Peace Advocate Objects To Craven Tower

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The construction of a Ground Wave Emergency Network (GWEN) tower in Craven County could have a serious impact on local citizens, a member of the Greenville Peace Committee told City Council members Monday night.

The City Council declined to make any resolution on the matter but did give the group permission to conduct a public forum in council chambers, giving local citizens the opportunity to learn more about GWEN.

The communications tower, one of 240 planned across the United States, would be located 40 miles southeast of Greenville in the Antioch community near New Bern.

The tower is designed to operate after the start of a nuclear war and to withstand the electromagnetic pulse generated by nuclear detonations. It also would transmit messages between early warning sites, command posts and land-based nuclear forces using low frequency radio waves.

John P. Moskop, who represented the citizen's group at the workshop meeting of the council, said the committee has several objections to the construction, which is scheduled to begin this month.

"We think it is a step toward preparing to fight a nuclear war," Moskop said. "We don't think this is the time to concentrate on how to fight a nuclear war, but, rather, how to prevent one."

The tower would have no peace-time uses, according to Moskop.

"This tower's only purpose would be to relay orders to our bombers for nuclear retaliation strikes after nuclear explosions have disabled most civilian communications systems," he said.

"It allows the military to plan strategy for fighting a protracted, controlled nuclear war, even though President Reagan has stated that a nuclear war cannot be won and must not be fought."

Moskop said the location of the GWEN tower makes it vulnerable to enemy attack, leaving Pitt and Craven county citizens in danger.

"The GWEN towers will be sitting ducks. The tower in Craven County is an easy target for a weapon in the event of a first attack," he said. "In such an event, Greenville residents would be subject to high doses of radioactive fallout, at the very least."

Furthermore, Moskop told council members the GWEN system will not act as a deterrent to nuclear attacks.

"We already possess a more than sufficient nuclear deterrent. And more than half, or almost 6,000 of our strategic warheads are submarine based," he said. "The Navy has its own communications system completely independent of GWEN."

In allowing the committee to hold the forum, council members said it was not their place to take a stand on the issue.

"This is not just a Pitt County matter," said councilwoman Nancy Jenkins.

The peace committee appeared before the Craven County Board of Commissioners earlier Monday where its request for a public hearing was rejected.

Business Leader Award Goes To Parker Overton

By HAROLD JOYNER
Reflector Staff Writer

Starting what is now a multimillion dollar business from the trunk of his car more than 10 years ago, Greenville's "Small Business Leader of the Year" says he couldn't have done it without the help of his employees.

Parker Overton, owner and operator of Overton's Sports Center, said, "My thanks go to my employees. I wouldn't be here without them. They're the champs."

His $7.8 million water sports equipment business employs 68 people, according to the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Overton was presented the award by East Carolina University Chancellor John Howell Monday night at a chamber banquet held at the Sheraton Inn.

"His business has grown out of his demonstrated commitment to excellence in every phase of his operation," Howell said. "He has outstanding leadership in his management of both his business and his personnel."

Before moving to his present Red Banks Road location, Overton sold skis in 1972 at the back of his father's grocery store located at Jarvis and Third streets. In 1976, he incorporated the business and moved down the street.

Public Hearing July 7

County Board Wants Election Plan By 1987

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners on Monday gave formal approval to a timetable for making changes in the system of electing commissioners to ensure black representation on the board and tentatively scheduled a hearing for July 7 to receive comments from citizens on possible plans.

The timetable calls for having a new election method developed by the end of this calendar year. The new method would then be presented to the General Assembly early in the 1987 session for legislative action, submitted to the U.S. Justice Department for approval and implemented in the 1988 elections.

The July public hearing will give county residents an opportunity to say whether they favor single-member districts or a combination of single-member districts and at-large seats; the number of districts that should be set up and how the district lines should be drawn.

The board's action followed an executive session with lawyers to discuss the legal aspects of changing the method of election and with securing preclearance from the Justice Department of a 1967 act of the General Assembly which added a sixth member to the board.

The sixth seat was added to give Greenville Township a second representative to conform to the U.S. Supreme Court's "one-man, one-vote" ruling and did nothing to change the method of election in place since the mid-1950s under which commissioners are elected by countywide vote, although they must be residents of the district they represent.

The question of election changes surfaced in early March after commissioners — at the request of the local chapter of the National Association of Colored People — agreed to move toward restructuring the county's method of electing commissioners.

Later that month, in a letter to County Attorney W.H. Watson, the Department of Justice asked what course of action the county planned to take in having the 1967 law reviewed for compliance with the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, any election law change has to be submitted to the Justice Department or the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia for review to determine that the change does not have the purpose and will not have the effect of discriminating on account of race or color.

Then in April, commissioners hired Michael Crowell, an attorney with the Raleigh law firm of Tharrington, Smith & Hargrove, to handle Justice Department preclearance of the 1967 law change and to serve as an adviser as the board moves toward a new method of electing board members.

Crowell reported to commissioners Monday that information on the addition of the sixth seat would be submitted to the Justice Department for preclearance this week.

Rainfall Hits Area Crops At Good Time

By JANE WELBORN

Soaking rains that washed the Greenville area Monday and today, quenching the parched fields and gardens, came at a critical time, according to agricultural and forestry officials.

"I think the rain comes at a very critical time," said Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agent Mitch

Smith. "If we can continue to get this type of rain, which is not a runoff rain but a permeating rain, the crops and gardens will benefit."

According to measurements provided by the Greenville Utilities Commission, 29 inches of precipitation was recorded for the 24-hour period ending at 7 o'clock this morn-

Pitt Opens Hunt For Manager

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The search for a new county manager officially began Monday when Pitt County commissioners approved advertising for a replacement for Reginald Gray, who is scheduled to retire Dec. 31.

Gray, who will be 62 on Sept. 25, notified the board in February of his intention. In a letter to board Chairman Bruce Strickland, Gray, who has been the county's chief administrative officer — first as county auditor, then as county manager — since Aug. 15, 1982, said "my sole reason for wanting to retire... is that I have been advised by my doctor that I should retire as soon as I could."

The advertisement approved Monday said the county, which has had "one manager since the county manager form of government was established in 1970," is looking for someone with a "master's degree in business or public administration or equivalent combination of education and experience, plus five years of responsible managerial experience."

to serve as "administrative head" of a county government that has a "$33.5 million budget and 450 employees."

No deadline for applications was set Monday. But the board said that the application deadline to be included in the ad would be 30 days after it is printed in "County Lines," the twice-a-month periodical published by the N.C. Association of County Commissioners.

The earliest the ad could be published in County Lines would be May 28, while the latest would be

June 11, officials said. In other business Monday, commissioners agreed to provide Evergreen of Greenville — a group promoting the development of the city's downtown area — office space in the Pitt County Development Commission offices and with clerical assistance.

The board also appropriated $1,500 to pay the salary and other expenses of a manager for the Pitt County Farmers Market until the end of the fiscal year.

Dear Abby

Marriage Bridging Cultures Needs A Strong Foundation

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the American woman signed "Moonstruck," who was in love with an Iranian man and wanted to marry him. I married a man from a Middle Eastern country so perhaps I can give her some advice.

We have been married for 15 years and I couldn't want a better husband, but not all American women have been as lucky with men from foreign countries. Here are some things to consider:

1. What kind of visa does he have? If he already has a green card, he's probably a good bet. Some men marry American women just to get permanent resident status in this country. An American woman should be cautious about marrying someone who is on a tourist or student visa. She should also be aware that if she does marry a foreigner with a criminal record or who is considered to be an undesirable alien, he could be deported even if he is already married to an American.

2. How long have you known each other? Marrying someone from a different country, especially if there are language barriers and vast cultural differences, can create serious problems. Don't rush into marriage. Get to know each other very, very well. If it's love, the waiting won't hurt.

3. Could you be happy living in his country? You may have to if things don't work out for him here. Although most Americans think this is the greatest country in the world, many immigrants cannot adjust to living here. And if the political situation in his country changes for the better, he may want to return and take you with him. How would you feel about that?

— THE VOICE OF EXPERIENCE

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for a valuable letter.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago I wrote to you requesting a copy of your booklet titled "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know." This booklet has been very popular; in fact, one of the health teachers here at school uses it in her class.

For that reason I am requesting six more copies. I agree, it contains what every teen-ager ought to know. — BONNIE L. RAASCH, LIBRARIAN, C.B. VERNON MIDDLE SCHOOL, MARION, IOWA

DEAR MS. RAASCH: Thank you for what I consider high praise. The teen booklet has also been used at both Baptist and Catholic summer camps. Many teachers have suggested that it would be even more helpful if it were given to children ages 10 to 12. Our children are maturing physically much earlier today than they did 25 years ago. To order, send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

DEAR ABBY: In your advice on car thieves, you missed an obvious point. When the prospective buyer asks permission to test drive the car by driving it around the block, be sure you are in the car during the test! — MORT EISENBERG, DELRAY BEACH, FLA.

DEAR MORT: Surely you jest. A person risks more than auto theft when he or she gets into a car with a stranger.

Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Maybe you've been there. Sitting across the desk from a man in a swivel chair who is looking at your resume and chewing pensively on his glass frames. Then he speaks, "Your credentials and background are good, but what have you done in the six years since you last were employed?"

It happened to Dorothy Peterson of Akron, Ohio, who filled in the "gap" with the following.

"I have been wet on, sneezed at, thrown up on, and sassed at. I have been surprised, hugged and praised by these same offenders who did the above."

"I have planted, hoed and weeded a garden only to later pick, can and freeze the same stuff I planted, hoed and weeded."

"I have spent the pre-dawn hours in a steam-filled bathroom with a crooping child. I have applied soda paste to chicken pox marks and admonished, 'Please, don't scratch.'"

"I have coped with more month ... than money, but fed my family without their awareness of my scrimping. I have never had a microwave, garbage disposal, dishwasher or clothes dryer."

"I have welcomed stray dogs and cats of uncertain origins, taught them civilized demeanor and bought 2,600 pounds of dog food and 3,120 cans of cat food."

"I have hosted birthday parties for over 20 pre-schoolers, with the culmination of no damage and a good time was had by all."

"I have gone to 50 percent off clearance sales with the skill of a combat officer and fitness of a bouncer, but always got my sought-after bargain."

"I have driven a husband to the airport, a teen-ager to band practice and a 6-year-old to gymnastics ... all within the same hour."

"I have played pata-a-cake, peek-a-boo and hide-n-go-seek. I have run alongside a two-wheeler, bandaged skinned knees and monitored homework."

"I have prepared agendas, chaired meetings and written reports. I have been on working committees, study committees and rubber stamp committees. I have taught classes, directed activities and volunteered when no one else would."

"I have dealt with overflowing septic tanks one year and dry well the next."

"It was my conscious choice to fill the role of full-time care giver during this six-year span. I have given my children attention, time, involvement and a positive set of values. Now I would like to help provide the added financial means that allow for their enrichment and my personal fulfillment."

I don't know what Dorothy was applying for or if she got the job, but whatever it is, she sounds over-qualified to me.

Wake Forest Graduates Hear Cartoonist

By The Associated Press "Doonesbury" cartoonist Garry Trudeau welcomed Wake Forest University graduates to the real world, but made it seem a comical and sometimes dangerous place to reside. "From those of us floundering around in the real world, to those of you about to enter it, I say welcome," the Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist told 1,000 graduates at commencement ceremonies Monday. "We need you."

Our friends, he said, are wondering "who in particular asked the United States to be the world's policeman and chaplain?"

"Others might fight for national self-interest. But not us. Our friends sometimes find themselves irritated by our self righteousness," Yoder said.

In another commencement address Sunday, U.S. Rep. Walter

Fauntroy, D-Washington, D.C., told those at Winston-Salem State University that the rich, not the poor, are undermining the nation's economy.

Fauntroy said the Reagan administration and Congress are redistributing money from the poor to the wealthy on the premise that the wealthy will use it to create jobs and boost the economy.

But, he said, the wealthy have chosen to export the additional capital to overseas markets where labor is cheap and goods can be produced more competitively.

"They seek to maximize profits without regard to national boundaries," he said. "The result has been a change in the nature of the American work force."

Blacks and the poor in the United States have been "hit with a double whammy," Fauntroy said.

Where Now?

The question arises: where now for the National Congressional Club?

Against Democratic candidates the Congressional Club has been a juggernaut. That success ended, however, when the vicious campaign methods were turned against a Republican, as in the James Broyhill-David Funderburk campaign.

The Congressional Club and Funderburk not only lost, they were clobbered. The disaster left political observers in both parties wondering if the kind of political campaigning which the Congressional Club had brought to North Carolina several decades back was at last at an end. Is the Congressional Club dead?

It would be too soon to count on it. For all its deeds the Congressional Club has to be given credit for recognizing first that television, saturation advertising, computers and polling were the wave of the future in political campaigning. It also found that by embracing the political right it could bring in many millions in contributions from millionaires who shared its views but lived far from North Carolina borders.

Those who set the course for the Congressional Club found a comfortable alliance with fundamentalist evangelists who were also discovering money-raising power of television and computers. One learned from the other and both rolled through the 1960s and 1970s, and into the 1980s.

The Congressional Club rolled until the Broyhill-Funderburk campaign. Then its computers said a young, aggressive, conservative candidate with strong religious identification was just what was needed to oppose the mainline Republican candidate for U.S. Senate. The Congressional Club's artillery included bomb shells similar to those used in 1984 Jim Hunt-Jesse Helms campaign for U.S. Senate.

It seemed perfect — but it didn't work. Now the political damage to the Congressional Club is being assessed. It is too soon to declare it dead. It must be remembered that this was an election among Republican voters only, and obviously they resented the tactics used against a much admired GOP leader.

The Congressional Club has traditionally appealed to disgruntled Democrats, and it has grabbed up votes from this group during a period of general dissatisfaction among North Carolina Democrats. Thus it will be the chore of the Democratic Party to deliver the final blow to Congressional Club brand of politicking and that will be done by finding some way of accommodating the still registered Democrats who have been voting Republican.

Why Pay To Be Trashed?

WASHINGTON — Surprise! Interests of the United States are being systematically trashed by public information programs of the United Nations. Who ever would have imagined such a thing?

Pennsylvania's Sen. Arlen Specter, no dummy, has long suspected something fishy in the output of the U.N.'s Department of Public Information (DPI). Last year he asked the General Accounting Office to investigate. A few weeks ago the GAO filed its report. Specter's skepticism was abundantly supported.

