County OKs PCMH Loan Plan

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners on Monday adopted a resolution approving a loan agreement which will provide Pitt County Memorial Hospital $10 million to purchase new equipment.

Revenue generated by the hospital, not tax money, will be used to repay the loan.

The $10 million will come from $100 million in revenue bonds sold by North Carolina Medical Care Commission, in cooperation with the N.C. Hospital Association and the Local Government Commission, to fund a revolving equipment financing program for public non-profit hospitals across the state.

The local share of the bonds will be repaid by the hospital — at about $151,000 a month — over a seven-year period.

Although the money will be loaned to the county (to provide tax-free status for the bonds) and not directly to the hospital, agreements free the county from all liability to repay the principal or interest.

Commissioners were told that the county has until June 25 to decide whether or not to participate in a North Carolina Association of County Commissioners Association liability insurance program.

County Manager Reginald Gray, reporting on a meeting held last week in Raleigh, said the county's premium under the association's self-risk plan would be about $284,194, as compared to the approximately $50,000 in premiums paid for this year's comprehensive insurance program.

But Gray said the county's insurance consultant has suggested several alternatives and those are being investigated before a decision is reached.

Assistant County Manager John Bulow told the board earlier this month that the county's general liability carrier will not renew the present general liability policy July 1, although he reported Monday that the company has agreed to a 30-day extension in coverage.

Commissioners gave approval to the acceptance of a $74,000 federal grant for rehabilitation of existing runway lighting, the rotating beacon and segmented wind cone at Pitt-Greenville Airport. Other funds for the project include $4,111 from the state and $4,111 to be shared by the county and the city of Greenville.

The board also heard a request from Frank Qualliotine, representing the Brooke Valley Home Owners

Council's User Fee Proposal Called 'Regressive Taxation'

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council's plan to include refuse collection fees as an additional revenue source in its proposed 1986-87 budget is a "regressive taxation" and should be reconsidered, according to members of the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters.

"We believe that the proposed user fee is regressive taxation which unfairly marks the poor, those on fixed incomes, in subsidized housing and on welfare," local chapter vice president Rhea Resnik told council members at a public hearing on the budget Monday night.

In preference to the proposed user fees, the League of Women Voters recommended a tax increase.

"An increase in taxes would permit citizens the use of tax deductions, would afford a better record of tax collection and would be more equitable for all citizens," Ms. Resnik said.

The council has scheduled collection fees of $15 per month per container for non-residential service and $4 per month for residential service in the proposed $86,452,856 budget for the 1986-87 fiscal year.

The refuse fees, which were suggested as a means to offset the anticipated loss of federal money through Gramm-Rudman-Hollings cutbacks, are expected to generate $656,550 in additional revenue, according to City Manager Gail Meeks.

The proposed budget also calls for a fee of $75 per call for rescue service by city personnel. The rescue fee is expected to generate $144,000, less 30 percent anticipated bad debts, in 1986-87 based on an implementation date of Oct. 1.

The proposed refuse fee would be tacked on to monthly utility bills, while Pitt County Memorial Hospital would be responsible for collection of rescue fees.

Ms. Meeks said a tax increase of seven cents per $100 valuation would be required to replace the money expected through the user fee concept. Greenville's tax rate is set at 63 cents per $100 valuation.

"There are very few choices open to the City Council to offset losses expected in revenue sharing cuts," Ms. Meeks said. "Council members have a choice of raising taxes, Sunday sales, user fees and utility turnover. The only other choice is to reduce services, and the council has said it doesn't wish to do that."

Greenville residents who objected to the proposed user fees said they put a heavier burden on the elderly and lower income residents.

"A lot of senior citizens live on less than $10 per day. They cannot pay this fee," said Sue Campbell of 1102 Hooker Road. "If we must have user fees, please put it on recreational facilities. If people want to play let them pay."

"I don't think the user fee concept is spreading the cost to all the people," said Bob Woodside of 1206 Drexel Lane. "It means the poor will pay more."

"This is a taxation of a regressive nature because those who have a higher income pay a smaller percentage than those of lower income," Dr. Pat Dunn of 1103 Ragsdale Road said.

Dr. Dunn said the user fee offers citizens few choices.

"Regardless of how much we use

'Rich Uncle Sam' Is No More

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Samuel R. Pierce Jr., the secretary of housing and urban development, said today urban America can no longer expect the federal government to be "lavish with the public purse."

"I know this is difficult to accept," Pierce said in a speech to the U.S. Conference of Mayors. "It's like the rich and generous uncle who suddenly cuts off his relatives."

"Well, your rich Uncle Sam no longer has the wherewithal to support his former habits of generosity," Pierce said. "In fact, as we all know he's in debt, deeply."

Pierce said that despite their dire complaints, most cities are healthy and can bear a bigger share of paying for local needs.

The mayors responded to the speech with only polite applause.

Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt also addressed the mayors, saying they should set their highest priority on preserving federal aid for housing. He said the budget-cutting mood in Washington, and the Gramm-Rudman legislation requiring automatic spending cuts, is "a confession of political bankruptcy, a refusal to make choices."

In an interview afterward, Babbitt, a potential contender for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, said Pierce's speech offered nothing for the nation's cities.

"If I were a mayor, I would have clapped with one hand," he said.

Mayors of both parties have used the convention to criticize the Reagan administration for seeking to end big urban aid programs like general revenue sharing and to slash by half or more other domestic programs.

The administration, saying there is no more revenue to share, wants to do away with the $4.6 billion a year general revenue-sharing program.

But Pierce said cities have the resources to remain healthy on their own.

"For the most part, our cities are doing better," he said. "Many have budget surpluses, the result in part of the strong economic recovery, and in part of your good management. So this must be the time for the cities to bear an increasing share of the burden of meeting community needs."

The secretary said the administration recognized cities were not free of problems, and that many communities have missed out on economic growth of recent years. But he said the old approach of spending billions of federal dollars on inner-city housing and other projects has proved to be the wrong approach.

FIREWORKS MONEY APPEAL

The Greenville Jaycees are appealing for public donations for the Greenville community's Fourth of July fireworks display.

According to Rufus Walston, Jaycee president, this appeal is needed because of increased costs of fireworks, higher liability insurance costs and the Jaycees' decision to channel more money into other Jaycee projects — specifically the Boys' Home, muscular dystrophy, cystic fibrosis and the Jaycee Burn Center.

He said the Jaycees have, for the past 12 years, with the help of corporate sponsors, made Greenville's Independence Day fireworks display the largest in eastern North Carolina.

Tax-deductible donations may be sent to the Greenville Jaycees, P.O. Box 258, Greenville, N.C. 27834-0258. Walston hopes all money can be received by June 20.

Blake Quits ECU Administration

Charles R. "Dick" Blake, assistant to the chancellor at East Carolina University for the past 11 years, has resigned.

Blake, who left the university last week, said this morning that he resigned in order to "pursue enterprises in Onslow County, Moore County and here," where he holds real estate interests.

"There are a lot of things I've wanted to do and feel this was the appropriate time for me," Blake, a Moore County native said.

Blake entered the U.S. Air Force after graduating from ECU in 1954 and rose to the rank of lieutenant colonel before he retired in 1974. His assignments in the Air Force included overseas assignments in Okinawa, the Philippines and Viet Nam, where he flew more than 100 combat missions.

His last five-year tour in the military was spent on the staff of the secretary of the Air Force in Washington, where he served as a member of the Plans and Policy Directorate for the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Blake became assistant to the chancellor at ECU in 1974 at the request of former Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins, and continued in the post under former Chancellor Thomas Brewer and Chancellor John Howell.

Suggesting "there's going to be a major transition" at the university because of the retirement of Howell by July 1 of next year, Blake said "I just decided that the end of the academic year ... summertime was a good time to do it (resign)."

"I'll still do all I can to support East Carolina" Blake said, adding that "it's been exciting" to see the growth and development of the university, especially during the past "4½ years under John Howell and his administration."

"It's been a great experience," Blake said.

Wedding Vows Said In Evening Ceremony

The Rev. Terry Collins of Greenville officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Warren Bass of Greenville provided an arrangement of classical music. Acolyte was Daniel Jelovich. Passages from the Bible were read by Mrs. Billy R. McManus of Humble, Texas, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Lawrence D. Kerr of San Jose, Calif., sister-in-law of the bridegroom.

Patti Jo Jackson of Tarboro, sister of bridegroom, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Duchess Lee Pittman of Rocky Mount, step-sister of the bride, and Mary Elizabeth Gregory of Greensboro.

Lawrence D. Kerr of San Jose, Calif., brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were John Cox of Herrin, Ill., and Billy R. McManus of Humble, Texas, both brothers-in-law of the bridegroom.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a full length gown of classic ivory taffeta. The dropped fitted bodice and sleeves were of alencon lace and were adorned with taffeta ruffles at the cuff. The lace bodice and sleeves were hand beaded. The gown featured a sabrina neckline and a deep V-back. The full skirt was complemented by taffeta ruffles and extended into a chapel train. She wore a strand of pearls to drape the V-back. She wore a headpiece of ivory tulle on a beaded teardrop hat with a beaded tulle pouf. She carried an arm bouquet of stative, cobra lilies and fern tied with a white bow. She carried an ivory linen and lace handkerchief that had belonged to her maternal grandmother.

The parents of the bride hosted a reception on the lawn of their home. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Overton of Plymouth and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Helmuth. Goodbyes were said by Jacqueline Kerr of Carlsbad, Calif., sister of the bridegroom. Cake was served by Mrs. Bob Helmuth and punch was poured by Mrs. Jack Stocks of Bethel, great-aunt of the bride. White silk roses filled with rice were distributed by Kelly Kerr, Eric Cox and Lindsey Kerr, all nieces of the bridegroom.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Tarboro Inn. A bridesmaid's luncheon was hosted by Mrs. Charles E. Gregory and Beth Gregory at their home. Several other parties and showers were held in honor of the couple.

The bride is a graduate of Tarboro High School and East Carolina University, where she earned a degree in interior design. The bridegroom is a graduate of Virginia Commonwealth University and is a television sportscaster.

The couple will make their home in San Diego, Calif.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

You're going to find this hard to believe, but I was born of a mother who is punctual.

She leaves enough time to get to the airport to make five detours, follow a line-painting truck for 10 miles at 15 mph, change three flat tires, wait out a four-mile train and make a round-trip back home to get something she forgot...and still makes the flight.

She lives in a world I will never see. There are parking places near the door when she arrives for anything. The orchestra is unpacking their instruments. The auditorium is dark. Salespeople are scurrying through a side door and punching in. Nurses are watering the office plants. The banks still have their blinds down.

You learn early in the family that when mother says dinner is at 6, that's it! The sweet little apple-cheeked lump of gentleness lays it on you with the subtlety of Mr. T. and his "BE THERE!"

There is a ritual. At 5 p.m., mother brings out the hors d'oeuvres. Those who are there when the second hand sweeps around the clock are treated to hot bits of calories straight from the oven toaster. Those who arrive 30 minutes later get cold blobs of whatever no one else wanted or could identify.

At 5:45 the empty plate of appetizers is removed, whisked away. Our daughter once arrived at 5:50. We tried to tell her how great the hors d'oeuvres were. My mother said, "There's no need for all that explanation." She produced a picture from the cookbook and placed it in her lap. "That's what they looked like in the book and mine bore a striking resemblance." My daughter seemed to feel good about it.

