HARRIS NUCLEAR PLANT — The most striking features of the Shearon Harris nuclear power project are the 160-foot tall reactor containment building and the 526-foot high natural-draft cooling tower for the generating unit. Greenville, through its membership in the North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency, is part owner in the plant. The power plant's 900,000 kilowatt generator (not shown) sits atop a building behind the containment building.

Operations At Nuclear Plant Expected To Be On Schedule, CP&L Spokesman Tells Group

NEW HILL — Although opponents of the Shearon Harris nuclear power plant hope to delay the plant's scheduled start-up later this year, a Carolina Power & Light Co. official told North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency members Thursday that the plant is expected to begin producing power on schedule.

Robert Watson, a CP&L vice president and director of the Harris plant, made the comment at a meeting of NCEMPA commissioners at the plant. Greenville Utilities Commission board members Jo Ball and Buddy Zincone, as well as GUC General Manager Malcolm Green and Roger Jones, director of electric systems for GUC attended the session, which included a tour of the nuclear plant.

The Harris plant is located in southern Wake County 25 miles from Raleigh. CP&L owns approximately 83 percent of the $3.3 billion facility while the NCEMPA owns approximately 16 percent.

Greenville, as one of 32 cities and towns that make up the power agency, has a 16 percent interest in the agency's share of the Harris project, as well as 16 percent of the agency's ownership share in three of CP&L's coal-fired units — Roxboro unit 4 and Mayo units 1 and 2 — and two other CP&L nuclear plants — Brunswick units 1 and 2.

Watson, saying the Harris plant is "97 percent complete from a construction standpoint," said "the primary effort" now is being directed toward "testing the many, many systems within the plant."

Watson said a seven-week test of the plant at operating temperatures and pressures late last year and early this year went well and said 10 megawatts of electricity were produced.

The plant's containment system — one of three major safety related systems — was tested in mid-March, he said, adding that the "emergency features safeguard equipment" — the second major safety system which

Budget Review Work Continues

Members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners continued their review Thursday of the proposed 1986-1987 budget by looking at requests from the health, mental health and social service departments as well as emergency services and the elections board at a workshop meeting.

The board, which made tentative cuts in public schools and community college budget requests as they began their budget review Wednesday, made few cuts in the proposed budgets reviewed Thursday.

The Department of Social Services, which received $5.25 million this year, requested $5.60 million for the coming fiscal year. But commissioners tentatively approved the $5.58 million recommended by County Manager Reginald Gray.

Largest items in the proposed social service budget (the major portion of which goes to fund mandated programs over which commissioners have no control) include: $2.04 million for public assistance programs (Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Medicaid — $1.85 million this year and $2.02 million requested); $170,715 for the child sup-

NATO Allies Balk At U.S. SALT Plan Outlined By Shultz

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is encountering widespread opposition from NATO allies to the tentative U.S. plan to disregard SALT II limits by the end of the year, according to sources at a NATO foreign ministers meeting.

Shultz defended President Reagan's decision, announced earlier this week, in a lengthy closed-door meeting Thursday that participants said was characterized by "great frankness" — meaning there was broad disagreement.

So far as could be determined, none of the United States' 15 NATO partners endorsed Reagan's view that SALT II should be scrapped by the end of the year unless the Soviet Union takes "constructive steps" toward ending the treaty violations he claims the Soviets have systematically committed.

Several officials who attended the session said Shultz's colleagues were impressed by his presentation, but he apparently won no backing.

The U.S. secretary of state has made no public statements since he arrived in Halifax on Wednesday, but he planned to hold a news conference today.

A British official said his government stands by its announcement Tuesday that it would view the scrapping of the 1979 agreement with much regret.

West German Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher also was reported to have disagreed with the American stand. Genscher was quoted as saying he believes a second superpower summit before the end of the year is urgent in order to save SALT II.

Canadian External Affairs Secretary Joe Clark, at Thursday's opening ceremony, criticized the alleged Soviet violations but stopped short of endorsing Reagan's position.

Aside from Clark's welcoming statement, no delegate has spoken publicly about the SALT II question, consistent with the wish of NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington

Trade Deficit Fell In April

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's merchandise trade deficit narrowed sharply in April to $12.1 billion, reflecting reduced oil prices and the long-awaited impact of a declining U.S. dollar, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the trade imbalance fell by 16.6 percent from the March level of $14.5 billion.

The improvement in April was led by a 10.2 percent drop in overall imports — which totaled $30 billion in April, down from $33.4 billion in March.

This drop offset a disappointing 4.8 percent decline in exports in April.

down to $18.0 billion from March levels of $18.9 billion.

The April trade deficit was the lowest since a $10.9 billion imbalance last August.

For all of 1985, the nation ran a record $148.5 billion trade deficit.

The April figures showed the impact of both the world drop in oil prices and efforts to stabilize the U.S. dollar against foreign currencies.

The dollar has fallen about 30 percent against other major currencies since a year ago.

The weaker dollar makes imports more expensive and U.S. exports more competitive.

Analysts have been looking for a

Tampering Charge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 24-year-old man is accused of spiking cold, allergy and diet capsules with rat poison in an alleged scheme to make money on the stock market, the FBI said today.

Edward Arlen Marks of Temple City, Calif., became the first person charged with tampering in any of the spate of U.S. drug-tainting cases that have claimed at least nine lives since 1982. No one was injured as a result of the rat poison case.

Marks was scheduled to be arraigned before a U.S. magistrate in Los Angeles today on one count of tampering with consumer products, FBI spokesman Jim Neilson said.

Neilson said Marks was arrested in connection with 10 Contac, Dietac and Teldrin capsules containing rat poison that were found in Orlando, Fla., and Houston, Texas, on March 19 and 20. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said the poison, a blood-thinner called warfarin, was sufficient to sicken, but not kill, anyone who took it.

The FBI is investigating a possible connection between Marks and other drug-tampering cases, officials said.

Marks was arrested in a parking lot at Los Angeles International Airport on Thursday, Neilson said. He had just returned from Boston, the spokesman said, but he declined to say what agents believe Marks was doing in that city.

On May 24, a U.S. magistrate in Orlando, Fla., issued an arrest warrant for Marks based on a complaint filed by the FBI, Neilson said.

BANK ERRORS SHOULD BRING FEES

I am a restaurant manager and I think banks should have to be accountable to customers for mistakes concerning returned checks just like they hold their customers accountable — with sizeable service charges. In the past six months, I have had at least a dozen customers' checks returned to me, only to be told later, "Sorry, we made a mistake. There were sufficient funds after all. Put it back through." Six were from the same bank. They don't feel compelled to reimburse merchants for the trouble they're put through with their errors, but our errors cost us. Other merchants and individuals besides me should voice this complaint, if it's true for them, too. W.R.

A Miracle Called Blair Is Picture Of Childhood Health

By Tom Fortner
ECU Medical Writer

Elizabeth "Blair" Boyd will tell you — big hazel eyes sparkling — that she is "going on five" years old. She has an open way with people, a ready intelligence, and a native curiosity that suggests inner toughness. Most of all, though, she has the kind of simple little girl beauty that can bring a tightness to your throat and a tear to your eye.

In a way, that's fitting. Many tears have been shed over this child since she was born weighing one pound, 11½ ounces. It's hard to imagine that this picture of childhood health started out in life no bigger than a carnival Kewpie doll, her tiny ear a delicate membrane sheer enough to see through. Blair was born 11 weeks prematurely and spent her first four months of life sustained by a high-tech tangle of tubes, wires and medical machinery. That she turned out as well as she did is a tribute to excellent medical and nursing care, her own resiliency and the love of her family and friends, a source of warmth every bit as fortifying as the radiant heater over her hospital bassinet.

Blair has been chosen as a "miracle child," and her story will be recounted during the Children's Miracle Network Telethon airing this weekend on WITN-TV, Channel 7. The telethon will benefit the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, the regional facility where Blair received her specialized medical care.

Blair and her parents, Tommy and Barbara Boyd, live in Blount's Creek, a picturesque community set along a finger of the Palico River in Beaufort County. Barbara's pregnancy with Blair in 1981 was normal into the sixth month. Then things started to go wrong.

Barbara began demonstrating early signs of labor and she was hospitalized. Efforts to stop labor with medications over a week's time were unsuccessful, and after an exhausting two days in the labor delivery unit, she gave birth.

According to Dr. Rita Saldanha, a neonatologist at PCMH and a faculty member of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, her birth weight placed Blair in a category referred to as "very low birthweight" babies — infants weighing less than 1,000 grams.

At 780 grams, Blair was perilously close to another statistical yardstick: Babies weighing less than 750 grams have a poor success rate, either succumbing to a host of medical problems associated with prematurity or remaining at high risk for long-term neurologic disorders. Above that 750-gram threshold, however, the chances for a normal life are far better.

After her delivery, Blair was admitted under Saldanha's care to the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit, which is today operated under the auspices of the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina.

When Tommy Boyd saw his daughter in the neonatal unit for the first time, he said his initial feeling was a combination of disbelief at how small she was and awe at how, despite her size, she was so perfectly formed.

"Even as tiny as she was, there was still a life there, one we had created," said Barbara.

But Tommy also felt sadness. "Here this little one was going to have to fight all by herself," he said. "She was going to have to do it on her own. All we could do was pray."

In her struggle to survive, Blair

was subject to nearly all of the problems that every child born is a miracle. By either definition, one thing seems certain: Without Blair Boyd poking around the marshy shorelines of Blount's Creek in rolled-up overalls, learning about the world and sharing its beauty, the rest of us would be shy one miracle.

In addition, Blair went into cardiac arrest on her second day in the unit, and she was plagued by breathing difficulties for several weeks. When she began oral feeding, she was twice stricken with necrotizing enterocolitis, a condition brought on by her underdeveloped intestines. At one point, she was only minutes away from abdominal surgery. The result was that Blair lost weight during part of her hospital stay and reached a scant 560 grams (about 19 ounces).

For Blair's parents, the experience was an emotional roller coaster ride, from the high of today's good news to the valley of tomorrow's setback. Barbara spent 16 hours a day in Greenville, leaving the hospital with Tommy at midnight and calling first thing the next morning to check on Blair.

In the beginning, the experience took its toll on the Boyds. "I really felt like every time things were going good and we could get our breath, something else would come along," Tommy said. "So we started saying to ourselves, 'Okay,' we're going to take one day at a time and we're going to be thankful for this day."

Both parents lauded the support they received from the doctors, nurses and technicians of the neonatal unit, all of whom sounded a constant theme: "Each day brings more hope."

"Without them and their care and dedication, I don't think we would have been able to go through it," Barbara said. "They knew when we were feeling down. If we needed a shoulder to cry on, it was there. It was like leaving family when we left."

What is Blair like today? Her father said, "She wakes up in the morning just thrilled and tickled and ready to go."

People who have seen children recover from cancer or overcome a potentially devastating physical handicap, or like Blair, beat the odds of premature birth, use the word

"miracle" freely. Some say that every child born is a miracle.

By either definition, one thing seems certain: Without Blair Boyd poking around the marshy shorelines of Blount's Creek in rolled-up overalls, learning about the world and sharing its beauty, the rest of us would be shy one miracle.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Girl Smells Trouble In Friend's Taste

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old girl who has a friend my age who drinks her mother's liquor when her mother isn't home. I will call this friend Betty. I like Betty, and tried to tell her to stop because I know that liquor isn't good for kids, but she doesn't listen to me.

I got worried about Betty, so I told my mother, and asked her to tell Betty's mother. This was a couple of months ago, and so far Betty is still drinking her mother's liquor.

What should I do? I hate to be a snitch, but I know that Betty is drinking a few swallows a couple of times a day.

BETTY'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: You are a very wise girl to realize that Betty's mother must be told. Urge your mother to tell her. And if she doesn't, you should confide in another adult — your school counselor or principal — but do not let it go. It's not "snitching" — it's making Betty's mother aware that her daughter has a serious problem. There are kids your age who are alcoholics, and they can be helped.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please do us mothers a favor and ask your readers — especially married children — how long they feel their mothers should stay when they visit two or three times a year?

I have six married-children — all living about 1,500 miles away — and I enjoy seeing them and my grandchildren. I am not a demanding houseguest. I don't need my own room — I can sleep on a cot or sofa. I don't expect to be entertained 24 hours a day and I don't mind staying with my grandchildren while my children go out for a night on the town. I enjoy my morning newspaper and coffee, game shows on TV, reading a good book, movies, cards, TV dinners or an expensive restaurant.

Recently, I heard through the grapevine that some — not all, but some — of my children think I overstay my welcome. Abby, I spend three to five weeks among six kids in three cities in the same state — so I don't stay a week at a time with any one son or daughter. I spend three or four days, then leave and come back again. Most of my children have a guest room. I am really no trouble at all. So why did it get back to me that I am overstaying my welcome?

PERPLEXED MOTHER

DEAR PERPLEXED: First, don't buy anything from a "grapevine" — communicate directly with each of your children. Ask how long they want you to stay. Obviously someone thought you were overstaying your welcome. Find out who it is, then shorten your visits with that family until they beg you to stay or hide your suitcases.

...

DEAR ABBY: For many years our family has used a code word to alert someone that his fly was open. Someone, my mother perhaps, had heard that Professor Einstein was notoriously absentminded and had to be told that his zipper was open. Therefore, whenever a male in the family needed to be told to zip up his zipper, Mom would say "Einstein."

One day, at a family wedding, I noticed my husband's zipper was open. He was about 20 feet away so I said "Einstein" in a rather loud stage whisper. At least 10 men in his vicinity automatically looked down to check their zippers. Apparently, our "code word" had spread.

