FDA Says Cyanide-Tainted Capsules Used Same Poison

By KATIA BLACKBURN
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — The cyanide in two bottles of Extra-Strength Excedrin that caused the death of two Auburn residents came from the same batch, authorities said after a laboratory test "fingerprinted" samples of the poison.

Susan Hutchcroft of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration said an agency laboratory in Cincinnati analyzed the cyanide linked to the two deaths and also determined that the cyanide is different from that used in past tampering cases, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported today.

Each batch's chemical "fingerprint" is unique and can be distinguished from batches of cyanide produced in other parts of the country or even other batches at the same factory, she added, so the FDA may be able to trace the cyanide's batch number.

"We may be able to pin down where this cyanide went to after it was made," she said. But she cautioned that it may be impossible to discover more because of the cyanide's easy availability and wide distribution.

Each batch of cyanide inevitably picks up slight impurities in the manufacturing process, and these vary from batch to batch, said Ellen Miller, FDA consumer affairs officer.

Dr. Corinne Fligner, an investigator in the King County medical examiner's office, said Sunday that other deaths in the county this year would be studied to see if there were any others linked to cyanide poisoning.

She also said that friends or relatives of people who died in recent months should submit any Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules they find to the FDA for tests.

Five sudden natural deaths that occurred before the poisonings and two more recent ones were reviewed last week, and no evidence of a link to cyanide was found.

Ms. Fligner said her agency had no reason to suspect other deaths were caused by tainted over-the-counter medicine, but she said cyanide screening would be done in any cases that appeared even slightly suspicious.

She said the review would focus on deaths in the suburbs south of Seattle, where both recent poisonings occurred, and on deaths that were ruled to be from natural causes but were unusual for some reason — for instance, people in relatively good health who died unexpectedly.

The review will go back as far as January but will concentrate on deaths in April, May and June, she said.

To screen for cyanide, a blood or fresh tissue sample is required, Ms. Fligner said. The Washington State Toxicology Laboratory keeps blood samples for about a year in cases where a death has been referred to a county medical examiner, she said. But many private labs don't keep samples after an autopsy, she said.

Cyanide testing cannot be done with embalmed tissue, she added, so exhumations are not planned.

"In general, there are no specific anatomic signs to indicate cyanide," Ms. Fligner said, but when the dos-

Democratic Congressional Hopefuls To Run As Team

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic congressional candidates pledged today to run as a team in the fall campaign, saying their party was poised to recapture seats lost to Republicans in 1984.

"The party is stronger and more unified than ever before," state Democratic chairman Jim Van Hecke said. "We have every reason to believe that Democrats will sweep the North Carolina ... congressional races this fall."

Van Hecke and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, titular leader of the state Democratic Party, appeared at a news conference with seven of the 11 Democratic House candidates. Former Gov. Terry Sanford, the Democratic candidate for U.S.

senator, also was on hand at state Democratic headquarters.

Van Hecke said he had met over the weekend with the candidates and their staffs, and worked out a plan for coordinating their campaigns with local Democratic organizations.

The Democrats said they were optimistic, despite President Reagan's continuing popularity and the efforts of Senate candidate Jim Broyhill and GOP congressional nominees to link their races to Reagan.

"I feel a very strong Democratic wind blowing in North Carolina," said Rep. Charles Rose of Fayetteville.

Sanford said Republicans' attempts to ride Reagan's coattails in a year when the president is not running for re-election would fail. And Van Hecke contended that Americans liked Reagan, but not his policies.

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee has targeted at least four North Carolina House races — in the 4th, 6th, 9th and 11th Districts — for maximum assistance, Van Hecke said.

MISLEADING BILL

I am a Greenville business owner who received in the mail "a confirmation of a directory listing" that appears at first to be for the local telephone directory Yellow Pages. There is even a "let your fingers do the walking" symbol that is almost imperceptibly different from the phone company's Yellow Pages logo. The price is about the same as the Yellow Pages price and the timing is during the same period that Yellow Pages bills go out. If you read carefully the light print way at the bottom of the page, you will find that the company is "not affiliated with AT&T or any local telephone company."

Battle Of 'Kids' Coming

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER

ATLANTA (AP) — The Cabbage Patch Kids have a date Tuesday with Potty Scotty, Itchy Ritchy, Fryin' Bryan and the trio's wretched sidekicks, the Garbage Pail Kids, but it's not down at the malt shop. It's in federal court.

Fryin' Bryan's cheeks are aglow. He is strapped into the electric chair and is getting that first big jolt. Potty Scotty is falling down the toilet and Itchy Ritchy is covered with spiders.

The Cabbage Patch Kids are cherubic soft-sculpture dolls that come with birth certificates, diapers and adoption papers. They soared to cult status about three years ago. Since then an estimated 35 million have been sold.

Their Garbage Pail counterparts showed up last year on bubble-gum cards distributed by Topps Chewing

Supreme Court Agrees To Hear Texaco Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to consider forcing Texaco Inc. to post a potentially ruinous $12 billion bond while appealing a multibillion-dollar judgment won in Texas by Pennzoil Co.

The court voted to review a ruling that Texaco need only put $1 billion in security, a requirement the corporation satisfied by pledging stock in its Canadian subsidiary.

The court's decision is not expected until sometime in 1987.

A state court jury in Texas last year found that Texaco improperly interfered with Pennzoil's planned acquisition of an interest in Getty Oil Co. The jury awarded Pennzoil $11.1 billion against Texaco.

Texas, like most states, requires the losing side in such cases to post bond to protect the winning side. Texas law requires a bond posted equal to the judgment before the losing side may appeal.

But lawyers for Texaco succeeded in having U.S. District Judge Charles Brient in White Plains, N.Y., enjoin the $12 billion bond. Brient ruled that such a high bond effectively denied Texaco the right to appeal.

Interest on the jury award continues to grow — at about $3 million a day.

taffeta gown trimmed with alencon lace. The gown featured a Sabrina neckline and a dropped waistline. The bodice was embellished with alencon lace, seed pearls and iridescents. The gown was designed with long fitted sleeves and a cathedral train that was edged in a border of matching lace. She wore a Juliet cap with seed pearls and iridescents to which a fingertip veil of bridal illusion was attached. She carried a cascade bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids, American beauty gerbera daisies and pink roses tied with American beauty and pink satin ribbon.

The honor attendant was Mrs. Curry Carr Lucas of Atlanta, cousin of the bride. She wore a formal aqua gown of sheer material. She carried a cascade bouquet of rubrum lilies.

The best man was Robert J. LeClaire of Garden City, N.Y., cousin of the bridegroom. Ushers were Richard A. LeClaire of Wilmington, Del., cousin of the bridegroom, and Brian Powell of Bloomington, Ind.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of cream colored silk organza over taffeta with a floral overblouse. The mother of the bridegroom wore a street length dress of pale lavender silk. Both mothers wore an orchid corsage.

A reception was held in the Brook Valley Golf and Country Club, hosted by the parents of the bride.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the mother of the bridegroom at the Sheraton-Greenville. A bridge shower was given at the home of Mrs. Alton Finch, and a cook-out was given at the home of Dr. and Mrs. John D. Howell by friends of the bride.

The bride, a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Emory University in Atlanta, is employed by the University of South Carolina. The bridegroom attended Mars Hill College and is a graduate of Appalachian State University and the University of South Carolina. He is employed with the Kershaw County Public Schools.

After a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will live in Columbia, S.C.

Double Ring Ceremony Takes Place On Sunday

The double ring wedding ceremony of Susan Faye Wright of Greenville and William Gaston Monk Jr. of Bell Arthur was performed Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock by the Rev. Alonzo Mills, uncle of the bridegroom, at Arthur's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

The wedding music was played by organist Roger Ingram of Ayden, and the soloist was Ricardo Linsey of Atlanta, cousin of the bridegroom. Mrs. Mable Best of Kinston was the wedding director.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Estella Wright of Greenville and the late Mr. Jack Wright. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gaston Monk of Bell Arthur.

The bride was escorted by her brother, Jasper Leeion Wright, and her sister, Mavis Wright of Greenville, was the honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Mary Hardy, niece of the bride, and Shelia Wilder, both of Greenville; Lillie Wright of Wilmington, sister of the bride, and Wanda Burthey of Durham, sister of the bridegroom. The flower girls were Kimberly Wright, daughter of the bride, and Shonita Allen, niece of the bride, both of Greenville.

The father of the bridegroom was best man, and ushers were Marvin Tyson of Wilmington; Grover Burthey of Durham, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Willie Allen, brother-in-law of the bride, and Van Alston, son of the bridegroom, both of Greenville. The ring bearer was Brandon Dickens of Tarboro, nephew of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with an open neckline outlined in embroidered eyelet lace beaded with pearls. The long tapered sleeves were fashioned of the matching embroidered lace with ruffles of fluted organza at the shoulders. The fitted bodice was overlaid in embroidered organza lace and extended to a basque waistline. The full circular skirt was accented by a peplum of matching lace that encircled the waistline. The hemline of the gown was enhanced with a border of fluted organza ruffles that extended to a cathedral train. Medallions of silk Venise lace beaded with pearls were scattered over the skirt front and train. She wore a pearl headband with a cluster of pearl sprays and silk flowers on the side. Crystal illusion with pencil edging complimented the veil. She carried a bouquet of white mini carnations, white button cushions, baby's breath and Boston fern.

Each attendant wore a lavender formal length gown with a ruffled V-neckline and capelet sleeves. The flared skirt featured a soft fabric flower and a ruffled back. Each attendant carried a mum accented with baby's breath.

The flower girls wore gowns like the attendants and carried baskets of lavender, white and pink daisies and cushions.

A reception was held the American Legion, hosted by the parents of the bride. Mrs. James McCoy of Greensboro, aunt of the bridegroom greeted the guests. Mrs. Earl Gardner of Greensboro and Mrs. Jerome Dickens of Tarboro, sisters of the bridegroom, registered the guests. Dora Wright served the punch and Delphia Wright served the cake; both are sisters of the bride. Farewells were said by Angela Hardy, niece of the bride and Rev. and Mrs. Tyrone Turnage, cousins of the bride.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at Riverside Steak Bar, and a bridesmaids luncheon was hosted by friends of the bride. The couple was honored with several other parties and showers.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live in Greenville. A graduate of D.H. Conley High School, the bride is employed by The Three Steers Restaurant. The bridegroom graduated from C.M. Eppes High School and is employed at Wellcome Middle School.

WHEN GUM POCKETS FORM

Does toothbrushing or eating hard foods make your gums bleed? If so, you can be sure that some inflammation is going on. Pockets of bacteria may have developed around some of your teeth.

Gum tissue has two parts. The lining or surface tissue is called the epithelium. The dense supportive tissue that lies under it is called connective tissue. In the early destruction phase, called gingivitis, bacteria attack the gum lining and connective tissue. Your body sends cells to fight the bacteria, but some of them are destroyed in the process. When these cells die, enzymes and other substances are released that contribute to the destruction of gum tissue and bone. As the disease progresses you may notice that your gum tissue looks red and shiny. It may also look slightly puffy or swollen and bleed more easily. Fortunately, gum disease, even at this stage, is reversible if you get the treatment you need. The longer you delay treatment, however, the greater your chances of losing teeth. If your gums bleed or are swollen, call my office for an appointment. I will talk with you and discuss my recommendations to prevent gum disease.

Shooting Arrest

Billy Charles Barrett, 41, of 302-A Watauga Ave. was arrested by Greenville police Sunday on charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said Barrett was taken into custody at the intersection of Fifth and Hudson streets about 1:29 a.m. in connection with the June 17 shooting of Mannie A. Gunter, 21, of 1808 West Conley St. at Barrett's home.

Ms. Gunter was shot one time in the neck with a .30 caliber rifle, investigators reported at the time.

Education Deans Say Lateral Entry Program Abused

RALEIGH (AP) — Some public school officials are praising a one year-old lateral entry program because it helps meet teacher shortages, but some university education deans say candidates may be hired for the wrong reasons.

The program is designed to attract college graduates who lack traditional teacher training.

During the past school year, 163 teachers were hired under the program statewide, according to the Department of Public Instruction. That's out of a total of 56,000 teachers employed statewide and about 2,100 new teachers.

Seventy of North Carolina's 141 school systems hired teachers through the lateral entry plan. Seven systems hired five or more teachers: Onslow, 12; Wake, 10; Mecklenburg, eight; Craven, six, and Bertie, Halifax and Iredell, five each.

"There are some lateral entry people who turn out to be exceptionally good, and others who are mediocre or don't work out at all," says John E. Batchelor, assistant superintendent of the Western Rockingham City schools. "But that's no different from the problem we have with certified teachers. Lateral entry gives us some flexibility. People seem to confuse standards with bureaucratic rigidity."

Most lateral entry teachers were hired in vocational education, counseling, English, social studies, physical education and early childhood education, fields where there are statewide surpluses.

DPI statistics show 15 lateral entry teachers were hired in math, eight in comprehensive science, six each in biology and Spanish, four in chemistry, one each in physics and French, and none in German and Russian.

Education deans are upset because there are fewer teachers hired in the areas of math and science, where teachers are scarce.

"It's a problem," says Carl J. Dolce, dean of education at North Carolina State University. "There are individuals who are not only certified but who would be excellent teachers who can't get placed in those jobs now. Little or no effort is being made to advertise positions and to employ fully certified, fully qualified people in those areas. There's no reason to admit people via lateral entry in areas of surplus."

