Pupils Escape As Train, School Bus Collide

By JANE WELBORN
and HAROLD JOYNER

One Wahl-Coates School student remained in Pitt County Memorial Hospital this morning with injuries from a bus and train collision Wednesday afternoon on State Road 1726 off N.C. 33 about two miles east of Greenville.

Donta Barrett, 11, was hospitalized following the accident with two broken bones and a laceration of the leg. All 12 students from Wahl-Coates School who were passengers on the bus were transported to the hospital for examination, but she was the only one admitted.

Trooper Ronald Mills said the freight train, which was traveling east at about 40 mph, collided with the rear of the bus on State Road 1726 around 3:20 p.m. Wednesday.

"It opened (the bus) like a can," Mills said. "The flagman on the train saw one of the kids flying through the air."

The Highway Patrol said the bus driver, Curtis Lee Jones, 20, of Williamston was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident. Jones was identified as a student at East Carolina University. Mills said the engineer of the Southern Railway train was Joseph Marvin Plavec of Knightdale.

Mills said Jones told him that he stopped at the railroad crossing and began to go across when the train was about 150 feet away. Mills said the eastbound train, carrying fertilizer and wood, tried to stop but hit the bus at the right rear wheel, spinning the bus around and into an embankment. The bus did not overturn.

"The engineer said he locked her (the train) down as hard as he could and still hit it," the trooper said.

The railroad crossing was marked with a sign, but there were no blinking lights.

In addition to the hospitalized student, the Wahl-Coates students involved in the wreck were Tyree Roland, Jennifer Gosse, Joey Asbell, Thomas Hillis, Jennifer Smith, Darnion Barrett, Jeffery Shivers, Christi Davis, Bobby Lewis, Jennifer Britt, Derick Rogers.

"I think it is a miracle that there weren't many serious injuries," said Wahl-Coates Principal Leslie McCarley.

Wahl-Coates student Joey Asbell,

11, who was sitting near the middle of the bus at the time of the accident, said he did not see the freight train coming down the track toward the bus.

"The driver went faster when he came to the railroad tracks, and he almost made it," Joey said. "When the train hit, it tore the last three seats of the bus off. The bus turned around and went in the ditch, but it stayed on its wheels.

Trade Bill May Get House Favor But Faces Veto

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, faced with widespread Republican defections on a trade bill calling for get-tough measures, said today it is "an A-1 candidate for veto" but conceded it probably will sail through the House.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said "it's probably a foregone conclusion that with the number of items on it that favor various constituencies throughout the nation and the support of the Democratic Party for this bill, that it will pass in the House. We will be looking at veto numbers there."

The House continues debate on the measure today.

"It is an A-1 candidate for veto," Speakes said.

"There is a bipartisan majority in the House that does not adhere to the administration line that we must lie prostrate before international competitors," Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-Ohio, declared Wednesday after the House repeatedly refused to delete key provisions of the bill.

At one point, 98 Republicans defected to back provisions easing the way for countervailing duties on subsidized imports and penalties for dumping products into the U.S. market at unfairly slashed prices.

A move to delete those features was buried 338-79 as GOP lawmakers from textile states of the South and the Northeast-Midwest industrial region parted company with both their administration and export-minded Farm Belt colleagues.

"This is the opening cannon shot in a new trade war," declared Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn. He echoed the administration's warning that the get-tough measures were guaranteed to bring on retaliation against American exports.

Still to come is a vote on final passage of the measure as well as a handful of amendments, including a rival Republican version. There is little doubt that Democrats, who control the House by a 130-vote margin, will win approval before the House goes on a 10-day Memorial Day recess.

The main question has been how many Republicans would support the measure, which is likely to be substantially altered in the GOP-controlled Senate.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., told reporters Wednesday the measure is "viewed with alarm" and described as "a totally political package."

"They don't know what bipartisanship is over on the House side," Dole said.

House Republicans have been deploring partisanship in the debate and attempting to paint the bill, the first broad trade measure to appear on the floor of either house since 1984, as one designed chiefly for use as a club on the campaign trail, where imports have cost jobs.

GOP leaders had earlier forecast "a few" defections among Republicans from districts where industries have been squeezed hard by imports. At a morning party caucus, U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter told the lawmakers about "the tremendous shortcomings of the plan."

"They can make their own decision as to how they want to vote," Yeutter said after emerging from the session.

AFTER THE COLLISION — The rear of a Pitt County school bus was torn apart Wednesday when it and an eastbound Southern Railway freight train collided on a rural road east of Greenville. Twelve students from Wahl-Coates

School were treated but only one was hospitalized overnight. None of the injuries was considered serious. Other photographs are on page 8. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forest)

Wind-Driven Rain Causes Minor Electrical Damage, Soaks Crops

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Driving rain, winds and lightning from thunderstorms Wednesday knocked out one transformer, a power line pole and a fuse, causing up to $600 in damage, a spokesman for the Greenville Utilities Commission said today.

"We had some relatively minor damage from the lunchtime storm," said Roger Jones, GUC's director of electric systems. "With the pole and the transformer, we had about $500 to $600 in damage."

Jones said recloser circuits designed to keep lights from flickering during severe storms worked well.

"The circuits work like breakers. They open and close to keep the lights on," he said. "Despite the damage, we were able to continue with a continuity of service."

The storms dropped 21 inches of rain on the Greenville area in a 24-hour period, ending at 7 a.m. today, according to a GUC spokesman at the water plant. Unofficial estimates indicated heavier rainfall throughout Pitt County Wednesday.

Officials with the city's public works department said the heavy rains did cause some minor flooding problems on St. Andrews Drive and Churchside Drive.

"We had a couple places flooded temporarily," said Mayo Allen, director of the Greenville Public Works Department. "It happened because the system couldn't take the water as fast as it was coming down. As soon as the rain stopped, it all cleared up."

However, the slow drainage in heavy storms is not unusual, according to Allen.

"This is not unusual," he said. "We had quite a bit of rain in such a short period. The systems just aren't made to take that much water in such a short period of time. I'm sure it happened in other places, but it hasn't been brought to my attention."

Meanwhile, agricultural extension agent Mitch Smith said Pitt County vegetation continues to reap the benefits of the heavy rainfall.

"The rain continues to be a blessing to Pitt County crops," Smith said. "The crops' major benefit from the rain is that it helps plants to use the nutrition that has been applied through fertilizing."

Smith said farmers hope the rain continues in moderation.

"I haven't heard any reports of crop damage," he said. "We expect the rain to continue to be a blessing. If it keeps up in moderation, we'll be back on track to a normal growing season."

Giant Finds The Price Of Failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The giant pterodactyl replica that embarrassed its builders by nosediving into the ground on its only public flight has become a star in a museum dedicated to successful flyers.

That's the price of failure.

The honor comes to the flying reptile not because of its non-performance last Saturday, but because it flew well enough in 21 private flights earlier to star in a movie for the National Air and Space Museum's giant screen.

"People are coming in the door and that's the first thing they ask: 'Where's the pterodactyl?'" museum official Rita Cipalla said Wednesday.

"Everyone on every tour knows it's here. They know it was at Andrews (Air Force Base) and that's the first thing they want to see."

And so it has a spot near the Wright Brothers plane, Charles Lindbergh's "The Spirit of St. Louis" and the Apollo space capsule that returned from the first moon landing.

Only last Saturday, it was all flap and no fly for the radio-controlled, 44-pound pterodactyl with a computer stomach and a heart of nickel cadmium. But on Monday the $700,000 beast, a mechanical clone of the tailless creatures that last flew 65 million years ago, was hung from the museum's ceiling and quickly became the darling of the facility, which gets 10 million visitors a year.

It was a triumphant comeback from disaster.

Prize May Cut Family's Benefits

HONOLULU (AP) — An 11-year-old Vietnamese girl who wrote an essay that called America "a place that lends a hand to those in need" won a trip to the Statue of Liberty rededication, but the $9,000 car she also won could cost her fatherless family its welfare benefits.

Hue Cao, a sixth grader, won first prize in a contest sponsored by the Aloha Liberty Foundation. The prizes are a trip to New York City for the July 4 festivities and a 1987 Nissan Sentra XE.

"America is a place that lends a hand to those in need. The Americans care for all people, from homeless to helpless people," she wrote in her essay about the Statue of Liberty and freedom.

A little more than an hour after Cao was presented with the prizes on Tuesday, her family was called by a welfare worker who had seen her picture in the Honolulu Advertiser. If Cao's mother accepts the new car, the family will lose all its welfare benefits, the welfare worker told the family.

Lien Ma, a widow who fled Vietnam with her family in a small fishing boat in 1979, is supporting Cao and two sons, Thai, 16, and Quang, 14. Four other children, ages 18 to 24, are supporting themselves.

The family receives $546 a month in financial assistance, $352 in food stamps and Medicaid health coverage.

Under federal regulations, families cannot receive welfare benefits if they have more than $1,500 in resources, according to state welfare administrator Shig Nakashima, who said a $9,000 car would be counted as a resource.

Cao's trip is not in jeopardy because it cannot be converted to cash, Nakashima said. "It's strictly the regulation that applies to everyone, not only in Hawaii, but across the country."

The family's welfare benefits are safe for now because Mrs. Ma has not signed papers accepting the car.

Service League Anniversary Luncheon Recognizes 'Service'

The recognition of service highlighted the 48th anniversary luncheon of the Greenville Service League held Wednesday at the Greenville Country Club.

The Ormond Service Cup recipient for this year was Mrs. Howard Dawkins Sr. The cup was given to the league in 1948 by Mrs. Lyman Ormond and is awarded each year to a non-board member. The presentation was made by Mrs. Norwood Whitehurst.

Mrs. Edward Seykora received the President's Tray, as a board member, from Mrs. C.W. Harvey Jr. The tray was given to the league by Mrs. James T. Little in 1950.

Mrs. Edward Smith Jr., president, reviewed accomplishments during the past year in her report. A total of 11,599½ hours of volunteer service were given by 134 members to various projects in which the league is involved. Forty members served more than 100 hours and eight members served more than 200 hours. One member served more than 700 hours. Projects include hospital gift shop and chapel, Bloodmobile, mental health, Children's Home, layettes, hospital favors and decorations, Salvation Army, scout work, school volunteers, Charity Ball, art museum, Meals on Wheels, United Way, Cancer and Heart Funds, Christmas baskets and Operation Santa Claus.

Members participated in 28 visits of the Bloodmobile, working 1,830 hours and 3,898 units were collected in Pitt County. Funds of $23,433.37 were donated to patient care through the Laughinghouse Fund and 13 layettes were donated to needy newborn infants.

The league gift to the hospital's Rehabilitation Center totals $175,000 with $125,000 of the pledge having been presented. Special Christmas gifts to Operation Santa Claus, pediatrics and rehabilitation were given to patients hospitalized during the holidays.

Officers installed for the next two years are Mrs. Charles Wilkerson Jr., president; Mrs. Donald C. McGlohon, first vice president; Mrs. Lawton H. Nisbet, second vice president, and Mrs. Thomas Reese, corresponding secretary.

Perfect attendance recognition was given to Mrs. Donald Bailey, 15 years; Mrs. John Shannonhouse and Mrs. Bernard Vick, nine years; Mrs. Kelly Barnhill, eight years; Mary Wesley Harvey and Mrs. H.D. Weaver, four years.

A skit entitled "The Real Golden Girls of the Service League" provided entertainment. It was written and directed by Mrs. Charles Stevens. The cast included three new league members and other league members.

Mrs. McGlohon was luncheon chairman. Special recognition was given to members of the league advisory board Mrs. J.B. Cummings, Mrs. Walter Harrington, Mrs. Ormond Sr. and honorary members, Mrs. J.T. Little Sr. and Mrs. Wyatt Brown.

PICNIC BREAD
1 and 2-3rds cups all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon ground cloves
1½ cups sugar
½ cup vegetable oil
½ cup water
1 cup canned solid-pack pumpkin
2 large eggs
1 cup pitted dates, cut small
1 cup chopped walnuts

In large bowl of electric mixer thoroughly stir together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and sugar. Add oil, water, pumpkin and eggs; beat at medium speed, scraping bowl a few times, until smooth — about 2 minutes. Stir in dates and walnuts. Turn into a greased and floured 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 1½ hours. Loosen sides and turn out. Cool completely. To soften crust, wrap tightly and let stand several hours.

Nurse Seeks To Upgrade Image

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Annette Swackhamer, who has been a nurse for 15 years, is concerned about the image of nurses and nursing today.

She hopes the book she has just written will inspire young women and men to enter the nursing profession, and to realize the variety of possibilities — from working as a bedside nurse to hospital administrator — that nursing can offer.

The author of "Caring," written with medical writer Ralph Moss, Swackhamer has worked in hospitals, but prefers private practice.

"The main thrust of my book is that the most interesting part of nursing is the patients that you meet and the kind of relationships that ensue with these people," she said in an interview.

"Caring" is the story of three nurses, old friends from school, who are reunited in a large big-city hospital. These are not young women, just starting out in their careers, but women who have spent years in the nursing profession, who are trying to cope with their own professional and personal lives.

The characters and events in the book are based on real ones, but changes have been made to protect the privacy of those involved, she said. The book is a dramatization of the complex and difficult issues nurses face after years of dealing with patients, doctors, hospital bureaucracy and their own ever-changing roles.

Swackhamer explains: "I wanted to write a book, not about great nurses or famous nurses, but about average nurses, people who are struggling with their personal lives, their own problems, and are staying in the profession — not the people who got burned out and left, but the people who would not be beaten down and who made the decision to stay."

Nursing, she says, is an exciting and dramatic career, not a boring, bedpan-changing routine job, as some people might believe. Likewise, nurses are not a group of people who are relegated to a lowly status because they couldn't get into medical school, but are trained professionals.

Swackhamer notes that nurses are responsible for the health of the patients, while doctors are responsible for the diagnosis and treatment of disease.

"You can have the best surgeon in the world, and if you don't have good nursing care, you will die of your wounds, so to speak," she said. "Doctors know this, and they respect and trust the care of their patients to nurses all of the time, every day, 24 hours a day. But the public isn't quite aware of that as the primary responsibility of nurses — to really make sure that anyone who needs medical attention gets it."

Swackhamer says that while salaries are an important issue, there's a certain amount of disappointment among nurses today as to the limited amount of time they spend with their patients and the importance that is placed on that time.

"Keeping nurses in nursing, finding ways for nurses to feel effective, to feel good about their profession, and basically to have an opportunity to practice nursing as they see fit, these are the key issues today," she said.

She says nurses are the biggest preventive care option in America today.

"Nurses can be instrumental in making the business of being sick a much less painful and less stressful experience for individuals who utilize nursing care to the best of its ability," she said.

She believes that with hospital costs rising, there is likely to be a shift away from hospital care toward more home health care, including visiting nurses and around-the-clock nursing in the home.

Swackhamer would also like to see the creation of nursing care centers, run by nurses, with doctors available when necessary for medical intervention and support, "because I think the focus of nursing care is different from the focus of a hospital, and I think it's more conducive to getting well, staying well, and becoming (health) educated."

Nurses do care about their patients, she said.

"They are there as patient advocates, they are there to represent the patients' rights in hospitals and they are there as health care providers to meet the needs of patients who can't take care of themselves. And they are teachers; they try to assess a person's place on the wellness-illness cycle and help them make whatever adjustments they need to."

Swackhamer, who lives in Arizona, began her career in New York City in the early 1970s. She worked at Bellevue Hospital Center shortly after becoming a registered nurse, and later worked as a private nurse at other New York medical centers. Now on a leave of absence, she plans to remain in the profession.

Bread For World Coordinator Serves The Two Carolinas

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Karen Jeffreys Akers of Greenville is the Bread for the World coordinator for North and South Carolina.

With her office in Greenville, she is one of the few full-time field coordinators working within the Christian citizens' organization to promote public policy which affects hungry people in the United States and throughout the world.

Karen grew up in Greenville and graduated from East Carolina with a degree in social work. Several experiences during her college years formed her resolve to make alleviating world hunger her career. She went abroad with two different church groups to do volunteer work, first in Costa Rica and then in Haiti, and spent her last semester studying independently and writing a paper on hunger as political issue. After graduation, she spent nearly five months in Washington, D.C., doing volunteer work at the Bread for the World headquarters there.

