Soviets Put Chernobyl Death Toll At 6

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Crews at the Chernobyl nuclear reactor stopped the white-hot core from burning into the earth and it now will have to be buried in concrete for centuries, Soviet officials said today.

Also today, a Soviet official said a total of six people have died since the April 26 accident at the Ukrainian power plant spewed radiation over much of Europe. A vaguely worded government statement, issued Monday, led to speculation that eight people might have died.

In a report from Chernobyl, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda quoted Yevgeny Velikhov, a coordinator of the cleanup at the plant, as saying it could take months to finish encasing the reactor in concrete to seal off its radioactive core.

Ivan Yemelyanov, deputy director of the organization that designed the reactor, said today the concrete also would be poured into the reactor's cooling apparatus and other portions of the system.

Once sealed, the reactor would have to remain "entombed" for hundreds of years while its radioactive core decays into harmless substances, Yemelyanov told West European reporters in Moscow. A transcript of his comments was provided by one of the reporters present.

Velikhov, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, told Pravda a crisis developed 10 days after the accident, which began when an explosion rocked Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor and it caught fire.

"The reactor was damaged. Its heart was a white-hot core, a scorched, active zone that was somehow 'hanging,'" Velikhov said.

Scientists had feared that tons of sand, lead and other material dumped on the reactor to stop leaking radiation would force the burning core into a reservoir of water below the reactor, he said.

"Would we manage to keep it intact or would it go down into the earth? No one in the world has ever been in such a complex situation," he said.

Velikhov said scientists averted a catastrophe by pumping out the water and drilling holes to draw heat from the reactor. It was not clear when the holes were drilled, but Velikhov said the effort succeeded.

Other reports have said workers began pouring concrete below the reactor to reinforce its foundation.

Yemelyanov repeated assertions by U.N. experts that the chain reaction within the reactor stopped immediately after the accident.

He said the reactor contained 192 tons of uranium, but that there was very little of the more dangerous uranium-235 left since the reactor had been brought down to 6 percent power for a maintenance operation when the explosion erupted.

Yemelyanov confirmed speculation that the reactor did not have a conventional containment vessel used in the West to prevent radiation leaks in case of a breakdown.

He said officials hope to restart the three undamaged reactors.

Pravda said crews were also working to remove radioactive particles that were scattered at the plant and in the 18-mile evacuated zone around it.

The government newspaper Izvestia has said topsoil in a "danger zone" is being removed and the area paved over with concrete. It did not say how big the "danger zone" is.

Pravda said the Kiev subway construction organization had sent a crew of tunnel workers. The paper issued an appeal for Soviet specialists to make themselves available, especially drillers, excavators and crane operators.

The newspaper said volunteers from all over the country were offering their services and coming to Chernobyl from as far away as

Ayden Rezoning Proposal Denied

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer
AYDEN — Residents spoke out against a rezoning request Monday at the town board meeting, and Ayden commissioners unanimously denied the request after hearing the comments of the public.

The hearing was held after the Ayden Planning Board recommended the rezoning from RA20 to RA8MH of a 26-acre tract of land owned by A.A. Adams of Grifton located adjacent to the east town limits and Sunrise Park subdivision. RA20 zoning allows agriculture and low-density residential development; RA8MH zoning allows for multifamily dwellings and mobile home parks.

Speaking for the residents of the Sunrise Park area, attorney Judith Kornegay told the members of the board, "Land and a home is the largest single investment anyone ever makes. All the citizens want to do is protect the value of their property."

Ms. Kornegay said that if the land were rezoned to allow trailer parks and multifamily dwellings, the value of the surrounding land would decrease and the rezoning would result in "spot zoning" instead of an orderly growth pattern.

The Rev. Stan Wingard, pastor of Community Baptist Church, said the church's trustees were against the rezoning. "We want to maintain the type of community we have there," he said.

BUSINESS DAMAGED — The Ayden Sport Shop on 312 East Ave. in Ayden was heavily damaged by fire Monday. Ayden Police Chief Tommy Burney said the fire was discovered by a police officer about 9:45 p.m. When firemen arrived the front of the building in the showroom area was engulfed in flames. Firemen from Ayden and Winterville brought the blaze under control in minutes, but the building sustained heavy fire, smoke and water damage. Burney said the building, which was owned by Poe and Bill Worthington, was valued at about $100,000. The cause of the fire is under investigation by Ayden police. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Pender Blaze Splits

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (AP) — Firefighters widened lines around two halves of a stubborn 75,000-acre forest fire today, patrolling the middle for flareups, as they waited for possible afternoon showers to help end the nine-day blaze.

"Basically what we have now is two smaller fires rather than one massive one," said Tom Hegele, spokesman for the state Division of Forest Resources. "The fire is not out (in the middle), but there's no active flame front. It's burned most of the area and stuff is still smoking in there and we have to constantly patrol it."

Rod Gonski, a meteorologist specializing in forestry weather, said there was a 30 percent chance of measurable precipitation over the fire, although earlier forecasts put the chance of rain at 50 percent for the region.

"There'll be thunderstorms around, but whether they'll put rain on that particular spot is kind of up in the air," he said, adding that a weak warm front from South Carolina could push the chance of rain to 60 percent by Wednesday.

"I hope they're right," said Charles Crail of the U.S. Forest Service, who said workers were mopping up burning fires inside the containment lines.

"Of course, we could be mopping up for weeks," he said. "Hopefully we're seeing the light at the end of the tunnel."

Meanwhile, U.S. Marine Corps crash wagons — normally used for putting out fires at airports — were extinguishing hot spots and mopping up throughout the fire.

Crail said bulldozers and tractors were reinforcing lines on the northern extension of the 14-mile-long fire and on the southern front about two miles north of Hampstead. On the southern section, firefighters Monday night lit backfires to head off the blaze.

Hegele said it was a 10,000-acre backfire lit Sunday night that ended up breaking the back of the fire, which had jumped containment lines and was threatening Maple Hill to the north.

No Runoffs

Two candidates for the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, both eligible to request a runoff vote on June 3, today opted not to seek a runoff.

Candidate Jim Young, a candidate for a commissioner seat in the Pitt County 1st District, has withdrawn his earlier request for a runoff against Tom Johnson. In the May 6 primary elections, Young received 3,367 votes to 4,925 for Johnson. On May 8, Young had notified the Pitt County Board of Elections of his intention to seek a runoff.

Pitt County commissioner candidate Burney Tucker, running in the May 6 primary for re-election to the 4th District seat, made a decision not to ask for a runoff. Tucker, an incumbent who has served 14 consecutive years as a Pitt County commissioner, received 4,151 votes May 6. Newcomer Kenneth Dews polled 4,784 votes.

The two announced their decision not to seek a runoff shortly before the noon deadline today to make a decision.

Pitt Area Spared Major Damage From Drought

By HAROLD JOYNER
Reflector Staff Writer
Even though Pitt and surrounding counties are experiencing one of the driest seasons on record, local fire and farm officials say area residents are fortunate that no major fires have started and no crops have been lost to parched conditions.

"Only one section of District 4 (an eight-county area which includes Pitt and Beaufort) fire area has had any fire problems, and that was a small portion of Onslow County," said Mark Webb of the N.C. Forestry Service.

A burning ban will continue to be in effect in the state, he said, until the area receives the much-needed rain. Webb also said a person who violates the order may receive a maximum fine of $50 and 30 days jail.

Meanwhile, the Pitt agricultural extension office said plants may benefit from the lack of rain by providing a stronger root system, especially in tobacco. Pitt Extension Agent Mitch Smith said, however, that soybeans and peanuts may experience some damage from the lack of rainfall.

"Anyone who has not delayed planting of soybeans and peanuts is asking for trouble," Smith said. Farmers who have clipped their tobacco beds with a mower as opposed to conventional planting may have a better crop.

Tobacco buds have the benefit of not needing a lot of water, he said, so farmers who clipped their plants and transplanted early should experience no problems.

For farmers who have the luxury of irrigating fields, Smith said it is still no substitute for rain. "We've been lucky in that the temperatures haven't been that high. We've also been fortunate to have low humidity levels. Those two factors, in excess amounts, seem to be the most stressful to crops."

Forecasters at the National Weather Service said the area has between a 30 percent to 50 percent chance of rain by Wednesday. And Smith said there is still plenty of time for farmers to catch up on their field production. "It's too early to throw in the towel," he said.

Precautions should be taken for people using chain saws in a dry area, Webb said, as well as making sure grass around an electric fence is kept low. "While the incidence of fire is not as great as someone burning debris," he said, "the threat is still there because a spark can still ignite the dry grass."

ECVC Closes Swimming Pool

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer
While Greenville city officials wait for the results of a feasibility study being conducted by a Jacksonville consulting firm on the matter, the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center has closed its pool, citing prohibitive operating costs.

"We're still waiting on consideration from the city. The city is awaiting the feasibility study outcome before they give it any consideration," said Daneel le Roux, ECVC's executive director. "In the meantime, we've closed the pool."

The consulting firm, Cole & Diemler Associates, is expected to have the study completed by June 1, according to Boyd Lee, director of Recreation and Parks Department.

"We asked them to do the feasibility study for the parks department to see if it was possible for us to take it over and generate enough income to support it ourselves, without it being a burden to the city," Lee said.

Lee said the firm, which was hired early last month, is expected to provide suggestions for salvaging the $2 million facility from an unbiased viewpoint.

"They're just a third party to give us a look at the total picture," he said. "The firm has been responsible for various YMCA's and other municipal fittings, so, hopefully, they might be able to give us some sort of plan."

City Council members and the recreation commission will base their decision on whether or not taking over the pool will be a financial burden, according to Lee.

"We've been offered to take it over and operate it. Our problem is it costs $120,000 to $140,000 per year to run it," he said. "We have to find out how we can feasibly pick up that expense and make it available for residents."

"It is a tremendous facility, but we have to learn how to maintain and operate it," Lee said. "Basically, it comes down to a matter of money."

The matter of money is the main reason why the ECVC can no longer operate the pool, which is easily accessible for the elderly and handicapped, said le Roux.

"For this kind of expense, to keep it open for 60 to 70 people is not economically feasible," he said. "We incurred $8,500 in direct expenses, and the pool costs $12,000 per month to keep it open."

Community residents from various groups frequently used the facilities when they were in operation, but more are needed if the pool is to be operated in the black, according to le Roux.

"We're not in the business of recreation," le Roux said. "It is important to get more people to use it, but we're not set up for that kind of operation."

Women Plan To Climb Chinese Peak

By CLAIRE MARTIN
The Denver Post
DENVER (AP) — When Kathleen Giel was trekking in rugged western China last summer, she often gazed at the nearby Himalayas, wondering what it would be like to climb among them. This summer she and eight other women will find out.

Giel and the others, four from Colorado, are the first all-female expedition to receive permission from the People's Republic of China to climb the 25,325-foot Mount Kongur, the highest peak in the Pamir range of the Himalayas.

The Chinese government began allowing foreign expeditions there only five years ago. Five teams have attempted to climb Kongur so far. Only one team was successful, and one climber died.

"We're trying to set ourselves up for success physically and psychologically," said Pat Dillingham of Boulder, a 29-year-old former Outward Bound teacher.

She said the group members had met for five days in Conifer recently, getting to know one another in the mountain home of expedition member Carole Petiet, a psychologist.

"I think it's a first," Dillingham said. "Most expeditions — men or women — don't meet until base camp. I think the distinguishing thing about this group is that we did get together and lay that social groundwork. I think there'll be good payoffs for that."

Added Petiet: "A lot of expeditions don't prepare climbers for psychological stress, and group dynamics can interfere with a climb just as much as technical problems."

She said she planned to present a paper to the American Psychological Association on the "communication and power styles among the expedition team members, looking at how that impacts on the process of the climb."

