Senate Hopefuls Face Voters Tuesday

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — An eight-month campaign in the decade-long struggle for "the heart and soul" of the state Repubican Party ends Tuesday as the GOP chooses either Rep. Jim Broyhill or David Funderburk as its Senate nominee.

Meanwhile, former Gov. Terry Sanford says he is "cautiously optimistic" he can capture the Democratic nomination without a runoff, but is preparing for the second election that many observers agree is likely.

North Carolinians also will vote in Tuesday's primary for House candidates in six of the 11 congressional districts, while 56 nominations for General Assembly seats are being contested.

Also on the ballot will be a proposed constitutional amendment that would move statewide and county elections from even-numbered years to odd-numbered years and a non-binding referendum on whether North Carolina should host a high-level nuclear waste dump.

Robert N. Hunter, director of the State Board of Elections, predicted last week an "average" voter turnout of 30 to 35 percent. Merle Black, a University of North Carolina political science professor, said a low turnout would benefit Broyhill and Sanford.

"They've got the support of the party regulars," who are most likely to vote, Black said. The bigger the turnout, the greater the prospects for an upset, he said.

A University of North Carolina poll in March showed Broyhill with a 42 percent to 9 percent lead over Funderburk. A third hopeful, white supremacist Glenn Miller, was preferred by 4 percent of those surveyed, and 45 percent were undecided.

Broyhill says his polls show him maintaining a big lead, while Funderburk says he's narrowed the gap significantly and could score a surprise victory.

The Broyhill-Funderburk brawl has been the most celebrated and widely publicized state GOP primary campaign since 1976, when the party's traditional and New Right wings clashed in the presidential nomination battle between Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan.

With Sen. John East, a Helms protege, too ill to seek re-election, the Congressional Club last September drafted Funderburk to run. A professor of government at Campbell University who had resigned months earlier as U.S. ambassador to Romania, Funderburk started unknown but moved quickly to establish himself as a "Jesse Helms conservative."

Broyhill, a 23-year House veteran, jumped into the race three days after Funderburk. Longtime standard-bearer of the state GOP's pro-business "old guard," Broyhill at first resisted leaving his safe House seat, but relented under heavy pressure from supporters.

Funderburk's campaign has been vintage Congressional Club. He's downplayed his Voters in Farmville, Falkland and several Greenville areas will cast their ballots for the candidates of their choice in new polling places on Tuesday in an effort to provide better facilities for Pitt County voters.

Pitt County Board of Elections officials announced that Falkland voters will vote in Ruritan Club Building due to difficulty in removing handicapped barriers at Falkland Presbyterian Church Fellowship Hall.

Falkland Elementary School Library facilities were offered and considered as an alternate polling place. However, the elections board agreed to use the Ruritan Building after club member Woodrow Wooten said improvements were planned for the building.

Farmville residents will vote in the Farmville Community Center on Main Street for the first time Tuesday, and Greenville Precinct No. 4 voters will cast ballots in the Fellowship Hall of Holy Trinity Church using the Higgs Street entrance.

Voters in Winterville Township who live within the Greenville city limits will vote in the new precinct known as "Wintergreen." The First Free Will Baptist Church, 2600 South Charles Blvd., Greenville, will serve as the polling place for the Wintergreen precinct.

The location of the Farmville polls was changed for several reasons, according to Margaret Hardee, supervisor of Pitt County elections.

"Farmville had been requesting a

NASA Explodes Straying Rocket

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An unmanned rocket carrying a weather satellite went out of control and was blown up by command from the ground shortly after launch Saturday, the second failure of a U.S. spacecraft since the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger.

Just over a minute after liftoff, the Delta rocket's main engine shut down, leaving it without guidance and careening out of control at 1,400 mph, said Bill Russell, NASA's Delta manager.

Safety officers then sent a destruct command "and finished the job," Russell said at a news conference about an hour after the launch.

A fuel leak in the rocket's main engine, which had caused a two-day delay in the liftoff, apparently was not the cause of the trouble, he said.

Saturday's launching of the space agency's most used and most dependable rocket took on added significance because of the Jan. 28 space shuttle explosion that killed its seven crew members and the explosion of an Air Force Titan 34D rocket in California on April 18.

"We have had a loss of the vehicle. There is a breakup of the vehicle," launch commenter Lisa Malone said as the 116-foot rocket broke apart.

The flight appeared normal through the first minute, with the first set of

Airport Bomb Kills 21 People

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — An explosion apparently caused by a time bomb tore through an AirLanka jetliner at the Colombo airport Saturday as passengers were boarding, killing 21 people and wounding dozens, the governmen announced.

Several Japanese and at least a half dozen Europeans from Britain, France and Germany were among the victims, according to state radio and other reports, but no identities were given.

The government issued a statement blaming Tamil militants, but police said no group or individual had asserted responsibility.

"It is ... suspected that a separatist terrorist group has been responsible for this explosion that claimed the lives of so many innocent people," the statement said.

"This is plain terrorism," said National Security Minister Lalith Athulathmudali who visited the scene accompanied by senior military officials.

The official Sri Lankan news agency Lankapuvath said the blast was believed to have been caused by a bomb in the rear of the plane. The explosion broke the plane in two, sent plumes of black smoke skyward and shattered glass panels in the main terminal buiding.

Officials said 24 people were injured, but witnesses at the airport put the number at more than 40. Lankapuvath said 12 of the injured were in critical condition.

Passengers were boarding the AirLanka L-1011 at 9:10 a.m., 20 minutes before the scheduled departure, when the explosion occurred, state radio said.

A Western pilot who spoke on condition of anonymity said he saw bodies lying on the tarmac and cargo, such as chickens and vegetables, strewn over the area. Passengers were running and screaming, he said.

Tamil guerrillas have been fighting for three years to establish a separate homeland in northeastern Sri Lanka, where most of the nation's Tamils live. Moderate Tamils seek autonomy for the region but not independence.

Trek Ends At N. Pole

NEW YORK (AP) — Six weary but exhilarated explorers who made the first trip to the North Pole since 1909 without air support and using only sextants to navigate returned to civilization Saturday with their two sleds and 21 dogs.

Their faces reddened by frostbite and sunburn from the 56-day journey, members of the expedition drank champagne and gobbled cookies as they flew from the top of the world to their base camp in Resolute Bay in Canada's Northwest Territories, said Jennifer Kimball, spokeswoman for

Jones Will Key ECU Exercise

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University will confer degrees on an estimated 2,612 graduates Saturday at the school's 77th commencement.

R.L. "Roddy" Jones of Raleigh, an ECU alumnus and former chairman of the university's board of trustees, will be the commencement speaker at traditional ceremonies scheduled for 10 a.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

An academic procession including the graduates in caps and gowns will enter the stadium at 9:40 a.m. Dr. John M. Howell, university chancellor, will announce the presentation of the annual University Awards to three members of the graduating class.

Jones, a 1958 ECU graduate, is president of Davidson and Jones Corp., a contracting and development firm.

Sixty-two candidates for the degree of doctor of medicine, a record number, are to be hooded at the school of medicine convocation Friday. In addition to the medical degrees, three doctorates of philosopy in the basic medical sciences are to be conferred.

Commencement proceedings will begin at 9 a.m. with a band concert under the baton of veteran music Professor Herbert Carter.

Farmville Dedicates Town Common To Walter Jones

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Farmville residents and local officials gathered at the Walter B. Jones Town Common Saturday to officially dedicate the revitalized public park in honor of the 10-term U.S. representative.

Beautification efforts for the common, which was originally named for Jones by Farmville Mayor W. R. Duke Jr. in 1976, were initiated by a committee headed by LaRue Moye.

"On July 6, 1982, the town board voted to make the Walter B. Jones Town Common a public park," Ms. Moye said. "It is to be forever dedicated to our congressman, Walter B. Jones."

The common has been landscaped and remodeled on the suggestion of architects, according to Ms. Moye.

"The dedication marks only the first half of this project," she said. "The other half is designated for a municipal office building which hasn't been started."

Ms. Moye said her committee

Child Abuse Affects Virtually Everyone

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

By the time her child is 10 years old, Judy Kornegay says she expects he will come in contact with at least one person — either stranger or supposed friend — who will try to take indecent liberties or harm him in some fashion.

"My only hope," she said, "is that I will have prepared him well enough so he will know how to resist, how to run away or seek whatever help he needs ... and that I can be there to help him."

A local attorney, Ms. Kornegay deals regularly with situations involving child abuse — approximately 15 to 25 percent of her case load involves child abuse or neglect in some form. Such contact, she said, has convinced her that abuse is something we all have to recognize and come to grips with.

"Parents can't be like ostriches with their heads in the sand and ignore the very existence of child abuse. It's a reality, I see it every day. I know its there," she said. Nor, she added, can parents let their fears concerning the safety of their children get in the way of normal relationships. "All we can do is prepare our children and hope when such a situation occurs, that they can handle it."

According to statistics provided by the Pitt County Department of Social services, 192 cases of abuse or neglect involving families or caregivers were reported to department officials in 1985. Of the 192 cases reported, 94 were substantiated and protective services were instated. People involved in unsubstantiated cases received services as well, including counseling and transportation — whatever was needed to help the family — a social services representative said.

Child abuse cases in which the perpetrator is a stranger are less frequent, according to Dr. Lesly Mega, a child-adolescent psychiatrist and associate professor with the East Carolina University School of Medicine. "That kind of abuse exists," she said, "but most abuse takes place at home and most of that abuse goes unreported. The figures we see represent only a small portion, the tip of the iceberg so to speak, of what really goes on."

According to Dr. Mega, abuse c

solid rockets being jettisoned at 64 and 65 seconds, Russell said.

"We were flying along, and at about 71 seconds, the main engine ... shut down," he said. "It's a very sharp shutdown, almost as though it were a commanded shutdown. Once you lose that, of course, the rocket has no stability control."

After the shutdown, the rocket began drifting, creating an angle of attack great enough that the faring, or shield, that covers its nose tore off.

There was no indication that a command had been sent to shut down the engines, he said. Preliminary data, such as turbine speed and temperatures in and around the engines, "all appeared to be very normal," Russell said.

"The three solid (boosters) were burning very well" after the main engine shut down, he said.

The three-stage Delta is assisted into space by nine solid-propellant boosters strapped to its bottom stage. The boosters are similar to those that help power the space shuttle and Titan 34D, but are much smaller and made in one section, rather than segmented like the others.

Investigators believe that the Challenger and Titan rocket explosions were caused by failures of joints between segments.

Morton Thiokol makes both the solid-fuel boosters used for the shuttle and the Delta.

The debris from the rocket landed in the Atlantic about 30 miles off Cape Canaveral, said Air Force Col. Elbert M. Thomas. There were no immediate plans to try to recover the debris, he said.

NASA could not immediately say how high the rocket was when it blew up.

The last 43 Delta launches, dating to September 1977, had been successful.

Earlier Saturday, engineers reported no sign of any further fuel leakage in the rocket's main engine, a condition that resulted in the scrub of the mission three hours before Thursday's scheduled liftoff.

The space agency said Thursday's launch would have been postponed even without the Challenger and Titan failures, but extra precautions at the Delta's launch pad and the two-day delay over the main-engine leak indicated the concern that everything go well.

NASA's acting administrator, William Graham, said earlier in the week that the launch was important because "we need this satellite and we need to remind ourselves that we have had success in the space program."

The Delta rocket has been the space agency's workhorse for almost 26 years, logging a 94 percent success rate in 177 flights.

Its payload was GOES-7, the Geostationary Operational Environmental Satellite designed to track and report the formation of hurricanes and other adverse weather conditions along the nation's Eastern Seaboard.

The $57.5 million satellite was to have been parked in a permanent 22,300 mile-high orbit above the equator over Colombia. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration paid NASA $42.5 million to launch it.

Weighing 998 pounds, GOES-7 was built to replace a similar satellite which went silent two years ago over the Atlantic. Another satellite of the series, GOES-6, has been performing double duty, reporting weather patterns along both of the country's coastlines.

But its service has been limited, and the newest satellite was expected to be particularly useful during the coming hurricane season because it would have been able to detect storms brewing in the Caribbean and lower Atlantic region.

GOES-6 was to be repositioned over the Pacific Ocean later.

When the shuttle became the nation's primary launch vehicle, NASA stopped production of the Delta. But several of the non-recoverable rockets remain in inventory, and four more launches are scheduled this year and next.

NASA is considering resuming production of the Delta and another heavy-duty expendable rocket, the Atlas-Centaur, because they are the only vehicles capable of lifting heavy payloads until the shuttle and Titan problems are resolved.

Abuse ...

take several forms including physical, emotional, sexual and neglect. Those abuses, she said, transcend racial and economic lines, "they appear in both white and black, rich and poor families," and as always, she said, "the child is the one who suffers."

Children, therefore, need to be taught how to handle improper advances or use of physical or emotional force by strangers, family members or other adults, Dr. Mega said. "But they also need to know that the majority of people are kind and friendly," she said.

According to Chief Ted Holmes, the Greenville Police Department — in recognition of the need to educate the public — has for several years been giving presentations on child abuse. Juvenile Officer J.E. Harris helps conduct the presentations for school children, civic clubs — for anyone who asks.

According to Ms. Harris, the presentations do have an effect. "They heighten awareness and make more people aware of what's really going on out there even though they might not like to admit it," she said.

Ms. Harris said, however, that increasing amounts of publicity on child abuse, its incidence and reports of more bizzare cases seems to have had a bad effect as well. "Particularly on nice people, older people ... who long for old-fashioned relationships with children ... and are now afraid to even talk to a child that's not related because they don't know what a parent might think or how a child might react. They don't know where middle ground is," she said.

There is a middle ground, according to Dr. Mega, who advises that people who want to enjoy children, talk to children, do so when the parents are around. And if you come upon a lost child, she said, don't be afraid to help. "Let's not take this thing too far," she said.

"This publicity can be viewed in a number of ways," she said, "I choose to look at it in the positive sense. The more publicity, the more awareness there is and the more likley people are to report abuse," she said.

If you suspect abuse or neglect, you must, as required by state statute, report your suspicions to the Department of Social Services, according to Ms. Kornegay. Reports, she added, may be made anonymously.

"The words 'must report' are used for a purpose," she said. "Not many people really care enough to open their eyes and call DSS, mostly because they don't want to get involved in what they see as someone else's business. But we must remember that children are involved here. If you don't look at it (abuse), don't report it, it won't ever go away."

helped to organize fund-raising events and to collect donations to finance the gazebo and walkways which now highlight the common grounds.

Farmville Mayor Edna Earle Baker called the beautification of the park a "great milestone."

"Through the help of the citizens of Farmville, we have been able to do all this work," Ms. Baker said.

Aside from honoring Jones, who has served in the House since 1966, Ms. Baker said the park has practical purposes for the people of the community.

"The whole idea is to have a place in Farmville for people to meet," she said. "We think it's one of the greatest things for us to be able to schedule special events here."

Ms. Baker said the newly dedicated commons will be used for weddings, concerts and other social events.

Meanwhile, Jones said he was proud of the grounds that bear his name.

"I feel honored and flattered. It shows that the people of Farmville and I have worked together through the years," he said. "It's a splendid idea, regardless of whether it's named for me, because it's a place for people to assemble and hold special events."

change for some time because the West End fire station was open and vulnerable to elements such as rain," she said. "And moisture on the electronic voting equipment can cause malfunctions."

Mrs. Hardee also said people who run the precinct, as well as firemen, preferred the move.

"Firemen said it hampered their operations, and precinct officials complained of flies," she said. "Since it was so open, they had no access control, so they couldn't keep out unauthorized people. There was also a parking problem."

The new facilities have several advantages, Mrs. Hardee said.

"The new polling place is air conditioned and has necessary telephone equipment," she said. "It has things we need like tables and chairs. It will save money for the county."

While Falkland voters will cast ballots in the Ruritan Building in the upcoming election, election officials sought to change the site because of inadequite conditions in the facility.

"Election officials wanted to move because the facilities were not in a good state of repair, but handicapped access was not approved at the new site, so we had to use the old place," Mrs. Hardee said.

Mrs. Hardee said permission to use the Falkland Prebyterian Church Fellowship Hall was contingent on having handicapped access.

"We ran into some difficulties, so the board decided to go with the old polling place since it is so close to the election," she said.

Meanwhile, Pitt County voters will be choosing all school board members in an at-large election for the first time.

"The law is very intricate involving the merger of the city and county school boards," Mrs. Hardee said. "The election of members for the newly created school system fall under that law."

Despite a delay from the U.S. Justice Department in awarding preclearance to the Pitt County Schools, Hardee said the Board of Elections is proceeding as planned.

"The law about the new school system is on the book, and we're going according to plan," she said. "No one has served paper of any kind ordering us to hold the election any other way.

"If preclearance is settled, and they order us to do it a different way, then federal law overides state law."

In the school board elections, incumbent J. Beverly Congleton is being challenged by Leonard Lilley in the 3rd Precinct, while Darrell K. Hignight, Levi C. Smith and Dale Manning will try to unseat Jim Black in the 6th Precinct. In the 7th Precinct, incumbent Walter E. Gaskins is running unopposed.

Something To Think About
Roderick M. Phillips
DIRECTOR
MENTION THE UNMENTIONABLE

There has been a recent trend, particularly among psychologists, in discussing and writing about death. Rather than being seen as a morbid development, the admission of death is actually considered rather healthy, AND practical.

On the personal level, one can remove death from the list of unmentionable topics by talking openly and frankly about funeral plans and making a Will. Including your family and loved ones in such a discussion will ultimately do more to prevent pain and anguish than any discomfort saved by leaving them in the dark.

Naturally, if you are married you should consult with your spouse. The same applies if you are a single adult living with a friend. You might be startled to find out that he or she often thought about the subject but was afraid to mention it to you for fear of being thought insensitive.

Reagan Demands Soviets Share Disaster Details

TOKYO (AP) — President Reagan publicly demanded on Saturday a full accounting of the Soviet nuclear accident at Chernobyl and U.S. sources said the European allies have privately insisted that Moscow share details of the catastrophe with them.

The sources also disclosed that Romania, an Eastern Bloc nation on the Soviet border, requested and quickly was promised U.S. technical help in assessing the damage from radioactive fallout from the accident in the Ukraine.

Individually, but with a unity NATO sometimes lacks, each of the West Europeans filed diplomatic demands through their embassies in Moscow for details they claim the Kremlin has withheld, according to the sources who disclosed the developments with the understanding they would not be identified.

The allies shared their concerns as leaders of the major industrial democracies convened in Tokyo for an economic summit dominated by talk of the nuclear accident and a U.S. campaign for support of its antiterrorism policy.

While there has been some resistance to Reagan's stand on terrorism, the sources said Reagan administration officials were gratified by the show of strength on the nuclear issue.

Reagan said the Soviets "owe the world an explanation" of the Chernobyl nuclear accident and prodded U.S. allies to work harder to combat terrorism.

On the eve of the 12th annual Summit of Industrialized Democracies, Reagan and Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, the summit host and chairman, agreed that the nuclear accident and terrorism should be on the agenda for the talks, said U.S. and Japanese officials who declined to be named.

Japanese officials have suggested that the United State help put the breaks on the falling dollar by intervening in currency markets.

Man Held In Hijack Of Airplane

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A man accused of commandeering a commuter plane and threatening to blow it up surrendered quietly Saturday after slashing his wrists, authorities said.

Douglas B. Thomas, 29, of Tulsa, Okla., was being held without bail at the Washington County Jail on hijacking charges after being treated for minor wrist cuts at a hospital.

None of the 11 other passengers or two crew members on board the Horizon Air twin-engine Metroliner were injured, and no weapons or explosives were found on board, said FBI agent Bart Gori.

Flight 2318, which originated in Medford and was en route to Portland International Airport, landed at Hillsboro Airport, 13 miles west of downtown Portland, just before 10:30 p.m. Friday at Thomas' demand.

Thomas boarded without a ticket and went undetected during a scheduled stop at Eugene's Mahlon Sweet Field, Gori said. Most of the passengers on the 18-seat plane had boarded at the Medford-Jackson County Airport.

George Bagley, vice president of operations for Horizon Air, said he did not know how Thomas boarded without a ticket, but that measures would be taken in Eugene to prevent such an incident from recurring.

"Even if we found out (how he got on) we wouldn't talk about it" publicly for security reasons, said Bagley, adding it was the 4½-year-old airline's first hijacking.

During negotiations with FBI agents, Thomas said he wanted to be flown to Phoenix, Ariz., Gori said.

"At no time did he indicate why he wanted to go there or why he wanted to hijack the plane," the agent said.

The passengers and pilots were held in the plane for nearly two hours after it landed at Hillsboro.

Federal Judge Blocks Sale Of Marcos Property In N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge Saturday issued a preliminary injunction preventing former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos from selling five New York properties estimated to be worth more than $100 million.

The government of Corazon Aquino, who replaced Marcos in February, is seeking to gain ownership of the properties, which include three Manhattan office buildings, the Herald Center shopping arcade and an estate on Long Island.

Morton Stavis, a lawyer for the Aquino government, called the action very favorable.

"It's a victory for the Philippine people and the American people because a very careful judge has in essence said you can't engage in theft and get off scot-free," he said.

"Documentary and testimonial evidence submitted by the plantiff gives support to the contention by the Republic of the Philippines that Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos misappropriated funds of the Republic," Leval wrote.

One of the defenses the holders of the Manhattan properties raised was that Marcos was immune from suit under Philippine law and further protected by the Foreign Sovereign Immunity Act.

But Leval said Marcos had not asked for the immunity and said none of the other defendants was entitled to raise that defense on his behalf.

Neither Marcos nor his wife appeared during any of the proceedings. They have been living in Hawaii since fleeing the Philippines in February.

The five properties were allegedly purchased on Marcos' behalf, and lawyers for the Philippine government have estimated their total value at well over $100 million. Marcos also allegedly owns other properties in the New York area worth an additional $250 million.

Also named in the Aquino government's lawsuit are New York lawyer Joseph E. Bernstein and his brother, Ralph J. Bernstein. The Bernsteins have been key players in Marcos' hidden control of the New York properties, the government alleges. The brothers have admitted representing Marcos and his wife, Imelda, in various real estate dealings.

Austrians Go To Polls

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The heated campaign for Sunday's presidential election has been dominated by allegations that candidate Kurt Waldheim, a former U.N. secretary general, covered up a Nazi past.

The allegations embittered the campaign, forced Austrians to confront their part in the actions of Hitler's Germany during World War II and again raised the issue of anti-Semitism.

The presidency is a largely ceremonial post and the main issue has become whether Waldheim's election would harm Austria's image. The latest polls give Waldheim an edge of as much as 5 percentage points over his opponent, Kurt Steyrer, who is backed by the Socialist Party.

In final campaign appeals to the country's 5.4 million voters, Steyrer stressed the theme that Austria needed a president who would be trusted abroad.

At a rally that climaxed his campaign, Waldheim drew prolonged ovations with assertions that he is the target of a smear campaign, set in motion by the New York-based World Jewish Congress and abetted by foreign news media.

"Our politics should not be carried out through slander and personal defamation," said Waldheim, who is supported by the conservative People's Party.

Although the polls show Waldheim ahead, there is a large undecided group and many Austrians have been upset by the controversy over his past.

Jones Says Paper Quoted Him Wrong On Suicides

By HAROLD JOYNER
Reflector Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., said allegations by a state Republican Executive Committee member who claims Jones incorrectly cited Pitt County farm-related suicides came about after he was misquoted in a bi-weekly newspaper.

C. Barry McCarty of Elizabeth City said Jones told a Manteo newspaper, The Coastland Times, "I (Jones) regret to say that six farmers in Pitt County committed suicide last month because they were unable to save their farms," and "I think of those six farmers and I know all is not well."

Jones told The Daily Reflector Friday that he had been misquoted, and it was the 1st Congressional District, not Pitt County, that had six farmers who committed suicide.

A spokesman for The Coastland Times said neither Jones nor his office had informed the newspaper of any incorrect information. The story did appear, however, in the April 15 issue.

McCarty, who is also chairman of the N.C. Social Services Commission, said, "the medical examiner's office in Pitt County knows nothing of these alleged suicides. Congressman Jones should substantiate his claim by naming the unfortunate farmers or publicly apologize to the president."

Information about the suicides, Jones said, was provided to him by his sources, though he said he had not seen any death certificates confirming the incidents.

The statement made in Nags Head was in light of the nation's "serious farm situation," Jones said. "I made the statement to let the people know the seriousness of the farm economy. I remind him (McCarty) that the situation did not exist prior to 1980."

McCarty also said "the nation's farm problems are not the result of Reagan adminstration policies — and he (Jones) is still up there advocating those failed policies."

Evergreen Effort To Hire Director Is Step Forward

News that Evergreen wants an executive director in place in June represents a giant step for Greenville's downtown revitalization program. It should be done as quickly as possible for three reasons.

First, by hiring an executive director, Evergreen will be effectively burying the Owen Kugel incident. With a $50,000 refund in pocket, the only thing the organization lost was a year of time.

Second, the salary of an executive director is a continuing investment in the future of revitalization. It gives the organization's board of directors local, tangible control over the course progress takes. The right individual will provide Evergreen with expertise in much-needed projects such as market surveys and recruiting. He or she will also directly supervise projects under way — a burden that needs to be lifted from the shoulders of the board of directors.

Third, the financial committment to an executive director should show potential investors that Evergreen-administrated revitalization is a sound venture — a place to sink their dollars.

With the Kugel mistake permanently behind them Evergreen officials, by promptly investing their refund in an executive director, can continue to promote economic growth. That task — not worrying over unfinished projects — is the organization's primary function.

Evergreen should expedite the search as much as is prudent and not postpone the decision on the new director past June. Fifty thousand dollars could buy a large chunk of supervisory talent. Greenville's revitalization can use that talent.

Small Hospitals: Way To Survival

Just about every other year somebody releases a report saying small North Carolina hospitals are an endangered species and warn of closings ahead.

This is one of those years when the forecast smiles on small hospitals. The message is that they will survive.

C.E. McCauley, president of the N.C. Hospital Association, says our small hospitals are restructuring their services and in the process are gaining in strength and survivabilty.

Small hospital closings over the years have come nowhere near glum forecasts; and for that, we're glad. McCauley says that while small institutions in Warrenton and Lincolnton have closed (and a few others might, but are struggling) most have found new ways to fill their empty beds.

These changes, says McCauley, are the result of tremendous changes in American lifestyles. People don't have to go to the hospital as much, and they're staying there for less time. "What we're seeing is a more enlightened awareness of total health care responsibility. As a result, there will probably be some institutions that cease admitting patients as the primary thrust of their operations."

His assessment makes more sense than statisticians' charts and graphs which cannot take into account changing wants and needs of individuals.

Sunday Morning Notes

The sea has been mysterious to man from the beginning of time. For centuries it was a barrier which protected the New World. Finally the barrier was overcome by adventurous men and women who opened up the Western Hemisphere to European settlement.

Since, the sea has been loved and feared by those who ventured on it. It has taken lives and at the same time sent voyagers to safe harbors. For many the sea has personality and moods, and for those who live near the ocean it plays a major part in their lives.

It was sobering when what was believed to be parts of the space shuttle Challenger washed ashore on Shackleford Banks in the very area of North Carolina's coast where Michael Smith, the shuttle's pilot, grew up. He had died in the crash and it was almost as if the sea were sending his old neighbors a message.

It would not be the first message from the sea for coastal residents.

Judge Charles Whedbee, a chronicler of life on the Outer Banks, wrote about Jim Baum Gaskill, who was raised at Ocracoke. His family lived at Pamlico Inn and Gaskill became a merchant seaman in World War II. His dream was to get his master's ticket, and his parents heard that he had and was captain of the freighter Carib Sea.

One morning his father walked out on the pier following a storm. He noticed a board bumping the pier. He pushed it away and it came back. He pulled it on the pier and rolled it over. There was his son's framed master's certificate on the board. The next day they found the name of the ship. The debris had come through the inlet, up the sound and into Silver Lake.

This was a time when German submarines roamed the Atlantic off the eastern coast of the United States. There were frequent ship sinkings off the North Carolina coast as World War II raged and oil from sunken ships often washed up on the beaches. Gaskill's friends and relatives knew the sea had delivered a message. Gaskill was dead.

It was also a time of secrecy and it was months later before the family was officially notified of the death.

Judge Whedbee says the board was made into a cross with Gaskill's name on it and placed in his church at Ocracoke and it is still there.

Ed Waldrop called to say he had timed the gates at the Seaboard Coastline crossing while waiting for a train to clear one day last week. He says the gates went down at 2:45 p.m. and the finally opened at 3:28, some 43 minutes later.

He said school buses, cars and other traffic were held up. "There should be someway for somebody to do something," he commented.

Sounds reasonable.

So Much For 'Openness'

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — So much for "glasnost," the Russian word that means "openness," which Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has said embodies his new policy of letting the locals know about bad news — officially.

The Soviet public has been told almost nothing of what still seems the worst accident in the history of nuclear power. There was a brief statement on Tuesday's evening news, which was reprinted verbatim in all the main newspapers Wednesday. It said that two people had died in the accident, that the situation was under control and medical care being extended to those affected.

It was the kind of statement that is meant to calm the public mood, but that may well end up by inflaming it. Russian friends have been telephoning me and other Western journalists to ask what is really happening — and to pass on the rumors that are now claiming that there are 2,000 people dying in emergency hospitals near Chernobyl, with another thousand being treated in special Moscow medical clinics.

But the Soviet authorities have not only been trying to keep the facts from their own people; they have brought upon themselves a diplomatic incident with their Scandinavian neighbors. The accident now began, it seems, on Friday night. The Swedes began picking up abnormal radiation levels Sunday and on Monday morning began making formal inquiries in Moscow.

At first, they were told lies. The Soviets seem to have had no intention of saying anything about Chernobyl disaster until the Swedish ambassador told their Foreign Ministry that a formal notification and complaint was going to the international atomic energy authority.

This bounced the Russians into making their curt announcement on Monday night, which was released about one hour after a Foreign Ministry official solemnly assured me that there was no nuclear accident — and the leak of radiation had originated in Sweden.

It is charitable to say that Soviet reticence was inspired by a fear of panic, rather than any reversion to their bad old ways of covering up any kind of bad news, such as the time when the official Communist Party newspaper Pravda refused to report the death of six building workers during the construction of the new Pravda offices.

But whatever the motive, it is a law of silence that can no longer be maintained. Within hours of the Americans announcing their satellite photographs showing the roof blown off the reactor and the smoke still billowing from the site, Russian-language broadcasts from Western Europe were beaming the information into the country. And the Soviet government's jamming can never stop all the wavelengths.

The Soviet people are increasingly impatient at being treated like children. After last autumn's earthquake in Uzbekistan, which was reported far more widely than the usual natural disaster, there were letters of complaint in the Soviet press asking why they had been told and shown so much more of the Mexican earthquake than of their own.

The answer, of course, was that the televison pictures of the Mexican quake came from Western cameramen. If there are Soviet camera crews anywhere near the Chernobyl disaster site, they are filing for a restricted audience. Recent combat footage from Afghanistan shown on Soviet TV makes it clear that there is nothing wrong with the courage or the technique of Soviet film crews. It is the political authorizations they need in order to do the job — just as the newspaper editors needed political authorization to print those letters complaining of bad coverage of the Uzbekistan earthquake.

The improvements that have come in the Soviet media over the past year have been pushed by Gorbachev, who made a key speech to party ideological workers insisting, "we must speak to the Soviet people only in the language of truth."

"Our fellow citizen of today is cultured and well-educated, he does not accept oversimplified answers, he easily detects falsity, stemming from an inability or fear to disclose the causes of problems which worry him," Gorbachev said.

The failure of the Soviet media to tell the truth about a disaster that could affect large parts of the country shows just how far Gorbachev's reforms still have to go. And the truth simply cannot be hushed up much longer. The Poles are pouring away their contaminated milk, and the Swedes and Finns taking precautions with their drinking water.

But there are more than 50 million Soviet citizens in much more contaminated areas than Poland or Scandinavia. And if they are not told soon to start taking similar precautions — and why they must — then it will no longer be a question of media policy or "glasnost." The issue will be one of a government's dereliction of duty to its own people. A docile press is one thing; a wilfully endangered populace is quite another.

A Blow To Nuclear Arrogrance

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The meltdown at the Soviet nuclear power reactor cannot fail to rain political fallout on the East-West strategic arms debate and perhaps, in Moscow, on much more.

There is a difference between a civilian accident and a deliberate military act, but the link is clear. The accident at Chernobyl is giving the Soviet and European publics directly and others indirectly the most authentic and bitter taste they have ever had of the experience of nuclear war.

This is no Three Mile Island, in which there was a nuclear accident and heavy expense but otherwise only a big scare. Here there are deaths, a plume of radioactive poison drifting over hundreds and hundreds of miles of settled land and across national frontiers, and a matching plume of immense medical, economic and political consequence, especially for Moscow.

The most urgent place where change may be registered is in the certainty that men can cope safely with the nuclear genie. Soviet arrogance, before the event, was unabashed. "Special indignation has been evoked by the fact that the energy monopolies, in chasing after profits, are not taking proper measures ensuring the safety of the functioning of nuclear powerstations," a Soviet commentator said when TMI blew. "We have successfully established norms and rules for plant operation," the deputy chairman of the Soviet Committee on Peaceful Use of Atomic Energy added. "Soviet safety norms simply rule out any escape of radiation."

Not only the norms for power plants must be checked. So must the norms for nuclear weapons. The Reagan administration says it has taken important strides in this area, but it must see what further strides can be taken. There is no call for uncontrolled hysteria in reviewing the making and handling of nuclear arms, but some controlled apprehension could be useful.

I have a lonesome long-nursed thought here. What good reason is there for the nuclear powers to treat as secrets the safety features of their weapons practices? Cannot ways be found to detach and exchange some of this information?

A serious inquiry, of course, has to go beyond procedures and plans. The freshened sense of nuclear peril makes this an opportune moment to review as well the moral attitudes underlying strategic policy. Joseph Nye's new book, "Nuclear Ethics," is the right guide.

Nye speaks to people who are prepared to live with nuclear weapons and deterrence for want of a better alternative, but who want to do it correctly. He undertakes to write rules of the moral road — examples: never treat nuclear weapons as normal weapons; minimize harm to innocent people.

The accident suggests a need for an additional moral rule: tell people when things go wrong. It is bad enough that the Kremlin, by concealing and delaying word of the disaster, inflicted additional suffering on its own hapless subjects. Withholding the word from affected foreigners was a hostile act, one that kept people from knowing of things vital to them and from doing what they could to make ready. None of this is to be excused as reflecting a supposedly inviolate cultural preoccupation with secrecy.

In part of the nuclear realm, through the Soviet-American hot line, Moscow has accepted an international responsibility for the timely communication of certain information. The principle must be extended.

Many people will probably find in the Chernobyl incident cause for new exertions in arms control. The effort may focus first on meeting Moscow's challenge to negotiate an end to underground nuclear testing, since testing suggests the menace of fallout.

It's somewhat illogical: there is no fallout from an underground test properly conducted. But testing — whether it be on the modest scale justified by the requirements of stable deterrence or the extravagant scale contemplated by the Reagan administration's weapons plans — will now be subject to a new burst of anti-nuclear feeling. It will not do to dismiss all of this feeling as an emotional reaction. To a point, fear is a sensible response to catastrophe. Business-as-usual detachment is a pose.

In Moscow, the disaster can only add to the considerations that were already summoning the Kremlin to concentrate on rebuilding at home. This is obvious. What is not so obvious is how Mikhail Gorbachev will handle his first genuine crisis. He is being blamed for a public-relations fiasco. This is among his lesser cares. He must organize a tremendous internal recuperation and find ways not simply to limit the damage abroad but also, if he is a true leader, to raise to a new level the international collaboration needed to make a safer nuclear world.

To the editor:

We often take for granted skills such as reading, writing, adding, and subtracting. These come so naturally to many of us that we tend to forget how we learned these skills.

This week, the National PTA is reminding us that we learned them all from teachers. May 4-10, 1986, is the third annual National PTA Teacher Appreciation Week. It is being observed by thousands of local PTAs nationwide in an effort to focus attention on the many contributions teachers make to our society.

While teacher quality and availability has never come under so much scrutiny as recently, we have discovered there are many outstanding educators whose work deserves to be applauded.

Teachers today are better educated than ever before — nearly half have master's degrees or better. Yet, according to a Rand Corporation study, one of teachers' major concerns is that they are not given the respect afforded other professionals with similar training and experience.

This week let's take time to show our appreciation for the good work being done in our public schools. Let's encourage our children and our community to thank teachers for giving the gift of knowledge.

To the editor:

As you may be aware, the use of polygraph in the private sector has recently been the subject of Senate subcommittee hearings. It is argued by some that the use of polygraph examinations by employers is a violation of an individual's constitutional rights. Fortunately for most of us, the Constitution in no way sanctions theft by an employee.

In the recent Senate hearings, F. Lee Bailey offered $25,000 to any member of the subcommittee who could "beat a polygraph examination." There were no takers, they did not question its accuracy.

An executive of Zale's testified that the amount of shrinkage in their stores in states where polygraph tests were not allowed was 25 percent higher than in stores in states where it was permissible. Who pays for these losses? You, the consumer.

It would be truly wonderful if everyone were a paragon of virtue and theft did not exist. This, however, is far from being the case. In the course of administering over 5,000 examinations, one gentleman admitted to embezzling $10,000 from his own father's business. Other examples are too numerous to mention.

Polygraph may not be perfect, but at this point in time, it is the best deterrent to theft for American business.

Points To Remember

Michael Putzel

BALI, Indonesia (AP) — When members of the White House staff traveling with President Reagan boarded Air Force One last week for a journey to the Far East, they found a sobering, pocket-sized card in front of their seats.

The card bears no letterhead, signature or other sign of origin, but its military origin is apparent.

On one side, printed in English, Japanese characters and phonetically in Japanese, are four requests for the traveler in trouble.

"Please take me to the nearest U.S. military base," the first one says. Others show how, by speaking or pointing to the card, one can ask to be taken to a police station, hospital or the American Embassy.

On the reverse side of the card are the same messages in English and Indonesian with a parenthetical note that there are no U.S. military bases in Indonesia.

The appearance of that card, which was not distributed aboard the civilian White House press charter accompanying the presidential entourage, was the second sign of the increased threat of terrorist attack.

At the entrance to Andrews Air Force Base, where the trip began, was another: a sign at the gate announcing a terrorist alert. "Threatcon Alpha — Actual," the sign said, informing those who understand military jargon that some minimal counterterrorist measures were in effect — such as checking the identification of everyone entering the base — and that this was not a test. Alpha is the lowest of four levels of terrorist alert, the highest level being an attack on the base.

Leaving the United States from Honolulu on Monday, the travelers found an even more ominous, sealed booklet at their seats addressed to "The Overseas Traveler" and bearing the seal of the U.S. Defense Intelligence Agency. Saying the booklet was prepared to make one's travel "as safe and secure as possible," the introduction on the cover explained the publication's purpose was "not to alarm, but rather to increase awareness and encourage good security thinking and practice."

In a notice reminiscent of "Mission Impossible" instructions that would self-destruct in five seconds, the cover instructed recipients, "After reading the above comments, please tear along the perforated line. Discard the cover in a Classified trash container."

What remained was a colorful brochure with a cover photograph of the Eiffel Tower at night and a host of suggestions running the gamut from the simply prudent — identify the emergency exits when aboard an aircraft; never pick up hitchhikers — to the more cautious — vary your routes, and don't stop if you come across an accident; drive to the nearest police station to report it.

And there is the somewhat more ominous suggestion that "in the event your return is delayed, make sure your personal matters are in good order and accessible to your spouse prior to your departure."

A recurring theme of the little manual is that travelers should avoid drawing attention to themselves and particularly their American nationality. Don't take flashy clothes. Leave business cards at home. "On a foreign carrier, avoid speaking English as much as possible." Don't flash your passport around.

"In some countries where Westerners are at risk, avoid restaurants where there is a known high concentration of Americans and Westerners."

If hijacked and asked to produce identification, "show something like a bank card. Avoid using your passport."

Under "Dangerous and Unforeseen Circumstances," the booklet advises that if hijacked, kidnapped or held captive, the victim should blend in with other passengers as much as possible, not make eye contact with the hijackers, keep answers short and "give passive cooperation."

"Loss of appetite and weight loss for a few weeks is natural" when being held prisoner, the hapless traveler is told in a section entitled "Coping With the Worst."

But in a somewhat optimistic note, the reader learns, "During a rescue operation, avoid sudden moves. The safest action is to drop to the floor and remain there until rescued."

Choices

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, one of the three chefs who cooked up the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings goulash, took aim the other day at his critics. People who oppose his deficit reduction scheme, he said, "are all people who do not want hard choices to be made."

Oh, Phil! That is hokum. The principal vice of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings is that in the crunch, the act absolves Congress from making the very "hard choices" that are the responsibility of our elected representatives. We want the hard choices to be made, and we pay members of Congress nice salaries to make them.

G-R-H is well-intended — almost everyone praises the goal of a balanced federal budget — but it is a cut-and-run operation. If estimates of spending exceed estimates of revenue, Congress is off the hook. Were outlays for libraries, legal assistants and rural housing reduced? "We didn't do it," says the law. "The computer did it." This is no way to run a railroad.

We saw another exhibition a week ago on how not to cut federal spending. Sens. Pete Domenici of New Mexico and Lawton Chiles of Florida dreamed up a little charade to entertain the Senate on an idle Wednesday afternoon. They offered a cutesy-wootsy amendment to abolish 44 programs in one fell swoop. The amendment was pure sham, intended primarily to embarrass their economy-minded colleagues. Both sponsors voted against their own baby and it went down to defeat, ho-ho-ho, by 83-14.

Domenici spent his time ridiculing the whole idea of abolishing the 44 programs. Killing them, he said, would result in savings in 1987 of "only" $4 billion. He cited some examples. To scrub the U.S. Travel and Tourist Administration would save only $6 million. To end trade adjustment assistance would save only $8 million. To halt weatherization subsidies would save only $18 million. Termination of a couple of programs, such as direct loans from the Export-Import Bank, actually would cost money in 1987. Domenici had a real good time.

Chiles had fun, too. He described the amendment as a "goodwill amendment." His only thought was to help the Reagan administration. The president had proposed elimination of the 44 programs. In a spirit of good-fellowship, he was glad to provide an opportunity for conservatives to put up or shut up.

Colorado's Bill Armstrong, one of the 14 who voted right, refused to be bullied. He said bluntly that Congress is doing a "miserable job" of deficit reduction. "It is my observation," he added, "that most people out in the country think that Congress is populated by a bunch of gutless wonders, and in general I think that perception is correct." There are many honorable exceptions, "but Congress is a body which is uniquely a reversed synergism: Somehow a group of thoughtful, well-informed, well-intentioned men and women come from all over the country and collectively they proceed to do something which they would not any one of them in their individual capacity dream of doing."

Armstrong has it exactly right. If Congress were serious about getting the government's fiscal house in order, members know precisely how to do it. They would refuse to abdicate to computerized across-the-board reductions. They would put their Wednesday afternoons to better use than crying nyah-nyah-nyah across the floor. They would make those "hard choices."

Chiles and Domenici, just fooling around, offered the Senate no choices at all. Some of the 44 programs may be worth saving. (I can't think of any, but reasonably minded folks will always disagree.) My own thought is that of course Congress should end subsidies for rural electrification; of course we should get out of Amtrak; of course we should end federal crop insurance.

Hard choices! They have to be made, but Congress is too soft to make them.

Matter Of Numbers

Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — Early one recent morning, on national television, the head of the nation's largest teachers' union and the U.S. education secretary got into a shouting match over numbers.

No, they weren't arguing about the answer to a logarithm problem. The issue was, rather, teacher salaries. Mary Harwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, contended that they were rising too slowly; Education Secretary William Bennett charged that, having risen 7.3 percent last year, teacher pay was increasing well ahead of prices in general.

Overall, partisans on either side of the televised war couldn't have been proud of the contentious display. Two leading educators don't do their profession any good yelling at each other like kids on a playground.

But the battle was even more distressing in light of a report released earlier in the week by the Census Bureau. At least 13 percent of all American adults can't read, the Bureau charged; only 60 percent of the nation's native-English speakers had correctly answered all 26 questions on what even its author conceded was a ridiculously simple test. (Twenty correct answers certified literacy.) The report's implications were enough to make the quibbling over teacher salaries seem small-minded.

Unfortunately, even the Census Bureau admitted that its estimates were conservative. Most education experts contend that the illiteracy problem is much worse. A widely respected study published in 1975 by the University of Texas, for example, found that nearly 20 percent of the subjects could not perform everyday adult tasks such as communication.

Meanwhile, Jonathan Kozol, author of "Illiterate America," told a news conference of the American Newspaper Publishers Association that 60 million adults "cannot read and understand the Bill of Rights" or, for that matter, newspapers and the Bible. Kozol told us the Census Bureau numbers had been deliberately cooked to justify a 50 percent cut in an already emaciated budget for adult basic education.

Ironically, two weeks ago, American educators marked the third anniversary of a report tht some say has had a profound effect on U.S. schools. Since a presidential commission released the report, "A Nation at Risk," 38 states have made graduation requirements more stringent (especially in math and science), 10 states have joined 20 others in mandating teacher certification tests, and teacher salaries have increased in all but one state.

One would hope that these actions lead to an improvement in the overall number and quality of high school graduates. Yet the Kozol and Census Bureau figures on illiteracy suggest that one can't throw money at education indiscriminately. Nor can a nation raise its standards of performance without casting aside an enormous number of students whom, for reasons of age and culture, the education system has effectively bypassed.

Yet as the infant mortality rate is to the overall health of society, the level or literacy is to a nation's ability to adminster itself. It is a measure of intellectual intensity and, in a democracy, of vital importance.

Illiteracy leads to civic indifference in some cases and, in others, susceptibility to demogoguery. Why else, for example, would Lyndon LaRouche's minions have pulled their Pearl Harbor in the recent Illinois primary? Why else would television be so powerful a force in American politics? One could argue that America's alarming level of reading dysfunction belies a dangerously casual approach to information and interpretation.

Teachers don't deserve the blame for the scary number of citizens (and non-citizens) who can't read English.

It's telling, indeed, that during President Reagan's first term, Barbara Bush, the vice president's wife, appeared to be the administration's leading supporter of higher reading standards.

RALEIGH — David Funderburk picked up some unexpected help in his race for the U.S. Senate last month from a Democratic Party official.

Funderburk has spent the campaign trying to discredit the conservative credentials of his opponent Rep. Jim Broyhill. He has repeatedly referred to a Broyhill vote in favor of U.S. House Speaker Tip O'Neill's budget.

When Rep. Tony Coelho of California, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, was in Raleigh in late April, he was asked if he wanted to stick his nose into the Republican Sente campaign.

Coelho, speaking tongue-in-cheek, proceeded to say of Broyhill, "I've always thought that Jim Broyhill was one of Tip O'Neill's boys, that he was an absolute vote for us. We always count on him in our column."

While Coelho, at that point, was mocking Funderburk's assessment of Broyhill, he later said seriously that he thought Funderburk would be a tougher opponent for the Democrats to beat in November. He also agreed with Funderburk that Broyhill deserves considerable blame for the legislation under which a nuclear waste disposal facility might come to be located in North Carolina.

Democratic officials in recent weeks have been expressing delight over the hard-hitting campaign that Funderburk has waged. While most are privately hoping that Broyhill will be the GOP nominee, they're cheering for Funderburk to continue his hard-hitting ads, thereby making Broyhill more vulnerable in the fall.

"Tony Coelho rhymes with Jello," she said.

In another political arena, Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington was trying to sell Gov. Jim Martin's highway program to a legislative committee when he was asked a provocative question by one senator. Harrington said he would try to answer without getting into a debate with the senator.

That prompted Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, to say, "We don't want any debate. I'm going to reserve that for myself."

Democrats Vs. Republicans

Gallup Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Although Sen. Gary Hart remains Democrats' top choice to be their party's 1988 presidential nominee, the wide gap that separated Hart and runner-up Gov. Mario Cuomo in January has narrowed considerably, and Cuomo is now in a stronger position to challenge Hart as the early nomination favorite.

Hart currently receives 39 percent of Democrats' first and second place nomination votes to 27 percent for Cuomo. In a mid-January survey, Hart led Cuomo by a commanding 25-point margin, 47 percent to 22 percent.

Next on the current list of possible Democratic nominees are the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Chrysler Corp. chairman Lee Iacocca, the choices of 18 percent and 14 percent of Democrats respectively.

Farther down the list are Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley (with 7 percent of the vote), New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley (6 percent), West Virginia Sen. Jay Rockefeller (6 percent), former Virginia Gov. Charles Robb (5 percent), and San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein (4 percent).

None of the eight other persons on a list of 17 possible Democratic contenders receives more than 2 percent of Democrats' votes. These include Govs. Bruce Babbitt and Mark White, Sens. Joseph Biden, Dale Bumpers and Sam Nunn, and Reps. Tony Coelho, Richard Gephardt and Patricia Schroeder.

The nomination contest among Independents currently is a statistical toss-up between Hart and Iacocca, with 30 percent and 24 percent of the vote respectively. Cuomo now is a fairly distant challenger, with 15 percent, as is Jackson, with 7 percent.

In the January poll, Hart garnered almost as many Independent votes for the Democratic nomination (35 percent) as runners-up Cuomo (19 percent) and Iacocca (18 percent) combined.

With almost two years remaining before the early state primaries, name recognition plays an important role in the potential candidates' standing with the Democratic rank and file.

The value of name recognition is illustrated by the fact that front-runners Hart and Cuomo are tied for the nomination lead among Democrats familiar with each man.

Possible candidates listed for the interviews were the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Gary Hart, Lee Iacocca, Mario Cuomo, Tom Bradley, Jay Rockefeller, Dianne Feinstein, Bill Bradley, Charles Robb, Sam Nunn, Mark White, Richard Gephardt, Dale Bumpers, Patricia Schroeder, Bruce Babbitt, Joseph Biden and Tony Coelho.

The latest findings are based on in-person interviews with 615 Democrats and 375 Independents out of a total sample of 1,552 adults, 18 and older. The interviews were conducted in over 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period April 11-14. For results based on the sub-samples of Democrats and Independents, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 6 and 7 percentage points respectively in either direction.

With the GOP convention more than two years away, Bush receives 51 percent of Republicans' nomination votes to 21 percent for Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole and 17 percent for his predecessor, former Sen. Howard Baker.

Farther down the list of possible nominees are Rep. Jack Kemp (the choice of 10 percent), former Secretary of State Alexander Haig (8 percent), former U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick (7 percent), and TV evangelist Pat Robertson (6 percent).

None of the 16 other persons on a list of 23 possible successors to President Reagan receives more than 4 percent of Republicans' votes for the GOP nomination.

These include Treasury Secretary James Baker with 4 percent, Sen. Jesse Helms, Sen. Richard Lugar and Illinois Gov. James Thompson, each with 3 percent. Receiving 2 percent or less are Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, Sen. Pete Domenici, Sen. Paul Laxalt and Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh. Also, Labor Secretary Bill Brock, former Delaware Gov. Pierre du-Pont, New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, Sen. Robert Packwood, former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, Reps. Newt Gingrich and Trent Lott, and New York businessman Lewis Lehrman.

Although the latest findings reveal no significant changes from those recorded in June 1985, two persons not included in last year's survey, Alexander Haig and Pat Robertson, now rank among the top 10, with 8 percent and 6 percent of Republicans' votes respectively.

The nomination contest is somewhat closer among Independents, who may vote in some states' GOP primaries, but Bush nonetheless emerges as their clear early preference. The Vice President is the choice of 35 percent of Independents to 14 percent for Howard Baker and 11 percent for Robert Dole; none of the others receives more than 9 percent.

With almost two years remaining before the early state primaries, name recognition plays an important role in the potential candidates' standing with the GOP rank and file. At present, only eight of the 23 names on the list are familiar to 50 percent or more Republicans. And only six pass this crucial test among Independents.

The latest findings are based on in-person interviews with 514 Republicans and 375 Independents out of a total sample of 1,552 adults, 18 and older. The interviews were conducted in over 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period April 11-14. For results based on the sub-samples of Republicans and Independents, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 6 and 7 percentage points respectively in either direction.

In addition to sampling error, the reader should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.

OWEN KINGSBURY JR.

President-Elect

Owen J. Kingsbury Jr., East Carolina University's scientific glassblower, has been named president-elect of the American Scientific Glassblowers Society of the United States and Canada.

His one-year term as president-elect begins in June. Next year he will assume the presidency of ASGS, which has approximately 900 members. For the past four years, Kingsbury has been director of the southeastern section of ASGS.

In August and September, he will accompany an ASGS delegation to an international symposium of scientific glassblowers in West Germany, Switzerland and France.

A native of Jersey City, N.J., Kingsbury joined the ECU Department of Chemistry as scientific glassblowers in 1970. His previous experience was with the General Electric Knolls Atomic Power Lab, Union Carbide Corp. and Vanderbilt University.

Kingsbury will continue as chairman of ASGS's Dana Sampson Awards committee and as chairman of the society's audio-visual committee, posts he has held for the past several years.

Sizemore To Speak

Chris Sizemore, subject of the movie, "Three Faces of Eve," will speak at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Allied Health Auditorium, Belk Building, Charles Street

Mrs. Sizemore spent 45 years of her life wrestling with 22 personalities whose ages, physical appearances, intelligence, interests, temperaments and skills varied. Today she is one person and travels throughout the country to promote better understanding of mental illness and offer hope to others. In 1982 she received the National Mental Health Association's Clifford W. Beers Award for her efforts to dispel the stigma of mental illness.

She is the author of the 1977 best seller, "I'm Eve," written after her personalities were integrated into one through years of therapy and support from her family.