The 162 professionals in the U.N.'s DPI stay busy, busy, busy. They publish more than 2 million documents annually; they put out two periodicals; they operate 66 U.N. information centers worldwide, and of particular interest, they produce programs, known as Radio Perspective, that go out in 25 languages to 167 countries. Most of the world's people have no access to the U.N.'s glossy monthly magazine; few common citizens ever read a summary of a committee meeting or a conference. Radio Perspective is by far the most influential medium for telling the world what is going on in the United Nations.

The United Nations has laid down guidelines for its DPI. In theory, publications and broadcasts are to be scrupulously balanced and objective. To measure the degree of neutrality, the GAO assigned three evaluators to undertake a separate, independent analysis of public information materials. They examined items in four areas of particular interest to the United States: apartheid, disarmament, Palestine and the rights of journalists and exporters around the world. Taking one paragraph at a time, the evaluators methodically tested 90 items on a seven-point scale ranging from "very supportive" of U.S. interests to "very opposed" to U.S. interests.

The State Department defined these interests — for example, that the United States does not endorse violent overthrow of the South African government, that the United States thinks it useless to have an arms agreement without verification, and that Israel has a right to exist.

On 79 of the 90 items, the evaluators came to identical conclusions. On the other 11 they were rarely far apart. They looked for such terms as "racist," "imperialist" and "barbaric" to identify emotional language. They checked for evidence of patent bias. They found, as they should have found, that much of the DPI's material was in fact balanced or neutral in terms of U.S. interests. But much of it was not.

Of the 79 items on which the evaluators unanimously agreed, 38 were neutral; 15 were judged slightly opposed to U.S. interests, 15 were moderately opposed and 10 were very opposed. Only one item — a TV interview dealing with environmental questions — was slightly supportive. Not a single item was either moderately supportive or very supportive.

Radio Perspective was the worst offender. Producers regularly gave Western spokesmen disproportionately short time on the air. Sometimes Radio Perspective "featured" U.S. public figures opposing U.S. policies rather than featuring official U.S. delegates or spokesmen. Remarkably, "Dissident spokesmen from the Soviet bloc were not featured in any of the items in our study." In two cases, speakers selected to illustrate political positions "were exclusively from the Soviet bloc and non-aligned states."

The GAO's report to Specter expressed special concern about Radio Perspective. The programs are heard around the world, and the impact of unfavorable material is "considerable." The U.N.'s DPI has better control of content for its radio programs than for the content of texts, reports and transcripts. U.N. broadcasters "should be neutral." Demonstrably they were not neutral. "They took positions unfavorable to the United States about 44 percent of the time while presenting a favorable side only 3 percent of the time."

It will come as no further surprise to learn that U.S. taxpayers pay handsomely to be trashed at the United Nations. The U.S. contribution to the DPI in 1984 was upward of $8 million. We have been billed for 25 percent of the DPI's $76 million budget for 1986-87. The sums are microscopic in a trillion-dollar U.S. budget, but that is not the point. Why pay to be trashed at all? Have any auditors computed what we get out of the United Nations in return for what we put in?

Everything's Relative

WASHINGTON — Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., is not what you'd call an unnecessarily sentimental man. But last week, in an unusual speech to his daughter Theresa's graduating class at merson College in Boston, he let his hair down for a few minutes.

"One of humankind's best kept secrets," Hatfield declared, "is that parents do not shape their children as much as children shape their parents." With that bit of wisdom, the four-term Senate veteran went on to tell his daughter's classmates that she had helped him "fight the forces of helplessness" in the battle against the MX missile system and chemical weapons. "My family," he concluded, "has been a healing agent in my life."

Bring out the Pepto-Bismol, please, many in Hatfield's audience probably thought. When there are graduation parties to attend and recover from, and careers and school romances to worry about, the last thing students may think they need is a sappy speech from some choked-up parent.

Yet the choice of Hatfield, a father of a graduating senior, as the day's main speaker was also appropriate. It is occasions like graduations (admittedly, neither of us attended our own but we've been dragged to innumerable such events since) which expose the rough spots of perhaps the most satisfying and yet complex of human relationships: that between the one who's just gone to school and the one who's in most instances paid for it.

Graduation Day does not always encourage the best vibes. For the parents, of course, it's a day of emotional and economic reckoning. Emotional because they're reminded that it's time to let go of Junior or Trip. While some parents never stop worrying about the hours that you keep, there comes a point when if the kid can't do his laundry or pay the rent on time, late-night prayers have to be taken for what they really are: insomnia.

No one ever said the world wasn't dangerous or filled with too many liberal arts graduates. And it's biochemical for parents to feel the pangs of responsibility long past the curfew hour on senior prom night. Some parents may burden others with their child-worries, as Ronald Reagan did when son Ron dropped out of Yale University to find himself. (Elder Reagan enlisted friend and columnist William Buckley, father of one, to give Reagan the Younger, soon an aspiring ballet dancer, "guidance.") Yet to each his (or someone else's) own.

At the same time, the pending offer of a diploma brings usually longstanding concerns to bear on the prospective graduate. Like... how he's going to explain that his roommate and girlfriend (or boyfriend) were the same person. Or how, unless he gets down to the registrar's office with a $1,000 check (Remember the money that was supposed to go to second-semester tuition?), there'll be no reason to get on the line to the podium, much less sport a cap and gown.

Graduation is also the moment of truth, the end of the four-year paid vacation. In the last few months, the career counselor has probably met half the senior class for the first time. The typical mother's desire for a doctor in the family (unless she's married to one), the father's interest in losing a leach who costs more than is tax deductible — such are the concerns that come to haunt anyone who didn't make Phi Beta Kappa.

Indeed, on these occasions it's easy to recall the scene, in "Death of a Salesman," in which Biff (a beaten 34 — every campus has one like him) confronts his unsuccessful yet ever-dreaming father, Willy. "I'm nothing, Pop," Biff says. "Can't you understand that I'm just what I am, that's all."

Though they may not always appreciate it, Americans have one of the longest incubation periods of any human tribe. For all the Russians say about the wickedness of the capitalist system, we keep about half our kids (namely, those who go to college) under our wing until they've reached the age at which many Lebanese sons are already veteran terrorists. The world stops at the edge of campus, even if it has a shantytown.

But everything's relative. The last day of college serves as an important right of passage for too many people not to be taken seriously. Apparently Mark Hatfield thought so. Maybe some of the people who heard him did, too.

—Elisha Douglas—

Strength For Today

People generally respond to us the way we expect them to. If we look upon them with suspicion, they prove worthy of suspicion. If we trust them, they generally prove worthy of trust. If we fear them, we find something to fear in them. If we hate them, we find that they respond to us in like spirit.

An official of a credit company once assured me that most people will be honest if they know that they will be trusted, and that the overwhelming majority of people in this country are honest by nature and expect to pay their bills.

We hurt our fellow men immeasurably when we refuse to trust them. If we never trust a man unless we know him to be reliable, then we do not trust him at all — we simply bet on a sure thing. Trust begins when we put our confidence in people whom experience teaches us are prone to be shrewd and unreliable.

Big Business

Greenville Utilities Commission has shown once again it is big business with the approval of a $71.02 million budget for 1986-87.

The budget will be consolidated with the Greenville city budget for final approval by the City Council.

Large as it is, however, it is well to recognize that nearly two-thirds of the total is "pass-through" money. The budget calls for Greenville Utilities to spend $45.8 million on the purchase of electricity. It will also spend $4.59 million for the purchase of natural gas.

Even at that, however, the utilities commission is of considerable value to its owners, the citizens of Greenville. The budget calls for gas department turnover of $220,000 to the city government, while the electric department will turn over $1.59 million to the city. That is, of course, money that would have to be replaced with tax funds or from other sources if it did not come from the Utilities Commission.

General Manager Malcolm Green noted that the proposed budget tracks an anticipated 14 percent increase in wholesale electric power cost on Jan. 1, 1987.

The Utilities Commission is obviously growing and interestingly its growth reflects the growth that is under way in the Greenville area.

Opposite Sides Of The Street

Two of the most important positions in the administration are the president's "Keeper of the Secrets" and the "Chief Leaker of Information." Although their offices are next to each other, they always seem to be working opposite sides of the street.

Sshhh, as the "Keeper of Secrets" is called, becomes livid when a government secret appears in print and wants to send everyone to jail. Psst, on the other hand, works diligently to plant secret stories with the media that will further the cause of the administration.

I ran into Sshhh at a fancy restaurant the other day. "How can we run an anti-terrorist intelligence operation when you people print that we broke Libya's code?" he asked.

"We didn't break the news. President Reagan revealed it himself on TV."

Sshhh was burning. "Did it ever occur to you that the Libyans don't watch American TV, but they do read The Washington Post and The New York Times?"

I said, "Ninety percent of all the confidential news concerning the government is leaked by this administration, and the other 10 by the opposition. Why don't you go after the leakers instead of those of us who are no more than relay stations for the information?"

"I deny the administration is now or has ever been the source of leaks," Sshhh said.

I confronted him. "Have you ever heard of a White House employee named Psst?"

Sshhh went red. "The name doesn't ring a bell."

"Would it surprise you to know that Psst has been leaking an average of 10 stories a day, with the approval of the president's team?"

"You're making it up."

"For heaven's sake, man, who do you think has been putting out all the stuff about Deaver?"

"We wouldn't leak about Deaver. He's one of us."

"Correction — he was one of you. Except for the president and Nancy, everyone in the White House seems to want Mike to twist slowly in the wind."

Sshhh said, "I can understand our doing that to Stockman, but not to Deaver."

"Nevertheless, you want to send us all to jail for stuff that Psst leaked to make the Reagan administration look good. If you keep putting on pressure, we won't accept any leaks from your side."

Sshhh turned his back on me and I walked over to the cloakroom. I saw Psst standing by the door handing out secrets. I said, "I've just been talking to Sshhh, and he told me he wants to put all of us in jail for using your leaks."

Psst guffawed. "He's just saying that to scare you. The only time the Justice Department will prosecute is when you print a leak that wasn't leaked by us. I have just as much authority around the White House as Sshhh — some days even more."

"In describing your work, is it OK to say your major tasks are to hand out classified material, deal in disinformation and send up trial balloons?"

"There's a bit of that involved," Psst said. "Though sometimes I'll leak a story to hurt someone politically as well."

"Will you be walking the streets if the administration puts the lid on all secrets?"

More guffaws. "Whoever heard of a government without leakers?"

While we were talking Sshhh went by and angrily put his finger over his lips. Psst laughed, and as a joke handed him George Bush's schedule for the following day.

ing; at that time, the rain was still falling. The level of the Tar River was recorded at 2.1 feet above sea level, a reading which is low for this time of the year.

The high temperature recorded Monday was 87 degrees, and the low reading was 65 degrees.

The rain will allow the crops to absorb the fertilizer nutrients that have been applied, the agricultural extension agent said. "Potash (potassium) is used on corn, and it needs water to be taken up by the crop," Smith said, and other fertilizers are activated by the moisture as well.

The rain also will help the transplanted tobacco develop more fully, he said.

"Another benefit of the rain is its tendency to enact herbicides that have been applied to the soil to control weeds," the extension agent said.

"One of the big holdbacks people have had for planting their home gardens is the lack of rain," Smith said. "If it continues raining, and I understand it should rain for several days, we will see some real benefits."

The burning ban had not been lifted by noon today, but a spokesperson for the N.C. Division of Forest Resources said officials would evaluate the dryness of the local forests this afternoon to determine whether the ban should be continued.

"If the soaking rain continues for several days, the ban probably will be lifted," said Rebecca Richards, the division's public relations person. "The burning ban has been lifted in several Piedmont counties, but officials will have to wait and see in the eastern part of the state."

She said officials will examine the wooded areas and check the grasses and undergrowth for dryness before determining whether or not to enforce the burning ban.

The rain began Sunday in the mountain section and didn't move into the eastern part of North Carolina until late Monday.

Economy Reflects Five-Fold Increase

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew at a surprisingly strong annual rate of 3.7 percent in the first three months of the year, a five-fold increase over the previous quarter, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, turned in its best performance since a similar 3.7 percent increase in the first three months of 1985.

The news on inflation was even better. A price index tied to the GNP rose at an annual rate of 2.5 percent from January through March, its best performance in almost two decades.

While the Reagan administration today reaffirmed its prediction of a 4 percent growth rate from the final quarter of 1985 to the same period this year, the upward revision from last month's 3.2 percent estimate caught analysts by surprise. Many had predicted that the first quarter GNP rate would be revised downward to 2.5 percent or lower.

Still, the stronger-than-expected growth did not impress many analysts, who noted that the gain came from an upward revision in the growth of business inventories.

That change added $7 billion to GNP growth, but economists said this will subtract from growth in the current April-June quarter as businesses are forced to work down unwanted inventories, especially, a record high level of unsold cars.

"It is stronger than everybody thought it would be, but it is strong in a bad way," said David Berson, senior economist at the New York investment-firm of Merrill Lynch. "When the strength comes from an increase in business inventories at a time when sales are flat, that means production is going to be cut to reduce those unintended inventories."

Berson noted that domestic auto manufacturers have already announced production cutbacks in the current quarter and he predicted growth will dip below 2 percent from April through June, even weaker than the 2.2 percent growth turned in for all of 1985.

But he said lower energy prices and lower interest rates would push growth in the second half of the year to 4 percent or higher.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the GNP report, coupled with "continuing good news from virtually every sector, makes for a solid first quarter." He added that the figures released today "reflect the sustained strength of the American economy."

A companion report today said that after-tax profits of U.S. corporations fell by 4.9 percent in the first quarter to an annual rate of $139.5 billion. This was the biggest decline since a 23.8 percent drop in the first three months of 1982 in the midst of the last recession.

The first quarter increase in GNP growth represented a sharp rebound from growth at an annual rate of just 0.7 percent in the October-December quarter last year.

Much of this change came from a swing in the country's huge trade deficit, which analysts also believe is only a temporary improvement.

Imports, which were rising at an annual rate of $26.7 billion in the final three months of 1985, fell at an annual rate of $1.4 billion in the first three Sources close to the board said Crowell told commissioners in executive session that the Justice Department has been considering action against the county to force changes in the method of electing board members. The sources said Crowell has also told commissioners that rulings by federal courts and the Justice Department make it questionable whether or not the at-large method of election such as the county now has would be allowed to continue.

"We're just trying to do the right thing," Watson said of the board's move to change the method of election following Monday's meeting.

He added that the law adding the sixth seat "wasn't submitted to the Justice Department (for review in 1967) because no one even thought about it."

