Howell Praises ECU-PCC Cooperation

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. John Howell, chancellor of East Carolina University, praised the cooperation of Pitt Community College and ECU at the community college's graduation Thursday night, and asked the graduates to consider the harmony between the two institutions as a personal role model.

Howell, the keynote speaker, discussed the "two educational institutions in the same city doing some of the same things and living in peace."

Approximately 200 graduates of PCC marched down the aisle of Mendenhall Student Center at ECU in dark blue caps and gowns. The ceremony drew an overflow audience to the center.

"A population more than adequately educated to deal with the problems of society is such a remote possibility that we need not worry about needing to fight each other for students or clients to serve in the surrounding community," Howell told the graduates. "There will be much more educational work to do than the two institutions can accomplish.

"ECU and PCC sit in the middle of a region that is on the threshold of new economic development," Howell said. "It is an area with a poor record, when compared to other places in this country, in high school graduation rates and college attendance. It is a situation in which ECU and PCC, running as fast as they can, can only hope to stand still, to supply the current demand of skilled manpower.

"The work required to gain on the problem has left neither of us the time in the past to compete with each other, nor will we have it in the future, no matter how much we both grow in size," the chancellor said.

"We need to cooperate with other individuals and other institutions whenever we can," he told the graduates. "We know that progress does sometimes result from conflict and competition. We also know that the result of conflict and competition is sometimes destruction, or victory for one side at a terrible cost to the opponent or to the society in general."

Graduate Dollie W. Harper, presenting the student response, said, "We are at a point in our lives that each of you has helped us reach. I know it took dedication, motivation and a lot of preparation to bring us this far. We are the men and women of the future. You have taught us well and we will lead the way."

The introduction of the candidates for degrees and diplomas was made by Dr. Edgar L. Boyd, PCC dean of students, and degrees were conferred by Clifton W. Everett, chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees, and Dr. E.B. Bright, PCC dean of instruction.

The invocation and benediction were presented by the Rev. E.T. Vinson, and PCC President Charles E. Russell welcomed the audience. Howell was introduced by Kay V. Whichard, vice chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees.

Pitt Community OKs $3.5 Million Local Budget Plan

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

A budget proposal of $3,524,544 from local funding was approved by the Pitt Community College Board of Trustees Thursday for the institution's 1986-87 fiscal year.

The budget, which was recommended by the PCC Finance Committee, includes requests of $9,216 in local money for the president's salary, $30,870 for security and $198,142 for maintenance purposes. The housekeeping and custodial request was $137,158. The general institutional request of $715,135, includes funds for heat, water and electricity, service contracts and motor vehicle operation.

A total of $771,873 was requested for operational capital funds to be used for general equipment, site and improvements to the campus and alterations and additions to buildings. Also included in the institutional commitment was $1,662,150 in funds for a vocational building on the campus.

The Pitt County Commissioners will discuss the PCC budget request Wednesday at 11 a.m. State funding will make up the remainder of PCC's budget for next year.

Also approved by the board Thursday were budget changes and resolutions to this year's budget, bringing the total operating budget for 1985-86 to $8,408,296. An increase of $21,934 was made to the current operating budget to reflect money coming from state funds for single parents, handicapped, disadvantaged and driver's education. The total increase in plant funds was $16,555, which included the repayment of a loan the institution made to Stanley Technical College last year. The increase in institutional funds was $20,449 from unrestricted gifts, 25th anniversary funds and overhead receipts.

The trustees adopted committee recommendations for employment of personnel for 1986-87. The recommendations included the reappointment and the appointment of staff members.

The trustees adopted a resolution asking for the placement of a stoplight on N.C. 11 at the entrance to the community college. The resolution will be sent to the N.C. Department of Transportation.

Chairman Clifton W. Everette appointed a nominating committee composed of trustees Ed Davenport, who will serve as chairman, Raymond Reddick and Joe Taft.

The trustees gave approval for the PCC employees to voluntarily participate in the Supplemental Retirement Income Plan.

Vice Chairman Kay V. Whichard and board secretary Mary Langston reported on the N.C. Association of Community College Trustees meeting they attended recently.

chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees. Howell, who was the keynote speaker, discussed the cooperation of ECU and PCC. The commencement was held in the Mendenhall Student Center on the campus of ECU. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Holiday To Close Offices

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Memorial Day is traditionally the beginning of the summer holiday season, and it will provide a three-day weekend for most working people.

Although all city, county, state and federal offices will be closed Monday, Greenville-Pitt schools will have classes, according to Barry Gaskins, public information spokesman for the school system.

"We take Memorial Day at Christmas," he said. "That's one of the reasons we have such a long Christmas (vacation) because we make up holidays we miss during the year."

East Carolina University also will hold classes. Pitt Community College offices will be open, but summer-quarter classes have not begun.

The post office will be closed, but

Thatcher Defends U.S. Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said today that the Soviet Union should stop making chemical weapons.

Mrs. Thatcher said criticism of the United States, which plans to resume chemical-weapons production, is misplaced.

"It is the Soviet Union who is at fault in making and stockpiling chemical weapons," she told Cable News Network. "It is they who should be asked to stop."

The U.S. decision to resume nerve gas production has split the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Some allies said Thursday the rift jeopardizes chances of winning a global ban on chemical arms. Britain, along with West Germany and Canada, were the only NATO allies in full support of the U.S. plan.

Mrs. Thatcher said the Soviet Union, not the United States, was to

Child's Car Prize To Go Into Trust

HONOLULU (AP) — An 11-year-old Vietnamese immigrant whose prize of a $9,000 car in an essay contest could have jeopardized her family's welfare benefits, will get the money placed in an educational trust after the car is auctioned off, contest organizers said.

Meanwhile, an unidentified donor here has offered to buy the family the best car he can find for $1,499, which the state attorney general's office says the family could keep without jeopardizing their benefits, Reg Schwenke, president of the Aloha Liberty Foundation, said Thursday.

Schwenke's organization sponsored the statewide Statue of Liberty essay contest won by sixth-grader Hue Cao, who lives with her widowed mother and two brothers.

She can't keep the $9,000 1987 Nissan Sentra XE she won because her family's welfare benefits would be cut off under federal regulations if the family has resources worth more than $1,500.

Schwenke appealed to the White House to see if there were some way President Reagan could waive the regulation in the case of Hue's family.

"The White House pulled every string in Washington to expedite this matter," but reported Thursday that "there is no way that President Reagan can break the law. The law is very specific, very clear," Schwenke said.

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said today the federal government would accept the sale of the car, with the proceeds placed in a trust for use after the girl turns 18.

Meanwhile, Hue told reporters at a news conference Thursday that she has learned that America is "a land where there is liberty and justice" and there are laws not even the president can break.

Reagan phoned the girl at the news conference to congratulate her on her essay, but he did not mention the controversy.

Driver's Fine Paid In Wreck

By CAROLTYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The driver of a school bus that was struck by a train at a crossing on state road 1726 east of Greenville Wednesday was questioned by a team from the National Transportation Safety Board this morning, school officials said.

The bus, driven by Curtis Lee Jones, 20, an East Carolina University student from Williamston, was carrying 12 children home from Wahl-Coates School when the accident occurred.

Sgt. Coy Blackman of the N.C. Highway Patrol said Jones had gone to a magistrate's office and paid his fine on a charge of failing to reduce speed to avoid an accident, thus waiving his right to appear in court. Blackman said no further charges have been filed.

The bus had the portion from its rear wheels back sheared away by a Southern Railway train after Jones attempted unsuccessfully to drive the bus across the tracks before it became blocked by the train. All of the passengers apparently were seated from the middle of the bus forward. The bus was spun around into an embankment, but it did not overturn and no serious injuries occurred.

One child, Donta Barrett, 11, remains hospitalized in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Interviewed by telephone this morning in his hospital room, he said he has not been told when he can go home, that he has two broken bones, stitches in his leg, a hurting toe and a hurting neck.

All but two of the other children returned to school this morning, Laurie Weston, assistant principal of Wahl-Coates School, said. All but three were absent on Thursday.

The National Transportation Safety Board investigators have questioned most of bus passengers, some at school, Ms. Weston said.

Jones has been suspended from bus driving until the investigation is completed. Whether there will be any further disciplinary action by the schools will be decided after the investigation is finished, according to Tom Craft, associate superintendent of Pitt County schools.

Shaw Appeal Scheduled

By HAROLD JOYNER
Reflector Staff Writer

A Shaw University official told district members of the General Baptist State Convention that the school's financial crisis with the Internal Revenue Service can be solved if the more than 400,000 members contribute at least $2 each to the fund.

"Shaw University has an urgent need," said Joe Paige, executive vice president of Shaw Divinity School — a separate private educational organization on the same campus.

"I know we can get the help from you, our family," he said.

The Internal Revenue Service filed liens against the century-old, predominantly black university May 5, and told the school to pay a back tax of $750,000 within the next three months.

Paige was one of 10 school officials across the state who spoke Thursday night at a meeting of six eastern associations of the statewide Baptist convention at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church.

Paige called upon fellow Baptists to give up one luxury such as going to the beach or buying a pack of cigarettes and give the money to the school.

"If we're serious about continuing God's work, we are going to meet this urgent need," he said.

Convention members across the state will participate in a "Shaw Day" Sunday, when ministers will try to solicit extra money from the congregations for the school.

"There was never any attempt to fraud the students, alumni or even the IRS," Paige said. "We simply ran out of money to meet payroll taxes."

"I know hungry mouths have to be fed," he said, "but people can do anything they want, especially if they want to keep the school."

Alumni and students of the school are also involved in solving the school's financial dilemma, Paige said.

"Students are actively involved in helping the school," Paige said. "The students are home now with their parents and they are discussing solutions to the problems."

In Pitt County, alumni president Mildred Council said various strategies have been discussed by the chapter to help solve the problem, as well as looking ahead to avoid such a situation again.

"I've made calls to fellow alumni to Ohio, New Jersey and other places," Ms. Council said. "We want to keep the school alive."

Another answer to the problem, Ms. Council said, would be to call on the help of alumni to volunteer their skills to the school.

"We have to use the human resources of our alumni," she said.

A news release by the university said the school's cash flow problems were "further compounded with the sudden resignation of the business manager because of ill health and during the same period the loss of the director of the computer center for family health reasons."

The school has experienced other

JOB CLUB

Participants are needed for a Job Club program to be held the week of June 16 at the Employment Security Commission office in Greenville. Persons who have had difficulties finding jobs may obtain job-seeking skills and placement assistance during this program. The course lasts one week and then frequent individual meetings are held with a job counselor. Of the 67 people who have taken the course so far, 61 have jobs, Lisa Linton, teacher of the course, said.

To qualify, an applicant must be a resident of Pitt County and meet Job Training Program Act economic guidelines. Recent high school graduates, persons recently separated from the armed services and others who believe they would be eligible for the program may call Ms. Linton at 756-2686 for more information.

Wedding Vows Said In Saturday Ceremony

FARMVILLE — The Town Common was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Terry Creson Carraway and Jeffery Scott Miller, both of Greenville, Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Parents of the couple are Celestine H. Creson and Kenneth L. Creson, both of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Miller of Amsterdam, N.Y.

The Rev. James Lupton performed the double ring ceremony.

Steven Miller of Amsterdam, N.Y., was best man for his brother. Sharon Creson of Cedar Bluff, Ala., was honor attendant for her sister-in-law.

Evonne Creson of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mary o Sprinkle of Duck were bridesmaids. Kim and Heather Creson of Cedar Bluff, Ala., and Dawn Creson of Greenville, all nieces of the bride, were flower girls.

Graham Miller of Chapel Hill, son of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. Kenneth M. Creson of Cedar Bluff, Ala., and Keith L. Creson of Greenville, brothers of the bride, and Jeff Stern of New York were ushers.

John Worthington presented a program of nuptial music.

The bride wore a floor length ivory taffeta gown with a chapel train of organza and re-embroidered alencon lace. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and wore a wreath of silk flowers in her hair.

The honor attendant and bridesmaids wore orchid full length dresses and carried nosegays. Bridesmaids carried white baskets.

A reception followed the ceremony and was held at the home of the bride. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner at the Colonial Inn in Farmville.

The bride is employed by Tidewater Blood Distributing System and the bridegroom is associated with Richmond Medical Center. He is a graduate of the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The couple will live in Richmond, Va.

Osteoporosis: A Second Look

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

A Meredith Magazine

A few years ago, the term osteoporosis (which literally means "porous bone") was relatively unknown — despite the fact the condition affects roughly one out of four postmenopausal women.

Now, women in all age groups are becoming keenly aware of the special risks they face with brittle-bone disease. Doctors have begun emphasizing early detection of osteoporosis — as well as prevention, reports Better Homes and Gardens.

There are many ways to prevent this bone-thinning disease. Here are some recent findings that may surprise you.

Osteoporosis is a severe form of the progressive loss of bone tissue that occurs normally in women and men with advancing age. The bones become brittle and may be broken easily. Hip, wrist and spine fractures are common.

There are two different types of bone — compact bone and spongy bone. Compact bone, which looks solid and hard, is found on the outer part of a bone. Spongy bone is filled with holes and is found on the inside. In a person with osteoporosis, the outside compact bone becomes thinner and the spaces in the spongy bone become larger.

Diagnosing osteoporosis early is critical because no safe treatment can restore bone mass to normal once it has been lost. A person may have the disease for several years without knowing it. Breaking a bone often is the first sign. Collapse fractures of the spine cause loss in height, recurrent back pain, and curvature (dowager's hump).

While standard X-ray exams don't verify osteoporosis until about 30 percent of the bone mass has been lost, sophisticated new X-ray techniques may help diagnose the disorder more reliably and earlier. These methods include single and dual photon absorptiometry, which measure the amount of bone by passing beams of radiation through the bone and surrounding tissues, and dual energy computed tomography (CT), which evaluates bone density.

