East Eulogized As 'Man Of Courage'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

In the softly lit sanctuary of a Greenville church, U.S. Sen. John East was eulogized Tuesday as a man of courage who was "willing to pay the price" as over 900 people, led by state and national government leaders, gathered for a memorial service.

East, 55, who committed suicide Sunday by running an automobile in the closed garage of his Longmeadow Road home, "knew it didn't take many people to influence a nation," the Rev. Malloy Owen told mourners during the service. "It just took some people who knew what they believed, were thoroughly convinced that they were right, and were willing to pay the price of being different."

"John East was willing to pay the price and he has," Owen said.

Armed with this knowledge, Owen said, East became a leader. "And before too many years, people followed."

East's accomplishments were "utterly amazing" in light of the handicap that might have led lesser men to "crawl in a corner and watch television," Owen said.

"He was tolerant of others, always willing to listen ... he loved his family and was loved by his family," Owen said. "America is richer for having had him. Who will take up the torch of this brave man?"

Owen praised East for his campaign against abortion and noted that he was a man who read his Bible. At a Monday visit to the East home, Owen said he examined East's "marked up" Bible. "The markings indicated that he read his Bible," Owen said. "He studied it. He knew it."

"America is blessed both by what he did in congress and by the positive way he influenced so many thousands of students during his teaching years," Owens said.

"Although we are stunned and shocked by this tragedy, let us go from this place praising God for this man of strong conviction and ... courage."

Earlier the congregation sang one stanza of "Onward Christian Soldiers" and recited the Lord's Prayer.

Falwell Cites East's Integrity

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The death of Sen. John East is a "great loss for all Americans and the conservative cause," the Rev. Jerry Falwell said following Tuesday's memorial service for the conservative lawmaker and former East Carolina University professor.

East, a New Right devotee who was found dead at his home in what has been declared a suicide, was remembered by friends and political colleagues at the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

"America has sustained a tremendous loss," said Falwell, a Lynchburg, Va., conservative minister and founder of the Moral Majority. "We're better off for having had him serve us."

Falwell remembered John East for his integrity as well as his political beliefs.

"John East was a brilliant and articulate man," Falwell said. "I've followed him over the last six years, and he always amazed me with his perception and his ability to cut through the preliminaries and get to the heart of an issue. East did an excellent job as senator of this state."

"The loss of East was a great loss for the traditional family and for the conservative cause."

Howell Says People Missed East Humor

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

While many were speculating Tuesday about a replacement for the late Sen. John East, others preferred to remember the personal side of the man — a side East Carolina University Chancellor John Howell said he felt people sometimes missed.

Howell noted that a Washington magazine once described East as "the dreariest member of the Senate." East was no such thing, Howell said.

"The people around here who knew East would never have used those words to describe him. The people up there obviously didn't know him," Howell said.

East, a member of the ECU political science department from 1964 to 1980, was an intelligent man, a very well educated man, a man with a quick wit and ever-present sense of humor, Howell said in an interview today.

"If you were having a conversation with him, he would listen to you and then he would deal with your com-

Justice Accepts Merger

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Legislation merging Pitt County and Greenville schools was approved by the Justice Department Tuesday, clearing the way for consolidation of the two schools systems.

The merger plan called for consolidation by July 1. The Voting Rights Act of 1965 requires Justice Department approval when changes in election methods dealing with the board's structure are made. In a review of the consolidated board's structure in May, the Justice Department ruled the election method discriminatory.

"We are very pleased that preclearance has been received from the Department of Justice," said Eddie West, superintendent of the school systems. "We look forward to moving forward with formal consolidation."

West will serve as superintendent of the merged school systems.

The schools' attorney, Michael Crowell, said he was notified Tuesday that preclearance had been given for the merger.

Justice Department attorney Steve Rosenbaum "informed us last night that it had been precleared," Crowell said. "Obviously, we are very pleased. We wish it had come a few days earlier, but all in all, they (the Justice Department) acted very quickly on it; they could have taken a lot longer."

"Leslie Winner, the attorney for the Concerned Citizens for Justice, was helpful in getting the Justice Department to give us an early answer," Crowell said. "She both wrote and phoned them on behalf of an expedited consideration."

Crowell said the quick response from the Justice Department "reflects that the legislation that was passed was an agreement among all interested people in Pitt County."

"We are very pleased that we can

Affirmative Action Affirmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, handing civil rights forces a sweeping victory, today reaffirmed the legality of affirmative action in the American work place to remedy past discrimination against blacks and other minorities.

The court's latest word on affirmative action came in two rulings.

In one, the justices approved a plan in Cleveland that reserves about half the promotions in the city's fire department for qualified minority candidates.

In the other, the court upheld a ruling that a union representing sheet metal workers in New York and New Jersey must significantly raise its non-white membership by August 1987.

The rulings represent a major defeat for the Reagan administration, which sought to limit on-the-job racial preferences. By a 6-3 vote in the sheet metal workers case, the court rejected the administration's position that only actual victims of discrimination may benefit from court-ordered affirmative action remedies.

The justices said that more sweeping remedies do not violate federal civil rights laws or the Constitution's equal-protection guarantees.

Justice William J. Brennan, in the court's main opinion, said, "We hold that (federal law) does not prohibit a

American Hostage Freed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An American held captive by Lebanese drug traffickers has been freed unharmed and delivered to the U.S. Embassy, Lebanese officials said today.

The former captive was identified as Steven John Donahue, 32, of Hollywood, Fla., who claims to have been an informant for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

The DEA has denied he was a drug agent without specifying whether he worked for the agency. Donahue's wife, Johanna, has said her husband agreed to work as a government informant following his 1982 arrest on charges he smuggled hashish from Lebanon.

There were conflicting reports on the length of Donahue's captivity. Mrs. Donahue said her husband was kidnapped in August 1985. However, Lebanese officials who spoke on condition of anonymity said he was held for 22 months.

In an interview today, Donahue told ABC News he was released because "money exchanged hands, about $400,000."

U.S. Embassy spokesman Robert Gould confirmed Donahue's release, but said he could not disclose details. "It's a question of privacy. I have no right to tell you anything about him. He is a private citizen. He's not working for the U.S. government," Gould said.

There was no information on the identity of Donahue's captors or the people who escorted him to the embassy.

The Lebanese officials said Donahue was kidnapped by Shiite Moslem drug dealers for "poking his nose into the business."

"I was held for economic reasons basically, not political, and the big danger for me was that they were going to turn me over to a political group," Donahue told ABC.

Gov. Jim Martin might feel like a pawn on the Republican chess board.

GOP pressure is on Martin to appoint Jim Broyhill to fill the Senate seat vacated by the death of Sen. John East. Pressure is also on by the Republican Congressional Club for Martin to appoint David Funderburk to the seat. That group says appointing Funderburk will promote party unity.

Something's odd in the GOP ranks. Broyhill is the Republican candidate seeking East's seat in the November election. Funderburk was Broyhill's unsuccessful opponent in the May primary. Republicans sent a message to the Congressional Club about party unity when they voted for Broyhill.

Because the Senate is preparing to vote on some crucial issues, Martin may be stroked extra hard to promptly put a Republican — probably Broyhill — on Capitol Hill. But what he also may be considering is that as a U.S. senator, Broyhill must vote on issues — stands that could be used against him in the November election. That would be a political plus — but not a good reason — for choosing Funderburk.

Martin is no doubt weighing the advantage of having an unexpected incumbent in the November election against the disadvantage of having a candidate with a voting record.

The GOP wants another Republican in the Senate quickly so the party can keep a 53-47 majority over Democrats. By pushing Funderburk, the Congressional Club obviously wants a voice of its own for the next six months.

Incumbency would indisputably help the party elect Broyhill in November. That would leave Democratic candidate Terry Sanford battling an opponent with four months of Senate experience rather than no experience.

Martin can, of course, leave the seat vacant until after the November election — an option he's not likely to take. Odds are the governor will promptly put Broyhill in office — and let the Republicans take their chance with the voting record he leaves.

Gerrymandering

Gerrymandering, the longtime practice of drawing voting district lines which favor one political party, may be around for many more years.

A Supreme Court ruling Monday said such districts are constitutional in general. The court opinion stipulated, however, that the districts must meet the one-man, one-vote standard which the court had previously ruled must hold.

The justices reversed a three-judge federal court ruling of 1983 which said that district lines in Indiana discriminated against Democrats.

The court said there could be instances where gerrymandering might be constitutional but it would require more than proving that a plan made it more difficult for a given political party to win.

The term gerrymandering came from an action by Elbridge Gerry, a Massachusetts governor whose administration in 1812 devised districts to favor his party. One district resembled a salamander, hence the term gerrymandering.

So much for the name. The practice apparently will continue although district makers in this century must also conform to one-man, one-vote and perhaps racial-mix guidelines.

Gerrymandering doesn't get any easier.

— Paul O'Connor —

All Victims Aren't The Same

RALEIGH — North Carolina criminal law does not consider all victims to be equal.

Slap a man in the face and you can be charged with simple assault, which can carry as much as a six-month sentence. Slap a woman with the same amount of force and you can be charged with assault on a female which carries up to a two-year sentence. Assault on a handicapped person also carried an extra degree of sentence severity.

The principle is simple. Those less able to defend themselves, and those more likely to be harmed by physical violence, should get the extra bit of protection which a tougher sentence carries. From a punishment standpoint, these laws say that those who would prey on the weakest members of our society should be punished more severely.

In the short session, the General Assembly was struggling with a possible expansion of this doctrine. Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, has proposed a major overhaul of state prison sentences for crimes committed against the elderly.

Sizemore told the House Judiciary III Committee that "elderly adults have become prisoners in their own homes," hiding from crime even if they have been a victim to it. For elderly crime victims, the fear of a recurrence is overwhelming. For those who suffered an economic loss, replacement of lost resources can be much more difficult than it is for young crime victims, he said.

Sizemore had proposed that a simple assault on an elderly person be made a felony. It is now a misdemeanor. He also proposed to upgrade the sentences for a number of serious crimes like rape, assault with a deadly weapon and armed robbery, when they were committed against an elderly person.

Although Sizemore found a committee generally sympathetic to his cause, he also found one agnostic at its implications. The changes in sentencing, said Rep. B. Holt, herself a self-described senior citizen, did not bode well for the prison crowding situation.

Closing The Nuclear Loopholes

— Maxwell Glen and Cody Shearer —

WASHINGTON — "The Manhattan Project," one of Hollywood's summer releases, is about a high school whiz kid whom a physicist befriends in search of a date with the youngster's divorced mother. The would-be suitor works in a laboratory that manufactures high-grade plutonium for the military. The movie's young protagonist eventually breaks into the scientist's lab to steal some plutonium for a bomb of his own.

"The Manhattan Project" is fiction, but the theft and unauthorized use of nuclear weapons and/or their components is entirely possible. In Washington last week, a group of scientists, industrialists and former government officials issued a report that said a confluence of new conditions — state-sponsored terrorism, the deployment of nuclear weapons in areas of terrorist activity and a black market on nuclear materials — was making nuclear terrorism all the more likely.

What's remarkable about the report of the International Task Force on Prevention of Nuclear Terrorism is that one would have expected nuclear states to have implemented its recommendations years ago. For example, Navy ships often visit foreign ports in regions of high terrorist activity. But neither submarine-launched ballistic missiles nor, for that matter, U.S. tactical nuclear weapons are fitted with "permissive action link" (PAL) systems. These protective devices would render stolen weapons useless.

"The most recent PAL devices, together with command disable systems which can disrupt the firing circuits of a weapon, make it virtually impossible for a terrorist group to detonate a stolen weapon that has these design features," the report says. "In addition, an 'insensitive' chemical explosive and 'one-point safe' design characteristic make such weapons resistant to accidental and unauthorized detonation."

Interestingly enough, the United States has only one small unit, the Nuclear Emergency Team (NEST), assigned to find stolen nuclear weapons or improvised nuclear devices. During its 11-year history, NEST has responded to more than 100 threats.

Indeed, each nuclear state must question its own security measures affecting nuclear weapons, facilities and power plants. How vulnerable are stored and deployed nuclear weapons to theft? If stolen, could they be used in any way? How vulnerable are nuclear installations to attack, sabotage and error? Can domestic intelligence and security agencies detect and defuse safety loopholes?

Just last week, the Government Accounting Office of Congress claimed that it had judged inadequate the safety reviews of plutonium fabrication and reprocessing facilities at two plants operated by the Energy Department.

Of course, the often-criticized International Atomic Energy Agency of the United Nations has helped curb attempts to divert processed uranium or plutonium to military purposes. Moreover, since 1983, it has stepped up its security measures by making surprise inspections at the nuclear facilities of some of its 133 member nations.

"Without IAEA safeguards, an international regime to curb the spread of nuclear weapons would not be credible today," writes David Fisher in the latest edition of the Bulletin of Atomic Scientists. "They have helped to create confidence that, at least for the present, proliferation has stopped in the industrial world and in most of the Third World."

Nevertheless, nine countries with nuclear plants still haven't signed the Non-Proliferation Treaty. At least five facilities not monitored by the International Atomic Energy Agency can or will in the near future be able to produce weapons-grade material.

While the IAEA has demonstrated the benefits of arms control, the International Task Force on Prevention of Nuclear Terrorism points out the loopholes in existing security systems. It attests to the need to prepare for nuclear terrorism as well as to restrict new technologies that are capable of producing weapon-useable materials.

Given the surfeit of malevolence and unsettled grievances (not to mention corruption) in this world, it's remarkable that nuclear weaponry hasn't become part of a terrorist's arsenal. With vigilance, we may be able to limit the successful plots to Hollywood.

OPEC Still Feels The Frustration

BRIONI, Yugoslavia (AP) — A quiet week in the sun and balmy breezes of this Adriatic island did nothing to soothe the pains of OPEC's frustrated oil ministers.

They are still smarting from an oil price slump that some analysts believe will continue for the rest of this year and possibly into the next decade.

After six days of deliberations and a one-day round of preparatory talks, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries ended its regular summer conference Monday with no agreements.

The secluded beaches and shady walking paths on Brioni seemed to put the OPEC ministers in an unusually playful mood. But behind the closed doors of their conference room the spirit of compromise was once again lacking.

Among some of the ministers there is a growing belief that cartel leader Saudi Arabia and its allies on the Arabian Peninsula — Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates — do not sincerely want an agreement.

The Saudis deny it, but there is some evidence to the contrary.

Ministers said they would regroup July 28 in Geneva to try again for an accord on production controls that could give at least a modest boost to prices.

In the meantime the 13 OPEC countries will lose hundreds of millions of dollars in income they had counted on at the start of the year, when they were selling their oil for about $25 a barrel.

Despite this financial shortfall, there were few signs in Brioni that OPEC would come closer to a meaningful agreement in July.

"They're probably years away from a resolution," said Philip Verleger Jr., an oil analyst at the consulting firm of Charles River Associates in Boston.

"I think we're going to have low oil prices for at least five years," he said.

The Brioni meeting fell apart on the same issues that doomed the cartel's two previous marathon meetings in March and April — how deeply to cut production and what target price to set.

A hardline alliance of Libya, Iran and Algeria — joined for the first time by Gabon — pushed for drastic cuts in output and a target price of $28 a barrel. The nine others argued for a small production cut and a price goal of $17 to $19 a barrel.

Prices for the most widely traded grades of crude oil currently are between $11 and $14 a barrel.

Prospects for bridging the gap between the OPEC factions seem poor, at least for the summer. The Algerian minister left the Brioni talks one day early, saying he had no hopes for an agreement.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, denies that Saudi Arabia does not really want an agreement, but there is some evidence to suggest that he is not unhappy at the lack of progress.

Yamani spearheaded an OPEC campaign, starting last December, to win the cartel a bigger share of the world oil market by letting prices fall. The strategy has begun to bear fruit.

Yamani argued that OPEC needed to throw down a price challenge to the non-OPEC producers in order to persuade them to give up a portion of their oil market share.

Besides providing a new rallying call for OPEC, the strategy has had the less visible effect of forcing the United States and some other big oil producing nations to plug wells and cut back on efforts to find and develop new oil fields. This has improved the long-term outlook for OPEC.

As OPEC's richest member, Saudi Arabia can stand the loss of income in a price war. And as the member with the largest oil reserves, it has the biggest stake in assuring that oil will have a market in the 21st century.

Thus it is plausible that the Saudis want to see oil prices remain low for a longer period, despite the economic pain it inflicts on OPEC's poorer members.

Robert Burns, based in Brussels, Belgium, covers developments within OPEC for The Associated Press.

Strength For Today

We often speak of the wisdom of Solomon. The more accurate term would be the "learning of Solomon."

Certainly this ancient Jewish leader was one of the most learned men, not only of antiquity, but of all history. The list of his achievements overwhelms even the mind of modern man, which has become accustomed to achievements.

Yet Solomon built his great empire on slave labor. He compromised fatally when he allowed many of his wives to bring their priests and religious systems into his kingdom, thus corrupting the pure religion of Jehovah. Solomon lived in his palace, but a large percentage of his population must have lived in hovels.

Everyone admired Solomon, yet he was something less than a good and wise ruler. The final result of his spectacular career was the splitting of Israel into two nations after his death.

It is hard to reconcile great learning with self-glorification.

