THE DAILY REFLECTOR

TRUTH IN PREFERENCE TO FICTION

105th YEAR NO. 142 GREENVILLE, N.C. SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 15, 1986 72 PAGES PRICE 50 CENTS

DAD'S DAY — Traye Smith, 5, shows friends Kim Landreth, 4, and Michelle Matthews, 5, a picture of his father that he took with him to a local day care center in celebration of Father's Day. Some area children spent time composing the right card to give Dad on his day, and others baked cookies and drew family portraits. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Youngsters Spend The Week Preparing For Father's Day

By HAROLD JOYNER
Reflector Staff Writer

Because being a father may be a full time job, it isn't very often that Dad gets a day all to himself to do as he pleases.

Some area children — both young and old — spent the week creating a memorable gift for the special man in their lives in preparation for Father's Day.

At Kinder-Care Learning Center, the children made cards in the shape of ties with their photograph pasted on it, said Kathy Sullivan, director of the center.

Other kids, however, said they had other plans for Sunday.

"I'm going to take my Daddy to Pizza Hut for Father's Day," said Michelle Matthews, 5. "I'm also going to give him some of my perfume ... and a Popsicle."

Another child, Traye Smith, 5, said he had made his father a love book. "I'm also going to take him to Burger King for breakfast — if my mother will drive us there."

Other students at Kinder-Care brought pictures of their fathers and attached them to a bulletin board, according to Ms. Sullivan.

"We had some students make sailboats out of egg shell cartons and clay," she said.

At Tammy's Nursery and Kindergarten Inc., children made cards for their fathers, and others started their gift-giving plans a little earlier.

"The kids grew plants — some marigolds and some popcorn plants, according to Ellen Denton, director of Tammy's.

"With the help of the teachers, the 3-year-old class made chocolate chip cookies which they took home today (Friday)," Ms. Denton said.

One group of children made fish pictures by gluing scraps of colored paper together.

The children at Little People Learning Center made cards for their fathers, said Susan Wade, director.

At Industrial Park Child Care Center, director Tyresia French said some children drew portraits of their parents, while others made hand-print drawings.

Father's Day also provides a special time for catching up on missed recreation.

According to Ed West, son of Pitt County school Superintendent Edwin L. West Jr., Sunday offered the perfect opportunity to take his dad sailing on the Pamlico Sound.

"We haven't had a chance to go sailing this year," the younger West said. "I figured Father's Day would be the perfect time to start it off. We're going to spend the whole day there. It should be a lot of fun."

Plan For Refuse Fees Drawing Objections

By DON REUTER

Some area storeowners are balking at City Council proposals to initiate refuse collection fees as a way of offsetting the loss of federal money through Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget cutbacks.

The storeowners, responding to a Reflector survey late last week, say the user fees should be scrapped in favor of continuing tax-paid collection service.

The council has scheduled collection fees of $15 per month per container for non-residential services and $4 per month for residential service in the $86,452,856 proposed budget for the 1986-87 fiscal year.

The council has scheduled a public hearing on the budget for Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall.

The refuse fees are expected to generate $656,550 in additional revenue, according to City Manager Gail Meeks.

The proposed budget also calls for a fee of $75 per call for rescue service by city personnel. The rescue fee is expected to generate $144,000, less 30 percent anticipated bad debts, in 1986-87 based upon an implementation date of Oct. 1.

Ms. Meeks said the council proposed the fees, which would be tacked on monthly Greenville utility bills, in an effort to offset lost federal funding.

"The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings legislation, as proposed in the 1986 federal budget, and if triggered in the 1987 budget, calls for cuts in all federal programs which provide assistance to municipal governments

Several Stores Opening

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Today is the first Sunday since the Greenville City Council voted to abolished the 20-year-old Blue Law and allow all businesses to open at 1 p.m. on Sunday and a number of stores are taking advantage of the change to open their doors to shoppers.

A survey Friday showed Nichols Discount City on Greenville Boulevard, the Kmart store in Greenville Square Shopping Center and Rose's Store at The Plaza mall will be open. Pic 'n Pay Shoes on Greenville Boulevard and the Housewares Outlet at the Buyers Market at West End Circle will also open their doors to shoppers.

But Belk-Tyler's and Sears at Carolina East Mall and J.C. Penney's at The Plaza will not open. Neither will the Brody's stores at The Plaza and Carolina East.

"We will be closed this Sunday," Penney's manager Bill Hopper said. "We may open eventually, but right now we have no plans to open (on Sundays)."

The survey also indicated that the Sunday opening of other stores will not change schedules at stores such as Kroger Sav-on, Food Lion, Harris Supermarkets, Overton's, Kerr Drugs, Eckerds Drugs or Farm Fresh.

Vandals Damage High School

Sheriff Says N. Pitt Van Found In South Carolina

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County officers looked to South Carolina Saturday for clues to the identity of vandals who caused an estimated $35,000 in damages to North Pitt High School by driving a pickup truck through the building's hall.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Saturday that a school van stolen from the campus on N.C. 11 near Bethel was found in South Carolina. Tyson, who declined to say where the van was located in South Carolina, went to that state Saturday for an on-the-spot investigation.

Before leaving Greenville, Tyson said Saturday the damage at North

School Merger Proposal Approved By Assembly

By HAROLD JOYNER
Reflector Staff Writer

Legislative approval of Pitt County's school consolidation proposal has cleared the way for resumption of merger preparations, school officials said Saturday.

"We are pleased the legislation has been ratified," said school Superintendent Edwin L. West.

"We look forward to a positive review by the Department of Justice as the result of the legislation," he said.

The state Senate on Friday approved procedures for electing school board members to satisfy questions raised by Concerned Citizens for Justice and the Justice Department. The House had already approved the bill.

The 15-member consolidation school board, which has already been selected, will continue to supervise the merger of Greenville City and Pitt County schools, West said.

The two systems are scheduled to merge July 1 ifithe U.S. Justice Department approves an election in 1987.

"The consolidated board can resume meeting," West said. "And the board can now consider recommendations relative to consolidation."

An earlier plan had called for an at-large election in 1992, which raised some objections by black citizens on the fairness of the process.

Ernest G. Brown, spokesman for the Concerned Citizens group, said approval of the legislation was expected because the civil rights organization had agreed on the provisions.

"We're happy that we're working toward a merger and a fair method of election," he said.

"Practically everything we suggested was agreed on. We were very satisfied with the legislation."

Brown said Concerned Citizens was never against the merger, but rather the lack of misrepresentation on the proposed board.

Airport Funding Retained

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council has agreed to retain a $60,000 operating fund allocation for the Pitt-Greenville Airport in the city's proposed 1986-87 budget despite balks by Pitt County commissioners on a similar request.

Council members voted to keep the money in the proposed $86 million budget at a workshop session Friday but stipulated they would only match funding granted by the county. Greenville and Pitt County contribute matching amounts to the airport.

If the county is unable to fund all of the airport's requests, the city's leftover share will be transferred to the capital reserve fund and held until county funds are available, according to City Manager Gail Meeks.

Pitt County commissioners gave tentative approval to cutting the $60,000 at a meeting Wednesday.

The airport authority's $60,000 operating fund requests from Greenville and Pitt County marked a

Summer Is Job Time For Many Young People

By HIH SONG KIM
Reflector Staff Writer

This is the first of a two-part series on how local young people are entering the summer employment scene.

Summertime usually conjures visions of vacation, but for many local high school and college students, time off from school is considered prime time for employment.

Car payments, school tuition, personal expenses and the desire to gain experience fuel the search for summer jobs as students who want to work pound the pavement.

Area educators and agencies respond to this demand for work with services designed to improve students' chances of finding employment. School programs can help students find employment with career potential, such as internships with area businesses and firms.

Rose High junior Godfrey Bell obtained a summer position at IBM through the school's occupational education class. Bell plans to major in business administration in the future and said he is "eager to see what the office will be like."

East Carolina University marketing major Ginger Chenoweth landed her job as marketing assistant at Empire Brushes Inc. through ECU's Cooperative Education Office. Ms. Chenoweth said her job, which involves creating product displays, conducting sales analyses and other marketing duties, is "excellent grooming for future career positions."

Career-oriented jobs can also be captured by those who start their job search early. Burroughs Wellcome personnel director Robert Bowman lists laboratory research among the summer jobs available to college students with a background in the sciences, but notes that applications are taken early in the year, between January and February.

Wachovia Bank and Trust personnel director Lisa Daniel reports that decisions on summer positions are made in March. "By May or June, the positions are already filled," Ms. Daniel said.

Bank teller Don Wilkerson applied to Wachovia early — in January. "I heard about summer openings through family friends, and I pursued it. I didn't like the idea of being lazy and casual about getting a job," he said. A sophomore from Elon College hoping to transfer to ECU, Wilkerson views his jobs as "a great way to get experience ... It's also a challenge, and that's what I like."

ECU business major Meg Farris is working her second summer at Wachovia in the retail loan and trust departments. She sees her job, which she applied for in February, as a

Reagan Writes Gorbachev

LONDON (AP) — The Observer newspaper said Sunday that President Reagan has written a warm letter to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev urging that preparations be started for a summit conference. A White House official confirmed the report.

The British weekly, which did not reveal its source, said the letter suggested Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze meet anywhere in Europe to prepare the agenda for a summit. It said Arthur Hartman, the U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, delivered the letter to Gorbachev.

In Washington, the White House made no official comment on the report but one Reagan aide, speaking with the condition that he not be identified, confirmed such a letter had been sent. He said it was "generally correct" that the president suggested a meeting between Shultz and Shevardnadze, but he declined to give further details.

Shultz and Shevardnadze had been scheduled to meet in Washington on May 14-16 to discuss a possible summit, but that plan was canceled by the Soviet Union on April 15, hours after U.S. warplanes bombed the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi. Libya is a staunch Soviet ally.

Marlin Perkins Dies Of Cancer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — R. Marlin Perkins, who for more than two decades brought the wild animal kingdom into millions of American homes, died Saturday at his home. Perkins, who had been ill for two years with cancer, was 81.

Considered one of the nation's leading zoologists and naturalists, he narrated Mutual of Omaha's "Wild Kingdom," a network television show, for 23 years. He relinquished the role last year but returned this year as host for "Nature Newsbreak," a series of 60-second public service radio spots.

Perkins, who was born in Carthage, Mo., decided during childhood to pursue a career that was dedicated to the preservation of wildlife, particularly that of endangered species.

He began his career on a St. Louis Zoo labor crew in 1926, becoming curator of reptiles there for a decade beginning in 1928.

Remembrance Of Dad

Oh, this fatherly love and gratitude, all things good and bad are upon you. To your memory of a good father and husband. All our lives have grown and remembrance of you is an everyday warmth. This day I would like to wish all fathers a happy day. For next year is a long time.

Children & Grandchildren Of Johnny Ebron

In Remembrance Of Adrian Oakley

Daddy was my buddy. My buddy, my Daddy, you are with me when I take those long walks we talked about. I can hear you now! "Baby—slow down, cause you aren't as young as you used to be." Remember, those car drives we took together? Boy those dogwood trees sure were pretty in bloom. Hey Dad, I bet you are still laughing at me for getting so mad over the ballgames we watched together. "Dad, you know Murphy was safe at second base, the umpire had something in his eye." God called you home March 31st of this year to be with Him. This is to say thank you for being my "Papa". Happy Father's Day.

Love,
Your Baby Girl, Connie Summers

Alan Lerner Dies At 67

L NEW YORK (AP) — Lyricist, playwright and composer Alan Jay Lerner, who with Frederick Loewe wrote the Broadway musicals "Camelot," "Brigadoon" and "My Fair Lady," died of lung cancer Saturday.

Lerner, 67, died at Sloan-Kettering Memorial Cancer Center, said hospital spokeswoman Sally Benjamin Young.

He had been ill for about five months, said Sydney Gruson, a longtime friend and vice chairman of The New York Times. Lerner settled in London six years ago, but returned to New York for medical treatment about two months ago.

President Reagan, at Camp David, Md., said he and his wife Nancy joined all Americans in mourning "one of this nation's finest lyricists" and the co-author of some of their favorite musicals.

"Through his words Alan gave expression to the romantic thoughts and feelings that all of us at some time have shared in our hearts," the president said. "We are diminished by his death but we have been vastly enriched by the wealth of his legacy to us."

Roderick M. Phillips
DIRECTOR

SPARING THE SURVIVORS

Sometimes people make arrangements which cause distress to their family. This is often the case when, after a sudden death, it is unexpectedly revealed that the decedent made plans, for example, to have his body donated to a medical school or cremated.

It is of utmost importance that we—the living and healthy—make our wishes known to our families (and lawyers) and that we all have a last Will prepared before illness or death occurs. In this way, the family will have an opportunity to express their views and any objections they might have, at a time when they are not emotionally distraught. A change of plans might, or might not, be effected, but at least the family will be apprised of our plans and have a chance to accept them.

In this regard, it would be considered prudent to select a funeral home ahead of time and discuss these arrangements with the funeral director.

Car Bomb Kills Two In S. Africa

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — A car bomb exploded near a hotel beside Durban's seafront boulevard Saturday night, killing two white women and wounding 15 people, a government spokesman reported.

Brig. Leon Mellet of the Bureau for Information said the bomb had been placed in a car parked in front of a restaurant at the Parade Hotel and exploded shortly before 10 p.m.

He said the Parade Hotel, an adjoining hotel, two apartment buildings and about 50 vechicles were damaged by the blast.

Durban police said a temporary first-aid station was set up at the scene on the Marine Parade boulevard on the Indian Ocean shore. Police blocked off the area and stopped journalists from approaching the site.

No individual or group asserted responsibility for the attack, but South Africa's white-led government has blamed previous terrorist bombings on black nationalist guerrillas of the outlawed African National Congress.

Neither Mellet nor Durban police officials would say who they thought was responsibile for the attack.

On Thursday, the government decreed a nation-wide state of emergency in an effort to end racial violence, and a general strike has been called for Monday by blacks to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the Soweto riots.

The South African Press Association said there was a second car-bomb explosion at a bowling alley in another ara along the seafront, but Mellet said that report was not correct.

There were two fatal car bombings in Durban in 1984, and the government blamed both on the African National Congress.

Thousands Protest South African Policy

NEW YORK (AP) — Tens of thousands of demonstrators streamed into Central Park on Saturday to protest with songs, signs and chants against South African apartheid, calling for President Reagan to impose rigid economic sanctions on the nation.

"We must deny landing rights to South African planes, remove our ambassador and stop Americans from doing business in South Africa, like we've done already in Libya," said former tennis pro Arthur Ashe. "We must put our moral weight on the side of the people in South Africa fighting for freedom."

The huge rally marked the 10th anniversary of riots in Soweto, South Africa, where hundreds of blacks were killed. Among those slated to address the rally were entertainer-activist Harry Belafonte, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Alfred Nzo, secretary-general of the African National Congress and a confidant of imprisoned black South African activist Nelson Mandela.

The African National Congress is a multiracial guerrilla group fighting from exile against South Africa's system of racial segregation. Nzo serves as chief executive of the organization's headquarters in Zambia. By midafternoon, some 40,000 protesters had converged in the park, said police spokesman Lt. Ed LeSchack. The crowd was orderly, but booed when the rally opened with the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Cleveland Robinson, chairman of the New York Anti-Apartheid Coordinating Council, said he expected more than 100,000 people to attend the rally, spurred by the state of emergency imposed in South Africa last week.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson spoke to reporters before addressing the crowd.

"President Reagan is in a political partnership with Botha," he said. "His policy of constructive engagement has served as a stimulant to South Africa, making the Botha regime more bold and more confident."

P.W. Botha is South Africa's prime minister.

The racially mixed crowd waved hundreds of banners, posters and pictures, many of them photos of Mandela. Others attacked the Reagan administration for its South African policy of "constructive engagement," or quiet diplomacy encouraging reforms of apartheid.

Benjamin Hooks, president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the United States should be as tough against South Africa as it has been against Libya.

"We're saying to Reagan, to the Senate and to the Congress: Apartheid must go," Hooks said. "Mr. Reagan, you have asked for sanctions against Libya and (Moammar) Gadhafi. Why not against Botha and South Africa?"

As they marched into the park, protesters chanted: "Reagan, Botha, you can't hide. We charge you with genocide."

The protesters had gathered at nine sites in Manhattan before marching to Central Park for the rally. One group met outside the United Nations in midtown, while a second group headed south from Harlem to the park. Seven smaller marches set out from other points in the city.

South Africa imposed a nationwide state of emergency Thursday, and police detained more than 1,000 people. The ANC said it would proceed nonetheless with a general strike Monday commemorating the 1976 Soweto uprisings, in which more than 500 people died.

"I must say the occasion makes it even more purposeful," said Robinson, secretary-treasurer of District 65 of the United Auto Workers union. "It brings out more people."

School System Needs Equitable Share Of Funds

Revenue-sharing was too good to be true; officials have known that for a long time.

Now, it's gone, and it appears from the Pitt County Commissioners' preliminary budget that the schools may bear the brunt of the loss.

Last week the commissioners tentatively agreed to give the schools $2.6 million plus $392,000 in capital outlay funds. The schools asked for $3 million — an annual stipend agreed upon in 1984 when schools opted for merger — plus $710,000 in capital outlay.

Funds are tight; it is likely no organization will get the full amount they want. Sharp pencils are in order. By trimming costs, commissioners are attempting to react responsibly to tight financial times.

But schools are also acting responsibly to a tough climate — merger. Change, especially in education, is not an easy time. The schools need to know they have the financial support of the county commissioners during a tenuous time of transition.

Merger was adopted to remove serious problems in the county's education system. The continued use of outdated, substandard facilities was one of those flaws — one that the $3 million per year was designed to eliminate.

The $3 million for merger-related projects comes from a special Capital Reserve Fund. The taxpayers fund it each year through a 10-cent per $100 tax increase designated to fund merger.

Perhaps a more careful examination of the proposed budget could help commissioners fulfill their good faith obligation with the schools. The loss of revenue-sharing funds should be shared across the board by all county-funded departments. For now, the $3 million in capital outlay for schools is necessary.

So is the $710,000 earmarked for "routine" capital outlay projects — the replacement of the Agnes Fullilove facility, school buses, maintenance vehicles and one classroom of furniture for each school. Delaying these will put schools behind on needed purchases. Cutting into the $3 million could put them behind on merger.

When the commissioners discuss the schools budget Monday, they might consider evenly dividing the loss of revenue-sharing. In 1986, when the critical process of merger begins, that might be more responsible than whittling down school monies.

Reasons Lacking For Fund Change

Another strong voice has been raised in opposition to the proposal of using General Fund Revenues for highway-related needs. Gladys Graves, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, has re-raised concern that the action could threaten education programs.

Officials representing the N.C. School Boards Association and the N.C. Association of School Administrators are joining the NCEA in supporting continued separation of financing for highways and General Fund programs. A spokesman for the school boards' association reminds the state has traditionally chosen to finance its transportation needs out of the Highway Fund and "we don't know any reason why that ought to be changed," says E.E. Causby.

Nor do we.

Of concern to many people is the possibility of undermining priorities given to the education field by combining that field's needs with those of transportation ... watering down the old values given education.

Sunday Morning Notes

Temple Free Will Baptist Church, located on State Road 1708, has taken note of the United Methodist Church's controversy over militant hymns.

A sign in front of the church last week read: "Onward Christian Soldiers. We Sing It Here."

The sign, of course, referred to a United Methodist Hymnal Revision Committee's recommendation that militaristic or sexist lyrics should be dropped or rewritten.

The recommendation would have to be acted on at the church's general conference in 1988 and the revisions would have to be made in a new hymnal scheduled to be published in 1988 or 1989.

Well, we can also report that "Onward Christian Soldiers" is still being sung at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, Greenville's largest United Methodist church. In fact the Rev. J. Malloy Owen III said the hymn was sung at that church the Sunday after the news story about the committee action came out. And it was partially in response to the article.

Owen feels the possibility is strong that this hymn and others will not be changed by the Methodists.

He said the issue was a sort of standing joke at the annual conference held at Duke University recently. It was mentioned by several speakers and drew laughs.

A hearing was held by two members of the hymnal revision committee and the room in the divinity school building was packed and overflowing. Apparently it was on people's minds that this and other hymns might be reworded or eliminated.

"There is a strong groundswell for this hymn and I think it will be retained," Owen said.

He noted, too, that radical feminists attempted to make a case for changing references to God in the masculine sense and this was not adopted by the committee. Thus Methodists will still refer to God, the Father. Some changes to sex neutral language may be made in referring to human beings but not as referring to God.

It is not as well known that "Battle Hymn of the Republic," the hymn of the Union forces in the War Between the States, is also caught up in the United Methodist controversy over militant hymns. If the committee recommendations were followed it would face a similar fate as "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "Am I a Soldier of the Cross."

It is Owen's opinion that clery and lay leaders believe these hymns are a part of our heritage and should be retained.

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Borne by a strong wave of consumer optimism, President Reagan continues to ride a crest of public support unprecedented in Gallup Poll annals.

In a just-completed Gallup Poll, 68 percent of adult Americans approve of the way Reagan is handling his presidential duties while 23 percent disapprove and 9 percent are undecided.

The president's current job performance rating not only is the highest recorded during his entire tenure — matching the job score he received exactly five years ago, during the "honeymoon" period of his first year in office — but also breaks historical precedent.

Each of Reagan's postwar predecessors who won reelection (Nixon, Eisenhower) or who was elected to his own term after nonelective presidential service (Johnson, Truman) saw his popularity erode sharply as his tenure progressed.

President Reagan's strong current standing doubtless reflects the record duration of the economic recovery, as well as low oil prices, low inflation and low interest rates. As reported recently, 83 percent in a March Gallup Poll said they expected the recovery to last at least until the end of this year, with 58 percent predicting that economic good times would prevail into 1988 or beyond.

In the same survey Americans expressed a bullish outlook toward their personal financial situation, with 46 percent saying they now are better off than they were a year ago and 66 percent expecting to be more prosperous next year than they are now.

Reagan's job performance history breaks sharply with historical precedent. President Eisenhower, who received a 79 percent approval rating shortly after his reelection in 1956, saw his public support decline to 53 percent approval merely 18 months later. Similarly, the 80 percent favorable rating President Johnson received soon after his election in 1964 fell to 48 percent approval in May 1966. President Truman suffered a 50-point drop in public esteem during the five-year period ending in May 1950, from 87 percent to 37 percent approval. And President Nixon's popularity fell from the high of 68 percent recorded after his landslide reelection in 1972 to 25 percent by May 1974.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 4 percentage points in either direction. In addition to sampling error, the reader should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.

Where's The Mole?

WASHINGTON — This past Sunday, The Washington Post carried a long piece by its executive editor, Ben Bradlee, detailing and justifying the Post's handling of what we know as the "Pelton story." He dealt with matters of continuing concern to both the government and the press. Forgive me a little shoptalk.

A word about Bradlee. In the fever swamps of the yahoo right, Bradlee may be the most hated editor in the nation. Among professional journalists, he is greatly respected. At 64 he has been a working newspaperman for 40 years. Since 1968 he has been the top editor of the country's most influential newspaper. Let me quote from his account:

"Some time in September 1985, reporter Bob Woodward came into my office, shut the door, and in almost a whisper laid out an amazing top-secret intelligence capability that emerged in bits and pieces eight months later in the trial of Ronald Pelton. Woodward described in great detail how the communication intercept had worked, where the communications were intercepted, every detail except Pelton's name."

At that time Woodward did not have Pelton's name. The Post "had no knowledge that every detail of our story was already known to the Russians." Woodward and Bradlee recognized "the highest national security secret any of us had ever heard." Bradlee voiced his concern to publisher Donald Graham that truly important national-security information "was floating around town."

Pause: To this day, no one except the convicted spy and the Soviets know "every detail" of what Pelton divulged. This was a key point in the prosecution's careful preparation for trial. It is entirely possible that Woodward had picked up details that Pelton did not know or did not sell.

Bradlee talked with Gen. William Odom, head of the National Security Agency. Bradlee said confidently that the Russians had Woodward's information "and we asked why it should be kept from the American people." Odom was dismayed: "He said the information was still extremely sensitive. We didn't know exactly what the Russians knew, he said." Nevertheless, Woodward proceeded to write several drafts of his story. The final version "removed all the 'wiring diagram' details of the intelligence system." On May 28, "without the wiring diagram details," the Post ran the piece.

Meanwhile, CIA Director Casey, General Odom and the president himself had been putting pressure on the Post to kill the story altogether. In an exceptionally stupid act, Casey implicitly threatened to prosecute the Post under espionage statutes. For a smart man, Casey can be remarkably dumb.

Further pause: It is impossible to understand how The Washington Post, given Bradlee's eloquent defense of the paper's patriotism and responsibility, could have even prepared a version that included "wiring diagram details." I have been in the news business even longer than Bradlee has been in the news business, and I never heard of the idea that the people have any right to know the "wiring diagram details" of "the highest national security secret." This is nonsense. Indefensible nonsense.

In his final paragraph Bradlee set forth a principle that all of us in the business accept: "The press must continue its mission of publishing information that it — and it alone — determines to be in the public interest, in a useful, timely and responsible manner — serving society, not government."

Did the Post "serve society" in its handling of the story? I doubt it profoundly. As Bradlee himself acknowledged, the Post's editors "were not 1,000 percent convinced that the Soviets knew every single detail of the Post's story." The intelligence game is a game of jigsaw puzzles in which pieces are forever missing. What pieces, unknown to Woodward, were in Woodward's several versions?

What about Bob Woodward? He came to sudden fame through the leaks he and Carl Bernstein developed in the days of Watergate. In the past several years it has become evident that Woodward has access to some of the most sensitive secrets in American intelligence. He has a mole deep in the CIA or the NSA. Woodward will not identify his source; that is his obligation as a newspaperman. What is his obligation as a citizen? Here is a government employee with access to "the highest national security secret," and he is leaking "wiring diagram details" to a Post reporter.

All of us want to tell Bill Casey how to do his job, beginning with a warning to him not to tell us how to do our job. But if one word of advice to Casey is acutely justified it is this: Find Woodward's mole and take him to trial for treason.

Kennedy Staff Upset

WASHINGTON — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's staff was outraged that the Reagan administration gave credit to Vice President George Bush for Fidel Castro's release of Col. Ricardo Montero, the last Bay of Pigs invader still in jail.

Montero's release became possible only after Kennedy's intervention. Administration officials stressed their desire to keep his arrival in Florida free of domestic politics. So, the Kennedyites went into orbit when news accounts quoted State Department spokesman Bruce Ammerman as giving Bush top credit for springing Montero.

A Bush spokesman told us the colonel's release "did come up" in the vice president's May 21 meeting with Cuban Bishop Carlos Decespedes.

Although the administration had asked Kennedy's aides to keep away from Montero's arrival at Homestead Air Force Base, Dade County (Miami) Republican chairman Jeb Bush (George's son) was there. Montero's mother declined a request by a pro-Reagan Cuban-American leader to publicly thank the vice president for her son's release.

Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd is privately promising fellow Democratic senators that if he is re-elected to another two-year term as floor leader after the 1986 election, he will never seek the office again.

Even with that plea for only two more years, Byrd could be toppled by colleagues who want a more videogenic leader now that television has come to the Senate. Sen. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana is waging the first full-scale campaign against Byrd since he was first elected party leader in 1977.

The "two more years" by Byrd, 68, may appeal to liberal senators who don't see Johnston as an improvement in image and fear that, starting as leader at age 54, he might be around a long time. They would prefer Sens. Lawton Chiles of Florida (who launched a last-minute campaign against Byrd following the 1984 election) or Dale Bumpers of Arkansas.

Wayne Widow Is Again A Victim

RALEIGH — An elderly Wayne County widow who was defrauded out of $21,000 by the former president-elect of the North Carolina State Bar is a victim again. She hasn't received the court-ordered restitution due her from her now disbarred lawyer and state officials are pointing fingers at each other as they try to explain why not.

In 1983, George Kornegay Jr., a Mount Olive lawyer, was convicted of obtaining the money under false pretenses from Estelle Sutton. In sentencing Kornegay, Judge John Martin ordered that Kornegay repay the widow the money, plus interest. He made the payment of restitution a condition of work release.

Kornegay has completed his sentence in that case now, but Wayne County court records show that he has paid only about $4,500 of the money owed, that he still owes more than $23,000, counting interest, and that he has not made any payments to the widow since March, according to the Goldsboro News-Argus newspaper.

How could a felon get out of prison without paying court-ordered restitution? Everybody says somebody else goofed.

At the Department of Correction, spokeswoman Renee McCoy blamed state law. She says, "We cannot order an inmate to pay restitution from monies in a personal account, or the sale of the inmate's private property. We only have the authority to order and receive restitution from work release salaries."

That interpretation of the law caused legislative lawyer Sabra Faires to shake her head in wonderment. "I don't know how they could have interpreted the law in that way," Ms. Faires said. She drafted legislation in 1985 that made technical changes to the law in question. She said the Department of Correction had apparently overlooked Chapter 15A of the statutes which deals with restitution. Under that statute, she said, the state does have the power to make a defendant pay restitution from his personal wealth. DOC personel had read the work release statute, she said, when they should have read 15A, the restitution statute.

Bruce Briggs, chairman of the N.C. Paroles Commission, points his finger at Judge Martin, who is now on the N.C. Court of Appeals. He told the News-Argus that the sentence was faulty. The commission can no longer require Kornegay to pay restitution. His sentence wasn't long enough, Briggs said. "I don't mean to be critical of the judge, but if he checked another block on his judgment form, (Kornegay) could have been required to pay restitution while he was on probation."

Martin disagrees. He told the paper that restitution is required under the sentence he handed down.

In a bit of political coincidence, the sponsor of the 1985 legislation was Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, the local legislator. He says the technical changes were not designed to relieve inmates of their duty to pay restitution. "I am confident that the Conference of Superior Court Judges (the group which asked Lancaster to propose the changes) didn't want to tie their own hands in the fashion that this legislation has now been interpreted to do." Then, turning to DOC, he said, "I don't see how they get the interpretation (of state law) they did."

So let's wrap this all up. The judge and the legislator say the paroles commission and the department fouled up. The commission and the department say the judge and the legislator fouled up.

As for Mrs. Sutton, she's had to retain new counsel to sue Kornegay in civil court to get back the money which everyone agrees she deserves but which no one can seem to collect for her.

To the editor:

We at J.H. Rose High School believe that the schools form the vital foundation in our community. We are dedicated to excellence for the young people of Greenville and Pitt County. In order to allow for the growth and development of our students, we often weigh and consider how we might do a better job to provide for them. For example, through the support of J.H. Rose High's Academic Boosters, we plan to implement student and teacher incentive programs next year. These incentive plans represent one way we commit ourselves to quality education.

These incentive plans reflect our continual efforts to reinforce the importance of education as a foundation in life. When we read reports that the county commissioners "deleted (from the budget) the money requested to increase teacher supplements ..." and compensation for teachers — band, choral, orchestra, and drama, who spend massive amounts of time with their respective extra-curricular activity — we wonder if we educators and parents constitute an isolated group of concerned citizens. The county commissioners apparently do not endorse efforts by local school officials to improve the professional environment for teachers in Pitt County.

We urge the county commissioners to reconsider their tentative budget cuts in the areas of education. We invite them to be forthright, progressive and supportive of local teacher and administrative efforts to improve the quality of education in Pitt County.

To the editor:

Monday, June 9, the Ayden Town Board voted against the establishment of a 911 Emergency Telephone System for Pitt County, giving the reason that Ayden has its own telephone number for fire and rescue and that the emergency system currently in use is satisfactory.

Pitt County Emergency Services currently dispatches county fire departments and rescue squads including most Greenville rescue calls. Most Ayden fire and rescue calls are also dispatched through Pitt Emergency Services. Pitt Emergency Services has been operating for many years and has the capability of handling all emergency calls, with a few changes.

Among the several 911 systems that could be put in operation, the one recommended to the county commissioners is a Call Transfer System. With this system, a municipality could choose to keep its own dispatch system. A person could call 911 and Pitt County Emergency Services could immediately transfer the call to the appropriate dispatcher.

On the inside front cover of the telephone directory is an array of 7-digit emergency numbers in Pitt County. One three-digit number, 911, could be used anywhere in the county. It's easy to dial and easy to remember in times of distress. Babysitters and even passing travelers could get help easier than looking up the correct seven-digit number.

Twenty-seven counties in North Carolina already have some form of 911 system in operation and 11 counties are currently in the planning stages. These counties represent the majority of the population of North Carolina.

I urge you to let your county commissioners and town board know your feelings about a 911 emergency telephone system for Pitt County. It may save your life or property someday.

To the editor:

North Carolina is fortunate to have a legislator of the caliber of Rep. Ed Warren from Pitt County.

Rep. Warren was recently awarded the Distinguished Service Award by the N.C. Association of Directors of Developmental Disability Centers, because he came to the aid of young mentally retarded children who had no funding support in developmental disability centers across the state. The special bill that Rep. Warren sponsored was relatively small and unknown, and it was literally "lost in the shuffle" of the hectic 1985 session of the General Assembly. Rep. Warren consistently brought it back to the attention of legislators responsible for appropriations, and it was finally included.

Without his work and attention, these children would still be unsupported in receiving services critical to their development. His deep sense of commitment to perform his legislative responsibilities with caring integrity is truly commendable and unselfish.

This association is extremely grateful for Rep. Warren's sincerity in assisting children who need the greatest degree of advocacy and support. He is a special friend to North Carolina.

Showdown On SALT II

WASHINGTON (AP) — A showdown between President Reagan and congressional critics of his SALT II decision could come as early as July.

That's when the defense money bill is likely to come up for a vote, and supporters of the 1979 nuclear weapons limitation treaty are getting ready to apply some pressure.

They want to save the treaty, the last major U.S.-Soviet agreement to limit nuclear weapons, while Reagan wants an increase in Pentagon spending.

The strategy developed by a group of Democratic and Republican senators would prohibit spending money on any weapons that exceed the limits set by SALT II.

Although the treaty has never been ratified, it appears to have the support of a majority of the House and Senate. So the pressure tactic might work — or at least kick up a nasty fight between the White House and Congress.

The president's backers, meanwhile, are pondering some strategy of their own. Republican Sen. Richard Lugar, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Dan Quayle, his Indiana stablemate, may counter by trying to force a vote on ratification of the treaty.

They are operating, of course, on the assumption that SALT II cannot command the two-thirds vote it would need. A vote against ratification would kill the treaty for sure, especially since Reagan says it only legitimizes the arms race.

Reagan's decision to disregard a major provision of the treaty does not come into play until November or December when the number of B-52 bombers carrying air-launched cruise missiles cracks the ceiling.

He reminded the Soviets at a news conference Wednesday night there was time to work out an accord that actually reduces weapons on both sides. "If nothing is done," he said, "then we'll make the decision with regard to that plane."

In the meantime, two Poseidon nuclear submarines will be torn apart this summer to keep the United States in line with the treaty temporarily, at least. Reagan will be keeping an eye on the Soviet nuclear force and how arms control negotiations in Geneva are proceeding.

So SALT II isn't dead yet. And Paul Nitze, a senior adviser on arms control, gave a panel of the House Armed Services Committee on Wednesday some indication that the treaty may be kept alive.

The technique would be indirect. Reagan would use the same economic argument he did in keeping the United States in compliance with the SALT II ceiling on multiple-warhead missiles.

The situation is developing this way: Two or three more Poseidon submarines are due later in the year to either have their reactors recharged or be taken out of the fleet as outmoded.

Nitze said he "would anticipate" destroying a submarine on economic grounds. That is, it would not make financial sense to refurbish the submarine while the Graham-Rudman deficit reduction law was bearing down on the budget.

That's the explanation Reagan gave for ordering the destruction of the two Poseidons this summer. Nitze stressed the president had not made a decision to take that step again.

But if he did, SALT II would get another reprieve. And the atmosphere for a summit meeting with Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, toward the end of year could be brighter — assuming the two sides can get together on a date and an agenda.

Reagan had some kind words for Gorbachev at his news conference. He said the Soviet leader was the first in memory to publicly express interest in reducing, or even eliminating, nuclear weapons.

Critics of Reagan's SALT II decision are trying two coordinated approaches.

Sens. Joseph Biden, the Delaware Democrat, and William Cohen, the Maine Republican, have introduced legislation to block funds for nuclear weapons that are above SALT II limits.

However, the ban would expire if Reagan certified to Congress in writing that the Soviets have exceeded the limits themselves.

Biden told a news conference on Wednesday he was concerned about scrapping a treaty that requires the Soviets to dismantle 316 launchers over the next 18 months compared to 32 U.S. launchers.

Cohen said he was not a supporter of all SALT II provisions in the first place. But he said the way to deal with alleged Soviet violations was to respond to each in kind. For instance, Cohen said, if the Soviets have deployed an illegal long-range missile, the SS-25, the United States should push ahead with the single-warhead Midgetman.

A group of other senators, including Republicans John Heinz of Pennsylvania and John Chafee of Rhode Island, are trying a softer approach. They would simply have Congress inform the president the SALT II treaty is worth keeping.

This may be put to a vote later in the month. However, a well-placed congressional assistant said the Biden-Cohen attack on defense spending is "the big stick in the background."

The Lesson Of The Strap

Upon the death of Col. Robert Bingham at his home in Asheville in May of 1927, editor Louis Graves of the Chapel Hill Weekly was moved to write a lengthy article setting forth some of his reminiscences of the colorful man who had headed the famed Bingham School since he returned home from fighting for the South in the Civil War.

Graves was one of many Tar Heel notables educated in the school which Bingham's grandfather established shortly after the American Revolution and which was moved to Asheville in 1891.

"He was an old-fashioned school master," Graves wrote. "Many of his rules and practices would not fit in well with the present scheme of things — but they had their merits none the less. He demanded and compelled close attention to classroom duties. He believed in a simple curriculum, and in thoroughness ... He never ceased in the effort to cultivate in the boys under his charge, by precept and example, a devotion to truth and honor and courage ... I cannot help regretting that the old schools of the Bingham type are passing away."

In his article, Graves chose to write about "some of the less serious aspects of Robert Bingham's life, because his courage as a soldier, his public spirit and his achievements as an educator have been ... frequently celebrated in print ..."

Graves recalled that at Bingham School, boys who accumulated too many demerits in a specified period were required to spend a full day in the guardhouse while their classmates were having the day off. Each of 10 guardhouses at the school measured about four by five feet with a small extension at one end to accommodate the culprit if he chose to lie down. Entering immediately after breakfast, he received his midday meal on a tray and was released just in time for the evening meal.

Sometimes there were more boys due for punishment than there were guardhouses. When this happened, the four who had the lowest number of demerits were given the option of receiving a thrashing administered by Col. Bingham with a leather strap. These culprits were given a couple of choices: They could chose whether to take the strapping from Dr. Black or Dr. Brown — Col. Bingham had two straps which were identical except for their color. They could also choose to take the beating across their hands or across that part of the body which Col. Bingham described as "the sitter." Or they could choose to take some on the one and some on the other.

Graves pointed out that "no boy was ever beaten against his will" because he could always opt for the guardhouse and his punishment would be deferred until one was available. But Graves said he did not recall a time when a student who had the choice of a whipping or the guardhouse chose to spend the day in one of those tiny cells.

"It (the whipping) hurt, and hurt bad, but when it was over the slate was swept clean and the boy was free to spend the holiday as he chose ... My observation was that the boys who had felt the colonel's strap never bore him any ill-will. On the contrary they seemed grateful to him for having saved them from the guardhouse."

Graves also recalled times when Col. Bingham would serve as referee when one student would challenge another to settle their differences in a fight "on the grass" between the rows of barracks. When this occurred, the whole school would gather around and Col. Bingham would take charge.

"If the fighters were too long in a clinch he would separate them, after the manner of a professional referee," Graves wrote. "There was no fixed duration for each round, but now and then he would decree an interval of rest. He did not encourage the prolongation of a fight; at each recess he would ask the contestants if ... they had had enough.