CONNIE BARNOWSKY

DEAR CONNIE: Thanks for an amusing anecdote. Many families have code words for "You're talking too much," or "You're drinking too much," or "It's time to go home." Readers, what are yours?

Blood Usage Increasing, TRBS Official Tells Group

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The good news at the Bloodmobile appreciation luncheon Thursday was that there is "plenty of blood" being donated said Dr. David Miller, medical director for Tar River Blood Services. But the not-so-good news was that more blood will be needed. "Blood usage in our (Tidewater) region is going up approximately 10 percent per year," said Miller to an audience of about 30 people in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital cafeteria. "I have no explanation for this," he said, adding that other parts of the country had very little blood usage growth.

Miller said transplant programs and the older population require more blood usage so more blood donors will be needed.

"Recruiting blood donors is a most unusual part of medicine," Miller said. There is no training in the medical school about recruiting blood donors, he said. "Sometimes, I don't think they know that blood doesn't grow on trees."

Research has shown that blood donor recruitment is most effective through person-to-person contact on the local level, Miller said, but new screening procedures beginning in October for non-A-non-B hepatitis will reduce the number of possible donors. Surrogate markers will be used to map the virus without really detecting it, he said.

"They can't isolate the virus," Miller said, explaining why it can't be labeled hepatitis C. "Non-A-non-B is a complication of transfusion and it's not clear how common it is," he said.

"There will be people who have positive results for surrogate markers, and by law we will not be able to use that blood," Miller said. For example, men who drink beer often cannot be used. "We may lose on the order of three-six percent of our donors," he said.

A permanent blood donor site is being discussed to help with the problem, Miller said. "We hope that it will be part of the answer."

Awards also were given during the luncheon. Ruth Taylor of the Safety Services Program of the Red Cross, received the Arthur S. "Ott" Alford appreciation award and a Blood Service appreciation award. "A bloodmobile just doesn't happen, it takes much planning," Taylor said. "I'm going to be one of the volunteers in a little while so if I can't work I can say 'no' for a change." Taylor, who has worked with blood services for 16 years, will retire in June.

Lisa Daniel of Wachovia bank won the Outstanding Blood Services Committee Member award from the Blood Services Committee of the Red Cross for working with telephone recruitment, and Ayden-Grifton High School won an award for having the most eligible donors to give blood.

Highway Program

Secretary of Transportation James E. Harrington discussed Gov. Jim Martin's proposed highway program with legislators at Lenoir Community College Thursday.

The Lenoir County Board of Commissioners and the Lenoir County Chamber of Commerce hosted a reception for Harrington and members of the general assembly. A social hour followed at Lenoir Community College for civic leaders and government leaders from mid-eastern North Carolina; the event was sponsored by the Lenoir County Chamber of Commerce and the Lenoir County-City of Kinston Airport Commission.

Harrington discussed the "Roads to the Future" program proposed by Gov. Martin. The program includes a two and three-quarter cent gasoline tax increase, the transfer of the highway patrol and driver's education programs to the state's general fund, and the establishment of a transportation trust fund to be used to "balance the inequities of the federal highway construction" funding, according to Randy Doub, a local member of the DOT board who attended the event.

Those in attendance included Assistant Secretary of DOT Wesley Webster; Will Plentl, DOT director of aviation; Jerry Hardesty, deputy assistant secretary of DOT; George Harper, former member of the DOT board, Sen. Joe Thomas; Rep. Daniel Lilley, and Rep. Gerald Anderson.

Warm Words

Chester Bowles was best known to most Americans who endured the years of World War II as heading the federal Office of Price Administration.

It was his introduction to Washington and the assignment was one of trying to control inflation that is a constant threat with displacement of millions of people and corresponding economic pressures which went with allocating vital production into new channels that a national war effort required.

It was a no-win job, but the natural chaos was at least kept within survivable limits. At war's end he served briefly as head of the federal Office of Economic Stability (formed in 1946) to assist in returning the U.S. economy to peaceful enterprises.

Bowles's efforts and personal qualities made him a man admired and trusted by Presidents Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy.

He subsequently served as governor of Connecticut and was appointed by Truman as U.S. ambassador to India and Nepal where he served until Dwight D. Eisenhower took office.

On returning to his home state he was elected to Congress where he served one term before being tapped to be chief foreign affairs adviser to candidate John F. Kennedy.

Following his retirement Bowles turned his energies to writing and by the time he finished he had written, or assisted in the writing, of eight books.

As a lecturer he used his persuasive skills to argue for progressive causes and was an early spokesman for civil rights and later as a critic of the Vietnam War.

He died Sunday.

Dean Rusk was among his admirers and recalls when Bowles was an undersecretary of state in the Kennedy administration.

"He led, really, a very noble life, not only as governor but as congressman, undersecretary of state and ambassador to India. He contributed a lot to his country. One cannot really grieve about a life so nobly led, but he will certainly be remembered with great affection."

Those are warm words from a dispassionate man. No one could say more.

Tainted

Two huge Navy hospital ships are being readied for delivery. Other hospital ships have served in the past but never anything like these. Each involves 1,000 hospital beds and 12 complete operating rooms capable of functioning simultaneously. Few hospitals in the world can surpass them in size alone.

The Navy and the Pentagon are wondering how two such magnificent instruments of the healing art could be used in peacetime. True, budgetary issues are a factor; but the concept of floating hospitals dispensing general health care to poorer nations around the world is being dreamed.

An image of a giant white ship with great red crosses on its sides entering a foreign port is vastly more attractive than that of a great gray carrier or battlewagon silently poised at an offshore station.

The problem: those floating hospitals are too specialized as trauma surgery centers that would be invaluable in the event of conflict far from necessary medical facilities. They're simply unsuited to dispensing general health care; still, options are being sought.

It's pretty grim to reflect that even the fear of war taints good things that might have been.

Pondering An Air Strike

WASHINGTON — While publicly ruling out conflict with Syria, Israeli hard-liners are discreetly suggesting that a pre-emptive air strike on new Soviet-supplied Syrian air defenses would yield a rich intelligence harvest for the Reagan administration.

Although that pretext for a possible Israeli action against Syrian positions in Lebanon's Bekaa region has few U.S. backers (and none in the Pentagon), it is taken seriously indeed in Damascus. Syrian Vice President Abdel Halim Khaddam's current Moscow visit is partly to learn whether Soviet failure to assist Libya in the U.S. anti-terrorist attack might also apply to Syria.

The discreet Israeli message to the United States, coupled with Khaddam's Moscow visit, explains administration anxiety about a new Mideast war breaking out not today but in the months ahead. Reagan advisers worry almost as much about war by spontaneous combustion as by careful calculation.

Not all Israeli officials are thinking in terms of inducing Washington support by the promise of juicy intelligence rewards about the new Soviet air-defense system, which is believed to be the best the Soviets can produce. Laborite Shimon Peres, prime minister until October, when he yields to hard-line Likudnik Yitzhak Shamir, wants not war but a peaceful settlement on the West Bank. That is his only conceivable way to block Shamir from becoming prime minister on schedule and retain power for himself.

As it is now, Israeli hard-liners will come into their own when "rotation" of prime ministers replaces Peres with Shamir. They view Syria as vulnerable and alone in the Arab world today, ripe for military attack. Egypt was neutralized by Camp David. Iraq is in war to the death with Iran. Jordan, desperately courted by Syrian President Hafez Assad, will do almost anything to avoid being sucked into another war against Israel.

So the coast would seem to be clear for an Israeli attack on new high-grade Soviet anti-aircraft weapons and updated command-and-control systems being installed around Damascus and along Syria's Lebanon border. The rationale would be clear: With the Mideast at least temporarily beyond the scope of any peace initiative by Secretary of State George Shultz, and with Syria strongly suspected by Shultz of exporting state terrorism, the Reagan administration would cast a benign eye.

In addition, Israeli hard-liners are touting the value of a major intelligence haul for the U.S. from Israel's testing the effectiveness of the new Soviet-supplied missiles. These are known to include an interlocking system of SAM-5s and SAM-2s (for high-flying attacking aircraft) with SAM-6s and SAM-8s (for low-flying attackers). Never has Israel faced such choice — or difficult — targets.

Along with the SAM-14, the Soviet version of the U.S. Stinger, these systems have been installed bit by bit since Israel wiped out Syria's anti-aircraft missile bases in its 1982 invasion of Lebanon. That was followed by the shooting down almost 90 Syrian MiGs.

Israeli hard-liners claim their case is made stronger by Syria's "fortification creep" southward in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley. The Syrian fortifications are still unmaned. But Israel claims that if and when troops and armor are moved in, Assad will be able to launch a pre-emptive strike of his own against Israel. Assad has also taken control of the skies over Northern Lebanon, a region Israel likes to think of as its own backyard.

But administration officials are not impressed by the degree of new threat to Israel posed by all this Syrian upgrading. Even though the link between Assad and the aborted London airport attempt to blow up an El Al airliner last month seems to run directly through the chief of Syrian intelligence, the Reagan administration does not want its hand forced by Israel in any reprisal against state terrorism involving Syria.

If Syria becomes a candidate for Libyan-style reprisal — highly doubtful as of today — most Reagan advisers want the U.S., not Israel, to call the tune and control the timing. The exception is a handful of State Department officials who would like to see Israel put the crunch on Syria. They are not close to persuading the Pentagon or the president.

But that cannot close the door either to calculated pre-emptive attack or combat by spontaneous combustion if Khaddam should return from Moscow with strong Soviet reassurances or if the Israeli hard-liners decide the time is right. The administration has allowed a policy vacuum to develop in the Middle East and cannot control when or by whom the dagger will be drawn.

decision on which state will house the disposal facility in mid-July. North Carolina is the leading candidate. So two environmental groups are urging the General Assembly to drop out of the compact this June, before it is too late.

Bill Holman, lobbyist for the N.C. Conservation Council and the N.C. Sierra Club, said a letter has been sent from the two groups to all 170 legislators. "We argued against the compact back in 1983 because we thought it was a mistake then. It's better to admit your mistakes sooner than later," he said in an interview.

"It bothers me that North Carolina will be receiving tons of waste from other states and then be responsible for it for the next 300 to 600 years," he said. "They're burying it now down in Barnwell, S.C., and that's what's likely to happen here."

The environmental groups say North Carolina's two biggest utilities, Duke Power and CP&L, are responsible for 97 percent (radioactivity) of the state's low-level waste. "The utilities are producing most of that waste and they're shifting the burden of managing it from themselves to the taxpayers," Holman said.

He argues that the compact should be disbanded, that the utilities should handle their own waste and that the state should build a small facility to handle the other 3 percent of waste that is produced by hospitals and research labs.

The utilities don't like that idea, at all. They've written to all 170 legislators, also.

Roy Wall, lobbyist for Duke, said that even if North Carolina is chosen to host the first disposal facility, the state will benefit from being in the compact. "Even if we pull out of the compact, North Carolina will have to have a disposal facility. With the compact, at least we won't have one indefinitely," he said. (The compact calls for the member states to rotate responsibility for housing the facility.)

Wall also questioned the consequences of pulling out of the compact and establishing a state facility. "I doubt that North Carolina could keep waste from other states out," he said. Interstate commerce laws might kick back into effect for North Carolina if the state opted out of the compact.

Holman says North Carolina could keep the waste of other states out by limiting the size of the facility and writing contracts only with in-state generators of the waste.

Holman concedes that the utilities have one good argument. North Carolina, by opting out of the compact, would appear to be going back on its word. Wall says that would be "mightily embarrassing" to the state.

The issue could die quietly if the environmentalists are unable to find a legislator willing to lead the fight for compact repeal, but that seems most unlikely at a time when public fears about anything radioactive are so high.

Get In On The Feelgood Wagon

NEW YORK — These are the feelgood days. In Washington we have President Feelgood. In New York's Feelgood Street (formerly Wall) feelgood guys and feelgood girls greet each other every morning with "Have a nice $25 million day."

Many persons see the feelgood life all around them and wonder why they feel so bad. Has nature short-changed them? Are they mentally, morally, spiritually or physically incapable of becoming one of the feelgood people?

These questions are brought to me daily by pitiful wretches who say: "I know you're not a doctor, and I know you don't even play one on TV, but as a newspaper columnist you've got all the answers. How do I get in on the feelgood go-around?"

My answer: Easy if you abandon old feelbad habits and do as the feelgood people do.

Note, for example, how often you see a feelgood person's two-bedroom limousine double-parked in a crowded street. Guess why its windows are tinted black, the color of mourning, a feelbad state of mind.

It's so nobody outside can see the feelgood sensation being experienced inside by the limo's occupant watching other motorists succumb to feelmurderous moods toward each other as they compete to squeeze past his limo.

Do you have the courage to create traffic jams for your own convenience?

The poise to feel good about seeing people you inconvenience surrender to their inferior feelrotten natures?

Do you live in a condo? Feelgood people always live in condos. This is because the feelgood life is built on words ending in "o."

A feelgood person goes by limo to his condo. He does not take the bus to a two-story rowhouse in Southwest Baltimore or hitch a ride to a failing farm on the Iowa border. If you do, cut it out. Get a condo. Get a limo. You will instantly know what feelgood is.

I hear you asking, "Would having children blow the feelgood life?"

It depends on the age of the children you plan to have. Young children are a nuisance around the condo, and a lot of condos, if you have a child, will put you out on grounds you've committed a nuisance and may be liable to other forms of feelbad activity.