Only 40 counties in North Carolina are covered by Section 5 — which requires review of election law changes — of the Voting Rights Act.

During his first year of business, he sold $15,000 worth of water skiing equipment, and sales have doubled ever since, Howell said.

All of the store's operations have been computerized, as well as the installation of 18 incoming WATS lines and an international Telex number, enabling him to have customers in all 50 states and 30 foreign countries.

The award was given by the chamber in recognition of Small Business Week, which ends Sunday. Howell and ECU were the sponsors of the award.

Excluding agriculture, about 35,255 people work in small businesses in Pitt County, said Frances Faust, public information director of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

A small business is classified as one that employs fewer than 250 people. Criteria for selecting a winner of the small business award includes the amount of growth a business has shown and exhibition of leadership and creativity within a community.

N.C. Employment Security Commission figures indicate there are 2,272 small businesses in the county.

Of the nation's business, 98 percent are comprised of small business, Lewis said.

That action came after Leroy James, county Agricultural Extension Service chairman said he would like to hire a manager before work on the farmers market building is completed.

Work on the $89,000 facility is under way on a site on Secondary Road 1725 near Bells Fork. Although completion is scheduled for July, James said the market will begin operations "under the trees" on the site until the building is ready for occupancy.

In a proposed budget for the farmers market given to the board, James listed the manager's salary for the coming fiscal year at $9,000, with travel at $800 and utilities at $1,000.

Other items included: $2,000 for maintenance and housekeeping, $800 for promotion, $1,450 for contingencies and office equipment, $480 for telephone, and $3,420 for fringe benefits.

Budget workshops are now scheduled for 10 a.m. on May 28 and May 29.

Choosing a health care plan is one of the most important decisions you will ever make for yourself and your family. It should be based on quality of care, not on savings.

If you are considering changing from your present EDS, or other health plan, to an HMO; we think you should know all the facts before you make a decision. HMO plans are vastly different and should be examined in detail. While there is little North Carolina experience to draw on, some HMOs may adversely affect a patient's freedom of choice. Don't gamble with something as important as the quality of your family's health care without knowing all the facts about HMOs.

Q. WILL I STILL BE FREE TO CHOOSE MY REGULAR FAMILY DOCTOR?

A. You will no longer be free to always choose the doctor that you feel is best for you and your family. You may either be given the chance to select from a pool of participating HMO doctors or you may be assigned to a specific doctor. Even if your regular doctor is among this specific group, there is no guarantee that you will be assigned to him.

Q. WILL I BE FREE TO CHOOSE A SPECIALIST OF MY OWN?

A. No.

Q. CAN I SEE MY CHIROPRACTIC PHYSICIAN WITHOUT BEING REFERRED BY AN HMO DOCTOR?

A. HMOs have traditionally been reluctant to make referrals to chiropractic physicians. Some HMOs have chiropractors as participating physicians, and some do not. Here again, there is a chance that even if your chiropractor is a participating physician of the HMO plan, you may not be assigned or referred to him because his patient quota may be full. Your access to chiropractic care may be in jeopardy.

Q. WILL I STILL BE FREE TO USE MY REGULAR PEDIATRICIAN OR OB/GYN DOCTOR?

A. Not unless your regular doctors are participants in the HMO plan; even then you may not be assigned to them because their patient quota may be full.

Lawmakers Want Larger State Pay Raises

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Several legislative leaders say that while it was too early to predict how much of a raise teachers and state workers would get, they definitely would receive more than Gov. Jim Martin's acknowledged "bare minimum" of 3.2 percent.

Most legislators interviewed said the increase likely would be in the 5 percent to 7 percent range.

"I hope it will be at least that," said Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, chairman of the Senate Base Budget Committee. But he said the raise probably would not be as high as 10 percent.

"I think it's much too little," Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, said of Martin's proposed pay increase as the Joint Appropriations Committee began a week of hearings on possible changes in the 1986-87 state budget.

Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and Watkins, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, agreed with Rand. Plyler said the pay raise would be his top priority in debating the use of some $400 million in surplus state revenue expected to be available when the 1985-86 fiscal year ends June 30.

Martin, a Republican, last week unveiled a $533.6 package of spending increases for consideration during next month's legislative session.

Leaders of the predominantly Democratic General Assembly have sharply criticized major portions of the Martin package, including his proposals to transfer funding of the Highway Patrol and driver education programs from the highway fund to the general fund at a cost of some $70 million per year.

Budget committee leaders say they hope the preliminary hearings will enable the Legislature to get a fast start toward passing a budget in about four weeks' time. C.C. Cameron, Martin's budget chief, is scheduled to appear before the panel Wednesday.

In interviews after Monday's meeting, during which the 104-member joint committee received reports on the Basic Education Program and expenditures of funds for job training and water and sewer projects, ranking lawmakers said they still had reservations about Martin's plan.

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, and Sen. Marvin Ward, D-Forsyth, co-chairmen of the appropriations subcommittee on education, said it was essential to raise teacher pay as much as possible to continue the momentum toward improving North Carolina's public schools begun last year with enactment of the Basic Education Program.

"I'll be protective of education," said Warren. "I will support improvements in the transportation system, but not at the expense of education."

Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, vice chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said the state cannot afford huge one-time increases that would bring teacher pay up to acceptable levels. "If you don't do it (all) along, you'll never reach the cumulative effect you're after," Warren said. "Every year we wait is a year we're further behind."

Martin contends that the pay increase he advocates, which would cost $120 million, is all the state can afford, because most of the leftover money in this year's budget is non-recurring and cannot be used for year-to-year needs.

But legislative leaders say they are virtually certain to reject Martin's proposed fund transfers for transportation, which would leave money for pay increases and other expenditures.

"I have not seen any enthusiasm at all for transfers," Rand said.

Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, one of the Legislature's most powerful members, said he and former Gov. Jim Hunt had pushed unsuccessfully in 1983 for fund transfers similar to those Martin is requesting.

Girl's Wish For Letters Is Fulfilled

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO (AP) — When the mailman snaps the metal flap on the mailbox at the Amanda Cooper's home, a pair of four-year-old eyes light up.

The sound is a highlight in the day of a little girl who likes nothing better than receiving letters. It's almost as good as a Kenny Rogers song on the radio or a treat from her daddy, who goes to work each day to make ice cream money.

Amanda can't get up to see what's in the mailbox, but she can sound the alarm that sends her mother or her sister to have a look. Her mother, Barbara Cooper, says junk mail is as much of a delight as a personally addressed note.

Receiving mail is Amanda's wish, and the Make a Wish chapter in North Carolina is trying to grant it for her. The national foundation, which was founded some 30 years ago and started a North Carolina chapter within the past year, attempts to fulfill the desires of children under the age of 18 who have life-threatening conditions.

Amanda is afflicted with a genetic disease which causes her bones to fracture easily. She suffers from respiratory problems and cannot sit or stand or hold her head up. Dwarfism is another symptom of the disease, and Amanda has grown only to the size of an 18-month-old child.

But to Barbara and Hubert Cooper, she is a happy child who has taught them lessons of patience and hope.

The Coopers' house on 1607 Victory Street in Greensboro has been home to some 50 foster children over the past 18 years. Mrs. Cooper said she did not set out to adopt children with special needs, but she and her husband had already adopted a totally blind girl. She saw Amanda when the child was five weeks old and immediately took her home.

"I go over and pick up this kid (with) no idea how fragile she was, and I just fell in love with her," Mrs. Cooper said. "I love parenting and I'm good at parenting and I enjoy the child. My husband says I'm not happy if there isn't a baby in the house. I love proving teachers and doctors wrong."

So far, Amanda has been a medical mystery.

"For the first three years of her life, we were up with her around the clock," Mrs. Cooper said. "I learned to suction her, give her breathing treatments. For the first three years, I just was keeping her alive."

"This is a human being we're talking about who is struggling to surlive," she said. "She nearly expired from respiratory problems a couple of times. But I just knew she was going to make it. The fact that she's alive is remarkable."

The Coopers have four natural children who are now grown. In recent years, they have adopted 10-year-old Christi, who is totally blind, 9-year-old Becky, who has no physical handicaps, and Amanda.

"We just enjoy children," Mrs. Cooper said. "The Lord gave me four healthy children and I feel like I'm giving a little back."

Mrs. Cooper said despite Amanda's physical handicaps, she tries to teach the child to be independent.

"I insist on children doing for themselves," she said. "She gets around on her back, she gets all over the house. It tears my heart out but I let her do it. You have to let children be successful. They must have a chance to be successful at whatever they're good at. Amanda feeds herself, even though it would be easier for me to feed her."

In turn, she said Amanda has taught the family the importance of the moment. Mrs. Cooper said she and her husband go with the children or not at all. They go to baseball games together and take occasional beach trips, because Amanda enjoys traveling. They spend their days watching television, while Amanda occasionally scratches her head with a red plastic toy rake, or doodles on a paper tablet.

"When you think about the enormity of life and what can happen, you just don't get upset about little things," Mrs. Cooper said. "You just enjoy the love. The days I spend here are totally exhausting. But these children teach you patience. Sometimes Becky says 'Listen to the birds singing,' and you stop."

"We don't take life too seriously around here. We just have fun," she said.

Storms Damage Homes In Three N.C. Counties

By The Associated Press
At least one twister, which looked like a "great black ball" touched down in Hoke and Cumberland counties, injuring five people, destroying seven homes and leaving 30 others damaged, officials say.

Larry Lee, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service at the Raleigh-Durham Airport, said today that he didn't know how many storms may have been responsible for the damage in Hoke, Cumberland and Robeson counties Monday.

"They were reported to us as tornadoes," Lee said. "There obviously was damage, but we just don't want to say exactly how many storms there may have been until we look at the damage. We may try to go down there (today) to see what the actual storm did consist of."

Residents said the storm came without warning. Ronald Rogers said he was just about to close the bedroom window when the mobile home in which he was staying near Red Springs "raised off (the ground)."

"I heard a lot of crash, over and over and over," said Rogers, a 28-year-old construction worker. "Then I seen light. I figured it had to be the top flying off. After that, I don't know."

The mobile home was destroyed when it was blown about 100 feet, but Rogers escaped with only some scratches below his right eye and a headache. He was alone at the time.

Among the injured was Jermaine Patterson, 2, who was admitted to Cape Fear Valley Medical Center and was undergoing surgery late Monday night, said Gudrun McDuffie, a supervisor at the Fayetteville hospital. Another hospital spokesman said the child had suffered a head injury when the trailer where he and his mother lived in Currie's Mobile Home Park in Hoke County was destroyed.

The other injured people were also from the mobile home park. They were identified as William McAllister, 13, and his brother, Michael McAllister, 11, who were treated for bruises and cuts at Cape Fear Valley Medical Center and released; William Marshall Currie, 38, who was treated for a cut on the arm at Cape Fear; and a fifth person, who received minor injuries. William Niven, emergency management coordinator for Hoke County, said the man declined to be taken to the hospital.

Most of the damage occurred in two Hoke County communities, one south of Rockfish and the other near Antioch on N.C. 211. Another storm was reported on the outskirts of Red Springs in Robeson County, and a storm also damaged some homes in southwest Cumberland County, officials said.

Damages in the three counties were estimated at more than $150,000, officials said.

A mobile home was destroyed, two others damaged and a third blown from its cinder-block foundation two miles north of Red Springs in the Antioch community on N.C. 211, according to the Hoke County Sheriff's Department.

At 5:30 p.m., four mobile homes at Currie's Mobile Home Park were destroyed, and a frame house lost part of its roof south of Rockfish off State Road 1413, just west of the Cumberland County line, in Hoke County.

In Cumberland County, another storm struck about 5:30 in the area along John Brady Road and King Road, according to John McInnis, the county's emergency management coordinator. He said that about $50,000 in damages were sustained when winds caused roof and shutter damage to about 20 brick and frame homes. About 150 homes were left without electric power in the area, he said.

"Nobody got killed. I think the good Lord for that," said Herman Currie, the owner of Currie's Mobile Home Park. "I've got my trust in the man upstairs. I'm just glad there wasn't nobody killed."

Escapee Convicted Of Murder

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Hours after defense attorneys decided not to present evidence on their client's behalf, a Superior Court jury returned a first-degree murder conviction against an Arkansas prison escapee accused in the shooting death of a state Highway Patrol trooper.

District Attorney Tom Rusher told the eight-man, four-woman jury Monday that William Richard Bray "did nothing at all — or with malice, premeditation and deliberation (he) intentionally killed Bobby Coggins."

"It's a terrible thing that happened," Rusher said. "This inquisitive officer ... did his job well ... and for that he had to die."

After 3½ hours of deliberation in Buncombe County Superior Court,

Bray was found guilty of murder, robbery with a firearm, discharging a firearm into an occupied vehicle, second-degree burglary and felonious larceny.

The same jury is scheduled to decide today if Bray should be sentenced to the death penalty or given life in prison.

Bray, 23, and co-defendant Jimmy Dean Rios, 21, are charged with killing Coggins on Sept. 14 after the trooper stopped their stolen pickup truck at an overlook in the Spring Creek community in western Madison County. Coggins' death sparked a massive manhunt that ended Sept. 17 with the arrest of Rios and Bray not far from where Coggins was shot.

Rios has yet to be tried, but his attorneys have filed motions requesting his case not be heard in Madison County Courthouse. Ongoing renovations there moved Bray's trial to Buncombe County.

Superior Court Judge Donald Stephens, after an hour-long hearing with the jury out of the courtroom, instructed jurors they could find Bray guilty of first-degree murder if they believe he killed Coggins either alone or "acting in concert" with co-defendant Rios.

IN THE STATE

Fatalities

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The N.C. State Motor Club predicts that 21 people will lose their lives during the long Memorial Day weekend.

The holiday weekend begins at 6 p.m. May 23 and ends at midnight May 26. Last year over the same period, 19 people died and 992 were injured in traffic accidents.

The latest figures from the state Division of Motor Vehicles show an 11.7 percent increase in traffic fatalities for the first three months of the year.

"The recent East holiday weekend death toll of 17, with delayed death totals yet to be included, confirms the belief that a definite relationship does exist between increased traffic deaths and the substantial decreases in gasoline prices," said Dr. John G. Frazier III, president of the motor club.

The referendum drew 3,579 voters, association officials said.

Second Charge

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 29-year-old Charlotte man is being held without bond in Mecklenburg County Jail after being charged with murder for the second time in a month.

Robert Morris Jr. was charged Saturday in the death of Marvin Martin, 41, who was shot in the stomach during a fight in a residential area.