Mother is the only one I know who can tell a turkey when it will be done and it is.

We were late once for a cookout. When we arrived, she met us at the curb, flung open all the doors and said, "You're late! Grab a hamburger. We're almost finished eating and at the 'We really should do this more often' part of the evening."

For a while I tried to cover up the fact I hadn't started dinner when mother arrived by putting an onion in the oven, but she caught on to that. Somehow she is always in the kitchen when I am frantically shoving a nail through a potato that is hard as a rock.

Despite the fact that I'm always running a day and a half late, my mother does give me brownie points for trying new recipes and breaking new culinary ground. It is not without its risks. One night I tried to experiment with a recipe for fresh strawberries swimming in a rich, thin sauce of cream and sugar. When I took it out of the refrigerator the berries were shriveled and with four noses the cream sauce could have passed for Mount Rushmore. My mother did not raise a fool. I quickly got a picture of it out of the cookbook and explained, "This is what it would have looked like if it had turned out." Somehow it didn't work for me.

Combinations Of Drugs Can Be Very Dangerous

DEAR ABBY: I was very interested to read your column wherein a reader described the suppressing action of certain antibiotics on oral contraceptives.

As a member of the dental profession who considers himself well-read and who prescribes antibiotics routinely, I must confess that I was not aware of these facts.

A quick survey of my colleagues suggests that it has yet to reach the dental profession in significant numbers.

You would be performing a well-appreciated public service by noting those specific antibiotics in your column. Thank you. — DONALD A. JOHNSON, D.D.S., RICHFIELD, MINN.

DEAR DR. JOHNSON: I called my trusty pharmacist, David Powells, who was kind enough to share this information published by pharmaceutical companies for physicians and health-care professionals.

"Oral contraceptives may be rendered less effective and increased incidence of breakthrough bleeding may occur by virtue of drug interaction with rifampin, isoniazid, ampicillin, neomycin, penicillin V, tetracycline, chloramphenicol, sulfonamides, nitrofurantoin, griseofulvin, barbiturates, phenytoin, primidone, phenylbutazone, analgesics, tranquilizers (e.g. diazepam), and anti-migraine preparations. Oral contraceptives may alter the effectiveness of other types of drugs, such as oral anticoagulants, anti-convulsants, tricyclic anti-depressants, anti-hypertensive agents (e.g. guanethidine), theophylline, vitamins, hypoglycemic agents, clofibrate, glucocorticoids and acetaminophen."

Further, women who use oral contraceptives "should not smoke. The combination of cigarette smoking, especially heavy cigarette smoking, and oral contraceptive use greatly increases the risk of heart attack."

DEAR ABBY: You need a short course on the subject of retirement. It's not wonderful for everyone. After the retiree has traveled, gone fishing, painted the house, played with the grandchildren and sat around the house doing nothing, terminal boredom sets in.

As the wife of a husband who has been retired for two years, I would like to state that he is retired, I am not. I still have the groceries to buy, the food to prepare, the dishes to do, the laundry, cleaning, etc. My husband is from the school that all of the above is woman's work — and at 66 he isn't about to change nor does he want to.

When do I retire? — ANGRY IN ATLANTA

DEAR ANGRY: Never, if you honestly believe that your husband can't change. At 66, he's just a kid. Men fall in love, sire children and just begin to live at that age.

They can also learn how to cook, shop for groceries, do the laundry, the dishes and clean the house. Think positive, and direct your displeasure to your husband, not me. If you expect nothing, you'll get less.

DEAR ABBY: My father was a wonderful man. No girl ever had a better dad. Everyone who knew him loved him. His name was Robert E. Kreiger. He played football for the Philadelphia Eagles and piloted 30 missions over occupied Europe during World War II.

Dad smoked three packs of cigarettes a day. Just two months after he was diagnosed as having lung cancer, he died. He had just turned 60.

Please, dads, don't smoke. — HIS DAUGHTER

Chiggers Don't Burrow Under Skin

According to Dr. Jim Winslow of the North Carolina Academy of Family Physicians, red bugs or chiggers don't burrow under the skin of their hosts as most people think.

They bite and leave. The saliva they inject while biting is what causes an allergic reaction in many people, with itchiness and redness resulting.

Actually a kind of mite, chiggers are attracted to body warmth and bite to get a blood meal. Once on the body, they migrate toward natural barriers like waistbands and socks and toward warm areas like the groin and armpits.

Prevention is the best treatment for chiggers. Use insect repellent when you enter heavily wooded or weedy areas.

Using nail polish on the affected area, a popular remedy, is not effective, since they don't burrow. Medications for itches are more effective.

One Step

Pitt County is one step closer to a profitable, progressive medical district.

The Planning and Zoning Commission approved the expanded medical district plan at a recent public hearing, placing the reigns for progress in the hands of Greenville's City Council.

Now, timely approval of the plan by the council is essential. For health services to become totally comprehensive, a plan that won't change at the drop of a hat is vital. The P&Z board's approval was a big victory for the medical district because it overcame the public's initial criticism. That OK moves the plan from tentative action to the realm of reality.

The proposed plan maps the development of a successful medical district. Strategic growth comes only after strategic planning. The plan is acceptable to those involved with its inception; that fact is obvious by the P&Z approval. Ample time — almost too much time — has been provided to develop a sound plan. Now, with public input and planning approval and zoning adjustments in place, the pace is set.

The landowners involved should react with civic responsibility and support the zoning designations. This district is a critical project for Pitt County and eastern North Carolina. It will benefit the entire region — both economically and for the good of the people. The district is necessary to recruit profitable, medical-related businesses. Hospital and medical school officials, in order to plan, need to know what's going to happen to land around this complex.

With these needs in mind, the City Council must also act responsibly by promptly voting the expanded medical district into law.

Link

If the outlook for financing future state road construction is cloudy, the completion of a 7.4-mile section of the relocated U.S. 264 is a certainty with the approval of a $3.5 million paving contract by the N.C. Board of Transportation Friday.

The award means the link, which runs from east of Farmville to Secondary Road 1204 near Pitt County Memorial Hospital, should be completed by October 1987.

State Board of Transportation member Randy Doub says all other sections of the U.S. 264 improvements from Wilson to Greenville should be completed by that time with the exception of the Farmville and Greenville bypasses.

The Farmville bypass bid-letting has been moved up from October 1987 to July 1987, Doub said. This will take advantage of summer and fall weather and allow completion of the bypass in the fall of 1991, rather than the spring of 1992. That and other projects could be delayed if additional highway funding is not forthcoming, however.

It has been the dream of many decades that an adequate multilaned highway would be constructed along U.S. 264 from Washington, via Greenville, to Raleigh. Realization of that dream is rapidly approaching and the awarding of paving contracts for the Greenville-Farmville paving is symbolic of the overall effort to provide a highway for our area.

Cracking Down On Crack

WASHINGTON — Big Bill Bennett, the U.S. secretary of education, turned up before a House committee last month to say some remarkably sensible things about the drug epidemic in our public schools. He had several recommendations for coping with students who use drugs, or deal in drugs, on school property. His first recommendation: Expel them.

That blunt proposal seemed to dismay Charles Rangel of New York, chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics. The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who testified the following day, also demurred. Agreeing that drug use is a "national disaster," Jackson thought drug education programs would be better than expulsions. Benjamin Gilman of New York concurred: "Kicking them out isn't going to solve the problem," he said. "That's not educating the kids, that's just scaring the hell out of them."

Bennett is on the right track. He made it clear that he certainly is not opposed to "drug education programs." He will publish a "what works" booklet this summer, summarizing the most effective programs across the nation. He believes firmly that a long-range answer lies in promoting a unified front among parents, students, teachers and principals. Meanwhile, Bennett cited a couple of examples of "get tough" policies that have worked wonders.

Eastside High School in Paterson, N.J., was "a caldron of violence and terror" before Joe Clark took over as principal. The school had a drug education program (three-fourths of all high school students have heard drug education programs), but while the program was going on, students were selling drugs in the halls. Clark got on the public address system and announced flatly that there would be no more drugs at Eastside. Subsequently he expelled 300 students. There is no drug problem at Eastside today.

Hundreds of miles to the south, in Atlanta, Northside High School also had a "rampant" epidemic of drug use. It, too, had a drug education program, but one day Principal Bill Randolph found students in an art class smoking marijuana and blowing it through the air vents. He took summary action. He sent a letter to every parent warning that "if I catch your child with drugs," the child would be o-u-t. Drug abuse at Northside, said Bennett, "has just about stopped."

Rep. E. Clay Shaw of Fort Lauderdale was the only committee member to support Bennett's proposal: "I think it's about time that we quit worrying about the kid that we throw out of school who was nothing but a pusher of drugs, and we worry and, during that "long session," passes a two-year budget. Then, in June of the even-numbered years, it returns to adjust that budget for the second year.

Service to the General Assembly is quickly becoming a full-time job, and that development concerns Jordan. He says the state will have a professional, rather than citizen's, legislature if this trend isn't reversed. Already there are concerns that only the self-employed, the retired and the rich can serve in the Legislature because no one else can get the required time off from work.

Elimination of the short session would certainly help in that regard. It would reduce by a month or six weeks the time demands placed on legislators.

It would also eliminate lame duck legislating. A number of legislators were unseated in the May primaries, but they're back this month to finish out their terms.

There's not much more favorable comment to make about Jordan's idea. Even those two points can be debated.

It isn't the short session which creates the professional legislature. It's the length of the long session. Most legislators would probably prefer to see the long session shortened by four to six weeks rather than have the short session eliminated.

Lame duck legislating also isn't a big problem in North Carolina. In May, only five legislators lost bids for renomination to their current offices.

Elimination of the short session would create some serious troubles for the legislature, however.

The budget is based on projected revenues, and legislators wait as long as possible to make an official estimate of what the state will collect for the next year. The projection for the second year of the biennium is much less reliable than that for the first year. Eliminate the short session and the Legislature would not have the opportunity to come back and adjust that projection.

They also wouldn't be able to adjust spending. Pay raises for teachers and state employees would have to be set for two years at a time. One can imagine second year pay raises set far too low to handle inflation or far too high to handle a sudden dip in the economy.

Eliminating the short session would also help concentrate power in the hands of a few legislative leaders because they're already working full-time. The budget oversight which the Legislature is now conducting would not be shared with the membership at mid-course. Only the budget committee chairmen would be involved.

Finally, the Legislature would be less capable of dealing with small crises. Big crises, like that in the insurance industry, would draw special or emergency sessions. Smaller, but still urgent, problems probably would not merit a special call back to Raleigh.

Jordan may have surprised himself when he floated the idea of ending the short session. After he thinks about his idea for a while, don't be surprised if he never mentions it again.

Let's See America ... First

It happened on July 3, 1986, less than a month from now. The "See America First" campaign had been a smashing success. Everybody without exception turned their backs on Europe and decided to visit the U.S.A. instead. They all chose to leave on the same day.

As Conway drove down to the Beltway with his family of three children, his luggage rack loaded with gear, he noticed that the traffic was unusually heavy — so much so that he was stuck on the Beltway ramp and could not move forward or backward.

He said to his crying children, "You can't see America first without some hardship. Now either sing along with Bruce Springsteen or shut up."

After an hour Conway rolled down his window and asked the driver in the next car what the hold-up was.

