Court Says White Teachers Can't Be Laid Off To Make Room For Black Colleagues

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a blow to affirmative action in the American workplace, today struck down a plan aimed at protecting the jobs of black school teachers in Jackson, Mich., at the expense of whites with more seniority.

The 5-to-4 ruling said the affirmative action plan violated the Constitution's guarantee of equal protection for all under the laws.

But the ruling was based on narrow grounds. The court still has two other major affirmative action cases under consideration, with decisions expected by July.

Four justices agreed that the Jackson, Mich., plan for laying off teachers was not based on convincing evidence of prior discrimination by the school board.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, in an opinion for the four, said, "This court never has held that societal discrimination alone is sufficient to justify a racial classification. Rather, the court has insisted upon some showing of prior discrimination by the governmental unit involved before allowing limited use of racial classifications in order to remedy such discrimination."

Powell was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices William H. Rehnquist and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Justice Byron R. White provided the fifth vote to strike down the Jackson affirmative action plan. But he wrote a separate opinion explaining his reasons.

The court stopped well short of accepting the Reagan administration's argument that only actual victims of bias should receive preferential on-the-job treatment.

President Reagan, advocating a "color-blind society," opposes all quotas as a form of "reverse discrimination" that injures the innocent, usually white males.

In today's case, the Jackson school board has had contracts since 1972 with the teachers union aimed at protecting the jobs of blacks.

The agreement required laying off white teachers with more seniority if necessary to preserve the existing percentage of minority teachers in the public school system.

The plan was aimed at eliminating a disparity between the percentage of black teachers and black students in the schools. In 1971, about 16 percent of the school system's students, but only 9 percent of the faculty, were minority members. Most of the minority members were black.

White teachers who were laid off in 1981 filed suit, charging the plan violated their rights. While most were rehired, they are seeking back pay.

damages and restored seniority.

Today's ruling reinstates their suit against the school board.

Larry Fischer, executive director of the Jackson Education Association, which supported the affirmative action plan, said: "We're disappointed that the decision went that way, but we'll have to reserve any other comment until we have an opportunity to review the text and see what that means for us here."

Powell hinted the court might look with more favor on racial preferences in hiring and promotions than in layoffs.

"While hiring goals impose a diffuse burden, often for closing only one of several opportunities, layoffs

Too Militaristic?

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Despite its popularity in churches, "Onward Christian Soldiers" should be dropped from the new Methodist hymnal because of its military imagery, a church committee has recommended.

Other hymn lyrics considered militaristic or sexist should be rewritten, the panel said.

"I'm trying to raise my sons to be peacemakers, not soldiers, and it's not easy," said Mary Brook Casad, member of the United Methodist Hymnal Revision Committee, as the group voted 10-8 Saturday to recommend deleting "Onward Christian Soldiers" from the church's hymn book.

"I don't think people who sing it have any idea of shooting anybody," countered the Rev. W.T. Handy, bishop for the Missouri area.

Other committee members cited the firing that 80 percent of congregations surveyed had sung "Onward Christian Soldiers" at least once in the past year.

The hymn's refrain is: "Onward Christian soldiers, marching as to war, With the cross of Jesus going on before."

Revisions for a new hymnal, to be published in 1988 or 1989, must be approved by delegates to the 1988 General Conference.

Panel members voted for retention of "Am I a Soldier of the Cross," with a majority considering it an acceptable use of military imagery because it points to the Christian's daily struggle to follow Jesus. The committee also agreed to retain "Rise Up O Men of God," despite the title's perceived sexism.

But the group voted to change sexist references about people when possible, such as changing "all men" to "neighbor" and "our brethren" to "thy people."

The United Methodist Church has about 10 million members.

South Africans Strike Guerrillas In 3 Nations

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South African soldiers and warplanes struck hundreds of miles inside black-ruled Botswana, Zimbabwe and Zambia today to raid alleged African National Congress targets. At least three people were reported killed.

Army chief Lt. Gen. A.J. Liebenberg said the early morning attacks were completed successfully, but would not give details about casualties or damage. It was the most far-flung offensive by South Africa, which previously limited such raids to one country at a time.

The ANC, outlawed in South Africa, is the major black guerrilla group fighting apartheid, the system of forced racial separation that empowers 5 million whites to rule 24 million voteless blacks.

In Zambia, two South African warplanes struck a refugee camp near the capital of Lusaka, said President Kenneth Kaunda who condemned the attacks as "cowardly, criminal and unforgivable acts of aggression."

He told a news conference a Zambian and a Namibian were killed and at least nine people were injured, but would not elaborate. Lusaka is nearly 1,000 miles from the South African border.

Kaunda said last month he had information that South Africa planned military attacks on Zambia.

Liebenberg said the target in Lusaka was an ANC operations center and information office.

In Botswana, helicopter-borne South African soldiers stormed a housing complex outside the capital of Gaborone, setting off explosives and firing into the buildings, authorities said. One man, a soccer player in his 20s, was killed and three others, including a Botswana soldier, were injured. Gaborone is a few miles north of the South African border.

President Quett Masire said he was appalled that Pretoria had ordered the attack while being engaged in talks with his government.

The helicopters also dropped pamphlets over the city, saying "South African troops have carried out an attack against houses used by the ANC in your country." The pamphlets also said the attackers "regard the people of Botswana as our friends."

Marines Say Goodbye To KP

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps has decided to get its "few good men" out of the kitchen.

In a move that one can only assume will be met with jubilation, the Marine Corps this week will begin phasing out "kitchen police" duty at its mess halls inside the United States.

The corps is the last of the nation's military services to make a move to civilian contractors for "non-specialty" kitchen help. Once completed, the change will mean that 2,058 Marines will not — at any given moment — be drawing such duties as cleaning tables, swabbing decks, scrubbing pots and pans, manning the food service line or carrying garbage.

"We need the manpower. We no longer can afford to tie up our Marines doing these tasks," says Jerry Stark, a former Marine who is now a civilian official with the corps' commercial activities branch.

According to Stark and Maj. Tony Rothfork, a Marine spokesman, the process will begin May 23 at Camp Geiger, a satellite facility outside Camp Lejeune, N.C. By the end of the summer, the mess halls at Lejeune, as well as at the nearby air station at New River, N.C., will have stopped using Marine messmen.

Contract awards should follow later this year for mess halls at such locations as Cherry Point, N.C.; El Toro, Calif.; Tustin, Calif.; and Camp Pendleton, Calif. The process won't be completed until 1988, but it eventually will spread to other bases such as those at Twentynine Palms, Calif.; San Diego; Honolulu, and Beaufort, S.C.

By the end of this year, more than 1,000 Marines will have escaped mess hall detail, adds Rothfork. The idea, he says, is to "civilianize" every major Marine mess hall within the United States.

The plan will not change the status of Marines who are trained as cooks, bakers and butchers. Marines will still be preparing the food.

The changes also will not affect Marines posted overseas, training in the field or assigned aboard ships, but that number is described as small in comparison with those drawing mess detail at established bases.

Recruits in boot camp also will not escape KP duty. Rather, officials say, the goal is to eliminate space. Soviet negotiators are seeking to curb Star Wars as part of an arms reduction package.

In a report, Kenneth L. Adelman, director of the arms control and disarmament agency, assured congressional committees that all current U.S. defense programs were consistent with the terms of existing arms control agreements with the Soviets.

The strict interpretation of the treaty approved in October by Reagan will remain policy "as long as the program receives the support needed to implement its (SDI) plan," the report said.

Otherwise, it warned, the administration may have to "restructure" the anti-missile research program along the lines of a looser interpretation of the treaty that Reagan also said in October was justified.

The 1972 treaty places limits on the deployment of anti-ballistic missile systems and on testing and development of defense programs. It was signed in Moscow by former President Nixon and the late Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and is considered a landmark in the effort to curb the nuclear arms race.

The theory behind the treaty is that if nations were unable to defend themselves they would be inhibited from launching an attack because the retaliatory blow would be catastrophic.

mess details that normally last 30 days and prevent large numbers of trained Marines from doing what they're paid to do — maintain combat readiness.

"It is essential that we get Marines back into the Fleet Marine Force and training," says Rothfork. When it comes to KP duty, Marines have long been the odd men out compared to their military brethren. While there are exceptions, particularly at boot camps, the Army, Navy and Air Force began the switch to civilian workers years ago.

Indeed, most Air Force mess halls haven't had any airmen routinely drawing KP duty for some two decades. The Army began the process in 1975 and is now "about 95 percent through," says Maj. Phil Soucy, a spokesman.

Rothfork says the Marine Corps does expect the change to cost more money, but added the corps will not ask Congress for additional funds because it intends to absorb the difference within its current budget.

The spokesman was unable to immediately quantify the program's pricetag. But he noted the current system in effect wastes some of the money spent by the corps each year on training Marines.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Song Of Old-Fashioned Girl Is Praise For Good Old Days

DEAR ABBY: I loved the letter from "Millie," who was on the side of girls who held out for marriage. Her letter made my day, especially when she mentioned a song that was popular in the '20s titled "Just a Girl That Men Forget." When I was young, I used to play it over and over on our player piano.

In those days, music was first-rate. The lyrics told a story without repeating a line — a far cry from the repetitious junk one hears today.

In case you want to share all the lyrics with your readers, here they are.

JUANITA HAMMON, LYNWOOD, CALIF.

DEAR JUANITA: I do; thanks for sharing.

My dear little girl, they call you a vamp, A flapper with up-to-date ways You may shine brightly, but just like a lamp, You'll burn out one of these days. Then your old-fashioned sister will come into view With a husband and kiddies, but what about you?