Albert Walker, dean of the School of Education at North Carolina A&T State University in Greensboro, says school systems are hiring from small pools of locally connected applicants and often for the wrong reasons.

"Some school districts are hiring them because they're the relatives of school board members, or for financial reasons (because they can pay them less), or perhaps to have a certain racial representation," Walker said.

But Robert Boyd, associate state superintendent of public instruction, said some rural systems may have spot shortages in fields that have surpluses elsewhere and have to hire lateral entry teachers in those subjects.

He said the lateral entry program has safeguards designed to weed out incompetent candidates. They must pass the usual teacher education courses in approved education programs after being hired, and they undergo the same intensive supervision and evaluation during their first two years as other beginning teachers.

School officials say they are having trouble recruiting those specialists because the public schools still can't offer salaries competitive with business and industry.

"The incentives aren't there" for them to change careers and become teachers, said Van Brock Murray, assistant director of DPI's Division of Certification.

Onslow County School Superintendent Everett Waters said a spurt in the county's enrollment and a drop in job applications forced him to turn to lateral entry candidates. But he still favored several of those teachers over regular certified teachers based on their qualifications.

Police Copter Hits Apartment

WEST JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — A helicopter owned by the Boone Police Department crashed through the roof of a West Jefferson apartment today, injuring the two passengers on board, police officials say.

Bob Kennedy of the Boone Police Department, the helicopter pilot, and James Williams of the Ashe County Sheriff's Department were transported to Ashe County Memorial Hospital, but their conditions were not available.

Witnesses said the helicopter engine sputtered and stopped before the helicopter crashed into the roof of the apartment. No one in the building, which also houses an insurance agency, was injured, police said.

The building was evacuated because of leaking fuel from the helicopter, but there were no reports of fire at the building.

Locked In

Speculation has been growing over possibilities the Joint Appropriations Committee, in recommending a 1986-87 North Carolina budget, will come up with a pay increase proposal for most state employees that will be something less than that proposed for teachers.

At work, of course is an old law of supply and demand.

Some sources have been saying rank and file workers may get a raise of around $900 apiece or an average of 4.8 percent. Additionally, we're told perhaps half of the workforce will get a merit pay raise of 1 percent.

Teachers, meanwhile, are expected to get an across-the-board increase of around 6.5 percent. If those sources are right, teachers and state workers will be receiving bigger raises than the 3.2 percent recommended by Gov. Jim Martin.

Then there's the obvious conclusion state workers would not be very happy about getting less than teachers ... as has happened in recent years.

Legislators in the budget-writing process need not apologize for their decision in that regard. Any discrepancies that have resulted ... and will result ... are due to forces stronger than political wishes.

For the present there is the threat of a teacher shortage in North Carolina and recruiters are looking far beyond our borders to meet the need. We are also told fewer young people in North Carolina look to teaching as a career worth the cost, time and effort of gaining the necessary specialized education.

There appears no immediate shortage of people wanting to get on the state payroll, and in many cases their backgrounds and work experience readily qualify them for state employment.

Under the circumstances, legislators appear to have little choice in deciding any priorities for the planned pay increases. Their decision is pretty well determined by conditions of the marketplace.

Transfer

State lawmakers that rejected the transfer of two programs from the state Highway Fund to the General Fund were on target.

It was sound thinking to discard that proposal. Switching money from fund to fund is not responsible fiscal management. It could endanger funding in other critical areas — particularly education where each dollar is crucial right now.

The North Carolina Association of Educators has correctly pointed out the detrimental effect the transfer could have on education funding. State and local education officials have voiced their fears concerning the proposal, and that apprehension is appropriate.

Roads are a high priority for North Carolina. Education, however, should top the list and transferring roads programs into the General Fund, which funds education, would, sooner or later, draw money away from schools.

The opposition to the transfer was not an effort to stagnate the roads program; it was not a vote against better highways in North Carolina. Neither was the move designed to embarrass Gov. Jim Martin, who proposed the switch. That negative stance was merely an effort to manage money soundly and protect the integrity of the state's budgeting system.

Legislators did not vote to kill the bills containing the transfer outright, and they remain alive.

They did, however, reject motions to approve those bills, and that hopefully doomed the transfer of highway funds to the General Fund. That shaky proposal shouldn't even have been considered.

Fight Likely Over Chemicals

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Congress last year approved the renewed production of chemical weapons by the United States, Pentagon officials thought they had finally won a long battle. This country hasn't built such weapons since 1969.

But the Congressional go-ahead came with several strings attached, and it may be some time before nerve gas weapons are built. In fact, it may be several years.

Throughout President Reagan's first term, Congress rejected his appeal for the weapons, turning down his argument that the Soviet nerve gas build-up should be met with a similar U.S. response.

But when Reagan finally won last year, there were several conditions, including:

—An environmentally sound plan to destroy the aging stockpile of gas weapons stored at eight locations in the United States.

—A requirement that U.S. allies in NATO agree to "force goals" which include new U.S. gas weapons. The weapons won't be stored in Europe, even though that is the battleground where they are most likely to be used.

The current arsenal of weapons is stored in eight states, and local communities worry about the possibility of an accident or a leak. Those fears have greatly intensified in the 18 months since an industrial chemical accident killed more than 2,000 people in India, particularly since the nerve gas weapons are in many cases far more deadly than the chemicals involved in Bhopal.

The Army is considering three plans, all of which involve incinerating the weapons in closed containers from which the gases could not escape. Option 1 would burn the chemicals at the eight sites. Option 2 proposes sending them all to a distant incineration plant in the sparsely populated Utah desert. Option 3 proposes incineration in Utah and northern Alabama.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., announced last week he supported option 1. He spoke for many people when he warned about the dangers of transporting the aging weapons via railroads in either Utah or Alabama. Better to burn them where they are, Sasser said, rather than ship them through states like Tennessee.

Sasser promised to try to cut off money for the Army to ship the chemicals, a threat the Army has to take seriously since he sits on the Appropriations Committee.

The Army's preliminary plan is due July 1 and is likely to recommend incineration at the eight existing sites, which is sure to arouse opposition in those states. They are: Utah, Alabama, Maryland, Indiana, Kentucky, Oregon, Colorado and Arkansas.

Just as the federal government has recently discovered that states are not eager to be the site of nuclear waste dumps, so the Army is likely to find out that nobody wants deadly chemical weapons burned in their backyards. Whatever plan the Army proposes will probably be the target of local lawsuits and demonstrations.

While the Army is trying to come up with a plan that meets U.S. needs, the State Department and the Pentagon are trying to soothe U.S. allies in Europe who was unhappy about the renewed U.S. production.

In West Germany, officials announced that the existing stockpile of U.S. weapons will be withdrawn and not replaced by the new U.S. weapons, while other NATO members have denounced the U.S. plans.

Meanwhile, nerve gas opponents in Congress have been given new ammunition, both by the NATO position and by a General Accounting Office report that was highly critical of the Bigeye bomb, one of the main delivery vehicles the Pentagon plans to use for the deadly gases.

The Congressional opponents note that it makes little sense to store the weapons in the United States if they are chiefly intended for use in Europe. But they are also aware that NATO isn't willing to formally commit itself to basing the weapons in Western Europe, not after the strong protests which greeted U.S. deployment of new nuclear-tipped weapons in NATO nations.

Most opponents thought the congressional battle was over last year, but the NATO criticism, combined with the GAO report and the complaints expected when the Army destruction plan is finally announced, mean another Capitol Hill fight is likely.

Amendments Make A Comeback

— Paul O'Connor —

RALEIGH — North Carolina's private colleges got a political burning in 1982. Their push for constitutional authority to issue tax-exempt bonds got caught up in the negative voting atmosphere created by the Legislature's grab for four-year terms. Their proposed amendment was defeated and it has cost the schools a lot of money.

North Carolina's airports and seaports were similarly hurt. They had sought a constitutional amendment that would allow them to enter long-term leases with private companies. But the amendment to allow four-year terms had put voters in such a bad mood that they voted the airport and seaport amendment down, also.

Those two constitutional amendments will be back in 1986, however. This time, supporters of both say they stand a much better chance of victory. They don't expect to get caught up in the negative atmosphere which existed in 1982, and they, themselves, expect to be more diligent campaigners for their proposals.

John Henley, lobbyist for the state's private colleges, said the schools need the authority to issue tax-exempt bonds as a way to reduce the interest costs. The schools would use the money raised for new construction, rehabilitation and major maintenance projects. The schools would also be able to go back and refinance any bonds issued for these purposes over the past five years.

Because bonds are tax-free, they sell for a lower interest rate. Henley said most will be sold out of state and that many college alumni see the purchase of such bonds as a way to help their schools.

The state's seaports were the driving force behind the proposed airport/seaport amendment in 1982, said J.D. Foust, director of the Office of State and Local Government Finance in the State Treasurer's Department. In 1986, the state's airport authorities are most enthusiastic.

The proposal would allow airports and seaports to issue bonds to build facilities which would then be leased, long-term, to private industries. The bonds would be fully paid off by the lease payments.

For example, Piedmont Airlines wants to build a major engine rehabilitation facility at a state airport. If this amendment is made law, the airline can contract with the airport to issue bonds and build the facility on airport property. The airport will then charge the airline enough rent on the facility to pay off the bonds. The seaports are interested in the constitutional amendment because it would allow them to build storage facilities on port property and then enter long-term leases with private companies.

There is a consensus opinion that these two amendments did not pass in 1982 for three reasons. The first was the four-year term amendment. The second was the economy, which at the time, was bad. Voters wouldn't approve of anything that would put the government further in debt.

The third cause played off on the first two. That is, proponents of the two amendments did not make a major effort to explain them to the public. There was no media campaign that told voters that the state, in issuing these bonds, would not be binding itself to paying them back, nor was a big effort made to separate these issues from the four-year term vote.

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, summed it up after voting to approve the amendments. "These amendments got clouded up in 1982 and people just got mad and voted against all of them. Nobody ever explained them" to the voters.

Henley says the private colleges have already formed a committee that is making plans to educate the public on the amendment.

Changes On The Court

WASHINGTON — Within months, the second shoe in the Reaganization of the Supreme Court is expected to drop when Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. retires and is replaced by Appeals Court Judge Robert Bork.

No firm commitment has been made, and Powell may well stay despite age (77) and infirm health — scuttling President Reagan's long-range judicial strategy. But the anticipated Bork-for-Powell switch was an integral part of last week's appointments.

These were not either-or choices, but based on expectation of a second vacancy. That is part of administration strategy to extend its influence, far beyond Ronald Reagan's eight years in the White House, through lifetime appointments on the federal bench. The current imperative is confirmation this year, while the Senate is still assuredly Republican-controlled, of a potentially dominant Reaganite conservative core on the Supreme Court.

The nominations of William H. Rehnquist as chief justice and Judge Antonin Scalia as associate justice, compounded by Bork's prospective nomination, stymie the liberals. Beyond mere numbers, their intellectual firepower profoundly changes the court. But their unchallenged competence and probity means they can be opposed only on ideological grounds — notoriously poor for blocking confirmation.

Broad outlines of this strategy were shaped by Reagan insiders beter for the 1984 election. It was decided that Bork and Scalia would get the next two appointments. As respected members of the pivotal U.S. Appeals Court for the District of Columbia, they would avoid the Senate travail that would befall a "political" nomination such as Attorney General Edwin Meese III or William P. Clark (neither of whom wanted to be considered).

But the chance to name anybody eluded Reagan because the court's septuagenarian liberals want to outlast him. Justice William Brennan, the court's oldest, most liberal member and frail at 80, has privately declared neither he nor like-minded brethren will quit so long as "that man" is in the White House. Indeed, the only justice even talking about resigning was Rehnquist, the court's most conservative and second youngest member.

Thus, while lower reaches of the federal judiciary were being Reaganized, the Supreme Court resisted change until Chief Justice Warren Burger broke the log jam. His decision to quit now was critical. Had he waited until the end of Reagan's term, his probable successor would have been Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

Any man might have encountered confirmation trouble so close to 1988 even in a Republican Senate, but not the first female justice. Burger's early departure enabled the president to pick Rehnquist, promising better organized and more activist leadership.

Scalia over Bork — recommended by Meese and chief of staff Donald T. Regan — is privately explained in terms of age (Scalia at 50 is nine years younger), congeniality and the politically potent Italo-American connection.

In fact, Bork long ago lost the opprobrium from Richard Nixon's 1974 Saturday Night Massacre and sounds less hard-line than Scalia (partly because of a more libertarian view of First Amendment rights). Accordingly, the decision was made that if the second of two appointments might be tougher to confirm, Bork should go second on grounds that he would not be rejected.

Bork replacing Powell would substitute a conservative for a swing vote. But the impact is more than a one-vote shift. The Rehnquist-O'Connor-Scalia-Bork combine would project high ideological muzzle velocity seeking court majorities. Although Scalia and Bork have practiced what they preach in judicial restraint on the Appeals Court, a Supreme Court switch on issues such as affirmative action seems inevitable.

An odd fallout may hurt Dan Manion, a conservative South Bend, Ind., lawyer, in his forthcoming Senate confirmation vote for the 7th Court of Appeals in Chicago. The argument that Manion is not qualified may be buttressed by the intellectual caliber of the Rehnquist-Scalia nominations, as well as liberal frustration in not being able to stop them.