'Species Day' Celebration Held At Park

By HAROLD JOYNER
Reflector Staff Writer

Children and adults gathered Saturday at River Park North in celebration of a community-wide project, "All Species Day."

Some children made animal masks, while others listened to area story tellers speak about the importance of animals.

The event, headed up by local educators, was sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, the Sierra Club and the League of Women Voters.

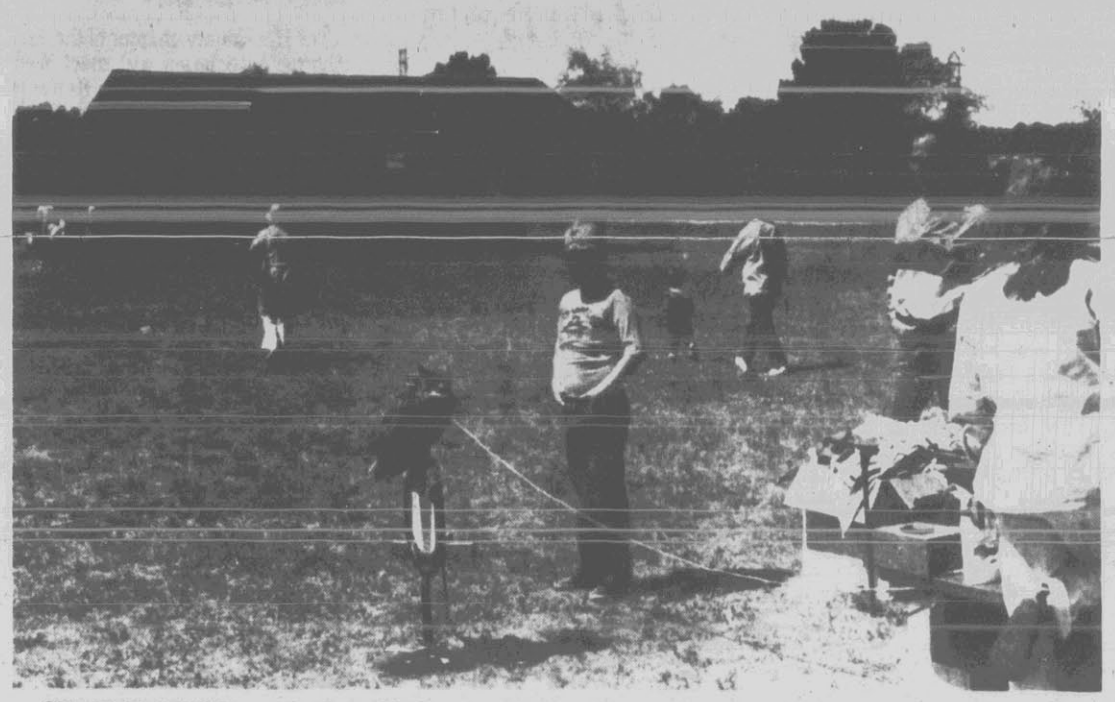
Amy Hannon, who was dressed as Mother Nature, organized an event at Sadie Saulter Elementary School last year. "The project went really well, so I decided it would be nice to make it into a community project," she said Saturday.

Planning began in January, a grant was given by the N.C. Humanities Commission and live animal demonstrators from the N.C. Museum of History, N.C. Raptor Center and East Carolina University were contacted.

Story tellers from the area explained to children how important animals were to a primitive culture. "Today, man takes animals for granted, and they are eventually being wiped out," Ms. Hannon said.

The gathering was not only for children. Ms. Hannon cited the importance of older people telling their children about the significance of preserving species. "I hope the adults will spend their time and attention to children in passing the tradition of animal conservation, and while doing so, they are protecting their child's future," she said.

At first sight of the animals, Ms. Hannon said the children were "afraid. Then they were surprised, and afterward, they didn't want to leave them alone."



CELEBRATION — Various birds of prey, including the Great Horned Owl, were displayed at "All Species Day 1986" held Saturday at River Park North. The day's events included live animal demonstrations, mask making and story telling. At the end of the event, the children lined up and paraded around the park. Accidents

Four traffic mishaps were reported to the Greenville Police Department Friday and Saturday, according to police reports.

Three cars driven by Peggy Lynn Smith of Carriage House Apartments, Jennifer Lynn Ryran of Raleigh and John Wesley Carpenter of 1508 E. Fourth St. collided Friday at about 4:20 p.m. on West Fifth Street. Investigating officers set damages to the Ryran car at $200 and $1,300 to the Carpenter car. Ms. Smith's vechicle did not receive any damage, officers said. Carpenter was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

Bike Thefts

Two bike thefts were reported to the Greenville Police Department Saturday.

At 8:17 a.m., a GTX racing bike valued at about $450 was stolen from a residence at 2617 S. Wright Road. Greenville police also said at 2607 S. Wright Road, a boy's bike valued at about $130 was reported stolen at 10:52 a.m. the same day.

A city-owned vechicle driven by Greenville police officer L.R. Kepler III collided with an embankment on Plant Street at about 4:54 p.m. Friday. According to Sgt. M.C. Jernigan, damages to the car were set at $650.

Two Killed In Accidents

By The Associated Press

Two people were killed in single-car accidents on North Carolina roads and highways during the weekend, the state Highway Patrol reported Saturday.

Kenneth Paul Thompson, 24, of Mount Gilead, died Saturday about 3 a.m. when his car ran off a rural paved road 2.3 miles north of Mount Gilead and overturned in a ditch, troopers said.

Paulette Ann Milliken, 21, of Supply, was killed about 1 a.m. Saturday when her car struck a power pole off N.C. 131, about 5.6 miles north of Whiteville, troopers said.

The fatalities bring the death toll for the year in North Carolina to 483, which compares to 457 on this date in 1985.

Astronaut Is Buried In Arlington

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Navy Capt. Michael J. Smith, who died piloting the doomed spaceship Challenger toward the heavens, was laid to rest Saturday in the earth of Arlington National Cemetery.

Six white horses, guided by a seventh, pulled his casket on an ancient caisson to the gravesite overlooking Washington following an afternoon memorial service.

"Mike Smith had a clear vision of life and where it was going to lead," said Cmdr. Richard H. Purnell, who attended the U.S. Naval Academy with Smith and delivered the eulogy. When they were classmates at Annapolis, Smith would assert, "I am going to be an astronaut," he said.

"We lost him long before we could afford his loss," Purnell told the friends, colleagues, and family gathered in the chapel at Fort Myer, adjoining the cemetery. "Mike would insist the quest, above all of us, must go on."

The U.S. Navy Band played before the service and as the casket was brought to the gravesite with full military honors.

Smith's wife, Jane, and his children, Scott, 17, Alison, 14, and Erin, 8, walked behind the casket. Mrs. Smith wore an aviator's pin on the lapel of her dark suit.

On a hillside near the Tomb of the Unknowns, under the shade of a large maple tree, Cmdr. Paul J. Moore conducted a brief graveside ceremony. A seven-member honor guard fired the ceremonial volleys.

In the distance, a bugler played taps.

Smith, a native of Beaufort, N.C., was living in Houston near the NASA space center at the time of his death. He was buried three days after what would have been his 41st birthday and more than three months after the Challenger exploded and crashed into the sea.

The remains of the seven Challenger astronauts were recovered from the ocean floor about 18 miles offshore from Cape Canaveral. Identification and autopsies were completed last week and the remains were flown to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware for funeral preparation.

Smith was the second to be buried. Christa McAuliffe, the New Hampshire teacher who planned to broadcast lessons from space, was buried in a private ceremony.

Also killed on the Challenger were Francis R. (Dick) Scobee, 46, the mission commander; Judith A. Resnik, 36, mission specialist; Ronald E. McNair, 35, mission specialist; Air Force Lt. Col. Ellison S. Onizuka, 39, mission specialist; and Gregory B. Jarvis, 42, a Hughes Aircraft engineer.

Scobee will join Smith at Arlington on May 19, Scobee's birthday. Six other members of the nation's astronaut corps are buried at Arlington, including Virgil I. (Gus) Grissom and Roger B. Chaffee, who died when their Apollo capsule burned in a launch pad test on Jan. 27, 1967.

Vice. Adm. Robert E. Kirksey, director of the Navy Operations Space Command and Control, presented the flag from the casket to Mrs. Smith, and her husband was lowered into the ground.

The black granite tombstone identified Smith as the pilot of the space shuttle Challenger and was engraved with a navy insignia with a shooting star through it.

The two politicians who have made space shuttle flights, Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., and Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, attended the ceremonies.

ECU Radio Shuts Down Announcer

By The Associated Press

East Carolina University's campus radio station was abruptly shut down for about an hour after campus police received complaints about an announcers expletive-filled broadcast, officials said Friday.

ECU and station officials, who characterized the language as "highly inappropriate," said a student announcer for station WZMB had been fired and would be subject to university disciplinary proceedings as a result of the incident, which occurred about 11 p.m. Thursday.

Officials said the announcer left the microphone without incident after a station engineer directed him to sign off the air.

WZMB, a student-operated FM station that broadcasts to the ECU campus and Greenville area, returned to the air about midnight with an apology by General Manager Jeffrey S. Chester.

"What happened (Thursday) night was the act of one person and the fault of one person," Chester said in an interview Friday. "In no way does this (broadcast) reflect the views of WZMB or East Carolina University."

He said campus officials were continuing an investigation to determine what action would be taken against the announcer. He declined to name the announcer.

Chester, who said he didn't hear the broadcast but heard numerous accounts of it, said the announcer reportedly used vulgar language while condemning the Federal Communications Commission, ECU and radio listeners. A student who heard the broadcast contacted the ECU campus police, who contacted the station's engineer.

Bennett Says Handicapped Funds Will Not Be Reduced

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Federal education funding for the handicapped is not slated to be subject to Gramm-Rudman budget cuts, as are many education programs, because handicapped children need much more help, U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett says.

"Our commitment to this is very serious," Bennett said in a news conference at Devonshire Elementary School, where he talked Friday with emotionally, mentally and physically handicapped pupils. "We have a mandate under Gramm-Rudman to reduce our budget 18 percent for the department, but we've held these programs constant."

Aides said some $1.16 billion is being requested for federal aid for educating handicapped children in fiscal 1987, about the same as in fiscal 1985.

Bennett said most of the cuts would affect higher education. He told college students at Belmont-Abbey Thursday that they need the aid less because they are already well-established, while the young handicapped pupils need much more help.

"My conscience is clear on this," he said. "I told them they may have to borrow money at an unsubsidized rate or get a job. I said, 'You've made it to college — you're already one of the winners.' Programs like this are the most basic."

Bennett toured Devonshire and Billingsville Elementary School with his wife, Elayne, who is from Charlotte; her sister-in-law, Nancy Glover, a special education teacher in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system, and an entourage of school officials and reporters.

Bennett said special education has much to teach regular education — primarily the "joy and pleasure of learning" that he saw in a pupil who was typing by means of a stick attached to his head.

Classes for the handicapped also have a "clear sense of purpose" that is sometimes lacking in regular education, he said.

Friday Cited

RALEIGH (AP) — William C. Friday, president emeritus of the University of North Carolina system, was honored with a special citation Friday by the North Carolina State State University Alumni Association.

Friday, a 1941 NCSU graduate, was honored for his service to NCSU, the UNC system and the state.

The alumni association presented other awards, including a Meritorious Service Award honoring G. Eddie Jackson of Washington, N.C., for outstanding volunteer service. Jackson, a 1953 forestry alumnus, also was named the 1986 Forest Resources Distinguished Alumnus.

John T. Brake of Garner was named Outstanding Young Alumnus. Garner is an assistant professor of poultry science at NCSU and a member of the graduate faculty of physiology.

Slade Dies

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Dorothy Malone Slade, who led the successful North Carolina fight against the Equal Rights Amendment, has died of cancer. She was 69.

Ms. Slade, of Reidsville, died on Thursday at Annie Penn Memorial Hospital in her hometown.

Ms. Slade's activism began in 1972 when Phyllis Schlafly, national head of STOP-ERA and president of the pro-family, pro-life Eagle Forum, appointed her state chairman of the STOP-ERA grassroots movement.

Ms. Slade won the Eagle Forum's Super Eagle award in 1981, a year before the General Assembly voted to table an ERA ratification bill.

Klan Training

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — White supremacist Glenn Miller, whose White Patriot Party is accused in a lawsuit of illegally engaging in paramilitary training, said Saturday the group would cease exercises that involve guns.

"I've decided to cease firearms training here at our headquarters," Miller said in a telephone interview from Johnston County. "It frightens the people and we never wanted to do that."

But Miller said the change was in no way an admission of wrongdoing.

"I'm not admitting to anything and the statement hasn't got anything to do with the suit," he said. "We don't even know what paramilitary means. The word paramilitary is not even in the lawyers dictionary."

Miller said the change in training was necessary only because of "the hysteria that has been created by the media as a result of us getting together and firing fireams."

The Southern Poverty Law Center, based in Montgomery, Ala., filed a motion last month asking that Miller be held in contempt of court for violating a January 1985 settlement in which he agreed not to operate a paramilitary organization, march in predominantly black neighborhoods or harass blacks. The settlement stemmed from a class-action suit by the center that claimed Ku Klux Klansmen made a bomb threat against a black family.

IN THE STATE

Investments

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Securities Division said a Goldsboro stockbroker apparently misled several customers on investments, prompting the agency to hold a hearing on the broker's license.

The allegations from the NCSD say that broker Vincent Allen Page of Edward D. Jones & Co. misrepresented and persuaded eight clients to invest in the oil and gas income funds in 1982 and 1983.

The agency said the eight had sought more conservative investments, but were persuaded by Page's "misleading" advice to invest in the funds.

The funds, NRM Oil and Gas Income Fund and Petro-Lewis Oil and Gas Income Program, are in financial trouble, the division said.

Bank Probe

GREENSBORO (AP) — Greensboro police say a bank robbery investigation turned up one of their own video cassette recorders that had been stolen from a Guilford County courtroom Feb. 12.

"The machine was apparently missing for several days before it was discovered," Greensboro Police Sgt. C.J. Sitton said. The machine was used to show state's evidence during trials, such as videotapes of people arrested on driving while impaired charges.

Police said the VCR, which apparently was smuggled out of the courtroom in a shopping bag, turned up after police charged Morris Anthony Reives, 26, in the robbery of a Greensboro bank earlier this week.

Movie Plea

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — Owners of a drive-in movie theater in Alamance County have been fined $7,500 after pleading guilty to showing an obscene movie in January.

Circle G Theater was fined in Alamance Superior Court. Multi-Cinema Ltd. of Charlotte showed the X-rated movie "I Want To Be Teased" at the drive-in theater.

The plea by the company brought to a close the first case to be tried in Alamance County involving the state's new pornography law passed by the General Assembly last year in an effort to crack down on obscenity.

Peat Mine Request Rejected

RALEIGH (AP) — A North Carolina Environmental Management Commission panel has rejected a Chicago developer's quest to begin the state's first major peat mining operation, but the businessman says he will appeal the decision.

"We've been wronged," Sam J. Esposito said during a telephone interview after being informed of the panel's decision Friday. "We suspect when all the facts are out, we will prevail."

Wake County Superior Court Judge Robert L. Farmer in March gave the commission until Monday to decide whether Esposito could begin mining 7,142 acres at White Tail Farms in coastal Hyde County under the terms of a state water discharge permit he received in 1982.

R. Paul Wilms, director of the N.C. Division of Environmental Management, denied permission last year to begin mining, saying state officials lacked sufficient information to evaluate Esposito's water management plan for the mining.

Esposito has said the plan would reduce freshwater runoff, a key environmental concern. Too much fresh water running into the salty coastal bays and streams can kill young shrimp, crabs and other commercial marine life.

In an appeal of Wilms' decision, an N.C. Office of Administrative Hearings officer recommended last month that the environmental commission panel allow the mining, finding that the water permit provisions were vague and ambiguous.

Esposito sued the division and commission in January, contending they had unlawfully delayed him from using his permit. But Farmer decided that Esposito had not exhausted his chances for administrative appeal before going to court, and the judge imposed the Monday deadline for the state bodies to give him a final answer.

The commission's five-member panel, which rules on such water permits, heard arguments on Monday but delayed action until Friday. It voted 4-0, with one member absent, to uphold Wilms' denial and reject the hearing officer's recommendation.

Evening Contact Lens Clinic

We are happy to announce the inception of a special evening contact lens clinic for difficult contact lens problems. Consultations are available for those who have previously been unable to wear lenses successfully or who have complex problems such as astigmatism, bifocals or keratoconus. Those accepted for fitting, who are not fully satisfied with the result, will receive full refunds in most cases.

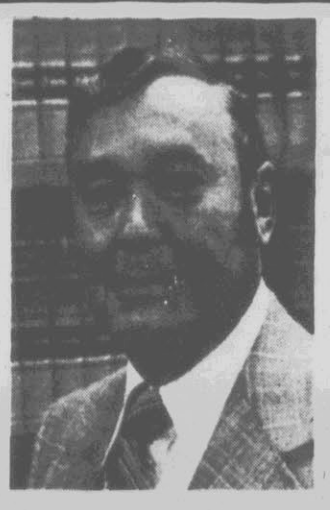
Re-elect
☒ Burney L. Tucker
County Commissioner



- I have served on the Board of Commissioners continuously since March, 1972 and as the Board's Chairman twice. I am now serving my third term as Vice Chairman.
- I am presently serving as Chairman of the Social Services Board and am a member of the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority.
- I presently serve as one of eighteen on the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners Board of Directors.
- I have made a firm commitment and have done my best to represent all the citizens of Pitt County.
- During my tenure on the Board, every effort possible has been made to attract industry which pays good wages for our citizens; and most of our present industry has located in Pitt County since I have been County Commissioner.
- I have worked hard for better educational opportunities for our young people both at the primary and secondary education and the community college levels.
- Our health care facilities are unexcelled in eastern North Carolina and I have had a part in making this happen.

A vote for Burney L. Tucker is a vote for an experienced, competent and concerned Pitt County leader with roots in the past and vision for the future.

Duke Trustees Agree Conditionally To Cut South African Business Ties

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University will divest its business interests in South Africa by January 1988 if the country does not dismantle significantly its apartheid system, university trustees agreed Saturday.

The board of trustees approved 21-3 after about two hours of deliberation a resolution which calls for total divestment if South Africa does not repeal business and residential segregation and laws controlling the movement of blacks by Jan. 1, 1987. If no progress toward that goal is shown by Jan. 1, 1987, the resolution says the university will begin divestiture proceedings that will be completed by January 1988.

The board also voted to continue a policy of selective divestiture based on the Sullivan Principles until Jan. 1, 1987. The Sullivan Principles call upon companies which do business in South Africa to treat employees of all races equally.

Duke now has about $12.5 million invested in companies that have business in South Africa. The largest investment is $4 million in IBM.

The board of trustees heard two recommendations Friday. The Academic Council recommended total divestiture by May 3, 1987, while the trustees' executive committee favored a five-step approach to help eliminate apartheid but not necessarily to totally divest by a specific date. The executive committee resolution would have barred Duke from investing in companies that do as much as 5 percent of their business in South Africa.

Duke students erected two shanties on campus Thursday to urge the trustees to vote for divestment.

Dr. William O. Weldon, a trustee emeritus from Greensboro, said Saturday Duke should listen to the students concerns.

"There are millions in that damnable system as we speak," he said. "What's the value in postponing?"

"I hate to see Duke University on the wrong side of a great moral issue," said Samuel Cook, a trustee from New Orleans. "The situation in South Africa is really a rebellion against civilization."

Duke President H. Keith H. Brodie told students Friday he prefered selective rather than total divestment, choosing companies according to their policies regarding treatment of blacks.

"I join you in the abhorence of apartheid," Brodie told the students Friday. "I think I may differ from a number of you with respect to the approach to be taken."

But Saturday, Brodie voted for total divestment.

"I felt much more comfortable embracing total divestment on the basis of what I heard today," Brodie said after the meeting. "At some point, you have to come in touch with the consensus of the group. I sensed a concensus forming there."

Brodie joined trustee Chairman Neil Williams Jr., an Atlanta attorney, to address the protesters after the vote.

"You did not have a board that showed up with a preconceived conclusion. I know a lot of students thought it was," Williams said.

Mikel Taylor, a Duke student and a member of the Duke-Durham Divestiture Action Campaign, applauded the vote.

"It's great, it's exactly what we wanted," Taylor said.

Taylor said he believed building shanties on the Duke campus had an effect on the outcome of the vote.

"It definitely did," Taylor said. "I talked to (some) people in the trustees meeting who said it would never have happened without what we'd done."

Taylor said the shanties would be dismantled Saturday afternoon and that a demonstration planned by some Duke seniors for Sunday's graduation ceremony had been canceled.

During debate Saturday, trustee Anthony Duke of New York City said selective divestment would be more beneficial to the black citizens of South Africa.

Duke said many corporations fight apartheid by employing thousands of black workers. He said that though the percentage of blacks working for such companies represents a small portion of the population, they should not be forgotten.

"The percentage may be small, but these are human beings we are talking about — flesh and blood," Duke said.

The divestment resolution also called for Duke to seek funding for four graduate and undergraduate scholarships for black South African students. The scholarships will be named for prominent South African blacks. The resolution also calls for Duke to explore joint academic programs with South African colleges.

DAVIDSON SHANTIES — Students Davidson College built three shanties on the campus last week to protest business interests held by the college that are linked to South Africa. Similar shanties have gone up on college campuses across the nation in recent months. (AP Laserphoto)

Church Group Says Creed Shouldn't Be Taught In Schools

RALEIGH (AP) — Public schools should teach students about the role of religion in American life but should not teach specific creeds or practices, the North Carolina Council of Churches says.

"Education ought not to ignore or conceal the important role religion has played in the culture," the Rev. S. Collins Kilburn, the council's executive director, said in an interview Friday. "But teaching religious commitment is something else."

The council's House of Delegates met Thursday in Greensboro and adopted a statement affirming the place of religion in public education and opposing conservative attacks on public schools.

The council's legislative body also passed a resolution condemning the U.S. bombing raid on Libya, saying it did not diminish terrorism. Members also elected the council's first Roman Catholic president, the Rev. George Kloster of Greensboro.

The statement on education originally opposed tuition tax credits and education vouchers, but after a lengthy debate, the wording was changed to say there was no agreement on the subject. Tuition tax credits let parents who send their children to private schools get tax credit for some part of tuition costs.

Strong language opposing criticism of schools remained intact.

The statement expressed "grave concern that organized attacks on public schools by various groups in North Carolina go beyond the realm of constructive criticism and are injurious to reasonable efforts to improve and to strengthen the system of public education."

"We want to get some folks at the local level to come to the defense of public education," Kilburn said. Public education is embattled and subject to unfair criticism.

In recent months, conservatives have criticized the public schools for teaching sex education. They also have said the schools are furthering secular humanism, a philosophy that denies the existence of God and fosters belief in the perfectibility of man.

Carl Horn III, a Charlotte lawyer who has criticized sex education courses and secularism in the schools, said conservatives had a right to criticize public education.

"We support public schools, too," said Horn, who heads the N.C. Freedom Council, a political education organization started by the Rev. M.G. Pat Robertson. "We also support the right of parents and other citizens to see their values reflected in the public schools.

"This concerns the N.C. Council of Churches, which has had a liberal, and in some cases a radical, political agenda for many years," Horn said.

The council is made up of 26 denominations and eight individual churches. Members represent mainline Protestant denominations, Catholics and some Southern Baptist congregations. The council represents more than 1 million people and 6,000 congregations.

The statement on education affirmed the importance of teaching about religion but objected to schools being used to proselytize.

"Teaching for religious commitment is the responsibility of the home and the community of faith rather than the public schools," it said.

The statement says although many Americans believe in God, there is no widespread opinion on how to worship. Therefore, schools should focus on teaching students to respect beliefs different from their own and to appreciate the role of religion in public life, it said.

"Neither the church nor the state, however, should use the public schools to compel acceptance of any creed or conformity to any specific religious practice," it said.

The chairman of the committee that drafted the statement said it was intended to strengthen schools.

"I don't think it will foster secular humanism," said the Rev. Frank A. Stith III, a Methodist minister in Charlotte. "It puts the church in the proper role of dealing with secular education. Instead of fostering a particular belief, were trying to stand behind the schools and make them stronger."

We the undersigned citizens of Pitt County urge your support for the re-election of Sandra Gaskins as Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County.

Fires Contained But Danger High

By The Associated Press

North Carolina Forest Resources officials say fires that blazed across the state last week appear to be contained, but the danger of fire remains high.

"We are on a high state of alert," John Shepherd, fire staff officer for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said Saturday.

Shepherd said 33 fires burned 1,482 acres Friday. For the year, he said, 4,264 fires have charred 30,525 acres.

Firefighters contained a 400-acre blaze in New Hanover County and a blaze in neighboring Brunswick County had burned 700 acres Friday.

Officials Friday closed part of U.S. 17 for more than an hour when a wildfire jumped the highway and threatened a subdivision about three miles north of Wilmington.

About 60 children at a day-care center in Ogden had their after-lunch nap interrupted when they were taken to a junior high school about 1:30 p.m.

"We called the Sheriff's Department when it jumped Market Street, and they advised us to go on and evacuate," said Adrana West, secretary-treasurer of the school, run by the Living Waters Ministry in Ogden. The fire was stopped before it reached the school, and there were no injuries.

Mary Antley of the New Hanover County Sheriff's Department said no homes in the subdivision were evacuated, but fire officials told people to leave a campground and church in the area "as a precaution."

She said about 3 to 4 miles of the highway were closed but had been reopened by mid-afternoon.

The fire, which was listed as a three-acre blaze early in the afternoon, burned about 400 acres before it was contained, fire officials said.

Another fire in neighboring Brunswick County had burned more than 700 acres by Friday night. Officials said a few houses were threatened briefly but none were damaged.

The National Weather Service predicted a sunny day for Sunday, with highs around 70, but no rain was expected.

Activity Declined

The level of business activity in North Carolina declined slightly in March, registering 134.7 or 0.3 percent below the February level, according to the First Wachovia Business Index.

Wachovia said the decrease was due to a 16.8 percent rise in the number of initial claims for unemployment insurance and a 3 percent drop in residential building permits. Nonagricultural employment was up slightly, and the average workweek in manufacturing was unchanged from february.

Nonagricultural employment in the state gained 0.2 percent.

Ingram Says He'll Force Runoff, Broyhill Predicts Comfortable Win

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

Former state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram said Saturday he will force a runoff with Democratic U.S. Senate rival Terry Sanford in Tuesday's primary and would call for a debate to settle the race.

Meanwhile, U.S. Rep. Jim Broyhill said in Alamance County that he would beat David Funderburk by a "comfortable margin" in the GOP primary, largely because Funderburk's negative advertising has backfired.

TERRY SANFORD

"Terry said that he was gearing up for a runoff with me and he also said that he wasn't going to call for a debate, but that he would debate," Ingram said in a telephone interview after a morning campaign through businesses in the 4th Congressional District.

"Today I'm calling for a debate with Terry in the runoff because I want to ask him about his Hartford Insurance connection and why he supports price fixing by the insurance companies in these excessive premiums and the casualty insurance industry making liability insurance scarce," Ingram added.

Sanford, campaigning in Goldsboro on Saturday, declined to comment on Ingram's claims that he favored the insurance industry.

JOHN INGRAM

"It's a great mistake to be trading barbs with other Democratic candidates, and I'm not going to respond or comment," Sanford said.

Ingram said Sanford sat on the board of International Telepone & Telegraph Co., which owns the Hartford insurance companies. He said Sanford "has been in a position to do something about the problem (of soaring insurance rates) but he promises nothing on insurance."

"The people, you know, are really concerned about this national insurance mess," Ingram said. "And they say, 'What are you going to do about it and why doesn't Terry talk about it?'"

He said if elected he would sponsor legislation to take away a special exemption he said insurance companies have to price-fixing laws.

Ingram said he was convinced that a runoff would be necessary because of a recent poll by Farmers for Better Government, which he said showed him deadlocked with Sanford 31 percent to 29 percent with a 4 percentage point margin of error. Ingram said the poll showed 15 percent of voters surveyed favored others in the 10-candidate race and 25 percent were undecided.

Sanford, the distant frontrunner in an earlier Carolina Poll, was asked at a workshop of the Wayne County Democratic Women who his strongest challenger was. He replied, "I don't think anyone fits in that category."

DAVID FUNDERBURK

JIM BROYHILL

Sanford said the "overriding issue" in the race to replace Sen. John East, R-N.C., was the farm economy and the number one priority was to save the family farm.

The decline in textile jobs in the United States is among the top three issues, Sanford said.

"Damage is being done so needlessly," he said. "I'm determined to see that that treaties are enforced to protect our textiles."

Sanford also spoke on the need for a balanced budget.

Meanwhile, Glenn Miller, leader of the White Patriot Party and the third Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, said he was continuing his "low-budget campaign" right up to the primary.

"I'm going out every day," he said in a telephone interview from Johnston County.

Miller repeated his promise to leave North Carolina, possibly for Georgia, if he fails to double the 4,800 votes he gained in his last bid for the Senate.

"It'll be south of North Carolina, that's for sure," he said.

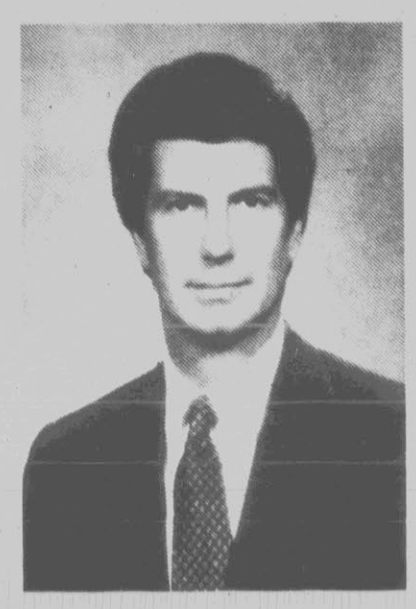
Re-Elect
WALTER JONES JR.
to the N. C. House on Tuesday, May 6



Walter Jones Jr. works hard for the citizens of Pitt and Greene counties in the N.C. General Assembly. Here's what a few of them say about the dedicated service Walter provides as our Representative:

"We are fortunate to have a legislator and a gentleman of Walter Jones Jr.'s caliber in our community, and we believe that his image and influence will be instrumental in promoting the growth and progress of eastern North Carolina."

"It means a lot to have a Representative who is as genuinely people-oriented as Walter Jones Jr. His dedication to the people of Pitt and Greene counties is well recognized and appreciated by us all."

"We especially value Walter Jones Jr.'s efforts to understand county needs and the local perspective on legislation before the General Assembly."

Bush Accepts Speaking Offer

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Vice President George Bush has accepted an invitation to deliver the commencement address at Warren Wilson College on May 17, school officials said Saturday.

Warren Wilson is a Presbyterian liberal arts college in Swannanoa that is noted for its Cooperative Work Program in which students integrate work and community service into their academic curriculum.

Although it will be Bush's first visit to the 1,000-acre campus in the Blue Ridge Mountains, the vice president knows about the school through Warren Wilson President Reuben A. Holden and his wife, Elizabeth, who is Bush's first cousin.

Holden said he was happy Bush would deliver the commencement address.

"Several years ago I was asked by a number of students knowing of Mrs. Holden's relationship to Mr. Bush to invite him to speak on the campus," he said. "This proved impossible at the time, but he said he would keep it in mind for the future.

"His acceptance is a great compliment to us, in view of the hundreds of invitations he receives," Holden said in a prepared statement.

attributes and beliefs, and concentrated instead on portraying Broyhill as a "fair-weather conservative."

In television and radio commercials and stump speeches, Funderburk has hammered away at Broyhill's votes for implementing the Panama Canal treaties, for a Martin Luther King Jr. memorial holiday, for a "liberal" budget backed by House Speaker Tip O'Neill, against some — but not all — of the Reagan administration's defense spending proposals, and against a total abortion ban.

Broyhill, confident he can defeat Funderburk without returning fire, generally has avoided direct responses to the criticism while discussing the tamer subjects of fair trade and the economy.

But he has reacted angrily to Funderburk commercials blaming Broyhill for a U.S. Department of Energy study that includes two sites in North Carolina among 12 possible hosts of a proposed nuclear waste repository.

The ads warn that Broyhill's sponsorship of the bill authorizing the study means "if Jim Broyhill wins in May, the Republicans lose in November."

Broyhill calls the ads "cheap political tricks." His supporters in the Legislature used even stronger language last week, accusing the Congressional Club of "political terrorism."

Democrats have rejoiced over the Republicans' infighting, but both sides in the GOP primary said last week they expect to unite after the primary.

"The Republican Party has had spirited primaries before, and they've always come back together," said Carter Wrenn, executive director of the Congressional Club.

The Democratic campaign has stood in the shadow of its GOP counterpart, which Democratic leaders, mindful of their divisive 1984 primary, say hasn't been all bad.

After an embarrassing fall in which one well-known Democrat after another passed up the race, Sanford became the instant frontrunner when he announced his candidacy in January.

Although polls suggest he is well ahead of his nearest competitor, his strategists say he's likely to fall short of the 50 percent plus one vote needed to avoid a second primary.

"We're getting ready for a runoff," Sanford acknowledged Friday.

Sanford, who was Duke University president from 1969 until retiring last year, has campaigned on a platform of balancing the federal budget and protecting the state's ailing textile and tobacco industries.

His opponents, meanwhile, have struggled for statewide name recognition. Several have criticized Sanford as the handpicked candidate of party bosses and, at 68, a has-been whom Republicans would portray as a 1960s-style liberal.

Polls show Sanford's closest competitors to be former Insurance Commissioner John Ingram and T.L. "Fountain" Odom, a Mecklenburg County commissioner. Ingram has promised to seek federal regulation of the insurance industry, while Odom has called for stronger environmental protection and a national program to retrain displaced workers.

Other Democratic Senate contenders are: Ted Kinney, a black real estate from Fayetteville; William Belk, a wealthy Charlotte businessman and former national Young Democrats president; Milton Croom, a Raleigh businessman who has spoken admiringly of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche but insists he is not a member of LaRouche's organization; Charlotte businesswoman Katherine Harper, state education official Betty Wallace, of Raleigh; Walt Atkins, a Graham city councilman; and Clinton Moore, a Newton textile worker.

Here's a rundown on the U.S. House primary races:

— 3rd District. Democratic contenders to succeed retiring Rep. Charles Whitley, a Democrat, include Whitley's administrative assistant, Lewis Renn; state Rep. Martin Lancaster; state education official Nurham O. Warwick; and Walter Henderson, who has been a judge and court clerk.

— 4th District. Republican Rep. Bill Cobey faces political newcomer JoAnn Austell.

Democratic candidates include Kirsten Nyrop, former director of the N.C. Tecnological Development Authority; David Price, former state Democratic chairman; Woody Webb, a Raleigh attorney; and state Sen. Wilma Woodard.

— 5th District. Republican candidates, both from Winston-Salem, are Stu Epperson, a broadcast executive who narrowly lost to incumbent Democrat Steve Neal in 1984; and Lyons Gray, a longtime GOP activist. Neal has no Democratic opposition.

— 8th District. Bill Hamby and Tom Hendricks are seeking the GOP nomination to challenge Democratic Rep. Bill Hefner, who has no Democratic opposition.

— 11th District. James M. Clarke, whom incumbent Republican Bill Hendon unseated in 1982, is opposed for the Democratic nomination by Ralph Ledford.

— 10th District. Republicans vying to replace Broyhill are state Sen. Cass Ballenger; Rep. George Robinson; and Wood Hall Young Sr., former Avery County commissioner.

Democratic contenders are: Lester Roark, former state deputy attorney general; Steve B. Dolley Jr., a Gastonia lawyer; Jack L. Rhyne, former mayor of Belmont; perennial candidate Ted A. Poovey; and Denny Ray Hickman, an insurance agent.

Finalist

Julie Jackson of San Jose, Calif., the daughter of Col. George and Nancy Jackson, is a finalist in the Jostens Foundation Leader Scholarship program. She is the granddaughter of George C. Jackson Sr. of Greenville.

Dear Friends:

We have an opportunity to make a difference in our schools. The school board seat for the Winterville Township District is on the ballot for the May 6th election. While the seat is designated for the Winterville District, the election is countywide, which includes Greenville for the first time.

We will experience a tremendous change in our system over the next six years. We need a person who will listen to and voice the concerns of the citizens of this county.

I am a Winterville native who has been involved in our community in the following ways.

- Graduated from Winterville High School and Pitt Community College
- A U.S. Air Force Veteran
- Employed with DuPont as a supervisor
- Member A.G. Cox Advisory Board
- Officer in Parent Teacher Organization at W.H. Robinson Primary School
- Founder of the A.G. Cox Athletic Booster Club
- Founder of the Winterville Pee Wee Baseball League
- Founder of the Winterville Youth Basketball League
- Co-Chairman Winterville Recreation Commission
- Coached Football, Basketball, Pee Wee, Bambino, and Babe Ruth Baseball
- Member of the Winterville Ruritans
- Sunday School Teacher and Youth Director at Winterville Immanuel Free Will Baptist Church

I believe the greatest resources available to a school member are you, the citizens of this county, and, if elected on May 6, I will strive to make myself available to listen and voice the concerns of you, of you, the citizens of this county. Vote Levi C. Smith on May 6. "He cares about our children."

Sample Ballots For Federal, State And Local Races

Voters going to the polls May 6 will receive ballots on a number of issues.

Among matters to be decided will be a constitutional amendment providing for election of state and county officers in odd numbered years and a statewide referendum concerning location of a high-level radioactive nuclear waste site in North Carolina. Three members of the Pitt County Board of Education will be elected on a countywide vote as well.

Primary nominations will be made May 6 in the Republican Party for the U.S. Senate and in the Democratic Party for the U.S. Senate, N.C. Senate 6th District, Judge Court of Appeals, N.C. House of Representatives 6th and 9th districts, Pitt County Board of Commissioners, Pitt County Clerk of Superior Court and Pitt County Sheriff.

Sample ballots illustrate state issues and board of education positions as well as seats open on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and candidates for each senatorial and house district who are to be nominated by party for election in November.

If a candidate has no opposition within his or her party for the primary, his or her name will not appear on a primary ballot, but will be on the ballot in the November election.

Western Summit's Agenda Stresses Economy

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

The summit of 1986 has brought Western leaders to Tokyo for a round of self-congratulation and fine-tuning of economies coasting along on cheap oil and cheap money. But the challenge of terrorism might just wreck the "good times" harmony.

For three days beginning Sunday, President Reagan and the leaders of Japan, West Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Canada are to meet in the 12th annual economic conference of the biggest industrial democracies.

The last time Western leaders gathered under the glittering chandeliers of Tokyo's Akasaka Palace — in 1979 — their national economies were under siege by redoubled oil prices, double-digit inflation and spreading unemployment.

Today, after painful readjustments, "the industrial countries appear ... to have entered a period of sustained and better balanced growth," the International Monetary Fund reported last week.

The summit nations' task now is to reach a "common understanding" of how to continue the economic growth, says the Japanese government.

The economic agenda is full: The presidents and premiers will discuss ways of alleviating the Third World's $1 trillion in foreign debt, of stabilizing erratic currency-exchange markets, and of better balancing trade accounts, especially Japan's almost $70-billion annual trade surplus.

JAPAN

Anxious to head off a new round of "Japan-bashing," Yasuhiro Nakasone will be busy explaining his government's efforts to stimulate the domestic economy, increase imports and trim the trade advantage Japan has over the rest of the world.

It is a delicate political exercise for a prime minister who may seek an unprecedented third two-year term late this year. The yen's rising value against the dollar has already hurt Japanese industry. Japan's economic growth rate may reach only 2 percent to 3 percent this year, lowest in a decade.

Nakasone describes the summit as "an ideal opportunity ... to help people understand Japan better."

The Japanese seem most interested in leading the summit to a firm endorsement of the need for further liberalizing world trade, the subject of global negotiations later this year.

WEST GERMANY

The economically conservative West Germans have beaten inflation down to under 1 percent a year, cut back budget deficits and enjoy an $8-billion-a-year trade surplus with the United States. They have made it clear to Washington that they will not experiment with new stimulative policies.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl says the Tokyo summit will be an opportunity for "an extensive and open exchange of views" — but not for specific program decisions.

As always, however, the export-oriented Germans will be looking for ways to cool the protectionist fervor in the United States.

FRANCE

The attitude of the French, represented by both the Socialist president, Francois Mitterrand, and the new, conservative premier, Jacques Chirac, may remain a question mark until the summit's opening.

As usual, the French are expected to propose an organized system for stabilizing currency exchange — a system too formalized to be accepted by the United States and its other summit partners.

As for trade, Mitterrand in the past blocked progress toward new global negotiations to liberalize commerce. But the other governments hope that Chirac, more of a free-marketeer, may now ease that stand.

BRITAIN

The British are grappling with an unemployment rate still above 13 percent. But Margaret Thatcher, the politically embattled prime minister and senior summit participant, contends her success in pulling 20 percent inflation down to 5 percent over six years will eventually pay off in a strengthening economy and job creation.

"Now is not the time to relax," she says of her tight-money austerity policies. She is expected to again urge the United States to slice away at its own budget deficits as one way to reduce world interest rates further.

The oil free fall — to as low as $12 a barrel from almost $30 last December — has hurt Britain, an oil producer. But British officials say the wider benefit of lower oil prices to Western economies is ultimately more important than Britain's current revenue loss.

ITALY

Cheap oil has helped cut inflation to below 9 percent in Italy, once the homeland of the double-digit price rise. And the shrinking U.S. dollar has shrunk the heavy Italian foreign debt.

Like the other Europeans, Prime Minister Bettino Craxi, a socialist heading a five-party coalition, is expected to press for greater access for his country's goods in the Japanese market, and to lobby against any new U.S. protectionist measures.

With the French, the Italians will call on the summit nations to extend more help to debt-burdened Third World nations through debt relief and more open markets.

CANADA

Canada's Progressive Conservative prime minister, Brian Mulroney, and Italy's Craxi want the other five summit nations to expand their "Group of Five" to seven — to give the Canadians and Italians a voice in joint decisions like last September's move to lower the dollar's value.

As the summit nation most dependent on external trade, Canada will team up with the United States in pushing for stimulation of the Japanese and West German economies as one way to boost demand for imports from Canada.

UNITED STATES

The U.S. trade deficit, $149 billion last year, has been the Reagan administration's most immediate worry, as it fights congressional pressure for new trade barriers against Japanese and other imports.

Over the past seven months, working with its Western partners, the United States has forced the dollar's value down 16 percent, making U.S. goods cheaper in the world marketplace. Treasury Secretary James Baker is expected to seek even greater coordination of monetary policy among the summit nations.

On terrorism, the American chief executive is unlikely to win backing for a broad economic attack on Libya. Instead, U.S. policy-makers say they hope for agreement on improved intelligence-sharing and other undercover methods for combatting the terrorist threat.

SPEAKS OUT ON THE ISSUES

PLANNING

The 1985 edition of the Handbook for North Carolina County Commissioner states:

> "...the board [of County Commissioners] must plan for the county's future. This responsibility is becoming increasingly important as the expectations of county residents concerning the scope of services the county should provide continue to rise. The local planning agency draws on professional and technical resources to develop options for the board to consider, but the board must make the final decision." (p. 9)

Currently, Pitt County devotes considerable time to land use planning. We have a 15-member county planning board who overseer this function. We have a county planner, who is an engineer, and who capably advises the planning board on the technical aspects of land use. However, the county does not have an office or individual who is assigned responsibility for programmatic planning.

Also, at this time, agencies and departments which receive appropriations from the county are not required to submit written plans that describe the purposes for which local appropriations will be used.

I do not think it is unreasonable to require that any agency or department requesting county funds submit at least a basic written plan describing its overall purpose and outlining the goals or objectives it intends to accomplish with taxpayers' money. This is just good management practice. It also would permit commissioners to make more informed decisions in the budgetary process.

Additionally, as our county continues to experience rapid growth, we must engage in more cooperative planning between county and municipal planning authorities. Only in this way can we ensure balanced and orderly growth which works to the benefit of all while respecting and protecting the rights of citizens and landowners in the growth process.

ECONOMIC GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT

Pitt County is one of the fastest growing communities in North Carolina. The current population of nearly 96,000 citizens is projected to approach 110,000 by 1990 and to exceed 125,000 by the year 2000. Retail sales, building permits, and total employment in Pitt County continue to increase at rates which far exceed both State and National averages.

The most visible effect of this situation is a growing and prosperous economy. From 1984 - 1985, the total tax base of Pitt County (the amount of property valuation which is taxed) grew by over $130 MILLION—without a re-valuation. The question, then, is not WHETHER we will continue to grow; but HOW we will grow.

Such rapid growth demands visionary and informed local leadership. For with the positive aspects of growth also come difficult issues and potential problems. Greater population concentrations bring increases in crime, and our law enforcement capabilities must be expanded proportionately with these increases.

Commercial and residential expansion, without proper planning, endangers environmental and natural resources. It can also threaten the rights of landowners if it is uncontrolled.

Population increases expand the need for basic public services such as primary health care, adequate water and sewer systems, and sufficient solid and hazardous waste disposal facilities.

We are fortunate in Pitt County to have positive growth projections. The natural economic benefits from this growth will permit local government to keep pace in providing necessary services. Our county (based on current data) should be able to deal with the coming losses of Federal revenues as the provisions of the Federal Budget Deficit Reduction Act are implemented—and we have the capacity to do so without curtailing primary services or raising the tax rate.

However, the issues to be confronted in the next decade are complex. They will require leadership which understands economic systems, which is committed to balanced and planned growth, and which is capable of weighing the costs as well as the benefits of development.

The citizens of Pitt County have an obligation, RIGHT NOW, to give careful consideration to the types of people they will entrust with the responsibility for dealing with these complicated issues. We must insist upon electing local leaders whose training and experience have prepared them to comprehend and deal effectively with these challenges.

"THE FARM PROBLEM"

As a farm owner, I have felt the impact of our current agricultural recession where it hurts the most — in the pocketbook. Like so many others, I have seen my farmland values nosedive. I have watched farm income drop to the point where breaking even after taxes and expenses has become virtually impossible.

Last year alone, the agricultural economy in Pitt County declined by over $10 MILLION. Yes, this money came out of the farmers' pockets. However, it was also money removed from our entire economy. It is money which no longer flows through the stores and businesses of our county, or back into our community as tax revenues.

We must all realize that the current "Farm Problem" is not just the problem of the farmer. It drastically affects every business, industry, and merchant in our county. It affects the county's ability to provide education, health, and other fundamental services our citizens deserve.

Thus, we must join together as a community, as both private citizens and public officials, to vigorously seek solutions to this cancerous condition. We must explore alternatives for agricultural diversification where such diversity could be profitable. We must examine the feasibility of farmer co-ops, wherein small farmers could unify their resources to lower overhead costs.

We must be aggressive in economic and industrial development in order to expand off-the-farm employment opportunities for those whose farm incomes fail to provide a decent standard of living.

Pitt County has been fortunate to experience dramatic growth in business, industry and commerce. Yet, we must remember that a substantial proportion of our economy is still driven by agriculture. We cannot sit back and let our most valuable economic resource — our fertile and expansive farmlands — wither away and lie dormant.

I applaud the current County Commissioners for moving up the re-valuation of farmlands in order to reduce farmers' tax burdens to a fairer level. This is one step in the right direction; but it is not a total solution. We must continue to seek other means to attack the problem. This situation commands priority on our agenda for economic stability in Pitt County.

CITIZEN INVOLVEMENT IN LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Currently, the Pitt County Commissioners hold their meetings during the working day (at 10:00 a.m.) There are justifiable reasons why some of the board's meetings need to be conducted at this time, especially when access to county employees or information is essential. However, this is not the case for every meeting.

The practice of meeting only during the workday has some negative consequences. First, it discourages many qualified individuals from seeking office as a Commissioner because employment obligations will not allow them to be available for meetings.

Second, and most important, this practice makes it virtually impossible for a large majority of Pitt County citizens to attend Commission Meetings to observe or participate in their local government.

I believe that the Board of County Commissioners should consider holding at least some of its meetings in the evening to encourage increased citizen involvement.

EDUCATION

A strong educational system is the foundation o our future. We in Pitt County do have strong schools, and we must work for even greater quality as we merge our systems. We must guarantee comprehensive and equal curriculums in every school in our county. We must bring inadequate or substandard facilities up to par, in order that each school provides an optimum environment for learning.

We must work together as educators, as parents, and as taxpayers to promote recognition of our fine schools and the professionals to whom we entrust our children each day. We must seek all avenues to excellence in our schools and provide appropriate revenues to adequately compensate our teachers and provide the materials and resources to maximize learning.

We are fortunate in Pitt County that our economic growth should provide the resources to support quality education without further burdening the taxpayers. With careful planning and patience, we can systematically achieve our educational agenda. We can carefully build a school system which will be a respected model for others throughout North Carolina.

During this campaign, I have had the opportunity to personally visit a majority of our 30 schools in Pitt County. I have observed conscientious and dedicated teachers at work. I have interviewed principals and counselors. I have examined facilities and learning resources. Also, I have interviewed top administrators of our school system and spoken with local teacher professional groups. These experiences have not only given me a greater understanding of the differing concerns about education in our community; they have given me a greater appreciation for what we already have.

Let us now capitalize on this strong foundation and, as a community, build upon it a structure of excellence.

Elect

CAROLINA EAST MALL

Seahawks Top Pirates, 6-4

WILMINGTON — Winfred Johnson hit a home run and drove in three of East Carolina's four runs in a losing cause at UNC Wilmington Saturday night. The Seahawks captured the Colonial Athletic Association baseball game to ice the fourth spot in the upcoming league tournament.

The victory boosted the Seahawk record in the conference to 10-8 and clinched the fourth spot in the league's post-season tourmanent, set for East Carolina's Harrington Field starting May 15.

East Carolina, James Madison and Richmond had already clinched spots in the four-team field which will determine the league's representative in the NCAA playoffs.

The loss closes out ECU's league season with a 13-5 record. James Madison was 11-5 going into Saturday's game with American University. The Dukes were then to play George Mason today. Should the Dukes win both of those games, they would be the number one seed in the tournament, with the Pirates seeded second.

However, a loss in either of them would put the Pirates into the number one seeding, while Richmond, 12-6, would have a shot at taking second.

East Carolina started the scoring in the first inning, pushing across one run. After two outs, Chris Bradberry singled and then stole second. He scored on a double by Winfred Johnson.

Wilmington came back in the bottom of the inning to score once and tie it up. Mitch Wells walked and Reggie Redd also drew a free pass from Jim Peterson. Then after two were put out, Chuck Jones banged a single, driving in Wells.

The Seahawks pushed over three runs in the second, moving out into a 4-1 lead — a lead they never relinquished.

Tom Heitler reached on a fielder's choice that forced an earlier runner. Tim Langmeyer followed with a single and Wells reached on an infield hit, loading the bases. Redd's sacrifice fly brought in Heitler and Peterson balked over Langmeyer. Bobby Reynolds followed with a single to score Wells.

Wilmington struck again in the third, getting one. Jones singled, stole second and with one away, scored on John Catalano's hit.

The fourth saw the sixth Seahawk runner cross the plate. After two were retired, Reynolds singled, stole second and scored when Mark Maultsby reached on Steve Sides' error.

That made it 6-1.

In the fifth, they scored once. With one down, Greg Hardison walked and Bradberry singled. Johnson got a hit scoring Hardison.

The eighth saw the lead cut to 6-3. With one away, Sides singled and after two were out, he scored on Jim Riley's double.

Johnson hit his 14th home run of the season in the ninth inning with two away to account for the final Pirate talley.

Johnson continued his torrid pace, going three for four and driving in three of the four Pirate runs.

Bradberry also had three hits for the Pirates while Sides and Riley each contributed two.

Jones led Wilmington with three hits while Reynolds, Catalano and

Veteran Bill Shoemaker Rides Ferdinand To Win In 112th Kentucky Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bill Shoemaker, admittedly in the twilight of racing's greatest riding career, teamed with a colt named Ferdinand on Saturday to shine as bright as the Kentucky sun.

Ferdinand, benefitting from Shoemaker's 38 years of experience in the saddle, cut between horses to reach the rail at the top of the stretch, then sped home to win the $784,400 Kentucky Derby.

It was Shoemaker's fourth Derby victory in his 24th Derby ride and the 54-year-old jockey said it was his biggest.

"This is more of a thrill," said Shoemaker, the oldest jockey to ever win the Derby. Angel Cordero was 42 when he won with Spend a Buck last year.

"I know my riding career is in the twilight and I might not ever get another chance to win the Derby," Shoemaker said. "This is a great thrill."

It seemed to be a great thrill for most of the more than 100,000 people on hand at Churchill Downs as they roared a welcome to the "Shoe" as he entered the winner's circle aboard Ferdinand.

It was also a thrill for Charlie Whittingham, the 73-year-old, Hall-of-Fame trainer, who was saddling only his third Derby starter and his first since 1960.

"It took me 26 years to have a horse good enough to get here and I've got one now," Whittingham said. "I don't know how Bill did it. It looks like somebody was looking down on the Sunshine Boys."

The Sunshine Boys Whittingham referred to were himself and Shoemaker.

The Sunshine Boys going into the 112th Derby were Carl Grinstead, a retired electrical engineer, and Ben Rochelle, a former song-and-dance man, the owners of favored Snow Chief.

Shoemaker used the 1986 success of another older athlete as a buoy to his victory.

"Really, I thought Jack Nicklaus did it," Shoemaker said of the 46-year-old golfer's recent Masters victory, "and now I did it, too."

Snow Chief, winner of five straight races, went off as the 2-1 favorite and, on the final turn, it looked like he might become the fourth California-bred to win the Kentucky Derby.

Ridden by Alex Solis, Snow Chief made a mighty move on the turn, then suddenly the Derby was over for him.