You're the kind of a girl that men forget Just a toy to enjoy for a while For when men settle down, they always get An old-fashioned girl, with an old-fashioned smile And you'll soon realize you're not so wise, When the years bring you tears of regret When they play, "Here Comes the Bride" You'll stand outside, just a girl that men forget.

DEAR ABBY: "Holding Out" wrote to say that she is 27, unmarried, and has chosen to remain a virgin for a variety of reasons we have all heard many times: She will not have to worry about becoming pregnant or getting a disease. And she won't wonder if a guy really cares for her, or if he's just using her for sex.

It's funny how guys still want the girls they marry to be virgins, but if they sleep around, it's OK; they need the "experience."

"Holding Out" says she is keeping her virginity for marriage because she wants to give her husband a very special gift — something she has given to no one else. Goody, goody for her.

And what is he giving her? A secondhand organ? LIBERATED IN LAUDERDALE

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the letter from the 27-year-old girl who was "Holding Out" for marriage. Not to brag, but I'm a popular, good-looking, 18-year-old college student who is also holding out, and I'm proud of it. There is a lot of pressure for me to "conform," but so far no guy has ever succeeded in changing my mind — or my anatomy.

It's really not all that difficult. When a guy asks me to go to bed with him, I just say, "No, thank you, I'm not ready to go that route."

And if he says, "Everybody's doing it," I say, "Fine, then you should have no trouble finding somebody else."

UNTOUCHED IN MADISON, WIS.

DEAR LIBERATED AND UNTOUCHED: Now, let's hear it from a male:

DEAR ABBY: I am a recently married 32-year-old male and I would have seriously wondered about a woman who was still a virgin at 27. Although I slept with many women prior to marriage, I don't think I "used" anyone. I stopped seeing some (and some stopped seeing me), but sex was rarely the reason, and when sex did play a role, that role was not one of rejection because the woman was "giving in" (an interesting notion inasmuch as it assumes that women don't enjoy sex).

Also, and I think I speak for many men, I wouldn't marry a woman I had not slept with. Why risk unhappiness and possible divorce by marrying someone who might have serious hang-ups about sex? (This, incidentally, is what I would wonder about a 27-year-old virgin.)

Finally, disease is a serious problem. These days no one should engage in intercourse outside of marriage without a condom. If you don't print this letter, please print those last two sentences — too many people are ignorant of that simple fact.

LIKE A VIRGIN

DEAR ABBY: Seven years ago I had an abortion. At the time it was the only way out of a very bad situation. (It was either that, or suicide.) I am a baptized Catholic, so I know that I was automatically excommunicated from the Catholic Church when I had the abortion. I haven't been to church since.

I want so much to confess and receive some kind of absolution, but I can't face going to the confessional. I'm afraid the priest will throw me out and ask me not to return.

Will you please ask one of your priest friends if there is some way to return to the church after excommunication? I am sure there are other Catholics who would like to know.

TORMENTED SOUL

DEAR TORMENTED: Go to confession. The priest will not throw you out. A Catholic is forgiven the sin when he or she truly repents. If you lack the courage to face your own parish priest, go to another parish.

DEAR ABBY: This is to express my appreciation for printing that excellent poem, "Slow Me Down, Lord." At 91 years old, I am memorizing it to use in some of my meetings with older persons. Gratefully,

THE REV. H.T. MILLER, ANDERSON, IND.

ADVANTAGES OF PORCELAIN

If you have a tooth that should be crowned to save it, you will probably want your dentist to use the best and longest lasting material available as long as it's within your budget. One of the finest materials available is porcelain because of its strength and durability as well as its appearance. In one technique, porcelain is fused with a strong metal to increase its strength. Once in place, it can withstand the hardest biting forces without danger of fracturing.

A porcelain crown, as in all tooth crowning procedures, will require several visits to prepare the tooth and to fit the crown onto the restored tooth. Once the crown has been casted and the porcelain fused, it will be properly shaped and colored to match your other teeth to insure both a good match as well as good chewing efficiency. It should serve your needs well for many years, providing you maintain good oral hygiene habits at home and have regular dental checkups. If you need a tooth crowned, call my office and ask about the advantages of porcelain.

Then the chances of your winning benefits are somewhere between 70% and 80%. ## Excursion Train Rolls In Swamp

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — Cars on a train powered by a vintage steam engine suddenly rolled over after it derailed in the Great Dismal Swamp Wildlife refuge, injuring 181 of the 1,000 people aboard, passengers said.

A Boy Scout leader who was on the 24-car Norfolk & Western train said it seemed as if "everything was coming at us" after it derailed Sunday afternoon.

Five people were critically injured and two others were in serious but stable condition. Most of the others hurt were released after treatment.

The train was traveling at about 60 mph when it derailed, said Norfolk Southern Chairman Robert B. Claytor, who was at the throttle of engine No. 611.

The train was on a 150-mile, daylong trip from Norfolk to Petersburg and back. It was carrying employees of Norfolk Southern Corp., parent company of the Norfolk & Western, and their family and friends on an annual outing.

"All of a sudden she just started rolling," said passenger H.L. Lowe, who was not injured.

"The whole car started turning over," said Dr. Robert F. Brewer, a plastic surgeon at Portsmouth Naval Hospital who was in the dining car.

"I was just coming to the counter and all of a sudden we felt the car turning," he said. "The whole food counter started coming over toward us. We realized we were going to the Brewer had accompanied 16 Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts on the trip.

"Troop 212 got to go as a special treat," he said. "It wasn't exactly what I had planned for my Sunday."

The cause of the accident has not been determined, but "it wasn't anything in the operation of the engine," said Claytor. "The steam engine is in perfect shape."

"What makes it hard for me is that we hurt some of our employees," he said.

Two cars flipped on their sides, trapping some passengers for up to 90 minutes. It was in those cars — a coach and a dining car — where the most serious injuries occurred.

Within minutes of the derailment, more than 100 rescue workers converged on the scene, about seven miles from the nearest road. Coast Guard, Navy and civilian medical Seven people were taken to Norfolk General Hospital for treatment of chest and head injuries, said Debbie Myers, a hospital spokeswoman.

Five of them, ranging from age 10 to 60, were in critical condition and the other two were in serious but stable condition, she said.

Insurance

A rollback on malpractice rates by Medical Mutual Insurance Co. would make a big difference in the lives of many North Carolina mothers-to-be as well as the family doctors involved.

On March 1 the company raised rates for family practitioners who deliver babies from $4,480 to $22,126. The action saw 32 doctors decide they would stop delivering because they couldn't afford those rates.

The insurers last week were said to have retreated to $6,784 — a figure described as being affordable to the doctors and meeting their own needs. A letter accompanying the announcement to North Carolina insurance officials about the rollback reportedly said the company had decided to lower the premiums rather than proceed with the twice-requested action to justify the increase for family physicians. Premium rates for doctors in other specialties rose between 30 percent and 36 percent; but for those into delivering babies there was a 357 percent hike in rates.

Then it all fell apart when the insurers said they were misunderstood.

How this could be is hard to visualize because insurance companies have a reputation of going to great lengths in spelling out exactly what they mean. For instance, statisticians of Medical Mutual presumably had data pointing to a 357 percent increase in rates for baby-deliverers. (They just did not reach into a barrel and come up with that bone-jarring figure ... we hope.) Company officers must have been as startled as the doctors on seeing the projected rate increase and pushed buttons for clarification.

Being businessmen the insurers had to have been aware of resultant shockwaves and that state insurance officials could not close their eyes but would have to ask for explanations.

The data pointing to the huge rate increase most certainly would have been needed for answering questions of the N.C. Insurance commission, yet the company's letter was read as saying it would lower the premiums rather than face requirements from the state insurance office to recalculate and resubmit the company's entire premium rate structure plan filed Jan. 31.

They now say "no way," they were telling the insurance officials that family practice doctors would be given a new classification and the physicians would be judged and rates set on an individual basis. The confusion is baffling.

A great failure in communicating by Medical Mutual is indicated. If they can fail to communicate via the written word they can also be suspected of misreading their own statistics on which rates are decided for the insured. Maybe they belong in politics wherein a candidate can convey one chain of thought and follow another.

Timely

At last people are projecting the Chernobyl disaster impact to the level of a nuclear weapons explosion we have yet to see. The thought arose: if the power plant accident could be counted as one occurring under the most favorable of safety circumstances, a single weapons explosion would be the nightmare some of the most exaggerated accounts of Chernobyl approached.

Such a weapons blast would be expected in a heavily populated area even less prepared than an area with a nuclear power plant to deal with after-effects.

Just as in the Ukraine (and Western Europe) the impact of fallout on people, animals, food, water, etc., would be greater than anything approaching the power plant's accident.

It is sobering to think what this kind of projection involves in a single unit of nuclear weapons. There are so very many of them. If one is detonated by accident, in fear or anger, a lot of dominoes begin to fall.

As President Reagan said: the nuclear doctrine is stupid policy.

Just maybe the peacetime mishap was especially timely for the world if pondered long enough in Moscow and Washington.

But not too long.

State Money Won't Go Far

RALEIGH — During the 1982 legislative session, former Sen. Dal Alford of Rocky Mount revealed the secret of legislative happiness: Legislative service is fun when there is money to spend. It's no fun when there is a budget to cut.

Alford's rule is about to be disproved. The Legislature's budget committees, which began working on 1987 budget adjustments today, will have $400 million to spend, but they should enjoy it very little.

While $400 million may sound like a lot of money, it falls far short of meeting the demands being made on the state. A teacher and state employee raise could easily take half, or more, of the $400 million. There are prisons and roads to build, schools to replace, water and sewer lines to be installed, and the federal budget cuts to be made up.

