Of Nurses

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Hospital administrators and other industry observers see no immediate cures for a shortage of nurses North Carolina hospitals are facing just two years after they laid off hundreds of nurses. "A lot of places would tell you 'no,' they're not having any shortages," said Francis Miller, executive director of the N.C. Nurses Association in Raleigh. "But hospitals are beginning to find that they can't find the nurses they need in terms of qualifications for intensive care and other specialties. And there continues to be a shortage of qualified (nursing) teachers, a persistent problem."

Hospital officials say it's tough to find willing to cope with the hours, stress and salaries of hospital duty.

"Nurses don't want to work in hospitals," said Betty Baxter, associate executive director of Humana Hospital-Greensboro and president of the N.C. Society of Nursing Administrators. "They want to work 9 to 5."

While some administrators say they are alarmed by the shortages, others say their nursing ranks are only slightly below seasonal averages.

Personnel agencies that provide nurses on a temporary basis to hospitals say requests from hospitals for nurses are higher than ever.

"We know they (hospitals) are having a hard time recruiting and staffing, that they're having shortages of nurses," says Edith Moser, vice president of Medical Personnel Pool in Charlotte, which has five branches in the Piedmont.

Two Die On Tracks

RALEIGH (AP) — Two youths riding a three-wheeled vehicle on railroad tracks near Moncure apparently were trying to save their vehicle from an oncoming Amtrak passenger train that struck and killed them, a Chatham County investigator says.

Demitrius Maurice Kelly, 14, and Jimmy Harrington Jr., 12, both of northern Lee County, had just crossed a railroad bridge that spans the Deep River on the Chatham-Lee county line Sunday morning. The train struck the two from behind, killing them instantly, said Chatham County Sheriff's Det. Mark D. Donaldson.

Donaldson said the boys apparently had enough time to run to safety if they had abandoned their vehicle. But investigators think they panicked and tried to outrun the train in an attempt to save the bike.

The train was traveling at 79 mph, Donaldson said in a telephone interview. He said there was no way to estimate the speed of the three-wheeler, which belonged to Harrington's father.

"They could have jumped off at any time," Donaldson said. "That's what leads me to believe they were trying to save the three-wheeler."

Owen Pride, a spokesman for Seaboard Systems Railroad, which owns the rail line, said the tracks were about 8 inches high and would have been difficult for a three-wheeler to cross.

Hearing Officer Backs Peat Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — A state administrative hearing officer has proposed that a Chicago developer be allowed to go ahead with plans to mine the energy-rich peat bogs of Hyde County.

But a committee of the state Environmental Management Commission on Monday postponed a decision on the matter until Friday, a few days before a court-imposed deadline for a final decision.

Sam J. Esposito, who owns mining rights to the 7,700-acre White Tail Farms near Fairfield, is seeking permission to begin mining peat at the farm. He plans to barge the peat to a power plant he would build near New Bern and use it to fire the plant's turbines. The electricity would be sold to Carolina Power & Light Co.

In a report dated April 21, Beecher Gray, a hearing officer with the North Carolina Office of Administrative Hearings, said Esposito had satisfied special conditions the state Division of Environmental Management had imposed when it issued the developer a water discharge permit in 1982.

Dismal Swamp Canal Reopens

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has reopened the Dismal Swamp Canal between South Mills and Deep Creek, Va. in Camden County and Tidewater Virginia after repairing leaky locks that led to low water levels.

The low water had kept the waterway closed for nine months.

The $107,000 repair allows boats to take a scenic 22-mile trip between South Mills and Deep Creek, Va. Since the canal reopened Friday, 19 boats have passed through the locks, a spokesman for the corps' Norfolk district said Monday.

William Brown, public affairs officer for the Norfolk district, said the canal had been closed in July because dry conditions in Virginia reduced water in areas that drain into the canal.

Variety Spices Girl's Collection Of Erasers

By PEGGY SCHMIDT
Lancaster Sunday News
LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — What does a miniature Statue of Liberty have to do with a tiny replica of a transformer, or a penlight battery have in common with a small Popsicle?

Well, they might have a double life. In addition to what they look like, they could function as erasers. And they might all be counted among the 1,016 novelty erasers in Holli Koharchek's collection.

The Lititz girl has been collecting erasers since she was 9. "One day I went to the dentist," she said, "and he had a treasure chest. I picked an eraser (a spaceship). I thought it was neat, and it would be fun to collect them."

Now 12 years old, the Warwick Middle School student said she had kept her first erasers in fishing boxes but "they began to get smashed in the boxes," so she opted for knick-knack display shelves. Displayed in the miniature cubicles are tiny Cabbage Patch dolls, a covered wagon, gum packs and milk and juice cartons.

Complementing the display shelves in her bedroom are a number of latch-hook wall hangings executed by Holli's mother, Paulette, from her own collection. "Everything and anything that has to do with Scotties, including the real thing."

According to Mrs. Koharchek, "Holli has been collecting for so long, it's really hard to find new ones. We check the gift shops every few months, because we know she doesn't have the new arrivals. Now we're going to antique places. We found a Laurel and Hardy, and they wanted $10 for the pair. The price is really getting up (on the older ones)."

Some of Holli's collection pieces are actually pencil sharpeners with erasers attached, such as a plastic wedge of "cake" topped by a strawberry eraser. Others, such as the foot-long matchstick or the chocolate Popsicle, are really pencils — the match head and the Popsicle stick are the erasers.

"We try to stay away from the flat ones," said Mrs. Koharchek, noting that the three dimensional figures are more interesting because they can be better displayed. "And the flat ones, the children use in school. You wouldn't want to use these. They're too nice."

While Holli started her collection locally, she has gone far afield to add to the exhibit. She has a pair of Liberty Bells from Philadelphia, and a British flag that was brought to her from England.

"People go somewhere and they know she collects, so they try to get something from that area," said her mother.

Holli hopes to expand the collection with more erasers from outside the United States and, according to her father, an aunt visiting from Czechoslovakia intends to help her reach that goal.

A well-organized young lady, Holli keeps a notebook with an up-to-date inventory of her collection. "After about 50, I started to categorize them," she said.

When she isn't cataloging erasers, Holli has a few other interests to keep her busy.

"I like to draw," she said, "and I've been taking art lessons for seven years."

In addition, she plays the flute in the middle school band and, her mother reports, manages to stay on the school honor roll.

If there is one disadvantage to her extensive collection, Holli admits that it is that the exhibits need to be dusted. But her father says he has a solution to that problem. He plans to cover the front of the display shelves with Plexiglas so the collection will afford only pleasure — no housekeeping — for his daughter.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

For some reason my children have never, for a minute, believed half of the things I told them.

I told them if they made terrible faces, their faces would freeze, but they didn't buy it.

I told them if they put their hands outside of a car window, their hand would blow off, but they just laughed.

Even when I offered to document the story of a child who swallowed bubble gum and his insides stuck together and he could never play baseball again because his arms stuck to his sides, they remained non-believers.

Now that they are grown, they are totally out of control. If I told them Wednesday followed Tuesday, they'd say, "Are you sure?" That is why I couldn't help sharing with them a letter that I received from a young mother in Missouri. In some ways, it's the support system I needed for all those years when I tried to protect my children from pain and disappointment through my wisdom.

The mother was riding in the car with her 5-year-old when she noticed he was licking the metal zipper in his coat. She stopped the car and delivered a detailed explanation of what could happen if he continued to put his warm tongue on anything cold. I would stick there and he would go through the rest of his life with a coat hanging onto the end of his tongue and people would stare and he would look funny in the class picture and it went on and on.

He looked at her like my children looked at me and every other child looked at their mother since the beginning of time. With open disbelief.

Later that afternoon, his older sister came running into the house to inform her mother that her brother was stuck to a chain link fence by ... guess what? You got it. His tongue.

Our heroine moved with the speed of a gazelle. She grabbed a plastic glass and filled it with warm water and in her house slippers ran out of the house where she hit a patch of ice and slid down the hill at an angle. She hit the grass and turned a cartwheel, spilling the water. When her daughter returned with more water, she severed the relations between the fence and his tongue.

When she got to the house she had suffered two badly cut hands, two badly bruised knees, a bruised elbow and a dislocated shoulder. The tongue took two weeks to heal.

I put down the letter and said to them, "You see. Your mother was telling you the truth all of those years. It pays to listen to us. We know what we're talking about."

One of my kids peeled a banana and said, "I don't blame the kid. Why would he believe someone who wears bedroom slippers out in the snow."

Childhood Abuse Leads To Adult Years Of Rage

DEAR ABBY: My mother keeps sending me clippings from your column about "forgiving," as part of her campaign to reconcile my brother and me, so I hope she sees this.

My mother was aware that my brother had physically and verbally abused me throughout our childhood, but she wrote it off as "sibling rivalry." She never knew that when I was very young and he was in his teens he raped me and continued to sexually abuse me over several years. I could never bring myself to tell her because I like most victims, I thought she would either blame me or simply say I was lying.

I have only recently begun to deal with this childhood trauma. As a result of my rage and anger toward my brother, I cannot bear to be in the same room with him. Over the years (and it's been 35 years now) he has been cold and distant toward me. I could possibly forgive him if he acknowledged his wrongdoing and showed some remorse for what he did to me. Instead, he's become a judgmental hypocrite who constantly quotes Scripture.

Mother is in her 70s and continues to tell me how unhappy she is that my brother and I don't "love" each other. How can I tell her now? She'd probably say, "Why don't you just forget it — it happened a long time ago."

I'm tired of her nagging me to reach out to my brother. By the way, she doesn't nag him or send him clippings, because she thinks it's all my fault.

Thanks for listening.
LITTLE SISTER

and anger to your brother, and even if he does nothing about it, that action will make you feel better.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the tight labor vs. loose labor market question: You blew it again. If I may quote you:

"I erroneously assumed that because the terminology 'money is tight' means 'money is scarce,' the same held true for the labor market."

Abby, it DOES! "Labor is tight" means labor (workers) is scarce. Too few laborers means plenty of jobs.
JAPANESE BUSINESSMAN, TOKYO

DEAR BUSINESSMAN: Thanks, I needed that. The confusion lies in the term "labor market," which I assumed meant "jobs." It doesn't; it means workers. Hence a tight labor market means workers are scarce but job openings are plentiful. Now, by George, I have it.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations and how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Writing

Students who can't think, can't write.

That's the scary element about a 10-year federally financed study that claims 62 percent of American 17-year-olds can't write suitably. It also tested 9- and 13-year-olds and concluded that things might not get any better.

Those findings are frustrating in the face of increased educational emphasis on literacy. Even more startling, however, is the knowledge that writing is a reflection of thinking. Jumbled sentences mirror jumbled thoughts. Garbled phrases mean garbled ideas. In light of that, the problem may be more serious than a mere lack of communication skills. It may echo the increasing inability — or willingness — of an entire society to probe topics deeply.

Students are not thinking clearly, distinctly, deeply, logically or imaginatively. If the message they're sending is scrambled, so is the muse that spurs their message. Maybe they aren't thinking at all.

Improving writing proficiency will mean bettering thinking skills, an educational task that could pale other instruction responsibilities. Teaching thinking is a heavy duty order; there is no equation for formulating ideas and no textbook to guide instruction.

There are ways, however, to stimulate and provoke thought.

For a start, elementary schools might stress informative and persuasive writing tasks and older children might be given more creative and imaginative assignments — the kind that stimulate thinking.

It would be naive to think a re-evaluation of writing instruction alone could solve the problem. The roots for bad writing go deeper than a mere reworking of teaching skills.

But a conscious effort by the nation's educators to provoke cogitation — not just encourage writing skills — could keep the problem from deepening.

Volunteers

The Daily Reflector is especially happy over increasing attention being given volunteers who make life in their communities more pleasant for some and more bearable for others.

Literally thousands of adults and young people are voluntarily serving their neighbors in Pitt County. If all our 100 counties are enjoying Pitt's dedication to caring and sharing, then North Carolina is truly well served by its people.

There's no nose-count for volunteers in our midst. Those who contribute time and efforts to specific causes and organizations may be on some rosters but not all. For some, the process of organizing their voluntary efforts can go just so far ... enough to avoid duplication and confusion, but not so much as to create regimentation.

Our elders provide an example for a younger generation who in turn are role models for younger brothers and sisters who will follow in their footsteps. It's a happy arrangement. We would be immeasurably poorer without their contribution.

Shock Waves Over Oil

When the price of oil was $33 a barrel, a tribunal of energy experts told me it was my fault.

They called me on the carpet and said, "Shame on you. You are consuming too much gasoline and making us hostage to the OPEC nations. If you continue down this slothful path you will dry up the world oil reserves by the year 2000."

"What do you want me to do?" I asked them.

The members of the tribunal looked down sternly and said, "Buy a smaller car. Use it only for essential trips. Stop joy riding. Keep the heat in the house at 60 degrees. Replace oil heaters with coal. Cut out air conditioning. Use mass transportation as often as you can. Drive 55 miles per hour, and have your engine cleaned by Mr. Goodwrench."

"If I do all that will the price of oil go down?"

"No. The price of oil will never go down in your lifetime or ours. All we want you to do is keep it from rising any higher."

"Why will it continue to soar?" I asked one of the wise men.

"Because the OPEC nations will make sure petroleum is always in short supply so they can drive up the price."

"Can anyone break this stranglehold?"

"Not in your time, boychick," he said. "Expect to pay $50 a barrel and be grateful they will sell it to you. Now get out of here and conserve every cup of oil you can."

I did as I was instructed. I sold the big car and bought a foreign midget. I insulated the house. Instead of gas or oil I burned wood in my stoves. The kids, without any prodding from me, sold their snowmobiles and began riding the bus.

Then for no reason the price of oil dropped — first by a few pennies, then by nickels and dimes, and finally by big petro-bucks.

The tribunal of oil wise men called me in. I thought they were going to congratulate me for my conservation. But they were angry.

"You've made fools of us. We predicted the price of oil would go up, but it has gone down."

"I had nothing to do with it."

"Hah! Your conservation methods have caused an oil glut. More oil is being produced than is being sold, and there is anarchy in the marketplace."

"One person can't cause an oil glut."

"Not you alone, but everyone like you who cut back on consumption. Because of a lot of cheap people, oil may hit $5 a barrel."