She said she was pleased when she was chosen last June to be the North Carolina coordinator. After a year of organizing Bread for the World activities in this state, she has had South Carolina added to her work load. There are about 1,500 members in North Carolina; 250 in South Carolina at present. Karen says she plans to enroll many more in both states.

Because Bread for the World is a political action organization, it has districts which coincide with Congressional districts. North Carolina has 11 districts; South Carolina, six. Karen travels all of them, setting up public information and letter-writing campaigns. She will conduct anything from a short presentation at a regular club meeting or church gathering to an all-day seminar on any aspect of the hunger issue.

The Bread for the World organization was founded in 1973 by a group of 14 Christians who agreed that hunger is the cruelest manifestation of poverty and that a network of U.S. Christians working together could and would do something about it. The Rev. Arthur Simon was one of the founders and is its executive director. He is the author of a book titled, "Bread for the World," which details the effect of political policy, particularly U.S. political policy upon the world's hungry.

Today there are more than 47,000 members and 400 local chapters. A local group meets at the Methodist Student Center here to discuss hunger and write letters to congressmen and other appropriate officials about policy which affects the economics of the poor. Anyone interested in taking part is invited to call Karen at 758-2030.

Office space for Bread for the World activities is donated by the Methodist Student Center and the Presbyterian campus ministry provides Karen use of a computer. She generates a local newsletter for members in North and South Carolina.

A monthly newsletter from national keeps members abreast of issues deemed to have a potential impact on hungry people. Telephone networks called "Quicklines" were established in 1975 to generate quick response to Congress when action on an issue cannot wait until the next newsletter issuance. Members get newsletters and other mailings and may take part in letter-writing and phone-calling to whatever degree they wish to commit.

Membership costs $25 per year or whatever a person wishing to participate believes he or she can pay without creating financial hardship. Anyone interested in having more information or joining the organization may contact Karen.

Organizing Closet Can End 'Nothing-To-Wear' Blues

DALLAS (AP) — Many women begin their day by gazing into an unorganized closet and lamenting, "I have nothing to wear," but with a little planning that needn't happen, says Rosemary Gwin, former fashion model and owner of a Dallas-based image consulting firm.

"Chances are these women have a fantastic selection of fashionable wardrobe items," she says. "However, they are lost among a collection of clothing that should have been discarded long ago."

"Do not think of the closet as a storage area," advises Mrs. Gwin, whose business, Timeless Elegance, was founded to help women organize their wardrobes and develop their own personal style.

Mrs. Gwin recommends reviewing the closet every two months as a way of staying in touch with yourself, as well as becoming organized to dress quickly and efficiently, allowing more time for other things.

Organizing the closet is a four-step process, she says. It begins with separating blouses, jackets, skirts, pants, dresses, sweaters and vests into groups, with hangers all facing the same direction. Within each group, cluster items by color.

Step two is designed to weed out items that no longer support or enhance your lifestyle and involves removing any worn out or dated clothing, as well as anything that has not been worn in two seasons.

Next, separate the remaining clothes into three groups: clothing that is loved and worn, garments you feel ambivalent toward, and those items which need recycling.

In determining into which pile a garment fits, Mrs. Gwin suggests, ask the questions: How do I feel about this? Do I love and wear it? Am I ambivalent about it? and Do I recycle it?

After making the decision, items you are ambivalent about should be placed in the back of the closet and clothes that are loved and worn should be placed at the front.

The same process should be repeated to organize accessories, including bags, belts, shoes, hats and scarves.

Finally, clothing to be recycled should be taken to a used clothing store or thrift shop, shared with friends or given to charity.

Before taking garments for recycling, be sure items are clean, pressed and on hangers. In most cases, the store will price the garments and may ask the giver to provide an original purchase price. The individual usually receives a percentage of the garment's asking price.

Normally, used clothing stores work on a three-month contract basis, Mrs. Gwin notes. If clothes do not sell during that period, they are returned to the owner or donated to charity.

Mrs. Gwin, who has had training in cosmetology, modeling, color analysis and image consulting, founded her business in response to women who attended her "Beautiful You Workshop" and sought her services on an individual basis.

Dear Abby — By Abigail Van Buren

School Secretary Isn't Lending Service

DEAR ABBY: I am a secretary in the office of a junior high school in a small California town. It never ceases to amaze me that parents think I am a repository of vast amounts of money that I have handy to lend out to students who have forgotten to bring either money or lunch to school.

Yesterday, a parent called to ask that I lend little "Rupert" $10 so that he could stop at the store on the way home! There are 600 students at this school, and if I could recoup all the money I have lent out in the last five years, I could take a trip to Hawaii!

What prompted me to write is that today, a parent became very irate with me on the phone when I explained that I could not lend "Florence" $2 for lunch.

Please print this letter; perhaps it would speak for the thousands of school secretaries who are "hit on" every day for cash! Thank you. — BROKE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BROKE: I imagine the statute of limitations has run out on most of those unpaid debts, but it might be worth your time to ring up the parents (during the breakfast hour) and remind her (or him) to give little "Rupert" the loot you lent him.

DEAR ABBY: When one entertains guests at a fine restaurant and the male guest insists on handling the tip but actually places an amount below the expected average, is it considered impolite for the hostess to add to the tip while the guest is still at the table?

How would you handle such a situation? — CONCERNED IN SACRAMENTO

Flawed

The North Carolina Utilities Commission failed to show much vision, or strength, in turning down a proposal to replace long distance telephone calling between Grifton and Greenville and between Grifton and Ayden with extended area service.

Approval of the proposal would have allowed subscribers in Grifton to call their county seat without toll charges. The commission apparently bases its decision on a negative vote for the service among Greenville subscribers. Based on a favorable vote in Ayden and Grifton the commission suggested that extended area service between those two communities be pursued.

The State Utilities Commission rejection is flawed. The commissioners have failed to take into consideration the metropolitan characteristics that Pitt County is rapidly assuming. Access to many services, including medical, is being curtailed for Grifton citizens because they don't have the same ability as other Pitt County citizens to call toll free to the Greenville area. It is a discrepancy that should be corrected. Instead, the commission has washed its hands of a difficult situation and left Grifton subscribers to paddle for themselves.

The commission in its order gave adequate reason as to why it should have ordered extended area service for Grifton. It said it recognizes that "large exchanges dominate the voting process ... due to the lack of sufficient interest in calling small exchanges."

Surely if the N.C. Utilities Commission has any mission one is to provide equality in such situations.

Clipper

People imbued with lore of the sea felt a twinge of regret with announcement the Pride of Baltimore had sunk in a Caribbean squall with four crewmen (including the skipper) missing and eight rescued.

The survivors spent nearly five days on a life raft before being found.

Schooner-rigged, the Pride of Baltimore was a replica of the "Baltimore Clippers," swift sailing ships developed on Chesapeake Bay for sea use. We're told they were called clippers because of the way they could "clip" off the miles in a hurry.

Their long, slender hulls and tall masts led to development of the great clipper ships of the mid-1800s which because of their speed were the royalty of ocean-going traders.

Christened in 1977, the 97-foot-long clipper replica had just recently returned to the Caribbean area after a tour of European ports and was due back in Baltimore on June 14. Unexpected heavy weather on the night of May 13 was blamed. "It simply rolled over and went under very quickly" according to a spokesman for the ship's owners.

Pentagon Finds Time For Promotion

WASHINGTON — After viewing the new Tom Cruise movie, "Top Gun," last Sunday, John Lehman was ecstatic.

"I was so excited, I could hardly stay in my seat," Lehman, a pilot, said at a post-screening party at Washington's National Airport. "I think it's going to be a blockbuster, a good old-fashioned rumbunctuous adventure story not cluttered up with a lot of plot."

It's natural that Lehman, who has flown some of the military's most sophisticated aircraft, would rave about a movie that, in his words, catches "the real violence of air-to-air maneuvering." But Lehman has another reason to glow: he is secretary of the Navy, and "Top Gun" is one of the most graphic pieces of Navy-boosterism to come out of Hollywood in years.

Thanks to a helpful Pentagon, the film's producers had at their disposal two aircraft carriers (the U.S.S. Enterprise and U.S.S. Ranger), a large number of aircraft — F-14 Tomcats, F-5 Tigers and A-4 Skyhawks — and the authentic scenery around Naval Air Station Miramar, a 24,000-acre metropolis near San Diego. There wasn't much need for special effects; real pilots from the famous Fighter Weapons School (a.k.a. Top Gun) program did their complicated handiwork for the cameramen.

In return for a pledge of thorough accuracy and attention to the commitment and lifestyle of Top Gun trainees, the Navy promised full cooperation to the producing team of Don Simpson and Jerry Bruckheimer, whose credits also include "Flashdance" and "Beverly Hills Cop."

Hollywood has not always been so lucky. The Defense Department has fancied some scripts more than others. It didn't like ABC's dreary "The Day After," for example, and therefore restricted access to relevant information and facilities. For "The Deal of the Century," it did not lend out any of its hardware. It considered the subject matter of "An Officer and a Gentleman" too "profane" and "irreverent."

Simpson and Bruckheimer were willing to accommodate the Navy's interests. In this case, they were also prepared to reimburse the service for the incurred costs of fuel, pilot time, aircraft maintenance and control towers, among other essentials. Navy spokeswoman Sandra Stairs said the bill has run up to an estimated $1.1 million, or about one-twelfth of the film's entire budget.

The Pentagon says it has always required filmmakers to bear the cost of using military hardware, personnel and facilities. In many cases, in fact, the costs have seemed sufficiently high to encourage the use of special effects instead. For example, an F-14 costs roughly $7,600 per flight hour, and in "Top Gun" flight time for all aircraft may have run as long as 80 to 90 hours, according to Lt. Stairs.

Yet there's no telling what taxpayers would have said had one of the movie's F-14s, which cost the Navy $36 million each, plunged into the Pacific during a take of "Top Gun." The implicit risks, time and energy that the service was willing to off everything and lose everything they've got.

"Most of them will tell you, 'I can't go bankrupt because I couldn't hold up my head in my community,'" Hawkins said in an interview. "That's a good attitude for the businessmen because they don't take the loss. Farmers take all the loss."

Hawkins said that the extension service suffered from the same mindset until only recently. Extension agents knew that farmers could save their farms through bankruptcy and reorganization. But, until recently, "we never publicized it as an option."

Now agricultural extension agents are explaining bankruptcy possibilities to farmers, Hawkins said. And, with the help of some good federal bankruptcy judges, farms are being saved, he said.

Hawkins told of one case where a farmer agreed to file for bankruptcy. He then met with a good agricultural affairs lawyer and an agricultural economist.

"That first day, we saved him $4,000 on his monthly feed bill, and ... restructured his tractor loan in a way that saved him $12,000," Hawkins said.

On the other hand, he knows of a young farm couple who recently called in the auctioneers and sold off everything. In addition, the man's father ended up having to help them pay a huge federal tax debt. This couple, Hawkins said, could still be farming, and the father wouldn't have had to make that big tax payment, if they'd pursued their bankruptcy options.

Farmers should change their attitudes about bankruptcy, Hawkins said. Rather than see it as something shameful, they should understand that it is a legal right they have which is "upstanding and respectable."

When a farmer files for bankruptcy, the judge immediately issues a protective order. "No one can touch you and you stay farming while you and your lawyer submit a plan for reorganization to the judge. While you're getting ready (to submit that plan), your lawyer, if he knows what he is doing, can put together a plan that will really work," Hawkins said.

Therein may lie one of the problems of filing for bankruptcy, however. Hawkins told a legislative study commission on agriculture that there are few lawyers in rural areas of the state who know anything about farming and bankruptcy.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Vance, a lawyer, confirmed this, saying he didn't know there was any need for that kind of legal help. Watkins said he was sure the bar association would move quickly to remedy this situation if it would help farmers.

Strength For Today

"Security — that's all I want. Let me be sure that I will not be set upon by violent people, that I will retire with enough Social Security and savings to take care of me in old age, that I will have peace of mind and not too many responsibilities to handle."

You are asking for something that even God himself finds hard to confer upon anyone. He did not confer security on his only begotten son who was slain because of his goodness.

Security is a fringe benefit of life. If we do not have it, then we just have to get along as best we can without it. It may seem cruel to say no, but insecurity is one of the things that promotes growth and courage in our hearts.

We don't have to be secure to be happy — we just have to be courageous and have faith.

Public Forum

To the editor:

This makes twice The Daily Reflector has urged the Board of Education to defy the law. The reasons stated are urgency for merger because of the damage to 17,000 children and for the prevention of the waste of taxpayers' money.

You have also stated that the Justice Department is arguing discrimination and blacks are hollering foul.

Let me see if I can make some sense out of this ludicrous rhetoric you have espoused twice in your editorials.

1. You act as if blacks have no reason to cry foul! Over half of those 17,000 children are ours and we are not more irresponsible about our children than you are about yours.
2. The appointment of three blacks to the consolidated board was more of appeasement, not a move to solve that problem.
3. The Justice Department, which is one of the more conservative in recent years, would not be arguing discrimination and raising objections if they did not exist. This community simply shirked its responsibility and didn't do its homework.
4. Stop trying to convince this community that concerns of the black community are not real. Your children will not suffer directly from this discrimination — ours will.
5. Finally, let's remove this stubborn racist attitude that, because a white person of position said it, it is gospel. Let us move forward and come up with equitable solutions to this problem by November and submit equitable and legal legislation before the short session.

By the way, the end of the world will not come if total merger is not effected by July 1, 1986. Come on — let's do the job right this time!

The Greenville Peace Committee joins John Moskop in calling for more public information before construction of the Ground Wave Emergency Network (GWEN) is continued. Clearly, it is adding hundreds of millions to the national deficit. But is it adding anything to our national security? I believe I speak for all of the peace committee is expressing the conviction that the reverse is true: GWEN makes our nation less secure.

The primary credit for bringing this issue before the people of eastern North Carolina, however, belongs to the Peacemaker group of which Dr. Moskop is a member — not the Greenville Peace Committee as was reported in Tuesday's Daily Reflector.

Iron Fist Diplomacy

GABORONE, Botswana (AP) — By launching three sudden military strikes across southern Africa, the white leaders of South Africa chose to ignore a proffered option of negotiation in favor of an iron fist.

The attacks Monday against alleged African National Congress guerrilla targets in Botswana, Zambia and Zimbabwe occurred while a delegation from Commonwealth countries was in South Africa to try to arrange talks between South Africa and the outlawed black guerrilla group.

At least three died in the raids, which happened while conservative whites in South Africa were mounting their strongest challenge yet to President P.W. Botha's program of tentative race reforms. Ultra-conservatives attacked the ruling National Party's cautious reforms as a recipe for white abdication.

In opting for force against the rebels Botha appeared determined to undermine that ultra-conservative threat, even at the cost of increased foreign castigation.

"It was just another attempt to terrorize the people of Botswana and to impress a fringe element of misguided white South African racists," said Botswana President Quett Masire.

British Labor Party lawmaker Donald Anderson said the raids may have doomed the Commonwealth initiative. "This is Botha bellowing defiance at world opinion and the Eminent Persons Group," he said.

The raids also came at a time of increasingly organized black resistance to apartheid within the country, coinciding with the outlawed group's heightened sabotage war.

Daily rioting by blacks against the white government since September 1984 has left nearly 1,600 dead, nearly all black. A seven-month state of emergency, lifted in March, failed to end the violence that has wracked black townships and crippled many local government-backed township councils.

Botha's government has blamed the rebel group repeatedly not only for sabotage, but for stirring up violence to make the townships ungovernable. In some areas anti-apartheid civic associations have tried to replace official councils and "People's Courts" try cases and hand out sentences as alternatives to government courts.

The turmoil in South Africa has hurried the departure of foreign investors, further damaging an already recession-bound economy, even without formal disinvestment measures abroad. About 30 American companies already have pulled out of South Africa, nearly 10 percent of the total U.S. companies in the country.

Adding to the atmosphere of crisis, the Commonwealth group of former British colonies and other overseas blocs are debating whether to impose formal economic sanctions against South Africa to help speed the demise of apartheid.

Under pressure from British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, a Commonwealth summit last year delayed tough sanctions and appointed the seven-member delegation of "Eminent Persons" to find ways to encourage peaceful change.

bear suggest the extra length to which the military will go sometimes to sell itself.

Service-wide, the Pentagon is spending $1.1 billion this year on recruitment. The Army alone accounts for about half that figure, the Navy $201 million.