The man replied, "I don't know. It says on the radio every highway is gridlocked between here and Nebraska. The whole country started up their cars at the same moment."

"Where are they trying to get to?" Conway asked.

"Yellowstone National Park, I think."

"That's where we're going," Conway's wife said.

"We'll fool 'em," Conway told her. "Everyone thinks we're heading for Yellowstone Park, but we'll turn off at the next exit and go to Disney World instead."

"I wouldn't go to Disney World," the man in the next car yelled. "The fire department has just closed down Orlando, Fla., for overcrowding."

"The whole city?"

"All the way to Sarasota."

Conway's 13-year-old daughter burst into tears. "You promised to show us America, and we've been sitting here for four hours. We haven't seen anything yet."

"That's where you're wrong," said Conway. "This is America — cars bumper to bumper as far as the eye can gaze. You don't see this in the Soviet Union."

His wife said, "In the Soviet Union we could have driven from Moscow to Leningrad by now."

"Wait. Once we get out of here we'll head straight for the Statue of Liberty. No one will be there on the Fourth of July."

A motorcycle policeman walked by. "Officer, I would like to know what the fastest way would be to get to the Statue of Liberty."

"I wouldn't try it if I were you," the cop replied. "Manhattan is ringed with the National Guard."

"What for?"

"To put down the tourist riots. Apparently every family in America had the same reservations for the same rooms, and the only way to get people out of the lobbies was to tear gas them."

"Has it quieted down?" Conway asked.

"It has, now that the mounted police rounded the tourists up with cattle prods and put them in Yankee Stadium."

"How long do you think it will take us to get to the Chevy Chase exit from this ramp?"

"Three, four days at the most."

"But we can't survive for four days waiting to get on the Beltway."

"You should have thought of that before you started heading west. Come to think of it, you're stuck — you can't move forward and you can't move back — so you're parking, right?"

"I'm parking against my will."

"I don't care what the reason is. You're still illegally parked. Here's a ticket. If I find you here in a couple of hours you'll get another one."

"This is unfair."

"I would like you to take a Breathalyzer test, too," the cop said.

"What for?"

"Anybody that takes his family on an auto trip on July 3 has got to be drinking."

Strength For Today

There are multitudes of people who scoff at the reality of angels. If they believe in angels at all, they think of them simply as inhabitants of the heavenly realm, and that's that. But all through the Bible we find angels appearing to individuals, guiding them, strengthening them, reviving them.

If angels do not exist, then the Bible bears a lot of false testimony, and this we do not believe. If they existed at one time in world history, is it not reasonable to suppose that they exist now?

The idea of the guardian angel is spiritually sound and valid. Unseen companions walk at our side as we journey through life. They stand at the baby's crib. They hover over us in hours of great decision. They strengthen us in trouble and sorrow. They furnish us a delightful, although unseen, fellowship.

Part IX: The Gas Plant

The Way Greenville Was

By PATRICIA M. MOORE

When Greenville citizens approved $100,000 in gas plant bonds in 1931, they obtained a plant, 15 miles of pipeline and about four acres of land adjacent to the plant.

In addition, they inherited problems caused by improper pipeline installation as well as gas leaks. These problems took years to solve.

Early history of the gas plant is both complex and incomplete. It includes unanswered questions, such as why were the original pipelines improperly installed? Why didn't anyone know that the ends of some pipelines were not sealed? And exactly when did the first gas plant begin operation?

While passage of time has obscured some answers, others are unknown because city operation of the plant did not begin until 1931. Consequently, public record dates from 1931.

Installation of the first gas pipelines probably was initiated by the city about 1917, before streets were paved, in anticipation of future needs. Original mapping of lines in December 1917 showed five miles of mains and 347 services without connections to a supply source.

From 1917 until February 1924, implementation of gas service remained incomplete. Then the Board of Aldermen finalized approval of a 30-year franchise with R.A. Blackwood, who agreed to build a gas plant and a distribution system.

The franchise agreement stipulated that Blackwood pay the city $26,801.50 for existing mains, engineering, etc., with interest from Jan. 1, 1917, to the time he took control of the system, which was supposed to be 30 days. In addition, Blackwood was required to post $1,000 bond in the event his plant didn't furnish gas within the next year.

Blackwood also agreed to give the city 90 days notice in writing of intent to sell, at which time the city would have 60 days to exercise its option to buy the plant.

In June 1924, the public was informed that if there were no unexpected delays in plant construction, gas would be available no later than Oct. 1.

But before gas connections were made to individual houses, a fiasco reportedly occurred during a trial run of the plant. According to recollections of longtime residents, at least one of the two holding tanks of gas leaked and by the next day the tank was empty or nearly empty.

At that time, the tanks functioned like thermometers: as gas filled a tank, the floating holder inside rose. As gas was used, the floating holder dropped.

The larger tank (no longer in existence) held 40,000 cubic feet of gas, while the smaller tank (which still exists) held 10,000 cubic feet of gas.

Since the first pipes had been installed prior to or during 1917, city officials didn't know whether leaks were from deterioration or from improper installation.

In the aftermath of the gas leak, trees and shrubs in certain sections of town died, causing some residents to become upset. In the words of one longtime resident, "A lot of women were raising sand and pulling their hair. There was a lot of 'rookus.'" The dead trees had to be cut down, and workmen tried to locate and repair leaks.

The following year, on March 4, 1925, the gas company advertised that it was ready to provide gas service to residents on Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth streets west of Evans Street, and Eighth, Ninth, Greene, Washington and Pitt streets in their entirety. However, confirmation that service actually began in 1925 is unavailable.

The next significant news of gas company activities occurred at the Greenville Board of Aldermen's February 1926 meeting when aldermen learned that Blackwood had incorporated the gas plant under the name Greenville Gas Co. and then had sold his franchise to Greenville Gas Co., a technicality.

Aldermen voted to waive their option of first refusal in the event of a sale so that Blackwood could proceed with his sale and begin operations at the plant. However, the city retained purchase rights if the plant were put up for sale again.

Although the gas company continued to solicit customers and advertise appliances including gas ranges, grates, bathroom stoves and hot water heaters, its plant was not officially inspected until Dec. 31, 1927, by Stevens and Wood, a New York engineering firm. Presumably, gas was being supplied by that time.

By 1929, Carolina Gas and Electric Co., formerly called Greenville Gas Co., was operating plants in Wilmington, Kinston, Fayetteville, New Bern and Washington as well as Greenville. During its early years, the gas company supplied fuel and sold gas appliances for cooking and hot water.

In May 1931, Carolina Gas and Electric Co. notified the city of its intent to sell the gas plant although it already had concluded a sale agreement with Tidewater Power Co. pending outcome of Greenville's decision whether to exercise its option to buy the gas plant.

During this time, Tidewater Power Co. purchased several other eastern North Carolina plants and was said to be interested in the Greenville operation.

After deliberating the situation, aldermen decided to let citizens decide whether the city would purchase the gas system for $100,000 and operate it as part of the water and light commission or let Tidewater Power Co. purchase and operate it.

Between June 4 and election day July 14, 1931, controversy raged about the gas plant's future. The opposition feared that city ownership and operation of the gas plant would detract from the efficiency and success of the electric water and light plant.

On the other side, advocates of city ownership said that private power companies were a menace and that if one of them obtained the gas plant, the city-owned utilities would be its next goal. They reasoned that money was to be made from utilities and that the city could operate the plant at lower rates than privately-owned power companies.

In addition to these arguments favoring city ownership of the gas plant, city officials were advised that the gas system was valued at almost $150,000, considerably more than the $100,000 asking price, which enhanced its attractiveness as a good buy. City officials also were told that its previous year had been profitable.

In an indication of the election outcome, at a June 4 town board meeting, Alderman J.H. Boyd Jr., a staunch proponent of city gas plant ownership, stated that he would fight outside ownership of local interests to the last ditch. He was applauded by spectators.

On election day, 427 out of 914 registered voters approved bonds to purchase the gas plant. Opposition votes totaled 79. Since a majority of registered voters was required to decide the issue and the majority totaled 457, bonds were approved by 15 votes.

The city took over operation from Tidewater, which had assumed management on behalf of Carolina Gas and Electric Co. pending outcome of the election.

By Sept. 28, the city had reduced gas rates and increased customers.

But the first month of operation the system lost 40 percent of the gas that was made. Records at the Greenville Utilities Commission show that repairs to large leaks in November 1931 reduced the loss to 31 percent.

Repair of leaks continued into the 1940s. According to one former employee, workmen found at least one place where two pipes apparently were placed in a ditch and covered over without being connected. These pipes were 8 to 10 inches apart.

In other places, pipes were an inch or more apart with no evidence that they ever had been connected.

Wherever serious leaks or unconnected lines were found, new pipeline was installed. When minor leaks were discovered, repairs were made to existing pipes.

Again in the 1960s, evidence of incomplete gas pipeline installation surfaced when utilities crews discovered ends of line plugged with cement covered by burlap bags and, in some cases, ends of lines plugged with clay. Over the years, the clay had held well, but modern crews took no chances and replaced clay with clamps.

Today, in older parts of town where streets have never been resurfaced, citizens can see intermittent patched squares where workmen cut holes in pavement to locate and repair leaking pipelines.

Over the years, use of gas as heating and appliance fuel has fluctuated, with recent years seeing an increase in demand for gas service.

Perhaps citizens of today wonder why anyone would care about a utility's obscure and complex past.

One might reply that this city's gas service program shows that the road to the present has not always been smooth.

In addition, the heated, close election that favored municipal operation of the gas plant indicated citizen's concern about the way their city was to be run as well as their concern for its future well being.

New Bill Calls For Study Of Election Procedures

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislature should not give up on moving statewide and county elections to non-presidential election years, even though voters soundly rejected the idea last month, a state senator says.

Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, filed for introduction Monday a bill that would authorize a legislative study of state campaign and election procedures, including the scheduling of state and county elections.

Martin sponsored last year a constitutional amendment that would have shifted the elections to odd-numbered years. The measure failed in a May 6 referendum by about 70 percent to 30 percent.

But Martin said he did not think the vote reflected satisfaction with the present system. "It's just that the atmosphere was not right," he said. "I don't think people had a clear understanding of what the change would accomplish."

Martin said he proposed the change because state and county elections and issues pertinent to them currently are overshadowed by presidential contests.

The study he wants would examine "ways in which campaigning and elections can be modified so as to increase the likelihood that candidates and issues will be supported or opposed based on their merits."

Martin said he hoped the study panel would consider shifting statewide and county elections to even-numbered but non-presidential years.

"I'm still convinced we need a change," he said.

The unsuccessful amendment drew heavy criticism from Gov. Jim Martin and his Republican allies. They charged that Democratic officeholders favored it because they wanted to distance themselves from such unpopular presidential candidates as Walter Mondale, who lost overwhelmingly to President Reagan in 1984, and George McGovern, a landslide loser to Richard Nixon in 1972.

In both of those years, the state GOP swept the top of the ticket for the only times this century, winning a U.S. Senate seat and the governor's office and making big gains in the General Assembly.

Opponents also criticized the manner in which the proposed amendment was handled. The measure was rushed through the Legislature in the 1985 session's waning days without a public hearing and with little debate.

Sen. Martin said partisan wrangling had so obscured the amendment's intent that, shortly before the election, he urged people who questioned the measure to vote against it.