"It happened that once in a while that there was a quarrel between two boys one of whom was much larger and stronger than the other," Graves recalled. "The colonel would not permit an uneven battle, and in such a case, it was not uncommon for a third boy to step forward and offer to act as a substitute for the smaller one. I recall having seen a spirited match in which a volunteer proxy vanquished the big fellow who had made the first challenge."

In its obituary on Col. Bingham, the Associated Press credited him with several other accomplishments in the field of public education in North Carolina. The AP said he led the fight to persuade the General Assembly to enact a law which permitted counties to levy taxes to support their schools. It said speeches by Bingham launched the drives that resulted in the creation of schools now known as North Carolina State University and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

A few years before his death at 89, Bingham was forced by failing health to reliquish his post at the helm of his beloved school. However, he wrote in his will provisions he hoped would help it remain open. These included a request that if his namesake, Robert Bingham McKee, should ever head the school he should ask the Legislature to change his name to Robert McKee Bingham.

Alas, Bingham School did not survive him very long. A combination of circumstances forced it to close its doors in 1928, and efforts to reopen it were not successful. The main obstacle was that its plant had become so outmoded that the construction of a virtually new one would have been required for it to operate successfully.

But it had long lived up to its motto of "mens sana in corpore sano (a sound mind in a sound body)."

Summer Jobs ...

means of gaining exposure to the banking world. "I wanted to work at a bank to see if I liked the atmosphere," Ms. Farris said. "That way, you don't run the risk of entering a profession which you might not like and then quit."

Workshops in resume writing, filling out job applications and interviewing are offered by vocational counselors at all local high schools and colleges to help students land a job for the summer. Some schools also compile a listing of students' skills and the type of work they desire, notifying them when an opening which corresponds to their experience and interests appears. Job boards and classroom announcements also publicize employment opportunities.

Financially needy individuals are eligible for special programs such as the Job Training Partnership Act "manpower program" administered by Community Action. The organization is funded by federal, state and local government sources.

According to program and resource coordinator Doris Wallace, disadvantaged youths in high school or college whose family income falls below a specified level are trained in a marketable skill like drafting or typing.

Jobs at non-profit organizations are then located. Program participants are paid minimum wages during their training and subsequent employment. The program selects participants through application.

Outdoor work is another option for summer student employment. According to Greenville Recreation and Parks Deparment's superintendent of recreation, Charles Vincent, 40 to 50 high school and college students work during the summer as counselors, coaches, lifeguards and instructors. Physical education majors are eligible for internships which carry such work assignments as organizing canoe races and play days.

For those under 16, volunteer positions assisting counselors and coaches are available. While the positions carry no pay, "the teenagers can gain good, practical experience," Vincent said. Advance planning is required for consideration for these jobs as well, since most applications carry a deadline of mid-April, according to Vincent.

Darrick Mullins, a senior at North Pitt High School, plans to do maintenance work around the school this summer. "The job experience will help me in the long run," according to Mullins, who got the job in April. "I'm glad I started looking early. All my friends are looking for jobs, and things are pretty tight."

Field work figures as a traditional summertime occupation. "Although there's no great labor surplus, the interest level is about the same. It's hard, outdoor work, but it's good work," said Frank Gore, rural manpower agent. Prospects for work in the fields remain favorable despite increasing mechanization and efficiency concerns, according to Pitt extension agent Mitch Smith.

North Pitt senior Jimmy Blount has decided to work in tobacco once again this summer, having secured the job in December. "It's plain old hard work, but it's all right," he said. "Sitting home everyday watching TV was boring, so I went to work. That's how it (working in tobacco) all started."

ECU News Bureau

The Science Track Enhancement Program (STEP), designed to encourage interest in science and math careers among women and minorities, is scheduled for June 22 through July 3 at East Carolina University.

The 25 participants — rising ninth graders — will be placed under the mentorship of an ECU faculty or staff member and assigned to work in a university department. They will assist with various science projects.

Dr. Mary Ann Rose, assistant to the chancellor for special projects, initiated the program whereby students will spend six to seven hours a day in their assigned duties, for which they will receive a small stipend.

Students will be assigned to work with a "mentor" with the idea that "a caring and inspiring individual can often make the difference between pursuing or abandoning a career choice," Dr. Rose said. "When mentors adopt students for the two-week period, we believe that there is greater likelihood of their pursing science and mathematics careers."

The students were selected from RECAST, a community-based group which focuses on encouraging minority youths to choose careers in math and science. Teacher-advisers in RECAST clubs in the Greenville and Pitt County school systems were asked to recommend up to six students from their clubs to submit applications for the program.

Local students participating in the STEP program include:

AYDEN — Sonya Cox, Carla Joyner and Cherise Connor;
BETHEL — Meko Thompson, Anavette Wilkes and Robert Howell;
FARMVILLE — Shawn Ford; and GREENVILLE — Melissa Brown, Tonya Moore, Christine Searcey, Angela Taylor, Michelle Taylor, Dionne Dockery, Libria Stephens, Derrick Hines, Toure' Claiborne, Terri Dawson and Pamela Teel; and GRIFTON — Shawner Kinsey;
GRIMESLAND — Leslie Hardy, John Green and Travis Telfaire, and WINTERVILLE — Rodney Daniels.

Refuse Fees ...

and their citizens," Ms. Meeks said.

Some people have expressed concern over the charge, Ms. Meeks said, but City Hall has not been inundated with calls.

"We've had some inquiries and questions from a few people," she said. "People have expressed a preference not to have it, but they have been limited in number. Personally, I've had four calls, and some council members have received calls."

However, some storeowners and managers say their taxes should cover the cost of refuse collection.

"I would be against the fee because of the number of dumpsters I have," said Ruth Matous, manager of the Greenville Sheraton. "We would have to pay $60 per month. We require some additional services, but we also pay our share of taxes. The sales tax brought in should cover the cost."

Eupha Pulley, owner of Krispy Kreme Doughnut Co., said smaller businesses will be hit hardest by the fee.

"I think I pay enough tax. I think there is a better way of solving the problem, perhaps by curtailing some of their expenses," Ms. Pulley said. "Small businesses will definitely be more affected. We have no protection whatsoever."

Other store operators expressed opposition to the proposed collection fees.

"I would be paying $45 per month for my three containers. I'm certainly not thrilled about it," said Jerry Powers, manager of Kmart. "I'm not sure whether the money is missing or they're just doing it in preparation for Gramm-Rudman cuts."

Powers said the City Council should wait to see how much expected revenue is collected from Sunday retail business sales, which are legal as of this weekend.

"I think they established a revenue raising measure Monday night (in repealing the Sunday Blue Law)," he said. "I don't understand why they don't wait to see what happens with that. They may not have to bill me to collect my garbage."

J.C. Parker, owner of Parker's restaurants, said he would be billed for garbage bins that are not always used.

"The main thing I'm concerned with is having a fee charged on dumpsters we don't use," he said. "We have extra dumpsters for weekends and holidays. Sometimes, we'll have Friday, Saturday, Sunday and if Monday is a holiday, four days of garbage. If it stays that long, you'll have an odor."

"Something ought to be worked out where the city would pick up on those days. I don't mind paying a fee if I knew we could get service every day," said Parker, who has three dumpsters at his new restaurant on Greenville Boulevard and four or five at his location on South Memorial Drive.

Harvey Lindsay, general manager of the Carolina East Mall, said he isn't sure how the fees will affect mall businesses.

"I'm not sure how it will impact the people," he said. "It wouldn't be fair for each store to pay minimum fee especially when they don't have bins. We are concerned about the fee.

"We have 30-odd dumpsters so the fee would make a substantial impact on the mall and in the store's cost," Lindsay said.

The city is currently picking up the mall's trash, he said. "We don't think it is fair to make us pay the fee. If a private firm can do it cheaper, then we should have that choice," Lindsay said.

Lindsay said council members need to examine the issue more closely.

"If the city wants to have the monopoly, then they'll have to do it at the most efficient rate," he said.

Charles Overton, president of Overton's Supermarkets, said the fee would put an unnecessary financial strain on his businesses.

"I don't think the fee is fair. We're in the type of business that is very competitive," Overton said. "I think the fee will put undue burden on small operators like myself. It will be an additional operating expense."

Overton, who has five dumpsters, said he would like to reduce the number to cut down on expenses.

"I can't even consolidate all my containers to one or two, that's not fair," he said. "Personally, I think there are better ways of raising money than taxing garbage collection. Businesses are taxed enough.

The City Council has made plans to implement restrictions to prevent businesses from reducing the number of dumpsters they use in order to keep refuse fees down.

"It will probably be mandated that businesses must provide an adequate number of containers to handle their refuse," Ms. Meeks said. "It will most likely be determined by the public works director.

According to the collection fee proposal, all businesses will be billed for service regardless of how the waste is removed.

Allan Knotts, store manager of Kroger Sav-On Food & Drug, said he employs a private contractor to haul his garbage.

"We have an outside service that takes care of that for us. We don't use the city," he said. "We wouldn't have any intention to change. We don't know how it will affect us. I don't see how they could charge a fee for a service."

Businesses that utilize private sanitation services will be billed the minimum charge of $15 per month, according to Ms. Meeks.

Ayden, Kinston, Fayetteville and Goldsboro are among North Carolina towns which have refuse fees, according to Ms. Meeks.

Ayden charges businesses $16 per container and $2 for residential service, while Fayetteville charges $3.50 per dumpster and removes residential waste at no charge, Ms. Meeks said. Goldsboro charges businesses an average of $24 per month but their system involves the number of pickups and the size of the dumpsters.

Ms. Meeks said refuse collection fees for businesses in Kinston, which charges an $8 fee to residents, range from $12 to $100 per month depending on dumpster size and number of pickups. Rocky Mount doesn't charge a refuse fee, but it doesn't provide a backyard pickup.

Procedures for collection from delinquent citizens are being considered, according to Ms. Meeks.

"It all depends on the reasons why they don't pay," Ms. Meeks said. "If someone is unable to pay, they will be allowed to make installment payments and no action will be taken."

However, if the refuse fee charge is omitted from a utilities bill payment, citations would be handed out to violators, Ms. Meeks said.

"A civil penalty including a $50 fine for willfully refusing to pay will be invoked," Ms. Meeks said. "That does not include those who are financially unable to make payments."

Ms. Meeks said citizens who are delinquent on refuse fees would be processed through the court system if they do not pay after two or three citations.

Service will continue regardless of bad debt collection proceedings, Ms. Meeks said.

Ms. Meeks said discussions have been initiated with Pitt County Memorial Hospital on collection of rescue fees.

"This fee will be billed through the hospital, and we expect it to be primarily covered by insurance companies," Ms. Meeks said. "We'll work something out with the victims if it falls under Medicare or Medicaid."

Ms. Meeks said no one will be refused rescue service if the fees are implemented.

ECU Reorganizes School Of Education

The school of education at East Carolina University has been administratively reorganized to streamline its management and increase efficiency, university officials have announced.

Two major divisions — curriculum and instruction and a division of services — have been created and a new degree program added. The changes were recommended by an eight-member planning committee appointed last August.

Dr. Charles R. Coble, dean of the school of education, said the reorganization is part of a commitment to make it "the top school of education anywhere."

"I truly believe that we have the best opportunity to rebuild all of our programs based on the new research base for teacher education," Coble said. "This ambitious goal is achievable because of the climate for change in the school, and the support for change by the administration and the larger community."

Coble announced that Dr. Betty Levey will serve as director of the school's division of services

"With initial legislation there was only one black on the 12-member board. We did not feel it was in the best interests to allow that to happen," he said.

The consolidated board, which includes four blacks, has the task of figuring out a method of election, Brown said.

"It is essential that interim council members prepare legislation for a method of election by the time the General Assembly meets in February," Brown said.

Brown also suggested that, while the Justice Department decides on the fate of consolidation, consideration be given to the length of service for board members.

"I think board members should serve for four years. Six years is too long and two is too short. I think the board will be more effective once this is decided," Brown said.

Airport ...

50 percent increase over the present budget.

James G. Turcotte, airport manager, told council members that county commissioners claim the airport should be able to sustain operating costs on its own.

"They say, based on the success we've had in the past year, we should be self-sufficient," Turcotte said. "We have an operating budget of $300,000 and we're asking for a total of $120,000 to add to what we can earn."

Turcotte said the growth of the airport has created a need for more money to cover operating costs.

"We plan to be open 30 percent more of the time, and we need professional people if we're going to handle Piedmont's larger aircraft," he said.

In other action on the proposed budget, the council agreed to a 10 percent cut in scheduled funding to update the comprehensive plan, to revise the zoning ordinance and to conduct a historic properties inventory. Council members proposed to cut the money allocated for the studies from $50,000 to $45,000.

Ms. Meeks said the council has asked the Mid-East Commission, a regional planning agency for the area, to conduct the comprehensive plan update and the historic properties inventory rather than contract private planners.

Mid-East should be able to do the studies at a lower cost, according to Ms. Meeks.

The proposed budget will be presented at a public hearing Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall.

But stores such as Kroger's that stock items that couldn't be sold under the blue law will not be restricted in what they can sell after 1 p.m.

Other stores may join the list of Sunday openers in the future. The Piece Goods Shop at Greenville Square may be open next Sunday.

One manager said his store will join the list at Thanksgiving.

Another, who asked not to be identified, suggested that many merchants are taking a "wait and see attitude ... evaluating their manpower needs" before deciding on Sunday opening.

Experts

PEKING (AP) — More than 10,000 foreign experts worked in China last year, and the government plans to increase the number over the next five years, the English-language China Daily newspaper said Saturday.

The newspaper did not say how many experts the government plans to invite.

Porno Charge

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — The author of a best-selling novel said he has been charged with publishing pornography because of the novel's descriptions of sexual intercourse and sexual fantasies.

Ahmet Altan, author of the bestselling novel "Sudaki Iz" ("Trace in the Water"), said he was ordered to stand trial July 22. It was the first case of its kind since the government set up a special anti-obsenity committee in March.

If convicted, Altan faces a fine of up to $16,600, a significant amount in a country where average income is $1,000.

OCEANSIDE, N.Y. (AP) — A 14-year-old boy set himself afire while lighting a barbecue, but jumped into a swimming pool to extinguish the flames, police said.

Christopher Joyce touched a lighted match to gasoline-soaked coals, not realizing he had spilled gasoline on himself, said police Officer Edward Weisinger. The youth saved himself from further injury by jumping into a swimming pool.

PCB Suit Is Settled

RALEIGH (AP) — A civil suit filed by state and federal authorities has ended with a Raleigh man and three businesses agreeing to pay more than $3.3 million for the clean-up of PCB-laden oil dumped along North Carolina roads in 1978.

In a consent judgement signed by U.S. District Judge Earl Britt, Robert E. "Buck" Ward Jr. and Ward Transformer Co. Inc. of Morrisville, the company he once ran, agreed to pay $3.17 million to reimburse the state and federal governments.

Norry Electric Co. of Chicago and Liberty Motor and Machinery Co. of Rochester, N.Y., which did business with Ward Transformer, agreed to pay $155,175 and $13,988 respectively.

The Environmental Protection Agency and the Army used $2.8 million from the federal superfund to remove the PCB-contaminated soil, scooped up from 241 miles of highways and at Fort Bragg. The dirt was buried in a Warren County landfill in 1982.

The state will receive $487,000 to cover costs of investigating the dumping and buying the land in Warren County, where the soil was buried, the judgement said.

The state and federal governments agreed to a three-year payment schedule so that Ward Transformer would remain "a viable business," said Thomas F. Moffitt, special deputy attorney general. "The state of North Carolina had no interest in putting Ward out of business."

N. Pitt ...

Pitt was discovered early Friday morning after a motorist passing the school saw flames coming from a pickup truck and reported the fire.

That led officers to discover that the truck had been driven into the building through the doors at the south end of the school's main corridor, then along the hallway and back out of the building through the doors at the north end of the building.

The truck had also been driven into a screening wall of a fieldhouse dressing room located about 50 feet from the north end of the building before the vehicle had been set afire.

"They drove through the doors at one end of the building, down the hall through the building, and out the other end," Tyson said, "then into the side of the dressing room" where the force of the impact "cracked the brick wall."

Tyson said whoever was driving the truck "stopped the vehicle midway of the hall" and broke into several rooms, including the principal's office, before continuing the journey through the school.

While nothing was reported taken, Tyson said several of the rooms were vandalized.

Also while stopped in the school, several shots were fired into the gas tank area of the truck in an apparent effort to start a fire. But it wasn't until after the vehicle was driven to the outside that it was successfully set afire.

At first officials thought the vandalism had been done by one or more disgruntled students.

But Tyson said once officers began their investigation it was learned that the truck had been stolen the night of June 10 from a telephone company in Maryland ... just north of Washington, D.C. "There's a strike on up there and they're having a lot of trouble," Tyson said.

"We're working with Maryland authorities on it (and) weighing everything," Tyson said.

School Superintendent Eddie West estimated the damage to the school at $35,000 and said insurance company adjusters are scheduled to check the damage Monday so repairs can get under way.

West said school employees cleaned up the glass and other debris "so there would be no safety problems" for students reporting to school for the last day of the year Friday. "They put up plywood" to seal the ends of the corridors where the outside doors and door frames had been torn down.

Carl Heath, chief of maintenance for the school system, said "they took down three doors on the south end and two out of the north (end) and caused damage to everything" along the hall.

He said since maintenance crews will begin their scheduled summer repairs to all school buildings in the coming week, it may be several weeks before the damage at North Pitt is fixed. But he said "the outside of the building is closed up now."

County Schools Graduate Seniors

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Approximately 650 high school seniors dressed in caps and gowns received diplomas in area graduation ceremonies Friday evening.

Commencement exercises were held on the athletic fields of Ayden-Grifton, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central and North Pitt high schools at 8 p.m.

At Ayden-Grifton High School's ceremony, senior Curtis Clay Tucker told graduates, "To make (our) achievements a reality, we must believe in ourselves and have faith. However, faith and belief are not enough to be successful. Hard work and dedication are necessary.

"We must never sell ourselves short by giving 'half-way' effort, but we must always give all our effort and work to our fullest," Tucker said. "We have lived long enough already to realize that the door to success is labeled 'push.'"

Ayden-Grifton speaker Wendy Sutton Wooten thanked those people responsible for for the accomplishments of the graduates.

She said, "Most of all, we extend our thanks to our parents. They have taught us many valued lessons we could never learn in a classroom. They have been there to congratulate us on our successes and encourage us to try harder when we have failed.

"How many times have our mothers baked cakes or cookies for parties or ironed the perfect outfit on the spur of the moment for a special occasion? And how many times have our fathers left work early to see us perform at various events or gathered 'the gang' to take us all to out-of-town sporting events? They have sacrificed their free time for us when they could have enjoyed an evening at home. For all these impositions, we are grateful, and words can never express our appreciation," she said.

Speaking to the audience at the commencement at D.H. Conley High School, valedictorian Michele Halby said, "We've grown a lot since we first walked down these halls. We'll always be together in spirit though we go our separate ways. The love we share with each other will never die, but is cast in the many fond memories we'll keep alive in our hearts."

Michele Deal, Conley's salutatorian, told graduates, "True happiness may be achieved when one can be his own leader. Much strength can be found in personal satisfaction. A true leader will speak his truth and yet listen to others.

"We must not compare ourselves with others, for there will always be greater and lesser persons than ourselves," she said.

Graduates of Farmville Central High School were told by salutatorian Cherry Flake that, "There are no guarantees in life except those things we guarantee ourselves. Insuring our future is no easy task, but it can be accomplished. Self-confidence is the key to ambition. Once we believe in ourselves, we can put our goals and priorities into perspective. By setting realistic standards for ourselves, we can achieve anything.

"Arise, go forth and conquer," Miss Flake told the school's graduating class. She challenged them to set goals, determine dreams and be willing to work.

"We as graduates have grown academically and spiritually and we have matured over these past four years at Farmville Central," said the school's validictorian, Tama May. "Hopefully the knowledge and experience gained over these past years will enable each of us to succeed and find happiness in our endeavors.

"We have left an impression on Farmville Central High School and now it is time to leave our impression on the world," she said.

At the graduation exercises at North Pitt High School, valedictorian Peggy Jenkins told the graduates, "Tonight marks the end of our high school days, and yet this ceremony is called commencement. And, in truth, this evening we do commence to lead different lives from those we enjoyed before. Each of us graduates starts a new phase of life tonight.

"Whether you are continuing your formal education, going into the armed forces or entering the job market tomorrow, you should assume total control of your destiny," she said.

Speaking on success, North Pitt's salutatorian Scott Rawls said, "We have completed but one small section of the puzzle of our success. We have proved by our presence here tonight that we have achieved a measure of success already. However, our high school years are now behind us, and we must face the challenges of the adult world.

"Let us enter that world with opportunistic visions," Rawls said, "not forgetting the ones who have striven so diligently to aid us in reaching our goals, but building upon our foundation and completing the framework."

BREAKING AWAY — Twelve years of hard work were summed up as about 650 seniors received diplomas Friday night at Ayden-Grifton, D.H. Conley, Farmville Central and North Pitt high schools. Group Studies Need Of Shelter For Homeless

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

After it had been open one year — Dec. 15, 1984 — the Zion Shelter and Kitchen of Washington, N.C., issued the following report:

"Prior to our opening, there were known to be 10 to 12 men sleeping in abaondoned buildings and some even in packing boxes. In addition, the Health Department was receiving many complaints of hunger from their clients. Today we have no reports of similar conditions.

"Zion Shelter has housed over 4,600 persons, providing them a dry safe place to sleep with toilet, bathing and laundry facilities. This has included others with children, families and single persons.

"Zion Kitchen has served over 16,000 hot, nourishing meals to hungry people in the area. These have included meals taken out to sick and elderly persons not eligible for the Council on Aging's 'Food for Folks' program.

"When Zion Shelter and Kitchen opened, an average of 10 persons per night sought shelter. In October and November of this year, the average rose to 16 and during the first weeks of December, the average has reached 25. The last two weeks of December 1984, our daily meal service was 33, while the kitchen now is serving an average of 55 hot meals a day.

"This work of love has been made possible by over 1,900 volunteers from more than 25 different churches working together and generous donations of food and money from all sectors of the community."

Does Greenville want and need a service similar to that of its neighbor, Washington, for its homeless?

Yes, say the members of a committee which has met several times to plan such a shelter. Dick Welch, a leader of the group, has contacted various officials in the community.

Police Chief Ted Holmes said he cannot estimate how many homeless people there are in Greenville on any given night. "You never will know how much of a need there is until you have the shelter," he said. "Then we'll find out very quickly."

He said his officers often find people sleeping in abandoned buildings, under warehouses and in wooded areas of the city. "There must be many more we don't find," he said. "The police department could certainly use a shelter like this to refer people to. We'd use it if we had it."

Who are the homeless? Most of them are adult males. Many are substance abusers. Some hold part time jobs, but most are unemployed. Many have families in the city, but for various reasons are not willing or not allowed to stay in their families' homes. "They're 'the least of these' Jesus talked about," Welch said. "And we want to do what we can to help them."

City Manager Gail Meeks said the city will probably not have any input into providing a shelter. "The city is typically not in the human services business," she said. "I've had one discussion with Mr. Welch. He's asked about leasing a facility the city owns. Right now it's being leased by another organization, but we're looking into how much longer it might be needed. Other than this, I know of nothing the city can do."

The shelter planners are delighted that the Pope John XXIII Soup Kitchen is already providing food to the destitute during all but the summer months. Community volunteers, led by Gloria Chestang, the kitchen's founder, serve soup and sandwiches and sometimes dessert at Mount Hermon Masonic Lodge each week day.

"It looks as if most of the real support for this effort, if it's to get off the ground, is going to have to come from the churches," Welch said. "We're going to ask each of the churches to give us the names of people in their congregations who would like to spend time and energy on a project like this.

"We've got to raise money and we've got to locate really committed volunteer workers. We may even have to redo a building. We don't want it fancy , but we want it warm and safe and accessible — open every night once it's started."

Karen Akers, a member of the committee, said, "If Washington and Rocky Mount and other nearby towns can do it, Greenville can too. The committee would like to hear from persons who would like to take an active part."

"It's not a sure thing by any means at this point," Welch said. "This is a big effort that's going to need a lot of work. If there isn't sufficient sustained interest, we shouldn't start. We need to hear how people feel."

Anyone who would like to help may call Mrs. Akers at the Bread for the World office at the Methodist Student Center, 758-2030.

Hail Damage Reported

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms that pelted southeastern North Carolina twice during the last week of May caused nearly $5 million in damage to crops in Sampson, Columbus and Robeson counties, agricultural officials said.

Although such springtime storms are common, officials said the hail May 25 and 30 had caused an unusual amount of damage.

The storms had damaged about 140 farms in Columbus County, officials said.

"We never had this large an area hit," said Garland D. McCullen, chairman of the Columbus Agricultural Extension Service.

Farmers reported damage totaling nearly $2 million to about 12,000 acres of tobacco, corn and produce crops, said R. Coke Gray, director of the county's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Town Mourn's Soldier's Death

ELLERBE, N.C. (AP) — Staff Sgt. James Goins' death in the terrorist bombing of a West Berlin discotheque will not have been in vain if his sacrifice helps prevent future terrorist acts, a speaker at his funeral said Saturday.

"If anything is to come of this, it's the hope of the family and the hope of James that this will not continue to happen to our country," said Felton Capel, Goins' cousin and mayor protem of Southern Pines.

"This was the result not of (American) hostility, but the result of free men not being able to assemble together. If James' sacrifice helps prevent this from happening again, he won't have died in vain," Capel said.

Goins, 26, a native of Ellerbe, never regained consciousness from the April 5 bombing of the La Belle discotheque which U.S. intelligence officials linked to Libyan terrorists. Both his legs were amputated before he died June 6 in a West Berlin hospital.

Goins, who was awarded the Purple Heart, will be buried Tuesday in Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Three people died in the nightclub bombing. Sgt. Kenneth Ford, 21, of Detroit and Nermine Henay, 27, a Turkish woman, were killed instantly. Authorities said 230 people were injured.

Two-hundred people, many waving fans to counter the June heat, crowded into St. Luke's Free Will Baptist Church, a red brick building in the middle of a sandy field.

Goins' wife, Patrocinia, was overcome with sobbing when the flag-draped coffin was opened, and again when soldiers from Fort Bragg's 18th Airborne Corps fired a 21-gun salute and played taps on a bugle. Their 5-year-old son, Carlos, wore his father's ribbons and wiped tears off his mother's face.

At one point, Mrs. Goins, sobbing "Oh, God, oh, God," had to be supported by relatives and by the U.S. Army officer escorting her. Relatives crowded around her, using paper fans to cool her and offering water. Later, she was supported as ushers who lifted a cloth off the coffin; she bent and wept over her husband's body.

Capel, speaking on behalf of family members, said they prayed this would not happen to other families.

"Through the media, we have seen our embassies, our trains and our planes subjected to this. But we never really feel the impact until it comes home to us," he said as people interrupted with 'Amen.'

Goins' father, Mack, a retired textile worker, sat stoically throughout the ceremony with Goins' stepmother, Julia.

Occupancy Tax Law Unlikely

RALEIGH (AP) — Several legislators scurrying to get their local occupancy tax bills passed during this short session are predicting the demise of a statewide tax measure even before its introduction.

"I don't think that bill (for a statewide occupancy tax) will pass," Rep. Robert Hunter, D-McDowell, said last week. "I haven't heard any support for it."

Hunter has filed a bill seeking a 3 percent tax on motel and hotel room receipts to spark tourism in McDowell County. He said a statewide tax for general use by a county is not the best way to help counties boost revenues.

"It (the tax) can be of much greater use to the county if it can be used for tourism," he said.

"From what I'm hearing there's a lot of opposition to the statewide occupancy tax," said Sen. James Ezzell, D-Nash.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, led a study panel which has recommended a statewide occupancy tax of up to 3 percent, with receipts going to each county for general use.

Sixteen North Carolina cities and counties already have occupancy taxes in place, including eight enacted by the 1983 General Assembly, six passed in 1984 and two last year.

Those cities and counties are: Mecklenburg, Buncombe, Haywood, Forsyth, New Hanover, Cherokee, Craven, Cumberland, Guilford, Dare and Iredell counties; and the towns of Topsail Beach, Ocean Isle Beach, Surf City, Long Beach and Lumberton.

Rauch said he would introduce a bill during the current session based on his committee's report.

"I'm a strong believer in home rule," Rauch said. "I take the position that local councilmen and county commissioners know better about where the money should be spent" than the Legislature.

"This will eliminate all this need for running to Raleigh and putting in a bill," Rauch added.

Friday Named Fund Leader

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Former University of North Carolina System president William Friday and University of Houston President Charles E. Bishop have been named to new positions related to the UNC system.

Frank H. Kenan, trustee of the William R. Kenan Charitable trust of New York, announced that Friday had been elected president of the new William R. Kenan Fund. Kenan was elected chairman of the fund to be headquartered on the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill campus.

Friday said in a telephone interview Friday that the new Kenan Fund's primary job is to nuture the development of the Institute for Private Enterprise on the Chapel Hill campus.

The institute studies and does research in and around private enterprise, Friday said. It will be housed in the new $8 million Kenan Center on the Chapel Hill campus.

Bishop, vice president of the UNC system from 1966 to 1970 and president of the University of Houston since 1980, will become special assistant to the provost in September.

Bishop "brings knowledge of the state, expertise in economic development and superb administrative experience to his new assignment," said Provost Samuel R. Williamson Jr.

Flight Planned

MORRISVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A supersonic Concorde airliner will fly from Raleigh-Durham Airport to London via New York City in September in the first international flight for RDU, according to officials.

The airliner, chartered from British Airways at a cost of $100,000, will carry 100 passengers to London as part of a special eight-day package American Travel is offering, said John C. Brantley III, who is director of the airport and a representative of American Travel.

The cost of the trip starts at $2,475. Harold Panel, vice president of American Travel, said half the seats had been reserved.

Brantley said the Sept. 23 flight would christen a new age for the airport and that to have it be the "first international flight to go out of Raleigh-Durham is a real key for us."

American Airlines plans to open the hub at RDU in July 1987 and include international flights by 1989.

"We feel it's time this area had its spectacular event and honored the opening of the 10,000-foot runway and the new hub for American Airlines," said George Newsome, American Travel president.

Trevino, Sutton Stalk The Shark

Raz-z-z-berry

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — With one angry scowl, Greg Norman found no contest from a couple of unruly fans at the 86th U.S. Open Saturday. But with one bad hole, he found a lot of contest to his hopes of running away with the tournament.

Norman, a hook-nosed Australian, is a muscular 6-foot-1, 185 pounds, and once was described as looking "like the guy they always hire to kill James Bond."

So when he offered to meet some abusive spectators after the round for a more intimate discussion of their opinions, they backed off and apologized.

And Norman went on about his business, regaining his composure and sole control of the third-round lead, one stroke ahead of 46-year-old Lee Trevino and former PGA champ Hal Sutton, with 11 other players within four shots. Seven more, including Jack Nicklaus, were no more than two shots further back.

"We weren't at a football, soccer or hockey match. Something like that can ruin a good day for a golfer," Norman said. "Generally, the gallery was pretty good.

"There were 16,500 golf fans out there and about 200 jackasses who think they can say what they want to say," Norman said.

In this case, it was "a couple of guys who obviously had too much to drink ... and thought they had the right to say anything they wanted to," he said.

What they said was "You're choking, Greg, you're choking," after he made a double bogey and blew a three-shot lead on the 13th hole.

Norman had had enough.

"I'm not the kind of guy to take that sort of stuff very long," said the man known as "the Great White Shark."

He began searching for them in the gallery, spotted them, stalked to the ropes separating the crowd from the players, shook his finger at them and said:

"If you want to say that, say it after we're done, so I can do something about it."

Another time or place, Norman said, and "maybe he (the fan) would have had a face full of fingers."

The case was closed.

And Norman, obviously angered, calmed down and went on to reclaim sole possession of the top spot when playing partner Trevino made bogey from a bunker on the 18th hole.

There were no further incidents, though as Norman stood over a putt on the 16th, someone shouted, "This is New York. You've got to expect an abusive crowd."

"There's no reason for them to yell those sort of things," Norman said.

Whatever the reason — Norman said one fan alluded to losing yachting's America's Cup to Australia in 1983 — the crowd seemed to do what the competitors couldn't: break Norman's concentration.

Norman, who lost to the rejuvenated Nicklaus on the last day of the Masters, had a four-stroke lead with 27 holes to play and still led by three going to No. 13.

Then it happened.

Norman drove into the rough, ran his second shot through the green and down a slope, chipped back through the green again, chipped to four feet, then missed the putt for a double bogey.

Trevino tapped in a one-foot birdie putt and went stalking off the green — biting his lips to keep back a smile — with a share of the lead.

The tie didn't last, but Sunday suddenly shape up as a showdown — and a crowded one, at that.

After a day when fickle Shinnecock Hills gave up 17 subpar rounds including competitive course record-tying 66s by Sutton and Mike Reid, no one was under par.

Only Norman, at 210 after Saturday's 1-over 71, was even. Trevino, seeking a third Open title at age 46, closed with a 1-under 69, his second straight subpar round.

First-round leader Bob Tway, who scored his second victory of the PGA Tour season last week, had a 69 that put him at 212, only two shots off the lead.

Ray Floyd fought his way to a round of par 70 and led a group of five at 213, three off the pace. Also at that figure were South African Denis Watson, Mark McCumber, Reid and Payne Stewart, who seems to always play his best in the major events.

McCumber shot 68, Stewart 69 and Watson 71.

Tom Watson, the five-time British Open title-holder, remained in the title chase even though he didn't make a birdie in a round of 71. He was tied at 214 with Ben Crenshaw and West German Bernhard Langer, both former Masters champions, and Scott Verplank and Lennie Clements.

Verplank, playing his first tournament as a pro, and Clements each had a 67 in the massive assault on par. Crenshaw holed a 5-iron second shot for an eagle-2 on his way to a 69. And Langer was at 70.

Even Nicklaus, who started the day 10 shots out of the lead, had renewed hope for a record fifth Open title, although he was still six back.

He now has improved five strokes each day, from 77 in Thursday's wet and cold misery to 72 Friday to 3-under 67 Saturday, and he said, "I need to improve five more shots on Sunday and I'll be just fine. I suppose I'll have to shoot a mid-60s round to have a chance."

Seve Ballesteros of Spain was tied with Nicklaus at 216 after a 2-under 68 that included a double bogey on the 17th hole.

They were longshots at best.

Norman, twice a runnerup but yet to be a winner in any of golf's four major championships, still had to be beaten.

The double bogey was his only real mistake, and he showed on No. 18 that it would take more than one bad hole to keep him from atoning for his 1984 Open playoff loss to Fuzzy Zoeller.

"I've never seen a man playing as well as Norman is now. ... He could run away and hide. If he keeps on playing like this, nobody is going to catch him," Nicklaus said.

Norman, who has won twice and finished second twice in his last five tournaments, was threatening to run away with the Open over the front side.

He holed a very long putt, perhaps 50 feet or more, for a birdie on the eighth hole and reached the turn in 33.

Trevino could do no better than match par over the front and, at that point, trailed by five shots.

But Norman missed the green and bogeyed the 10th, cutting the margin to four.

Trevino, one of the most popular players the game has ever known, went into a happy little middle-aged trot when he dropped a 25-30 foot birdie putt on the 11th that cut the lead to three.

It stood that way, with the gallery cheering Trevino and occasional taunts being directed at Norman, until the 13th.

Norman, his sun-bleached white hair gleaming, drove into knee-high rough on the right.

He gouged it out, the ball running through the green and far down a bank, still in deep rough.

Norman chipped back too strongly, the ball running through the green into light rough. He chipped back to about four feet and missed the putt for a double bogey.

Trevino, meanwhile, had lashed a second shot to within tap-in distance

Practice Round? Who Needs It?

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Hal Sutton didn't need a practice round at rugged Shinnecock Hills to become a threat to capture the 86th U.S. Open.

Sutton, who has won the Memorial and Phoenix tournaments on the PGA Tour this year, didn't arrive in time to play the 6,912-yard course prior to Thursday's opening round — in which he shot a 5-over-par 75 in the rain, wind and cold.

However, Sutton, the 1983 PGA champion, got the overall picture of the tricky course.

He improved to a 70 on Friday, and tied the competitive course record with a 4-under-par 66 on Saturday. His 54-hole score of 211 tied him for second with Lee Trevino, just a shot behind leader Greg Norman.

"It's a great course and I'm happy to be where I am," Sutton said. "The course gave up maybe a few more birdies today."

Sutton went out in even-par 35, but had a 4-under-par 31 on the back nine.

"Starting on the back nine, I really putted well," Sutton said. "I was a late mover, but at least I did move finally. I knew that as long as I stayed 5-over (in the first round) and made a few birdies I'd be all right."

Sutton added: "I don't think 66 is a particularly low score on this golf course."

Sutton's irons kept his birdie putts at point-blank range. His 12-footer on the 17th hole was the longest putt he made for birdie.

Boyette Is All-Academic

Stacey Boyette, named earlier this spring as the Daily Reflector's Female Collegiate Athlete of the Year, has been named to the 1986 Academic All-America softball team.

The selection of Boyette, a pitcher on the East Carolina University team, marks the third straight year she has been accorded the all-Academic honors.

The Hopewell, Va., native graduated this spring with a major in chemistry with a 3.9 average.

The team is selected annually by the College Sports Information Directors of American (CoSIDA) under the sponsorship of GTE. All those selected must be starters or key reserves and maintain a minimum grade point average of 3.2.

Boyette was selected as the only pitcher on the first team, which includes nine other players.

No other player was chosen from the state of North Carolina.

Colonial Turns In Fine Record In Its First Year

The Colonial Athletic Association has recently completed its first year of existance.

Of course, it's not entirely all new. The eight teams that made up the old ECAC-South split away from the parent organization last May to form the CAA, an independent conference organization.

In the year since then, they've hired their first commissioner, former NCAA investigator Tom Yeager, and first head of officials, Dan Woolridge, a former whistle-man on the courts.

In the short year since that June 6, 1985 resolution that set the Colonial apart from the ECAC, a lot has been accomplished. The conference has been awarded several automatic berths into NCAA play, such as in men's basketball, baseball and soccer. It has set up a central office and crowned 12 league champions.

"We've ad some significant accomplishments both through hard work and a little luck," Yearger said.

"Getting an automatic bid (in basketball) is a paramount objective for any conference, certainly a new one," the commissioner added. "It establishes your identity with other conferences, gives you a measure of respectibility, and gives your teams incentive.

"The basketball bid was our main objective from day one. Receiving it was the payoff to a lot of hard work by the league's athletic directors. It was a big boost to our credibility."

Not only did the league get the automatic bid into the tournament, filled by the U.S. Naval Academy — and premier star David Robinson — but the league also had runner-up Richmond picked as an at-large team in the NCAA and George Mason was picked for the National Invitational Tournament.

The Midshipmen defeated Tulsa, Syracuse and Cleveland State before finally losing to Duke University in the Eastern Regional finals. Navy's win marked the sixth time in a row that a team from the old ECAC-South or the CAA has advanced past the first round in the tournament.

Richmond fell to Atlantic-10 champ St. Joseph in a one-point game in the first round while George Mason downed Lamar before losing to Providence in the second round.

"We were happy knowing in advance that we would have one team playing in the NCAA tournament," Yeager said. "We were ecstatic with three teams in post-season competition."

Robinson, an All-American selection averaged 22 points, 13 rebounds and six blocked shots per game, leading the nation in the latter category. In fact, he blocked more shots alone than all but one team — Louisville — in the entire Division I.

And Robinson will be back as a senior next season. "A young man of his stature is a rarity. We're fortunate he's with us," Yeager said.

Another all-American appeared in American soccer star Michael Brady. He was named the collegiate Player of the Year by SoccerAmerica magazine and Adidas gave him its Adi Dasler Award, also recognizing him as player of the year.