These sophisticated tests — which take from several minutes to one hour each — are available only at major health centers. No blood or urine tests confirm osteoporosis, but a doctor may order such tests to rule out other diseases.

Dr. William A. Peck, professor of internal medicine at Washington University and physician-in-chief at The Jewish Hospital of St. Louis, says tests measuring bone mass and density, used at the time of menopause, may indicate who already has low bone mass. The tests cannot predict with certainty who will lose bone mass rapidly after menopause, however. A woman with normal bone readings at menopause may find out several years later she has been losing bone mass rapidly. Decisions to order such tests are made on an individual basis, depending on a physician's assessment of a woman's risk factors, such as early menopause or a slight build.

Peck stresses the importance of building bone mass while bones are still forming (generally to ages 20-35). After that has occurred, preventing bone loss becomes the major goal. Peck says the first five to 10 years after menopause are critical because bone loss accelerates during that time.

If a woman is at high risk of osteoporosis, her physician may recommend estrogen replacement therapy, beginning within a few years after menopause or after surgical removal of the ovaries. This course of treatment has been shown to reduce bone loss and fractures.

The estrogen may be cycled with progesterone to minimize the risk of endometrial (uterine) cancer, which is very unlikely. The benefits of using estrogen in preventing osteoporosis far outweigh any disadvantages for women at high risk for osteoporosis. But estrogen-treated women must be followed closely by their physician.

Better Homes and Gardens suggest these preventions:

- Increase your calcium intake. Consuming sufficient calcium every day throughout your life is good preventive medicine. The typical American diet, which averages 450-550 mg of calcium daily, falls far short of the current Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) of 800 mg per day.

- Studies reported at a 1984 National Institutes of Health (NIH) consensus conference on osteoporosis indicate that even the present RDA is too low. Increasing calcium intake to 1,000 mg a day — at least by the mid-30s — and to 1,500 mg a day after menopause (if estrogen therapy is not used) may help to reduce the incidence of osteoporosis. Many physicians advise a daily intake of 1,000 mg of calcium for men as well as women.

- Good dietary sources of calcium are milk (1 cup contains 275-399 mg),

- yogurt and other dairy products, salmon, sardines, tofu (soybean curd), almonds, and many dark-green leafy vegetables. Unfortunately, foods highest in calcium also are high in calories. Caution: If you have a tendency to form kidney stones, a high calcium intake may be harmful; ask your doctor what level of calcium is best for you.

- Include enough vitamin D in your diet. For your body to absorb calcium most efficiently, you need adequate amounts of vitamin D. If you consume milk, bread, cereals and other foods to which vitamin D has been added, you probably are getting enough. (Sun exposure also enables the body to manufacture this vitamin.) If you're not sure about your diet or spend most of the day indoors, you may need vitamin D supplements. Because large amounts of vitamin D can be dangerous, don't treat yourself; consult your doctor.

- Exercise: The NIH panel recommends modest weight-bearing exercises, such as brisk walking, to reduce bone loss and increase bone mass. (Caution: Young women who exercise so zealously that they stop menstruating may lose bone mass.)

Wagging Tongues Puts Man In Doghouse

DEAR ABBY: While my wife was away, I rented a nudie tape. When returned it, to my horror I came face to face with a different clerk. She was the daughter of a friend of my wife — we used to go to the same church.

The girl told her mother, the mother told my wife, and I ended up in the doghouse. To make matters worse, I complained to the manager of the video store and he fired the girl. The girl told her mother, her mother told my wife, and now I'm in the doghouse once-removed.

Shouldn't the clerks in video stores be just as discreet with their information as doctors and lawyers? So who was in the wrong? The girl for blabbing to her mother? Or I for telling her boss and getting her fired? — ARF ARF IN ARKANSAS

DEAR ARF: You were justified in reporting the girl to her boss. Your choice of tapes was none of her business, and for her to have blabbed to her mother was immature and inexcusable. Her mother was also out of line to have told your wife. And finally, an adult is free to choose his or her own entertainment. But if your wife was able to banish you to the doghouse twice, you'd better check your marriage license to make sure it's not a dog license.

DEAR ABBY: A year ago our son came out of the closet to his father and me. It has been a traumatic year for all of us, filled with anger, tears, guilt, confusion and therapy. While we still don't pretend to understand everything about the homosexual lifestyle, we love our son and accept that he believes this is right for him. He has a friend (I can't bring myself to say "lover") and has assured us that he wants a long-term, loving, monogamous relationship, just as his brothers and sisters have. We believe he is sincere.

The problem is that we both have aging parents whom we want to spare. We see no advantage in their knowing, and since my father-in-law, in particular, has very strong anti-gay feelings, we are concerned that a rift will occur that may never be healed. Our son, however, is an activist, especially in respect to AIDS education, and he is quoted often in newspapers and magazines. He lives in another city, but we are fearful that our parents will see him on television or read about him. How can we act lovingly to everyone concerned? — CONCERNED PARENTS

DEAR CONCERNED: I can understand your wanting to "spare" your parents from a truth they may not want to accept, but since your son has chosen to go public, it may not be possible.

The grandparents need enlightenment — not protection — so help them by providing them with some education literature from PARENTS FLAG (Federation of Parents &

DEAR ABBY: I just received an invitation to a wedding that read:

"Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and Mrs. Jane Jones and the late Mr. Paul G. Jones invite you to share in the joy of the marriage uniting their children, Mary and Harold, etc."

All the names are made up, of course, but I'm sure you get the idea. Abby, is it socially correct to issue an invitation in the name of a deceased person? How can a deceased person invite anyone anywhere? This is a first for me. — INVITED GUEST

DEAR INVITED: Obviously, a deceased person cannot invite anyone anywhere, but whoever was responsible for wording the invitations wanted to give honorable mention to the widow's late husband.

It's too late to correct the error, so try to be more charitable and less critical.

DEAR ABBY: I am an overweight lady. I do not want to lose weight because I like myself the way I am. I've been skinny, I've been "normal," and for the last two years I've been heavy. I prefer heavy. I meet a better class of men this way. I would like to meet another man like my deceased husband. He relished every ounce of me.

You once mentioned an organization of fat people who are not ashamed of being heavy. They carry themselves with dignity and confidence and don't care what other people think. I didn't keep the information when I read it because I never thought I'd need it. Please put it in your column. There must be other people who would like to join. — HEAVY AND HAPPY

DEAR HEAVY: Write to: NAAFA (National Association to Aid Fat Americans), P.O. Box 43, Bellerose, N.Y. 11426, and enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for a reply. I have seen the organization's newsletter and think it performs a much needed service in these times when thin is so in that fat people are made to feel guilty and ashamed.

Looking Ahead

A prescription for what space exploration should be like in the next half-century, as well as long-range goals, has come from a presidential commission chaired by former National Aeronautics and Space Administration Chairman Thomas O. Paine.

It is the product of hundreds of witnesses heard in 15 hearings around the country and disclosure of some highlights is timely ... coming as it does when America's space exploration efforts have been put on "hold" by the shuttle Challenger's disaster. It reminds one of how much there is yet to do.

For one thing, it affirms exploring the universe is not one nation's issue nor relevant only to our times. Accordingly, we're told, other nations must be involved. Too, they call for more involvement by the "private sector".

Three major objectives are recommended: understanding the structure and evolution of the universe, our galaxy, solar system and Earth ... including the emergence and spread of life; applying this understanding to forecast future events of critical significance to humanity; and using the environment of space flight and tools of space technology to study the basic properties of matter and life.

In that next half-century, says the commission, there should be a continuing program to search for evidence that life exists or has existed beyond our own planet.

They look forward to robotic factories in high orbit with Martian exploration and establishment of a colony on that planet (which sounds far-fetched to a race that has only taken its first few steps into the unknown reaches of outer space).

Still, strange things have happened since discovery of a continent in the western hemisphere of Mother Earth; and development of a civilization and society which can dream such dreams as the report suggests. You never know what's on the other side of the hill, or around the next corner.

Wildfire

Don't look now, but railroading has joined other industries in turning to high tech as the ultimate savior.

Microchips have been introduced to the locomotive with resultant economies that interest big operators in cutting fuel costs and maintenance.

Computers have been applied to cutting fuel consumption by adjusting or shutting off machinery when it is not needed. When Norfolk Southern receives the 75 locomotives it has ordered with microprocessing equipment, nearly a 10th of its 2,302 engines will contain microprocessors that monitor their operation.

It is not alone. Burlington Northern Railroad, Union Pacific Railroad and the Santa Fe Railway are deeply involved. Thousands of engines are pulling their trains and 11 U.S. and Canadian railroads are testing equipment that would use satellite tracking systems that enable train crews to anticipate grades ... and thus save fuel.

High tech is plainly insidious. It finds a place to serve in a multitude of fields and once it finds a toehold it grows like wildfire. We have seen it in the publishing business, too.

A Tradition Of Debate

RALEIGH — It's nice to have traditions. They connect one generation to the next and give our society a cohesiveness through the centuries.

The General Assembly has a fine old tradition. It annually debates the problem of uncollected property taxes on automobiles and it annually does nothing about the problem.

North Carolina law requires the listing of all automobiles for property tax purposes. But that law is difficult for the state's 100 county tax assessors to enforce because automobiles, unlike real estate, can be moved around. Auto owners who fail to list an auto can get away with their little crime because the county tax assessor has no single definitive list of all the autos in a county on the Jan. 1 situs date.

But the Division of Motor Vehicles does. You can't drive an unregistered car on the highways of North Carolina for very long without a Highway Patrolman noticing. If DMV is already registering every car in the state, why don't they help the county tax collectors?

County tax collectors have been asking that question for years. DMV has been responding to the tune: We've got enough work to do already. Haven't you noticed how long it's taking us to issue new car registrations?

In its latest effort to shun the job of collecting automobile taxes for the counties, DMV sent Jim Rhodes, head of vehicle registration, to the Legislature's Property Tax Study Commission. Rhodes said DMV would need $11.5 million to buy the equipment needed to collect automobile taxes and another $4.7 million a year to run the collection program.

Rhodes said DMV would encounter a colossal funds management problem. It now collects about $190 million a year in vehicle fees. If it started collecting taxes, it would have to collect five or 10 times that much money. That would create security problems at license plate field offices.

If they collected that much money, and then distributed it to the counties, massive amounts of work would be required of the state treasurer and state auditor, Rhodes said.

Finally, Rhodes noted that the public would probably hate the idea. They'd have to carry large amounts of money with them to the license plate office and they'd have to abandon the popular practice of paying auto taxes along with real estate taxes through an escrow account.

Rhodes did pledge DMV support of a verification process in which a car could not be registered unless its owner showed proof that it was tax listed. The collectors like that idea.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, had an idea so simple and so sensible that there's got to be a problem with it somewhere. But no one raised objections when he first mentioned it.

Mavretic asked why the county tax offices couldn't become the official license plate bureaus in every county. DMV would pay the counties the same fee it now pays private bureaus to register cars. At the time of registration, the tax listing of the car could be checked. If it hadn't been listed, it couldn't get a license plate or registration.

Rep. Robert McAlister, D-Rockingham, went a step further and proposed elimination of property taxes on autos. That proposal would coincide with another to end property taxes on all personal property. At some point, McAlister said, the trouble and expense of collecting a tax outweighs the benefits of the money brought in.

With so many dramatic proposals on the table, it's very likely that the Legislature will throw up its hands in timidity and do nothing. And thus preserve a fine old tradition.

Country Boy Takes On A Liberal

ATLANTA — With the glitzy White House chapter of his life buried, Hamilton Jordan's Senate campaign may be ready to take off and force Rep. Wyche Fowler into a primary run-off tailored for Jimmy Carter's former "enfant terrible."

"The governor's people sure are happy to see you moving," a former Republican state chairman called out to Jordan at a restaurant here this week. Conservative Democrats in the mold of Gov. Joe Frank Harris fear that if Fowler, an Atlanta liberal and respected mainline congressional Democrat, is nominated first-term Reaganite Republican Sen. Mack Mattingly will be home free in November. That could determine control of the Senate.

Jordan's task is to nurture and exploit conservative Democratic fears. His campaign theme: Fowler cannot beat Mattingly; only "a Sam Nunn Democrat" — not what he calls "a Tip O'Neill Democrat" — can or should win in November. Thus does Jordan align himself with his moderate conservative friend and the state's popular senior Democrat, Sen. Sam Nunn.

His objective: Prevent the front-running Fowler from picking up a majority in the Aug. 12 primary. If the congressman falls short, as now seems likely, Jordan could benefit in the Sept. 2 run-off from more than supporters of two other conservative candidates in the race; he would hold the focus in the second primary as conservative country boy against liberal city slicker.