Hunt Urges Backing For School Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt has urged the adoption of a month-old Carnegie Forum task for study on teaching, saying the concepts contained in the report are "radical" but necessary.

Hunt, a member of the task force that wrote the report, told the Democratic Leadership Council Monday that "teaching throughout America in the main is not treated like a true and highly respected profession." He said: "This is aimed at making teaching a true profession."

He said teachers should have "the same freedom, discretion and authority that I have in my law firm and that a doctor has in his medical practice."

Hunt said America must drastically change its education system or "face economic catastrophe" brought on by an inability to compete in world markets.

"There will be some pain, there will be some trauma there, but we've got to change," Hunt said. He said an upcoming teacher shortage must not be met by hiring the unqualified for classroom jobs.

"America can do that again, and if we do, we face economic catastrophe" at the hands of newly industrialized, low-wage nations that will outperform the United States in international markets, Hunt said.

Hunt said it was necessary to create "a workforce that is of such high quality that it will give the nation a competitive edge" by devising new applications for technology.

To create such a workforce, Hunt urged adoption of the Carnegie Forum task force report on teaching.

Among recommendations are national certification of teachers, pay levels on a par with those in other occupations, greater status for teachers and increased freedom, especially for extremely well-paid "lead" teachers, redesign of the schools and upgrade of standards.

The report urges schools to require a bachelor of arts and sciences degree as a prerequisite for the professional study of teaching, which would be at the post-graduate level. It says incentives for teachers should be related to schoolwide performance.

The Democratic Leadership Council is a group of moderate Democrats headed by former Virginia Gov. Chuck Robb.

NASA Role Upsetting To Widow

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A report on the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger shows instances where NASA officials "lacked the courage to exercise the responsibilities of their high office and some very bewildering thought processes," the widow of the Challenger pilot says.

Jane Jarrell Smith, widow of Michael J. Smith, a native of Beaufort, N.C., says in today's New York Times that she avoided reaching any conclusions until the presidential commission completed its investigation and published its report, which she has received. Seven astronauts were killed when the Challenger exploded Jan. 28.

Her comments were the first extensive public response to the commission's report by a close relative of a shuttle crew member.

"The report reflects incredibly terrible judgments, shockingly sparse concern for human life, instances of officials lacking the courage to exercise the responsibilities of their high office and some very bewildering thought processes," Mrs. Smith said in a telephone interview published in today's Washington Post.

Ex-Governors Back Harris Nuclear Plant

RALEIGH (AP) — Four former North Carolina governors, who said they felt they had an obligation to speak out about the Shearon Harris plant, have written a letter supporting the opening the Carolina Power & Light Co. nuclear facility.

The 10-sentence letter, signed by former Govs. Dan Moore, Jim Hunt, Bob Scott and Jim Holshouser, notes that the state Utilities Commission gave CP&L the go-ahead to build the plant and that federal regulators have supervised its design, engineering and construction.

"Some 20 years ago, as North Carolina was beginning to grow vigorously with the emergence of the Research Triangle and other areas, it became clear that our state's full potential in providing jobs and opportunities for our people would be served by a commitment to use nuclear power," said the letter, which was addressed to the editor of The News and Observer of Raleigh.

"North Carolina needs the power from its nuclear plants for jobs and economic growth," the letter said. "We hope that if there are remaining questions about the Harris plant, they will be resolved quickly and in a way to assure its safe operation and efficient generation of power for our citizens."

Circus Bleacher Falls, Hurts 53

GREENPORT, N.Y. (AP) — A circus bleacher collapse that sent at least 53 people to hospitals may have been caused by muddy ground beneath the 500-foot-long set of bleachers, an emergency official says.

The 10 rows of bleachers collapsed Monday while a crowd waited for a traveling show, the Toby Tyler Three-Ring Circus, to begin its show at a shopping center Monday evening, officials said.

Some people fell 10 feet to 15 feet, said Columbia County Emergency Management Director Marty Tuczinski. One infant suffered a fractured skull, but officials described most of the injuries as minor.

"It was a circus, and there were children there and adults, and it was complete chaos," said Tuczinski. "People were yelling and screaming."

A near-capacity crowd of some 120 people filled the bleachers when they fell, according to Columbia County sheriff's spokesman George Dorka. He said more than 60 were injured, and he said some of them may have been treated at the scene.

Edith Mesick, a spokeswoman for Columbia Memorial Hospital in Hudson, said 40 people were taken there, with six admitted, including the 6-month-old boy, Paul O'Connor of Hudson, who was listed in good condition.

Thirteen people were taken to Greene Memorial Hospital in Catskill and later released, said hospital spokeswoman Karen Premo.

Those hurt suffered mostly neck and back injuries, with sprains, bruises and some broken bones, said hospital officials.

The district attorney, the sheriff and state police were investigating, said Tuczinski.

A 5:30 p.m. show had been canceled because circus staff had difficulty setting up on wet ground, and the muddy ground "could well have contributed to the bleachers collapsing," said Tuczinski. "They were just not on solid ground."

However, he said it was too soon to say for sure what caused the accident at the wooden bleachers, which were held together at least partly with rope.

A state of emergency was declared to allow authorities to evacuate the area and impound the bleachers as evidence, said Tuczinski.

Dorka could not say early this morning whether any charges had been filed in connection with the accident.

Tuczinski said the circus shows in this Hudson Valley community about 30 miles south of Albany were sponsored by the Hudson's Boys Club.

Housing Start-Ups Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction slipped 7.4 percent in May, the biggest decline in a year, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that new homes and apartments were constructed at an annual rate of 1.89 million units in May compared to 2.04 million units in April.

Housing has been one of the few bright spots in the economy this year as the lowest mortgage rates in a decade generated a boom in construction and sales. Starts remained above the 1.9-million-mark from January through April, a pace not seen since the 1977-78 housing boom.

The big May decline occurred entirely in the construction of large apartment units, which plunged 21.9 percent, the biggest decline since a 35.6 percent drop in February 1985.

Analysts said that overbuilding in the apartment segment plus concern about the possible loss of real estate tax breaks contributed to the big decline.

Construction of single-family homes remained steady at 1.26 million units last month while construction of apartment units of four units or less rose 1.2 percent.

Woman's Death Traced To Cyanide In Capsule

AUBURN, Wash. (AP) — Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were pulled from store shelves after authorities confirmed that a cyanide-laced capsule caused the death last week of a 40-year-old woman.

Sue Snow, a bank manager, was found collapsed in her home by a relative last Wednesday, said Officer James Monnett of the Auburn Police Department. She died later that day at a hospital.

The King County medical examiner's office confirmed Monday that Ms. Snow died of acute cyanide poisoning, and Auburn police said cyanide was found in Excedrin capsules discovered in her home.

Auburn Mayor Bob Roegner declared a public emergency Monday, and all Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were being pulled from store shelves in the Auburn area. Authorities believe Ms. Snow, who was married and had two daughters, purchased the capsules in Auburn a couple of days before she died.

There were 56 capsules left inside the 60-capsule Excedrin bottle found near where Ms. Snow collapsed, said Christopher Rezendes, assistant director of investigations for the Seattle office of the federal Food and Drug Administration.

Several of the remaining capsules contained significant amounts of cyanide, Rezendes said.

But Monnett said that as of late

Monday night, no cyanide contamination was found in any of the bottles pulled from store shelves and tested by the FDA.

Police were advising Auburn residents particularly to avoid Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules that have the lot number 5 H 1 02-Aug. 88 on the package, the same lot number as the bottle that was found in Ms. Snow's home. Excedrin is made by Bristol-Myers.

The Seattle-King County Health Department notified the local FDA office of the incident Monday afternoon, Rezendes said.

"The FDA has indicated to us that this appears to be an isolated, local incident," said Harry Levine, a vice president of Bristol-Myers in New York. "We're cooperating fully with the FDA, the FBI and local authorities in removing all Excedrin capsules from store shelves in Auburn."

GM Issues J-Car Recall

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has recalled 87,000 1985 subcompact cars featuring the J-body platform for removal of a plastic ornament that could cause an engine fire.

The cars include the Chevrolet Cavalier, Oldsmobile Firenza, Buick Skyhawk and Cadillac Cimarron, GM said Monday.

GM said a plastic cap that fits over the air cleaner and is stamped with the words "2.0 Liter Fuel Injection" should be removed and thrown away. Owners can do this easily and don't have to take their cars to dealers, the company said.

GM 14 months ago recalled 34,000 Cavaliers with the same problem.

IN THE STATE

No Holiday

RALEIGH (AP) — Raleigh city employees have voted against deleting a paid holiday in exchange for one honoring civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Of the 1,752 employees who returned advisory ballots to the city personnel director, 972 — or 55 percent — wrote in "none of the above" or turned in blank ballots instead of checking a preference for deleting Veterans Day, Easter Monday or the Friday after Thanksgiving in exchange for the holiday honoring King.

Of those who did check on of the days, 559 voted in favor of deleting Veterans Day, 113 for deleting Thanksgiving Friday and 108 for deleting Easter Monday.

The Raleigh City Council voted 6-2 in March to declare the third Monday in January a paid holiday in memory of King and asked City Manager Dempsey E. Benton Jr. whether to subtract an existing paid holiday or sick leave day.

Benton proposed deleting Thanksgiving Friday. But when employees protested, saying it would interrupt their four-day weekend, he decided to put the matter to a non-binding employee vote.

The council is scheduled to settle the matter when it adopts its fiscal 1986-87 budget Thursday.

Bridges

RALEIGH (AP) — Construction is on schedule for a new bridge spanning Bogue Sound between Morehead City and Atlantic Beach, but the renovation of another bridge crossing the Newport River between Morehead City and Beaufort is running a month behind, officials say.

The $64,000 Newport River project, in which contractors are sandblasting and repainting the existing high-rise bridge, was supposed to be completed Sunday, said G.R. Shirley, a state transportation engineer.

Shirley said the work is expected to be completed in the middle of July.

Officials say the new four-lane, high-rise bridge connecting Morehead City and Atlantic Beach should be completed by fall 1987.

Superintendent

RALEIGH (AP) — Joyce L. Perry, an assistant superintendent for the Wake County school system, has been appointed superintendent of the Halifax County school system.

Ms. Perry, who was appointed Monday, was given a four-year contract to begin July 1, said Walter L. Turner, chairman of the Halifax County school board. Turner said some details remained to be worked out on Ms. Perry's salary but that it would be more than $50,000 annually.

Two incoming white board members said last week that the naming of Ms. Perry, who is black, was racially motivated. When the three new board members take office in December, only one black will remain on the board.

War Test

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A squadron of C-130 Hercules aircraft from the 317th Tactical Airlift Wing at Pope Air Force Base will take part in an exercise this week to test the wing's ability to go to war, a spokesman at the base said Monday.

The squadron, including 15 to 17 airplanes and aircrews, will also take maintenance, administrative and security personnel to a forward operating base, said Capt. Brian Irving. The deployment will simulate landing overseas, probably in a hostile environment, Irving said.

The evaluation of the wing will be done by members of the Military Airlift Command headquarters Inspector General's Office and experts from other MAC bases, Irving said.

The squadron's destination was not announced.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices headed higher early today amid optimism about the chances for lower interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 3.51 to 1,875.28 by 10:30 a.m. on Wall Street.

Advancing issues took a lead of about 5 to 4 over decliners on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE composite index rose 0.12 to 141.29.

