County Urged To Increase Supplements

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners was urged to provide additional supplements for teachers, more money for school instructional supplies and extra pay for teachers performing extra duty by six of seven speakers at a public hearing Wednesday night on the proposed 1986-1987 budget.

But one of the seven speakers — Ron Hochmuth, himself a teacher — said "I would suggest you put a freeze on the teacher supplement."

Instead, Hochmuth suggested, "replace it with an idea which will cost the taxpayers of Pitt County next to nothing."

Rather than pay higher supplements, Hochmuth suggested, use the money to "hire a coordinator down at the central office that would set up an innovative, perhaps radical system I call 'P.E.R.C.' In lieu of a supplement increase (teachers) would get a PERC card that would enable them to receive discounts at department stores, restaurants, movie theaters, grocery stores, health clubs, tire stores, beauty shops ... you name it.

"I would envision East Carolina University involving itself in this plan and offering to teachers of Pitt County the use of their recreation facilities, reduced or free admission to ball games and cultural events. The commissioners and ECU could work something out regarding tuition breaks for those teachers returning to school for professional development," Hochmuth said.

"Certainly this would help improve our schools and the entire idea itself would go a long way in improving teacher morale, if the program is set up right.

"Yes," Hochmuth said, "we're talking about bread and butter issues. But the goods and services we desire do not have to be attained through money, but rather this program, (and) there is no limit as to what this program can be."

Other teachers and parents speaking were more traditional in their views.

Annette MacRae suggested more funds for instructional materials for the schools as well as increased supplements. "Good supplements attract good teachers," she said.

Tracy Medlin, a parent of students at A.G. Cox and D.H. Conley schools, suggested that "supplements should be more" and said teachers should receive extra pay for extra time spent as advisers for clubs and organizations and as coaches.

Joy Riddick, a D.H. Conley High School teacher, also voiced support for extra pay for extra duties and increased supplements. "There are a lot of teachers in the school system that put in extra time," she said.

Dolly Hathaway, supporting increased supplements, told commis-

Artificial Heart Recipient Dies

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Murray Haydon, the world's second longest-living recipient of a permanent artificial heart, died today at 10:45 a.m., said a spokesman for Humana Hospital Audubon.

The 58-year-old retired auto assembly line worker became the world's third recipient of an artificial heart on Feb. 17, 1985.

Haydon had required a respirator to assist his breathing much of the time he was on the artificial heart and he had been in the intensive care unit at Audubon almost the whole time after his implant surgery.

Last week, the medical director of the hospital's Heart Institute said Haydon's brain and lung functions had been worsening and there was "very little hope" that he would recover from an infection.

Dr. Allan Lansing said June 12 that Haydon's family had decided not to place him on a dialysis machine to help his deteriorating kidneys because they did not feel the procedure would improve his quality of life.

Greenville Gets New ZIP Code

In an effort to keep Greenville's mail zipping to its destination, the U.S. Postal Service has changed the ZIP code for 16,000 residents and businesses, Greenville Postmaster Charles Caulk said today.

"Due to the growth of Greenville, it was necessary to add a ZIP code," Caulk said. "We have approximately 16,000 residential and business customers affected."

The affected customers, which include about 1,000 businesses, will have their ZIP code changed from 27834 to 27858 on July 1, according to Caulk.

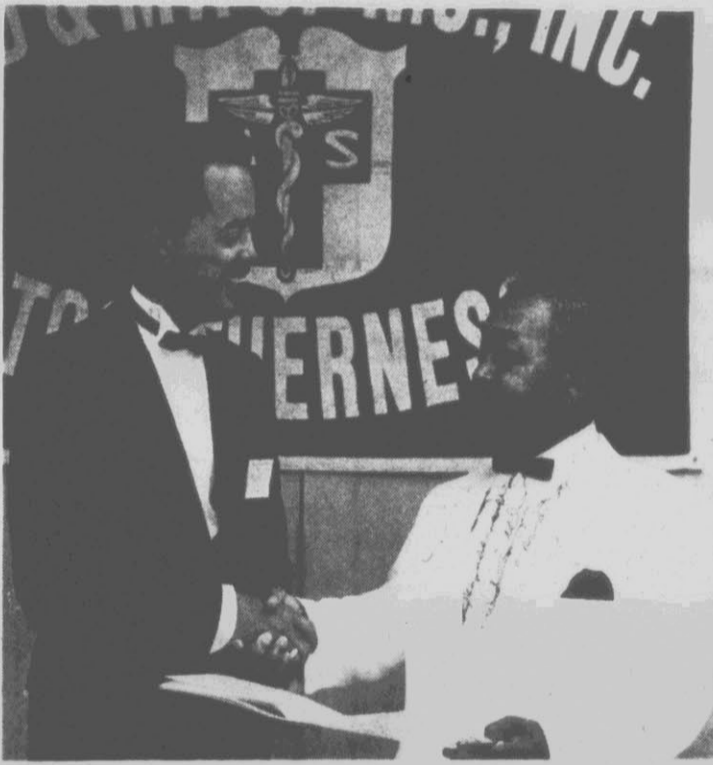

Caulk said residents south of the Tar River and east of Evans Street, not including those located on Evans Street, inside the Greenville delivery boundary will have the new zip code.

The new code's boundary mostly follows N.C. 43 and county roads after Evans Street ends, according to Caulk, who said residents have been notified of the change.

"Using the new ZIP code assists us in processing mail and makes for a more efficient operation," he said. "The change should not affect service. It's strictly an in-house move."

Caulk said ZIP codes for post office boxes at area stations will remain unchanged.

Harassment Ruling Upheld

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — On-the-job sexual harassment is illegal even if it does not affect its victim economically, the Supreme Court ruled today.

But the court stopped short of deciding just when employers should be held legally liable when, unknown to them, their supervisors sexually harass workers.

The justices unanimously concluded in a case involving a District of Columbia bank that a federal law banning sex discrimination in employment applies to sexual harassment that creates a "hostile environment."

The court thus upheld the standard adopted previously by the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Writing for the court in the sex harassment case, Justice William H. Rehnquist said nothing in the federal law, known as Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, "suggests that a hostile environment based on discriminatory sexual harassment should not be ... prohibited."

The decision clears the way for new proceedings in a lawsuit filed against Meritor Savings Bank by Mechelle Vinson, a former assistant bank manager.

Ms. Vinson's suit contends that she was sexually harassed by her supervisor, Sidney L. Taylor.

Ms. Vinson was hired as a teller-trainer at the bank in 1974. She said she consented to having sex with Taylor in May 1975 "for fear of losing her job." The affair, according to court documents, continued for 2½ years but Ms. Vinson never told Taylor's superiors about it.

Taylor denied Ms. Vinson's charges, and said they were made in retaliation for a business-related dispute between the two.

A federal trial judge threw out the suit after finding that Ms. Vinson was not contending that the alleged harassment hurt her economically.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here reinstated the suit, ruling that the judge was reading the anti-bias law too narrowly.

The Supreme Court today agreed with the appeals court.

"For sexual harassment to be actionable, it must be sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment and create an abusive working environment," Rehnquist said.

"(Ms. Vinson's) allegations in this case — which include not only pervasive harassment but also criminal conduct of the most serious nature — are plainly sufficient to state a claim for 'hostile environment' sexual harassment," he said.

But Rehnquist said the appeals court went too far when it ruled in Ms. Vinson's case that employers always are legally liable — that they may be sued for damages.

Court Bans S. Security Pullouts

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that state and local governments may not withdraw their employees from the nation's Social Security system.

In a 9-0 ruling, the court upheld a 1983 federal law designed to protect Social Security's economic integrity by barring state and local governments from pulling out.

The decision is a victory for the Reagan administration, which said more than $3 billion could have been drained from Social Security by 1990 if state and local governments were allowed to withdraw.

The law was challenged by California officials and others who said the law unconstitutionally allowed the federal government to break its contract with the states.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, writing for the court, said, "The contractual right at issue in this case bears little, if any, resemblance to rights held to constitute property" as defined by the Constitution.

He said the law "simply was part of a regulatory program over which Congress retained authority to amend in the exercise of its power to provide for the general welfare."

The court overturned a 1985 ruling by a federal judge in California.

States and local governments have been allowed to enroll their employees in Social Security since 1950, and local government workers in all 50 states are enrolled today.

As of 1983, some 9.4 million of an estimated 13.2 million state and local government employees participated in Social Security. Only five states — Alaska, Maine, Massachusetts, Nevada and Ohio — do not have their own employees enrolled in Social Security.

Under a 1950 amendment to the Social Security Act, each state was authorized to withdraw its employees on two years' notice, and also could do so on behalf of the local governments within that state.

But from 1950 to 1966, only 319 public employees withdrew from the system.

As apprehension grew in the 1970s over the financial future of Social Security, withdrawals became more numerous. Between 1977 and 1981, 96,000 state and local employees dropped out of the system.

And in 1983, termination notices were pending from 634 state and local governments representing 227,000 employees.

Congress that year amended the act to say, "No agreement ... may be terminated, either in its entirety or with respect to any coverage group, on or after April 20, 1983."

The law barred termination even by those state and local governments that had notices pending when the amendment was enacted.

Expert Says Everyone Can Learn Music

CHICAGO (AP) — There is no such thing as being too young or too old to participate in music, says Dr. Frank R. Wilson, a neurologist and assistant clinical professor of neurology at the University of California School of Medicine, San Francisco.

"Humans are 'born musicians,'" he says, "because we all have the neurological and muscular capability to develop musical skills."

Wilson, who is also a special consultant to the American Music Conference based in Chicago, is a leading authority on the relationship between the brain and an individual's capacity to play a musical instrument.

He first became interested in music and its connection to neuromuscular control when he noticed his daughter's progress on the piano. "I realized that a remarkable physical and mental evolution was taking place in her which I couldn't account for," he says.

After several years of reviewing results of research on the brain's control of skilled movement and concluding that virtually everyone has the potential for developing musical skills, Wilson began taking piano lessons at the age of 40.

"I felt terribly clumsy during the first few months, but knew that I should see results by the end of the first year," he says. "I wasn't disappointed."

Another of Wilson's conclusions, discussed in his recently published book, "Tone Deaf and All Thumbs?": an Invitation to Music-Making for Late Bloomers and Non-Prodigies," is that there is "very little to distinguish the serious musician from the serious athlete."

The only difference between the two from a physical standpoint, he says, is that musicians are developing the smaller muscles of the body — especially those of the hands and mouth — and that they rely on their hearing more than on their vision.

"The one difference that really does count is the effect of age," he says. "Time is on the musicians' side. They can look forward to continued maturation and refinement of their skills well beyond the age at which even the most durable football or basketball player has retired to the sidelines.

"The key to success in musical studies, as in sports, is having the right goals," he explains. "When the music student starts with his or her hopes fixed on immediately sounding like a professional, that attitude will be defeating. If the students are compelled by the knowledge that as they continue practicing they are reaching new limits and can share the experience with others such as in a band or group lessons, they are more likely to succeed."

"If they play a different piece more smoothly than before or move on to something even more challenging, that becomes a very valuable reward for their study."

"Time spent learning a musical instrument is never wasted," Wilson points out. "Musical experience easily transfers to other structured learning situations and can provide a powerful model for self-paced learning, mental concentration, memory skills, muscular development and more."

No matter at what age they start learning, Wilson believes that instrumental students will get the most enjoyment and long-lasting rewards if they remember these three points:

— Slow progress is the way it works. No matter how leisurely you progress in your musical studies, time is on your side.

— You can't fail. You are the only judge of the music you play and whatever you gain, it's the right thing for you.

— The best reason of all for playing music is because it's fun. Becoming a virtuoso shouldn't necessarily be your goal. Many musicians who never perform get a great deal of enjoyment from playing music for themselves.

Estate Sales Draw Numerous Browsers

By ABE ANJUDOR
Champaign News-Gazette

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — They began lining up early on the steps of the old clapboard bungalow. The browsers and hunters seemed in good spirits as they waited in turn to enter the home of its late resident.

Almost 500 people filed through that weekend — examining the solid cherry bedroom set, the hand-rubbed mahogany buffet, the linen, the lace and the china.

And if the browsers didn't find just what they wanted, or somebody else bid too much for it, there was always next week. There would always be more estate sales, as long as people lived and died in Champaign-Urbana.

Barbara Peckham, who administered that sale, has held estate sales in the area for 14 years.

"There is nothing very nice about having to dispose of your family's heirlooms," she said.

Marriage Announced

MRS. TEEN RAWLS...is the former Patricia Karen Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray of Durham, whose marriage to Mr. Rawls, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Rawls of Route 10, Greenville, took June 6 at 6 p.m. in Kauai, Hawaii. The double ring ceremony was conducted by David E. Mills.

"It is very distressing to have people going through your things, but by the same token, how else are you going to handle it if you don't want it?"

Peckham uses a "tag-sale" system. You can offer the appraised value marked on a tag attached to the item and take it away immediately or make a lower offer.

There are 50 to 100 estate sales a year in Champaign-Urbana, say area auctioneers. An average home sale will net between $3,000 and $5,000. It is usually the executor of an estate or an attorney representing the heirs who initiates the sale.

In some cases, though, the people who owned the pieces most of their lives will authorize the sale, such as when they retire and move to smaller quarters.

"That's more traumatic than when there has been a death in the family," Peckham says. "It's a home they've lived in many, many years and raised their families in. All the furniture that maybe they've inherited from their parents or things they purchased early in their lives are there and they have to give all this up."

Seemingly, anything can be found at estate and moving sales, from old photograph albums to old Packards. But it is heavy, original hardwood furniture that sells best, local auctioneers agree.

Dale Rawdin of Rawdin Auction Service says furniture was finished and joined better in the early years of the century.

"Drawers, for example, were dovetail construction," he said. "The locks and pulls were better and the drawers were dust-proof."

An anomaly of estate sales is that heirs often will bid on furniture and collectables that were left to them in the first place.

Rawdin says that happens when the deceased has left no guidelines on how to disperse the household effects and the heirs cannot agree on how to divide the property.

Then they may elect to sell the items and divide the cash instead. If one heir wants an item more than another, he or she will have to bid on it like anybody else.

But Peckham said the differences in opinion over how to dispose of an estate can lead to open dispute.

"I have actually canceled a sale in the middle because the family has gotten into such a fight," she said. "Any time there's material things or money involved, it becomes extremely complex."

Add with molasses to cornmeal mixture; stir just until blended. Turn into buttered 8-inch square pan. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 20 minutes. Serve hot.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

With the threat of nuclear war, terrorism, an epidemic of AIDS and the fall of our economy, what do you think is the No. 1 concern among teen-agers? Running out of shampoo.

I tell you, I've seen it. Clean hair takes precedence over anything you can name. Take away TV for a week. They don't care. Hide their car keys. They don't care. Knot their phone cords. They don't care. But put a cap on their shampoo, and they'll torch your house.

Beginning at age 12, whether it be male or female, a metamorphosis takes place. The kid who combed his hair by running his fingers through it now knows words like "creme rinse." The kid who used to wash his face by extending his tongue to 15 inches and slapping it against his forehead and chin is standing under the shower for 15 minutes every day washing his hair. The girl whose hair you used to have to cut to comb and dripped grease now smells like Christmas tree ridge 365 days out of the year.

I am not being dramatic when I say that the Forbes 400 richest men in the country have obviously never had to buy shampoo for a teen-ager. I used to look at heads of wet hair at the breakfast table every morning and think, "There sits my flashy sportscar, next to my cruise to the Caribbean and my new nose."

Shampoo should have been the bond that brought brother and sister, father and son together, but instead it was the catalyst that nearly tore the family apart. Each child had his own brand of shampoo in the bathroom. If so much as one drop was used by a sibling, there were reprisals. Shampoo stealing is the horse-stealing crime of the 20th Century. It was all right for them to carelessly leave a bottle of shampoo on its side to run down the drain, but don't even think of "borrowing" a few drops for the second wash.

Our daughter couldn't bear to think what would happen to her if she didn't lather up with a formula of olefin sulfonate, coca midpropyl betaine, pure almond and coconut oil. A son opted for hydrolyzed animal protein, sodium chloride and a heavy concentration of vitamin E. (The kid ate one vegetable a year, but his hair was healthy.) Another son daily pursued a moisture-balanced shampoo that penetrated the hair shaft and came from France. He swore it gave him fat hair. We swore it fit his head!

I'd like to say there is hope for the parents who are the sole support of shiny hair, but there doesn't seem to be an end in sight. In addition to the shampoo and creme rinse, there is now mousse, gel, conditioner, protein additives and the lacquer to keep it all in place.

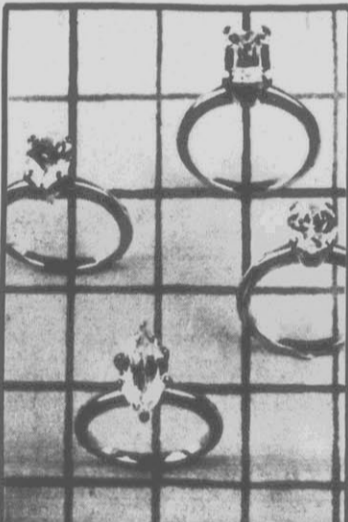

At one time I bought a generic brand of shampoo in a gallon container and tried to fill up their shampoo bottles with it. They're squeaky clean, but they're not stupid.

Recently the family was clustered around the TV set as we listened to a bulletin announcing our ships were armed and off the coast of Libya.

"We're out of patience," said my husband solemnly.

"We're out on a limb," I said. "We're out of shampoo," said one of the kids.

Wasted Pills Are Wasted Pennies

DEAR ABBY: You seem to have a lot of compassion for us senior citizens, so maybe you can do something about this problem.

I am not the only one this has happened to; many of my friends complain of the same situation: The doctor writes a prescription for $90 worth of medicine. You take four of one kind, two of another kind and three of the third kind every day. You get all kinds of bad reactions from the pills, so the doctor changes your medication, leaving you with about $80 worth of pills you can't use. "Flush them down the toilet," he says, "so you won't take them by mistake!"

Why can't the doctor prescribe a small amount to begin with? You can always get a refill if the medication works, and if it doesn't, you won't be stuck with a lot of pills you can't use.

The druggist says it's against the law for him to take back pills once they are out of the store. Too bad I don't know another poor person who could use these useless pills prescribed for me. I would be glad to give them mine. I have a medicine cabinet full of them. — FIXED IN-KENTUCKY

DEAR FIXED: You make an excellent point. Physicians, please take note, and consider the patient's pocketbook PRN.

DEAR ABBY: Rita (not her real name) and I just split up after a three-year relationship. She's 25 and I am 28. During the time we went together, I gave Rita many gifts. Some were expensive and others were not, but I asked her to return all my gifts. (She had given me some gifts, too, which I returned, although she told me she didn't want them.)

Well, last Sunday morning I found all the gifts I had given her dumped on my front lawn! Of course my neighbors saw this stuff on my lawn, and now I'm the laughingstock of the neighborhood.

How would you handle this? I had given Rita a three-piece set of patio furniture, a microwave oven, a stereo, and about 20 stuffed animals. And to think I almost married her! — BURNED UP IN ALABAMA

DEAR BURNED: A gift is a gift — not a loan. True, Rita was spiteful to have dumped your gifts on the lawn for all to see, but it was tacky of you to ask her to return them. The exception would have been an engagement ring, which carries with it a promise to marry, in which case if she broke that promise, the gift should have been returned, quietly.

DEAR ABBY: I've been living with a man for nine years. We have a 7-year-old son together, and I now feel as though it is important for us to get married and become a real family.

Whenever I bring this up, my boyfriend gives me a lot of excuses why he can't marry me. None are legitimate. This does not leave me feeling very good about myself. How can I get him to marry me? — DEAD END

DEAR DEAD END: You can't force a man to marry you if he doesn't want to. If you are concerned about your "rights," see a lawyer and find out if you are living in a state that recognizes common-law marriages. You may have all the legal rights of a wife, although what you really want is a ring on your finger, a certificate of marriage and a "Mrs." in front of your name.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 13-year-old kid who complained about her elders always telling her how hard they had it when they were kids struck a nostalgic note from my childhood. My grandfather loved to tell about his long treks to school when he was a boy. He'd say the snow was up to his waist (it got higher every year). As I got older, I got wiser, and finally reminded him that back in those days he was three feet shorter.

After that, I became his ex-favorite, and even though we remained buddies till he passed away, I wish I hadn't spoiled one of his favorite stories. — LIONEL IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Supplements

A lot was said about raising salary supplements for teachers at the Pitt County Commissioners' public hearing on the 1986-87 budget. Those in favor of it were correct in their comments.

Pitt County ranks last in teacher supplements on a list of competing eastern North Carolina counties — a tough and embarrassing place to be when recruiting top-of-the-shelf educators. The schools' request for a 0.5 percent increase in 1986-87 would place the county about midway up the list.

That raise is a start toward putting the county on a path to the top. It is a beginning that should not be delayed. The 0.5 percent increase is a reasonable amount to request and should be followed in subsequent budgets by similar increases until Pitt County is at the top.