In addition to her paper on the psychological aspects of the Mount Kongur climb, Petiet is working with Dr. Brenda Townes, a University of Washington psychologist who was involved in a similar project on Mount Everest.

She said that research involved the psychological and physical impact of altitude.

"It's the first research, to my knowledge, that's been done exclusively on women. Most research on the effects of altitude have been done on men, and there's been no neuro-psychological research done at all on women."

Eight of the women on the team — Dillingham, Giel of Berkeley, Calif., Kathy Nilsen of Aspen, Deb Piranian of Leadville, Suzanne Hopkins of Boston, Nancy Goforth of Anchorage, Alaska, Nancy Fitzsimmons of Driggs, Idaho, and Joan Provencher of San Francisco — are or were teachers in outdoor adventure programs such as Outward Bound.

All are seasoned climbers. Dillingham said several had climbed at or above 20,000 feet. Petiet has mountaineered in the Swiss Alps and in the Canadian Rockies. Dillingham has climbed in the Cascades, including winter ascents, and the Rockies. Piranian has mountaineered in Washington, Switzerland and Colorado. Nilsen, a registered nurse, has spent seven seasons climbing in Alaska and the Canadian Rockies, and ascended the Yukon's Mount Kennedy via a new route.

"I think there's enough mountaineering experience that the length of the trip — two months — isn't an issue for people," Dillingham said.

"Actually, that length is typical for an expedition. Our concern was conflicts, in terms of our needs, or in terms of personalities; what we're like when we get under stress, and what we need other people to do so we can continue to function effectively." She said that during the Conifer gathering, the group had talked about strengths and weaknesses, and "about how we'd feel if we didn't come back...."

"As for myself, I said that if I didn't come back, my attitude would be that I don't have a death wish, but if I had a choice in the matter, I'd rather die on a mountain than in a crash on the road."

The women have local equipment sponsors but are still looking for contributions. They plan to set out from San Francisco on June 5 and will start from a base camp at 14,000 feet. They plan to return to the United States at the end of July.

Tax-deductible contributions can be sent to the non-profit American Mountain Foundation, 18 Kingsford Road, Hanover, N.H., 03755.

Greenville Junior Women Have Installation And Give Awards

Other workshops will be held throughout the state.

Couple Marries Saturday Aboard Yacht 'Amorato'

SPOONER'S CREEK — Sylvia Gene Wells and Robert Starling were united in marriage aboard the "Amorata" Saturday morning at 11:30. The Rev. Alvin Davis performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin E. Wells of Greenville, and the bridegroom is the son of Martin Starling and Thelma Tugwell, both of Farmville.

The "Amorata" departed from Spooner's Creek at 11 a.m. and the wedding was performed in Bogue Sound. The 60-foot yacht, dry docked in Morehead City, was decorated with balloons, flowers and banners.

The bride wore a floor length dress of blue silk covered with an overlay of white lace. The puff sleeves and sweetheart neckline were also accented with white chantilly lace. She carried a nosegay of dusty pink and white silk roses with a touch of blue lilies, adorned with silk baby's breath and stephanotis, and tied with blue and white streamers.

Niki Rasberry of Farmville was the maid of honor. She wore a floor length dress of dusty rose taffeta and carried a nosegay of mixed silk flowers and white and dusty rose streamers.

Robbie Starling, son of the bridegroom, served as best man.

The mothers of the bride and bridegroom were remembered corsages of white roses.

A reception followed the ceremony and the wedding party sailed to Beaufort House Restaurant for dinner.

After a wedding trip to Atlanta the couple will reside in Greenville.

Bridge Winners Are Announced

Mrs. C.I. McClelland and George Martin were first place winners in the duplicate bridge club game Wednesday morning. Their percentage was .607.

Others placing were: Mrs. C.F. Galloway and Mrs. C.D. Elks, second; Mrs. Everett Pittman and Mrs. John McConney, third; Mrs. Zeb Cummings and Mrs. Roy Hadden, fourth; Sally Kirkwood and Mary Clark, fifth.

Afternoon, north-south winners were: Mrs. J.M. Horton and Mrs. George Martin, first with .539 percent; Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Mrs. E.J. Poindexter, second; Kathleen Metz and Mrs. Sidney Skinner, third; Mrs. M.H. Bynum and Mrs. Eli Bloom, fourth.

East-West: Dave Proctor and Graham Davis, first with .608 percent; Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Ray Neeland, second; Mrs. Harold Forbes and Effie Williams, third; Mrs. David Stevens and Mrs. William McConnell, fourth.

Club championship winners Saturday afternoon were: Dorothy deSherbinin and Graham Davis, first with .583 percent; Elizabeth Roque and Dr. Charles Duffy, second; Dot McKemie and Ray Gunderson, third; Beulah Eagles and Dave Proctor, fourth; Dorothy Barnhill and Ray Neeland, fifth; Kathryn McConnell and Lewis Newsome, sixth; Anne Forbes and Emma Warren, seventh; tied for eighth were Mr. and Mrs. Everett Pittman with Virginia Mansour and Audrey Solberg.

Club championships will be held Wednesday morning and afternoon.

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

How Long Should Husband Hold Open Public Door?

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can help us come to some kind of agreement. When my husband and I go to a restaurant or a public place and he holds the door open for me, I walk on in. About that time, another couple or even some women walk up, and he continues holding the door open for them. He says I should wait until all the others have gone in. I say he should follow me in and let the others open the door for themselves. (If there's another man, he should hold the door open for his lady.)

When my husband and I get separated — which is often when he keeps holding the door open for people — he gets upset.

Should I wait, or should my husband turn the door over to those who walk up and follow me? — LEE IN QUARTZSITE, ARIZ.

DEAR LEE: Your husband should hold the door open for you, and those who follow closely on your heels — be they men or women. If he's holding the door for so many that you and he become separated, he's overdoing it. And if this is the biggest problem you and he ever have, you're lucky.

DEAR ABBY: You were wrong in your answer to "New Mexico Mess," the grandmother who was concerned about her 15-year-old grandson's sexually active relationship with an 18-year-old girl. You stated that the girl could be charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Abby, New Mexico's claim to shame is that the age of consent in this state is 13!

My heart goes out to the grandmother. Tragically, the type of situation she describes is not uncommon. I know of one case where a 13-year-old girl became involved with a 40-year-old man against her parents' wishes. The authorities could do nothing about it because the child had given her consent!

As a state senator, I have twice carried a bill to our Legislature that would raise the age of consent to 16 for both boys and girls — 18 when force is involved. Twice, Abby, I have come back empty-handed.

I intend to keep carrying this bill back to Santa Fe until I get it through. Perhaps if this appeared in your column it might help. — SEN. W.P. VANDERGRIF, NEW MEXICO STATE SENATE

DEAR SEN. VANDERGRIF: I'll try! This is a plea to all my New Mexico readers: Phone or write to your state legislators and let them know that you think the age of consent should be raised to 16.

Are you with me, Alamogordo, Albuquerque, Carlsbad, Clovis, Farmington, Gallup, Hobbs, Las Cruces, Portales and Roswell?

DEAR ABBY: I am the writer of the original "Forgotten Parents" letter, and having read the follow-up letters you have published since, I would like to clarify a few points:

Perhaps I did not make myself clear when I stated that our son owed us (his parents) $10,000 and has made no effort to repay any part of it. We merely wondered if it had any bearing on the fact that he had severed his relationship with us.

We do, in fact, have a promissory note, which we would never, under any circumstances, put into force. I am sure my son knows this. We have no idea why he did not repay the money. The money is insignificant in comparison with the loss of our son and grandchildren.

To clarify further, I would like your readers to know that we did send our son several written messages, asking for an explanation, but received no answer. I telephoned his wife and asked her what was wrong, and she said there wasn't anything wrong, and was reluctant to discuss the situation.

I have only one consolation — that I am I, and he is he — for I would not want to have his guilt when either his father or I dies. Unless, of course, he has no conscience, which I do not believe is possible. — FORGOTTEN MOTHER

Theft Reported

A break-in involving the concession stand at Elm Street Park was reported to Greenville police at 12:20 p.m. Monday by Dan Gordan, Little League supervisor.

Police said $6 in currency and assorted merchandise valued at $50 was taken in the incident. Damages from the break-in amounted to about $50, according to police.

Vehicles Entered

Greenville police said four incidents of breaking and entering of vehicles were reported Monday.

Officer J.M. Jones said Harold Greene reported at 10:07 a.m. that a vehicle parked at 105 E. Baywood Lane was entered and an amplifier valued at $200, two speakers valued at $75 and assorted cassettes valued at $36 were taken.

Damage to two company trucks parked at Southmet on North Greene Street were set at $500 as a result of an incident reported about 7:20 a.m., police said.

A vehicle break-in at 200 B-2 Kings Row Apartments resulted in the theft of an amplifier valued at $175 and damages set at $115, police said.

Police said the trunk of a car parked at Bob Barbour Volvo on N.C. 11 was pried open in an incident reported at 8:24 a.m. A spare tire valued at $60 was reported stolen and damages were estimated at $400.

Nothing was taken from a second car entered at the dealership, according to officers, who set damages at $500.

Monday Wrecks

No injuries but damages estimated at approximately $8,000 resulted from two traffic accidents investigated Monday by Greenville police.

Investigating officers said cars driven by Gwendolyn Ebron Daniels of 603-A McKinley Ave. and Georgia Ann Askew of 58 Carriage House Apartments collided at about 12:05 p.m. on North Greene Street.

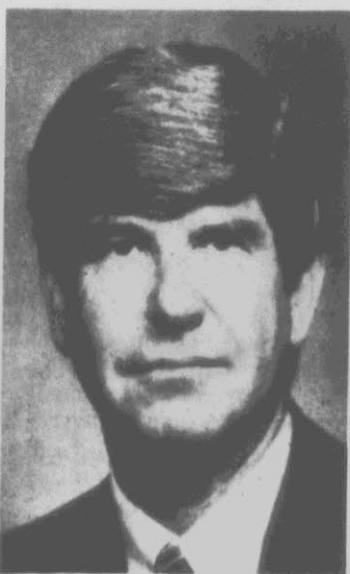

Police, who charged Ms. Daniels with failure to stop at a red light, set damages to her car at $1,200 and $800 to Ms. Askew's vehicle.

Officers said Hashem Ahmad Elakloul of 101-A Riverbluff Drive was charged with careless and reckless driving after his car collided with three others parked on Eastbrook Drive about 9:38 p.m.

Damages were set at $2,500 to Elakloul's car, $1,500 to a car owned by Blanche Casey Williams of 301-H Eastbrook Drive, $1,500 to a vehicle owned by Ray Earl Camper of Fayetteville, and $500 to a car owned by John Lee Lamb of 301-G Eastbrook Drive.

Challenge

Voices from within the administration are now being heard against the idea of pressing legislation limiting authority of governors over their National Guard units. The concept of limitation had been raised as a means of overriding objections of some governors to training their units in Honduras.

Traditional policy has been that Guardsmen could not be sent outside the United States for training without concurrence of their governors. There was never any question of overriding federal authority in the event of national emergency.

Training in Honduras is widely viewed as part of the psychological warfare process against Nicaragua's leftist regime and involved little or no risks to the personnel involved. It is, however, the wrong use of our militia.

There are thousands of soldiers at bases all over the country which could benefit from a brief tour of duty in the nearby tropics. It was not an assignment for which Guardsmen were especially required.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger sounded the retreat from an inevitable clash over the governors' authority as to their states' Guard units. One Pentagon source opined shelving of that bill was necessary because the resultant dogfight would come at a time when the fiscal 1987 defense budget was under fire.

At the same time, it was broadly hinted any congressman who wanted to privately pursue the issue was welcome to step in.

We're inclined to believe the question of governors' authority should be promptly settled. Something more than 200 years of precedent cannot be just swept under the rug because an itchy branch of the federal government fears its turf is threatened.