Court Says States May Ban 'Harmful' Ads

By DAVID G. SAVAGE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — In a decision hailed as a victory for those seeking to ban cigarette advertising, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that states may ban ads for products that have "serious harmful effects" on citizens.

Lawyers for the mass media and tobacco companies had been confident that the advertising of lawful products was protected as free speech under the Constitution. In the last 11 years, the court has regularly voted down state laws that prohibit ads for a wide range of other products, such as contraceptives, legal services or drugs.

But Tuesday's ruling, in a case involving a Puerto Rican ban on gambling ads, headed the court in the other direction, attorneys said. The decision appears to clear the way for legislation banning cigarette advertising.

"It looks like a sharp cutback in the commercial speech doctrine," said Washington attorney Timothy Dyk, who represented CBS Inc. and other broadcasters before the court. "What it suggests is that the state is now free to take the step" of banning ads for products that are sold legally.

At issue before the court was a Puerto Rican law that authorized gambling casinos but prohibited casino owners from advertising their establishments on the island. They were permitted to run ads on the U.S. mainland with the hope of drawing tourists.

A casino owner who had been fined for violating the law appealed his case, unsuccessfully, to the Puerto Rican Supreme Court. He then urged the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn the statute on the grounds that it violated the First Amendment.

The justices upheld the law by a 5-4 margin.

"The particular kind of commercial speech at issue ... may be restricted only if the government's interest in doing so is substantial," Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court majority. But the Puerto Rican Legislature's belief that "excessive casino gambling ... would produce serious harmful effects on health, safety and welfare of Puerto Rican citizens ... constitutes a 'substantial' governmental interest," he concluded.

Justice John Paul Stevens, in a dissenting opinion joined by Justices Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and William J. Brennan Jr., said the law's "rather bizarre restraints on speech are so plainly forbidden by the First Amendment."

Permitting casinos to run ads on the mainland but not in Puerto Rico suggests that "this court is willing to uphold an Illinois regulation of speech that subjects the New York Times to one standard and the Chicago Tribune to another," Stevens said. (Posadas de Puerto Rico Associates vs. Tourism Company of Puerto Rico, 84-1903.)

A nationwide ban on the cigarette advertising was urged last December by the American Medical Association, which said tobacco products result in 314,000 deaths a year nationwide.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., along with 13 other sponsors, introduced a bill in the House last month to ban ads and promotions for tobacco products in broadcasts, newspapers and magazines and on billboards, matchbooks and store displays.

The measure, which is scheduled for its first hearing July 18, would even stop tobacco companies from sponsoring athletic or artistic events such as the Virginia Slims tennis tournaments.

Tuesday's ruling "provides a substantial boost to our effort and punches holes in our opponent's defense," Synar said. "The tobacco industry can't continue to wrap itself in the First Amendment."

Tobacco companies spend an estimated $2 billion a year on advertisement and promotion. In 1971, Congress banned broadcast ads of cigarettes.

An attorney who represented the American Newspaper Publishers Association said he "was amazed by the court's shift in gears" on what is covered as free speech.

"I had assumed from the earlier cases that we were talking here about the 'marketplace of ideas' and that more speech is better," said P. Cameron DeVore, a Seattle attorney. Tuesday's decision "certainly suggests Congress could find that a product was damaging and could regulate or even ban the advertising of it."

Farmville Board Delays Zoning Proposal For Study

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners on Tuesday night again postponed a decision on whether to rezone properties in west Farmville, saying they would continue to study the proposal.

The area bounded by Walnut Street, Wilson Street, U.S. 258 and the city limits on the north is a mixture of business, industrial and residential interests now. The planning board has recommended that most of it become residential, with business along the major thoroughfares.

Several property owners were present for a public hearing on the matter. Local veterinarian David Reeves asked the board to go ahead with the rezoning, even if it might be politically unpopular. Several property owners said they prefer it be left as it. Commissioner Moses Moye said he doesn't believe the board should take the action unless it is going to back it up with long-range redevelopment work in the area.

In other matters, the board went on record in support of the opening of the Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant. Commissioner Moses Moye voted no.

R.B. Nelson, a former member of the N.C. Board of Transportation, appeared before the board proposing that the town ask the state to redesignate N.C. 121 as a portion of U.S. 264 Business (Wilson Street west) once the new U.S. 264 bypass is complete. He was told that the local Chamber of Commerce has a committee studying the issue.

Following discussion of the town's constant problem of keeping enough water supply, especially in view of the Collins and Aikman textile plant's large usage, it was voted to award contracts for two wells to Onslow Construction Co. for $326,780 and Herring Rivenbark Inc. for $118,598, subject to a change order deleting supplying water line on State Road 1200 and revising the contract amount to $73,928.

Bill Modlin, utilities director, was authorized to purchase utilities poles from Southern Wood Piedmont Co. for $4,571 and electrical materials from Rigby Electric for $3,818.89.

Modlin was appointed a commissioner of Electricities of North Carolina and as a commissioner of the N.C. Eastern Municipal Power Agency — to be Farmville's representative to both agencies. Commissioner Moye said he feels that a member of the board should serve in those capacities, that he believes the commissioners do not keep themselves sufficiently informed and involved in decisions that affect Farmville electric consumers.

The purchase of an emulsion polymer dilution and feed system for the waste treatment plant was approved at a cost of $5,850. Modlin showed the commissioners how sludge can be compressed and water released by use of a chemical in this process.

The sum of $250 was set as just compensation for the property of Elizabeth Gorham at 415 S. George St. The structure is to be acquired and demolished in a community development project, with Ms. Gorham being allowed to keep the land.

Two bids on the Southside Fire Station property on South Main Street were rejected. John Matthews had offered to pay $540; Rudy Cobb, $100.

The property abuts Cobb's restaurant property.

Mayor Edna Earle Baker's appointment of Pat Carr to the Library Board and her reappointment of William Thomas Whitley to the recreation board were approved.

A list of certified volunteer firemen in Farmville was approved. This action qualifies the firemen for participation in the N.C. Firemen's Pension Fund.

South Africa To Charge 780

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government today broke its silence on the number of people held under the state of emergency and said it plans to file criminal charges against 780 of them.

The government refused to disclose the total number of people detained without charge since the June 12 emergency declaration. Estimates by South African and foreign monitoring groups range from 1,800 to more than 3,000, including labor leaders, clergymen, students and anti-apartheid organizers.

"Police dossiers of 780 people detained have been prepared," Bureau for Information spokeswoman Ronelle Henning said at a news conference today. "The charges include murder, arson and assault."

She said additional charges would be prepared but declined to say how many. She refused to say whether detainees who are not charged would be released.

Ms. Henning said the detainees, who now are barred from seeing lawyers or other visitors, will have "normal access" to attorneys after formal charges are filed.

"The law will then follow its normal course," she said.

Also today, Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu condemned the outbreak of bombings in South African cities and appealed for talks to ease the country's racial conflict.

"I am deeply distressed at the recent spate of bombings and condemn such acts of terrorism vehemently and unequivocally," the black Nobel Peace Prize winner said.

His statement came a day after a bombing in downtown Johannesburg injured eight people. Three of them remained in Johannesburg General Hospital, including a 2-week-old baby reported in stable condition.

The Bureau for Information suggested the blast, along with nine other bombings since the emergency was declared, was carried out by the African National Congress. The guerrilla movement, in a telex sent today from Zambia, said it had no comment on the explosions.

Police today appealed to the public to be alert for bombs and to watch for objects being placed in trash cans. Tuesday's bomb was in a trash can at a bus stop.

Tutu said that while many whites believe the bombings are the work of black radicals, many blacks suspect white right-wing extremists are responsible.

"The problems of our country cannot be solved by the violence of injustice, oppression and exploitation, nor by that of those who seek to overthrow such a repressive system," the bishop said. "Can't those recognized as authentic leaders and representatives of all our people get together and talk?"

Also today, the nation's largest labor federation — the predominantly black Congress of South African Trade Unions — issued a list of demands in response to what it said was a recent government crackdown on the labor movement.

The 500,000-member congress, which has indicated it might call for some type of nationwide protest on July 14, demanded the release of union leaders detained under the state of emergency and a halt to what it said was the harassment of union members.

It accused employers of making inadequate efforts to end the state of emergency, demanded that detained workers be kept on the payroll, and urged companies to facilitate union organizing.

The Labor Monitoring Group, an independent team of academics, reported Tuesday that 226 union members are being detained, 88 percent of them from the Congress of South African Trade Unions.

Under the state of emergency, the Bureau for Information is the only source of official information.

Michael Learned Takes Different Role

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The role of the wife with seven children or of the nurse has changed to the role of a murderer as Michael Learned plays Ellen Creed in "Ladies in Retirement," a play being featured in the East Carolina Summer Theater.

After playing the "goody two-shoes roles" in the CBS television series "The Waltons" and "Nurse," Ms. Learned said she is enjoying the different character type.

"It's not so much that I want to play a bad person," she said in a news conference Tuesday in Messick Theater on the East Carolina University campus. "You want to branch out a little bit," Ms. Learned said, explaining that in television playing the nice person can get dull and boring.

In "Ladies in Retirement," Ellen Creed is a housekeeper who murders her employer in order to find a home for her eccentric sisters. Completed in 1939, co-authors Reginald Denham and Edward Percy based the play on a famous French crime of the 1880s.

Ms. Learned said the play was introduced to her by Beth Grant, a co-actress in "Picnic," and a former student at ECU. After talking with Scott Parker, the summer theater general manager, she decided to play the role.

No stranger to the stage, Ms. Learned has played leading roles in "The Importance of Being Earnest," "Private Lives," and "The Three Sisters" among others. She has starred in productions for the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco and for the Stratford Shakespeare Festival in Canada. Ms. Learned performed in Greenville once before on a tour of "Dear Liar," she said.

Ms. Learned said her preference of plays, films or series depends on her mood. "Television is very immediate and fast," she said, explaining that there is not a lot of immediate, human feedback in television.

But "The Waltons" got a lot of good feedback during its eight-year run. "We were very surprised that the show was successful," Ms. Learned said. "It was a soft show" compared to the detective series that were popular during that time. Much of the success can be attributed to the fact that the cast got along with one another, Ms. Learned said. "It's a gift if the chemistry is there."

The Walton family had become a part of her life, Ms. Learned said, so that "when I left the show, I would miss everybody." Some nights she would wake up crying because they were taking the family photograph and she was not allowed to be in it, she said.

When she has the time, which is not often, Ms. Learned said, she likes to watch "The Cosby Show" and "Cheers," and she likes to read, jog, dance and hike. The mother of three sons and the wife of a former North Carolinian, William Parker, Ms. Learned said she hopes to spend some time with her husband's family in Lumberton before leaving the state. But, after "Ladies in Retirement," she will go back to New York for more performances in regional theater, she said.

"Ladies in Retirement" will be featured July 7-12 at 8:15 p.m. with a special matinee July 9 at 2:15 p.m. in McGinnis Theater on the ECU campus.

Former Fieldcrest Leader Dies

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — Harold W. Whitcomb, former president and chairman of the board of Fieldcrest Mills, has died at Morehead Memorial Hospital. He was 87.

Whitcomb, who died Monday, became president and director of Fieldcrest in December 1953 and was elected chairman of the board in 1967. Two years later, he retired as chairman, but remained as a director until 1978.

He also served at various times as president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association and the N.C. Textile Foundation.

In addition, Whitcomb was a trustee of the Institute of Textile Technology, where he helped develop curriculum for the South's textile colleges and vocational schools.

In 1936, Whitcomb joined Marshall Fields, the department store company that owned many of the Rockingham County mills that later were to become part of Fieldcrest. He was named division vice president at Fields in 1946 and became vice president of Fieldcrest when it bought the Rockingham mills.

The funeral will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Fair Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will be in Roselawn Memorial Gardens.

Whitcomb is survived by his sister, Mrs. Leon A. Newell of Athens, Ga.

Collision Sets Off Explosion

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A tanker truck carrying 8,000 gallons of gasoline collided with a car and exploded on a rain-slicked highway Tuesday evening.

The driver of the car was critically injured in the collision and two Grovetown firefighters received minor injuries battling the resulting blaze.

The driver of the truck, identified by authorities as 46-year-old George D. Halsey of Edgefield, S.C., escaped from the wrecked tanker and dove into a ditch before five explosions reduced the vehicle to a charred heap of twisted metal.

Firefighters used water, truckloads of sand, chemical foam and other equipment before the fire finally was extinguished about 3½ hours after the wreck. More than 50 firefighters and 10 emergency vehicles responded to the blaze.

The driver of the eastbound car, Dawn Sebastian of Hephzibah, was in critical condition late Tuesday at the Medical College of Georgia Hospital, hospital spokesman Sally Simkins said. Ms. Sebastian's two children and another passenger escaped serious injury.

Retirement

Dr. Sheldon C. Downes, professor and chairman of rehabilitation studies in the East Carolina University School of Allied Health and Social Work, has retired from the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve with the rank of colonel.

Downes has completed 30 years of commissioned service. He was first commissioned a second lieutenant in June 1956 after graduation from Bethany College, W.Va. He first joined the Marine Corps Reserve as an undergraduate student.

Downes was promoted to colonel in 1978. His military occupational specialties were infantry and intelligence, with his last duty being the commander officer position of the CINCLANT Staff Augmentation Unit, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, Norfolk, Va.

During his service Downes attended numerous high level reserve schools including the Command and Staff College at the Marine Corps Base at Quantico, Va., and the National Defense University at Fort McNair, Washington.

Thefts Reported

Greenville police said two thefts were reported to the department Tuesday.

Officer D.R. Best said $1,200 worth of equipment owned by Cartrette Construction Co. was taken from a construction site at 800 Daventry Drive in an incident reported at 7:29 a.m., while Officer D.C. Johnson said a bicycle was taken from 600 McKinley Ave. in an incident reported at 7:20 p.m.

Drug Charges

James Calvin Darden, 34, of 412 Bonners Lane was arrested on drug charges by Greenville police Tuesday afternoon.

Officer B.W. Lewis said Darden was charged with possession of heroin and possession of drug paraphernalia about 5:13 p.m. in connection with an incident at Bancroft Avenue and Farmville Boulevard.

Prince Joins Movie Party

SHERIDAN, Wyo. (AP) — Cowboys may outnumber rockers in this town of 15,000, but Sheridan was the place to be for Prince fans when "His Royal Badness" arrived to throw a party and unveil his latest movie.

Lisa Barber, 20, a hotel maid, won the evening with the rock superstar by being the 10,000th caller in an MTV national call-in contest.

The lucky dial, her fourth, gave her the chance to be host for the world premiere of "Under the Cherry Moon" and the party afterward.

The rock video cable TV channel carried the party live, and showed clips of life in Sheridan.

Ms. Barber, shaky and obviously overwhelmed by the fanfare, said only that she was excited and that Prince's appearance to pick her up at her home was "different than what I am used to."

She introduced Prince to a screaming crowd of 500 at the Sheridan Holiday Inn.

The highlight of the evening was a medley of Prince numbers with his usual band, Revolution, which made a surprise appearance following Prince's performance with another band, Mazarati.

Prince, characteristically taciturn, answered only one question during the national telecast. MTV's Martha Quinn asked him how he felt and he responded, "I feel with my hands."

Wilkes Shooting

THURMOND, N.C. (AP) — A Wilkes County man was killed and his wife was injured in a domestic shooting in Wilkes County, the county sheriff said.

Sheriff Kyle M. Gentry said that the woman was shot in the face with a pistol after an argument about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The woman was taken to Hugh Chatham Memorial Hospital and then transferred to Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem. Her condition was unavailable.

The shooting took place off U.S. 21. The names were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The money will be used to implement a statewide plan for establishing community transitional facilities for the chronically mentally ill. As part of this plan, Pitt County has been selected for a facility.

Candace Cordial, executive director of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County, said, "This transitional facility is a much-needed addition to our present facilities and will greatly enhance the adjustment of chronically mentally ill persons in our community. We are delighted to have been selected."

Summer Enrollment

East Carolina University has an enrollment of 3,753 students for the second session of summer school, the largest second session enrollment since 1978, according to Registrar J. Gilbert Moore.

Moore said first session enrollment also was the greatest in eight years.

Second session enrollment was up 250 students from last year. Total on-campus enrollment for both 1986 summer sessions was 8,641, Moore said.

School Gets Grant

A grant of $20,000 has been awarded the East Carolina University School of Nursing to purchase audio-visual and computer equipment and materials for use by undergraduate students.

The funds originate from the New York-based Marine Midland Bank, N.A., which administers the Helene Fuld Health Trust, the nation's largest charitable trust for undergraduate nursing education.

Dr. Emilie D. Henning, dean of the ECU School of Nursing, said the funds will go toward expansion of a three-year-old campus facility, the School of Nursing Learning Resources Center.

A Marine Midland Bank spokesman said the grant was made in recognition of the "outstanding contributions to the nursing profession being made by ECU's School of Nursing in training undergraduate student nurses to render bedside care to patients."

The Helene Fuld Trust, whose current value is more than $73 million, has awarded grants to nursing programs throughout North America and in several Asian nations.

House Panel Balks At Roads Compromise

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says the House Appropriations Committee did not support a compromise highway funding proposal that he and Gov. Jim Martin crafted when it voted to divide the package.