School officials are not asking the commissioners for a whopping increase. They are not asking for the world in one budget year. The increase will cost $252,000 — a small slice of the schools' $13.3 million current expense budget. It will put an additional $120, on the average, in each teacher's pocket.

Currently, Pitt County has an ample supply of good teachers in its classrooms. Concrete facts and figures prove that supply is dwindling. Financial competitiveness is necessary to keep plenty of quality teachers — and the key word is quality — in Pitt County.

It is time to start work on a plan that will keep the county's classrooms filled with top-notch teachers. The 0.5 percent supplement increase is an opportunity for the commissioners to make a deposit in Pitt County's teacher bank.

Merger

The outlook for merger of the Pitt County and Greenville school systems further improved last week when the General Assembly approved a bill designed to eliminate U.S. Justice Department objections.

The new law allows the present 15-member board of education to resume its work and effect merger on July 1. It provides for further work on districting of the board seats and an election to be held in 1987.

The plan was agreed upon by school officials and representatives of the Concerned Citizens for Justice and, if preclearance is granted by the Justice Department, merger of the two school systems will be effected within two weeks.

There will, of course, be a considerable amount of work to be done by the board and the administrative staff prior to and after July 1. It is well to remember, however, that much planning has already been done and staff consolidation is also well under way.

No doubt there will be rough spots as the merger continues. Nevertheless, citizens of Pitt County can take pride in the outlook for a more efficient operation of our schools. We can see a bright, new era ahead for Pitt County education.

Life Among The Political Evangelicals

WASHINGTON — Thanks to Norman Lear, TV evangelist Pat Robertson and a spate of speculation by the media, you might assume that American politics has suddenly got religion. One count, in fact, has 27 "evangelical candidates" running for major U.S. offices this year.

But then you meet "evangelical candidate" Joe Lutz, and your assumptions go awry. The 35-year-old Lutz is the Baptist minister who received 43 percent of the vote in his unsuccessful challenge last month to Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the scourge of anti-abortionists.

Conservative church-goers and anti-abortion activists gave Lutz a big boost at the grass roots. One group, Life Amendment PAC, claimed to have trained 1,800 volunteers for the effort. Yet on a visit to Washington this week Lutz seemed anxious to distance himself from a political movement that's captivated the capital's attention in an otherwise boring election year.

Tall and athletically handsome, with a firm jawline to complement his handshake, Lutz acknowledges his roots in a conservative Christian community whose recent political activities have scared the likes of Lear and his secularist monitoring organization, People for the American Way. And he intends to stump for only those candidates who share his opposition to abortion.

Yet, in an interview, Lutz contended that such national organizations as Robertson's Freedom Council, which has been active in states of importance to presidential selection, were of no tangible support to him against Packwood.

Meanwhile, despite the efforts on his behalf by right-to-life activists, he seemed anxious to emphasize economic rather than social issues in describing his political agenda. "I do not view abortion as being the cause of the demise of the nation," he declared. "The abortion question ... is not supreme in my book."

What seems supreme, in fact, is Joe Lutz's political career. It would not be surprising to find a lot of Lutz converts unaware of the opportunities that their blind allegiance has nurtured.

His unexpected showing has only encouraged Lutz to make big plans for the future. He intends to establish a firm through which he can market his youthful good looks and skillful rhetorical abilities — for a fee — to conservative candidates and causes. He also wants to set up a political action committee to help raise money for Oregon candidates. Joe Lutz makes no secret of his continuing desire to run for office. The question is, simply, when?

In the meantime, the Lutz organization may make additional contributions this year to Oregon's political annals. Significantly, he confirmed that he would campaign neither for nor against Packwood. Instead, he would concentrate his efforts and those of his followers on congressional and state races and ballot referenda, including one that would cease state-funded abortions.

penalties for the worst offenders of the law.

But Miller's bill was strongly opposed by local politicians and their lobbies. Miller got a bill through the House, but it was weakened considerably in the process.

To explain what is wrong with the bill, let's look at two hypothetical cases. One: A teen-ager steals a $250 radio from a department store and gets caught. Two: The county commissioners meet secretly and buy a new air conditioner for the brother of one commissioner. He charges them $250 more than they would have paid at the department store.

Both the teen and the commissioners get caught. The kid gets probation. The commissioners, under the proposed amendments to the Open Meetings Law, would get 10 days to meet in public and vote on the purchase, again. If they did, they'd be free from any legal problems.

So both the teen and the commissioners steal again. The kid goes to jail. The commissioners get the same deal they got last time. They have 10 days to meet in open and ratify the deal.

The proposed amendments to the Open Meetings Law would allow the commissioners to break the law repeatedly but still go unpunished. They'll know that they take no risk in having a closed meeting. If they get caught, they have an automatic out. If they don't their brothers get rich on the taxpayer.

There is, of course, a provision under current law where a citizen who gets fed up a board that has repeatedly met in secret can ask a judge to order the commissioners to stop. But think about that for a second. That is an insult to our system of government.

Before we can get our elected officials — the supposed "honorable" of our committees — to obey the law, we first have to drag them before a judge so they can order them to do what is right. That is not only an insult to the public, it's an insult to the great many public officials who truly are law abiding and conscientious.

Maybe the biggest insult to North Carolina local officials, however, came from their own Raleigh lobbyists who say this bill is still too tough. They beg us to ask the question: "What do local officials fear if they are obeying the law?" Fred Baggett of the N.C. League of Municipalities told the Senate committee reviewing Miller's diluted bill that, "I would not like to leave the impression that we are pleased with this bill as it is now."

Neighboring states don't coddle public officials who break their open meetings laws. In Texas, Arkansas, Florida and South Carolina violation of the law is a misdemeanor. Other states have fines as high as $500. Miller's bill would impose a maximum $500 fine, but only after the lawbreakers were given repeated opportunities to repent and hold an open meeting.

Miller, trying to get even a small victory, says, "About the only thing we can say is that it's better than what we got" now. He may be exaggerating.

Readers Object To GWEN Tower

To the editor:

After reading your Monday editorial, I have to wonder, nevertheless, just how significant is it that "nuclear war scares us to death, just as it does any rational person." Certainly little rational is happening!

As a mother of several kids and often surrounded by others' children and grandchildren, the thought of nuclear weapons being used drives me to action. I wish all those rational people that are scared to death of nuclear war would also speak out and work for alternatives to nuclear conflict, if not for their own lives, then for the sake of the young ones who certainly would be dead in the "atmosphere ... poisoned with radiation ..."

The building of GWEN is a sign of our approval for the continuation of the arms race.

Dorothea Ames
Greenville

To the editor:

I share the fear of nuclear war expressed in your June 16 editorial on the Ground Wave Emergency Network (GWEN). What the editorial fails to grasp, however, is that GWEN is another example of decisions which are increasing the risk of nuclear war and threatening the economic security of our country.

Granted, GWEN is not the only or the worst example of this threat — President Reagan's decision to abrogate SALT II and his refusal to negotiate a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty are both more dangerous. Nevertheless, GWEN is important to us because it is a local example of unnecessary, hence wasteful, military spending. GWEN is unnecessary, first, because we already possess a more than sufficient deterrent to a Soviet first strike in the form of thousands of invulnerable submarine-launched nuclear weapons, and second, because the Soviets, if they were foolish enough to mount a first strike, would have a strong incentive and more than enough nuclear weapons to destroy the GWEN system.

Your editorial acknowledges that the GWEN system doesn't "take away much from the threat of nuclear annihilation at this point." If this is the case, why spend $750 million to build it? That kind of money would go a long way toward tackling some of the other pressing social problems you acknowledge.

GWEN, like Star Wars and new missile systems, epitomizes the belief in a technological fix for the problem of nuclear war. Technological tit-for-tat over the past 40 years is what has gotten us into the current mess; only the building of understanding and trust among nations and peoples can get us out.

Thus, The News and Observer's editorial of June 17 correctly interpreted the thrust of local efforts against GWEN, noting that "eastern North Carolina's peace activists aren't going to scuttle GWEN. But they are making the Craven County tower a symbol of the needs for arms control."

John C. Moskop
Greenville

To the editor:

Congratulations, Greenville! You have done it again. In the name of progress, you have eliminated the Blue Laws. Somehow I can't help but compare this new move with other signs of progress such as cutting down trees to make room for shopping centers and tearing down houses for more parking space. And let's not forget the Downtown Mall!

Yes, now the small merchant and the salesperson have the opportunity to stop frittering away their Sundays. After all, who wouldn't rather make a dollar than have a whole day wasted by watching ball games, sleeping, swimming, visiting, or (heaven forbid!) worshipping God?

Of course, businesses and service organizations still have not gone far enough. Greenville Utilities should be opened on the weekends. Many people would probably pay their bills much more promptly. And banks surely must realize the necessity of a seven-day week. I mean there may be millions stashed under mattresses in Greenville because the owners are not able to get to the banks on Monday through Friday. And teachers could be working with the gifted (or the slow) and the university could be having classes on Sunday. I mean the possibilities are endless!

Well, I tell you, I for one can sleep easier at nights knowing that our City Council is looking out after our welfare. And could I possibly throw in a suggestion? Why not flood half of Greenville and turn it into a recreational lake? Now that really would bring in revenue every day of the week. Council members, how about it?

As for me, I guess I'd better go ahead and buy my water wings before the lines form. But I'll be dog-goned if I buy them on Sunday!

Strength For Today

Socrates taught his generation that no evil can happen to a good man either in life or after death.

What about Socrates himself? If anyone ever got a raw deal, it was Socrates. He was brought to his death not because he was evil but because he annoyed his contemporaries. He asked them questions they could not answer. He tied them in logical knots from which they could not extricate themselves. The charge they made against him was that he was corrupting the youth of the day. He was, of course, doing nothing of the sort, but he was making a city very angry with him because of the way he exposed the illogical thought and behavior of its inhabitants.

We need the prod of Socrates to make us think straight no matter how reluctant we are to give up our prejudices. How would we treat Socrates if he were living today? How do we, as a matter of fact, treat his kind?

Branch Banking & Trust Company's New Center

BB&T To Open Greenville Center In Ceremony Friday

Ribbon cutting ceremonies Friday at 9:30 a.m. will mark the official opening of the BB&T Center near the intersection of Memorial Drive and Stantonsburg Road, which will serve as Branch Banking and Trust Company's new main office in Greenville. The four-story, 50,000 square foot building is the largest privately owned building east of Raleigh in northeastern North Carolina. Jerry Powell, BB&T senior vice president and city executive said the BB&T Center will serve as the bank's main office in the city, housing administration, marketing, business services, mortgage loans and full retail services on the first floor. BB&T is leasing the first floor of the $3.5 million building, including four drive-in banking facilities, from the building's owner, Collice C. Moore and Associates. Powell said the move to the new building was necessitated by BB&T's growth and will provide more space for the main office staff, as well as better service for customers. The bank has branch offices at the intersection of Third and Greene streets and on Arlington Boulevard. The ribbon cutting, open to the public, will be followed by tours of the bank and the other three floors of the building. Refreshments will be served. A number of local government, business and chamber of commerce officials are scheduled to attend the ribbon cutting.

Budget ...

sioners that beginning teachers make $15,680 a year. Depending on the number of dependents in the family, she said, a beginning teacher's children may qualify for the free and reduced price school lunch program.

Rose Marie Sherman, an English and journalism teacher, suggested increased supplements would help combat a projected teacher shortage. Pitt County, she said, "ranks 80th out of 97 levels of supplemental pay in the state."

Terry Shank, president of the League of Women Voters, said "the Board of Commissioners is to be commended for its fine history of support of the school systems."

But she said the league "recommends the full funding for teachers salaries, supplements and recruitment as requested," suggesting that "offering teaching salaries and compensations that are competitive ... certainly signifies the priority that quality education deserves."

In addition to the question of support for education, Ms. Shank said the league "strongly urges full funding of the Department of Social Services (and) the county health department (and) believes the implementation of an independent countywide alarm system (a 911 system) is overdue and recommends establishing this service as soon as possible."

She mildly criticized the board for not including employee pay increases in the proposed budget.

"Since salaries constitute a major portion of the operating budget and since employee turnover has become an administrative problem the league recommends proposed salary decisions be included in the June budget proposal, thereby allowing citizen input and public awareness of such significant expense," she said.

Commissioners have been reviewing budget requests which do not include any pay increases. The board has said that it would consider pay raises when a personnel classification and pay scale study is completed. A meeting was scheduled for 2 p.m. to hear the results of the study.

In private discussions following the hearing Wednesday night, commissioners told those attending the session that 82 percent of the county's local revenue goes to the schools, placing Pitt County fifth in the state in local support for education.

Earlier in the day, commissioners met with members of the Greenville City Council to discuss funding for Pitt-Greenville Airport, which has requested $60,000 in current operating expense money from each of the governing bodies for the coming year.

The joint meeting was requested by council members after commissioners tentatively cut airport operating funds from the proposed budget, although commissioners gave tentative approval to including some $112,500 for capital outlay projects at the airport in the coming year's budget.

In cutting the operating funds, commissioners expressed the opinion that the airport should be run on a self-supporting basis as far as operations are concerned, with the city and county providing money for capital projects.

"I know there are some concerns" about the budget, airport manager Jim Turcotte said. "We have had a fantastic year financially. We have made money this year ... in fact for the past two years."

But Turcotte suggested, "I have some concerns this next fiscal year." Citing a need to replace part-time workers with full-time employees, and expand the hours of operation in the coming year, Turcotte said, "I'm not sure we can operate self-supporting. I wish we could be self-supporting."

muter — accounts for 45 to 50 percent of what we sell each month," Turcotte said.

"I think it's time you try it," Commissioner Charles Gaskins said. "We're talking more about a philosophy ... the airport should be paying its own way." Commissioner Kelly Barnhill suggested, "I'm in favor of putting it (money in the budget) in for capital projects, rather than operating expenses. It's apparent to me that the revenues you are generating can cover operating expenses."

The airport is expected to have more than $93,000 in operating capital on hand at the end of the fiscal year from a present budget totaling $617,866, which includes revenue of $455,000 in fuel and oil sales and $55,000 in tie down fees and rents. This year, the county and city contribution to operations totaled $40,000 each.

County Manager Reginald Gray pointed out that in 1982-1983 the city and county each contributed $25,000 toward airport operations and $35,000 in operating funds were transferred to the airport's capital improvement fund during the year. In 1983-1984, the airport received $30,000 each from the two governments, and $56,000 was transferred to capital projects by the airport authority.

In 1984-1985, the city and county each contributed $35,000 to airport operations (nothing was transferred from operations to capital improvements), while, this year, each body contributed $40,000 to operations, and $50,000 was transferred by the airport authority to capital improvements.

Airport Authority member Jimmy Little told commissioners and council members "this year we projected it would take $40,000 from each body to break even. We're looking at what it's going to take to operate the airport." For the coming year, and project it will take $60,000 from the city and county.

He said if the coming year was like this year, the airport would be able to support its own operations. But with changes to be made — extending the hours of operation and moving from part-time workers to full-time employees — Little questioned whether the airport could support itself.

Airport Authority Chairman Della Dayson said "we hate to start off the next fiscal year not knowing where we stand with you. We need some guidelines."

Nancy Jenkins, a member of the City Council and the council's representative on the Airport Authority, said "I have no problems with the request they are making."

But Mayor Les Garner said "we hadn't seen these figures," referring to the financial reports. And council member Janice Buck said she would like to reconsider the airport request after looking at the figures.

"I think the commissioners want to put the money where it is being spent ... in capital outlay rather than in operating expense," Gray said.

The council and commissioners then agreed to let Gray and City Manager Gail Meeks meet to review the airport requests again and to make recommendations to both governing boards.

Man Charged In N. Pitt Vandalism Is Returned

One of three persons arrested in connection with a vandalism incident last week at North Pitt High School has been returned to Pitt County from South Carolina where he had been in custody.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said William L. Samples, 16, of Hampton, Va., was placed under $50,000 bond with a first appearance hearing scheduled for today in District Court on a vehicle larceny charge stemming from the school incident.

Tyson said Charles Cain, 20, of Hampton, Va., and Franklin C.

Booker, 21, of Oxon Hill, Md., remained in custody in Conway, S.C., on charges of attempted robbery and possession of stolen telephone company credit cards. The three were arrested Friday night in Horry County, S.C., after an attempted robbery in Loris, S.C.

Warrants were issued in Pitt County for the three men on felony larceny charges and Tyson said bills of indictment against them will be sought before the Pitt County Grand Jury charging breaking, entering and larceny, damage to real property, auto larceny and unlawful burning of a vehicle.

Tyson said Cain and Booker will be returned to Pitt County after they are tried in South Carolina.

A truck stolen from Maryland was driven through the North Pitt building and burned late Thursday or early Friday, causing an estimated $35,000 damage. A North Pitt van, taken from the school after the incident, was found wrecked Friday in Craven County.

Senators Cancel Succession Measure

RALEIGH (AP) — A state Senate committee voted today to cancel a referendum scheduled for November on whether to prohibit governors and lieutenant governors from serving consecutive terms.

The move to halt the referendum on the proposed amendment to the state Constitution surfaced suddenly in a meeting of the Senate Judiciary IV Committee. The panel voted 5-1 to rewrite an unrelated bill to provide for cancellation of the referendum.

The bill now goes to the Senate floor, where approval is likely because Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan has said he favors removing the succession question from the November ballot.

Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, who last year co-sponsored legislation to schedule the referendum which the General Assembly passed overwhelmingly, made the motion to undo the 1985 bill.

The substitute bill was sponsored by Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, who said he always had opposed gubernatorial succession but realized that an amendment to repeal it probably would not win approval this year.

"I try to be a realist about things," Winner said. "I would rather wait until some day when maybe partisan political statements would not be involved in it and maybe it (succession) would have a chance of being repealed."

Republican Gov. Jim Martin was critical of the effort to repeal succession last year — although the proposed amendment would have taken effect after the 1988 election, thereby enabling him to seek re-election regardless of the outcome of the November referendum.

Martin said he viewed repeal as an attack on the office of governor.

Democratic leaders privately voiced concerns that their candidates could suffer in the November election if Martin and GOP candidates made an issue of succession.

Governors and lieutenant governors of North Carolina were barred from serving consecutive terms until 1977, when former Gov. Jim Hunt pushed through the Legislature a proposed constitutional amendment permitting it.

The state's voters approved the amendment in a fall 1977 referendum. Hunt and former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green took advantage of the amendment and won re-election in 1980.

Lawmakers Face Conflicts Over Insurance

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — People at a public hearing on a bill to impose limits on the civil liability system cautioned lawmakers to move slowly on the reforms, but a House committee acted quickly on a proposal to give the state insurance commissioner more power.

The actions Wednesday were typical of the "hurry up and wait" atmosphere that has surrounded attempts to address complaints that people are being priced out of the liability insurance market. Supporters plead for quick action to limit excessive jury awards and opponents of changes claim there is no crisis or ask that natural checks and balances be allowed to work.

Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, appearing at the public hearing, said a bill before the Senate Judiciary I Committee that includes caps on damage awards will not guarantee the relief people are seeking.

"I do not think that it gives the commissioner of insurance adequate authority or resources to compel the information the General Assembly needs to make informed choices," he said. "It will not bring about any real regulation of the insurance industry. It will not control rates."

"Insurance reporting laws and a method to regulate rates will provide real relief," Thornburg said, but he added that action being considered in the short session is premature.

A bill that might answer some of Thornburg's questions came out of the House Insurance Committee on Wednesday, the product of three insurance bills rolled into one. It would let the insurance commissioner roll back excessive rates and require more information from insurance companies. The bill also would allow the insurance department to revise the rating and classification plan for auto insurance and change the regulation of commercial property and liability insurance rates.

Rep. Ivan Mothershead, R-Mecklenburg, tried unsuccessfully to get the committee to delay the vote until the consolidated bill could be examined more closely.

"I understand the need for action, but I think we would do better to spend another day in committee rather than taking questions on the House floor," Mothershead said in an interview. "I probably will support the bill. The only question is, what are we passing, what did we vote for?"

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, one of the bill's sponsors and the committee chairman, said he wanted to stop "this skyrocketing and nosediving of rates."

He said he tried to limit the proposed legislation to insurance regulations and keep it free from civil liability reform.

Those civil reforms are the most controversial portions of the bill by Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, that was the subject of the public hearing.

Ryland Vest of the North Carolina Society of Anesthesiologists said the Hardison bill could help stabilize the insurance crisis.

"Reform is needed and cannot be delayed," he said.

But retired state Supreme Court Justice J. Frank Huskins said there is not enough time to address the problem in one month.

"It doesn't just deal with insurance and lawyer fees and punitive damages," he said.

"To those that counsel delay, I can only say the problem is now," countered Wally McBride of North Carolina Project Inc., a business lobbying group. "It's not totally an insurance problem. Without some action we will begin to lose some businesses in North Carolina."

"It will not destroy the jury system in North Carolina," he added. "It will not kill punitive damages. They will no longer be a windfall to plaintiffs and their attorneys."

Susan Valauri of the National Federation of Industry and Business said 20,000 small businesses in North Carolina are going without liability insurance due to the crisis. Jerry Williams of the N.C. Restaurants Association said 25 percent of ABC permittees carried no such insurance.