Nor will it be easy to find confirmable conservatives for Scalia's existing and Bork's prospective appellate vacancies. But the president is on his way to fulfilling his opponent's 1984 campaign forecast that Reagan's re-election would project a Supreme Court in his image far into the future. On this one, Walter F. Mondale probably was right.

Strength For Today

We often speak of the supernatural. What we mean is that there are powers at work in the universe which are beyond the natural forces which we understand and utilize. But let us be assured that these forces are used by a loving and purposeful God for our benefit.

This does not mean that we will not have difficulty, trouble and sometimes deep sorrow. It simply means that the universe in which we live is alive, that it is presided over not only by an all-powerful, but an all-loving God, and that He in His wisdom is managing the affairs not only of our world but of all others also.

We are wise if we put our trust in supernatural powers. God evidently expects us to use every power we have, but our lives call for powers which are beyond anything we possess.

The supernatural is the power of a loving God continuously at work.

Candidates Hold Own In First Encounter

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — A crowd of well-wishers surrounded Terry Sanford for the Senate campaign's first encounter between him and Jim Broyhill. The former governor was visibly pleased, but laughed off reporters' questions about who had made a better showing.

"Well, I didn't embarrass my wife," Sanford quipped. An onlooker, one of the 900-plus attorneys who made up the bulk of the audience at the candidates' forum, gestured toward the crowd. "They were the real winners," he said.

Indeed, it is unlikely that either Broyhill, a 24-year U.S. representative and Republican, or Sanford, a Democrat, will reap substantially greater political benefit than his opponent from the forum during Saturday's annual meeting of the North Carolina Bar Association.

Neither appeared to commit any serious gaffes or score major points at the other's expense. Rather, both stuck to and elaborated on the themes they had developed since early in the campaign. Both were articulate and composed.

Broyhill portrayed himself as a supporter of Ronald Reagan whose election would help advance the president's conservative agenda. Sanford, who has shunned the "liberal" tag, endorsed mainstream Democratic philosophy and lambasted Reagan administration trade policies while carefully avoiding direct criticism of the popular president.

Meanwhile, voters got an opportunity to size up the two contestants side by side. Their opinions were similar on some issues, but on others — nuclear power, Central America, the economy — there were notable differences.

Some observations from the forum:
— The crowd appeared to be somewhat pro-Sanford, applauding his remarks more frequently and enthusiastically than Broyhill's. Sanford, of course, is an attorney, Broyhill a businessman. Also, there appeared to be more Democratic than Republican officeholders and party activists in attendance.

— Ironically, Sanford appeared to take a page from Reagan's playbook by responding humorously to a potentially sticky query.

Asked by one of four journalists on the panel of questioners whether he wasn't too liberal for conservative Democrats, Sanford responded lightly, "You've been listening to political rhetoric." The crowd laughed and applauded, and Sanford smoothly changed the subject after calling himself a "North Carolina regular."

The exchange called to mind Reagan's handling, during his second debate with Walter Mondale in 1984, of a question on whether age might be a factor in the campaign. The president, then 72, deadpanned that he would not exploit Mondale's "youth an inexperience." That brought down the house, and essentially neutralized the "age issue" from then on.

Sanford on numerous occasions has used humor to parry allusions to what some view as his 1960s-style liberalism. Whether he will be as successful as Reagan, of course, remains to be seen.

— The tone of the Broyhill-Sanford faceoff stood in stark contrast to that of the four debates in North Carolina's last Senate race — the 1984 battle royal between Republican Sen. Jesse Helms and former Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt.

There were no sharp exchanges between Broyhill and Sanford, and they shook hands and chatted briefly after the forum. Sanford did not criticize Broyhill or his record. Broyhill made several mild references to his opponent as one who did not support Reagan.

The civility was appreciated by spectators of all political stripes. "I think it was delightful," said Al Adams, a Raleigh attorney and former state representative who supports Sanford.

— Broyhill, no doubt mindful of the GOP's minority status in North Carolina and his need for Democratic support, played down his party affiliation even as he extolled Reagan, leader of the Republican Party.

Broyhill took issue with Sanford's assertion that no significant number of Tar Heel Democrats had defected to the GOP. But instead of belaboring the point, Broyhill focused on what he called the growing tendency of registered Democrats to base their votes on a candidate's philosophy, not his party.

That trend away from straight-party voting, Broyhill said, will work to his advantage. "Jim Broyhill's philosophy is far more in tune with the mainstream thinking of North Carolinians" than Sanford's, he said.

Manager Dies

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Sheldon A. "Dino" Summerlin, station manager of WWNC, died Saturday in an Asheville hospital of a heart attack at age 46.

Summerlin, who lived in Fairview, began his radio career while he was attending classes at East Carolina University.

After graduation, Summerlin worked for a radio station in Wilmington, then moved to Florida, where he stayed for several years as announcer and station manager.

In 1969, Movie Mirror Magazine named Summerlin the No. 1 disc jockey in Florida. He moved next to a station in Nacogdoches, Texas, where he picked up 13 awards. Summerlin returned to Asheville in 1977, first as sales manager and then as general manager of WWNC.

Hollerin'

SPIVEY'S CORNER, N.C. (AP) — The mood was more like a county fair than screaming contest as about 3,000 people braved the heat for fried chicken, country music and old-fashioned hollerin' at the 18th annual National Hollerin' Contest.

The audience Saturday sat through performances of virtuoso whistling, honks, ear-curling yells, conch-shell demonstrations, fox horn blowings and the raucous humor of country comedian Jerry Clower.

Ron Cunningham of Parkton and his dog, Nikki, took first-place honors in the men's division. Jennifer Raines of Goldsboro won the women's division. William Morm of Portugal was victorious in the junior division, while Bruce Radford of Troy won the conch and fox horn competition. Isaiah McLaren of Wilson took first-place honors in the whistling competition.

Anyone was eligible to perform before the horde of hollerin' aficionados, and about 65 people took advantage of the opportunity.

Drug Raid

BENSON, N.C. (AP) — Authorities raided a small Johnston County house near Benson and confiscated laboratory equipment and what they said was enough chemicals to produce about $100,000 of illegal drugs.

Randy Turner, 33, of Erwin and Walter Andrew Morris, 34, of Matthews were charged Saturday under federal law with conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamines, possession with intent to manufacture and sell methamphetamines and possession of P2P, a precursor chemical for the manufacture of methamphetamines.

Both men were in Wake County Jail pending arraignment today.

Mike Grimes, a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, said the house was being used as a manufacturing laboratory for methamphetamines. "It's the largest laboratory I've seen in North Carolina since 1978, when I came to the state," he said.

Methamphetamines are stimulants, often referred to as "crank" or "crystal speed." Grimes estimated there was enough chemicals to make 50 pounds of the drug.

Retiring Justice To Head Study Of Judicial System

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — The North Carolina judicial system is "an outmoded legacy of single party domination" and to establish a way of selecting judges based more closely on their legal talents, Gov. Jim Martin says.

North Carolina Supreme Court Justice Joseph Branch, who announced Saturday his plans to retire in September, will head a special commission after his retirement to propose reforms in the state's legal system, Martin said.

"I strongly believe that the time has come in North Carolina for our state to adopt a system of non-partisan, meritorious selection of judges," Martin said Saturday in a speech to about 900 delegates to the annual meeting of the North Carolina Bar Association at an oceanside hotel.

Judges on all levels of the state court system run in elections as Democratic or Republican candidates. The governor appoints replacements for judges who retire or resign before their terms expire.

Judicial races traditionally receive little attention, however, because candidates are restricted from commenting on substantive issues and engaging in most political activities.

That, in combination with a requirement that Superior Court judges run in statewide elections although they represent individual districts, favors the election of Democratic judges because of the party's 3.6-to-1 edge in voter registration.

Martin said North Carolina's judicial election system is "a holdover patronage system cloaked in constitutional respectability."

Though North Carolina has generally been blessed with effective judges, Martin said, "so long as our judicial system remains mired in partisan politics, the element of doubt in the fairness of our system will remain."

Branch, a Democrat, said he shares many of Martin's interests.

"Everyone knows, right or wrong, that for some time I have been in favor of a merit-selection system for judges," Branch said after Martin's speech.

Tribe Expects State Help

RALEIGH (AP) — A member of the Cherokee tribal council says he expects federal money to be increasingly channeled through state agencies, and as the funds diminish due to budget cuts, the tribe may look to the state to play a more active role in Indian affairs.

"We want to be ready whenever that happens," said Richard Welch, who also is editor of the tribe's newspaper, The Cherokee One Feather. Welch and John Standingdeer, also a tribal council member, became members of the North Carolina Commission on Indian Affairs Thursday.

It is the first time two Cherokees have been sworn in as members of the commission, which was created by the General Assembly in 1971 as a political voice for the state's estimated 65,000 Indians. But Cherokees — the state's only federally recognized tribe — had previously shunned invitations to join the commission.

Federal programs for the approximately 5,500 Cherokees living on the Quallah Boundary reservation already have been subject to broad budget cuts, particularly in the areas of housing and economic development.

The Reagan administration gradually is curtailing assistance as part of its policy of promoting Indian "self-determination and self-dependency," said Vincent J. Lovett, public information officer for the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Washington. Among those programs hardest hit is the federally run hospital in Cherokee. The 35-bed hospital, which opened in 1980, offers free outpatient and minor inpatient services to Indians on the 57,000-acre reservation.

This year, the hospital was unable to fill 17 health-care positions because of a lack of funds, said Michael Tiger, executive officer of Indian Health Services in Nashville, Tenn., the federal agency that runs the hospital. The hospital employs 130 people.

Tiger said the staff cuts could jeopardize operations at the hospital, which is the only medical care facility on the reservation.

"As federal funds are lessened, they are going to have to go somewhere to seek additional funding," Lovett said. "One of the possible sources would be a state government."

Welch said the tribe wants to build economic strength from inside, as well as seeking state help, to keep the Cherokees viable.

Spotted Fever Cases Decline

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

A state health official says he doesn't know why the number of Rocky Mountain spotted fever cases has declined in North Carolina, but he says there is still danger because the ticks which transmit the disease can be found all over the state.

Last year in North Carolina, there were 142 reported cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever and five deaths from the disease, according to Dr. J.N. MacCormack, chief of the Epidemiology Section of the state Division of Health Services.

There were 178 cases and five deaths in 1984, 208 cases and seven deaths in 1983, 227 cases and 12 deaths in 1982, 301 cases and six deaths in 1981 and 321 cases and 18 deaths in 1980. About 700 cases were reported nationally last year.

Through June 13 of this year, there were 18 cases reported in North Carolina. Through the end of May 1985, 21 had been reported for the year, MacCormack said.

"We'd like to accept the credit for health education leading people to be more careful about exposure, but I don't know that that's happening at all," MacCormack said.

In the 1930s, the disease started becoming a problem on the East Coast and dying out in the Rocky Mountains. It peaked here in 1948, declined until 1968 and then rose again until 1980.

One theory for the decline is that the post-World War II building boom put more people out into suburbs newly carved out of the woods where ticks live, "but I don't know of any data to suggest that there was a falloff of new homes in suburban areas after 1980," he said.

North Carolina continues to lead the nation in reported cases probably because the state's most populated area — the Piedmont — lies inside the oak-hickory-pine forest region where the American dog tick thrives, said MacCormack.

But he warned, "ticks are found all across the state, and people should be on the lookout for them no matter where they live."

The disease, caused by a bacteria transmitted when a tick attaches itself to a human, usually brings a fever, headache, chills and aches and often causes a rash that starts on the wrists and ankles.

Trawler Rescue

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — A passing diving ship rescued two Wanchese residents and a dog from the waters of Oregon Inlet Sunday afternoon after their 40-foot fishing trawler broke up in rough seas.

A spokesman at the U.S. Coast Guard station at Oregon Inlet said Victor Daniels Jr., Jane Rowleigh and the pet escaped serious injury. Ms. Rowleigh suffered some minor cuts, but declined medical treatment.

Coast Guard duty coxswain Jeff Kerner said the trawler Marlina rolled on its side about a half-mile offshore after being hit by a 12-foot wave.

Does your bank's ATM know you better than the tellers?

If the only "person" at your bank who consistently remembers your name is the automatic teller machine, it's time you got to know the folks at First Federal.

You see, all First Federal offices are located here in Pitt County. We don't have offices in other counties or other states. Consequently, our people don't get transferred around as much. So, you're much more likely to see a familiar face when you visit one of our offices.

When you've been servicing people here for 48 years, you remember things. So, we're likely to remember your name. Or when certificates are coming due. Or, how a money market account like our First Insured Money Fund might make your money work harder.

Best of all, your investments at First Federal are not only federally-insured, they generally earn more interest than deposits at the big, impersonal banks. And you'll find that we offer you all the financial services you're likely to need from checking accounts to automobile loans.

When we're not open, you can visit our 24-hour Prestige Place automatic teller. It remembers your name too.

RESEARCHER — Dr. Terry Bazzarre, a nutrition researcher at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, is conducting a study on the diet, health and stress levels of North Carolina farmers and their families. The study has shown that stressful conditions are present on the farm. (AP Laserphoto)

Study Pinpoints Farming Stress

GREENSBORO (AP) — When researchers at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro began a study on the effect of diet, health and stress levels on North Carolina farmers, they thought farmers weren't subjected to much stress.

They have since changed their minds.