A candidacy considered hopeless when Jimmy Carter's political mastermind (freshly cured of lymphatic cancer) first announced his Senate intentions has now become viable because of changes in Ham-

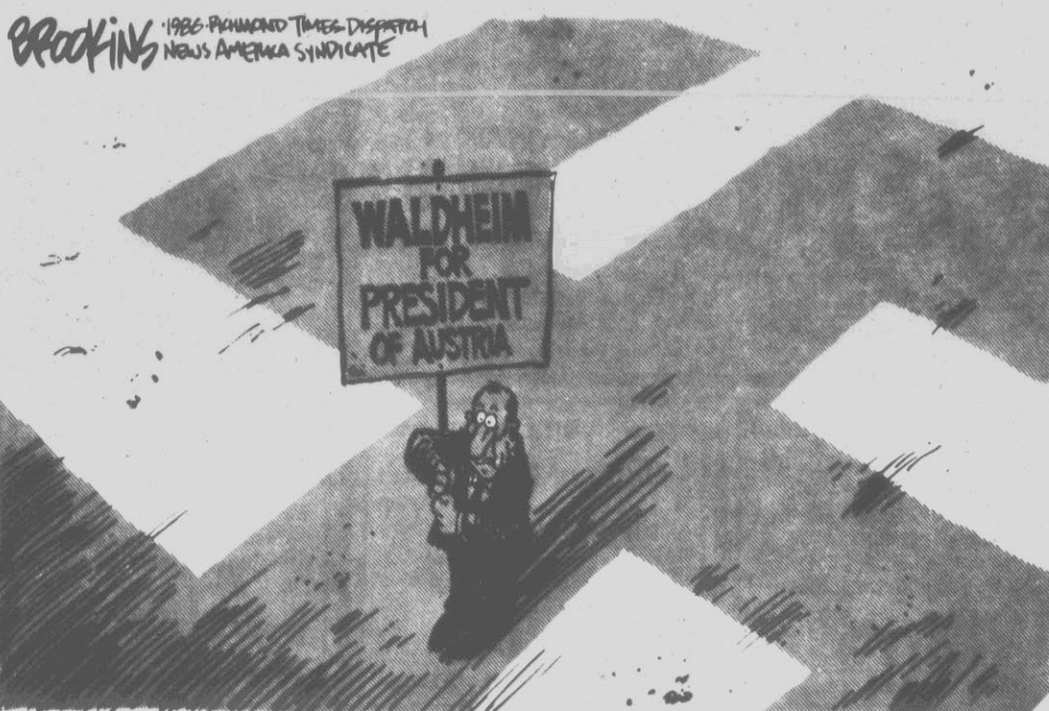

Jordan himself. Even close students of his checkered career as presidential chief of staff might not recognize the buttoned-down, well-groomed Senate candidate.

Gone are the jeans, boots, leather jacket and smirk. Gone, too, are the bawdy jokes about bosomy wives of Arab leaders and self-righteous anger at what he called "the jackals of the Washington establishment." Less obvious, the one-time White House liberal has preached for two years the need for Democrats to move right and campaigns against Fowler as an anti-liberal.

Breaking with Carter-era partisan passions, Jordan told us he would return to Washington not as a "highly partisan Democrat like Fowler" and not even "for or against Ronald Reagan." He would be back "as an American" pledged to improve economic conditions and "to build a bright Georgia for the future" (with details still suitably vague).

Given Reagan's 60 percent Georgia win in 1984, that lack of partisanship is sensible. Jordan is not about to attack a president who has made Mattingly's re-election a key for keeping the Senate under Republican control the rest of his presidency.

Jordan's conservative strategy is causing trouble between Fowler and Gov. Harris. After a crescendo of public appeals that party leaders stay neutral, Fowler this week made a stronger neutrality demand directly to Harris in a 30-minute closed-door meeting Monday afternoon. The governor's promise to do so can hardly dull conviction in every county courthouse across the state that Harris fears a Fowler nomination would re-elect Mattingly.

A Place For Youth In Government

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirteen years ago, a disillusioned young government lawyer caught up in the Watergate scandal was asked at a nationally televised Senate hearing what advice he had for other young people considering public service.

"My advice would be to stay away," said Gordon Strachan, one of the White House aides who had participated in the cover-up conspiracy that destroyed Richard Nixon's presidency and wrecked many of their promising careers.

But young people have not stayed away from President Reagan's political campaigns or his administration, and a number have found White House service a ticket to challenging and lucrative jobs in and out of government. People in their 20s and 30s, some of whom dropped out of college to work for Reagan, now are running offices with dozens or even hundreds of employees in Cabinet departments or corporations.

One has just returned to the White House after an astonishing five-year rise through public and private management jobs. Mari Maseng, 32, last week was named director of public liaison, the office that coordinates administration policy with outside interest groups ranging from businesses and labor unions to religious organizations and ethnic groups.

She directs her own staff of 24 from an office upstairs from Reagan's and works with the president's top legislative and political strategists.

"I'm having a ball," Ms. Maseng said after what she described as a whirlwind of a first week on the job.

Rounding up support for a rejuvenated tax overhaul plan was her first assignment, and she is among those working on an administration program to recruit young voters.

"From my own perspective, it's a group that is naturally receptive to the president's message and the president's beliefs but who are not necessarily locked in to voting Republican, to supporting our view of the issues," Ms. Maseng said in an interview. "I think it's a natural. They support him from a visceral perspective, and we need to mobilize that, not necessarily from the Republican standpoint but from a policy standpoint."

The president's new aide is a young Reagan loyalist, but her Odyssey tells another story as well.

"Washington is a small town," observed one senior assistant, and the tall young woman from South Carolina quickly became known in some very influential Republican circles.

"My career has gone way off track," she said with a laugh. "I was going to be a great reporter."

But after starting on the police beat at the Charleston (S.C.) Evening Post and progressing to covering local politics, she left to work for the re-election of Strom Thurmond, the venerable Republican senator from her native state.

After his victory in 1978, she joined the long-shot presidential bid of Rep. Phil Crane, where she worked for a young conservative named Rich Williamson, who has played a role in her career many times since.

Williamson lost his job in a staff shake-up shortly thereafter, and Ms. Maseng jumped to Sen. Bob Dole's presidential campaign, where she started as an aide to the Kansas senator's wife, Elizabeth, and rose to staff director of the entire operation before the Dole flame flickered in the spring of 1980.

Williamson, in the meantime, had joined the campaign of another contender, Ronald Reagan, and after Reagan captured the GOP nomination, Williamson brought Ms. Maseng aboard. They went from the victorious campaign staff to the group that prepared for the transition to power three months later, and Ms. Maseng landed a job as a White House speechwriter. Her colleague also went to the White House but left after an unsuccessful fight to revamp the relationship between the federal and state governments.

Picked to work on a number of economic speeches, Ms. Maseng met then-Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and several key members of his staff while seeking their advice in drafting Reagan's speeches.

But in September 1983, she left to follow Elizabeth Dole, whom Reagan had promoted from White House director of public liaison to secretary of transportation. Before she was 30 years old, Ms. Maseng had been nominated by the president and confirmed by the Senate as assistant secretary of transportation for public affairs. There she directed a network of offices with more than 100 employees, most of them career civil servants older than she.

Williamson, by this time, had become a top executive of the Beatrice Cos., a conglomerate that counted itself 26th among the nation's largest corporations, and he again recruited his old associate from the campaign trail. With Mrs. Dole's blessing, Ms. Maseng said, she left government to become vice president and director of corporate relations at Beatrice.

"It was a tremendous year for me," she said. "When I got there, it was clear there was a lot of instability and some public relations challenges," including an equity offering, a management change and fears of a hostile takeover.

As an officer of the corporation in charge of shareholder relations, Ms. Maseng said, she "got to go through all the drills on that, sit in the war councils and listen to the strategy. ... It was like 10 years' experience crammed into one."

When Beatrice was swallowed up in a $6.2 billion leveraged buyout, Ms. Maseng once more found herself looking for work.

Communications director Patrick J. Buchanan, her immediate superior, says he heard she might be available, laid claim to her resume in the White House personnel office and took it to Regan, now White House chief of staff.

Regan, Buchanan said, remembered Ms. Maseng from his days at Treasury and hers as a speechwriter and approved the appointment on the spot.

Strength For Today

We are told that charcoal needs only a rearrangement of its atoms to become a diamond.

It is on this principle that many transformations of evil life into grandeur have taken place. Pieces of carbon like Mary Magdalene, the harlot; Augustine, the profligate, and numerous evil-living sons and daughters of this world have been turned into precious jewels by a somewhat similar process.

We are also told that it is heat and pressure, sometimes in the form of volcanic eruptions, which change carbon into diamonds. Conversion of character often takes place under the same circumstances. There is a violent eruption in one's nature. Old ways must be renounced, new pathways taken. But after the eruption is over — behold, a new nature.

Still carbon, but by a rearrangement of its inner nature, changed into a diamond.

Broyhill Wealth Puts Him Near Top In U.S. House

RALEIGH (AP) — Rep. Jim Broyhill, heir to a family furniture fortune, is listed among the wealthiest members of the U.S. House, with reported assets of $1.9 million to $3.4 million, financial statements say.

Broyhill, William Green, R-N.Y., Sidney Yates, D-Ill., and Ed Zschau, R-Calif. are listed among the wealthiest representatives, according to annual financial statements required of congressmen, senators and candidates for office. Green, heir to the Grand Union supermarket fortune, finished ahead of Broyhill in the money race with assets of at least $5.3 million and possibly more than $10 million.

Broyhill and Zschau are campaigning for the Senate. Broyhill's opponent, Democrat Terry Sanford, listed income ranging from $660,000 to $780,000 and assets of at least $1.45 million. Sanford said his liabilities could run as high as $1.2 million.

In the report released Thursday, Broyhill said his income for last year ranged from $578,021 to more than $734,000, with no gifts or honoraria. He also listed no liabilities for the year.

Broyhill listed income for his wife, Louise, as $105,533 to $310,000, but said the assets listed are only his.

He listed her holdings and said they are "managed for investment by Independent Financial Advisors. I have no participation in or knowledge of those decisions until reported for disclosure."

Among Mrs. Broyhill's holdings are two 10 oz. gold Credit Suisse bars valued at $5,000 to $15,000.

Firm figures on the wealth of House members were unobtainable because they were not required to list the precise value of their largest holdings. The top category for income was $100,000 or more. For assets, it was $250,000 or more.

Rep. Alex McMillan, R-N.C., reported income last year of $80,704 to $88,800. He said he collected $1,050 in honoraria and $3,015 worth of gifts. He listed assets of $155,009 to $430,000 and liabilities of $50,001 to $100,000. He said he paid off his liabilities in 1985.

Rep. Steven L. Neal, D-N.C., listed an income of $19,504 to $63,000. He said he received $10,700 in honoraria, and reported that he got no gifts. He listed $205,004 to $485,000 in assets and from $65,002 to $150,000 in liabilities.

Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., listed an income of $88,605 to $109,600. He said he received $9,000 in honoraria, and no gifts. He listed assets of $215,005 to $955,000, and no liabilities.

Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., said he earned between $197,100 and up and $247,100 and up. He received $22,467 in honoraria and no gifts. He listed assets of between $330,000 and up and $445,000 and up, and liabilities of between $30,000 and $100,000.

Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., reported an income of between $79,603 and $87,100. He listed $400 in honoraria, all of which he said he gave to charity. He said he received no gifts. He listed assets of between $170,010 and $430,000 and liabilities of between $15,001 and $50,000.

Rep. Bill Cobey, R-N.C., reported an income of between $90,103 and $122,100. He said he received no honoraria or gifts. He listed assets of between $160,005 and $460,000, and said he had no liabilities.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., reported an income of between $80,101 and $90,100. He said he received $22,000 in honoraria and $4,275 in gifts. He listed assets of between $205,000 and $515,000 and liabilities of between $30,002 and $100,000.

Rep. Charles Whitley, D-N.C., listed an income of between $75,100 and $77,100. He said he received $300 in honoraria and no gifts. He listed assets of between $120,000 and $315,000 and said he had no liabilities.

Rep. Tim Valentine, D-N.C., reported an income of between $96,100 and $143,600. He said he received $3,100 in honoraria and no gifts. He listed assets of between $165,000 and $495,000 and liabilities of between $105,000 and $280,000.

Figures for Rep. Bill Hendon, R-N.C., were not available.

Martin Stands By Pay Raise Policy

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin repeated that the state does not have enough money to raise teacher salaries more than 3.2 percent, and said he would not support a gasoline tax increase above what he has recommended, even though lawmakers say that 2.75 cent per gallon figure is too low.

Martin said during his weekly news conference Thursday that critics of his proposal had overestimated the amount of surplus state revenue that would be available for more than one year. His budget office puts the figure at $205.5 million, and says another $329 million is non-recurring and should be used only for one-time expenditures such as construction.

David Crofts, a fiscal analyst on the General Assembly staff, predicted during a Joint Appropriations Committee briefing Thursday that the budget surplus would be around $420 million.

But Crofts said in an interview it was too early to tell how much of the surplus would be available annually and how much would not recur. He said the Legislature generally waited until deciding how much it wanted to spend before designating surplus funds as recurring or non-recurring.

Crofts added that he had not included in his calculations over $50 million Martin says would be available if, as he proposes, tuition is increased at the University of North Carolina and the state's community colleges and 760 vacant state jobs are eliminated.

Martin also appeared to rule out backing any tax increase not accompanied by budgetary adjustments that legislative leaders have vowed to defeat.

Martin's proposed $533.6 million supplement to the $8.1 billion 1986-87 budget has drawn a wave of criticism from leaders of the predominantly Democratic assembly since its unveiling last week.

Lawmakers have said his proposed gasoline tax is too low, his proposal to transfer funding of the state Highway Patrol and driver education programs from the highway fund to the general fund would take money away from schools, and his $51.5 million prison construction plan is too expensive.

Panel Supports Limit On Malpractice Payoffs

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative panel recommended a $250,000 limit on jury awards for pain and suffering of medical malpractice victims, but deadlocked on other proposals and discarded a measure that would have created a state-run reinsurance fund.

The members of the Medical Malpractice Study Commission recommended eight of more than 15 proposals before them Thursday, after heated debate that included skirmishes over whether doctors or lawyers dominated the commission.

Douglass Phillips, executive vice president of Medical Mutual Insurance Company of North Carolina, said, "I'm very negative that anything meaningful will come out of the ... commission."

Phillips and others complained that lawyers representing victims dominated the commission.

But Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, a lawyer who represents malpractice victims, contended that doctors and the insurance industry dominated the discussions. "They want to cut away at victims' rights," he said.

The heated debate also raised doubt about the future of the bills to be inroduced during the June session of the General Assembly.

Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, said if some of the commission's more controversial bills came to the committee he chairs in the Senate, he might not bring them to a vote.

Recommendations from the commission are intended to ease the problem of sharply rising malpractice insurance premiums, which some say are forcing doctors to quit high-risk areas of medical practice and thereby deprive the public of some medical care.