Hardison's bill, the product of a study commission, would limit to $100,000 the amount a plaintiff could get for punitive damages and would impose a ceiling of $250,000 for pain and suffering in liability suits.

It also would empower the state insurance commissioner to impose a 60-day waiting period before inurance companies filing for rate increases could put them into effect. It would require insurers to give policyholders at least 45 days notice before a policy could be cancelled, instead of the current 15 days.

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, chairman of the Judiciary I Committee, predicted a "gaggle of amendments" would be offered today in anticipation of a vote on the bill on Friday.

Barnes said he also expected the Senate committee to approve amendments to grant the commissioner authority to roll back rates deemed excessive, much like a provision in the House bill approved Wednesday.

"Some want to remove the caps. Some want to moderate the caps. I will not be greatly surprised at any amendment you see tomorrow," he said.

Mavretic said he had no qualms about removing provisions to change appointments to the board, saying those decisions would be better decided after the people vote on the issue of governance and whether the superintendent should be elected.

Senate Minority Leader Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, said Republicans would likely support Mavretic's bill as long as the governor retains his appointments to the board.

Appointive Superintendent

RALEIGH (AP) — A new version of a plan to make the office of state school superintendent appointive rather than elective has sparked criticism despite claims that it was intended to defuse partisan opposition.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, proposed the measure Wednesday as an alternative to a bill passed by the Senate last year. Both bills called for amending the constitution to appoint the superintendent, but Mavretic's plan deleted a change in the way members of the state Board of Education would be chosen. Republicans have balked at the idea that the governor would be stripped of his power to choose all of the members except the lieutenant governor and state treasurer.

Grand Jury Bill Passes 2nd Vote

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would allow investigative grand juries in drug trafficking cases and permit prosecutors for the first time to interrogate witnesses before the grand jury cleared a hurdle in the House despite attacks calling the measure a bad idea.

"Make no mistake about the break with all the years of tradition that this bill would make," Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said Wednesday during debate on the House floor.

The bill passed its second reading 85-23, but a final vote was delayed when Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, suggested an amendment be drawn up to limit the scope of a grand jury's investigation. A final vote was scheduled for today.

Under the bill, passed by the Senate last year, a district attorney could file a petition seeking a grand jury. If the state attorney general endorsed the petition, it would go before a three-judge panel appointed by the chief justice of the state Supreme Court. The panel would make the final decision.

Hackney acknowledged the bill was "severely restrictive," but said it was "a bad idea which is limited and thus becomes a bad, limited idea."

Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, whose House Judiciary IV Committee approved the measure, said he was surprised at the attack.

"You've got to jump through a bunch of hoops to get there with this bill," he said. "Now, all you have to do to get a grand jury moving is send in an indictment."

Pulley noted that North Carolina ranks fifth in the nation in drug trafficking.

Hackney criticized the bill, saying it would not permit a witness to take an attorney with him or consult with one, nor does it provide limits on grand jury session lengths.

He also said it lacked a procedure to quash a subpoena and said there would be no Superior Court judge in control, unlike the current grand jury system.

Pulley said supporters of the bill had promised not to seek to expand the measure to allow grand juries to investigate crimes other than drug trafficking. But Hackney said he was worried "about 50 years from now ... when we don't know who's going to be running things."

He also raised concerns that district attorneys might use the grand jury investigations in election campaigns.

But Rep. David Redwine, D-Brunswick, said the bill had adequate safeguards against partisan politics by requiring the state attorney general's cooperation in seeking a grand jury.

North Carolina and Connecticut are the only states that don't allow investigative grand juries.

Hunt On For Roads' Compromise

RALEIGH (AP) — The Martin administration and legislative leaders have about a week to compromise on methods of raising the $200 million for highways that both sides agree is needed, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says.

Jordan said Wednesday the search for an agreement was continuing after Gov. Jim Martin's proposal to shift nearly $100 million from the state General Fund to the Highway Fund failed to gain the endorsement of the Joint Appropriations Committee.

"We're continuing to look for options that the governor will accept," Jordan told reporters. He would not speculate on the chances of reaching a settlement but said it was "important that we keep trying."

Martin, meanwhile, said the committee votes were evidence that Democratic leaders had imposed party discipline on its troops. "I'm very sorry for that," he said, adding that some rank-and-file Democrats had told him they didn't object to transfers.

House members of the Appropriations Committee, in a party-line vote, rejected 47-17 the portions of Martin's program not pertaining to the tax increase — including moving the Highway Patrol and driver education programs from the Highway Fund to the General Fund, thereby saving the Highway Fund some $94 million.

The Senate members delivered the same verdict in a separate vote, with one Democrat, R.L. Martin of Pitt County, backing Gov. Martin's plan.

State Faces Low-Income Housing Shortage

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
North Carolina is facing a severe shortage of housing for low- to moderate-income families, thanks to federal budget cuts and the rising cost of building homes, officials say.

"It's just awful," said Betty Chafin Rash, a member of the North Carolina Housing Commission and organizer of a statewide coalition on housing needs. "In effect, the Reagan administration has eliminated all housing subsidies for low- and moderate-income people."

For the state's 161,000 very low income families, only 108,000 affordable units are available, she said. "We're seeing more people double up in crowded conditions, and we're seeing more people in the street with no housing at all."

While it hasn't reached the crisis level plaguing very low income families, there is also a shortage of housing for families with incomes between $10,000 and $15,000 a year, said commission Executive Secretary Robert Jansen.

"In a rapid growth area, the emphasis goes to the high end of the market," he said. "North Carolina is different from most other areas because we've had a prolonged period of stable growth. ... (Contractors) are not building low-income housing, they're building high-rent housing."

While no statewide figures are available on the need for low- to moderate-income housing, Jansen said Raleigh, for example, has 16,000 families in this income range in need of affordable housing.

For very low income people in Charlotte, there are about 1,500 people on a waiting list for 6,000 public and subsidized housing units, said Larry Lloyd, assistant director of the Charlotte Housing Authority.

The shortage isn't quite as bad in Asheville, said C.B. Tate, director of the Asheville Housing Authority. He said there is a waiting list of about 500 for subsidized and public housing, and some moderate-income housing is now being built.

Ms. Rash said the shortage was more severe in rural areas, where Farmers Home Administration housing programs are being cut.

The North Carolina Housing Finance Agency, which provides loans to homebuilders for low- to moderate-income housing, is "trying to hit more rural areas now," said agency spokeswoman Marilyn Burns.

"It seems like we've tried to saturate the metro areas," she said. "Now we're trying to develop programs to reach particularly the far eastern and far western areas."

Ms. Rash is also the Housing Commission's representative on the General Assembly's study commission on creation of a state housing trust fund. The study commission is trying to determine what the state's role should be in helping people afford housing, what agency would perform that function and where the money would come from.

One proposal on the source of funds involves the interest on escrow accounts that mortgage providers require for homeowners' taxes and insurance, said Jansen.

He said commission members have come up with several other suggestions on alleviating the shortage of affordable housing, such as continuing the Housing Finance Agency's issuance of tax-exempt bonds for home loans.

"Other proposals have to do with creative land-use to reduce the cost of site development," he said. "Not every site has to have 50 feet of frontage on a paved thoroughfare. You can design in clusters and increase the density of housing. ... Some experimental work is being done in Charlotte very successfully in projects where they did not put in curbs and gutters. ... One national study shows you can reduce site development costs by as much as 25 percent."

In addition, the state has pilot programs paying $100 a month to help families pay rent or mortgage payments on their first house, he said.

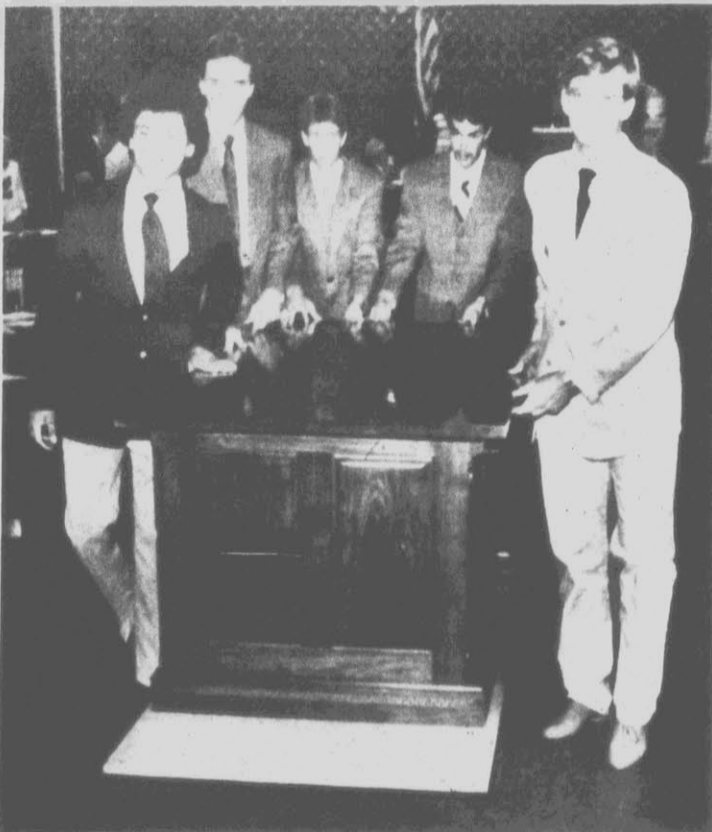

THOMAS HOWARD CALLAWAY, son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Abbott Callaway, Jr., of Maryville, Tennessee, has been awarded the Doctor of Medicine degree in ceremonies at Vanderbilt University.

He is the third generation of Callaways to graduate from Vanderbilt Medical School.

His father, Dr. Henry A. Callaway, Jr., graduated in 1954 and his grandfather, Dr. Henry A. Callaway, Sr., in 1920.

Dr. Callaway received his bachelor of science degree in chemistry from Duke University in 1982.

He is a member of Phi Chi Medical Fraternity and Alpha Tau Omega social fraternity.

Drag Racers Force Car Into Fatal Accident

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A woman with an 8-month-old daughter died Wednesday of injuries sustained while trapped inside a burning car after reportedly being forced off a highway by drag racers, authorities said.

Annette Harkey, 19, of Rock Hill, S.C., died at Charlotte Memorial Hospital of injuries suffered in the accident Monday. Her mother, Carolyn Whiteside, 38, and best friend, Sharon Easter, 25, both of Rock Hill, were in critical condition at the hospital Wednesday night.

Police issued a new plea for information about the accident Wednesday. Witnesses told police the three women were traveling south on Interstate 77 in Charlotte early Monday morning when their car was forced off the road by two cars racing side-by-side.

Ms. Harkey's automobile crossed the median and was struck on the right rear side by a tractor-trailer driven by Thomas Knox, 47, of Charlotte. Knox wasn't seriously injured, Morgan said.

Knox told police he tried to stop but could not. After Ms. Harkey's car was struck, it left the road, stopped on the right shoulder and burst into flames. The three women were trapped inside, Morgan said. Emergency workers released them.

"In 15 years that was the ultimate worst call I've been on," said Charlotte police officer Buddy Morgan.

Retired Educator Harold Tribble Dies

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Harold W. Tribble, the former president of Wake Forest College who saw the school become a university before he retired in 1967, has died. He was 86.

Tribble died Tuesday morning at the Moravian Home in Winston-Salem.

During his 17-year term as president of the school from 1950 to 1967, assets increased from about $10.5 million to more than $91 million and the student body grew from 1,750 to more than 3,000.

"I immediately sensed an enormous appreciation of Dr. Tribble when I came here in 1983," said Wake Forest President Thomas Hearn Jr. "That appreciation will continue to grow because of the monumental task he has accomplished."

Wake Forest assumed university status on June 18, 1967 — 12 days before Tribble retired.

Wake Forest presented Tribble with the Medallion of Merit award on May 20, 1984 — the university's highest honor given for service to the school.

Tribble's funeral is scheduled for 11 a.m. Thursday at the Wait Chapel on the university campus.

Doctor Says Singer Broke Neck In Fall

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A broken neck entertainer Kate Smith suffered last week in a fall may have contributed to her death, but did not cause it, her doctor says.

Miss Smith's physician, Denis I. Becker, said Miss Smith apparently had fallen in her home June 11 and had broken two vertebrae at the top of her neck. Miss Smith was hospitalized last week after the fall, but had returned home, according to her sister, Helena Steene.

"Most people with that kind of fracture would have died right there," Becker said.

Miss Smith, who moved to Raleigh in 1979 to be near her sister, died Tuesday of respiratory failure. She was 79.

Baby Found

RALEIGH (AP) — A newborn, 2-pound baby boy was found crying in a trash bag outside a Johnston County mobile home by a Pine Level town employee who was reading water meters, authorities said.

"He heard what he thought was a human cry from a trash bag," said Johnston County Sheriff's Department Detective Tommy T. Beasley. "He opened it up and there was a baby."

The infant appeared to have been abandoned shortly after birth, authorities said.

The infant, born about three months premature, was in critical but stable condition Wednesday at the Wake Medical Center intensive care nursery.

Gray in July 1984 as the associate vice president of health affairs of Wake Forest University and executive dean of the medical school. He had been dean of the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta.

Seat Belts

GREENSBORO (AP) — A group that wants the state's mandatory seat belt law repealed says more people have died wearing seat belts this year in the state, but safety researchers say those statistics are misleading because more people are buckling up.

Fifty-nine people have died this year wearing seat belts, compared to 19 at the same time last year.

"I think those statistics show that the law is ineffective," said Kim Steffan, president of North Carolinians for Seatbelt Choice.

However, Don Reinfurt, director of analysis studies at the University of North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center in Chapel Hill said Tuesday, that before the law went into effect, 20 percent of the drivers wore seat belts. Now, he said, about 45 percent wear them.

Acid Spill

MARION, N.C. (AP) — Emergency management officials say it is possible that nitric acid from a tanker truck spill on Interstate 40 near Old Fort Mountain may have drained into the Catawba River.

Approximately 4,800 gallons of nitric acid leaked from a tanker truck's rear valve as the vehicle descended the mountain Tuesday, said Bill Gray, the local emergency management director.

The town of Old Fort was notified of the incident and Mayor Bob Wilson said a water pump located west of the town near the Catawba River was turned off "just to be safe."

Wilson said the town gets its water from a well system, and not from the Catawba River.

Drafted

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — J.D. Benfield has been drafted by Republican Party officials to succeed former Iredell County Sheriff LeRoy Reavis, who died last month.

Benfield, 55, will serve the remainder of Reavis' term, which ends in December, and will face Democrat Clyde Loyd in the November election, Sue Hedrick, chairman of the Iredell Republican Party said Tuesday.

Phillip Redmond, the chief deputy under Reavis, has been acting sheriff.

Dean To Retire

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Dr. Fairfield Goodale, dean of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, will retire at the end of June, school officials say.

Dr. Richard Janeway, the school's executive dean, said he would assume Goodale's responsibilities until he appoints an advisory committee "to aid in the development of guidelines for subsequent administrative organization."

Goodale, 63, came to Bowman

Hispanics Want Helms Censured

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Two Hispanic leaders have sent telegrams to U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms demanding an apology for his comments about Mexico, and to Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole asking for a censure of Helms.

"We demanded an immediate apology to the country of Mexico and to the Latin American nations," said Ruben Bonilla, chairman of the Texas Mexican American Democrats.

His brother, Tony, chairman of the National Hispanic Leadership Conference, on Wednesday read to The Associated Press excerpts of the telegrams sent by the two former presidents of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Included in the wire to Helms were the words: "You have continuously verbally attacked Mexico, its leaders and Latinos in general with your callous, irresponsible and insensitive remarks. In the process, you have damaged our relationship with our country's third largest trading partners."

To Dole, the two said that Helms' comments "are seriously damaging America's relationship with Mexico. This slander of Latinos in our country, by suggesting Latinos are volatile, should not be tolerated by the United States Senate ...

"We therefore call on the United States Senate to censure Sen. Helms for his erratic, offensive and unstatesmanlike behavior."

In Mexico, Helms' latest allegations about electoral fraud in Mexico attracted little response Wednesday.

Except for a statement from the Mexican Embassy in Washington, there was no formal response from the government to Helms' claims Tuesday that President Miguel de la Madrid was fraudulently elected four years ago.

The apparent decision to minimize the allegations made at a hearing in the Senate subcommittee chaired by the conservative Republican from North Carolina contrasted significantly with the sharp protest filed after the first hearings last month.

The Mexican Embassy in Washington issued a statement Tuesday saying the Mexican president does not take any part in the Mexican electoral process.

"Consequently, Sen. Helms' assertion and the supposedly secret figures that he made public in today's hearing regarding recent electoral results are groundless and most probably are intended to confuse public opinion," the statement said.

Most capital newspapers carried news agency dispatches from Washington on the Helms' hearing, but their front pages were dominated by reports on Tuesday's ouster of Jesus Silva Herzog as treasury secretary and his replacement by Gustavo Petricoli.

Thunderstorms Set Off Fires In Brunswick Area

WILMINGTON (AP) — Thunderstorms that crossed Southeastern North Carolina set fire to two houses, burned a church steeple and knocked out power to about 10,000 people.

The heaviest damage from the storms Tuesday night and Wednesday morning was reported in Brunswick County, where lightning set the steeple of the Antioch Baptist Church in Bolivia ablaze.

Amid the cracking and popping of lightning around them, firefighters raised ladders to the steeple to put out the fire. Cecil Logan, Brunswick County emergency management coordinator, said the church probably would have burned down if the men hadn't risked their lives.

Owners of another structure weren't so lucky. A house in Leland was a total loss due to fire caused by lightning.

Although firefighters saved another house in Bolivia, one truck had an accident getting to it.

Bolivia firefighters, leaving the church to get to a house fire in the same area, drove through water eight to 10 inches deep. Water splashed over the windshield, obstructing visibility. The truck went off the road and turned on its side.

Other firefighters went on to save the house.

Inspectors Say Excedrin Plant Free Of Cyanide

MORRISVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Federal investigators combed a North Carolina Bristol-Myers plant searching for evidence that cyanide may have been introduced into a pain reliever during the manufacturing process, but found none, officials say.

"We found nothing unusual," Daniel J. Sitko, a U.S. Food and Drug Administration official said Wednesday in Raleigh. "There's nothing to indicate it happened here."

The plant was inspected by the FDA and they did not find any problems, said Robert Gordon, director of the Food and Drug Protection Division of the N.C. Department of Agriculture. "No cyanide is used in any manner in the plant, not in the cleaning process or anything."

Katherine Sue Snow, a banker in Seattle, died June 11 after taking Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules to relieve the pain from persistent headaches. An autopsy revealed that

Ms. Snow, 40, died of acute cyanide poisoning, and the cyanide later was traced to the capsules.

The serial number on the 60-count bottle involved in Ms. Snow's death is 5H102-Aug-88.

The affected bottle was part of a lot made in Morrisville as much as a year ago, Sitko said. He said the Morrisville plant is the only Bristol-Myers facility that produces the capsules.

Scientists at the FDA's Seattle laboratory late Wednesday identified cyanide in a capsule in a second bottle of the product, FDA spokesman William Grigg said. The bottle was of the same lot number as that used by Ms. Snow.

The second bottle was examined because capsules from it were reportedly taken by a Seattle-area man in his early 50s, who was pronounced dead June 5 of natural causes, Grigg said.

FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young said in a statement that consumers should immediately stop using the product until further notice. Later, Bristol-Myers Co., the capsules' maker, said it was withdrawing all Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules from sale immediately nationwide, and joined the FDA in warning consumers to stop taking them.

FDA officials investigating the source of cyanide poisoning in Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules went through the Morrisville plant reviewed production and personnel records and interviewed employees Tuesday and Wednesday, Sitko said.

Gordon said the state's FDA agency will check stores throughout North Carolina to make sure Excedrin capsules aren't being sold.

"I suggest they put them in a safe place and await further instructions," he said.