Morris was charged with murder April 18 in the handgun slaying of Victor Sutton. He was released on $15,000 bond three days after his arrest.

Morris turned himself in to police about two hours after Saturday's slaying, Charlotte homicide investigator Rick Sanders said.

Shaw Funds

RALEIGH (AP) — The General Baptist State Convention of North Carolina is launching a fund drive to help bail Shaw University out of its financial crisis with the federal government.

The Internal Revenue Service has filed liens against the university to satisfy a debt of $750,000 in unpaid taxes.

C.C. Craig, executive secretary of the convention, a statewide organization of black Baptist churches, said convention officials will meet Thursday in 10 areas with leaders of the 1,700 affiliated churches.

Four Killed

ELKTON, Md. (AP) — Four members of a North Carolina family were killed Monday when their car struck the rear of a disabled church bus on the shoulder of Interstate 95, state police said.

Delores Seymour, 30, the driver, was believed to have fallen asleep at the wheel, state police said. Also killed were her husband, Rayford, 35, and their sons, Rayvond, 13, and Sterling, 5, all of High Point, N.C.

The Seymour family was on its way to Philadelphia to attend the graduation of Mrs. Seymour's sister when the accident occurred shortly before 11:30 a.m., police said.

Motel Burns

KENLY, N.C. (AP) — Fire raced through 12 of the 18 units at the Kenly Motor Lodge Monday, but fire officials say motel guests and employees escaped unharmed.

Kenly Fire Chief Cad Wilkinson said the fire apparently started in a boiler room and spread quickly through the motel, which was built in the early 1950s and did not have fire walls. Wilkinson said damages were estimated at about $200,000.

Referendum

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina farmers have given overwhelming approval to continue the soybean assessment program, officials of the North Carolina Soybean Producers Association say.

The official count of votes cast in a statewide referendum May 7 show 87.2 percent of those voting approved paying one cent per bushel over the next six years for promotion, education and research.

Taft Wants Old Law Activated

RALEIGH (AP) — Lawmakers hope a plan enacted by the General Assembly 11 years ago, but which was never implemented, will curb medical malpractice premiums by setting up a state-run reinsurance fund.

"It may have more of an impact on medical malpractice rates — and therefore the total crisis — than all of the tort reform and other steps," Sen. Thomas Taft, D-Pitt, chairman of the legislative study commission on medical malpractice said Monday.

Taft said he would urge the study commission at its meeting on Thursday to ask Gov. Jim Martin to activate the 1975 law that established the N.C. Health Care Excess Liability Fund.

Commercial insurance companies would provide the first $100,000 in coverage under the plan, and the state fund would cover any excess claims against doctors and hospitals up to $2 million.

The fund would provide reinsurance coverage for health care providers in the state, including doctors, nurses, hospitals, and other medical professionals. To fund it, each health-care provider would be assessed an annual surcharge on top of the premiums paid for the reinsurance coverage.

Sam A. Wilson, legal counsel to the governor, said Monday that Martin's aides were studying the 1975 law. He said Martin would carry out the General Assembly's wishes.

"It's a complicated question of whether it's necessary," Wilson said. "But it's a law that hasn't been repealed by the General Assembly."

The 1975 law designed the fund to be financed entirely by the premiums and surcharges. Wilson and Taft, asked whether any state funding would be needed, declined to comment.

The legislative action comes a week after a Raleigh lawyer, representing a group of family practice doctors faced with sky-rocketing insurance premiums, began lobbying state officials to enforce the 1975 law. The lawyer, G. Eugene Boyce, said he had thought of filing a lawsuit to force the governor to implement the law.

"We have now decided it's being taken care of, so we don't need" a lawsuit, Boyce said Monday. Boyce also called for an inquiry to determine why the 1975 law was never put into effect.

"It is of great importance to find out why it's gone 10 years without any activity," Boyce said. "The family doctors do not want to get caught in this pinch again."

Climbers

TALKEETNA, Alaska (AP) — Nine Soviet climbers are making their way down from Mount McKinley after a quick climb up North America's tallest peak.

The climbers reached the 20,320-foot peak after eight days on the mountain, said Mark Stasik, a volunteer at the Talkeetna ranger station.

The team is the first half of an exchange program which will send 10 U.S. climbers to the Soviet Union next year.

Reagan Will Help Broyhill

RALEIGH (AP) — President Reagan will attend a June 4 fundraiser for Republican U.S. Senate nominee Jim Broyhill in Greensboro, a Broyhill spokesman says.

Tentative plans call for the president to appear at a $500-per-person luncheon at either the Greensboro Coliseum or the adjoining Exhibition Hall, said Broyhill campaign spokesman Doug Haynes.

Details are yet to be worked out, but Haynes said the president's visit probably will last two hours or less and will be closed to the public. He said the Broyhill campaign hopes Reagan will return to the state later during the campaign and attend a public rally.

Broyhill, a 12-term congressman from Lenoir, announced the day after his May 6 primary victory that Reagan would campaign for him, but no time and place had been chosen. Broyhill, who defeated David Funderburk and Glenn Miller in the primary, will face former Gov. Terry Sanford in November.

EPA Says Air Radiation Higher Than Reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency conceded that the air many Americans have been breathing since the Chernobyl nuclear accident may have had three times the radiation the agency reported.

But even at the higher readings, the radiation is still not hazardous to human health, EPA said Monday.

The discrepancy occurred because most EPA equipment was only measuring airborne particles of radioactive iodine-131. Not being trapped and measured were gaseous compounds containing the substance which almost certainly were present, the agency said.

EPA radiobiologist Neal Nelson said readings at the EPA's Montgomery, Ala., lab detected radioactive iodine compounds at concentrations 1.5 to 3.5 times greater than the tiny particles of iodine-131 itself detected on fiber filters.

"This ratio probably holds anywhere," he said.

According to EPA spokesman Chris Rice, "Even given this fact, airborne radioactivity has been extraordinarily low and far below levels requiring protective action."

The admission came following statements by New York City advocacy groups led by Accord Research and Educational Associates Inc. that EPA should have been multiplying its dose estimates by a factor of eight.

Richard Piccioni of the group said the factor of eight was an average derived from measurements made by the Oregon State Health Department that showed total breathable compounds of iodine-131 present in concentrations anywhere from 4.5 times as much as iodine-131 itself to 15 times as much.

Most EPA monitoring stations do not have the charcoal filters necessary to trap gaseous compounds and can measure only radioactivity present on fine solid particles trapped on fiber filters, Rice said.

Stations of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Energy Department can measure gaseous compounds, he said, and the EPA began reporting a backlog of those readings during the weekend.

According to the EPA, air contaminated with one picocurie per cubic meter of iodine-131, if breathed for a year, would mean a radiation dose about equal to one-third of a chest X-ray. Few EPA airborne particle readings have approached one picocurie.

Piccioni's group said radioactivity levels in New York City could threaten the survival of fetuses, which concentrate iodine in the thyroid gland 100 to 200 times faster than an adult.

Nelson said he believed most experts would put fetal concentration of iodine at only 10 times as fast as an adult, and then only in the final trimester of pregnancy.

Nelson said pregnant women would have had to have breathed air containing 3,350 picocuries of iodine-131 per cubic meter to give their babies the dose of iodine claimed by the New York group.

EPA figures showed airborne particles of iodine-131 in New York only in a sample started May 9 and completed May 12 at 0.2 picocuries per cubic meter.

The agency's daily radioactivity statement Monday said Friday's samples showed iodine-131 in milk at five locations, with these concentrations of picocuries per liter: Portland, Maine, 35; Cleveland, 21; Helena, Mont., 54; Spokane, Wash., 136; and San Francisco, 36.

Panel Says U.S. Should Head Space Settlements

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission wants the United States to take the lead in making settlements possible "from the highlands of the moon to the plains of Mars" in the 21st century.

"In the increasingly competitive world of the future, it is clear that maintaining America's pre-eminence in science and technology will again test our nation's technical vision, resolution and institutional strength," says the National Commission on Space.

The commission, chaired by Thomas O. Paine, former administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, heard hundreds of witnesses in 15 hearings around the country. Its report was sent to the White House in April, but it has not been released there, although Aviation Week & Space Technology published a description of the report's final draft. The Associated Press obtained a copy from another source.

"America will lead a dynamic movement of humankind to new worlds," the report says.

It predicts in the next half century, "growing numbers of people working at Earth orbital, lunar and eventually Martian bases, initiating the settlement of vast reaches of the inner solar system."

The panel says this goal can be achieved with what it calls "reasonable civilian space budgets."

A chart with the report projects spending for civilian space programs increasing to about $28 billion in the year 2010 and climbing to $40 billion in 2030. The current NASA budget is $7.3 billion.

Although the United States suspended manned space flights in the wake of the Jan. 28 space shuttle Challenger disaster — which the commission called "a temporary interruption" — the report advocated a step-by-step program that would:

- By the year 2000 produce two economical new vehicles to move people and cargo from Earth into space and a transfer vehicle for transportation in space. The systems would become operational in conjunction with a spaceport in orbit.
- By 2005 have initial operations by robots on the moon, followed by a permanent lunar outpost to support astronaut operations.
- By 2015 begin detailed exploration of Mars with robots, "followed by a Mars outpost for human activity."

The report was dedicated to the seven Challenger crew members who died when the space shuttle exploded shortly after liftoff from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The 15-member Paine commission includes two people, former Astronaut Neil Armstrong and test pilot Chuck Yeager, who also serve on the presidential commission investigating the Challenger accident.

The report concedes that it is difficult to predict the next 50 years of space progress.

"Exploring the universe is neither one nation's issue, nor relevant only to our time," the report says.

Sailing Ship Lost At Sea

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Pride of Baltimore's captain, who dived repeatedly into the sea to release the life raft that saved eight of his crew, remained lost today with three other crewmembers, and officials said the search would continue "as long as there's hope."

Officials learned of the sinking on Monday after a Norwegian freighter rescued eight crewmembers who had drifted nearly five days on a life raft made for six people. The Pride, a 97-foot replica of a 19th century clipper ship, was used to promote the city, and sank Wednesday in the Caribbean.

A search by the Coast Guard, Air Force and Navy was to continue today for Capt. Armin E. Elsaesser III, 42, of South Dartmouth, Mass., and the others.

"It's a tragedy for all of us," said Mayor William Donald Schaefer.

Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., who had christened the clipper in 1977, said the U.S. military was determined to search thoroughly for any survivors. Four Coast Guard planes, one Navy plane and a Coast Guard cutter were dispatched to the area about 300 miles north of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

New Court Decision Leaves Scope Of Affirmative Action Undecided

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future scope of affirmative action in the American work place is still to be decided by the Supreme Court, with the court's latest ruling on the issue being welcomed by supporters and opponents of racial preferences.

the court, could prove the pivotal vote later this year.

She voted with the majority Monday, but indicated some layoff policies based on race may pass constitutional muster. And she said there is "unique importance" in having government employers ease the effects of their past discrimination.

The mixed signals Monday prompted enthusiasm on all sides.

"Affirmative action is alive and well," said Eric Schnapper of the NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund. He said the decision "is something we and people who believe in affirmative action can live with."

The Reagan administration said its campaign is still alive to scale down affirmative action to benefit only actual victims of past discrimination.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said, "The court doesn't really go deeply into" that issue, a hallmark of the administration's drive for what it calls "a color-blind society."

The Mountain States Legal Foundation, a conservative organization, hailed the ruling as a major victory for foes of racial preferences.

"It really is a landmark decision in the best sense of the word," said staff attorney Diane Vaksdal. "The Supreme Court has finally given us some concrete rules in handling affirmative action plans."

Monday's 5-4 ruling invalidated a Jackson, Mich., plan protecting from layoffs black public school teachers with less seniority than whites.

But the justices did not retreat significantly from a series of rulings beginning in 1978 supporting the concept of affirmative action — giving racial minorities extra help to make up for past discrimination.

Also, the ruling applies only to layoffs, not hiring and promotions — areas in which the justices said they might be more receptive to preferential treatment for minorities.

The Jackson school board, in a pact with the teachers union, agreed to protect the jobs of recently hired blacks by laying off white teachers with more seniority if necessary. The purpose was to preserve the existing percentage of minority teachers in the public school system.

White teachers laid off in 1981 filed suit, charging the plan violated their rights. While most were rehired, they are seeking back pay, damages and restored seniority.

The affirmative action cases remaining to be decided by July involve membership in a predominantly white New York City area labor union and a minority promotion plan in the Cleveland fire department.

In all three cases, the Reagan administration said to avoid "reverse discrimination" against white males, only actual victims of bias should receive preferential treatment.

The court did not flatly reject the administration position.

But Justice Lewis F. Powell, writing the court's main opinion, said, "As part of this nation's dedication to eradicating racial discrimination, innocent persons may be called upon to bear some of the burden of the remedy."

The uncertainty stirred by Monday's ruling resulted largely from the absence of a consensus among at least five justices on why the Jackson plan should be struck down.

Four justices — Powell, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices William H. Rehnquist and Justice Byron R. White — agreed that laying off whites with more seniority to protect the jobs of blacks always is unconstitutional.

O'Connor cast the decisive fifth vote overturning the Jackson plan.

Voting to uphold the Jackson plan were Justices Thurgood Marshall, William J. Brennan, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens.

In other action, the court ruled 5-4 in a case from Santa Clara, Calif., that police do not need court warrants before conducting aerial searches for marijuana growing in fenced-in residential yards.

By a separate 5-4 vote the court ruled that federal regulators who do not first get court warrants may use aerial photographs of manufacturing facilities to help enforce clean-air laws.

The court, with two key affirmative action cases remaining on its agenda this year, threw out a plan Monday that preserved the jobs of black school teachers at the expense of whites with more seniority.

But in five separate opinions — none of them commanding a clear five-vote majority — the justices expressed strong support for the principle of affirmative action.

The Reagan administration has been leading the drive to curtail affirmative action, and ironically, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, President Reagan's lone appointee to

Michigan Teacher Says Decision Surprised Her

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — A teacher who bucked her union to challenge the public school system's job-security plan for blacks said she was surprised when the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the arrangement.

"I can't believe it," said Wendy Wygant, one of eight white teachers in Jackson who contested the school district's affirmative action policy when they were laid off before black teachers with less seniority.

"We were prepared for the worst," the 32-year-old kindergarten teacher said Monday after the Supreme Court struck down Jackson's layoff policy.

The high court's 5-4 ruling said Jackson's plan for laying off teachers was not based on convincing evidence of past racial discrimination.