No feelgood person would consider having a child younger than 16. At that age it would be capable of dazzling all competitors by getting admitted to all of the five most glamorously publicized colleges in America.

By leaving home almost immediately after arriving, the kid would (1) not have time to create feelbad vibrations around the condo, and (2) would intensify parental feelgood sensations by enabling mom and dad to brag about having a child who could not only be 16 years old at birth but could also get into the fanciest diploma mills in the country before he was out of diapers.

Another reason feelgood people prefer having older children: Feelgood people themselves must never become older than 32. This is why you see so many people in their 40's, 50's and 60's pounding the concrete in track suits while registering deep agony.

Those people are working at staying 32 years old. Afterward, if they live, they will meet with other feelgood people who have remained 32 for 35 years and declare their feelings:

"I feel good about myself."

"Oh yeah? I'll bet you don't feel half as good about yourself as I feel about myself."

Encounters like this are one reason feelgood people don't want small children around the condo. They think it would be embarrassing to have children, with their natural eye for detecting fools, eavesdropping on adult disputes about which feelgood person feels best.

Strength For Today

We read the sign "Slippery When Wet" and regard it as a mere highway warning. It is a warning that we disregard to our peril.

But it also operates in areas other than the paved highways across our continent. It is a warning to those who drink and drive, who take a last one for the road as they start home at night.

The loss of life in motor accidents every day is appalling, running to more than a hundred and fifty every twenty-four hours. Recklessness and excessive speed usually appear to be the immediate cause, but it has been found that in more than half of all highway fatalities, liquor is in some way involved.

Under these circumstances "Slippery When Wet" takes on a double meaning. It is a warning to anyone who tries to mix alcohol with gasoline.

Lucky Gets Chance To Repay Debt

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — When he really needed it, Roy Melton got lucky.

Three years ago, Melton saved the life of a neighbor's dog, which got its chain caught in a fence and was slowly choking. Earlier this month, the mixed chow and German shepherd named Lucky repaid the debt.

"We paid one another back," Melton said. "I think somehow or other, that's the way it was set up to be."

But the relationship between Melton and Lucky didn't start out well.

"My wife and I had just moved here ..." Melton said. "The dog would bark at me then when I'd be around here. Now, if I'm out in the garden, she'll lay at the end of the row I'm working on. She'll stay right with me."

Yet it was Lucky's barking that helped save Melton.

"I'd been feeling faint and had called the doctor, but he wasn't on duty so I'd just decided to wait and go in on Monday," Melton said. "I'd gone down to the store and had started over to play a game of pool with the neighbors when I collapsed."

Joyce Harris, Lucky's owner, said she and her family heard Lucky barking.

"She just went crazy," Mrs. Harris said. "She started barking and running back and forth and we couldn't see anybody. Finally, my father and my husband went outside and there they found him (Melton) lying on the ground..."

"She (Lucky) knew he was on the ground and barking was her way of telling us something was wrong," Mrs. Harris said. "She didn't stop barking until we found him."

"The doctor at the emergency room told us it was a good thing that we acted so quickly," she said. "If it hadn't been for Lucky, chances are it would have been lots later before they went out and found him."

When Melton arrived at the hospital, he was given a temporary pacemaker, he said. The next morning, a permanent pacemaker was placed in his heart. Two days after the operation, Melton went home.

The friendship between man and dog began after Lucky was antagonized by a bull in neighbor's pasture. Lucky had tried to jump the fence and had gotten her chain caught in the wire.

There she hung, her paws unable to touch the ground, her collar slowly choking her. As she hung, the bull tormented her, butting her as she flailed to free herself.

Hearing the commotion, Melton ran outside, chased away the bull, hefted Lucky, unhooked the chain and cared for the dog until her owners returned.

"I'm sure that if I hadn't been here she would have choked to death," Melton said.

"It seems a coincidence that things like this happen — I saved her life and she saved mine," Melton said. "Very often you hear of one or the other. But both like that, it's very unusual."

Day Camp Insurance In Limbo

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Officials of a free summer camp for handicapped youngsters say it they should know by next week whether the facility will be able to get liability insurance and how much the insurance will cost.

Wynsum Day Camp, operated through the Burke County United Way and private individuals at an elementary school, provides 10 weeks of day camp each summer for children with physical, emotional and mental handicaps.

Until last week, camp officials thought they were covered. But they discovered their insurance policies cover only accidents and medical emergencies.

At a board meeting Wednesday attended by about 75 parents, board member Jim Hosch said the camp will be forced to take what they can get, especially since the camp is scheduled to open June 16.

Pilot Housing Program For Elderly Announced

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says he hopes a new housing program for low-income elderly in rural areas will be expanded to other parts of the state as funds become available, but he says the new effort is for areas other plans don't reach.

The joint effort of the North Carolina Housing Finance Agency and the federal Farmers Home Administration is designed to fill a gap in existing government housing programs, Martin said. Up to 80 apartments will be built for low-income elderly people under the pilot program Martin announced Thursday.

The HFA has three other programs to help the poor obtain and improve dwellings, he said. "But the significant thing we wanted to address is that (those programs) are not working for the low-income elderly in rural counties."

Martin added, "As the state continues to grow we need to be alert to the needs of and assist those who are low-income citizens so that they can have ... affordable housing. I believe this pilot project is the right step in the right direction at the right time."

Under the new program, the HFA will offer 1 percent permanent financing to the builders of four 20-unit apartment projects, each in a different section of the state.

Because of the low financing rate, the apartments will be available for cut-rate rent. In 48 of the 80 apartments, renters will receive further help from a $100 per month subsidy.

For people who receive the subsidy, monthly rent will be around $110 for single-bedroom apartments and $140 for two-bedroom apartments, according to HFA spokeswoman Marilyn Burns. Rent will be around $210 and $240 respectively for people who don't get the subsidy.

The special subsidy will go to people with annual gross incomes of $6,500 to $12,200. People with incomes up to $15,000 will be eligible to live in the apartments for the regular rent.

Gary Paul Kane, executive director of the HFA, said the program would be funded with the interest from a $500,000 investment by his agency.

The four areas of the state in which the new housing units will be built include the following counties:

- Area 1: Bertie, Chowan, Halifax, Hyde, Martin, Northampton, Perquimans, Tyrrell and Warren.
- Area 2: Bladen, Columbus, Duplin, Greene, Jones, Pamlico, Robeson and Sampson.
- Area 3: Cherokee, Clay, Graham, Jackson, Macon, and Swain.
- Area 4: Alleghany, Ashe, Avery, Madison, Mitchell and Yancey.

The North Carolina HFA was created by the General Assembly in 1973. It helps provide affordable housing to low- and moderate-income people by selling tax-exempt bonds to investors. Funds earned from agency operations pay all salaries and administrative expenses.

Martin's new program will be the HFA's fourth major initiative.

The others are the Single Family Program, which offers low-interest home loans twice a year to urban families earning $34,200 or less and rural families with annual incomes of $32,000 or below; the Multifamily Program, which provides below-market financing to qualified apartment developers who offer the rooms for low rent; and Rehabilitation Loan Programs, which provide loans to homeowners and landlords to improve the dwellings.

Martin said that pressure was mounting on state governments to compensate for spending cuts in federal housing programs. "There's no question but that there are a lot of unmet needs" in North Carolina, he said.

But he said he was not ready to endorse the establishment of a housing trust fund, the subject of a special legislative study, or other new state programs without additional information.

According to Kane, the HFA will sponsor four seminars to inform builders about the project and how they can submit bids for the contracts to construct the housing units.

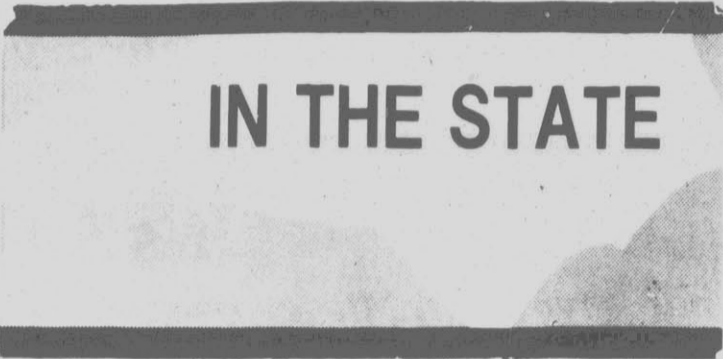

The seminars will be held June 9 in Bryson City, June 10 in Spruce Pine, June 11 in Clinton and June 13 in Williamston.

Patrol Spokesman Says Enforcement Of Law Working

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Federal figures indicate that only 34.2 percent of North Carolina drivers ignore the 55 mph speed limit, which shows that enforcement of the law is working here, state officials say.

"We're constantly trying to stay updated on enforcement tactics and keep good equipment on the roads," Sgt. B.W. Oakes of the N.C. Highway Patrol said in explaining the state's low rate of non-compliance. "Our primary concern is trying to save lives."

The state figure means that North Carolina is protected from a federal funding cutoff of highway funds. Federal law allows the highway funding cuts if more than 50 percent of drivers ignore the speed limit.

The U.S. Transportation Department said Thursday it would cut highway aid to Arizona and Vermont for failing to put the brakes on their speeding motorists, the first time the government would penalize states for not sufficiently enforcing the 55 mph speed limit.

Under the law, the two states could lose up to 10 percent of their non-interstate highway assistance — about $1.9 million for Vermont and $5.1 million for Arizona.

The state Department of Transportation handles the survey that determines how many drivers are abiding by the 55 mph limit. Charles Adkins, the DOT's manager of planning and research, said the 34.2 percent level has stayed about constant since the state began the studies six years ago.

"North Carolina has always enforced the speed limit and the highway patrol right on up to the governor hasn't shown any indication that they are going to ignore the 55 mph on any road ... The attitude of top officials is partially responsible," Adkins said.

For instance, some states have a $5 fine for exceeding 55 mph. The fine isn't for speeding but is called an energy conservation fine, he said.

"If you maintain a certain level, you lose a lot of federal funds," Oakes said Thursday. "If you don't enforce it (the speed limit), you lose a lot of lives. The lives are what we're interested in mainly."

Patricia Waller, associate director for driver studies of the University of North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center, said the center has no studies on driver compliance with the 55 mph limit.

"But my own impression on driving the highways here and in other states is that you see a lot more patrol cars here than in other surrounding states," she said. "The enforcement people (in North Carolina) are convinced of the value of 55, and I think they do make an effort."

Ms. Waller said that on a recent trip to Atlanta she saw seven highway patrol cars before she left North Carolina. In South Carolina she saw one and in Georgia, none.

Lawsuit Seeks To Have Craggy Prison Razed

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Conditions at Craggy Prison near Asheville fall beneath standards of human decency, according to a lawsuit which says the 62-year-old facility should be torn down.

Gov. Jim Martin wants Craggy torn down. So do legislative leaders, including House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, who recently compared Craggy to an "18th century dungeon."

And lawyers who filed a lawsuit in federal court in Charlotte Thursday agree.

There are rats in the kitchen, leaks in the roof and sexual assaults among inmates in crowded dormitory rooms, the suit says. Prisoners lack adequate exercise facilities, work opportunities, education, security and health care.

Lou Lesesne, a Charlotte lawyer, said he and several other lawyers filed the suit because secretaries of correction have been saying for years that Craggy needs to be closed down.

"We just want to make sure that it happens, and that it happens quickly," Lesesne said.

The suit was filed on behalf of Christopher Epps and Gregory D. Galphin II, two inmates from Asheville. But it asks the court to include as a class all inmates housed at the prison.

Epps, 31, is serving a 14-year sentence for armed robbery. Galphin, 35, is serving a six-year sentence for taking indecent liberties with a child.

Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson said Thursday that Craggy should be torn down and rebuilt because it is inadequate for human habitation.

"We have made a recommendation to that effect to the General Assembly in our 10-year plan. One of the purposes of the plan is to try to avoid a suit such as that," Johnson said.

Martin proposed closing Craggy in a 10-year, $86 million prison improvement package submitted to the legislature. A legislative study committee agreed this month that Craggy should be razed, but cut Martin's package in half.

The state's emphasis on prison projects follows a court settlement last year in another prison suit filed against the state by Lesesne and others. To resolve the dispute, the state agreed to spend $12.5 million to fix up 14 prisons in the southern Piedmont, including two in Mecklenburg County.

Officials predicted then that similar suits would be filed unless North Carolina spent millions more to improve prisons statewide.

At Craggy, old gray metal bunk beds are stacked three high and a few feet apart. There is no separate day room for prisoners, and they are allowed outside only at limited times, the suit said. There's little for the prisoners to do, and not enough guards to protect restless inmates from each other.

"These conditions ensure that inmates can prey on other inmates,

HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS AND THE BIG SQUEEZE

Many HMO's put the squeeze on doctors to treat HMO patients for less pay. In turn, HMO physicians sometimes put the squeeze on HMO patients by providing less service than they would on a fee for service basis.

Much of the decrease in physicians' compensation produced by HMO medicine is not passed along to HMO patients or their employers. Instead, it winds up as profits for HMO's or in the hands of HMO employees, especially high level employees.

You may get medical care a little cheaper from an HMO, but do not expect it to be as good as fee for service care.

Tenn. Waste Site Concerns Official

By The Associated Press
While concerns have subsided about North Carolina's inclusion on the Department of Energy list for the location of a high-level nuclear waste dump, a state official warns that there may still be nuclear waste on the state's horizon.

State Department of Natural Resources Secretary Thomas Rhodes said Thursday that a proposed nuclear waste depot in Tennessee could mean more radioactive waste being hauled on North Carolina highways.