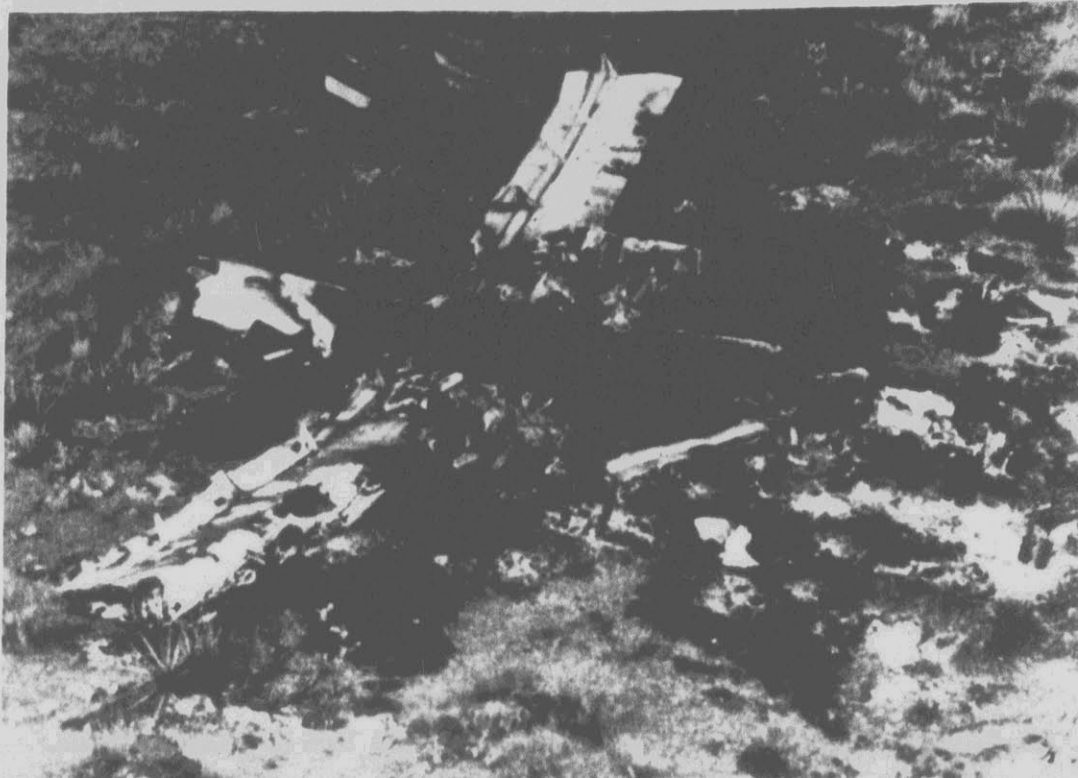

Gordon said all 20 state inspectors were in Raleigh today for a meeting that was scheduled several months ago and had nothing to do with the recent cyanide poisoning.

However, Gordon said he asked all the inspectors to make "spot checks" at various stores in their regional areas to make certain all capsules have been removed from shelves.

"If they find any (capsules) they will be requested to be removed," Gordon said. "We do have the authority to take them off the shelves."

"I have no idea how this could have happened," Gordon said. "Your guess or anybody's guess out on the street is as good as mine at this point."

FDA and Bristol-Myers officials discussed the Morrisville plant in interviews before the FDA late Wednesday said it had detected cyanide in a bottle that contained capsules that had reportedly been taken by a Seattle-area man.

American Freed In South Africa

By The Associated Press

A Durham woman's brother will be returning to the United States on the first available flight after spending four days in a South African jail where he refused to eat prison food but was apparently treated well, his family says.

Jean Daugherty said she thought the pressure of telegrams to President Reagan and phone calls helped bring about the Wednesday release of her brother, Scott Daugherty.

She said she learned of her brother's release about 5:15 p.m. after the State Department called her mother.

"This was the worst day, and it was a very frustrating day, and I didn't expect that phone call at all," Ms. Daugherty said Wednesday night.

Daugherty spoke with his mother and a grandmother who lives in Falls Church, Va., she said.

Ms. Daugherty said the U.S. ambassador "flew to Cape Town, went in (the prison) to negotiate, and walked out with my brother."

"The State Department just confirmed that Scott Daugherty has been released. He's safe, he's in Cape Town, he's in American hands and will be leaving the day after tomorrow," said Lynda Royster, a spokeswoman for Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif.

However, Gordon said he asked all the inspectors to make "spot checks" at various stores in their regional areas to make certain all capsules have been removed from shelves.

"If they find any (capsules) they will be requested to be removed," Gordon said. "We do have the authority to take them off the shelves."

"I have no idea how this could have happened," Gordon said. "Your guess or anybody's guess out on the street is as good as mine at this point."

FDA and Bristol-Myers officials discussed the Morrisville plant in interviews before the FDA late Wednesday said it had detected cyanide in a bottle that contained capsules that had reportedly been taken by a Seattle-area man.

Grand Canyon Collision Kills 25 On Tourist Flights

By PAUL DAVENPORT
Associated Press Writer
GRAND CANYON VILLAGE, Ariz. (AP) — The collision of a helicopter and a twin-engine sightseeing plane over the Grand Canyon that killed 25 people may help end unregulated flights over national parks, a congressman says.

"As is so often the case, it takes a sad tragedy like this to point out the need for some reasonable safeguards," Rep. Richard Lehman, D-Calif., a member of the House Subcommittee on National Parks and Recreation, said of the collision Wednesday morning.

Emergency crews reached the crash site on a sloping shelf one mile from the Colorado River and 2,000 feet above it, and were to begin removing bodies today to a temporary morgue and then to Flagstaff 130 miles away.

The plane's tail section was found roughly one-quarter of a mile away from the rest of the wreckage and probably was sheared off in the collision, said Park Ranger Charlie Peterson, the first to reach the crash site.

The pilots of both craft had been keeping track of other aircraft visually and neither was being tracked by FAA radar, said Larry Bjork of the Federal Aviation Administration's flight service at Prescott.

Those aboard the Grand Canyon Airlines plane included 11 Dutch, two Swiss, one South African and six Americans, said Charles Farrabe, a National Park Service management assistant.

Authorities said the four passengers aboard the helicopter and the pilot were Americans.

Authorities released only the names of the airplane crew — James Ingraham and Bruce Grubb — and helicopter pilot John Thybony. There were no survivors.

Helitech Inc., which owned the five-person Bell 206 helicopter, was new to the area, said Grand Canyon National Park Superintendent Dick Marks.

"They've been open a matter of three weeks, but the pilots have all flown in the area for many years," he said.

Grand Canyon Airlines spokeswoman Mary Donaldson and a spokesman for Helitech both declined comment.

Environmentalists have opposed the more than 50,000 low-level flights over the canyon each year, saying they keep hikers and backpackers from enjoying the grandeur of the park amid natural sights and sounds. Tourism companies counter that mechanized transportation is the only way the infirm and handicapped can experience the same sights.

But Lehman said the crash raises another question, one of public safety.

"It is clear ... that the days of voluntary supervision and self-regulation of these flights are over," said Lehman, whose district includes Yosemite National Park.

He said he wants federal law to prohibit flights over the canyon below a certain altitude. The FAA and the park service have set a floor of 2,000 feet above the canyon rims, but park veterans say it is not enforced.

The park service has rejected proposed limits on days and times of flights around the canyon but is studying proposals to ban planes below the canyon's rim in an effort to reduce noise.

Grand Canyon National Park, which encompasses the most spectacular parts of the canyon, is visited annually by more than 2 million tourists.

Hymns May Be Retained

NEW YORK (AP) — Facing a wave of protests, the United Methodist Church's hymnal revision committee probably will reverse its decision to throw out "Onward, Christian Soldiers" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," a committee staff member said.

Bishop Reuben P. Job of Des Moines, Iowa, head of the committee, said Wednesday it had been swamped with letters, cards and telephone calls objecting to deletion of the two hymns with their marching beat and exhortation to battle for good.

"It's clear the membership of the church wants us to take another look at these hymns," the bishop said.

A special meeting was called for

July 2 in Nashville, Tenn., of the full, 25-member hymnbook revision committee to re-examine its decision to eliminate the two hymns because of their "unrelenting use of military images."

Bill Hickman, a committee staff member, said the meeting likely will nullify the prior action. "The committee had good intentions in deleting the hymns, but it is also trying to be very responsive to pressure," he said, adding that the majority now has mobilized.

He said he considered it "a foregone conclusion the committee members will reverse themselves."

The earlier decision May 17 to delete had passed by a 10-to-8 vote, with six members absent, and the chairman not voting except in a tie. The committee's next regularly scheduled meeting had been set in the fall.

But the special July session was summoned because of the outcry among the 9.4-million-member denomination, which is the third-largest in America after Roman Catholics and Southern Baptists.

Hickman said members protested that "we didn't realize the songs were in reference to spiritual warfare and that we were taking them too literally. Others felt we were pacifist and that they were not pacifist." He said others simply insisted the songs were favorites and wanted them sung.

Study Ranks Southern Cities Best For Blacks

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Black Americans have the best economic prospects if they live on Long Island, N.Y., and tend to fare worst in Buffalo, N.Y., according to a study of the 48 communities with the largest black populations.

But while the top and bottom communities are both in the North, Southern cities tended to rank higher for blacks, while Northern industrial communities didn't fare as well overall, according to the study published in the July editions of American Demographics magazine.

Following Long Island among the five best economic communities for blacks were Miami, Columbia, S.C., Richmond, Va., and Newport News-Hampton, Va., the study by William O'Hare of Washington's Joint Center for Political Studies reported.

Three North Carolina areas included in the survey — Greensboro, Raleigh-Durham and Charlotte-Gastonia — fell in the middle range.

Buffalo, Newark, N.J., Milwaukee, Chicago and Cleveland were the bottom five communities in the ranking published by the magazine, which reports on population and economic statistical trends.

O'Hare's analysis was based on nine economic factors concentrating on income and home ownership comparisons between blacks and whites. He used statistics from the 1980 Census to compare the communities.

While he ranks the 48 metropolitan areas which contain 100,000 blacks or more, O'Hare notes he is only comparing economic conditions.

"Yet quality of life is determined by more than economic considerations, and this preliminary analysis does not prove that Nassau-Suffolk (Long Island) represents the pinnacle of black America," O'Hare says.

"Other factors, such as educational opportunities, the economic base of the metropolitan area, trends in population growth, and the degree of racial segregation also need to be considered before conclusions can be drawn."

"Until this is done, no winner can be declared," he concludes.

Nevertheless, he manages to rank the 48 areas by averaging their placement in each of the nine economic categories he studied.

Nassau-Suffolk — the New York suburban counties on Long Island — had an average placement of 4.7 on those lists, ranking best in five of the nine categories. The average placement for Buffalo was 41.9, although it didn't rank last in any individual category.

Greensboro ranked 16th in the survey at 21.9, while Raleigh-Durham and Charlotte-Gastonia were tied for 26th with a 24.4 ranking.

The categories in which O'Hare compared the metropolitan areas are:

—Median black household income:

nationally, $11,501; highest, Nassau-Suffolk, $18,826; lowest, Mobile, Ala., $8,673.

—Black homeownership rate; nationally, 44.7 percent; highest, Nassau-Suffolk, 61.0 percent; lowest, New York, 18.4 percent.

—Median value of black-owned homes; nationally, $31,594; highest, San Diego, $69,100; lowest, Philadelphia, $17,500.

—Median black household income as a percent of white household income; nationally, 59.1 percent; highest, Nassau-Suffolk, 76.6 percent; lowest, Memphis, 47.4 percent.

—Black homeownership rate as a percent of white; nationally, 66.5 percent; highest, Charleston, S.C., 86.8 percent; lowest, Boston, 41.3 percent.

—Median value of black owned homes as a percent of white; nationally, 58.5 percent; highest, Nassau-Suffolk, 82.4 percent; lowest, Philadelphia, 38.7 percent.

—Difference between white and black median household income; nationally, $7,941; lowest, Tampa-St. Petersburg, $4,765; highest, Newark, N.J., $10,806.

—Percentage point difference between white and black homeownership rate; nationally, 22.2; lowest, Charleston, 8.8; highest, Newark, 36.4.

—Difference between white and black median home value; nationally, $21,806; lowest, Nassau-Suffolk, $9,100; highest, San Francisco-Oakland, $41,900.

House Panel Opens Impeachment Probe For Federal Judge

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warning that the Constitution demands the highest standards of conduct from the nation's jurists, the chairman of a House panel today opened impeachment proceedings against an imprisoned tax evader — U.S. District Judge Harry E. Claiborne of Nevada.

Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on courts, said in a prepared statement that "independence of and respect for the judicial system" is at stake in the proceeding.

Claiborne was scheduled to testify today in closed session, just a month after beginning his two-year prison term at a federal prison camp in Alabama.

Refusing to resign his lifetime position, Claiborne continues to draw his $78,700 salary because the Constitution prohibits reduction of a federal judge's pay while in office.

Kastenmeier called the proceeding historic.

"Based on 200 years of American history and 400 years of English experience ... this is the first time that a convicted federal judge has been the subject of an impeachment inquiry," he said.

According to the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, Claiborne is the first federal judge to be convicted of crimes committed while on the bench, and appears to be the first U.S. judge imprisoned while holding onto his seat.

Kastenmeier noted that the Constitution requires that judges "hold office during good behavior" and provides for removal by impeachment for conviction of treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

"The plain meaning of these constitutional provisions, and several others, is that federal judges must maintain the highest standards of conduct to preserve the independence of and respect for the judicial system," he commented.

The Senate would conduct a trial if the full House voted to approve articles of impeachment against the judge. In effect, the House prepares an indictment; the Senate acts as a trial court. The maximum penalty is removal from office and a ban on ever again holding a federal job.

The last impeachment proceeding was against then-President Nixon in 1974. The Judiciary Committee voted for articles of impeachment, but Nixon resigned before the full House could take action.

The last federal official removed from office through impeachment was federal judge Halsted L. Ritter in 1936.

In an interview with The Associated Press prior to the hearing, Oscar Goodman, Claiborne's attorney, stated, "Under no circumstances will he resign."

Goodman, in a telephone interview Tuesday night, said Claiborne was the victim of a vendetta by Justice Department prosecutors and the FBI in Las Vegas, who disliked the Democratic judge. Claiborne often criticized government agents and prosecutors publicly for their investigations of him and their work on other cases.

"There's got to be someplace in this country where a wrong can be righted. If it has to be on the floor of the Senate, so be it," Goodman said.

The judge was indicted in December 1983 on charges of income tax evasion and taking a bribe. The jury, in Reno, couldn't reach a verdict.

The bribery charges were dropped on a second trial, also held in Reno, which resulted in a conviction in August 1984.

The jury found the judge guilty on two counts of income tax evasion for failing to report some $108,000 in legal fees — earned as a defense attorney — on his 1979 and 1980 returns. In addition to the two-year sentence, Claiborne was fined $10,000.

Thurmond Proposes Automatic Removal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee is proposing a constitutional amendment that would remove convicted felons from federal jobs without the impeachment process.

"When the courts of the nation have found an official guilty of a serious crime, it should not be necessary for Congress to re-try the case in order to remove that official ...," Sen. Strom Thurmond said Wednesday in a statement accompanying introduction of his proposal.

Under the impeachment process, certain federal officials can only be removed by Congress. The House must first approve articles of impeachment — similar to an indictment — and the Senate then conducts a trial.

These impeachment powers would not be altered by Thurmond's language, but their use would be unnecessary after a felony conviction — because removal would be automatic after all appeals were exhausted.

The South Carolina Republican said "convicted felons should not occupy positions of trust in our government," and added that when they refuse to resign, "it is a slap in the face of the American people for them to remain on the federal payroll."

If the plan is approved, a process that could take seven years, it would apply to cases similar to that of U.S. District Judge Harry E. Claiborne of Nevada.

Claiborne was convicted of tax evasion and is in prison, but he has refused to resign and continues to draw his yearly $78,700 salary. The House Judiciary subcommittee on courts plans was to begin the impeachment process today, with a hearing to determine whether grounds for removal from office exist.

Article II, Section 4 of the Constitution states, "The president, vice president, and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors."

Thurmond's amendment would apply to any official appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate who has been convicted of a felony and exhausted all appeals. The official automatically would "forfeit office and all prerogatives, benefits, or compensation ..."

President To Get Another Checkup

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is expected to spend part of Friday at Bethesda Naval Hospital undergoing tests to see if the colon cancer for which he was operated on last year has recurred.

The president is expected to enter the hospital at midday Friday, be released later in the day and fly for the weekend to Camp David, the presidential retreat in the nearby Maryland mountains, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Wednesday.

It will be Reagan's third hospital checkup since undergoing successful surgery for colon cancer nearly a year ago.

Speakes said he assumed Reagan would have a thorough examination of his colon, as well as other post-operative tests, to determine whether there has been any recurrence of cancer.

But Speakes, who has been extremely guarded about details of the president's health since his operation, said he did not know precisely what procedures would be performed.

After the president's intestinal tumor was discovered and removed last July 13, doctors said he should have periodic examinations, including X-rays, blood tests and semi-annual colonoscopies to guard against recurrence or spread of the disease.

FBI Finds Man Wanted 18 Years

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The most elusive fugitive in the history of the FBI's Most Wanted list has been found, but a prosecutor says the case is difficult because of the passage of time since the 1968 shooting deaths of two police officers.

"It will be difficult to round up the witnesses for an 18-year-old case," said Thomas Shriver, district attorney of Nashville, Tenn., where the killings occurred. "I assume none of them live at the same addresses."

Charles Lee Herron, 49, who was arrested without incident Wednesday in Jacksonville, was sought for murder, assault with intent to commit murder and interstate flight, the FBI said.

The slain Nashville officers, Thomas Johnson and Charles Thomasson, were fatally wounded by a high-powered rifle as they approached a parked car.

News accounts at the time — less than three months before civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated in Memphis — said the two fugitives and three other suspects in the case were black-power advocates.

William Garrin Allen II, Ralph Canaday and Steve Parker were arrested and sentenced to 99 years each in prison for the shootings. John W. Alexander pleaded guilty to manslaughter and was eventually paroled. Herron was never captured, until Wednesday.

Canaday, Parker and Allen escaped from a Tennessee prison by walking away from a prison picnic in 1974. Canaday, 46, was captured April 1 on drug charges but killed himself in Baltimore after his arrest; Parker remains at large.

Allen, 40, was arrested Tuesday in Jacksonville when a clerk became suspicious of him when he applied for a driver's license under an alias. The next day, Herron was arrested by FBI agents and a strategic tactical weapons squad who surrounded a house that he shared with Allen and Allen's wife.

"Herron went on the top 10 list in February of 1968, and he holds the record of being on the FBI's top 10 list the longest of any fugitive," said FBI Agent Verne Gauby in the agency's Nashville bureau.

The "10 Most Wanted" list, begun in 1950, is used by the FBI to publicize fugitives who are considered so dangerous as to pose an immediate risk, or who elude capture for a long period of time, or both.

Allen was being held in the Duval County Jail, while Herron was held without bond after a hearing at U.S. District Court.

Maintaining streams and waterways on the City's storm drainage system is one of the responsibilities of the Public Works Department.

Scientists Say 'Stars Wars' Could Escalate Arms Race

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1,600 scientists at top government and industrial laboratories warned Congress today that the Reagan administration is trying to boost "Star Wars" spending too quickly and is thereby risking "a significant escalation of the arms race."

Many of those who signed the letter work at laboratories engaged in Star Wars research, including the government's Livermore, Sandia and Los Alamos laboratories, and at private defense contractors such as Boeing, Bell, Raytheon and the Lincoln Laboratory at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Star Wars, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, "has grown into a major program without the technical and policy scrutiny appropriate to an undertaking of this magnitude. We therefore feel that we must speak out now," the scientists said in a letter to Congress.

The letter was delivered to a news conference sponsored by Sens. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Dan Evans, R-Wash., who have put together a bipartisan coalition of 48 senators opposing further increases in the SDI budget. The coalition is three members short of an absolute majority in the Republican-controlled Senate.

Reagan has said the United States should develop the Star Wars technologies to decide in the early 1990s whether to deploy such a system, which is envisioned as a space-based defense against ballistic missile attacks.

Last year, the administration asked Congress to approve $3.77 billion in Pentagon spending on SDI, and nearly $400 million by the Energy Department. Congress approved $2.76 for the Pentagon and $282 million for the Energy Department.

This year, the administration is seeking $4.8 billion in SDI spending by the Pentagon, and $606 million for the Energy Department, a total of $5.4 billion.

But the House Armed Services Committee staff is proposing just $3.1 billion for SDI, and the Senate Armed Services Committee is considering a proposal to cut Reagan's request to $4.6 billion, according to congressional sources speaking Wednesday only on condition of anonymity.

Evans, noting that Congress has appropriated $5.5 billion for SDI research since 1984, said, "I do not believe that we will continue to have a responsible, manageable research effort if we elect to spend as much in the next year on SDI as we have spent in the last three years."

"A highly accelerated research program will inevitably result in waste, overburdened management and incomplete technical scrutiny," he said.

The scientists and senators did not call for a total halt in research on technologies which might be used in a defense system such as Star Wars, but urged what Johnston called "a realistic program."

The scientists said that "the stated goal of SDI is developing the means to render nuclear weapons 'impotent and obsolete,'" as President Reagan declared in a March 1983 speech that launched the program.

"We believe that the realization of this dream is not feasible in the foreseeable future," said the scientists, who include three Nobel laureates and are drawn from 26 government and 70 industrial labs.

"The more limited goal of developing partial defenses against ballistic missiles does not fundamentally alter the current policy of deterrence, yet it represents a significant escalation of the arms race and runs the serious risk of jeopardizing existing arms control treaties and future negotiations," the letter said.

One of the movement organizers, J. Carson Mark, who directed nuclear weapons design at the Los Alamos lab in New Mexico until his retirement in 1973, said in an accompanying statement: "It is almost certainly a much simpler technical task to counter an SDI system than to establish a fault-free system in the first place."