The recommended measures include:

- Limiting to $250,000 the amount of money awarded as compensation for non-economic losses, such as pain, suffering and emotion distress. There is no limit now.

- Replacing punitive money awards with criminal prosecution for intentional or reckless malpractice.

- Requiring insurance companies to disclose annually to state insurance officials detailed information on malpractice claims closed by out-of-state settlement, award or no payment. Under state law, however, such information would be available to the public only in summarized form as provided to the legislature.

- Requiring insurance companies to report information on malpractice awards and settlements to the Board of Medical Examiners for the purpose of investigating and disciplining doctors.

- Allowing judges to impose financial penalties against people who file frivolous malpractice lawsuits or those who mount frivolous defenses against legitimate lawsuits. Lawyers for both sides complain that their opponents mount complicated and expensive legal strategy regardless of the merits of the case.

N.C. Cities Plan 'Hands' Projects

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — They won't link up from Murphy to Manteo, but people in places as diverse as Charlotte and Dunn will hold hands Sunday to raise money for the hungry and the homeless.

Hands Across America, the national group planning a coast-to-coast hand-holding from Los Angeles to New York City, won't reach into North Carolina. But groups in Charlotte, Raleigh, Nags Head, Elizabeth City and Dunn are planning their own events for 3 p.m. Sunday, when the national link-up is scheduled to happen.

Charlotte has perhaps the most ambitious program planned. Between 4,000 and 6,000 people will be needed to stand on the course that covers a 6.7-mile course from Eastland Mall to Discovery Place, said Kathy Evans of the Metrolina Food Bank.

"Lots of people are willing to support us, but we're still trying to get the tickets sold," Ms. Evans said. "A lot of people say they'll be out of town, but they'll be glad to donate money. We're raising money right and left."

People pay $2 for a color-coded ticket that assigns them to a certain section of the course, she said. In addition, T-shirts are being sold for $5 each.

"It's been slow, but this week they (ticket sales) have really picked up, so we're hoping," Ms. Evans said. She said she didn't have figures on the number of tickets sold or the amount of money raised.

The event is sponsored by Eastland Mall, Record Bar and Entertainers of America and will benefit the food bank, which provides food in 18 North Carolina and South Carolina counties, Ms. Evans said.

Organizers of Hands Across the Capitol in Raleigh said about 1,500 people are needed to circle the Capitol building. But Greg Kirkpatrick, director of the Community of North Carolina Food Bank, said he hoped there would be enough participants to head at least part of the way down Fayetteville Street Mall and back to the Capitol.

"We'd be happy with 2,000, but we'd be ecstatic with more than that," Kirkpatrick said. About 700 to 800 people have preregistered for the event, he said.

There's no charge to participate, but organizers are asking for a $10 donation. The first 2,500 to show up receive a free T-shirt.

"We'll make do with whatever number we have," Kirkpatrick said. "We know there will be no problem with overflow because we could circle the state capitol three times if we had the people."

The money will go to the food bank and to other emergency food providers in the Triangle, he said. Other groups that will receive money are the Durham Urban Ministries Center and the Interfaith Council for Social Services in Chapel Hill. Both groups operate a soup kitchen, shelter and food pantry.

In Dunn, the Rev. Halford McNeill of the Love and Help Association is asking people to help fill the 300 block of North Wilson Avenue. There's no charge, but participants are asked to donate.

The donations will go McNeill's association, which feeds the hungry and the food bank in Raleigh.

"Whatever they have in their hearts to give, we'll receive," McNeill said. "I just have the faith that there are some people out there who want to help."

Events also are planned Sunday in Nags Head and Elizabeth City.

Justices Refuse To Give Opinions

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Supreme Court has unanimously declined to give advisory opinions posed by the governor, the lieutenant governor and the House speaker on several questions concerning current laws and proposed legislation.

The questions dealt with specific kinds of communication between the governor and the 15-member Advisory Budget Commission. The reply by the state's high court handed questions about the powers of the governor and his relationship with the Advisory Budget Commission back to the General Assembly.

The justices, in a reply delivered this week, said the request by Republican Gov. Jim Martin, Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and Ramsey was premature — seeking direction on whether to enact legislation or not.

Patrol Targets Holiday Traffic

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Highway Patrol will target roads leading to beaches and mountains during the Memorial Day weekend to catch drunken drivers and speeders, officials say.

"We normally don't give weekends off on holidays, so we'll have the extra coverage out," said Lt. Tony H. Spainhour of the patrol. "We'll pay attention to the traffic going toward the beaches" and to the driving while impaired violations, he said.

The holiday weekend begins at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight Monday.

About 90 percent of the patrol's 850 troopers will work each day during the holiday weekend, compared with about 75 percent on a normal work day, Spainhour said.

Nineteen people were killed and almost 1,000 injured in traffic accidents during the Memorial Day weekend last year, according to the state Division of Motor Vehicles.

The North Carolina State Motor Club estimates that 21 people will die in traffic accidents this weekend, said John G. Frazier III, president of the motor club.

Reagans To Join Group In Hands Across America

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Reagan, in an abrupt change of plans, will participate in the joining of Hands Across America on Sunday to combat hunger in the nation, a White House spokesman announced today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the Reagans were inviting members and families of the White House and executive office staffs, the Secret Service and the media to join them in stretching the line along the White House driveway, eliminating the special logistical operations and security precautions taken whenever the president leaves the White House grounds.

The Reagans themselves will join the line just outside the north door of the executive mansion, the spokesman said.

Speakes denied the decision grew out of controversy prompted by the president's remark to a high school group earlier this week that hunger in America is due not to a denial of aid to anyone but to some people's ignorance of where to get food.

Rather, the spokesman said, the change in plans grew out of a lengthy discussion Thursday night between the Reagans and the president's older daughter, Maureen, and her husband, Dennis Revell.

"It was the first time that the Reagans as a family had had an opportunity to talk about it, and they spent most of the evening talking about it," Speakes said.

The White House earlier had rejected requests from the organizers of the event for the Reagans to participate in the line, which will stretch from New York to Long Beach, Calif., apparently with some gaps in sparsely populated regions, especially the West.

Reagan had been and is still scheduled to sign a proclamation on Saturday naming Sunday "Hands Across America Day" and to mention the event in his weekly radio address on Saturday.

Speakes quoted Reagan as telling aides today, "This house belongs to all the people and is a symbol of the American dream. The White House and first family should be a part of Hands Across America. This is a uniquely American way to help our fellow man. The Reagan family will do its part."

The $10-a-head donation requested from all those who join the line will be paid by an anonymous donor for all those who accept the Reagans' invitation to join them along the semicircular drive inside the White House gates, the spokesman said.

He said the Reagans would contribute their own donations and the estimated 225 volunteers from the White House entourage who join them may contribute in addition to the money that will be given in their behalf.

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

SCHOOL CRISIS — Joe Paige, left, executive vice president of Shaw Divinity School, discussed solutions and the status of the school's financial situation with district members of the General Baptist Convention and alumni of Shaw University Thursday night in Sycamore Hill Baptist Church. The Internal Revenue Service has put a $750,000 lien against the school, and has given of-

'Star Wars Cuts Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House today rejected a suggestion by 46 senators for deep cuts in "Star Wars" spending, saying the reductions would set back a decision on whether to go ahead with the proposed missile defense system.

"We hope this is not the course that Congress will take in acting upon our budget request," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said.

Speakes said President Reagan's strategic defense initiative, popularly known as "Star Wars," holds "the promise of reducing the risk of nuclear war by establishing a safer, more stable basis for deterrence and by providing new incentives for the Soviet Union to seriously negotiate reductions." He said the program "must continue to be a top national priority."

Speakes said funding cuts made last year, when the administration requested $3.7 billion and Congress provided $2.7 billion, "have already slowed progress in several key areas and narrowed the range of technologies we can explore."

"Further cuts would seriously compound these problems and set back prospects for an informed decision in the early 1990s as to whether to proceed with full-scale development of an effective strategic defensive," he said.

In a letter to Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the panel's ranking Democrat, the bipartisan coalition of senators urged that Star Wars spending increases be held to 3 percent after inflation. That is a fraction of the spending sought by the administration.

In the next few weeks, the armed services panel begins putting together the Pentagon's 1987 budget.

"The letter united an awful lot of people for and against Star Wars, all saying the same thing — that Star Wars spending is reaching a point of spending for the sense of spending," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., one of the letter's signers, said Thursday night.

Firemen To Attend Classes

More than 500 firemen from across the state are expected to attend the 15th annual North Carolina Fire College and Pump School Monday through Thursday of next week, hosted by Pitt County Firemen's Association and Pitt Community College.

The opening exercises Monday will be at 9 a.m. at the Sheraton Motel on Greenville Boulevard.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital's CastCare helicopter will be on display at PCC from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday.

Wednesday's schedule includes the burning of two houses — one on N.C. 63 West of Winterville and the other on Clark Street in Greenville — and service testing of pumpers at River Park North on Mumford Road and on Industrial Boulevard north of Greenville. The house training fires and pumper testing are set to begin at 8 a.m.

Activities scheduled for Thursday include a liquid propane (LP) gas burn at Pitt Community College at 8 a.m. and closing exercises at 2:30 p.m. at the Sheraton, where diplomas will be presented to students successfully completing the four-year fire college and pump school curriculum.

Peace Prize

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Former NATO Secretary General Joseph Blum received the first Ataturk International Peace Prize.

The ceremony marked the birthday of Kemal Ataturk, who founded the modern Turkish republic 63 years ago. The $14,400 prize is awarded to people who live by Ataturk's "peace at home, peace in the world" principle, the prize committee said.

Luns, 75, of the Netherlands, raised Ataturk for his reforms that helped contemporary Turkey become a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Shellfish Harvest Sets New Record

By The Associated Press

North Carolina's shellfish harvest set a record last year, and state biologists say this year's dry spring could mean another big harvest for the state's commercial fishing industry.

Although dry weather has damaged some crops, it has resulted in a higher salt content in coastal waters, meaning shellfish have larger areas to spawn.

Michael Street of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries said weather conditions this spring have been similar to last year, which brought the largest shrimp harvest in 30 years. The 1985 total of 11.7 million pounds of shrimp was worth $21.7 million, the highest value ever reached for a shellfish harvest.

"Moderate rainfall right now is just fine because everything is so dry that it's going to soak in and it's still not going to run off much," Street said. "A gully-washer could become a problem."

Runoff reduces the salt level in coastal waters and increase the amount of pollution washed into those waters.

Because of the dry weather, the state opened an extra 2,000 acres of shellfish grounds for the harvest of clams and other shellfish, said Robert Benton, supervisor of shellfish sanitation for the state Department of Human Resources.

"Really, the drought let us harvest a lot of clams that would not have been available," Benton said.

Violations Increase In Nursing Homes

By The Associated Press

Though North Carolina rated better than the national average in some of the 24 standards for patient care in skilled nursing homes, a new study shows that 27 percent or 47 of 175 homes violated key standards in 1984.

Robert I. Robeson, federal certification chief for the state Division of Facility Services, said he had not seen the study, which was prepared by the General Accounting Office for the U.S. Senate Special Committee on Aging. State inspectors visit each nursing home at least once a year, he said.

"I think we have good nursing homes in North Carolina," Robeson said. "We do routinely cite violations when we do our surveys."

North Carolina showed increases in violations in at least four categories between 1982 and 1984. Robeson said an increase in violations could be caused by a number of factors, including staff turnover in the individual facilities.

The committee's staff studied the results of licensing inspections by all 50 states of all 8,852 skilled nursing facilities in the United States for the years 1982 through 1985. The study, released Wednesday in Washington, reviewed violations of 24 major standards affecting patient safety and health. Nursing homes must meet these standards to be allowed to participate in the Medicare and Medicaid programs.

The standards, selected from a total of 541 standards, range from requiring that a nursing home have nursing care around the clock to requiring that the home provides proper nutrition to its patients.

The study covered North Carolina's 175 skilled nursing homes, which have about 10,000 beds. About 95 percent of those beds are occupied.

Among other things, the committee staff looked at how many nursing homes in each state were cited for violations of any of the 24 standards in 1982 and in 1984.

In some areas, North Carolina rated better than the national average. But the study found that North Carolina's violation rates in several categories rose during the two-year period more rapidly than the national rate of increase:

- Absence of nursing policies to insure ensure that each patient receives treatments, medication and diet as described by physicians, and that each patient be kept comfortable, clean, well-groomed and protected from accident, injury and infection: three North Carolina homes cited in 1982; 19 cited in 1984 - a 533 percent increase. Across the nation, a 45 percent increase was registered.

- Failure to employ enough nurses to care for patients: 16 in 1982; 29 in 1984 - an 81 percent increase in North Carolina, compared to with 56 percent nationally.

- Failure to meet patients' nutritional and feeding needs: 7 in 1982; 17 in 1984 - a 143 percent increase, compared with 92 percent nationally.

- Inadequate controls and records for drugs: 8 in 1982; 14 in 1984 - a 75 percent increase, compared with 45 percent nationally.

Among the 175 skilled nursing homes in North Carolina, the study also found that in 1984, 47 homes or 27 percent violated one or two of the 24 key standards. Nationwide, that number was 2,049 or 23 percent.

Isabelle Claxton, the Senate committee's communications director, said that, at best, the North Carolina data for 1982 through 1984 showed that state licensing inspectors were doing a better job of citing violations than in previous years.

But she added: "We have no real indications that inspectors are doing a better job. What we really think is happening is that conditions are worsening."

Ms. Claxton said the new Senate study did not reflect the full extent of substandard care because nursing homes "know when the inspectors are coming and are able to present to inspectors conditions that are not representative of an average day at the facility."

N.C. Apple Crop Hurt

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) - Henderson County lost millions of dollars worth of apples, or about 80 percent of its annual crop, to freeze damage this spring, according to a report filed with federal officials.