He also joined George Mason's Sam Sumo and Mike Reynolds on the National Soccer Coaches Association of America's first team all-America list, naming American's Pete Mehlert as the coach of the year.

American advanced to the NCAA finals before finally losing a 1-0 battle with UCLA for the title in the longest game in tourmament history. The contest went eight overtimes before finally being decided.

George Mason, also in the NCAA soccer field topped Virginia in the first round, but then lost to American.

In men's cross-country, Navy won the league title and went on to finish seventh in the NCAA meet. Richmond topped regular season winner East Carolina in the CAA baseball tournament to advance to the Midwest Regional in Stillwater, Oklahoma.

In women's basketball, champion James Madison advanced into the NCAA tournament and twice won, including a shocker over the East Regional's top seed Virginia.

Among individuals who stood out nationally were William & Mary's Ken Halla, who won the league cross-country title and placed 18th in the NCAA meet; William & Mary's Namratha Appa Rao won the women's singles title and went 1-1 in the NCAA field; James Madison's Ingrid Hetz and Chris Gillies advanced to the NCAA tournament in women's doubles tennis; and George Mason's cross-country runner Carol Parietti competed in the women's NCAA meet.

Overall, the Colonial crowned seven men's and five women's championship teams this year. Seven of the eight members of the conference came away with at least one championship.

And Richmond's John David showed that it wasn't all athletics as he won a post-graduate NCAA scholarship and became a Rhodes Scholar candidate.

"We may not always have a soccer team go to the national finals and basketball teams go that far in the NCAA tournament," Yeager said. "But we should always have our share of successes. Maybe our baseball champipn will advance in the NCAA's, maybe we'll get a basketball team to the NIT at the Garden."

"We can't control performances on the court or the field. But we can provide our teams with a positive atmosphere for competition. We can try for another automatic bid, we can work to increase attendance at our basketball tournament. We can offer to host an NCAA championship or a regional tournament."

The CAA has begun work on trying to offer a better atmosphere for basketball. Next year's — and those in 1988 and 1989 — basketball tournament will be held at the Hampton Coliseum. And the league has already reached an agreement with Home Team Sports for a third season of basketball coverage.

The hiring of an officials' director, the move to Hampton for the basketball tournament, a proposed move to Richmond's The Diamond for baseball, and the HTS television contract are just single steps in making the Colonial an attractive package.

"It just gives us the opportunity to show more and more people in our region, and sometimes in other parts of the nation, just how good we really are," Yeager said.

"And that's the whole idea."

Richmond's Record Dash Takes Miller 400's Pole

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Tim Richmond led an assault on the record books Saturday, winning the pole position for the Miller High Life 400 stock car race with a Michigan International Speedway-record qualifying speed of 172.031 mph.

Richmond, 31, of Ashland, Ohio captured the pole position for Sunday's race after taking his Chevrolet around the two-mile oval in 41.853 seconds. It was the second time this season that Richmond posted the top qualifying speed and sixth time in 14 outings that he has been in the front row.

Richmond was among 31 of 41 starting drivers whose time trial speeds exceeded the former record of 165.479 set last season by Bill Elliott of Dawsonville, Ga.

Runner-up in the starting field was Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N.C., with a clocking of 171.367 in an Oldsmobile.

In the second row are Harry Gant of Taylorsville, N.C., in a Chevrolet at 171.111 and Geoff Bodine of Julian, N.C., in a Chevrolet at 170.798.

Elliott, the defending Miller 400 champion, had to settle for eighth place with a speed of 170.394.

Richard Petty, the biggest winner in stock car racing history with 200 victories, will make the 1,000th start of his 28-year career in 15th place after recording a speed of 168.887 in a Pontiac.

In the worst of two accidents during Saturday's time trials, Rick Baldwin of Martinsville, Va., hit the wall between turns one and two and suffered head and neck injuries.

He was taken to W.A. Foote Memorial Hospital in Jackson, where he was listed in critical condition.

Mark Stahl of San Diego, Calif., also hit the wall in the same place but was uninjured.

Coca-Cola.....8
Sportsworld.....4

All Sportsworld had to do was beat Coca-Cola Saturday to wrap up the North State Little League title.

But Coke came up with an 8-4 victory and postponed Sportsworld's celebration until at least Tuesday. Any Sportsworld win or a loss by either Coke or the Optimists will give the title to the league leaders.

The loss, too, was the first in 14 games for Sportsworld this season.

Sportsworld jumped into the lead in the first inning, scoring twice on a homer by Jay Kuykendall. Sportsworld added one in the second but Coke came up with two in the top of the third, then scored two in the fourth for a 4-3 lead. Sportsworld tied it at 4-4 with one in the bottom of the inning.

Coke then took the lead with four runs in the sixth, wrapping up the win. Steve Salagaro walked as did Gene Brown. Hollis Gunn reached on a feidler's choice that was errored, allowing Saragaro to score. Mark Taylor walked and Alex Darden hit into a fielder's choice that got Brown at the plate. Robert Barnes was hit by a pitch, scoring Gunn, and Ron Clemons walked, forcing in Taylor. A wild pitch then allowed Darden to score for the 8-4 lead.

No one on either team had more than one hit.

Pepsi-Cola.....10
Wellcome 2

Will MacKenzie picked up two hits, one of them an inside-the-park home run, as Pepsi-Cola rolled up a 10-2 victory over Wellcome in the Tar Heel Little League Saturday.

Wellcome struck first, getting a run in the first inning. But they were not to score again until the sixth — and it was out of reach then.

Pepsi got its first run in the second, tying the score at 1-all.

Then, in the third, Pepsi pushed over seven runs to put the game out of reach. Geoff Stallings led off with a single and stole second. Jon Garigan walked and Richie Grimsley also walked, loading the bases. Chuck Williams doubled in the first two runs of the inning and a fielder's choice let Grimsley in. Williams scored on a wild pitch.

MacKenzie kept it going with his home run and Dante Mayo followed with a double. Josh Burns brought in Mayo with another double, moving up on an out and scoring on a wild pitch.

Pepsi added one each in the fifth and sixth.

Stallings, Grimsley, Mayo and Burns also had two hits for Pepsi. Will Pleasants and Josh Potter each had two hits for Wellcome.

Optimists-Union Carbide

The North State Little League game between the Optimists and Union Carbide was rained out in the second inning of a scoreless game Saturday.

It has been rescheduled for Elm Street Park on Saturday at noon.

Exchange-Moose

The game between the Moose and Exchange was halted after two innings because of rain in Tar Heel League action Saturday.

The rain washed away a 18-0 lead the Moose had built up during the first two frames as the game will be started over from the first when play gets back underway on Saturday at noon at Guy Smith Little League field.

Kerfeld Placed On 15-Day List

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros placed right-handed relief pitcher Charlie Kerfeld on the 15-day disabled list Saturday after Kerfeld suffered discomfort while throwing prior to a game against the San Francisco Giants.

Kerfeld has a 5-1 record and two saves for the Astros with a 1.88 earned run average. He had been bothered by a sprained medial collateral ligament in his right elbow.

The Astros recalled left-hander Jeff Calhoun from their Triple AAA affiliate in Tucson to replace Kerfeld on the roster. Calhoun began the season with the Astros, going 0-0 with a 1.54 ERA in 11 2-3 innings. At Tucson, Calhoun was 0-2 with a 4.91 ERA.

Fernandez Quiets Pirates

NEW YORK (AP) — Sid Fernandez pitched a three-hitter, retiring 26 of the final 28 batters, as the New York Mets defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1 Saturday for their fourth straight victory and seventh in the last eight games.

Fernandez, 7-2, defeated the Pirates for the second time in a week, having beaten them 4-3 last Sunday. The 23-year old left-hander struck out six and allowed only one walk.

The Mets scored all five runs in the fifth inning when 10 men went to bat. Four hits, three walks, two errors and a wild pitch figured in the scoring. Mike Bielecki, 4-4, was charged with all five runs over 4 1-3 innings, and he struck out three and walked four.

Pittsburgh scored in the first inning as Barry Bonds walked, stole second, took third on Rafael Belliard's single and raced home on Mike Brown's sacrifice fly. Following Belliard's single, Fernandez retired 16 batters in a row, before allowing a single to Bonds.

In the Mets' fifth, Len Dykstra, Wally Backman and Keith Hernandez had RBI singles. Another run scored on catcher Tony Pena's throwing error into center field and a fifth on third baseman Jim Morrison's error on an attempted pickoff of Len Dykstra.

Cincinnati 2
Atlanta 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Cincinnati's Eric Davis led off the ninth inning with a single and eventually scored on an error by Atlanta third baseman Rafael Ramirez, giving the Reds a 2-1 victory over the Braves Saturday.

Davis' hit came off Paul Assenmacher, 2-2, the Braves' fourth pitcher. After going to second on Buddy Bell's sacrifice, Davis stole his 17th base of the season and scored when catcher Ozzie Virgil's throw bounced off Ramirez' glove, 15 feet behind third base.

Ron Robinson, 4-0, was the winner, pitching 2 1-3 scoreless innings. He got out of a two-on jam in ther seventh and a bases-loaded threat in the eighth.

John Franco relieved Robinson with one out in the ninth and runners on first and second. Franco got pinch hitter Terry Harper to bounce into a double play, earning his 10th save of the season.

The Braves went ahead 1-0 in the fourth when Omar Moreno doubled, was sacrificed to third by Ken Oberkfell and scored on a single by Dale Murphy.

The Reds tied the score in the fifth when Bo Diaz led off with a walk, went to third on Ron Oester's double and scored as pitcher Mario Soto grounded out.

Soto pitched six innings, allowing five hits while striking out five and walking one. Atlanta starter Joe Johnson went 4 1-3 innings, yielding four hits with three strikeouts and one walk.

St. Louis 1
Chicago 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Tom Herr's home run backed the five-hit pitching of Ray Burris and Todd Worrell as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated Chicago 1-0 Saturday, spoiling the debut of Cubs Manager Gene Michael, who was ejected.

Herr's homer, his second of the season, came in the second inning off Scott Sanderson, 3-4. Sanderson then retired 14 batters in a row before he and Michael were ejected in the seventh inning by home plate umpire Eric Gregg.

Sanderson had an 0-and-2 count on leadoff hitter Terry Pendleton when he threw a pitch high and inside, and Gregg reacted.

Both clubs had been warned before the start of the series about throwing at each other because of an incident at St. Louis last week when the Cardinals' Greg Bargar hit Cubs shortstop Shawon Dunston with a pitch.

In the sixth inning, Burris fired a pitch that sent Cubs' catcher Jody Davis to the ground, but Gregg did nothing even though Davis seemed to complain.

But Gregg wasted no time in throwing out Sanderson in the next inning; the manager automatically is ejected under the circumstances. Michael replaced Jim Frey, who was fired as Cubs' manager Thursday.

Sanderson gave up only two hits — Herr's homer and Willie McGee's double in the first.

Burris, 3-2, walked three and struck out three in eight innings. Worrell pitched a hitless ninth for his 11th save.

Burris got out of a bases-loaded jam in the fourth when Dunston flied out.

The victory lifted St. Louis into fifth place in the National League East, ahead of the Cubs, who fell into last place.

Jack In Position For Miracle End

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, inspired by Whitney Houston music blaring from a nearby radio, put himself in position Saturday for a possible Masters-style miracle finish in the 86th U.S. Open.

Nicklaus, who started the day 10 shots behind leader Greg Norman, shot a 3-under par 67 despite a bogey on the 18th hole in the third round. He will start Sunday's final round six strokes behind Norman.

The 46-year-old "Golden Bear," seeking a record fifth U.S. Open title to go with the sixth Masters title he won this spring and a shot at an unprecedented Grand Slam, has improved five shots a day after his opening 77.

He shot 72 on Friday.

"I need to improve five more shots on Sunday and I'll be just fine," Nicklaus said. "I suppose I'll have to shoot a mid-60s round to have a chance. It's all up to how Norman plays."

Nicklaus turned the front nine in 2-under par 33 over treacherous Shinnecock Hills.

His caddy-son, Jackie, told him "now we need 32 on the back nine."

The elder Nicklaus almost obliged.

He three-putted the 12th hole for bogey but made 6-foot birdie putts on the 13th and 14 holes.

Then came the Whitney Houston song.

Nicklaus turned toward the music coming from nearby woods and said "I really like her songs. That's nice."

Then he lashed an 8-iron iron to the green and sank a 22-foot putt for a third consecutive birdie.

Nicklaus hit a bunker with his second shot on the 18th hole for a bogey and 34 on the back nine.

"I'm starting to roll now," Nicklaus said. "However, I've never seen anybody play any better than Norman. But you never know. This IS the U.S. Open and bad breaks can happen fast."

Nicklaus credited touring pro Barry Jaeckel with a practice tee tip late Friday that straighted out his driving.

"Barry felt he knows me well enough to tell me that my stance was too wide," Nicklaus said. "He was right. I narrowed it and started making better use of my legs on my drives. I appreciated him telling me that."

Nicklaus came from four shots back with four holes to go to win the Masters.

He said it could be tougher to do at Shinnecock.

"At Augusta you can drive the ball as hard as you want and not get into much trouble," Nicklaus said. "Here you can get something going, hit a bad drive and have some big problems."

Johnny Vander Meer, who pitched two consecutive no-hitters for the Cincinati Reds in 1938, ran his string of hitless innings to 21 23 before it was broken by Deb Garms of the Boston Braves.

Sutton Bid Fails But Angels Win

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Don Sutton failed in his first try to win his 300th game Saturday, but an eighth-inning homer by Doug DeCinces lifted the California Angels to a 6-5 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

DeCinces drove the first pitch of the inning from reliever Bud Black, 3-4, over the left-center field fence for his eighth homer of the season.

Sutton was replaced by Terry Forster with one out in the seventh inning with the Angels leading 5-4 and the Royals threatening with runners on first and second. Sutton allowed five runs and seven hits, striking out six and walking three.

In the seventh, the 21-year veteran right-hander retired the first batter. But he then walked Willie Wilson, hit Lonnie Smith with a pitch, and had fallen behind 2-0 to Willie Wilson when Forster was brought in. Rudy Law, on the third pitch thrown by Forster, singled home Willie Wilson to tie the game 5-5.

Doug Corbett, 1-1, pitched two scoreless innings in relief to earn the victory.

Kansas City starter Dennis Leonard struck out a season-high 10 in six innings.

The Angels had taken a 5-4 lead on one of several plays disputed by the Royals. With Wally Joyner on second and Brian Downing on first, Reggie Jackson hit a soft fly ball to right-center. Royals center fielder Willie Wilson made a diving try at the ball and thought he caught it. Umpire Dale Ford, however, ruled Wilson had trapped the ball, and Joyner scored to give the Angels their second lead they could not hold.

Down 4-1 after two innings, the Royals had tied the game with three runs in the third. Buddy Biancalana and Lonnie Smith each hit solo homers and Jorge Orta singled home Rudy Law.

The Angels had given Sutton a 3-1 lead in their first at-bat. After Ruppert Jones led off with a single, Wally Joyner hit hit a two-run homer, his 19th of the year. Jackson walked and with two outs, Rob Wilfong singled to center. The ball got past Wilson for an error, allowing Jackson to score.

The Angels added a run in the second on Jones' fifth homer of the season.

Kansas City Manager Dick Howser was ejected from the game in the seventh inning after he vehemently argued with home plate umpire Rich Garcia, who had ruled Jones had been hit by a pitch from Leonard.

Milwaukee.....2
Boston.....0

BOSTON (AP) — Tim Leary and Dan Plesac combined for an eight-hitter, including two bunt singles, in pitching the Milwaukee Brewers to a 2-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

The victory was the second in a week for Leary, 5-5, against the first-place Red Sox.

Rob Deer drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in the second inning and Jim Gantner singled home a run in the seventh, enabling Leary to beat Mike Brown, 4-3.

Brown, beaten by Leary at Milwaukee last Saturday, yielded only six hits, but walked four, before being relieved by Joe Sambito with two out and the bases loaded in the seventh. Sambito ended the inning by striking out Cecil Cooper on three pitches.

Boston threatened against Leary in the sixth when Steve Lyons walked, went to second on Marty Barrett's sacrifice and moved to third on Wade Boggs' ground out. But Bill Buckner grounded out, ending the inning.

Milwaukee scored in the second on singles by Ben Oglivie and Billy Joe Robidoux, a walk and Deer's sacrifice fly.

With two out in the seventh, Dale Sveum singled, took second as Charlie Moore walked and scored on Gantner's single.

Plesac relieved Leary with one out and runners on first and second in the eighth. He walked Barrett to fill the bases, but struck out Boggs, the American League's leading hitter, and retired Buckner on a grounder, ending the threat.

Plesac allowed one hit in 1 2-3 innings in earning his fifth save of the season.

New York.....4
Baltimore.....2

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rickey Henderson hit a solo home run off the left field foul pole with two outs in the seventh inning, giving the New York Yankees a 4-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

Since being swept in a three-game series by Baltimore last weekend, the Yanks have won five of six, including three straight in Memorial Stadium, while the Orioles have gone 1-5.

Henderson, who also walked and scored on a homer by Dave Winfield in the first, connected for his 10th homer after Scott McGregor had retired 12 consecutive batters. The blow gave the Yankees a 3-2 lead and they padded it with Mike Easler's sixth homer of the year leading off the eighth.

Each team scored two runs in the first, with both McGregor, 5-6, and New York's Dennis Rasmussen, 6-2, struggling through the early innings. Dave Righetti, the third Yankee pitcher, relieved in the ninth for his 16th save.

Henderson singled on an 0-2 pitch to open the game and stole two bases, running his American League-leading total to 42, reaching third as Willie Randolph drew a walk.

McGregor started a double-play on a tapper to the mound by Don Mattingly, Henderson holding third, but Winfield drove his 12th homer over the left field fence. Seven of Winfield's last 15 hits have been homers.

Lee Lacy walked with one out in the bottom of the inning, and came around to score on singles by Juan Beniquez and Eddie Murray.

Cal Ripken Jr. singled to load the bases, and Mike Young's sacrifice fly made it 2-2 before Rasmussen retired Floyd Rayford on a foul pop.

Minnesota.....9
Cleveland.....3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Greg Gagne's two-run double snapped an eighth-inning tie and sparked the Minnesota Twins to a 9-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians Saturday.

Gary Gaetti opened the Twins' eighth against Neal Heaton, 3-6, with a line drive towards the warning track in left field. Mel Hall appeared to catch the ball but then dropped it, allowing Gaetti to reach second on the two-base error. Heaton then struck out Tim Laudner and intentionally walked Mickey Hatcher before Scott Bailes came on to retire Billy Beane on a ground ball.

Gagne then lined his game-winning double inside the left field line and the Twins extended their lead to 6-3 when Kirby Puckett singled home Gagne. The Twins added three insurance runs in the ninth on a three-run double by Tim Laudner.

Keith Atherton, 4-3, gained the victory in relief of Mark Portugal, with three scoreless innings of relief.

The loss snapped Cleveland's five-game winning streak and the Twins ended a three-game losing streak.

Minnesota took a 1-0 lead in the first on consecutive singles by Kirby Puckett, Steve Lombardozzi and Kent Hrbek.

But Cleveland went in front 2-1 in the third on an RBI double by Brett Butler and RBI single by Joe Carter. Carter had four hits in four at bats.

Julio Franco doubled and scored on Andy Allanson's fourth-inning single for a 3-1 Indian lead, but the Twins tied the game 3-3 in the fifth as Hrbek singled and scored on Tom Brunansky's 15th home run.

Out At The Plate

California Angel catcher Bob Boone puts the tag on Kansas City Royal Lonnie Smith as he slides into home plate on fielders choice play in the seventh inning Saturday in Anaheim. Smith attempted to score from third on a grounder by George Brett to first baseman Wally Joyner who threw home to prevent the score. The Angels went on to defeat the Royals 6-5. (AP Laserphoto)

Proposed Trade May Be Off

CHICAGO (AP) — A proposed trade sending right-hander Tom Seaver of the Chicago White Sox to the New York Yankees may be off because the teams couldn't agree on terms, said White Sox chairman Jerry Reinsdorf on Saturday.

Seaver, 41, has expressed a strong desire to end his career near his Connecticut home, and newspapers in New York and Chicago reported Saturday that a deal between the White Sox and Yankees was nearly completed.

"We have a basic disagreement on what Tom Seaver's value would be to the Yankees and we couldn't agree on what we'd get back from them," Reinsdorf said Saturday.

"The latest series of talks did occur over the last couple of days," said Reinsdorf, adding the teams had been discussing a possible trade since spring training.

However, Yankee spokesman Harvey Greene said Saturday he didn't know the teams had been discussing a Seaver trade.

Connors, Mayotte Set To Battle For Championship

LONDON (AP) — Americans Jimmy Connors and Tim Mayotte battled their way Saturday into the final of the Stella Artois Grass Court Tennis Championships, the major men's warmup for Wimbledon.

Mayotte, who was seeded eighth in the tournament at Queen's Club, defeated third-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden 7-6, 6-1 after Connors rushed past fellow American Robert Seguso 6-3, 6-4.

Playing his first Nabisco Grand Prix tournament after coming off a 10-week suspension, Connors needed just 64 minutes to dispose of Seguso, one of the world's top doubles player who was a surprising semifinalist in this grass court event.

Connors, seekig his fourth title at Queen's Club, delighted the crowd with his tennis and his antics.

He got a boost in the eighth game of the opening set when Seguso netted an easy smash. After that, the 33-year-old left-hander gained his top form, hitting winners from all over the court.

Seguso wound up with 11 aces and six double-faults, while Connors wrapped up the victory with his seventh ace of the day.

At one point in the match, Connors, racing across the baseline to hit a forehand, which he netted, skidded into the barrier along the sideline. He returned to the court on his hands and knees, crawling, then commenting loudly:

"I should know better. I'm 34 and I don't have to play like this."

Another time, he slipped on the grass and fell as Seguso slammed a smash into the opposite corner. While on his back, Connors tossed his racket across the court, an amusing but illegal attempt at hitting the ball, and brought a round of applause from the crowd.

"I prefer to win one, but I'm not finished yet," Connors told the media at his postmatch interview. "It will be a big story for you guys if I win one.

He is seeking his 106th career title, but his first since October 1984.

With his victory, Mayotte, who has always done well in Grand Slam tournaments, has in succession defeated Edberg, the reigning Australiam Open champion, and West Germany's Boris Becker, the reigning Wimbledon titleholder.

"I'm excited" about the final, Mayotte said. "Jimmy's going to be very hungry because he hasn't won a tournament in a long time. I'm as hungry as I've ever been.

"This is a real good opportunity before Wimbledon to play one of the all- time greats in a pressure situation."

Against Edberg, Mayotte played an almost flawless serve-and-volley game, knocking off reflex volleys and covering most of the angles when the Swede went for a passing shot.

The American broke Edberg in the opening game of the match, which was played in 96-degree temperature — the hottest day of the year — and brilliant sunshine. But the Swede, as quick as Mayotte and even more fluid with his stroke production, broke back in the sixth game.

The two then held serve, Edberg fighting off a break point in th ninth game, to send the opening set into a tiebreak.

Edberg built up a 4-1 lead, thanks in part to a double-fault by Mayotte on the second point. But the American pulled even at 4-4 on a forehand lob that the Swede buried into the bottom of the net.

Mayotte then took another "mini-break" on the 13th point with another lob, this one from the backhand side, that hit in the corner, catching both the baseline and the sideline. The American closed out the tiebreak 8-6 with a forehand volley.

The second set was no contest as Mayotte broke Edberg in the secon and sixth games. He closed out the semifinal battle on the third match point.

Massey Leads By 1-Stoke In Lady Keystone Open

HERSHEY, PA. (AP) — Debbie Massey's 6-under-par 66 Saturday vaulted her into a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the $250,000 LPGA Lady Keystone Open golf tournament.

Massey, who shot even-par 72 in Friday's first round, had seven birdies, 10 pars and one bogey on the 6,348-yard West Course of the Hershey Country Club. Her 36-hole score of 4-under-par 138 is one shot better than Nancy Scranton and Sherri Turner going into Sunday's final round.

Scranton, who shot 73 in the opening round, shot a 66, while Turner added a 70 to go with her opening-round 69.

Defending champion Juli Inkster posted her second straight 70 and is tied for third place in the 54-hole tournament with Cindy Hill and Alice Miller at 140.

Hill had a 68 after shooting an opening-round 72, while Miller shot her second consecutive round of 70.

Lisa Young was next at 141, while former champ Jan Stephenson and Jane Crafter posted 69s for a two-day total of 142.

Cindy Rarick, the first-round leader with a 68, including a nine-hole tournament record of 29, skied to a 77 and dropped out of contention.

Massey opened with a pair of birdies on two of the course's most difficult holes. She missed a 10-foot birdie putt on 17 but still had a shot at the 18-hole tourney record of 65 before she mis-hit an iron and bogeyed the final hole.

Scranton, who started on the back nine, had two eagles to highlight her round. She got the first with a sand wedge out of the bunker at the 451-yard 16th hole. The second came with the same club on a 55-yard fairway shot at the 495-yard 7th hole.

Turner posted seven straight pars before getting a birdie at seven. After a bogey at 15, she finished strong with birdies at 16 and 18.

Inkster, trying for a second straight tour win, had an up and down round that included four birdies and two bogeys.

Majerus Joins Bucks' Staff

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Marquette University head basketball coach Rick Majerus, saying the time was right for a career change, has accepted an assistant coaching position with the Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association, it was announced Saturday.

Bucks Coach Don Nelson said Majerus would be his second assistant behind Del Harris.

Majerus, who led the Warriors to a 56-35 record in three seasons and three consecutive post-season appearances in the National Invitation Tournament, said he looked forward to spending more time on basketball matters.

Majerus said, at a news conference, all of Marquette's recruiting for next season has been completed and the Warriors can expect to have a good season. He also said the university's recruiting program emphasized the advantages of attending Marquette while not selling the coach.

Marquette's winning tradition was not a factor in his decision, Majerus said. The Warriors were 19-11 last season.

Majerus was a player and assistant coach under Al McGuire and remained on the Warriors staff when Hank Raymonds succeeded McGuire in 1977. Since Majerus became associated with Marquette, the Warriors have had a 333-111 record.

"The tail doesn't wag the dog at Marquette," Majerus said. "When you win 19 games a year, there's not a whole lot of pressure."

Majerus said he felt he had to take advantage of the opportunity to join the Bucks now because he wasn't sure he could do it again some other time.

Nelson said he had known for a few years that Majerus had an interest in professional basketball.

"It was as simple as two friends talking about the draft, because he knows about the kids," Nelson said in describing how he came to hire Majerus. Nelson said the Bucks regularly checked with Majerus to discuss potential draft choices.

"I think it's an important career move for Rick and the Milwaukee Bucks," Nelson said.

Balboni's Bat Leads The Way

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

On a night that a power failure hit Anaheim Stadium, there was no loss of power from Steve Balboni's bat.

"I've been struggling but have done well in this park in the past. I like this ballpark," Balboni said after driving in four runs with two homers in the Kansas City Royals' 10-2 rout of the California Angels Friday night. "If you hit a ball hard here, it goes out."

Balboni's three-run homer in the first and solo shot in the fifth gave him 12 for the season. Of the eight two-homer games of his career, three have come against California.

Balboni's home runs came in a game which was held up by 38 minutes in the third inning because of a "power surge" that knocked out the lights in the stadium.

In other American League action, it was Cleveland 11, Minnesota 2; Boston 5, Milwaukee 3; Detroit 10, Toronto 5; New York 3, Baltimore 1; Texas 2, Oakland 1, and Seattle 11, Chicago 10.

Balboni's three-run homer capped a four-run rally in the first inning against Jim Slaton, 4-6. Balboni hit his 12th homer of the season, off left-hander Chuck Finley in the fifth.

Bret Saberhagen, 4-6, snapped a personal two-game losing streak. He gave up seven hits, walked one and struck out six in seven innings before needing relief help.

"I've been getting doubles and home runs, but would like to start hitting more consistently," said Balboni, who is batting only .222 but has 12 doubles in addition to his 12 homers.

He set the game's pace by jumping on a 1-and-1 hanging curveball from Slaton in the first inning.

"It was a good pitch to hit," Balboni said of the slow curve that came in at eye level.

Indians 11, Twins 2

Andre Thornton drove in five runs with a two-run single and three-run homer and Brook Jacoby and Mel Hall each knocked in a pair as the Cleveland beat Minnesota for its fifth consecutive victory.

Winning pitcher Tom Candiotti, 4-6, allowed 11 hits while striking out eight and walking none in his fourth complete game. Bert Blyleven, 5-6, who gave up Thornton's 10th homer in a four-run fourth, was the loser.

"I just threw strikes tonight, which was a problem the last month. I just want to get the ball over with a big lead," Candiotti said.

Candiotti started quickly this season, but experienced trouble in recent starts with his control, walking two batters per every three innings.

Red Sox 5, Brewers 3

Jim Rice doubled home the tie-breaking run after a fifth-inning error by first baseman Cecil Cooper, keying Boston's victory over Milwaukee.

The Red Sox took advantage of Cooper's error on Bill Buckner's grounder with one out in the fifth for two unearned runs and went on to their third victory in a row.

Buckner hit his sixth homer for a 1-0 Boston lead in the first and Dwight Evans drove in two runs with a single in the fourth and a sacrifice fly in the fifth as Boston retained its 4½-game lead in the AL East over New York.

Reliever Bob Stanley gained his 10th save as the Red Sox improved their record to 40-19 — the earliest they've won 40 games except in 1946 and 1978.

Tigers 10, Blue Jays 5

Darrell Evans drove in four runs, including three with a home run, to pace Detroit over Toronto. Evans, who collected three hits, broke the game open with his 10th homer of the season in the Tigers' four-run third.

Tiger rookie Eric King, 2-0, who was reached for five hits and four runs in the first inning, settled down to limit the Blue Jays to two hits over the next 5 1-3 innings before being replaced by Chuck Cary in the seventh.

Lance Parrish added a two-run shot for Detroit, while Pat Sheridan, who also had three hits, connected on a solo shot.

Yankees 3, Orioles 1

Mike Pagliarulo keyed New York's two-run fifth-inning rally with a run-scoring double, and rookie Bob Tewksbury and two pitchers combined on a five-hitter as New York defeated the Baltimore.

Bob Shirley and Dave Righetti combined to pitch the final three innings, with Righetti posting his 15th save.

The Yankees scored an insurance run in the eighth on a fielder's-choice grounder by Dave Winfield.

Rangers 2, A's 1

Pete Incaviglia drove in his second run of the game with a tie-breaking, eighth-inning single, leading Texas over Oakland for the Rangers' 10th victory in their last 11 games.

Winner Jose Guzman, 6-6, scattered seven hits in 7 2-3 innings and sent the A's to their ninth straight loss. Greg Harris finished up for his 12th save. Curt Young, 4-3, charged with the tie-breaking run on Incaviglia's single off Jose Rijo, was the loser.

The Rangers, leading the AL West, scored an unearned run in the first, with Incaviglia's sacrifice fly bringing Ward home. Oakland tied it in the fifth on an RBI single in the fifth by Tony Phillips.

Mariners 11, White Sox 10

John Moses hit a bases-loaded single in the ninth inning to give Seattle a wild victory over Chicago. Moses, who had three hits including a triple in six plate appearances, singled on a 2-0 pitch from Bill Dawley, 0-4, to score Spike Owen from third.

Owen had led off the inning with a double and moved to third on a single by Steve Yeager before Harold Reynolds walked to set the stage for Moses.

Matt Young, 5-4 picked up the win with 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief.

The Mariners trailed 10-8 going into the bottom of the eighth, but tied it on a two-run triple by Phil Bradley.

Matt Young, 5-4, picked up the victory with 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief.

Garris-Evans.....14
Henddrix & Dail.....4

Ledowick Johnson had three hits, one of them a home run, as Garris-Evans rolled up a 14-4 baseball victory over Hendrix & Dail in the Prep League Friday night.

Garris-Evans scored once in the first and added a second run in the second. Hendrix & Dail came back with three in the bottom of the inning to take a brief lead, 3-2.

Johnson tied it up with his homer, an inside-the-park affair, in the third, and G-E put it away with four more in the fourth.

Jonathan Powers led off with a single and David Likosar reached on an error. Both advanced on a wild pitch and Bryum Blackwell reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Powers. Jeff Barwick singiled in Likosar and both he and Blackwell moved up on a wild pitch. Johnson was intentionally walked and Scott Byrd singled in Blackwell and Barwick for a 7-3 lead.

The Lumbermen added six more in the fifth and one in the seventh. Hendrix & Dail got one more in the fifth.

Byrd, Drew Johnson and Powers each had two hits for Garris-Evans, while Jason Bizzaro had a pair of hits for H&D.

Shop-Eze.....7

Jason Wing scored on a wild pitch in the eighth inning to give First Citizens an 8-7 victory over Shop-Eze Foodland in the Prep League Friday night.

It was the first loss of the year for Shop-Eze, which has already wrapped up the regular season championship.

Shop-Eze took the lead in the first with a single run. First Citizens moved ahead in the fourth, scoring three times. Shop-Eze rallied for two in the bottom of the frame to cu it to 4-3.

The Bankers added a run in the fifth while Shop-Eze got one in the sixth. Two more runs scored for First Citizens in the seventh, but Shop-Eze rallied for three to tie it at 7-7 in the bottom of the frame.

In the seventh, however, First Citizens got the winning run. With one away, Wing singled and stole second. He moved to third on an out, then scored on a wild pitch for the 8-7 lead.

Toure Claiborne then struck out all three Shop-Eze batters in the bottom of the frame to preserve the win.

Claiborne and Wing each had two hits to lead the Banker hitting. Grant Harmon had two to lead Shop-Eze.

Little League

True Value.....9
1st Federal.....6

J.D. Helms picked up three hits as he helped lead True Value Hardware to a 9-6 victory over First Federal in the Tar Heel Little League Friday afternoon.

True Value got the initial lead in the first inning, scoring two runs. However, First Federal matched those in the bottom of the inning. True Value pushed back ahead in the third, scoring four times.

Then, in the fourth, True Value put it away with two more runs, taking an 8-2 lead. With one away, Alan Colombo reached on an error and stole second. Helms singled and a wild pitch scored Columbo. Helms, who had moved to second on the play, took third on another wild pitch and scored when Craig Ehrmann reached on an error.

True Value added one more in the fifth, while First Federal got one in the fourth and three in the fifth, all coming on an inside-the-park homer by Eric Smith.

Henry Clark added two hits for True Value while Smith and Rives Mann each had two for First Federal

Kiwanis-Jaycees

The Kiwanis and Jaycees battled to a 15-15 tie over six innings before the game was called on account of darkness.

The game was actually halted in the top of the seventh after the Kiwanis had taken a 17-15 lead and had the bases loaded with no outs. The contest was officially suspended at that point and play will be resumed there.

Hoever, league commissioner Dan Gordon said that there was a chance the game might not be completed if it did not affect the standings of either team. A decision will be made later on its completion.

Babe Ruth League

Wachovia Bank.....3
Coca-Cola.....0

Craig Willoughby pitched a four-hitter, striking out 15 as Wachovia Bank shut out Coca-Cola 3-0 in a Babe Ruth League baseball game Friday.

Willoughby gave up two singles in the first and one each in the fourth and sixth innings.

Wachovia got two of its runs in the first inning. Tim Moore reached on a single and stole second and third. Wes Jackson, Mike Sutton and Willoughby walked to score Moore. Malcom Wilson walked to score Jackson.

Moore scored another run in the third when he reached on an error and came home on Willoughby's double.

Walter Gatlin took the loss, striking out 15 and giving up only two hits. Maurice Hines had two of the four hits against Willoughby.

Shon Gay sacrificed Deloach to third and Chris Brown then reached on a fielder's choice to load the bases and set up Vines' game-winning play.

Injured Becker May Not Defend

LONDON (AP) — When West Germany's Boris Becker fell to American Tim Mayotte he lost a chance to defend his Stella Artois Grass Courts Tennis Championships title and may have damaged his hopes of repeating at Wimbledon.

After losing to Mayotte 6-7, 7-6, 6-2 Friday at Queens Club, the 18-year-old right-hander disclosed he has injured the tendon in his middle finger of his racket hand.

"It wasn't the reason I lost," Becker said of the injury, which he said bothered him twice earlier this year, at the Italian Open and the French Open. "I had my chances to win. On grass, it's just a matter of two or three points"

Becker was examined by a doctor, but the results were not revealed Friday night. He was forced, however, to default from the doubles, where he and Yugoslavia's Slobodan Zivojinovich had reached the second round.

Veteran Jimmy Connors, seeking his first official tournament title in nearly two years, joined Mayotte in the semifinals of this $237,400 Nabisco Grand Prix event, rolling over fellow American Paul Annacone 6-3, 6-4.

In the semifinals, Connors will play American Robert Seguso, a 6-4, 7-6 winner over Ramesh Krishnan of India, while Mayotte will take on third-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden, who ousted American Tim Wilkison 6-3, 6-3.

Becker said the other two times he had problems with his finger, the ailment lasted only one day. But he said the pain, which he described as "shooting up to my shoulder when I hit a backhand," was more acute this time.

Last year, Becker won this tournament, then became the youngest player, the first German and the first unseeded player to win the men's singles crown at Wimbledon.

Friday's match between Mayotte and Becker was a marvelous display of grass court tennis, with neither player losing his serve in the first two sets.

The Duhess of Gloucester and Sarah Ferguson, the fiancee of Prince Andrew, watched as the two players fired big serves and hit crisp volleys. Their rallies — if the several-shot exchanges could be called that — usually featured both players at the net hitting reflex volleys.

Becker won the first-set tiebreaker 7-4, while Mayotte took the second 9-7.

The first service break came in the fourth game of the third set, on only Mayotte's fourth break point of the match. He broke Becker again in the eighth game to close out the victory.

Connors also played a basic grass-court game, taking the net at every opportunity.

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

Cubs Tab Michael As New Manager

CHICAGO (AP) — Gene Michael, described by his new boss as "a baseball guy who has been through it all," has taken over as manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Michael, 48, a two-time manager of the New York Yankees who also had a term as general manager under Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, replaces Jim Frey, who Thursday was fired by Dallas Green, president and general manager of the Cubs.

Frey guided the Cubs to the National League East title in 1984, but the team slipped to fourth place last year and was 23-33 when Frey was fired.

"Gene is a baseball guy," Green said Friday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Hector "Macho" Camacho, he of the fast feet, hands and mouth, got the message in the fourth round of his fight against Edwin Rosario Friday night when blood started running into his eye.

"I said, 'hell, yes,' " Camacho said. " 'This is a fight. This is a fight.' "

It was a dandy fight from beginning to end, and at the final bell, many people in the crowd of 10,615 at Madison Square Garden thought Rosario had upset Camacho and won the World Boxing Council lightweight title.

Judge Luis Rivera thought so too, scoring it 114-113 for Rosario. But judges Tony Castellano and Stewart Kirschenbaum each favored Camacho 115-113.

"The people of New York are yelling at the decision," the Puerto Rican Rosario said through an interpreter as boos echoed throught the Garden.

In the fifth round, it looked like Rosario might become the champion for the second time, without the benefit of a decision.

Rosario, now 23-2, rocked Camacho with a right-left to the head 50 seconds into the fifth round and landed several hard head shots throughout the round. But he couldn't put Camacho down.

Rosario said he hurt knuckles on his right hand during the fifth round and that might have saved Camacho.

"To be honest, this is the first fight I ever got hit consistently hard," said Camacho, who has a 30-0 record with 16 knockouts.

"That guy was hammering me with things I've never been hammered with before," Camacho said, who was also badly hurt by a left-right to the head late in the 11th round.

"It was a close fight, I'll be the first to admit it. But I was more the skillful fighter and I proved it," Camacho said.

Two judges thought so.