Another organizer, John Backus, who devised the computer language, Fortran, said a computer program to operate a Star Wars defense would be "vast, complex and subject to errors; to be reliable, it must first be tested in millions of real-world situations."

"I consider it impossible to produce a completely reliable battle program," Backus said.

Daniel Fisher, an organizer of the petition drive, said SDI "has aroused an unprecedented level of concern among the scientific and technical community in this country. ... Yet the administration does not seem to have listened to the very engineers and scientists upon whom President Reagan called to lead the effort to develop a shield against nuclear attack."

Tax-Break Amendments Delay Vote On Reforms

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's effort to approve the most thorough revision of the federal tax code in a generation was delayed today by a last-minute flurry of amendments to grant special tax breaks.

The 10th day of Senate debate on the landmark measure began with legislators scrambling to try to have amendments protecting special interests attached to the bill before it is finally passed.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., the assistant majority leader, said congressional staffers, busy pushing riders for their bosses, had "shoveled their amendments through the back door."

Predictions of when there will be a final vote on the legislation drafted by the Senate Finance Committee have slipped all week as legislators sought support for their particular amendments. Simpson suggested that a final vote may not come until early next week.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., becoming increasingly frustrated at the pace of activity, said watching the Senate was "like watching paint dry."

He also noted that at 8 p.m. Wednesday, about 20 amendments were pending. Senate debate droned on through the evening and by 11:20 p.m., Dole announced that "50 some" amendments were pending.

The number grew as the Senate remained in session past midnight for the second night in a row.

By this morning, Simpson was using a figure of 120.

Simpson said the legislation had become infected by "the yes-but syndrome," with legislators saying, "yes," they like the bill, "but" they want to change something about it.

Nonetheless, Simpson said the health of the tax bill was robust. "It will not sink," he said.

In general, the bill would compress more than a dozen individual tax rates into two rates: 27 percent and 15 percent. The top individual rate is now 50 percent.

It also would cut the top corporate rate of 46 percent to 33 percent. Small businesses would pay as little as 15 percent.

In addition, the legislation would end an array of popular tax breaks for individuals and businesses.

Ever since the Senate first took up the measure, Senate leaders have predicted the legislation would pass with nothing short of a unanimous vote.

The last major obstacle to passage of the bill was cleared Wednesday when the Senate voted 71-29 to kill an amendment by Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, to collect more from wealthy taxpayers to increase the tax cut for middle-income people.

Mitchell said he offered the amendment to change the tax rates in the legislation to "fulfill the missing promise" of the legislation "by extending to middle-income taxpayers the real tax relief which the bill promises to all, but delivers only to the rich and the poor."

Mitchell was seeking to change the rate structure in the bill by adding a new top rate of 35 percent for the wealthiest taxpayers and using the additional revenue to finance a bigger tax cut for middle-income people.

However, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Finance Committee, argued that Mitchell's amendment would unravel the bill and defeat the overhaul effort.

"This is the most extraordinary piece of tax-reform legislation since the initial code was passed in 1913," Packwood said. "And if we adopt the amendment of the senator from Maine, we will be starting right back up the stairs of escalating rates and increased privileges and escalating rates and increased privileges."

After that amendment fell and final passage was in sight, the race was on to attach amendments.

The Senate approved by voice vote an amendment offered by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., that would allow The Associated Press to make an accounting change to enable the not-for-profit news cooperative to consolidate income for tax purposes.

Under present tax-accounting rules, the AP cannot consolidate gains and losses from separate components.

Mayors Want To Keep Local Tax Sources Safe

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) —

The nation's big-city mayors have concluded their annual meeting with a call for Congress not to tamper with local tax sources in a federal tax overhaul and to write that protection into the U.S. Constitution.

The U.S. Conference of Mayors wrapped up its convention Wednesday without visible partisanship that had been seen in some earlier meetings.

The mayors unanimously adopted a policy statement aimed at maintaining the federal income tax deduction for all state and local taxes, including sales taxes, which tax legislation in the Senate would eliminate.

The mayors' resolution, sponsored by a Republican, Mayor Richard Berkley of Kansas City, Mo., also urges that Congress submit to the states a constitutional amendment saying a full deduction must be available for all state and local taxes.

The mayors adopted a range of other statements on urban policy, some calling for renewed federal involvement in urban problems, with virtually no dissent.

Mayor Joseph Riley of Charleston, S.C., president of the conference, said it was a departure from previous gatherings of the mayors that saw Republican and Democratic mayors divided over the response to Reagan administration budget-cutting.

Reductions Expected In Research Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate panels writing next year's Pentagon budgets are likely to approve large reductions in President Reagan's request for "Star Wars" anti-missile research, congressional sources say.

The panels were working again today to try to come up with a defense spending blueprint for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. Spending for the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is formally known, is likely to be a key target, the sources said.

Reagan sought $5.4 billion for Star Wars next year, compared with the current budget of about $3 billion. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger was scheduled to appear today before the Senate Appropriations defense subcommittee to discuss the Pentagon budget.

The House Armed Services Committee staff has proposed $3.1 billion for Star Wars next year, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity. The decisions taken this week by the panel's subcommittees will be voted on next week by the full committee.

The Senate Armed Services panel is considering a proposal one of its subcommittees passed last week to cut Star Wars spending to $4.6 billion.

The full committee voted 10-9 Wednesday against approving that budget amid indications it may approve a lower figure, the sources said. One pending proposal would reduce the program to $3.8 billion and use the extra $600 million for non-nuclear weapons programs.

A total of 48 senators have signed a letter urging that Star Wars spending next year be limited to a 3 percent increase above the expected inflation rate.

Reagan and top administration officials have appealed to Congress not to cut the Star Wars budget, arguing that the money is needed to try to develop a shield against nuclear attack. The Soviets are working hard on such a system, they have argued.

Whatever the panels approve will eventually be passed separately later this summer by the Democratic-run House and the Republican-controlled Senate and then reconciled by a conference committee.

Overall, Reagan wanted $320 billion for defense spending, but the House has approved a budget blueprint proposing $285 billion for the Pentagon while the Senate's version calls for $301 billion.

While the panels write next year's budget, the Pentagon said Wednesday that it will begin preparing its budget requests on two-year cycles rather than a single year like the rest of the federal government.

"Two-year budgeting ... should bring much needed stability to defense planning," said Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV.

Reagan Returns To Summit City To Outline Objectives

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, still jockeying with Mikhail Gorbachev over plans for a summit meeting, will offer a "realistic statement" on U.S.-Soviet relations tonight in a New Jersey town where two of their predecessors gave the world a lesson in instant summitry 19 years ago this month.

White House officials say there will be no announcement about a summit meeting, but Reagan says he will discuss "the future of peace and freedom" in an address to graduating seniors at Glassboro, N.J., high school.

Aides say the president will outline his arms control objectives in his commencement address in the high school gymnasium.

The school is across the street from Glassboro State College, where President Lyndon B. Johnson and Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin met on June 23 and 25, 1967.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said today the speech would be "a realistic statement of the president's view of U.S.-Soviet relations at this point."

He said Reagan, who has insisted that summit meetings be well prepared for in advance, "is interested in making more progress with the Soviets than was made at Glassboro."

"It's not very far away and it has historic significance, and we thought it might be a nice backdrop to talk once again about arms control and the future," said Dale Petroskey, assistant White House press secretary.

The Johnson-Kosygin summit was whipped up in record time, in sharp contrast to the prolonged indecision over when and whether there will be a Reagan-Gorbachev summit in the United States this year, as agreed by the two leaders last November in Geneva.

Reagan has suggested a meeting of top U.S. and Soviet advisers on a variety of topics, including preparations for the summit, but White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that Soviet leader Gorbachev has not responded.

After Reagan and Gorbachev met in Geneva and agreed on summits in the United States this year and the Soviet Union next year, U.S. officials let it be known they would like to meet in June. The Soviets proposed a fall meeting instead, but the United States said this was too close to the U.S. elections.

Despite continuing efforts, Speakes said there has been "no high-level, straightforward signal from the Soviets regarding a summit."

There were disagreements in 1967 also, but they were settled with the help of some map study in the presidential bedroom.

Kosygin was in the United States to attend an emergency session of the United Nations General Assembly dealing with Israeli-Arab warfare.

Murderer Executed In Texas

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 37-year-old convicted killer was put to death by injection early today for the 1974 shooting death of a Houston convenience store clerk despite pleas from the victim's father and a prosecutor.

"Naw, I'm ready," said Kenneth Albert Brock of Houston when asked if he had any final words before the lethal drugs flowed through his veins.

"Take care of yourself Bob, Nancy," he told his sister and brother-in-law, who were his personal witnesses. "Thanks."

Bob Dodson gave the 37-year-old inmate a thumbs up as he entered the death chamber.

After taking a deep breath, Brock said, "OK, bye."

"Kenneth, I love you," Nancy Dodson told her brother.

"I know," he replied.

After receiving the injection, Brock, wearing his glasses, took about eight deep breaths and snored before becoming silent.

Mrs. Dodson called for Brock three times as she leaned against a rail, crying softly and holding a tissue in her hand while her husband put his arm around her.

"Kenneth, can you hear me?" she asked.

Doctors pronounced him dead at 12:18 a.m., eight minutes after the last of the lethal solution was injected into his right arm.

Brock was convicted in the May 21, 1974, shooting death of 31-year-old Michael Sedita, a manager of a northeast Houston 7-Eleven convenience store.

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles on Tuesday refused to commute Brock's death penalty to life imprisonment. Gov. Mark White on Wednesday also refused to grant a 30-day reprieve.

"Killing Kenneth Brock is wrong. It will not change what has happened to my son," Joseph M. Sedita, the victim's father, told the board in a sworn statement Tuesday.

"Killing Kenneth Brock will not ease my suffering or my wife's suffering or the loss of Michael," he added. "Two wrongs don't make a right. I could not be at peace if Kenneth Brock dies."

Former Harris County District Attorney George Jacobs, who prosecuted the case 11 years ago, had asked the parole board to revoke Brock's sentence, saying the man did not deserve to die.

Brock, a Marine deserter, took Sedita hostage into nearby woods after a police officer saw him robbing the store, said Jacobs, who is now in private practice in Houston.

Jacobs said the gun may have gone off accidentally because of a hair trigger.

"If he felt that death was not an appropriate penalty at the time, maybe he shouldn't have tried it as a death penalty case," said Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr.

Pentagon To Offer Private Health Care To Dependents

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, responding to the same cost pressures that forced an overhaul of Medicare, is turning to private contractors to provide health care to military families and retirees.

The initiative, outlined to Congress Wednesday, calls for the selection of regional contractors who would be responsible for dispensing health care to the more than 6 million military dependents and retirees for a set annual fee.

The Pentagon believes it can bring skyrocketing medical costs under control with the new system because contractors will lose money if they fail to control expenses and exceed their contractual payment.

The new system will also seek to improve the benefits and reduce the fees paid by beneficiaries under the Pentagon's existing health insurance plan. But to do so, retirees and dependents will have to use the contractor's doctors and hospitals rather than civilian physicians of their own choosing.

As it stands now, the nation's 2.1 million active-duty personnel are entitled to free medical care at military hospitals. Military facilities are also available to dependents and retirees when space is available. Roughly 75 percent of the medical care given dependents and retirees is provided at military facilities.

The remaining 25 percent of care is dispensed by civilian doctors or hospitals, however, and the tab paid by the user and a health insurance plan known as CHAMPUS — the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services.

Under CHAMPUS, dependents and retirees must pay $50 or $100 annual deductibles plus either 20 percent or 25 percent of their medical bill.

Under the new system, dependents and retirees will be asked to enroll in a "CHAMPUS Prime" program under which they will be relieved of virtually all fees while receiving additional benefits, such as free regular check-ups.

In return, however, the 6.2 million individuals eligible to use CHAMPUS would have to agree to use the private physicians or civilian hospitals lined up by the contractor for his regional "preferred provider network."

The new system would not force a dependent or retiree to enroll, nor would it change the right of dependents and retirees to use military hospitals as they do now on a "space-available" basis. But if an individual did not enroll and could not gain admittance to a military hospital, he would have to continue to shoulder part of his own medical bill.

The Pentagon's outline of its plans, circulated to Congress, concludes the current CHAMPUS system is so flawed that "basic structural reform (is needed) to achieve better coordination, improved access, contained costs, assured quality and simplified procedures."

CHAMPUS is now handling almost 6 million medical claims a year and its cost to taxpayers will exceed $1.6 billion this year.

N.C. BROILER-FRYERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 57.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. The market is higher and the live supply is adequate for a very good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,880,000, compared to 1,738,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 1 cent higher at mostly 2.68-2.78 in the East and mostly 2.85-2.90 in the Piedmont. No. 1 yellow soybeans 3 cents higher at mostly 5.28-5.48 in the East and mostly 5.21-5.32 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 2.39-2.54. New crop - corn 1.86-2.01, beans - 4.67-5.02.

NEW YORK (AP) - Stocks were mixed in morning trading today, extending the market's recent sluggish performance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 3.16 at 1,865.78 by noon on Wall Street.

Losers overall held more than a 7-6 lead over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange, and Big Board volume totaled 52.52 million shares compared with 52.71 million at that hour Wednesday. Auto, mining, drug and financial issues led the declines.

The Commerce Department said today U.S. personal income in May slipped a seasonally adjusted 0.1 percent from the previous month after jumping 1.2 percent in April. However, the agency also said consumer spending - which accounts for a major portion of the GNP - shot up 0.9 percent last month. It was the biggest gain in five months and economists said it might indicate the economy is building steam in the second quarter.

Chromalloy American jumped 2 1/2 to 23 1/2 and led the NYSE's active list. Sun Chemical said it seeking to acquire the 64 percent of Chromalloy it does not already own.

Safeway Stores, which faces a takeover threat from Dart Group, fell 1/2 to 49.

In the technology sector, which has been battered in recent sessions, Digital Equipment climbed 3/8 to 84 1/2, Tandy fell 1/8 to 39 1/2 and Motorola gained 3/8 to 38 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost 0.26 to 140.37. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.30 to 280.91.

The family will receive friends at Farmer Funeral Home from 7-9 p.m. today. In lieu of flowers, donations may be given to Timothy Christian Church.

White House Urges Rejection Of Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House today urged the House and Senate to reject a compromise worked out by their negotiators that would spend roughly $4 billion to keep several federal agencies running through the end of the fiscal year.
 The agreement, reached late Wednesday in conference committee, still must be endorsed by both houses of Congress before being sent to President Reagan for signature.

Designed to fill the coffers of several agencies and programs that have already or soon will run out of money, the measure contains some additional provisions as well.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said today the administration "still has serious problems with the bill" as agreed upon by the conferees.

He said President Reagan's advisers would recommend a veto unless at least some of the provisions the White House finds objectionable are removed.

The spokesman cited as examples the change in formulas for awarding Urban Development Action Grants, a special relief measure for Rural Electric cooperatives and a prohibition against the government's sale of the Federal Power Marketing Administration.

"The president would like to see these provisions changed," Speakes said, adding that compromise is still possible that could make the package "more palatable to the president" if either the House or Senate rejects the conference report and sends the conferees back to the negotiating table.

The bill includes $3.8 million to pay federal court juries so that already-delayed civil trials can resume; operating authority, at least through

Sutton Claims 300th Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

By hook or by crook, Don Sutton has joined baseball's select circle of 300-game winners.

"I've been trying legally ... and illegally ... to get here for years," the 41-year-old right-hander, who often has been accused of doctoring the ball, said Wednesday night after earning his pitching doctorate and becoming the 19th 300-game winner in major-league history. He tossed a three-hitter as the California Angels beat the Texas Rangers 5-1.

In his second try for No. 300, Sutton did not issue a walk and struck out three in handing the Rangers their fifth consecutive setback and slicing their lead in the American League West to one-half game over the Angels.

He retired 15 batters in a row at one stretch and the only Texas hits were by rookies — singles by Ruben Sierra in the second and eighth innings and Pete Incaviglia's homer in the seventh.

"What it means is that I just stayed around 21 years to win 300," said Sutton, 300-233 in his career and 5-5 this season. He got his first victory for the Los Angeles Dodgers against the Houston Astros on April 18, 1966, and collected 230 victories with the Dodgers from 1966-1980. He won 24 with the Astros, 26 with the Milwaukee Brewers and 13 with the Oakland A's before coming to the Angels late last season and splitting four decisions.

In other AL games, Oakland edged Kansas City 1-0, Boston trimmed New York 5-2, Detroit downed Baltimore 6-1, Minnesota outslugged Chicago 10-9 in 10 innings, Milwaukee beat Toronto 3-1 and Cleveland stopped Seattle 5-1.

The Angels gave Sutton a 3-0 lead in the first inning against Texas' Jose Guzman. Leadoff hitter Gary Pettis walked and eventually scored on a groundout and Rob Wilfong singled home a pair of runs. California's other runs were homers by Ruppert Jones in the fifth and Brian Downing in the seventh.

In addition to owning 300 career wins, Sutton ranks ninth on the all-time shutout list with 58, sixth in strikeouts with 3,363 and 11th with 4,872 2-3 innings pitched. He also has struck out 100 or more in 20 consecutive seasons, the only pitcher ever to accomplish that feat.

Sutton said it would probably take some time for him to really appreciate reaching the 300-win milestone, explaining: "I'll probably have to take it in and roll it around inside for a while before I really realize. That's the way I am."

But he said it "was hard to remain unemotional" during a standing ovation by the Anaheim crowd of 37,044 throughout the ninth inning, calling it "the nicest, sweetest roar I've ever heard."

Asked if he was ready to disclose whether he's guilty of long-standing allegations that he doctors the baseball, Sutton grinned and said: "I didn't die when I got 300. I still have to go back out there and pitch again. Three hundred's not terminal."

A's 1, Royals 0

Dave Kingman's second-inning homer, his 15th of the season and 422nd of his career, enabled Curt Young to win a battle of four-hitters from Bret Saberhagen.

The Royals got their leadoff batter on base in six innings but did not get a runner past second base until the eighth when Mike Brewer doubled and was sacrificed to third but was out at the plate on Lonnie Smith's grounder to shortstop Alfredo Griffin. Young, a left-hander, who began the season in the minors, struck out two and walked two.

Red Sox 5, Yankees 2

Don Baylor, traded from New York in March, ripped a tie-breaking three-run double with one out in the ninth inning and Boston completed a three-game sweep behind Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd's eight-hit pitching. Baylor's double came on a 3-2 pitch after he fouled off four consecutive pitches from Brian Fisher, who relieved Bob Shirley with runners on second and third and one out.

The loss was the fourth straight for the Yankees, their longest losing streak of the season, and was their seventh straight setback at Yankee Stadium — longest since May 1974 — where they are 17-17 after a 58-22 home record a year ago. They trail first-place Boston by 6½ games in the American League East.

New York's Ken Griffey, who was fined $10,000 earlier in the day for missing Tuesday night's game, homered with two out in the sixth to tie the game.

"We beat them on their home ground and broke their spirit," said Boyd. "Now I think we're going to win."

Tigers 6, Orioles 1

Rookie Eric King pitched a five-hitter for the first complete game of his major-league career and Larry Herndon hit a two-run homer. The Tigers had lost 12 of 16 games before winning three straight over the Orioles, who have dropped eight of their last 10. King walked two and struck out 10 in his third major-league start.

Loser Scott McGregor was working on a one-hitter when a throwing error by second baseman Alan Wiggins allowed Tom Brookens to reach base with one out in the fifth. Herndon followed with his fourth home run of the season and Lou Whitaker and Lance Parrish added RBI singles.

"It can't be easy when I'm sweating out there," said King, who lowered his ERA to 2.03.

Twins 10, White Sox 9

Minnesota tied the game with four runs in the bottom of the ninth on Kent Hrbek's two-run homer — his second home run of the game — and Mickey Hatcher's two-run pinch single, then won it on Steve Lombardozzi's 10th-inning triple. Kirby Puckett opened the 10th with a single off Gene Nelson. After failing to sacrifice, Lombardozzi slammed a hard grounder down the third-base line that rolled into the left-field corner as Puckett steamed home.

The White Sox had built a 9-5 lead as Ron Kittle homered twice and stole home on the front end of a double steal.

Brewers 3, Blue Jays 1

Rookie Mike Felder drove in two runs with his first major-league homer and Teddy Higuera scattered eight hits. Higuera struck out eight to give him 98, second in the AL. His eight complete games leads the league. He gave up a run in the first inning on Cliff Johnson's double but Felder put the Brewers ahead in the third when he homered off Jim Clancy after Charlie Moore walked. Clancy left the game after the homer because of a cramp in his left hamstring.

Indians 5, Mariners 1

Ken Schrom allowed three hits in seven innings and Brett Butler doubled, tripled and scored twice as Cleveland snapped Seattle's four-game winning streak. Schrom struck out four and walked three before leaving with a strained Achilles tendon. He allowed a solo homer by Phil Bradley and singles by John Moses and Danny Tartabull.

With the score tied 1-1 in the fifth, Butler tripled off loser Jim Beattie and scored on Tony Bernazard's grounder. Butler then led off the seventh with a double and Andre Thornton walked before Mel Hall doubled to score both runners. Rookie Cory Snyder homered in the eighth off Mark Huisman.