He staggered home 11th, beating only five of the 16 3-year-olds in the field and becoming the seventh straight Derby favorite to lose. The last favorite to win was Spectacular Bid in 1979.

"At the 3-16th pole, four horses went past him," Solis said of the colt who has raced once a month since November. "He just got tired."

Ferdinand, whose next start according to Whittingham will be in the Preakness May 17 at Pimlico, got to the end of the 1¼ miles 2¼ lengths ahead of English-bred Bold Arrangement.

Broad Brush, who didn't even get to Churchill Downs until two days ago, was another three-quarters of a length back and a neck in front of Rampage, the crooked-legged colt who had won the Arkansas Derby.

Ferdinand carried scale weight of 126 pounds home in 2:02 4-5 to earn $609,400 and reward his backers with a payoff of $37.40, $16.20 and $8.60, eighth best in history.

Bold Arrangement, ridden by Chris McCarron, returned $9.40 and $6.80, while Broad Brush, ridden by Vincent Bracciale Jr., was $9.20 to show.

Ferdinand is owned by Mrs. Howard Keck and was bred in Kentucky by her husband, who knows something about winning famed races. Keck owned the cars that Bill Vukovich drove to victory in the Indianapolis 500 in 1953-54.

Now he has a colt that Shoemaker thinks is good enough to win the Triple Crown.

That he is even going to the Preakness is a victory for racing traditionalists, who were more than a little annoyed in 1985, when Spend a Buck skipped both the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes.

The traditionalists would have been disappointed again if the stretch-running Bold Arrangement had been able to overtake Ferdinand.

Racing for only the second time in the United States, the English colt must return home by May 10 under an arrangement with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. His next race will be the English Derby at Epsom Downs June 4.

Eagle Stakes Norman To 3-Stroke Vegas Lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Australian Greg Norman, staked to a three-shot lead by his dramatic eagle on the 18th hole Saturday, had a $207,000 prize in his sights going into the final round of the richest golf tournament on the PGA Tour.

"I'm playing well, my confidence is up and I'm looking forward to a successful finish," Norman said after the closing eagle finished off a no-bogey, 8-under-par 64 Saturday.

His position atop the standings came despite what Norman said has been diagnosed as a case of walking pneumonia.

"I've had it for about a year, they said. I'm taking medication for it, but the medicine makes me light-headed. So I've cut back to some half-strength medication this week.

"I'm taking two weeks off after this tournament and I'm going to see a doctor in Houston and see if we can't get it cleared up," Norman said.

Norman completed 72 holes of the five-day, 90-hole Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational in 268, 20 strokes under par.

"It was just one of those days when I played well, putted well and drove the ball extremely well," Norman, the white-haired man known as "the Great White Shark," said.

His driving was little less than spectacular. He hit all the par-5s in two, all with irons for his second shots.

On the 18th, his drive covered 340 yards. A 3-iron second shot stopped 15-18 feet from the cup and he rapped it in for the eagle that gave him a big lead going into the final round of the chase for the winner's share of $207,000 from the total purse of $1,150,000.

"I'm playing well and my confidence is up," said Norman, who has scored two eagles, 26 birdies and 10 bogeys for the week. His two rounds at Las Vegas Country Club, the site of the final round, have been a 63 and a 64.

His dramatic finish opened up some daylight in a field that was closely bunched most of the hot, windy day. At one time or another, nine men — Norman, Bob Lohr, Donnie Hammond, Larry Nelson, Bob Tway, Andy Bean, Fred Couples, Dan Pohl and Jim Colbert — all led or shared the lead.

None could keep up with Norman.

Pohl came the closest, running off one string of three consecutive birdies and avoiding a bogey in his round of 66 that put him second alone at 271.

Bob Tway, a winner at San Diego earlier this year, rookie Dave Rummells and Nelson were next at 272, 16 under par. Tway had a 68, Rummells and Nelson 69.

Colbert followed at 69-273.

The big group at 274, six shots back with 18 holes to go, included Couples, Bean, Wayne Levi, Mike Hulbert and Steve Pate, who closed up with a 65. Couples shot 67, Hulbert and Levi 68 and Bean 69.

Donnie Hammond, who could collect a $250,000 bonus if he coupled a victory here with the Bob Hope Classic title he won earlier in the season, slipped out of the lead with a 73 and was seven off the pace at 275. Tom Watson birdied the first three holes he played, but matched par the rest of the way and finished with a 69 that left him at 276, eight off the pace.

Rare Theft Lifts 76ers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Clemon Johnson, who steals the ball about as often as the Boston Celtics lose, made the theft of his career Saturday.

The steal triggered the Philadelphia 76ers to a 107-103 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks and 2-1 lead in a best-of-7 NBA Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series.

The 6-foot-10, 240-pound Johnson, who had only 23 steals during the season, stripped the usually sure-handed Terry Cummings of the ball and flipped it to teammate Julius Erving.

Erving, in turn, got the ball to Bobby Jones, whose off-balance shot with 22 seconds left went in as he was fouled. The free throw by Jones gave Philadelphia a 101-99 lead.

"Jones was supposed to be guarding Cummings," said Johnson. "But on transition I ended up with him. He (Cummings) had a gleam in his eye when he saw me covering him.

"He had me at a disadvantage because of his quickness," Johnson admitted. "I thought he would try and take me into the hole. I went for the steal. If I missed, I was going to foul him. But I batted it away."

Although he led the Bucks with 27 points and nine rebounds, Cummings also had his share of problems. After losing the ball to Johnson, he fumbled away an inbounds pass that led to a Maurice Cheeks basket that boosted the Sixers to a 105-99 lead with 11 seconds left.

Cummings blamed himself for the key turnover.

"As I started to turn, Clemon just came in and stole the ball away. I thought I really didn't have possession at the time," Cummings said.

The Bucks played without all-star guard Sidney Moncrief, who has been troubled by an injured heel.

The 76ers came back from a 13-point second period deficit to build a four point lead in the third period after a 19-2 rally. Philadelphia led until the final period, when the Bucks went ahead at 87-85.

After the Johnson steal and Jones' three-point play, Sedale Threatt converted two free throws to increase the Philadelphia lead to 103-99. Cheeks then hit two free throws to make the margin six.

Baskets by Paul Pressey and Cummings pulled the Bucks within 105-103, but Threatt collected two free throws with two seconds left to complete the scoring.

The teams meet in Game 4 here Monday night.

Adcox Is Easy Arca Winner

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Grant Adcox outclassed a fast field Saturday to run away with the ARCA 500 Kilometer stock car race at Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Adcox, who also won the ARCA event in February at Daytona International Speedway, charged past pole-winner Ralph Jones on the first lap of the 312½-mile event.

He led 103 of 117 laps, falling out of the lead only briefly after pitting several times during caution periods. But each time Adcox was able to regain the top spot quickly after the green flag fell.

The winner, driving a Chevrolet Monte Carlo, took the lead for the final time on lap 109, passing the Buick LeSabre of Davey Allison and pulling the Chevrolet of defending ARCA Permatex Super Car Series champion Lee Raymond with him into second.

Allison, who was a late entry in the race and started last in the 37-car field, managed to nip Raymond for second place by less than one car length. But Adcox crossed the finish line about eight car lengths ahead of Allison. The winner averaged 142.073 mph.

Jones set an ARCA record of 203.536 mph in qualifying, while Adcox was second at 202.401. During the race, several of the leader's laps under the green flag were clocked at more than 202.

Jones wound up 10th after tagging the first-turn wall while making a move to catch Adcox on the 70th lap.

There were seven caution flags and two multi-car accidents. The only injury reported was a laceration to the chin of Andy Stone, who was released from the infield car center after receiving several stitches.

The ARCA event was run as a preliminary to Sunday's Winston 500 NASCAR stock car race.

USFL's 1st Pick: It Won't Be Bo

The Orlando Renegades have the No. 1 pick in Tuesday's USFL's draft, which is not as highly prized, or as highly publicized, as the NFL's last week.

Bo Jackson, the tailback from Auburn, the Heisman Trophy winner as college football's premier player in 1985, the "franchise" player in the O.J. Simpson-Jim Brown mold, is not up for grabs, as he was when the Tampa Bay Buccaneers made him the NFL's No. 1 draft pick.

Auburn is one of the USFL's "territorial" schools, and the Birmingham Stallions, through that process, acquired the negotiating rights to Jackson. The Buccaneers' USFL rivals, the Tampa Bay Bandits, are trying to secure the negotiating rights to Jackson from Birmingham. Orlando is not in the bidding.

Besides, the Renegades' primary needs are on offensive and defensive lines.

Further, many of the premier linemen were selected in the April 22 territorial draft. The Renegedes picked Virginia tackle Jim Dombroski and Notre Dame defensive tackle Eric Dorsey, Baltimore took Temple guard John Rienstra, Memphis selected Vanderbilt tackle Will Wolford, Birmingham named defensive ends Jon Hand of Alabama and Gerald Robinson of Auburn, New Jersey picked Oklahoma State defensive end Leslie O'Neal and Southern Cal tackle James Fitz-Patrick.

All also were picked in the first round of the NFL draft.

All of that drains much of the anticipation from the USFL draft.

Still, nose tackle Tony Casillas and tackle Brian Jozwiak are among those stars still available to the young league at large since their schools — Oklahoma and West Virginia — were not among those in the territorial draft.

And this is the first year that the USFL is going head-to-head with the NFL in the fall, having switched seasons after three as a spring-summer alternative.

The USFL has become the Home of the Heisman. The three winners of the prestigious trophy prior to Jackson signed with the new league, with mixed results.

Georgia's Herschel Walker set the all-time single-season professional rushing record, 2,411 yards with New Jersey. Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams, the NFL record holder with 2,105 yards, called Walker's achievement a minor-league record.

The next Heisman winner, Mike Rozier, was something of a bust as a runner in the USFL, first with the now-defunct Pittsburgh Maulers, then with Jacksonville. He has since signed with Houston of the NFL.

The 1984 Heisman winner, Doug Flutie, was only occasionally flashy last year with New Jersey and now finds himself a potential No. 2 quarterback behind Jim Kelly now that the rosters of the Generals and the defunct Houston Gamblers have been merged.

On open drafts, the USFL is 1-for-3 in competition with the NFL in its No. 1 picks. The younger league won Rozier — he signed with the USFL even before the NFL draft — and lost quarterback Dan Marino to Miami and Jerry Rice to San Francisco. But that was when the USFL draft preceded the NFL's by about four months.

The USFL draft precedes by six days the opening of the league's $1.32 billion antitrust trial against the NFL.

The order of selection in the first round, starting at 9 a.m. EDT, is Orlando, Arizona, Jacksonville, Tampa Bay, Memphis, New Jersey, Birmingham and Baltimore. The open draft will consist of 12 rounds, 92 players in all. Each team will have 10 minutes in which to make its first-round pick, five minutes for each pick in the second through fifth rounds and three minutes in the sixth through 12th rounds.

Some teams which in the past traded picks to now-defunct teams have lost those picks. Conversely, those teams which acquired picks from since-folded franchises still have those picks.

Tyson Misses KO; Wins On Decision

GLENS FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Undefeated Mike Tyson knocked James "Quick" Tillis down late in the fourth round Saturday and went on to claim a unanimous decision in a 10-round heavyweight fight at the Glens Falls Civic Center.

Tillis became the first opponent to go the distance against the 19-year-old from Catskill, N.Y. Tyson had knocked out the first 19 opponents of his 13-month-old professional career in six rounds or less.

Jesse Ferguson lasted into the sixth round against Tyson in February, the longest any fighter had previously gone.

Tyson's knockdown came with eight seconds left in the fourth round when he landed a left hook to the head after Tillis, 27, had missed with a wild left hook of his own. Tillis, who weighed 207¾, was on his feet at the count of five and the round ended three seconds later, preventing Tyson from following up.

Tyson appeared to have Tillis in trouble again in the fifth round and also in the seventh, but there were no further knockdowns in the fight, televised live by ABC.

Starting in the eighth round, Tillis made a comeback, throwing jabs and moving to keep away from the body shots that Tyson, 215, had landed consistently in the first five rounds.

Tillis' mouth was bloodied from the sixth round on and a cut was opened briefly above his left eye in the seventh.

Judges Al Reid and Bernie Frieken scored it six rounds for Tyson and four rounds for Tillis, while Judge Tony Moratte had it eight rounds for Tyson and two rounds for Tillis.

Offensive tackle Ed White of the San Diego Chargers is on the board of directors of a bank in that city.

Walks Help Yanks Whip Texas

NEW YORK (AP) — This time, the New York Yankees walked all over the Texas Rangers.

"You can't keep putting guys on base without getting in trouble," said Don Mattingly, who tied a major-league record with three sacrifice flys as the Yankees beat Texas 9-4 Saturday.

The Yankees were outhit 14-8, but drew 11 walks and took advantage of two Texas throwing errors. The game came the day after the Rangers recieved 12 walks from New York pitchers in a 7-0 victory.

"It wasn't a real attractive game," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "It kind of started off bad and quickly got worse."

The Rangers loaded the bases on three straight singles to start the game, but rookie pitcher, Bob Tewksberry escaped the jam by striking out Darrell Porter and getting Gary Ward to ground into a double play.

Ricky Henderson, who matched a personal high by scoring four runs, led off the Yankees first with a single against rookie Bobby Witt. Henderson stole second on the next pitch, took third on a balk and scored on Mattingly's sacrifice fly.

Witt, who won his first two decisions took the loss, lasting only 1 1-3 innings and giving up five runs on two hits while walking six.

"He just didn't get a chance to settle down," Henderson said. "I knew I was making him nervous on the bases."

Witt admitted he got off to a shaky start, partly because of paying too much attention to Henderson, who walked three times and stole two bases.

"I was trying to keep him close, and then he stole second, and then I balked," Witt said.

The game featured a matchup of rookie starting pitchers who had both enjoyed success this season, Tewksbury of New York and Witt of Texas. Neither was sharp, although Tewksbury, 3-1, hung on for the victory, giving up four runs on 11 hits in six innings. Rod Scurry pitched the last three innings for his second save. Witt, 2-1, lasted only 1 2-3 innings and yielded five runs on two hits while walking six.

After Tewksbury escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the first, Henderson led off New York's half with a single, stole second, took third on a balk and scored on Mattingly's sacrifice fly.

Run-scoring singles by Curtis Wilkerson and Oddibe McDowell put Texas ahead in the top of the second, but the Yankees took the lead for good in the bottom of the second with four runs on only one hit and six walks. Porter's error, when he threw wildly trying to pick Ken Griffey off third with the bases loaded, produced the first run and Willie Randolph's bases-loaded walk made it 3-2. Mattingly followed with another sacrifice fly and reliever Ricky Wright walked Dave Winfield with the bases loaded.

Randolph singled home Henderson, who had walked and had stolen second in the fourth and the Rangers pulled within 6-4 in the fifth on a throwing error by Henderson in center and Porter's RBI groundout. The Yankees added three runs in the sixth on Petralli's throwing error, a sacrifice fly by Mattingly and Winfield's RBI double. Mattingly's three run-scoring fly balls in a game tied a record held by five others, most recently Vince Coleman of St. Louis earlier this week.

Boston.....4
Oakland.....3

BOSTON (AP) — The home run that wasn't got more attention than the homer that was Saturday in the Boston Red Sox' 4-3 victory over the Oakland A's.

The umpiring crew of Ken Kaiser, Terry Cooney, Steve Palermo and Larry Young cost Boston's Dwight Evans a two-run homer in the third inning.

However, the collective ruling that forced Evans to settle for a double didn't hurt the Red Sox in the end. Two outs later, Jim Rice drilled a two-run homer high into the left-field screen.

After Marc Sullivan opened the third with a line single high off the wall in left, Evans hit a tremendous shot to left-center. Virtually everybody in the ballpark saw it hit a stanchion holding up the net above the 37-foot wall and bounce back onto the field.

But the umpires missed it. Cooney held his ground at third, Kaiser at second, Young at first and Palermo behind the plate. No one made the usual trek to the outfield grass to follow the flight of the ball.

They wound up with a ruling that the ball hit the wall, not the upright. That held Evans to a double, with Sullivan stopping at third. Sullivan later scored on an infield grounder before Rice homered.

Kaiser and Evans got into a heated exchange. However, the Red Sox' arguments were rejected.

"It wasn't my call and that's what I was trying to tell him," Kaiser said.

Cooney said it was supposed to have been his call, although Kaiser was much closer. However, Cooney said he didn't see the ball because he was watching Sullivan rounding second.

"There's no question, that ball was gone," said Boston reliever Bob Stanley. "None of the umpires moved on it. I was standing on the top of the bullpen wall yelling and screaming, but it didn't do any good."

"They said the ball was off the fence and I asked whose call it was," Evans said. "Why wasn't anybody out there? I still don't know whose call it was. As long as we won, I don't care."

"I never did find out whose call it was," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "They said that sometimes the third base umpire goes out. I just didn't get any explanation. From where I was standing, the ball definitely hit the upright next to the light tower."

Reliever Sammy Stewart, who replaced starter Mike Brown after Oakland pulled into a 3-3 tie in the fifth, earned his second victory in three decisions with relief help. Stanley earned his third save.

The Red Sox scored the tie-breking run off Oakland starter Chris Codiroli, 2-3, in the sixth when Don Baylor walked, raced to third on Marty Barrett's hit-and-run single through a vacated shortstop hole and scored as Steve Lyons grounded into a double play.

Oakland took a 2-0 lead in the second on a single by Mike Davis, a fielder's-choice grounder by Alfredo Griffin, Bill Bathe's sacrifice, an RBI single by Ton Phillips and triple by Dwayne Murphy.

Then came the Boston third and the strange ruling by veteran umpire Ken Kaiser working at second base.

Marc Sullivan led off the inning with a line single high off the wall in left. Evans followed with a long drive which hit an upright of the screen atop the 37-foot wall in left-center for an apparent homer.

However, Kaiser ruled that the ball had hit the wall and rejected Boston arguments. Evans had to settle for a double, with Sullivan stopping at third.

Wade Boggs grounded out to Codiroli, but Sullivan scored as Bill Buckner grounded out to short. Rice then drilled his fourth homer of the season high into the screen for a 3-2 Boston lead. The drive extended Rice's hitting streak to 10 games.

Oakland moved into a tie in the fifth on singles by rookie Jose Canseco, hitting safely in his ninth straight game, Carney Lansford and Davis.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Paul Molitor has a possible explanation for why the young Milwaukee Brewers have come back so often in the early season to win.

"One possible theory is that these guys don't know any better," said Molitor, whose bases-loaded sacrifice fly to left-center in the 10th inning Saturday gave the Brewers a 4-3 victory, their fifth come-from-behind win this season.

"The kids are really battling back," added Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger, who has six rookies on his roster. "When you do it enough, you start believing you can do it."

Donnie Moore, 1-2, who failed to protect the Angels' two-run lead in the bottom of the ninth, gave up Ben Oglivie's leadoff single to right in the 10th. Rick Manning ran for Oglivie and Rob Deer bunted him to second.

Moore then walked Juan Castillo and Charlie Moore to load the bases and Molitor followed with a fly ball to left-center. Gary Pettis, the center fielder, caught the ball and he and Brian Downing slammed into each other and fell to the ground as Manning scored the winning run. They lay motionless on the field for a few moments, then were able to leave without assistance.

"After this game was over, I didn't need that — two ballplayers being out," Angels Manager Gene Mauch said.

For the first time, the Angels lost two in a row, the last major-league team to do so this year.

Ron Romanick, the Angels' starting pitcher, took a five-hitter and a 3-1 lead into the bottom of the ninth. But when Randy Ready led off with a double to left, California called on Moore to preserve the lead.

But Moore walked pinch-hitter Jim Gantner and, with one out, gave up run-scoring singles to Ernest Riles and Cecil Cooper. "Well, I can understand Cooper getting a hit off him, but that thing Riles got (a blooper into left field) off him made me cry," Mauch said.

The Brewers got a fourth-inning run when Oglivie and Deer singled, Ready sacrificed and Rick Cerone hit an RBI grounder.

California tied it in the fifth on Ruppert Jones' double and Dick Schofield's single, rookie Wally Joyner's seventh homer of the season put the Angels on top 2-1 in the sixth and they added an unearned run in the ninth off Bill Wegman. Milwaukee's rookie starter, when Downing doubled and scored as Ready misplayed Doug DeCinces' grounder to second.

TORONTO (AP) — Alvin Davis went 4-for-4, driving in a run, and Gorman Thomas knocked in two runs to lead the Seattle Mariners to a 4-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Saturday.

Mike Morgan, 2-2, making his fourth start and seventh appearance of the season, gave up eight hits, walked two and struck out three in seven innings. Pete Ladd, the Mariners' fourth pitcher, went the last 1 1-3 innings for his first save.

Toronto right-hander Jim Acker gave up three runs on six hits in his six-inning outing. He struck out five and walked none, but was tagged with his second loss against no wins as a result of three consecutive Seattle doubles in the fourth.

A double into the right-center field gap by Gorman Thomas scored Davis to put the Mariners ahead 2-1 and Thomas moved to third on a flyout before scoring Seattle's third run on Danny Tartabull's sacrifice fly. Thomas also singled home a run in the eighth for the Mariners.

Toronto had taken a 1-0 lead in the second when Willie Upshaw singled, moved to third on a groundout and a flyout and scored on a single by Rance Mulliniks.

Babe Ruth hit at least one home run in every American League ball park in 11 seasons.

Favored In Few Wins

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — For the seventh time since 1979, the favorite failed to win the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

Snow Chief, the California-bred colt who had been a strong contender to carry off the roses Saturday, finished 11th in the field of 16.

Jockey Alex Solis, who rode Snow Chief in the 1¼ mile classic, said afterwards that "he stumbled a little bit out of the gate and then I had to rush him a little to get a position."

Solis said that at the half mile, Snow Chief was "moving by himself very easily. At the three-sixteenth pole, four horses went past him and he didn't respond. He got very, very tired."

Jorge Velasquez, who was aboard Badger Land, called the Derby a "terrible, rough ride. I got very badly out of the gate."

He said that Badger Land "lost at least five lengths right out of the gate. From the start, I was too far back."

Velasquez also claimed that he got "bumped and run in the first turn and still my horse ran a good race. I wasn't expecting him to be so far back."

What would have happened if Badger Land hadn't been bumped?

"I would have been much closer and would have had a chance then."

Velasquez said "it's hard to control a 1,200-pound animal the first few jumps. He ran a good race considering."

Andretti Fastest In Indy Runs

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Practice for the Indianapolis 500 got underway at a fast but still unhurried pace Saturday, and Mario Andretti was the quickest of only 13 drivers who took laps on the 2½-mile track.

It was the fewest drivers on the track for an opening day of practice at Indianapolis since 1980, when just eight made their initial appearances.

Bobby Rahal, Andretti's son Michael and three-time winner Johnny Rutherford also were among the quickest drivers during Saturday's first session of testing for the May 25 race.

A year ago, Dick Simon led 16 drivers on the track, and his speed of 209.3 mph was the fastest first-day practice speed in Indy history. But that record was broken during the final minutes of practice Saturday when the elder Andretti steadily improved his speed from just over 208 mph to a top lap of 210.329. Minutes earlier, Michael had increased his best lap from just over 205 mph to 210.133.

Rahal, the fastest on the first day of practice two years ago, had a lap Saturday at 209.399, and Rutherford improved his best speed to 207.996.

Daily practice will continue through Friday as some 40 drivers, including seven former winners and eight rookies, try to build speed for next Saturday's first of four days of qualifications. Pole-position winner Pancho Carter set a four-lap record at 212.583 mph last year.

Practice began Saturday at mid-afternoon following opening ceremonies that included remarks by retired ir Force Gen. Chuck Yeager, who will drive the pace car starting the race.

The first driver on the track was veteran Chip Ganassi, whose car was positioned in the pits two hours before Chief Steward Tom Binford signalled the green light to start practice.

"We had a good head start," Ganassi said of his early jump. "You never know. It might rain the rest of the week, and then what's everybody going to do?

"We haven't had much time with the car at all, so we thought we'd bring it out. We didn't necessarily want to be the first car on the track, but we wanted to be out there and be one of the first to get some work done," Ganassi said.

Ganassi has driven in four previous races at Indianapolis, with his best finish in eighth place in 1983.

The only rookies on the track Saturday were Roberto Moreno of Brazil and Jan Lammers of Holland. Moreno had a fast lap of nearly 202 mph.

Other veterans taking practice included Josele Garza, whose top lap was 205.620; Herm Johnson, at 205.714; and Johnny Parsons, at 201.162. Also practicing were veterans Geoff Brabham, Kevin Cogan and Simon. Rahal also had a fast lap of 206.332 in his backup car.

Despite the relatively light action, Ganassi said, "The speeds are going up. I've never been in a car before that went out and by the third lap or so did 194. It's just an easy car to drive. It's going to be fast."

1. Mario Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., No.2, Lola-Cosworth, 210.329.
2. Michael Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., No.18, March-Cosworth, 210.133.
3. Bobby Rahal, Dublin, Ohio, No.3, March-Cosworth, 209.399.
4. Johnny Rutherford, Fort Worth, Texas, No.21, March-Cosworth, 207.996.
5. Herm Johnson, Eau Claire, Wis., No.28, March-Cosworth, 205.714.
6. Josele Garza, Mexico, No.55, March-Cosworth, 205.620.
7. r-Roberto Moreno, Brazil, No.9, Lola-Cosworth, 201.748.
8. Johnny Parsons, Brownsburg, Ind., No.10, Cosworth, 201.162.
9. Dick Simon, Capistrano Beach, Calif., No.23, Lola-Cosworth, 195.439.

Little Hole Was All Shoe Needed

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The hole appeared for only an instant, a glimpse of daylight shining through the cavalry charge of 3-year-olds heading through the stretch run of Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

An instant was all jockey Bill Shoemaker needed, though. He had been down this 1¼-mile road before, 23 times before, more times than any other jockey in history. He knew that an opportunity like that doesn't wait long for a decision to be made.

"I had a choice," Shoemaker said. "I could take a chance, save some ground that might make the difference."

He did not have to think twice about it.

"It was 1-2-3, boom," he said.

Shoemaker pointed Ferdinand for the gap, squeezed him through to the rail and on to victory in the 112th Derby.

Was it a tight fit?

Shoemaker smiled. "It might have been," he said. "I don't know. If you have the horse, you can make it through those holes."

And if you have 38 years of riding experience, that helps, too.

When he crossed the finish line 2¼ lengths ahead of English-bred Bold Arrangement, a thought occurred to the 54-year-old jockey, who likes to relax by playing golf.

"I thought, 'Old Jack Nicklaus did it (in the Masters) and I did it, too.'"

Score another one for the senior set.

Like Nicklaus marching triumphantly down the 18th fairway at Augusta last month, Shoemaker said the emotion of the moment got to him.

"I had a few tears in my eyes around the winner's circle," Shoemaker, the oldest jockey to win the race, said.

And he sent a chill up a few spines with his fourth Derby victory, and his first in 21 years.

"I thought this one was the best of the whole group," Shoemaker said. "I'm in the twilight of my career. Who knows if I'll ever have another chance to win the Derby. I thought a lot that maybe I had one more chance and that this horse might b it?"

Veteran...

Two colts foaled in England have won the Kentucky Derby.

They were Omar Khayyam in 1917 and Tomy Lee in 1959. Tomy Lee was ridden by a 27-year-old jockey named Bill Shoemaker, who also won the Derby with Swaps in 1955 and Lucky Debonair in 1965.

Only Bill Hartack and Eddie Arcaro have won more Derbies than Shoemaker — five each.

Groovy led at the end of the first quarter-mile after the run past the stands for the first time with Zabaleta second and Bachelor Beau third.

At this point, Shoemaker and Ferdinand were 11th.

When the field hit the quarter pole, Broad Brush was in front by a head over Bold Arrangement, who had a one-half length lead over Badger Land. Snow Chief, who had moved outside horsas on the turn, was already beginning to fade and was fourth.

At the quarter pole, Shoemaker had Ferdinand fifth and was four horses wide straightening for home.

Then, Shoemaker managed to weave Ferdinand between horses to reach the rail.

Why, the veteran was asked.

"To save ground," he said simply.

Save ground he did, and there was no catching Ferdinand in the run to the wire.

Before the race, Shoemaker assessed his chances for a fourth Derby by saying, "I know he has ability, it's just a question of his getting it all together. He's my best Derby horse of the last 5-10 years."

The Shoe had a lot to do with Ferdinand getting it all together.

"I'm happy for Charlie and I'm happy for myself," Shoemaker said.

Ferdinand, a son of Nijinsky II, who was an English Derby winner, won one of five races last year with one second and two thirds.

He opened his 3-year-old campaign with a second in the restricted Los Feliz Stakes at Santa Anita, then won in the restricted Santa Catalina and was second in the San Rafael.

His Derby prep was the Santa Anita Derby, in which he finished third.

Shop-Eze 11
Garris Evans..... 7

Monte Smith banged out two hits to help lead Shop-Eze Foodland to a 11-7 baseball victory over Garris-Evans as the Prep League opened play Saturday afternoon.

The first week's play, however, will not count in the conference standings. Official games will begin next Saturday.

Shop-Eze took the lead with two runs in the second inning and added four more int he third. Garris-Evans got on the board with its first run in the bottom of the third. Both teams scored once in the fourth to give Shop-Eze a 7-2 lead.

In the fifth, Shop-Eze pushed over what became the winning run. Grant Harman reached on an error and stole second. He scored when Smith singled.

Garris-Evans rallied for five runs in the sixth to cut the lead to 8-7, but three more Shop-Eze runs scored in the top of the seventh.

1st Citizens..... 13
Hendrix & Dail..... 11

First Citizens pushed over five runs in the sixth inning and went on to nip Hendrix & Dail, 13-11, in their first Prep League baseball game of the season Saturday.

The games do not count in the standings, nor will games played later this week. The first counting games are scheduled for next Saturday.

The Bankers pushed over two in the first, while H&D scored once. First Citizens came back with four in the second while Hendrix & Dail got two and trailed 6-3.

H&D closed it to two with one in the third, then tied it up with a pair in the fourth.

Afrer the Bankers got one in the top of the fifth, Hendrix & Dail scored three in its half of the fifth to take a 9-7 lead.

But in the sixth, First Citizens rallied for five to move out for good. Paul Griggs led off with a walk, and Marvin Gay reached on an error. A wild pitch scored Griggs and another let Gay score. Jason Wing reached on an error and Toure Claiborne walked. Kevin Hardee singled in Wing and a wild pitch plated Claiborne. Another brought home Hardee.

First Citizens added another in the seventh while H&D got one each in the sixth and seventh.

Matthew Cagle led H&D with two hits and was the only one in the game with more than one.

Little League

Sportsworld..... 6
Coca-Cola..... 0

Jay Kuykendall lost a no-hitter in the sixth inning as he pitched Sportsworld to a 6-0 baseball victory over Coca-Cola in the North State Little League Saturday.

Kuykendall, who struck out 15, saw his no-hitter spoiled by a single by Adam Charlton — the opposing pitcher — with one out in the sixth. Kuykendall walked but three.

Sportsworld got all the runs it needed in the second, scoring once. Kuykendall led off, reaching on an error. He advanced on a passed ball and scored on Shea Harper's double.

Sportworld added one in the third and four in the fifth.

Kuykendall, Harper and Steven Anthony each had two hits for Sportsworld.

Jaycees..... 24
Kiwanis..... 23

The Jaycees outlasted the Kiwanis in a North State Little League baseball slugfect Saturday, gaining a 24-23 decision.

The Kiwanis struck first, getting four runs in the first inning, but the Jaycees came right back to score six times in their half, taking the lead.

The Kiwanis closed it to 6-5 in the top of the second, only to see the Jaycees stretch it to 10-5 with four in their half of the frame. The Kiwanis added three in the third while the Jaycees got only two.

The Jaycees pulled further out with nine big runs in the fourth, running their lead to 21-8, but the Kiwanis rallied for six in the fifth to close within 21-14. Then, in the sixth, the Kiwanis came up with nine big runs, including a three-run homer by Marty Whichard to take a 23-21 lead.

But in the bottom of the sixth, the Jaycees pulled it out, scoring three times. Neal Eley walked and moved around on two wild pitches and a passed ball. Walks to Bryan Hill, Jennifer McAllister and Brandon Moore loaded the bases. Robbie Burlington then saw his grounder errored, allowing both Hill and McAllister to score to give the Jaycees the win.

Andre Eley led the Jaycee hitting with three while Ethan Brinn added two. Whichard had four for the Kiwanis while Jarrett McGalliad had three and Chris Haddock, Randy Vines and Brett Taylor each had two.

Pepsi-Cola..... 17
Wellcome 0

Dante Mayo hit an inside-the-park home run as he helped Pepsi-Cola storm past Wellcome, 17-0, in Tar Heel Little League baseball action Saturday.

Pepsi actually got all it was to need by scoring three in the first inning. Jon Gavigan led off with an error and Chuck Keel walked. With one away, Richie Grimsley walked, loading the bases. Chuck Williams singled in Gavigan and Will McKenzie was hit by a pitch, scoring Keel. An error allowed Grimsley to score.

Pepsi added eight in the second, one in the third and five in the fifth, including the two-run homer by Mayo.

Grimsley, McKenzie and Mayo each had two hits to lead Pepsi while Josh Potter and Jon Paul Devoe each had two for Wellcome.

1st Federal..... 9
True Value..... 8

Thomas Adams' three-run homer highlighted a seven-run rally by First Federal that carried past True Value Hardware, 9-8, in Tar Heel Little League baseball play Saturday.

True Value took the initial lead with twodin the first and added two more in the third. First Federal came up with its first runs in the fourth, scoring two. True Value then added one in the fifth and pushed in three more in the sixth for an 8-2 lead.

But First Federal then scored seven times in the bottom of the sixth to pull it out.

Eric Smith led off with a walk and Kevin Corbett drew one too. Adams then slapped his homer, cutting the lead to 8-5. Chris Gyves walked as did Chad McGehee and a walk to Berkley Womack loaded them up. Maceo Wilkins reached on a fielder's choice that got Womack but scored Gyves. Chad Mills walked, reloading the bases and Rives Mann singled in McGehee. Smith walked, forcing in Wilkins and an error let Mills scored the winning run.

Brooks Honeycutt led the True Value hitting with three while Craig Brannon added two. No one had more than one hit for First Federal.

Thomas Leads Braves To Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Atlanta's rookie shortshop Andres Thomas isn't playing very much at the moment, but that could soon change.

The 22-year-old Thomas banged out four hits Saturday, including three doubles, and scored three runs as the Braves defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 10-4 for their third straight win.

Thomas has only started five games, but has collected nine hits in 19 trips to the plate while fielding his position well.

"I don't mind sitting," Thomas said. "I just try to be ready when they need me. I think some day I will be a regular, but I'm happy right now."

Thomas played 15 games late last season with the Braves after spending most of the season with Greenville in the Southern League.

It wasn't certain in spring training that Thomas would make the club.

"It's like a dream come true," he said. "I couldn't be happier."

Braves manager Chuck Tanner said he had confidence in Thomas.

"I don't know if anyone else thought he would make the club, but I did," Tanner said. "He's really coming along at the plate and on defense, he can play as well as anybody."

Phillies Manager John Felske, whose team lost its third straight, was unhappy with starting pitcher Shane Rawley's performance.

"Rawley didn't have anything warming up and he didn't have anything during the game," Felske said. "We're not hitting well, not pitching well and on Friday, we didn't catch the ball. That makes it pretty tough."

Atlanta knocked out nine doubles in the game, one short of the team record and four shy of the major-league mark, by the 1931 St. Louis Cardinals. Glenn Hubbard had three doubles for the Braves.

Shane Rawley, 3-2, was battered for six runs, five them earned, in two innings and Dave Stewart, the second of four Philadelphia relievers, gave up three runs in two innings.

Rick Mahler, 2-4, allowed 11 hits in 6 2-3 innings and picked up his first victory since opening day. He struck out six and walked five before giving way to Paul Assenmacher.

The Braves took a 4-0 lead in the second when Bob Horner singled and scored on a double by Thomas. After Ozzie Virgil walked, Hubbard's double down the left field line drove in both runners. Hubbard later scored on Claudell Washington's grounder.

The Phillies scored twice in the bottom of the second on an RBI single by Milt Thompson and Rick Schu's sacrifice fly, but the Braves added two more in the top of the third on doubles by Dale Murphy and Horner. and reliever Larry Andersen's wild pickoff attempt.

The Braves added two runs in the fifth on RBI doubles by Virgil and Hubbard, and scored their final run in the sixth on a sacrifice fly by Horner. The Phillies scored in the sixth on Thompson's RBI single and added a run in the seventh when Tom Foley doubled in Von Hayes.

Montreal 7
Houston 6

MONTREAL (AP) — It was only a matter of time as far as Hubie Brooks was concerned.

"Sooner or later something had to happen," Brooks said after tripling home Jim Wohlford from first base in the 10th inning to give the Montreal Expos a 7-6 victory over the Houston Astros in near-freezing weather Saturday. "Both teams kept coming back, but it was so cold something had to give finally."

Andre Dawson led off the 10th with an infield single off Frank DiPino to extend his hitting streak to 13 games, but injured himself running down the line and was replaced by Wohlford.

Brooks then followed by slamming his second RBI hit of the game to help the Expos even their season record at 10-10.

"I saw it was going to be a close play so I ran hard and I pulled my right hamstring," Dawson said. "It was worth it though because it started the rally. It's not too serious and I'll be to play tomorrow (Sunday)."

Jeff Reardon pitched one inning of perfect relief to raise his record to 3-2. Last season, the Expos' top bullpen specialist won only two games all season.

"It was almost like getting a save, because it was a quick inning," Reardon said. "Anyway, now I'm ahead of last year's pace."

The Astros tied the game in the eighth inning when Glenn Davis singled off reliever Tim Burke to score Craig Reynolds from second base. The Expos had taken a 6-5 lead in the bottom of the seventh with three runs.

Jason Thompson drew a one-out walk from Julio Solano and Tim Wallach followed wilth a single and Vance Law drew another walk to load the bases.

Charlie Kerfeld replaced Salano and gave up a sacrifice fly to pinch-hitter Wayne Krenchicki. Andre Galarraga followed with a pinch-hit RBI single to tie the game and then Tim Raines put Montreal ahead with another single.

Montreal took the lead in the first inning when Houston starter Nolan Ryan hit Dawson and gave up a run-scoring double to Brooks.

The Astros came back with two in the second on Kevin Bass' RBI double and Ryan's run-scoring single. They added three more runs in the third, two of them on Davis' fifth homer of the year.

The Expos added a run in the third when Herm Winningham singled and scored on Thompson's double and another in the fifth when Wallach singled home Brooks from second.

New York.....4
Cincinnati 1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Keith Hernandez delivered a message Saturday to Cincinnati Reds starter John Denny — the days of the right-hander's dominance are over.

"This is a different club now," said Hernandez, who singled, doubled and hit a two-run homer off Denny to pace the New York Mets to a 4-1 victory Saturday, their 13th in 14 games.

Denny, 1-3, brought a 16-5 career mark against the Mets into the game. The right-hander had six consecutive victories over the Mets from 1983 until last year, when he went 2-1 against New York.

"He's got one of the better sinkers in the league," Hernandez said. "It's a very, very late sinker. My approach is if he starts the ball a half-foot above the knee, don't swing because it'll sink."

Three Are Charged

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Coach Howard Schnellenberger said Saturday that he had talked with three of his football players after they were arrested for shoplifting, but declined to discuss what was said.

Arrested at 4:45 p.m. Friday at the Lazarus store in the Oxmoor Shopping Center here were sophomore quarterback Jay Gruden, 19; linebacker Anthony LaRubbio and Joseph Gomez, 21.

The years they have been in school and Gomez's position were not immediately available.

The three, along with 19-year-old James Hamilton III, were charged with theft by unlawful taking over $100, police said. The merchandise was valued at $103.

The three players also were charged with receiving stolen property over $100 and Gruden and Hamilton were additionally charged with criminal facilitation and criminal conspiracy.

"I'm disappointed something like this would happen," said Schnellenberger, who was attending the Kentucky Derby. "I want to reserve any comment until we learn all the facts though."

Schnellenberger said he would not discuss possible suspensions or other aspects of the situation until all the details have come out.

Defensive tackle Bob Baumhower of the Miami Dolphins owns a company that manufactures a water machine that operates like a vacuum cleaner.

Hernandez's seventh-inning home sank the Reds to their seventh consecutive loss and 11 in the last 12 games. New York is 15-4, the best start in team history and the top record in the major leagues. Cincinnati has the worst record in the majors at 5-14.

"I don't think anybody's having any overall fun," player-manager Pete Rose said. "The other dugouts are having fun. It's no fun watching them have fun."

Left-hander Bob Ojeda went seven innings for his fourth victory without a loss. Ojeda, making his fourth start after opening the season in the bullpen, struck out two and walked four, yielding to Jesse Orosco in the eighth.

"Bob pitched a great game," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "He was a little wild early on, and off and on. Certainly he had the pitches when he needed to make them."

Singles by Danny Heep and Ray Knight set up the Mets' two-run second inning. Howard Johnson grounded to Nick Esasky, who stepped on first base for the out and then threw wildly home as Heep scored, with Knight taking third on the error. Catcher Barry Lyons, making his second start of the season, grounded out to score Knight.

Cincinnati scored in the second as Buddy Bell topped an infield single to Ojeda, whose wild throw to first sent Bell to third. Sal Butera singled to right, trimming the lead to 2-1.

Denny served up a one-out triple to Lenny Dykstra in the seventh and Hernandez's first homer of the season to right. Hernandez has an eight-game hitting streak, going 13-for-33 over that span with five doubles.

Ojeda suffocated a seventh-inning rally by getting Dave Parker to pop out and Esasky to fly out with the bases loaded. Orosco pitched the last two innings for his fifth save and his second in two games.

Chicago 6
San Francisco.....5

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Terry Francona, playing his second game for the Chicago Cubs, capped a four-run ninth inning with a two-run single for a 6-5 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

A two-run, pinch-hit homer by Jeffrey Leonard in a three-run seventh gave the Giants a 4-2 lead entering the ninth.

But Jody Davis opened the Cubs' ninth with a walk and Greg Minton, 1-2, replaced starter Scott Garrelts. Pinch-hitter Davey Lopes blooped a single to right-center and pinch-hitter Thad Bosley followed with a run scoring single to center that cut the Giants' lead to one run. Pinch-hitter Jerry Mumphrey's single to left tied the game.

Bosley was then thrown out at the plate on a fielder's-choice grounder by Shawon Dunston's fielder's-choice grounder. Dunston stole second before Francona, who was brought up from the minors this past week, came through with his game-winning blow that gave the Cubs a 6-4 lead.

The Giants scored a run in the bottom of the inning on a homer by Will Clark, his fourth.

Rough Start Hurt Favorites

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Saturday's Kentucky Derby was over almost as it began for several horses, including favorites Snow Chief and Badger Land, because of a rough start, the thoroughbreds' jockeys said.

"I got killed out of the gate," Jorge Velasquez, jockey of Badger Land, who finished fifth, said. "He got bothered badly. I was lucky not to go down. I was in serious trouble for the first three or four strides.

"I was not expecting to be so far back like that. Then, going into the first turn, he got bumped in the rear end and it knocked him sideways for a second. When he made a move on the turn, I thought he still could do it, but it was probably asking too much for him to overcome all that. He ran a good race considering."

Alex Solis, jockey of favored California-bred Snow Chief, said his colt "stumbled leaving the gate and then I had to rush him a little to get a position."

Vince Bracciale managed to recover from the start to have Broad Brush finish third. "There was a jam at the break, but I came out of it smelling like a rose. I was lucky."

Mogambo's jockey, Jacinto Vasquez, said, "I had a very rough trip. Coming out of the gate, for about one-sixteenth of a mile, the horse outside of me was making a left-hand turn and almost dropped me and two other guys."

Jockey Bill Shoemaker, aboard the winner Ferdinand, was "lucky he didn't go down," according to Vasquez.

Shoemaker said the logjam at the start forced him to pull up his horse, which ran dead last at the start, but he had time to make up for it.

"It wasn't that difficult except for the first wire," he said.

Johnson Leads ECU In 11-6 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Winfred Johnson recorded his 10th victory of the season, tying a school record, and banged a home run to help lead the Pirates to an 11-6 victory over Division III powerhouse N.C. Wesleyan Friday night.

The Battling Bishops came in ranked third among Division III teams with a 38-4 record, having beaten such teams as UNC Charlotte, one of the Sun Belt Conference leaders; Wake Forest and Duke.

But Johnson held them in check through five innings to get the win and Jake Jacobs came on to go the final four and earn his second save of the year.

Johnson's victory, which ties the school mark held by five other players, including his own 1984 season. Teammate Jim Peterson reached that mark earlier this season and the two have the chance to advance past that point in games remaining.

(Peterson was expected to get the call for Saturday night's game with UNC Wilmington in a key Colonial Athletic Association game.)

"Both of our pitchers did an outstanding job," Coach Gary Overton said afterward. We made a few defensive mistakes behind them, but I hope we can work those out quickly."

Overton was also pleased with the way the Pirates hit the ball, banging out 13 hits on the night. Three of them were home runs and accounted for six of the 11 Pirate runs. "There's no question that the home runs were the key to our getting ahead, but we also got some timely hitting that helped us score the rest of the runs," he said. "I was a little surprised that we hit the ball that well after a three-day layoff."

Wesleyan struck first, getting a run in the top of the first. Rusty Dail led off with a walk and with one away, Roy Hill doubled to center. Paul Prisco followed with a groundout that allowed Dail to score.

Chris Bradberry tied the game in the bottom of the first with a two-out solo home run to right field, his ninth roundtripper of the year.

The Pirates then took the lead in the second inning, scoring two more with the long ball. Mike Sullivan led off with a ground-rule double to left and Jay McGraw followed with his eighth home run of the season, making it 3-1.

The Bishops, however, rallied for two in their half of the third, tying the game up again. Dail singled and Gary Ormsby reached on an infield hit. An error on the play let both runners move up a base. Roy Hill's ground out scored Dail and Prisco's sacrifice fly brought in Ormsby.

East Carolina again went right back out with one in the bottom of the third. Greg Hardison walked with one away and Johnson drew a walk with two outs. Sullivan then banged another ground-rule double to left center, scoring Hardison for a 4-3 lead.

The Pirates then broke it open in the fourth, scoring six big runs as they sent 12 men to the plate in the inning. Steve Sides opened up with a single and Mark Cockrell reached first on an error. Both were sacrificed up and Mont Carter doubled to left center, scoring both of them. Hardison walked and Bradberry singled to right, scoring Carter.

East Carolina reloaded the bases, but were unable to push in another run in the frame.

Wesleyan came back with two in the top of the fifth, cutting it to 10-5. Ormsby reached on an error and with one out, Prisco walked. After two were down, Gene Sanguinetti singled to score Ormsby. Jim Provanzano then reached on an error, bringing in courtesy runner Kenny Anderson.

The Bishops cut it to 10-6 with a homer by Prisco in the seventh inning.

East Carolina got the final run in the eighth. Bradberry opened the inning with a single and scored on Johnson's double to right.

Johnson finished the night with three hits for the Pirates, as did Bradberry and Sullivan. Sanguinetti had two to pace the Wesleyan attack.

The win boosted the Pirates to 36-7 on the year, extending their school record victory total.

The Pirates, following their trip to UNC Wilmington on Saturday night, were to close out the regular season on Friday at N.C. State. They then will host the Colonial Athletic Association tournament which starts at Harrington Field on May 15.

Elliott Appears Talladega King

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Bill Elliott is "King of the Hill" at Alabama International Motor Speedway, and there may not be anybody strong enough to push him off the peak.

"A lot of people had pretty much caught up to him at Daytona (in February)," Bobby Allison said. "But I'm not so sure that means much here this week."

Allison will start next to pole-sitter Elliott in the front row of Sunday's Winston 500, a race which will feature the fastest field in the history of stock car racing.

Rick Wilson led the second round of qualifying on Friday with a fast lap of 205.317 mph, nailing down the 21st starting position in the 42-car lineup.

More interesting was the speed of the 40th qualifier, Jimmy Means, who was clocked at 202.563. The last two starters in Sunday's race were added as provisional starters and their qualifying speeds don't count, but the average speed for the top 40 qualifiers was a sizzling 205.339 mph.

Only the starting fields for the 1985 Indianapolis 500 (208.138), which remains the only auto race ever run with all 200-mph-plus qualifiers, and the second Indy-car race at Michigan International Speedway last season (209.792) had higher average qualifying speeds.

Elliott led the way Thursday in the opening round of time trials with an all-time stock car mark of 212.229 mph, which is the 15th fastest official qualifying lap ever turned in in auto racing.

That was nearly 3 mph faster than Allison's 209.274.

"Everybody's going to slow down some when they get their race setups, but if he's still three miles an hour faster, whew!" Allison said. "I don't think anybody would be able to stay with him if he is."

But Elliott said Friday he doesn't expect to have the kind of advantage he did a year ago when he was about 4 mph faster, and thus was able to make up a two-lap deficit after encountering problems with an oil leak.

"I can't believe we'll be that much faster than everybody in a 500-mile race," he said. "That's an awful long way and so many things can happen. But I do know that our goal was to come here and beat our record and win the race. We're halfway there."

The race, which will be televised live on ESPN, is scheduled to start at 2 p.m. EDT.

Despite the amazing speeds that have been turned in since practice officially opened Wednesday, there had been no crashes until veteran Tommy Gale lost it on a qualifying lap Friday.

Gale tagged the inside wall after spinning off the third turn. He escaped injury and later was added to the field as a provisional starter, along with Buddy Arrington. Both made it on the basis of last year's point standings.

Arrington actually was one of the 45 drivers who posted qualifying speeds over 200, hitting 202.542 mph. But Gale was well off the pace in his Thursday qualifying run at 198.260.

The 40 starters officially over 200 easily breaks the stock car record of 26, set in the Daytona 500. Last year's Winston 500 had 18 starters over 200.

Ken Ragan, who failed to make the lineup despite a qualifying lap of 202.371, also crashed in the fourth turn Friday during a qualifying run. He was not injured.

Clark Hurls Rose By Beddingfield

STANTONSBURG — Tim Clark threw a one-hit shutout at Wilson Beddingfield Friday night as the suddenly revived Rose High School baseball team came away with a 2-0 Big East victory.

Clark struck out five and walked three in going the distance in the game. The lone base hit against him, by Greg Lamm, came in the sixth inning. Prior to that frame, the Bruins had gotten only three men on base, two by error and one by a walk.

In the sixth, however, the Bruins mounted their best effort, only to fall short. With one away, Kenny Howell walked and Lamm got the hit, moving Howell to third. Russell Best's grounder back to short, however, was relayed to the plate in time to get Howell and Clark fanned the next batter to end the inning.

Rose banged out seven hits in the game, but they were scattered, one coming in each inning. However, the Rampants made them pay off enough to score twice in the contest.

The first run came in the second inning after Rose had left a man standing on third in the first.

Robbie Ehrmann walked after two were away in the second and stole second. He then scored on Jason Galloway's single.

The other run came over in the fourth. Scott Davis singled and Axel Smith's bunt was errored on the attempt to get Davis at second, allowing him to move on to third, where he was put out. Smith stole second and scored when Galloway reached on an error.

Rose had threats in the fifth and seventh, but failed to capitalize on them.

The Rampants advance to 6-4 in Big East play, 12-6 overall.

Rose returns to action on Tuesday night, traveling to Kinston.

Steve Nobles tossed a three-hitter at Union Carbide Friday as the Optimists pulled out a 6-2 baseball victory in the North State Little League.

Nobles struck out 11 in getting the victory.

Union Carbide struck first with a run in the second, but the Optimists got all they needed in the third, scoring three times.

With two away in the third, Dyron Langley walked, moving up on a passed ball and a wild pitch. Shawn Gordon walked and Mitch Jones singled in Langley, then stole second. Michael Beland walked, loading the bases, and a double by Nobles brought in both Gordon and Jones for a 3-1 lead.

The Optimists added three more in the fifth while Union Carbide got one more in the sixth.

Polynice Charged In Shoplifting

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — One day before Virginia's Olden Polynice announced he was leaving school to play professional basketball, he was charged with petit larceny, authorities said.

Polynice was accused Wednesday of stealing a $16.97 stereo headset from Rose's department store here, said police Sgt. W.S. Tomlin. Polynice will appear in General District Court on May 30 to answer the misdemeanor charge.

Neither Rose's officials nor Polynice would comment on the charge. Rich Murray, sports information director at the university, said the athletic department and Polynice's coach, Terry Holland, also would have no comment.

Polynice, a former New York City high school star, was the successor to Ralph Sampson at Virginia. He led the team in scoring and rebounding during his sophomore and junior seasons, earning its most valuable player award both years.

This season, after averaging 18.1 points and eight rebounds a game, the 6-foot-11 junior was named second-team All-Atlantic Coast Conference and was accorded honorable mention nonors on The Associated Press All-America team.

Polynice had said after Virginia's final game of the season that he would stay with the Cavaliers for his senior year, but announced Thursday he had changed his mind and would enter next month's National Basketball Association draft.

"Things have come up that have made the decision a lot easier," he said in an interview with the Charlottesville Daily Progress. "If I had stayed I might have been more unhappy."

In November 1984, during his sophomore season, he was acquitted in a school honor trial after being accused of turning in another student's paper.

Polynice said he plans to finish work on his English degree in the off-season.

Dodgers Continue To Rebound

By The Associated Press

The last time they met in Dodger Stadium, the St. Louis Cardinals were beating the host Dodgers to clinch the National League pennant.

Of course, it is less than a month into the baseball season. But the Dodgers, who were 6-13, hae won six straight games and finally are playing as expected. The Cardinals started well but have dropped 11 of their last 12, including a 3-2 loss to Los Angeles on Friday night.