It would be far better to have the question settled early rather than have possibility of a challenge forever hanging around in the background of any future differences of opinion.

Too, someone in the Pentagon apparently thinks this is not a good season for them to pose that kind of challenge; ergo, it might be a good season for governors to do the challenging.

Back Pat

The power of advertising has been extended into another unlikely arena. A small Oregon town fearing results of a dwindling population advertised for some new residents and found a lot of interested readers. As of last Monday, we read, there were more than 200 telephone calls and letters.

The ads were placed by the Condon, Ore., Chamber of Commerce in a large California and large Oregon newspapers. The town administrator says the response showed there are a lot of people in this world looking for a way to get out of the big cities.

That is probably true; many of them appear to have known the quiet pace of rural or small town life in their earlier years. The town of Condon was looking for "just a few good residents," and might get them. They've proven there is a market for what they were offering ... now it's time to close some of the deals.

The innovative spirit deserves a pat on the back.

Baby Boomers Still To Come Of Age

WASHINGTON — Last week, like the week before and the week before that, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., did what he always does with his spare time: eat breakfast, lunch and/or dinner with a fat-cat campaign contributor. Hart is desperately looking for people to help pay off $3 million in campaign debts left over from his unsuccessful 1984 presidential crusade.

During one breakfast here recently, with a moneyman from California, Hart made the kind of flattering request often heard by potential patrons. "How do you think I ought to maintain my visibility without getting in trouble?" Hart begged. "You've got to help me."

Had some of Hart's youthful followers been flies on the wall, they might have fallen off in disbelief. Gary Hart, man of new ideas, a desperate politician? Holy Hartpence!

Hart's snowjob over thousands, if not millions, of postwar-generation

Americans underscores how strong and deep the John F. Kennedy myth remains. He seemed to have something many of them want in a candidate: a youthful (though artfully cultivated) image. And it is that persona that many voters are likely to be seeking in their successor to Ronald Reagan.

This year, the frontline of the baby boom generation turns 40. During the past two presidential elections, political sages have looked to see in which direction the group as a whole (born between 1946 and 1964) would budge. What they've discovered is that baby boomers are as politically diverse as any other group. No single contender for the 1988 presidential nomination — Hart, Vice President Bush, Rep. Jack Kemp or, try as he might, Sen. Joe Biden, among others — has yet captured the imagination of the whole.

This isn't to say that pandering to this group has gone untried and unrewarded elsewhere. Levi Strauss is pushing a pair of blue jeans "with more room for the older man." American car manufacturers are playing 1960s' rock tunes to sell Detroit's finest. Gourmet meals designed for the microwave fit this category as well.

Political consultants are also putting long hours into investigating this generation and how to win its loyalty. They weigh carefully every trend and statistic that comes to their attention. Nonetheless, they're coming up with so many target groups — yuppies, new collars, etc. — that a coherent, generation-specific strategy has proved elusive.

The truth is that the baby boomers probably may only become a significant voting bloc when products of their own era seek higher office. These candidates may have to pass a generational litmus test: experience in fighting in or against the Vietnam War, growing up with dope, rock music and integration, among other things.

While clearly the best educated generation in American history, the baby boom generation remains particularly jittery about its economic picture. The middle-management crunch has taken some of the up out of upward mobility. Anthony Carnevale, chief economist for the Virginia-based American Society for Training and Development, contends that the greatest challenge to employers may be in keeping frustrated good-life aspirants from "blowing up the building."

Meanwhile, adds Sar A. Levitan, director of George Washington University's Center for Social Policy Studies, "If baby boomers expect to retire in their late 50s, they can forget it. They'll need continuous earnings to maintain their standard of living."

To some degree, it's natural that the group thinks itself special. Its music has dominated the airwaves for decades, as its words and phrases have done to the American vernacular. Madison Avenue loves it, and therefore so do producers of all kinds of junk, including TV shows.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Nearly a month after the U.S. bombing raid on Libya, Col. Moammar Khadafy is increasingly isolated diplomatically, unable to muster credible support from fellow Arabs or his European trading partners.

Appeals from Khadafy, the Libyan leader, to the Arabs to "liquidate" American interests in the Middle East following the April 15 air raids on Tripoli and Benghazi have fallen on deaf ears.

No major Arab leader has visited the Libyan capital of Tripoli since the attack to show solidarity with the mercurial Khadafy, and Libyan efforts to organize an Arab summit to condemn Washington broke down this month.

The 12-member European Common Market, which had $10 billion in trade with Libya last year, agreed to curtail the number of Libyan diplomats in the capitals of its member countries and make it less attractive to sell certain agricultural products to Libya.

At this month's Tokyo economic summit, President Reagan convinced leaders of Britain, France, Japan, Canada, West Germany and Italy to cite Libya as a supporter of terrorism and agree to restrict arms sales and diplomatic contacts with the Khadafy regime.

The Reagan administration said the bombing raid was in retaliation for Libyan-supported terrorism.

Even the Soviet bloc, which condemned the raids, has been cautious in its support for Khadafy. Western diplomats as well as Arab and Eastern bloc sources, all speaking on the condition of anonymity, say the Kremlin was alarmed over the poor air defense mustered by the Libyans. The sources also say the Soviets are concerned over the state of the Libyan economy, severely strained by the fall in oil prices.

Although Arab governments were quick to condemn the U.S. air raids, most showed little interest in lining up with Khadafy against a superpower with whom many maintain economic, political and military links.

Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and other Arab countries accepted Khadafy's call for a summit on condition that the agenda also include Libyan and Syrian support for non-Arab Iran in its war with Arab Iraq. When Libya balked, the summit fell through. All the Libyans could do was rail against fellow Arabs for their failure to unite against the threat of what Tripoli called "U.S. imperialism."

Arab sources, requesting anonymity, say Syria, Libya's principal Arab ally, has provided some pilots and air defense personnel to the Libyans but is hardly in a position to do more.

The Syrians are bogged down in the Lebanese civil war, face the Israeli military presence in the Golan Heights and have a non-military foreign debt estimated at $3 billion.

Faced with diplomatic problems among the Arabs and Western Europeans, Khadafy has threatened to turn to the Soviet bloc for help. Libya's state-run media have said the country may join the Moscow-led Warsaw Pact or offer naval facilities to the Soviet fleet to counter U.S. pressure.

But Western diplomats in Tripoli, speaking last month on the condition of anonymity, said they believe Moscow will be slow to respond to Khadafy's overtures.

"The Soviets are trying to cultivate moderate countries in the (Persian) Gulf," said one diplomat. "That's a bigger prize for them, and they will want to make sure their support for Khadafy does not threaten this strategy."

Despite verbal support for Khadafy, the Soviets have in recent months been cautious in their approach to the Libyan leader.

During a visit to Moscow in September, Khadafy failed to win Kremlin agreement for increased arms sales and came away without a treaty of peace and friendship such as the Soviets have signed with Syria and South Yemen.

The Soviets pressed him to repay a $2 million debt but agreed to long-term economic cooperation to improve the North African country's lagging economy.

Following the U.S. raid, Eastern bloc sources in Tripoli said the Soviets were pressing Khadafy to conduct a thorough investigation into his military's poor performance against American warplanes before they would pour more money into Libya's defenses.

Khadafy Runs Into Isolation

Aliens Displace U.S. Workers

WASHINGTON — How many jobs that might be filled by U.S. citizens are being taken by illegal aliens? It is a question of poignant social and economic meaning, but to judge from a recent report of the General Accounting Office, no one knows the answer.

Any inquiry into illegal aliens is an inquiry into a shadow world. The best guess of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) is that between 6.5 million and 7 million illegal aliens have gained permanent resident status within the United States. The number is thought to be growing at half a million a year.

Who are these people? They are still predominantly Mexicans, but INS figures show an increasing number of "illegals" from all over the world — Chinese, Poles, natives of Bangladesh, refugees from Central America. In 1985 the INS apprehended 1.2 million persons attempting illegally to cross the Mexican border. This year an estimated 1.8 million will be caught, but the flood goes on.

In its April 21 report, the GAO examined 51 studies that have been made on the question of "displacement" of American workers. The data were woefully inconclusive. After sifting all the studies, the GAO could conclude only that the literature "suggests the possibility of widespread displacement." As for actual displacement, the GAO simply couldn't say.

The INS has no doubts on the matter. It is beyond question, a press spokesman says, that illegal aliens take a "significant" number of jobs away from U.S. citizens. One scholar, Donald L. Huddle of Rice University, has estimated that in some occupations the rate of displacement may approach 60 percent — that is, for every 10 illegal aliens who establish residence, six jobs for U.S. workers may disappear. That factor has not been confirmed by other studies, but if the rate of displacement is even 10 percent, the aliens have pushed half a million legal workers onto the unemployment rolls.

One of the surprising aspects of the GAO report, confirmed by the INS, is that illegal aliens are invading not only the agricultural realm but the industrial realm as well. Only 11 percent of persons arrested in INS "sweeps" last year were in agriculture. All the rest were in manufacturing, construction or service occupations. In some cases the aliens are being treated lawfully: Their wages are subject to withholding for income tax and Social Security, and they get the same fringe benefits accorded to lawful employees.

In the far more typical case, illegal aliens are patently exploited. In Houston, for one example cited by the INS, a U.S. citizen lawfully hired on a construction job may be paid $11 an hour. An illegal alien, employed by a dummy subcontractor, may work for $8 an hour or less. This alien pays no income tax or Social Security tax; he has no hospitalization benefits. But when he is out of work, he may qualify for unemployment compensation; his children are educated at public expense; his family may get food stamps. An El Paso hospital has billed the government for $13 million in treatment given to illegals.

The GAO report reviewed a couple of studies that dealt with employers' preferences for illegal aliens. One study showed that restaurant owners in San Diego, interviewed in confidence, "highly preferred" undocumented aliens as kitchen helpers. Another study, this one dealing with the citrus industry in Ventura County, Calif., found that at least one contractor actively recruits illegal workers from a Mexican "sending" region. These workers, through a kind of buddy system, bring in friends who inherit job openings created by attrition.

Like most stories, this story has at least two sides. It takes a heart of stone not to empathize with the alien family desperate for a better life in the United States. The temptations of well-paying jobs and personal freedom are irresistibly alluring. It is risky to make generalizations, but many of the illegal aliens are willing to work harder than native Americans. They are more urgently motivated. They will take menial jobs — gratefully take them — and perform reliably in them.

All this may be quite true, but the thrust of the GAO and INS data is clear: Taxpaying, law-abiding, industrious American workers in significant numbers are being displaced by illegal aliens. When Congress writes a 1987 budget for the INS, the operative verb can't be "subtract." It has to be "add."

Public Forum

To the editor:

We live in Lake Ellsworth. Every day when we drive into town on Business 264, the extension of Dickinson Avenue, the one beautiful natural spot we pass in a hodge-podge of commercial structures has been a grove of old oak trees across from the old Raynor-Forbes Tobacco Warehouse that burned down two years ago.

Every time we saw those trees, we imagine the old farm house that might once have been there long before we came to Greenville. We imagined picnics there on summer afternoons under the bower of those immense trees. We visualized a playground where children might play.

Wednesday and Thursday of last week, when we drove past the site of the oaks, we were shocked and outraged to see bulldozers topping these old giants. Their great crowns were severed from their bodies. Their huge trunks lay like dead bodies in the field.

Recently, the shopping center adjacent to the oaks has undergone a lovely renovation. One can only wonder how the clearing away of the oaks is connected with the development and expansion of this shopping center. What kind of development is rooted in such blind devastation?

There will be no notice in the obituary columns for the loss of these Great Ancient Ones whose presence graced our daily rounds. We cannot, however, let their mutilation go unacknowledged. We grieve for the loss of these trees.