Before trading started on the Big Board the Commerce Department reported that housing construction fell 7.4 percent in May to an annual rate of 1.89 million units from 2.04 million units in April. Most economists expected the report to show that the rate at which work began on new homes and apartments last month had remained unchanged.

The weak economic news today helped the credit markets maintain their recent upward momentum and stocks followed.

Bond dealers hope the economy's persistent lethargy will keep credit costs from rising and might induce the Federal Reserve Board to pursue more generous policies. Lower interest rates would be welcomed by the credit markets because bonds gain value when yields fall.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 2.42 to 1,871.77.

Declining issues slightly outnumbered advances on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 112.12 million shares, against 141.20 million in the previous session.

Fees ...

the the service, we have no choice about whether or not we pay it," she said. "I see garbage collection as a basic and fundamental service, just like police protection, street repairs, street lighting and sewer work."

The city should abandon the user fee concept and resort to additional taxation, according to Dr. Dunn.

"These basic services should be paid out of tax dollars, not from some special fee, because it is not really a special service," she said. "The way to tax the citizenry is through taxation, not through so-called user fees."

Woodside said he wondered about the possible addition of other user fees.

"I wonder where the next user fee is going to be. If we call the police to come four homes after 6:30 p.m., is it going to cost $35?" he said. "Let's call a tax a tax. Don't play games."

Charles Simpson of Wildwood Villas said the user fee is just an additional charge he on which he will receive no return.

"I can't even take this off my income taxes because this is not a tax. It is a user fee," Simpson said. "People will be paying $48 a year that they can't get back."

Mark Meltzer of 202 Staffordshire Road agreed, saying the City Council should not try to replace a tax increase with a refuse fee.

"If you need more money, put it up front, and raise the tax rate," Meltzer said. "A rose by any other name is still a rose."

Instituting the user fee will set dangerous precedents for the city, according to Jerry Cox of 305 Crestline Blvd.

"The user fee concept is dangerous to the city of Greenville. We have to ask how many times will we be charged a user fee," Cox said. "Sooner or later user fees will be higher than our property tax. You'll be doing an injustice to the citizens of Greenville by trying to charge them a fee. I don't want to have 25 separate user fees 25 years from now."

Some other residents who voiced objections at the hearing said council members should look to cut spending rather than adopting additional revenue sources.

"I think we have good services in this city, and I think fire and rescue, police and sanitation are perhaps the most important services," said John Grier of 1704 S. Elm St. "They are more important than some of the other services. We have to do some trimming."

W. Atwood Gurganus of 2703 Edwards St. suggested the city should eliminate one holiday during Thanksgiving to compensate for the holiday commemorating Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

"We could save $30,000 if we take back one Thanksgiving holiday to make up for the extra holiday added a few months ago," Gurganus said.

Herschel Williams of 2501 Madison Circle said his tax dollars pay for refuse collection.

"I don't want to pay the city to charge for garbage collection. When I pay my taxes I want to pay for garbage collection and police protection," he said. "If you have to get money, get it from us up front and say what it is instead of sneaking in the back door. Furthermore, if you can't afford something, do as I do, knock it off."

Paul Majette, owner of Edgewood Trailer Park, said he supported the proposed refuse fees.

"I'd like to see it put on. A tax raise strictly hits me," he said. "With a tax increase, I'll have to raise rent on my property."

The City Council was scheduled to conduct a workshop meeting on the proposed budget at 5 p.m. today in the first floor conference room at City Hall.

In other action, the council approved a resolution directing the city staff not to issue any zoning com-

Buc's Lose A Quickie To Cards

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Pirates felt like someone had pulled the plug on them. "That's the quickest I've ever seen a game called in any league. This has to go down in the Guinness Book of World Records," Pirates General Manager Syd Thrift said after Monday night's rain-shortened 4-1 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals.

The contest, the Pirates' fifth straight loss, was called in the top of the sixth inning at Three Rivers Stadium after two rain delays totaling 39 minutes. The Pirates felt the umpires reacted precipitously, considering that National League instructions direct the umpires' crew chief to wait 75 minutes after the first delay in play and 45 minutes after a second delay before calling a game.

"I've never heard of any game being called in less than 45 minutes," said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland, who said he would file an official protest. "We didn't get something we had coming."

In other NL action, New York beat Montreal 4-1 in 10 innings; Chicago stopped Philadelphia 7-5; Atlanta edged Cincinnati 4-3 in 10 innings and San Diego blanked San Francisco 4-0.

Jack Clark homered to back Danny Cox's four-hit pitching as the Cardinals climbed past the Pirates by a half-game into fifth place in the NL East. Cox, 2-5, maintained his mastery over the Pirates, who have beaten him only once in nine career decisions. An 18-game winner in 1985 who won only once in his first six decisions this season, Cox blanked the Pirates after allowing Barry Bonds' solo homer in the third inning.

Clark's leadoff homer in the second was his seventh of the season and the 28th of his career against Pittsburgh. The Cardinals scored their winning run in the fourth on an RBI single by Willie McGee.

A half-hour after the game was called by crew chief John Kibler, it had stopped raining and the Three Rivers Stadium outfield contained only several small puddles.

"We didn't want to keep going out there and taking the tarp off and covering it again and having the pitchers warm up and sit back down," Kibler said. "The weather forecast wasn't good and there were tornado warnings in the area. We didn't want to start play again for the betterment of everybody."

Mets 4, Expos 1
Darryl Strawberry singled home the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning as New York scored three times to beat Montreal in a game delayed for more than two hours by rain. The victory fattened the Mets' lead to 11½ games over the Expos in the National League East.

Wally Backman started the Mets' winning rally with a one-out single off Jeff Reardon, 6-4, and stole second to move into scoring position for Strawberry. One out later, Len Dykstra singled home two insurance runs for the Mets.

Doug Sisk, 1-1, pitched two innings to pick up the victory.

The Mets carried a 1-0 lead into the bottom of the eighth, but the Expos tied it on a one-out walk to Tim Raines and singles by Hubie Brooks and Tim Wallach off reliever Roger McDowell.

Cubs 7, Phillies 5
Leon Durham's two-run homer and a two-run double by Shawon Dunston helped make Jamie Moyer's major-league pitching debut a success as Chicago defeated Philadelphia.

Dunston's double capped a four-run fourth and knocked out Steve Carlton, 4-8. Durham hit his eighth homer off reliever Tom Hume in the fifth.

was aided by some careless base running by the Phillies, who had two runners thrown out at the plate and another at third base. Lee Smith pitched 1 2-3 innings for his ninth save.

After the Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the top of the fourth, the Cubs came back with four in the bottom of the inning and never trailed again.

"I was looking for a slider and got it," Dunston said of his double in the fourth. "I was ready with the bases loaded and I just wanted to make contact."

Braves 4, Reds 3
Ken Oberkfell's third hit, a run-scoring single in the 10th, lifted

Atlanta over Cincinnati. Dale Murphy had walked with one out and took third on Bob Horner's third single of the night before Oberkfell came through with his game-winning single off John Franco, 0-4.

Atlanta relief pitcher Gene Garber, 3-1, picked up the victory with one scoreless inning of relief. Garber has now pitched 18 1-3 innings of scoreless relief in his last 12 appearances.

The Braves had tied the game at 3-3 in the ninth on a two-run homer by rookie shortstop Andres Thomas.

Padres 4, Giants 0
Andy Hawkins pitched a seven-inning shutout and Garry Templeton highlighted a three-run seventh inning with a two-run single as San Diego defeated San Francisco.

The game was scoreless until the sixth when Marvell Wynne hit a one-out solo homer off reliever Bill Laskey, 1-1. The Padres then sewed it up with their three-run seventh which also included a bases-loaded walk to Tony Gwynn.

It was the first shutout of the season for Hawkins, 5-4, who walked just one batter while striking out five as he worked his second complete game.

Steve Garvey collected his 2,500th career hit with a seventh-inning single that started the Padres rally.

McNeil Set For TAC Meet

East Carolina track star Lee Vernon McNeil, who finished third in the 100-meter dash at the NCAA championships, will participate in the Track Athletic Congress (TAC) meet this weekend in Eugene, Ore.

The meet will begin Friday and wind up on Sunday. At stake could be a berth on the U.S. team for the Goodwill Games in Moscow, later this summer.

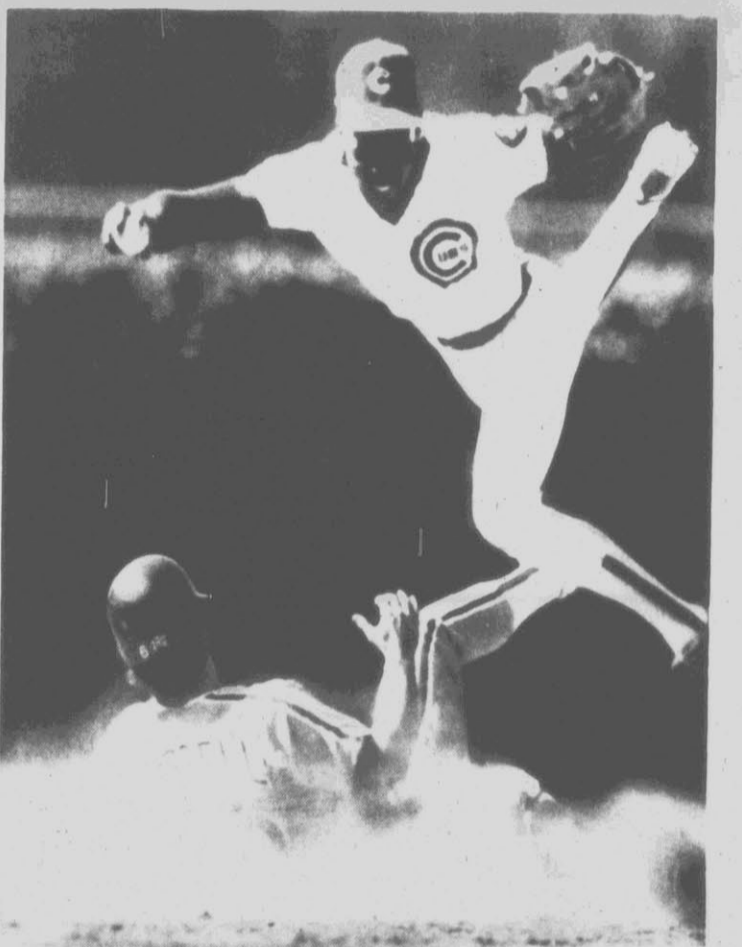

ECU Coach Bill Carson said that as much as a fourth place finish by McNeil in the 100 finals could place him on the Goodwill team. But he'll be up against such stars as Carl Lewis and Kirk Baptiste of the Santa Monica Track Club, and fellow Robeson County native Lee McRae of Pittsburgh, the current NCAA champion.

As much as an eighth place finish will qualify McNeil for other international competition this summer.

"Lee has beaten every sprinter in this race at one time or another and that should give him the confidence he needs. He now knows that he's one of the best in the world, but he needs to prove it one more time this weekend," Carson said.

McNeil is currently nursing a hamstring injury which concerns Carson. McNeil's time of 10.14 tied for second place in the NCAA meet two weeks ago, but he was awarded third place. The time set a new East Carolina school record.

McNeil is a rising junior at East Carolina.