"You told me OPEC would never let that happen."

"They double-crossed each other by drilling more oil than they had agreed to. This forced everyone to open up their spigots and start a price war. The consumer is now in charge."

"Anything wrong with that?"

"The first rule of any business is to never let the consumer be in charge."

"So tell me, wise ones, how do I make the oil nations well?"

"Double your consumption of lighter fluid. Buy a diesel motorboat. Give each one of your kids a Porsche. Use heating oil to barbecue your steaks. Replace your electric lights with gas ones. Take an Exxon executive to lunch. Can you do it?"

"I guess so. But I sort of enjoy paying 70 cents for gasoline. It hasn't shaken me up as much as I thought it would."

"Don't think of yourself. Think of all the banks that have made loans to the petroleum industry. Remember, every time the price of oil drops 50 cents a barrel, a bank executive gets sick to his stomach."

Contadora Effort Shows New Life

WASHINGTON (AP) — The oft-spurned Contadora initiative for ending the conflict in Nicaragua is showing new life, partly through the efforts of presidential envoy Philip Habib. The next five weeks may determine whether it succeeds.

The Contadora nations hope to arrange a signing of a Central America peace agreement on June 6, with Nicaragua joining El Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras and Guatemala in endorsing the pact.

At a meeting in Panama earlier this month, Nicaragua refused to sign until the Reagan administration first halted aid to the Contra guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

And reflecting the low regard for the Contadora peace effort in Washington, President Reagan didn't even mention it in his nationwide address on March 16 urging more aid for the Contras.

But Habib, Reagan's new Central American envoy, helped revive Contadora in an April 11 letter to several congressmen in which he said the administration would halt aid to the Contras when the Sandinista government signs a peace accord that is true to the original objectives of Contadora.

Meanwhile, Reagan's request for $100 million in aid for the Contras, including $70 million for military aid, is languishing in the House. He has wanted the funds approved with a minimum of strings, but so far a House majority has insisted on conditions he finds unacceptable.

Several lawmakers speculate there might not be a vote on any Contra aid bill, with or without conditions, until after the June 6 date that Contradora has set for signing an agreement. Were that to happen there would be no need for any more aid, and probably no vote, said Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., who is promoting the Contadora initiative.

Habib is currently on a 12-nation tour of Latin America to discuss the Contadora process, and some lawmakers on both sides of the Contra aid issue believe he is genuinely seeking a diplomatic solution. There is uncertainty as to whether he will succeed, as Reagan just last week once again pledged his full support to the Contras.

Both the United States and Nicaragua have said they support the basic Contadora document — a September, 1983 statement of 21 objectives that has served as the foundation for subsequent draft treaties, including the one now proposed for signing.

The objectives include promoting democracy and national reconciliation, an end to military intervention and support for guerrilla wars, restraint on the size of the military, a reduction of the number of foreign military advisers, curbs on foreign military maneuvers, and a ban against foreign bases.

The original Contadora nations are Panama, Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela. They are now backed by a four-nation support group of Brazil, Argentina, Peru and Uruguay.

All of the Contadora countries are on record against U.S. aid to the Contras, but the administration has spurned their pleas to stop the aid. No agreement would work if the United States didn't agree to that condition, although it is not a party to the accord.

The Sandinistas have demanded a separate non-aggression agreement with Washington, but the administration has refused direct talks with Managua.

Also unclear is whether the Sandinistas would be required to hold another presidential election. The Nicaraguans insist their 1984 presidential election, in which Daniel Ortega was elected president for a six-year term, was legitimate, while Washington says it was flawed.

The Contadora draft treaty does not include a specific commitment to a new election to supplant the 1984 balloting, although it calls for regular free elections in all Central American countries.

Also unaddressed is the specific U.S. demand that the Sandinistas must negotiate directly with the Contras, which the Sandinistas refuse to do.

Another issue is the U.S. position on enforcement and verification of a peace agreement, and whether it would endorse the Contadora proposal for a four-nation enforcement commission, or insist on making its own determination of whether the Sandinistas have lived up to the agreement.

Closing all these gaps in five weeks won't be easy, even with the wholehearted efforts of both the United States and Nicaragua. And such a commitment isn't yet evident — even with Habib encouraging all sides.

Full Day For The President

WASHINGTON (AP) — "There's a fellow that puts a piece of paper on my desk every day that tells me what I'm going to be doing every 15 minutes," President Reagan says.

Good-naturedly making light of the power of his office, the president likes to say that this aide, not he, "is the most powerful man in the world."

The jest, which Reagan occasionally makes to visiting groups to explain why he can't stay with them long, touches on a fundamental White House question: what does he do all day?

Some critics suggest that the president, a whiz at public speaking and an affable host, is a lightweight who is unwilling or unable to grapple with the intricacies of government.

David Stockman, in a forthcoming memoir of his years as Reagan's budget director, writes that the president "seemed as far above the detail work of supply side (economics) as a ceremonial monarch is above politics."

In his book, "The Triumph of Politics," Stockman says that in pre-inaugural discussions of economic policy Reagan "simply listened, nodded and smiled."

Others say he is better organized than most think and has a better grasp than his recent predecessors of over-all policy objectives.

R. Gordon Hoxie, president of the Center for the Study of the Presidency, for instance, compares Reagan to President Eisenhower and predicts future scholars will raise his marks as they have Ike's.

"Eisenhower is viewed now as a much more activist and in-charge president than he was at the time," says Hoxie, whose organization has been studying presidents for 30 years.

As for Reagan, Hoxie says, it is true he is not a detail man, preferring to focus on the big picture, and "he does realize the necessity to conserve his energy" at the age of 75. But Hoxie adds that "the president has a much better mind and a much better sense of organization than most people have in the past realized."

White House chief of Staff Donald Regan, in a recent speech, outlined the president's schedule for one day, March 20:

9 a.m. — Met with Vice President George Bush and Regan to discuss the developing crisis in the Gulf of Sidra, votes in Congress on Nicaragua, and the budget and tax battles in Congress.

9:30 a.m. — Got a national security briefing dealing in part with the Gulf of Sidra crisis and other developments in the Middle East.

9:45 a.m. — For the next 45 minutes, held staff meetings on issues ranging from agriculture to the machine tool industry.

10:30 a.m. — Telephoned members of Congress to lobby for aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

Noon — Lunched with Bush. Said Regan, "a great deal of serious business got done."

1 p.m. — Gave an interview to The New York Times, dealing with Nicaragua, the space shuttle, the Philippines, the budget, and relations with the Soviet Union.

1:15 p.m. — Taped a message for the National Fitness Foundation.

1:30 p.m. — Met his personnel directors and decided on some government appointments.

2 p.m. — Proclaimed Agriculture Day in a ceremonial signing.

2:25 p.m. — During the next 2½ hours, had staff meetings on issues including the Gulf of Sidra and decisions to be made under the unratified SALT II arms control treaty.

4:30 p.m. — Presented an award for courage to a young cancer victim. It was Thursday, so, as usual that day, he posed for photographs with several people. They included pianist Vladimir Horowitz and middleweight boxing champion Marvin Hagler.

5 p.m. — Left the Oval Office for the residence, "under his arm a thick folder of homework, including speech drafts, issues papers, and a sheaf of documents for his signature."

Another official familiar with Reagan's schedule, who insisted he not be identified, said, "I would say that by the time he is at his desk at 9, if that is his first appointment, he will have done some reading."

Reagan gets a daily briefing book on the day's issues and a summary of the news that is prepared by the White House Press Office.

When Reagan is in the Oval Office, the official said, an hour or two is frequently carved out of his schedule for him to be free of appointments and retire to his study to read, make decisions and do official correspondence.

Strength For Today

Few moderns like to face the fact that the wrath of God is reality which every human being has to admit and take into account. It seems at variance with the oft-repeated declaration that God is love. Many people reason that God cannot be loving at one time and angry at another.

But God has ordained that evil beings suffer and as the evil increases the punishment increases in like proportion. If we think about it for a moment, we see that this is not at all inconsistent with the abounding love of God. Those who refuse it not only do themselves infinite harm — they corrupt the environment in which others must live. Sin unpunished and unrebuked would soon eradicate all goodness from the face of the earth.

In God's perfect nature, love, justice and wrath are perfectly balanced and his wrath against evil is just as much a part of his divine nature as are justice and love.

Baptist Calls For Sex Education

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptists, locked in a bitter struggle between fundamentalists and liberals, should promote sexual responsibility among youths through church-sponsored sex education programs for teen-agers, a family life specialist says.

"Schools have not done a good job and neither have churches or parents," said Charles Petty, a Southern Baptist and president of Family Success Unlimited of Raleigh, N.C.

"It is a conspiracy of silence. We cross our fingers and send our children out as cannon fodder and hope," he said.

Petty acknowledged that his quest to get the nation's largest Protestant denomination involved in sex education could create some backlash.

Liberals and fundamentalists in the 14.4 million-member denomination are currently battling over a literal interpretation of the Bible. The fundamentalists charge that excessive liberal teaching is being allowed in seminaries.

"The tragedy is there are some people that are totally uncomfortable with sexuality," said Petty, a former director of the Christian Life Council for the Nashville-based Southern Baptist Convention.

He said parents should question and have input into any such program.

However, he said, "(Sexuality) is all through scripture; hundreds of passages refer to it. If we're going to proclaim the whole truth, we have to claim that part of it, too."

Petty told a group of Southern Baptist youth ministers meeting in Nashville last week that "this is the kind of thing that can get you fired."

But he said the church needs to provide guidance to youths, especially to teen-agers, who often turn away from their parents' advice at the time they need it the most.

Highway Needs Cited

RALEIGH (AP) — More than 13,000 miles of roads and 5,255 bridges in North Carolina need major improvements, according to a new study that says the state's economic growth is threatened by an outdated highway system.

The study by The Road Information Program, a Washington-based non-profit research agency, said unless funding for repairs and new roads is increased dramatically over the next 15 years, the problem will encompass more than 28,600 miles and nearly 10,400 bridges by the year 2,000.

The study was sought by a committee of Better Transportation for North Carolina, a non-profit group of business leaders.

W. Earl Bardin, a First Union National Bank executive who is a member of the organization, said transportation problems had reached the stage of impeding business development.

The organization does not endorse Gov. Jim Martin's approach to the problem, Bardin said, nor does it take issue with the proposal. Martin has called for raising the motor fuel tax from 12.25 cents to 15 cents a gallon and transferring the state Highway Patrol and the drivers education program from the Highway Fund to the General Fund.

PITT COMMUNITY COLLEGE

A Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Institution

When you, or someone you love, needs medical attention, it's important to know that someone special is there. Someone who'll make certain all the finest care and attention are given.

Well, for one monthly payment through your employer, you can have that someone. Your own Personal Care Physician.

It's all part of the Personal Care Plan. A concept that brings back the idea of the "family doctor," while making a complete range of all the most modern medical services available to you and your family.

Under the plan, you select your Personal Care Physician from a list of participating doctors. He or she will then be personally responsible for managing your health care. From seeing you on routine examinations, to deciding on tests and treatments, to prescribing medications. And if you need a specialist, hospitalization or surgery, your Personal Care Physician will be there, making recommendations and helping you with advice.

The Personal Care Plan is an HMO from Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina. So naturally, it reflects a firm commitment to stem the rising cost of health care. But the beauty of the Personal Care Plan is not just in its cost cutting effectiveness. It's in the plan's ability to hold back costs while actually improving your chances for better health. That's because, with just one fixed monthly payment, you'll probably see your doctor earlier if you have a problem. And in general, the sooner you receive treatment, the easier and less expensive it will be.

The Personal Care Plan is available to most size companies. To learn more about this plan and your Personal Care Physician, call us. We'll be happy to help you.

Debbie Reynolds To Play 'Mommie Dearest' Role

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The daughter of a famous actress writes a scathing book about growing up with a star. Sound familiar?

Debbie Reynolds plays such an actress in an episode of ABC's "Hotel" Wednesday, and Ellen Bry, who played nurse Shirley Daniels on "St. Elsewhere," is cast as the disillusioned daughter.

The most famous such case was "Mommie Dearest," the book written by Christina Crawford, the daughter of Joan Crawford. Another book was written by Bette Davis's daughter, B.D. Hyman.

"I was going to rest, but they sent me this script," Miss Reynolds said. "The doorbell rang. I never answer the door. Then he pushed the intercom button and said, 'Script for Miss Reynolds.' I said, 'Sure, what are you? A robber?'"

"I never get scripts. I don't do episodic television. But I read the script, and it was good. It's about a retired movie star whose daughter writes a book about her. It has bite to it. It's a tell-all book, and there are bad feelings between the mother and daughter. Somebody suggested sending the script to my daughter Carrie Fisher. But she wouldn't have done it, and I wouldn't have done it. You couldn't lose sight of the fact that it was Debbie and Carrie."

Jack Kruschen, who appeared with Miss Reynolds in "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," plays her agent. Rod McCary plays the daughter's publisher and boyfriend.

"We all feel frustrated about children who profit off their parents," Miss Reynolds said. "I think it's deplorable. Carrie laughs and says she's going to write a book called 'Money Dearest.'"

She said later her daughter is not only writing a book but is also working on a movie script with Richard Dreyfuss.

"I'm going to write my own book this year," Miss Reynolds added. "I've just accepted a deal from a publisher. I'll work with a writer. I've got a lot of things I've blocked from my mind because they're too painful. He'll have to call on my friends for information."

Miss Reynolds, who turned 54 on April 1, said, "I was going to retire when I reached 55. But it looks like I'll be too busy to retire. I already have work lined up for 1987. This year is completely booked. I don't think you can retire when you're a workaholic. I'd go crazy. I'm not domestic. I've worked since I was 10. I'm a career woman."

"I'll retire in four or five years. I'll retire when I no longer like the way I look. I'll go into producing and directing."

Eighteen months ago, she married her third husband, Richard Hamlett, an architect and real estate developer who lives in Roanoke, Va. She was previously married to singer Eddie Fisher and shoe manufacturer Harry Karl.

"I'm completely happy, which is a shock to me," she said. "I was single for 13 years. I met this man and on the second date he said he was going to marry me. I said, 'You must be a doctor.' You read about these things in romantic novels. I'm still waiting for him to mess up. He's too right for me."