A 1 percent across-the-board pay raise for all state employees would cost the state $40 million next year. Gov. Jim Martin has proposed a 3.2 percent raise that would cost a total of about $128 million, with another $10 million spent on salary enhancements for teachers. But Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker

Liston Ramsey say a bigger raise is needed, especially for teachers. A 5 percent raise — which is what state employees got last year — would cost $200 million.

But most state workers really got more than 5 percent last year because the Legislature, in addition to the across-the-board raise, reinstated annual step programs. To keep those programs alive in 1987 would cost another $229 million.

Possibly the biggest items for legislators to consider is the federal budget, and how Congress intends to cut it. The situation is quite uncertain now as the fate of the Gramm-Rudman Act rests with the courts. Legislators will almost certainly keep possible federal cuts in mind and try to draft as cautious a state budget as possible to give themselves some flexibility when the actual cuts are made.

Martin has proposed a $99 million motor fuels tax increase to help pay for his $220 million highway program. But he also wants to spend $85 million of General Fund money, next year, on transportation programs.

North Carolina prison overcrowding has prompted Martin to propose a $50 million, three-year prison building program. A legislative committee has recommended spending $23 million next year for new prisons.

The Legislature has appropriated $60 million for water and sewer improvements next year. But that level of spending hardly dents the state's overall needs. An infrastructure committee is considering a revolving loan fund to local governments which would need as much as $50 million appropriation in June.

The state may need as much as $2.5 billion for new schools, a need that can't be met with funds currently available to either local governments or the state. If anything is to be done, a bond issue or tax increase is likely.

The Legislature has budgeted $34 million for state building maintenance, a figure which legislative and executive analysts now say is not enough to avoid serious deterioration of the state's buildings.

Then there are requests for relatively small amounts of money for programs like adult day care and child support enforcement, and for more highway patrolmen and SBI agents.

Who Stands To Lose On Arms?

WASHINGTON — Aloofness of the Saudi Arabian ambassador from the fight over the current arms package for his country is the key to President Reagan's new sales pitch: If Congress kills the sale, the victim will not be the Persian Gulf oil kingdom but the U.S.A.

In truth, the Saudis do not get much protection for their homeland from air-to-air, ground-to-air and air-to-ground missiles contained in the $350 million arms package. The weapons are intended to defend Persian Gulf oil enclaves from Iranian expansionism.

Thus, in his belated lobbying effort to save the deal after months of costly silence by the State Department, the president quietly warns reluctant senators of the alternative: Abandonment of the deal will heighten dangers of direct U.S. military involvement in the Persian Gulf.

This is a wise turnaround from the administration's disastrous appeal for the Jordan arms package, tied personally to King Hussein's needs. Given the Israeli-centered view of the Mideast in Congress, the administration junked the Jordanian deal. But even turning the current debate so that it centers on American needs, getting the one-third-plus-one Senate votes needed to uphold the president's imminent veto of the bill blocking the sale will not be easy. The anti-Arab climate is pervasive on Capitol Hill.

The merit of the Reagan argument becomes clearer following the upsurge of Iranian helicopter attacks on oil tankers plowing Gulf waters from the Saudi oil-loading port of Ras Tanura to the narrow Hormuz Strait. They must pass the Iranian-held islet of Abu Musa. That is the base for deadly helicopter raids that have caused Mobil and other lifters of Saudi crude to postpone loadings.

The Saudi air force, including U.S. F-15s, is the only pro-Western power in the Gulf capable of knocking out the helicopters. The new package of American missiles would reinforce Saudi defense of non-Saudi regions near the Strait of Hormuz, and it would also be political evidence of U.S. intentions to contain Iran. That is the American stake that Reagan wants to drive home.

What the Saudis originally wanted were more F-15s, knocked out of the new package months ago by a decision inside the Reagan administration in response to pro-Israeli pressure. The Saudis quickly made up for it by buying British Tornados.

That explains why the Saudi ambassador, Prince Bandar, has appeared to behave a bit cavalierly the past month. When the arms package came to Congress for hearings in Senate and House committees, Bandar was home in Saudi Arabia. His message to the U.S. was chilling: Whether you do or do not sell us these weapons is strictly your business.

Bandar returned here last week, but he came parading his intention to stay out of the bitter battle. When asked to come to the White House by national security adviser John Poindexter to discuss the sale, he agreed only with this understanding: his embassy would play no role in begging senators for enough votes to sustain the president's veto.

If Bandar's aloof view is understandable, Secretary of State George Shultz's absence from the fray is less so and has surprised colleagues in the administration. He stayed away from congressional hearings on the sale, sending underlings to make the administration's case. One result, a

White House insider told us, was that "when we tried to get the world to listen to us on the sale, no one paid any attention."

With the burden of finding 34 veto-sustaining senators dropped on his own shoulders, Reagan's argument that the sale is far more crucial to the U.S. than to the Saudis seems to be working. In his first hours on the job, he had changed the votes of three senators who voted with the majority in the 73-to-22 defeat of the arms package.

Reagan's red, white and blue trumpeting of paramount U.S. interests gives him a chance in the Senate while the Saudis sit on the sidelines. They have only one interest: how the battle will affect the delivery of five AWACS aircraft for which they have already paid $6 billion in cold cash.

Loss of the arms package, the Saudis fear, would mean kissing their pre-paid AWACS goodbye. If Congress indeed reneges on such an international commitment, the U.S. can forget maintaining special political and economic ties with the kingdom. Stepping up anti-Arab passion on Capitol Hill will bear higher costs than the loss of a few missiles.

Richard Nixon Is Back

WASHINGTON (AP) — The headline proclaimed, "He's Back," and the picture on the cover of Newsweek was of a smiling Richard Milhous Nixon.

What was he doing there and why was he smiling? His many enemies thought that Nixon was down for good this time, his place in history defined for all time by Watergate.

Yet, there he was, blue blazer and striped tie, his hands clasped in front of him. It looks like Nixon has reason to smile, able as he is to claim victory, however limited, in his toughest comeback campaign.

Nearly 12 years after he resigned the presidency, driven from office by the Watergate scandal, people once again are listening to Nixon. Editors, publishers and Republican fat cats are listening. So is Ronald Reagan.

In fact, by all appearances interest in Nixon's thoughts and opinions is far greater than in those of Gerald R. Ford or Jimmy Carter, the men who followed him as president.

The 73-year-old former president still is regarded gingerly by his party. Not since he left office in 1974 has he been invited to attend a national convention, although there are rumors that could end in 1988.

Love him or hate him, Americans have an enduring fascination with Nixon.

He tried to sum it up himself, telling Newsweek:

"Whenever I go out, people say, 'This is the biggest crowd we've had.' But that doesn't make me think twice. They're here because they want to hear what I have to say, but they're (also) here because they say, 'What makes this guy tick?' They see me and they think, 'He's come back' or 'He's risen from the dead' or, I don't know."

Not that he is free of Watergate — the election-year burglary, those tapes that so shocked Americans with their cynicism and profanity, the $100 bills, the millions of dollars in illegal campaign contributions — a scandal that led to his impeachment and resignation. But the memory has faded, the anger and bitterness many felt toward the man they believed had abused his office has declined.

Had any public figure in American history fallen as far as Nixon that day in August 1984, when he left the White House in disgrace?

Surely that was it. There'd be no comeback. He was gone. For years he lived in seclusion, a political untouchable. But Nixon apparently used that time to plan the comeback he now has staged, a return to respectability.

He'd done it before.

There was the Checkers speech during the 1952 presidential campaign when he saved his spot as Dwight D. Eisenhower's running mate with a dramatic television address rebutting allegations he had benefitted from a secret fund established by California supporters.

His enemies breathed a sigh of relief when Nixon lost the 1960 presidential election to John F. Kennedy and they were positively ecstatic two years later when Nixon lost again, this time in a race for governor of California.

Nixon wrote himself off after that 1962 loss. Angry and bitter, he told reporters at a Los Angeles news conference, "You won't have Nixon to kick around any more."

Four years later, he was back in the spotlight, campaigning ceaselessly for Republican candidates. He earned I.O.U.'s that helped him capture the 1968 GOP presidential nomination. He defeated Hubert H. Humphrey by a whisker in November and, at last, had realized his goal. He was president.

The 1972 election wasn't even close. "There was no way (George) McGovern was going to win the election," Nixon told Newsweek.

Then why the break-in and why the cover-up?

Those are questions the former president obviously has asked himself many times over the past 12 years and the answers he most often comes up with are "a self-inflicted wound" and "a very mishandled thing."

There he is, consulted from time to time by President Reagan, looked to for the insights he can provide on global issues, yet still unable to explain why he and his aides couldn't understand what was wrong with pulling off and covering up a third-rate burglary.

Strength For Today

Stanley Jones, the great religious writer, was in the habit of saying that spiritually there are three types of people in the world, the rowboat type, the sailboat type and the steamboat type.

The rowboat type puts all its trust in its own efforts. Such people pull diligently at the oars and are very sure that if they reach port the credit will be entirely theirs.

The sailboat type is almost entirely at the mercy of the environment. Just as a sailboat is useless in a calm and must depend for its efficiency upon favorable factors of wind and weather, so the destiny of the sailboat type of person is conditioned almost entirely by heredity and environment.

But the steamboat type depends neither upon his own efforts nor upon conditions surrounding him. He has the power of God within him, and he can depend upon this power to take him through calm and storm.

Pay Raise Proposals Defended

RALEIGH (AP) — Secretary of State Thad Eure said "it's ridiculous" that some employees who work for such people as the state treasurer and superintendent of public instruction get bigger paychecks than their bosses.

