Forest Blaze Breaks Out Anew In Pender

By JODY TAYLOR

Associated Press Writer

HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (AP) — A stubborn, week-old forest blaze that firefighters thought they had whipped appeared to have eluded them again today although they burned thousands of acres in its path in an effort to head it off.

"I wish I had never become optimistic in the first place," Tom Hegele, a spokesman for the state Division of Forest Resources, said shortly after he learned the fire may have slipped through fire lines shortly before midnight Sunday.

"We're going to try to reinforce the northern section of this fire," Rebecca Richards, spokeswoman for the state Division of Forest Resources, said today. "Yesterday the winds were blowing from the south. They were pushing on that fire line in the Shaken Creek area."

"The other area (of concern) is the southern section of the fire," she said. "As you've seen so far, anything goes with this wind. What we get isn't necessarily what they (forecasters) call for."

Anticipating the direction of afternoon sea breezes, helicopter pilots dropped chemicals, and weary firefighters deliberately burned 5,000 to 10,000 acres in about 2½ hours Sunday to rob the fire of fuel.

"If we had not, we'd probably have a 100,000-acre fire out of control," said Tommy Thompson, incident commander for the state Division of Forest Resources. "There's no doubt in my mind that it would have crossed the Cape Fear River and homes would have been lost."

The optimism was dampened when winds increased and a fire broke out

Common Market To Bar Imports Of Fresh Food

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The 12 Common Market members today agreed to ban imports of fresh foods from the Soviet Union and six Eastern European countries within a 640-mile radius of the Chernobyl nuclear plant, a senior official said.

"There is an agreement," said Willy de Clercq, an official in charge of the European Economic Community's foreign trade relations. "It will be published (in the official register) as soon as possible."

The ban on fresh foods imports from Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Poland and the Soviet Union was first proposed last Tuesday.

On Saturday, after five days of negotiations, the Common Market announced that all members agreed to it, but Italy later said it had been misunderstood and would not participate.

The Italians said they would not approve the joint ban until the Common Market reached agreement on radiation standards for food traded within the Western European bloc.

De Clercq said today the import ban would go into effect regardless of whether the other issue was resolved. He did not say when imports would be halted or for how long. The original proposal called for a ban at least through May 31.

Affected by the ban will be meat, poultry, game, freshwater fish, snails, frog legs, milk products, fruits and vegetables. Last year, the Common Market imported $730 million in fresh foods from Eastern Europe.

The Common Market proposed the ban after the April 26 accident at the Soviet nuclear power plant spewed a cloud of radiation over much of Europe.

The Common Market's executive branch last Tuesday decided to ban imports of fresh meat, cattle and pigs from the seven countries. However, the community required unanimous approval to include fresh foods in the ban.

Mother's Day Is Special In Different Ways For All

By SUE HINSON

Reflector Staff Writer

While two new mothers were celebrating Mother's Day in style at Pitt County Memorial Hospital Sunday, Donna Daughtry, a long-time mother, was spending her special day in quite a different fashion.

The wife of Edward Daughtry of Ayden, Mrs. Daughtry had a leisurely lunch with her mother and their spouses while her children — Lauri, Alan and Missy — were in parts elsewhere.

"It was a non-traditional, but very special Mother's Day, because even though my children were not at home, their reasons for being away were the best presents I could ever have received," Mrs. Daughtry said.

Her oldest daughter, Lauri, could not come to Ayden to visit her mom because she lives out of state with her new husband, a set of circumstances Mrs. Daughtry said fills her with a sense of accomplishment. "It means she's independent, happy and having a good life. That's more than I'll ever need," Mrs. Daughtry said.

Missy and Alan, the Daughtrys' other two children were away on a beach trip. "That was special, too," Mrs. Daughtry said, "because it means they were sharing something. It means that they love each other enough to spend time together and that our family is united, that I have done my job well. After all, isn't that what mothers are for — to be the force that cements families?"

At PCMH, hospital staff said a boy and a girl were born on Mother's Day. The new mothers could not be reached today.

Mothers as the fabric that binds was a popular theme Sunday as several local churches celebrated Mother's Day.

Cornerstone Baptist Church, for example, honored mothers with a special sermon: "A Model of Motherhood." According to Mrs. Maurice Nixon, Cornerstone administrative assistant, listening to the sermon reminded her of the good qualities instilled in her by her mother and how those teachings stood her in stead whenever she strayed. Mrs. Nixon has one child, a girl.

While Sunday was a day for remembering and resting for most, it wasn't for local florists. According to

Marie Cox, owner of Cox Floral Service, deliveries were carried out throughout the day. "This past week and Sunday were some of our busiest times ever," she said. "Everyone loves to give and receive flowers," she added. "They always fit, they always look nice and they mean you care."

Cookies, candy, candles, cards, bulbs, flowers.

Add those items together, throw in some letters in the mailbox and phone calls and the result is fund raising for school projects, from band uniforms to athletics.

Anyone who has answered the doorbell and bought candy, opened a letter and answered it with a check has participated in a school fund drive. Those who have probably wonder just how these projects get started and exactly where their money goes.

Officials from Pitt County's two school systems say that before a student or a parent knocks on the door or a letter arrives in the mailbox, however, there's planning and supervision that goes into the fund drive.

Both Pitt and Greenville schools have guidelines for fund raising that address issues such as profit margins, supervision and participants. Although these guidelines differ, the focus is similar, say school officials — keep younger kids out and when it comes to instruction or facilities, restrict fund raising to supplementary projects.

A fund-raising policy that covers both systems has been written and will be implemented when the two school systems merge July 1, 1986. That policy closely follows Pitt County's current guidelines, say school officials.

In Pitt County, local school advisory councils and school principals select, approve and supervise fund-raising based on county school board policy. "It is fully the responsibility of the principal and the advisory councils to screen and plan projects," according to John McKnight, deputy superintendent. The projects are indirectly monitored by the central office through a county office staff member that attends each advisory council meeting.

The guidelines prohibit students in grades kindergarten-eight from raising money, based on an often stepped-on Southern Association of Colleges and Schools stipulation that precludes young children from fund drives. "We know there are some younger kids out there doing fund raising, but under the guidelines that's not supposed to happen," McKnight said. "We frown heavily upon that."

The guidelines discourage projects with a profit margin under 35 percent, McKnight said, and require that clubs, organizations and classes limit their fund-raising projects to one per year. That one must be planned and approved at the beginning of each school year.

The reason for these limitations, McKnight said, is to keep community coffers from being depleted by constant fund raising. "Smaller fund-raising projects could offset the success of more traditional funding needs" such as band uniforms, he said.

No written guidelines prohibiting specific types of projects exist, but McKnight said projects must be legal and sales drives must offer reasonable, sound, school-related items. Large shows at schools are discouraged because profit margins are often low. No more than one show a year can be scheduled. The county

Toppling Tombstone Kills 4-Year-Old Boy

NORTH RIVERSIDE, Ill. (AP) — A 4-year-old boy was killed during a Mother's Day outing to a cemetery when he was crushed by a 500-pound headstone that toppled from a grave, police say.

Brandon Schwartz was pinned beneath the marker in Jewish Waldheim Cemetery where he and his parents, Marvin and Rose Schwartz of Chicago, had gone to visit the grave of Mrs. Schwartz's mother, police said Sunday. "Apparently the young boy and his parents were walking among sites when the monument just fell over," said North Riverside police Sgt. Robert Slak.

"No one knew how it fell or why it fell," added police Sgt. John O'Rourke. "This is one of the older cemeteries with high tombstones."

O'Rourke said that the boy was walking behind his parents when Schwartz said he heard a thud and turned and saw his son under the gravestone. The boy's father was able to lift the stone and then sought help, police said.

The stone weighed about 500 pounds, and four officers were needed to lift it later, O'Rourke said.

"I guess it was adrenaline," he said of Schwartz's feat. The child was pronounced dead at Loyola University Medical Center in Maywood at about 1:10 p.m., said spokeswoman Pat Hartnett.

"It's just unbelievable," said Sylvia Benish, a neighbor to the Schwartz family. "He was so handsome and so smart."

Hand-Smoked Bonnets Given To NICU Infants

Members of the Down East chapter of the Smocking Arts Guild of America presented miniature hand-smoked bonnets to infants in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) of the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina at Pitt Memorial.

NICU head nurse Rhonda Mills accepted the 35 bonnets. The infants wore their new pastel bonnets in honor of Mother's Day.

Sewing and smocking the bonnets is an annual community service project of the chapter.

Meetings are held the first Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Greenville Community Center.

Fact-Finding Scholar Casts A Nay Against Voting Story

DEAR ABBY: I would like to comment about the letter from an Alabama reader who gave examples of "how one vote changed history." His purpose, to encourage voting, was a good one, but most of his facts were wrong.

He said: "In 1645, one vote gave Oliver Cromwell control of England."

Wrong! In 1645, Oliver Cromwell became leader of the New Model (Puritan) Army, but NOT of England, which was then in the midst of a civil war. He didn't establish his own government until 1649 — and then did so in part by expelling opponents from Parliament. It wasn't primarily votes but strong leadership and military force that established his control.

He said: "In 1649, one vote caused King Charles of England to be executed."

Wrong! In 1649, King Charles I of England was executed — but not as a result of a one-vote margin. Cromwell's soldiers excluded the moderate majority from the House of Commons and shut down the pro-royalist House of Lords entirely; a newly established revolutionary tribunal then tried the king and overwhelmingly condemned him to death.

He stated: "In 1845, one vote brought Texas into the Union."

Wrong! In 1845, the U.S. Senate passed the convention annexing Texas by two votes (27-25), not one; and it entered into force only after ratification by the Texas Congress and voters.

He stated: "In 1876, one vote changed France from a monarchy to a republic."

Wrong! In 1876, France was not a monarchy; it had become a republic in 1875, by a larger margin. (Its empire had ended in 1870; previous monarchies ended in 1830 and 1848.)

He stated: "In 1923, one vote gave Adolf Hitler leadership of the Nazi Party."

Wrong! Hitler acquired dictatorial control of the Nazi Party in 1933, not 1923, and by a party congress vote of 553-1 — not exactly a one-vote margin.

Abby, if your Alabama correspondent wanted his argument to be effective, he should have checked his facts. — LOUISE E. HOFFMAN, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. HOFFMAN: I was hesitant to publish his letter without checking his facts, but he seemed so cotton pickin' sure, I didn't question his sources. My fault, not his.

DEAR ABBY: You tell old people it's all right for them to touch, hug and kiss, but what about getting between the sheets for a little sex once in a while? We are both 85 years old and in good health, and we are very good friends.

Is this an unpardonable sin? Please answer in the newspaper — maybe someone else would like to know. — H.B. IN ILLINOIS

DEAR H.B.: I am not authorized to pardon sins, but if I were, I would worry less about what two old lovers did between the sheets and more about man's inhumanity to man.