Martin, a Republican, and Jordan, a Democrat, had agreed to a $200 million package that would boost the price of gasoline 3.5 cents a gallon and would transfer the driver education program from the highway fund to the general fund. The package, which also called for staggered motor vehicle registrations, won Senate approval last week.

But the House committee Tuesday overcame Republican objections to remove the transfer provision and delete a proposal to have drivers purchase licenses two years at a time, which would have produced a $172.2 million one-time windfall.

Officials say the move opens the door to a House-Senate dispute.

"I'm disappointed that they have done that," Jordan said after the Senate session. "It's regrettable. It does not support the compromise."

Rep. Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, House minority leader, assailed the action, in which the transfer was turned into a nonbinding resolution to take place only if revenues grow an additional 3 percent or $141 million over the projected 8.5 percent growth rate.

"If you were genuinely interested in having transfers, a 1 percent increase would have been a better faith effort," she said. "We were led to believe that there was unanimity between the leadership in both houses about this transfer. This is a new ballgame."

Ms. Cochrane said Republicans were unlikely to support the tax without the transfer.

Transportation Secretary James Harrington called the $132.4 million package "an incomplete action."

"It deals only in a very ephemeral fashion with the transfer," he said. "The action is inconsistent with the commitments that were made in the agreement on the compromise that resulted in the Senate bill."

Appropriations Chairman Billy Watkins, D-Granville, said there simply wasn't enough money for the transfers in consideration of funding to which the Legislature was already committed. Among the commitments were $144 million for continuing the Basic Education Plan, $50 million for possible losses due to federal budget deficit reduction plans and $40 million for general budget expansions.

"If we were to transfer $27 million, that would leave us $9 million in the red, and we can't do that because we can't engage in deficit spending," he said. "We felt like a hollow promise that we knew we could not deliver would not be good faith."

The 3 percent mark is necessary because every point of rising revenue will bring with it increased demands for funding other than transfers.

Watkins said the resolution was virtually identical to the transfer provision in the Senate because neither could tie the hands of another General Assembly.

Sales Tax Advances In Senate

By ROBIN P. TEATER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Cities and counties could charge an additional half-cent sales tax — with some of the money earmarked for public school construction and some designated for water and sewage projects — under a bill tentatively approved by the Senate.

The measure, already approved by the House, was approved by the Senate 38-5 on its second reading Tuesday. The final vote could come today.

Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, who filed the bill, has said it could raise $183 million for local governments sorely in need of money for public schools. He also has said it would help offset losses due to federal budget deficit cuts under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings.

Under the bill, counties would be allowed to spend between 60 percent and 20 percent, on a sliding scale, on school construction or payment of bonds levied on school construction over the past five years.

Cities must spend at least 40 percent on water and sewage improvements for the first five years and 30 percent for the subsequent five years. After that, there would be no restrictions on how the tax revenue is spent.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, cited a 1984 Department of Public Instruction study that found school construction needs had risen to $2.2 billion statewide.

"There is not a county in the state that doesn't need public school construction," he said, adding that the sales tax option would go a long way toward solving the school construction problem.

Sen. Melvin Watt, D-Mecklenburg, asked whether counties, like Mecklenburg, would have to use the revenue for water and sewage projects if there was no need in that area.

Winner said local governments could receive exemptions from their city councils or county commissions.

Also, the 10 municipalities exempted from requirements under the 1 percent sales tax enacted in 1983 would not have to seek a second exemption under this bill, he said.

An amendment offered by Sen. Wendell Sawyer, R-Guilford, which would have required voter approval for the tax increase, failed.

Winner said the bill already required county commissioners to enact the tax either by resolution or voter referendum.

"It ought to remain their choice," he said.

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, urged senators to oppose the bill, saying it would hurt "a sector of this economy that's not participating in the prosperity."

"The privileged are delighted to impose a sales tax because it gives them a relief," he said.

But Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, said North Carolinians are willing to pay higher taxes for better schools.

Sen. Robert Shaw, R-Guilford, said the measure was coming "because of a fear of what's going to happen in Washington, D.C." with Gramm-Rudman.

Court Ruling Backs Pay Equity Drive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women's rights advocates say their fight for pay equity is bolstered by the Supreme Court's latest ruling on discrimination in the American workplace.

The court said Tuesday in a North Carolina case that employers who pay black employees less than whites in the same jobs are violating federal civil rights law even if the discriminatory pay began before the law took effect.

"This is a solid affirmation of our position," said Eleanor Cutri Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women.

She said the ruling "encourages us to pursue this litigation strategy, to be more resolute about taking comparable-worth cases."

The theory of comparable worth is that employers should be forced to pay the same wages for jobs held mostly by women as those held predominantly by men.

The Supreme Court's ruling did not deal directly with comparable worth.

Justice William J. Brennan, writing for a unanimous court, said in such cases "each week's paycheck that delivers less to a black than to a similarly situated white" is a violation of a law known as Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

The court said the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service may be violating the law, which bans on-the-job discrimination, by paying some blacks less than whites.

Employers have a legal obligation to eradicate such lingering inequities in pay, the court added.

The National Organization for Women said the ruling appears to open the way for new challenges under Title VII to pay inequities allegedly based on sex bias.

Marsha Levick, a NOW lawyer, said the court is suggesting that the protections offered by Title VII are similar to those afforded by the Equal Pay Act, which requires equal pay for women in the same jobs as men.

Benefits

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Court of Appeals has ruled that unemployment benefits should be paid to an asthmatic woman who quit her job after her employer failed to grant her requests for a protective mask or a transfer.

The court Tuesday reversed the state Employment Security Commission, which had denied unemployment benefits to Roxie M. Ray of Watauga County after finding that she had quit her job as a furniture finisher voluntarily and that her leaving could not be blamed on her employer.

The appeals court found that Ms. Ray had quit involuntarily because of her employer and thus was eligible to collect benefits.

defraud the government of income taxes.

The five were named in a 60-page, 28-count indictment returned Monday by a special grand jury in Wilmington.

Paul D. Davis, currently of Macon, Ga., was pastor of the Bible Baptist Church in Cumberland County in the early 1980s, was among those indicted.

A spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service said Tuesday that Davis has been taken in custody in Macon, but it was not known if he will be held in Georgia or returned to Fayetteville.

Two other North Carolina men — David A. Muse of Salisbury, and Daniel D. Carr of Louisburg — were also charged, along with former Fayetteville resident James C. Owenby of Alameda, Calif., and Michael Jaworski of Jonesboro, Ga. The four men had not been arrested Tuesday.

Cattle Sold

RALEIGH (AP) — Some North Carolina cattle producers, who are afraid the drought will prevent them from producing adequate feed, are selling their herds and may be taking a loss, agriculture officials say.

"We didn't cut a single bale of hay this year," said Howard C. Moon, an Alamance County farmer who Tuesday sold 62 calves weighing about 450 pounds each. He said, normally, he would not sell until September, when each calf would weigh 600 pounds or more.

Roger G. Crickenberger, beef cattle specialist with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service, could not estimate the number of cattle going to market early. But he and stockyard managers confirmed the markets were staying busy.

Plane Crash

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The four occupants of a single-engine aircraft that crashed while attempting to land on a stretch of N.C. 143 east of Robbinston were hospitalized in satisfactory condition Tuesday.

The pilot, Richard Hoffman, 46, of Berea, Calif., was transported by helicopter from Mountain Park Medical Center in Andrews to Georgia Baptist Hospital in Atlanta late Monday.

Hoffman's wife, Patricia, was admitted to Murphy Medical Center. Dennis Hoffman, 37, and his wife, Sandra, 34, of Milford, Mich., were admitted to Mountain Park Medical Center.

Richard and Dennis Hoffman, who are brothers, were on their way to Murphy to visit relatives, according to Graham County Sheriff A.J. Peterson.

Tornado Hits Harnett

By The Associated Press
A tornado skipped across part of Harnett County, knocking down trees and shearing off tree tops, but no injuries and little property damage was reported, authorities say.

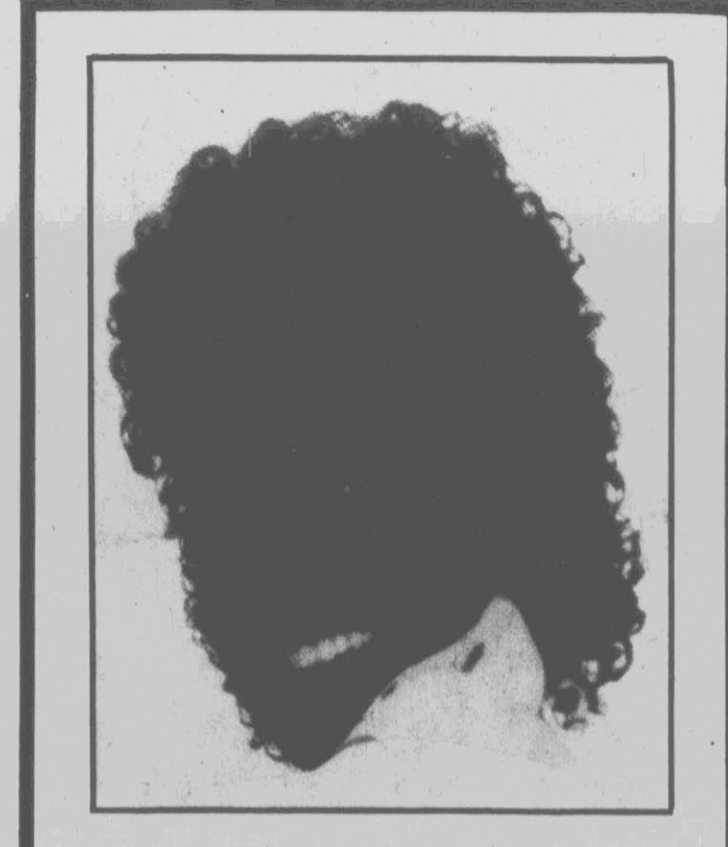

A severe thunderstorm watch was in effect until midnight Tuesday over parts of eastern and central North Carolina, according to the National Weather Service.

Storms blew down trees and torn the shingles off roofs in Sanford, and a severe thunderstorm pounded Newton in Catawba County with quarter-size hail Tuesday night. The National Weather Service reported that winds from thunderstorms reached 70 mph near Hickory.

Some trees and power lines were knocked down in Marners, in northern Harnett County, where the tornado was sighted by National Weather Service radar, said Tammy Coleman, a dispatcher with the Harnett County Sheriff's Department. Trees also were uprooted in Angier, she said.

A Harnett County Sheriff's dispatcher also said winds twisted the sheet metal off a barn.

MOURNING EAST — Dignitaries from both federal and state agencies came to Greenville Tuesday to pay their last respects to Sen. John East. Security at the airport included seven agencies, according to Greenville police, and no problems were reported. Barbara Bush,

Chief Says Security For Service 'No Problem'

By HAROLD JOYNER
Reflector Staff Writer

Even though having a large number of federal and state dignitaries visit Greenville at one time was unusual, local officials say security and transportation problems were minimal for Sen. John East's memorial service.

"We had about 60 people from seven different types of security agencies helping us out," Police Chief Ted Holmes said.

Personnel from U.S. Capitol Police, Secret Service, State Bureau of Investigation, Highway Patrol, Greenville Police Department, Pitt County Sheriff's Department and the U.S. Coast Guard were on hand Tuesday to provide security at the airport and the area surrounding Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, where the memorial service was held, Holmes said.

Police Lt. George Albertine handled overall coordination of the security agencies, Holmes said.

"We never expected any real security problems," he said, "but it was still unusual to have so many dignitaries having their own security personnel."

Traffic was not a problem either, he said, as the dignitaries arrived at the airport together, and then left for the church in a convoy.

Washington Street, which runs in front of Jarvis Church, was blocked off for about two hours, Holmes said.

"It couldn't have gone better," Holmes said. "It may have been more of a coordination problem than a security one."

At the Pitt-Greenville Airport, manager Jim Turcott said it was the first time aircraft in that number and size had come to the terminal.

"We brought in some extra personnel to handle the aircraft," Turcott said. "The flights were spaced well apart, and we experienced no problems whatsoever."

The largest plane, a U.S. Air Force DC-9, brought Barbara Bush, wife of Vice President George Bush. Although jets of that size could not come to Greenville every day, Turcott said the airport was able to accommodate the plane.

"We were about 500 feet to 1,000 feet short of having what is called a balance field," Turcott said. A balance field is necessary for an airplane to complete rotation, he said. When an aircraft reaches a speed before lifting in the air, there needs to be extra space for it to land in case something fails and the engines have to be shut off.

The Pitt-Greenville Airport has a runway of about 5,000 feet, he said.

Other planes landing in Greenville included an Air Force Gulfstream II and III, a Falcon 50, a West Wind, a Hawker Sidley, helicopters and King Airls.

Also, additional local fire-rescue personnel were available because of a Federal Aviation Administration rule that says an airport that lands aircraft with more than 30 seats has to provide emergency facilities, Turcott said.

Turcott said the airport had an increase in fuel sales as the result of Tuesday's incoming flights, but no landing fees were charged for the government aircraft that landed.

"Greenville has a public airport. No one is required to file a flight plan with us," he said.

The smooth operation of getting the dignitaries to Greenville was the result of existing conditions, he said.

"The airport is a vital part of this community," Turcott said. "If we didn't have such a good airport and an excellent staff that hustled, the entire situation would have been totally chaotic."

Falwell ...

The combination of East and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in support of the president was important to the future of the nation, according to Falwell.

"The two senators from North Carolina have played a tremendous role in supporting Ronald Reagan," he said. "I rank East and Jesse Helms as two of the great, great senators."

Falwell, who met with East in Washington earlier in the year, said he was stunned by the circumstances surrounding his death.

"I was very much shocked at the news of John's death," he said. "I know he's gone through a great deal with his health."

Dave Flaherty, former chairman of the North Carolina Republican Party, said he was also surprised by the news of East's death.

"I couldn't believe it. It just came out of left field," Flaherty said. "No words are adequate to describe how I feel."

Flaherty said East had had all the tools to become a fine lawmaker.

"I was very high on him as an individual," he said. "I don't think I ever met an individual who was more intelligent or more sensitive to the needs of the people."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who flew in from Washington with Mrs. George Bush, said "East was a scholar and a gentleman, a man of courage and compassion."

Meanwhile, speculation continued as to whom Gov. Jim Martin will appoint to serve the remainder of East's term.

"I have no idea, but I assume (U.S. Rep. Jim) Broyhill will be appointed," Flaherty said. "It will be a surprise if it is anyone else."

Broyhill, a moderate Republican who defeated East-backed candidate David Funderburk, faces former Gov. and former Duke University President Terry Sanford in the November election for the senate seat.

Thurmond said Broyhill's record on Capitol Hill makes him a likely candidate.

"Broyhill had a good record in Congress," he said. "Even if Broyhill were not appointed, I feel he would be elected. I'd like to see Broyhill become permanent and whether or not he became an interim representative would be up to the governor."

Falwell said he supported Broyhill in his election bid.

"North Carolina will be well served with Congressman Broyhill," Falwell said. "I'm sure Governor Martin will do what's best for the state. The appointment of Broyhill to fill the Senate position would be a good transition."

Eddie Knox, who ran for governor as a Democrat in 1984, said the appointment would be a boon to Broyhill's campaign.

"Receiving the interim appointment would be helpful to Broyhill," Knox said. "He's paid his dues."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat, said he saw no advantage for Broyhill should he receive the appointment.

"Broyhill would be the logical appointee, but I see no real advantage politically if he is chosen to fill East's position," he said. "It's a draw in terms of political advantage. It could hurt, or it could help."

and daughters Chip and Marty. After the service mourners filed past the East family to express condolences.

A Marine Corps color guard presented a folded American flag to Mrs. East at the end of the service.

Owens, in an interview, said he kept the ceremony brief and simple at the request of Mrs. East. The senator's body was cremated.

There were few flowers in the church. The family had asked that charitable donations be made in lieu of flowers.

But one arrangement with red, white and blue ribbon had a card that read from: "The President and Mrs. Reagan."

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole as President Reagan's representative and Mrs. George Bush, wife of the vice president, headed the delegation of Washington officials that included at least seven U.S. senators and the wives of others who attended the 2 p.m. service.

Gov. and Mrs. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan led a delegation of state officials.

But most of those who attended the service were simply local friends of East and his family.

East, an Illinois native and former Marine Corps officer, contracted polio in 1955 and had used crutches or a wheelchair since.

Polio failed to stop him from earning a law degree and practicing law for a year in Florida, before earning a master's degree and doctorate in political science and teaching at East Carolina University for 16 years before winning election to the Senate in 1980.

But last year other health problems began to plague the senator — a urinary tract obstruction and infection and a hypothyroid condition. Those ailments were cited by East when he announced in September that he would not seek re-election to the Senate in 1986.

A police department supervisor Tuesday confirmed that a handwritten note to his family, found near East's body in the garage of his home, mentioned his health problems.

Sen. Jesse Helms, East's political mentor, along with Gov. Martin and their wives, sat on the front row across the aisle of the church from East's family.

Other senators who attended the ceremony were Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., Dan Quayle, R-Ind., Howell Heflin, D-Ala., Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

Senate wives who attended included Mrs. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, Mrs. Orrin Hatch of Utah, Mrs. Pete Wilson of California, Mrs. Steven D. Symms of Idaho and Mrs. Paul Laxalt of Nevada.