The ruling cast into doubt similar policies adopted by other school districts in Michigan and other states, lawyers said.

Under the Jackson policy, which was backed by the teachers union and negotiated into teachers' contracts, white teachers with more seniority could be laid off if necessary to preserve the percentage of minority teachers in the school system.

Jackson school district officials were uncertain about the ruling's impact, said personnel director Bruce Amb. Of the eight teachers who were laid off in 1981, six are back working at the district and the other two are working elsewhere.

The white teachers' claim for back pay and restored seniority must be settled in U.S. District Court, their lawyers said.

"We'll be asking for back wages for the years they were laid off, court costs, attorneys fees plus any benefits that they lost," said lawyer Joseph Warren. The attorney said the amount they will request hadn't been calculated.

Ms. Wygant said her share of back pay — two years' worth — would amount to about $40,000.

"This decision will strike down programs ... in the Michigan Civil Service and in several other states as well," lawyer K. Preston Oade Jr., who argued the white teachers' case before the Supreme Court, said from Golden, Colo.

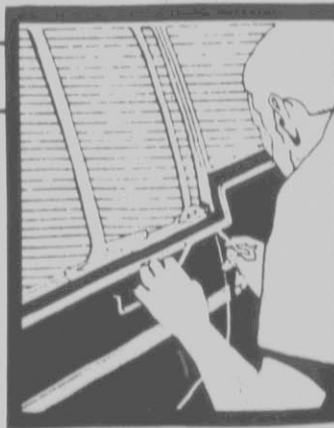

"Their contracts aren't in question; they're illegal, they're unconstitutional," Oade said.

Michigan Civil Service Department spokesman Don Meyers confirmed the state's labor contracts allow layoffs not based on seniority, for affirmative action purposes.

"There may be an impact, but we have no way of knowing what the impact is until we see the decision," he said.

While striking down the Jackson plan, the justices did not retreat significantly from a series of rulings supporting the concept of affirmative action — giving racial minorities extra help to make up for past discrimination.

Financial Reports Tell Little About Senators

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like many other Americans, members of the U.S. Senate contribute to individual retirement accounts, lose money farming and like to travel.

Unlike most Americans, when senators satisfy their urge to travel someone else usually picks up the bill.

A peek at the finances of senators was offered Monday with the annual release of the Senate's public financial disclosure reports.

The forms told a lot less than people might like to know about the wealthiest senators, men such as John D. Rockefeller IV, D-W.V.; John Heinz, R-Pa.; John Danforth, R-Mo.; Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.; and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.

For example, the best that could be gleaned from Rockefeller's filing was that his assets probably total more than $1,070,000. Forbes Magazine has estimated that the great-grandson of the founder of Standard Oil is worth about $150 million.

The Japan Institute for Social and Economic Affairs was listed by Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., as picking up the tab for a 10-day trip to Japan for the senator and his wife.

Baucus also listed getting reimbursement for a week-long cruise to Bermuda he took with his wife.

Such trips generally involve speechmaking. A Baucus aide, Carole Long, said she didn't know the purpose of the Japan trip or the Bermuda cruise.

Six members of the Senate Finance Committee, including chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., listed IRAs on their forms. Packwood is the principal backer of a tax revision, approved unanimously by the committee, that would end the deduction for most IRA contributions.

Among the Senate farmers who lost money were Mark Andrews, R-N.D.; James Abdnor, R-S.D.; Charles Mathias, R-Md.; and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

Andrews listed a loss of $34,506 from his farm in Mapleton, N.D., along with an unspecified loss for his wife from the same farm. The farm's value is upwards of $250,000, and a separate livestock company is listed as worth $15,000 to $50,000.

Abdnor said he lost $144 from his farm operations in South Dakota.

Mathias owns a 370-acre farm in Jefferson County, W. Va., on which he reported a net loss of $19,483.

Grassley refused to say how much money he lost from his Iowa farm. Asked whether he lost money on his farm, Grassley said, "Heavens, yes. Eighty percent of the farmers in Iowa lost money. The only way a farmer could escape losing money would be if he is debt free."

Precise tabulation of income and assets is impossible under the form that senators are required to file annually. Instead, they list their holdings within ranges. The same is true of debts and liabilities.

The ranges tell the least about the wealthiest senators because the top category for income is simply more than $100,000 and the top for any asset is more than $250,001.

British Step Up Security At Ports

DOVER, England (AP) — Undercover British police are riding ferries and Hovercraft between England and the European continent to prevent an attack by Arab terrorists, but police and news reports say security is not as stringent in some European ports.

Police searched cars and baggage at Dover and 12 other English ports on the English Channel and North Sea in the third day of a security operation that encompassed ports in seven countries.

It began following information from Interpol, the Paris-based international police organization, that a Middle East group with Libyan connections planned to detonate a car bomb on a vessel in retaliation for the April 15 U.S. bombing raid on Libya.

Libya condemns Britain as well as the United States for the raid because Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher allowed U.S. fighter-bombers flying British bases to take part.

Extra police were posted at Dover's passport control to scan passengers. At the eastern docks, police officers have been making random checks on cars, including the use of mirrors attached to long sticks to check for bombs concealed underneath.

Special undercover police also were placed on vessels making the crossing between England and the continent.

But The Times of London reported today from the Hovercraft terminal at the French port of Boulogne that security there did not appear to match the stringent precautions at British ports.

The newspaper quoted two police inspectors and two customs officers as saying they did not have enough personnel, equipment or the proper premises to conduct adequate checks.

It said the officers demonstrated several ways in which a terrorist could plant a bomb on a Hovercraft without being detected and quoted a police inspector as saying: "There is no real security belt."

A spokesman for border police in the Dutch port of Vlissingen said security in the Netherlands also was less strict than in Britain.

He said extra guards were posted on the quay serving the daily crossing to Sheerness in southeast Britain, and ordered to check cars for weapons and explosives.

Police had received descriptions of two Arabs in connection with the alert, he said.

A British police officer was in Ostend helping Belgian police forces strengthen control on Channel ferries, Belgian police sources said.

Belgian police sources said Sunday that officers at the two Channel ports, Ostend and Zeebrugge, were told to watch for four Arabs driving a white Volvo. They said a car and passengers fitting the description were searched Saturday at Ostend, but released.

A French inspector said guards were looking for a specific kind of car identified in information received from Britain, but he did not elaborate.

Chief Inspector Lee Plummer of the police force in the southeast English county of Kent said Monday night that ferries and Hovercraft were coming and going without disruption despite the search. He said the number of passengers canceling their voyages for fear of attack was negligible.

Linda and John Newland, who returned to Dover on Monday from a weekend trip to Belgium with a group of 35 children, said they were nervous on the return voyage.

"I was very relieved when we docked," said Mrs. Newland. "Every time I heard a noise I jumped. I'm probably neurotic. Some of the children felt frightened too."

Truckdriver Jerry Wilde said, "If there's a police presence, they probably won't try anything."

The security operation will continue — "how long is difficult, if not impossible, to say. We are reviewing its duration as we go," Plummer said.

About 17 million passengers a year pass through Dover, Britain's main ferry link with the European continent 21 miles away. Ferries, Hovercraft and cargo ships cross the English Channel and the North Sea 350 times a day.

Liberty Project Expensive

NEW YORK (AP) — The cost of restoring the Statue of Liberty has gone more than $7 million over budget because of unplanned contract changes, off-the-mark estimates and unexplained fundraising increases, the New York Daily News said today.

Blaine Cliver, National Park Service project manager for the Statue of Liberty, said Monday many of the cost overruns are justifiable, but said he was "shocked" by others.

In a fund-raising appeal mailed last week, Chrysler chief Lee Iacocca, chairman of the private Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, told potential contributors that "due to the magnitude of restoring both the statue and Ellis Island, we had to raise our original budget from $230 million to $265 million." Iacocca did not provide reasons.

Internal foundation documents obtained by the News revealed that as of January, construction work on the statue alone was costing $66.3 million, $3.3 million over budget.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was up marginally today, reversing Monday's slight decline.

In the first hour of trading, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 2.11 to 1760.29.

Losers outpaced gainers by a 3 to two margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Earlier, the government issued a surprise announcement that the nation's gross national product was revised upward to 3.7 percent in the first quarter, from an earlier 3.2 percent preliminary figure.

It was the strongest gain in output of goods and services since the second quarter of 1984 — when the GNP leaped ahead by 5.1 percent.

But because the latest gain was mainly due to an increase of inventories, it was not seen as a positive sign for the economy.

Analysts said that the high level of first-quarter inventories will dampen growth in the second quarter.

Oil prices opened lower today, after rising through the $17 barrier Monday for the first time since early February, following a Friday break past $16.

The crash in oil prices since November had been viewed as a major force driving the bull market, along with prospects of lower interest rates. Analysts said investors have been uncertain which way the market is immediately headed, since both those trends had recently reversed.

Sperry Corp. led the NYSE most active list, dropping 7/8 to 72 3/4. The company reportedly received a sweetened buyout offer — on a take-it-or-leave-it basis of $75 a share from Burroughs Corp.

Zenith was down 7/8 at 27 3/8, while IBM was up 1/2 at 144 3/8.

At 10 a.m., the NYSE's composite index was down 0.14 at 134.45. The American Stock Exchange market value index gained 0.26 to 272.31.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 1.62 to 1,758.18.

City Council Approves Annexation Priorities

By DON REUTER
 Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council has approved a list of annexation priorities which would add Brook Valley, Oakgrove Estates, Colonial Mobile Homes Park and an area on Mumford Road to the city by Dec. 31, 1987.

The Brook Valley annexation includes Azalea Gardens, while the Mumford Road area includes Shady Knoll and Country Square Estates, according to City Manager Gail Meeks, who said the areas are phase one of the annexation plan presented at the council's workshop meeting Monday night.

Cherry Oaks, Camelot, Holly Hills, Tuckahoe, Oakhurst and Floral Park comprise phase two, which should be completed by late 1989 or 1991, Meeks said.

The revision of the annexation plan was made necessary by impending changes in the method of elections, according to Meeks.

"In view of the method of election and in anticipation of the changes that will be adopted this summer, we have started the process of updating," she said. "We need to prioritize and update reports in order to work on the area before we go to the Utilities Commission for water and sewer service."

Meanwhile, the board scheduled a June 12 vote on a resolution adopting the 5-1-1 method of election for members of the council and the mayor.

Under the plan, five City Council members would be elected by district, while the mayor and one council member would be elected at large.

The council also unanimously approved a request for rezoning Burroughs Wellcome property in Pactolus Township from residential/agricultural to unoffensive industry.

The 309-acre tract is located north of State Road 1590, east of U.S. 13 and south of N.C. 903.

The council gave the go-ahead to the in-house radio and telephone committee to seek bids for a system recommended and endorsed by Omnicom Inc., a consulting firm, to replace the city's present communications system.

In response to a recommendation by the parking authority, council members agreed not to pursue the sale of a parking lot at the corner of Fifth Street and Reade Circle to East Carolina University.

ECU planned to beautify the area and make it an entrance to the campus, but parking authority members said deed stipulations during the negotiation process were unsatisfactory.

Lawmakers Back Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 lawmakers today urged President Reagan to take a "step for peace" and support a proposed Contadora peace treaty that could end the conflict with Nicaragua.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, told a news conference that "enormous progress has been made in negotiating a Contadora agreement" that would be signed on June 6 by the five Central American countries of Nicaragua, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica.

But he and the other 101 signers of a letter to Reagan said U.S. support is vital to make the agreement a success. Although the United States is not a party to the Contadora agreement, the lawmakers urged separate direct negotiations between the administration and the leftist Nicaraguan government.

Hamilton said U.S.-Nicaraguan negotiations should focus on obtaining Nicaragua's commitment to halt "certain external conduct" the United States finds objectionable, and, "in return, we will permit the Sandinistas to exist."

Stieb Still Looks For A Win

By The Associated Press
Career victory No. 300 proved an elusive milestone for Phil Niekro, so he can understand the anguish Dave Stieb is feeling as the Toronto pitcher goes after triumph No. 96.

"It's so frustrating it's kind of hard to describe," Stieb said Monday after Niekro pitched the Cleveland Indians to a 6-4 victory over the Blue Jays. "The worst part of this is right now, right after the game."

"I'm just trying to figure out, 'Why? When is it going to end?'"

Stieb, who led the American League in earned run average last season, fell to 0-6 with a 6.33 ERA after nine starts. He gave up five runs on 10 hits and struck out six, but walked five as the Indians snapped a five-game losing skid and halted Toronto's three-game winning streak.

In other American League games, Boston rallied past Minnesota 8-7 and Kansas City beat Texas 6-4. The California at Baltimore game was rained out. There were no games scheduled in the National League.

Niekro, who evened his record at 3-3 with career victory No. 303, struck out four and walked three in his first appearance at Exhibition Stadium since beating Toronto on the final day of the 1985 season for his 300th career triumph. But because that victory came four starts after his 299th victory, Niekro understands Stieb's frustration.

"If you get knocked down, you have to get right back up," Niekro, 47, said of Stieb's early-season woes. "If he feels like he's defeated, it's a tough feeling to shake. But he's going to win if he keeps getting back up. He'll come out of it."

George Bell staked Stieb to a 2-0 lead with a two-run double in the first inning, but the Indians came back with a run in the second, three in the third, one in the fifth and one more in the ninth.

Damaso Garcia's run-scoring single in the fourth and Cliff Johnson's solo homer in the eighth had pulled Toronto to within a run before Joe Carter provided some insurance for Cleveland by driving in his third run of the game with a single in the ninth.

Mel Hall keyed Cleveland's 13-hit attack, going 4-for-4 with a double and triple. He scored three runs and drove in one, and Chris Bando drove in two runs.

"The last at-bat it (hitting for the cycle) crossed my mind," said Hall. "I had the green light to go for it on 3-0, but I didn't get the pitch I wanted."

Hall drew a walk from reliever Jim Acker and pinch-runner Brett Butler promptly moved into scoring position for Carter by stealing his ninth base of the year.

Despite his success against Stieb, Hall praised his opponent by saying, "You don't want to wake him up. I don't know why he's 0-6 throwing the way he is."

Toronto Manager Jimmy Williams said he's lost no confidence in Stieb, but is at a loss to explain his misfortune.

"All I can do is give him the ball again five days down the road," said Williams. "If I'd lost confidence in him, I would have pulled him after four or five innings. But he battled and kept us in the ballgame. We just couldn't get to Niekro."

Stieb, meanwhile, must take Niekro's advice and keep battling.