Yet the Defense Department also cooperates as much as it sees fit with military contractors, which are a growing source of advertising revenues. According to a survey of military-related periodicals, by the Virginia-based Defense Publication Analysis Report, Pentagon contractors bought $48 million worth of ads. That number excluded the major newspapers, national magazines and electronic media, for which a total estimate is difficult to come by.

In some cases, the Pentagon has played a substantial role in this promotion. Take, for example, an ad placed in some print media by Rockwell International touting the company's bid for a contract to develop a High Frequency Anti-Jam (HFAJ) system for the Navy: an aerial photograph of an unnamed aircraft carrier shows hundreds of the vessel's crew members, in white uniforms, lined up on the deck to create the letters HFAJ. Presumably, someone was still piloting the carrier.

It is a sign of the times when, despite all the furor about defense contractor abuses, the Pentagon has the time and resources to devote to commercial ventures. If some of those ventures prove financially if not artistically successful (we're thinking of "Top Gun"), then their beneficiaries may have the U.S. taxpayers to thank.

Senate Delays Vote To Override Reagan Veto

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has finally vetoed a congressional resolution blocking a $354 million missile sale to Saudi Arabia, and Senate opponents delayed an override vote when they realized they couldn't defeat the White House.

The veto was received late Wednesday afternoon, only minutes before the Senate adjourned for a Memorial Day recess. Had Reagan not delivered the veto by midnight Wednesday, the sale would have been halted because the disapproval resolution passed by Congress would have automatically become law.

In his veto message, Reagan said blocking the sale would "damage our vital strategic, political and economic interests in the Middle East" and also would "undermine our balanced policy in that region."

The attempt by opponents of the sale to override the veto will be made after the Senate convenes again June 2.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., leader of the opposition, told his colleagues shortly before adjournment, "We would lose today. I have no idea how the vote will come out in June, but we will work to win."

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., a supporter of the sale, agreed with Cranston's view, saying, "I believe we have the votes to sustain the veto and uphold the president's position."

But Dole said the override attempt was put off because opponents would have filibustered. Senate rules permit unlimited debate and make it difficult to muster the votes to cut off a filibuster.

Cranston and Dole agreed Reagan had picked up votes in his fight to win approval of the arms deal, but Cranston said his side faced defeat only because six opponents had already left Washington for the recess.

"We would lose because six people are absent, five of whom voted against the sale last time. The sixth would have voted with us," said Cranston, "None of the supporters are absent."

Both the House and Senate voted against the sale by overwhelming margins two weeks ago, but Reagan promised to veto the disapproval resolution and the sale goes ahead unless each chamber overrides his veto by a two-thirds margin of those legislators present and voting.

In the Republican-controlled Senate, it would take 67 votes to override a veto, while in the Democratic-run House, 289 votes would be needed, assuming all members vote. The previous Senate vote was 73-22 against the deal, and the House turned it down, 356-62.

Congress has never before blocked an arms sale and Reagan lobbied hard Wednesday to avoid an embarrassing foreign policy defeat.

Reagan has concentrated his efforts in the Senate where he needs to turn around fewer votes than in the House.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Democratic opponents remained firm, but added: "I understand they've been able to turn around a number of Republicans."

On the previous vote, 29 Republicans opposed the sale.

Reagan's effort received support from an unexpected quarter — former President Jimmy Carter, the man Reagan defeated for the White House in 1980. Carter called Reagan and offered to help and later called several senators and urged them to support the sale, said a White House official speaking on condition of anonymity.

Opponents admitted the White House picked up support when the Saudis agreed to drop their request for 800 Stinger shoulder-fired anti-aircraft missiles. The inclusion of those weapons was cited repeatedly by sale opponents, who feared they could fall into the hands of terrorists for use against airliners.

The package still contains 100 Harpoon ship-to-ship missiles and 1,666 Sidewinder air-to-air missiles for use by the Saudi air force.

The Reagan administration says the sale is needed to show support for moderate Arab nations, but opponents contend the Saudis support terrorists and have stymied U.S. interests in the Mideast, including blocking American efforts to broker an Arab-Israeli peace treaty for the strife-torn region.

One senator to switch is Lloyd Bentsen, the Texas Democrat who voted against the sale earlier this month. He told reporters he now plans to support the deal because "if we just continue to kick them (the Saudis) in the teeth, finally we won't have influence" among Arab nations.

AT&T To Extend Cuts In LD Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co., in response to government prodding, wants to pass on to consumers an additional $450 million in savings.

In papers AT&T said it would file at the Federal Communications Commission today, the company will ask to increase its previously announced rate cut to $2 billion.

AT&T said this would mean a $1.02 drop in an average residential customer's $10 monthly bill for out-of-state calls.

The new rates will be effective June 1, unless the FCC rejects the plan.

When it examined AT&T's April 24 proposal, the commission's staff said the company did not properly compute the amount of extra calling that would occur in reaction to the lower prices.

AT&T was asked by the commission to recalculate the reductions.

The company said on Wednesday the combined rate reduction would amount to 11.8 percent.

The biggest cuts — 13.8 percent — would come during day and evening hours. AT&T said about two-thirds of all long-distance calls from home phones are made during those hours.

A consumer activist who watches telephone issues said the revised rate structure is better for residential customers than the April 24 plan.

Gene Kimmelman, legislative director of the Consumer Federation of America, said he calculates that businesses will benefit more than individuals from the reduction because the biggest cuts are in day and evening hours, when businesses make a higher proportion of their calls.

The price cut for calls placed on weekends and after 11 p.m. local time on weeknights would be 5 percent.

Rate cuts for WATS, 800 Service and other business phone services were also proposed.

GTE-Sprint Communications Co. and MCI Communications Co. each have announced they will propose new rates sometime this summer. However, these major competitors to AT&T said their rate changes will not be ready by June 1.

"We obviously are going to lower rates," MCI spokesman Gary Tobin said. "We want to continue to be able to say that we're less expensive than AT&T on every call."

GTE-Sprint opposed the initial AT&T price reduction plan.

Sprint spokesman Mike Furtney said the new pricing level for AT&T "is not very far away" from predatory pricing, the price level that would be so low that competitors would be forced out of business.

He called the previous rate reduction announcement and the FCC's instruction to AT&T to come back with still lower prices "stunning" to Sprint.

"We just have this concern that somehow the FCC does not understand the environment in which we are all operating," he said.

Hundreds Welcome Clipper Survivors

BALTIMORE (AP) — Hundreds of people welcomed home the eight crew members of the Pride of Baltimore who survived 4½ days in a small raft after the clipper ship sank in stormy seas, killing two and leaving two others missing.

The eight told of surviving on biscuits and water and trying to catch fish using safety pins as hooks while they floated on a 5½-by-5½-foot raft built to hold six people.

Barefooted second mate Joe McGeady, 26, of Severna Park, and deckhand Robert Foster, 23, of Alexandria, Va., followed deckhand Susie Huesman, 24, of Baltimore, off the first of two corporate planes that shuttled them Wednesday afternoon from Puerto Rico to a suburban Baltimore airport.

They shook hands with Gov. Harry Hughes, Mayor William Donald Schaefer and officials of Pride of Baltimore Inc., the corporation that sponsored their voyages to promote this port city, before meeting privately with family and friends gathered inside a hangar for the reunion.

Hundreds of others stood outside for a glimpse. "We mourn our loss. We'll never forget," Schaefer said, referring to the four who did not return. "But, oh, how happy we are that you came home."

Few wore closed shoes, their feet swollen from constant immersion in six inches of water inside the life raft, but they smiled while wiping tears and spotting friends waiting with hugs and flowers.

The two-masted, 136-foot-long Pride, built in the city's harbor nearly 10 years ago in the style of the Chesapeake Bay clipper schooners of the mid-19th century, was blown over by gale force winds on May 14, then sank in the Caribbean during a squall about 240 miles north of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Hearings by the Coast Guard and the National Transportation Safety Board were to begin this afternoon.

The clipper had been on an 18-month worldwide voyage that began March 31, 1985, but was cut short because of fears of terrorism. The vessel left Malaga, Spain, where it had been docked for repairs, on March 12 and was to arrive home June 14.

Pride officials said it was too early to discuss rebuilding. The survivors were plucked from the sea early Monday by a Norwegian freighter whose lookout spotted their flashlight signaling an SOS in the night.

Holding up samples of biscuits wrapped in foil and cans of water, first mate John Flanagan told how the eight managed to grab two flashlights, three flares, a life raft, food, water and a first-aid kit as the ship was sucked under in about two minutes. Flanagan, of Niantic, Conn., said there was no time to send out a distress signal.

The survivors, who had about five days of rations left when they were rescued, tried but failed to catch fish by attaching safety pins to a line using pieces of underwear as bait, said deckhand Scott Jeffrey of North Linthicum. "The raft was so tight, "when one wants to stretch his knee out, seven other people have to pull their knee out of the way," said Flanagan, the group's appointed spokesman.

At night, because the survivors could barely see each other, it was especially difficult to move, he said.

Flanagan's voice cracked at the mention of the missing captain, Armin E. Elsaesser, 42, of South Dartmouth, Mass., and engineer Vinney Lazaro of West Redding, Conn. Both were last seen alive moments after the ship went under, and the Coast Guard was conducting an air and sea search for them.

"I will not give up hope until I know otherwise," said Flanagan. Deckhand Leslie McNish, 30, of Somis, Calif., bit her lip and fought back tears as Flanagan spoke: Ship's cook James Chesney, 25, of Newmarket, N.H., held her hand.

Ship's carpenter Barry Duckworth of Georgetown, Del., and deckhand Nina Schack, 23, of Baltimore, are presumed dead as the survivors saw their bodies floating in the water.

"In every way, it was horrible, mentally and physically. It was hell," said bosun Danny Krachuck, 22, of Springfield, Pa., the youngest of the crew. "Spiritually, though, the support of everyone else seemed to almost cancel that out in a lot of ways."

When the freighter began to approach, the eight were afraid of letting their hopes get too high. Five other vessels had passed them in the previous days afloat. But they knew something felt different.

Navy To Begin Sea Trials On Wartime Hospital Vessel

By NORMAN BLACK
 AP Military Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — In a little more than four months, the Navy will begin sea trials for a new ship that has been so specially designed for wartime use that it appears destined to sit in port until war breaks out.

The ship is huge — bigger than anything in the fleet except an aircraft carrier. The Navy hasn't had one since the end of the Vietnam War. It has been built in almost total obscurity, although it already has a name.

The USNS Mercy is a hospital ship. It is so advanced and so large — 1,000 beds and 12 complete operating rooms, capable of simultaneous use — that few hospitals on land can match its facilities.

But as work proceeds on the Mercy and an identical sister ship, the USNS Comfort, so, too, does an internal debate about how and whether they can be used during peacetime.

The Navy, in part with an eye toward congressional budget cuts, has decided to place the vessels in what it calls "Reduced Operating Status 5" — capable of being activated and steaming from ports on the East and West coasts in no more than five days' time.

Even that commitment is in some jeopardy. When the Pentagon released a list of military programs last week that could be scuttled because of House cuts to the defense budget, the Comfort appeared on the list.

Dr. William Mayer, the assistant defense secretary for health affairs, acknowledges the budget pressures. He also notes the Mercy and the Comfort are too specialized as trauma surgery centers to function as floating hospitals of the type operated for years by Project Hope, dispensing general health care to poorer nations around the world.

Nonetheless, Mayer is hoping to find some way for the ships to go to sea. Among the avenues he is exploring are periodic exercises and "familiarization tours" for physicians in the Reserves, and as a "training platform" overseas for civilian and military doctors who are undergoing specialized education in emergency medicine.

"The main thing would be to take advantage of the training opportunities that it gives; the international relations opportunities that it gives, and at the same time have it as close to where we might need it as we could reasonably have it," Mayer said in a recent interview.

"It has such potential ... to give a message that you really don't get when you see the (battleship) Missouri offshore. This is a message with three big Red Crosses on the side and a great big American flag that we care."

The Mercy and the Comfort were not created for civilian use, however. They were born in the late 1970s of studies that accompanied the formation of what was then called the Rapid Deployment Force. Military planners were concerned that if U.S. forces ever went to war in the Mideast, wounded soldiers might not have access to surgical care.

The result was two contracts, awarded on June 28, 1983, and Dec. 16, 1983, to the National Steel and Shipbuilding Co. in San Diego, to convert two oil supertankers into hospital ships. The tankers were completely gutted, with only their hulls and engine rooms left intact, then rebuilt into modern hospitals with 12 operating rooms each; massive intensive care wards; modern laboratories, X-ray equipment and pharmacies; built-in oxygen lines to the beds; elevators between decks; and helicopter landing pads.

The Mercy — formerly the SS Worth — will start its sea trials in October.

Aloha Means More Than Saying Hello, And Law Says So

By BRUCE DUNFORD
 Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — "Aloha" — the first word heard by 5 million visitors every year to Hawaii — means many things, including "hello," "goodbye" and "love." Beginning July 1, it also is the law.

Not everyone's happy about it, but Gov. George R. Ariyoshi on Monday signed the bill, which officially defines the undefinable: the "aloha spirit."

The "aloha spirit," tourism officials say, ranks with the sunshine, lush greenery, gentle trade winds and sparkling surf among Hawaii's attractions. It's something you recognize when you see, hear or feel it in action.

"Our tradition of kindness and love does not have to be and should never be in the statutes," Rep. Kina'u Kamali'i said Monday.

During House discussion of the measure in April, she said, "I wonder if the strength and variety of meanings to the aloha spirit aren't derived from its elusiveness, its inability to be captured in words."

But capture it lawmakers did, while recommending that public officials consider the aloha spirit in exercising their authority.

Rep. Andrew Levin expressed concern that there may be unintended legal implications of giving judges and state administrators an option of exercising the aloha spirit.

But Democratic Majority Leader Richard Kawakami, noting that the law amended a section on emblems and seals and would have little legal standing if there were attempts to apply it to other things, said it was unlikely that the "aloha spirit law" could be used by judges as an excuse to free criminals.

The law uses the Hawaiian words for such concepts as kindness, unity, humility and patience to define "aloha spirit" as "the coordination of mind and heart within each person. It brings each person to the self. Each person must think and emote good feelings to others."

"These are traits of character that express the charm, warmth and sincerity of Hawaii's people. It was the working philosophy of native Hawaiians and was presented as a gift to the people of Hawaii," the law reads.

It defines "aloha" as "more than a word of greeting or farewell or a salutation."

"Aloha' means mutual regard and affection and extends warmth in caring with no obligation in return."

"Aloha' is the essence of relationships in which each person is important to every other person for collective existence."

"Aloha' means to hear what is not said, to see what cannot be seen and to know the unknowable."

Rep. Fred Hemmings Jr. said he voted for the bill because "how can you vote against aloha?"

"I hope it doesn't have any hidden meanings," he said.

Reagan Tells Students Hunger Isn't Necessary

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says America's hungry go without food because they do not know where to get help, but anti-hunger activists fault his administration for eliminating the program that told the poor about food stamps.

"I don't believe that there is anyone going hungry in America simply by reason of denial or lack of ability to feed them," Reagan told a high school group which included seven students from North Carolina Wednesday. "It is by people not knowing where or how to get this help."

The president, in a question and answer session with the students, said the hungry are not aware of the government and private aid available to them.

"Where there is hunger... you have to determine that that is probably because of a lack of knowledge on the part of the people as to what things are available," Reagan said.

"Not only is the government doing much in that line, but there has been about a three-time increase in private charity and aid in our country," Reagan said, adding that private donations to charity were $79.8 billion in 1985.

Reagan made the comments in a 30-minute session with 117 students from various parts of the country. The meeting was sponsored by the "Close Up" Foundation, a non-partisan organization that gives students a chance to study the federal government.

The largest private contributor to the foundation is RJR Nabisco Inc. of Winston-Salem, N.C.

Robert Greenstein, director of the Center on the Budget and Policy Priorities, said he agreed with the president that "there is an information problem — many of the people who are poor and eligible do not know they are eligible" for food stamps.

Greenstein, a former Carter administration official who now heads the non-profit study group, said the Reagan administration did away with the Foodstamp Outreach program in 1981, designed during the Nixon administration to inform people about food stamps.

The House attempted to reinstate the program in 1985, but the effort was blocked by the administration, Greenstein said.