Miss Reynolds is a veteran of two series, although she rarely appears on TV these days. Her first series, "The Debbie Reynolds Show," lasted one season, 1969-70.

"They promised me no cigarette ads," she said. "The first show had a cigarette ad. I had a two-year deal. They couldn't fire me. So I quit. It cost me millions. Looking back, I shouldn't have done it."

Miss Reynolds, who chain-smoked throughout the interview, explained she didn't approve of cigarette advertising "because they are so addictive." As for her own smoking, she added: "People my age were not aware when they began smoking. ... I'm still trying to break the habit."

Her next show was "Aloha Paradise," which made a brief appearance in 1981. "It had the worst scripts ever," she said. "That's why it failed. They didn't even advertise that I was in it. I totally disliked every script and they didn't like me interfering."

Justices To Study Cable TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — A legal case of potentially momentous importance to the cable television industry is being studied by a select, influential audience: the nine justices of the Supreme Court.

The nation's highest court was to hear arguments today in a controversy from Los Angeles over the power of communities to grant exclusive cable television franchises.

A federal appeals court last year ruled that such exclusive arrangements sometimes may violate the free-speech rights of excluded companies.

The ruling by the San Francisco-based 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals marked the first time any federal court found the right to hold a cable franchise to be constitutionally protected.

A long series of court rulings makes clear there is no such constitutional right to operate a television or radio station.

The 9th Circuit court said state and local governments must have a substantial reason for denying access to utility poles and other public facilities capable of accommodating more than one cable operator.

The appeals court ruling cast doubt on the constitutionality of a 1984 law in which Congress appeared to give communities a legal right to grant exclusive cable franchises.

One section of the Cable Franchise Policy and Communications Act of 1984 says, "A franchising authority may award ... one or more franchises within its jurisdiction."

The appeals court said interpreting the federal law as authorizing a city to determine how many cable operators will provide service in a particular geographic area "would be invalid."

Los Angeles, like many other cities, awards cable franchises for various regions within the city by competitive bidding. One cable operator is awarded the franchise for each region.

When city officials in 1982 opened the South Central area of Los Angeles to competitive bidding, the sole entrant ultimately was awarded the franchise.

But Preferred Communications Inc., which chose not to participate in the bidding, later demanded that it be given a franchise for the same area. When turned down, PCI sued the city.

A federal judge threw out the lawsuit, but the 9th Circuit court's ruling reinstated it. The city then sought the Supreme Court's help.

Since the justices agreed last November to study the case, they have received numerous "friend-of-the-court" briefs offering unsolicited advice as to how the court should rule. Most have sided with Los Angeles.

Those urging reversal of the appeals court ruling include the American Civil Liberties Union, Black Citizens for a Fair Media, the Consumer Federation of America, the National Organization for Women, the National League of Cities, the National Association of Broadcasters, the National Governors Association and the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Those siding with Preferred Communications include the National Cable Television Association, the Satellite Television Industry Association, Time Inc., The New York Times Co. and the Motion Picture Association of America.

The court's decision is expected by July.

Whale Death

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An adult killer whale died at Sea World from what park officials believe were natural causes brought on by old age. Winston had lived at Sea World for 10 years before its death.

Winston was at least 30 years old and was captured in 1968 in the Western Pacific. It was acquired from Windsor Safari Park in England.

FCC Launches Search For 'Captain Midnight'

By DAVID CROOK
(c) 1986, Los Angeles Times
HOLLYWOOD — Federal authorities have launched an investigation throughout the eastern two-thirds of the country in what they say is the first known instance of deliberate interference with a satellite-TV broadcast.

Persons familiar with the case said Monday that a four-minute pirate broadcast that broke into the eastern feed of Home Box Office Inc. early Sunday morning appeared to have come from a professional satellite transmission station. They downplayed speculation that the broadcast came from an amateur satellite hobbyist engaging in a prank.

Officials also have expressed concern that the pirate TV transmission could portend serious interference problems for satellite broadcasts from the commercial TV networks, as well as business and financial information, government messages and other satellite communications.

William Russell, a spokesman for the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, said that the agency was investigating the case and has asked the Department of Justice to participate in the search for the pirate, who identifies him or herself as "Captain Midnight."

Russell said that the FCC had technical means of searching out the satellite pirate, as well as more traditional investigative techniques.

He acknowledged, however, that the FCC would be unable to track down the pirate signal unless it was rebroadcast in the future.

"I can't go into detail about what we may or may not be doing technically," Russell said. "I don't think it would be beneficial to have the person involved know what we're capable of doing."

Russell also said that the search for the pirate was being concentrated in the eastern two-thirds of the country on the assumption that it was "not likely someone from the West Coast" who broke into HBO's eastern signal broadcast via the Galaxy I satellite.

The message, printed in white letters on a color-bar test pattern background, appeared at about 12:30 a.m. EST Sunday during a broadcast of the film "The Falcon and the Snowman." It read: "Good Evening, HBO, from Captain Midnight. $12.95 a month? No way! (Showtime Movie Channel Beware.)"

The message, an apparent protest of monthly fees now being charged to satellite dish owners by HBO and some other satellite networks, was not seen in the Pacific time zone.

A broadcast engineer who saw a rebroadcast of the pirate transmission said that it looked to him as if it had been composed and broadcast on professional equipment, worth as much as $250,000.

"It was my impression that this came from somebody at a professional satellite facility," said Bob Abrams, vice president for operations at Los Angeles-based World Communications Inc., one of the nation's largest satellite transmission companies.

Abrams said that there are only about 100 facilities in the country capable of making the transmission.

The intrusion was immediately noticed at HBO's communications center on Long Island, N.Y., but it was not clear whether the hacker ended his own message or was forced off by HBO.

Soviets Seek Help To Fight Nuclear Fire

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government appealed for advice from two countries in fighting a fire at its Chernobyl nuclear power plant, which still may be spewing radioactivity into the atmosphere today after a disastrous accident.

The Soviets today called the accident in the Ukraine a disaster and said victims were receiving aid. A Foreign Ministry spokesman warned that travel to Kiev, 60 miles south of the plant, might be dangerous, but there was no confirmed word on deaths or injuries.

Officials in West Germany and Sweden said the Soviet Union had asked for help in the accident which sent a radioactive cloud above Scandinavia, more than 750 miles away to the northwest. An official of the West German atomic energy lobbying group said a Soviet diplomat asked that anti-radiation experts and medicine be made available.

Experts and officials in the United States said the disaster was almost certainly a fuel meltdown that caused fatalities, and that radioactivity could pose a long-term health risk in the area and possibly affect the Dnieper River.

The official news agency Tass first reported the accident Monday in a four-sentence dispatch saying one of the plant's atomic reactors was damaged and measures were being taken to "eliminate the consequences."

It did not say how serious the accident was or when it occurred. Abnormally high radiation levels were first detected Sunday in Finland and also reported in Denmark and Sweden.

A brief broadcast over Radio Moscow was the first information to day from the Soviets.

A government commission has been set up to investigate what caused the accident ... and efforts are being applied to eliminate the consequences of the accident and to help the victims.

"The disaster was the first one at Soviet nuclear power plants in more than 30 years," the broadcast said. "Drastic measures are being carried out to guarantee the power reactors' reliability and safety."

Manfred Petroll, of the West German Atomic Forum, said today the Soviet Embassy in Bonn asked for advice on how to fight a fire in a nuclear power plant.

"That must be the worst (accident) that has ever happened in the peaceful use of nuclear energy," Petroll told The Associated Press. His group promotes the use of nuclear power in West Germany.

"The Soviet ambassador was here at the ministry this morning and was offered all possible assistance we could give," West German Foreign Ministry spokesman Klaus-Peter Ringwald said.

In Stockholm, Frigyes Reisch, a reactor inspector at Sweden's State Nuclear Power Inspection Board, said Soviet officials sought Swedish advice on how "to combat a fire in a nuclear plant."

Reisch said in a radio interview said he was certain the reactor's fuel melted, which can occur when heat in a core builds up faster than it can be released, and radioactive material may be boiled off into the atmosphere.

Ulf Baverstam, senior scientist at the National Institute of Radiation Protection in Stockholm who appeared on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said: "The absolutely latest news is that the Russians have asked the Swedes to help them to fight a fire in their burning graphite reactor and evidently it's quite a huge accident that has gone on."

Council Members Still Undecided On City Election

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville City Council at a Monday workshop meeting failed to reach a consensus on how to proceed with selection of an alternate method of election for Greenville.

Councilmembers Lorraine Shinn and Janice Buck said they still viewed a 4-2-1 plan providing for four single-member districts and at-large election of two council members and the mayor as the best alternative to the city's current at-large election system.

Council member Nancy Jenkins said she was ideally favored the 4-2-1 plan, but said she realized the plan probably "would not fly" with the U.S. Justice Department which must preclear or approve changes in methods of elections.

Mrs. Jenkins said if the issue were put to a vote today, she would probably support a 5-1-1 plan. However, the councilwoman said she would like to look at additional information before making a final decision.

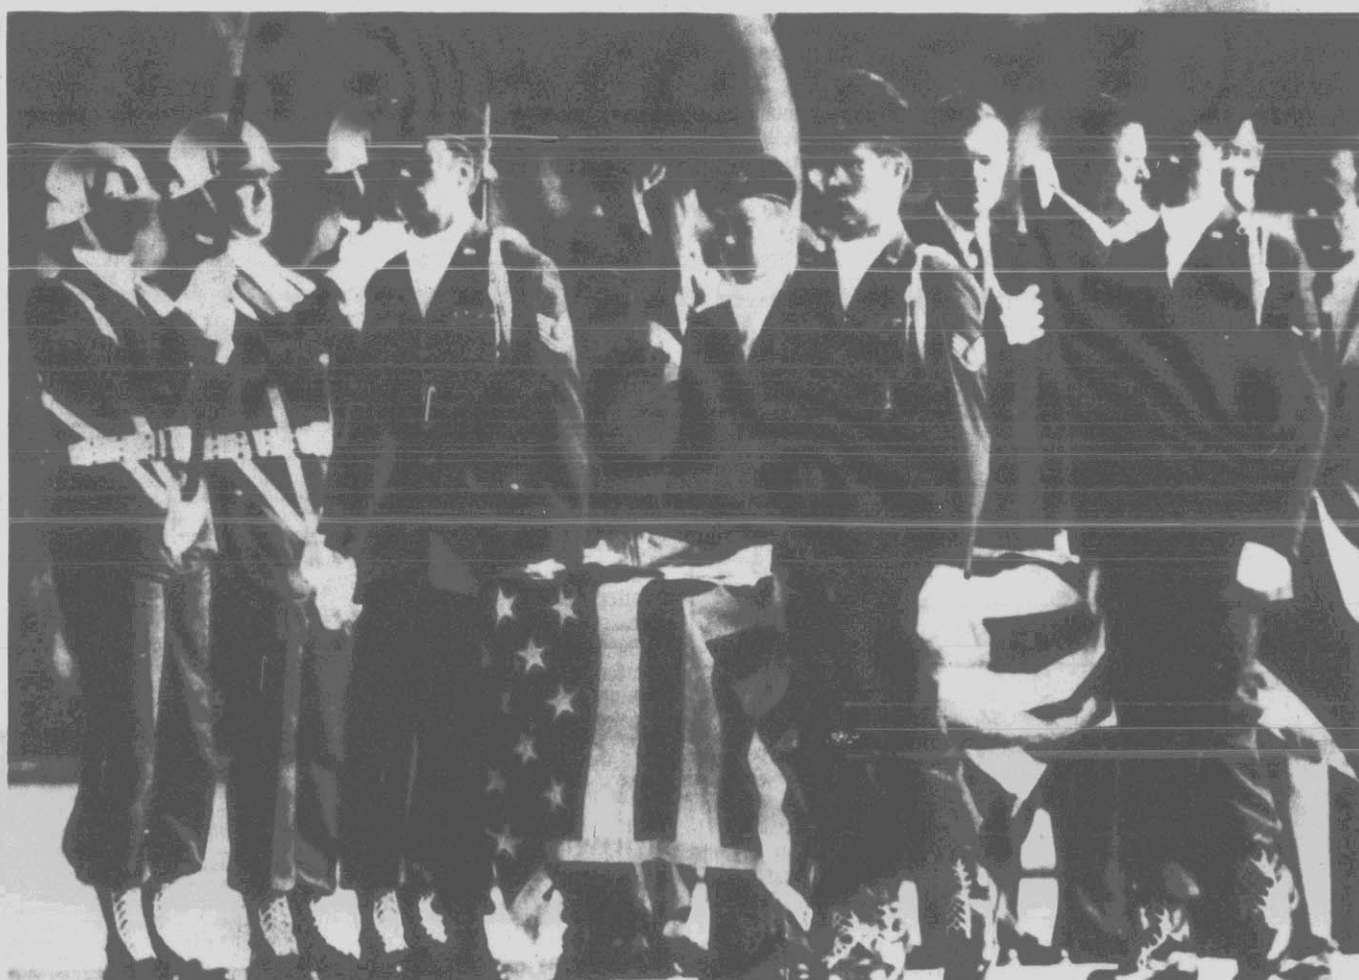

Identified by city-hired election system expert Bobby Bowers as the most likely plan to receive Justice Department approval, the 5-1-1 plan calls for creation of five single-member districts and at-large election of one council member and the mayor.

The 5-1-1 plan was also chosen by leaders of Greenville's black community as the best compromise of three election plans being considered by the city.

The third election plan, 6-0-1, is favored by Mayor Pro Tem William Hadden, who said he saw very little difference between the 4-2-1 and 5-1-1 plans.

"It (the difference in plans) is not enough to make an issue about," Hadden said, adding that he favored the 6-0-1 or straight district system because it is the "fairest" and provides area minority voters with "the

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Thousands of space center workers, many in tears, paid tribute to Challenger's seven astronauts today as the remains were flown in flag-draped caskets to Delaware to be readied for burial.

The workers lined roadways as seven hearses carried the bodies from a medical laboratory to a concrete runway built for triumphal space shuttle landings. The largest crowds were outside the Kennedy Space Center headquarters building and near the huge hangar where shuttles are assembled.

At the runway, with a military honor guard standing at attention, the coffins were loaded one by one onto a C-141 aircraft for the flight to Dover Air Force Base. There, NASA said, the remains "will be prepared in accordance with the wishes of the families."