DEAR ABBY: You've had a lot of letters about adopted children in your column lately. I'd like to add to it.

After I was born, my mother was not able to have any more children, so she and my father adopted a 5-day-old boy. (I am also a boy.) In their determination to make their adopted son feel as loved and wanted as their natural child (me), they went overboard. I heard that "Jimmy" was their "chosen" child, which made me think that when I was born they had to take what they got — but Jimmy was special, so they "chose" him.

I grew up feeling inferior and less wanted than my little brother. I felt that I had to prove my worthiness by being competitive with him. I wanted to love him, but it was hard when he was given preferential treatment and told he was their "special, chosen child." I know my parents loved me, too — but it took a lot of understanding, not to mention several years with a psychoanalyst, to straighten my head out.

Print this. It may help other well-meaning parents. — NAMELESS

SPACE BETWEEN FRONT TEETH?

Too much space between teeth can detract from your appearance, especially if the unwanted space is in the front of your mouth where it is easily seen. This is sometimes caused by a congenital condition, one that you have inherited. It can also result from harmful habits in childhood, such as thumb-sucking. When the force of the thumb is exerted against the front teeth it can move them into a forward position, making spaces appear between the teeth. Another cause is tonguethrusting or reverse swallowing. This also puts pressure on the front teeth and pushes them forward, creating unwanted spaces.

If you have this problem, call my office for an appointment to find out what kind of treatment I recommend to eliminate the spaces. Straightening misaligned teeth by orthodontic means may be one solution. If it's not a case of misaligned teeth, I may be able to rebuild some of the teeth cosmetically to improve your appearance.

Back Pain

Mark E. Jarmel, D.C.

Most cases of back or neck pain involve pinched or irritated nerves. We tend to abuse our backs, year after year, with poor posture, improper lifting and repeated stresses and strains. The lower back is especially prone to injury and its joints can be pushed out of alignment with painful results. Muscles, discs and ligaments can be stretched or torn causing pain in the back, hips or legs. Chiropractic treatment has helped thousands of people find relief without drugs and without surgery. Don't suffer needlessly, find out if you can be helped with safe, effective chiropractic care.

Martin, Bishop Tutu Challenge Students To Accept Responsibilities, Leadership

By The Associated Press
Gov. Jim Martin challenged graduates of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to step forward and take the rites of passage into society by accepting the burden of responsibility in an increasingly complex world.

"It's your turn to help decide," Martin told a Mother's Day crowd of 21,000 during commencement at UNC-Chapel Hill. "It's important to learn that there are many challenges in life which we have a duty to face. The stakes can be great; so must your commitment."

As graduates choose how to guide the nation into the 21st century, they will have to decide whether to help the poor and needy "in ways that continue to leave generations increasingly dependent on public assistance, or whether we will find equally generous new concepts that can break out of that cycle," said Martin.

This generation will also have to wrestle with budget deficits, tax increases, changing pay scales for the best public school teachers and self-determination in South America, he said.

"Did we learn the so-called lesson of Vietnam?" he asked. "If so, what was it? That we will have to pay any price, bear any burden, endure any hardship in the cause of freedom? Except for foreigners? Did we learn that our allies will be conquered if we refuse to support them?"

Meanwhile, South African Bishop Desmond Tutu told graduating students at North Carolina Central University that even violence may be necessary in the fight for freedom.

"There's no doubt in my heart we are going to be free," Tutu told 750 graduates and 11,500 spectators at North Carolina Central University's commencement Saturday. "We want this new state to come about reasonably peacefully, and we want it to come soon."

"Peaceful protest has become virtually impossible in our land," he said. "We don't want to use violence, but what can we do? There can come a time when it will be justified to use force to overthrow an unjust organization."

Tutu said people should not believe South African government officials who say they are gradually eliminating apartheid.

"Apartheid has moved into its final stage, which is the denationalization of blacks," he said. "Black children are made to starve, not because there is no food. They're made to starve by deliberate government policy. We drink water to fill our stomachs in a land that is a net exporter of food. The policy that causes this suffering deliberately is evil.

"For if that policy continues to rub in the dust the dignity of God's children, simply and solely because of the color of their skin, and if it cocks its snout at the world, then we won't have stability and peace anywhere," said Tutu, who received an honorary degree of doctor of humane letters.

Tutu lauded college students for helping to change the moral climate in the United States.

"Young people have discovered some things are more important than even good grades, good university degrees," he said. "What you have done is said to the victims of apartheid. 'You are not alone.'"

Commencement ceremonies for more than 1,900 graduates of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro also focused on the search for answers to world problems.

Author and educator Maya Angelou praised the values of a liberal education, saying studies in democracy, history and religion "have primed you to cope with the enigma of morality upon which

Drought

The drought conditions which are gripping North Carolina and much of the south have reached serious proportions.

Agricultural Extension Agent Mitch Smith said last week that eastern North Carolina has experienced its driest spring on record and that vegetation has reached the critical stage.

The lack of rain has forced farmers to alter their planting schedules at this critical time. It does no good to plant crops if no rainfall is in sight to help its growth. Tobacco plants and other crops already in the fields are struggling.

Added to the farmers' plight is the tinder box conditions in area forests. As the forest fire in Pender County has proven, a brush fire can turn into an uncontrollable inferno under such conditions.

No comment we can make can change the dry conditions, of course. All we can do is wait until nature decides to send the clouds and the welcome raindrops fall. In the meantime, however, a serious drought situation becomes every more critical.

Adventure

The premise that high adventure must entail risks to life and limb as well as new peaks in human discomfort has been reinforced. Members of the International Polar Expedition that set out to duplicate the feat of polar explorer Admiral Robert Peary returned to the United States recently and a spokesman described the adventure as "an enlightening experience."

That was an understatement.

The party often endured temperatures of minus 70 degrees. Two members had to be flown out — one because of frostbite; another had a sled roll over him. It does not sound like a nice way to welcome the arrival of spring though the adventurers may tell you otherwise.

As a matter of record, Adm. Peary had his problems, too. After setting up a base camp on Resolution Bay (in the Northwest Territories) that early explorer found himself running short of supplies and decided to make the final dash to the north pole with a Negro servant (Matthew Henson) and four Eskimos.

He is said to have navigated solely by sextant, so this year's expedition could do no less. They also ruled out any flying-in of supplies to the team, which meant having to carry everything they would need and a lot of things they hoped would not be needed.

Peary claimed to have reached the pole and returned in 52 days. The 1986 expedition set out on its polar dash on March 8 and reached its destination on May 1. It flew back to base camp.

That suggests the admiral had better weather or a better-motivated dog team. An Eskimo accent in shouting "mush!" could have been a factor.

At least two of our modern adventurers are looking forward to crossing the Antarctic continent by dogsled (from east to west), crossing the South Pole in 1988 or 1989.

They give no indication of thinking all their self-induced discomfort and peril is really irrelevant to the value of what they accomplish.

That is "adventure?"

From One President To Another

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's no reason to expect Jimmy Carter to like Ronald Reagan but he might want to consider leaving Amy out of it.

Carter tried once before, using Amy to make a point against Reagan and it was a political faux pas.

Now he's done it again.

This time the former president was criticizing the U.S. bombing of Libya.

Carter was one of the few politicians who chose to second-guess the raid.

His former vice president, Walter

F. Mondale, supported Reagan's decision to bomb Libya. Mondale, who ran against Reagan in 1984, said he believed the U.S. action might prod European democracies into greater cooperation to combat terrorism.

When Mondale was asked about Carter's position on Libya, the former vice president said simply, "I disagree with him."

Carter argues that the Reagan administration's preoccupation with Col. Moammar Khadafy had transformed the Libyan leader from an outcast to a hero. On that point, he'd find plenty of support among politicians and many experts on the Middle East and terrorism.

The former president describes Khadafy as "an abominable person," and said, "There's no doubt in my mind that Khadafy has plotted and carried out terrorist acts against innocent people, the same as murder."

But Khadafy's 15-month-old daughter was said to have been killed in the bombing raid and that set Carter thinking about his own daughter.

"If 17 years ago someone had killed Amy it would have been the worst blow that could be delivered to me," said the former president. "I would have sworn as long as my life existed, I would retaliate."

Was he suggesting that retaliation by Khadafy would be justified? It sounded that way.

Amy was a week past her 13th birthday as the 1980 presidential campaign entered its final days and her father, the incumbent, was battling Reagan's challenge. The two men debated on Oct. 28 and a key issue was arms control.

In response to a question about the SALT II treaty which Carter supported and Reagan opposed, the Democratic president said, "I had a conversation with my daughter Amy the other day before I came here to ask her what the most important issue was. She said nuclear weaponry ... and the control of nuclear arms."

No doubt Carter thought the reference to his daughter would strike a sympathetic chord with parents across the nation. Instead, many in the audience appeared more to wonder if Carter really had been discussing his priorities with a daughter just entering her teens.

Like most former presidents, Carter has kept a low profile since he left office. But he occasionally criticizes the man who defeated him. Carter's criticism shouldn't be surprising. Presidents who are forced from office aren't inclined to like the people responsible.

Former President Ford was cool toward both Reagan and Carter after the 1976 campaign. Reagan had challenged Ford for the GOP nomination and then Carter beat him in the general election.

Carter told the New York Times two months ago that when Reagan talked about his predecessor's military spending he was saying things "he knows are not true and which he personally promised me not to repeat."

The former president went on to say that some of Reagan's statements were "almost more than a human being can bear."

Arms control remains an issue that brings strong comments from Carter. Weeks before Reagan's meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Carter said the president's proposal for a space-based missile defense system was "ill-conceived, a total waste of money, and counterproductive for our nation and for nuclear arms control."

Reagan's Hobson's Choice: If President Daniel Ortega signs the Contadora agreement promising reforms, Reagan's repudiation of it would end any chance of congressional aid to the contras. But Reagan's acceptance would — according to Habib's written promise — disband the Contras; Ortega would be free to tear up the agreement at his leisure with no risk of Contra reprisal.

Habib was summoned by the House Republican leaders to Michel's H-227 Capitol hideaway for a warning. Despite tough questioning by Reps. Dick Cheney and Jack Kemp among others, Habib did not give an inch. A letter from some Republicans at the meeting may soon be on its way to the president, asking a chance to make their case directly to him.

But the way the Reagan administration has played its muddled anti-Sandinista hand leaves little room for any change at this late date. Reports are circulating here that despite a cleavage in the Marxist regime on whether to sign the elaborate but unenforceable Contadora agreement of last September, both Cuba's Fidel Castro and the Soviet Union are counseling Ortega to sign.