Several members of the North Carolina congressional delegation — including Rep. Jim Broyhill who is expected to be appointed to replace East in the senate — were on hand, as were representatives of Martin's Cabinet and members of the General Assembly.

State Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. attended as official representatives of the House. State Sens. Bob Martin and Tom Taft were also present, as was Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington of Bertie County.

Nationally known conservative leaders who attended included television evangelist Jerry Falwell, fund-raiser Richard Viguerie and Conservative Causus leader Howard Phillips.

Falwell, in an interview, suggested that a possible missed diagnosis of East's health problems may have contributed indirectly to his death.

Falwell said that during a dinner he and his wife had with the Easts earlier this year, "the senator told me that a medical misdiagnosis caused him a great deal of personal suffering. It appeared that that — and other pressure points in his life — had given him some depression which led to the tragedy."

But Falwell declined to give any details. "I don't think it would be proper for me to discuss what we talked about," he said.

Thomas F. Ellis, a Raleigh lawyer who engineered East's 1980 upset of Democratic Sen. Robert Morgan, said he could find no explanation for East's suicide. "Nobody knows what is in the human mind," he said.

Ellis suggested that Martin should name former U.S. ambassador to Romania David Funderburk to replace East. Funderburk was defeated by Broyhill in the May Republican primary.

But Ellis said there was "a perfectly logical argument" for appointing Broyhill.

Patrick B. McGuigan, director of the judicial reform project for the Institute for Government and Politics in Washington, said East's term in office "was marked by many enduring contributions to the nation and to the conservative movement (and East's) gifts as a scholar and orator made him one of a rare breed of statesman reminiscent of the Founding Fathers."

"The courage, fortitude and sincerity that John East brought to public life will be missed in the Senate and long-remembered by his many admirers."

"I am saddened by his death," McGuigan said, "but I will remember him for his life."

well, he shot back 'I'm gonna demand a recount.'

East dealt with his students in much the same manner, Howell and Carlton said. "He was serious about the content of the course, but he could draw students in and get them involved in discussions about issues without ever letting the discussion reach an impasse," Howell said.

A widely known conservative, East often switched courses with Carlton so their students could hear different viewpoints. Carlton remembered that East, when taking over his courses, referred to himself as "the truth squad."

"The students loved it," Carlton said.

In addition to a sense of humor, East was also very knowledgeable. "By virtue of the fact that he was not out playing golf or doing some of the things people who had use of their legs did, he read a lot and kept up with what was going on," Howell said. "He was a very well educated man who had a degree in law as well as a Ph.D. in political science."

East put his knowledge to use in writing numerous academic articles including "Intellectual Decline on the American Campus," "Political Relevance of St. Augustine" and "Political Thought on Willmore Kendall."

ments in a very thorough way which he did with a great deal of humor."

One such instance involved a campaign contribution, Howell said.

"I sent him $10 when he was running against Walter B. Jones Sr. (to fill the unexpired House term of Herbert C. Bonner in 1966). East was a Republican and I was a Democrat so when I sent him the contribution I told him it was from the opposition. He sent a thank you note saying 'with enemies like that who needs friends.'

"He could always come back with something like that that was light and funny," Howell said.

Herb Carlton, an associate ECU professor of political science, remembered East in much the same way.

"When he decided to run for the Senate (in 1980), of course he had to take a leave of absence for the fall semester — he couldn't teach and campaign. So along in early October, I went to see John to verify the courses he wanted to teach since he was due back in the spring of 1981," Carlton said.

"In the midst of the conversation, I asked John 'what are you going to do if you win?' As quick as a wink and with the twinkle in his eye that everyone who knew him knew so

Martin May Name Senator On Thursday

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

Gov. Jim Martin said today he might be ready Thursday to announce his choice of a successor for the late Sen. John East.

"I hope to announce a decision on Thursday," Martin said this morning in an impromptu news conference in the state Capitol.

Martin fended off repeated questions about who he would appoint to serve the remaining six months of East's term, which expires in January. The governor said he would discuss the matter in greater detail Thursday, when his regular weekly news conference is scheduled.

East, 55, committed suicide early Sunday.

Many observers have said the odds-on favorite to complete East's term is Rep. Jim Broyhill, the GOP nominee to succeed East, who had announced last year he would not seek re-election because of failing health.

Martin said he had discussed the matter with key aides and had received advice from many people, including Sen. Jesse Helms, East's political mentor. Martin said Helms had promised to support whatever decision Martin made.

State law requires the governor to appoint successors to senators who die or leave office for other reasons before their terms end.

Meanwhile, the leaders of the National Congressional Club, which supported Broyhill's Republican opponent, David Funderburk, are calling for Martin to offer an "olive branch" for party unity by Funderburk instead of Broyhill.

"If the moderate wing of the Republican Party is serious about party unity, I think it's obvious the choice would be David Funderburk," Tom Ellis, chairman of the right-wing political action committee, said Tuesday outside Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, where East's memorial service was held.

No decision on a successor was to be announced today, said Tim Pittman, a spokesman for Martin.

Ellis and executive director Carter Wrenn said they preferred that Martin choose Funderburk instead of Rep. Jim Broyhill, who won the GOP nomination in the May 6 primary.

Funderburk unsuccessfully sought the Republican nomination to succeed East, who announced last September that he would not seek re-election for health reasons.

Richard Viguerie, a nationally known conservative fundraiser, said Ellis was his choice to replace East, but Ellis said the news media had "put such scars on my back that I think I'd be a lot of baggage for anybody to appoint."

Funderburk, however, would be an ideal selection, making his supporters more enthusiastic about the fall campaign, Ellis said, adding that he intended to vote for Broyhill in November. Polls indicate that the state GOP has not united in the wake of the primary blood-letting, Ellis said.

"We're talking about olive branches, aren't we?" Ellis said to reporters after the service for East, who committed suicide Sunday.

"We're talking about unity," Wrenn said he had spoken with perhaps two dozen Congressional Club supporters who had said that Martin's appointment of Funderburk would help heal wounds from the bitter primary.

"I think it would," Wrenn said, "but it's up to the governor."

Funderburk said in an interview that it was "premature to discuss East's successor. 'I haven't given it any thought,'" Funderburk said. "We're here to pay our respects to Sen. East."

State law requires that Martin select someone to serve the remaining six months of East's term, which ends in January. Martin has declined to discuss the appointment, but is widely expected to choose Broyhill, his longtime friend and political ally.

Ellis, a Raleigh lawyer and the closest political adviser to Sen. Jesse Helms, founded the Congressional Club with Helms in 1973. The Raleigh-based club engineered East's upset victory over former Sen. Robert Morgan, a Democrat, in 1980.

When East decided last September not to seek re-election because of poor health, the club drafted Funderburk for the race. Funderburk, 41, had resigned as U.S. ambassador to Romania earlier in 1985 and was teaching at Campbell University in Buies Creek.

The Funderburk camp surprised many observers by using the same hard-hitting tactics against Broyhill that the club employed against Morgan and former Gov. Jim Hunt, who unsuccessfully challenged Helms in 1984.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed today, marking time after its recent rise to record highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed above 1,900 Tuesday for the first time, slipped .14 to 1,903.40 in the first hour today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a small margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Opening-hour volume on the Big Board came to 31.71 million shares.

Analysts said the market's rise past the 1,900 level, while certainly welcomed on Wall Street, did not create any new surge of buying interest.

Many market participants were awaiting the government's report Thursday on the employment situation for June.

The figures on such things as unemployment and the average work week were expected to set the tone for interest rates and the possibility of a cut in the Federal Reserve's discount rate. If the economy, remains sluggish, many economists expect the Fed to take action fairly soon to relax its credit policy.

Activity in the stock market is expected to start slackening by Thursday as traders turn their thoughts to the long July 4 holiday weekend.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Telephone & Telegraph slipped 1/8 to 25 1/4; International Business Machines was unchanged at 148 1/2, and General Motors rose 1/8 to 78 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .10 to 144.78. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .53 at 284.14.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 10.82 points past the previous closing peak reached on Monday to 1,903.54.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 147.67 million shares, against 135.13 million in the previous session.

heavy assessments needed to pay the carrying costs on that tobacco."

Helm said the assessment to support the tobacco program could drop from 25 cents a pound, last year's fee, to under 5 cents a pound with the buyout program. The assessment would be divided between growers and tobacco companies.

In a formal ceremony scheduled for noon, the contract was to be transferred from Gov. Jim Martin to Deputy Agriculture Secretary Peter C. Myers.

Dallas Smith, director of the tobacco and peanut division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said representatives of the tobacco companies met Tuesday with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, who approved the buyout plan.

The contract calls for the tobacco buyers — R.J. Reynolds, Brown & Williamson Tobacco, Lorillard and Philip Morris — to purchase over the next eight years surplus stock from 1976 to 1984. The 1985 crop is not included because negotiations began before the crop was planted.

Members of USDA's legal and program staffs had been concerned that the contract's termination clauses "may adversely impact the department's decision-making process," Smith said.

The clauses allow tobacco companies to get out of the contract if there are any "material adverse changes, either legislatively or administratively," in the tobacco program, he said.

Smith said USDA officials were worried that if the termination clauses are invoked, tobacco surpluses could end up under the loan program. Stabilization borrows money from Commodity Credit Corp., the financial arm of USDA, to pay farmers for tobacco that fails to receive market bids of at least $1 per 100 pounds over the support level.

He said the termination clauses that were initially broad after negotiations are now more specific.

European Trade Pact Announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration today announced that it had reached a tentative agreement with the 12-nation European Community that will buy some "running room" for both sides to avert a trade war over agricultural products.

The agreement includes concessions by the Europeans that will permit continued U.S. shipments of corn and sorghum into Spain at current levels while negotiations on easing trade barriers continue. In exchange, the United States agreed to withhold proposed retaliatory steps against the European Community for the remainder of the year.

A new deadline of Dec. 31 was set for conclusion of the trade talks on agriculture.

"Neither one of us wants to get into a trade war. That's why these negotiations are taking place," said Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

"Both sides now have running room," he added.

court from ordering, in appropriate circumstances, affirmative race-conscious relief as a remedy for past discrimination."

Writing for the court's 6-3 majority in the Cleveland case, Brennan said agreements between employers and minority groups may provide racial preferences even more extensive than a federal court would have awarded after a trial.

He said such agreements do not amount to unlawful "reverse discrimination" against white males.

The court signaled today's developments on May 19 when, ironically, it struck down by a 5-4 vote an affirmative plan in Jackson, Mich., that protected black public school teachers from layoffs at the expense of whites with more seniority.

That ruling expressed strong support for the principle of affirmative action and was hailed as a victory by civil rights groups.

The administration has been in the forefront of the opponents of broad racial preferences, with President Reagan advocating a "colorblind society." The administration has said quotas should be banned because they injure the innocent, usually white males.

Civil rights groups, supported by state and local officials and business leaders, defended goals and quotas to remedy past discrimination.

In the Cleveland case, a federal judge issued a consent decree in 1983 that calls for about half the promotions in the fire department to go to qualified minority candidates.

City officials and the Vanguard of Cleveland, representing black and Hispanic firefighters, agreed to the racial preferences.

get on with the business of educating our children," said Mark Owens, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education.

"I am very happy that we have been precleared and hopefully now we can get on with the business of consolidating the two school systems," said George Williams, chairman of the Greenville City Board of Education.

The consolidation of the two local school systems was delayed due to problems with the proposed method of election of members of the board of education.

An agreement between the school boards and the local Concerned Citizens for Justice specified that the election method developed by the board will comply with the Voting Rights Act. The election method will provide black citizens an opportunity to elect candidates of their choice in at least the same proportion of seats as the proportion of minority representatives on the interim board. There are four black members on the initial 15-member board.

The election method will be revised by the interim board, made up of members of the Pitt County Board of Education, Greenville City Board of Education and three at-large members. One of two alternate election plans will be chosen by the interim board — electing the board totally by single-member districts or by a combination of district and at-large seats.

The board will recommend one of two alternate election plans to the General Assembly, and elections for the members of the consolidated board will take place in November 1987.

The members of the interim consolidated board of education will meet tonight at 7 p.m. to discuss personnel and policy issues. A meeting also will be held Thursday night for consideration of management and policy.

Seaver Gets 1st Bosox Win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Tom Seaver, who reached the 300-victory mark while often working without a lot of runs, may have finally found an easier way to win in the major leagues.

Pitch for the high-scoring Boston Red Sox.

Seaver struggled in his Boston debut Tuesday night, but still wound up as the winning pitcher when the Red Sox rapped 14 hits for a 9-7 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

"These guys have a very good thing going for them here and it's nice to show I can contribute," said Seaver, acquired Sunday from the Chicago White Sox for infielder-outfielder Steve Lyons.

Boston won its sixth straight game and maintained its eight-game lead in the American League East over New York. The Red Sox beat Toronto for the eighth consecutive time at Fenway Park.

Seaver won his 307th career game by pitching seven innings, giving up four runs on nine hits. He retired the Blue Jays in order only once, but was tough in the clutch as he stranded nine Toronto runners.

The host Red Sox scored four runs in the first inning, three on a double by Dwight Evans, and Seaver left the game with a 9-4 lead.

"This is very gratifying," he said. "My goal is to pitch seven innings and allow three runs or less. I missed by one run, but I'm pleased. At this stage of my career, I'm very happy to pitch seven innings. It means I've kept the club in the game." Seaver, 3-6, won for the first time since April 23.

In other AL games, Texas beat Minnesota 5-0, Chicago tripped California 5-3, Seattle defeated Kansas City 8-5, Cleveland ripped Oakland 9-0, New York downed Detroit 5-4 in 10 innings and Baltimore beat Milwaukee 7-3.

Seaver got off to a shaky start when Tony Fernandez opened the game with a double and scored on Lloyd Moseby's one-out single. Seaver also walked a batter in the inning.

"I told him when he got back to the dugout that would be the worst inning he'd have all year with us because of all he has been through the last couple of days," Boston Manager John McNamara said.

Seaver said, "When I got through that inning, I thought, 'Thank goodness, that's over.'"

"Then several of the guys came up to me and said, 'OK, that's out of the way. Now, let's go get 'em.'"

The Red Sox came back quickly against Doyle Alexander, 5-4. Evans hit his three-run double off the left-field wall and then scored on a double by Rich Gedman.

Gedman's RBI single keyed a three-run third that made it 7-1 and the Red Sox added two runs in the fifth when Toronto first baseman Willie Upshaw tied a major-league record by making three errors.

Joe Sambito pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his seventh save.

White Sox 5, Angels 3

Ozzie Guillen hit a two-run double and California first baseman Wally Joyner made an error that allowed three more runs to score, highlighting a five-run third inning that helped Chicago over the host Angels. Bobby Bonilla and Steve Lyons opened the third with singles against Mike Cook, a 22-year-old right-hander making his major-league debut. Julio Cruz walked to load the bases and Guillen doubled for a 2-1 lead.

After Harold Baines was walked intentionally, Greg Walker hit a grounder that bounced off Joyner's left foot, enabling Cruz, Guillen and Baines to score.

Floyd Bannister, 4-4, got the victory in his first start since coming off the disabled list on June 17. Dave Schmidt took over at the start of the sixth and pitched two hitless innings.

Bob James finished up with two hitless innings for his 12th save.

Mariners 8, Royals 5

Ricky Nelson's pinch-single broke an eighth-inning tie and keyed a four-run uprising as Seattle sent visiting Kansas City to its fifth straight loss.

Danny Tartabull opened the eighth with a single off Dan Quisenberry, 0-2. After a sacrifice and a two-out intentional walk, Nelson — called up from the minors last week — drove in Tartabull with his first hit of the season. It was the first pinch-hit for the Mariners in 22 tries since Dick Williams became the Mariners manager on May 9.

John Moses followed Nelson's hit with a two-run single off Quisenberry, and Phil Bradley hit an RBI single off Steve Farr.

Rangers 5, Twins 0

Charlie Hough tossed a five-hitter and Pete Incaviglia and Pete O'Brien

both connected for two-run homers as host Texas ended Minnesota's four-game winning streak.

Hough, 8-3, won for the sixth time in his last seven decisions. He was helped by four Rangers double plays. The visiting Twins got only two runners to second base against Hough, who pitched his first complete game in 12 starts.