NAACP Plans Suit Over Pitt Elections

AYDEN — A vote to bring legal action against the Pitt County Board of Commissioners has been approved by the Pitt County branch of the NAACP in an effort to speed up changes in election of the county board.

Members of the NAACP, which met Sunday at the Mount Olive Missionary Baptist Church in Ayden, are seeking changes to assure the election of a black to the county board.

In another matter, The NAACP national office, in a letter to the Pitt chapter, also announced a 32-day march for Human Dignity in South Africa and at Home, to begin in Los Angeles and to end in Baltimore. The marchers will be in Greenville June 21-22.

Louise Cohens, chairperson for the "Mother of the Year" competition, reported the event will be held at 5:30 p.m. Saturday at Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. County churches will have mothers representing them. The Pitt County winner will represent the state level Sunday, with the state winner to represent North Carolina at the national convention in Baltimore in late June.

Alligators

State Runoff Primary Quieter Than Expected

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The campaigns of Democratic Senate nominee Terry Sanford and GOP opponent Jim Broyhill aren't closing down, but are entering a new phase concentrating on organization and fund raising, spokesmen for the candidates say.

Sanford's strong showing in the May 6 primary, along with the decisions of two second-place finishers in House races not to seek runoffs, has made the second-primary campaign quieter than expected.

"This is an important time to get out there and start working hard to get support of the Republicans who voted against Mr. Broyhill, and to start appealing to the Democrats we will need to win," Doug Haynes, campaign press secretary for Rep. Broyhill, said Monday.

Sanford has announced plans to visit all 100 counties by Labor Day to strengthen his ties with local Democratic officials and candidates. He began last Friday with a reception for the party's Mecklenburg County executive committee in Charlotte.

"The idea is to make a steady stream of appearances across the state," said Tom Lawton, the former governor's spokesman.

Later this month, Sanford will take a 10-day break to tour Yugoslavia as part of a student fellowship program sponsored by ITT Telecommunications Corp. Sanford is on ITT's board of directors.

After the trip, he will begin his tour of the state, staying on the road an average of four days per week, said Sam Poole, Sanford's campaign manager.

At each stop, Sanford will meet with Democratic county and precinct chairmen, candidates and members of such groups as Young Democrats, Poole said.

"We want to put the Democratic Party back together," he said. "We're taking our campaign to each county and molding it into the Democratic campaign, so that we come out with a single... campaign."

Broyhill will split his time between his congressional duties and his campaign. He'll spend Tuesday through Thursday of most weeks in Washington, and return home to campaign on Fridays, Saturdays and Mondays, Haynes said.

The immediate priority for Broyhill is to become better known in the East, where there are fewer Republicans than in the Piedmont or mountains, Haynes said. Broyhill received just over 50 percent of the Eastern vote in the GOP primary, while winning by far bigger margins in the rest of the state.

Broyhill "is a strong believer in winning elections depending on a strong organization, not just in getting your name out on TV," Haynes said.

Broyhill hopes to form a coalition similar to the one Gov. Jim Martin formed in 1984, which proved that a traditional Republican can get Eastern North Carolina votes, Haynes said.

A Democratic runoff was avoided in the 3rd House District when Lewis Renn, administrative assistant to incumbent Rep. Charles Whitley, decided against requesting a second primary.

State Rep. Martin Lancaster, of Goldsboro, received 31,672 votes or 47 percent to Renn's 13,555 votes or 20 percent.

Lancaster, who faces state Rep. Gerald Hurst of Jacksonville in the general election, said he planned to work vigorously over the next few weeks until the General Assembly reconvenes, which will take up much of his time until mid-July.

Even Hurst says that Lancaster, a four-term legislator, is favored. "But I'm not taking any chances," Lancaster said.

Hurst, who was unopposed for the GOP nomination, said Monday he hoped to get campaign help from Broyhill, Martin and Sen. Jesse Helms.

"I intend to attempt to show that I am conservative and that my opponent is a liberal," Hurst said. "It's time... for more conservative representation in this district."

The only congressional nomination still in doubt is the 10th District Democratic nomination, where Lester D. Roark, former Shelby mayor and aide to Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, will face Jack L. Rhyne, a former legislator and Belmont mayor.

Candidates eligible to call for runoffs on June 3 have until noon today to do so.

In addition to the 10th District House race, other runoffs that had been called as of Monday afternoon were for Democratic nominations in the 14th state Senate District (between Rep. Ray Sparrow and J.K. Sherron), the 6th Senate District (incumbent R.L. Martin against former Rep. Jeanne Fenner), and the 5th House District (incumbent C. Melvin Creecy against Brewster Brown).

N.C. Moves Up In Export List

By The Associated Press

Despite a drop in the value of manufacturing exports during the most recent reporting period, North Carolina moved up a notch to 10th place among the states in exports, with tobacco leading the way.

The value of manufacturing exports fell $155.9 million, or 3.4 percent, during the 1981-83 period covered by the two latest reports from the U.S. Commerce Department.

But Gordon McRoberts, director of international marketing for the state Commerce Department, said considering the rise in value of the American dollar for the period, that was a surprisingly small decline.

North Carolina manufacturers produced $4.525 billion in products directly exported in 1983, the last year for which statistics were available.

Among the traditional trio of textiles, furniture and tobacco, only tobacco showed an increase, edging up by 5.5 percent to $1.073 billion.

Broughton Director Fired

RALEIGH (AP) — A state official says the dismissal of the director of a state mental hospital had "zero to do with politics," but the former director says he had complained about Republican officials before his firing.

Harold Coston, who had been director of Broughton Hospital in Morganton since March 1985, said he had expressed displeasure at orders of officials in the state Department of Human Resources' personnel office and of local GOP leaders to hire or fire hospital employees for partisan political reasons.

Coston said he resigned Friday at the request of Paul Kaye, director of DHR's Mental Health Division.

Coston said in a telephone interview he had asked Kaye why he was being dismissed. "Lack of aggression and I guess politics," he quoted Kaye as saying.

Kaye did not return a telephone call Monday.

"hit list," but acknowledged there were rumors to the contrary even before he hired Coston. "Absent of any proof (that there was a list), I simply don't believe that," Kirk said.

Mrs. Hooper said she had not given Coston a hit list, nor had she tried to influence any of his personnel decisions.

Broughton Hospital, one of four state mental hospitals in North Carolina, serves the 34 westernmost counties.

Coston described himself as an "apolitical person," but said he received "constant, almost daily" calls and visits from local GOP leaders seeking progress reports on requested hirings and dismissals.

He said he received an average of two or three "must hire" directives per month from the DHR personnel office in Raleigh. He said the people named by DHR sometimes were not qualified for the posts they were seeking, and other times were less qualified than applicants already employed at Broughton. "It flaunts the whole system" and the principle of "hiring the best and promoting the best," Coston said.

Miller Changes Mind

RALEIGH (AP) — White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller said today he has changed his mind about moving out of North Carolina because of "hundreds of calls" from people asking him to stay.

"After much thought, I have decided to give the people of North Carolina one more chance," Miller said. "I'm going to stay in North Carolina and run for governor in 1988."

Miller, a candidate in last week's Republican U.S. Senate campaign, had said he would move to another state if he did not double the vote total he received in his 1984 bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Miller, an Angier hog farmer, received about 6,686 votes in last week's primary, about 5,500 votes short of his goal.

Miller denied that his pledge and subsequent change-of-heart were planned from the beginning.

Coston also said that Ruby Hooper, a dietician at Broughton for over 30 years before being named deputy secretary of DHR last year, had given him a "hit list" of about 18 people to fire immediately after he took office.

"We asked Harold to resign because of a lack of strong leadership, which has zero to do with politics," said DHR Secretary Phil Kirk. "He was not aggressive and was unable to inspire confidence among employees in his leadership abilities."

Kirk also denied the existence of a

Insurer Rolls Back Malpractice Rate Increase

RALEIGH (AP) — Medical Mutual Insurance Co.'s decision to roll back most of a 357 percent hike in malpractice insurance rates for family doctors who deliver babies is a step in the right direction, the head of the N.C. Academy of Family Physicians says.

"That gets us back to ground zero," Dr. C. Franklin Church, the academy's president, said Monday in a telephone interview. "Although we're grateful for their reconsideration, we must look — as Medical Mutual must look — toward a long-term solution to these contrived crises."

Medical Mutual announced the rollback Monday. On March 1, the company raised rates for family prac-tioners who deliver babies from $4,480 to $22,126. In response, 32 of those 137 doctors in the state said they would stop doing so because they could not afford the higher premiums. But Medical Mutual says it is slashing those rates to $6,784.

"We're very pleased," said Sue Makey, executive director of the North Carolina Academy of Family Physicians. "We will be getting the information out to our members."

Ms. Makey said she did not know whether some of the doctors who had said they would get out of obstetrics would decide now to resume delivering babies.

Church noted that two legislative study commissions were trying to find solutions to the problem of increasingly scarce and expensive insurance coverage for malpractice and general liability.

Executives at Medical Mutual could not be reached for comment Monday. Company executives hand-delivered a letter signed by Medical Mutual's executive vice president, Douglass M. Phillips, to state insurance officials Monday announcing the rollback in premiums.

The letter said the company had decided to lower the premiums rather than face requirements from the insurance department to recalculate and resubmit the company's entire premium rate structure plan filed Jan. 31.

"As it is of utmost importance to Medical Mutual to effect our rate increase as of March 1, 1986, for our entire book of business, such a resubmission could have severe adverse effects on our entire company operations," Phillips said in the letter.

State insurance officials had twice asked Medical Mutual to provide evidence justifying the increase for family physicians. Premium rates for doctors in other medical specialties rose between 30 percent and 36 percent.

Medical Mutual, based in Raleigh, has said it insures two-thirds of the state's family practitioners who deliver babies.

Executive Salaries:

Some Say 'You Get What You Pay For'

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — John G. Medlin Jr. says if he were working just for the $540,000 annual salary he receives, he wouldn't be running a commercial bank.

Instead, the president and chief executive officer of First Wachovia Corp. said, he'd be working for himself or in investment banking.

"The highest-paid people are not the corporate CEOs whose salaries are publicly listed in the proxy statements," Medlin said.

"He said in top-level executive jobs, as in almost anything else, you get what you pay for."

"There are more people that are willing and able to lay bricks well than are able to run large banks," Medlin said. "One should look at the factors involved in the job: the complexity, the difficulty and the impact your actions have on profits."

Time commitments and the pressures involved in a high-level corporate job are also factors in an executive salary, he said.

Albert L. Butler Jr., president and treasurer of Arista Co. of Winston-Salem and a member of the boards of First Wachovia and RJR Nabisco Inc., said he could not discuss how directors decide on executives' salaries. But he said the money is well spent.

"If you get a good man at the top, it could be the best money you spend," he said. "It's misleading just to look at the figures and not what is behind them."

In a survey of proxy statements provided by publicly held companies, The Winston-Salem Journal found that J. Tylee Wilson, chairman and CEO of RJR Nabisco, earned $1.3 million in salary and bonuses in 1985.

Edward A. Horrigan Jr., vice chairman of the board of RJR, earned $915,408 last year, and Gerald H. Long, CEO and president of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., made $616,453, the newspaper reported.

In banking, Edward E. Crutchfield Jr., the chairman and CEO of First Union Corp., earned $630,914; while Hugh McColl, the chairman and CEO of NCB Corp., made $600,000.

William A. Klopman, the chairman and CEO of Burlington Industries of Greensboro, earned $440,000 last year. Frank Greenberg, president of Burlington, earned $380,000, the newspaper reported.

Don Hunziker, the chairman and CEO of LADD Furniture Inc. of High Point and O. William Fenn Jr., LADD's president, earned $357,609 each.

James S. Evans, president and CEO of Media General Inc. of Richmond, Va., owner of The Winston-Salem Journal, earned $425,000 last year, the newspaper reported.