The agreement would clear the way for a long breathing space during which the Marxist-Leninist regime could build its power, stabilize its economy and get rid of remaining internal enemies — stripping away what few freedoms remain. Time would be provided to develop new means of exporting communism through Central America. The only U.S. policy is hope that the Sandinistas will stonewall.

How did Ronald Reagan get himself locked in this box, where the future of his Reagan Doctrine appears to lie in the hands of his Sandinista enemies? A partial answer is the difference in outlook between the president and the secretary of state he trusts and admires, George Shultz.

Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams, a neo-conservative political appointee in charge of the Latin American bureau, shares Reagan's optimism about rolling back the boundaries of communism and expanding the frontiers of free societies. But by persuading Reagan to name retired diplomatic troubleshooter Habib as his chief guide through the Nicaraguan swamps, Shultz seized policy control.

This is the same Shultz-Habib team that drafted the failed U.S. policy in Lebanon, when the secretary overrode experienced Mideast advisers. With Habib as his agent, Shultz forced Lebanon to accept a pact wanted by Israel that collapsed within weeks. That has led the highly experienced and widely respected Habib to be attacked behind his back by GOP conservatives as the "undertaker" of U.S. policy.

Perhaps partly because of Habib, State Department insiders say Shultz has no confidence in the Contra solution for Nicaragua. During his unfriendly exchange with the House Republican leaders, Habib made no secret of the fact that he fears the Contras will take the United States down a blind alley.

To congressional Reaganites, that trips up the president at a critical point in his Latin policy. They argue that if Congress had voted funds for the Contras at the time they showed military muscle in swamping the March 27 Sandinista incursion into Honduras, the anti-communist guerrillas could have proved their staying power and high morale.

Instead, it has been all downhill: Congressional stalling over Contra funds; organizational problems within the Contras (Arturo Cruz, their most respected leader internationally, is expected to pull out soon); finally, Shultz's embrace of Contadora in his seminal Mexico City speech last July 26.

Regrouping, some congressional Reaganites want language in the Contadora agreement to bind all Latin states as guarantors, with the United States, to assure that the Sandinistas live up to their pledges. A more fanciful notion than an allied army marching on Managua to stamp out repression would be hard to find.

If Ortega signs, Reagan will either have to scramble hard to find some credible way out of Shultz's Mexico City pronouncement or let the Sandinistas have their run of Central America. Thus is the Reagan Doctrine reduced to hope — a hope that Daniel Ortega's revolutionary stubbornness will surmount good sense and perhaps even prodding from Havana and Moscow.

unless the Legislature has made an exception. Lenders favor the ultimate deregulation of interest rates and this would certainly be a step in that direction. They said that deregulation would increase competition in the lending market and bring more capital to the state. They didn't mention that it would also increase their profits.

The study commission is far from approving the change and co-chairman Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, promised that no proposals would be made to the General Assembly before 1987. Any attempt to put deregulation before the already crowded docket of the short 1986 session, which opens with committee meetings next week, would almost certainly be opposed by the legislative leadership.

The proposal was endorsed by a flock of lobbyists representing various elements of the lending industry — small loan companies, banks, savings and loan associations. It was opposed by only two witnesses, the attorney general and N.C. Legal Services.

Jim Gulick, representing Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, said, "The attorney general opposes any substantive change in law." Gulick said the recodification committee would have Thornburg's support so long as it stuck to its main purpose: the rewriting of interest rate laws to make them clearer. Recodifications of major areas of law are needed periodically to bring those laws up to date with court decisions and legislative changes.

Gulick, in opposing the change towards deregulation, said the committee "should note that absolutely no evidence has been presented to show why the present law is inadequate."

Margot Roten, lobbyist for N.C. Legal Services, said low and moderate income borrowers "distinctly stand to lose" from the proposal. She said interest rate ceilings were needed to keep lenders from charging outrageous rates to borrowers. She noted the experiences of other states where there has been deregulation and where some rates have gone as high as 60 percent a year.

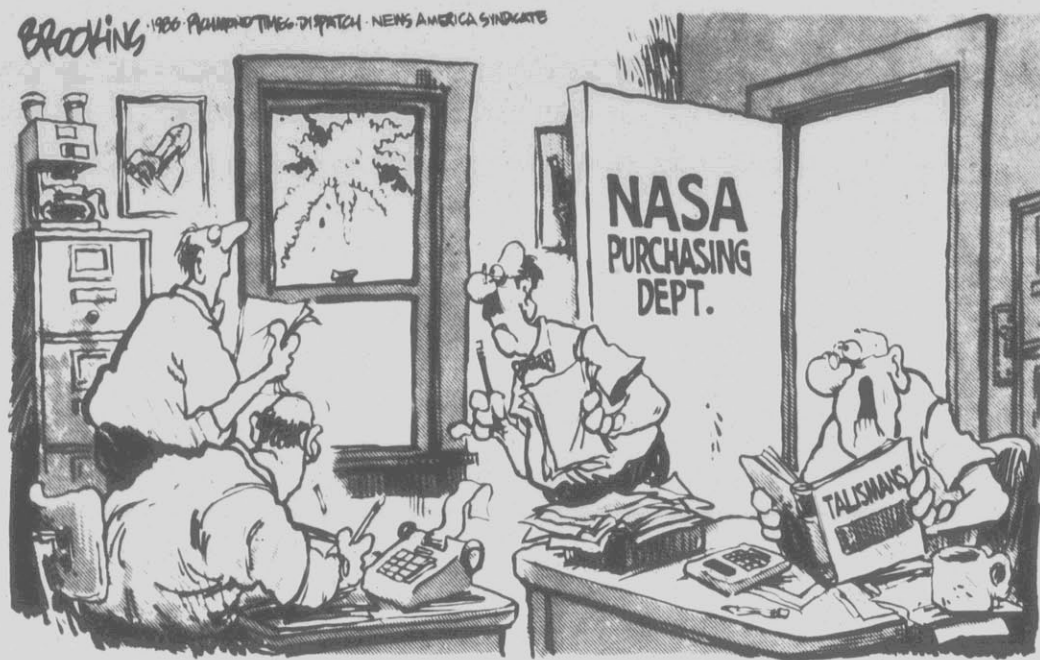

Ms. Roten also made a pitch to legislative egos. Under the current system, legislators decide when interest rate ceilings will be raised. With the lenders' proposal, "you give up legislative authority (to set ceilings) except for what you have had the authority to prohibit. There are always new ways, new fees, that lenders can think up to charge the consumer," she said.

She noted the 1983-84 legislative fight over "lease to own" purchases. Proponents of greater restrictions charged that merchants were using lease to own contracts to charge unsophisticated customers incredibly high interest rates and get around the state's usury laws.

Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, co-chairman of the committee, said the current lending laws are "almost incomprehensible." He said they needed clarification and simplification, and the lenders' proposal would achieve that goal. He said, however, he wasn't supporting that change yet and recognized that "certain protections" are needed for consumers.

Strength For Today

There is a tremendous amount of hopelessness in the world, and this is certainly not as it should be.

Every life is, of course, full of problems. Nothing would be more heartless than to take the position that there is nothing in life to make us downcast. But just as bravery is the effort to do what is right in spite of justified fear and terror, so true hopefulness is an attempt to rise above the mistakes and sorrows of the past and make the best of life as we find it.

There are some things in life we can change. But the truth is that many of the circumstances of life cannot be changed. We have to get along the best we can with life as we find it.

Is that a philosophy of hopelessness? Not at all. It is the realistic facing of a fact, and blessed are they who learn how to live with unchangeable situations.

has also experienced some minor problems with donkey basketball games and frowns on those as fundraisers, McKnight said.

McKnight also said the county prohibits fund drives for items that are normally funded budget items and items that are deemed ordinary school needs. Examples include textbooks, furniture, repainting projects or building classrooms, he said.

"We strictly discourage fund raising that seeks to provide regular instructional, capital outlay or routine maintenance items regularly funded by the school system," McKnight said. "It is the responsibility of the local boards to ensure that routine needs of the schools are funded. We ask them (the school) to make a request and we will budget it and accomplish it as quickly as possible," he said. "It may not be as quickly as they want it done, but we will work toward that goal."

Field trips are the only curriculum-related fund-raising projects that occur frequently, McKnight said, and are sanctioned because they are considered supplemental activities.

Schools can sponsor a non-conforming project only with special school approval, McKnight said. "The only way one that didn't fit the guidelines could get going was if the school or group came to the central office or school board and the project was reasonable and sound and was above and beyond the ordinary need of the school," McKnight said.

If a fund drive that doesn't meet policy gets under way, central office personnel "put a stop to it," McKnight said.

Pitt's policy was written by a group that included a cross-section of the community, teachers, principals and central office staff. Associate Superintendent Leck Keeter, who headed the policy committee, said it is the responsibility of the school principals to keep fund-raising projects in check. "If the principal follows the policy of the board, then problems don't arise," Keeter said.

In Greenville, fund raising by young students is also prohibited, according to Associate Superintendent Charles Ross. "We don't allow door-to-door projects using children," Ross said. "PTA's do that and on the secondary level booster clubs approve and endorse particular activities."

Greenville's guidelines specifically encourage carnivals, paper drives, book fairs, yard sales, suppers and bridge benefits.

As in Pitt County, parent-teacher organizations, booster clubs and other groups raising funds for schools must set fund-raising objectives at the beginning of the year, then have them approved by the school principal. A fund-raising project that utilizes school facilities or resources (posters, public address announcements, etc.) must be approved by the superintendent.

Greenville is also careful about fund raising in the areas of normal curriculum, maintenance and capital outlay items, Ross said. "Whatever is approved as curriculum we try to provide for that," he said. "We utilize fund drives in these areas where funds need to be supplemented."

Projects are not directly supervised by Greenville's central office staff except "in the sense that we encourage the policy of the board to be followed by the principals," Ross said.

Farm Scene

BY SAM UZZELL
Pitt Extension Agent

There are three types of pine bark beetles that often cause damage to pines, both in the forest and in the landscape. Usually pines that are under stress are the first and most severely affected. In certain circumstances the beetle infestation can be treated effectively with insecticides but in a majority of cases, the affected pines should be cut and removed promptly.

Pine trees are weakened by factors such as drought, lightning, flooding, fire and old age. These factors are all natural ones and can make the tree vulnerable to insect attack. Man-made causes also figure importantly in beetle attacks. Landscaping operations such as bulldozing, land clearing and the travel of heavy equipment close to the tree may inadvertently "pitch out" some beetle by a strong flow of sap. But weaker trees are usually invaded by a succession of beetles and die within a year of the initial attack.

Pine beetles are of several species and each species attacks the tree in a certain location on the trunk and at a certain stage of the pine's decline. By looking at the tree, one can make a fairly accurate determination of what species of beetle is causing damage. Simply stated, there are three species of engraver beetles that attack declining pines, from the uppermost reaches of the tree down to the base of the tree at ground level.