"The waste is still there, and our primary concern is the health and safety of the citizens as the material is transported through the state," Rhodes said. "This doesn't mean that the transportation question is out of the picture."

The federal Department of Energy announced Wednesday it would suspend the search for a high-level nuclear waste repository site in the eastern United States. Two areas in North Carolina — one west of Asheville and one east of Raleigh — were included on the department's list of 12 potential sites.

Rhodes said a key point in the department's action is that it wants Congress to authorize a temporary storage and packaging facility in the East that would prepare high-level radioactive waste for shipment to a dump site in the West.

He said the depot, called a monitored retrievable storage facility, has been mentioned for Tennessee.

"I think this probably makes the monitored retrievable storage facility even more of an issue than before," Rhodes said. "Without an eastern site ... there would have to be a permanent packaging facility. ... We want to continue to monitor that very carefully."

Rhodes said putting the facility in Tennessee could result in more spent nuclear fuel being hauled through North Carolina from other states.

"The Conservation Council and the Sierra Club, and I am sure some of the western North Carolina conservation groups, remain opposed to the monitored retrievable storage facility in eastern Tennessee," said environmental lobbyist Bill Holman. "We think that nuclear waste ought to be processed at the repository site and not handled twice. The leading concern is that it doesn't make sense to handle high-level nuclear waste twice.

"The main justification for the (monitored retrievable system) seems to be to allow the utilities to ship their high-level nuclear waste off-site and make it a responsibility of the federal government," he said.

While some reacted with caution, others were overjoyed that the search for a dump was ending.

"I was pleasantly surprised," Gov. Jim Martin said in his weekly news conference.

Runoff Talks May Miss Agenda, Says Ramsey

RALEIGH (AP) — The issue of whether to change North Carolina's runoff primaries may not be presented during the upcoming short legislative session, House Speaker Liston Ramsey said after a closed-door meeting of the state's top Democrats.

Ramsey said Thursday that at first it didn't appear there was a bill pending that the runoff primary issue could be attached to. Without such a vehicle, it would be a two-thirds vote to allow the bill to be introduced in the General Assembly session, which begins June 5.

In the 1987 session, such a bill would need only a simple majority of both houses to be considered, he said.

"If it's in a two-thirds position, what will they do if they lose?" Ramsey told the Greensboro News & Record. "They have nothing to gain. ... They're not very likely to get the two-thirds."

There really isn't a rush since there won't be another primary until 1988 — providing plenty of time to make changes in the 1987 session, Ramsey said.

The runoff primary has been a point of discontent among blacks. Lowering the threshold — to 40 percent as state Democratic Party Chairman Jim Van Hecke has suggested — is considered by some as a way to avoid a divisive debate among Democrats.

State law requires a candidate to get 50 percent of the vote in a primary to avoid a runoff. Many blacks contend this hurts black candidates, some of whom have finished first in primaries but with less than 50 percent and went on to lose in runoffs.

Van Hecke attended the closed-door meeting Thursday, along with Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, Insurance Commissioner Jim Long and state Auditor Ed Renfrow.

State Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, has said that if the runoff system wasn't changed in the upcoming session, blacks would probably file a lawsuit claiming it violates the federal Voting Rights Act.

"I'm sorry to see them do that, if that is in fact what happened," Michaux said late Thursday. Michaux was not among those at the meeting.

"We hoped they would make some sort of effort to show some sort of faith," Michaux said. "It just opens up the door for some kind of suit."

In 1982, Michaux, who is black, led the field in the 2nd Congressional District primary with 44 percent of the vote. Tim Valentine, who finished second, defeated Michaux in a runoff and went on to be elected to his first term. Valentine was re-elected in 1984.

It is the Michaux contest that critics of the runoff primary use to show that black candidates are often able to capture the most votes in a primary but not a majority.

Others at the meeting, including Van Hecke, were reluctant or refused to discuss the meeting.

Van Hecke said the upcoming legislative session was discussed, as well as its relationship to the Democratic Party and the fall elections. He said no issues were discussed in detail.

Governor, Sanford Differ On Nuke Plant

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin reaffirmed his support for the Shearon Harris nuclear power plant, but U.S. Senate candidate Terry Sanford praised Chatham County commissioners for withdrawing from a disaster evacuation plan for the plant.

"I feel very comfortable intellectually and politically about supporting the activation of the Shearon Harris power plant," Martin said at his weekly news conference Thursday. "I believe it should be turned on as soon as that reasonably can be done."

"... I think it would be a serious mistake if state government opposed the licensing of the Shearon Harris nuclear power plant," Martin said. "That would work against people who are going to be looking for jobs. It will work against people who want to have the lights come on when you flip the switch."

In a move that opponents hope will delay the plant's start-up, the Chatham County commissioners voted unanimously Tuesday to withdraw from a state-local plan to respond to an emergency at the plant.

State officials have said they will see that Chatham has an evacuation plan in place even if county officials decline to participate in the effort. Federal officials require an evacuation plan for residents living near a nuclear plant before they will license a plant.

Sanford praised the commissioners, saying the $3.6 billion plant was plagued by cost overruns and that the N.C. Utilities Commission should make sure Carolina Power & Light Co.'s mistakes were not financed by ratepayers.

"Their mistakes ought not to be borne by ratepayers, they ought to be borne by the corporation," Sanford said.

But Sanford stopped short of joining opponents of the plant, who say it should not be permitted to begin operation.

"I don't want to say yes or no," Sanford said when asked if the plant should be licensed. "I would feel more comfortable about this if we had some state involvement in these crucial questions."

He said the state had been excluded from such matters as "location, operation and safety of nuclear plants," and he would favor legislation to increase state involvement.

Sanford's comments came Thursday night in Pittsboro in Chatham County and also in an interview.

Sanford's opponent, Republican U.S. Rep. Jim Broyhill said he had not had an opportunity to study the specifics of the plant.

But he said, "It is my understanding they have met every criteria of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. It has never been brought to my attention that the NRC denied them a license. To qualify for a license they have to meet every one of the safety and health criteria."

Martin, who also is a Republican, said he thought nuclear power was relatively safe, although it involves some risks. "It is not absolutely safe," he said. "I don't know anything that is."

CP&L hopes to obtain a license from the NRC this summer to load fuel and begin low-power testing at the 900-megawatt reactor, located 15 miles southwest of the Raleigh city limits.

Before the Chatham vote, Martin had called Earl D. Thompson, chairman of the Chatham County commissioners, to urge that the commissioners not withdraw from the emergency evacuation plan.

Martin said he thought nuclear energy was an important part of the nation's mixture of energy sources, which includes coal-fired generating plants, gas and oil, and solar energy.

"I think (nuclear power) is going to be an unavoidable and irreplaceable part of the mix of energy resources of our country and all the other countries in the world," Martin said.

Martin cited predictions that North Carolina would be the fifth fastest growing state in the nation during the next decade, and said the state would need a growing source of energy.

Additional Charge

The subscriber line charge for Carolina Telephone single-line business and residential telephone customers will increase from $1 to $2 per month beginning Sunday, according to CT&T.

Money generated from the additional charge will help pay for local network facilities which have been subsidized by long-distance rates, said G.T. Pate, a spokesman for Carolina Telephone.

Decreased long-distance revenues should offset subscriber line revenues, he said. AT&T Communications Co. is proposing to reduce interstate long-distance rates by approximately 11 percent when the increased subscriber charge goes into effect, Pate said.

Troop Gave Books

Members of Junior Girl Scout Troop 341 made contributions to the East Branch Library while working on their book badges.

The troop constructed a bulletin board describing several Newbery Award-winning books and presented the library copies of the "Junior Girl Scout Badges and Signs" book and "Worlds to Explore" handbook, with leaders' editions of both.

Diane Taylor led the troop on a tour of Sheppard Memorial Library.

Former U.S. Attorney To Probe Deaver

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal court chose a former U.S. attorney to investigate lobbyist Michael K. Deaver, and told him to pursue all possible leads in determining whether the ex-presidential aide should be prosecuted.

Whitney North Seymour Jr., once the top federal prosecutor for New York City, was named by the court Thursday and quickly pledged to "let the chips fall where they may" in the conflict-of-interest probe.

The three-judge panel not only listed specific subjects for investigation, but said Seymour should look for "any related matters and other allegations or evidence" developed during the inquiry.

The panel, established under the 1978 Ethics In Government Act, said the probe should cover:

—Deaver's lobbying for the Canadian government in its successful effort for a joint agreement with the United States to combat acid rain.

—His lobbying to retain a tax break for businesses locating in Puerto Rico, also successful so far. The court said Deaver represented the Commonwealth government, but his office said his client was a corporation.

Federal law restricts, and in some cases bans, former federal officials from lobbying the government on issues with which they were "personally and substantially" involved. Separate provisions of the law restrict a former government official's contact with his or her former agency, and with issues once under the official's domain. Those restrictions last one or two years, depending on the circumstances.

Each violation can lead to a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Seymour's broad mandate is a sharp contrast to that given by the court last April in its most recently ordered independent counsel investigation.

Then, the court ordered the probe of a single Justice Department official in an investigation of the withholding of environmental documents from Congress. A House Judiciary Committee report had asked that a dozen current and former Reagan administration officials be investigated for possible wrongdoing.

In both investigations, the court followed the advice of the Justice Department in setting the scope of the probe.

Deaver, a close friend of President and Nancy Reagan for more than two decades, quit as deputy White House chief of staff May 10, 1985, and established a lobbying firm to represent domestic and foreign clients.

In the face of news stories about his lobbying and a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee investigation of his activities, Deaver joined his critics in asking for the independent counsel.

After the court announcement Thursday, Deaver spokeswoman Pamela Bailey said, "We will be providing to the independent counsel all information that he requests."

"Now that a counsel has been appointed, we do not think it appropriate to publicly comment on the subject matter of the investigation. We have every confidence that Mr. Seymour will conduct a thorough and impartial investigation and Mr. Deaver will be fully exonerated of any wrongdoing."

Seymour said, "The investigation will be thorough, with full constitutional safeguards, and the results will be made public upon completion."

A Republican, Seymour was U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York from 1970-73, a state senator from 1966 to 1968 and also served as chief counsel of the special unit of the New York State Commission of Investigation from 1960 to 1961.

In 1971, Seymour went to federal court to argue the Nixon administration's unsuccessful suit to prevent The New York Times from publishing the Vietnam archive known as the Pentagon Papers.

The special court directed Seymour to investigate whether Deaver "with the intent to influence, communicated with (then-national security adviser) Robert C. McFarlane" last summer in connection with proposed changes to the tax code that gives tax credit to American businesses investing in Puerto Rico.

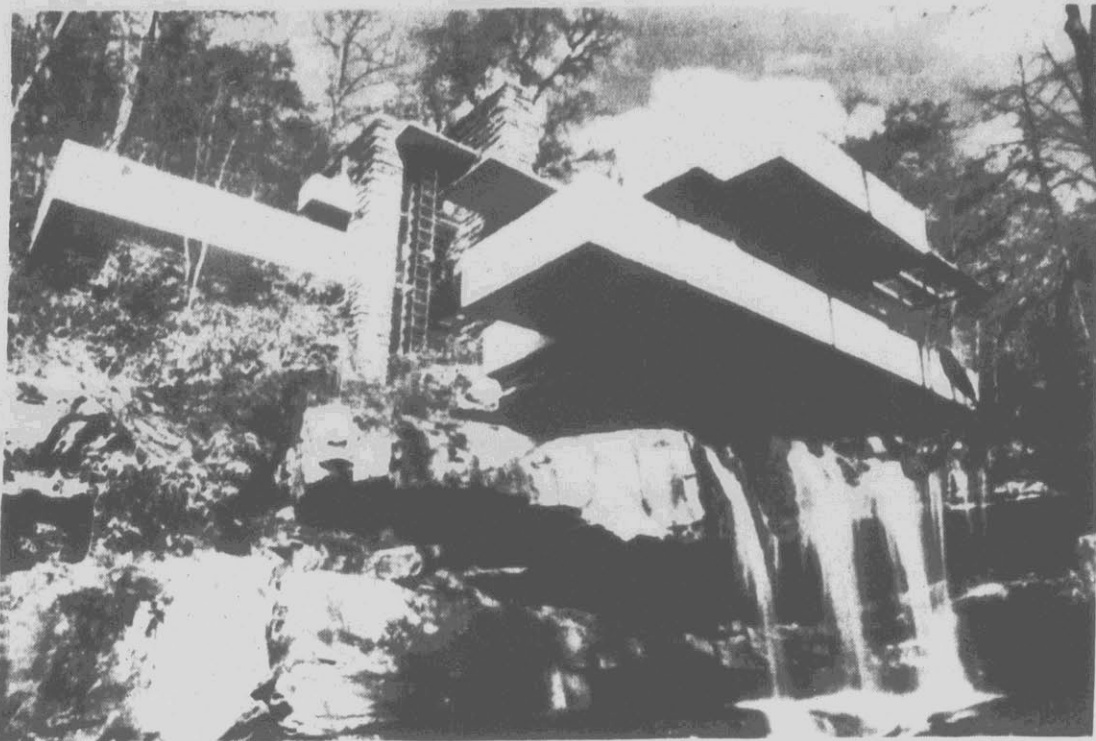

The counsel also was asked to pursue whether Deaver "acted as a representative for the government of Canada in an appearance Oct. 25, 1985, before Drew Lewis, special envoy for the United States" on the acid rain question. And he was directed to determine whether Deaver "aided and assisted Canadian officials" by attending the meeting.