"The Cardinals are too good to be playing the way they are now," said Mike Marshall, whose two-run homer climaxed a three-run third inning for the Dodgers. Marshall leads the National League with seven homers.

"When the pitching staff gives up one or two runs, we have a good chance of winning," said Marshall. "More importantly, the home runs are driving in the runs and giving our pitchers an early lead."

Jerry Reuss got the early lead this time and pitched well until the Cardinals knocked him out in the seventh. Tom Niedenfuer and Ken Howell preserved the win.

Elsewhere, it was Pittsburgh 4, San Diego 0; Atlanta 7, Philadelphia 1; New York 8, Cincinnati 7; Houston 6, Montreal 3, and Chicago 6, San Francisco 5.

Reuss, 2-0, limited the Cardinals to a pair of third-inning infield hits until he was knocked out by consecutive singles from Willie McGee, Jack Clark and Tito Landrum with none out in the seventh. Landrum's hit drove in McGee to end a Dodger string of 26 consecutive scoreless innings pitched.

"I'm very happy with the way I pitched tonight but I'd like to finish my game and be more consistent," said Reuss.

John Tudor, who left the game after four innings with stiffness in his shoulder, was the loser.

"We just haven't done the things we're capable of doing,' he said. "We've been leaving men on base and the pitchers are not making the pitches they're supposed to make. We haven't capitalized on the opportunities we've had, and we deserve to lose."

Forced Out

Philadelphia Phillies' Juan Samuel watches his throw to first after forcing out Atlanta Brave Rafael Ramirez at second in the first inning of play at Philadelphia Friday. The throw was too late for the double play. (AP Laserphoto) inning complete game in almost four years, holding the host Phillies to five hits, striking out nine and walking seven. Palmer, who pitched a five-inning perfect game in April 1984, allowed only two hits after the third inning. He threw 160 pitches.

Bob Horner had four hits and drove in two runs for Atlanta, which handed Steve Carlton his fourth loss in five decisions.

Palmer has had elbow and shoulder problems for six seasons and the Braves are looking to get him as much work as possible.

"I think it's good for his arm for him to throw a lot of pitches," said Manager Chuck Tanner. "I think it will help his arm to get stronger."

"I threw too many balls, that's for sure, but I'm really pleased to have gone all the way," said Palmer, who signed with the Braves as a free agent in February.

Mets 8, Reds 7

New York, which has won 12 of its last 13 games, built an 8-2 lead with Keith Hernandez, Ray Knight and relief pitcher Roger McDowell knocking in two runs each. But a five-run Cincinnati eighth made it close.

Park Leads Rose Girls

Kathy Park scored a hat trick, scoring three goals, as she led Rose High School to a 4-0 soccer victory over Wilson Beddingfield Friday.

Her first goal came 15:13 into the first period as she scored off a breakaway.

The final goal came 22:32 into the second period as Park put in a crossing shot.

Rose had 23 shots on goal while the Beddingfield goalie recorded eight saves. Beddingfield, totally dominated in the game, got off only two shots, with goalies Chris Holec and Gloria Guttierez each recording one save.

The victory boosts the Rose record to 4-2 on the year. The Rampettes travel to Wilson Hunt on Tuesday for their next match.

Braves 7, Phillies 1

The People That Count Not Talking About Ray

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — People are talking about Sugar Ray Leonard coming out of retirement to fight Marvelous Marvin Hagler, but not the people who can put the match together, says Leonard's attorney.

There are no negotiations for such a fight, Mike Trainer said Friday, one day after Leonard had said on a Washington television station that he would consider fighting Hagler, but no one else.

"The ball is in Marvin's court," Trainer said in a telephone interview from his office at Bethesda, Md. "It's a question of whether Marvin finds an interest in it."

Leonard, who will turn 30 on May 17, last fought May 11, 1984, in a one-bout comeback against Kevin Howard.

"I'm shocked," Pat Petronelli, Hagler's co-manager said when contacted at Brockton, Mass. "I still don't believe it."

Hagler was vacationing on a private yacht in the Caribbean, Petronelli said.

Hagler next fight is scheduled sometime in November, a rematch against Thomas Hearns, who he knocked out in the third round April 15, 1985. In his last fight, he knocked out John "The Beast" Mugabi in the 11th round last March 10.

"I know exactly what it takes to beat the man," Leonard told WDVM. "I'm not coming back to have a career. I had a career."

It appeared Leonard, a former undisputed welterweight champion, was headed for a major money match against Hagler when he ended an 18-month retirement to fight Howard at Worcester, Mass.

Leonard had retired Nov. 9, 1982, several months after undergoing surgery for a detached retina in the left eye. The Howard fight was postponed once when Leonard underwent a surgical procedure to tighten the retina in the right eye.

Leonard, looking tenatative, got up from a fourth-round knockdown to stop Howard in the ninth round. After the fight he retired again.

Puckett Is Hitting 'Em Well

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

No wonder Kirby Puckett is hitting so well this year. Anyone would if they were swinging at baseballs twice their normal size.

"It looks like a softball right now, I guess," Puckett said after going 3-for-5, including a home run, in sparking the Minnesota Twins past the Detroit Tigers 10-1 Friday night.

Puckett hit the first pitch of the game from Jack Morris for his 10th homer of the season. Puckett leads the major leagues in homers after hitting only four during his last two seasons.

"I don't want to even think about what the rest of the season holds," he said. "It seems like a dream so far. I'm doing everything well mechanically."

In other American League games, Kansas City beat Baltimore 5-0, Texas downed New York 7-0, Seattle edged Toronto 3-2 in 11 innings, Cleveland got past Chicago 7-5 in 10 innings, Oakland topped Boston 4-1 and Milwaukee held off California 5-4.

Puckett raised his batting average to .396 and extended his hitting streak to 15 games.

"He's one of the hottest hitters I've ever seen," Minnesota Manager Ray Miller said. "Kirby's a strong man, has a live bat and believes in himself. He's hitting all the pitchers.

Steve Lombardozzi added a home run and Gary Gaetti contributed three hits to Minnesota's 12-hit attack. The Twins also got 12 walks.

Winner Mike Smithson, 3-2, pitched a six-hitter. Morris, 3-3, lasted only 1 1-3 innings and gave up four runs on four hits, including the 11th home-run ball he has thrown this season — tops in the majors.

"I just never got loose," Morris said, adding that it was 51 degrees when the game started with a sharp wind. "I never sweated one drop. I told (pitching coach) Billy Muffett in the bullpen I couldn't get loose."

Royals 5, Orioles 0

Bret Saberhagen, who had lost his last two decisions, scattered 10 hits to lead Kansas City past visiting Baltimore.

Saberhagen, the 1985 AL Cy Young winner, evened his record at 2-2 as he struck out six and walked one.

Rangers 7, Yankees 0

Ed Correa, the youngest player in the major leagues, threw a three-hitter and Scott Fletcher drove in three runs with two doubles, leading Texas over New York.

Correa, 2-2, who turned 20 last Tuesday, struck out nine in his first complete game.

The visiting Rangers took advantage of 12 walks from three Yankee pitcher. Bob Shirley, 0-2, walked nine in 5 2-3 innings — the most walks given up by a New York pitcher since Rudy May walked nine on June 1, 1975.

Texas acquired both Correa and Fletcher from the White Sox last November for Dave Schmidt and Wayne Tolleson.

A's 4, Red Sox 1

Joaquin Andujar's first appearance in Fenway Park was impressive, as he pitched a five-hitter in his first AL complete game.

Andujar, 3-1, won his third straight game.

Jose Canseco hit a two-run homer, his seventh, in the fourth inning. Dave Kingman and Bruce Bochte connected for consecutive home runs in the sixth off Al Nipper, 2-3.

Mariners 3, Blue Jays 2

Danny Tartabull, who had homered earlier, singled with one out in the 11th off reliever Mark Eichhorn, 2-2. Tartabull stole second, and Alvin Davis and Gorman Thomas drew two-out walks.

Gordon relieved Eichhorn and Cowens hit a liner that bounced off the pitcher's chest. The ball rolled behind the mound and Gordon picked it up but threw late to first base.

Brewers 5, Angels 4

Rookie Juan Nieves won his first game and rookie Dan Plesac earned his first save as Milwaukee beat California.

Niieves, 1-1, gave up two runs on nine hits in 6 2-3 innings. Plesac barely held on as the Angels rallied for two runs in the ninth on an RBI double by Brian Downing and an RBI single by Doug DeCinces.

Don Sutton, 0-3, took the loss as he failed in his fifth try this season at career victory No. 296.

Indians 7, White Sox 5

Tony Bernazard and Chris Bando delivered run-scoring singles in the 10th inning, helping Cleveland seesaw past Chicago.

The Indians trailed 4-2 going into the top of the ninth, but Joe Carter hit a two-run triple and scored on the play when shortstop Ozzie Guillen's relay bounced away from catcher Joel Skinner.

The White Sox made it 5-5 in their half of the ninth on an RBI single by pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston. The game at Comiskey Park was interrupted for several minutes in the seventh inning. Chicago's Reid Nichols hit a fly ball to left-center, and when a fan interfered with Mel Hal's attempt at catching the ball, umpire Drew Coble called Nichols out.

THANK YOU

I would like to thank the citizens of Pitt County for their contributions and time to make our campaign possible. Your help and support has been greatly appreciated.

Ralph L. Tyson

Paid For By Committee To Re-Elect
Ralph L. Tyson Sheriff Of Pitt County.

We've engineered dependability into every central air conditioning system we make.

When you buy a central air conditioning system, you want dependability and freedom from worry. You want a system that's tough enough to stand up to anything summer can dish out. To insure that our systems give you the dependability you're looking for, we engineer it into them. And, before any Heil product goes to market, we put it through one of the toughest product testing labs in the country—our own. If it doesn't measure up, it never leaves the drawing board.

Harper's Goal Wins For Mavs

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

It took two years for Derek Harper to exorcise the nightmare.

Two years ago, the Dallas guard, mistakingly thinking the Mavericks were leading, dribbled away the final seconds, giving the Los Angeles Lakers an NBA playoff victory.

Friday night, Harper knew Dallas was one point down when, with three seconds to go, the ball bounced out of a melee under the basket and straight to him. Harper, standing just outside the three-point stripe, sank his jumper — his second three-pointer in the final 46 seconds — to lift the Mavericks to a 110-108 victory over Los Angeles.

"I can't say I want to redeem myself, but the Lakers are the best team in the world," said Harper. "I hope this puts two years ago to rest. I've been able to joke about it. It was a mistake.

"It is important to learn from your mistakes, and I feel I have."

Despite the defeat, the Lakers, seeking to become the first NBA team in 25 years to win consecutive titles, lead the best-of-seven series 2-1 with the Game 4 scheduled in Dallas on Sunday.

In other games Friday night, Boston stopped Atlanta 111-107 to take a 3-0 lead, and Denver edged Houston 116-115.

"They should bottle this one and put it in the archives," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "It was a wild, hellacious finish, but we have nobody to blame but ourselves. We'll be back strong Sunday, though."

Harper, who finished with 24 points, had tied the game at 105 with 46 seconds to go on a three-pointer. But the Lakers came back on Byron Scott's three-point shot with 28 seconds left before Dallas' Rolando Blackman hit a layup to cut the deficit to a point.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored a game-high 28 points for Los Angeles, but had just one basket in the fourth quarter. Abdul-Jabbar played in his 172nd playoff game, tying an NBA record held by John Havlicek of Boston.

"I feel good about our position," Riley said. "We're up 2-1, and that's a lot better than being 1-2."

Celtics 111, Hawks 107

"I've been in the position before, and being down 3-0 is obviously not a good one," Boston's Larry Bird said after leading the Celtics to their third straight victory over Atlanta with 28 points, nine rebounds and 12 assists. "There may be some team in the league that can beat us four straight, but I've yet to see one."

Boston leads 3-0, and no team in NBA history has overcome a 3-0 deficit in a best-of-7 playoff series. It also was the 10th consecutive victory for the Celtics over the Hawks and their 13th in a row in games played in Atlanta.

The fourth game of the series will be played in Atlanta on Sunday.

Boston never trailed after Dennis Johnson drilled a three-point basket from the left corner to make it 86-83 with 1:35 left in the third quarter. Then Kevin McHale and Danny Ainge scored five points apiece in the final 3½ minutes to keep the Celtics in front.

"There is no reason to play any more games than we have to," Ainge said.

Dominique Wilkins paced Atlanta with 38 points.

Nuggets 116, Rockets 115

Alex English rebounded from a playoff shooting slump to score 33 points and Bill Hanzlik added 21 as Denver nipped Houston. The victory drew the Nuggets to within 2-1 in the best-of-seven series, with Game 4 to be held in Denver on Sunday.

The home team now has won the last 12 games in the battle between the two Western Conference rivals.

Houston's Akeem Olajuwon scored 31 points before fouling out with 1:18 left, while Ralph Sampson had 27.

Hanzlik, coming back from a back injury, scored 13 points in a three-minute span late in the first quarter and early in the second period to spark Denver to a 36-31 lead it never relinquished.

Life Changed For Sullivan After 1985 Indy 500 Win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Life hasn't stopped spinning for Danny Sullivan since he took a spin and still won the Indianapolis 500 last year.

"Winning Indy changed my life completely," he said. "I don't think it'll ever be the same because as long as I keep racing, and even after, I'll be one of the few people who won Indy."

Sullivan, 35, was just another good driver when he showed up at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway last May. On race day, the Indy-car glamour boy wasn't even one of the favorites.

But once the gentlemen started their engines, he came on strong to challenge front-running Mario Andretti, the 1969 Indy winner.

Sullivan took the lead with a daring move coming out of the first turn, and suddenly found himself spinning at 190 mph, the concrete wall beckoning his red and white March.

Andretti, hard on the brakes, snuck past, but Sullivan somehow avoided a crash, roared after Andretti and passed him — this time for good.

"Sullivan Spins And Wins" headlines proclaimed the followng day.

He's been spinning ever since.

"This is a title you always carry with you. There's a lot of responsibility that goes with it," Sullivan said, just before practice opened this weekend for the May 25 race. "I've got sponsors and team obligations and endorsements and I'm being pulled in a million directions.

"For me, this has been financially rewarding and winning Indy and getting this kind of attention is something you always work for."

So is winning, which he hasn't done consistently since last May.

Sullivan has qualified well at nearly every race he's entered, but because of mechanical problems, he has finished only a handful of events and won only the season-finale last November at Miami.

Driving for the elite Penske Racing Team, headed by perfectionist Roger Penske, that isn't good enough. Penske's drivers have won five Indys and four of the last seven.

"It was really strange the way things happened," Sullivan said. "At Cleveland, we're running off to a big lead and something silly breaks. At the Meadowlands, I got too aggressive early and made a mistake. It was never the same thing twice.

"But we were always knocking on the door. That's one of the reasons for joing Penske, to be competitive in every race.

"We were more frustrated than disappointed. You have to remember we had nine front-row starting positions and led 10 races and led a lot of miles.

Different Game For The Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — It's going to be a different game at Notre Dame this fall, orchestrated by a new football coach who cracks jokes — and the whip.

Lou Holtz, who succeeded the embattled Gerry Faust, already has won his players' respect as a tough taskmaster.

"When he says jump, we ask how high," said fifth-year senior guard John Askin.

"He cracks jokes when things are going right," said sophomore quarterback Steve Belles. "But when it comes to getting things done, he's tough."

Holtz — slim, red-haired and bespectacled — is also a master of one-liners and an amateur magician; both skills may come into play before the season is through.

Holtz, 49, replaces a coach who was 30-26-1 in five seasons. Faust's accomplishments would have been acceptable at most schools, but not Notre Dame, where excellence is expected and good is never good enough.

Yet, if the alumni expect Holtz to wave a magic wand and turn the program around instantly, they had better think again.

"I am not a miracle worker," said Holtz, who brings a 116-65-5 record to the Golden Dome from past coaching stops that included North Carolina State, Arkansas and, most recently, Minnesota. "I'm a football coach."

But the alumni aren't the only ones looking for a new direction. Holtz's players expect things to change as well.

"It's a new start," said Shawn Heffern, a fifth-year senior guard who adds, "I'm glad I have the opportunity to come back.

"I heard a lot of great things about Lou Holtz and found out they are true," he said.

"He doesn't have a whole lot of patience with his quarterbacks and he'll be the first to tell you," said Steve Beuerlein, who was yanked in the spring game after tossing two interceptions, but came back in the second half with a pair of TD passes.

When Holtz took over, some thought he might bypass Beuerlein, a passer, for Terry Andrysiak, who is the better runner.

But Holtz already has named Beuerlein his No. 1 quarterback. That may be because Notre Dame lacks a strong running attack and Holtz's best talent includes flanker Tim Brown, split end Milt Jackson and tight end Alvin Miller.

Still, Buerlein said, "Some days when a quarterback makes a mistake, he'll just put in another one. I would say I'm starting over at Notre Dame. "You can forget what's happened in the past."

Everyone, that is, but Holtz, who dismisses the pressure but who is certain to be caught up in the tempest of tradition on the small, private school campus.

Notre Dame's considerable following — the so-called "subway alumni" — won't care that Holtz's first team was constructed largely without his say, or that it lacks a running attack strong enough to build an offense around.

Those are just messy details to the Irish fans, spoiled by the likes of Knute Rockne and the .897 winning percentage he fashioned; Frank Leahy, who followed his mentor by posting an .855 standard; or Ara Parseghian, who brought two national championships to Notre Dame during an 11-year tenure.

It should comes as little surprise, then, that Holtz puts so much emphasis on detail.

He has abandoned, for example, using the tower from which Faust directed practices, preferring instead to put his hands on the problem.

"He gets down there and actually shows you. He says, 'I'm running this one,' and he does it with linemen, backs, everybody," said Hiawatha Francisco, a fleet tailback whom Faust switched to defensive back because of Allen Pinkett, Notre Dame's all-time leading rusher. (Pinkett was taken by Houston in the third round of last week's NFL draft.)

Belles, the QB who made an excellent impression in the spring game, said, "Last fall we'd have flareups in practice once in a while between the offense and defense," he said. "This spring that never happened."

Senior linebacker Mike Kovaleski said playing for Holtz is "like going to a different team, like being a freshman again. Everybody has a chance out here."

"In other springs," he said, "we just said we were working hard. This time we really are."

Boaters Should Wear PFDs

Fishermen should pay as much attention to personal flotation devices, or PFDs, as they do to their tackle, according to the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

"Coast Guard-approved PFDs are required on all boats, and there must be one on board for every passenger," said Colonel Winfield Rhyne, chief of the division of enforcement. "It's especially important that a person fishing alone in a boat wear one.

Rhyne said anglers or boaters should check their PFDs before leaving to be sure they are in good condition and float properly.

"Try on your PFD and adjust the straps to be sure it fits properly. If you're alone, it's best to wear it. If not, make sure it's stowed within easy reach. Non-swimmers and children should always wear PFDs," Rhyne said.

Many fishermen and boaters dislike wearing personal flotation devices because the older, bulky "horse collar" type lifejackets were uncomfortable and interfered with casting and other movement. But, Rhyne explained, the PFDs on today's market are a great improvement over the old, orange life jackets people often remember.

"There are several types available. Flotation jackets look like normal jackets, but are filled with flotation material. These are comfortable, and will keep you warm on a windy day. Another option is the lightweight whitewater vests warn by canoeists and kayakers. These offer excellent flotation, and are very comfortable. You won't even realize you're wearing one," he said.

Rhyne also added a few words of advice for lone fishermen. "We realize that stealing away for an afternoon of fishing by yourself is one of life's great pleasures, but it requires a little extra caution," he said.

That extra caution should start by "avoiding big water, and try to fish in the vicinity of other anglers and boaters. Keep movements in the boat to a minimum, and don't stand up to cast. Be sure to wear your PFD at all times because if you fall overboard there won't be anyone to help you get back in the boat. And be sure to leave a 'float plan' telling where you're going and when you plan to return."

Fishing Tournament Scheduled

The 1986 10th annual Carolina Croaker and Marlin Club Small Boat Offshore Fishing Tournament has been scheduled for June 30 through July 4 at Hatteras.

The tournament is a boat owner's tournament, open to anyone who pays an entry fee and fishes a boat no longer than 31 feet overall. Rules and applications may be obtained from the Carolina Croaker and Marlin Club, P.O. Box 4176, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Shooting Tournament Winners

West Davidson High School in Lexington defeated 49 other schools to emerge as the overall champion in the eighth annual North Carolina Hunter Safety Schooting Tourmament held April 26 in Kinston. In the junior high division, West Bertie Elementary School finished first.

The tournament was sponsored by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, and competition was held in archery, rifle and trapshooting.

The winning teams and individuals in the junior and senior divisions will have the opportunity to represent North Carolina in the North American Hunter Education Grand Championship July 23-27 at the Camp Lejeune Marine Base. This event is sponsored by the National Rifle Association and the North American Association of Hunter Education Coordinators. School teams from throughout the United States and Canada will participate.

"As the Penske team, we didn't have a bad year. Big Al (Al Unser) won the championship and Rick (Mears) won Pocono."

Sullivan was a distant fourth in the season-opener at Phoenix and, after winning the pole, finished 11th after mechanical problems stopped him at Long Beach.

Still, he's glad to be going back to Indy.

"Some people figure there will be a lot of pressure on me because I'm the defending champion, but I look at it differently. By winning the race, I feel like I've released a certain amount of pressure," he said. "I've done it, I've proved I could do it. It's one of every Indy driver's goals to win this race, for the team, the sponsor, yourself, and I've done it.

"Maybe we can do it again."

'Facing Reality'

Stock Market Puts The Brake On Rising Index

By MARYBETH NIBLEY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It had to happen. Many Wall Street watchers have been predicting it for months as stock prices bounded forward and the Dow Jones industrial average raced past centennial marks almost routinely.

The stock market reined itself in this past week.

"We've put our feet back down on the ground and we're facing reality," said Dennis Jarrett, a technical analyst with Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Optimism about the economy and interest rates had spurred the market on since last autumn, but the hopes may have been a bit unrealistic.

It was widely assumed that the economy would strengthen and corporate fortunes would improve because of lower oil prices, lower interest rates and the declining value of the dollar against other major currencies, which presumably makes U.S. exports more competitive with foreign goods.

Reports released during the past week indicated otherwise.

The U.S. merchandise trade deficit worsened in March as manufactured imports reached a record level, and orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods slumped for the second month in a row, the Commerce Department reported.

The government's main forecasting gauge rose 0.5 percent in March and seemed to be pointing to solid economic growth. But the gain in the Index of Leading Indicators came mainly from a rise in stock prices and masked some weak spots in the economy.

The first glimpse of April's economic performance suggested sluggishness, particularly in manufacturing. The civilian unemployment rate decreased a barely perceptible 0.1 percentage point to 7.1 percent, the Labor Department said.

Meanwhile, the Treasury served up an unpleasant reminder that the federal budget deficit hasn't gone away and that government borrowing needs remain vast. It announced plans to auction $27 billion in notes and bonds in the coming week.

The nuclear disaster in the Soviet Union unsettled the market and may have provided the catalyst for a record plunge at mid-week in the Dow Jones industrial average of 41.91 points.

The market was unable to snap out of its slump, and the average ended the week at 1,774.68, a retreat of 60.89 points from the previous Friday — the second biggest ever.

The composite index of all issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange fell 4.13 points to 135.39. Volume on the Big Board averaged 138.57 million million shares, compared with 147.32 million shares the previous week.

Analysts had been expecting a significant drop because the market's rebound from the first full week in April — when the Dow Jones industrial average suffered a record weekly drop of 82.50 points — lacked conviction.

Hugh A. Johnson, a senior vice president at First Albany Corp., said there was "a big cloud hanging over the market."

Investors, who had gleefully watched the Dow industrials rise from under the 1,300 level last September, got edgy and decided to sell in case Wall Street went on a major retreat.

"People got sort of restless. When you have amassed such handsome profits, the one thing you don't want to do is give them all back," Johnson said. "I don't think there's ever been a period in which I've received more calls from people asking, 'Where are we going next?'"

Technology stocks stumbled, a disappointment to analysts who have been saying the industry would set the tone for the rest of the market.

Investors reacted to the striken Chernobyl plant by dumping utilities.

Some of the selling was triggered by fears that the accident would recharge foes of nuclear power, causing delays and added costs in the construction of U.S. projects. The sell-off snowballed as disenchanted investors decided to lighten their holdings of an industry that has an uncertain outlook.

Other stocks also suffered from the fallout. Food processors, for instance, were sold as traders speculated that the companies' costs would rise if radiation damage to Soviet crops increased that country's demand and pushed grain prices higher.

Most analysts thought the market overreacted to the nuclear accident.

George Dahlman, an analyst with Piper Jafray & Hopwood Inc. in Minneapolis, said the setback created opportunities for investors to buy certain stocks at lower levels.

"The packaged food group looks like a buy," he said.

PEDRO'S BUSINESS — Gerald Moody, general manager of the South of the Border recreation complex near Dillon, S.C., stands by one of the statues of "Pedro," the long-time symbol of the collection of restaurants, shops and gas stations that has developed around a motel. (AP Laserphoto)

Border Motel Sees Another Big Year

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

SOUTH OF THE BORDER, S.C. (AP) — "20 Honeymoon Suites (Heir Conditioned)" proclaims the giant billboard on Interstate 95 featuring the little man with a blanket and sombrero.

"Pedro's Fireworks (Does Yours?)" asks another.

"Beeg Deal," reads a third displaying a giant hand of cards.

The flood of tourists heading south along Interstate 95 are something of a big deal for the owners of Pedro's South of the Border this year because terrorism and low gas prices promise bigger crowds than usual.

The billboards, an even 100 of them stretching from Virginia to south Georgia on the busy New York-to-Florida freeway, hook motorists and draw them like a magnet to South of the Border — a collection of restaurants, shops and gas stations nestled beneath a giant sign featuring Pedro and a 200-foot-tall sombrero with an observation deck.

"You've gotta stop. It's a great buildup. They get you from 70 to 75 miles away," said Bob Purzitza of New York, who was traveling to Fort Bragg, N.C., with his wife Gina and 3-year-old son Isaiah.

Located just south of the North Carolina state line and about midway between New York and Miami, the attraction grew from a small restaurant and a 40-room motel in the 1950s to a multimillion-dollar enterprise visited by hundreds of thousands each year.

The complex — dotted with small statues of Pedro as well as cannon, pink flamingos, gorillas and other wildlife with which visitors can pose for snapshots — now boasts 11 shops, seven restaurants, a couple of gas stations, a truck stop, the motel which has grown to 299 rooms and even a post office.

Gerald Moody, the general manager of the enterprise which employs upwards to 600 people at the height of the summer season, said South of the Border had a record year in 1985 and is expecting even greater things this season.

While declining to give specific figures, he said Pedro's place had made "several million dollars" in 1985 and "we're anticipating the largest summer in the company's history. All indications are pointing to that."

He said declining gasoline prices and fear of terrorism abroad may contribute to a good showing this season. But he noted that last year "gas prices were as high as they've ever been."

The recent success of the venture, he said, rests instead in the willingness of multimillionare owner Alan Schafer to reinvest in the operation and in the advertising billboards.

"You really just have to drive in whether you stop or not. You have to get off the highway to see what it is," he said, adding that construction totaling about $4 million is currently under way, including a $2 million addition to the motel.

In addition to the 100 billboards on I-95, there are another 100 spread along other main arteries leading to South of the Border.

Bill Derringer, the manager of Manny's Travel Center which operates out of a small building in the center of the complex, said inquiries and reservations are up about 40 percent this spring. The business handles reservations for six attractions, five hotels and four resorts in the Orlando, Fla., area.

"It's really pointing toward a banner year for us," he said, adding "everybody wants to go overseas, but nobody wants to go there now" because of the fear of terrorism. Derringer said lower gas prices should also spur business.

Pat Salvadore, a visitor on his way to Myrtle Beach, said he traveled around the country last year despite relatively high gas prices. But the Brookhaven, Pa., resident said the threat of terrorism would make him think twice before going overseas.

Anyway, he added, "there's too many beautiful things to see in this country before going over there."

Income Rises

Batus reported Ivey's Carolinas had a 23 percent increase in operating income and a 7 percent sales increase in 1985. But company officials wouldn't divulge total income or sales figures.

Batus reported total 1985 income from all its operations grew 10 percent to $329 million and sales increased by 4 percent to $5.1 billion.

ATTENTION GREENVILLE CITIZENS!!

Weekly curb side trash collection service is provided by the Sanitation Division, City Public Works Department, for all citizens of Greenville. In recent months, there has been an increasing problem with residents placing trash, leaves, tree limbs, and shrubbery cuttings in streets and storm gutters. This practice blocks the City's storm drainage system, causes traffic hazards, and is a violation of the City Code.

Section 6-3-7 of the Greenville City Code provides that all trash be placed next to the curb or near the street on an owner's or tenant's property if City trash pickup is desired. Leaves, tree cuttings, and trash should not be placed in the street. Violators of this law are subject to a civil penalty of $50 and court action. Citations will be issued effective Thursday, May 15, 1986.

Thank you for your support in helping us keep Greenville clean!

Life After Congress Can Be Lucrative

By JAMES R. DICKINSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Lobbyist and former senator Marlow W. Cook, R-Ky., recalls the telephone call he made on election night in 1980 to Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., who had just suffered a surprise defeat in his bid for a fourth term.

"I told him how badly I felt for him but that he should understand one thing — that there is life after the Senate," Cook said.

Indeed there is, and for many of the 194 former members of the House and Senate who still reside in the Washington area, that life involves lobbying erstwhile colleagues.

Getting a precise count of former members of Congress who are lobbyists is a murky process. By law, lobbyists are to register with the clerk of the House and the secretary of the Senate if they meet all of the following criteria: They receive, collect or solicit contributions to help influence legislation; they make direct contacts with members or their staffs to this end, and their main purpose is to influence legislation.

But many former members who lobby do not consider that they meet all three tests and don't register as lobbyists. Others belong to duly registered firms, but their own names do not turn up on the forms. Enforcement of the registration requirement is through complaints to the Justice Department, but such complaints are very rare. Thus, a count of lobbyists among one-time members could yield a conservative estimate of 50, or a high estimate of 100.

Members who work in some other branch of government after their terms in Congress are among the most high-profile lobbyists. Former senator Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., who served briefly as secretary of health and human services, is now president of the American Council of Life Insurance, and former senator Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, who was one of two secretaries of state in the Carter administration, handles international and environmental clients for a law firm registered to lobby.

Former members obviously enjoy some advantage in having entree to their former colleagues. They have access to the floors of the House or Senate and to the members' gyms and dining rooms. But most don't make too much of it.

"I've never been on the floor since I left unless the Senate was out of session and I was showing a guest around," said Cook, who served one term, from 1968 to 1974, and is now a partner in a law firm that has banks, insurance companies and oil and gas industry firms as lobbying clients. "I go to the gym occasionally but I've never been to a Tuesday policy luncheon, which I regard as a courtesy extended to me if I'm not involved in anything — which I am."

The greatest advantages accrue to former members who held powerful positions on committees with financial and tax-writing clout. Former representative Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., for years chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, is now a lobbyist for the law firm of Shea & Gould, which is registered to lobby for Mars Inc., Nabisco Inc., and the Hospital Corp. of America, among others.

For all the advantages, many former members don't make it as lobbyists after the first year or so.

"Some just don't land lucky and are on the fringes for a year or two and then they disappear from view," said former representative James G. O'Hara, D-Mich., an 18-year veteran of the House who lost a bid for the Senate in 1976 and now lobbies and practices law with the firm of Patton, Boggs & Blow. "They were helpful to an interest when they were members and got a contract for a year or two and then it ran out."

Cook and O'Hara are examples of former members who have succeeded spectacularly well in their lives after Congress, and who evince a minimum of regret at being on the other side of the fence. For starters, they now are paid several times the current annual congressional salary of $75,100.

"I was always a rules and procedure maven," O'Hara said. "I spend about three-fourts of my time on legislative work and the rest lawyering."

Passage of t Chrysler Corp., bailout bill is one instance of his knowledge of House procedure. O'Hara helped Reps. John E. Brademas of Indiana, then the Democratic whip, and James A. Blanchard, the floor manager of the bill and now governor of Michigan, to work out the legislative strategy. Opponents, O'Hara said, "were caught asleep at the switch."

Lobbyists usually don't work on issues of that magnitude, however.

"Generally, we're working on details of both major and minor issues like looking for a vehicle to attach something to," O'Hara said. He cited "a provision that continued the FCC's power to regulate the cost of attaching cable TV wires to telephone poles instead of letting the telephone company do it. I think we attached it to a Goldwater bill on ham radios or something like that, but the problem these days is that so little legislation is moving."

There is also less interaction with the White House than in the past, because "this administration doesn't get involved except at veto time," O'Hara said.

The biggest changes in lobbying, however, are due to changes in the Congress. The revolt against the leadership in the 1970s stripped the major committee chairmen of much of their power and made it necessary to contact members on an individual basis.

And the workload, according to Cook, has increased accordingly. Members of Congress, he said, are "so busy it's difficult to get hold of them." Serving in Congress "doesn't seem as much fun as it used to be."

"We've got a white jacket in the closet here, one that wraps all the way around to the back for anyone who interviews with us who expresses an interest in returning to elective politics," he said.

Organizers Think Expo Is Success

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Expo 86 organizers predicted Saturday that their day-old extravaganza, which opened with royal pomp and 107,000 visitors, will be a great success.

"I feel like a proud father," said British Columbia Premier Bill Bennett, who has been involved with the planning for several years.

Bennett joined Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, Expo President Jim Pattison and Expo communications chief George Madden in predicting the success of the fair, which closes Oct. 13.

Thousands of visitors arrived Friday for the official opening with Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana at B.C. Place Stadium, near the fair site.

Charles and Diana, in British Columbia for a week-long visit, will be dropping in on various Expo pavilions through Wednesday.

Friday's first-day fair crowd grew to 107,000 as morning rain gave way to sunny skies. Officials had predicted 150,000 first-day visitors.

Expo organizers expect more than 20 million visits by 7 million to 8 million people, up from earlier estimates of 13 million visits.

The McDonald family drove 350 miles from Vernon, British Columbia, for opening day. They bought season passes and plan to spend 14 days here in July.

"There are a lot of neat things for families here," said Norm McDonald. "And there's plenty of cheap food for families. Last night the China exhibit was too busy, so we took the tram and the ferries for free and saw the sights from the air."

Many Americans were also delighted with the current rate of exchange that gives them $1.36 Canadian for each U.S. dollar.

Minor opening-day glitches will be resolved, Madden promised.

People Express Shifts Emphasis To Cut Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — Its first flights departed from a ratty terminal five years ago, when investors were enchanted with the idea of a cheap airline that would create a new market out of backpackers and bus travelers.

One recession and two fare wars later, People Express Airlines Inc. is losing so much money it has decided to raise prices and chase after the competition's most important clients: business travelers.

This past week People Express imposed a series of fare increases from its Newark, N.J., hub. The fare to Boston went from $59 to $65; the fare to Chicago rose from $69 to $109; and the fare to San Francisco increased from $129 to $199.

The airline also began offering a frequent-flyer program, a popular marketing tactic used by full-service airlines that awards free trips based on the amount of mileage flown.

Moreover, People Express disclosed plans to refit most of its 80 planes for first-class sections by year's end. The airline also said it would offer free baggage check-in, food and drinks in first class and may offer that option in coach class. The absence of those free amenities had set People Express apart.

"We're not going to abandon our low-price policy," said airline spokesman Russell Marchetta. "What we're doing is enhancing our product, so the people can choose what they want."

Analysts say People Express's move radically departs from the airline's original image. They predicted it would ease competitive-fare pressures on other airlines and result in higher fares industrywide.

"I have never seen anybody try to make such a dramatic change," said Anthony Hatch, who follows People Express for Argus Research, a New York investment research firm. "But their reputation as a low-cost, no-frills airline will make it difficult to overcome the cattle car reputation."

The change coincides with staggering first-quarter losses among airlines because of a fare war that began last year, the second since 1983. A victim of its own bargains, People Express reported a record first-quarter deficit of $58 million, compared with a loss of $18.8 million a year earlier.

It was April 30, 1981, when People Express's first three Boeing 737s, bought from the West German airline Lufthansa, took off from Newark Airport's North Terminal, a cavernous wreck that had been vacant for eight years. People Express founder Donald Burr, describing the building after he first leased it, said that "what didn't fall on your head bit you on the ankle."

Despite the 1981 recession and an air traffic controllers' strike that nearly put it out of business, People Express expanded at an explosive pace from three planes serving three cities to 80 planes serving 50 cities.

In the past five months, the airline has acquired Frontier Airlines and the commuter airline Britt Airways, and plans to buy Provincetown Boston Airline, adding more than 140 planes and 130 destinations to its system. People Express also will move to a modern Newark terminal in July 1987.

Some analysts are skeptical about whether the airline's frequent flyer program and full-service amenities will be enough to attract business travelers, the most important and loyal customers to full-service airlines.

"The big concern for business travelers is on-time performance, and People Express has yet to show that," said Andrew Geller, who follows People Express for Advest Inc., a brokerage firm in Hartford, Conn.

He estimated it will take at least a year to determine if the airline's new strategy works, partly because business travelers are not easily influenced by media publicity.

"This is not like a movie advertisement," he said. "It's propagated by word of mouth."

Thomas Canning, airline analyst for the New York-based credit reporting agency Standard & Poor's Corp., said People Express was compelled to attract business travelers for long-term survival.

"Obviously, the overall fare structure they have is not enough to make a profit," he said. "This is a very radical change for them. They have seen the necessity to get some new marketing tricks."

Thomas Canning, airline analyst for the New York-based credit reporting agency Standard & Poor's Corp., said People Express was compelled to attract business travelers for long-term survival.

"Obviously, the overall fare structure they have is not enough to make a profit," he said. "This is a very radical change for them. They have seen the necessity to get some new marketing tricks."

In other business and economic developments this past week:

—The Labor Department reported that civilian unemployment declined 0.1 percentage point to 7.1 percent in April because the service and construction industries created 270,000 jobs, offsetting layoffs in manufacturing and the energy industry.

—The Commerce Department said leading economic indicators rose 0.5 percent in March, while new home sales soared 27.4 percent to a record level. But other reports for March showed signs of persistent economic weakness: Construction spending fell 1.2 percent, the trade deficit widened to a record $14.52 billion, and factory orders tumbled by 2.3 percent.

—The United States and its major trading partners prepared for the Tokyo economic summit, which coincides with considerable trade stress, despite the dollar's declining value and other recent developments that may help ease the U.S. trade deficit.

Japan was expected to complain that the dollar's depreciation had hurt Japanese export sales. Another divisive issue was the U.S.-European conflict over agricultural products, which Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III called "the biggest threat to the world's free trading system."

—The House Ways and Means Committee approved legislation intended to force the president to retaliate against nations that violate trade agreements. The Democrat-backed bill reflects increasing concern over the trade deficit, which has been aggravated by a steep plunge in U.S. agricultural exports, once the biggest single contributor to the trade balance.

—Stock prices plunged because of concern over the economy and uncertain consequences of the Soviet nuclear-reactor disaster. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 41.91 points Wednesday, the worst single-day point drop in history. Analysts said they had been expecting a drop for some time because the index had risen more than 500 points since autumn, and investors were looking for a good excuse to take some profits.

—Commodity prices swung wildly because of the Chernobyl nuclear-plant disaster in the Soviet Union. Agricultural futures soared initially on speculation that the accident would imperil Soviet grain crops and create the need for massive imports by that country. But prices dropped sharply on reports that radiation at the crippled plant was easing.

—The Federal Housing Administration halted its popular mortgage-insurance program after exhausting its $57.2 billion credit limit for the current fiscal year, raising the prospect that home purchases for thousands of Americans might be jeopardized.

Hub-And-Spoke System Revolutionizes Airlines

By ROBERT E. DALLOS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — It is just before 11 a.m. at American Airlines' terminal at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. It is almost ghostly quiet. The shops and restaurants are empty. Most of the terminal's chairs are vacant. Ticket takers and gate clerks stand around idly.

But then — suddenly — near chaos. It is like Grand Central Station during rush hour, with hundreds of people scurrying in all directions. They stride quickly, or run, between gates, some of which are as much as a mile apart. Elderly people are driven in electric golf carts that weave in and out through the crowds. Some transferring passengers stop for a quick cup of coffee or a newspaper or a souvenir of Dallas where, ironically, they will spend less than an hour.

Within 11 minutes, from 11:04 a.m. to 11:15 a.m., 36 American planes have landed and taxied to their gates. The passengers are shuffled like cards in a deck and dealt out again. Less than an hour after they have landed, the 36 planes are once again in the air — and Terminal 3E is deserted.

The scene is repeated 11 times a day at the American terminal; during each "bank" or "rush" or "complex," as they are called, an average of 3,000 to 4,000 of the airline's passengers pass through the facility.

The airport rushes are an important aspect of a new route structure concept, called the hub-and-spoke system, that has revolutionized the airline industry since it was deregulated by the federal government in 1978 and provided it with one of its most important marketing tools.

The concept of a transportation hub was first used by the railroads. America's great trains of yesteryear met at Chicago. This offered passengers the chance to change from one train to another, greatly increasing their destination possibilities.

Like the railroads, airlines can serve more destinations with greater frequency, increase their market shares and retain more connecting passengers with hub-and-spoke systems.

Using the bicycle-wheel analogy, Chicago's O'Hare Airport is a United Airlines hub; flights from Burlington, Vt.; Phoenix; Boise, Idaho; and Norfolk, Va., are a few of the spokes.

Before deregulation, airlines in this country flew many more linear, point-to-point routes than they do today. At one time it was possible, for instance, to fly directly from Little Rock to New York City, a non-stop route that no longer exists.

Non-stop flights will always be available between cities large enough to generate profitable traffic. But the airlines have sharply reduced non-stop service between some smaller communities where, previously, planes often took off with many empty seats.

"The response of airline management to eroding market shares and persistent excess capacity has been to further the development of hub-and-spoke systems," said Timothy P. Pettee, airline analyst with L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin, a New York brokerage house.

"These route networks have exploded ... and today are the core of the industry planning efforts," he said. "Simply stated, hub-and-spoke route systems maximize a carrier's asset use — its revenue potential — and minimizes its cost of production. The effectiveness of these route networks has resulted in multi-airline hub complexes in major U.S. cities."

Delta and Eastern operated hubs in Atlanta on a much smaller scale before deregulation because the structure of their routes — allotted to them, as to all airlines, by the now-defunct Civil Aeronautics Board — happened to allow them to do so.

For other airlines, though, the bureaucratic obstacles to setting up hub-and-spoke systems before deregulation proved insurmountable. Sometimes it took as much as 10 years to win CAB approval for a new route, and the regulators forced airlines to serve small cities even if they did not generate enough traffic to economically justify the service.

Today, however, airlines can begin domestic routes without asking anyone for permission, allowing them to set up hubs with little trouble. Thus, the carriers' officials say, they can serve a maximum number of cities with a minimum amount of flying.

According to Dr. George W. James, president of Airline Economics Inc., a Washington consultancy, airlines are operating or planning to operate 43 major hubs in 30 U.S. cities. That compares with only a handful of carriers which operated hubs before deregulation went into effect eight years ago.

Each major U.S. airline now has one or more hubs. In the past few years a number of new hubs have been put into operation, including United's at Denver and Western's at Salt Lake City. American has just started one at Nashville, Tenn., and plans others at Raleigh-Durham, N.C., and San Juan, P.R. United established one just last week at Washington's Dulles International Airport.

By linking flights at the hubs and tightly coordinating arrivals and departures, the airlines are able to offer much more frequent service than they did when they flew mostly linear routes. The big airlines maintain that their hub-and-spoke systems allow them to offer flight frequencies and to realize load factors that cannot be matched by the new upstart carriers of the post-deregulation era that do not offer transfer facilities and related services.

For instance, an airline official said, a hub that has 36 inbound and 36 outbound flights in an hourly "bank" theoretically could provide service between 1,296 possible pairs of cities.

"The principal advantage of the hub-and-spoke system is that it gives us more product to sell," said Thomas G. Plaskett, American's senior vice president-marketing. "We are not selling hubs. We are selling origins and destinations. The total number of markets in which we are selling air transportation is currently 3,751 as compared to 357 before we began our hub here in Dallas in 1981."

More than a million people went through Delta's Atlanta hub in March. But, according to W. Whitley Hawkins, the airline's senior vice president-marketing, 70 percent of them were transit passengers just changing planes there. "No way could I justify 365 flights a day just by what comes out of Atlanta, Ga.," he said.

But another major reason for the trend toward hubs was that, with the new system, an airline can carry more passengers from point of origin to destination without having to turn them over to a competitor. Before deregulation, it was sometimes impossible to offer such single-carrier service to connecting passengers because of the government's assignment of routes to other airlines.

United Airlines says that most connecting passengers who get off its planes now get back on other United flights. That represents a dramatic change. A Department of Transportation spokesman said a recent study shows that whereas 23 percent of all revenue passenger miles in 1973 involved connections to other airlines, the figure is now down to about 10 percent.

As a result, airlines largely dominate their hubs. USAir, for example, has an 81 percent share of the market at Pittsburgh, Piedmont has 76 percent of all the traffic in and out of Charlotte, N.C., and Western has 76 percent of the Salt Lake City market. Eastern and Delta carry 95 percent of the Atlanta traffic.

Airlines, according to Richard de Neufville, a Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor and airport systems planner, choose their hub locations according to their own criteria. A minimum requirement is that the airport be fairly central to their system—some place in the Midwest for a transcontinental carrier or, for regional airlines, a city such as Charlotte for Piedmont or Pittsburgh for US Air.

Denver's Stapleton Airport is the only airport where three airlines — United, Continental and Frontier — have located hubs. "Denver is within 90 miles of the geographic center of the United States," Bill Neary, Continental's regional vice president, said. "It is the most centrally located hub in the country."

Cities garner great benefits from having an airline hub and this has led to fierce competition among communities to lure them. The reason is simple: A hub city gets superior airline service, making it attractive for new industry and for business conventions.

Also, even though connecting passengers spend little money during their few moments on the ground (the average connecting passenger spends $1.09 at Atlanta) airlines spend a lot locally in salaries and for such things as fuel, food and maintenance. United employs 7,000 people in Denver.

And, since passengers usually have a choice of hubs to fly through to get to their destinations, there occasionally is fierce rivalry between hubs and between the airlines that serve them. One such battle is taking place between Denver and Salt Lake City.

Western Airlines, alluding to the snow that occasionally closes the Denver airport, has taken out a series of advertisements extolling its Salt Lake City hub. In one ad, a member of a corporate board of directors arrives late for a meeting. He apologizes and explains that he had flown through Denver.

In response, Bruce G. Strand, United's vice president-hub operations, points to troublesome fog at Salt Lake City.

Years ago, when Atlanta was the nation's only airline hub, a joke went around that said that when someone died he had to go through Atlanta before getting to heaven. But that's all changed now. Today he might have to go through Denver, or San Francisco, or Memphis, or Charlotte or....

Coca-Cola Celebrates 100th Year

ATLANTA (AP) — Coca-Cola will celebrate its 100th birthday this week with 25,000 guests and a parade that organizers are calling the biggest in Atlanta's history.

The company is bringing in about 14,000 bottlers, employees and their families from around the world to join about 10,000 Atlanta-area employees for the four-day celebration that begins Wednesday.

The world-famous soft drink will be honored with theatrical shows, historical exhibitions, dinners and business sessions.

Among the attractions will be a memorabilia exhibit and a reconstruction of the soda fountain in Jacobs' Pharmacy, the Atlanta drug store where Coke was first served May 8, 1886.

Company spokesman Eric Riggle said the $1 million celebration will be mostly private because Coke's use of the Georgia World Congress Center, site of most of the activities, is limited to a few days.

"What that does is give us just enough time to accommodate the 20-odd thousand people that are in the Coke family," he said. "We're not able to keep (the exhibits) open enough to allow the public to see."

But he said the public is invited to join the birthday celebration Saturday when a 100-unit parade moves through downtown Atlanta to the Coca-Cola Co. building on North Avenue, headquarters of the company which brings in $8 billion a year in revenues.

Riggle said the centennial celebration was planned primarily to honor Coca-Cola, the product. But the centennial also will showcase the company.

"The whole focus of the centennial is two-fold," Riggle said. "One, to give a brief look back to where we've been and how we've developed. But the emphasis is on the future and how we'll look ahead to the second 100 years."

To that extent, the celebration will include demonstrations of the satellite technology that the company plans to use to improve its international corporate communications. Also on display will be futuristic examples of vending machines, packaging and transportation.

Coca-Cola was invented, according to company history, in the backyard kettle of Atlanta pharmacist John S. Pemberton. The fledgling company was bought in 1888 by Asa G. Candler; by 1895 the soft drink was available across the United States.

Business Notes

Staff Additions

Burroughs Wellcome Co. has announced two staff additions at the company's manufacturing facilities in Greenville.

Charles A. Costanzo has joined the firm as a production supervisor in the ointments, creams, and liquids formulations division, while Steven Ray Brueckner is now a project engineer.

Costanzo, who will supervise the manufacturing and packaging of non-sterile pharmaceutical products, received a bachelor's degree in pharmacy from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science. He has done graduate work at Villanova University.

Brueckner, who will plan, organize and direct the implementation of engineering projects, is a graduate of the University of Missouri at Columbia. He was previously employed by Monsanto Co. in St. Louis.

Course Completed

Melanie Smith and Frances Linton Of J.D. Dawson Co., which has locations in Greenville and Belhaven, have completed a session on pearl and bead stringing with the Gemological Institute of America.

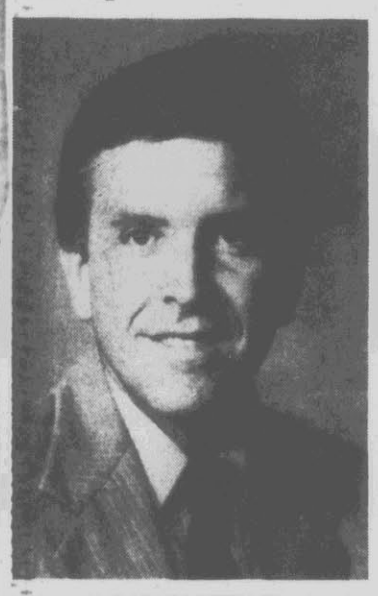
VP-Audit Officer

First Citizens Bank & Trust has announced that N. Ray Wooten Jr. has been named a vice president for the bank in Grifton, where he is city executive.

The bank said that Pitt County native Linda Pollard has been named an assistant audit officer for the bank in Raleigh.

Wooten, a Pitt County native, earned a bachelor's degree in business administration from Atlantic Christian College. He completed courses offered through the American Institute of Banking and the N.C. School of Banking.

Ms. Pollard, who lives in Cary, earned a bachelor's degree in business administration and political science from East Carolina University. She has completed courses offered through the American Institute of Banking.



N. RAY WOOTEN JR.

Training Program

Mable Savage of Century 21 Janet Bowser & Associates, Greenville, completed a week of training in Kinston conducted through the Century 21 "2 & 1 Training Program."

The course provided study of the basic areas of real estate practices including prospective for buyers, property evaluation, listing property and saleable market price, working with buyers and sellers, and negotiating offers and counter offers.

Ms. Savage, who has been with Century 21 for two months, has one daughter, Michelle.

Marketing Manager

Larkin Little, president of Home Federal Savings and Loan Association, has announced the appointment of Betsy Davis Clayton to marketing manager in Greenville.

Ms. Clayton, a native of Martin County, graduated from Salem College with a degree in art. A Greenville resident for the past 14 years, she taught art and was affiliated with another local financial institution prior to joining Home Federal.

The firm has offices in Greenville, Plymouth, Bethel, Williamston, and Edenton.

Quarterly Dividend

The board of directors of NCNB Corp. declared a regular quarterly dividend of 38 cents per share, payable June 27 to shareholders of record on June 6.

BB&T Promotions

Jerry W. Powell, senior vice president of Branch Banking and Trust Co. in Greenville, has announced several local staff promotions and appointments.

Powell said changes at the new main office include: Sharon Simpson promoted to assisant branch manager; Marry Ellen Carraway named customer service representative, and Margie M. Johnson promoted to head teller.

The spokesman said Ellen B. Wall has been transferred as retail services officer at the downtown branch and Lola J. Speight has been named customer service representative at the branch.

John Stevenson has been assigned to the consumer loan department at the Arlington Boulevard office and JoAnne Green has been promoted to head teller there.

Offices Relocated

C.J. Harris and Co. Inc. has announced that the firm's corporate offices in Greenville and Raleigh are now relocated.

Harris said the Greenville address is now Arlington Centre, 202 Arlington Blvd., while the Raleigh address is Jamestown Square, 150 Wind Chime Court, off Six Forks Road.

The company is a market oriented financial and marketing consulting firm.

Training Conference

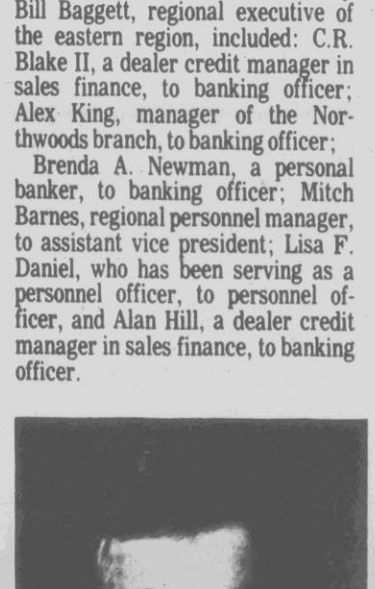
Jim Clemmons and Ray Craft, coowners of ComputerLand of Greenville, Rocky Mount and Wilmington, said their administrative and service employees participated in a recent weekend training conference at Atlantic Beach.