Three other fighters also stayed unbeaten on the undercard.

Julio Cesar Chavez, 130, of Mexico, knocked down Refugio Rojas three times and stopped him in the seventh round to retain the WBC super featherweight title. Chavez is now 48-0 with 43 knockouts.

Heavyweight Mike Tyson, 217, of Catskill, N.Y., ran his record to 22-0 with 20 knockouts when he knocked out Reggie Gross, 218, of Baltimore, in the first round.

Matthew Hilton, 153½, a junior middleweight contender from Canada, ran his record to 23-0 with a 10-round decision over Cheto Ramos, 154, of Dallas.

Camacho boosted his record to 30-0 with 16 knockouts and he never worked harder for a victory.

"It's a dangerous fight," the Macho Man had said before the bout. "But he won't lay a glove on me."

Rosario did more than lay a glove on the champion, hurting him badly.

After his fifth-round escape, Camacho, who weighed 135, used his hand and foot speed to outbox Rosario in four of the next five rounds.

At the start of the 11th round, Rosario was bleeding from a cut under the right eye and his puinches seemed to have lost their snap. But suddenly he hurt Camacho again.

Rosario, 134, took the fight to Camacho in the 12th round and seemed to have the best of it.

The AP card favored Rosario 114-113.

It was the second defense of the 135-pound title for Camacho, who held the WBC super featherweight title before relinquishing it to campaign as a lightweight. Camacho won the lightweight title over Jose Luis Ramirez on Aug. 10, 1985. It was Ramirez who took the title away from Rosario when he stopped the Puerto Rican in the fouirth round May 3, 1984.

Mother, Coach Stand By John 'Hot Rod' Williams

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — John "Hot Rod" Williams' mother and his high school coach say they were in Williams' room after the 1985 Memphis State game and saw none of the point shaving conspirators who claimed to have been there at the same time.

Williams is accused of joining in a plot to shave points in three games and actually carrying out the scheme in two home games, against Southern Mississippi and Memphis State, in February 1985. A plot to fix a game at Virginia Tech fell through, the prosecution contends.

The defense rested after Williams' mother, Mrs. Barbara Colar, completed her testimony, and the case is expected to go to the jury on Monday.

Former Tulane players Clyde Eads and Bobby Thompson said they and teammate Jon Johnson went to Williams' room shortly after the game to discuss the way the payoff was being split. Eads and Johnson, who testified under grants of immunity, said they wanted more money for their part in the fix.

Thompson said he got there about 10:30 or a little after for a conspirators-only meeting.

'I got there before Clyde and J.J. did. I told John Williams and David Dominique not to say anything, that I'd do the talking," Thompson testified. Dominique, Williams' roommate, is also charged, but no trial date has been set.

Thompson said that after Eads and Johnson arrived, he told them he'd pay them out of his own share.

But Williams' high school basketball coach, Tommy Wall, said Friday that his former protege had singled out the Memphis State game for a sort of reunion with friends and family from Sorrento, La. And all of them dropped by his room immediately after the game.

Williams was the only basketball player present, Wall said.

"John telephoned me and asked my wife and myself if we would like to come down and watch the Memphis State game," Wall testified Friday.

"We talked to him about him and (Memphis State all-America) Keith Lee playing against each other. I asked him if there would be (professional) scouts there, and he said yes."

Wall, who learned earlier that school year that he had leukemia, said the 9th-grade basketball team from Sorrento also attended the game.

It was, he said, an emotional game for Williams.

Immediately after the game, he said, he met friends at Williams' room and stayed until about 11:15 — about an hour later than Thompson claimed the conspirators met. Mrs. Colar was still there when he left, he said.

Mrs. Colar said she called her son about a week before the Memphis State game, and he told her how important the game was to him.

"I asked him to get me some tickets," she said.

In two cars, she and nine others drove to the game, she said.

After the game, she said she went straight to her son's room to visit.

She said she knows her son's teammates, and none of them were there.

Earlier Friday, statistician Michael Chafetz testified that he subjected the performance of Williams and the Tulane team to mathematical analysis and proved to his satisfaction "that John Williams did not reduce his performance in any of the games in question."

He said he analyzed Williams' performance from four angles, using statistics on scoring, rebounding, fouls, assists, turnovers, blocked shots and steals.

He said he compared Williams' statistics in the questioned Southern Mississippi, Memphis State and Virginia Tech games to his season totals and to his performance in other games against those same teams in 1985. He said he also did a statistical analysis of the relationship between Williams' individual performance and the team's performance and of Williams' performance when head-to-head with Keith Lee.

His testimony was sprinkled with terms such as "correlation of coefficients" and "coefficients of relationships."

"My conclusion is that there is no evidence that Williams' performance lagged in those three games," he said.

And his head-to-head analysis of eight games in which Lee and Williams played against each other, he said, "indicated he usualy lost his contests with Lee ... terribly typical of his contests with Keith Lee."

Mets Play Bad And Still Win

By JONATHAN VITTI
AP Sports Writer

What if Dwight Gooden was wild, and he wild-pitched in one run and walked in another? What if Jesse Orosco came in and gave up two runs in the ninth inning that tied the game? Could you beat the Mets then?

The answer was no Friday night, as the Pittsburgh Pirates saw both of those things happen and still lost to the New York Mets 6-5.

The victory was the third omen on Friday the 13th that the Mets may make 1986 a lucky season.

Earlier in Chicago, the 1984 National League East champion Cubs hired Gene Michael as manager, after a doubleheader split with St. Louis under interim manager John Vukovich.

The defending division champion Cardinals broke a four-game losing streak in the 10-inning opener 1-0, only to lose the 11-inning nightcap 3-2.

"We have to feel well the way it turned out," said Darryl Strawberry. His single in the ninth inning drove in the Mets' winning run, which undid difficult outings by Gooden and Orosco.

"It was a strange game to watch," Strawberry said.

In other National League games, Los Angeles defeated San Diego 6-2; San Francisco rallied past Houston 3-1; Philadelphia edged Montreal 2-1; and Atlanta downed Cincinnati 3-2.

Though Gooden struck 13 batters — high for a nine-inning NL game this year —he allowed only three hits and left after eight innings with 5-3 lead.

Gooden yielded two runs in the second inning on four walks and a wild pitch. His total of five walks was a personal season high.

"It was strange. It started off pretty bad. I was aiming the ball," Gooden said.

"I had an extra day of rest and felt stronger."

Not so by the end of the eighth, after he had thrown 143 pitches, tying his career high. Orosco was called in for the seventh straight game, over an eight-day span.

"I was a little tired," Gooden said. "I changed shirts a couple of times. It was humid. I thought it was a good decision to go with Jesse."

Pirates Manager Jim Leyland said, "We were one hit away from getting him. I've never seen him that wild."

Leyland decided in the ninth to walk Keith Hernandez — who had homered earlier — in order to have lefty Pat Clements pitch to Strawberry.

"You've got to walk Keith," Strawberry said. "I've been struggling against left-handers (10-for-70 before the Friday) this year."

Cardinals 1-2, Cubs 0-3

Vukovich thinks he may be an answer to a trivia question. "Not many guys can say they were in two extra-inning games in the only day they managed," he said after the split, and after Michael was named manager.

On Thursday the Cubs dismissed Jim Frey.

The Cardinals ended a four-game losing streak in the opener with a 1-0 triumph in 10 innings behind rookie left-hander Greg Mathews, 2-1. Pinch-hitter Thad Bosley's run-scoring single in the 11th inning lifted the Cubs 3-2 victory in the nightcap.

Lee Smith, 3-4, won the nightcap while Todd Worrell, 3-5, who saved the opener, lost. Mathews allowed only five hits in his nine shutout innings.

Rick Sutcliffe pitched 10 innings in the first game. His record dropped to 4-8.

An 18-mph wind blew in from center field at Wrigley all day. There were no homers in the doubleheader.

Dodgers 6, Padres 2

Fernando Valenzuela, 9-4, pitched a six-hitter for his ninth complete game of the season. He struck out seven batters, walked one, and retired the last 10. He leads the NL in complete games.

Bill Madlock's three-run home run, his third homer of the year, opened up a 3-2 game in the top of the fifth inning. Reggie Williams had a bases-loaded, two-run single for Los Angeles.

Garry Templeton hit his first home run of the season for San Diego.

Giants 3, Astros 1

Chili Davis homered in the ninth, ruining a strong outing by Houston's Mike Scott, saving a combined three-hit effort by San Francisco's Mike LaCoss and Mark Davis.

Scott entered the ninth with a chance for a three-hit, 1-0 victory. It came apart with one out. Chris Brown walked and Jeffrey Leonard singled him to second. Dave Smith relieved, trying for his NL-leading 17th save. Instead, Chili Davis hit his sixth homer of the season.

Mark Davis, 2-3, came on in the eighth and retired six straight batters.

Scott struck out seven batters, boosting his NL-leading total for the season to 122.

Phillies 2, Expos 1

Steve Jeltz singled home Glenn Wilson with the bases loaded and one out in the bottom of the ninth, ending Montreal's four-game winning streak. Shane Rawley, 9-4, pitched a six-hitter and won his fifth straight decision.

Wilson who doubled in the ninth, extended his hitting streak to 12 games.

Tim Burke, 4-2, took the loss in relief of Floyd Youmans, who struck out 11 batters in eight innings.

It was a scoreless game until the seventh. The Phillies scored on a groundout when Von Hayes evaded a tag at the plate. Tim Raines tied it in the bottom of the inning with his sixth homer.

Braves 3, Reds 2

Cincinnati lost for the fifth straight game, by one run for the fourth straight. Rick Mahler pitched 8 1-3 innings, then Gene Garber retired two batters for a combined six-hitter. Mahler, 7-5, has won five of his last six decisions. Garber stretched his scoreless inning streak to 17 1-3 as he notched his fifth save.

Gerald Perry and Ozzie Virgil homered for Atlanta. Bob Horner singled home Omar Moreno to break a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning.

Sea Life Rules

Summer visitors to the coast need to know a few simple rules about sea life. According to the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries, people cannot simply wade from the shore and pick up and keep a clam, oyster or scallop without a possible problem.

The most serious problem is gathering oysters and clams from polluted areas. Shellfish from these areas can cause serious illness if eaten. According to the division, about 52,000 acres of oyster and saltwater clam waters are closed and marked by pea green signs.

These signs often cause confusion because some people believe the area in front of a sign is open and the area behind is closed. That is not always the case. The signs are generally placed at access points to polluted places.

If a person wants to gather shellfish, he should write or call Shellfish Sanitation, P.O. Box 769, Morehead City 28557, and request a current map of the open waters in the area he's interested in. People should also contact a local marine fisheries law enforcement officer because the open status can change quickly. Law enforcement officers' names and phone numbers are available by calling toll free 1-800-682-2632 on weekdays from 7 a.m. until 9 p.m.

Oyster season is closed during the summer months. Normally, it is open from October though March.

The division reported that clams have a 1 inch thickness minimum size and a limit of 100 per person without a license (200 per boat if two or more people are aboard).

Scallop season is usually closed during the summer months, but is open on select winter and spring days.

Blue crabs have a 5 inch minimum size limit. Crab pot buoys have specificications. Shrimping usually requires a license and is allowed only in open areas.

Flounder have an 11 inch minimum size limit. Channel bass (puppy drum) have a 14 inch minimum size limit, and only two per day can be kept that are larger than 32 inches. Striped bass have a 14 inch minimum size limit, with a limit of three per day. No stripers can be taken in the ocean.

No license is needed for hook and line fishing in coastal areas. When a fishermen gets very far inland on coastal rivers and creeks, he needs to be aware of where freshwater jurisdiction begins and hook and line licenses are required.

Visitors to coastal areas should also be careful about putting any sea life in a bucket. The division stated that many times shellfish, tiny fish or crabs are caught and put into a bucket in order to get a better look. When they are not returned soon enough to the ocean, sound or river, the creatures die. The division said no law applies to this, "just some consideration for marine life."

Roadside Project

North Carolina's roadsides may be a better place for wildlife in the future as a result of a cooperative project being developed by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission and the N.C. Department of Transportation. The project is designed to improve habitat for quail and rabbits along roadsides through wildlife plantings and adjustment to mowing schedules.

"This program is still in the pilot phase, but has real potential to provide a lot of additions small game habitat in North Carolina," said Terry Sharp, small game project leader for the commission.

"The openings found along our roadsides offer excellent habitat for quail, rabbits and many songbirds. We can enhance this habitat through special plantings of wildlife foods and by adjustung mowing and other maintenance practices. Most of the credit for the origination of this project goes to the Foothills Chapter of Quail Unlimited in Lenoir," he said.

Three pilot projects are proposed by the N.C. Department of Transportation at sites along I-95 in the Coastal Plain, I-85 in the Piedmont and I-40 in the Mountains.

"At each of these locations, we will be evaluating the different wildlife plantings to see what is most effective. We'll also reduce mowing in these areas to provide more food and cover," said Bill Johnson, landscape engineer for the N.C. Department of Transportation.

"An added benefit is that this should reduce our maintenance costs. We want our roadsides to be attractive to both people and wildlife, and from these prjects we'll be able to develop a program that could receive wider application in the future," Johnson said.

Danes Proving They're For Real

MEXICO CITY (AP) — There can be no doubt anymore. The Danes are for real.

Denmark's soccer team, making its World Cup debut, proved Friday that its 6-1 romp past South American champion Uruguay was no fluke. The Danes followed that decisive victory with a 2-0 triumph over West Germany to win Group E.

In the only other game Friday, Uruguay played all but the first minute shorthanded after Jose Batista was ejected, yet still held Scotland to a 0-0 tie. That moved Uruguay into the second round and eliminated the Scots, who have never made it past the first round in five tries.

There were no games Saturday as 16 teams readied for the second round of head-to-head elimination games. Today, the Soviet Union plays Belgium at Leon and Mexico plays host to Bulgaria at Aztec Stadium here. On Monday, it will be Argentina against Uruguay in Puebla and Brazil playing Poland in Guadalajara.

France plays defending champion Italy at Olympic Stadium here and surprising Morocco takes on the West Germans in Monterrey on Tuesday. England opposes Paraguay at Aztec and Denmark goes against Spain in Queretaro on Wednesday.

If anyone wasn't convinced of the Danes' talents following their lopsided win over Uruguay — which some critics claimed was a fluke — those questions were answered Friday. Though they weren't at their best, the Danes had more than enough offense and defense to contain West Germany, which has been in the finals in three of the last five World Cups.

Jesper Olsen scored on a penalty kick late in the first half. John Eriksen — who replaced star striker Preben Elkjaer at halftime after Elkjaer injured his thigh — got the other goal.

"We wanted to stay in Queretaro, we wanted to win," said Sepp Piontek, the German-born coach of Denmark. "I was very pleased with the way our goalkeeper played but not with everybody. We can do better."

Perhaps. But the Danes were plenty impressive in going 3-0 in the first round, matching Brazil's perfect record. They showed a varied, quick-striking attack and a solid defense.

"We had a strong first round," Piontek admitted.

On Friday, third-string goalie Lars Hogh, one of four additions to the revamped lineup, was sensational. Hogh made a diving hand save against Klaus Allofs in the 19th minute and dropped to the ground to stop an Allofs shot which was headed to the corner of the net moments later.

Hogh was beaten on a 35-yard boot by Andreas Brehme, but the ball struck the crossbar at 29 minutes. He then got a leg on Rudi Voeller's close-range shot and the rebound was sent wide by Voeller.

The goalie robbed Voeller again at 51 minutes with a sliding leg save as the German striker broke free 20 yards out.

"He played very well," Piontek said. But he indicated regular goalie Troels Rasmussen would play against Spain.

Midfielder Frank Arnesen won't play. He was ejected in the final minute against the Germans for retaliating on a tackle by Lothar Matthaeus and will be suspended for the next game.

Spain eliminated the Danes in a penalty-kick shootout in the last European Championships. Piontek looks forward to avenging that setback.

"Spain has got an excellent team. It will be difficult but we are not afraid of anyone," he said. "Spain kicked us out of the 1984 European Championships. Now it's our turn to kick them out."

The win set off wild celebrations back home.

Sombrero-wearing celebrants danced in Copenhagen's Town Hall Square, where police attempted to control streams of horn-blowing, flag-bearing cars and trucks carrying other cheering supporters. One motorcycle policeman directed traffic with a Danish soccer flag.

City hall employees broke regulations to wave a Danish flag from the roof of the building after sundown. Some fans with faces painted red with white crosses, in imitation of the Danish flag. Others climbed statues and fountains.

Uruguay, the South American champions, had Batista kicked out at 53 seconds for a bruising tackle of Scotland's Gordon Strachan.

Furniture Crossing Over Between Home and Office

By JOSEPH GIOVANNINI
N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — America's vast, silent army of workaholics will now find it easier both to live at the office and to work at home. More and more furniture coming on the market blurs the distinction between home and office. Last week at Neocon — the four-day annual National Exposition of Interior Contract Furnishings that closed Friday — the trend in office furniture was to a strongly domestic appearance with traditional or transitional styling and softer lines, colors and materials.

As a result, much of the furniture intended for offices, hotels and restaurants is usable in the home, while furniture for the home is being adapted for office and commercial use. "What people are trying to do is make their office furniture more comfortable, like home," says John B. Nichols, executive vice president of Innovative Products for Interiors. Robert H. Fernbacher, president of the conservative Baker Knapp & Tubbs, said, "The driving force is that the office is a second home for corporate executives, and they want it comfortable, not stark and clinical." His company introduced, in its Georgian collection, traditional cabinets and desks in which computers and print-out machines hide behind brass handles and mahogany.

It seemed that no page of domestic furniture history was left unturned in the pursuit of designs suitable for what buyers and sellers here were calling crossover pieces. Many of the designs borrowed from history with surprisingly fresh and inventive results.

Entire new collections as well as individual pieces seemed to reconcile the post-modern and modern styles, which before have often seemed at war: many pieces had both a clean look and historical overtones.

To give work places a more homelike character, chairs, sofas and desks were made in natural woods rather than high-tech metal and chrome, seeming more crafted than machined. Fabrics were patterned rather than plain; lines and shapes were curved and expressive rather than straight and functional. Some pieces were funny. A color frequently seen was geranium red — a shade that seemed to capture the fresh spirit of the upbeat market.

Dick Tracy could easily have just got up from the dashing Bugatti armchair, with arms that had the sweeping aerodynamic lines of 1930s cars.

Designed by Franz Romeo for DeSede, several of the Bugatti chairs, upholstered in black leather, idled in the Stendig showroom, darkly handsome and ready perhaps to meet another Stendig collection nearby — a bevy of long-legged chairs with curvaceous lines by Calvin Morgan. Morgan's chairs included the Ribbon, the Cascade and the Crescent, all with profiles outlined in wood that gave them their line, character and names.

The salty smell of popcorn permeated the air of some floors at the huge Merchandise Mart as buyers from around the country nibbled their way through dozens of showrooms ready to mix pleasure with business. At Westnofa USA, some climbed into a tree chair, one of six spirited pieces in a Scandinavian collection called Garden.

The chairs were all shaped like trees with branches and soft round backs and seats that looked like leaves. A sales representative explained that the designer had observed apes in trees and deduced there was something reasonable about it. The trees were surprisingly comfortable.

At JG, the more athletic buyers bounced on reproductions of Rene Herbst's 1920s trampoline classics — metal chairs with seats made of rubber cables stretched between their sides.

JG also presented the striking Elysee Palace collection — a boldly geometric but very comfortable and ample armchair and convertible leather sofa-bed designed by Ronald Cecil Sportes for President Francois Mitterrand's private living room at Elysee Palace.

Sportes's collection was only one of several by Europeans that paid no homage to traditional furniture. The modernist designs, however, were not strict and minimal but what might be called enriched — and suitable for both home and office.

For example, the Shogun floor and table lamps at Artemide Inc. by Mario Botta were a visual metaphor of samurai helmets. For Atelier International Lighting, the Italian designers Afra and Tobia Scarpa created a beguiling floor lamp called the Butterfly with a diaphanous adjustable folding fan that diffused light already muted by frosted glass surrounding the bulb.

The European designer of the moment, Phillipe Starck, had a visually strong (if not entirely comfortable) collection at Interna Designs Ltd. and another group at ICF. Chairs in both collections were made of thin, black metal rods that made the pieces look like line drawings.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I used a very abrasive cleaner on a brass piece. It removed the tarnish, but it also removed the shine of the metal. Is there any way to restore the shine?

A. — Clean the object with denatured alcohol, then with lacquer thinner, doing this outdoors or in a room that is well ventilated with no pilot or similar lights. Apply a coat of lacquer thinner, then three or four coats of clear lacquer thinned 50 percent with lacquer thinner. What you are really doing is giving the brass a new shine rather than restoring the old one.

Q. — I recently saw the impressions of what appeared to be maple leaves in a concrete patio. At the time I had only a casual interest in the decoration, but now that I am getting ready to have a patio covered with concrete, I would like to know how to get the maple-leaf effect. Can you help me?

A. — Producing leaf patterns in concrete is fairly easy. It involves pressing the desired leaves into the concrete after it has been floated. Once the concrete has cured, the leaves are removed. This procedure can be done with maple or other types of leaves and requires very little skill, just care and patience. Of course, if the patio is being made professionally, you have to be sure this is understood by both parties to the agreement before any work is done.

Garden Clinic

Q. I ordered some blue spruce trees from an advertisement in the Sunday newspaper supplement. The seedlings they sent are not very blue though. What is wrong?

A. Blue spruce (Picea pungens) seedlings can vary from completely green to bright blue. Cheap mail-order seedlings are often the green culls from plantings. The best blue forms are only available by grafting, and this grafting is slow and expensive.

Q. How many kinds of ladybugs (lady beetles, ladybird beetles) are there in America?

A. There are 475 species of these beneficial insects north of Mexico.

Q. There is a foul-smelling seepage coming from a wound near the base of an elm tree in my yard. What is wrong?

A. This unsightly, foul-smelling seepage from wounds in the bark or wood of various shade trees is known as slime flux. It occurs most commonly on profusely bleeding trees such as birch, elm and maple, especially those declining in vigor. Slime flux is more common in some years than others. There are two types of slime flux — brown and alcoholic. Brown slime flux originates from the heartwood sap. Before reaching the wounded surface, the sap is a clear, waterly fluid containing several nutrients. On the surface, it changes to a brown, slimy ooze. Alcoholic slime flux develops from the sap of the bark and sapwood. It is white and frothy and usually forms near the base of the trunk. Both types of slime flux are attractive to insects. Because of this some people think that insects have caused the problem when really they are only a secondary party. There is no corrective or preventive measures known for slime flux. Old methods of treatment probably did as much harm as good.

Choosing colors for a room? Determine the kind of atmosphere you want to create.

Different kinds of lighting affect colors drastically. That means all color decisions should be made at home under the light of the room you are decorating. For instance, if you make a decision on a color under the flourescent lights in a paint store, you may not like your choice when the color is used under the standard light bulbs in your home.

Because of this, Kent Homchick, who heads the design technology department at United States International University in San Diego, recommends that you should make two trips to the store. The first should be to pick up samples and swatches, the second to purchase your paint, wallpaper or carpet. If you want to see how a color will look on a painted wall or a piece of furniture, buy a little can of paint and paint a test sample.

It is Homchick's belief that the best way to decide on colors is to consider the mood wanted, the function of the rooms and the personalities of the people who will use them. If you want to point up a peaceful atmosphere, use soothing pastels, which help people to relax. It might be chosen, for instance, in a study in which you conduct high-level, intensely negotiated business deals. But if you have a child's room and want them to have fun, pick bright colors such as oranges, reds and yellows. On the other hand, bright yellow paint in the kitchen above the stove may make the room appear larger, but it also might emphasize every grease spatter that hits the wall.

If, says Homchick, you start with a bare room, you may wish to complement or color-coordinate drapes, carpets and wall colors with the furniture on hand to create a distinctive look. If you have cherry furniture, you might select pastel colors if you want a light, airy atmosphere. If your furniture is black lacquer and chrome, you may want light walls and drapes with a lighter color carpet. If you have dark furniture and want a sober, serious mood, select dark-colored draperies and carpets. If the only furniture you have in your bedroom is the bed, you can decorate around the color of the bedsheets.

Homchick says it is important to consider the amount of sunlight the room gets every day, as well as when it gets the most sunlight.

"If," he says, "the room receives a lot of direct sunlight each morning and you paint the walls a bright color, will that be too overwhelming to wake up to? If you are going to have drapes, consider how much sunlight they will filter out and how the light will reflect through the drapes. If you choose light-colored walls and have turquoise drapes, the sun coming through the curtains will cast a bluish light onto your walls and furniture, which may counteract your light walls."

Drapes, blinds or even tinted sun screens on windows act somewhat like stage lighting for the theater. An actor can wear a beautiful green costume on stage, but if a lighting technician throws a blue light on him, the color becomes muddy and loses its vibrancy.

When considering the amount of light in a room, determine what time of day the room is used the most and choose colors that complement that type of light. Homchick points out that sunlight is very bright in the morning, amberish in the afternoon and reddish near dusk. He adds that some people do not know that color temperatures are created by different types of light bulbs. "What this translates to," he says, "is that flourescent light can be harsh and white, while a standard household 75-watt bulb throws off a soft, warm glow."

And if you find that a color scheme you used for years suddenly seems to require a change, don't be dismayed or confused. It seems that people's tastes in colors change over a period of time, just as tastes in clothing or cars change.

Part VII: The Great Fire of 1910

The Way Greenville Was

By PATRICIA M. MOORE

This is the fifth article of a 10-part series on how Greenville's past has contributed to the city's development. The people cited in this series are real, as are the actions attributed to them. Their thoughts are depicted as they might have been.

Maggie Hammond, night operator for the telephone company, sat in her second-floor office on the corner of Evans and Third streets.

It was almost 1 o'clock the morning of Feb. 25, 1910, and so far she hadn't gotten any of the usual prank calls.

Nor had she gotten a call from a news reporter who wanted to know where the fire was. That was because — so far that night — there hadn't been a fire, though the town already had had two fires that month.

Widow Hammond wasn't cold because she was wrapped in a woolen shawl, but outside the February chill was intensified by a northeast wind that gusted to near gale force.

The firing of pistols and shotguns, then the shout, "Fire," brought an end to a quiet night.

Shooting guns was about the quickest way to alert townspeople that volunteer firefighters needed help from every able-bodied man available. From the numbers of guns being fired and the yelling, she knew this must be a big fire.

When she reached the window, she could hardly believe her eyes. Winds were carrying burning cinders from John Flanagan Buggy Company's old building across Cotanche Street to Hotel Macon. She watched for what seemed like hours as the buggy company's wooden warehouse burned to the ground. Meantime, firemen worked to save the historic hotel from burning. She breathed a sigh of relief when they succeeded.

While fireman were at the hotel, shifting winds had carried sparks a block from Cotanche to Evans Street, igniting the Hoell and Shelburn Building at the corner of Second and Evans. Then flames erupted across Evans at the Pitt County Buggy Company's factory, the county jail, courthouse and Masonic Temple.

Mrs. Hammond knew then that the fire was out of control, because as soon as firemen got one blaze contained, winds blew sparks to another building, catching it on fire. And to make matters worse, wind was blowing in every direction.

Now wind-driven sparks were spreading flames across Third Street. The Daily Reflector building on the corner of Third and Evans, the Bagwell Building and the J.G. Moye residence on Third across from the courthouse also were burning. Fireman, aided by fellow townsmen, rushed with hoses to save them.

Men were running in and out of buildings as storeowners and lawyers tried to save records and furniture.

Mrs. Hammond heard another shout, this one from Evans Street. The roof of the famed Carolina Club above the Taft Furniture and the Taft and Van Dyke Furniture Stores on Evans Street was on fire. If the blaze got a foothold in their block of Evans, the whole business district might be destroyed.

Across the street at the courthouse square, the buggy factory, the Masonic Temple, courthouse and jail were burning to the ground, but firemen saved the Reflector, Bagwell and Moye structures across Third Street.

Now somebody was yelling for Widow Hammond to get out of her office because the building was on fire. Just then, her telephone rang. Before it sounded a second time, Mrs. Hammond lifted the receiver and said in an excited voice, "Don't ask me where the fire is — I'm sitting on it." She slammed the receiver back into its cradle, grabbed her coat and purse and rushed out of the building.

Outside the sky was lit up as if it, too, were on fire. Mrs. Hammond didn't know where she could go to escape the fire's fury. Winds were blowing sparks even to outlying residential districts.

The fire was so hot that it was melting telephone and telegraph cables, even melting the copper inside them. The wind was blowing so hard that it pushed flames through vent shafts inside buildings.

Throughout the two-block business district from Third to Fifth along Evans Street, men were spraying water on roof tops to prevent their catching fire.

Mrs. Hammond watched as firemen put up a ladder to the roof of the Carolina Club, and Lee Shelburn began ascending with a hose in his hand. She caught her breath as he slipped but somehow managed to hook one leg around a rung of the ladder, saving himself from falling to the pavement below.

Hours later, when daylight came, the worst of the fire was out, but the acrid odor of damp ashes prevailed in spite of the cold, crisp air.

Later that morning, people from out of town began to stream into Greenville to view the "fire wreck."

So much confusion, damage and inconvenience resulted from the fire that it took the Reflector two days to compile a list of losses.

Heading the list were the courthouse, jail and six-year-old Masonic Temple, regarded by many as the town's pride. The Masonic Temple had housed offices of the Pitt County Board of Education and law offices including U.S. district attorney on the first floor, an opera house and public library on the second floor, and quarters for Masons, Odd Fellows and Pythians on the third floor.

Col. Harry Skinner, U.S. attorney and senior partner in the law firm Skinner and Whedbee (Mayor H.W. Whedbee), got into his office long enough to save files, papers and records of the U.S. government to the neglect of his personal effects. The Reflector said, "This conduct on his part, at the risk of his life, is not surprising to those who know him."

L.H. Pender, J.M. Reuss, L.W. Tucker and Walter Tucker likewise barely missed injury when they tried to remove charters and records from the third floor of the Masonic Temple.

Although the courthouse burned, records stored in its basement were safe. Later they were dug out, wet, but intact. No human died in the fire, but a horse and a goat burned to death at Sam Short's stable.

In addition to destruction and damage to buildings and personal belongings, the fire caused other problems. Every outgoing telephone wire had burned, completely cutting off service until repairs were made.

The telegraph company didn't have a single out-of-town cable intact.

Furthermore, the downtown area was without electricity.

In spite of these obstacles, the Reflector printed a newspaper the day of the fire.

First damage estimates were $150,000, but these were reduced a day later to $125,000. Because insurance rates for the fire-plagued business district were so high, only $42,000 of the losses were insured.

In the aftermath of the fire, Daily Reflector Editor David Jordan Whichard said the town needed "a more effective fire alarm system than word of mouth and shooting fire arms."

Mrs. Hammond read the newspaper reports and heard the rumors that went on for weeks about the cause of the fire. No one ever officially confirmed that a scuffle among quarreling card players in the dark, unheated Flanagan Buggy Co. warehouse caused a kerosene bottle stuffed with a lighted rag for a wick to fall over and ignite the costly blaze.

She shook her head, thinking that, if there really was a card game that night, it was — literally — a hot one, not to mention expensive.

College Foundation Says Fund Increased

By The Associated Press

More North Carolina college students will be able to borrow money for school expenses because of a 20 percent increase in funds available, College Foundation Inc. officials have announced.

The private foundation, which makes government-guaranteed loasn using money provided by banks, says it has $66 million in loan funds available for the 1986-87 school year.

Duffy Paul, College Foundation president, said he asked banks to increase their participation in the program because the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction act is expected to reduce federal sources of college funds.

The additional money means the organization can make more loans, he said.

"Having more money available is good news to students across the state," Paul said. "For many, this means the opportunity to pursue higher education. For others, it means the opportunity to attend a college of first choice."

For the 1985-86 school year, the foundation made 26,000 loans.

The foundation, established in 1955 by Gov. Luther Hodges, is the sole North Carolina-based provider of private, federally guaranteed student loans. Mary Bland Josey, a spokeswoman for the foundation, said lenders based out of state also make some North Carolina loans.

The foundation charges 8 percent interest for loans through the N.C. Insured Student Loan Program and 12 percent for loans through the N.C. PLUS Loan program.

While the student loans go only to students, parents may qualify for the PLUS loans, and PLUS loans don't require low incomes as do insured student loans. Payments usually are deferred until the student completes college, then may be repaid with interest over a period as long as 10 years.

Wallpaper Fans Add Decorating Sparkle

Wallpaper fans can add decorative, colorful sparkle throughout the house — especially in front of an empty fireplace opening.

Evelyn Spangler, Pitt County Agricultural home economics agent, conducted two workshops in making the fans this past week.

"I saw the wallpaper fans in decorator shops as well as in magazines on interior decorating. I thought they were great possibilities for inexpensive accessories using materials on hand," said Mrs. Spangler.

"Using varing size and trim, the fans can be used as a summer accessory, as wall hangings, tabletop accessory, light diffuser, package decorations as well as Christmas tree ornaments," she said.

"Coordinating borders, ribbons and appliques can be added to the wallpaper prior to pleating. After pleating, drapery rosettes, silk or dried flowers or ribbon bows give the finishing touch. Fans may be attached to a wall with straight pins or stand alone before a fireplace," she said.

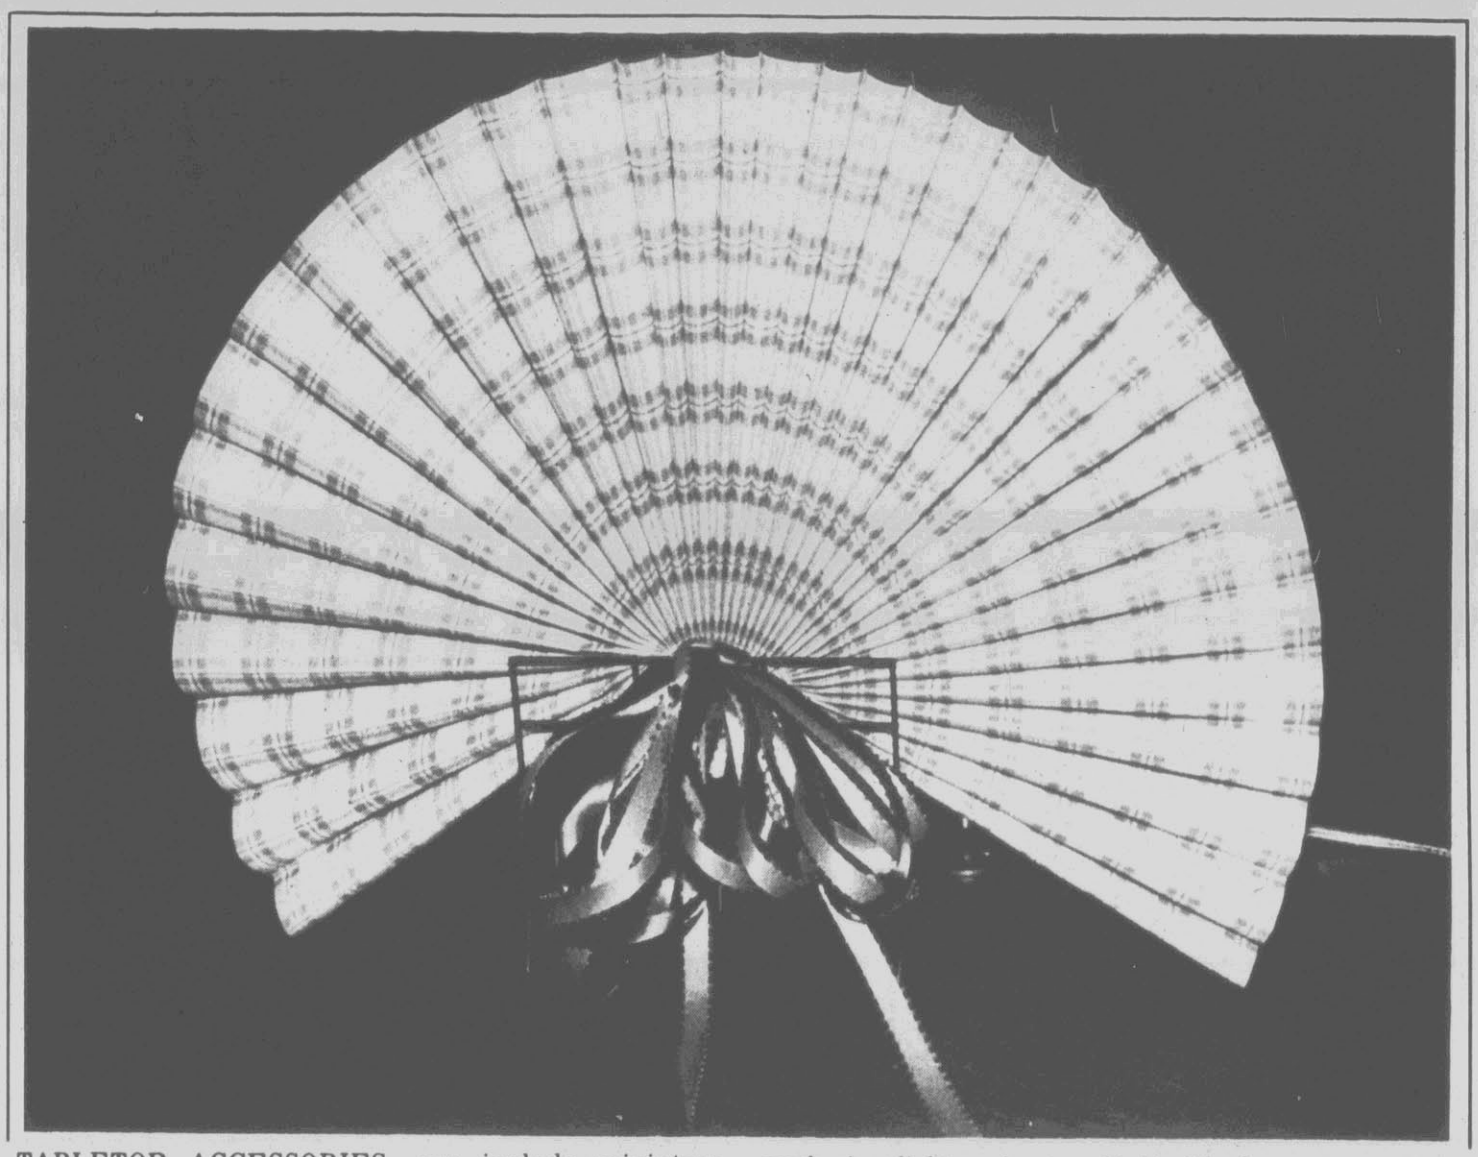
"To get started, cut the wallpaper into a 6-foot length, making sure both ends are square. Select a large work surface with a hard, square edge. You will need to use a straight edge to fold the paper in one direction and the edge of the table to fold it in the opposite direcion. Lay the paper face down and mark it off in sections across the width of the paper. Fold the paper back (face side up) three times to form a pocket. After folding the paper in opposite directions, the fan is formed and drapery weights are added to both end pockets. Glue a piece of 1-inch grosgrain ribbon around the folded end. A finishing touch can be added with a small brass rosette." said Mrs. Spangler.

Two workshop participants, Vicki Murray and Sally Qualheim of Greenville, used identical wallpaper for fans, each adding ribbon trim in different colors, which added distinctive changes to each.

"This was a morning well spent," said Mrs. Qualheim. "I am very impressed and I thoroughly enjoyed it. I am enthused about making more as gifts," she said. She is moving to Birmingham next week with her husband.