Seven astronaut escorts accompanied the bodies to Delaware.

There were no bands, no speeches, just silence.

At 9:34 a.m. EDT, the aircraft departed — three months and one day after Challenger exploded nine miles above Earth as most of those who were here today watched in horror.

The Dover mortuary is the East Coast receiving and embalming site for remains of government employees, military personnel or their relatives. In most cases, autopsies are performed at the site of death and embalming, cremation or

Among those treated there were the 237 U.S. servicemen killed in the 1983 Beirut, Lebanon, terrorist bombing, the 256 soldiers killed in the December jetliner crash in Newfoundland and the 913 People's Temple members who committed suicide at Jonestown, Guyana, in 1978.

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

I have some old coins I might like to sell, but only if I can be sure of the true value. Where can I get the name of a reliable coin dealer? K.P.

Hotline has turned up no good sources. We checked with the American Numismatic Association and were told that this organization does not make recommendations of appraisers.

One collector did suggest that you check catalogs available at Sheppard Library. These should give you some idea about retail value, though you probably cannot expect to sell a coin to a dealer and get anything near that amount. He said the condition of the coin will play an important part in its value. Using addresses found in the catalogs to contact collectors, rather than dealers, might be your best bet, he said.

Advisory Panel Cites Progress By Police

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Police Department has made significant professional progress during the past two years, according to a report presented by the department's advisory committee at a meeting of the Greenville City Council Monday night.

"We recommend that the department continue on the present course of building a professional police agency representative of the quality and nature of our community," Dr. John R. Ball, chairman of the committee, wrote in the report.

The Police Advisory Committee was formed at the direction of the council in September 1985. The committee was charged with reviewing the activities of the Greenville Police Department from a citizen's perspective.

Ball, who presented the report to the board, said strides have been made to improve the police department's relationship with the community, but several things still need to be accomplished.

"The public image of the police department is considerably improved," he said. "However, there are some things that can be done to our benefit."

The police department should keep Greenville residents up to date with what kind of protection it is providing, according to Ball.

"In community relations, there has been some reorganization. We have to be more assertive instead of passive in getting information to the news media," he said. "It is important to have information available to the public."

Ball said residents should be well-informed about crimes in their area, but also should be reminded of successful police work.

"Very often, people hear about home break-ins and business breakins, but they don't get enough information about attempts to solve crimes," he said. "Some effort should be made to let people know about the concentration of crimes. They should know where the crimes are and what's happening."

Meanwhile, Ball said renovations at the police department in City Hall are necessary, but they are also an indication of a growing community.

"The renovations are occurring, and it is timely," he said. "But, if we look down the road, the council will, at some point, have to talk about a replacement."

Nuclear ...

Walter Patterson, an independent U.S. nuclear consultant, said on NBC-TV's "Today" that a fire still burning would imply "there is still radioactivity spewing into the air from it."

Zhores Medvedev, an exiled Soviet geneticist who appeared on the same show, said "there could be some fatalities from a kind of technical blast if it's happened, but from radiation people do not die immediately." He also noted that the plant is near the Dnieper River, from which Kiev draws water, "So it's very serious for this area."

Government-run radio in Hungary reported there were injuries and that Chernobyl is located at the conjunction of two rivers near the reservoir that supplies Kiev, which has 2.4 million people. The plant has four reactors cooled by light water and uses graphite to control the nuclear reactions.

Radiation levels in Sweden, Denmark and Finland appeared to fall today, but spokesman Torkel Bennerstedt of Sweden's National Institute of Radiation Protection said the levels might rise again.

Barry Smith, a research scientist at the British Meteorological Office in London, said light winds were pushing radioactive dust back toward the Soviet Union from Scandinavia.

Telephone calls to Kiev were difficult to get through, but a woman at Kiev's Lybed Hotel said: "Our government is doing everything to have no damage for our people. And as for our life, it is very normal and without any, any, any kind of strange events."

The woman, who spoke English but did not give her name, said traffic was normal and schools were open in Kiev.

Two trains arrived in Moscow from Kiev today and passengers said they had not noticed any signs of evacuations or disruptions.

One man who spoke on condition of anonymity said there were rumors in Kiev that a worker at the reactor had been asleep Sunday and failed to notice alarm signals indicating problems.

Asked about the possibility of travel by foreign reporters to the Kiev area, Foreign Ministry spokesman Alexander Sazonov said today, "I don't know whether it's possible right now because it may be dangerous."

But a spokesman for Intourist, the Soviet national travel agency, said there were no plans to cancel trips to Kiev.

Finnish construction company Lemminkainen Oy, which has 60 men building a factory in Kiev, said their workers reported everything was normal in the city.

In Sweden, the National Institute of Radiation Protection issued a traveler's advisory warning tourists planning visits to the Eastern Bloc to avoid areas between the accident site and northern Poland.

U.S. experts said fallout from the Soviet accident might be detectable in the United States by the weekend, but that the amounts would be too small to be dangerous.

They also said that health risks in the Soviet Union outside the immediate area of the plant may not be great.

Other officials said the accident at Chernobyl appeared to be far worse than the accident at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania in March 1979, the country's worst nuclear mishap.

Although Tass said it was the first such accident in the Soviet Union, Western analysts and exiled Soviet scientists have said there was a nuclear disaster in the Chelyabinsk area of the Ural Mountains in 1958 that killed hundreds of people and contaminated a wide area. The region is still off limits.

Soviet media seldom report natural disasters or accidents unless injuries and damage are widespread. Tass said a government commission had been appointed.

The Reagan administration said today it would be willing to respond to Soviet requests for aid in dealing with the problem.

Reagan's chief of staff, Donald Regan, who was with the president traveling in Asia, said the United States "could be helpful and would be if asked" by the Soviets for help.

In Finland, increased radiation levels were 10 times higher than normal, said Gunnar Bengtsson, head of Sweden's Radiation and Nuclear Safety Board. Danish and Norwegian officials reported lesser increases.

Neither Hungary nor any other Eastern European country, much closer to the plant site than Scandinavia, made public reports of radiation levels. Polish radio, monitored in London, reported today that a radioactive cloud passed high above northeast Poland on Monday, but said measurements indicated there was no health danger.

In Sweden, radiation levels between three and four times higher than normal were first discovered Monday morning during a routine check of a worker at the Forsmark plant, 750 miles northwest of Kiev, plant information director Lennart Franzon told The Associated Press.

"I know of no earlier nuclear power plant accident which has led to such high radiation levels in this area," said Lars Erik de Geer, of Sweden's Defense Research Agency.

Heath, a car driven by Margaret Blount Dees of Greenville collided with a car driven by Kristy Elaine Tooley, an East Carolina University student. Heath said the Dees child, who was in a child restraint seat, received minor head injuries in the accident. Ms. Tooley also received minor injuries. Heath said the Tooley vehicle skidded 288 feet before coming to a stop. Ms. Tooley was charged with failing to yield at a stop sign. Damage to the Dees car was placed at $3,500 and to the Tooley car at $5,000. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

"The building is bounded by streets and other buildings. If the town grows proportionately to our expectations, then it's not very long where this building will be unable to house a modern police department."

The council also reviewed transportation improvement priorities for presentation at the N.C. Department of Transportation public hearing in Beaufort on Wednesday.

Completion of all sections of a new U.S. 264 from Wilson to Greenville with simultaneous openings of the Farmville and Greenville Northwest Bypass and construction of a four-lane connector from future U.S. 264 to N.C. 11 south of Pitt Community College were among the 10 priorities included in the package to be presented at the meeting by Mayor Les Garner.

The board also received a resolution from Randy Doub of the N.C. Department of Transportation calling for Greenville's support of Gov. Jim Martin's "Roads to the Future" program.

The program, which is designed to bring new financial resources to meet North Carolina's long-term road construction needs, would be anchored by the implementation of savings efforts, the creation of a trust fund to provide a secure source of transportation fundings and the generation of $74.7 million in additional revenues next year with a 2.75 cent gasoline tax increase.

In other action, the board heard a report from Dick McKee, president of Evergreen, a non-profit development corporation in charge of the revitalization of downtown Greenville.

McKee told council members that a search for a new executive director is under way, and he expects to fill the position by June.

McKee also said surveys of goods and services, parking problems and potential residents are being conducted to assist area businesspeople and developers.

In the final action of the meeting, board members reviewed several revenue sources for the 1986-87 budget, including the abolition of Sunday Blue Laws, and the possible implementation of refuse, rescue and building permit and inspection fees.

A public hearing on the possible abolition of the Blue Laws was scheduled for May 19th at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chamber of City Hall, 201 W. Fifth St.

Republican Feud Breaks Into Open Over Ads

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

Animosity between factions of the state Republican Party has spilled into the open, with a group of GOP legislators wishing the death of the National Congressional Club in next week's Senate primary and the club saying it's the victim of "venom and spite."

A group of GOP legislators who support Rep. Jim Broyhill's bid for the Senate nomination on Monday criticized Broyhill opponent David Funderburk's campaign for using "political terrorism."

But a spokesman for the Congressional Club, which is running Funderburk's campaign, said the charges were orchestrated by Broyhill's campaign and showed that Broyhill was behind as election day neared.

Led by state Senate GOP leader Bill Redman, the lawmakers said Funderburk and the Congressional Club had distorted Broyhill's record in a stream of television commercials and public statements.

"This campaign is out of hand now, and we have had enough," Redman said in a news conference at state Republican headquarters. "We believe that when you have to tear someone down in order to get elected, you are not worthy of the honor and trust that go with that office."

Carter Wrenn, executive director of the Congressional Club, said, "It's the height of hypocrisy for a bunch of fellows to wind up and hurl a bunch of venom and spite ... and do it in the name of clean campaigning."

Flanked by state Sens. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, and Daniel Simpson, R-Burke, and Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, Redman said he had no fear that the hard-hitting Funderburk tactics would defeat Broyhill.

"People in my part of the state know he (Broyhill) is not a liberal," Simpson said. Privette said the Funderburk camp knew it was behind and had resorted to "desperation tactics."

But the Republicans said the Funderburk strategy was destructive to their party and state politics in general.

"This is political terrorism at its greatest point in North Carolina," Redman said. "It will keep a lot of good people out of politics if it is not cured."

Redman released a list of 31 other Republican lawmakers whom he said endorsed his remarks. He said many of the remaining 15 GOP legislators agreed, but wished to keep out of the fight.

Later, Redman exchanged sharp words with David Tyson, a Congressional Club operative and Funderburk strategist who attended the news conference and tried to get Redman to explain some of Broyhill's votes. Surrounded by reporters and television cameras, Redman pointed a finger at Tyson and snapped, "You people don't know what you're talking about."

The Funderburk camp repeatedly has charged that Broyhill is too quick to abandon conservative principle for political expediency, citing votes he has cast on issues ranging from abortion funding to a budget supported by Democratic House Speaker Tip O'Neill.

Wrenn said Redman had indicated months ago that if Broyhill began to lose his lead, Redman would act as a "hatchet man" for the Broyhill campaign so the candidate could maintain an above-the-battle posture.

"I have no doubt that the Broyhill campaign orchestrated" the legislators' news conference, Wrenn said.

Redman said he had organized the news conference on his own initiative, and had not discussed it with Broyhill. Redman added that Broyhill "doesn't need a hatchet man."

Ballenger said he hoped Broyhill would win by so large a margin that "the Congressional Club will no longer be a viable political image that can continue to bother us in our party."

The legislators carefully avoided criticizing Sen. Jesse Helms, who helped found the Congressional Club in 1973 to raise funds to retire his campaign debt from the previous year. But Redman said he had written Helms to urge him to restrain the club and had gotten no response.

In an earlier news conference, Funderburk said a letter Redman sent him last week chastising his campaign practices had cast "despicable" aspersions on Funderburk's Christianity.

Redman said his letter had made references to Funderburk's campaigning in churches but didn't impugn the sincerity of Funderburk's beliefs.

The letter criticizes Funderburk for "negative advertising" and "subtle deceptions," while praising Broyhill for a record of "helping other people up the hill." It closes by asking Christians to "... ask yourself which candidate exhibits the best example of Christ."

In a related development Monday, the chairman of the 10th District GOP and the district's seven county Republican chairmen announced they were endorsing Broyhill.

Party officials usually stay neutral in primaries, said Edgar Reading, Catawba County chairman. But he said the Broyhill endorsements were a gesture of protest against the Funderburk tactics.

Elsewhere, the Rev. Jesse Jackson told a news conference at Raleigh-Durham Airport that blacks should not feel obligated to vote for Terry Sanford instead of Ted Kinney in the Democratic U.S. Senate primary, despite Sanford's good record on civil rights issues.

Jackson Endorses Kinney

RALEIGH (AP) — Unlike Terry Sanford, Ted Kinney has been a victim of racial discrimination and is more deserving of the votes of blacks and whites who want to nominate a staunch Democratic advocate of civil rights, the Rev. Jesse Jackson says.

"The issue is not his (Sanford's) decency in the 1960s," Jackson said Monday in a news conference kicking off a two-day campaign swing through North Carolina. "The Senate race for 1986 must have its own merits."

Some black leaders in North Carolina have said they were supporting Sanford for the U.S. Senate because, as governor from 1961-65, he supported racial tolerance, while some other Southern governors championed segregation.

Jackson, who was a student at North Carolina A&T State University in Greensboro during Sanford's administration, said there was "no doubt that you would not see Sanford standing in school doors playing the Wallace." He referred to Alabama Gov. George Wallace, who stood in a school door to keep black students from entering in the early 1960s.

Kinney, a black real estate agent from Fayetteville, said at the news conference that he was "running to win," although he also wanted to make some symbolic points.

Blacks complain that the current system makes it hard for black candidates to be nominated. They cite the 2nd Congressional District primary in 1982, in which black attorney H.M. "Mickey" Michaux finished first in the first primary with 44 percent of the vote, but lost to Rep. Tim Valentine, a white, in the runoff.

Opponents Asks NRC To Block Harris Plant

RALEIGH (AP) — The regional steering committee of the Coalition for Alternatives to Shearon Harris has sent "emergency telegrams" asking the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to prevent operation of the Carolina Power & Light Co. nuclear power plant, a spokesman said today.

However, the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board today recommended that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission approve Carolina Power & Light Co.'s license to load fuel in the Shearon Harris nuclear plant.