The report, filed by a disaster assessment committee made up of local representatives from federal agricultural agencies, sent its report to the disaster relief office in Raleigh this week. That sets in motion the process for having the county declared eligible for federal agricultural disaster assistance - primarily low-interest loans for farmers.

The damage to the apple crop represents about $16.7 million in lost farm income, the report says. Three nights of sub-freezing temperatures in late April and early May killed vulnerable apple buds, and damaged strawberries, grapes and other crops.

The committee estimated strawberries and grapes, which have only a few commercial producers in the county, suffered losses of 50 to 60 percent due to freeze damage, said Nancy McCarron of the Henderson County Agricultural Stabilization Service.

With about 340 apple growers in the county, and up to $29 million in farm income in a particularly good year, apple growing is one of the county's major agricultural enterprises, agricultural officials say. Last year the county produced a $20 million crop of 9 million bushels.

"All of them were hit real hard - Reds, Goldens and Romes," Grover Westmoreland, Henderson County Agricultural Extension chairman, said of the damaged apple crop. "Red Delicious is our number one money maker. But all varieties were affected."

WRECKAGE — Two six-story apartment buildings were wrecked today when a car bomb went off near a vegetable market in east Beirut's Christian district. Authorities said nine people were killed and more than 80 were injured. (AP Laserphoto)

French Hostages Send Letters Saying Their Health Is Good

PARIS (AP) — Four members of a French television crew held hostage in Lebanon since March have sent photographs and letters saying they are in good health, an official of the TV station said today.

Paul Nahon, deputy director of Antenne 2's editorial department, said the prime minister's office turned the letters and photos over to the station.

It was the first reported communication from the four hostages. It was believed to be the first communication from any of the foreigners held in Lebanon since last fall, when four Americans sent letters to the public and their families.

The color photos show the four Frenchmen, unshaven, reading a May 14 edition of the Lebanese newspaper L'Orient Le Jour. The station refused to divulge the contents of the letters, which are being turned over to family members.

The prime minister's office said the letters and photos were turned over to Antenne 2 Thursday night, but refused all comment on how it obtained them.

Sources said the letters were short notes assuring that the four were in good health. Only one of the letters carried a date, May 14.

"It's good news for the station," said Nahon.

"It's a good sign. We feel good," said editor-in-chief Pierre-Henri Arnstam.

The four were kidnapped March 8 in west Beirut as they returned from covering a meeting of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, also known as the Party of God.

The team went to Lebanon days earlier, following the March 5 announcement that French researcher Michel Seurat had been killed by his captors. Seurat's death never has been confirmed. The first anniversary of his kidnapping was Thursday.

The four-man crew consists of Philippe Rochot, Georges Hansen, Aurel Cornea and Jean-Louis Normandin.

Two claims were made after their abduction. However, Islamic Jihad, or Holy War, denied it had abducted them after a man purporting to speak on the group's behalf claimed it had kidnapped them.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization also claimed the crew's abduction.

A total of nine Frenchmen are missing in Lebanon, as are 12 other foreigners including five Americans.

The five Americans are: Terry A. Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press; William Buckley, 57, political officer at the American Embassy in Beirut; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 50, a Roman Catholic priest; David Jacobsen, 54, director of the American University hospital in Beirut; and Thomas Sutherland, 54, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut.

Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for kidnapping the five Americans, and said last October they had killed Buckley. However, no body has been found.

Last November, correspondence signed by the four other Americans to their families and a public plea to President Reagan were received at The Associated Press office in Beirut.

Car Bomb Kills Nine At East Beirut Market

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded near a vegetable market in Christian east Beirut during the morning rush hour today, collapsing two apartment houses and setting fire to 12 other buildings. Police said nine people died and 84 others were hurt.

The blast occurred in a narrow street in the Sinn el-Fil neighborhood near a market that was packed with morning shoppers.

It came a day after the heaviest shelling in four months between Moslem and Christian militia gunners. Police said the random bombardment across Beirut's dividing Green Line killed 57 people and wounded 171 others since dusk Wednesday. Most of the casualties were civilians. The car that exploded today, a Renault 5, was rigged with about 200 pounds of TNT and parked next to a school wall on Ghazal street, police said. They said there were no casualties among the students of Al-Sharq secondary school.

Rescuers said nine bodies were dug out from the rubble of two six-story apartment buildings that collapsed from the force of the explosion.

Among the 84 wounded were 25 women at the market who were injured by flying glass, police said.

Civil defense rescuers said three hours after the blast they feared there might be others still buried in the rubble of the two apartment buildings. Police said three people were missing.

Hospitals made urgent appeals via Beirut radio stations for blood donations.

Black smoke shrouded the area of the blast, making it difficult for ambulances and fire engines to reach the burning buildings, police said.

Women and children screamed as wounded victims were carried out of the collapsed apartment buildings on stretchers to waiting ambulances. Other survivors ran bare-footed from smoke-blackened apartments.

Many area residents sprinted to a nearby bombshelter, thinking the blast was from renewed shelling between the Moslem and Christian militiamen.

The blast occurred on the first anniversary of a car bombing in Sinn el-Fil in which 42 people were killed and 177 were wounded.

JESUS IS LORD

Faith comes by hearing, hearing by the word of God. — Rom. 10:17

Now is the time for mature Christians to put their treasure in heaven. GOD needs you to begin a work to spread the gospel world wide.

Mark 12:10 And the gospel must first be published among all nations. (Said J E S U S)

Mark 16:15 And he (J E S U S) said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

A big mission, an invention yet to be invented, an estimated fifteen year plus project, led by a season follower of the HOLY GHOST.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: No trend due to holiday closings at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, closed; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadborn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson closed; Wilson closed; Rowland closed. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 39.00; Whiteville 39.00; Wallace 40.00; Spivey's Corner 40.00; Rowland 41.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 57.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 89 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 57.93 cents fob dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a very good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,323,000, compared to 1,902,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply fully adequate for a fairly light to moderate demand. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was 12 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to mostly 3 cents lower at mostly 2.74-2.86 in East and mostly 2.85-2.91 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 2 cents higher at mostly 5.17-5.37 in East and mostly 5.22-5.32 in the Piedmont; July wheat mostly 2.47-2.67; (new crop corn 1.92-2.02; soybeans 4.72-4.98).

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market rang up another strong gain today, extending the rally that began on Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 31.13 points on Thursday, climbed 24.06 to 1,830.36 by noon on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 2 to 1 in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was no readily apparent news development to account for the market's revival Thursday.

But in the view of many Wall Streeters, rallies that have no convenient "explanation" are often significant, because they can represent something more than just a short-term response to some news item.

Today, Albert Wojniower, economist at First Boston Corp., predicted further declines in open-market interest rates this year.

In a speech delivered at a meeting of bond dealers in Singapore, Woiniower also said he expected the Federal Reserve to lower its discount rate at least one more time.

By 1987, however, he said economic growth and inflation are likely to heat up, leading to an upswing in long-term interest rates.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines rose 2 1/4 to 145 1/4; Eastman Kodak 1 1/2 to 59 1/2; and American Telephone & Telegraph 1/8 to 24 7/8.

Upjohn gained 4 1/8 to 93. The company said Thursday it hopes to be able to market one of its drugs as a treatment for male baldness as early as next year.

C.H. Masland & Sons, traded on the American Stock Exchange, was up 2 1/2 at 68. Burlington Industries began its previously announced $68-a-share offer to acquire the company.

Masland said it urged shareholders to defer action on the offer until its directors meet next week.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 1.04 to 139.21. The Amex market value index, which closed Thursday at a record high, was up 1.37 at 277.59.

Volume on the Big Board came to 61.19 million shares at noontime, against 68.30 million at the same point Thursday.

 "We think it's the Soviet Union that is holding it up," she said.
 Asked if she would allow the United States to deploy chemical weapons on British soil, the prime minister said: "Our first objective is to get the Soviet Union to stop making chemical weapons and to get the stockpile down."
 "If the Soviet Union won't agree, then if the U.S. asked us to have chemical weapons here, I can't say what the answer will be," Mrs. Thatcher said.

Journal's Editor Defends Use Of 'Religious' Story

CHICAGO (AP) - The editor of a leading medical journal says he will not shy away from controversial topics, despite heavy criticism for publishing an article contending a medical analysis supports the Bible's accounts of Jesus' crucifixion.

Dr. George Lundberg, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said the response to the article, "On the Physical Death of Jesus Christ," was the greatest to any article during his five-year tenure.

"It would be appropriate for me to tell you the journal, by and large, does not publish articles about religion," Lundberg said. "We saw this as an article on torture."

"We have deliberately published stories to make editorial points and raise issues," he added. "We will continue to do so."

The article used the Gospels as a basis, in part, for a medical analysis of Christ's death and then concluded the analysis proved New Testament accounts.

The authors - Dr. William Edwards, a pathologist at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.; the Rev. Wesley Gabel, a pastor at two Methodist churches in Minnesota; and medical illustrator Floyd Hosmer - also concluded Jesus probably died from shock due to blood loss and from an inability to breathe on the cross.

"Perhaps the future will see these authors equally successful in studying 'Thermal Injuries to Joan of Arc,' 'Alkaloid Intoxication and Socrates,' and 'Gunshot Wounds and the Brain of Hitler,'" wrote Dr. Norman Marcus of Springfield, Va.

In a nine-page section in today's journal, the editors reprinted 17 letters from readers and a reply from the authors.

All but two of the letters attacked the article or the journal's decision to publish it. Sharon Iverson, assistant editor of the JAMA letters column, said the ratio of seven critical responses to each favorable one was representative of the approximately 100 letters that followed publication.

Dr. George Bohm of Texarkana, Texas, wrote that even if the article's intent was to describe Jesus' suffering on the cross, "What Christian, Jew or atheist does not realize that respiration during crucifixion is agonizing?"

Others attacked the article for accepting Gospel accounts "uncritically, as basic historical fact," for using JAMA's forum to "disguise theological, we dare say fundamentalist, biases," and for reviving "the ancient, but insubstantial charge of deicide leveled against the Jews."

The authors defended using the Gospels as "a reliable historical account of Jesus' death."

"We would mourn the day that anyone would use our study to promote anti-Semitism, and we pray that the emergence of this topic may never result in anti-Semitic words or actions," they wrote.

Edwards, contacted Wednesday, declined to comment further.

But Dennis Smith, a New Testament specialist and professor of religious studies at Oklahoma State University, wrote, "To use such a naive reconstruction of the events of Jesus' death as the basis for medical analysis is roughly equivalent to a paleontologist's using a literal reading of the Genesis creation story as primary data for the origin of humanity."

Lundberg defended the decision to publish the article, saying it appeared in a journal section designed to take on controversial issues.

He said articles published in that section were held to the same standards of peer review as other journal contributions.

Lundberg also said the journal's intent was "to bring home to modern readers the extreme cruelty that has existed among human beings over time."

He said the article was the first of a series published this spring detailing state-sponsored torture and its consequences to the populace and to doctors in those countries who come under pressure to participate or cover up such episodes.

Hoggard Dumps Rose From 4-A Playoffs, 9-3

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Tim Parker tossed a one-hitter and Sean Ross, Jim Rogers and Nick Patsalos each contributed home runs as Wilmington Hoggard rolled up a 9-3 baseball victory over Rose High School Thursday night in the first round of the State 4A Playoffs.

Parker, who was shaky at times, was masterful at others. He struck out ten batters but walked nine and was charged with three wild pitches.

"He really kept our hitters off balance," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "I really thought that we would hit the ball better than we did."

Vincent also praised the mound work of his two pitchers, starter Tom Moye and reliever Eric Jarman. Moye went four and two-thirds innings, allowing four hits and eight runs. He walked four and struck out seven. Jarman, in two and a third innings, allowed two hits, an unearned run, walked two and struck out five.

"They pitched well, but when they made a mistake, it really hurt them."

"We had an awful lot of chances early to do something and didn't make them pay off," Vincent added. That was true.

Rose loaded the bases with one away in the second on two walks and an error and saw the final two batters strike out. Two runners reached in the fourth with one away and got no further.

In the fourth, Axel Smith reached on an error that allowed him to dash all the way to third with none away and Rose still got nothing.

Meanwhile, Hoggard was doing some damage with its bats. With one away in the third, both Rob Ferguson and Mark Bryant walked. Sean Ross followed that up with a line-drive homer out of the park in left field, giving Hoggard a 3-0 lead.

Hoggard put the game out of reach in the fifth with five big runs. Bryant opened with a walk and Ross was hit by a pitch. Parker walked and a sacrifice fly by Chris Zimmerman brought in Bryant. Rogers then cracked his three-run homer to deep center and Patsalos followed with a solo shot to left.

That gave Hoggard an 8-0 lead. Rose finally got into the act in the fifth. With one away, Curtis Perkins hit the ball to the fence in dead center, getting a triple — the only hit for the Rampants on the evening. After David Daniels walked, a passed ball allowed Perkins to score and Daniels to dash all the way to third. He scored on Scott Davis' ground out.

Wilmington added one more in the seventh. Zimmerman reached on a two-base error and moved up on Rogers' single to left. A wild pitch allowed Zimmerman to score.

Rose also got a run in the seventh to close out the scoring. Jarman walked, as did Daniels and Davis, loading the bases. Smith also drew a walk, forcing in Jarman, but a grounder back to the mound ended Rose's hopes.

Rogers led the Hoggard hitting with two.

The Wilmington club, now 16-4, advances to the second round and will play host to Big East co-champ Rocky Mount tonight.

Rose, the other co-champ of the Big East, winds up the season with a 15-7 record.

Roanoke Rapids Stops Chargers

LITTLEFIELD — Roanoke Rapids' Scott Jean needed help from John Allen, but the two combined for a five-hit shutout as Roanoke Rapids glided past Ayden-Grifton, 11-0, Thursday night in the 2A State Baseball Playoffs.