Len Bias Dead Of Heart Attack

RIVERDALE, Md. (AP) — Len Bias, the 22-year-old University of Maryland basketball star drafted Tuesday by the National Basketball Association's Boston Celtics, died suddenly early today after suffering an apparent heart attack, a hospital official said.

Bias was brought to Leland Memorial Hospital, outside Washington, at 6:50 a.m. after suffering cardio-respiratory arrest, said Frank Berry, a spokesman at Leland Memorial Hospital. He was pronounced dead at 8:50 a.m.

Bias was brought to the hospital in an ambulance, said Berry.

Jack Zane, the University of Maryland's sports information officer, said Bias was stricken ill at his campus dormitory. He said his teammates summoned help.

Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell and members of the team also went to the hospital, Zane said.

Bias was the second man chosen in the first round of the NBA draft.

A two-time Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year for Maryland, the 6-foot-8 forward averaged 23.2 points during his senior, All-American season.

Shortly after the draft Tuesday, Bias, and his father, James, left New York for Boston and a chance to meet the Celtics media. The trip forced postponement of a celebration party for Bias and his family at their Lan-dover home.

Bias is the third University of Maryland basketball player to die suddenly, either while still a student or shortly after graduating, in about the last 12 years, Zane said.

In 1974, about a year after he graduated, Owen Brown died while playing in a pickup game. Also during the mid-1970s, Chris Patton, while still enrolled at Maryland, died after being stricken ill while playing basketball near Byrd Stadium, said Zane. Both were found to be suffering from Marfan's Syndrome.

RALEIGH (AP) — Shock waves

Len Bias

went through the Atlantic Coast Conference today after Maryland basketball star Len Bias died of an apparent heart attack.

"I just heard and I am absolutely shocked, said ACC Commissioner Bob James. "It's just a tragic development."

"It's just a terrible, terrible loss," James said.

"Here's a young man who obviously was a tremendous physical specimen," James added. "No one would ever believe he could have any problems like that."

"He was absolutely a marvelous athlete," James added.

Wake Forest Sports Information Director John Justus said he thought someone who called his office with the news was joking. "I thought it was a prank," he said. "This is just unbelievable. I can't believe it."

ECU Names Third Aide

John McCullough has been named as an assistant to East Carolina basketball coach Charlie Harrison in an announcement made Thursday by school officials.

McCullough joins the Pirate coaching staff after serving as an assistant at Southern Methodist under head coach Dave Bliss last season.

McCullough was an all-Big 8 performer at the University of Oklahoma in the late 1970's and was the Sooners' Most Valuable Player in 1979. Harrison was serving as an assistant coach at Oklahoma during part of McCullough's career.

The Lima, Ohio, native was a fourth-round draft choice by the Kansas City Kings in 1979, and he played for two seasons in the NBA with the Phoenix Suns. He also played professionally in France prior to returning to this country to begin his coaching career at SMU.

"John's successful playing experience on the college and professional levels will lend much credibility to his work with our players," Harrison said. "He has an extremely sharp basketball mind and will now be able to fully concentrate on using his talents as a coach."

McCullough will join full-time assistants Lee Talbot and Stan Lewter on Harrison's 1986-87 coaching staff.

Big Sixth Inning Gives Post 39 11-6 Victory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Eric Jarman banged out a triple and Fred Bryant and David Daniels each collected doubles in a five-run sixth inning that allowed Pitt County's American Legion baseball team to gain an 11-6 win over Edenton Wednesday night.

The victory, coupled with Wilson's upset of Rocky Mount, tightened up the Area I East standings. Rocky Mount still leads with a 6-3 record while Pitt County climbs to 7-4 on the season.

Jarman and Bryant each finished the game with three hits, one of Bryant's a home run, with Bryant, Lee Hardee and Daniels each driving in two runs.

Edenton, which had beaten Pitt in the last meeting between the two, elected to go again with Tom Ward, who had thrown a two-hitter at Post 39 in that game.

But this time, after getting just one in the first three innings, Pitt erupted for a total of 12 hits while Mike Burnham scattered eight in going the distance for the win.

Errors again were a factor in the game. Pitt committed five, which helped Edenton score three unearned runs. Edenton made five also, and three of the Pitt runs were also unearned.

There was no question about the status of the first run of the game, however. That came on a solid homer to left field off the bat of Edenton's Alex Cox, putting Post 40 into a 1-0 lead in the second inning.

Pitt rallied for a pair of runs in the fourth to take the lead for the first time, 2-1. Hardee led off by reaching when his fly to left was dropped. Bryant followed with an infield hit, then moved up a base when the ball was overthrown at first. Hardee came all the way around with the tying run on the play. Bryant moved to third on an out and scored on Bronswell Patrick's sacrifice fly.

Edenton came right back to score four times in the top of the fifth, moving into a 5-2 lead. Robert James led off with a double to right center and with one away, Ward singled to center, driving in James. Brad Hurdle reached on an error and both runners moved up on a passed ball. They both scored when Todd Hunter, son of former big-leaguer Jim "Catfish" Hunter, doubled to left. His ball hit the top of the fence and bounced back in, coming that close to a homer. Brian Bunch walked and Erie Downing singled to load the bases. Cox hit into a fielder's choice that scored Hunter with the fifth Edenton run.

Pitt immediately rallied for three to tie it up. Jarman doubled to center and scored on Hardee's single. Bryant then cracked a two-run homer to left.

Edenton eased back out, 6-5, with a run in the top of the sixth. With one out, Kenny Nixon reached on an error and stole second. He moved on to third when the ball was thrown away on the steal, scoring when Ward reached on still another error. Ward stole up and also moved to third on an overthrow, but a strikeout and a grounder ended the threat.

Pitt then put the game away with five runs in the sixth. Patrick led off with a single. When a pickoff attempt went awry, he raced to third and then scored on a wild pitch.

Burnham kept it going with a walk, scoring on Jarman's hit to center. The fielder attempted a diving catch but the ball got past him and Jarman finished with a triple. Hardee singled him in and moved to third on Bryant's double. Both of them scored when Daniels followed with a double to right. He was thrown out, however, trying to stretch it to a triple.

The final run scored in the seventh. With two outs, Larke Wetherington walked and Burnham reached on an error. Jarman beat out a high hopper to first, but Burnham got hung up between second and third. As he was being chased down, Wetherington raced home, just ahead of the tag to score the 11th run.

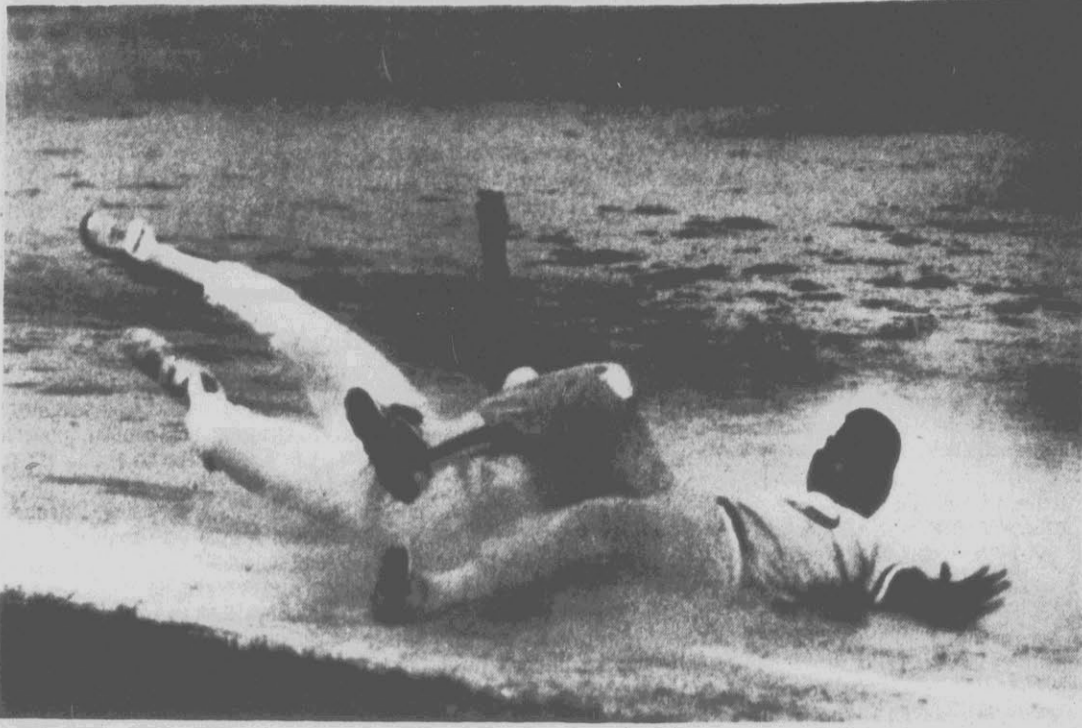

Edenton falls to 4-4 with the loss. Pitt County plays for the fourth straight night tonight, traveling to Wayne County.

Quad County Teams Do Not Fare Well In Wachovia Cup

Members of the Quad-County area fared poorly in the annual Wachovia Cup awards program this year, with only one of the area schools, and just two conference members in all, placing in the top ten for the 1985-86 school year.

The Wachovia Cup is awarded annually to the top school in each of the four classifications of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. The award symbolized excellence in overall sports programs at individual schools, with points awarded both for participation and for placing in state tournaments and playoffs.

All schools which place in the top eight positions and ties receive bonus points. In sports where two or more classifications participate together, points are awarded as if they participated separately.

Fifty points are awarded for first place, 45 for second, with 40, 35, 30, 25, 20 and 15 on through eighth place. Where teams tie, the points are added together and each team receives an equal share of the total.

Each school also receives five points for each sport it participates in. For example, Rose High School participated in all 18 sanctioned sports, receiving 90 points for that.

Washington High School, a member of the 3-A Coastal Conference, was the only school in the Quad-County area to place this year. Washington tied with High Point Central and Statesville for fourth place among the 3-A schools with a total of 230 points. Washington placed strongly in girls' basketball and also advanced to the Eastern finals in baseball as well as fielding a strong girls' track team.

Roanoke Rapids, a member of the 2-A Northeastern Conference, was the only other team in the area covered by leagues in the area to place. Roanoke Rapids finished fourth in its division with a total of 230 points.

Hendersonville won the 1-A classification with a total of 372½ points while Lejeune was second with 205. Swansboro finished third with 200.

Salisbury won the 2-A race with 262½ points. Lexington was second at 245 followed by Southwest Guilford with 235.

T.W. Andrews of High Point was the 3-A winner with 335. T.C. Roberson of Skyland was second with 310 followed by Walter Williams of Burlington with 267½.

Greensboro Grimsley captured the 4-A crown with a total of 422½ points, well ahead of runner-up South Mecklenburg with 367½. Third place went to Raleigh Sanderson with 305.

Winterville Pee Wee

Overton's.....11
1st Citizens.....11

WINTERVILLE — Overton's and First Citizens played to a 11-11 tie game Wednesday in the Winterville Pee Wee League. The game was called after six innings because of time limit.

It will be picked up at the point of suspension only if it affects the standings.

Overton's was led by Jarod Kraus and Derek Knight. First Citizens was led by Jet Harrell and Mark Deaver.

Senior Babe Ruth

Farmville.....2
Tarboro.....1

FARMVILLE — Farmville slipped past Tarboro, 2-1, in eight innings in Coastal Plains Senior Babe Ruth League action Wednesday.

Greg May walked in the bottom of the eighth, stole second and advanced to third on a bunt by Mark Wooten and scored on a passed ball by the pitcher with the winning run.

Tarboro scored its run in the top of the third on a homer by pitcher L. Britt.

Farmville scored their other run in the bottom of the sixth when May walked and stole second and stole third and came home on a sacrifice by Shae Terrell.

The winning pitcher was Mike Vanderford, who gave up only three hits.

Washington.....3
Winterville.....2

WASHINGTON — Washington nipped Winterville Machine by a 3-2 score in the Coastal Plains Senior Babe Ruth League Wednesday night.

Winterville took the lead in the first inning, while Washington tied it in the bottom of the sixth at 1-1. Winterville pushed back ahead in the top of the seventh.

But Washington came back in the bottom of the frame to score two runs. Floyd Lilley singled to bring in Gary Hodges with the game-winning run.

Lilley was the winning pitcher on the night. Benjy Beacham led Winterville's hitting with two while Lilley had a pair for Washington.

Winterville is now 5-3 while Washington is 3-1. Winterville travels to Greene County tonight.

Little League

Lions.....14
Kiwanas.....6

Matt Aldridge went 2-3 with a home run, three RBI and three runs scored as the Lions defeated Kiwanas in a North State League game Wednesday, 14-6.

The Lions had taken a 7-3 lead three innings before breaking the game open by scoring seven runs over the next two innings.

Brian Fields opened the bottom of the fourth with a single. Granger Hill followed with a reach on an error to bring up Aldridge to set up his three-run homer.

Kiwanas rallied for three runs in the top of the fifth to narrow the gap to 10-6. Chris Haddock was walked and advanced around the bases and scored on three consecutive errors. Chris Tyson reached on one of the errors and came home on Jarrett McGalliard's single. Marty Whichard and Mike Rouse walked and Zeb Atkinson notched a single to score McGalliard.

The Lions put the game away for good with four runs in the fifth inning to provide the game's final margin.

Aaron Fields, Will Stanley and Scott Briley added two hits apiece for the Lions. McGalliard's two hits led Kiwanas.

True Value.....6
Jarman's Auto.....4

True Value Hardware topped Jarman's Auto thanks to a three-run second inning keyed by RBI from Brooks Honeycutt and Matt Ferguson that gave True Value the cushion it needed to win the Tar Heel League game Wednesday, 6-4.

Beau Williams reached on a single to open the second. Craig Bryan, Jonathon Adams and Thomas Speir followed with walks, the last of which scored Williams. Ferguson's walk scored Bryan and Honeycutt's groundout scored Adams.

Jarman's scored a run in the third while True Value went scoreless to make it 4-2 after three innings. The teams traded runs over to final two innings before both went scoreless in the sixth.

Honeycutt and Williams had two hits apiece to lead Jarman's.

Babe Ruth League

Wachovia Bank.....5
Pepsi-Cola.....4

Chris Fuqua banged out two hits, including the game-winner, as Wachovia Bank held onto first place in the Babe Ruth League with a 5-4 victory over Pepsi-Cola Wednesday night.

Pepsi struck first, getting a run in the third, then adding three more in the fourth for a 4-0 lead.

But Wachovia came back to score three times in the fifth inning, then pushed over two to win it in the seventh.

In the seventh, Daron Bullock singled and moved up on a passed ball. Marty Measamer walked and Derrick Hines singled to score Bullock. Fuqua followed with a base hit, driving in Measamer with the game-winner.

Darrell Moore led the Pepsi hitting with two.

Tim Moore hurled the win, allowing two hits while striking out 16.

Everette's.....2
Computerland.....1

Paul Powers scattered three hits and struck out eight as Everette's Pest Control gained a 2-1 victory over Computerland in the Babe Ruth League Wednesday night.

Computerland opened the scoring with its only run of the night in the third inning. Joe Deloach had walked and moved up on a pickoff error. He scored on Chris Christopher's single.

Everette's tied it up with one in the fourth. Powers doubled, moved to third on a passed ball and scored on Jamie Brewington's sacrifice fly.

Then, in the fifth, Everette's pushed over the winning run. Pat Joyner walked and scored on John Bolen's triple.

No one on either team had more than one hit.

Wallach Shocks Gooden

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The statistics showed that Dwight Gooden should have blown away Tim Wallach. So much for statistics.

Wallach, who entered the game 1-for-19 with 11 strikeouts in his career against the New York ace, hit two homers and drove in five runs against Gooden on Wednesday night, powering the Montreal Expos past the Mets 7-4.

"In the past, I've been glad if I could just make contact," Wallach said. "The way I've hit him in the past, it would have been unthinkable."

Wallach hit a sacrifice fly in the first inning and then led off the fourth with his 11th home run of the season. Wallach knocked out a shaky Gooden in the seventh with a three-run homer, marking the first time anyone had homered twice off Gooden in a game.

"I didn't know the statistics, but I knew I was getting him out a lot," Gooden said. "I just didn't make good pitches against him."

In other National League games, Chicago edged Philadelphia 5-4 in 10 innings, Cincinnati rallied past Houston 3-2, Los Angeles beat Atlanta 5-2 and San Francisco stopped San Diego 6-3. Pittsburgh defeated St. Louis 2-1 in 12 innings after the Cardinals beat the Pirates 4-2 in a game resumed after it was improperly stopped Monday night.

Gooden, 8-3, did not make many good pitches at all at Olympic Stadium. He lasted only 6 1-3 innings and gave up seven runs while walking six and striking out only one.

The victory went to Floyd Youmans, 6-5, Gooden's high school teammate in Tampa, Fla. Youmans pitched 5 1-3 innings and left the game leading 4-1 after walking three straight batters.

"I think I might have been getting a little too overconfident by that time," Youmans said. "I was trying to blow everything by them."

The Expos scored twice in the first on an RBI double by Vance Law and Wallach's sacrifice fly.

Tim Raines drew a bases-loaded walk in the second for a 3-0 lead. The base on balls marked only the fourth time in his career that Gooden had walked a batter with the bases loaded.

Wallach homered in the fourth before New York's Darryl Strawberry hit his eighth homer in the sixth.

After Wallach's three-run blow in the seventh, the Mets scored twice in the eighth on an RBI double by Mookie Wilson and a run-scoring single by Len Dykstra, and Gary Carter hit his 12th homer in the ninth.

Jeff Reardon finished for the Expos and got his 16th save.

Reds 3, Astros 2

Eric Davis hit a two-run homer in the ninth against Houston relief ace Dave Smith, rallying Cincinnati past the Astros.

Houston starter Mike Scott took a three-hitter and a 2-1 lead into the ninth, and then struck out leadoff batter Pete Rose.

Astros Manager Hal Lanier then replaced Scott, who was tiring, with left-handed reliever Frank DiPino. Lefty Dave Parker singled off DiPino, and Lanier brought in the right-handed Smith, who has 16 saves. But Davis connected on Smith's second pitch for his sixth home run of the season.

Scott held the host Reds hitless until Eddie Milner homered with one out in the sixth, pulling the Reds within 2-1.

Dodgers 5, Braves 2

Franklin Stubbs homered and drove in three runs and Fernando Valenzuela became the NL's second 10-game winner as Los Angeles beat host Atlanta. Stubbs lined a two-run single that keyed a three-run third and hit his 12th homer in the ninth.

Valenzuela, 10-4, joined Houston's Bob Knepper as a 10-game winner. Valenzuela gave up six hits in 6 2-3 innings, including consecutive home runs by Dale Murphy and Bob Horner in the fourth. Tom Niedenfuer finished up for his fourth save.

Valenzuela also contributed two singles to the Dodgers' 15-hit attack.

Pirates 2, Cardinals 1

Bill Almon hit a sacrifice fly in the 12th inning, lifting Pittsburgh over St. Louis in the night's regularly scheduled game.

Prior to the Pirates' victory, the Cardinals wrapped up a 4-2 triumph in the resumption of a game improperly halted in the sixth inning Monday night because of rain.

Mike Bielecki and three relievers combined to hold St. Louis to four hits in the Pittsburgh victory. Bielecki gave up two hits in eight innings, but Don Robinson, 2-0, got credit for the victory.

The Cardinals sent the game into extra innings by scoring a run in the eighth on a bloop, RBI single by Jose Oquendo.

Pittsburgh, trailing 4-1 in the sixth at the time of Monday's halt, was unable to rally and win the suspended game despite successfully arguing its protest to NL President Chub Feeney that umpire-in-chief John Kibler should not have called the game after a 22-minute rain delay.

Feeney ruled that Kibler did not follow either a league directive calling for at least a 45-minute wait or the Official Baseball Rules, which mandate a 30-minute wait. There had been an earlier 17-minute delay in the inning.

Cubs 5, Phillies 4

Ron Cey scored from third base on a wild pitch by Philadelphia reliever Don Carman with one out in the 10th inning, giving Chicago its victory over the visiting Phillies.

Jody Davis led off the Cubs 10th by drawing a walk from Steve Bedrosian. Pinch-runner Dave Martinez stole second, but was thrown out at the plate trying to score on a single by Cey, who took second on the play.

Carman relieved Bedrosian and intentionally walked Leon Durham and then walked Jerry Mumphrey, loading the bases. With Thad Bosley batting, Carman threw his wild pitch.

Shane Rawley of the Phillies took a 4-1 lead into the eighth before Durham hit a two-run double. Shawn Dunston led off the ninth with his eighth homer, tying the score.

Giants 6, Padres 3

Chris Brown, Bob Melvin and Jose Uribe hit home runs that powered San Francisco past San Diego.

The visiting Giants pounded Mark Thurmond, 3-6, for five hits and three runs in 1 1-3 innings. Thurmond is 1-6 lifetime against San Francisco.

Brown led off the second inning with his sixth homer. Melvin hit his first major-league homer, a two-run shot, later in the inning.