The most commonly noticed "pine bore" or pine bark beetle is the black turpentine beetle. It is the largest of the pine beetles and characteristically attacks the lower 10-12 feet of the trunk of unhealthy pines. Their pitch tubes are larger and often have a hole in the center of the vaguely cone-like glob or dried sap. A tree infested with a few black turpentine beetles can be sprayed with lindane. The turpentine beetle is the only beetle that can be controlled with insecticides.

The ambrosia beetle is the bark beetle that attacks trees at the base and produces brown or pinkish sawdust that encircles the trunk. Ambrosia beetles attack pines that are beyond recovery and introduce a fungus into the tree which kills it. Insecticides are not effective on controlling these insects.

The third bark beetle is the southern pine beetle. These beetles normally attack weakened pines and usually enter the tree about 15 feet high. They also have smaller pitch tubes than the black turpentine beetle, so the two can be distinguished by the size and number of pitch tubes and the location of the tree they attack.

For many pine bark infestations there is no cure. Consequently, the affected trees should be removed by a competent individual. It is better to have beetle-infested pine wood disposed of rather than retained as firewood. Beetles can leave the firewood and infest nearby pines.

Fertilization of pines is sometimes needed on newly-cleared lots to stimulate root growth of pines. This can be an important means of preventing beetle attacks. Other measures include removal of diseased pines, thinning of crowded stands of pines, avoiding fresh piles of pine firewood stacked beside pines and maintaining healthy young pines as much as possible.

King Holiday

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would bring North Carolina in line with 38 other states in observing the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. as a state holiday will be introduced in the short session of the General Assembly, a Wake County lawmaker says.

Rep. Daniel T. Blue Jr. said the bill requires a two-thirds majority in both houses to pass because it was not introduced during the last session of the Legislature and is not directly related to budgetary matters.

The North Carolina Martin Luther King Celebration Committee plans to ask the General Assembly to approve the third Monday in January as an official holiday, said chairman Bruce Lightner. Lightner said the holiday was needed so North Carolina could change its image "as being perceived as somewhat insensitive to blacks."

Coed Exercise

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will sponsor a session of coed exercise beginning Thursday.

Classes will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays in the Jaycee Park Auditorium from 7-8:30 p.m. and will include basic exercise routines and aerobics.

Tax Overhaul Proposal Cuts Rates, Broadens Income Base

By MARIE COCCO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — More than a century after the first, temporary federal income tax was imposed to finance the Civil War, Congress is again struggling to produce a tax code that raises money the way 19th-century lawmakers recognized was most politically palatable: from the broadest possible base, at the lowest possible rate.

The radical tax-overhaul measure that sprang out of the Senate Finance Committee last week, like the one passed by the House in December, would strip away dozens of deductions, credits and other tax preferences — broadening the tax base so that businesses and individuals who now pay little or no taxes would be forced to ante up.

The result: Tax rates as low as 15 and 27 percent in the Finance Committee version, a drastic reduction from current rates that range as high as 50 percent.

"The premise of tax reform is that you give people lower tax rates, and in exchange for that, you give up loopholes. That's the deal," said Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., the pioneer of the current tax-overhaul movement.

But that politically attractive barter forces yet another trade. That is giving up tax incentives — indirect subsidies stitched into the code over decades to boost everything from investment in new plants and equipment to retirement savings and contributions to charity — in exchange for what economists of both the left and right argue would be a more efficient economy.

In a trimmed-down, loophole-tightened tax system, they say, the economy would not be distorted by spending and investment decisions based on their potential tax benefits.

Taxpayers, their pockets flush with the money lower rates would return to them, would be free to spend or save as they wished. "It's the market that will give the signals, not the tax system," said Joseph Pechman, a tax specialist with the Brookings Institution, a liberal think-tank.

Almost from the time the permanent income tax was established in 1913, lawmakers have been busy writing tax incentives into the code.

In the World War I period, it was special breaks to encourage oil exploration.

In the early 1960s, it was the investment tax credit, a write-off that largely benefits heavy industries, which President John Kennedy proposed to spur a lagging economy.

In the 1970s, it was the earned-income credit, meant to give tax relief to poor families.

In President Ronald Reagan's 1981 tax package, it was vastly accelerated depreciation schedules for business, another tool meant to jolt the economy.

In 1981, too, it was making tax-free Individual Retirement Accounts available to all Americans — a device cloaked in the politically gorgeous clothing of a retirement savings plan for middle-income taxpayers, but one really meant to increase the pool of long-term deposits so that more capital would be available to finance business ventures.

The Finance Committee's proposed repeal of tax-free IRA contributions for most Americans — disallowing deductibility of contributions, but continuing to permit tax-deferred interest — has drawn the most wrath from lawmakers and lobbyists. But some economists argue that IRAs are a perfect example of a tax break gone awry.

The U.S. savings rate, rather than being lifted from the doldrums by IRA deposits, actually has declined since 1981, according to the Commerce Department.

Few taxpayers actually save more because of IRAs, studies show; they just shift existing savings into the tax-free accounts each April — at a cost to the Treasury of about $6 billion a year in lost revenues.

But the IRA is a popular deduction, and pressure to restore it began immediately. Tax-revision advocates point out that with very low tax rates, the actual value of such a deduction would be greatly reduced. And money saved for retirement in a manner other than an IRA would not be tied up with heavy penalties for early withdrawal.

Perhaps the most gaping loopholes in the current tax code are those allowing individuals to escape taxes through tax shelters — investment in money-losing ventures largely for the sake of a tax write-off.

While the finance panel's crackdown on tax shelters was one of the most controversial items in its plan, there was nary a senator on the committee who didn't launch into a diatribe about vacant office buildings or an over-supply of river barges caused by wealthy investors seeking to shelter income.

"It seems that every dentist in the country owned a piece of a barge," in the 1970s, Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., exclaimed at one point in the panel's deliberations. "It's just plain perverse, it's wrong."

With the tax system beginning to take on the contours of an inverted pyramid — an edifice of loopholes for those at the top precariously balanced atop the narrow base of middle-class and poor without tax breaks at the bottom — the political climate for tax revision grew warmer.

It began in the 1960s, when liberals complained about the way some of the nation's wealthiest corporations and individuals could escape taxes altogether through exploitation of the tax laws.

In 1969, a tax revision bill that established a minimum tax was pushed through. During the 1970s, the first tax benefits specifically aimed at helping the poor were enacted.

Ideas that helped our forefathers help us build

A grand vision of expansion fueled the engines of the first trans-continental railroad, but it was built by something else altogether.

It was built by the muscle and sweat of thousands of laborers. By the sheer willpower of the businessmen who ran the railroads.

And perhaps more than anything else, by a dominating spirit of cooperation. This is the American way.

It's also the First American way. Cooperation is at work on every level within the bank. Our people work hard to understand the needs and problems of our customers. And they listen hard. So the lines of communication linking vice presidents to loan officers to tellers remain open.

This spirit of cooperation is based on a simple, profound rationale. People deserve to be treated fairly. And deserve a bank that goes out of its way to serve them.

At First American, it's how we've grown to nearly a billion dollars in assets. One customer at a time.

TRAFFIC STOPPED — A North Carolina Forest Service bulldozer stops traffic on U.S. 17 near Hampstead Sunday. The bulldozer was being used to plow out fire lanes in an effort to contain a forest fire that has burned more than 70,000 acres of forests. (AP Laserphoto)

Family Refuses To Evacuate

HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (AP) — While many residents fled their homes in the face of a forest fire that's charred 70,000 acres in southeastern North Carolina, Phil Shingleton and his family decided to stay put — for now.

"I don't intend to leave until I have to. When the seat of my britches gets hot," Phil C. Shingleton said as the huge fire was burning less than a mile away from his Hampstead home.

Fire officials tried unsuccessfully to evacuate the Shingletons Sunday.

"They're on their own," said Wayne Batson, a firefighter with the Hampstead Volunteer Fire Department. "They are some of the few people who have refused to cooperate with us."

While the blaze had mostly been wandering in forest and marsh where few people live, hundreds of residents from Holly Ridge to Hampstead had evacuated their homes or have been ready to leave since the fire started.

"It's frightening because you just hate to think that you could lose things that you raised your children with, you know," said Rose Ann Gunter, who left her Hampstead home to stay with her family Sunday at the Bostic Motel in Surf City.

"There's things you don't mind parting with, but there's things you don't want to lose, that money can't buy."

Joanne Lea spent Saturday on roof of her log home in eastern Pender County listening to fires burning in the nearby forest.

"Would you believe it's for sale?" she said. "We had some people coming to look at it today. They didn't come."

Wanda Caskinett, who lives in a trailer on N.C. 210 west of Hampstead, said that Friday afternoon was a nightmare for her and her mother.

She said they were suddenly given a warning that fire was approaching from the north. A few minutes later planes and helicopters flew over, dropping water on her trailer, she said.

"It (the fire) sounded like a freight train coming. I don't know how far away it was, but I heard pine trees popping and exploding," she said.

John B. Euglow, a resident of Hampstead, said he thought that all the smoke and confusion has worn people down.

"People have gone through the stage where they stopped worrying so much about their property," he said. "It got yesterday (Friday) to where people was worried more about their skin."

Vic French, an officer with the North Carolina Wildlife Commission, was forced to retreat from a firebreak where he had been working since early morning. Firefighters used bulldozers and torches to clear the firebreak. But French said he doubted that many of the animals would survive.

"Oh yeah, that ain't leaving nothing behind — no survivors," he said, pointing to the fire, which by then was racing across his firebreak toward the highway. "The possibility of our little mess holding that back is pretty unlikely."

Meanwhile, for Doug Turner, last Monday night provided a glimpse of a scene that would become all-too familiar as a tenacious fire followed shifting winds in a slow circle of Pender County.

Shaw Obtains $250,000 Loan

RALEIGH (AP) — Shaw University is using its International and Islamic Studies Center as collateral for a $250,000 loan the university has taken from a Raleigh bank, according to documents filed in the Wake County Courthouse.

The International and Islamic Studies Center was financed two years ago through a $1 million grant to Shaw from the late King Khalid Ben Abdul Al Saud of Saudi Arabia. The 15,000-square-foot, two-story center at Blount and Smithfield streets cost about $600,000 to build.

Turner, a firefighter with the Holly Ridge Volunteer Fire Department, was called out when the fire threatened homes along N.C. 50.

"I'll never forget seeing the flames flaring up in the trees around this house and the family just standing there watching it in the picture window," he said. "We were manning each house with hoses and the smoke was getting so thick that every now and then I would run back to the truck and breathe some oxygen."

Firefighters successfully protected the homes and others in the fire's path all week, but Turner said he remained frightened for his friends.

"At nearly every house, I knew the family," he said. "These are people you see every day, people you go to church with."