"These are people who start the year with no idea of what the weather might be like," said Dr. Terry Bazzarre, one of the project's researchers. "They often have to take out large loans to get their crops started. Some are in debt for equipment and other things. And there's no real assurance that they'll be able to get the prices they need when they sell their goods. Situations like this can create stress."

"The current economic problem of farmers, combined with the dry weather this year, is certain to have created more stress among farmers today compared to farmers of 10 years ago," he said. "We know that high blood pressure is the leading cause of death among North Carolinians statewide."

Bazzarre's research at UNCG will be the second study on the relationship between the health of American farmers and their diets since 1965. The earlier study, published in 1978, focused on Iowa farmers. It found that the farmers weighed more than non-farmers, had more body fat, consumed more calories and fat, had higher levels of cholesterol but were at a lower risk of dying from chronic diseases.

Bazzarre said he thinks a new study is needed because the Iowa information is almost a decade old.

July Workshops

A variety of special workshops for youth ages 9-19 will be offered by the Pitt County 4-H Office during July.

Workshops include babysitting, fun with airplanes, housekeeping tips, cake decorating, self defense, terrarium building, decoy painting, counted cross stitch, canning, basket making, basic first aid and leathercraft.

For further information call 752-2934, extension 369.

Winners

Four 4-H'ers won top honors at the District 4-H Activity Day held in Elizabeth City.

Winners were Elizabeth Betts, landscaping, senior division; Quency Hawkins and Darnell Parker, forestry team demonstration, and Amber Harris, runner-up in public speaking, senior division.

They will compete at the state level in Raleigh July 21-25.

Greenville's current city council is headed by Mayor Leslie H. Garner. Council members include William J. Hadden Jr., who also serves as mayor pro tem, Janice B. Buck, Edward E. Carter, Inez Fridley, Nancy M. Jenkins and Lorraine G. Shinn.

FmHA Faces Major Increase In Number Of Farms Taken Through Foreclosures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Within the next couple of years, the federal government's farm lending agency could be in the process of kicking thousands of farmers off their land and adding substantially to its farmland inventory.

By its own estimate, the Farmers Home Administration could hold more than 20,000 farm properties by the end of next year. In 1979, before the current downturn in farm economic fortunes began, the FmHA held 288 properties. By March 31, that number had increased 14-fold to 4,075 farms comprising 1.2 million acres valued at $709 million, government figures show.

In North Carolina, the FmHA holds 140 farm properties with 23,524 acres valued at $28 million.

The list of more than 4,000 farm properties — comprising an area larger than the state of Rhode Island — has made the FmHA one of the nation's largest farm landlords and is costing hundreds of millions of dollars in losses, congressional investigators say.

On top of that, the agency is leasing much of the land it holds to farmers who then use it to grow crops already in surplus and which the government is paying other farmers not to grow, according to a new report.

"FmHA's ownership of farm property ties up a significant amount of government funds and results in increased government management expenses," the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, said in its report. "It also enhances a public perception that many farmers are losing their land and homes to the government."

In the 1983 fiscal year, the FmHA foreclosed on 356 farms. The next year, that figure dropped to 89 and for the first half of fiscal 1986 foreclosures stood at 34 farms.

About half of the properties ended up in the agency's inventory because farmers voluntarily signed them over after realizing they were unable to pay their debts. Another 40 percent came from liquidations forced by other lenders.

Often called the government's farm lender of last resort because it serves borrowers who can't get money elsewhere, FmHA began earlier in the year to crack down on $6.4 billion in delinquent accounts. Letters informing borrowers of their plight went to 65,000 of the agency's 270,000 borrowers.

About 23,000 of those got really tough letters, telling them to contact FmHA offices or suffer the consequences. By and large, those were people who have been delinquent in their loan payments for three years or more.

The FmHA says that between 8,000 and 9,000 of those heavily burdened farmers did not bother to respond to the agency notices.

Under the rules, the agency now will "accelerate" collections, meaning that the hard-core delinquents will have to settle up, sell out or be subject to FmHA foreclosure. But foreclosure can take two or three years, a drawn-out legal process that might go on well into 1988 or later.

Adding to the growth in farmland inventory has been the agency's restraint in selling off land. Because of depressed and falling farmland values, the agency has held off selling property wherever markets already were glutted to keep from adding further downward pressure to land values.

While the souring of the farm economy has been a major factor, it isn't always to blame for failure of FmHA borrowers, the GAO said. Its study found poor management, personal problems like illness or divorce and excessive FmHA debt were far more likely to be to blame for the farm failures studied.

In response to the report, the Agriculture Department largely agreed that better management of inventoried land is needed, but added that it planned no prohibition of planting of surplus crops because the impact of such production is minimal.

Will Says House To Be Destroyed

CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) — A woman described as eccentric and reclusive by residents of her exclusive waterfront neighborhood has created a furor by ordering in her will that her historic home and its contents be destroyed.

Ethel Turner was 86 when she died in April. Her will stated that her Victorian home, listed in the National Register of Historic Places, "shall be razed."

Neighbors who have been inside the house say it is full of valuable antiques, but Miss Turner's will orders that the contents of the house "shall be destroyed rather than sold."

The will orders that the Pawtuxet Neck land be leveled and given to the city for public access to the Providence River and Narragansett Bay.

"I'm powerless," said Antoinette Downing, chairwoman of the state Historical Preservation Commission. "All I can say is that it's on the National Register and it's too good a house to be treated that way, but I have no power. It's a great tragedy."

Planning Director Kevin Flynn said city officials would not discuss the situation until the will is certified in Probate Court. A hearing is scheduled for Thursday.

Ernest Corvese, the Rhode Island Hospital Trust National Bank official handling the will, said the city might be able to sell the house and donate the proceeds to charities cited in Miss Turner's will.

"I've been with the bank 32 years, and I've never seen anything like this before," Corvese said.

Do you have cattle, horses or other livestock grazing fescue pastures? Have you noticed lately that their performance has been substandard?

Research continues to show that the endophyte fungus in fescue is costing livestock producers plenty. Fescue toxicity is often associated with poor performance during hot weather. Experts say that fungus can also affect animal performance during hot weather. Symptoms of fescue toxicity include reduced milk production, lower weaning weights in calves, reduced conception rates and calving percentages and higher abortion rates in horses.

Other visible animal symptoms of this problem may include high body temperature, rough hair coats, excessive salivation and nervousness, frequent urination and livestock seeking shade and mud holes.

If your livestock exhibits any of these signs, they could be suffering from fescue toxicity. It is an excellent idea for livestock producers to have pastures sampled for the fescue endophyte fungus. A recent survey of over 200 pastures in North Carolina indicated that 95 percent of the pastures were infested with this fungus.

If pastures are found to be high in the fungus, growers will have to supplement cattle with other feeds. If fungus infestation is high, the pasture may need to be renovated to include legumes or replanted with fungus-free fescue seed.

For more information about fescue toxicity, testing procedures and fungus-free fescue varieties, contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office at 752-2934.

Grasshoppers Sprayed

By The Associated Press

Idaho turned to germ warfare in a dawn raid Saturday in its battle against marauding grasshoppers, and Montana agriculture officials announced that counties hard hit by the crop-devouring insects can apply for state aid.

In central Idaho, airplanes bombed 9,600 acres of mostly federal range land with bran that was infested with a single-cell organism called "nosema locustae," a biological agent fatal to 58 varieties of grasshopper.

"Very likely, biological control efforts, even if they're successful as we believe this program has a good chance of being, probably won't solve the problem completely, but it may help keep these large populations of grasshoppers down," state Agriculture Director Dick Rush said.

The biological agent, already used by producers on private land, has been successfully tested by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Montana.

Idaho officials believe it can control the massive grasshopper population in southern Idaho, although it takes at least three weeks for the agent to have any significant effect on the insects.

In addition, the government also sprayed another 10,000 acres of rangeland north of the test tract with chemical pesticides for an immediate grasshopper kill.

With the weekend activities, the state has treated about 25,000 acres of land in the battle against the pests, in contrast to a year ago when nearly a million acres had been sprayed by June 21. In all, about 6.5 million acres of mostly federal land were treated at a cost of more than $12 million.

Agriculture officials estimated Idaho's 1985 crop damage from the pests at more than $11 million.

Montana Agriculture Director Keith Kelly said Gov. Ted Schwinden on Friday issued a proclamation giving counties 20 days to apply for $750,000 aid from the Governor's Discretionary Disaster Fund.

COUNTY TOUR — This test site on the farm of Marion Mae Mills of Greenville is one stop on the Pitt County Tobacco Tour, scheduled for June 30. Participants will also visit farms in the Ayden and Grifton areas. (Reflector Photo By Cliff Hollis)

Pitt Tobacco Tour Scheduled

The Pitt County Tobacco Tour will be held on June 30 and will include stops at three on-farm test sites with tobacco specialists David Smith, Sterling Southern and N.T. Powell.

The specialists will discuss each plot in detail, according to Mitch Smith, Pitt tobacco agent. The tobacco tour will begin at 5 p.m. at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office.

The first stop will be the farm of Marion Mae Mills on Memorial Drive, Greenville, to observe a test which compares the various performances of certain clipped and non-clipped tobacco varieties.

Next, the tour will tour the farm of Kenneth Smith of Ayden to see a test which measures the performance of a granular insecticide in the control of budworms. The Smith farm is located two miles east of Ayden on state road 1724.

The final stop will be at the farm of Alton Cannon at Grifton to view a Granville wilt control test. This test compares the performance of different multipurpose chemicals and how they combat the disease.

To participate, contact Smith at 752-2934. Pesticide recertification credit is available.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned downward today as blue-chip issues gave back some of Friday's late gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 6.88 to 1,872.66 in the first hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 7 to 5 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Opening-hour volume on the Big Board came to 26.48 million shares.

Analysts said some traders were cashing in on the rise in many blue-chip issues late Friday, which was attributed to program trading activity as a set of stock-index options and futures approached expiration.

In theory, the advance was artificial because it was induced by those temporary, technical forces.

But market-watchers said they didn't expect it to take very long for investors to put the latest "triple investing hour" episode out of their minds and begin concentrating on such fundamentals as interest rates and the pace of the economy.

Most Wall Streeters now are convinced that growth in the second quarter will come in below earlier expectations, as it did in the first three months of the year.

However, that sluggishness is widely thought to have improved the chances that the Federal Reserve might decide on another reduction in its discount rate.

Associated Dry Goods, which received an offer to be acquired by May Department Stores, soared 18 1/2 to 64 1/2.

Buying spilled over into many other retailing issues. Carter Hawley Hale rose 1 1/2 to 35 1/2, and K mart was up 1/4 at 53 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .61 to 141.04. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .12 at 281.53.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average jumped 23.68 to 1,879.54, its highest close since it stood at a record 1,885.90 two weeks before.

But declining issues outnumbered advances by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 149.14 million shares, against 128.98 million in the previous session.

Kids ...

Gum Co. of Brooklyn, N.Y. They bear a strong facial resemblance to the Cabbage Patch Kids and are wildly popular in adolescent America.

Some adults think they're funny too, but Cabbage Patch founder Xavier Roberts, of Cleveland, Ga., isn't among them.

He is suing Topps to have the cards withdrawn and destroyed. He also wants all the profit from the Garbage Pail Kids sales, claiming infringement of copyright and trademark, that the Garbage Pail Kids are unwholesome and that the similarities make it impossible to see the new kids on the block without thinking of his own product.

The court documents claim Cabbage Patch Kids products, from lunchboxes to jigsaw puzzles, are made under license by more than 120 manufacturers and that Topps once was offered, but declined, a license to use the dolls and their name.

Topps later applied for a license but was refused, the papers claim, and suggest the Garbage Pail Kids may be a form of revenge.

U.S. Dist. Judge G. Ernest Tidwell will hear a motion Tuesday for a preliminary injunction to ban further sales of Garbage Pail Kids products until the case comes to trial.

Topps contends in court documents that no copyright violations are involved and that the Garbage Pail Kids products "are in the nature of satire and parody" and thus a fair use of anything to which the plaintiffs may have property rights. Topps further claims the suit was not filed in due time.

The Cabbage Patch Kids have been to court before.

In 1980 Martha Nelson of Louisville, Ky., sued Roberts claiming he had copied similar dolls she had made for sale in the Louisville area some years earlier.

A federal judge dismissed part of the suit, stating that while it was evident Roberts had benefited from the study of her dolls, he had copyrighted the dolls' design and she had not.

Roberts, in turn, has sued others he claimed imitated his product and has tried to block imports he said were too close to his designs.

Rushes to buy the yarn-haired dolls caused near riots in some cities in the 1983 Christmas season, causing some injuries.

A support group for families separated by adoption protested the adoption papers that come with the Cabbage Patch dolls, claiming during the height of the frenzy that it "desensitizes kids to the reality of adoption" and that there is "pain and suffering in giving up a child."

A U.S. District Court clerk said no trial date has been set for the latest round.

Job Openings

In May, 10,940 North Carolinians found jobs through 78 Job Service Centers operated by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina, according to the agency.

The local number of job openings received in May was 763. Of these positions, 218 were filled and 156 individuals were placed. For the year, there were 2,562 individuals placed.

Statewide totals released show that employers listed 22,986 job openings with the agency during May, with the ESC staff filling 15,778 of those openings. Since the beginning of the ESC Employment Services program year on July 1, 1985, the agency has placed 135,116 individuals in jobs.