NBA Draft Will Yield Immediate Gratification

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the favorite phrases of NBA scouting chief Marty Blake is "immediate gratification."

Blake believes that virtually every player taken in the first round of today's NBA draft could eventually become a star. The problem, Blake says, is that teams and their fans want rookies to step in and become a big contributor from the first game.

Such "immediate gratification" rarely occurs, according to Blake.

"It doesn't work out that way," he said. "Houston had Ralph Sampson No. 1 and Rodney McCray No. 3 three years ago and the Rockets still finished last. You can't look at the success of a rookie class just by looking at its first years. It takes two or three years at least."

But Blake called the 1986 draft the most outstanding in a decade.

"Even if Philadelphia and Boston were picking 23rd and 24th instead of 1-2," Blake said, "they would get a good player because this is an outstanding draft. You can't expect immediate gratification from these players, but many of them will be stars in the future."

Philadelphia and Boston picked first and second in the draft because of earlier trades with the Los Angeles Clippers and Seattle, respectively, and their good luck in the draft lottery on May 11.

But the 76ers and Celtics — and every other team — said little in advance about their plans for the draft, unlike previous years when many picks could easily be predicted.

"Nothing is cut and dried," 76ers

General Manager Pat Williams said. "You can't lock in the first few picks like in past years."

With so many potentially good players in the draft, Williams said teams might have been fearful of making a glaring mistake.

"You could look very bad in this draft," Williams said. "There's no delineation of players. Who really knows whether Chris Washburn will be as good as his position as Pearl Washington will be at his. Teams probably should be picking this time according to need."

After Philadelphia and Boston, the first-round draft order was Golden State, Indiana, New York, Phoenix, Dallas, Cleveland, Chicago, San Antonio, Detroit, Washington, New Jersey, Portland, Utah, Denver, Sacramento, Denver, Atlanta, Houston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, the Los Angeles Lakers and Portland.

Washburn, 6-foot-11, and 7-foot William Bedford of Memphis State led a group of underclassmen with a chance of being drafted in the first round. Other top early eligibles were St. John's All-America Walter Berry, Cedric Henderson of Georgia (who played in Italy last season), Washington of Syracuse and John Williams of Louisiana State.

Top seniors included Brad Daugherty of North Carolina, Len

Bias of Maryland, Kenny Walker of Kentucky, Chuck Person of Auburn, Dell Curry of Virginia Tech, Ron Harper of Miami, Ohio, Maurice Martin of St. Joseph's, Anthony Jones of Nevada-Las Vegas, Johnny Dawkins and Mark Alarie of Duke and Brad Sellers of Ohio State.

"It's a deep draft, one through 40," Pacers chief scout Tom Newell said. "There are not any impact players, but a lot of contributors."

"It's just like Las Vegas," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "You know when people gamble you always can lose, but the casinos have things figured so they've got all the percentages. That's how they built all those hotels on the strip. That's what we're trying to do — play the percentages."

But the Nuggets still were hoping for "immediate gratification," even though their first pick was No. 16.

"We're not sitting here in 1986 worrying about 1991," Nuggets President Vince Boryla said. "We're worrying about the '86-'87 season. You don't look four or five years down the road."

Jury Unanimously Makes Hot Rod A Free Man

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A six-member jury cleared John "Hot Rod" Williams of point shaving charges and the former Tulane University forward made plans for a professional basketball career that has been in limbo for a year.

Williams was acquitted Monday of five counts of conspiracy and bribery, charges that could have cost him 17 years in prison and $35,000 in fines. Tulane abandoned its men's basketball program in the wake of the point shaving scandal and allegations of numerous NCAA violations disclosed at the same time.

Williams was arrested on March 26, 1985, indicted two days later and tried for the first time in August. That trial ended abruptly in a mistrial and Monday's verdict came on the sixth day of his second trial.

"It's been rough on me, but now I can get on with my life," Williams, 24, said Monday after being found innocent.

The Cleveland Cavaliers gambled a second-round choice on Williams in last year's draft, picking him despite a letter circulated by the National Basketball Association warning that he could not play in the league as long as the legal cloud hung over him.

Cavs owners George and Gordon Gund have paid Williams' legal expenses, although they had to withdraw their contract during the pre-season when Williams' first trial failed to clear up his legal status.

Monday, the Cavaliers said Williams is under contract to Cleveland.

"The Cleveland Cavaliers are delighted that John Williams has been found innocent of all charges," the team said in a release from its offices. "We have at all times been confident that John would be vindicated when the matter finally came to trial."

"The Cavs have signed a contract with John and look forward to him being an important part of the team in the years ahead."

Normally, a player unsigned for a year becomes a free agent, but NBA general counsel Gary Bettman said Monday Williams is a special case, and the Cavs retain his rights.

At an impromptu news conference on the courthouse steps after the verdict, Williams avoided saying he would be playing for the Cavs, even when asked specifically.

"I'll be somewhere, and I'll make the team," he said.

Williams' reluctance to answer was on the advice of his lawyers, an apparent ploy to use the threat of free agency as a bargaining wedge in contract talks.

Williams, at 6-foot-11, is an inch taller and substantially bulkier in the upper body than he was when he left Tulane. He played center at Tulane and was used at power forward when he made the all-star team last year in the United States Basketball League.

Keith Lee, whose name figured prominently in Williams' trial, played both power forward and small forward for the Cavs last season.

Lee was an all-American at Memphis State in 1985, and prosecutors said Williams deliberately guarded Lee loosely, allowing him to score freely in one of the games allegedly fixed. Memphis State, a four-point favorite, beat Tulane by 11 points in that game after Lee hit three quick baskets to open the second half and erase a six-point Tulane halftime lead.

The other game that prosecutors say was fixed was at Tulane against Southern Mississippi. Tulane, a 10-point favorite, won 64-63.

A plot to fix a game at Virginia Tech never came off, prosecutors said.

Most of the testimony against Williams came from six young men who admit being part of a conspiracy — three former Tulane teammates and three East Coast fraternity brothers.

Forwards Clyde Eads and Jon Johnson testified under grants of immunity. Substitute point guard Bobby Thompson testified as part of a plea bargain, as did Gary Kranz of New Rochelle, N.Y.; David Rothenberg of Wilton, Conn.; and Mark Olenksy of Fair Lawn, N.J., the fraternity brothers.

The six testified that Eads and Johnson met Kranz through cocaine deals and began to provide him with stolen basketball equipment in return for drugs. Rothenberg saw the chance for a betting coup and suggested the point shaving, and Olenksy provided the gambling expertise, the six testified.

Thompson quickly became the most enthusiastic of the team members and encouraged others who got cold feet, they testified.

Prosecutors said that even without the testimony of the self-confessed conspirators, common sense showed that no point shaving plot could exist without Williams, the dominant player on the team. Defense lawyer Mike Green characterized the prosecution witnesses as "dopers, dealers, liars, cheats and thieves," detailing conflicting testimony given by them to police, grand juries and at Williams' first trial.

Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk and Southern Mississippi Coach M.K. Turk testified as defense witnesses saying they could see nothing in game films to indicate Williams was doing anything but his best. And a statistician showed charts and graphs that proved, he said, that Williams performed up to par in the games in question.

Williams was framed in a headline-hunting venture by the office of District Attorney Harry Connick, according to Green.

Jurors could not be reached for comment after the trial, but an alternate juror, Tommie Leon, 32, talked to reporters briefly after deliberations began and he was discharged.

He said he would have voted Williams innocent, had he been called on to render a verdict.

"They needed more solid evidence, not that plea bargain stuff," he said. "There just wasn't enough presented to me."

Williams, interviewed in the courtroom during the 2½ hours the jury was deliberating, said he understood why his former teammates pointed their fingers at him, but couldn't condone what they did.

"Their life was on the line, and they knew it," he said. "They lie so much, how could anyone believe those guys."

"Who wouldn't be angry," he said.

Snow Hill Outlasts Pitt, 19-14

SNOW HILL — Calvin Brown picked up four hits and drove in eight runs in leading Snow Hill's American Legion baseball team to a 19-14 victory over Pitt County's Post 39 Monday night.

Fred Bryant banged a grand-slam homer for Pitt and drove in six runs, but Snow Hill's use of early walks by Pitt pitching, more than made up for it.

Pitt's pitchers — the team used four — walked a total of 14 batters, 13 in the first three innings when Snow Hill was striking for its first 12 runs and a lead Pitt could not overcome.

Pitt outslugged Snow Hill, 17-12, but it was the walks that made the difference as Pitt got only six off two Post 94 hurlers. Pitt also contributed five errors to the night while Snow Hill made only three fielding mistakes.

Pitt started the action in the first, scoring twice. Eric Jarman reached after one was away on a single and Axel Smith singled. Lee Hardee reached on a fielder's choice that got Smith at second. Both Hardee and Jarman scored on Bryant's double.

Snow Hill came back to take the lead in the bottom of the first, scoring three times. Ervin Collins walked and moved up on an infield out. Collins took third on a wild pitch and Mike Couture walked, then stole second. Both runners scored when Brown started his rampage with a three-run homer.

Four more Snow Hill runs crossed in the second inning. Kevin Mason walked and Couture reached on a fielder's choice. Brown singled in Mason and Joe Roberts was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. David Ward's grounder scored Couture but got Roberts at second. Gary Ginn and Anthony Sauls both walked, forcing in Brown, and a walk to Adrian Smith brought in Ward for a 7-2 lead.

Pitt rallied for a pair of runs in the top of the third. Axel Smith singled and Hardee walked. Bryant singled to load the bases. David Daniels grounded out, scoring Smith, and Ty Little singled in both Hardee and Bryant.

Snow Hill put the game on ice in the third, scoring five more to increase the lead to 12-5. Collins reached on an error and was sacrificed up. Couture walked and both moved up on a wild pitch, scoring on a hit by Brown. Brown moved to second on the relay home and Roberts singled in Brown.

Ginn walked and Sauls singled to score Roberts. After a walk to Smith, Collins walked to bring home Ginn with the 12th run.

Snow Hill got two more in the fourth, then picked up one in the sixth, and capped it with four more in the seventh for its 19-run total.

Pitt County scored three times in teh fifth, got one in the sixth and five in the seventh, four of those coming when Bryant's shot cleared the fence in left center for the grand-slam.

Roberts added three hits for Snow Hill while Couture — who got only one hit but walked three times — scored six runs.

Bryant's five hits led Pitt County, while Ty Little added three, driving in four runs, and Jarman, Smith, Hardee and Daniels each had two.

The loss dropped Pitt County to 5-4 while Snow Hill has evened its record at 4-4.

Snow Hill plays host to Wayne County tonight at 8 p.m. while Pitt County travels to Rocky Mount for an 8 p.m. contest.

Hough Just Misses No-Hitter

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

Texas knuckleballer Charlie Hough was two outs away from baseball immortality when he stepped into "Wally World."

The 38-year-old Hough needed only two outs for the first major-league no-hitter since the last day of the 1984 season, when pinch-hitter Jack Howell reached on a three-base error by left fielder George Wright and rookie sensation Wally Joyner singled to right-center field to tie the game 1-1, ending the no-hit bid.

Wright came on as a defensive replacement for Gary Ward in the bottom of the ninth, and dropped Howell's fly after a long run toward the left-field foul line.