"If I wasn't throwing well, I'd be the first to tell you," Stieb said. "I know I pitched bad the first three or four starts, but I've pitched well the last three or four.

"I feel I'm pitching well right now, but that's no consolation. It still doesn't cut it with me. Wins are the bottom line. Last year I won the ERA championship (2.48) and went 14-13. To me, that's no good."

Red Sox 8, Twins 7

Jim Rice drew a bases-loaded walk with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning, forcing home the tying run, and Mark Sullivan was then hit by a pitch, giving Boston its victory over Minnesota.

Twins reliever Ron Davis entered the game to start the ninth with Minnesota leading 7-6. But after retiring the first two Boston batters, Davis walked Marty Barrett and gave up a double to Wade Boggs that sent Barrett to third.

Bill Buckner, who hit a home run and an RBI single earlier in the game, was then intentionally walked, loading the bases. Rice fouled off five pitches before walking on a 3-2 delivery. Sullivan was hit in the thigh by an 0-1 pitch from Davis, 1-4.

Joe Sambito worked the ninth for Boston and won his first decision of the season. It was Sambito's first major-league victory since 1981.

Kent Hrbek hit a two-run homer and Tom Brunansky followed with a home run, keying a five-run fifth inning that gave visiting Minnesota a 7-4 lead. Hrbek also had an RBI double in the first.

Royals 6, Rangers 4

George Brett hit a pair of RBI singles and Frank White homered as Kansas City downed Texas in a fight-interrupted game.

Mark Gubicza, 2-4, pitched six innings and won his second straight game and Steve Farr finished up for his third save.

Bobby Witt, 2-3, took the loss. The Rangers' rookie hit Willie Wilson with the first pitch of the game, and Wilson then stole second and scored on a single by Brett.

White hit his fourth homer leading of the fourth and Wilson delivered a two-run single later in the inning.

Pete Incaviglia hit his eighth homer for the host Rangers and Gary Ward hit his second.

Kansas City's Rudy Law and Texas third baseman Steve Buechele got into a fight in the eighth inning after Law slid into third. Buechele shoved Law, and Law swung back. Both benches emptied, but the two players were quickly separated.

Angels-Orioles, Ppd.

The game was called in the bottom of the second inning with the visiting Angels leading 1-0 on Ruppert Jones' home run. The game will be made up Thursday afternoon in Baltimore.

The rainout marked the second straight day the Angels had a game postponed while leading. On Sunday, the Angels were ahead 2-0 on Wally Joyner's home run when their game in Detroit was rained out in the third inning.

Patrick Ewing Named NBA's Rookie Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing's goals for his first professional season were to help the New York Knicks win and to earn the Rookie of the Year award.

He had to settle for one out of two.

Ewing missed 32 games because of injuries to his right knee, left ankle and left elbow, and key teammates Bernard King, Bill Cartwright and Pat Cummings missed all or most of the season with injuries. As a result, the Knicks finished with an NBA-worst 23-59 record.

The 7-foot center, however, had the best statistics in the league among first-year players and that was enough for him to be named Rookie of the Year.

"My rookie season was disappointing in some areas," Ewing said Monday at a news conference announcing the award. "It was very hard to watch your teammates and not be able to play. I felt I played well, but I hope I can play more games and that the team will be better next season."

Ewing, who averaged 20.0 points and 9.0 rebounds in 50 games, received 36 votes from a nationwide panel of media members, more than double his nearest competitor, Xavier McDaniel of Seattle and Utah's Karl Malone were second and third, respectively, with 16½ and 14½ votes.

Four other rookies also received first-place votes. Spud Webb of Atlanta had four, Manute Bol of Washington and Charles Oakley of Chicago three each and Benoit Benjamin of the Los Angeles Clippers one.

Ewing said if King, sidelined the entire 1985-86 season with torn ligaments in his knee, and Cartwright, who played only two games with stress fractures in his foot, can return on a full-time basis, the Knicks will have a contending team.

"We need Bernard to be Bernard and Cartwright to be Cartwright and a good draft," Ewing said. The Knicks have the fifth choice in the upcoming draft.

Ewing said he began to doubt whether he would win the rookie award after newspapers questioned his lack of playing time. But the fact that he led rookies in scoring, rebounding and minutes per game (35.4) swayed the voters.

"Everyone on the Knicks is a winner," Ewing said. "We all won in high school and college, but the breaks didn't go our way. But I didn't let myself get frustrated with losing because if I did I would have stopped playing hard. Inner pride kept me playing hard."

But Ewing didn't play at all after March 6, and he finally underwent surgery to remove floating tissue in the knee.

"When I had that gown on before the surgery I had some second thoughts about it," Ewing said. "But I knew I had to get it done, so I did it. Getting injured made me glad I had stayed in college to get my degree. It made me realize your body can carry you only so far."

Knicks General Manager Scotty Stirling said he believed the Georgetown graduate deserved the award despite his lack of playing time.

"Center is the toughest position to excel at as a rookie because you are going against great centers almost every night," Stirling said. "The only other top rookie center was Benjamin and he is indicative of how tough it is for a rookie to play center because he didn't start playing well until the second half of the season."

No Bid For ECU Nine

East Carolina's baseball Pirates missed out on a bid to the NCAA regionals Monday as 40 teams across the nation were lined up to play in area competition starting Thursday.

The Pirates apparently were the 41st team on the list for the NCAA, according to a spokesman for the baseball selection committee. It came down to a choice between East Carolina, 40-10, and Southern Illinois, 39-20, and the Salukis were picked over ECU. Southern faces Texas in Austin in the first round.

Two other North Carolina schools were given at large bids, N.C. State, a team beaten two of three times by the Pirates and Southern Conference runner-up Appalachian State. State finished 35-13, losing in the ACC finals to Georgia Tech while ASU ended up with a 40-11 record.

East Carolina, which tied for first place in the Colonial Athletic Association during the regular season, lost in the CAA tournament finals to Richmond, 24-29, which faces Oklahoma State in Stillwater, Okla. in the first round.

Rose Tops Laney, 1-0; Williamston Advances

Rose High School pushed over a run in the bottom of the first inning and made it stand up for a 1-0 win over Wilmington Laney in the first round of the 3A/4A State Softball Playoffs Monday afternoon.

The Rampettes scored their run in the first. Gina Parrott singled, but was put out trying to advance to third on Vicki Parrott's single. Lisa Harkley then got a hit and Suzanne Tadlock reached on an error which allowed Vicki Parrott to score.

Rose then played outstanding defense the rest of the way, including a double play in the sixth inning when Laney put runners on first and second with one out.

Then, in the seventh, Rose came up with a key play to end the game. Laney loaded the bases with two away, and the final batter grounded back to Kim Bridges on the mound. Bridges fired to catcher Melissa Pruden, who fumbled the low throw, then picked it up just in time to force the sliding runner from third.

Gina Parrott and Harkley each picked up two hits for Rose, while Sutton and Parker each had a pair for Laney.

Rose, now 17-2, will advance to the second round of the tournament, playing host to the winner of today's game between South West Edgecombe and Wilson Fike, later this week.

JAMESVILLE — Charles B. Aycock High School, the third place team from the Eastern Carolina 2-A Conference, romped to a 16-3 victory over Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference champ in the first round of the 1A/2A Softball Playoffs Monday.

The loss eliminated the Lady Bullets, while Aycock advances to the second round of play later this week.

Aycock jumped into the lead in the first inning of the contest, scoring three times. Connie Lancaster singled and Donna Best's fly ball was misjudged, going for a two-run homer. Kelly Malpass then singled and came around on an error on the play.

Jamesville got into the act in its half of the inning, scoring twice. Dana Byrum started things off with a home run. Cindy Getchell, Renee Brown and Senita Rogers each followed with singles, the latter scoring Getchell to trim the lead to 3-2.

Aycock got what proved to be the winning run in the second, taking a 4-2 lead. Susan Lancaster and Javita Whitley both singled, as did Connie Lancaster, loading the bases. Caffina Powell then singled in the first Lancaster.

Aycock went on to add one in the third, six in the fourth, four in the sixth and one in the seventh. Mary Atkins had a three-run homer in the fourth while Susan Lancaster had a solo homer in the sixth.

Jamesville got its other run in the second.

Atkins led the Aycock hitting with four, while Connie Lancaster and Arronda Elliott each had three. Donna Best, Powell, Liddy Jackson, Crystal Kennedy, Susan Lancaster, and Whitley each had two hits.

Byrum had three hits for Jamesville.

Jamesville closes out the year with an 18-3 record.

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School, the champion in the Northeastern Conference, downed Albemarle Conference third seed Currituck, 5-1, in the first round of the State 1A/3A Softball Playoffs Monday.

Williamston took the lead in the first inning of the contest, pushing one run across. With two away, Christy Lilley singled and Shirley Godard reached on an error. Wendy Johnson then singled to score Lilley.

Currituck then came back in the top of the third with a run, tying the score.

But Williamston pushed over two in the bottom of the inning to move ahead for good. Lilley walked and Godard again reached on an error. Sacrifices by Johnson and Susan Forehand brought them around to make it 3-1.

Williamston added two more in the fifth inning to wrap up the Lady Tiger scoring.

Johnson led the Tiger hitting with two, while Snyder had two for Currituck.

Williamston is now 11-2 on the year and advances to face the winner of the Greene Central-Bath game later this week.

Steffi Graf May Be Ending Domination Of Navratilova

BERLIN (AP) — The long domination of women's tennis by Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd may be nearing an end, thanks to West German teen-ager Steffi Graf.

Graf, a modest 16-year-old, is challenging the two long-reigning leaders and is surpassing even her own goals.

"My aim for this year was to stabilize my position in the top 10 in the world. Now I am already No. 3," Graf said Monday after beating Navratilova 6-2, 6-3 in 64 minutes to win the West German Open.

It was Graf's 20th straight singles victory and fourth consecutive tournament championship.

It was also Graf's first career victory over Navratilova, and the world's No. 1 female player broke in to tears after her upset defeat. In three previous encounters, Graf had failed to take even a set off the American.

In their last match prior to Berlin, Navratilova demolished Graf 6-2, 6-2 March 22 in the Virginia Slims Finals in New York.

Since then, Graf has been unstoppable. Her first-ever tournament victory came in Hilton Head, S.C., where she defeated both Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and Lloyd, the No. 2-ranked female in the world.

Graf then won at Amelia Island, Fla., where she outplayed compatriot Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, and in Indianapolis, where she defeated Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina in the final of the U.S. Clay Courts Championships.

With her victory over Navratilova, Graf has now beaten all of the top-ranked players this year and has emerged as a title contender at the French Open, which starts next Monday on the clay courts of Paris.

"Navratilova is still the No. 1 in the world. And Chris Evert Lloyd is still unchallengeable for No. 2 when she plays faultlessly," Graf said. "But they don't like playing on clay."

"Whether I can get even closer to them in Paris, well, we'll just have to wait and see. Before, I used to be a little bit scared of playing Martina and Chris. Now, it's their turn to be scared of me."

The No. 1 ranking among women's tennis players has belonged to Lloyd or Navratilova for so long that it's difficult to remember when someone else was at the top. In fact, it was 1974 and the name was Billie Jean King.

Between them, the Lloyd and Navratilova have won 30 Grand Slam singles championships.

Graf said that for the time being at least she was content to leave the No. 1 ranking in familiar hands.

"I don't want to put extra pressure on myself," she said. "I am going to relax at my home in Bruehl, near Heidelberg, where I can have all the peace I want. I will read some books and a lot of newspapers to catch up on world affairs, in which I am very interested."

Graf's father, Peter, who also is her coach, said his daughter is very relaxed before matches, often deeply involved reading books in the locker rooms right up to the moment she is called out to the court.

Graf trains for long hours every day and her father has installed a court near the family house. She lifts weights and also runs and jumps rope with weights tied to her ankles to improve her speed.

On court, she displays formidable power. A right-hander, she has a punishing forehand and a wicked service.

Graf's latest impressive series has finally helped her steal some media attention from another German tennis star, Boris Becker, who stunned the world by becoming the youngest man, at 17, to win Wimbledon last year.

Becker, who is having an up-and-down season this year, was credited for promoting the game in West Germany and creating a tennis boom. Graf doesn't mind living in Becker's shadow.

"I am a very relaxed type, and I am not arrogant," she said.

While Becker's sensational rise had focused attention on West Germany's men tennis players, it is the women who have been quietly climbing the ladder of success.

Becker, at No. 5, is the only West German man ranked among the top 20 in the world.

Graf is No. 3, and Kohde-Kilsch is No. 4 among the women, making West Germany the second most powerful nation after the United States in women's tennis, at least according to rankings.

Larry Bird's Presence Has Been Key For Celts

BOSTON (AP) — At one point in Sunday's game, Boston had three guards on the floor. Another time, they had just one. However, a key to their success was Larry Bird's presence both times.

The Celtics demonstrated their versatility Sunday in a 111-98 victory over Milwaukee that gave them a four-game sweep of the NBA Eastern Conference finals. That versatility may be demonstrated again in the championship round.

In the second quarter against the Bucks, Boston had guards Dennis Johnson, Danny Ainge and Jerry Sichting on the floor with Bird and Kevin McHale up front. In the fourth quarter, Bird and Danny Ainge were in the backcourt while McHale was up front with two 7-footers, Robert Parish and Bill Walton.

"You might see it more," Bird said of the triple towers tactic.

It won't be seen before next Monday, at the earliest.

Houston holds a 3-1 lead over the Los Angeles Lakers and can wrap up the best-of-seven Western Conference final Wednesday night in Los Angeles. If necessary, games will be played in Houston Friday night and Los Angeles Monday.

The first two games of the championship round will be here next Monday and Thursday if the Western series ends before Sunday. If Houston and Los Angeles are forced to a seventh game, the first two games of the finals will be here May 29 and June 1.

The Celtics were much more efficient. They needed just six days to eliminate Milwaukee and earned two days off before resuming practice Wednesday. Bird made sure it didn't go any longer as he hit four three-point field goals in the final four minutes to cap a 30-point performance Sunday.

"He doesn't surprise us," Walton said, "but he sure impresses us. He's unbelievable. He gets in these zones where it seems the basket is eight feet across."

"I really didn't have my rhythm earlier in the game," Bird said. "I didn't feel I had a groove until the game was on the line."

Boston played without backup forward Scott Wedman, who fractured two ribs in Saturday's victory and could miss the entire final round. His absence led to some strange combinations.

"Our guys are extremely intelligent," Boston assistant coach Jimmy Rodgers said. "To ask a guy to run plays as a guard that he normally runs as a forward is a great tribute to our players."