Election Fraud

ROME (AP) — A local court has sentenced 29 people to prison terms ranging from one to three years after they were convicted of voting fraud in Italy's 1983 general elections.

Fifteen of the 29 were given suspended one-year sentences. Charges against nine people were dropped because of insufficient evidence.

Dynamite Blast Kills 6 In Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A truck carrying dynamite to a stone quarry south of Cairo crashed into a fruit peddler's cart and exploded today, killing at least six people and damaging dozens of houses, police said.

Police Capt. Ahmed Abdel-Wahab said the explosion occurred at about 6:30 a.m. on the main road linking Cairo and southern Egypt.

Police said four people were hospitalized, but did not know the total number of people injured. Earlier, police said 15 people were killed and 30 injured.

Niekro Knuckles Twins

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Phil Niekro regained that winning feeling after five starts without a victory. Jim Fregosi returned on the winning track after five seasons away from the major leagues.

Niekro made a few adjustments with his knuckleball Sunday and the results were immediate. He pitched his ninth career two-hitter — holding Minnesota hitless over the final 8 1-3 innings — as the Cleveland Indians beat the Twins 4-1.

Fregosi, named manager of the Chicago White Sox on Sunday morning, made a successful debut with his new team. Ozzie Guillen and Bobby Bonilla drove in two runs each as the White Sox downed the Seattle Mariners 10-4.

"I don't care if it was sloppy, dirty or grubby as long as we won," said Fregosi, who replaced the fired Tony LaRussa. "There were some mistakes made but we didn't make a lot ourselves and that's why we won."

In other American League games, Toronto pounded New York 15-1; Texas defeated Oakland 5-4; Baltimore blanked Boston 4-0; Kansas City stopped California 7-4; and Milwaukee downed Detroit, 5-4.

Fregosi had not worked in the big leagues since being dismissed as manager of the California Angels in 1981. He won two American Association championships with St. Louis' Class AAA Louisville team in the last three years.

The White Sox showed their new manager something from the start, scoring in the first inning when John Cangelosi led off with a walk, stole second, took third on an infield out and scored on Harold Baines' sacrifice fly.

"I was excited because the team was excited," Fregosi said. "They did the little things that don't show in the statistics like moving the runner from second to third three times with nobody out. And we got some sacrifice flies."

Guillen singled home two runs during a four-run second and doubled and scored on Cangelosi's double in the sixth.

The victory left the host White Sox in fourth place in the AL West, 9 1/2 games behind first-place Texas.

Niekro, winless in his previous five outings, got off to another rough start in Minnesota. Kirby Puckett led off the Twins' first with a single, took second on a groundout and scored on a single by Kent Hrbek.

But after that, Niekro was almost perfect as he retired 25 of the final 26 batters. The only other Twins to reach base were Gary Gaetti, who reached with two outs in the first on an error by third baseman Brook Jacoby, and Hrbek, who was hit by a pitch with two outs in the ninth.

"He threw a two-hitter against the best-hitting team in baseball," Minnesota Manager Ray Miller said.

Niekro, 4-6, won his 304th career game with help from Indians pitching coach Jack Aker and Mel Hall.

Aker noticed a slight flaw and helped Niekro fix his delivery. Niekro also said he adjusted his grip on the ball.

"You move your thumb a half-inch the wrong way and everything goes haywire," Aker said.

Said Niekro, "I'm not big on mechanics, go more on feeling. That feeling gives you the confidence to throw knuckleball after knuckleball."

Hall hit a two-run homer, his 10th, in the fourth inning that gave Niekro a three-run edge.

Niekro's outing was better than the one by his brother, Joe, who took the loss as the Yankees got routed by Toronto.

Blue Jays 15, Yankees 1

Tony Fernandez and Ernie Whitt both hit two-run homers and two-run doubles, sparking a season-high 16-hit attack that powered Toronto past New York.

Fernandez went 3-for-5 while Whitt, Willie Upshaw, Lloyd Moseby, Jesse Barfield and Damaso Garcia had two hits each for the host Blue Jays.

Upshaw's two-run single keyed a four-run fifth inning that snapped a 1-1 tie. Toronto added three runs in the sixth and kept pouring it on with four runs in the seventh and three more in the eighth.

Jimmy Key, 5-5, yielded Willie Randolph's first home run of the season in the first inning, but shut out the Yankees on eight more hits through eight innings.

Joe Niekro, 7-5, pitched five-plus innings and allowed seven runs, five earned, on seven hits.

Rangers 5, A's 4

Gary Ward drove in four runs with three hits, including a two-run triple that broke a seventh-inning tie and led Texas over Oakland.

The Rangers won their team-record 11th straight game at home. The A's lost for the 14th consecutive time on the road, also a club mark.

Jose Rijo, 2-6, who relieved in the sixth and struck out the side, gave up a double to Steve Buechele, a single to Curtis Wilkerson and an RBI single to Oddibe McDowell that tied the score in the seventh. Ward then tripled into the right-field corner.

Mike Davis and Mickey Tettleton hit solo homers for the A's.

Orioles 4, Red Sox 0

Storm Davis and Don Aase teamed on a three-hitter and John Shelby singled three times and drove in three runs as Baltimore won in Boston.

Davis, 6-7, yielded a first-inning single to Bill Buckner but did not allow another hit until Dwight Evans and Rich Gedman singled in the eighth. Aase got the final four outs for his major league-leading 19th save.

Shelby singled and scored in the third inning, had an RBI single in the fifth and added a two-run single in the ninth.

The Orioles had lost eight of their last 10 games. Baltimore's Cal Ripken went 0-for-4 and ended his 17-game hitting streak.

Brewers 5, Tigers 4

Mike Felder singled with two outs and the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth inning, breaking a 4-4 tie and lifting Milwaukee over Detroit.

Felder's single to right came off Willie Hernandez, the Tigers' third pitcher of the inning. The Brewers loaded the bases on one walk by Dave LaPoint, 2-6, and two more by John Pacella.

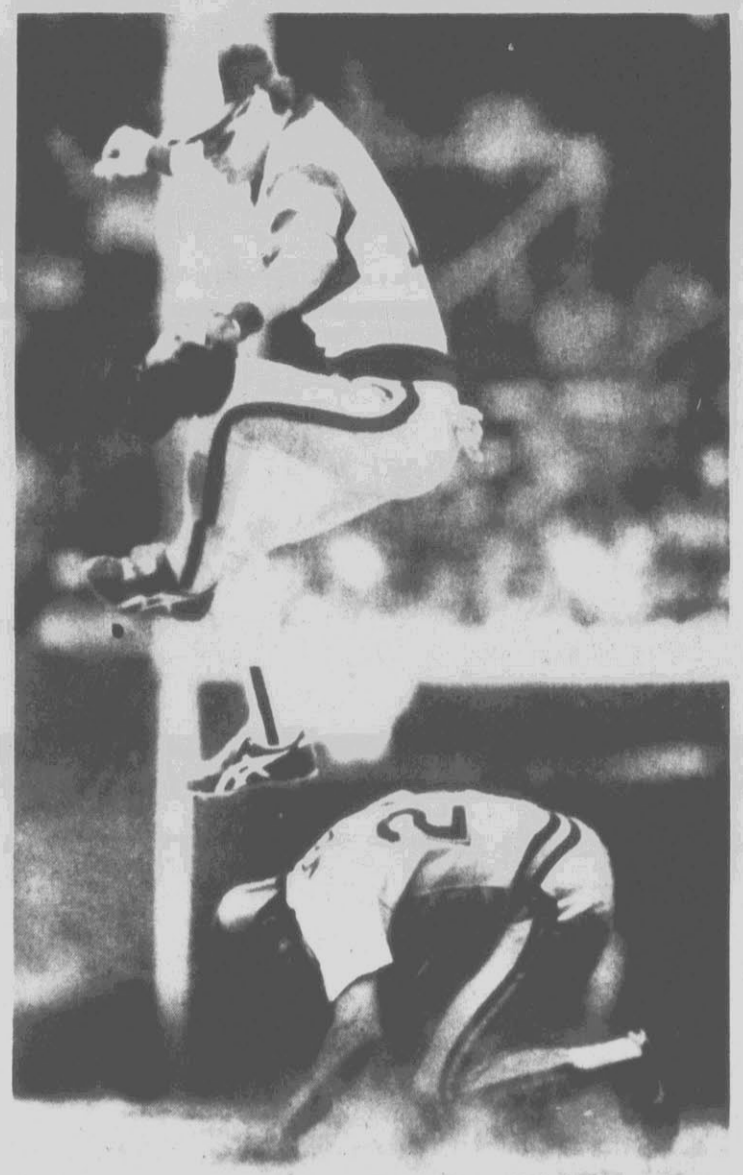

Dave Bergman hit a two-run homer in the top of the eighth that gave visiting Detroit a 4-2 lead, but Cecil Cooper's two-run single tied the score in the bottom of the eighth.

Royals 7, Angels 4

Steve Balboni hit his 14th home run of the season, a three-run shot in the fourth inning that sent Kansas City over California.

The Royals broke a three-game losing streak and ended the Angels' five-game winning string.

Rookie Scott Bankhead, 3-0, gave up five hits in seven-plus innings. Bud Black yielded an RBI single to Reggie Jackson in the eighth that made it 5-4 before Dan Quisenberry got the last four outs for his eighth save.

Tway Continues Dream Year

ATLANTA (AP) — No one could have expected a second-year professional golfer to have the kind of year Bob Tway is having.

The 27-year-old former Oklahoma State University star became the 1986 PGA Tour's first three-time winner Sunday when he shot an 8-under-par 64 to win the $500,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic by two shots over third-round leader Hal Sutton.

"I'd like to be on top in everything," Tway said. "But that's impossible to do. I'd just like to see how good I can be playing this game."

Coming from four shots back at the start of the day, Tway conquered the 7,007-yard, par-72 Atlanta Country Club course with exceptional iron play.

He placed his irons and wedges so close throughout the round that his longest birdie putt was only 10 feet on No. 9.

"I played very well today," he said. "I hit quite a few iron shots close to the hole."

The victory came in familiar surroundings.

Tway, now residing in Oklahoma, was reared in the Atlanta suburb of Marietta, located about four miles northwest of the Atlanta Country Club. He shot a 60 on the ACC layout when he visited in March.

The $90,000 first prize lifted him into second place on the money list with $446,119, trailing only Australian Greg Norman.

Norman also had a final round 64 Sunday to tie for third place, with his $24,000 check lifting his season's earnings to $482,979.

"It was one of those days when everything was going good," Tway said. "I just didn't make any mistakes."

Tway won the Andy Williams Open earlier this year and added his second career victory two weeks ago at the Westchester Classic.

The 6-foot-4, 180-pounder had birdie putts of 4 feet on No. 2 and 3 feet on No. 5 before making the turn at 33 after his birdie at 9. He was still three shots behind Sutton halfway through the round.

Tway scored from five feet or less on the 11th and 12 holes — the latter giving him a share of the lead with Sutton. He then birdied the 14th from three feet and took the lead for good with a 5-foot birdie putt on 15, which Sutton later bogeyed when he failed to sink a 5-foot par putt.

Tway's lead went to two shots when Sutton bogeyed No. 16, and Tway didn't need his two-putt tap-in birdie on the final hole.

"Sometimes it makes it easy to win when you're behind like that," Sutton said after closing at 70-271.

Mason Helps Snow Hill Slip Past Pitt County, 2-1

SNOW HILL — Kevin Mason drove in the tying and winning runs with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning on a bases-loaded single to give Snow Hill Post 94 a 2-1 victory over Pitt County Post 39 in American Legion baseball action Sunday.

The two-run ninth inning made a winner out of Anthony Jones who tossed a five-hit complete game. Jones struck out five and walked none.

Bronswell Patrick, who went the distance, was tagged for the loss. Patrick, who held Snow Hill scoreless until the ninth inning, walked five and struck out six.

Mason and Gary Ginn had two hits apiece for Snow Hill, while Fred Bryant led Pitt with two singles.

Pitt County scored its only run in the top of the second inning when Shannon Peece singled to drive in Bryant. Bryant singled to lead off the inning.

Neither squad was able to mount a serious threat until the final inning.

Trailing 1-0, Ginn singled to lead off the bottom of the ninth for Snow Hill. He moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Shay Beaman. Pinch-hitter Greg Patterson singled, but Ginn stopped at third.

With men on first and third, Patrick struck out Jones for the second out of the inning. Ervin Collins drew a walk on four pitches to set the stage for Mason.

Mason stroked a base hit to drive in Ginn and Patterson to win the game, 2-1.

Pitt County, which fell to 7-7, plays at Wilson Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Bias Investigation To Widen Scope

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — A grand jury investigation into the death of University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias likely will widen to include allegations of drug use among athletes on the campus, a prosecutor says.

Prince George's County state's attorney Arthur M. Marshall Jr. said Sunday that he expects basketball Coach Lefty Driesell and players Terry Long and David Gregg to be among those questioned by the grand jury Tuesday.

Marshall said police were still looking for Brian Tribble, a longtime friend of Bias', and another unidentified man, who were with the 22-year-old player in the hours before he collapsed and died Thursday.

Responding to reports that Driesell had instructed players on how to respond to questions from reporters and the police, Marshall said, "I don't think the role of a basketball coach is to tell student athletes not to talk to police."