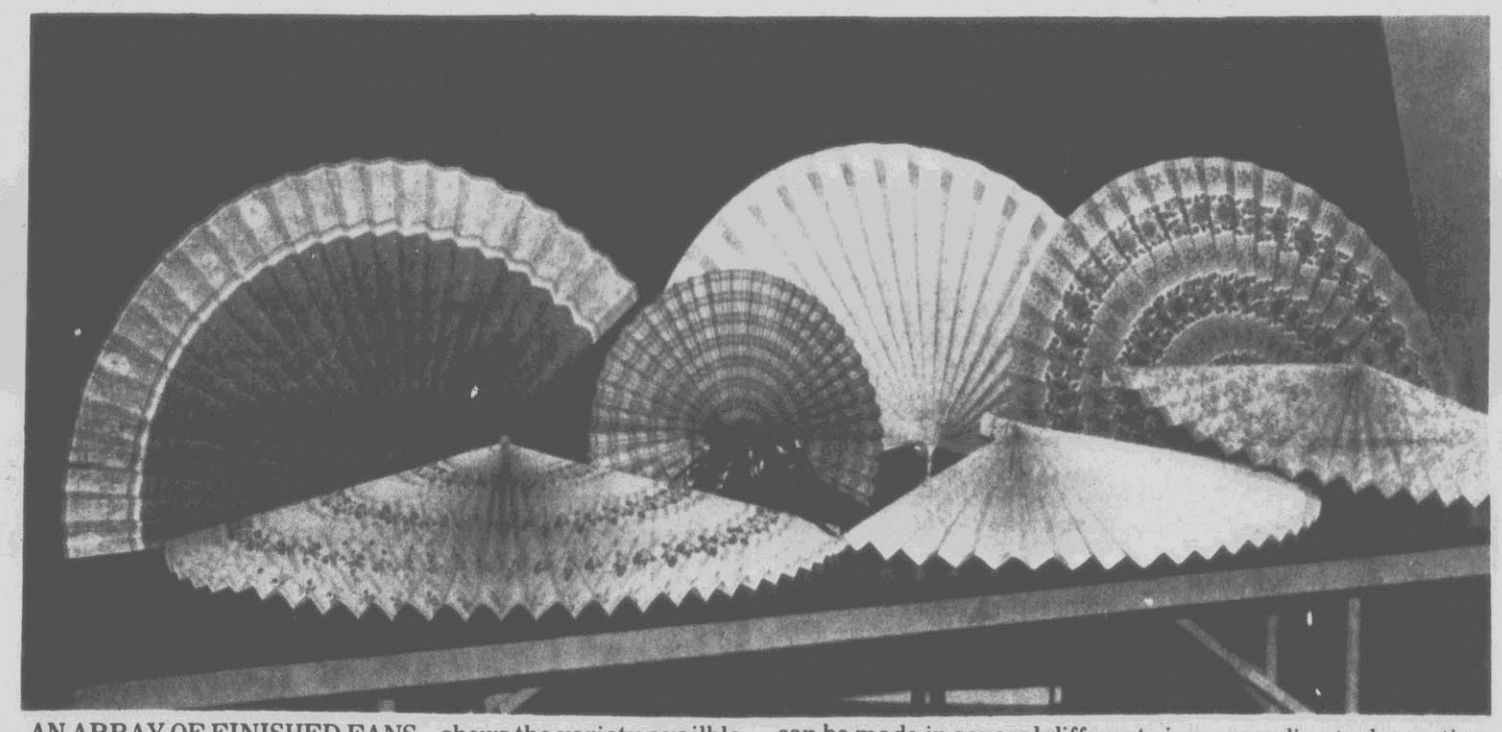
Mrs. Murray plans to use her fan as a wall decoration. "I enjoyed the workshop and I plan to involve my children in making fans," she said.

Additional workshops are being planned for July. Interested persons should call the Agricultural Extension Office, 752-2934, for details.

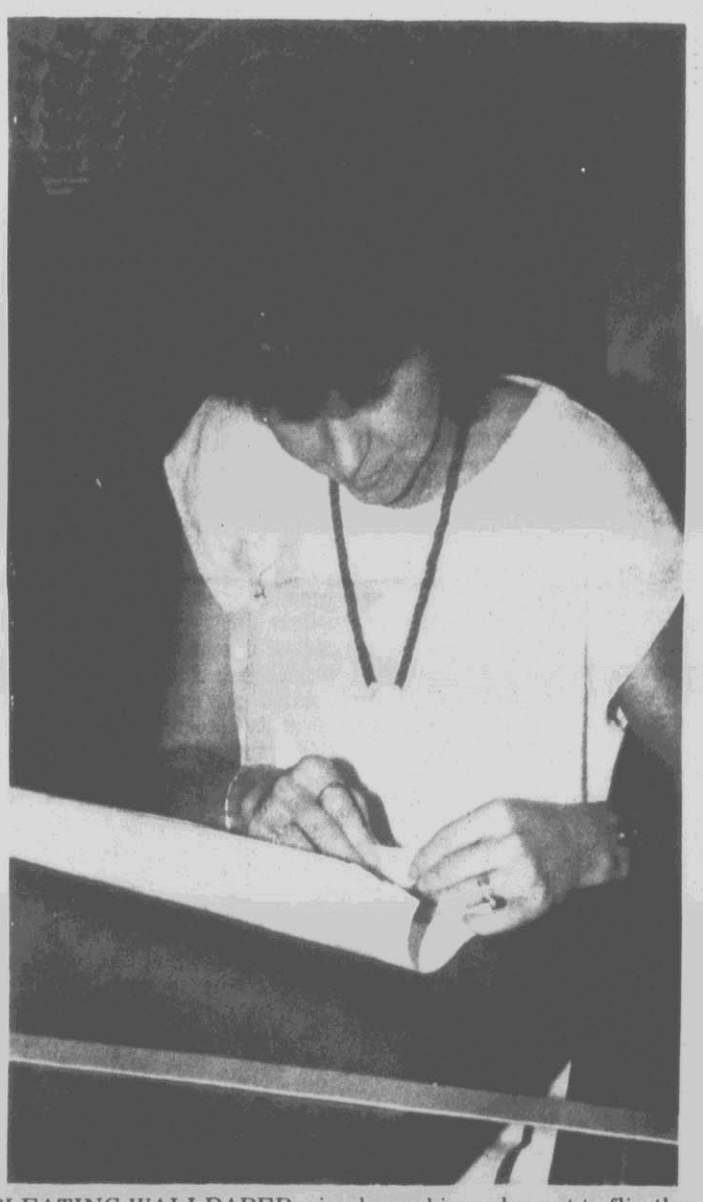


TABLETOP ACCESSORIES...can include miniature wallpaper fans tied with coordinating ribbons. For nighttime emphasis, a light can be placed behind the fan.

Text And Photos By Rosalie Trotman



AN ARRAY OF FINISHED FANS...shows the variety availble in selecting floral, plaid or wallpaper with a border. The fans can be made in several different sizes according to decorating space.



PLEATING WALLPAPER...is planned in order not to flip the wallpaper over every other time during the pleating process. Sally Qualheim completes the final pocket on her fan.

GROSGRAIN RIBBON TRIM...is added to floral print wallpaper by Vicki Murray of Greenville. She plans to use her fan as a wall decoration.

Fragrance Week Celebrated This Week In New York City

By ANNE-MARIE SCHIRO
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — It isn't just the roses in bloom that are perfuming the air in New York this week. This is, by mayoral proclamation, Fragrance Week. Which explains those flower carts adding a touch of Paris to midtown streets, those floral wreaths on the lions guarding the 42d Street Public Library, and the even more aggressive than usual distribution of perfume samples in stores.

Friday is the last day for customers to pick up those samples, see exhibitions on the sense of smell in the major stores and take part in tests to determine their fragrance type.

Perfumers, packagers, suppliers, designers, advertising geniuses and retailers from all over the world have converged on the city to do their bit to promote the use of perfumes, colognes, toilet waters and after-shave lotions. There are no symposiums or official meetings but there are informal gatherings at lunches and cocktail parties and one formal event, the Recognition Awards Gala.

This annual black-tie dinner given by the Fragrance Foundation, a nonprofit industry group, honors outstanding fragrances of the year and people who have made special contributions to the industry and to the Fragrance Research Fund, which finances studies by various universities of the sense of smell and human reaction to odors.

"At this party, people really smell good," a guest remarked at Wednesday night's gala in the Waldorf-Astoria. "It's like a flower garden with all different scents."

Indeed, despite the recent popularity of exotic heady perfumes, the air in the hotel ballroom seemed to be filled with sweet floral aromas. Could there be a trend emerging? Liz Claiborne hopes so. She is introducing her first perfume in September in a venture with Avon. The scent is what is described as a green floral.

"I don't know those terms the perfume people use," Claiborne said. "I just wanted something that reflects what I think we're all about. It should be casual, exciting and action-oriented. My company doesn't have a sexy image."

But does the world really need one more perfume? "It's just like fashion," said Victor Gassman, president of Liz Claiborne Cosmetics. "If you can make a new expression and break new ground, the world is ready for you. Liz is a breakthrough, the reverse of a lot of today's fragrances."

"Prestige fragrances come and go," said James E. Preston, president of the Avon Division of Avon Products Inc. "You've got to expand the market to keep the business going." He acknowledged that the perfume market is flat, despite annual sales of $3 billion.

The awards dinner attracted 1,200 guests who had paid $350 or $500 a ticket to mingle over cocktails, dine on gazpacho, veal and chocolate charlotte and sit through nearly two hours of awards. Among the winners were Calvin Klein's Obsession, Perry Ellis for Men, Coco by Chanel and Chaps Musk by Ralph Lauren.

Citizenship Medals Presented Students

The Susanna Coutanch Evans chapter of the American Revolution presented good citizenship medals to several seventh graders in Pitt County.

Honored were Patrice Carman, A.G. Cox School; Tracy Blount, Ayden Middle; Kelly Andrews, Bethel Elementary; Nikki Adams, Chicod Elementary; Rhonda Davis, Farmville Middle; Lynette Byton, Grifton Elementary; Quincy Hawkins, G.R. Whitfield; Cindy Briley, Wellcome Middle; Bridgette Cratch and Jolyn Parsley, Greenville Middle.

Each school had a selection committee using a criteria of honor, service, courage, leadership and patriotism.

Rosalind Britt, Phyllis McLane and Dr. Lois Staton awarded the medals.

As the weather gets warmer, supermarkets offer more specials on cuts of meat that take longer to cook. Steaks increase in cost because of the demand for cook-outs.

Wedding Vows Said In Saturday Ceremony

ROXOBEL — The wedding ceremony of Lisa Ann Walston and Jeffrey Allen Briley took place Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. R. Hargus Taylor of Murfreesboro and the Rev. Charles L. Smith of Roxobel performed the double ring ceremony at Sandy Run Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie White Walston and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Garland Ray Briley, all of Roxobel.

Wedding music was presented by organist Eugene Baker of Edenton and pianist Ricky Kilian of Roanoke Rapids.

Presented in marriage by her parents, the bride was escorted by her father. She wore a formal length candlelight gown of organza over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline of chantilly lace embellished with seed pearls. Fastened with covered buttons at the ruffled cuff, the bishop sleeves were adorned with chantilly lace. Soft flowing organza fell from a basque waistline and was highlighted by a ruffled chantilly lace and florence of organza hemline. Ruffled tiers of florence of organza and chantilly lace extended into a chapel length train from an illusion veil bordered with chantilly lace and held by a camelot headpiece lavished with seed pearls and sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of bridal white roses, ivy and baby's breath with a white Bible in the center of the bouquet.

Robin Lassiter of Rich Square served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Jennifer Briley, sister of the bridegroom; Karen Harrell of Murfreesboro, Mehrzad Yazachi-Nejad and Shahrzad Yazdchi-Nejad, both of Iran. Jayne Briley, sister of the bridegroom, was junior bridesmaid.

The attendents wore victorian style formal length gowns of lavendar voile by Gunne Sax, Ltd. The white lace wedding band collar and lace V-yoke accented with criss-cross satin ribbon trim extended into a lace trimmed lavendar flounce. Pearl buttons fastened the back of the gown and a sash tied at the basque waistline. The full skirt was finished with a wide lavendar ruffle. The bridesmaids carried nosegays of lavendar carnations, pink pixies and baby's breath. The maid of honor's bouquet had an added touch of lavendar static.

Laura Johnson of Roxobel was the flower girl. She wore a full length lavendar dress with a ruffled hemline. The dress featured a high neckline and a white eyelet pinafore highlighted by lavendar ribbon. She carried a white basket accented by lavendar ribbon and filled with pink and lavendar petals.

The best man was the father of the bridegroom. Ushers were Randy Walston, brother of the bride; Wyatt Pruden of Roxobel, cousin of the bridegroom; Mark Nelson of Falkland, and Roney Abraham of India. The junior usher was Travis Pruden of Roxobel, nephew of the bridegroom. Michael Anders of Rock Hill, cousin of the bridegroom, was the ring bearer.

Mrs. Bettie Walston of Roxobel, aunt of the bride, was the mistress of ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cole of Rich Square presided at the guest register.

A garden reception, hosted by the parents of the bride, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Garland Briley. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Walston of Roxobel and their daughter, Sara, greeted guests at the register.

MRS. BRILEY

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the bridegroom at the Roxobel Community Building, and the couple was honored with many showers and parties.

After a wedding trip to the Poconos, the couple will live in Greenville. The bride is a student at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Martin Community College and is employed at FMS Tools.

Harrington-Folston Wedding Vows Said

STANTONSBURG — Dorothy Jean Folston of Greenville and Danny Arthur Harrington of Wilson were united in marriage Saturday evening at 6 o'clock in the Stantonsburg Methodist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Douglas Woodworth, and the organist was Donna Lou Edwards. Chris Croom of Tarboro was the trumpeter, and Mrs. Kim Buck sang "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William T. Folston of Stantonsburg and the late Mr. Folston. Mr. and Mrs. Ollie A. Harrington of Greenville are the parents of the bridegroom.

Escorted by her brother, William T. Folston Jr., the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of bridal taffeta and beaded re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a sweetheart neckline, fluted petal sleeves and a torso waistline. Re-embroidered alencon lace etched with seed pearls appliqued the bodice and outlined the neckline and torso waist. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion attached to a halo of bridal silk flowers and pearl sprays. She carried a cascade bouquet of mixed blue and white spring flowers accented by blue and white streamers.

The matron of honor was Debbie F. Lamm of Lucama, sister of the bride. Bridemaids were Gale Tyndall of Stantonsburg; Nancy Harrington, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Lynn Davis, Jeanne Thomas and Helen Gillette, all of Greenville. Honorary bridesmaids were Lynn Folston, Tara Tyndall and Shannon Tyndall, all of Stantonsburg, and Julia Salas of Raleigh. The flower girl was Kristen Lamm of Lucama, niece of the bride.

Each attendent wore a floor length gown of periwinkle blue taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a sweetheart neckline, fluted petal sleeves and a torso waistline. Each attendant carried a bouquet of mixed blue and white spring flowers tied with blue and white streamers.

The flower girl wore a floor length gown of white taffeta accented with pearls and sequins. She carried a white wicker basket of mixed spring flowers, and she wore a halo of white silk flowers.

The best man was the father of the bridegroom, and ushers were Dennis Harrington, brother of the bridegroom; John Mattheis, and Ernie Evans, both of Greenville, and William T. Folston Jr. of Stantonsburg and Donald Folston of Tarboro, both brothers of the bride.

A reception was held at the Farmville Daughters of the American Republic House. Lynn Folston served punch and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Morris of Greenville, sister and brother-in-law of the bridegroom, presided at the register. Entertainment was provided by B&H Music of Bailey.

The parents of the bridegroom hosted a rehearsal dinner at the King and Queen Restaurant. The couple was honored with a pig picking at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Lamm of Lucama and with other miscellaneous showers.

After a wedding trip to Paradise Island, Nassau, Bahamas, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is an East Carolina University graduate employed by the Carolina Organ Procurement Agency. The bridegroom is a graduate of ECU and the University of University of North Carolina School of Law. He is employed by Branch Banking and Trust of Wilson.

Dear Abby — By Abigail Van Buren

Love Letter May Be Gift Of Lifetime

DEAR READERS: Last year, my Father's Day column brought a surprising number of requests from editors of church bulletins, newsletters and other publications asking permission to reprint it. Many readers wrote to say that they had put my suggestion to use, and found it more appreciated than any gift they had given Dad. I was encouraged to run it annually, so here it is:

DEAR ABBY: The week before Father's Day, you wrote: "Don't give Dad another tie, shirt or wallet; give him something he will cherish forever — a letter telling him how much he means to you."

Well, I composed a letter on the bus to work that very morning, typed it on my lunch hour and mailed it to my father in a beautiful card that evening. He was actually my stepfather, but he had been more of a father to me than my real father. I knew it would mean a lot to him, especially since he was in the hospital at the time. He died on July 5, and I'm so glad I wrote that letter. Now I can live with myself, knowing that he knew how I felt about him.

Thank you so very much for making me put my thoughts of love and gratitude on paper. If this letter helps just one person to do what I did, it was worth writing. — NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR ABBY: My father wrote to you at least 12 years ago, and you put his letter in your column. (You reprinted it twice on request.) My father had it framed, and when we brought him here last year to live with us, he carried it in his hands for fear it might get damaged or lost.

When he heard that his letter had been framed and hung in the chapel of a cemetery, he said, "What a pity it will be seen only by those for whom it is too late. It would accomplish more posted on a bulletin board in a high school."

Abby, he made me promise that after he died I would write and ask you to run it once more. He died one week ago today (72), so I hope you will print it once more in memory of my beloved father. Here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person in the world. I could always find the time to go everywhere else, but never time to go visit Mom and Dad. They sat at home alone and loved me just the same. It's too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give. Now when I go to their graves and see the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them when they were alive. I pray to God that those who still have their parents to visit, do so, and show their love and respect while there is still time, for it's later than you think. — TOO LATE"

DEAR ABBY: As a father, I made a lot of mistakes (my son is now 14), but I know I did at least one thing right, and I'd like to share it with you.

When my son was 3 years old, I started giving him an allowance of 50 cents a week. There was one catch — he could spend 25 cents on anything he wanted, but the other 25 cents he had to put in his piggy bank. He could spend his piggy bank savings any way he wanted, but only after it reached $10.

Each week he spent his 25 cents on candy and gum, but he never really thought much about his savings — until he got his first $10. When he realized what he could get if he saved up his money, he began saving all his allowance.

Every year on his birthday, his allowance was increased 50 cents, so he had 25 cents more to save. Also the amount he had to save increased $10.

He now has his first after-school job, and he's saving for a set of drums and a school trip to France.

I have never talked to him directly about the virtues of saving, but he saves money like no other teen-ager I know. — PROUD SEATTLE POPPA

DEAR POPPA: You have a right to be proud — of yourself, as well as your son.

You gave your son a gift that will last him a lifetime: a lesson in the value of saving.

APPLIANCE QUESTIONS:

Q. I plan to buy a room air conditioner. Besides the size of the window and the size of the room, is there anything else I need to consider?

A. Several considerations go into selecting the best room air conditioner for your particular needs. For example, how many windows are in the room? How many of the walls are outside (exterior) walls? What directions do the windows face? How well insulated is the roof (or ceiling)?

The answers to these questions determine the room air conditioner cooling capacity (BTU/hour) your room needs. A room air conditioner with too little cooling capacity will not cool the room adequately. One that's too large will not lower the humidity enough to prevent the cold, clammy feeling caused by chilly humid air.

Q. My new compactor isn't flattening trash as it should. What's wrong?

A. Some consumers expect compactors to flatten every can and bottle, no matter how few items are in the trash drawer. Actually a certain level of trash is required before compaction is evident, because the ram does not travel all the way to the bottom of the drawer.

Even after sufficient trash buildup, certain items require repeated pressure before they're crushed. Some plastic soda bottles are so resilient, they'll never flatten completely, and glass bottles in an upright position can withstand considerable pressure.

For best results, items shoud always be placed on their sides in the trash drawer. This facilitates compaction and eliminates the possibility of a bottle becoming wedged between the ram and drawer.

Some models allow the consumer to stop the ram when it reaches its full downward extension, thus freezing its position overnight for maximum compaction.

Q. Why is water dripping from the air conditioner into my room?

A. Dripping is usually a result of the air conditioner not being tilted properly during installation. Follow manufacturer's instructions for installing the unit, making sure the room air conditioner is tilted so the condensate will drain to the outside rather than into the room. Also, check and clean the drain hole in back of the unit (on the outside) to keep it unplugged.

Dripping can occur during periods of extreme humidity. To minimize dripping, keep room doors closed, turn the thermostat to a warmer setting and use a "medium" rather than a "low" fan setting.

Q. My laundry has an odor after it is washed and dried. Why?

A. The problem is difficult to pinpoint, but there are some possiblities.

•Clothes that have been left in the washer for longer than 24 hours. When this happens, clothes mildew, which creats an odor. Clothes should be removed from the washer as soon as possible after the cycle ends.

•Something is obstructing the dryer's ducting. The ducting should be cleaned annually to maintain efficient drying. The hinged cover and the hood at the outside of the exhaust duct should be cleaned more freqently so that it opens and closes freely.

•With a gas dryer, fumes with paint, varnish or substances used in remodeling or cleaning can be drawn into the dryer with the air intake for the gas burner. This can result in a transfer of the odor to any clothes that are dried in the dryer.

To remove odors, launder clothes in the hottest water possible for the color and the type of fabric, using more than the usual amount of detergent. Some type of disinfectant, such as chlorine bleach, may be necessary to remove the odor completely.

Call the local agricultural extension office to get the toll-free number of your appliance manufacturer.

Britain's Souvenir Industry In High Gear For Royal Wedding

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — With their wedding only weeks away, Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson have been showing up around London on thousands of book covers, dish towels and coffee mugs.

Royal weddings, births, coronations and jubilee anniversaries nearly always unleash a flood of souvenirs, and the July 23 marriage of the playboy prince and his freckled fiancee is no exception.

In keeping with time-tested marketing techniques, mementoes of the pageantry at Westminster Abbey are pitched at a range of tastes and pocketbooks.

Bargain-hunters can stock up on 12-pence (18-cent) and 17-pence (26-cent) postage stamps featuring an unretouched snapshot of the couple taken by a friend of the prince, Gene Norcon, an amateur photographer.

At the other end of the price scale, jewelers H. Samuel, with 360 stores in Britain, plans to offer rings similar to Miss Ferguson's engagement band, a ruby set in a cluster of 10 diamonds. Spokeswoman Linda Trottman said the company has not decided on a price, although the Financial Times, a London business daily, reported they would sell for 1,000 pounds ($1,500) each.

Most souvenirs are both decorative and functional; hence, there are dish towels that double as wall hangings; plates, cups and saucers that can sit prettily on the shelf when not in use, and thimbles designed for the eye as much as the finger.

Tastes vary, but Queen Elizabeth II has let it be known what kind of souvenirs she deems suitable for her son's marriage. Guidelines issued by Buckingham Palace in March said the souvenirs must be free of any advertising or implication of royal approval and "be in good taste."

The guidelines banned any clothing, other than headscarves, bearing royal images or emblems. The ban, aimed mainly at T-shirt manufacturers, prompted an outcry from the British textile industry, which complained it would help foreign competitors who would not feel bound by royal preferences.

The legality of the ban has not been tested, and at least one British manufacturer, Imagine Transfers, has decided to ignore it. The company is producing thousands of T-shirts featuring the couple framed by a red heart with the word "Congratulations" in blue.

The wedding in 1981 of Prince Charles and Princess Diana generated an estimated 200 million pounds (then $400 million) in souvenir sales. But with less interest in Andrew's marriage, the souvenir bonanza is likely to be much smaller this time around.

The royal family's official souvenir is a glossy, 32-page magazine with 70 photographs, including a portrait of Miss Ferguson taken by Andrew and a snapshot of the couple at the age of 10 chatting at a polo match. Both are 26 now.

The magazine, published by the charity Royal Jubilee Trusts, sells for 2.25 pounds ($3.38). It was launched this month with an initial press run of 300,000, which is 50,000 fewer than the first printing of the 1981 official wedding souvenir.

Staffordshire Potteries, the world's largest manufacturer of coffee mugs, sold 2.5 million mugs worth a total of 1 million pounds (then $2 million) for Charles' wedding.

For Andrew's wedding, the company has sold 150,000 souvenir mugs so far, said spokeswoman Nikki Chee. She said it was too early to say how many wedding mugs the company will produce in all, but conceded demand probably would fall well below the 1981 total.

Wedgwood, which has been producing blue and white ceramics featuring embossed portraits of royalty for two centuries, is offering seven pieces commemorating the upcoming event. They range from a 5.50-pound ($6.25) tray to a limited edition of 100 vases at 495 pounds ($743) each.

Wedgwood spokesman Derek Halfpenny said sculptors and designers have been working overtime to keep up with demand, adding that the company was expecting total sales to reach the equivalent of $3 million. Halfpenny said he did not have an estimate of Wedgwood sales for the 1981 wedding.

Although souvenirs are beginning to appear in sidewalk stalls and department stores all over London, at least one vendor is steering clear of the whole wedding business.

Indian-born D.N. Gupta, who runs Fancy Times, a souvenir shop near the Tower of London, said he still has about $70,000 worth of silver-plated souvenirs left over from the wedding of Charles and Diana.

"If you ask my view from experience in the business over the past 20 years, the last one was a flop and this one won't be any better," he said.

Double Ring Ceremony Performed In Wilson

WILSON — Beverly Lynn Little became the bride of Stephen Andrew Edwards in a double ring ceremony Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the First Baptist Church. The Rev. William R. Bussey performed the ceremony.

Clyde Patterson was the organist, and C.A. Nelson was the soloist.

The parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James D. "Mickey" Little of Wilson, and Mr. Benjamin Dawson Edwards of Wilmington and Mrs. Elena Minear Yott of Durham.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of candlelight silk organza over a taffeta design with a high neckline encircled with re-embroidered lace. A border of lace trimmed the long organza sleeves and matching lace enhanced the fitted empire bodice. The modified A-line skirt extended to an attached chapel length train. Crystal pleated organza bordered with scalloped re-embroidered lace edged the hemline and train. The waltz length candlelight illusion veil was held in place by a Juliet cap trimmed in lace to match the gown. She carried a cascading bouquet of silk candlelight sweetheart roses, apricot florets and baby's breath interspersed with candlelight ribbon and streamers.

The maid of honor was Paula Jane Little of Wilson, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Nancy Louise Linville and Viginia Carr Whitaker, both of Raleigh. Honorary bridesmaids were Debra Little Bunn of Garner and Patricia Annette Little of Wilson, sisters of the bride; Carmen Riley Edwards of Durham, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Dawn Elizabeth Gainey of Garner. The flower girl was Courtney Cowan Bunn of Garner, niece of the bride.

Each attendant wore a full length gown fashioned with a semi-full skirt of border print voile over candlelight. The fitted basque bodice was apricot taffeta. A candlelight lace bertha complimented the scoop neckline. Each attendant carried a mixed colonial nosegay with matching streamers. Each attendant wore pearl necklaces given to them by the bride.

The flower girl wore a similar gown with an apricot taffeta sash. She carried a miniature version of the bridesmaid's nosegay.

The best man was Jeremiah Minear Edwards of Durham, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Benjamin Ingram Edwards II of Durham, brother of the bridegroom; Wilton Howell Bunn Jr. of Garner, brother-in-law of the bride; David Allison Harward of Durham, and Thomas Christian Petersen of Detroit. The ring bearer was Wilton Howell Bunn III of Garner, nephew of the bride.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church, hosted by the parents of the bride. Mrs. Allen Dilda presided at the guest register, and Mrs. Paul Shackelford, grandmother of the bride, played piano selections during the reception. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Douglas, aunt and uncle of the bride, greeted guests.

A rehearsal dinner, hosted by the parents of the bridegroom, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Douglas; hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Howell Bunn Jr., Miss Patricia Annette Little and Miss Paula Jane Little.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., the couple will live in Greenville. The bride is a graduate of Peace College and is a senior at East Carolina University. The bridegroom, a graduate of Appalachian State University, is employed by Burroughs Wellcome.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Getting a family to sit down and eat together has never been easy. When the children are small you have to pry them away from the TV set or pull them out of the bathroom.

When they get a little older, you have to plan your meals around football or band practice, library hours, dental appointments and scout meetings.

Later, it's their jobs and social life that interfere. Compared to getting kids together AFTER they leave home, it's a day at the beach.

I started a month ahead of time to get together seven members of our family for our son's birthday. Our daughter couldn't come on his birthday because she had an exam in a night class. The night before that my husband would be out of town, and my parents had another commitment.

Mother suggested a week before the event. I called our out-of-town son and asked his answering machine what he thought of the week before.

He called two days later and told my answering machine he had missed his deadline for special airline rates and couldn't afford the ticket without it. He suggested the weekend after his birthday.

I called everyone again, but our daughter had concert tickets that if she didn't get to use she would personally have antagonism for the entire family for the rest of her life.

My husband suggested a weekday night like Thursday when no one was busy. I checked my calendar to discover I was out of town and wouldn't be home in time to clean the toilets and you don't give a birthday party without clean toilets!

Someone suggested the beginning of the next month, but that was out of the question as the rugs were being cleaned and you can't have a festive atmosphere with bare floors.

The option came up of having it on the spur of the moment before anyone made plans, but that was scratched as no one had a present.

My mother said we should put the birthday off until summer as you can plan nice meals outside and it's a much nicer time of year. She and my dad were free except for doctors' appointments and they didn't like to make social engagements for dinner as the doctor often ran late and she didn't want to be "stressed out" at a party.

About 65 phone calls later, miracle of miracles, I finally got six people who were available on the same night. I called my son and said, "We are celebrating your birthday a week from Tuesday." He said, "You should have checked with me. I'm busy that night."

I told my mother, "No wonder Lincoln and Washington have birthdays on Mondays. It's the only day everyone could show up."

She said, "To be safe, maybe you could throw in a sale."

Rich Red Ruby Is July's Birthstone

DALLAS (AP) — The ruby, a rich red stone representing passion, vitality and exuberance, is a brilliant way for July birthday celebrators to add more color to their lives, says Ray Zajicek, president of the American Gem Trade Association (AGTA) based in Dallas.

Called "ratnaraj," meaning "king of the precious gems," by the Hindus, the rich red ruby is the birthstone for July.

"The ruby has long been acclaimed by leaders and royalty such as the Mongolian Kublai Khan, rulers of the Peacock Throne and English royals," says Zajicek.

"Most recently, Prince Andrew of England chose a ruby engagement ring for Sarah Ferguson," he adds.

A ruby's value is determined by its size, clarity and intensity of color, Zajicek explains. Because large rubies are scarce and costly, the most prevalent sizes used in jewelry are one carat or less.

A ruby can be red only, but several colors can modify the body tone of the gem, he points out. A pink modifier can create the look of a "Burma" ruby, recognized by its "hot pink" shade of red. Other rubies can reveal a "redder" look, due to brown modifiers, or a purplish-red tone called "pigeon blood" ruby.

While modifying shades can affect the price of the gem, the ultimate decision of the customers should rest with the color that is most pleasing to their own eye and most complementary to their complexion, jewelry experts point out.

Blondes or those with ruddy skin tones may find the pink undertones of a Burma ruby most becoming, while those with olive or dark skin tones might prefer the brownish undertones of a "Thai" ruby.

Found in Burma, Thailand, India, Sri Lanka and Africa, the precious red gemstones in all tones and shades are very durable, Zajicek notes, making them an excellent choice for any jewelry creation — including rings, necklaces, pendants, bracelets and earrings.

Ancient cultures placed the ruby first among gemstones, dividing them into lots according to their beauty and flawlessness, AGTA researchers report. Superior stones were kept separate from inferior ones because contact was said to contaminate the better gem and diminish its magical powers.

Ivan the Terrible of Russia thought the stone purified the blood and was good for the heart, brain and memory.

Legend holds that the ruby protects the harmony, security and status of the wearer. Other legends surrounding the ruby say it has the power to give its wearer health, wealth and wisdom and to aid intuition.

Mammography Aids Cancer Detection

Mammography — breast x-ray — has become a leading weapon in the battle against breast cancer.

It spots tiny cancers too small to feel, giving doctors an early edge in treatment and greatly increasing the chances of cure.

That's why the North Carolina Medical Society recommends that mammography be a routine test, especially for women over 35 years old. Each woman should have her first breast x-ray between the ages of 35 and 40 and get one every other year during then 40's and every year after 50, a Society spokesman said.

Some women avoid this procedure out of fear of radiation. The spokesman said these fears are unfounded. Today's mammography machine provide better picture with far less radiation exposure than older model. Even with use of the older machines, the benefits outweigh the risks, he said.

One of every 11 women in this country has breast cancer or will have it, he said. It is the second leading cause of cancer death in women.

For further information about mammorgraphy and its benefits, call the N.C. chapter of the American Cancer Society toll-free information number, 1-800-ACS-2345.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

Another common decorating mistake is permitting one dominant element - such as an old-fashioned, red brick fireplace - to spoil a color scheme. There can be no sacred cows in good decorating.

One cannot ignore an eyesore like a red fireplace. There are other options such as painting the outside brick a color and painting the inside brick black so as not to draw attention to smut on the inside of the fireplace. (Remember, one cannot throw in an off beat color and not use it at least in two other places to be effective.) Painting an old fashioned fireplace gives it more of a contemporary look and if one doesn't want to use red in the color scheme, a neutral, like white, might be a good alternative.

The type of fireplace screen used could give an old fireplace an uplift. Now they are making some very attractive brass trimmed screens which can be custom ordered to fit odd size fireplaces.

Many elements, which you take for granted, must be considered in decorating and many times can be changed or altered to vastly improve a situation. At Betsy Drake Interiors our decorating expertise and experience has worked to the advantage of thousands of satisfied customers. We invite you to stop by our store or call to schedule an appointment in your home or office and discover first hand how we can help.

Lace and ruffles accented the back panel of the gown. She wore a white row of flowers accented with ribbon in her hair and carried pink and white silk carnations accented with baby's breath and pink and white streamers.

Paulette Hill-Ward of Raleigh, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a pink linen street length suit with an eyelet collar silk blouse with a pleated front. She carried pink and white silk carnations with pink and white streamers.

MRS. WARREN

Bridesmaids included Sandra Wallace of Winterville and Jackie Cherry of Greenville. Both bridesmaids wore suits identical to that of the honor attendant and carried pink silk carnations with pink streamers.

Flower girls were Leonda Nicole Hill, daughter of the bride from Winterville, and Montego Latrise Clemmons of Greenville, niece of the bride. High Noon Wedding Performed Saturday

The First Presbyterian Church provided the wedding scene for Hannah Elizabeth Lewis of Greenville and Terrence Scott Troyer of Harrisonburg, Va., at noon Saturday.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Daniel Wilkers, and the organist was Dr. E. Robert Irwin. Vocalist was Jerry Jolley and trumpeter was Glen Buck.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Furman Lewis Jr. of Greenville. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Richard Troyer of Hartville, Ohio, are the parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal length gown of white silkened organza over taffeta designed with a high neckline encircled with a stand-up collar appliqued in medallions of floral patterned silk Venise lace interspersed with re-embroidered alencon lace. The gown featured a sheer yoke of imported English net with a fitted bodice overlaid in alencon lace and silk Venise lace florets. The short cap sleeves were also appliqued in lace. Lace trimmed the skirt front and edged the hemline which extended to an attached sweep train. She wore a chapel length veil of imported illusion edged in Aaencon and Venise lace to compliment her gown.

The maid of honor was Bonnie Lewis of Charlotte, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Amanda R. Schwenke of Durham; Amanda Troyer of Hartville, Ohio; Mary Jean Allen of Harrisonburg, Va., and Anna Jane Lewis of Augusta, Ga.

Each attendent wore a formal length gown of candy matte taffeta designed with an open sweetheart neckline and dropped basque waistline emphasized with cording of self-fabric. Matching cording accented the fitted bodice. Short French pouf sleeves fashioned of gathered taffeta accented the gown, which had a full circular skirt. Each attendant carried an arm bouquet of summer flowers.

The best man was Richard Troyer of Hartville, Ohio, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were James F. Lewis III of Winston-Salem, and Stephen W. Lewis of Greenville, brothers of the bride; Myron Coblentz of Hartville, Ohio, and Gaylord Miller of Souderton, Pa.

A wedding brunch was given by the parents of the bride at the Greenville Rotary Club, and guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Vigil Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Bryant and Dr. and Mrs. Jon Tingelstad. Cake was served by Rosemarie Priestley and Dotty Blake of Gastonia. Music was provided by Harmonia, with Ruth Moskop on the harp and Lynne Marks on the flute.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Colonial Inn, Farmville, and a bridesmaids luncheon was given by friends of the bride. A wedding breakfast was given by Mrs. Hannah W. Robinson, grandmother of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. C.P. Robinson Jr., aunt and uncle of the bride.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live in Harrisonburg, Va. for the summer.

The bride graduated from East Carolina University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Eastern Mennonite College, Harrisonburg, Va.

Blouses Called 'Important'

By BERNADINE MORRIS
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Call them blouses this season, not shirts. The styling is simple enough — soft turtlenecks and surplice effects are prominent — but the fabrics are luxurious silk satin or crepe, and the colors are white or black.

As one of these white blouses was modeled with, say, a slender black velvet skirt that stopped at the top of the ankles and a neat leather belt at the waistline, it was usually greeted with a great round of applause when the fall collections were introduced on Seventh Avenue recently. In their simplicity and glamour, the outfits captured the spirit of American design for the new season.

As buyers returned to the showrooms to place their orders, the blouse achieved a pivotal position in the collections.

"We're oversold on some styles," said Mary Ann Restivo, who considers the blouse "a major statement for not-too-dressed-up evenings."

She shows it in colors such as champagne and charcoal as well as the basic black and white and recommends it with straight pleated skirts as well as those that slither over the hips and flare out near the hemline.

But that's not all. There are more elaborate styles to wear with floor-length skirts for more formal evenings as well as more classic blouses for day.

The daytime styles are planned to go with a variety of jackets and skirts. Without the jacket, "they have a more dressed-up look for when you're going out to lunch at a nice place," Miss Restivo said.

Restivo is just one of the sportswear designers who have made the silk blouse a key component of their separates collections. Ron Leal of Betty Hanson says he finds it appropriate for "work, weekends and evening." He designs some styles with novelty details such as a detachable jabot or a back panel that suggests a trench coat. He finds that store buyers are occasionally picking them as an alternative to jackets, believing they look important enough to stand on their own.

Smocking is one of the details used by Bill Blass to give his blouses distinction. Calvin Klein favors white silk blouses with short full skirts propped by petticoats and sheer black blouses with wide-leg pants, both types for evening.

June Jubilee Luncheon Set

A "June jubilee" luncheon will be held Tuesday for members of the Greenville Christian Women's Club.

The program will start at 11:30 a.m. and will be held at the Greenville Country Club.

Special features will include Dr. Lois Staton showing crewel embroidery and vocal selections by Vicki Hardee Dixon. The guest speaker will be Claire Burkett of Chesterfield, Va.

For luncheon and nursery reservations call Lillian McCurdy at 756-9158 or Winona Daniel at 756-1718. Nursery facilities are at the First Christian Church.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

A COMPOSITE . . . Shown here is a composite of preliminary sketches for eight portraits of women in a show of work by artist Nina Freifeld. The exhibit of large woodblock prints is currently on view in the South Gallery of the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street. In the Upstairs Gallery, the current show is one of marble sculpture by Tim Rider. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Woodblock Prints, Sculpture In Current GMA Exhibitions

Not many artists today work in the medium of woodblock prints. For that reason and more especially because the woodblock prints by Nina Freifeld are large, bold and strong in visual impact, they are a welcome reminder of how rewarding stark black and white woodblock prints can be.

One of two changing exhibitions now on view at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street, this show, displayed in the museum's North Gallery, is all of one piece. The pieces are large individual portraits of eight women chosen by the artist as subjects for the theme — "Extraordinary Women: A Series."

It is not necessary to know the history of these women, what they have achieved or who they are personally, to be responsive to the magnetic quality of their personalities reflected in the portraits. The viewer can surmise, without any clue, that these are people of singular inner strength. Their personalities are captured directly and simply in the direct way they appeal, achieved without external trappings. Intelligence and vitality are registered in these portraits.