The Celtics did that in the fourth period when Bird broke open the game.

"We can adjust to situations," assistant coach Chris Ford said. "We didn't even discuss it with our players."

In the three-guard alignment, Johnson, who usually brings the ball up, was the small forward.

"It gave us some quickness on defense and some quickness in the running game," Rodgers said. "It was something they (the Bucks) hadn't really seen. That's a factor."

The Celtics would be less likely to use that small lineup against Houston, which has Akeem Olatunji and Ralph Sampson up front and is one of the best equipped NBA teams to contend with Boston's powerful inside game.

"The fans would like us to play L.A. and I think we probably would, too," McHale said of the defending champions, who the Celtics have faced in the last two championship series. "I know it's a lot easier to shoot over (Laker forward) Kurt Rambis than it is to shoot over Akeem and Ralph. Houston probably matches up better with us than the Lakers do."

Eight of Boston's 11 playoff victories have been by at least 11 points and its average margin of victory was 14.6 points. The Celtics had finished the regular season by winning 17 of their last 19 games by an average of 16.3 points. Boston is 28-3 since March 11, winning 21 of those games by 11 points or more, and 57-9 since Dec. 28.

At home, the Celtics have won 38 consecutive games and are 47-1 for the season. Their only loss was a 121-103 decision to Portland on Dec. 6, nearly 5½ months ago.

"I'm not so sure Boston isn't on a different planet compared to us mortal teams," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said.

Three Ink For Track

East Carolina University women's track coach Wayne Miller has announced the signing of three to letters-of-intent.

They are Sabrina Braswell, Dawn Sweeney and Vanessa Smith.

Braswell, a senior at Wilson Fike High School, is a sprinter and has qualified for the upcoming state championships. Although she did not run the quarter-mile this year, she is considered to be the top runner in the state in that event.

Sweeney, from Chesapeake, Md., is an intermediate hurdler, ranked second in the state of Maryland for the second consecutive year.

Smith, from South Granville High School in Creedmore, is ranked as the number two sprinter in the state and, according to Miller, is also considered one of the top prospects in the state.

"I am very pleased with this year's signees," Miller said. "I would have to say they are the best since I've been here. We've been able to attract some good athletes in the past, but Smith is our first real blue-chipper."

Carstarphen Takes 1st

RALEIGH — Greenville Swim Club member Johnny Carstarphen took three first place finishes and added four seconds in the Goodstuff Swim Meet held this past weekend in Raleigh.

Swimming in the 15-18-year-old boys division, Carstarphen won the 100-yard freestyle, the 500-yard freestyle and the 200-yard backstroke events.

His time in the 100 was 54.92, an A time, while his 500 time was 5:29.42. His backstroke time was 2:22.9.

He also took four seconds: in the 50 free, 25.33 (A time); 100 back, 1:06.24; 200 free, 2:02.28; and 200 individual medley, 2:20.56.

Time Running Out For Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — History and the powerful Houston Rockets are working against the Los Angeles Lakers, who are on the verge of becoming the 17th consecutive NBA champion to fail to successfully defend the crown.

"We're not out of it, but we're reeling," Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said. "If I were on Houston, I'd be very confident right now."

However, the 39-year-old Abdul-Jabbar, who has scored more points than any player in NBA history, expressed some optimism, saying, "We've been in all the games. It's not like we've been swamped."

The Rockets dropped the opener of the Western Conference finals to the Lakers 119-107, but won the next three games by scores of 112-102, 117-109, and 105-95 to take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

The fifth game will be played Wednesday night at the Forum.

"I don't think they can win three in a row," said Houston center Akeem Olatunji, the star of the series so far. "(But) I don't think they'll give up. They're a very experienced ball club."

Only four teams in NBA playoff history have come from a 3-1 deficit to win a series, each time in the conference finals. And no NBA team has won consecutive championships since Boston accomplished the feat in 1969.

One of the teams to rebound from a 3-1 series deficit were the Lakers, who did it against Phoenix in the Western Conference finals in 1970.

The last team to do it was Boston against Philadelphia in the Eastern Conference finals in 1981. The Celtics then beat Houston in the finals to win the NBA title.

The coach of that Boston team? None other than current Houston Coach Bill Fitch.

"All I know is if we win the next one, we win the series," Fitch said. "I've been in a locker room where we've been down 3-1, and I'm wearing a (championship) ring."

Should the Lakers win Wednesday night, a sixth game would be played at the Summit in Houston Friday night. A seventh game, if needed, will be played at the Forum next Monday.

"Either we do it now or we sit here at home and watch them play the Celtics on TV," Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Lakers said. "There's got to be some answer — but I haven't found it..."

One answer for the Lakers would be to contain Olatunji. The 7-foot Nigerian is averaging 31 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots per game in the series.

"When he gets the ball down low, there is no man in basketball that can stop him," Johnson said. "He does it quicker than anybody. When he gets the ball inside, he's got his shot up."

"He is phenomenal," Houston's Jim Petersen said. "He really has carried us."

Lakers Coach Pat Riley praised Olatunji's efforts, but added, "It's not a one-man team. ... If it was, they wouldn't be here (ahead 3-1) today."

Riley is aware of his team's predicament. Nevertheless, he made a bold prediction.

"We're going to win Wednesday, and then come back (to Houston) in Game 6 and put the pressure on them," he said. "I'll be revved Wednesday. The players will be revved. It'll be interesting."

Riley had some words of advice for reporters after the Lakers were beaten by the Rockets in Sunday's fourth game.

"If I were all of you, I would be wary before you shovel the last bunch of dirt over our faces. Anybody goes ahead now and hammers the last nail in the coffin might be sorry."

Bailey In Two Wins

Christopher Bailey of the Bicycle Post Racing Team of Greenville won two races over the weekend, the first covering a distance of 51 miles and the second, 20 miles.

On Saturday in Fayetteville, Bailey beat out a field of 70 entrants to win the All-American Road Race, a senior IV classification race. Teammate Andrew Wilson took seventh place.

On Sunday, Bailey was advanced to a new and more competitive classification for the Aiken Bicycle Criterium, in Aiken, S.C., the Senior III Division. Bailey, who had never before raced in this category, took first place over a field of approximately 45 entrants.

Andretti Moved To Pack's Rear

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Since his only Indianapolis 500 victory 17 years ago, Mario Andretti's career at the famed Speedway has been one frustrating struggle after another. Sunday's race will be no exception.

The latest blow, announced Monday, was that Andretti will have to start 33rd in Sunday's race because he will be driving his backup race car and not the car that had been the fifth-fastest qualifier. The latter car was wrecked in a crash during practice last week.

That means a start from dead last in the field, a spot from which no winner has ever emerged in the 69-year history of the 500.

"This is not something I'm looking forward to, but there is no alternative," Andretti said in a prepared statement released Monday through spokesman Michael Knight of the Newman-Haas Racing team.

"Fortunately, I had some practice time in the backup car before the accident, and we were able to work on a race setup during practice last weekend," said Andretti, who was in Milwaukee on Monday to test another car for the next race on the Indy-car series.

His primary Lola race car was returned to England for repairs after last week's crash. Knight said Monday that the severely damaged tub and chassis cannot be repaired in time for the race. Under U.S. Auto Club rules, any time a car or driver is substituted, the replacement must start at the rear of the pack.

Knight said that Andretti's crew originally assessed the damage to the car as severe and not likely repairable.

"But the decision was made that because of the difference in starting positions from fifth to 33rd, they would make an attempt to see if the car could be repaired."

It won't be the first time Andretti has had to start at the back, but he "anticipates this year will be the most difficult, because the current generation of Indy cars creates more air turbulence than in the past; that and just the competitive nature of the field," Knight said.

The 33 qualifiers averaged a record 210.35 mph, the fastest lineup in auto racing history. The field will be headed by two-time winner Rick Mears, who set records of 217.581 mph for one lap and 216.828 for all four qualifying laps.

Andretti qualified at 212.300 mph, which would have given him a start from the middle of the second row. Instead, the 46-year-old driver will take the green starting flag from the outside of the 11th row, next to final qualifiers George Snider and Gary Bettenhausen.

"Mario said he is certainly disappointed," Knight said. "However, under the circumstances, there is no other alternative. Now it's just a matter of waiting to see what happens at the start of the race. You can't plan strategy for it. You just have to take your best shot and try and move up."

Andretti's record at Indianapolis has included two runner-up finishes to go with his 1969 victory. But he has also crashed five times during his 20 previous starts — the most by any driver in history — and he had a disputed victory taken away from him four months after the 1981 race when a special USAC panel overturned a penalty against eventual winner Bobby Unser.

Andretti, a former world driving champion, also had to start at the rear two other years at Indianapolis when conflicting Formula One races kept him from qualifying and other drivers got his cars into the lineup.

"I don't think he feels jinxed," Knight said. "Mario is basically an optimistic person. But he's also a realistic person. His attitude is accepting the reality of the situation."

In 1978, Andretti was unable to qualify because of Formula One racing commitments in Belgium, and he started 33rd in a car qualified for him by Mike Hiss. In 1981, the first weekend of qualifications was rained out and Andretti was driving at Monaco the next weekend, so his car was qualified by Wally Dallenbach.

Andretti started 32nd instead of 33rd in 1981 because of a later substitution of Tim Richmond for Snider. Andretti eventually led the

South African Students Protest Raids

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Hundreds of students at Johannesburg's main university stayed out of class today to protest South Africa's military raids on three neighboring countries, and 13 people were arrested.

In Zimbabwe, the foreign ministers of six countries bordering South Africa met to discuss the attacks on the capitals of Zimbabwe, Botswana and Zambia in which at least three people were killed and 15 were injured.

In London, members of a Commonwealth delegation seeking to mediate between South Africa and the African National Congress, the main guerrilla group fighting white minority rule, said their initiative would continue despite the attacks.

South African military officials said Monday's raids in and around the capitals of Harare, Gaborone and Lusaka were aimed at ANC targets. It was South Africa's first major assault inside Zimbabwe and Zambia. Since 1980, the South African military has sent commandos against alleged ANC facilities in Lesotho, Mozambique and most recently Botswana, where 12 people were killed in a raid last June.

The attacks provoked an international outcry and were condemned by the United States and Britain.

In Johannesburg, about 800 students the University of the Witwatersrand skipped classes and gathered on a campus plaza, chanting and singing in protest against the raids. Most students at the university are white, but the school admits students of other races as well.

Lt. Pierre Louw, a police spokesman, said the rally was declared illegal. Authorities said 13 people were arrested. Police said demonstrators threw stones at two police vehicles and several private cars. Witnesses said some of the protesters at one point rushed at a group of police, shouting "Kill the Boers."

Later today, about 2,000 people gathered at the university auditorium to hear speakers denounce the raid and demand the release of jailed ANC leader Nelson Mandela.

In another development, South Africa's currency, the rand, dropped sharply in value, and foreign bankers said the international outcry over the raids and fear of economic sanctions were the major causes.

The rand opened Monday morning, before word of the raids spread, at 45.8 U.S. cents. It dropped to 44.8 cents by the end of the day, and fell to 42.5 cents in early trading today.

In London, Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo, a member of the Commonwealth delegation, said "the raids will have little effect on our peace effort."

Obasanjo, a former Nigerian military leader, said the delegation, known as the Eminent Persons Group, met Monday with eight South African Cabinet ministers before returning to Britain.

"We had a frank exchange of views and the ball is now in their (South Africa's) court," Obasanjo told reporters at London's Heathrow Airport.

Another delegation member, former Australian prime minister Malcolm Fraser, said in a television interview that "it is still not impossible that there could be negotiations between the government and black leaders of all groups."

The three attacked countries are members of the Commonwealth, a 49-member group of Britain and its former colonies. The delegation has been trying to lay the foundation for negotiations between South African and the ANC. One peace proposal would have South Africa release

Mandela and recognize the ANC in exchange for a guerrilla cease-fire.

The group has said that unless firm progress is made, the Commonwealth was expected to impose economic sanctions against South Africa later this year.

In Harare, the foreign ministers of the so-called frontline states — Angola, Botswana, Mozambique, Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe — met for talks that had been arranged before the raids.

Zambian Foreign Minister Luke Mwananshiku said the raids were not the main purpose of the meeting, but said the ministers would also touch on the events that have just occurred.

Editorial comments in South African newspapers today ranged from criticism to support.

The pro-government Citizen said the attacks were equivalent to the recent U.S. air strikes against Libya.

"We hope that countries like the United States and Britain will realize, after the heat of the moment, that South Africa has acted against the ANC in order to protect its own citizens from terrorist attacks," the Citizen said. "In this, it is no different to the United States, which launched air attacks on Libya because of the terrorist activities masterminded by Col. Khadafy," the newspaper said.

Business Day, a Johannesburg financial newspaper, said the raids would have a severe effect on South Africa's economy, increasing pressure on foreign investors to withdraw.

"Behind the cry of 'terrorism' lurks a nastier word: Failure," said the editorial. "The political failure is obvious to all; more worrisome is the implicit failure of the security forces within the borders, which forces them to seek politically sensitive targets farther afield."

Support Still Short For Saudi Arms Sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it has not mustered enough votes yet to salvage a big arms sale for Saudi Arabia and must do "a lot of convincing" to get members of Congress to switch their votes.

Reagan has until midnight Wednesday to veto a congressional resolution of disapproval against the $354 million sale of missiles, including shoulder-fired Stingers.

An administration official, speaking Monday on condition of anonymity, said the White House could count 30 Senate votes against an override of Reagan's veto, four votes short of the number needed to sustain the president if all members are present.

Another official, also speaking privately, called the 30-vote estimate "pretty optimistic."

"We do not have the votes now, and it is a long haul and a lot of convincing needs to be done in order to get these votes," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday. "We have made some progress and we have narrowed the gap, but much more needs to be done."

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., after conferring with Reagan at the White House, said, "I think there's still some work to be done." He indicated the matter will not be considered until after Congress returns from its Memorial Day recess June 2.

Oil Prices Go Over $17 Level

By JOHN C. GIVEN
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK — Oil futures prices hit their highest levels in more than 14 weeks, driven upward in part by heavy demand for gasoline, short supplies for the kinds of crude used to make it and technical market factors, analysts say.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed Monday at $17.16 a 42-gallon barrel, up $1 from Friday's settlement price.

June contracts for refined products also showed strong gains on Monday. Unleaded and regular gasoline both were up more than 1 cent over Friday's closing prices — unleaded at 55.75 cents a gallon, up from 54.38 cents, and regular at 55.76, up from 54.41 cents.