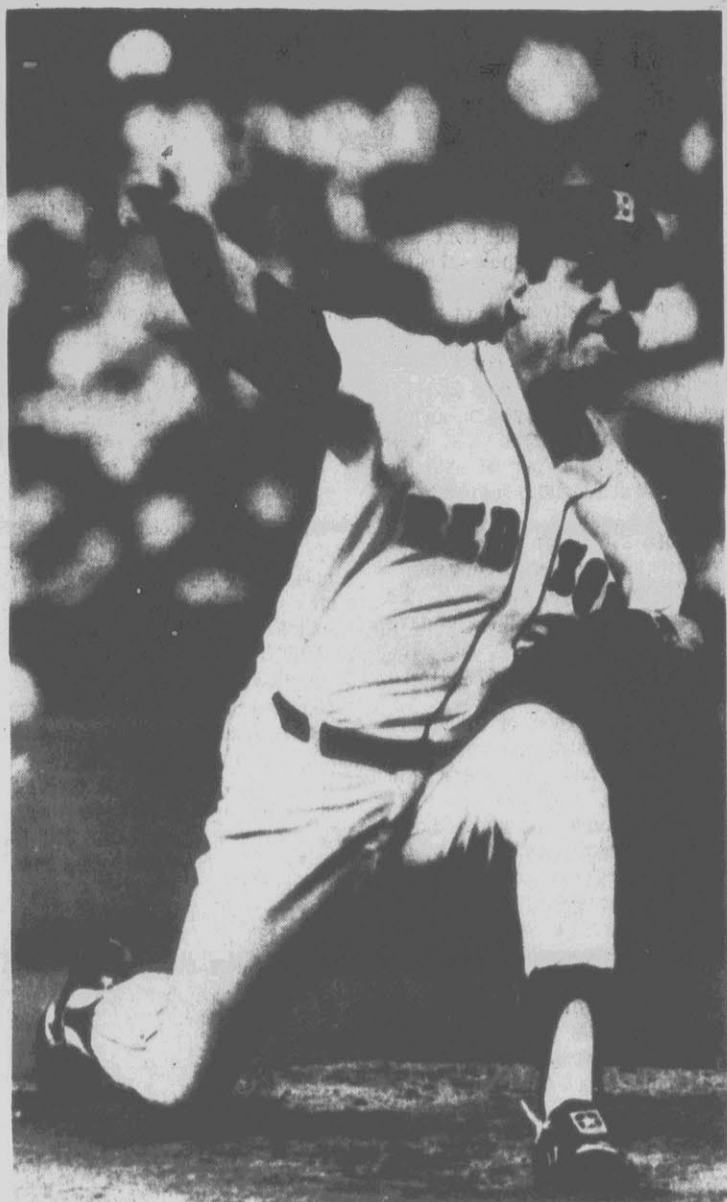

O'Brien hit his ninth homer in the fourth inning and Incaviglia hit his 14th in the eighth.

Yankees 5, Tigers 4

Dale Berra hit a solo home run against Detroit reliever Willie Hernandez with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning, leading New York over the Tigers.

Berra, who had a two-run single earlier in the game, connected for his second homer of the season. He hit just one home run last year.

Several Suspects In Rogers' Death

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Investigators probing the cocaine-poisoning death of Cleveland Browns defensive back Don Rogers say they have "multiple suspects, and some are better than others" in their search for the person who gave Rogers the drug.

"We haven't been able to sort this out yet," detective Capt. Michael O'Kane said Tuesday. "We have had a number of people calling about a number of possible suspects. Everybody's speculating. We haven't been able to narrow it down to say 'This is the person.'"

Rogers, 23, died last Friday at a hospital after suffering violent seizures at his parents' home and lapsing into a six-hour coma.

Rogers, the 1984 Defensive Rookie of the Year in the American Football Conference and the Browns' No. 1 draft pick, died a day before his planned marriage to Leslie Nelson, 22, of Oakland. He had attended a bachelor party the night before at a $375-a-day hotel suite.

Memorial services are scheduled for Thursday at Arco Arena, a 10,333-seat auditorium and the home of the National Basketball Association's Sacramento Kings. The arena is near the north Sacramento neighborhood where Rogers was staying with his mother.

O'Kane, who is heading the probe, said detectives have interviewed about 15 people, and expect to take at least another week to talk to others — including members of the Cleveland Browns, friends of the family and associates of Rogers.

Bob Burns, a police department spokesman, said the investigation had been slowed by the officers' inability to interview Rogers' mother, Loretha Rogers, 43, who suffered a heart attack after her son's death. She remains hospitalized in serious but stable condition.

The San Francisco Examiner and a

Sacramento television station, KCRA, reported that detectives have been given the name of a man who may have provided Rogers with the cocaine that killed him. The name, said to be that of a longtime friend of Rogers, was supplied in separate telephone calls by two anonymous informants.

O'Kane said that "we have many names from many people," adding that there is "no one suspect."

Rogers died within eight days of the death of Maryland basketball star Len Bias, the No. 2 pick in the NBA draft, of cocaine abuse June 19, two days after being selected by the champion Boston Celtics.

"The focus of the investigation now is to determine how he got the drugs," O'Kane said. "We are interviewing people who were at the party. We have some of the people identified."

District Attorney John Dougherty said a prosecution "depends on the specific facts and circumstances surrounding the incident. The potential charges could be furnishing a controlled substance, or there could be second-degree murder or manslaughter charges. It would depend on the case."

Dougherty said the type of charge could also depend on how willing Rogers was to take the drug. "In my mind, it certainly is a factor that will be considered when we review the results," he said.

More than 1,000 people are expected to attend the services, including most of the Browns, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Willie L. Brown, the speaker of the California Assembly.

Frank Pinkard, pastor of the Evergreen Baptist Church in Oakland, is among those scheduled to speak at the funeral. He was to have performed the Rogers-Nelson marriage ceremony at an Oakland church.

Chauncey Veatch, director of the state Department of Alcohol and Drug Programs, had scheduled a briefing today on cocaine abuse.

Grand Jury Gets First Report

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — A grand jury investigating the cocaine-induced death of University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias has been briefed by police and prosecutors but won't start hearing testimony from witnesses for three more weeks.

Members of the grand jury spent more than two hours Tuesday listening to State's Attorney Arthur A. Marshall Jr., members of his staff and the officer heading up the county police investigation.

Marshall refused to discuss what he told the grand jury or who the first witnesses will be.

"We're not going to have any comment at all today," he said.

Grand jury members also refused to discuss the investigation.

In a related development, two television stations reported Tuesday that a federal drug investigation has been under way at the University of Maryland for the past six months.

According to WJZ-TV in Baltimore and WRC-TV in Washington, the investigation is centering on drugs allegedly sold in a campus dormitory and may involve athletes.

Marshall denied any knowledge of a federal investigation. Breckinridge Willcox, U.S. attorney for Maryland, did not return calls made by The Associated Press to his home and office.

Bob O'Leary, special agent for the Drug Enforcement Administration's Washington field division, said he could neither confirm nor deny whether the DEA, the "lead agency in federal narcotics investigations" was involved.

"It would be inappropriate for me to comment because of department regulations. We don't discuss investigations. The only time we discuss an investigation is if there's a public document, like an indictment or complaint," that has been filed, he said.

Bias, a 22-year-old all-American, collapsed in his dormitory room June 19, two days after being drafted by the NBA champion Boston Celtics as the second player in the draft.

Dr. John Smialek, state medical examiner, said Bias died from cocaine which he had probably inhaled only minutes before his heart stopped beating.

While Marshall wouldn't discuss his future plans Tuesday, he said last week that he expects to call before the grand jury some University of Maryland officials and coaches as well as people who were in the room with Bias the night he died.

Several friends and basketball teammates were in the room to help him celebrate the realization of his dream to play for the Celtics.

Marshall said he is interested in finding out who might have used illegal drugs in addition to Bias and who supplied the cocaine or helped Bias buy it.

A homicide charge might be filed if someone other than Bias was found to be the supplier of the cocaine, the prosecutor said.

Bias' parents, James and Lonise Bias, met with Marshall at the Prince George's County Courthouse, according to a report in Wednesday's editions of the Washington Post.

"The meeting was kind of a private and confidential consultation," James Bias told the newspaper. "I'm not at liberty to say what the meeting was about."

He also said the family's public statements in the future might depend on the results of the grand jury investigation.

Clemens Goes For Pitch-Mark

BOSTON (AP) — Boston right-hander Roger Clemens will be chasing history tonight when he goes for his 15th victory without a loss this season.

Clemens can tie an American League record for most victories without a loss when he starts for the Red Sox against left-hander Jimmy Key and the Toronto Blue Jays.

Clemens, 14-0, is one victory shy of the AL mark of 15-0 set by Johnny Allen of the Cleveland Indians in 1937 and Dave McNally of the Baltimore Orioles in 1969.

"I try to not to think about it (the record)," Clemens said. "I just go out and concentrate on the individual."

The right-hander said he was happy to be going after his 15th straight victory at Fenway Park.

"The tradition is here," Clemens said. "The fans are so knowledgeable. They get excited when you do things. It makes it fun."

Key, 6-5 this season, has won three straight decisions and six of his last eight, with an earned run average of 2.37 in that span. After his first six starts, Key was 0-3 with an ERA of 13.27.

Rube Marquard holds the major-league record with a 19-0 start for the New York Giants in 1912. ElRoy Face of the Pittsburgh Pirates was 17-0 in 1959.

Clemens said he hasn't considered what he might accomplish the rest of the season.

"Right now all I'm doing is breaking up my season into halves," he said.

Clemens, with a 2.18 earned run average and 125 strikeouts in 123 2-3 innings, outshines McNally statistically. The Orioles left-hander had a 2.88 ERA with 107 strikeouts in 171 2-3 innings during his 15-0 streak.

Clemens has had only one no decision in his 15 starts — May 9 against Oakland — while McNally benefited from 12 no-decisions during his streak, which ended with a 5-2 loss to Minnesota on Aug. 3. The Orioles ultimately lost five of the games in which McNally did not get a decision.

Rain Delays Pitt-Kinston

Pitt County's American Legion baseball game with Kinston was rained out Tuesday night and has been rescheduled for Thursday night.

The contest has added importance in that third place is at stake for the Post 39 players.

Pitt is currently 9-8 with one game remaining. They are already assured of no better than third seeding in the upcoming playoffs, but could fall into fourth place with a loss, should Wilson defeat Wayne County tonight.

All play must be completed by Thursday night, with the first round of the Area 1 East playoffs getting underway on Friday.

The game with Kinston is scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday at Harrington Field.

Lloyd Gets Battle In Victory

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd got the test she wanted as she stayed on course for yet another Grand Slam final clash with Martina Navratilova.

Lloyd, the No. 2 seed and three-time champion, wanted a tough match to prepare herself for a possible third straight Wimbledon chamionship meeting with her archrival. And on Centre Court, with temperatures reaching 110 degrees, Lloyd had to draw on all her years of experience to subdue a determined quarterfinal challenge from seventh-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia.

Lloyd surrendered a set before she triumphed 7-6, 4-6, 6-4 to set up a semifinal on Thursday against No. 3 seed Hana Mandlikova, the reigning U.S. Open champion.

In the other women's semifinal, Navratilova, who is aiming for a fifth straight title, meets No. 10 seed Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina.

If Lloyd and Navratilova win

Thursday, they would meet for the 70th time in their careers, the 15th in a Grand Slam title match. Lloyd won the last meeting in the final of the French Open last month.

In today's men's quarterfinals, No. 1 seed Ivan Lendl was to meet Tim Mayotte, the No. 10 seed and the only American left in the competition, while defending champion Boris Becker, seeded No. 4, was to face Czechoslovakia's Miloslav Mecir.

Pat Cash, who accepted a wildcard entry for the tournament, was to play No. 7 seed Henri Leconte of France, and two unseeded players, Yugoslavia's Slobodan Zivojinovic and India's Ramesh Krishnan were to close out the quarterfinal action.

Lendl finished the quarterfinal draw Tuesday with a 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 7-6 victory over American Matt Anger. The match had begun Monday but was called because of darkness at 2-2 of the third set.

Lloyd's quarterfinal against Sukova on the center court lasted just over two hours as the Czechoslovak used her serve-and-volley game against the American.

After Lloyd won the first set on a 10-8 tiebreaker, she engineered the first service break midway through the second to lead 4-2.

But Sukova blasted back to take the next four games and square the match.

Just as the 21-year-old Sukova looked set to create an upset, she lost her composure and a series of disastrous errors gave the 31-year-old Lloyd a 3-0 third set lead.

Sukova broke Lloyd's serve to cut the deficit to 4-5, but then surrendered her own to tumble out of the tournament.

"This was pretty much of a real test," Lloyd said. "It was tough. I actually underestimated her a bit. I didn't think she could keep up serving like that the whole way through."

"If she had played that well against any other player, with the exception of Martina, she probably would have won."

Sukova said there was plenty of room for improvement in her game.

"The way I play, I can beat the top players once or maybe twice, or have tough matches with them," she said. "But I think I still need to improve a lot to get to the level they play."

"You can get them on a bad day and win, but what you want from yourself is to beat them every time you play them."

Bettina Bunge certainly didn't catch Navratilova on a bad day.

The reigning champion and world's No. 1-ranked player almost was faultless in her 6-1, 6-3 demolition of the West German in less than an hour.

Lori McNeil, an unseeded American, looked to be on her way to an upset when she took the first set from Mandlikova on a 7-4 tiebreaker after once trailing 5-2.

But the 24-year-old Czechoslovak stormed back to take the second set 6-0 and the third 6-2.

Sabatini, 16, reached her second Grand Slam semifinal by beating No. 15 seed Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden, 6-2, 6-3.

Lendl had not lost a set in the tournament until he met Anger, and the unseeded American gave the world's top-ranked men's player a solid battle.

Lendl had not been in a tiebreaker since the opening set of his first-round victory over 18-year-old Leonardo Lavalle of Mexico; he had to go through three of them to beat Anger.

ECU Names Golf Coach

Hal Morrison, a veteran collegiate golf coach with 12 NCAA all-Americans to his credit, has been named head golf coach at East Carolina University, Dr. Ken Karr, director of athletics, announced Wednesday.

Morrison comes to ECU after serving most recently as golf coach at Methodist College in Fayetteville.

He previously coached at East Tennessee State University from 1958-83 when he coached such golfing greats as J.C. Snead, Bobby Wadkins and Mike Hulbert.

Morrison coached five ETSU teams into the NCAA championships since the Bucs joined the Division I ranks in 1969. The Kingsport, Tenn., native has coached two top ten finishers as his ETSU squad placed sixth in the nation in 1975 and seventh in 1976. He has also won ten coach-of-the-year honors in the Ohio Valley Conference and Southern Conference.

Morrison was a 1975 charter inductee into the ETSU Athletic Hall of Fame, and most recently inducted into the State of Tennessee Sports Hall of Fame in 1985.

"I'm very excited to have the opportunity here at East Carolina," Morrison said. "ECU has the potential to have a top-notch golf program and I'm looking forward to this challenge."

Pirates Strand 15, Suffer Loss To Philadelphia, 5-4

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

In a game that had just about everything, including a trick defensive formation by the Philadelphia Phillies, the Pittsburgh Pirates were left with nothing but another number in the loss column.

"We had our chances," said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland, whose team stranded 15 runners in Tuesday night's 5-4, 12-inning loss to the Phillies. "They tried to give the game to us and we wouldn't take it."

Before Mike Schmidt decided things with a 12th-inning homer, the Phillies used an unorthodox five-man infield to turn a double play in the 10th, after reliever Steve Bedrosian had wild-pitched home the tying runs on successive pitches.

"We've tried it five times this year but it's never worked that well," Phillies Manager John Felske said. "You take a chance to get out of the inning and we just got lucky. Maybe it wouldn't happen again for 100 years."

The Phillies eventually overcame two rally-killing baserunning mistakes, four errors and three runners caught stealing to hand the Pirates their 26th loss in 41 home games.

In other National League games, San Francisco defeated Atlanta 9-6 in 10 innings; San Diego stopped Houston 7-4 and New York edged St. Louis 2-1. The Montreal-Chicago game was suspended after seven scoreless innings because of darkness and the Los Angeles-Cincinnati game was rained out.

The Phillies had taken a 4-2 lead in the top of the 10th before allowing the Pirates to come back and tie on Bedrosian's wild pitches. Reliever Tom Hume, 1-0, later replaced Bedrosian with the bases loaded and Felske stationed right fielder Glenn Wilson behind second base in a five-man infield. Joe Oruslak cooperated by grounding directly to Wilson, who stepped on second and fired to first for the double play.

After Schmidt blasted his game-winner in the 12th off Larry McWilliams, 1-5, the game was held up by rain for nearly an hour in the bottom of the inning and took more than five hours to complete.

"He (McWilliams) couldn't stand on the mound and I couldn't stand at the plate," Schmidt said of his 15th homer of the season. "The water was dripping off my helmet. It was a pathetic situation all the way around... I'm just glad we won."

Giants 9, Braves 6

Candy Maldonado, who forced extra innings with a pinch-hit homer in the ninth, singled in two runs with two outs in the top of the 10th to lead San Francisco over Atlanta.

Maldonado's single made it 8-6 and another run also scored on the play when the ball got past right fielder Terry Harper for an error. The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for the Giants and a five-game winning streak for Atlanta.

The Giants had tied the game 6-6 in the top of the ninth on a leadoff home run by Maldonado, his sixth of the year and fourth as a pinch-hitter, off reliever Gene Garber.

Earlier, the Giants had taken a 5-4 lead in the top of the seventh on Joel Youngblood's RBI single, but Dale Murphy's two-run homer in the bottom of the inning, his 14th, moved the Braves back in front, 6-5.

Jeff Robinson, 5-2, got the victory with two scoreless innings of relief. The loss went to Joe Johnson, 6-7.

Padres 7, Astros 4

Garry Templeton's two-run single capped a four-run sixth inning, leading San Diego over Houston and knocking the Astros out of first place in the National League West.

Eric Show, 7-4, pitched five innings to win his fourth straight game, giving up two runs on three hits. Gene Walter and Goose Gossage finished up, with Gossage gaining his 14th save.