"If these rumors are wrong, we'll give him a chance to talk about it," Marshall said, stressing that Driesell's role did not appear to be criminal obstruction of justice.

Prince George's County police are continuing their investigation into Bias' death. The 6-foot, 8-inch player died in his room just two days after he was selected by the champion Boston Celtics of the NBA.

Campus police on Friday searched Bias' leased car and found a small packet of white powder. Prince George's County police have sent the substance to the state police crime laboratory. So far, there has been no identification of it. The investigation likely will stretch beyond the Bias death into alleged drug use in the sports program and on the College Park campus in general, Marshall said.

If evidence shows that Bias had used cocaine in the hours before he died, criminal charges could be filed against the people who supplied the drug, Marshall said Sunday.

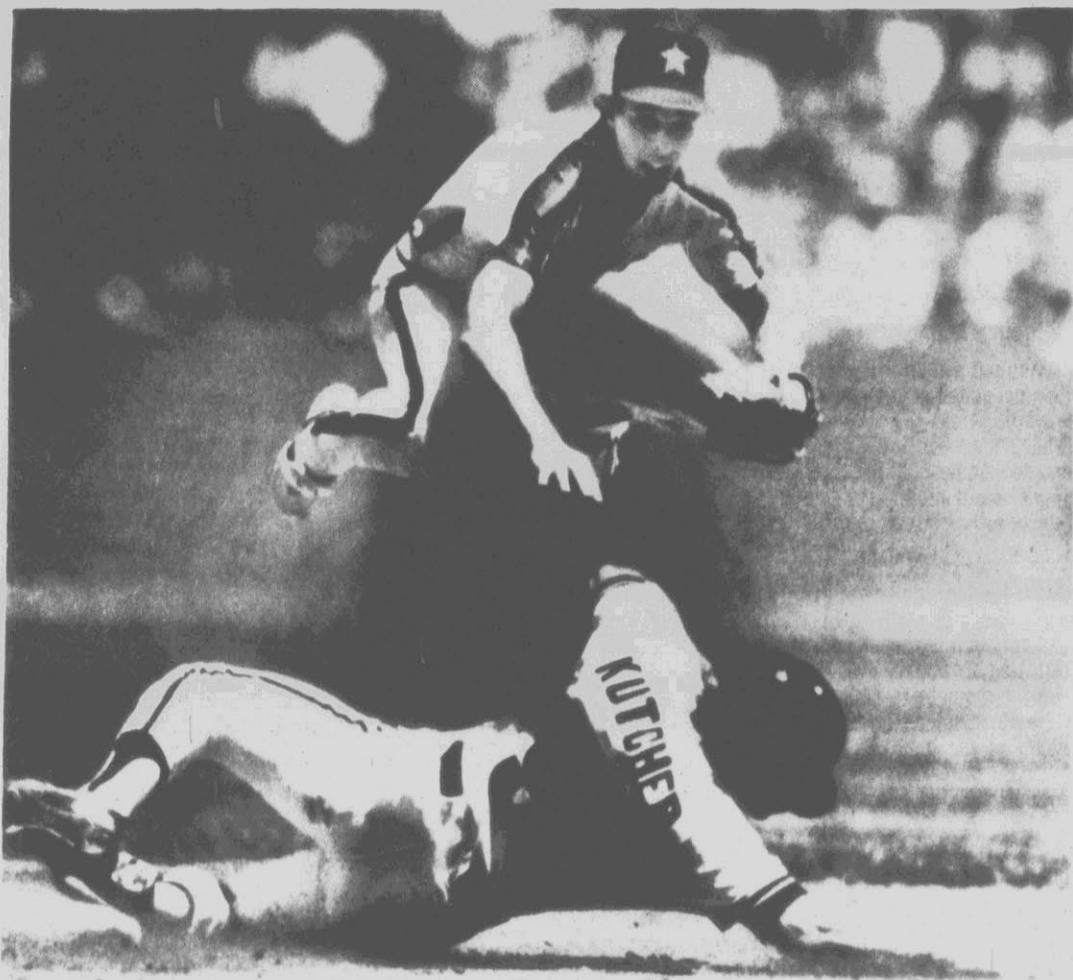

"Remember John Belushi," Marshall said.

Comedian John Belushi died four years ago of a drug overdose and Cathy Evelyn Smith, former rock backup singer, is awaiting sentencing on her plea of no contest to involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death.

She also pleaded no contest to three counts of furnishing and administering a controlled substance — injections of heroin and cocaine that killed Belushi.

Unmowed or littered lawns should be reported to the City Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

Giants Take NL West Lead

Astro Leap

Jim Mutrie would be proud of the Giants.

For those of you with short memories, Mutrie was the manager of the New York National League team from 1885-91. And one day, marveling at the imposing size of his athletes, he was heard to exclaim, "My big fellows; my giants."

Thus was a nickname born. The Giants, who haven't finished higher than third since they won the NL West in 1971, have finally recaptured the hearts of San Franciscans.

A Candlestick Park crowd of 47,030 watched the Giants sweep Houston 4-2, 3-2 on Sunday and take a 1 1/2-game lead over the Astros, the first time since Aug. 13, 1978, they have been in first place this far into a season.

"It seemed like a World Series," Manager Roger Craig said. "These guys had their adrenalin flowing. They're high as a kite. They feel they can beat anybody now. They're playing hard and they deserve to be in first place."

Elsewhere, San Diego edged Los Angeles 5-4; Cincinnati downed Atlanta 5-2; New York defeated Chicago 4-2; Montreal nipped Pittsburgh 2-1; and St. Louis turned back Philadelphia, 7-4.

The Giants won their opener as Chris Brown drove in a pair of runs with a double and a single and Mike Krukow scattered seven hits. Randy Kutcher hit his second homer in four major-league games and Rob Thompson singled home the tie-breaking run in the fifth inning.

After the Astros tied the nightcap in the top of the eighth on Billy Hatcher's two-run single, Thompson drew a leadoff walk in the bottom half from Houston relief ace Dave Smith. One out later, Candy Maldonado singled Thompson to second and Brown walked to load the bases. Mike Aldrete, who doubled a run home in the fourth inning, forced Brown to second as Thompson scored the winning run.

"It's a great feeling to be in first place in the middle of June," added Brown. "It's even a better feeling considering we have so many guys on the disabled list (center fielder Dan Gladden, first baseman Will Clark and pitchers Atlee Hammaker, Jim Gott and Roger Mason), but it seems that whoever we bring up does the job."

"Everybody was sky-high today. How can you not be up for it when you've got 50,000 people watching you play for first place?"

The Astros, who scored only six runs in losing the four-game series, returned home to face Cincinnati tonight with Manager Hal Lanier (a former Giant player) still talking tough.

"The Giants played good baseball and they deserved to win," he conceded. "But losing four games here isn't the end of the world and it's not the end of the season. Let's see who's in first in October. Our guys have been around long enough to know that it's only June. We've just got to go on from here and play hard."

Padres 5, Dodgers 4
Tim Flannery hit a tie-breaking home run with two out in the top of the ninth inning off reliever Tom Niedenfuer, the ninth homer allowed by Niedenfuer in 43 innings. Craig Lefferts allowed two hits over the final 3 2/3 innings to get the victory.

The Padres, who erased a 5-0 deficit Saturday night, came from behind 4-0 this time, tying the game in the eighth inning when Graig Nettles singled with two out and Garry Templeton's single scored pinch-runner Bip Roberts, who had stolen second.

The game marked the debut of Los Angeles shortstop Craig Shipley, the first Australian-born player to appear in a major-league game. The 22-year-old switch-hitter, a native of Parramatta, New South Wales, drove in a run with a second-inning grounder, singled, fouled out and lined out. In the field, Shipley did not have a chance during the game.

"It's a big moment for me," Shipley said. "It's something I've been working for for a long time now. I hope it can pave the way for some other players."

Reds 5, Braves 2
Eric Davis scored the game's first run on an error and added a two-run homer. Loser Craig McMurry was victimized by second baseman Ken Oberkfell's error for an unearned run in the sixth inning — it was Oberkfell's first start at the position this season — and Davis's homer in the seventh following Pete Rose's bunt single. Cincinnati's John Denny blanked the Braves until the eighth.

Mets 4, Cubs 2
Len Dykstra and George Foster homered in support of Ron Darling's five-hit pitching. Darling struck out five and did not allow a walk while loser Rick Sutcliffe was charged with all four New York runs while pitching 6 1/3 innings.

The Mets took a 2-0 lead in the third inning on Darling's infield hit, a ball, and Dykstra's second home run of the season. Foster made it 3-0 in the fourth with his 11th homer.

Expos 2, Pirates 1
Vance Law's pinch-hit single in the seventh inning snapped a tie. Joe Hesketh pitched seven innings and allowed nine hits, including Bill Almon's leadoff homer in the first. Jeff Reardon pitched the final two innings for his 17th save.

Montreal tied the game against Rick Reuschel in the second inning on singles by Hubie Brooks, Tim Wallach and Jason Thompson. Herm Winningham led off the seventh with a double and went to third on Mike Fitzgerald's bunt single. Pinch-hitter Wayne Krenchick popped out but Law, batting for Al Newman, singled behind the bag at second to drive in Winningham.

Cardinals 7, Phillies 4
Terry Pendleton's three-run double capped a five-run sixth inning. Rookie Greg Mathews, called up from the minors May 30, allowed seven hits in 7 2/3 innings for his fourth victory in five decisions, including home runs by Mike Schmidt and Juan Samuel.

With the scored tied 1-1, Ozzie Smith opened the Cardinals' sixth with a single off Mike Maddux and scored on Tom Herr's double. After Jack Clark walked, Willie McGee's double scored Herr. Randy Lerch relieved and walked Curt Ford to load the bases. Mike LaValiere popped out but Pendleton cleared the bases for a 6-1 lead.

Rocky Mount Routs Pitt County, 11-4

ROCKY MOUNT — Tim Wilson stroked out three hits to drive in two runs and pitched a complete game to lead Rocky Mount Post 58 to a 11-4 victory over Pitt County Post 39 in an American Legion baseball game Saturday night.

Hank Jones, Shelton Grant and John Adams had two hits apiece for Rocky Mount, while Lee Hardee and Bronswell Patrick each had two hits for Pitt County.

Wilson, who allowed eight hits, struck out six and walked three in picking up the win.

Pitt County pitcher Eric Jarman was reached for 12 hits and eight runs before he was lifted with one out in the fifth inning in favor of Axel Smith.

Pitt County jumped out on top 1-0 in the top of the first when Shane Adams reached on an error, stole second and scored on a single by Hardee.

Rocky Mount knotted the game with a run in the bottom of the inning.

Grant doubled with one out, advanced to third on a single by John Adams, and scored on a sacrifice fly off by Donnie Bobbitt.

Rocky Mount pushed two more runs across the plate in the bottom of the second inning to take a 3-1 lead.

In the inning, Hank Jones singled, stole second, moved to third on a ground out and scored on a base hit by Wilson. Anthony Brown followed with a single and Grant rapped a base hit to drive in Wilson.

Rocky Mount padded the lead with a five-run fifth inning to take an 8-1 lead.

After John Adams singled to lead off the inning, Donnie Bobbitt struck out. Rocky Mount hitters then slugged out five consecutive singles. A two-run single by Jerry Edwards highlighted the inning.

Rocky Mount continued to pour it on with three more runs in the top of the seventh to take a 11-1 advantage.

Mike Davis singled home John Adams, who led off the inning with a walk and stole second. Hank Jones, who had walked ahead of Davis, stole home for the second run of the inning, and Wilson drove in Davis with a base hit.

Trailing 11-1, Pitt scored three times in the seventh inning to make the score 11-4.

Dickenson Holds Off Bradley To Win Tourney

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Judy Dickinson said her victory at the Rochester International gave her something much more valuable than momentum going into next weekend's Mayflower Classic in Indianapolis.

"It gave me the confidence of knowing you can win without playing your very best," she said of her one-shot victory in the $250,000 tournament over Pat Bradley.

Dickinson survived an "emotional rollercoaster" and a charging Bradley in Sunday's final round to finish at 7-under-par 281 and collect the $38,250 first prize.

She took the lead for good when she knocked in an 87-yard pitching wedge for an eagle on the par-5, 489-yard 11th hole.

"I finally hit a straight shot ... and it went in the hole," the 36-year-old Akron, Ohio, native said. "It was such an emotional day. I wanted to win so bad."