Some Say Safe Roads Act Needs More Enforcement

RALEIGH (AP) — The 1983 Safe Roads Act appears to be steadily reducing alcohol-related accidents, but some say that a shortage of law enforcement officers has made it difficult to utilize the full power of the law.

"There's not much chance of being stopped for a road check, because there are not enough police officers," said Paul Alwine, state coordinator for Mothers Against Drunk Drivers. "Your chances of getting caught are very slim."

The number of alcohol-related accidents in 1984 fell 5 percent from the 1983 figure and another 3 percent last year, according to Division of Motor Vehicles figures. Alcohol-related road deaths dropped from 382 in 1982 to 334 in 1983. After rising to 356 in 1984, such deaths declined again in 1985 to 345.

"I think it's working," said Paul B. Jones, director of the Governor's Highway Safety Program. "I think there's some folks that worked for the Safe Roads Act who now have some reservations. But I think all in all, it's improved the situation."

Alwine said his group is pleased with the law but wants "the thing tightened up. We want some teeth in it."

Only 29 percent of the state's residents believed they had better than a 50-50 chance of being arrested for drunken driving, according to a recent Carolina Poll by the UNC School of Journalism. A similar poll taken just after the Safe Roads Act was passed found that 44 percent of residents believed their chances of being arrested were better than 50-50.

John Lacey, program manager for alcohol studies at the University of North Carolina's Highway Safety Research Center, said the apparent decline in respect for the law hasn't resulted in more danger on the highways.

"We've looked at data through 1985 and haven't seen any indication that it has translated into more alcohol-related crashes," he said. "It may be that it just has been in the news less, so people are thinking about it less."

Highway Patrol Commander Jack Cardwell agreed that more troopers are needed.

"The basic problem is that for numbers of people who drink and drive, it is such a part of their everyday existence that they're going to do it regardless of the restraints," he said.

Patrol Sgt. B.W. Oakes said North Carolina troopers still have one of the highest DWI arrest rates in the country — about 50 arrests per trooper per year. But Cardwell says there have been fewer arrests each year since the Safe Roads Act was passed.

The new law assured flagrant violators of spending some time in jail, allowed police to use roadblocks to stop vehicles and field-test drivers for blood alcohol and raised the legal drinking age for beer and wine from 18 to 19. It also required a mandatory 10-day license suspension for drivers who refuse Breathalyzer tests or show blood-alcohol levels of 0.10 or more and banned plea bargaining of drunken-driving charges.

The conviction rate for driving while impaired has increased steadily, from 78 percent of those arrested in 1982 to 92 percent in 1984.

A recent study by UNC's Highway Safety Research Center suggests that intense media coverage of the law before and just after it was passed might have contributed to the initial sharp decline in alcohol-related accidents and deaths.

That doesn't mean that the law itself has been ineffective, Lacey said.

"A lot of the effect that attributable to the Safe Roads Act actually did start to occur before the law took effect," he said. "But now, even though discussion has been on the wane a bit, the effect has remained."

Alwine, however, recommended extending to 30 days the 10-day license revocation. And he said MADD would push for a bill in next year's legislative session calling for the longer revocation period.

How Perdue Helps Tobacco Farmers Take Success in Their Own Hands.

Is tobacco farming a way of life that's on its way out? A lot of people, including many tobacco growers, believe it is. As the Tobacco Program goes, so goes the tobacco farmer.

Or so they say.

At Perdue, we see the situation differently. We believe tobacco farmers don't have to give up their cropland and their way of life, and we can show you hundreds of small farmers in North Carolina to prove it.

They're tobacco farmers who have built Perdue chicken houses.

The steady year-round income of a Perdue broiler operations helps smooth out the ups and downs of tobacco farming. A broiler house works right in with your tobacco farming because it doesn't demand a lot of your time or tie up valuable field acreage.

Dry weather won't affect your yield. And how you run your business is just between you and Perdue, not between you and some committee in Washington.

Best of all, as a Perdue producer you're cashing in on one of the most promising trends in agriculture. In 1985, poultry was North Carolina's biggest cash crop. Poultry consumption has grown over 50% in just ten years. It has already exceeded pork consumption, and many industry executives predict that within ten more years Americans will consume more chicken than beef.

That gives you some idea of the bright outlook for the poultry industry as a whole. But Perdue is growing faster than the industry as a whole.

It's an ideal time to join the more than 1,000 independent agri-businessmen and businesswomen in North Carolina who have chosen to work with Perdue. For more information, return the coupon today, or call Perdue at 1-800-372-6543.

IN THE STATE

Congressional Club's Course Uncertain

RALEIGH (AP) — The National Congressional Club won't be crippled by the loss of David Funderburk in the Republican U.S. Senate primary, but the defeat may force the organization to change directions, officials say.

"This is all part of a GOP growing process. The Congressional Club has been an integral part of the growth of the Republican Party during the past 10 years. There are growing pains, but we'll continue to advance until we are the dominant party," said Chris Shields, communications director for the state Republican Party.

Funderburk, a former U.S. ambassador to Romania who was supported by the Congress-sional Club in the primary, was beaten more than 2-to-1 by Jim Broyhill in the race for the seat that will be vacated by Sen. John East, R-N.C., the club's candidate in 1990. East is not seeking re-election because of poor health.

"I'm not sure what we're going to do," said Tom Ellis, leader and co-founder of the conservative club, which was formed to retire campaign debts incurred by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in 1973. "I haven't thought it out yet. We might even go out of business, who knows?"

"But," Ellis said, "as Mark Twain said, I think the reports of our demise are exaggerated. We'll keep on fighting to preserve liberty and freedom in this country. We've had losing candidates before, you know, in 1976 and 1982."

Shields said early confusion over who the club would back and conclusions based on flawed computer analyses may have contributed to the defeat.

The club had been eyeing Campbell University President Norman Wiggins, although he is a Democrat, but things became complicated when former Gov. Jim Hunt said he would not seek the seat and East announced his retirement.

"We had to think what would happen if Wiggins switched (parties)," said Ellis. "The polls and computer studies showed that (former Charlotte mayor) Eddie Knox's stock plummeted when he switched over from the Democrats."

Shields said Wiggins was as surprised as anyone when Funderburk was chosen.

"We heard that there was a lot of polling, computer work, going on, and they suddenly decided they needed a young, aggressive conservative candidate with strong religious identification," Shields said.

Broyhill announced his candidacy on Sept. 20, three days after Funderburk.

RALEIGH (AP) — The International Division of the North Carolina Commerce Department answered some 3,500 questions last year — from what tariffs do the Saudis levy on furniture to what's hot in the French upholstery market.

The division is the only corner of the state bureaucracy where employees speak French, Arabic, Russian, Japanese and Spanish and are found in Dusseldorf and Tokyo.

The department estimates that foreign companies have invest more than $2.3 billion in manufacturing facilities in the state, more than half of it since 1980. James Hinkle, the division director, said that for the most part, foreign companies are looking for the same economic criteria as their counterparts.

Defense Money

RALEIGH (AP) — Trying to bring more U.S. Defense Department dollars to North Carolina has become a major part of the state Commerce Department's campaign to promote job growth and diversification, officials say.

"The large number of dollars invested in the defense effort makes it a growth industry," said Alvah Ward, director of the Commerce Department's industrial development programs. "Defense spending provides the diverse kinds of steady employment we are looking for, so it behooves us to pay special attention to it."

Gov. Jim Martin said the campaign will not include manufacturers of nuclear weapons.

Alumni Center

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has received two gifts worth $4 million toward an $8.5 million Alumni Center, UNC president emeritus William C. Friday says.

The UNC General Alumni Association has received an anonymous $3.5 million challenge gift earmarked for construction of the center and the trustees of the James M. Johnson Trust have given another $500,000 for a room to memorialize the late benefactor of a scholarship program at the school.

Friday's announcement came during the association's annual luncheon Saturday, where he and his wife, Ida, were presented Distinguished Service Medals.

Farm Markets

RALEIGH (AP) — Stronger marketing efforts and programs to provide financial assistance and legal services to embattled farmers will be among topics to be considered by a special legislative committee late this summer.

"The most important thing we can do is help create markets," Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, said of the state House special subcommittee on agriculture.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey appointed the panel to explore ways the state could help farmers, with close to 20 percent of them facing moderate to extreme financial hardship.

The panel's chairman, Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, said the Legislature may be able to address the financial program in the short session this summer, but most recommendations must wait until the 1987 session.

Helms Pledges To Back Broyhill Candidacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., began working to unite the two sides of the Republican Party by announcing his full support for GOP Senate nominee Jim Broyhill, ending the neutrality he professed in Broyhill's heated primary with David Funderburk.

Helms said that uniting the two sides of the party "won't be done next week, but I think it will happen. It is going to take work by others besides me."

Helms said he had already begun helping Broyhill raise money for his fall election contest with Democratic nominee Terry Sanford. Helms said he introduced Broyhill to big contributors to the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee in a meeting in Washington on Wednesday, the day after the primary.

Broyhill, a 12-term U.S. House veteran and champion of the party's traditional wing, won 67 percent of the vote in his showdown with Funderburk, former U.S. ambassador to Romania and a Campbell University professor.

Asked what he thought of the outcome of Tuesday's primary, Helms said, "I think the result that pleased me the most was that it was over."

The National Congressional Club, co-founded by Helms, backed Funderburk in the primary. But Helms distanced himself from the club's work, saying he had not spoken with Tom Ellis, the club's leader, since January.

Noting that this was the club's first major outing in a Republican primary, Helms said, "I'm not sure they examined the different psychology involved in running in a primary and running in a general election."

However, Helms credited the club with major GOP gains in North Carolina in recent years, calling it a bridge between the Republican Party and conservative Democrats.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market got off to a mixed start today. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged up 1.74 to 1,791.17 by 10:30 a.m. on Wall Street.

But, in the broader market, declines narrowly outnumbered advances by about 30 issues in the overall tally on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE composite index was off 0.02 at 137.10.

Stock trading was restrained by weakness in the bond market, where prices were off sharply, analysts said.

Several oil stocks were among the most actively traded issues. Mobil gained 1/8 to 30 1/2 and Phillips Petroleum was unchanged at 10 1/2.

Sperry dropped back 1 to 72 1/2. The stock rose sharply last week after Burroughs made an offer to pay $70 a share for Sperry.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.22 to 1,789.43, finishing the week with a net gain of 14.75 points.

Advancing issues outpaced declines by about 7 to 6 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 137.40 million shares, against 136.03 million in the previous session.

on the north boundary while firefighters were trying to place a fire line there, Hegele said.

The fire had spread northward late Sunday evening and was aiming at the Maple Hill community. Hegele said firefighters were hoping the winds would not switch and push the fire toward the Holly Ridge area.