"I'm sure the president never heard of it," Greenstein said of the outreach program. "This is one of the causes of the resurgence of hunger in America — the problem is, his administration is responsible for it."

Although Greenstein said he agreed with Reagan that private donations had increased, he said most people working with low-income groups reported that the donations they received had not filled the gap left by cuts in government services.

John Kellogg, spokesman for the Harvard-based Physicians Task Force on Hunger, said Reagan's action was a "major reason why the (food stamp) program fails to reach 40 percent of eligible Americans."

Before the outreach program was cut, 68 percent of those eligible received food stamps, said Kellogg. In 1985, the Task Force claimed that hunger was a growing epidemic in America. It conducted a study that said 20 million Americans go hungry for at least several days each month.

"This has affected the lives of millions of needy Americans," Kellogg said of the program change. "The food stamp program is the most effective federal program we have to fight hunger."

"The administration has made it much more difficult" for the poor and elderly to obtain food stamps, said Paul DePonte, a spokesman for the Food Research and Action Center, a non-profit group that provides legal assistance and advice on poverty and hunger issues.

"Clearly there is less help and information available than there was in 1981," DePonte said.

Even if every hungry person knew where to get help, that would not solve the problem, the spokesman said in an interview.

Earlier this week, the Physician's Task Force issued a report saying the administration had erected barriers to obtaining food stamps.

Increases Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director James C. Miller III predicted today that Social Security recipients will get cost-of-living increases next January "at the level of inflation," even if prices rise less than the 3 percent trigger now in the law.

Because of this year's plunge in oil prices, economists do not expect the consumer price index, used to determine cost-of-living increases, to be up more than 2 percent.

In a speech to the U.S. Chamber of Congress, Miller hinted that the Reagan administration will not oppose congressional action to set aside the law granting Social Security increases only when inflation climbs over 3 percent.

"I predict that there will be very strong sentiment in Congress to pay a COLA (cost of living adjustment) at the level of inflation," Miller said. "That's the likely outcome."

Consumer prices have taken their sharpest three-month dive in 37 years, the Labor Department reported Wednesday. So far this year, the consumer price index has been running at an annual rate of minus 2.3 percent.

And the March decrease in prices of 0.3 percent makes it almost certain that inflation for the year will not climb above 2 percent, even with the modest increase in oil prices expected by industry analysts over the next few months.

Under the current law, for cost-of-living increases for Social Security and other federal benefit programs to kick in, the consumer price index must rise by at least three percent from September 1985 and September 1986.

The last time that inflation fell below 3 percent, in 1981, Congress voted to waive the trigger for Social Security increases that were paid in January 1982.

State Will Make Pitch For Monitor Artifacts

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer
PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The Civil War ironclad USS Monitor was built in New York, fought its famous battle with a Confederate ironclad in Hampton Roads and sank in a storm off North Carolina.

Museum officials in each of those locations say history should give them the right to display more than 100 Monitor artifacts retrieved since the wreckage was found on the ocean floor off Cape Hatteras, N.C., 13 years ago.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which oversees a national marine sanctuary around the wreck, will take proposals this summer from museums that want the artifacts. It will decide on their principal home in March 1987, the 125th anniversary of the Monitor-Merrimack clash that marked the first battle between two ironclads and opened a new era in naval history.

"We've gotten quite a lot of interest from the Hampton Roads area, the state of North Carolina and additionally in New York. There's widespread interest, I would say," said Edward Miller, project manager for the Monitor sanctuary.

Those interested include the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, the Mariner's Museum in Newport News, the South Street Seaport Museum in New York, the city of Portsmouth and the state of North Carolina, which both are willing to build a new museum for the artifacts.

"We're interested in having a good interpretive exhibit put together," Miller said. "We want maximum exposure so that the American public can see a return on the investment that's been made to recover them."

The Council of American Maritime Museums in April recommended the museum picked to house the artifacts be able to care for them properly, be accredited by the American Association of Museums, be accessible to the public and be in a location appropriate for the ship's history.

The artifacts, which include the ship's anchor, a lantern, a hull plate and other small items, are on loan to various museums. They still could be loaned to other museums after a principal home is picked, Miller said.

"We're open to suggestions. We're not looking to have one winner and everyone else losers," he said.

Portsmouth already has spent $210,000 to have an architect design a museum for exhibits on the Monitor and the Merrimack, which had been rebuilt at the local Navy shipyard and rechristened the CSS Virginia before the battle.

"We are designing this building with the idea that we are going to be successful," said Nancy Melton, the city's director of museums.

The city already has a naval shipyard museum, is close to the site of the March 9, 1862 battle and remains home to the Naval shipyard that converted the Merrimack from a steam frigate to the ironclad Virginia, she said.

"It just seems very, very appropriate. We really are in a very convenient location," she said.

North Carolina officials make a similar argument because the ship sank in a storm off the state's coast in December 1862.

"Several of the other candidates have historical relationships with the vessel itself. North Carolina has a physical relationship that nobody else has," said Dan Ashe, a staffer of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee headed by Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C.

"North Carolina also has been more active than certainly any other state and probably more active than any other government in protecting the wreck of the Monitor," he said.

Jones has urged state officials to agree on a single proposal for the museum rather than have several locations present bids, Ashe said.

The South Street Seaport Museum would like to have the artifacts because the ship was built in a Brooklyn shipyard.

"She's a New York ship," said Peter Neill, museum president.

The Smithsonian Institution in Washington also is considering applying for the artifacts, said Mary Dyer, a museum spokeswoman.

Michael Curtin, curator of the Hampton Roads Naval Museum at the Norfolk Naval Station, said he believes the artifacts belong at the Smithsonian and that the NOAA competition is a waste of time.

"It's just stupid. It's all because they don't want to make a decision," Curtin said.

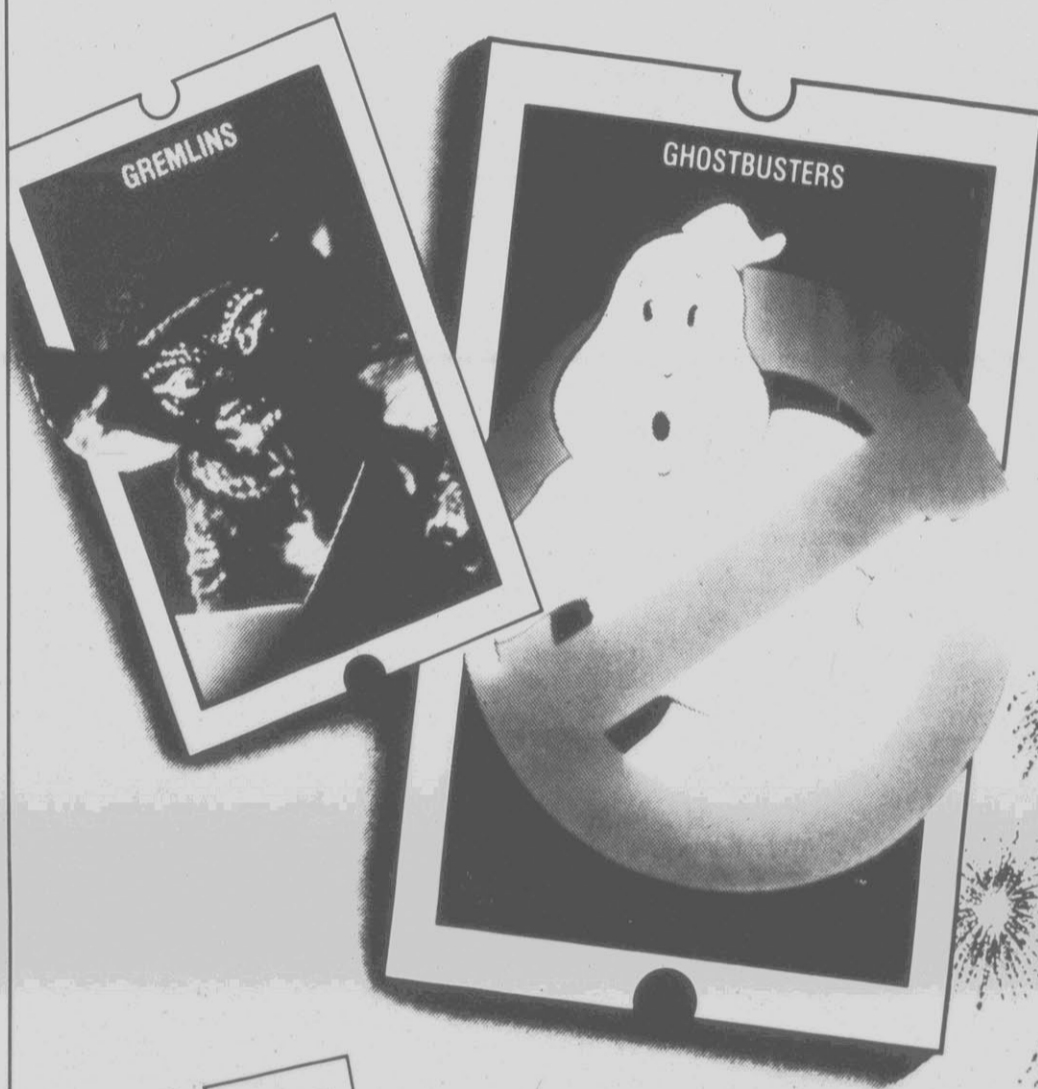

While other museum officials said they were sure the Monitor artifacts would be a major tourist draw, Curtin said the few artifacts he has on display attract little attention.

"It's just not that magical a ship," he said. "I have Monitor artifacts on display at this very moment. People don't care. They don't come in and say, 'Where are the Monitor artifacts?'"

Although the first battle between two ironclads, which was basically a standoff, portended the end of wooden warships, the Monitor-type of ships did not last long after the war, Curtin said.

"Monitors as a type of ship were just terrible turkeys. Every time they went out in the water they sunk," he said, because water easily seeped inside the ships and put out the fires that ran the boilers.

Calls Want Hymn Kept

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Methodist church committee which wants to keep "Onward Christian Soldiers" out of a new hymnal has received a flood of mail and telephone calls from supporters of the tune, the hymnal's editor says.

Most of the more than 50 letters and calls to the United Methodist Publishing House have been opposed to dropping the song, editor Carlton Young said Wednesday.

"Unless you test the product, you don't know where you stand," he said. "We do take seriously even the harshest letters."

The plaque was presented by Mayo Allen, director of public works, at Wednesday's commission meeting.

Barnes Discharges Lawyer At Trial

The trial of John Earl Barnes Sr. of Greenville and six other family members on drug and possession of stolen goods charges in Pitt County Superior Court was recessed Wednesday until next week to give Barnes an opportunity to obtain another attorney.

Barnes fired his attorney Wednesday as the trial entered its second day.

Barnes, his wife Claretta Ward Barnes, sons John Earl Barnes Jr. and Maurice Francis Barnes, daughters Monica Barnes and Teresa Barnes Cooper, and son-in-law Corbin Cooper were arrested by Greenville police last July on charges of possession of stolen goods, possession of heroin and possession with intent to sell and deliver heroin following a search of Barnes' home.

The senior Barnes failed to appear in court Tuesday as the trial got under way. Instead, the court was presented a note from Barnes' physician, saying Barnes ought to stay at home because of his arthritis.

Judge William Griffin sent a rescue squad to check Barnes and bring him to court and Barnes spent Tuesday in the courtroom on a gurney.

Wednesday, Barnes was brought to the courthouse by the Pitt County Ambulance Service and rode into the courtroom in a wheelchair. After he fired his lawyer and the trial was recessed until next week, Barnes walked away on crutches.

Doctor To Face Hearing

A Greenville eye doctor has been charged by the North Carolina Board of Medical Examiners with performing unnecessary surgery and providing inadequate treatment for patients.

Dr. Steven M. White, an ophthalmologist, is scheduled for a hearing before the board June 10 in Raleigh, said Bryant D. Paris, the board's executive secretary.

White is charged by the board with convincing patients to have eye surgery that was not needed and, in other cases, with failure to properly examine patients before operating on them. The board has also alleged that he allowed assistants to perform surgery which they were not licensed to do.

Paris said the board has the power to revoke a doctor's license or to take other disciplinary action. A doctor may appeal a license revocation to Superior Court, he said.

Charles McLawhorn Jr., White's attorney, said, "These charges are unfounded. Dr. White is a skilled and a much-loved surgeon. I predict that he will be cleared by the facts that will be presented during the hearing."

Paris said the hearing is open to the public.

Panel Says Doctors Holding Back On Pain Treatment

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A national health panel is raising concerns that Americans suffering acute pain may be getting too little relief, partly because of doctors' unwarranted fears about using narcotics.

"What's happening now is that people tend to get undertreated in many instances," Dr. Robert Dougherty, a member of the panel convened by the National Institutes of Health, said Wednesday.

Such patients should "raise hell and demand adequate treatment" or else find new doctors, said Dougherty, medical director of Pelion Inc., a pain clinic in Syracuse, N.Y.

Appearing with him at a news conference, fellow panel member

Emanuel Papper, an anesthesiology professor at the University of Miami School of Medicine, said perhaps 8 million people each year undergo surgery that can lead to severe pain during recovery. He said he believed as many as 5 million of them get inadequate pain treatment.

A third panel member, Alan Weisbard, an assistant law professor at Cardozo Law School in New York City, said he had been struck by "a repeated litany of undermedication of patients" in reports the panel received during its three-day conference, which ended with a formal statement Wednesday.

The full panel's statement stopped short of any flat declaration on undertreatment because there still isn't adequate research to prove such a statement, said panel chairwoman Laurel Archer Copp, dean of the University of North Carolina School of Nursing.

However, there were several strong hints in that direction in the report from the consensus conference on "The Integrated Approach to the Management of Pain," the latest in a series of government-sponsored meetings of experts in various fields seeking consensus on controversial health topics.

The panel's report said that despite improvements, including better ways of getting drugs where they are needed in the body, "contemporary science and clinical practice cannot assure the full relief of pain."

"Yet over and above these limitations posed by current knowledge and technology, many informed observers, supported by some scientific data, perceive continuing deficiencies in the clinical management of pain. Concerns are focused on reported undermedication of patients with acute pain and chronic pain associated with malignant diseases," the report said.

Its sections on undertreatment concerned chronic malignant pain, such as from cancer, and acute pain, such as a person might suffer from a severe injury or from surgery. There was relatively little space given to the lesser pain, such as headaches and backaches, that a greater number of people suffer.

The report said surveys of hospitalized people with acute pain "have found that many of them continue to have moderate or severe pain because their treatment has been with doses of narcotic analgesics that have been too low or given at too long an interval between doses."

Reasons cited for undertreatment include incorrect diagnosis, ignorance about pain-killing drugs, personal attitudes by doctors and patients about narcotics and "concern about the problems of addiction and respiratory depression that is greater than the actual risk," the report said.

"It's not so much that they're not concerned about the pain" but that doctors fear they will harm patients if they overprescribe narcotics, said panel member Donald Kornfeld, professor of clinical psychiatry at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The report called for better education of health-care professionals about pain and for "sensitization of these professionals to the roles their personal attitudes may play in their use of narcotic analgesics."

In addition to drugs, legitimate treatments can include acupuncture, biofeedback, electrical nerve stimulation, hypnosis, physical therapy and behavioral alterations, the report said.

Victims Of Medical Neglect Oppose Insurance Reforms

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Proposed changes in liability insurance laws have "a built-in bias" toward doctors and insurance companies and don't address the real medical malpractice crisis — the crisis of victims of neglect, a victims' group spokeswoman says.

"They (insurance firms and other special interest groups) have proposed so-called legislative reforms which would do nothing more than deprive innocent victims of negligence and malpractice of a fair and reasonable compensation," Ann Shelton said in a prepared statement Wednesday.

Mrs. Shelton, president of People Against Incompetence-Negligence, said there is a medical malpractice crisis in North Carolina, "but it is a crisis for victims of negligence, and not physicians or the insurance industry. Until now, no one has spoken for or represented the victims of negligence."

Mrs. Shelton, 41, of Eden, said she has wanted to form a victims' group since 1983 when she had an "unnecessary hysterectomy" that required three major operations to fix. She said she has a lawsuit before the state Supreme Court challenging regulations of the Medical Review of North Carolina, a peer group that oversees the medical profession in the state.

A legislative study committee examining liability insurance, availability and cost, is considering a proposal that would limit a plaintiff's right to punitive damages to $100,000. Any amount awarded over $100,000 would go to the state's general fund.