According to an account of the meeting in a General Accounting Office report, Deaver accompanied Canada's ambassador to the United States, and its special envoy on acid rain, to the River Club in New York City — where they met Lewis.

The GAO said Deaver's "very presence" at the session "appears to constitute assistance in representation ... before an officer of a department or agency of the United States and may violate" federal law.

The Reagan administration agreed with Canada on a $5 billion joint effort to combat acid rain, even though the idea initially was resisted by the president.

NASA Orders New Tracking And Data Relay Satellite

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA has ordered a replacement for the $250 million government communications satellite that was in the space shuttle Challenger cargo bay when the ship exploded last January.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite and parts for a backup spacecraft being bought from TRW in Redondo Beach, Calif., are scheduled for delivery in five years. The value of the contract is yet to be negotiated with TRW.

The TDRS is the largest and most advanced communications satellite in the world, weighing 5,000 pounds and measuring 57 feet across its solar panels.

The satellite functions as a switchboard in orbit, able to track the space shuttle and relay television and telemetry signals. Its electronic relay system can handle as many as 300 million bits of information each second from up to 25 orbiting spacecraft simultaneously.

The space agency had planned to have three of the satellites on station, 22,300 miles above the Earth, three years ago, but bad luck intervened.

The first satellite was ejected properly from the shuttle's cargo bay on April 5, 1983, and was propelled higher by an attached rocket stage.

But the steering mechanism locked up during the second of two firings and the satellite began tumbling in a useless orbit.

Using a few thruster jets no bigger than thimbles, engineers slowly nudged the satellite into place over a two-month period. Since then it has provided coverage of half the Earth.

The second TDRS had been scheduled for launch in August 1983, but that was postponed because of the first failure. The satellite was put aboard the Challenger for a March 7, 1985, flight, but the flight was canceled when the TDRS in orbit experienced problems in its timing circuits.

TDRS-B next was loaded on the ill-fated Challenger flight. An underwater search continues off the Florida coast for the satellite's parts, some of which are highly secret. A portion of the TDRS is assigned to the military and contains scramblers, decoders and encryption devices.

NASA considers getting a second TDRS into orbit so important that what was to have been a third, backup satellite is scheduled to be the first payload when shuttles fly again.

When two satellites are in orbit, they can provide communications over 95 percent of the world and enable NASA to close down a global network of ground stations.

Nine Charged In Drug Bust

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two men with links to the infamous "French Connection" heroin ring were among nine people named in a federal complaint detailing a U.S. processing lab that produced $250 million worth of the drug.

Five Americans and four foreigners were charged in federal court Thursday with participating in the ring, the first known operation to have refined finished heroin in this country in commercial quantities, prosecutors said.

Michael C. Maneri, 39, of West Palm Beach, and French chemist Francois Scapula, 40, were among those named as major conspirators in the 34-page complaint filed Thursday in federal court.

Maneri, who owns a computer retailing company in Palm Beach County, was convicted in absentia on June 5, 1982, by the French government of heroin trafficking.

His co-defendant in that case, Jean Jahan, was as a major player in the "French Connection." The Post of West Palm Beach reported today.

A DEA official in Paris told The Post that Scapula also was a figure in that ring, a multimillion dollar smuggling operation based in Marseilles, France, that was smashed in the mid-1970s.

The "French Connection" case was the subject of a best-selling book and a movie. Scapula, described as a heroin chemist, was arrested in Thailand in 1980 and in Switzerland in 1985 on heroin charges. He is in jail in Switzerland awaiting trial on the 1985 case.

At a press conference in New York, U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani said the drug arrived in this country in a single shipment in the spring of 1984. It originated with opium poppies grown somewhere in the Middle East. From there, the 660 pounds of morphine base were transported to the Bahamas and on to West Palm Beach.

The base then was shipped by car to heroin manufacturing labs in Chandler, Ariz., where it was converted to 325 pounds of heroin, which was then transported to New York City and sold on the street.

An affidavit lists the street value as $250 million.

Giuliani said members of the drug ring apparently found it too expensive to have the raw opium refined into heroin in Europe, which is how the heroin trade traditionally has operated.

Maneri, accused of being the head of the smuggling operation, was not apprehended.

Ernest A. Benevento, 58, and his nephew Ernesto Benevento, 39, were arrested at their West Palm Beach homes Thursday.

Also named in the complaint were: — Earl Admiral Keller, 42, of Greenacres City, who is being held in Palm Beach County Jail on a Jan. 31 arrest for drug charges and violation of parole. Keller was arrested in June 1984 in New Mexico carrying 91 pounds of morphine base, the complaint said.

— Carmine Loiacono, 40, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; arrested Thursday in Acapulco, Mexico.

— Charles Altieri, 28, of France, arrested in Switzerland with Scapula and is facing the same charges.

— Guido Rendel, 50, of Australia; arrested in Barcelona, Spain, in December 1985 and charged with narcotics violations in France. In 1975, he was convicted of smuggling narcotics into the United States.

— Fatima dos Santos Nobre, 35, of Portugal.

Federal agents tracked members of the group for more than two years.

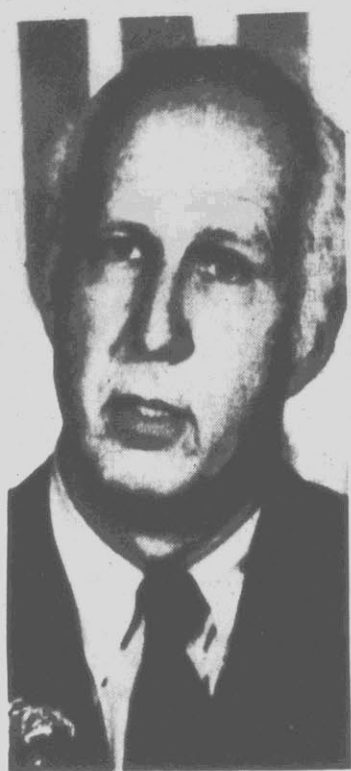

Due For A Visit

NEW YORK (AP) — Chrysler chairman Lee Iacocca, who led efforts to restore the Statue of Liberty, says he was red-faced when he realized he hadn't visited the monument since he was a child.

Iacocca said despite numerous trips to New York City, he never even took either of his daughters to the statue, and that he only returned to the site in 1982, after President Reagan asked him to lead the restoration efforts.

"The answer was simple and it was embarrassing," Iacocca wrote in Sunday's Parade magazine. "The Statue of Liberty didn't mean the same thing to me that it did to my father."

Iacocca said his father, an immigrant from Italy, took him to the statue when he was 5 years old.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THIS IS A DRAMATIZED VERSION OF FACTS TAKEN FROM THE BOOK OF AMOS, CHRONOLOGICALLY AND AUTHENTICALLY CONSOLIDATED!

AMOS THE SHEPHERD TURNED PROPHET

DELIVERING THE LORD'S WARNING TO SINFUL ISRAEL IN THE TEMPLE AT BETHEL, AMOS HAS NOW BEEN CONFRONTED BY THE HIGH PRIEST AMAZIAH AND TOLD TO LEAVE, BUT AMOS CONTINUES HIS SPEECH...

I WAS A HERDMAN AND NOT A PROPHET, BUT THE LORD PICKED ME TO SPEAK!

...AND THE LORD HATH SAID ISRAEL WILL BECOME CAPTIVE TO HER ENEMIES AND ALL THE MIGHTY SHALL FALL!

WOE UNTO ISRAEL, SAITH THE LORD - I WILL SMITE THEE, FROM THE GREATEST TO THE VERY LEAST!

BUT IN VAIN! AMOS' WORDS FALL ON DEAF EARS...

GO! PROPHECY IN THINE OWN LAND - BUT NOT HERE IN BETHEL!

AND SO, WITH HOOTS, CATCALLS, AND JEERS FOLLOWING HIM, AMOS LEAVES THE TEMPLE! HE HAS DONE HIS JOB! ALL ISRAEL HAS BEEN WARNED, AND IF THEY WILL NOT LISTEN, THEN LET THEIR BLOOD BE UPON THEIR OWN HEADS - BUT AMOS KNOWS THAT HE REALLY HAS DELIVERED THE LORD GOD'S WARNING!

Churches Get IRS Victory

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
 AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - American churches have won a key round in a long battle with the Internal Revenue Service over their contention that it's their right - and not that of government - to determine what activities are religious.

Some church attorneys called the outcome a "watershed" victory. But others said further IRS changes were needed, and may be in the offing.

The struggle has gone on for nearly a decade, with some church agencies defying IRS insistence that they are not integral to religion and thus must file annual financial reports.

Several church units, such as Lutheran social services in Minnesota and a Tennessee Baptist children's home, have gone to court about the issue, winning basic points in their cases.

But for a long time, the combined church protest, pushed through a broad, ad hoc church Coalition on IRS Definitions of Religious bodies, "fell on deaf ears," says the Rev. Dean M. Kelley, coalition secretary.

But a newly revised IRS approach, published May 19, will for all practical purposes, satisfy the church objections, says Kelley, also church-state affairs officer of the National Council of Churches.

Basically, the question has centered on who defines religion - the churches themselves or the government.

The IRS, under its long-time procedures, has defined church "integrated auxiliaries" - those exempt from filing financial returns - as those that were "exclusively religious."

But many church institutions - colleges, hospitals and other operations - were deemed not "exclusively religious" by the IRS, and were required to file reports (Form 990) on such matters as revenues, contributors and expenditures.

Church will have quarterly meeting this weekend.

Friday night a board meeting will be held; Saturday at 6:30 p.m. holy communion is set.
 Sunday, the Rev. Rodger Hooks and the senior choir and ushers will conduct the 11 a.m. service; the Rev. Douglas Cogdell and the congregation of St. Joe's FWB Church of Vanceboro will hold the 3 p.m. service. Dinner will be at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Weekend Telethon

ECU News Bureau
Live appearances by Miss North Carolina, major league pitcher Gaylord Perry and East Carolina University alumnus and football all-American Terry Long will highlight the Children's Miracle Network Telethon this weekend.

The 21-hour telethon, benefitting the recently established Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, will air continuously from 9 p.m. Saturday until 6 p.m. Sunday on WITN-TV, Channel 7.

The Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, a regional resource for specialized pediatric care, was established last February. It is a division of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

In a special split-location format, the last 20 minutes of each hour will originate live from the Brody Medical Sciences Building at the ECU School of Medicine. Co-hosts for the local segments, airing first at 9:40 p.m. Saturday, will be WITN-TV news personalities David Crabtree, Susan Roesgen, Brenda Hughes, Joe Corcoran, Ben Pringle, Ken Ackerman and Dick Jones.

These local segments will feature on-camera appearances by celebrities such as Perry, a 300-game winner and Cy Young recipient in both leagues; Long, now an offensive lineman with the Pittsburgh Steelers; and Joni Bennett Parker, who represented North Carolina in the Miss America Pageant. The nationally telecast program will be the fourth produced by the Osmond Foundation, Salt Lake City, Utah. With national co-hosts Marie Osmond and John Schneider, the telethon will feature many celebrities who are donating their time and talent to support the work of 130 specialized children's hospitals in the United States and Canada.

Dr. William E. Laupus, vice chancellor and dean of the School of Medicine, is serving as honorary chairman of the telethon and will appear on the telecast.

The local programming will feature film documentaries about the work of the Children's Hospital and the stories of 'miracle children' from all over eastern North Carolina who have benefited from the advanced medical services available at the hospital. A number of these children and their parents will appear live during the telecast.

Many of the more than 400 volunteers who have assisted with the production of the telethon will be staffing a network of 18 telephones for the duration of the event. Among the operators will be a regional VIP occupying a 'hot seat.'

Eastern North Carolinians outside Greenville may call in a pledge by dialing 1-800-223-2080. Greenville-area residents may call 757-2080. The larger pledges will be acknowledged on camera during the telethon. All contributions made during the telethon support the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina.

An observation area with limited seating will be open to the public Sunday from noon to 6 p.m.

"turns on automatically to stop an accident from happening" — is scheduled for testing in June.

Watson said efforts are underway to resolve problems with the third major safety system — an emergency preparedness and evacuation plan.

The Chatham County commissioners voted Tuesday to withdraw from the state-local evacuation plan. But Watson said the state will see that Chatham County has an evacuation plan in place even if county officials don't participate.

The Harris plant uses nuclear fuel — as opposed to coal or oil — to heat water to produce steam to turn turbines that turn the generator.

The heart of the steam producing system — the nuclear reactor vessel — is a steel vessel 14 feet in diameter and over 42 feet high. It weighs 285 tons and is located in the containment building. Made of reinforced concrete and lined with steel, the 240-foot containment structure sits on a 20-foot thick concrete pad and rises 160 feet above ground. Its inside diameter is 130 feet and its walls are over four feet thick.

Watson said the Harris plant should produce its first electricity in the fall of 1986 using nuclear fuel during a testing phase, then begin commercial production by the end of the year.

While nuclear plants are more expensive to build, nuclear fuel costs only a fourth as much as coal, officials say. A coal-fired generating plant of comparable size to the Harris plant would burn more than 9,000 tons of coal each day, requiring a daily delivery of 90 railroad cars.

Bird's Third Pockets Rockets

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics hit a rare cold spell so Larry Bird decided it wouldn't hurt for basketball's best player to try to end it. His hot hand pushed the Houston Rockets closer to the end of their season.

One day after winning his third consecutive NBA Most Valuable Player award, Bird exploded in the third quarter Thursday night and Houston never could put the pieces back together.

The Celtics crushed the Rockets 117-95. The team that knocked off the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers 4-1 to get to the NBA finals returns home for Game 3 Sunday with a 2-0 deficit in the best-of-7 championship round.