William S. Lee, the chairman and CEO of Duke Power Co., made $271,190 in 1985, the newspaper reported. Fortune magazine, in a survey of executive salaries, said the median cash compensation for CEOs in the utilities industry was $425,000 last year.

Duke Power spokesman Mary Boyd said the company, the seventh-largest utility company in the nation, has a record of being among the most efficient.

"The shareholders are getting a real bargain in Bill Lee and his management team," Ms. Boyd said.

The Fortune survey of chief executive officers at 1,000 of the country's largest industrial and service companies showed the median cash compensation, including bonuses and profit sharing, last year was $543,400. The magazine reported that the median annual salary of an American worker last year was $12,800.

Youth Show High Cholesterol Levels

DURHAM (AP) — Teen-agers may be pushing their cholesterol levels up by eating too many hamburgers, french fries, candy bars and cookies, Duke University researchers say.

"We've been warning adults about the dangers of cholesterol, but it appears that the problem may begin at a much earlier age than we realized," said Dr. Siegfried Heyden, professor of community and family medicine at Duke.

A Duke study found that about 500 of the 2,000 Cabarrus County teen-agers who participated in a screening program had abnormally high blood cholesterol levels.

But while 25 percent of the teen-agers tested had abnormally high levels of cholesterol and about 10 percent had severe levels, 10 to 15 percent had readings that were considered low.

"They ate just as much junk food as the others but for some reason had unexpectedly low, normal cholesterol levels," Heyden said. "This may indicate a genetic factor at work. We are planning to expand our investigation to the families, to see if their mothers and fathers also have low cholesterol levels."

The study also showed differences between cholesterol levels in blacks and whites.

"In general, blacks had higher high-density lipoproteins, known as the good cholesterol," Heyden said, "while whites had more low-density lipoproteins, or bad cholesterol."

The Cabarrus County screening program, which was sponsored by the Cannon Foundation of Concord, suggests that the typical American diet may influence the heart sooner than previously thought, Heyden said.

The screening used a new diagnostic machine called a Reflotron to give cholesterol readings in minutes, Heyden said. Cholesterol monitoring previously involved sending blood samples to a West Coast laboratory for analysis.

Student's Bond Is Tripled

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — While one student remains hospitalized in serious condition with a bullet wound in the jaw, a 17-year-old classmate charged in the shooting has returned to jail after a judge tripled his $30,000 bond.

Major Simmons was released from jail over the weekend after his father posted a property bond set by a magistrate. But District Court Judge Lacy Hair raised the bond to $90,000 during an arraignment hearing Monday.

Simmons is charged with three counts of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill in connection with a shooting spree last Friday at Pine Forest High School in Fayetteville.

Hair said the bond could be reviewed, depending on the condition of the three shooting victims.

Pharmacies Oppose Kaiser HMO Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — Some pharmacies in Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill are urging state employees to reject a health maintenance plan that would allow only Eckerd drug stores and the Kaiser medical facility in Raleigh to fill prescriptions for participants.

About 40 pharmacies have joined forces to oppose the Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, one of two health maintenance organizations being offered to Triangle-area state employees and public school teachers this month. The other HMO is offered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina.

A third HMO is being offered only in the Charlotte area.

The 40 pharmacies say the Kaiser plan would limit the convenience and options of its participants. Kaiser officials say the plan would provide lower health-care costs for participants.

Chernobyl ...

Urengoi, site of a major natural gas field 1,200 miles away in northwestern Siberia.

It remained unclear how many people have died as a result of the accident. The official news agency Tass said Monday that "35 persons are in a grave condition, six persons suffering from burns and radiation died."

It did not say when the victims died, or mention the two who were reported earlier to have been killed fighting the fire at the nuclear plant. The phrasing appeared to indicate that the six dead were in addition to the two reported earlier.

But today, a Scandinavian reporter quoted Yemelyanov as saying a total of six people died in the accident.

Soviet officials have said earlier that 204 people were hospitalized and that 18 of them were in serious condition. Authorities have said the worst cases were brought to Moscow, where they are being treated with the help of bone marrow transplant specialists from the United States.

Industrialist Armand Hammer arrived in Moscow today on a plane loaded with supplies for the U.S. medical team. Hammer, who has maintained contact with top Soviet officials for decades, was instrumental in getting the Soviets to accept private American medical help.

The head of the team, Dr. Richard Gale, did not answer his hotel telephone late Monday. He has declined comment on his work in the past, saying he had agreed with Soviet officials not to talk to reporters.

The Kremlin has focused blame on local officials for the 68-hour delay in telling the world about the accident and for mismanaging the evacuation. But Yemelyanov seemed to disagree.

"They (the local officials) were correct in evaluating the situation and certain measures had been taken, but you saw how large the destruction was and it was difficult for local personnel and personnel on duty to cope with the situation. It was impossible," he said.

Pravda says three local party officials have been punished and suggested they also will lose their jobs. Vladimir Lomeiko, spokesman for the Foreign Ministry, said the announcement of the accident and the evacuation were delayed because officials on the spot did not understand how bad the disaster was.

The plant town of about 25,000 people and three other communities within six miles of the nuclear facility were not evacuated until 36 hours after the explosion and fire.

Fire ...

Cooler temperatures and calmer winds on Monday provided some relief as about 150 firefighters built fire lines, said Tom Ditt, a spokesman for the state Division of Emergency Management.

Some officials remained cautious Monday about predicting an end to the fire.

"We thought several times we had it contained, but it was off and running again," said Hegele. "It won't be contained until we have lines all the way around it."

He said the fire could be contained, but likely could not be extinguished until rain hit the scorched eastern North Carolina soil.

"Those ground fires could burn for months," he said. "We will have to watch this for some time."

A thick, cloudlike layer of gray smoke clung to smoldering remains of pine forests in Pender County, obscuring the flames from spotter aircraft and prompting health warnings in surrounding areas of southeastern North Carolina.

A tour of the Holly Shelter State Game Management Area in Pender County, which was almost entirely burned by the fire, revealed a wasteland of naked pines sticking out of the blackened earth.

"We had reports of deer, turkey and all kinds of wildlife running from the fire today near Shaken Creek, just north of Hampstead," state forester Chuck Nail said Monday.

A newborn fawn, with part of its umbilical cord still attached, walked "right out of the fire" and up to a power company worker Sunday night, said Connie Batson of the Pender East Rescue Squad.

George Smith with the state Wildlife Resource Commission said officials have not yet assessed the loss of wildlife.

Board ...

Mitchell told the commissioners, "I am not against growth. I am in favor of orderly growth. There are not many places in Ayden where you can build a single family home."

Speaking at the end of the town board's meeting, Adams said, "Sometimes you have to wonder which comes first: progress or development."

"I am an investor and I bought some land adjacent to this town. It is obvious raising corn, beans and tobacco is not profitable today. You have to do something else to make a profit," Adams said.

"I hoped that the board would look at not what the special interest group wants or what I want — the investor — but what is best for the town of Ayden," Adams said.

The board accepted bids on the Community Development Block Grant program for the rehabilitation of six homes in Ayden. The location of the home, amount of the bid and the contractor awarded the bid are: 822 Blount St., $14,300, Seaboard Builders; 105 Ormond St., $5,185, Home Care; 115 Ormond St., $12,900, Alligood Builders; 306 Turnage St., $9,375, E.T. Leggett Construction; 1311 Joyner St., $10,500, C and B Gold Dollar, and 208 Turnage St., $11,225, Seaboard Builders.

Administrative guidelines for titles on heir property for the CDBG program were adopted by the board. The guidelines allow for the rehabilitation to be executed on the house without a deed of trust if the heir to the property cannot be located.

David Dryman of Talbert & Cox was appointed as Fair Labor Standards Enforcement Officer in order to administer proper labor standards during the program.

The commissioners adopted a trash and garbage ordinance that changed the trash collection policy. Limbs and other solid waste must not exceed four feet in length and 50 pounds in weight, according to the new policy, and the trash will be picked up every other week on Monday, Wednesday or Thursday. The trash must be placed adjacent to the curb for pickup.

Mayor Marvin C. Baldree Jr. presented Peggy Hill with a certificate of appreciation for her 11 years of service on the Ayden Planning Board; Mrs. Hill is moving to Raleigh. Donnie Skinner was appointed to serve Mrs. Hill's unexpired term on the board, and Travis Dixor was appointed to serve a three-year term on the board.

The commissioners discussed the replacement of curb and gutter on Third Street as a result of repaving by the state. The commissioners approved the replacement of the sidewalk along the south side of Third Street from West Avenue to Lee Street while the road construction is being done. The project will cost less than $4,000, as the concrete for the job is being supplied by the state.

The board declared as surplus equipment a 1974 Chevrolet pick-up truck, a 1968 Chevrolet bus, a 1969 2-ton Ford truck and several other items owned by the town. The items were approved for sale at an auction sponsored by the chamber of commerce on May 26 at the Ayden Recreation Center.

The board approved the purchase of two $40 advertisements to be placed in souvenir brochures for the South Ayden Alumni Association and the Funeral Directors and Motricians Association of N.C.

A public hearing will be held June 9 at 7:30 p.m. on changes in the zoning ordinance to comply with N.C. Statutes adopted during the 1985 session.

'Streaking' Reds Stop Expos

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Cincinnati Reds are having trouble starting a winning streak this season. But they are finding ways to stop them.

Eddie Milner's two-out home run in the ninth inning Monday night lifted the Reds to a 4-3 victory over Montreal, snapping the Expos' eight-game winning string.

The triumph gave Cincinnati its second straight victory, matching its longest success streak of the season. On Sunday, the Reds ended New York's seven-game winning skein.

"We've won two in a row, so that's pretty encouraging for us," Cincinnati player-manager Pete Rose said.

"The more games you win, the more confidence you get. Maybe we'll start getting some breaks to go along with it."

The Reds still have the worst record in the major leagues, 8-19, and are eight games behind Houston in the National League West.

"Things haven't been going our way yet, but that doesn't mean we can't turn things around," Rose said. "If we can start winning two out of three, and three out of four in some series, you'd be surprised how fast you can get back into it."

In the other NL games, New York nipped Atlanta 1-0 and Philadelphia beat Houston 5-1 in the only other games scheduled.

Milner's first home run of the season came against reliever Bert Roberge, who was making his first appearance for Montreal since being recalled from the minors May 1.

"He just got a tryball up," Milner said. "I wasn't trying for a homer. I was just trying to hit it hard."

Ted Power, 1-3, pitched 1 2/3 hitless innings for the victory.

The Reds took a 1-0 lead in second inning on Andy McGaffigan's bases-loaded bunt, and Montreal tied it in the third on Andre Dawson's RBI infield hit.

Milner singled home a run and Dave Concepcion drew a bases-loaded walk in the fifth. Tim Raines, who extended his hitting streak to 16 games, singled and scored on Dawson's groundout in the fifth and Al Newman hit a sacrifice fly in the eighth that made it 3-3.

In New York, Ray Knight led off the bottom of the ninth inning with a double and scored easily when Tim Teufel followed with a single up the middle. The victory was the Mets' 19th in the last 21 games.

New York starter Sid Fernandez and reliever Roger McDowell combined on a four-hitter, the second time the pair has teamed for a shutout this season.

Fernandez worked seven innings, giving up four hits, and striking out 10. McDowell, 3-0, got the victory, finishing up with two hitless innings and fanning three.

Atlanta starter Rick Mahler pitched 6 1/3 shutout innings. Reliever Paul Assenmacher, 1-1, escaped a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the seventh, but got tagged for the loss in the ninth.

"I was still thinking that I had move the runner over," Teufel said.

Johnson CAA's Player Of Year; 4 All-League

East Carolina's Winfred Johnson has been named as the Colonial Athletic Association's Baseball Player of the Year for the second time, it was announced Monday.