Ms. Freifeld has made this body of work more revealing from her own viewpoint by the inclusion of all eight subjects in a single, large composite. These preliminary studies give a meaningful insight into how the artist works.

Two of the subjects are repeated in individual portraits with color added — in one case a bright green, in the other red. These add nothing to the pleasures of this fine show — if anything, they detract.

Ms. Freifeld is a 1983 M.F.A. graduate of East Carolina Univeristy and a former student at the Art Students League in New York City. She has had several one-artist shows in Washington, D.C., at Duke University, the Fayetteville Museum of Art, and in Raleigh.

• In the upstairs gallery, the second current changing show is that of marble sculpture by Tim Rider. This young artist is now devoting full time to sculpture.

He is presenting small and medium size pieces encompossing a range of subject matter from head studies and torsos of humans to fish, birds and non-representational pieces. Most of the latter category are elongated, vertical in format.

There remains in his efforts a noticeable awkwardness in creating human studies from marble. At this time, he seems more confident in the non-representational pieces. These indicate the artist has a more natural feel for that particular form. He also shows a good sense of mastery in the utilization of the colors of his basic material — Vermont white marble, green marble, gray Georgia marble, black and pink marbles. In some pieces, he has taken risks in shaping material so thinly that light can glow through the marble. And the risks work to good effect in an unexpected luminosity of stone.

Rider describes his emphasis as an attempt to "project an inward feeling towards an external object."

Together, these two shows represent the satisfying diversity of the changing exhibits being shown at the Greenville Museum of Art. Visitors will also find changing displays of art from the musuem's permanent collection on view in the two South Galleries.

Admission is free. Musuem hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesdays through Fridays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays, 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays, closed Mondays and on major holidays.

Frans van Baars Art On View In PCMH's First Floor Hallways

Art by Frans van Baars of New Bern is currently on exhibit in the first floor main hallways of Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The exhibit can be seen through the month of June.

A native of the Netherlands and son of a Dutch Merchant Marine father, Frans and his mother and family members spent holidays and summer vacations on the high seas on the father's vessel. The coming of World War II changed all that. During the war years they lived through typical wartime austerity. After the war, the family rebuilt their lives and Frans' father returned to his ship.

SHOWN AT WORK . . . Artist Frans van Baars, now a resident of New Bern, is exhibiting examples of his art in the downstairs hallways at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. A native of The Netherlands, he served in the Dutch Merchant Marines before coming to the U.S. in 1956 where he joined the U.S. Navy. The show will be on view through June.

At 16, the younger van Baars joined the Dutch Merchant Marine, but by 1956, when he was 20, he was eager to try a new kind of life. In June, 1956 he came to the U.S. and after filing his intent to become a U.S., he joined the U.S. Navy. He specialized in submarine service and was a crewman on many of the early nuclear submarines.

In his service years, Frans van Baar was never without his sketch pad. He dreamed of the time after retirement when he could devote himself to art. Then, in a shipboard fall, he broke his neck and was paralyzed. He was told he would never walk again, but he was determined not to remain an invalid. By the time the Navy discharged him in 1968, he was well on his way to becoming a professional artist.

In 1970 he completed the Ivy School of Professional Art in Pittsburgh. In the past dozen or so years, he has won numerous painting awards and has exhibited in one man shows throughout the eastern United States.

For the past ten years, van Baars has continued to exhibit while also teaching in public schools and colleges in North Carolina.

He had his first international exhibit in 1983 in the Netherlands Antilles and plans to have exhibitions in Europe in the future. Art by van Baars is in the collections of corporations, museums and private collections worldwide. His work can be seen at the van Baars Gallery on Pollock Street in New Bern.

His works is included in the collecton of R.J. Reynolds Industries, IBM Corporation and Southern Life Insurance Company, among other collections.

The Keen exhibition will be on view through August 24.

In the center's main gallery, "Neon!" an exhibition of works in neon by Eric Cook, Claire Cooperstein and Jerry Noe will be on view July 24-August 24.

Admission to the galleries of the Green Hill Center for North Carolina Art is free. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays and from 2 to 5 p.m. weekends. The center is located at 200 N. Davie Street. For more details, call 373-4515.

Tourists

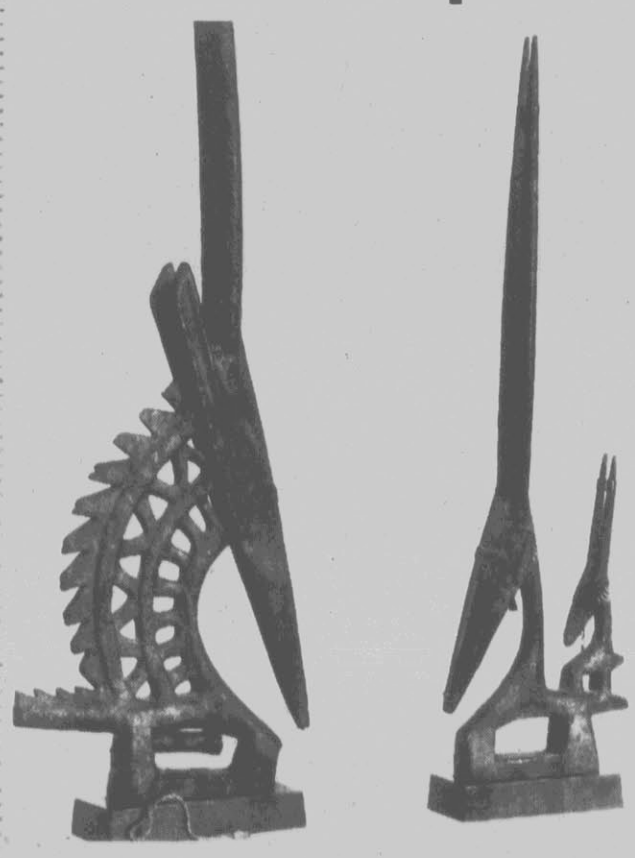
PEKING (AP) — China plans to increase tourist facilities and improve services in the hopes of quadrupling the number of foreign tourists who visit annually to 12 million by the year 2000, a government tourism official said.

Shen Shoujun, deputy director of promotion in the China National Tourist Administration, said 3 million foreign tourists and Hong Kong-Macao Chinese visited China last year, up 20 percent over 1984 and three times the number in 1978.

China, which is promoting tourism as a means to obtain badly needed foreign currency, earned $1.25 billion from tourism last year, he said.

In 1929, a Duesenberg automobile cost $20,000. Recently, a 1934 supercharged Duesenberg J sold for $1 million.

NCMA Acquires African Antelope Art



RECENT PURCHASE . . . The North Carolina Museum of Art recently purchased a pair of antelope headpieces with funds from the Robert F. Phifer bequest to the N.C. Art Society. The pieces will be on view in the museum's African, Oceanic and New World gallery, scheduled to open later this year. (Photo courtesy N.C. Museum of Art)

By Sharon Broom
N.C. Museum of Art

The North Carolina Museum of Art has purchased a "Pair of Antelope Headpieces" representing the art of the Bamana people of Mali, in west Africa. Acquisition of the objects was made possible by funds from the Robert F. Phifer Bequest to the N.C. Art Society.

The museum board of trustees approved the purchase in a recent meeting.

The wooden objects, which date from the late 19th or early 20th century, are a rare example of a pair of male and female headpieces which have survived together, according to Dr. William J. Chiego, chief curator at the museum. Used on the occasions of hoeing and ground-clearing, they recall the mythical being "Tji Wara," who taught mankind the secret of agriculture.

Measuring about 33 and 27 inches high, respectively, the male and female headpieces were both worn by young men whose faces and bodies were concealed by long costumes. During the ceremony, the wearers lept and turned to the beating of drums in imitation of the animals they represented.

"The headpieces are beautifully carved," Chiego said. "In fact, they will be among the most significant objects in the African installation when the museum's African, Oceanic and New World Gallery opens next winter."

About 100 objects, including 50 African works, will be on view in the new gallery, which is tentatively scheduled to open in December 1986.

For more information, call 833-1935 at the museum.

Open house for the new civic center is planned for the end of June.

Beautiful Wildflower Poses A Threat To Marshes

By JOE MAGRUDER
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — One of the most beautiful sights of early fall makes Gene Hocutt wince.

The uninitiated see nature at its best in a marsh brilliant with the blooms of the wildflower purple loosestrife. Hocutt sees a marsh being strangled.

Conservationists worried about the aggressive immigrant say its striking rose-purple color helps blunt public concern about it. While they campaign for public recognition of the threat and money for research on controls, loosestrife proliferates.

A Purple Loosestrife Task Force in Wisconsin has received unconfirmed reports of people seeding marshes with it in Illinois. It is sold in seed catalogs, and a town in Michigan held a purple loosestrife festival as recently as last year.

Loosestrife destroys marshes, a vital wildlife habitat, because its woody clumps grow in size each season, filling in as they trap silt and debris.

"You literally have a process by which the marsh is filling in from the bottom up," Hocutt says. "You are literally losing marshes."

The plant also can crowd out native species like cattails.

In terms of plant, animal and insect life, a loosestrife-dominated marsh "becomes a monotype, almost," says Richard Malecki, a wetlands biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Ithaca, N.Y. "There's not much that grows underneath it and there's not much that utilizes it. When you get mature plants in there, it tends to push toward a biological desert."

Native to Europe, purple loosestrife (lythrum salicaria) arrived in the early to mid-1800s and became common in New York, New England and the St. Lawrence River Valley by the end of the century.

"It was a slow spread over the first hundred years (and more)," says Malecki. "But in the last 20 years ... it's gone clear across the country. You find plants in almost every state. In the (northern) Midwest now, it's a major concern."

A tall plant whose flower-covered spikes bloom until early fall, loosestrife will grow under many conditions, but it grows best in marshes, swamps and stream banks. Experts say marshes are most vulnerable when they dry out.

That can happen naturally, during droughts, or when humans drain a marsh periodically to renew it as a habitat for marsh birds, muskrats and other small animals.

Scientists have tried spraying it with herbicides, mowing it, flooding it, burning it, pulling it up, and planting competitors, but "none of them has been overly successful," Malecki says. Hocutt says a combination of techniques eventually could be effective, though, and he and others say research may eventually yield an insect, fungus or other biological control.

Meanwhile, Malecki warned as long ago as 1979 that wetlands "are seriously threatened if loosestrife invades."

Not all scientists share the concern. Biologist Tom Rawinski, coauthor with Malecki of a 1979 conservation circular on loosestrife, considers the paper somewhat alarmist" in light of research he did later for a master's thesis on the plant.

"The threat of loosestrife has been exaggerated, quite simply," says Rawinski, now with the Nature Conservancy in Boston.

However, even Rawinski believes states like Wisconsin and Minnesota — vulnerable states not yet saturated with loosestrife — "should certainly enhance (public) awareness of the plant and its aggressive nature."

"Nationwide, I don't see purple loosestrife as the real menace that has been (suggested)," he says. "It's distressing to see European plants growing with our beloved native plants. But it's just a fact that we're going to have to learn to accept."

David Olson, a University of New Hampshire wildlife management professor, agrees. Though he considers the loosestrife invasion "pretty serious," Olson is skeptical about steps like banning sales, which Minnesota did this year.

"I don't think it makes any difference any more," Olson says. "I suspect the horse is long since out of the barn."

UNH botanist Garrett Crow is dubious about controls for philosophical reasons. He says weeds, like beauty, are in the eye of the beholder.

Farmer's Day At Historic Aycock Site

FREMONT — On June 22, Aycock Birthplace State Historic Site will host its second annual Farmer's Day living history program. Activities performed at the site during the program will represent some of the typical farm and domestic chores performed on a mid-19th century farm such as the Aycock's.

Some of the demonstrations that will be presented include lye soap making, butter churning, open-hearth cooking, spinning, rug braiding, crosscut sawing, shingle making and hand-dipping candles.

Each of the demonstrators will be performing his or her own task in appropriate period attire.

At the end of the day's activities, the interpreters will gather to sample the meal cooked in the fireplace and discuss eating habits and table manners of the 1800s.

Farmer's Day at Aycock Birthplace will begin at 1 p.m. and continue until 5 p.m. The site is located nine miles north of Goldsboro between Pikeville and Fremont, one-half mile off Highway 117. For more information, call 242-5581. All activites are free to the public.

Stamps For Heroes

Philatelic tribute to war heroes is sometimes late in coming. The American Revolution, the Civil War and World War II have been honored on many U.S. stamps — but, until last year, only two stamps have paid tribute to World War I.

In 1919 a 3-cent Victory commemorative stamp was issued and in 1981 there was a stamp honoring General Pershing, commander of the American Expeditionary Forces. Last year the USPS released a 22-center featuring a sketch by Capt. Harvey Dunn showing American troops advancing up a hill in the Battle of the Marne.

Most of the 4,750,000 Americans who fought in World War I are dead. The few veterans still alive average about 90 years of age. Thus the tribute to the heroes of the conflict is left to the history books — and those who are still able to remember the theme "The Yanks Are Coming."

Dance Seminar

DURHAM — The 1986 American Dance Festival humanities program — Black Tradition in American Modern Dance — will this year be augmented by an excerpt from chroreographer Donald McKayle's 1951 dance, "Games."

Chuck Davis and the African-American Dance Ensemble will perform the piece (based on street games of urban young) at the seminar being held at the Bowl, North Carolina Central University, Durham, at 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

The follow-up portion of the seminar will take place at 11:30 a.m. Monday at East Duke Music Room, Duke University.

Keyboard Camp

A Summer Keyboard Camp, sponsored by the East Carolina University School of Music, is being offered the week of June 22-28.

The camp is divided into an upper division (ages 13 and older) and an elementary division.

Upper division students can stay in campus dormitories, while others will commute to and from the campus for morning classes.

Dr. Charles Bath of the ECU School of Music Keyboard Faculty, will direct the camp. Faculty and student recitals will also be a part of the program.

For more information, call Dr. Bath at the school of music.

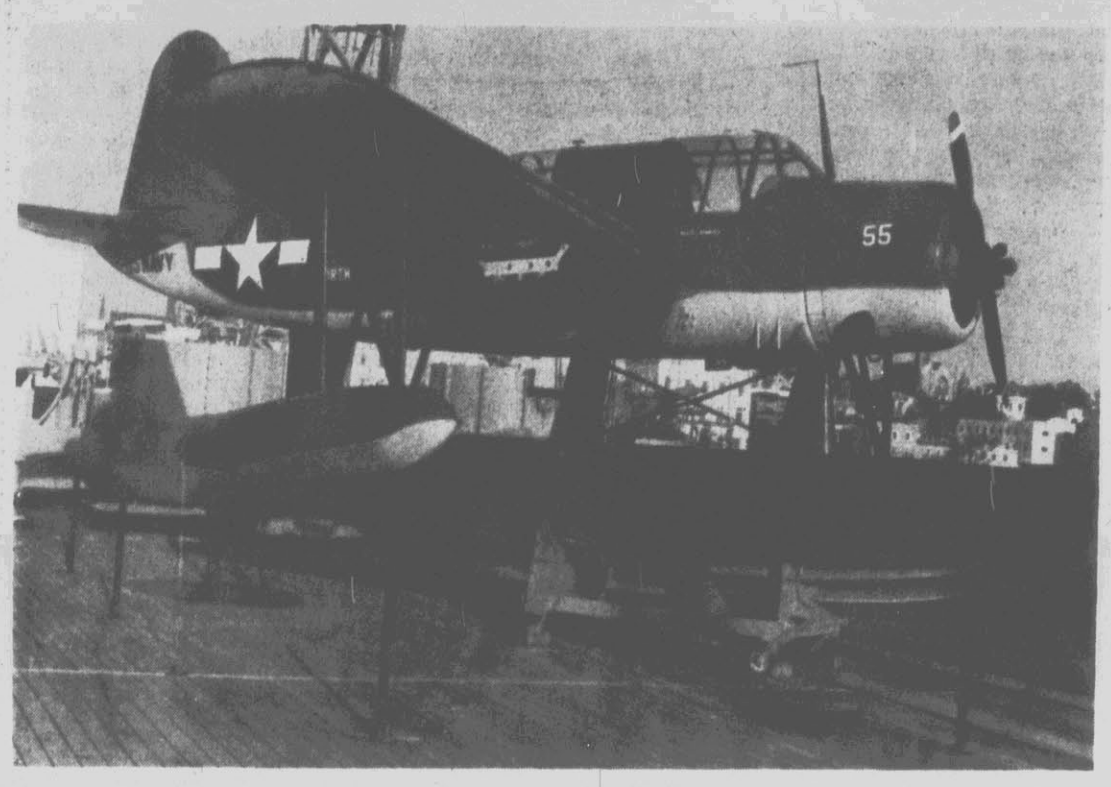
U.S., Japanese WWII Veterans To Meet In Wilmington

WILMINGTON — A historic event will take place June 22-24 when the USS North Carolina Battleship Association and crew-members of the Japanese Submarine I-19 which torpedoed the battleship in 1942 meet for the first time since World War II.

According to Captain Ben W. Blee, USN (Ret.), chairman of the USS North Carolina Battleship Commission, "the surviving crew-members of the Japanese submarine I-19 are sending a four-man delegation to join the battleship's own wartime crew in a face-to-face meeting designed to be a demonstration of mutual good will."



A SHIP'S FIGHTER . . . A World War II U.S. Navy fighter plane, of a type known as Kingfisher, is mounted on the deck of the USS North Carolina battleship. The battleship will be the site of a historic event June 22-24 when Japanese and American veterans of a Pacific battle involving the ship and a Japanese submarine meet for the first time. Buildings in the background are in downtown Wilmington across the Cape Fear River from where the USS North Carolina is permanently moored. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

The joint reunion agenda will include a tour of the battleship, a detailed discussion of exactly what happened on and under the sea when the two ships clashed in September 1942, and a round of social events hosted by the association and the Greater Wilmington Chamber of Commerce.

High point of the three-day reunion will be a joint memorial service at 3 p.m. June 24 at the Battleship Memorial. The service, to which the public is invited, will include music by the Second Marine Divisiin Band from Camp Lejeune, and an exchange of bronze plaques commemorating the occasion. Dignitaries scheduled to take part in the ceremony are Rear Admiral Julian T. Burke, USN (Ret.), a former USS North Carolina crew member, and Captain Yasuo Wakabayashi, Japanese Naval Attache to the United States.

The Japanese submarine I-19 torpedoed the USS North Carolina on September 15, 1942. Five American sailors died in the attack which blasted an 18 by 32 foot hole in the ship's bottom.

Later in World War II, the I-19 and all of her crew were lost during a patrol. However, 14 Japanese who were transferred pior to the submarine's last patrol are still alive and living in Japan.

A television production crew staffed jointly by the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources and the N.C. Center for Public Televisoin will be on hand throughout the joint reunion to produce a televison documentary of the event.

Late June Gathering Of Tall Ships Set For Norfolk Festival

NORFOLK, VA. — The city of Norfolk will welcome a fleet of tall ships during the last two weeks of June. Nearly half of the largest tall sailing ships that will take part in the Statue of Liberty celebration in New York on July 4 will rendezvous in Norfolk beginning June 17.

This gathering will allow pople in Virginia and surrounding states to view these vessels in a festive manner at close-up range.

The extravaganza is called Liberty Sail of the Americas — Norfolk to New York 1986, and is being carried out in cooperation and conjunction with the Operation Sail '86 program of New York. The rendezvous will enable the ships to gather as a in Norfolk as a fleet for a cruise-in-company to Sandy Hook at the mouth of the New York harbor.

The Norfolk celebration will feature not only the tall ships, but a series of festival activities. Highlighted among these will be the South of the Border Festival.

Since most of the visiting ships are from South American countries, a Latin theme has been chosen for its main festival. This festival, which will be held in Town Point Park on June 28-29, will feature South American cuisine, Salsa music, Lating dancing on giant outdoor dance floors, arts and crafts displays, and for the children, pinatas, llamas and burros.

South American crew members from the ships will mingle with the crowds attending the festival.

- Libertad, Argentina, June 27-30.
- Gloria, Columbia, June 27-30.
- Guayas, Ecuador, June 20-28.

The Esmeralda and Libertad, two of the world's largest sail training ships, will be visiting Norfolk for the first time.

Two tall ships from the United States and one from Canada will also be in harbor at Norfolk during the last two weeks of June. These are:

- Elissa, U.S., June 21-22 and 27-30.
- Eagle, U.S., June 21-24.
- Bluenose, Canada, June 27-30.

Dates of arrival and departure of the ships are subject to change.

The Liberty Sail of the Americas will conclude with a spectacular parade of sail out of the city into the Chesapeake Bay and out into the open sea on Monday morning, June 30. It is planned for the parade to include two dozen major sailing vessels, U.S. military ships, and hundreds of private pleasure boats.

A Review

Tar River Volume Again Offers Fine Current Poetry

TAR RIVER POETRY. Vol. 25, No. 2, Spring 1986. Editor, Peter Makuck. Greenville, N.C., East Carolina University. Paper, 60 pages, pen and ink illustrations by Peggy Schadel-Swearingen. $3.

Arriving just in time for warm summertime reading and enjoyment is another in the outstanding ECU published poetry series, "Tar River Poetry." Once more, Dr. Makuck, director of the ECU poetry forum, his assistant editor, Phyllis Zerella and his advisory editors — James Kirkland, David Sanders and Norman Rosenfeld, have selected and assembled poems generally of a high quality.

This issues features contributions by 27 poets and reviews by three writers.

The well-known reputation of established poets and of an emergening generation of promising younger poets selecting "Tar River Poetry" for publication of their poems attest to the high degree of respect these poets place in "Tar River."

This issue's list of contributors include poets such as T. Alan Broughton, Fred Chappell, Carolyn Kizer, Jay Meek, and Michael Mott.

Images of nature, of places rural, urban and exotic constitute the setting for many of the poems in this volume.

Michale Mott, author of the best-selling biography "The Seven Mountains of Thomas Merton" published by Hougton Mifflin, for example, has two poems tied closely to nature. In one, "Cabin Between Creeks," Mott gives the reader beautifully intoned, seductive lines:

> "Hum of summer and the blue fret of insects > over the goldenrod. She goes like a goosegirl > surrounded by white to hang sheets on a line > strung between gooseplums, blond pigtails arguing > over the blue checks of her shirt." . . .

And in another verse in the same poem, a time set in winter, he writes:

> "Old apple logs burn in the grate. At her mending > she curses the snapped threat, the poor light.
> First snow falls on the meadow, white to white > on the yarrow heads, where a doe stands > quivering, not from cold, from the openness." . . .

Poetry such as this creates a multiplicity in moods, nature images and in the seasonal occupations of this woman we want to know more about.

Richard Jackson's "Out of Sight" is another poem that relies heavily on nature's images to convey several layers of meaning:

> "How much they must know about disguises, > those grasshoppers flicking momentarily > into sight, waist high, at each of
> our steps, before blending back into dry > meadow grass. The fact is, they know nothing > though we depend so much upon these imagined > gestures and signs. How else could we live?" . . .

This long, lyrical poem holds up to the mirror of our seeing and association other of nature's creatures — tadpoles, a blue jay, hawks, caterpillars, a wood turtle, etc., each harmoniously threaded to some twist or turn of human thought, human emotion.

Perhaps it is because I am addicted to descriptions drawn from nature, whether such images serve a symbolic, metaphoric or direct descriptvie purpose that I have cited the lines above.

Yet for readers whose response processes in poetry is more attuned to other modes of wording, of expression, this volume in rich in its spectrum of cadances, structure and patterns.

And after the feast of poems, there remains the illuminating bonus of in depth review of new volumes of poetry as a second feast. In this issue, Dabney Stuart give his view on three new volumes — by Fred Chappell, Conrad Hillberry and Brenda Hillmam. Phyllis Zerella pens her thoughts on Carolyn Kizer's "Mermaids in the Basement: Poems for Women," and ECU's David Sanders expounds on his reactions to Jim Hall's volume, "False Statements."

This spring 1986 volume of "Tar River Poetry" continues, thankfully, a tradition of searching out and bringing together in one volume some of the finest efforts in contemporary poetry. And the price is modest enough to make it affordable to those whose interest in poetry is not always matched by the generosity of their finances.

Several Honors To Ron Bayes

LAURINBURG — St. Andrew's Presbyterian College writer-in-residence Ron Bayes has recently received several honors.

On the national level, Bayes has been named master poet of the Atlantic Center for the Arts in North Smyrna Beach, Fla., an honor previously held by such writers as Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Reynolds Price and Edward Albee.

Bayes wil be honored by the N.C. Writers Conference this summer at its annual meeting. Each year, one North Carolina artist is chosen to be the honoree of the annual writers meeting.

Those honored in the past have included playwright Paul Green and poet Sam Ragan.

Also, Bayes has been selected to edit the anthology of North Carolina poetry published for the state's 400th anniversary celebration entitled "Signs Along the Way."

His most recent book of poems, "A Beast In View," has been nominated for both the Pulitzer and the William Carlos Williams prizes.

Recalling some of his earlier experiences in writing, Bayes said that Williams was responsible for one turning point in his own writing.

"When my first little chapbook was published, I sent copies to the 12 living poets whom I most admired. Only one responded and that was William Carlos Williams. I was at a low point in my spirit and had Williams not responded, I think I would have stopped writing," he said.

Bayes said he received a similar boost from Fred Chappell, a Greensboro author, after the publication of his lengthy analysis of "Umapine Tetralogy", a four-volume poetry series which is Bayes' major work.

Zoo Poster Competition

ASHEBORO — The N.C. Zoological Society is offering a $750 purchase award to the North Carolina resident who submits the best illustration for a zoo poster.

"We're looking for a poster that expresses our concern and respect for animals and plants," said Dwight M. Holland, curator of design at the N.C. Zoological Park and contest coordinator.

He said contest guidelines specify a realistic portrayal of the zoo's natural habitat concept and philosophy. Animals and plants depicted must represent wildlife in the zoo's collection, he said.

Poster illustration entries can be any art medium or photographs suitable for full-color reproduction. Preliminary judging will be based on slides, and finalists will be asked to submit original art. The winning illustration will become the property of the society, he said.

A committee of artists will judge the slides, which must be received no later than Nov. 15. The winner will be announced in December.

For contest guidelines and entry forms, write Holland at N.C. Zoological Park, Route 4, Box 83, Asheboro, N.C., 27203.

Three slides may be submitted. Zoo and Society employees and their families are not eligible.

From Sheppard Memorial Library

If there ever is a "Father of the Year" award given, millions of Americans will surely want to nominate Bill Cosby known to prime-time viewers everywhere as Dr. Heathcliff Huxtable.

Cosby, of course, has been making television audiences laugh and think for years with his stand-up routines, through the Fat Albert cartoon series and in his numerous commercials for Jell-O, Birds Eye and Coke.

New at Sheppard Memorial Library is Bill Cosby's book entitled, "Fatherhood." When America's father sits down to write his first book, what better subject could there by than fatherhood itself?

In "Fatherhood," Cosby's special brand of humor, wisdom and just plain wonderful humanity come together to create a joyous celebration of being a father.

In a marvelous collection of ruminations, anecdotes and vignettes based on his own experiences as a son and father, Cosby covers the paternal gamut from the happy announcment "It's a girl!" to the challenges of raising teenagers and the perplexing ambivalence of watching the kids leave the nest.

For men, "Fatherhood" speaks to everyone who is a father, who plans to become a father, or who wants to learn more about his own father. And for women, it's an illuminating guide to better understand the fathers (and husbands) in their lives.

Indelibly associated with children, whom he charms with an ease envied by many a parent, Cosby understands people, whether they are five or 50. Bill Cosby has become a loved — and loving — member of every American family.

To commemorate Father's Day, get dad to read "Fatherhood" by Bill Cosby.

Reunion For Somerset Place Slaves Descendants

By MEG GUNKEL
N.C. Department
Of Cultural Resources

CRESWELL — More than 2,000 descendants of the slave population at Somerset Place near Creswell are expected at an Aug. 30 "Homecoming," the first gathering of its kind.

The reunion is slated for 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Somerset plantation, which was built in 1785 and is now administered as a North Carolina State Historic Site at Pettigrew State Park.

The event will include a concert, native African dances and the recreation of a slave wedding, but the highlight will be the rekindling of kinship ties lost as the free blacks dispersed after the Civil War.

Somerset plantation, a 5,870-acre farm owned by the Collins family was home to more than 300 slaves at the outset of the war.

Many descendants remain nearby — some have farmed Somerset land since gaining freedom — and others can be found along the eastern seaboard, the midwest and California.

Nametags for descendants will be color-coded to show family lines and generations. At least seven descendants are first-generation "born free," and many are second and third generation descendants.

The Somerset reunion has evolved from genealogical research by Dot Spruill Redford, of Portsmouth, Va., who was inspired by Alex Haley's "Roots" to discover her family history. Intrigued by her research, she traced the genealogy of every slave family on the plantation.

The reunion, however, is not tied to slavery, she said, but is a healing event. "Being descended from slaves is not an issue. The overriding interest is in finding connections," she said. "That's what slavery did — it disconnected."

Mrs. Redford is publishing a historical and genealogical chroncial of the entire plantation covering an 80-year period that traces the slave families through the first generation born free. The study will be available at the homecoming.

Her own family follows the Littlejohn line, and Mrs. Redford at first thought her ancestors lived in Edenton, where the Collins family was based. A supervisor for the Portsmouth Department of Scoial services, Mrs. Redford spent 10 years researchng the book.

"It was five yers before I discovered I came from Somerset Plantation, and I worked for a full seven years utilizing public records before I even realized there were private collections in the (North Carolina) state archives," she said.

The Collins' records she found not only substantiated her findings from local records, but added a broader view of slave life on a plantation.

Her major discovery was in finding that slave families did not assume the surname of an owner each time they were sold, instead, they retained the surname of their families' first owner.

"The discovery explained why I found 21 different surnames among Somerset's slave families instead of 21 different family lines with the surname Collins."

Mrs. Redford's earliest know descendant is Elsy Littlejohn, born in 1796 on the Littlejohn plantation in Edenton. In 1831, Elsy and her eight children were purchased by Josiah Collins, who had earlier purchased her husband Peter to work at Somerset. Mrs. Redford found Josiah Collins fostered strong family bonds among his slaves to reduce discipline problems since family men were less likely to rebel or run away.

During the Civil War, the Collins family moved to Hillsborough and sent most of the young and healthy Somerset men, women and children to his Hurry Scurry plantations in Franklyn County, about 150 miles away. Elsy and four of her 13 children remained at Somerset.

One of the children, Fred, is Mrs. Redford's great-great-grandfather. As a gardener, Fred was guarding the Collins' orchard when Union troops arrived on July 27, 1862 to confiscate horses.

In an account of the events, Somerset minister George Patterson wrote Collins that Fred helped the "Yankees" bridle the horses.

Fred, his wife Naomi and their four children were taken to Collins' plantations in Franklyn County in October 1862. They returned to Somerset after the war. Mrs. Redford was born in Washington County, but later moved to Portsmouth, Va., with her family when she was two years old.

Family lines often interweave among the plantation's slave population as descendents married within the plantation, with neighboring plantation slaves and with newly arrived African slaves. The Collins family brought 80 African slaves to Edenton aboard the Brig Camden in 1786, 200 years ago this summer.

The African slaves were purchased to dig a canal through the swampland from Lake Phelps to the Scuppernong River, six miles away. They also planted a line a cypress trees along the entrance drive to the mansion. While most of the canal has been filled, the trees still stand.

The research has uncovered detailed of slave life also. "Today, we are sometimes guilty of taking our cue about plantation life from TV where slaves are always walking up to neat, little, well furnished cabins," Mrs. Redford said. At Somerset, the slave cabins were 18-feet-square, and up to 15 lived in one room. There is no documentation of furniture, but the lack of privacy is obvious.

Other findings were also interesting. Somerset slaves were often literate — at a time when literacy was forbidden for slaves. She also found that slaves were able to earn rather large sums of money — like a $20 gold piece.

"That was unbelievable to me," she said. "There was more freedom of movement than I had imagined, particulary for artisans and skilled laborers."

Mrs. Redford said she hopes the homecoming will bring all living descendants together, and also focus on the significant contributions of the Somerset slaves and their descendants.

"It's significant that we can return to the very site where our family lines began and hold this very special celebration of life and family."

Mrs. Redford also said she feels a strong bond with the descendents. "I would personally like to meet all with whom I share a common bond. It's touching base with your history.

"Southern blacks as well as many historians," she said, "often believed antebellum genealogical studies were impossible, because records before the Civil War were scant or non-existant. Because, like all people, we have such a pressing need to connect with our past, in recent years we've been focusing on our pasty beyond America's shores, in Africa.

"Now, at least for the descendants of Somerset, we can focus on the contributions of our ancestors on America's shores, for America is where our truer vested interest lies. When you can connect with your past and present, you fell whole and more complete as a human being.

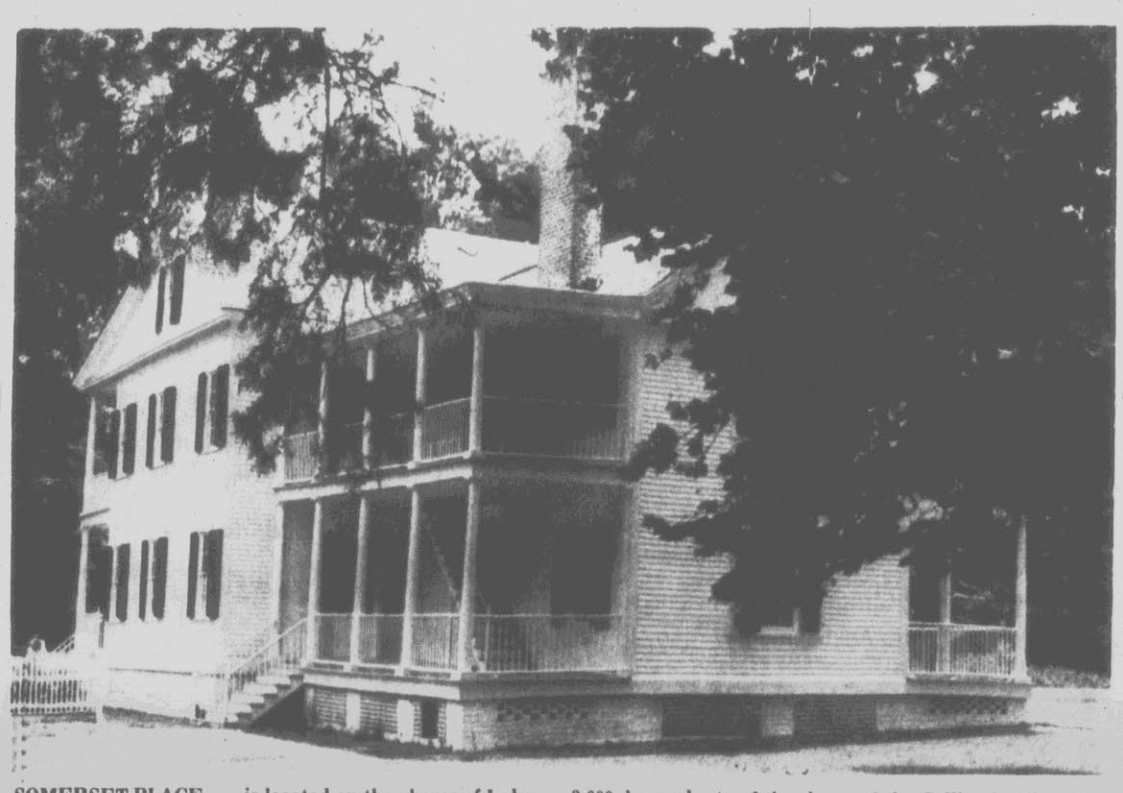
"For me, this homecoming is a healing. I will leave feeling whole and more complete as a human being, as will all who attend whether they are descendants of Somerset or not."

The issue of slavery is not the focus of the homecoming, the interest is in finding family connections, she said.

While Mrs. Redford has found traces of a culture, little tangible evidence of the slaves remains. The slave cabins were torn down in the 1930s, and there is no surviving grave markers, although there is evidence that a slave graveyard existed. The descendants are the only tangible evidence of the culture, she said.

Visitors to the homecoming, which is open and free to the public, should bring lawnchairs, blankets and picnics. Vendors will provide refreshments.

For more information, call 733-5722, N.C. Department of Cultural Resources, or the Somerset Place site at 797-4560.



SOMERSET PLACE . . . is located on the shores of Lake Phelps in Washington County south of the village of Creswell. The pre-Civil War plantation house, surrounded by large cypress, poplar and oak trees, will be the scene of an unusual gathering on August 30. On that date, about 2,000 descendants of the slaves of the Collins family will have a family reunion. The descendants are scheduled to come from as far away as California. State Memorial Site Planned To Honor Charlotte H. Brown

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department
Of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — A statewide birthday celebration held beginning last Wednesday and continuing through today is honoring North Carolina black educator Charlotte Hawkins Brown.

The celebration has featured library exhibits, community observances, radio public service announcements and church services, all in conjunction with plans of the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources to establish the Charlotte Hawkins Brown Memorial, the first historic site that will honor a black or a woman.

Among the observances is a special program at Bethany United Church of Christ in the village of Sedalia, just off Interstate 85 midway between Burlington and Greensboro. This is being held today at 6:30 p.m. The program, a rememberance one, is a joint effort of the Charlotte Hawkins Brown Historical Foundation, Inc. and the Sedalia Community.

The first school founded by her closed after one term. Then, for 50 years, Dr. Palmer, granddaughter of former slaves, served as president of Palmer Institute, the second school she founded in 1902 in Sedalia, Guilford County. Under her leadership this school prospered and became a prestigious one for blacks.

As the fame of her school spread, Dr. Brown became nationally-recognized not only as an educator but also as a lecturer, social worker and religious leader. She receved several honorary degrees, and her associates included Mary McCloud Bethune, Eleanor Roosevelt, W.E.B. DuBois and Booker T. Washington.

Dr. Palmer died in 1961 and the Palmer Institute closed in 1971. The state historic site which will bear her name, in addition to honoring the black educator, will be linked to the larger themes of black education and social history emphasizing the contributions black citizens have made to North Carolina.

The site will be located at the old Palmer campus and is scheduled to open in late 1986 or early 1987.

Today's 6:30 p.m. tribute service will feature readings and songs treasured by Dr. Brown.

For more details about Dr. Brown, interested persons can call Annette Gibbs at 733-7862 in Raleigh.