"I have in my office 15 members of my staff who are making more money than I am," Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said. "I think I certainly should be making as much as the people that are working for me."

Gov. Jim Martin is trying to correct the inequities with a 20.4 percent pay raise for some high-ranking state government officials.

Martin last week proposed that the salaries for nine council members and his nine cabinet secretaries be raised from $58,140 to $70,000, while he recommended that rank-and-file state employees get a 3.2 percent raise.

"The members of the Council of State and the cabinet secretaries have responsibility for very large departments," he said. "The rate at which they are paid — and even with the raise that I've proposed — is far below what people are paid to run major operations like that."

"In fact, the level that I have proposed for them will be lower than 470 other state employees who don't have near the responsibility," he added.

Some state officials pointed out that Council of State members and cabinet secretaries aren't eligible for such benefits as longevity and merit pay or vacation and sick leave.

Insurance Commissioner Jim Long said he doesn't object to the raise, but added, "If I was a member of the General Assembly, I would be voting for a much higher pay raise for teachers and rank-and-file employees."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said such a raise would be among his first considerations and some ranking legislators said the Legislature would likely approve at least a 50 percent larger increase for rank-and-file employees than Martin had suggested.

"Some people say Council of State members knew what the pay was when they ran," Jordan said. "That's not exactly true. Many of the members were elected a long time ago. What's happening is because of the pay raise formulas, those people who work for cabinet secretaries and Council of State members have been getting larger raises in many cases than the secretaries and Council of State members."

Gunman Opens Fire On Bus

SOUTH BOSTON, Va. (AP) — Three people, including a North Carolina woman, were wounded when a man walked down the aisle of a Trailways bus and began shooting fellow passengers with a .38-caliber pistol, police said.

The incident occurred about 3 a.m. Sunday as the bus traveled on U.S. 58, nine miles west of this southern Virginia city, state Trooper G.L. Gilliam said.

Arthur Ardie Williams, 43, of Fort Washington, Md., was arrested 9½ hours later and charged with malicious wounding, Gilliam said. The gunman, who had been sitting in the back of the bus, walked the aisle firing at random, Gilliam said.

The driver stopped the bus, which had 20 passengers on board, and the gunman fled into nearby woods. Williams was arrested after he was spotted swimming in a river about three miles from the shooting scene, police said.

Ronald Ulmer, 37, of Far Rockaway, N.Y., was shot once in the head, and was in critical condition at Duke University Hospital in Durham, N.C., Gilliam said.

David Washington, 19, of Long Island City, N.Y., was shot once in the mouth and was in stable condition at Halifax Community Hospital here. Mary Lamb Green, 22, of Bessemer City, N.C., had a superficial wound to the chest. She was treated at Halifax Community Hospital and released, authorities said.

Williams boarded the bus in Washington, D.C., where he had bought a ticket to Richmond, Gilliam said. In Richmond, he bought a ticket to Charlotte, N.C.

Hotline Offers Advice On Eyes

Starting today, elderly North Carolinians can call toll-free 1-800-222-EYES to get help, often for free, for such ailments as poor eyesight, cataracts and glaucoma.

"There's probably a lot of elderly people who are either not seeing as well as they could or who have serious diseases that could permanently take their vision if something isn't done," said Dr. M. Bruce Shields, president of the North Carolina Society of Ophthalmology.

The national eye care hotline project officially began Jan. 6 but has been expanding region-by-region as the American Academy of Ophthalmology's central clearinghouse in San Francisco was geared up, Shields said.

"Approximately 1 million Americans over 65 are not presently receiving eye care," he said. "It's not unreasonable to say at least one-third to one-half of those people might have some condition that could be improved."

"In some cases, it might be nothing more than a change of glasses," he said. "In other cases, it might be glaucoma, cataracts or macular degeneration."

Those who call the hotline will be asked a series of questions and will be referred to an ophthalmologist as close as possible to their homes.

Nationally nearly 7,000 doctors have volunteered to see patients referred by the hotline. Shields said about 60 percent of North Carolina's 400 ophthalmologists are participating in the project, with most donating money as well as their time.

"The concept is that it will continue indefinitely as long as it seems to be fulfilling the intent," he said.

As of April 30, when about half the states had joined the project, there had been 30,000 calls, down from the 110,000 that project directors had anticipated. But Shields said the numbers will continue to grow as word goes out about the program.

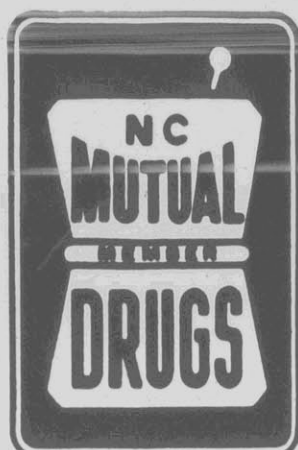

One of the biggest lures of the program may be for the estimated 5 percent of older Americans who are not covered by Medicare, Shields said. Others can't afford deductibles or are afraid of surgical expenses they might incur.

Patients who do not have insurance will receive the care at no out-of-pocket expense. For those who have Medicare or other medical insurance, participating ophthalmologists will accept insurance coverage as payment in full.

Appropriations Panel Will Review Martin's Budget

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's 1986-87 budget proposals, panned by the General Assembly leadership after their unveiling last Wednesday, make their debut on a bigger stage this week.

The Legislature's Joint Appropriations Committee, in an unusual move, is returning to Raleigh two weeks before the off-year session begins. In three or four days of hearings, lawmakers hope to begin sizing up the state's revenue picture and putting their spending priorities in order.

"That way, when we come back on June 3, we'll hit the ground running," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

The appropriations panel consists of 104 members, nearly two-thirds of the General Assembly membership. While it will cast no binding votes, since the Legislature is not in session, its members' attitudes and statements may give a hint of the treatment the Martin program will receive next month.

In the likely event that, as usually happens, the leadership of the predominantly Democratic assembly wields enormous influence over the budget writing process, the Republican governor's plan to increase state spending by $533.6 million probably will undergo major alteration.

IN THE STATE

Prison Study

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The results of a University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill study on blacks in prison contradict many traditional beliefs about regional variations in justice, says the study's co-author.

"A major question, of course, is whether bias and racism are more active in some areas than in others," said Darnell Hawkins, associate professor of sociology at UNC, who used FBI and U.S. Justice Department data for the analysis. "After looking at these data, I actually believe that there may be more racial bias in the criminal justice systems elsewhere than in the South, if all crimes are considered."

"In fact, the major difference between the South and other regions is not the treatment of blacks, but of whites," he said, noting that the South sends a higher proportion of its citizens to prison than other regions do. "Whites outside the South, once arrested, are much less likely to go to prison than whites in the South are."

The study shows that all 39 states with a black population of 1 percent or larger send a disproportionately high number of blacks to prison.

Singer Released

RALEIGH (AP) — Singer Kate Smith has been released from Raleigh Community Hospital, where she had undergone surgery for breast cancer, according to a hospital spokesman.

Doctors performed a mastectomy and removed a tumor from Miss Smith's left breast May 9.

Miss Smith, best known for her rendition of "God Bless America," has had a series of illnesses since 1976, when she lapsed into a four-month coma. She moved to Raleigh in 1979 to be near family members.

Miss Smith's right leg was amputated above the knee in January because of circulatory problems caused by diabetes.

Memorials

RALEIGH (AP) — Two groups that hope to build memorials to North Carolina veterans of the Vietnam War say plans for each monument haven't been affected by plans for the other.

"We haven't seen any conflict in the fund-raising at all," said Stephen A. Acai Jr., a board member of the N.C. Vietnam Memorial Committee, which is planning to erect a memorial at the Capitol in Raleigh.

Linda Black of the N.C. Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program, which was to announce plans today for a memorial at a rest stop on Interstate 85 north of Lexington, agreed the projects weren't competing ventures.

"Because they are too totally different memorials in concept, I don't think either one is hurting the other," Ms. Black said during a telephone interview from the group's headquarters in Winston-Salem. "I believe they complement each other."

Troopers

RALEIGH (AP) — In past years, the Legislature has consistently turned down the state Highway Patrol's request for more troopers, and lawmakers say they expect more rejection.

"I think that if a genuine need was shown for additional troopers, we would support that," said Sen. David R. Parnell, D-Robeson, who heads the Senate's appropriations subcommittee on justice and public safety. "But not for 100. I haven't had anyone present a program to us to show that they need that many."

Legislators may approve some of the 100 troopers Gov. Jim Martin is seeking in his budget supplement proposal, but the patrol could solve some of its staffing problems by better using the troopers it has, House Speaker Liston Ramsey said.

"I've got a suspicion that we have a lot of highway patrolmen sitting around offices doing clerical work that a secretary could be doing," Ramsey said during an interview. "I don't know that for a fact, but I believe I'm correct."

Exxon Refund

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has joined 40 other states asking a federal court for flexibility in spending a $2.1 billion refund from Exxon Corp. for what the government says were overcharges during the 1970s.

Gov. Jim Martin wants part of North Carolina's $47 million share to be used for highway improvements, but that is not allowed under the 3-year-old court order.

The General Assembly will review Martin's proposals in June.

"When the governor and the General Assembly make their decisions, we will go to the court and ask that these choices will be allowed," Deputy Attorney General Jean Benoy.

The court directed the states to spend the Exxon money under a federal law that limits spending to four energy-conservation programs and low-income heating assistance. It also requires states to match part of the projects' costs.

Writer Dies

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Larry M. Harding, vice president for public affairs for Jefferson-Pilot Communications Co. and a former member of the state Board of Education, has died at the age of 53.