Before the late Sunday night outbreak, Hegele and other forestry officials felt they had finally gotten the upper hand on the fire when firefighters used an afternoon sea breeze to push the fire into a hastily built trap.

Milwaukee Ousts Sixers, 113-112

MILWAUKEE (AP) — With the Philadelphia jinx now out of the way, the Milwaukee Bucks will seek to work some magic in the next round of the playoffs against the NBA's winningest team.

But the Bucks have yet to succeed this season against the Boston Celtics, who finished with a 67-15 record and defeated Milwaukee in all five regular-season meetings.

Still, Milwaukee forward Terry Cummings is thinking positively.

"We're going to go in there expecting to win. We can't afford to have any emotional letdowns," Cummings said after scoring 27 points in the Bucks' 113-112 victory over the 76ers Sunday to advance to the Eastern Conference finals. "It's the only way to think. You can't go in there thinking otherwise."

Boston should be well-rested for Tuesday's Game 1 in the Boston Garden after it eliminated Atlanta in Game 5 of their series last Tuesday. The Bucks, however, endured a bruising seven-game series with Philadelphia and guard Sidney Moncrief, the soul of the team, is still hobbling on an injured left heel.

The Bucks won all three games against Philadelphia when Moncrief played and managed just one victory without him.

"It's still day to day," Moncrief, who scored 23 points in 35 minutes Sunday, said of his status for the Boston series. "I didn't reinjure it playing (Sunday). That's a positive sign."

"We're a little bruised up," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "But we won't hurt as much (today) as we would have if we had lost."

But Moncrief said it will be difficult to erase the memory of losing four of five playoff matchups with Philadelphia, including last year's four-game sweep.

"It's in the past. All we can deal with is 1986," he said. "But I don't think people are going to forget the years prior to 1986."

Although Cummings said the jinx didn't apply to this year's squad — "this team is different" — he admitted the win was sweet.

"I think it's something our team will relish for many years to come," he said.

"I've been waiting four years for it to happen," Milwaukee forward Paul Pressey added.

Nelson said Sunday's victory was the "nicest win I ever had" because the Bucks came out on top of an emotional, hard-fought series.

"You can put on top of that our beating Philly and winning the seventh game of a seven-game series for the first time," Nelson said. Julius Erving took the 76ers' last shot, a short jumper with three seconds remaining, but missed. Players from both teams were scrambling for the ball as time ran out.

"I had the open shot and it was not a bad shot to have in that situation," Erving, who scored 17 points, said. "It was a shot that we would ask for if we were in that situation again."

Cummings, who played most of the game with a dislocated finger on his left hand, said the first thing he did after Erving's shot was to make sure Charles Barkley didn't get the rebound. Barkley had 18 points and 12 rebounds, well below his playoff averages of 25.6 and 16.1.

"We got a good shot with Charles going to the basket," Philadelphia Coach Matt Guokas said. "It's going to be very physical the last few seconds. They took advantage of it."

Craig Hodges had 24 points for Milwaukee, including the winning basket on a goaltending call against Barkley with 29 seconds left.

The 76ers, down by nine early in the third quarter and trailing by as many as eight in the fourth quarter, rallied for a 106-104 lead with 3:20 remaining on a dunk by Barkley. The lead seasawed until the final minute.

Moncrief, fouled by Erving, converted two foul shots with 53 seconds left, giving the Bucks a 111-110 lead.

Barkley made a field goal with 40 seconds left, giving Philadelphia a 112-111 advantage. Then Barkley was called for goaltending and Milwaukee had a 113-112 lead.

Bean Wins Byron Nelson Classic

DALLAS (AP) — Andy Bean wasn't about to become a victim of the "Payne Stewart Disease."

Watching a four-shot lead melt away with a three-putt and a sand shot an 18-handicapper wouldn't like, Bean kept his poise to capture the Byron Nelson Golf Classic Sunday and become the eighth player to surpass $2 million in career earnings.

Bean won by paring the final hole, which last year proved to be Stewart's undoing when a double-bogey on 18 led to a playoff loss to Bob Eastwood.

Bean fashioned a final-round, 2-under-par 68 on the Las Colinas Golf Club course for an 11-under-par 269 total and a one-shot victory over Mark Wiebe.

Bean's $108,000 prize gave him $380,304 this year, tops on the tour, and $2,372,398 lifetime.

Bean, the eighth-leading career money winner, joins Calvin Peete and Fuzzy Zoeller as a two-time winner on the current tour. Bean won the Doral-Eastern Open in March in a playoff over Hubert Green.

But his cakewalk here turned into a sweat as Wiebe put the heat on with a 67.

"I never thought Andy would back up at all, but he did a little, and if I had chipped in on 18 we would have had a playoff," Wiebe, who collected $64,800 and just missed holing the chip, said.

Bean three-putted from 30 feet on the 15th green, then knocked his tee shot into a bunker on testy 182-yard, par-3 17th.

He exploded his sand shot 30 feet from the hole and had to make a tough three-footer for bogey.

Bean drove down the middle on the 443-yard No. 18, knocked a sand wedge 30 feet from the hole, and two-putted for the victory.

"As soon as I hit that last putt I just started smiling," Bean said. "I knew it was going to be close and it finished just six inches away."

He said that, luckily, he had practiced putting from that very spot on Tuesday.

"I must have hit 100 putts from there and I knew how fast it was," Bean said.

Bean said he made a mistake by looking at the scoreboard on the 15th hole.

"I should have finished the round without doing that," Bean said. "I just tried to two-putt for par and sometimes that's the hardest thing you can do."

"I played as well as I've ever played a tournament for four days," said Bean, who had rounds of 66, 68, 67 and 68 in his 11th PGA victory.

Elliott Takes The Winston

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Bill Elliott hopes his victory in The Winston, a $500,000 special stock car race for the previous year's winning drivers, finally gets him untracked in the 1986 season.

"I felt like the way the year has gone, this was the one I wanted to turn my season around," Elliott said Sunday after easily outrunning nine competitors to win $200,000 — the richest first place prize in stock car history. He tacked on another $40,000 in winnings for leading four bonus laps.

"Darrell (Waltrip) did that last year," Elliott said. "He won The Winston and then the World 600 the next day." This year's World 600 will be at Charlotte next weekend.

Elliott, driving a Ford Thunderbird, needed only 37 minutes, 980 seconds to complete the 126-mile sprint at the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway with an average speed of 159.123 mph.

Both races were run without a caution flag.

Elliott, who won 11 races last year but remains winless this season because this was an unofficial race, led after 82 of the 83 laps and scored a 2.55-second victory over Dale Earnhardt's Chevrolet Monte Carlo.

Earnhardt led the only other lap — the 40th — when all cars were required to make a pit stop to take on at least two tires. The only reason Earnhardt had the lead at that point was because his crew was located past the finish line and Elliott's spot was before the finish line.

The most excitement in the race came when the two were leaving pit road to return to the track. Elliott's stop took 14.4 seconds and Earnhardt's 13.8, but Elliott went flying by the Chevrolet while both cars were still on pit road and he built a 1.87-second lead by the time the two cars rounded the track once.

In a companion race, Benny Parsons drove his Oldsmobile to victory in the $300,000 Atlanta Invitational, averaging 158.766 mph to beat Tim Richmond's Chevrolet by 2.01 seconds. The 152-mile event also was an unofficial race, with Parsons remaining winless on the Winston Cup circuit since lapturing the Coca-Cola 500 at ATR in March, 1984.

Elliott had established himself as the driver to beat during practice for The Winston, and he left little doubt who was in control when he roared by pole-sitter Waltrip in the third turn of the first lap and began pulling away from the field until the location of pit crews cost him the lead for only one lap of the race.

"The car really ran good," Elliott said. "We'd been getting through (turns) three and four all week, and when Darrell backed off, I went on by."

That remark brought a chuckle from Earnhardt, who said nobody backed off.

"I got frustrated the first lap and stayed that way all day," Earnhardt said. "I just couldn't gain on Bill."

Harry Gant easily finished third in a Chevrolet, saying, "We put a lot of ground on everybody else but I wasn't going to catch Dale or Bill."

Waltrip put his Chevrolet in fourth place and the only close battle was for fifth, with Cale Yarborough's Ford Thunderbird barely edging Neil Bonnett's Chevrolet.

Reds Defeat Mets, Gooden

Hard Way To Score

New York Mets catcher Gary Carter gets knocked over as Cincinnati Reds Eddie Milner scores from third base Sunday at Shea Stadium. With the bases loaded, Pete Rose hit to right field getting three RBI as he cleaned the bases in the second inning. (AP Laserphoto)

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Cincinnati Reds talked about winning, and then player-manager Pete Rose showed them how to do it against perhaps the best pitcher in baseball.

Rose lined a three-run single off Dwight Gooden in the second inning and the Reds, with the worst record in the major leagues, hung on to beat the New York Mets 3-2 Sunday.

The loss was the first of the season for Gooden, 5-1, and ended the seven-game winning streak of the Mets, whose 20-5 record is the best in the majors.

"He's a lion, not a lamb," Rose said of Gooden, the 1985 National League Cy Young winner. "But he doesn't throw it so hard that it can't be hit."

Prior to the game, Rose told his players to hold a meeting to discuss their dismal 7-19 start. Rose excused himself from the get-together.

"I wanted the players to talk things over without anybody from the front office there, so they could say anything they want," Rose said. "I couldn't begin to tell you what happened at it. But they came out of it with a positive attitude."

In other NL games Sunday, Montreal held off Los Angeles 4-3, St. Louis edged San Francisco 4-3, Pittsburgh beat Houston 4-3 in 12 innings, Philadelphia defeated Atlanta 2-1 and Chicago pounded San Diego 9-5.

The Reds broke their three-game losing streak and won for just the third time in their last 19 games. Rose's hit drove in more runs than any team had scored against Gooden in his last 13 starts.

Gooden lasted just five innings and gave up eight hits. It marked the first time he had not pitched at least eight innings this season, and was his shortest outing since last Aug. 15 against Philadelphia.

"I made a lot of mistakes with my location," Gooden said. "It was one of those days when you go out there against a team that's struggling and you don't want to lose to them."

Gooden gave up singles to Eddie Milner and Rose to start the game, yet got out of that jam.

But the visiting Reds caught up with him the next inning, when singles by Bo Diaz and Ron Oester and a two-out walk to Milner loaded the bases for Rose.

Rose entered the game with a 6-for-20 career mark against Gooden, but had only three hits in 24 at-bats this season. Then, with the runners moving as Gooden wound up on a 3-2 pitch, Rose hit a liner that deflected off second baseman Tim Teufel's glove and trickled into shallow center field.

By the time right fielder Darryl Strawberry retrieved the ball and threw home, Milner had bowled over catcher Gary Carter for the third run.

"I can't ever remember having a three-run single," Rose, baseball's all-time hit leader, said.