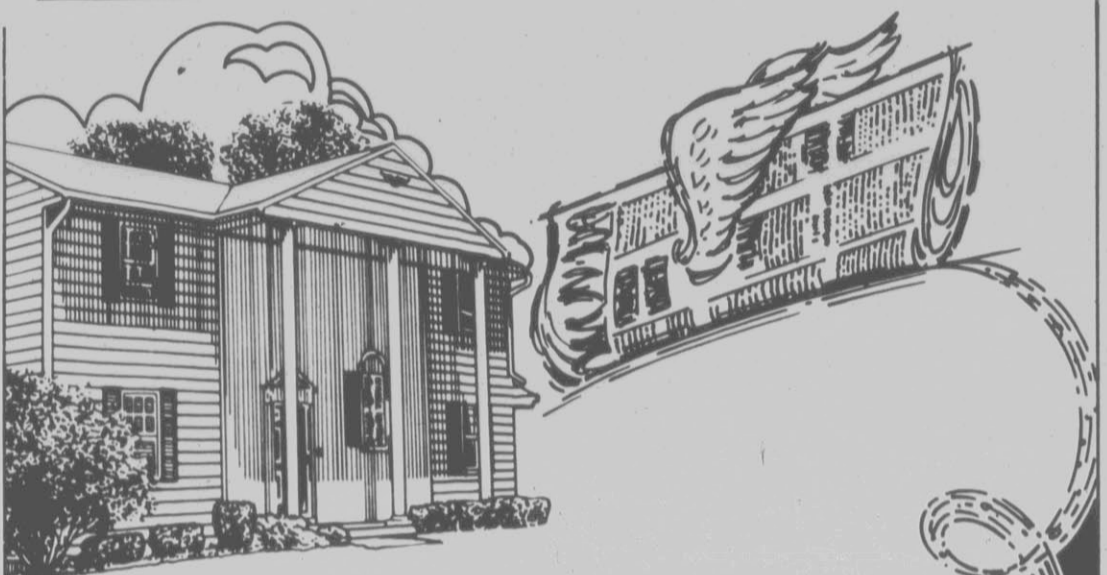

After the eagle, Dickinson had three birdies, a bogey and a double bogey, and finished with a 2-under-par 70 to go along with a 74 on Thursday, a 69 on Friday and a 68 Saturday.

It was the second triumph for Dickinson, the wife of professional golfer Gardiner Dickinson, since joining the LPGA tour in 1978.

Bradley, defending champion at Rochester and the leading money winner on the LPGA Tour, shot a 68 Sunday to finish at 282.

"I'm not disappointed at all," said Bradley, who registered her 41st second-place finish of her 12-year career. "I shot 4 under par and had no bogeys. What more can I say. Judy just played a strong game."

Shootouts Abound In World Cup

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Three penalty-kick shootouts and the magic of Maradona. What more could a soccer fan ask for?

"I had the luck to make the goals," Maradona said after scoring twice Sunday — one goal dubious, the other magnificent — in the 2-1 triumph.

against Belgium at Aztec Stadium here. The Belgians were perfect on their five penalty kicks, while goalie Jean-Marie Pfaff stopped Spain's Eloy Ojala for the margin in Sunday's 5-4 victory.

Maradona scored in the 51st and 55th minutes. On his first goal, he dribbled through a group of players and the ball deflected into the air in front of the English net.

Conley's Best Not Enough

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — It's not surprising that Mike Conley was frustrated after completing the best combination triple jump-long jump performance in track and field history without winning either event.

"I'm the greatest second-place jumper of all time," he said. With a brisk wind at his back, Charlie Simpkins soared 58 feet, 9 1/4 inches to beat Conley's wind-aided 58-6 1/2.

Lewis, who won the long jump and 100 meters Friday, was thwarted in his attempt to duplicate his triple victory in the 1983 national championships.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Thomas Hearn and Roberto Duran, who have been big losers in this city where winning is everything, will fight tonight at Caesars Palace.

Also on the card will be Barry McGuigan, the World Boxing Association featherweight champion, who prefers the country setting of his home in Ireland to the glitter of this gambling capital.

Hagler is scheduled to announce at news conference Tuesday that he will fight in November.

Hearn has signed for a rematch against Hagler, but Hagler hasn't. It is possible Hagler will fight Leonard, the former undisputed welterweight champion, who has said he would come out of retirement if Hagler would fight him this year.

Duran, who has a 79-6 record, with 59 knockouts, held the lightweight, WBC welterweight and WBA junior middleweight titles. He retired after he was knocked out in the second round by Hearn June 15, 1984.

The 25-year-old Sims, of Brockton, Mass., is the United States Boxing Association middleweight champion and has a 26-4-1 record, with 19 knockouts.

Gasoline Pump Price Declines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices usually start rising as the Fourth of July approaches, but this year motorists are paying under 90 cents a gallon at self-serve pumps and prices are still headed down, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg says.

The latest twice-monthly Lundberg Survey of 17,000 gasoline stations across the country shows the average price of regular leaded gasoline at self-serve pumps, including all taxes, is now 82.95 cents per gallon. Regular unleaded is 88.70 cents per gallon and premium unleaded is 102.50 cents.

"What you are seeing now for most of the country is gasoline at or below a dollar. That is a harbinger. Instead of last summer's increases, prices are going into a pit from the May-June spike," Lundberg said Sunday.

"You have to go back to 1978 to find a price like that."

The average for all self-serve gasoline is 89.75 cents a gallon, while the overall price of gasoline at full-serve pumps for all grades is $1.1564.

The average price for all grades of gasoline will likely decline further, perhaps by 3.4 cents a gallon later this week, because refinery gate prices dropped 4.74 cents a gallon in the past few days, Lundberg said.

"That's a startling unseasonal cut on the eve of the July Fourth holiday, which usually ushers in retail and wholesale price increases," Lundberg said. "July 4th is the big season opener for the gasoline business."

The average price of gasoline has dropped 25.84 cents a gallon this year, he said. In 1985, gasoline declined 6 cents a gallon in the first quarter, but recovered by about 6.5 cents a gallon in the second quarter and continued to rise to an end-of-the-year plateau of $1.21, he said.

"This year's first quarter found the average plunged by 21.75 cents a gallon because of the freefall that OPEC (the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) began," Lundberg said.

There was a further drop for the second quarter with the year-to-date drop at 25.84 cents.

"That's a very big decline," he said. "All of this is absolutely unprecedented on the eve of the Fourth of July."

Experts Disagree On Dioxin Issue

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Waste disposal experts in Europe, where garbage burning is widespread, disagree on whether dioxins are produced during incineration, an environmental research group said today.

Dioxins, which some scientists believe are produced in tiny amounts in all combustion, are among the most powerful causes of cancer ever tested in laboratory animals. In humans, however, they have not been shown to cause anything more than a severe form of acne in heavy exposures.

U.S. opponents of garbage burning have raised the issue of whether such incineration generates harmful amounts of dioxins. Both sides in the debate have appealed to the European experience.

The New York City-based group, Inform, today released a report authored by Allen Hershkowitz, who studied European systems as part of the group's survey of 15 U.S. plants. The United States incinerates only 2 percent or 3 percent of its garbage, with most put in landfills — a technique being phased out for lack of land and concerns about pollution of groundwater.

Seventy-five percent of Switzerland's garbage is burned.

In addition to Switzerland, Hershkowitz visited Norway, which burns 5 percent of its garbage; West Germany, 34 percent; and Sweden, 50 percent. Hershkowitz' report said Sweden closed its 27 plants in February 1985 to study the question of dioxins.

"Babies were consuming mother's breast milk with dioxin levels 50 to 200 times over the daily limit we assume is acceptable." Professor Christopher Rappe of Umea University was quoted as saying. Rappe is in charge of most of the studies on dioxin and incinerators. But in Germany, "There is no dioxin risk at all from incinerators," according to Franz Defregger, director of waste management for Bavaria. He called the Swedish moratorium "crazy."

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JUNE 24, 1986

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You want to make some drastic changes but there is confusion in relation to the information available to you. Go slowly with any revisions right now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Confer with good friends about how to gain the ambitions that mean the most to you, and get fine ideas and advice.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be sure that you know exactly what is expected of you by one in very high position before you get into your career work.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You want to start on a new venture but need to study it further before putting it in operation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) If a practical matter is not quite clear to you, seek advice of one well-versed in such business affairs.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Plan how to show yourself in public so that you can add to prestige you now enjoy. Maintain the status quo.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may not need new gadgets to be more efficient at your work, so study the matter well before spending the extra money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are in need of recreation but look into new sports. Avoid being disappointed later. Make sure you keep the promises you've made.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) That situation at home is in the process of being ameliorated, but don't try to rush matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Activities could cause you to change regular course of action, but this could be for the better in the end.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You enjoy business and real estate matters, so get busy and modernize them. Listen carefully to what is being suggested.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have fine ideas for gaining your personal wishes, but use tact for best results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put aside some of your old-fashioned ideas, and become more attuned to the modern way of life and adopt only the best of this.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be concerned with the modern way of doing things and be connected with modern professions. Teach to combine the old with the new for real success, otherwise your progeny could be considered a little bit odd. There is originality here which should not be squelched.

San Diego Power Most Expensive

NEW YORK (AP) — San Diego and New York businesses pay the most for their electricity, while rates in the Pacific Northwest are the cheapest, according to a survey of commercial electricity rates.

San Diego Gas & Electric had the highest rates of 137 utilities, followed by two New York metropolitan-area utilities, the Long Island Lighting Co. and Consolidated Edison, according to a survey released Sunday.

Carolina Power & Light Co. ranked 75th, while Duke Power Co. was listed in the 95th spot.

Two other utilities in the New York area — Jersey Central Power & Light and Orange and Rockland Utilities — were in the top 10.

The least expensive electric utility in the country was the Tacoma, Wash., Department of Public Utilities, followed by Seattle City Light and the Idaho Power Co.

They were followed by two other utilities from the Pacific Northwest, where hydroelectricity is abundant — Washington Water Power Co. and Montana Power Co.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 ♠AKQ103 ♦A98 ♣AJ105
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 1♣ Pass
2♣ Pass 4♣ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—For his jump to game at this vulnerability, partner should have a suit that will play for only one loser. Your control cards should take care of all partner's side-suit losers, so we would opt for six spades. However, if you want to give partner a bit of leeway, cue-bid five diamonds.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♥AKJ9 ♦109762 ♣KJ7
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1♥ Pass 1NT Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Now that you know the opponents do not have a refuge in the spade suit, the time has come to double. Clearly, this double is for penalties. Had you wanted to hear from partner, you would have doubled one heart for takeout.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q9 ♥K7 ♦AQ10952 ♣876
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1♣ Pass 2♦ Dble
Pass 2♥ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—This is a situation where partner can judge the situation better than you. He knows the approximate strength of your hand from your two-over-one response, but his opening bid can have quite a wide range. Pass, and let him decide on the best action for your side.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♥Q9873 ♦J10542 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1♣ 1♦ 1♠ ?

What action do you take?
A.—Since the opponents have a lot of black cards, some preemptive action is called for. We suggest four diamonds, but won't quibble with five. Four diamonds appeals more because, should partner go on to game, we think he might make it.

If the opponents persevere with four spades, you will then have to decide whether to defend or bid one more.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠5 ♥653 ♦AQ10942 ♣852
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1♣ 2♥ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Just because you are a passed hand and not vulnerable does not give you the right to stick your neck out and invite the ax. There is a danger of a misfit, and bidding three diamonds might force three spades from partner; and from there on it could become bloody. Pass. If partner is strong, he will reopen.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠93 ♥KQJ10763 ♦854 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
A.—This is no time for shilly-shallying around. Bid four hearts, firstly because you might make it, and secondly because it is quite possible that the opponents have a playable spot in spades and preemptive action by you could keep them out of it.

Donahue Leads 'Summit' By U.S., Soviet Women

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer
NEEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — U.S. and Soviet women linked by satellite for a television program disagreed on political issues but found they had common family problems like getting husbands to help around the house.

"A working woman is an extremely busy person. We have husbands. We have children," a Soviet woman said. "I think right now this is a universal problem."

Two hundred women in Leningrad, including doctors, housewives and laborers, and 200 of their American counterparts in this Boston suburb quizzed each other for three hours Sunday on issues ranging from nuclear war to a lack of available men.

The event, billed as a "Citizens' Summit," will be televised in most major U.S. cities beginning Wednesday, producers said. Soviet national television also is expected to air the program in a one- or two-hour segment.

The first satellite summit linked men and women in Seattle and Leningrad in December.

TV talk show host Phil Donahue served as moderator in the Massachusetts studio, while Soviet commentator Vladimir Pozner was the Leningrad moderator. The women exchanged views while watching each other on large-screen monitors and listening to translators.

In their exchange, some of the Boston-area women noted the renewed opposition to nuclear power plants in the United States following the Chernobyl accident and wondered why the Soviets were not protesting to try to close down atomic plants in their country.

"Calm down, comrades," one Soviet woman chided the Americans. "Everything is back to normal. We coped with it as an entire people."

Others said shutting down the plants was impractical.

"We cannot stop the development of science that is going on now in the world," a Leningrad woman said. "Our entire development depends on nuclear energy."

With a show of hands, all the participants indicated both governments should be working to end the nuclear arms race.

"We are really trying to save our species from extinction. How can we resolve conflict between our nations ... without resorting to violence?" asked a U.S. woman.

"We are actually one big family. Not just friends, family," said a Leningrad woman.

The women shared family problems, including high divorce rates and the difficulty of juggling the responsibilities of a job, husband and children. And a Soviet woman agreed with U.S. participants who said husbands were not pulling their fair share of work around the house.

"The majority of men in our country do very little at home," she said. "Men today have been a little infantile, perhaps." Her remarks drew nods of approval and applause from the Massachusetts audience.

Some of the U.S. mothers complained about the lack of day care in their country, while the Soviet women told of round-the-clock nurseries close to home.

The Soviet women criticized their American counterparts for carrying misconceptions about Soviet life. Stories Americans had heard about huge lines to get food and clothing were false, they said.

Keach Trades Coat For Tux

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Stacy Keach, trading his trench coat for a tuxedo, married a Polish actress and swept her away in a white limousine a year after finishing six months in jail on a drugs charge.