Jean hurled the first five innings but got into trouble in the sixth when he loaded the bases with no one out. Allen then came in and struck out the next two batters and got the third on a pop-up to end the Charger threat.

Jean struck out six and walked two on the evening while Allen added his two strikeouts in the sixth.

The Yellow Jackets got all the runs they needed in the third inning when they scored three times. R. Moore walked and John Lucas doubled. Brent Edwards then homered to make it 3-0.

Roanoke Rapids added four more in the fourth, one in the sixth and three in the seventh for its 11-run total.

Lucan, Jean and Will Munson each had two hits to lead the Yellow Jackets. Andy Swanson had a pair to pace the Chargers.

The loss ends the season for Ayden-Grifton at 12-10. Roanoke Rapids advances in the field to face Charles B. Aycock next.

Sugar Goes To Afternoon

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — ABC Sports' most recent addition to its New Year's Day Bowl line up has created a new sweet and sour combination for viewers as the Sugar Bowl will kick off in the afternoon next year to accommodate a television schedule that includes Florida's Citrus Bowl.

"With the lead-in created by ABC's acquisition of the Florida Citrus Bowl giving us an adjacency of this type for the first time, we believe, as does ABC, the change increases the potential for higher and more consistent ratings," Sugar Bowl president Judge Thomas C. Wicker Jr., said Thursday.

The game, which has suffered in the ratings as it went head-to-head against the Orange Bowl, will now be about 2:30 p.m. CST, Wicker announced.

ABC-TV has been interested in a switch for some time, but Sugar Bowl officials are known to have resisted in the interest of a later start.

The mid-afternoon kickoff puts the Sugar Bowl on the air during the second half of the Fiesta, Cotton and Rose bowls.

The new kickoff time is immediately following the Citrus Bowl, which starts at 11:10 a.m. CST.

Wicker said the afternoon start for the Sugar Bowl allows ABC affiliates to keep their regular evening news.

Wicker said the Southeastern Conference commissioner's office was consulted about the change, since the SEC champion is automatically one of the teams in the Sugar Bowl.

Fike Defeats Rose Girls, 9-1

Wilson Fike handed Rose High School's girls' their second loss in a little over a week Thursday, eliminating them from the 3A/4A State Softball Playoffs, 9-1.

The defeat ended the season for the Rampettes, who had been co-champions of the Big East Conference. The loss to Fike in the final week of the regular season cost Rose the outright championship.

Details of the game were not made available.

Lady Rams Top Tigers

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's Lady Rams exploded for seven runs in the second inning and went on to take an 8-2 softball victory over Williamston in round two of the 1A/2A State Playoffs Thursday afternoon.

The win advanced the Rams into the third round against Bunn. That game will be played today at 6 p.m. in Snow Hill.

Denise Warren and Renee Sullivan led off the second with singles. Stephanie Streeter then singled in Warren. Sherri Williams walked to load the bases and Christina Warren singled in Sullivan. Jennie Hardison followed with a triple that brought in three runs. Dalen Herring's grounder got Hardison at the plate, but Trenette Daniels tripled to score Herring. Chanel Hooker singled in Daniels with the seventh run of the frame.

The Lady Rams added one more in the third.

Williamston picked up one in the fourth and one in the seventh.

Denise Warren, Sullivan and Hardison each had two hits for Greene Central. No one had more than one hit for Williamston.

The Lady Tigers close out the season with a 12-3 record.

Aycock Nips Tigers By 4-2

WILLIAMSTON — Charles B. Aycock, the third-place team in the Eastern Plains Conference, eased past Northeastern Conference champ Williamston, 4-2, in the 2-A State Baseball Playoffs Thursday night.

The win advances Aycock into a meeting with Northeastern runner-up Roanoke Rapids in the second round of play.

The game was a pitching duel between Aycock's Tony Tillman and Williamston's Glenn Hardison. Tillman allowed two hits, struck out 15 and walked four. Hardison, who gave up five hits, fanned 13 and walked one.

Williamston scored first, taking a 2-0 lead in the third. Chris James reached on a fielder's choice and stole second. He scored on Terry Gardner's single. Gardner advanced on a wild pitch and scored when Jesse Ward's ground ball was errored.

Aycock, however, came back to tie it up with two in the top of the fourth.

Then, in the fifth, the Falcons pushed over the winning run. Jay Westbrook reached on a two-base error and scored when Tray Aycock doubled.

Aycock added one more in the seventh.

No one on either team had more than one hit.

Aycock is now 12-10, while Williamston closes the year at 17-4.

Waltrip Tries To Forget Past

HARRISBURG (AP) — Darrell Waltrip has won the Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway three times — including last year — but he's trying to forget it.

"We can't let the fact we won this race last year influence what we do here Sunday," he said after qualifying Thursday for a No. 16 starting position with a best-of-two-laps speed of 164.389 mph. "We're just going to have to attack this race. This race is the second most important race of the year — some say it is the most important race."

On Wednesday, Geoff Bodine won the pole for Sunday's race with a four-lap average of 164.511 mph, bumping teammate Tim Richmond into the No. 2 spot with 164.431 mph.

The Chevrolets of Bodine and Richmond will be followed Sunday by Dale Earnhardt, Sterling Marlin, Bill Elliott, Benny Parsons, David Pearson, Harry Gant, Rusty Wallace, Morgan Shepherd, Neil Bonnett, Cale Yarborough, Ricky Rudd, Mark Martin and Richard Petty.

Qualifying behind Waltrip's Chevrolet Thursday were Terry Labonte's Oldsmobile, Kyle Petty's Ford, Bobby Allison's Buick, Lake Speed's Oldsmobile, Phil Parsons'

Oldsmobile, Connie Saylor's Ford, Bobby Hillin Jr.'s Buick, Joe Ruttman's Buick, Jody Ridley's Pontiac, Greg Sacks' Chevrolet, Brad Teague's Chevrolet and the Fords of Ken Schrader, Chet Phillip and Alan Kulwicki.

Waltrip said there won't be as much pressure on him this year as there was last year, when The Winston race of leading drivers was run at the speedway.

Waltrip won the Coca-Cola 600, formerly called the World 600, in 1978, 1979 and 1985. Only three other drivers — David Pearson, Buddy Baker and Bobby Allison — have won three World 600s.

He has not won any of the 10 Winston Cup races this year, but he has won 67 of 379 races since 1972.

Meanwhile, Richmond said his front-row position with Bodine could give both of them a psychological advantage.

"A lot of people think a two-car team doesn't work — they think it's like the plague," Richmond said. "(Team owner) Rick Hendrick is one that can make it work."

"The more we run consistently, like getting the one-two positions we did, the better it is," said Richmond. "People will say, 'They got two cars in there — why can't we just get one?' Mentally, it works in people's minds in a positive way for us."

Richmond said he thinks Allison, Waltrip and Earnhardt are the drivers to beat.

"Geoff's definitely tough," he said, however. "With the equipment and as good a driver as Geoff is, I'm not as much surprised he's this consistent."

Bodine has won two of 10 races this year — the Daytona 500 and the Budweiser 500 at Dover, Del. — and has won four poles. Richmond has yet to win a race this year, but he has won one pole and four outside poles.

Richmond said he and Bodine could help each other in Sunday's race.

"If it comes down to the end of the race where he or I am running third or fourth with a man between us and the other one leading, it's definitely possible either one of us could pull the other up to second," he said.

For the rest of the race, Richmond said, "my strategy is just to stay in the lead lap and keep the leaders in sight ... unless I can lead easily. I won't get real racy until the end."

Here are the top 30 drivers qualifying for Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway, with type of car, average speed in miles per hour and money won. Positions 1-15 were chosen Wednesday with a four-lap average and positions 16-30 were filled by speed over the best of two laps. Positions 31-40 will be filled Friday:

1. Geoff Bodine, Chevrolet, 164.511, $30,000
2. Tim Richmond, Chevrolet, 164.431, $5,500

3. Dale Earnhardt, Chevrolet, 163.842, $3,000
4. Sterling Marlin, Chevrolet, 163.297, $2,000
5. Bill Elliott, Ford, 163.048, $1,500
6. Benny Parsons, Oldsmobile, 162.948, $500
7. David Pearson, Chevrolet, 162.828, $200
8. Harry Gant, Chevrolet, 162.465, $200
9. Rusty Wallace, Pontiac, 162.379, $200
10. Morgan Shepherd, Buick, 162.166, $200

Canadiens Take 3-1 Lead

MONTREAL (AP) — The way the Montreal Canadiens and Calgary Flames were playing, it seemed as if one mistake could decide the game.

That's exactly what happened.

"I thought it would be 0-0 and go in to overtime, but then we made that mistake," Calgary coach Bob Johnson said following Thursday night's 1-0 loss to the Canadiens in Game 4 of the Stanley Cup Finals.

The mistake that decided the game and gave the Canadiens a 3-1 lead in the best-of-7 series heading into Game 5 Saturday in Calgary happened midway through the third period after an evening of tough defensive hockey in the Montreal Forum.

Calgary center Doug Risebrough attempted a clearing pass from deep in the Flames' zone. But Montreal rookie Claude Lemieux stepped in front of the pass and blasted home the game-winning goal at 11:10.

"The pass was to the winger coming out," said Risebrough, thinking perhaps he might get the puck to Perry Berezan. "I guess the smarter play would have been to bank it off the boards to Jamie (Macoun) going up the side."

Lemieux said he was ready for the play from his position in the slot.

"I anticipated the pass from Risebrough," Lemieux said. "The puck came right on my stick. I guess he didn't know I was there. I have to thank Doug for that."

At first, Lemieux thought he was offside.

"But I didn't hear anything, so I went ahead and shot," the Montreal rookie said.

Calgary goaltender Mike Vernon said Lemieux was "just wide open in the slot. In that situation, you want your legs to go out, not in. He caught me in-between, while I was moving my legs. The shot was about six inches off the ice. There might have been a breakdown (in coverage), but we can't give them any breakdowns."

Before Lemieux's dramatic game-winner touched off a tremendous roar from the crowd of 18,076 at the Forum, Lemieux had visions of overtime.

"But I still thought we would win. We've been doing well in overtime in the playoffs," Lemieux said, no doubt remembering Montreal's 3-2 overtime victory Sunday night in Calgary.

Lemieux' 10th goal of the playoffs is the second-highest total ever recorded by a rookie in one playoff season. Minnesota's Dino Ciccarelli holds the playoff record with 14 in 1981.

For about 2½ periods Thursday night, the Canadiens and Flames were like boxers trying to feel each other out.

"It was a cautious game, but that's the way we're used to playing in the Adams Division," said Montreal's Mats Naslund. "We didn't want to make any mistakes."

No one did, until Risebrough let one slip, but Vernon also had some good fortune on his side.

Two Montreal shots hit goal posts — one by Serge Boisvert in the first period and another by Bob Gainey in the third.

(Montreal goaltender Ptarick) Roy talks to goalposts, but Vernon must feel blessed tonight," Montreal Coach Jean Perron said. "He should thank his goalposts for what happened."

And the Flames can thank Vernon for his performance Thursday night. The rookie made 23 saves, while Roy only faced 15 shots — including a mere eight in the last two periods.

"We had so many chances," Perron said. "Vernon was the reason why they stayed in the game that long."

Roy, meanwhile, posted his first playoff shutout with one of his least-strenuous efforts as the Canadiens tied a Stanley Cup record with their 10th home-ice victory this playoff season. The Edmonton Oilers set the record with 10 wins at home last season.

"I had a shutout, but I only had to play really well in the first period," Roy said. "The rest wasn't easy, but the defense played really well, they always got the rebounds. They cleared the rebounds and didn't give the Flames any good chances."

Bad feelings, which were evident in earlier games, erupted after the final siren when a free-for-all broke out all over the ice. Fans stayed in their seats for 10 minutes after the game while the players battled. At the end, officials called nine players for penalties, including eight for game misconducts.

"It was most unfortunate," Perron said. "These things shouldn't happen. The players should go off, but this has been the story of the series — pileups after whistles."

Simon Hoping Crash Helps Him

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Dick Simon is trying to buy his way into the starting lineup of Sunday's Indianapolis 500. But for now, Dennis Firestone's team is working frantically to keep its mangled car in the race.

Simon is 34th in the 33-car field — the alternate driver, in other words, if one of those already qualified can't start. Firestone's Lola may be that one.

It is currently sitting in the middle of the seventh row, the 20th starting berth. But after crashing sideways at 160 mph into a wall at the entrance of pit road during Thursday's final practice and triggering a four-car pileup, it also is sitting in Firestone's garage in Gasoline Alley. Pace Electronics, Firestone's team, has no backup car.

Simon said he has offered Firestone half his race-day purse if he will withdraw, allowing Simon to start at the back of the pack. That could mean a quick $25,000 to as much as $250,000 from the $3 million purse for the Firestone team without so much as turning a wheel.

Firestone's car owner, Patrick Kehoe of Indianapolis, isn't buying, yet.

"He told me he wants to sleep on it," Simon said after talking to Kehoe. "I'd say there's a 50-50 chance. He said he's get back to me (today)."

Simon said he asked if Kehoe's team would "share the purse and the personnel and the equipment. We're short a few wheels and we're short a fuel tank. With their personnel and our personnel, we could put forth a solid effort, an all-out effort."

"I told him that even if they fix it, it wouldn't be a real safe situation for the driver," Simon added. "The question is whether the tub is OK. I know as a driver I've climbed into things that weren't safe. Dennis is a driver and I'm sure he's climbed into things that weren't safe. But the stakes are high here."

"We have to rebuild the crashed car to be in the race," Dave Thomas, Firestone's crew chief, said. "We've made arrangements with Lola to fly in some parts from England. ... We're getting bits we need from other Lola teams, too. We're getting help from everybody. We're just going to have to work at it until it is done."

"The rear suspension had quite a bit of damage and the left side of the tub (the cocoon which envelops the driver) was badly damaged. We'll replace that part of it."