Uribe's first homer of the season, a two-run blow in eighth off Gene Walter, made it 6-3.

Mike LaCoss, 6-2, pitched 6 1-3 innings for the victory. Juan Berenguer got his first save.

Steve Garvey hit his 13th homer and reliever Tim Stoddard hit his first major-league homer for the host Padres.

NFL Bid To Halt Testimony Fails

NEW YORK (AP) — After motions to have her testimony barred a day earlier without a jury, economist Dr. Nina Cornell finally spoke before the six-member panel in the United States Football League's $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the NFL.

Cornell, an economist for the USFL who worked with the Federal Communications Commission for three years, testified Wednesday as an expert witness for the four-year-old league, despite acknowledging that football is not her specialty.

The National Football League had tried to preclude much if not all of Cornell's testimony from being heard by the jury.

But U.S. District Judge Peter K. Leisure denied those motions, in part, saying the NFL's delay in raising the objections was "inexplicable" because the NFL had known of the scope of this testimony for months.

Cornell testified Tuesday with the jury absent and repeated some of her statements Wednesday.

She claims the USFL could sustain between $301 million and $565 million in damages because of the NFL's alleged anti-competitive acts by 1992.

Before Cornell took the stand Wednesday, Leisure limited the scope of testimony which Al Davis, managing general partner of the NFL's Los Angeles Raiders, could give.

Leisure ruled that Davis, who is expected to testify next week, may not be questioned about NFL practices dealing with legal advice. Previously, Leisure ruled out any references to the Raiders and NFL litigation. In this instance, he said, "the danger of confusion outweighs the probative value."

Cornell's damage estimates are based on the premise of income that would have been generated had the USFL played in the fall instead of the spring from 1983 to 1992. The estimates also assume the acts charged in this lawsuit would have continued against the USFL, and that it would have no network television contract for seven of those years with only a $10-million-a-year cable commitment.

Cornell describe two economic formulas she used to compute the alleged damages, calling them Plan A and Plan B.

The American Football League, which merged with the NFL in 1970, was used for comparisons in Plan A, based on the period when the AFL was televised on NBC.

Plan B used a CBS network analysis of whether the network could afford to telecast both the USFL and the NFL while the older league still had a good relationship with all three networks.

Plan A called for $565 million in damages while Plan B asked for $301 million.

But Cornell admitted under cross-examination by NFL attorney Guy Strube that her figures did not include costs the USFL might absorb by switching from a spring to a fall schedule and into direct competition with the NFL.

Cornell, who admitted she had little expertise in football, said she was not aware of the losses the USFL suffered in 1983 or 1984.

Robert Fiske, another NFL attorney, questioned Cornell about her choice of statistics, noting a CBS study had a total of only 29 games being played in a year while Cornell used 48 for her version of the same study.

The 48 games, she said, were under the assumption that there would be numerous doubleheaders.

"Do you think a network is going to put on a double-header of a brand new league?" Fiske asked.

"I think it's likely that a network that didn't have football would put something on against the NFL," replied Cornell.

Leisure further denied the NFL the opportunity to question Cornell about whether legal relief would mitigate USFL damage claims.

The judge also disallowed an affidavit from Kansas City Chiefs owner Lamar Hunt, minutes from an Oakland Coliseum meeting and testimony from NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle on a congressional hearing.

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

George: Shape Up, Or...

NEW YORK (AP) — Defense and discipline are what owner George Steinbrenner has in mind for the slumping New York Yankees.

Shortly after Steinbrenner's State-of-the-Yankees question-and-answer session Wednesday, his team went out and dropped its fourth in a row, losing to Boston 5-2 and falling 6 1/2 games behind the front-running Red Sox in the American League East.

Although Steinbrenner described himself as "disappointed, but not upset" with the Yankees' recent play, he warned that "it's time for million-dollar employees to look like million-dollar employees" and said he might be about to become the last of baseball's big spenders.

"I'll tell you one thing that's going to come this year with the New York Yankees. From now on, the guys on this ballclub will be paid for what they do, and some guys on this club have got some worries along those lines," he said.

"If you want to be paid like a champion, you've got to perform like a champion. These guys are being paid a major-league salary to play a kids' game and I don't want anything to interfere with that. I want their complete, undivided attention for 8 1/2 months."

"We're putting an end to some of this extra-curricular stuff (banquets, personal appearances, etc.) and if they say I don't have the right to do that I'll schedule meetings every night — and I have the right to do that."

Without going into details, Steinbrenner said, "Some things have come to my attention in the past few days that you wouldn't believe."

Informed of Steinbrenner's remarks, Manager Lou Piniella said: "If that's what the boss said we'll put a stop to it. I haven't been aware of these things, but if George has the information, we'll put a stop to it."

"Our problems haven't been discipline. We haven't played well here in New York."

The Yankees have dropped seven straight home games — the last time that happened was 12 years ago — and are 17-17 at home after going 58-22 in Yankee Stadium last year.

Although the Yankees played their second consecutive errorless game Wednesday night, they are last in the league in fielding and have committed 65 errors in 65 games.

The usually impatient owner expressed disappointment with the performances of pitcher Ron Guidry, second baseman Willie Randolph, shortstop Bobby Meacham, third baseman Mike Pagliarulo and right fielder Dave Winfield.

But he emphasized that "I'm not singling out anybody. My defense stinks, and I can single that out. I'm not taking to task any individual players, but the figures speak for themselves."

Randolph has committed 13 errors and Meacham made 12 before he was exiled to the minors last weekend.

'Vulture' Sparks Spanish Win

MEXICO CITY (AP) — He came swooping in from nowhere. He pounced on loose balls, sped to waiting passes, outmaneuvered the opposition at every turn. "The Vulture" had struck. Emilio Butragueno scored four times Wednesday, tying a World Cup record for goals in a game, leading Spain to a 5-1 romp past previously unbeaten Denmark and into the quarterfinals. It was the ninth four-goal game in the World Cup's 56-year history and first since Eusebio accomplished the feat for Portugal in 1966 against North Korea. Spain joined England, which downed Paraguay 3-0, in the final eight. The Spanish will play Belgium in Puebla on Sunday, while England takes on Argentina in Mexico City in their first major sporting encounter since the 1982 Falklands war. The other games feature host Mexico against West Germany in Monterrey and Brazil playing France in Guadalajara, both on Saturday.

Butragueno, the 22-year-old striker from the Real Madrid soccer club, personally demolished the dreams of Denmark, which had recorded a 9-1 goal differential in three first-round victories. The Danes, making their World Cup debut, had become one of the glamour teams of the tournament. But Butragueno dulled their shine. "Four years ago when I started professional soccer, I never dreamed I would achieve what I achieved today," he said. "This has been the most important day of my career, but my teammates should get all the credit for the way they helped me." Actually, one of Denmark's players helped him to the first goal. Jesper Olsen, who connected on a penalty kick earlier in the first half, made a drastic mistake with less than two minutes to go in the period. His backpass to goalkeeper Lars Hogn was intercepted by Butragueno, who easily beat Hogn. The game-winner came on a header off a head-pass by Jose Camacho following a corner kick from Victor Munoz. Butragueno slipped into the goalmouth to give Spain a 2-1 advantage. "The best thing he has, apart from his speed, is his cold blood, his ability to keep calm when he has the ball in front of the net," said midfielder Miguel Gonzalez, a teammate with Real Madrid and the national team. Butragueno also scored in the 80th and 89 minutes, the first on a fine feed from Eloy Olaya, the second on a penalty kick after he was fouled in the penalty area. Spain's other goal, by Andoni Goicoechea, also came on a penalty kick. Butragueno was trying to keep his modesty intact after the outburst tied him with Gary Lineker atop the scoring charts with five goals. "There are other players far better than me in this championship," he said. "Those four goals do not make me the best player on earth, not in the least!"

Lineker had two goals to go with his three against Poland in the final game of the first round, which propelled England into Round 2. Peter Beardsley also scored for England, which suddenly has turned things around after going scoreless for its first two contests. "Our counterattacks were well-maintained and indeed, I'm disappointed we did not score two more goals," insisted English Manager Bobby Robson. "Still, it has been a great result and just the confidence boost we require for the quarterfinal with Argentina." Most players said the meeting would not be anything special. But Argentina goalkeeper Nery Pumido wasn't among that group. "To beat the English would constitute a double satisfaction for all that happened in the Malvinas (Falklands)," he said. Italy may be losing two key performers from the national team — Coach Enzo Bearzot and striker

Sandro Altobelli, who had four goals in the World Cup. The 58-year-old Bearzot said Wednesday he had been offered a position with the Italian Soccer Federation which would put him in charge of all the country's teams. He has a contract through 1990, when the Cup will be held in Italy. Bearzot coached the team to fourth place in the 1978 World Cup and to the championship in 1982. His 11-year tenure is the longest of any coach in the 1986 tournament. Altobelli cited family problems for wanting to quit the squad. "I am happily married, I have

Coach Tells Gray He Can Break Coe's World Mark

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Johnny Gray has been told by his coach that he can break the world record this year in the men's 800 meters. "Most of his predictions come true," Gray said of Coach Merle McGee. "He doesn't make idle predictions. If he says I'm capable, I know I can do it. And that doesn't put any pressure on me. It makes me go after it even more." The world record is 1 minute, 41.73 seconds, set by Britain's Sebastian Coe in 1981. Gray owns the U.S. record of 1:42.60, established last year, and holds the five-fastest clockings ever by an American. Gray gets his next chance at the American and world records in the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships, which continued today at the University of Oregon's Hayward Field. The four-day meet began Wednesday with competition in the decathlon and heptathlon. McGee has been coaching Gray since the 11th grade at Crenshaw High School in Los Angeles in 1977. "He started with me when I was running just 2:17, and has been with me until now," Gray said. "I was a two-miler then, but I wasn't very serious about track. I was running just for fun," Gray said. "Now, I know how to run the race. I'm a more disciplined athlete and more dedicated." Gray's discipline and dedication not only have paid dividends during the outdoor season, but also indoors. During the 1986 indoor campaign, he set world bests of 1:46.1 for 880 yards and 2:04.39 for 1,000 yards, while going undefeated in six races and winning the national championship in the 1,000. Outdoors this year, he has set a world best of 1:12.81 for 600 meters, and finished third and first in his only 800 races. He is the defending national champion, and will face strong competition from Olympic bronze medalist Earl Jones, David Mack and James Robinson, winner of the U.S. title seven times in the past 10 years. The first two finishers in each event during the championships, except for the decathlon and heptathlon, will qualify for the U.S. team that will compete in the Goodwill Games at Moscow next month. It's a trip that Gray would like to take. "I've never been to Russia, but I know about the battles the U.S. and Russians have had in sports," he said. "Sports are not like politics. In sports, win or lose, you come out shaking hands. Not so in politics. Sports are more fun." At Moscow, Gray likely will face 1984 Olympic champion Joaquim Cruz of Brazil, ranked No. 1 in the world in the 800. Last year, Cruz beat Gray, the world's second-ranked 800-meter runner, four times within a week in Europe. "Last summer, I would ask myself each time, why am I losing to him?" Gray said. "I had a strong finish, but my problem was keeping up with him until I could use my kick." Gray said that Cruz goes out exceptionally fast, and "you either keep up with him or stick with the pack and get bumped around." "Last August in Koblenz (West Germany), where I set the American record, I made my move with 400 meters to go instead of 300 or so," Gray said. "I caught Cruz and we ran stride-for-stride, but he just edged me." Losing so frequently to Cruz ranks among Gray's biggest disappointments in track. The No. 1 disappointment, however, was finishing seventh in the 1984 Olympics at Los Angeles, his home city. "It hurt bad, because I know I am a much better athlete than that," Gray said. "After that, I had to do something good. So, I went to Europe and broke the American record five times — and I beat almost everybody who had beaten me in the Games."

Two Teams Qualify

The Downeast Volvo Tennis League, sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department recently completed its season with Greenville teams winning two of the four divisions. The winning teams from each division will play in Asheville this weekend in the state championships, with the winners there advancing to the regionals on July 26-27 in Lexington, Ky. Greenville won the 5.0 men's division with a total of 29 points. Washington was second with 18, followed by New Bern with 15 and Kinston with 10. Greenville also won the men's 4.0 division with 25 points. Tarboro was one back at 24 followed by Washington with 15, New Bern with eight. Kinston failed to score a point. Wilson took the women's 4.0 division while New Bern, Kinston and Greenville all tied for second. Kinston won the men's 3.5 division with eight points while Greenville and Washington tied for second with five points each.

Africa Now Faces Food Glut

By MORT ROSENBLUM
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — U.N. crop specialists say a grain war between the United States and Europe threatens agriculture in Africa, which is emerging from deadly drought, with the crippling effects of too much food at bargain prices.

Delegates to the annual World Food Council ministerial conference that ended here Wednesday differed in heated discussion over how to prevent such a crisis on the African continent.
Said U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng, "Unless developed countries cooperate to reform their agricultural policies, I see no end to the pitiless cycle of economic crisis ... in Africa."

Later, he said there was American ambivalence over U.N. efforts to raise money to move food from surplus to deficit countries within Africa.

produce because of high costs for fertilizers, pesticides and transportation.
An "infernal machine" is spurring world grain production and pushing surpluses onto the market at cut-rate prices, Alain Vidal-Naquet, senior aide to the WFC said. "This will crush the Africans and their agriculture, and people don't realize this."

"The idea of surpluses in Africa is something we hadn't anticipated," he said with a slight laugh. "We are concerned about our own surpluses."
New U.S. legislation allows the government to subsidize food exports to help recover what it considers to be its share of the world market. U.S. officials want farm products covered by general world trade agreements.

Vidal-Naquet said some African countries cannot sell their farm surpluses, estimated at 1.7 million tons, and others are reluctant to grow food they can buy cheaper.
At the final session, the WFC's 36 members called unacceptable the "tragic paradox" that many people faced starvation in the midst of a world food surplus.

Opening the three-day ministerial session Monday, Italian Agriculture Minister Filippo Maria Pandolfi warned that not only Africa but the entire Third World risked suffering from the U.S.-European price war.
"Remarkable progress in the Third World risks being made useless by competition — often heavily subsidized — from industrialized countries," he said.

Western European delegates concurred with Lyng's remarks on Africa but blamed U.S. policies for aggravating the situation, said Henri Nallet, WFC president and former French agriculture minister.
Other major grain producers — Australia, Canada and Argentina — say they face grave damage from a price war they cannot afford.

In some cases, African governments now can buy for $90 a ton grain that might cost them $150 a ton to produce because of high costs for fertilizers, pesticides and transportation.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 20, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A peculiar day with many changes taking place to confuse you. You are feeling held down, but dramatic events happen later to offer you new opportunities.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Novel activities are in the agenda today but are apt to have a slow start; afterwards, go great guns! Make new friends.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You may feel that the one you love is not really devoted, but if you act kindly, you can soon get excellent response.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A partner could be unreasonable in the morning, but careful handling later brings the right results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You may feel that you are dragging along with your work and are not reaching your aims, so get your finest talents operating.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Be charming with others since there may be a delay in plans you had made, and don't get flustered.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be poised at home and handle difficult situations there very wisely. Invite persons in who are the progressive type.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan how best to handle desk work and correspondence and then tonight you can plow right through it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) In the morning, you are concerned with monetary affairs and later you can find new ways of adding to your abundance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You may feel thwarted in gaining your personal aims early in the day, but then change your attitude and all works out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to get rid of a tiresome matter in the morning, and later a new attitude will bring success with it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact long-time friends of much experience and gain their assistance in the morning.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan how to gain more prestige in the outside world. Do something thoughtful for bigwigs and gain their favor.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a fine mind but should be taught to use it in constructive channels and plow through any subject or project with determination and then this can become a remarkably successful life.

Food Prices Settle As Dollar Changes

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The food bargains enjoyed by Americans in many foreign countries only a few months ago are ending, according to a new menu by the Agriculture Department.

Last November, a market basket of food items cost less in 10 of 15 world capitals than similar groceries cost in Washington, D.C. One reason was the higher value of the American dollar in comparison with foreign currencies.

In a new survey released Wednesday, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said that food in nine of the 15 cities surveyed now costs more. Prices are less in six capitals than in Washington, but some of those are climbing rapidly.

The Washington food in May cost $45.45, up less than a dollar from last fall.

In Tokyo, traditionally the most expensive city for hungry Americans, a similar market basket of food was $110.31 last month, up 29 percent from $85.49 in November.

However, comparing food prices abroad is more complicated than simply attributing changes to the differences in exchange rates and the recent depreciation of the U.S. dollar, although those are important.

The self-sufficient nature of some capitals, such as sirloin prices in Brasilia and Buenos Aires, and the differences in quality, packaging and demand have an effect on food prices.

The increase in the value of the U.S. dollar overseas in recent years has been blamed for part of the decline in American farm exports. Now, with the dollar declining, officials say some countries may be attracted back into the market.

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

The Blood of Kings

A new book, The Blood of Kings: Dynasty and Ritual in Mayan Art, is helping to debunk the stereotypical view of the Mayans as peace-loving star gazers. As descendants of gods, the rulers of Mayan cities were duty-bound to ritually mutilate themselves, as this queen is doing by passing a thorn-encrusted rope through her mouth. The goal of much warfare between Mayan cities was not territory. It was the capture, torture and sacrifice of the other side's royalty.

Tinker To Leave NBC This Year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Grant Tinker, who became president in 1981 of a financially failing, ratings-poor NBC and is leaving after the network reached its profit peak and won its first-ever prime-time season, says his timing is impeccable.

"In a show business sense, it's a great time to get off," the network's outgoing savior-chairman said Wednesday. "The whole thing could come crashing down, and I don't want to be part of that."

Tinker faced more than 100 television reporters in a sort of valedictory news conference and reiterated his well-known intention to bow out of the NBC job before the end of the year.

He said he has grown weary of commuting from his California home to NBC's New York headquarters, but probably would have stayed beyond his five-year contract if NBC's restoration hadn't been achieved.

"I don't feel I'm running out on anybody," he said.

Tinker said he has made recommendations about his successor, but the final decision will be up to General Electric, NBC's new owner.

Tinker, 60, said he plans to return to the business of producing television programs again. He was president of the highly regarded MTM Enterprises, makers of "Hill Street Blues" and "St. Elsewhere," before coming to NBC.

He said he won't return to MTM and will instead create a new, small-scale production entity.

One of his customers might be NBC, but he wouldn't necessarily come to his old shop first. "I'll produce for whoever asks," he said.

From Tinker's vantage point, second-ranked CBS needs his program services more, something he noted in uncharacteristically undiplomatic fashion last week. At NBC's affiliates meeting, he suggested that if CBS really believed it didn't slip in popularity last season, then it is in "worse trouble than they know."

Tinker said Wednesday that he personally apologized Tuesday for the remarks to Gene Jankowski, president of the CBS Broadcast Group, and Bud Grant, president of CBS Entertainment.

"I knew what I was saying," Tinker told the TV reporters. "I just shouldn't have said it."

Tinker, the future program supplier, then jokingly referred to his good business sense. "I didn't call Bud Grant and Gene Jankowski just to be a good guy," he said.

Tinker said his legacy at NBC has been putting the right executives in place, creating a climate that attracted the best program creators, giving them the support and encouragement to do their best work and then allowing those shows, when well-executed, to stay in place, even when the audience was slow to discover them.

Newest Television Commercials Grab Viewers' Emotions

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The television commercial's biggest competition was once the kitchen or the bathroom, but electronic advances of the 1980s have raised the battle for attention to new creative heights.

"It's gotta be entertaining, it's gotta grab the viewer," said Josef Lubinsky, writer of music for the compelling, mood-soaked Levi's 501 jeans commercials. "You can't say, 'Look here, this is the widget,' anymore. You have to make the widget fly into space and come back down."

Lubinsky, 32, is part of a crew devoted to finding ways of putting the widget in orbit with viewers, and the blast from their ideas may singe the stragglers.

Commercials are now aimed at grabbing emotions rather than feeding information. Some are mini-epics that evoke patriotism, romance or a particular lifestyle in just 30 seconds.

These new-wave commercials typically are aimed at affluent baby boomers and feature either a catchy new jingle or a hit song from the 1960s, platinum production qualities and little or no announcing.

Lubinsky and others attribute the new creative approaches to the influence of MTV, which also is counted as one of the competing interests for today's advertisements. Viewers sometimes switch to the cable-delivered music video channel as an escape from ads.

There's a lot riding on keeping commercials interesting. Advertisers spent more than $20.7 billion last year for all types of television, according to Advertising Age magazine.

In the Levi commercials, moods and ideas come across in music and visual settings. In half a minute, the viewer has identified the jeans with living in New York City lofts, strutting down streets and falling in love.

Ford's Lincoln-Mercury cars chase down Big Chillers with rerecorded versions of such 1960s hit tunes as Steppenwolf's "Born to be Wild," Creedence Clearwater's "Proud Mary," and the Beatles' "Help" and "Good Day, Sunshine."