Harding died early Saturday at his Charlotte home, apparently of a heart attack.

Harding's editorial writing won such awards as the George Washington Honor Medal from the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge for 1972 and the National Broadcast Editorial Association's first-place award for 1978. He was president of the latter organization from 1982-83.

"Larry had a knack for writing that I always admired," said Russ Ford, assistant public affairs director at Jefferson-Pilot. "It's going to be a tremendous loss to our company."

Monument

RALEIGH (AP) — A granite memorial to slain North Carolina Highway Patrol troopers has been erected at the Patrol Training Center after members of the patrol auxiliary raised more than $40,000 for the monument, officials said.

"We should always remember that these men gave their lives for the state of North Carolina," said Debbie King, auxiliary president, and whose brother, Trooper L.T. Walton, was shot and killed in 1974 after stopping a speeding car. The memorial was dedicated Sunday.

Luck Was Big Key In Fire

HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (AP) — Long before a 73,000-acre forest fire crackled to life in southeastern North Carolina, state foresters expecting the worst canceled burning permits and issued warnings about their fear of a major fire.

Six weeks ago, a spokeswoman for the state Division of Forest Resources announced that the threat of fire had reached blowout potential — the highest status the division has.

"We're just bracing ourselves," spokeswoman Rebecca Richards said at the time.

But the day before the fire broke out May 5, the division announced that despite the drought, the number of fires statewide was lower than the previous year. From Jan. 1 to May 4, 4,337 fires had burned 30,873 acres, compared with 6,014 fires burning 53,608 acres in 1985.

"The irony of that announcement hasn't been lost on us here," Mrs. Richards said. "It would be an understatement to say those figures are outdated."

Before it was extinguished, the Pender-Onslow county fire defied the efforts of an army of firefighters for 11 days, threatened homes and forced the evacuation of more than 5,000 people.

"It was the damndest fire I've ever seen," said Tom Hegele of the Division of Forest Resources. "There were days when we couldn't buy a piece of luck for all the tea in China."

And luck is an important factor in fighting fires. The trick is being prepared for luck when it blows your way, and surviving when it doesn't, said Tommy Thompson, the state forester in charge of the fire, which began May 5 and was declared contained May 16.

A handful of volunteer firefighters were the first to respond to the flames reported eight miles north of Hampstead. During those first days of firefighting, Raymond Coston, a warden for International Paper Co., died of a heart attack as he tried to free a tractor bogged down in the peat swamp.

"He panicked," said Lt. William Arnold, a volunteer firefighter from Turkey Creek. "When that fire started heading toward him there was nothing else he could do. Hell, we were all feeling the pressure."

Thompson felt the pressure when he took command of the fire May 10. The next morning — after hearing predictions of a mid-afternoon sea breeze that could sweep the fire west toward several homes on the Cape Fear River — he ordered a massive backfire to be set.

Two Forest Service UH-1B Huey military surplus helicopters dropped a load of firebombs, each the size of ping-pong balls, that lit 10,000 acres of fire.

Smoke darkened the sky as far south as Jacksonville, Fla. But the backfire worked, breaking the head of the main fire and leaving only two smaller fires to fight.

"Instead of chasing the fire around, we fought it on our terms," Thompson said. "We picked the spot we wanted to fight the fire and let it come to us."

The fire burned 73,000 acres of timberland — the single largest number in the nation this year, the U.S. Forest Service said — at a cost estimated at $17 million.

Nearly 30,000 acres of the Holly Shelter State Game Preserve was burned, along with 6,000 acres of timberland owned by International Paper Co.

It cost an average of $34,000 a day to fight the fire. That includes labor, equipment costs, food and housing. By Wednesday of last week, the total had reached $308,000. The final bill may be close to $1 million, officials said.

Investigators have traced the fire's origin to a pine grove behind a cluster of homes north of Hampstead along U.S. 17.

Arson is suspected, Thompson said, and investigators are following up several leads.

"It wouldn't have taken much to get it going," Thompson said. "The ground was bone dry."

The City has revised its noise control laws. For details on noise regulations and permits, call the Police Department at 752-3342.

New Tractors Run On Corn Alcohol

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — The only clue that the bright orange tractors are unique — the first of their kind in the nation — are labels noting they burn pure fuel alcohol.

That alcohol is made from corn, and that's why farmer Fred Werts is smiling. He and fellow corn growers have persuaded Illinois officials to buy the tractors, and helped pay for them, in an effort to show that the nation's huge corn supply can be put to use as fuel as well as food.

"It's fantastic — a big, big milestone," Werts said recently. "If there's one thing I can't stand, it's someone who says it can't be done."

The state's Department of Transportation purchased eight Ford alcohol-burning tractors to mow roadsides. The University of Illinois has acquired one to test on its farms.

Illinois farmers, through their contributions to the Corn Growers Association, put up $24,000 to help pay for the tractors and provided 2,000 gallons of fuel alcohol. They hope the state and university tests will show that it's practical to operate tractors on alcohol.

They are the only nine tractors in the country manufactured specifically to burn alcohol, Werts said, although he himself has converted one of his traditional tractors to run on the farm-grown fuel.

But Ford is no newcomer to alcohol power. After extensive testing, the company began mass producing alcohol-fueled tractors in 1985 in Brazil, an oil-short country with enough sugar cane to produce alcohol for fuel.

Werts was convinced the United States should give fuel alcohol a real test, and he and other Illinois corn growers pushed for the project.

"I said if I have to go down to Brazil and drive the tractors up here one at a time, we're going to have them in Illinois," he said.

Instead, Illinois Agriculture Director Larry Werries climbed aboard the effort, and the Department of Transportation decided it needed new tractors and was willing to try alcohol models.

"They'll get a good test," said district highway engineer Jerry Benson. "We're anxious to see what their performance will be compared with our diesel tractors."

By LEROY JAMES
County Extension Chairman

One obvious current concern is what to do about planting soybeans in mid-May with very dry seedbeds. If we knew when it will rain and how much, I suspect most of us would agree on what to do. Since we don't know, we don't all agree. I think most of the disagreement would come from differing in what weather patterns we prefer to bet on or against.

The tendency of a particular field to crust, our growers' abilities to deal with the crust and weed control plans all enter into the decision.

Keep in mind that basically, as we delay planting past mid-May, the probability of high yields goes down. However, 30 bushels per acre of beans don't need a 45 bushels per acre planting date. The deeper soybeans are planted, the weaker the seedling is when it finally emerges.

Neither soybean germination nor disease-causing organism development progresses very fast in warm, dry soils. Soil-applied herbicides need moisture to work; pre-emergence herbicides also need rainfall or irrigation to move them below the soil surface.

If you're starting with soils too dry to germinate soybeans in, the rainfall needed to get the soybeans up will probably be sufficient to activate soil-applied herbicides. The 1986 seeds are probably carrying a higher than normal amount of disease-causing organisms with them, but most of our soybean fields already have a supply of these organisms. Inadequate stands are not as often an economic problem in North Carolina as in states either north or south of us.

The choice growers have are to wait for rain, plant beans anyway and hope for rain soon or plant them now and try to plant them deep enough to reach moisture. I know competent soybean agronomists who favor each of these alternatives.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY
BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AKQJ72 ♥AK6 ♦KJ3 ♣9

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 ♠ Pass 2 NT 3 ♣

What action do you take?

A.—Since you cannot quite guarantee that your side has a game, you can't be sure of the right course. Therefore, leave the decision to partner. Since you opened with a demand bid, he is not allowed to pass. He might want to double, and you should not preempt such action. Pass.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠8 ♥1032 ♦A963 ♣AQJ52

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ 2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—At this vulnerability, partner should have a fair hand and a good suit. Therefore, we would consider anything less than a raise to four hearts the act of a very careful player.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A10763 ♥A852 ♦6 ♣1092

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—We think this hand is a tad too good to pass. It rates one move toward game, and we suggest a try of three hearts in is order. There is always the possibility that partner has four hearts and can choose game in that suit.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠QJ843 ♥765 ♦A8 ♣AQ6

The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♣ Pass Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—There are two good reasons why you should pass. First, your spades are unfavorably placed under declarer, and a penalty double by you would alert declarer to the bad break and perhaps allow him to make a contract in which he would otherwise be defeated. And partner might not read your double for penalties and bid because he thinks you are balancing—although his spade shortness should convince him of your intentions.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ5 ♥KQ7 ♦AQJ6 ♣AQ8

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 NT Pass 4 NT Pass

What action do you take?

A.—That depends on the range of your two no trump opening bid. Partner's response is not Blackwood; it is an invitational raise, asking you to bid a small slam if you are maximum but to pass with a minimum. Thus, if your range is 21-22, bid six no trump; if it is 22-24, pass.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KJ83 ♥95 ♦K102 ♣8764

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Awkward. You don't have adequate support for partner's first suit; you can't rebid your spades with a four-card suit, or bid no trump without a club stopper. And it is inadvisable to raise partner's second suit with only three-card support. However, the auction is forcing to game. Correct is to take a false preference to three hearts to see if partner's next bid will clarify his holding.

Freedom by Mail

Several Arizona residents were recently convicted of harboring illegal aliens fleeing from Central America. In the days of the "underground railroad," abolitionists did the same for American slaves. One slave mailed himself in a wooden crate. Henry Brown spent hours in a box upside down on his head. He nearly broke his neck when someone dropped the crate. Brown survived the trip, but other slaves who tried to mail themselves arrived injured or dead.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, continuing its recent pullback.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 4.47 to 1,755.33 in the first hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 9 to 8 in the early rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that several of the variables in the formula that worked so well for the market earlier in the year have since changed.