Joyner reached second on a dancing knuckleball that waltzed away from catcher Orlando Mercado for a passed ball. The Rangers walked Reggie Jackson intentionally, after Doug DeCinces struck out, to face George Hendrick.

Hough, 5-3, worked the count to 3-2 and Hendrick swung and missed, but the knuckler again eluded Mercado and danced away. Joyner, running with the pitch, never broke stride and scored as Hough failed to cover home plate, giving the Angels a bizarre 2-1 victory at Anaheim Monday night.

"It was just a mental lapse on Charlie's part, not to cover home," Joyner said.

"I just flat out blew it," Hough said. "It was definitely my fault. We'd have had the guy (Joyner) if I had just walked up there."

Mercado, who was charged with a passed ball on the game-winning play, said he saw Hough pointing to throw the ball to first, but he (Mercado) was 20 to 25 feet from home plate.

"I expected Charlie to be at home plate," Mercado said. "I forgot about Hendrick. I have to look for Wally."

Overshadowed in Hough's no-hit attempt, was the brilliant pitching of winner Kirk McCaskill, 6-4. McCaskill allowed only four hits, walking three and striking out 10. The Rangers scored an unearned run in the second when center fielder Gary Pettis dropped Toby Harrah's drive for a two-base error and Steve Buechele singled.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Boston 10, New York 1; Detroit 5, Baltimore 4; Toronto 9, Milwaukee 2; and Kansas City 3, Oakland 2 in 11 innings.

In his previous start last Wednesday, Hough pitched 13 innings against the Minnesota Twins in a game won 6-2 by the Rangers in 16 innings. In that game Hough allowed only one hit over his final eight innings.

"I've had as good a knuckleball or better," Hough said. "I've probably had better stuff. I had pretty good stuff tonight. You should win ..."

"The strangest, you talk to guys in this room in the game for 20 years, they'll tell you it's the strangest game they've seen," McCaskill said. "It was great to be involved in it. It's unbelievable."

Joyner, who leads the AL with 19 homers, had another reason to celebrate. He turned 24 years old on Monday and still leads the fans' balloting at first base for the All-Star Game.

The last no-hitter pitched in the majors was by Mike Witt for California on Sept. 30, 1984 against Texas at Arlington. The last no-hitter at Anaheim was by the Rangers' Bert Blyleven, a 6-0 victory over the Angels on Sept. 22, 1977.

Red Sox 10, Yankees 1
Roger Clemens pitched a four-hitter for his 12th victory without a loss and Jim Rice drove in four runs with three singles as Boston extended its first-place lead over New York to 4½ games in the AL East.

Clemens' start is the best in the major leagues since Ron Guidry opened the 1978 with 13 straight victories. The major-league record for consecutive triumphs at the start of a season is 19 by Rube Marquard in 1912.

"I'm not surprised by my success," Clemens said. "I've been throwing the ball well."

The Red Sox broke an eight-game losing streak against the Yankees and did it by rapping 16 hits, including three apiece by Rice, Tony Armas, Don Baylor and Rey Quinones. Guidry, 4-7, lost his sixth straight game, getting pounded for five runs in less than three innings.

Tigers 5, Orioles 4
Alan Trammell's two-out double snapped a sixth-inning tie and Tom Brookens hit a three-run homer in the eighth after Baltimore intentionally walked Pat Sheridan.

Frank Tanana, 7-4, won for the Tigers, who had lost 12 of their previous 16. John Pacella, who was purchased from Class AAA Nashville of the American Association on Monday, came on to rescue the Tigers from an eighth-inning jam to earn his first save.

Leading 2-1 in the eighth, Alan Trammell walked and stole second. And the Orioles walked Sheridan to get to Brookens, who crossed up the strategy with his first homer of the season.

"You try not to let an intentional walk affect you," Brookens said. "It wasn't like they were picking on me ... at least, I hope not. But you always have that little extra when it happens."

Mike Young hit a three-run homer to bring the Orioles close in the eighth.

Royals 3, A's 2
Rudy Law doubled home the go-ahead run in the 11th inning to give Kansas City its victory over Oakland behind the combined six-hit pitching of rookie Scott Bankhead and two relievers.

Willie Wilson walked to lead off the 11th against Jose Rijo, 2-5, who came in to start the inning. After Argenis Salazar struck out, Wilson stole second and Law followed with his double. George Brett was intentionally walked and George Orta drove in Law with an RBI single to give the Royals a 3-1 lead and their eventual winning run.

"He (Law) has had a great year for us," Manager Dick Howser said. "I don't know where we'd be without him."

Blue Jays 9, Brewers 2
Garth Iorg drove in three runs and Ernie Whitt, George Bell and Tony Fernandez hit home runs to give Toronto 12 homers in its last five games and a victory over Milwaukee.

The Blue Jays won their third consecutive game as Doyle Alexander, 5-3, and Don Gordon combined to scatter 10 hits. Gordon pitched the final four innings for his first major-league save.

"When we're playing right, we don't have an easy out in the lineup," said Iorg, who drove in his runs with a single and a sacrifice fly. "That's what makes us dangerous — there's so many ways we can win a game."

Milwaukee's Robin Yount went 4-for-5 and improved his average to .371, second in the AL to Wade Boggs' .380.

Brett Tops Latest American Ballot

NEW YORK (AP) — A veteran cast of perennial stars, topped by Kansas City third baseman George Brett, composes the fans' American League balloting for the 57th All-Star Game.

Brett, an All-Star starter the last 10 years, received 486,729 votes followed by Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken, with 464,047 in the most recent voting released Monday. Detroit catcher Lance Parrish, who has 15 homers, leads at his position with 335,454 votes.

The All-Star Game will be played July 15 at the Astrodome in Houston. Boston third baseman Wade Boggs ranks second to Brett with 312,600 votes, despite a .380 batting average to Brett's .281 mark.

Detroit second baseman Lou Whitaker, a 10-year veteran, leads Kansas City's Frank White, 212,668 to 191,334.

The outfield is paced by veterans Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees and 40-year-old Reggie Jackson of the California Angels.

Jackson has been the Angels' designated hitter this season, but is listed as an outfielder on ballot.

Henderson, the major-league leader in stolen bases with 43, heads all outfielders with 320,879 votes, followed by Winfield's 307,710 and Jackson's 245,110. Kirby Puckett of the Minnesota Twins is fourth among the outfielders with 238,160 followed by Kansas City's Willie Wilson with 159,159.

Wally Joyner, who leads the major leagues with 19 homers, remains the only rookie among the positional leaders and is bidding to become the first rookie ever selected by the fans to start an All-Star contest.

Joyner has garnered 269,757 votes, just ahead of the 243,302 received by Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees.

LONDON (AP) — A West German teen-ager has thrown the Wimbledon seedings for a loop almost minutes after they were announced.

Steffi Graf withdrew from the prestigious grass court championships Monday, shortly after the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club announced she was seeded third in the 128-player women's singles.

Graf, who won four consecutive tournaments, beating Martina Navratilova, Chris Evert Lloyd and Hana Mandlikova in the run, pulled out of Wimbledon because of a viral infection and high fever.

"She's very sick," Peter Graf, Steffi's father and coach, said. "She's been to see a doctor in Freiburg and he said she shouldn't play for the next two to three weeks."

The Wimbledon tournament begins next Monday.

Because Graf withdrew before today's draw, the AELTC was expected to move the women's seeds from four through 16 up one spot each and name a new No. 16 seed, again based on the Women's International Tennis Association rankings.

Navratilova was seeded No. 1, with Lloyd No. 2.

Following Graf, the seeds for the women's singles, were, in order, Mandlikova, West Germany's Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, Americans Pam Shriver and Kathy Rinaldi, Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria's Manuela Maleeva, Zina Garrison of the United States, Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini, Carling Bassett of Canada, Americans Stephanie Rehe and Barbara Potter, Wendy Turnbull of Australia and Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist.

Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, ranked No. 1 in the world in the men's rankings and winner of the French Open earlier this month, was the men's top seed.

Three of the world's top players — American John McEnroe, still in the midst of a self-imposed sabbatical from tennis, France's Yannick Noah, out with a severely burned ankle, and Thierry Tulasne of France — are not entered at Wimbledon.

Following Lendl, Mats Wilander of Sweden is seeded No. 2, followed by veteran Jimmy Connors of the United States, defending champion Boris Becker of West Germany, Sweden's Stefan Edberg and Joakim Nystrom, Henri Leconte of France, Anders Jarryd of France, Ecuador's Andres Gomez, Americans Tim Mayotte, Kevin Curren and Brad Gilbert, Sweden's Mikael Pernfors, Argentina's Martin Jaite and Guillermo Vilas, and Johan Kriek of the United States.

Viral Infection Cause Of Steffi's Withdrawal

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — West German teen-age sensation Steffi Graf pulled out of the Wimbledon tennis championships just hours after being seeded third in the women's singles.

"She's very sick," Peter Graf, the tennis star's father and coach, said Monday by telephone from his home in Bruell, West Germany. "She's been to see a doctor in Freiburg and he said she shouldn't play for the next two to three weeks."

The Wimbledon tournament begins next Monday.

"She's got a viral infection and a cough and a high fever," Graf said of his daughter. "Her temperature goes way up, then drops, then goes up again."

"She was really looking forward to playing at Wimbledon and she feels very bad about not playing now."

Graf, who turned 17 on Saturday, won her first professional tournament in April when she captured the Family Circle Magazine Cup at Hilton Head Island, S.C., defeating Chris Evert Lloyd in the final.

That began a four-tournament winning streak that included the Women's Tennis Association Championships at Amelia Island, Fla., where she defeated West Germany's Claudia Kohde-Kilsch; the United States Clay Courts Championships, where she beat Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini, and the German Open in Berlin, where she beat the world's top-ranked player, Martina Navratilova.

Graf became ill during the French Open, where she reached the quarterfinals before losing to Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova.

She was scheduled to play only in the junior event this week at the Pilkington Glass Ladies Championships, a Wimbledon grass-court warmup. However, she pulled out of the tournament at Eastbourne earlier because of her illness.

"She is very down and disappointed about this," her father said, although it is rumored that she may attend Wimbledon as a spectator.

Since Graf withdrew before the draw for Wimbledon it is expected that her seeding will go to another player when the draw was announced today.

Graf won the women's tennis exhibition at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics and is one of the few players to post victories this year over Navratilova, Lloyd and Mandlikova.

South American Champ Ousted

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Though the South American champion is gone, that continent is far from out of contention in the World Cup.

Uruguay, which beat Brazil to win the most recent South American title, was eliminated from the world soccer championship Monday in a 1-0 loss to arch-rival Argentina. The Brazilians, who have yet to be scored on in four victories in this tournament, eliminated Poland 4-0.

Both winners appear to be as strong as ever.

Today, defending World Cup champion Italy was to play France in Olympic Stadium here and surprising Morocco was to take on West Germany in Monterrey.

The other South American team remaining, Paraguay, plays England on Wednesday, when Denmark opposes Spain in the last two second-round games.

Argentina had not played its neighbor from across the Rio Plate in a World Cup game since 1930, the tournament's first year. Uruguay won that game 4-2 to take the title.

This time, it was all Argentina, even though the score was a mere 1-0. Uruguay, playing without suspended Coach Omar Borrás, showed virtually no offense until the final moments, when it desperately pressed for a tie.

Pedro Pasculli got the only goal three minutes before halftime on a brilliant three-way passing play. He put in a pass from Jorge Valdano, who had received the ball from Jorge Burruchaga.