Another proposal would limit the amount of damages for noneconomic losses, such as pain, suffering and emotional distress, to $250,000.

Mrs. Shelton said PAIN will lobby the Legislature against the proposals and try to educate the public about medical negligence and incompetence.

The group will offer comfort, education, counseling and information to victims "often forgotten and shut off to an institution or down to the welfare office after their injury," she said.

Mrs. Shelton said she has attended all meetings of the Medical Malpractice Study Commission and addressed the panel last January. The study commission was scheduled to meet Thursday.

She praised state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg and Insurance Commissioner Jim Long for speaking out publicly against the tort reform proposals.

The statewide group, based in Eden, has about 10 members so far, she said.

Two members, Carl and Jan Norris of Burlington, attended the news conference, along with their 3½-year-old son, Levi, who has been diagnosed with spastic quadriplegic cerebral palsy.

The Norris' filed a lawsuit in Alamance County Superior Court last August seeking punitive damages.

Mrs. Norris said her son, who was delivered by an emergency Caesarean section in November 1982, was not breathing when he was born. She said he was stricken with the disease because of a lack of oxygen to the brain.

"We just think that something happened that night," Mrs. Norris said. "We don't know what ... We have been told the best we can hope for is that some day he'll be able to sit up on his own."

Mathcounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Raleigh eighth-grader finished second in the National Mathcounts contest and led his North Carolina team to a third-place finish Saturday.

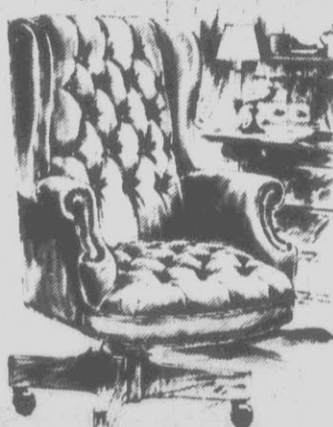

Jeffery Vanderkam improved on his 1985 showing of eighth place in the math competition for seventh- and eighth-graders sponsored by the National Society of Professional Engineers and the CNA Insurance Co.

Also on the North Carolina team were eighth-graders Lisa Senzel of Ligon, Jonathan Moore of Western Middle School in Elon College and Dustin Emhart of Martin Middle School in Raleigh.

Political Parties Stress Short Session Goals

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly halls will ring with impassioned debate over whether to increase the gasoline tax, how big a raise teachers and state employees should receive, and whether the private sector can be trusted to build and operate prisons.

Beneath the surface, a great deal more will be at stake in two weeks when the General Assembly's biennial short session gets under way.

Analysts say now that one of the most significant legislative elections in state history looms in the background, the deals cut, votes cast and coalitions formed could have especially profound implications.

"It's an extremely important session," said House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison. For Democrats, he said, it will present an opportunity to offset some negative impressions lingering from 1985's clashes with Republican Gov. Jim Martin.

"The picture painted was of Democrats being unfriendly to business and (favoring) high taxes," Ramsey said in an interview Wednesday. "It won't go away overnight. But time has proven us right. ... That message needs to get out."

Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who presides over the Senate and is the state's top-ranking Democrat, say it will be important for the Legislature's Democratic majority to be seen as acting responsibly if it performs major surgery on Martin's program and provokes yowls of pain from the GOP.

"We must address the governor's proposals in a businesslike manner, acknowledging the merit and the need ... but not necessarily agreeing with everything, and come up with responsible solutions," Jordan said.

Democrats and Republicans agree that this November's election will be a watershed, coming two years after the GOP's most successful showing this century.

Not only did Republicans sweep the top of the ticket in 1984, but they captured 50 legislative seats, tying a record set in 1972. To accomplish their ambitious goal of controlling at least one chamber by 1991, Republicans say they can ill afford a major setback this year.

They acknowledge, however, that conventional political wisdom suggests they could lose some seats in this non-presidential election year.

Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, who is giving up his seat to run for Congress, says Republican legislators can be expected to show loyalty to Martin on most issues and to base their re-election platforms on support of the governor.

"There's really no choice, because you know Republicans don't control the agenda down here (in the Legislature)," Ballenger said. "Whatever comes out of here will be dictated by the Democrats."

Members of both parties agree there is a potential for a partisan clash over Martin's 1986-87 budget proposals, primarily his request that a 2 1/2 cents-per-gallon gasoline tax increase be coupled with a shift of the state Highway Patrol and driver education programs from the Highway Fund to the General Fund.

Democratic leaders have attacked sharply the suggested fund transfers, which they say would raid the general fund of money that could give teachers a bigger salary increase than the 3.2 percent Martin recommends.

The governor says his program represents a compromise between the Democratic position — a bigger tax increase and no transfers — and that of most Republican lawmakers, who prefer that shortfalls in the highway fund be eliminated entirely with transfers.

Martin has warned that Republicans might refuse to support a tax increase without transfers, and some Democrats say they may not vote for a higher tax unless Martin can deliver some GOP votes, opening up the possibility of a stalemate.

If that happens, or if the Democrats use their superior numbers and Martin's lack of veto power to enact a tax increase without fund transfers, the GOP will contend during the fall campaign that the Democrats lived up to their "tax-and-spend reputation," Ballenger said.

"I think out in the boondocks people realize there's money being spent up here that doesn't need to be spent," he said. "If the Democrats insist on (raising additional highway money) just by taking it out of the taxpayer and doing nothing to restrain governmental operations, we need to let people know."

Ramsey says Democrats would counter that argument by pointing out the differences in their and the Republicans' spending priorities.

"Throughout America, the best political move that either side could make would be an effort to improve the public schools," he said. "Improve teacher pay to keep the better ones and get the bright young students coming out of school."

CP&L Will Seek Increase To Recover Cost Of Plant

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co.'s typical customer would pay $9.54 to $11.75 more a month for electricity — half to cover some of the cost of the $3.6 billion Shearon Harris nuclear plant — under a rate hike the company is seeking.

Sherwood Smith Jr., CP&L chairman and president, told shareholders Wednesday that the utility will seek another increase next year to recoup the rest of the plant's cost.

Company spokesman Wayne Ennis said he did not know how much of an increase would be sought next year.

Meanwhile, Smith assured shareholders that the 900-megawatt plant is safe and said proposals by nuclear power opponents to scrap it would hurt CP&L customers and stockholders.

"If there was a significant risk, ... we would not build and we would not open the plant," Smith told about 200 stockholders at their annual meeting, while more than 100 opponents of the plant demonstrated outside.

Smith said CP&L would not ask the state Utilities Commission for a one-time rate increase to cover the cost of the Harris plant 22 miles southwest of Raleigh. His proposal calls for CP&L to seek the increase over two years. The company has said it would need a rate increase of 20 percent to 25 percent to pay for the plant.

Jordan May Try To Block 'Succession' Referendum

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says he may try to cancel a statewide referendum on whether to repeal gubernatorial succession, a move some lawmakers predict would precipitate a titanic struggle between the state House and Senate.

Jordan said Wednesday that canceling the referendum was "something we are considering" but declined further comment. Key legislators, however, said Jordan was committed to the change and that it had been his idea.

Sources told The Associated Press that Jordan, titular leader of the state Democratic Party, believes having the proposed constitutional amendment on the general election ballot could backfire on Democratic candidates.

They said a Senate bill would be offered during the June session of the General Assembly that would repeal a bill enacted last year. That measure authorized a referendum on whether to repeal a 1977 constitutional amendment that allowed the governor and lieutenant governor to seek back-to-back four-year terms.

Canceling the referendum would be a victory for Gov. Jim Martin, a Republican, who has said it should not be held unless voters also are allowed to decide whether the governor should have veto power. The Legislature's Democratic majority last year defeated Republican bills that would have put the veto question on the ballot.

"The governor regards that idea (repeal of the succession referendum) as good news and is glad to hear it," said Tim Pittman, Martin's press secretary.

Some lawmakers predicted in interviews that the move would precipitate a titanic struggle between the Senate and the House, where the anti-succession bill originated in 1985.

"There's going to be the biggest fight you've ever seen ... on this," said one senator, speaking on condition that he not be identified.

But House Speaker Liston Ramsey, who backed succession repeal last year, said he did not expect a major squabble. "I've got more than enough things to fight over," he said, adding that he had no position on whether the referendum should be halted.

The proposed succession amendment was not seen as an entirely partisan issue during legislative debate. The votes by which it passed — 103-15 in the House and 37-11 in the Senate — were not strictly along party lines, although most of the opponents were Republicans.

IN THE STATE

Sentenced

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Attorneys for an Arkansas prison escapee who was sentenced to life plus 93 years in prison for the slaying of a state Highway Patrol trooper say their client expected to receive the death penalty.

"Naturally we're happy with a sentence of life imprisonment," said Joe Huff after a Buncombe County jury recommended the sentence for William Bray Wednesday. "We have been very concerned with saving his life."

Bray was convicted Monday of first-degree murder in the death of Bobby Lee Coggins. The life sentence was for the first-degree murder conviction and the additional 93-year sentence was for his conviction on other charges, including robbery with a firearm.

Bray's attorneys immediately filed notice of appeal.

gressional Club, seeking money for its operations.

Bodies Found

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Buncombe County sheriff's officials say they are investigating the deaths of a young man and woman whose bodies were found with apparent pistol wounds early Wednesday off Elk Mountain Scenic Highway.

Sheriff Thomas H. Morrissey said the department is pursuing a lead that the man may be Wesley Dale Mahaffey, 30, a sheet steel worker from Hamilton, Ohio.

Mahaffey and his wife were awarded a three-day trip to Asheville by his company, and stayed at a local motel Monday night, Morrissey said. They were last seen at the motel Tuesday afternoon.

UNC Wants Higher Pay

RALEIGH (AP) — A 3.2 percent wage increase is not enough for the University of North Carolina faculty and personnel to maintain the momentum of the past two years, UNC System President C.D. Spangler says.

Gov. Jim Martin calls in his proposed budget for $23.1 million to accommodate his plan for the statewide 3.2 percent raise for state workers. But Spangler told the Joint Appropriations Committee Wednesday that the highest priority for next year is $49.6 million for academic salaries.

Chemical Spill

DURHAM (AP) — Several homes in northeast Durham were evacuated Wednesday after a tanker carrying a cleaning solvent overturned, spilling about 10 gallons of the hazardous liquid and posing the threat of an explosion.

The tanker, which had been carrying about 3,550 gallons of methylene chloride, overturned in a ditch about 11:30 a.m. as the driver tried to make a U-turn, a county emergency management official said. Durham fire and police personnel sealed off streets within a half-mile of the intersection.

The chemical, a skin and lung irritant that also can cause dizziness when inhaled, spilled to the ground from an overflow valve on top of the tanker.

No one was injured in the incident.

Settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Congressional Club has agreed to pay $7,500 to resolve a complaint lodged by North Carolina's state Democratic Party, bringing to $17,500 the total fines the organization will pay to settle allegations of election law violations.

The Federal Elections Commission said in documents released Wednesday that the club violated campaign contribution limits in 1984 when it spent $131,991 on national fund-raising letters to boost Sen. Jesse Helms' re-election campaign against former Gov. Jim Hunt.

The $7,500 fine stemmed from violations centering on seven nationwide mail solicitations by the Con-

Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary weighted average. The market is higher and the live supply is adequate for a very good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,896,000, compared to 1,827,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to 1 cent higher at mostly 2.72-2.85 in East and mostly 2.85-2.90 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 2 cents lower at mostly 5.15-5.34 1/4 in East and mostly 5.21-5.28 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 2.51-2.72; (new crop corn 1.92-2.03; soybeans 4.72-4.98).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground today with some help from declining interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 7.20 to 1,782.37 in the first hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Interest rates fell in the credit markets this morning, pushing prices of long-term government bonds up more than $5 for every $1,000 in face value.

The government's report that new orders for durable goods dropped 0.8 percent in April apparently contributed to the decline in interest rates by suggesting that economic growth remained sluggish.

The durable goods figure was heavily influenced by a big drop in military orders.

Despite the market's advance this morning, however, many analysts remained wary about the outlook for stock prices given the recent contraction in trading volume.

Volume will have to pick up, they argue, if the market is going to resume its exuberant advance from last September through the first quarter of this year.

Some retailing stocks rose, extending their strong gains of Wednesday. K mart climbed 1 to 52 1/4 and Sears Roebuck 7/8 to 46 1/4 in active trading.

Earnings reports lately in the industry have generally been better than expected. Also, retailers are widely viewed as prospective beneficiaries of the tax overhaul plan that has been approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 41 to 136.16. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 17 at 274.22.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 8.81 to 1,775.17.

Declining issues slightly outnumbered advances on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 117.09 million shares, against 112.99 million in the previous session.

Pravda Goes On Sale In London

LONDON (AP) — An English-language version of the official Soviet daily Pravda went on sale in London today, looking nothing like the newspapers to which Britons are accustomed.

There were no advertisements, no big headlines, no mention of Princess Diana, and no "Page 3 Girls" — the nude pin-ups that are a staple of the city's daily mass circulation tabloids.

Instead, readers who paid 75 cents for their copy received six densely packed pages of Soviet-style news and commentary, with four photographs and a cartoon showing Pentagon generals racing for bunkers to escape low-flying doves labeled "Soviet peace initiatives."

The newspaper was dated May 18, but included articles from other Pravda issues. The front page was devoted to articles on the Chernobyl nuclear accident and pictures of Soviet families enjoying the sowing season in the Tadzhik region. Several

Avery
BETHEL — Mrs. Gladys Louise McPherson Avery, formerly of Bethel, died Thursday in Cleveland. Her funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday at Reddick Chapel Baptist Church by the Rev. M.E. Laws. Burial will be in the Pinelawn Cemetery.

Mrs. Avery was a native of Pitt County and attended Bethel High School. She graduated from North Carolina College in Durham. She taught school and was a librarian in eastern North Carolina. Before retirement, she was librarian at North Pitt High School. She was a member of Reddick Chapel Baptist Church, where she served as secretary, Sunday school teacher and supervisor of the youth department, and was in charge of the Women's Auxiliary and mission. She was a member of the United Order of Tents No. 542 of Bethel, Royal Degree Circle and Beautiful Star chapter No. 590 Order of the Eastern Star, Stokes. She was a member of the Middle District Union of the Old Eastern Missionary Baptist Association, the Women's Association and the National Education Association.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Barbara Annette Breckenridge of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Bertha Arnette Brewer of Cleveland; one son, James Luther Avery of Longville Heights, Ohio; one sister, Mrs. Thelma Perkins of Washington; one brother Sherrod McPherson of Bethel; four foster brothers; three foster sisters, and 11 grandchildren. Family visitation will be from 7-9 p.m. Friday in the Flanagan Funeral Home Chapel in Greenville, and at other times the family will be at the home, East Street, Bethel.

Barrett
Mr. Willie Gray Barrett of 58 Connecticut Ave., Stamford, Conn., died Monday in St. Joseph Memorial Hospital in Stamford. His funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday at Arthur Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Bell Arthur, by Elder Willie Joyner. Interment will be in Crestlawn Memorial Gardens near Farmville.

Mr. Barrett was born and reared in the Farmville community, but had made his home in Stamford for 25 years. He was a member of First King Masonic Lodge No. 155 of Stamford. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Shirley Spell Barrett of the home; three sons, Jasper (Jackie) Barrett of Boston, Alton Barrett of the home and Mel Dean Jones of Snow Hill; four daughters, Ms. Betty Hamilton of Lawton, Okla., Ms. Joyce Marie Barrett and Ms. Debra Jones, both of Stamford, Conn., and Ms. Phylcia Betina Henderson of Greenville; his parents, Jessie Lee Barrett and Eva Carr Barrett of Greenville; six brothers, Jesse Lee Barrett Jr. of Route 2, Grifton, Sgt. She is survived by eight sons, George Ben Warren of Robersonville, Floyd Warren of Goldsboro, Dennis Warren of Greenville, Dixie Warren of Atlanta, Frank Warren of Pompano Beach, Fla., Billy Warren of Farmville, Jasper Warren of Chesapeake, Va. and Tony Warren of Williamston; two daughters, Mrs. Hilda Hughes of Merry Hill and Mrs. Patsy Bryant of Askewville; two sisters, Mrs. Allie Bullock of Robersonville and Mrs. Lizzie Brown of New Bern; 26 grandchildren, and 18 great-grandchildren. The family will receive friends at Biggs Funeral Chapel from 7 to 8:30 tonight, and at other times will be at the home of Tony Warren, 110 W. Church St., Williamston.