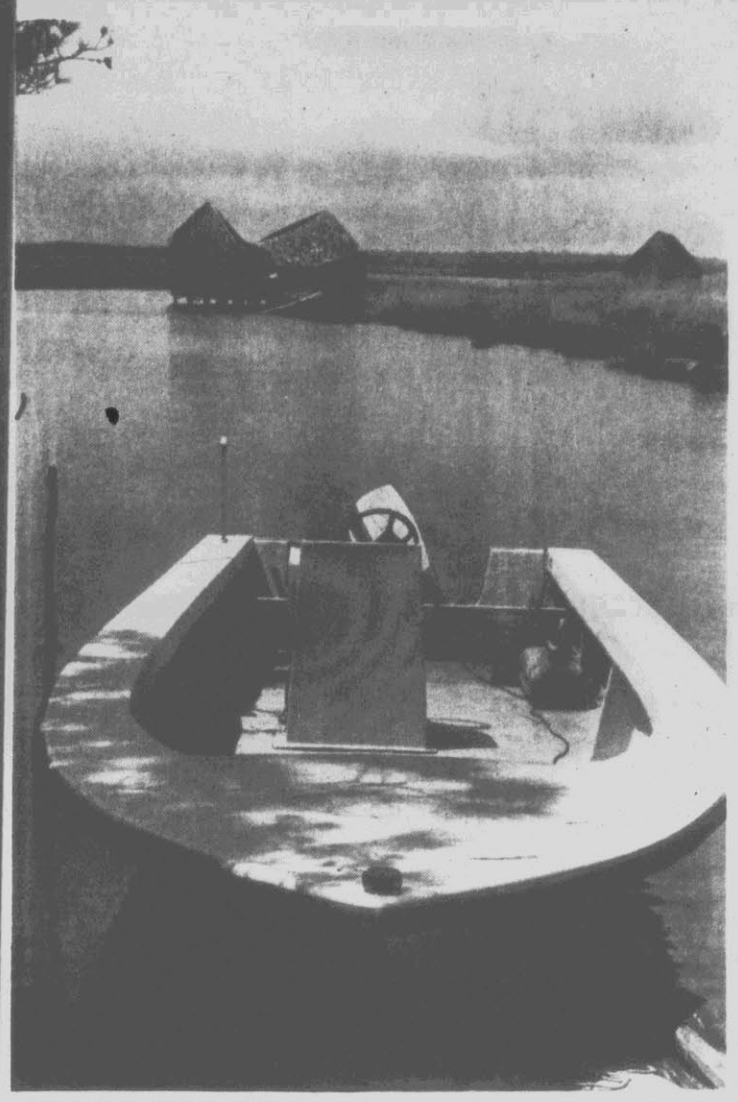
On The Discovery Trail To Seldom Visited Places



VIEW FROM THE BOAT RAMP . . . From the canal boat ramp site in the tiny village of Mashoes in Dare County, old weatherbeaten water-edge structures can be seen out in stretches of marsh grasses. The two in the background and a third out of camera range were likely in use by fishermen years ago when the town had a population said to be about 400. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

A SHED . . . in Mashoes is evidently old, judging from the split-cypress shingles on the roof. Four native vines are enveloping the deteriorating structure — Virginia creeper, trumpet vine, poison oak and poison ivy. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

There are interesting, and sometimes exciting travel discoveries to be made in eastern North Carolia, places seldom heard of, and in some instances, entirely unknown to most people.

For years, in trips to the Outer Banks via the Manns Harbor entry point to Roanoke Island and the Outer Banks, it has been my intention to visit the village with the unusual name of Mashoes. Queries about Mashoes to several friends who are habitual visitors to all areas of the Outer Banks, invaribly has been met with a shake of the head or the comment: "Mashoes? Never heard of it." And these are traveling friends who pride themselves on knowing the coastal area and the Outer Banks, including remote places a bit difficult to visit, such as Corolla and Portsmouth Island.

On Saturday, June 7, I made another trip to the Roanoke Island, Bodie Island area. This time, I was determined to take a discovery detour to Mashoes. The map pinpoints its location at the termination of a dirt road on a peninsula north of Manns Harbor and east of Durant Island. The faded signpost at the turnoff point on U.S. 64 in Manns Harbor indicates a distance of six miles to Mashoes.

In keeping with past experiences when traveling an unknown dirt road, I had expectations of seeing an occasional house with an accessory building or two, perhaps occupied by a loner or a family living an isolated life, or at the least, abandoned structures being reclaimed by nature. But there are no buildings along the roadside to Mashoes, not even the remnants of a pig pen or a forlorn scarecrow half hidden by weeds.

So it was on and on, slow mile after mile over a 1930s type of washboard road. My traveling companion began to wonder if perhaps Mashoes was a ghost town whose name North Carolina mapmakers had failed to remove from the map. We met no traffic, and none followed us.

The roadside views were typically rural visually pleasing. The nearness of water and tidal breezes was manifest in the stunted size of oak and pine, but dark green myrtle and the fresh green of new reed and cattail growths provided a subtle study in shades of early summer green. Occasionally, tall bushes of swamp rose in flower added splashes of delicate pink to the landscape. Small bay trees at the peak flowering stage mixed its flower's sweet fragrance with the pervading salty aroma of nearby marsh lands.

Finally, shortly after the six-mile distance registered on the speedometer, the road, which had been arrow straight, curved to the right. Nearly hidden on the away-from-the-water side of the road were seven or eight dwellings, some of them mobile homes set in clearings obviously cleared at a recent date from forest growth.

This then was our destination, Mashoes. It is only a couple of hundred yards from the first house at the curve to the land's end of the settlement where the road turns right sharply and ends 50 yards away at a bock docking canal.

The view from the boat dock, down a black water canal that leads out into a large watery canal and marsh grass area, alone is worth the time and effort to go there.

One nearby and two more distant simple weathered structures with time-softened shingles still stand, although the roof of the one nearest the dock has collapsed in the middle.

As we did not see anyone, either at the dock ar around the houses, we had no opportunity to ask what purpose these old water-placed structures served in the past. Most likely something to do with the local fishing industry.

One poignant connection with the past is a small, neatly maintained cemetery no more than 40 feet from the boat dock. Here are the tombstones of deceased with names such as Midgette and Basnight, family names long prominent in a wide area of eastern North Carolina. Some of the burial dates are as recent as the mid 1940s.

Also at the land's end area there is an attractive white house which appears to be of the 1920 vintage, with a tree-filled yard and flowers such as day lilies, hydrangea and roses. Another house adjacent to the dock area is an unpainted two story house. A small, vine-covered shed in the back yard is apparently old, judging from the long split-cypress shingles covering the building.

Later on in the day, at a coffee stop in Manteo, a family next table to us overheard us talking about Mashoes. They informed us they had a summer home there on land owned by the man's ancestors. According to the two, years ago Mashoes was a thriving fishing village with a population of about 400. At that time, we were told, Mashoes could only be reached by boat. Then, soon after the road was cut through the forest from Manns Harbor into Mashoes, people began to leave, until in a few years only a handful of people remained. So far as the derivation of Mashoe's name was concerned, we were told the tales behind its name were numerous, that most people accepted the one they liked best.

Whatever a detailed history of Mashoes might reveal, there's no denying that at this time it is indeed a peaceful, remote place far different in the tempo of the lifestyle of the bustling resort area centered around Nags Head, no more than a dozen miles distant across the waters of Croatan and Roanoke Sounds.

ECU Theater Arts Scholarships

ECU News Bureau

Several outstanding students in the East Carolina University Department of Theatre Arts have received scholarships for the 1986-87 academic year.

Kevin Meade Williamson of Oriental and Molly DeNoon Fix of Lynchburg, Va. are joint recipients of the annual Amanda Meiggs Loessin Acting Award and will receive $500 each.

Both have played a number of lead roles in campus theatrical productions and will graduate next year from the department's Professional Acting Program.

Curtis Jones of Williamston, was awarded a John D. Messick Scholarship of $1,000. A rising junior, Jones has been a technical assistant in previous drama productions and has also appeared onstage in several plays. Jones is concentrating in ECU's Professional Acting Program.

Among his major accomplishments during his studies here was serving as the master flyman in the ECU Playhouse production of 'Peter Pan.'

Also receiving awards are three incoming freshmen, all scheduled to begin their theatre studies at ECU this fall.

Marc Pressley of Bridgeville, Delaware, is the recipient of a Nell Draper Burnette Award of $500, on the basis of outstanding high school achievement in drama. The scholarship is renewable for the spring semester of 1987.

Stephanie Scott of San Antonio, Texas, received a $500 departmental scholarship, on the basis of her performance at an ECU dance audition. The scholarship is renewable for the spring semester.

Marilyn Molloy of Hillsborough received a Nell Draper Burnette award of $1,000 as winner in the N. C. Theatre Conference auditions for high school seniors held in Raleigh last fall.

Largest American-Made Organ

By MARGARET HABERMAN
Associated Press Writer

COLLEGEDALE, Tenn. (AP) — As electronic synthesizers provide the beat for a new wave of rock 'n' roll, an Oregon man is leading a revival of more traditional sounds with the largest American-made tracker pipe organ built this century.

John Brombaugh spent three years designing and building his three-story, 4,860-pipe Opus 26 at his shop in Eugene, Ore., for the campus church at Southern College of Seventh-Day Adventists in Collegedale, Tenn.

The $1.2 million organ, with 70 stops, four keyboards and a glockenspiel, has no electric circuitry, except for some lights and a one-horsepower motor to run a blower for bellows to create wind pressure in the pipes.

"Anyone with a little musical sensitivity realizes that you can get a lot more music out of the tracker organs," said Brombaugh, 49.

"Here in the United States, we're doing some really fantastic things in trying to recover a lost art that's still relevant to modern people. If it weren't, we wouldn't be so busy," he added.

His small firm, John Brombaugh & Associates Inc., has built about 45 tracker organs since it was established in 1968 and has orders to fill at least five more years of work, he said.

The organ gets its name from the slender wooden slats, or trackers, that connect keys to individual pipe valves — the method used since the instrument was created in Europe in the 1300s.

Trackers were replaced with electric switches as technology advanced in the 1900s and most pipe organs in the United States now are electrical, Brombaugh said. Sophisticated synthesizers use no pipes at all.

"You can use synthesizers for doing rock and it's just fine," he said. "But if you're interested in classically oriented music for keyboard, tracker pipe organs are much, much better. All you have to do is listen. There's no comparison. And that's the main reason for the resurgence in interest."

The tracker organ has a purer sound and allows more control, he said. "There's a mechanical connection between you and the valves that are controlling the pipes," said Brombaugh, a slender, balding man with a bushy gray-white mustache. "You have an intimate connection with the musical resources that you cannot do electrically. There, it's just on or off through a switch."

His 30-foot Opus 26 was disassembled and trucked to Southern College here in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains in fall 1984 and was rebuilt in about five weeks. Since then, Brombaugh has spent 36 weeks at the school painstakingly tuning the pipes, which range in size from about 30 feet to three-quarters of an inch.

"I was already interested in organs when I was 5 years old," he said. "I used to go up after church and watch the organist play. The organist would let me turn off the switch when she was done on Sunday mornings. From there, I wanted to learn how to play it."

Though his designs are based on historic European organs, Brombaugh doesn't shun modern developments, using materials such as teflon and nylon for some organ parts and a computer for mechanical layouts and calculations.

He received an electrical engineering degree from the University of Cincinnati in 1960, hoping to combine his love of organ music with his love of electronics.

He worked for Baldwin Piano Co. in Cincinnati after graduation and designed electronic components before deciding to devote his time to tracker organs after hearing recordings of classical music done on the historic instruments.

"When I decided to study electrical engineering I thought, 'Ah ha, the answer to making good musical instruments was electronics.' But I got to hear these records and I began to think, 'Good heavens, here are these crazy old tracker organs that everybody thinks are obsolete, but they make good music.'

Concern About Anti-Semitism Reflected In European Drama

EDITOR'S NOTE — European writers have started turning out plays and films about the Holocaust aimed at a generation whose parents didn't like to talk about the horror. Concern about latent anti-Semitism in Europe is an underlying theme of many of the productions.

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A new wave of dramas and documentaries about the Holocaust is educating a younger generation and holding up a mirror to the older victims, perpetrators and those who stood silent as the Nazis tried to destroy European Jewry.

"A 40-year silence is being broken," says Julia Pascal, an associate theater director in London. "For many reasons, grief, anger and rage are coming out."

Foremost among the productions is the 9½-hour film "Shoah" by Claude Lanzmann, a French Jew, which has been widely acclaimed in cinemas in France, the United States and Britain. It was scheduled on television in such countries as West Germany, the Netherlands and Britain.

"Shoah" — the title is the Hebrew word for destruction — includes interviews with people who survived the Holocaust or who lived near death camps, but Lanzmann does not use any historical footage.

There are no piles of bodies or interiors of concentration camps. Instead, the impact comes from interviews with people like the locomotive engineer who delivered trainloads of people to Auschwitz, or the barber who shaved the heads of victims on the threshold of the gas chamber.

This personalizing of the Holocaust is a theme of several other new dramas by Jewish writers a generation younger than the 60-year-old Lanzmann.

They believe there is a new, even younger audience eager to learn more about the Holocaust. Some are looking at themselves, their parents and the world today as much as at the horrific happenings in the death camps. Concern over latent anti-Semitism in Europe underlies their productions.

Miss Pascal, 35, said older European Jews didn't talk much about the Holocaust. "It wasn't done, it was somehow tasteless," she says. "My generation is refusing to negate the experience.

"We are facing the fact that we live in societies that tacitly let it go on. If you're living in a country which tacitly approved the murder of your family, how do you go on living there?"

A related question, she says, was how European Jews feel about Israel. If they blamed their own country for permitting the Holocaust, should they go live in Israel?

Miss Pascal is directing a play called "Traitors," set in Britain at the time of the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon when Israel was strongly criticized in Europe. Written by Melanie Phillips, news editor of the liberal Guardian newspaper, the play's main character is torn between being English and Jewish.

In Israel, which became home to many Holocaust survivors, the play "Kasztner" has been on stage since last July, depicting the many-faceted saga of Rezso (Rudolf) Kasztner, a Hungarian Jewish leader who tried to bargain with the Nazis to trade lives for supplies. Bitter accusations that he had collaborated with the Nazis led to a libel trial in Israel where he was cleared in 1957, but he was assassinated soon after the trial.

Other recent productions on the Holocaust theme include:

—"Where To And Back," a three-part television series seen on West Germany's ZDF television, written by Stefan Troller, an Austrian-born Jewish journalist. It follows a Jewish teen-ager who flees Austria during the war, becomes an American and returns to Vienna as a U.S. soldier looking for his roots, only to face more rejection. Critic Valentin Polcuch wrote in the Bonn-based Die Welt newspaper that the series shows that "not all there is to say (on the Holocaust) has been said or shown."

—"The Bitter Weed," a Dutch feature film based on the popular post-war novel by Dutch writer Marga Minco. It describes the demise and deportation of an Amsterdam Jewish family as seen through the eyes of a 13-year-old child. The film was not a commercial success in the Netherlands, though the TV showing of "Shoah" drew a wide audience.

The Belgian BRT Dutch-language TV is making a five-part documentary on Nazi concentration camps for screening later this year.

The Jewish Film Festival in London showed 13 films, with three hewing closely to Holocaust themes, including "Terrorists In Retirement," a documentary which stirred a furor in France last year because it alleged that French Communists betrayed Jewish partisans in World War II. Another on the festival's schedule was a Hungarian film titled "The Package Tour," depicting a surreal visit to Auschwitz in 1984 by a group of former inmates and their families.

Dominique Green, a film distributor who assembled the films for the festival, says young European Jewish artists were increasingly active.

"I think I'm not atypical of my generation, first-generation post-war, old enough to be writing plays and directing movies and writing books," she says. "There is a mood to try to look at Jewish culture outside the Hollywood tradition of sentimentality. Those are what interested me, not 'Yentl.'"

In France, Claudine Cohen-Naar, director of the Center For Jewish Documentation, says she sees an increasing interest in the Holocaust among young people as she lectures school groups who visit the Paris memorial to Jewish deportees.

"There is a marked difference between the visitors now and 15 years ago," Mrs. Cohen-Naar says. "I have to chase the students away because they ask so many questions even before seeing the memorial. They're dying of curiosity."

David Sonin, a critic with the weekly Jewish Chronicle in London says TV documentaries on Jewish topics draw large audiences in Europe.

"There is a new generation of people that have heard a great deal and want to make their own judgment," Sonin says. "Maybe this is why a new generation in the media are examining this to satisfy a lot of questions that are being asked now."

Memoirs Of A Young Immigrant

A WIDER WORLD. By Kate Simon. Harper & Row. 186 Pages. $14.95.

When Kate Simon alit from the Warsaw boat at Ellis Island, "the gate to America," she was only 4, yet old.

As she recalls in "A Wider World," a memoir of her early years which she has subtitled "Portraits in an Adolescence," the little girl who was her "is old in disappointment, old in the fruitless search for the father who had left and stayed away too long. She is old with the burden of taking care of a crippled 2-year-old (brother) in strange places and strange languages ..."

But, as Simon gradually eased into and became comfortable with her new life in New York City, she slipped the mantle of premature age and embraced her role as child and then as young woman.

A highly i telligent and rebellious person, Simon chafed under the bonds her father imposed on her. He wanted her to find a job and bring money into their poor family early in her life. She instead wanted to enjoy her life, to learn all she could, to be a rebel with a cause.

After violently rejecting her father's efforts to force her to learn the piano, Simon was pretty much on her own and judging from the reminiscences she offers here she did a fairly good job of managing her own life — remarkable since the time was the 1930s.

Not that all went smoothly. Simon had more than her fair share of bad times — bad love affairs, and so on. But there were also plenty of good things, and she recalls both the good and the bad with equanimity in this candid, finely written portrait of her youth.

A River Shoreline With Great Views

A Look At The Pamlico River's North Bank Along Goose Creek Park's Live Oak Trail

There are many unusual river shorelines in coastal North Carolina, but few can equal a stretch parallel with The Live Oak Trail in eastern North Carolina's Goose Creek State Park in Beaufort County.

Unchanged from its primitive wilderness state except for a narrow trail maintained for public access, the trail offers visitors fine views of the handiwork of time, wind and tide along a sector of the broad Pamlico River.

Here, one can see the transformance of live wood fallen prey to erosion into sculpted forms of dead heartwood. Wherever a cypress tree grows on or near the shore, clusters of cypress knees ring the mother tree in a battalion-like display of intriguing shapes.

Only a few feet inland from the shore's edge, a forest of live oaks abound. Some are young trees, seeking room to grow. Others are huge old trees, battered by the passage of years, their heavy limbs draped with long veils of silver-gray Spanish moss.

Archways between trees frame a constantly varied panorama of river scenes — the remains of an old tree worn down to fluted shapes of silky wood; a crescent of amber sand edged by tall grasses nodding inland from the persistance of tidal breezes, and dark cypress knees overhung by horizontal limbs of shoreside live oaks.

In the seasons of the year when days are shorter, when there's no danger of snakes underfoot, strolls on clear full moonlight nights are a special pleasure. On such nights, a viewer can easily be transported to an experience akin to those penned in Longfellow's "Evangeline," or muse over what the scene would have given rise to in the imagination of Edgar Alan Poe.

Goose Creek State Park, open to the public free of charge year round (with overnight camping by arrangement), is located about 40 miles from Greenville, between Washington and Bath. Other than the Live Oak Trail, the park also has a small swimming area with lifeguards on hand in the summer, picnic areas, camping facilities, and a raised boardwalk and other nature trails. A boat ramp in the park at Dinah's Landing on Goose Creek is reached by a separate entrance. For more information, call 923-2191

It's Truly A Case Of Mistaken Identity

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — She's fed up with calls about light bills, and not only that, grouses 81-year-old Virginia Power, she had her name long before Virginia Electric & Power Co. adopted it.

Since January 1985, Virginia Electric & Power Co., which used to go by the acronymn VEPCO, has called itself Virginia Power. And since then, calls for Virginia Power often have gone to Virginia Power, the person, not Virginia Power, the company.

"I got a call this morning at 7:30 from someone asking why the power was cut off," Mrs. Power, a widow, said in a telephone interview Friday.

"It's really getting annoying. I'm not an early riser and I'm 81 years of age and I need this like I need a hole in the head."

Mrs. Power said she finally called the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. to complain about a month ago.

"It was the first time I called. I guess I got tired of having so many calls one morning, so that's when I decided to phone the company about it," she said.

C&P officials said steps have been taken to clear up the confusion and hopefully bring Mrs. Power some relief.

"We're going to do everything in our power to make sure she is not getting misdirected calls," said C&P spokesman Mike Houghton. "We do regret any inconvenience that it's placed on her."

In addition, Mrs. Power's listing in the telephone book will be changed to V. Power when the new books come out next year. The computer database for information operators already has been changed to read V. Power, according to Houghton.

"The operators have been told to be aware of this, and when calls come in, to make sure they establish whether it is a business or residential listing," he said.

"The policy is being re-emphasized to operators as well as being told to new operators, in general, and (specifically) in the Virginia Power case," he said.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc

DEAR MR. GOREN:

Q.—When is a suit preference signal not a suit preference signal? I am not trying to be funny. The problem arose the other night when, in defending against a contract of four hearts, partner led the king of spades and I followed with the two. I had intended it simply as discouraging. My partner shifted away from the queen of clubs into declarer's ace-king-jack and gave him the contract. He insisted that my play to the first trick was a suit-preference signal. If that is the case, how does one encourage and discourage?—A.D., Silver Spring, Md.

A.—There are a variety of signalling techniques available to the defenders. Some of them are extremely complicated and require considerable expertise; you would do well to avoid them.

The two methods most commonly practiced are to show attitude or to give count. By far the majority of players show attitude. In other words, the card they play to partner's lead tells whether or not they like the suit. If they play a high card, it is encouraging and asks partner to continue the suit. Conversely, a low card is discouraging and suggests to partner there might be greener fields elsewhere.

That is the only message carried by the card one plays to partner's lead. If you play low to suggest a shift, your card does not carry a suit-preference connotation as well.

Having said all that, it is time to mention that there are some exceptions to this rule. Suppose, for instance, you are defending against a suit contract and dummy turns up with an abundance of trumps and a singleton in the suit led. Obviously, there is usually no reason why you should want that suit continued. Now you can use the card you play to indicate the suit in which you hold something of value. An unnecessarily high card says your interest lies in the higher-ranking of the other two side suits; a low card suggests the lower suit. If you have no clear preference, play an intermediate card and leave it up to partner to decide what to do.

Usually, when you discourage partner from continuing the suit, he can work out which of the other two suits you want led. In the situation you give, where partner is looking at the queen of a suit and there is no honor in dummy, it is most unlikely that is the suit you want led. It would have helped had we been given the full deal.

Monte Gets His Horse

SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (AP) — Rodeo star Montie Montana wrangled away custody of Larry the horse from his wife of 12 years, and she promised to "fade into the sunset" as their lengthy divorce dispute ended.

"I'm going to be riding Old Paint again," Montana, 75, said as he walked out of Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Bruce J. Sottile's chambers Thursday.

"I will go out with my head high, with dignity and like a lady," said Eleanor Montana, 67. "I'm going to fade into the sunset."

Larry, a 13-year-old black-and-white pinto, became the focus of the divorce dispute when both parties laid claim to him.

In a statement, attorneys for both Montie and Eleanor Montana said he got custody so "the public can continue to enjoy the performances of the horse, affectionately known as Larry."

The last-minute settlement headed off a trial that was scheduled to begin Thursday. No other details of the agreement were released.

Montana, star of old-time Westerns and a longtime star of the rodeo circuit, said he moved into the barn of the couple's 15-acre Agua Dulce spread, about 30 miles north of Los Angeles, after the divorce proceedings began nearly two years ago.

Mrs. Montana, however, told the Daily News of Los Angeles that he was staying at the nearby home of his girlfriend, Marilee Young, who was at the cowboy's side Thursday.

Montana had to win a special court order to ride Larry in the Jan. 1 Rose Parade. He says he plans to appear with Larry in the 1987 parade, which would be his 54th.

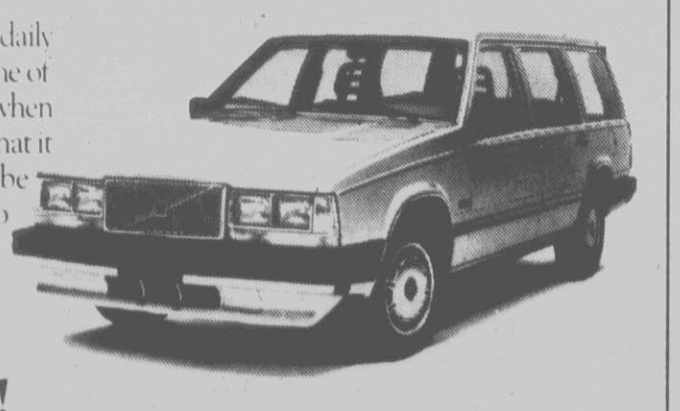
Vacation ideally means putting your daily worries on hold. But that's when some of the biggest headaches happen—like when your car decides, without warning, that it needs some time off too. Wouldn't it be reassuring to know that when you go on vacation, you can trust your Volvo to stay hard at work?



"On Call"SM On All 1986 Volvos!

At Bob Barbour, our name means quality—and quality means Volvo. Regardless of which model you prefer, you'll find dependability, safety and luxury in each and every Volvo. Just the things you need to enjoy the rest and relaxation you've earned.

"On Call"SM is a service mark of Volvo North America Corporation, and is offered in cooperation with the Amoco Motor Club.

TV SHOWTIME

'Main Street' Is A Rerun Worth Watching

By Andrew J. Edelstein

With rerun season upon us, most episodic TV can be dismissed — unless there's an episode of your favorite show that you may have missed. One exception to this rule is a rebroadcast of "Main Street," NBC's afternoon TV news-magazine geared for teens, which gets a special airing in primetime on Monday, June 16.

The one-hour broadcast repeats the only "Main Street" episode devoted to one subject: sex and the American teenager. "That program was the highlight of the season for us," says executive producer Herb Dudnick. "We welcome the chance to reach a larger audience with the story of this enormous problem facing young Americans today.

"The broadcast will not go into explicit material," says Dudnick, "but rather will show the emotional effect on the teenagers involved."

In one of the segments, correspondent Bill Schechner traveled to Georgia and Minnesota to examine the lives of two young mothers — one black and one white — who are trying to raise babies. The ubiquitous Dr. Ruth Westheimer also makes an appearance. In a studio interview and with host Bryant Gumbel and 12 youngsters, Dr. Ruth answers questions and deals with the sexual attitudes and peer-pressure children face in today's society.

In other segments on the program, "Main Street" looks at a teenage father who's trying to live up to his responsibilities as the parent of a 17-month-old child; and examines impressions teenagers get about sex from newspapers, magazines, radio, TV, movies, records and videos.

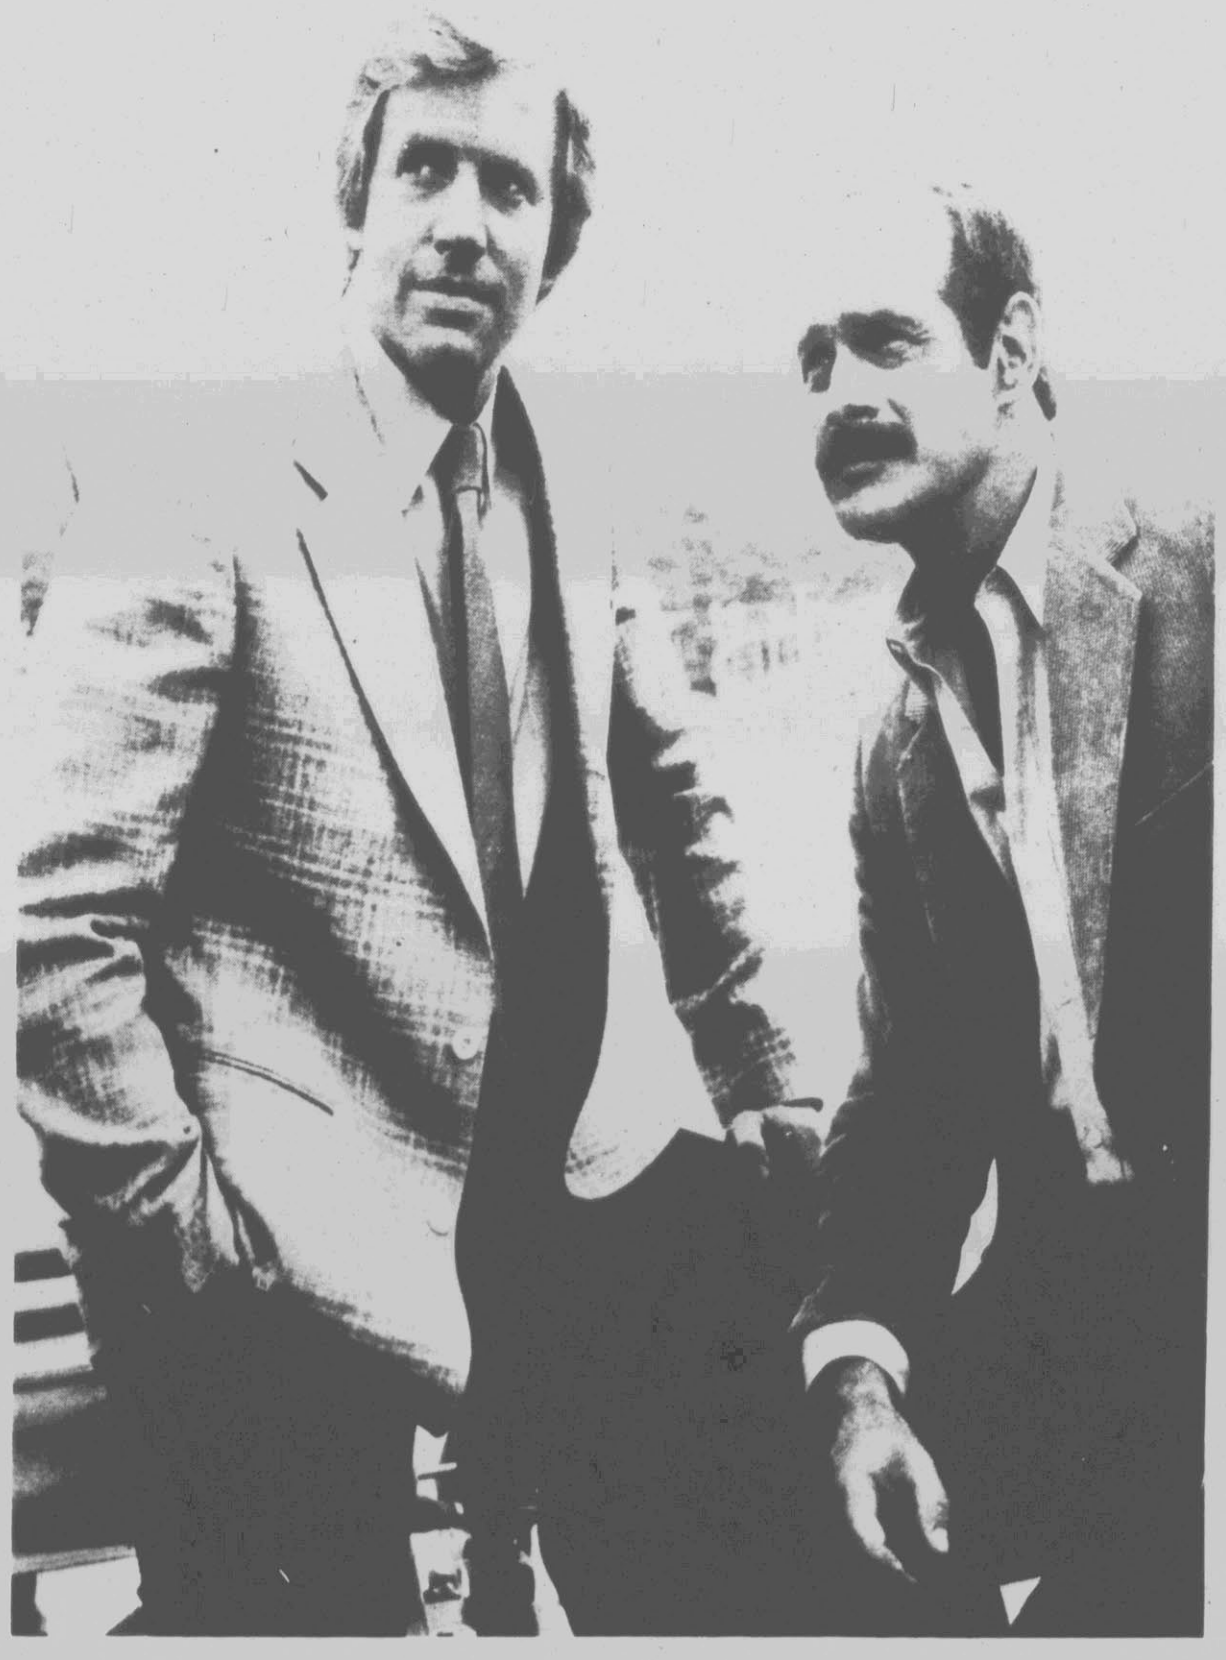
With the networks serving up mostly reruns, PBS gets a chance to shine with its original programming. On Monday, June 16, "American Playhouse" airs "Sunday in the Park with George," the 1985 Pulitzer Prize-winning musical with music and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim. Bernadette Peters and Mandy Patinkin star in the musical based loosely on the life of painter Georges Seurat. It was taped at a special performance at New York's Shubert Theatre and has previously aired on pay-cable's Showtime.

Also noteworthy on PBS this week is "Winston Churchill" (June 18), a one-man show starring British actor Robert Hardy as the legendary statesman. The 90-minute performance is set in 1946 after the "Iron Curtain" speech and looks back on Churchill's career, its successes and failures, as well as his personal life.



SIBLING SLEUTHS — Jameson Parker (l.) and Gerald McRaney star in the long-running detective series "Simon & Simon," airing Thursdays on CBS.

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE
DICKIE ROOK
Summer's Nasty Four
Four especially dangerous bandits are ready to attack you this summer. They are sun, salt, sand and chlorine. We call them bandits because they can literally rob you by stealing the life out of your summer clothes.
Prolonged exposure to sunlight will fade brightly colored clothes. Salt from the ocean water itself and from the air at seaside resorts can get into your clothes and begin to break down the fabrics. Sand is one of the most abrasive kinds of dirt and can quickly destroy even the most durable fabrics. Chlorine from the pool will fade colors and work to weaken fibers in your garments.
No, you don't have to give up all your fun this summer! Simply exercise good judgment in dealing with these clothing bandits. Frequent cleaning is essential for clothing exposed to these elements. You can help by rinsing swimsuits and other beach and pool items thoroughly after each use.

TV Chatter

For the first few years of her career, imperious "Falcon Crest" matriarch Jane Wyman was cast as the dumb blonde. But her patience and perseverance paid off, and today, the 72-year-old Oscar-winning former wife of Ronald Reagan is considered one of Hollywood's finest actresses. At a reported $100,000 per "Falcon Crest" episode, she is one of the highest paid. Though some have said that Wyman is egotistical and temperamental, others believe Wyman is simply a consummate professional. "If Jane says something, it's not because she's being vain or wants the best camera angle, but because, honest to God, she knows what she's doing better than the creeps behind the camera," says Victoria Racimo, who played Corene Powers on the CBS series. "And let's face it: She's not an energetic 21-year-old who can sit all day. So if she sees something wrong, she says it. But she doesn't yell, shout or swear it — she just says it."

If what Italian composer Giacomo Puccini once said is true — "Art is a kind of illness" — then Olivia Brown doesn't want to be cured. The actress, who stars as Detective Trudy Joplin on "Miami Vice," recently opened a 4,000 square-foot art gallery in Miami Beach called Don't Ask. "I like hanging around with contemporary artists," says the 29-year-old actress, "and since I didn't know anybody in Miami when I first joined 'Vice,' this got me in with the right crowd." Brown's gallery is part of the South Florida Arts Center, a three-block long exhibition place that was formerly an outdoor shopping mall. "The city gave me the space, but the money to fix it came out of my pocket," adds Brown, who charges the 11 resident artists anywhere from nothing to $100 a month in rent. "When I first opened, I got snobs saying, 'This isn't an art gallery!' They wanted gray carpeting and clean white walls. But my gallery is loose — and better than any NYC gallery."

Mark Harmon works fast. A few days before the recent NBC miniseries "The Deliberate Stranger" aired — and months after he dumped girlfriend Heather Locklear — TV UPDATE spotted the actor and his new steady girl Pam Dawber at a performance of "Long Day's Journey Into Night," the three-hour Broadway revival starring Jack Lemmon. Dawber, her arms wrapped tightly around Harmon's arm, gushed about their recent visit to the Kutztown State Fair in Pennsylvania and shopping spree through upstate New York. "Mark bought lots of quilts and antiques," she cooed. "He's building a house, you know." But what about the other "Journey" they had taken? Dawber loved the show. "The stage is so big!" she giggled. But Harmon was a bit more reserved. "The problem with Eugene O'Neill," he explained, "is that he writes too long."

Even though he's had more than his fair share of screen time — doubling for Sylvester Stallone, Lee Majors and David Hasselhoff — Jack Gill feels his film career has been stunted. Now, the 31-year-old stuntman is wrestling free: He's giving up his fractures (more than two dozen of them in a 10-year career) and his fractured career for the acting spotlight. "Stunt work pays well, but my body's starting to revolt," says Gill, who's married to actress Morgan Brittany. Gill recently filmed "Lily," an unsold CBS pilot starring Shelley Duvall and Tom Conte. "I've played gun-totin' crazies and long-haired Hell's Angels, but I want to go into features," adds Gill. "I want to be the next Steve McQueen."...

Murder In Two Hours

Peter Ustinov, Tony Curtis and Emma Samms star in "Agatha Christie's 'Murder In Three Acts,'" the CBS made-for-TV movie now filming in Acapulco, Mexico. Bounding around the tropical sun, Ustinov reprises, for the third time on the network, his role of the Belgian detective Hercule Poirot. Curtis portrays (no, not a Mexican underworld chieftain) a retired American actor who uses disguises to confuse Poirot and the police in their investigation of three murders in the resort city. Samms, part of the "Colby" clan, is (what else?) a beautiful young American involved in a "close relationship" with the retired actor.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: I know that Cloris Leachman's son recently died. What was the cause of his death? — MAE STEWART, MOBILE, ALA.

Bryan Englund, the 30-year-old son of actress Cloris Leachman and producer George Englund, was found dead in his $22-a-night New York City YMCA room in February. Leachman, who is divorced from Bryan's father, attempted to squelch rumors that the death was a suicide, but circumstances surrounding Bryan's death remain shrouded in darkness. Speculation arose that the death was caused by a drug overdose when police found two bottles of Tagamet, a prescription medication for ulcers, near Englund's body. A spokesman for the drug's manufacturer, however, reported that even massive overdoses cannot cause death. Furthermore, a spokesman for New York's Medical Examiner's office refused to elaborate on what the cause of death might be or what else might have been in the Tagamet vial. Englund, an out-of-work actor, had appeared in small roles on such television series as "The Rookies," and as a biker opposite his mother in the feature film "Crazy Mama" (1975). He had gone to New York to iron things out with his common-law wife, Pamela Pietri, and their 1-year-old daughter, Portia. Leachman remains devastated by the tragedy.

Dear Michele: How old is Maxwell Caulfield, who plays Miles Colby on "The Colbys"? Is he married? Will his new movie, "The Boys Next Door," be released to theaters, or is it a made-for-TV film? — DARLENE BIGGS, NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y.

Miles Colby may not be able to hold on to his TV wife, Emma Samms, but British-born Maxwell Caulfield, 26, has been married for the past five years to 44-year old actress Juliet Mills. Their romance began during rehearsals for a production of "The Elephant Man" in which Caulfield starred. Mills was then married to building contractor Michael Miklenda, but she quickly filed for divorce. "I don't envision a day I won't love that woman," says Caulfield when asked about the pair's 18-year age difference. His new movie, "The Boys Next Door," concerning mass murderers, is a theatrical release.

Winston in Marlboro Country

This Wednesday, June 18, the author of the "Iron Curtain" speech at Westminster College in Fulton, Missouri, hits the small screen. "Winston Churchill" stars Robert Hardy as the English statesman who so impinged on a WWII American consciousness. PBS viewers will also become conscious of Churchill's estranged relationship with his father, his early education (replete with sadistic headmaster), his military skirmishes, the flirtatious relationship with actress Ethel Barrymore and his encounters with Lady Astor (Astor: "Winston, if you were my husband, I'd poison your coffee"; Winston: "If I were your husband, Nancy, I'd drink it").

Richie hopes to motivate students

By E.A. Vare

"Finish your homework, or Lionel Richie'll get you" could be the watchword of "Cities in Schools," a motivational program for youngsters in inner-city school districts. Richie has offered concert tickets, tour jackets and backstage passes as prizes for a nationwide scholastic contest along his summer concert tour route. Kids are eligible to win these — along with chances to meet the singer himself — if they maintain a B-average or better; keep a perfect attendance record from May 1 to the end of the school year; and don't get in trouble with the teacher. Sounds like good motivation to us.