Mets Manager Davey Johnson said he saw two things on the play that he didn't like.

"I thought he (Dwight) would go into a stretch," Johnson said. "I should have yelled at him, but I was afraid of a balk ... (but) that ball has to be caught. Anytime you get leather on it, you should catch it."

Winner Bill Gullickson, 2-3, held the Mets hitless until Carter led off the fifth with a bunt single and later scored on a single by Danny Heep, who was batting for Gooden.

Strawberry hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth, but John Franco held the Mets hitless in the final two innings for his fourth save.

his fourth save. Bob Welch, 3-2, took the loss in Montreal.

Cardinals 4, Giants 3

Willie McGee trotted home from third base after San Francisco center fielder Dan Gladden collided with left fielder Candy Maldonado after catching pinch-hitter Tito Landrum's short fly ball in the eighth inning.

With one out in the eighth, McGee singled and took third on a single by Clint Hurdle. Landrum, batting for Andy Van Slyke, hit a bloop that Gladden caught, but tumbled to the turf after colliding with Maldonado.

The visiting Giants, who tied the game in the eighth on Chili Davis' RBI single, made five errors, three by rookie second baseman Rob Thompson.

Pirates 4, Astros 3

Bill Almon hit an inside-the-park home run with one out in the 12th inning, leading Pittsburgh and reliever Jose DeLeon over Houston.

Almon hit a sinking liner to right field off Charles Kerfeld, 3-1, that Terry Puhl tried to shoestring. The ball skipped into the corner and Puhl fell trying to retrieve it, allowing Almon to score standing up.

DeLeon, making his first appearance in the majors since going 2-19 last season, shut out the Astros on one hit over the last 3-2-3 innings.

The host Pirates had taken a 3-1 lead in the sixth on Jim Morrison's two-run homer off Nolan Ryan, who had won his last 10 decisions against Pittsburgh.

The Astros tied it in the ninth when Mark Bailey and Dickie Thon led off with consecutive home runs against Jim Winn.

Phillies 2, Braves 1

Ron Roenicke's RBI single with two outs in ninth inning gave Philadelphia and Steve Bedrosian the victory over Atlanta. Roenicke singled home Von Hayes, who led off the ninth with a double against Craig McMurtry, 1-2.

Bedrosian, traded by the Braves to Phillies in the off-season, pitched two innings for the victory.

Philly, Celts Get Early Picks

NEW YORK (AP) — With Philadelphia and Boston getting the first two picks in the June 17 collegiate draft, NBA Commissioner David Stern said it might be time to consider a way to prevent weak teams from trading their first-round picks.

"If I had my way, I'd clamp down on teams trading first rounders," Stern said. "Weaker teams have been the ones who often resist curbs on dealing first-round picks. They want to be free to deal their assets, and many of them feel that a top draft pick is one of their prime assets."

The Celtics and 76ers, owners of the best and fourth-best records in the league, traded players they had little use for to get the first-round picks of the Los Angeles (formerly San Diego) Clippers and Seattle. Without the trades, it would have been the Clippers and SuperSonics in Sunday's draft lottery that determined the order for the first eight picks.

But once the envelopes were placed in a plexiglass drum and opened one by one, luck took over, and Philadelphia and Boston proved to be as lucky as they are good.

"We had an overload of forwards and San Diego was trying to put together a team," Philadelphia General Manager Pat Williams said of the 1979 deal that sent Joe Bryant to the Clippers in exchange for their 1986 first-round pick. "The Clippers probably felt 1986 would never come, but they also could have been the world champions by now."

Following Philadelphia and Boston in the lottery were the four teams who did not make the playoffs — Golden State, Indiana, New York and Phoenix, respectively. Dallas, a third playoff team, will pick seventh, and Cleveland will choose eighth.

The only consolation for the rest of the league is that Boston and Philadelphia may not get a franchise player, one who can keep them at the top for another 10 years.

In the last three seasons, Patrick Ewing, Akeem Olatunji and Ralph Sampson were clear-cut No. 1 choices, but there is considerable doubt about who will be the first selection this year.

The first pick could be 7-footer Brad Daugherty of North Carolina.

"If you polled any five NBA executives, Daugherty would probably be the front-runner," Williams said. "Daugherty is a fail-proof pick. He's a player without any downside. He comes from a great program, he can shoot, he can rebound some and he can play both forward and center. But the question is whether there's a player out there who has a greater upside — someone who's going to be a superstar five years down the road. This would have been a great year to win if there were an Ewing out there."

Williams also spoke highly of Walter Berry of St. John's, and William Bedford of Memphis State, two draft-eligible juniors.

General Manager Scotty Stirling of the Knicks, who won the lottery last year and got Ewing, said he wasn't sure who New York would get with the fifth pick, "but I'm pretty sure I know who I won't get. It would be an upset if Daugherty, Bedford and (North Carolina State's) Chris Washburn are still around."

Williams, who sat next to Celtics President Red Auerbach as the seven lottery envelopes were opened, said both the 76ers and Boston were winners in the lottery, even with Philadelphia picking first.

"Boston will get a very, very good player, and with the kind of team they have, that's not good news for the rest of us," Williams said. "Everything Red touches seems to come out right."

While the top pick isn't obvious, the seven lottery teams all believe they will get a good player.

Philadelphia 76ers General Manager, Pat Williams, left, and Boston Celtics President Red Auerbach react to receiving first and second picks in the June 17 NBA draft of college players during the league's lottery Sunday in New York. The lottery determined the order of the first eight selections in the draft. After Philadelphia, Boston, Golden State, Indiana, New York, Phoenix, Dallas and Cleveland will have the next seven picks. Parsons Beats Richmond In Atlanta Invitational

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Benny Parsons, using a fast pit stop 41 laps from the finish, captured the $300,000 Atlanta Invitational stock car race Sunday by 2.01 seconds over Tim Richmond.

Parsons, driving an Oldsmobile, averaged 158.766 mph in the 100-lap event on the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway.

Parsons, needing only 12 seconds to take on two tires after pitting on the 59th lap, built a 3.81-second lead over Richmond after 72 laps. But Richmond then closed the margin to 1.85 seconds before being bumped on the left rear by David Marcis in the first turn of the 84th lap.

Richmond's Chevrolet then fell 3.86 seconds behind and lost even more ground — to almost five seconds — after 90 laps, before making up ground late in the race.

The victory was worth $75,000 for Parsons and earned him a spot in next year's The Winston race for winners only.

Bobby Hillin Jr. finished third in a Buick, Lake Speed was fourth in an Oldsmobile and Joe Ruttman fifth in a Buick.

Parsons took the lead for good on the 64th lap after Richmond had led all but four of the first 60 laps. Richmond's mandatory stop for two tires took 16.8 seconds.

Ruttman also was running with the leaders before he pitted for four tires and a chassis change that took almost 33 seconds.

Marcos Calls for 'Peaceful' Return To Power

By DOYLE MCMANUS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HONOLULU — Ferdinand E. Marcos, in his first open political rally since leaving his homeland in disgrace, publicly launched a campaign Sunday for his return to office.

The deposed president of the Philippines called on his followers to fight for his restoration but to "avoid bloodletting."

"Without violence, we will try to convince our people ... that freedom is the only option," Marcos told a cheering crowd of about 5,000 Filipinos and Filipino-Americans.

"Rest assured, I speak as the legitimate president of the Philippines," he said to a roar of support.

The crowd, including hundreds of loyal clansmen from Marcos' home province of Ilocos, cheered as Marcos entered a basketball arena here and sat on a red velvet throne.

They cheered again as Marcos and his wife, Imelda, stepped to the microphone to sing an old Filipino love song.

Officially, the event was a Mother's Day tribute to Imelda and a celebration of the couple's 32nd wedding anniversary. Imelda Marcos, who has been widely criticized for amassing huge quantities of art, expensive clothing and chic shoes during her husband's 20-year rule, wore a conservative green dress, a pair of simple black high heels and a crown of tropical flowers.

But in reality — a reality shown by the hundreds of Marcos campaign T-shirts around the hall — the rally was the first major event of Marcos' new campaign in exile: a growing effort to promote his return to the office he lost to a popular uprising in February.

Noting that Sunday was Mother's Day, Marcos said: "If we, this generation, cannot redeem our freedom with our lives ... we will bear a generation that will redeem the freedom and justice and honor of our country."

That philosophical note and Marcos' repeated call to avoid "a possible civil war" in the Philippines appeared aimed at blunting criticism from the Reagan administration that he is abusing U.S. hospitality by fomenting violence to destabilize the new government of President Corazon Aquino.

Marcos aides said the rally was videotaped for the use of Marcos loyalists in the Philippines, but it was not broadcast directly.

Despite the holiday air of the rally, with vendors hawking cold drinks and souvenirs, Marcos' political aides and the Reagan administration took a more serious view.

"We wish he wouldn't do this sort of thing, and he knows it," a senior State Department official said.

After several weeks of despondent inactivity after his fall, Marcos has resumed political life with a vengeance — asserting his claim in public that he is the legitimate president of the Philippines.

More worrisome to both Manila and Washington, he has also begun organizing his supporters to build support for a return to power should Aquino falter.

Marcos has addressed rallies in the Philippines by telephone and even acted as the long-distance guest on a Manila radio talk show.

A Marcos associate here says the ex-president has also begun working seriously to assemble a new political organization, holding strategy meetings with aides until 3 or 4 a.m.

In the United States, an organization called "the Friends of Marcos in America" has been organizing committees, publishing newsletters and raising funds.

In the Philippines, a Marcos-organized rally in Manila on May 1 turned into a riot that police officials said appeared to have been planned. Marcos supporters have also demonstrated in front of the U.S. Embassy in Manila, accusing the State Department of having kidnapped their leader.

The sudden flurry of pro-Marcos agitation has touched off widespread rumors in Manila that the exiled former president might secretly return to lead a revolt.

Both the Reagan and Aquino administrations have complained that Marcos' actions could destabilize the Philippine government, which the United States has pledged to support.

And during his visit to Manila last week, Secretary of State George P. Shultz pointedly advised some ex-Marcos aides not to undermine Aquino. Asked about Marcos' telephone calls back home, Shultz said bluntly, "I don't think it's helpful, and we have given him our views. But in the United States we believe in freedom ... he can pick up the telephone."

The Aquino government and Washington differ on how to deal with the problem. The Reagan administration wants Marcos to move out of the United States, as he has said he wants to do, and has argued that this would make it more difficult for him to continue his political campaigning. Aquino's government wants Marcos to stay where he is, in Hawaii, where he is subject to subpoenas from American courts.