"(The impact) threw me up and I hit the seat in front of me and I fell on the floor. I looked up and saw everyone else running off the bus. I tried to get up, but I didn't have the strength right then. I finally got up and went off the bus. Nobody was screaming when it happened, but when we got off the bus, everybody was crying," Joey said. "I got a couple of scratches and my hands are a little sore."

"I'm not going to be scared about (riding on a bus), but I'm going to be a little more cautious," he said. Linda Asbell, Joey's mother, lives near the cross where the accident occurred.

"I heard the crash and went weak when I looked out and saw it was my son's bus that had crashed practically in our front yard," Mrs. Asbell said today.

"I went to the phone, had the Highway Patrol number right in front of my eyes, but couldn't dial it. So I got the operator to call."

"Then I dashed my younger child to a neighbor's and went to the bus petrified of what I'd find," Mrs. Asbell said. "I soon spotted my son's red head shining! He was all right. Help was already arriving and it soon became clear how blessed we all were. The rear end of that bus was demolished, but none of our children were too badly hurt."

"I can't say enough about how wonderful the rescue people from Eastern Pines are," she said. "They did a terrific job."

"I feel very sorry for the bus driver. I hate it real bad for him," Mrs. Asbell said. "For whatever reason, the bus was on the tracks, it was a terrible mistake. I'm just so thankful it was as far across as it was. If the impact had been a second sooner that bus would have been hit broadside and it would have been a lot worse for all."

"Only three children who were in the accident have come back to school today," Mrs. McCarley said at Wahl-Coates. "Some of the kids stayed home because they are real sore."

"The students have been handling it so well. The students that were in the accident have bounced back, and I don't see any signs of trauma," Mrs. McCarley said.

"The hospital did a wonderful job taking care of the kids," she said. "My staff members that were out there were very impressed with the hospital emergency room personnel. They handled the kids compassionately and efficiently."

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board in Atlanta were scheduled to arrive this afternoon to begin their investigation of the accident.

The county schools also will conduct an investigation into the accident, according to Barry Gaskins, the school system's public information officer.

"We always conduct our own investigations, regardless of the severity of the situation," he said. "Even if a bus driver gets a speeding ticket, we conduct an investigation." Gaskins said the bus driver will be suspended pending the investigation.

Census Survey

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau has begun its annual housing survey, studying homes in 11 metropolitan areas.

The survey will continue for eight months, collecting data on 47,000 homes, for use by the Department of Housing and Urban Development and other agencies.

Sampson's Shot Keys Rockets

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The team of the future, it turns out, also is a team of the present.

The young Houston Rockets, having deposed the reigning kings of the NBA, now confront the team that would seem next in line for the league crown.

The Los Angeles Lakers, meanwhile, have been reduced to a historical footnote as another NBA champion that couldn't repeat.

Ralph Sampson, who'd been the lesser-noticed of the Rockets' "Twin Towers" during their playoffs against the Lakers, provided a starting ending to the startling series Wednesday night when his hurried, off-balance shot dropped at the buzzer to give Houston a 114-112 victory over Los Angeles.

The victory gave the Rockets the series, 4-1, and sent them into the NBA championship round against the Celtics, beginning Monday in Boston.

The concluding win was particularly impressive because the Rockets won without their other "Twin Tower," Akeem Olajuwon. He was thrown out of the game for fighting with 5:14 remaining and the Lakers ahead 103-99.

But Sampson took control, scoring 10 of his 29 points in the closing moments and winning it at the end.

"It's a very gratifying feeling to beat the world champions," the 7-foot-4 Sampson said. "This may be the highlight of my basketball career."

"Right now we're just going to enjoy this win and go home to our fans in Houston," added Sampson. "Then we'll go into Boston thinking positively."

Olajuwon, who had averaged 30 points and 12 rebounds in the previous four games of the series, had 30 points and seven rebounds in the fifth when he was ejected for trading swings with the Lakers' Mitch Kupchak in a brief, bench-clearing skirmish.

"I was watching it (Sampson's winning shot) from the locker room and when I saw it go in, it was just unbelievable," Olajuwon said. "It was great that they won without me ... I couldn't believe it."

Sampson's shot came after the Lakers' Byron Scott had missed a long jumper and the Rockets rebounded and called time out with one second remaining. When play resumed, Rodney McCray inbounded the ball to Sampson and the Houston center, his back to the basket, flipped the ball backward toward the goal. It hit the rim, bounced up for a breathless instant, and fell through.

"I knew where the basket was, but I couldn't see it," Sampson said. "I thought it (the shot) was short; I didn't see it until it hit the rim and bounced in."

"There was a man guarding him from behind and a man guarding him in front and he only had one second to get the shot off, so it wasn't real pretty," said Houston Coach Bill Fitch. "But it went in."

"It was a miracle," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "He didn't even see the basket. You just can't beat fate."

"I was happy he threw up a bad shot," said Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who led the Lakers with 26 points and also had 13 rebounds. "But what happened just happened."

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 22, 1986

"Since he made that shot, I guess it just wasn't meant to be for us this year," said Lakers guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who scored 24 points and had 13 assists. "To be in control the whole way like we were, and to see that shot drop, it's hard to swallow."

The final score was the only time the Rockets led, and they'd been down 99-90, with 8:31 to play. But they caught the Lakers for the first time on a three-point basket by Robert Reid that tied the contest at 112 with 15 seconds left.

Reid had just missed from three-point range, but the Rockets got the rebound and he got the ball back. After his three-pointer, the Lakers came down the floor and Scott missed.

Looking ahead, Olajuwon said he thinks the Rockets have an excellent chance against the Celtics, who had the NBA's best record this season after losing to the Lakers in the finals a year ago.

"There is no question in my mind that we can beat the Celtics," said the former soccer goalie from Nigeria. "We've been confident all year that we could get to the championship series."

The Lakers' Johnson said the Rockets could give Boston a run for its money.

"If they play with the same intensity, they can be right there," he said. "I have to pick the Celtics because they've got so much experience and have been there so many times. But nobody really thought Houston could beat us, either."

Bodine Nips Richmond To Grab Coca-Cola Pole

HARRISBURG (AP) — Geoff Bodine has slipped into a habit he was afraid he might break this week.

The 37-year-old Julian driver sped his Chevrolet an average of 164.511 mph around Charlotte Motor Speedway's quad-oval Wednesday to capture the pole for Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race — his fourth pole this season.

"We took our best shot and hit the bulls-eye," Bodine said. "I'm glad it's over. We put a lot of work and effort into winning the pole, but we came here to race. We'll start over now and get ready for Sunday."

Bodine, who knocked teammate Tim Richmond into the No. 2 slot with a four-lap qualifying speed of 164.431 mph, won $30,000 for winning the pole.

"Our time ... was so good, I'm still in shock," Bodine said. "I didn't think we'd even come close. They were so good."

Richmond, also in a Chevrolet, will start beside Bodine for the second time this year. The two held the first and second spots at the TransSouth 500 last month at Darlington, S.C.

"Well, if anybody had to beat me, I'm glad my teammate beat me," Richmond said.

If the past performance on the front row at the Coca-Cola 600 is any indication, Bodine and Richmond have an equal chance of winning the $716,225 race Sunday. Four winners have started from each position in 14 races. Cale Yarborough holds the four-lap qualifying record of 165.194 mph set in 1980.

Starting third will be Dale Earnhardt, who qualified at 163.842 mph in a Chevrolet, followed by Sterling Martin, who qualified at 163.297 mph in a Chevrolet.

Bill Elliott qualified his Ford fifth at 163.048 mph, and Benny Parsons will start sixth in an Oldsmobile after qualifying at 162.948 mph.

Rounding out the 15 qualifiers Wednesday were David Pearson, Harry Gant, Rusty Wallace, Morgan Shepherd, Neil Bonnett, Yarborough, Ricky Rudd, Mark Martin and Richard Petty.

The remaining 25 positions will be decided by the faster of two laps run today and Friday.

Several drivers Wednesday complained that harder tires supplied by race officials this time slowed them down.

"The tires kept falling off bad the last couple of laps," Richmond said, noting that he lost about .2 seconds per lap after his first lap of 165.990 mph.

Bodine's crew chief, Gary Nelson, said "the only thing soft tires do is break track records."

"But running a 600-mile race, we'd rather have hard tires," he said. "They don't wear out as bad."

Bodine said he was driving a car named "Alexis," which was driven seven times this year, including his victory run at Dover. His other car is named Alexis II.

"Alexis is mean, a little tough, and she doesn't let anyone push her around," said Bodine, who has won five of 129 Winston Cup races in his eight-year career.

Here are the top 15 drivers qualifying Wednesday for Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway, with type of car, average speed in miles per hour over four laps and money won. Positions 16-30 will be filled Thursday and positions 31-40 will be filled Friday.

1. Geoff Bodine, Chevrolet, 164.511, $30,000
2. Tim Richmond, Chevrolet, 164.431, $5,500
3. Dale Earnhardt, Chevrolet, 163.842, $3,000
4. Sterling Marlin, Chevrolet, 163.297, $2,000
5. Bill Elliott, Ford, 163.048, $1,500
6. Benny Parsons, Oldsmobile, 162.948, $500
7. David Pearson, Chevrolet, 162.828, $200
8. Harry Gant, Chevrolet, 162.465, $200
9. Rusty Wallace, Pontiac, 162.379, $200
10. Morgan Shepherd, Buick, 162.166, $200
11. Neil Bonnett, Chevrolet, 161.923, $200
12. Cale Yarborough, Ford, 161.850, $200
13. Ricky Rudd, Ford, 161.707, $200
14. Mark Martin, Ford, 161.477, $200
15. Richard Petty, Pontiac, 161.476, $200

Fittipaldi: American Drivers More Used To Indy's Running

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Emerson Fittipaldi knows his limitations, starting with the fact that he's not from around here.

"American drivers, they're used to the traffic. They can make the decisions so much quicker," the Brazilian-born former Formula One driver said, anticipating Sunday's Indianapolis 500 and its tangle of cars around the narrow, antiquated Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

"The two things that I have to learn more about are drafting," he said of the technique of tailgating and thus riding in the vacuum created by another car. "and pit-stop strategy, figuring out when I should come in under a yellow (caution) flag. I keep hearing how these races are won in the pits."

"That's the toughest part of this race," Fittipaldi, 39, said Wednesday. "that everybody's going over 200 miles an hour all the time, that you have to be making decisions every second, that there's no room for mistakes. ... Physically, it's demanding. But mentally, psychologically, it's even more difficult."

Today, Fittipaldi and the other 32 starters will get their final practice for Sunday's race. The two-hour practice period is the only time the cars are allowed on the 2½-mile oval this week.

Fittipaldi said he grew up dreaming of racing at Indy.

"I followed the race in magazines and books from the time I was nine, 10 years old," he said. He also got a

Tough To Win When It's Expected

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Boston Celtics' Coach K.C. Jones leaned forward casually, his arms resting against the stage. He rarely spoke as he watched his players' fast-paced scrimmage on the court next to him.

One squad had a front line of Larry Bird, Robert Parish and Kevin McHale. All three played in this year's NBA All-Star game. The other had former NBA Most Valuable Player Bill Walton.

Assistant coaches Jimmy Rodgers and Chris Ford were the referees of Wednesday's intrasquad battle. Like the crowd of reporters viewing the Celtics' return to practice, Jones was a quiet observer.

The picture, however, was misleading.

"It's a myth" that coaching an outstanding team is easy, Rodgers said. "The toughest job to do is to win when everybody expects you to win."

"We do have excellent talent, but you've got to know what to do with that talent and how to handle it, how to motivate it and how to use it best game in and game out, how to keep it sharp, how to put the right offensive and defensive theories into effect."

"I'm talking about a lot of coaching and K.C. has done just a great job."

Jones will be restricting his coaching to practices until the championship playoff round begins next week. Boston will take a 38-game home winning streak and a 57-9 record in its last 66 games into that best-of-seven series.

All five starters averaged more than 15 points per game as the Celtics won 11 of 12 playoff contests. Guard Danny Ainge, who averaged 10.7 points per regular-season game, has averaged 15.9 in the playoffs.

"With him playing the way he's playing right now, it's like our starting five is an all-star team," reserve guard Jerry Sichting said. "Dennis (Johnson) really should have made the all-star team this year and our front line all made the all-star team and Danny's outplayed almost everybody he's faced in the playoffs."

"It's almost unfair to some of these teams that we're playing right now."

"And the Celtics are rested."

Last Sunday, they completed their four-game sweep over Milwaukee in the Eastern Conference finals and took two days off. They resumed practice Wednesday, knowing they wouldn't play again until Monday. Now they also know they'll face Houston, the Wednesday night winner over the Lakers in the Western Conference championship.

"If you watch the way these guys practice, I don't think" the layoff will hurt, Rodgers said. "We've already had experience in this year's playoffs with layoffs."

"Mental rest is very good and they're all going to work hard and stay in shape," he added. "Practices are very competitive so, from that standpoint, we shouldn't have rust on us by the time the series starts."

The Celtics swept Chicago in three games in their opening playoff series, then had four days off. In their next series, they eliminated Atlanta, which had a 50-32 regular-season record, in five games. They had six days off after beating the Hawks, then eliminated Milwaukee, which was 57-25 in the regular season.

"The guys did the job of going out and playing hard basketball," Jones said. "They earned the rest."

"We've been fortunate to take care of business early and give the old bodies time to heal up," Parish said.

Substitute forward Scott Wedman, who suffered two broken ribs Saturday in the third game with Milwaukee, may not have enough time, however.

"We wouldn't say he's done for the year," Celtics' trainer Ray Melchiorre said. "Scotty himself is very optimistic. But he does have two broken ribs."

"After a week, I'd say it'll be a day-to-day situation," he added. "He can't take a deep breath without hurting."

In the regular season, Wedman averaged 8.0 points and 17.7 minutes per game and provided an outside shooting lift off the bench. In 11 playoff games, he averaged 4.1 points and 12.7 minutes.

"It's a baffler," Jones said of replacing Wedman. "Scotty is so important. ... With him out, that really hurts us."

Chicod 18
Bethel Indians 8

BETHEL — Chicod rallied to take an 18-8 baseball victory over the Bethel Indians Wednesday night in the Southern Pitt Little League.

The win served to break a three-way tie for the league lead with Chicod taking over first alone.

Chicod rallied for six runs in the fifth and seven in the sixth to overcome an 8-5 deficit.

Brian Hudson got the win for Chicod, striking out nine. He also added three hits. Shondiel Ruffin and Brian Edwards each added two, one of Ruffin's a homer.

Bethel was led by T. Howard with three, one of them a homer, and M. Howard had two hits.

Little League

Coca-Cola 19
Kiwanis 5

Mark Taylor banged out three hits and Hollis Gunn hit a home run as Coca-Cola romped to a 19-5 baseball win over the Kiwanis in the North State Little League Wednesday.

Coke jumped into the lead with five first inning runs, three of them coming on a triple by Taylor. The Kiwanis came back to score three times in the bottom of the inning to trail 5-3.

In the second, however, Coke scored three more to put the game out of reach. After two were out, Gunn slammed a solo homer. Gene Brown followed with a walk and Taylor singled him to third. A wild pitch scored Brown and moved Taylor to second. After Alex Darden walked, Robert Barnes reached on an errorred fielder's choice that loaded the bases. Lee Jordan then walked to force in Taylor with the eighth Coke run.

Coke went on to add three more in the third and eight in the sixth. The Kiwanis got two more in the fifth.

No one had more than one hit for the Kiwanis.

True Value-Pepsi-Cola

The baseball game between True Value Hardware and Pepsi-Cola, scheduled for Wednesday in the Tar Heel Little League, was rained out.

The contest has been rescheduled for Sunday at 2 p.m., with the site still to be determined.

Babe Ruth League

The Babe Ruth League baseball game between Computerland and Coca-Cola, scheduled for Wednesday night, was rained out. Also rained out was the completion of a game between Everette's Pest Control and Wachovia Bank.

There was no announcement of when the games would be played.

Pasqua Helps Yankees Pop A's

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

A nightmare spring could turn into a dream summer for Dan Pasqua.