Firestone's team week a second car by another team earlier this week. But under Indy rules, any cars substituted following qualifications must have been entered in the race by the team hoping to run it, not another team.

Three other cars were damaged in the accident near the pit entrance, which began when the left rear wheel blew off Firestone's machine. George Snider's and Roberto Moreno's cars sustained sufficient damage that they went to backup cars for the race. Josele Garza's car sustained only minimal damage.

"I didn't know whether I was hitting walls or cars or what," Firestone said. "As I was exiting turn No. 4 at speed, I felt an interruption in the normal movement of the car. Then, a split second later, the car went wild. ... The structure at the end of the pit wall saved my life — that and the fuel cell."

The accident also jiggled the lineup a bit. Moreno, a Brazilian rookie on the outside of the fifth row, is now 33rd. Snider remains 32nd. Mario Andretti, 33rd when the day began, is now 31st, inside in the last row. Garza, from Mexico, moved from 18th to 17th, in the middle of the sixth row.

If Firestone drops out, everyone from the 21st to the last berths would move up one spot and Simon would be 33rd.

Firestone suffered small cuts and bruises on his left knee and right arm and Snider was treated for scrapes and bruises. Two pit crewmen and a spectator also were hurt.

Donald Cox, 60, of Poland, Ind., was treated for a cut scalp and Michael Arnold, 30, of Albuquerque, suffered a cut right leg and bruised right hip. The spectator, Fred Hager, 75, of Memphis, Tenn., was hit by a flying tire and suffered a bruised left leg.

Snider's original car was powered by a Cosworth V8 engine. The backup has a Chevrolet V6. Under Indy rules, the car which ultimately runs in the race must have the same kind of engine as the one which was qualified. That, too, means a lot of garage work.

"It'll take four guys two days working on each car," Sherby Blankenship, the team manager for Snider's Foyt-Gilmore team, said. "It's just like building a new car."

Blankenship said they would have to change the engine and all the gears and that would mean changes in, among other things, engine mounting plates, brackets, headers and the exhaust system. And the electrical system would have to be rewired.

Rick Mears, who set a record of 216.828 mph to win the pole position, was the fastest of 33 drivers, including Simon, who were on the track Thursday for the final day of practice. Mears was clocked at 212.7 mph, leading 23 drivers who practice at speeds over 200.

Phil Krueger chose not to practice because he said he has no spare parts and only one engine for his year-old car, the only 1985 model in the field.

Davis, Giants Produce 2nd Straight Gooden Loss

By The Associated Press

It was payback time for New York Mets right-hander Dwight Gooden. But it was San Francisco's Chili Davis who collected.

Davis entered Thursday's game with lifetime mark of 7-for-14 against the 1985 National League Cy Young winner and improved that to 9-for-16 (.563), as the Giants crushed the Mets and Gooden, 10-2.

It was Gooden's second straight defeat and his worst pounding since his rookie year when the St. Louis Cardinals reached him for 10 hits and seven runs over three innings on Aug. 1, 1984.

Gooden, 5-2, left Thursday's game after facing four batters in the fifth — retiring none. He earned nine hits and seven runs, six earned.

"It felt strange leaving that early, and I was doing a lot of thinking about what I was doing wrong," Gooden said. "I feel like I'm throwing the ball as well as last year, but everything's going wrong."

It was Gooden's earliest exit from a game since he departed after 2-1-3 innings against Atlanta last July 4.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Cincinnati 6, St. Louis 4; San Diego 6, Philadelphia 2; Houston 4, Pittsburgh 0; Atlanta 2, Chicago 0; and Montreal 5, Los Angeles 2.

Perhaps overlooked in the attention paid to Gooden's sudden slump was the brilliant pitching of San Francisco's Mike Krukow, 6-3.

Mookie Wilson opened the game with a single and one out later Keith Hernandez hit a home run. Krukow proceeded to retire the next 23 batters. Greg Minton came on to pitch the ninth and retired the side in order.

The Giants took a 3-2 lead in the fourth inning when Davis scored from third on a suicide squeeze by Krukow.

Chris Brown had three of the hits off Gooden, and Jose Uribe drove in the first two runs of the game with a pair of singles.

Will Clark, Brown and Jeffrey Leonard opened the Giants' four-run fifth-inning with singles, loading the bases, and Davis blooped the two-run single to left. A wild pitch and balk by reliever Rick Aguilera scored the next two runs.

Houston's Bill Doran, Jack Clark and Willie McGee of St. Louis, and Atlanta's Claudell Washington, had batted .409 against Gooden in his first two seasons. But Gooden had faced all — except Davis — this season and their collective average is .095.

N.C. Teams All Beaten

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State, ranked No. 1 in both of the major national college baseball polls, made the pollsters look good in its first outing in the NCAA South II Regional.

Florida State pounded out 18 hits, including four each by Luis Alicea and Bien Figueroa, while beating North Carolina State 10-6 Thursday night.

Elsewhere, first baseman Jimmy Barragan sparked a 22-hit attack with two home runs and six runs batted in as the Oklahoma State Cowboys defeated Richmond 20-8 in the NCAA Midwest Regionals in Stillwater on Thursday.

In the late game Thursday night, Walt Harris hit a three-run homer and Lee Piemel went the distance, scattering eight hits, as Stanford pounded Appalachian State, 11-1.

Davis predicted, "He's not going to struggle for long, and he's not the type of pitcher who's going to get down on himself. He'll say, 'So what?' and bounce right back."

Davis, a lifetime .268 hitter, seems to have given much thought to hitting Gooden.

"His stuff is so good, it can be tough just to hit his mistakes," Davis said. "I try not to overswing. I see a lot of guys overswinging. They have no chance. I figure he's supplying most of the power, so I don't have to swing hard."

Astros 4, Pirates 0

Houston's Bob Knepper became the first eight-game winner in the major leagues as he pitched a seven-hitter and drove in a run with a single to beat visiting Pittsburgh.

Knepper, 8-2, yielded hits to Bill Almon and Sammy Khalifa to start the game but then he took control, finishing with five strikeouts and one walk.

"I worried too much about rhythm and not enough about getting the hitters out," Knepper said. "It just took me awhile to get started."

"Against a guy like Knepper, if you get a couple of chances early and come up empty, it can be a long afternoon," Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland said. "He had great command of his breaking ball. He doesn't overpower you, he just beats you. ... He doesn't give you many chances."

Braves 2, Cubs 0

Joe Johnson pitched a five-hit ball over 8 1-3 innings and Bob Horner broke a scoreless tie with a double as Atlanta defeated Chicago for its seventh straight victory.

"I was trying too hard just to throw strikes," said Johnson, who used 96 pitches and stretched his scoreless string to 17 1-3 innings.

Johnson, 6-3, struck out four and walked two. After he walked two batters in the ninth, Paul Assenmacher came on to record the final two outs and earn his fourth save.

Reds 6, Cardinals 4

Rookie Tracy Jones drove in three runs with a bases-loaded double as visiting Cincinnati sent St. Louis to its 21st loss in 28 games.

Jones' hit came off Danny Cox, 0-4, who pitched a one-hitter over six innings.

"I needed a double. I hadn't one since the second game of the season," Jones said. "He (Cox) threw six straight bad balls. I knew that he's coming in with a fastball. I don't think I hit it that well."

Padres 6, Phillies 2

San Diego's Kevin McReynolds, Tim Flannery and Steve Garvey each homered to send visiting Philadelphia to its fifth straight setback.

"I guess we shouldn't be surprised by the things he does," Padres Manager Steve Boros said of Flannery. "He's an amazing player. He consistently comes up with things to help us win."

DuBose Takes Putting Win

Rookie Will DuBose shot an eight-under-par 64 to beat all the rookies and amateurs at the Greenville Putt-Putt Golf Course Thursday night.

DuBose was followed in the rookie division by Keith Wise with a 72 and Phil Spring with a 73.

Sandy Williams was first in the amateur division with a 66, followed by Jimmy Silverthorne at 68.

David Manning captured the pro division with a 12-under 60 while Bob Williams had a 67.

House Gives Trade Bill Sweeping Approval

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A veto threat hovered over major trade legislation containing curbs on imports that swept to House approval despite President Reagan's warning it was guaranteed to "plunge the world into a trade war."

Described by Reagan as "openly and rankly political" and by an aide as "an A-1 candidate for a veto," the trade bill cleared the House on a 295-115 vote Thursday and headed for the Senate.

It is the first broad trade legislation approved by either house since the U.S. deficit in world markets soared to $148.5 billion last year.

The bill calls for import restraints to fight unfair trade practices and requires such steps to help industries threatened by foreign competition.

The 458-page measure also would authorize $1 billion for education, pave the way for international negotiations and make numerous other refinements in U.S. trade law ranging from eased export controls to new tariffs.

A heavily debated provision would set a 10 percent target for annual rollbacks in surpluses gained by Japan, Taiwan and West Germany in trade with the United States.

In three days of debate, supporters said the bill would stem job losses caused by imports and sharpen the nation's competitive edge. Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, described it as a remedy for a "trade cancer gnawing at the nation's vital organs."

Critics countered that it would hurt consumers. They said any benefits would come at the expense of farmers and exporters of aircraft and roadbuilding equipment who would find themselves shut out of overseas markets.

Minutes before the House voted, Reagan told the American Retail Federation that the Democratic leadership "has put together a trade bill — rather, I should say an anti-trade bill — that is openly and rankly political."

"This anti-trade bill, this protectionist legislation, would have our nation violate the most basic tenets of free and fair international trade. Indeed, it would plunge the world into a trade war eroding our relations with our allies and free-world trading partners," he said.

"Economic growth, in America and around the world, would be the casualty," he said, adding the measure would "cost American consumers billions and undercut the millions of American jobs connected with foreign trade."

Democrats plan to spotlight the issue in fall congressional races, a factor that brought pressure on Republicans to break with the administration and support the bill.

In the end, 59 Republicans supported it. The North Carolina and Pennsylvania delegations, keenly aware of plant closings in the textile and steel industries, provided heavy GOP support.

Republican leaders sought to hold down defections and thus stamp the measure with a partisan image. Democrats, who control the House by a 130-vote margin, portrayed it as having the support of a bipartisan coalition. Four Democrats voted against the bill.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said after the House acted that the "administration has been hard of hearing on the trade issue."

"The United States runs up a trade deficit of $150 billion and the president continues to proudly wear his stay-the-course button," O'Neill said in a statement.

Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-Ohio, one of the measure's major architects, declared that it contained few mandatory retaliatory provisions. He said one of its chief purposes would be to stimulate negotiations.

"This bill is not about closing U.S. markets — it is about bringing our natural leverage as the world's biggest market to bear in negotiations to improve the international rules of the game," he said.

Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., who frequently acted as the administration's floor leader on the issue, declared it "a dark day in U.S. economic history" and called the measure "the most protectionist bill to come before Congress in 50 years."

Tar Heel Republicans Support Bill

By The Associated Press
Though President Reagan castigated a sweeping trade bill as "openly and rankly political," Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., says the issue was jobs, not politics.

"I voted for the trade package because I thought it was one more chance for us to send the signals to our trading partners worldwide that there is no such thing as free trade," Coble said. "We need to make it clear that all doors need to be open because we're talking about our jobs."

"Textile workers in particular, in our district, feel the direct bite of the dumping that has occurred in recent years by various trading partners, particularly countries located on the Pacific rim," Coble said.

Coble was one of five Republican members of the North Carolina congressional delegation who broke rank with Reagan, joining the rest of the state congressional delegation in voting for the provision Thursday. Reagan denounced the bill minutes before the vote as "openly and rankly political." The House approved the bill on a vote of 295-115.

"This is a large trade bill that will send a strong message to the president and to our trading partners that we do not intend to allow our industrial base to be destroyed and that we expect them to open up their markets and deal with us fairly," said Rep. Bill Cobey, R-N.C.

Rep. Jim Broyhill said the bill contains some "bad provisions" but "if it is the only way we can move the process forward to help our U.S. industries and workers fight unfair and illegal trade practices, I am for it."

 The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MAY 24, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Although today you are inclined to make abrupt changes and expand your activities, it is wise not to do so until you have looked at every facet of the conditions facing you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are tempted to seek a new environment and find a new way of life, but this is not a good day to do so.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You want to start a new method for handling your implied or actual agreements but this may have flaws in it that can't be seen.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are tempted to light into an outside partner, but this would only lead to a big loss later, so calm down.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get busy at the tasks you must do today, and they will soon be behind you. Don't argue with one who wants to help.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Know what it is you would most like to do, but count the cost first and see if you can truly afford it.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have to apply more effort if you are to keep things running smoothly at home, especially in the evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If shopping and other duties are a bit difficult today, blame it on the atmospheric conditions. Don't lose your temper.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You believe you can handle an important matter easily, but there are hidden factors to delay your progress.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try not to be overly optimistic and proceed with caution in whatever means the most to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A day when many a crass pressure could upset you, but be more objective and you will win out.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be more discriminating in the choice of friends you want to see today and hobbies to get into.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have civic duties to attend to, so don't neglect them. Take no risks where your credit and good name are concerned.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have the ability to comprehend different schools of philosophy. Many conditions may arise that could disturb the natural flow of intelligence, so teach not to be overly independent. Teach to keep an open mind. Much travel is possible during the lifetime.

 Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow ended their crime spree on this day in 1934, when they were killed in a bloody police ambush. The car they drove into the ambush was a Ford. Clyde Barrow loved Fords. A month before his death, he wrote to Henry Ford, praising the automobile. "While I still have got breath in my lungs," he wrote, "I will tell you what a dandy car you make. I have drove Fords exclusively when I could get away with one."