Craft said 22 employees representing the three locations and their families attended the conference, which served to update employees about the company's goals and objectives, provide training for new services and products, and allow employees to communicate and make suggestions to management.

Net Income Rose

First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County has reported net income for the quarter ending March 31 of $489,558 before taxes and $342,316 after taxes, an increase of approximately 38 percent from the after tax $248,056 earned during the 1985 quarter.

For the nine months ending March 31, net income was $825,207, an increase of approximately 81 percent from the $457,035 earned a year earlier.



WAYNE DEMPSEY

Promotions Noted

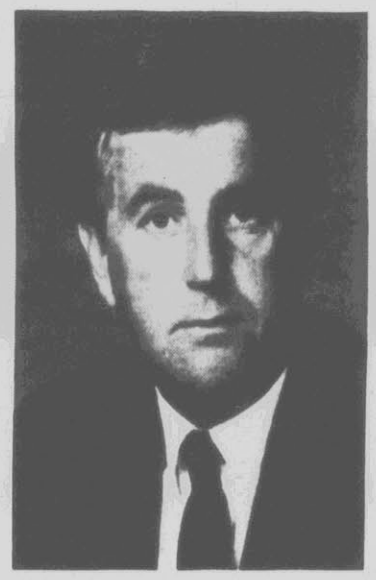
Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. has announced several promotions at the bank's Greenville offices.

Wachovia said Gene Briley and Wayne Dempsey have been promoted to vice president.

A Greenville native, Briley joined Wachovia in 1969 as a field representative and is now retail banking manager. A Jamesville native and a 1970 graduate of Atlantic Christian College, Dempsey joined the bank in 1973 as a field representative. He is now sales finance manager.

Other promotions announced by Bill Baggett, regional executive of the eastern region, included: C.R. Blake II, a dealer credit manager in sales finance, to banking officer; Alex King, manager of the Northwoods branch, to banking officer;

Brenda A. Newman, a personal banker, to banking officer; Mitch Barnes, regional personnel manager, to assistant vice president; Lisa F. Daniel, who has been serving as a personnel officer, to personnel officer, and Alan Hill, a dealer credit manager in sales finance, to banking officer.



GENE BRILEY

Ford Recognition

Ford Motor Co. has recognized J. Harry Hastings of Hastings Ford Inc. for excellence in satisfying customers. He received the 1985 Quality Care Dealer Award, given to the top 25 percent of all dealers in each sales district.

Harold A. (Red) Poling, Ford Motor Co. president, said the award was based on surveys of Hastings Ford customers, which showed them to be among the most satisfied group of customers — on sales and service — at company dealerships.

Hastings has been a Ford dealer for 25 years, including 16 at the present dealership at 10th Street and U.S. 264 bypass.

The company also recognized Leland Tucker, general sales manager at Hastings Ford, and Herbert Powell, service manager, for their treatment of customers.

Tucker received the 1985 Sales Manager Quality Care Award, while Powell won the 1985 Service Manager Quality Care Award. The awards are given to the top 25 percent of sales or service managers at dealerships in each sales district.

Tucker has been at Hastings Ford for 10 years, while Powell has with the firm for 15 years.

Record Sales Volume

Hampton Industries Inc. reported that sales volume for the quarter ended March 29 totaled $31,692,000 as compared to $27,002.000 in 1985, a 17.4 percent increase.

The company said the 1986 volume represents the highest first quarter volume in its history.

Earnings for the quarter were $700,000 as compared to a loss of $909,000 a year earlier.

Dividend Declared

The board of directors of Vermont American Corp. declared a regular quarterly dividend of 10 cents per share on the company's Class A and Class B common stocks, payable May 30 to shareholders of record May 2.

Vermont American, which has a plant in Greenville, manufactures and markets cutting tools, power tool accessories, hand tools and lawn and garden products for consumer and industrial use.

Sales Position

Dan Ranck has been named an eastern North Carolina sales representative for Whittaker General Medical, according to Richard J. Hall, district manager of the firm's Raleigh sales and distribution center.

Hall said Ranck will call on hospitals, nursing homes, clinics and physicians' offices in the eastern North Carolina area. He resides in Cary.

Fieldcrest Figures

Fieldcrest Mills Inc. had an increase in sales and a decrease in earnings for the first quarter of 1986, largely due to the company's acquisition of Cannon Mills Co. in January, Fieldcrest announced.

Sales for the first quarter were $208.6 million, an increase of 70 percent over the same quarter last year. Cannon operations for February and March are included in the first quarter results.

Sales of Fieldcrest bed and bath products were down 9 percent from 1985's first quarter while carpet and rug sales were up 8 percent. Commission finishing and yarn sales also increased over 1985.

A net loss of $6.2 million for the first quarter compared with net earnings of $116,000 for the same period of 1985.

The City Swimming Pool is located at Guy Smith Park on Myrtle Avenue. For information on Pool operating hours and programs, call 752-4137.

Restaurant To Open

The opening of Acheson's Family Buffet at 500 W. Greenville Blvd. is planned for around the middle of the week in remodeled facilities, according to owner Don Acheson.

The spokesman said the restaurant will have all-you-can-eat lunch and dinner buffets with one price covering all the food selections, beverages, and desserts. Acheson said a 30-foot salad bar is included and customers will have their choice of various vegetables, dressings, entrees and desserts, all cooked at the restaurant. An ice cream machine has been installed, he said.

The facility will be open from 11 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for lunch and then from 4 to 9 p.m. for dinner, Monday through Saturday. The restaurant will be open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Sundays.

Acheson said the interior and exterior of the facility, which formerly housed Jack's Steakhouse and other restaurants, was renovated during a two-month work program.

Kneeling was Margy Maira's most comfortable position and she found the borning bed of-valuable assistance.

Stirrups and a pullaway lower section make the borning bed suitable for delivery as well as labor. Margy Maira demonstrated its versatility.

Freedom of Birthing Position Advocated

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

How should a woman delivering a baby position her body?

"Any way she wants," is the answer provided by Dr. Joyce Roberts of the College of Nursing of the University of Illinois in her dissertation on maternal position during labor.

Dr. Roberts' contention is that a woman giving birth should have the freedom to walk, squat, sit, lie, kneel, or otherwise hold her body. Her premise is supported by many people interested in the betterment of obstetrics and by human practice from time immemorial, she says. It's only since the 17th century that, presumably for the convenience of the persons attending a birth, the dorsal supine (lying on one's back) birthing position has been widely used. Women used to squat in the fields to have their babies — probably still do in Third World countries — and birthing stools were in use long before delivery tables.

Today many obstetricians see the value of letting a woman be upright as much as she wishes and say this practice speeds labor and provides greater safety and comfort for both baby and mother.

The Greenville ASPO-Lamaze group for family-centered childbirth and quality parenting is focusing on promotion of freedom of positioning for women giving birth and the use of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital birthing room during the celebration of its fifth anniversary this month.

The anniversary coincides with Lamaze Childbirth/Prepared Parenthood Week being observed nationally. As part of its celebration, the local group will hold a program to explain the value of using the birthing rooms at Pitt County Memorial Hospital from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday in the Gaskins-Leslie Education Center on the hospital grounds. A reception honoring ASPO's founding and active families will be held at 6:30 p.m.

Tommie Pratt, a founder and active member of ASPO-Lamaze's local chapter, says the group was instrumental in having the two birthing rooms developed and equipped with borning beds at PCMH in 1983.

What is a birthing room? It's a room in the labor and delivery suite of Pitt County Memorial Hospital — a homelike room that allows for use of a borning bed for labor and delivery and the presence of the mother's choice of people before and during delivery.

What is a borning bed? It's a bed that can be adjusted to a number of different positions conducive to keeping the woman in labor upright. The bottom section can be quickly and easily pulled away to facilitate physician assistance at delivery time, so there's no need to leave the room in search of a delivery table.

Now — three years later after their establishment — how much are the birthing rooms being used? "Not much," says Mrs. Pratt. Of the 584 babies delivered at PCMH from January 1 through April 23 of this year, only 18 were delivered in a birthing room — about 3 percent. This is a little better than in previous years.

ASPO members believe public awareness will gradually increase birthing room usage, but they cite Dr. Robert Howard, a Hampton, Va. obstetrician who says he believes doctors have to establish its use as the norm. Having defined his practice as "family-centerd" for the past 15 years, he says he has not used a delivery table in the past six yeras, and that all the birthing rooms at Hampton General Hospital are equipped with borning beds. "If you set up for bed deliveries every day, it is easy and everyone is relaxed. If you only allow one bed delivery a week, it becomes an unusual or cultist practice that is not encouraged," he says.

A Greenville family physician who is using the birthing rooms routinely is Dr. Janice Daugherty. "A woman gets much more work done with every contraction when she's upright," she says, "so I have my ob patients have their labor in the birthing rooms where they can walk around all they want and also have the bed assist them to stay upright. My patients and their families like it and I like it. It's nice not to have to rush to the delivery room when it's time for the baby to arrive.

"Birth is such a natural thing. It doesn't need to be controlled by the doctor nor the mother. I think the birthing rooms offer a nice non-medical-seeming atmosphere for women to have their babies."

Margy Maira, a childbirth educator who used the birthing room for the delivery of her second child, says she saw a big difference, not only in the satisfaction she experienced having her husband and her friend, fellow childbirth educator Tommie Pratt, with her throughout her labor and delivery, but also a shorter labor than she had with her first child. She attributes the short easier labor to the relaxed atmosphere and having gravity on her side through use of the birthing bed.

Barbara Dail delivered her second daughter, Laura, in a birthing room Monday. "My husband, Macon, and I really liked it," she says. "Macon said he felt like we were at the Hilton instead of Pitt Memorial. My labor was really short — only about 2½ hours. I have to think sitting up throughout my labor helped."

Membership in ASPO-Lamaze is made up of three distinct elements — the professional coalition — childbirth educators, nurses, midwives and other health-care professionals; the physician coalition — obstetricians, pediatricians and other physicians interested in maternal and child care, and the family coalition — parents and other supporters of childbirth and parenthood education.

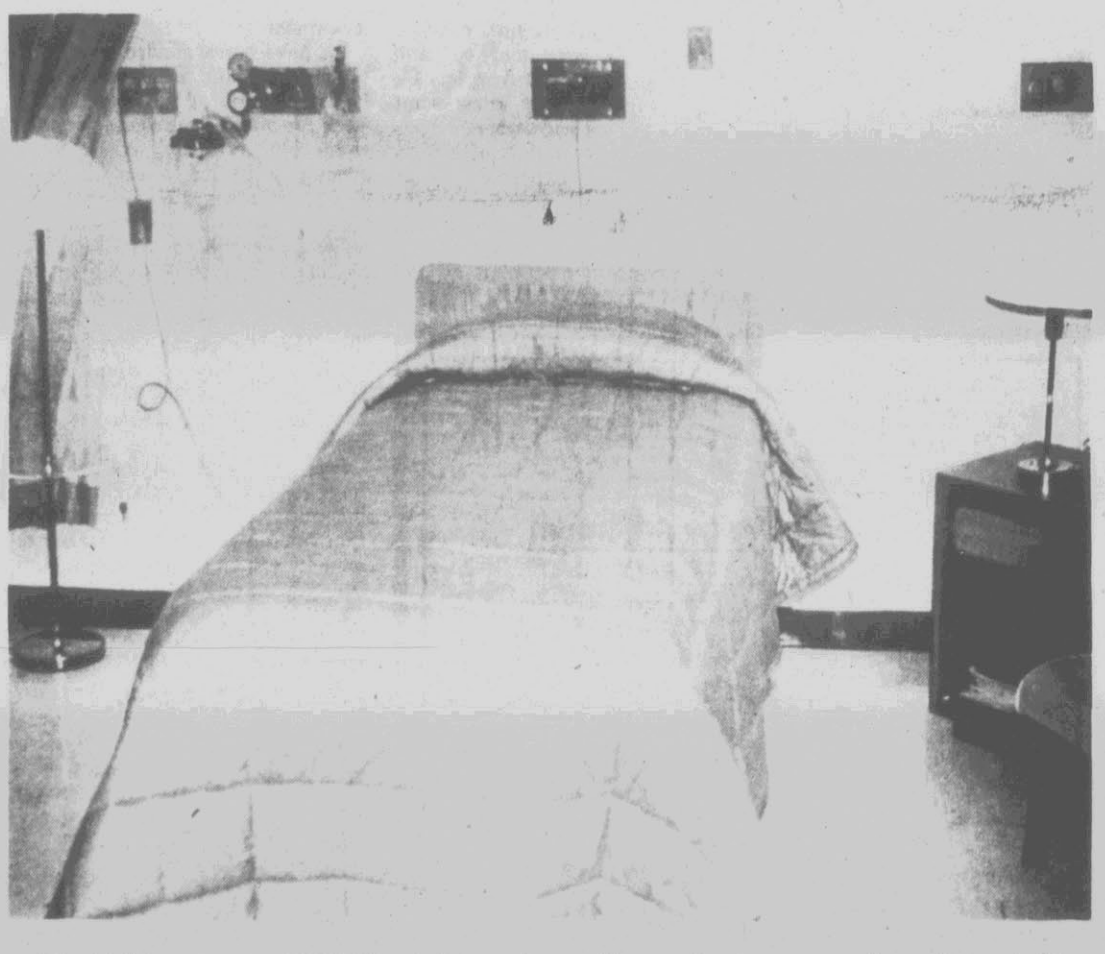
The local group is responsible for a number of childbirth preparation classes being held in the area, largely through Pitt Community College. It also handles certification of childbirth education instructors and last year held a seminar which drew women wishing to become certified from several states.

The group has published an "Information Guide to Pitt County Programs For Expectant and New Parent," which it updates every two years.

Each month, it holds a parent education program. Some of the topics have included child immunization, protecting children from assault, helping children deal with death, and vaginal birth after Ceasarean.

A cardio-pulmonary resuscitation class for parents was held for members and non-members and a summer one for babysitters is planned.

ASPO-certified instructors include Margy Maira, Tommie Pratt, Maxyne Weaver, Mary Kirkpatrick and Judy Barbe.



The birthing rooms at Pitt Memorial are larger than patient rooms and are decorated to feel as homelike as possible. However, medical equipment is readily available.

Miss Lautares Wed In Cary

CARY — Sharon Jefferson Lautares and John David Bullock were united in marriage at 7 p.m. Saturday in the new home of the bride and groom.

The Rev. Jack Graf officiated at the candlelight double-ring ceremony. A program of nuptial music was presented.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lautares of Greenville; the bridegroom, the son of Hortense B. Bullock of Raleigh and Hoke E. Bullock of Castle Hayne. She was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by the bridegroom.

The bride wore a white tea-length gown of organza over white peau de soie, featuring a portrait neckline and bishop sleeves accented with venise lace and seed pearls. Her capulet of venise lace was etched with pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses, white pixie carnations, lavender violets, lily of the valley, blue and yellow forget me nots, and baby's breath tied with white streamers.

Melissa Lynn Earp of Atlanta, niece of the bride, was maid of honor. Amy Catherine Bullock of Raleigh, daughter of the bridegroom, was flower girl. Standing with the couple were John David Bullock Jr. of Raleigh, son of the bridegroom, and Timothy Scott Earp of Atlanta, nephew of the bride.

The maid of honor wore a strapless pink lace dress accented with pink ribbons and bow. She carried a bouquet fashioned after that of the bride tied with pink streamers. The flower girl wore a blue lace dress and carried a basket of pink petals with nosegay on the side tied with pink streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length gown of pink crepe with a scooped neckline and empire bodice. The mother of the bridegroom selected a gown of lavender and green silk with a portrait neckline. Both wore corsages of white roses and baby's breath.

Greeting guests were Mr. and Mrs. Rod Adams of Durham. Assisting throughout the home were Mr. and Mrs. James Adams of Fuquay Varina, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Adams of Cary and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ashworth of Cary, aunts and uncles of the bride.

Punch was poured by Mrs. Cecil Heath of Greenville; cake served by Mrs. Virginia Lansche and Mrs. Philip Harvey of Greenville. Punch was served by Mrs. Don Howard of Greenville and Mrs. Leonard Earp of Atlanta, sister of the bride. Also assisting in serving were Sherry David, Debbie Huston, Robin Barham, Jennifer Brooks and Kathy Williams of Raleigh. Presiding at the bridal register was Mrs. Gary Ashworth of Cary. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brooks of Raleigh, sister and brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

The couple was entertained at a bridal party given by the aunts and uncles of the bride at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Asheworth of Cary. A luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Brooks in Raleigh; an after-rehearsal dinner, hosted by the bridegroom at Sam's Steak Villa in Raleigh.

The bride attended East Carolina University and is a graduate of Pitt Community College. She is self-employed at Sharon's Interiors in Cary.

The bridegroom, a graduate of the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, is president and owner of Tri-City Builders Inc. of Raleigh. After a wedding trip to Hawaii, they will live in Cary.

Miss Briley, Mr. Lell Married

GRIMESLAND — Debbie Ann Briley and Roger Eugene Lell were united in marriage at 2 p.m. Saturday in Gethsemane Pentecostal Holiness Church.

The Rev. Robert Forehand performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Hyman Briley of Route 1, Grimesland and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Eugene Lell of Rocky Mount.

A program of organ music was presented by John Barker of Farmville, and Jeannette Williams of Grimesland was the soloist.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal-length gown of white crystal organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with beaded silk venise lace. The gown featured a sheer yoke of illusion edged in silk venise lace. The fitted bodice overlaid in satin and silk lace extended to a basque waistline. The renaissance sleeves were fashioned of crystal organza and matching lace. The full circular skirt was bordered in a silken embroidered lace. Crystal fluted organza ruffles accented the full cathedral-length train. She wore a fingertip-length veil of illusion with silk venise lace held by a caplet overlaid in matching lace.

Renae Williams, matron of honor and sister of the bride, wore a tea-length gown of white chantilly lace over royal blue taffeta in a chemise style. The overbloused effect featured a jewel neckline and short, cap sleeves; both edged in a scalloped patterned val lace. A sash of royal blue was tied below the waist in a Dior bow at the side. The underside of the royal blue taffeta was fashioned with tiers of ruffled chantilly lace complementing the skirt. The bridesmaids wore gowns styled identically to those of the honor attendants in romance blue with white lace.

Tneisha Haddock, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore a baby blue dress trimmed in white and blue lace with rosebud accents, ruffled skirt, and pouf sleeves.

Bridesmaids were Angie Haddock, niece of the bride of Grimesland, Wanda Wainright of Greenville and Phyllis Hodges of Greenville. Junior bridesmaids were Charlene White of Grimesland, Kim Williams of Grimesland and Becky Hodges of Greenville.

Steve Hemmerle of Greenville served as best man. The groomsmen were Don Briley of Grimesland, brother of the bride, David Kelly of Raleigh and Tom Braswell of Wilson. Frankie Williams of Grimesland and Mark Haddock of Simpson were the ushers.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy C. Haddock greeted guests. The wedding cake was served by Peggy Williams and Shirley Buck, and Carol Haddock served punch. Rice bags were distributed by the junior bridesmaids, with Angela Heath, Sandra White and Margie McRoy assisting.

The bridegroom, a graduate of East Carolina University, is employed by the U.S. Postal Service and the bride, a graduate of D.H. Conley High School is employed by Burton Lines. The couple will reside in Durham.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom.

Dear Abby — By Abigail Van Buren

Father-Son Reunion Is Thanks To Abby, Reader Says

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to thank you for helping me find my husband's father. Last June, you published an address in Germany where people could write for information on German soldiers who had served in World War II. (A reader wanted to return some personal things that were taken from a dead German soldier.) I had tried several times before to find information on my husband's father, but nothing came of it.

My husband, Dieter, was born in Germany in 1945 of German parents. When he was a small child, his parents were divorced. His mother then fell in love with an American soldier. They were married, and Dieter was brought to America. He is now 41 and never knew what happened to his real father.

I wrote a letter in July of 1985 to the address that appeared in your column in the Lowell (Mass.) Sun. On Oct. 13, 1985, a Sunday morning, my husband received a call from Germany. The man on the other end said, "Dieter, this is your father!" What a day for our family! I have never seen my husband so astounded.

We have corresponded with Walter, my newfound father-in-law, and he will be arriving in America next week for a two-week visit. He is 64 years old, recently retired, and absolutely thrilled to learn that he is a grandfather. He said that one of the greatest joys in his life was to have grandchildren, and to think he has had a granddaughter for almost 20 years! Our daughter is thrilled to know she has a grandfather. This event has surely changed our lives. It added something to my husband's life that he never dreamed would happen. He can hardly wait!

Our family thanks you, Abby. I have read your column all my life, but this is the first time I can say that you have had a direct influence on me. Keep up the good work. I am sure you have a positive influence on the lives of many. Sincerely,

BERNICE A. KAISER,
GROTON, MASS.

DEAR READERS: I just telephoned the Kaisers. Her father-in-law arrived, and the entire family is still celebrating the happy reunion. It's stories such as this that makes writing my column a joy.

DEAR ABBY: You have written much about tipping in restaurants and have always come to the rescue of waiters and waitresses. Will you please help us out again?

Our restaurant is located near a popular movie theater. This is a fine dining establishment, not a fast-food restaurant, yet some people expect to be served a full-course dinner in 20 minutes or half an hour. We ask at the door if they are trying to make the show. Many are, and want to know what our fastest dinner is, and after we tell them they order something else that requires a long time to prepare.

It's maddening for us to see diners at seven or eight tables frantically waving their checks because they want to leave to make the show. Then they walk out grumbling: "Boy, we'll never go back there again; the service is terrible!"

This may not do one bit of good, but I feel better getting it off my chest. Thanks for being there, Abby.

DIANNE H. IN SOUTHFIELD, MICH.

DEAR DIANNE: You're welcome. Keep the change. That's what I'm here for.

DEAR ABBY: I received an invitation to a baby shower. In the left-hand corner, at the bottom of the invitation, was written: "In addition to your gift, please bring a box of disposable diapers."

Is this proper?

SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: No, it's tacky.

Miss Mayo, Mr. Lee Wed Saturday

The wedding ceremony of Rosetta Ann Mayo and William Fitzhugh Lee Jr., both of Winston-Salem, was held Saturday at noon at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The Rev. John Price conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Sawyer Mayo of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. William Fitzhugh Lee Jr. of Charlotte.

The bride was escorted by her father. She wore a a white formal gown of satin accented with beaded appliques. The fitted bodice was styled with a V neck of beaded English net featuring beaded puff sleeves embellished with pearl trimmed bows on each shoulder. The full skirt, enhanced with a drop waist, flowed into a chapel-length train. Her wreath headpiece consisted of white flowers and seed pearls, from which flowed a chapel-length veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and miniature pink roses with stephanotis.

The maid of honor was Virginia Suther Whichard of Winston-Salem. Bridesmaids were Laura Spencer Lee of Atlanta, sister of the bridegroom; Anna Ball Mayo of Washington, N.C., cousin of the bride; Victoria Stedman Clement of Asheville; Amy Leigh Lipsitz of Ahoskie; Lydia Payne Pickard of Raleigh; Katharine Conran Medearis of Greensboro; Katherine Grainger Taylor of Wilmington, and Susan Wendell Wood of Washington, D.C.

Each bridesmaid wore tea-length gown of mauve moire taffeta. Each gown was designed with a V neck, short petal sleeves and a full skirt with a satin sash. Each attendant carried a bouquet of mixed spring flowers.

Flower girl was Jesse Rene Mayo of Blacksburg, Va., cousin of the bride. She wore a white gown with a mauve sash and carried a basket of spring flowers. She wore in her hair a wreath of mixed spring flowers.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Frank Alexander McCleneghan III of Charlotte, and Robert Lafferty Stout and Daniel Murray Lee Walker, both of Raleigh, all cousins of the bridegroom; Ensign Daniel Sawyer Mayo Jr. of Pensacola, Fla., and Edward Spencer Mayo of Greenville, both brothers of the bride; Geoffrey Alexander de Rohan of Woodstown, N.J.; David Myron Bailey, Charles Jordan Dulin, William Pierson Dyer IV and Robert Lewis Patton III, all of Charlotte, and David Lee Dunaway of Charleston, S.C.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length dress of pale peach silk, and the mother of the bridegroom chose a tea-length gown of ice blue linen.

MRS. LEE

A reception was held at the Brook Valley Country Club following the ceremony. Music was presented on the harp by Mrs. Blake Lewis. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Whitehurst. Serving cake and punch were Mrs. William C. Smith, Mrs. John McConney and Mrs. Jefferey Hazelton.

A bridesmaids' luncheon was held Friday at the home of Mrs. Kay V. Whichard. Hostesses were Mrs. Whichard, Mrs. J. Edwin Clement, Virginia Suther Whichard and Victoria Clement.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom Friday at the Greenville Country Club. Friends of the bride and bridegroom hosted a dance following the dinner. Music was provided by disc jockey Don Vickers.

The bride graduated from St. Mary's College and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. She is an account executive with Uniforce Temporary Services in Winston-Salem. The bridegroom graduated from UNC-CH, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He received a master's in business administration degree from Babcock Graduate School of Management at Wake Forest University. He is an administrative manager at Edgar B Furniture in Clemmons.

Tudor, 77, Receives Dance Award

NEW YORK (AP) — The luminaries of the world of dance toasted 77-year-old choreographer Antony Tudor at a party at the Juilliard School, where he received the 35th annual Capezio Dance Award of $5,000.

"I think he has been one of the most influential people in our art," choreographer Jerome Robbins said at Monday's ceremony. "It has been an honor and privilege to work with him, near him and in the same century."

Mikhail Baryshnikov, director of American Ballet Theater, said: "We do his ballets because we must. Tudor's work is our conscience."

Tudor began his choreographic career in 1931 for Ballet Club in his native London. He later headed the Metropolitan Opera Ballet School and has taught at Juilliard for 20 years. In 1974, he became associate director of Ballet Theater with Oliver Smith and the late Lucia Chase.

The bride is the daughter of Betty Bell of Ayden and James Lloyd of Greenville. She is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed by Dr. W.S. Dawson of Greenville.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Warren of Stokes, is a graduate of North Pitt High School. He is employed by Cox Armature of Greenville.

Escorted by her uncle, Russell Norris and given in marriage by her mother, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with silk Venise lace. The gown featured a sheer yoke of organza bordered in ruffled organza edged with satin ribbon. The fitted bodice was overlaid in schiffli embroidery and organza. The waistline was encircled with a cummerbund of gathered satin accented with a medallion of silk Venise lace. The full circular skirt was enhanced with a flounce of organza edged in lace. The skirt was fashioned of schiffli embroidered lace. She wore a white bridal hat accented with white ribbons and flowers.

Bridesmaids were Kay Warrenof Bethel, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Bridgett Mozingo of Greenville. They wore floor length gowns of burgundy satin with matching capes and carried identical roses to that of the matron of honor.

Crystal Garris of Farmville, cousin of the bride, wore a floor length gown of ivory satin with burgundy ribbon, ruffled neckline, pouf short sleeves and carried a basket of mixed silk flowers.

Phil Cayton of Tarboro was best man. Ushers were Ronald Warren of Bethel, brother of the bridegroom, and Tommy Warren of Robersonville, cousin of the bridegroom. Rodney Warren, brother of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

Gail Crisp was organist.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall and guests were greeted by Fannie Perry, aunt of the bridegroom. Frances Warren, aunt of the bridegroom, served wedding cake and punch was poured by Mary Ann Garris, aunt of the bride.

The couple will be residing in Ayden.

MRS. HEWITT

The marriage of Margaret Anne Clemens and Douglas A. Hewitt was solemnized at 11 a.m. Saturday in St. James United Methodist Church Chapel. The Rev. Caswell Shaw officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Don Clemens of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Harvey Hewitt of Mt. Clemens, Mich., and June Hewitt of Warren, Mich.

Wedding music was presented by Frances Cain, organist.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a dress designed and made by her mother. The dress had a lace bodice over satin with a stand-up collar and neckline that was outlined with lace medallions. The skirt was made of nylon tulle over satin, with a cathedral train. The long sleeves were made of lace, and lace gathered to edge of the train, forming three tiers of ruffles in the gown front which was covered with seed pearl flowers. The fingertip veil was edged in lace. The bride carried a bouquet of cascading silk daisies and ivy.

Becky Bagley, sister of the bride, of Greenville, was matron of honor. She wore a formal-length yellow satin gown with an elbow-length cape and carried a bouquet of white silk flowers.

The bridesmaid was Jeri Walter of Raleigh. She wore a dress similar to that of the matron of honor.

The bride's niece, Allyson Lemmond of Roanoke Rapids was the flower girl. She wore a pale pink satin formal-length dress trimmed with white lace and carried a basket of white daisies.

Serving as best man was the groom's brother, Richard Clemens of Speed. J.D. Malstrom of Sandown, N.H., was the usher; Matthew Leggett of Greenville, the ring bearer.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. A bridal shower was given earlier at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Bagley.

The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and is employed in the payroll department of The Greensboro Daily News and Record. The bridegroom attended N.C. State University, is employed by Gilborco of Greensboro and is a student at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

After a wedding trip to Washington, D.C., the couple will reside at 3224-G Lawndale Drive, Greensboro.

Miss Warren, Mr. Moore Were Married Saturday

Deborah Kathryn Warren and Terry Lynn Moore were united in marriage at 3 p.m. Saturday in St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Greenville.

Sharon Irwin presented a program of organ music. Solos were performed by the Rev. Ralph A. Brown, Joe Schrader and the bridegroom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of ivory alencon lace and satin. The bateau neckline formed a v back and the leg 'o mutton sleeves extended to a point. Silk encircled the modified waistline and the skirt extended to a scalloped edge. She carried a cascade of dusty rose and ivory roses.

The honor attendant, Melissa Dawn Ward of Greenville, wore a dusty rose taffeta tea-length dress and carried a bouquet of dusty rose and ivory roses.

Braswell Moore, father of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Jay Wilson of Greenville and Micheal Moore, brother of the bridegroom, of Graham.

Marion Schrader directed the ceremony.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride at the Daughters of the American Revolution Chapter House in Farmville. Ruby Pearsall and Donna Mills served cake and Jeannie Brown and Carolyn Farrell poured punch. Tom Jones and Wofford greeted guests.

After a trip to the coast, the couple will live in Greenville.

MRS. MOORE

The bride graduated from East Carolina University with a special education degree. The bridegroom attends East Caorlina University and majors in medical social work.

The couple was honored ih a cookout given by Mr. and Mrs. M.E. Howell Sr., Mr. and Mr. M.E. Howell Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dell'Anno.

Mrs. Mark Alcon hosted a miscellaneous shower, as did the First Baptist Church of Farmville, and Miss Kathy Hutsenpiller and Miss Patty Howard.

Mr. Allen, Miss Diedrich Wed In Farmville

FARMVILLE — Ann Marie Diedrich and Donnie Ray Allen, both of Raleigh, were married at 7 p.m. Friday in the Farmville United Methodist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Horace Ray Allen of Farmville and Marie Jean Diedrich and Charles Gerald Diedrich, both of Raleigh.

The bride wore an ivory satin gown adorned with alencon lace and seed pearls. It was fashioned with a high lace neckline, a yoke of embroidered marquisette and full-length bell sleeves. The full gathered skirt fell into a long train. A waltz-length tiered veil of bridal illusion fell from a Juliet cap of alencon lace and seed pearls. She carried a Victorian nosegay of white orchids, lily of the valley and greenery, accented with picot satin ribbon tied with love knots.

The matron of honor was the bride's mother. She wore a gray lace street-length dress and carried a bouquet of silk flowers.

The best man was the bridegroom's father.

The organist was Mrs. Drucilla Lamm of Wilson; the soloist, Mrs. Carol Lynn Heath, sister of the bridegroom.

MRS. ALLEN

Following the ceremony, the parents of the bridegroom entertained with a dinner at the Colonial Inn in Farmville. A three-tiered wedding cake was made by Mrs. Manley Wooten, aunt of the bridegroom.

After a wedding trip to Las Vegas, the couple will live in Raleigh.

The bride is a graduate of Sanderson High School and attended Wake Technical College. She is a secretary for Boylan Internal Medicine in Raleigh. The bridegroom is a graduate of Farmville High School and North Carolina State University in Raleigh. He is a manufacturing engineer with Camper Products Company in Henderson.

Games Help Children Of Divorce

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Every year the parents of more than a million children get divorced. Often, the children mistakenly blame themselves and struggle to solve what are really their parents' problems.

JoAnne Pedro-Carroll, a psychologist at the University of Rochester, has found that teaching children to distinguish between "grown-up" problems and "kid" problems helps alleviate their sense of guilt, so they can cope better in school and at home. To help them learn this distinction, she has devised several games, appropriate for children of different ages.

These games have been successful as part of a divorce intervention program she has designed for Rochester-area elementary schools.

If you enjoy a rice pudding that has a firm texture and only a slight interlacing of custard, this recipe may appeal to you. As an accompaniment to it, there are directions for making Strawberry Cream.

RICE CUSTARD AND STRAWBERRY CREAM

Strawberry Cream, see recipe
1 cup water
½ cup long-grain rice, rinsed and drained
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 teaspoons grated lemon peel
¼ teaspoon salt
3 large eggs
1-3rd cup sugar
1¼ cups milk

Prepare Strawberry Cream; cover and refrigerate.

In a 1-quart saucepan combine water, rice, butter, lemon juice, lemon peel and salt. Bring to boiling; stir with fork, cover and simmer over very low heat until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed — about 20 minutes. Remove from heat.

Meanwhile, in a large bowl whisk eggs and sugar to blend thoroughly; whisk in milk. Gradually stir hot rice into egg mixture. Pour into buttered 5- to 6-cup casserole or souffle dish. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until top is golden and edges are set — 35 to 40 minutes. Cool on wire rack. Spoon warm custard into dessert dishes. Serve with chilled Strawberry Cream.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

STRAWBERRY CREAM: Thaw a 10-ounce package frozen sliced strawberries in syrup. In an electric blender combine half the strawberries with ¼ cup heavy cream and 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel; whirl until smooth. Stir in the remaining strawberries. Makes about 1¼ cups.

Men's trousers should fit at the waist, not the hips. The pants should not pull at the seat or look baggy.

JEAN FOLSTON...is the daughter of Mrs. William T. Folston of Stantonsburg, who announces her engagement to Danny A. Harrington of Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Harrington of Greenville. The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late Mr. Folston. A June 14 wedding is planned.

At Wit's End —By Erma Bombeck

My eyes have drifted over enough college commencements to practically read the minds of everyone who is there.

The graduates are having second thoughts about majoring in human sexuality.

The faculty is begging forgiveness for what they are about to unleash on the civilized world.

The mothers are wondering if the pictures they took without a flash are going to turn out.

The grandparents are trying to remember where the bathroom was they passed four hours earlier.

The father is sitting there numb. He is mentally trying to figure out how he is going to fit all of the graduate's possessions he saw stacked in the room into his station wagon. Even if he left grandma in a gas station and pretended he forgot her, the stuff wouldn't fit. Even if he donated the aquarium and the fish to the science department, it wouldn't fit. Even if he strapped the surfboard and the small refrigerator to the fenders, it wouldn't fit.

A survey was done a few years ago by The Wall Street Journal about what college students considered essential for their conduct in school. Eighty-four percent of them said an alarm clock was their number one priority. A stereo was chosen by 77 percent and blue jeans by 70 percent. A backpack was a necessity for 61 percent and extra underware was a luxury named by 57 percent.

I would have thought someone would have voted for a tuition check, but when you're sitting around in new underwear and blue jeans listening to your stereo and setting your alarm so you can get up early to backpack, that's about as good as academic life can get!

I don't know what happens once kids get to college, but four years later, those rooms would take the sight out of a good eye. We had a child of the 60s who wanted to get away from our materialism. She entered college taking with her our TV set, 4 x 6 rug, towels, bed linens, pots and pans, silverware, dishes, typewriter, portable heater, hair dryer, tennis racket and second car. Every time I visited her room I felt like a game show contestant. All my dreams were there within my reach, but I gave the wrong answer when she asked, "Do you need this?"

Sometimes I hang around the campus long enough to see those station wagons pull away from the dormitory. They look like the Beverly Hillbillies after college. There are bicycles tied to the roof, crates of albums that lower the car to within two inches above the ground. Skis hang out from the tailgate with a T-shirt tied over the end, boxes of bluebooks and themes float from the windows, beer can collections dangle in mesh bags from door handles.

The only thing missing is the graduate sitting in a rocking chair on the roof on the car, wearing a football helment and reading the want ads.

Men's vests should be smooth and fit close to the body without pulling or creasing. The vest should always be worn with the last button unbuttoned.

Fate Of Children Of Famine Disputed

By JERRY GRAY
Associated Press Writer

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The thousands of children orphaned or displaced by famine have become an issue of heated dispute between two Ethiopian government agencies.

A major relief agency of the Marxist government wants to group the children in what it calls "re-unification centers" for as long as two years; another calls the idea a waste of time and money.

Western diplomats and voluntary relief agencies agree with the latter. One Western donor nation likened the centers to "re-education camps." Most private aid agencies have closed their purse strings to the plan.

Another issue in dispute is how many children were lost or separated from their parents in the famine. Estimates range as high as 200,000 and as low as 5,000.

The dispute is between the Relief and Rehabilitation Commission (RRC), which has coordinated Ethiopia's massive emergency relief effort, and the National Children's Commission, which looks after all matters pertaining to children up to age 14. The Children's Commission, however, is subordinate to the RCC.

As late as November, the RRC's top official was telling foreign donors that 200,000 Ethiopian children had been orphaned or displaced because of the famine. In late February, an RRC report said the number was at least 50,000.

About the same time as the RRC report, the Children's Commission began circulating one of its own reports on its family reunification program. It contradicted the RCC.

"Contrary to earlier estimates of the number of unaccompanied children resulting from the 1984-85 famine, phase one of the family reunification program shows that only 11,381 unaccompanied children have been or are being cared for in feeding centers," said the Children's Commission report.

Of the 11,381 children identified in the report, 2,672 have been placed in orphanages and 500 reunited with relatives, leaving 8,209 unaccounted for as of early March.

"I expect the number to be about 5,000 in the final analysis," Tessera Worq Shimelis, deputy commissioner of the National Children's Commission, said in an interview.

The RRC has yet to comment on the Children's Commission report, which was compiled by the United Nations Children's Fund office in Addis Ababa with the help of the RRC and other government agencies and 17 volunteer agencies that offer children's services.

But based largely on its own estimates of at least 50,000 displaced children, the RRC has proposed building up to five so-called "children's reunification interim reception centers," at a cost of $1.2 million each.

Not only has the idea has been criticized by Western diplomats and voluntary relief agencies, it has been assailed as well by the Children's Commission.

"We consider institutional care as a last resort," said Tessera. "This project seems to be a bit exorbitant in the first place. It also could have a psychological impact on the children in that they might not want to leave the place.

"We are supposed to be the advocates of children. We are like watchdogs." Despite the Children's Commission's objections and without the financial backing it seemingly needs from volunteer agencies, the RRC has proceeded with the reunification center idea.

It has established a pilot project in the town of Dessie to collect children from refugee camps in the Wollo Region.

David Ireland Installs An Environmental Art Work At ECU

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Bright afternoon sunlight streamed through the tall arched windows on the south side of the Old Cafeteria building on the East Carolina University campus Wednesday afternoon.

In the big bare room, San Francisco artist David Ireland and five student helpers worked in the empty sunlit space. Ireland was here for a week on a visit funded by the National Endowment for the Arts through the ECU School of Art's Gray Gallery.

A tall — six-foot five — silver haired man, Ireland is one of America's foremost artists in the environmental genre, with a long list of major environmental projects to his credit.

"You could say my reputation is based to a great extent on being asked to work in off-beat kind of places," Ireland said. "I tend mostly to work indoors, quite often in what I call distressed places."

Distressed places, Ireland said "are generally places such as this old building which have not been in use or occupied for a number of years. I study each place thoroughly, then arrive at a concept of how I can best create a project that will be approprite and attractive."

On most assignments, Ireland usually has a month, sometimes longer, to consider the approach he will take. "Here, I have only one week to decide, to conceptualize, and get it done.

"A short time factor is good occasionally," he said, "because it presents me with the kind of challenge I don't normally face."

The artist said he responded with good feelings to the room chosen for the project. "You have here a room with charm, with good architectural lines," he said, indicating the wall of tall windows, a fireplace in one wall with an inset of bas-relief figures in a frieze above the mantel, and sturdy granite floors. "This room appeals to me.

"I find it fascinating that the date of this building, 1909, is the same as that of my current long-standing project across the bay from San Francisco I'm working on now.

"Naturally," he said, "there's a major difference in the approach I'll take. Where's there's more time at my disposal, I can work on a more thought-out formal idea. Here, it will not be a formal experience, but more an experience of the mind."

Ireland had a deadline of Friday to complete the installation. "I won't try to explain all the details I have in mind, have sketched out for this room," he said. "However, I do plan to install a television set within the fireplace with some form of artificial fire, a smokeless fire, playing on the screen. These two," he pointed to two empty display cases, "will contain artifacts gathered on campus. Most likely they'll be archaeological specimens."

Large areas of the walls are discolored by time and moisture, dark and light gray mold with creams and greens showing through.

"This is a typical distressed inner-building situation," Ireland said. "I'll leave it as it is, not try to change or stabilize it. I especially like the jade quality of the old green paint that shows through." He mentioned it is his understanding that at a later date the room — and the building, will be restored. "That pleases me. This is much too fine a building to be razed."

Ireland said he has been told the installation will remain on view through about the end of the year.

Ireland found the coincidence of names of the student artists helping him somewhat an unusual occurrence. "What we have here is something like the House of David," he said. "I'm David, and two of my student helpers are named David."

Students assisting Ireland on Wednesday were David Lewis of Greenville, David Hall of Greensboro, Juan Scivally of Raleigh, and Peggy Poe of Kinston. All are painting majors.

On his return to California, Ireland will work again on a long-time project at Fort Barry, in Marin County at the north end of the Golden Gate Bridge. Fort Barry, along with Forts Cronkhite and Baker, are former military installations that are now part of a natioinal recreation area.

"I'm working as artist-in-residence at the Marin Headland Arts Cooperative under the auspices of the National Park Service," Ireland said. "It's an interesting project, with the buildings dating back to the early years of the century.

Ireland said he loves seeing places and travels whenever time and circumstances permit. "I've been in western Europe and have visited South Africa," he said. "Over the years, I've made three visits to Asia, to Nepal, Afghanistan, Thailand. And I've traveled in the Pacific, including New Zealand and Australia. I remember how in my two years of military service I had hoped to travel, but didn't get to go anywhere much."

Some of the better known environmental projects Ireland has done have been ones in Washington, San Francisco, Boston and in Washington state. He has also exhibited widely throughout the United States, in Canada, and has served as visiting artist in California, Massachusetts and in other states.

Ireland praised the abundance of green and the clean light of an eastern North Carolina spring in the week he has been here, and observed: "One thing I have noticed particularly. Here, your distressed buildings obviously are the result of considerable rain, dampness. In California, to the contrary, the distressed conditions have mostly come about from earthquakes. There's quite a difference."

It's Rockhounds Time Again

RALEIGH — The good time of year for rockhounds and their families in the western area of North Carolina has arrived. Since the early days of North Carolina's 1799 "gold rush," the state has lived up to its name as "Nature's sample case" of gems.

Emeralds, rubies and garnets are among the most popular of the over 400 varieties of gems and minerals found in North Carolina. Many privately owned mines are open to families. A small fee is usually charged, but the result may be a ruby, garnet or even an emerald.

Another attraction in the western part of the state is the Reed Gold Mine restored State Historic Site in Cabarrus County, which offers gold panning, exhibits and tours into portions of the old underground mine.

For more details, write to: Reed Gold Mine, Rt. 2, Box 101, Stanfield, N.C., 28163, phone 704/786-8337; or to: North Carolina Geological Survey, P.O. Box 27687, Raleigh, N.LC., 27611, phone 733-2433.

Appointed Director

RALEIGH — Samuel M. Stone of Winston-Salem will become director of development at the North Carolina Museum of Art effective July 1. He currently is director of development at the North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, a position he has held since January, 1972.

Wilson Show Opens Today

WILSON — Three artists have their work going on view today at the Arts Council of Wilson, 205 Gray Street. The artists and the media of their work are: R. Vincent Smith, shadow box assemblages; Bradley Spencer, bronze sculpture, and Emily Whittle, stitched paintings.

A reception to meet the artists will be held at the gallery from 6 to 8 p.m.

Regular gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays-Fridays, and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays. Admission is free.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Another common mistake is thinking because a room has a large window facing a garden it should be decorated in outdoor colors. Contrast can be much more effective.

Unless one has a very large house, a color scheme of three to four colors should be used throughout. This creates an enlarging effect and furniture and accessories can be moved from one room to another so one doesn't tire of the same color scheme throughout. For example, one room could have a dominant color of mauve with blue and accents in green, while a joining room could be dominant green with mauve and navy blue accents.

It has been my experience that it is usually best to keep the carpet the same throughout. One can change the monotony of the same colors by using different intensity and variety in fabrics. For example, one room could have drapery in a flame-stitch, another could have a window treatment in a dot, while another could have a floral window treatment. Remember, variety creates interest.

Whether you need help with a single room or your entire home or office, Betsy Drake Interiors has the experience, expertise and resources to help you create the perfect look. Our fabric and wallcovering samples are the most extensive in Eastern North Carolina and we have a half million dollar inventory of quality home furnishings displayed in our 20,000 square foot showroom. We offer the lowest prices East of High Point with savings of 30-50% and our service is unequaled in the retail furniture industry.

Please Don't Rattle Your Knees

It could only happen where a lot of metallic jingling-jangling is part of the scene, such as the April 19 Haliwa-Saponi Indian Festival at Old Bethlehem School near Hollister. When festivities recommenced after a lunch break, the tribe's chief, W.R. Richardson, returned to the platform where the microphone was set up.

He told the returning audience and performers it was time to get started again. A sizeable number of those present had single and multiple small bells attached to their regalia.

"I want everybody to please be quiet, to stop moving around and shaking your bells so that you can hear our guest speaker," Richardson said.

In a few moments the noise and bustle quieted as the audience and performers settled down. All that is, except one young man, seated on a bench. No doubt he was unaware of what he was doing. He sat perfectly still, except for jiggling his feet. Bells were attached to leather bands just above his calves.

The chief glanced at the youth. "Please, young man, don't rattle your knees," he said. "It's distracting." With that there was silence.

The 1986 Europa Stamps

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

The nations of Europe each year issue a series of stamps with a common theme entitled "Europa." This year the subject is "Protection of Nature and the Environment."

Two of Britain's well known but smaller islands — Jersey and the Isle of Man — have released their sets for Europa 1986. Jersey is in the English Channel and Man is in the Irish Sea off the northwest coast of England.

Jersey, most southerly of the British islands, enjoys a more favorable climate than most in similar latitudes. Winters are mild and summers warm. Consequently, some types of flora of Jersey cannot be found in mainland Britain. Three of these are depicted on the new set. The 10-pence stamp shows the dwarf pansy. The 14-pence has the sea stock and the 22-pence shows the sand crocus. Each stamp also bears the Europa emblem, profile vignette of Queen Elizabeth and "Europa 1986."

There are four stamps in the set issued by the Isle of Man. The 12-pence depicts The Ayres, a beach area on the northern coast, which is the home of some of Man's rarest plants. Another 12-pence shows "The Calf of Man," a bird sanctuary. One 22-pence features examples of coastal vegetation visited by many sea birds. Another 22-pence illustrates the Langness peninsula where a special breed of grasshopper has been found. Each stamp carries the Queen's profile, Europa emblem and the Manx Museum's symbol in three corners. Atop the stamps is the inscription "Manx National Trust" in English and in Manx Gaelic.

Nine nations in various parts of the world have issued special stamps and souvenir sheets to commemorate the 850th birthday of the famous Jewish philospher and physician, Maimonides (1135-1204). Maimonides, whose real name was Rabbi Moses ben Maimon, was born in Cordoba, Spain, on the day before Passover.

The first to issue a series of stamps for Maimonides was Antigua & Barbuda. The latest is the Republic of Guinea, a former French colony in West Africa. The stamp features Maimonides as a young man of 13 forced to flee from Cordoba. In the foreground is another portrait of Maimonides in later life. The souvenir sheet depicts a rabbi reading to a group of orphans in Israel today.

Norway has issued two new stamps to honor the world biathlon championships taking place in that country. Biathlon is a combination of skiing and rifle marksmanship, also an Olympic competition. Both stamps show a biathlon scene.

The Art Of Designing Fine Books

"Remembering Carl Hertzog," by Al Lowman; Still Point Press, $100, 48 pp.

Reviewed by BROC SEARS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

First moments as a child with fine books bring back memories of quiet and museumlike book stores or of dark leather chairs in the study of a favorite relative. Such were times when appreciation began not only of the great adventures that took place from page to page in books, but of the beauty and crispness of an illustrator's glimpse into that enterprise and the authority with which each page seemed to speak. These first encounters were often romantic and sometimes spiritual experiences that opened our hearts and minds for the rest of our lives.

Most of these books were printed between 1920 and 1950, when the printer and designer worked hand in hand as true craftsmen. There were no high-tech wonder machines to hammer out miles and miles of type or blue glowing tubes digitizing each inch of layout, then dumping the entire volume in one shot. Those were the days of hot lead and hand-set galleys that kept fingertips calloused and the proofreader honest. Guilds, unions and the demands of a growing and educated middle class kept some of the best designers and printers hard at work in the North. Fortunately, it did not keep them all.

Carl Hertzog brought all the craftsmanship and romance of the printed word that one could ask for to the Southwest during the same period. His work as a typographer, printer and designer of regional books earned him great respect nationwide. Through sheer desire for excellence and respect for tradition he was able to establish his own milestones in book design and printing that others were simply struggling to achieve elsewhere.

Fortunately, the text of "Remembering Carl Hertzog" is not too technical for the average reader.

Book lovers will enjoy the anecdotes of how Hertzog's books, now almost all collector's items, were created. The accounts of battles for quality, laced with the lingo and frankness of an earlier Texas, are given ample play. Stories of how Hertzog selected typefaces, art and materials help us understand his desire to make his books "feel" like the topics they held within their bindings.

U.S. Marine dungaree cloth, for example, was used to bind the boards on "Peleliu Landing," a frank and straightforward account of World War II combat, illustrated with the author's firsthand sketches. The design and production of "The Journey of Fray Marcos de Niza" for Southern Methodist University was highlighted by the use of a dark brown binding cloth that reminded one of the Franciscan habit worn by de Niza, a cleric remembered in history as the advance man for Coronado's expedition to the Americas. Fittingly, the dust jacket has a gold background that symbolizes the Cities of Gold that de Niza was sent to find. Hertzog remarked upon the book's release, "the priest caused the printer to lose his shirt, just as Coronado lost his."

Hertzog died in July 1984, after 60 years designing books and teaching others his craft. Upon his passing, many people associated with the publishing industry felt as though an era of craftsmanship and dedication to book design as an art form went with him.

"Remembering Carl Hertzog" may help change that opinion. It is a fine edition worth the investment to the serious collector or student of design who shares the ideal for tradition and the love of fine books.

The vines often grow to the tops of tall trees. In passing, it could be mistaken for the brighter orange-red of a more prevalent vine flower, the trumpet flower (or cow itch vine) that has a much longer flowering period. Mother's Day Art Events At NCMA

By SHARON BROOM
N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Museum of Art will celebrate Mother's Day, May 11, with its second annual Mummie's Day festival. Free activities for all ages will be held, including films, music, dance and workshops between the hours of 12:15 to 4 p.m.

The film "Of time, Tombs and Treasure: the Treasures of Tutankhamun" will be shown at 12:15 and again at 12:45 p.m. Narrated by J. Carter Brown, director of the National Gallery of Art, the film features objects discovered in the boy king's tomb in 1922 by archaeologist Howard Carter. Beautifully crafted furniture, jewelry, vases and other objects from the tomb give a glimpse of life in ancient Egypt.

From 12:15 to 2:30 p.m., children may participated in drop-in workshops where they will make Mother's Day corsages and decorative collars inspired by the elaborate jewel-studded necklaces worn by ancient Egyptians.

Families can take part in one of four 30-minute workshops, "Mommy, It's a Renoir," from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. These will be conducted by Aline Wolf, author of the book of the same title, who uses art postcards to teach parents and children how to look at art together.

Thirty-minute tours of mummies and mothers in the museum's collections will begin in the main entrance lobby each half-hour from 12:30 to 2 p.m. The tours will include such works as a mummy case for an Egyptian woman, dating from 730-330 B.C., and an 18th-century portrait by the English artist Sir Thomas Lawrence, "Lady Louisa Harvey and Her Children, Edward and Louisa."

At 1:30 and 2:30 p.m., the Capital City Dance Company, under the directin of Etta Galler, will perform a Maypole Dance, in which colorful ribbons are intertwinded around a pole bedecked with greenery. This traditional dance dates to medievel England, where the month of May was celebrated by a great public holiday.

The events on Mother's Day will conclude with a concert by The Raleigh Boychoir, directed by Tom Sibley, to be given in the museum's auditorium from 3 to 4 p.m.

All events are free and open to the public. For more information, call 833-1935.

Benefit Sale Of Prints

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Community Arts Council is conducting a benefit sale of prints by artist Norbert Irvine. Norbert, a well-known printmaker who works in silkscreen, has his work in over 3,000 public and private collections.

The sale will take place from 4 to 5:30 p.m. today and will continue theeafter through May 17 at the Arts Council site in Farmville.

The limited edition prints are priced at $100 each. Purchasers who wish to have framed prints will pay an additional $25. Payment is due at time of purchase. Framed prints can be picked up at the council building on May 27.