Pasqua, who lost a spot on the New York roster with a 5-for-48 performance in spring training, made his first start of the regular season Wednesday night and hit a two-run homer and a two-run double as the Yankees defeated the Oakland A's 10-4.

"Everybody knows I had a bad spring," said Pasqua, whose third-inning homer off Eric Plunk went an estimated 440 feet into the right-center field bleachers. "I worked hard at Columbus (of the International League) to get back here."

"This is what we want the young man to do," Yankees Manager Lou Piniella said. "He's a pull hitter, he can hit the ball out of the ballpark and he belongs right in the heart of our lineup. We brought him here to play him."

Pasqua, who was called up from the minors Sunday, batted cleanup and played right field Wednesday night in place of Dave Winfield, who was rested.

In other American League games, it was Detroit 6, Seattle 4; Baltimore 2, California 1; Texas 2, Kansas City 1 in 10 innings; Boston 3, Minnesota 2; Chicago 5, Toronto 4; and Cleveland 4, Milwaukee 2.

Pasqua said he lost confidence in the spring, which came on the heels of his mother's death in February.

"I went down to Columbus and got my confidence back, got my stroke back," Pasqua said. "I'm waiting on the ball better, seeing the ball better, concentrating better. Once you get your confidence, everything falls into place."

After Pasqua made it 2-0 in the third inning, Butch Wynegar had a solo homer and RBI single and Mike Easley also drove in two runs with a triple and a sacrifice fly.

Winning pitcher Joe Niekro, 5-2, allowed two runs and five hits over seven innings before rookie Jose Canseco hit a two-run homer off Brian Fisher in the eighth, giving Canseco 12 homers this season.

Orioles 2, Angels 1

Cal Ripken Jr. homered for the second consecutive game, giving Baltimore its two runs against California.

Mike Witt, 3-4, had allowed only one hit through six innings, a fourth-inning single by Fred Lynn, before Lynn singled again in the seventh. Ripken, 6-for-38 in the Orioles' current homestand, then hit his fifth homer.

"I haven't been hitting the ball as well as I would like to," Ripken said. "Maybe the two homers are steps in the right direction. It feels pretty good."

Witt finished with a four-hitter despite the loss, while Storm Davis improved his record to 4-2 by scattering eight hits in 8 1-3 innings. Don Aase got the last two outs for his 10th save.

Red Sox 3, Twins 2

Because of two long rain delays, Boston needed nearly 5 1/2 hours to beat Minnesota for its fifth consecutive victory.

The Red Sox trailed 2-0 after five innings when the game was stopped the first time, for 1 hour, 59 minutes. Steve Lyons doubled and scored Boston's first run in the sixth inning before a 40-minute delay in the seventh threatened to give the victory to Minnesota.

When play resumed, Jim Rice singled and Don Baylor doubled off reliever Mark Portugal, 0-5. Frank Pastore replaced Portugal, but Tony Armas' infield out tied the score and Lyons singled, scoring Baylor to make it 3-2.

Sammy Stewart, 3-1, who pitched 2 1-3 innings, got the victory and Bob Stanley pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

Rangers 2, Royals 1

George Wright, inserted into the game as a pinch-runner in the eighth inning, tripled in the winning run in the 10th for Texas against Kansas City.

Pete O'Brien set up the game-winning hit with a two-out single off Steve Farr, 2-1, and O'Brien came all the way around when Wright hit the ball into the right field corner.

Texas broke a scoreless tie in the eighth on Tom Paciorek's RBI single, and Jose Guzman took a five-hit shutout into the ninth. But the Royals scored their first run in 19 innings to tie the score.

Rudy Law doubled for his third hit of the game, went to third on a wild pitch by reliever Mitch Williams and scored on Frank White's infield grounder.

Indians 4, Brewers 2

Tom Candiotti allowed only one Milwaukee baserunner after the second inning and finished with a four-hitter for Cleveland.

Candiotti, 3-4, signed by Cleveland as a free agent in December after five years in the Milwaukee organization, mixed a knuckleball and curve while limiting the Brewers to four singles in his first appearance against his former teammates.

"In the first couple of innings, I had to find the right speed," Candiotti said. "After the third inning, I found it."

The Indians got all four of their runs in the second inning off Bill Wegman, 0-4.

Shortstop Dan Rohn, added to the lineup when Julio Franco complained of an upset stomach, keyed the big inning with a two-run single.

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 4

Chicago rallied from a 4-1 deficit to win their seventh consecutive game, the longest White Sox winning streak since July 1984.

Toronto scored four runs in the second inning off White Sox starter Neil Allen on a three-run homer by Cliff Johnson and Damaso Garcia's RBI double, but Chicago got single runs in the second, fifth and sixth to tie the score.

Pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston singled home Tim Lulett from third base in the eighth for the winning run. Lulett had singled off Jim Acker, 1-3, taken second on a passed ball and third on a sacrifice.

Gene Nelson, 4-1, pitched two innings for the victory.

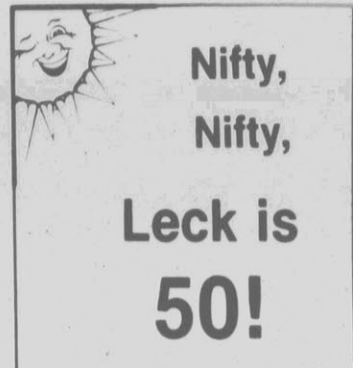

Tigers 6, Mariners 4

Larry Herndon homered and doubled to bring Detroit from behind, and Eric King earned his first major-league victory with a sparkling relief job.

The Mariners took a 4-3 lead with three runs in the fourth inning, the first two on solo homers by Gorman Thomas and Jim Presley. King replaced Tigers starter Frank Tanana with no outs and a runner on third and Seattle got the go-ahead run on a groundout.

Herndon tied the score with his second homer in the sixth and he hit a run-scoring double in the seventh to put the Tigers in front.

Meanwhile, King stopped Seattle on one hit and one walk in the final six innings.

Rozelle Testimony Is Nearing End

NEW YORK (AP) — The six jurors in the USFL's $1.5 billion antitrust suit against the NFL may finally get a chance to hear from a witness other than Pete Rozelle.

The NFL Commissioner, who has been the only witness during the first five days of the trial, is expected to finish his testimony today after being questioned for the second time by the NFL's attorney, Frank Rothman.

Rozelle was questioned Wednesday by USFL lawyer Harvey Myerson, who attempted to get the commissioner to acknowledge he has misstated or misspoken on various points during the more than 21 hours he spent on the stand. The closest he came to achieving that was when Rozelle admitted he had misspoken when he said that Leon Hess was not running the New York Jets in 1982 — Hess actually took over in 1977.

Rozelle also disclosed Wednesday that he had twice had contacts concerning Donald Trump, owner of the New Jersey Generals of the USFL.

The first was through an intermediary who told Rozelle in a 1983 phone conversation that Trump was interested in buying the NFL's Baltimore Colts. The second, he said, was in March 1984, when he met with Trump at a New York hotel for a purpose he didn't disclose.

Trump, a New York real estate entrepreneur, has been painted by NFL attorneys as a man who wants to force a merger between the leagues although Trump himself has denied that.

The disclosure of the Trump-Rozelle contacts came after Myerson attempted to get Rozelle to acknowledge that he tried to entice some of the wealthier USFL owners out of their league, as recommended in a study by a Harvard Business School professor on how to "conquer" the USFL.

Rozelle has disavowed the study and said he had no prior knowledge of it.

He did acknowledge, however, having contact with two owners — Trump and A. Alfred Taubman.

Rozelle said his only contact with Taubman was at a Christmas party in 1984, when Taubman, who still had an interest in the USFL Oakland Invaders, approached him.

He described Taubman as "a man of substance, a good owner" but described it primarily as "dinner conversation."

As for Trump, Rozelle said his first contact came in a phone conversation with an unnamed intermediary in the summer of 1983, six months before the Harvard study and several months before Trump announced he had purchased the Generals.

"I told the intermediary," Rozelle said, "that it would be a waste of time for Donald to try to buy the Colts. I said that two different groups had tried to buy the Colts and that in my judgement I didn't think Mr. (Robert) Irsay would sell a controlling interest."

Rozelle said he later met with

Trump in March 1984, after the purchase of the Generals. Rozelle said the meeting took place at New York's Hotel Pierre after he received a call from Trump, whom the NFL maintains has been trying to force a USFL-NFL merger.

"He said he would rent a room there — a suite — and would I meet with him, and we had a discussion at that time," Rozelle testified.

"And at that time," Myerson asked, "did you tell Mr. Trump in words or substance that you wished he had bought the Colts and not gone with the USFL?"

"No," Rozelle replied.

"And did you tell him that if he hadn't gone into the USFL, the USFL would have died," Myerson asked.

"No," Rozelle replied.

Braves' New Attitude Helps Them Top Cubs 9-8

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

General Manager Bobby Cox says the best trade Atlanta made during the winter was bringing in Chuck Tanner to manage the Braves.

And Tanner's special brand of optimism seems to be rubbing off, not only on the Braves' collective psyche but their performance on the field, too.

The Braves pulled out a 9-8 triumph Wednesday night in 13 innings over the visiting Chicago Cubs when reliever George Frazier walked rookie Andres Thomas with the bases loaded. It was the Braves' sixth straight victory.

"It wasn't like the club needed to be rebuilt," said Cox, hired as general manager last Oct. 22 after managing Toronto in 1985. "What it really needed was a new attitude, and that comes with Chuck. Right now, he's our best trade."

Elsewhere in the National League it was New York 7, San Francisco 4; Pittsburgh 2, Houston 1; St. Louis 8, Cincinnati 3; San Diego 7, Philadelphia 2; and Los Angeles 6, Montreal 1.

The winning run was unearned after Bob Horner reached safely on third baseman Manny Trillo's fielding error to open the 13th.

Pitcher Jeff Dedmon then forced Horner at second and raced to third on Rafael Ramirez's fourth double of the game. After Ozzie Virgil was walked intentionally, Thomas drew the game-winning walk.

The four doubles by Ramirez tied a major-league record shared by many and last accomplished by Boston's Rick Miller in 1981.

"I hit the ball hard," Ramirez said. "I used to try to hit home runs but I don't do that anymore. I just try to hit the ball hard."

Ramirez, who made 32 errors at shortstop in 1985, has recently been replaced at that position by the rookie Thomas. But they were both heroes Wednesday night.

"He's young and he's a good player," Ramirez said of Thomas. "He needs a little experience. It doesn't matter if he plays shortstop to me. I know I can play shortstop. I don't look at it as being put under any pressure. I'm playing well, he's playing well."

"It just tells you everbody's scrapping like heck," Tanner said. "They just have that positive attitude going for us. That was possibly a bigger win for us than if we had won it in nine innings."

Jody Davis was the reason the Braves didn't win in nine.

The Cubs gained an 8-8 tie with two Fittipaldi...

Bream doubled and scored on Jim Morrison's single in the second and hit his seventh homer off starter Mike Scott in the fourth.

Rhoden, 3-3, struck out six and walked three in snapping a personal three-game losing streak.

Scott, 4-3, pitched seven innings allowing six hits and striking out nine to equal his career high for the fifth time this season. Scott leads the National League with 77 strikeouts.

helping hand from his father, a racing journalist and broadcaster. "He told me, 'If you want to race, take it seriously. Understand the risks. Know your limitations. Don't race just so you can tell some girl, 'I'm a race car driver.' Know what you're doing.'"

At 15, Fittipaldi was racing motorcycles. At 17 it was Go-Karts, then on to sedans, Formula Three, Formula Two and Formula One cars. In 1974 he finally made it to Indianapolis, but only to test cars for McLaren. He stayed away from the race. The cars, he felt, were dangerous, too weak for their speeds.

He preferred Formula One - until three years ago, when he retired from the circuit. By then, he felt, those cars had become too dangerous. Besides, there was the personal wear and tear, traveling through five continents, being away from his family too often.

He passed his Indy driver's test in 1984 and, as a rookie, finished 32nd in the 33-car field, a blown engine knocking him out of the race after 37 of 200 laps. In 1985 he ran with the leaders most of the way, leading for 11 of the 188 laps he completed before retiring with a faulty fuel line.

"The first year there was no pressure," he said. "I was new here. I was with a new team. Nobody expected us to do well. Last year, with the Patrick Racing Team, better equipment and all, we started to feel the pressure. Now I think the pressure is really intense on some of us."

It vanishes, he said, when he gets behind the wheel.

"The two weeks before Indianapolis are like no other race in the world. The two weeks of qualifying, the buildup, everything, it's amazing. Then you walk out here on the day of the race and you see that enormous crowd, all those people. But when I start driving, it's like any other race."

Typhoon's Death Toll Climbs To 71

HONIARA, Solomon Islands (AP) — Rescue workers today found the bodies of 65 people buried in mud and debris on the Guadalcanal plains, boosting the death toll from Typhoon Namu to at least 71, officials said.

Many more people are missing and feared dead, particularly on outlying islands where officials say casualties and damage have been impossible to ascertain because of downed communications.

"The death toll stands at 71," said John Selwyn, a disaster committee spokesman. "We think hundreds died but we still don't know how many. Many areas are remote. Reports are still coming in. We'll know in a few days."

Namu, which Selwyn said was the worst typhoon in the archipelago's history, roared into the Solomon Islands on Monday packing 115 mph winds and cutting a swath of destruction through the archipelago located 1,000 miles northeast of Australia.

"It is certain that many people are buried in mud," Selwyn said.

The storm was reported to have headed southeast toward New Caledonia, but was weakening and was not expected to cause any major damage there.

The Australian Associated Press said many of the bodies were those of old people, women and children. They were found today hours after Prime Minister Sir Peter Kenilorea declared the 900-mile-long Pacific Island chain a disaster area.

Preliminary reports had put the death toll at six, with dozens missing and up to 90,000 left homeless.

Most of the missing were swept away by fast-flowing rivers that burst their banks on Guadalcanal, the main island on which the archipelago's capital of Honiara is located. Entire villages were destroyed by high seas, and other inland villages were washed down hillsides by mudslides.

The Australian Associated Press said all available ships and aircraft were being used to transport food, medicine and tents to the island chain, which covers an area about the size of Maryland.

Rescue teams dug out 43 bodies on Guadalcanal, one of the worst-affected areas, and later reports said they had found another 22 bodies. Most of the victims appeared to have been from the same village, Valebaiki, which eyewitnesses said vanished in a wall of water.

The Guadalcanal plains, scene of fierce fighting between the United States and Japan during World War II, is the country's rice bowl and officials reported that most rice, copra and coconut crops were destroyed.

"It has been pretty much wiped out," said John Given, senior administrative officer at the Australian High Commission. "There won't be a harvest for at least six months. Food is going to be a major problem."

The outlying islands of Sikiana, Malaita, Makira, Rennell and Bellona were also badly battered by the storm, and relief workers were trying to reach those areas by canoe.

"The supplies are getting through," Given said. "They haven't got to the isolated villages yet, but they will."

Australia and New Zealand were airlifting supplies of food, medicine, tents, tarpaulins and plastic sheeting for the homeless. Angki said the United States, the European Community, Japan and Britain also had offered aid.

"They all want to know in what areas they can help," he said.

The Royal Australian Air Force dispatched three C-130 transports to Honiara and provided helicopters for reconnaissance.

An Australian pilot, who flew over the area earlier but was unable to land because of 3-foot-deep water at the Honiara airport on Guadalcanal, described the scene as "a sea of mud with roofs sticking out."

About 800 miles north of the Solomons Islands, government offices and schools in Pohnpei reopened Wednesday after a weekend typhoon there caused an estimated $11.6 million damage, officials said.

A disaster emergency was declared on Pohnpei, one of the four states in the Federated States of Micronesia, following Typhoon Lola, which came within 100 miles of the island on Saturday.

Winds of more than 50 miles per hour, with gusts of more than 100 mph buffeted the island, tearing roofs from homes and knocking over trees. The storm-caused no fatalities.

Stolen Art May Have Left Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Police watched airports and docks today for some of the world's most valuable and best-known paintings that were stolen from a mansion south of Dublin, but news reports suggested they already may have been spirited out of the country.

Thieves took 17 paintings early Wednesday from Russborough House 15 miles southwest of Dublin, including works by Gainsborough, Goya, Rubens and Vermeer.