When Kay bid one spade freely over East's one heart, Kaplan immediately envisioned a grand slam. Kaplan judged brilliantly that, if his partner held the queen of spades, the choice was not between a small and a grand slam, but between a game and a grand. He realized that if the club finesse were to fail, even 12 tricks would not be available after a heart lead. His leap to five no trump was the Grand Slam Force. In their methods, Kay's response showed a good suit headed by one of the three top honors, and Kaplan went on to seven.

The play went as Kaplan visualized. Kay won the heart opening, cashed the king and queen of trumps and finessed in clubs. He returned to his hand with a trump to repeat the finesse and claimed when the king appeared.

In the other room the contract was six spades, and the Kaplan team picked up 11 IMPs.

The most successful team in American competition in recent years, Edgar Kaplan of New York, Norman Kay of Narberth, Pa., Bill Root of Boca Raton, Fla., and Richard Pavlicek of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., added another title to their collection when they won the Vanderbilt Team of Four event at the recent Spring North American Championships in Portland, Ore. In so doing they earned a spot in the playoff to determine the U.S. team for the 1987 World Championship.

Pensions

RALEIGH (AP) — State House Speaker Liston Ramsey says the state can't adequately compensate volunteer firemen and rescue squads for their service, but he says increasing their pension from $75 to $100 is "the least we can do."

Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said their proposal was an alternative to Republican Gov. Jim Martin's request to give a $1.500 grant to each of the state's 1,200 local volunteer fire departments. Martin included the $1.8 million in grants for fire departments and rescue squads in the $533.6 million budget supplement he unveiled last week.

Danny Kaye Given Award

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Actor Danny Kaye, who has traveled the world for more than three decades on behalf of sick and needy children, has received a National Fellowship Award.

The award, presented Thursday, is given annually by the Philadelphia Fellowship Commission, which claims to be the oldest human rights agency in the nation.

Previous recipients included the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Eleanor Roosevelt and Leonard Bernstein.

Kaye is in his 33rd year as ambassador-at-large for UNICEF, the United Nations organization that helps children.

Sponsor's Cutbacks Won't Hurt 'Masterpiece Theater'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Alistair Cooke won't have to pump gas at the local filling station. He and his "Masterpiece Theater" are safe — despite the fallen oil prices that have affected Mobil, one of public television's major underwriters.

Mobil has taken several cost-cutting measures, including delaying pay raises three months and freezing all hiring, but scaling back the programming on "Masterpiece Theater" is not one of them, said Herbert Schmetz, Mobil's vice president for public affairs.

"We've had to cut some of our advertising and promotion support," Schmetz said. "But the cost of the shows are fixed."

Mobil paid $6 million for its 1985-86 schedule, which included "Bleak House," "Mountbatten" and "The Irish R.M.," which begins a six-week run Sunday. Schmetz said Mobil also spent $6 million on programs the season before and for 1986-87.

That's a bargain, considering the high quality of the productions and the prices of the commercial networks' entertainment programs.

For instance, ABC's two "North & South" miniseries, which ran for a total of 24 hours, cost $2 million an hour. A regular hour of drama on the three commercial networks costs around $900,000.

Mobil, in partnership with British producers, spends an average of $125,000 per hour of "Masterpiece Theater," Schmetz said, noting that those payments actually have declined slightly in the two years since Mobil began investing earlier in some projects.

"In pre-production, where the money is more vital to the producers, they're willing to make better deals," Schmetz said. Mobil and its "Masterpiece Theater" producing station, WGBH, then must be savvy at spotting potential. There's less risk, of course, in buying completed goods.

Schmetz said Mobil's relationship with WGBH was akin to the father of the bride — Mobil signs the checks and lets the programmers at Boston's public TV station acquire the shows and advise the British producers.

Before becoming co-producer, WGBH has to agree with "the basic approach of the project or we don't get involved," said Henry Becton, WGBH's president and general manager. "We usually ask to be consulted and have our recommendations taken seriously on the writer, director and casting. But we also leave the final editorial say to the British production company."

Schmetz said the mistake other U.S. networks and cable companies make in their British partnerships is requiring American stars. For example, "Tender Is the Night," the co-production of pay-cable's Showtime and the British Broadcasting Corp., featured Peter Strauss and Mary Steenburgen.

"If you tailor the show for two markets, it won't work for either market," Schmetz said. "I've always insisted that they ignore the American market and not go for marquee names."

When cable was a boom industry in the early 1980s, The Entertainment Channel and CBS Cable, both now defunct, and others began talking to the British producers who normally supply "Masterpiece Theater." The producers, in turn, tried to hit Mobil for higher payments.

"They thought they had died and gone to heaven," Schmetz said. "But we told them we wouldn't increase our prices and engage in bidding wars. We never lost anything we really wanted because it quickly became apparent that the huge market wasn't there."

Today, "Masterpiece Theater" is virtually the only U.S. outlet for high-brow costume dramas and historical pieces. Pay-cable's Home Box Office did "Far Pavilions," starring American actress Amy Irving. But Becton doesn't regret losing that one or "Tender Is the Night."

In retrospect, he wishes WGBH had done John Le Carre's "Smiley's People" and "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy," both broadcast on Operation Prime Time, a syndicated network.

Farrah To Star As Nazi Hunter

PARIS (AP) — Farrah Fawcett, once the glossy star of TV's "Charley's Angels," will portray Beate Klarsfeld in a television movie dramatizing the noted Nazi hunter's personal crusade to track down war criminals.

Miss Fawcett, who said she wants to forget her "unfortunate past as an angel," will star in "The Beate Klarsfeld Story," a 90-minute movie to be broadcast on ABC and French television next fall. It is based on the true story of Klarsfeld, a German woman who risked her life ferreting out former Nazis and bringing them to justice. The movie highlights her search for Klaus Barbie, the "Butcher of Lyon," whom she discovers hiding in South America.

The movie opens when Beate is a young. She leaves bomb-shattered Berlin in 1960 for Paris. There she falls in love with, and marries, a French Jewish law student named Serge Klarsfeld. He is played by Scottish actor Tom Conti.

From Serge, who narrowly escaped deportation when he was 8 years old and whose father was murdered at Auschwitz, Beate learns the full extent of the Nazi horrors and vows to make sure the world knows.

The $5 million dollar Silver Chalice Revcom presentation was done in association with Orion Television. Directed by Michael Lindsay-Hogg.

She goes to see Ita Halaubrenner, played by Academy Award-winner Geraldine Page, to help identify Barbie, the man who allegedly killed her husband and three children. Eleven years later, Serge and Beate watch as Barbie is brought from Bolivia to a Lyon jail, the scene of some of his most heinous crimes.

Producer William Kayden, whose credits include the award-winning "Missing Children," calls the script "authentic to a fault."

He said scriptwriter Frederick Hunter, a former journalist who lived extensively in Paris, conducted lengthy interviews with Mrs. Klarsfeld, and was familiar with the war period. The Klarsfelds had final say on the script.

Klarsfeld, who said he thought his wife resembled Miss Fawcett, said he and Beate were not concerned about the American star's sex symbol image, which in recent years has been overshadowed by her gripping dramatic performances on stage and television.

"Beate saw Farrah in 'The Burning Bed,' and was very impressed," Klarsfeld said. "She is very pretty and talented, so what more can we ask for?"

In that highly successful television movie, Miss Fawcett portrayed a battered wife who murders her abusive husband. In 1983, she impressed critics with her performance in "Extremities," the story of a rape victim who turns the tables on her attacker.

The French press, however, was skeptical about her ability to play such a serious role, noting that she did nothing to dispel her image as "an expensive poodle with nothing to say" during a recent news conference to promote the show.

She was asked if she could ever see herself involved politically as Mrs. Klarsfeld was. Miss Fawcett shook her blond mane and said: "It would be too easy to say yes, but if it meant risking my life, I just don't know."

Taxpayers Paying Up Voluntarily

WASHINGTON (AP) — Individual compliance with federal tax laws has increased for the first time since 1965, but the Internal Revenue Service is not sure whether it has spotted a trend or a fluke.

Couples, individuals and unincorporated businesses voluntarily paid 91.8 percent of the income taxes they owed in 1982, the most recent year for which statistics are available. That was an increase from the 91.0 percent compliance level of 1979. Compliance had dropped steadily from 94.3 percent in 1965.

"Presently, it is not known whether the improvement in compliance is temporary or if it represents a true turning point in taxpayer behavior," wrote IRS researcher Richard J. Fratanduno, who prepared the analysis. It will be 1988 before the IRS has enough evidence to decide whether the latest figures marked a reversal of two decades of declining compliance.

He said that although overall compliance increased, the improvement was noted in only four categories of income. Compliance actually fell off in eight categories and was significantly worse among some levels of unincorporated businesses and farms.

The study found less cheating than generally assumed on individual itemized deductions; a major increase in cheating by parents who improperly claim children as exemptions (8 million claimed exemptions were disallowed in 1982); and a level of falsification of business expenses so high that almost 30 percent of the business deductions claimed on Form 1040 were rejected.

Even though voluntary compliance levels rose in 1982, Fratanduno said, so did the dollar volume of additional taxes that would have been assessed had all returns been audited. That increase in taxes would have been $24.8 billion in 1982, compared with $21.6 billion in 1979 and $3.1 billion in 1965.

The supposed decline in taxpayer non-compliance is a perennial issue in Congress. It was cited when tougher tax rules were enacted in 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984. The "tax gap" — the difference between taxes owed and paid — is often listed as a reason for overhauling the tax system, to remove some of the complexity and reduce the rates that are said to discourage voluntary compliance.

Fratanduno's findings are based on random IRS audits of 50,000 individual tax returns.

College Debts Rise Nearly 300%

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's undergraduates are turning away from liberal arts for more lucrative majors such as business and engineering at least partly because of a huge rise in student indebtedness, a new study concludes.

The shift from liberal arts to career-related majors "has been attributed to a 'me generation' more preoccupied with self than with fellow man. But this may simply reflect the students' concern about their indebtedness and a hard-headed recognition that the job market is changing," said the survey released Thursday by The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

Average indebtedness among students borrowing for college nearly quadrupled from 1975 to 1984, rising from $2,100 to $7,900 based on student responses and adjusted for inflation. During that decade, the proportion of undergraduates borrowing to pay for college rose from 11 percent to 30 percent.

"The high cost of college makes it necessary for students to depend increasingly on outside support, including loans, and there is some evidence that those with sizable debts tend to concentrate in fields where they can expect high starting salaries," it said.

Student debt has soared since the 1970s because of the rapid growth in federal student loan programs, the increasing tendency of colleges to make loans rather than scholarships or grants, and because tuitions have been rising faster than inflation for the past six years.

The Carnegie survey suggested that hard economic realities may be steering students into fields of study and, eventually, careers that are not their first choices.

Only about a third of those surveyed who said they expected careers in either engineering science or computer science, both of which offer relatively high starting salaries, said those were the fields they were most interested in.

Of the 19 percent who said they planned to enter business, only 47 percent said that was their first choice of careers.

By contrast, of the two percent who said they expected to enter the music field, 83 percent called music their first passion.

The Carnegie report appears in the May-June issue of Change: The Magazine of Higher Learning published by the American Association of Higher Education. It includes data on student finances released for the first time from a national survey conducted in the spring of 1984 of 5,000 college students. The survey had a sampling error of about 3 percent.

"With students currently taking on $7,000 to $10,000 in loans during their college years, it is not surprising that the percentage of students who say they 'worry a great deal' about job prospects after graduation rose from 13 percent in 1975 to nearly 20 percent in 1984," said the report.

Last August, a study on the growing indebtedness of undergraduates by the American Council on Education illustrated how such loans can influence the career choices of graduates.

Navy Jet Hits Car, Kills Three

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A motorist who saw a Navy bomber plow into a car says she watched helplessly as the driver died in the crash, which also took the lives of the jet's two crewmen.

"All we saw was the lady. She was reaching out for help, but the plane was on the car and it was burning. It just scared me. It really scared me," said Patricia Carter, who was driving three vehicles behind the one that was struck Thursday.

The Navy and witnesses said the A-6E Intruder had just taken off from Oceana Naval Air Station when it crashed in a field and skidded across a Oceana Boulevard.

"We saw flames and a lot of smoke and I heard a big bang," said Debbie Chiavaroli, who was in a nearby car. The plane was flying low over the trees with flames showing at its rear just before the crash, she said.

"I looked in my rearview mirror, and all I saw was fire and black smoke everywhere," said Marjorie Craighead, who was driving north on the boulevard with her 3-year-old daughter immediately in front of the station wagon that was hit. "Somebody out there is with me. That car behind me was gone. It just blew up."

The Navy identified the crewmen as Lt. James P. Hoban, 26, of River Vale, N.J., the pilot; and Lt. Michael F. Wilson, 27, of Medford Lakes, N.J., the bombardier-navigator.

The woman who died was Tammy Fowler, 25, of Virginia Beach, authorities said. Her husband, David Fowler, is a sailor based in Norfolk.

The crewmen, who belonged to Attack Squadron 65, had just taken off from Oceana Naval Air Station to deliver the bomber to Puerto Rico so it could join the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy, said Cmdr. Jolene Keefer, a Navy spokeswoman.

"The aircraft impacted just to the west side of Oceana Boulevard," said Lt. Cam Martin, a Navy spokesman. "The force of the crash carried the aircraft across the road and it was at that point that it struck the car, which was traveling north at the time."

The plane carried no bombs, he said.

"There is evidence that the pilots attempted to eject. Two chutes were found in the vicinity of the crash site," he said.

The medium-attack bomber was the type used in the April 14 raid against Libya.

Gas Pipeline

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The Soviet Union will provide equipment and experts to help build a gas pipeline across Iraq, Soviet sources said.

The two parties also signed a five-year agreement on cooperation in oil, irrigation, exchange of experts, technicians and scientists, as well as deals involving health and sports and culture, said the sources.

Soviet sources said Moscow would provide experts and machinery to construct the gas pipeline. They said the first stage would be built from the southern fields at Nasiriyeh to Baghdad, more than 180 miles to the northwest.