In particular, oil prices have rebounded significantly from their lows of around $10 a barrel to above $16.

Interest rates are no longer declining sharply. And some Wall Streeters have begun to suspect that a return of the favorable news on inflation might already have been seen.

On Friday, stocks were unable to muster any response to positive reports on producer prices and housing starts.

Though many market-watchers remain optimistic for the long term, a lot of them now believe that stocks have begun a period of "consolidation" or "correction" after its sharp rise from last September through the first quarter of this year.

Court Says Scouts Need Male Leader

DERBY, Conn. (AP) — A Superior Court judge today rejected a 68-year-old woman's bid to head a Boy Scout troop, agreeing with the organization that boys need male role models.

Gannett Buys Kentucky Papers

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A family newspaper dynasty going back nearly 70 years ended today with the announcement of the sale of The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times to Gannett Co. Inc., the nation's largest newspaper group.

An intense quarrel within the powerful Bingham family resulted in the decision to sell the media empire, which includes broadcast and printing companies as well as the prestigious morning Courier-Journal.

The formal announcement of the newspaper sale ended weeks of speculation.

"It is not easy for me to see The Courier-Journal and Louisville Times pass from my family into other hands," said family patriarch Barry Bingham Sr., chairman of the board of the newspapers.

"Change is an inevitable rule of life, however. My distress is mitigated by the character of the owners who will now guide the destinies of our newspapers, the Gannett Publishing Co. and its chief executive officer, Allen Neuharth."

Neuharth said he wrote a check for "$300 million or so" for the newspapers, which analysts had valued at between $200 and $300 million. He said he hoped to close the sale by mid-July.

The decision overturned a 1984 decision by the state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities that Catherine Pollard of Milford could lead a troop.

Mrs. Pollard has been battling the Boy Scouts of America since 1974 for the right to head a scout troop. She had led the troop in her hometown for four years before formally applying and being rejected in 1974 and 1976.

Mrs. Pollard was not at home today when sought for comment. Her attorney, Susan Bartholomew declined comment, saying she had not read the decision.

George Davidson, an attorney for the Boy Scouts in New York, said he was pleased to hear of the decision but declined further comment until he'd read it.

Mrs. Pollard argued that she should be allowed to head a troop under the state's public accommodations act and under a U.S. Supreme Court decision that allowed women to become Jaycees.

But Judge Joseph J. Chernauskas said in an interview he interpreted the state law narrowly in finding that the Boy Scouts don't fall under the public accommodations act.

Richmond Takes CAA Crown

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina reached into its bag of miracles again Sunday afternoon in the finals of the Colonial Athletic Association baseball tournament against the University of Richmond and finally found it empty.

Kevin Sickinger, after having been tagged for five first-inning runs, again shut the door on the Pirates after that and, with help from C.P. Richardson, led the Spiders to an 8-5 win and the CAA title.

The Spiders, now 24-29, will advance to the NCAA regionals next week at a site and time to be decided. The field for the 32-team NCAA tournament was to be determined Sunday night and this morning.

East Carolina, which ended at 40-10, the best record in the history of the school, still has a shot at an at-large berth. ECU Coach Gary Overton said he had no idea whether the selection committee would feel that the Pirates were deserving of a bid.

Sickinger, who was named the tournament's most valuable player, totally handcuffed the Pirates in the opening round of the tournament, tossing a 4-0 two-hitter. Sunday, it looked like the Pirates would come back strong off that when they scored five runs off him in the first inning.

But he battled back and gave up but four more hits in the six innings he pitched, not allowing another run. Richardson, who pitched Richmond past UNC-Wilmington in the second round, came in to finish the job, giving up one hit in the final three innings.

Jim Peterson, who took the loss, his fourth in 16 decisions, went the first five — and really could have been out of trouble in the fourth when the Spiders did the most of the damage.

All five of the runs scored after

there were two, no, three, no, wait, four outs.

How's that again?

Yep, four, or nearly four outs. With two away, Brian Jordan struck out but reached on a wild pitch. John Krivak, who had been on first, dashed all the way to third on the play, but the ball got there before him for the tag. However, he managed to kick the ball out of the glove of the ECU fielder and scramble onto the bag safely.

"That was the key play in the game," Overton said. "With the strikeout, we're up 5-2. Instead, they come up with a two-run double and a home run to take a 7-5 lead."

Richmond Coach Ronnie Adkins said he never really considered taking Sickinger out of the game after he was rocked in the first. "He's a veteran, and he knows what he's got to do and how to get out of it. He's not a hard thrower and he's not going to get it by them, but he keeps it low and makes them hit it on the ground. I just told him to hang in there and get them out."

Sickinger took that advice and did the job over the next five innings.

East Carolina looked like it might be on the way to a comeback that started in the second round of the tournament when it rallied to beat James Madison in the ninth, and then rallied again past UNC-Wilmington in 11.

Then, Saturday night, the Pirates romped to a 12-8 win over the Spiders to force the final game Sunday.

They picked up where they had left off in the first, scoring five times. With one out, Greg Hardison tripled — the only triple of the tournament, scoring on Chris Bradberry's infield single. Winfred Johnson followed with a single to right and Mike Sullivan got a hit to left, scoring Bradberry. Jay McGraw then lofted one to deep center that just drifted over for a three-run shot.

But that was to be it for the Pirates, who got only three more baserunners as far as second, and none further.

The Spiders, meanwhile, began to peek away in the bottom of the first.

With one down, Rob Reid reached on a two-base error. Greg Harding walked and Andy Malloy hit into a fielder's choice. Bubba Paris grounded out, but Reid scored on the play.

In the third, the Spiders scored again, cutting the lead to 5-2. Joyner walked and stole second, moving to third on an out. Harding walked and Malloy grounded into a fielder's choice, again scoring Joyner.

Then, in the fourth, the bottom fell out for the Pirates. With one away, Krivak drew a walk. Then, after a second out, Jordan swung and missed at a ball in the dirt that bounced back to the screen. The relay to first was too late to get Jordan, but the relay to third was there in time to nip Krivak had the ball been held.

Reid followed with a two-run double to right center, scoring both runners. Harding was then intentionally walked to set up a force, but Malloy spoiled that strategy with a home run to right, powering the Spiders into a 7-5 lead.

"Malloy hasn't been hitting homers for us," Adkins said afterward. "But he has been hitting it hard for outs. He finally just got that one pitch and got all of it."

The final Spider run came in the fifth when Pete Engles cracked another homer to right.

Bradberry, Johnson and Riley each had two hits for the Pirates, who outthrew the Spiders, 10-6. No one had more than one for Richmond.

"This was a tough loss for us," Overton said, "because it meant so much. They only had six hits, but they got them at the right time, where ours were scattered after the first inning."

"I thought out pitchers did a good job for us with so little rest," he added. Peterson had thrown on Friday and Johnson, who came in for the final three innings, had gone Thursday and Saturday.

"But I've got to give a lot of credit to Richmond. They did a good job all tournament long, and Sickinger really got tough after that first inning."

Richmond's overall record is somewhat deceiving. They took an early trip south and returned from that with only a 3-11 mark, what they brought into their first CAA game of the year at East Carolina back in March.

Since then, however, they've gone 21-16.

"We started the season with five freshmen in starting roles," Adkins said. "We've got six out there now. But they're no longer freshmen."

"We played a tough schedule because we thought it would help us at the end of the season, and I think I can say that it has. If you're going to build a strong program, you've got to play good people. It's paid off for us."

Celtics Oust Bucks, 111-98

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Larry Bird swished through his final three-point goal as easily as the Boston Celtics swept the Milwaukee Bucks out of the NBA playoffs.

Bird hit five of six three-pointers in Sunday's victory that capped the Eastern Conference finals and sent Boston zooming to the NBA championship series for the third consecutive season to face either Houston or the Los Angeles Lakers.

But Bird's four fourth-quarter bombs — while playing guard — devastated the Bucks.

"I like to get my hands on the ball," said Bird, who moved to guard from the forward slot after Dennis Johnson fouled out with 4:42 left in the game. "If I get my hands on the ball, the defense looks out for me and I can make something happen."

Bird's three-pointer at the buzzer, an almost casual toss, made the final score 111-98 and gave him a game-high 30 points. Seventeen of Bird's points came in the fourth quarter, leading Boston back from an 82-79 deficit at the end of the third quarter.

"Larry Bird played an awesome game," said teammate Kevin McHale, who scored 20 points and had 11 rebounds. "He's a fantastic ballplayer. The three-pointers were just huge shots."

"Larry has got no conscience out there," added Boston guard Danny Ainge, who hit three of five three-point attempts and scored 25 points. "He's our leader and he does it in every way."

"I hope all the other Celtics realize what a privilege it is to play with Larry Bird," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson, a former Celtic.

Nelson said Boston, which the Bucks failed to beat all season, was out of this world.

"The Celtics were able to play at a different level than we were throughout the series," he said. "I'm not so sure that Boston isn't just on a different planet than us mere mortal teams. ... When I'm not rooting for the Bucks, I'm rooting for the Celtics."

The Bucks became the first team in NBA history to be swept out of seven-game playoff series in consecutive years. Last year, the Bucks were eliminated by Philadelphia in four consecutive games.

In Sunday's other playoff game, Houston defeated Los Angeles.

Rockets Coach Bill Fitch knows that a wounded, frustrated and proud team facing elimination is a dangerous foe.

"I'm more frightened of them now than I was a few days ago," Fitch said Sunday after the Rockets crushed the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers 105-95 to take a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven NBA Western Conference championship series.

A victory by the Rockets in Wednesday's fifth game in Los Angeles, would sidetrack the Lakers from the NBA title round for the first time in five years.