Joe Gilliland, a spokesman for the NRC in Atlanta, said the utility still must complete testing, finish construction and demonstrate that it has completed all necessary modifications before it can begin operations. And he said the board's action was subject to appeal.

William Cummings, a spokesman for CASH, said telegrams were sent to NRC members late Monday night following reports of a nuclear power plant accident in the Soviet Union.

"Inadequate emergency planning, unresolved safety issues, construction and testing deficiencies and chronic CP&L mismanagement unacceptably increase risk of major accidents should Harris I reactor operate," the telegram said.

Copies of the telegram were sent to Gov. Jim Martin, House Speaker Liston Ramsey and state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, accompanied by an urgent request for their action in the matter, Cummings said.

Gilliland said the Soviet trouble would not affect licensing of the CP&L plant.

Health Officials Believe Hospitals Can Survive

RALEIGH (AP) — Reports of the impending death of small hospitals in North Carolina are exaggerated, say hospital officials who are specializing and trying out new ideas — such as opening a public cafeteria in a former grocery store — to respond to changing health care needs.

Spurred by increased health awareness, the growing popularity of medical clinics and a changed Medicare payment plan in which hospitals are paid a fixed amount for illnesses they treat, many hospitals are filling empty beds by offering new services, setting up satellite clinics and even offering "specials" on some medical procedures.

"The net result is that our small hospitals are being forced to re-evaluate," said C. Edward McCauley, president of the North Carolina Hospital Association.

"What we're talking about is providing health care in a different setting," McCauley said. "Health care today is more than a patient lying horizontally in a bed. More often, we're talking about treatment while the patient is still vertical."

Hospitals in Warrenton and Lincolnton have closed, and McCauley said a couple of others could close their doors in coming years.

Jim Bernstein, a rural health care specialist with the state Department of Human Resources, said about 20 small hospitals across the state have significant financial problems.

"My guess is that a number of small hospitals will have to completely restructure their services, or they'll have to close" over the next six to eight years, he said.

But McCauley said citizens are better served than ever before.

"I think what we're seeing, and will continue to see, is increased access to health care, with more kinds of providers," he said. "But on the other side, patients can easily become confused. If one can get through the maze, the options are there for a more complete approach to health care."

Across the state, the percentage of occupied hospital beds in North Carolina's 150 hospitals has dropped from about 79 percent in 1980-81 to 63 percent in 1984-85, the latest year for which figures are available, according to the hospital association.

"The changes are the result of a 'tremendous change in American lifestyle,'" McCauley said.

"People don't have to go to the hospital as much, and they're staying for less time," he said.

DSS employees Margaret Dixon and Susan Grimsley were approved. Their request must be approved by the Pitt County Commissioners.

The board members approved a resolution of support of DSS Director Edward L. Garrison proposal to change the policy for educational leave. Garrison's proposed changing to DSS policy to require a staff member's educational leave to be involved in obtaining a degree in the field of social work. The policy change also would call for the employee granted educational leave to work for the department one year for each semester's leave granted. The policy change will be brought before the board for approval at the next meeting.

Garrison told the board that the department's budget was presented to the Pitt County Commissioners April 15.

Hearst Hoaxes

Newspaper giant William Randolph Hearst was born on this day in 1863. Always anxious to boost sales, Hearst was delighted when he discovered troubles in Cuba. Hearst sent painter Frederic Remington to Cuba to get pictures of a "gallant revolution." Remington went, saw nothing, and wired back: "There is no trouble here. There will be no war. I wish to return." Hearst cabled back. "Please remain. You furnish the pictures and I'll furnish the war."

most assurance of electing council representatives."

City blacks have opposed adoption of the 4-2-1 plan because they feel it is too risky, said Ed Carter, the sole black now serving on the council.

Blacks have said that inclusion of East Carolina University dormitory population in predominately black districts recommended in the 4-2-1 plan could adversely affect chances of a minority candidate being elected. Percentages of black voting age population in those districts is also low, opponents of the plan have said.

The U.S. Justice Department, in reviewing proposals for change in methods of election, uses a 60 percent to 65 percent test for minority districts. If minority population in a district is over 65 percent or under 60 percent, governmental bodies requesting the change must present data justifying the deviation. Support of minority community members is also needed when proposals deviate from figures outlined as acceptable in the 1965 Voting Rights Act, which gives the Justice Department the authority to disallow changes in election systems that impinge upon minority voting rights.

Carter said Monday he would join with the black community and support the 5-1-1 plan, but said he still felt the 4-2-1 plan was the best alternative as it would give minority voters a voice in election of four city representatives — the mayor, two at-large council members and a representative from their district. Under the 5-1-1 plan, citizens would be able to vote for three city representatives — the mayor, one at-large council member and a representative from their district. The 6-0-1 plan would allow voters to select two representatives, one from their district and the mayor.

Councilwoman Inez Fridley said she also supported the 5-1-1 plan, because it appeared the 4-2-1 alternative would not receive Justice Department approval.

"Ideally I support the 4-2-1 plan, but you have to be realistic," she said. "It (similar plans to the 4-2-1) didn't fly in Elizabeth City or Wilson and it won't here." Elizabeth City and Wilson are currently engaged in battles over changes in method of election that were not supported by area minority voters and did not meet Justice Department criteria.

By nature, man tends to cling to his possessions. And when he is down to his last asset, he is extremely reluctant to let go. Unfortunately, that can be an expensive habit.

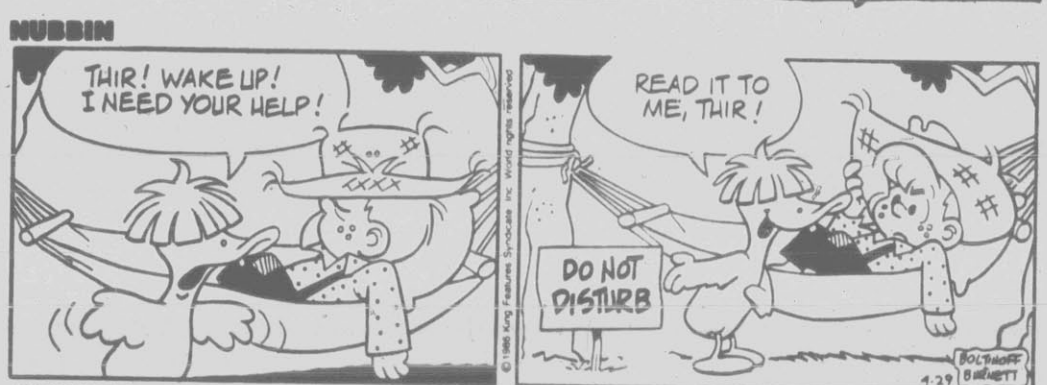

North's three aces made his hand much more valuable than its point-count suggested. Once the heart fit was uncovered, therefore, he pushed aggressively to slam via a cue-bidding sequence which uncovered the fact that all suits were controlled.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and declarer was not thrilled with his chances. The only way to avoid losing two spade tricks was to engineer an end play, so he was forced to rise with dummy's ace. East just could not bring himself to part with the king—a decision he was soon to regret.

Declarer cashed the ace of trumps, then took three rounds of diamonds, discarding a club from the table. The ace of clubs was followed by a club ruff, and declarer used a trump to return to hand for another club ruff. With the minor suits stripped, he simply led a spade from the board and hoped.

His wish was rewarded. In with the king of spades, East had nothing but minor-suit cards remaining. No matter which suit he returned, declarer would sluff his remaining spade while ruffing on the table, and so make his slam.

Note that, had East jettisoned his king of spades under the ace at trick one, the contract would have failed. East would be left with a low spade, and declarer would not have had a throw-in available. West would have had to come to two spade tricks no matter what.

No Oath Planned

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The man who claims to be Ferdinand E. Marcos' rightful successor said today he will not take an oath as acting president on May 1 as Marcos had urged.

"There are problems that must be settled first before I can take my oath," Arturo Tolentino said in a radio interview. He did not, however, say what the problems were.

Tolentino had said earlier he would take his oath at the "proper time," when he is sure the move is legal and enjoys popular support. He said he did not want to do anything simply because Marcos asked him.

Tolentino was Marcos' vice presidential running mate in February's presidential election that had been widely criticized here and abroad as fraudulent. The election triggered a civilian-backed military revolt that swept Corazon Aquino to the presidency and drove Marcos to exile in Hawaii.

In an address by telephone to 12,000 people at a rally here last Sunday, Marcos told his partisans he was the Philippines' legitimate president and asked them to hold a similar rally on May 1 to install Tolentino as acting president until he returns at an unspecified date.

Tolentino told the interviewer on radio station DZME he not only is not going to take his oath on Thursday but is asking protesters against the Aquino government not to hold a planned demonstration at Manila's Rizal Park, where Mrs. Aquino is scheduled to address a May Day rally.

"May 1st is a day for workers," Tolentino said. "Let us give the day to them."

Eight Regional Finalists Named For Journalist In Space Program

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Despite the Jan. 28 space shuttle explosion that killed the first teacher in space, none of the eight journalists chosen as Southeastern finalists for the first journalist in space expressed concerns about the dangers, judges said. "None of them had any thought of dropping out," said Richard Cole, dean of the University of North Carolina School of Journalism in Chapel Hill.

"Some of them mentioned Libya and Lebanon and figured maybe they would be in more danger there than those who would be selected for the shuttle," added Sam Fulwood of the Baltimore Sun, one of 11 Southeastern judges.

The five broadcast and three print journalists were chosen from a field of 20 Southeastern contenders Monday after what the selection committee called a tough process.

"I think all of us would agree that it was a very difficult decision to narrow it to eight," Cole said, adding that it took about two hours and several ballots to choose the eight journalists who will go to Washington where 40 national finalists will be narrowed to five.

The Southeastern finalists are: Jay Barbree, southern correspondent from NBC News, Cocoa Beach, Fla.; Marcia Bartusiak, a freelance science writer from Norfolk, Va.; Robert B. Navias, a correspondent from UPI Radio Network, Kennedy Space Center, Fla.; Alexander H.

Rossiter Jr., science editor of UPI, Columbia, Md.; Anne K. Sawyer, The Washington Post; Barry D. Serafin, ABC News correspondent, Fairfax, Va.; Jim Slade, Mutual Broadcasting System correspondent, McLean, Va., and James T. Wooten, ABC correspondent, Washington.

"They are people that we found could generate a story on deadline from space," Fulwood said.

"We were looking for somebody who had the ability to communicate effectively in two media: in print and in broadcasting," Cole said.

Harry Amana, a journalism professor at UNC and one of the judges, said the journalist finally selected will have "an obligation first of all to communicate the facts."

But he said many of those interviewed agreed the best reason for sending a journalist was because "the human side of it has not been told yet."

The judges said physical attributes played no part in the selection process, and although five of the eight have science writing background, they acknowledged it could either be a help or hindrance.

John Huey, a writer for The Wall Street Journal and a judge, said he believed no matter who is finally selected they would be a credit to the journalism profession.

Rossiter said he thought his experience reporting on the space program was an important factor in his selection.

"The competition was very tough,"

he said in a telephone interview from Columbia, Md.

Snyder said he was told shortly before 5 p.m. and was asked not to say anything until after the news conference, which was held a few minutes later.

"I figured I could hold my breath that long," he said from his home in McLean, Va. "I'm really thankful to get along this far."

"I'm surprised, frankly," Ms. Sawyer said in a telephone interview from the Post. "I don't have a clue why I was picked."

"It must have been an agonizing decision," Ms. Bartusiak said from her home in Norfolk, Va. "It was a good group. I'm just so grateful they gave me this opportunity."

The judging in Chapel Hill was the first of five regional judgments to be held. Eighty other journalists are in regional competition at Pennsylvania State University, the University of Kansas, the University of Iowa and California State University at Fullerton.

More than 1,700 journalists applied.

Indonesia Expels Reporters With Reagan

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent
BALI, Indonesia (AP) — President Reagan landed here today for talks with top officials of the non-Communist nations of Southeast Asia, his arrival marred by the Indonesian government's seizure of two Australian reporters from the White House press plane.

The president and Mrs. Reagan were escorted by President and Mrs. Suharto down a long red carpet from Air Force One to the "Gates of Bali," a stone structure at the symbolic entry point to the island.

Young Balinese women in traditional dress performed a ritual dance for their guests and tossed orange flower petals at the Reagans' feet before the two couples walked through the gates and proceeded toward the president's hotel.

In a tense but momentary confrontation minutes earlier, uniformed

Indonesian officials boarded the press plane, then summoned Richard Palfreyman and James Middleton to the door.

The two correspondents for Australian Broadcasting Corp., accompanied by deputy presidential press secretary Edward Djerejian, were led away to the airport's transit lounge. Indonesian authorities had warned that if the pair violated a ban on Australian news media representatives they would be expelled from the country.

The action, brought on when the two journalists made a last-minute decision to remain on the plane in Guam after being told they were not welcome in Indonesia, served to focus attention on human rights issues that neither the United States nor Indonesia had planned to raise in public during President Reagan's visit.

Djerejian said he explained to one Indonesian official the White House position that all 250 journalists accredited to cover the president's trip "should be permitted to do so."

He said the official "very politely told me the decision had been made and there would be no change in that."

Djerejian said two Australian consular officials who met the reporters told the correspondents that the Indonesians had asked the journalists to "transit the country" and that there was a possibility they would be put on a flight to Tokyo scheduled to leave about two hours later.

Other journalists on the plane, most of them Americans, were permitted to leave the aircraft to cover the Reagans' arrival despite warnings that they might be subjected to a lengthy customs check.

Journalists accompanying Reagan and other high officials customarily are granted "courtesy of the port" and are not required to complete all formalities before entering a friendly country.

Reagan, at an earlier refueling stop on Guam, told U.S. military families he was going to Bali to "reaffirm America's commitment to free markets and free trade."

During his three-day visit to the picturesque resort island of Bali, Reagan will meet with foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), a compact of six non-Communist trading partners, all intent on increasing trade with the United States.

The officials he is seeing, Reagan said, represent nations that have "in large part embraced human liberty, both political and economic, and in recent years the people of these nations have produced a remarkable record of economic growth."