Keach, 44, star of CBS-TV's "The New Mike Hammer," married Polish actress Malgosia Tomassi Sunday during a private 30-minute church service before about 75 family and friends.

"When she came down the aisle my knees began to shake, she was so beautiful," Keach said of his bride at the reception.

The wedding took place at St. Michael's All Angels Episcopal Church in Studio City. The Rev. Weaver Stevens officiated.

Meeting Miss Tomassi, 28, changed Keach's life, he said.

Keach said last week that he was writing a book called "Christmas With Her Majesty," describing the six months he served in an English prison for possessing cocaine. He said it was "the lowest point in my life."

Keach was arrested in April 1984 and pleaded guilty to smuggling 1.3 ounces of cocaine into England. He was sentenced to nine months in Reading Prison, but was released early for good behavior.

"My whole life has turned around in terms of personal happiness," Keach said. "I'm probably the luckiest man in the world the way things have worked out."

The wedding reception was held at the Malibu Lake Mountain Club in Agoura, about 20 miles from the church. The bride and groom arrived in a white limousine.

Guests included Eddie Albert, David and Keith Carradine, Cathy Lee Crosby, Teri Garr, comedian Cheech Marin, Michele Lee, and "Mike Hammer" co-star Don Stroud.

"It's a big day for everybody," said "Mike Hammer" producer Jay Bernstein. "I don't know how they could get out of all the things they said yes to. This is going to last a lifetime."

Keach and his bride, who appeared in Polish movies, will honeymoon in Hawaii.

Keach said he hasn't taken drugs since his release, but he's had a recurring nightmare in which he's at a party and others are using drugs.

"My priorities are a lot different now," he said. "Obviously I'm not involved with drugs anymore. Now I'm involved more with my family and the people close to me."

Reagans Reflect On U.S. Reactions

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, say they have been impressed by the strength and perseverance of Americans in times of tragedy.

The Reagans, writing in the June 28 issue of TV Guide, said tragedies such as the Challenger disaster or the crash of a plane carrying soldiers home from peacekeeping duty in the Mideast put those qualities to the test.

"On those occasions, the strength, faith, hope and perseverance that seem uniquely American find new definition," they said. The article is part of the magazine's coverage of the Statute of Liberty centennial.

However, they wrote, these attributes have been tested "too often — when the price of peace or progress is suddenly, tragically assessed in the loss of life."

In the article, the Reagans recalled their trip in December 1985 to Fort Campbell, Ky., to honor members of the 101st Airborne Division who were killed in the plane crash in Gander, Newfoundland.

Senate Clearing Way To Pass Tax Bill

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is clearing away a handful of minor amendments before giving what is expected to be a resounding endorsement to a landmark tax-revision plan.

And President Reagan is trying again to win House approval for military aid to Nicaraguan rebels, but his prospects are clouded by the refusal of a group of centrist Democrats to support the package.

Taxes and Contra aid will be the two major topics on Capitol Hill this week.

The tax bill, on which a final vote is scheduled Tuesday, would make what sponsors claim are the broadest changes in the income tax in at least a half-century. The bill bogged down last week when senators began attaching special amendments to the measure. A final vote would send the bill to a conference committee where numerous differences would be worked out with the version passed by the House.

Sen. Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said late last week he was sure the tax bill will pass "by an overwhelming margin."

The legislation, covering nearly 3,000 pages, seems to prove the point that many tax experts have been arguing for years: Making the tax law fair also tends to make it complex.

Sponsors of the bill claim the rate structure in the measure has been the key to keeping supporters lined up behind the measure. "The rates are the magic," Dole likes to say.

The big coalition of more than 700 corporations, trade associations, churches and other organizations crusading for the bill even calls itself 15-27-33 — for the two individual rates of 15 percent and 27 percent and the 33 percent corporate rate the bill would provide. Some Senate Finance Committee staffers sport big badges proclaiming 15-27-33.

But economists and tax authorities say the "27" part is fiction. "It's a very big sham," political scientist Norman Ornstein says.

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, a Finance Committee member, says the top rate in the bill is not 27 percent but 32.4 percent.

It's another one of those complexities aimed at increasing fairness.

If the top rate for individuals really were 27 percent, the nation's richest people would get a considerably larger share of the tax cut in the bill than might be politically defensible.

Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., and members of the Finance Committee settled on a solution that makes it appear that the top rate would be 27 percent. For the great majority of upper-income people, it would be. But not for all of them.

For about 80 percent of the nation's taxpayers the argument has little practical meaning, since under the bill the government would take a flat 15 percent of their taxable income — or zero for the people at the bottom of the economic scale.

Here's how the system would work, and how the "phantom" 32.4 percent rate would come about, assuming a family of two parents and two children with adjusted gross income of $200,000 (single people would be affected in a similar fashion):

If 27 percent were really the top rate under the bill, the first $29,299 of taxable income (after deductions and exemptions) would be taxed at 15 percent and everything above that at 27 percent. There are two exceptions for this high-income family:

— Once adjusted gross income exceeds $75,000, the bill would take back the taxes the family had saved from the 15 percent rate. That would be done by imposing a 5 percent surtax on income between $75,000 and $145,320, boosting the top rate for the family to 32 percent.

— On income above $145,320, the bill would take back a gradually larger portion of the family's $2,000-per-person exemptions. Once income reached $185,320, the exemptions would be zero. So, on income between $145,320 and $185,320, the tax rate would be 32.4 percent.

Above $185,320, the rate would drop back to zero — and that is what concerns Mitchell and some other liberals. "How can we call this tax reform when it includes provisions that reduce marginal tax rates as income rises?" he asks.

The House plan has four individual rates, with a top of 38 percent, and has not stirred the excitement the Senate bill has. But even if the final bill compromises at a true top rate somewhere between 27 percent and 38 percent, it still would result in the lowest tax rates in 50 years. And it would be only half the maximum rate in effect five years ago.

In other action this week:
— Reagan again will ask for $100 million in aid to the Contras, including $70 million worth of military equipment. He says it is needed to help the Contras fight the Soviet-backed Nicaraguan government and halt a threat to U.S. security in Central America.

An alternative plan being offered by Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., would give the Contras $30 million now in aid for non-lethal items such as clothing, but would hold up the $70 million worth of military hardware until after a second House vote Oct. 1.

The support of McCurdy and a group of other Democrats was a key part of last year's narrow House approval of the current package of $27 million in non-lethal aid. But compromise talks between House Republicans and the centrist Democrats headed by McCurdy fell apart Friday.

— The House Judiciary subcommittee on courts is scheduled to vote Tuesday on articles of impeachment against U.S. District Judge Harry E. Claiborne, who has been found guilty of tax evasion and is serving a two-year prison term.

— The House and Senate are scheduled to take up a $1.7 billion supplemental spending bill needed to keep programs which have run out of money operating through the end of the fiscal year.

— A showdown vote in the Senate is expected, possibly Wednesday, on the confirmation of Daniel Manion, President Reagan's controversial choice for a seat on the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Violent Storms Strike Midwest

By The Associated Press

Lightning struck three golfers in Michigan, killing one, and high winds knocked down trees and power lines as violent thunderstorms raked parts of the Midwest.

In Indianapolis, high winds Sunday picked up a fair ride and hurled it into another ride about 30 feet away.

An attendant was inside the first ride, called the Moonhouse, but "luckily, they had just got the last kid off when it hit," said Patrolman George F. Bowen Jr.

Two attendants were treated for minor injuries.

Winds gusting up to 85 mph also damaged buildings in the storms that pushed across a wide area from South Dakota to Ohio on Saturday and Sunday. Up to 4 inches of rain soaked the region, the National Weather Service said, and scattered tornadoes also were reported. The storms were spawned ahead of a slow-moving cold front.

Three men were injured Sunday as they golfed during a heavy thunderstorm at Silver Lake Golf Club in Michigan's Oakland County, authorities said.

Paul Durocher, 24, whose hometown was not available, died at 7:15 p.m. Sunday at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital, said nursing supervisor K.C. Johnson.

His twin brother, John, was in serious condition this morning, Johnson said, while a third man was listed in critical condition at Pontiac General Hospital.

In Ohio, strong winds ripped part of a building materials plant in Newark and blew down power lines and trees, officials said early today. There were no reports of injuries.

Winds blew off part of the front and a section of the roof at the Tectum Inc. plant in Newark shortly after 11 p.m. Sunday, said night watchman Oscar Laisure. He did not have a damage estimate.

A Licking County sheriff's department spokesman said there were several reports of tornadoes but none of them was confirmed.

New Soviet Diplomat To Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Reagan prepared to greet new Soviet Ambassador Yuri V. Dubinin, administration officials voiced caution on whether the meeting would bring any breakthrough on prospects for a summit this year.

"This will be an opportunity for a direct eye-level Soviet contact with the president if they are so prepared and so desire," White House spokesman Edward Djerejian said. "But we have had no signals. We will just have to wait and see."

Dubinin, who has returned from consultations in Moscow, was among several ambassadors formally presenting their diplomatic credentials to the president in the Oval Office today.

The scheduled meeting comes three days after the U.S. government ordered the expulsion of Col. Vladimir M. Izmaylov, a Soviet military attaché who was accused of spying.

FBI officials say Izmaylov, who was arrested Thursday night in Ft. Washington, Md., following an undercover operation, was seeking sensitive defense secrets about such programs as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Dubinin was named Soviet ambassador to the United States to succeed Anatoly Dobrynin after Dobrynin was appointed to the Communist Party Central Committee Secretariat on March 6.

Although today's meeting is a formality, there has been speculation Dubinin might bring a Soviet response to a letter Reagan wrote to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev this month suggesting a summit planning session soon, perhaps in Europe.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze were originally scheduled to hold such a meeting in May in Washington, but the Soviets called it off after the U.S. bombing raids on Libya on April 15.

Reagan and Gorbachev agreed at their first meeting in Geneva in November to meet again in the United States this year and in the Soviet Union next year.

Shultz May Seek New Zealand Pact

SINGAPORE (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today he is likely to meet later in the week with Prime Minister David Lange of New Zealand to discuss the dispute over whether U.S. ships can visit New Zealand ports.

Shultz told reporters traveling with him on a five nation trip to Asia that he may meet Lange while they are attending the meeting of foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and their key trading partners.

The meeting will be in Manila beginning on Tuesday.

Relations between the United States and New Zealand have been strained in recent months because of the dispute that has affected the Australia-New Zealand-United States alliance.

New Zealand has refused to permit visits by U.S. warships that carry nuclear weapons. The refusal has led to a stalemate since U.S. policy forbids any announcement of whether nuclear weapons are carried aboard ships.

"Obviously there are a variety of issues but perhaps the one which is most noteworthy at the moment is the port access issue and no doubt we will discuss it," Shultz said.

"Clearly what we would like to have is to return to the ship visit policy that has prevailed for so long," he said.

Shultz met for more than two hours with Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an ordained minister. One problem we have with people in our congregation is that we receive invitations from most parents whose children are graduating from high school and college.

In the first place, it is improper to send us invitations. In the second place, some of those families have three and four children, and since our salary is far below other professionals with equal education, we cannot afford to give gifts. (I wonder how many of these same people would have the nerve to send invitations to their doctors, lawyers, high school principals, etc.) And, Abby, it doesn't stop there, either. After college, we receive bridal shower and wedding invitations (even when my husband performs the ceremony), then come baby showers and housewarming invitations. In some situations we have spent as much as $200 per family, depending on the number of children they have.

Please print this letter in hopes that the congregations that are uneducated in this area will read this and become more knowledgeable on what is proper etiquette. Thank you. — DON'T IDENTIFY ME, PLEASE

DEAR DON'T: Unfortunately, some people view every invitation and announcement as a hint for a gift, which is not necessarily the case.

Many send their clergyman invitations to all family celebrations seeking more to be honored with their presence than their presents.

Don't strain your budget in order to send a gift. A note or card offering congratulations and best wishes is sufficient.

DEAR ABBY: From time to time you have comments in your column regarding Secretaries Day.

I am a certified public accountant who recently led a workshop involving secretaries and their bosses. I asked secretaries what they wanted most from their bosses on Secretaries Day. Then I asked the bosses what they thought their secretaries wanted most on "their" day. There were 201 responses from secretaries, and 143 responses from their bosses.

Guess what 22 percent of the secretaries said they wanted most on their day? A day off with pay! Only 6 percent of the bosses said that that's what their secretaries wanted most.

By a large margin, 31 percent of the bosses said they thought what their secretaries wanted most on their day was praise and recognition. Only 16 percent of the secretaries said that's what they wanted most.

Concerning flowers: Only 7 percent of the secretaries said they wanted flowers. But 25 percent of the bosses said they thought their secretaries wanted flowers.

Interesting? — MARY L. CRAIG, CPA

DEAR MARY: Very. Unfortunately, what most secretaries want and what they get are vastly different. Moral: If one wants to know, one asks. But if one isn't asked, then one takes what one gets.

DEAR ABBY: I just read about the toddler who drowned in an ice chest and want to pass this along to you.

Recently, our very good friends lost a darling 14-month-old grandson. His baby sitter had strapped him into his high chair, then she went outside for a few minutes.

When she returned, she found that the baby had wiggled down and hanged himself on the strap!

As was the case with the child who fell into an ice chest that contained enough water to drown him, no one ever dreamed such a thing could happen, but it did. And as you said, "If it happened once, it could happen again." Thank you for the warning. — BONNIE FROM CARSON