Within hours, a group of boys found the seven least valuable pictures by an abandoned van near Blessington, about 20 miles southwest of Belfast. Two of them had been damaged, but police did not say immediately how bad the damage was.

The stolen paintings were valued at between $30 million and $45 million by Desmond Fitzgerald, Dublin representative of the auctioneers Christie's.

But Brian Sewell, a London art critic, said just one of the 10 missing paintings, "Lady Writing a Letter with a Maid" by the Dutch master Jan Vermeer, could alone be worth that sum because it is the only Vermeer work that might be available for purchase.

Although police were keeping a watch on airports and docks, the British domestic news agency Press Association said there were fears in Dublin that the masterpieces could have been flown to the European continent early Wednesday, before it was discovered that they were missing.

The Irish Republican Army looted 19 paintings from the mansion in 1974 in what was then called the biggest art robbery in history. But police on that occasion recovered the 19 works, valued at $20.4 million, unscathed after eight days.

Western Allies Planning Protest Of U.S. Policies

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Western defense chiefs met at NATO headquarters today with sources saying at least three European members of the alliance planned to protest U.S. plans to produce new chemical weapons.

The one-day meeting of the defense ministers of all 16 NATO nations except France and Iceland was expected to focus on prospects for improving Western cooperation in the fight against terrorism, and on the implications of scaled-down defense spending by many NATO nations.

The session began with a meeting limited to the chief delegates and one aide apiece. A full plenary session was scheduled for the afternoon, following by a closing news conference.

NATO officials who spoke on condition they not be identified said Norway, Denmark and the Netherlands were expected to tell U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger that a start-up of American chemical arms production would risk worsening the superpower arms race.

Also, the three nations were concerned that renewed chemical weapons production could lessen chances for a global ban on chemical arms, said the North Atlantic Treaty Organization officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

Greece also is opposed to the U.S. plan but may not formally state its position in today's meeting, said Leonidas Antonakopoulos, a government spokesman. He said his country already had registered its disapproval.

The United States unilaterally halted production of chemical weapons in 1969.

Today's session of the defense chiefs, meeting in Brussels as NATO's Defense Planning Committee, could not directly veto the American plan to produce a new generation of chemical weapons. But it could jeopardize final congressional approval.

Chernobyl Shows Need For 'Better Facilities'

MOSCOW (AP) — Experts dealing with the Chernobyl nuclear disaster did not have all the equipment they needed, and engineers have been brought to the scene to plan how to deal with any future reactor accidents, a Soviet official said.

Meanwhile, a Soviet official said today in Vienna, Austria, that the death toll from the April 26 nuclear accident at the Ukrainian power station has risen to 15. It was not known whether the new figure included two men the Soviets said died the day of the accident.

Boris Semyonov also told the International Atomic Energy Agency that 20 people were in critical condition from radiation sickness. It was reported earlier that 35 people were hospitalized after the accident with severe radiation sickness, and an American doctor said last week 11 of those patients had died.

In a Radio Moscow interview Wednesday night, Deputy Premier Ivan Silayev said Soviet technology did not perform badly after the Chernobyl accident, but the disaster suggested "better facilities" are needed.

"The incident has taught us a great deal," Silayev he Radio Moscow in the broadcast monitored in London by the British Broadcasting Corp.

His comments marked the first time a Soviet official has suggested that equipment had not been adequate to combat a radiation accident at the Chernobyl plant 80 miles north of Kiev.

Other officials, however, have complained about the initial response by on-site personnel to the reactor explosion and fire, and about the organization of radiation-warning services around the plant.

Also in Vienna today, International Atomic Energy Agency policy makers said today they have reached preliminary agreement on ways to make nuclear plants safer, including setting up panels of government experts to work out a system of mandatory reporting of nuclear accidents.

Intensified Shelling Leaves 35 Dead In Beirut Street Fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem and Christian gunners rained shells and rockets on Beirut's residential neighborhoods today in the worst random bombardment in four months. Police said 35 people were killed and 160 wounded.

The battles erupted at dusk Wednesday and raged all night.

A cease-fire was called at daybreak today, but collapsed six hours later, and the duels with heavy artillery, multibarreled rocket launchers and tank cannons resumed at midday.

The hostilities shattered a two-week-old truce between Lebanese militias that was called for Ramadan, Islam's holy month of fasting.

Siren-wailing ambulances raced through the streets as fighting raged well into the afternoon. Hospitals issued urgent appeals for blood donations, and schools and universities on both sides of the dividing Green Line sent their students home.

Police said 28 people were killed and 100 wounded in the exchanges from dusk Wednesday to dawn today. Seven others were killed and 60 wounded since midday, police said.

One Lebanese soldier was killed in the fighting, but the rest of those killed and most of the wounded were civilians, police said. The fighting centered on the Green Line that separates Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Hundreds of families spent the night huddled in basements and bomb shelters as blasts shook the city of 1 million inhabitants.

"We haven't had such a horrific night in many months," said Jamila Billan, a Christian housewife reached by telephone in the Christian sector of the Lebanese capital. "We slept, all of us, my husband and three kids, in the shelter all night."

Police said the militias used 155mm howitzers, U.S.-made M-48 tank cannon and Soviet-made multibarreled rocket launchers.

Wheelchair-Bound Producer Too Busy To Be Handicapped

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — You could call Rift Fournier handicapped, but he's much too busy turning out the syndicated television series "Cover Story" to ask for special treatment. "I'll turn up at a location site, get out of my rented car, get into my wheelchair and go to work," he said. "I don't have an entourage, I don't want any fuss. No one is going to treat me like a minority."
"I've been in a wheelchair most of my life," said Fournier, who had polio at age 17. "Funny as it may seem, I've never perceived it as having anything to do with what I do. I'm in a wheelchair, that's it."
"I've never acted like there's any reason people should be put off by it, so people never were. I have a lot of fun doing what I do."
Fournier is the producer-writer-director of "Cover Story," which takes a weekly in-depth look at a top entertainer or celebrity. It's been on the USA Cable Network for three years. This fall, it will be syndicated to more than 30 stations.

Among its subjects, "Cover Story" has showcased Bob Hope, Hal Linden, Patti LaBelle, Kool and the Gang, and co-hosts Bryant Gumbel and Jane Pauley of NBC's "Today" show.
"Each show is like an old Life magazine cover story, except I use film clips," he said. "I let the subject tell it in the first person. You never hear the questions."
The show got its start about 10 years ago when Fournier tried to come up with a People magazine type of show.
"The show was around for about five years after we did the pilot," he said. "Then a friend of mine saw it and said, 'This show should be on the air.' Well, I'd heard that before. He walks out with my tape. I don't see him for two years, and I can't find him to get my tape back. Then he called me one April day in 1983. He said, 'I think we have a deal.'"
The show went on USA Cable in 1984. "My view was that we'd treat cable as Off Broadway," Fournier said. "You take a show to cable and try it out. We were involved from the start with a sponsor, Procter & Gamble, and they have a part ownership. They're the reason we're on the air. They also wanted to learn about cable."
Fournier said his show "represents the new fractionalization of television."
"The day of the networks assuming the advertising dollar is theirs is over," Fournier said. "People know how to turn the dial now. I think it's going to make television better."
Fournier, who grew up in the Midwest, has been in television for more than 25 years. One of his first jobs was co-producer of "The Mike Douglas Show." He directed commercials and wrote scripts for "Charlie's Angels," "Kojak," "The Incredible Hulk," "Baretta," "Helltown" and "Highway to Heaven." He wrote the movie "Nowhere to Hide," which was the highest rated television movie for the 1977-78 season.
He won a Peabody and an Emmy award for the NBC children's series "The Go Show." Fournier, who is recently re-married, has four children.

He does 20 "Cover Story" shows a year. He has a staff of eight but hires crews whenever he goes on location.

Paycheck Remaining Behind Bars

HILLSBORO, Ohio (AP) — Country music singer Johnny Paycheck remains in jail following his conviction in a barroom shooting, apparently unable to make $50,000 appeal bond.
Paycheck, 47, was convicted Friday on aggravated assault, use of a weapon during the crime and tampering with evidence by throwing away the handgun used to wound Larry Wise in the Dec. 19 shooting.
Prosecutor Rocky Coss said Wednesday he mailed paperwork for sending Paycheck to state prison to defense attorney Ralph Buss on Tuesday. As soon as Buss returns the paperwork, Paycheck will be en route to serve up to 9½ years in prison.
A jury acquitted Paycheck of a charge of carrying a concealed weapon, but rejected his defense that Wise bullied him and that he shot the larger Wise in self-defense.

Donahue Plans Soviet Link-Up

NEEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — Television talk show host Phil Donahue and Soviet commentator Vladimir Pozner announced plans for a televised "citizens' summit," linking 200 Boston-area women next month with 200 women in Leningrad.
Pozner said Wednesday the impact of "Citizens' Summit II: Women To Women" will go far beyond the 400 women participants on June 22.
"It's the power of that discussion being watched by, in the Soviet Union, virtually the entire nation ... relating to the other side like human beings," he told a news conference.
Pozner and Donahue held a similar question-and-answer show last December that linked an audience in Seattle with one in Leningrad.

N.Y. Director To Control Worldwide 'Sport Aid'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — This Sunday, as he directs live coverage for the two-hour fund-raising special "Sport Aid," Tony Verna will have the world at his fingertips.

Verna will be in New York, in control of approximately 75 cameras covering simultaneous 10-kilometer footraces in 15 cities including Rome; Budapest, Hungary; Auckland, New Zealand, and New York. The events will be broadcast by satellite to 60 countries.
Officials for "Sport Aid," which has a fund-raising target of $100 million for African famine relief, are still negotiating for an American cable outlet.
Verna worked at CBS Sports before helping found Global Media Ltd. He has directed live coverage of five Super Bowls, 12 Kentucky Derbies, and numerous pro hockey and pro basketball playoffs. He is president of the television division of Global Media.
"Sport Aid" reunites Verna with Irish rock singer and fund-raiser Bob Geldof. They had worked together on "Live Aid," which brought together many of the top rock music performers in a day of concerts televised from London and Philadelphia last year.
"I was in London last week coordinating the logistics of the coverage so that I'll know approximately where all the runners will be at any given time," Verna said. "That way I'll be able to switch to Rome as the runners pass the Coliseum or to Budapest as they run by the Danube River.

"It'll be daytime in some places, nighttime in others. The races will take only about 30 minutes. After that I'll show all the finishes. Then I'll show the Earth as it looked when the race started." For that shot, he'll use the EROS-6 weather satellite over the Pacific.
The "Sport Aid" races will get under way with an African runner who will light a cauldron. "The instant the cauldron lights up I send a signal to 15 cities around the world starting the race," Verna said.
"Then it all comes in like a punch in the face."
"Sport Aid" will be more complicated than "Live Aid," which was broadcast only in English. At the site of each race will be an English-speaking commentator. Each country will also supply New York with crowd sounds on an open line.
In New York, WCBS-TV newscaster Rolland Smith will put it all in perspective and his narration and the crowd sounds will be transmitted around the world. Each country has the option of translating the English commentary and mixing it with the open sound line.

TV Arrest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stephen H. Dart, an actor and Democratic candidate for Congress, plans to arrest Republican stalwart and actor Charlton Heston in front of the nation tonight.
The arrest will be on the season finale of ABC-TV's "The Colbys," in which Dart, appearing as a cop, arrests Jason Colby, played by Heston in the spinoff of "Dynasty."
"I had to do what any good Democrat would do," said Dart, who appears regularly as an attorney in television's "Divorce Court."

Collared

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jeweler helped collar a man accused of stealing a necklace that was among $30,000 worth of jewelry taken from singer Patti LaBelle's luggage when she boarded an airplane, authorities said.
The jeweler, the man who made the necklace, recognized it as Miss LaBelle's when he was offered it for sale. He bought it, obtained the identity of the seller and phoned the singer, authorities said.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, MAY 23, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's full moon brings you a chance to wind up some plans that have been pending for some time, after which a new dispensation for you occurs in which conditions lighten up a bit.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get caught up on unfinished business in the morning, and then plan how to improve your day-by-day routines.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make sure you keep a promise made to an associate in the morning, and then handle other affairs that you have put aside.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have been having difficulty performing some task but can handle it now. Make a good impression on someone influential.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Confirm an appointment for recreation and then get right to work and do a fine job with the cooperation of fellow workers.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You have a duty to handle for a family tie, so get at it early and finish it. Try to improve conditions at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get desk work handled early and then handle any problematical affairs connected with your home and family.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be sure to handle important financial affairs in the morning, since later you will have to give full attention to outside tasks.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get your own goal worked out nicely in the morning, and then later work on money matters that have long-term aspects.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sensible in completing a private affair, and later concentrate on a difficult problem with another.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) In the morning, you finally gain an aim that has been difficult to do before this, and then go after another one that seems elusive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle that civic matter which you have been neglecting, then later you can get the true facts and figures.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You should have success with a new venture in the morning, and later you can handle civic and credit affairs well.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will easily ferret out the truth of any situation that eludes others, so slant the education along professional lines that require this fine ability. In mid-life, your progeny follows another profession where the experience acquired can be put to the best and most constructive use.

At rubber bridge, if you are vulnerable and the opponents are not, you should be happy to accept an opposing sacrifice bid that will cost at least 300 points if you can't be certain of your contract at the next level. At duplicate, even 500 is not enough if you can make a game, so it is often right to bid one more rather than accept the sacrifice, even if you can't be sure of fulfilling your contract.

This hand is from the final session of the Open Pairs event at the recent Spring North American Championships, held in Portland, Ore. Sitting North-South were Edith Rosenkranz of Mexico City and Jeff Meckstroth of Columbus, Ohio. Meckstroth's two-spade jump overall was of the intermediate variety, showing a good suit and the equivalent of a sound opening bid. East's decision to bid five clubs did nothing other than steer his partner to an inferior opening lead after Meckstroth elected to compete rather than double.

Declarer won the jack of clubs opening lead with the ace and led the queen, prepared to discard if East did not cover. When the king came up, Meckstroth trumped, noting West's eight. He drew trumps in three rounds, West discarding a diamond on the third trump.

Since East was likely to have 10 cards in the two suits he bid and he had already shown up with three spades, declarer elected to play him for no diamonds at all. At trick six, therefore, he led the four of diamonds and, when West followed with the three, he called for dummy's five, which won! The seven of clubs was covered by the ten and ruffed, and a heart went away on the six of clubs. Meckstroth lost only one heart for almost all the matchpoints.

Celebrities Will Join Hand Chain

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Celebrities ranging from Kenny Rogers to Yoko Ono to Mickey Mouse and Goofy will be among millions of Americans holding Hands Across America on Sunday in an effort to raise money for the nation's hungry.

Mickey Mouse and Goofy will join 1,320 Disneyland employees, 20,000 people will snake through the Magic Kingdom and TV preacher Robert Schuller's flock will watch the line meander through the nearby Crystal Cathedral.

The Monkees, the revived 1960s music group, will be in Pennsylvania, Oprah Winfrey of "The Color Purple" and magician David Copperfield will be in Ohio, and Dionne Warwick will be in New Jersey. Liza Minelli, Michael Douglas, Susan Anton, Gregory Hines and Edward Olmos will be holding hands in New York.

Ken Kragen, organizer of USA for Africa and Hands Across America, will anchor the 4,152-mile line from its starting point in New York City's Battery Park, while 8,000 non-celebrities will anchor the other end by forming a Hands Across America logo with balloons alongside the Queen Mary in Long Beach.

Organizers have come up short on plans for a continuous human chain of 6 million to 10 million Americans from sea to sea. Kragen said $100 million would be raised for the nation's hungry.

Although momentum is building in the final days and organizers expect a surge of participants, realities have dashed the dreams of a continuous human linkup. Gaps now appear in California and Arizona, and sections of New Mexico and Texas will surely be empty.

"Our goal is not to have a stunt, not a hand-in-hand demonstration," California organizer Roger Carrick said Wednesday, explaining the 100-mile gap in his state.

Protest

LONDON (AP) — Guards ejected three women from the public gallery of the House of Commons after one threw white powder and leaflets into the chamber below during a debate on dumping nuclear waste.

The powder, believed to be harmless, floated down on to the carpet near the entrance to the chamber but missed legislators. The demonstration came as William Waldegrave, minister of state at the Environment Department, put the Conservative government's case for letting the Nuclear Industry Waste Executive test four sites as possible underground dumps for low-level radioactive waste.