But some of the member nations, including Indonesia, the conference host, have long histories of authoritarian rule, and U.S. officials said privately Reagan has no intention of pressing human rights issues during his stay.

"We will reassert our belief," Reagan said, "that in liberty, we can work together to bring still greater prosperity to the Pacific."

But in Tokyo next week, when he meets with leaders of the world's major industrial democracies, Reagan's message will be more direct.

"We will stress the connection — the necessary connection — between freedom and economic growth," he said, "and we will lay plans to expand world trade still further."

President Suharto banned all journalists working for Australian media, following publication of an article in a Sydney newspaper comparing Suharto's family with that of deposed Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos.

U.S. diplomatic efforts to win an exemption for two correspondents failed. But the two said on Guam that their own government had told them there was still a chance the Indonesians would relent.

Palfreyman said he and Middleton had received no indication that they would be granted permission to enter Bali. But he announced to his American colleagues here after getting the go-ahead from his home office in Sydney, "We're going."

Middleton quoted Deputy White House Press Secretary Ed Djerejian as telling him, "Come ahead" on the White House press charter accompanying Reagan. "You are welcome. Let's give it a shot."

Asked what they would do if the Indonesians refused them entry, Palfreyman replied, "Leave quietly."

Paul Wolfowitz, U.S. ambassador to Indonesia, met with Indonesian officials during the hour prior to the plane's departure to discuss the journalists' plight, but officials still refused to grant permission to enter Bali, said White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes.

Chief of Staff Donald Regan, commenting on the Soviet nuclear power plant accident announced Monday by the official Soviet news agency Tass, said the United States "could be helpful and would be if asked" by the Soviets to assist in dealing with the disaster. However, Regan said the Soviets had not asked for any assistance.

Although few details of damage or casualties have been provided, U.S. nuclear experts have said they believe there were fatalities.

"We have a lot of experience in how we can handle these things, both medically and scientifically," Regan said after speaking to Reagan about the accident.

Pentagon Says Reserves' Readiness Plan Failing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A voluntary muster of inactive Army reservists early this year confirmed the nation's Individual Ready Reserve is not so ready, underlining the need for mandatory annual call-ups, a top Pentagon official says.

The voluntary musters conducted in 13 cities have convinced the top brass of the need to improve readiness, said James H. Webb, the assistant defense secretary for reserve affairs.

"I'm real enthusiastic" about the mandatory annual call-ups, Webb said in a recent interview. "The Army has really stepped out on this. There was an awful lot of reluctance in the building (the Pentagon) to do this."

The results from the January musters show that the Defense Department has a serious problem in locating many of its inactive reservists and that 20 percent of those who report may not be medically fit for immediate deployment, Webb said.

Only about half of those responding to the voluntary call-up still had a complete uniform and only about half were able to pass the Army's Common Task Test of basic soldier skills. The latter result might not be very significant, however, because the Pentagon knows inactive reservists will require refresher training if there is an emergency, Webb said.

The Army mailed out 29,673 letters to inactive reservists asking them to attend a voluntary, one-day muster in January, Webb said, and 6,678, or 22.5 percent, showed up.

That figure is slightly better than expected for a voluntary system, he said.

What was distressing, however, was that 3,404 letters, or 11.5 percent, were returned as undeliverable, and only 82 percent of the soldiers who were sent Mailgrams confirmed receipt, Webb said.

Moreover, of the 6,411 reservists who were medically screened during the musters, 78 percent met Army weight standards and 5,195, or 81 percent, "were considered worldwide deployable by medical personnel."

"On the medical, these are not very good numbers," Webb said. "And they indicate that there may be a problem."

The Individual Ready Reserve consists of men and women who have been trained and served in the military but do not move into a regular Reserve or National Guard unit when they leave active duty. As a result, such individuals do not drill regularly with a military unit and receive no pay. But they are subject to the same obligations as their Reserve and Guard counterparts and can be recalled in the event of war until they have fulfilled their "military service obligation."

That obligation, including active-duty service, for those now entering the service is eight years.

Teachers Cite Low Pay But Prefer Short Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most teachers believe they are underpaid, but a large majority say they would rather work nine or 10 months than be paid higher salaries to work year-round, according to a new survey.

The survey also concluded that teachers "fare pretty well" when their salaries are compared with earnings of full-time, year-round workers, but that money is less important to teachers than it is to other American workers in judging job satisfaction.

The survey by Emily Feistritzer, director of the private National Center for Education Information, was based on a random nationwide sampling with responses from 1,144 public school teachers and 448 private school teachers. The survey was conducted between Feb. 7 and April 15.

Unlike most working adults who rank a good salary and job security as the most important aspects of their jobs, teachers say the most important things for them are the opportunity to use their minds and the chance to work with young people, the survey showed. Teachers ranked salary fourth, behind appreciation of a job well done.

"The survey revealed that we really do have a teaching force that is dedicated to the development of young children," Feistritzer said in an interview. "It is significant that teachers aren't in it for the money, and even if they were, they are faring very well in the market place."

The average salary among public school teachers who were polled was $24,559 this year, which, based on an average 180-day contract, is about $136 per day. The Census Bureau says the average salary of a full-time, year-round worker with at least four years of college is $32,216, which based on 250 working days a year amounts to $129 per day, the study said.

Salaries for female teachers, who make up 69 percent of the teaching force, tend to be higher than those of women with four years or more of college who are working full-time year-round. Male teachers, although generally paid more than their female colleagues, do not fare as well when compared with men of other professions with five years or more of college.

The study notes that teachers are more educated than the general working public. Four out of five public school teachers have completed five or more years of college.

Dissatisfaction with salary was widespread among the teachers surveyed, with 88 percent of the women and 85 percent of the men saying they were underpaid.

But the vast majority of teachers — 84 percent in public schools and 88 percent in private schools — said they preferred their nine- or 10-month contracts to a 12-month contract with more money. They preferred that even when offered the higher salaried option of teaching nine or 10 months and doing other professional activities for the remaining months of the year.

Asked what was most important on the job, 63 percent of public school teachers cited "a chance to use mind and abilities," 62 percent cited "a chance to work with young people," 54 percent said "appreciation for a job well done," and 51 percent said "a good salary."

Percentage of error in the survey was between 2 and 3 percentage points.

A Louis Harris poll a year ago found that 63 percent of employed adults cited "a good salary" as what was most important on the job, while 53 percent said "job security."

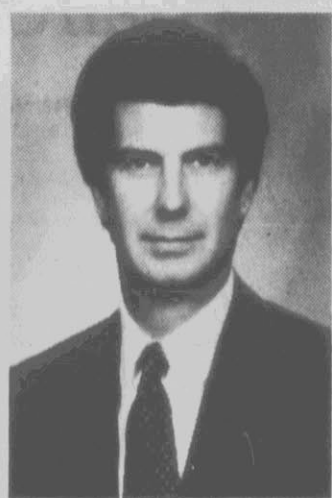

"Our overwhelming conclusion was that, whereas American workers in general gave top priority to money and job security in their work, teachers were a breed apart, marching to a different drummer," Feistritzer said.

While strides have been made in raising teachers' salaries, the problem remaining for educators is how to raise their status in a society that measures worth on a financial scale, she said.

"It is that society's loss, if over-emphasis on a status measured by personal income causes too many bright, enthusiastic young people to turn away from teaching because it is so widely and so persistently denigrated," she said.

College Giving Up

NEW YORK (AP) — The record $6.32 billion in private gifts to the nation's colleges and universities last year isn't enough to significantly slow tuition increases, according to an annual survey of such gifts to higher education.

The billions in donations from corporations, alumni and other sources in 1984-85 was up 13 percent from the previous year and a record, the Council for Financial Aid to Education said Monday.

Dernier's Power Lifts Chicago

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

With only nine homers in more than 1,600 career major-league at-bats, Bob Dernier was an unlikely late-inning power hitter, especially against a pair of hard-throwing relievers.

Dernier, however, brought Chicago back from a 3-1 deficit with his 10th career homer, in the eighth inning off Tim Stoddard, and a two-run double in the ninth against Goose Gossage, giving the Cubs a 4-3 victory over the San Diego Padres.

"You don't go up there with a whole lot of confidence against a guy who throws the ball 90 miles per hour," Dernier said. "You're looking to get on top of it, hit it well, and hope nobody's standing there."

In the only other major-league games Monday, St. Louis tripped San Francisco 5-4 and Los Angeles edged Pittsburgh 2-1.

Dernier said he expected nothing but fastballs from Stoddard.

"I played with Timmy in 1984, and I know he's going to challenge you," Dernier said. "He's that kind of pitcher."

The Cubs' center fielder also expected to see hard pitches from Gossage.

"I call it a country hard ball," he said. "That's what makes the game fun. He's out there to win, and most of the time he will. But there are times when he's going to lose, too."

The Cubs are one of five teams that are 4-5 games behind the New York Mets in the National League East, but Dernier said his teammates are confident after opening a road trip with a victory.

"It could be one of those games that turns the team around," he said. "It's fun to play against and with those kind of guys."

Padres Manager Steve Boros said it was necessary to call on Gossage for the third time in four games.

"Tonight wasn't the real Goose Gossage," Boros said. "I would have liked to stay with Stoddard. He's just in a stretch, especially here, where nothing seems to be going his way."

After Dernier's homer made it 3-2 in the eighth, Keith Moreland and Jody Davis singled against Gossage in the ninth. Gossage, 2-1, struck out Steve Christmas for the second out before Dernier lashed his double to the center field fence, scoring both runners.

Matt Keough, 1-1, worked the eighth inning to pick up the victory and Jay Baller retired the side in the ninth for his third save.

Andy Hawkins blanked Chicago on one hit through six innings, but he was relieved in the seventh when the Cubs scored their first run on an RBI single by Ryne Sandberg.

The Padres got an unearned run in the second off starter Scott Sanderson when John Kruk singled, stole second and scored when Hawkins' grounder to third went under Dave Lopes' glove for an error.

San Diego added two runs in the fifth when Hawkins' sacrifice bunt sent Garry Templeton home from third and Tony Gwynn's singled home Tim Flannery.

Dodgers 2, Pirates 1

Fernando Valenzuela allowed only six hits and struck out nine while Los Angeles managed two runs with the help of a balk and a Pittsburgh error.

"It's been a long time since I've seen a lot of runs," Valenzuela said after his second 2-1 triumph of the season. "But I don't care how many runs I get; I don't change my game."

Valenzuela, 3-1, took a four-hit shutout into the eighth, but a leadoff double by Sid Bream and two groundouts brought home the Pirates' only run.

Pirates starter Bob Kipper, 0-2, balked with the bases loaded and two outs for the Dodgers' first run in the fourth inning. Los Angeles added an unearned run in the sixth when Enos Cabell reached first on third baseman Bill Almon's fielding error, stole second and came home on a single by Mike Marshall.

Cardinals 5, Giants 4

Vince Coleman had three hits, scored two runs, knocked in one, stole two bases and threw a runner out at the plate, helping St. Louis snap a seven-game losing streak with a victory over San Francisco.

Coleman drove in a run in the 12th with his third hit after teammate Jerry White's sacrifice fly broke a 3-3 tie. The Cardinals needed the insurance run as the Giants scored in the bottom of the 12th and had the bases loaded before Pat Perry saved the victory, getting Dan Gladden on a long fly to end the game.

With the Cardinals leading 2-1 in the eighth, Coleman got his second steal, then came home from second base on a routine groundout to shortstop, beating first baseman Will Clark's throw to the plate.

"That was a play where I had to take a chance, but Whitey Herzog is a manager who doesn't mind taking chances," Coleman said. "I was watching the shortstop throw to first as I rounded third."

"I didn't do that last year. I had some opportunities but never tried it. I'm just aggressive."

Loosing pitcher Mark Davis, 1-1, committed an error on a bunt to set up St. Louis' winning rally in the 12th. Todd Worrell, 1-1, the third of five Cardinal pitchers, got the victory by pitching the 10th and 11th.

rights to offensive guard Gary Zimmerman to Minnesota for two second-round picks, including one the Vikings had just acquired from San Diego.

Zimmerman played the last two seasons in the United States Football League. The Giants had selected his rights in the 1984 supplemental draft of USFL players and negotiated with him prior to the 1985 season but failed to sign him.

Zimmerman and his lawyers filed suit in federal court challenging the supplemental but a judge ruled earlier this month that the draft was valid.

The Bengals used 13 minutes and 14 seconds before grabbing University of Washington linebacker Joe Kelly.

The 219-pound Kelly is a hard hitter with outstanding speed. An All-Pacific-10 Conference selection in 1985, he made 120 tackles last season after leading the Huskies with 151 in 1984. Kelly's father played with the Los Angeles Rams and an uncle played with Cincinnati and Houston.

Because of Billy Sims' knee injury, a breakaway running back reportedly was Detroit's major concern. The Lions, however, went for All-American quarterback Chuck Long of Iowa.

Long turned down a chance to turn pro after the 1984 season in order to complete his collegiate eligibility. He finished third nationally in passing efficiency last fall with 231 completions in 351 attempts for 2,978 yards and 26 touchdowns, all school records.

He also ranks third behind nationally Jim McMahon and Steve Young in career passing efficiency. Long holds Big Ten records with 10,142 passing yards and six touchdown passes in a game, 26 in a season and 73 in a career. He completed 753 career passes, more than any other Iowa quarterback ever attempted.

The Chargers, the first team to have two picks in this year's draft, took offensive tackle James FitzPatrick of Southern California, the 15th USC lineman drafted on the first round since 1968. FitzPatrick, 6-7½ and 280 pounds, was Southern Cal's Offensive Player of the Year in 1985.

Bethel In 14-2 Win

GRIMESLAND — Bethel Middle School and G.R. Whitfield split a pair of junior high school games Monday.

Bethel won the boys' baseball game, 14-2, behind the pitching of Randy House, who struck out 16. Malcolm Wiggins led the Bethel hitting with four.

Whitfield rolled up a 20-13 victory over Bethel in the girls' softball game.

Bethel, now 3-0 in baseball, returns to action on Thursday, hosting Farmville.

Rose Golfers Win Two; Chargers Take EPC Title

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School wound up its regular season with a pair of wins over Manteo and Elizabeth City Northeastern in golf Monday.

The Rampants finished the 18-hole round at Pine Lakes Country Club in Elizabeth City with a 309 team score. Manteo was second with 341 followed by Northeastern with a 358 total.