"If a team is playing well, they could play five games in Edmonton and it wouldn't make a difference," Boston forward Kevin McHale said.

The Celtics are playing very well. They are 30-3 in their last 33 games and 13-1 in the playoffs. Ten of the 13 victory margins have reached double figures. If they sweep the title series and earn their 16th crown, their combined record for the regular season and playoffs will be 82-16, surpassing the NBA mark of 81-16 set in 1971-72 by the Lakers.

Boston cruised to its 40th consecutive home victory Thursday night on the strength of a 34-19 third period that turned a 60-50 halftime lead into a 25-point advantage that grew to as much as 27 in the final quarter.

"We went out (in the second half) and missed three shots and we didn't get up and down the court very well, and they cut it down to eight," said Bird, who led all scorers with 31 points. "From then on, I said to myself, 'you might as well start shooting the ball and see what happens.'"

Leading 64-56, Boston went on an 11-1 run, which Bird capped with a three-point field goal and a long jumper. He also had a steal and a line-drive assist to set up a Robert Parish layup in that stretch.

"I thought we stopped him up to the third quarter," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "Then he got into one of those 'playing in his own back yard' situations, where he is in his own world and it seems like he is out there on his own. When he gets going like that, he's awesome."

"His hands were on every ball, stealing, rebounding, passing and shooting," said Celtics' center Bill

Walton. "He could do anything he wanted to tonight."

Bird wanted to win badly. In 1982, Boston beat Philadelphia by 40 points in Game 1, then lost the next game and the division finals. Last year, Boston whipped Los Angeles by 34 points in the opener, then lost the next game and the championship series. On Monday, Boston dominated Houston 112-100 in this year's opener.

"The win takes off a lot of pressure," said McHale, who scored 25 points. "It eliminates a lot of stuff from our minds."

Boston established a championship series record by hitting 23 of 24 free throws for a .958 percentage. The Lakers set the old mark of .943 when they made 33 of 35 shots at Philadelphia on May 16, 1980.

Thursday night's game was played in 90-degree temperatures in Boston Garden, which has no air conditioning.

"The running disappeared in the heat," Fitch said. "If we can't run, we can't make up the quick points."

Houston was led by Akeem Olajuwon with 21 points and Ralph Sampson with 18, but the Twin Towers combined for just seven second-half points. One starting guard, Robert Reid, had eight points and the other, Lewis Lloyd, just six.

"Lloyd is most effective when the Rockets are running," Boston guard Danny Ainge said. "We've taken that away. Every timeout we talked about the need to get back on defense."

On offense, the Celtics did their usual brilliant job of finding the open man. Several times, Bird was isolated on Rodney McCray or Jim Petersen. He almost always won the battles.

"I don't think they can handle it," Bird said. "If they double up on me I will swing it (the ball) around. I think it's our best play."

The Celtics started the second quarter with a 19-9 run that gave them a 50-39 lead that never fell below seven points the rest of the game. Houston's third and last lead was 30-29 with 55 seconds left in the opening period.

"We didn't look like the team that brought us here," Olajuwon said. "This was the worst game of the season. I was ashamed."

If they are to win their first NBA title, the Rockets would become only the fifth team in playoff history to survive a 2-0 deficit.

They must win four games in 11 days. In the last 80 days, Boston has lost three games. But Houston is unbeaten at home during the playoffs and the next three games are scheduled there.

"If we keep poise and play the way we know we can, I think anything can happen," Fitch said.

Said Bird: "We're a great road team and we're not afraid to go down there."

Boston's Bangers Offset Houston's Twin Towers

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics are a bunch of bangers with a built-in bell that sounds at the start of the second half.

The Houston Rockets have the awesome Twin Towers in 7-4 Ralph Sampson and 7-foot Akeem Olajuwon, but the Celtics are the ones flexing their muscles in the showdown for the NBA championship.

"It was a good physical game, the kind we like because we have a lot of big bodies and like to bang," Boston forward Kevin McHale said Thursday night after the Celtics outmuscled the Rockets 117-95 for a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 series.

"We played well, we did a lot of things, but it was the third quarter again," McHale said. "It's the same story. It always seems to be that quarter. I don't know what it is."

The Celtics, who outscored Atlanta 36-6 in the third quarter of an earlier playoff game en route to the finals, whipped Houston 112-100 with a 30-17 third period advantage in the first game here Monday.

Then, after toying with the Rockets in taking a 31-30 lead after one quarter in Game 2, they went on to a 60-50 advantage at halftime before breaking things wide open after the intermission.

Dethroned as NBA champions by Los Angeles after losing the second game of the finals here last year, the Celtics, in general, and Larry Bird, in particular, exploded in the third period, outscoring the Rockets 34-19.

"We have to do three things to be at the top of our game," McHale said.

"We have to run, we have to work inside and we have to be aggressive. Tonight we did."

"When we get it going, it's tough to stop us. We played very good defense and had our offense going. Once we get it going like that, we're awfully tough to beat."

"To say that we had a letdown in the third quarter takes away from what the Celtics did," said Houston Coach Bill Fitch, who directed the Celtics to one of their 15 NBA championships in 1981. "We played pretty well in the first quarter, even the first half. After that, we were never in it."

You have to give the Celtics credit for the way they played in the third period. We were humiliated. It's embarrassing to reach the finals and play like this. We're a much better team than we've shown and, fortunately, it's a seven-game series."

The suffocating heat which turned ancient Boston Garden into a giant sauna hurt the Rockets, along with the pounding dished out by the Celtics.

"Our running game just went dead in the heat," Fitch said. "When you can't run, you can't make up points quickly."

The Celtics appeared to thrive in the brutal conditions. Bird reluctantly took a 58-second breather in the third period and didn't go out again until the game was wrapped up with 3:03 remaining.

Bird, who became the third player in history to win the NBA's Most Valuable Player Award three consecutive years on Wednesday, celebrated with a game-high 31 points, 8 rebounds, 7 assists, 4 steals and 2 blocked shots in leading a relentless attack which enabled the Celtics to carry the 2-0 lead to Houston for the next three games.

"Larry was happy to win the MVP award," said McHale, who had 25 points. "And I think he showed how much he wanted this second game in the third quarter."

"Bird played the game," said Sampson, who had 18 points. "All you've got to do is give him the ball."

"He played great," agreed Olajuwon, who had 21 points. "He's the greatest player I've ever seen. He'll shoot from anywhere and there's nothing you can do. You can't stop him. You can only slow him down."

Cooney Begins Comeback Effort Against Gregg

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In training for his fight with Eddie Gregg, Gerry Cooney has had 16 sparring partners, breaking one's jaw and causing another to flee home in the middle of the night, says manager Dennis Rappaport.

"I'm doing what I want to do, what I always wanted to do," Cooney said Thursday.

He meant fighting, not sparring. And fight is what the 29-year-old heavyweight will do for only the fifth time in a little more than five years when he meets Gregg in a 10-round bout Saturday at the Cow Palace.

It also will be Cooney's third bout since he was stopped by Larry Holmes in the 13th round for his only loss June 11, 1982; his first fight since he stopped George Chaplin in the second round Dec. 8, 1984, and his first bout since he announced his retirement last July 30.

A victory would earn Cooney a ranking and probably give him a shot at Michael Spinks, who won the International Boxing Federation title from Holmes, then kept it on a split decision in a rematch.

Gregg, who turned professional in 1979, has a 24-1-1 record, with 18 knockouts, and is ranked No. 3 by the World Boxing Association.

Gregg's loss came when he was stopped in the eighth round by James Broad on Aug. 13, 1984. He has won his last three fights.

"I've waited a long time for this opportunity and I cannot let it slip through my hands," Gregg, who celebrated his 32nd birthday today, said Thursday at a joint news conference.

Cooney, who has a 27-1 record, with 22 knockouts, is a strong favorite to jump back into the championship picture with a victory in the match that will be televised live on ABC's "Wide World of Sports" at about 2 p.m. PDT.

Scheduled to be at ringside is the 36-year-old Holmes, who says he wants to fight Cooney.

"He's not in the picture anymore," said Cooney, who gave as a reason for his announced retirement his inability to get a rematch with Holmes.

But Rappaport said Holmes can get into the picture. If he cannot negotiate a deal with promoters Butch Lewis and Don King for a Spinks-Cooney fight, Rappaport said, he would consider Holmes' call for a 12-round bout with Cooney for the "People's Championship."

Cooney admits he had trouble accepting his defeat by Holmes for the World Boxing Council title, but he also says there were other reasons for his inactivity for which he has often been criticized by the media.

"What really bothers me about it is the public really didn't understand what was going on," he said.

A major distraction, Cooney said, was his older brother Tommy's serious drug problem.

And he said, "I've had some bad luck. I've had every injury known to man."

Cooney has had problems with his left shoulder and back and needed an operation on a knuckle of his left hand.

He earned his shot at Holmes by knocking out Ken Norton in 54 seconds May 11, 1982. But because of injuries his fight against Holmes didn't happen for 13 months.

After his loss to Holmes, Cooney didn't return to action until he knocked out Phil Brown in the fourth round on Sept. 29, 1984. He followed with his victory over Chaplin, then became a boxing recluse again.

"I'm 29 and I've got some time left, but I can't let it go by anymore," Cooney said.

Sid Outlasts Fernando As Mets Top Dodgers 5-2

By JOHN NELSON
 AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If Fernando Valenzuela was a little off his game, Manager Davey Johnson figured the New York Mets must be on theirs.

"I think it says something for our offense that we scored five runs off Valenzuela," the New York Mets manager said. "That's probably unheard of against him."

Indeed, in his last two starts, Valenzuela had pitched two-hit shutouts against Montreal and Philadelphia. He had won six of his last seven decisions and his last three starts.

Thursday night, however, he lost to former teammate Sid Fernandez as the Mets got game-breaking doubles from Ray Knight and Keith Hernandez to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2. Fernandez, 5-1, gave up both runs on four hits through eight innings, while Valenzuela, 7-3, yielded all five runs on six hits and an uncharacteristically high six walks in seven innings.

"Still, I thought Fernando pitched well enough to win," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said. "But the Mets have a hell of a club. Everything they're doing now is right. Their pitching is good, starters and relievers."

In the only other National League game Thursday, Philadelphia edged San Francisco 5-4.

The victory was New York's fifth in a row and gave the Mets a three-game sweep of the series with Los Angeles. In the two earlier victories, the Mets got complete-game victories from both Ron Darling and Dwight Gooden. Darling gave up one run and Gooden two as the Dodgers were held to five runs in the three games.

"We're scoring more runs now than at the same time last year," said Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia. "But the Mets have the toughest pitching staff in the league."

Although he would not admit it, Fernandez had to be particularly pleased with his performance against the Dodgers, who traded him to the Mets after the 1983 season for left-handed reliever Carlos Diaz and utilityman Bob Bailor.

"It's just another game," the soft-spoken Fernandez said. "It's no grudge match."

Johnson, however, knew how important the game was to Fernandez.

1-3 in his career against the Dodgers before Thursday night. "I think this is definitely a high spot for Sid," Johnson said. "To come in here and beat the Dodgers, especially against Valenzuela, it's something he'll remember for a while."

The Mets got a run in the second on George Foster's leadoff homer, his sixth of the season and fourth against the Dodgers. Los Angeles tied it 1-1 without a hit in the fourth. Mariano Duncan walked, stole second, went to third on a fly ball and scored on a groundout.

The Mets scored twice in the fourth. Knight doubled home a run and scored on a single by Tim Lincecum to make it 3-1.

Mike Marshall homered to lead off the Dodgers fifth, extending his hitting streak to a career-high 15 games, but the Mets scored twice more in the seventh on a two-run double by Hernandez.

"We always get up for the Dodgers," Hernandez said. "They're a good team, and they bring out the best in us. They have as fine a pitching staff as there is. ... If I had to pick between their pitching staff and ours, I don't know which I'd pick."

Phillies 5, Giants 4
 Slump-ridden Milt Thompson singled home Steve Jeltz with two outs in the ninth inning to give Philadelphia the win and a sweep of its three-game series with visiting San Francisco.

Jeltz walked with one out, went to second on Greg Gross' 100th career pinch-hit and to third on Jeff Stone's fly to center before Thompson, hitless in his previous four at-bats in the game, singled up the middle off Greg Minton 2-3.

Glenn Wilson rallied the Phillies from a 3-0 deficit with a three-run homer in the fourth inning.

Don Carman, 2-0, the fourth Philadelphia pitcher, pitched three shutout innings for the win.

Couples' 64 Tops Kemper

Bethesda, Md. (AP) — Fred Couples, who won the Kemper Open three years ago, would like to play himself out of a personal slump this week on the Congressional Country Club course.

The way he played Thursday, he just may be doing that.

"I told my caddy I need one good round or one good shot to get back my confidence," said Couples who shot a 64 to take the first-round lead of the $500,000 tournament. "I haven't had much confidence lately."

After his round, which tied the course record at the 7,173-yard, par-72 suburban Washington country club, Couples said jokingly, "I don't know who played for me today. It's been a while since I've had anything like this to be excited about."

"That was one of the best rounds I've played on the tour, putting-wise," he said. "It really felt good to play well for a change."

However, 57 other players shot par or better on what normally is a tough Congressional course, but which is playing a lot shorter this year because of the lack of rain in the nation's capital.

Three strokes behind Couples are relative unknowns Tom Sieckmann, Charles Bolling, and Larry Mize, who almost won the Kemper last year, eventually losing to Bill Glasson.