Proceeds from this special benefit sale will be used to help defray extensive medical bills for the hospitalization of Norbert's daughter, April. A junior at N.C. State University, April suffered brain injury in an automobile accident and was in a deep coma for three weeks. Altogether, she spent 23 weeks in Pitt Memorial Hospital and Rehabilitation Center.

Any who would like to contribute to this benefit can send a contribution to the fund to: Emmy Whitehead, Cultural Arts Coordinator, Pitt County Schools, 1712 West Fifth Street, Greenville, N.C., 27834. A print will be reserved for any donation of $100 or more.

Local Artist Is Award Winner

Greenville artist Linda Darty is the winner of the $1,000 "Cleome C. Wadsworth Donor Award in Jewelry Design," sponsored by the Washington, D.C. chapter of the Society of Arts and Letters, an organization of men and women who are engaged professionally in the creative arts.

Decision on the award was made following three phases of jurying. When this was concluded Ms. Darty was notified she had been unanimously selected as the winner by the committee of jurors.

Artists from eight southeastern st-tes competed for the prestigious award.

This honor for Ms. Darty follows immediately an invitation for her to show her work in the annual Washington, D.C. Crafts Show at the Smithsonian Institute. (There is no connection between the two events).

"I am truly thrilled and honored by this award, "Ms. Darty said. "I think I feel like I'm getting an Oscar award; and I'm really grateful to so many people who have helped and encourged me. After long years of hard work, it's an exciting time for me."

The two pieces that won Ms. Darty the Wadsworth Donor Award are a brooch and a pair of earrings.

Her husband, Terry Smith, is a professor in wood design at ECU. Both currently have work showing in the annual N.C. Crafts Show at the N.C. Museum of History in Raleigh.

The two will go to Washington, D.C. this week to attend the ceremony where Ms. Darty will be presented the Wadsorth Award.

ECU Student Show Opens Monday At Gray Gallery

ECU News Bureau

The East Carolina University School of Art will open its 1986 undergraduate exhibition Monday in Gray Gallery on the ECU campus. It will remain on view through May 24.

Faculty members selected the best works by undergradate art majors for the show. These include pottery, paintings, drawings, metal arts, jewelry, prints, sculpture, photography, wood designs, fiber arts, communications art and environmental design.

Students were also allowed to submit work not done in class, such as installation proposals.

All the art will be juried by the School of Art's gallery committee.

A reception will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday. The reception is free and open to the public.

Gray Gallery is located in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center on campus. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. — until 8 p.m. Wednesday. For more details, call 757-6336.

Seeks Artists For Festival

DURHAM — The Durham Arts Council and Durham Parks & Recreation Department are issuing an early call for artists to take part in CenterFest '86, a big annual festival to be held this year on September 20 and 21.

The festival, attended by about 100,000 people last year, will feature fine arts and crafts, a variety of performing arts, a special children's section, and numerous vendors and concessionaires.

The visual arts section is open to all media. A requireement is that art works must be original. All applicants will be screened for participation.

For more details and application form write to: CenterFest-Visual Arts, Durham Arts Council, 120 Morris Street, Durham, N.C., 27701, or call 286-3684.

Forest Edge Open Again, Trips Offered By The N.C. Zoo

NEW BEAU . . . Carlos, a 16-year-old Lowland gorilla, was scheduled to arrive May 1 at the North Carolina Zoological Park, Asheboro, from the Memphis Zoo and Aquarium. Officials are hoping he'll mate with Hope, the zoo's only female Lowland gorilla, who is now eight-years old and ready to be a mother. (AP Laserphoto)

ASHEBORO — Giraffes, zebras, ostriches and Marabou storks are back on exhibit in the Forest Edge habitat and Smart Cars have returned to the pathways at the North Carolina Zoologicl Park.

The Forest Edge was closed until recently for major renovation and improvementss, inluding building more artificial rockwork to screen the animals's night quarters from the public.

Springbok, which had been moved to the African Plains when the Forest Edge closed, will remain on the plains.

Smart Carts feature games, photographs, artifact and small, touchable animals to teach visitors about plants and animals at the zoo. Staffed by trained educators, they are a program of the zoo's Eduction Division.

Weather permitting, at least one Smart Cart will be out every weekday from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and every weekend and holiday from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. through October.

They are located at the Forest Edge habitat, at the entrance to the R.J. Reynolds Forest Aviary and near the gorillas' outdoor habitat in the African Pavilion.

About 650 exotic animals are exhibited in natural habitats at the zoo, six miles southeast of Asheboro off US 64, US 220 and NC 159. Admission is $3 for adults, $1 for children 2-15 and senior citizens. The tram ride exhibits cost $1 a day. The zoo is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekends and holidays.

• In another aspect of the zoo's programs, the North Carolina Zoological Society has announced offerings in the 1986 travel program.

The big trip of the year is the eight-day nature expedition to the Amazon Jungles of Peru. Ron Morris, the zoo's curator of birds, will be the tour host for the Amazon trip.

Departure date, from Miami, Florida, is August 16. Cost of the expedition is $1398 per person from and back to Miami.

This fee covers inclusively air transportation from and back to Miami; all scheduled trasnportation in Peru both by land and river; jungle excursions both by river and land with experienced Peruvian bilingual guides; all accommodations including hotel, lodge and camp expenses; all meals, and all transfers, porterage, hotel and lodge service charges.

The only costs involved are transportation fees to and from North Carolina to Miami, passport fees and funds for items of a personal nature

For more details on this trip, contact Sally Steele, N.C. Zoological Society, Rt. 4, Box Zoo, Asheboro, N.C., 27203 or call 879-5603.

A trip on May 31 will be made to the National Zoo in Washington, D.C. Cost of the trip is $115 per person for those who are members of the Zoological Society, and $130 for non-members. $15 is a tax-deductible contributon to the N.C. Zoological Society.

The cost covers air transportation both ways from the Greensboro-High Point-Winston Salem Regional Airport, with an early morning departure and return early Saturday evening. A morning reception and tour will take place at the National Zoo, and there will be an afternoon tour of the Smithsonian. Lunch, at the Escargot Restaurant, is not included in the trip cost.

Reservatins will be accepted no later than May 16, provided all seating is not reserved prior to that date. For complete details, contact Linda Argersinger at 879-5603.

Suggestions For Falling To Sleep

By Rogers Whitener
Folklore Writer

Going to bed but failing to fall asleep must be one of the cruelest punishments ever visited on mankind.

Indeed, insomniacs must sometimes wonder if Old Nick isn't already at work, too impatient to wait for his future boarders' arrival in the infernal regions.

Surely it is part of his devilish cunning to so bestrew TV screens, newspapers, magazines, and other publications with warnings about caffeine, nicotine, cholesterol, and other potential life-shorteners that it is nigh impossible to even get started on a night' sleep, let alone embark on a peaceful rest.

It was bad enough in days past when ordinary worries were sufficient to threaten sleep: concern about money or crops, trouble with a child or spouse, loss of teeth or hair. Little deaths along the way, certainly, but nothing that couldn't be handled by calling on one or several traditional folk practices for help.

There was always that glass of warm milk, for instance — or the threat of it — which eased the sleepless one into the world of dreams. Or should milk somehow fail, there was the possibility of a slug of the other white — to settle the stomach, of course.

According to folk belief, eating certain foods just before retiring also tended to bring on drowsiness and early sleep. Oldtimers, for instance, often had a bedtime snack of onions as a sleep-inducer. This, perhaps, made more sense as a guarantee of personal privacy, however, than as a settler of the stomach. At any rate it was supposed to work.

Those disdainful of stomach remedies might have a go at counting sheep, especially lambs, since the biblical association supposedly would bring good thoughts and a peaceful rest. I always have been of a mind, however, that the sheep-counting bit was something foisted off on children by adults. I have yet to talk to a grown-up who has personally applied successfully this procedure.

Bed positioning was also important, especially in the past. Not whether the sleeper slept on side, back, or stomach, but where his head was pointed. Ideally, it was once thought, the head should point north, lining up with magnetic currents.

Later, however, contradictions began to appear: sleeping with the head pointed north meant a short life; pointed east it assured the sleeper of being propelled with the directional turn of the earth, also promising wealth; pointing west, it indicated future travel.

Keeping the bedroom cold and the covers piled high has always had its adherenets for producing sleep, because there was no other recourse in days gone by. Modern thought, however, has it that a cold room may bring fitful dreams.

Probably still the best solution to sleeplessness is reading — preferably non-fiction. Five minutes of trying to make sense of intellectual matter at bedtime will almost guarantee a trip to the land of nod.

THE GRIMES MILL . . . in Salisbury is now open for tours each Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. The 1896 structure has been purchased by the Historic Salisbury Foundation and is under continuing restoration.

Salisbury Mill Open To Visitors

SALISBURY — The dusty inside of the 1896 Grimes Mill will take visitors back to a simpler time when Rowan County farmers carried their year's harvest to the loading dock and waited for sifters and sieves to shake an income into their hands.

A maze of grain elevators go from the bottom floor to the top floor and then up and down again.

Historic Salisbury Foundation keeps the old roller mill alive by offering tours two days a week. The mill is under continuing restoration.

Grimes Mill produced flour as well as stock feed, bran, corn meal, poultry feed, rabbit pellets, and glue extender. In 1983 it was purcahsed by Historic Salisbury Foundation. Plans are to operate the mill as a teaching point, tour attraction and museum.

Located on the corner of North Church and West Franklin streets close to downtown Salisbury, Grimes Mill is open from May 3 through October 12. Tours are held Saturdays and Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m. Cost is $1.50 per person. A special combinatin ticket at $2 also gives admission to the antebellum 1820 Dr. Josephus Hall House, open year round from 2 to 5 p.m.

Annual Hang Gliding Festival May 9-11

SAILING UNDER A WING — A hang glider pilot is shown in flight under a hang-gliding wing. The 14th Annual Hang Gliding Spectacular for 1986 will be held at Jockey's Ridge in Nags Head on May 9, 10, and 11. (Photo by Walter Gresham)

NAGS HEAD — The 14th Annual Hang Gliding Spectacular will take place Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 9, 10 and 11. The three-day event is sponsored by the Dare Conty Jaycees, the North Carolina State Park Service, and Kitty Hawk Kites.

The hang gliding weekend has been held on Jockey's Ridge since 1973, which makes it the oldest continuously-held hang gliding competition in the nation. Nearly 60,000 people have learned the skills of this sport at Jockey's Ridge.

The competition covers two classes of participants based on skill level ratings — novice for Hang I and II pilots, and experienced for Hang III and IV pilots.

The competition will cover all three days, with a point system used to give competitors points based on time a pilot remains in the air, landing skills and a slalom event where the gliders maneuver around pylons.

Scheduled events for Saturday include a stunt kite demonstration during the day and a street dance at night. Francis Rogallo, who invited the hang-gliding wing in 1948, will preside over the awards ceremony on Sunday.

Education Forests Now Open

RALEIGH — The four North Carolina Educational State Forests are places designed to offer visitors outdoors enjoyment while learning to manage and protect North Carolina woodlands.

Each of the forests features exhibits and displays on forest management, insects, fire control and wildlife. They have also two-mile long demonstration trails with exhibits on forest management.

The parks each have 20-25 scenic picnic sites with tables and grills, a large picnic shelter to accommodate up to 100 people, and amphitheater and restrooms.

The most popular attraction is the "Talking Tree Trail," where hidden recorded messages enable trees to tell visitors about the history of the forests.

The four educational forests are: Clemmons State Forest near Clayton; Rendezvous Mountain State Forest near Miller's Creek in Wilkes County; Tuttle State Forest between Lenoir and Morganton, and Holmes State Forest near Hendersonville.

The forests are open Wednesdays through Sundays through November. On weekdays, hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on weekends, from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

In addition, the new educational section of the Bladen Lakes State Forest near Elizabethtown will be open the third weekend of each month. This section contains exhibits such as a turpentine still, charcoal kiln and aircraft used for fighting forest fires — exhibits not found at the other educational sites.

For more details, write to: Public Affairs Office, P.O. Box 27687, Raleigh, N.C., 27611 or call 733-4984.

La Grange Festival Saturday

LA GRANGE — A Garden Spot Festival is to be held downtown La Grange on Saturday. An all-day event, it will begin at 8:15 a.m. with a one-mile fun run, open to all 12 or older, to be followed by a five-kilometer Garden Gait run. Fees are charged those entering, with prizes to be given in five age groups.

Craftsmen will be on hand at an early hours, with booths to line South Caswell Street, which will be closed to traffic. The arts and crafts booths will be open until 6 p.m.

Throughout the day children's events will be available, including a ferris wheel, merry-go-round, a petting zoo and other activities.

Musical entertainment will offer The Sunshine Band, Revelation Gospel Singers, Eastern North Carolina Bluegrass Assocation Band, Lenoir County Community Band, North Lenoir Chorus and the La Grange Youth Theater.

The day's events will end with a street dance from 7 to 10 p.m. D.J. for thd dance will be Randy Jarman.

POETRY AWARD

NEW YORK (AP) — Poet Brenda Hillman has been named the seventh recipient of the $1,000 Delmore Schwartz Memorial Poetry Award.

The award is "presented periodically either to a young poet of exceptional promise or to a more mature poet, who, in the opinion of the selection committee, has received insufficient national acclaim."

Hillman is the author of "White Dress."

Postcard Honors Stamp Collecting

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Stamp collecting — the hobby of kings and kids, ever growing in popularity — is duly honored on a new 14-cent U.S. domestic postal card.

The design of the card is a multicolor rendering based on a paper sculpture created by Ray Ameijide of Peekskill, N.Y. It features six adults (three women and three men) plus a child eagerly examining and discussing stamps. They are standing behind a table covered with stamps, albums and other stamp items.

Across the bottom of the design, in one line of black type, is the inscription "Stamps The Universal Hobby" and "USA 14."

First-day cancellations are available for the postcard.

You may purchase the card at your local post office and use peelable return address labels (recommended by the USPS). Send to: Customer-Provided Postal Cards, Postmaster, Chicago, IL 60607-9991. Deadline is June 23.

If you prefer to have the USPS provide the cards, attach a return address label and enclose a money order of 14 cents per card. Send to: Stamp Collecting Postal Card, Postmaster, Chicago, IL 60607-9992. It must be postmarked no later than June 23.

More emphasis on the hobby of stamp collecting:

In celebration of the international nature of the hobby, the United States, Sweden and the United Nations have joined together in the issuance of a philatelic folder entitled "Stamp Collecting — the International Hobby." It will be released on May 22 at AMERIPEX '86, the first international stamp show in this country in 10 years.

The U.S. page displays the four booklet stamps commemorating stamp collecting which were issued Jan. 23. The Swedish page will be devoted to its Stockholmia 86 booklet honoring the centennial of the Swedish Philatelic Society. The U.N. page features the six stamps in its "Philately — The International Hobby" issue.

The folder may be purchased for $5.95 directly from the Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, DC 20265-9998, from May 22 through Sept. 7 (unless supplies are exhausted before that date).

Most countries honor famous people only after their deaths. But that tradition and policy did not count when it came to the popular rock recording artist Michael Jackson, who has been idolized by his fans all over the world. The Caribbean island of St. Vincent has just released a new set of stamps hailing Jackson as part of its series of famous musicians. Besides the stamps there are souvenir sheets, color postcards and first-day covers. For more information you may write to D & G Philatelic, P.O. Box 237, West Hampstead, NY 11552.

Here's an added note to the joint philatelic folder mentioned above. The U.S. stamps are also a salute to the American Philatelic Society, which is celebrating its centennial year.

Greenville is beautiful in the Spring! But, the City needs your help in keeping it clean and beautiful. Please don't litter our roadways, streets, and parks!

RARE STAMP — This is a copy of the $1 postage stamp picturing an antique candle holder which has turned up with the candle's yellow flame and orange glow a half-inch from where it belongs (see mislocated flame in lower right). The first U.S. invert in 23 years, it has set off a search for more of the stamps. (AP Lasaerphoto)

Art Award To Rose Student

Steve Horne, 16, a student at J.H. Rose High School, won an honorable mention in mixed media category in the National Scholastic Arts Awards Program.

Selection of honors was made from more than 10,000 finalist entres which came from regional judging levels. The awards are given annually in 14 categories covering painting, drawing, printmaking, design, sculpture and crafts.

The awards include cash and tuition scholarships for seniors totaling more than $200,000, plus medals and honorable mention certificates.

Stamps — Reproductions

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Reproductions of old stamps on new issues has always been a popular theme for collectors everywhere.

The latest of these "stamps on stamps" sets comes from Gibraltar, which celebrates the centennial of its first postage stamp. The five stamps depict adhesives issued during the reign of all five British monarchs to rule over Gibraltar since the issuance of its first stamp.

Gibraltar, a tiny two-and-a-half square mile entity, was captured from neighboring Spain in 1704 by the British. Since that time, Gibraltar has been an important British military fortress guarding the entrance to the Mediterranean.

The 4-pence shows the 6-pence violet Queen Victoria definitive which was released during the reign of the famous monarch in 1886. The 22-pence illustrates the 2½-pence violet and black issued during the reign of Victoria's son, King Edward VII, in 1903. The 32-pence bears a reproduction of the 1-penny scarlet issued during the reign of King George V in 1912.

Gibraltar is a popular country for stamp collectors as approximately 500 different stamps have been issued during the past 100 years.

Scientists believe bright colors and bold stripes help fish to survive by warning predators that they taste bad.

The Strange Story Behind Marquez's 'Shipwrecked Sailor'

"The Story of a Shipwrecked Sailor," by Gabriel Garcia Marquez; translated by Randolph Hogan; Knopf; $13.95; 104 pp.

Reviewed by RICHARD EDER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

"The Story of a Shipwrecked Sailor," as the author left-handedly suggests in his preface, is not so much a book as a publishing event.

Seeing that the author is Gabriel Garcia Marquez, a man of brilliance and of masquerades, the message is not to be taken straight. To him, a publishing event seems to be a subject for opprobrium; yet who knows?

The story itself is a reissue of a series of newspaper articles he wrote 30 years ago for El Espectador of Bogota. It recounts the ordeal of a Colombian sailor who came ashore in a life raft after surviving 10 days without food or water.

As the newspaper later discovered, and as Garcia Marquez tells us in the preface, that was more than a matter of heroism. It was a matter of corruption. The naval vessel was overloaded with contraband, badly secured to the deck; that allowed a heavy swell to wash overboard not only the man who survived, but seven of his companions, who did not.

Garcia Marquez's original series, as reproduced here, does not mention the corruption but only the ordeal. It is plainly, even roughly told, with little apparent art of the magical realist to come. It is the realism that shows; the magic must have been brewing.

Why reissue it? "It seems worthy of publication, but I have never quite understood the usefulness of publishing it. I find it depressing that the publishers are not so much interested in the merit of the story as in the name of the author, which, much to my sorrow, is also that of a fashionable writer," Marquez said.

Take that! Tusquets Editores of Barcelona, which did the original reissuing in 1970. Take that! Alfred A. Knopf Inc., which is bringing it out now. Take that! fashionable writer that the young Garcia Marquez has become. Take that! celebrity-beguiled reader.

So what is he up to? Is the older Garcia Marquez, full of spells and byways, taking a crack at the young Garcia Marquez, full of journalism? Or is the old man of the Left doing mild penance for the elaborate distance he has come since the days when he set down in a newspaper the story of an ordinary man victimized by greed — his own, as we shall see, as well as others'?

Whichever, or neither; this plain tale harnessed to its decidedly baroque preface does not add a great deal to the author's work. It has some compelling things in it, however.

If the misadventure of Luis Alejandro Velasco is told unremarkably, for the most part, the ordeal itself was extraordinary. Washed off the deck of the destroyer Caldas — it was returning to Cartagena after two months' repairs in Mobile, Ala. — he managed to climb onto a raft. His companions were nearby; one swam as close as 6 or 7 feet. Yet a current bore them away, and he was unable to save them.

The raft was unprovisioned; all Velasco had was his watch, his keys and three business cards from appliance stores in Mobile. There is plenty of irony in that. The contraband that overloaded the ship — refrigerators, television sets, vacuum cleaners — came from those stores. Every member of the crew, Velasco included, had bought great quantities to resell at home.

So the cards were a mockery. On the other hand, they provided reading material for Velasco's endless blank days. And finally, he ate them. He also ate part of a fish that flopped aboard, fleeing the sharks that circled about. He ate a root that floated by; and he tried to eat a sea gull but found it too repulsive. He drank sea water in small quantities. Twice the raft capsized; fortunately, no sharks were near.

On the 10th day, Velasco spotted the Colombian coast, but the current kept the raft a mile and a half off shore. More remarkable, perhaps, than anything else, he was able to swim the distance and struggle up the beach. It was near a remote hamlet, where he was taken in and cared for. When he was moved to a larger town, all 600 villagers went with him. He was their miracle.

The authorities flew him to Bogota and a hero's welcome. It puzzled him and prompts the second most eloquent thing he says: "In my case, heroism consisted solely of not allowing myself to die of hunger and thirst for 10 days."

His most eloquent remark adds a note, I think, to the literature of survival. Velasco lay on the beach, and eventually a man approached, leading a mule. "When I heard him speak, I realized that, more than thirst, hunger and despair, what tormented me most was the need to tell someone what had happened to me."

Beside that, the author's magical-realist preface seems forced. For a while after his return, we are told, Velasco made a modest fortune doing commercials for his watch, which had kept time, and his shoes, which had proved too sturdy to be eaten. After the newspaper reported the contraband, the hero found himself displaced and went to work for a bus company.

STILL A MODERN WONDER — The Panama Canal, the 50-mile-long waterway connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans at the narrow Isthmus of Panama, completed in the early part of the 20th century at a cost then of $387 million, is still one of the modern wonders of the world. It takes several hours for a ship to tranist the canal.

Free Book

RALEIGH — The new, colorful and comprehensive North Carolina "Attractions Book" is now available free from the state's Division of Travel and Tourism.

The publication divides North Carolina into seven tourist areas and lists travel attractions, points of interest and recreational opportunities located in each section. The areas include the mountains' "High Country" and "Land of the Sky," the Piedmont's "Foothills," "Land of the New" and "Heartland," and the coast's "Birthplace of English America" and "Land of the Cape Fear." There's even a map of each area to help travelers find their favorite place to visit.

To assist disabled travelers, most of the attractions include special circle symbols at the end of the listing, indicating the accessibility of the site. The areas of parking, entrance, interior, exterior and restrooms are rated according to whether they are accessible, partially accessible, or if the rating does not apply. Special programs for the visually and hearing impaired and mentally apply. Symbols for attractions which currently list no ratings will be included in future editions.

The "Attractions Book" is an overview of the many things a traveler can see and do in our state's "Variety Vacationland." It is comprised of color photography of North Carolina and specific information on a wide array of travel attractions.

The book also includes the state map, an annual calendar of events and an accommodations directory. Other brochures on individual sites and publications like an outdoors directory and meeting and convention, fishing and golf guides may be obtained from the Division.

A Review
A Biography Of Bergman

AS TIME GOES BY. By Laurence Leamer. Harper & Row. 423 Pages. $18.95.

"As Time Goes By" is an unauthorized biography of Swedish-born film star Ingrid Bergman. The book borrows its title from a song in "Casablanca," one of the actress' most popular films.

Her film roles, her angelic beauty and her private life as the wife of a physician and mother of a young daughter helped create the Bergman image of a wholesome, vulnerable, family-oriented woman.

In this book, biographer Laurence Leamer explodes the Bergman myth. He peels away her pure and virtuous image and portrays the actress as politically naive and lacking parental devotion. Even worse, he paints Bergman's portrait in the colors of an unfaithful wife who had affairs with several of the co-stars and directors of her films.

Movie buffs and Bergman admirers will eagerly consume this book, although its pages may prove to be too detailed for the general reader (even a life as fascinating as Bergman's had some dull moments). There is a problem, too, in that several of the book's episodes have conflicting versions, and the reader is left to decide for himself which one to accept.

Some Bergman fans may become angry at what they read here and choose to reject it. Others will undoubtedly embrace it and feel betrayed. Still other readers may be made to think about other idols, and wonder what secrets some future biography will uncover about them.

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By LINDA M. STANCILL

The lives of some fascinating Americans are revealed in new biographies recently added to the library's collection.

In "The Great Getty: The Life and Loves of J. Paul Getty," Robert Lenzner reveals a hardbitten oilman, spectacular lover, absent parent, miserly art collector, philandering and bigamous husband; bohemian expatriate, social snob, physical coward, Hitler sympathizer, writer and master busnessman.

By 1957 Getty was the richwst man in the world and the richest man ever to pay only $500 or less a year in income taxes. Getty had made his first million by the time he was 24 and in the midst of the Depression he established himself as an internatinal oilman, one of the first to see the potential of Arab oil.

Getty collected oil shares, art and women and attempted to become a British aristocrat. He installed guards in his bedroom and a pay phone for his guests. He died in 1976 leaving behind a fortune in art and oil that soon became worth over $6 billion and a reputation as the savviest, most compelling and contradictory business genius ever.

In "Famous in America: The Passion to Succeed," Peter N. Carroll reveals the lives of Jone Fonda, George Wallace, Phyllis Schlafly, and John Glenn. From the age of Eisenhower to the age of Reagan, they have been in the public eye — a film star on the left, a populist politican, a polemicist on the right, an astronaut turned senator. They have been involved with the history of our times in the struggle for civil rights, the exploration of outer space, the Viet Nam war, protest in the sixties, corruption in the seventies, Watergate, the rise of feminist politics, and conservatism in the eighties.

Carroll presents private lives and public careers in this multiple biography, interweaving their stories from childhood to the present. He shows hidden resemblances between them as striking as their obvious differnces and reveals a common theme that unites them in a passion to succeed.

Author's Work Anthologized

LAURINBURG — Clyde Edgerton, author and education professor at St. Andrews Presbyterian College, has had his work anthologized in "A Collection of Classic Southern Humor II." The collection is described as "fiction and fact by some of the South's best storytellers."

The volume, published by Peachtree Publishers, Ltd., includes the work of 15 writers including Eudora Welty, Tennessee Williams, Tom Wolfe, Guy Owens and Truman Capote, among others.

Edgerton's piece in the anthology is an excerpt from his novel "Raney," a novel released by Ballentine in paperback. The novel has received high praise from reviewers nationwide. The novel has also been written up in Newsweek magazine and other national magazines.

He is a native of Bethesda, near Durham and received degrees in English education from UNC-Chapel Hill. He is a former U.S. Air Force pilot, and a musician.

A Little Studio Does Well In The High-Powered Movie World

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Looking at this year's Academy Awards a month after they were announced confirms that yes, little guys can make it in today's high-powered movie world.

Island Pictures, a two-year-old company with 25 employees, captured top acting honors for Geraldine Page in "The Trip to Bountiful" and William Hurt in "Kiss of the Spider Woman." The result has been a 25-30 percent box-office boost for the two movies and unaccustomed respect for the tiny Island.

"The whole thing has been very gratifying, very encouraging," says Cary Brokaw, president of Island, "not only in our self-interest, but in the realization that the industry can embrace special kinds of films, not just those with wide popular appeal."

Island plotted the selling of both movies around the Academy Awards. Released last July, "Spider Woman" had been pretty well played out and was scheduled for videocassette release in March.

"We prevailed on the distributor, Embassy Home Entertainment, to postpone the release until three weeks after the awards, and we were able to rise from 125 to 225 theaters and increase 25-30 percent in the gross. It is still strong in 125 theaters, many circuits removing it on principle when the videocassette is on the market."

Costing less than $3 million each in production costs, "Spider Woman" and "Bountiful" should help Island prosper.

So far "Spider Woman" has grossed $16.6 million. Some 115,000 videocassettes have been shipped, a large number for a special film.

"Bountiful" was released in New York and Los Angeles in December for Academy consideration and had expanded to only 125 theaters by the time of the March 24 awards. It widened to 175 theaters and has so far sold $5 million worth of tickets. The videocassette is due in late summer.

As for "Out of Africa," named best picture and winner of six other awards, not much has happened domestically.

"I think the picture responded more to the nominations rather than the awards," said Bill Soady, president of Universal Pictures distribution. "It was already in 1,000 theaters during the nomination period and into the awards. The situation wasn't the same as in the last few years when winners like 'Amadeus' and 'Chariots of Fire' went into wide release after the awards.

"But there is no question that the award has had a dramatic impact on the foreign releases of 'Out of Africa.' They were scheduled to coincide with the awards, and the returns have been phenomenal in Japan, Australia and Europe. I'm sure the Oscars had a tremendous influence."

"The Color Purple" may have bombed at the Oscars, but it has won the box-office race. The Steven Spielberg movie has amassed $88 million in domestic gross as opposed to $80 million for "Out of Africa."

Among the acting winners, Anjelica Huston appears to have prospered most. Best supporting actress for "Prizzi's Honor," she has just been cast for a starring role with James Caan in "Gardens of Stone," to be directed by Francis Coppola. She will play a Washington Post reporter in the story set during the Vietnam War.

William Hurt has never lacked for jobs since the beginning of his film career six years ago. He has one unreleased movie, "Children of a Lesser God."

Geraldine Page remains the busiest of actresses. She is currently filming "Native Son," based on the famed Richard Wright novel, then she goes to Europe for "The Beate Klarsfeld Story," an ABC TV movie about a heroic Dutch woman of World War II.

Only Don Ameche, the highly popular winner for his supporting role in "Cocoon," appears to have missed Oscar's golden touch.

"I've received a number of scripts, but nothing I'm crazy about," he said from his Santa Monica apartment. "Frankly I didn't expect any change; there's not really any pattern to an Oscar win. But that doesn't diminish the euphoria I experienced when I won it."

Outdoor Performances Attract Large Audiences

Country Springboard To Other Successes

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — This year hundreds of young performers will be in Opryland USA with dreams of making it to Broadway and Hollywood.

The 120-acre park, home of the Grand Ole Opry House, has 13 musical productions involving 380 college-age performers singing everything from country music to light opera.

Over the years the park has developed a reputation for grooming young talent.

Cynthia Rhodes, who performed at Opryland for four seasons in the 1970s, starred opposite John Travolta in the movie, "Stayin' Alive." She also appeared in "Flashdance," "Xanadu" and Francis Ford Coppola's "One From the Heart."

Actress-singer Denise Direnzo worked at Opryland in 1976 and 1977, then performed in both the national and international companies of "A Chorus Line." She also has been in the Broadway productions of "Cats," "Sophisticated Ladies" and "42nd Street."

Other former Opryland entertainers have appeared on television specials with such stars as Barbara Mandrell, Dolly Parton, Carol Burnett, Bob Hope, George Burns, Lucille Ball and Ann-Margret.

"We give these young performers a lifetime of experience in one season," said Bob Whittaker, director of entertainment at Opryland. "It's an opportunity for them to be exposed to all facets of the entertainment industry. To my knowledge, no other park in the world does as much as we do. Many do some of these things, but none does all.

"By going on that stage and performing for 2.5 to 3 million people (a year), and working alongside the top talent in the country, they learn and grow together," Whittaker said.

"Before the year is over, they have learned the tricks of the trade that are going to make them a much better professional," he said. "It's an incredible experience for these young people."

This year Opryland officials held auditions in 29 cities, searching for singers, dancers, dance captains, musicians, stage managers, technicians and conductor-pianists.

They are on call 38 hours a week at salaries ranging from $213 a week for technicians to $512 a week for conductors-pianists. Singers-dancers make $251 to $270 a week.

"We believe all our shows are as professional as you'll see anywhere," Whittaker said.

The most elaborate of the 13 shows is "Music, Music, Music," an 80-minute revue of music from Nashville, Hollywood and Broadway. It has 22 singers and dancers, 16 instrumentalists and an 11-person crew.

"It's the closest thing we have to a major Broadway production," Whittaker said.

Other shows focus on country music, rock 'n' roll, pop, music from the turn of the century and gospel. There are even bits of jazz and light opera in some productions.

Overseeing the performers are three directors, two choreographers, two choral directors and a musical arranger. Technicians fill out the professional entertainment staff of 25.

The Opryland park, which does have a looping roller coaster despite the emphasis on music productions, includes the Grand Ole Opry House — the 4,400-seat auditorium where the Grand Ole Opry is presented every weekend by top country music stars. The young performers do not perform at the fabled Opry.

The park, which just celebrated its 15th birthday, also is the site of many live and taped network television shows. Cable television's Nashville Network is located nearby.

"We've built this park around music and entertainers, not around roller coasters," Whittaker said.

"We give the entertainers the opportunity to grow and develop their craft and further their career. We feel we offer a real challenge to the young entertainer who has basic raw talent who may not have had the opportunity to polish or develop it.

"We help this person develop a professional discipline," he said. "There are very few opportunities elsewhere for the performer to have this experience. The discipline he or she achieves here is very important."

RESTORATION GRANT

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minneapolis Institute of Art says it has been awarded a $30,000 National Endowment for the Arts grant.

The grant is to be used for a restoration of six of the museum's nine historic period rooms. The yearlong project will restore the rooms to their original appearance.

The English and American period rooms date from the 16th to the 19th centuries.

RECREATES MARATHON

NEWARK (AP) — In May, the New Jersey Symphony and music director Hugo Wolff recreated Beethoven's five-hour marathon concert of Dec. 22, 1808.

On that night, Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 4," "Symphony No. 5" and "Choral Fantasy" had their premiere.

The New Jersey Symphony, however, presented the first two pieces in the afternoon and the "Choral Fantasy" in the evening at Symphony Hall.

Aprile Millo — A Likely New Verdian Spinto On The Horizon

By MARTIN BERNHEIMER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — They don't seem to make Verdian spintos anymore. At least they don't make 'em like they used to.

Rosa Ponselle was a spinto. So was Zinka Milanov. Renata Tebaldi and Leontyne Price followed. Then came the big, painful void.

The sopranos mentioned above were drastically dissimilar singers, but they shared certain basic virtues. Each commanded a healthy, warm, pliant sound — opulent in the middle, brilliant and radiant at the top.

It was a sound big enough to ride the great ensemble of the Nile Scene in "Aida," light enough to float the ethereal pianissimo tones of "D'amor sull' ali rosee" in "Il Trovatore," eloquent enough to break assembled hearts in the arching "Ave Maria" of "Otello," heavy enough to ignite the passions of "Pace, pace, mio Dio" in "La Forza del Destino."

The "lirico spinto" (literally a "pushed lyric") soprano didn't have to command the roof-rattling resources of a Turandot, the iron thrust of a Bruennhilde, the heroic fioratura of a Norma or the gentle purity of a Mimi. By definition, bona-fide spintos flourished in the generous, long-lined, middleweight challenges that fell somewhere between refined lyric simplicity and full-force dramatic indulgence.

Vocal categories are, of course, man-made. As such, they must be somewhat arbitrary. Ponselle happened to be able to extend her repertory successfully to include Norma. Milanov tried, but probably should not have. Tebaldi compromised her career during its final years by assuming such inappropriately demanding roles as La Gioconda and Minnie in "La Fanciulla del West." Price also ventured, briefly, into dangerous Puccinian waters.

Despite individual repertory detours and extensions, these divas enjoyed their greatest triumphs as gutsy Verdi heroines. They had the right vocal weight, the right color, the right range, the right technique and the right theatrical temperament.

In recent years, the same Verdi heroines have become the property — by unhappy default — of a number of ridiculously small-and thin-voiced, underqualified, would-be prima donnas. Most of these well-intentioned but misguided ladies have paid a price for their ambitions.

Some have damaged pretty voices that should have been limited to the graces of Donizetti, Rossini and Mozart. Others — at the Met one day, gone the next — have committed the equivalent of vocal suicide. A few exceptions, aided by sympathetic conductors, have survived by dint of canny intelligence. Even these, however, have ultimately tended to cheat poor Verdi, not to mention an impoverished audience.

Desperate opera companies have strained mezzo-sopranos with duties designed for bona-fide sopranos, forced Germanic talents into uncomfortable Italianate molds, housed bel-canto canaries in cages intended for more formidable birds, invited comprimarias to inhabit star dressing-rooms, allowed provincial standards to discredit international meccas....

Nostalgic old-timers, in the meantime, have clucked angrily, nodded sadly and made rude noises. One can hear a lot of pining these days for the snows of yesteryear.

Enter a lustrous-voiced, 27-year-old Cinderella born in New York and raised in Southern California: Aprile Millo.

She first attracted attention singing Norma's "Casta Diva," of all things, in a San Diego contest as early as 1977. An Aida followed in Utah in 1980. Later that year, Daniel Cariaga of the Los Angeles Times heard her in a concert and found her sounding "as rapturous and resplendent as the young Eileen Farrell." When Millo offered a preposterously arduous recital in 1982, another Times critic — this one — thought he detected "gold in that throat."

Europe beckoned, with a prestigious award in a major Italian competition, an Aida in the German provinces (Karlsruhe) and a late-season debut at a troubled La Scala, where she succeeded Mirella Freni — one of the better ersatz-spintos — as Elvira in "Ernani."

Millo kept coming home, however, to the presumed Big Time: to the Metropolitan Opera. She had become a nominal — unseen and unheard — member of the roster in 1981. Given her credentials, her progress wasn't precisely what one might have expected.

In December, 1984, she was still one of those young singers who tend to get lost in the repertory shuffle. The management had deemed her good enough to sing — with crude amplification — in one of its Central Park concerts and good enough to serve as an understudy. Millo obviously was deemed good enough to be offered bit parts, and she "caught hell," she recalls, when she wisely rejected them.

Still, according to the powers-that-were, Millo wasn't deemed good enough, or deemed ready, to be assigned major roles in her own right. Then, one memorable winter night, Anna Tomowa-Sintow (another imperfectly fabricated spinto) got sick and had to cancel a performance of "Simon Boccanegra." Without formal rehearsal and apparently without stage-fright, Millo sang Amelia and enjoyed a resounding triumph.

History repeated itself later when Millo took over for Montserrat Caballe in "Ernani." This season she earned wider approbation as well as a coveted national broadcast when she spelled the suddenly "indisposed" Mara Zampieri in a wondrous "Don Carlo."

Despite all this, the Met moves in strange and mysterious ways. It is still moving slowly on Millo's behalf.

The young soprano has reaped the sort of reviews that herald superstardom. She has developed something akin to a cult following among New York's operatic groupies. She held her own very nicely opposite the great Carlo Bergonzi in a Carnegie Hall performance of "I Lombardi," even though she was ill herself this time.

Last month, denying that April is the cruellest month, Angel Records released a somewhat uneven but in many ways spectacular Verdi recital by the debutante. Vienna, Verona and Hamburg have made grandiose offers.

And what does the Met plan for her now? Liu — a lovely role but not really a spinto challenge — next year in one late-season performance of Puccini's "Turandot," and a short run of second-cast Aidas.

An intriguing combination of little-girl neophyte and confident it's-a-jungle-out-there prima-donna, Millo claims she doesn't mind waiting.

"God has his plan," she declares.

"I have learned well. This is a good way to see what is good to do and what is not good to do. In any case, I think I was meant to be on the shelf for a while. Now is the time to soak it all up...."

"It is still good to be a cover," she declares, her husky speaking voice hardly hinting at the splendor that

Pitt County Student String Ensemble Praised For Performance

The Pitt County String Ensemble with students in grades four through eight from A.G. Cox, Chicod, Whitfield and Farmville Middle School attended the Eastern Regional Orchestra Festival in Fayetteville on April 23. The ensemble received superior ratings in the Grade II category for the second consecutive year.

The ensemble is directed by Ms. Dee Braxton and Mrs. Lynn Roberson. Mitzi Benfield, a junior at D.H. Conley High School, is the ensemble's accompanist.

The ensemble performed selections by Mozart, Meacham, Caponegro and Ward.

Edward Allison, one of the festival judges, said: "It is refreshing to hear a group that plays so well. You can sit back and enjoy their performace without constantly having to write criticisms.

The Pitt County String Ensemble will be in concert May 14 at Chicod School with the band and chorus; at A.G. Cox School with the band on May 19, and at A.G. Cox with the chorus on June 5. Performances at all three events are at 7:30 p.m. and are fee and open to the public.

AFRICAN ART OBJECTS

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — An exhibition of more than 100 African art objects is on view at the University of Michigan Museum of Art through July 27.

"The Rising of a New Moon: A Century of Tabwa Art" includes carved figures, masks, jewelry, musical instruments and utilitarian objects produced by the Tabwa, a group of some 200,000 people living near Lake Tanganyika in Zaire and Zambia.

The exhibition is scheduled to travel to the Royal Museum of Central Africa in Tervuren, Belgium, later in the year.

The Alamo mission in San Antonio, Texas, fell to the Mexican army March 6, 1836, after a 13-day siege.

Mark Gansor. Recital Today

Organist Mark Gansor will present his final Greenville recital at 8 p.m. today at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. On the Jarvis Church staff since 1982, Gansor will be leaving Greenville to begin work on a doctor of musical arts degree at Northwestern University. He hold degrees from East Carolina and Duquesne Universities.

Gansor also has been the recipient of prizes in local, state and national competitions.

Compositions to be performed by Gansor in today's program include ones by Bach, Franck, Vierne, Alain, and Jenkins.

The program is free and open to the public.

Solo Day Winners

Winners in the recently held High School Solo Day have been announced. In first through fourth place order, these are:

• Men's Division — DeWayne Brown, Farmville Central; Steve Tugwell, Farmville Central; Jeff Adkins, Ayden-Grifton and Darwin Barnes, Farmville Central, tied for third, and Billy Warren, North Pitt.

Ratings Announced

The ratings received by student orchestras in Pitt County Schools at the Regional Orchestra Contest held recently in Fayetteville have been annouced.

The J.H. Rose student orchestra received a rating of excellent.

N.C. Group To Make A Beach Music Movie

Greenville's Doug Mewborn is one of the North Carolinians engaged in the production of a major motion picture being made in North Carolina. The movie, "The Beach Goes On," Mewborn said, "is based on the ever popular genre of beach music."

The Producers Group, a North Carolina Corporation in which Mewborn is involved, is based in Nashville, Tenn. The film is being made in conjunction with EO Studios in Shelby.

Approximately 30 original songs have been licensed for the movie and for the subsequent soundtrack album.

Mewborn said the decision to make a Beach music movie is that "the proven track record of the professionals, the extensive market research indicating the continual growing popularity of beach music across the country, and the potentially broad profit profile were the top reasons for my investment in the project.

"I think just about everyone has a feeling of romance for the beach and the lifestyle surrounding it. This is an exciting North Carolina project, one that should make Carolinians proud of this music as an important part of our native culture."

Youth Orchestra To Perform At ECU

The Chapel Hill Youth Orchestra will be a guest performer this week on the East Carolina University campus.

The orchestra will be in concert at 2 p.m. in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. The performance is free and open to the public.

marks her singing. "One can't jump right in and do the whole thing. I don't want to fly around. It is good not to do too much. It makes one strong. I need stability. I want roots." One wonders if she protests too much.

"I am of another time, another age."

She hastens to add that she will sing the opening Aida of the season at the Met in 1989, surrounded by rather heady company: Placido Domingo, Agnes Baltsa and Sherrill Milnes.

She has learned to command the stage with economical gestures and she exudes compelling urgency and simple dignity — even a certain glamour.

"I have worked hard," she explains, with a self-deprecating grin. "I also have lost 20 pounds. The battle continues."

Some experts theorize that spinto sopranos develop with age, that an essentially lyric voice can become big, full and rich only with maturity. This may have been true for Kirsten Flagstad and Leontyne Price; it wasn't true for Ponselle and Milanov. Millo insists it isn't true for her.

"I was always 'old,'" she muses. "They called me a 40-year-old midget when I started. I tried singing little Mimi in San Diego and dropped dead in the role. Then I tried Aida. It just felt right."

Does that mean she is predestined to be a Verdian forever?

"Hardly," she purrs. "I really want to try the lighter Wagner parts — Elsa in 'Lohengrin' and Elisabeth in 'Tannhaeuser.' The French repertory interests me too. In fact, I've just signed to make a recording of 'La Juive.'"

Is she intimidated by the size and mystique of the Met?

"Never!," she shrugs. "For me, it is just an intimate hall. I feel good singing on that stage. It is perfect.

"But I am intimidated by the politics. I saw one famous soprano aced out of here without much ceremony or apology. If it could happen to her, it could happen to me."

How does she feel when she is compared to the great singers of the past?

"At first I am deeply moved, flattered, unbelieving. Then I sometimes wonder how I stack up on my own. Ponselle? Milanov? How about Millo?"

And how high does she vocalize?

"Up to an E-natural."

Millo has studied voice, she says, only with her mother. "She's the most remarkable woman I know, a former singer, an attorney, a nurse." Now the young soprano works with a New York coach, Rita Patane. "Rita's wonderful. I adore her. When I'm not working with her, I learn most from listening to old records."

A Festive Celebration By The Haliwa-Saponi Tribe

SPIRITED DANCING . . . was the order of the day during the spectacular Inter-Tribal Dancing ceremony. Men, women and children of several tribes in elaborate tribal regalia danced in a large circle. Many of the participants performed dances that involved intricate footwork combined with rapid spins and graceful turns.

THE GRAND ENTRANCE . . . at 11 a.m. Saturday marked the official beginning of the festivities for the 21st Annual Haliwa-Saponi Tribe Pow-Wow. The majestic entry ceremony, to the solemn beat of drums, was led by the tribal chief and reigning princess followed by a large number of others in colorful regalia.

As State Tribes Mark The Year of the Native American

Text And Photos By Jerry Raynor

All across North Carolina this year, Indians, or native Americans to use a more contemporary identification, are celebrating 1986 as The Year Of The Native American.

On Saturday, April 19, the Haliwa-Saponi Tribe held their 21st Annual Pow-Wow at the Haliwa Indian School at Old Bethlehem, a short distance from Hollister. At a location 25 miles north of Rocky Mount, it is the Indian tribe nearest to Greenville. Its members live primarily in an area of western Halifax and eastern Warren counties — from which the Haliwa part of the tribe's name is derived.

Following several days of unseasonably cool, cloudy and windy weather, the April 19 Saturday of the celebration dawned clear and warm — like a token of blessing for the event.

Visitors, Indian and non-Indian, were greeted with the lovely words "Mecouremechin kihoe" — "You are welcome to be here."

By Friday evening, Indians from several North Carolina tribes had gathered at the site — Tuscarora, Lumbee, Coharie, Cherokee, Waccamaw-Siouan — to be with the Haliwa-Saponi. A fireside ceremony was a highlight of Friday's gathering. Some spent the night camped out in modern tents. There was one magnificant ivory-colored tepee erected around a circle of tall saplings.

From the moment Saturday's ceremonies got under way at 11 a.m. with the Grand Entrance from the wooded grounds into the cleared dancing circle, to the slow throb of drums, one sensed two things: the beauty and pageantry of Indian rites and a pervading spirituality.

This duality of an inner-experience remained an underlying, unifying thread for all the day's events. It was there in the stillness as everyone joined in the pledge of allegiance to the American flag; in the Lord's Prayer by Mrs. Patricia Richardson given in the Indian language; in the rythmic grandeur of the Saponi blessing of the ground ceremony by Harlan Richardson, a young vision seeker now a junior in high school.

The spiritual aspect of the celebration was strengthened in the moving remarks by Richard Crowe, a handsome middle-aged Cherokee traditionalist, the day's guest speaker.

A modern touch in festivity took place in the crowning of the new tribal princess by the outgoing princess, with long-time Haliwa-Saponi Chief W.R. Richardson bestowing a kiss on each. A more ancient ceremony was the smoking of the peace pipe by chiefs of the tribes gathered there.

More than any other part of the festivities, it is the traditional singing and dancing that demonstrates the growing awareness, the renewal of pride in the ancient heritage of American Indians.

The music projects a deep-felt reflection of nature in the soaring voices of singers and the throb of instruments that mirrors the endless poetry of nature — the cries of animals, the call of birds, the age-old adoration of the heart in the worship of the Great Spirit (God).

The dances, both inter-tribal and competitive, are spectacular with dancers garbed in gorgeous, colorful regalia as they circle the open ground in intricate, expressive movements — muscular and spirited by male dancers, graceful and lyrical by female dancers. Dancers of all ages from tiny tots to white-haired elders are part of the tribal dance celebration.

It is now evident that the long struggle by North Carolina Indians is beginning to bear fruit. While many problems remain to be solved, there is cause for hope for a brighter future.

For those who have not witnessed a time of celebration by our native Indians, 1986 is a good year to do so. Chances are you will discover a deeper understanding of these people who are an integral part of our North Carolina history — people who are determined to maintain their identity and integrity at the same time they assume their role in the mainstream of today's history.

INDIAN ARTS AND CRAFTS . . . were sold and displayed in stands beneath the trees. Offerings ranged from ceramic busts and statues of Indians, above, to crafted silver and turquoise jewelry, textiles and pottery. Typical Indian food also was served at several of the booths.

Monk Uses Computer To Predict Future

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — In the heart of a Buddhist temple first built in 1830, the abbot, Sripariyatkul, predicts fates and fortunes with two desk-top computers.

For 13 years, Sripariyatkul linked lives to the stars by poring over traditional birth charts, calendars and astrology texts. Today, the forecasts spew forth on digital printouts with a few pecks of his middle finger.

Sripariyatkul says his computer horoscopes have drawn many believers, among them members of the royal family, senior government officials, military officers and businessmen. Chamlong Srimuang, the new Bangkok governor, consulted Sripariyatkul's computer on the eve of the election and received a forecast of victory.

"One of the monk's duties is to help those who are suffering, and the fact is that astrology can help ease tension and suffering," Sripariyatkul said.

The computer is more accurate than old-fashioned methods of astrology because "it has no emotions, and it is up to the data you put into it," said the heavyset 42-year-old monk.

Sripariyatkul says the computer has freed him from the tiring, laborious process of looking up texts — which can lead to mistakes — and also gives more precise times for future events.

Sripariyatkul became a monk at 13 and has lived at Sribunruang temple for the past 19 years. The temple was erected in 1830, on ground which warriors had used as a resting place during a war against the Laotians. The complex was rebuilt in 1965.

Monks have the highest social status in predominately Buddhist Thailand. The Thais, who have a deep sense of the supernatural, often seek them out for predictions and advice.

Sripariyatkul started computer fortune telling at the temple in 1982, using programs developed by Maj. Gen. Prayoon Pol-Aree, an adviser in the army and former astrology teacher. Prayoon, who regularly does horoscopes for senior military officers, said he'd first studied computers in 1964, while training at Fort Sill army base in Lawton, Oklahoma, in the central United States.

"The predictions have to do with statistics, not religion," Sripariyatkul says, "but if the chart says you will face a major tragedy, monks can hold a ceremony for you so you will be better prepared."

But prayers to the Buddha can only alleviate, and not erase, imminent misfortunes, he said.

The monk, dressed in saffron robes, does his charts sitting on thin red padding on the floor of his simple temple office. To his left is a Thai-language IBM-compatible 16-byte computer and to his right, an English-language Apple-compatible 8-byte unit, both with printers and monitors.

The computers sit next to piles of astrology books, an urn of ceremonial holy water, and figurines of Chinese wise men. One wall is lined with large yellow candles, and statues and plaques of the Buddha, goddesses, kings, and senior monks. A Chinese calligraphy painting wishes good luck.

Sripariyatkul slips in three diskettes, feeds in the birthplace and time, and the computer churns out a personality profile, a list of lucky and unlucky years, and predictions on family, work, love and health.

Sripariyatkul claims the predictions on health are "100 percent accurate" while those on money matters are only "60 to 70 percent accurate."

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—We had a terrible disaster in our rubber bridge game the other night. Our auction went:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

We play old-fashioned Goren: four-card majors, strong two-bids, etc. We ended up making five-odd, and the fur began to fly. Both North and South blamed the other. North felt that South, who had 16 points, should have jumped to four hearts. South felt that the auction was forcing and that North was not allowed to pass, even though he had a dead minimum opening. Who do you blame?—G.L., Minneapolis, Minn.

A.—North certainly didn't bid as if he held a dead minimum; his raise to three clubs showed a sound opening bid. Therein lies the root of the problem.

Once South made a two-over-one and then bid again over North's raise, it was incumbent on North to keep the bidding open until game was reached. North should make allowance for the fact that the double fit increases the value of his hand. Indeed, on this auction he can probably make game if his opening bid consisted of no more than ace-king five of hearts and the king of clubs.

North either made a poor choice of opening bids or else misbid at his second turn if he was so weak that he feared to continue over three hearts. Without being given the actual hands, it is impossible to tell exactly where the fault lies. It is possible that he had some other bid available after two clubs.

We can understand South's decision not to jump to four hearts even though he had 16 points. He did not want to crowd the auction. He was trying to investigate slam possibilities below the game-level. There is nothing worse than being left wafting in the wind in the wind at the five-level and going down one.

Q.—We are trying to learn five-card majors as set out in "Goren's New Bridge Complete." What is the minimum strength in the suit required to respond in a four-card major suit to partner's opening bid of one in a minor?—E.P., Portland, Maine.

A.—Four to the five spot! Any four-card suit is biddable by the responder. Indeed, unless responder has a five-card suit, if he bypasses a suit and bids another at the one-level, he explicitly denies four cards in that suit.

If, however, responder has the values for a two-over-one response and holds a five-card minor and a four-card major, he should first bid his longer suit.

Electronic Chairs, Cabinetry Make Hit On Furniture Mart

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Americans have eaten power lunches and worn power ties; now it's time for the power chair.

At the recent furniture market in North Carolina, chair makers plugged into the electronics age with all the enthusiasm of new converts. Besides motorized recliner chairs and modular seating, cabinetry fitted for home electronics components or storage was also viewed by retailers coming to buy new merchandise.

While furniture that moves is far from new (after all, sleep sofas and recliners have been popular for decades), a new variation is what the industry is calling motorized motion chairs. In place of the traditional side-mounted person-powered handle there is a small electronic button.

The advantages of the motorized chairs are said to include ease of operation and novelty. They cost about $200 more than a similar chair without the feature, on average. After an initial successful introduction of electric recliners in October by one manufacturer, virtually all the others were showing such chairs at this market.