Simon Moye led Rose with a one-over par 73 while David Lee was a stroke back at 74. Greg Hallow added an 80 while Mike Herrin and Derrick Daniels each had 82.

Manteo's Neal Sullivan led the day's scoring with a three-under 69, but got little help from his teammates. John McDaniel was next with an 80, while Greg Ball had 95 and Billy Casper had 97.

Northeastern was led by David Hodge with an 85 while Clay Hodges had 86. Steve Umphlette had 90 and Craig Umphlette, 97.

Rose closes out the regular season with a 22-2 record, but 7-0 in Big East Conference competition. The Rampants will try and wrap it up at the Big East Tournament, to be held next Monday at Willow Springs Country Club in Wilson.

Farmville C.....	303
Ayden-Grifton	313
Pamlico	357

MINNESOTA — Farmville Central won the battle, but lost the war as Ayden-Grifton won the Eastern Plains Conference golf championship Monday.

The Jaguars captured the final conference match-up Monday at Minnesota Beach Golf Club with a 303 total while Ayden-Grifton was second at 313. Pamlico, the host team for the match, finished a distant third with a 357.

However, Ayden-Grifton's season total of 1,951 nipped Farmville Central by one stroke. The Jaguars had 1,952 and finished second. Pamlico finished with a 2,252 total. The championship was decided by adding up all six conference meets.

Darryl Baker led Farmville with a 73 on the day while Mark Williams had a 74. Tyson Warren and Parker Ledbetter both carded 78's.

Ayden-Grifton was led by Brian Heath with a 74, while Chris Brick had 76. Trae Wilson had 80 and Jeremy Shadle had 83.

Pamlico was led by Andy Silverthorne with a 77 while Kelly Walling had 91, Henry Rice had 92 and Blake Harrell had 97.

The all-conference team was also announced Monday, based on average strokes per round. Baker took first with a 75.2 average, followed by Williams at 76.6, Heath at 79.0, Silverthorne at 79.6, Wilson at 80.0 and Shadle at 80.2.

Farmville hosts West Carteret and Southern Wayne on Thursday at Farmville Country Club. Ayden-Grifton travels to Kinston on Thursday.

Conley.....	338
Havelock.....	338
West Carteret.....	339
Washington	345

Havelock and Conley tied for top honors in a Coastal Conference golf match held Monday at the Greenville Country Club.

The Vikings and Rams both finished with 338 team totals. West Carteret was a stroke back in third place with a 339 while Washington finished fourth at 345.

Jeff Johnson led Havelock with a 75, good for co-medalist honors on the day. Mike Rohlf's added an 86, John Moyer had an 87 and Mike Eddinger had a 90 to round out the Ram scoring.

Conley was paced by Johnny Pinner and Greg Siegel, each with 83. Hall Dunn added an 85 and Russ Edwards, an 87.

West Carteret was led by Dan Springfield with an 80. Steve Collins had an 84, Jeff Varner, an 87, and Grant Dudley, an 88.

Jason Cherry of Washington shared medalist honors with a 75 while Paul Manning had 94, Trey Wiseman had 92 and Matt Davis, 94.

There is one more remaining Coastal matchup, that set for next Monday at Washington. Meanwhile, Conley travels to Eastern Wayne on Thursday for its next match.

Seeks New Team Talent

A "Star Search" will be held tonight at Memorial Gym on the East Carolina University campus, as coaches seek new talent for team handball.

Three assistant national Olympic coaches will be on hand for the tryouts, Reita Clanton, Melinda Hala dn Mike Rizerto.

The tryout will be held starting at 6:30 p.m. in Memorial.

The three coaches were also to visit area high schools today to put on clinics and promoting the sport.

Former East Carolina women's basketball player Sam Jones never played the sport until after she completed his collegiate career, then quickly became a member of the United States National Team, competing in the Los Angeles Olympics.

The sport is somewhat of a cross between soccer, handball and basketball. It is played indoors on a court a little larger than a basketball court. Eight players per team try to dribble and pass the ball up and down the court and score goals. Each goal is defended by a goalie, as in soccer.

The sport is played by both men's and women's teams.

Soviets Plan Major Nuclear Expansion

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union relies on nuclear power to supply at least 10 percent of its energy needs, and Kremlin leaders have forecast ambitious expansion plans.

In a speech opening the 27th Communist Party congress in late February, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said nuclear power capacity would increase 2½ times over the next five years.

Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov told that same congress that by the end of 1990 nuclear power will account for more than 20 percent of the electricity generated.

There was no immediate indication by Soviet media or officials whether those plans will be affected by the accident reported Monday at the Chernobyl nuclear power complex north of Kiev. Few details of the accident have been released.

Soviet media do not provide full statistics on nuclear power production, but Western monitoring organizations say the Soviet Union operates about 45 reactors for public power production, most of which have no containment structures and use graphite to slow down neutrons.

The government claims to have built the first experimental 5,000-kilowatt nuclear reactor in Obninsk, southwest of Moscow, in July 1954.

The Soviet Union has focused attention on nuclear power production over the past two decades to make up for declining fossil fuel reserves in the Western part of the country. The nation is the world's largest producer of oil and gas, but oil production has been declining over the past two years and most of the reserves are located in distant Siberia.

The economic plan approved by the party congress last month calls for output of 390 billion kilowatt hours from nuclear power plants by the end of 1990.

Power output is targeted at 1,840 billion to 1,880 billion kilowatt hours, which means nuclear power will account for at least 20 percent of the total.

The February issue of the American Nuclear Society's "Nuclear News" magazine said in a survey based on responses to a questionnaire that the Chernobyl complex has two large light-water cooled, graphite-moderated reactors, each of 1,000 megawatts capacity, and two other 1,000-megawatt reactors of the pressured-water design.

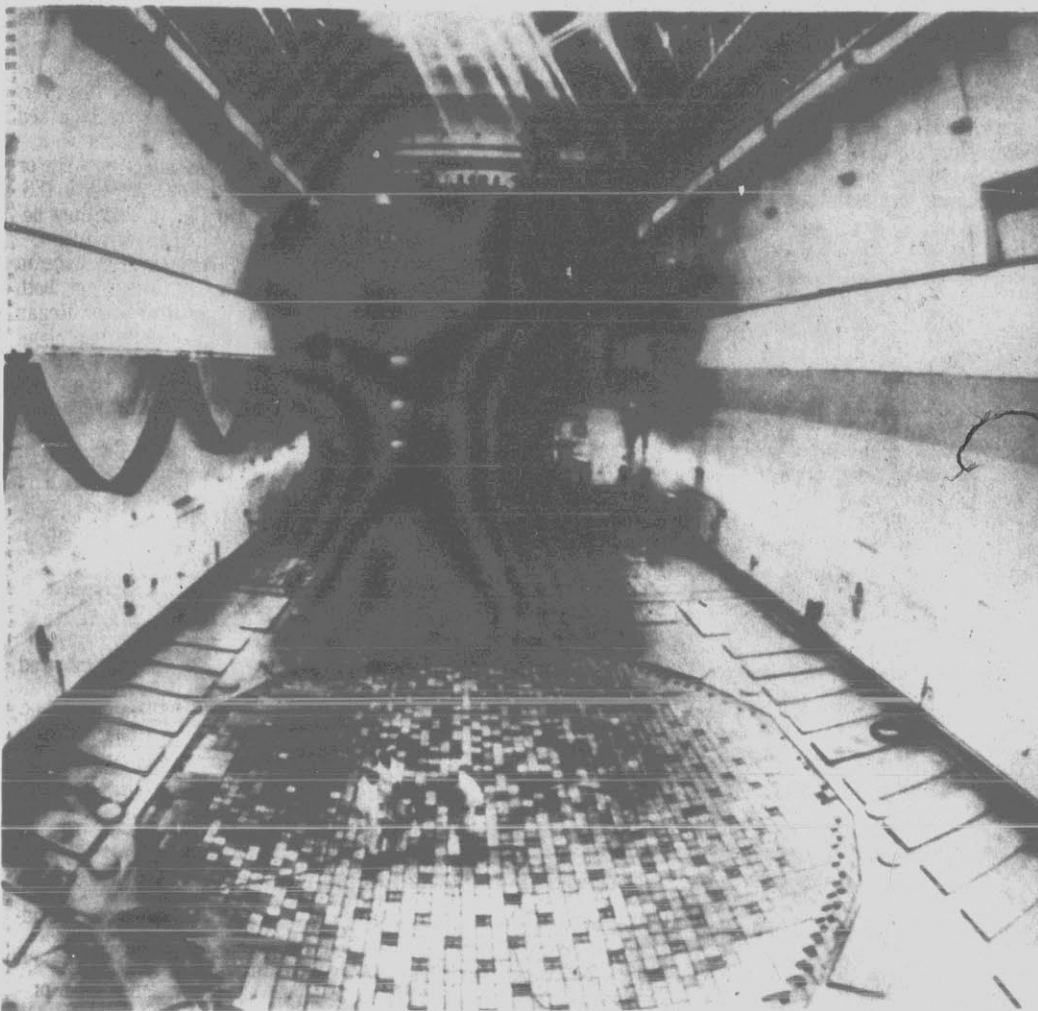

Graphite-moderated reactors usually do not have containment structures, according to Thane Gustavson, a Soviet energy specialist at the Center for Strategic and International Studies at Georgetown University.

The Soviet Union in 1984 agreed to allow outside inspection of some of its civilian nuclear facilities by the International Atomic Energy Agency. The formal agreement was signed in early 1985.

In July 1983, the Soviet government announced the formation of a special state committee to oversee safety questions in the industry. A brief report by the official news agency Tass said the committee was established in response to growing anxiety by nuclear power workers.

Power plant generators are produced in a huge factory near Rostov-on-Don. It has been assigned construction of six or seven generators a year through the end of this decade, but has failed to meet production targets in previous years.

U.S. Experts Say Fallout's Effects May Not Be So Bad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fallout from the Soviet nuclear accident might be detectable in the United States by the weekend, but the amounts would be so small they would not present a health hazard here, a U.S. nuclear expert says.

And even in the Soviet Union, health risks outside the immediate area of the accident might not be all that great, experts said Monday.

By the time fallout reached the United States, which could happen in five or six days, "there is no question there will be a sizeable dilution, there's tremendous mixing in the atmosphere," said Kenneth L. Mossman, who directs Georgetown University Medical Center's program in radiation science.

"It is likely that with sensitive radiation detectors, we might be able to pick it up," Mossman said in a telephone interview.

Charlie Porter, director of Eastern Environmental Radiation Facility in Montgomery, Ala., said monitoring stations in all 50 states would be watched more closely beginning today. The facility, with headquarters in Montgomery, is an arm of the Environmental Protection Agency which monitors radioactivity as it affects the U.S. population.

Porter said if the radioactive cloud ascends to altitudes of 15,000 feet or higher it would probably pass over the polar ice cap, move across Canada and into the northwestern United States.

"Based on past experience, if it gets high enough into the atmosphere so that it gets into the jetstream, the normal path it follows is across the northwest part of the country," Porter said today.

He said, however, that radioactive materials have been known to circle the earth several times before falling to the ground.

Porter said the EPA maintains ground-level monitoring stations in U.S. state capitals that measure the amount of radiation being absorbed by people.

"We're calling all the station operators and instructing them to begin taking daily samples," Porter said. Normally, he said, readings are taken every three days.

He said the EPA does not believe the cloud, if it passes into the United States, will be dangerous. But Porter cautioned that there is no way to be sure without knowing the scope of the Soviet accident.

The Soviet Union said the accident had damaged an atomic reactor at the Chernobyl power plant in the Ukraine. Radiation as much as 10 times above normal was recorded north of Stockholm, Sweden, and this included iodine and cesium compounds — both products of nuclear fission which would be produced in uranium reactor fuel.

The Soviets provided no information about injuries and damage caused by the accident, but government radio in Hungary said there had been casualties.

Mossman said the type of radiation detected in the United States and elsewhere could provide clues as to the nature and scope of the Soviet accident.

"The kinds of radioactive materials that were emitted might tell us about the nature of the damage to the reactor fuel. Depending on how badly fuel was damaged, depending what's in environment, it could help us analyze the type of the damage. But that's speculation on my part," he said.

Information director Lennart Franzon at the Forsmark nuclear plant north of Stockholm said an analysis of the radioactive emission will take a few days to conclude, but a preliminary report indicated graphite and cesium 137 were present.

Mossman and another expert, Richard C. Reba, who heads the division of nuclear medicine at George Washington University Medical Center, said the health risks to Soviet citizens might not be great even in a nearby population center such as Kiev, about 100 miles from the accident site.

"If the Three Mile Island accident is any indication as to the severity of health effects, I would imagine there wouldn't be much in the way of health effects," Mossman said.

The Three Mile Island accident near Harrisburg, Pa., in 1979 was a partial meltdown. No one was killed and very little radiation was released, but scientists are still monitoring the long-term effects.

With the Soviet accident "radiation injury is really not going to be a major factor," Reba said. Even if there had been a meltdown, he said, the dilution of water- and airborne radiation would minimize the health effects.

Soviets Had Unreported Nuclear Disaster In '50s

NEW YORK (AP) — The Soviet Union has never before admitted a nuclear accident, but the accident at a Ukrainian plant that leaked radiation as far as Scandinavia is not the first the Soviets have suffered.

An accident in late 1957 or 1958 near Chelyabinsk, in the Ural Mountains may have caused hundreds of deaths, forced the evacuation of several towns and villages and spread radioactive material over as much as 1,000 square miles.

Soviet authorities have never mentioned any such accident, but it was reported by the CIA and confirmed by exiled Soviet scientists.

"To the right and to the left as far as I could see was empty land," said Leo Tumerman, a Soviet physicist who visited the area in the early 1960s. He was interviewed in 1976, after he left the Soviet Union.

"The land was dead — no villages, no towns, only chimneys of destroyed homes, no cultivated fields or pastures, no herds, no people — nothing. It was like the moon for many hundreds of square kilometers, useless and unproductive for a very long time, maybe hundreds of years," he said in the interview.

The radiation apparently was caused by an explosion in a nuclear waste burial ground near Chelyabinsk, in the southern Urals, according to Zhores Medvedev, a Soviet biochemist who in 1958 was asked to help study effects of the radiation.