Houston starter Mark Knudson was the loser, going five innings and giving up three runs on seven hits.

Mets 2, Cardinals 1

Mookie Wilson hit a home run and New York took advantage of baserunning mistakes by St. Louis to beat the Cardinals for the sixth straight time at Busch Stadium.

The Cardinals' baserunning mistakes helped New York left-hander Sid Fernandez, 10-2, weather four hits in the fifth inning and extend his winning streak to five games.

Cardinals right-hander Danny Cox, 2-6, gave up four of seven Mets hits, including three by Wally Backman and two by Wilson, who hit a tie-breaking homer in the third.

In the fifth, Mike Heath and Tito Landrum each doubled off Fernandez for the St. Louis run, but the Cardinals had the steam taken out of the inning when Terry Pendleton lined out and Landrum was doubled off second base.

Fernandez yielded nine hits, struck out five and walked one in seven innings to help the Mets win their fifth straight game and widen their lead to 10 games in the National League East. Roger McDowell pitched the last two innings for his seventh save.

Expos-Cubs

The game between Montreal and Chicago will be resumed prior to the start of today's regularly scheduled game. The contest was delayed for 20 minutes in the fourth inning and continued in mist and fog while Montreal's Andy McGaffigan and Chicago's Scott Sanderson were locked in a scoreless pitching duel.

McGaffigan allowed four hits and struck out seven while Sanderson, who was lifted for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the seventh inning, allowed two hits and also struck out seven.

Yankees rookie Doug Drabek checked Detroit on three hits, including homers by John Grubb and Darrell Evans, through 8 1-3 innings. But Detroit tied the score 4-4 in the ninth on RBI singles by Larry Herndon and Chet Lemon against reliever Dave Righetti.

Indians 9, A's 0

Mel Hall hit a pair of two-run homers and Tony Bernazard also homered twice, sparking Cleveland past Oakland in a game interrupted by a bench-clearing fight started by Indians Manager Pat Corrales.

The brawl erupted in the seventh inning after Corrales complained to home plate umpire Derryl Cousins when A's reliever Dave Stewart threw close to Julio Franco following Bernazard's homer.

Corrales and Stewart began shouting, and then started toward each other. Corrales, who has a brown belt in karate, got in a kick to Stewart's midsection before Stewart, a second-year student in the martial art Tae Kwon Do, knocked down the Cleveland manager with a right-handed punch.

Both dugouts cleared and punches were thrown by many of the players in the altercation that lasted five minutes.

Corrales, Stewart and Oakland Manager Jeff Newman were ejected after the fight.

John Butcher, 1-6, shut out the host A's on seven hits.

Orioles 7, Brewers 3

Fred Lynn drove in three runs with three hits, including a two-run homer that broke a fifth-inning tie and sent Baltimore past visiting Milwaukee.

Mike Flanagan, 2-5, won for the first time since April 17 and ended his four-game losing streak. Flanagan, winless in his previous 10 starts, gave up three runs on seven hits in six innings. Rich Bordi closed for his third save.

Lynn singled in the fourth and scored on Cal Ripken's two-run double. Lynn hit his ninth homer in the fifth and added an RBI single in the seventh for the host Orioles.

Rocky Mount added two more runs in the third and another pair in the fifth. Gary Ginn doubled and moved to third on an out. He scored on Anthony Sauls' sacrifice fly.

Adams led the Rocky Mount hitting with three while Grant added a pair. Snow Hill was led by Calvin Brown and Ginn, each with two. Both of Ginn's were doubles, as was one of Brown's.

Snow Hill, now 10-7, winds up the regular season tonight, traveling to Edenton.

North Carolina's first Baptist Conference was organized in Greenville in 1830.

Rocky Mount Clinches Title

SNOW HILL — Rocky Mount's Tim Wilson gave up nine hits, but scattered them effectively enough to allow his American Legion baseball team to take a 9-1 win over hosting Snow Hill Tuesday night.

The victory clinched first place for Rocky Mount and the top seeding in the upcoming first round of the Area I East playoffs. Those playoffs are scheduled to begin a best-of-three round on Friday.

Wilson walked two and struck out six in going the distance. "He really did a super job," Coach Jim Fulghum of Snow Hill said.

Rocky Mount scored twice in the top of the first to get all it would need in the game. With one out, Shelton Grant singled and came around on a double by John Adams. Donnie Bobbitt reached on an error, advancing Adams to third, and he scored when Hank Jones grounded out.

Smith Claims Coke, Gun Left Behind By Woman

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Former University of Miami football star Willie Smith claims the cocaine and handgun found in his car belonged to a woman he had given a ride to only minutes before his arrest.

The 21-year-old All-American tight end and 10th-round draft pick of the NFL's Cleveland Browns was arrested early Monday in the parking lot of a motel near the Miami campus. He was charged with possession of cocaine and possession of a handgun, and released on $10,000 bond.

Smith made a brief statement on his arrest at a news conference Tuesday in the office of his agent, lawyer Jim Ferraro.

"At this point, I'd like to say I'm innocent and I will be cleared of all these false charges," Smith said. "If you have any other questions, you'll have to ask my lawyer."

Ferraro echoed Smith's denial of guilt.

of cocaine on the front seat and a .357 magnum between the two front seats. Smith was described by police as very cooperative.

Ms. Gray, 25, was charged because her purse contained a straw and pipe with cocaine residue.

Metro officer Walter Hopwood said Ms. Gray initially told him she was at the motel visiting friends, but she couldn't remember their room number. He said the woman appeared to be intoxicated.

Dow Jones Tops 1,900

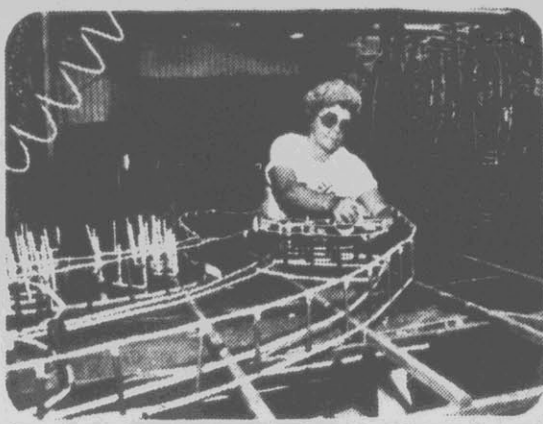

NEW YORK (AP) — A late buying surge has pushed the Dow Jones industrial average to its first close above 1,900, amid investor optimism that interest rates will decline. The Dow Jones average of 30 blue chip stocks rose 10.82 points Tuesday from its record close of Monday to close at 1,903.54. The market's best known indicator had climbed briefly above 1,900 Monday before closing at 1,892.72. The industrial average has climbed just under 606 points since late September. Other major market indicators also set new highs as continued optimism over the prospects for lower interest rates buoyed the market. Lower rates are seen as a boon to business conditions and improvements in corporate profits.

Many analysts contend the economy's persistent sluggishness makes it likely interest rates will decline further. For instance, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday morning that the government's main gauge of future economic activity edged up 0.2 percent in May.

FOCUS

The Big Bang

This employee at Pyro Spectaculars Fireworks plant in California is taping a wick mat to fireworks that burn at 30 feet per second. The fireworks are scheduled to be used on Friday in New York during the July 4th unveiling of the restored Statue of Liberty. Pyro Spectaculars claims that this fireworks display — a 25-minute show consisting of 40,000 rockets on 41 barges — will break the current listing in the Guinness Book of World Records.

DO YOU KNOW — What country is usually credited with first discovering fireworks?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Ho Chi Minh led North Vietnam during most of the Vietnam War.

One of the rules you are taught early on is that, at a no trump contract, you don't release your stoppers in the enemy suit. So, of course, we will show you a hand where setting up the enemy suit for them is the only way to succeed.

When this hand was dealt in a tournament in England, three no trump was a popular contract, at some tables reached on auctions such as this. The duplication in diamonds placed that contract in jeopardy. Since declarer would have to develop four tricks in a relative hurry, he would have to set up hearts by finding the ace outside and hoping for a 3-3 split.

Look what happens if, after winning the diamond in dummy and leading a heart to his king, declarer goes back to the table with the ace of clubs to lead another heart. East can rise with the ace and return a diamond, leaving the heart suit blocked and declarer with no entry back to the board to cash his long heart.

But what a difference if, after winning the king of hearts at trick two, declarer crosses to dummy with the ace of diamonds, in the process setting up three tricks for the defenders, to lead another heart. East can rise with the ace and take three diamond tricks, but the ace of clubs is still in dummy as an entry. Should the opponents shift to a club, declarer can win in hand, cash the queen of hearts to set up the 13th heart when both defenders follow, then cross to the table with the ace of clubs. After cashing the long heart declarer still needs a ninth trick but he is in dummy for a spade finesse.

That's the way one declarer tackled this hand, and we wish we could congratulate him on bringing home the contract. Unfortunately, on the actual hand the spade finesse failed and the contract went down one trick.

Counterfeit Ring Broken

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Thousands of phony $20 bills may be circulating through 11 states, the products of a counterfeiting ring that printed half a million dollars in bogus bills before it was broken this week, authorities say.

"All we can do is urge people to examine their money and compare it with other bills," said Patrick Finnerty, the Secret Service's special agent in charge of the Buffalo office.

Finnerty and other officials on Tuesday announced the arrest of five men in connection with the ring, which they said printed $500,000 in $20 bills. It was planning to print at least $1 million in fake $100 bills, authorities say.

Counterfeit money printed here has been seized in New York, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, South Carolina, Ohio, Missouri, North Carolina, Florida, Oklahoma, West Virginia, Virginia and Puerto Rico, court papers said.

The phony bills, which were put in boxes of oregano to increase their green tint, have a washed-out portrait of Andrew Jackson and a smooth texture, agents said.

Police also confiscated $135,000 of the bogus $20 bills, an offset printing press, printing plates and several handguns in raids of five homes.

Finnerty said about half of the counterfeit money had been recovered.

The five men are accused of printing the money and then selling it for about 15 cents on the dollar to distributors who eventually got the money to banks, businesses and even church bingo games, authorities say.

Finnerty said more arrests are expected, but he would not elaborate on where they might take place or when.

Unions Offer Credit Cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO officials say their new MasterCard for the union's 13.5 million members, offering dramatically lower interest rates, pushes the labor organization into a new area of service. The program will mean that "millions of people will save millions of dollars," Thomas R. Donahue, AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer, said Tuesday. Donahue said the program means the labor movement can now begin to offer its members "the same kind of protection in the marketplace as it offers them on the job." Members who obtain the new Union Privilege MasterCard will pay interest rates of 5 percentage points over the prime rate, now 8.5 percent, or 7.25 points over the prime, depending on which of two alternative plans they elect.

That would mean effective cardholder interest rates of 13.5 percent or 15.75 percent currently, compared with rates of 20 percent or more charged by leading credit card companies. "Interest rates have been continuing to drop, with the prime falling from 21 to 8.5 percent.

Goodness
 RALEIGH (AP) — In an effort to boost sales of homegrown products, the state Agriculture Department has announced a marketing campaign dubbed "Goodness Grows in North Carolina."
 "The Department of Agriculture of North Carolina wants the whole world to know goodness does grow here," Agriculture Commissioner James A. Graham said Monday at a news conference.
 Graham said the program would be the department's most comprehensive and aggressive marketing move and should reach all segments of the marketplace, from wholesale buyers to consumers in the grocery store.
 Companies participating in the program would label products with a green-and-white logo bearing a tractor, an outline of the state and the "Goodness" slogan.

Fireworks Wizard Looks Toward 'Big Bang'

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

NEW CASTLE, Pa. (AP) — George Zambelli will put the pow and sizzle in 1,400 fireworks shows on the Fourth of July, but his eyes light up like Roman candles when he talks of the pyrotechnics of the Statue of Liberty celebration.

"There's going to be so much going on. You're going to be startled and fascinated. The goal is to make it one of its kind. It's got the finest the world has to offer," said Zambelli, 60.

He is president of Zambelli Internationale, one of the fireworks makers sharing in the 28-minute, $2 million fireworks show called the Big Bang, which is part of the statue's centennial extravaganza. It begins at 9:30 p.m. Friday.

"That half hour is going to go by so fast. You're going to think you were there for the full night," Zambelli said in a recent interview.

Zambelli, known as "Boom Boom" and "Mr.

Fireworks," runs a 93-year-old business in this blue-collar community about 40 miles north of Pittsburgh. He calls it the world's largest and oldest manufacturer and exhibitor of fireworks.

His displays have dazzled kings and queens, presidents and popes, Boy Scouts and sheiks. He provides the pop for the national holidays, the equivalent of the U.S. Fourth of July, in Kuwait and Bolivia.

He has recreated ship battles and army clashes in the sky. And in 1977, he fired shells at the funeral of steelworker Antonio Nerti of West Pittsburgh, who asked for graveside pyrotechnics in his will.

On the Fourth, Zambelli's creations will amuse gleeful watchers with mammoth shows at the Statue of Liberty and the Washington Monument down to a lilliputian 50-shell burst at Camp Kennybrook in Monticello, N.Y.

"A customer is a customer. It doesn't matter what size. They're having a celebration just like everybody else. It means as much to them, maybe more. No job is too small," said Zambelli.

The Liberty bash, however, is extra special because Antonio Zambelli, the company's founder and George's father, came through the immigration center at Ellis Island. It was there he met his wife, Maria Geueseppe.

For the Big Bang, 40 barges will form a necklace-like rim around the Statue of Liberty and fire 40,000 shells set to music. The fireworks for the Brooklyn Bridge centennial featured nine barges and 10,000 shells.

Zambelli has made 10,000 shells for his part of the show. His handiwork will be featured in the playing of the song "Santa Lucia," a tribute to the Italians who immigrated to America.

Others taking part in the show include Austin Fireworks Inc. of Wichita, Kan.; Garden State Fireworks of Millington, N.J.; Fireworks By Grucci of Bellport, N.Y.; Pryo Spectaculars of Rialto, Calif.; and Rozzi's Famous Fireworks of Loveland, Ohio.

Zambelli works with his brothers, Louis and Joseph, who are master pyrotechnicians. They pack by hand shells made of paper, paste and twine and dry them in the sun, much the same way as 17th century workmen did.

Magnesium, aluminum, copper, iron, barium, titanium and other chemicals are added to black powder to give color and brilliance. Like a secret Italian recipe, the chemicals are mixed in concealed amounts.

To detonate, shells are dropped into a cast iron mortar and the main fuse is lit, propelling them skyward with a characteristic "whump." After an expectant pause, the shells explode in a burst of color and canon-like booms.

"Americans love noise," said Zambelli, who began his career in fireworks at age 7 by rolling paper tubes.

"To me, there's nothing that satisfies the senses like fireworks. You've got the world's greatest backdrop — the sky. There's the mystique of lights in the night. You never get enough. You're always waiting for more.

"I never grow tired of it because I like to see the surprised faces and hear the oohs and aahs. People like to be razzle-dazzled, freed of daily worries, even if only for a brief but breath-taking several minutes."

Once Paralyzed

Washington Man Makes Comeback

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

When Walter and Betty Bowen despaired over their paralyzed, critically injured son, Michael, in New Hanover Hospital last November, they had no idea he would be making plans to begin a month-long bicycle ride to Florida and back Aug. 1.

Much about the Washington, N.C., resident's life has changed since last November when he was a tennis team member at the University of North Carolina-Wilmington. Much has been regained and much has been added.

He is no longer paralyzed and is riding his bicycle five hours a day and lifting weights two-and-a-half hours a day to rebuild his body. He plans to return to UNCW in the fall, shortly after he returns from his bicycling trek. He won't be on the tennis team any more, he says, but believes he will play tennis again for fun.

Along with bicycling and weight-lifting, he's added to his interests work for the Spinal Cord Injury Association and has been instrumental in establishing an eastern North Carolina chapter headquartered in Greenville. He'll come to the Washington-Greenville area a lot once he returns to school, he says, both to continue his association with this group and to visit his parents and his girlfriend, an ECU student. A rising senior, he may attend graduate school at ECU once his final year at UNC-Wilmington is completed.

At the time he was injured, Michael was an extra in the movie "Raw Deal" being filmed in Wilmington. He barely remembers the Nov. 19 accident which nearly took his life, but he was told he pulled into the path of an oncoming vehicle. He was costumed at the time as a punk rock fan, the bit part he played in the movie.

He remembers the kindness of Arnold Scharzenegger, the star of "Raw Deal." The actor visited him in the hospital and sought to reassure him and his parents he'd be all right.

Michael's C-4 vertebra was his major point of injury, so his initial paralysis was from neck down. Shortly after he entered New Hanover Hospital, he contracted pneumonia and almost died.

He improved rapidly, however, and was transferred to Pitt County Memorial Hospital about a month later. A patient there, mostly in the regional rehabilitation center, for another two months, he has continued to regain use of his body and now has the loss of function concentrated mostly in his right hand. He wears on his right arm a device which provides electrical stimulation to this hand.

Michael's bicycle trip will terminate in Tampa, Fla. and he will visit 15 different rehabilitation facilities in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida along the way. He plans to enroll support for the Spinal Cord Injury Association and to provide encouragement for patients and staff in each place.

His friend, Anne Lineberry, will follow him in a car.