Johnson, a senior from Elizabethtown, was first named to the honor after the 1984 season when he guided the Pirates to the NCAA Regionals. In that year, the league was still a part of the ECAC and Johnson shared the honor with George Iannini of Georgetown.

Johnson and three other Pirates have been named to the CAA's All-Conference team, announced at the same time.

Johnson was named as the CAA team's designated hitter, finished the 1986 regular season with a conference-leading 17 home runs, 68 RBIs and a team leading .403 batting average. During the 1986 season Johnson also became the first player in NCAA history to hit 60 career home runs and pitch 30 career victories. He currently has 68 homers and 34 victories.

Other Pirates named to the all-star team are Mike Sullivan at first base, Chris Bradberry in the outfield and Jim Peterson, pitcher.

Peterson set a new ECU single-season record for wins with 11, finishing 11-3, as the Pirates went 37-8 on the regular season, the most wins ever by a Pirate squad. ECU ended the CAA season at 13-5, sharing first place honors with James Madison.

Johnson earns all-conference honors for the third straight year while Bradberry makes the team for the second time in a row.

Brad Babcock, coach at James Madison, was named as the Coach of the Year by the league.

At the same time, it was announced that East Carolina's baseball team has one of the highest academic averages among Pirate sports teams. Academic counselor Pam Penland said that one member of the team, pitcher Craig Van Deventer, made the dean's list, while nine others made the honor roll.

Those making the honor roll included Sullivan, Bradberry, third baseman Mark Cockrell, reserve pitcher Danny Culpepper, reserve pitcher Keith Schaffer, and second baseman Steve Sides.

The complete All-Conference team includes Mike Mathews of James Madison at second base; Jeff Garber of Madison at shortstop; John O'Keefe of William & Mary at third base; Glen Deren of James Madison and Paul Gzyb of American in the outfield and Mike Stout of James Madison on the mound.

Rose Wins Sectionals

JACKSONVILLE — Rose High School's golfers captured the 3A/4A Regional Golf Championship, held Monday at Rock Creek Country Club in Jacksonville.

The Rampants finished the afternoon with a 321 team total, led by Simon Moye's 74. Moye had the low round of the day among the individual golfers.

Hosting Jacksonville took second place with a 325 total, followed by Eastern Wayne and Wilmington New Hanover, tied for third with 326.

Wilmington High finished fourth with 329, followed by Havelock at 330, New Bern at 331 and Tarboro at 360.

Only the top two teams and the top two individuals from non-qualifying teams advance to the state tournament, to be held next Monday in Chapel Hill.

In addition to Moye other Rose scores included Greg Hallow 81 and Mike Herrin and Derrick Daniels, both shooting 83.

The win boosts the Rose record to 36-2 on the season.

Ronald McDonald Golf Set For September 21

The Third annual Eastern Carolina Celebrity Golf Classic, which benefits the Ronald McDonald House of Greenville will be played at a new site on a new day, it was announced Monday.

Harry Leslie, general chairman for the 1986 edition of the classic, announced at a press conference that the tournament would be played on Sunday, September 21 with a practice round the day before. In the past the tournament has been played on a weekday.

Leslie said the change in day was in the hopes of attracting more spectators to the event, which will be held this year for the first time at the Greenville Country Club. In the past, it has been held at Brook Valley Country Club.

"Brook Valley was not able to provide us with a Sunday for the tournament, and we were fortunate enough to be able to get Greenville Country Club," Leslie said. "Hopefully, the day will come when we will be able to hold a tournament large enough to incorporate both clubs."

The 1986 tournament hopes to attract a field of 160 golfers and celebrities. A superball format will be used, as has been the case in the two previous editions of the tournament. Invitations will be mailed this week to businesses and individuals throughout eastern North Carolina.

Activities for September 20 will include the practice round and an evening social. Play will begin on September 21 with an awards ceremony following.

The tournament has attracted a number of celebrities in the past such as Michael Jordan, Rookie of the Year in the NBA in 1984, pro golfers Miller Barber, Jerry Pate, Tommy Aaron, Jim Ferree, and LPGA player Terri Luchhurst, UNC All-American Charlie Justice, baseball great Enos Slaughter, and NASCAR driver Terry Labonte.

Already committed to play in this year's event are Justice, Bob DeBardelaben, Ace Parker and Art Weiner.

Other celebrities will be announced as they become known.

Leslie said he did not think that moving the tournament to a Sunday will have a detrimental effect on getting several professional golfers to attend. "We're hopeful that we can get a few of them to skip the tour round that weekend and come play with us. There will probably be a number of them who've already earned a great deal of money at that time and will be less anxious to play in the tour event."

Leslie said that while the tournament had raised about $60,000 in its first two years, the goal for this year's event alone is $50,000. Funds from the tournament will go toward the construction fees and maintenance of the Ronald McDonald House scheduled to begin construction here in June.

The Ronald McDonald House, the fourth to be built in the state, will provide a home-away-from-home for the families of children hospitalized at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Approximately $800,000 of the $1.2 million needed for the project has already been collected, pledged or promised, according to Dr. John Tinglestad, a member of the Ronald McDonald House board of directors and the chairman of the Department of Pediatrics at Pitt Memorial.

Persons desiring further information on the golf tournament or the Ronald McDonald House may contact the house office at 756-7004.

Rangers Rip Cleveland; Not Getting Complacent

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Texas Rangers have been doormats too long to get complacent, even after collecting 19 runs on 22 hits to stay in first place in the American League West.

"It's a long season," winning pitcher Charlie Hough said after Texas set team records for runs and hits in a 19-2 victory over the host Indians Monday night. "If we can sustain the intensity, I don't know if we can win it, but I think we're going to be all right."

Even rookie Pete Incaviglia, one of seven Rangers with at least two runs batted in, sounded a note of caution after the team's biggest offensive game ever.

"Right now we're swinging the bat real well," Incaviglia said. "It's a good feeling to see guys up and down the lineup hitting the ball. But we've got to forget this one now and think about winning tomorrow."

Elsewhere in the AL, it was New York 9, Minnesota 8; Kansas City 6, Detroit 5; Baltimore 4, Chicago 3; Seattle 6, Milwaukee 0; California 7, Boston 1; and Toronto 5, Oakland 3.

Despite the large final margin of victory, the Texas-Cleveland game was tied 1-1 until the Rangers scored eight runs in the sixth inning. Larry Parrish, who has four homers in three days, sparked the outburst with a three-run homer.

"All of a sudden, we started finding holes, and we got on a roll," Tom Paciorek, who was 5-for-6, said. "LP (Parrish) hit that ball a mile. A three-run homer with the score tied is a gamebreaker. I'm sure that knocks the wind out of their sails."

"Cleveland's got a pretty good club, so you want to get a pretty good lead against them, close the game out," Parrish said. "But when you're scoring the 15th, 16th and 17th runs, you start feeling sorry for them."

Toby Harrah drove in four runs with two doubles and a bases-loaded walk for the Rangers. Paciorek, Incaviglia, Oddibe McDowell, Scott Fletcher and Steve Buechele had two RBI each.

The previous team record for hits was 20. The Rangers had scored 16 runs five times previously.

Hough won his second consecutive game after recovering from a broken finger that he suffered when he shook hands during spring training. Hough pitched six innings and Mickey Mahler finished with three scoreless innings.

Angels 7, Red Sox 1

Rookie Wally Joyner drove in four runs with his 11th and 12th homers and Don Sutton won his 297th career game as California snapped Boston's five-game winning streak at Anaheim.

Joyner hit a solo homer in the first and capped a six-run rally in the fourth with a three-run homer that gave him the major-league lead with 33 RBI. Rob Wilfong had a two-run single and Gary Pettis an RBI single for the Angels in the fourth.

Sutton, 2-3, allowed five hits for seven innings before getting relief help from Terry Forster, who allowed one hit in the last two innings.

Orioles 4, White Sox 3

Baltimore rallied for two runs in the ninth inning on Jim Dwyer's pinch-hit homer and Lee Lacy's game-winning single.

Chicago, looking for its fourth straight victory since management decided to keep Tony LaRussa as manager, took a 3-2 lead in the top of the ninth on Harold Baines' two-out homer off Orioles starter Scott McGregor.

Rich Bordi, 1-0, then retired one batter and got credit for the victory when Baltimore rallied against White Sox reliever Bob James, 1-3. After Dwyer tied the score, Mike Young walked and went to second on Alan Wiggins' sacrifice, setting up Lacy's game-winner.

"Give Jim the credit," Lacy said. "He hit the ball out of the park, and gave Mike a chance to score the winning run and me a chance to drive it in."

The game was tied 2-2 through eight innings, with Wayne Tolleson hitting a two-run homer for visiting Chicago and Larry Sheets a two-run homer for the Orioles.

Yankees 9, Twins 8

Rickey Henderson snapped an 0-for-18 slump with three hits, including a two-run homer, and Butch Wynegar hit his fourth three-run homer of the season for New York, which needed all the runs when Minnesota rallied for six runs in the ninth at the Metrodome.

Yankees starter Dennis Rasmussen, 3-1, was leading 9-2 and had a six-hitter through eight innings, but he tired in the ninth and was relieved after giving up a run-scoring single to Tim Lardner. Mike Armstrong then allowed a two-run single to Al Woods and a three-run homer to Kirby Puckett, who has 12 to share the major-league lead with Joyner.

Dave Righetti got the final out for his ninth save.

Lardner's second homer of the season gave the Twins a 2-1 lead in the second inning.

Royals 6, Tigers 5

Jim Sundberg helped Kansas City take a 6-2 lead with a three-run homer before the Royals fought off two Detroit rallies.

The Tigers, trailing 6-2, scored three runs in the eighth after loading the bases with no outs against relief ace Dan Quisenberry, who failed to retire a batter.

The Tigers took a 2-0 lead in the first inning off Danny Jackson, 1-0, before the Royals jumped on loser Dave LaPoint, 0-2, for four in the second, highlighted by Hal McRae's RBI double and Sundberg's homer.

Steve Balboni added a two-run single in the fifth to make it 6-2, but the visiting Tigers scored three in the eighth on Darnell Coles' run-scoring single and a two-run single by Chet Lemon. Then they loaded the bases in the ninth before Mark Huismann retired Lance Parrish to end the game.

Mariners 6, Brewers 0

Seattle won for the third time in four games since Dick Williams took over as manager as Dave Henderson hit two homers and left-hander Matt Young allowed three hits in seven innings of relief against Milwaukee at the Kingdome.

Young, 3-2, came on to pitch in the third inning after starter Milt Wilcox pulled a muscle while warming up. Young struck out eight and walked four.

Henderson led off the second inning with his fifth homer and then came back in the eighth for another solo shot. In the fifth inning, Spike Owen doubled and scored on a double by Alvin Davis.

Steve Yeager made it 5-0 in the sixth inning with a three-run homer, his second of the season.

Blue Jays 5, A's 3

Lloyd Moseby had three hits and scored three runs and drove in one as visiting Toronto beat Oakland.

Chargers Qualify

JACKSONVILLE — Ayden-Grifton High School captured second place in the 1A/2A golf sectionals Monday and qualified for the state tournament, to be held in Chapel Hill next Monday.

Whiteville won the event with a 308 team total while the Chargers finished at 333. Topsail took third place with a 342 total.

Trae Wilson and Chris Brick led the Chargers with 81's. Jeremy Shadle carded an 85 while Brian Heath had an 86.

Two Farmville Central golfers participated in the tournament but did not qualify for further play. They were Darryl Baker, who had an 81 and Mark Williams with an 83.

The top two teams and the top two individuals from non-qualifying teams advance. The individual qualifiers were Neal Sullivan of Manteo with a 72 and Joel White of Boskie with a 76.