Hernandez Saves Tigers

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Rod Carew was gone and Reggie Jackson was not in the lineup. Still, Detroit left-hander Dave LaPoint had to face Don Sutton, who was trying to win his 298th career game.

"Every time you play the Angels it's like you're going against six Hall of Famers and three others trying to make it," said LaPoint, who held California hitless for five innings in the Detroit Tigers' 7-4 victory Thursday night.

LaPoint gave up an infield hit to Gary Pettis leading off the sixth and left the game after Dick Schofield hit a grand slam in the seventh that pulled the Angels within 6-4.

But reliever Willie Hernandez shut out California the rest of the way and LaPoint raised his record to 2-3, with both victories coming against the Angels.

Detroit's fifth straight triumph also helped erase LaPoint's memories of Anaheim Stadium. As a rookie with Milwaukee in late 1980, he got shelled in his only previous appearance there.

"That first time I faced seven batters and got only one of them them out — Rod Carew," LaPoint recalled. "I was out of there before my wife could get to her seat."

Carew was released at the end of last season and Jackson, a left-handed batter, did not start against the left-handed LaPoint.

Lou Whitaker and Lance Parrish hit home runs and the Tigers pinned the loss on Don Sutton, 2-5.

In other American League action, New York beat Seattle 2-0 and Baltimore downed Oakland 8-6.

LaPoint gave up five hits in his six-plus innings. Singles by George Hendrick and Rick Burleson and a walk to Bobby Grich set up Schofield's second career slam.

Hernandez took over after Schofield's fifth home run of the season and stopped the Angels on two hits the rest of the way for his seventh save.

Doubles by Dave Collins and Parrish made it 1-0 in the first inning and Whitaker led off the third with his fourth homer.

Tom Brookens' RBI forceout and a throwing error by Grich at second base allowed Detroit to make it 4-0 in the fourth against Sutton.

The Tigers added two runs in the seventh against Chuck Finley, who was making his major-league debut. Parrish walked and scored on a pinch-double by Brian Harper, who then came home on a single by Darnell Coles.

Parrish led off the ninth with his 200th career homer, his 10th this season. Parrish's blow came against Todd Fischer, who was also making his major-league debut.

Yankees 2, Mariners 0

Dennis Rasmussen allowed three hits in 8 2-3 innings and Mike Pagliarulo drove in the game's only runs with a homer and a double as New York beat Seattle in the Kingdom.

The Yankees have won nine of their last 11 games, and have beaten Seattle in nine of the last 10 meetings.

Rasmussen, 5-1, did not give up a hit after Alvin Davis led off the fourth inning with a single. Rasmussen, bidding for his first major-league shutout, left the game after walking Davis with two outs in the ninth, and Dave Righetti got the final out for his 12th save.

Pagliarulo had an RBI double in the second off Milt Wilcox, 0-6, and led off the seventh with his ninth home run of the season.

Orioles 8, A's 6

Larry Sheets drove in four runs with two homers, Cal Ripken added a two-run shot and reliever Brad Havens pitched 4 2-3 perfect innings as visiting Baltimore beat Oakland.

Drivers Complain, Prepare For Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — So some drivers didn't like the idea of a half-hour warmup session limited to 120 mph. So some members of the media didn't like the way the postponement of the Indianapolis 500 was handled or the off-limits sign posted in the pits for the rescheduled final practice.

So what else is new?

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway and the sanctioning U.S. Auto Club invariably get criticized for decisions that clearly are within their jurisdiction. It seems whichever way they go, somebody will scream.

"That's for sure, because you can't please everybody," Al Bloemker, Speedway vice president, said. "We're just trying to do what we think is the best for the participants and the spectators both."

One move that has caused quite a bit of controversy was the scheduling today's practice run.

In the past, if a driver or team felt they hadn't had a fair shake, the Speedway was often hauled into court. In an effort to avoid that problem, the structure of the 500 was changed several years ago, making it an "invitational" race.

That means instead of opening the race to all, invitations are sent out. And before an entry is accepted, the participant must agree, among other things, not to engage in any action which would disrupt or delay the race; to abide by the USAC and speedway rules; and not to file suit related to any race-related activity or interpretation of any rule.

Also part of the entry form is the clause that gives the Speedway the specific right "at its sole discretion" to cancel or postpone qualifications or the race itself.

So there was grumbling about today's warmup period, the final chance to test the cars before Saturday's rescheduled start, but there didn't seem to be much anyone could do about it.

"Nobody's making them do it," Roger McCluskey, USAC competition director, said of the 30 minutes of track time today. "And it's not a practice, it's a warmup, just to make sure the cars are OK, that there are no leaks or anything."

"They don't have to drive," he said.

Some drivers felt the 120-mph limit imposed by Chief Steward Tom Binford was too low.

Soccer Winners

IRS Says 14,000 Tax Checks Are Unsigned

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Treasury Department has some good news, bad news and good news for 14,000 taxpayers:
Your check really is in the mail. Unfortunately, it's not signed. But don't worry, banks will honor it.

The unsigned checks, mostly for Kansans, resulted from a malfunctioning Treasury Department machine that normally stamps IRS Regional Director Gordon P. Hickam's signature 20,000 times an hour, said Eugene Sides, deputy regional manager for the department's financial management service.

The machine was out of whack for about 45 minutes last week, Sides said Thursday. "This type of thing would normally be caught. It could have been caught through quality control procedures, but they got out."

"This has happened from time to time," said Jim LaForest, a spokesman in Washington for the Treasury Department, which writes 800 million checks a year. "But the checks are perfectly good. Someone who received one should just take it to the bank and the bank will process it."

The Treasury Department has notified the Federal Reserve Bank of the serial numbers and date of the unsigned checks, he said. "It was a print malfunction. Sometimes the ink will run out and fade. We don't really know why it happens."

"Fourteen thousand is a fair amount. It's happened before for 100 at a time. Everybody knows what to do about it."

Official Notes Support Of U.S. Bases

By MIGUEL C. SUAREZ
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said today that the government supports the retention of U.S. military bases in the Philippines, but does not intend to rely forever on America for its defense.

The two large American bases in the Philippines, Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base, are vital to a balance of power in Asia and the Pacific, and would enable America to protect sealanes in the Indian Ocean and Persian Gulf regions, Enrile told foreign diplomats at a breakfast meeting.

"It is the clear intention of the Philippine government to give meaningful support to this objective, even as our respective governments have concurred that our security alliance is purely defensive in nature," he said.

Enrile indicated that how long American military bases remain welcome in the Philippines depends on how soon his country can rely on itself for its defense and how soon Southeast Asia can attain its goal of becoming a neutral zone.

"We do not intend to live forever under the security umbrella of the United States," Enrile said. When possible, the Philippines would like to be able to defend itself and "effectively contribute to the long-term pursuit of a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in Southeast Asia," he said.

Enrile told reporters later the zone of neutrality envisioned by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations — Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand — cannot be attained unless the superpowers guarantee it, or the region itself has the necessary power to enforce it.

The leases on Clark and Subic expire in 1991.

The United States says it wants to keep the bases beyond that period, but President Corazon Aquino has not spelled out any clear policy, saying she wants to keep her options open. The defense chief also warned against "daydreams or wishful thinking" on security issues.

"Issues affecting national security do not partake of ideal situations but of stark realities in the environment," he said. "For so much unlike the case of political or socio-economic decisions, the cost of error in security decisions is critical, nay even fatal, for a nation."

He did not elaborate but appeared to be alluding to a divergence of views among government officials on the U.S. bases, the communist insurgency and other security matters.

There has been talk of including a provision prohibiting foreign military bases in a new constitution that a 50-member commission is scheduled to begin drafting next week.

Enrile told a news conference after his speech that he opposes such a plan. A constitutional ban on the bases "will trap (the Philippines) if there should be any need for a facility like that to be established in the land for the survival of the nation," he said.

Enrile cited the insurgency, Moslem separatist rebels in the southern Philippines, the presence in some areas of "political overlords and warlords" loyal to ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos, and the widespread removal of local elective officials identified with Marcos as sources of instability for the present government.

Contrary to statements by some officials that improvements in the economy and the removal of Marcos will make the insurgency disappear, Enrile said he believes clashes will continue "not only for 100 days but even beyond perhaps this regime."

Opening lead: Nine of ♣.

It is all very well to know that every card tells a story. You have to learn to read the book.

We do not envy North's plight at his third turn. He had started to describe his distribution, but he had not yet shown his strength. He eventually decided that, although his shape was not ideal, a rebid of two no trump gave a reasonably accurate picture of his holding. South had just enough to go on to game.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and a natural play for declarer would be allow that to run round to his hand. That would guarantee three tricks in the suit and seven overall. The only place then to look for the two extra tricks would be in the club suit.

That, however, would require not only a successful finesse in the suit, but a 4-3 break as well. Such a combination is considerably against the odds.

The opening lead almost surely marked East for the queen of spades. If that were so, a more promising line presented itself. The diamond suit could be set up if it broke 3-3, or 4-2 with one hand having a doubleton honor.

Declarer won the king of spades at trick one, cashed the ace of diamonds and came to hand with the king of hearts to lead a low diamond! East's king won, but he could do declarer no harm. His heart return was won on the table and a spade was led to the jack. When that held, it was all over but the shouting. Declarer continued with the jack of diamonds to the queen, and he still had the ace of spades as an entry to get back to his hand to cash the long diamonds. Declarer ended up with an overtrick.

Political Comeback In Turkey

SANLIURFA, Turkey (AP) — Suleyman Demirel, six times premier and twice ousted by the military, is attempting a political comeback in Turkey's countryside, cheered lustily by farm people.

As he made his way recently through this southeastern province on the Syrian border, people slaughtered dozens of camels, sheep and calves in a sacrificial thanksgiving.

"I missed you," Demirel shouted to the crowd.

"We missed you," the crowd shouted back.

Although he is running for no specific office, Demirel is out to prove he still is a political force, after having been deposed by the military in 1971 and 1980.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early morning is by far the best time for you to put into motion whatever your pursuits are for the day. Later in the day, you may have poor judgment when making decisions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can handle a secret worry wisely and benefit from it, but later take care you do not add further burdens on yourself.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get in touch with friends whose aid you need with a project since later they may be too preoccupied or unwilling to assist.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle some pressing matter first thing this morning. Bigwigs are hardly in the mood to grant favors today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) If you want to expand your activities, it is best to do so soon. Avoid those who want you to do things only their way.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Be with the one you love at some activity, since later you have important work to attend to. Refuse to take on another responsibility.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can reach a fine agreement with one who is important in your life, and then go on to other matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get your environment spruced up and then get busy handling routine affairs. Be more concerned with yourself and family than others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make plans for pleasure early since later it becomes too expensive or troublesome. Try to cheer up someone who is sad.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get your home in order early, since later some tense situation may arise that will need your attention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Communicate with another early in the day and get good results. Don't argue with anyone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You know how to make your property more charming and valuable in the morning. Try to cut down on unnecessary expenses.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get into activities that will bring you greater personal happiness in the morning, and then go along with the wishes of family.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a very happy and busy life but something may happen later and your progeny could have many problems to contend with. It is wise to get a good education in order to cope with life during trying periods. Teach to control the self no matter what occurs.

FOCUS

Rollicking Ronnie

President Reagan's acting career had its ups and downs. In 1954, with his movie career fading, Reagan took a job in a Las Vegas nightclub. He did a stand-up monologue, introduced other acts, and concluded the show by wrestling with the bandleader. Although the Reagans felt out of place in Las Vegas, critics loved the act. One wrote, "Rollicking Reagan proves that he can blend in with veterans... dancing, singing, and clowning, complete with pratfalls."

Liquor Law Said Costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision by Congress to require military liquor stores to purchase alcohol locally has caused a dramatic increase in operating costs and a loss of profits used for recreation for service personnel and their families, Pentagon officials say.

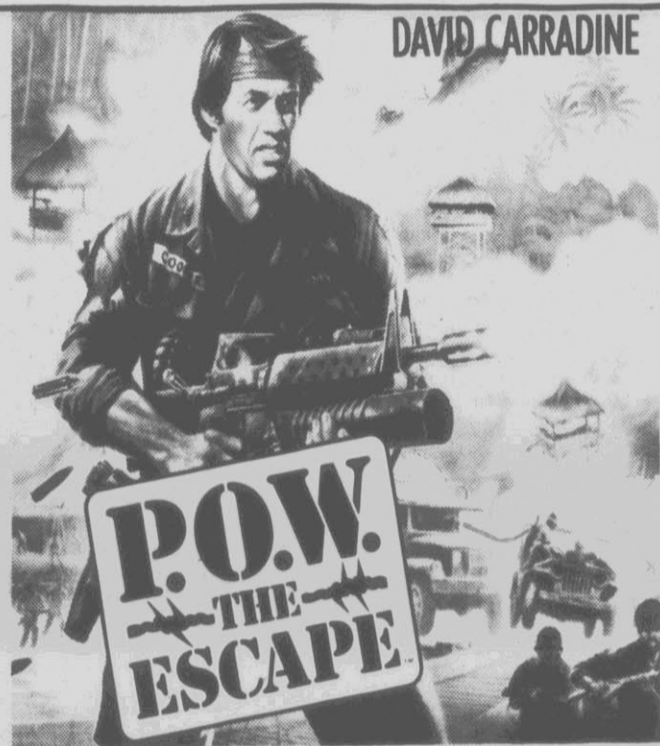

The law also is eliminating competitive bidding at a time when the Defense Department is being castigated for its procurement policies and allowing state governments to indirectly tax the federal government, the officials maintain.