This also appears to be the year recliners have become respectable. Although motion chair sales have grown faster than the industry as a whole, in the past their low-brow image as the favored seat of the beer and pretzel crowd kept some of the more status-conscious manufacturers from offering them. This year a number of these holdouts did include recliners in product lines.

Although originally the industry expected its major market for motion chairs to be the elderly and infirm, early sales figures indicate more gadget-oriented consumers in the 30-45 age group are so far proving to be the more likely purchasers, says Patrick Norton, vice president of La-Z-Boy Chair Co.

A market does already exist in hospitals and health care centers for the chairs, many of which offer an expensive additional feature, lifting an occupant up out of the seat, raising the price to $1,000 or more.

Most manufacturers added the electric feature to their best-selling styles, which they continue to produce in the old way, as well. The electric feature generally adds $200 to the price, which covers the costs associated with purchasing and installing the electric motors, according to Jack Hafkey, vice president of Barcalounger.

A wide range of chair types include some which fully recline and others which are known as "incliners" and have fewer postions but take up less room. A number of companies are offering two-year warranties on the motor, in addition to longer warranties on the reclining mechanisms.

Retailers are the ones who built the demand for the new electrified models, being offered rather unenthusiastically by most of the manufacturers who commented. They are concerned about servicing problems in an industry where "upholsterers are not equipped to repair electric motors."

Also of interest to those consumers who own or contemplate buying a recliner, whether electrified or not, is an upcoming change in standards to correct a numerically infrequent but potentially catastrophic situation in which some children have gotten their heads caught while playing unattended with a recliner.

In the past five years, the Consumer Product Safety Commission found evidence of three deaths and two serious brain injuries to children who were trapped when their heads entered the opening between the chair seat and leg-rest as their own body weight forced the leg-rest down.

Besides urging parents to train children not to use recliners as toys and working with the CPSC, recliner makers are developing industry standards that would further reduce the likelihood of head entrapment.

When you think of a hand saw, your mind automatically envisions a fairly sizeable crosscut saw, the kind found in most home workshops. But a crosscut saw, like its partner, the ripsaw, is primarily for making straight cuts. And sometimes you don't want to saw straight.

A keyhole saw lets you cut along irregular and curving lines, while a coping saw, as its name implies, can cope with any curve you can throw at it.

Besides its ability to cut neatly along irregular lines, a keyhole saw can start cuts in the middle of a piece of wood, gypsum wallboard and other similar materials. It is especially useful when you have to make pocket cuts in paneling or anything else that already has been nailed or glued into place. When cutting curves with this saw, you should cut perpendicular to the surface. To cut shapes out of the middle of wood, drill a small hole to give the keyhole saw a starting place. Not only is it excellent for the quick, small cutting job, it will work in places where a larger saw will not fit.

The compass saw is very much like the keyhole saw. It also will make small cuts when only one side of the material is accessible, but the keyhole saw is a bit thinner and finer. It's a good idea to buy a special handle that comes with several different, special-use blades. In some of these handle sets, blades for cutting metal are also available.

A coping saw cuts intricate circles, irregular shapes, sharp angles and curves in thin wood, plywood, hardboard, etc. Its replaceable blades are thread-like wire. Using a spiral blade permits you to cut in any direction without having to turn the handle, a definite plus in close work. When an interior cut is needed, a hole is drilled, the blade threaded through the hole and then attached to the frame. Of course, this limits the use of the coping saw to a cut fairly near the edge of a panel. The keyhole and compass saws, not being in a frame, have no such limitation.

When you have to shorten a screw or bolt, cut through a nail or make a piece of pipe or hardware fit, a hacksaw is sometimes the only answer. Stanley Tools reminds do-it-yourselfers that when you are working with a fine wood and it must be held firmly by a metal vise, you should slip in scraps of plywood so that they act as "cushions." A miniature hacksaw does anything a regular hacksaw does, but reaches areas conventional hacksaws cannot.

There are deep-throat coping saws and what are called scroll saws and fret saws. These have fairly large frame depths for special work and usually have their blades mounted with the teeth slanting toward the handle. This enables them to be cut on the pull stroke rather than the push stroke. That's something to keep in mind in using all special-work saws. When the teeth of the blades slant toward the handle, the saw is meant to be pulled. When the teeth are slanted away from the handle, the saw is meant to be pushed. Usually, when a saw cuts on the pull stroke, it aids in extra fine work, such as cutting scrolls.

Many other special kinds of saws are available for particular kinds of work. Among them are the back saw and its partners, the mitre box saw and the dovetail saw. All have heavy blades with stiffened backs and are used for fine cabinet work. The names of the mitre box saw and the dovetail saw tell clearly what their principal uses are.

Other specialty saws include those used for pruning trees and shrubbery, cutting firewood and cutting floors and walls.

Q. — Every once in a while, I have to retighten screws that over a period of time have come loose. Is there some special way to do this or is it just a case of filling the hole with some kind of wood filler and then reinserting the screw?

A. — The method you mention is fine in most cases. There are, however, other ways of tightening loose screws. One is merely to insert a longer or thicker screw into the same hole. When this is not practical, which it might not be because of the limited thickness of the wood, you can fill the hole with a small piece of dowel, putting glue on it before inserting it. You can fill the opening with sawdust mixed with glue. Or you can fill it with pieces of toothpicks coated with glue. Sometimes, if you are in a hurry and find that a screw has become loose in a hole, you can tighten it by winding a few strands of steel wool around it and redriving the screw.

Q. — I want to gild some picture frames a silver color instead of the usual gold. Is there some special technique to this?

A. — Not especially, although there are some things you should know. Your best bet is to go to a store that sells artist materials or articles for craftwork. They carry both the silver metallic finish you need and an instruction booklet on the technique of using it. A well-stocked paint or hardware store also carries different kinds of gilding materials.

Q. — We want to use ceramic tiles on the floor of our patio. I know the difference in appearance between glazed tiles and unglazed tiles, but I'm somewhat hazy as to when which kind should be used where. Can you help?

A. — Generally, glazed tiles are used indoors, but are excellent if the patio is protected from the weather. Unglazed tiles usually are best for areas exposed to the weather, but in certain areas you should get the non-slip type. In the outdoor tile category are patio tiles, which generally are irregular, and quarry tiles, which generally are regular. The word "generally" is used often, since there is some crossover in the kinds of available tiles, depending on the manufacturer.

Q. — I plan to make two bureaus and two upright cabinets, both of maple. I would like to make the drawer pulls of wood rather than use metal ones. Is this practical or should I buy the pulls already made?

A. — No way to answer that without knowing the degree of your skill. But before making them, why not shop around and see what you can buy? Lumber yards, home centers and many other establishments that cater to do-it-yourselfers carry a wide line of parts for cabinets and doors. Also, pieces of molding make excellent drawer pulls when used horizontally or pulls for cabinets when used vertically.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q. Besides water lilies, what are some plants to use in a garden pool?

A. Besides species of tropical and hardy water lilies, you may consider using these plants in and around your garden pool: oriental iris, forget-me-not, lotus, water lettuce, arrowhead, water hyacinth, cattail, water cress, cardinal flower, marsh marigold, papyrus, umbrella flatsedge (Cyperus alternifolius), pickerel weed and water chestnut.

Q. How late may eggplants be set out?

A. Eggplants may be set out through May 31 in most of North Carolina.

Q. The leaves of my clematis are turning yellow. The leaves turned yellow last year and I thought the plant would die. I mulch the plant with pine needles, and in the fall I put lime on the soil. The plant looks as if it is undernourished. What might the problem be?

A. Have the soil tested. A clematis grows best when the soil pH is about 6.0, and liming every year could have raised the pH considerably above this. Some nutrients are unavailable to plants when the pH is too high or too low.

Q. How short should fescue be cut?

A. Fescue should be kept about two to three inches high.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime finds it advisable to use a considerable amount of care from early morning not to upset present conditions, but to operate within the status quo.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get old interests completed instead of getting into new ones at present. Tonight you can relax.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Know what your true aims are in life and don't do anything that can jeopardize your present security.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't permit an irate partner to spoil your day's activities, but you can see this person tonight after a cooling-off period.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Don't let any changes that are coming up in connection with your career upset you. They lead to greater success.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You have some business to attend to, even if it is Sunday, so stick to it instead of running off for pleasure.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Exit early and avoid the tense situation at home and meet with associates to gain greater rapport for the future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have important work to handle, so don't run off on some silly tangent with a friend who wants you to do just that.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan how to make the most of your finest abilities and forget dull chores for a while. Try not to spend too much money today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Endeavor to please your family more today, so relegate personal wishes to the background for now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get into the world of activity and accomplish a good deal of a personal nature and forget that secret worry you have.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan how to gain more prosperity in the future and don't be so gregarious today. You need financial advice.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Forget all those changes you want to make in business and pursue personal desires today. Retire early tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will want to keep making changes every minute because of a sense of boredom. Teach early to be more consistent, and then the life can become successful either in business, the arts or technological fields.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MAY 5, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An unusually good day to get involved in all sorts of new interests and activities and to use both your good judgment and innate charm to cement bonds of a constructive nature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Go after the personal longing that means a great deal to you during the daytime and get good results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A new, intimate matter may crop up that can make your future brighter, so look at it from this light.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can gain the personal aims that you truly desire to attain by being more progressive. Dress conservatively today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Use more modern methods in your present activities and get far better results with them.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) An early start in interesting new activities can bring about a better set of conditions for you. Delve into simple pleasures.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You suddenly realize how you can handle practical affairs better and get fine results with them, but do not argue at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Contacting those whose ideas are different from your own can help you to better understand their modern views.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study your work load for the new week and figure out how best to handle it so that you can be more efficient.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to get into activities you most enjoy and perfect them for maximum enjoyment. Seek out good friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Let your home be the center of your attention today and tackle everything from a different angle and gain the approval of kin.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study into the various philosophies of life that have worked for others and choose the best of these for you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) During spare time, study just where you stand financially and where property is concerned. Study your newspaper.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be on the alert for anything new that arises, and should have as fine an academic education as possible since the mind is quick and the ability to learn is great. Teach to complete what has been started otherwise your progeny could become a jack of all trades and a master of none.

Henderson County Officers Track Their Man On Foot

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — When a child wanders off or a suspected criminal escapes on foot, law enforcement agencies routinely call out volunteers or law officers to beat the bushes in a search.

But a crowd stomping around the scene can destroy evidence — footprints, disturbed undergrowth and dirt scrapings — that might lead a trained man-tracking team to the missing person.

Man trackers — people who can follow a trail by spotting overturned leaves, broken twigs and loose stones — did not disappear with the Old West, at least not in Henderson County.

"We got into man tracking four or five years ago," said Randy Stepp, a detective with the Henderson County Sheriff's Department.

"We had an armed robbery where one person was killed and a store operator was shot. The fleeing felons went toward Polk County, near the state line, and we started an intensive search," he said.

"We did everything wrong, but all with good intentions."

There were three suspects who fled from the scene, but officers knew only one had done the shooting.

"We had him right there, but we didn't catch him," Stepp said.

In the midst of the massive search, which involved dozens of law enforcement officials, one of the suspects actually appeared out of the woods to ask a resident where he was, Stepp said.

Sgt. Larry Harris said another of the suspects, covered with dirt and looking like he had spent the night in the woods, hitched a ride into a South Carolina town with a county deputy sheriff.

Searchers combed the woods for days, looking for the robbers. But none of the suspects were caught during the manhunt, and the accused murderer wasn't captured until six months later, after an intensive investigation located him in New York state.

"We knew then that we had to get a better system," Stepp said.

So the department decided to put its faith in an ancient form of man tracking, taught by Albert "Ab" Taylor, a veteran tracker with the United States Border Patrol.

"The border parol has used this system for years," said Stepp, who is in charge of the Henderson County tracking team. "Law enforcement used it, but as a tool for evidence, and that was about all."

In Taylor's class, and through personal tracking, officers learned to follow a trail by "reading" twigs imbedded in the ground, bruises on vegetation, blades of grass bent or broken, scuff marks and other telltale signs. They have followed trails for hours, sometimes covering miles through mountainous terrain to catch their man, Stepp said.

Now the department uses its searching skills not only for lost people or escapees, but also in day-to-day investigations involving anything from breaking and entering cases to common vandalism.

"We've found it very important at crime scenes," Stepp said. "And now, footprints gathered at a scene are just one more tool we use to solve a crime."

When a state trooper was shot in Madison County, dozens of law officers gathered at a search site. In a matter of minutes, 18 different people had approached the suspects' abandoned car, tramping on evidence and disturbing valuable footprints.

Bloodhounds were brought to the scene and went running off into the woods. Unfortunately, Stepp said, they were unable to track the criminals.

"Search dogs are only good for 2½ to 4½ hours after the incident," Harris said. "You can't just walk a dog into a place like that an say 'sic'em boy'. He won't know where to start."

"We spent over seven hours just trying to figure out what we were looking for," Stepp said. "The more people we can educate not to screw up the evidence at the scene, the better it is."

That theory goes for rescue searches as well manhunts.

Harris said finding children can be difficult because missing children will often hide from searchers.

"They're afraid they'll get punished for getting lost, so they run when they hear their name called, or they crawl back into the thickest undergrowth to keep from being seen," he said.

At the man-tracking class, the sheriff's department learned of "Project Hug-A-Tree," where children are taught to make themselves "look big" if they ever get lost.

"They're taught to get out in the open, to wave at airplanes, and to holler back when they hear their name called," Stepp said. "They're taught not to run, just to hold on to a tree until help arrives."

Deputies now go to local schools, spreading the word to children about how to get found.

The local man-tracking squad has taught other law enforcement agencies the tricks to the tracking trade. Rescue squads and fire departments have also been taught, so they can help in an emergency.

"And the thing to remember is that a search should always be treated as an emergency," Stepp said. "Sometimes, you can do more with a few people than you can do with an entire militia."

Historians Star In Texas Celebration

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Joe B. Frantz, T.R. Fehrenbach and Archie McDonald are leading Texas historians who have been in high demand on the guest speaker circuit this Sesquicentennial year.

Historians can usually count on a few invitations to speak here and there, "but nothing like this," Fehrenbach said.

"We re like Catholic theologians during a Vatican council," said Fehrenbach. "As soon as the Sesquicentennial is over, we probably won't be consulted for another 50 years."

Said Frantz: "I feel like a rock star," because of the personal appearance demands, which he figures have at least trebled during Texas' 150th anniversary of independence from Mexico.

Fehrenbach was consulting historian of public television's eight-part series "Lone Star," which was based on his book of the same name. In addition, Fehrenbach, of San Antonio, has been popping up all over the state in person and all over the world in printed interviews.

Speakes Says White House Job Is 'Dream Come True'

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Larry Speakes, whose rich Southern drawl has delivered the words of three presidents, says his love affair with politics began when his Mississippi high school senior class stepped off the train in the nation's capital.

"I remember sitting in the U.S. Senate, looking over at the press gallery and saying, that's what I want to do — come up here and cover politics, the Congress and that sort of thing," said Speakes, now the chief spokesman for President Reagan.

"There were 17 in our class. We had sold hot dogs at football games and washed a lot of cars to scrounge up enough money to make the trip to Washington," recalled Speakes.

Since that encounter with Washington, Speakes has aimed his life in that direction, first pursuing a journalism career following graduation from the University of Mississippi.

He later served as press secretary to the late Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., once one of the most powerful men in Congress.

He later worked in the Washington office of a national public relations firm, and as assistant press secretary to former Presidents Nixon and Ford.

"You could say I've had my cake and been able to eat it, too," Speakes said. "Almost everything I have wished for has come true."

Speakes' association with the Reagan administration began in 1981 as an assistant to White House Press Secretary Jim Brady.

"I recall sitting down with some friends in 1977 just after leaving the White House and telling them I had not had enough, that I would like to go back and be press secretary to the president," he said. "Little did I know that a twist of fate down the road would put me right back here."

He found himself the chief spokesman for Reagan in 1981 after Brady was critically wounded and left partially paralyzed in an assassination attempt on Reagan.

Speakes concedes there are pressures in his daily encounters with the news media to relate Reagan's views on such critical issues as Libya and the shuttle disaster is not without its pressures.

"You have to know what you are doing because there are times when what you say may endanger American lives — things like the TWA hostage crisis, when our briefings would be read in Lebanon, where people had guns pointed at American citizens."

"But dealing with pressure comes with the territory," Speakes said. "In this job, it's best to take a low key, straight forward approach to the issues. When the press is excited and people are screaming all around you, cool and calm is the order of the day."

"The cardinal sin in this business is to tell a lie because you can never be forgiven for doing that," he said. "Sometimes you get into sticky situations where no comment is the same as saying it is true so you really have to be careful."

Reagan believes Speakes has demonstrated his ability to handle the job.

"The words spoken by the press secretary to the president are truly words heard around the world," said Reagan. "Larry Speakes assumes a tremendous responsibility every time he speaks for the United States."

Reagan said he had found during his association with the Mississippian that Speaks "performs his job admirably."

Speakes said he had found Reagan an easy president to work for because he "is so solid in his philosophy. But it's important to stay abreast of what is happening, so I'm with the president about half of the time."

He said that despite his years away from Mississippi, he maintains a close contact with his family and friends in the state and still considers Merigold his home.

"The further you get away and the longer you are away, the more you want to reach back and touch Mississippi," he said. "Mother and dad still live in Merigold and my son, Scott, ia s senior at Ole Miss."

Speakes' office is a virtual museum of Mississippi memorabilia — pictures ranging from Delta cotton to an historic lighthouse on the Gulf Coast, a model shrimp boat crafted by an old fishermen in Biloxi to a quilt sewn by a group of women from his hometown.

"I guess you could say I took a little of Mississippi with me," Speakes said.

Speakes admitted that finding a new job after working for the president could be difficult.

"I'll have to find something that offers excitment and challenge because anything short of that would be a comedown," he said. I believe I would like to be a newspaper editor for a good-sized newspaper."

Mocksville School Trains Third World Missionaries

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — George Dougherty wants his students to be flying on more than a wing and a prayer when they take the Gospel to remote settlements in Africa, Latin America and the Pacific.

The head instructor at the Missionary Aviation Institute wants his charges to be able to put their planes down with authority on tiny dirt- or weed-covered runways, to take off at dizzyingly steep angles to avoid mountains and tall trees, to navigate by homing in on the rare shortwave radio station in the bush, to refuel from 55-gallon drums they've hauled into the boondocks and to make all necessary repairs to airplane and engine.

He also wants his graduates to be able to plow diplomatically through the red tape that is the Third World's primary product.

And they should watch out for the mud-dauber wasp.

"In the jungle, you've got to keep an eye out for the mud-daubers," said Dougherty, a short, wiry man with balding silver hair and steely blue eyes. "They'll stuff a spider in your air speed tube or in your fuel tank vent. That'll create a vacuum in your fuel tank and the engine will be starved for fuel and quit. A friend of mine was killed that way."

To be this prepared, it helps to take the rigorous five-year course for missionary pilots at Missionary Aviation Institute, affiliated with Piedmont Bible College in Winston-Salem.

"You'd better start with faith, otherwise you've got no reason to go," said Dougherty, 43. "Next, you'd better have a sense of call. ... If you don't have the wherewithal to stick to it, you're not going to make it."

Joanne Fernandez, 26, said she's determined to make it. She was a secretary for a Baltimore law firm when she saw a television program about flying missionaries and decided to become one of two women ever to attend the school.

"The Lord just struck my heart and called me into missionary aviation," said Ms. Fernandez, who hopes to work in Africa or the Pacific Northwest. "As far as the danger goes, I don't know what the future holds. There's danger in crossing the street."

Students at the school, founded in 1974, spend a year studying the Bible and theology, 15 months studying and practicing for their mechanics license, then another year on the Bible and eight weeks in the field before they learn to fly.

They log 255 hours of flight time before they get a commercial pilot's license, and they're encouraged to get an instrument rating and an amateur radio license.

The flight and mechanics courses cost about $19,000 plus the cost of tools, room and board and $1,200 tuition per semester

Then they go to the field, couples and entire families, "using the aircraft as a tool for evangelism ... and the establishment of national churches," said institute director Bob Green.

The school has about 25 students now and will graduate five this year. It has alumni around the world, including Paraguay, Brazil, Liberia, Alaska and Australia. The school keeps in touch with graduates by mail and radio and will support them with hard-to-find airplane parts if necessary, said Green.

The school is the only one of its kind in North Carolina. There are several in the country, but most of the others train pilots to help other missionaries, he said.

"Our philosophy is different," said Green, who spent 12 years as a missionary in Central America. "We train pilots who are also missionaries, whose primary goal is preaching and teaching."

Schools like MAI are necessary because of the high attrition rate of missionaries from retirement, health problems and death, said Green.

The school has 10 planes — six for flight training and the rest for mechanical training. It has a paved 2,500-foot-long, 25-foot wide runway at the Sugar Valley Airport and the use of several dirt and grass strips in the surrounding woods and mountains.

To prepare for landing on moist jungle runways covered with tall weeds that can snare landing gear, students practice a "soft field technique" that involves floating on a cushion of air inches above the ground as the plane gains speed for takeoff.

"I haven't had any close calls," said Dougherty. "But two times I've had to take the controls from a student.

"It's like raising kids — you hve to let them fail, but without letting them hurt themselves or get so scared they won't want to fly anymore," he said. "There are times when we're coming in and I know it's not going to be a good landing. So as we go 'splat' I just tell them what they did wrong and that they can do better next time. The aircraft will survive it."

In the field, students may also have to contend with landing on dry river beds that throw up rocks to dent the aircraft, government officials who insist on being flown everywhere, maintenance license tests in foreign technical languages and initial hostility among locals who may not like missionaries.

"But if you know the Lord, if you are at peace with the Lord, you're going to be different," said Dougherty. "If some people put you in the same mold as the ugly American, sooner or later as you live among them and your children play with their children, they'll pay attention."

Gulf Coast Participating In Project To Save Eagle

By MICHELLE PERRON
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Nestled on a desolate island off the Mississippi Gulf Coast, four baby bald eagles are unknowingly participating in an experiment which could re-establish America's emblem in the South. Known for centuries as the "king of birds," the bald eagle was heralded as a symbol of strength and courage by the Greeks, Romans and other ruling dynasties of Europe.

In 1782, Congress adopted it as the United States' emblem, but for more than two decades, the eagle has been an endangered species in America. The predatory birds often are spotted in Alaska and the Great Lakes area, but only two small flocks live in the South, in southern Louisiana and Florida.

But now a project involving the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Ocean Springs, a private research center in Oklahoma and the state of Florida is working to re-establish an eagle population in southern states by conditioning young eagles to return to the region to breed.

"We're very, very optimistic about the project," said biologist Carl Zimmerman, who has done much of the field work for the experiment. "It will be a while before we see any real results — probably four or five years — but the signs are already good."

Zimmerman and parks research biologist Ted Simons joined the project this year, but Florida wildlife researchers and the George Miksch Sutton Avian Research Center in Oklahoma have been working on it since 1984.

This year's cooperative experiment has gone something like this: Researchers in Florida monitored bald eagle nests and removed eggs quickly after they were laid, so as not to interfere with the breeding process. If eggs are removed soon enough, the female eagle will lay a second clutch. The eggs were then transported to the research center in Oklahoma, where they were hand-reared by staff members wearing eagle-like puppets on their hands.

The objective is to raise the eagles so they do not associate food with humans and learn to capture prey on their own, Zimmerman said. After eight weeks of hand-rearing, the eagles were brought to the laboratory in Mississippi, where Zimmerman and Simons put the birds in a hacking cage.

The hacking cage, similar to a common bird cage except for a one-way mirror and observing box welded to one side, was positioned in a tree on a remote island, where the birds can grow without danger of human interference.

Volunteers seated behind the mirror observed the eagles and fed them by dropping fish or rabbit pieces through a small pipe on top of the cage. When the birds were about 11 weeks old, the cage bars were removed to allow the eagles to learn to fly.

"They weren't ready at first," Zimmerman said. "But after two or three days all four of them began flying."

Although the eagles have been roosting on other parts of the island during the past six weeks, they have continually returned to the cage to feed, a sign that they may remember the area as a good breeding place when they grow older, Zimmerman said.

But because the eagles must learn how to capture food on their own, researchers have been hoping for a sign of autonomy from the birds. That day came last week, when Zimmerman found a partially-eaten fish on the shoreline near the cage.

"This is a major highlight," he said. "We've been waiting for the birds to learn how to feed themselves and now they're on their way."

The eagles will soon leave the coast for other areas of the country, Zimmerman said, but when the birds reach sexual maturity in five or six years, they will hopefully return to the South to breed, eventually rebuilding an eagle population.

CLERK ED - A Clerk of Superior Court is not a judge or a lawyer and is not permitted to practice law in the State of North Carolina. Then what is a Clerk of Superior Court? An administrator of the court, who should have a professional background in business administration.

ED'S STAFF - Appointment of assistant and deputy clerks will be based on merit and attitude. Ed desires to increase their status by encouragement and making them active in the management of our courthouse. No appointment will be terminated based solely on Ed's judgement. it is Ed's desire that his staff feel secure in his employment.

CITIZEN COMPLAINTS - Upon taking office, Ed will set-up a complaint log in order to track action taken on citizen complaints. Ed wants your complaints resolved.

CITIZEN ED - Ed Rose is a strong supporter of our Constitution and the Rights of Individuals. Ed is an unmaterialistic kind of guy, who intends to give a substantial portion of his paycheck, as your next clerk of court, to local charities. "Fellow-citizens of Pitt County, I ask of you to pull together and make Pitt County a model for all of North Carolina to look upon. Be proud of our courthouse, take an interest. Bring your concerns to me and let us search for solutions together."-Ed Rose

ED THE PARENT - Ed Rose is a strong supporter of Parential Rights and cares about your Family. "I believe the family unit is the basic foundation of cur society and churches."-Ed Rose

RESERVIST ED - Ed Rose is a veteran of The United States and continues to serve in the U.S. Naval Reserve. Ed has received security clearances in the past from both the FBI and Naval Investigative Service. Ed serves with pride for our country and in memory of his fallen buddies.

LAW & ORDER ED - Ed Rose will insure that every citizen has fair and impartial access to the state court system. Elect Ed and you will have a friend in the courthouse that cares.

CANDIDATE ED - Ed Rose is an impartial candidate running to represent the general public in our courthouse and has no political debts to repay.

Ed Rose is a NC Real Estate Broker and Notary Public. A member of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers, facilities planning division and management division. Ed is a founder and major stock holder of AHOME Corporation, a corporate real estate broker. Received his bachelor's degree in business administration from East Carolina University. Ed is about to complete a second degree in industrial engineering technology and social sciences. Ed has professional level work experience in the real estate, insurance, and retail industries. Fate Of GOP Frosh Could Decide Senate Control

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Call them Reagan's freshmen. Sixteen Republicans carried from obscurity to the U.S. Senate on Ronald Reagan's 1980 landslide and now facing re-election without presidential coattails to help them survive.

Their election six years ago swept the Republicans into control of the Senate for the first time in a generation. Their ability to survive this year is the key to GOP efforts to avoid slipping back into a minority.

The most vulnerable were easy to spot. They had run in traditionally Democratic states and were victors by the narrowest of margins.

Alfonse D'Amato of New York slipped into office with 45 percent of the vote in a three-way race. Jeremiah Denton won in Alabama and John East in North Carolina, each receiving a bare 50 percent of the vote; Paula Hawkins captured a Florida Senate seat with 51 percent, the same margin that gave Mack Mattingly his upset victory in Georgia. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania and Steve Symms of Idaho were other members of the GOP's 50 percent club.

They are tempting targets in a year when the Republicans have to defend 22 Senate seats compared to only 12 at risk for the Democrats. If the Democrats pick up four seats, they will be back in control in January 1987.

But six years can be a lifetime in politics and many candidates who looked shaky when they entered the Senate in January 1981 are in a far better position today.

Foremost among those is D'Amato. His tenacious fund-raising and constituent services shifted him from one of the most vulnerable to one of the most secure GOP freshmen. So far, New York Democrats have failed to convince some of their most familiar names — Geraldine Ferraro, Elizabeth Holtzman, Harry Belafonte — to challenge the senator.

Considered among the most secure Republican freshmen, along with D'Amato, are Sens. Dan Quayle of Indiana, Warren Rudman of New Hampshire, Charles Grassley of Iowa and Frank Murkowski of Alaska.

East, plagued by poor health, decided against seeking a second term, but even there, the Democrats failed to convince their strongest potential candidate, former Gov. Jim Hunt, to enter the race.

Most vulnerable:

— Hawkins. Of the narrow winners in 1980, the one regarded as having the shakiest re-election prospects is Mrs. Hawkins, who is being challenged by Democratic Gov. Bob Graham. Various polls show Graham leading the Republican senator by margins ranging from 4 to 25 points.

Mrs. Hawkins had to interrupt her campaign to undergo surgery to relieve pain from a back injury. The senator emphasizes her work to combat drug trafficking and child abuse.

A popular two-term governor, Graham is using the slogan, "You know what he did in Florida. Think what he could do for Florida in Washington."

— James Abdnor of South Dakota. Abdnor captured 58 percent of the vote to score a surprisingly easy victory over Sen. George S. McGovern in 1980. But economic distress in the farm belt put Abdnor on everybody's list of most vulnerable Republicans, including that of Gov. William Janklow who is challenging the senator in the GOP primary.

— Symms. Like Abdnor, Symms defeated a big-name Democrat in 1980, Sen. Frank Church. But Symms' margin was 4,300 votes out of a total of more than 430,000. One of the most conservative members of the Senate, Symms is challenged by Gov. John Evans, a Democrat who is completing his second term. Polls show the race very close.

— Denton. Once considered a good bet for re-election, Denton, a former Vietnam prisoner of war, now is locked in a tight race with Democratic Rep. Richard Shelby. A recent poll showed them dead even with a fraction over 44 percent each and 11 percent undecided. Polls last fall had Denton receiving more than 55 percent.

Shelby has been running TV ads critical of Denton's unwillingness to back legislative action to combat foreign imports, which are hurting many industries in the state.

Potentially vulnerable:

— Specter. Elected with just 50 percent of the vote, Specter angered White House aides by opposing the nomination of William Bradford Reynolds to be the No. 3 official in the Justice Department and criticizing the administration for "carrot and stick" lobbying on the MX missile.

Republican Gov. Richard Thornburgh, reportedly encouraged by some White House aides, decided against challenging Specter in the GOP primary. Rep. Bob Edgar and state Auditor General Don Bailey are in a close race for the Democratic nomination to oppose Specter.

— Mattingly. Another Republican running in what was once a Democratic stronghold, Mattingly once looked like one of the most inviting targets. But as the race heats up, the incumbent has a $2.5 million campaign treasury and a lead in the polls. A primary next August will determine which of four Democrats, including Rep. Wyche Fowler and Carter White House aide Hamilton Jordan, will challenge Mattingly.

— Sen. Don Nickles of Oklahoma. Nickles' biggest break came when Democratic Gov. George Nigh decided against running for the Senate. So far, Nickles is well ahead of Democratic Rep. Jim Jones, former chairman of the House Budget Committee, in most polls, but Democrats expect the race to tighten because the state's economy is being squeezed by problems in agriculture and energy.

— Sen. Robert Kasten of Wisconsin. So far, Kasten has been his own toughest opponent. Personal problems clouding the senator's re-election prospects include his failure to file an income tax return in 1977, his affiliation with a real estate firm in which a partner was sentenced to prison, and several motor vehicle violations including a drunk driving arrest last December. Three Democrats are contending for the nomination to challenge the incumbent: Ed Garvey, former executive director of the National Football League Players Association, is considered the front-runner.

— Sen. Mark Andrews of North Dakota. Andrews is another GOP freshman whose re-election prospects were boosted by the Democrats' failure to field their strongest candidate. Rep. Byron Dorgan, who led Andrews in many polls, decided against a Senate bid. A depressed farm economy was considered the main threat to Andrews and it still could produce an anti-incumbent vote. Andrews' Democratic opponent is state tax commissioner Kent Conrad.

School Menus

Menus for Pitt County schools this week, as announced, are:

"The Deliberate Stranger"

By Andy Noble

He was the All-American boy next door — a good-looking, ambitious, bright law student who seemed to have a brilliant future. But Ted Bundy also had a darker side — using his charisma and charm as a deadly weapon to lure and, then, murder women.

One of TV's All-American boys next door, Mark Harmon plays Bundy in "The Deliberate Stranger," an NBC miniseries airing May 4 and 5. The drama, based on a book by Seattle Times reporter Dick Larsen, details the manhunt for Bundy as well as the complex psychological factors that motivated him.

Bundy was convicted and sentenced to death for three murders in Florida and is suspected of killing more than 25 women in six states. On March 3, he won a stay of execution from the U.S. Supreme Court, pending a federal appeal to review the circumstances of his conviction and death sentence.

"The first thing that attracted me to the role was the opportunity to grow," says Harmon, who most recently starred as good-guy Dr. Bobby Caldwell on "St. Elsewhere." "Bundy is not just a simple Jekyll-Hyde personality. He is a spectrum of characters from the best in us to the worst, each one coloring and influencing the other."

"I originally wanted to meet Bundy face to face but Marvin Chomsky, the miniseries director, talked me out of it. Now I'm glad, because had I met him I don't know which face of Ted I would have seen and it would probably have influenced my portrayal."

Instead, he read several books on Bundy as well as psychological character studies, which allowed Harmon to see many of Bundy's character shadings and allowed Harmon to draw his own conclusions.

Larsen first met Bundy when he was an aspiring law student in Seattle.

"He was a striking young man," says Larsen. "He was good-looking, articulate and easy to talk to. He has a very quick mind and was really into politics. He was not a hard person to get to like."

Terri Garber reprises her role as conniving Southern belle Ashton Main Huntoon in "North and South: Book II," the 12-hour miniseries airing on ABC beginning Sunday, May 4.

Capital Growth

Millions of men gave up their lives and millions of women gave up their nylons for the sake of the American war effort in World War II. Next week, PBS tells the story of the effects of "Wartime In Washington." The half-hour documentary, hosted by veteran journalist Daniel Schorr and airing Monday, May 12 at 10:30 p.m., will examine the growth of the capital's federal departments and the "gov-

Taxing Times

Toronto is the production site for "Many Happy Returns," a CBS comedy about an average Joe who gets audited by an IRS office trying to meet its quota. George Segal is Bud Robinson, the sporting goods-store owner who strikes out with the pencil-wielding feds; Ron Leibman is his brother-in-law, the self-styled accountant; and Linda Soreson, his level-headed wife.

Aquatic archaeologists

The geographic misnomer frequented by honeymooners, St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands, has extended some Caribbean hospitality to Cliff Robertson and Loretta Swit, who have been filming the CBS movie "Dreams of Gold: The Mel Fisher Story" in the island paradise. The two portray Mel and Deo Fisher, who spent more than 16 years searching for the sunken treasure of the Nuestra Senora de Atocha, a Spanish galleon sunk in 1622. After the couple's loss of their son and daughter-in-law, 1985 brought the Fishers hundreds of millions of dollars in deep-sea payload.

Hungary again?

Lee Remick and Patrick McGoohan star in "Of Pure Blood," a CBS made-for-TV motion picture currently in production in Germany and Hungary. Remick is Alicia Browning, a New York professional who returns to her native Germany to discover the cause of her son's violent death. What she finds is mysteriously linked to the Third Reich and the SS Lebensborn program, the Nazi breeding program designed to engineer their "master race." McGoohan stars as Remick's old family friend and contributing factor to the intrigue.

New Writers Hope To Revive 'AW'

By Connie Passalacqua

During the last few years, "Another World," which was the No. 1 soap throughout the 1970s, has gone into a serious ratings decline. A usually good cast has not been able to make up for story lines that have grown increasingly diffuse and worse, have grown tired and repetitive.

To revive "AW," NBC and Procter & Gamble recently hired two daytime television heavyweights, executive producer John Whitesell and head writer Margaret De Priest. Whitesell, 33, got lots of publicity recently during his brief stint at the helm of "Search for Tomorrow" when he orchestrated the flood that was supposed to destroy Henderson and save the show.

But it's De Priest who has a longer and a more impressive record on various daytime shows. She first got involved in soaps in the early '60s as an actress and later as a writer on "Edge of Night," and later went on to write for "One Life to Live" and be the head writer for "The Doctors."

Most important, she was on the headwriting team of "General Hospital" during the early 1980s when the Luke and Laura romance made the show a national cult. She also created another cult couple, Bo and Hope Brady of "Days of Our Lives," whose action-adventure-styled romance revived the show's popularity.

De Priest says she has specific goals in improving "AW."

"I intend to bring a solid focus to the show," she says. "The audience will be able to say in one sentence or see in one key scene what 'AW' is all about. And I intend to give each character a clear point of view. Out of these strong points of view come confrontation and conflict." She also plans to sharpen the class conflicts between the show's three central families.

"We're going to do a classic drama in the vein of Sinclair Lewis — with all the wealthy Loves on one side of the spectrum, the blue-collar Mackinnons on the other and the wealthy but socially conscious Corys in between," she says.

De Priest also will introduce new characters including a Love family patriarch and younger brother and sister Mackinnons.

"The stories on 'AW' will have more surprising twists and turns," De Priest promises. "We'll do away with the Friday cliffhanger. I want to throw audiences off balance."

Geraldine McEwan (l.) stars as Emmaline Lucas and Prunella Scales portrays Elizabeth Mapp in "Mapp and Lucia," a four-part miniseries spoofing 1920's British society. The miniseries premieres Sunday, May 4 on PBS. (Check local listings.)

Geronimo!

Later this month, CBS viewers encounter a "Stagecoach" full of songbirds. The "CBS Sunday Night Movie," airing Sunday, May 18, stars Willie Nelson as a famed gunfighter; Kris Kristofferson as a fugitive; Johnny Cash as a marshal; and Waylon Jennings as a professional gambler. "Stagecoach," set in the Arizona Territory in the 1880s, is a remake of the 1939 John Wayne classic in which a disparate group of travellers aboard a Lordsburg-bound stagecoach must traverse territory occupied by Apaches on the warpath.

ASK ME ABOUT TV

By Val Carew

What can you tell me about Perry King, that lovable hunk from "Riptide"? I swoon every Friday night when I watch him in action! — C.C., Hawthorne, N.J.

Perry King

King, one of five children of a physician, was born in Alliance, Ohio, on April 30, 1948. The actor comes from a long line of celebrated ancestors, including Civil War General William T. Sherman, literary editor Maxwell Perkins and two signers of the Declaration of Independence.

He attended St. Paul's School in New Hampshire and received his B.A. at Yale. He studied acting, under the tutelage of John Houseman, at the Juilliard School.

The actor has appeared in several films, including "The Lords of Flatbush," "The Choirboys" and "Slaughterhouse Five." He also appeared in the TV movies "The Hasty Heart" and "Helen Keller — the Miracle Continues." The actor is divorced and has a 15-year-old daughter, Louise.

You're getting your blondes confused, K.B. The actress who starred on "The Fall Guy" was Heather Thomas.

My mother and I are having a fight. She insists that Shirley Temple was a midget; one of the leftover Munchkins from "The Wizard of Oz." I think she's crazy. Val, if I'm right, mom treats me to a four-course dinner at Wendy's. — D.L.R., Yonkers, N.Y.

TV Chatter

It's the role of a lifetime: Theodore "Ted" Bundy, the charismatic law student convicted of murdering three women in Florida, and suspected of slaughtering more than 25 others. Mark Harmon stars as Bundy in "The Deliberate Stranger," an NBC miniseries airing this week. Harmon says he decided against a pre-production meeting with Bundy — the murderer is on Florida's death row — but admits that he still ended up a bit too close to his subject. "I took Ted's persona home with me every night for six weeks," says the 34-year-old actor, "and it was hard getting rid of him. Everywhere I went, Ted was with me. Friends would come over, take a look at me and say, 'See ya in four weeks.' Even my dogs gave me funny looks." Harmon says he finally shed his TV persona when he shaved off his hair, which he had grown and curled for the miniseries. "I went out, got a crew cut, looked in the mirror and welcomed Mark back in my life."

Terri Garber says acting is her greatest addiction — this week she reprises her role as Ashton Main Huntoon in the ABC miniseries "North and South: Book II" — but for four years, the 25-year-old actress was addicted to something else: cocaine. "I was shy and insecure, and coke was fun because it helped me come out," recalls Terri, who says she began using drugs when she was 16. "I worked as a waitress in New York, and people gave me all sorts of drugs. I'd take them, stay up till 4 a.m. and then go out dancing. I'd stumble in at 10 in the morning, and come down 20 hours later." Now, Terri claims she's clean. "I knew I was headed for disaster when I overheard a drug dealer tell someone I'd buy anything," she says. "So one day, I quit cold turkey. I've had some cravings, but I now have the sense to realize my life is too important to screw up."

Richard Simmons is tipping the fitness scales again. The guru of good health has just completed his latest video, "Reach for Fitness," a home cassette devoted to exercise programs for the physically handicapped. To assure that the video would also tip fitness sales, Simmons, 38, asked several show-biz heavyweights to participate. "I wrote letters, made phone calls and begged everyone to do it," says Simmons. It paid off: More than 15 celebrities — including Joan Rivers, Jane Fonda, John Ritter and Ann-Margret — appear in the video, and all the celebs have donated their salaries to the Reach Foundation, an organization that supplies handicapped people with specialized equipment. Still, Simmons isn't entirely thrilled with the star-studded turnout: "Joan Collins turned me down," he sniffs. "She said she was too busy."

Mother's Day is still a week away, but Debbie Reynolds has already done her shopping. The 54-year-old actress is treating her mother Maxene to a week of relaxation and rejuvenation at The Greenhouse Spa, a luxurious resort in Arlington, Texas. The seven days of R&R are costing Debbie $5,250, but the Greenhouse Spa promises she'll get her money's worth. Besides the lo-cal goodies and beauty hints, the personnel at Greenhouse claim Debbie and Mom will each lose between three and five pounds and the equivalent in body inches.

All the info fans hope for on Durham

By Kimberly Redmond

I think Christopher Durham, who plays Dakota Smith on "Ryan's Hope," is dreamy. Can you give me some background on him? — S.G., Jamestown, N.Y.

Christopher Durham

Durham's first recurring daytime role was that of football hero Matt McCandless on "Capitol." While creating the role of Matt, Durham got the chance to show off his abilities as a gymnast.

Born in Hopewell, Va., the actor is a graduate of William and Mary College. Durham moved to New York upon graduation. While working as a lifeguard in a posh hotel, he was spotted by a talent agent. Durham has appeared in several off-Broadway theater productions, and hopes, one day, to appear in a Broadway play.

I heard that "The Young and the Restless" is going to write off Tracey E. Bregman's Lauren Williams. Is that true? — M.A., Ashville, N.Y.

As far as we know there are no plans to write Bregman out of the CBS soap. Her story line may have slowed down in the last few weeks, but Lauren is still in the foreground.

What happened to the character of Beth Raines on "The Guiding Light"? I haven't seen Judi Evans on the show for some time now. — S.M., Icard, N.C.

Judi Evans, the actress who portrays Beth, took some time off after her on-screen husband was killed, but she has since returned. The news around the "GL" set is that Evans plans on leaving the show when her contract comes up for renewal this fall.

Tracey E. Bregman

THURSDAY
CHEERS

FRIDAY
CHARLIE & COMPANY

"Charlie & Company," the CBS sitcom about a middle-class Chicago family, did not succeed when it first aired in the fall. It now returns on Fridays with new episodes starring (top, l.-r.): Kristoff St. John, Flip Wilson, Gladys Knight, (bottom, l.-r.): Jaleel White and Fran Robinson.

Pinchot Is No Longer Stranger To Success

By Jay Carman

Currently making the rounds is a story about how when Michael J. Fox was down and out, he sold his beloved sectional sofa piece by piece.

Well, Bronson Pinchot, the co-star of the new "Perfect Strangers" series, can top that, especially if you throw in the element of sentimental value.

"I had just moved to New York after college," he recalls, "and later I had bombed out as a waiter in New Haven. I got a small off-Broadway role, but it only paid $103 a week and my rent was $321 a month.

"I was trying to stay alive on tuna and tomatoes, but I finally realized that I'd have to start selling off my memorabilia collection from 'The Wizard of Oz' movie," he says. "I had things like the original draft of the screenplay and several genuine lobby posters. So when I got really desperate, I'd just take something off my wall and sell it to a die-hard collector."

The slender Pinchot, 26, now has the means to buy back his Oz pieces, if he can locate them. In fact, his acting career has been going swimmingly for some time. Which, he says, is a surprise to the many fans who believe that Pinchot literally became a star overnight thanks to his scene-stealing appearance as the odd-voiced Serge in "Beverly Hills Cop."

What's Wrong With Indie Promo People?

By E.A. Vare

It's ironic, but Tipper Gore seems to be having the last laugh, after all. As you recall, Mrs. Gore was a founder of the Parents Music Resource Center, a group that felt some rock music wasn't fit for public consumption, and set about trying to muzzle it – or, at least, plaster it with warning stickers. The PMRC was the butt of many record-biz jokes, and, at last count, the First Amendment was still winning by a decent margin.

Now, Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., – Tipper Gore's husband – is point man for a Senate investigating committee, ready to sniff out massive corruption and "ties to organized crime" within the industry that laughed at his wife. National news stories have resurrected the word "payola," and lay the blame on the independent record promotion people.

What, exactly, is independent record promotion, aside from a good lead line to get ratings for the 6 o'clock news? It's like this: Every week, radio programmers around the country – the guys who decide what to put on the air – receive about 10 times as many records as they have time to play. Most of them don't have time to listen to half of them. A promo person goes into the field, and courts radio programmers into giving their records a chance. This courtship is not unlike the time-honored methods that computer salesmen use to get a company to install IBMs rather than NCRs, or that a lobbyist uses to get a senator to vote for a certain bill. It involves business gifts, business lunches, sometimes little persuaders that are unseemly or downright illegal. In politics it's called bribery and corruption; in music, it's called payola.

To keep at arm's length from the taint of payola, record labels many years ago fired their in-house promo staffs and began to retain "independent promotion" on a free-lance, case-by-case basis. That way, they could always shrug their shoulders and say they didn't know where the money was going. They could stay clean. Since the recent bad publicity, many labels have also terminated their indie record promo people.

As a result, there are 25 percent fewer new artists being added to radio station playlists. Struggling new performers have no one out there for them. Listeners have 25 percent less variety in their audio diet. And a lot of perfectly nice people are out of work.

We're not endorsing or excusing bribery and corruption. But the recording industry is amazingly clean for a $4 billion-a-year business. After what we've learned about politics recently, politicians should hold onto their stones until they're sure they're not throwing from inside a glass house.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: I know Bill Bixby starred in "My Favorite Martian," "The Courtship of Eddie's Father" and "The Incredible Hulk," but didn't he star in one other series? – AARON MEHKI, MONROE, MICH.

Bixby starred in "The Magician" on NBC during the 1973-74 season. He has also appeared in "The Book of Lists," an obscure CBS summer-replacement series that aired in 1982, and "Goodnight, Beantown," with Mariette Hartley, which aired on CBS during the 1983-84 season.

Dear Michele: Who starred in the short-lived series "Half-Nelson"? Was it Hamilton Camp? – DOROTHY AMABILE, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

Actor Joe Pesci appeared as the diminutive private investigator on last season's "Half-Nelson." You may also remember Pesci's portrayal of Jake LaMotta's brother in "Raging Bull" (1980). The role earned him an Academy Award nomination for Best Supporting Actor.

Dear Michele: A recent episode of "Scarecrow and Mrs. King" was dedicated to Hogan Jackson Jr. Who is this person? – J. DAVIS, COLTS NECK, N.J.

Hogan Jackson Jr. was star Kate Jackson's father. He died shortly before his daughter directed the segment.

Dear Michele: Is screen legend Gilbert Roland still alive? – GLENDA ARNOLD, LEBANON, PA.

Gilbert Roland is still very much alive. Born Luis Antonio Damaso de Alonso on Dec. 11, 1905 in Juarez (or Chihuahua) Mexico, he is the son of a Spanish bullfighter. He, too, was trained as a matador, but he switched to a career in films when the family moved to the United States. Roland became a silent-film star, and he had romances during the '20s with Clara Bow and "Camille" co-star Norma Talmadge. He survived the transition to sound films with the help of diction lessons. His first wife was actress Constance Bennett. They were married from 1941-46 and had two daughters, Christina and Lorinda. In 1954, Roland married Guillermina Cantu. The Latin lover has numerous screen credits, including "Rose of the Golden West" (1927), "Men of the North" (1930), "Gateway" (1938), "King of the Bandits" (1947), "Thunder Bay"(1953), "Cheyenne Autumn" (1964) and "Cabo Blanco" (1979).

Spreading Stereo

Television-industry sources estimate that there are 2 to 3 million stereo-equipped televisions in American homes today — less than 3 percent of the nation's 86 million television homes. It is estimated that a 20-percent stereo penetration, the so-called "critical mass" level at which a new product or technology is considered viable, will not be achieved until 1989, at the earliest.

'Back To The Future' Tops May Releases

By Frank Lovece

May brings with it Mother's Day and Michael J. Fox and a DeLorean automobile and Christopher Lloyd. That's right. It's time for VCR owners to take a trip "Back to the Future." On May 22, MCA Home Video is releasing on cassette one of the most charming and popular movies ever, director Robert Zemeckis' comic adventure of a boy and his scientist time-tripping from the present to the 1950s. Last summer's pleasant-surprise hit will retail for $80, which is a not-so-pleasant surprise since Paramount Home Video successfully released such hits as "Beverly Hills Cop" for just $30.

That $80 figure also holds for two big Vestron releases: "To Live and Die in L.A." (May 14) and "Twice in a Lifetime" (May 28). "L.A." is director William ("The French Connection") Friedkin's designer thriller about a renegade Secret Service agent. "Lifetime," starring Gene Hackman, Ellen Burstyn and Ann-Margret, is a family drama too much perhaps along the lines of "Terms of Endearment."

Its polar opposite is the offbeat, much-praised and aptly named "Stranger Than Paradise" (Key Video, May 20, $80). Jim Jarmusch's comic fable of a pair of New York City "beats" stirred to new life by a punkish young Hungarian cousin is a series of small incidents told blackout-style. Winner of the 1984 Cannes Film Festival's best-first-film award, the Camera d'Or, it's a quirky and refreshing movie.

A couple of film classics are also in the May basket. From Disney comes the animated "Alice in Wonderland" (May 28, $30), a delightful, color-splashed adaptation of Lewis Carroll's "The Adventures of Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass."

Harmon Is Convincing As Killer Bundy

By Robert DiMatteo

Unless you were hooked by part one, forget about that endless kitsch-epic North and South: Book II (ABC, May 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 11). A docudrama to equal last year's "Fatal Vision" in interest and controversy is the true highlight this week. The Deliberate Stranger, based on journalist Richard W. Larsen's book, is a two-part NBC miniseries (May 4 and 5) telling the chilling story of Ted Bundy. Bundy is the attractive, likable yet sociopathic law student who ended up on Death Row in a Florida prison as the convicted murderer of three -- and who's suspected to be the killer of more than two dozen females.

The plum part of Bundy goes to Mark Harmon, the young actor who recently received the dubious distinction of being chosen People magazine's "sexiest man in America." Harmon may be able to surmount such hype, especially if his acting in "The Deliberate Stranger" is any indication. He easily captures Bundy's charismatic facade, and he suggests a curious and deadly emptiness where other men have consciences. After Harmon's tragic leave taking on "St. Elsewhere," where his ladies' man character contracted AIDS, the actor seems to be developing a knack for playing the dark side of irresistibility.

Viewers who get HBO will want to check out that pay-cable service's newest made-for-pay movie -- also a docudrama with a creepy edge. Act of Vengeance (May 7) focuses on the heroic last days of United Mine Workers official Jock Yablonski.

CINDY SAYS

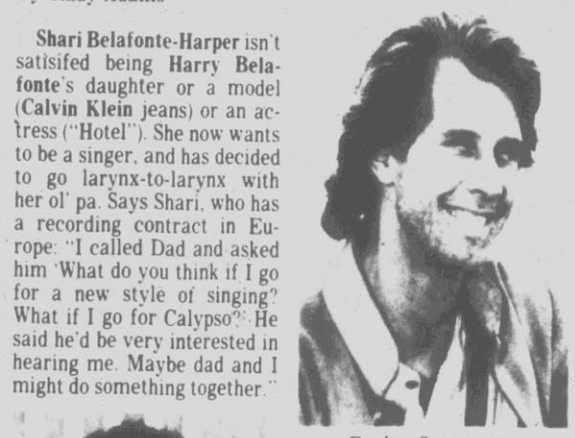
By Cindy Adams

Shari Belafonte-Harper isn't satisifed being Harry Belafonte's daughter or a model (Calvin Klein jeans) or an actress ("Hotel"). She now wants to be a singer, and has decided to go larynx-to-larynx with her ol' pa. Says Shari, who has a recording contract in Europe: "I called Dad and asked him 'What do you think if I go for a new style of singing? What if I go for Calypso?' He said he'd be very interested in hearing me. Maybe dad and I might do something together."



Parker Stevenson

Shari Belafonte-Harper

Parker Stevenson, who's long past the "Hardy Boys" days, brings a truckful of history to his role as Billy Hazard in "North and South: Book II." The sprawling miniseries airs this week on ABC. Parker's great-great-great granddaddy is General George Meade, who led the Battle of Gettysburg. Parker is a history buff, and he researched all the battles in which his great-great-great grandpappy fought. Old generals never die. They come back on TV.