And, it would advance the Rockets to the world championship round for the first time since 1981 when they beat Los Angeles in the first round and eventually lost to Boston in six games.

Akeem Olajuwon dominated the Lakers for the third straight game, scoring 35 points and leading the charge from the opening tip when he hit his first six shots of the game.

"This one was easier than the other night (Friday's 117-109 victory) but it was rough," Olajuwon said.

McNeill Qualifies For Nationals

RALEIGH — Lee Vernon McNeill of East Carolina University won the 100-meter dash and qualified for the NCAA nationals in action at the N.C. State Relays Saturday.

McNeill won the event in a time of 10.23 and surpassed the needed time to make the field for the NCAAs. McNeill had earlier qualified for the national meet in the 200-meter dash.

The 4x100-meter relay team of Chris Brooks, Eugene McNeill, Nathan McCorkle and McNeill also qualified for the nationals by placing second in the field with a time of 39.66. That time also set a new East Carolina record.

The mile relay team of Phil Estes, Reuben Pierce, Kelvin Love and Julian Anderson took third in a time of 3:08.14, rounding out the day for the Pirates.

Bodine Wins Budweiser 500

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Geoff Bodine endured the heat and a rash of early caution flags to take his second victory this year by winning the NASCAR Winston Cup Budweiser 500 stock car race.

Bodine posted an average speed Sunday of 115.009 mph, for a three-second margin of victory over Bobby Allison at Dover Downs International Speedway.

The victory marked Bodine's first at Dover, where he walked away with $51,700 of the $405,000 race.

Allison was followed by Dale Earnhardt, Ricky Rudd and Darrell Waltrip before a record 51,000 fans, who braved temperatures in the 90s.

Six of the eight caution flags came before the first 100 miles on the one-mile track.

There were 26 lead changes among nine drivers for the nearly four-and-a-half-hour race.

Joe Field hadn't completed the first lap when he wrecked and brought out the caution for 10 laps.

Jody Ridley, who was running 10th at lap 453, brought out the seventh caution for 14 laps when he hit the outside wall, slid down the bank and hit the pit wall in a cloud of black smoke and a small fire.

Ridley was taken to Kent General

Hospital, suffering first-degree burns on his neck and face, according to Dr. Ted Kuhn. Kuhn added Allison invited Ridley to "fly back home with him."

When Ridley went out, Harry Gant was leading, followed by Dale Earnhardt, Bodine and Allison.

Then Gant blew his engine in lap 476 and Bodine took over.

"It ran perfect all day and that's the way to win. You've got to be there at the end," Bodine said.

"I felt bad for Harry because he had been running strong all day," Bodine said. "It would have more interesting for the fans because we ran strong at the end."

Bodine, who won the Daytona 500, said he gained confidence as a driver with that win and with Sunday's win, joined Earnhardt as the only drivers with two victories this season.

Allison was the only other driver out of the 37-car field to complete 500 laps.

Frye Loses On Decision

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Norris Williams gained a 12-round decision over Greenville's Dale "Sunshine" Frye in a world lightweight kickboxing match Saturday night.

Frye was ahead by one point on all cards after the first 10 rounds, but early in the 11th, Norris landed a solid jump-kick to the head. Frye was stunned, but managed to hold on through the end of the round.

Bill McDonald, Frye's trainer, said Frye was still dazed going into the 12th round, and Norris was able to capture that round and take a one-point victory in the match.

Unless East Carolina University's baseball team gets a call from the NCAA today, Sunday afternoon's defeat at the hands of Richmond in the CAA tournament finals brings an end to the careers of several Pirate standouts.

Six seniors will leave the team this spring and all of them have made outstanding contributions to the team.

They include reserve infielder Robert Langston, leftfielder Mont Carter, third baseman Mark Cockrell, shortstop Greg Hardison, centerfielder Chris Bradberry and pitcher-first baseman-designated hitter Winfred Johnson.

Langston came on to be a regular in the 1985 campaign with Steve Sides was out for the year with an injury, and he's seen action throughout his career as a utility infielder.

Carter, who transferred in from Chowan after two years, was one of the top hitters on the team as a junior,

Will the St. Louis Cardinals again be able to recover from their mid-May malaise?

A year ago today, the Cardinals found themselves at their lowest point in the season, 7½ games behind in the National League East. They then went on to win the division, win the pennant and come within two outs of winning the World Series.

Today, the Cardinals are at their lowest point of the 1986 season. They are 10½ games behind New York and have lost five straight games after getting swept in a weekend series in Atlanta.

"We're struggling and when you're struggling, it seems like everything goes against you," said catcher Mike Heath, acquired in the off-season along with pitcher Tim Lincecum from Oakland for Joaquin Andujar.

The Cardinals, with a 13-20 record, are currently last in the league with a .217 batting average. Heath is hitting .120, with Tom Herr at .155 and Terry Pendleton at .165.

"We can't get a base hit when we need it," said Manager Whitey Herzog after the Braves beat St. Louis 5-2 Sunday. Bob Horner hit two home runs and Dale Murphy's RBI single in the seventh inning broke a 2-2 tie and pinned the loss on John Tudor, 3-3.

The Cardinals managed just 13 hits — all singles — in losing three straight at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, regarded as one of the best hitters' ballparks in the major leagues.

"In the launching pad, at that," grumbled Herzog. "We didn't even come close."

In other National League games, Montreal slammed San Diego 8-3, New York downed Los Angeles 8-4, Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh 7-3, San Francisco defeated Philadelphia 4-1 and Chicago stopped Houston 5-2.

While the St. Louis bats remained silent, Horner continued to make big noise at the plate. He drove in eight of Atlanta's 13 runs during the sweep, which extended the Braves' winning streak to four.

"We didn't pitch him very well at all," Herzog said of Horner. "You pitch it up and he can hit it." Horner broke a scoreless game with a two-run homer in the fifth off Tudor.

"That first homer probably was on a ball," Horner said. "It was up a little and in, but I was just sitting on a pitch."

The Cardinals snapped a string of 17 scoreless innings in the sixth when Heath drew a walk from Zane Smith, 4-3, and later scored on a single by Ozzie Smith. Willie McGee singled in the sixth and scored on a single by Tito Landrum, tying it 2-2.

But the Braves regained the lead in the seventh. Billy Sample singled with one out, stole second and scored on Murphy's opposite-field single to right against Tudor.

Horner then hit Todd Worrell's first pitch for his seventh home run of the season. It marked the 25th time that Horner has homered twice in a game.

Paul Assenmacher finished up with two innings of hitless relief for his third save.

Expos 8, Padres 3

Hubie Brooks continued his torrid hitting, connecting for a grand-slam homer that keyed a seven-run explosion in the first inning and powered Montreal past San Diego.

The Expos, who have won 12 of their last 15 games, bunched eight hits and two walks in their outburst against Padres starter Mark Thurmond and reliever Tim Stoddard. Thurmond, 2-3, gave up five hits and six runs before leaving without retiring a batter.

Tim Raines tied a major-league record held by many with two doubles in the inning. Vance Law added a two-run double.

Brooks' third career slam gave 10 homers and 32 RBI this season, both tops in the NL. He is currently batting .354 and homered three times in three games at San Diego.

Floyd Youmans, 3-3, benefited from the Expos' production.

Reds 7, Pirates 3

Tom Browning, a 20-game winner as a rookie last season, won his first game this year in five decisions as Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh.

Browning, 1-4, gave up six hits in six innings. It was his first victory since Sept. 28 when he became the first rookie to win 20 games in the major leagues in 31 years.

Dave Parker's three-run homer in the first inning staked Browning to an early lead. Eddie Milner added a solo shot for the host Reds and Ron Oester hit a two-run homer.

Ron Robinson got his second save, giving up Jim Morrison's home run in the eighth inning.

Mets 8, Dodgers 4

George Foster homered twice and drove in four runs, leading New York over Los Angeles.

Foster doubled his home run total this season, connecting for a three-run shot in the first inning off Jerry Reuss and adding a solo blast in the third inning. It marked the 21st time Foster has homered twice in the same game and gave him 23 career home runs at Dodger Stadium, putting him one ahead of Hank Aaron as the all-time leader among visiting players.

Mets relievers Randy Niemann and Roger McDowell combined for 6 1-3 innings of shutout relief.

Red Sox Upend Rangers With Two 10th Inning Runs

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Boston's Steve Lyons and Marty Barrett might have been auditioning for the Keystone Kops with their Keystone Comedy act at second base.

And when the dust had cleared — first at second, then at third — both runners were waved home and the Red Sox had a strange 5-4 victory over the visiting Texas Rangers on Sunday.

In a play that would be considered almost routine for such snake-bit teams of yesteryear as the Daffy Dodgers or the Madcap Mets, Lyons slid into second base ... from the third-base side of the bag. And who should he find chugging in from the first-base side but Boston teammate Barrett.

Barrett hollered at Lyons, who took off for third. Seconds later, both were sent home when the throw from Texas right fielder George Wright went through the legs of pitcher Greg Harris and into the dugout.

Lyons started the slapstick proceedings with a one-out single and took second on Harris' errant pickoff throw. Barrett then lofted a fly down the right-field line and Wright made a diving try for the ball.

"When the ball was hit, I made up my mind I was going to score," Lyons said. "Then I looked and saw Wright diving for the ball. I thought he caught it. I didn't see any sign and said to myself, 'You've got to get back to the base. If you're doubled off, you won't see the playing field for the rest of the year.'"

"I got to the bag and I heard Marty yell, 'What are you doing here?' I knew both of us couldn't stay there, so I took off for third."