His hotel accommodations in major cities have been a corporate donation, as have the use of a touring bicycle and other equipment. Members of the Spinal Cord Association will welcome him into their homes at some points along the way.

He and some other members of the Eastern N.C. Spinal Cord Association will appear on WNCT-TV's "Carolina Today" July 9 at 7:40 a.m. to tell about his proposed trip and the work of the association.

Anyone wishing more information about the local chapter of the Spinal Cord Association may write NCSA, ENC, P.O. Box 4083, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

For information on how to donate money for the trip and for other work of the Spinal Cord Association, see the Hotline item on Page 1.

Foster Grandma Took In 87 Kids

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Ethel Speas says she began taking care of homeless children because they had nowhere else to go — and in her 87 years, she has given 87 children a home.

Mrs. Speas said there was a simple reason why she took so many children into her home.

"I have always loved children," she said. "I treated them just like they were mine."

Mrs. Speas has three natural children, but over the years, she was a foster mother to 84 more.

Mrs. Speas and her late husband, Harvey, began taking in foster children in the late 1940's after their own three children were grown. Since then she was never without one of the 84 foster children until 1974, when she was 75 years old. "I usually had a baby bed in my bedroom," she said.

The Department of Social Services (then called the Forsyth County Department of Public Welfare) gave her $25 a month per child to help with food and clothing. At Christmas, the department also sent wrapped packages for the children, she said.

At a family reunion at the Speas house last Saturday, some of the foster children remembered "Grandma" for her love, affection and the abundance of food she always placed on the table.

"I've never been in a home where you could find a 10-course meal for breakfast-all made from scratch. We had fresh biscuits everyday," said 42-year-old Clyde Dahmer.

Dahmer lives with his wife and two children on a farm just up the road from Mrs. Speas. At 11 years old, Dahmer had already been to two foster homes when he came to live with Mrs. Speas. He remained until he graduated from high school and entered the Army.

"She's the closest to a mom a person could ever have," Dahmer said.

CBS Likely To Announce Major Cuts In Personnel

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — With advertisers saying they won't bail out television's runaway expenses anymore, the networks are facing cutbacks, layoffs and perhaps next year the end of such money-losing propositions as ABC's "Monday Night Football."

Industry sources expect CBS to cut as many as 600 jobs some time this week as the network grapples with a new TV economy that is burdened by a national economy that isn't as inflationary as in past years, prompting the nation's major consumer industries to cut their advertising budgets and balk at the networks' annual double-digit ad rate hikes.

John Sisk, senior vice president of the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency, said Tuesday that network TV has stopped gaining audiences annually.

"We've hit the absolute level in cost in relation to audience delivered," Sisk said. "You can drive the car only so fast until it starts to shake."

Gene Jankowski, president of the CBS Broadcast Group, saw the handwriting on the wall and informed CBS' employees in a letter last May. He explained that he was initiating a company-wide review of ways to cut costs and raise productivity.

"Our strategies are straightforward and, sadly, in some cases painful," Jankowski wrote.

In June, he told TV reporters at a news conference: "American companies have to orient themselves to the fact that they can no longer sell themselves out of cost situations."

Last year, profits for the CBS Broadcast Group, which controls news, sports, entertainment, radio and the four network-owned TV stations, were $360.6 million, a decline from the record profits of $408.6 million recorded in 1984.

In recent weeks, published reports have speculated that the number of CBS job losses would be about 300, but current industry forecasts now are for double that, amounting to about 7 percent of the Broadcast Group's 8,000 employees.

Sources said the job cuts would be accomplished mainly through layoffs. But knowledgeable industry officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the changes would not affect programming but would be mainly in the areas of research, public relations, advertising and finance.

Cities being considered include New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

division's contributions to the layoffs probably would be at least 60 positions, but that no final decision has been reached on whether "Nightwatch," CBS' money-losing late-night news show, would be canceled.

The cutbacks will occur in conjunction with other moves to streamline CBS' broadcast operations. One such example that saved money and streamlined the executive structure was last week's reorganization in CBS Sports.

Where there had been four autonomous executive producers, CBS chose Ted Shaker to be sole executive producer, prompting the resignation of two others, Terry O'Neil and Kevin O'Malley.

The anticipated CBS cuts are reflective of the cost-cutting consciousness of CBS' network rivals as well.

When Capital Cities assumed control of ABC earlier this year, it engineered widespread job cuts, including 74 at ABC News.

Dennis Swanson, who was hired by Cap Cities as president of ABC Sports to get costs under control, said last month that ABC might not renew "Monday Night Football" after its five-year contract runs out this season, despite healthy ratings last year.

"You're in a dilemma," Swanson said. "You have a tremendously successful product, but it costs you more to put it on the air than you can generate from the advertising of it."

ABC Entertainment President Stoddard also said last month that the network is beginning to develop contingency programming for Monday nights.

Even top-rated NBC is not immune to network television's weakening financial position. In May, NBC Chairman Grant Tinker asked for a company-wide analysis of each department's practices, personnel and costs. Department heads had to submit their reviews to Bob Walsh, an NBC executive vice president, by the end of June.

"It will be NBC and it is Cap Cities. That's the way the industry is going," said Richard J. MacDonald, vice president for the investment firm, First Boston Corp.

Despite CBS' cuts, network executives still plan to revamp the "CBS Morning News" this fall. According to news division sources, one plan being given strong consideration is for regionalized anchors from cities other than New York, where all three network morning news shows now emanate.

Cities being considered include New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Current co-anchor Forrest Sawyer is seeking another position within CBS News, sources said. The other co-anchor, Maria Shriver, has been asked to be a host from Los Angeles, but hasn't made a decision yet.

Sources also said two leading candidates for anchor positions include Charles Osgood, CBS' most popular radio correspondent and anchor of CBS' "Sunday Night News," and Linda Ellerbee, the NBC correspondent who left the network following the expiration of her contract last week.

Farm Aid II Is Set For Friday

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Near the close of last year's Live Aid concert, Bob Dylan said some of the money for famine relief should go to the beleaguered American farmer. Willie Nelson thought so, too.

Nelson's first Farm Aid concert raised $9 million, and he hopes Farm Aid II will bring in more on July Fourth.

"I think still the big problem with most people is that they don't realize the seriousness of the farm crisis. They don't realize there are people out there — Americans — who need our help," Nelson said.

"There are people all over the world who are getting our help, but there are people right here in this very country that need it today."

Friday's 18-hour concert at Manor Downs race track comes 10 months after the original Farm Aid event at the University of Illinois in Champaign.

Farm Aid II originally was scheduled for the University of Texas' Memorial Stadium, but prohibitive liability insurance costs forced promoters to move it last week to the scene of Nelson's past Fourth of July picnic-concerts.

Farm Aid II has attracted 75 performers, including Alabama, Judy Collins, Rita Coolidge, Mac Davis, Arlo Guthrie, Emmylou Harris, Julio Iglesias, Waylon Jennings, Kris Kristofferson, John Cougar Mellencamp, Jerry Jeff Walker, and Neil Young.

Like the first event, Farm Aid II will be televised on a national cable channel and donations will go to help family farmers, Nelson says.

Test Airship Crashes

LAKEHURST, N.J. (AP) — A massive experimental airship built from a blimp and four helicopters crashed after one copter malfunctioned, killing a crewman during a test flight near where the Hindenburg exploded 49 years ago.

Four other crewmen and a firefighter on the ground sustained only cuts and bruises when the 343-foot-long, 10-story Heli-Stat crashed Tuesday night at the U.S. Naval Air Engineering Station, authorities said.

Frank N. Piasecki, a helicopter pioneer who began its assembly in 1979 under a Forest Service contract.

The Navy was monitoring the experiment by the Piasecki Aircraft Corp. of Sharon Hill, Pa., Grand said.

The airship, estimated by Piasecki last year to cost $24 million in federal funds and $10 million in private investment, was designed to lift 24 tons. It was based on the principle that once filled with helium, its resultant buoyancy made the craft almost weightless, so that the thrust generated by the copters' combined 6,100 horsepower could be directed toward lifting the timber.

Grand said he believed Piasecki achieved his first untethered flight in May.

Piasecki said last year the Heli-Stat might reach 72 mph, but conceded it could crash relatively easily if caught in a storm at low altitude.

The craft, sponsored by the U.S. Forest Service, was designed for logging remote areas with a minimum of environmental damage. But some federal agencies criticized it for structural problems and for running behind schedule at a cost of $34 million, more than three times the original projection of $10.7 million.

The Heli-Stat, which had never flown horizontally, was hovering at about 40 feet when one of the four helicopters malfunctioned and lost power, said Nick Grand, a U.S. Naval Air Engineering Center spokesman.

A fire caused by ruptured fuel tanks in the Heli-Stat's helicopters was quickly extinguished, but the airship was destroyed, Grand said.

"It looked like it just tilted and caught on fire," said Mike DeStanko, a civilian employee.

The Heli-Stat "just burst right in the air," said Petty Officer Chuck Peterson. "I couldn't believe it. Flames flew."

Gary Oleshfski, of Bordentown, who was alone in one of the helicopters, was killed in the crash, Grand said. Tuesday was Oleshfski's 39th birthday.

The craft crashed about three-quarters of a mile from where the German dirigible Hindenburg blew up in May 1937, killing 36 people, he said.

The craft was comprised of four tailless helicopters mounted on an aluminum frame that supported the blimp. The pilot, who survived, sits in the left rear copter and flight engineers in the other three.

Unlike the Hindenburg, which was filled with highly explosive hydrogen, the Heli-Stat's blimp was filled with helium, a non-explosive gas.

The craft, which was 43 feet longer than a football field, was designed by FILLETS — Feta Fish Fillets are a refreshing change for tired menus, especially if you enjoy a little tang with your food. Feta Cheese is the secret for the creamy sauce used here. Bits of chive, cucumber and tomato add taste and color to the dish.

Tangy Feta Cheese Adds Zest To Your Fish Fillets

Traditionally, Americans have favored mild tastes, but in recent years strong-flavored foods have topped the trend lists. Hot and spicy cuisines such as Mexican and Cajun are catching on. And in some sections of the country, goat cheese specialties appear on every course at fashionable restaurants.

This desire for change can be documented by the growth in popularity of foods which might once have been considered "exotic." An excellent example is feta, a tangy cheese of Greek origin, which was difficult to find in the U.S. 10 years ago.

Whatever the reasons behind this change in eating habits, one conclusion is clear: Americans want more variety on their menus. One way to spark meals is to introduce distinctive flavors to subtle foods. Pasta, potatoes, eggs and fish are well-liked but, by themselves, dull. However, they all have the characteristic of blending well with other flavors.

Adding feta to these foods gives them new life. This zesty cheese balances the flavor of bland foods, resulting in a refreshingly different dish with wide taste appeal. And, because feta is naturally cured in brine, there is no need to add salt.

Feta Fish Fillets is a recipe which combines the cheese with sour cream, cucumber, tomatoes, dill and chives to dress up sole or other fish. The recipe is easy and quick, yet special enough for entertaining.

FETA FISH FILLETS

- 1 lb fish fillets
- 3/4 cup crumbled feta cheese
- 3/4 cup sour cream
- 1/3 cup chopped cucumber
- 1/3 cup chopped tomato
- 1/2 teaspoon chopped chives
- 1/2 teaspoon dill weed

Place fish in 12 X 8 inch baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees, 15 minutes or until fish flakes easily with fork. Combine cheese and sour cream in saucepan; stir over low heat until thoroughly heated. Add remaining ingredients; mix well. Top fish with cheese mixture.

Makes 4 servings.

Fish May Help Your Well Being

By GEORGE A. THREWITTS
ECU News Bureau

Your doctor's favorite prescription may someday include a common, four-letter word — "FISH," according to two marine scientists at East Carolina University.

It's a well known fact that fish are nutritious and good for you but the ECU researchers are taking this fact a step further. Drs. Margie Lee Gallagher and Roger A. Rulifson say that fish, at least some species of fish, may reduce blood cholesterol and triglycerides, the fluctuating blood components that are often associated with heart disease.

In their research, which began earlier this year, the scientists are trying to learn more about which species of fish, caught commercially in North Carolina, are best at reducing blood fat levels in humans. They are also trying to determine whether the seasons of the year affect the health-promoting attributes of a fish.

"Fish and fish oils, high in polyunsaturated fatty acids of a type known as omega-3, have been shown to dramatically decrease blood cholesterol and triglycerides," said Ms. Gallagher, an assistant professor of food, nutrition and institution management in the School of Home Economics.

"However, little is known about the fatty acid composition of many fish species or the seasonal changes in their fatty acid composition," she said.

Omega-3 fatty acids refers to a specific group of polyunsaturated fatty acids that occur primarily in fish. These fatty acids do not occur in significant amounts in plant or animal tissues.

The purpose of the study, according to Ms. Gallagher, is to determine "the total lipid content and the kind and amount of fatty acids occurring in several fish species" that are caught by North Carolina fishermen. Initial studies, funded with grants from the N.C. Board of Science and Technology and the National Marine

Barbecue Grills Come In Sizes For All Food

By JOAN DRAKE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

At first glance the myriad of outdoor grills in today's marketplace is mind-boggling. They seem to come in all sizes and shapes, with a full array of gadgets and gimmicks. How can anyone decide which to purchase?

Fortunately, it is not as overwhelming as it first seems. When all the bells and whistles are stripped away, take a closer look and choose a grill to suit your cooking needs. A few simple questions may help the potential buyer.

—What kind of food will be cooked? Will grilling be the main cooking method? Or will roasting, steaming, smoking and baking capabilities also be desired?

There are basically two types of grills available — uncovered and covered. For those who simply want to grill hamburgers, frankfurters, steaks and chops, an uncovered grill, often called a brazier, will do just fine. Sometimes these grills have a half-hood or wind screen and they are almost always fueled by charcoal. Usually the cooking rack is adjustable to help control cooking temperatures.

A covered grill offers more versatility; both through the type of fuel used and the ability to cook indirectly, smoke and bake. The cover and vents help control heat and retard flare-ups, so more controlled cooking also is possible.

—What size grill will be needed? How much food will be prepared at one time?

Obviously a tiny grill will do nicely for a twosome, but those who intend doing a lot of outdoor entertaining will no doubt be in the market for something larger.

—Does the grill need to be portable? Or will a built-in model be better?

If the grill is to be taken along on picnics or camping trips, a smaller, more compact model may be the best choice. If it is to be used strictly in one place, something larger, or even a stationary model can be considered.

Smaller charcoal grills are the most portable. Gas grills fueled by bottled propane are somewhat portable; natural gas and electric grills are limited to areas where they can be connected to a power source.

—How much outdoor grilling will be done?

A grill that gets almost daily use and is expected to last several years needs to be made of heavy, top quality, durable material. A lighter-weight model might do well, if infrequent use is intended.

—Is there a preference for the type of fuel used for cooking?

Charcoal and gas are the most popular choices, but electric grills also are available. Each type of fuel has pros and cons:

Charcoal burns slowly and evenly. The supply needs to be kept replenished and stored in a dry place. Liquid, solid, electric or chimney starters aid in lighting the briquettes. Fuel needs to be added when foods require more than an hour of grilling. Charcoal imparts some flavor to the foods being cooked and aromatic

Shrimp

Fried, Boiled, Steamed ... They're Tasty Regardless Of Choice In Serving Them

Though eaten some in earlier times and now the country's favorite seafood, shrimp have been widely popular only since the late 1920s.

John Maiolo of East Carolina University reports that in the preceding years, "North Carolina fishermen were paid about three cents a pound for their catches ... others were paid five cents a bucket to head them." Many fishermen considered shrimp to be pests which fouled their nets.

Shrimp were often referred to as "bugs," and even today, fishermen going out after the now valuable catch will say that they are "going bugging."

Shrimp are sold according to size or count, based on the number of headless shrimp per pound. Though counts are not always uniform, generally jumbo shrimp contain about 15-20 per pound; large, 36-40; medium, 46-50, and small, 50 and above. If shrimp are abundant, more divisions are often made.

Fresh shrimp have a mild odor and firm meat, are not slippery and retain their natural color. Beware of shrimp that are bright pink or red or that suffer from black spot, a defect that is a sign of poor handling or age. The shells turn red when cooked; the meat is white with red tinges.

Low in fat and calories, shrimp are high in protein and are a good source of iron, calcium and niacin. They are moderate in cholesterol content; warm water shrimp average 90 mg. of cholesterol per 3 1/2 ounce serving.

Shrimp may be cleaned before or after cooking. Heading shrimp removes the gills, stomach and other viscera. To head a shrimp, hold it in one hand, and with your thumb just behind the head, push the head off. Be sure to push just the head off so that you do not lose any meat.

It is not necessary to devein shrimp; if they are large, though, some grit may be present in the sand vein and deveining will remove it. Also, the appearance of such foods as salads and soups are enhanced if the dark vein is removed.

If using a deveiner, insert it at the head, just above the vein. Push through the shrimp to the tail and split and remove the shell. This removes the vein at the same time. Rinse quickly under cold, running water, if necessary, to remove any remaining traces of vein.

If you use a paring knife to devein, first shell the shrimp with your fingers. To peel, hold the shrimp in one hand. With the other hand, starting under the shell between the swimmerettes, lift the shell off in segments. At the tail section, pull the shrimp meat until it is released from the shell. Use the knife to gently remove the vein, if desired.