"Nuclear waste, stored in underground shelters close to the first Soviet military reactors, exploded somehow," Medvedev wrote in his book, "Soviet Science," published in 1978, after he went into exile in London.

"Radioactive products mixed together with soil were distributed by strong winds over a large area, probably more than a thousand square miles. Villages and small towns, covered by radioactive dust, were evacuated after some delay. Probably several hundred people died later from radiation sickness," he wrote.

More than 100 scientific articles have appeared in Soviet journals describing the effects of the radiation, without stating its cause.

The accident was first reported by Medvedev in 1972, who was stunned to learn it was not generally known in the West. It was confirmed by Tumerman.

In 1977, the CIA released censored documents supporting the claim of a large accident.

Meltdown Is Among Worst Accidents

NEW YORK (AP) — A meltdown, one of the worst possible nuclear reactor accidents, occurs when the core heat rises faster than it can be carried away, possibly boiling off radioactive fuel into the atmosphere.

That's what happened to some extent at Three Mile Island in the worst U.S. commercial nuclear accident in 1979, and what U.S. experts believe occurred at Chernobyl, near Kiev in the Soviet Union.

As the core temperature rises from its normal 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit to 4,000 to 5,000 degrees — as it did at TMI — it can melt elements of the sealed building, or containment. As the temperature continues to climb, the miniature sun that is the core of the reactor can itself melt.

As popularized in the movie "China Syndrome," the superheated fuel could melt down through the containment, vaporizing any water and sending radioactive steam into the atmosphere.

Fission products can be carried in the air by steam for substantial distances if there is no containment or if the containment is breached. At TMI, where up to 20 percent of the highly radioactive uranium fuel melted, little radioactivity was released, and most of that was in the form of unreactive gases that quickly lost radioactivity and dispersed.

Most radioactivity was held in the giant, super-strong containment building of steel and concrete, which is standard for all U.S. power reactors. Experts say the Chernobyl reactor may be of a type that does not have a containment.

Soviet Diplomats Propose New Round Of Arms Talks

(c) 1986, The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — Soviet diplomats, in an unusual news conference at their embassy here Monday, called for new East-West negotiations to discuss reductions of conventional and tactical nuclear forces in Europe "from the Atlantic to the Ural Mountains."

The call for new arms-control talks was based, they said, on ideas presented April 18 by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in East Germany.

Gorbachev said then that the Soviet Union was prepared to meet concerns of West Europeans, who said elimination of U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles in Europe, now under discussion in Geneva, would leave Moscow with an advantage in conventional forces.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said Monday that when Gorbachev first made his remarks, it was not clear whether he "was proposing a new set of negotiations or an expansion of the talks already under way."

Redman added that "our first priority is to negotiate radical reductions in strategic and intermediate-range nuclear weapons." In the latter talks, he said, the United States proposes a freeze on tactical nuclear arms.

Redman said parts of the still vague Soviet proposal appeared to cut across the Geneva nuclear negotiations, 10-year talks in Vienna that deal with reducing North Atlantic Treaty Organization and Warsaw Pact conventional forces, and the Stockholm discussions aimed at European confidence-building measures.

The Stockholm talks resumed April 15, while the Geneva negotiations are scheduled to resume May 8 and the Vienna talks May 18.

Carrier Enters Suez

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nuclear-powered carrier Enterprise was sailing through the Suez Canal today en route to the Mediterranean, where it will give the U.S. 6th Fleet a third carrier in the region for the second time in two months, Pentagon sources said.

The carrier and its escorts entered the waterway at its Suez City southern end before dawn in a special convoy escorted and followed by Egyptian tugboats. They steamed northward a few hours ahead of the canal's regular daily convoy.

Suez Canal authority officials said the convoy would leave the canal through the 22½-mile Port Said bypass and enter the Mediterranean at mid-afternoon.

However, no orders had been issued to form a three-carrier battle group or to prepare for additional military strikes against Libya, the Pentagon sources said, and the Enterprise had been ordered to the Mediterranean to allow the carrier Coral Sea to sail for home.

But the sources stressed that the movement of the Enterprise from patrol duty in the Indian Ocean underscored the administration's determination to maintain at least two carriers in the Mediterranean.

In order to move the Enterprise, the sources explained, the United States had to obtain special permission from the Egyptian government to move nuclear-powered vessels through the canal.

Pirates Set New Winning Mark

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Virginia Wesleyan outthit East Carolina, 10-3, Monday night in a non-conference baseball game that ended with a 9-3 score.

ECU lost, right?

Nope, the Pirates took advantage of seven walks, five Blue Marlin errors and a grand-slam home run by Mark Cockrell to come away with the victory — a record 35th on the season.

The win boosted the Pirates to 35-7 on the season, giving the 1986 the most victories in any single year. The old mark was 34, set in 1962 and tied in 1984.

And while it didn't look all that pretty, Coach Gary Overton felt his team played well. "We played with intensity and we played a fine defensive game — something we haven't done lately," Overton said.

"With just three hits, we had to manufacture runs any way we could and we did just that. The big blast really helped and made the score what it was," he continued.

Overton also had praise for the Wesleyan pitcher, Rex Roth and for his own Craig Van Deventer. "Roth is as fine a pitcher as we've seen this year — at least he was tonight." Roth struck out five and walked seven, but two of those were intentional and three came in the eighth inning when he finally was lifted.

Van Deventer, in gaining his eighth win against one loss, admitted that he didn't have his best stuff for the game. "It seems like some of the best games that I've pitched, I haven't gotten the decision, while I've won some of the games that I haven't pitched that well in," he said. And while he gave up ten hits, four of those came in the final inning, when he, too, tired. "I was just trying to get them to hit the ball on the ground, and they managed to get them through the infield."

Van Deventer has been one of the big surprises of the 1986 season. He had accounted for just three wins in his first two years, and had seen only limited action until this season.

"I thought I'd get to pitch more this year, and then when Daniel Boone was hurt, I figured I get even more. But I didn't expect to be 8-1 at this point. I've got the team to thank for that."

The team gave him perfect backing in the field Monday night, not committing an error and coming up with one double play.

East Carolina struck first in the game, getting two runs in the third. Those two — like the remaining seven on the night for the Pirates — were unearned.

Steve Sides led off by beating out a bunt down the third base line. Cockrell laid down a bunt in front of the plate, and the catcher's throw to first sailed down into the right field corner. That allowed Sides to come all the way around and Cockrell ended up on third. He scored from there when Jim Riley's grounder was errored.

The Marlins tied it up in the top of the sixth with two runs. With one away, Dale Hasick singled and after two were out, Jon Lester's double to deep center scored the first run. Lester advanced on a passed ball and scored on Tony James' infield hit.

The Pirates rebounded quickly, picking up two in the bottom of the inning. Greg Hardison reached on an error and was sacrificed up. Winfred Johnson was intentionally walked (he drew three, two of them intentionally). Mike Sullivan's grounder to second apparently wasn't in time to get Johnson, however, touching off a heated argument by VWC's coach with the field umpire.

Jay McGraw followed that up with a grounder that scored Hardison, but got Sullivan at second. The relay to first was overthrown, however, and Johnson trotted home two for a 4-2 lead.

The Pirates closed out their scoring in the eighth with five big runs, opening up a 9-2 lead. With one away, Chris Bradberry reached on a two-base error and Johnson was again passed to first. But with two away, McGraw walked to load them up. A passed ball scored Bradberry and Sides walked, filling them again.

Cockrell then finished it off with his grand-slam homer to left, putting the game on ice.

Wesleyan, however, did come up with one in the top of the ninth. Jeff Ashnault singled and James Morris got a hit. Leroy Parrish grounded into a double play and David Campbell walked. Sam Puryear singled, driving in Ashnault. Another hit, a grounder just past third, loaded the bases, but a fly ball finally ended it.

Wesleyan fell to 26-9 with the loss. East Carolina closes out its 1986 home schedule on Friday, hosting N.C. Wesleyan.

Bo Jackson Is First Choice In 1986 NFL Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Auburn running back Bo Jackson, who says he won't make a decision between football and baseball until after the major-league baseball draft in June, was taken by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on Tuesday as the first selection in the National Football League's annual college draft.

With chants of "Bo! Bo!" echoing through the grand ballroom of the new Marriot Marquis Hotel, Jackson, the 1985 Heisman Trophy winner, came to the podium and posed for photographers with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle before holding a news conference.

The 6-foot-1, 222-pound Jackson rushed for a school record 1,786 yards on 278 carries in 1985, including four 200-yard games. He holds the Auburn career mark of 4,303 yards.

During the 1985 baseball season, Jackson, an outfielder, batted .401 with 17 homers and 43 RBIs. However, he was ruled ineligible midway through the 1986 season because Tampa Bay paid his expenses for a football tryout.

An estimated 1,000 members of the public were in the gallery, more than in past years because of increased space.

The Bucs already have an top-flight running back in James Wilder and need help on defense but couldn't pass up Jackson, who is rated a franchise-type player.

Each team had 15 minutes to make its first-round choice, 10 minutes in the second round and five minutes in each of the final 10 rounds.

The Atlanta Falcons, using the first of two first-round picks, waited 10 minutes before taking, as expected, Oklahoma nose tackle Tony Casillas, the 1985 Lombardi Trophy winner.

The 6-2½, 277-pound Casillas, a two-time All-American, has been called Oklahoma's most dominant lineman since Lee Roy Selmon. His combination of strength and quickness makes it virtually impossible to block him with just one man.

The Houston Oilers, with the No. 3 pick, could use a big, strong running back. Instead, they selected Purdue quarterback Jim Everett.

The 6-5 Everett led the nation in total offense last fall with 326.3 yards a game. He set Purdue single-season record of 450 passes, 285 completions and 3,651 passing yards, just 20 short of the Big Ten mark. His career totals include 965 passes, 572 completions, 7,411 yards.

Indianapolis had been strong for Everett and had traded up two spots by swapping first-round picks with New Orleans. But the Colts traded with the Dallas Cowboys on Monday for quarterback Gary Hogeboom.

Using the pick they acquired from the Saints, the Colts took Jon Hand, a defensive lineman from Alabama.

The 6-6½, 283-pound Hand played defensive tackle in college and has been projected as an end in the NFL. He was named Lineman of the Year by the Washington, D.C., Pigskin Club.

Alabama Coach Ray Perkins compares Hand to the Dallas Cowboys' Ed "Too Tall" Jones. Hand made 17 "big plays" in 1985. His career totals include 234 stops, 27 behind the line of scrimmage.

Bell is an excellent athlete with great speed and outstanding strength — he bench-presses 450 pounds — who has also played inside linebacker. But he did not make any all-star teams in 1985, although he was honorable mention All-Big Ten in 1984 when he led the Spartans with 105 tackles, and it was something of a surprise when he was taken with the No. 5 over-all pick.

The sixth pick belonged to New Orleans as a result of the trade with Indianapolis. The Saints' top priority was a running back and but they selected offensive tackle Jim Dombrowski of Virginia.

A 1985 All-American, the 6-5, 296-pound Dombrowski was voted the Jacobs Blocking Trophy by Atlantic Coast Conference head coaches as the league's best blocker the last two years. In 1984, he became the first lineman to be named Offensive Player of the Year in Virginia by the Roanoke Times and World News.

Dombrowski also was a recipient of the NCAA's Today's Top Six Award, presented to outstanding student-athletes based on athletic ability, academic achievement, leadership characteristics and involvement in campus activities.

The Kansas City Chiefs weren't thrilled with the performance of rookie running back Ethan Horton last season. The Chiefs, however, decided to bolster their blocking and used all but 14 seconds of their allotted 15 minutes before picking offensive tackle Brian Jozwiak of West Virginia.

Jozwiak is a 300-pound giant with brute strength and excellent blocking skills who has the ability to dominate the line of scrimmage. He played defensive tackle before switching to offense in 1983.

The Minnesota Vikings used the entire 15 minutes before announcing a trade with the San Diego Chargers.

Minnesota surrendered its pick, No. 14 over-all, plus its third-round selection, to the Chargers. In return, the Vikings received one of San Diego's two first-round selections — No. 14 over-all, previously acquired from Green Bay — and a second-round choice.

The Chargers promptly took defensive lineman Leslie O'Neal of Oklahoma State. The 248-pound O'Neal played tackle in college but is somewhat undersized for that position in the NFL and is projected as an end with the Chargers.

He is a relentless, super-quick pass-rusher, the most decorated lineman in Oklahoma State's history and a two-time All-American. He made 108 tackles in 1985, including nine sacks, and his career totals are 183 solo tackles, 185 assists, 47 tackles behind the line for 274 yards in losses, 31 sacks for 219 yards. He also pressured the passer 92 times, recovered six fumbles, broke up 15 passes and blocked four kicks.

The Pittsburgh Steelers then took John Rienstra, a 278-pound offensive guard from Temple and a national power-lifting champion who has squatted 722 pounds, bench-pressed 501 and once held the national record in the dead lift with 738 pounds.

The Philadelphia Eagles, with a running back their top priority, took a gamble on Ohio State's Keith Byars. The 242-pound Byars was ranked with Jackson before the season but is a question mark because of a twice-broken foot.

Byars underwent bone graft surgery in February and there has been speculation that he may have to sit out a year. He was limited to three games in 1985 with 55 carries for 223 yards.

In 1984, he finished second to Doug Flutie in the Heisman Trophy voting when he led the nation in rushing with 1,764 yards, all-purpose running with 2,441 and scoring with 24 touchdowns. He also led Big Ten rushers in 1983 with 1,199 yards.

Byars set a school record of 274 yards against Illinois in 1984 and tied the mark of five touchdowns. He finished his career with 3,210 yards, caught 73 passes for 902 yards and returned 11 kickoffs for 362.

Before Cincinnati made its selection, the New York Giants traded the

Two Picked All-American

Two members of the East Carolina University's women's basketball team have been named to the all-American team by the American Women's Sports Federation.

Sylvia Bragg, a native of Richmond, Va., and Lisa Squirewell, of Wake Forest, were both named to the honorable mention list by the group.

Bragg, a senior, was three-time all-conference performer and was named as the Colonial Athletic Association's Player of the Year this season. Squirewell, also a three-time all-conference performer, was named as the CAA tournament's Most Valuable Player this season.