Nobody makes a monkey out of producer Dino De Laurentiis. His upcoming film "King Kong Lives" features a 60-foot mechanical monkey. ... Does anyone know that Margaret Stanziale, the composer of Madonna's "Like a Virgin," is the daughter of Rep. Peter Rodino, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee? Does anyone care? ... Jesse White, TV's Maytag repairman, lives dangerously. He consumed two cream sodas at New York City's Carnegie Deli.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Arnold feels 'Bash' needed time to grow

By Frank Lovece

If you haven't seen it by now, Friday night may be your last chance to see "Joe Bash," the most innovative and creative half-hour show on television. The ABC series, starring Peter Boyle and Andrew Rubin as the kind of cops who would've walked the beat on "Barney Miller," is neither a situation comedy nor a soap opera nor a detective series.

Danny Arnold

It is, as its six-episode tryout run proved, probably the closest thing on network TV to a weekly one-act play.

There's no laugh track, no studio audience, no one-liners. "It is a different kind of animal," explains creator Danny Arnold, who also produced and co-created "Barney Miller." "It's not a joke show — it's a character relationship between two people. If you expect to see a 'situation comedy' in those terms, you may be very disappointed."

Boyle, the much-respected movie actor, and Rubin, a sort of young Alan Arkin, play police partners pounding the beat on Manhattan's crumbling Lower East Side. The older officer isn't a wise father figure, the younger one isn't a spunky kid.

This is a realistic show. If you ever wanted to ride in the back of patrol car one night and see what goes on, "Joe Bash" is a good approximation.

Arnold, who also produced such shows as "Bewitched" and "That Girl," is something of a TV legend, partly because, in an industry where formulas and creation-by-committee is the norm, he's been able to mold his personal visions into TV shows.

"Joe Bash" is not "Barney Miller," but in the interplay between Boyle and Rubin, one can see the 61-year-old Arnold arguing with himself about what in life is still worth an effort. This series obviously is. Along with co-writing all the scripts, Arnold directed five episodes and had a hand in arranging the lighting so meticulously that videotaped scenes sometimes look filmed.

"Reactions to the show have been violent," Arnold says. "Some of the people who reviewed it said they'd expected something more from me because of 'Barney Miller.' They forget that when 'Barney' came out, they gave it terrible reviews."

"Any behaviorial show has a period of growth," Arnold adds. "Characters' attitudes change. That was very apparent in 'Barney,' which was also a mid-season replacement."

Where Does ESPN's Hockey Road Lead?

By Adam Beckerman

One element of ESPN's coverage of the NHL's Stanley Cup playoffs disappoints this viewer. The name of the series. Why call it "The Road to the Cup"? Granted, the playoffs are a seven-week odyssey on ice. But a road implies steps, such as those taken in a basketball tournament. Also, a road suggests that someplace in particular is the destination of all who are travelling. One could conceivably, however, say that the road to the Stanley Cup passes through Edmonton. In that case, "The Path to the Cup" might have at least been a more appropriate title, using a hockey allusion such as "His path to the puck was impeded."

On Sunday, May 4, there will be a Wales Conference finals game. The Wales is the western portion of the league, where Wayne Gretzky and the Edmonton Oilers have dominated the past five years, but were only represented in the finals the last three. Should Edmonton be gone, the Calgary Flames could well have been their interdivisional assassin. Although, if it's neither Edmonton nor Calgary, who will wear the Wales crown? It could be Chicago, winner of the Norris, hockey's equivalent of the NFL Central division. What would be fitting, however, is if fourth-place Toronto were representing the Norris, since they lost six of eight to the Black Hawks in the regular season and took Game One of their divisional semifinal. What we'll probably see on Sunday, though, is Edmonton-Minnesota. The North Stars are the fast-skating team many felt in 1981 would become the Oilers of the '80s.

The NBA playoffs are well down their own road. On Sunday, May 4, CBS airs a conference semifinal doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. (ET). If these conference semis don't get clinched today, more games will be televised Thursday and Friday nights.

The baseball Game of the Week (NBC, May 10) features either the Reds at the Mets or the Padres at the Cubs. Two years ago, when both San Diego and Chicago won their first divisional flags, it meant every NL team had won its division at least once since 1969.

The Cubs fell down last year due to a plague that wiped out their starting pitching staff. The Padres mutinied under Dick Williams. Now, with healthy arms in Chicago and the calming influence of manager Steve Boros in San Diego, look for the Cubs and Padres to challenge once more.

Jay Leno Ponders The American Dream

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Jay Leno, the beefy, weak-chinned comedian, has gained a cult following due to his frequent appearances on "Late Night with David Letterman." Letterman himself has termed the 36-year-old Leno as "the funniest man in America." That's quite a reputation to live up to — and Letterman may be overlooking such jokesters as Woody Allen, Mel Brooks and George Bush. Nevertheless, Leno is right up there in the humor department.

A good vehicle to see Leno work his craft is "Jay Leno and the American Dream" (May 8), an hour-long conceptual comedy piece airing on Showtime. It incorporates his stand-up routines (most of which will be familiar to Letterman viewers), which pokes fun of cultural icons such as the Buick Roadmaster and Mister Goodwrench. But it also intercuts filmed footage of Leno tooling around Chicago in a lavender '55 Cadillac, dropping by factories, restaurants, schoolrooms to find out just what the American dream is. Leno comes close to waxing sappily patriotic, but he pulls back and instead, what we get are red, white and blue belly laughs: Frank Capra mixed with Don Rickles.

It was little more than a hipper version of Abbott and Costello's "Hold That Ghost," but "Ghostbusters" turned out to be one of 1984's biggest box-office smashes. Dan Aykroyd, Harold Ramis and Bill Murray play a trio of parapsychologists moonlighting as poltergeist exterminators battling slime in the Big Apple. Sigourney Weaver is appealing as the woman whose apartment is haunted. The comedy airs Sunday, May 4 on HBO and Wednesday, May 7 on Cinemax.

The Suits of Summer

It's not too early to plan for those days ahead that are somewhat intemperate.

There are times when our climate is considerably less (or more) than temperate but there are ways to beat the heat in respectable summer clothing. We highly recommend our suits of summer, carefully tailored from cotton blends, always in a natural shoulder profile, from beautiful poplin and seersucker fabrics. Our suits of summer have a very special touch and even IF YOU'RE A PROBLEM FIT, we may possibly work out the difficulty. We have coordinated a cutting of extra pants in these seersucker and poplin fabrics to enable us to switch with any coat if you are exactly a rack suit size. Available in several cool, light colors.

PHARMassist

Here for your health. Exclusively from Revco

The next time your shopping for health products for yourself or your family, stop and think a minute. Are you buying the product that's best for you? Do you know which products to avoid because of allergies or problems caused by other medications you may be taking?

Now you can find out through PHARMassist--Revco's unique pharmacy service designed to help you make the proper choice of health products from the many that are available on Revco's self-service shelves. A Revco pharmacist is always on duty to give you PHARMassistance. All you have to do is ask.

Q Well, well, well. I see that Caroline Kennedy, daughter of our assassinated President John F. Kennedy, plans to marry her boyfriend, Edwin Schlossberg, this summer. How much older is Schlossberg than his bride-to-be? Isn't Caroline's grandfather, old Joe Kennedy, turning over in his grave at even the thought of such a marriage, since Schlossberg comes from a Jewish family and Caroline from a Catholic one?—M.M., Chatham, Mass.

A Caroline Kennedy is 28, her fiancé 41. We cannot contact "old Joe Kennedy" at this time, but we suspect that the late U.S. ambassador to Great Britain, wherever he may be, is thrashing about in fury at the vision of his granddaughter marrying Schlossberg—unless, of course, Schlossberg decides to become a Roman Catholic or agrees that any children from his marriage to Caroline will be reared as Catholics. During World War II, when Kathleen Kennedy, one of Joe and Rose Kennedy's five daughters, married William Hartington, an Englishman and a member of the Church of England (Protestant), her parents disapproved and declined to attend the wedding.

Q We now have three former U.S. Presidents—Nixon, Ford and Carter—living. Have we ever had this situation before?—E.F. Borden, Akron, Ohio

A Yes, many times. And once, when Lincoln took office in 1861, we had five living ex-Presidents: Van Buren, Tyler, Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan.

Betty and Mario Lanza: Too heavy for Hollywood

Q What is the mystery behind Mario Lanza's death? Is it true that the Mafia had him killed? Why hasn't a biography ever been published about him? —Richard Mack, Wheeling, Ill.

A Mario Lanza (real name: Alfredo Arnold Cocozza) was a mentally disturbed singer-actor who suffered from chronic obesity, alcoholism and drug addiction. Unable to fulfill his contractual commitments in Hollywood, he moved in the late '50s to Rome, where he overate, overspent and overwomanized. Unfortunately, he reportedly gave his word to Lucky Luciano, a Mafia bigwig, that he would perform at a concert in Naples in October 1959. Fearful of appearing but afraid of Luciano's revenge, Lanza checked himself into the Valle Guila Clinic on a weight-loss program. Only 38, he died at the clinic on Oct. 7, 1959—some say of heart failure, others of an embolism. At the time, rumors were rife in Italy that Lanza had reneged on a deal with the Mafioso and had paid with his life. That was the opinion of his wife, Betty, who followed him in death five months later. One fairly truthful biography of the singer is "Lanza: His Tragic Life," by Raymond Strait and Terry Robinson, who was Lanza's physical trainer and closest friend.

Q I've read that Robert Redford, Harrison Ford and Kirk Douglas have all had facelifts. Can this be true?—J.D., Washington, D.C.

A It's reported to be true of Kirk Douglas.

A To Bill Cosby's acting talent and the basic concept of his TV program, which is to treat truthfully and humorously the small, everyday, normal aspects of family life. The writers of "The Cosby Show" make it a point to avoid the trite crisis situations used in most TV sitcoms.

Q For the fourth time: Who is the member of the Reagan Cabinet referred to as "Fathead"? And which of the Washington lobbyists with great access to the White House is known as "The Raging Queen"? Why won't you reply?—K.L., McLean, Va.

A Sorry, but to answer your two questions would do more harm than good.

Shelley Rex RDR

Prince William with his folks: He's next in line

Q With Prince Charles flying around the world so much, what would happen if he were killed? Who would become the future king of Great Britain—his brother, Prince Andrew, or his first son, little Prince William? Also, what would Diana's status become? Would she be allowed to remarry?—D.G., San Diego, Calif.

A If Prince Charles were to die, the next in line to the throne would be Prince William. Diana would remain Princess of Wales and would be allowed to remarry, but it is hardly likely that she would do so without royal permission.

Young people used to make jokes when 65-year-old Sam Freeman jogged by in

'They Don't Call Me

Paul Quentano

A smiling Sam Freeman crosses finish line after running 100 miles in Shea Stadium last June.

Sam at 16 (top), when he graduated from Lincoln High in Brooklyn in 1936, and holding handball trophy won in 1968, when he was 48. Swimming and handball always helped him stay in shape, he says, but when he took up running seven years ago, it transformed his life.

By Michael O'Shea

SAM FREEMAN IS 65 YEARS OLD. JUST ABOUT a year ago at Shea Stadium in Queens, N.Y., he ran 100 miles in 20 hours and 34 minutes, breaking the American record for men in his age group.

Four months later, in October, he ran in the New York Marathon. Then, 13 days after that, he completed a 50-mile race in Manhattan's Central Park on a Saturday, finished the Jersey Shore Marathon on Sunday, his 65th birthday, and on Monday he took a six-mile jaunt through Central Park. A few friends had a cake waiting for him when he got back to the YMCA. He had run 82 miles, the equivalent of three marathons, in three days.

Yet, with all that, Sam's just an average guy, physically. He's 5 feet 8, weighs 166, gets about seven hours of sleep a night, pays minimal attention to what he eats, has never read a book about running and scarcely knows what kind of running shoes he wears. He's a single man, a lawyer with a private practice in Manhattan, and he's not crazy about TV. He reads a lot. His favorite works are Remembrance of Things Past, by Marcel Proust, and all the plays of Eugene O'Neill, including a one-acter called Thirst.

He began running only seven years ago, at the urging of a friend from Manhattan's West Side YMCA named Dick Traum, who runs marathons on one good leg and an artificial one that extends from the hip. Up to that time, Sam played handball and swam quite a bit. He feels that running has transformed his life. He likes to jog 80 miles a week, about 12 miles a day, at all times in all weather, cold or hot.

What makes Sam run? Above all, what makes him able to run so far so fast? He has something extra, but not what you might think.

At the request of PARADE, we tested Sam at the Sports Training Institute in West Orange, N.J., together with an outstanding professional basketball player, Buck Williams of the New Jersey Nets, and an excellent professional hockey player, Kirk Muller of the New Jersey Devils. Both have natural ability and body shapes that make them well adapted for their sports, but this is not so with Sam.

Sam's resting heart rate is 60 beats per minute, consistent with all the running he does, and his blood pressure is 140/80, normal for his age. One leg is slightly shorter than the other. While his heart is not unusually large or well developed, there is one critical area of difference: maximum oxygen uptake in milliliters per kilogram of body weight. For a person under 75 who has not maintained aerobic capacity, a rating of 12 to 16 might be expected, but Sam has a rating of 33, twice the capacity of a sedentary or inactive person of his age.

What makes Sam Freeman run? After all the measuring and testing, the answer is almost too simple: He likes it. He purely likes it. He is not a competitor; he doesn't believe in racing. He has heart and will, and he finds sheer joy in the action.

"Clearing the mind," he calls it. "It's been a new life—completely new," he says, "ever since I started running and got the 'runner's high.' I don't think you get it if you run just 30 minutes. It's better if you run over an hour, or even two or three. It puts you on a cloud, and you feel as if you're on a mountain looking down, and you have a clear picture of everything you see. I think some substance is secreted in the brain when you run, and it sharpens you mentally so that you can handle any situation that comes up."

How does he cope with injuries? "You leave the injuries in the park," he explains. "You have two eyes, two arms, two legs, and one of them is dominant. If your dominant leg hurts at the knee, say, you mentally make the other leg dominant and let that one carry you as long as you wish, and eventually the pain will disappear. This is really true," he adds with fervor. "It works miracles."

I cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of first consulting a doctor by anyone who, on reading this, feels

Motivation, Attitude and Determination are the keys to Sam's way of life; yet, at the same time, he is not the least bit pushy impelled to run out in the footsteps of Sam Freeman. It is crucial to know you are in good health before you undertake serious exercise.

Sam's secret doesn't tell you what to do if the trailing leg is hurting or if both legs are in pain. But never mind—it works for Sam, and I believe his fundamental approach is sound. As he himself points out, "The emphasis is on how the mind, not the body, does it. This is so important. People must realize that they must move their legs. The legs have to move. If the legs go, the body goes. Running is a gift of life."

The younger people at the Y and in Central Park ask Sam about running. Although he has run marathons in less than three and half hours, he has been known to run at a much slower pace to help someone else finish.

In the park, he says, "they used to call me Grandpa and Pop, but they don't call me that anymore."

And he gets faster as he gets older. This year, he ran the 1575 steps up 86 floors in the annual Empire State Building Run-Up in 19 minutes and 7 seconds—40 seconds off his time last year. He set his record for 100 miles in 1983 by accident. Competing for the fun of it, he finished the race in 21 hours and 7 minutes, and Runner's World magazine proclaimed him the holder of the American record for men aged 60 to 64. Last June 14, he did it again, this time 33 minutes faster than in 1983.

How does anybody run 100 miles? Sam says he has a little computer inside, and he pushes it. The miles click away, and he is off somewhere else, at a remembered concert, a favorite stretch of beach, or reciting poetry.

His first effort, in the gym track at the West Side YMCA, started partly because he couldn't find court time or a partner. "I ran a mile," he recalls, "then six miles. The following Saturday, I ran 10 miles, pacing myself with a clicker at 24 loops on the indoor track to every mile. The next Saturday, I tried 16 miles, then 20. The track became too confining for long runs, so I began to run in Central Park."

He has run so far and for so long that he can complete the park's six-mile loop without leaving his office. The mental journey, he says, makes him feel almost as good as if he actually were there.

He believes fiercely that almost any person can get out and do it. First, he says, walk 50 steps, then run 50 steps and simply keep going till your goal is achieved.

"There's no shame in walking," he emphasizes, "to stay in the running. The idea is to stay with it, to start running again as soon as you can. But don't say, 'I can't finish' and give up. I've met so many so-called handicapped runners who refuse to give in and who constantly set goals for themselves."

Sam lives by the acronym MAD, which he says stands for Motivation, Attitude and Determination. Yet it is curious that, while he believes so strongly in setting goals and striving to achieve them, he is at the same time not the least bit pushy. His independent nature and focus on simplicity have marked his career as an attorney and an administrative law judge. He has kept his fees relatively low, does not have a fancy office, does not own a car and often volunteers his legal services to community organizations. Building a career has not dominated his life.

By continuing to exercise over the years, Sam has managed to compensate for the usual degenerative changes that accompany aging. He refused to consider that he was not as young or as fit or as strong or as highly trained as many other runners. He doesn't run to win prizes or to prove he is better than others. He runs because it adds a richness to his life that money cannot buy.

To my way of thinking, Sam Freeman comes close to an ideal way of living: A truly natural man, a thinking man who contributes to his community, and a man of action who loves to be in the outdoors, moving, participating, reaching for goals, yet at the same time living simply and without stress.

The President's Daughter and Her Collaborator

Two months ago, when Patti Davis, 33—tall, brown-eyed, maverick daughter of Nancy and Ronald Reagan—embarked on a nationwide tour to promote Home Front, her quasi-autobiographical novel, few persons expected the book to become a best-seller.

"Because of its background, I fleetingly thought that it had the potential," concedes Maureen Strange Foster, who collaborated with Patti Davis on the book. "But I never realistically expected it to make the best-seller lists in The New York Times, the Los Angeles Times and elsewhere. Few first novels do."

Few first novels, however, have generated as much national publicity as Home Front, which at this writing is heading into its seventh edition, has sold nearly 150,000 hardcover copies and has brought a six-figure offer for the paperback rights. Jack Artenstein, the veteran editorial packager who arranged the collaboration between Davis and Foster because he believed Patti's first draft was "weak in dialogue," says flatly: "The book is doing well because of the media. Patti's appearances on the Phil Donahue and Larry King TV programs, her cancellations from the Merv Griffin and Joan Rivers talk shows, her interviews in People magazine and other publications, her parents' reaction to the book—all of it has made news. And news often translates itself into sales."

Home Front, which is written in the first person, has as its protagonist Beth Canfield, whose congenial, conservative, not-too-bright father becomes governor of California and is carefully groomed for the U.S. Presidency by his ambitious, unwittingly cruel wife. How much of the book is truth and how much is fiction only Patti Davis knows, and she isn't telling. President Reagan says, "I didn't recognize anyone in the book, and certainly the happenings [she writes about] never happened." Mrs. Reagan describes the book as "interesting fiction" but damns it with sparse praise. Maureen Foster readily admits, "There was no way of my knowing which of Patti's material was fact and which fiction, and I never tried to find out. That wasn't my function as collaborator."

Maureen Strange Foster, 37—the strikingly beautiful, Brooklyn-born daughter of a retired New York City policeman—was brought into the literary package on the basis of her two previously acclaimed novels: Beginners, based on members of her own family, and Sparks, a rites-of-passage tale concerning colorful characters in Venice, Calif., a beach city not far from where she and her husband, Bruce, live with their 7-month-old son, Harrison.

Foster's job basically was to make Davis' manuscript publishable. "When Patti and I met," she recalls, "we established an immediate rapport and felt we could work together. Patti had written a rough first draft, and we used that as a starting point. We developed a chapter outline and a routine. Patti would write a rough draft of a chapter, give it to me, and I would expand and rewrite and request additional material for dialogue and description. We began in 1984, and we had a first draft ready early last summer, at which time I started rewriting."

Foster declines to reveal her financial arrangements with Patti, but various sources say Crown Publishers paid the pair an advance of $100,000, of which Foster received between a third and a fourth—the same share she will receive of future royalties and sales of Home Front.

Patti Davis, who hopes to star in a film or TV version of her novel, already has started on a second, this time without a collaborator. "I'm sure," says Maureen Foster, "she can write a book by herself. She's imaginative, creative and, what counts most, self-disciplined."

The President's daughter also has connections—good family connections.

SUPER Fast Growing Hybrid Shade Tree!!

Measure Its Growth Week After Week.

It's Almost Like Growing INSTANT SHADE!

This shade tree is unlike most trees that just manage to nudge themselves off the ground. (Some take a lifetime to grow to a decent height.) This is the hybrid Populus and it was especially developed to be a Super Fast-Growing shade tree. In fact, when plain unrooted cuttings of this species were planted in reasonably good soil, first year growth was so impressive that the event was reported in a study by a major University. Under this offer you don't just get unrooted cuttings—you receive rooted trees already 2-3 feet tall!

Winter Hardy— Storm Resistant

Yes, Super Fast-Growing Hybrid may even grow so high, so fast, and in such a short time, that you may refuse to believe your eyes! For the Hybrid Poplar keeps on Growing and Growing! Lives to 40 years or more! It's so winter hardy that it's used by many golf courses, estates and parks.

If any of these claims sound too good to be true, just check with your local county agricultural agent, a local horticultural society or botanical garden. Furthermore, ask a real estate agent how much beautiful shade trees add to the value of a property. Depending on the type of house, mature trees can add thousands of dollars to the value of your home.

But who says you have to spend a lot of money for beautiful shade trees—and then wait what seems like a lifetime to enjoy it? Super Fast-Growing Hybrid lifts its leafy branches over your lawn with a beauty few trees can match. And it happens faster than you would have ever thought.

But You Must Act Now for Fall Planting and On-Time Delivery!

The best news of all is that the price of Super Fast-Growing Hybrid shade tree is only $3.95. That's right, only $3.95 for this beautiful tree that rewards you with an impressive display of growth in just one single year! Comes with easy-care planting instructions. Act now and it's almost like putting instant shade in your life and your lawn. Order today! Deliveries start in early October.

Contraceptive Choice Narrows

G.D. Searle & Co., the last major U.S. manufacturer of intrauterine devices (IUDs), has withdrawn them from the American market because of liability insurance problems.

According to a Searle spokesman, "Our decision to pull the IUDs off the market is a business one, not a medical one. We simply can't get any product-liability coverage at a reasonable premium. There are about a million women currently wearing our IUDs, and they need not worry about them."

Twelve years ago, the Food and Drug Administration approved the Searle IUDs. Since then, they have been the targets of at least 775 lawsuits, of which more than 300 are still pending. To date, only 11 of these lawsuits have proceeded through the court system. Searle has won nine and lost two. Of 470 other complaints, 158 were settled out of court.

About 6.5% of married women in this country use an IUD. Those who have filed suit against Searle or against the A.H. Robins Co. (makers of the recalled Dalkon Shield IUD) charge the devices with causing perforation of the uterus, pelvic inflammatory diseases, sterility and ectopic pregnancies, where the fetus develops outside the womb.

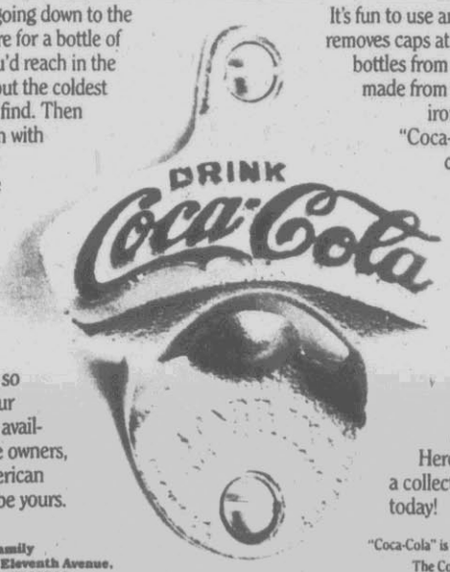
A Refreshing Memory For Only $2.95

Remember going down to the corner store for a bottle of Coke? You'd reach in the cooler and pull out the coldest bottle you could find. Then you'd pop it open with that now famous Coca-Cola bottle opener, listening for the familiar "hiss."

Well, you can now own your own bottle opener. The one that has become so much a part of our memories. Once available only to store owners, this piece of American history can now be yours.



It's fun to use and the patented design removes caps at an angle that prevents bottles from chipping. And, it's still made from heavy-duty zinc plated iron, with the familiar red "Coca-Cola" trademark. This conversation piece also makes a fine gift. It even comes with two mounting screws.

Create A Balloon Bouquet

SURPRISE YOUR mother next Sunday morning with a festive bunch of her favorite spring flowers—lilacs, roses, daffodils or tulips—intertwined with balloons and tied with ribbon. Helium-filled balloons are especially fun.

MAKE AN ORANGE-SPICE POMANDER

STICK WHOLE CLOVES ALL OVER a fresh, thin-skinned orange. Let it sit for several days in a bowl filled with a mixture of 1 ounce dried orrisroot (available at herb shops and some pharmacies), 1 ounce cinnamon, 1/2 ounce nutmeg. Turn it occasionally (this keeps it from shrinking). When it's ready, hang the pomander in a closet from a ribbon, or use it to decorate a table.

"Guess what. I slipped on the ice and fell. Me. How am I going to live it down? And you know who saw me? Michelle Emblem. She's a famous artist, and she did this portrait of me."

"Then, they put me in porcelain! (so I'd be 'immortalized'). Oh, it's all too embarrassing. But do me a favor— please try not to laugh too much."

Whoops! by Michelle Emblem will be meticulously crafted in fine porcelain and hand-painted to capture the bright contrast that makes this little fellow so distinctive. Sleek black wings and snow-white fur. The orange and black bill. And the look of pure astonishment carefully re-created in his yellow penguin eyes.

Your sculpture comes with a Certificate of Authenticity attesting that this "Slippery Penguin" is an original work of art by Michelle Emblem, crafted in fine imported porcelain and hand-painted.

But Whoops! is available only from The Franklin Mint, and will not be sold in any stores or galleries. To acquire it, just mail the accompanying reservation by May 31st.

TO LOVE A NETSUKE

Street entertainer being poked in ear by his pet monkey, in ivory (c. 1820).

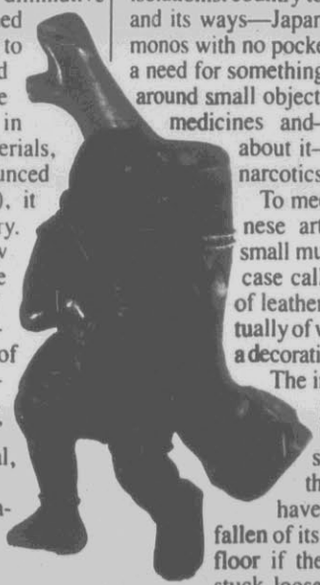
Japanese kimono with obi (sash), inro (small carrying case) and netsuke. The netsuke, at top of obi, is attached to inro with string to keep it from dropping to the ground.

ONE SUMMER morning several years ago, an enterprising Honolulu art dealer named Bernard Hurtig put together two miniature ivory horses carved by an 18th-century Japanese artist named Okatomo and offered them to collectors as a sort of loving equine couple. To the uninformed, the horses—only 2 inches high yet carved so realistically that one might imagine them galloping around a diminutive racetrack—would have seemed at best minor novelties. But to the thousands of men and women who collect these small Japanese carvings in wood, ivory and other materials, known as netsuke (pronounced "netskay"—the u is silent), it was quite a different story. Within a few days, a New York collector had bought the horses for the tidy sum of $250,000, at the time the highest price ever paid for a pair of netsuke. (The word, incidentally, literally means "root-attached" or "attached roots" and is both singular and plural, like one deer or 10 deer.)

The purchase of the Okatomo horses was by no means the only instance of a very high price being paid for netsuke. At the major auction houses such as Sotheby's and Christie's, and at Oriental art dealers in New York, London and elsewhere, prices of $10,000 to $25,000 for a single netsuke are commonplace, prices of $40,000 to $50,000 are almost commonplace, and word goes around netsuke-circles all the time about private single-piece sales to collectors for $75,000 to $100,000 and more.

It's a far cry from the early days in the 1920s and 1930s, when netsuke were first beginning to be sold regularly at auctions in England. At that time, since most netsuke have two little holes punched into their backs, the auction houses were stringing them together in groups of five or six, like beads, and selling each group for two or three pounds or, if the pieces were especially attractive, as much as five pounds. It was all somehow fitting, however, because the origins of netsuke were similarly humble.

In old Japan—before Cmdr. Matthew Calbraith Perry and his fleet of American ships sailed into the harbor of Uraga in 1853 and opened that reclusive and isolationist country to the Western world and its ways—Japanese men wore kimonos with no pockets. This gave men a need for something in which to carry around small objects like coins, keys, medicines and—let's be honest about it—opium and other narcotics.



South Sea Islands coral diver, in ebony, coral and gold (c. 1870).

To meet this need, Japanese artisans invented a small multicompartmented case called an inro, made of leather at first and eventually of wood covered with a decorative layer of lacquer. The inro was hung suspended on a string under the kimono's sash, or obi. But this container would have slipped out and fallen of its own weight to the floor if the string were just stuck loosely under the obi, so a toggle or counterweight was needed to lie heavily outside the obi and hold things in place. This was the first netsuke.

When inro were first used, back in the 16th century, these "pilot netsuke" were crude pieces of roots or wood or stone. But the Japanese are passionate lovers of art and beauty, and the workers making inro and netsuke for their (often aristocratic) compatriots started drawing attractive tiny designs on the wood or stones. It wasn't long before, working mainly in wood and ivory, they began carving the netsuke into little representations of men, women, animals and legendary and religious figures. In time, the carvings became more detailed and sophisticated, so that, by the 18th century, the best netsuke were comparable in quality to the best full-size sculptures being done in the rest of the world.

In one sense, they were superior to conventional sculptures. Ranging in height from only an inch or two to 6 inches, many of the pieces displayed astonishing detail, such as eyebrows, fingernails, and eyes and pupils inlaid with tiny bits of black or translucent horn or of coral. They were extraordinary achievements considering the lack of good magnification devices in those days and a testimony to the inborn serenity of the Japanese, enabling the carvers to work calmly and without impatience until every detail was perfect.

Interestingly enough, the Japanese themselves never really regarded netsuke as works of art until a few years ago—not even when Perry and his fellow seamen introduced the tiny carvings to the world, and the Americans and English, then the French and Germans and others, began to buy and collect them with increasing enthusiasm and excitement. To the Japanese, netsuke, however beautifully carved and exquisitely detailed, were still articles of clothing—to collect them as works of art made no more sense to the Japanese (at first) than collecting buttons does to many Americans. The result was that Japanese families practically gave netsuke away, for cigarettes and chocolate right after the war and, later, for a few yen.

The raised-eyebrows attitude, the laughter-barely-concealed at these foolish Occidentals who paid good money for little utilitarian objects that were no longer utilitarian now that Japanese men were wearing suits, continued even when American and other collectors tried to make the Japanese understand the wonderful miniature world they themselves had created. Netsuke, it was pointed out, is one of those rare forms of art invented in and confined to a single country; most other art forms have been developed and improved in many countries.

None of this made a dent in Japanese thinking. It was only when they came to realize the overwhelmingly sensible double reason for collecting netsuke—that they're so beautiful and were becoming so popular, increasing in value by the hour, making them good investments—that Japanese buyers began to show up in increasing numbers at dealers' shops and auction houses, bidding and sometimes outbidding Western collectors and acquiring netsuke for their museums and personal collections.

Today, many major museums throughout the world have outstanding netsuke collections. One of the best is at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City, and there are other excellent collections at the British Museum in London and the Tokyo National Museum.

The number of private collectors also seems to be increasing, as is the competitive spirit of the collectors. When, for example, a distinguished Oriental dealer such as Eskenazi Ltd. of London announces the sale of an important collection, well-heeled collectors line up outside its galleries hours ahead of opening time and take numbers in order to have early pick.

The fun of the hunt, however, is by no means gone from the hobby. Since there are still many noncollectors who own netsuke but have no real interest in them (like those servicemen in the Occupation Army after World War II who picked them up for bars of chocolate or cigarettes or the equivalent of pennies), it is still possible to find and buy superior-quality netsuke for a moderate price, getting lovely pieces and giving the owners a handsome profit. And there are thousands of netsuke of modest quality around worth no more than $100 or $200 and still available at those prices at auctions or from dealers or private individuals.

Like all artwork, the value of a piece depends upon the quality of the work and the reputation of the artist. The difference between a netsuke masterpiece by one of the best artists (Okatomo, Toyomasa, Tomotada, Kaigyokusai), worth thousands of dollars, and a routine netsuke worth $100 is like the difference between two paintings of rosy-cheeked ladies, one by Renoir and the other by a dabbler who knocks out stale paintings on the Left Bank.

Nor is antiquity necessarily a factor, though obviously a fine old piece by a rare artist has added value. Netsuke are no longer being worn, of course, but many modern carvers are at work in Tokyo, Kyoto and other Japanese cities creating pieces for purchase by collectors and museums. While none of these pieces has yet achieved a price in the $40,000 or $50,000 range, a piece by a good young artist like Kangyoku, Bishu or Hideyuki can sell for $5000 or more, and a piece by an especially admired modern artist like Masatoshi will often sell for $10,000 to $15,000. Nor is a famous signature a necessity. Many fine netsuke are unsigned—it was the tradition until the 18th century—and fine unsigned pieces often sell for high prices.

Speaking of signatures, you'll note that most carvers only use single names. This is because, in former days of great class consciousness in Japan, only members of the samurai and other upper classes were allowed to have family names. Carvers, usually considered lower-class workmen, had to make do with just one name. These days, of course, Japanese artists have first, last and sometimes middle names like everybody else, but most of them continue the old tradition and use just a single name.

One of the world's best-known and most knowledgeable collectors is Raymond Bushell, an attorney who came to Japan in 1945 as captain of a sea-air rescue boat and stayed on to live and practice law in Tokyo. He has written eight of the best books about netsuke. Bushell won't tell anyone how many netsuke he owns, but exhibitions of his work confirm that he has one of the best collections in the world, and the general opinion is that he has at least 5000 pieces. Now in his 70s and semi-retired, Bushell was formerly in heavy demand by American corporations and individuals who had legal or business needs in Japan, and he was often so busy that he insisted on sending members of his staff to meetings rather than go himself. Savvy businessmen soon learned that the way to get Ray Bushell in person was to buy an important netsuke or two and tell Bushell about it, thereby insuring that he not only would be present at the meeting but also would show up early.

Another well-known collector was the late Julius Katchen, a much-admired concert pianist who once admitted that the main reason he appeared on television and radio shows was so he could mention his collecting in the hope that listeners might sell him their netsuke. Others who collect or have collected netsuke include actress/singer Barbra Streisand; John D. MacDonald, the novelist and author of the Travis McGee mysteries; the late James Hilton, author of Lost Horizon and Goodbye, Mr. Chips; the late actor Hans Conreid, who sometimes missed television and stage appearances because he had learned that there was a good netsuke or netsuke collection for sale; fashion designer Bill Blass; Irving Gould, chairman of the board of Commodore, the big computer company; and a busy literary agent named Scott Meredith, who will always tear himself loose from a meeting, however important, if he's told there's someone on the phone with netsuke to sell.

As you can see, netsuke collectors can grow pretty passionate about their pastime. Give some thought to collecting netsuke yourself. You'll love 'em.

FOCUS ON FITNESS

BY STUART M. BERGER, M.D., AND MICHAEL O'SHEA, PH.D.

Do you have a question about exercise or diet? Send it to: Focus on Fitness, PARADE, Box 5276, Grand Central Sta., New York, N.Y. 10123.

Q. Are there specific types of exercise that burn more calories than others?

A. Exercises that use large muscle groups and are performed over an extended period of time will burn more calories.

Keith Image Bank

OPTIMAL

Brisk walking, running, cycling and swimming are all continuous exercises and, as such, they burn more calories.

G. Couvrette

MEDIUM

Tennis, racquetball and softball, though strenuous, are not continuous and therefore do not burn calories at the same rate.

Madison Dawes

LIGHT

Gardening and golf, while soothing to your psyche, do not require the same caloric expenditure as continuous large-muscle-group exercise.

Q. What is magnesium and what does it do?

A. Magnesium is a mineral. It is necessary for the proper functioning of the body's cells and for normal nerve and muscle functioning. It is important for the metabolism of calcium and vitamin C. Magnesium has been used successfully in combating the effects of mental depression and stress.

Stuart M. Berger, M.D., is the author of Dr. Berger's Immune Power Diet. Michael O'Shea, Ph.D., is founder and chairman of the Sports Training Institute in New York City.

WHAT'S UP THIS WEEK

TELEVISION

THE MERRY MONTH OF MAY—"SWEEPS" PERIOD, when the networks vie for ratings—is a great time to stock the fridge and cuddle up in front of the set.

The 38 million people who made North and South the ninth-highest-rated miniseries of all time when it aired last November will cheer the arrival of North and South, Book II. (It's based on John Jakes' Love and War, which is being reissued in paperback by Dell, $5.95.) Although some folks are bound to feel that the 12-hour epic drags on as long as the Civil War, many will find its combination of family saga, romance and battlefield action as irresistible as stars like Lesley-Anne Down, Kirstie Alley, Patrick Swayze, Linda Evans and Gene Kelly. May 4,5,6,7,8 and 11 on ABC, 9-11 pm ET.

PLAYING REAL-LIFE MASS-MURDERER TED Bundy for NBC's miniseries Deliberate Stranger wreaked havoc with actor Mark Harmon's personal life. "This was highly emotionally charged stuff, very real," he says, "and there were times during the eight weeks of shooting when it was not easy to let go of it. People who've known me for 20 years came over to the set to say 'hi' and left after two minutes, saying, 'Talk to you after this is over.' Bundy was a chameleon—there is a great contingent of people who, to this day, can't believe he was guilty. He was the nice guy you wanted your daughter to bring home. And, frankly, I thought that his charming side would be easy to find in myself. But the other stuff became easier to find. And you get involved." Harmon's chilling portrayal of the man wanted by the FBI in the disappearance of 48 women can be seen tonight and tomorrow, 9-11 pm ET.

MOVIES

Tri-Star

LOOK CLOSELY AT the picture, and you'll see an arm around Ally Sheedy that doesn't belong to co-star Steve Guttenberg in the movie Short Circuit. It's part of Number Five, an Army-programmed killer robot turned cupcake. "A stroke of lightning wipes out Number Five's warmaking circuitry and gives him a touch of life, a a heart," says Sheedy. "You can interpret that any way you want." Her character takes the transformed creature in and teaches him how to cope—to fry an omelette, dance, take care of her kittens. He shows her how to outsmart the Army. Opening Friday.

HOME VIDEO

DESPITE THE NOTION THAT BASEBALL MOVIES strike out at the box office, some of the best movies Hollywood ever produced have baseball themes or backgrounds. The Bad News Bears, Bang the Drum Slowly, The Bingo Long Traveling All-Stars and Motor Kings, Damn Yankees, The Natural and Pride of the Yankees are all available now on videocassette.

MAGAZINES

A GLAMOUR MAGAZINE SURVEY OF 25,000 readers—most of them women between the ages of 18 and 35—reflects a powerful swing to life's spiritual side: 77% pray, and 87% feel that God is always helping them or has helped them through a particular period in their lives. These readers seem to choose aspects of their religion they can live with and ignore what they can't, without discarding their faith. For example, the poll finds that nearly half disagree with their church's teaching on premarital sex, and a third (42% of the single women) disagree with their religion on abortion. In the May issue.

SPIKE JONES' ZANY TAKEOFFS ON POPULAR MUSIC MADE HIM ONE OF THE BEST-SELLING RECORD ARTISTS OF THE POST-WAR 1940'S

He started out as a drummer for performers like Bing Crosby, Hoagy Carmichael, and Fibber McGee & Molly. He then organized a strictly "after hours" "corn-band", the City Slickers, using such instruments as washboards, cowbells and automobile horns. The rest is history. One hit after another—from "Der Fuehrer's Face" to "Ghost Riders In The Sky" to "Two Front Teeth" and many, many more.

This particular set contains several rare recordings of zany humor and satire—recordings taken from his successful music career of nearly twenty years—the highlights of which are represented in this box set.

Young Astronauts:

The Word Is Still 'Go'

Andy Levin

At Valley Middle School in Oakwood, N.J., space exploration gets serious study. Students built model of shuttle.

At the close of last year, I warned in PARADE that "our kids are woefully ill-prepared for the future." This was my troubled conclusion from research by the Young Astronaut Council. As its chairman, I am proud to report our kids have passed their first test.

CHILDREN ACROSS America beheld on television the flaming end of the Challenger space shuttle. All on board died in the quest to expand the frontiers of knowledge—in pursuit of the answers to where we came from, who we are, what we can be.

There was special poignancy in the death of the astronaut/schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe, who had ventured into space seeking to stir in young students new appreciation of the tough disciplines they must master if they too are to explore the universe.

The Young Astronaut Council helped sponsor the Teacher in Space launch and also brought Christa McAuliffe's son, Scott, 9, and his third-grade classmates from Concord, N.H., to Florida to watch it. Joining the council was a Young Astronaut chapter from Teaneck, N.J.—seven inner-city kids—who shared the experience.

Ben still doesn't fully understand why. But he has plunged with new determination into a study of space. He reads everything he can find about space. He also has assembled a model shuttle called "Challenger."

Leading child psychiatrists I consulted after the tragedy said children should be encouraged to express how they felt about it. This advice went out on our electronic network, Astronet, to more than 6000 Young Astronaut chapter leaders, and written responses of children from the Arctic Circle to the Florida Keys poured in. They felt that Christa McAuliffe was their space teacher and, saddened by her violent death, were even more determined to learn all they might to explore space.

With startling maturity, the children seemed to accept that risks go with exploration, that progress has a price. A few of their responses, excerpted here, show they have the "right stuff":

- "When I saw the explosion... I started crying. Christa was just like my mom or something... and I was saying, 'Oh, my God, Christa McAuliffe was aboard that shuttle!' I am trying not to let it stop me. I'm wanting to be an astronaut." —Girl, 13, Hobbs, N.M.
- "If our ancestors had been afraid to cross over the ice, we wouldn't be here today." —Eskimo boy, Mt. Village, Alaska
- "If we stop going into space, people everywhere will die a little in their hearts. I want to make sure no silly-thinking adult stops people from being in space." —Boy, 11, Daly City, Calif.
- "Challenger was a terrific lady, and we must rebuild her again, only better." —Girl, 9, Chicago
- "When I saw the explosion and learned that no one had survived, I burst out in tears. I had to go to my school psychologist for help... But I realize that life and the space program must go on." —Boy, 15, West New York, N.J.
- "We should honor the brave astronauts who seek their dreams... I want to join the Young Astronaut Program and find my dream." —Boy, Darlington, Ind.

Christa McAuliffe wasn't granted her wish to teach from space, but she has caused us to want to correct the U.S. education lag she'd sought to confront.

America's commitment to education is broad. It is also thin—and falling dangerously behind that of other advanced nations. We build the schools, but in comparative international tests U.S. students are outperformed by students from rival industrial nations and have placed last frequently.

A look at Japan, our principal industrial competitor, reveals that what is ardently respected in the home and rigorously taught in the schools translates into superiority on the factory floor and in the world's marketplaces. In Japan, says Merry White, professor of education and East Asian studies at Harvard, "any [factory] worker can be expected to understand statistical material, work from complex graphs and charts, and perform sophisticated mathematical operations."

Not so in the U.S.

The Japanese don't spend any more on education than we do, but they take more interest in it.

In Japan, schoolchildren have 240 school days a year, average two hours of homework each day and uniformly take advanced courses in math, science and languages. Their attitude: "Hard work pays off." In the U.S., school days total 180 a year, homework averages a half-hour a day, and the advanced courses in math, science and foreign languages are avoided. The attitude here: "Find the easy way out."

Bottom line: At fifth-grade level, a recent study shows, the worst Japanese class was ahead of the best American class in math; the average high school graduate in Japan is as well educated as the average U.S. college graduate. Many Europeans, particularly the Germans and Russians, also outdo American students.

The Young Astronaut Council holds that our failure to value education in this country teaches an inescapable lesson: Either we must strive to excel, or we will continue to drop behind.

The Young Astronaut Program grew from an idea Jack Anderson shared with President Reagan in 1984. Today, there are 6000 chapters and school programs in math, science and technology affecting 250,000 children aged 6 to 16. To learn more about the program, write: Young Astronaut Council, Chapter Information, Dept. P, P.O. Box 65432, Washington, D.C. 20036.

IN STEP WITH: Ralph Lauren

BY JAMES BRADY

WHEN GARY Hart was running for President a couple of years ago, some of us were sitting around on chairs or on the floor of an apartment on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan having a drink and listening to Hart tell us about tomorrow in phrases out of Jack Kennedy's yesterday.

The apartment belonged to a wealthy New Yorker who owned a big spread out in Colorado, and he liked Senator Hart and wanted the rest of us to like him too. And, if we liked him well enough, to donate some money.

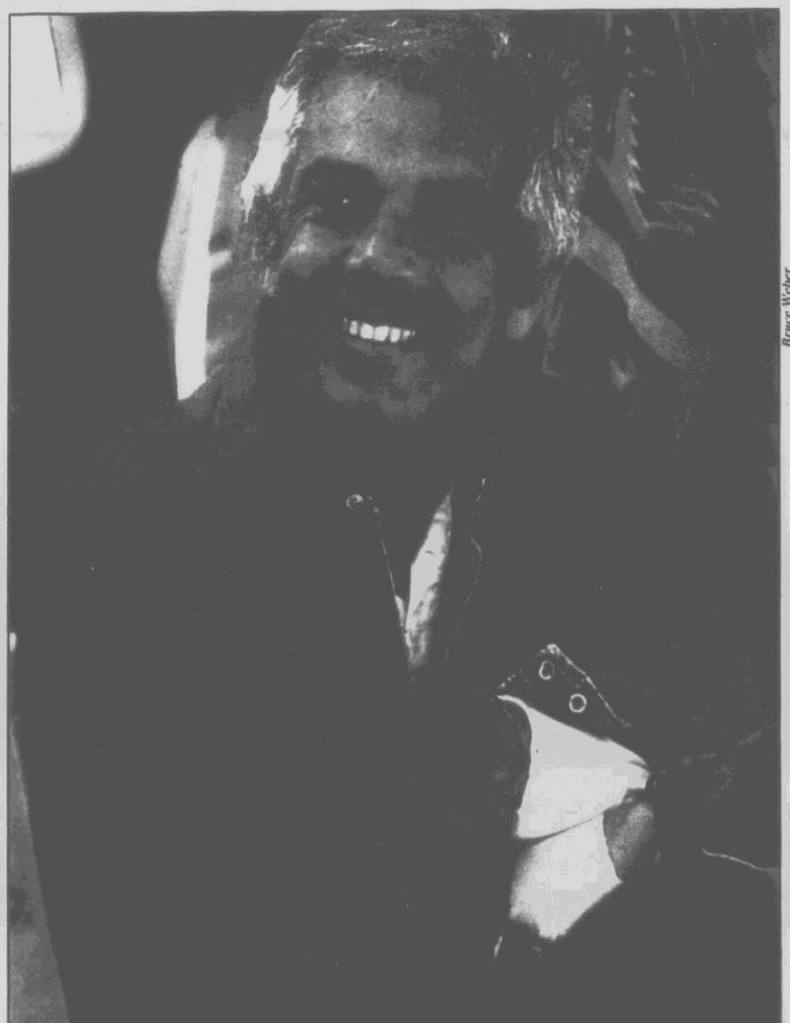
Fashion designers, like golf pros and actors, used to be considered privileged servants—people you retained or who entertained you, but not the sort you had in for dinner. Lauren and a few others like him have changed all that. In what passes for society today, fashion designers are celebrities.

Ralph is a small, trim native of the Bronx with a slight speech impediment and cropped, wiry gray hair like a Brillo pad. He earns perhaps $15 million a year designing women's clothes and menswear and things for kids and perfumes and home furnishings, and he does it on his own, refusing to sell out to the conglomerates, and he does it about as well as anyone can. He has this city boy's vision of how Americans should look—a blend of Ivy Leaguer and the last Texas cowpuncher and every old Fred Astaire movie you've ever watched on television. I know this sounds confusing, but Ralph has the artistry to make it work.

BORN: Oct. 14, 1939, in the Bronx.
GIVEN NAME: Ralph Lifshitz.
PERSONAL: Married Ricky Law Beer in 1964; two sons, Andrew and David, and one daughter, Dylan.
FIRST JOB: Stock boy at Alexander's Department Store.
CAREER START: Designing neckties for Beau Brummell Ties.
AWARDS: A nine-time winner of the Coty, which was the fashion industry's most prestigious honor.



Bruce Weber

He has a city boy's vision of how Americans should look—a blend of Ivy Leaguer and Texas cowpuncher.

This Wednesday, he'll show us how he thinks American women will look this fall. Remember his clothes for Diane Keaton in "Annie Hall," for Redford in "The Great Gatsby"? Ralph Lauren at his elegant best.

The experts consider him not so much a creator as an editor. He takes such different elements as a patchwork quilt skirt and a sleek silk blouse and combines them in fashion for the '80s. He invents nothing but brilliantly puts together bits and pieces from the genius of others and tailors it all to today.

It is a talent that has given him, his wife, Ricky, and their kids a very comfortable life indeed.

There is the apartment hanging over Manhattan's Central Park, a place on the ocean near Montauk Point, a getaway in the islands and that Colorado ranch. This will give you an idea: The ranch once served as a movie location for John Wayne's True Grit. But when I see Ralph out on Long Island, he's driving an old Jeep or jogging in a beat-up pair of shorts. In town, he seems to live in faded jeans, curiously not his own label but that of Levi Strauss.

He has all this money and works in a cramped studio in midtown Manhattan, he poses for his own prize-winning ads, and he admits he rarely reads anything, even when it is about him. In a business dominated by contradictions, Ralph Lauren seems that rarest of beings: the happily married man.

BRADY'S BITS

We are all entitled to be silly once in awhile, and 10 years ago Ralph flirted with becoming an actor. He'd been hanging around Robert Redford and caught the bug. Fortunately, Ralph came to his senses, waved bye-bye to Hollywood and went back to what he does best: making great clothes.

Why Are We Offering Famous Nationally Advertised™ Sato™ Sweetheart Watches™ for as low as $2.00?

Hard to believe, but true!

As part of a nationwide advertising publicity campaign, a leading New York Jewelry firm will offer one million (1,000,000) of its most expensive Sato™ quartz watches—the Famous Nationally Advertised™ Sweetheart watch—for as low as $2.00 each to the first one million persons who writes to the company address (below) before midnight, May 31, 1986.

These are the same famous Sato™ Sweetheart watches nationally advertised by others in leading media for many times the price. They are the best-selling and most expensive quartz watches of their kind ever sold by this multi-million-dollar New York jewelry firm.

Each watch displays the month, day, hour, minute, and second, and has a precision quartz movement so powerful it never needs winding and is accurate to within seconds per month. Best of all, you can match your watch to your wardrobe by choosing from five exciting fashion colors. You can even wear a different watch every day to add "spice" to your fashion statement.

These nationally advertised Sato Sweetheart quartz watches will not be sold at this publicity price by the company in any store. There is a limit of 5 watches per address at this price, but orders mailed early enough (before May 25) may request up to 10. Each watch is covered by a full one-year money-back guarantee.

Enlarged to show detail

To order, mail your name and address and your choice of watch color. Take advantage of our low, low price by ordering any five for only $10—any two for $5—or $2.88 per individual watch. Add $2 shipping and handling no matter how many watches you are requesting. (New York residents add sales tax.) Allow up to 6-8 weeks for shipment. Make check payable to: CVP, Co. Mail to: CVP, SATO Sweetheart Watch Offer, Dept. 931-141, Box 1295, Westbury, New York 11595. (V22090)

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE TWO GREAT ARMIES FACE EACH OTHER BENEATH THE WALLS OF CAMELOT. AND IN THAT MOMENT BEFORE DAWN WHEN THE UNRISEN SUN SETS THE HIGHEST CLOUDS AFIRE, PRINCE VALIANT GIVES THE ORDER TO ADVANCE

"TO CAMELOT!" HE CRIES. "TO CAMELOT!" THE WORDS ARE ECHOED BY A THOUSAND LIPS AS VAL PRESSES FORWARD WITH HIS SAXONS.

BENEATH A DENSE COVER OF MORNING MIST THE RIVER TEST IS EASILY FORDED. PRINCE VALIANT'S FORCE BREAKS THROUGH ON THE OTHER SIDE. TERRIBLE WAR CRIES FILL THE AIR, AND THEN THE BRITTLE RASP OF SWORD ON SWORD.

THE CONTEST IS FURIOUS BUT NO SIDE WINS A CLEAR ADVANTAGE. NOW VAL PASSES THE WORD TO HIS MEN: BEGIN A SLOW RETREAT. FOR THE PLAN IS TO LURE MORDRED'S MAIN ARMY AWAY FROM THE PALACE AND DEEP INTO ARTHUR'S TERRITORY.

ROLLO AND ORLOG RALLY THE SAXONS. GRADUALLY, IMPERCEPTIBLY, THEY GIVE UP GROUND TO THE ADVANCING FOE. MORDRED'S MEN PRESS FORWARD. AND THEN SUDDENLY, AS IF AT A SIGNAL, MORDRED'S MEN WILL COME NO FARTHER. THE BATTLE'S DIN ABATES, AND IN THE AWFUL SILENCE VAL KNOWS THAT SOMETHING IS VERY WRONG.

GEE, DADDY... THAT'S TOO BAD
LOOK WHAT I DID IN MY SHOP
YOU SHOULD BE MORE CAREFUL, DAD
IT SEEMS LIKE NO ONE REALLY CARES
YOUR FATHER IS FEELING SORRY FOR HIMSELF
WE'D BETTER MAKE HIM FEEL BETTER
HOW'S THIS, HONEY?
HERE'S A SODA, DAD
PROP YOUR FEET UP ON THIS, DADDY
NOW THAT'S MORE LIKE IT