RETURN SOUGHT — Former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos joins his wife, Imelda, in singing "I Am A Filipino" during a rally Sunday in Honolulu. The party marked their 32nd wedding anniversary, and Marcos used the occasion to urge thousands of supporters to work for his return to power. (AP Laserphoto)

GAO Says Pentagon Rushing Development Of New Missile

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is pushing ahead with development of a new air-to-air missile before testing of the weapon is complete, a General Accounting Office report says.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger recently asked for congressional approval to proceed with the weapon, even though a new round of congressionally ordered flight tests had just barely begun, the GAO said.

The draft report from the congress-sional watchdog agency was obtained by The Associated Press over the weekend. It has not been released publicly.

The GAO report reviewed the Pentagon's AMRAAM — Advanced Medium Range Air-to-Air Missile — a weapon that has run into a series of problems in recent years.

Last fall, Congress ordered that the AMRAAM be canceled unless Weinberger notified Capitol Hill by March 1 that its problems had been corrected and that 17,000 of the weapons could be purchased for no more than $5.2 billion.

The weapon, whose primary contractor is Hughes Aircraft Co., has been under development since 1981, and purchases were to have started last year. The program is chiefly for the Air Force, although the Navy wants to buy as many as 7,000 of the missiles. The Air Force plans to buy 17,000.

Shultz Raps Planned Cut In State Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Returning from a 17-day Asia trip, Secretary of State George P. Shultz today was ready to take on Congress over contemplated cuts in U.S. programs overseas that he said would result in "a tragedy for national security interests."

Shultz said a projected reduction of a half-billion dollars in anti-terrorist measures proposed by the Reagan administration might expose embassies to terrorist attacks.

In that event, Shultz said, he would tell Congress "I'm not derelict in my duty, you're derelict in your duty because you would not appropriate the money."

The White House has proposed a budget of $22.6 billion for the State Department for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. This includes $1.4 billion to enhance security measures at U.S. embassies to protect American diplomats and other workers against terrorism.

The Senate and the House Budget Committees have sharply reduced the department's appropriation to $17.8 billion and left it to the administration to make allocations for individual programs.

The issue is still to be decided by a Congressional conference committee. Asked on his flight home if his campaign to reverse the budget-cutting would succeed, Shultz said, "I'm going to increase the chances by screaming about it."

He said he planned to meet with members of Congress this week.

Tunisian Admits He Was Terrorist

NANCY, France (AP) — Police sources said today a Tunisian arrested after a domestic quarrel has admitted to carrying out terrorist attacks, including store bombings in Paris and London that killed one person and injured 16.

Habib Maamar, 25, a native of Bizerte, Tunisia, was arrested Friday after his girlfriend went to police complaining that he had beaten her. Further investigation linked Maamar to terrorist activities, the sources said.

The sources, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said that in questioning overnight, Maamar admitted to the Feb. 23, 1985 bombing of the Marks & Spencer store in Paris, in which one person died and 14 were injured, and the December 1983 bombing of the company's London store, in which two people were slightly injured.

The sources said Maamar also furnished police with the name of his contact in Baghdad, Iraq, a man identified as Abu Ibrahim, who they said appeared to be an official of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

According to the sources, Abu Ibrahim gave Maamar his orders and explosives.

The sources said Maamar also acknowledged responsibility for the Aug. 21, 1984, bombing attack on the Israeli Leumi Bank in Paris, which caused only material damage, as well as an attempt on an El Al counter in London. The sources gave no date or other details on the El Al affair.

The sources said several other people were being interrogated in the case, including his Algerian girlfriend and a French woman.

Maamar has lived illegally in the Nancy region for several years, the sources said.

Donahue, Protester Brawl At Airport

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Donahue, who deftly handles a variety of sensitive issues on his syndicated television talk show, brawled in an airport terminal with a man who shouted abuse at him and his wife, authorities said.

The fist fight in LaGuardia Airport's central terminal broke out Sunday after the man, a supporter of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, shouted that Donahue and his wife, actress Marlo Thomas, "ought to be murdered," said Port Authority Police Officer Mitchell Kaufman.

Donahue responded, the two began shouting and the fight began, Kaufman said.

The incident occurred as Donahue and Ms. Thomas were at the airport to catch a flight to Boston where Ms. Thomas received an award Sunday night for her work against nuclear arms.

"I thought about it on the plane. And you know, if we have to have war, let it be man-to-man and fist-to-fist," Donahue said when he arrived at the dinner. "What this technology does is make it impossible to be brave. If you drop a bomb on my neighborhood, I can't prove that I'm tough."

Donahue and Ms. Thomas were walking through the terminal about 12:15 p.m. EDT when the man yelled, "Donahue and his wife ought to be murdered," police said.

"The fists were flying," said Kaufman. "Several officers responded, and they had to pull them apart."

The protester was identified as William Ferguson Jr., 44, of Ridgefield, N.J., a member of the International Caucus of Labor Committees, said Port Authority spokesman Leon Katz. The caucus is a pro-nuclear group affiliated with LaRouche.

Ms. Thomas and Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alice Walker received the Helen M. Caldicott Leadership Award Sunday night at a ball sponsored by the Women's Action for Nuclear Disarmament.

"I've known my husband for nine years and I've never seen anything like that," Ms. Thomas said at a news conference before the ball. "I am proud to say my husband did not throw the first punch."

Sponsors Give Nod To CBS Fall Shows

By MORGAN GENDEL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The nation's television critics are months away from reviewing the new fall shows, but CBS has been given an enthusiastic nod from the group whose criticism counts most: the sponsors.

The men and women of the advertising agencies that buy the commercial time that pays all the bills at the three networks convened Thursday in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles to watch CBS' seven new shows scheduled for 1986-87. Judging from the response in Los Angeles, the fall prime-time lineup is, as one representative said, "a major, major improvement over last year."

"From what I've seen here today ... CBS will definitely erode a portion of NBC's dominance," said Bill Formeca of the Evans Weinberg agency, echoing the sentiments of many of the 100 or so sponsor representatives gathered at CBS Television City. The CBS presentation originated in New York and was made here via tape-delay.

Advertisers stopped short of making too many predictions about next season, however, since ABC and NBC had not yet announced their new shows. (ABC is scheduled to unveil its fall lineup Tuesday and NBC on Thursday.)

Reaction from the Los Angeles crowd also suggested how un dependable pre-season research and guesswork is in determining a new series' chances for survival.

Steve Allen Says No Talent Needed To Host Talk Show

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — When Steve Allen wrote the song "This Could Be the Start of Something Big," he wasn't referring to his most lasting testament, "The Tonight Show," the insomniac's delight he started 30 years ago.

You can credit Allen for establishing the late-night viewing habit and for introducing the desk-and-chair format to the culture, but don't call this versatile entertainer TV's first talk-show host. At least not to his face.

"The Tonight Show" in my years was only a talk show on certain nights, when I couldn't think of anything more creative to do," said Allen, who believes interviewing guests requires skill — he singled out Phil Donahue's provocativeness and Merv Griffin's curiosity — but not any discernible talent.

"Talent is restricted to the cultural arts," said Allen, the noted comedian, pianist, songwriter and author whose 27th book, "How to Make A Speech," was released recently.

He said the talk-show host "gets as much credit as the guest merely for saying, 'Oh, really, so what happened then?'" He likened the job to a disc jockey who wins fame by playing other people's music.

"If you interview Frank Sinatra or Donald Duck, on this planet you become as famous as Frank Sinatra or Donald Duck," Allen said. "Hosting a talk show is no big deal."

Whatever it is, Allen did his brand of it first. As pioneer of NBC's "The Tonight Show" from 1954-57, Allen strove for an uninhibited, comic nuttiness. His successor, Jack Paar, stressed the art of conversation. The current king of the midnight hour, Johnny Carson, has combined both aspects.

A "Tonight Show" retrospective will be included in "NBC's 60th Anniversary Celebration" tonight. The three-hour salute to six decades of NBC radio and TV history will include appearances by 100 stars and highlights from NBC's broadcasting annals.

Allen will be shown doing a monologue from NBC's opening "Tonight Show" in September 1954. He tells that first audience the studio was selected because it's big enough to sleep 800, which is what critics said would be essential for a show past much of America's bedtime.

Then he says to expect the unexpected because he has no idea what's going to happen. Like the night he broadcast from Miami Beach and dressed up with a group of real U.S. Marines to launch a mock naval assault on the mainland.

"At the time, Fidel Castro was holed up in the mountains (in Cuba)," Allen said. "People said, 'My God, we're being invaded.'"

Today, that would be considered a David-Letterman type stunt, but Letterman has said his staged wackiness was inspired by Allen's skits and routines. While Letterman reads letters from the sticks on his late-night show, Allen used to don a ludicrous press hat and get red in the face reading angry letters to the editor that he actually took from newspapers.

"That works as well in North Dakota as it does in New York," Allen said. "Nowadays, there are tabloids all over the country, and there's more violent language in those letters."

Another Allen-Letterman similarity is their infectious laughs. In a classic TV segment, Allen became hysterical and lost control on the air.

He had hurriedly changed clothes on a commercial break and rushed on stage, but several strands of hair were sticking out of a goofy hat. He saw it on the TV monitor.

"That got me laughing," Allen recalled. "Then I became seized by the laughing-in-church response. The more I thought, 'Steve, shape up,' the more I laughed. It was four minutes of hysterical laughter and the audience joined in. That could only have happened on a live show. Today, the director would stop tape, we'd compose ourselves, and audiences would have missed that pure gold."

Another Allen-Letterman connection involves Allen's contention that in 1981 he was wooed by former NBC president Fred Silverman to do a follow-up program to Carson's "Tonight Show," only to have Carson veto the proposal.

Silverman, however, said he didn't remember it that way. "It just didn't work out," he said. "Steve has always had it in his head that that's what happened. It's true that Carson may have had some consultation right, but I don't think he had absolute control over the time period."

The year after the Allen-Silverman discussions, "Late Night With David Letterman" was created — a co-production of NBC Entertainment and Johnny Carson Productions.

Steve Allen was back on late-night TV, if only in spirit.

What do big banks do with interest they don't pay you?

Ever wondered why First Federal's federally-insured investment accounts pay consistently higher rates than the big banks' federally-insured investment accounts? Good question.

But the difference in our rates and their rates is no great wonder. As the only financial institution that operates offices only in Pitt County, we neither need nor can afford, a huge television advertising campaign. Or a huge, granite building. No big operating centers with big computers—our smaller computer systems service our customers nicely. And since our offices are all close by, we save quite a bit on courier services too.

At First Federal, we feel that some of the larger financial institutions spend too much time and money being big and too little time and money on what made them big: their customers. That's why we take the time to learn your name and spend the money on higher interest rates. We don't skimp on products and services either. You'll find most every financial service you're likely to need at First Federal.

When you add it all up, a bigger bank isn't necessarily a better place for your investments. It's only, well, bigger.

FIRST FEDERAL

The best place to bank.