Whitney Houston became the first female artist in history to pull three No. 1 singles from an album when "Greatest Love of All" hit the top of the charts. And since the album was her first, she also became the first debut artist in history to get three No. 1s from a freshman disc. In the past 15 years, only the Bee Gees and Wham! have succeeded in doing the hat trick.

After much debate and heated competition among U.S. cities, the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame has decided to base itself in Cleveland. Still pending is the location of a building site and, oh yes, $20 million in donations for the construction itself. When (and if) completed, the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame will boast a library, museum, concert hall and movie theater. It's intended as a major tourist attraction for the city of Cleveland.

A-ha, Norway's best-known (only known?) rock success story, is finishing up its second album, and plans to hit the road for an extensive world tour as soon as it's done. Starting in June and lasting until January, the jaunt will take the band through Australia, Japan, Canada, the United States, Europe and Scandinavia. It will be the group's first concert performances that have not occurred in front of a television camera. The band had never played live together until the day they auditioned for Warner Bros. Records. The American leg of the tour begins in August.

Rock on TV is leery of an upcoming music-oriented movie, "Dutch Treat," which is reportedly the story of two young con artists who pretend to be record executives in order to get, ah, close to an all-girl band. This sort of thing gives rock 'n' roll a bad name — and filmgoers a bad memory.

Gimme Shelter

PBS's THIRTEEN explores the threat and effects of a global Big Bang in a special series of programs this month. "On the Eighth Day," to be broadcast June 24, details the environmental effects of a limited nuclear war, such as twilight at noon and subzero temperatures in July. Artsy-craftsy types will like "You Gotta have Art," on June 25, which profiles Tony Price, a New York painter/sculptor who uses discarded materials left over from the manufacture of nuclear weapons as the medium for his scultpure. That same day brings us "Threads," a British "The Day After," depicting life after nuclear holocaust, and "No Nukes," with political activists Jane Fonda and Ralph Nader almost drowning out songsters like Bruce Springsteen and Carly Simon to end PBS's June nuclear-issue programming with a bang.

Burger Hams It Up

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger will be interviewed by CBS News correspondent Bill Moyers some time next month in the Supreme Court building and the hour-long news broadcast will air this summer. The interview coincides with the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution. This is the third time CBS News has kibbitzed with sitting justices on the Supreme Court: Eric Sevareid posed legislative queries in 1968 to then Senior Justice Hugo L. Black and in 1972 to William O. Douglas.

3)Who composed and sang the series hit theme song, "The Ballad of Jed Clampett"?

Golfer invasion hits the Hamptons

By Adam Beckerman

Traffic on the two-lane Montauk Highway will reach epic proportions as golf fans and beach-combing weekenders converge outside the Shinnecock Hills Golf Course in Southampton, N.Y., site of this year's U.S. Open. ABC brings us final-round coverage of the Open on Sunday, June 15 from 2-6:30 p.m. (ET). ABC's broadcast team includes Jim McKay, Jack Whitaker and golf legend Jack Nicklaus, who is being billed as a "special announcer."

Jack Nicklaus

On Tuesday, June 17, WTBS will air the most entertaining basketball draft of the decade, starting at 1:05 p.m. (ET) from Madison Square Garden. Granted, the rich will get richer as Philadelphia and then Boston pick one-two. But this year is being hailed as the deepest crop of seniors and juniors in ages. Fine pro prospects like Louisville's Billy Thompson and Milt Wagner are being projected as far down as mid-second rounders.

Some questions: Will Sixers' GM Pat Williams pass up UNC center Brad Daughtery, calling Red Auerbach's bluff — "If you don't take Daughtery, we do" — and tab as Moses Malone's heir William Bedford of Memphis State? Will Lenny Bias become a Celtic? Will the Pacers get Chris Washburn and become a force? Will Walter Berry, whose stock has mysteriously dropped, be bypassed by the Knicks in favor of Auburn's Chuck Person?

ESPN this week presents two "happenings." The first is the Crosby, airing Sunday, June 15 at 7:30 p.m. (ET). Pebble Beach is but a rocky-shored memory. This year's Crosby tourney clambake was held June 5-8 at the Bermuda Run Country Club near Winston-Salem, N.C. Since 1937, Bing had gathered celebs and pros to shoot and gab for charity. But one of his last wishes was that if ever his event took on corporate sponsorship or gave less than 50 percent of the proceeds to charity, his widow, Kathryn, was to move it elsewhere.

"The Pebble Beach issue is long dead," she says. "Now is a chance to do something for fun and good." Two hundred celebs will team with the pros to raise money for their favorite worthy cause.

And on Saturday, June 21, ESPN airs Karatemania, a nine-bout extravaganza held in April in Atlanta's Omni. Kick-boxing's brashest promoter, Jim Abernethy, says this about his hybrid sport: "We are karate. We have the product. Modern-day sex symbols. When we finally get on Letterman, I'll put my product on and (Don) King can put his on and I'll pay for the 900-number and the people can make their own choice."

Crime Time

CBS's late-night programming for the 1986-7 season has already begun lining up north of the border. "Adderly," scheduled to begin production in July in Montreal, details the adventures of V.H. Adderly, a handsome agent for a secret intelligence agency who is transferred to Miscellaneous Affairs after an injury from a tussle with a Russian agent. Adderly's attempts to offer help to outsiders in trouble are thwarted by the requisite establishment figure, his by-the-book supervisor Melville Greenspan. "Crimeworld," filming in Toronto in July, follows the adventures of Amanda Reed and Jason West, two young writers for CrimeWorld Magazine, a publication that deals with criminals and their capers. Reed and West keep CrimeWorld's circulation fluid by searching out the behind-the-scenes headlines. Casting for both programs will be announced shortly.

Q. Please identify the female U.S. Coast Guard officer—in full uniform, with full dress aiguillette on her right shoulder—who is a member of President Reagan's military entourage.—David C. Graham, San Diego, Calif.

A. She is Lt. Cmdr. Vivien Suzanne Crea, 34, who was commissioned an ensign in 1973 and in 1977 became the second woman to fly for the Coast Guard. Daughter of a career Army officer, Crea was assigned to Washington as one of President Reagan's military aides and given the job of carrying, chained to her wrist, the so-called "black box"—a leather case containing the ultra-secret codes for the Presidential launching of a nuclear strike. A graduate of Seoul American High School in Korea, Crea holds a B.A. in biology from the University of Texas and an M.A. in personnel administration from Central Michigan University. She has been awarded the Coast Guard Achievement Medal, the Coast Guard Meritorious Unit Commendation, the National Defense Medal, and Expert Rifle and Pistol medals. She is no woman to be taken lightly.

Q. Would you answer a few questions, please, about Queen Elizabeth II? Are she and her husband, Prince Philip, cousins? Was she born normally or by cesarian section? Was her father, King George VI, an alcoholic?—E.J.S., Kalamazoo, Mich.

A. The Queen and Philip are third cousins through the lineage of Queen Victoria. Elizabeth was born via cesarean section. Her grandfather, George V, had a drinking problem as a young man.

Garson in her prime

Q. I just saw Greer Garson in an old film, "Strange Lady in Town." What is her age? Where does she live?—Orvaleta H. Dodd, Raymond, Wash.

A. Actress Greer Garson, best known for her films of the 1940s—"Random Harvest," "Mrs. Miniver," "Madame Curie"—is 77. She has homes in Dallas and in Pecos, N.M.

Q. If President Reagan were to die next month, how do you imagine he would go down in the history books?—James W., Kingsport, Tenn.

A. Under the given circumstances, history would record him as the oldest man, as well as the first divorcé and first film star, ever elected President. It also would record his conservative political philosophy, his sometimes overwhelming popularity as President, his extraordinary personal charm, his amazing physical condition, his accomplishments and failures, and the great love he bore his second wife, Nancy. And that's just for starters.

Q. Why has E.F. Hutton, the investment company, hired Bill Cosby for $3 million as its spokesman? Is Cosby regarded as a financial wizard on Wall Street?—B.B., Bethlehem, Pa.

A. Comedian Bill Cosby has done an outstanding job as spokesman for Jell-O, Texas Instruments, Ford Motors and Coca-Cola. Aware of his popularity with consumers, E.F. Hutton hopes he can refurbish the company's image, badly tarnished by its guilty plea last year to charges of mail and wire fraud.

Jackie and little sister, Lee: Waiting for proposal?

Q. Who is older, Jackie Onassis or her sister, Lee Radziwill? Do you imagine that either will get married again, or have both sworn off marriage? —Cornelia R., Cherry Hill, N.J.

A. Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onassis was born on July 28, 1929. Her sister, Lee Bouvier Canfield Radziwill, was born on March 3, 1933. Both women have been married twice; both have two children; both are widows; and both, it has been said, would not turn down a third marriage.

Q. In the field of broadcast journalism, which of these three newscasters—Dan Rather, Peter Jennings and Tom Brokaw—is considered the best? Please give their ages, if you will.—Marsha Weinstein, Lake Forest, Ill.

A. All three are held in high regard and have been judged to be anchormen of probity, objectivity and talent. Dan Rather of CBS has a flair for the melodramatic. Peter Jennings of ABC has a delightful sense of humor. Tom Brokaw of NBC is informatively impartial. The nation's TV audience is indeed lucky to choose and change favorites from among these three. As for their ages: Rather was born on Oct. 31, 1931; Jennings on July 29, 1938; and Brokaw on Feb. 6, 1940.

THE BIG riddle in personal money management this year was how, on a civil servant's salary, did Ferdinand ever afford to buy Imelda all those shoes?

Among the year's hardest-won earnings were the profit-sharing checks handed to steelworkers in Weirton, W.Va., last March 14. Threatened with a mill closing in 1984, these brave men and women formed the largest employee-owned company in America. Lee Kinty, 48, a 30-year employee, received $1935.97. He'll use it to pay off his wife's car.

Evelyn Adams of Point Pleasant, N.J., won two lottery jackpots in the last nine months—$3.9 million in October and a $1.5 million jackpot in February. Of course, she was betting $25 a week at the time of her first victory and $100 by her second.

The 51 percent of American households that own stocks have won their own jackpots from a 40 percent climb in the market. The value of the public companies has jumped more than $450 billion since last September. This is expected to stimulate consumer spending of between $13 billion and $40 billion over the coming year. That's because the booming market creates a secondary "wealth effect," making everyone feel flush. And why not? With an inflation rate of 3.6 percent, for the first time in a baby-boomer's memory, you could make money by leaving it in the bank.

But try and tell that good news to farmers, whose total income, estimated at $27 billion in 1985, was down from $34.5 billion in 1984. Preliminary data indicate that 7 percent of U.S. farmers may default on bank loans this year. Or try telling it to residents of oil-producing states like Oklahoma. Every $1 a barrel drop in oil costs that state $11 million in revenue.

Nine out of 10 new jobs by 1995 are going to be in those ubiquitous "services," says the Labor Department, a category that includes everything from income-tax preparation to hamburger-wrapping. Okay, but service jobs average 11 percent less on an hourly basis than manufacturing ones. It's a problem. Plus, last year's 5.6 percent unemployment rate for men aged 25-54 still isn't down to the 3.4 percent it was before the early-'80s recession. Eight and a half million people are out of work, 65 percent without benefits.

Discounting for Wall Street's froth, wages of nongovernment workers climbed less than 4 percent. That still beat inflation, but in the prior year wages grew by more than 5 percent. Middle managers did best, say consultants at the Wyatt Company, posting 6.8 percent gains, compared with 6.4 percent in 1984.

The pay gap between men and women is narrowing—slowly. Last year, women averaged 64 cents for every dollar men were paid, 3 cents better than in 1984. Still, they will only earn 74 cents to the male dollar by the year 2000, says the Rand Corporation. Female professionals already were making 72 percent as much as their male colleagues and, starting this year, composed more than half the professional work force. But professional pay, in general, increased just 5.2 percent in 1985, the lowest salary raises in a decade.

The most common solution to immediate need these days is to go into debt. Whether to buy a new suit, meet a payroll, take over a company or keep the wheels of government endlessly spinning, the whole nation is mortgaging its future to pay for its present.

"In the 1960s, I would have been a child of flowers. Today, I'm a child of credit cards," says Anastasia Adams, a 23-year-old New York cook. Though Marguerite Hammond Feig makes $27,000 as a Long Island country-club hostess, she still says, "I live way beyond my means." Getting credit is easy because banks earn upward of 20 percent off credit cards, as opposed to less than half of that off other loans. Annual household debt now eats up 19 percent of our disposable income. Installment debt, which includes credit-card charges, is up 67 percent since 1982, to $548.7 billion. Mortage debt is $1.5 trillion. Personal bankruptcies were up by 20 percent in 1985.

Businesses are borrowing like crazy too. Debt is now considered functionally the same as equity. One fashionable takeover technique is the "leveraged buyout." In this, the bank pays the tab and gets repaid out of hoped-for cash flow. Another financing favorite is the "junk bond," which locks issuers into a high interest rate. Yet with its own debt at $2 trillion, the U.S. government can't exactly preach frugality. The nation's current trade deficit is $145 billion. This last year, America became an official debtor nation. We simply must temper our spending.

"Money is so important here," observes Eike Smith-Antekelian, 40, a German immigrant who earns $16,000 as a customer-service representative for a Los Angeles bank. "You're constantly exposed to goods—better houses, cars, clothing."

She's right: Acquisition is as American as apple pie.

The real-life crusade of a cop from "Hill Street Blues"

Why Bruce Weitz Wars Against Drugs

Steve Smith

With students in California. More than 10,000 young people have written to Weitz about their experiences with drugs.

HE LOOKS A LOT LIKE MICK BELKER—same face, same solid, compact body, same frizzy hair—but the man on the dais in the East Room of the White House is a mirror of fashion. His suit is a double-breasted blue pinstripe, his shirt a dapper gray and, as he crosses and uncrosses his legs in an uncomfortable fidget, he shows the world the unmarked tan soles of his brand-new black suede shoes.

Seated on a gold-painted side chair, with Nancy Reagan at his left and a heavyweight audience before him, Bruce Weitz is as far as he can be from Detective Mick Belker, the foul, compulsive, slovenly, just-this-side-of-crazy undercover cop he plays on Hill Street Blues. Maybe too far. This gathering could easily be overwhelmed by the solemnity of the setting and the subject under discussion: drug abuse among young people.

A series of speakers offer a distressing summary of the problem, then Weitz is introduced by his impressive, tongue-tripping title: Honorary Chairman of the National PTA's Drug and Alcohol Abuse Prevention Project. He carefully buttons his jacket, squares his shoulders and looks over the sober crowd.

He opens in a manic patter. "Quick joke: Woman walks into a dentist's office. She says, 'Doctor, I have a horrible pain in my mouth.' Doctor says, 'Lady, that tooth is going to have to come out.' Woman says, 'Oh, no, I'd rather have a baby.' Dentist says, 'Make up your mind. I gotta adjust the chair.'"

NBC-TV

Weitz as Detective Mick Belker, Hill Street Blues' foul, compuls've, just-this-side-of-crazy undercover cop.

The joke—almost out of place, almost off-color—breaks the somber mood and sends a wave of laughter through the room. Everybody, from the First Lady on down, is smiling. A little craziness—Bruce Weitz's, not Mick Belker's—has made it to the White House.

"I am not Mick Belker," Bruce Weitz says later. "He's a slob." Of course, Mick Belker would never wear pink argyle socks or a shawl-collar designer sweater, as Weitz is doing here in the living room of his Washington, D.C., hotel suite. Nor would Mick Belker devote much of his spare time to getting kids off drugs—as Weitz has been doing for two and a half years.

Presumably, 10,000 young people would not respond to a "Write Belker" campaign—as 10,000 of them in Chicago and Los Angeles did recently to two PTA-sponsored "Write Bruce" programs, in which they were asked to confide their thoughts, their problems, their experiences with drugs and alcohol. And Mick Belker wouldn't burn with the righteous intensity that infects Bruce Weitz, now that he has finished reading about one-tenth of those letters.

"I've learned a lot from those letters," Weitz says. "Now I've got to find a way to impart those observations." He holds his body taut, clinging for dear life to the half-smoked cigarette between his fingers. He is uncomfortable talking about himself, and, perhaps because he is even more uncomfortable at the thought of sounding like a righteous prig, this 43-year-old actor from Miami is sounding more than ever like a street-smart New York City kid.

"Most people should not be parents," he says. "I spoke in Iowa, and they booed me when I said this, but I'm going to say it again. Sometimes I think there ought to be a test that prospective parents could take, and if they can't pass it, they can't have kids." Weitz says the letters he has received have convinced him that most young people develop drug and alcohol problems because they can't talk to their parents, because their parents don't give them the time and attention they deserve, the firmness mingled with love. Weitz has no children himself; he is unmarried, admits to a girlfriend but otherwise guards his private life except to say, "I'm too selfish to be a parent. One must have an infinite amount of time and patience to take the responsibility of having, being a friend to, and helping a child through life."

Even discussing his good works, he keeps a hard edge. "I've seen a lot of my friends screwed up by drugs and alcohol," he says. "I'd rather not see another lazy generation of people. Drugs and alcohol don't breed good habits. They don't breed responsibility."

But try to determine his motivation—why he was attracted by this particular cause, rather than any of the other diseases and social problems that would welcome an Emmy-winner as their spokesman—and you drive him into diffidence. He admits to having a few beers when he was the quarterback of his high school football team (Ransom School '62, Miami), even to being tempted by drugs. He still takes a beer or a glass of wine now and then. If there is any deep psychological reason for his involvement with this cause, he is too private—or perhaps simply too tasteful—to tell the world. "I don't want to get into those things," he says. "Those things I talk about to very few people, and certainly not the public. I hope you're not offended."

The Secret Service agents hover impatiently, trying to clear the room. But after Nancy Reagan departs, the White House press corps naturally descends on the only celebrity left, asking Weitz's opinion on drugs and Hollywood and the First Lady, wanting to know what she said to him at lunch ("She asked me when I was going to get married. She always asks me when I'm going to get married."). In his dark suit and subdued demeanor, Bruce Weitz could—almost—pass for a member of the White House staff. But after all the serious questions, as the reporters finally cast aside decorum and ask for autographs—for their children, of course—one correspondent looks Weitz in the eye and, with a straight face, asks, "Would you growl for us?"

Bruce Weitz screws his face into a mask of Belker craziness, presses his nose practically into the reporter's nose, and lets out a "Grrrrrrrrr" that resonates through the East Room and leaves the Secret Service men looking worried. To their great relief, he leaves quietly.

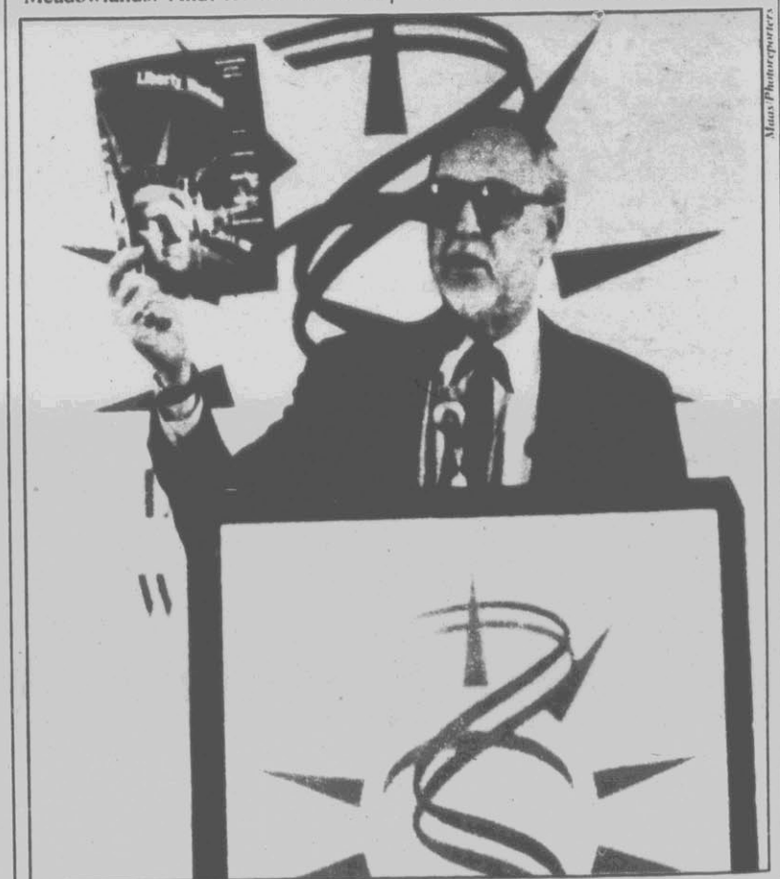
At Reagan's side will be France's President François Mitterrand, whose country gave the Statue of Liberty to the U.S. in 1886 as a symbol of Franco-American friendship. In addition to the sailing ships, there will be a review of 50 naval vessels from 35 countries and perhaps 40,000 private pleasure boats, as this nation's biggest-ever display of fireworks explodes overhead.

The most moving ceremonies will occur on land: On Ellis Island, telecast by satellite to cities around the country, Chief Justice Warren Burger will swear in 40,000 new citizens. Then, a dozen naturalized citizens—natives of Russia, Scotland, Jamaica, China, Israel, Costa Rica and Romania, as well as England (Bob Hope) and Germany (including Henry Kissinger)—will be given the Medal of Liberty by President Reagan for their contributions to their adopted land. Says Wolper, "I want the whole event to be a touching experience for everyone who sees it."

To ease those unhappy about the lack of awards to citizens of note from Italy, Ireland, France, Scandinavia and other lands, it has been announced that the medals now will be given annually to naturalized U.S. citizens of note.

For the last day—July 6—sports superstars will perform at the Brendan Byrne Arena in the nearby New Jersey Meadowlands. And, for the finale, in the Meadowlands' Giants Stadium, Wolper has persuaded his show-business pals—including Elizabeth Taylor, Liza Minnelli and Frank Sinatra—to make no-fee appearances. Wolper says that all the festivities are financed by the sale of TV world rights to ABC. Ticket sales also will help pay for the events.

Wolper was offered a salary of $250,000 plus expenses to mastermind the Big Weekend but opted instead for expenses only, in the amount of $550 a day. After a hotel suite was donated for his use in New York, he cut his expense budget to $400 a day. When criticized for not publicizing the centennial foundation's grateful offer of a bonus—a 50-50 split of profits from the event—Wolper told the press that the flattering offer had been made to him but he had not wished to boast of it. He noted that there well might be no profit to split. Initially, profits had been earmarked for renovating the Statue of Liberty and its museum ($70 million) and Ellis Island (about $200 million). Despite some critics, Wolper's enthusiam thrives. "Four days of emotion—that's what it should be," asserts Wolper. "But," he cautions, "there is a fine line between patriotism and corn. I want to walk every American right up to that line without crossing it." Wolper does that well: In the last 30 years, he has produced more than 500 films, and his prizes include an Academy Award, 40 Emmys, seven Golden Globes and five Peabodys.



Mass Photographers

Wolper at one of the many press conferences he has given to detail major events of the July 4th Big Weekend he has planned for the nation's leading lady.

Of the July 4th Big Weekend, Wolper says, "The logistics problems are incredible. But... I've been lucky. I mean, how many times in one life do you get a chance to throw a party-and invite the whole world?"

Born and raised in New York, his family's standard of living rose and fell with his father's fortunes in the real estate business. During the Depression, his father had to take a job as a bill collector. "We used to walk down the street, and people would be screaming at my father and throwing things at him," Wolper recalls, "and I could never figure out why."

Early on, young Wolper became addicted to Hollywood, via the neighborhood movie houses. Sometimes he found what transpired on the screen of less interest than the action in the balcony. "Back then, there were what we called 'light' movies and 'dark' movies," explains Wolper. "If a movie was 'dark,' you could neck without being spotted."

In 1948, Wolper enrolled as a film major at the University of Southern California. There, he and a fellow student, a skinny ex-Marine named Art Buchwald, worked together on Wampus, the campus humor magazine. That began their lifelong friendship.

After graduation from USC, Wolper tried distributing foreign films for the U.S. market—and flopped. Then Wolper and a friend from his high school days, Jim Harris, set up Flamingo Films to produce material expressly for TV. He formed Wolper Productions in 1958, the year he discovered 6000 feet of black-and-white film on the Soviet space program. The resulting documentary was compelling, but none of the three networks would air an independently produced news program. So Wolper crisscrossed the country and sold the show to 150 stations, which aired The Race for Space.

Wolper churned out a number of successful TV documentary series—Biography, Men in Crisis, Hollywood and the Stars—and such specials as The Making of the President: 1960, The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich, Appointment With Destiny and Primal Man. In 1966, his interest in wildlife and exploration led him to sign an agreement to produce specials for the National Geographic Society. That year, he also managed to persuade a little-known French oceanographer, Jacques Cousteau, to film a series of prime-time American TV programs.

Wolper-produced documentaries and "docudramas" flowed well into the 1970s. Most notable were the six-parter Sandburg's Lincoln, for which its star, Hal Holbrook, won an Emmy; The Court Martial of Lt. William Calley; and Victory at Entebbe. But by the time he sat down to dinner with husband-wife actors Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee in early 1974, Wolper had tired of nonfiction. They told Wolper about a friend who was writing a novel based on his African ancestry. Even though Alex Haley had barely finished half of Roots, Wolper bought the TV rights and sold the idea of a 12-hour miniseries to ABC. Wolper recalls, "We all worried about how the 90 percent-white TV audience would react to a story where the blacks were the good guys." Nearly a decade after it first aired in 1977, Roots is still the top-rated miniseries of all time. No. 2 is Wolper's The Thorn Birds (1983), and No. 7 is Roots: The Next Generations, the 1979 sequel to his biggest hit. Also a hit was North and South—his miniseries based on the John Jakes epic—and its sequel, which aired last month.

Wolper has plans for three new miniseries—one on Napoleon and Josephine, one based on former First Lady Betty Ford's autobiography, The Times of My Life, and one on the life of Picasso (Wolper's Bel Air mansion houses the largest private collection of Picasso sculptures outside the Picasso family). Wolper's second wife, Gloria, a professional painter, shares his passion for art, just as Wolper's grown sons, Mark and Michael, share his passion for television: Mark was associate producer of North and South, and Michael works in the TV development department at Orion Pictures. Daughter Leslie Ann, 17, is studying in Switzerland.

Until the July 4th Big Weekend ends, however, Wolper will be thinking of little else. "The logistics problems are incredible," he says with a sigh. "But nothing is easy. Anyway, when you think about it, I've been lucky. I mean," he adds, eyes twinkling behind his tortoiseshell glasses, "how many times in one life do you get the chance to throw a party—and invite the whole darned world?"

MOVIES

WHILE MAKING THE KARATE KID PART II, THE sequel to his 1984 blockbuster ($100 million at the box office), director John G. Avildsen reflected on what had made the original motion picture so successful. "It was," he declared, "the relationship between the unhappy teenage boy [played by Ralph Macchio] and this perfect father figure, Miyagi [Noriyuki "Pat" Morita], whom we would all like to have had to help us over the ruts of life." And, as adults, we also would like to become strong enough to help our fathers. That's just what happens in The Karate Kid Part II, said Avildsen, as Miyagi—returning home to Okinawa—is viciously threatened by his old romantic rival.

Avildsen, who also directed Rocky, admits to being "financially sorry" that he turned down the chance to direct Rocky II but says he's ready right now to do The Karate Kid Part III. So, can we safely assume that Part II, which opens Friday, concludes with a few plot elements left intriguingly unresolved?

HOW DO YOU TAKE TWO strangers and create sparks that turn them into believable on-screen lovers—particularly when one is Robert Redford, who, some people feel, has generated sexual chemistry only once before in his movie career (with Barbra Streisand in The Way We Were)?

Ivan Reitman, directing Redford and Debra Winger in Legal Eagles, tried a double-barreled approach: First he revamped Redford's role (as a New York assistant DA) to bring out the actor's "own warmth and humor." Explains Reitman, "He's the kind of person who might drop things and lock himself out of the car, and this is part of his character in the movie." Then Reitman, who also directed Ghostbusters and produced National Lampoon's Animal House, told his stars: "Pretend you're an old married couple who have a certain kind of arguing relationship." Moviegoers can find out for themselves if the director's technique worked when Legal Eagles opens Friday.

It's a one-man show with the actor Robert Hardy impersonating Winston Churchill, Britain's legendary wartime leader, as he lectures to an American audience in 1946. And what a lecture! Replete with the wit and play of language for which this politician-historian-orator was justly famous, the program is both a revealing and funny biography and a window on the history Churchill helped to make. BOOKS

A "NEW" NOVEL BY ERNEST Hemingway, who died in 1961, turns out to be one of the major literary events of 1986. Titled The Garden of Eden (Scribner's, $18.95) and culled from a much longer manuscript he left at his death, it is authentic Hemingway—taut, terse, suspenseful and compelling. "The happiness of the Garden that a man must lose" is the theme.

More openly sensual than his other stories, The Garden of Eden is about a young American writer simultaneously involved with two young women during the 1920s on the southern coast of France. The women are attracted to each other as strongly as they are to the writer, a theme Hemingway may have been reluctant to express publicly a generation ago. Furthermore, David Bourne, the writer, rather than being a macho hero, is a rather bewildered and sensitive young man who comes alive most vividly when he is struggling to write a book about Africa—not at all the typical Hemingway hero.

How much of The Garden of Eden is autobiography and how much pure fiction is a fascinating question. But despite a rather abrupt and inconclusive ending, this is a novel that conveys the feeling of a real place and time, and a deep sense of personal involvement.

Maria back home with her baby, Diana

One of the world's most publicized children this year is sure to be Maria Eliane Jesus Mascarenhas, a 9-year-old who in March gave birth to a healthy 7-pound daughter she named Diana. The daughter of illiterate Brazilian farmhands, Maria delivered via cesarean section in the rural town of Jequie, 800 miles north of São Paulo. Dr. Fernando Prata Goes, the obstetrician who performed the surgery, later explained: "Maria was scared and confused, and so was the father of her baby [Cosme Primo dos Santos, 16]."

Maria, it turns out, suffers from an imbalance of hormones, which produces premature puberty—so, if she isn't careful, she can again get pregnant at ages 10, 11, 12 and onward. Her physical age, the doctor estimates, is now somewhere between 13 and 14.

Since making worldwide headlines, Maria has returned to her parents' farm, where she is learning how to be a mother. Newsmen who have asked whether charges might be filed against the baby's father have been told that there is no reason for such legal action, because Maria apparently consented to the relationship and says she has no idea what happened. Inevitably, the TV cameras will track the young mother's progress.

McDonald's Thriving

McDonald's is hamburgerizing the world. A perusal of the corporation's 1985 annual report discloses that the world's largest fast-food chain opened 597 restaurants last year, or a new outlet every 15 hours. Of these restaurants, 220 were opened overseas and 50 on highways or military bases. Six nations—Thailand, Italy, Bermuda, Venezuela, Luxembourg and Mexico—now boast their first McDonald's. At this writing, there are about 9000 Mc'eateries in 41 nations.

Last year, the chain's worldwide sales totaled more than $11 billion, a 10% rise over 1984. Security analysts predict that the company will do even better this year, as it expands its menu.

Incidentally, Valentino, the well-known Italian dress designer, is so irritated by the smells wafting from the McDonald's next door to his studio workshop in Rome that he has asked the courts to close it.

Koppel Speaks

In an impromptu poll taken earlier in the year, senior class officers at Stanford University chose Mikhail Gorbachev, leader of the Soviet Union, and Bill Cosby, leader of the TV situation comedies, as their favorites to speak at commencement exercises.

Gorbachev and Cosby were unavailable for different reasons, so a featured speaker at today's exercises will be Ted Koppel, host of ABC-TV's Nightline.

Koppel did his undergraduate work at Syracuse University, then earned his master's degree in speech and drama at Stanford in 1962. His wife, the former Grace Anne Dorney, received her master's in communications at Stanford in 1967. Nine years later, when Grace entered law school at Georgetown University, Koppel relinquished his beat as ABC's diplomatic correspondent and took a year's leave of absence to stay at home as a household husband.

FOCUS ON FITNESS

BY STUART M. BERGER, M.D., AND MICHAEL O'SHEA, PH.D.

Do you have a question about exercise or diet? Send it to: Focus on Fitness, PARADE, Box 5276, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10123.

Q. Before exercising, my calf muscles (behind my shinbones) are tight. Could you suggest a good stretching exercise?

A. The most common calf-stretching exercise has you stand with one foot in front of the other, about 2 feet apart. Keeping both feet flat on the ground, slowly lean forward over the front foot. You should feel the stretch in the rear leg's calf muscles. Hold your position for about 30 seconds and, as your calf stretches, slowly lean farther forward. Never bounce! Reverse your feet to stretch the other calf.

Q. My husband has been trying to stop smoking for three years now and just can't seem to make it. How can I help him?

A. The most important thing is for your husband really to want to stop smoking. You can point out to him that: (1) Even one cigarette speeds up the heartbeat, increases blood pressure, upsets the flow of blood to the lungs, causes a drop in skin temperature of the fingers and toes. (2) Nicotine cuts down on the flow of blood and oxygen through the body. (3) Tars damage lung tissues and leave chemicals in the lungs that may cause cancer. (4) Carbon monoxide robs the blood of oxygen and lingers in the bloodstream long after the person has stopped smoking. (5) Smoking destroys vitamin C in the body, inhibiting the proper function of the immune system.

You can get self-help manuals on how to stop smoking from the nearest Lung Association or from the American Cancer Society.

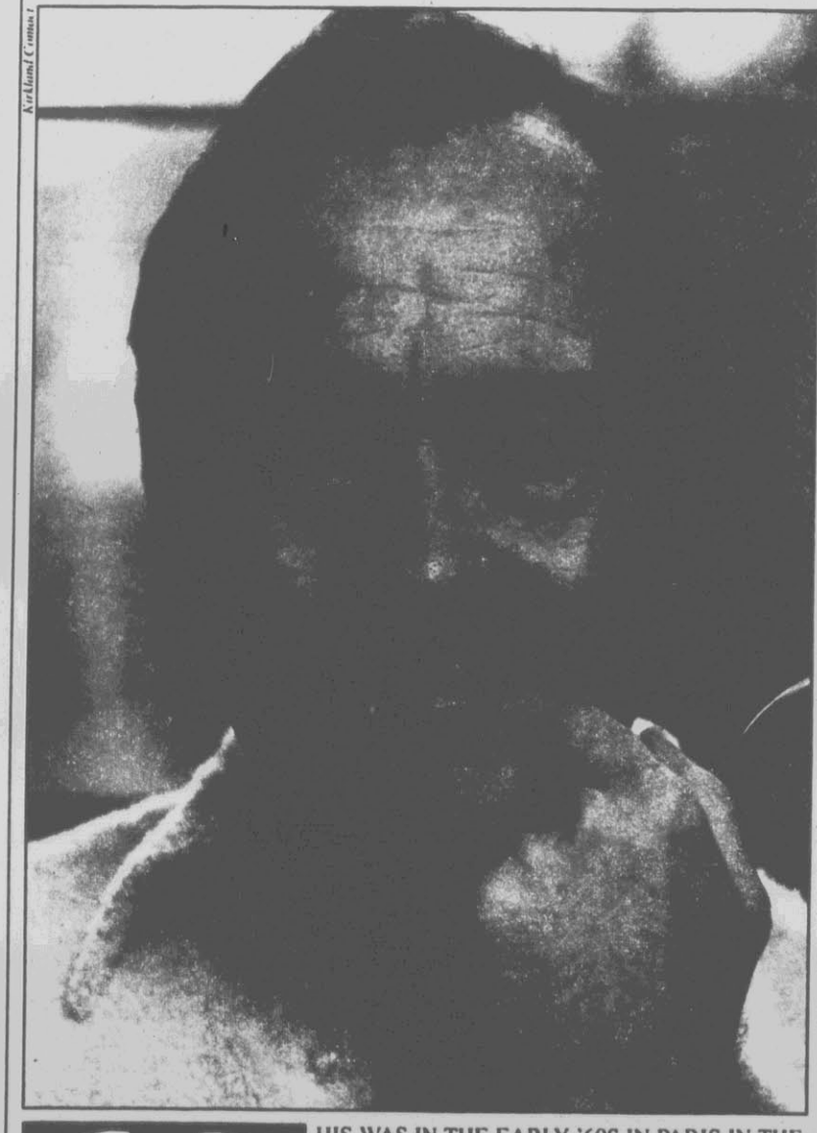
Jack Lemmon



Kirkland Contact

Jack Lemmon could be sunning himself out in Hollywood with the rest of the millionaires. Instead, he's spending this summer on Broadway, sweating his way through a tough, grinding and undeniably great American play.

THIS WAS IN THE EARLY '60S IN PARIS IN THE office of Dr. Jean Dax, a handsome, dashing, bilingual chap who also happened to be a wonderful physician who took care of our kids, and there in the waiting room sat Jack Lemmon and a very pretty woman named Felicia Farr. They were about to get married and were going through the usual nervous preliminaries. Presumably, they had got Dr. Dax's name from William Holden, with whom Dax was a partner in a game preserve in Kenya.

I have been fond of Jack Lemmon ever since. He and Miss Farr are still married, and I have a proprietary feeling for them, almost as if I'd been a member of the wedding. In most doctors' waiting rooms, you read old copies of National Geographic. In Paris, you run into movie stars.

Lemmon is back on Broadway right now at the Broadhurst Theatre, starring as the father in Eugene O'Neill's towering, staggering, mournful drama, Long Day's Journey Into Night, as daunting a role as an actor can attempt. We tend to remember him as Felix Unger in The Odd Couple, fussily tidying up after Walter Matthau. But it is clear that, even at age 61, Lemmon is still an actor looking for a challenge.

He's been acting since his undergraduate days at Harvard, where he headed the university's Hasty Pudding Club. Men who attend prep schools like Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass., and go to Harvard usually end up in brokerage houses or reading the law. Lemmon came to New York and went to work in the theater. His breakthrough was as the silly, shallow Ensign Pulver in Henry Fonda's terrific film version of Mr. Roberts. No one who saw the movie will ever forget Pulver's bumbling if energetic attempts to seduce that Navy nurse.

He's done the funny films and the heavies. From Some Like It Hot to Missing. The man's range is extraordinary. Remember him as a drunk in Days of Wine and Roses, as a garment manufacturer in Save the Tiger, as a priest in Mass Appeal and as the nerdy cameraman in The Fortune Cookie?

The last time I saw him, he was pounding a piano in the Cafe Carlyle in New York, helping the singer Bobby Short make a television feature. There were no guarantees the thing would ever be sold, ever be seen, and I doubt Lemmon even got paid. But he was there, lending a hand. When Jimmy Cagney died earlier this spring, they asked Jack about Cagney—the crotchety, mean-spirited captain in Mr. Roberts.

"He kept trying to teach me to tap-dance," Jack said, "and he kept shouting, 'Lemmon, you've got two left feet!'"

If Jack Lemmon can't tap-dance, that's about all he can't do. If you don't believe me, catch him playing O'Neill on Broadway.

BORN: Feb. 8, 1925, in Boston.

BROADWAY DEBUT: Room Service, 1953.
FIRST FILM: It Should Happen to You, 1954.
OSCAR NOMINATIONS: Mr. Roberts (won Best Supporting Actor), 1955; Some Like It Hot, 1959; The Apartment, 1960; Days of Wine and Roses, 1962; Save the Tiger (won Best Actor), 1973; The China Syndrome, 1979; Tribute, 1980; Missing, 1982.

BRADY'S BITS

He was born in a hospital, like most of us. Unlike most of us, it was in the elevator. His mother had been playing bridge and lost track of time. Lemmon has been fascinating us ever since.

Editor's note: In the April 20 column, Shakespeare's anniversary was incorrectly given. This year was his 422nd birthday.