In steaming or boiling, more flavor is retained if shrimp are cooked in the shells. When cooking shrimp in the shells, first head them. Then, after cooking, peel and devein them in one of the above ways. Do not rinse after cooking or peeling unless necessary.

Though versatile, shrimp are most often fried or boiled. Such simple preparations as broiling or steaming are delicious. While shrimp toughen if boiled for very long, they can be steamed with your favorite seasonings for a long time, and are then more flavorful. Remember, too, that they are delicious when grilled. Try them in salads, quiche, casseroles, Creole dishes and with a variety of sauces and seasonings.

wood chips may be sprinkled over the hot coals for additional flavor.

Gas may be supplied by a natural gas hook-up or canister of propane. The direct line ensures a constant supply; canisters need periodic refilling. Gas heats quickly, is easy to control and has the ability to supply the desired cooking temperature indefinitely. The lava rocks found in gas grills need to be replaced or cleaned periodically by steaming or boiling. Gas does not impart any flavor to the food being cooked, but aromatic chips may be used if placed inside a tube of foil, open on both ends.

Electricity heats quickly and gives a constant supply as long as there is a power source available. Electricity doesn't flavor the foods being cooked and it's not possible to use aromatic chips.

Once the basic grill is selected, those extra features desired may be added.

Keep in mind, however, the old rule of thumb that you probably do not need everything offered. Also, many items can be added later, if and when they're needed.

The same guidelines hold true when it comes to accessories, but a heavy-duty cooking mitt and set of long-handled utensils will be useful as well as a safety precaution. If charcoal is being used for fuel, a plastic spray bottle with water is handy to control flare-ups on uncovered grills. Beyond those items, it is best to be certain that the item will really be used before a purchase is made.

A basic cookbook is one other good buy for the novice. There are any number on the market, including those published by the different grill manufacturers.

A quick word about the aromatic chips now available for adding a variety of subtle flavors to the foods being cooked: All require soaking, then training, before sprinkling directly over charcoal or placing inside a tube of foil with open ends for use with gas grills.

GRILLED PORTERHOUSE STEAKS

- 4 porterhouse steaks, cut 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 inches thick
- Salt, pepper
- Slash fat on edge of steaks at 1 1/2- to 2-inch intervals to prevent curling during cooking. Using direct heat, place steaks on grill over medium-hot coals. Cover and cook 9 to 11 minutes for rare, 13 to 15 minutes for medium, turning once with tongs or spatula. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes 4 servings.
- Note: To sear steak, leave cover off for first 1 to 2 minutes per side.

BELL'S BARBECUED BLUE CHEESE BEEF TENDERLOINS

- 2 (8-ounce) beef tenderloin steaks, cut 1 inch thick
- 1 clove garlic, cut in half
- Salt
- 1 tablespoon cream cheese
- 2 teaspoons finely chopped onion
- 2 teaspoons blue cheese
- 2 teaspoons plain yogurt
- Dash white pepper
- Chopped parsley
- Rub each steak on both sides with cut garlic. Sprinkle with salt to taste. Combine cream cheese, onion, blue cheese, yogurt and pepper. Set aside.
- Using direct heat, grill steaks over medium-hot coals 5 to 7 minutes per side or until desired degree of doneness. Top with blue cheese mixture and sprinkle with parsley. Makes 2 servings.

GRILLED CORN ON COB

- 4 ears corn on cob, with husks
- Unsalted butter or margarine
- Salt, pepper
- Gently peel back corn husks and remove silk. Spread corn with butter, then pull husks back over ears and tie with piece of husk, string or fine wire. Soak ears in cold water 30 minutes.

Remove corn and shake well to remove excess water. Using direct heat, grill corn, covered, over medium-hot coals 20 to 30 minutes, turning frequently. Use insulated mitt to remove husks. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes 4 servings.

GRILLED PARMESAN TOMATOES

- 4 large tomatoes
- 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
- Salt, pepper
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 2 teaspoons chopped parsley
- Stem, wash and cut tomatoes in halves crosswise. Brush cut surfaces with melted butter. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Sprinkle Parmesan and parsley over tomatoes. Using direct heat, place tomatoes on grill over medium-hot coals. Cover and heat through, about 10 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

GRILLED TROUT WITH FRESH DILL

- 3 to 4 trout
- 1 bunch dill
- 6 to 8 thin lemon slices
- Rinse trout and pat dry with paper towels. Line hinged wire basket with dill. Place trout over dill and top each with 2 lemon slices.
- Using direct heat, grill fish, covered, over medium-hot coals 16 to 18 minutes, turning once. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

GARLIC AND HERB FRENCH BREAD

- 1 loaf French bread
- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 5 cloves garlic, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon crushed sweet red pepper
- Thyme sprigs
- Cut bread in half horizontally. Process butter, garlic and red pepper in food processor until well blended. Spread butter mixture onto bread. Top with thyme sprigs. Wrap bread in foil.
- Using direct heat, grill, covered, over medium-hot coals 15 to 20 minutes. For crisp crust, loosen foil on top and ends 5 minutes before end of heating time. Makes 4 servings.

GRILLED CHICKEN WITH GREEN ONIONS

- 1 chicken, halved
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1 shallot
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1 bunch green onions
- Rinse chicken and pat dry with paper towels. Thinly slice garlic and shallot and insert under chicken skin. Combine wine and butter.
- Using indirect heat, place chicken halves on cooking grill, cut side down, directly over drip pan. Cover and cook 55 to 60 minutes, brushing occasionally with wine and butter mixture. (Do not turn chicken during grilling.)
- Just before chicken is done, grill green onions over direct heat. Serve as accompaniment to chicken. Makes 4 servings.

- CORNISH GAME HENS
- 3 to 4 Cornish game hens
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon shredded ginger root
- Juice of 1-2 lime
- Rinse hens and pat dry with paper towels. Combine butter, garlic, ginger and lime juice.
- Using indirect heat, place hens on cooking grill directly over drip pan. Cover and cook 1 hour, without turning, brushing occasionally with butter mixture. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

- Shrimp l'Orange
- 2 lbs. medium or large shrimp, peeled and deveined
- 1 c. fresh orange juice
- 1 c. fresh grapefruit juice
- 1 tsp. fresh lemon juice
- 1 T. sherry
- 1 tsp. salt
- White pepper
- Dash of hot pepper sauce
- 6 T. butter or margarine
- 3 T. unbleached flour
- 1 T. fresh parsley
- Cooked rice

Mix juices, sherry, salt, pepper and pepper sauce in large bowl. Add shrimp and toss lightly. Cover tightly and refrigerate for one hour. Drain off marinade and set aside.

Heat butter in large heavy skillet until hot. Add shrimp and saute for about 5 minutes, or until done. Remove from skillet with slotted spoon, set aside and keep warm.

Stir flour into butter and blend well. Add the marinade slowly, stirring constantly. Simmer over low heat, stirring constantly until sauce is smooth and thickened. Pour over shrimp. Serve over cooked rice. Garnish with fresh parsley. Serves 6-8.

Chicken Is Always Good Bet For Satisfying Meal

By NANCY BYAL

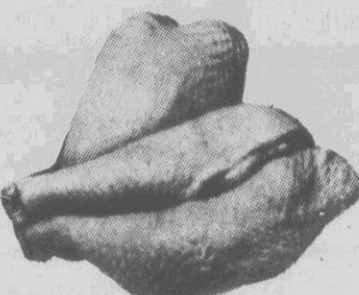

Better Homes and Gardens
Chicken is made-to-order for light and satisfying meals. It's high in protein but low in fat, cholesterol and calories, and it's versatile enough to serve frequently without your family tiring of it.

To keep chicken meals light, broil, grill, bake or oven-fry the chicken to avoid adding fat in cooking. Because much of the fat is located in and just under the skin, you can save about 20 calories per serving just by skinning chicken pieces before cooking. If you're really serious about cutting calories, buy breasts and wings; light meat has less fat and fewer calories than dark.

Even with the robust Italian-style sauce, the calorie count of this main dish is under 300 per serving.

CHICKEN CANNELLONI

- 3/4 cup thinly sliced celery
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced carrot
- 1/2 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
- 1 small onion, sliced
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon cooking oil
- 1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
- 1 7 1/2-ounce can tomatoes, cut up
- 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning
- 3/4 teaspoon sugar
- 3 medium chicken breasts, (about 1 1/2 pounds) skinned, boned, and halved lengthwise

- 1/2 cup ricotta cheese
- 3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 tablespoon chopped green onion
- 1/2 teaspoon Italian seasoning
- Dash pepper
- 2 ounces mozzarella cheese

For sauce, in a large saucepan cook celery, carrot, mushrooms, onion and garlic in hot oil until onion is tender. Stir in tomato sauce, undrained tomatoes, the 1 teaspoon Italian seasoning and sugar. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cook, uncovered, over low heat for 20 minutes.

Meanwhile, with flat side of meat mallet pound chicken breasts between two pieces of plastic wrap to 1/4-inch thickness. Combine ricotta, Parmesan, green onion, the 1/2 teaspoon Italian seasoning and pepper. Place about 1 1/2 tablespoons of the cheese mixture on each chicken piece. Roll up; place, seam side down, in an 8 by 8 by 2-inch baking dish. Pour sauce over chicken rolls; Bake, covered, in a 375-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until tender. Place two ounces mozzarella cheese, cut into thin strips, in a lattice design on top; bake 3 to 5 minutes more. Makes 6 servings.

Obesity Expert Says Diet-Based Weight Losses Don't Work

By SANDY ROVNER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — Diet-based approaches to weight loss are "a disaster" in terms of permanent reduction and should be abandoned, a Harvard Medical School physician told some of the world's top obesity researchers and clinicians recently.

On the basis of published reports of diet-based programs, said Dr. William Bennett of the Harvard Medical School's department of continuing education and editor of the Harvard Medical School Health Letter. "I can see no ethical basis for continuing research or treatment."

Speaking at the final session of a three-day conference on human obesity sponsored by the New York Academy of Science, Bennett said that "these (diet-based) studies involve a great deal of effort on the part of patients and investigator. They lead to almost inevitable failure on the part of participants — and the failure is blamed on the participants, not on the researcher."

Bennett's indictment included one of today's most popular weight control techniques — behavior modification.

"Strictly speaking," he said, "behavior therapy is a set of techniques that might be used to alter any habitual behavior from nose-picking to child abuse. In practice, as it is applied to fat people, it is a dietary approach."

"Moreover," he said, "most of this research does not include serious study of potential adverse effects, particularly of the dropouts, about whom we know nothing. We can hope that they are angry at the investigators, but in fact, many of them are suffering from severe loss of self-esteem."

The international community of obesity researchers and clinicians gather at regular international conferences to bemoan the increased fatness of western civilization and to repeat the same warnings about the life-threatening dangers and genuine social disability of obesity — which they define "as body mass-index" over 30. The index is determined by dividing a person's weight in kilograms by the square of his or her height in meters. (There are about 39 inches in a meter, and 2.2 pounds in a kilogram.)

Yet they concede that there are only hypotheses about how people become fat and little to cheer about in terms of prevention, much less cure.

But one area of progress is that researchers are beginning to treat that obesity is not a single disease, but a group of diseases with different causes and different manifestations, requiring different treatments.

Bennett's position — that diets don't work — was first popularized in his 1982 book, "The Dieter's Dilemma." It has been regarded as "nihilistic" by many of his colleagues, especially those who fear obese patients will simply give up, leaving clinicians very little to offer instead.

However, Bennett dismisses that criticism. "Blood-letting," he said, "was abandoned in the treatment of pneumonia about a century before penicillin was discovered. There is no indication in the literature that pneumonia patients suffered as the result of that bit of therapeutic nihilism."

Although many of his colleagues are hardly prepared to give up the behaviorally modified diet programs, and, at the conference bridled perceptibly at the suggestion that promoting diets was in any way unethical, some of them are beginning to concede that the so-called "set point theory," for which Bennett is one of the chief advocates, has some basis in clinical experience. The set point theory holds that each individual has a particular weight that reflects a balance between energy input and output, and that artificial attempts to alter it are quickly defeated.

Obesity expert Dr. Albert Stunkard, a University of Pennsylvania psychiatrist, said there is some evidence that something like a set point is working in some humans, and more clearly in some animals.

However, he said, "it is not appealing from the therapeutic point of view, because it sounds kind of ... hopeless."

"If you're fat and your set point is elevated," he said, "you're in bad shape."

Stunkard himself has done some of the studies that show disappointing results from diet-based eating programs.

Fish ...

Fisheries Service, will be made on striped bass and menhaden.

Rulifson, a marine scientist with the ECU Institute of Coastal and Marine Resources, says samples of fish will be collected with the help of commercial fishermen and seafood processors.

"Three size classes will be sampled at each of three critical periods during the season," he said.

The samples will be collected in April while the fish are spawning; in August during the peak growth, and in November when the fish are preparing for over-wintering. Rulifson said that standard techniques will be used to measure and analyze the lipid and fatty acid composition including the omega-3 polyunsaturated fatty acids of the North Carolina fish species.

"Through this research, we will know which species contain the most omega-3 polyunsaturated fatty acids and the times of the year when omega-3 is highest," said Rulifson. He said they also hope to learn if the size and migration of fish affect their omega-3 content.

The ECU scientists noted that the potential for developing new fish products and new markets for underutilized fish species has increased greatly due to recent medical studies which indicate that consumption of fish and fish oils may help prevent heart disease.

They said a 1984 study of middle-aged men in the Netherlands, over a 20-year period, demonstrated that coronary heart disease was inversely related to the amount of fish consumed. Another study, in 1980, concluded that the low incidence of heart disease among Eskimos in Greenland was due to their high rate of fish consumption.

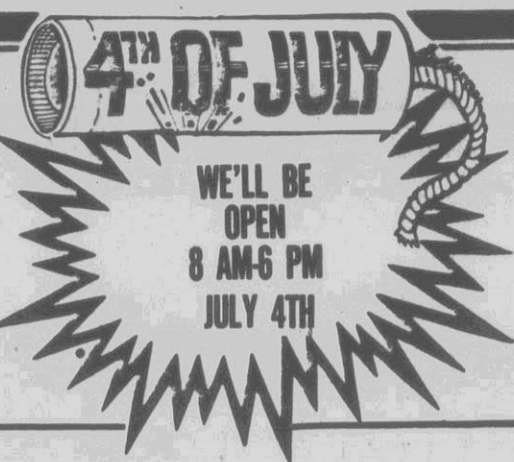

"Fish and fish oil can be very good for you because it can reduce cholesterol and triglyceride levels in the blood stream," said Ms. Gallagher.

"It's even better than vegetable oil which reduces cholesterol levels too," she said.

"Current advice from nutritionists is to eat fish, at least twice a week, and it may be possible to reduce the risk of heart disease," Ms. Gallagher said.

Other research by Ms. Gallagher has involved the area of aquaculture, where she has studied a variety of fish species including eel, crab, lobster and shrimp. She currently is working to develop a low cost and nutritious food for commercially raised fish.

Rulifson, a biologist and marine scientist, is an authority on striped bass and other migratory species of fish. He has conducted numerous research projects on the dwindling population of striped bass.

From Your Eckerd Pharmacist

Helping you control the cost of Diabetes is important.

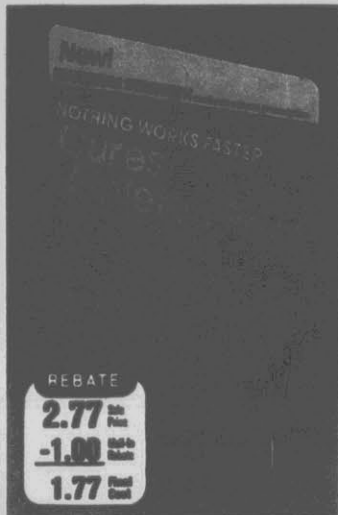

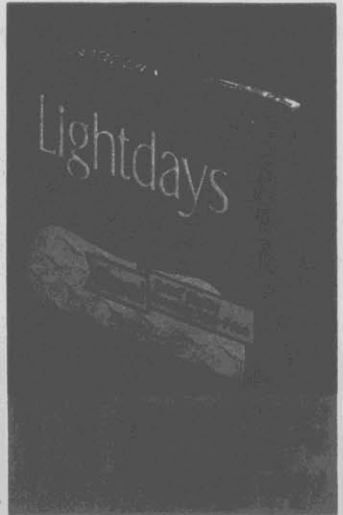

That's why your Eckerd Pharmacist developed our DiabeticCare™ program. As a member, you'll save on the diabetic supplies you need and you'll receive every month a kit of insulin FREE.

Your Eckerd Pharmacist wants you to know more about diabetes. Ninety percent of the people who have this disease have Type II diabetes, in which the pancreas produces insulin, but it is not properly utilized. Diet and exercise go a long way toward controlling Type II, but medication is sometimes necessary.

You are more likely to develop this form of diabetes if you are overweight, over 40 or have a family history of the disease. In most cases, symptoms do not appear, but when they do, they include: frequent urination, drowsiness, increased thirst, blurry vision, numbness in extremities and infection. The key to controlling any form of this disease is early detection, so if you notice symptoms or are in a high risk group, ask your doctor about a diabetes test.