Lubinsky works with partner Ron Hicklin in their HLC jingle agency, home of such hummers as "What the Big Boys Eat," for Wheaties and "You Are The Dreamer" for the Wall Street Journal. The Los Angeles agency produces about 20 songs a week for various clients.

"What we have done is change the way people look at commercials," said Lubinsky. "Now they're not so much a story being told as an emotion being conveyed."

Viewers always had the option of ignoring commercials, usually by leaving the room. Programmers retaliated by cranking up the volume, so that the ad spiel followed viewers around the house like a pesky salesman.

Five years ago, commercial makers faced the simultaneous emergence of widespread cable television, videocassette recorders and upgraded remote controls for television sets.

A remote control, especially combined with cable TV, gave viewers the option of switching to other shows during a commercial, a practice the industry calls "zapping."

A viewer could also hit the mute button, the electronic equivalent of punching out the huckster. On videocassette machines, viewers skip fast-forward, or "zip," through recorded commercials.

Amid the zipping and zapping, advertisers got the message: Match MTV or die.

"If there's any kind of trend, it's that music has finally reached the status of being as important as the picture," said Lubinsky. "As recently as five years ago, people who wrote music were back seat. The trend now is to get the music first, and have the director shoot the video."

SECOND ADAM — Actor Daniel J. Travanti, starring as Joe Walsh, and Lyndsay Amelio as his daughter, Maghan, are shown during the filming recently of the movie "Adam: His Song Continues." The movie, scheduled for NBC's fall television lineup, tells about how the Walsh family dealt with life after the loss of its son, Adam Walsh. (AP Laserphoto)

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Students entering colleges and universities in North Carolina this year must be immunized against several diseases before they can be admitted.

Starting July 1, a law passed last year by the General Assembly requiring incoming students to be immunized against measles, rubella, tetanus and diphtheria takes effect.

The General Assembly passed the law last year because of outbreaks of measles on several college campuses nationwide, said Frank Lewis, the coordinator of the immunization program for the state division of health services.

Whitworth has served as veterinarian for the Duke University Medical Center for the past five years. Whitworth will take over his new position immediately, the school said Wednesday.

Studies Say Coffee May Be Linked To Cancer, But Not Heart Attacks

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Heavy coffee drinkers may face an increased risk of cancer but they suffer no greater risk of heart attacks than other people, separate studies have concluded.

Colorectal cancer, or cancer affecting the intestinal area, occurs 2 1/2 times more often among people who drink more than two cups of coffee a day than among those who consume fewer than two cups, researchers found in one study.

The results were outlined to the Society for Epidemiologic Research on Wednesday by Cedric Garland, assistant professor of epidemiology at the University of California at San Diego.

But other researchers also reported Wednesday that they found no correlation between coffee drinking and heart disease in a nine-year study of 12,866 men around the country, contradicting earlier reports linking the two.

An estimated 60,000 people are expected to die of colorectal cancer this year, and 140,000 new cases of the disease are expected to be diagnosed, according to the American Cancer Society.

Garland's findings are based on a 10-year study of 703 people living in Rancho Bernardo, Calif., a retirement community that is part of San Diego.

Of the 703, most of whom were in their 60s, 14 developed colorectal cancer, said Garland. Seven of the cases were fatal.

Three percent of those drinking at least two cups of coffee a day eventually developed the cancer, Garland said. The incidence rate was 1.4 percent for those consuming less of the beverage or none at all.

Smoking and other high-risk factors were taken into consideration, Garland said.

"It's a big difference, but I'm cautious," he said. "This is the highest relative risk that has ever been reported. At this point, we don't have enough information to be able to make a dietary recommendation."

Previous studies have shown a link between coffee and colorectal cancer among people 65 and older but not for younger consumers, while other researchers have found no correlation at all or possibly even a preventive effect.

"We need to do studies that determine how coffee is prepared and the method of preparation," Garland said, adding it may not be caffeine that is responsible for the increased risk of cancer.

"Caffeine is only a small part of coffee," he said. In addition, "coffee reduces the presence of calcium, therefore that might play a role in the risk of colorectal cancer."

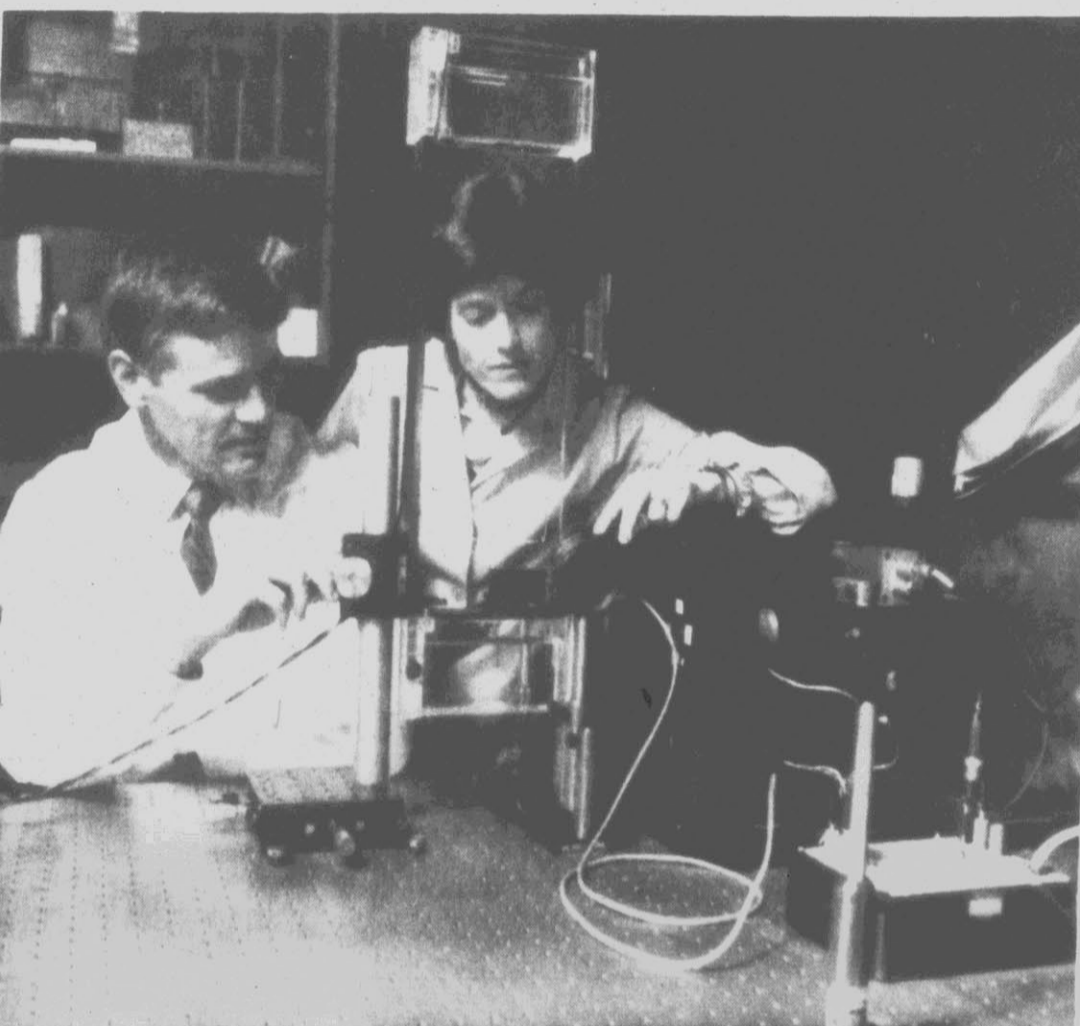

Similar discrepancies have been reported in studies of coffee drinkers and heart disease.

In the second study announced Wednesday, researcher Arlene Caggiula, associate professor of epidemiology at the University of Pittsburgh, said "There is no consistent relationship with the number of cups of coffee consumed per day and ... heart disease mortality. This association was true for both smokers and non-smokers."

About 800 deaths were reported among the 12,866 men studied, about half of which were heart-related, she said. The University of Pittsburgh was one of 22 health centers that took part in the study.

Caggiula said moderation is the key to drinking coffee.

"Coffee does look OK with the caveat that heavy coffee consumption is associated with other patterns that have risk-like significance" such as smoking, she said. "It might not be the coffee that kills you but other things you have with it."

Stick-On Patches Helpful

By ALLAN PARACHINI
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — A new wrinkle in drug therapy, which has established itself as a valuable option in treating motion sickness, high blood pressure and angina pectoris pain, has been tested with apparent success at the University of California, Los Angeles, for treating the effects of menopause.

The method, known as "transdermal," uses a stick-on patch that introduces measured quantities of drugs into the body through the skin.

This unusual method of administering drugs, which would otherwise be given in pill or other form, has been developed in the hope that some side effects of more conventional therapy can be avoided.

A drug called scopolamine is available in stick-on form to prevent sea sickness; clonidine stick-ons are being used for blood pressure therapy, and a staple of pharmacology, nitroglycerin, is in its familiar role as the drug of choice for angina.

Now, the stick-on patch, whose development was greeted initially in some consumer circles more as a novelty than anything else, is being advocated by UCLA scientists as a way to administer estrogen doses to postmenopausal women.

A report of the UCLA research — 23 women were tested with stick-on estrogen patches — is to be published Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine. Dr. Jacob Brody, dean of the University of Illinois School of Public Health and a former associate director of the National Institute of Aging, said after seeing results of the research that the estrogen patch, which is not yet available to the public, has "the potential of being a real breakthrough."

Instead of taking pills daily — with the risk of uterine cancer, liver damage, high blood pressure and other complications, including nausea and vomiting — women might stick patches of a hormone called estradiol on their stomachs twice a week, allowing the drug to be absorbed through the skin directly into the bloodstream.

Research indicates that the stick-on patches seem to have few, if any, of the disadvantages of estrogen pills and the same benefits in reducing the bone deterioration of osteoporosis, vaginal atrophy and hot flashes.

If the estrogen patch proves in larger tests to work as it has up until now, the new method may avoid most, if not all, of the serious side effects that have kept estrogen replacement therapy highly controversial since it was first used more than 20 years ago.

Census projections indicate that by the year 2000 there will be nearly 55 million women over 44, the age range in which menopause becomes commonplace, and by 2010, there will be more than 65 million in the age bracket.

The UCLA research was done by a team at the university and at Veterans Administration Hospitals in Los Angeles and St. Louis. The project was headed by Dr. Howard Judd, one of the nation's half dozen most prominent experts on menopause.

The hormone called estradiol has been known for a decade to be able to reverse much of the deleterious characteristic of menopause, reducing the nagging, painful annoyance of hot flashes and, more important, inhibiting osteoporosis. An estimated 200,000 to 250,000 elderly American women annually suffer disabling and often fatal hip fractures directly as a result of the breakdown in their skeletons caused when normal hormone production ceased after they went through menopause.

 Executrix of the estate of Gregory Helhoski, deceased.

NOTICE TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:
 On or about July 21 the above named Town will request the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development to release Federal funds under Title 1 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) for the following project:
 Project Title or Name - Package Craft
 Purpose or Nature of the Project - Provision of Jobs
 Location - Town of Bethel, Census Tract(s) - ED 252-T
 This Notice is intended to meet two separate procedural requirements of 24 CFR Part 59. (1) To provide notice to the public that the Town has determined that the request for release of funds for the above named project will not have a significant impact on the environment. (2) To provide notice to the public that the Town is requesting the release of funds for the above named project.

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT
 It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment, and accordingly the above named Town has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).
 The reasons for such decision are as follows:
 An Environmental Review Report respecting the within project has been made by the above named Town which fully sets forth the project and more than the real estate project. Such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying upon request at the Bethel Town Hall between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m.
 No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

PUBLIC COMMENTS OR FINDING
 All interested agencies, groups, and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the Town to the Mayor, Town of Bethel, by written comments should be received at the Town Hall on or before July 15, 1986. All comments so received will be considered and the Town will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

RELEASE OF FUNDS
 The Town of Bethel will undertake the project described above with Block Grant funds from the National Resources and Community Development under Title 1 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. The Town of Bethel is certifying to NRCD that the Town of Bethel and Frank M. Hemingway, Jr., its Mayor, as Mayor consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Government if an action is brought to enforce responsibility in relation to environmental review, decisionmaking and action, and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval the Town of Bethel may use the Block Grant funds and NRCD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

OBJECTIONS TO STATE RELEASE OF FUNDS
 NRCD will accept an objection to its approval only if it is one of the following bases: (a) that the certification was not in fact executed by the certifying officer or other officer of applicant approved by NRCD; or (b) that applicant's environmental review record for the project indicates omission of a required finding, finding or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24 CFR Part 58) and may be addressed to NRCD at P.O. Box 27487, Raleigh, NC 27611.
 Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by NRCD. No objections received after July 20, 1986, will be considered by NRCD. Comments must specify whether they concern the finding of no significant impact or the intent to request release of funds.

Children Still Perish For Lack Of Vaccine

By DON COLBURN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Every two seconds, somewhere in the world, a child dies before reaching its fifth birthday.

Two probably died while you were reading that sentence.

An estimated 15 million children under 5 die each year, but world health authorities are zeroing in on another number, smaller but still huge. For them, the number 3.5 million is a symbol of both horror and hope.

That is how many children under age 5 die every year of diseases that are preventable by vaccines. Another 4 million to 5 million children die of fluid loss from diarrhea.

"The numbers are staggering," said Dr. Ralph H. Henderson, director of the World Health Organization's program on immunization. "That's a child's death every time you take a breath."

Henderson and several dozen other doctors and health ministers from around the world spoke last week at the International Vaccine Symposium, a two-day conference of world health leaders at the Pan American Health Organization in Washington.

The World Health Organization's current effort to immunize the world's children, begun a decade ago, focuses on six dread diseases:

- Measles, which kills about 2 million children a year. An unvaccinated child is almost sure to get measles.
- Pertussis, or "whooping cough," which infects millions and kills about 600,000 children a year.
- Neonatal tetanus, which is contracted through contamination of the umbilical cord at birth. It kills nearly 1 million children a year.
- Polio, which is the leading cause of lameness in children in developing countries. It kills between 30,000 and 50,000 children a year.
- Tuberculosis, which attacks about 10 million people a year and kills about 50,000. The most severe strains primarily attack children.
- Diphtheria, which is limited primarily to young children and has a mortality rate of about 10 percent.

All of these diseases share two important characteristics: They kill young children, and they can be prevented by an existing, safe, effective vaccine.

Instead of specific percentage targets for immunization against each disease, WHO has set the general — and admittedly unrealistic — goal of universal immunization by 1990.

"We're trying not to get too hung up on a specific numerical goal," Henderson said. "But we're going to fight like hell to get every last child in that system by 1990, knowing that we're not going to make it."

Daily Penicillin Use May Cut Risks In Sickle Cell

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Daily doses of penicillin pills can dramatically reduce the risk of dangerous blood infections that often kill infants born with sickle cell anemia, says a study today that recommends giving all these babies the therapy.

In the United States, most victims of sickle cell anemia are black. Experts estimate that nearly 2,000 of the 600,000 black babies born each year in this country have the disease.

If all of them were put on penicillin for their first three years of life, between 150 and 180 deaths a year could be prevented in this age group, said Dr. Marilyn H. Gaston of the Federal Sickle Cell Disease Branch.

"Every baby with sickle cell disease in this country and throughout the world, if possible, should be on penicillin if they are under 3," she said in an interview.

The blood infection, called septicemia, is caused by the bacteria Streptococcus pneumoniae. It is the leading killer among young sickle cell victims.

"All of us who treat young children with sickle cell have lost a number of patients to this disease. Being able to prevent it would have a very positive effect on mortality," said another researcher, Dr. Steven Diamond of Interfaith Medical Center in Brooklyn, N.Y.

The treatment does not cure sickle cell anemia, and it's unlikely to affect victims' long-term survival. But researchers believe it will help them get past the first few years of life when they are highly susceptible to the strep infection.

During the 15-month study, the researchers found that penicillin reduced the incidence of this kind of infection by 84 percent. The results were so dramatic that they stopped the project eight months earlier than planned.

The World Health Organization estimates that 200,000 babies are born worldwide with sickle cell disease each year. Between 60,000 and 70,000 get infected each year, and between 18,000 and 20,000 die from the infections.

The latest study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, compared the infection rate among youngsters who were randomly assigned to take twice-a-day penicillin pills or look-alike dummy pills.

Report Says Man Lived In South America 32,000 Years Ago

By THOMAS H. MAUGH II
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

French researchers have found new evidence that man has lived in South America for at least 32,000 years, suggesting that Asians migrated across what is now the Behring Straits to the Americas more than twice as long ago as is currently believed.

The new report, published in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature, is the latest piece of evidence in what has often been an acrimonious scientific dispute about when the first settlers arrived on this continent. Previous studies suggested that Asians crossed the Behring Land Bridge more than 50,000 years ago, but all of those studies "have been discredited for technical and other reasons," according to University of California, Los Angeles anthropologist Gayle Kennedy.

"If (the French researchers) have solid evidence," Kennedy said, "this is a very important discovery."

Archaeological sites normally are dated by analysis of charcoal and other carbon-containing artifacts. All living organisms incorporate radioactive carbon-14 into biological molecules. Scientists know how much carbon-14 is in an organism when it dies and how fast the carbon-14 is converted to nonradioactive forms.

By measuring how much carbon-14 is left in an artifact, therefore, it is possible to tell how long ago an organism lived or an artifact was made.

Currently, the oldest accepted site of human activity in the Americas is at Monte Verde in Chile, which dates back approximately 13,000 years. The oldest artifacts in California date from about 10,000 years ago, according to oceanographer Jeffrey L. Bada of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography.

Many scientists, such as anthropologist Christy G. Turner II of Arizona State University, believe that the oldest residents of this continent migrated from Asia roughly 15,000 years ago — just about the time that glaciers were receding from the last ice age.

Subsequent waves of migration were thought to have occurred 6,000 and 4,000 years ago.

The new evidence, however, suggests that man immigrated here a much longer time ago and that small pockets of population persisted during the ice age.

Since 1973, French and Brazilian archaeologists have been excavating an ancient rockshelter in Boqueirao da Pedra Furada, a plateau in the state of Piaui on the northeastern coast of Brazil. More than 200 similar caves decorated with wall paintings have been discovered on the plateau.

Anthropologist N. Guidon of the Graduate School of Social Sciences in Paris participated in excavations at the site and collected charcoal from four separate hearths that had been used intermittently by the prehistoric occupants of the cave. He also collected charcoal on small pieces of rock that had flaked off the wall paintings in the cave.

These charcoal samples were analyzed by G. Delibrias of the Center for National Research in Science at Gif-sur-Yvette.

Guidon and Delibrias reported in Nature that the newest of the 17 charcoal samples they analyzed was about 6,000 years old and that the oldest was about 32,000. Fragments of charcoal from a wall painting were found to be 17,000 years old, which "makes the site of Pedra Furada the most ancient (painted cave) site in America, and one of the most ancient in the world."

Significantly, stone tools were found associated with each of the hearths, and the evolutionary refinement of the tools matches the historical sequence identified by radiocarbon dating.

Most anthropologists contacted by the Los Angeles Times were reluctant to draw conclusions about the new report because they had not yet seen it and because there have been so many previous reports that have turned out to be wrong.

"We just lost a date in the Yukon that looked very good for 27,000 years," said UCLA's Kennedy. "The scientists redid their dating and found that the new date was only a fraction of the old."

"In the past," said geologist Vance Haynes of the University of Arizona, "when it came down to critical examination of the evidence for older sites, the dates haven't held up. The possibility (that some of the sites are older) is there, but it's not something you want to pick up and run with."

If the French findings are confirmed, according to Bada, it will mean that man has been living in North America even longer. If the South Americans did migrate from Asia by way of the Behring Land Bridge, he said, they had to have passed through here first.

Marbles Bounce Back To Regain Spot As American Pastime

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — In schoolyards and backyards, on city streets and country roads, shooting marbles is bouncing back as an American pastime.

For decades, newer, more sophisticated games have attracted America's youngsters. Now some are forsaking the electronic arcade for the mibster's ring.

The game once played by George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and John Quincy Adams is the sport of an estimated 2 million to 3 million youngsters, according to C. Eugene Mason, director of the National Marbles Tournament.

About 75 boys and girls under age 15 from nearly 20 states will compete in the national tournament, which will be held June 23-26 in Wildwood, N.J.

"It's serious for me," said Shelley Niedermeyer, 14, who along with her brother is representing Pittsburgh's Allegheny County for the second straight year in the tournament.

"I've been practicing every day after school," Robert Niedermeyer, 11, confided. "I want to win so bad."

In the competitive world of aggies, glassies, cats eyes and sticks, losing is not taken lightly.

"One of the reasons we win, I'm a hard loser. I hate to lose," said Walter T. Lease Jr., 63, Pittsburgh's highly acclaimed marbles coach with 17 national champions and two world championship teams to his credit.

"I expect a lot from them. They give a lot back," said Rick Mawhinney, 29, the 1971 national boys champion who now coaches in Cumberland, Md.

That kind of enthusiasm is helping to resurrect the game, according to Mason.