Wellcome 27
1st Federal 13

Ryan Owens and Josh Potter each collected three hits as Wellcome romped to a 27-13 baseball victory over First Federal in the Tar Heel Little League Monday.

Wellcome scored first with one run in the first inning. First Federal came back with give in the bottom of the second to take the lead. Wellcome scored twice in the third, while First Federal scored three times to make it 8-3. Wellcome rallied for eight in the fourth to move ahead, 11-8, while the Bankers came back with two to trim it to 11-10.

Then, in the fifth inning, Wellcome broke it open with 16 big runs for a 17-10 lead. Wellcome collected 12 walks, one hit batter, and three hits. The hits were by Chris Seaburg and Owens, the latter collecting two.

First Federal came back with three in the bottom of the inning.

Wellcome then scored 12 more runs in the top of the sixth, but the game was called before the inning was completed, reverting the score back to the end of the fifth.

Will Pleasants added two hits for Wellcome, while Rives Mann, Thomas Adams, Eric Smith and Maceo Mills each had two hits for First Federal.

Sportsworld 14
Jaycees 8

Jay Kuykendall banged out three hits and help lead Sportsworld to a 14-8 baseball victory over the Jaycees in the North State Little League Monday.

Sportsworld took the lead with three runs in the top of the first, then broke it open with ten in the third.

Parham Stanley led off the third with a walk and Kuykendall doubled. Aldrich Sharpe walked loading the bases and Shea Harper doubled in both Stanley and Kuykendall. Steven Anthony singled in Sharpe and Harper and Richard Ray walked. Dante Daniels got a hit to score Anthony and Joel Fickling singled but Ray was thrown out trying to score. Stanley singled in both Daniels and Fickling and Kuykendall singled. Sharpe reached on an error, scoring Stanley. Harper then singled in both of the remaining runners.

That made it 11-0. Sportsworld added one more in the sixth.

The Jaycees got single runs in the third, fourth and fifth, the latter on a solo homer by Andre Eley. Five more crossed in the sixth.

Daniels, Fickling and Harper each had two hits for Sportsworld while Eley had two to lead the Jaycees.

Everette's 5
Coca-Cola 4

Everette's Pest Control took an early lead and then held off Coca-Cola to take a 5-4 baseball win in the Babe Ruth League Monday.

Coke scored first, getting a run in the second, while Everette's came back with three.

Everette's then scored twice more in the third to move out to a 5-1 lead. Travis Williamson walked and Jamie Brewinton did goo. John Bolen singled and a passed ball let Williamson score. Paul Powers then grounded out, scoring Brewinton.

Coke came back with one in the fourth and two in the sixth.

Julius Smith hurled the loss, giving up but two hits, but nine walks contributed to his downfall. Powers got the win on a five-hitter.

Maurice Hines collected two hits for Coke and was the only player in the game with more than one.

Five Sign With ECU

East Carolina women's softball coach Sue Manahan announced Tuesday the signing of five players to the Lady Pirate squad for next fall.

All will enter East Carolina as freshmen. They include Jennifer Sagl of Bohemia, N.Y., Tracy Larkin of Evans, Ga., Kathy Sebrage of Vienna, Va., Leslie Cramer of Fairfax, Va., and Tracy Kee of Richmond, Va.

Sagl, a standout pitcher out of Connequat High School, is expected to fill gaps left in the staff by graduation. "She is strong offensively and has a good change-up as well as a good fast ball," Manahan said.

Larkin will also be called on to pitch for the Lady Pirates. Sebrage will see time in the outfield while Cramer and Kee are slated for infield positions.

Kee is the sister of Sandy Kee, an infielder on this year's Lady Pirate team.

Jury Selection Underway In USFL's Suit With NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — The witness list for the USFL's antitrust suit against the NFL resembles something in Who's Who. Yet the first stage of the trial focuses on a group of less prominent citizens whose job it will be to decide the future shape of professional football in America.

The long-awaited trial began Monday and immediately ran into a snag when 89 of the first group of 143 prospective jurors begged out of serving after U.S. District Judge Peter K. Leisure informed them that the case could go on as long as two months.

The selection process began Monday afternoon with Leisure questioning 12 prospective jurors, two-thirds of them either New York City or federal employees. Six were excused.

Questioning was to continue today with each side already having used two of the allowed three peremptory challenges, a legal maneuver which allows removal of a prospective juror without cause.

Jury selection will be followed by opening statements and then the first witness, expected to be NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. He was present Monday and was greeted by one departing juror with a "Hi, Pete."

Rozelle is one of a raft of potential big-name witnesses, although not all are expected to testify.

They include Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York and Mayor Edward I. Koch of New York City along with two U.S. Senators, Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y. and Albert Gore, D-Tenn. The New York politicians, if they are called, are expected to discuss the move of the New York Jets from Shea Stadium in New York City to Giants Stadium in New Jersey, seven miles from downtown New York.

The list also includes most of the owners in both leagues, the heads of the sports departments of the three major television networks, coaches Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins and Joe Walton of the New York Jets, and a group of players, most from the USFL, headed by Herschel Walker and Jim Kelly.

And it has what the USFL hopes are its two star witnesses — broadcaster Howard Cosell and Al Davis, the owner of the Los Angeles Raiders whose team is the only one in the NFL that is not a defendant in the suit.

The suit, filed in October 1984, charges the NFL with violating the Sherman Antitrust Act by monopolizing the pro football market. It seeks $440 million in damages which, if trebled as antitrust awards allow, would amount to $1.32 billion.

It also charges that the NFL pressured the three networks not to give the USFL a contract when the younger league decided in the summer of 1984 to switch from a spring season to a fall season. For the three seasons it played in the spring — it plans to begin autumn play in September — the USFL had contracts with ABC and ESPN cable, but only the ESPN contract was transferable to the fall.

The suit asks that the NFL contract with one of the networks be voided.

Winning the television-contract portion of the suit without the monetary award might not save the USFL, which lost an estimated $150 million in its first three years. Even if the NFL is thrown off one of the networks, there is no guarantee that the USFL would get a contract from the one that has lost the NFL.

The main issue at Monday's session involved a motion by the USFL that all football fans be eliminated from the jury because they might be predisposed to favor the existing NFL.

"Plaintiff cannot imagine," the USFL said in a brief accompanying the motion, "how any football fan with the deep-seated and even subliminal loyalties associated with being a fan, could be deemed an impartial juror in this case."

It added: "The NFL knows full well that football fans have an overwhelmingly high likelihood of possessing at least emotional loyalties and biases in favor of defendants and of having, in fact, a direct personal interest in the outcome of the case."

However, the motion was denied and four of the first 12 jurors questioned said they were more than casual football fans. Two of those remained on the panel at the close of the day.

Jr. High Baseball

Wellcome Middle School nipped Bethel, 7-6, in junior high school baseball action Monday.

The game went extra innings with David Rose scoring the winning run on Clarence Hammond's single. Reggie Daniels got the win in relief.

In the girls' softball game, Wellcome downed Bethel, 7-6.

Tracy Nichols was the winning pitcher and Dewanda Artis led the hitting.

Chicod-Whitfield

CHICOD — Chicod took two baseball games from G.R. Whitfield Monday, winning 16-1 and 30-10 behind the hitting of Paul Jackson and Brent Elks.

In the first game, Jackson pitched a two hitter.

Elks led Chicod with four hits, two of which were triples and Jackson added two more hits. David O'Neal and Eric Edwards had one hit each to lead G.R. Whitfield.

In the second game, Elks, Jackson and Paul Merritt each had three hits to lead Chicod. Macon Sullivan was the winning pitcher.

Bershaun Thompson and Paul Payjack had two hits apiece to lead Whitfield.

JUST LIKE THAT

DALLAS (AP) — It may have been an NBA record for brevity. Charlie Sitton, a reserve guard for the Dallas Mavericks, played all of two seconds in a 101-94 victory for the Mavs over Portland.

"It was nice to be out there long enough to get the feel of the game," Sitton observed afterward somewhat tongue in cheek. "It's a good thing it doesn't take me long to get warmed up."

'Good Idea At The Time'

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Cosby, one of America's most popular TV dads since Jim Anderson knew best, says immortality was not the reason he and his wife had five children.

"And we also did not have them because we thought it would be fun to see one of them sit in a chair and stick out his leg so that another one of them running by was launched like Explorer I," Cosby says in his new book, "Fatherhood," excerpted in the June issue of Good Housekeeping.

"I guess the real reason that my wife and I had children is the same reason Napoleon had for invading Russia: It seemed like a good idea at the time."

Cosby and his wife, Camille, have four daughters and a son.

Sounding a lot like Dr. Heathcliff Huxtable, father of five on "The Cosby Show," the actor explains some of his theories of fatherhood in the new book, to be published in late May by Doubleday.

"No matter what you tell your child to do, he will always do the opposite. This is Cosby's first Law of Intergenerational Perversity," he says.

DEPRESSED — Country singer Dolly Parton says she was so depressed a few years ago that she put her career on hold and even contemplated suicide. Her problems began in 1982, when health problems forced her to cancel some concerts and that prompted some lawsuits, she said in a recent interview with Ladies' Home Journal. She also received death threats and was in the midst of family problems, she said. Miss Parton, 40, who starred in the movies "9 to 5" and "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," said she is happier now than she's ever been. (AP Laserphoto)

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Despite a deep-seated desire for a calm day, an event is likely to occur to shake you out of your feeling of contentment and cause you to make a swift and necessary change in your plans.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You want to get some home affair straightened out, but later a letter or telephone call may require your attention.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) While making out reports in the morning, you may be interrupted in order to handle a monetary matter.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are making plans to gain your secret aims, but a partner has a problem and needs your assistance, so give it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You have planned to see your friends, but a private affair turns up that causes you to go in a different direction.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You have various ways of gaining the favor of a bigwig, but a close friend needs help to solve a bad problem.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Concentrate on your friends who can be of help to you, but before you can reach them, a civic matter involving kin arises.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have some worldly affairs that require your attention, but first introduce a new contact to a good friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You want to rush right into new activities that could propel you forward, but first you have to study every angle and be sure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Before you try to reach greater accord with your mate, settle an affair with an associate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are anxious to come to a fine understanding with an emotional partner but have to attend to some practical matter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have much work ahead of you, but first clear up some problem with your close ties that can be a hindrance.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may have to wait a while for entertainment since you first have to handle a situation at home which is important.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be concerned with gaining security from a very early age, so be sure to give a practical kind of education which will bring in money quickly. There is much curiosity in this nature. It is important to teach to be more objective early in life.

Lucille Ball Will Return In New ABC TV Schedule

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — ABC is counting on Lucille Ball's third television series and five other new shows this fall to reverse its disastrous Friday and Saturday night ratings, while setting some modest objectives for the new season.

"Our goal next season is to show gradual improvement in our audience levels and to increase the general quality of the programs we present," Brandon Stoddard, president of ABC Entertainment, said Monday as the new lineup was announced.

ABC spotted one new program each on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Miss Ball returns to network television as a hardware store owner in "Life with Lucy," which the network scheduled for 8 p.m. Eastern Time on Saturdays. Gale Gordon, who played Osgood Conklin in "Our Miss Brooks" and Miss Ball's sidekick in "The Lucy Show," returns in the new series.

Miss Ball, who will be 75 in August, starred in "I Love Lucy" from 1951 to 1961, and in "The Lucy Show" from 1962 to 1974.

ABC's Saturday night schedule was the second-worst ratings night for any network last year, finishing just ahead of ABC's Friday night lineup.

Five ABC shows in the bottom 10 last season were canceled: "Ripley's Believe It or Not," "The Fall Guy," "He's the Mayor," "The Redd Foxx Show" and "Benson." Also scuttled were "The Love Boat," ranked 62nd out of 82 series last season, and "Hardcastle & McCormick," ranked 52nd.