In less than three weeks, crude prices have soared by nearly $4 a barrel. The rally marks a sharp reversal of the precipitous drops that took place a few months earlier, when oil was plunging from a late-November price near $32 a barrel.

Near-month contracts had not traded for more than $17 since Feb. 7, while Friday's close was the first time since Feb. 14 that oil had sold for more than $16.

Contracts for future delivery can be purchased for specific months many months into the future. Among these monthly contracts, the near-month contract is the closest available contract to the time at which the purchase is made.

Sales of futures contracts change in the middle of each month. Thus, today is the last day the June contract will be sold. July becomes the near-month contract on Wednesday.

After hovering mainly at levels between $11 and $14 per barrel between March and April, the June contract, which closed at $13.34 on April 30, broke through $14 to $14.73 on May 2, and passed the $15 mark, at $15.21, on May 7.

Madison Galbraith, senior energy specialist at Merrill Lynch Energy Futures, said there was "a lot of refinery buying" in the crude market.

"What it comes down to is, they haven't bought it, they need it, and they're going to buy it," he said.

Over the last two months, gasoline demand has picked up, as dealers prepare for the Memorial Day opening of the summer driving season.

Refineries have increased their demand for crude by 1.45 million barrels daily since March 21. But there have also been short supplies of the lightweight grades used to make gasoline and other distillates, such as jet fuel and heating oil, said Peter Beutel, an analyst at Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc.

Two of those widely used light crude grades are West Texas Intermediate and Brent crude from the North Sea.

Many Norwegian and British rigs have been shut down for annual summer maintenance, while at the same time, refiners are still feeling the impact of the strike which shut down Norway's rigs last month, taking 900,000 barrels a day out of production, he said.

Accordingly, "the refineries are running a lot of heavier grades to make up for the lights. But the heavier grades don't have as high a yield in product, resulting in higher demand for crude overall," Beutel said.

The fact that Tuesday is the last day of trading on the June contract also helped support prices, said Edward Dellamonte, an analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

Cosby Show Changing Face Of TV Prime Time

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Almost singlehandedly, without a six-shooter or a screeching tire, Bill Cosby has changed the face of prime time, raising its comedy consciousness and reducing its violent streak.

Two years ago, Cosby said he was returning to prime time because television's mayhem level had become dangerous to his family's health. TV, he said, had degenerated into a barrage of cars, guns, hookers and pimps, and he wanted to offer a positive alternative.

Success breeds change, and the networks' 1986-87 schedules seem to reflect more of Cosby's attitude and approach to programming. Sitcoms are up, shoot-'em-ups are down.

Led by "The Cosby Show," which is so popular that even its repeats, if compiled separately, would be TV's No. 2-ranked series, situation comedies averaged a 17.6 rating in 1985-86, up from 15.4 in the previous campaign.

Action-adventure, meanwhile, fell from 15.9 to 14.7 (percent of the nation's 85.9 million TV homes.) So it's no surprise that sitcoms, pronounced dead the season before Cosby arrived when none made the Top 10, will dominate this fall.

ABC will have 10 comedies, CBS six and NBC 13 for a total of 29, nine more than began 1985-86. There are sitcoms every night, including three nights when they'll go head-to-head on two networks.

On Monday, NBC's "ALF," starring a wise-cracking, furry extraterrestrial, will compete with CBS' "Kate & Allie." ABC and CBS have opposing comedies on Wednesday, including ABC's "Perfect Strangers" against CBS' new "Together We Stand."

On Saturday, NBC's "Facts of Life" is scheduled against Lucille Ball's "Life With Lucy" on ABC. Then, NBC's "227" goes against "The Ellen Burstyn Show."

Clearly, the networks think home is where the laughs are. Next season, you'll see several variations on Cosby's nuclear-family theme.

In "Together We Stand," Elliott Gould and Dee Wallace Stone will be parents to a color-coded collection of natural and adopted kids: a blonde girl, red-haired boy, black girl, Eurasian boy. Alf, the alien next door, will live in semi-harmony with Ma, Pa, the two kids, but not the family cat, which Alf eyes for his next meal.

With comedy on the rise, the bottom has fallen out of the hard-action market. Each network will introduce only one bullet-riddled series.

NBC has "Crime Story," which is about crime-stoppers battling Chicago's Mob in the 1960s. ABC's hard-action entry is "Cold Steel and Neon," in which a sensitive detective juggles dangerous police work with raising two teen-agers. CBS has "Downtown," about a cop saddled with four parolees.

After screening the "Downtown" pilot for ad agency types, CBS said the violence in future episodes would be toned down.

Even that noted male chauvinist

"Mike Hammer" will show a softer side next season, CBS said.

As will ABC's "MacGyver," a Mr. Wizard-inspired daredevil who uses everyday items to extricate himself from sticky situations. "We're going to rely more on the emotional side," said ABC Entertainment President Brandon Stoddard. "But he'll also be stopping World War III with a ham on rye."

Most incoming dramas are softer, examining professions and people that don't wear badges. They include a female surgeon (CBS' "Kay O'Brien, Surgeon"), an alien who returns to Earth to raise his orphaned son (ABC's "Starman") and a country lawyer (NBC's "Matlock").

"Our House," a family drama that NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff describes as a cross between "Highway to Heaven" and "The Cosby Show," stars Wilford Brimley as a grandfather who opens his home to his widowed daughter-in-law and her three kids.

"Our House" will be launched after — guess what? — "The Cosby Show" before it moves to a regular Sunday spot.

And there's more "Cosby" impact: It boosted another news program into prime time. Since ABC failed miserably against "Cosby" with entertainment shows, the network opted for news in the time period.

Study Shows TV Viewers Watch Screen Half Time

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — People watch television only about half the time their sets are on, and spend the rest of the time talking, eating, ironing, dressing their children, playing the flute or cuddling on the couch, according to an Oxford University study.

In a study of TV viewing habits, 20 families agreed to have a video camera and microphone placed in their living rooms to watch them watching, or not watching, television.

"If one ever thought people were slaves to TV, the tapes dispel the myth," said Dr. Peter Collett of the Department of Experimental Psychology at Oxford University, who conducted the study.

"The tapes provide a peephole on family life," he said. "You're watching people's lives in a way one could never gain access to if one were simply a guest in their house."

Researchers saw screaming matches, parents reprimanding children, fits of itching and fidgeting, and delightful mini-dramas like a 5-year-old girl stealing a drink of her father's beer, he said.

The tapes also provided an insight into how people choose and reject programs and commercials, exercising a sophistication which Collett says advertisers and program-makers underestimate.

Britain's Channel 4 network showed brief vignettes from the 350 hours of footage Monday night in a program titled "A Part of the Furniture."

Collett, a social psychologist, is studying how family life competes with television. He chose 20 Oxford families with at least two children each.

For a week, each family lived with Collett's C-Box, which looks like a large old-fashioned television set but contains a camera and recording equipment that is turned on automatically with the accompanying television set.

NBC Changes Logo

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's peacock, which has shared corporate billing with the letter "N" for several years, is flying solo as the network's new logo. In an unpublicized move, the "N" was unceremoniously dumped.

The new symbol has six feathers instead of 11 and the bird's head now faces to the viewers' right, rather than left, said Bud Rukeyser, NBC's executive vice president for corporate communications.

The deposed "N," controversial in itself when it was unveiled in the 1970s and eventually uncovered as the same symbol as Nebraska public television, will move into logo retirement, joining the Olympic rings that were incorporated into ABC's visual identity before the 1984 Olympics.

In an interview Monday, Rukeyser referred to the former NBC symbol as "the proud N."

NBC's new logo actually was unveiled May 12 during the broadcast of "NBC's 60th Anniversary Celebration." It now is NBC's regular symbol on the air and official network stationery. Rukeyser said old letterheads still may be used by NBC staffers. The proud "N" is not entirely in disfavor, he noted.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: THE FORMER GREAT AIRPLANE PILOT PUTS UNIFORMS ON HANGARS

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Q equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Uranian Moon May Show Very Early Development Stages

By WARREN E. LEARY
 AP Science Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Miranda, the innermost moon of Uranus, was in the midst of a cataclysmic transformation when it became frozen in time, an event recorded billions of years later by the passing Voyager 2 spacecraft, scientists say.

When the robot-spacecraft sped past the Uranian system of dark moons and fractured rings on Jan. 24, it unveiled many mysteries and rewrote the textbooks concerning the surroundings of the gaseous planet.

But much attention has gone to Miranda, the tiniest of the five major moons, which scientists said Monday has some of the most interesting geological features seen anywhere in the solar system.

The scarred face of the moon, locked in a state of suspended animation in the cold reaches of space, is punctuated with twisting fractures, flows, valleys and escarpments symbolizing a disruptive period in its past.

"Miranda may represent the frozen record of a very infantile stage of planet formation," said Larry A. Soderblom of the U.S. Geological Survey, chief geological specialist for the Voyager mission.

Summarizing Voyager findings at the spring meeting of the American Geophysical Union, Soderblom said the major Uranian moons appear to be about 50 percent water ice, 20 percent carbon-based and nitrogen-based materials and frozen gases, and 30 percent rock.

Early in the formation of the solar system more than 4 billion years ago, Miranda heated up and became dynamic, perhaps because of tidal interactions caused by the gravity of the planet and other moons, he said.

"Somehow, there wasn't enough energy to drive Miranda to complete its transformation," Soderblom said.

"When a body such as this has an ambient temperature of minus 350 degrees Fahrenheit, even heating it to minus 200 degrees is considered hot," Soderblom said in an interview. "That would be enough to turn solids into cold, fluid material oozing through fractures and valleys — kind of a slush of liquid methane and other things."

Four months after the Voyager passed within 50,600 miles of the blue-green planet's cloudtops, other researchers pulling together initial findings of the mission say Uranus and its moons present many other mysteries.

"So many things about this planet, its orientation, its magnetic field, its ring system and the geology of its moons are quite a puzzle," said Dr. Edward Stone of the California Institute of Technology, chief project scientist.

One strange discovery about the odd planet, which lies on its side with its south pole pointing at the sun, is that the axis of its magnetic field is so out of whack, he continued. While the Earth's spin axis and magnetic axis are in rough alignment, Uranus' magnetic field axis is tilted 60 degrees off its spin axis, he said.

The 1,819-pound spacecraft, now on its way to Neptune for a 1989 rendezvous, also discovered 10 new moons, bringing to 15 the known number of Uranian satellites. The largest of the new moons is about 100 miles in diameter, bigger than most asteroids.

Two of the newly discovered moons are so-called shepherding moons, ones whose orbits on either side of a ring keep the ring from floating apart. Stone said scientists had expected to find at least 18 such satellites serving as ring guides.

"We may find more moons as we examine the data more closely," he told a news briefing. "But, like the rings, they are pitch black and we could not see them if they are less than 10 miles in diameter."

Voyager discovered two distinct new rings, adding to the nine known previously from Earth-based observations, and several fragments or partial rings, Stone said.

The dark rings surrounding Uranus apparently formed after the planet did and may be the remnants of a crushed moon, he said.

Canine Detectives

With international terrorism on the rise, more airports are using dogs to sniff out bombs and explosives. To say that dogs have an excellent sense of smell is an understatement. Alsatians, for example, have 220 million olfactory cells compared with five million in humans. Bomb-smelling dogs must be willing to retrieve an object repeatedly without losing interest, and to sit or lie down upon discovering a bomb. Dogs can also be trained to find narcotics.

Typhoon Batters Soloman Islands

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) — Typhoon Namu battered Guadalcanal and the rest of the Solomon Islands with 115 mph winds that destroyed homes, flooded rivers and knocked out power. News reports said at least 50 people were missing and thousands were homeless.

The out-of-season storm roared in early Monday, according to Dykes Angiki, news editor of the Solomon Islands Broadcasting Corp. It did its worst damage outside the capital of Honiara on Guadalcanal, the site of the first U.S. victory against the Japanese in World War II.

A relief official was quoted as saying he feared the typhoon had blown away most homes on outlying islands, but the loss of power made it difficult to determine.

Angiki said a public holiday was declared in Honiara today to speed the clean up of uprooted trees, wrecked houses, and flooding. "It's really a working holiday," Angiki said. "The floodwaters are subsiding and teams are going around cleaning up the mess."

Namu weakened today and was heading toward Rennell Island, south-southwest of the Solomons, according to the Brisbane meteorological Bureau.

The Australian Associated Press in Papua New Guinea reported that at least 50 people were missing and between 5,000 and 10,000 others were left homeless in the Solomon Islands.

Some victims were believed washed out to sea, said AAP, quoting an unidentified relief official. The full extent of the damage will not be known for days, it said.

Even the strongest teams can no longer take their opposition for granted. In the recent Vanderbilt Team Championship, played in Portland, Ore., five of the top 16 teams were eliminated fairly early in the competition. And the team seeded ninth not only made it into the finals, but were leading after three quarters before succumbing to the third seed.

A team including the two top Americans on the World Bridge Federation rankings, Bobby Wolff and Bob Hamman of Dallas, and four other players with many national titles to their credit, fell to the 25th seed in the second round. Leading by 10 International Match Points with only 16 boards to play, their unheralded opponents went on to win by 36 IMPs. The opening lead on this board accounted for 11 of those.

The auction shown is that of Hamman-Wolff. In their methods, the opening bid of one no trump showed 13-17 points, the response of two diamonds was forcing Stayman and the rebid of three no trump showed 13-14 points and either 3-3-2-5 or 3-3-3-4 distribution.

Since North had shown length in the majors and South had denied more than three diamonds, West knew that it was almost certain that his partner held four or more diamonds. Therefore, he led the ace of diamonds and continued with the jack, and the defenders took the first five tricks. (Slightly better would have been an opening lead of the jack of diamonds, retaining the ace as an entry in case it was needed.)

The auction in the other room was somewhat less revealing. West chose to lead the nine of hearts, and declarer took all 13 tricks when every suit broke favorably.

Nissan Recall

DETROIT (AP) — Nissan Motor Co. Ltd. has recalled 43,000 Datsun 310 cars for cleaning of exhaust manifold valves that can allow the cars to emit excess pollution.

The recall of the 1982 model year cars excludes those designed to meet

California's more stringent air quality laws, Nissan said.

Carbon and dirt can block the flow of air into the engine's exhaust manifold through reed valves, causing excess pollution, said Bill Pauli, a spokesman for the sales subsidiary Nissan Motor Corp. USA. Pauli said the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency discovered the problem.