But the star of the game was Diego Maradona, Argentina's superb striker, whose playmaking was brilliant.

"Maradona was a great example. He showed how to play a real team game," Argentine Coach Carlos Bilardo said.

Bilardo admitted his players were nervous, though it looked like they were toying with the Uruguayans for most of the game.

"There is always a lot of tension when we play Brazil or Uruguay, and I know how hard it is for the players," he said. "I'm very pleased with the result."

Argentina plays the winner of the England-Paraguay contest.

Uruguay was one of the major disappointments here. After the first round, their federation was fined $12,000 for "misconduct" and rough play and Borrás was banned from the bench by FIFA, soccer's international governing body.

Uruguay was only third in Group E in the first round with two ties and a 6-1 rout at the hands of Denmark.

They could not redeem themselves against Argentina.

"We behaved as we should," defender Eduardo Acevedo said. "We tried to score, we reorganized ourselves."

Brazil needs no such reorganization.

The pre-tournament favorites to win an unprecedented fourth Cup, the Brazilians got penalty-kick goals by Socrates and Careca, plus scores by defenders Josimar and Edinho.

Poland bitterly disputed the penalty kick awarded in the 28th minute after Careca went down in the penalty area. But Coach Antoni Piechniczek admitted it probably made no difference.

"I'd like to congratulate the Brazilian team," he said. "I think that Brazil is such a good team that even the contentious penalty wouldn't have changed the result."

Brazil will play Saturday in Guadalajara against either Italy or France. Coach Tele Santana said his team will have to be even better.

Santana said Brazil played too loosely and slowly in the first half, particularly criticizing veteran midfielders Junior and Socrates.

"They did not play as they should have. They were moving slowly, giving room for Poland to attack," Santana insisted.

The Poles, who wound up third in Group F despite being the seeded team, scored only one goal in four games. Their performance was a far cry from 1982, when they were third.

Figures compiled Monday indicated that this might be the roughest World Cup ever, with six ejections and 93 yellow-card warnings already. There are 12 games remaining.

Police also released information regarding two deaths following Sunday's wild celebrations here after Mexico qualified for the quarterfinals. More than 200 people were injured and 148 arrested, a city police spokesman said Monday.

A Mexico City newspaper reported that two deaths Sunday — one of a man pushed under a subway and the other of a man shot from a passing car — were related to the celebration. However, the police spokesman told The Associated Press that authorities did not consider the deaths related to the revelry.

Estimates of the number of people who turned out for the street parties ranged from one million to 1.5 million.

Rabah Saadane, coach of the Algerian soccer team, and assistants Belkacem Mokdadi and Mourad Abbelwahab were fired Monday, the Ministry for Youth and Sports announced in Algiers.

Late Trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers, in two last-minute blockbuster deals, traded all-star center Moses Malone to the Washington Bullets and surrendered the No. 1 pick in today's NBA college draft to the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Philadelphia got 6-9 Roy Hinson and "other considerations" from Cleveland, which now has the No. 1 and No. 8 picks. The NBA office said the "other considerations" had no bearing on today's draft. They could include cash, a future draft pick, or a player.

The 76ers sent the 6-foot-10 Malone and 6-6 forward Terry Catledge to the Bullets for 6-10 center Jeff Ruland and 6-9 forward Cliff Robinson.

Hampton Will Fill Jazz Spot

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Jazzman Lionel Hampton will fill in for and pay tribute to his late mentor Benny Goodman at the city's Riverbend Festival, organizers said.

Goodman, a clarinetist, had been scheduled to headline the 10-day festival's jazz revue on Friday. Hampton agreed to take over the spot after Goodman died last week at his New York apartment at age 77.

"Lionel and Benny had remained close friends since they played together 45 years ago and Lionel went to console the Goodmans as soon as he learned of Benny's death," said Russell Linnemann, chairman of the festival's entertainment committee.

"Right from the start... he said he wanted to play a lot of Benny Goodman as a tribute to his friend," Linnemann said.

The 73-year-old vibraphonist worked for Goodman from 1936 to 1940 before starting his own orchestra.

Sentenced

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — The lead singer of the heavy-metal band Motley Crue has been sentenced to 30 days in jail after pleading guilty to manslaughter and drunken driving in an accident that killed one person and injured two others.

Vincent Neil Wharton, 24, was ordered by a Los Angeles County Superior Court judge to surrender July 14 at the Gardena City Jail. Wharton, who has long, blond hair and a rowdy stage image, wore a gray, three-piece suit to court on Monday. He did not speak with reporters.

Under a plea bargain, Wharton agreed to pay restitution to the victims and be placed on probation. He could have been sentenced to four years and eight months in prison. The amount of restitution was not disclosed.

The December 1984 head-on crash killed Nicholas Dingley, 24, a passenger in Wharton's car and the Scottish drummer for a band called Hanoi Rocks.

Sometimes the loss of a trick in a suit is inevitable. When you surrender it, however, can be of crucial importance. It certainly was on this hand from a recent rubber bridge game.

North's heart cue-bid showed spade support and a near opening bid without necessarily guaranteeing first-round heart control. After East raised the bidding level, South decided there was not enough room to determine exactly what could be made, so she chose the practical bid of six spades.

Declarer won the opening diamond lead in dummy and, since the contract would be a laydown if trumps were 2-1, cashed the ace of spades. West's heart discard did not bother declarer unduly. Since a club could be discarded on the ace of hearts, the contract was safe as long as declarer could ruff a diamond on the table.

The thoughtless play would be to try to cash the king of diamonds. As the cards lie, East would ruff that and return a trump, and declarer would be stranded with a diamond loser—down one.

Even an experienced declarer could go wrong on this hand. Correct technique is to give up a diamond trick at once by leading a low diamond from hand. The defenders have no counter. Suppose West wins and continues with a third diamond. Declarer ruffs with dummy's king of spades, cashes the ace of hearts for a club discard and then takes the marked finesse for the jack of trumps. After drawing the last spade, declarer can claim the rest. In all, he scores seven trump tricks and a ruff, a heart, two diamonds and a club.

Water, Water, Everywhere

Scientists now say that, while ocean levels are rising, the Antarctic ice sheet is actually thickening. Increased run-off from mountain glaciers may be causing the seas to swell. Only about 7 million of the world's 326 million cubic miles of water are held in icecaps and ancient mountain glaciers. And only a tiny 55,000 cubic miles are surface water. Ground water is more plentiful. Underneath the Sahara Desert alone are approximately 150,000 cubic miles of water.

Jane's Says Soviets Hold 'Frightening' Lead In Space Despite U.S. Successes

LONDON (AP) — The United States, for all its spectacular space successes, is 10 years behind the Soviet space program, says the latest edition of Jane's Spaceflight Directory published today.

In terms of space experience, the Soviets are so far ahead of the Americans "that they are almost out of sight," editor Reginald Turnill wrote.

Their cosmonauts have spent more than 4,000 days in space compared with the American astronauts' 1,587, he wrote.

"Worse, the U.S. experience is largely based on short flights, giving no more than three days at a time of uninterrupted materials processing and crystal growth experiments," Turnill said.

The Soviets' advanced Salyut space station Mir is already in place, but "for all NASA's brilliant interplanetary successes, the U.S. space station is receding into the mid-1990s and NASA ... (is) now 10 years behind the Soviets in the practical utilization of what President Nixon so long ago dubbed 'this New Ocean,'" he wrote.

"The Soviet lead in space is now almost frightening," wrote Turnill.

Turnill's assessments came in the introduction to the 1986 directory, published by the company that produces the authoritative Jane's reference works on aircraft, military vessels and weapons systems.

He wrote that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration had a 100 percent flight safety record for 25 years and "no transport system can hope to maintain such perfection in the face of human fallibility."

Consequently, the biggest surprise about the Challenger space shuttle disaster on Jan. 28 was that NASA had made no contingency plans for the space program, he wrote.

Turnill wrote that because of the Challenger disaster, plans to use the shuttle as the West's main satellite launcher had failed beyond recovery.

He said another result of the Challenger explosion was that short-term launch costs, such as insurance, will soar. This will put pressure on satellite makers to increase capacity and, most of all, longevity.

Turnill's article noted that the United States has said the Soviets' heavy-lift booster system could be used for launching heavy military payloads, including ballistic missile defense weapons, as well as for assembling very large modular space stations.

Such modules, say the Americans, could be fitted out as reconnaissance platforms, nuclear power substations, or laboratories for various types of research and experiment.

Once deployed, such a space station would provide the Soviets with a manned space-based military capability for missions such as reconnaissance, command and control.

Turnill called the superpower dispute over the U.S. "Star Wars" space-based defense weapons system a "phony controversy."

"Space has always been militarized, the process having begun before Sputnik I, with the development of ICBMs (intercontinental ballistic missiles) and the spy satellites that quickly replaced their warheads," he wrote.

Turnill said the Soviets, too, have a well-advanced space weapon program. He said the superpowers may conclude that a joint space defense system would threaten neither. He said that it could also protect both East and West against "the growing likelihood of irresponsible random nuclear attack from temporarily hostile smaller nations."

Norfolk Gets Court OK To End Forced Busing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elementary schools in Norfolk, Va., have received a green light from the Supreme Court to end busing in a move critics say will "resegregate" black and white children.

The Reagan administration said the case could be a model for other communities.

By a 6-3 vote Monday, the court turned down a plea to postpone the end of busing which for 15 years has produced racial balance in the city schools.

Come September a new neighborhood schools plan approved by the city school board will return 10 of the city's 35 public elementary schools to being almost all-black.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, said busing contributed to "white flight from the schools."

The legal principles advanced in the Norfolk case could apply to "many, many other school districts around the country," he had said prior to the court's order. He declined to comment afterward.

Hundreds of school districts, including those in most major cities, operate court-ordered busing plans for racial desegregation. But only a few have persuaded courts, as Norfolk did, to declare their systems fully integrated and end court supervision.

Monday's court action does not necessarily resolve the challenge by some black parents in Norfolk to the planned end to busing. The justices did not rule on that formal appeal and may not even consider it until October.

The only action the justices took was to deny a postponement in the end to busing pending further consideration.

Even if the formal appeal is granted review before the end of the current court term in July, no decision is likely until sometime in 1987.

Nation's Prison Population Up 70 Percent Since 1977

WASHINGTON (AP) — The population of state and federal prisons rose above half a million last year and has increased nearly 70 percent since 1977, a government study shows.

Prison overcrowding resulted in 19 states granting early releases to 18,600 inmates in 1985, said the report by the Bureau of Justice Statistics. Another 10,100 prisoners were backed up in local jails because state prison systems didn't have enough room for them, according to the bureau, a Justice Department research agency.

As of last Dec. 31, the state and federal prison population stood at an all-time high of 503,601, with the addition of 39,000 new prisoners in 1985, the study said. It was estimated that by year-end 1985, the nation's prisons were operating from 6 percent to 21 percent above capacity, depending on the definition used to determine overcrowding.

The federal system, which has a total of 40,200 prisoners, operated from 23 percent to 54 percent above capacity, the bureau said in the report released Monday.

Prison population grew 8.4 percent last year, and population is up nearly 68 percent since 1977, when it was 300,024. Last year's addition of 39,000 new prisoners was the third-highest increase since prisoner statistics were first collected in 1926.