Other new entries on Saturday include "The Ellen Burstyn Show," with the actress playing a college professor sharing a home with her mother, divorced daughter and a grandson; "Cold Steel and Neon," starring Robert Desiderio as a sensitive, widowed police detective; and "Spenser: For Hire," which is moving from Tuesday night.

"Webster" and "Mr. Belvedere" return on Friday, leading into "The Last Electric Knight," starring Gil Gerard as a disheveled detective who becomes guardian of a young martial arts expert, played by Ernie Reyes Jr. "Sledge Hammer" takes the next half hour, with David Rasche as a comic reincarnation of Dirty Harry and Rambo. At 10 p.m., Robert Hays plays "Starman," an alien who returns to Earth to raise his orphaned son.

"Growing Pains," "Moonlighting" and "Who's the Boss?" all return to ABC's strong Tuesday night lineup, with "Our Kind of Town" — starring Shelley Hack as a compassionate newspaper columnist and Mike Allen as her entrepreneur-husband — replacing "Spenser" at 10 p.m.

Wednesday, ABC's top-rated night, again features "Dynasty" and "Hotel," with "Perfect Strangers" moving into the 8 p.m. slot followed by "Head of the Class," starring Howard Hesseman (Johnny Fever of "WKRP in Cincinnati") as a teacher of gifted high school students.

"Our World," an hour-long show which looks at the impact of events in recent history, is a new entry on Thursday nights, leading into "The Colbys" and "20/20."

Rivers Cancels Letterman Spot

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Joan Rivers, whose new late-night show this fall will challenge Johnny Carson on his home ground, has canceled an appearance on NBC's "Late Night With David Letterman," which is co-produced by Carson's production company.

"She's just not feeling funny these days," her agent, Richard Grant, said Monday.

Grant said Miss Rivers spoke to Letterman, and they agreed that she'd come on his program in the fall, which would be after she started her own show, "The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers."

Miss Rivers still was scheduled to be sole guest on the syndicated "Donahue" talk show today. Grant said the difference was that it was a talk show, not a comedy show.

Bridge is one of the chief activities aboard cruise ships. This hand was played recently aboard the S.S. Noordam, one of Holland America Line's luxury ships playing the Caribbean.

North's double of the two-diamond overall was negative—in theory, a takeout double for the unbid suits. When South showed a balanced minimum, North made an inspired decision when he elected to bid four spades rather than three no trump. The latter contract stood no chance; the former needed excellent defense to defeat it.

Expecting to find a somewhat more unbalanced hand in dummy, West led a low spade. Declarer guessed correctly when he rose with the king, then started out on the right track by running hearts.

If West does not ruff the third heart, declarer can lead a fourth heart and sluff a diamond from hand. The best of the defenders can then do is to collect two spade tricks and a diamond. If West ruffs low, when declarer gains the lead he simply exits with a trump, and the ace and queen tumble together. Since the king of diamonds is safe from attack, the defenders are held to the same three tricks.

There is a solution to West's dilemma, and he found it at the table. Declarer's line of play suggested he did not have the queen of trumps (since he did not simply draw trumps). So West ruffed with the ace of spades and returned a trump. In with the queen, East had no difficulty in finding the diamond shift that netted the defenders two diamond tricks to go with their two trump tricks—down one.

Test Postponed

WALLOPS ISLAND, Va. (AP) — Rough seas prompted NASA officials to postpone a rocket test that had been scheduled for this morning and was to have produced colorful pre-dawn skies along much of the East Coast.

The test, an experiment on the origins of the solar system, was put off until Saturday morning, said Joyce Milliner, a spokeswoman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Wallops Flight Facility.

NASA plans to launch two rockets about 16 minutes apart from the Virginia Eastern Shore base. The first will release barium clouds that will appear greenish or violet for about 15 minutes.

Capitol Fence Isn't All New

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress aghast at the idea of erecting an anti-terrorist fence around the Capitol are being reminded that in less troubled times, more than a century ago, an imposing wrought iron fence encircled the same tree-shaded grounds.

In those days, according to historians, the fence was intended to keep out wandering dogs, cattle and swine that might bespoil the landscaped gardens and walkways of the Capitol. But legislators apparently didn't like that fence, either.

The gates were closed at 9 o'clock every evening. "Congressmen, delayed at the Capitol, were often seen to pick up a convenient stone and break a lock rather than seek peaceful exit," said one account.

That iron and stone fence was designed by Charles Bulfinch, the architect of the Capitol, and built in 1829, according to documents furnished by the architect's office. The fence stood "taller than the head of an ordinary man" and featured two sandstone lodges for gatekeepers at the western foot of Capitol Hill.

The fence was partially dismantled in the 1850s to make way for construction of the present House and Senate wings, which tripled the size of the original 22.5-acre site.

The fence was completely removed by 1874, when landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted designed the open vistas of sweeping lawns and terraced gardens, bordered only by a low stone wall, that are familiar to millions of tourists today.

By Olmsted's time, the documents say, there was "improved animal control."

In this spring of heightened U.S. tensions with Libya, many members of Congress are worried about the threat of a terrorist bombing attack against the Capitol, but they're not sure that a fence is the best solution.

A new, $15.4 million security plan proposed by Senate Majority Whip Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., and his Democratic counterpart, Alan Cranston of California, calls for building a wrought iron fence atop the stone wall, standing about 8 feet high and completely enclosing the 127-acre Capitol grounds.

Inside the fence, similar to one that circles the White House, would be a secondary ring of infrared and seismic sensors and closed-circuit TV cameras to thwart anyone who might try to scale the barrier. Behind the fence's reinforced gates would be 30-inch, hydraulically operated steel blades designed to halt a suicide truck bomb.

Tourists would be required to pass through elaborate screening devices at one of three "visitors' kiosks," or police guardhouses, along the eastern edge of the Capitol grounds. Once inside, the only security precautions they would encounter would be metal detectors situated outside the House and Senate galleries.

At a Senate Rules Committee hearing last week, Cranston assured Sen. Charles Mathias Jr., R-Md., that the Capitol would not be turned into a "fortress" if the security plan were approved.

Mathias said it would be "the ultimate victory of lawless terrorists" if Americans were denied free access to Congress in the name of greater security.

FOCUS

Older Solar

The disaster at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant in the Soviet Union has again focused attention on alternative energy sources — such as solar. Solar heating equipment was actually in use at the turn of the century, when the Day/Night Company sold solar heating units. Thousands of units were in operation in the 1930s. By the 1950s, Miami had more than 50,000 solar-heated homes. However, most of these people came to prefer the convenience of gas heaters.

Forecasts Show Crop Abundance

WASHINGTON (AP) — New world crop projections by the Agriculture Department show an abundance of wheat and corn in 1986-87, indicating further that American farmers may see grain prices sag even lower in the coming year.

According to USDA economists, wheat prices at the farm may average $2.25 to $2.50 per bushel in the 1986-87 marketing year, compared with $3.16 last season and $3.38 in 1984-85.

Corn prices at the farm could slide to a range of $1.80 to $2.05 per bushel in 1986-87, down from $2.35 and $2.62 the last two years, respectively.

Meanwhile, the USDA said Monday that world wheat production is rising again this year, despite cutbacks in the United States and the Soviet Union.

The 1986-87 forecast issued by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service calls for a global wheat harvest of 510.4 million metric tons, up 1 percent from last season and only 5 million tons less than the record harvest of 1984-85.

In the United States, farmers may harvest 59.3 million tons of wheat this year, down 10 percent from 1985-86, primarily because of a sharp cutback in acreage, the report said.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels. A crop of 59.3 million tons would be about 2.18 billion bushels.

The Soviet wheat harvest was forecast at 80 million tons, down 4 percent from last year because of a reduced area for harvest.

Farm Policy Is Drawing Some Second Thoughts

WASHINGTON (AP) — In December, U.S. farm policy took a dramatic turn in hopes that lower prices would woo back lost sales around the globe and restore the American farm economy to health.

Five months later, however, some farm state lawmakers are worried that by the time the November election rolls around, farmers will have lost patience with the new idea.

The problem is that the success of the new law is pinned entirely on increased exports, which could be years away. In the meantime, farm income is being shored up with record government subsidies, an estimated $25 billion this year.

"We don't turn the agricultural sector around on a dime," is how Agriculture Department economist Robert Thompson puts it. "We've got at least another difficult year, maybe a couple of difficult years ahead of us."

The administration is banking on American efficiency and capacity to recapture lost markets by undercut-ting foreign competitors. That is a departure from the past, when American prices served as a price floor for all world production.

But the reality of that policy is politically distasteful. It means, for example, projected prices for this year's corn crop as low as $1.80 a bushel, just before election time. That compares with $2.35 for the 1985 crop and could be the lowest price since the early 1970s.

Drought Cuts Into N.C. Crop

By The Associated Press

Wheat, rye and barley growers have already lost about 40 percent of their crop due to the drought, and tobacco, corn and soybeans may be the next victims if relief doesn't come to North Carolina soon, agricultural officials say.

"This dry weather has been devastating," Ron Jarrett, an extension agronomy specialist at North Carolina State University, said Monday. "Earlier we were in the position to get some high yields, but it has just been too dry for too long."

David Epperson, assistant climatologist for the N.C. Climate Program in Raleigh, said the springtime dryness has been especially severe coming on the heels of an unusually dry winter.

Last spring also was dry, he said, "but the thing that is different from last year is that we had rain in the winter of '85, so the dry spring didn't hurt as bad. We will need almost 3 inches before the end of May just to equal last year's (spring) rainfall."

Forecasters called for a chance of scattered showers over much of the state today and Wednesday.

Last year, small grains netted about $77.5 million for North Carolina growers, Jarrett said, but this year, the crop will probably bring around $25 million.

"Our wheat crop is already a disaster," said David Morrison, a Scotland County extension agent. "Farmers will be lucky if they get half a crop this year."

Sampson County extension agent Worth Gurkin said farmers there have lost about 14,000 acres, or about 70 percent, of their small grain crop.

"It's gone," said James Naylor, a Sampson County farmer who had planted 200 acres of barley and wheat. "It wouldn't make any difference if it rained tonight."

Naylor and other farmers said they have turned their attention to other crops that are in danger but have a chance of survival.

Tobacco is "holding its own," said W.K. Collins, a tobacco specialist with N.C. State Agricultural Extension Service. The main problem now, he said, is that some tobacco is not getting a good hold in the sun-baked soil, and the lack of rain has left high concentrations of fertilizer near the plants roots. Rain normally drives the fertilizer into the soil.

But Collins remained optimistic. "We're not ready to close up shop on tobacco yet," he said. "It is a reliable, consistent crop because it can stand a tremendous amount of adversity."

The drought's effects on produce such as tomatoes, green beans and peppers might be twofold, possibly destroying some of the crop and delaying the harvest for what survives, experts said.

The delayed harvest might force some Tar Heel farmers into competition with produce grown in northern states.

In Sampson County, Gurkin said he predicted a 40 percent loss of sweet potatoes, cucumbers and eggplants, largely because many farmers don't have irrigation systems.

Extension agents said the fate of blueberry and strawberry crops largely depended on what type of irrigation systems farmers had in place. Bladen County extension agent Keith Dennis said the drought would probably claim about 20 percent of Bladen's blueberry crop and possibly do permanent damage to the bushes.

In Scotland and Columbus counties, there could be as much as a 20 percent drop in cotton yields, partly because of planting that was delayed as growers hoped for rain.

Extension agent Clyde Peedin said Halifax County farmers planted cotton and corn soon enough for them to take hold in the now-parched soil, but that peanut seeds don't have enough water to break ground.

D.S. Isles, who farms 750 acres in the Aurelian Springs area of Halifax County, said he has been irrigating 17 to 18 hours a day in an attempt to save his crops.

"It's tough work and its expensive," he said. "The crops are in a serious stage and are on the verge of being critical."