Wright said he "came close to catching it. I saw two guys at second and threw the ball to third. Now that I think of it, maybe I should've thrown to second."

By winning, the Red Sox retained their one-half game American League East lead over New York, which pounded Seattle 11-3. Elsewhere, it was Baltimore 13, Oakland 4; Toronto 10, Cleveland 2; Chicago 5, Kansas City 1; Minnesota 5, Milwaukee 3. The California-Detroit game was rained out in the third inning with the Angels leading 2-0, costing rookie Wally Joyner his 16th home run.

The Texas-Boston game was hardly routine even before the weird ending, although it started innocently enough with second-inning home runs by Steve Buechele of the Rangers and Don Baylor of the Red Sox.

Texas took a 4-3 lead in the top of the 10th when Pete O'Brien drew a two-out walk and pinch-hitter Tom Paciorek singled off the wall in left-center. O'Brien appeared out by 10 feet, but he crashed into Rich Gedman and the Boston catcher dropped the ball for an error.

Boston tied the score 3-3 in the bottom of the ninth when Wright lost Barrett's short fly in the sun and then muffed it — it was scored a double — and Wade Boggs followed with an RBI double. The Red Sox have doubled in 28 straight games.

Boston starter Al Nipper was carried from the field on a stretcher in the sixth inning after suffering an injury to his right knee tagging out Larry Parrish, who attempted to score when a pitch got away from Gedman.

Yankees 11, Mariners 3

Three New York designated hitters went 4-for-5, including pinch-hitter Gary Roenicke's two-run homer and an RBI single by Ron Hassey batting for Roenicke. Bobby Meacham and Willie Randolph, who had three hits apiece, drove in the tying and lead runs with fourth-inning hits while Don Mattingly extended his hitting streak to 14 games with a single and double in a six-run seventh inning. Roenicke's homer off reliever Lee Guetterman gave the host Yankees a 5-2 lead in the fifth.

Winner Dennis Rasmussen allowed three runs and eight hits in seven innings, including Jim Presley's solo homer in the sixth.

Orioles 13, A's 4

Baltimore got most of its offense from one man, Eddie Murray, who drove in seven runs, four with his 14th career grand slam, as the Orioles won for the eighth time in nine games. Murray, with 12 RBIs in his last six games, connected off reliever Jose Rijo to cap a six-run outburst in the seventh inning.

Larry Sheets, with 16 RBIs in his last 17 games, drove in two runs with a fifth-inning double that put host Baltimore ahead for good 5-4. Sheets also singled to launch the seventh-inning uprising.

Farm Aid of a Different Feather

You can see them on tobacco farms, livestock farms, all kinds of farms.

Perdue chicken houses are nearly as common as tractors in some parts of North Carolina.

More than 1,000 independent farmers around the state have discovered that a Perdue operation can give their cash flow and net income a healthy boost. For many of them, it's been the difference between getting by and getting ahead.

Unlike an investment in a combine that you'd use just a few weeks out of the year, a Perdue broiler house "harvests" a steady income year round. It helps smooth out the seasonal ups and downs of other crops.

State-of-the-art design makes a Perdue broiler house easy to operate. Many of our producers operate two or more houses without hired labor, in addition to their other farming or off-the-farm jobs.

This ease of combining a chicken house operation with other enterprises has a lot to do with poultry's new status as the state's number-one cash crop. Poultry earned over $1.3 billion for North Carolina farmers in 1985. Not exactly chickenfeed!

Even if you have no experience in the chicken business, getting started with Perdue is easy because your Perdue serviceman will advise you every step of the way. That's an important part of Perdue's commitment to our North Carolina producers.

When it comes time to talk about financing, the Perdue staff can help you with the paperwork and show you what kind of cash flow you can expect. Excellent financing is available from lenders around the state who have worked with Perdue through the years and have seen how a Perdue operation can pay off.

We'd appreciate the opportunity to tell you more about the potential a Perdue broiler house holds for you, either as a full-time business or as one part of a diversified operation.

For more information, mail the coupon back to Perdue, or call Perdue 1-800-372-6543.

Activist Says TV Movie 'Rises Above' True Story

By PAUL PAGE, Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — "Samaritan: The Mitch Snyder Story" may have more to do with Hollywood than history, but activists portrayed in the television movie broadcast tonight say they can live with the image if it draws greater attention to the nation's homeless.

"It kind of softens us, makes us out to be bumbling, well-intentioned folks who do good because they stumble into it," said Snyder, a leader of the Community for Creative Non-Violence.

The made-for-television movie on CBS-TV starring Martin Sheen, Cicely Tyson and Roxanne Hart covers about 10 years in CCNV's existence, centering on Snyder and his 1984 hunger strike to gain federal funds for a large shelter the group operates near Capitol Hill.

A sophisticated and politically active group for the past 15 years, CCNV is painted with an idealistic brush.

"It doesn't really go far enough. But at the same time, we hope it puts faces on people who don't usually have faces in this country," Snyder said.

"The homeless men and women shown in the movie really rise above the story itself, and that's what we hope people remember," said Carol Fennelly, a CCNV spokeswoman whose relationship with Snyder forms the love interest in the movie.

Dozens of homeless men and women were used to fill in the background, while Miss Tyson and a couple of other actors based their portrayals on real people.

Snyder has not watched the movie — calling it "very embarrassing" — but he and the others say the filmmakers play loose with history, sacrificing accuracy for drama throughout.

Most striking in their view is the movie's treatment of the controversial CCNV as four people struggling only to house the homeless. CCNV in reality places the homeless problem alongside numerous issues, such as Nicaragua and military spending, that it addresses in elaborately staged protests.

Snyder's 51-day fast in 1984, for instance, was directed at the White House at the height of the presidential election. In the movie, President Reagan's name is never mentioned.

In a climactic dramatic moment in the movie, Sheen as Snyder decries homelessness in an emotional speech to a congressional committee that avoids references to the Reagan administration. By contrast, in real testimony before a House panel last week, Snyder opened with a verbal assault on "a government that throws money down a military rathole, spending $600 for a toilet seat and sending money to the thugs and rapists they call Contras in Nicaragua."

Unlike the movie, the shelter dispute at the heart of the story is far from resolved.

Snyder went on a 32-day hunger strike earlier this year and the Reagan administration agreed to give the crumbling federal property to the city for CCNV's use, along with $5 million for repairs. A bill to transfer the property is now in the House, but several members of Congress say they don't want to hand Snyder and his activists federal property that is valued at $18 million.

Another departure from the real-life drama is the death of Jesse Carpenter, a homeless man who had been a World War II hero and who froze to death in December 1984 across the street from the White House.

The movie-makers instead have Carpenter's widely reported death coincide with Snyder's fast and move it to the Lincoln Memorial, averting the political link homeless advocates capitalized on at the time.

Graduates
 BOSTON (AP) — Singer-songwriter Paul Simon wished graduates of the Berklee School of Music well, telling them, "I hope you can earn a living with your degree."

Simon, who along with jazz pianist Herbie Hancock received an honorary degree Saturday, told the 400 graduates, "We're in the business of joy and that should sustain us through difficult times."

When presented with his doctor of music degree, Hancock said, "The one thing musicians have to be careful about is to remember that first we're human beings and then we're musicians."

Six-Part 'Iliad' Study Begins On PBS Tonight

By ROBERT BARR, Associated Press Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — Men have expended lives and fortunes on the little hill of Hisarlik, their imaginations inflamed by tales of fair Helen, sulking Achilles and a treacherous horse.

Michael Wood, whose six-part series "In Search of the Trojan War" begins tonight on public television, is among these brainy romantics, fairly bursting with un-British enthusiasm as he explores whether Homer's Iliad is true or false.

He may have bitten off more than a viewer can easily chew.

Dashing from Berlin to Troy to Mycenae to London and back to Troy again, often with hardly a moment to button his shirt, Wood still doesn't have enough to fill six hours. Four hours, better organized, would have been more informative.

There are rewards, however, if you have patience and pay close attention.

The tale is complicated because so little is known for certain. Hisarlik is where Troy was long believed to be, and there are ruins within the hill. Beyond that lies the realm of what is plausible, not what is proven, and every expert has a theory.

Hisarlik contains the ruins of several cities, and scholars disagree on which may have been Homer's Troy. The city may have been sacked by Hittites instead of Greeks, or it may have been leveled by an earthquake.

The Iliad may be fiction after all. Homer's story of a war that began with the abduction of Helen by Paris, dragged on while Achilles nursed his offended pride and ended with Greek soldiers sneaking into the besieged city inside a wooden horse sounds improbable enough to have been invented.

Wood doesn't think so. He concludes that there was a city called Troy at Hisarlik, and that some disaster struck in the middle of the 13th century B.C., about the time of Homer's tale.

The literal search for Troy is only one strand in Wood's narrative. He is as much concerned with the history of the people who dug for Troy, and how their imaginations interpreted and sometimes distorted what they found.

That part of the story begins in the 1860s with the flamboyant Heinrich Schliemann, a German who made a bundle by cornering the saltpeter market in the Crimean War and dealing in cotton in the American Civil War.

Schliemann, who was smitten with the splendor of classical Greece, dug into Hisarlik with energetic abandon, learning archaeology as he went. He not only claimed to have found the ruins of Troy, but also a necklace that he called the "Jewels of Helen."

He was wrong about the ruins and was accused of faking his claim about the jewels.

Schliemann's worst offense was in carelessly ripping through walls he thought were not Homer's Troy. His successors concluded that Schliemann had ruined precisely what he had come to find.

He didn't wreck it all, though, and later digs found two candidates most likely to be Troy. Wood looks at the case for each, and what they might imply about the truth of Homer's version.