Lobbyists for alcohol wholesalers and distributors, who played a key role in securing passage of the law, counter the Pentagon hasn't lived with the law long enough to make such an assessment. They also claim congressional intervention was necessary because the Defense Department was embarking on a plan that would have "wiped out the wholesale system in this country."

The fight between the Pentagon and alcohol industry is drawing state governors into the fray and is once again attracting congressional attention. Although the law will expire Sept. 30 unless resurrected, the Senate Armed Services Committee voted this month to repeal it immediately. And a ranking member of the House Armed Services Committee, Rep. Dan Daniel, D-Va., vowed to pursue a similar step.

The law was passed through the efforts of Rep. Thomas D. DeLay, R-Texas, and Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D. During House debate, DeLay described the proposal as a "minor fair market adjustment" that was needed because "there is no public policy reason for alcoholic beverages to find their way into the civilian marketplace at prices cheaper than local merchants can provide them."

"The law is just like directing that all military airplane parts used in California should be purchased in California," said a top Senate staff official who asked not to be named.

Shandling Planning Cable Show, Role As Guest Host

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you want to know the latest in Garry Shandling's life all you have to do is listen to his comedy on television.

"I've just bought a new house and moved into it," he said. "I live alone. I have a dog. I'm thinking of naming my next dog Mrs. Shandling."

"I tend to talk about things in my life. Relationships, my new house, my dog. I don't talk a lot about politics, although that's an area I'd like to explore more."

For more details about Shandling's life, tune into "Garry Shandling's Show," which starts in September on pay-cable's Showtime. The show will run for six episodes. He created the show with Alan Zweibel, one of the original writers for NBC's "Saturday Night Live."

"It's like the old 'George Burns Show,' where Burns talked to the camera. It's like a situation comedy but I break the fourth wall and talk to the audience. The first episode is right out of my life. I break up with a girl and move into a new place."

If you can't wait until September, he'll be the guest host of NBC's "Tonight Show" for the weeks of June 2 and July 14.

He'll be subbing for Johnny Carson during the weeks Joan Rivers was supposed to sit in. That is, before she announced her new late-night show on the fourth network being planned by the Fox Broadcasting Co.

"I'm just doing the two weeks," he said. "There's been no talk about me replacing Joan Rivers as permanent substitute host. I've no idea what they're going to do."

Shandling refused to comment about the well-reported feud between Carson and Miss Rivers.

Shandling has been host three times in the past three years. He is the only person besides Miss Rivers to be substitute host during that time. "Each time I was called the night before. Once they called me the same day," he said. "So I didn't have much time to prepare, which was probably a good thing in retrospect. I didn't have as much time to get nervous as I do now."

"Altogether, I've been on 'The Tonight Show' about 20 to 30 times. But, unfortunately, there's no training ground for being a host. You can't go anywhere to learn. You learn on the job."

Earlier this year on Showtime,

Shandling put together his own talk show. Actually, what he did was the 25th anniversary for a talk show that never was. The Showtime special was called "The Garry Shandling Show: 25th Anniversary Special."

"I think some people had no idea what was going on," he said. "I got the idea eight years ago when I was a writer. I thought: wouldn't it be funny for someone to have an anniversary show as though he'd been on 25 years."

Shandling said many people think he's from New York, but actually he was born and raised in Tucson, Ariz. He studied electronic engineering at the University of Arizona and took business and creative writing in graduate school.

He moved to Los Angeles and quickly became a writer of television situation comedies, including "Sanford and Son" and "Welcome Back, Kotter."

"I was not happy writing situation comedy," he said. "I was always fascinated by standup comedy. I think it's a real art. The very first time I got on stage it worked, so I was encouraged to continue."

"It took a lot of courage to get up on stage the first time. I was very frightened and I was incredibly self-conscious."

He was so determined to make it as a standup comic that he gave up writing for the sitcoms. "I went from making a lot of money to no money at all, which sent my parents into shock, to say nothing of the girl I was dating," he said. "I performed at amateur night at the Comedy Store or at the Natural Fudge Co., a health food restaurant. I remember it was a big thing when I won $25 at amateur night at Sticky Fingers."

"The turning point was the first time I did 'The Tonight Show,' in March 1981. After that I began working regularly."

Manatee Painting

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Singer Jimmy Buffett and artist Robert Wyland have unveiled a life-size wall painting of a manatee and its baby to make people aware of the endangered marine mammal.

Buffett, chairman of Florida's Save the Manatee Committee, said Orlando International Airport was chosen for the 8-by-14-foot painting because more than 1 million passengers a month pass through the terminal.

"We're trying to make people aware of the plight of the manatee, which represents the quality of life in Florida," Buffett said.

Wyland, 30, considered one of the nation's foremost environmental artists, spent two weeks on the painting, which he valued at $100,000.

Quote Disputed

PARIS (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd says Life magazine misquoted her when it reported she had said that she and Martina Navratilova laugh at the chances of other players replacing them at the top of women's tennis.

"I definitely didn't say that," Lloyd said Thursday at the French Open.

Olivier Memoir Set For Release

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — He calls himself a character actor and the luckiest man he knows. Lord Laurence Olivier does not allow modesty to cloud his talent.

"I was determined to be the greatest actor of all time," he writes in "On Acting," his new memoir recently published in Britain. It will be released this fall in the United States.

It is his first book since "Confessions of an Actor" in 1982, and is the result of hours of taped reminiscences spoken by the definitive Heathcliffe and Hamlet.

Olivier dictated his thoughts to a young actor, Gawn Grainger, who edited the final transcript.

"I wanted to stand up and be counted," Olivier says of his early days on the English stage. "I wanted to be conspicuous in the high court of the theater."

Now, as a legend of stage, screen, and television, he has become that court's supreme magistrate and king. "I wear an invisible theatrical crown, which I like, am very attached to and will not give up."

The book's critics acknowledge this crown even as they question the way in which it is worn.

"This is not a modest book, and thank God for it," wrote Paul Daneman in The Standard. "Olivier 'On Acting' means Olivier 'On My Acting,' and thank God for that, too."

"For all its occasional oddities, vanities, and repetitions, here is a book that should be required reading for every apprentice actor," commented Francis King in The Sunday Telegraph. "On the one hand, there is the crude brashness of the teen-ager; on the other, the serene wisdom of the septuagenarian."

Olivier, an actor at ease both in "Long Day's Journey Into Night" and "King Lear," turned 79 this month.

"I am 17 going on 80. I will continue to learn until all ceases to function," he writes at the outset of the book.

Candid about accepting recent film roles for the money, Olivier is most expansive about the Shakespearean roles he has played — from that "absolute twerp" Antony to "the poor old darling" Lear.

"Macbeth," he says, is "perfectly rounded."

"Hamlet" he calls "the greatest play ever written."

Olivier thought-Shakespeare's genus was unparalleled. "To make his your fingertips is to fulfil your professional language work from your brain to profession."

Pa. Town Recovers From 1985 Tornado

By BOB DVORCHAK

Associated Press Writer

ALBION, Pa. (AP) — Vacant lots sit where homes once stood, snapped tree trunks await the chainsaw, new headstones dot the cemetery after 12 died in a tornado that hammered this town a year ago. But there are signs, too, of renewal and resiliency.

The gaping holes have been fixed in the roof of the Roman Catholic church, and its 100-year-old stained glass windows were glued back together. On an adjoining lot is the new funeral home that opened May 11. Two stylish new homes, lacking lawns and landscaping, stand across the street.

"The town has bounced back," said the Rev. R.J. Reilly, pastor of St. Lawrence Roman Catholic Church, where the first Mass in 11 months was celebrated April 30.

For a couple of months after the tornado, he said, "I didn't see many people smile. Everyone seemed kind of stunned and numb. Then people saw their life wasn't over. People now comment on the newness rather than the destruction."

At 5:15 p.m. last May 31, killer storms ripped through Pennsylvania like a runaway wrecking ball. Packing winds as high as 300 mph, 28 funnel clouds touched down along six distinct tracks.

The death toll reached 89 in Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania and Canada. More than 1,000 people were injured and damage reached $450 million.

Pennsylvania alone had 65 deaths, the state's worst one-day toll from tornadoes.

In about 30 seconds, a three-block-wide swath was cut through Albion, a community of 1,500 residents. Two hundred of the town's 270 buildings were damaged.

Forty-nine families chose to leave, including the family of Sandra Stahlsmith, whose 6-year-old son, Luke, died in her arms when a cellar wall collapsed.

"If it had just been a tornado wrecking our house, that would be real easy to get over," said Mrs. Stahlsmith, who now lives in the town of Fairview with her husband and five children.

"Material things can be replaced. But with Luke, I don't ever expect to get over it. I don't ever expect to fill that gap."

She added: "You wonder where your angels were that were supposed to be watching over you. But I'm going to stop trying to figure out whose fault this was."

The 36-year-old woman has decided to become a nurse, and she plans to take night classes to get a degree. "It's a new beginning," she said.

Most Albion residents stayed, hoping for new beginnings themselves.

"We've had a long struggle. It ain't never going to be like it was. But you pick up and start over," said Sam Steff. Viewings and services were held for 11 months in the Masonic Hall while Steff rebuilt his funeral home.

The day after the tornado, his daughter painted a big sign in bright orange letters on the rubble that used to be their home. "The Steffs are alive and well and here to stay!! We are rebuilding," it read.

"People have physical scars, but God gives us strength," said the Rev.

S. James Schmittle, pastor of the Grace United Methodist Church. "He brings resurrection out of death, victory out of defeat. The rainbow that comes afterward takes both the rain and the sunshine to produce."

Mayor Bonda Dahlin witnessed the storm and now sees her town reviving.

"Albion people don't quit," said Mrs. Dahlin. "I'd drive around and I'd see another foundation going in and I'd be ecstatic. It's a rebirth, a beginning over."

Other officials are heartened by the town's willingness to rebound.

"If the sky gets black, people start looking up," said Paul McKnight, the borough secretary. "Nobody's forgotten, but people don't dwell on it. You get a hold of your bootstraps and move forward. It doesn't do any good to sit around and mope."

In the Amish hamlet of Atlantic, about 30 miles south of Albion, five people died, and only a church and a phone booth remained standing in a town of 500 residents.

But the feed mill is being rebuilt. And the hard-working Amish replaced 22 buildings, including nine large barns, by harvest time.

"We're normal small-town people. Most people did the best they could with what they had left. Somewhere, you get the strength and courage you need to rebuild," said Shirley Bovard, who works in the post office.

In the community of Wheatland, eight people died and 12 of the town's 13 industries were destroyed or damaged, endangering 500 jobs.

The town's population has dropped about 17 percent from 1,122 to 925, but about 80 percent of the industry has recovered, according to Mayor Helen Duby.

"I think we, as a sleepy little community, lost our innocence in that tornado," she said. "What's encouraging is that the industry we had here did not fold up. They chose to rebuild and remain. We kept what we had."

"If you just wring our hands and say, 'Why us, why us?' where would you be? Sitting in a pile of rubble like you were a year ago," said Mrs. Duby. "It's sad we can't rebuild it as fast as it was destroyed."

The field where the Farrell-Wheatland Little League plays has been named after umpire David Kostka, a Postal Service worker who had been married less than a month when he died a hero in the storm.

Kostka, 36, shooed people off the baseball diamond when he saw the tornado approaching, and he tried to flee the storm in his truck with his niece and another child. When the winds hit, Kostka threw the children into a ditch and lay over them.

He was blown away and killed. The children lived, and a committee raised money for a memorial and scholarship money in Kostka's name.

"He sacrificed his life. He thought more of those two little kids than he thought of himself. That's David," said Rocco Vadala, a friend who led the fund-raising effort.

The memorial is to be unveiled June 21.

FBI Agent Enters Plea Of Innocence

By SANDY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ohio FBI agent Robert S. Friedrick, bolstered by an unusual public show of support from about 60 FBI colleagues, pleaded innocent to charges he obstructed an investigation of Teamsters President Jackie Presser.

When Friedrick arrived for his arraignment Thursday in U.S. District Court, the agents formed double lines through which Friedrick made his way, shaking hands and smiling at times.

Many of the agents had boarded a bus in Cleveland that morning and made the nine-hour trip to Washington, on their own time and at their own expense, in a display of their support for the 13-year FBI veteran.

The Ohio agents released a statement asking federal officials to consider Friedrick's "exemplary record" when reviewing the case.

"The letters FBI also stand for fidelity, bravery and integrity. SA (Special Agent) Friedrick, during his 13 years of service in the Cleveland office, has been the epitome of these standards," the statement said.

Friedrick, 42, leader of the Cleveland FBI's organized crime squad since 1981, was indicted May 16 on five counts of making false statements to the Justice Department last summer concerning Presser.

After Friedrick pleaded innocent to the charges, U.S. District Judge George H. Revercomb released him on personal recognizance.

The indictment charged Friedrick with covering up a meeting a year ago with Presser, the labor leader's lawyer and a Cleveland local 507 official to find a way to forestall an indictment of Presser.

Friedrick also was accused of falsely telling his superior that he had authorized Presser to make illegal "ghost" payments to people who did no work.

Friedrick's statements, along with those of two other FBI agents, killed the Presser investigation last July because, with FBI agents authorizing Presser's illegal conduct, it would be difficult to prove criminal intent, the Justice Department told a Senate subcommittee.

The subcommittee reported that more than $700,000 had been paid out over the years.

Presser subsequently was indicted along with Friedrick. The labor leader was scheduled for arraignment today in Cleveland on charges of racketeering and embezzling money from the local where he first rose to power.
